BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations between the Opposition House Leaders and myself with respect to the business for today. As Your Honour will appreciate, we are to be honoured today by an address to a joint sitting of the Senate and the House of Commons by the Prime Minister of Japan, Mr. Nakasone. Accordingly, I believe you will find that there is a disposition to accept the passage of the following draft order, by unanimous consent, without debate:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order of this House, in relation to this day's proceedings, the House shall immediately proceed to "Statements by Members pursuant to Standing Order 22" and at 11.15 o'clock a.m. the House shall proceed to the Oral Question Period, provided that at 12.00 o'clock noon the Speaker shall adjourn the House until the next sitting day;

That the address of His Excellency the Prime Minister of Japan to be delivered in the House Chamber later this day, before Members of the Senate and the House of Commons, together with all introductory and related remarks, be printed as an appendix to the House of Commons Debates of this day so that they form part of the record of this House; and

and

That His Excellency's address, together with all introductory and related remarks, be made available to the media for transmission in the usual way by the House of Commons Broadcasting System.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the order. Is there unanimous consent for its adoption?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

CANADIAN RADIO-TELEVISION AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

NORTHERN NATIVE BROADCASTING POLICY

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, I commend the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission for its northern native broadcasting policy which was announced on December 19. The purpose of this policy is to ensure that native broadcasters have fair access to a reasonable amount of quality broadcast time in order to foster the maintenance and development of native cultures and languages in Canada.

The CBC was mentioned in the CRTC report as having a role to play in providing improved access for native broadcasting. In that report the CRTC indicated its awareness of the concerns raised with respect to the cancellation of the CBC radio program Our Native Land. The CRTC stated in its report that this issue will be taken up with the CBC at its next licence renewal hearing. I interpret this to mean that Mr. Juneau and the CBC have been given a black eye for cancelling Our Native Land—and never has a shiner been so well deserved.

THE ECONOMY

ADMINISTRATION'S RECORD

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is obviously puzzled by his Government's drastic decline in public support, yet he need look no further than the thrust of the explanations offered by his former Minister of State for Transport when she complained that Quebec's needs were not adequately considered in the Government's decision-making process.

The same must be said for the regions of Canada for which the Government's job creation record is somewhat abysmal. When it comes to jobs, the Government has focused on southern Ontario at the expense of the other regions of Canada. The Prime Minister has admitted his regional development programs have been less than successful, and on the weekend the Minsiter of Finance (Mr. Wilson) admitted that the regions had fared rather poorly in previous months.

This is hardly surprising when the three most senior economic Ministers, the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Regional and Economic Expansion (Mr. Stevens), and the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) are drawn from southern Ontario.

In vast areas of Canada a return to economic prosperity still seems a long way off. In fact many areas are still struggling in the depths of a recession. Many Canadians feel they have been ignored by the Government and that their interests and concerns have received little attention.

In the upcoming Cabinet shuffle of the Prime Minister I hope he would endeavour to appoint economic Ministers who know, understand, and are sensitive to Canada's regions. This will demonstrate for all to see that the Prime Minister's vision of Canada extends beyond southern Ontario and does in fact encompass the remaining 94 per cent of our fine country.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

REPORT SUBMITTED BY CANADIAN AND UNITED STATES ENVOYS

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, the report furnished by the acid rain envoys representing Canada and the United States is realistic and timely. Although most of us on this side of the border would have preferred to see a tougher stance on some issues, we must not ignore the prevailing political winds blowing to the south.

For the first time in the history of our countries it is agreed that acid precipitation is a serious trans-boundary problem. Bill Davis and Drew Lewis realized that a report filled with idealism and ultimatums would have negated the entire process of negotiation. Instead, it appears Mr. Lewis has given the President a report which stands a good chance of acceptance.

The envoys' report would almost certainly be hidden on a back shelf if it contained unrealistic recommendations. The envoys were not appointed to look for a quick fix where none exists. Bill Davis and Drew Lewis are to be congratulated by the people of Canada and the United States for doing a fine job in the face of adversity. Hopefully their efforts will bring our countries closer to an agreement on long-range air pollutants. The envoys' report may serve to nudge the U.S. executive branch in the right direction.

EMPLOYMENT

GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, Statistics Canada recently published its latest figures on unemployment in Canada, and they showed that unemployment in this country dropped to 10 per cent in December 1985, the lowest level since 1982. Some 372,000 new jobs were created in Canada in 1985, bringing to 450,000 the number of new jobs created by our Government since its election.

In Quebec, Mr. Speaker, 118,000 new jobs were created in 1985, the best performance since 1980, bringing to 136,000 the number of new jobs created in Quebec since the election of our Government. The encouraging aspect is that most of those jobs went to young Canadians aged 15 to 24. Interestingly enough, in Quebec alone the unemployment rate dropped from 12.8 to 11.7 per cent between September 1984 and December 1985, a decline of 1.1 per cent.

In my own region of Abitibi-Témiscamingue, Mr. Speaker, unemployment went from 19 to 14 per cent, a remarkable 5 per cent decrease.

Mr. Speaker, job creation was the main objective of this Government during the election campaign, and we are clearly showing Canadians that we respect and honour our election promises.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—CALL FOR ACTION BY UNITED STATES

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, Canadians across the country are asking the question: "What next in the acid rain saga?" The ball is back where it was a year ago. The report of the envoys on acid rain unfortunately contains no control program, no target dates, no percentage cuts in emissions and where to apply them in a manner most favourable to Canada, no $5 billion program if industry shows no interest, no reference to the cost of inaction, and no effort to build on the memorandum of intent signed in 1980. The report shows that the authors were mesmerised by the cost of action and ignored the cost of inaction. In 1981 Tom Crocker of the University of Wyoming estimated that cost at $5.5 billion per year. The report ignores the fact that U.S. legislation exists to permit immediate action if the political will is there.

The Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) is in the impossible position of having to rely on U.S. industry and, to make it worse, voluntary action on their part. The Prime Minister has been given a report that favours research over action. He must act to regain the confidence of Canadians in his ability to tackle acid rain. We cannot wait when our lakes, forests, and fish are dying. We must have action in the U.S. now.

EMPLOYMENT

INCREASED JOB CREATION

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, figures released last Friday by StatsCan reveal that 36,000 new jobs were created in Canada during the month of December. This puts the total new job creation at 311,000 for 1985, and 450,000 for the first 15 months of the Progressive Conservative Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Redway: In addition, the unemployment rate has fallen to 10 per cent, its lowest level in years.

These results contrast dramatically with the job creation record of the previous Liberal Government. We know, as do Canadians generally, that more permanent jobs have been created during this Government's first full year in office than the Liberals and NDP ever thought possible. In fact the gloomsters and doomsters and the know-it-alls in the Opposition were predicting that jobs would be lost under our Government. Well, once again they were wrong, and they will continue to be wrong when they refuse to believe in the ability of the private sector to create wealth and prosperity for working men and women across Canada. Canadian entrepreneurs and business people are among the best in the world, and when they have a Government which provides leadership they respond wholeheartedly. This Government will continue to give leadership and the private sector will continue to create even more jobs.

SOCIAL SECURITY

FAMILY ALLOWANCES—FULL INDEXATION ADVOCATED

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Government wants to make a fresh start in 1986. Government Members want to regain the confidence and trust of the Canadian public. I appeal to the Government through you, Mr. Speaker. Why not start off by making children and families a top priority? Let Government Members show they really care by reindexing family allowances to the real cost of living. Show that they will fulfil their promises to protect universal social programs and help those in greatest need. Show that they really listen to social policy groups, all of whom strongly oppose the 3 per cent reduction in the indexation of family allowances. Show that they understood women's groups who said that an attack on family allowances is an attack on women and children.

Let them show that they heard the hurt of poverty groups who told them from life experience how important a fully indexed family allowance is to their survival. Respond to over 50,000 petitioners from all parts of Canada who ask the Government to rescind Bill C-70.

They promised to restore cuts to social programs as the economy improved. They promised social justice and compassion for those in need. Fulfil these promises. Rescind Bill C-70. Restore confidence in your Government by fully reindexing family allowances. Start the year right. Do it now!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

APARTHEID

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE MOLLY BLACKBURN

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I take the floor today to lay special emphasis on the tragic death of Molly Blackburn, a South African militant against apartheid.

Mrs. Blackburn died in a car accident in late December. She was the leader of a local section of the Black Sash group of women opposing apartheid and was an opposition party member on the Cape regional council.

Mrs. Blackburn was jailed several times for unauthorized entry into black ghettos, as she was white.

The struggles of Mrs. Blackburn underscore the importance of human rights, and more particularly the need to end the apartheid regime which denies basic human rights, based as it is on the political exclusion of the black majority, the racist operations of the police system, and the over-exploitation of male and female workers through the migrant work scheme. Molly Blackburn fought to put an end to it.

We shall remember her as a staunch defender of the rights of South African Blacks.

INDUSTRY

INQUIRY WHY GOVERNMENT DID NOT FOLLOW COMMITTEE'S ADVICE PERTAINING TO CLOSURE OF GULF REFINERY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, who has made a number of decisions that are detrimental to Quebec.

In the case of the Gulf Refinery, why did the Minister not act on the advice of the Picard Advisory Committee set up by the Government to help the workers in east-end Montreal?

And why did he not consider the unanimous resolution in favour of opening the refinery, adopted by the Quebec National Assembly? Why did he ignore or reject the advice of these two committees and the advice of the members of the Quebec National Assembly?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, as Chairman of the Departmental Committee on the Economic Development of Montreal, I can inform the House that we expect to receive the first report of the Advisory Committee chaired by Mr. Picard by January 31. We shall, of course, be considering the committee's recommendations very carefully.

GOVERNMENT POSITION ON INTERESTS OF MULTINATIONAL COMPANIES VERSUS INTERESTS OF QUEBEC WORKERS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my supplementary to the responsible Minister.

Did the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion receive the O'Farrell Report referred to by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in December? Doesn't this report prove that the Government has set the interests of a multinational corporation above those of Quebec workers and Canadian consumers?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, my answer to this question is simply that the Director responsible for compliance with the Combines Investigation Act submitted his report and his comments, and that I examined this information. I said what his public conclusions were, and there was the matter of under-capacity and surplus capacity. In this connection, I mentioned that it was a very complex question, with regional variations, and that the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission that was examining the petroleum industry would be submitting its report very shortly and would cover this problem in its comments.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs could advise his colleague on what is in that report because his colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, does not seem to be up to date on that report.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a third question relating to Montreal. The dossier of the Minister on the Gulf matter has not been brilliant nor, for that matter, has it been on de Havilland.

[Translation]

PROPOSED SALE OF CANADAIR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to get back to the dossier of Canadair, another Crown corporation.

Does the Minister intend to give Canadians and Quebecers the assurance that, in the event of Canadair's being sold, all documentation will be made public and that he will protect the interests of Quebec workers and Canadian technology and, above all, will try to have a joint arrangement so that this company will remain under Canadian control?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in responding to the last question of the Leader of the Opposition I am most anxious to make clear that our consideration with respect to the selling of any Crown corporation is always very much with respect to the on-going employment of the employees of the Crown corporation and the retention of technology in Canada. We followed that pattern with de Havilland and, naturally, intend to follow it with Canadair. The Leader of the Opposition has my assurance that those two aspects of any sale will be very much borne in mind by the Government of Canada.

REQUEST THAT REPORT BE PUBLISHED

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, it is quite surprising to hear the Minister claim that he is putting the emphasis on job creation. This is certainly something he overlooked when he caused a great many workers to lose their jobs at the Gulf refinery in east-end Montreal.

My question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs who was quite confusing in his reply to the Leader of the Official Opposition. Is he going to make public the O'Farrell report, as he has promised? The Minister of State for Small Businesses also said publicly that the O'Farrell report would be made public. We are waiting for this report. Where is it?

• (1120)

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I suggest that members of the Opposition themselves are the source of this confusion to which my colleague has just referred, considering the great many jobs which have been created in Canada since September 1984, over 450,000, including 136,000 in the province of Quebec.

I should also like to remind a number of our honourable colleagues opposite that in September or February 1983, they kept quiet when the possible closing of refineries was being discussed.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Let us start the new year right.

REQUEST THAT CONSUMER INTERESTS BE DEFENDED

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, the Minister did not answer my question. I will put it to him once more. Will he have the guts to defend the interests of Canadian consumers? Will he make sure that the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission will look into the very shady business of the Gulf-Ultramar deal which will result in the bankruptcy of many small independent oil dealers in Montreal and the closing of a refinery in east-end Montreal?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): To reply more specifically to this question, Mr. Speaker, I can assure my honourable colleague that, as I mentioned earlier, the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission is currently looking into the oil industry as a whole. I have no control over the studies or recommendations of this quasi-judicial commission, and I shall read them as soon as the report is tabled, some time, I am told, in the early part of 1986.

An Hon. Member: You told us five months ago that you had read it.

PRODUCTION CAPACITY OF MONTREAL REFINERIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the same Minister. Can he confirm that, as shown in the O'Farrell Report, because of the shutdown of three Montreal refineries by the previous Government, there is now a reduced production capacity of almost 50 per cent and that such a reduced capacity cannot cope with Quebec's consumption? If so, why is the Government pursuing a policy of shutting down the refinery in east-end Montreal?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is misinformed in this area. The shut-down of the Gulf refinery will not in any way jeopardize the supply position in Quebec. The supply and demand position in Quebec is in balance. There is still surplus capacity in that province and it is expected to grow. Demand for oil in Quebec—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Ouellet: Table your report.

Miss Carney: I am sorry that the Hon. Members who raised this issue are unwilling to listen to the reply. The demand for oil in Quebec has dropped by 40 per cent in the last five years, 8 per cent in the last year alone. That will add to the surplus capacity.

The reason for this decline has been the $800 million invested by the previous Liberal administration in projects such as natural gas pipelines, electricity projects and conservation projects. This has caused a decline in the demand for oil. The result of all of that is that there have been closures of refineries in Quebec, triggered by the actions of the Liberal Government then in power, and there is now adequate surplus capacity to meet the demands of Quebec for the foreseeable future.

I can also add that under the new regime of deregulation, Quebec is—

Mr. Speaker: Order please. That is a long response.

Mr. Broadbent: Since the Minister has decided to answer rather than the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, I want to say that the Government cannot have it both ways. She has just said that there is a surplus of capacity in Quebec. The Minister who spoke about it two weeks ago said that there is a shortage of capacity. There is a complete contradiction.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF REPORT ON REFINING CAPACITY IN QUEBEC

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs indicated that the O'Farrell Report suggested there was a lack of capacity in terms of meeting the needs of the Province of Quebec, will the Government do the right and honest thing and produce that report for the House of Commons?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, just to follow up on the question, as the Minister responsible has indicated, it is a quasi-judicial board and its report will be dealt with in the appropriate manner.

Mr. Broadbent: What does that mean?

Miss Carney: My own Department's figures—and I am the Minister responsible for Energy, Mines and Resources—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: —shows that there is a surplus capacity existing in Quebec, that there is imbalance and that, with the deregulation programs which this Government has introduced, Quebec is in the healthy position of being able to get oil and oil products from anywhere in the world at competitive prices. Right now the Gaspé region of Quebec is supplied from the Maritimes. Also the Abitibi region of Quebec is supplied from Ontario. There are all sorts of sources of supply for Quebec and I believe this issue is being raised in order to jeopardize the concerns of Quebecers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I say to the Minister that the people of the Province of Quebec would like to meet their own needs with jobs in the Province of Quebec which were there before, before this Government shut down the refinery.

FUTURE OF GULF REFINERY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I have a question for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. Does he agree with the Minister who has just told the House that there is a surplus capacity in Quebec, or does he agree with the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs that there is a shortage of capacity?

Finally, will the Minister take the steps necessary to keep that refinery open in the Province of Quebec now?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member from Oshawa, I hope that he realizes when he is talking about the loss of jobs with respect to the closure of the Gulf refinery, or the possible closure of that refinery, the Ultramar committed investment of $125 million is going to create, in itself, 4,500 person years of jobs in the Province of Quebec.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: I find it most remarkable that the two opposition Parties are putting the Gulf situation, which is the fourth refinery to be closed—the other three under the previous Government—into the context they are, totally ignoring that the Government has created 40,000 more jobs in the City of Montreal since taking power.

• (1130)

INQUIRY WHY GOVERNMENT DID NOT DELAY GULF-ULTRAMAR TRANSACTION FOR NINETY DAYS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the President of the Treasury Board. In her letter of resignation, the former Minister of State for Transport stated, and I quote:

> The actual influence of the Ministers from Quebec in the decision process within Cabinet is in my view inadequate.

The answers we get are evidence of that Government's incompetence and inefficiency.

Here is my question to the Minister: Will the Minister explain why the ministerial committee for the Montreal area failed to recommend to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion postponing by 90 days the decision on the Gulf-Ultramar issue as requested by the Quebec Government? Why did they fail to recommend that?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, in response to my colleague I would simply tell him to what extent the Ministers from Quebec are and have been concerned with the Montreal issue. The unemployment rate in Montreal is the lowest since 1981, because of steps we took to defend the interests of Montrealers, a lot better than you ever did when you were in power.

Mr. Malépart: Answer the question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT WORK WITH ULTRAMAR TO PROTECT JOBS IN QUEBEC

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is for the same Minister. It is really sad for Quebecers, men and women, to watch today the behaviour of their Members of Parliament and Ministers. Will the Minister at least tell us whether he endorses the representations now being made by the Bourassa Government to Ultramar before it sells the refinery in east-end Montreal to Gaz métropolitain, and whether he is ready to make up for his previous failure to address representations to that company in order to protect jobs in Quebec?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, speaking of behaviour I would like to ask my hon. colleague how he behaved when they closed down Esso, when they closed down BP, when they closed down Texaco, when they wiped out 1,080 jobs in east-end Montreal. How did he behave then? I say he rated zero for behaviour.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An Hon. Member: Where were you in 1983? You were hiding.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. de Cotret: Mr. Speaker, where was he when the previous Government announced it was putting an end to the petro-chemical industry, to Pétromont? In a matter of weeks, we injected $15 million in Pétromont, and we have just injected another $55.8 million in Pétromont to ensure a viable petro-chemical industry in Montreal. This I call progress. This I call building on solid accomplishments.

[English]

REFINING CAPACITY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for industry. It is also on the question of Gulf and Ultramar in Montreal. We heard, this morning, from the Minister of Energy that there is a surplus of refining capacity in the City of Montreal, in the Province of Quebec. On the other hand, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has said that there is a shortage of refining capacity. My question is a simple one. Which Minister is correct and, second, will he table the O'Farrell Report in the House?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I simply want to correct my colleague and say that I have not made any statement to the effect that there is a shortage of capacity. I reported the comments made by the Director of Investigations under the Combines Investigation Act. There now exists a complex problem of under-capacity or surplus capacity. I have referred this problem to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, which is now examining the oil industry and will report early in 1986.

INQUIRY CONCERNING DIFFERENCE BETWEEN POLICY OF PRESENT AND PREVIOUS GOVERNMENTS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, three years ago, the previous Liberal Government allowed three Montreal refineries to close. My question is as follows: What is the difference between the policy of the present Government and that of the previous Liberal Government three years ago? What is the difference?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, there is in fact a lot of difference. In February 1983 . . . My colleague from the Treasury Board mentioned earlier that this had caused the loss of 1,080 jobs in our region while we have created 40,000 in the Montreal area. That is what we should keep in mind.

REQUEST THAT JOBS BE SAFEGUARDED IF CANADAIR SOLD

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): According to a confidential study carried out by the Federal Government, Mr. Speaker, Quebec accounts for 51 per cent of the aerospace industry in Canada, compared with 46 per cent for Ontario and 3 per cent for the rest of Canada.

I have a question for the Hon. Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Could he assure clearly to the House this morning that should Canadair be sold, its employees will keep their jobs. Also, that the findings of the Burns Fry study concerning the possible sale of Canadair will be made public. And finally, will he promise that he will no longer open the books of Canadair to firms such as—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please, that is many questions in one.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I believe I gave a full and complete answer to the Hon. Member's first question. As far as his second and third questions are concerned, I simply reassure him that, insofar as the ongoing negotiations are concerned in respect of Canadair, the Burns report is available to the Government of Canada. We do not feel, because of certain rather confidential commercially sensitive parts of that report, that it should be opened to the public at the present time. However, I can assure the Hon. Member that if we are able to enter into a negotiation which would lead to the sale of Canadair, the material in that report, to the extent that it is not commercially sensitive, will be made available for all to see.

EFFECT OF DE HAVILLAND SALE ON CANADAIR CONTRACTS

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I have a short supplementary question. Will the Minister give us the assurance that, in the sale of de Havilland to Boeing, none of the 500 sub-jobs being done at the moment by Canadair will be transferred to the new Boeing of Toronto?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as Hon. Members of the House will recall, before the House rose for Christmas I think we all agreed that the de Havilland matter should be considered by a committee of the House. I believe that preparations are now under way to have the hearings commence. I would suggest to the Hon. Member, if he is interested in the type of question which he has raised, that that would be the appropriate forum for him in which to ask that question. I certainly assure him that there will be an appropriate answer.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT GUARANTEES

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion and arises from a meeting my leader and I had with workers and representatives of 5,000 workers at Canadair, who are also worried about de-industrialization in the Montreal area.

If the Government stands by its decision to privatize Canadair, does it intend to provide guarantees that a Parliamentary Committee will have full scrutiny of the conditions well before the sale, and would the Government guarantee not to sell Canadair without the specific approval of the Parliament of Canada?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, let me again assure the Hon. Member and all Hon. Members of the House that certainly we are as concerned about the ongoing jobs in respect of Canadair as any member of the Opposition. It is the Government's chief concern that Canadair be maintained, that it prosper and that it not only continue in the aerospace field but in related fields. We believe that the steps which we are taking and the negotiations which we are holding with possible buyers are the best means to ensure the viability of Canadair for the long term, and the jobs for the workers at Canadair.

PARLIAMENTARY SCRUTINY

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Since it is clear that the Government mishandled the de Havilland deal by trying to do a deal behind Parliament's back, will the Minister undertake that there will be full parliamentary scrutiny of any proposed sale of Canadair, and that Parliament will be called upon to approve by a vote any sale of Canadair, so that we can ensure that those jobs are protected rather than just having to take the Government's word?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, again in reply to the Hon. Member, one of the reasons that I so welcomed the committee hearing into de Havilland is the almost enjoyment I will have watching certain members of the Opposition eat their words concerning the deal which we have struck in respect of de Havilland between the Government of Canada and Boeing. In short, it is a good deal for the workers at de Havilland and it is a good deal for the people of Canada. Again I can assure him that that is the only type of deal we will contemplate in respect of Canadair.

Oral Questions

INSURANCE

MUNICIPALITIES' DIFFICULTIES IN OBTAINING LIABILITY COVERAGE

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance. The Minister is aware that because of recent multi-million dollar court judgments, municipalities and school boards across Canada have been unable to obtain liability insurance coverage. Will the Minister consider introducing legislation which will place a limit or a cap on claims of this sort so that municipalities such as her own and my own will be able to obtain liability insurance coverage which they have not had since the first of this year?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, this is obviously a matter of some concern because there are in the industry some very profound changes under way. We have been working, as you know, since we have been in office, on strengthening the capital requirements and the solvency considerations for insurance companies. This is the best way, in the long run, to ensure that insurance is available under all enonomic circumstances at a reasonable price.

I have been in touch with the Canadian Association of Municipalities and, indeed, with other organizations which have been facing problems. In the near future we will be announcing some policy developments.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—UNITED STATES SULPHUR DIOXIDE EMISSIONS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It has to do with acid rain. Canadians learned last week that the acid rain envoys were recommending research over action and also a voluntary program which makes the health of Canada's lakes, forests and rivers dependent on the good will of U.S. industries if they want to take any initiative.

My question, very simply, is this. What will be the next step of the Prime Minister in regaining the confidence of Canadians in this matter by ensuring that we do obtain controls on emissions of sulphur dioxide in the United States which produces some 26 million tonnes of $SO_2$ every year which comes north and destroys our environment?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, when a major committee of this House in 1981 brought down a landmark document on acid rain four or five years ago, the Prime Minister of the day refused to discuss the issue even in the House of Commons, much less in Washington with this counterpart. The President of the United States, for his part, refused to recognize that acid rain was a serious problem. In fact he attributed acid rain purely to natural phenomena, volcanoes, plants, and even ducks.

Sir, we have, in this report made a lot of progress since then.

The Hon. Member asks where are we going to take the issue from here? The envoys have recommended high level, cabinet level mechanisms. They have ensured that the issue will be on the agenda of the President and the Prime Minister at the summit conferences, not just next March but in future years. In the United States they have committed themselves to $5 billion in expenditures in the short term application of technology. We intend as a Government to act on all those recommendations, and to rush the recommendations even further.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): The Minister of the Environment is ducking the question. Will he admit, Mr. Speaker, that all that has been achieved so far is a one-year delay considering the fact that in 1980 we were at least ahead of this document through the memorandum of intent signed between Canada and the United States five years ago?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, when the memorandum of intent was brought down in August of 1980 not a single thing was done to act on that MOI, not a single thing, including the entire year he was Minister of the Environment.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McMillan: I ask him to tell me, this House, and the Canadian people, during the year he was Minister of the Environment how much money did he get from the Americans for acid rain abatement?

CANADA-UNITED STATES DISCUSSIONS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of the Environment. Without getting into the squabble between the two Members as to who is the greatest boon to the Canadian environment, I would like to ask the Minister whether or not he can say on behalf of the Prime Minister and the Government today that they regard the recommendations of the envoy report as unacceptable? Can he say that the Prime Minister in his meeting with Mr. Reagan this spring will be pushing the President—not just to accept the recommendations of that report, but to go further and accept not the sell-out position of Mr. Davis, but the Canadian position that action is needed now, not five years from now?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member is asking me whether the Canadian Government is totally satisfied with the progress that is being made by Canada with the United States on the acid rain question, the answer is clearly no.

We don't accept the envoys' report as the last step toward acid rain abatement on both sides of the border, it is the first step.

CANADIAN POSITION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, it is not only a first step, it is an inadequate step. I want the Minister of the Environment to reaffirm the Canadian position, and in doing so to say just how much a failure the envoy process has been. The ball is now back in the Prime Minister's court, and what is he going to be saying to Mr. Reagan when the next summit comes along?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada and myself, in particular, accept acid rain as the number one environmental priority of the Government and of the country. The Hon. Member says that the envoys' process and report have been a total and utter failure. I disagree. In fact The Washington Post, which is viewed universally as a progressive newspaper, says:

> In past years the administration has stoutly resisted spending large sums on acid rain, on grounds that more research was needed. This (the envoys' report) would take it past that point, and in the least convenient of budget years.

The Washington Post has endorsed the envoys' report. I think the Hon. Member should have at least as much confidence in it.

Mr. Broadbent: Why didn't you quote the New York Times? It didn't say the same thing, that is why.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

HALIFAX NAVAL DOCKYARD

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Defence concerning Canadian Forces Base Halifax. Media reports claim there is a government proposal to privatize the naval dockyard at CFB Halifax. Will the Minister advise the House whether there is, in existence, a plan to privatize the naval dockyard in Halifax?

I am sure he knows that thousands of Nova Scotians depend on the dockyard for their employment, and I think they have a right to know whether or not there is such a plan.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I have been unable to determine the source of that story. There is no such plan within the Department of National Defence and I am informed that the task force review, the ministerial review of programs, has not considered this at all either. So just where that story originated from, I have no idea, but it has no basis in fact.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND—COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): My question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Earlier in the Question Period the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion said he welcomed the committee's proposed study of de Havilland, which was meant to begin today and has now been postponed. I want to ask the Acting Prime Minister for his assurances that the Government will not be putting pressure on the members of the committee about those hearings, and that the committee members will be free to decide what issues about de Havilland and Boeing and their futures to examine, which witnesses to call, and, in general, how to conduct its work.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I am trying to be charitable, this being the first day coming back after the new year but I do not know how many times we have to say something for that hon. gentleman to understand it.

The President of the Treasury Board has been saying over and over again that the appropriate committee examination will be afforded to this transaction.

The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and I have repeatedly been saying the same thing The annual report of CIDC is before the committee. If the committee wants to examine it, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has already volunteered to appear so the committee can start with him. Let them set their agenda and get about their work. We don't operate in this Government like that Party.

REQUEST FOR INFORMATION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the President of the Treasury Board and concerns exactly that openness. In the last Question Period of last year the Minister told me that all I had to do was phone and I would receive the information with respect to what commissions were being paid on that sale. I phoned and I did not receive the information. I have asked questions under access to information legislation and I have not received answers. I have written to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the hon. gentleman have a supplementary question?

Mr. Kaplan: Given the short time which the committee is being given, will the Government give us this information now—today—so that we can prepare ourselves in order to make those committee hearings as useful as possible? The Government has already welched on its commitments in the past.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I could help the Hon. Member for York Centre—

Mr. Crosbie: He is beyond help!

Mr. Stevens: Over the Christmas break, in anticipation of members of the committee wanting certain material such as that to which the Hon. Member refers, we took the matter up with the various parties concerned, including Rimgate, Mr. Dornier, and the Boeing people. I am pleased to be able to tell Hon. Members that we are quite willing to make relevant documents available to the committee. The commercial sensitivity in certain documents will have to be excluded. However, subject to that type of matter, the letter of intent is something which we are quite willing to make available, as well as the summary of Arthur Andersen and the Royal-Lepage document. The APS market survey summary will also be available. I have a long list of various items which will be made available.

An Hon. Member: Table it!

Mr. Stevens: I understand members of the committee may meet this afternoon. I am waiting to hear from them as to the orderly way in which they would like to have this material made available, not just to Members of the House but to the public at large.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

BANKRUPTCY ACT

PROVISIONS AFFECTING FARMERS AND FISHERMEN

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. At the First Ministers' Conference in Halifax the Prime Minister announced that he would be amending the Bankruptcy Act to meet the needs of farmers facing insolvency. The Minister of Agriculture said it would be legislation with teeth and that it would be introduced on an urgent, priority basis, certainly before Christmas. Since the urgent action has not materialized, why has the Government decided to listen to the banks instead of the three Parties of in this House who in June of 1984 agreed to set up a procedure whereby farmers and fishermen would be able to obtain a third-party review and an imposed debt reduction?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make it clear to the Hon. Member that this Government does not listen to the banks—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wise: —or, necessarily, to the opposition Parties. This Government listens to the farm organizations in the country, from which the best information is obtained.

I wish to set the record straight with respect to a couple of comments made by the Hon. Member. I have said it was our hope and our wish to be in a position prior to Christmas to introduce that piece of legislation. However, at the same time, being honest and frank with the farm communities across the country, I have pointed out at each and every meeting that that timeframe just might not be possible to meet.

ROLE OF ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question concerns the same issue and it is for the Solicitor General. What instructions has the Solicitor Geneal given to members of the RCMP who will accompany people posing as receivers on to farms, even though the supposed receivers have no legal documents giving them access to those farm properties? At the same time those same officers will not answer a call from a farmer who is in financial difficulty when he phones to obtain protection from people who are stalking his herds, machinery or grain. Does the Minister's Department have a policy with respect to this matter?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member has any specific case which he wishes to bring to my attention, I would be glad to have it investigated.

INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. On July 26, 1984, during the election campaign, the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre told The Gazette that the policy of jacking up interest rates to defend the dollar has consequences far more serious than a weakened dollar. Canadians will be surprised to know that the bank rate year-over-year in January, 1986, is higher than it was in January, 1985; January, 1984; and January, 1983. This January the bank rate is the highest January rate since 1982. Is it now the Government's policy to let interest rates go up to defend the dollar?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the simple answer to the question is no. On September 4, 1984, the bank rate was 12.39 per cent. As the Hon. Member knows, right now it is over 2.5 percentage points lower than that. That is a clear indication of the direction of the policy of this Government.

I should draw to the Hon. Member's attention that as a former banker he should understand that interest rates fluctuate and that the key issue at which we should be looking is the results of this Government's policies. Some 450,000 jobs have been created since September 4, 1984. That is performance—something to which Canadians are responding.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

INTEREST RATES—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I would have liked the Minister of Finance to have given a more direct answer to my question. The only indication he gave was: No.

I may remind the Minister that the gap between interest rates has doubled since October. How can he tell the House it is not this Government's policy to let interest rates rise, when the difference between short-term interest rates in the United States and Canada has doubled since last October?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think I answered the question fairly directly with one word—no. The policy of the Government is to try to get interest rates down as low as possible within the context of our broad economic policy. As a former banker, the Hon. Member should know that there are fluctuations within the markets that are out of the control of the Government or of the Central Bank.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Is that so?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Yes, I say to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. He was a fellow who got interest rates going up in the 1970s, at which time they reached record levels which put so many farmers and small businesses out of business. He should know. Interest rates started at 5 per cent—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

MEDICAL CARE

FUNDING OF CANCER TREATMENT CENTRES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Last week there were reports about the serious inadequacies of facilities for treating cancer patients in most parts of Canada. Given the fact that the $2 billion cut in funds from EPF, which the Government intends to impose on the provinces by 1990, will exacerbate the already serious crisis in cancer treatment centres, will the Minister urge his colleagues in Cabinet to reverse this decision to cut these grants which are so necessary if the health of Canadians is to be protected?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, first I should point out to the Hon. Member that his use of the word "cuts" is wrong. The same percentage for health care will be maintained by the federal Government. The Minister of Finance met with his counterparts prior to Christmas and indicated to them that there will be an increase in the EPF commensurate with those principles.

I think the question the Hon. Member is really asking is what other facilities and research processes should the provinces, the federal Government, and agencies such as the Canadian Cancer Society, for example, be looking at co-operatively in order to meet the challenge. That is the real issue.

MEDICAL RESEARCH

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows of course that the $2 billion to which I have referred is $2 billion less than the provinces would have received under the previous plan as a result of the government proposal.

Given the fact that when the Conservative Party was in opposition it pledged to increase research and development spending to 2.5 per cent of GNP—

Mr. Speaker: With great respect, does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Orlikow: When will the Government reach that goal? In particular, when will it reach the goal in respect of research for life sciences?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I should tell the Hon. Member that, yes, the Government is committed to increasing the percentage of R and D relative to GNP.

● (1200)

I should point out to the Hon. Member as well that one of the very first steps this Government took was to raise the amount of money, for instance, that the Medical Research Council was to receive under the previous Government's estimates. In fact it raised it by over $30 million immediately.

Additionally, I believe the Hon. Member should be made aware of the fact that we believe that research should be driven not only by government but by private industry and the private sector as well. In fact we are very pleased to see that those kinds of communications are taking place and that there is a deep interest to see how those two efforts, both public and private, can be co-ordinated.

Mr. Speaker: It being 12 o'clock, pursuant to order made earlier today this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 o'clock a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 12.02 p.m.

APPENDIX

ADDRESS
YASUHIRO NAKASONE
Prime Minister of Japan to Both Houses of Parliament in the House of Commons Chamber, Ottawa on Monday, January 13, 1986

His Excellency, the Prime Minister of Japan, was welcomed by the Right Honourable Brian Mulroney, Prime Minister of Canada, and thanked by the Honourable Martial Asselin, Speaker pro tempore of the Senate, and the Honourable John Bosley, Speaker of the House of Commons.

[English]

Hon. John Bosley (Speaker of the House of Commons): Your Excellency, we are highly honoured to have you address this joint session of the House of Commons and Senate of Canada. I think you can tell by that reception, Sir, how you and your wife are regarded by the Members of the House of Commons and the Senate.

May I now call upon the Prime Minister of Canada.

[Translation]

The Right Hon. the Prime Minister of Canada.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Prime Minister of Japan, Mr. Deputy Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House, ladies and gentlemen of the House and the Senate.

[English]

I have today the high honour and distinct privilege of welcoming among us today His Excellency, the Prime Minister of Japan, Mr. Nakasone. To you, Sir, and to Mrs. Nakasone we extend a warm welcome to the Parliament of Canada.

Your visit to Canada, Prime Minister, celebrates and cements the partnership between our two countries, for we have become partners in peace, partners in progress and partners in prosperity. There is infinitely more to this than commerce between our two countries, although it goes without saying that we greatly value the fact that Japan is our second largest trading partner. However, there is a common commitment to a free world and a world free from the threat of nuclear war. There is also a shared understanding that perhaps the greatest threat to the prosperity of the developed world is the poverty of the developing world. A partnership based on a mutual range of interests, our relationship has blossomed into a friendship based on mutual respect. For our part, Prime Minister, it goes even deeper, to admiration as well as respect, admiration for the real miracle of modern Japan which is to have brought about an economic transformation in harmony with its heritage.

[Translation]

Now, under Mr. Nakasone's vigorous leadership, Japan is moving ahead again, to a new stage in its development, from being a leader in the technological revolution of today to becoming one in the intricately interdependent world of tomorrow. During Mr. Nakasone's tenure as Prime Minister, his countrymen have increasingly come to share his view that it is not enough to have markets in the world, that it is essential to have a place in the world and indispensable to have a view of the world. As it happens, from our window on the Pacific, from our place at the summit table, our two countries have much the same global perspective.

And from our private discussions, Prime Minister, I know we have many common economic and diplomatic objectives. First among our many shared global concerns is our fundamental preoccupation with arms control, with reducing international tensions and reducing nuclear arsenals.

[English]

Canada and Japan begin from the premise of two countries which do not allow nuclear weapons on their soil. Japan, alone among the nations of the earth, has experienced the catastrophic devastation of nuclear weapons. It is from this uniquely tragic and poignant vantage point that Japan speaks as an advocate for nuclear sanity and for a very constructive dialogue between East and West. All manking lives in the shadow of nuclear war but Canadians live geographically and uniquely between the two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union. Thus, Prime Minister, we were deeply encouraged by the spirit of the Geneva Summit between President Reagan and General-Secretary Gorbachev last November. We are very heartened as well that they will be meeting again this year and next. There is no more compelling responsibility for leaders of East and West, great powers as well as small, than to encourage the pursuit of a more secure peace.

There is a new, insidious threat to stability in the world, the murderous scourge of terrorism, an international plague that knows and respects no boundaries, from which no person is safe, and to which democracies such as Canada and Japan, to name but two, are most vulnerable. Japan and Canada were linked in the horror of terrorism last year when a bomb exploded among the luggage of a Canadian commercial flight after its arrival in Tokyo. Our people have a right to expect their governments to take forceful action to rid the world of these cowardly creatures who do not recognize the bounds of decency or the dictates of reason.

As it happens, Prime Minister, we, as leaders, are not powerless to do something about this. We can encourage support for more effective enforcement of international law, as you have done on many occasions. Under your leadership at the summit the partners may yet contemplate effective, co-ordinated action against terrorists of every origin and terrorism in every form.

[Translation]

I look forward to meeting you and our summit partners again in Tokyo, as I look forward to our discussions there. Canada is firmly committed to the principles and the process of the economic summit of industrialized nations. The issues may have changed since the first summit in 1975. But the challenge remains the same, the imperative of acting together.

Where previously our stability was threatened by external economic forces, we must all confront an enemy within, the growing trend towards protectionism that threatens the underpinnings of the multilateral trading system.

That is why, on behalf of my colleagues from all corners of the House and the Senate, I praise your courageous determination to open up Japanese markets to new finished foreign products, including our own, especially in the high technology and telecommunications field.

That is why we welcome your support of our trade initiative with the United States based as it is on our shared conviction that freer trade between those two partners, the world's most important trading relationship, will lead, hopefully, to trade liberalization among other partners.

That is why we share your commitment to a new round of multilateral trade negotiations, which we hope will begin this spring at the ministerial level, and we have offered Montreal as the site of the talks.

[English]

Our commitment to an enhanced multilateral system is a cornerstone of Canadian trade policy. That commitment extends to Asia and the entire Pacific Rim. It is a commitment that goes beyond our interest in trade to an over-riding concern for the development of the Third World and the financial stability of the entire world, for, unless ways and means are found to reduce the level of indebtedness of the nations of the South, the mountain of debt could also crush the nations of the North. I know this is a particular concern of yours in your region of the world, Prime Minister, and I can assure you that we share it in ours.

Your stay with us by no means ends here today. Tomorrow you will visit Vancouver, our jewel of a city, on what is, for you, the far Pacific shore. Your visit to Canada has strengthened the relationship between us and between our two countries. We have become friends as well as partners.

[Translation]

Thirty years ago, at the time of your first visit to Canada, our two countries were experiencing strikingly different economic conditions from today. Japan, now in the full flower of technological achievement, was then in the throes of reconstruction. Canada, now in a period of economic adjustment and renewal, was then in an era of unprecedented prosperity and growth.

[English]

Then as now, you, Prime Minister, were a member of the Japanese Parliament as, indeed, you have been since 1947. In our Parliament you would be the dean of the House of Commons. The Prime Minister has won 15 consecutive elections in his home district. That only leaves 13 more for me, Prime Minister.

I would hasten to point out to my colleagues that Prime Minister Nakasone is much more than an astute politician who has endured from one generation to the next. He is a learned statesman who, in the traditions of his country, dares to put the global questions as to the future peace and security of mankind. His enlightened perspective springs from a civilization that is both ancient and modern, and from a contemporary society that remains no less cultivated for having become so competitive. This, then, is Prime Minister Nakasone, summiteer and statesman, painter and politician, athlete and author. Esteemed colleagues and fellow citizens of Canada, I present to you the very distinguished Prime Minister of Japan.

Honourable Speaker of the Senate,

Honourable Speaker of the House of Commons,

Honourable Members of the Senate,

Honourable Members of the House of Commons and distinguished guests,

[Translation]

It is a great pleasure for me to visit Ottawa, Canada's beautiful and serene capital, and this Parliament, whose splendour is famous the world over. I am particularly honoured with this opportunity to address my dear friends in the Parliament of Canada on the very day it reconvenes in this new year, 1986. I would like to express my sincere thanks to Prime Minister Mulroney, Speaker Charbonneau, Speaker Bosley and all concerned for having given me this opportunity. I also wish to thank the Government and the people of Canada for the very warm welcome extended to me and my party since our arrival in this country.

[English]

As I flew into Toronto yesterday I saw vast stretches of land frozen by the bitter cold and covered by silvery-white snow. I was struck by the thought that only those who endure the rigourous challenges of nature can reap her rich rewards. Endurance is a true mark of courage. I salute and pay my deep respect to the generations of courageous Canadians who toiled to build this nation and have carried on with the task to make it what it is today.

I am further struck by the tolerance and understanding of Canadians toward multiculturalism, and their compassion and support for the handicapped. Many refugees who have unfortunately been driven out of their homelands in various parts of the world are choosing Canada as their final place to settle, and Canada is accepting them. This is testimony that the peoples of the world view Canada with respect, affection, and gratitude, as a nation with a warm heart and humanitarian spirit, which does not discriminate among human beings.

On this valued occasion of addressing the representatives of the Canadian people, I should like to speak on Japan's position and the basic elements of its policies towards the world. I should further like to state my views on how Japan and Canada can co-operate for their own progress and that of the world, as we move on to the 21st century, now only 15 years away.

The basis of Japan's world policy is to seek its peace and prosperity in the attainment of world peace and prosperity. As we put this into practice, we attach the highest importance to strengthening solidarity among the free nations of the world with whom we share common values.

After the end of World War II, the Japanese people, with deep remorse for the past, vowed to pursue peace as their national objective, and set about rebuilding their homeland, guided by the stars of freedom and democracy.

Forty years later, Japan has arrived where it is today, exceeding our expectations of ourselves. In the meantime, there have been major changes in the situation both home and abroad. The international community is asking Japan to make a contribution commensurate with the expanded influence it now exercises. For Japan which has for long enjoyed the benefits of world peace and prosperity, and of freedom and democracy, it has now become a national mission to respond positively to the call of the international community and to exert its energies toward the happiness of mankind. Japan's aspiration to work toward world peace and prosperity, on the basis of enhanced solidarity with the free nations of the world, is thus rooted in the very heart of the Japanese people.

With these thoughts in mind, let me enumerate what I consider to be the main points of Japan's world policy.

The first is the promotion of peace and disarmament. Since mankind first appeared on this earth several million years ago, history has been a constant struggle—a struggle to secure untroubled survival for mankind. It remains a fact, however, that in this age of highly developed human wisdom, the world is still torn by elements of unreason which threaten billions of lives. We owe it to our posterity to strive to eliminate these elements.

The largest single element of unreason is nuclear weapons. Except at the time of the Flood and Noah's Ark, mankind has never before been faced with such a threat of being totally and instantaneously wiped out. Whether mankind has the wisdom to eliminate by its own hand what is of its own making—this is the unprecedented test to which Clio, the Muse of History, is subjecting mankind.

As the only nation ever to have experienced the devastation of nuclear weapons, Japan has steadfastly maintained its three non-nuclear principles, and has been calling at every opportunity for the elimination of nuclear weapons. As a means of achieving this, we have advocated that the superpowers reduce these weapons drastically while maintaining a proper balance. We have also made proposals for arms control and disarmament, including a step-by-step formula for steadily reducing the size of nuclear weapons with a view to achieving a comprehensive test ban.

I have felt it essential that the leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union meet and talk in order to promote peace and disarmament, and have been calling upon President Reagan, General Secretary Gorbachev and others concerned to do so. Fortunately, the two leaders met last autumn in the first U.S.-Soviet Summit to take place in six and a half years. This meeting is only the start of a process and does not in itself warrant undue optimism. But it is true that we have seen the first ray of hope shine on these daunting problems. For my own part, I strongly hope that the two leaders respond to the ardent wishes of the peoples of the world, and continue to negotiate with sincerity and patience until they can achieve the desired results.

The regional conflicts raging in the Middle East, Asia, Africa, Central America and elsewhere should also be important matters of our concern. The conflicts not only affect the lives and safety of those who live in these areas, but also, if escalated, may trigger a major war involving nuclear weapons. Japan has thus been working hard to devise ways of creating a climate conducive to the early resolution of these conflicts, as well as to the prevention of their escalation.

The increase in the stockpile of nuclear weapons and the eruption of regional conflicts are both attributable, in the final analysis, to distrust between the parties involved.

Therefore, the key to the resolution of those issues lies in bringing the parties around, through better mutual understanding, to mutual trust. Indirect as it may seem, efforts have to be made over time to create opportunities for deeper mutual understanding to eliminate mutual distrust, gradually, and to attain mutual trust. Japan views the United Nations and other international organizations as important for such efforts, and intends to exert its efforts to revitalize the functions of these organizations.

I note that Canada, on its part, has attached great importance to the activities of these international organizations, and has been taking the lead in actively promoting them. The people of Japan have never forgotten the very great help Canada extended to Japan in the post-war years as we returned to the international community and joined these international organizations.

The second point of our world policy is to strengthen solidarity among the free nations of the world.

The global political and economic situation has undergone major changes between the end of World War II and today. However, there has been no change whatsoever in the supremacy and legitimacy of freedom and democracy and in our pursuit of these cultural and political values.

Recognizing this, Japan has established as fundamental policy the maintenance of our peaceful and stable society on the basis of political and economic co-operation and solidarity among the countries of North America, Western Europe and Japan, which share common values. Together, these three regions account for half of the world's economic production. We form the backbone of the Free World. Today, as the world is beset politically and economically with increasingly complex difficulties, it is all the more essential that we maintain our trilateral co-operation and unity among the three regions. We need this in order to cope effectively with the problems confronting us, such as, promotion of peace and disarmament, revitalization of the world economy, and meeting the problems of the developing countries.

The seven-nation summit meeting of industrialized democracies is an important forum for our trilateral co-operation. Japan is determined to continue to contribute as positively as it can to our trilateral solidarity while placing our main emphasis on the summit.

The third point of our policy concerns development and prosperity.

[Translation]

Since the end of the last war, world economic growth has brought considerable benefits to people the world over, starting with an increase in our collective well-being. We have a duty to consolidate and further develop this economic progress in order to help meet the growing needs of the countries of this world. To achieve this, we urgently need to defend the international system of free trade. However, the free trade system is as fragile as glass, and a recent wave of protectionism is giving increasing cause for concern. I maintain that if we let these protectionist tendencies develop any further, they may lead to a collapse of the economic order we enjoy today.

[English]

To defend and promote free trade, Japan has been implementing a series of programs to increase market access, including the reduction or elimination of tariffs, without seeking reciprocal action by our trading partners. These initiatives are aimed at achieving a degree of market openness unparalleled elsewhere. At the same time, we are redoubling our efforts for the promotion of a new round of multilateral trade negotiations within the GATT framework. I intend to join hands and march forward with Canada, which shares our belief in free trade, as we forcefully promote the new round.

It is argued that there is no way to avoid the pitfalls of protectionism other than to vitalize domestic industries and improve their competitiveness. Structural changes in our industrial and economic fabric would be specially conducive to defending free trade. These changes may be brought about through the promotion of scientific and technological innovations that may attract private sector vitality, and by the ensuing transfers of technology and structural adjustment. On the part of Japan, we are taking bold steps to expand domestic demand and are also in the process of tackling fundamental adjustments in our domestic economic structure in the interest of international harmony.

In the world economy as a whole, the advanced industrial countries and the developing countries are the two wheels, without either of which we cannot drive forward to achieve further development. This is why co-operation with developing countries to advance their economies and their welfare constitutes one of the important objectives of Japan's national policy. In this regard, I pay homage to the fact that Canada started its assistance to developing countries as early as 1950. For my own part, I have advocated, ever since my assumption of office as Prime Minister, that there can be no prosperity for the North without prosperity for the South, and have appealed for greater assistance toward the developing world. Japan has already planned and implemented two consecutive programs to double its Official Development Assistance, ODA. On the heels of the successful attainment of these goals, we have recently decided, despite stringent budgetary conditions, upon a new set of policy goals with the twin objectives of raising the total amount of our ODA for the seven years from 1986 through to 1992 to over $40 billion, and of making the disbursement level for 1992 double that for 1985. This new program will enable Japan to continue to expand its ODA, which today ranks in value second only to the United States among the free nations of the world.

I should add that what is noteworthy about the developing world these days is that we are increasingly required to fine-tune our assistance to meet the varying needs that reflect different conditions and stages of development in each country. Japan attaches particular importance to co-operation in human resources development, assigning priority to dispatching experts and Japan Overseas Co-operation Volunteers, and accepting trainees in Japanese companies.

Ladies and Gentlemen, with these policies of Japan in mind, I should like next to state my views on future co-operation between Japan and Canada.

Thirty years ago, in 1955, I visited Canada as a member of the Japanese Diet. I saw industrial facilities in Ontario and Quebec, as well as the innovative heavy reactor at Chalk River. I was struck and amazed by the high level of your industrial technologies, and entertained great hopes for the expansion of economic interchanges between our two countries.

Since then, Japan and Canada have succeeded in expanding the value of their two-way trade by about 100 times, due, in part, to our mutually complementary trade structure. Further, our bilateral economic interchanges have continued to intensify in a broad range of areas including investment and industrial co-operation. Today, each of us is indispensable to the other.

However, we should not be content with a relationship based merely on economic complementarity. I believe that we, the free nations of the world, should aim at building a world where nations, unfettered by the parochial interests of each or by the walls between states, exchange freely, help one another, highly respect each other's cultural values, and prosper together. That will be a world of true interdependence.

In this context, I note with keen interest Canada's unique role in the international arena. Canada has not just reacted passively to superpower politics but, taking full advantage of its self-defined role as a "middle power", is contributing actively to the building of peace as an international mediator or as a quiet but effective negotiator. This course of foreign policy chosen by Canada has amply demonstrated that any nation should and can play a valuable role appropriate to its characteristics in international politics. You have thus encouraged many nations of the world and have also made them aware of their respective responsibilities. Your contribution in this regard has indeed been immense.

Japan, for its part, is playing its own role in the international community through the world policies I have outlined and is exploring new ways of contributing. In this context, I propose that Japan and Canada consult and co-operate even more seriously on such problems as world peace and disarmament and on our policies to achieve prosperity in the developing countries.

With the Tokyo Summit in May and the expected start of the new round of multilateral trade negotiations in September, 1986 is an important year for the international community, which may determine whether we can expect a sustained growth in world trade and economy. It is also an important year in the sense that we shall see whether progress can be made toward world peace and disarmament through the second summit meeting between the leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union. For these endeavours to succeed, co-operation and unity among the free nations of the world are essential. It is indeed significant that the exchange of visits between Prime Minister Mulroney and myself is taking place in 1986, a year which may well determine our course toward the 21st century. Let us together set the basic agenda for Japan-Canada co-operation and start our joint actions on global issues, so we can develop our partnership in breadth and depth into a truly mature one.

Ladies and Gentlemen, located in a corner of the galactic system and inhabited by six billion people, our planet Earth now enjoys a most advanced material civilization. At the same time, however, our planet is exposed to the most barbaric attacks since its creation. Limited fossil resources have been exploited nearly to the point of depletion; green tracts of land are rapidly being reduced to deserts; clean air and water are being contaminated with toxic materials; and rare species of animals are being forced to the verge of extinction. Furthermore, many human beings are being driven to starvation, and tens of thousands of nuclear warheads are threatening the annihilation of all living creatures on Earth. If left unchecked, these merciless waves may doom our spaceship Earth to a lifeless wreckage.

It was with reference to this picture of the present situation on our planet that I said the following on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations Organization in New York last fall: "If we are to preserve this planet Earth and ensure the survival of mankind, I believe we must create a new world ethic and set up mechanisms to support that ethic."

[English]

We must now rid ourselves of arrogance toward Mother Nature. Japan's traditional religion teaches us that nature is the mother of all creatures and that all living things are essentially brothers and sisters in the natural universe. Such philosophy is not exclusively that of the Orient but can also be found on other continents. Needless to say, I am not suggesting that religions unique to different peoples should be united under one great Oriental theology. Instead, I submit that it is perhaps high time for us to redirect our thinking toward the basic feelings of awe, intimacy, respect and love toward nature, which mankind has had over the millenia, and to appreciate afresh what they mean to us today.

When such reorientation has started on a global scale, what I call the grand enterprise of establishing a new global ethic will have begun. The groundwork for this significant enterprise needs to be laid through promoting mutual understanding, not just among nations, but also among peoples and cultures, and through fostering mutual appreciation and respect based on such understanding. We should spare no effort in this regard.

I believe the current of history is steadily heading us in the desired direction. There are two major civilizations represented in the world today, the Occidental and the Oriental civilizations. They both emerged on the Eurasian continent. One grew and matured in the Atlantic region and has reached the eastern edge of the Pacific Ocean on the American continent. The other has already reached the stage of maturity on the western edge of the Pacific. In historical terms, it is only a matter of time until the two civilizations converge and are joined in a ring. When these two civilizations of the West and East are brought together, our planet Earth will become a full and true "globe", marking another important stage in world history and emitting an unprecedented glow. Then all living creatures on Earth will enjoy the supreme bliss of their existence.

This convergence of the different civilizations of the East and the West is no easy task. There will be difficulties and barriers in the process. But I am convinced that they will be overcome.

I believe this because history has shown that different civilizations attract each other, and come closer together, just as in physics positive electric charges repulse each other but positive and negative charges attract each other. I believe that, in the 21st century, the Pacific Ocean will be a grand and romantic stage for enactment of the great drama of creating a new world civilization through the convergence of two civilizations.

Japan is a part of Asia and shares many common values with western civilization; Canada, which has close historical links to Europe and the United States and diverse cultures within the nation, is looking increasingly toward the Pacific in recent years. Our two nations must play out together our important roles as main actors in this drama.

Let me, in closing, express my fervent hope that the everlasting friendship and co-operation between Japan and Canada will bear abundant fruit for the future of our planet Earth.

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much.

Hon. Martial Asselin (Speaker pro tempore of the Senate): Your Excellency, we are pleased and honoured by your presence in this Chamber, where we have invited you to speak to the Canadian people. We have listened with the utmost interest to the message you have brought us from your Parliament. I trust that your address will encourage us to pursue our efforts to meet our objectives of co-operation.

When the Canadian Government decided many years ago to place particular emphasis on the development and expansion of relations between Canada and Japan, it was because it recognized the emergence of this country as a world power whose considerable interests were situated mostly, but not exclusively, in the area of international trade. Being one of the major trading nations, Japan has been playing for many years a key role in the management of the world economy. Moreover, like Canada, Japan is an industrialized country which shares our democratic ideals and wants to react efficiently to an increasingly complex economic and political situation on the international scene. It is therefore in the interest of both our countries to increase our contacts on international issues.

Moreover, Japan has a vast domestic market for Canadian goods and services as well as the means to take part in the development of Canada, for instance through needed investments in this country. We must therefore conclude that increased relations with Japan based on greater co-operation and closer ties in the political, economic, cultural, scientific and technological fields correspond to the objectives of Canada to build a healthy national economy and reduce its economic vulnerability.

[English]

The framework for economic co-operation and the Canada-Japan Cultural Agreement signed ten years ago embodied the principles of a new relationship in each of these areas. Since then continued co-operation between our two countries has produced significant results and progress, particularly in the trade and economic sectors. Thus trade has increased threefold. Japan is Canada's second biggest trading partner and Canada is one of Japan's major suppliers of important natural resources and energy. Three years ago the Canadian Government prepared a market development plan for Japan to assist the public and private sectors to expand business in your country. The plan identified export opportunities in targeted industrial sectors which are consistent with Canadian production capabilities. The resource, petrochemical, agricultural and manufactured products sectors were identified as a priority.

Detailed discussions will take place between yourself and the Canadian counterparts of your delegation on bilateral and multilateral issues which are of interest to both our countries. We anticipate positive results from these contacts and exchanges and I am convinced you share our expectations.

[Translation]

Mr. Prime Minister, there is therefore no doubt that the commercial and economic relations between our two countries will develop even more in the future.

In closing, I would like to appeal to Canadian businessmen, academics, scientists, and all those who play an important role in the Canadian society to support our efforts so that our two countries can reach the goals they have set for themselves.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Prime Minister, on behalf of the Hon. Members of this House of Commons, I wish to thank you for sharing your eloquent vision of Japan's relationship with Canada and its successes and accomplishments as well as your expectations for the coming years. There are many ties and common interests that bind us and help us co-operate in building a peaceful and more prosperous world with institutions emphasizing the principles of fraternity and freedom exemplified in both our countries.

[Translation]

Throughout the years, we have consolidated and intensified our bilateral relations, not only for trade and investment, but also in the social and cultural areas, such as tourism, sports, education, theater and youth.

[English]

And as I am sure you know, Sir, this year represents a bit of a watershed for parliamentary relations between our two countries, as you can see the first creation of a full Canada-Japan Parliamentary Association. Sir, we hope that our increased exchange in all areas, whether political, economic, social or cultural will enhance the respect and friendship of our peoples towards one another. I think, Sir, I can say on behalf of all our Members here that you came to us with a great advanced publicity, and your speech today, Sir, has lived up to it completely. I say that, Sir, as one who was only born in 1947.

On behalf of all my Members we wish to extend to you, to your wife, to the members of your official delegation, an excellent and a fruitful visit to our country.

This House now stands adjourned until 11 a.m. tomorrow.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ACT, 1973

ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER REPORT AND THIRD READING STAGES OF BILL C-70

The House resumed, from Thursday, December 19, consideration of the motion of Mr. Epp (for the Minister of Agriculture):

That, in relation to Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973, one sitting day be allotted to the consideration of the report stage of the said Bill and one further sitting day be allotted to the consideration of the Bill at the third reading stage; and

That 15 minutes before the expiry of the time provided for the consideration of government business on the above-mentioned sitting days, any proceedings then before the House shall be interrupted, if necessary, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary to dispose of the said stage of the said Bill shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my speech was rudely interrupted by other things before the Christmas holidays and so here I am now concluding what I think were very germane and important thoughts. We are now in 1986. It is a brand new beginning, just the kind of beginning that the Tories should welcome, a tabula rasa wiped clean, a starting all over again.

Mrs. Mailly: You are not being germane, John.

Mr. Rodriguez: We now have the latest Gallup poll which shows the Tories dropping like a stone.

Mr. Nunziata: And the Liberals are going up.

Mr. Rodriguez: They had better look for a new executive. Interest rates are rising and the Tories are dropping in the polls, and one would think they would want to start a new year with a resolution that I am sure certain elements in the Cabinet would like to make, and that is, the withdrawal of Bill C-70. Withdraw it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: I would like to put that to the House. All those in favour of withdrawing the Bill say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Rodriguez: All those opposed say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Rodriguez: In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, the yeas have it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: Since we adjourned for the Christmas vacation, thousands and thousands of Canadians have clearly indicated by petition that they reject the partial deindexing of the family allowance. And we must not forget that the whole question of deindexation started with the Liberals in the previous Government. They started us down this rocky slope.

Mr. Frith: You were doing well until now.

Mr. Rodriguez: I know the Liberals are going to get sensitive, but I want the people of Canada to realize that the Tories did not hatch this up all on their own. All their ideas were aborning in the four years previously.

Mrs. Mailly: Thank you, John.

Mr. Rodriguez: We cannot forget, and as the Tories drop in the polls, the Liberals should be dropping as well.

Mr. Gauthier: But we are not. You're dropping.

Mr. Rodriguez: What are we really doing with this partial deindexation, Mr. Speaker? We are chiseling the children of this country. The Tories finally saw that they could not proceed with the deindexation of the old age pension. Why do they not now see that they should not proceed with the deindexing of the family allowance?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Because Bob Rae says so.

Mr. Rodriguez: Because the Minister has the cheques already printed and the cheques reflect a cent a day per child. Oh, look at the big-hearted old Santa Clause sitting over there with the white hair, Mr. Speaker. There he is over there taking one cent a day per child. I am not pointing to the House Leader, Mr. Speaker, I want to make that clear; I am pointing to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). The Government said that if the economy improved, it would give back the full indexation. To listen to the Government, one would think the economy has improved. It now has a minimum tax, and it should be doing what is fair and just for the people of Canada, that is, fully indexing the family allowance.

I have one last point to make in the couple of seconds I have left, and that is, that the whole section on missing children is fraught with great danger, confusion and complexity. I think, even on that score alone, the Minister should withdraw the Bill and never let it see light again.

Mr. Speaker: The two hours provided for the consideration of the motion now before the House under the provisions of Standing Order 84 have expired. Accordingly, under the terms of Standing Order, it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings and put every question necessary to dispose of the motion.

The question is on the motion standing in the name of Mr. Wise.

All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Wise), which was agreed to on the following division:

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There have been consultations between the Opposition House Leaders and myself with respect to the business for today. It was proposed that we carry on consideration now of report stage of Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that there was an Order of the House made prior to the Christmas recess which provided for four days of debate on this legislation to complete all stages. On the basis of discussions, it has been agreed that the deliberations today, even though we have not used a whole day on Bill C-84, would constitute one day with respect to the four days contemplated by that Order.

I would ask you, therefore, Mr. Speaker, to put the matter to the House for unanimous consent. I think you will find a disposition to receive it and accept it without debate that we do consider this as one day of the four day debate.

Mr. Speaker: Do I take it there is consent to the suggestion made by the Government House Leader?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and Related Statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. As Hon. Members know, there are in the Notice Paper seven report stage motions, for which notice has been given pursuant to Standing Order 81.

Motion No. 1, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) will be debated and voted on separately.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to address myself with respect to the procedural admissibility of certain matters. Maybe this is the appropriate time.

Mr. Speaker: I will hear argument if such is the intention at this time. The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn).

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I will try to be brief. I want to deal with Motions Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in particular.

Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) appears to be attempting to extend to corporations the method of valuation of inventory which is included in the Bill for individual artists and which was agreed to at the second reading stage. This then would expand the scope of the Bill beyond that which the House has agreed to in principle, and therefore it is contrary to our practices as outlined in Citation 773(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, which reads as follows:

An amendment is out of order if it is irrelevant to the Bill, beyond its scope or governed by or dependent upon amendments already negatived.

Therefore, I would argue that Motion No. 1 is irregular and should not be put to the House.

Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount appears to be offered at the wrong place in the Bill since it is offered as a subsection of the definition of "Qualified Farmed Property", whereas it appears to be offering a general definition which would apply to the capital gains exemption and is not really relevant to the definition of qualified farm property.

Therefore, it would appear that Motion No. 2 is contrary to our usual practices as outlined in Citation 773(3) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, which reads:

An amendment is out of order if it is offered at the wrong place in the Bill—

The substantive question of restricting the capital gains exemption to the proceeds of the sales of Canadian securities is contrary to the principle of the Bill agreed to at the second reading stage, since the capital gains exemption applied to all capital gains from the sale of any assets, and to restrict it to proceeds of the sales of Canadian securities would be contrary to the principle of providing the exemption to all capital gains.

It seems to me that our practices in such cases are clearly outlined in Citation 773(2) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, which reads:

An amendment must not be inconsistent with, or contradictory to, the Bill as so far agreed to by the committee—

With respect to the applicability of this citation to the report stage, I would refer the House to Citation 792.

In addition, the House will be aware of our long-standing practice of not accepting substantive amendments to Bills by means of an amendment to the interpretation clauses of such Bills. This practice is supported in Citation 773(10) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition.

I submit that Motion No. 2 is irregular for the three reasons I outlined and ought not to be put to the House.

With respect to Motion No. 3, it would seem to be wholly dependent on the adoption of Motion No. 2 which, I believe, I have proved to be irregular.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I submit that Citation 773(4)(a) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition applies in this case. It reads:

An amendment is inadmissible if it refers to, or is not intelligible without, subsequent amendments or schedules, or if it is otherwise incomplete.

For this reason Motion No. 3 ought not to be put to the House. I thank you, Mr. Speaker for your attention to my submission.

Mr. Speaker: On the same procedural argument, I recognize the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston).

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, there is only one point raised by the Government House Leader which I think merits debate. I think the other points are easily disposed of. These do not change the incidence of taxation, none of the amendments do. In Motion No. 1 there is an extension of an exemption provided for in keeping with the principle of the Bill and the deliberations before committee.

With respect to Motion No. 2, there is a typographical error in that the words in paragraph (d) in quotation marks should not be in quotation marks. There will be a subsequent amendment put by one of my colleagues to eliminate that. It does, however, fall in the right place in the Bill which is, as the amendment says, "after line 39 at page 90" and is precisely where that definition should fall. The only issue is that a "(d)" is indicated which would tie it in to the preceding paragraph. That should be eliminated.

I understand that I cannot move that motion since my name is on the main motion. The first speaker following me will do that to have it eliminated.

Again, I do not think, in terms of the principle of the Bill, that these are substantive amendments. They are, if you like, improvements to the proposal put forward by the Government to the principle inherent in this capital gains type of exemption, and I would say that they do not change the incidence of taxation and should be allowed to stand.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I am a little puzzled by the interjections of my friend and colleague, the Government House Leader.

With reference to his initial dealing with Motion No. 1, I would argue that any amendment brought forward at the report stage clearly will bring about the result of changing the Bill in one way or another as it was at the time it was introduced for second reading. You cannot move an amendment to a Bill without the passage of it in one way or another altering the Bill.

Quite clearly, since you cannot move amendments at second reading, the only place amendments could be moved would be in the committee or subsequently at the report stage.

To suggest that an amendment is improper because it would in one way or another alter the Bill which was before the House at second reading, is an argument that surely could never be sustained.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That is not what I argued.

Mr. Deans: My colleague says it is not what he argued. The problem is that it was intended only that an amendment would be considered out of order at report stage if it altered the principle of the Bill. I would contend and submit that neither of the amendments proposed by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) alter the principle of the Bill.

• (1150)

Quite frankly, there are many principles in this particular Bill; it is an omnibus Bill. However, it does not alter the principle which pertains to capital gains; it qualifies the principle. I would argue that an amendment is in order if it qualifies the principle, if it says that the principle can be applied but subject to the following. In effect, that is exactly what both the amendments of the Hon. Member for Saint Henri-Westmount do. They say: "Yes, you may do what you are saying you want to do, but it can only be done in the following way and to the following classes of property".

Therefore, I suggest that the argument of the Government House Leader, though imaginative, certainly ought not to stand.

Finally, I would agree that if Motion No. 2 were to be ruled out of order, Motion No. 3 would automatically not be put. However, I do not accept for one minute that Motions Nos. 1 and 2 should not be put to the House. I contend that they are legitimate amendments put in the proper place and follow the proper course set out for dealing with amendments.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, if I am not mistaken, this is the first time—and if it is not the first time, it is one of the very few times—that a tax Bill has been dealt with through study in a standing committee and then sent back to the House for report stage and third reading like other kinds of legislation. If that is the case, I would respectfully submit that the approach of Your Honour to the acceptability of amendments should be one in which you deal with them in a broad, flexible and generous spirit.

The idea that tax Bills would be studied in a standing committee rather than in Committee of the Whole is part of the package of parliamentary reform on which the House has been moving in recent months. It would seem that it would really make meaningless the idea that tax Bills should be given detailed study in a standing committee and then sent back to this Chamber for report stage and third reading, if the idea that amendments could be made to those tax Bills would be interpreted so narrowly that in fact no amendments would ever be receivable.

Therefore, I submit very strongly that in the context of the spirit of parliamentary reform, Mr. Speaker, you should look upon the acceptability of amendments in a broad and generous spirit and not attempt to see whether in some possible or theoretical sense they go against the principle of the Bill. If amendments were not expected to be acceptable at report stage when we are dealing with a tax Bill, then the Standing Orders should have said so. They do not say so and, therefore, that right should not be taken away through parliamentary interpretation. That is my submission.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will be in some difficulty if we just go on and on with procedural arguments. However, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), followed by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), and I will end it there.

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, in respect of the statement of the Opposition House Leader concerning the reference of this matter to the standing committee, may I say that it is perfectly proper that Bills be referred to the standing committees from time to time. This Bill received the same class of treatment in a standing committee as it would have in a legislative committee.

There is an amendment standing in my name; that is a procedural matter in respect of the Bill. There were amendments put in the standing committee. They were voted on and were passed. There were a number of changes made in the Bill, and the amendments are marked in the Bill for report stage debate.

The argument here is that the particular amendments of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) materially change the nature of the tax imposed and, therefore, are not proper amendments because they go against the principle of the Bill. The principle of the Bill deals with a number of important tax connotations, but they were voted on when the Bill passed second reading stage. The connotations, to be brief, are as follows: Motion No. 1 deals with capital gains relief for individuals, not capital gains relief for every taxpayer. Consequently, the term "individual" was used rather than the term "person". My friend wants to broaden the Bill to give more people relief. He cannot do that because that changes the principle of the Bill.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think the Hon.Member will recognize that the provision has nothing to do with capital gains. It has to do with inventory evaluation, which might change his thinking on the subject.

Mr. Speaker: Could I interrupt for a second, please? I fear that we may be verging into substantive debate. Therefore, I remind the Hon. Member for Mississauga South that I am hearing procedural arguments. In fairness to him, he has stayed as close as possible to that, but at the same time he is making substantive arguments. I ask him to restrict himself to the procedural issues.

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, the nub of the argument is that the amendments put to the House in respect of a tax Bill cannot broaden the tax or broaden or change the nature of the tax imposed, without the approval of the Governor in Council or without a notice of ways and means. The fact is that these particular amendments specifically contradict the ways and means motion and specifically change the nature of the tax imposed. Therefore, the particular amendments represented by Motions Nos. 1 to 5 are out of order. For example, the clear indication in the ways and means motion was to eliminate the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. This amendment reinstates it. That is an entirely different subject. It is the kind of thing which might have been argued at second reading, but this is a particular ways and means motion which passed the House. The Bill must correspond to the ways and means motion.

Mr. Speaker: Could I be very clear, please? Is the Hon. Member for Mississauga South also telling me that he is arguing that Motions Nos. 4 and 5 are out of order?

Mr. Blenkarn: Yes.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I want to talk about process; I do not want to talk about the principles of the Bill. I do not agree with the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn). I think we are talking about details, not about principles.

The amendments in the name of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South are dated January 13, 1986, that is, yesterday. I understood that the rules of the House required 24-hour notice before we could debate such amendments. Could it be explained to those of us on this side why these motions, which were most likely tabled yesterday evening, are debatable today? I am referring to Motion No. 6 and Motion No. 7, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps I could answer that. They were received yesterday. That is the normal practice.

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, they were not received yesterday. Yesterday was the date on which the House was opened. They were produced and received on December 20, but they were not published until yesterday. As you know, Sir, the House was not sitting on December 23 and December 24, but the motions were in fact tabled on December 20 and they were printed on the first conceivable time for printing.

Mr. Speaker: Let me start with Motions Nos. 4 and 5 which are clearly in order. It is simple. Any Member may move to delete a clause. That is how the matter gets on the floor for discussion. Therefore, a motion to delete is clearly in order.

The arguments with regard to Motions Nos. 1, 2 and 3 have been made at a technical level by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn). Therefore I think I must reserve to consider those technical implications. I suggest at this point that I will rule Motions Nos. 4 and 5 as being in order for debate, for procedural admissibility at least. These motions to be debated and voted on separately, and Motions Nos. 6 and 7, in the name of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South, will be combined for debate but voted on separately. I will come back to the House, as quickly as I can, with a ruling on Motions Nos. 1, 2 and 3, but I suggest that for the moment we begin with Motion No. 4, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston).

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount) moved:

That Bill C-84, be amended by deleting Clause 65.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I will address myself then to Motion No. 4, and I trust that in your deliberations on the questions raised you will take into account my other reference to the amendments that will be made with respect to Motions Nos. 2 and 3.

The motion that we have before us for consideration provides that Clause 65 of Bill C-84 be deleted. The intention of Clause 65 is to restrict the indexation in the Act with respect to tax brackets and with respect to exemptions.

In so doing, Mr. Speaker, the provision in the Act that has served Canadians so well since the early 1970s is being done away with at great cost to individual Canadian taxpayers. If we refer back to the Government's own estimate of the amount of additional taxation that this change would bring we find, Mr. Speaker, that in 1985-1986, the current fiscal year, some $80 million will accrue to the public Treasury by virtue of this modification to indexation.

In 1986-1987, the amount is $570 million—half a billion dollars. We do not have the estimates for the years immediately following 1986 and 1987, but we can assume that they will increase at an exponential rate. We see that by the year 1990, 1991, Mr. Speaker, there will be additional revenues to the federal Government in the amount of $4.3 billion, all of this simply through the application of Clause 65 of Bill C-84 which removes indexation. When I say it removes indexation, Mr. Speaker, I mean it provides that there will not be any indexation except when the Consumer Price Index exceeds 3 per cent. That means that the Government will be taxing the first 3 per cent of inflationary income realized by Canadians.

Now I emphasize that point, that it is inflationary income, not real income. In other words, with no real increase in income whatsoever, but with an inflation rate of, say, only 3 per cent, the Government of Canada will, in fact, be reaching into the pockets of Canadians and transferring assets of private individual Canadians to the federal Government in the amount of $4.3 billion in the year 1991. It is inflationary increases only, Mr. Speaker.

I am not sure that any of us in the course of the debate in this House have seized adequately upon that point, but this is going directly into the savings of Canadians because it is a tax, if you like, on imaginary increases because they are not real, they are brought about by inflation. Of course, that is the very reason that this provision was introduced in the first instance. It was to say to Canadian working men and women and others who receive income from property and other sources, "Your basic income will be protected, we will not tax you on imaginary, fictional income, which is the result of the play of inflationary a forces only."

I come back again to that point, that $4.3 billion is being transferred from the private sector—that this Government and its supporters pretend to hold so dear—to the public sector by virtue of this provision in Clause 65. That will be in 1990-1991. The cumulative impact over many years, of course, is inestimable at this point in time.

[Translation]

There was a second reason for bringing in indexation some twelve years ago I believe it was in 1974 and that was to put restraints on the public sector and oblige the Government to watch its own spending, while recognizing that revenue would be limited by the indexation granted taxpayers. It was to prevent the Government from doing what it is trying to do with Clause 65, in other words, from transferring $4.3 billion and I quoted this amount for one year only, namely 1990-91 from the taxpayers of this country to the federal government.

[English]

Mr. Speaker, there were many reasons, as I said, for this kind of indexation, but one of the principal ones was to inhibit, to discourage the Government from spending inflationary dollars transferred to it by the people of Canada by virtue of the Income Tax Act. That is a very important point, Mr. Speaker, especially during this period when the Government tells us about all its spending restraints and how it is going to attack the deficit. One of the best ways of restricting Government spending is to not give Government the money to spend. The whole purpose of indexation was to leave the real purchasing power in the hands of individual Canadian men and women.

And now we see the exact opposite happening, namely a desire to transfer these inflationary amounts to the federal Government without putting any restrictions on Government spending.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to touch on a second aspect as well. References are often made, especially by our friends on the left, to our 6 and 5 program. It is true we put a ceiling on indexation, but we did not set our starting point at 3 per cent. We said: if we manage to reduce the rate of inflation to 6 per cent, no one will lose, and that is exactly what happened. The following year, inflation had dropped to 5.8 per cent. So, everyone was protected under this program. The year after, it was something like 4 per cent. So in our case, we always protected the purchasing power of the individual Canadian, because the program was able to bring down the inflation rate. What we have here, however, is an entirely different approach. Here we are told we will have to sacrifice 3 per cent. It is going to cost 3 per cent. There will be no capping at 3 per cent, and only after the first 3 per cent; in other words, only if the rate of inflation becomes disastrous are they going to protect you against the impact of inflation, that is, over and above 3 per cent, but you will be automatically contributing at least 3 per cent of your inflationary income to the federal Government.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I await with great interest the comments of our hon. friends opposite.

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to respond to the Hon. Member, on the amendments he has proposed to make to what is essentially a very responsible Bill that would change the Income Tax Act and on the unreality with which he has dealt with in respect of the two issues contained in the amendments that are under consideration.

First, the Hon. Member spoke about Clause 65 and the indexation. He mentioned the transfer of funds from individuals to the public sector by this means. From the beginning, our approach to economic responsibility has been that the kind of profligate spending that went on before has led us into a period of enormous difficulty and that we must bring some responsibility back not only to the Government side but on behalf of individual Canadians. The inflationary cycle which was created by the former Government throughout the decade of the 1970s beginning in about 1974 hurt all Canadians. It hurt interest rates and made it difficult for people to buy houses. The former Government simply thought that by indexing Government policies, it could index the issue out of sight and out of the minds of Canadians. That is not the case.

The former Government followed a policy of introducing indexation that indexed revenues down and expenditures up and in a totally irresponsible way created a great wedge that led us into the kind of deficit situation we are in today. This Government has first faced that reality and has asked Canadians to face that reality as well.

As well, the Hon. Member discussed the increase that would transfer from individuals to the public sector without restricting Government expenditures and indicated that one way to deal with Government expenditures was not to give Government the money. That is a principle that was never followed by the former Government as long as it was in office. That too led to a rising deficit because the Government did not pay any attention to the revenue side and simply increased expenditures year after year in a totally irresponsible way.

I find that the amendments proposed by the Hon. Member do not ring true with me and I do not think they will ring true with the people of Canada. The problems were developed over a period of many years while the former Government was in office and while the Hon. Member was in office. This Government is moving in a totally responsible way to bring back into the control of Canada and Canadians the economic future and social programs that we all desire. However, until we get some kind of financial stewardship and responsibility in place, the former Government must continue to bear some of the blame.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to rise to say a few words in response to the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) and the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall). I believe we need to look at this particular amendment and Bill in a certain context. Perhaps I can best explain the context in which we should debate this amendment by recognizing that the tax Bill we are amending is a Bill that assists some Canadians and in a sense punishes others. The gap about which Canadians have always been concerned between the rich and the poor will be widened as a result of Bill C-84. That is something about which many of us have been concerned for many years.

The taxing of only half of capital gains is an issue that we debate in the House regularly. The fact that we only tax half of capital gains cost us about $440 million in lost revenue this year. That one provision that we virtually take for granted, which is that we only tax half of capital gains and would not think of taxing all of capital gains is something that we could certainly debate.

There are many other provisions such as ones which I could identify. Who will benefit from the provision that was introduced in the Budget which brought the upper limits of Registered Retirement Savings Plans to about $15,000 per year? It will benefit those who have annual incomes of $86,000. One needs that kind of income in order to even qualify for that limit. It is very clear that that provision will assist a number of Canadian families. It is very clear that it is on the Government's agenda to help those people whose incomes are in excess of $86,000 to save for their retirement years. Good grief, how anyone could actually rise to make that argument in a serious way is beyond me.

The Government went on to say that it should only tax half of capital gains to begin with but that a number of people will not be taxed at all. Those who make capital gains by selling jewellery or foreign real estate do not have to pay any taxes at all. However, we have to get that tax money from some place so the Government said that it would do something a bit different. It said it would have people pay taxes on the inflationary value of their incomes.

Amendment No. 4 will restore full indexation to tax brackets and personal exemptions. The Government now has a vested interest in inflation. As long as inflation rises by more than 3 per cent, the Government makes money. As my hon. friend has already indicated, the Government will make considerable money. In tax year 1985-86, $80 million will accrue to the federal Government as a result of this provision. In 1986-87, that figure rises to $570 million, and it will keep on rising until it reaches $1 billion, $2 billion or $3 billion. The Government is going to tax the inflationary value of incomes and is going to collect billions of dollars as a result.

I find it surprising that a Government which indicates its concern for individuals and for those folks in communities who are struggling hard to build Canada would hit those same individuals with this provision. This year, $570 million will be taken out of the pockets of individual communities and households across the country and dragged down to Ottawa to reduce the deficit or to make up for all of the other hand-outs that are being given to people through this same Bill. When the Governmnent does not tax capital gains of half a million dollars, it has to come up with that money someplace so it is getting it from individual Canadian men and women. That is only one provision of this Bill. We are going to discuss many more of them.

It is totally unfair and unheard of that the Government is going to tell ordinary Canadians that they will have to pay extra in income tax and that it will have to be paid not on the real value but on the inflated value of their incomes. Again, this indicates very clearly the agenda the Government is using. The first 3 per cent of inflation will not be protected now. This tells me very clearly that the Government does not mind having an inflation rate of 3 per cent because it will gain by it. In a few years, the Government will be bringing in billions of dollars as a result of this provision. It sets a very dangerous precedent to have Governments gaining from inflation as this particular provision will enable the Government to do. That is why this amendment has been put forward.

I must say that we as New Democrats will certainly be supporting the amendment put forward by my hon. friend. It is going to cost Canadians hundreds of millions of dollars if the particular motion which we are debating at the moment fails. It is going to cost individual Canadians, and I think that is the critical point. Individual Canadians will have hundreds of millions of dollars taken out of their pockets this tax year and, therefore, will not have that money to spend in the local stores. They will not have that money to take their families out to a restaurant once a week. The money will not be circulating in cities like Moose Jaw. This is just one provision, Mr. Speaker, and unfortunately, we will be asked on a number of occasions to stand up and identify other provisions where the same process is under way.

I really hope that someone in the Government says a bit more than the Minister of State for Finance in terms of being against this particular amendment. How can it be good news for Moose Jaw or Chicoutimi to take hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the pockets of individual Canadians this year as a result of this tax measure and drag it down to Ottawa to assist in reducing the deficit or, more important, use the money to counter the vast expenditures on such provisions as the capital gains exemption?

I do hope my colleagues in the Conservative Party will stand up and indicate how it is going to help the small communities of Canada when more and more money is being taken out of their hands for the benefit of Ottawa.

Mr. Felix Holtmann (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to address the folly of the amendments which have been presented and how they will affect our agenda.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Holtmann: I hear the "oh's" and "ooh's" from Hon. Members of the Liberal Party, and that is understandable. But we have to remind the Canadian public again and again about this serious situation with which we were left. That was really the downfall of the former administration. The Liberal administration never once thought or considered what it was going to do with the tremendous debt it was leaving with our children and our children's children. It is incumbent upon the elected Members of the Government to tell the Canadian people how serious the deficit is.

I think the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) put it correctly when she said that the Liberal Government deindexed Government revenues downward and indexed expenditures upward, and the Canadian taxpayers today will have to look somehow after that debt. We have also considered the importance of not creating additional new debt. We have considered ideas and proposals to stop the waste of taxpayers' money, the tremendous waste which was built into the system, and every time we have addressed that issue, the Liberal Party or the New Democratic Party cried foul. Those Hon. Members still have no idea how to raise revenue but they have all kinds of ideas on how to spend it. That is the kind of thinking the Canadian public must be made aware of. If every member of the Official Opposition rose in his place and told the taxpayers of Canada how they wanted to spend their money, I think it would be a long time before they would ever become the Government. I doubt it will happen in my lifetime. The Liberal Government would spend and then it would print. What it was doing was printing money, never giving consideration to where it was going to come from.

Mr. Gormley: What it didn't print, it borrowed.

Mr. Holtmann: In fact, one can look around the City of Ottawa and see where the Liberal Government has spent millions and millions of dollars, which it did not have, on both sides of the river.

An Hon. Member: Hundreds of millions.

Mr. Riis: Billions of dollars.

Mr. Holtmann: Hundreds of millions of dollars. Did the Liberal Government think about where the money was going to come from? Did it ever think that it would have to go to the taxpayers of Canada some day and tell them that they were going to have to pay for this? In the last election the Liberals said: "Look at what we have built for your children and your children's children. We hope they make money so that we can tax them". The Liberals never considered the ramifications, and that is why they are where they are today.

Mr. Boudria: Speaking of where we are, did you look at the public opinion polls?

Mr. Holtmann: Today they are feeling pretty high because they went up in the polls a little.

An Hon. Member: It's temporary.

Mr. Holtmann: But we are going to tell the truth in this House.

Mr. Boudria: Since when?

Mr. Holtmann: We protected our banks and the Liberals created a new hype about that being the wrong thing to do. It was wrong to look after people who had invested even their family allowance cheques. The Liberals said: "Don't protect them". Shame on the Liberals for thinking that way.

Mr. Riis: The banks don't get the family allowance.

Mr. Holtmann: The Liberals did not want to protect the small businesses which employ hundreds of people. The Liberals would not protect them if they had their way. This is the folly of the nature of their debate. Finally a Government took over that really thinks about what it is going to do about the deficit, and in a slow and fair manner we are bringing the deficit down. It is painful. It is always painful to pay your bills. And it is more painful for this country to pay its bills with no revenue.

Yes, we have to find revenue. We have to think about revenue before we think about spending. In fact, that is what the whole exercise is all about. Certainly it is painful for people to pay an element of tax beyond the inflation rate, but I would look at the positive side of things. This country is employing more and more people every month. That is the direction in which this Government is going. The goal has to be that we have full employment some day so that we can tax people less and receive more revenue. That is the goal. That is our objective, and members of the Opposition should start thinking about the objective of creating more employment instead of thinking of ways to spend more money. Until then, the Canadian people will never let that Party form another Government.

The Liberals adopted the attitude that spending will drive unemployment right down, and they felt they could get elected on that platform. But we have 400,000 more people employed in just a year and a half, and those Hon. Members should jump up and agree that that is also the direction in which they would like to go.

Mr. Riis: That is most of Manitoba. The best example is Manitoba.

Mr. Holtmann: But the Liberals should show how they would do it. We do not need their lip service. Never once since I have been in this House, Mr. Speaker, have I heard a member of the Opposition rise and describe how he could create more employment. All I have heard is: "Why don't you give more money here and more money there? We knew how to print it when we were in power". And the Liberals are prepared to do it all over again. The Canadian people have to be told what the Liberals have in their minds.

Mr. Riis: Howard Pawley.

Mr. Holtmann: Yes, Howard Pawley, you know that gentleman really well.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Holtmann: And you had better get to know him well because he is not going to be around for a long time.

Mr. Riis: He has the lowest unemployment in Canada.

Mr. Holtmann: The Hon. Member mentions Howard Pawley, who is in fact considering selling off a Crown corporation in Manitoba. He is losing $200 million to $300 million a year and is scratching his head asking: "How long can we do that?"

Mr. Riis: You should stand up and praise him.

Mr. Holtmann: He takes the attitude of the Conservatives sometimes. We like Crown corporations, they say. On the one hand, you people over there protect them, then we have a Premier of Manitoba who says we do not know how to run them. It is starting to show. Manitoba taxpayers are sick and tired of paying for that kind of foolishness. This Government recognizes that big Government does not run big companies in the right way. Past experience involving de Havilland will prove that.

It is about time that the Opposition started to realize this Government's objectives and to support them. It supported the concept during the campaign. Opposition Members said we have to change direction. Now they are back in the House saying that, although we are doing so, it is not the right direction. We are having a seesaw battle back and forth on this issue.

The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) talks about the danger of this Bill taking $4 billion from taxpayers. I would like him to stand up and say where he will find the revenue to reduce our debt. I would like to know. We put in place a minimum tax for the rich. His leader praised that. He stood up and said that that is the right direction. Everything was positive. However, now the Member says, "Oh, it is not really what we thought it was". In front of the cameras he says it is great but now it is not. His Leader campaigned for that tax. As a matter of fact, so did the Leader of the Liberal Party. We all remember how he campaigned on that. However, when it was introduced the Liberal Opposition slammed it. Liberal Members said it was no good, too little, too late. We heard the whole exercise.

Mr. Schellenberg: He had no option.

Mr. Holtmann: "We would have done it a little differently", he said. Well, they have not fooled the people of my riding with that kind of rhetoric. They thought it was a good idea. I have countless letters saying it was about time.

This Government is going in the right direction and every Member in this Party will tell the truth about what is happening to our tax revenues.

Some Hon. Members: More!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please.

Mr. Mayer: Let the record show that even Don Johnston clapped.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Let me remind those Members who are yelling for more that we are debating Motion No. 4 to amend Bill C-84. I understand that everyone is in a good mood coming back as they do from the Christmas break, but the rule of relevancy may creep up at some time. All Members would do well to keep in mind that we are debating specific amendments.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I wonder where the previous speaker was when the Budget was brought down on May 23 last year. Did he read the Budget Speech? Is he aware of the tax measures it contained? After listening to his speech, I really wonder whether he does know. He stands up and tells us that the reason why we should not adopt Motion No. 4 to delete Clause 65 from Bill C-84, so that income tax tables will continue to be indexed, and that the reason why this Government intended to vote against the motion, was, that it wanted to control the deficit—

How can he tell us today that it is absolutely necessary to tax individuals on the first three per cent of inflation, year after year after year, when that same Budget, that same Government, had enough financial resources, and was certainly not considering the deficit, when it decided to give the oil multinationals $2.5 billion in 1990-91 alone, and when this year, their decision to remove taxes on the oil multinationals will cost the Government twice as much in foregone revenue as the amount they want to raise through partial de-indexing of the income tax tables.

Mr. Boudria: Shame!

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, there is a very interesting point to be made here, and that is that the political philosophy of the Government opposite could be expressed as follows: tax the middle class and give it all to the oil multi-nationals. Because that is what the Budget Speech has given us, and that is what the figures published by the Department of Finance reveal. It is not a matter of knowing whether we are for or against controlling the deficit.

Personally, I have said both inside and outside the House that it is a concern of all Canadians. Fiscal responsibility is not only the concern of those sitting on your right, Mr. Speaker, but also of those sitting on your left.

Let no one tell us that indexation of the income tax tables should be abolished in order to control the deficit, when that same Budget is going to give billions of dollars to the oil multi-nationals.

And for the information of the previous speaker, I may also add that this same Government, according to his speech, wants to bring back inflation in our income tax system to combat the deficit, while this same Bill C-84 proposes to introduce a capital gains tax exemption that will also cost billions of dollars, I believe $4.5 billion, between now and the end of the decade. And now another reason, and here I would refer to what was said by the Minister of State for Finance Mrs. McDougall. I was shocked by the Minister's speech. How smooth and at the same time how naive. And a poor knowledge of the historical facts, especially since it was her own party, it was the Leader of the Conservative Party who first suggested indexing income tax tables!

Is she going to repudiate Mr. Stanfield? Is she going to repudiate all her colleagues who endorsed the indexation Bill in the House even before she first arrived here? She may very well laugh and smile today. She seldom does that, but I can see she is smiling now. It is quite insulting to hear that from a Minister who does not even know the philosophical history of her own Party. She is telling us that we Liberals lack fiscal accountability, that indexation has to be abolished now because of us nasty Liberals. Where was she when her own colleague, the Minister of Finance, gave the multinationals $2.5 billion for the year 1990-91 alone, not to mention the $920 million for the current year? Is that not more important?

Where is the political philosophy of that Party? Does she realize that by granting the capital tax exemption she will increase the deficit? And their approach consists in taking everything off the hide of Canadians and ordinary taxpayers through de-indexation of the first 3 per cent with respect to the tax brackets.

A moment ago my colleague from Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) fully explained the impact this will have in 1990-91, but it does amount to a $570 million tax increase in 1986-87.

Mr. Speaker, to show you just how insidious that tax is I might say that in a period of four years, or in four years from now, the additional $570 million to be paid by Canadian taxpayers this year because of the Government will have been multiplied by 7.5, which means that the tax will jump from $570 million to $4.3 billion. Imagine what it will be in 1995. How much bigger will the tax load of Canadian taxpayers be? Very likely close to $10 billion.

We are saying to the Government: If you want to talk about fiscal accountability, at least try to be consistent. Do not be so generous towards the oil multinationals and wealthy people, and then siphon off that money through an insidious expedient such as the de-indexation of tax brackets.

Mr. Speaker, when the debate was first launched in the 70s I had an opportunity to talk about the consequences of indexing or de-indexing tax brackets. I then took some positions with respect to the debate in the early 70s.

But today, as they attempt to pass off Clause 65 as having to do with deficit-reducing fiscal responsibility, I am saying that Government Members ought to be ashamed of themselves because they did manage to find enough money to give $1 billion to bankrupt financial institutions. They had enough money to grant close to $1 billion in tax exemptions to Olympia & York to enable the company to buy Gulf which is now closing down in Montreal East. They had enough money to repeal the tax on multinationals.

They had enough money to grant capital gain tax exemptions to affluent people.

But they no longer have any money when it comes to personal income tax, and we know that the bulk of the taxes are paid by middle class Canadians.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to emphasize very strongly the lack of consistency, responsibility and social justice of this government. And I urge all Hon. Members not to fall for this trick, because sooner or later they will have to come clean about these issues in their respective ridings. It is all very nice to come to the House and brag: "Opposition members are likely to stay quite a long time in the opposition because they have no fiscal responsibility." But Canadians are well aware of the game the Progressive Conservative Party is trying to play, as evidenced by the fact that this Party is now ranking second in the public opinion polls. I urge these people—and especially the Hon. Member for Beauce (Mr. Bernier) to keep very quiet these days.

Mr. Speaker, these Hon. Members will have to answer for their policies, and already Canadians are asking them to account for them; in this motion moved by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), I think that we should look for a matter of fairness and justice. Bill C-84 as a whole contains a great many unfair tax proposals and I suggest that motion nº 4 which proposes to abolish Clause 65 of this bill should be accepted.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): The motion before us of the Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) is to strike out of the income tax Bill the provision for deindexing the tax tables which have the direct effect of moving people to higher tax brackets as their incomes move upward because of inflation. They are forced to pay higher taxes, even though the real effect of inflation is to leave them without the pay increases that they need. Their families are left in the same financial position in which they were before. In debating that amendment, which I support whole-heartedly, I would like to talk about what the effect of the Government's proposal would be on Canadians. I want to think about that in terms of the lives of people across the country, the regard that Conservatives say they pay to the well-being of people, and in the process, to think about what would make this country better off or worse off.

I think the Conservatives would like to have us believe that they are concerned about the well-being of individuals and families across the country. They have done a pretty good job in Opposition of painting themselves as defenders of individual Canadians. I would concede that they had some of their best success in that, as far as taxes are concerned, when they took a task force across the country to demonstrate the shortcomings of the tax system and the way in which taxes are wrung out of individuals and small businesses across the country by officials of Revenue Canada. That achievement before the last election was very useful in suggesting to the Canadian people that the Conservatives really care about their well-being and that of small businesses, and that when the Conservatives came into power things were going to change. They said that they would take the actions required to ensure that Canadians become better off.

The budget proposal that we are debating today will leave Canadian families much worse off than they were before. It will have the effect, by the end of this decade, of taking so much more money out of the pockets of individual Canadians and reducing the means which families have available to maintain themselves that one can only conclude that what the Conservative Opposition said is rank hypocrisy now that we are faced with a complete denial of the expectations the Canadian people had. We are faced with the brute facts of a tax system that is grinding individual Canadians and their families into poverty.

I recognize that my Conservative colleagues in the House have difficulty recognizing that particular reality. They are looking bemused, puzzled, and distressed as I say these things, yet they are the realities of the system. They reflect the fact that the Government, in the Budget of last May 23, put forward a variety of proposals designed to increase revenue on the one hand, and, on the other, put forward other measures that were designed to reduce the expenditures of Government.

Those measures together, of course, are the ones that have the effect of reducing the income of a family earning one salary of $35,000 by almost $1,000 in 1986. That reduction of $964, to be precise, involves a good deal more than just this deindexation. I will say immediately, however, that it assumes that the modification of cost of living indexing will cost this family approximately $115. That, out of a total of $1,000, is more than 10 per cent, and not to be scoffed at as an important feature.

There are other proposals as well. The reduction in federal income tax that was put into effect in the early 1980s, which the Government has decided to abandon, will have the effect of increasing the taxes of this average family by $100. The increase in unemployment insurance premiums will increase the amount taken out of their pockets by Government by $102, and so on and so forth, Mr. Speaker. There are a variety of changes that will reduce the income of this average family in 1986 by almost $1,000 from its total income of $35,000.

It seems to me that that is not the route to prosperity for individuals and families across the country. It leaves one with a sense of betrayal on the part of the Government, given the hopes that Canadians had when they voted for the Conservatives in the summer of 1984 on the basis of their campaigns. These impacts on individuals and families in Canada are, unfortunately, part of a trend that was under way while the Liberals were in Government through the 1970s and into the 1980s. It is part of a trend of shifting the burden of Government to individuals across the country. That is the second aspect of this which deserves to be emphasized.

In the Department of Finance there is certainly a certain strategy of bringing prosperity to Canada by following certain fiscal principles, or at least one must assume that. If the people in the Department of Finance do not have some such understanding, we would want them all to resign their offices and give the opportunity to people who do have a vision of how the country could be returned to prosperity. We know that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) believes that if he can only bring in more money and reduce his expenditures and the deficit, that will be significant in moving the country toward prosperity. That depends on how it is done. On the one hand, wealthy Canadians are being given a variety of tax opportunities such as the capital gains tax holiday that has been put forth. On the other hand, there are the kinds of reductions of income for the mass of the population across the country. Therefore, it seems we can debate the philosophy that prevails in the Department of Finance. We can question the good sense of the Minister of Finance.

Surely the amount that people can spend is basic to the prosperity of our country. Surely, the disposable income available to people to spend in the shops in the City of Thunder Bay, its surrounding towns and in communities throughout the country is basic to the business well-being of those shop owners.

When the Government reduces that amount by a thousand dollars, it is not cutting into the necessities such as rents which will not fall or mortgages which will likely rise, or the cost of food which is unlikely to decrease significantly. People will have to spend less in those areas that give them comfortable lives and represent small luxuries of life which add to the comfort of their homes and so on. There will be less spending in home furnishing and electronic shops in my community and throughout the country. Those businesses will feel the impact of that reduction.

During the 1950s the tax balance between corporations and individuals was very close. We have seen a gradual shift, begun by the Liberals in years past, to the point where the said reality in 1986 is that the amount that will come from corporations is about 23 per cent of federal Government revenues and the amount that will be raised from individuals is over 77 per cent. The amount of Government revenue coming from individuals is more than three times as much and moving toward four times as much.

That is not a prescription for prosperity. It may fit into someone's plan for improvement in the long run, but we are all dead in the long run, as John Maynard Keynes once said. In the short run we try to leave decent lives. In the short run, the Conservatives have betrayed the hopes of Canadians. They are impoverishing Canadians by taking money out of the pockets of low and middle income Canadians.

I support the amendment before us and call upon Government Members to stand true to their beliefs that they state in their ridings and support the amendments of the Opposition.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to support the amendment moved by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), which would delete Clause 65 from the income tax Bill before us. Clause 65 removes indexation from the personal income tax system, which means that wage earners and salary earners will only be protected from inflation when it is over 3 per cent.

Indexation in the personal income tax system was introduced by a Liberal Government in 1974 and was intended precisely to protect people on fixed income and low and middle income earners from the ravages of inflation. Now the Government is removing that protection. The effect will be that Canadians will pay an additional $80 million in income tax for the year 1985-86, an additional $570 million in 1986-87 and $4.3 billion for 1990 alone. I stress that the 1990 figure is not cumulative.

The Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) told us that this step is necessary because of the deficit. We are all concerned about the deficit, but surely there are choices to be made about the measures with which one approaches the deficit. The choice that has been made by the Government is to ask the ordinary Canadian earner to shoulder the burden while the Government is giving tax holidays to corporations, multinationals and the affluent.

The Minister of State for Finance spoke very eloquently of her concern about the deficit and a responsible approach to its reduction. But where was the Government's concern for the deficit this year when, in the very same Budget from which these Bills we are dealing with arose, it chose to give $2 billion by way of a tax gift to the multinational companies? I stress that it is multinationals because the particular tax holiday arrived at is one that essentially favours the multinationals and not small Canadian companies.

Where was the concern about the deficit when the Government, without adequate information, launched into its ill-fated rescue of the Canadian Commercial Bank, which will cost Canadian taxpayers a minimum of $1 billion?

Where was the concern about the deficit when it chose to give a capital gains tax holiday to the affluent with no requirement that it benefit the Canadian economy in any way? That is a measure to which we will return later in this Bill.

Meanwhile, indexation protection is removed except when the cost of living index exceeds 3 per cent. This is taking place at a time when the Government, through other measures, such as Bill C-80 which we will deal with shortly, is building in inflationary measures.

The removal of this indexation protection hits low and middle income earners hardest. While the wealthy minority is being rewarded by the Government without any requirement for benefit to the Canadian economy, deindexation of the personal income tax system will take a progressively larger tax bite from low and middle income earners who are least able to afford it.

Over the next four years those earning $15,000 a year will have a cumulative tax increase of 36 per cent. Those earning $100,000 a year will have an increase of 4 per cent. Deindexation, coupled with the Budget's other measures to increase sales and excise taxes, puts an inordinately heavy burden on low and middle income earners. They are the very people who would strengthen economic growth through consumer spending were it not for the dampening effect of these proposals.

This is a measure which bears unfairly and too heavily on low and middle-income earners, while other clauses in the Bill give very generous presents to those who can well afford it. I invite the Government to accept my colleague's amendment to eliminate this inequitable proposal and come back with new proposals of real benefit to Canada and Canadians.

CANADA PENSION PLAN

BENEFITS PAID TO CONVICTED WIFE MURDERER

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, a case has come to my attention that deserves urgent consideration by the Government. On February 16, 1980, 28 year-old Barbara Desgroseilliers of Cornwall was brutally strangled to death. Her husband, Robert Desgroseilliers, and his cousin, Michel Quesnel, were found guilty of the killing and were sentenced to life imprisonment for first degree murder. Mr. Desgroseilliers is serving his sentence in Millhaven Maximum Security Penitentiary. Michel Quesnel was murdered in prison in Joyceville last July.

After the murder, Robert Desgroseilliers applied for and received approximately $1,300 in a lump sum death benefit. He also applied for, and is receiving, survivor's benefits under the Canada Pension Plan. As a result of the murder of his wife, for which he was convicted, he is now receiving $282 per month from the Government of Canada, and $87 of this amount is going to support Mr. Desgroseilliers' daughter.

I call on both the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and the Solicitor General (Mr. MacKay) to investigate this outrageous case immediately, and to provide complete details on how it could have been allowed to happen.

Legislation must be introduced as soon as possible to clarify the law so that this situation cannot occur again.

While there is a common law tradition that those convicted of crimes must never be permitted to profit from those crimes, the statute law must be made more specific. Steps should also be taken by the Canada Pension Plan officials to recover all moneys paid to Mr. Desgroseilliers, at the earliest possible opportunity.

Mr. Speaker: I must advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

FINANCE

EFFECT OF TAX DEDUCTIONS ON CORPORATE MERGERS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of the House to a full page advertisement paid for by Wood, Gundy which appears in today's Globe and Mail lauding the $8 billion in corporate takeovers which occurred in 1985. These takeovers were a small fraction of the total merger activity in Canada in 1985, but all the mergers had one thing in common, they were facilitated by our income tax system. Takeover costs are deductible as business expenses. Interest costs of capital are deductible. Even the cost of the full page advertisement is deductible.

We are entitled to ask what the ordinary Canadian people get in return for these tax concessions. Are we getting new jobs? The answer is no. Are we getting new production capacity? No. Are we getting more efficient plants to help Canadians compete? No. What we are getting are paper transactions which re-arrange share holdings but which do not produce genuine economic growth or new permanent jobs.

If the Conservative Government is serious about employment, then it needs to examine our tax system to see that tax concessions lead to investment and meaningful permanent jobs. We need something more than the part-time jobs the Government has been creating since September, 1984.

The New Democratic Party says meaningful tax reform is a priority for 1986.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—EFFECT OF CANADIAN AND UNITED STATES ENVOYS' REPORT

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, the recent report by the United States and Canadian acid rain envoys will do what American lobbies, environmentalists, and the several Liberal Governments of this country failed to do in the last decade.

The United States has now officially acknowledged the existence of acid rain, and in the words of Allan Gotlieb, Canadian Ambassador to Washington:

> If the President endorses the report, which I expect he will, the Americans will have moved off the dime.

It is now a question of how fast it can be done and what resources can be brought to bear on this matter of international concern. Work can now begin on a timetable with a program of action, before which we did not even have a common starting point.

The Liberal opposition critic harps on a one-year delay. Did he not read Mr. Gotlieb's comment? Was he not part of a Government that failed in the last eight years to get the Americans to move "off the dime"? Was he not a Minister of the Environment with an opportunity, but who failed to follow up on the 1980 memorandum of intent and the 1981 committee recommendations? Is he not a person who knows how hard it is to get any action from the U.S. side on environmental matters? Should he not now make a New Year's resolution to work constructively with the Government in the interests of Canadians who continue to suffer from pollution and acid rain fall-out?

TRADE

EXPORTS—GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): In October, Mr. Speaker, Canadian exports reached a record high of $10.9 billion in seasonally adjusted figures, an increase of 2.1 per cent over September, the third consecutive monthly increase.

In the first ten months of 1985 exports climbed to $100.1 billion, or $7.6 billion more than in the same period in 1984.

Canadian imports declined by 2 per cent in October, down to $8.7 billion in seasonally adjusted figures. That is very close to the level recorded each month since July, the fifth monthly decline last year.

Mr. Speaker, our highest trade balance was achieved with our main trading partner, the United States, namely $18.1 billion over the first ten months of 1985, an increase of nearly $2 billion over the same period in 1984.

Those figures clearly show the effectiveness of our Government's policies and confirm that Canadians can indeed compete with their main trading partner. By giving an overwhelming majority to the new Government in September 1984, the people were saying that they had had enough of the old entrepreneurship-stiffling Liberal policies—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but her allotted time has expired.

INDUSTRY

SALE OF GULF REFINERY—CONSEQUENCES FOR MONTREAL EAST

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): During the Christmas holiday, Mr. Speaker, Quebecers were taken for a ride. They were conned by these Conservative Members, by these Conservative Ministers, and by the Prime Minister.

As it happened, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) came to Montreal on December 27 to tell Quebecers that his Party, his Government, had agreed to let a foreign company buy the Gulf refinery with the intention of closing it down, thus throwing 450 more workers out on the street and doing away with competition. Yet the same Government had the option of rejecting that deal and giving a chance to Gaz métropolitain, a Quebec and Canadian company which was anxious to buy the refinery so as to protect those jobs and maintain a healthy competition for Quebec consumers.

Mr. Speaker, I think we must commend the Bourassa Government which, in view, of the inaction and incompetence on the part of this Conservative administration, decided to assume the leadership. In co-operation with the Quebec Minister of Energy, it is now trying to reach a solution with Ultramar so as to maintain those jobs in Montreal East and protect Quebec consumers.

I dare hope that the Quebec Conservative Members, particularly the Ministers, will wake up, put an end to the insulting and humiliating treatment they are getting from their Ontario colleagues and those of the other provinces, and uphold the interests of all Quebecers.

AGRICULTURE

PLIGHT OF FARMERS THREATENED BY BANKS WITH FORECLOSURES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, no Canadian should lose his land because of economic conditions over which he has no control. Yet more than 1,400 families lost their farms during the last three years. This is a tragedy for Canada and an emotional shock for the people involved. There are some 1,700 farm families now threatened with foreclosure by the banks.

In 1979 agriculture was prospering with good crops and compensatory prices, so ambitious farmers borrowed to buy more land in order to widen their base and increase productivity. Then came poor crops and stagnating prices so borrowers could not even pay the interest, let alone the principal. Something must be done to protect these farmers who had no control over prices or weather. A mandatory moratorium is one possible solution.

The Farm Credit Corporation has advanced an even better plan. A company would be set up which could buy out a farmer in financial straits and then rent the farm back to the said farmer. The cash from the sale would reduce the debt burden. The farmer would receive 20 per cent of the sale price in common shares, making him a part owner and, through making a financial recovery, the farmer could buy back his land. This plan will not affect the credit of other farmers and is a free enterprise solution aimed at keeping the good farmers on the land. I commend the FCC and our Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) on this proposal and urge its initiation at the earliest possible time. Canada needs these farmers.

THE ECONOMY

"DIALOGUE '86" CONFERENCE—NON PARTICIPATION BY GOVERNMENT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, in March, 1985, the federal Government organized an economic conference to which it invited participants from business, labour, voluntary organizations, and different levels of government. Welcoming this as an effective exercise in dialogue the Canadian Labour Congress wished to continue where the first economic conference left off. "Dialogue '86" was organized with invitations going out to the same groups.

"Dialogue '86" is now under way with over 100 national groups participating. I have been attending the conference and important messages are being delivered about the economic concerns that face Canada. Unfortunately the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Government have declined to participate. The Government's final decision was communicated to the organizers at noon on the second day of the conference—a refusal to send even one Cabinet Minister as a formal participant.

Where is the desire for ongoing consultation we've heard the Prime Minister talk about? What about the attempt to build a consensus that the Prime Minister said was so important? There is a growing perception this Government listens only to those who agree with it, and that consultation occurs only with the rich and the powerful. Why is the Government afraid to listen to the Canadian Conference of the Arts? Why is the Government afraid to listen to the Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped? Why is the Government afraid to listen to the National Pensioners and Senior Citizens' Federation? Why is the Government afraid to listen to the Fédération des Femmes du Québec? Why is the Government afraid to listen to the Canadian Congress for Learning Opportunities for Women?

Mr. Speaker: I have to advise the Hon. Member his time has expired.

TERRORISM

LIBYA—IMPOSITION OF SANCTIONS BY CANADA

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) for demonstrating Canada's resolve to fight international terrorism by joining with the United States in economic sanctions against Libya.

This country cannot stand by while international terrorists spread their reign of blood to all parts of the world.

Can we forget the tragic death of a young security guard when Armenian terrorists attacked the Turkish embassy here in Ottawa last March? Can we forget the death of two Japanese policemen when baggage from a Canadian airliner exploded in the Tokyo Airport last June? Can we forget as yet unexplained circumstances surrounding the Air India disaster which claimed over 300 lives, or the bomb threats in Toronto subways last April?

We do not have to look to Europe or to the Middle East to see the horrifying consequences of international terrorism. The threat is here in Canada as well. That is precisely why we must stand together with our freedom-loving allies and demonstrate to countries that harbour and encourage this kind of cowardly activity that Canada will not be held hostage.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

PETRO-CANADA—HIRING OF CONSULTANT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, Canadians were informed recently that yet another Tory hack was snorting at the trough for the umpteenth time after a blue ribbon deathbed repentance speech by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) last December 9. Canadians actually thought that the Prime Minister meant business when he said that there would be scrutiny of lobbying activities and scrutiny of lobbyists.

In December the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) disappointed Canadians when he tabled in the House a discussion paper on the topic rather than the much promised legislation.

Last week Canadians discovered that another promise had been breached concerning lobbyists. On September 6 last the Clerk of the Privy Council, Paul Tellier, had informed the Crown Corporations not to hire paid lobbyists. Now we know that this has been breached by the action of Petro-Canada in hiring Frank Moores as a consultant. PetroCan may pretend that Mr. Moores is a consultant on East Coast energy issues, but all Canadians know he is a well-known Tory hack and lobbyist.

So the message to Crown Corporations, Mr. Speaker, is if you can't hire lobbyists hire a consultant who just happens to be a lobbyist and that will do.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ST. CLAIR RIVER—DIVERS' DISCOVERIES

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to read for the record how the divers who were working on the Dow project on the St. Clair River have described in a recent newspaper article what exactly is on the bottom of the river.

• (1415)

Mr. Brian Quigg, one of nine members of the diving team, said that when he first heard about the blob he was expecting to find a monster, and he was scared to go down there. However, he said that "the blob is nothing more than small, shimmering pools of perchlorethylene". Dave Geddes, another diver, said that he had heard it was "a big gigantic slick, but it is just a little ripple staying on the bottom". Chris McGrath of Corunna, one of the divers who investigated the original spill in August, said that "there never was a blob, just little puddles".

I would like to suggest that in the future, when Members of the House feel they have something to say, they make every effort to ensure that their facts are straight and that those facts are presented in a fair descriptive manner. Perhaps the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) who talked about a gigantic blob should have donned a diving suit so he could have learned first-hand exactly what he was talking about for a change, and then spread that news.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

INDUSTRY

QUEBEC OIL REFINING CAPACITY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post.

Yesterday, the Minister and his colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, made contradictory statements about the oil refining capacity in Quebec. One of them should look at a map of the province.

Mr. Speaker, my question is as follows: Does the Minister intend to publish the O'Farrell Report forthwith, and I am referring to the report on the independent study made by the Director of Combines Investigations? Furthermore, is he going to insist that his colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, immediately table evidence supporting these figures so that Canadians will know which of the two Ministers they are supposed to believe?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I can give my hon. friend the assurance that there is absolutely no question of contradiction or controversy on this side of the House. In fact, we have a director responsible for the Combines Investigation Act who, acting independently and autonomously, has examined the legality of the Gulf-Ultramar transaction. His recommendations and comments have already been made public, which is what I did as soon as I received the report.

I think it is clear the problem has been quite adequately assessed by the Director.

INQUIRY WHY MINISTER APPROVED SALE OF GULF TO ULTRAMAR

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my next question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Yesterday, the Minister said that the purchase of the Gulf refinery by Ultramar would create 4,500 person-years in Quebec. However, a spokesman for Ultramar, a Mr. William Barrie, immediately stated the exact opposite when he said, and I quote: "We do not expect any new jobs."

I would therefore ask the Minister to inform the House exactly why, in the circumstances, he approved the sale of the refinery to Ultramar.

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as the Leader of the Opposition undoubtedly knows, under the legislation empowering Investment Canada to pass this type of transaction we are asked to consider six different criteria. As we weighed the various aspects and evidence that fell under those six criteria, we felt that there was a net benefit to Canada to be gained from the purchase by Ultramar.

I know the Leader of the Opposition hates to refer to jobs being created, but the number of jobs to which he has referred is a figure that comes from the $125 million that Ultramar has agreed to spend. It is estimated that those funds will, in both a direct and indirect sense, create 4,500 person-years of employment over a three-year period. That is the type of jobs to which I was referring yesterday.

GOVERNMENT POSITION ON TRANSACTION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances I believe I am obliged to ask the Prime Minister a question. The Prime Minister knows that one Minister has resigned over this issue. He was not here yesterday for legitimate reasons, but at that time three Ministers were conducting a three-ring circus of contradiction.

• (1420)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Conservative Member for Duvernay said the deal "stinks". So would the Prime Minister tell us why his Government agreed to this particular sale and to the closing of the refinery in Montreal?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I agree we should consider the facts when dealing with a problem as serious as the one raised by my hon. friend.

Texaco in Montreal closed its doors in September 1982: 420 jobs lost and total silence on the part of the Liberal Caucus. BP Canada closed its doors nine months later: 190 jobs lost, and total silence on the part of the Liberal Caucus. Esso Canada closed its doors four months after that: 470 jobs lost, and still no reaction from the Liberal Caucus. In the last fifteen months, 137,000 new jobs have been created in Quebec, compared with only 37,000 in 55 months by the hypocrites in the Liberal Party.

Mr. Gauthier: Hypocrites is not exactly parliamentary!

An Hon. Member: He's an expert in the field.

REQUEST FOR PUBLICATION OF O'FARRELL REPORT

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I understand that the Prime Minister will not reply directly to the question.

I am going to ask another question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post who, I am sure, did not mean to mislead the House when he replied to the question directed to him by the Leader of the Official Opposition.

We have asked him whether he would make public the O'Farrell report. Thanks to our new system, I could listen to and review this morning the press conference which he gave on December 17 and during which, on eight occasions, he promised to make it public.

Why does he not make this report public? Is he afraid of something? Is it because this report is blaming the Conservative Government for needlessly closing this refinery?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I think I can answer that very simply by saying that on December 17, as soon as I was made aware of the findings and conclusions of the director concerning the legality of the Ultramar-Gulf transaction, I immediately made them public. It is in this spirit that my colleague had put this question to me in the House a few days earlier.

So I complied with these requests from the press and the Opposition as soon as I was made aware of these recommendations.

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, the Minister was commenting the interim report of the Director of Investigation and, on eight occasions that evening, he promised the journalists who were interviewing him that he would make public the final report within the next few days.

Well, I know that he has now received this report. Is he going to make it public? Yesterday, he told us that the issue of the Gulf-Ultramar deal would be referred to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission of Canada. Will he have the decency to allow this Commission to hold public hearings? Like those in the case of—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is clear for a supplementary, I believe.

[Translation]

Mr. Côté (Langelier): Mr. Speaker, I feel I answered that question fully yesterday.

Some Hon. Members: No, no!

Mr. Côté (Langelier): I said simply that the findings and recommendations of the Director had been or would be sent to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission of Canada, a quasi-judicial commission over which I have no control, which would determine the impact and make recommendations in early 1986.

• (1425)

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF QUEBEC OIL REFINING CAPACITY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Before Christmas, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs said that there was a surplus refining capacity in Quebec. Yesterday, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said the exact opposite. Who is right?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that the answers which have already been given should satisfy my honourable friend. Here are the facts. In east-end Montreal, there used to be refineries, such as Texaco, which was killed by the Liberal Government, BP, killed by the Liberal Government, and Esso, killed by the Liberal Government. The Liberals caused the loss of 1,100 jobs in east-end Montreal. They remained completely silent. They did not have the guts to rise even once to protest against this. They tried to kill off Petromont. We have invested $69 million to save the Quebec petro-chemical industry and we shall be doing even more during the next few days.

Mr. Broadbent: Once more, the Prime Minister does not reply to the questions.

An Hon. Member: He never does.

Mr. Broadbent: Today, I have had conversations with officials of the Quebec Government, including the Quebec Energy Minister, and they say that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is right. More specifically, the Quebec Government suggests that there is now a shortage of refining capacity in Quebec.

SALE OF GULF REFINERY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): My supplementary is for the Prime Minister. Is he now saying that neither the Quebec Government nor the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is right?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the replies of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs are consistent not only with other replies, but in addition, on September 16, 1983, the following headlines could be found in the newspapers: Chrétien refuses to promise an intervention in the refinery closings; Energy Minister Jean Chrétien states that refinery closings in Montreal in 1983 are due only to market forces and a decrease in consumption.

That is what happened.

Mr. Chrétien: He says that there is still room.

Mr. Mulroney: Nothing contradictory was said by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, who is absent today. I repeat that there is no contradiction in the replies of the two Ministers, and in my opinion, the answer just given by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is very clear. However, since this is an important matter, there is something that should be pointed out; in this regard, we also find in the newspaper Le Devoir of March 30, 1983 that "the FTQ asks Chrétien to prevent the closure of the BP refinery in Montreal", and he refused. The Liberals said no to Quebecers, no to the refining industry, no to the high technology industry. As for us, we shall work with Quebec to build its economy.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Supplementary. The Hon. Member for Oshawa.

[English]

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister is refusing to deal with a matter which is extremely serious for the people and Government of the Province of Quebec. I can say only that the partisan answers he is giving today to serious questions are an absolute disgrace for a Prime Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: His Minister of Energy said in this House yesterday, and he can check the reference in Hansard, that there is surplus capacity in Quebec now. Another Minister of the Crown said there is a shortage of capacity. The Government of Quebec—

Mr. Speaker: I do need a supplementary question now.

Mr. Broadbent: The Government of Quebec is also saying there is a shortage of capacity with the shut-down of this refinery. Therefore, will the Prime Minister explain where his Government is getting its information and why it made the incredible decision to shut down this refinery?

• (1430)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we made no such decision to shut down that refinery.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: The people who shut down refineries in the Province of Quebec were the Liberals who went "bang, bang, bang", and killed the refining industry in the East End of Montreal. That is what they did.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gauthier: Bang, bang, bang!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Mulroney: I know it hurts—

Some Hon. Members: Bang, bang, bang!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Rossi: You're a phoney.

Mr. Axworthy: What a joke.

Mr. de Corneille: Bang, bang, bang.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Axworthy: Your nose is getting longer.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Mulroney: I know he does not like it, Mr. Speaker, but when a request was made of this particular Member, who has the temerity to stand up in the House now, with regard—

Mr. Broadbent: Answer the question. I asked the question; he didn't.

Mr. Mulroney: I'm getting around to you. It takes me a little time to deal with you.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. de Corneille: You're a disgrace.

Mr. de Jong: What a joker.

An Hon. Member: The people are laughing at you, Brian.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order!

Mr. Rodriguez: You're at the end of your rope, Brian, and you need a rest.

Mr. Nystrom: It's time for an election.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, considering the Prime Minister's behaviour, I would agree with Mr. Stanley Knowles' statement that Mr. Clark is more intelligent than the Prime Minister.

SALE OF GULF REFINERY IN MONTREAL—PRIME MINISTER'S ROLE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. It is a fact that the Quebec Government has figures that point to an under-capacity in the refining industry. I have figures from Statistics Canada that clearly show the underproduction of refineries in Quebec, and the comments made by your Minister of Consumer—and my question to the Prime Minister is, Mr. Speaker: Why did the Prime Minister not get involved personally in the issue, to protect the interests of Quebecers and allow Gaz Métropolitain to purchase the Gulf refinery in Montreal East? Why?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is a surprising question, to say the least, from the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie. If you allow me, on another occasion—I will remind you that on March 30, the General Secretary of the Quebec Federation of Labour, referring to the shutdown of three industries in East end Montreal had this to say: The QFL also pressured all Liberal MPs from the Montreal area.

An Hon. Member: What year was that? What year?

Mr. Mulroney: The Secretary General had this to say: We do not understands the silent and passive stance of our Liberal representatives in Ottawa, when Ontario once more stands to come out the big winner in the oil situation. He was referring to you at the time Montreal East was being massacred. For three years you remained silent, and now you have the gall to try and address the issue. Stop that nonsense and blame the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice. He is responsible for that situation, as the then Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! Order from both sides of the Chamber, please. The Hon. Member has a supplementary question.

CONSUMERS' INTERESTS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary to the Prime Minister is this: If he does not want the refinery's union leaders—

Some Hon. Members: Question!

Mr. Malépart: If he does not want the union leaders—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

An Hon. Member: Question! Question!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Supplementary question, please!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, if the Prime Minister does not want the union leaders at the Gulf refinery to go on calling him a snake, would he be ready to support the statement made by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs that it is in the interest of consumers to prevent the Gulf refinery shut down? Is the Prime Minister at least ready to admit that?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): It is a matter of credibility with the employees, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie, who seems tremendously interested, might tell the House and the Province and the Metropolitan Montreal area why, if it is true—and he will correct me if I am wrong—why, when Texaco, BP, Esso shut down and 1,100 jobs were lost in Monteal East, he remained silent, not uttering one word.

Mr. Malépart: Why are you afraid to meet with the workers?

Mr. Mulroney: Explain that now. Explain that. Why did you remain silent for four years? This is all we want to know, because if you are sincerely taking the workers' interests at heart, you should have had the courage to rise during those four years, rather than remain silent. Explain to Montrealers why you remained silent for four years!

OIL REFINING CAPACITY IN QUEBEC—QUEBEC GOVERNMENT STATISTICS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister.

This morning, the Quebec Department of Energy announced that Quebec's oil refining capacity showed a shortfall of 27,000 barrels per day.

An Hon. Member: Not true!

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, my question is as follows: Does the Prime Minister agree with the Quebec Government's figures?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I admit that opinions vary on this particular point. That is why the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, acting through the appropriate federal commission, intends to publish the requisite documentation at the appropriate time.

The fact is—and since the House is concerned, and rightly so, about the situation in Quebec, I imagine the New Democratic Member will want to congratulate the Government on these statistics—the fact is that, thanks to the creation of 137,000 new jobs, compared to 37,000 in 55 months, the present Government is now creating jobs in Quebec at thirteen times the rate of the previous Government. And that is very good news for the people of Quebec.

[English]

REQUEST FOR PUBLICATION OF O'FARRELL REPORT

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question arises out of the Prime Minister's answer. He said that we have a variety of figures, some from different Ministers in his own Cabinet. For that reason, and because of his campaign promise of freedom of information and more open Government, I ask him now to make a commitment to make the O'Farrell Report public. It is a question of credibility for the Prime Minister and his Government.

Some Hon. Members: Right on.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, when an NDPer talks about credibility he should choke on the words.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: You supported your sweethearts in the Liberal Party—

Mr. Broadbent: You're an embarrassment.

Mr. Mulroney: —who brought in the NEP that crushed, not only western Canada, but the refining industry in eastern Canada. You should be ashamed of yourself for even asking the question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. de Jong: Bye, bye.

Mr. Mazankowski: Shame.

Mr. Nystrom: Bye, bye, Brian.

Mr. de Jong: Bye, bye, Charlie.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

THE ECONOMY

INTEREST RATE LEVELS—ACTION TAKEN BY BANK OF CANADA

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I asked the Minister of Finance if it was the policy of the Government to push the interest rate up to protect the value of the Canadian dollar and he said no. While the Minister of Finance was saying no in the House, the Bank of Canada was active in the marketplace pushing the rate of interest up to a point where major banks had to increase their prime rate.

My question is very simple. Who is in charge? Why was the Minister of Finance saying one thing in the House yesterday while his agent, the Bank of Canada, was acting differently?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member does need some lessons in the way the financial markets work.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lapierre: From you?

Mr. Rossi: You won't be the teacher.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Gauthier: How about Northland?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please!

• (1440)

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member is correct. There has been some upward pressure on interest rates over the last little while, as there has been in international markets in other countries. However, the Hon. Member must recognize that he should look at the performance of interest rates in the broad context of the economic performance of the country over the course of the last 16 months, where 450,000 jobs have been created, where interest rates are now about 2.5 percentage points lower than they were in September, 1984, when we came into office. These are things that have demonstrated clearly to Canadians that the economic policies of this Government are working.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

SETTING OF INTEREST RATES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, if I understand correctly, when interest rates fall it is the Government's doing, and when they rise, it is other people's fault.

I want to get back to my question because it is a very important one, an issue that may determine the exchange rate of the Canadian dollar in the weeks to come. Is it the policy of this Conservative Government to push up interest rates in order to protect the Canadian dollar? Did the Bank of Canada have the consent of the Minister of Finance when it acted as it did yesterday?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, there is no difference at all in the action of the Government of Canada and the policies of the Government of Canada. We are completely consistent in the approach we are taking.

The Hon. Member has been in the financial markets over a number of years. He knows that interest rates will fluctuate. We had a situation about a year ago, in February and March of last year, when interest rates rose. There was a downward pressure on the Canadian dollar at that time but markets reversed themselves and we had a drop in interest rates thereafter. Surely the Hon. Member could look at this in the context of the broad performance of the economic policy of the Government, which, even by his standards, has been very, very good.

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION CONCERNING FUTURE SALE OF CANADAIR

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and concerns contradictory statements regarding the future of Canadair.

Yesterday, the Minister announced he did not expect Canadair to be sold before the month of June. Meanwhile, the President of the Canada Development Investment Corporation announced on television that he was expecting offers to purchase Canadair before the end of March. Who is right? And can the Minister guarantee that the Government will not hold a fire sale for Canadair, as it did in the case of de Havilland?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I want to assure the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre that there will be no fire sale and there has not been any fire sale with respect to de Havilland. The Hon. Member should remember that we indicated we would be willing to discuss the possible sale of Canadair. We have had inquiries. At the present time I must admit to the Hon. Member that no firm deal is being negotiated.

What Mr. Marshall indicated yesterday was the hope that the three people who are now discussing the possibility of making a deal with Canadair might firm up one or more of their bids before the end of March in anticipation of possibly making a deal by June. However, let us end this nonsense about a fire sale with respect to such Crown corporations.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION BEFORE ANY POSSIBLE SALE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, now that the Steering Committee of the Regional Development Committee has ensured that there will be full consideration of the de Havilland sale in the next two weeks, will the Minister ensure that we can be protected against a fire sale of Canadair by promising the House that there will be full consideration by a parliamentary committee of any sale of Canadair before the deal is closed?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, again the Hon. Member was anticipating his next question. He did not hear what I told him in answer to his first question.

I indicated that at this point we do not have a possible purchaser who has money in hand and is proposing a deal with respect to Canadair. How can I talk in hypothetical terms about referring something that does not exist to any committee of this House?

INCREASE IN PREMIUMS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance. The property and casualty insurance industry is in a state of disarray namely because of the outlandish liability claims being awarded by the courts. Now average Canadians with excellent driving records are asked to bear the burden of high rates.

Before we become the California of the North, what will the federal Government do, along with the provincial Governments, to curb these astronomical settlements—

Mr. Blaikie: Nationalize the insurance industry.

Mr. Attewell: —and stop excessive rate increases for average Canadians?

Mr. Murphy: Go to Manitoba.

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, given the Hon. Member's background I am sure he knows that the premium increases that we have seen were designed by the companies in order to meet an important solvency consideration. They are in the hands of the provincial Governments because they fall under contract law which is provincial jurisdiction. The court settlements that have been made also fall into provincial jurisdiction.

We are planning to co-operate fully with the task force in Ontario. Our policy is to develop higher standards for property and casualty insurance dealing with solvency and the capital base, which are very much a part of our role.

ALLEGED DISCLOSURE OF IMPORTANT DATA TO CANADAIR COMPETITORS

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board and relates to Canadair. Last week the leader of the machinists' union and the president of Canadair's survival committee denounced the disclosure of important data to Canadair competitors. Here is my question: Why did you give confidential information to a Canadair competitor? Why, against the best interests of that company, did you reject the unanimous recommendation of Canadair's board of directors not to release that information?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I believe that question was directed to me. Let me assure the Hon. Member that no confidential information was turned over to a possible competitor of Canadair. However, in some ways I wish the Opposition would get their act together.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stevens: A previous questioner indicated that he did not want a fire sale with respect to Canadair. The next questioner asks why we are giving information to possible purchasers with respect to the sale of Canadair. How else does one sell a Crown corporation unless one gives relevant details concerning its operation? However, let me assure the Hon. Member that no competitively sensitive information was given.

Mr. Berger: We are talking about the Government, through its incompetence, destroying a couple of important Canadian institutions.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question.

GULFSTREAM MEMORANDUM

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, on July 23 Gulfstream Aerospace sent a memo to a potential Canadair customer asking it to reconsider its pending purchase of a Challenger. Yet the Government allowed Gulfstream—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Does the Hon. Member have a question, please?

Mr. Berger: How could the Minister and his Government give sensitive information to Gulfstream when they have the proof in black and white, in a memo from Gulfstream, that it was trying to hurt Canadair? How could you allow that to happen?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, how soon the Opposition Members forget Maislin, and Consolidated Computers. Speaking about destroying public companies, how quick they forget that it was under their direction that Canadair lost over a billion dollars.

I have indicated that we are trying to secure would-be buyers who would ensure a viability for Canadair and the continued employment of those who are working for Canadair for many years to come—something that the Opposition failed to do when in Government.

THE ECONOMY

INTEREST RATE LEVELS—ROLE OF BANK OF CANADA

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. He is well aware that in today's press the banner headlines indicate that interest rates are at 11 per cent now and going up for small businesses and consumers generally. Will the Minister explain whether or not he supports this action taken by the central bank to raise interest rates in response to a slightly devalued dollar? Does he support the central bank's decision to do that?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have indicated my response to that question in reply to previous questions.

I would encourage the Hon. Member to look at the broad performance of this Government on interest rates over the last year and a half. We are committed to getting interest rates down as low as we possibly can. That is the policy of the Government and that is what we have been able to do in this term of office.

Let me also remind the Hon. Member that we have performed very, very well in terms of job creation, which is also an important part of the record of the Government.

The NDP said it wanted to set a target of 300,000 jobs last year. We created 385,000 jobs. That is performance.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Minister forgot to mention that most of those jobs are part-time jobs.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: That is wrong.

Mr. Riis: I am more concerned about the signal that the 11 per cent interest rate sends out at a time when we are trying to develop consumer and investor confidence.

ACTIVITY BY MONEY SPECULATORS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister of Finance not agree that the slight devaluation in the Canadian dollar, which prompted this increase in interest rates, was a result of activity by money speculators only?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member believes that, maybe he should give me some of the information. He should know that there are billions of dollars going through the markets every day, billions of dollars. Some of that is speculative activity, some of it is commercial activity, and some of it is related to delays in decisions by corporate treasurers in their normal trading operations. All of these result in market-place pressures. We are trying to introduce a degree of stability into the market-place, which has been the policy of the Bank of Canada, and the Government of Canada supports that policy.

PUBLIC SERVICE

INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the President of the Treasury Board. As you know, there is considerable anxiety across the country among the 200,000 plus superannuates from the Public Service, R.C.M.P. and Armed Forces concerning full indexation of their pensions. Is the President of the Treasury Board in a position to tell them what position has been taken concerning this important issue and, if not, when will they know?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, as I have often said in this House there were two reports, one requested by the unions and one requested by management, on this issue. The reports have been exchanged by both parties and are under study at the moment.

We will respect our campaign commitment to be fair and equitable in this matter and to maintain benefit levels for our superannuates. I expect to be in a position within a few weeks to make a definitive announcement on the direction we will take with respect to pension benefits.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy).

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

IMPACT OF JAPANESE IMPORTS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Yesterday the special task force that was commissioned by the Minister of Employment and Immigration on the automobile industry tabled its report. It indicates there will be a drastic loss of jobs in the automobile industry, upwards of 50,000 by 1990, unless there is a major change in trade policy.

Considering how important the Japanese manufacturers are to our automobile policy, in the Prime Minister's discussions with the Prime Minister of Japan did he raise with him the important impact that Japanese imports into Canada have on our auto industry? Did he propose any new agreement or proposals for the Japanese to ensure the stability and future prosperity of our automobile industry? Did the Prime Minister raise those matters in his discussions?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I had intensive discussions with the Prime Minister of Japan in regard to the automobile industry. I spoke about the tremendous contribution this makes to Canada generally and to southern Ontario in particular, how we welcome, under this Government, the attraction of new investment in this area, and how welcomed it is by the people of Ontario and the people of Canada.

We recognize that there are some difficulties as well. I think there was general agreement that if you are going to reduce unemployment, as we are trying to do, the way to do it is by not building walls around Canada but by creating new riches to enhance trade to lower unemployment.

Our obligation is to create jobs for Canadians. That is our objective which we will be reaching with the kind of enhanced trading agreements we are seeking.

PROJECTED LOSS OF JOBS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the report commissioned by a Minister of his own Government indicated there would be a loss of 16,000 jobs in the industry under the present practices. What is needed is a straight commitment to have all Japanese manufacturers come under the Auto Pact Agreement. Did the Prime Minister specifically request of the Japanese Prime Minister that Japanese manufacturers agree to come under the Auto Pact Agreement? Does the Canadian Government intend to maintain the quotas presently in place to protect Canadian industry?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend is right. The implication of what he said is that all Government policy should be designed to create employment. Earlier today, quite properly, we were talking about employment in Montreal. Yesterday it was indicated that Montreal's unemployment rate last year was the lowest since 1981. This is what we are trying to do in all areas, including the automobile industry. I had the pleasure of meeting with a group headed by Bob White and Pat Lavelle—who, I understand, may be considering other responsibilities—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: We had an excellent meeting with Mr. Lavelle and with presidents of automobile companies located in Canada who made the representation to which my hon. friend refers. They are aware that we must be seeking new investment because if there is a tremendous job creation burst in Canada, our concern is spreading it fairly.

Unemployment in Manitoba has now been reduced to 7.2 per cent—

Mr. Orlikow: With an NDP Government.

Mr. Mulroney: —the lowest unemployment rate in Canada, with Ontario. We want to make sure that that prosperity spreads to Newfoundland and to British Columbia as well. I know that the Hon. Member will welcome what we are trying to do to attract new investment to British Columbia, western Canada, and the maritime provinces—

Mr. Speaker: With respect, this is becoming too long.

REFUGEES

IMMIGRATION APPEAL BOARD PRACTICES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Immigration. The Minister knows that the Supreme Court has ordered that only those who have heard a refugee's claim directly have the right to decide whether that person is a refugee and deserves Canada's protection. Why has the Minister continued to permit members of the Immigration Appeal Board to decide, in some cases, refugee claims which they have not heard?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, in terms of the refugee procedures, the Hon. Member knows that the responsibility to hear those claims in the first instance lies with the refugee appeal mechanism and the Immigration Appeal Board's responsibility is to deal with appeals only.

REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): That was not the question I asked, Mr. Speaker. The Immigration Appeal Board by law is required to hear the complainant. The Minister knows that the Chairman of the Immigration Appeal Board distributed a memo saying that the Board was not to make a decision when it heard the case but to refer it to a meeting with other board members. Will the Minister now order a judicial inquiry into this illegal activity of the Immigration Appeal Board?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is raising an issue brought to public attention by certain dissatisfied lawyers in the Toronto area over the objection, I might say, of the Toronto bar.

Mr. Crosbie: Lawyer lover.

• (1500)

Mr. McLean: The Hon. Member should know that the chairman of the IAB is meeting with the Toronto Bar later this week and that a number of the issues which were raised have already been resolved. It would not be appropriate at this time for me to intervene in that situation.

REPORTED ABUSES AT TORONTO PORT OF ENTRY

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of State for Immigration. It concerns the recent abuses of refugee claims in the Metropolitan Toronto area which have been highlighting the very serious flaws in Canada's immigration policy. Could the Minister tell the House what measures he has taken to ensure that this kind of abuse does not happen again?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her question. The matter of abuse at a number of ports of entry has been brought to my attention, not only by members of the public but by herself and by a number of other Members of the House. The procedures at present jeopardize many bona fide refugees. At the moment we are proceeding to bring legislation before the House in order to deal with the current situation. In the interim, I have appealed to churches, concerned groups, and others to bring the cases of flagrant abuse, particularly those who are counselling fraudulent activity, to the attention of my officials, particularly in the Toronto area.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of 29, presented by Hon. Members on Friday, December 20, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form. Certain petitions presented by Hon. Members do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand), by filing with the Clerk of the House on Friday, December 20, 1985, do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form. The petition presented by the Hon. Member for London West (Mr. Hockin), by filing with the Clerk of the House on Monday, January 13, 1986, also does not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

POINTS OF ORDER

RECOGNITION OF BACK-BENCHERS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTIONS

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order as opposed to a question of privilege, because I do not want to abuse what may or may not be a privilege in the House. In Question Period today I attempted to pose a supplementary question, and I was disallowed. I have discussed this situation very briefly with you, Sir, and I would ask you, in the true spirit of reform of Parliament which is evolving to enhance the role of the private Member, particularly those of us on the Government back-benches, to give more consideration to allowing us to ask supplementary questions in Question Period, in order to allow us to represent more effectively the concerns and issues of our constituents.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows that he is not raising a point of order but is making a point in which, I take it, he believes quite strongly. If the Hon. Member will resume his seat, I suggest that he review the entire history of Question Period.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deans: You cannot do that; you do not have a point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): May I ask the Chair a question?

Mr. Deans: No.

Mr. Speaker: Is the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mr. Turner) raising another point of order?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): The same point of order, Mr. Speaker, please.

Mr. Speaker: With respect, there is no point of order. Does the Hon. Member have a different point of order?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): It will be different, Mr. Speaker. May I please read from Speaker Lamoureux's ruling—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member resume his seat? The Hon. Member has had a ruling on the point of order which he raised. If he has a different point of order, I take it he might want to raise it. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton on a different point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, if it is not a point of order, would you please instruct me as to what it is?

Mr. Speaker: It is a representation to me on a matter about which the Hon. Member feels strongly. That is what it is, and I take it at that. The Hon. Member will please resume his seat, unless he has a point of order to raise.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I do, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will resume his seat, please.

An Hon. Member: Sit down, Barry.

RULES REGARDING TELEVISING OF HOUSE OF COMMONS PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I had the opportunity yesterday to review part of the televised proceedings of the afternoon session of the House of Commons. During the course of the presentation by the Hon. Prime Minister of Japan, the television camera took the opportunity to show other than the Prime Minister of Japan making his speech. Rather, from time to time, it showed other Members of the House either in their seats or doing other things.

It may well be that that is good television. I might even be prepared to concede that that would be more interesting television than the practice which we have agreed we would follow during the televised proceedings of the House of Commons. However unfortunately, perhaps, the rule which we have followed—and I have raised this point before—was one to which all Parties agreed, that only the person who has the floor will appear on the television camera during the broadcast. I am not asking for any retribution. I am simply asking that, if we are to change the rules, I would prefer it to be done by agreement than done unilaterally. If it is the desire of some that the rules should be changed, then some kind of representation ought to be made, either to or through the Speaker, to the appropriate House committee or through the House Leaders in an effort to come to a consensus.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. There is, in this representation, a point of order because the agreements with regard to television are agreements of the whole House. Therefore, I would be happy to have yesterday's telecasting reviewed to determine what hapened. I might say to the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), who is himself a House Leader, that he may want to discuss with the other House Leaders the entire question of television. I take it from what he has said that he believes there should be some considerations, and I think he knows the appropriate channels.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the House Leaders, being here, would receive very well a suggestion that if there was to be a debate, it could be referred to the appropriate committee, that is, the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services. We would be more than delighted to receive it as a suggestion to study, to look into it and to report back to the House.

Mr. Speaker: I welcome the Hon. Member's representation in this case. It is not a point of order.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, in your consideration of the point made by the House Leader of the New Democratic Party, I hope it will not be argued that because the House yesterday was not in regular session, the rules ordinarily applied to the televising of proceedings in the House would not be in force. This would depart from the spirit of the rules, if not their very letter. At the time the Prime Minister of Japan was with us, we were not in session in the sense of the mace being on the table.

Mr. Althouse: Hansard recorded it.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): I would ask you, Mr. Speaker, to look at that aspect. If that is argued on behalf of what was done yesterday, I would ask that that argument be rejected.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray). I probably would not have thought of that possible representation until he made it. If my memory is correct—and I will check it—the House adopted a House Order yesterday to cover the proceedings of yesterday afternoon in the normal way in which the House is covered. I would therefore assume that the rules with regard to televising do apply in yesterday's situation. I thank the Hon. Member.

PETITIONS

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present to the House a petition from residents of Moncton, Riverview and Dorchester. All those people deplore the situation at the CN shops which has remained unchanged during the Christmas holiday. They want the assurance that not a single additional job will be lost at the Moncton shops.

[English]

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND CORPORATION

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased and honoured to present a number of petitions from Canadians in Toronto who are protesting the sale of the de Havilland Corporation. They petition the Government to reverse its decision with regard to what was a wholly-owned Canadian company which inspired pride in a very key and crucial sector of our economic life. The first petition, Mr. Speaker, was collected by Mr. Antonio Mansillo and it comes from residents right across the Metropolitan Toronto area. The second petition, Mr. Speaker, was collected by Mr. Sante Mio from residents in my riding of York West. I hope that the Government heeds these Canadians demands.

• (1510)

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have four petitions to present today. The first comes from Vancouver in British Columbia and is a petition protesting the family allowances deindexation and asking that they not be offset by changes to the child tax credit because then even the poorest families will be worse off by 1990.

The second petition comes from New Brunswick and stresses the cut-backs in child benefits of $600 million by 1990 which will be part of the set of unfair tax changes put into place in the last Budget.

The third petition comes from Nova Scotia and stresses that these reductions in family allowances comes with an increase in RRSP deductions, an increase in hand-outs to the oil companies, and therefore makes our tax system more unequal.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, my fourth petition comes from the Province of Quebec, from the cities of Terrebonne, LaSalle, Saint-Jérôme and Montreal. These petitioners also protest against lower family allowances and urge the Government to change its policies.

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions, the first of which protests the government decision to have pension benefits deducted from unemployment insurance benefits, thus effectively removing a significant benefit from workers and creating a disincentive for early retirement plans, and asking for the immediate withdrawal of that action.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): The second petition is from New Brunswick and it protests the intention to deindex family allowances and requests the reinstatement of full indexation of the universal family allowance and the recission of the unfair tax increase.

I have another petition of a similar nature from Vancouver protesting the intent to deindex the family allowances and protesting other measures with respect to childhood benefits, the unfair tax changes and asking that those tax changes be withdrawn.

Another petition is from Nova Scotia from citizens there exercising their anxious right to petition the Parliament of Canada in protestation against the changes in the family allowances and asking that that action be rescinded as well as those with respect to taxation.

Finally, I have a petition from the Province of Quebec, from citizens there exercising their anxious right to protest the changes in family allowances, specifically their deindexation, asking that that action be withdrawn and that the tax changes affecting low and middle-income people be rescinded.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my privilege today to present two petitions signed by residents of my riding. The first protests the action by the Government in cutting back family allowances and in instituting tax increases which will further increase the burden on ordinary families in Canada. This petition is signed by residents of Red Lake, Madsen and Balmertown.

PROTECTION OF FOREST INDUSTRY

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): The second petition is from residents of Dryden, Eagle River, Wabigoon, Oxdrift, Minnitaki and Vermilion Bay. These petitioners seek Parliament's assistance in representation in dissuading the United States Congress from taking protectionist action which would cost thousands of jobs in Canada's forest sector.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, it is an honour to present petitions from residents of three different provinces of Canada, residents of the community of Langley in British Columbia, Saint Hubert and other parts of the Province of Quebec and Moncton and other communities in New Brunswick; also from Halifax and other parts of Nova Scotia. All protest the decision of the Government to deindex the universal family allowances. We point out that the consequence of the variety of changes the Government has proposed will be to reduce even the poorest families to worse straits by 1990. They call upon the House of Commons to restore full indexation of the family allowance.

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present a petition on behalf of some concerned citizens from the City of Owen Sound and surrounding areas in the riding of Grey-Simcoe who are opposed to the reduction of the indexation of family allowances. The petitioners believe that children are everyone's responsibility and that the principle of full indexation should be maintained.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and privilege to present to this House several petitions signed by residents of the federal constituency of Moncton as well as of Westfall and Kent expressing their concern for the future of the CN shops in Moncton.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege to present a petition signed by a number of residents of Hamilton who ask the Parliament to ensure that all retired employees keep their pension benefits and receive their unemployment insurance benefit without deduction of pension income.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present a number of petitions from a number of provinces, the first one from Montreal, Quebec; the second one from New Brunswick in the area of Moncton; the third one from Vancouver, British Columbia; and the final one from Nova Scotia.

All of these petitioners humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate the full indexation fo the universal family allowances and to rescind unfair tax increases.

[Translation]

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have four petitions concerning family allowances. The undersigned state that the deindexation of family allowances and the public disengagement in the area of child benefits are an unfair attack against families with children and especially single parent families.

Mr. Speaker, this petition comes from the Province of Quebec.

[English]

I have another petition with regard to the same subject of family allowances calling upon the Government to restore full indexation of family allowances. The same kind of petition as the one from the Province of Quebec, but this one is from the Province of New Brunswick. I have another petition calling upon the Government to restore full indexation of family allowances from the Province of Nova Scotia. Finally, I have a petition from the Province of British Columbia. So we have petitioners here from all across Canada calling upon the Government to restore full indexation of family allowances.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I also have a few of the very many petitions that have come in over the Christmas break. The first one is from Burnaby, British Columbia, and it calls on the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances.

The second one is from a number of people from New Brunswick, and it also calls on the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of family allowances and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

The next one, which is in French says:

[Translation]

The undersigned humbly ask the Government to re-establish full indexation of family allowances and rescind the unfair tax increases.

And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

• (1520)

[English]

The next petition is on the same subject and is from Kemptville and Wolfville, Nova Scotia. I have another one, which is also in French, from Round Hill, Nova Scotia. The final petitions are from Truro, Cambridge and Dartmouth, Nova Scotia on the same subject of the reindexation of family allowances.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and privilege to present several petitions. The first one concerns the reduction in family allowance benefits and it was forwarded to me by an organization from Kitchener called Help Stamp Out Poverty Everywhere. The petitioners state that in the opinion of your petitioners, the recent federal budget policy to deindex family allowances is clearly an attack on the working poor and poor alike and as a result they strongly urge the Government of Canada to restore full indexation of family allowances.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, on the different matter of unemployment insurance and pensioners, I have a petition signed by a number of individuals from the Hamilton-Beamsville area who ask Parliament to examine the Government's intent to deduct pension income from unemployment insurance benefits and ask that those pensioners be treated fairly because of the number of years of service that they have given to Canada.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions to present. The first is from points in my riding including Nokomis, Dafoe, Wynyard, Englefeld, Watson and Jansen. They are petitioning the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases to which the petitioners allude in their petition.

As well, I have petitions from the Province of New Brunswick which point out that accelerating cut-backs in child benefits, which will reach $600 million annually by 1990, placed on top of sales tax increases, excise tax increases and stiff income tax increases are unfair and place an extraordinary burden on middle and low-income households, and therefore the House should be called upon to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances and to rescind the unfair tax increases. I have similar petitions from the Province of British Columbia, the Province of Nova Scotia and the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I have two copies of a petition from Saskatchewan and British Columbia bringing to the Government's attention the very difficult times the Government's budget and its decision to deindex family allowance is creating for the families of Canada. The petitioners ask the Government to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and to rescind a number of the unfair tax increases in the last Budget.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition that I would like to present on behalf of a number of residents of Canada who are asking that all retired employees keep their pension benefits and receive their unemployment insurance benefits without deduction of pension income. In other words, they are concerned about the situation that was introduced on January 1.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the responsibility and privilege of presenting petitions on two different subjects. The first one is on the planned deindexation of family allowances. I have petitions signed by residents of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, British Columbia and Quebec. The petitioners call upon Parliament to withdraw the legislation that is before Parliament that will in effect create a great deal of hardship on families with children and particularly single-parent mothers. In fact the cut-back is a tax increase and it is inequitable and unbearable in light of the vast billions of dollars of hand-outs that are made to the very wealthy in Canada.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, the other petition I have is signed by residents of Hamilton, Ontario, and calls upon Parliament to withdraw the change in the unemployment insurance program whereby pension income will be used as earned income in calculating unemployment insurance.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

CONCURRENCE IN REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations between the House Leaders. I think you will find that there has been a disposition made to accept by unanimous consent and have passed without debate the following motion:

That the Ninth Report of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, presented in the House on Tuesday, December 17, 1985, be concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the introduction of that motion?

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry. Could I have 30 seconds to inquire into the matter before I give my consent since the House Leader is not present?

Mr. Speaker: I take it that the 30-second consultation is now complete. There now being unanimous consent for the introduction of the motion, shall the motion carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO SUBCOMMITTEE REPORT ON EQUALITY RIGHTS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, this motion has also received consent and deals with the time limit with respect to the response of the Government to the report of the Subcommittee of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs on Equality Rights. I will explain the purpose of it in advance. Because the House is not sitting during the mid-term break of the week of February 17, there has been a disposition made by the House Leaders to extend the time available for the presentation of the response of the Government until the week following the recess. Therefore, I think you will find a disposition to have this accepted without debate and by unanimous consent.

The motion reads as follows:

That, notwithstanding the provisions of Standing Order 70(16), the comprehensive response requested, in relation to the report of the Subcommittee of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs on Equality Rights, presented to the House on Friday, October 25, 1985, shall be laid upon the Table not later than Tuesday, February 25, 1986.

Mr. Speaker: Is there the consent of the House to introduce the motion?

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, my guardian angel has sent me a little note which reads: "Okay", and it is signed JY, who, as we all know, is Jerry Yanover.

Mr. Speaker: There being unanimous consent, shall the motion carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 458, 470, 482 and 488.

[Text]

ADVERTISING TO DISCOURAGE SMOKING

Question No. 458—Mr. Corbett:

How much money does the Government spend annually on literature and advertising to discourage smoking?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): It is estimated that in fiscal year 1985/86, National Health and Welfare will spend $1.6 million on literature and advertising to discourage smoking. Of this total amount, $1.2 million will be spent on advertising with the balance being spent on related educational and informational materials.

SEIZURES OF PORNOGRAPHIC MATERIAL AND HATE LITERATURE

Question No. 470—Mrs. Sparrow:

What quantity of pornographic material and hate literature was seized at border points (a) from April 3, 1985 to date (b) for the comparable time in 1984?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): The Department of National Revenue, Customs and Excise, conducted a retrieval of data respecting seizures of pornographic material and hate literature. However, such data is currently retrievable only for the period ending August 31, 1985.

Customs interdictions of prohibited material are considered "detentions" as opposed to "seizures".

(a) From April 3, 1985 to August 31, 1985, a total of 10 seizures of pornographic material and hate literature and approximately 1,700 detentions were effected.

(b) During the same period in 1984, a total of 23 seizures and approximately 1,700 detentions were effected.

"Seizures" of material relate to material which is not properly declared by the importer at the time of entry and is considered to be smuggled, misdescribed or enclosed in another package. "Detentions" of material relate to material which is properly declared by the importer at the time of entry and is determined to be prohibited. In such instances, the material is either voluntarily re-exported by the importer or detained by Customs for disposition.

In addition, a significant amount of material is submitted in advance of importation to Customs for review and for an opinion regarding its admissibility into Canada. From April 3, 1984 to October 15, 1984, 1,365 items were submitted for review and from April 3, 1985 to October 15, 1985, 2,139 items were submitted.

TAX EXPENDITURES

Question No. 482—Ms. McDonald:

How much federal tax revenues have been lost by Revenue Canada through tax deductions for advertising and other promotional measures on the part of tobacco manufacturing companies?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Statistics are not captured by Revenue Canada on expenses incurred by various industry groups.

UI FRAUD AND OVERPAYMENTS

Question No. 488—Mr. Rodriguez:

1. In each of the past four years, how many persons were employed by the Department of Employment and Immigration to investigate unemployment insurance cheating and how much money was recovered?

2. How many persons were convicted of fraud for improper collection of unemployment insurance?

3. (a) How many individual cases were there of unemployment insurance overpayments (b) how many were caused by administrative error on the part of the Department?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration):

Order for Return

1. (a) 1981 – 857.33 person/years
1982 – 916. person/years
1983 – 965.56 person/years

(b)

| | Overpayments Established | Penalties | Fines |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1981 | $40,392,494 | $ 4,356,013 | $1,717,645 |
| 1982 | 53,385,322 | 6,557,403 | 2,200,568 |
| 1983 | 82,028,298 | 10,199,757 | 2,915,750 |
| 1984 | 87,925,791 | 12,586,537 | 2,749,931 |

N.B. C.E.I.C. is unable to segregate the amounts of money recovered in respect of unemployment insurance cheating. However, it should be noted that historically Employment and Immigration Canada collects approximately 95 per cent of all overpayments established in the UI program.

2. 1981 – 7,835
1984 – 5,449

3. (a) 1982-83 not available
1983-84 745,647
1984-85 766,146
1985-86 363,232
(to Sept. 30)

(b) Not available. However, the Commission does maintain a Comprehensive Tracking System, certified by the Auditor General, which categorizes errors by ten broad definitions, as follows:

1. Unreported earnings
2. Clerical errors
3. Employment data incorrect
4. Record of employment errors not followed-up
5. Regional computer centre processing errors
6. Incorrect agent decisions
7. Inadequate fact finding
8. Adjustment to benefits incorrect
9. Interview program deficiency
10. Miscellaneous errors

These errors are expressed in terms of the most-likely dollar value of overpayments in relation to the total benefit payout. Latest figures, at March 31, 1985, indicate a most-likely dollar value of $2.68 of overpayment per $100 of benefits paid during the preceding year.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The questions as enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered.

Mr. Lewis: I would ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if Question No. 428 could be made an Order for Return, this return would be tabled immediately.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that Question No. 428 be deemed to have been made an Order for Return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

REPORT ON TAXATION OF ARTISTS AND WRITERS

Question No. 428—Ms. McDonald:

1. Have any of the 31 recommendations of the sub-committee on the taxation of artists and writers been implemented and, if so, which ones and by what action?

2. Have changes been made to the Department of Employment and Immigration's programs to enable artists to benefit from them and, if so, what are they and were artists and arts organizations notified of the changes?

3. Under the capital cost allowance (a) what amount per year was permitted as tax deductions for investments in films (b) how many films produced under the tax incentive were exhibited and how many won awards?

Return tabled.

INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; and Motion No. 4 (Mr. Johnston) (p. 9733).

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have now had the opportunity to review the arguments that were made this morning by Hon. Members in relation to Motions Nos. 1, 2 and 3. The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has argued that Motion No. 1, in attempting to substitute the word "person" for the word "individual", would enlarge the scope of Clause 5 since the word "person" could be interpreted to mean "corporation". The objective of Clause 5 is fairly narrow in dealing with the value of inventory of artistic endeavour. The word "individual" as defined in Section 248(1) of the Income Tax Act means a person other than a corporation, while the word "person" is defined to include bodies corporate or political. Therefore, I find the argument of the President of the Privy Council to be convincing in that the amendment is more than what was envisaged at second reading. Therefore, Motion No. 1 is out of order and will not be put to the House.

Motions Nos. 2 and 3 are interrelated. Motion No. 2 adds a definition to Clause 58 and particularly at Section 110.6 that is linked to the definition of Canadian securities found in Subsection 39(6). I therefore have some difficulty in accepting the argument that it is an amendment to an interpretation clause. The effect of these amendments would therefore restrict the scope of capital gains exemptions. I refer Hon. Members to Citation 527 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition:

So long as an existing tax is not increased, any modification of the proposed reduction may be introduced in the committee on the bill, and is regarded as a question not for increasing the charge upon the people but for determining to what extent such charge shall be reduced.

Therefore, I must rule Motions Nos. 2 and 3 in order. They shall be debated together and voted on separately.

Continuing debate on Motion No. 4, at the expiry of which I would assume we would go to Motion No. 2.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment briefly on the amendment standing in the name of my hon. friend and colleague from Saint-Henri-Westmount who seeks in Motion No. 4 to deal with a clause in Bill C-84 which has a very profound and serious effect upon the income tax system of this country. It is an effect which my constituents are going to feel increasingly over the years. What Clause 65 in Bill C-84 does is to partly end a very important and prominent feature of the Canadian income tax system, namely, the system of indexation.

Members of Parliament who have been in this Chamber for a while will certainly recall, as I do, that it was no less a distinguished Parliamentarian than the Hon. Robert Stanfield who first proposed in this House that we ought to have a system of taxation which was fully indexed. He proposed that the tax brackets and levels of exemption ought to be adjusted each year in accordance with the increases in the Consumer Price Index. Mr. Stanfield made that proposal to the House at a time when those who were engaged in public policy thinking were obsessed with the problems of inflation. They looked around our society and saw that there were many individuals who benefited from inflation. Certainly, those people who had made significant loans in order to purchase houses, apartments and land at, say, 6 per cent, were the beneficiaries of inflation. However, they were in the minority. The majority of people who were just able to make ends meet, who day by day made their payments on their homes and cars, and who had to struggle to get increases in wages to match even the Consumer Price Index, were in trouble. They were devastated by inflation. Therefore, there was a lot of thinking going on as to what we could do as a Government and as a Parliament to deal with the economic problem which was causing such severe problems for so many.

I do not suggest for a moment that it was Mr. Stanfield who, in his own mind, developed the idea of having an indexation provision in our tax system. However, he took what public policy thinkers had developed and brought it here into the precincts of Parliament. I am proud to say that it was my present Leader, the Right Hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner), then the Minister of Finance, who took up this idea of indexing the income tax system and who engaged in a very extensive and significant national debate. He went around the country arguing much in the way of, I suppose, a devil's advocate, that to put an index system into our tax structure would cause very serious problems for the Government. He argued that it was not that useful an idea from the point of view of the Government protecting its revenue position. However, the then Minister of Finance came back from that national debate convinced that this was something which ought to be in our income tax system because it was fair, just and equitable. Therefore in a Budget which was introduced at that time we had a fully indexed tax system brought into effect. In fact, we gave leadership in the free world in having a fair tax system.

We now had a taxation system, with an index system built into it, which ensured as far as possible that the effective rates of tax at any level of income measured in terms of constant purchasing power would not change as a result of changes in the purchasing power of the dollar. Second, it avoided an automatic erosion of the real value of the various personal exemptions due to inflation.

I look upon indexation of the tax system to mean very simply that the Government cannot live off the avails of inflation. It cannot benefit from the effects of inflation which devastates so many of the people we in this House represent. Indexing meant that the Government, if it needed more dollars for justifiable reasons, had to add to its revenue in a very direct way. It had to put it into a Budget. It had to say there was going to be a tax increase, it had to indicate what the money was going to be used for and it had to bring that to Parliament.

Indexation prevents the effective rates of taxation from just increasing automatically. It prevents the value of personal exemptions from declining automatically every year into the indefinite future so long as inflation at any level continues. What does Bill C-84 do? It is true that Bill C-84 does not bring an end to the indexation system in its entirety. What it does is to end the first 3 per cent of the indexation system. What we have now is 3 per cent per annum added on to the tax burden of our citizens. At first blush, that does not seem too serious in a single Budget in a single year, especially at a time when we have a very large national deficit. However, think for a moment, Mr. Speaker, of what this means over a longer period of time. What does 3 per cent per annum over a period of, let us say, 10 years mean? Let us take a married taxpayer who does not have dependent children. That person has personal exemptions in 1985 terms of $7,700. In 10 years that will be eroded by 26 per cent. He will then have a personal exemption of only $5,730. In a 20 year period, those exemptions are eroded in value by 45 per cent and he will only have an exemption of $4,225.

Right now, as you know, Mr. Speaker, the top rate is about 50 per cent. That top rate kicks in at just over $62,000. As a result of Bill C-84, in a 10 year period of time, the top rate of taxation is going to begin to take effect at the much lower level of close to $46,000. In 20 years the top rate of taxation will begin to take effect at $33,000. I am sure Hon. Members must be wondering why the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) would want to bring in with Clause 65 of Bill C-84 a partial ending of the indexation system in our tax structure. Why did he do it? Obviously he needed a large quantity of dollars, something in excess of $600 million, in order to pay for another benefit which is going to be given out as a result of the Budget, namely, a one half million dollar gift of a capital gains exemption introduced gradually over a period of time. That $635 million will almost pay for that gift in the first year. In order for the Government to make a very generous gift to its rich friends it is now going to dip into the pockets of people who cannot afford to have their personal exemptions decreased or their tax levels increased. They cannot afford to give those dollars to people who have extra dollars to invest in order to try and make a capital gain.

This Budget takes from those who are struggling to get by and gives to those who have all of their needs met and probably most of their wants as well. My constituents cannot afford their share of this $635 million. They cannot afford it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The time allotted to the Hon. Member has now expired.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to add my words to the debate on this clause of Bill C-84. My hon. colleague from Cochrane-Superior has I think outlined very well this afternoon the reasons why the Government of the day in the mid-1970s decided to accept the recommendations made by the then Leader of the Official Opposition, Mr. Standfield, to introduce the concept of indexing personal exemptions and the income tax system. Before I begin to talk about the impact these measures will have on family income, I want to talk a bit about what the Conservative Party had to say in 1980-81 when it thought the Liberal Government was going to introduce the type of legislation which has been introduced on the floor of this House today. Regarding the deindexation of personal exemptions and the income tax system, the Conservatives indicated that the lower your income was, the harder you were going to get hit. At least they recognized the fact that the hardest hit would be low and middle-income Canadians. They were well aware of the impact it would have. They said it would mean a massive tax increase for all Canadians. Therefore, it seems rather strange that Conservative back-bench MPs have been silent this morning and this afternoon concerning the impact this Bill will have on their own constituency.

The Conservatives went on to say at that time that deindexation would raise a lot of money fast. This morning my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) indicated that in 1990-91 alone some $4.3 billion will find its way into the Government's Consolidated Revenue Fund solely on the basis of the Government's vested interest in inflation over the next four or five years. That is why they said that indexation was their idea in the first place and there was no reason for the Liberal Government to remove it from the tax system, and why they felt every Canadian should speak up and write their individual Members of Parliament. My, how five short years changes the tune of the Conservative Party. In essence they have just ripped up the plans they had in 1980 to oppose the principle of deindexation and now sit quietly by while a Bill is introduced on the floor of the House of Commons which will do the exact opposite of what their Party stood for in 1980-81. I suggest that is typical of the actions of this Government since it took office in September of 1984. Government Members have betrayed the trust given to them in the election of 1984, and I happen to believe that the Gallup poll is now beginning to reflect the degree of cynicism the Canadian people have regarding the Mulroney Government and the plans it has in a number of key areas.

I talked a little bit about the impact these measures would have on specific family income levels. I raised this issue at the time we talked about the plans to deindex family allowances. I admitted at that time that those plans were very small but the reason we, the Liberal Party, opposed those plans was the same reason we opposed the plan to deindex personal exemptions in the income tax system. In effect that will take this country in the direction of a very perverse social policy. As a direct result of this action the gap between the poor and rich in this country will widen. In fact, as I have pointed out, a family which earns $15,000 a year will pay an additional $1,879 in taxes over the next five years. StatsCan's definition of a middle-income family is one earning $35,000 a year and they will pay an additioanl $3,450 in taxes. The strange thing is that a family which earns $80,000 a year will pay only an additional $1,125 in taxes over that same time period. In other words, the family earning $15,000 will pay approximately 65 per cent more in taxes than the family earning $80,000. Every social policy group in this country which advises the Government has indicated that the Government is wrong in its attempt to introduce these measures for deindexation. It will be in effect a social policy of Robin Hood in reverse where the poor get poorer and the rich get richer.

I find the silence from the Government side quite deafening. We were elected as Members of Parliament in September of 1984 to represent our constituents' interests. Yet, again strangely, I see Members here from Mississauga, Quebec and western Canada who have nothing to say. They want us to rush this through so they have even given up speaking on the Bill. I suppose to some extent the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount was correct this morning when he said that if he were bringing in legislation of this type, he would be very silent if he were part of a team of Government back-benchers who were going to advocate this kind of social policy on the floor of the House of Commons. I often wonder what happens in the national caucus of the Conservative Party. I know when we were in Government we had a very healthy exchange of views in caucus so that this kind of legislation which is so damaging to our constituents would never see the light of day. Yet time after time we find as a result of the May 23 Budget a number of income tax measures which will adversely affect our social policy for decades to come.

Before I conclude, I would like to talk a bit about the fact of the Government having a vested interest in inflation once the personal exemption system and the income tax system is deindexed. In the mid-1970s, when we were experiencing much higher levels of inflation, there was an excellent case to be made for the Government of the day accepting the principle of indexing the income tax system and the personal exemption system. As I have indicated, the Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) outlined the effect that that will have on the average income tax paid by middle-income and lower-income Canadians. It will be a very negative effect. It is a backward step for the present Government to destroy a principle that was accepted by all political parties in the mid-1970s simply because of a drop in the annual inflation in the country.

As the critic for national health and welfare, I happen to believe that the social policy direction indicated by the May 23 Budget and exemplified by Bill C-84, is a step in the wrong direction. I appeal to the back-bench members of the Conservative Party to stand up and voice their concerns by voting with us, the Opposition, on some of the amendments which we have put forward on Bill C-84.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, it is about time the House and the Opposition realized that the best social policy for the country is jobs. We have given jobs in great numbers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Blenkarn: Another social policy that we have is to pay our bills and reduce the deficit. We are reducing the deficit and this is one of the very few measures in this statute that increases taxation. Yes, it increases taxation across the board if there is some inflation. It reduces th e exemptions that people have—

Mr. Frith: It widens the gap.

Mr. Blenkarn: He says that it widens the gap. It widens the gap, all right, in the reduction of the deficit. That is the gap we are going to close. We are going to get it a long way down and we need the co-operation of the Opposition rather than stupid, foolish, and ridiculous suggestions about social policy. Our social policy is working in spades. It is working in my constituency where the problem today is not "jobs, jobs, jobs", it's "people, people, people" to fill them.

Mr. Frith: Just forget about Atlantic Canada, northern Ontario, and New Brunswick.

Mr. Blenkarn: The problem with the Opposition is that when it was their turn in Government they were quite prepared to hack away at social policy objectives by using a reduction in indexation through their six and five program. Now we have inflation down to 4 per cent and it is perhaps going below that.

Mr. Foster: Who got it down?

Mr. Rossi: Not you, Don. You didn't get it down.

Mr. Blenkarn: One of the major problems with indexing is that it feeds itself. It validates the inflation. There is a provision in this Bill which reduced indexation with respect to tax allowances and the tax rate by expecting people to absorb the first 3 per cent of any inflation that takes place. We expect citizens to absorb some of the costs of inflation because, unless we do so, inflation protection measures continue to feed the inflation that we want to reduce.

It is important for the House to realize that the Government cannot continue to index everything and expect to balance the Budget. One of the major causes of the serious shortage of revenue as against expenditures which exists in our budgetary process has been the result of the indexation that has been extended to all of our social programs and our tax system. Before indexation was brought in on a broad scale to cover pensions, and every other form of benefit, allowance, or charge of the Government, generally speaking Governments were very close to balancing their budgets. Since then our deficit has grown year after year, and often more in good years than in bad years.

Speaking in round figures, for every dollar we spend we only bring in 65 cents in taxes. The other 35 cents must either be borrowed, printed, or somehow taken away from pension reserves. That policy cannot go on. However, that is the social policy advocated by the Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith). His social policy is that it is all right to borrow, and that it is all right to pledge the future of your children, that of their children, and that of their children's children, as long as we have it today.

That is not our policy. Our policy is to attack the root of inflation by refusing to validate it. Our policy is to collect more revenue to reduce our shortfall. I am sorry that means more taxes in some senses. That is the purpose of this section and that is why it is in the Bill. I do not think anyone in the House really wants to pay more taxes. No one wants to pay more taxes, but we as Canadians, as a responsible Party, and a responsible Government, tell ourselves that we have to pay our way. In that sense, the amendment is irresponsible because it says: "Sir, I want more cake, I want more, more, more, and I don't want to pay for it". I am surprised that the Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) brought that position to the House. I would understand it from his Party, but not from him.

Inflation feeds on itself. Indexation validates inflation. It may be necessary for the Government to take one step further and abolish all forms of indexing, because we cannot forever increase payments to people and reduce taxes to people because the cost of living continues to go up. When we do that the cost of living is just passed on and the next year's cost of living goes up. We saw how that worked when we had a provision whereby liquor and tobacco taxes were indexed to the cost of living. We imposed taxes, the price of the articles went up, and that justified a further increase in taxes. Therefore, we imposed more taxes, the price of the article went up, and that justified further increases in taxes.

Here it works exactly the opposite. When the price goes up, we reduce the tax. We have less money to pay Government expenditures, but because we are also going to index benefits, as the price of things go up we increase benefits. Again, our deficit is smaller, our tax revenue goes down, and our expenditures go up. Of course we have this massive, built-in, permanent deficit. It is time the House got down to brass tacks and got rid of that deficit. We cannot get rid of it unless we are prepared to pay the cost, part of which is this clause which must remain in the Bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) has the floor.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to take part in this debate on motion no. 4 which was moved by my colleague the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) for the purpose of amending bill C-84 by deleting Clause 65.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this clause is to abolish or change the indexation of the income tax tables, so that Canadian taxpayers would have to assume the first 3 per cent in inflation, and to fill the coffers of the state to the benefit of the Government.

It was rather amusing to hear the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) blathering earlier that indexation should be abolished. I should simply like to read to him the statement published by his Party in an ad which was published in the newspapers and which read as follows:

[English]

"Inflation, the less your income, the harder you get hit". I continue to cite this great message from the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada. It says: "Deindexing is a scheme to guarantee that you will pay higher federal income taxes year after year". It says: "Deindexing would take away the protection you now have against inflation".

The Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) just said to abolish all indexing. I take it that he wants to abolish the indexing of family allowances, the income tax tables and senior citizens' income. He does not give a damn about the poor or the moderate income groups. He says that they should pay and assume the costs of the inflationary spirals for which they are not responsible.

Let me go on to read from this article because I believe it reveals the two-timing attitude in which some of the Members across the way speak from both sides of their mouth. It goes on to say: "While deindexing would impose the greatest economic hardships on people living on low incomes, it would mean higher and higher taxes for all Canadians living on any income, taxes that would increase as inflation continues to spiral upward". It says that the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada is providing, in their own words: "the opposition to a possible deindexing". It says: "Indexing was our idea in the first place and we are determined that you should continue to receive this fundamental protection against inflation".

This is another day and another year, and probably another Party. They have made a complete 180 degree turn and oppose indexing and any projects or social programs which may have indexing clauses that allow people to maintain their purchasing power. Indeed, indexing of the income tax tables allows moderate income people and all Canadians not to get more, but not lose as a result of economic factors which are not of their making.

In past years we experienced 10 per cent, 11 per cent and sometimes higher inflation rates. God knows that if we did not have indexing of the income tax tables many more Canadians would have been asked to assume the most expensive cost of Governments. We protected those with low and moderate incomes against——the ravages of inflation.

Mr. Speaker, I know that the indexation issue disturbs our Conservative friends and distracts them from their national plan to have all Canadians pay, no matter what their income. To clearly demonstrate the consequences of deindexing income tax tables, I should like to quote from a study which was carried out by our research services and which explains the scope of deindexation: "To show clearly the impact which a reduced indexation of personnel exemptions would have, suffice it to say that if inflation remained at 3 per cent or more over the next few years and if no other change were made to the legislation, the $7,700 granted in 1985 as personal exemptions to married taxpayers without dependent children would only represent, in terms of purchasing power, $5,730 in 10 years and only $4,225 in 20 years, which would mean a reduction of over 26 per cent and 45 per cent respectively."

Mr. Speaker, the study goes on to say that on the basis of the same assumptions, the taxable income currently subject to the highest tax rate, that is $62,160, will only be $45,838 ten years from now, and $33,802 in 20 years.

Mr. Speaker, this shows quite clearly that once again, it is the middle class, the low-income people, who will be shouldering the burden, and not only the Government expenses, which, God knows, are subject to criticism. We were told earlier that the Government knew how to pay its debts. We saw what they could do in the case of banks, we saw what they could do with the one billion Canadian dollars they were forced to spend in order to reimburse the uninsured depositors of the Canadian Commercial Bank.

[English]

Following the Budget last year, an interesting document was leaked and given to us. The first and most expensive item in terms of budgetary measures was the modified indexing of the personal income tax tables. It states that the modified indexation of personal income tax tables for 1985-86 will bring $80 million to the Government; in 1986-87 it will bring $570 million and in 1990-91 it will bring $4.36 billion in income to the Government which Canadians would otherwise have been able to spend as consumers in order to look after their needs.

The statements by Members of the Progressive Conservative Party that this was their idea in 1972-73 is absolutely ludicrous. It was the Liberal Government in 1974 that provided indexing on the income tax tables. It was a progressive measure at that time and it still is progressive. There are enough regressive tax measures in this country that we should have at least one progressive measure to allow all people to pay according to their means, according to a progressive tax table that should be indexed to the cost of living. It does not make sense to say as the Government does that those who make less money should pay as much or more than those who may pay a minimum tax. We will have an opportunity to address that issue later.

I want to conclude by saying that it appears to me that the silence on the Government side is due to their embarrassment. I understand that it is embarrassing to be in contradiction with one's own Party policy. The Conservatives cannot have it both ways. They cannot say that indexation was their idea, only to say a few years later that it is atrocious to continue with the indexing of the income tax tables and propose to modify it so that the first 3 per cent of inflation will not be covered. With that, I hope the Government is defeated on that motion, although I doubt it very much.

[Translation]

Mr. Édouard Desrosiers (Hochelaga-Maisonneuve): Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise on Amendment No. 4 to Bill C-84. As we know, Mr. Speaker, people can juggle with figures. Members opposite call us all sorts of names, but one should not forget that the child benefit, family allowance and tax credit programs provide greater assistance to low-income families—that is the truth—while reducing benefits now being enjoyed by high-income families. This is why Bill C-84 is very important. It should be realized that the legislation as a whole is designed to favour the less privileged families in Canada, the less privileges people, the families in need.

I find it hard to understand that the Opposition cannot grasp that situation.

We all know who is responsible for everything that is happening to Canadian taxpayers. We must not forget that the national debt exceeds $200 billion, Mr. Speaker. The Conservative Party was not always in power. This situation was created by the Liberal Party.

Today, naturally, we have to look at the whole issue and protect the Canadian taxpayers, who are always the ones to pay. Bill C-84 creates a perfect balance. We finally have a Government which will take care of the needs of low-income families and penalize a little bit families with high incomes. In my opinion, it is normal in our society for everyone to do his share and to provide some assistance to the most needy, those who have the most problems.

Mr. Speaker, Bill C-84 includes many excellent provisions. For instance, there are truly valuable provisions for the artists. Of course, this is not the time to speak about them, but I shall have another opportunity to do so.

I simply want to tell the Canadian taxpayers who are watching us that the Conservative Government wants to protect and help them, especially those with low incomes. That is the reason for Bill C-84.

• (1610)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger).

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, this Bill is only one thing, it is about increased taxes. That is what the Budget is all about, no matter how the Government seeks to disguise its plan. What it is doing is imposing a massive tax increase on Canadian taxpayers.

Continuing what my colleagues have said, I would like to outline the effect of some of these tax increases on individual taxpayers. The important point that must be stressed, and I heard the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) and the Hon. Member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers) speaking, is that if taxes have to be increased to pay our way as the Conservatives are so fond of saying, let it be so. What I and my colleagues in the Liberal Party object to and what millions of Canadians object to is that taxes are being increased unfairly. A greater burden is being placed upon the poor in our society.

[Translation]

If the Hon. Member says that everyone should do his share, I agree with him. But that is not what this Bill provides. The poor will pay more than their share. When we look at all the budgetary measures, we realize that the wealthiest in our society are doing very nicely. That is what is unfair about this budget and it is this injustice which we oppose.

[English]

A study was published late last year by the National Anti-Poverty Organization which was presented to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). What was its conclusion? It stated that federal tax increases announced in the Budget will take twice as much from the poorest Canadian as they do from the most affluent. Is it fair for a Government to impose tax increases which take twice as much from the poorest Canadians as they do from the most affluent?

We all remember, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) talking about a bank president earning $500,000 a year. The Prime Minister cited him as an example of those who do not need family allowance in the famous debate over family allowances several months after the election in the fall of 1984.

What does the National Anti-Poverty Association have to say about this famous bank president? It says the tax increases announced in the May budget have a much greater impact on the bank teller than they do on the bank president. I would ask my colleague opposite, the Member from Mississauga South, who is the chairman of the Finance Committee of this House whether he believes it is fair and just for a bank teller to pay much more as a result of the increases in taxes than the bank president.

The National Anti-Poverty Organization goes further:

> The regressive nature of these taxes means that they hit hardest at those who can least afford to pay increased taxes.

That is what we are objecting to.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the budget reveals the true face of the Mulroney Government. It is a retrograde and antisocial budget in which the Government backs down on its promise not to reduce social expenditures. It is a budget which is more harmful to the poor than to the rich. Poor and middle-income families will have to pay more taxes, more commodity taxes, and the tax rates will no longer be fully indexed to the cost of living.

[English]

We are debating Clause 65 at the present time. It provides for the deindexation of tax brackets relating to personal exemptions and to the child tax credit. Let me deal first with the tax brackets and the personal exemptions, Mr. Speaker. Taxpayers will pay higher taxes simply because of inflationary increases in income. Any person who has worked for a number of years knows that every year he or she asks for a cost of living adjustment. If the cost of living goes up by 5 per cent, people want a cost of living adjustment of 5 per cent in order to keep pace with inflation, in order to preserve their purchasing power.

Under the provisions of the Income Tax Act presently in force and introduced by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) when he was Minister of Finance in 1974, the Income Tax Act permits such an increase to take inflation into account without taxing the taxpayer for such an increase which only allows him to keep pace with inflation.

The Conservative Government is saying to taxpayers that the first 3 per cent of that inflationary increase will no longer be compensated for by the Government. Taxpayers will now have to pay for that 3 per cent increase out of their pockets. The Government will pay only for increases exceeding 3 per cent. All taxpayers who see their salaries adjusted simply to keep pace with inflation will have to pay additional taxes, even though they are no further ahead and even though their incomes have not increased in real terms.

The other provision to which I referred earlier deals with the child tax credit. Clause 65 also provides for the income base of $23,500 per year as the threshold amount of family income beyond which the child tax credit is reduced. This base will be adjusted each year for increases in the Consumer Price Index beyond 3 per cent. The poorest families in our society, many of which are single-parent families, receive the child tax credit. They will have money taken out of their pockets because of the provision in Clause 5. It means that $23,500 in 1986 will not be worth the same in 1987 if inflation rises this year by 4 per cent or 5 per cent. The people who receive the child tax credit will, nonetheless, be affected by the threshold change as a result of the provision in Clause 65. Again the Government is making them assume the first 3 per cent increase in the rate of inflation.

There is a number of other provisions which I will have the pleasure of dealing with during the course of debate on these amendments. I thank the House for the opportunity to express my views on the effect of the deindexation of the income tax system.

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, probably enough has been said. In fact, it seems that almost everything which could possibly be said about Bill C-84 has already been enunciated time and time again in the House. Nonetheless, I respect very much the abilities and experience of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) who put forward Motion No. 4 relating to Clause 65 of the Bill. I note with some astonishment, however, that he proposes simply to do away with the partial deindexation of personal exemptions and tax brackets. I find that surprising. With his abilities he should know better; clearly he is playing politics at this point in time with an issue of such gravity. I feel that it will take a long time for the people of Canada to forgive him. It was his administration which put Canadians into a deficit position. I almost hesitate to repeat it, but it deserves repeating. The deficit is in the area of $35 billion to $48 billion annually, and we have a cumulative deficit of some $200 billion. On an annual basis, this works out to overspending by the federal Government to the tune of some $1,400 per person for every man, woman and child in the country. The simple question to put forward would be: How long can this continue? How long can this sort of wanton or profligate spending continue? It put Canadians at the point of no return, at which point they tossed out the Government which created the situation and put in place the Progressive Conservative Government with a clear mandate to do something about it.

Now we have the spectacle where we attempt in a meaningful way, with the least amount of pain as possible, to deal with the jaws of inflation. When dealing with indexation matters, if we index exemptions we are in fact cutting back on revenue. When we index expenditures, we increase the outlay. At the same time we widen the jaws and the deficit continues to increase. This is something which simply cannot continue.

At this point in time one out of every revenue dollar gathered by the federal Government is going to service the debt, that is, to pay interest on the cumulative national debt. By the mid-1990s, if the rate of growth in the deficit continues unabated, we will be in a position where 100 cents out of every tax revenue dollar generated will have to go to pay interest on the national debt and interest on Government securities, treasury bills, Canada Savings Bonds and so on. That is simply an untenable position. By the mid-1990s there would be no money left for any purpose other than debt servicing. There would be no money left for transfer payments to the provinces, for medical care, to assist with education or to provide defence and other services to which Canadians have become accustomed. Unless very serious steps are taken to deal with the deficit, every Canadian will suffer. We in this generation will pay the price but, even worse, so will generations to come.

I should like to ask a common sense question of members of the Liberal Party and of the New Democratic Party: How long can we continue to spend money which we do not have? Obviously, from some of the remarks, it is of no concern to them. It has not been of any concern to them over the last 15 years. Apparently they continue to treat it as some sort of joke. It is not a joke. Responsible steps should be taken. The only way to deal with the problem in the short run would be either to borrow more funds or to print money. In other words, we would either have inflation through the printing of money and the debasing of our currency or we will have the problem down the road of being unable to service the national debt. My main motivation in coming to Parliament—and it was that of many others—was to face the deficit and to try to grapple with it in a meaningful way. I am disappointed, in fact appalled, to have found the slap-happy, casual attitude displayed to the deficit by members of the opposition Parties.

Bill C-84 was a reasonable approach to dealing with the deficit problem—a modest increase in taxes, some juggling around, nothing too severe. Yet, all we hear at this point is criticism from the opposition Parties which have their heads in the sand. Over the years the marriage between the two of them has created a deficit of impossible dimensions. Now, when a Government comes along which is prepared to take some reasonable and meaningful steps, what do we hear from them? We hear nothing but more whining and complaining. It is time for some reasonable response on the part of the Opposition. We should hear from them. In fact, we should have a vote in the House right now. Perhaps the opposition Parties would like to respond at this point, get their heads out of the sand and face up to the common sense approach. With the kind of deficit we have in the country, we have to take in more revenue, spend less and work toward balancing the books.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I was truly astonished to hear the speech of the Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek (Mr. Wilson). It was unbelievable. I am sure that Conservative Members across the way will agree that the Conservative Party is a different one than you and I used to know, Mr. Speaker. Do you remember the Conservative Party? Being the non-partisan person you are, Mr. Speaker, you will recall when the Conservative Party placed an advertisement in Canadian newspapers which indicated the following:

> You've heard a lot about the Constitution lately, but how much have you heard about deindexing?

Actually that was the title of the advertisement which appeared in the early 1980s. It went on to indicate:

> The Constitution is big news now. So big, that you probably haven't heard all that much about the Budget the Liberals are going to bring down soon.

● (1630)

Mr. Brisco: What about six and five, Boudria?

Mr. Boudria: Listen to this and you may learn something. In that Budget there could be something called deindexing. Well, no longer do we need to speculate about deindexing. It's here. It has arrived. It arrived on the Tory bus, not the Liberal machine. The Big Blue Machine brought us the much dreaded, the much feared deindexing that we heard so much about not that long ago.

It was worth buying full page ads in weekly newspapers across the country to incite fear among the people of Canada when the Tories were in opposition, but now that they are in Government deindexing is a sound and reasonable approach. Yet when they were in opposition it was bad. This morning the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) said to us—not that eloquently, but said to us in any case—that in her view we should have been deindexing. She repudiated Tory policies of decades which wanted indexation. What happened to the Minister of State for Finance? Has she not read speeches by previous Leaders of the Conservative Party? What has happened to that Minister, repudiating Tory policies right, left and centre? No progressiveness in that Conservative, Mr. Speaker. She may have been elected as a Progressive Conservative, but she is obviously of the regressive preservative persuasion, and that is what has happened. Let us look at that.

An Hon. Member: Better than—

Mr. Boudria: Let us look at that—I will ignore the unparliamentary language that is used by some members of the Conservative Party. I am concerned with issues and people, not unparliamentary language by some of those nasty Tories making remarks in the House at this point.

The bells rung in this building a few years ago over a Bill. How long did they ring? Days and days they rang over a so-called omnibus Bill. An omnibus Bill, Mr. Speaker, for you and I, is a large Bill like this Bill C-84. Look how large it is, hundreds and hundreds of clauses and subclauses. How long have we debated this omnibus Bill? About 10 hours. I am sure that the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) has read this Bill from one end to the other. He will understand how complex it is and he will want the House of Commons to have the benefit of a thorough debate on this very vital and important issue to Canadians, this issue that his Party has fought for so eloquently in the past when it was afraid of deindexing. Yes, Tories were afraid in the past but the fear has gone. That lust for power, that craving for money that Tories have now has created this kind of attitude on their part. Why do they want that money, Mr. Speaker?

An Hon. Member: To pay the Bills.

Mr. Boudria: It is to give to the poor people? Surely not. Is it to use for useful purposes? Well, that is to be questioned. Let me give instances of how this money will be wasted, squandered by the Government.

Let me bring to the attention of the House the revenues, the direct tax on persons, and I take this from an official secret Government document that was leaked to the Opposition.

There is no denying that this was a secret document, the Government has already acknowledged that.

An Hon. Member: Who denied it?

Mr. Boudria: This document claims that the Government will by this measure reduce the revenues in the year 1986-87 by $600 million by removing capital gains tax; by removing that it will lose $600 million. It will lose $920 million by the elimination of the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax. Those are the moneys that it will lose in the year 1986-87, the year we are starting very soon, they year that we are almost in for tax purposes.

In terms of expenditures, what will it use that money for? Well, let us look at some of the Government uses of those moneys. Is it going to spend more on agriculture? No, it is going to spend $50 million less according to the same document. Well, who will it go to? It is not going to the farmers. Will it go to other areas such as improving transport? No, it will reduce $50 million there as well. Where are the increases? Let us look very carefully at this document and we will find the increases in spending of this Tory Government, this Government that you and I are starting to get so fed up with, and that Canadian people by the millions are now rejecting. This Government is squandering that money. It is reducing revenues by eliminating taxes to the rich and is not giving that money to those who need it. That's the story of the Conservative Party, that is why it has lost the confidence of the people of Canada. That is why a greater number of Canadians would now favour someone other than the Tories to be running the affairs of the nation.

As a matter of fact, the majority of Canadians would now prefer that the Liberals were in charge. That fall of power, Mr. Speaker, that fall of favour by the Tories is going to continue because this Government has lost touch—it never had it in my view—with the aspirations of the people. Now, of course, that places the Liberal Party not as the Official Opposition, but the official government in waiting of Her Majesty.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and Related Statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax, as reported, (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; and Motion No. 4 (Mr. Johnston) (p. 9733).

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I also welcome this opportunity to take part in the debate on Bill C-84. I was interested a while ago in what the Hon. Member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers) had to say, namely that the ultimate purpose of Bill C-84 was to provide for a fair and balanced tax system. I find it incredible to hear such words being used about a measure that has such a direct and brutal impact on those Canadians who unfortunately are not in a position to cope with life's financial problems. This is nothing new, Mr. Speaker, because in the nearly eighteen months we have been here, to my knowledge the vast majority if not all of the Government's proposals have always been aimed at getting money, which in the circumstances is a praiseworthy and valid endeavour as such.

The deficit being what it is, I believe we have a collective responsibility to consider ways of identifying solutions that will help improve the economic situation. Everybody is aware of this, on your side as well as ours, but, and that is where the official Opposition comes into play, the Government's way of achieving these objectives certainly does not meet the criteria for what could be considered acceptable in the present situation. The fact is that almost every single Government initiative is aimed at taking money from people who do not have the resources to cope with these increases.

On the weekend and at the beginning of this week, it was announced that the Prime Minister and his Cabinet, in an act of altruism, had refused a salary increase. So far, so good. As far as the symbolism of the thing goes, it is all very admirable, except that the news item, Mr. Speaker, mentioned the salary the Prime Minister and members of his Cabinet would be getting. The head of the family who is watching this on TV and who has two or three or four dependent children and earns a salary of $15,000, $16,000 or $17,000 is not particularly impressed because, like many people in Canada he needs every single cent he earns to make ends meet. Those are the people who need support, who need help, who need a breather, some kind of break so as to be able to come to grips with their financial problems.

Under the present circumstances, wealthier people, people who are better off could assume their real responsibilities and make a greater contribution than the Government expects from them to bring down the deficit. Even though the Bill affects people who are well off, high income people, it does not really amount to much because, the situation being what it is, those people who are rich and fairly well off could think in terms of the community and of their fellow citizens and lower their standard of living to a certain extent. This would make it possible to maintain, sustain and guarantee a certain balance within our Canadian society, for those people have untold opportunities to lighten their tax burden. Just as an example, I think that capital gains is a good illustration. Supposing that the measures contained in Bill C-84 affect a hypothetical case or file, it would be possible to collect an additional amount of $2,000 or $3,000 from a taxpayer; yet, over the next two or three years that same taxpayer will be able to make a profit of $30,000, $35,000 or $40,000 as a result of the capital gains incentive offered by the Government.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, people who earn $20,000 or less are not in a position—in the short, medium or long term—to benefit directly or indirectly from the measure which allows Canadian taxpayers to deduct their capital gains up to a fantastic amount. The only people who stand to gain anything at all are those who are rich and well off, those who have jobs and make profits, those who are therefore quite capable of coping with just about any financial difficulty. Mr. Speaker, low wage earners have no such opportunity, they cannot claim such tax exemptions, and they are the victims of the system which, given the hard times we are going through, should help them but instead saddles them with so many direct and indirect taxes and surtaxes.

Mr. Speaker, we have to realize that the rich are badly outnumbered by the poor. Although there are legions of poorer people, the way this Government behaves shows that their lobbying does not really weigh much in the balance. What amazes me is that it does not seem to register that those taxpayers, average Canadians, are consumers, they create jobs and keep the economy going. The minute their ability to pay is substantially reduced, it means that they have precious little left to spend. Inevitably this will result in a sluggish economy.

As far as I am concerned, I just cannot let the Government go ahead with this initiative without expressing the indignation of the vast majority of my constituents who, for the past 18 months, have been shocked by the Government's obstinacy to reduce the deficit on the backs of those who cannot afford it, who are unable to pay a little more than what they are paying already and which is already too much.

These taxpayers are aware, as you are and as we all are, that our country is faced with an enormous debt and that we must strive collectively to improve the financial situation. But what they feel and unfortunately cannot always express, and it is our responsibility as the Opposition to speak out on their behalf, because you are totally unaware of it, what they want to say is this: Get the money from those who are able to pay. Leave us alone for a few years, so that we can breath. We are experiencing difficulties and we cannot sacrifice ourselves more than we have already been doing in the last few years.

Mr. Speaker, the reason I chose to take part in this debate is to denounce once more this absolutely unacceptable and intolerable decision of the Government to get the money from the low-income earners and to leave alone the affluent, the rich, in the hope that they might invest.

This is an approach which I find totally unacceptable under the circumstances, and I say to you: Go on like this and the Canadian people will soon show you, through opinion polls, what they think of this approach and this type of administration.

[English]

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have a chance to speak on Bill C-84, the income tax Bill, and particularly the deindexation of the income tax scales. The impact of that decision made by the Government will be very disadvantageous, particularly for young Canadians and lower income Canadians.

The entire Budget was a very regressive document. Not only did it deindex the family allowance benefits and old age pension benefits but it deindexed the income tax scales. According to the projections of the Department of Finance for 1985-86, the increase in income tax collected due to this deindexation will amount to some $80 million. By the first full fiscal year in which the provision will be in effect, that figure will be $570 million. By fiscal year 1990-91, the income tax collected will be increased each year by $4.36 billion. That is a massive tax increase.

That massive tax increase can be compared with the publicly advertised position of the Conservative Party in 1980. The Government has really broken faith with the commitments it made at that time. In 1980, the Conservative Party put out an advertisement which read: "You've heard a lot about the Constitution lately but how much have you heard about deindexing of the income tax scale?" This ad which was placed in the public media at that time indicated that a person earning $15,000 per year would in fact pay some $217 more per year in income tax because of the deindexation. Now, five years later, the Conservatives are bringing in the exact legislation which they spent their Party's money opposing in 1980. The advertisement goes on to say that the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada is providing the opposition. Well, it is not providing any opposition to this regressive tax measure today.

If one looks at other parts of the Budget, one can see that the Government has really broken faith with the people. The Budget of last May 23 provided a $500,000 lifetime capital gains tax exemption for farmers, but on December 4 the Government introduced a minimum alternative tax which will mean that a farmer who is planning to retire and wants to sell his farm suddenly is faced with the fact that his capital gain is subject to a 25 per cent or 27 per cent minimum tax depending on the provincial tax scale. What was given in the Budget on May 23 is taken away on December 4. We have seen that happen in many aspects of the Budget.

On November 8, 1984, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) gave his economic statement. The Government provided the farmers with a reduction in the excise tax on farm fuel. Not only the excise tax of three cents per litre but also the petroleum compensation charge of 1.8 cents a litre were provided in the economic statement on black Thursday, November, 8, 1984. On May 1, the Government removed the pretroleum compensation charge and the exemption and farmers started to pay an additional 1.8 cents per litre for gasoline. On September 1, an additional 2 cents per litre was provided for. That effectively took away 3.8 cents of the tax exemption which the Conservative Party campaigned so vigorously on, and that was done within the space of nine or ten months.

On January 1, the Government imposed a 1 per cent sales tax on everything everyone in this country buys, but especially on farm fuels and equipment. That will cost the agricultural industry some $70 million this year in farm input costs. If we look at the situation in agriculture today, we find that one of its great problems is high input costs. Therefore we have an industry which is suffering great uncertainty now being charged this additional tax of some $70 million per year and this is being a done at a time when it certainly cannot be afforded.

If one looks at the projections of the Budget of last May 23, we see that those projections show that the personal income tax surcharge runs only for two years whereas the deindexation of the income tax scale will run on indefinitely. It becomes greater and greater each year because it is cumulative. If one looks at the special taxation on banks, one sees that it also will last only a couple of years and then it is done away with. The reduction in taxes with respect to the Petroleum Gas Revenue Tax is being taken away and those funds will be transferred from the ordinary working Canadian to the large multinational oil companies at a time when ordinary working Canadians can ill afford it.

The idea of deindexation of the income tax scales will be very harmful to low income Canadians. Indexation was brought in by the Leader of the Liberal Party (Mr. Turner) when he was the Minister of Finance. It was an idea which at that time was endorsed by the Hon. Robert Stanfield, the then Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, and it was something which the Party during 1980 said should be protected. What Hon. Members of the Conservative Party should do here this afternoon is stand in their place in support of the stand their Party took in 1980 and demand that the indexation of the income tax scales be retained. In their own advertisements the Tories say that a person who earns $15,000 will pay $217 a year more with deindexation. A person earning $25,000 will pay $426 a year more in tax and a person earning $35,000 will pay $547 a year more in tax. It is very apparent that this decision to deindex the personal income tax scales is going to be extremely harmful to average and low income Canadians and I certainly hope that the Government will reconsider this matter and decide that it is not in the best interests of Canadians over the long haul, and, therefore, withdraw this provision and accept the amendment which has been put forward by our finance critic.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the thrust of the subject matter of the amendment is with respect to the deindexing of the personal income tax. It is just one of the many bad proposals in the Budget of last May. The idea of indexing came forward in the first place in order to make sure that the income tax system operated fairly, especially for lower and middle income Canadians. The objective of the concept was to make sure that people did not pay higher taxes simply because of the upward movement in the cost of living. Because of the support and promotion of the idea by the Conservatives when they were in opposition, it is really reprehensible that one of the very first things they do once in office is to begin to erode this fundamental concept of ensuring the fairness of our tax system for middle and lower income Canadians. Look at the results of this unfair proposal along with the other unfair proposals in the Budget of last May with respect to increasing personal income taxes. Over the next five years those earning $15,000 a year will have a 36 per cent tax increase. Those earning $30,000—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. I am very sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

[Translation]

Order, please! It being 5 p.m., the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

[English]

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I presume that you take it that I call it five o'clock so that I will have the floor the next time this measure is before the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Yes, I presume the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) will be able to continue from where he left off when we resume debate on this amendment.

PUBLIC PENSIONS REPORTING ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Mr. W. Paul McCrossan (York-Scarborough) moved that Bill C-255, an Act to impose reporting requirements with respect to public pension plans and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, be read the second time and referred to a legislative Committee.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise today to introduce Bill C-255, the Public Pensions Reporting Act.

As Members will be aware, last year the all-Party committee on the Reform of the House chaired by the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) brought forth recommendations to strengthen the role of the Private Member. The Committee recommended that starting in the new year some Private Members' legislation be allowed to come to a vote. Members will be aware that today is the first Private Members' Hour in the new year. This Bill is non-partisan in nature and ensures that all Members of Parliament as well as the public have available to them timely information concerning the extent of the public pension commitments made by the Government. I hope that today we can launch a new era in parliamentary practice whereby Private Members' Bills are passed on second reading to be studied in committee and indeed subsequently allowed to come back into the House for final consideration.

This Bill is admittedly long and apparently complex for a Private Member's Bill, but in reality the concepts are simple. The Bill is designed as a "freedom of information" Bill for Members of Parliament concerning the cost of Government pension promises. There are three aspects to the Bill. The first ensures that at least every three years, estimates of the costs of Government pension plans are calculated. The plans subject to the Act include all Government plans affecting members of the public, such as the CPP, OAS, Guaranteed Income Supplement, and spouses benefits. In addition, all plans affecting Government employees are covered such as the Public Service Superannuation Act, the Armed Forces Superannuation Act, the RCMP Superannuation Act, as well as the Members' and Judges' plans. The second aspect of the Bill is to set a time limit for preparation of these reports. The time provided is 18 months. A third provision of the Bill requires that these reports be tabled in the House by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) within 30 days of receipt.

Why is such a bill needed? Pension plans are long term commitments. Often it is very inexpensive to promise benefits today that will not be paid for 20, 30 or 40 years in the future. Members of Parliament and the public have an obligation to ensure that the promises we make can be met, and this requires that we know the anticipated costs well in advance. The concepts in this Bill are not new. Since 1980 the Auditor General has been qualifying his opinion on Canada's audited financial statements when he certifies the public accounts of Canada. In his reservations concerning the financial obligations of Canada, he notes that billions of dollars relating to incurred pension promises have not been recorded. He summarizes by saying: "In my opinion, all these financial obligations should be appropriately recorded and reported in the financial statements to provide a more complete disclosure of liabilities." Similarly, in last year's Report of the Auditor General to the House of Commons, he devoted an entire chapter to the effect that Members of Parliament and the public do not have adequate information concerning the estimated costs of the OAS and CPP programs. Sections 2.5 and 2.6 of his report read:

[Translation]

We are concerned that Members of Parliament do not have adequate information to assess and understand fully both long and short-term financial implications of public pension programs. Given the magnitude of the costs, an increasing elderly population, and the complexity of other factors affecting these programs, it is reasonable to assume that there should be quantification and a periodic review of long-term financial implications—

We are also concerned that the quality of information provided to Parliament through the Estimates and annual reports has deteriorated, with the result that there is, in our opinion, insufficient information for Members of Parliament to assess the financial performance of the programs.

[English]

Of course it is not just the Auditor General who has been pointing out the need for this information to be in the hands of Members of Parliament. The Parliamentary Task Force on Pension Reform, chaired by the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith), faced the same problem in 1983 of inadequate data in trying to come up with recommendations for a new national pension benefit system for Canada. Recommendation 2.2 of the report reads: "The task force recommends that the Minister of Finance table in the House of Commons every five years, in conjunction with the regular review of CPP contribution rates proposed in recommendation 4.1, a comprehensive set of cost projections for the public pension system and other major programs such as health care that represent significant transfers of resources to the elderly in order to promote public debate about the extent and sustainability of current commitments."

Similarly, Section 7.1 of the report concerning pension plans for Government employees have recommended that "public sector occupational plans should be governed by the same general rules as other occupational pension plans. They should reflect a full and true costing of all promised benefits, and these costs should be fully disclosed to employees and to the public."

Currently there are a variety of reporting practices. For the CPP, reports are prepared every five years and filed on a reasonably timely basis. However, for the benefits provided under the OAS Act, there is no reporting to Parliament whatever of the anticipated future costs of the program. Similarly, practices vary with respect to the public sector occupational funds. For the Public Service, RCMP, and Armed Forces plans, there is a requirement that the plans be valued every five years. In practice, the Government actuary prepares the reports every three years. However, there is no stipulated time frame in which these reports must be tabled in the House.

At the end of last October, the Minister of Finance tabled several reports concerning these plans. These were the 1979 and 1984 report on the RCMP plan, and the 1980 report on the Public Service Superannuation Act. Similarly, in November the Minister of Finance tabled the 1982 report for Members of Parliament. Surely Members of Parliament are entitled to more timely information than data which is six years old. Finally, there is no requirement whatsoever that valuation reports concerning pensions be tabled under the Judges' Act. This posed a problem for the recent Lang Commission on judges compensation and as part of that report, the Commission had to ask the Government's chief actuary to estimate sample costs for judges' pensions.

I am sure that all Members of Parliament have an interest in ensuring that the promises we make to our employees and to the public of Canada are going to be met and that the promises we make can be afforded. However, there are frequently articles in the press which point out that Canada is about to experience the most dramatic age shift ever seen in a western industrialized country. In 1965, when the CPP was introduced, Canada was the youngest country demographically in the Western World with both heavy immigration and high birth rates. Since the days of the baby boom we have had the sharpest fall in birth rates and Canada is now expected to become the oldest country demographically the world has ever seen by the year 2015. We have 30 years to plan for one of the greatest challenges ever to face any country. This Bill will ensure that Members of Parliament have the information necessary to do the appropriate planning in the eighties so that we can fulfil the moral commitments we make to today's workers when they retire in the next century.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I would like to preface my remarks this afternoon by indicating that my Party supports the basic principles enunciated in the Bill moved by the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan). At the beginning of my remarks I would like to recall, for the record, some of the recommendations that were made by the parliamentary task force on pension reform. One of the major ones involved the Canada and Quebec Pension Plans. We recommended the introduction of a requirement for a regular comprehensive accounting by the federal and provincial governments of the purposes for which CPP funds are allocated and of the benefits, financial and economic, anticipated from these investments.

You may have been shown by some of your own constituents, Mr. Speaker, a new system by which the Canada Pension Plan actuarial basis, from which individuals will derive their Canada Pension Plan funds when they reach the age of 65, is being updated. That was the beginning of the process whereby one would hope that the Government, utilizing the information that is being requested in this Bill, can educate the Canadian public as to the need to understand the way in which retirement systems operate in our country. The Member for York-Scarborough has said it very well. There is a degree of uncertainty and, I believe, ignorance about the way in which public pension plans operate in the country.

I know that this Bill encompasses more than simply the public pension plan. The Member is, in addition, talking about the need to have a regular accounting procedure for the pensions that are payable to people involved in the armed services and the RCMP, Members of Parliament and the Senate, judges, and members of the Public Service Alliance. I highly recommend that those reports be made to the House of Commons on a regular basis so that Members of Parliament, who will have to deal with the problems that will be created by the doubling of the population over the age of 65 in the foreseeable future, will have the tools at hand in order to have a good public policy debate in the country. I do not think there would by any Member of Parliament who would advocate that ignorance is a substitute for policy or policy debate in the nation. Therefore, I highly recommend that area.

I am going to conclude my remarks because I know that my colleague from Ottawa-Vanier wants to make some remarks as well. Many people in his constituency will be affected by this Private Member's Bill. There was a Gallup poll released some 10 days ago which indicated an amazing degree of ignorance about the way in which public pension plans operate in the country. It indicated that far too large a percentage of our people do not understand the basic fundamentals of a pension plan system, both in the private and public sectors.

I think that inherent in the need for a public policy debate in the country must be a sufficient knowledge level. I would like to read one paragraph concerning the financing of the Canada and Quebec Pension Plans from my own report, Mr. Speaker. It is at the introduction and states:

> The Canada and Quebec Pension Plans are not bankrupt. They are not in serious financial difficulty. Fears that they will be unable to meet pension commitments in the year 2001 or 2031 are unfounded. The claim of young Canadians on future C/QPP benefit payments is not in jeopardy.

That is so necessary to reiterate because there is a fundamental difference in the ways in which we require private pension plans and public pension plans to be funded in the country, and for very good reasons. I know that the Member for York-Scarborough is well aware of them as he appeared before my committee as a witness and is now here in the House of Commons as a Member of Parliament. I highly recommend that the Private Member's Bill be given due consideration and submitted to the committee. I commend the Member for bringing forward this suggestion.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, at the outset I would like to indicate that my Party has no difficulty with this Bill and, in fact, is quite supportive of it. Bill C-255, put forward by the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan), is really all about information and about giving adequate information to, not only Members of Parliament, but the people who will be beneficiaries of the various pension plans which are in existence across the country. I, personally, do not see that this particular Bill will require too much debate because the arguments put forward in it make it self-evident that that information is required. It is not only self-evident from the Member's Bill, but from many contributions that have been made over past years on the need for this information.

Both the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) and the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough referred to the report "Better Pensions for Canadians" that was put forward by the Committee on Pension Reform and tabled in the House in the last Parliament. Part of the report reads:

> Plan sponsors could be required to make substantially more information available to pension plan members and their spouses. Employers could be required to provide data each year concerning the employee's accrued benefits and the financial status of the plan. Plan administrators could be required to make information available on the extent to which the fund covers pension liabilities, lists of assets, actuarial balance sheets, the present value of benefits earned to date and the like.

That, essentially, is the thrust of what this Bill would do if the House of Commons agrees to refer it to a committee where it can be thoroughly examined and before which Canadians can appear as witnesses to give testimony to the need for such legislation.

At the outset I said that this Bill was about information. I would like to go a bit beyond what the Bill talks about to a couple of other areas. The Hon. Member for Sudbury referred to a press report put out by Steve Kerstetter of Canadian Press a couple of weeks ago. It dealt with the lack of understanding that Canadians have of the pension system in the country. If you examine the pension system, you will find it is not surprising that that is the case. For many years our pension system has grown up as a hodgepodge of bits and pieces that senior citizens, upon retirement, can lay claim to. The need for pension reform has been debated at some length in the House and across the country ever since I came here in 1980.

On the question of information the Canadian Press story dealt with an internal poll that was commissioned by the present Government on the attitudes of Canadians toward their pension system. That poll, I rather suspect, led to some measures that were contained in the Budget affecting pensioners which we all know about. Certainly pensioners made their arguments to the Government in a very clear way. What the Government was trying to do to old age pensioners was totally mistaken or misinformed and they were not going to have any part of it.

I think that those elements in the May 23 Budget arose from that poll. It would have been very useful to Members of the House to have that information before them in order to do the job that we were elected to do in this place, that is, to look after the best interests of all Canadians including taxpayers and pensioners. I would not be interested, for example, if the information that we are talking about in this Bill were used to attack the principle of pensions. However, I do not think that is the intent of this Bill.

I think it would be extremely useful, not only to today's senior citizens, but to all those individuals who are looking forward to retirement over the next several years, to fully understand how a pension system is structured. I would think that they may very well want to use the information that we are arguing for today in the House of Commons to seek even better pensions for Canadians who have given their lives to this country and who have every right to expect a decent, adequate standard of living upon retirement.

While we are talking about how much pensions cost and whether the country can afford them, perhaps we should go a bit further and obtain information that was not given to Members of Parliament such as the amount of taxes that are not collected through the tax expenditure account. For example, I would like to know how many Canadians are not paying their fair share of taxes each fiscal year and not sharing the wealth in the country so that we can do the proper thing for retired citizens and making sure that they do have an adequate system.

I am not one of those who agrees with some of the arguments we have heard in the House that our social services have become so expensive that they are unmanageable and we can no longer afford to deliver adequate social services to people who need that benefit which stems from the Parliament of Canada. I think the arguments we have heard in support of that are very woolly-headed and very often are devious to the point that they are advanced in order to save individuals who are not paying their fair share of taxes from accepting their responsibility to the elderly in this country.

I would like to see more information provided to the House on our total tax expenditure account so that we can examine that in relation to what we are paying for the old age pension, the Canada Pension Plan or some of the other benefits for which people have worked very hard over the years.

I do not intend to take too much time in this debate because I am anxious to see this Bill referred to a committee, as I hope it will be, where I will have more to say about the information we require. I simply want to congratulate the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough for giving us an opportunity to say a few words in the House about this matter.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to take part in this debate on Bill C-255 which basically aims at providing Members of Parliament and Canadians generally with the information they need to examine and evaluate our most important social program, namely the Canadian pension system, including the pensions paid to retired members of the Armed Forces, Members of Parliament, judges, federal public servants, members of the RCMP, and so on.

Mr. Speaker, I am especially happy about this debate since I have spent many years, at least ten, trying to obtain some figures from the Government and information about the amounts involved in the pension plans of public servants, members of the Armed Forces and the RCMP.

I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan). As he himself has admitted, his Bill is complex, but it is relatively easy to understand if we consider that it includes three major elements, which basically ask the government to provide, through the Department of Finance and the Actuary of Canada, the information required to evaluate public pension funds.

I do not want to go over the three major parts of this Bill, but I think that it would be useful to remember them because the committee will certainly have the opportunity to examine this question further. Section 3 requires that the Chief Actuary of the Department of Insurance review certain public pension plans at least every three years. The second important clause, Section 4, requires the Chief Actuary to file with the Minister of Finance a cost certificate established in accordance with the review provided by Section 3 within 18 months after the review date.

And the third aspect, Clause 5, requires that the Chief Actuary of Canada, who comes under the Minister of Finance, and I quote:

> This clause would require the Chief Actuary of the Department of Insurance to file a valuation report with the Minister of Finance at the same time as he files a cost certificate and to follow the standards of the Canadian Institute of Actuaries in preparing the report.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to dwell on the matter, but I will remind you that since May, 1985, I have had a series of questions, 18 of them, on pages 20, 21 and 22 of the Order Paper as important such as what is the cost, what is the estimated balance of the Armed Forces Pension Fund Account ... Those are questions which I thought were essential to anyone who wanted to understand the whole issue of public pension funding. I am still waiting for the answers.

But on the other hand, in his answer to one of my questions, the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) said that of course they signed an agreement with the unions under which the Public Service Pension Fund could be managed jointly by a council of twelve appointed members representing both the unions and the employer.

Mr. Speaker, I find it quite acceptable and normal that this Government, which has signed an agreement with its employees, should now share with those employees and Members in this House the basic information that will help assess the costs of those plans.

I therefore find it totally acceptable that the Government should accept the Bill tonight, send it to committee, provide us with the information needed, answer questions on the Order Paper and follow through on its promise to co-operate and manage pension funds jointly with the public servants.

Mr. Speaker, I believe this is a most commendable Private Member's Bill, which seems basically to meet the right to information we feel is essential to good management.

As the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) suggested earlier, a simple information proposal that should be forthcoming ... And I remember that in 1977, when we discussed the famous Government measure to de-index federal civil servants' pensions, I then opposed that measure, not only because I felt it was unfair, but because the information available was totally inadequate and often non-existent. Governments always seemed reluctant to share their figures with us.

[English]

In conclusion, if information is required to deal with the pension question, I think that information is fundamental in order to assess some of the impact and judge the assumptions that are made. We all understand that these are difficult questions with which to deal. Sometimes the actuaries will say that our assumptions are difficult to come to grips with because they are basically dealing with interest rates in the years to come, inflation rates in the years to come and the increase in the salary envelope in the years to come. The actuaries seem to come to grips with these unknown figures well.

I do not know anyone in the House, except perhaps the Member who introduced the Bill, who could logically and rationally argue how one can accurately state what the inflation rate, interest rates or the salary envelope will be in the next three years. However, that is not for me to argue here. I am not competent to make actuarial presumptions and projections of that nature but I think we should congratulate the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan) for bringing forward a Bill which answers many of my questions. It will give us information which we require to be able to pass good judgment on these pension plans. Again, I congratulate him and hope that the Government accepts the Bill and passes it with—

—as we say in French, with celerity, and that we will go to committee, Mr. Speaker, and consider this Bill which to my mind is very important.

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in the debate on Bill C-255, since it concerns a subject this Government takes very seriously, and I am referring to disclosure of information.

Although a large number of public pension plans are mentioned in this Bill, I want to restrict my comments to its impact on the universal Old Age Security and Canada Pension Plan program, which is a compulsory contributory program.

First of all, regarding the Canada Pension Plan, the proposed changes in present reporting requirements would reduce the time between actuarial reports from five to three years and provide that such reports estimate for every third year of a period of not less than thirty years, the annual cost of contributions to the Canada Pension Plan as a percentage of the total contributory earnings.

In accordance with the present legislation, the Department of Insurance prepares, at least once every five years, a report based on an actuarial audit of the application of the Act and the state of the Canada Pension Plan account.

Obviously, requests for detailed information covering a period of thirty years are far less demanding than the present requests and would be no problem at all for the Actuarial Branch of the Department of Insurance.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill comes at the right time. Its proposals concerning the need for examining public plans at regular and frequent intervals are entirely in accordance with a recent agreement concluded by federal and provincial finance Ministers.

As announced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), the Canada Pension Plan's financing will in future be examined every five years, to ensure that the Plan remains on a solid financial basis and that the planned series of premium increases will have the expected results.

There can be no doubt as to the importance of regular reporting. Both legislators and the public must have an understanding of the long term cost of the Plan if they are to assess fully the impact of any changes that may be proposed in the Plan's financing or premium levels. And even if some might challenge the need for filing an actuarial report on the Canada Pension Plan every three years instead of every five as is the case today, I certainly do not question the purpose of the proposals contained in this Bill.

Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's proposals about the need for preparing an actuarial report every three years on the Old Age Security Act are in line with the recommendations made in the past, including those of the Auditor General of Canada.

For instance, in his report for the financial year ending on March 31, 1985, the Auditor General deplored the fact that we as Members of Parliament did not have sufficient information at our disposal to be able to evaluate and fully understand the financial repercussions, both short and long term, of public pension programs. He pointed out in particular that the long-term costs of those programs are not regularly evaluated, except in the case of the Canada Pension Plan. In addition, despite earlier recommendations by parliamentary committees, we still have no mechanism to make a regular assessment of the long-term financial effects and commitments of those programs.

I can assure the House that those recommendations have been given every consideration and will be examined very closely. In fact, the Department of Finance, the Department of National Health and Welfare, the Department of Insurance and the Office of the Comptroller General are currently holding consultations as a result of the comments of the Auditor General. No effort is being spared to study this question and define the appropriate powers. However, given the professional background of the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan), I am sure he is aware of the problems to be solved before we can proceed with actuarial evaluations of the old age security pension program.

This program features three separate benefits: the basic old age security pension and the two benefits subject to a means test, namely the guaranteed income supplement and the spouse's allowance.

The basic benefit is paid to all persons 65 years of age and over who meet the necessary residency requirements. As many studies have already been carried out concerning the aging process in Canada, we can predict, with a fair measure of accuracy, the number of people who will be over 65 years of age in the distant future. Even if changes in the fertility rate have no effect on projections, factors such as changes in mortality rate and future immigration policies will have an impact on the cost of the basic old age security pension and should be assessed; even with such reservations, the projections could prove useful.

As far as the old age security program is concerned, the real difficulties resulting from the proposals in this Bill arise when we consider the benefits requiring a means test. First of all, there is a guaranteed income supplement for low-income pensioners, and the spouse allowance, for spouses between the age of 60 and 64 of low-income pensioners, as well as low-income widows and widowers in this age group.

I say difficulties because it would be really difficult to assess the long term costs of the two elements in the old age security program which require a means test. It would be difficult, but not impossible.

What Hon. Members should know is that it will take some time to determine the variables necessary to establish the long term costs of these benefits.

I should like to emphasize a number of the most important factors involved, so that you may better see the kind of variables required. To determine the future cost of benefits requiring a means test, we must obviously be able to assess the income of people 60 years of age and over in the future.

Today, most guaranteed income supplement recipients are women who, when they retire after having spent the greater part of their adult lives working at home, find themselves with little or no income other than the basic old age security pension. On the other hand, if we consider the rates of participation in the labour force over the past 20 years, we realize that things have changed. More and more married women are on the labour market. We can foresee therefore that a much greater number of women than today will collect superannuation benefits under the Canada Pension Plan or private pension plans. However, important studies will have to be carried out to determine for instance the average career salary of women.

Another important variable to be determined is the Canadian's future rate of saving. For instance, on the basis of information now available, we must determine how future tax incentives will affect the tendency of Canadians to save for their retirement. Also, we will have to determine how the proposal contained in the 1985 Budget (to provide a lifetime ceiling for income tax deductible registered pension plan contributions) could affect the long-term use of this retirement saving instrument by the average Canadian. Unfortunately, the data now available are mostly cross section. In other words, these are data which reflect actual situations at a given time. They are of a very limited usefulness when we try to establish lifetime savings table or carry out cumulative studies.

I know that research work is being carried out in that area. Statistics Canada is looking at various longitudinal data which will help check and compile a number of trends that will give us a better idea of the long-term savings and consumer patterns. However, a certain period of time may be needed before reliable data can be gathered.

Besides the lack of data, another difficulty must be overcome to cope with the proposals contained in the legislation concerning the Old Age Security program. Private pensions are a most important aspect of our retirement income system—the extent to which future retirees benefit will impact directly on the cost of the Guaranteed Income Supplement program.

However, the regulating of private pension funds does not come under the jurisdiction of the federal Government alone. Actually, the Provinces are responsible for the majority of such plans. It is therefore difficult to foresee what changes will be made in that respect, and what the effects will be on private-source income that will be available to pensioners.

For instance, Bill C-90, an Act to amend the Pension Benefit Standards Act, was tabled for first reading on December 17, 1985. It contains various amendments aimed at improving the protection afforded by private pensions to people working in a number of areas under federal jurisdiction. Although we hope the Provinces will pass similar measures, we cannot be sure of it at this point.

In view of those difficulties, I am sure Hon. Members will recognize it would be a very complex task for a 35- or a 40-year-old today to say on which private pension he or she will be able to rely at age 65. We cannot therefore know what amount that person will be entitled to 30 years down the road under the Guaranteed Income Supplement program.

To sum up, Mr. Speaker, I would like to repeat that even though we have a rather precise idea of the sources of income of people now 65 or over, it is not easy to say whether those who will reach that age in the future will have the same sources available or whether these will account for the same percentage of income as is now the case.

From a purely mathematical standpoint, of course, we could take what we now know of present pensioner's finances and project that into the future. However, the reliability of conclusions that could be derived from such an exercise should raise serious doubts.

Mr. Speaker, if we are to adopt the principles stated in Bill C-255, let us make sure we have enough time available so that estimates now being prepared concerning the Old Age Security program can be of some use. Otherwise, Mr. Speaker, they might turn out to be of no use whatsoever to the legislators, or dangerously misleading, which would be quite contrary to the intent of the Bill.

In conclusion, I would like to extend my sincere thanks to the Hon. Member for having brought this question before the House. It is of the utmost importance that Members of our Parliament should have the best possible information available when they make decisions that can impact on the welfare of present and future generations.

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak in support of Bill C-255. I applaud the initiative of the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan) with regard to the Bill. I had the privilege of seconding it when it was first presented to the House on December 2, 1985.

In simple terms, the Bill requires periodic actuarial valuations of six Acts including the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, the Public Service Superannuation Act and four others, as well as the Old Age Security Act and the Canada Pension Plan. In a way this is a breakthrough for Government. It is a first. It has never been done before. It is high time that we took on this type of accountability as a Government and shared the facts with Canadians. We simply want the same standards of control and accountability applied to the federal Government of Canada as are applied in the private sector.

Some previous Governments have refused this information for decades. However, in recent years, as a matter of fact in the last five years, the Auditor General of Canada has said that he has had insufficient information concerning the employee pensions of the Government of Canada. In line with our pledge for a more fiscally responsible Government, we have a Bill, thank to the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough, to share the facts and to share the truth about the six plans as well as the two other major pension plans so that we know how viable they are. If contributions need to be increased, so be it. If pay-outs have to be modified rather than increase the premiums in order that the plans be actuarially sound, so be it. However, let us not continue to not divulge this information and thereby not be accountable for future generations to come. We would not want to burden them or to have a surprise some year hence, perhaps in a decade or two, where that generation of workers and taxpayers are burdened with some huge, unfunded liability. In other words, we have an accountability and a responsibility to move this Bill forward for further conscientious debate. As some previous speakers have indicated, it will not be easy; it is a difficult, complex task. We are honoured to have had the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough leading this discussion. As I understand it, he is the first actuary ever elected to the House of Commons. It is fitting that he was the one who initiated the particular Bill.

As complex as it might be, I heartily endorse the initiative to get on with it so that the people of Canada will share the facts about the health of the various plans and share in the solutions where there may be shortfalls. Above all, it speaks to the accountability which Canadians expect from the Government. The Government has to be as accountable and as responsible as possible in the running of its fiscal affairs. In the long run, that not only means looking after the contribution of the stewards to these plans but hopefully eliminating any liability which might befall the taxpayers of the country if they were not properly looked after.

In closing, I applaud the Hon. Member and look forward to further contributions to this vital piece of legislation.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell the House about the position taken by the Government following the tabling for first reading of Bill C-255 by the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan) on December 2. This private Bill would require the Minister of Finance to table in Parliament triennial actuarial valuations of pension plans established under the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act, the Judges Act, the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, the Public Service Superannuation Act, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act.

Moreover, the Bill would require an actuarial valuation of the Canada Pension Plan every three years instead of every five years as is now the case.

It would also require a detailed estimate of benefits payable under the Old Age Security Act.

Mr. Speaker, the Government views as valid the concept of more periodic actuarial valuations of all public pension plans. Indeed, this corresponds to recommendations already made by the Auditor General, and as mentioned earlier, by the Special Parliamentary Committee on Pension Reform.

The tabling of such reports will allow Parliament and the general public to have a better overview of the long term liabilities of the Government related to public pension plans under its jurisdiction.

Mr. Speaker, such standards would also be consistent with the standards set by the Government for private pension plans. The Government therefore agrees to refer this Bill to a parliamentary committee for further study, and having said so, Mr. Speaker, I shall ask for a vote.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order. The question? Very well.

[English]

Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Mr. McCrossan, seconded by Mr. Brisco, moves that Bill C-255, an Act to impose reporting requirements with respect to public pension plans and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Accordingly the Bill stands referred to a legislative committee. I think all Hon. Members would agree to calling it six o'clock.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS—ABUSE OF THE ELDERLY

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, on December 3 I rose in the House to ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) about the Government's plans concerning the issue of abuse of the elderly. I mentioned at that time that I had attended a symposium in October which was set up as a special task force in the City of North York by Mayor Lastman to look into this vital problem. It has been operating for about a year under the chairmanship of Doctor Jerry Cooper and is co-ordinated by his wife Eleanor.

As you well know Canada's population is changing. As one of the speakers a little earlier in the day mentioned, at one point in time Canada had the youngest average population in the world. Now, within a decade or two, according to forecasts, we will have one of the higher average ages of population in the world.

It is very important that men and women get involved in looking at the abuse of the elderly. I know Mayor Lastman, who I have mentioned, originally had the foresight to set up a similar task force years ago on child abuse, when not many people thought there was a problem in this area. Thanks to that initiative it was looked into. There were indeed many problems in that area, and they were able to get on with some practical solutions.

The same thing will happen in this particular area where indeed there are different forms of abuse of the elderly. I think they fall into three categories: neglect, financial and physical. Neglect can take the form of overabuse of drugs, underabuse of drugs, patients in nursing homes being left unattended for many, many hours—people who need to be changed in bed or rolled over from one side to the other but left for hours without proper care. Loneliness is another factor that can be harsh and cruel if some measures are not taken to lessen this problem. I mentioned the financial aspect. That is a problem facing a number of seniors, and it can be the result of powers of attorney being taken from elderly people by relatives, although not really meant to be the case. It can also be the result of a loss of control of pension cheques or other funds, control that has in one way or another been taken from the elderly. We have all read of too many cases where the elderly have been victims of financial scams involving someone impersonating a police officer trying to catch some embezzler and being asked to take a certain amount of cash out of the bank. In this way some elderly citizens have lost their entire life savings.

This is such an important area I hope the federal Government will play an important role in research and analysis, but also in moving forward with practical action.

I commend the task force set up in North York for its approach. Two specific actions have been proposed by this task force. The one that we are very excited about is what they call a "brown bag approach". Seniors in North York will be asked to attend meetings at some of the community centres, beginning January 28. A number of pharmacists will be available at these locations. The seniors will be asked to literally put their pills and drugs into a brown paper bag and consult with one of these pharmacists who will in a very helpful and constructive way examine these drugs.

As we well know, some people may take a certain pill to help them sleep, and another pill for a different reason; they may be taking a number of pills. They perhaps visited different pharmacists and could be getting conflicting advice. Perhaps pharmacist did not know about all the other pills the person was taking.

I applaud this approach, I think it is most useful and that it will help many seniors in a practical way. We hope this will be done on an ongoing basis. I know Mrs. Eleanor Cooper, who is helping on this, plans to contact some of the people later; in other words, do a bit of a post-test analysis to see how the whole project might be improved still further.

As to the subject I mentioned, there are two practical approaches. One concerns tackling the problem of loneliness, and we know how difficult that can be, those of us who have known a number of seniors over the years and who have visited senior citizens homes. I have at least six or eight in my own riding that I visit from time to time.

The interesting project that is starting here is really a pen pal approach. Mrs. Cooper has matched a number of Canadian seniors in the Florida area with Canadian seniors here who have similar interests, starting a pen pal program. That one project, I would submit, could go a long way towards people establishing some pals they can write to, and perhaps visit from time to time. Rather than analysing things, ad infinitum, here's an approach that we think will bring some cheer and sunshine into some lives. I applaud that approach as well.

Lastly, just to touch on other things that are happening—this touches on the subject of loneliness as well—there are some interesting developments in England whereby they are trying to decrease the number of seniors who are literally forced to go to nursing homes. Many can remain in their own homes and be properly looked after by a nurse or a volunteer worker dropping in on them two or three times a day. In this way they are much happier. Not many seniors want to willingly leave their homes, their roots are there and they have many beautiful memories. I know we are trying similar things in Canada. Not only is this great for the seniors, but it is also a lot less costly to the public and to the taxpayers.

In closing, we intend to again contact the Hon. Minister of Health and Welfare on this issue. He has already said he wants to keep abreast of developments. We will keep him posted and we earnestly hope for his support and indulgence as we move towards real and happy solutions to this vital problem.

[Translation]

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, it is only quite recently that Government policies have begun to take abuse of the elderly into account. In the past, it was not generally believed that such a thing could happen. Admittedly, we have difficulty in recognizing and understanding such a phenomenon. However, in such cases, we must not close our eyes because we do not want to see.

The same happened for child abuse, which came to the notice of the public in the sixties when many people denied that it could be true, and the same also happened for battered women in the seventies. During the eighties, we have learned that abuse against the elderly is another very serious dimension of the problem of family violence.

Such abuse can take various forms. Abuse may include physical assault, shoving, and serious neglect, including failure to provide food, proper hygiene and medical care.

Psychological and social abuse may include exposure to isolation and withdrawal from society, lack of attention, verbal or emotional abuse and intimidation. Abuse may also occur in the area of financial resources if there is a withdrawal of financial support.

The kind of life led by the elderly may give us some clues to the reasons for this national tragedy which is now a major problem. We do not have a clear picture of the extent of the abuse inflicted on the elderly, but a major study carried out recently in Manitoba leads us to believe that an incredible 57,200 Canadians are suffering from abuse.

One-tenth of these people live in institutions, while two-thirds are living with relatives as part of the family.

Since many elderly persons are either unable to live on their own or lack the resources to do so, they remain in the family setting and end up having to depend on family members for the care they need. Even in the best of situations, this can create tensions for all concerned, and the situation may become explosive. Although it is a fact that abuse of the elderly can occur in institutions, those who are studying this question have attached particular importance to abuse in the family setting, where there is greater resistence to admitting the facts, and shame or fear of retaliation is a major factor. The elderly may believe there is no one to whom they can turn to help them with their problems or take care of their interests. There are a number of ways to remedy this, and with the financial support and expertise of the Government of Canada, provincial authorities and non-governmental organizations are becoming increasingly involved in finding ways to deal with this problem.

Through shared cost health programs, funds are available to community services to enable elderly people to stay at home for a longer time and thus avoid premature institutionalization, or else to give a respite to relatives who take care of them. Such services include for instance home care, meals on wheels, day care services for adults, and rest services designed for those who care for the elderly. Other programs—New Horizons, to name one—make it possible to benefit as much as possible from the ability and opportunities of senior citizens to lead a normal life by promoting social gatherings and a wide variety of community activities.

Thanks to the various departmental research and pilot programs, it is possible to give a positive response with respect to projects concerning all aspects of prevention or elimination of abuse of the elderly, and to projects aimed at finding practical ways to come up with worthwhile suggestions at the community level, including education and training.

Our Government is committed to implementing prevention, protection and treatment measures with respect to any kind of abuse of a person by another.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS—CANADA-UNITED STATES DISCUSSIONS. (B) CANADIAN POSITION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to follow up on a question I asked of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) yesterday with respect to the report on acid rain issued recently by the two special envoys, Mr. Davis for the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) and Mr. Lewis for the President of the United States.

I asked the Minister of the Environment to express an opinion about the report and to go beyond the report by reaffirming what I and many others believe to be the Canadian position which was, in my view, abandoned by the report. That position is that action needs to be taken now with respect to acid rain emissions on the American side of the border. I was not altogether happy with the answer given by the Minister of the Environment and I would like to tell the House why I think the envoy process has been such a disappointment.

At one point, I along with other members of the Special Committee on Acid Rain of the House had hoped what we might see a report coming forward from Messrs. Davis and Lewis that would do two things: recognize that acid rain is a serious trans-boundary pollution problem, something which the report did do, and call for some action on the part of the United States with respect to acid rain entering Canada from that country.

At one point, there was a rumour that Mr. Lewis might be recommending a $1-billion action program. That did not sound like what was needed. In fact, it fell far short of what was needed, but at that time I felt it would be at least a start, a significant step forward in that it was action. Instead, we have a recommendation that there be a five-year period in which voluntary research is entered into regarding the development of new technologies for controlling acid rain. There is no guarantee that this research will in fact take place because it will require, to a significant degree, the co-operation of American industries that are involved in the emission of acid rain. There is no telling what the attitude of those industries will be. It has not been positive to date and there is no reason to expect that it will suddenly change as a result of the report.

I think the Canadian Government is trying to make much out of little. That is understandable as it has to make the best of a bad situation. However, the fact is that the Canadian position has been further undermined. It was undermined at the Shamrock Summit when the Prime Minister, with a great deal of fanfare, said that acid rain was a number one problem and he was going to get something done about it. Instead, a year's study was agreed to, in this case through the envoy process. Now we have suffered another setback with the recommendation, which was agreed to by the Canadian envoy, that American polluters basically have another five years to think about it. This is totally unacceptable when we know there are technologies to control acid rain. Those technologies are available now.

If Mr. Davis could not get Mr. Lewis to say that action through the use of those technologies should begin now, he should at least have had the decency to issue a separate report. Mr. Davis had the option to issue a separate report. I know that from discussions we had with Mr. Lewis and Mr. Davis. He could well have issued a separate report and not have appeared to have given away the Canadian position that action is needed right now.

That is why I am very disappointed in the process. I admit I was critical of it to begin with, but I still held out the hope that somehow, in a mysterious way, some good might come out of what was basically, in my view, a bad idea. But that has not been the case as far as I am concerned.

I read in The Toronto Star the other day that the Government is considering delaying the introduction of the new emissions standards for Canadian automobiles. These emissions standards would bring us up to the same standards which apply in the United States of America. In this case, it is not a further undermining of the Canadian position, it is an undermining of Canada's ability to ask the United States to act with respect to its acid rain.

I hope the Parliamentary Secretary, who will be responding for the Minister, will take this opportunity to say that the report with respect to the Government contemplating a delay in the implemention of the new emission standards is a false report and that things will be proceeding on time.

I think it is important for us to realize that the envoys' report does not represent the kind of progress which some people opposite say it does. The Hon. Member for St. Catharines (Mr. Reid) earlier today, I believe, said that this is the first time an American administration had ever admitted that acid rain is a transboundary pollution problem. That is not true, Mr. Speaker. There was a memorandum of intent in 1980 which recognized that fact. What we are talking about is progress within the context of the Reagan administration. Canada's ambassador to Washington, Mr. Gottlieb, said that we finally moved the Americans off the dime. We finally moved the Reagan administration off the dime if Mr. Reagan accepts the report, and even if he accepts the report he still will be comfortable in his position that no action need be taken because the report he will be accepting recommends no action.

So I say that the envoy process has been a failure, Mr. Speaker. I am sorry to see the Government trying to exaggerate it. I think it would be better off to say: "It didn't work so let's try something else". It should not try to kid the Canadian people, the environmental community and all of us who are concerned about acid rain by trying to make much of what has turned out to be very, very little.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to clarify the Canadian position for the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie). I believe there could be no better testimony of the Canadian position than the action the Government has taken, as identified in March of last year. Subsequently, arrangements have been made with the provinces. Not all of them are finally complete but in Ontario, for example, things have really been done in a substantive way to meet our target of reducing the reductions by 50 per cent by 1994. We made a commitment and it was kept.

To answer the specific question regarding vehicle emissions, there is no substantive change in position. I can tell him that clearly. The one thing which was brought out recently in the news had to do with model years and how that might affect the introduction, if you like, of the emission controls. They were to be established in 1987 for the 1988 model year. However, the automobile manufacturers were concerned that those 1987 vehicles would be left with the emission controls which were not up to the standard we had intended. This would have happened because production of most 1988 models will start in September of 1987. Therefore, there may be a change in that date by several months to allow the manufacturer to finish with that model year. Therefore, there is no substantive change.

Mr. Blaikie: But all 1988 models will have to—

Mr. Gurbin: Exactly. Now, to come quickly to the envoy situation, I guess all of us would have preferred an absolutely final agreement. I think what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) had to say does says it best. He is quoted as advocating the need to develop a bilateral accord on acid rain. What we have with our envoy report is—yes, the 50 per cent that the Hon. Member talked about—a clear identification by the American administration of a real problem. I would have to argue with him as to whether or not there is any substance to it in terms of $1 billion or $5 billion. That, I think even he will admit, remains to be seen.

If this approach is agreed to there is the question of how industry will embrace it. If the American administration contributes $2.5 billion in the short term, and I do not know the exact time frame, that will represent a fairly substantial addressing of the problem. It will certainly not all involve research. It involves development of technology, just as our smelters here are developing technology, and INCO is an example of that. Apparently many American industrialists are at the stage now where they must make decisions on new plants and revitalization of their industry. They will take advantage of this program and they have asked for that type of support. There is a substantial dollar figure attached to this at a time of great restraint in both the U.S. and Canada.

Finally, I guess all of us could stand here and say this is less than we wanted. However, we have done our homework here in Canada. We have at the very minimum a significant step in being able to approach the final stage of a bilateral accord which will fully address the acid rain problem in Canada.

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION—MORATORIUM ON FORECLOSURES

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, on September 23 I put this question to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise):

> Last week he announced he was placing a moratorium on the foreclosures of farms by the Farm Credit Corporation which are running at approximately 14 per week. We have learned today that the American dollar will be devalued which will further depress commodity prices. Would the Minister tell the House when he is going to bring in assistance to farmers in order to arrest the situation of foreclosures on farms? Introducing a moratorium does not really help the farmers. I wonder if the Minister could make that clear.

Sad to say, Mr. Speaker, since that time the Minister has really taken no action. There has been no decision to bring in a new policy on farm credit assistance. I learned a couple of days ago that as of December 1, 1985 the arrears with the Farm Credit Corporation has skyrocketed to $277 million, an increase of 48 per cent since 1984. As of january 1 the arrears with the Farm Credit Corporation have skyrocketed to $310 million, up 50 per cent since 1984.

We have a very serious situation in the country with regard to farm foreclosures and farm bankruptcies. The Government put a moratorium on foreclosures. While that may have a short-term benefit to individuals, it does not solve the problem for them. On July 10 the Minister promised that he would bring in farmer-creditor arrangements legislation which would allow the bankruptcy court to make adjustments for farmers facing serious financial difficulties. Since last July he has also been talking about bringing a new Farm Credit Corporation assistance for farmers facing serious financial difficulties. There were some 640 foreclosures which should have been acted on in September of 1985. There are probably a thousand today, yet there is no action by the Government.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Gurbin) is from the farming area in Bruce-Grey County which has suffered with the serious devaluation of farm lands and has probably seen more bankruptcies and farm foreclosures than any other district in Ontario. I hope that on behalf of the Minister of Agriculture he will be able to say tonight that the Government is going to implement a program, perhaps one like that recommended by the Finance Committee of the House of Commons. It put a unanimous report before the House recommending that money be loaned at 8 per cent interest on a targeted basis to our youngest and most productive farmers, many of whom are facing farm foreclosures. Otherwise, people will just say that the Government has no commitment to agriculture and is not prepared to do anything for the 23 per cent of farmers who are facing serious financial difficulty and the 11 per cent who are facing modest to serious stress at this time.

Announcing a moratorium is fine, but there must be financial assistance to help those farmers facing the serious financial crisis which is affecting 39,000 of our farmers. Many of them are our youngest, most productive, and most technologically advanced farmers who will most likely be the best farmers in the years ahead if the Government is able to assist them on some reasonable and practical basis. They still have a chance to be viable in spite of the low commodity prices, falling land values, and everything else that farmers are facing today.

I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary, who is personally very aware of this problem in his own riding, will be able to make an announcement tonight on behalf of the Government.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the tone of the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), as contrasted to that on some other occasions when we have had the same type of discussions in the House. He quite correctly identified the fact that in most, if not all, parts of our country we are seeing the effects of continued poor economic conditions for agriculture. Due to the commodity prices and too high interest rates the pressures on the farm community have been so great that there are large numbers of farmers in trouble. The exact figures are very debatable, but there is no argument that it is a significant proportion and that it will require different measures than we have seen to date.

With regard to the specific question of the farm bankruptcy moratorium, perhaps it would have been better had it been possible to put a moratorium across the board. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) had only the capacity to hold Farm Credit Corporation foreclosures. He did that because it was the only immediate means at his disposal to deal with those serious cases. It has assisted some 670 farmers who would otherwise have been placed in a bankruptcy situation. This will stay in place until we have those final solutions.

Furthermore, there have been some spin-off effects where other lending institutions have examined the situation more closely and I believe withheld some actions which might have occurred. That is a peripheral benefit. Unfortunately, we have not had the full co-operation of the provinces, although one province has introduced legislation to stop all other foreclosures until we have those two solutions.

We would agree entirely with the Hon. Member for Algoma that the two specific requirements are changes to the bankruptcy legislation and changes within the Farm Credit Corporation to deal with long-term financing and help reorganize those situations into a viable entity. Both those pieces of legislation are under very active consideration and we hope to be able to make an announcement for the Hon. Member for Algoma. However, he knows full well that I would not do that at this time.

FINANCE

SALES TAX ON FIREFIGHTERS' CLOTHING

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, every day firefighters in Canada put their lives on the line to protect the lives and property of their fellow citizens. They rarely get the recognition they deserve. Instead of thanking these Canadians, the federal Government has decided they are another group which should be hit with a tax. This time it is the imposition of federal sales tax on firefighters' clothing. Is the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) so anxious to reduce the deficit that he has decided that articles needed to protect human life are just another object on which to gather more revenue for the federal treasury? His response is typical. He compares the clothing which protects the lives of public servants with the tools of a carpenter or plumber. While no one disputes the contribution made by those trades, only the Minister of Finance could equate life-protecting clothing with a hammer.

The tax is a burden to municipalities and volunteer firemen across the country who offer their services free of charge to their communities. Quite often they have to raise the money themselves to buy the equipment. I call upon the Government to remove this tax. Instead of hindering the efforts of Canadian firefighters, the Government should at the very least thank them for a job very well done.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

OIL POLLUTION OF VANCOUVER ISLAND BEACHES

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, on October 21 some 4,500 barrels of Alaskan crude oil were spilled from the ARCO Anchorage in Port Angeles, Washington. According to world standards this was not a major spill but it has shown what inadequate procedures we have for dealing with any kind of spill. Local people have reported a lack of proper co-ordination between federal, provincial, and American officials responsible.

When patches of oil washed up on Vancouver Island beaches early in January, officials did not know if they came from the Port Angeles' spill or as a result of the discharge of bilge by passing freighters. Hundreds of sea birds covered with the oil lost their protective insulation and died from exposure. No federal or provincial agency stepped in to co-ordinate the rescue of these birds. Instead, a group of 150 volunteers tried to rescue the birds with fishing nets and get them to the Victoria SPCA for cleaning. Unfortunately, with crude equipment, they were able to rescue only a few of the birds, and of these none survived.

Obviously we need better methods of monitoring passing freighters to prevent the dumping of bilge. We need co-ordination for small and medium spills as well as for major spills to minimize the damage that these oil spills cause. I call on the Government to study the recent spill and pollution in order to devise more effective methods for dealing with any spills that—

SASKATCHEWAN HEAVY OIL UPGRADER PROJECT

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I rise to address the matter of the proposed Husky heavy oil upgrader near Lloydminster, Saskatchewan. The need to assess this project is understandable in light of several changing factors since the original memorandum of understanding was signed in June of 1984.

As discussions now continue between the federal Government, Husky Oil, and the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, I encourage all the participants to commit themselves to seeing that this project becomes a reality. It is essential to the economy of my province of Saskatchewan that this project proceed.

Since the memorandum of understanding, our Government's Western Accord and the Budget of last May fulfilled some of the fiscal and pricing aspects. This is especially true with the elimination of the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax. Given these changes, and the softening of world oil prices, it is vital that these discussions continue. It is also important that Husky find a second equity partner for the project. The Husky heavy oil upgrader will bring benefits to all Canada. For Saskatchewan alone the project will mean $3 billion for our economy, and over 5,000 jobs.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

PLANNED AIRPORT EXPENDITURE AT TADOULE LAKE, MAN.

Mr. Felix Holtmann (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, tucked away in northern Manitoba, about 1,100 kilometres north of Winnipeg, is Tadoule Lake, a reserve community of 200 people. There are no roads to Tadoule Lake, and it needs a new airport. Last year the Chief and Council wanted to build an airport for $1.9 million and employ 15 to 20 people.

Well, Mr. Speaker, Santa Claus came early to Tadoule Lake. The NDP Premier came along in his big red suit, with visions of Mirabel dancing through his head, and decided to spend, not $1.9 million, but $3.3 million on this airport—$3.3 million to handle three flights a day—no jets, just small light aircraft.

Instead of spending $3.3 million on the airport, the NDP could have spent $1.9 million, as the Chief wanted. They could have employed local people, and spent the other $1.4 million on sewer and water, which they need. However, that makes sense and shows fiscal responsibility. The Chief and Council knew this. The NDP dreams of Mirabel in the north. Self-government is only a word to the NDP. There will be few jobs at Tadoule Lake on this $3.3 million investment because the hypocritical NDP looked elsewhere for a contract, and the jobs will go elsewhere as well.

The Chief is disappointed, the Council is disappointed, the Band is disappointed, I am disappointed, and Manitobans are disappointed with the NDP.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

ADOPTION CASE CIRCUMSTANCES

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, on Monday Ricardo DiDone brought his sad story to Parliament Hill. He has been fasting since December 18 to draw to public attention the need to right a dreadful wrong, that of a court of justice considering whether it has the right to remove this man's son's rightful legal name.

Court documents attest to the mother taking the child and disappearing. Subsequently, when the mother was located, a trial over custody took place in Alberta which granted the mother of the child custody and the father visiting rights. During this period the mother married and her husband, under British Columbia jurisdiction, adopted Ricardo's natural son. DiDone objected and challenged the adoption. A court decision is pending, scheduled for January 20, as to the right of the new husband of the custodial mother to adopt Ricardo's son legally and change his name.

Here we have a non-custodial parent faced with the potential extinguishing of his rightful claim as the father of his child in B.C. jurisdiction, while in Alberta his paternity rights were acknowledged and visiting rights accorded. This is just one of many examples which have caused needless, painful hardship. Through this case we see the inconsistency of provincial laws that allow this to occur.

There must be some way, through our federal and provincial Ministers of Justice, to come to an understanding with respect to their approach to divorce and family law. There should be a mutual undertaking to respect judgments of any provincial jurisdiction which has rendered a decision impacting upon the life of a child. That is why we must have a national central registry system with powers to intercede in cases where decisions are not respected, for it is the child who suffers, Mr. Speaker. That is the sad reality.

FISHERIES

1985 WEST COAST FISHING PLAN

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I rise to call on the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Siddon) to initiate a full public inquiry into the 1985 West Coast Fishing Plan.

During the 1985 season it became abundantly clear to all involved that there was a serious problem with the methods used to collect data and set fishing quotas on the West Coast. The record salmon runs were not anticipated by the Department officials and consequently estimates by members of the biological branch of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans were far too low.

This year's enormous surpluses in the salmon fishery on the Skeena River, in the Johnston Strait, the Nitinat areas and Qualicum River show just how inadequate was the 1985 plan. It is estimated that as much as $20 million could have been lost to the West Coast fishing industry this year. This situation occurred and fishermen were demanding to be allowed to fish the massive surplus while the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans refused to admit that the plan was wrong and refused to allow them to fish.

It is absolutely critical that this inquiry take place before the 1986 Fishing Plan is developed, before the recently announced 200 jobs are cut in the Department, and before the proposed $65 million cut in departmental spending is put in place.

For years fishermen on the West Coast have complained about the lack of adequate staff to carry on the necessary data collection to develop appropriate fishing plans, and they have complained for years about inadequate resources to make sure—

THE ECONOMY

IMPROVEMENTS IN SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Bill Gottselig (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, along with the rest of Canada the Saskatchewan economy has been showing signs of strength since the election of a Progressive Conservative Government in September, 1984. Unemployment is down, job creation is up, and the over-all investment climate has improved dramatically.

The following facts and figures illustrate the size and magnitude of the improvements in the economy despite the fact that Saskatchewan has suffered a crippling drought for the second year in a row. Employment continues to climb in Saskatchewan; a total of 17,000 new jobs have been created since the election. The unemployment rate has fallen from 8.4 per cent in September, 1984, to 8.2 per cent today. Bankruptcies were down 9 per cent in the first 11 months of 1985 compared to the same period in 1984. Housing starts in urban areas for the month of December, 1985, were up 23.3 per cent compared to December, 1984.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business reports that 36 per cent of Saskatchewan's small businesses plan to increase their level of capital investment in the months ahead and 22.9 per cent plan to increase their level of employment.

In the energy sector in the first 11 months, well completions totalled 3,406 compared to 2,624 over the same period last year. This represents an increase of almost 30 per cent since the election. Exports in the first 10 months of 1985 were up 7.1 per cent compared with the same period last year.

GOVERNMENT'S NATIONAL POLICIES

Ms. Carole Jacques (Montreal-Mercier): Ever since our Party has been in office, Mr. Speaker, the Liberals have tried everything to make people believe that the Quebec Progressive Conservative Members have failed to defend provincial interests with vigour. How untrue! Our Government has shown a lot more awareness of the concerns of Quebec constituents than the Liberals ever did. A few examples immediately come to mind, namely Domtar, Hyundai, and time extensions with respect to Gulf and Petromont.

My constituents vividly recall the passive approach of Liberal Members and Ministers while, one after another, Montreal East refineries closed their doors. They did not have the courage to defend the interests of their constituents. They remained silent while their National Energy Program played havoc with the oil industry and led to the shutdown of several refineries, including three in Montreal East.

Well, Mr. Speaker, we Conservative Members did take action. We fought on behalf of the people in our ridings, and not only when we found it convenient to do so.

The national policies implemented by our Government will benefit the country as a whole, and their impact can be felt already. I want to assure my constituents as well as all Quebecers and all Canadians that we Conservatives are committed to defend their interests with vigour and celerity so as to build—

EXCHANGE RATE OF DOLLAR—BANK OF CANADA INTERVENTION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): That wasn't bad, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I would like to put a question, if I might, to the Minister of Finance. Yesterday the Canadian dollar dropped to its lowest level in history.

Ms. Copps: The Diefenbuck.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): How much has it cost the Bank of Canada to intervene in the world exchange markets in order to maintain the Canadian dollar during the last two weeks, and particularly within the last 48 hours?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member as a former Finance Minister should know the answer to that question. That information is made available at the end of the month, the second business day of the month following the month of the transactions. That is when he will get his information.

Mr. Lapierre: He does not know.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It is answers like that, Mr. Speaker, that are contributing to the confusion on the money markets and the exchange markets.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An Hon. Member: No direction. No leadership.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Looking at all the indicators, Mr. Speaker, there is really no reason for the falling Canadian dollar except a recognition on world markets that there is little good management in the Canadian economy.

CONNECTION BETWEEN INTEREST RATES AND EXCHANGE RATE OF DOLLAR

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): My supplementary question is for the Minister of Finance. Does he still hold to the position that he took in answering my colleague, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides, that there is no connection between rising interest rates in Canada, prompted by the Governor of the Bank of Canada, and the falling Canadian dollar?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me respond directly to both of those questions. There is a connection between the drop in the Canadian dollar and the rise in interest rates.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That is not what you said on Monday.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): No. The correction which I would like to make to the implication that the Hon. Member has left is that the Bank of Canada is forcing interest rates up. That is not true. The Bank of Canada is moderating the increase in interest rates—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —as it is moderating the decline in the level of the Canadian dollar.

Mr. Rodriguez: What does that mean?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There are certain things that are not within our control on the level of the Canadian dollar, that is, international commodity prices and international interest rates.

I do want to say to the Hon. Member and I will say it to the House, Mr. Speaker, that I am aware of the concern that has been expressed by some in the market-place that we are not showing a sufficient degree of resolve in dealing with the federal Government's deficit. I want to assure the House that we are firmly on track with the direction that we have set for ourselves. There will be a further decline in the deficit this year, and it will be indicated in the Budget for next year.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER AND BANK OF CANADA GOVERNOR APPEAR BEFORE PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. In view of the importance of this matter, I want to ask the Minister whether he would be willing to appear with the Governor of the Bank of Canada before the House Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, in order to explain to Hon. Members and Canadians the reasons for our present interest rates and the drop of the Canadian dollar.

REQUEST FOR DETAILS OF DECISION TO SELL GULF REFINERY TO ULTRAMAR

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Yesterday, he said: We did not make the decision to close the refinery. How can he say such a thing? Is it not true that his own Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion declared in Montreal that he made the decision in the Gulf-Ultramar case with the interests of this country in mind, and is it not true that his Minister of Communications said on the radio that the Cabinet had made this decision? Who is telling the truth, the Prime Minister or his two Ministers?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think my hon. friend is mistaken. Three refineries were closed down while he was a Minister of the Crown. Three refineries closed their doors when the Hon. Member for Papineau was a Minister of the Crown, and he remained absolutely silent. He did not say a single word to defend the interests of Montrealers and Quebecers. Now, as a result of a commercial transaction, a fourth refinery has been affected, but we are working with the appropriate parties in order to save the refinery and not close it down as the Liberals did.

INQUIRY WHETHER PETRO-CANADA WAS WILLING TO BUY REFINERY IN MONTREAL EAST

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister was elected for better, not for worse. Even his friends Louis Laberge and Péladeau are leaving him because they are so disappointed.

Mr. Speaker, could the Prime Minister inform the House whether it is true that Petro-Canada was prepared to purchase the refinery in Montreal East and keep it open, but that the Cabinet preferred the transaction with Ultramar whose objective was to close down the refinery?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is utter nonsense! And as far as . . . Everybody knows that when you were in Government, you people closed down three refineries in Montreal East.

An Hon. Member: Unfortunately.

Mr. Mulroney: And this cost us 1,100 jobs in the industry. That is a fact. That is what happened. There was no question of having Petro-Canada intervene in this question. However, I can give my hon. friend the assurance that unlike Liberal members from the Montreal area who maintained complete silence and never protested even once to the former Minister when he closed down three refineries, the Hon. Member for Shawinigan, who closed three refineries in Quebec . . . Not one Liberal member here in the House protested, not even once. However, we are working with our Montreal caucus on keeping the refinery sector alive in Montreal East.

THE ECONOMY

INTEREST RATE LEVELS—REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. A minute ago he informed the House that he intends in his forthcoming Budget to reduce the deficit further. When he was in opposition, the Minister of Finance pointed out the following: "Higher interest rates mean lower growth, larger deficits and more debt". At the same time the present Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion when in opposition said: "A one percentage point increase in the interest rate means the loss of 25,000 jobs". Given the accuracy of both of these statements, would the Minister of Finance, now that he has responsibility, practise what he was preaching when he was in opposition and take steps to ensure that interest rates do not go up any higher?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think we have indicated very clearly by our actions since September 4, 1984, that we believe in exactly what the Hon. Member has just quoted.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Since September 4 the typical one-year mortgage rate is down three percentage points. That is a savings of $104 per month for the average home owner. The typical three-year mortgage is down two and three-quarters per cent, and a typical five-year mortgage is down two and a half per cent. Because of this we have seen housing starts increase by about 25 per cent or 35 per cent, from 145,000 units to 185,000 units in the past year. We have seen investment intentions increase significantly from what they were back in September, 1984, when we came into office. That underlines the direction and the importance of the direction, which we are taking to get the economy moving.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1425)

REQUEST THAT BANK OF CANADA HALT INCREASES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance has simply been taking bad lessons from his Prime Minister. We are not talking about what was going on last fall. I agree with what he is saying about last fall. When American interest rates went down and we had no short run crisis to deal with, our interest rates went down too. We had those good benefits. The Minister knows last week all the interest rate tendencies were going up. If he believes what he preaches about low interest rates—and he said in recent days the crisis is temporary—will he phone the Governor of the Bank of Canada and say with regard to tomorrow's announcement, tomorrow should see no increase at all in the interest rate?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I want to say quite clearly to the Hon. Member that neither the Governor of the Bank of Canada nor the Minister of Finance can wave a magic wand and say interest rates will be this or this or this. Interest rates are decided by the market-place. We have been doing everything in our power during the course of the last 16 months to get interest rates down. There have been, back in February and March last year, as well as currently, some upward pressures coming into the market-place, which we have tried to moderate. As the general direction of our economic policy has taken hold, the force of interest rates has been down, and I would expect that that would continue.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER ISSUE INSTRUCTIONS TO BANK GOVERNOR

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister believes the economic crisis to be temporary, then it is all very simple. He must now put into practice what he said when sitting as a member of the Opposition and phone the Governor of the Bank of Canada to ask him not to increase interest rates.

[English]

My question to the Minister is this. Will he now do what he knows is the appropriate thing if he wants to keep jobs, if he wants to encourage home building and protect farms—tell the Governor of the Bank of Canada not to increase those rates tomorrow?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, that is precisely the same question that the Hon. Member just put to me about a minute ago. I would say to him, again, that he is a student of economics. I think that that is the course he took at university, at the London School of Economics. We cannot wave a magic wand and say this is what will happen with interest rates.

Mr. Broadbent: It is not a magic wand.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I ask the Hon. Member to look closely at the economic performance over the last 16 months. Some 450,000 jobs have been created. Investment intentions have jumped markedly.

Mr. Broadbent: And you're going to lose them all now.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member says we are going to lose all. I recall back in November, 1984, when we brought down the economic statement and the Hon. Member said 150,000 jobs were going to be destroyed by it. Mr. Speaker, 450,000 jobs were created.

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT RECOMMENDED CLOSURE OF GULF REFINERY AND AGREED TO ULTRAMAR TRANSACTION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister and concerns the question he was asked yesterday when he said that his Government had not made the decision to close the Gulf refinery.

On the program Le Point in which I took part with him, the Secretary of State mentioned that the Cabinet had been consulted. In addition, the Minister of Communication stated on the radio last Sunday that the Cabinet had made the decision.

An Hon. Member: Question!

Mr. Malépart: Can the Prime Minister tell us whether Cabinet recommended to the President of the Standing Committee on Regional Economic Expansion that the Gulf refinery be closed and the deal with Ultramar be approved?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that, by choosing to remain silent for three years when refineries were closing in east-end Montreal, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie lost all his credibility and failed in his duty to represent the interests of his constituents. That is what he did.

Mr. Speaker, the transaction . . . yes, I know that the Liberals do not like this and that they do not like good news such as announced by the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that, contrary to the Liberal Government which closed three refineries, we are working with the people involved to find a new and appropriate use for the facilities involved. Instead of closing the refining industry in east-end Montreal, we are going to build it up, contrary to what the Liberals did.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I could tell the Prime Minister that in 1983-84, he did not do his job as a Member of the Oppposition. He must have been in the pay of the Americans at the time.

An Hon. Member: He does not know what he is saying.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. May I have a question, please?

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: In view of the fact that the Prime Minister is beginning to show some genuine interest in Montreal East, could he tell the House whether he supports the steps taken by the Bourassa Government to try to convince Ultramar to sell the Gulf refinery in Montreal East to Gaz Métropolitain, and whether he would go as far as personally calling the Ultramar people to try and find a solution?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, Quebecers and Montrealers are now aware that while the refineries were closing one after the other in Montreal East, this Hon. Member made a basic choice. His loyalty and dedication is to the Liberal Party and not his constituents. That is where he failed in his commitment to his constituents. That was his mistake.

Mr. Malépart: Go on, go on!

Mr. Mulroney: As far as we are concerned, we are discussing the issue with interested parties in trying to save a Quebec industry, instead of undermining it, as the Liberals did.

THE ECONOMY

INTEREST RATE LEVELS—ACTIONS OF BANK OF CANADA

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance who, a moment ago, was talking about magic wands. He knows full well that every week the central bank intervenes in the money markets and buys and sells treasury bills to influence, if you will, the rates for that particular week. In a sense I am going to repeat a question. If, as the Minister said in the House of Commons in response to my question yesterday, this is a very temporary situation, will the Minister intervene with the central bank to ensure that tomorrow afternoon the interest rate does not go up, because I would suggest that, if it does, it will send out a very negative signal right across the country in terms of confidence in economic development?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am not, in a sense going to, answer this question that has now been put three times. What I am going to do—

Mr. Broadbent: You didn't answer it yet.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I did answer it very clearly the first time the question was put. I would say to the Hon. Member that I look for his support when we come to Budget time. As the Hon. Member knows, if he has been speaking to people in the market-place, there is some uncertainty as to what is going to be in the Budget. However, I would look for his support in reinforcing the resolve which we have toward getting the Budget deficit under control and ensuring in that way that we will get interest rates down. A drop in the budgetary deficit is what will lead to lower interest rates, and that is what the Hon. Member wants and what I want.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance will know that earlier this week the chief economic Minister of Japan indicated that there are times when it is necessary for the Government to intervene in the market-place. Does the Minister of Finance not think that now is that time since interest rates are creeping up as a result of, in a sense, speculation in the money markets? Is it not time for the Minister to take his responsibility seriously and intervene with the central bank by stopping any further increase at this critical time for interest rates?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I responded to the question of the Leader of the Opposition and in that response I did indicate that the Government of Canada, through the Bank of Canada, does moderate influences upward and downward in both the exchange markets—

Mr. Broadbent: A magic wand, is it?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Leader of the New Democratic Party would listen, he might learn something. We moderate those influences in the money markets both in exchange rates and in interest rates. The Bank of Canada has been doing this on a regular basis over the past few months.

POSSIBLE REOPENING OF PORT-CARTIER—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. If I wanted to take the same simplistic approach, I would remind him that on September 13, 1979, under a Conservative Government, it was bang, bang, bang for ITT at Port-Cartier, but I won't do that because that is not the point I want to make today. What does interest me, Mr. Speaker, is that we now have a chance to reopen the Port-Cartier plant, and the Prime Minister is well aware of the proposal made by Cascade Paper and the Quebec Government. Why can't the Prime Minister, who has let the people of Port-Cartier think he is going to reopen this plant, deliver the goods now?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): The Hon. Member may have a point to make, but why all the false statements?

Mr. Malépart: Look who's talking.

Mr. Mulroney: Why mislead the House and the people of this country? The fact is there is no connection between September 13, 1979 . . . in fact, this company received grants from the provincial government at the time in order to set up . . . Things did not work out on the North Shore. In some areas, the unemployment rate went as high as forty-five per cent. For years, for five years, the people of Port-Cartier asked the Hon. Member's Government for help. The answer was always no. So the federal Government had to do something and is building a penitentiary in the area in order to relieve—

Mr. Malépart: I think we should pay your riding a visit.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: You can laugh, but I can assure the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie that the 500 workers in Port-Cartier who stand to benefit from this $60 million investment are delighted. On the North Shore, jobs are a serious matter, not something to be snickered at the way you are doing now.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER MEET INTERESTED PARTIES

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister is doing what he did to the Mayor of Port-Cartier and is now doing to the Government of Quebec: he is evading the issue. What I want to know is . . . The people of Matane are fed up as well. Thirteen mayors from the Matane area are on their way to Ottawa to get an answer about the paper mill. Is he going to ignore them as well?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, I cannot hear anything at this point because of the noise from both sides of the House. May I have a question, please?

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: What I want to know from the Prime Minister, considering that nothing is happening in Matane or Port-Cartier because of the Government's neglect, is whether he is going to do something. Is he going to meet with the parties concerned and deliver the goods once and for all?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, for five years he was with the Department, he was a Liberal member. Every day, Matane and Port-Cartier were begging and beseeching—

Mr. Ouellet: Péladeau voted for you because he wanted a change but he's against you now.

Mr. Mulroney: Listen to what he's saying about Pierre Péladeau, and the Journal de Montréal. Talking this way about Pierre Péladeau in the House of Commons is going to cost you. And as the instigator of Bill S-31 which was tabled to crush the francophones in Quebec, you have a nerve talking about unemployment. You would be ashamed—

Mr. Masse: Chickens coming home to roost!

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Mulroney: Next?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. Members might note that it is not my time they are wasting.

INSURANCE

INCREASES IN PREMIUMS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Finance. It is in regard to the national crisis in the insurance industry and its impact on day care, municipalities, community centres, school boards, and now our National Ski Team. While the Minister is working to develop higher standards for property and casualty insurance dealing with solvency and the capital base, and before she puts a package in place, will she take the opportunity to call in the heads of the major insurance companies operating in Canada and request them to extend last year's rates and last year's coverage to these organizations for a period of approximately six months so that they can survive? Will she agree to do that?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, as I explained to the House yesterday, premium rates are a matter of contract law and fall within provincial jurisdiction. In many cases the provincial Governments have taken some action on this front. I have indicated that I will co-operate with them to the fullest extent possible. I am in constant touch with the industry so that I know what is going on.

EFFECT ON MUNICIPALITIES AND SPORTS ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the same Minister. What the Canadian people, all provincial and municipal Governments, as well as the organizations are looking for is leadership, since this is a national problem. If the Minister is not prepared to call in the heads of the insurance companies will she at the very least work to provide the necessary financing in the short term to these organizations so that they can continue to operate, whether they are our ski teams in Europe, or elsewhere, or our day care centres? Will she agree to do this so that these organizations will be able to operate without fear of lawsuits?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, my colleague has already been in touch with the National Ski Team. Members of the team met with him this morning. We have made every effort to co-operate and help facilitate solutions. I think that is our role.

AGRICULTURE

ILLEGAL CHEMICAL INJECTIONS OF CALVES IN QUEBEC

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. Press reports indicate that about 12,000 veal calves in Quebec have been injected with an illegal chemical, trembolone acetate, and that some 2,000 carcasses of adulterated meat have been sold since last August. Will the Minister explain why he has allowed this illegal chemical to be used in commercial veal production since last May? Why has the Minister allowed this adulterated meat to be sold since last Angust?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's question. I wish to respond as fully as I possibly can. I have been on top of the situation since we were first notified of it. I wish to tell Members of the House that, indeed, it was inspectors from Agriculture Canada, my own departmental meat inspectors, who detected the presence of this drug. We immediately notified officials of the Department of National Health and Welfare since a matter of this type does not fall under meat inspection legislation but, rather, under food and drug legislation. An investigation by the appropriate officials of the Department of National Health and Welfare is now going forward under food and drug legislation.

REQUEST FOR BAN ON SALE OF CARCASSES

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister assure Canadian consumers that no more carcasses of this type will be allowed to be placed on supermarket shelves across the country? Will he also assure consumers that the meat which is already there will be withdrawn by whichever Government Department is responsible?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I have no hesitation in assuring Canadian consumers with respect to that type of information. As the Hon. Member knows, we have the finest meat inspection system in the world. As a result of rather foolish questions raised by members of the Opposition with respect to a couple of other matters in the last three or four weeks, I received a communication from the World Health Organization endorsing our system. I can assure the Hon. Member that none of these carcasses will be moved at all. We are trying to determine whether or not, in fact, any carcasses have been moved into the system. It is impossible to say from the information I have at the moment. I have asked the question. Because of the nature of the drug, it is not really possible to determine whether or not any implanted meat has actually been moved into the system.

Mr. Speaker: The Minister may want to finish his answer under Statements by Ministers.

REQUEST THAT O'FARRELL REPORT BE MADE PUBLIC

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I also have a question for the Prime Minister and it has to do with the conflicting statements of two of his Ministers concerning the Gulf-Ultramar issue in Montreal. Supported by Statistics Canada, the Quebec Government, Oil Week and the O'Farrell report, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs stated that Montreal's refining capacity falls far short, but the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said exactly the opposite. Here is my question, Mr. Speaker: Once and for all, and to lay this matter to rest, can the Prime Minister tell us now whether he is prepared to table the O'Farrell report in the House?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is practically the same question the Hon. Member asked yesterday and he was given a very specific answer. Since then, in answer to questions—I think the Hon. Member did not listen to today's exchanges—I said we have been negociating for quite some time in an attempt to come up with a formula which would make it possible to find alternative production uses for those facilities in Montreal East. What we want to do—

Mr. Malépart: We have won.

Mr. Mulroney: You have won? The nerve you have! You drove the refining industry right into the ground and you have the nerve to claim a victory, if there has been a victory.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER MAKE PUBLIC ALL INFORMATION OF DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, it is a question of credibility. I would like to have an answer because the Hon. Member for Duvernay changed his position concerning Gulf-Ultramar after obtaining full details from the Department—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The preamble to the supplementary question is very long. Will the Hon. Member just put his question, please?

[Translation]

Mr. Nystrom: Here is my question, Mr. Speaker: Is the Prime Minister prepared to release all information available from the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources now that the Department has briefed the Hon. Member for Duvernay? Is he now prepared to release that information in the House for the benefit of the Hon. Members and all Canadians?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is a vexatious question. All relevant details have been made public. As the Minister said yesterday, more will be released in the House of Commons at the appropriate time, as they should be. That was promised yesterday. But what we want is to try to protect as many jobs as possible. This Government—if I may, I think the question of the NDP Member had to do with jobs, unless I am mistaken—this Government created 137,000 new jobs in Quebec within 15 months, whereas the former Government created 37,000 new jobs in 55 months. It is an outstanding performance with respect to job creation—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. With great respect, this is now too long.

SPORTS

INSURANCE COVERAGE—DIFFICULTIES EXPERIENCED BY NATIONAL TEAMS

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport. It follows up on some of the concerns which have been expressed by my colleagues earlier this week. Press reports today concerning the inability of the National Ski Team to obtain liability insurance further highlight the serious problems affecting the insurance industry. Can the Minister tell the House what measures he will be taking to assist Canada's national sports teams obtain adequate insurance protection?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, and as has already been stated, the insurance problem within North America is a global one. It is being dealt with by the provinces in co-operation with the Government. However, as far as the Canadian National Ski Team is concerned, I have been in constant contact with the ski associations and officials within the industry and within the associations. We met earlier today to identify a number of options which are available to us. We are actively continuing the pursuit of those options. I am satisfied and hopeful that we will have a satisfactory conclusion before the end of January so that the ski team can continue to compete in the World Cup.

PREMIUM INCREASES—REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ASSISTANCE

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, on November 4 I asked the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs what he was going to do about the insurance crisis. There is mounting evidence that insurance companies are acting in concert to increase premiums. These uncompetitive measures are causing many companies, municipalities, school boards, and even the Canadian Ski Team, as well as individuals, to go out of business or operate without insurance. Can the Minister do something now?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I can assure my hon. colleague that we are monitoring the situation with much interest. But if he had evidence showing a lack of information, we would gladly examine it.

REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): On November 4, Mr. Speaker, the same Minister replied to me that the issue had been sent to the Minister's office for action. I should like to state as a fact that the City of Anjou is paying this year $300,000 more than last year in liability insurance alone.

Is the Minister now prepared, under the Combines Investigation Act, to fully investigate a situation which is becoming more and more serious each day because of unacceptable insurance increases?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, monitoring the situation on the market place remains the continuing responsibility of the Director under the Combines Investigation Act. He is monitoring the situation, and if he has reasons to believe that an investigation is warranted, he will initiate one immediately.

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

PLAN TO HELP FARMERS FACING FORECLOSURES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. Some 1,700 farm families are facing foreclosure and eviction from their land. However, they have been given a ray of hope through the Farm Credit Corporation plan to save their farms. Can the Minister indicate when this plan might come into force and effect?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's question and his concern. If any of those 1,700 farm families are clients of the FCC and under the jurisdiction of this Government, they need not fear eviction.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wise: As the Hon. Member will know, last September I placed a moratorium on farm foreclosures under my jurisdiction and that of the FCC. That moratorium will remain in effect until such time as further measures are brought forward by this Government. I hope that will be in the very, very near future.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

STATUS OF MONCTON REPAIR SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport.

[English]

Last December 18 the Minister informed me that he would check whether the CN shops in Moncton were for sale. Can the Minister inform the House today of the status of the Moncton shops? Are they up for sale?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, no, the shops are not for sale. However, I have been advised by CN that Canadian General Electric has indicated an interest in assessing the potential for locomotive manufacture and assembly in Canada. That particular aspect is being investigated during the over-all assessment of CN's maintenance facilities across the country.

REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE OF JOB PROTECTION

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, the workers in Moncton are very, very worried about their jobs. With all the jobs which I have heard today have been created, I do not think too many have been created in New Brunswick. Will the Minister eliminate the uncertainty for the workers in Moncton and assure them that these jobs will be protected? Will he also assure them that the CN situation in Moncton will not develop into something comparable to the Gulf/Ultramar fiasco?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, if there is any anxiety and fear being perpetrated in Moncton it is primarily as a result of the inaccuracies of opposition Members who are going around fanning the flames of fear and hysteria. I can assure the Hon. Member that CN is assessing in a very deliberate fashion its maintenance requirements all across the country, in Winnipeg, Moncton, and Montreal. When that assessment is concluded, some time later this year, and if there are any adjustments to be made, they will be announced in the usual manner.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

UNIVERSITY RESEARCH FUNDING

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, it is clear that vastly increased expenditures for research and development are critical to Canada's industrial and economic future and the standard of living of its people. This includes, of course, university research. The previous Minister of Science and Technology promised a five-year plan for NSERC, and the present Minister indicated that, given some time, he will have a pleasant surprise. No surprises have been forthcoming.

Will the Minister explain why the Government has kept the NSERC five-year plan approval on the back-burner so long that the President of NSERC has had to develop a disaster scenario for university research funding?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I had the opportunity to meet with the Council of Natural Sciences and Engineering who are responsible for channelling public resources to universities for research and development. It was a very useful and productive meeting. I was able to receive advice from the Council and give them the necessary comfort to proceed with their planning in advance of the funding announcement by the Government.

FINANCING OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I am still unclear, as I am sure the rest of the House is unclear, whether there will be approval of the NSERC five-year plan. Even more important, will the Government at long last produce an over-all strategy for research and development financing? We have waited too long.

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, there is going to be a five-year plan. The delay has been partially caused because of the ad hoc situation which has been in place for the last five years, and because my predecessor and I are insisting that there be more predictability and stability in the science community so they can proceed with their planning adequately. The Member just has to be a little more patient for a few more days.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

POLICY CONCERNING EMPLOYMENT FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for Canada Post. Canada is becoming a country where the only place older people can be sure of finding work is the Senate or Supreme Court. Typical of many people who have approached me is a constituent who applied to Canada Post, not for a permanent position subject to mandatory retirement, but for a part-time, seasonal position. She was told that she was not eligible because she was over 65.

Mr. Speaker: May I have a question, please?

Mr. Stackhouse: This being contrary to government policy concerning age discrimination, what action can the Minister take to protect senior citizens' right to work?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I can say that Canada Post is presently reviewing this matter. I can assure my colleague that his concerns are well taken and they will be examined and considered.

THE ECONOMY

INQUIRY WHETHER MINISTER OF FINANCE WILL PARTICIPATE IN MEETING OF INDUSTRIALIZED COUNTRIES AT LONDON

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. In view of the present crisis of the devaluation of the Canadian dollar and the increase in interest rates, which of course have some international impact, I would like to ask the Minister if he has been invited this time to take part in the meeting of the group of the five industrialized countries that will be held next January 18 and 19 in London?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me assure the Hon. Member that I have been talking to Secretary Baker about this meeting. I have conveyed to him some of my concerns. I will be doing the same with other members of that group. There are five members in the group, the United States, U.K., Germany, France, and Japan. They are meeting for particular reasons, one of which is that they have by far the largest degree of trade and foreign exchange reserves. For that reason they are meeting as a steering committee in advance of the interim and development committee meetings which I will be attending later on this year.

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL INTERVENE TO SECURE INVITATION FOR CANADA

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary for the Prime Minister. In view of the importance for Canada to take part in this second meeting of the group of five, has the Government made any representations to the President of the United States or to the White House and to other countries so that Canada, as a member of the group of seven, can at least be invited to discuss such an important issue which affects the value of the Canadian dollar and our international trade?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have indeed had discussions with appropriate officials, including President Reagan, about the exclusion of Canada from the group of five since its creation when the Leader of the Opposition was Minister of Finance of Canada.

PRIVILEGE

RIGHT OF MEMBER TO BE RECOGNIZED BY MR. SPEAKER FOR SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a notice of a desire to raise a question of privilege from the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mr. Turner).

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a very important question of privilege, and hope that you will give me an opportunity to express my view very briefly. We are all equal, Mr. Speaker, and you are the protector of our rights and privileges. As someone who is new in this House, I recognize that my knowledge of its traditions and procedures is limited. I do, however, believe that I must stand up for what I believe is fair and right.

Yesterday I asked for a supplementary question and was denied. Mr. Speaker, I have read some of the rulings of Speakers Jerome and Lamoureux on oral questions, and can only conclude that in today's context of real parliamentary reform, Speaker Lamoureux's ruling on March 6, 1973—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not like interrupting Members when they are raising questions of privilege, but I must ask the Member to come, not to the argument he wishes to make, if it is put before the House, but to the exact question of privilege he wishes to raise.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The independence and the enhancement of my role in the Chamber as a private Member, in fact that of private Members on all sides of this House, is changing. I submit to you, Sir, that my privilege of being treated equally during Question Period is being breached when I am not accorded, nor are my constituents, the same rights as other Members when asking questions. I feel that this is wrong.

As this House reforms, I strongly believe that the practices of the Chair should reform with it in the true spirit of equality for all. Mr. Speaker, I consider this to be a matter that could be considered by the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization. Should you rule that I have a prima facie case of privilege, then I am prepared to move that it be referred to the appropriate committee.

Mr. Speaker: I accept the Hon. Member's representations as a representation. I may say that I think it is perfectly normal for Government Members in any Government with any Speaker to raise that question. That question has been raised in every Parliament and every Speaker has dealt with the question in exactly the same way based on our precedents. There is no question of privilege here. The Hon. Member knows that, I think. He believes strongly that something should be changed. I can say to the Hon. Member that if Hon. Members want the whole issue of Question Period reviewed by one of the standing committees of the House, they have every mechanism to do that if they so wish.

I think the Hon. Member knows that I have strong views about Question Period, but I also know that our practices have been very clear in the past. As a matter of procedure and of the rules, the whole question of the granting of supplementary questions is completely within the discretion of the Chair. Our practices in that matter are also clear, and the Hon. Member knows that.

Mr. Malone: Change the practice.

Mr. Speaker: Members change sides in this House and immediately they change their view of what the practice should be. I accept that. I think I may say to the Hon. Member that Speakers in the past have made general comments about Question Period generally at some point in their mandate. I do intend to do that at some point in the not too distant future. However, on the question of whether more questions and more supplementaries should be granted to Government Members, I think I would be going against all the traditions of the House if I were to change the practice and tradition of the House without some instruction from the House itself.

PETITIONS

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Moe Mantha (Nipissing): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which deals with the deindexation of the family allowance. The petitioners consider the principle of universality too important to be tampered with. They wish to have full indexation reinstated.

CALL FOR CHANGES TO YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT

Mr. Jack Scowen (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 190 residents of Aylsham, Saskatchewan, who humbey pray and call upon Parliament to seek immediately changes to the Young Offenders Act for young offenders who commit serious crimes of violence against society, in order that they can be dealt with in an adult court.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I have here a series of petitions which are all from the federal constituency of Louis-Hébert and which have been signed by hundreds of people who ask the Prime Minister of the Canadian Government to reconsider Bill C-70 so that family allowances paid to Canadian mothers can be fully re-indexed. These petitions are signed by a great number of residents of the Louis-Hébert constituency.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the responsibility and privilege of tabling a petition signed by members of the International Union of Bricklayers and Allied Craftsmen from Alberta, Local No. 2. In this petition the signatories request that Parliament reverse the decision of the Government whereby the Unemployment Insurance Act was changed so that pension income was considered earned income in calculating benefits. These petitioners call upon Parliament to reverse that abhorrent regulation so that they can collect their unemployment insurance benefits.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty once again to present to this House today a petition signed by people from Moncton, Memramcook, Dieppe. The petition has to do with the situation at the CN shops in Moncton and asks the Government to protect the jobs at the CN Moncton shops.

[English]

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND CORPORATION

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, it is my responsibility to present two petitions today in the House of Commons. One is from residents living in the federal riding of North York, and the other is from residents of my own riding of York West. Both petitions are protesting the sale—in fact, giveaway—of de Havilland, and are requesting that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Conservative Government return this company to a wholly-owned Canadian company, thus ensuring the protection of Canadian jobs and Canadian technology, and the maintenance of Canadian pride in a very important sector of our economic life.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to introduce a petition on behalf of a number of residents of western Canada who are of the opinion that the deindexation of the universal family allowance and the massive cut-backs in the public commitment to child benefits are an unfair attack on women and families with children, especially single parent families. The petitioners ask that the House of Commons, and particularly the Government, reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance and rescind the unfair tax increases of the last Budget.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour to present several petitions. The first one is from the riding of Burnaby. It has to do with the issue of family allowances, and petitions the House to reinstate the full indexation of the universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

The next two petitions are from Halifax, Nova Scotia, and also acknowledge that the deindexation of the family allowance will be a hardship on families, which will not be offset by changes in the child tax credit. They ask for full reindexation of the universal family allowance.

FIREFIGHTERS AT SAINTE-FOY, QUEBEC AIRPORT

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): Mr. Speaker, with respect, I table today a petition on behalf of the federal firefighters at the Quebec Airport in Sainte-Foy, in the constituency of Louis-Hébert. They ask the Treasury Board and the Government to facilitate the renewal of their working contract and to improve their working conditions.

CONCERN ABOUT FUTURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, once again I have the honour and privilege to present to this House a number of petitions signed by residents of the federal constituency of Moncton who are expressing their concern with regard to the future fo the CN shops. They express their concern that the current assessment of the maintenance capacity throughout Canada may have negative employment implications for the hundreds of people working at the shops in Moncton. They call upon Members of this Parliament to stop any move that may downgrade in any way the facilities in Moncton.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to introduce a petition signed by residents of the Kitchener-Waterloo area in the Province of Ontario. Those petitioners state that deindexation of the universal family allowance is an unfair attack on women and families, and further state that this attack will not be offset by changes to the child tax credit and that other tax increases in the May Budget will place an unfair burden on low and middle income earners.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I also have the privilege to introduce a petition signed by nurses throughout Manitoba who indicate their opposition to the Government's intention to deindex partially the universal family allowance. They also call upon the Government to rescind unfair tax increases that will affect many Canadians.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a couple of petitions, one bearing hundreds of signatures of people from my riding and which deals with family allowances. These petitioners point out that the deindexation of the family allowance is an unfair attack on women and families, especially single-parent mothers.

My other petition regarding the same subject is from Nova Scotia.

I have a further petition from British Columbia concerning family allowances. All of these petitioners call upon the Government to restore full indexation of family allowances.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have over 200 names on petitions from people resident in Spadina and other parts of Toronto who oppose the Government's Bill that would cut family allowance in future by 3 per cent of the annual increase. They point out that this is unfair compared to the generous tax hand-outs to corporations and people with high income. Therefore, these petitioners call on the House to reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax changes.

[Translation]

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, it is also my duty to present to the House a number of petitions, dealing of course with the same concern on the part of quite a large number of people who deplore that the Government intends to de-index family allowances.

Mr. Speaker, this first one comes from the federal constituency of Montreal-Sainte-Marie. The second one comes from the federal constituency of Saint-Jean; another one comes from the federal constituency of Verchères, and finally the last one comes from the federal constituency of Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot, where hundreds of people are suggesting that full indexation of family allowances should be reinstated, at a point in time where full indexation is most important.

[English]

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present petitions from constituents of the riding of Thunder Bay-Nipigon, primarily resident in the City of Thunder Bay as well as others living in the outlying areas of Murillo, Kakabeka Falls and Kamanistiquia. The petitioners are protesting the decision to deindex the family allowance, and point out that the consequence will be loss of income for even the poorest families. They call upon the House of Commons to re-establish full indexation of the family allowance.

CUSTOMS STAFFING REDUCTIONS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and privilege today to table two petitions coming from my constituency—

[English]

The first is signed by residents of Ignace and Dinorwic, Ontario and calls upon Parliament to prevent the reduction of staffing in the Department of National Revenue in the area of Customs employees because of the problems that this will cause in stopping drugs and pornography from entering into this country.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): My second petition calls upon Parliament to act to eliminate the deindexation of family allowances and maintain the principle of universality.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to advise the House that the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 433 and 492.

[Text]

Question No. 433—Mrs. Cossitt:

Does Canada Post Corporation mail out notices, press releases and copies of speeches made by the President of the Corporation to all Members of Parliament and do these items go to the House of Commons office and the constituency office and, if so (a) for what reason is it being sent to both locations (b) what was the total cost of printing and mailing all of these items for the past three years (c) what is the name and job designation of the person with the highest authority who authorized this expenditure?

S.O. 31

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): The Canada Post Corporation informs me as follows:

1. Speeches made by the president of the Canada Post Corporation and press releases issued are normally sent to all Members of the House of Commons and the Senate, but not for the most part to their constituency offices.

(a) N/A.

(b) The specific information sought is not readily available from records. The Corporation maintains records in such a manner as to provide only the total expenditures for the printing, production, shipping, distribution and other costs associated with the preparation of all external publications; including speeches, booklets, brochures, pamphlets, newsletters, posters, fanfolds, etc.

(c) Vice-President—Corporate Communications.

MOTOR VEHICLE TEST CENTRE

Question No. 492—Mr. Corbett:

What amount does the Department of Transport spend annually on automobiles for the purpose of test crashing at the Motor Vehicle Test Centre and (a) from whom are they purchased (b) what becomes of the vehicles once the test has been completed?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): The Department of Transport spends approximately $220,000 annually on automobiles for the purposes of barrier test crashing at the Motor Vehicle Test Centre, to confirm compliance with occupant protection safety standards.

(a) Representative vehicles are purchased at retail from randomly selected automobile dealers in Ontario and Quebec.

(b) Once the testing and analysis have been completed, the vehicles are donated to high schools, universities or other institutes for automotive training purposes. Recipients are responsible for transportation to their facilities and are obliged to sign a commitment that such destroyed vehicles will not be repaired and placed back on public roads.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions as enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 31

INCREASE IN INSURANCE PREMIUMS

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a notice of motion under Standing Order 31 from the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus).

Motions for Papers

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I gave notice under Standing Order 31 in order to discuss a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration. As you know, the attention of the House and the nation over the last couple of weeks has been on the issue of insurance and the inability of Canadian and North American insurance companies to provide the kind of services that we need. More recently, the question of the National Ski Team has been raised in terms of its ability to continue operation.

I think it would be important for the House to have a full and frank discussion of some of the options that are available so that the Government may have the opportunity to review our suggestions with a means of solving the problem both in the short and the long term.

Therefore, pursuant to Standing Order 31, I would request leave to have a special debate.

Mr. Speaker: Let me make one procedural comment. I am sure the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan is making use of Standing Oder 31 for the first time. Perhaps I should take the opportunity to remind him and others that what is supposed to be done is simply to read into the record the letter that has been sent to the Speaker, because it is on the basis of that information that I must make a judgment. Nothing different has been said, I only make a comment with regard to form for the future.

I can indicate that the Hon. Member has provided me with the necessary notice of the specific and important matter that he wishes to have debated on an urgent basis. I have carefully read the argument that he has presented in his notice and heard his argument that he made just now on the floor of the House.

The provisions of Standing Order 31(16) are very specific and somewhat restrictive and indicate that the matter proposed for discussion must relate to a "genuine emergency".

While the matter raised by the Hon. Member is, without a doubt, one of great concern to him, the insurance industry and the National Ski Team, I am in some difficulty in finding that this matter meets the very narrow terms and conditions set down in the Standing Orders. I cannot, therefore, accept his request.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all notices of motions for the production of papers be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Tuesday, January 14, consideration of Bill C-84, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; and Motion No. 4 (Mr. Johnston) (p. 9733).

Mr. Speaker: Before resuming debate, may I indicate to Members that yesterday's Votes and Proceedings and today's Projected Order of Business are in error. The Votes and Proceedings and the Projected Order of Business show that in relation to Bill C-84, the House is considering Motions Nos. 4 and 5. In fact, only Motion No. 4 has been proposed to the House, and that is on what we will resume debate. The appropriate correction will be printed accordingly. Resuming debate with the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, when the House adjourned yesterday I was pointing out that as a result of the Conservative Budget of last May, over the next five years those earning $15,000 a year will have to absorb a 36 per cent tax increase; those earning $30,000, an 11 per cent tax increase; while those earning $100,000 will only face a 4 per cent tax increase.

If we look at those few taxpayers earning $200,000 a year, we will see that they will only have to pay 2 per cent more as a result of this Conservative Budget.

• (1520)

If anything shows the basic unfairness of the Budget it is in particular the results of the proposal we are looking at now to deindex the personal exemptions. Surely this disparity of burden between those earning $200,000 a year and those earning $15,000 a year makes the point. If there is a case, and I do not think the Conservatives have made it, for increasing personal income taxes, then surely the way to do it is not to increase the taxes of those earning only $15,000 a year by 36 per cent while increasing the taxes of those earning $200,000 a year by only 2 per cent. Only a Conservative Government, especially like the one in power today, could come up with that upside down idea of fairness, which is not unusual when one looks at other parts of this Budget.

At the same time that the Conservative Government is increasing the taxes of those earning $15,000 a year by 36 per cent and those earning $30,000 a year by 11 per cent, it is giving wealthy Canadians a lifetime gift of hundreds of thousands of dollars through the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption.

I suppose if, hypothetically, the Government had said it wanted to give an exemption for capital gains if those capital gains arose from investing in Canadian enterprise, then that proposal would have been received with more sympathy across the country.

The reaction to the proposal to give this lifetime capital gains tax exemption is interesting. Even the financial community, including financial advisers to better off Canadians have found it hard to see the merit of giving this kind of exemption from investing in property, condominiums, for example, outside of the country. Why works of art and antiques inside this country and not just productive activity within Canada? In fact, any kind of capital gains, including investments creating capital gains that people made under the existing law are included. I do not know why people should be given that exemption when they did not need the encouragement of the exemption to make investments under the existing law.

Why is the Conservative Government asking this House to take away full indexing for inflation of personal income tax and thereby bringing in an automatic increase in taxes for middle and lower income Canadians?

Another way of confirming the essential unfairness of the Budget, in particular the proposal to deindex the personal income tax, is to contrast the desire of the Conservative Government to cut deindexing and raise taxes for middle and lower income Canadians while forcing through this House a measure to compensate the uninsured depositors of the Canadian Commercial and Northland Banks.

What we are talking about here is a burden on taxpayers, not just close to $1 billion, the sum covered by the Bill that was forced through this House before Christmas, but likely another billion or billion and a half dollars because of the advances made to the two banks by the Bank of Canada when the Government was trying to tell Canadians that everything was in hand, that the banks were solid and deserved the confidence of Canadians.

While the Government was telling Canadians that, it was getting information about the way it had botched the rescue of the two banks last spring, it was getting evidence that the rescue put in place was not going to be sufficient, and it was getting information about the very poor quality of the two banks' loan portfolios.

In order to make up for its own mismanagement of the rescue of the Northland and Canadian Commercial Banks the Government has imposed on Canadian taxpayers an additional burden of not just $1 billion but likely $2 billion and perhaps $2.5 billion. The Government is handing out money covered by the bank rescue Bill passed by this House under duress, I might say, before Christmas without making known the identity of the organizations or the depositors who are getting the funds as a result of the failure of the Northland and Canadian Commercial Banks.

An elementary principle in dealing with bankruptcy situations is that people who want to make a claim as creditors should disclose their identity, file the appropriate declaration, and only then, when they disclose their identity and prove their claim, do they get reimbursed. Perhaps for reasons best known to itself, the Government was too sensitive about disclosing the identity of the depositors in the Canadian Commercial and Northland Banks, depositors who were uninsured for deposits above the level covered by the Canada deposit insurance legislation, so that it forced through legislation enabling these depositors to be reimbursed without their identity being disclosed. Yet, while doing this, the Government is amending the income tax law to deindex personal exemptions, bringing about a very substantial ongoing increase in personal income tax for middle and lower income Canadians.

We are at present discussing the matter of deindexing exemptions and in that way increasing the personal income tax of middle and lower income Canadians, but let me remind the House that the Government is increasing the personal income tax of middle and lower income Canadians in other ways as well.

This Budget is eliminating some basic tax reductions put into the income tax law by previous Liberal Governments. These are tax reductions aimed especially at helping people in the middle and lower income categories.

What we see is a basic unfairness in this Budget. What we see is a basic unfairness in the way this Conservative Government is dealing with the affairs of the country and a basic unfairness in the way it treats the largest portion of the Canadian population, it being middle and lower income Canadians. The Government though is there for the wealthy who want a capital gains tax exemption, even though capital gains do not come from job-creating productive investment in Canada. The Government is there to help out the wealthy uninsured depositors in those banks for whose failure it has to be responsible. But when it comes to ensuring the well-being of middle and lower income Canadians, instead of being there to ensure that well-being, the Government is hitting them some heavy and unwarranted blows with its Budget of May 23.

I say that this House should support the amendment offered by the Official Opposition to eliminate the Conservative effort to cut the indexing of personal income tax. Only in that way will we begin not just to restore a basic element of fairness in our tax system but to wipe away some of the very serious damage to the fabric of our country already carried out by the Conservative Government after only a year and a half in office.

The amendment must be supported, Mr. Speaker. If it is not, Canadians certainly will be harmed, and they do not deserve to be harmed by this unfair Conservative Budget.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this amendment and to speak out against what the Government is planning to do by imposing this 3 per cent figure under which the taxation will not be indexed.

• (1530)

With the indexation of tax brackets and such things as the family allowance introduced in the 1970s, the Government was taking an important step forward. It was making an important adjustment to the economic realities of that time. Indeed, those economic realities persist and are in some ways more pressing today. By taking the Government out of the inflation profits business, the Government was taking a responsible step, a step which eliminated an inherent conflict in the way in which Government was run or did its business. While there was no inflation indexing, the Government in a way was tempted to promote inflation because by having people move up the income scale, it benefited by gaining increased tax revenues or by an increased tax yield on the inflated incomes of those people. While it is a matter of public record that the previous Liberal Government succumbed to a large variety of temptations, we can at least give it credit for taking this particular temptation out of its way by the introduction of indexation of tax brackets and of those benefits.

The effects contemplated by these measures, or the effects which these measures will bring into being, are of course an increase in Government revenues over what they would be previously. However, it is worth pointing out that the increases about which we are talking will be cumulatively compounded, so that when we reach the 1990s the Government will perhaps be taking $2 billion or $3 billion out of the economy as a result of this very simple, seemingly small change proposed in the Income Tax Act. It seems that the Government has taken the decision to get back into the business of profiting by inflation. What is entailed in the legislation, Bill C-84, is that when there is an inflation rate of 3 per cent or less, the Government will take all the increase brought about by that increase in the inflation rate. When there is an inflation rate of over 3 per cent, essentially the Government will take the first 5 per cent of the inflationary increase in the nominal incomes of people.

It is very important to point out the difference between a real increase in income and the imaginary or illusory increase which inflation confers upon wage earners and indeed everyone who pays taxes. Those gains are totally illusory because they simply represent a redenomination of the income which the person has without any increase in the real value. Thus, to have the Government profit by the first 3 per cent of that redenomination gain is not only poor in an economic sense but in some ways smacks of immorality.

The Government has shown the House and the country that when it comes to its priorities, when it comes to the rewarding of its corporate friends, and when it comes to the bailing out of banks or oil companies, it is indeed a Government which has all the funding that apparently it could desire. We have not heard from the Government when it has been asked for a sort of on demand tax exemptions available only to the rich and powerful. We have not heard from the Government that it does not have the money to fund them. We have not heard the Government saying that it cannot afford to bail out 100 per cent of the deposits over $60,000 for the banks which failed. We have not heard the Government say to Gulf that it cannot provide the exact tax exemption for which it is looking. When it comes to requests from those interests, the Government has been all too accommodating. For example, when it comes to the requests for subsidies to institute an auto plant, before the request had even been made, the Government was out there with its cheque-book. That is a level of generosity which borders on the foolish. It is a level of generosity which has not been extended to ordinary Canadian taxpayers. It is a level of generosity that we know will not be extended to ordinary taxpayers by this Conservative Government which uses loosely the label "Progressive" in somewhat incoherent conjunction with the "Conservative" tag that it more fairly merits.

Another aspect of the deindexation of the tax brackets touched upon by the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) is of course the effect that it will have on people at the lower end of the high income scale. We are talking about a comparison of those who are fairly comfortably off, those who are wealthy and those who are super rich. I think the figures were put accurately by the previous speaker when he mentioned the impact on those people in the $30,000 to $40,000 range compared with those people who enjoy the giddy heights of an income in the range of $200,000. The effect of the deindexation of tax brackets on the people in the lower end of that scale is significantly higher on a proportionate basis than it will be on those people who are higher up that scale. Of course the Hon. Member for Windsor West did not mention that that was the case because the Liberal Government, I believe it was in 1981, removed the progressive rates of income tax. This was a contributory factor to the greater impact of deindexation on middle-income earners. Perhaps it would be going a little too far to expect an acknowledgment of that deficiency of the previous Government, which I note the present Government has not done anything to remedy. It is worth adding to the point that was made by saying that we are not talking about a one time impact on the incomes of people in the range of $30,000 to $40,000. We are talking about an impact which repeats itself. Year after year, the people in the lower end of that range will see more of their income taken by deindexation than will the people in the upper end of the range.

If I might do so, without straying too far from the text and the sense of the amendment, I draw some comparisons between the Government's general treatment of people who are in the lower and middle-income brackets and those in the upper-income brackets. For example, we know that those people in the range above $150,000 of taxable income had something like ten times the amount of declared capital gains of people in the $20,000 to $30,000 range. Of course that is understandable. It is something that tax planners would be well aware of when they started doing any analysis and even before they needed to analyse the impact of tax measures. However, when we look at taxation and the measures which the Government is and is not taking, we need to compare the two sides. We need to look at what the professionals call, perhaps presumptuously some may say, tax expenditures. We need to consider the level of exemption which tax expenditures confer upon those in the upper ranges of the income brackets. The point has been made by a large number of speakers that capital gains tax exemption basically restores to the wealthy, to the high-income taxpayers, the losses which they would be suffering by the exemption being taken away.

We have a scenario that the tax rates and the exemptions for the wealthy will balance off. In many cases they will balance off to the advantage of individual or corporate taxpayers. However, when it comes to the lower or middle-income taxpayers the Government is getting its share. The Government is going to take that money from the communities across this country and use it in Ottawa to pay the deficit. Frankly, the broader backs are not bearing the burden, and that is the legacy of this Budget, that is how this Budget will go down in the memory of Canadians. That is how this Government will be seen and will deserve to be seen.

Mr. Maurice Tremblay (Lotbinière): Resuming debate, Mr. Speaker, I want to take advantage of these few minutes, because it is all very well to sit and listen to the various speeches on Bill C-84, but after listening to the exaggerations of the Opposition parties, I felt it was necessary to set the record straight.

Mr. Speaker, we know that to govern is an art in itself. And surely—

An Hon. Member: You still don't know how.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): Well, those who thought they did saw that Canadians across the country were quick to put them in their place and cut them down to size. And if you go on the way you are now, the Canadian people will realize you not only failed to learn your lesson when you had every opportunity to do so . . . You had the time and the so-called competence.

You even . . . and I want to use the example mentioned by my hon. friend of the New Democratic party, namely that indexation of the child tax credit was introduced in 1970 by the Liberal Government. A tremendous idea. Very good. But remember that at the time, the economic situation was not what it is today, Mr. Speaker. What was true and logical at the time is not necessarily so today. The situation may have deteriorated, which means that a responsible government must be able to ensure that, when people are penalized by measures that made sense at the time they were introduced, they are treated fairly by changing the Government's policy.

Furthermore, Hon. Members will recall that at the time these measures were introduced, that same Government had far more room to manoeuver because at the time we had a Budget surplus. You will see—

An Hon. Member: The Minister isn't even aware of that.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): Never mind, my friend. By all means, look after the interests of your constituents if you can, and whenever you decide to go to the riding next to yours to visit the famous phytoculture centre I hope you will remember this occasion—the debates are recorded—and how stupid you were to refuse to see anything. We shall see. We shall see.

As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, at that time—

An Hon. Member: We shall see all right.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): Yes, yes, we shall see, we shall see. What? Rats never fail to find their hole. Of course, there are passing times when one has a high opinion of oneself. But justice usually prevails so that smart people find their place, whereas rats find their hole.

That being said, Mr. Speaker, at the time when the child exemption was indexed there was a budget surplus. Fifteen years later, Mr. Speaker, the budget deficit amounts to $220 billion. It is not a budget surplus.

These steps were taken at a time when we could afford them. However, if we did continue to shy away from our responsibilities, it is clear that sooner or later the poor would suffer more than the rich. The purpose of Bill C-84 is to make it possible for the needy, most of them women, to get—

An Hon. Member: At a cost of some $500,000 each.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): I will return to that in a little while—to get income tax reimbursements and be given advantages over affluent taxpayers.

An Hon. Member: Name these advantages.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): During the question period, Mr. Speaker, I listened to the Members of the New Democratic Party who were making ridiculous remarks about interest rates and asking the Minister of Finance to telephone the Governor of the Bank of Canada to prevent an increase in interest rates at noon tomorrow.

Mr. Lapierre: The Conservatives were doing that all the time when they were in the Opposition.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): As though it were as simple and as easy as that, Mr. Speaker. On the basis of their findings, it is clear that no telephone call to the Governor of the Bank of Canada would be necessary to prevent an increase in interest rates. It is not so simple as that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lapierre: What is the solution?

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): In connection with what Members of the Liberal Party were saying earlier about capital gains tax exemptions, Mr. Speaker, I said that governing is an art—

Mr. Lapierre: For the big shots!

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): But we have a many-faceted economy and it is these measures as a whole that provide the country with the necessary confidence to attract investment, both domestic and foreign, that enable observers to realize that there is not only political stability, but people assuming their responsibilities.

Mr. Speaker, I am at a loss to understand the Hon. Member who rose before me and who dealt with priorities. That is exactly what Bill C-84 is concerned about. It was and is a priority for this Government to take steps to try and stop the widening of the gap between the poor and the affluent. The purpose of Bill C-84 is to close this gap which, because of the economic situation, had been widening. I can now say that over the one and a half year period since the election, the situation has been improving considerably, something the Opposition has been realizing slowly and quietly, as the Canadian people are finding out that the Government is achieving its mandate. The situation is improving. It is clear that Bill C-84 will eventually make it possible to reinstate the full indexation. That is our intention and we hope sincerely to attain this goal as soon as possible. However, first of all, we must take our responsibilities and this is precisely what we are doing through such measures in the hope that we can re-establish full indexation in the near future.

Mr. Speaker, I see that you want me to conclude. I am sorry about it, but if the flagrant attacks on such an essential piece of legislation continue, I shall use again my privileges as a Member of Parliament to say what must be said.

● (1550)

[English]

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin my comments by reminding the Hon. Member who just spoke that history has proven that Governments in this country are not elected but are defeated. He would be wise to consider that the next time he makes a comment in the House.

I would like to deal with the amendment that would restore full indexation to tax brackets and personal exemptions. It is important to reverse the proposal put by the Government, and the Government should give this serious consideration. Last spring, we saw the senior citizens of Canada rise up to tell the Government that it could not tamper with their incomes and that it must continue the indexation of the old age security benefits. This fall and into 1986, we have seen families from all across Canada doing the same thing. Today, as has happened almost every day for many, many weeks, Hon. Members from all Parties have risen in the House to present petitions calling on the Government to scrap its plans for the deindexation of the family allowance benefits.

The deindexation of tax brackets and personal exemptions is no different. This plan will ultimately hurt ordinary Canadians, the people who can lest afford to have their incomes reduced in any way. With the deindexation program combined with the now climbing interest rates which will impact on the ability of people to keep roofs over their heads, we can see very clearly the direction the Government is taking. It is a direction that is moving away from fairness and from the concerns of many of those people who voted for the Conservative Party. The Government is moving in the direction of support for the corporate sector and the big people.

I wonder why there is this increased need for funding for the Government. We hear rhetoric about the need to reduce the deficit, but actions speak louder than words. There have been billion-dollar bail-outs for the banks. There have been tax remissions to Syncrude that may amount to something like $1 billion. Olympia & York may also be the beneficiary of tax breaks and perhaps even Genstar will be the beneficiary of such tax breaks. In the future, we will see more tax dollars going from the Government to the corporate sector. The only place the Government can get this money is from the wallets of ordinary Canadians.

The Government is out to squeeze as much from the people as possible. It is not doing this in an up-front way by saying that personal income taxes must be raised by 10 per cent. The Government is not being honest with Canadian people. It is going through the back door to pick pockets through a sleight-of-hand mathematical change that will reduce, over time, the amount Canadians will be able to deduct from income taxes payable.

Years ago, the ability of the electorate to recall the actions of Governments tended to be reasonably limited. However, with the modern communications technology that is now available and with the fact that there are thousands if not hundreds of thousands of Canadians watching us every day in action in the House of Commons, the electorate will remember the meanness involved in the attempt to deindex old age security benefits and the action to deindex family allowance benefits. The people of Canada will remember the decision made by the Conservative Government to reduce the ability of Canadians to have their deductions keep up with inflation. They will remember this when they go to the polls. Each Canadian will ask himself: "Can I afford another Conservative Government?" A great many Canadians will say: "No, my family and I cannot afford to have our incomes, our deductions and our lifestyles eroded by another Conservative Government," and they will search elsewhere.

I would ask the Government opposite to pay heed to this amendment and to consider its actions. I ask the Government to reverse its actions before it is too late.

Mr. Michel Champagne (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to speak about motion No. 4 which concerns Section 65 of Bill C-84.

Mr. Speaker, I have trouble understanding why the two Opposition parties persist in letting such a Bill go forward, or rather in refusing that the bill go forward and in supporting this motion. Why, and I do not see many Members opposite, why do the two Opposition parties refuse to see the facts and recognize that the child tax credit will increase by $140 during the next three years? Did you know, Mr. Speaker, that this $140 increase represents more then the average rate of inflation? Did the two Opposition parties say so when they travelled throughout the province and the country? Did they have the courage to do so? Did they have the political will? And most important, did they have the strength to do their job as Members of Parliament by telling the Canadian people, by telling Canadian mothers, by telling our poorest families, that the child tax credit would be reimbursable for the most disadvantaged families? This represents $35 the first year, $35 the second year and $70 the last year.

No, Mr. Speaker, we did not see this happen. We did not see it because, on the other side of the House, both New Democrats and Liberals have taken a rather demagogic attitude.

It is certainly shocking and even revolting, Mr. Speaker, when you sit across from them, to realize that, after 20 years in power, and we all know that the Liberals have been in power more often than not, the parties opposite, and especially one of them, were unable to develop a social policy which would be fair and equitable to every Canadian family, including the most disadvantaged.

For them, Mr. Speaker, the principle of equity is not complicated: Rich and poor should be treated the same. This is what the other side calls equity. They do not understand, or they refuse to understand for financial reasons which could be of benefit to them, that a family earning $15,000 a year and one earning $100,000 cannot be viewed in the same way.

They do not understand, Mr. Speaker, and if I may use my own situation as an illustration, that myself and my family now receive the same family allowances as the single mother who lives out in the countryside and who needs welfare benefits to pay the rent and feed her family. They do not understand that she should receive more. They do not understand that the actual thrust of our legislation should be in that direction. No, Mr. Speaker. To them, the principle of fairness is to have everyone on the same footing, whether rich or poor. You all get the same thing. And especially when I hear the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) crying out in this House, even rising on occasion since he has been in Opposition, I am inclined to ask him one thing: Where was he when his own party was de-indexing? Where was he? In the House or away travelling around? Perhaps there were reasons for his travelling. Where was he, Mr. Speaker, when his own Government decided to change course with respect to family allowances? If he was in this House, I wonder why he did not rise to vote against that, since he is opposing it today. I am wondering. Maybe he was on a trip. But it does not matter.

Mr. Speaker, I am coming back to my subject for I had no intention of being distracted by the Hon. Member opposite. You know—No, I would rather not say it. Look, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Rossi: Go ahead, say it.

Mr. Champagne: Oh no, I must not say it.

Mr. Speaker, I think that in this Bill, in this motion, we have to look at the facts as they are. Hon. Members opposite, especially Liberal Members, have asked us on many occasions to set politics aside and speak in an honest, accurate way. Well, I am ready to do so. And for sure all my colleagues are willing to do so. But under one condition: That we tell the whole truth. We must show exactly what shape our social system is in. Exactly what shape the deficit is in. We must state exactly how we, as a Government, as Members of Parliament, as representatives of the people, are going to work at building a society in which our children, our most needy families, all Canadians can live with a measure of fairness. This is all we are asking for, Mr. Speaker, this is what we are working on. This is what we are aiming at. This is what we want to achieve. Unfortunately, every once in a while, and too often in my view, especially when I see the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier)—

Mr. Gauthier: What did he do now?

Mr. Champagne: —I will tell you if you sit down ... good, I will say it ... they are there striving to boycott legislation. There they are opposite, trying to stop the course of events.

You know, Mr. Speaker, they were there for 20 years, and now that they sit in Opposition all they can do is bring in amendments, amendments, and more amendments. As you know, Mr. Speaker, such is the ingenuity of the Liberal Party. For 20 years, they acted as if they were sitting in Parliament, as if they were passing legislation, as if they were working for the whole of the Canadian community, except that they forgot one thing, Mr. Speaker. They are accusing our Government of helping the rich. But if my memory serves me right, the richest in our society were not paying any income tax. It is under this Government, with our new regulations that they will be paying a guaranteed minimum income tax. These are the facts Mr. Speaker, these are the facts and we are addressing them. These are the facts, my dear Member for Richmond-Wolfe, which will ensure that less privileged families will get more, because the principle of fairness will never apply in the same way to the rich and the poor alike. The fact must be addressed that there are have-nots. And this is what we are doing as a Government. Certainly this is a tough responsibility. Certainly it is a responsibility that Opposition parties do not understand. Because, as you see plainly: a $200 billion deficit, the most affluent who were not paying any income tax, multinationals and the big corporations which were getting handouts. This being said, I would like to remind the liberals who accused us regarding the Norbank and the other banks, that they did exactly the same thing in 1925. At that time, they reimbursed the depositors of the Home Bank. That is why I cannot accept, Mr. Speaker, their holier than thou attitude in front of the Canadian people, who had to put up with them for 20 years.

They have done the opposite of what they say should be done. I believe that our Party, our Government, is able to respond adequately to the demands of Canadians and in particular to the demands of the neediest families. That is what we are striving to do. Let us give more to the disadvantaged, let us make the rich pay and in this way, I am sure, we will create a more equitable system, a system of social justice, and we will be able to say that we are working for all Canadians.

• (1600)

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne), who is certainly to be congratulated on his efforts to score a few points for a Government that is going to the dogs, as they say. He tried to give us several figures, but the fact is we are now seeing percentages as low as 36 and 37 in the polls, which certainly does not bode very well for the future.

Mr. Vincent: Wait until 1989.

Mr. Rossi: We shall see.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to say that at the beginning of his speech, the Hon. Member for Champlain alluded to the fact that so few Members were present in the House. Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the House to the fact that at this very moment, eighteen Conservative Members are present, out of 211. That is a lot more than the Members opposite can draw from.

I am pleased with this opportunity to take part in the debate on the amendment proposed by my hon. friend from Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), aimed at amending a Bill whose sole purpose is to increase taxes, despite all the attempts of the Government to conceal this fact.

Yesterday afternoon, I heard another Member from Quebec, my hon. friend from Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers) say in his grandiloquent speech that the ultimate objective of Bill C-84 was to promote justice and fairness. Mr. Speaker, what a farce, coming from a Member who claims he wants to help the needy in his riding. This is incredible, coming from the Hon. Member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve and other Quebec members, when we consider what is happening and what they are doing about it. It is incredible, because these measures are aimed directly at people who lack the financial resources to meet all their day-to-day needs.

The deficit being what it is, I believe that we all have a responsibility and that it is necessary to identify mechanisms by which we can improve the economic situation. Everybody realizes that. However, it seems the Government nearly always introduces measures that take money from the poor and the needy.

An attempt was made to impress Canadians. An attempt was made to impress Canadians by spreading the news, on the radio and just about everywhere else, that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) was going to take a salary cut of so many thousand dollars, and that his Ministers were going to do likewise. Mr. Speaker, this may seem very admirable, but when we are talking about a $10,000 cut out of $150,000 or $120,000, my admiration is not that great.

What frightens me the most in this message, Mr. Speaker, is the added mention that Canadians will have to do some belt tightening. That is what frightens me. To what extent will Canadians have to tighten their belts in 1986? What sort of message is the Government sending out? Will there be tax increases? Has the Government found new ways to dig in the pockets of the disadvantaged?

I notice my hon. colleague opposite. I do not know what riding he is from but ever since he came to the House some 15 years ago he has been a constant mumbler.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, my friend the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) examined the situation quite thoroughly and came up with some figures, but he forgot to tell Canadians that during our election campaign, we said this or that. But your own leader the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), wherever he went in the Province of Quebec and elsewhere in Canada, solemnly promised never to touch the Family Allowances or Old Age Security Pensions. Yet, the only way you have been able to raise money in the effort to cut the deficit has been at the expense of the poor in our society. All you have managed to do is to deindex the Family Allowances and Old Age Security Pensions.

Mr. Girard: Do you believe that?

Mr. Rossi: Sure, they believe me... And the proof that Canadians no longer believe you is that compared with September 4, 1984, when you had 54 or 56 per cent of the popular support, you now have only 37 per cent, according to the most recent survey.

What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that the Prime Minister and the Members of his Cabinet should keep their promise and stop getting money on the backs of the poor and the disadvantaged in our society.

They should stop giving away... They were talking about giving away $500,000 or more to the affluent—

Mr. Vincent: That is another motion.

Mr. Rossi: That is another motion which you will support in a little while. But your great strategy is to get money from the poor and the disadvantaged rather than from the rich.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 4 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 81(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Motions Nos. 2 and 3 will now be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-84, be amended in Clause 58 by adding immediately after line 39 at page 90 the following:

"(d) 'qualified Canadian property' of an individual means a property that was a Canadian security within the meaning assigned by subsection 6 of section 39."

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-84, be amended in Clause 58 by adding immediately after line 40 at page 91 the following:

"(d) the amount that would be determined in respect of the individual for the year under paragraph 3(b) in respect of the capital gains and capital losses if the only properties referred to in that paragraph were qualified Canadian properties."

He said: Mr. Speaker, this brings us to a very important motion with respect to the capital gains proposal contained in the budget document. I will explain the amendment in full in a moment. I hope I have the attention of Members on the other side of the House because I think anyone who looks objectively at what is being proposed will agree that this is a substantial improvement to the provisions set forth in the Budget. I am pleased to see the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) is with us, as well as the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté), the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. McInnes) and the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse). I hope the Ministers in particular will go back to their colleagues and reflect upon the significance of what is being proposed here.

If I may spend a moment on a technicality, Motion No. 2 will be subject to a very small technical amendment, which I understand will be proposed later, probably by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). As I pointed out yesterday, the letter "(d)" should not be included inside the quotation marks in the amendment. That stands by itself, as it were, as a definition of qualified Canadian property.

That being said, allow me to explain to my friends in the House what this amendment is designed to accomplish. A definition of qualified Canadian property is found in Section 39(6) of the Income Tax Act. The thrust of this amendment is to give some focus to what the Government is attempting to do. We have made our arguments in principle that this is not an appropriate provision in the Budget, the provision of a $500,000 lifetime capital gains exemption. We might have been prepared to look at something more sensible in that regard. However, clearly it is inappropriate. It is costly and, beyond that, almost completely unfocused.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, it has been said many times how Canadian taxpayers can use that provision. One can sell condominiums in Florida, one can sell jewels, paintings, boats. The Budget does not contain any provision for channeling those investments towards productive sectors here in Canada.

[English]

It is in that spirit that this amendment is being proposed; to concentrate the benefit of any capital gain here in Canada for Canadian investors to create the jobs we need so badly and to spur economic activity in this country. The simple mechanism whereby that can be accomplished with this amendment is by defining qualified Canadian property using Section 39(6) of the Income Tax Act which defines a Canadian security as follows:

For the purposes of this section, "Canadian security" means a security (other than ... a prescribed security) that is a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada, a unit of a mutual fund trust or a bond, debenture, bill, note, mortgage, hypothec or similar obligation issued by a person resident in Canada.

There are prescribed securities for the purposes of Section 39(6) currently found in the regulations to the Income Tax Act and what is being suggested in this amendment is that a further prescribed class could be developed in the discretion of the Government to restrict the investment to qualified Canadian property. So there is ample discretion left within the terms of the motion which I have proposed.

[Translation]

For instance, the Government is quite capable of defining the fields where investments can be made, be they small- or medium-sized businesses or corporations operating on the Canadian market. It has sufficient leeway to concentrate the benefits here in the hands of Canadians so as to spur the economy and create jobs in this country. That is the purpose of my motion, Mr. Speaker.

● (1620)

[English]

As I said a few moments ago in French, Mr. Speaker, we think it is absurd to introduce a provision into our income tax system which, in fact, will encourage investors to invest elsewhere, especially when one looks at the other provisions which are currently under study by the Government of the country. I refer particularly to this proposed minimum tax which makes Canadian equities less attractive. It makes them less attractive because of the treatment that will be accorded to dividend income under that proposed minimum tax. When one considers the combination of the tax-free capital gain of $500,000 and the minimum tax, clearly an investor has incentive to buy U.S. equities rather than Canadian equities.

The purpose of this amendment is to say that if the Government insists on proceeding on the capital side by providing a tax-free capital gain in the order of $500,000, then at least let us ensure that it is a benefit to Canada and Canadians, and does not simply result in the export of capital to other parts of the world. This is especially important during this present critical period when the dollar is under so much pressure because of the lack of confidence in the financial and economic management of the country.

I believe it was the Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) of the New Democratic Party who, at one point in committee, proposed an amendment like this one, but not as refined, which is the reason I did not support it at the time. It was simply restricted to investments in Canada. I think we must go further than that. I do not think that we should be giving tax-free treatment to real estate investment in the country during this period, nor do I think that we should be giving tax-free treatment to the sale of jewellery, art——artworks here in Canada. What is more important is that those funds be invested in key sectors to stimulate the economy and create jobs. Mr. Speaker, that is the purpose of my motion which is now before the House.

[Translation]

[English]

Before I resume my seat, Mr. Speaker, I plead with my friends on the other side of the House. I know that there are many who understand precisely what I am saying. I am pleased with the number of them who are present in the House at this time. I see my friend, the Member for Selkirk-Interlake (Mr. Holtmann). We listened to him yesterday. He was very eloquent, but somewhat misinformed. However, he clearly understands the implications of what we are proposing.

We are reluctantly supporting the provision because the Bill has already been adopted in principle. As a constructive Opposition we are trying to make it better. I insist on that point, Mr. Speaker. Our job in Opposition is not simply to oppose, it is to improve. This amendment is a net improvement which any sensible Canadian would recognize. In fact, if one follows the commentary in the press, one will see that most Canadians have recognized this. However, those who consider themselves bound by Party discipline in Government policy have, unfortunately, so far refused to stand up and be counted on this very fundamental issue. They now have the opportunity because, as I say——what we have to do here is fair and logical, and it is in the interest of Canadians, particularly in the interest of our own economy. Honestly, Mr. Speaker, I find it hard to understand why our colleagues fail to see the merit of what we are proposing today.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to speak about the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston). The Hon. Member was speaking about the $500,000 capital gains exemption and, as usual, unfortunately, he found a negative side to this measure. Unfortunately, when the Government proposes something useful, profitable or economically attractive for Canadians, one or two Members of the Opposition always find fault with it. They say: Naturally, Canadians will go and invest in Florida, but most important, they will invest even more in Florida if there is a minimum tax. Mr. Speaker, they are misleading the House and the Canadian people. We all know that there is also a minimum tax in the United States.

The purpose of the $500,000 capital gains exemption is to encourage Canadians to invest more and to have a new approach to savings. We have heard and still hear a lot about small businesses: they are at the centre of our policy. Small businesses created the greatest number of jobs in Canada in 1984. Such an effort must be rewarded and we have done so by saying that, when small businessmen decide to retire, they will be allowed a capital gains exemption, they will be able to have somewhat lower costs in their businesses, young people will be able to become more involved in the business, to invest and continue to create jobs and make things work in Canada. That is the purpose of the capital gains exemption.

I shall not go into the details as concerns agriculture where this measure is of vital importance. If the Hon Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount had a single constituent in agriculture, he would understand what we are saying. But he is more representative of Westmount than of Saint-Henri and I can see that he is not familiar with agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, in the constituency of Trois-Rivières, I meet people every Sunday. I meet farmers every weekend. They are all very happy with our policies. Small businessmen are all very happy with our policies. People who have already retired and have assets in Canada are happy to be able finally to say that they have a better return on their investment. They are happy at the same time that this will help young people starting in business thanks to the capital gains exemption. That is the positive aspect that we should keep in mind.

Sometime ago, during the debate on Bill C-84, I heard a Member of the Opposition say that this was a complex Bill. This is a criticism which was made some time ago. However, the only purpose of the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount is to make the Income Tax Act even more complex than it already is. For our part, Mr. Speaker, we are working at changing the Income Tax Act. Yet, the Members opposite want to add something to the Act which could apply through regulations and whose result would be that the small investor would once again be footing the Bill. It is unfortunate that the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount does not recognize this. When he says that he does not understand why his motion is not acceptable, I would like to tell him that it is for those reasons, Mr. Speaker.

He said that the Opposition must make a positive contribution. We quite agree with him, but such motions, which would make the Act even more complex and which criticize the capital gains exemptions that will help our businesses, do not constitute positive opposition, far from it.

• (1630)

[English]

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I just want to participate very briefly on this section of the debate to indicate that the New Democratic Party is not supportive of the amendment. We believe that capital gains are capital gains, regardless of where the money is earned. We do not think that someone who sells a condominium in Florida and receives the benefit should be taxed differently from someone who sells a condominium in Vancouver, Thunder Bay, or wherever. For that reason, we will not support this particular amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I would like to rise in this debate in support of Motion No. 2, presented by my colleague from Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), to restrict the capital gains exemption to gains realized in Canada with respect to Canadian businesses or property.

Without going over the whole debate on second reading, I was surprised to hear the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent) make the kind of comments he did, because it is clear to me he did not really grasp the meaning of the amendment put forward.

In principle, we already have taken a position concerning the fact that a Government claiming to have no money to maintain full indexation of family allowances—we do not believe that a Government taking such an attitude, cutting indexation—we cannot understand how it can then say it has enough financial resources to give tax benefits to people who have enough income to invest and realize capital gains. This is a matter of equity and social justice, and as we know, according to published surveys that come from people in the Conservative Party, Allan Gregg, who says that: The main difficulty faced by the Government with its Budget of May 23, 1985, is that it is perceived as being unfair because it in fact is unfair—

And, besides, as we maintain, it is and is perceived as such. And the proof is, Mr. Speaker, that this Government, claiming it does not have the financial resources for first-hand social programs, had the resources available to give to the multinational oil corporations. And I will not discuss that any further because we could start anew on the second reading debate.

But as we look at it, and not just the Liberal Opposition, we can be blamed for playing politics although it is our role to oppose when in Opposition, and if it were our role to oppose in Opposition, we are not the only ones to do so.

And rather than rely on the views of people who have nothing to do with the administration of our tax laws, I would quote from an article published by the Financial Post Magazine after the Budget was tabled, long after it was tabled, and which reports on conversations and discussions held by the Canadian Tax Foundation. Of course the Canadian Tax Foundation includes in its membership chartered accountants, tax experts from all over the country. They had a convention and considered the effects of Bill C-84, of the Budget from a general standpoint, but especially the impact of such a repeal of the capital gains tax.

Several experts have expressed their views, and this is, for instance, what the article had to say. I am quoting from the Financial Post Magazine of November 30, 1985, as published under the signature of Mr. Gordon Pitts, the journalist who wrote that article. He attended the Canadian Tax Foundation convention.

This is what he wrote:

[English]

Finance Minister Michael Wilson's $500,000 capital gains exemption is meeting strong opposition from one group that has much to gain from it—the country's tax practitioners.

They will earn hefty fees from the fancy tax planning the exemption will spawn. But even so, many of the 1,500 accountants and lawyers attending last week's Canadian Tax Foundation conference here criticized the proposal as ill-conceived and poorly designed.

I would indicate to the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent) that this is not a comment made by a Liberal. It is not a comment made on a partisan basis. Those comments are made by lawyers and accountants who will benefit from this legislation because it is so complex that they will have to advise their customers and charge "hefty fees", to use the words in the article.

Mr. William Lawlor, a national tax partner with Ernst & Whinney, a firm that I understand is particularly close to the Conservative Party, sparked the debate by saying that this measure "will have disastrous effect structurally on the tax system".

[Translation]

Taking into account those remarks, and surely all those made by other experts, and because of those difficulties, we ask: "Why not try at least to improve the Bill and restrict the benefits of this exemption to capital gains realized on Canadian property in order to spare the taxpayers?" And I would like to go along with the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who wants to reduce his deficit. Well, to achieve that end, he might first consider not applying the tax benefits provided for in his budget to gains realized on property owned abroad. I fail to see what good Canada will get out of that. If there are no other changes to the Bill, Motion No. 2 in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) should at least be accepted. According to the figures provided by the Department of Finance, that tax benefit as it stands will have cost the Canadian Government $4.5 billion in lost revenues by the end of the decade. That is not a long period, just a matter of four or five years. We must be aware of the extent of the enormous benefits that are handed out to a small group of Canadians, those whose income is high enough to allow them to invest and realize capital gains. Let us at least restrict the exemption to the capital gains on investments made in Canada, in order to attain the goal we are aiming at, that is supposedly to create jobs.

Naturally, if the objective had been something other than encouraging Canadian investment and creating jobs, other arguments could have been made, I suppose. But the stated objective was to help the economy and, therefore, I do not understand why we should use public money, at a time when we have so little that we cannot maintain the full indexation of family allowance. At least, we should limit its application to capital gains realized in Canada, on Canadian properties. That is the intent of Motion No. 2 which I support and which will be considered, I hope, Mr. Speaker, by the Hon. Members opposite since it would prevent wasting our financial resources on gifts to people who are going to invest, in the United States or elsewhere, in yachts, condominiums, race horses or something else. I believe that if we want to reach the goal that has been set we must restrict the application of this proposal.

The Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent) said that it would be overly complicated, but, Mr. Speaker, it is already in the Act. It is in Section 6 of the Act. It has already been interpreted by the courts. All we have to do is use it to define Canadian properties in the same way as they are defined in the Income Tax Act, so I do not see any of the complications mentioned by the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I should say, in view of the remarks the previous speaker made, that there is a mistake in Motion No. 2, which reads:

That Bill C-84, be amended in Clause 58 by adding immediately after line 39 at page 90 the following:

We have a colon and the next line starts with "(d). That (d) should not be there. That is why, Mr. Speaker, I propose, seconded by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier):

That Motion No. 2 be amended by striking out the "(d) at the beginning of the proposed amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The amendment proposed by Mr. Garneau, and seconded by Mr. Gauthier, would remove the letter "(d) at the beginning of the second paragraph of Motion No. 2. Is that right? We resume debate on the amendment. The Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif).

• (1640)

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased as well to take part in this debate. A few minutes ago, the House heard the comments of the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) whose speech as a whole can be summed up as follows. According to the Hon. Member for Champlain, the measures now before the House were aimed at increasing the contributing capacity of the neediest people through a tax break.

Later on, the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent) said to the House that when going around in his riding, he met with businessmen who were all very happy, very enthusiastic about the measures put forward in the same budget, the same legislation. Now, Mr. Speaker, there seems to be an obvious contradiction between these two speakers, which it is I believe the purpose of all speeches made by Hon. Members on this side of the House to point out.

Members on this side of the House are all aware of the fact that the financial situation of this country is such that we must join forces to consider measures, initiatives designed to reduce the tax burden in order to improve the financial situation. Except, Mr. Speaker, that up to now we have seen that each of these initiatives, each of those measures is unfortunately always aimed at the neediest, the have-nots and the amendment before us illustrates very well this openness, this generosity shown by the Government towars wealthy people. It grants a tax write-off on capital gains.

My colleague and seat mate who is an accountant, the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou (Mr. Gagliano), told me that in fact, this measure has been welcomed by businessmen, wealthy people, those who make important deals. They greeted this measure with some satisfaction. But what we are suggesting—and the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou had the occasion to raise another matter which in these circumstances would also have warranted a similar measure—is that you should have ensured that the gains accruing from those exemptions be reinvested in Canada. That would have meant a considerable improvement and I think that on this side of the House we would forthwith have supported such a step.

But what we are discussing now is what the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) said: We can live with the capital gain exemption, but let us ensure that it will apply specifically to goods and real estate located in Canada. This, Mr. Speaker, is in my view a basic, fundamental principle, it is something that should be built into that initiative, that allowance, because we are not only going to enable wealthy people, very affluent people to divert substantial amounts of money from Canadian income tax, from Revenue Canada, we are not only going to give them that break, or make them that present, but we are also going to let them carry out transactions outside Canada and take advantage as I said of those same benefits in that situation as well.

I think it is needless to ask whether that money which is diverted from income tax revenue will be reinvested in Canada. Just putting the question is answering it. This measure could therefore in the present circumstances be considerably improved if we just took the trouble to assess the impact and appreciate the relevance of an amendment to restrict the scope of that measure specifically to the capital gains achieved within Canada. And I think the all-out supporters of that measure, considering the present financial situation of our country, would certainly welcome such an addition since they in particular are or should be involved in improving the state of our finance. But I would not be surprised if that amendment were met with scorn and opposition and eventually defeated in the next few days because the sole commitment of this Government seems to be to preserve a good image and to maintain good relations with those men and women who, in the circumstances, might be asked to contribute a commensurate share of their income and of their power and might help much more significantly to alleviate the tax burden of people with a much lower income.

This, Mr. Speaker, is what I wished to say, and in my opinion, this amendment is a blatant illustration of the fact that our Government does not give a damn about protecting the interests of average Canadians and is basically concerned solely with flattering, playing up to and maintaining good relations with the most affluent segments of Canadian society in order to protect friends and keep their support.

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to rise and speak against this amendment proposed by a member of the Opposition. It is important for capital gains exemptions to be offered to all people whoever they may be. I know some who have properties outside of Canada. They are not the wealthy, as I have heard members of the Opposition say and, as the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) said, they are ordinary people who thought that they could make more money during the recession caused by the previous Government's National Energy Program.

People moved money out of Canada in order to make something better for themselves. Sometimes this worked. Other times it did not. Why should they not have the benefit of a capital gains exemption? These were the ordinary people, the small and medium-sized businessmen and women upon whom we have depended to make our country grow. It is a fact, according to the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, that during 1975 and 1982 practically 100 per cent of the job creation was made by small and medium businessmen and women. Why should they not get a benefit in order to create more jobs for people who need jobs? I feel it very important that the amendment not even be considered.

Members of the Opposition told us earlier this afternoon about the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who has cut his wages. He is the first Prime Minister in recent history who has had the daring to show his honesty and consideration for the people. The previous Prime Minister did not do that. Our Prime Minister is also paying for his food bills. The previous one did not do that. How can members of the Opposition tell us stories which are not true?

I feel it is very important that the capital gains exemption be given to everyone who deserves it. This will be on an ongoing and periodic basis. It will be given to farmers. They will get a $500,000 complete capital gains exemption. However, the exemption for businessmen and women is cumulative. It is $20,000 for the year 1985, $50,000 in 1986, $100,000 in 1987 and so on to 1990.

Property worth a great deal of money will not be completely affected at this time by the capital gains exemption. It is necessary for our Government to proceed with all possible haste so that the moneys recipients receive from the capital gains exemption will work toward the benefit of the country.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I think it would be a good idea for all those who want to participate in this debate to read what was proposed by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). If you take the time to read it properly, it is quite obvious and clear, Mr. Speaker, that Hon. Members do not have the right to cancel the capital gain as suggested by the Wilson Budget. That is not our business. But it is our business, Mr. Speaker, to ask the Government to apply capital gains only to Canadian companies and jobs.

Even if the Hon. Member for Edmonton East (Mr. Lesick) means that we like capital gain, I would like to ask him to defend the capital gain which would be applied to condominiums in Florida, to diamonds in South Africa or anywhere in the world.

Mr. Speaker, I think we are talking about the Canadianization of profits coming from the budget. Because we know very well that this Government, with capital gains—if we talk about a specific case namely the case of farmers—is trying very hard to make the rich richer in Canada. This phenomenon shows clearly in the area of capital gains.

For example, Mr. Speaker, if we look at the average income of Canadians—

[English]

Let us take a look at Canadians who will benefit from the capital gains tax. We know, particularly by the surveys which were done at year end, that Canadians do not believe that the Government is fighting for the interests of ordinary working Canadians. Let us face it; the Government is paying the piper and the piper happens to be those people who are in the $60,000, $70,000 and $80,000 per year salary range. In fact, those people will gain disproportionately, by thousands of percentages, as compared with a very poor family in Canada earning $10,000 per year. Poor families will not benefit from the capital gains exemption.

Let us look at people who have profited from capital gains. For example, using 1982, a person earning $10,000 took advantage of approximately $6 of capital gains. However, if we look at the person earning $200,000, this particular measure would mean a tax saving of $4,032. Once again the Government is aiming its tax measures at those Canadians who already have, and its Budget is aimed at those Canadians in the top four earning percentage of the population, those Canadians earning more than $50,000 per year.

Was the Government given that huge mandate on September 4, 1984, to fight only for Canadian earning over $50,000 per year? No, it was elected to speak for ordinary, average working Canadians who are being sold out—

—sold out by this budget. It does not deal with the problems of employment among Canadians.

With the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), in fact we are asking the Government to reconsider the matter of capital gains for rich people, unless those gains are directed to Canadians companies, firms and jobs. Quite obviously, Mr. Speaker, the Conservatives are not interested in jobs. We saw that in Montreal East. In the case of Gaz métropolitain and Ultramar, we saw that this Government is not interested in jobs, it is not interested in canadianizing the petrochemical industry. This Government would much rather enrich people who already earn annual incomes of $200,000.

What the Liberal Party is proposing is an amendment which would guarantee that anyone likely to benefit from the capital gains provision will do so only by creating jobs or investing in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, there is nothing politically devastating in asking that tax policies be consistent with the interests of Canadian men and women.

[English]

It is not a revolutionary notion to suggest that tax policy be directed toward creating jobs in Canada for Canadians. That is the mandate of a Parliament. The Government and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) were elected, promising jobs, jobs, tens of thousands of jobs. In fact, in this one tax measure, this one proposition, the Government is saying to Canadians that it does not care if they spend their money propping up a regime in South Africa by buying South African diamonds, by investing in a condominium in Hawaii or by purchasing racehorses from Europe.

In this amendment we are not asking the Government to reconsider the whole question of capital gains. We do not have the right in this Parliament to make the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) turn his back on this kind of fiscal irresponsibility. We are simply asking him to make a condition of the capital gains exemption that jobs and investment be created in Canada for Canadians. Is that such an heretical notion? Are we in the Liberal Party heretics because we want the Government to encourage tax policy which will result in Canadian investment by Canadians and for Canadians in Canada?

The Hon. Member for Edmonton East (Mr. Lesick) talked about small business. If the Government were so concerned about small business, it would have brought in a policy that permitted small business people to use capital gains for the sale of businesses within families. It chose not to do that. It chose to adopt an arms length attitude, which means that almost every small business in Canada will not be able to take advantage of the capital gains exemption unless they sell out to a foreign interest or to another interest unrelated to them or to their families. This giveaway or bail-out which is being accorded by the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance is simply the continuation of a policy which has favored the rich, the "haves" and the wealthy at the expense of the middle class and ordinary working Canadians.

There is a fear which is gripping Canadians. I think it is particularly prevalent among the middle class. The workers in the east end of Montreal have seen their jobs abandoned by a Government which made promises it never intended to keep. The fear is that the Government, having been elected on a platform of jobs for Canadians and of serving the middle class and ordinary working Canadians, has abandoned that responsibility and answers only to its true constituency, that true constituency being those people who will benefit from this $500,000 capital gains write-off. Canadians realize that only 4 per cent of the population will have the opportunity to take advantage of this particular capital gains exemptions. About 54 per cent of the people who might be considered eligible already earn over $50,000 per year. Is it the responsibility of the Government to prop up those people who are earning $75,000 and $100,000 per year, without even making conditional any request for Canadian job guarantees, or is the responsibility of the Government to live up to the promise of the Prime Minister when he said that his absolute first priority would be jobs, jobs and more jobs for Canadians?

We do not think this amendment is particularly radical. We think it is defensible, believable and supportable by the people of Canada. I ask the Government to reconsider a budget measure which says send your money out of this country, invest it in Taiwan, Tokyo, Tampa, anywhere outside this country and you will get a half a million dollar capital gains write-off; keep that money in Canada and we will not give you a red cent of tax break.

That is the policy which was perpetrated by a Government interested only in helping its friends. It was not a policy introduced by a Government truly interested in developing jobs and in building the Canadian economy. By suggesting, as we have in our amendment, that the condition of Canadianism be introduced into this particular legislation, what we are saying that we in the Liberal Party have a real belief in the ability of this country. We believe that as Canadians we can compete in the international market. We believe, as Canadians, we can build this economy and make it strong. We also believe that we have an interest in protecting our own economy. We have an interest in determining that this particular capital gains measure applies only to investment by Canadians for Canadians in Canadian jobs.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I only want to take a few minutes of the time of this House. I would like to make it clear to Hon. Members that the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) concerns a tax measure that is incredibly regressive in the worst sense of the word, that is, it enables certain people in this country to invest, to make profits and to reduce their taxes by using this measure, this capital gains tax exemption of $500,000, over a certain number of years, which in my view represents a potential loss of revenue for the Government. If we go according to the figures we have seen, the potential loss of revenue for 1985-86 would be $300 million, which means that the Government is losing $300 million to the rich, while by 1991, the Treasury will have lost $1,250,000,000, and the money will then have to come from the average Canadian, from Canadians who work and who do not have enough income to take advantage of this tax measure.

[English]

The purpose of the amendment is very clear. It is a proposed amendment to Bill C-84 to amend Clause 58 by adding immediately after line 39 at page 90 the following, "qualified Canadian property of an individual means a property that was a Canadian security within the meaning assigned by subsection 6 of Section 39". It is complicated. It means essentially that investments that are eligible should be Canadian investments. That purpose of the amendment and only that purpose is to try and convince this Government that there is no benefit to Canadians by investing in foreign countries and allowing those investors to deduct that income from their income tax, or allowing them to use that deduction as a fiscal advantage in Canada.

I do not want to speak too long because we want to get to other amendments. I endorse what my colleagues on this side have said. We must try and convince this Government that there is a Canadian reality, that there is a Canadian interest at stake. For God's sakes let us not give these advantages to people who invest in foreign countries. Let's have our investments here in Canada, make jobs for Canadians and allow Canadians to use those advantages to the betterment of the Canadian economy.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to go over all the criticisms of the Budget which we have made in previous debates. Members of the House including Members on the Government side should know that the Budget proposals have been criticized and attacked by virtually every group representing our senior citizens, family groups, welfare groups, anti-poverty organizations. Recently the Anglican Church published a report entitled "Poverty in Canada". In dealing with this Budget it said, and I quote:

> In the midst of some of the most difficult social problems we have ever faced as a nation the federal Government presented its Budget. This Budget was to be the response of a caring Government after months of consultation and negotiation with big business, labour, small business, churches and community groups. The result was an economic move to the right that will directly affect the lives of millions of Canadians who are already feeling the effects of poverty.

Dealing with this particular proposal of the Government to take away any taxation on the $500,000 capital gains which any Canadian may accomplish, it said, and I again quote:

> The capital gains tax will boost substantially all those people who already have money.

That argument has been put forward not just by the kind of people who try to represent the interests of ordinary Canadians who are in the lower income brackets. Opposition to the Government's proposal has been made by people who have not been particularly interested or involved in defending the rights of ordinary citizens. It has been made by tax experts who usually spend their time telling wealthy individuals and corporations how they can avoid paying taxes, how they can reduce their tax burdens.

William Lowler, a former official in the Department of Finance Tax Policy Division, and a technical adviser to the Conservative Task Force on Revenue Canada in 1984, reported in The Financial Post of November 30, 1985, in connection with this proposal of the Government that it will have a disastrous effect structurally on the tax system. He said regarding this particular proposal:

> Its scope is too broad. Although many would support lower taxes from the sale of Canadian common stock, practitioners fail to see how tax free gains on the disposition of jewellery, summer cottages, or Florida condominiums provide much benefit for the economy.

Then he said:

> The exemptions destroy the neutrality which has existed between the taxation of dividends and capital gains.

He says that this neutrality is vital to the successful integration of corporation and personal income tax. John Bossons, an economist at the University of Toronto Institute for Policy Analysis, stated:

> The prime beneficiaries of the tax exemption will probably be real estate speculators.

I ask Members on the Conservative side who are so concerned, as we all are, about finding jobs for the 1,125,000 Canadians who have not got jobs about making our manufacturing industry more efficient so that it can compete both in Canada and in international markets for sales, thereby providing profits for the companies and jobs for the workers. How will this kind of real estate speculation provide jobs? Who will it benefit except those speculators? Who will it benefit but those speculators?

● (1710)

In a study done by the Department of Finance in 1980, this is what was said about the removal of taxes on capital gains. It was said that this removal would:

Discourage investment in high-risk and start-up ventures;

Channel investment funds out of riskier ventures and into safe bets like real estate;

Encourage real estate speculation and higher land prices;

Do little to stimulate over-all investment;

Discourage the small investor;

Provide a generous windfall for the rich without requiring them to invest further;—

Let me put on the record the views of another tax specialist who works in the Ottawa office of Coopers & Lybrand, one of the largest accounting firms in this country. The Globe and Mail quotes Allan Lumsden as saying:

"I wouldn't have thought you'd solve Canada's unemployment problem by exempting capital gains," Mr. Lumsden says.

Our Party is very suspicious of tax proposals such as those which would permit large-scale avoidance of taxes on capital gains. One could make a case for that if those proposals were directed at encouraging useful programs in Canada. I can understand a proposal which would help farmers tranfer their farms to their children when they want to retire. I can understand a proposal which would help companies which manufacture goods or provide services become more efficient. However, this exemption of virtually all capital gains for purposes which really benefit no one but the people who have the money to make these gains is something which we certainly cannot support.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motions Nos. 2 and 3 were grouped for debate and will be voted on separately. Prior to that, we will vote on the amendment to Motion No. 2, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment to the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Section 11 of Standing Order 81, a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred. Because of the amendment, the vote on Motion No. 2 will also be deferred.

The question is on Motion No. 3, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Section 11 of Standing Order 81, a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

[Translation]

We shall now proceed with Motion No. 5.

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount) moved:

Motion No. 5

That Bill C-84, be amended by deleting Clause 82.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

[English]

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to be able to support his amendment on behalf of my Party. Obviously young Canadians who in the past and future had hoped to take advantage of what was called a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan were looking forward to the opportunity to continue to contribute to this plan which helped many young Canadian families get together downpayments for their first homes. In the 11 years of the program's existence, almost 2.5 million Canadians have taken advantage of the tool of RHOSP, the small tax deduction the Government allowed families and single parents who were trying to buy their first homes. Unfortunately, in one fell swoop the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) removed this initiative to home ownership for young people.

We saw no evidence presented in the House to buttress the argument of the Government that this particular measure was not helping those who needed help the most including young, middle and low-income families. We are not talking about a half a million dollar capital gains tax write-off. That capital gains tax write-off has been supported by the Conservative Party. Here we are talking about a program which allowed young Canadian single parents and couples to put away $1,000 per year toward the purchase of first homes. That is not a fortune. That is not half a million dollars. However, the Government chose to stamp out the only Government initiative which was permitting young people to get into the housing market-place.

In most major cities, the dream of home ownership which our parents and many of the older Members of the House were able to achieve is being impeded by the Government's decision to cancel, annul, finish, annihilate and destroy the RHOSP Program. The amendment with which we are now dealing calls upon the Government to reintroduce a program that over its 11-year history was able to help two and a half million Canadians.

The Government has said that the program was not helping young Canadians. In fact, the figures will show otherwise. The figures show that in 1983, of the 539,719 Canadians who participated in the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan, 431,610 were Canadians between the ages of 20 and 34 years. That is not the age of the average Member of the House but the age of the average young person who wants to get a leg up into the housing market.

In Toronto, Halifax, Vancouver and other major urban centres, most renters are paying more and more for accommodation at a time when vacancy rates are shrinking. The natural alternative of home ownership is being impeded by this particular initiative. The cancellation of the RHOSP coupled with the decision to increase the taxes on building materials indicates that the Government has, in the only 15 or 16 months since that fatal blow to the Canadian taxpayers which occurred on September 4, 1984, directly increased the cost of home ownership by anywhere between $500 and $1,500 depending upon estimates. That $500 to $1,500 is reflected in the increased cost of building materials alone. I can see Members opposite straining to hear my comments on interest rates. It is true that interest rates have been attractive enough in the recent past to allow young people to obtain that investment out on the open market. We have also seen that the interest rate situation is not a result of this Government's policies. In fact, the hapless Minister of Finance wrung his hands in the House today and shook his head while telling us to talk to the Governor of the Bank of Canada. He told us that he could do nothing about the declining Canadian dollar or rising interest rates. We can be sure that the Minister of Finance will take the credit when interest rates decline. When interest rates begin to rise, as we have seen them do over the last couple of weeks, the Minister will wash his hands of the situation, just as he washed his hands of any responsibility which the Government has to encourage home ownership through programs such as the Registered Home Ownership Saving Plan.

Canadians will look at the two government initiatives before us which we are debating today. On the one hand they will see a $500,000 capital gains write-off which will benefit the top 4 per cent of the Canadian population. The Government stands four-square behind that capital gains write-off. On the other hand, it nickels and dimes to death those young Canadians who wish to see a $1,000 tax break in order for them to put the money together for a downpayment on their first family home. That is the Conservative philosophy. It is the philosophy of a Party which says to young people: "We do not care that you cannot save $1,000 a year". It is not a great deal of money. It is not enough money to necessarily permit a couple to move into a higher bracket in terms of home ownership. It is not an amount of money which will make a vast difference to many of these couples. However, it may permit them to put together $5,000 or $10,000 or, in the case of a couple, $15,000 or $20,000, which will help them break into what is becoming an increasingly prohibitive housing market in Canada.

When our parents were young most of them could aspire to owning their own homes at some point in time. Many young people today have given up on that particular option. If they can pursue the option it is only because they are "two income families". That is the only way they are able to keep up with mortgage payments and the cost of home ownership which has escalated incredibly over the last number of years. In fact, the Government suggests that this money was not being used for the purchase of homes. Even if the Government were to introduce the demise of the RHOSP would one not think it would make sense to get the money out of those bank accounts and into the market-place? The latest figures indicate that approximately $2.2 billion will be removed from RHOSP accounts and moved into other areas. Would it not have made sense for the Minister of Finance to suggest that this money be directed to either home ownership or toward the purchase of durable Canadian goods such as refrigerators and automobiles? That would provide a stimulus to the economy. Instead, we see our Government imposing a tax measure without providing any documents to buttress its argument that the money is not being spent to buy homes. The Government suggests that this money be taken and used to buy condominiums in Florida, diamonds in South Africa or racehorses in Europe, thus taking advantage of the same type of tax break that would otherwise have been in place.

It would have made sense for the Government to say that if it is eliminating this program then the money which is in those accounts should be freed up and used to invest in Canadian goods and services or Canadian durables such as furniture. However, the Government chose not to follow that course. In its short-sighted view it is sacrificing the hopes and dreams of young Canadians. It is sacrificing those dreams in order to bail out the banks and pay 4 per cent of the population which will benefit from the $500,000 capital gains write-off. In this way it will keep the only promise that it is likely to be able to keep to anyone, that is, the promise to help its friends to line their pockets since this is a Government of the rich, by the rich and for the rich.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to have an opportunity to say a few words with respect to the amendment which is before us. I too share many of the concerns mentioned by the previous speaker. I find it peculiar that we are now debating an amendment which, fundamentally, is seeking to help young families who wish to purchase their first home. Basically, that is the purpose of the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. The Government has now moved to remove this provision. I am more concerned with the symbolism involved in this particular act. I am concered with the type of signal it sends out to young people in Surrey and Richmond in the greater Vancouver area who are working hard to save for the purchase of their first time.

Mr. Blenkarn: It is just a small tax shelter we are getting rid of for those who can afford to save an extra $1,000 a year!

Mr. Riis: To those people who obtain incomes from capital gains the Government is saying that there will be no taxes imposed in this respect.

Mr. Blenkarn: It is just a small tax shelter—merely a loophole.

Mr. Riis: The Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) indicates that this is a tax loophole which, presumably, we wish to keep in place. He is absolutely correct. We feel that this is a tax expenditure with a great deal of merit. We feel there are other tax expenditures which have little, if any, merit. I will mention one of them just for the interest of the Hon. Member.

I refer to the decision that no tax be paid on capital gains of up to $500,000. That is the type of expenditure which will cost the people of Canada a considerable amount of money—in fact, hundreds of millions of dollars. Those people who derive their incomes from capital gains at the moment only pay tax on half of those gains. We feel that is wrong. We also feel it is wrong to pay no tax at all on the first $500,000 of income spread over a number of years. One can call it a loophole or whatever one likes. One can even call it a boondoggle. We say it is ethically inappropriate and morally wrong. It is simply not the right way to treat people in our tax system.

On the other hand, we feel there are some tax expenditures which do make sense. We believe everyone should have access to decent shelter and that they should be able to purchase their own homes if they so wish. Because of the Government's high interest rate policy and because of a number of other reasons which have caused the prices of homes to inflate beyond the means of most Canadians, we feel that this provision could encourage people to save for that very important first down-payment. I have no hesitation in saying that that is the type of tax expenditure which we would like to see more of. We would like to see people being encouraged to save for their first home. We like to see people being encouraged to start their own business and being encouraged to find ways and means to start their own farms. Those are legitimate uses for tax expenditure programs.To even think that they are not being used for those purposes and that we want to eliminate this particular provision is wrong. This amendment simply suggests it be restored. In this way young Canadians could save for the purchase of their first home while being assisted through our tax system.

I would like to hear my hon. friend from Mississauga South stand in his place and explain why he feels that this particular amendment is inappropriate. I would like to hear him once again wax eloquently with respect to those people whose incomes are derived from capital gains and who should not pay any income tax. I would like to hear him explain the thought that if one obtains income from capital gains then tax should only be imposed on half of that gain. Perhaps he could go back a bit further and go into other administrations in order to explain that. In other words, he seems to say that dollars earned by capital gains are evaluated differently from dollars earned by labour. He says that labour should be taxed on the whole dollar. However, if you obtain your income from capital gains, only half of that should be taxed. Now, none of that will be taxed up to $500,000 over a number of years.

• (1730)

This is the kind of useful debate I think we should be hearing in this House and I assume my colleague from Mississauga South will be reacting to some of these comments. I simply want to say that we feel Motion No. 5 is certainly in order. The revenues lost to the federal Government will be more than offset by the generation of investment in new homes, home furnishings, and the assistance that would provide to our manufacturing, construction and forestry sectors. We feel very strongly about this amendment and we will certainly be looking forward to supporting it when the opportunity to vote arrives.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 5 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 81(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

We will now proceed to Motion No. 6.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South) moved:

Motion No. 6

That Bill C-84, be amended in Clause 132

"deducted after a day to be fixed by proclamation."

Mr. Gauthier: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. I may be mistaken but I think Motion No. 6 and No. 7 should be grouped together for debate. They are identical so I suggest we group them for debate.

Mr. Blenkarn: The same principle is involved even though the issues are slightly different.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The ruling was that they would be debated separately. However, if the House agrees to debate them together?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Very well.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South) moved:

Motion No. 7

He said: Mr. Speaker, in the course of the committee hearings concerning the sections referred to in Motions Nos. 6 and 7, amendments were introduced to provide that the particular clauses would not come into force and effect until they were specifically proclaimed. Unfortunately, in the rush to put the Bill through and complete it during the day, the detail with respect to the particular clauses was missed. The concept is that employers required to deduct and remit CPP, unemployment insurance and income tax remittances to the Crown must do so and they become a first charge or trust arrangement on those moneys. A problem arises in connection with an insolvency or bankruptcy, however. In the last Parliament there was an offer by the then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs that if special arrangements were given to allow some preference to wage earners in a bankruptcy or insolvency over and above the preferences presently allowed secured creditors, meaning the banks in particular for those who are not quite sure how this arises, and in connection with floating charge debentures, the Crown would waive its preference. The thrust of this Bill was to reinforce the Crown's preference to this money over and above secured creditors and the like.

There have been a number of discussions between the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). The result is that the Government would like the matter to rest with the clauses passed but not necessarily proclaimed with this statute. I understand that the clauses will not be proclaimed until such time as the new Insolvency Act is available for discussion in this House and the matter has been brought to the attention of the House. The consequences are, Sir, that if these amendments pass, the preference in favour of the Crown will not exist until proclaimed. That will certainly enable things to be proceeded with in a much easier way with respect to the Insolvency Act when it comes before the House. I therefore ask the House to accept these amendments which are of a technical nature and indeed are already contained in a number of other amendments passed in committee.

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I just want to underline the fact that the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), with his usual candour, pointed out that it was in the "rush"—I underline that word—to push this Bill through that these provisions were inadvertently dropped. I would remind the House that this was the very point made by Members on this side of the House, including the NDP. One does not rush one of the most fundamental amendments to the Income Tax Act which we have seen in many years. That is the point I would like to make.

Mr. McDermid: Tell us how it took you three years to pass a Bill when you were in Government.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 6 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gauthier: On division.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is now on Motion No. 7 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions at report stage of Bill C-84.

Call in the Members.

• (1800)

And the division bells having rung:

Mr. Speaker: The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions on Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act. The first vote will be on the amendment to Motion No. 2. Mr. Garneau, seconded by Mr. Gauthier, moves:

That Motion No. 2 be amended by deleting (d) therefrom.

The House divided on the amendment (Mr. Garneau) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 167)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the amendment lost.

Order, please. We do not want to have Question Period noise spilling over into our vote taking.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. In order to expedite the proceedings I suggest that it might be possible to apply the vote just taken to all of the remaining Motions, with the exception of Motions Nos. 2 and 3. Our intention would be not to vote in the same way on Motions Nos. 2 and 3. It may be necessary to take the vote on Motion No. 2 and apply it to Motion No. 3, and apply the first vote on the amendment to the all the remaining motions.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have been consulting with my colleague, the House Leader for the New Democratic Party. This approach would certainly be satisfactory to the Official Opposition.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I attempted to get in touch with the House Leader of the New Democratic Party, but I was unable to do so. What he says seems to be reasonable to me.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I think I know what we are doing. I must, however, put the question on Motion No. 2 because it has not yet been put to the House. Only the amendment was put earlier. The question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Shall I dispense with the ringing of the bells?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: I take it that on Motion No. 2 Members wish to apply the vote in reverse?

Mr. Deans: No.

● (1810)

Mr. Speaker: We will call the vote on Motion No. 2 and apply it to Motion No. 3. Therefore the question is on Motion No. 2. Mr. Johnston, seconded by Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques), moves:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-84, be amended in Clause 58 by adding immediately after line 39 at page 90 the following:

"(d) 'qualified Canadian property' of an individual means a property that was a Canadian security within the meaning assigned by subsection 6 of section 39".

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Johnston), which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost. The next vote is on Motion No. 3. Mr. Johnston, seconded by Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques), moves:

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-84, be amended in Clause 58 by adding immediately after line 40 at page 91 the following:

"(d) the amount that would be determined in respect of the individual for the year under paragraph 3(b) in respect of the capital gains and capital losses if the only properties referred to in that paragraph were qualified Canadian properties".

I take it that the final vote just taken on Motion No. 2 will apply to this motion.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost. Motions Nos. 6 and 7 were carried on division earlier, therefore no vote is required.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance) moved that Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, as amended, be concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, January 16, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ACT, 1973

The House resumed from Monday, December 16, 1985, consideration of report stage of Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973, as reported (without amendment) from a legislative committee; and Motions Nos. 4 and 6 (Ms. Mitchell), Motions Nos. 5 and 7 (Mr. Malépart) (p. 9391), and Motion No. 9 (Mr. Redway) (p. 9392).

Mr. Speaker: I have had the opportunity to review the procedural comments made by the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn), the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) and the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) on Monday, December 16, 1985, relating to the report stage motions in amendment to Bill C-70.

[Translation]

And on December 11, I stated my position on Motions Nos. 1 and 3.

The comments made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) have confirmed my position, and I have no hesitation in declaring Motions Nos. 1 and 3 out of order.

I would refer Hon. Members to Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, Fifth Edition, Citation 773, (5) and (7).

[English]

Motion No. 2 has given the Chair some concern from the outset. On December 11, I said I was disposed to give the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) the benefit of the doubt. I must say the procedural issues raised by all sides in respect to this amendment are strong. At first blush, the amendment does appear to reinstate the parent Act after one year and does appear to contradict the principle of the Bill as adopted at second reading. On the other hand, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain claimed the amendment is a sunset clause, and that if the Bill is to become law for one year this amendment, therefore, cannot be a true negative of the Bill.

I am prepared to find that the amendment is not a true negative, but I cannot agree that the amendment qualifies as a true sunset clause. It appears to be a sunset clause to which future provisions are attached.

That being said, and having expressed my reservations, I am, nevertheless, disposed to give the Member the benefit of a debate and to allow the House to decide on the merits of such an amendment. Motion No. 2 will, therefore, be debated and voted on separately.

[Translation]

The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) and the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) have made representations to the Chair on grouping Motions Nos. 4 to 5 for debate.

I can assure them I listened very carefully to their comments, and I agree that Motion No. 4 does not affect the same provision as Motions Nos. 5 to 9.

[English]

All these amendments are, from a thematic point of view, however, closely related. That is why they are grouped for debate, but in terms of where they are offered in the Bill, they must be voted on separately. Hon. Members have offered comments as to the contents of the amendments, but I have not been convinced that, for procedural reasons, separate debate should be allowed. Therefore, the grouping as announced on December 11, 1985, will stand.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I expect everyone remembers Bill C-70, which arises from one of the Budget proposals of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). When this legislation was introduced in the House by the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) for the purpose of de-indexing family allowances, it also included amendments concerning what is referred to as "presumption of death".

Mr. Speaker, the Official Opposition, women's groups, family organizations, the clergy and the entire population have organized a vast movement against this Bill, not only against de-indexation of family allowances but also against the concept that the Minister would have the authority, after a child had disappeared for a certain time, to send a certificate to the parents, to presume the child dead and to close the department's file, strictly for administrative purposes, and not, contrary to what some people would have us believe, to help families settle their insurance claims.

Mr. Speaker, strong opposition from most Canadians was instrumental in blocking the adoption of this measure before the Christmas recess. Quite appropriately they expected the Government not to change anything in the family allowances program without their consent and the approval of the House of Commons. Unfortunately it did not turn out that way. Worse still, Canadians who happened to watch television before the festive season were able to witness the Prime Minister's outright refusal to meet with the Canadian coalition made up of family organizations, women's representatives, the clergy and many other interest groups.

It is with sadness that we are resuming the debate today on an issue about which the Government has shown utter indifference towards a Canadian family policy. Contrary to what had been advocated in the Speech from the Throne, contrary to what had been promised during the election campaign, for the umpteenth time, Mr. Speaker—and we have given up counting—the Prime Minister of Canada misled the people and the House, in the sense that the Speech from the Throne, a statement of the Government's official position, made it quite clear that the Government was indeed prepared to open the debate on a family policy.

Mr. Speaker, it is important to go over past events so that Canadians and all Conservative Members might recall that the Government had tabled another document urging all citizens to express their views on the outcome of consultations held by a parliamentary committee. Bearing the official signature of a Government representative, namely the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), this document stated clearly that amendments and discussions related to the income support program for families with children would not have anything to do with deficit reduction. Every group, every witness and every Canadian had absolutely no reason to question the intellectual honesty of the Prime Minister and of the Minister of National Health and Welfare. All Members of the Opposition and, I am sure, even the Progressive Conservative Members who sat on that committee took the Prime Minister's word. Unfortunately all of them soon came to realize they were mistaken about the Prime Minister's intellectual integrity when the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) tabled his Budget containing provisions which were quite different from the Government's avowed commitments.

As a result of the debate and the many questions directed to the Government in the House of Commons, we have managed to force the Minister of Finance to admit that the purpose of his amendments to the Family Allowance Program was to reduce his deficit, and as is the case concerning several other issues, whether the Old Age Security Pension or the tragedy which I experience now with the job losses in Montreal East, the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance, the Minister of National Health and Welfare and all the other members of this party are making contradictory statements.

Mr. Speaker, today I doubt very much that we could make members of the Conservative party aware of the situation, not to mention the Ministers and the Prime Minister himself who did not have the guts at least to meet the representatives of the coalition against the Family Allowance de-indexation.

As to the presumption of death which is dealt with in this bill, I sent for a Montreal mother who is suffering the tragedy of the disappearance of her child. Had it not been for the objection raised by the Official Opposition to this clause, the Minister of National Health and Welfare would have sent this mother a presumption of death certificate. Mr. Speaker, I asked that that mother, Mrs. Métivier, be heard in committee. In order not to delay the debate on this Bill, I even offered to give up ten minutes of my time to allow this mother who has personal knowledge of such a situation to advise us as to the personal impact of such a decision; by a nominal vote, however, P.C. members refused.

Mr. Speaker, Canadians will remember these members, and especially the Prime Minister. It is not too late. Although I still have some hope, I do not keep my fingers crossed, because unfortunately P.C. members much too often have disappointed the Canadian people. There remains a possibility—

An Hon. Member: That is not true!

Mr. Malépart: —I would like the Hon. Member who says that this is not true to have the courage to rise and say clearly that he agrees with the decision of his Government to provide only a 31 cents a month increase to mothers while this same Government is pushing through legislation which will provide a $500,000 capital gains exemption for the rich.

Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member who has just spoken and the name of whose constituency I do not recall, but whom I could name has the courage to rise and admit publicly that he wants to defend the rich and not the poor, that is his problem. However, if he really wants to get involved in this debate or to help Canadian families, I shall not ask him to speak publicly, but ask him instead to do his job as a Government Member and raise this issue in caucus during the weekend. When the Conservatives have their caucus meeting during the weekend, they have an opportunity to put pressure on the Prime Minister and Cabinet so that, if they do not want their Prime Minister to lose face, they could perhaps not necessarily withdraw this measure immediately, but ask that the Government re-establish full indexation of allowances in the next budget.

[English]

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I am asking that the Government withdraw Bill C-70, a Bill to partially deindex family allowances and cut family allowances by 3 per cent per year regardless of how much higher the cost of living goes. I am asking the Government to withdraw this Bill for four reasons.

First, this Bill picks on defenceless kids. The Government tried a trick like this last year on the senior citizens. The senior citizens fought back so hard that the Government ran away and did not even place the legislation before us that it had announced. Now the Government has decided that kids cannot defend themselves so well, so the Government is going after the kids. A good many senior citizens in Spadina are among the hundreds and hundreds who have signed petitions on this point. I know them by their names and addresses. They perhaps feel that the kids deserve defence. They may also feel that if the Government gets away with attacking the kids this year, it might go after the senior citizens' pensions again.

• (1120)

Second, the Government should withdraw the Bill because it reflects a loss of faith in Canada. In Canada, Mr. Speaker, we are losing faith in providing for children. While parents individually will give all they can and endure all they can for their children, the country is cutting back the money for health, for education and for social housing.

The same Party that governs in Ottawa now in the decades when it governed in Ontario encouraged adult only apartments, apartments where children are forbidden, outlawed. The Conservative Government of Ontario repeatedly refused to address that injustice with human rights legislation.

A country that says we are too poor to provide for our children clearly has no faith in its future. Therefore, this Bill should be withdrawn.

The Bill should be withdrawn also because it is hypocritical and unjust. This same Government has increased hand-outs to the rich, rich corporations and rich individuals, with billions of dollars of tax giveaways and grants, while trying to squeeze money out of the children of the country.

This Government preaches user-pay, but it does not want to pay for the things that it uses. Right here on the Hill, secretaries, assistants, waitresses and other staff, who are underpaid by any general standard, are charged $395 a month if they want to bring a child to the day care centre on the Hill.

Mr. Malone: What about our Hansard reporters? Look after them too.

Mr. Heap: The Government says that a mother who wants to work for the Government must pay $395 to the Government to look after her child, yet the Government does not want to pay her a salary that would cover the cost. The Government wants the poor to pay the expenses of the rich. That is hypocritical—

An Hon. Member: That is you.

Mr. Heap: —and the hypocrisy is reflected in this legislation.

Finally, I am asking the Government to withdraw this Bill because it is pushing it through with indecent haste.

I come to Clause 15(1) which will give the Minister the power to declare a missing child dead. The Minister does not know what he is talking about, of course, and is not required by law to know what he is talking about. The Minister decides to save $31.50 a month—

Mr. Epp (Provencher): No. That is what you pay.

Mr. Heap: —for the deficit by telling parents: "Forget it. Your child is dead", and by ordering the insurance company to stop searching, to stop funding a search for a child, to pay the claim instead and to send a death certificate, probably after three months. It is not clear from the unclear wording of the Act just what exactly is intended, but it gives the Minister wide discretion to tell parents, "Forget your child. Stop looking for him. He is dead. I am not going to pay family allowance anymore for your telephone calls and letters you have to pay for to search for your child". That point has not been dealt with in consultation with the parents concerned or by the child find group. It is simply an arbitrary decision. It is such a mean one, Mr. Speaker. It is mean to pick not only on the children but on the parents who are shocked and damaged by the fact that their child is missing, and then to give them a further blow by saying: "Forget it. Your child is dead. We are ending our payments".

Mr. Thacker: Your abortion policy is not very kind.

Mr. Heap: That is a sole decision of the Government to attack the living in the name of the dead, the dead being the money that is owed to the banks by the Government. That money is not live stuff. It is not live people. It is dead stuff. At best it is the result of the past work of this country. This Government is willing to attack the parents and perhaps even the still surviving child by an act of ultimate meanness that makes pre-Christmas Scrooge look like Santa Claus. The Government is going to cut $31.50 a month from the family that is struggling to find its missing child. That is not just mean, that is sick. A Government that will do that is sick.

Mr. Thacker: You have forgotten about the child tax credit.

Mr. Heap: A Government and its back-benchers, who like to prate and preach against abortion but will attack the living children in that way, are sick or worse than sick.

I plead with the Government to withdraw the whole Bill, but at least if the Government does not have the good conscience to withdraw the whole Bill, then let it withdraw Clause 15(1). That is the section empowering the Minister to tell parents of children who are missing when the Minister does not know the facts that their child is dead and that there will be no more search and no more money to pay for telephone calls. I plead with the Government to withdraw the whole Bill, but if not, then let it at least withdraw Clause 15(1).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp).

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I will not speak for very long. I have decided to speak on Clause 2 to repeat what has already been discussed concerning Clauses 4 to 9. I do so because practically everything the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) said was wrong, dead wrong.

Mr. Orlikow: You are the only person who thinks so.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I simply cannot leave the matter on the record and allow the debate to continue on points made by the Member that are wrong.

First, he said that the Government was withdrawing $31.50 a month from the family allowance. That is wrong. That is the payment, first, on a monthly basis.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I must have unanimous consent to allow the Minister to speak again because I notice he spoke on December 11. Is there unanimous consent for the Minister to speak?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Ms. Mitchell: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that the Minister cannot continue. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria).

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would have loved to have heard the rest of the Minister's speech. I had a feeling that his next statement was going to be that he wanted to withdraw the Bill. If he can give us an assurance that that is what he was going to do next, I am sure I could get our colleague who disagreed to reconsider her decision and so give the Minister the opportunity to withdraw this hideous piece of legislation before us today. However, we should not hold our breath.

Here we are again giving a last kick at the can on Bill C-70, a last attempt by members of this House to convince the Government either to withdraw its Bill, to amend it, or to improve it.

An Hon. Member: No way.

Mr. Boudria: A Tory Member across the way has said not to count on that. This is the same group of Members who in the past were speaking in favour of the Bill to deindex senior citizens pensions when the Government was in the process of withdrawing that particular measure. I warn the Hon. Member across the way who says that the Government will not withdraw this legislation that if he and others were a little more dedicated to working in the interests of their constituents, instead of supporting the Government on positions not even knowing whether the Government will pursue them in the future, his interests and those of the electors whom he purports to represent would be far better served.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind you of the representations received by the House of Commons on Bill C-70. I want to point out that, on September 25, 1985, the Réseau d'action et d'information pour les femmes wrote a special delivery letter to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to inform him that the Bill to de-index family allowances was "a disaster".

Mr. Speaker, on November 4, 1985, the Confédération des organismes familiaux du Québec presented a submission to the Parliamentary Committee also expressing the view that Bill C-70 should be withdrawn.

On October 23, 1985, the Fédération des unions de familles incorporée made similar comments.

On October 21, the Fédération des femmes canadiennes françaises, section Sacré-Cœur of Ottawa, also expressed the same views.

[English]

The National Action Committee on the Status of Women also expressed disagreement with this budgetary measure.

[Translation]

The Federation of Quebec Women, in October 1985, also presented a similar brief. In October 1985, the Federation of Quebec Associations of Single-Parent Families opposed the measure.

Another group, AFEAS, also stated in a brief on October 30, 1985, that the legislation should either be withdrawn or amended.

The Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women has also objected to Bill C-70.

[English]

Also we received a submission from the Deputy Minister and the Minister of Community and Social Services of the Government of Manitoba concerning this Bill. As well, the Calgary Coalition for the Support of Persons on Welfare sent a brief expressing disapproval of this budgetary initiative. We have received briefs from countless organizations across the country.

The Government claims to be one that consults with Canadians. We have heard that in the past. The Tories have said in the House and elsewhere that they were not a Government of confrontation, I guess that is the word they used. They have indicated that they want to consult and truly represent the people of Canada. Today is the last chance they have to prove that in the case of Bill C-70 they in fact consult the people, listen, participate fully in the consultative process and come out of it, not only having heard the briefs but having listened to them. That is the part that is important. This is the last chance that the Government has to prove that it listens to the people of Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, in October 1985, a group of Liberal Members of Parliament chaired by myself had several Canadians, several groups submitting briefs to them on the Budget. One group of Canadians who submitted a brief to the Liberal Forum in August 1985 was the Prescott and Russell union of social assistance recipients, in my constituency. And without reading the whole brief, because time does not allow, let me however quote from it, especially the conclusion which reads as follows:

In conclusion, we can therefore state that the Budget brought down by Minister Wilson extorts still more money from our members and causes concern to our group, the Prescott and Russell union of social assistance recipients, for the years after 1988. Our members and the small wage earners should be made aware of that and told about the Government's current position.

Mr. Speaker, in other words, this group of low-income people from my constituency wanted at that time to rally people to protest against Bill C-70 and other parts of the Budget brought down by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). And this has been done, Mr. Speaker. From then on, we kept receiving day after day large numbers of petitions, and as we know, before Christmas, as you certainly remember, Mr. Speaker, entire days were spent in this House presenting petitions signed by Canadians from across the country who were expressing their disagreement on the Bill providing for partial de-indexation of family allowances.

[English]

In summary, let us look at the impact of the Budget on families with children. The Government of Canada, through abolishing family allowances, will gain $15 million in the year 1985-86; in 1986-87, $80 million; and in 1987-88, $140 million. If saving money is a justifiable excuse—and I am not prepared to concede that it is on this particular measure—let us look at what it is doing. There are other measures in the Budget which will reduce revenues for 1986-87 by $75 million, for 1987-88 by $205 million, and for 1988-89 by $300 million. They are not saving money. They are merely taking away from those people who can least afford it and they are redistributing those funds, but not to the people who need them. They are taking away from the poor and giving to those who have more. The people who will benefit from capital gains exemptions are not the ones who have no money. Those people have no gain on which to capitalize, so how can they receive benefit from a capital gains exemption? It will make the poor poorer and the rich richer.

In conclusion, I tell the Minister that this is his last chance to withdraw this budgetary measure.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I want to deal briefly with the amendment which we are now discussing. Before doing so, I would like to direct the attention of the Minister to an article which appeared in today's edition of The Toronto Star. It is headlined: "Groups send PM Petition to stop Baby Bonus Bill" and it indicates the following:

Twenty major church, native, labour and women's organizations—speaking for millions of Canadians—want the federal Government to drop plans to deindex family allowances.

The groups telexed a petition to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney late yesterday in an attempt to stop the Conservative Government from passing amendments to the Family Allowances Act.

It continues:

Yesterday, three more MPs, including Tory MP Moe Mantha (Nipissing) delivered petitions from constituents strongly opposed to the changes.

Thousands of petitions have been presented. I have a dozen or more to present today. However, the story continues:

Among organizations included on the telex are: the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, National Farmers Union, Native Women's Association of Canada, Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, Canadian Day Care Advocacy Association, Canadian Labour Congress, National Anti-Poverty Organization, Yukon Status of Women Council, Quebec Native Women's Association, Quebec Federation of Women, Metro Family Services Association, Metro Social Planning Council, Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, the United Church of Canada, Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped, Citizens Against Child Poverty and the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario.

I do not know, Mr. Speaker, when there has been such broad opposition, if ever, to any proposal brought forward by any Government. This is a Government that has prided itself on the idea that it is going to consult. Well, the consultations have taken place and the evidence is very clear that the broad mass of Canadian people do not want this Bill, they want it to be withdrawn.

Let me, Mr. Speaker, deal for a few moments with the particular amendment which we are now dealing with, and that has to do with the presumption of death. We believe that the presumption of death, and therefore the issuance of a certificate, has been the prerogative of the provincial or territorial jurisdiction within which the death occurred. We suspect, even going beyond that, in the case of deaths which had occurred or were presumed to have occurred in jurisdictions outside of Canada, that it would be necessary to obtain the death certificate from that jurisdiction before a decision could be made to discontinue the payment of family allowance. We believe it would be improper for us to give to the Minister in legislative form the power to make a presumption and issue a certificate, inasmuch as we would come into conflict with a very serious constitutional question.

I would ask the Minister that he not proceed with that as he already has the power now to discontinue the payments for any child who it can be proven is not in the custody of the person to whom the payment is normally made. With that power the Minister is able to achieve all that is required of him at this moment. We submit that that being the case, this section of the Bill is not necessary. We say to the Minister we would much prefer that he operate with the power he now has, that he recognize the potential for constitutional dispute. Not only is there the Constitution within Canada, but there is also a serious question of jurisdictional dispute between the Government of Canada issuing a certificate of death, on the one hand, and the jurisdiction outside of Canada which would have the authority and the requirement to investigate the facts surrounding the death of any person and clearly establish for all time who it was that died before any action taken by the federal Government could be considered legal and therefore proper.

Mr. Speaker, the other reason I have for proposing this clause in the Bill is that it is opposed by all the child find groups. The child find groups in Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Alberta have sent telegrams to the Minister asking him to withdraw this section until proper consultation has taken place with them. They, I understand, have sent a special delivery letter to the Minister outlining their concerns about this section. Their concerns are as follows, if I can summarize them. One, that they were never consulted; two, that insurance companies will be compelled to pay out claims instead of the current practice of hiring private investigators to try to find a missing child; three, that it is simply not necessary to give the Minister such God-like powers of discretion; four, that the whole clause is so poorly worded that no one has a clear idea when the Minister would invoke these powers; and, five, that their experience is that family allowance has been cut off after the child has been missing after three months as opposed, according to our information, to an average of six months.

Given the constitutional problem and the concerns of the organizations most directly concerned, that is, the child find organizations, I cannot understand why the Minister is so insistent on proceeding with this section when, first, he has not consulted sufficiently with the organizations representing missing children, who are the most concerned about this problem and who have the most information about what really happens, and what should be done; and second, when the constitutional problems and the jurisdictional differences between the federal Government and the provinces have not been solved. As I said, we believe that under the other provisions of this Bill the Minister has all the power he needs to deal with this question, and therefore we intend to oppose this clause of the Bill. That is why we are supporting this amendment.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on this particular amendment with some hesitation, and really some chagrin. What is more important, I wish to correct some of the misimpressions, and I guess I have to say distortions, that have been created in the House of Commons, particularly during the past half hour, especially by the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap).

I speak to this because I think Members will accept that I have had considerable involvement in past years with regard to missing children. I want to underscore the fact that no Party, no Member, has exclusive jurisdiction over compassion. All of us have a concern about missing children. All of us have a concern about the anguish that faces parents when they are worried about where their children are, and perhaps the torture that their missing children have experienced or are experiencing. Therefore, I am not a little bit upset that some Members want to make this an argument about who has more compassion over missing children, the Opposition or the Government. There is no exclusivity about this.

I challenge the Opposition Members—

Ms. Mitchell: Which Party is deindexing the family allowances?

Mr. Friesen: I challenge the Members. I worked for six years on one Criminal Code amendment so that we might find abducted children. The Opposition may give three weeks to debate on this and collect a few petitions. I challenge them to work six years for missing children.

So I come here with some feeling on this subject and some objection to some of the things that the Opposition Members have been saying about this and trying to make it look as though the Government and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), in particular, are looking for opportunities to cut off funds to those parents who have missing children. That is false, and that Party over there that wants to pride itself on being so interested in human rights ought to correct its misstatements.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Friesen: It should stand for the truth rather than for distortion.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Friesen: How can they, on the one hand, talk about justice and at the same time promote injustice on this particular subject? I want to tell those Members who are objecting so much to Clause 5 that there is a good and a proper reason for which the Minister needs this particular clause, and it is this; under the present Act the Family Allowances Act calls upon the Minister and his Department to cut off family allowances one month after the child is found to be missing. Now, it so happens that the Department has been carrying on payments for six months in contravention of the Act as a way to help people who are experiencing this anguish, so much so that the Auditor General, with his good accountant's mind who sees only numbers and the strict provisions of the Act rather than the anguish that people face, is objecting to the fact that the Minister of Health is not following the strict provisions of the Act and is overpaying parents who have missing children. If the Act reads as it does, how can the Minister obey the Act and still be compassionate? Therefore, he is looking for authority to carry on payments after a child is missing without compounding the anguish parents already face.

• (1150)

Second, what happens when a child is missing, the parents have been receiving payments for two or three years and the child is then found dead? A certificate of death is then produced to the Minister of National Health and Welfare in order to deal with the legalities of this deplorable case. By law, the Minister must collect from those parents three years of overpayments. How would you like to do that, Mr. Speaker? How would you like to tell those parents who have been grieving and mourning for three years that they owe the Government three years' worth of family allowance back payments because they have now filed a certificate of death?

For a change, I would like Opposition Members to be honest about their own feelings, about the nature of this case, about the leadership shown by, and the motives of, the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Please do not play around with the hurt and the feelings of parents across Cananda.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak to this amendment, especially after what I just heard. I heard one of my colleagues on the Government side inform the House that the Opposition Parties were distorting the provisions of this Bill and that we were playing on people's sentiments with our comments on the disappearance of children.

I do not think it is purely a partisan position, because if you look at the coalition of women's groups that made a joint representation on this question—and I will mention just those from Quebec—we have the Association féminine d'éducation d'action sociale, the Comité d'action sur le statut de la femme, the Comité de la condition féminine, Action Travail Femmes. There are quite a few. There are also parents who come to testify and asked to have these allowances maintained.

My hon. friend said earlier: What do you think the Government should do when a family has been receiving family allowances for three years and the child is found dead? I simply want to comment that the loss or disappearance of a child is followed by a period of mourning. When someone dies, there is a period of mourning that may last from one to three years. When a child disappears, the situation is quite different, because there has been no death to confirm the child is dead.

And that is why families whose children have disappeared cannot say after three or six months: My child is dead and the file is closed. So when we are talking about playing on the sentiments and feelings of families, I think my Government colleague has his sentiments mixed up and does not know what he is talking about.

It is also true that the families receiving these family allowances are spending the money wisely. Families where a child has disappeared have told us that the small amount they receive is used to pay companies and individuals to trace the child, and there are also lawyers' fees, and so forth.

So I am very sorry but I don't think it is up to the Government to decide that when a child has disappeared, the period of mourning ends after six months. I don't think the Government can legislate this. In fact, I think we should listen to the groups that came here to submit briefs and who also supported the steps taken by Mrs. Métivier.

There is also the Association of Quebec of Human Rights Committees, the Association pour la défense des droits sociaux du Québec métropolitain, the Centre communautaire sud-asiatique, the Centre d'éducation d'action des femmes, the Centre des femmes de Laval, and I could go on. When we are talking about emotional honesty, I think and I don't want to be biased or be accused of partisanship but I think that we are now legislating something that does not have to be legislated, and I think anyone who knows the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and recognizes the qualities of the Minister as mentioned by my hon. colleague would agree he could reconsider the legislation and meet the request for maintaining family allowance payments. I have not spent six years studying this kind of legislation, but I have worked long enough with families, especially needy families, to realize that the Government can act with a measure of compassion, and I don't think anyone would blame the Government for doing so. Therefore, I do not agree and cannot support this motion.

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I rise to say a few words and set the debate in its proper context. My colleague who has just resumed her seat referred to missing children and the anxiety of families whose children have died or simply vanished. The Bill does not deal with such cases. Here is how Clause 5 of the Bill reads:

—under circumstances that, in the opinion of the Minister, raise beyond a reasonable doubt a presumption that the child is dead—

Not that he is missing, but that he is dead.

—the Minister may issue a certificate declaring that the child is presumed to be dead—

It has nothing whatsoever to do with missing children whose whereabouts are unknown. The downed Air India aircraft has often been given as an example since in fact, beyond any reasonable doubt, all children aboard the aircraft were presumed to be dead. This is where the Bill applies, not in cases where children have simply disappeared.

[English]

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I know that a number of the previous speakers from the Government side have attempted to suggest that members of the Opposition are using a political approach to this particular clause. If there was some evidence to show that the Government was being compassionate across the board, we might accept the fact that this particular clause was put in place for compassionate reasons. However, we have no evidence of that. The very Bill attacks the entire area of support for families. Therefore, there is no reason for us to believe that one particular clause is compassionate while the Bill itself is anything but compassionate.

The Government would have us believe that Clause 5 is there for the benefit of parents of missing children. That is obviously not the reason for this particular clause. It is supposed to eliminate the need for the Government to collect possible overpayments, as was suggested by a previous speaker, in a case where the actual death of a child occurred while the payments were being made. However, although I was not there that particular day, the committee was told by officials from the Department of National Health and Welfare that the present, unamended Act allows the Minister not to collect in such cases. Therefore, for that reason, this particular clause is not at all necessary.

If one were to look at the committee report one would find that an official from the Department of National Health and Welfare made a statement which suggests that the unamended Act allows the Government to remit the overpayment. If that is the case, then why does this clause give the Minister the power to issue a death certificate? Why does he need the power to issue such a certificate when he already has the power of compassion which exists in the present legislation?

It just does not make too much sense to suggest that the reason for having this provision is to help missing children. The reason is that it is obviously a bookkeeping measure which ignores the feelings and the hurt of the parents of missing children. It does not recognize the fact that they are spending a great deal of money to try to find their children. Until the child has been actually found they will continue their search.

As the President of the Child Find organization expressed to the committee, parents never stop looking for their missing children. Even in hopeless cases they never stop looking. They never stop spending money in their search. I refer to long distance telephone calls, advertisements, and so on. As the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) suggests, the removal of the sum of approximately $31 from the parents of missing children means that they do not have that little extra amount to spend which would make them feel as if they were actually doing all they could in order to find their missing child. The Government is saying that we cannot afford that little bit extra which helps parents to search for their missing children. The claim that the Government is doing this for compassion's sake does not make sense. It is withdrawing $31 from parents, thus reducing their ability to go out and search for a child who has disappeared. The type of expenses which parents expend in search of missing children, such as expenses for printing thousands of copies of pictures, expenses for long distance telephone calls, legal advice and private investigators, are all expenses which parents must face if they are to continue their search for their missing child. Apart from that, imagine the impact upon yourself, Mr. Speaker, if your child were missing and the Minister suddenly issued a death certificate.

The family allowance was originally created in recognition of the parenting role. The money was paid out to families to allow parents to do the best job possible in raising their children. However, if the payment is stopped when a child has gone missing for some reason, then the help which is part of parenting is withdrawn. If a child walks down the street and disappears for a couple of hours, the parents of that child are worried. They go out and use their best resources to find their child. If their child disappears for a couple of years, they continue to use their resources to find the missing child. Consequently, the family allowance pays for the continued responsibility of parenting which these people with missing children have.

Our suggestion is that we look at the whole clause and bring in something which recognizes either the present legal death requirement, which is seven years, or the fact that death should not be assumed until the missing child reaches the age of majority. Let us not suddenly withdraw from parents the type of support which they need and then say that what we are doing is approaching compassionately the whole area of concern. We suggest putting this clause in place so that parents do not have to repay the money which they have received during the period in which their child has been missing in the event the child is eventually found dead.

I believe that every Member of the House has been approached by parents not only with respect to this particular clause but with respect to the entire Act. If the Government truly feels compassion for children, then it should recognize that there is a large group of parents in the country who need this $30 and the increase each year. I refer to the increase attributable to inflation. The Government should recognize that these funds should not be cut off, or the real dollar value reduced each year, until somewhere down the road, perhaps in ten years' time, the value of the family allowance will be so small that it will not have any real affect upon the assistance given to a parent who is attempting to take good care of his or her children.

Before me I have a number of telegrams which deal with this very point. They are critical not only of the clause to which I refer but of many clauses. In fact, they are critical with respect to the whole approach taken by the Government in terms of the family allowance. I wish to refer in particular to one of the telegrams which was received. The original of the telegram was sent to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). It is from members of a home and school association. It states that the individual family unit does not have a special type of organized lobby group and, thus, they feel concern with respect to many family issues. As members of a home and school group they feel the responsibility to take issue with these proposed changes, since parents groups are not organized in the same way in which senior citizens groups are organized. I have a series of telegrams from home and school associations from across the country who feel that not only is this clause incorrect but that the Government should withdraw the whole Bill.

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I too am very pleased and proud to take part in the debate on Bill C-70.

Earlier today a Government Member said that no one has exclusive jurisdiction over compassion, that he and his colleagues feel the same kind of compassion and sympathy as Opposition Members do with respect to families and parents that have lost a child. In my judgment one only needs to read the clause to realize that compassion does not even come into play. The clause itself proves beyond any doubt that the people who drafted it do not even know the meaning of the word compassion. I know that a lot of viewers who follow House debates on television may have some difficulty understanding the purpose of this amendment.

For their information, Mr. Speaker, I should like to read, if I may, Clause 15 of the Bill:

Where a child has, either before or after the coming into force of this section, disappeared under circumstances that, in the opinion of the Minister—

God the Father.

—raise beyond a reasonable doubt a presumption that the child is dead, the Minister may issue a certificate declaring that the child is presumed to be dead and stating the date on which the child's death is presumed to have occurred, and thereupon the child shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on the date so stated in the certificate.

The Minister behaves like God the Father and decides unilaterally, in his wisdom, that a child died on such and such a date.

In the following subclause, His Lordship the Minister keeps for himself a right or privilege, to wit:

If, after issuing a certificate under subsection (1), the Minister is satisfied from new information or evidence that the date of death is different from that stated in the certificate, the Minister may revoke the certificate and issue a new certificate stating a different date, in which case the child named in the certificate shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on the date so stated in the new certificate.

Under this Bill which he would like us to adopt, the Minister wants to have the right to decide, following the report of some official, that a child is dead. Depending on how he feels, the Minister can decide that a child is dead one day and alive the next.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that only a person who has no children or who ignores the feelings of parents towards their children could think of such provisions. I think it is altogether odious and scandalous for them to write such provisions in the Bill when we know the tragedy parents have to go through when one of their children disappears. Surely those who drafted these provisions never came close to meeting these people or discussing this issue with them. It is a fact that compassion may not be a feeling exclusive to the Opposition, but I think that the Government and its spokesmen apparently have no notion of the word "compassion".

On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, it is not surprising to find such a provision in this Bill, because the Bill as a whole is itself altogether unacceptable. This is my third term as a Member of Parliament, and my riding has had to face a great many problems and difficulties, but since I was elected for the first time seven years ago, never has a Bill raised such a spontaneous reaction in my riding. Never has my office received so many petitions and letters from mothers living in all parts of my riding who write: we cannot be heard. The only way for us to be heard is through you, and we ask you to present these petitions on our behalf. What the Opposition has done and is doing in this fight, Mr. Speaker, does not just concern the Opposition; it is not just talking for the sake of talking, or objecting for the sake of objecting. It is a matter of performing in this House as millions of Canadian men and women are expecting us to do.

Mr. Speaker, the Opposition in this fight is not merely conveying, voicing the very numerous statements that have poured into our constituency offices. In my constituency, for instance, I have received hundreds of petitions, and on that issue, that one legislation alone. I have received more petitions concerning Bill C-70 than on any other issue since I came into politics.

This shows without the shadow of a doubt, without any question, that mothers, parents, are squarely in disagreement with this Bill.

This piece of legislation also is an excellent demonstration, an excellent illustration, which very clearly depicts this Government's kind of administration. Families are being ridiculed, drained, abused, especially children, for the sake of getting a few million dollars under the pretence that public finances must be put back into order.

On the other hand, those few million dollars being snatched from the pockets of the poor, of the have-nots, of the single-parent families, of all those men and women who have every difficulty making ends meet, those few million scooped in that way are literally wasted in other areas, or handed out to large multinational corporations, or given away to the very affluent as capital gains exemptions.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the Government is depriving the most in need, those who definitely are not in a position to face tough living conditions, and redistributing that money to people who in these circumstances could contribute a lot more to putting public finances back into order.

Mr. Speaker, I have before me a table that shows quite clearly what the Government will be getting, what it will be scooping.

For 1985-86, there are to be $15 million. For 1986-87, the figure is $80 million. For 1987-88, the figure is $140 million, and for 1988-89, $200 million. That money will be scraped, will be taken from families with children. That is the kind of money that will be snatched from the pockets of those families for whom family allowances in many cases are simply vitally needed.

Mr. Speaker, what is just as important in my view is that during the last election campaign, those people were peddling around pious promises: the program of universality would not be tampered with; social programs would not be tampered with; the have-nots would be looked after.

But hardly eighteen months later, they are savagely attacking families, they are savagely attacking children after having tried to do the same thing to senior citizens.

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) is extremely worthwhile in the circumstances, in view of the fact that the clause in its present form, as it is now worded, is not just unacceptable, but quite simply odious, shameful, an insult to a very, very, very human problem. It is my hope that in the coming weeks, the Government will wake up and bring in the corrections needed to that famous clause so that it will be a little more humane.

• (1220)

Mr. Michel Champagne (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, it is too bad that the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) has left the House. However, I would like to go over his concluding remarks. It is odious, shocking, revolting and even blasphemous, and I am not talking about what our Government is doing, but about what he and his party are saying about family allowances. How can they say that we are cutting back on programs for low-income families, how can they say that we are not taking care of the most disadvantaged families in the country, how can they say that we, as a Government, having inherited a terrible situation, with debts of $200 billion, a situation where, for 20 years and even longer, the Liberals did not make the rich pay any taxes and did not take their responsibilities—

Then, people like the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe and the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) tell us what we should be doing. I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but I cannot accept that. When they talk about honesty and impartiality, they should perhaps look at what Bill C-70 says. What this Bill says, Mr. Speaker, is that there will be a child tax credit. If the Hon. Member does not understand what this means, I can tell him that it means that people will receive a payment.If we provide a payment, Mr. Speaker, we do so for those who do not pay taxes. When the Liberals were in power, Mr. Speaker, those who did not pay taxes were the wealthy. Under our Government, it will be the poor. The poor will receive the tax credit that will amount to $70 the first year. This is much more than the 31 cents mentioned by the Hon.Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie. Much more. Mr. Speaker, it is more than the average rate of inflation. Why do the Liberals not say so? Why do the New Democrats not recognize it? This means $70 this year, $35 next year and $35 the year after that, and this is a tax credit.

I would like the Hon. Member and his colleagues on the other side to keep this in mind. If we want to be honest, Mr. Speaker, we have to speak about it. We have to tell the facts as they are. I am not certain that the Opposition has done so. I am not sure that they have, Mr. Speaker, because they would not have received so many petitions if they had told Canadian families that we are really going to work for the most disadvantaged. I am not sure, Mr. Speaker, that Canadian families, mothers and womens' groups in all Canadian provinces including Quebec would have signed the petitions of the Members opposite if they had been told that there would be a tax credit for the most disadvantaged and that the universality principle is not being attacked as suggested by the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe.

Mr. Speaker, the universality principle does not mean that rich and poor should be treated the same. It means that, as a responsible Government, we are going to give the advantage to the poor and make the system equitable.

I said so yesterday. Unfortunately, the Hon. Member did not understand. If I take my own case as an example, it is not normal for me and my family to receive the same family allowances as a single parent family on welfare with the same number of children. That family deserves more, because of its disastrous economic situation. I know, Mr. Speaker, that the Government will help me when I need it. That is the objective of the Bill before us.

It is only natural, Mr. Speaker, that we should have to limit the cost of governing this country. It is natural because, when we took over in 1984, the deficit was $200 billions. During the 20 years that the Liberals spent on this side of the House, they claimed they were working for Canadians. Well, they must have worked hard, because they put them deeply in debt. During those 20 years when they formed the Government, they were telling us that they were managing the public purse. Yes, Mr. Speaker. Where was the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe when his Government limited the indexation of family allowance to 6 and 5 per cent, at a time when inflation ran at 11 and 12 per cent? Where was he, Mr. Speaker? I asked him today, but he did not answer.

Since we are talking about honesty and integrity in this House, Mr. Speaker, we should stand up and say precisely what matters in this Bill. We should emphasize, Mr. Speaker, that we are going to help those families which are the most in need, while making the wealthiest pay. It should be said, Mr. Speaker, that social justice has more than one meaning, it is not merely the Liberal philosophy, a philosophy for the wealthy. Today, they are telling us that, as a Government, because of the tax exemption, because of the capital gain exemption, we are giving only to the rich. That is false, Mr. Speaker, absolutely false. I know farmers in my riding who are now going to be able to sell their farms at a lower price to their sons, who will now be in a position to take over. I know homeowners, Mr. Speaker, who will be able to sell their houses and not be indexed or affected by this legislation, who will realize capital gains after having worked all their lives in factories, for low wages. Members of the Opposition think of them as rich people; they want to deny them that opportunity and have them penalized, but I can say this: Liberals are hiding the facts. There are certain words I cannot use because they would be unparliamentary, but they are the ones I sincerely mean. If ever Opposition Members want to act as honest Members of Parliament and not engage in demagogy, then I am sure all Members on our side of the House will be willing to work with them. Building a country does not mean forever sitting across the aisle and reacting negatively to each and every legislative proposal. Building a country means co-operating, working together in solidarity.

Mr. Tardif: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) on a point of order.

Mr. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, the time allowed the Hon. Member is running out and I realize he has not yet said anything about the amendment before the House.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member's time is not up, and that is not a point of order.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): You're not the Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, this is just another example of how the Liberals proceed. They try to cut our speaking time. I was speaking to the same subject he was speaking to—

Mr. Tardif: The amendment!

Mr. Champagne: —and he rose to say I did not speak to the amendment. And what was he speaking to?

Mr. Tardif: The amendment.

Mr. Champagne: No, he did not speak to the amendment. He said he travelled around Quebec and across Canada, and that families had signed petitions. That is what he talked about. Mr. Speaker, he forgot to tell the truth, just like the Hon. Member from Montreal-Sainte-Marie who travelled across Quebec and forgot to say that the child tax credit would be refundable—

Mr. Malépart: It has always been refundable.

Mr. Champagne: The rich will not get a cent. It is all going to the poor. And it is refundable and it is more than the average indexation. And I am saying this again for the benefit of the Hon. Member from Montreal-Sainte-Marie.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. The Hon. Member from Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), on a point of order.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. To avoid misleading the public, Mr. Speaker, the tax credit has always been refundable.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is not a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, I hope that this time they will at least allow me to complete my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I am aware that the tax credit has always been refundable, but what he failed to say is that it was increased by $70 this year, that it will be increased by $35 next year and again $35 the following year. His party has failed to tell that to Canadian and Quebec families, and then they claim that we are concerned only with the rich. Who is going to benefit from the tax credit, Mr. Speaker? It's the poor and disadvantaged families, something the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) has failed to say, although he rises in the House every day to talk about honesty. He rises in the House every day to talk about co-operation.

Mr. Tardif: That is what you should do.

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie and most of his colleagues should be honest and responsible and recognize that the Minister has done a very good job and introduced a Bill with a tax credit which will benefit the poorer families and re-establish the equity that has always characterized the Liberal system, that is, the rich will stay rich and the poor will get richer—

Mr. Malépart: No, poorer!

Mr. Champagne: Richer, Mr. Speaker, because in those days they themselves did not make any difference, they never did, they always thought a family was a family, they never bothered about the income. But now we realize what has happened, and it is my honest and definite view that Members opposite might find it useful to read what we bring forward in terms of legislation rather than getting carried away on matters which they did not dare defend when they had their turn, when they were the Government. We hear today, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie, we hear other Members crying out in this House, and there is one thing I want to tell the Canadian people: Be careful for they have piled up a $200 billion debt on your shoulders. Be careful for they have destroyed jobs. Be careful for they have failed to defend you when it was time to do so.

An Hon. Member: They are no longer in power, they have gone.

Mr. Champagne: They have gone, there is not one left in this House—

An Hon. Member: Yes, there is one left.

Mr. Champagne: Yes, there is one left, I am sorry. Be careful, and I am telling this to the Canadian people, be careful, beware! Look at the facts with unbiased eyes and you will find that this Government is working in the interests of the majority of our people, and especially in the interests of the most in need.

• (1230)

[English]

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, the five amendments to Bill C-70 with which we are dealing are generally linked together because they deal with the administrative and legal problems that arise when we try to make changes, as the Minister has attempted to do, in the manner in which we deal with the question of missing children. In order to establish whether a child is presumed missing or dead, the Minister has proposed an amendment which would apparently give him the power to presume that the child is dead and, therefore, enable him to stop the family allowance payment.

There has been much discussion in the House about compassion and honesty, but in the few minutes I have to speak on this set of motions I simply want to point out that laws like this do not come up for review very often. The House has much business before it and, therefore, the chances of this particular Bill being reconsidered in the near future are very remote. Therefore, rather than considering the effects of this new legislation one year hence, as seems to be suggested by the Hon. Member who just spoke, we should do so five or six years hence.

I remind the House that the economic effects in 1990, which is only five years hence, have been spelled out quite clearly. They are not particularly good for poor people. The fact is that the losses from the proposed deindexation will be more than the proposed offsetting child tax credit increase which will only be in effect for a year or two. In short, poor families will be worse off in four or five years than they are under the current system.

Furthermore, this Bill also proposes changes to the child benefits on our income tax forms which will have the effect of cutting back child benefits by $600 million each year by 1990. That is a tremendous difference in the amount of aid going to child benefits. I want to put those facts on the record to illustrate the economic effect that these proposals will have on families, particularly poor families.

The common denominator of the amendments before us is an attempt to deal with the question of missing children. That is why Your Honour has deemed that they should be discussed as a unit.

I believe there are two thrusts to these amendments. The first is administrative and based on legal interpretations in an attempt to deal with the legal aspects of this question. The House is aware that the traditional legal presumption of death has been when a person—child or adult—has been missing for seven years. One could also assume that the family allowance payment would stop for a missing teenager once he or she reached the age when those payments would stop even though the seven years had not expired.

I believe that the Minister's proposals present constitutional problems. As we know, according to the Constitution, the responsibility of the provinces to look after vital statistics in this country is provincial. The provinces keep track of when we are born and when we die and, therefore, the provinces decide when a death certificate should be issued.

The proposal in Bill C-70 would attempt to change that and effectively give the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) the right to declare a child dead and issue a death certificate because the child had been missing for a period of time deemed adequate by the Minister. According to available information during the committee stage of this Bill, it appears that that period of time would be from three to six months. There is conflicting testimony between some officials of the Department who say that this presumption of death does not occur until after six months and the child find groups, who represent parents of missing children throughout the country, who indicate that it is a three month period.

A number of concerns have been raised since the committee stage which I believe indicate that the Government should withdraw this particular amendment. There are various individuals and groups involved in this issue who were not consulted. They wish to be consulted, and we believe it would make sense for more consultation to take place with the provinces whose constitutional powers are being usurped by this proposal. Since we believe that proper consultation has not taken place on this issue, the propsoal should be dropped and the ad hoc arrangements that have been in existence should continue without becoming a law that is of questionable constitutionality.

This is not simply a point of view held by Opposition Members because the motions we are dealing with today include amendments by government Members who have also attempted to approach the administrative and constitutional problems that have arisen. It is my understanding that these amendments will be voted en bloc. The discussion will take place now—

Mr. Epp (Provencher): No.

Mr. Althouse: The ruling was not that the vote be taken en bloc but that we vote on each motion separately if we so desire.

It is then that we will see whether the Minister decides to instruct his Members to vote for the back-bench motions before us, Motions Nos. 8 and 9.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I have already put it on the record that we will vote for it.

Mr. Althouse: The Minister says that he is definitely going to vote for it. We will find out later in the day. The relevant points have already been made in this debate.

• (1240)

Let me simply reiterate before I take my seat that in the debate, while it was very emotional and involved because it is a political issue, we have had a lot of discussion about compassion and honesty. We might have believed that this was a compassionate move if a compensating proposal had been made by the Government to increase funds and resources used to search for missing children. As it is, the Government is left with the unhappy circumstance of appearing to be cutting funding not only to poor families over the long term, the five or six year period for which I quoted statistics, but is also leaving the appearance of pulling the very small amount of money for the child allowance from families who have a missing child, apparently providing no compensating assistance through legal or search means to help those families who are already under great stress, both emotionally and financially. I regret that the Government has not seen fit to provide some recognition of the need for funds and resources in that regard.

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): I rise to speak again on Bill C-70. This Bill provides for the deindexing of family allowances. I was interested in the lecture which the House just received a short time ago from the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) on truth and honesty, two very important subjects. I have here in my hand a Tory ad from 1980 which has been quoted. I think it deserves repeating at this time in light of the Hon. Member's comments. This Tory ad spoke about deindexing as follows:

—deindexing is a form of taxation that would have staggering consequences for every Canadian taxpayer, especially the low-income earner—deindexing is a scheme to guarantee that you'll pay higher federal income taxes year after year.

We also have the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) on record saying he would not pay off the deficit by attacking social programs. What are we doing here today, Mr. Speaker? We have a deindexing Bill on family allowances. It is a social policy and this legislation is providing for the deindexing of family allowances.

The main thrust of the Tory Budget of May 23 was that of a classical Conservative document. It aimed at widening the disparity between the rich and the poor. The Tory Government has broken many of its promises with this Budget. The Prime Minister and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), whom I am glad to see in the House at the present time, promised to maintain over-all social spending by not using social program funds to reduce the deficit and maintain the universality of programs for seniors and families. However, what do we have? We have an erosion of the family benefits package, which means less benefits by 1990 to low and middle-income families. This is not a short-term measure by any means.

We have had increased consumer and gasoline taxes. I remember in the last Parliament and in previous Parliaments that every time fuel prices went up we would hear those screaming speeches from the Tory opposition benches. Now the Tories increase taxes on gasoline and other fuels without even batting an eyelash. I wonder where all their self-righteousness has disappeared to. I give you this, Sir, in the light of the speech made by the Member from Champlain on truth and honesty. The people of this nation have come to realize where the Government stands when it comes to keeping promises and being honest with them.

It is interesting to note in this debate, Mr. Speaker, that several Conservative back-benchers have stood in this House and read off petitions from their constituents asking that the family allowances not be deindexed. These Tories are doing their duty as Members of Parliament for their constituents, but how are they going to vote when the final decision comes? Will they vote against their constituents on whose behalf they have stood to read petitions? It will be a very interesting moment, Mr. Speaker.

The Government is famous in passing costs back to the provinces. This has been done with transfer payments, by cutting grants and by putting the onus on individual taxpayers, by throwing Department of Transport facility costs back to local municipalities, and by increasing taxes at the individual homeowner level where it affects all families directly. The Government says it is doing it in the interests of the deficit. I suppose that is a very honourable aim.

We have seen the Tory Government bail out the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank to the tune of $875 million through a special Bill to pay back depositors in those banks whose money was not guaranteed. That does not include all the depositors who had $60,000 or less in the banks, who have to be paid off too. That was a billion dollar bill. How does the Government pick up that money? By deindexing family allowances and, in the long haul, deindexing child tax credits; by cutting Government services; by pushing expenses back onto the provinces and the municipalities; and by letting civil servants go, although I understand the Government has slowed up considerably in that regard because it found that that was not very practical. The Government has also meddled with the unemployment insurance policies by taking severance pay which people earned during working days and classifying it as income to stop payments of unemployment insurance. Then we have the Armed Forces. People are required to retire while children are still in school. That severance pay is counted as income, and the individual cannot collect unemployment insurance, insurance that has been paid for ever since it was first introduced into the Armed Forces. That is not fair.

We come now to the hatchet man himself, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen). As we know, he is the chairman of the review committee of Cabinet. A better title would be: "chairman of the chopping block". He is the one who is going through all Crown corporations and Government departments to find out where he can cut next. What has he found on his travels? On many military bases across the country we have schools for the families of military personnel. The Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence, the man in charge of chopping, has an ongoing review of these Department of National Defence schools. What is the aim of this review? The aim is to slough off the children of DND personnel onto the local county or regional administration, to get rid of the schools. He is not interested in the children of those families who have to move from posting to posting, sometimes as many as six or seven times during their first eight years in school. He is going to throw them into a standard county system where the other children attend school day in and day out for several years at a time. These students will have to find their own way in that crowd. With schools on military bases, the teachers are familiar with the problems, and the school-board are DND personnel and dependants. They understand the problems faced by children who change from school to school all the time. This does not strike the Deputy Prime Minister. If anyone should rise in defence of the families of military personnel, it should be the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence. He should not be meandering into his committee meetings trying to find out where he can save a couple of million dollars here and there at a time when the Government is being blamed for not controlling the deficit. Analysts are giving that as the reason for the value of the Canadian dollar. The Tories are meddling around with little things, making huge promises which they know they cannot keep and in the end are taking it out on low-income families.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am rising today to speak on the amendments to Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act. Unlike the previous speaker, I will confine my remarks to the subject at hand, that is, the issue of missing children and the presumption of death.

We object most strenuously to the whole Bill. It is oriented to deindexing the family allowance. It shows great insensitivity to the needs of families across the country. Every family will be affected. However, the amendments with which we are dealing now affect only a very small number of people. The amendments which the Government has put forward are wrong, and we have an alternative which we think is very much better.

While the Government consulted the community about the family allowance and the whole child benefits support package, it ignored the advice it was given. In the case of missing children and the presumption of death, there was not even a consultation. What happened was that the Government stuck in a few clauses in the Bill on family allowances deindexing. We are faced with having to deal with quite a different subject, the jurisdictional problems and the lack of consultation problems that arise.

Let me begin with the failure of the Government to consult on the whole issue of presumption of death. Only one group was allowed to present a brief before the legislative committee. It was Child Find Quebec. It certainly provided some information, but many other groups would have liked to have been consulted. There was not an opportunity for the groups which work on these issues to get together and come up with a united front. The clause was sprung upon the groups on very short notice. They had to respond without adequate opportunity for their own consultations. When suggestions were made that there should be additional consultations, these were turned down, although the Government admitted that consultation had been inadequate and that the groups might have something practical to offer at committee stage. It admitted that, but did not in fact follow its own advice, as it were, to listen to that information.

Rather than take the opportunity to consult, the Government has taken a very simplistic approach, that is, to give the Minister unwarranted powers. This is not simply an administrative matter of who will decide about presumption of death. I want to note some objections to that and the fact that there are some real consequences. Families will be hurt if this amendment as it is currently framed goes through. The parents of missing children will have their family allowances cut off. This is at a time when they may well be very energetically continuing the search for their missing children. Sometimes the family allowance can be cut off sometimes after three months and sometimes after six months of the child being missing. In any event, many families may search for their children for a greater period of time than that. They are faced with costs. They are making long-distance telephone calls, consulting lawyers, hiring private investigators and placing ads in newspapers. They are using money to pursue the search for their own children. At a time when they need support, the Government will take away from them the very modest amount of support which is presently being given through the family allowance.

Death should not be presumed by the Minister on the basis of any kind of arbitrary criteria. The laws of the country very clearly indicate that the presumption of death, as other matters of vital statistics, comes under the purview of the provinces. There has been a long tradition of that, and legislation very clearly indicates it. This is an example, for the administrative convenience of the federal Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), of an invasion of a traditional provincial field. There is no reason for it; there are alternative ways to deal with the matter.

Our proposal contains four parts. It begins:

> Where a child has, either before or after the coming into force of this section, disappeared under circumstances that raise a presumption that the child is dead, the Minister may apply to a court of competent jurisdiction in the province or territory where the child usually resides for an order declaring, according to the law of the province or territory, that the child shall be presumed to be dead; thereupon the child shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on the date stated in the court order.

If we did this, we would have full respect for provincial jurisdiction in this area and in a way which is entirely practical. It continues:

> If, after obtaining a court order under subsection (1), the Minister receives new information or evidence that the date of death is different from that stated in the court order, the Minister may, with leave of the court, apply to the court for an order to vary, amend or revoke the order previously made, in which case the child named in the court order shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on the date so stated in the new court order.

That is perfectly self-explanatory. It continues:

> If, after obtaining a court order under this section, the Minister is satisfied from new information or evidence that the child named in the court order is alive, the Minister shall forthwith cause to be paid any allowance that would have been payable in respect of the child if the order had not been made.

Again that is quite self-evident. Finally, it continues:

> Subject to subsection (3), the Minister is bound by the law of the province where the child normally resides in respect of the issuance and revocation of death certificates and the making, variance and revocation of orders of presumption of death.

This makes clear that there is no reason in the case of a federal matter such as family allowances to invade the jurisdiction of the provinces.

In my remaining minute I should like to point out that we are continuing to obtain new information from groups which want to be heard on this subject. Groups are bringing forward their difficulties on child searches and the presumption of death. As a result, we would suggest that either our proposal be adopted or that the entire section be dropped. It would be far better not to have any section on it than to proceed with the present proposal of the Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before calling it one o'clock, I should like to indicate that the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) will have three minutes remaining in her speech when orders of the day are called.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock later this day.

At 1 p.m., the House took recess.

AGRICULTURE

BRITISH COLUMBIA FRUIT GROWERS—STABILIZATION PAYMENTS ADVOCATED

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I rise to bring to the attention of the House a grave injustice which the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) and the Government have inflicted on B.C. fruit growers. This is an association of some 1,800 producers in the Okanagan Valley of British Columbia who have been facing very tough times this last couple of years due to depressed fruit prices, high input costs, and falling land values. Indeed the financial distress in this group of producers is even worse than the national farm debt figures as reported by the Farm Credit Corporation.

They applied for assistance under the Agricultural Stabilization Act for the 1983 apple crop and would have qualified for this if the regular criteria of 90 per cent had been applied. The Minister of Agriculture applied a factor of 80 per cent, thus effectively shutting these hard pressed producers out of $2 million worth of stabilization payments, payments that were desperately needed and are needed right now.

Many of these producers, especially some of the younger ones who bought their orchards in the late 1970s, are facing foreclosure this very winter. I call on the Government to reverse this decision which is unprecedented, unfair, and outright banditry by the Government of Canada of a benefit which is due and payable to these B.C. fruit growers.

MINES AND MINING

DENISON MINES LTD. WITHDRAWAL FROM BRITISH COLUMBIA NORTHEAST COAL PROJECT

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton) and the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) have some explaining to do to the people of Canada. It was announced yesterday that Denison Mines, half owner of Quintette Coal Ltd. in northeast British Columbia, is writing off its entire $240 million investment in that project. Mr. Speaker, this could hardly be considered a major surprise. The northeast coal project has been bad news from the beginning. It was only a matter of time before investors acknowledged what independent mining analysts have said all along. Even the most diehard Tory and Socred should have realized something was wrong when a provincial Socred cabinet Minister in British Columbia admitted that the hole was in the wrong place.

Still the Conservative Government pressed on, and the federal Government aided and abetted its kissing cousin in B.C. It has imposed a monstrous fraud on the citizens of British Columbia.

When I raised the question of the federal Government's half a billion dollar investment in infrastructure for that boondoggle last May, the Minister of State for Mines referred to it as, and I quote, "growing pains only related to startup conditions". Growing pains, Mr. Speaker! Death throes would be a more accurate description. Not only have the federal and provincial Governments wasted billions of dollars of taxpayers' money but they have also been responsible for devastating the economy of southeastern British Columbia. Mr. Speaker, isn't it time the Government acknowledges this project is a fiasco? If they are honest with the people of Canada, these two Ministers, especially the Minister from British Columbia, will admit to this the House that their ideological soulmates in British Columbia couldn't run a peanut stand.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CALL FOR WITHDRAWAL OF RUSSIAN FORCES FROM AFGHANISTAN

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, as the world focuses on the resumption of the Geneva talks, we must all continue in our efforts to encourage the peace process. However, on the periphery of those talks, conflicts around the world continue to warrant our attention.

S.O. 22

One such conflict is the war in Afghanistan. On December 27, 1985, the war entered its seventh year. This has been a seemingly endless conflict between the Soviets and the Afghans. The cruel facts about the war remain. One million Afghans have perished from violence and famine. Four million have been driven from their homes to developed countries. Three million are in refugee camps in Pakistan, and one million more in Iran. A total of nine million are dead or displaced.

While some people focus on the war between Iran and Iraq, or the conflict in Central America, the war in Afghanistan is clearly the more tragic in terms of humanity and human cost.

We should not let this issue fade in our consciousness. It is a continuing tragedy of Soviet interference and aggression. When we talk of a durable peace between the superpowers, we should not weaken our resolve that basic human rights should be defended. This means telling the Soviets to get out of Afghanistan.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mr. Nic Leblanc (Longueuil): Mr. Speaker, the most recent economic indicators tell us that the Quebec economy continues to show sustained growth. Since the election, 136,000 jobs have been created in Quebec, an average of 9,067 jobs a month, as opposed to the total 37,000 jobs created by the Liberal Government in 55 months, an average of 673 jobs a month.

The unemployment rate has declined from 12.8 per cent in September 1984 to 11.7 per cent in December 1985.

Over the first ten months of 1985, the value of building permits has reached $819 million, a 29.9 per cent increase over the same period in 1984.

According to a recent survey made by the Canadian Federation of Independent Businessmen, 37 per cent of SMBs intent to increase their capital expenditures between now and the year-end.

Retail sales have increased 12 per cent over 1984.

During the first eleven months of 1985, bankruptcies have declined by 12 per cent over the same period in 1984.

Those figures show once again that our economic performance has significantly improved since the election of a Progressive Conservative Government in September 1984. For the business world, this party's coming to power is a genuine cause for optimism.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

HUMAN RIGHTS

RAOUL WALLENBERG—CALL FOR INTERCESSION WITH SOVIET UNION

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Forty-two years ago tomorrow, a young Swedish diplomat named Raoul Wallenberg who was in Hungary on a mission to save Jews from the Nazi holocaust was arrested by the Soviet Union shortly after it captured Budapest. Theoretically the Soviet Union was our ally, and the ally of those who fought the Nazis. However, the Soviets made Wallenberg a prisoner, and to this day no charges have been laid and he has not been given a trial. Despite the claims of the Soviet Union that Wallenberg died of a heart attack in the Soviet prison in 1947, he has been seen alive on many occasions by many witnesses ever since.

Wallenberg is a hero of humanity because he risked his life to save tens of thousands of Jews condemned to the Nazi gas chambers of Auschwitz. For this reason our Parliament proclaimed Raoul Wallenberg as the first person ever to be made an honorary citizen of Canada, on Human Rights Day, December 10, 1985, just a few weeks ago. In view of this, it is now incumbent upon the Government of Canada to look after the interests and safety of one of our own citizens.

In 1979 and in 1981, before Wallenberg was a citizen of Canada, our Government made representations to the Soviet Union. Now we are in a very sound legal position to make much stronger efforts on his behalf and, as I had provided in my Private Member's Bill of last April, I again call upon the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to take all possible steps to find out the whereabouts of Raoul Wallenberg and to secure his return to freedom.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

BROADCASTING OF "NEAT TO BE DEAD" SONG—DEMAND FOR APOLOGY AND RETRACTION

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, is it neat to be dead? The CBC seems to think so. I have always been a strong supporter of the CBC and particularly of its radio programming. However, as a concerned parent I was throughly appalled to listen to a segment of Frantic Times which was broadcast nationally on Saturday, December 14, at the noon hour, a time when children and young teenagers would be listening.

This is a brief excerpt from the song about death, a tape of which I have in my office:

Then they take you downtown and drain out all your blood,
Then fill you up with alcohol and all this other crud.
It is neat!
Neat!
It is really neat!
What a joke. It's fun to croak. It is ever neat!

The song finishes with the following:

It is neat!
Neat!
It is super super neat! Oh boy it's cool, it sure beats school! It is ever neat!
Neat!

During the 120-second clip, the phrase "neat to be dead" in one form or another is mentioned 21 times. This is irresponsible broadcasting. Given that 281 young children and teenagers committed suicide in Canada in 1984, this is a serious problem and not a laughing matter. To suggest on prime time radio, or for that matter at any time, that death is neat and a joke is appalling. The CBC should act responsibly by carrying an apology and a retraction on Frantic Times indicating that death is not neat nor is it a joke.

CANADIAN RADIO-TELEVISION AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

CONCENTRATION OF TELEVISION STATIONS' OWNERSHIP IN SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, Saskatchewan has recently seen a dramatic concentration in private television ownership with the acquisition by the John Bassett interests of Toronto of four out of five private television stations. This has been accomplished without any public protest from the Minister of Consumer Affairs (Mr. Côté), or from Conservative Members who have been able to count on Mr. Bassett as an enduring and loyal friend. However, the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission stated in a 1978 ruling that, to the extent that concentration of ownership and control increases, diversity of opinion and information to Canadians are potentially reduced. It is this very real threat, that John Bassett will be presiding over an homogenized private broadcasting system in Saskatchewan, that has many people concerned.

● (1410)

Saskatchewan is only one step from being the media conglomerate that New Brunswick already is and which the Kent Royal Commission on Newspapers attacked for not having "diverse voices, correcting and balancing one another".

The Kent Commission also recommended that Armadale divest itself of one of its two daily newspapers in Regina or Saskatoon. This should also apply to television stations in Regina and Saskatoon, which are among the most profitable in the country, with profit margins of 40 per cent.

It is an abuse of dominant market position when stations this wealthy contribute so little in terms of local production, public affairs, and news coverage. I predict the Government's competition law will not disturb the profits of John Bassett, and the CRTC—

AMERICAN DECISION ON LOCATION OF NUCLEAR WASTE DUMP SITES

Mr. François Gérin (Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead): Mr. Speaker, we were delighted to hear that the United States had decided not to develop a nuclear waste dump site near the Canadian border and across from my riding of Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead, in the province of Québec.

The people of the whole region are pleased with this decision which, otherwise, could have had a very negative impact on the environment and economy of the Eastern Townships as a whole.

I wish to emphasize the major public awareness campaign led by the Standstead Journal, the CANDU environmental groups, the Lake Memphrémagog and Lake Mégantic protection associations, as well as the information media generally. The Members of Parliament representing the Eastern Townships had agreed to work together in this endeavour and we are satisfied with the job done.

Also, we are glad that the United States have accepted to include the international aspect in their selection criteria for, by ruling out the proposed dump sites situated in their country but requiring that geological research be done in Canada, they have demonstrated their respect for Canadian sovereignty and autonomy.

Mr. Speaker, that is indeed a great victory.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

REQUEST THAT REPRESENTATIONS BE MADE SEEKING GOVERNMENT APPROVAL FOR PAPERMILL IN MATANE

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): For the past 20 years, Mr. Speaker, the Gaspé-Lower St. Lawrence area has been spending millions of dollars together with the governments to develop its forest industry, train the necessary manpower and update its sawmills. As you know, for the past few years, the people involved in this industry have been trying to set up a papermill which could be the final achievement of this infrastructure.

Mr. Speaker, they have set their hearts on this project which would make possible for people in the area to earn a decent living and would consolidate a few thousand jobs. We know that this project is now being discussed by the Quebec Government, private investors and sometimes the federal Government.

But the Government of Canada apparently has been dragging its feet. People from the area are presently in Ottawa to sensitize all Members of Parliament to the importance of this project for the Gaspé-Lower St. Lawrence area.

M. Speaker, I dare hope that they will return home with the commitment that the project will become a reality with the co-operation of both levels of government. That is why I ask all Hon. Members to make representations to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, to make sure that this very important project for the economic development of the Gaspé area is supported by the Government and that the Matane area gets its papermill.

INSURANCE

LACK OF REINSURANCE FACILITY IN CANADA

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, there is a crisis in the property and casualty insurance industry making it virtually impossible for Canadian business, municipalities, boards of education, hospitals, truckers, and others, to obtain liability insurance at realistic cost.

Liability insurance is essential to the smooth running of our society. The problem is that the property and casualty insurance industry in Canada is fragmented. There are literally hundreds of companies, some with minimal capitalization, and the reinsurance industry, with very few exceptions, is almost totally foreign. Because of the poor financial performance of the property and casualty industry caused by outrageously low premiums and a bad claims record, the international reinsurance industry refuses to stand behind the needs of Canadian property and casualty insurance companies.

France faced this problem, and the French organized a reinsurance company to provide the reinsurance required. We can do the same thing.

I call upon the Government to get together immediately with leading insurance companies to set up a new reinsurance facility in Canada and that, at the outset, the Government, if necessary, and then only for a short time, take a piece of the responsibility so that reinsurance will be available and so that the distress, caused by the lack of ability to find liability coverage, will be alleviated.

The matter is urgent. Trade is affected. Municipalities are hampered. School boards are damaged. Indeed, our way of life is threatened.

AIRPORTS

INCREASED SECURITY MEASURES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Deputy Prime Minister would care to enlighten the House, and the country, on the reason for the extra security at major Canadian international airports. And would he be in a position to give some assurance to those planning air travel?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, there was stepped up security at some Canadian airports after the RCMP received a threat—so far unsubstantiated—that there was a security threat against an aircraft at the Ottawa International Airport and the travelling public. A joint RCMP-Ottawa Police investigation, in co-operation with other police forces, continues, and the increased airport security will continue until that investigation is complete. Further comment right now could jeopardize the investigation and I would not want to interfere with the work of the police, nor would I want to arouse public anxiety unduly.

INTERNATIONAL IMPLICATIONS INQUIRY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, without trespassing upon the last words of the Deputy Prime Minister, would he be in a position to advise the House whether there are any international implications?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I am in no position to make such a confirmation, Mr. Speaker.

GOVERNMENT'S KNOWLEDGE OF SECURITY THREAT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, would the Deputy Prime Minister favour the House with the information as to how long the Government has known about this particular threat and how long he anticipates the additional security might last?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I believe that a response specifically to that question might be harmful to the investigation itself and might arouse that anxiety which I hope could be avoided. The security will last as long as is necessary to ensure the safety of the travelling public.

INDUSTRY

SALE OF GULF REFINERY—OFFER MADE BY LAVALIN INC.

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. the Prime Minister.

Yesterday and today it was reported that Lavalin Inc. is making offers to buy the Montreal East Gulf refinery, and we learned this morning that Ultramar appears to be reluctant.

Could the Prime Minister make it clear whether the offer made by Lavalin Inc. to Ultramar is aimed at maintaining the 450 jobs in Montreal East?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): As far as I know, Mr. Speaker, Lavalin's offer on behalf of other interests as well applies to the purchase of the facilities located in Montreal East, as much as possible with a view to keeping them as a going concern, in the legal sense of the word. Similar operations are involved.

REQUEST FOR PROTECTION OF PETROCHEMICAL AND REFINING INDUSTRY

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Considering the news we heard this morning, Mr. Speaker, would the Prime Minister be prepared to make personal representations to Ultramar management urging them to accept the offer made by Lavalin Inc. and the other groups he mentioned so as to ensure that both the petrochemical and the gas and heating oil refining industries will be protected?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie is referring to news he heard this morning concerning the private sector. Indeed, but for weeks now we have been trying to get something going to help Montreal East.

We hope that, within days or weeks, the private sector will be able to come up with a constructive solution in this important case.

As to the other question concerning the Montreal petrochemical industry, Mr. Speaker, it is because we feel that the economic future of Greater Montreal is at stake that we reversed the decision of the previous Government to close Petromont because of lack of funds. We made a $69 million capital injection to save that basic industry in Montreal East.

THE ECONOMY

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF INTEREST RATE INCREASES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. A few minutes ago, the Bank of Canada announced an increase in interest rates. The Minister indicated yesterday that the economic crisis was temporary. If so, why did the Minister accept this new increase in interest rates?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Bank of Canada rate is set once a week, every Thursday, as the Member well knows. The Treasury Bill rates came up immediately after last week's tender and have been quite stable this week at the 10.13 to 10.15 level. In fact the rate is somewhat lower at the tender than it was indicated earlier in the week.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance also knows very well that since the first of this year the prime rate has gone up a full percentage point. The banks are now likely to proceed with another increase. However, even up to now, according to the calculations of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion when he was on this side of the House, Canada will lose some 25,000 jobs because of that 1 per cent increase in the interest rate.

Given all the negative consequences that come to Canada from this persistent increase in interest rates, will the Minister not acknowledge that his refusal to intervene amounts to refusal to accept Government responsibility for interest rate policy?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am not happy with the increase in interest rates, but this is a result of international influences over which we do not have as much control as the Hon. Member would like.

I would like to set straight one thing which he said in the preamble to his question. The increase in the Treasury Bill rate today is unlikely to result in an increase in the prime rate.

Mr. Broadbent: You may regret that.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The key point that I think the Member should recall is that, if we are able to get our fundamentals right—and one of those fundamentals is getting control of the budgetary policy of the Government of Canada—we will see some reduction in the rates, as we have seen since September 4. As I said yesterday in the House, mortgage rates are down between 2.5 and 3 percentage points from September 4, 1984.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I point out to the Minister of Finance that my second question was, almost word for word, a question asked a couple of years ago by the then Leader of the

Presence in Gallery

Opposition, the present Secretary of State for External Affairs.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is aware of the negative consequences for jobs and mortgages and, indeed, for the deficit, as he pointed out when he was in Opposition. If he is really concerned that an increase in interest rates will in fact lead to an increase in the deficit, which is what he said when he was on this side of the House, why is he pursuing such an inconsistent policy by talking about deficit reduction on the one hand, and permitting interest rates to go up on the other?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I took the Hon. Member aside and into my confidence yesterday and explained to him the background to the policy. I indicated to him the difficulty—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Real cosy.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I will take the Leader of the Opposition aside too and teach him something, because he has an awful lot to learn.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid: That's too big a task.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The point that Hon. Members must recall is that during the course of the last 16 months interest rates have come down—

Mr. Broadbent: They are going up now, Michael.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —and we have created 450,000 jobs. Investment intentions are up by 11 percentage points and housing starts are up by 30 per cent. That is the true nature of the policy of the Government, and that policy will continue.

THE ECONOMY

INTEREST RATE LEVELS—ACTION TAKEN BY BANK OF CANADA

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. On Monday in the House I asked the Minister of Finance if it was the Government's policy to let interest rates to go up to defend the dollar. The Minister of Finance responded that: "The simple answer to the question is no". Well, 25 minutes ago the Bank of Canada raised its bank rate by 17 basis points to reach 10.38 per cent in order to defend the dollar.

Will the Minister of Finance retract his words from Monday and tell the House if he fully supports this action of the Governor of the Bank of Canada?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, in response to a question from the Leader of the Opposition I indicated to the House that I fully support the policy of the Bank of Canada. As I have said in the House on a number of occasions, that policy is that the Bank of Canada will moderate the movements in the market-place, both in interest rates and exchange rates, upwards and downwards. That is the policy that has proven to be successful in the past 18 months, and that will continue.

INTEREST RATES—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, last October, there was a difference of about 150 base points between American and Canadian interest rates. This difference has now reached 300 base points. How can the Minister of Finance say that it is not the policy of his Government to let interest rates go up?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is a former banker. He should understand the movements of interest rates and the pressures in the international markets.

It is not possible for the Governor of the Bank of Canada or the Minister of Finance, as I said yesterday, to wave a magic wand and say this is what will happen to interest rates—

Mr. Benjamin: Try it.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Member from Saskatoon—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: No, no!

An Hon. Member: Regina.

Mr. Broadbent: You just don't understand the West, Michael.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The property values in Saskatoon nearly went down.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The international influences on both the exchange market and on interest rates are much bigger than the ability of the Bank of Canada to influence in a lasting way. We moderate them on a short-term basis and will continue to do so. That is the policy of the Bank of Canada.

EFFECT ON DEFICIT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. He will remember when he was sitting on this side of the House in opposition as the Finance spokesperson for the Official Opposition that he said higher interest rates mean larger deficits and more debt for the country.

Considering that interest rates have gone up 1 per cent since January 1, to what extent will this add to the country's debt, and to what extent will it add to the country's deficit?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have not made a calculation of what effect that short-term change in interest rates will make on the size of the deficit. At this point it will not be meaningful one way or the other. However, on a long-term basis the best way that we can lower the deficit, the debt of the country and interest rates, is to continue to work at bringing the size of the deficit under control.

As I said yesterday—

Mr. Broadbent: Talk about a circular answer. I will take you aside after, Michael.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I will take you aside too, Ed. The best way to meet the objectives that he and I want, which is lower interest rates and a healthy economy, is to lower the deficit. I look forward to his support when we bring down the Budget.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister of Finance saying, after standing in the House time after time and virtually being traumatized by the deficit and debt facing the country, that he or his Department has not made any calculations to determine what a 1 per cent increase in the interest rate means to a deficit increase in this country? Is he actually admitting that he does not know that figure?

● (1430)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker, that is not what I said.

Mr. Riis: It is what you said.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Hon. Member will look in the budget papers of last year, he will see exactly what the amount will do—

Mr. Broadbent: Tell us what it is.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —over a one year basis.

The question which the Hon. Member put to me just a minute ago was what would the 1 per cent increase in interest rates that we have seen in the last two weeks do to the deficit. That is over a two-week period. No, I have not done that calculation because I do not think it is a lasting change.

ESTABLISHMENT OF PAPERMILL IN MATANE, P.Q.—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. He will be aware that, for about 20 years, there have been major investments by the people of the Matane region in Gaspé for forestry development, manpower training and sawmill modernization.

As the Prime Minister knows, a project submitted to himself and his Government proposes that the long-awaited regional Matane papermill finally go forward.

I know that the Quebec Government has given its approval—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is the third statement in the preamble. Could we have a question please?

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister: What is the position of the Federal Government now that the Quebec Government has given its approval and that the private sector is interested?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is quite right when he speaks about the people of the Gaspé region who have been in favour of a regional papermill for 20 years and who have been coming to Ottawa to plead their case before the Liberal Government only to have their requests refused. The answer of the Liberal Government in Ottawa was no for 20 years. Thanks to the intervention of the Hon. Member for Matane and other Members of the region and thanks to the co-operation of the Provincial Government, we can hope that something will finally happen for the first time in 20 years.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ACTION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a supplementary.

The first reply that those involved received from this Government was a no in the case of the advance ruling, and the Prime Minister knows it. This is the answer that he gave them.

The people want to know whether the Prime Ministr can rise today and honestly say: Yes, this will go forward! It is not a case of shilly-shallying and of saying "maybe". This is what you have been saying for months. Yes or no, will you be going forward with the Matane papermill? The people are fed up and want some answers.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, progress will be made in the Lower St. Lawrence region like elsewhere in Quebec. I can tell you this: With a Conservative Government, Quebecers will not have to wait for 20 years before benefiting from a new prosperity in Canada.

FUTURE OF G.M. PLANT AT SAINTE-THÉRÈSE, P.Q.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister.

Yesterday, at the opening of the Salon de l'automobile in Montreal, Mr. Gary Henson, manager of the General Motors plant in Sainte-Thérèse, declared at a press conference that GM had no plans for its Sainte-Thérèse plant beyond 1987.

Could the Prime Minister promise the House today to meet with Mr. Henson as soon as possible to discuss this question and provide some reassurance for the workers at the Sainte-Thérèse plant?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my hon. friend for his excellent question which concerns a matter that is very important for Quebec.

We are of course working with this industry that is so vital to the well-being of Quebec and Ontario. In fact, Southwestern Ontario plays a very important role in the economic life of this province.

For us in Quebec, the Sainte-Thérèse plant was the only one we could count on. And until quite recently . . . in fact the Conservative Government was the first government in twenty-five years to do something about getting automobile manufacturers to build new plants in Quebec. But that is a new development.

I think that answers the concerns of my hon. friend, and I can assure him we intend to co-operate very closely with management at GM and other companies to ensure this sector will not only be present but flourishing within Quebec's economy.

[English]

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER MEET MANUFACTURERS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary question may I ask the Prime Minister whether he will engage immediately in meetings with those who represent all of the automobile manufacturers in Canada, including the more recent import manufacturers, to set up a plan that puts all automobile manufacturers on the same basis, so that suppliers of traditional plants will be protected, while at the same time the new plants will be operating on the same fundamental basis as those against whom they are competing?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): The Hon. Member should have stayed with French. He was doing well, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: I met with all of the automobile manufacturers in Canada four weeks ago, and I dealt precisely with those problems.

Mr. Deans: What happened? What did they say?

G.M. PLANT AT SAINTE-THÉRÈSE—INVESTMENT PROJECT—REPRESENTATIONS MADE BY GOVERNMENT

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. On November 7, 1984, that is more than a year ago, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition asked the Prime Minister—

Mr. Masse: Which one?

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): —to meet with General Motors which had just announced it was going to cancel its plan to invest $700 million in the Sainte-Thérèse plant.

The Prime Minister answered, and I quote:

The Leader of the Opposition has every reason to be concerned over that question, and the Minister and I will take this up with the management of that corporation—

I want to ask the Prime Minister what kind of discussions he has had with General Motors and why that corporation is now talking about closing its plant instead of investing $700 million?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if I may answer the Hon. Member's question, I have not only had one but several meetings with Jack Smith of General Motors of Canada. During those meetings we have, of course, discussed the Ste.-Thérèse plant. I can assure the Hon. Member that we have discussed the longer range planning for Ste. Thérèse referred to yesterday.

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHETHER PRIME MINISTER WILLING TO MAKE REPRESENTATIONS TO G.M.

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I was asking the Prime Minister to report to the House on his meetings. I am concerned, because the meetings the Minister had with General Motors have not lead to an investment of $700 million but to the company's planning to close down the plant—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member was reasonably long the first time.

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I would like to know whether the Prime Minister is prepared to take this up personally with GM in order to protect these jobs, as he promised the Leader of the Opposition on November 7, 1984.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, all this was done ages ago. We have—

Mr. Lapierre: And look at the results!

Mr. Mulroney: Yes, as the Hon. Member for Shefford says, look at the results. And we have results, Mr. Speaker. They are there for all to see, and I want my hon. friend to correct me if I am wrong. He probably will, but the fact is that in fifteen months we have created 137,000 new jobs in Quebec, while the Liberals only managed to create 37,000 in fifty-five months.

Mr. Speaker, I never claimed we were perfect—

Ms. Copps: It doesn't look good in Quebec!

Mr. Mulroney: —but the fact is that we are creating jobs thirteen times as fast as the former Liberal Government was able to do.

SALE OF GULF REFINERY—ALLEGED BEHAVIOUR OF MULTINATIONAL CORPORATION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I too have a question for the Prime Minister.

According to Gaz métropolitain, Ultramar management imposed a precondition yesterday so as to prevent the sale of their Montreal East refinery to any prospective competitor on the Quebec market.

My question is this, Mr. Speaker: In light of that information, I would ask whether the Prime Minister finds that this kind of behaviour on the part of a foreign company in Canada is acceptable?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we are not aware of the existence of such a condition.

REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, given such a condition as reported in this morning's newspapers—I hope the Prime Minister reads Canadian newspapers—competition will be restricted.

As a supplementary question, is the Prime Minister prepared, once he has been fully briefed, to launch an investigation pursuant to the provisions of Section 32 of the Canadian Combines Investigation Act? This is an important matter to Quebecers.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, this is an important matter to Quebecers. Not only are we considering the issue raised by my colleague, but perhaps more important still in certain fields, the hard fact is that over the past three years, from 1982 to 1984, three major Montreal East refineries closed their doors, and the Liberals tried to close Petromont and kill one of our leading companies. We are doing our best to revive them all, including the Gulf refinery.

I think our efforts deserve not only the encouragement of the Hon. Member but also the official support—which we are seeking—of all Liberal Members of the House of Commons, hopefully so that for once they will stand up and defend the interests of Quebecers.

ENERGY

MAJOR OIL FIND IN BEAUFORT SEA

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister I will direct my question to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Could the Government confirm and describe what is apparently a major new oil find in the Amauligak structure of the Beaufort Sea? Will production from this field be speedily encouraged?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, needless to say we were ecstatic when we heard about the discovery of a delineation well in the Beaufort Sea. The production results show that there will be delivery of some 35,000 barrels of oil per day in the Beaufort Sea. We are looking forward to production. We recognize that there has to be further delineation wells, but we are hopeful that production from the Beaufort will not take too long. I might add that, when these discoveries are made, of course it encourages oil companies to continue exploration in our frontier areas.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INSURANCE

LIABILITY PREMIUM INCREASES—REQUEST FOR COMBINES INVESTIGATION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance and concerns the insurance crisis. So that the Minister can understand the importance of this crisis, I will give an example of the terrible tragedy. The General Hospital of Toronto had to pay an increase of some 700 per cent this year over last year for liability insurance. Does the Minister believe that the insurance industry is doing something wrong? Will she support today the demand for an investigation made by 10 Members of Parliament asking Director O'Farrel to investigate the insurance crisis?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I think I should explain to the Hon. Member that several times in the House I have expressed my concern for this issue. I have tried to explain to the House the importance between our area of responsibility and that of the provinces. The provinces have taken some appropriate action to deal with what is indeed a very real problem and one about which we care a great deal. Our policy concerns have to do with solvency and the capital base. Those are the kinds of issues which we will be bringing to the House in the process of our entire examination of the financial services industry.

Yes, I do care a great deal, and we are in touch with the industry on this basis. However, it is important not to leap into someone else's area of responsibility every time there is a problem.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE ON BROAD BASIS

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport has said here and elsewhere, and as recently as this morning on television on the program Canada AM, that he would take action to help the Canadian Ski Team. Why could the Minister not do the same for the municipalities, hospitals, school boards, businesses and individuals faced with these insurance problems?

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I think this question has been answered in the House several times over the past few days. It concerns the fact that there is a very difficult situation in a number of areas affected by insurance. We are dealing within our area of responsibility, and we will continue to do so.

GAZ MÉTROPOLITAIN OFFER—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Is he not aware that the Gaz Métropolitain company announced yesterday that it had to withdraw its purchasing offer because it could not obtain a guaranteed external market for all its sales as required by Ultramar? Will the Prime Minister put pressure on Ultramar so that Quebecers will not be paying excessive prices because of the monopoly this company wants to establish?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): I think that my honourable friend is wrong. Ultramar has been associated with the economic development of Quebec for many years. As concerns job creation, they have made a commitment to the Quebec Government and ourselves for another capital investment of $150 million, I believe, to create more jobs in Quebec. We in Quebec therefore consider Ultramar a good corporate citizen. However, what we want first of all is more job creation and reasonable prices for the consumers. We are going to meet both objectives by favouring Quebecers and economic recovery in Quebec.

An Hon. Member: Absolutely!

[English]

REQUEST FOR COMBINES INVESTIGATION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, in light of the fact that all the evidence which has surfaced so far indicates that Ultramar has a precondition on the sale of its refinery that any purchaser cannot sell into the Quebec market, is the Prime Minister prepared to initiate, under Section 32 of the Combines Investigation Act, an investigation to ensure that the consumers of Quebec are not held to ransom by an oil monopoly?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I had some difficulty understanding the question, but I think that I have heard it now and that I can fully assure my friend that the Federal Government, led by a Quebecer and with a very strong and impressive Quebec representation, will protect the interests of Quebecers in all areas, including the price of gasoline in Quebec.

YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT

INTRODUCTION OF AMENDMENTS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. Yesterday he announced plans for a major overhaul of the Young Offenders Act. While I applaud his swift action in preparing these draft proposals, I would remind him that time is of the essence to remedy the problems society is facing because of the many flaws in the Act. How soon will the Minister bring the required legislation into Parliament?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I have now had a chance to meet with those people who have to work with the Young Offenders Act. I have listened to them. It is apparent to me that the Act is in need of reform. I intend to introduce legislation in Parliament as soon as possible after I have met with my provincial colleagues. Having done that, I will be seeking the co-operation of members of the Opposition to have this legislation passed before the summer recess.

FOOD AND DRUGS

USE OF ILLEGAL DRUG TO INJECT CALVES

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. It concerns the 12,000 veal calves which were injected with the illegal anabolic steroid, trembolone acetate. Yesterday the Minister of Agriculture did not explain why the animals were allowed to be injected with this illegal drug or why 2,000 carcasses of adulterated meat were allowed to be sold. Could the Minister explain why his Department allowed this illegal drug to be imported into Canada in such large quantities?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the Hon. Member—and with his background I think he will know this—that Health and Welfare did not approve the importation of TA, nor did the Department of Agriculture approve its importation. It is an illegal drug in Canada, and it is for that reason that it came under the Food and Drug Act and is being investigated by the Department and the appropriate authorities.

LEGALIZATION INQUIRY

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, in view of the very large volume of animals injected with this drug, has the Minister received any representation from his cabinet colleagues to legalize the drug retroactively?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, that is not the manner in which caucus has approached these questions. Rather, the drug is illegal and that is why the Minister of Agriculture took action. That is why we are taking action. That is why we are using whatever authority we have. The point is that there has not been any of that representation, and I hope his question is not of the same nature.

INVESTMENT CANADA

PROPOSED ACQUISITION OF CINEPLEX ODEON BY UNITED STATES CORPORATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for Investment Canada. It concerns the 33 per cent acquisition of Cineplex Odeon on the part of MCA in the United States. Would the Minister agree that this shows that there is a serious loophole in the regulations, when this 33 per cent makes the operation a majority shareholder and is de facto control? Does he plan to do anything about it?

● (1450)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, we in Investment Canada have of course noted the proposed acquisition to which the Hon. Member has referred. Our staff have had certain discussions with the legal representatives of the company concerned. I can only tell you at the present time that no application has been made to Investment Canada. There has been no ruling sought as to whether this is a reviewable item, and we will be asking the company to give us more detail of what their plans are.

FILM INDUSTRY—TASK FORCE REPORT RECOMMENDATIONS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): My supplementary on the same issue is directed to the Minister of Communications. I wonder if he would tell us what he plans to do about this, if he sees that this is a contradiction—assuming the acquisition goes through—of the Canadianization policy in the film distribution industry, and if this might light a fire under him to do something about the recommendations of the report of the task force on the film industry.

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): As indicated by the Minister responsible for Investment Canada, Mr. Speaker, we will have first to look into this aspect of the issue and then decide together whether it is necessary to deal with the second part of the question.

[English]

LOTTERIES

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF TAX ON WINNINGS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is of the Minister of Finance. Each year in Canada millions and millions of dollars are paid out in lottery jackpots. In the United States jackpot winnings are taxable. Will the Minister of Finance consider introducing a tax on Canadian lottery winnings in the forthcoming Budget as part of his efforts to reduce the deficit?

Some Hon. Members: No, no, no.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, obviously there are a lot of lottery buyers in the House today. I will take the Hon. Member's question as a representation. At this point he knows I am not able to comment one way or the other on such representations.

VISIBLE MINORITIES

GOVERNMENT'S NEGOTIATIONS WITH REPRESENTATIVES OF JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERNED DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Multiculturalism. Today we learned in reports that the U.S. Congress is moving very significantly on three fronts to address the wrongs that were perpetrated against Japanese Americans during the Second World War. By contrast this Conservative Government has dealt with the situation in an embarrassing and certainly morally dishonest fashion.

Rather than continuing to circumvent the National Association of Japanese Canadians, and proposing yet another unilateral proposal that would be doomed to failure, I would like to ask the Minister if he does not agree that it is high time to sit at the negotiating table with the National Association of Japanese Canadians and once and for all reach a settlement that is going to be honourable and fair to all concerned.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, once again the Hon. Member is totally and absolutely misinformed, and I do not accept the premise of his question whatsoever. He should know, as I have indicated through my actions, that I have been in constant contact not only with the National Association of Japanese Canadians but with other Canadian Japanese organizations as well as other groups and individuals who are interested in this very serious matter.

The reason for delay, if the Hon. Member thinks there is a delay, is because the National Association of Japanese Canadians is having a study done by Price, Waterhouse and they want to have the results of the study before the Government acts. If he doesn't believe that, he can ask the president of that association.

Finally, if I may conclude, Mr. Speaker, that Hon. Member and the rest of this House, and all Canadians, should be congratulating this Government because this is the first Government in 43 years which has taken any action.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR FURTHER NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, this Minister is misleading this House if he thinks the national association is in concert with this Government, because based on the—

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the Hon. Member did not mean that to be unparliamentary. Just a supplementary question, please.

Mr. Marchi: The Minister of State says he is consulting with Canadians. Can he guarantee this House and the national association that once he has completed all his consultations with all Canadians he will return with his findings to the negotiation table, that he will negotiate with the national association representing the national constituency of the community that this Government is attempting to address?

Mr. Speaker: This is very long.

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, I can assure this House and all Canadians that the commitment that this Government has made is going to be kept after total and absolute consultations with a broad range of Canadians. I also want to remind the Hon. Member that during the last previous administration, in the last question in this House of Commons the Right Hon. Prime Minister of today, when he was Leader of the Opposition, asked former Prime Minister Trudeau about this and he said there would be no compensation, there would be discussion, and the Liberal Party was not going to do anything for Japanese Canadians.

FISHERIES

WEST COAST SALMON CATCH IN 1985

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): My question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. It pertains to the huge unanticipated surplus returns of salmon to the West Coast fisheries last year that the Department refused to be allowed to be caught. Losses to the industry show figures of $30 million to $50 million. Would the Minister undertake to launch a full public inquiry into the development and implementation of that fatally flawed fishing plan last year?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, as with all annual fishing plans the West Coast salmon fishing plan is the product of consultation between departmental officials and the various advisory groups, and in the case of the 1985 salmon fishery there was indeed a surplus in the return to many of the rivers. This is not a loss to the industry, but I think, Mr. Speaker, a recognition of the tremendous benefits of the Salmonid Enhancement Program. I will be discussing that and the next year's fishing plan with my advisory committee in Vancouver on Monday.

DATA AVAILABLE TO DEPARTMENT

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Would the Minister admit that the data on which that plan is based, on which the consultation takes place, is hopelessly inadequate, and that the cut of 200 staff members from his Department, and the erosion of $65 million out of its budget are going to make an even worse fishing plan next year, with again very large multimillion dollar losses to the industry?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that the scientific resources of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans are second to none anywhere in the world, and that in any restructuring and improvements to the efficiency of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans there is no question but what those scientific resources will be enhanced, not diminished.

FILM INDUSTRY

ACQUISITION OF CINEPLEX ODEON SHARES BY AMERICAN CORPORATION

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, yesterday an American conglomerate became the largest single shareholder of Canada's most important distributor and exhibitor of movies, Cineplex. My question is directed to the Minister of Communications. Since this flies in the face of the many concerns expressed by his task force on the film industry, could the Minister tell this House what he is going to do about this increased concentration and control by American interests?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Following this transaction, Mr. Speaker, the Americans will become minority shareholders in Cineplex, and not majority shareholders.

What really matters at this time, as reflected in the reply made by the Minister responsible for Regional Economic Expansion, is the Investment Canada aspect of the question, and the Minister is in contact with his officials and the company first of all, to clear up the legal aspects of the issue.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Government House Leader what business he will call for the coming week?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the business for the next week will be as follows: today we are going to complete report stage of Bill C-70, the Bill with respect to family allowances. Tomorrow we will commence consideration of third reading of Bill C-84, a Bill to amend the Income Tax Act and other legislation. I would like Monday to be the final day for third reading consideration of Bill C-70, and Tuesday will be the fourth and final day for consideration of Bill C-84, the income tax Bill.

The House Leaders will be meeting after Question Period to discuss other items of legislation. I hope then to have an opportunity to discuss the business for the rest of the week at that time. However, we have already had some discussions and there may be a consensus with respect to the Bills with which we will deal. However, I will confirm that today.

PETITIONS

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and duty to present a petition from residents of my own constituency who state that the deindexation of the universal family allowance is an unfair attack on women and families, and further state that this attach will not be offset by changes to the child tax credit and that other tax increases in the May Budget will place an unfair burden on low and middle-income earners.

While I have the floor, I have a similar petition to present from residents of the Province of Nova Scotia who also state that the deindexation of the universal family allowance is an unfair attack on women and families. They also state that this attack will not be offset by changes to the child tax credit and that other tax increases in the May Budget will place an unfair burden on low and middle-income earners.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I also have a number of petitions to present protesting Bill C-70 and the partial deindexation of family allowance. The first two petitions are from my riding of Vancouver East where many, many people have protested that this measure will create considerable hardship for families. They call on the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance.

The next petition is from the interior of British Columbia including Kelowna, Peachland and Penticton, all areas represented by Conservative Members, unfortunately. These petitioners are calling for the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of family allowances.

Moving along eastward to Nova Scotia, there have been a great many petitions from that province recently. This particular one I am presenting is signed by residents of Dartmouth, Sackville and Halifax who also say that the family allowance Bill is very unfair to families and will create considerable hardship and there should be full indexation of the universal family allowance.

I also have a petition to present from a group called Women Against the Federal Budget, and most of these women live in Burnaby, British Columbia. They are stating that children are everyone's responsibility and they strongly oppose the budget proposals to reduce the cost-of-living protection of family allowance and demand that this proposal be withdrawn as soon as possible.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition signed by people who are asking me to present in this House a request that the Government of Canada reinstate full indexation of the family allowances and the child tax credit. The petition comes from Sault Ste. Marie. I have another one from the constituency of Saint-Hyacinthe.

[English]

I have a petition here from Toronto asking that the Government restore full indexation to family allowances.

[Translation]

A petition from the constituency of Ottawa-Vanier, another one from the constituency of Ottawa-Carleton, another one from the constituency of Gaspé with several signatures, another one from the constituency of Gaspé again, asking the Government to reinstate full indexation of pensions and the child tax credit.

[English]

I have a petition from Kamloops-Shuswap and one from Macdiarmid, Ontario.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I do not have a petition from Kamloops-Shuswap but I do have one from Vancouver containing 34 signatures. The petition is asking the Government to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and asking the Government to rescind a number of unfair tax increases in the last Budget.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions signed by over 100 people from Winnipeg, most of whom are parents who have children in day care centres. They say that in the opinion of the petitioners, the deindexation of universal family allowance is a massive cut-back in the public commitment to child benefits, is an unfair attack on women and families with children and especially single-parent mothers, and they therefore humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and rescind the unfair tax increases.

I have another set of petitions signed by members of the Royal Canadian Legion in Winnipeg who say that the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, in line with the historic right to petition which has existed, I believe, since Runnymede, we now have more names on petitions regarding family allowances than we had on petitions regarding the old age pensions, something which the Crown ignores at its peril. I would like to present a petition signed by a number of people from the City of Regina. The undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate and maintain the full indexation of family allowances and to rescind unfair tax increases, something for which they and I humbly pray.

RESTORATION OF FERRY SERVICE TO PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition to present on another subject. Residents of the Atlantic provinces and particularly Prince Edward Island and parts of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia petition and humbly pray and call upon Parliament to restore the ferry schedule between Borden and Cape Tormentine, the ferry service between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island and to consult with the local citizens as to the requirements of their ferry services.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND CHILD TAX CREDIT

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present petitions on behalf of families who are severely affected by the de-indexation of family allowances. These petitions are signed by people, first, from the constituency of Manicouagan, second, from the constituency of Hamilton-Wentworth, and then by people from Moncton and Thunder Bay-Nipigon. This one is signed by people from London East and London West. I have another one here I received from the City of Toronto. Another one comes from the federal constituency of Kamloops-Shuswap, and the last one comes from the federal constituency or area of Saint-Hyacinthe.

Your petitioners, Mr. Speaker, pray that the Government re-instate full indexation of family allowances and the child tax credit.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition on another matter, and it also concerns the CN shops in Moncton. The people of Grande-Digue in the Moncton area, in my riding, are very concerned about the situation at the CN, and they are asking the Minister to take a stand and protect jobs in this area.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND CHILD TAX CREDIT

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of tabling a petition from the Cercle des fermières du Québec who are asking the Prime Minister of Canada to maintain full indexation of family allowances and the child tax credit.

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I also have a number of petitions in which all petitioners want to see family allowances and the child tax credit maintained. They claim, and rightly so, that these payments are indispensable to families with children.

The same petitioners, Mr. Speaker, want to see reinstatement of full indexation, and their petitions are from the federal riding of Ottawa-Carleton.

I have another petition from Toronto, Ontario; one from the federal riding of Gaspé in Quebec, and another one, also from the federal riding of Gaspé, Quebec.

I have another one here, Mr. Speaker, from the federal riding of Capilano in British Columbia; another petition from Hamilton, Ontario; another one from a federal riding in Quebec, this time from Saint-Maurice, and my last one is from the federal riding of Rimouski.

All petitioners are urgently asking for full indexation of family allowances, a form of assistance that is very important to single-parent families.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, first, I have a petition with respect to pension benefits which are essential for the maintenance of family incomes. The deduction of pension benefits from unemployment insurance benefits would seriously interfere with the efforts of employees and the community to create employment. Accordingly, the petitioners, who are from Corner Brook, Newfoundland, ask Parliament to ensure that all retired employees keep their pension benefits and receive their unemployment insurance benefits without deduction of pension income.

GOVERNMENT FISCAL AND SOCIAL SECURITY POLICIES

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to table a petition on behalf of a great many petitioners from Montreal, Laval, Dorval, Saint-Hubert, Saint-Lambert, Longueuil and other Quebec areas.

The undersigned claim that the attack against Canadian families is altogether intolerable in view of such budget gifts as the elimination of the capital gains tax and the RRSP deductions for high income bracket people.

The Government is giving away billions of dollars to the oil industry and has put together a rescue package for the Commercial Bank of Canada worth a billion dollars.

The petitioners are asking the Government to re-establish the full indexation of family allowances and to rescind the unfair tax increases. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

[English]

As well, I have a number of similar petitions with respect to the family allowance. I would like to note their origins. They are from a number of ridings in Ontario, British Columbia, in particular, Vancouver, and Prince Edward Island. I have a somewhat different petition, Mr. Speaker, from a group called Women Against the Federal Budget and signed, in particular, by a number of persons from Toronto. The petitioners state that children are everyone's responsibility and that parents should receive Government assistance which value is at least as high or higher than the present family allowance levels. They oppose the budget proposals to reduce the cost of living protection of the family allowance and demand of Parliament that this proposal be withdrawn as soon as possible.

Finally, I have a great number of petitions with respect to the family allowance from petitioners from my own riding of Broadview-Greenwood.

I also have several petitions demanding the full indexation of the family allowance. They are from Thunder Bay, Ottawa and from the Kingston area.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present a series of petitions from my riding of Prince Albert. The petitioners pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance and to rescind unfair tax increases.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present a petition from a number of residents from the liberated riding of Spadina, and some from other non-liberated ridings adjoining Spadina, in which the petitioners point out that this 3 per cent deindexation of family allowance, plus the other reduction in child benefits, plus increased income taxes on low income people, and the $1 billion hand-out to oil companies and banks, place a great burden on low income families and their children. Therefore, they call upon the House to rescind Bill C-70 and the other unfair tax changes.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, Question No. 466 will be answered today.

CANADA JOBS STRATEGY

Question No. 466—Mr. Allmand:

1. What is the regional breakdown of the funding allocation under the Canada Jobs Strategy to the (a) job entry option (b) skill investment option (c) skill shortages option (d) job development option (e) innovations option (f) community futures option?

2. When is the community futures option of the Canada Jobs Strategy expected to begin?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): 1. The regional breakdown of the funds allocated under the Canadian Jobs Strategy is provided on the table below. It is important to note that these figures include all programs which are part of the Canadian Jobs Strategy. The former job creation and training programs, except for institutional training, were replaced by the Canadian Jobs Strategy programs in September, 1985. As part of this period of transition from old programming to new programs, consultation is under way with the provinces and the level of expenditures for 1985-86 is in part dependent on agreements being signed with the provinces.

2. The community futures program of the Canadian Jobs Strategy is expected to begin, at least in part, by the end of the 1985 calendar year.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if Questions Nos. 427 and 465 could be made Orders for Return, the returns would be tabled immediately.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that Questions Nos. 427 and 465 be deemed to have been made Orders for Return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FISHING BOAT SERGE M

Question No. 427—Mr. Cassidy:

1. Was Mr. Gerard Mallet's fishing boat, the Serge M, detained by Department of Transport personnel on August 26, 1980 in the Gaspé region of Quebec and, if so (a) for what reason (b) under what legal authority?

2. Did the detention order refer to the article of legislation or regulation and, if not, for what reason?

3. Is it an offence not to have a valid certificate of inspection for a boat or vessel and, if so, under what (a) article of which regulations (b) conditions, if any, is this requirement not in effect?

4. Did the Department refuse to explain for what reason it alleged the boat was illegal and therefore not eligible for a certificate and, if so, for what reason?

5. Did the boat have excessive tonnage and was Mr. Mallet provided with an opportunity to have the vessel cut down or reconstructed in order to bring it within the permissible ceiling of allowed tonnage and, if not, for what reason?

6. Has the Department permitted other fishing boats to be similarly reconstructed or cut down in order to bring them under the maximum permissible tonnage?

7. Is the maximum permissible tonnage considered to be gross or registered tonnage, and under what provision of which law or regulation is this specified?

8. Was insurance granted for the Serge M by the Regime d'Assurance des Bateaux de pêcheurs and was this an agency of the Department of Fisheries in 1979?

9. Did the federal Government believe that the Serge M did not have a valid certificate of inspection and was not eligible for such a certificate due to its tonnage and, if so, for what reason?

10. Did the Federal Business Development Bank advance a $45,000 loan on the vessel and did the Department believe that the vessel could not qualify for certification and therefore could and should not be used for a fishing business and, if so, for what reason was the loan advanced?

11. Did the Government provide a $42,000 subsidy for the construction of the vessel and was it alleged by the Department that the vessel could not meet its standards in order to be certified as a fishing boat and, if so, for what reason was the subsidy granted?

12. What were the circumstances surrounding the Federal Business Development Bank's sale of the vessel in the fall of 1981?

13. What was the FBDB's evaluation of the boat and was this less than the $142,000 construction cost and, if so, what accounted for this drop in value when the vessel had only been used as a fishing vessel for one season?

14. Did the FBDB receive any offers to purchase the vessel and, if so, in what amounts?

15. Was an offer of $55,000 received for the vessel and was it refused and, if so, for what reason?

16. Were other offers received and were they refused and, if so, for what reason?

17. Was the vessel insured for $100,000 and did the FBDB sell the vessel for $15,000 and, if so, for what reason?

18. Was the Department's decision to detain the Serge M provoked by complaints or information provided by the builders of the vessel and, if so, is it normal for the Department to act on such information when there has been a legal dispute resulting in court action between Lepage Craft and the owner of the vessel?

19. Was the detention order served in the Province of Quebec by the Department upon a fisherman whose mother tongue is French, filled out only in English and, if so (a) for what reason (b) is this normal practice (c) is this practice now being changed?

Return tabled.

HIRING OF OBSERVERS BY DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES AND OCEANS

Question No. 465—Mr. Skelly:

1. Did the Department of Fisheries and Oceans contract with (a) Beothuk Data Resources to hire observers as guardians for streams (b) Sea Watch to hire observers for the offshore fleet and, if so, who are the principles involved in the signing of these contracts?

2. Will the Minister provide a list of all contracts made with these two companies and the Department, including the cost of such contracts since 1980?

3. Since 1980 (a) how many persons have been employed on these contracts (b) in what positions (c) how many weeks were they employed and what were they paid?

4. Will the Minister supply job descriptions for the jobs that were contracted with the above mentioned companies?

Return tabled.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ACT, 1973

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of report stage of Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973, as reported (without amendment) from a legislative committee; and Motions Nos. 4 and 6 (Ms. Mitchell), Motions Nos. 5 and 7 (Mr. Malépart) (p. 9391), and Motion No. 9 (Mr. Redway) (p. 9392).

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I should like first of all to congratulate women's groups, those especially from the province of Quebec, who have participated in this action against the de-indexation of family allowances. I notice that some representatives of these groups are sitting today in the galleries of the House.

[English]

The matter before us today is the more narrow subject matter of the clauses which the Government is trying to bring in with regard to the presumption of death of missing children. Fortunately, this measure affects a very small number of people. It is not like the issue of family allowances which affects every family in the country. However, I do not think that this is any reason for us to be happier about these provisions. These are families which are suffering the loss of missing children who may yet be found while the search goes on. This is an area in which we would hope to see a great deal of sympathy and understanding given to those families by the Government, instead of seeing this rather heavy-handed approach which would give the Minister the power to cut off benefits with some rather arbitrary measures and ones which are constitutionally quite dicey.

The Government would have us believe that Clause 5 is for the benefit of the parents of missing children, that is that it will eliminate the need for the Government to collect possible overpayments in instances where the family allowance is paid out beyond the actual date of a child's death. Of course, if this were all there was to it, we would have fewer objections, although one would still want to raise jurisdictional questions.

The excuse for his heavy handed legislation does not stand up to any real examination because it is simply not needed. There is already a power to remit overpayment and, obviously, in cases of compassion, we would expect it to be exercised, and so there is no need for legislation to provide for additional powers in that kind of instance. In fact, as the Department of National Health and Welfare itself points out, the numbers are really very small indeed. We are not talking about budgetary savings of great consequence. There is not a great deal of money at stake and I think the feelings of the families concerned must count a great deal more.

The groups which have not been consulted, particularly the child find groups, which are doing excellent work in supporting parents and assisting them in the search for missing children, are beginning to make their views known even though they have not had the chance to meet with the committee. As we know, groups were cut off. We had all kinds of proposals for groups to come before committee, but they were not permitted to do so because the Conservatives insisted on pushing through the legislation quickly. However, these groups are now telling us that it is simply not necessary to give the Minister such God-like powers of discretion for the discernment of time of death and that the whole clause is so poorly worded that no one has any clear idea at all of when the Minister would invoke these powers. I think we should take the advice of groups which are, after all, the ones who are working on this subject. They are the ones in touch with the families, the ones who have experience with the current situation and who know what the difficulties are with the administration of family allowance in these kinds of cases.

To conclude I would simply like to point out, Mr. Speaker, the arrogance and shortsightedness of the Government in its failure to consult I say it should withdraw the clause in question. If it is reluctant to withdraw the clause, then it should look very seriously at an alternative proposal, such as the proposal put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), which is a much more sensible way of dealing with the question and which would as well retain the respect for provincial jurisdiction in this area.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, as we enter into the last two days of debate on Bill C-70, the Bill to deindex the family allowance and the amendments thereto, I believe it is incumbent upon us as Members of Parliament to review the process whereby we arrive at this stage of the Bill today.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, as will the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), that, in essence, the commencement of this debate began in November of 1984, some two months after the Conservative Government assumed office. The Government promised in the Economic Statement of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) that Canadians from all walks of life would have the opportunity to enter into a debate and a review of family benefits, and the Government talked as well about the need for a review of elderly benefits.

From mid-November, 1984 to the end of January, 1985, there was considerable debate on the floor of the House of Commons about the actual intentions of the Government with respect to the two papers which would have been tabled with the Economic Statement of November, 1984. I recall very well some of the promises made at that time not only by the Minister of National Health and Welfare but by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance. They gave us the reasons and the rationale for the kind of debate they wanted to have concerning both those papers. I can recall very well the Minister of National Health and Welfare indicating that the purpose of the review was simply to ensure that the benefits would flow to those targeted groups in our society who need more help than others and that under no circumstances would any savings as a result of the review of child benefits be targeted for deficit reduction. That was one promise made by the Government.

In addition, I recall at the beginning of this debate that the Prime Minister, in his own words, questioned the rationale behind a bank president receiving family allowance benefits. As you will recall, Mr. Speaker, as a result of the heated debate on the floor of the House of Commons and the Opposition's defence of the universality of those two programs, the Government retreated. That led to the tabling of the position paper of the Government, the white paper on family benefits, by the Minister of National Health and Welfare in January of 1985. The whole matter was then referred to the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs. We in turn, for several months, had many, many groups appear before the committee to give us some suggestions as to how better to structure family benefits programs, and all three political Parties agreed with the necessity of better targeting the resources to those in our society who needed help the most. I can recall that we did have an all-Party agreement when we returned to the House of Commons from committee for the report stage with a set of suggestions which would improve the delivery of the family benefits system. I believe the Minister of National Health and Welfare will recall that we indicated to him that we favoured the removal of the child exemptions and the improvement of the child tax credit. In addition, we also recommended that the cross-over point, the point at which the child tax credit value begins to diminish, should be increased because we felt that under the proposal made by the Government at the time, a $23,00 a year family income was far too low a level for the cross-over to occur. We recommended it should be higher than $23,000. We also suggested that the StatsCan definition of middle income families should be the cross-over point at which the Government should look at improving the system for family benefits.

I feel that, realistically, had the Government taken the advice of the committee, and had the improvements to the family benefit packages which were announced on May 23 been taken into account, we could have had an improvement in the delivery of family benefits which would have resulted in better targeting to those in our society who need more help.

Unfortunately, the Government chose to ignore the recommendations of the standing committee, and if one takes a look at the minute details which are inherent in Bill C-70, one can see that not only did the Government reject the majority of the advice given by that committee but it in effect, in my view, proceeded in a retroactive way in creating a family benefit system for this country which is going to worsen the lot of those in our society who need help the most, namely the lower-income families.

As you will recall, Mr. Speaker, we indicated in debates previous to this part of third reading, that we have a great deal of concern about the plans to deindex the child tax credit beginning in the year 1989 and beyond. Here we have a Government that could have improved the situation had it left the indexation on the child tax credit in place. It did take some of our advice in increasing the child tax credit but then it chose to deindex it from 1989 and beyond. As a result of that one measure alone, even the families who have an income of only $9,000 a year will begin to lose benefits. I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that that flies in the face of the promises made by the Conservative Government in the fall of 1984, at which time it indicated it wished to target the resources of this country to those who needed help the most. Consequently, we have had a great deal of debate on this issue, which has led to various social groups in our society, which represent the interests of families, coming before committee this fall to outline their concerns about the proposals in Bill C-70.

I believe the Minister of National Health and Welfare received a telex today from groups of citizens who represent somewhere in the neighbourhood of 200,000 families outlining their concern about the plans to deindex. They are asking the Government to take heed of all the opposition to this proposal and, before we have final reading on Bill C-70, to stop the proposal to deindex the family allowance.

I suspect that it is going to fall on deaf ears. I have been around the House of Commons long enough to know that when a Bill reaches this stage, after all the discussions that we have had in committee, the odds are very small that the Government is going to reverse itself. I think that Canadians deserve to know, in the final days of debate on Bill C-70, that the Government has broken promises. It has been intellectually dishonest with the Canadian public and has delivered a Bill that it indicated would never reach the floor of the House of Commons.

You know that for several weeks, Mr. Speaker, at 3.15 every day, Members of Parliament of all three political Parties have presented petitions signed by their constituents outlining their opposition to the Government's plan of action under Bill C-70. I believe that this has been one of the most widespread petition campaigns to ever have seen the light of day on the floor of the House of Commons. At the latest count, 120,000 Canadians have taken the time to sign petitions to indicate their concern about the way in which the Conservative Government is going to impact on the benefits to families and family incomes. I will not get into a discussion of the other plan to deindex personal exemptions in the income tax system. I have outlined several times before the very perverse social policy direction that the Government has indicated as a result of the tabling of all of the tax measures, including the deindexation of the family allowances, on the night of May 23.

I believe that the majority of Canadians have made their best effort to input into the political process. It is through no fault of the efforts of the Opposition Parties that we find ourselves, in the final two days of debate, facing a Government that has no intention of listening. The Government was elected in September of 1984 with the promise of consultation. The key phrase that the Conservative Party used in the campaign in the summer of 1984 was that it would consult widely with Canadians and that never would legislation be introduced that had not been vetted through a consultative process with the majority of Canadians. That is a second broken promise, Mr. Speaker. I have indicated to you that not one social policy group that represents the mothers and families of the country has indicated support for this Bill.

As a last word, I hope that the Minister of National Health and Welfare will recall the broken promises at the next election. I think the people of Canada will remember this day and the days ahead with regard to the Government's program on family allowances.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question? I will recognize the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I will be brief because I know that we want to get on to some of the other crucial amendments. However, I do want to speak specifically on the amendment dealing with the presumption of death. At stake is the fundamental principle of justice for children, the principle that children should be treated equal to all other Canadians. Unfortunately, this particular clause in the Act discriminates against children by applying different rules to them than are applied to any other Canadians.

Specifically, by Clause15.1(1), (2) and (3), the Minister is giving himself the power to presume a child dead if and when that child has not been located for a certain period of time. To add insult to injury, not only is the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) giving himself the power to presume a child dead, he is, further, giving himself the power to determine that the child has been revived if he finds out at some point in the future that the child is not dead. Therefore, he can issue a presumption of death certificate, and then empower himself to revoke the presumption of death certificate if evidence shows that in fact the child has not died.

We could argue that this may touch only a few children in Canada, but we know that there are literally thousands of children who go missing every year in the country, sometimes as a result of family custody disputes, and sometimes as a result of foul play. To empower the Minister of National Health and Welfare to say to a family that its child is now presumed dead and that we will issue a presumption of death certificate goes above and beyond the power that should be accorded to any single Minister.

That is why the amendment before the House, which calls upon the Minister to apply to the courts for such a presumption of death to be made, is a good, valid, and supportable amendment. No Minister gives himself or herself the power to declare an adult in Canada dead. The presumption of death has a legal process. The person must have disappeared for a certain number of years and there must be a court application. Surely if we learned one thing from the Charter of Rights, it was that all Canadians, regardless of age, gender, marital status or economic circumstances, should be treated equally. That includes the children of the country. Through this clause the Minister is giving himself the power to presume children dead, which power he would not have if they were over the age of 16, 17, or 18, depending upon the province.

Organizations such as Justice for Children were not permitted to come before the committee to explain their concerns in relation to this bootlegged amendment which has very little to do with the decision to cut back on increases in family allowances. It is a bootlegged amendment and has no place in this Bill. The Minister should not put himself above the law by suggesting that there should be one law for children and another for adults.

I personally have known families who have spent tens of thousands of dollars looking for lost children. To suggest that, above and beyond that particular expense which they incur, they must now face a potential presumption of death certificate which would result in the cessation of all benefits for the child, is wrong. I think it is wrong for all people, Mr. Speaker. I, therefore, urge support for the amendment which would make the law of the land apply to children in the same way as it now applies to adults.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question? The Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor).

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I am rather surprised at some of the statements of members of the Opposition who say they are speaking for a majority of Canadians. Their petitions do not represent even 1 per cent of the population of Canada. Many of those petitions have been signed under false pretences and misunderstandings. Some of the arguments that we have heard in the House today are completely unfair, many are untrue, and many contain innuendoes that are untrue. If those arguments are being presented to people, I can understand why they would sign petitions. However, they should have all the facts. I want to deal with some of the items that we have been hearing. I think that this Bill is supported by the vast majority of people in Canada because it is fair and sensible. It attacks the existing problems rather than creating problems.

The Hon. Member who just spoke, and a number of others before her, mentioned that you cannot presume somebody to be dead. That is not new, Mr. Speaker. During the war hundreds of people were presumed dead. When a particular length of time had passed without them being located, they were presumed dead. However, that did not mean that they were dead. As a matter of fact, a very close friend of mine was presumed dead at about the time I was going overseas. I was sad about it, but there was always a hope that maybe he was not dead, even though all the circumstances indicated that he was. His mother told me that she did not have much hope, but that she still hoped a little. I told her to keep on hoping because there were many things that could have happened that might have kept Bill alive.

• (1540)

One day I was walking down the streets of London and who did I run into but my friend Bill. The Dutch underground had taken care of him for two and a half years. They finally returned him to England and his mother was delighted. Obviously the mother was afraid that he might be dead but the fact that he had been presumed dead did not make her sad.

I am somewhat amazed by the arguments from some members of the New Democratic Party. They say that a boy or girl should not be presumed dead even though they have disappeared and all the circumstances indicate they may be dead. They say that the registrar in the provinces of territories, rather than the Minister, should sign the death certificate declaring a child dead. I suggest that they are adding fuel to the fire because they want the child declared officially dead for all intents and purposes. The Minsiter is simply attempting to assume the child dead for the purposes of this Act only. The New Democratic Party wants the child declared officially dead with a death certificate from the registrar.

I suspect that Hon. Members opposite really support this Bill because their amendments are futile. They simply change small words here and there and argue against the Minister being given authority to sign a death certificate. They want the registrar to do so in order that the child will be declared dead for all intents and purposes.

Liberal Members want the courts to decide when a child is dead. How ridiculous can their arguments get? The purpose of the Act is to help the child and the parents. We do not want to presume a child dead for all purposes. We do not want the child dead at all. However, it is better to deal with it in this way.

The Bill stipulates that if a child is found alive all of those payments which have been withheld will go back to the parents. The purpose of this Bill is not to save money but to save the child and help the parents. The Minister is showing compassion by introducing this Bill.

It is the position of the New Democratic Party that the registrar should declare a child dead. However, this means the child would be dead for the purpose of a will and insurance. We are simply saying that a child would be presumed dead for the convenience of this Bill. At the same time we can keep searching and hoping that the child is alive. That is the purpose of this Bill.

It is nonsense to say that we will stop searching for the child. We will accentutate the search if necessary because we want to find children alive. However, we are faced with a situation in the country today where children are abused and killed. In my opinion, the only fitting punishment for murderers of children is the hangman. There are too many bleeding hearts today who say we should feel sorry for the man who rapes a six year old girl perhaps three or four times and then kills her. That indeed happens today. We intend to continue searching for the child in the hopes of finding him or her alive. Any money that has been withheld from the parents will be paid once the child is found alive.

I suggest the Liberals' amendment would put the parents in a terrible position. They want the payments to continue to the parents for five years even though the child is dead.

Ms. Copps: No.

Mr. Taylor: After making such a payment for five years the Liberals would come to the House and accuse the Minister of sending cheques to the parents of a deceased boy or girl. I believe the public is becoming well aware of the Opposition's tricks to foil and destroy good legislation. Let me make another point concerning the Liberal amendment. According to their amendment, the Minister would have to continue payments for as long as five years. However, the purpose of family allowance is to enable parents to look after their children. Therefore, what becomes of those payments if the child is not with the family?

The presumption of death does not have any effect on whether the child is dead or alive. It simply sets out a mechanism in the Act to deal with certain cases. The child is still presumed alive according to all other Acts so that the rights of the child are not affected in other ways. We have assured the parents that we will search for the child and, if found, any payments owing will be made.

The Hon. Member said that 120,000 people signed that petition. How many would have signed if they were aware of these facts? The statement by some Members that we will stop searching for children when they are presumed dead is nonsense. You are indicating that I am almost out of time, Mr. Speaker. I have many other points I would like to bring to the attention of Canadians so that I could correct some of the innuendoes contained in the speeches of the New Democrat and Liberal opposition in the House.

"(2) Subsections (1.1) and (1.2) of the said Act are repealed and the following substituted therefor:"

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: Debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Debate. The Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon).

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): This is the last day of debate on some of these detailed amendments that have been before us. This is the last chance to put across to the Conservatives here in this Chamber and to the people of Canada the sense of deep concern and outrage that exists in many parts of the country about what is taking place with regard to family allowances.

We have an economic crisis according to the Government. Yet the first victims of that economic crisis are not the banks. The banks get bail-outs. The victims are not the large corporations. The large corporations get extra tax advantages. The victims are not the speculative business people. Those people get a new bonus of $500,000 through changes in the capital gains tax. The victims in the original plan were, first, to be pensioners then the children. The pensioners rose up. Thousands, hundreds of thousands signed petitions which forced the Government to see reason. The Government having listened to pensioners and having recognized that it had made a mistake then moved on to its next victim, the children of the country. Across the country people tried to mobilize to protect those children.

As the Member for Essex-Windsor, I have personally handed in thousands of petitions from the Essex County-Windsor area protesting the heartlessness of making children the victims of our economic problems. Yet the Conservatives have refused to listen. They have refused to listen despite the sense that any civilized society has that children are a common concern, a common responsibility and a responsibility which all of us in society have to defend. Yet these children are the ones facing the deindexation of family allowances which support them.

Any society deserves to give such children full respect. Yet in this society, the Government makes them the victims.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this debate deal with justice. It is a debate on a just society, a debate to see whether an economic crisis should victimize Canadian chiidren and for this political party and all the people who signed these petitions, the message is clear. This message is: No, it is not fair, it is not something that we want to see in our society. We want a society where the children are the pride of their country.

[English]

With this amendment, Mr. Speaker, we give the Conservative Party a last chance. I hope that my Conservative colleagues who are here today recognize the sense of charity out of which we offer this last chance to them. It is not because we love them, it is because we want to give them that good Christian chance to repent. We want to give them that last possibility before the voters utterly and totally condemn them. Since the Conservatives launched this attempt to take money out of the mouths of babes, their public opinion standing has fallen so far that it is even below the Liberal Party's now. With that sense of hell and damnation facing them, we offer a chance of repentance. We offer them a last chance to escape that terrible fate.

Mr. Benjamin: Repent brothers.

Mr. Langdon: We offer it with a sense of charity, charity which is ill-deserved, but charity that says we will give you this chance. Vote for our amendment. It will give you a year's operation to this Bill, but let us put in a sunset clause. I know that every good Conservative in this House believes in sunset clauses. They want sunset clauses on every Government initiative that can be brought to bear. Why not a sunset clause in this case that takes their promise seriously?

• (1600)

After all, the Conservatives promised us that a year from now the economy would be in superb shape and that they would have set right the problems of the past. For the purposes of this amendment, we are prepared to take them seriously. We charitably say to them that at then end of the year they should withdraw this deindexation, return to fairness for children, return to justice for the country and return to a full meeting of the 3 per cent increases in the cost of living which they are doing away with for this year. We ask them to think of their own future, and we do so charitably and with a sense that we respond to the hundreds of thousands of people who petitioned the House to think again. We ask them to think again in a year and to give the people of the country-the children and the women who receive the family allowance—the improved economy which they promised. They should take away this nasty, brutish measure and return to a full system of justice for children and fairness for families.

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ACT, 1973

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of report stage of Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973, as reported (without amendment) from a legislative committee, and of motion No. 2 of Ms. Mitchell (p. 9854).

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that this amendment is an opportunity for Conservative Members to correct their mistake and compensate for their incompetence, their poor judgment and their lack of social justice.

Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister, his Cabinet colleagues and all Conservative back-benchers keep saying that our economy is doing very well. They say they are going to solve all our problems and that our economic prospects are very encouraging. If they have so much confidence in their Prime Minister, if they are so sure that we have a promising future, why would they not adopt this amendment so that the provisions of Bill C-70, which is designed to de-index and reduce family allowances, would remain in force for only one year? Conservative Members ought to give it a thought if they are motivated by compassion rather than mere financial considerations. They should adopt this amendment and restore full indexation of family allowances.

This morning, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) showed his lack of experience for the second time. The first time was when he made a letter public to rake his colleagues over the coals, but this morning he proved that he was both inexperienced and incompetent. The Members from Quebec will no longer be able to get away with their lack of experience, they will have to deliver the goods.

The Bill now before us is the one designed to slash into family allowances. But there is another one dealing with the child tax credit. Here again, after granting three yearly increases in a row, for the first time in Canada's history the Government is not allowing full indexation of the child tax credit that caters to families most in need. Not only with respect to the whole family support program, this Government decides to reduce the funds available for middle-income families, for families with children, and this will have repercussions, I am sure, for Conservative Members . . . That may not involve huge amounts, but for poor families, single-parent families, sometimes the extra dollar per month means milk for the children, school supplies, clothing for the children.

Mr. Speaker, the increase allowed by this Government in Canada is 31 cents a month for family allowances, but in Quebec, for those with only one child it is about 19 cents. And you can see those same individuals, those same people supporting all in the same breath a Bill allowing the most affluent as much as $500,000 in capital gain exemption, and forcing this House to use the taxpayers' money to help depositors who had $60,000 or more stashed in the banks that went bankrupt in Western Canada.

For the first time a Government has changed the whole income support envelope for families with children. Everyone knows that there is the family allowance program, the tax exemption for dependent children and the tax credit in support of middle- and low-income families. It is true that the Liberal Party had already de-indexed or restricted the increase in family allowances under the 6 and 5 program. But if Conservative Members want to check with the Department, they will see that whenever funds were taken from one item they were transferred to another item, to help families most in need, contrary to what this Government is doing. Its first gesture in 1985-86 is essentially an attack against the universal program called the family allowance program and a move to deprive Canadian families of $15 million while concerning the tax exemption, a measure favouring the most affluent, the Government is only waiting until 1986-87. This little example, this illustration alone shows well the philosophy of the people in the Conservative Party.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of National Health and Welfare . . . I repeat once again, this is the first time in Canada that a Minister, who normally should sit in Cabinet to defend the interests of the men and women who are the least organized in our society, those who have the least occasion to defend themselves, the senior citizens, the sick, the families with children, that this Minister has completely deserted those three groups in our society in order to support the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who is helping the most affluent.

The Clark Cabinet never would have accepted that. The Conservatives led by Mr. Diefenbaker never would have accepted that. And still less, Ministers like Miss Bégin, who at all times had the courage to stand up and fight in Cabinet.

Mr. Speaker, NDP Members refer to the 6 and 5 per cent, and I see my friend for Joliette (Mr. La Salle) smiling. But they will remember what I said in my opening remarks, that when the 6 and 5 program was established, funds were transferred to the tax credit. When Old Age Security pensions were limited to 6 and 5 per cent, there was double indexation for the most in need amongst senior citizens.

Mr. Speaker, the 10 per cent tax on drugs was another downright scandal that took place in the House of Commons.

Nevertheless, I think that the Hon. Member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle) may have a chance to make up for his mistakes, as do all Conservative Members, since they have their caucus this coming week-end. During the week-end they will for once get a chance to voice the requests and stand up for the concerns expressed by the people of their constituencies who signed the petitions.

People have done that nationwide, in all constituencies; the Family Allowance file did not specifically concern Quebec or Ontario, it was a matter about which people everywhere, in every constituency in Canada, signed petitions urging the Government and the Prime Minister to withdraw that Bill.

Mr. Speaker, we agree that the elderly people of Canada succeeded in curbing the Prime Minister's will in the matter of Old Age Security pensions despite the fact that a number of Hon. Members who are present in this House were insisting at the time that the Government was doing the right thing in cutting Old Age Security pensions.

With the help of the Opposition, associations like the Canadian Diabetes Association or the one for heart diseases managed to reverse the Prime Minister's position on the 10 per cent tax affecting those people.

Mr. Speaker, once again it was in spite of the Conservative members' attitude that the Prime Minister had to admit that we were right.

Mr. Speaker, I shall now conclude for my time has expired; may I suggest that for once Conservative Members have an opportunity to defend the interests of their constituents and to adopt this amendment that would enable us to restore the full indexation by next year.

● (1610)

[English]

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, it is customary on rising to speak in this chamber to express the pleasure that one takes in doing so. I must say that it is with some regret that I rise to address this amendment. The logical thing to happen in a reasonable society would be for one of the Government Members to rise and tell us why this amendment would be unacceptable. That has not been done, Mr. Speaker, and it stands to reproach the Government and its back-benchers that none of them are willing to address this amendment.

The single glaring omission in this whole debate about family allowances is that the Government has at no time given any indication to this House, the country or the recipients of family allowances as to when it will consider taking off the deindexing provision which it now proposes to impose.

That means that we could calculate to any year the cumulative effect of that deindexation because the Government has not said the extent to which families would be losing in 1990, 1995 or the year 2000. This is the sort of uncertainty that the Government would protest if the positions were changed around. It is the sort of open ended horizon that in another incarnation in the Province of Ontario they said they would not go for. They said they would have sunset clauses. That is why our Party is offering a sunset clause. I would certainly echo the sentiments of the previous two speakers that it is a chance that the Government should not pass up.

Unfortunately, I cannot state with any degree of confidence in the rationality of the Government processes that it might pick up this amendment and accept it. Nevertheless, it has the opportunity to do so and I commend it to its attention.

The Government has only given us vague platitudes and generalities about foreseen future improvements in the economic situation and how that might affect deindexing. The fact is, as it stands today, this deindexing would go on for as long as family allowances were paid. It would mean that the role of parenthood, the significance of children, the value to which parenting was ascribed in our society would gradually depreciate.

If any Government Members did have the courage to stand up and address the amendment they would undoubtedly instance the increases in the child tax credit. I feel that the Opposition has also addressed this responsibility. We have not said that the Government is sticking up the parents or the children of this country from day one. What we are pointing out is that there comes a point in time at which child benefits will deteriorate, and a point in time at which the Government will be downgrading the role of parenthood in our society. It appears this is part of the whole ideological scheme of this Government. On the one hand we have the deindexing of tax brackets, the deindexing of family allowances and the attempted deindexing of the old age security pension, from which it did, incredibly, have the common sense to retreat. On the other hand, as has been mentioned by many others in this chamber, we have the Government's attitude toward its corporate friends. Twenty organizations can send a telex to this Government and get no reply or response, yet one corporation can come in and ask for a billion dollars by way of a tax break and walk away with everything it ever asked for or wanted.

I would like to just put on the record of the House the names of some of the organizations that have stated publicly their opposition to this Government's plan to deindex family allowances. It is a range of organizations that represents many interests in this country, many groups that have the good of this country, and particularly the good of the poor people at heart. I refer, for example, to the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, the National Farmers Union, the Native Women's Association of Canada, the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Canadian Day Care Advocacy Association, the Canadian Labour Congress, the Yukon Status of Women Council, the National Anti-Poverty Organization, the Quebec Native Women's Association, the Metro Family Services Association, la Fédération nationale des femmes du Québec, the Metro Social Planning Council, the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, the United Church of Canada, COPO, the Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped Citizens Against Child Poverty and the Federation of Women Teachers' Association of Ontario.

That is a group which represents a very wide range of interests in our society. It is a group that is offering its collective wisdom to this Government, a group that this Government is gratuitously and wilfully ignoring in deindexing family allowances in this country.

We know what comes behind this apparently minor measure, this apparently minor reduction. We know that the passage of years makes it into a very major reduction rather than simply a minor one. We know the ideological baggage and the scheme of society that comes behind it, waiting in the wings to see how this one flies, and then it will determine what will be done next.

We know that there was considerable rumbling in the Conservative Party as to the whole question of universality. We know that it was largely considerations of practical pragmatic politics, a Machiavellian calculation as to the reaction of the people of this country rather than any commitment that led the Government to draw back on some of the measures that perhaps some of its Members would have advocated.

We know that universality in such things as the family allowance is really the only guarantee of a fair equal system that is designed to serve all. Even though we realize that through a progressive taxation system it is not funded equally, it is funded according to ability to pay. We know that those systems which rely on selective measures, which rely on identifying those in the "most need", are fraught with red tape. We know that they are bureaucratic playthings. We know that the regulations that are created are increasingly complex. We know that the way in which the regulations are interpreted is often unfair and we know that the way such regulations are applied is often demeaning to the people who are intended to be served.

I believe it would behoove the Government to take to heart the meaning of the word "service" when dealing with the family benefit system. That system should be something that serves parents and recognizes the value of child-rearing work. Frankly, it should be a system that facilitates child rearing and assists families rather than singling out some for different treatment than others and in some cases reducing benefits in circumstances in which benefits should not be reduced at all.

The effect of this measure, and I am sure members of the Government will say that this is either unintended or does not exist, is to divide the "haves" and the "have nots" in society more clearly than they have been divided before. In proposing to deindex the family allowance, the Government is furthering that process and that is a process that we in this Party would not like to see furthered. It is a process that we think characterizes not the wealthier and more caring societies in the world but the societies which are less caring and on average poorer. This is why we have offered the Government this amendment for its consideration and this is why I commend it to the Government for serious deliberation.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I rise to address Bill C-70 and the question of the deindexing of family allowances. If one looks at the Bill by itself, its provisions do not seem to be of serious consequence. It is only when the components of Bill C-70 are brought together with the child benefits program and the changes to the personal income tax system and the sneaky sales tax increases contained in the May, 1985, Budget that it becomes evident that social support for Canadian families is rapidly declining under this Government.

The erosion of our social programs began last spring when the Conservative Government announced its plans to deindex family allowances and old age pensions. We all remember the clear public response to those two issues. We had many consultations on those issues and then "Grey Power", enabled by Members of the House, brought the Tory Government to its knees. The Government had to back down. Old age pensions were not deindexed.

The Government does not seem to learn by its mistakes. It simply regroups and tries to pull the same insensitive thing off in another way. That is why the amendment proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), is trying to help the Government meet its own rhetoric of promises. The Hon. Member, in her presentation, recommended a sunset clause. If it is true that the Government needs the money gained by deindexing family allowances for the reduction of the deficit, that is fine. However, the Government is now saying that everything is so rosy. Let the Government at least incorporate the sunset clause so that this measure would be terminated at the end of this year.

The Government said it was a Government of consultation, that it was open and that it would listen. I sat on many of the committee meetings. Many groups spoke before that committee. Certainly Liberal opposition Members were listening. The amendments put forward indicate that a great many more opposition Members were listening than government Members. After all the petitions that we have presented and all the groups to which we listened, perhaps government Members could speak to their caucus and bring some sense back into what is absolutely unacceptable nonsense.

I bring to the attention of the House a bulletin issued by NAC, a coalition of many women's groups. The NAC observes—

[Translation]

—this new attack against universal benefits contradicts all Conservative promises made last year to women and families.

Quebec women reacted swiftly, beginning with a core of six groups of women, including the NAC. They set up a coalition of women in favor of family allowances which now includes over 60 groups.

Elsewhere, a demonstration was held on Parliament Hill here in Ottawa, and a door-to-door petition campaign was organized from Newfoundland to British Columbia.

[English]

We certainly saw the results of those particular petitions and actions put forward by a coalition of concerned women. This concern was manifested not only by women but by men across this land.

A Budget is an interesting reflection of the social and political philosophies of a Government. We learn a great deal about a Government and what it stands for through a Budget because a Budget is not simply a balance sheet. This past year, the Government returned to the 19th century. Its philosophy is based upon old political and social Darwinism. The Government takes away from the poor and powerless and gives to the rich and strong. There are so many items in the May Budget to indicate that that I will not even enumerate them. I simply think that when speaking of survival of the fittest, one is speaking of social Darwinism. That is why the Government is taking us back to the 19th century, and I think it is shameful.

While the first concern here is the deindexation of the family allowance benefits, the issue cannot be looked at without looking at the wider issue of the entire child benefit system including the family allowances, the child tax credit and the child tax exemption and the changes to the system that were proposed by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in the May, 1985 Budget. Together they serve quite a blow to lower-income families.

The Budget has brought about changes which will give even greater benefits to the rich and wealthy and a loss to the low and middle-income families. The ones who can least afford it are the ones who are really having a hard time making ends meet.

The National Council on Welfare has shown in its publication entitled Giving and Taking: The May 1985 Budget and the Poor, a publication which I suggest all Hon. Members read, that the large majority of Canadian families including many below the low-income line will lose child benefits from 1986 on as a result of the poorly conceived social policy direction reflected in the May Budget changes to both child benefits and the personal income tax system. Between 1986 and 1990, a five-year period, a family with two children earning a combined income of $15,000 per year will lose $1,879. A family earning $35,000 per year will lose $3,452, and believe me that can be ill afforded. It is pretty hard to raise children in today's society even with an income of $35,000 per year. A family earning $80,000 per year will lose $1,125. This means that the low-income family will lose $745 more than the affluent family while the middle-income family will lose more than three times as much as the affluent family. That is social justice Conservative style.

According to Statistics Canada, in 1981, 22.7 per cent of families in which the household head was less than 25 years of age were in poverty. By 1983, the poverty rate for that group had jumped to 35.9 per cent. That increase of 13.2 percentage points represents a jump of 58 per cent in two years in the number of poor families.

Turning to family allowances, the picture is just as bleak. For example, a couple with two children earning a net combined income of $9,000 per year or less will receive family allowance and the child tax credit. However, the income of that family is too low to benefit from the child tax exemption. In 1986, this family will receive $22 less in family allowance payments as a result of partial deindexation. From 1987 to 1990, as the child tax credit increases, the family receives more benefits. There will be a gain in 1987 of $64, in 1988 of $75, in 1989 of $96 and in 1990 of $44. That does not sound bad at all but the forecast changes. This is the sneaky part of the deal which goes on forever and ever. The kind of dirty tricks the Government is becoming famous for is shown by this example. By 1991, this same family will lose $8, another $63 in 1992 and another $119 in 1993. This loss will continue to increase each year as the value of family allowances and the child tax credit falls further below inflation. The family allowance cheque will mean less and less each month.

[Translation]

Increases in family allowances based on the rising cost of living have always been and still are an absolute necessity for most Canadians who are trying to raise a family on an income which is equivalent to or often less than what Government agencies consider to be the minimum living wage.

The de-indexation of family allowances geared to the first 3 per cent increase in the cost of living will again lower the living standards of Canadians, and an ever increasing number of them will end up living under the threshold of poverty.

Like the other restrictive measures contained in the Budget tabled by the Government, this Bill will do nothing at all to reduce the deficit, solve the economic crisis, and fight unemployment in Canada. On the contrary, if this Bill is adopted, the lower purchasing power of Canadian families will only lead to more lost jobs, worsening economic conditions and a larger deficit.

[English]

Some argue that the family allowance is so small that it does not mean anything. That is not the case at all. I suggest that it is very meaningful. The family allowance confirms the value of child rearing to society at large. It is the sole, consistent economic recognition of the contribution of all mothers in our society. It avoids the social stigma involved in receiving benefits based on one's financial position. In many cases, it is the only independent source of income for women working full-time in the home.

The Government seems completely unable to act in any consistent fashion. We are told by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) that this country is bankrupt, that Government spending must be reduced, transfer payments to the provinces must be cut back and that the federal deficit must decline. We agree with a great deal of that, but not in this way. However, the Prime Minister can find $1 billion to save the depositors who have already received $60,000 as a result of the western bank disaster. He found another $600 million to assist in the purchase of Gulf Canada and some $56 million to change the colour of our soldiers' uniforms.

For a nation which has prided itself on equality of opportunity and which believes that children are its life-blood, the presently envisioned measures seem sadly out of line with Canada's philosophy and with this Government's electoral promises. I hope that there will be some change and that we will adopt this recommendation.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to advise the Hon. Member that her time has expired. The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. La Salle: Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the Minister rising on a point of order?

Mr. La Salle: No, on debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I am sorry. I have recognized the Hon. Member for Regina West on debate. I will recognize the Minister after his intervention.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I shall try to shorten my remarks in order that the Minister may have a few minutes in which to speak.

I wish to start my comments by saying to my friend, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), that I listened to his remarks on this amendment with great care when he made them earlier today. He said something about the petitions which have been presented under false pretences. I am sure the hon. gentleman did not mean that. I am sure all Hon. Members of the House have listened to the Hon. Member for Bow River present petitions on many occasions without ever questioning the sincerity of those who have signed them. Invariably, they are presented in this way under the inherent right of the British parliamentary system of democracy. At no time should anyone call into question the sincerity of those who petition Parliament and Her Majesty.

I hope that the Government will realize that the number of names now on petitions equals or exceeds the number of names on petitions filed with respect to the deindexing of the Old Age Security. In fact, far more signatures have been presented in this respect. Any government of any political stripe which ignores this petitioning by hundreds of thousands of Canadians does so at its peril.

The question is: For whom is this country being run? Is it being run for the people? Is it being run for families who are entitled to the family allowance? Or is it being run for banks, money-changers, corporations and speculators? For whom is it being run?

The whole principle of indexing pensions across the board came into existence in this country as a result of a minority Government in the years from 1972 to 1974. I wish that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) were in the House right now to listen to my remarks.

An Hon. Member: He was here before.

Mr. Benjamin: If he is out in the lobby, then I hope he will come in. After the 1972 election the New Democratic Party said to both Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Stanfield: "It is immaterial to us which one of you governs. In order that we do not defeat you, you must bring in full indexing of Public Service pensions, Armed Forces pensions, RCMP pensions, the Old Age Security and the Canada Pension Plan, as well as the family allowance". Conservative after Conservative Member supported us on that occasion, including the Hon. Member for Provencher. Where is he now that we need him? Is he having trouble with the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson)? If he is, then we will support him in the maintenance of the full indexation of the family allowance.

Members of the Conservative Party have short and convenient memories. That applies to my colleagues in the Liberal Party who brought forwad the six and five program and the three and four program which not only deindexed wages and salaries but deindexed pensions as well. Perhaps they have been converted. I wish they would have the courtesy to admit when they are wrong and say that they have changed their minds. I think that was a big step. It was very manly and very womanly. It was a sign of political integrity when the Conservative Government changed its mind with respect to the deindexing of old age pension. I wish to give members of the Government full credit for that move. I suspect there were as many, if not more, Conservative back-benchers as there were Members of the Opposition who objected to that measure as well. Thus, Conservative Members of Parliament can take credit for what was a change in mind and a change of heart. Surely, the same thing should apply in the instance of family allowances.

In effect, what this amendment says to the Government is: "To a starving man a half a loaf of bread is better than none at all". If the Government insists on going ahead with this proposal then let it do so for a period of one year. The small amount of money which it will save does not amount to very much. There are many other options by which the Government could raise more dollars in order to increase revenues. There are also many options which could be implemented to decrease expenditures other than by picking on those who cannot defend themselves.

Have Hon. Members ever seen petitions presented in the House on behalf of bankers, money-changers, the boys in the stock exchanges or those who run multinational corporations? I have not seen any. The only avenue open to those who cannot defend and protect themselves is through their Members of Parliament and through their right to petition Parliament. We do not see petitions presented here by bankers' associations. However, we see petitions presented by the parents of the children and old age pensioners. We see petitions presented by those who are not organized and who do not have the money, the power or the influence to fight their way behind the scenes in Government.

I warn the Government that if it ignores this proposal then it does so at its peril. We will haunt them for years to come if they go ahead with this measure. We will do this because the Conservative Party joined with us in that minority Government to put this indexing measure in place in the first instance. In fact, the man who originally proposed this measure in recent decades was the Hon. Bob Stanfield. He did so to his everlasting credit. As Leader of the Opposition he led the Conservative Party in supporting the full indexing of all those programs, in particular, the family allowance.

• (1640)

I wish the Hon. Member for Provencher would read the speeches he made between 1972 and 1974 in support of full indexing. He sat in this House with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), when he was the Leader of the Conservative Opposition, in support of indexing. I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, and since the Hon. Member is now in the House, I will repeat it, if he is having problems with the Minister of Finance and the President of the Treasury Board, we will support him if he withdraws this provision to deindex family allowances. It is a small, cheap, chiselling on the children of this country when the Government can slap a 10 per cent surcharge tax on deferred corporation taxes for the coming year and pick up $3.5 billion. If the Government did not allow corporations to defer taxes for 1985, it could not only keep full indexing for family allowances but it could double the family allowance, reduce the deficit by that amount and still retain full indexing of the family allowances. There are a dozen other ways to reduce expenditures or increase revenues without hurting those who cannot defend themselves. If the Government is worried about the well-to-do who collect family allowances, those who earn $50,000 or $100,000 a year, a few small amendments to the Income Tax Act will allow the Government to recover the whole darn thing. It would be administratively efficient, it would maintain the principle of universality and those who need it would receive it. There would be no need to chisel them for the sake of saving a few dollars which will amount to nothing in terms of reducing the deficit.

I urge the Government, if nothing else, to accept this amendment. Perhaps if the Government reviews it a year from now it may have some second thoughts.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, in the last minutes remaining on report stage, I want to make one or two points regarding the debate. First, the Hon. Member who just finished speaking is one who has been in this House for a long time but in his speech he has made only half the argument. If he would go back to 1972 and 1974, the period to which he refers, and take a look for example at the amount of money which the national treasury needed to pay for the national debt of Canada, he would find it was a very different circumstance than that which is facing the Canadian people today. That is the first point which has to be made. If the Hon. Member goes back to 1968, he will find that the accumulated debt for the first 100 years of the Canadian Government was $17 billion. He has to recognize that today the cost of the debt is $26 billion annually. The Hon. Member does not say that. He constantly tries to make the point that there is this magical wand, as he likes to call it, and which he mentioned the other day in Question Period, which can be waved and somehow these issues will go away, that somehow reality can be pushed aside. But it cannot. The Hon. Member from Vancouver has made the point that this is an attack on children. In fact, the opposite is true. The greatest attack on children, and on this country's social programs, is the debt. That is the greatest attack on those children.

We will not have to pay that debt for as long a time as will those children. They will have to pay that debt as well as the children who are yet unborn. Hon. Members opposite constantly forget that point. They somehow believe that that is not reality, but it is.

The family allowance went up in January, 1986. It did not go down. Hon. Members opposite have constantly said that family allowances are being cut, but family allowances went up on January 1, 1986. What those Hon. Members are talking about is the reduced escalation. Family allownces went up, universality was maintained, and everyone who received family allowance in 1985 is receiving it in January, 1986, if eligible, and they will receive it after the Bill is passed. The points Hon. Members opposite make will just not bear the scrutiny they should be given.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It being 4.45 p.m., pursuant to order made Tuesday, January 14, 1986, it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings and put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of the report stage of the Bill now before the House.

The question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

An Hon. Member: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 81(2), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I did not hear anyone say "yea" and we all heard the "nays", so I take it the motion is not passed, there being no one in favour.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to say that I did hear a "yea". Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Ms. Mitchell), which was negatived on the following division:

Family Allowances Act, 1973

(Division No. 173)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Mr. Speaker, if you would seek the consent of the House, I think that you would find a disposition that the vote just taken can apply to all the votes yet to be taken, except for a vote on Motion No. 9.

Mr. Deans: Which could be done in the reverse.

Mr. Speaker: Do I take it that the recorded division on Motion No. 4 shall be taken in exactly the same way? The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) wishes to be recorded as voting in the negative on Motion No. 4.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 4. Ms. Mitchell, seconded by Mr. Deans, moves:

Motion No. 4

(a) by striking out lines 39 and 40 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"person or institution is entitled and where that person or institution has not been convicted of an offence under section 20 in connection with the obtaining of the allowance, the Minister shall remit all of the allowance or amount in excess of the allowance in any case where these result from a calculation based on a new certificate issued pursuant to subsection 15.1(2); in any other case, the Minister may remit all or any portion of the amount or excess of the allowance where the Minister is satisfied that"

(b) by striking out lines 10 to 16 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"Act."

The House divided on the motion (Ms. Mitchell) which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost. On Motion No. 6 the same vote is applied as that applied to Motion Nos. 4 and 5. Ms. Mitchell, seconded by Mr. Deans moves:

That Bill C-70 be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 20 to 47 at page 3 and lines 1 to 8 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"15.1 (1) Where a child has, either before or after the coming into force of this section, disappeared under circumstances that raise a presumption that the child is dead, the Minister may apply to a court of competent jurisdiction in the province or territory where the child usually resides for an order declaring, according to the law of the province or territory, that the child shall be presumed to be dead; thereupon the child shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on the date stated in the court order.

(2) If, after obtaining a court order under subsection (1), the Minister receives new information or evidence that the date of death is different from that stated in the court order, the Minister may, with leave of the court, apply to the court for an order to vary, amend or revoke the order previously made, in which case the child named in the court order shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on the date so stated in the new court order.

(3) If, after obtaining a court order under this section, the Minister is satisfied from new information or evidence that the child named in the court order is alive, the Minister shall forthwith cause to be paid any allowance that would have been payable in respect of the child if the order had not been made.

(4) Subject to subsection (3), the Minister is bound by the law of the province where the child normally resides in respect of the issuance and revocation of death certificates and the making, variance and revocation of orders of presumption of death."

The House divided on the motion (Ms. Mitchell) which was negatived on the following division:

Family Allowances Act, 1973

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost. The next question is on Motion No. 7. I take it that the vote should be applied in the same way. Mr. Malépart, seconded by Mr. Baker moves:

Motion No. 7

That Bill C-70, be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 26 to 47 at page 3 and lines 1 to 8 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"Minister may, five years after the disappearance of the child, issue a certificate declaring that the child is presumed to be dead and thereupon the child shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on the date the certificate is issued.

(2) If, after issuing a certificate under this section, the Minister is satisfied from new information or evidence that the child named in the certificate is alive, the Minister shall forthwith revoke the certificate and cause to be paid any allowance that would have been payable in respect of the child if the certificate had not been issued.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the Minister is not bound by the issuance or revocation of a death certificate by any other authority."

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Malépart) which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost. The next question is on Motion No. 9. Is there a disposition to apply the vote in reverse?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Redway, seconded by Mr. Cardiff moved:

Motion No. 9

That Bill C-70, be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 26 to 47 at page 3 and lines 1 to 4 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"Minister may determine the date for the purposes of this Act on which the child's death is presumed to have occurred, and thereupon the child shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on that date.

(2) If, after having determined such a date, the Minister is satisfied from new information or evidence that the date of death is different from that previously determined, the Minister may determine a different date, in which case the child shall be deemed for all purposes of this Act to have died on that different date.

(3) If, after having determined such a date, the Minister is satisfied from new information or evidence that the child is alive, the Minister shall forthwith cause to be paid any allowance that would have been payable in respect of the child had such determination not been made."

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS

NATIONAL OFFICE FOR VOLUNTEER ACTION

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil-Papineau) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of establishing a national office for volunteer action under the responsibility of the Secretary of State of Canada and:

1. that the Office be managed by a board of directors consisting of twenty (20) members serving without pay;

2. that the Office be the sole organization empowered to determine the official status of volunteer and charitable organizations;

3. that the Office maintain a central registry of volunteer organizations and deliver certificates of official accreditation to the said organizations, and certificates of accreditation of practical work done by volunteers, acknowledging the experience thus gained; and

4. that the Office submit to the Secretary of State of Canada an annual report on its activities.

She said: Mr. Speaker, I welcome this second opportunity to present in the House a motion aimed at providing for official recognition of the volunteer sector in our society. On September 19, 1985, I presented a motion seeking authority for the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs to study and report on the volunteer sector.

Mr. Speaker, for many years I have witnessed the invaluable contribution made by the volunteer sector to society, and I must say that since I have had the honour of representing the men and women of Argenteuil-Papineau in this honourable House, I now realize how important the volunteer sector is to my riding and that if we did not have volunteers and volunteer organizations, the riding would be in very poor shape indeed.

Mr. Speaker, you may recall that during the special debate on parliamentary reform, I told you I was very stubborn. I once asked you to show me the place where you keep private members' motions and bills, and what you do with them. I think it would be interesting to have a look. It is practically a second Parliamentary Library because it contains some very interesting documents and bills initiated by private members. At the time, during the special debate on parliamentary reform, I said I was very stubborn and that as long as I was a Member of this House, I would keep on presenting motions until some day they were accepted either by my own Government or other governments, and that is what I propose to do.

Actually, the Members of this House are especially aware of the importance of volunteers, because I am sure no one here among my colleagues would be sitting in his or her seat if we had not had our volunteers, those political volunteers who work without remuneration to get us elected. This is one aspect of the volunteer sector that every one of us has experienced during our election campaigns and one we will certainly be depending on in future campaigns. However, this is only one aspect of volunteer work.

Just think of our senior citizens. Consider the number of senior citizens who can stay at home thanks to these volunteers. Consider also how much it would cost the Government if there were no volunteers to look after our senior citizens at home, if the Government had to pay to send them to special homes for the aged. Certainly a lot of money. There are residents of foster homes who are visited and helped by volunteers. That is another extremely important dimension and we know just how much the people who reside in these homes appreciate the volunteers who spend some time with them or go out to do some shopping for them because they are either too handicapped or too old.

There are also our young people. You must be aware that if there were no volunteer committees of leisure in our municipalities today, our young people could not take part in any sport. There are also the sport, social and cultural aspects. Our parishes are kept alive thanks to the activities of volunteers. Without them, I can assure you that our churches and church councils would have problems.

In different communities, there is a fantastic group of volunteers called Parents Secours to look after abandoned and abused children and who look after them in their difficult situation. The Parents Secours volunteers look after these children.

Mr. Speaker, the blind, the physically and mentally handicapped could not survive in our society without the volunteers who are looking after them and taking care of them.

I should like to add that in our smaller municipalities, several aldermen are involved in volunteer action; if we consider the salary they are paid and the time they spend on the job, we can say that our mayors too are involved in some sort of volunteer work.

But there are a great many others . . . There are for instance the Canadian housewives, our wives, your wife maybe, Mr. Speaker, because she is not paid to look after the house and care for the children. If I were to go through all the parts a housewife plays in the home, I would spend the 20 minutes allotted to me doing so, and it is so important that this should be recognized.

Our cultural associations safeguard our cultural identity. And our economic activities, Mr. Speaker. As you may know, in my constituency there are also major activities. In Argenteuil-Papineau for instance, there is an event, the race across Lake Simon which draws millions of people every year. It is a tremendously important economic contribution to the Papineau area. Were it not for volunteers who look after that swimming event, there would be no swim across Lake Simon, it is as simple as that. Area businesses which depend on the tourist trade would be in a tough spot, because the crossing year after year draws an unbelievably large clientele.

Events such as Expo-Air in Mirabel, for instance which draws thousands of people each year, are managed by volunteers. It is unbelievable the volume of goodwill this creates. Our grocery stores, our small businesses, our restaurants are busy throughout that period, and volunteers are looking after that.

To name a third one, simply to point out there are various economic activities, I will mention that we have an annual agricultural fair in Lachute which is almost nationally famous and which I am very proud of. Volunteers manage that fair which draws millions and millions of people each year.

So, Mr. Speaker, there is of course no need to pay these great Canadian men and women. They do not want to be paid because theirs is volunteer work, done as volunteers because they want to contribute something to their communities. Gratitude is what they earn and this has given me the idea of establishing a National Office for Volunteer Work.

Once more, Mr. Speaker, voluntary work is such an important aspect of Canadian life because, in addition to providing an opportunity for personal development and community benefits and for achieving a degree of social justice, voluntary organizations, their permanent staff and all those who finance them produce about $5 billion of economic activity in Canada, which represents 2 per cent of the Gross National Product. It is time for the Government to give more attention to this sector than it has until now, even though I am aware that our Government has provided greater incentives for voluntary work.

For instance, Mr. Speaker, the salary value corresponding to yearly voluntary work would amount to $2 billion. The social and economic impact of voluntary work will tend to increase in the next few years because of the aging of the population, of economic upheavals and of a decrease in the role of the Government.

Canadians are now aware of the need to protect and maintain an acceptable standard of living for all their fellow citizens. To do so, we find it essential to establish a national policy for volunteer action and to develop a national strategy to promote, support, emphasize volunteer action and give it a greater value.

Mr. Speaker, this is the first objective of my motion today. In our opinion, such a policy should include the following components: Recognition of volunteer action as a major economic sector:

—Volunteer action must no longer be viewed as a disparate group of agencies and organizations independent from the state and the private sector;

—Volunteer action must be recognized as a major economic activity, since, in addition to creating jobs, it produces a series of available and universal services which raise the standard of living of our communities.

—The voluntary sector should be measured and examined by Statistics Canada and be recognized as a component of our Gross National Product.

However, Mr. Speaker, voluntary organizations would like a more concrete and incitative recognition to develop and renew community work. Indeed, these organizations complain that their members are getting tired, mainly because of a shortage of new members, the economic crisis and the fact that volunteer action is not recognized by society as a means of self-actualization.

Mr. Speaker, we believe that the Government should take action or provide tax incentives for charitable donations and volunteer workers themselves. We believe that a tax credit to reduce payable income tax modelled after the credit now provided for political donations would be quite justified. These tax changes would help to curtail a decrease in charitable donations; they would provide equal tax benefits to all donors, not only the wealthy; they would allow the organizations to rely less on Government subsidies, which is what we want; they would increase the capacity of voluntary organizations to reimburse current expensess related to volunteer work, such as the costs of baby-sitting, gasoline, and so on.

Mr. Speaker, a lot of women in my riding would like to do volunteer work, but they can't afford to. They can't afford to pay a baby-sitter or buy twenty dollars worth of gas so they can go and help someone who is worse off than they are.

This way, volunteers would be able to claim various expenses connected with volunteer work directly on their income tax returns, while people who are less well off would be in a better position to offer their expertise and help on a volunteer basis. And finally, it would be a way to increase and renew the membership of volunteer organizations.

Mr. Speaker, before formulating a policy on volunteer work, I believe it is essential to know numbers, objectives, trends and special interests if we are to consult with volunteer workers and establish with them the parameters they would like to see in Government measures that concern them.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I believe creating a national office for volunteer action is of primary importance to establish a registry of volunteer organizations working in Canada.

The National Office for Volunteer Action, or NOVA, under the responsibility of the Secretary of State of Canada or another agency, would be primarily responsible for preparing an exhaustive list of organizations, through compulsory registration for obtaining subsidies and/or permits. It would define the concept or concepts of "charitable organizations—volunteer organizations—volunteer sector"; issue certificates of official accreditation to these organizations; recognize and validate volunteer work as practical job experience; and protect volunteer organizations and the public in general against fraud, and so forth.

Mr. Speaker, the Office would not be asked to regulate the work done by these organizations. That is not the purpose of this motion. On the contrary, the Office would protect volunteer organization against harmful abuse that, in time, tarnishes the image of volunteer work. Volunteer organizations themselves would like the Government to define and recognize in precise terms exactly what an organization of a charitable, religious, political or other nature is, so that they can operate more effectively in dealing with beneficiaries, donours and volunteer workers.

Mr. Speaker, the Government must take the initiative so we can be ready when the time comes to consult volunteer organizations on measures or policies affecting their operations, sources of financing, and fields of action and interests.

Establishing a national office for volunteer action would not, as some people would believe, involve great expense, because the size of this agency and its oprations would be kept to a minimum.

The national office for volunteer action would fall under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Secretary of State, which is an existing Government agency; administered by an unpaid 20-member board of directors, the office would be supported by a small operational and permanent team.

To finance the expenditures of the office, we suggest that the necessary funds be recouped from savings made through better rationalization or integration of volunteer agencies and organizations, and by improving Government programs, grants and services.

Or again, Mr. Speaker, we might call upon such national organizations as the Red Cross, the United Way and others to lend the services of their staff to set up a permanent team. The office would thus rely on the expert assistance of people who are thoroughly familiar with the management of volunteer organizations.

Mr. Speaker, the office would thus be able to promote more regular and meaningful consultations between the Public Service and volunteer organizations. They would define Government measures and requirements concerning grants and financing, pinpoint their needs, advocate legislative action and Bills.

The office could also promote the training of volunteers and sponsor volunteer organizations with the private sector. Mr. Speaker, it is imperative that volunteer action and the various organizations be socially recognized as such, and that is why the Government must draft a national volunteer action policy.

This means it has to know them better, and so, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of establishing a national office for volunteer action, which would come under the Secretary of State.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I know that my colleagues are aware of the fact that they were elected with the help of volunteers. I can still remember some of them saying to me: Mrs. Bourgault, how is it that the Government, your Government, does not acknowledge that I have taken part in the election campaign and did accomplish something? That is how it started and this question kept coming up more and more often. I met a charming lady who has been doing volunteer work at the Argenteuil Hospital for 20 years. She sees patients who are alone or who have no family and she told me how important her work is for these people who, after days of solitude, suddenly see some light come into their life because this woman brings them news, newspapers or small gifts which she buys herself.

Mr. Speaker, volunteer action is very important for our society, but I am not saying that my motion today could not be improved, far from it. I am well aware that my colleagues will talk out this motion today as it is the practice in this House, and I accept this because I am now more familiar with parliamentary procedure.

However, I simply hope that, in the coming months, we can study more closely the role the voluntary sector, and if my first motion, which was debated on September 19, could be brought forward once more so that the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs could do an in depth examination of voluntary sector, everyone in this House would perhaps be better aware of the role of voluntary workers in their own constituencies, and even in the house next door because people often do not know that their neighbours are voluntary workers. That is all I want, Mr. Speaker, and if the Government could introduce a bill recognizing the voluntary sector in the near future, I would have achieved my purpose.

[English]

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, as the critic for the Secretary of State for the Official Opposition and as a Liberal, I listened with great interest to the proposed resolution presented by the Conservative Member of Parliament for Argenteuil-Papineau (Mrs. Bourgault). I also read her resolution and her speech of September 19 last year on the same subject and found it very interesting. In both cases I have felt that the spirit of her resolutions are well meaning. Her intention obviously is to encourage the voluntary sector of our community, which is of course very laudable.

In her desire to encourage volunteerism in her speech in September, she was advocating that the Government consider giving financial compensation to volunteers, which seems somewhat paradoxical. In the resolution we are considering today this Conservative Member from the Government benches is suggesting a new special office be set up to deal with the voluntary sector. This office would be empowered to decide on the status of voluntary organizations and give them certificates of accreditation. This office would also give certificates to volunteers of practical work done by them.

I am sure the motive behind them is laudable. These suggestions give me reasons for concern because in the attempt to harness the resources of volunteers and charitable organizations, she seems to suggest a considerable involvement by government and of government bureaucracy in the arena, at least, of the voluntary sector. Indeed, it seems to me that volunteers generally prefer donating their time and their talents to charitable organizations free from structures and motives of private enterprises which are motivated by profit, and also free from the encumbrances of Government bureaucracy.

It seems to me that the voluntary sector sees itself in partnership with Government and in partnership with private enterprise, but not in any way as a servant of Government or to be organized by it, or the servant of private enterprise. I agree that sometimes people are deterred, as the Member has pointed out, from being a volunteer because they cannot afford a babysitter, or the cost of transportation to go to various activities and return. If the organizations in the voluntary sector could only improve their financial base they would be better able to encourage broader participation of volunteers by themselves subsidizing those out-of-pocket expenses that can inhibit people from performing their voluntary services.

When we are talking about voluntary or charitable organizations I take it that what we are all talking about is the same thing. These are organizations dealing with assistance to a disadvantaged person or a group, advancement of religion, advancement of education, advancement of health, conservation of the natural environment and other purposes beneficial to the community, including cultural or social development or improvement of the physical and mental well-being of the community. This is the definition of voluntary organizations recommended by the National Voluntary Organization, which is an umbrella organization which tries to represent the interests of some 52,000 voluntary organizations across this country. I would like to tell the Conservative Member from Argenteuil-Papineau that such recommendations as she has made last September, and again today, have possible for reaching implications.

I am therefore surprised to learn from the National Voluntary Organization that until at least as of yesterday it has no record of being consulted about her proposals, nor apparently have any of the major bodies in the voluntary and charitable sectors that would be affected by her resolutions. I wonder why in an alleged year of consultation the Hon. Member has not first discussed the impact of the resolution with these organizations so that she could then report them to the House in the course of her presentation. Because she has not done so makes it indeed rather difficult, if not impossible, for us in the Official Opposition at this time to consider giving support to her resolution, at least until such time as an opportunity is given to organizations such as the NVO to reflect upon them and reflect their concerns and interests.

I agree with the idea that greater Government co-ordination of its goals and activities is badly needed. After all, since charitable organizations play such a vital role in our civilization, and since they cover a very wide area of activities, it is important that the Government should designate some Minister of the Crown as the lead Minister who will take the time and the effort needed to enter into ongoing dialogue with the voluntary sector, and to co-ordinate the activities of the Government in its various Departments.

I hope that the Government will give consideration to the suggestion to make it possible for the voluntary sector to be better served by having a lead Minister who is and accepts the responsibility to deal with the voluntary sector. What is even more important, Mr. Speaker, and on this there is considerable agreement in the voluntary sector, is that what is needed is Government action to encourage the voluntary sector to be able to attract increased financial donations from individuals and corporations.

I have spoken on this matter on a number of occasions in the House, indeed others from both sides of the House have done so as well. The matter is one that needs urgent consideration. Over the years the percentage of people and companies contributing to charities is declining, as is the size and percentage of their gifts, in terms of income. The National Voluntary Organization has for years been advocating new incentives in income tax to increase charitable giving. More specifically, it has advocated the so-called give and take program, which would provide a 50 per cent tax credit for charitable contributions. Indeed, this is what the present Minister of State for Immigration (Mr. McLean) promised before the Government was elected in 1984. When in Opposition, he made the give-and-take proposal his pet crusade. Let us look at a few of the promises he made. I can hardly do justice to all of them, but when in Opposition, the Minister of State for Immigration who was the previous Secretary of State said the following:

● (1740)

> We are committed to a fundamental realignment of the tax treatment for charitable giving—the principle of a charitable tax credit—which will offer equitable incentives to all taxpayers to support their charities.

In other words, he said that he was entirely in favour of the give-and-take proposal. He also said that the voluntary sector was the largest employer of lower and middle-class Canadians and he was right when he pointed out its importance. In addressing the voluntary sector, the Minister of State for Immigration said the following:

> You (the Voluntary Sector) offer many less advantaged Canadians a bridge to employment. Canada's Voluntary Sector is an untapped resource that not only can reduce Government spending but can actually create jobs in the process.
> This is why we are committed to a principle of a charitable tax credit, to a tax environment which will offer equitable incentives. Give and take is on the agenda.

He said that give and take was on the agenda and the other statements I cited so far in a speech addressed to the National Voluntary Organization convention. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised to the National Voluntary Organization and the 52,000 voluntary organizations the following just before the last election:

> We are committed to implementing a Tax Credit equal to a percentage of donations made to registered charities.

Unless something is done to increase the level of charitable donations by widening the potential number of contributors and the size of their gifts, the voluntary sector will be less and less able to assume responsibilities for social work and the serving of social needs. This means either increased Government programs which will cost the taxpayers money or less adequate, deteriorating services for the community.

The flame of volunteerism must be kept burning brightly. The willingness to give of oneself and of one's time and talents freely as a gift of love is vital to a healthy moral society. Therefore, it is important that contributions to charities increase. However, they are decreasing. The promises of the Government in this regard were unfortunately not kept in the last Budget. It is to be hoped that for whatever reason, this urgent matter not be set aside again. It takes years to educate the public to recognize the incentives a tax credit would provide and the time to act is now.

If such incentives as tax credits are to be provided, obviously another important matter that must be settled is the definition of a charitable organization. I have already described the definition recommended by the National Voluntary Organization. In fact, in December 1983, the Government of the day announced its intention to establish a joint committee of the House and the Senate to deal with matters concerning the voluntary sector and took steps to establish such a committee in April 1984 in consultation with the present Minister of State for Immigration. The Government then changed, as we all know, but the need still exists nearly two years later.

An acceptable legal definition of what constitutes a charitable organization is still needed. Urgent action is required to reverse the regressive negative spiral in financial contributions to voluntary agencies. It is this Government which promised it would act and the voluntary sector will watch to see what the next Budget brings.

If the Government is shortsighted and is so preoccupied with allegedly cutting the deficit that it cannot see that it can over a few years relieve itself from spending responsibilities by encouraging contributions to the voluntary sector, then it will be making a grave mistake. The voluntary sector, by its activities, can prevent escalating costs in social health and cultural programs. We neglect the voluntary sector at our peril.

In one area, the Government has made some progress by defining and clarifiying to what extent a charitable organization may participate in approaching Governments to try to influence political decisions. I believe that in the main, the Government's solution has been found to be acceptable and so far seems to be serving quite satisfactorily. While this is progress, let us hope that the Government will bite the bullet with regard to the real issues at stake, the issues that are fundamental to the survival and good health of the voluntary sector. Let us hope that the Government will not deal with peripheral matters in the belief that the voluntary sector will see that as being sufficient in dealing with their basic concerns. Let us hope that the Government will deal with a legal definition of a charitable organization and above all with providing the incentives to contribute to charitable causes.

I hope that the Hon. Member who presented this motion will not feel that I have in any way been negative about the thrust of her concern. I applaud her interests, concern and involvement and respect them very much. I hope that she will continue to challenge us in the courageous way that she had in the House today.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to support our colleague who introduced this motion again as she did earlier last year.

In my opening remarks, I would like to say that from what I sensed when this matter was raised before, there certainly seems to be sympathy from all Parties for the principle of the Hon. Member's motion. I believe this is not a partisan question but one of community involvement and of how people can help each other to work for a better world. I think we would all fully support that.

It is regarding procedures and processes that I would like to raise a few questions. I commend my colleague from the Liberal Party who spoke at length about the National Voluntary Organization as well. I had considerable material on that organization for my remarks but perhaps I will not dwell on it to the same degree in the interests of time.

When I was thinking about the recommendation in the motion, it occurred to me that we need to have much more time to dig into this matter in a thoughtful way within a committee through consultation with the voluntary sector itself. I do not think that that consultation should be only with the National Voluntary Organization, an organization which in many ways is not only comprised of volunteers but of paid staff and is a fairly large organization. The consultation should also involve community groups and I would like to concentrate some of my remarks on the concept of volunteerism as a self-help movement.

When we talk about volunteerism in a formal way through the National Voluntary Organization and organizations like that, we are talking about agencies and organizations that have considerably large budgets in some cases and need professional staff members. We often forget about neighbourhood issues which need to be dealt with. Before offering our support, I wonder what will be the other purposes of the proposed organization. That is something about which we would like to know.

The Hon. Member who presented the motion implied that this would be an organization which would fall under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of State and which would provide co-ordination and information sharing. I assume that there would be some type of networking between volunteers and volunteer organizations. In some small ways I suppose this is being done now under the auspicies of the Secretary of State.

I am sure the Hon. Member who introduced the motion and who appears to have a great deal of experience in communities will agree with me when I say that the real need is for small self-help organizations in local communities and how they can survive. During the 1960s and the 1970s some of us were involved in community development. We were working in the communities. We were helping to activate and organize many different types of citizen action and self-help groups in low income communities. There was a great wave of movement in this direction back then. All the people involved initially were certainly involved as volunteers. What we find now is that this has moved on to the point where some structures are needed to maintain this movement. I know that in communities in Vancouver, and I am sure in many other communities, there was a network of information centres which were established. These were usually small store-front operations where people could meet in order to share information. They would trade their talents and skills in order to help one another. The store-fronts provided a raft of information which would lead to other information and referrals to agency-type services. These were not costly voluntary services; they were very economical services. However, they required some funding. Normally, a place was required, which meant rent, a telephone, and so on. A co-ordinator was usually required. In most organizations which are solely volunteer a paid co-ordinator is still needed in order to keep everything together.

What has happened since the 1970s is that the funding which was available for these types of operations is no longer available. As I have said before, there was not a great deal of funding involved. In fact, some of the funds came under the Canada Assistance Plan shared funding, which has now disappeared. Therefore we have seen very healthy volunteer centres close down. When there is not a support service and someone to recruit, train and help develop volunteers the volunteer effort sometimes goes by the wayside.

I can think of other types of services which evolved during that same period of time. I am reminded of family centres which provided a very important service to the community. I hope the task force on child care will look into this type of organization in which mothers, particularly single mothers, can get together with other single mothers. Often, there was a friendly older person, or persons, from the community who were almost like community grandmother figures. The people involved in these types of organizations said: "Look, we have to have a place where we can get together in order to help one another". Again, in my community, there were several family centres which were opened. They were inexpensive operations. Some of them were in store-fronts with one or two staff members. This was necessary because they looked after children. The mothers, and sometimes the fathers, came in to these centres where there was a wonderful type of mutual support and where learning about parenting and so on went on.

I am also reminded of poverty groups which need some funds in order to operate. There are also women's centres across the country which are closing down because they just do not have the funds to keep their doors open. And they are operated primarily by volunteers.

What I am trying to say is that I would be much more enthusiastic about this measure if, in the terms of reference of such a proposed organization, we knew that one of the functions would be to assist self-help groups and front line volunteer action groups find ways to obtain funds in order to keep their doors open and in order to pay a co-ordinator. Perhaps there would be enough funds for an occasional newsletter, which is very much needed.

I think we need to see a much clearer definition of what we mean by volunteering and volunteer organizations. The Hon. Member who introduced this motion talked about helping the elderly in homes and hospitals through sports and so on. That is an entire area of concern. We also have the traditional voluntary agency sector which my Liberal colleague mentioned. Primarily, these are agencies which are assisted by organazations such as the United Way and the National Voluntary Organizations. As I mentioned earlier, these types of organizations tend to see themselves as charitable organizations. However, they do have professional staff, although many use volunteers as well.

If we are to put in place such an organization as the one proposed then I think we should get away from the charity concept. To me, that is the concept of us doing something for someone who is not as good as us. It makes poor people feel as if they are second class citizens. We need community services; but we need so much for people in order to learn and to have a small amount of funding to do things for themselves on their own behalf and to help each other as equals. I would like to see more stress placed on this area.

When we talk about volunteerism we must be sure that we are clear on what should and should not be provided through volunteer services. When times are tough and when governments make restraint a main objective, there is a tendency to turn over services which are the responsibility of governments to volunteers. This has happened in British Columbia. These are legislated services which should be in place to provide welfare services or protection to battered children and which help with all types of serious social and health problems. These types of services cannot be replaced by volunteer organizations. There are certain services which are the responsibility of governments and which should remain in the public sector. We believe very strongly in this.

I would also like to point out that when we talk about volunteers we should not talk about volunteers who will replace people in union jobs or jobs which should be union jobs. We should not use volunteers to undermine those in paid jobs. I am thinking of municipal services in particular.

Professionals are needed in certain roles. In this respect I refer to private agencies in the social services field. Sometimes I think we use too many professionals. I think there is a real place for para-professionals and for volunteers but perhaps professionals should be used in a more consultative and training role. They should certainly be used in serious situations for counselling and so on. We also need skilled professionals in the direct service area.

Since my time has almost expired I would like to mention that we are concerned about the lack of consultation which has taken place. For that reason we really do not feel that we can support this motion at this time. That does not mean that we are opposed to the principles presented. However, in preparation for this debate my office phoned around as much as time allowed to quite a number of organizations across the country. Someone in my office called the United Way office in the Lower Mainland and spoke to someone who felt this was a good idea but who also wanted to know more about it. There has been no consultation. The United Way of Canada expressed some real concerns about this proposal. One of the concerns was who would select the board of directors and how representative and independent the organization would be. A number of people we consulted felt that the organization should not fall under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of State. They felt that if there were on organization it should be independent of government. Of course, there was reference to the People in Action Report, a report from the 1970s, which should be studied. We feel that the submissions put forward by the National Voluntary Organizations should be considered. I would like to refer to the pre-budget submission of that organization to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) which contains some excellent suggestions. In fact, one thing which is stressed is that the economic contribution of the voluntary sector is to create jobs. Some 200,000 Canadians are employed by Canadian charities. That is sort of the other side of the coin.

I know that my time has expired, Mr. Speaker. In closing, I suggest that there should be more consultation with all these organizations, including self-help neighbourhood community development groups.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT—LEGISLATION'S PHILOSOPHY

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, in December I rose in the House with a question for the Solicitor General, the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty), on the subject of the Young Offenders Act. There has been an ample supply of groups and individuals, including Parliamentarians, police force representatives, judges and social agencies, who have criticized the weaknesses of the legislation passed by the previous Government in addressing the needs of young people. But the legislation has also been praised for its emphasis in making young offenders responsible for their actions, while at the same time holding out every hope and opportunity to bring about meaningful rehabilitation. It is my hope that these two views can be reconciled by action in Parliament on the recommendations of the Solicitor General.

There are many generally recognized problems with this legislation. For instance, children under 12 who commit serious crimes cannot be brought to justice under this Act. On the one hand, some of these children are not being made to answer for what might be a well developed sense of criminal responsibility. On the other hand, there is nothing in this Act which directs these young people to the right kind of counselling or social work.

Another problem with this Act results from the rules governing the publication of names. Clearly, this outright ban does not provide any flexibility which would allow officials to balance the best interests of the young offender with that of the community. The situation of an escaped and dangerous inmate of a training school, for example, is one which is not adequately addressed by this Act.

The destruction of court records is another part of the Act which seriously impairs the ability of the court to act with discretion in the best interests of the offender and of society. When trying to deal with dangerous offenders, what you do not know can hurt you.

The last problem pertaining to this Act which I would like to mention is the effect it seems to have, generally, on our legal system. There is an increased emphasis on rights and legal procedures. This is the result of the emphasis the Act places on the assumption of responsibility on the part of young offenders. I support this in principle, but I think it has had some negative effects.

A London police officer who has been working with young offenders asked: "What does a youth learn when he knows he has committed an offence and his lawyer says, 'We will plead not guilty and get you off' "? The role of the court should be, according to Judge Bennett of Provincial Court, to involve parents, probation and child welfare authorities under scrutiny of the court instead of creating an adversarial climate in the courtroom.

A Vancouver prosecutor said: "Everyone loses sight of whether a child did it or not and they get lost in the technicalities of this Act". Delay, obstruction and confusion serve neither the needs of the offender nor those of the community. Young people must be held accountable for their actions but this must be done in a way that recognizes that they are far from set in their ways. The emphasis should be less on confrontation and more on the focus of responsible attitudes and behaviour.

Youth courts perform most effectively when all parties co-operate in halting the development of a criminal and providing the offender with the guidance which will underline his obligations to society and the value that society sees in him or her. So often both of these ideas are ignored.

Obviously, there are some problems with the Young Offenders Act. The Minister describes these as "teething problems" and cautions Parliament against throwing out the baby with the bath water. Parliament must address the question of whether the details can be ironed out without losing any of the progressive aspects of this legislation.

I congratulate the Solicitor General for the progress report he gave yesterday on his consultations with respect to the Young Offenders Act. The Minister has provided excellent adjustments to some of the Act's major problems. Provision for the retention of records in some cases, the identification of dangerous youths at large, more sentencing flexibility, and more effective prosecution of people involving children in criminal acts, will provide provincial authorities with much more workable legislation. These changes will build on the many improvements that have already been provided through the Act. To name only one, policemen have, for example, been enabled to take fingerprints and photos for their records, which has greatly facilitated their job.

The primary goal of criminal law must be to protect society. The issues I have mentioned today are matters that have to be addressed because of the many injustices that the public is suffering as a consequence of previous legislation. It seems to me that we see a dangerous trend today toward the rights of the criminal rather than the rights of the victims and society as a whole. It is important in this day and age that we show a sensitivity to justice being served to all concerned, but it is imperative that the public be protected and that the rights and protection of victims be given a top priority.

I congratulate the Solicitor General because it appears that his work on this difficult problem is aimed at serving the special needs for which the Young Offenders Act was designed. I look forward to the opportunity we shall have in the House to consider concrete amendments when they are brought forth.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I recognize the concerns of the Hon. Member for London East (Mr. Jepson) with respect to the adequacy of the Young Offenders Act to deal with young offenders. The Young Offenders Act has significantly altered the orientation of Canada's juvenile justice system. The old Juvenile Delinquents Act was based on a philosophy that emphasized the need to treat delinquents as children in need of care and assistance rather than as criminals. The specific provisions of that legislation reflected this principle in many ways that were increasingly inconsistent with contemporary values and laws.

For example, the Juvenile Delinquents Act intended that juvenile court proceedings be private and closed to the public and that information about those proceedings be treated as confidential. Similarly, because delinquents were not to be treated as criminals, police were generally not permitted to take fingerprints, and it was not clear whether juvenile records could be used in adult court when a young person continued his criminal behaviour into adulthood.

The emphasis of the old Act on the needs of the offender was particularly evident in its dispositional or sentencing provisions. When the juvenile court found that sanctions such as probation were not sufficient to deal with an individual, the Act provided for the case to be tranferred to the care of child welfare authorities, rather than ordering a specific sentence which would be served under the jurisdiction of the criminal justice system.

By way of contrast, the Young Offenders Act has clearly acknowledged that young people are responsible for their illegal behaviour and that society has a fundamental right to protection. The new legislation has not abandoned the principle that young people have special needs that demand the attention of the juvenile justice system and society as a whole, but it places this issue in perspective. The principle that the protection of society must be a primary concern is reflected in the legislation.

For example, the Act authorizes police to take fingerprints, just as they do when investigating adult offenders, as was mentioned by the Hon. Member. Criminal records are now clearly available to the criminal justice system, including the adult court, unless they are subject to destruction following a specified period of crime-free behaviour by the young person. Under the new legislation young offenders are subject to incarceration in correctional facilities and remain under the jurisdiction of the youth court throughout their sentences. As a result, a young person must serve the entire sentence in custody unless the youth court authorizes early release.

For the most serious of cases, the act permits a youth court to transfer a serious charge to adult court. Where such a transfer is ordered, the youth will be subject to all the penalties that an adult would face, up to and including life imprisonment.

It is fully appreciated that in implementing such important changes in the orientation of juvenille justice, difficulties will be encountered and some of these require legislative change. The Solicitor General has held consultations in Vancouver, Toronto, Regina, Montreal, and Moncton to discuss the Act with representatives of police departments, youth courts, private sector agencies dealing with young offenders, and other groups involved in youth justice in Canada, including his counterparts in the provinces and territories.

In summary, I would like to assure the Hon. Member that the Minister is well apprised of the concerns with the Young Offenders Act and is prepared to respond fairly and effectively to those areas which clearly require change.

BANKRUPTCY ACT—PROVISIONS AFFECTING FARMERS AND FISHERMEN. (B) ROLE OF ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to pursue this afternoon a question I addressed to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) on Monday.

Farmers across the country were encouraged early last month when the Minister of Agriculture promised to address the serious farm debt crisis in Canada. They thought that finally the Government was beginning to take charge. "I plan", said the Minister in his speech on December 2, "to bring to Cabinet before the end of this year new financial measures through the Farm Credit Corporation to address the serious financial needs of Canada's farmers".

That sounded like a commitment, even to members of the public used to empty promises. However, the Minister of Agriculture went even further in December and said:

> I want to give these producers legislation with teeth—legislation that will bring farmers and creditors together to work out reasonable solutions. And where solutions can't be agreed on, farmers will have the option of appealing to the courts.

Finally, the Minister claimed, and again these are his words:

> This is an urgent priority and you can count on action before Christmas.

That sounds an awful lot like a promise. Yet on Monday of this week the Minister modified his position and said that action before Christmas had only been his "hope" and perhaps his "wish". The economic future of agriculture does not rely on the "hopes" and "wishes" of the Minister. It relies upon action. Why has the Minister of Agriculture changed his tune? That was the question I was asking. Is it because the Minister, in spite of what he says in the House and throughout the country, accepts the position of the major banks? They are saying that things are not that bad in the farm sector. Does the Minister agree with that assessment? If so, does he also suggest, as the major bankers do, that a debt write-down and a debt moratorium on loans held by bankers would be "ill-considered"? In short, is the Minister now siding with the banks against the farmers? Is that why we saw no action before Christmas? Surely the Minister knows the agriculture sector better than that.

The second alternative would be that the Minister could not get any action on such policy through the Cabinet. Perhaps the Cabinet does not recognize the importance of this matter even though the Minister does.

There are some Conservative ideologues in the Cabinet who argued publicly, before becoming Cabinet Ministers, that it is everyone's economic right to fail and that the free enterprise system cannot prove it is working unless there are a lot of failures, showing that it is doing its job of weeding out some people. Unfortunately, people who are being weeded out in the farm sector right now are some of the most productive and youngest entrants to that sector of our economy. The Minister seems to have a lot of convincing to do, and I think it is time that he stood up to the Cabinet and let it know that this is an important matter and that agriculture does matter in this country. If he fails to convince Cabinet on the basis of farm financing, what can farmers expect to get out of free trade negotiations into which the Government is leading us?

In light of the confusion that has been raised in the minds of farmers by the vacillation of the Minister, I think it is time today that the Minister clarify the position of the Government and let farmers know just what he is proposing to do and whether or not the Bankruptcy Act will be amended as was agreed to by all three parties in 1984. The drafting should not even be a problem because the Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) has capsulized that agreement and reissued it in the House as a private Member's motion. Therefore, the drafting exists and it carries the spirit and, in fact, most of the words of that original agreement back in June of 1984.

The Minister has failed to extend to banks the moratorium which he has declared on land seizures for Farm Credit Corporation. The current moratorium on Farm Credit Corporation only applies to the seizure of land. For the moment, land cannot be seized by the Farm Credit Corporation, but many other secondary lenders are seizing property from these farmers in the form of machinery, livestock and grain. Some of the provinces, such as my own Province of Saskatchewan, have a moratorium against seizures, but that is only effective against land. While the land cannot be seized, the interest keeps mounting. This winter there is a great deal of activity on the part of lending institutions seizing grain, livestock and machinery from those types of farms. Therefore, when the moratorium does end, these farmers will have nothing with which to farm.

These seizures are frequently presided over by the RCMP. In some instances they may be called upon to maintain order. In one instance that I had drawn to my attention, and which I drew to the attention of the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty), the so-called receiver did not even have a court order. He had no legal right to go on the property. He had succeeded in getting the RCMP to accompany him onto the property, ostensibly to take goods off that property in the form of grain, livestock or machinery even though he had no legal right to do so. The farmer seeing his property threatened in this way has, on a number of occasions, attempted to phone the RCMP for protection while they were in his yard helping to perpetrate what was in that instance a crime since there was no court order giving them the right to be there. This was the matter I was raising with the Minister and the Solicitor General.

The problem is quite clear across the country. Farmers thought they had a clear answer in December. They would like a clear answer now. When will the Government act? What is it proposing to do? How soon will the Government act to stop these bankruptcies and give farmers the same kind of opportunity in a bankruptcy as the banks have?

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in response to the concerns expressed by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) as they pertain to the financial difficulties experienced by the farm community today, I am pleased to be able to take the time given on behalf of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) to deal with the issue of revisions to the Bankruptcy Act.

Let me assure the House that the Government is well aware of the acute problems facing farmers and of the urgency of the situation.

During the highly inflationary period of the late 1970s and early 1980s farmers borrowed heavily to finance investment in farmland and equipment. Falling prices for farm products, coupled with rising farm input costs and continuing very high interest rates, have put many farmers in a position where they are having great difficulty in carrying the heavy debt loads. The Government fully realizes that farmers need some protection in order to weather the continuing recession in the farm sector and is taking steps to provide it.

In the first place I would remind Members of the House that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs appointed a special advisory committee last March to examine possible amendments to the Bankruptcy Act. It is a high priority on the agenda of legislation that is imminent.

The advisory committee has examined a wide range of bankruptcy issues, including the question of farm insolvencies and how to deal with them fairly. The committee has considered several possible options which would help shield farmers from bankruptcy. Some of these options would allow arrangements to be worked out between farmers and their creditors which would enable farmers to keep their farms, or would provide for examination of individual cases and for mediation by panels of experts including, what has been suggested by all Parties in this House, other farmers from the debtor-farmer's community.

These are only two of the possible options that the advisory committee has looked at to date. I might point out to the House that the committee has also looked at the procedures put forward in May, 1984, by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in the previous Government which are, I presume, what the Hon. Member was referring to in his question to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) on January 13.

I can tell Members that the advisory committee's report will be released within the next two weeks and that the Government will begin broad consultations immediately thereafter, including immediate discussions with farm representatives as to the recommendations of this report.

• (1820)

The advisory committee process I have just outlined will result in longer term solutions to a number of problems with the Bankruptcy Act, including the problem of farm bankruptcies. Not to be negative but to be constructive, I again assure the Hon. Member that the report will be tabled, action will be taken and the concerns of farmers and of every Member of the House will be dealt with in due course.

LOTTERIES

MAIL ORDER SALES IN UNITED STATES—INVESTIGATION REQUESTED

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, they should have called it the "great Canadian lottery rip-off" but instead it is labelled "your official Canadian lottery form". What is it? It is an invitation to participate in the official Canadian Government lottery and win up to $50 million in cash. It is described as just like playing keno in Las Vegas, and is the lure to rip off thousands of Americans who have been purchasing these tickets from at least four Canadian mail order companies at mark-ups of almost up to 400 per cent.

In fact this official form has so flooded the market that, on a recent visit that I made to the State of Florida, three of my husband's relatives had received this unsolicited pitch in the mail. Not only was there a promise of million dollar winners, the so-called official guarantee said that one in four had a chance to win.

We know that the Ontario Government is already acting to prohibit mail order sales outside the province. However, we also know that at least one agent buys his tickets outside the province anyway so that the action of the Ontario Government alone will not stop this rip-off.

I ask the federal Government to launch an immediate investigation into mail fraud and false advertising, and further ask the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) to include in his Criminal Code amendments a provision to ensure this fly-by-night operation is illegal across Canada.

The Government talks about our great friendship with the United States. Now is the chance to put this claim into practice by preventing the wholesale rip-off of our American neighbours and consumers.

SOCIAL SECURITY

OPPOSITION TO FAMILY ALLOWANCE LEGISLATION

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, only one day of debate is left before the Government will impose on Canadians Bill C-70, an Act to reduce the deficit at the expense of the poor and children. Closure was imposed on a debate and the Government has reduced indexation of January family allowance cheques even before the legislation has passed.

It sought advice from the public and from experts, and then ignored it. This farcical consultation process has alienated organizations representing most Canadians, including women's organizations, poor people's organizations, social policy groups, labour, church groups and many more. Experts stated unanimously that deindexation of the family allowance below the rate of inflation will be harmful to children, families, and the poor. The Conservative Government has ignored their testimony and their research.

Now New Brunswick has added its voice to the growing list of protestors. A spokesperson states:

> We view this proposed cut-back as one further piece of evidence of the disregard and contempt that the federal Government holds toward this Maritime province, especially in view of the following facts: 35 per cent of New Brunswick's children live in poverty; 43 per cent of rural children live in poverty and 47 per cent of the 64,000 people on social assistance are children. What good will the federal Government's cut-backs to child benefits do for these children?

Petitions continue to flow from all parts of Canada—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that her time has expired.

COMMUNICATIONS

BELL CANADA—LONG DISTANCE CALLS IN GATINEAU CONSTITUENCY

Mrs. Claudy Mailly (Gatineau): Mr. Speaker, four months ago, I presented a petition signed by some 10,000 residents of the Outaouais region who were asking this House to urge Bell Canada to eliminate long distance charges in my constituency. At the time, some people told me that the parliamentary process would prove useless.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to announce to the House that I have received a letter from Bell Canada saying that long distance charges will be abolished in the municipalities of Thurso and Buckingham. I am especially happy for Thurso which is celebrating its centennial this year, as I shall now be able to improve communications within the municipality in this very important year.

There is still some work to be done for the municipality of Gatineau where the community of interests reaches only 46 per cent while regulations provide that it should be 50 per cent for long distance charges to be eliminated.

I therefore ask all my constituents of Gatineau to communicate with their municipality at least once a month so that we may achieve this 50 per cent and eliminate long distance charges throughout the beautiful federal constituency of Gatineau.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

PRAISE FOR EMPLOYEES' CHRISTMAS WORK

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mail service is a line of communication binding our peoples together. It is the lifeblood of commerce and industry. That is why we want, need, and deserve a model, first-class postal service and we on this side of the House will not be happy until we have one.

The importance of the system is no more evident than it is at Christmas, and this year postal workers and retirees brought Christmas to many homes throughout southwestern Ontario.

Sixty thousand letters addressed to Santa Claus were answered. Schools in St. Catharines, for instance, competed for window space, resulting in a cheerful, colorful atmosphere to work in and to visit.

Many offices placed Christmas trees in their lobbies to have customers and employees contribute gifts for distribution by the Salvation Army and associated charities.

Literally hundreds of post office employees were involved in this voluntary effort at a time when the Post Office was handling a higher than usual volume of mail and, for the most part, pleasantly and on time.

Now if we could have that attitude and commitment to service through the 365 days of the year, we would all be proud to sing out: "Canada Post: It's Ours".

TERRORISM

INCREASED SECURITY AT AIRPORTS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, the current security alert at Ottawa, Toronto, and Montreal airports is an unfortunate fact of life in today's climate of international terrorism. No country is immune from the insanity of terrorism, not even Canada. Each country must develop its own master plan or strategic response to every aspect of the terrorist menace, from security searches and precautions through to informing the public of the specific nature of a threat.

The manner in which information on the airport threats was supplied to the public in the last 36 hours leaves a lot to be desired. Even though the stepped-up security was obvious at the airports in question, information to the public was coming out piecemeal at best. Fear, uncertainty, and rumours thrive in this sort of an atmosphere to the detriment of airport workers, the travelling public, and concerned citizens.

I would submit, Mr. Speaker, that the public has a right to know the level of risk involved where a terrorist threat is present, and the Government has a duty to furnish prompt information to the public. The Government should be more forthright so that Canadians have enough information to be able to make up their own minds on whether to travel by air or to stay home.

ENERGY

INCREASED DRILLING ACTIVITY—BEAUFORT SEA OIL DISCOVERY

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, drilling for minerals and fossil fuels in Canada reached a record high in recent months. Currently there is not a diamond drill available for hire east of the Manitoba border, thanks to the flow-through share initiatives put in place by the Government.

• (1110)

In addition, some 11,720 oil or gas wells were drilled in the four western provinces in 1985.

Quietly, a few days ago, perhaps the most dramatic drilling news in recent years was announced when the test results on the Amauligak I-65 well in the Beaufort Sea became known. The flow rates and calculated production capability are among the highest recorded in Canada. Oil flowed at rates of more than 7,000 barrels per day from two intervals, with calculated production capacity at one of the intervals at almost 35,000 barrels per day.

The result of the I-65 well indicated the Amauligak structure contains at least 400 million barrels of oil, and reserves could be as high as 900 million barrels. With total reserves in the near and offshore in the Beaufort now reaching a billion barrels, production is a real possibility. By comparison, reserves in Hibernia are estimated to be between 500 million and 800 million barrels.

This means that we are closer to energy self-sufficiency. It means new jobs. It means new wealth. It is another dimension to our national sovereignty. The Government has created an encouraging economic environment for risk ventures. The oil industry—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

PUBLIC WORKS

POST OFFICE CLEANING STAFF LAY-OFFS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) intends to continue with the lay-offs of some 270 cleaners who work in post offices across Canada. Many of these people are long-term employees close to retirement; a couple of dozen are within a year of retirement. Many of them are disabled. Only six of these people have found alternative work, and not one of them has been retrained.

The fact is that these employees will be replaced by a private contractor, so the Government will still have to pay for the service. The Public Works policy of contracting out is based upon outdated information. It will cost almost as much in welfare, unemployment insurance and forgone income taxes to keep these people unemployed.

How can the Minister justify these particular lay-offs? Even if the Minister's own standards of behaviour condone the laying-off of people and their replacement by others, does he not realize that most Canadians disagree with his actions? In fact, 61 per cent of Canadians polled on this issue find his actions unacceptable, and only a small minority support his actions. Does the Minister think that he is some little northern Ronald Reagan taking on a great and powerful union and crushing them. Wake up, Mr. Minister. These are some of the lowest paid people doing essential work. Most Canadians find the Minister's actions repugnant, wasteful, and unacceptable.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mr. Richard Grisé (Chambly): According to a recent survey carried out by the Conseil du patronat du Québec, Mr. Speaker, business people are anticipating a continuation of the economic recovery the beginning of which coincided with the election of a Progressive Conservative Government in Ottawa. In the province of Quebec, Mr. Speaker, 73 per cent of all businessmen and women interviewed stated that they were optimistic as to the economic future in their province. Moreover, Mr. Speaker, three of every four persons surveyed expressed the opinion that the current political climate was good; 73 per cent of them felt that this climate, likely to favour investment and job creation, would continue to improve over the next few months.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that the new climate of consultation and co-operation with the provinces, including Quebec, has contributed to this very positive assessment of the economic outlook for Quebec. Also, the leadership demonstrated by our Government in the area of job creation and economic expertise could only contribute to this most positive assessment of our economic outlook. Mr. Speaker, such optimism contrasts dramatically with the despair and dismay which liberal policies used to arouse not only among business people, but also among Canadians generally.

VISIBLE MINORITIES

WARTIME JAPANESE CANADIAN INTERNEES—REDRESS ISSUE

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, during yesterday's Question Period the Government demonstrated the regressive and "look at the past" attitude which has shamefully characterized its handling of the Japanese Canadian redress issue.

During his days as Opposition Leader and throughout the 1984 campaign, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) spoke of the need to settle this issue quickly. However, once in office, not only did his commitments quickly dissolve, but he refused to meet or acknowledge the National Association of Japanese Canadians. To make matters worse, his former Multiculturalism Minister abruptly cut off talks with the association and attempted to proceed unilaterally. Now the present Minister refuses to honour his promise to negotiate, preferring instead to play up the differences which exist in any national issue. All these manoeuvres border on moral dishonesty.

We often criticize the United States on the question of minority rights. However, on the issue of redress I urge the Prime Minister to weigh the steps being launched in the U.S., to recall the promises he made, to consider his failure to live up to these expectations, and then to ask himself if his actions have been fair, honorable, and courageous.

This matter requires more sensitivity and seriousness rather than simply issuing a Prime Minister's Office press release stating that Mila Mulroney will be visiting the ethnocultural communities. We need action, and we need it now.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

INSURANCE

ESCALATING RATES FOR LIABILITY COVERAGE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): My question is for the Minister of Finance. He knows now that his colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, has been publicly embarrassed over a crisis rapidly developing in our insurance industry across the country. She has now reluctantly agreed today to a meeting with the Ontario Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations on the issue. Since my colleague, the Member of Parliament for Saint Leonard-Anjou, raised this matter on November 4 in this House, both the Minister of State for Finance and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs have maintained that this issue was primarily provincial.

The Minister of Finance knows, having responsibility for this, that over two-thirds of the insurance companies registered in Ontario are federally licensed. Will he take personal cognizance of this matter, and respond to what is becoming a crisis in terms of liability and coverage?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Finance stated very clearly that this was a matter of some concern to her and something that she was following very closely. She also drew the distinction between the responsibilities of the province, which is in the area of contract law, which the Leader of the Opposition, who is a lawyer, does understand, I am sure, and the role of the federal Government which is involved with solvency and the capital basis of these companies.

It is on that basis that she is meeting with the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in the Province of Ontario today, not reluctantly as the Hon. Member tried to imply with his question, but because she is demonstrating through this meeting her very real concern for the problem.

REQUEST FOR COMBINES INVESTIGATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to put a supplementary to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister will know that his Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs was wrong when he said he did not have the power to investigate rising and escalating insurance rates. He should know that under Section 8 of the Combines Investigation Act the Minister does have that power. Will he undertake that the Government, through that Minister, will launch an inquiry immediately into the escalating insurance rates and the failure and inability of many small businesses to get any coverage at all?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, we are quite concerned, as the Minister of State for Finance has said on a number of occasions, about how this problem has developed, but the thrust of the Leader of the Opposition's question is that this is simply a Canadian problem. It is a world-wide problem that must be dealt with within the international context as well. It is also a North American problem in that there is not enough distinction, in our judgment, between what is happening in the United States and what is happening in Canada. This is something that is being reviewed carefully by the Minister, and that will be one of the subjects of her meeting with the Ontario Minister today.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): The Government has been way behind this issue. Since November 4 until yesterday the Minister of State for Finance completely insisted that this was a provincial problem. The Minister of Finance now says it is a national and international problem. He is finally coming to grips with the situation. Hundreds of small businesses, little league hockey teams, and day care centres are facing increases and escalation of rates by 500 per cent, 600 per cent, and up to 1,000 per cent. Will the Minister undertake to get his act together and get on top of this issue?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): This selfrighteous indignation by the Leader of the Opposition does not fool anyone. The Minister of State for Finance has indicated very clearly her concern and her desire to deal with this issue. That is what she has said in the House.

An Hon. Member: She doesn't understand it.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member doesn't know enough about understanding to be able to make that comment.

• (1120)

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The issue before us which the Right Hon. Member is addressing is the jurisdictions of the provinces and the federal Government. He would be the first to be jumping out of his seat if we had transgressed by moving into the provincial side. That is why we are taking care in the handling of this issue.

POSSIBILITY OF INSURANCE PROTECTION FOR YOUNG HOCKEY PLAYERS

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Finance. Quite simply: Since the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport is taking steps to try and obtain insurance coverage for the Canadian ski team, could the Minister of Finance inform the House today whether he can get insurance coverage for the boys and girls who play hockey in our arenas across Canada and who have no insurance? Can you do something about this?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the concern the Hon. Member expresses and this is a concern that we on this side of the House share. However, this is something that has to be dealt with very carefully, recognizing, as I indicated in my previous response, the jurisdiction of the provincial Governments working with the federal Government in the area in which the federal Government has jurisdiction. As the Minister of State for Amateur Sport as well as the Minister of State for Finance have indicated in the House, we are working to try to deal with this problem as it affects these community groups to which the Hon. Member has referred.

POSSIBILITY OF OBTAINING INSURANCE FOR DAY CARE CENTRES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Thousands of day-care centres are facing the same situation as our boys and girls who play hockey. Could the Minister, in his capacity as Minister of National Health and Welfare, intervene in this matter and try and get insurance coverage for our nursery schools and day-care centres which have no insurance coverage and are very important to mothers with children?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the concern that the Hon. Member expresses is a valid one. The point that the Minister of Finance has made and the activities undertaken by my colleagues in the Cabinet are, I believe, sufficient evidence of the seriousness with which the Government takes this issue and the work that is being done on it.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND—COMMITTEE EXAMINATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister is aware that before Christmas the business of the House had actually ground to a halt because of the Government's refusal to do a complete analysis of the de Havilland deal. He is also aware that at the last moment the Government did promise the opportunity for a complete analysis of all the details. As a result, business continued with co-operation between all Parties. Does the Government of Canada still stand by that deal?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, since I was involved in the discussions with respect to the de Havilland matter and also negotiated with the House Leader of the NDP with respect to this matter, let me say this. My colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, said in the last week of the sitting of the House that he was quite prepared to meet with the committee to provide documentation and answer all questions. That commitment was made and has been carried out. The Minister appeared last night and subjected himself to questioning. He produced documents well in advance of the committee hearing.

I understand that the Steering Committee is meeting again later on this day and will, after hearing the Minister, look at what further hearings are appropriate. I think the Leader of the New Democratic Party should possibly wait to see what happens with respect to that meeting before pursuing the matter further.

HEARING OF WITNESSES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the details of that committee meeting and the de Havilland issue itself are of very great importance. However, the question I am asking goes beyond that. It affects all the other business of the House in terms of the commitment made by the Government before Christmas.

Since, as a means of implementing the commitment to what the Minister himself called a full discussion, there was a unanimous agreement on the part of all parties represented on the Steering Committee to hear 14 witnesses regarding the de Havilland case and since the majority, the Conservative members, unanimously voted against the proposal in the full committee, led by a motion moved by the Chairman of the Conservative caucus, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Does the Prime Minister believe that a motion that curtails the hearing of people opposed to the deal is consistent with the Government's promise?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. May I ask the Hon. Member to rephrase his question, please? I think he is now asking a question with regard to committee procedure. He knows he cannot do that.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the rule on that point. I hope Your Honour appreciates the implications, beyond the details of this committee, for the workings of this House.

Does the Prime Minister believe, consistent with the commitment made by the Government, which was entered into in order to obtain co-operation for the discussion of all Bills—not just the de Havilland matter—that it is essential to hear views, in committe, which are opposed to the Government's own decision? Yes or no. That is the question.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I suppose the undertaking to which my hon. friend refers is the statement made on December 19, 1985, as reported at page 9617 of Hansard. It was a statement made by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion in which he said:

> I am sure that the Hon. Member, and other Hon. Members, will probably be pleased to hear that I certainly have no objection, and neither do my colleagues . . . to this matter being considered at the appropriate time by a comittee of this House, at which time the information, other than that which may have some commercial sensitivity, can be put before a committee for full discussion.

There is nothing which has transpired which is inconsistent with that in any way.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: A complete reversal! You are not going to see any business done in this House. Do you understand that? Do you understand that business will grind to a halt? You watch—just watch.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Mulroney: Socialist blackmail. It's pathetic.

Mr. Broadbent: You watch.

An Hon. Member: Get him a towel.

Mr. Gauthier: Look at the order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan).

LIST OF POSSIBLE WITNESSES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is on the same subject and it is also directed to the Prime Minister. Members of the Government, the President of the Treasury Board, and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion have insisted day after day that the deal is a good one, that it will stand scrutiny, and that it deserves support.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kaplan: At the same, whipped by the Chairman of Caucus, they cancelled a list of outside objective witnesses who should be heard and to which the all-party steering committee had formerly agreed.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Kaplan: If the deal is a good one, will the Prime Minister encourage members of his caucus to support the reinstatement of that list at 12.30 today?

Mr. Speaker: The question clearly deals with matters which are before the committee.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Broadbent: It is the position of the Prime Minister we want to hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. May I invite the Hon. Member for York Centre to phrase his concern separately from a reference to the committee?

Mr. Kaplan: How can the Prime Minister seriously expect the people of Canada to believe that this deal is really a good one if he will not let the Members of Parliament look at it?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the premise in the Hon. Member's question is simply incorrect. We are going further than any previous Government would have gone with respect to this type of transaction. The Minister is prepared to appear before the committee. I took the advice, and was quite prepared, notwithstanding the fact that committees cease to exist at the end of every year and have to be restructured, to extend—

Mr. Nunziata: We want a full disclosure.

Mr. Riis: What are you hiding? What are you afraid of?

Mr. Gauthier: What are you afraid of?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —the committee over until this year so that it could in fact deal with this matter—

Ms. Copps: Parliamentary reform, ha, ha!

Some Hon. Members: Shush!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —and hear from the Minister and look at all the documents.

Mr. Riis: It is the witnesses. What are you afraid of?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The steering committee will meet to consider witnesses to be brought before the committee.

Mr. Broadbent: They already did.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We are happy with this deal. It is good for Canada. We are quite happy to have witnesses come and comment on it. We are not afraid of the deal; we are happy with it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

COMMITTEE HEARINGS INQUIRY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I ask this: Given the commitment to open government, will the Government not encourage the standing committee and its members to hold full hearings and not just see the documents which the Minister is willing to reveal and question him for a limited period of two hours?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, all I can say is that our members appear as Private Members on these committees.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Come on, who are you kidding?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: They are not under any direction—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Obviously, the Opposition give directions as to the way in which their members are going to operate. We do not operate that way on our side. We are proud of our Private Members' judgment and integrity with respect to the committee system in this House.

• (1130)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Big deal.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The Hon. Member should do his job, go to the Steering Committee and consider and put forward suggestions to the whole committee—

Mr. Kaplan: I already did that. It's been cancelled.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It is not up to the Steering Committee to decide these matters. Let the Steering Committee make recommendations to the whole committee—

Mr. Broadbent: They did.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The whole committee dealt with that. All I am saying is let them go back to the Steering Committee, come up with their suggestions, and I am sure the Committee will give it the proper attention.

HEARING OF VARIOUS WITNESSES

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, this is a very serious matter which, of course, touches on the integrity of the Government, its credibility, and its ability to deliver on promises made during negotiations between the Parties.

My question is directed to the Prime Minister. On December 19 the Deputy Prime Minister said in response to my question, when I sought an assurance that we would have an opportunity to question the various parties involved and look at the documents before the deal was made, and I quote from Hansard at page 9618:

Mr. Speaker, if that is the wish of the House, and if the Hon. Member would like me to sign today's "blues" for him, I would be happy to do that.

Is the Government prepared to deliver on that commitment to hear the various parties involved, including parties who may be critical of the deal?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, what the Hon. Member conveniently left out of that lengthy preamble to his question was my answer to the first question he put to me on that day. He asked if we would undertake "to permit a committee", give it a mandate and look at the deal—meaning the de Havilland deal—"early in January, and possibly before the House returns", and so on. My answer was:

—I see no inconsistency with his willingness—

That is the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

—to inform a committee of the House and the statements which have been made by the President of the Treasury Board. He now tells us—

That is the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

—that the closing may well be delayed until the end of January. Assuming our return here on January 13, there is that period of time between January 13 and the end of January to hold committee hearings. I can see no reason why those—

That is, committee hearings.

—cannot be arranged through the usual machinery of Parliament.

Why do the opposition Members not follow the suggestion of the Government House Leader and allow that usual machinery of Parliament to operate—

Mr. Broadbent: We did, and you broke it.

Mr. Riis: What are you afraid of?

Mr. Nielsen: —by sending the matter to the Steering Committee to bring back a report to the full committee?

GOVERNMENT COMMITMENT

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. It has been 45 days now since we requested full hearings on the de Havilland affair. Is the Government prepared to honour the commitment made by the Deputy Prime Minister on December 19 when he assured me that the various parties concerned with de Havilland, including some who might be critical, would be heard by a committee of this House? Will you honour that commitment, yes or no?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, what the hon. gentleman has said in the preamble to his question, purporting to quote what I said on December 19, is utterly and wholly false.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: It's right here in Hansard.

An Hon. Member: Read it.

Mr. Nielsen: What I have said I have just read from Hansard at page 9618, and it is there for all with any intelligence to read—

Mr. Hovdebo: What are you afraid of?

Mr. Nielsen: —and that even includes the Hon. Member—

Mr. Cassidy: What are you afraid of, Erik? What are you hiding? What kind of cover-up is this?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nielsen: I am prepared, as the House Leader has said, to allow the usual machinery of Parliament to work. All the Opposition has to do—

Mr. Cassidy: You sabotaged it.

Mr. Nielsen: —is to get that Steering Committee to report to the full committee as requested—

Mr. Cassidy: We did. You sabotaged it.

Mr. Nielsen: —and it will happen. The commitment is there.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Government House Leader—I should say, the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Penner: The same thing.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Perhaps that is the same thing the way things are going in the House.

Mr. Gauthier: That's for sure.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): With respect to page 9618 of Hansard, in addition to what he read from that page, did the Deputy Prime Minister not also say, with reference to the request for full committee hearings:

Mr. Speaker, if that is the wish of the House, and if the Hon. Member would like me to sign today's "blues" for him, I would be happy to do that.

Did he not say that as well? And why does he not stick to that and make sure we have full hearings on this important issue? What is he trying to hide?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I really can't see an issue here.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: What we said, we are doing. The Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion has said he will come to the committee. He said he will tell committee members the entire details of the deal, with the exception of those details which might be commercially sensitive. And even those Hon. Members opposite would understand that kind of limitation. Why don't they allow the usual parliamentary machinery to work—

Mr. Cassidy: We did.

Mr. Gauthier: Why don't you back-track now?

Mr. Nielsen: — instead of raising these spurious issues on the floor of the House of Commons merely to create a political issue for themselves?

Mr. Cassidy: They are not spurious.

Mr. Nielsen: Why don't the House Leaders get to work? That is what I suggested on December 19, that the House Leaders get together—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: —and get the machinery of Parliament working.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Could questions and answers both be heard?

DECEMBER EXCHANGE

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre asked on December 19 if we could "have a commitment given here in the House today that a committee of the House of Commons will, in fact, examine the Boeing purchase of de Havilland before the deal is made final?" He was not talking about just hearing from the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Does the Deputy Prime Minister not recall that he replied, and I quote:

Mr. Speaker, if that is the wish of the House—

So if we are speaking of "spurious" words, why does he not withdraw his spurious words and live up to his commitment on behalf of the Government? Again, I ask him why he is trying to squelch full discussion of this deal by Members of Parliament? What is he afraid of?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Penner: Bravo!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I really cannot understand why the Opposition is continually distorting—

Mr. Broadbent: That's one of your troubles. You don't understand.

Mr. Nielsen: It is a crock of rhubarb that we are in trouble. Here they tell us that we are not co-operating, that we are hiding something from the committee—

Mr. Fulton: You've been drinking too much sterilized water, Erik.

Mr. Nielsen: —and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion spent three hours last night before that committee trying to inform committee members what the deal is all about. And the Opposition is objecting because—

Mr. Cassidy: You're covering up.

Mr. Nielsen: —we are appearing before the committee and telling them all about it.

STEERING COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): My question is also directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. We took the advice of the Deputy Prime Minister and we did in fact meet and we reached an agreement to pass certain legislation as a result of a commitment made by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Does the Deputy Prime Minister think it reasonable that when a Steering Committee recommends—unanimously recommends, as I understand it—that a list of witnesses should be heard by the committee, that the Conservative Members should come together as one force to defeat that recommendation?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think there are some very glaring errors in the preamble to the question put by the Hon. Member.

Mr. Broadbent: Oh?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: First, he presumes somehow that there is no responsibility on the part of the committee to consider its own agenda. Clearly, a Steering Committee is not there to determine an agenda but rather to present it to a committee.

Ms. Jewett: Oh, what a line.

Mr. Broadbent: How phoney.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: All I say to the Hon. Member is that this process is ongoing, and if the Hon. Member wants to allow his Members to come forward to the Steering Committee in order to discuss a list of witnesses, he is going to find out that this process can work. But it is not for him to draw a conclusion because he thinks that somehow his list is not the one which is acceptable, that it should be completely wrong. If members of the committee decide there should be a list which is reasonable, and allows the matter to be fully discussed—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —it is up to the committee. It's not a matter of concern to this House.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will listen to a supplementary question but we are getting very close—and the Hon. Member knows it—to questions relating to committee procedure. I ask the Hon. Member to stay away from that subject, please.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of asking anything about committee procedure.

GOVERNMENT COMMITMENT

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Is the Government prepared to live up to the commitment which was made by the Deputy Prime Minister, subsequent to a commitment made by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, in an effort made prior to the December recess which resulted in my committing us to pass certain legislation in advance of the Christmas break? Is the Government now prepared to live up to the commitment it made then to allow a proper hearing of all of the necessary withnesses in order to look into the de Havilland deal?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there has never been any question but that we will live up to our commitments. We always do, and intend to do so in this case. I would suggest to the Hon. Member that he allow the process to work rather than drawing red herrings into this particular issue.

Mr. Cassidy: You didn't do it last night.

ENERGY

REQUEST THAT O'FARRELL REPORT BE MADE PUBLIC

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister.

Mr. Prime Minister, this morning, an American study contradicted the federal Government according to whom Quebec would have to import gasoline.

Another study, published by Statistics Canada, claims that Quebec has a lack of refining capacity.

I have here a third study by the Quebec Department of Energy which clearly indicates there is a shortage of refinery capacity in Quebec.

Will the Prime Minister undertake to make the O'Farrell Report public?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as I said in reply to a question by a New Democratic Party Member a few days ago, there is a host of reports on this kind of issue, and sometimes their conclusions do not coincide. That is not unusual.

I also mentioned that the Minister would produce the data he has at the appropriate time.

• (1140)

SALE OF GULF REFINERY—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, does the Prime Minister agree that the O'Farrell Report will be an important consideration in the Lavalin-Ultramar transaction, since the important thing is not only to save jobs in Quebec but to save the Quebec consumer as well?

Furthermore, doesn't the Prime Minister believe it is important to publish the O'Farrell Report and the statistics of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, so that Canadians will know what the real figures are and Ultramar can sell the entire Gulf refinery to Lavalin Inc.?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that Montreal East has had three refineries close down while the party it supported was in power, we see our responsibility as follows: First of all, to provide for as many jobs as possible, and second, to ensure that Quebecers will continue to pay competitive prices. And we are succeeding, at least we hope so, in both areas.

As far as the transaction itself is concerned, since this is a matter initiated by the private sector, we cannot give any guarantees, but we are very busy working with the parties concerned in order to save as many jobs as possible.

REFINING CAPACITY IN QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Right Hon. the Prime Minister.

Is the Prime Minister aware that a recent study done by Oil Buyers Guide—an independent North American organization—reveals that, without the Gulf refinery, Quebec's daily shortage of refined products will amount to 56,000 barrels?

What does the Prime Minister intend to do to prevent Quebecers from being ripped off as a result of such undercapacity while a refinery is standing idle?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Obviously, Mr. Speaker, that is the same question. I give him the same assurance: the Canadian Government will protect the interests of Quebec consumers at all times.

[English]

REQUEST FOR COMBINES INVESTIGATION

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, this is the sixth report that shows about a fifty thousand barrel per day deficit. There is O'Farrell, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, Statistics Canada, the Quebec Government, Gaz métropolitain, and now the Oil Buyer's Guide. Will the Prime Minister take action under the Canadian Combines Investigation Act to protect the jobs of the people of Montreal and the oil supply of the people of Quebec?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend will know that in response to a question from one of his colleagues in the last number of days I responded to that fully and have given those assurances.

PRAIRIE CROP DISASTER ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. This morning details of the $150 million Prairie Crop Disaster Assistance Program were released. The application form seems to suggest that a producer must enrol in crop insurance in the future. Is the undertaking to join crop insurance a condition precedent to receiving pay-out under this plan and, if so, why?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's question. Due to the importance of maintaining and promoting crop insurance all across the country, I hoped as Minister of Agriculture to be in a position to make that conditional. Indeed, there have been representations by provinces, farmers and farm organizations that I take that action. However, I am advised that indeed I do not have the legal authority to make it necessary.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

APPEARANCE OF WITNESSES BEFORE STANDING COMMITTEE—POSITION OF COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the chairman of the Committee on Regional Economic Expansion, the Hon. Member for Laval.

I would like to ask him whether he or his committee members have been in touch with Ministers or parliamentary secretaries in an attempt to force the committee to reverse the decision and disregard the commitment to hear witnesses today.

Mr. Guy Ricard (Laval): I am only chairing the committee. I am not participating in two discussions about committee strategy, Mr. Speaker.

INQUIRY WHETHER REPRESENTATION MADE TO COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN ON APPEARANCE OF WITNESSES

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, here is my question to the committee chairman: I want to know whether Ministers or parliamentary secretaries have made representations to the committee chairman with a view to putting off the appearance of witnesses?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member may have a question for the Government about the Government's action, but that question goes beyond the procedural questions that are appropriate for a chairman. The Hon. Member may wish to put a question to the Government along the same lines, if he wishes.

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, we have the right to ask questions. The chairman of the Conservative caucus arrived with a four-page text—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have tried to signal to the Hon. Member how he may wish to put his question. However, if he does not wish to—

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask his question—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Under the circumstances I think I must move on. The Hon. Member for Prince Albert.

UNITED STATES AND EUROPEAN COMMUNITY WHEAT TRADING PRACTICES

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. The Minister will be aware that the United States is spending $2 billion in giving away one bushel of wheat for each two or three bushels bought by certain countries. The European Economic Community has a similar program.

Will the Minister tell the House what the Government is doing to counter these unfair subsidy practices that have been put in place by the United States and the EEC?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member will know that the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture visited us yesterday. My colleague, the Minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board, and I had a very productive and useful meeting with the Secretary of Agriculture. Indeed, we were very pleased and encouraged to some degree that changes in the Farm Bill would indicate there would be very significant acreage reductions. This would have a very significant impact on the volumes of grain produced by the United States.

In addition, there is a very important component in the U.S. farm Bill which will revert a fair amount of crop land back into grasslands. Of course this will have the end result of reducing volumes. It is somewhat premature to identify the impact of this.

UNITED STATES FARM COMMODITY SUBSIDIES

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question concerned the past incentive programs but I would like to follow up on that response because the United States is putting $52 billion into farm commodity subsidies during the next three years. This will contribute to the collapse of commodity prices all over the world.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question.

Mr. Hovdebo: What effect will this have on Canadian grain prices and what does the Government intend to do about that $52 billion that is being poured into the U.S. farm market as subsidies?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the Hon. Member will recognize we regard this very seriously. Naturally, I assume he would accept the fact that we cannot compete against the U.S. Treasury. However, we must recognize that the mid to long-term goal of the U.S. program is to reduce the excess stock in the international market-place. I think we should at least applaud the U.S. direction rather than what the EEC is trying to do.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT'S DEFICIT TARGET

Mr. Tom Hockin (London West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance and is prompted by press reports that the Government has somehow been knocked off its deficit reduction target because of a recent rise in interest rates and widespread concern about the dollar. Is the Government going to be able to meet its deficit target as outlined by the Minister last May?

Some Hon. Members: Thank him for the question.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is nice to get a substantive question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We have—

Mr. Deans: Now you know why you don't get supplementary questions.

Mr. Andre: Question Period is to ask questions, jerk.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If I might respond to the Hon. Member, our most recent expenditure projections indicate we should come in just under the level we set. However, the revenue projection will be somewhat on the low side primarily because of a shortfall in corporate revenues. However, we expect that the main impact on the deficit because of changes we made in the May Budget will be felt in the fourth quarter of the fiscal year, which we are in right now. So there is every indication we will be very close to the projection I set out in the May Budget.

CORPORATIONS

PETRO-CANADA-GULF TRANSACTION—INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL HAVE SAME ATTITUDE TO SIMILAR TRANSACTIONS

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I have here a copy of the submission presented by the Director of Investigations before the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission of Canada on that part of the transaction concerning Petro-Canada's purchase of Gulf's Western Canada assets. It was made public during the public hearings. Will the Prime Minister assure us that, with respect to the other part of the transaction concerning Gulf's assets, the one coveted by Ultramar, the same openness will preside? Will the Director of Investigations have an opportunity to give evidence publicly before the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission of Canada? Will his report be made public at that time before the Commission?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): I have not considered the issue, but I will be pleased to do so and see what was done in similar circumstances in the past under other governments. I will be pleased to look at the issue on the basis of that, as to the requirements, and I will report to my hon. friend.

RESTRICTIVE TRADE PRACTICES COMMISSION—REQUEST THAT HEARINGS BE HELD IN PUBLIC

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. I can assure the Prime Minister that normally hearings are public, and I think the Prime Minister—I am asking him the question—if he wants to be sure that his is an open government, will take it upon himself to ensure that the hearings held by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission of Canada are public.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Of course, I gladly accept my hon. friend's comments. I do not have his seniority in this House, although we are approximately of the same age, but I remember, for instance, that when I was Leader of the Opposition, I asked the Liberal Government for a parliamentary investigation into the whole aerospace issue in Canada, including Canadair and de Havilland, and the answer was no.

PUBLIC SERVICE

SMOKING IN THE WORKPLACE

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. It concerns the Government's very misguided policy of not requiring a clean air environment for its own employees in the workplace. Would the Minister not agree that this is a very misguided policy which ought now to be changed? Specifically, will he undertake not to appeal the decision in the Peter Wilson case where a tribunal ruled that employees have the right to clean air in the workplace?

An Hon. Member: A one-issue lady.

[Translation]

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I must point out to my hon. colleague that we have indeed come to an agreement with the unions to ensure that all employees will be able to work in a healthy environment. Certain issues raised by a decision made by an administrative board seem to go much further in some of their implications. We find these conclusions questionable, but I can assure my honourable colleague that this Government and the Treasury Board want all our employees to work in a healthy environment.

[English]

REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Health. Would he not agree that instead of making pious declarations, as the Minister just did on this subject, it is time to bring in legislation which we need to provide guarantees so that all employees under federal jurisdiction will have clean air in the workplace?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, this Government has not restricted itself to the kind of statements the Hon. Member has made. For example, as of January 1 of this year my own Department has moved in that direction largely because of the co-operation of the employees of the Department. There are other Departments looking at this issue. I think the method the President of the Treasury Board is using, namely, co-operation with the unions and workers involved in moving toward what is a very laudable objective, makes more sense than passing edicts and other such measures.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

FUNDING OF NATURAL SCIENCES AND ENGINEERING RESEARCH COUNCIL

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Science and Technology. It concerns the budget of the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council. This week the Minister asked Canadians to be patient, while the Council says that the budget cuts will be more dramatic than anyone in the scientific community anticipated. Now that our worst fears have been confirmed, will the Minister end the anxiety for thousands of researchers and students who count on that Council for their livelihood and careers, and announce his plans immediately?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I would very much like to announce the plan immediately because I am so full of excitement and enthusiasm about it.

Mr. Johnston: We can see that.

Mr. Oberle: The problem is that the science community has also requested that we bring greater consistency and predictability to Government commitments. That has caused a little bit of a delay which is, incidentally, not as long as any of the delays experienced in previous years which were caused by the former Government.

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, the Minister says a little bit of a delay. This Government has been in office for 17 long months and we still do not have a science policy for this country.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: You were there 16 years.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Supplementary question.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Where is the message of continuity and support for the existing scientists, some of whom are already leaving this country, and for the young people who may no longer be considering a career in research because of the Government's policies? How much longer do they have to wait?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I am seized with two problems. One is to arrive at a formula which will suit us for the rest of the fiscal year. The second is then to get back to the track we established in 1979, namely, working out a five-year program and a strategy which was squandered by the Hon. Member's Government which caused one year's delay. That I will be able to announce in due course.

FINANCE

GROUP OF FIVE—POSITION OF CANADA AND ITALY

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, The New York Times reported yesterday that Canada and Italy have asked to join the Group of Five. A spokesman for the Group of Five, speaking in Paris, said that the applications will probably not be accepted. The quote is:

We want members with real governments.

Does the Minister of Finance regard this as an insurmountable obstacle to Canada obtaining membership in that exclusive club?

● (1200)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): First, Mr. Speaker, we have not asked to attend the meeting. We have indicated to our colleagues in the G-Five some of our concerns around the issues that we expect they will be discussing this weekend. I should say to the Hon. Member that this meeting is the normal routine meeting that is an agenda-setting device for the intercommittee and development committee meetings to be held in two or three months time.

The way the Hon. Member has expressed the question displays his lack of understanding of what the G-Five is all about. The G-Five represent the five largest countries in the world which have easily the largest percentage of trade, easily the largest percentage of exchange reserves, and easily the largest involvement in the International Monetary Fund. It is for that reason they are represented on this committee.

NEW YORK TIMES REPORT

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to make the report available to the Minister of Finance because, clearly, he is not aware of it. I think it is an insult to the Government of Canada, even though we may happen to share that view ourselves.

Will he undertake to look at the reasons given? It may be from what we see that we could never become members of that club, which is where we should be.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): I am not sure, Mr. Speaker, whether that was a question or a statement.

An Hon. Member: It was a question.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If it was a question, I did not see the question mark.

Mr. Johnston: Did you hear it?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I am hearing all these bleatings from Hon. Members as to why we are not there. The G-Five was formed in 1972, I believe, when the Leader of the Opposition was the Finance Minister.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I used to get invited, Michael.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): That is why we are not there.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have no question mark that Question Period is now over.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORT(S)

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of 18, presented by Hon. Members on Thursday, January 16, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Certain petitions presented by Hon. Members do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Oxford (Mr. Halliday) and the Hon. Member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle) by filing with the Clerk of the House also meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

PETITIONS

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have petitions to present from many towns in my riding from Lestock, Dysart, Bruno, Southey, Earl Grey, Craven, Lanigan, Young, the Humboldt area as well as Wynyard. All of the petitioners wish to bring to the attention of the House the problem being created by the deindexation of universal family allowance, the public commitment to change child benefits, and to increase taxes, which place an unfair burden on middle and low-income households. They call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have four petitions all on the same subject from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia; Toronto, Ontario; Surrey and White Rock, B.C.; and Saskatoon, Saskatchewan in which the petitioners pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from a considerable number of residents of Gibsons, B.C., a second petition from a large number of residents of Nelson, B.C. and the third is from a number of Canadians living in Halifax, Nova Scotia. In each of these petitions, the petitioners request that the House of Commons reinstate full indexation of family allowances and rescind the unfair tax increases in the Government's May Budget.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions on the same subject from Nova Scotia, British Columbia and from Ontario from Canadian citizens who persist in the futile perception that if they ask the Government to act on their behalf it will listen to them. They ask that the deindexation of family allowance be withdrawn and the unfair tax legislation also be withdrawn.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition on behalf of a number of residents from St. Catharines who ask the Government to consider that the deindexation of family allowance and the massive cut-backs in the public commitment to child benefits are really an unfair attack on women and families with children, especially single parent mothers.

I have another petition from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia; Sackville, New Brunswick; and Castlegar, B.C. on the same topic asking the Government to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, in the dying days of debate on Bill C-70, I have a number of petitions also on this very important subject affecting children, families and particularly single parent mothers with young children who are very often poor. They are asking the Government to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and to rescind other budget measures such as unfair tax increases that affect families.

The first petition is from my own riding of Vancouver East. I have received many, many petitions from residents of that community. This is from the Grandview part of Vancouver East. I also have a petition from downtown residents from Vancouver Centre as well as Vancouver East who represent a very low income community concerned about this issue.

I have another petition from Vancouver Kingsway on the same subject asking for full indexation of family allowance.

I have another one from residents living in Langley and Richmond, B.C., both Conservative ridings, asking for the Government to change its position and to reindex family allowance. I have another petition from New Westminster and Surrey on the same subject, and one from the Conservative riding that includes White Rock, B.C. The petitioners are asking the Government to reconsider and fully index family allowance to the cost of living, and to do it now.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present four petitions, one from the Regina area of Saskatchewan. Some people from Prince Albert have also signed it. I have petitions from Nova Scotia, Ontario and from Gibsons, B.C. All of these petitioners request the House of Commons to reinstate the indexation of universal family allowance and to rescind unfair tax increases.

STARRED QUESTION

Mr. Ron Stewart (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, would you be so kind as to call Starred Question No. 472?

*COSTS OF NATIONAL MUSEUM OF MAN AND NATIONAL GALLERY

Question No. 472—Ms. McDonald:

1. Is the cost of the construction of the National Museum of Man and the National Gallery expected to exceed the guidelines set in 1983 and, if so, by what amount?

2. Will the architectural firms and major engineering contractors receive professional fees in connection with these projects in excess of those contracted before July 1985 by the National Museums Construction Corporation and, if so, for what reason?

3. Will all new contracts or amendments to contracts resulting from a new allocation of funds be made public?

Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, it is with pleasure on behalf of the Minister of Public Works that I answer Starred Question No. 472 as follows:

(1) Yes. In 1983, the cost of construction of the two museums was estimated to be $191,145,000; $810,000 of this amount was to come from the private sector. However, since the previous Government had not, prior to the initial allocation of funds in September, 1981, undertaken a detailed analysis of the design and construction problems inherent in the projects, the cost of completion is now estimated to be $261,800,000—$133,100,000 for the National Gallery and $128,700,000 for the National Museum of Man.

Accordingly, since the preliminary study was incomplete and the projected funds fell short, after an exhaustive study, the Conservative Government announced on October 23 an increase to $69.6 million to the total of the project due to the fact that the original funding was insufficient by this amount. This amount had been omitted in the initial study in 1981.

(2) Yes. The contracts with the architects and engineering professionals call for adjustments to be made on a percentage basis related to the estimated value of construction. The precise amounts of the adjustments are not yet known and are presently under discussion with the respective consultant organizations.

(3) No. It is not normal to make public details of contractual agreements without the consent of the private sector participants concerned. Therefore, the Conservative Government has taken every possible measure to ensure that no additional funds will have to be allocated to these projects.

STORES ON ARMED FORCES BASES

Question No. 469—Mrs. Cossitt:

Does the Department of National Defence still operate stores on armed forces bases which sell civilian goods and, if so (a) where are they located (b) are the staff paid by the Department and, if not, by whom (c) are there any plans to close down any stores and, if so, which ones?

Mr. Robert Wenman (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1. Yes.

(a) The Canadian Forces Exchange System (CANEX) outlets are located on Canadian Forces bases and stations across Canada, Europe and in Bermuda.

(b) CANEX, with non-public funds generated by the system, pays all its own employees except for normally one or two military members per base or station, who are paid by the Department and are assigned as basic management staff for CANEX operations.

(c) Store closures are planned at Cadin/Pinetree Line stations which are being phased out over the next few years, as announced by the Minister in the House on March 13, 1985.

INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Finance) moved that Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak today on Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and several related statutes. These include the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Act.

The Bill contains measures proposed in two notices of ways and means motions tabled in the House earlier this year, one being a general way and means motion tabled on May 23 and the other being a detailed notice of ways and means motion tabled on November 21.

The Bill represents a substantial and integral component of the Government's program to secure durable economic renewal for Canadians. Hon. Member will recall that we established the broad framework for that strategy in November, 1984. Since then we have moved clearly and consistently to develop and to implement specific initiatives which are the building blocks for durable economic growth.

[Translation]

This Bill is an important component of the program developed by this Government to ensure a lasting economic renewal for all Canadians. Hon. Members will recall that we outlined that strategy in November 1984. Since then, we have acted clearly and continuously to develop and implement special measures which have contributed to a lasting economic renewal.

[English]

The renewal strategy is designed to create steady and sustained improvement in the basic conditions for economic growth.

The Bill proposes to continue our strategy for far-reaching and wide-ranging economic renewal. Therefore, it is appropriate to review briefly the corner-stones of that strategy. First, the Government is determined to reduce the federal deficit and bring the growth of the public debt under control. A second corner-stone of the renewal strategy is the direct encouragement of private initiative as the key to productive growth and job creation. Third, we are improving the efficiency and effectiveness of Government by cutting waste, by removing obstacles to economic growth and by making better use of scarce and precious resources. We are ensuring that Government assumes a less instrusive place in the lives of Canadians.

Finally, we are bringing about all these vital changes in a manner which is as fair as humanly possible. In acting to improve the climate in which our private sector in Canada can excel, we are building on the basic senses of compassion, tolerance and justice, which are the essence and the character of our Canadian society.

The Bill we are considering today is firmly and squarely based on these corner-stones of the economic renewal strategy. The Bill will implement many significant measures which the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) introduced in the Government's first full Budget. These measures have attracted widespread support and are eagerly awaited by Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this Bill contains very important amendments to the Income Tax Act. If I may, I would like to mention some of them.

First, there is the $500,000 capital gains exemption. As I have already said in this House, this amendment will change the attitude of Canadians as far as savings and investment are concerned and help the whole business sector, especially small businessmen.

Mr. Speaker, when I speak about small businessmen, this includes the farmers. They own small businesses, and after meeting farmers in my constituency, whether they are from Yamachiche, Saint-Barnabé, Saint-Sévère or Pointe-du-Lac, I know that they are impatient for the Budget to come into effect, especially the $500,000 lifetime capital gains exemption.

Mr. Speaker, a second important point is the provisions that investments in pension plans and RRSPs may now be used for small businesses.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, this Bill will allow all those who have RRSPs or RRSFs to use this money to purchase equity in our small businesses, which will help these businesses to expand and provide a new source of capital, which is essential to develop our economy and create more jobs.

A third part of Bill C-84 concerns the income-splitting provisions which used to provide a means to avoid paying taxes for members of the same family. We all know that, very often, there were interest-free loans between members of a same family and the person who had no income at that time declared interest income on which very little or no taxes were payable. Bill C-84 eliminates this loophole.

Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that the Opposition has not pointed out that this is a good thing. We have not heard about it from the other side and I think that if the Oppostion had been honest, they would have applauded this initiative.

The fourth change concerns the administration of the taxation system. Seizures and all search activities carried out under the previous system by the Department of Revenue, which had been mentioned frequently under the former Government, have been eliminated.

A fifth measure proposed in the Budget was the risk capital fund for workers. Individuals who invest in risk capital funds constituted by workers will now be entitled to a tax credit amounting to 20 per cent of the cost of purchase. This is another very useful measure which unfortunately has not been mentioned very often by the Opposition.

Mr. Speaker, the sixth point concerns research and development. Tax credits for small businesses up to $2 million will provide a 100 per cent refund instead of 40 per cent as is the case now.

All those are positive measures, Mr. Speaker. I could go on for a long time, but I think that, after reading Bill C-84, it is easy to see that this legislation is of vital importance for the Canadian economy and for all Canadians.

[English]

In conclusion, this Bill provides for a new direction for the Canadian income tax system, new measures such as the $500,000 lifetime personal capital gains exemption to encourage Canadians to invest their savings in productivity of Canadian activity and to take business risks.

This Bill improves the fairness of the tax system by removing some of the ways in which unintended advantage may be taken of the tax system and increases the effectiveness of government programs by reducing the base for investment tax credit where other grants or assistance have been received for expenditures made.

This Bill increases the fairness of the tax system by introducing change of control rules to prevent unacceptable sales of unused tax credits. These changes are long overdue. We know that Canadians share our desire to improve the economy and are willing to share the burdens so that we will all share the triumphs.

This is a major Bill. It is in some areas complex, but such complexity is unavoidable where measures such as those contained in this Bill affect the fundamental principles of our tax system. The new direction this Bill provides, and the benefits that Canadians will gain more than justify the changes. Mr. Speaker, I recommend Bill C-84 to this House, and I look forward to the speedy passage of these measures.

Mr. Speaker: In the context I think we will waive the technical issue of a question and comment period. Therefore, I give the floor now to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner).

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): The Parliamentary Secretary has just urged a speedy passage. The House Leader has taken care of that by imposing closure on the Bill. I cannot remember, in major pieces of legislation reflecting what is at the core of the Government's economic philosophy of budget where closure has been applied in this type of case, where the debate has been limited in the House of Commons, and where the committee hearings have been restrained to one week's hearings.

That gets to the issue that troubled the House earlier today in Question Period when the Government—in return for getting an agreement on how this Bill was to be treated, among others—made an undertaking before Christmas to open up committee hearings on the de Havilland affair.

True, Your Honour referred to those matters as being committee proceedings, but the issue related to an order of the House which limited the time available for debate, of course, reinforced unilaterally by the Government using the hammer of closure.

It is with no disrespect to the Parliamentary Secretary that I suggest to him and to the Government that on the third reading of a budget Bill reflecting the economic policy of the Government the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) should be in the House, and so should the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall). I had the honour of holding that portfolio, the Ministry of Finance, for four years and I always made it a practice as Minister to attend to Bills personally in the House of Commons, not always during the report stage, but certainly during the second reading and third reading stages of a major piece of legislation. I consider it to be a continuing affront to the House, and I say that with respect, Your Honour, that Ministers are disregarding that courtesy and not attending the House when their legislation is being considered.

I want to congratulate our financial critic, the Member of Parliament for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), ably supported by the Member of Parliament for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) and the Member of Parliament for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) who have had the custody on our side for the disposition of this Bill and for the critique of the Bill. I want to state what I stated during the budget debate. We have grave concerns about the tenor, tone and substance of this Bill. We thinks it reflects a Budget that is unfair. We think it reflects a Budget that is sneaky. We think it reflects a Budget that is unnecessarily taking money out of the economy, particularly the domestic economy, to the detriment of Canadian owned small business. This Government enjoys the largest majority in Canadian history. It has also presented to the Canadian people in this Budget the largest tax increase in Canadian history. Instead of the Minister of Finance having the courage and the guts to stand up on budget afternoon and say to Canadians, "I am raising your taxes", he did it in a sneaky, clandestine and hidden fashion. Most of the tax increase is done at the sales tax level and at the deindexing level.

I had the honour in 1972, unanimously supported by the Conservative Party at the time, of indexing our taxes, that is to say I indexed the brackets and the deductions to reflect the erosion of inflation on the income of Canadians. I did it with the unanimous support of the country and of the Leader of the Opposition at the time, Mr. Robert Stanfield. We did it because we felt it unfair that Canadians should be taxed at higher rates because of the inter-reaction of inflation against the progressive tax system. They may have received salary increases, but when you balanced that against inflation there was no real increase at all. There might have been a nominal increase in their salary or their wage rate, but no real increase at all. Yet by moving them into higher tax brackets the Ministry of Finance took that money from them.

Because of this hidden tax we have not only a sneakiness in the system, because the Minister did not have the guts to say he was going to tax Canadians by an increase of 3 per cent per year, per year, he just deindexed the system by 3 per cent per year, per year, but the way that the deindexing is going to work will have very unfair consequences. Not only is it hidden, but it will hit the lowest income earners hardest.

I recite figures that my colleague, the Member of Parliament for Laval-des-Rapides got from an official document from the Department of Finance which was never denied by the Minister as not being legitimate. We get these figures over a period of four consecutive years cumulative. A man or a woman in this country earning $15,000 a year will have a cumulative tax increase in four years of 36 per cent. A man or a woman earning $30,000 a year will have a cumulative four-year increase of only 11 per cent, compared to that 36 per cent. If you earn $100,000 a year in this country over that four-year period, your cumulative tax increase will be 4 per cent. If you happen to earn $200,000, that cumulative tax increase over the same period of time will only be 2 per cent—$15,000 a year, a 36 per cent increase, $200,000 a year, a 2 per cent increase. Now, that is not fair and it is not perceived by the Canadian people to be fair. When you take that and couple it with the capital gains tax exemption of $500,000 over a lifetime, reduced at the maximum rate to a $125,000 cash bonanza, you have inequity taken, I believe, to a Dranconian degree.

The average family is taxed about $450 to $500 a year more. Over a period of four years, there is a cumulative tax increase of 30 per cent to 36 per cent. Yet when you add back that capital gains tax exemption to the wealthier, the man or woman earning $200,000 a year will be 4 per cent or 5 per cent ahead. Only 4 per cent of the earners in this country invest in a way that will make them eligible for that tax bonanza.

So I am saying that we have had here a real revelation of a Tory philosophy. After nine months of cosmetic politics, of a meeting with the President of the United States on St. Patrick's Day, and on Valentine's Day a meeting with the provincial premiers in Regina, then a national economic conference, and all the cosmetics and photo opportunities that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) loves so well, he finally came up with a Budget. It has been the longest period of time in modern Canadian history between an election and a Budget. All the deductions, all the tax brackets are being deindexed by 3 per cent a year, and that will mean, in gross terms, by 1989 a hidden tax increase over what we have now of $11.5 billion. The Minister of Finance did not have the courage, the guts, the frankness or the forthrightness to stand up in this House before Your Honour and admit that.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, when the Government tried to de-index Old Age Security pensions, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) had the audacity to claim before the House that he had the support of our Canadian senior citizens. He was badly mistaken. Finally, after thousands and thousands of petitions and signatures were tabled in the House, after public meetings were held across this country, 2.5 million pensioners protested because they felt deceived and betrayed by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Government of Canada, and because the Prime Minister had made a commitment in Sherbrooke, during the election campaign, when he said to all our senior citizens: I am protecting you against inflation and I will never withdraw that protection. In the Budget, that protection was reduced by three per cent annually. Finally, justice prevailed thanks to the people of Canada, the unions, and even businessmen and women, and all the organizations.

We were frankly disgusted, and that is putting it mildly, at the lack of understanding and the insensitivity of this Government.

This Government, which had shown itself to be entirely devoid of compassion, fortunately was not able to execute its plan. Nevertheless, this Bill, as I said before, is widening the gap between rich and poor in Canada.

[English]

Let me outline for Your Honour, the House and the country the impact on the disposable income of families of all the budget measures, most of which are contained in this Bill. I am talking now about the immediate effect of the budget measures, not the cumulative effect that I recited earlier. A family with an income of $15,000 per year will have $634 less in disposable income as a result of the budget measures. That is 9.8 per cent less. A family with an income of $20,000 per year will have a disposable income of $808 less as a result of this Budget or 8.5 per cent less. A family earning $30,000 per year will have $1,089 or 7.9 per cent less. A family earning $40,000 per year will have a disposable income of $359 or 1.9 per cent less.

Because of the cumulative effect of this Budget, a family earning up to $75,000 per year will have a disposable income of $1,269 or 3.3 per cent more. The disposable income of a family earning $100,000 per year will increase by $2,054 or 3.9 per cent. A family earning $200,000 per year will have $4,519 or 4.2 per cent more. Is that fair? Is that what the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister consider to be a fair sharing of the burden of getting the public finances under control? If that is so, I think they have been blindly misled and I believe the people of the country will have a reckoning sooner than they think.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount, spoke eloquently on the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption. As you know, Mr. Speaker, we presented two amendments to the House on that issue. Sixty-three per cent of that benefit will go to 4 per cent of the taxpayers of the country. The rather feeble rationale that the Minsiter of Finance attempted to give for this measure was that it would encourage investment and jobs, but there is nothing in the measure before the House to limit that bonanza to Canadian-owned businesses. There is nothing in the measure to limit it to companies registered or listed on Canadian stock exchanges. It is wide open.

The capital gains tax exemption can be benefited from whether one invests in a condominium in Florida, an apartment building in Hong Kong or European art. There is nothing to relate the exemption to Canadian production, jobs and growth, and that was the reason my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount, introduced an amendment designed to give a tax break on Canadian investments only. I might say that although members of the NDP voted against that particular amendment, they introduced it in committee. They thought it made good sense then and it does make good sense now.

I do not agree with the capital gains tax exemption at all. I do not think it should have been introduced in this Budget. I do not think the Government can give a bonanza of $125,000 to the rich and wealthy and those fortunate enough to be able to invest in assets while taxing the average Canadian family the way it has been taxed under this Budget. However, if there is going to be a tax exemption, it should at least be limited to Canadian investments, companies and businesses.

The only excuse that the Minister gave for not limiting this tax exemption to Canadian investments was that it would make the tax system too complex. As my colleague, the Hon.

Member for Laval-des-Rapides, pointed out, even those who would benefit from this cash bonanza, reinforced by tax lawyers and tax accountants, recognize that the way this exemption has been constructed, when combined with the minimum tax proposal, it will lever investment in favour of offshore and American markets rather than the Canadian market. What these measures do to tax dividends means that it is now more useful for those with surplus funds to invest in the American market and benefit from a lower tax rate than qualify for Canadian dividends from Canadian companies. The Minister has a hopeless situation on his hands. He is encouraging investment outside the country by the interlocking of these two measures.

When talking about a complex income tax system let me point out that those who live in Quebec have to deal with four tax codes. There is the Quebec tax code, the federal Income Tax Act which this Bill is purportedly amending, the new minimum tax code, and the capital gains tax exemption code. It is impossible for the average person to understand how this system was put together. The Minister has not simplified or reformed the system. He has added layer upon layer of complexity, which will only discourage investment and, as I have said, encourage those with the power to invest to go beyond our shores.

[Translation]

In the House and in committee, my colleagues have already mentioned the fact that this Bill also puts an end to the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. For eleven years, more than 2.5 million Canadians have been using this plan to help buy their first home. Many young couples have taken advantage of this mechanism to acquire their own home as soon as they started a family. To them it meant recognition of the fact that Canadians and especially young Canadians see owning their own homes as a right. Today, however, the obstacles facing young people in this respect are almost insurmountable, and despite our efforts and a number of amendments that were tabled in the House, the Government has withdrawn the RHOSP. To quote my colleague from Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), this Government is very "mal runné", and I could not agree more.

[English]

When the Minister introduced the Budget, he said that he wanted to get the deficit under control. A set up question was asked of him this morning so that he could try to indicate to the country that he was on his own target. We will see. Whatever he has done, he has done on the backs of the unemployed and on the backs of middle-class families.

Both in response to the question this morning and in response to the question I put to the Minister on Tuesday when I asked where the Canadian dollar is going and if the Minister will admit that higher interest rates are being provoked by the Governor of the Bank of Canada in order to stabilize or prop up our dollar, the Minister was trying to patch things up. In response to my question, he was forced to tell me to wait for his February Budget. That was a recognition by the Minister that the real reason the dollar is falling and has been in speculative trouble is that there has been a lack of confidence on world markets that this country is being properly run. The Minister was forced to say that in the House on Tuesday, and he had a set up question asked of him to try to indicate to the markets that he was on target today. That displays an anxiety on the part of the Minister who is trying to reassure the markets so that the Bank of Canada will not have to inject more funds into the system in order to prop up a falling currency.

We believe that the tax Bill before the House also reflects lousy economics. It takes billions of dollars out of the economy. It reflects a Government that is relying primarily on the export thrust to maintain the health of the Canadian economy. Most of the purchasing power that will be drawn out by this Budget, $11.5 billion in four years, will be to the detriment of small Canadian independent businesses.

When the people of this country voted for this Government, they voted for change. They wanted a new direction. They have not received it. All they have received is incompetence. However, in the Bill which is before us they have received worse than that. In this Bill they see a demonstration of a lack of sensitivity and a demonstration of unfairness. They see a demonstration of the lack of courage of the Minister of Finance and of the Prime Minister who have failed to come clean with respect to the hidden tax increases which are really represented in the Budget.

In terms of the sales tax increases and deindexation of the system, the Canadian people are being hit harder in this Budget than they have been in any Budget tabled in the history of the country. They have been hit in such a way that they will not know what they are being hit with until it creeps up and hits them like a rabbit punch on the back of the neck.

We believe the Budget portrays an insensitivity which does not deserve the confidence of the House. We will not be able to hold it up or stop it. We have been able to say that the Budget reflects an old-fashioned Tory philosophy which says, as the Minister has said: "Sure, you want to encourage those who succeed". However, it certainly does not protect those who are struggling in the country. It does not protect those with families, those who are trying to get above the poverty line, and those who are trying to get ahead. It does not protect those who are trying to build up capital. The Budget reflects old-fashioned market forces which put heat on ordinary Canadians and leave all the scope with those who are able to take care of themselves.

We urge the House not to support this measure. We have done what we could within the limited time given to us under the rules. We have been restrained in what I believe to be a very undemocratic way by the use of closure on a tax Bill. After all, the fundamental role of Parliament is to review the tax system. The fundamental role of Parliament is to review spending. These roles have come down from Westminster. They came about as a result of the early fights between the nobles and the king, fights between the British aristocracy and the Crown, and, eventually, fights between the people and the aristocracy. What Parliament could always refuse was spending. What it could always refuse was the imposition of taxes. There is nothing more important to our system than that there be proper debate and proper scrutiny of these types of measures. Yet, the debate on this measure was restrained. It was curtailed at both the committee stage and before the House.

We oppose this measure. We are revolted by it. We think that it is wrong, unfair and sneaky. We leave it in the hands of the country until we next have an opportunity to deal with it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I understand that, of necessity, the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) has to leave Parliament Hill shortly after one o'clock and that he wishes to have an opportunity to speak before that time. If that is the case, then I am certainly prepared to relinquish my place in the speaking order to allow him an opportunity to speak.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I will take that as a very kind parliamentary courtesy. I recognize the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) on debate. When we return after lunch, we will hear from the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) on debate. We will treat the Minister's speech as the next Conservative speech in the round of speeches.

[Translation]

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the remarks of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner). Obviously this legislation will have a significant impact on all Canadians. Mr. Speaker, I sat on Opposition benches long enough to know that it is a lot easier to make unflattering remarks about a Government which is accountable and assumes its responsibilities. Still I entertain some reservations about the comments of the Leader of the Opposition, for his credibility can be challenged since he too assumed major responsibilities as Minister of Finance in the Government which Canadians turfed right out over twelve months ago.

I vividly recall that the present Leader of the Opposition once decided to return to the private sector rather than stand up for his Party and his Government, as he should have done—

An Hon. Member: You too decided to join the Union nationale.

Mr. La Salle: Yes, to continue to serve the Quebec voters for whom I have always had consideration and respect.

At least I had the courage to offer my modest contribution to the people of Quebec, I had that kind of courage, unlike the present Leader of the Opposition who chose—as was his right, and I am not criticizing his decision—to look after his own interests and leave Canadians at the mercy of a Government which was already running out of breath, the same Government to which we owe our current difficulties.

Mr. Speaker, there has to be a limit to such attacks in the House, intended as they are to make Canadians believe that everything we do is wrong, and sometimes in terms which border on demagoguery.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that changes have to be made, and that is what we are doing because we know where we are going, we know what we want, and we know what Canadians expect from us.

Mr. Speaker, would anybody in his right mind miss this opportunity to remind Canadians that the present Leader of the Opposition heads the Party which is trying to tell us how to improve the management of public affairs and which, as it happened, was in office for the past 15 years when 100,000 more Canadians swelled the ranks of the unemployed year in and year out, at least 1.5 million of them all told? That within our first 15 or 18 months in office we successfully reversed this vicious trend so harmful to Canadians? The judgment rendered by Canadians 15 or 16 months ago already was unmistakable: they simply had had enough of a Government which was driving Canada into bankruptcy. Thank God, our economic performance in recent years indicates quite clearly that things are a lot better than they used to be.

Most business people endowed with a good business sense—some Hon. Members opposite know business very well, much better than I do, Mr. Speaker—realize that the economic performance of this Government is quite encouraging and would deserve much better support than it has received so far.

But Canadians should be aware that Members of the Opposition have a part to play, but only to the extent that the interests if their own constituents are well served.

Mr. Speaker, they will interrupt us, level all sorts of accusations against us and use all means at their disposal to try to hinder the normal operation of Parliament. And they will refuse to help the Government which, through its measures, is trying to restore an economic climate likely to attract investments. But we are on the right track, Mr. Speaker, and well on the way to achieving this objective of a new economic outlook for Canadians. We have a lot of catching up to do. While trying to solve almost hopeless problems, we are being asked to work miracles.

Mr. Speaker, it is not easy to turn the country around and off the direction which was leading Canada to bankruptcy. But we came up with changes and economic policies more than a year ago, and we are glad we did, for we have put an end to this disastrous habit of creating 100,000 new unemployed each year. Instead, as we had hoped and encouraged it to do, the private sector has created between 400,000 and 500,000 new jobs in Canada this year.

In Quebec, a province of which I am very fond for readily understandable reasons, we have also managed to put an end to this tragedy and to create over 100,000 jobs. Members of the Opposition will say that it is not enough. They will add that a very serious problem exists in Montreal East.

Mr. Speaker, it is a fact that the previous government's ill-advised policies and lack of long term strategy for Montreal East as well as the rest of Canada have created enormous difficulties, but we have already shown our determination and we have already achieved results which, in the eyes of most businessmen and people of good faith, deserve consideration. And we intend to continue, Mr. Speaker.

The Leader of the Opposition says that the purpose of all our efforts is to help the rich, Mr. Speaker. It is a fact that we have come up with incentives to convince those who can invest to invest even more. I think it makes sense to help them invest more for the purpose of creating new jobs. That is the whole idea. Members opposite know it. Do not think that I am not well aware of the problems experienced by those who are unemployed or on welfare. But it must be realized that they are not in a position to generate new investments tomorrow morning. We must therefore look to people who can. And they are not all millionaires, Mr. Speaker. Quite the contrary. Members opposite are quick to blame the elimination of the capital gains tax, implying again that this action will benefit only a handful of millionaires. But nothing could be farther from the truth. Canadians by the millions will benefit from this action. We need only ask farmers, a class of Canadian citizens which I hold in very high esteem. Farmers are businessmen. Go and ask them whether they feel that this action is not quite in order and encouraging for them. But they are not millionaires. That is not true.

Again, there is a consequence which we have seen and which all members in good faith could see if they wanted. That measure will thus enable farmers to pass their farms on to their children at much less cost, due to the fact that we are allowing them very legitimate profits by way of the proposal called the capital gains tax repeal, Mr. Speaker.

The Leader of the Opposition has also said we lacked interest and respect for mothers because we propose changes to the family allowances. Anyone who is honest and who correctly understands the proposal put forward by my colleague, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), will see it is aimed at something that any man and woman in his or her right mind would support, and that is helping the most in need, Mr. Speaker. And by rationalizing the child tax credit and the dependent child benefit and family allowances, we are indeed increasing our assistance to mothers or families most in need, those whose income is considered low.

Mr. Speaker, it is clear in all those instances that this new concept permeating our Government is aimed indeed above all at reviving the Canadian economy, which in my view is the first responsibility of a Government, restoring hope to those young Canadians who were facing unbelievable despair because of an unemployment rate that was so prejudicial to the whole Canadian nation.

Therefore, during the past fifteen months, Mr. Speaker, interest rates have come down in a way that is both significant and encouraging for the construction industry. Thousands of jobs have been created in the construction industry, and also jobs related to the building of thousands of new homes. The inflation rate has been maintained at a much more encouraging level than that experienced over the last five or ten years. Economic growth has taken place and surprisingly, at a still higher rate than was experienced in the United States. Business confidence also increased, and this is important when we want to give the private sector all due credit in that economic renewal. And we do have confidence in the private sector. However, and I was forgetting this, they are blaming us because of this legislation repealing tax credits, capital gains tax, because we had made no provision for dictating to Canadians where they should invest those capital gains.

Contrary to what that Government did for so many years, we will not dictate to Canadians how they will live, not even in their kitchens. We have confidence in Canadians, and in forthcoming measures all those who can invest will also find incentives to invest those gains within the Canadian economy. We do not believe that Canadians will hastily send abroad the savings or gains they may have realized within our Canadian economy that is equally respectful of all Canadians, in order to favour foreign economies. Quite the opposite, Mr. Speaker, we do a lot of thinking. Our first reaction is to trust the Canadian people as a whole.

Today we appreciate the competence Canadians are showing and already, Mr. Speaker, we are assured that those Canadians who have the means will invest their money in Canadian industries because also of the benefits we will offer them. Why? We always have in mind creating jobs in all areas as sophisticated as those of new technology.

That is the goal of the Government we represent, for which I think I have every reason to ask the support of all Hon. Members, to recapture the wealth which the previous Government woefully squandered. And to redistribute fairly to all Canadians the money they pay in taxes, we must rebuild the wealth we have lost, and we have a wonderful opportunity to do so by means of measures which also convey the interest of all those investors who also wish to contribute to the building of this country in all generosity and fairness to our whole nation. I am therefore unimpressed by the attack that was launched today by the Leader of the Opposition who stooped so low as to comment only in negative terms on our economic performance which is envied by many countries around the world.

I owe thanks, of course, to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), my colleagues in the Cabinet and all Members of our party who accepted and approved the sort of measures we are proposing. True, Mr. Speaker, we still have a lot to do. But we have nonetheless succeeded, in a short time, in clearing the atmosphere with the provinces. We have also assured them that they will play a greater role in the momentous decisions the Canadian Government will have to take. The Members opposite will go on voicing their pessimistic views and will do all they can to have Canadians believe we are on the wrong track. However, the facts speak for themselves. Canadians will see through the rhetoric, they will understand the meaning of this opposition, the reasons behind this negative attitude and this desire to misinform the public.

These people, Mr. Speaker—and Canadians must be aware of it—do not want us to achieve this urgent economic recovery which is already under way. These people, and the Leader of the Official Opposition in particular, know perfectly well that if we succeed, even in limited way, they will never regain power with the limited team they have. They are missing the opportunity to abide by their commitments to the voters, Mr. Speaker. It is disheartening for all Canadians, Mr. Speaker, to see that these people refuse to assume their fundamental responsability: representing the legitimate interests of their constituents, which in this case means ensuring economic recovery, a quick recovery in all parts of Canada, not only in Quebec, through investment and hard work. To this end, Mr. Speaker, we are forced to ask Canadians to make sacrifices, we must ask them to help pay for a $200 billion national debt, incurred by our friends opposite. We wonder whether Canadians agreed with this approach that created an artificial economy which, today, has become a terrible burden for the entire country, and to what extent the present Leader of the Opposition and Opposition Members are responsible.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding, I hope Canadians will understand that the kind of vision we have demonstrated so far, and this Government's new orientation, are in the best interests of all the people in this country.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Johnston: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Is the Hon. Member raising a point of order?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the Minister and others please stop this. Order, please.

The Hon. Member is raising a point of order?

Mr. Johnston: It is a question on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I presume that the Minister will be here at two o'clock to answer questions? Are we not entitled to pose questions?

Mr. Speaker: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Sure it is.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Having had the courtesy extended to him to allow the Minister to speak, it seems to me appropriate that he should show the same courtesy to the Chair.

Mr. Riis: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: If someone has a point or order to raise, it will be appropriate to raise it at two o'clock.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m., the House took recess.

---

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Speaker: I should advise the House that it has been our practice at second or third reading stage to grant the first speaker for the New Democratic Party a longer time to speak than the normal 20-minute period, if necessary. Is there unanimous consent to grant the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) more time if he needs it?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Nelson A. Riss (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague's generosity. I do not expect to need the extra time.

In his very flamboyant speech before lunch the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) went on for some time about a topic which I think most of us feel quite strongly about, that is, the criticism so many of us levelled at the previous Liberal Government for not creating the jobs this country needed at the time. I recall that the Progressive Conservative Opposition was equally outraged over the fact that unemployment levels were so high and things were so difficult. The amount of job creation taking place was abysmally small. However, the implication which flowed from what the Minister said, as well as from what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and others have said, is that more jobs have been created in the last 14 months than, presumably, in the previous 14 months under the Liberal Government. Goodness knows I do not want to be an apologist for the previous Liberal Government, but I want to put this very clearly on the record. In the 14 months which have passed since the election, there were indeed 415,000 new jobs added to the Canadian workforce. However, in the 14 months previous to the last election, under the Liberal Government, there were 416,000 jobs added to the workforce. If you are going to be technical about it, the Liberals were actually creating more jobs. I just wanted to set those facts out so that people do not think that somehow things have changed. We all agree that the Liberals made an abysmal attempt at job creation, but it turns out that the Tories have been even worse.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Riis: Indeed, shame on both sides for not creating enough jobs during very difficult times.

In my short remarks this afternoon regarding Bill C-84, an Act which introduces a number of changes to Canada's tax system, I want to talk about poverty in Canada. It is fair to say that during the 1970s, poverty in Canada was on the decline. On an annual basis, the number of people defined by Statistics Canada as having an income below the poverty level was actually going down year by year. Unfortunately, during the 1980s, this process was reversed and the number of poor is getting larger and larger. In 1984, some 4.3 million people in Canada were living below the poverty line as defined by the Government. In the next four years, the Canada Council on Social Development indicates that, as a result of many of the measures introduced in the last Budget by the Conservative Government, the number living in poverty will actually increase by 630,000. What that means is that the gap between the haves and the have-nots, the rich and the poor, is actually getting wider. More and more people are entering the poverty ranks than ever before, and it is now escalating at a rate which quite frankly is unprecedented since the 1930s.

One would then assume that the Government would take action to reverse this trend. That would be the only reasonable assumption to make. However, we have seen in the last Budget and in the tax measures we are discussing today quite the contrary. The average Canadians citizen will be much worse off as a result of these tax changes and the wealthier will actually be better off. To be more precise, let us consider an average family consisting of a mother, father and two children and assume that one of the spouses earns the income for that family. As a result of the increased taxes in this Budget, that family earning an annual income of $15,000 will actually lose $2,270 over the next five years. In other words, such a family will be much poorer in the next fives years as a result of this Budget.

If this family has an income of $35,000, it will also lose the considerable amount of $4,216 over the next five years as a result of increased taxes. However, the situation changes with upper-income earners. Those earning an income of over $80,000 will gain $5,662 in the next five years as a result of tax changes. The rich are getting richer and the middle class and poor of Canada are becoming poorer as a result of the provisions to change the tax system of Canada that we are discussing today.

There are serious problems with some of the provisions we are debating today. For example, there is the change to capital gains legislation. We have always been concerned that those people who derive their income from capital gains are only taxed on half while the other half of their income from capital gains is tax free. The Government is making the situation worse by allowing those who derive their income or part of their income from capital gains an exemption from capital gains tax on a lifetime accumulation of $500,000.

An individual who earns an income from capital gains will not have to pay income tax this year on $20,000. This increases yearly until it accumulates to $500,000. However, ordinary wage earners pay taxes at source as they always have, with very few deductions, loopholes or tax exemptions at their disposal. The heavier burden is being placed on the backs of working people in this country while those whose income is derived from capital gains will not pay any tax on a major portion of that income. Statistics show that only 4 per cent of Canadians declare capital gains on their income tax. This major provision, which is meant to revolutionize investment in Canada, will only benefit 4 per cent of Canadians.

Another provision for tax changes is the increase in the ceilings for RRSPs. The Government is saying that the amount people may set aside tax free at the end of the year for their retirement will be increased to $15,000 a year. However, what must one's income be to be eligible for this increase in exemption? It must be $86,000 a year. How many Canadians have incomes in excess of $86,000 so they may benefit from this provision? Furthermore, do these Canadians need help to provide for their retirement at a cost to Canadian taxpayers, at the cost of deficit increase, and at the cost of social programs? We cannot emphasize enough that the provisions of this Budget and its tax changes are only assisting a handful of upper income Canadians at the expense of ordinary Canadians.

The same can be said with respect to provisions affecting the corporate tax. The legislation assists the larger corporations rather than small and medium sized business. Even today, thanks to previous Liberal Governments, middle and small businesses actually have a higher effective tax rate than larger corporations. The corporate tax changes we are discussing are biased heavily in favour of large corporations at the expense of the small and medium sized business sector.

I received many petitions in the mail today from the constituency of Kamloops-Shuswap. My constituents have been complaining about the increase in gasoline sales tax. They believed that they would see a decrease in the price of gas at the pumps as a result of the decreasing price of oil on the world markets. However, on January 1 the tax on gasoline went up for everyone in the country. There is no doubt that this discriminates against certain Canadians, particularly those who live in regions of Canada where goods and foodstuffs must be transported long distances, and those Canadians must travel farther as opposed to Canadians in central Canada. It is essentially a tax on distance, which is a bias against western Canadians in such a case.

The Government has decided to increase sales tax at this sensitive time in our recovery. The Minister tells us that the Government will derive some $1.6 billion this year and next year from the increased sales tax and excise tax on gasoline which will proportionately have a more severe impact on lower income families. That $1.6 billion will come from the pockets, purses and wallets of low and middle income Canadians in order to compensate for massive tax breaks given to upper income earners and the larger corporate sector in many cases. This is a redistribution of income from the bottom to the top—a Robin Hood in reverse approach to taxation.

There is a trend in our tax system. The first Government Member who spoke stated that the Government was taking a new and clear direction. It is not so much a new direction, but I agree that it is perhaps an acceleration to a clear direction toward a tax system of consumption. It is a tax on disposable income with no tax or a deferral of tax on savings, interest and investments. We are moving to an era of tax on consumption, which is definitely biased in favour of those who obtain their income through capital gains from the stock markets, investments and savings. The savings and investments of those with large disposable incomes are untouched by the tax man.

Mr. Fennell: It goes to create jobs.

Mr. Riis: The Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell) says that it creates jobs. The Hon. Member believes that it will create jobs and I question whether it will create jobs, yet there is no way to know who is right. There is no accountability in our tax system. I challenge any Hon. Member to indicate how we can know whether these tax expenditures give us what we expect in return. Since there is no accountability, it is impossible to say whether or not taxing capital gains this year will cost $440 million in lost taxes.

Mr. Fennell: You know that is not true.

Mr. Riis: I am just taking this from the book given to me by the Minister of Finance. He says that it will cost $440 million this year. What will we get in return? If the Minister could guarantee that a loss of $440 million to the Treasury of the country will result in massive job creation or even a considerable amount of productivity, I would not be so concerned. However, there is absolutely no evidence that this will happen because there is no accountability in the tax system. It is wrong to add more loopholes year after year without knowing what we are getting in return for that lost revenue.

● (1420)

I know Mr. Speaker, you are asking yourself how much in lost revenue we are talking about, Mr. Speaker. What is our tax system costing the people of Canada? The Auditor General does now know. He looks carefully at the books and says: "This is costing us a great deal of money. All of these tax exemptions, loopholes, are costing us a lot of money, somewhere between $30 billion and $50 billion a year". Think of it, Mr. Speaker. The Auditor General cannot determine what it costs because there is no accountability.

I remember Mr. Lalonde, the Liberal Finance Minister, introduced what was called a scientific research and development tax credit in 1983. He said that it would result in all sorts of research and development. It was going to cost the taxpayers about $100 million to accomplish all of this research and development in new scientific experimentation and the like. After some analysis was done and a good deal of prodding by Opposition Members, it was found that it was costing us, at that time, at least $1.5 billion and increasing, approaching $2 billion. Only a few months earlier Mr. Lalonde had said it would cost about $100 million.

There was no accountability. Goodness knows if Opposition Members had not been doing their work and created enough pressure to expose this boondoggle, I cannot imagine what would be going on. Individuals were putting together shell companies and collecting from the federal Government $10 million, $15 million and in some cases as much as $42 million in cash and not doing anything with it. It was very fraudulant in some cases, but obviously it was a tax exemption that was a total mistake which had not been thought through carefully at all.

It is for these reasons that we decided as the New Democratic Party to carry out a probe of our tax system. We are calling it Tax Probe 86. A number of members of the NDP caucus will be travelling across the country talking to knowledgeable people in the various areas of the economy, the forest industry, the agricultural industry, the small business sector, women's and various social groups, tax experts, tax lawyers and advisers in an attempt to identify which of the tax expenditures up to perhaps $50 billion—of lost revenue—is giving us something in return.

We need to establish some accountability for our present tax system. Is our tax system fair? I do not think anybody would say it is fair today, but how can we make our system more fair, more accountable, more effective and more efficient? That is the mandate that we are taking upon ourselves as a result of our initiative called Tax Probe 86.

I suppose if there is one thing we must do, it is to take tax reform and place it more on the public policy agenda and perhaps try to place it on the political agenda of the country.

I remember that in 1984 during the federal election campaign the NDP suggested that we should have a minimum tax. Some people in Canada are making incomes of $400,000 and $600,000 plus, and many are not paying income tax, not even a cent. We felt that that was wrong. We felt that it was indicative of an unfair tax system. Ronald Reagan in the United States moved to change that. We felt that Canada should do the same. The Liberals agreed, and even the Prime Minister agreed during the debates in the 1984 election. The Government did introduce a minimum tax, but it is a disaster, Mr. Speaker.

The minimum tax makes the tax system much more complex. Here is a Government that was going to simplify the tax system, yet one of its first changes was to make the tax system much more complicated. There is much more red tape for small business. The Government needs to hire an additional number of people for Revenue Canada to read these doubled up tax forms. The Government is increasing the bureaucracy of Revenue Canada.

Consider what the Government is doing. It is saying that all of those exemptions that upper income earners have used over the years can be parlayed over the next seven years. It is like exemption or loop-hole averaging. If you cannot use the exemption this year, use it next year or the following year. Financial writers and tax experts writing in the various learned journals are pulling out their hair and saying that this is going to cause an absolute financial adviser's nightmare. What are the implications of rolling over all of these exemptions year after year and parlaying them?

In an effort to introduce a minimum tax, the Government has created more and more fuzz, with more complexity. It is changing the tax system more than ever into an network of impossible passages which the average taxpayer must attempt to manipulate.

Bill C-84 is a reflection of the Government's last Budget introduced a few months ago. It reflects an attempt by the Government to improve the situation of Canada as perceived by the Minister of Finance. He gave a speech to the Canadian Economic Association in Montreal in May, 1985, and said at that time, "No matter how we define the term, Canada has an acute shortage of rich people". The Minister has done his best, using the tax system, to assist more and more people to become richer. One could argue in an academic debate about the merits of doing that, but not at the expense of ordinary Canadians, not at the expense of small business, farmers and fishermen. But that is exactly what Bill C-84 does. It provides tax breaks and, in some cases, almost a financial bonanza for a handful of upper income earners and large corporations. For the average Canadian it imposes additional tax burdens at a time when that is exactly the wrong initiative to be taking. We should be encouraging people to use their disposable incomes to assist and invest in local business, to purchase needed goods and services in local communities helping the small business sector to expand, develop and create jobs. To take disposable income out of the pockets and wallets of ordinary Canadians to pay off the bank bail-outs and to pay for the huge new exemptions being given to a handful of upper income Canadians is wrong. That is the reason we are going to oppose this legislation when we vote.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there any questions and comments? If not, we will resume debate. The Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, the Official Opposition has said, since the Budget was brought down that it is an unfair Budget. We have also felt constrained to use the very harsh word sneaky about it. That is not a word one would use lightly. Unfortunately, it is a word that is appropriate for the process with which we are dealing.

When I talk first about the unfairness of the Budget, I refer primarily to the deindexation of the personal income tax system on the one hand, and the capital gains tax exemption on the other.

Deindexing the personal tax system will quietly rob thousands of low and middle income earners whereas the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption is an up-front, no strings gift to a wealthy minority. Personal tax deindexation is targeted and calculated to strip billions of dollars from low and middle income individuals and families, whereas the capital gains exemption is completely open-ended, not guaranteed to benefit Canada in any way, except to fatten the wallets of the well-to-do.

• (1430)

This measure could have been targeted in ways which would make it more acceptable.It could have been targeted to owners of family farms or to owners of family businesses. It could have been targeted, as the amendment of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) would have done, to Canadian businesses. None of that was done. We have an open-ended system from which people can benefit even if their gains come from art, jewellery, boats, condominiums in Florida or racehorses in Kentucky. There is no requirement that people benefiting from this should invest a dime in any Canadian business or do anything for the Canadian economy.

Whereas the personal tax deindexation will simply extract more tax from those least able to pay, the capital gains exemption will put more money into the pockets and bank accounts of those with the highest incomes. In fact, 64 per cent of the benefits of this program will go to 4 per cent of Canadians, those with the highest incomes. Because the personal tax deindexation, like the sales and excise tax increases, is broadly based with a cumulative effect, its negative effect is not readily apparent. This is why we have felt obliged to use the harsh word "sneaky".

The Minister finally introduced his Budget. As our Leader pointed out earlier today, it was the longest interval in Canadian history between an election and the introduction of a Budget. However, when the Minister finally introduced his Budget following, we were told, extensive consultations, he did not say that he was introducing an across the board tax increase of 3 per cent. What was quietly slid in was the deindexation of the personal tax exemption. Deindexation means that the Government is proposing to do away with the indexation of personal tax exemptions except when the Consumer Price Index exceeds 3 per cent. When the CPI exceeds 3 per cent, the Government will still be taxing that first 3 per cent. As the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount explained, the effect is to transfer the assets of Canadians over to the Government in large amounts. The actions of the Government have belied the rhetoric about fiscal responsibility. It will amass $4.3 billion in 1990-91 through this measure. When we ask why the Government is leaning so heavily on low and middle-income earners for tax revenues, we are told that it is important to reduce the deficit and that fiscal responsibility must be brought to bear. We are all concerned about the deficit, but when we look at the large amounts in our deficits, we find that the two worrisome amounts are the payments to service the national debt and the expenditures on unemployment insurance. Clearly any responsible attempt to reduce the deficit must be primarily based upon job creation, because if people are employed, not only do they not need to draw unemployment insurance, but they are able to pay more tax, they are able to purchase more, and they are able to stimulate the economy and continue the consumer-led recovery we are just starting to see.

However, in the Budget do we see anything that will encourage job creation? No. In the capital gains exemption we see a measure which will cost the Government billions of dollars in foregone revenue with no guarantee whatever of any return. Surely it is inconsistent for the Government to tax low and middle-income earners within an inch of their lives, while at the same time it gives lavish and unsolicited tax breaks to those at the higher income levels. For the Government to hand out a tax give-away of this magnitude without any requirement for benefit to the Canadian economy is not only inconsistent but is foolish.

Millions of Canadians have been told by the Government that it cannot afford to give them protection from inflation and that they must help pay to bring down the deficit. Then the Government offers a $500,000 capital gains exemption, a tax bonanza for the few who are wealthy enough to take advantage of it, and we are told to have faith that this money will find its way into the Canadian economy and will create jobs. However, people with $15,000 incomes will be paying 36 per cent more in taxes over the next four years. When we add in all the measures in the Budget—higher sales taxes, new sales taxes and reduced inflation protection—they will certainly pay, but it is not at all clear where these tax revenues will be applied.

What will the Government do with all the money it is taking out of the pockets of middle-income Canadians? Perhaps this tax revenue will replace the billions of dollars the Government is giving away to the multinational oil companies, amounting to $2.5 billion in 1990-91. We have heard great statements of faith from the Government that investment in the oil patch will create jobs, but it has not explained how.

Perhaps the Government will apply these consumer tax revenues to the almost billion dollar tax exemption it gave to Olympia & York, or maybe the Government will use this taxpayers' money to make up for some of its ill-advised investment as a result of the two bank failures which will cost Canadian taxpayers somewhere in the order of $2 billion.

The point is that in none of these multimillion dollar giveaways did the Government appear to have deficit reduction or fiscal responsibility in mind.

We are not fooled and taxpayers are not fooled by a Government which says that it must have tax on pet food, even if it is for a guide-dog for a blind person, in order to help reduce the deficit, and that it must reduce protection from inflation for the poor and middle-income earners to help reduce the deficit, when it proceeds to give away millions of dollars to large corporations and to the wealthy without any guarantee of benefit to the economy. There is no question that such measures are not only unfair and inconsistent but, I would suggest, they are not even sensible. All this money which is being taken out of the domestic economy could be used to help our domestic situation. Low and middle-income earners do not stash away money in savings. They spend their money on the necessities of life; they keep the economy going. As the Government blindly plans to reduce domestic demand, what is its plan to replace it? Does it think that it can be replaced with exports? What kind of faith is it operating on, and why is it not telling us what is its plan? We suspect that the Government does not have one.

Investment outside Canada is being encouraged by another measure which is not specifically described in Bill C-84 but which remains to be dealt with by regulation under this Bill, that is, the new proposal to allow a larger proportion of investment funds to be invested outside Canada. The plan, as announced in the budget papers, is that for every dollar that a pension fund invests in small business in Canada it will be allowed to invest $3 outside the country. This plan has not been particularly well accepted by pension fund managers. Pension fund managers tend to be cautious in investments, and rightly so.

Because of the very nature of small business, which is entrepreneurial risk taking, there will be problems in finding small business in which to invest that meets the prudent standards of investment by pension funds. Nevertheless, the Government claims that it is helping to provide money for small business. We are told in the budget papers—again it remains to be done by regulation—that pension funds can set up small business investment corporations to this end.

The pension fund managers are not enthusiastic. We had a recommendation before the Finance Committee which objected to the linking of these two objectives. The pension fund managers pointed out that they were in favour of investing in small business when it is prudent, that, in fact, they do this to a large extent, but that they could not see the amounts proposed by the Government as being viable or practical. While they would like some freedom in some cases to invest outside of Canada, they did not want this particular linkage.

Even now there is pension money earmarked for venture capital investment, but it is sitting in short-term securities waiting for the right opportunities, because the right opportunities are not easy to find, that is, right in terms of being a good investment opportunity, but also one that meets the particular requirements for caution and prudence that are involved in dealing with pension funds. The fear among trustees, of course, is always that if they lose money because of a risky investment they could be sued, I think rightly so because people's pension funds, their retirement security, are particularly important to them and not something that can be replaced. If you make a bad investment when you are young, hopefully you can recover it somewhere else, but if a bad investment has taken away your retirement security when you are 70, you are really left in a very vulnerable position. This is why pension fund managers have been—and I hope will continue to be—extremely cautious about investments.

The Government has told us that there could be $10 billion for small busienss as a result of this measure, but what we are hearing from the industry is that at least 95 per cent of all pension fund assets will remain in traditional asset classes.

Again we have a measure that the Government put forward apparently without thought, without adequate consultation, and with a lot of smoke and mirrors. It declared it was doing splendid things for small business, but in fact it is not doing so. What it could have done for small business was to have left purchasing power in the hands of low and middle-income Canadians.

This Bill, together with other measures, the sales tax and so on, will result in $11.5 billion being pulled out of the domestic economy. That is a lot of purchasing power which could have done a lot to stimulate demand for small business.

We see before us a Bill that seems to be based on poor economics, one that gives advantages to the wealthy but attacks the lower middle-income earner. It is a Bill that cobbles on a minimum tax in an attempt to show some concern for fairness, but cobbles it on to a complex measure in a way that increases the complexity. It is a sad Bill, it does nothing for Canada, and the only comfort is that since the Minister is, we hear, going to bring in a new Budget soon, perhaps in fact some of these measures here will be cancelled out then.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments.

The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin).

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker, I heard a comment that reducing the deficit should be based on job creation.

Would the Hon. Member mind expressing her satisfaction with the Conservative Government for having created 450,000 jobs since it came to power and could she explain what caused these jobs to be created? Perhaps she could mention the policies of the Conservative Government and also explain why the previous Liberal Government created one-fifth as many jobs in five years.

[English]

Miss Nicholson: We are dealing with a Conservative Government's Bill C-84 and I can understand that the Hon. Member, who is a concerned Member, is embarrassed by this Bill and would like to shift the emphasis somewhere else. If I were in his place, so would I.

• (1450)

[Translation]

Mr. François Gérin (Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's answer is that they have no answer ... They are absolutely incompetent and cannot do otherwise but admit to the fact.

Certainly, to reduce the deficit we must create jobs. You heard the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) saying yesterday, as he did all week, that 450,000 new jobs were created across Canada, including Quebec. That is a fact. And don't tell me there is no connection with the Bill now before the House which proposes to implement budgetary measures drafted early last year. The jobs are there, you must admit that.

It is no sin to recognize one's mistakes. In fact, the previous Liberal Government ought to apologize to the Canadian people for accumulating a deficit so large that today we have to spend nearly $30 billion on interests payments alone. And if instead of paying this amount every year we had the $30 billion to spend more on the elderly and our families, just imagine what that would represent. I say this because I get the impression the Liberals have never bothered to look at it this way.

For instance, we know that in 1986-87, servicing the public debt is expected to cost us $28.865 billion. Family allowances are expected to cost $2.5 billion. Old Age Security, including the Guaranteed Income Supplement and the Spouse's Allowance, will cost $12.985 billion this year.

You could take all the family allowances and all the old age security pensions in Canada and multiply them by two, and this would only add up to the interest payments on the debt, the Liberal debt. That is a fact, and you ought to realize that.

Take away this responsability, remove this requirement to pay interest on the debt, and we will then be able to triple old age security pensions and guaranteed income supplements, and triple spouse's allowances and family allowances as well.

I heard the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) say in his speech earlier today that he wanted to remove the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption. What about Canadian farmers? Not a single Liberal member has mentioned Canadian farmers, who are now in trouble, thanks to the Liberals. None of them mentioned the $500,000 exemption. Canadian farmers will be thrilled to hear you want to get rid of the exemption. You did not mention, for instance, the people who used it this year because they are entitled to use the full amount of the exemption as of the date on which the Budget was brought down. In my riding, I am going to send them all a letter explaining that the Liberals are asking to have this exemption removed, which would put severe financial pressure on our farmers.

How come the Leader of the Opposition, your leader—for a while anyway—did not say a word about farmers in his remarks? How come no Member of the Official Opposition even mentioned the provisions benefiting agricultural producers? Not one of them did. They simply could not care less. They drove the country and its agricultural producers right into the ground, but today they wash their hands of it. It is unfair, absolutely unfair.

The small business bonds—

Mr. Gauthier: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is entitled to make comments, but he asked several questions. Might we not at least have the decency to give the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) an opportunity to respond within the 10-minute period allocated for questions and comments?

Should the Hon. Member seek the floor later on, he will have our undivided attention.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: At the beginning there was a period for questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) asked a question and the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) answered. Then I asked if there were further comments and questions, but nobody rose. Therefore we continued with the debate and the Hon. Member is now speaking to the Bill.

Mr. Gérin: The small business bonds . . . Not one of you talked about the benefits to Canadian farmers. We are extending this program for another two years precisely to give an opportunity to Canadian producers. Close to $700 million in small business bonds were issued under this program. Sixty per cent of loans outstanding were made to farmers and the rest to small businesses, whether incorporated or not. Are you after them?

In short the Government . . . We can all appreciate today that the financial plan introduced in May 1985 has already paid handsome dividends to the Canadian people and to Canadian agricultural producers. If the number of jobs created since then in Quebec and the rest of Canada is any indication, as is the satisfaction expressed by Canadian agricultural producers, the Government is restoring in Canada the kind of economy we need to honour the commitments made by the previous administration, with the resulting deficit which, in other circles, might be described as criminal.

Mr. Speaker, this capital gain provision will cost $550 million for 1985. This capital gain provision will cost $700 million to the public treasury in 1986, and a lot of that money will go to Quebec and other Canadian agricultural producers.

As to the two-year extension of the small business bonds, it will also cost some $7 million, 60 per cent of which will benefit Canadian producers. These are positive measures and, next Wednesday, Canadian dairy producers will probably hear about the new long-term dairy policy for Canada. I am anxious to hear what the Liberals, who were unable to do anything about it during their last four-year term, will have to say about it. Mr. Speaker, those are the reasons why I support the Budget.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the speech of the Hon. Member and I have two questions for him. The Hon. Member mentioned the jobs that were created in the first number of months that the Tory Government was in office. When his Leader was at Meach Lake in the early part of the month, he said that the creation of 415,000 jobs since the Conservative Government took office in September 1984, its first 14 months, is probably a record. Of course, he used the word "probably" because in the last 14 months of the Liberal regime, 416,000 jobs were created. In actuality, the Liberals created more jobs in the same length of time.

Would the Hon. Member have a comment to make in terms of the Government's record on job creation? Second, could he elaborate for us on how the capital gains provision in the Budget will result in expansion in Canada's farm communities?

[Translation]

Mr. Gérin: I suggest my hon. colleague should forget about the last month and remember the last five years of the Liberal administration to see just how many jobs it created. On the basis of his question, I wonder if the Liberal and NDP Members are still bedfellows or whether they are trying to get together again. However, we only have to look at the last five years. If we consider the period between 1980 up to September 4, 1984, we realize that the Liberals created altogether fewer than 100,000 jobs. Such was the performance of the Liberal administration. On the other hand, I support several of your remarks. At the time, you blamed severely the Liberal Party for allowing the deficit to grow unchecked and I felt at the time that you were right to criticize it. The Liberals are responsible for not creating jobs and allowing the situation to deteriorate. That is why we are making every effort to try and curb the deficit.

I feel therefore that our performance over the past 15 months compares favorably with that of the Liberals during their 20 years in office. If they had been allowed to continue five more years, I wonder what would have happened to Canada. It would be alltogether bankrupt. That is the main point. My first concern, when I decided to get involved in politics, was to try and give Canada a financial direction which made sense. The situation was getting out of hand.

It is true, and I am dealing here with your second comment, that to help the economy recover from the frightening carelessness which characterized the last years of the Liberal administration, we shall have to take other steps, and the idea of the Conservative Government is to encourage the private sector. We feel that the private sector is more in a position to create jobs. By allowing the private sector to play its part, a less cumbersome and centralized Government apparatus than the one created by the Liberals should normally give Canada a richer and enormously more promising economy, which would make it possible for the Government to share the wealth with the needy and less affluent in Canada. That is the reason why we should be allowed to continue governing Canada for a number of terms, so that we may eventually have the money we need to implement the programs suggested by the other two socialist parties in this House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask a simple Friday afternoon question. Far be it from me to guarantee that the Government party will be able to stay in power very long. If it were up to me, that party would be out of a job tomorrow. However, the Hon. Member may dream if he wants to.

I would like to remind him that, in his speech today, the Leader of my party said that he is against the $500,000 exemption which allows some people to make foreign investments and have capital gains that will not create any jobs in Canada but can still be used to obtain a tax rebate. We find this completely unjustifiable. Indeed, the amendment against which the Hon. Member voted on Wednesday, the day before yesterday, would have guaranteed that these $500,000 in capital gains were invested in Canada and that people were not allowed to make profits on race horses, condominiums in Miami, or any other foreign investment. The Hon. Member must admit that this proposal made sense. The Right Hon. Leader of the Liberal Party never said that the farmers could not transfer ownership of their farms or assets to their children without paying any taxes. This was provided in the Liberal program, and I would like the Hon. Member to be more honest.

[English]

Mr. Dick: You did not do it in the 22 years you were in power.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Gérin: I am glad to see that the spokesman of the Liberal Party is beginning to recognize that certain provisions of the legislation are valid and useful, and I would like the Leader of the Opposition to be informed that, within the Liberal Party itself, there are those who agree with some of the things proposed by the Conservative Government. If the Leader of the Opposition knows the names of Canadians who take the money from capital gains—

Mr. Gauthier: Income tax information is not made public.

Mr. Gérin: —to invest elsewhere, he is perhaps better informed than I am, because contrary to the Leader of the Opposition and other Liberal Members, I do not have an office in Bay Street.

Mr. Gauthier: Me neither!

Mr. Gérin: I live among small farmers who are trying to survive. They want this $500,000 exemption and I shall do everything in my power to ensure that it will continue to be available to these farmers and small businesses. I do not think that a company like Power Corporation would need a $500,000 capital gains exemption. The Hon. Members should think about it. Where I come from, it is the small businesses which, instead of selling their assets and putting their savings in a nest egg, are selling their shares and buying something else and creating economic activity because they are encouraged by the new economic possibilities provided by the Conservative Government. That is what has brought about the creation of 450,000 new jobs. If you do not believe it, you should begin by looking at what you did to place us in such an impossible situation. You should be glad to see that all the economic indicators now say that we were right.

[English]

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member mentioned in his speech, and in his response as well, that he is looking for a financial plan which makes sense. I assume he is portraying this particular Budget and this particular Bill as such a plan. Because I have trouble making sense out of the theory which is behind the current Government, which is a theory similar to that put forward by the Liberals, can the Hon. Member explain why his Government is saying that tax breaks should be given to large income earners, corporations and invididuals, which will act as investment incentives, and then because the Government is short of tax revenue it must borrow money which these same people provide to the Government, with interest? The Government then ends up with not only a deficit and forgone tax revenues from these wealthy Canadians, but it rewards these parties by providing a very good interest rate. Why do we not just collect the tax from them in the first instance and avoid running up these big deficits? Why do we persist in exacerbating a wrong decision?

[Translation]

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker, I think my colleague is referring to what is forthcoming, that is a minimum income tax. We said we would have a minimum income tax. So the Conservative Government is the first Government to provide for a minimum tax on incomes exceeding $50,000. The first Government to do so. And you the socialists over there, I am very anxious to hear your reaction. The first Government to so. And you the socialists to do so is a Conservative Government. How can you say we are protecting the rich? We are imposing a minimum income. We are the first Government to do so. This is a fine example, and I tell you: Think it over during the weekend.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The time allotted for questions and comments is over. The Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) on debate.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I wish to be fair in this debate.

Mr. Dick: You never have been before, why start now?

Mr. Langdon: I concede that it has been difficult to stick to this commitment, faced with the foolish economic policies of the Government. However, in this case, I want to start my remarks with a sense of fairness which recognizes that the problems are difficult.

The problems which face our country are difficult, as are the problems which face the United States. In fact, the problems which face the entire western world are difficult, in terms of trying to come to grips with a series of extremely large deficits which affect most countries. These are difficult times in terms of a series of interest rate changes which are almost out of the control of the national jurisdiction of our governments. The problems are difficult because there faces us a series of competitive moves by large corporations which, frankly, look to governments for tax breaks and benefits of every possible kind.

All of this is being played off against the backdrop of a liquidity crisis, a crisis which threatens the bankruptcy of not just those Canadian banks which bit the dust in this past year but a whole set of banks which recognize that the large loans they made to Third World and other countries have left them in a very exposed position. It is not an easy time to be a Finance Minister at the start of 1986. In that respect I offer my sympathy to our present Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). However, it is especially difficult to be a Finance Minister at the beginning of 1986 when, in addition to these basic given problems, we are carrying on with a set of ideological blinkers which make it impossible for us to try to tackle the reality of the challenge which faces us.

That is what faces this Government now. Because of the massive set of promises which it made across the country in its irresponsible search for political power, there is a whole host of expenditure commitments to which this Government is now committed. Because of the close relationship with the corporate sector, which has always characterized the Conservative Party, there is a complete tying of hands as far as trying to do something about the revenue side of the picture. Frankly, Mr. Speaker, we get Budgets which are abortions, which do not respond to the realities of the problems which face the country and which do not look for savings in areas where it is legitimate to search and which ignore the possibilities of getting increased revenue from corporate sources in ways which are absolutely basic, straightforward and fair. The consequence of these ideological blinders is that this Government finds itself not fairly putting new burdens on the corporate sector but instead, unfairly giving new give-aways to that corporate sector. It is unfairly giving new gifts and new benefits which do not have as their objective an attempt to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of the operation of the private sector.

We have a Government composed of members who cannot even be good Conservatives because of the bankruptcy of the campaign they ran for power. There is a counter-approach to that which this Government is following. It is a responsible approach. It is an approach which we as a Party have advocated in this House of Commons. It is an approach which our finance critic has specifically outlined and which we in the action group put forward last April. It is an approach which clearly could take us back to a sense of fiscal responsibility and economic seriousness. It recognizes, first, that a tremendous number of the tax breaks we give are a total waste, not just in terms of their unfairness but in terms of the fact that they give to the rich who do not need the money and who will spend it elsewhere in the world. They are tax breaks which are totally without any economic rationale and which do not face the structural problems which confront this country in 1986. Those are the tax breaks which this Government should eliminate in its next Budget.

I can name some of those tax breaks. A company can borrow money from one of our large banks and can take over another company with absolutely no benefit to the country, to the workers or to the community. It can then write off the interest which it has to pay on the large loan it has taken to pay for this takeover as a tax benefit, which means that the very people who are suffering in many cases from these takeovers are paying out of their tax dollar for the tax break which is allowing them to be victimized. To put it bluntly, the Darcy McKeoughs of this world are paying for their own funeral. I will not shed many tears for Darcy McKeough but I ask what sense it makes in our society to have a tax break like that set in place? What sense does it make to put into effect, as did the past Liberal Government, the scientific research tax credit which has turned into the scientific tax research discredit? It discredits the whole notion of tax benefits for the corporate sector. What possible sense can tax breaks like that make? What possible sense can it make to have a series of benefits set up in the tax system for the large scale corporate sector without a single set of guarantees on the part of the companies which enjoy those tax breaks that they will in fact make a contribution to this country through those tax breaks?

On the other hand, what possible benefit can it be to this country to put a new tax into place on poor and middle income Canadians which will require them to take money out of their pockets which would normally go to small businesses, which in turn would create jobs in their community? Instead, that money goes to make up for these corporate tax breaks. What sort of logic from the point of view of either fairness or some kind of economic sense of effectiveness can be achieved by this sort of tax system? The answer is very clear; none.

We have seen study after study of our tax system which all say in effect that Canada is the greatest mugs game the corporate sector of this world has. It is the greatest poaching ground for fast buck artists from all over the world to come streaming into this country and take advantage of our people. I talked this week with a reporter from the Calgary Herald about the scientific research tax credit. He said that that tax credit has been something which his research shows has been taken advantage of by over 200 American and other foreign entrepreneurs who have come into this country to set up shell companies in order to take advantage of our tax system. It is quite possible that they will no longer be able to take full advantage of our tax system because at least we managed to grab the horse's tail as it ran out of the empty barn, but even so, there is still the major question as to whether or not we are going to be able to get these people. According to sources of the reporter at the Calgary Herald the Minister of National Revenue has decided to search after these scam companies with just income tax personnel and only under the Income Tax Act. That means that there can be no subpoenas issued outside of this country. There can be no use of the RCMP to do an investigation outside of this country. These fast buck artists who have come in and exploited our country's tax system can quite possibly get off scot-free. There is no logic to that whatsoever. Not to me, not to anyone in this House of whatever Party, not to anyone in the country regardless of the Party they support.

We have to somehow get things right. We have to turn it around. We have to put the tax burden where it belongs, on people and companies who have the capacity to pay. Those of us who have the capacity to pay are not going to be upset about that. My good supporter in the Windsor area, William Tupperman, who owns a great set of furniture stores throughout that part of southwestern Ontario, has no compunction about paying a fair share of taxes. The professionals who vote for us in Amherstburg have no problem with paying fair taxes. What outrages them, what makes them fiercely angry, is to see people earning exactly the same amount of money as they are and taking advantage of loophole after loophole after loophole while escaping their fair share of taxes. This Budget, with its $500,000 capital gains scam, makes it even worse. That is a scam without any control or regulation. It is not even like a MURB. Despite the fact that a MURB might be unfair and open only to certain professional groups, it at least had to be for something here in this country which would create a physical asset in which people could live. However, in the case of this exemption it is quite possible for capital gains to be created on yachts in Florida, jewellery purchased in Mexico, skins collected from Africa and commodity dealings in Chicago, all of which have absolutely no connection with the real economy of this country. These kinds of capital gains are totally useless to the Canadian people and our economy. Yet we have here, prancing happily and smiling gaily, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) saying that this is something which will help Canada. It is going to help the rich and, by doing so, delegitimatize even further our tax system.

I suspect that each of us in this House knows of small business people desperately in need of help. These people will create dozens of jobs if they get that help. They are the ones who should be getting help from this Government, not just because of fairness but because if we continue these tax boondoggles and scams it will be simply unbelievable when Members of the Conservative Party stand up and talk about deficit reduction. The Canadian people will see deficit reduction as simply a way to hide the fact that they are hurting the poor and helping the rich.

This has to change. If it is not that Government that makes the change, I tell you it will be this Party that will make the change.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: People in this country are furious. They are so upset about the tax system and its lack of fairness that they are willing—I pity my friend from Kamloops-Shuswap who may have to be the next Minister of Finance—to give us a chance to fight for tax fairness. I look forward to the first Budget from my colleague from Kamloops-Shuswap. He will for the first time give us a Budget aimed at fairness, financial responsibility and equity for the future of this country and for good.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments? If not, we will resume debate.

[Translation]

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, several months—

An Hon. Member: Will you be talking about insurance?

Mr. Gagliano: We will deal with insurance on Monday. Several months have gone by since the 1985 Budget, and being the critic for the Liberal Party in matters relating to small- and medium-sized businesses, I found it essential to prepare a detailed analysis of the impact on Canadian economic growth of the major proposals put forward by the Conservative Government.

The Government has focused its economic strategies on the creation of so-called favourable climates, rather than initiatives directly impacting this country's economic life. The Government discharges its responsibilities by suggesting that the capital gains tax exemption and the releasing for investment of the money held in RRSPs and other pension funds would have a positive, moving effect on the whole Canadian economy.

Mr. Speaker, since May last two banks have failed. There has been the insurance crisis, and we should be looking at the last statistical report to see how this Government is collecting our taxes. We have seen an increase of nearly half a billion dollars and it was not individuals but mainly companies that had the opportunity to re-establish their income tax payments.

It is imperative in my view that we make a thorough analysis of those measures because they are the cornerstone of the 1985 Budget and they shed a good light on the future economic trends of this Government.

The Budget provides that individuals will be entitled to a lifetime capital gains tax exemption of $500,000. Already, 50 per cent of capital gains were not taxable. This measure, therefore, is introducing a $250,000 tax exemptions.

The Minister of Finance figures that the $500,000 tax exemption on capital gains will result for the federal treasury in a tax expenditures of $550 million in 1985, $700 million in 1986, and starting from 1990, annual tax expenditures of about $1.2 billion a year.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote a few figures for the purposes of this debate. For the first fiscal year for which complete data are available, that is 1982, some 393,000 Canadian taxpayers reported capital gains in the order of $3 billion.

• (1530)

Taxable capital gains exceeded $1.6 billion, while deductible losses totalled a little less than $240 million. Net taxable capital gains, which in 1982 totalled $1.373 billion, plus 63 per cent of the value of net capital gains, were declared by individuals earning more than $60,000 per year. And nearly one-quarter of the net capital gains was acquired by taxpayers earning more than $250,000 per year.

People in the highest income tax brackets obviously stand to benefit most from changes in capital gains taxation. However, if we look at the loans statistics for 1980, we see that over 94 per cent of net capital gains was realized in real estate transactions, and we all know, Mr. Speaker, that changing the ownership of a residential building does not create jobs, except for the amount that goes to the lawyer who draws up the contract and maybe the real estate agent, if there is one, if he gets a commission, but that does not create jobs, not even temporary ones.

Only $72 million in net capital gains was generated by capital invested in companies. These figures reveal only part of the picture, since it is the sum of capital losses and gains. In fact, in absolute terms, nearly all income brackets lost money on capital invested in shares, with the exception of those earning $100,000 and over, who made considerable gains. It is not the average Canadian who creates jobs or is going to be able to take advantage of the capital gains tax exemption. It is always the people who earn $100,000 or more.

In 1982, 21,000 taxpayers earning more than $100,000 declared a net capital gain of $417 million from the sale of shares. Only 21,000 taxpayers, Mr. Speaker, earning over $100,000 per year, and these are not average Canadians, these are all people earning more than $100,000 per year. If the budgetary measures proposed by the Conservative Government are supposed to promote investment in small businesses, this pool of 21,000 people would potentially be the primary source of investment capital. Since 1973, profits generated by risk capital in the United States worked out to an average of 23 per cent. These profits were mainly in the form of capital gains. If the $417 million just referred to come from venture capital investments and generate the same kind of profits, the capital gains tax exemption will produce an after-tax profit increase of 17.25 to 23 per cent, or a real increase of 33 per cent in investment income.

Those figures presuppose that roughly $1.8 billion in venture capital are now in circulation and that a 33 per cent after-tax income increase would boost the venture capital pool by about 10 per cent. This would free $180 million which would be available for venture capital investments. I would point out however that the $1.8 billion figure might be too high, considering the fact that the United States had $5.8 billion in venture capital in 1982, while we only have $1.8 billion.

Still one should not forget that in an ideal situation where $180 million would be available—10 per cent of $1.8 billion—investments would have to be spread out over several years, if only because the capital gains tax exemption will be introduced on a gradual basis. It has been claimed that a $10,000 capital investment in a small business creates one permanent job. Were this assumption to become reality, we might expect only 18,000 new jobs. Those 18,000 jobs spread over a number of years will however cost $1.2 billion a year to the federal treasury beginning in 1990, or $68,000 a year for each job created. We have to keep in mind that income losses are cumulative, and therefore each new job will cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

I am firmly convinced that the projected figure of 18,000 jobs is too high because of the following factors. First, I suggest it is overly optimistic to expect one permanent new job for each $10,000 capital investment. A more realistic figure would be $20,000, so the number of new jobs created would be reduced by half.

Second, in the Budget the Government has eliminated the possibility for an individual to deduct his capital losses from his general income. This strongly increases the risk associated with investment in a small business. This increased risk incurred by the investor will probably limit considerably the positive spin-offs expected because of the increase in after-tax profits from the investments.

Third, Mr. Speaker, as I have already mentioned, the bulk of capital gains comes from real estate transactions. The Budget will make this type of investment still more attractive, compared with a risk capital investment. We should therefore witness a major exodus of capital toward the real estate industry at the expense of industrial and commercial ventures. After several months, we can witness the impact of that on the market, because it is very easy nowadays to buy an apartment building. So far, the Budget has favoured speculation but not increased small business investments, which foster job creation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I should like to deal briefly with the registered retirement saving plans. The second aspect of the PC strategy in the area of job creation and investment is based on channelling part of retirement plan funds into small businesses.

In a document published at the same time as Budget 1985, the Minister of State for Small Businesses (Mr. Bissonnette) supported the idea that some $20 billion could be used to invest in small businesses, inview of the fact that the RRSPs and the Registered Retirement Savings Funds account together for a capital pool of some $40 billion. In this document, the PC Government claims that since a total of $160 billion is now accumulated in pension funds, up to $11 billion could be invested in small businesses. An objective analysis of these two investment vehicles will show that the figures put forward by the PC Government are clearly unrealistic and even fallacious.

The Budget would like to encourage RRSP contributors to invest up to 50 per cent of their funds in shares of private Canadian corporations. RRSP contributors, however, must have no connection with the firms in which they would like to invest or with their owners. They can invest directly in small businesses, but not in small businesses belonging to themselves, their relatives or business relations. The provisions concerning arm-length investments are extremely rigid and restricting.

Mr. Speaker, how can anyone suggest that a Canadian investor will be willing to invest in a small business which relies only on the owner himself? There are no board members. The investor cannot rely on five-year financial statements, but only on the ability of one person.

• (1540)

That is the reality; that is what a small business represents.

Mr. Speaker, instead of helping such people by saying "Go and get some capital, use your own pension fund and take 50 per cent to invest", the Government says: "No, you cannot touch it." The Government is willing to trust investors and to say: "There is no limit as far as capital gains are concerned; you can even sell a property in Florida or Italy without paying any capital gains tax." However, when it comes to small businesses, it is not the same story. The Government has to put a stop to it because everyone could take advantage of this provision. Such is the climate of confidence which this Conservative Government is trying to create.

The studies on the creation of businesses in Canada and the United States clearly show that the major sources of financing for small businesses are the businessman himself, his family, his friends and his business relations. Indeed, that is quite normal and understandable. Access to small businesses is always very limited for the investor. Very often, the investor can only rely on his own evaluation of the integrity of the businessman based on his background and on the business contacts the investor has already had with him.

By systematically eliminating the possibility for the businessman himself, his family and business relations to invest in a company, the Government is flying in the face of a basic concept in the development of small businesses.

In addition, it must be pointed out that the benefits related to the investment of RRSP funds in small businesses are considerably reduced and probably eliminated by the capital gains exemption.

The capital gains produced by an RRSP are fully taxable. Even though the taxes due are different in the case of an RRSP, it would be surprising if an investor chose to pay taxes later rather than take advantage of the lifetime capital gains exemption. This exemption will therefore incite the average investor to invest in instruments which will provide non-taxable capital gains, that is gains from other sources than RRSPs. Such an investor will have every advantage in limiting his investments in RRSPs and instruments which will produce an assured annual income in the form of interests or dividends rather than capital gains.

Mr. Speaker, not only are we far from the $20 billion in investments forecast, but in practice, we shall probably see a major outflow of funds since investments in businesseswill no longer be attractive for investors in RRSPs.

Once again, the Conservative Government has chosen to put the emphasis on a program doomed to failure, but with effects that are rather counterproductive because of a bad overall economic strategy.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy that my colleague who spoke a few moments ago has come back. He referred to capital gains for farmers. We have nothing against that. We are for it. And even where small businesses are concerned, we have nothing against the extension of capital gains—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gagliano: Wait, you will learn something.

Conservatives are like that. Just like in the Muppet Show. One gets up and all the others applaud without knowing why. Wait, you will see what I mean.

We are not against the exemption for capital gains, providing they are invested in the job-generating economic sector. You want to reduce the deficit, but you are giving money away with the other hand, without making sure that jobs are created. That is what it is all about!

If the capital gains exemption is to create jobs, why not have restrictions requiring re-investment in Canadian business to create jobs? But no, you give it to all and sundry. That is the Conservative philosophy you were attempting to describe earlier. Well, here it is: What you give to the rich you take from the poor.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order! Questions and comments? I now recognize the Hon. Member for Megantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin).

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker, it is better to be deaf than to have to listen to such nonsense.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. We are resuming debate. I recognize the Hon. Member for Richelieu (Mr. Plamondon).

Mr. Louis Plamondon (Richelieu): Mr. Speaker, thank you for giving me an opportunity to speak to what I see as the most important matter facing this country today, and I refer to the rebuilding of our economy, a process we started as soon as we came to power in September 1984. All economic indicators show that what we have done up to now has been positive, and thanks to the removal of bandaid policies, all Canadians can already look to a better and, especially, far more satisfying future for our young people.

Mr. Speaker, Bill C-84, an Act to Amend the Income Tax Act, which is part of a series of Bills to enact the tax measures and other proposals announced in the May Budget, this Bill is one of the key instruments of the concept of rebuilding an economy devastated as a result of the irresponsibility of the previous Government. This Bill contains measures inspired by the principles of social justice and equity for all.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill contains draconian measures that will affect people with high incomes and our large financial institutions. It contains measures that the New-Liberal-Democratic Government of the past was always afraid to take, since despite their socialistic vocabulary, they served the interests of the far Right.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill shows, whatever the Official Opposition's irresponsible rhetoric may conclude, that our Government is acting in the interests of the needy and the middle class in this country. It is acting in an almost revolutionary spirit, as revolutionary as the actions, if not the words, of the previous government were reactionary and synonymous with stagnation.

Mr. Speaker, at this point, for the benefit of Canadians, I want to recapitulate what Bill C-84 has to offer this country.

First of all, the capital gains tax exemption. The Budget is proposing an important measure aimed at promoting risk-taking and investment in small and large businesses, and to help farmers—my colleague mentioned this point earlier—by offering a cumulative capital gains exemption of up to $500,000 during the lifetime of the taxpayer. This change will be an incentive to Canadians to set up new businesses and help small businesses expand.

The second element of this Bill which has hardly been mentioned in the debate until now is the labour-sponsored venture capital fund whose model was first established in Quebec with the co-operation of the union led by Mr. Laberge. Incidentally, the Thibault plant in my riding was able to use a $750,000 investment from that fund—three-quarters of a million dollars—to create 70 jobs and expand its operations, it now has 190 workers on the payroll. Most of those funds came from company workers. A new tax credit has been proposed to encourage long-term investment by individuals in labour-sponsored venture capital organizations set up within a province to maintain or create jobs and stimulate the economy.

The proposed federal tax credit applies to shares purchased by individuals after May 23, 1985. It will be equal to either 20 per cent of the cost of the shares, or the amount required to bring the combined federal and provincial credits to 40 per cent of the shares, whichever is less. That is a new initiative which will enable workers to earn a share of company profits.

Then there are investments, pensions plans and other retirement income plans in small businesses.

• (1550)

The Bill proposes a number of other measures to help small- and medium-sized businesses obtain investment capital through pension funds. First of all, RRSPs and other similar plans will be allowed to buy shares of Canadian-controlled private corporations that are at arm's length from the plan beneficiary.

Second, registered pension plans will be allowed to set up special corporations for tax-exempted investments in small businesses in order to encourage the purchase of shares of small businesses.

Third, pension funds and other deferred income plans will have more flexibility to invest in these limited partnership corporations specializing in small business investments due to the fact that these investments will no longer be consolidated with foreign assets in the computation of the total portfolio-limiting ceiling.

Fourth, pension plans will be authorized to invest three dollars in foreign businesses for every dollar they invest in small Canadian businesses. This way, they will be able to diversify their portfolios easily and create a great many jobs.

The Bill refers also to housing funds. The Budgets proposes to exempt from tax a number of benefits, including low-cost or no-interest loans which employees may obtain from their employers when they must relocate to keep their jobs or take up new positions. This measure will favour workers' mobility and will reflect the fact that housing loans represent for employers a good way to compensate their staff who must move to an area where the cost of living is higher.

This reform Budget deals also with research and development. The tax credits obtained by a small business on the first $2 million spent in research and development current expense will be reimbursed fully, instead of just 40 per cent as is the case now. Other changes will help eliminate the restrictions applicable to the research and development activities which open entitlement to fiscal incentives.

The Budget proposes to make fully refundable the credit accrued to small Canadian-controlled private corporations in respect of current research and development expenditures. The refundable part of the credit unused by these companies is now limited to 40 per cent, as I said earlier. Under the present provisions, the balance of the unused tax credit may be carried over a maximum of seven years. The new proposal will enable a taxpayer to use all of the earned credit, either to reduce his income tax or to get a refund. That provision will have no expiry date and will apply to eligible expenses incurred after May 23, 1985, as for the other provisions.

Let me now refer to the small business bond, another initiative proposed in this legislation. The bond program will enable farmers and small businesses facing financial difficulty to secure loans at reduced interest rates. The Budget proposed to extend the program for another two years, and to extend it to that type of bonds that will be issued before the end of 1987. The initial expiry date was to be the end of 1985. Another budget proposal would allow farmers and small businesses still tied up with loans obtained under the SMB and the previous small business development bond program, which was in force in 1980 and in 1981, to refinance their loans when falling due if they are facing financial difficulties at the time of refinancing.

Let me also refer to the investment tax credit. That special tax credit, amounting to 50 per cent of manufacturing investments in designated areas, which was introduced in 1980 for a five-year period, was due to expire at the end of 1985. The Budget proposed to extend that special credit until December 1986. It was further proposed that expenses in respect of projects that are not completed by the end of 1986 also provide entitlement to that tax credit. Buildings under construction at the end of 1986 and machinery and equipment ordered in writing before 1986 also will provide entitlement to the credit.

Let me now refer to family support. There has been much talk about it, often in a negative way. But the positive sides are much greater. The child benefit system—that is the family allowances, the child tax credit and the dependent child deductions—is undergoing various changes to provide greater help to lower income families, while reducing benefits now received by higher income families.

The child tax credit, of which my colleague for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) spoke so eloquently yesterday, will increase by $70 in the 1986 taxation year and by $35 in 1987 and 1988. The level of income over which the child tax credit will begin to decrease will be brought down from $26,330 to $23,500.

There is also a point about which little has been said, namely the help provided for the handicapped. In 1985, a $2,590 deduction from taxable income is provided for the handicapped, who are now defined as people suffering from blindness at some time during the year or people who must stay in bed or in a wheel-chair for a considerable part of the day.

Approximately 185,000 people should benefit from this extended definition compared with the 65,000 who now claim such a deduction.

Let us talk about the investment tax credit. Bill C-84 reduces the credit when the taxpayer receives a refund or investment assistance from the public sector or other taxpayers, restricts the possibility of using investment tax credits when there is a change of control, and redefines the classes of share issues which can be used to transfer to outside share investor the unused investment tax credits.

Let us talk about the approach to income generally. The rules governing the distribution of income among members of a same family will be made more stringent to prevent tax avoidance through low interest loans.

Mr. Speaker, I am enthusiastic about all these proposals contained in Bill C-84 and I must say that, in my opinion, our Government is acting as a responsible Government, as a Government which has the interests of Canadians at heart, as a Government which keeps its election promises and which will see to it that our Canadian economy is renewed and continues to develop as all known economic indicators show is now happening.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there any questions or comments?

[English]

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, it is fascinating to follow the intervention of a Progressive Conservative Member of Parliament, because one wonders why no reference was made by him to some aspects of Bill C-84 about which his constituents should hear from him and about which I suspect his constituents would be very interested in being kept informed. Why, for instance, was there no reference by that Hon. Member to that aspect of the Bill which eliminates the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan? In his riding and in the ridings of each so-called Progressive Conservative Member of Parliament there are young people who would like to know why the present Government has decided to abolish, through this Bill flowing from the Budget, that very important program. There are young Canadians who want to save in order to buy houses. The Liberal Government instituted the program to facilitate the savings of young couples and to facilitate their ability to purchase houses. Why was this measure abolished, and why was there no mention in the speeches made by preceding Members of the Progressive Conservative Party? I see it is four o'clock.

• (1600)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the speech of the Hon. Member. The Hon. Member will have the floor the next time this matter is debated in the House. It being four o'clock the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENT RESPECTING LEGAL COUNSEL FOR UNBORN CHILD

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands-Canso) moved that Bill C-254, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (legal counsel for unborn child) be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am honoured to speak to Bill C-254, an Act to amend the Criminal Code to provide legal counsel for unborn children. It is regrettable that we must debate this Bill and that existing provisions of the Criminal Code are being abused and ignored. At present Section 251 of the Criminal Code purports to protect the unborn children in this country. It purports to balance competing rights. Just what does Section 251 of the Criminal Code require? Section 251 of the Criminal Code requires that before the life of an unborn child can be terminated legally in this coumtry, people appointed by the Board of the medical institution must evaluate an application put forward by a Canadian who wishes to terminate the pregnancy or the life of the unborn Canadian.

The process requires that these medical people decide whether the health or life of the mother is jeopardized by continuing the pregnancy. That is what Section 251 of the Criminal Code requires of the medical profession in this country. Section 251 requires this because in this country it is not legal to terminate the lives of unborn children on one's sole desire without any grounds whatsoever. The Code requires the doctors to make a decision based on medical evidence.

It sounds very good, but in practice we have a situation in hospitals from the east coast to the west coast where doctors gather routinely for perhaps one half hour or an hour each week and over this period of time, these medical people decide whether the lives of 60 or perhaps 100 unborn Canadians should be terminated.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. O'Neil: The unborn child will be very fortunate if his case or her case is given more than 60 seconds of consideration by the people in this country who have the responsibility to decide whether that life shall end or shall continue. That is the practice, and in my view that is illegal. The practice is outside the spirit and the legal requirements of the Criminal Code. We have a situation in this country where many people have decided to turn a blind eye to the strict requirements of the Criminal Code and to allow this flagrant abuse of the rights of unborn children to continue. The question is what can be done about this abuse? Many would say that we should repeal Section 251 altogether, and perhaps that is not a bad idea in some cases. Another idea is to make an amendment to the Criminal Code which is consistent with the spirit and the design of that Section which was designed to provide a judicial or quasi-judicial environment in which the rights of the unborn child would be protected. It is obvious that at the present time when these hearings occur that there is no spokesperson for the unborn Canadian, that the process has become one of rubber-stamping.

It is for this reason that I have introduced Bill C-254, an Act to amend the Criminal Code, that would require the presence of legal counsel for unborn children, legal counsel who would work to ensure that the rights and representations of the unborn Canadian are made. When I advance this concept I am not advancing something which is revolutionary. Section 251, as I said earlier, is a recognition of the rights of unborn Canadians. Abortion is illegal in this country, in general terms, and legal only in certain exceptional cases, because we as a society have recognized the rights of unborn children to continue.

This is consistent with the rights of unborn Canadians as protected by the Canadian Bill of Rights, which in Part I(a) states that "(a) the right of the individual to life, liberty, security of the person and enjoyment of property, and the right not to be deprived thereof except by due process of law;" must be protected in Canada.

That is a guiding principle of our society, and a guiding principle of our judiciary system. In this case is being flagrantly abused. Similarly, Section 197 of the Criminal Code is very interesting because it imposes a legal duty on everyone as a parent, foster parent, guardian or head of a family to provide the necessities of life for a child under the age of 16 years. An unborn child is a child, by definition, and it is under 16 years of age. There are very similar sections in the Criminal Code in which we recognize the rights of unborn Canadians.

There are protections in an area of law known as tort law whereby an unborn child can sue, for example, after birth for injuries and wrongs that were inflicted upon it prior to its birth. These protections are well recognized in our body of law. Therefore, when I advocate that the unborn child has in fact certain rights that must be protected, I am simply outlining what is part of our body of common and codified law today.

The unborn child has certain rights and protection with respect to the inheritance of property. Those are well recognized and outlined in various court judgments. I found it quite interesting two years ago to read in The Globe and Mail a front page story in which a Family Court Judge acting under child welfare legislation held that a foetus deserved the shield of the law. That was a decision by a Family Court Judge in Kenora. He ruled that a foetus, or an unborn child, was abused because its mother refused to stop her excessive drinking during the pregnancy and the unborn child was in need of protection under child welfare law.

It is well recognized that an unborn child is something special in our society and has life. We live in an era when the knowledge of unborn life, the biological reality is becoming even more known to all Canadians. It is being taught at elementary and high school levels and the biological details of life are well known and widely accepted. I have here an issue of Newsweek magazine of January 11, 1982. The cover story is "How Life Begins Biology's New Frontier". In this article, which is in a popular magazine, the author's outline states biological information which is revolutionary in our day. For example it portrays that at three weeks the heart of an unborn child beats and the brain begins to develop. At four weeks limb buds appear. At five weeks the brain has divided into three parts and limbs to grow. This is just some indication of the biological reality. It is for that reason that we are in a better position than any of our predecessors to express an informed view on this question of life. There are those who say that this is not life and that we must treat the unborn child as if he or she were nothing more than a fingernail.

• (1610)

As I sat in the Chamber yesterday, I found it quite interesting to hear from other Members their views on the value of children on our society and on the value of family life. I will repeat for Hon. Members who are here today and for the record some quite interesting comments that were made yesterday. I am reading from page 9855 of Hansard:

> They have refused to listen despite the sense that any civilized society has that children are a common concern, a common responsibility and a responsibility which all of us in society have to defend.

That, Mr. Speaker, is a position which I wholeheartedly endorse. It goes on:

> Any society deserves to give such children full respect—
> Mr. Speaker, this debate deals with justice . . . We want a society where the children are the pride of their country.

I agree. Those comments were made by the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon), a member of the New Democratic Party, just yesterday in this Chamber. As well, I would like to turn to some comments made by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), a member of the Liberal Party. She had this to say on the debate that took place yesterday in the Chamber, as reported at page 9859 of Hansard:

> The family allowance confirms the value of child rearing to society at large. It is the sole, consistent economic recognition of the contribution of all mothers in our society.

I agree with that, but the recognition of the value of the child must begin with the life of the child. It is widely accepted today that life begins well before birth and that what happens at birth is that the child emerges into a new context. It is well recognized that the rights of unborn Canadians do exist quite apart from the abortion issue.

I know some of my colleagues would like to register their support for this initiative. In conclusion, I would like to say that what I have presented to the House today is an opportunity to ensure that the widespread practices in hospitals across the country, the widespread violations of the Criminal Code, come to an end. I am asking the House to bring the law in line with the biological reality as we know it.

I have reviewed for the House the protections granted by Section 251 of the Criminal Code, the so-called abortion Section. That Section of the Criminal Code sets up a regime designed to protect the rights of unborn children. Our law makers and enforcers have allowed society to turn a blind eye to the abuse that is taking place. These offences that are occurring across the country in our hospitals are criminal offences and it is time that we moved to ensure that the practices in this country reflects the law in this country.

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Cape Breton Highlands-Canso (Mr. O'Neil) for sponsoring a very good piece of legislation. Bill C-254 was, I am sure, inspired by a sense of indignation at the widespread increase in the abortion rate. Our discussion today will provide another chapter to the long history of the abortion debate in this House.

This Bill represents a great opportunity for agreement within the House. It will have the effect of guaranteeing the presence of legal representation for the unborn child at the therapeutic abortion committee that would pass judgment on the mother's intention to have an abortion. This is not a new idea. Under our legal system, people accused of crimes have always enjoyed a fundamental right to the advice and counsel of a lawyer to support their defence when standing for trial. This is one of the basic elements of the principles of fundamental justice that are enshrined in our Constitution.

Although the right to counsel is a fundamental right, its application is somewhat inconsistent. In Canada, this right has never been withheld from an accused person. However, thousands of unborn children who are not accused but innocent are tried, sentenced and executed every day without the right to counsel.

In my mind, there is no greater contradiction within our system of justice than that, while civil libertarians are doing everything to extend the rights of criminals, the rights of totally innocent Canadians are so neglected. I still cannot understand why some people uphold the death penalty for innocent, unborn children while proclaiming that they stand for the sanctity of life.

Extending the right to counsel to unborn children is the type of proposal the House should support unanimously. In doing so, we would not be guilty of so many of the so-called offences that prevent action on the question of abortion. We would not be legislating morality. The effect of this Bill would be to improve the quality of whatever decision is made by a mother, her doctor and the therapeutic abortion committee.

Decisions are made by weighing information and choosing between alternatives. This Bill would allow the unborn child's legal counsel to present to the committee information about the child's interests. What is to be gained by excluding certain information pertaining to a child's best interests from a decision relating to the pregnancy? The only reason that could exist for not wanting that information presented is the fear that it might influence the mother, perhaps even traumatically, so that she would change her mind. However, is that not the best possible reason for gathering information before a decision is made? This information is so important precisely because it might make a woman think twice about an abortion and it might save the life of her child.

Even radical pro-choice people should be happy when a woman decides not to have an abortion but to keep her baby. They often seem to think that every decision to have an abortion was the best possible choice. I would be delighted to hear someone who is pro-choice say just once that in one case the person had heard about, the decision to have an abortion was a mistake. I think this would be a breakthrough.

It would be my hope that the legal counsel acting on behalf of the unborn child present at the therapeutic abortion committee could at least make the case that the unborn child has a right to life. He would be able to describe, depending upon the stage of pregnancy, the development of hands, feet, a face, hair or fingernails. He might describe the movements of the child, its weight and the fact that its heart had already started to beat. He might bring up the point about the thousands of Canadian families that would welcome the baby with love into their own homes, bearing in mind that in Ontario, there is a five-year waiting periof for those who wish to adopt. He might suggest to the mother the joy she would receive from keeping the baby herself.

Finally, legal counsel for the baby might indicate what would happen to the child if the decision to have an abortion were followed through with. He might describe how the baby's body is cut to pieces by a sharp scraper when the D and C technique is used or how it is pulled apart by a powerful suction tube during a suction abortion. As well, there is the hypernatremic abortion in which the baby is poisoned, its skin is burned by a powerful salt solution and some days later, after suffering, expelled. The legal counsel might inform the mother for the first time that the child was facing a painful and lingering death. I think a mother would want to know that and should know that. I also think that there is a good chance that it would change her mind about having an abortion.

A woman does not always have access to all of this information and particularly to the good things about childbirth and the bad things about abortion. The idea of extending civil and human rights to unborn children is not a new one. In fact, apart from the right to life and to the due process of law, unborn children, in many legal respects, are fully recognized as persons.

● (1620)

The question of when life begins, I believe, is at conception. Medical science can identify when each process that is essential to life, such as the functioning of the heart and other organs, begins. However, there is a necessity to incorporate some definition of life into a society's system of laws. In order to charge someone with murder one has to spell out exactly what the life is that one is accused of ending. If everyone agreed that life began at conception, then people such as Dr. Henry Morgentaler could be found guilty of murder.

In our system of laws there are many indications that our society fully recognizes unborn children as legal persons, fully entitled to the protection we all enjoy under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Common law relating to property generally recognizes the unborn child as a person. A child can be the benefactor of an estate left to him or her in a will. Counsel acting on behalf of an unborn child can petition the courts for inclusion of the unborn child in a will that leaves an estate to other children in the family. This even holds if those other children are identified explicitly by name and the unborn child is not mentioned.

There is an implicit common law contract recognized in the right of an infant to the necessities of life. Similar protection is extended to an unborn child, if the mother has an intention to continue with her pregnancy.

Our legal system also provides in other ways for unborn children. They are given the status of persons and can be eligible for benefits under workers' compensation and accident benefits legislation. This indicates to me that not only does society recognize the fact that unborn children have their own interests, but that we also have an interest in the welfare of unborn children.

Unborn children also have rights to receive compensation for criminal injuries. If a pregnant women is injured through violence or negligence on the part of someone else, and the unborn child suffers as well, then they have an equally well grounded legal entitlement. The contradiction of this arrangement is the fact that if a child dies before it is born, then its rights as a person cannot be represented or defended.

Unborn children, then, are protected by most rights except for the right to life itself, which is the most fundamentally important one as far as our society is concerned. Even the Criminal Code sections related to abortion seem to recognize that the unborn child is valued by society. Under our laws abortion is an indictable criminal offence for both the mother and the doctor, if they do not follow the required procedure with a therapeutic abortion committee. Unfortunately, the law also provides two massive loopholes. One is the role of therapeutic abortion committees, which provide nothing more than a rubber-stamping process, in a great many instances. The other loophole is being tragically exploited in Ontario. Dr. Morgentaler is allowed to continued the operation of his abortion clinic in outright defiance of the law because it is not being enforced. This is something upon which I strongly urge the Government of Ontario to take proper action.

However, it is important to note that one can receive an abortion by going around the law. The law itself still forbids abortions in most cases. This is because the law recognizes that unborn children are entitled to protection of the law to the same extent as the rest of Canadians. It is for exactly this reason that I ask the House today to take the step which would guarantee the right to counsel for unborn children. It is not a big step, but it is a step in the right direction. If we do not take this step it is because we have fallen into a trap which has been seen again and again throughout history. I am speaking of the exploitation of the weak by the powerful. The extent to which we are civilized and human is the measure by which the weak enjoy the protection of our society.

One opponent of abortion described the problem like this:

Slavery, witch-hunts, and wars have all been justified by their perpetrators on the ground that they thought their victims to be less than fully human.

Abortion has claimed more lives than slavery, witch-hunts, and wars put together. In Canada, over the last 15 years, there have been close to one million deaths due to abortion. If one were to add up the deaths caused by drowning, car accidents, and warfare over the last 50 years, one would see that the figure comes to about one-third of that for abortions.

I find it ironic that in a day and age when we spend billions of dollars on medical research to save lives at the same time we allow the killing of healthy baby boys and girls. We have hospitals which on one floor are exercising all the medical research and expertise possible to save lives while on another floor of the same hospital hundreds and thousands of unborn children are being killed. It is time our society lived up to its responsibility and that we as legislators acted in the name of justice and human dignity instead of expedience, opportunism and convenience.

The Bill before us today is an example of the type of Bill which I think all Members of the House can and should support. It is unique in the respect that it represents some substantial progress regarding the tragedy our country faces over the abortion issue. I hope that we will all consider giving this Bill our full support today.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I do not know that I can say that I am pleased to be standing today in my place to take part in this debate since it seems to me that every two or three weeks we seem to be debating the same issue. It is a very important question. However, it is a question on which I believe it would be hard for this House to reach a consensus. As well, I believe there is really no full consensus on the issue in Canada today.

In preparation for the debate today I looked not only at the Bill but at the explanatory note. I read Section 251 of the Criminal Code as it stands at the present time. I wish to read part of that section into the record for those who may not be aware of it. Section 251(1) states:

> Every one who, with intent to procure the miscarriage of a female person, whether or not she is pregnant, uses any means for the purpose of carrying out his intention is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for life.

Section 251(2) states:

> Every female person who, being pregnant, with intent to procure her own miscarriage, uses any means or permits any means to be used for the purpose of carrying out her intentions is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for two years.

The section goes on to qualify what some of the terms mean and it then states certain exceptions, such as the case of a therapeutic abortion committee at an accredited or approved hospital.

It seems to me that one whole section has been left out. I say this with not a great deal of seriousness. However, it does point out something which I am sure male Members of the House might like to consider. If the Bill is referred to a committee I wonder if the Member who proposed the Bill would consider another amendment to the Criminal Code which would state the following:

Criminal Code

> Every person who impregnates a woman with male sperm causing her to be pregnant against her will is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for life.

● (1630)

It seems to me that makes just as much sense as some of the things we already have in the Criminal Code. Perhaps this kind of amendment would cause people to consider, first, who causes unwanted pregnancies. That brings us to the question before us today; who causes the unwanted pregnancies? It is pretty evident that without the male sperm there would be no pregnancy, therefore, the man in each case has a very major responsibility. Second, who makes the very difficult and painful decision as what should or should not be done about an unwanted pregnancy? I think the answer is perfectly clear, certainly to the women in this House. It is the woman who is going to have to deal with this very painful decision and no one can tell me that any woman faced with an unwanted pregnancy will not face a very, very painful decision, particularly if she decides that she has no alternative but to consider abortion.

Finally, who is faced with the responsibility of rearing a child if the pregnancy is continued and who often is left alone without resources to rear that child? There again, we know that it is the woman who is responsible for this and we have a lot of statistics to show that most of those women do not have adequate finances. I believe some of the witnesses to the divorce Bill hearings would substantiate the fact that these women do not have adequate support and certainly increasing numbers of women are left alone with the responsibility of their children with no support whatsoever. I would say, particularly to the male Members of this House, that it is indeed a very serious and difficult emotional question which faces women who have been made pregnant and who are forced to consider what they should do in the case of an unwanted pregnancy.

We in this House have very different points of view—and it is easy to get very uptight about this. I do myself—so it is very important that we look at the various areas on which perhaps we can agree. The whole question of abortion is fraught with emotion on all sides. We know this. I would hope we can learn somehow to respect our different points of view and perhaps not discuss it when we know there is absolutely no potential for reasonable communication. I also hope that we can agree that no woman really wants an abortion and those women who are driven to seek one usually do so because they have little or no alternative. I do not think any feminist group advocates abortion as a method of birth control. That argument is passé. I do not know of any feminists, including myself, who feel that abortion is a positive thing. It is not. No one really favours abortion. However, women, particularly young women, poor women and women under a lot of stress, really have no other alternative when they are left in a pregnant state. They are unable to care for their child and they have no other alternative. It is a desperate situation in which a woman finds herself and so very often they are alone. I do not feel we give enough consideration to this point.

I also hope that we in this House can agree that it would be far better to put our efforts into prevention. Surely we can work together on that even though we might have different philosophies about the whole question of choice of abortion. I would hope we could somehow work together to develop programs and to work with the Ministers responsible so that we could have far more research into adequate methods of contraception. I feel we should have much greater research into contraception as it applies to men. I feel this whole area has been neglected. We know there are many, many cases where the pill and other methods of contraception have had very negative side effects. We must find more effective methods of contraception. I hope that all of us in this House agree that it is far better, far more humane and far more important to prevent unwanted pregnancies than for a woman to be faced with the situation of having to consider an abortion.

Men have a great responsibility in this area and they are not assuming their responsibility. I would say that many of the supporters of this Bill which is before the House are probably not doing their part to ensure that we are putting all of our efforts into prevention. I hope that we can agree to put much more research into contraceptive methods as well as, of course, education, particularly for young people. Many parents need help because they are not comfortable discussing matters of sexuality, family planning and birth control methods. I hope as well that we can agree that despite our very different and strong emotional and personal views on the question of abortion that we, as Members of Parliament do not have the right to use our position as elected Members of Parliament to introduce laws which would arbitrarily impose our views on others. We must be very careful in the way we exercise the power we have. It is not up to me to force a woman to have an abortion or to say she cannot have an abortion when she is pregnant. It is not up to me to say. It is not up to me to bring in laws which are going to force a woman to go to a back street abortionist because we are restricting access to a safe medical procedure. It is up to the woman. It is an individual matter. It is not up to us to tell that woman and her doctor what should be done in an individual case.

Professor Charles Kelbey, a law professor, I believe, said in an article in Newsweek that when highly emotionally charged issues have to be resolved in law, it is far better to come down on the side of freedom than on the side of prohibition. Therefore, I would say to my colleagues that I respect their vies. I know many of their views are different from mine and mine are different from theirs and I believe we must respect each other's views. We surely have no right to impose our views on another person. I think the whole question of choice is important. It is not pro-abortion to be in favour of choice. None of us, I hope, are pro-abortion. We in this Party cannot support this Bill. It would appear that the intent is to further complicate procedures and make it more difficult for women to have access to safe medical abortions. Access to abortions is already far too restricted. I am not going to get into the whole question of when life begins because I believe that is something which will always be a personal and philosophical view and we could argue forever and not agree on that. I agree with my friend that the present law is not being carried out because access to abortion is far too restricted. There are very few hospitals in maritime, northern or rural communities, for example, where women have any choice at all. The present law requires, as we know, that a woman present her case before a therapeutic abortion committee of at least three doctors in an accredited or approved hospital. I know in my province of British Columbia, there are a number of hospitals which no longer have therapeutic committees. This is making it more difficult for women. My doctor tells me that many women from Victoria, for example, have no access and are going to the U.S. as a result. That is the only choice they have.

I have no facts to substantiate this but I would hazard a guess that the fact there is no access to abortions is not stopping unwanted pregnancies. What are women doing? I am sure they are taking illegal steps to have abortions. Is that what Members want? Do they want women to die? That seems to me to be the final outcome of this kind of restrictive philosophy which does not leave the matter to individual choice.

Approximately 75 per cent of our hospitals do not have therapeutic abortion committees and therefore do not offer the service to their surrounding areas. I received letters last year from the Canadian Medical Association which feels there should be some reconsideration of the concept of a committee because it gets very complex. They feel it should be really more of a medical decision. However, there should be therapeutic abortion committees in accredited hospitals and they should be available in all regions of Canada. It does not make sense to have this provision in our law and then not have the service available in certain communities.

With all due respect to my friend who brings this Bill forward, I wonder if he is aware of some of the following facts. First, making abortions more difficult to obtain will not cut back on the number of women who are seeking and obtaining abortions. It will not stop them. The only thing that will stop unwanted pregnancies and abortions is prevention. Let's get together and start working on more prevention.

Another fact is that if there is no access to abortions, these women will simply go back to obtaining unsafe abortions where they may die or be maimed for life. That is what the situation used to be like. If they are wealthy, of course, the wives and perhaps the daughters or partners of Members of Parliament and people with that kind of a salary, what are they going to do? They are probably going to go across the line to states which have easy access to abortions, or they are going to go to private medical care of some kind. What if you are a poor woman or adolescent girl? There are girls 14, 15 and 16 pregnant now and if we carry through with this philosophy we will be forcing them to go ahead and have babies. This will be destructive to both the child and the young mothers.

I deplore the fact that this is happening just as much as other Members. However, the fact is that in countries where abortions are illegal, women continue to need and get abortions. There have been unwanted pregnancies throughout history. We have heard stories of women who used a hot bath and a bottle of gin to get rid of an unwanted pregnancy. It is going to happen no matter what policy we have concerning access to abortion. What we need is prevention. I ask Members, regardless of their views on our present Criminal Code, to give much more emphasis to prevention. That is what we need.

What of women who live far from centres where these services are available? If they cannot afford to travel or to have other children in the family looked after while they are gone, or whatever the reason is, they simply become prime targets for back room butchers or unsafe abortion methods. There are long delays which are difficult for both the woman and her doctor because they do not have adequate access and as a result the pregnancy often goes on too long.

I have many, many other points I would like to make and I am sure that since this matter keeps coming up again and again I will have further opportunities to make them. However, I implore my fellow Members to think about this. It is very tempting, because of our gut emotions, to polarize this situation. I feel as strongly as anyone about this issue, but I wish we could work together on the positive things that we can agree on. Let us really work together to try and make sure that there is adequate family planning, information and services available. Instead of cutting back on planned parenthood we should be supporting the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) in obtaining more money for more adequate research and programs which are targeted to young adolescents to help them deal with their sexuality and avoid situations which will ruin their lives. We should have family planning in every community. I would certainly hope that we could all work together on all methods of family planning.

I was in Nairobi, Kenya, this summer, along with some other Members and the Minister responsible for the Status of Women (Mr. McLean). I can tell the House that the number one issue in Third World countries is that of over-population and family planning. We have to deal with this constructively, both internationally and here at home.

Mr. John Reimer (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin by commending the Hon. Member for Cape Breton Highlands-Canso (Mr. O'Neil) for the Bill he has placed before us today. It was a new concept for me when I first read it, yet I think it has real merit. I would like to see the Bill go to committee so that we could discuss it more fully. We could call witnesses and fully deal with this concept and the issue of abortion itself. I would also commend the Hon. Member for London East (Mr. Jepson) for his comments. I think they were very well expressed and well taken.

The Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) said that she did not like the fact every three or four weeks she had to get up to respond to something like this, to in essence say no to the request being made by a Member. The fact that it is coming up so often is very significant. I encourage the Hon. Member to do what she would do on many other topics. If we constantly raise the question, say, of pensions or family allowances, she would certainly like us to look at that very seriously. Well, here is an issue which keeps coming up. Let us address it equally seriously and make sure we can take this Bill to committee and fully investigate all the facts surrounding the Bill. I ask for a little consistency from the Member in the way in which she addresses this Bill. Rather than complaining that the issue keeps coming up so often, let us deal with the fact that it does and start addressing it properly.

As I said, this Bill represents a novel concept where we would have someone present at an abortion committee hearing who would speak for the unborn. That is an excellent concept. I am not sure how it would work in our abortion clinics across the land. It is my understanding that abortion clinics do not have these therapeutic committees, but that is something we could deal with in our committee. I still believe we should take it to committee to be explored. It is an excellent concept which we should examine.

• (1650)

If I recall correctly, the Member for Vancouver East said that we should not force on others our morality and views about some of the issues which we as individuals hold very dear. While I can understand some of her argument, I have studied this topic at length. I was a member of a hospital board for several years in Kitchener-Waterloo. I recall that when we studied this topic at the Kitchener-Waterloo hospital board we spent over a year using the medical expertise that was available to us. In spite of the fact that we were only carrying out about 40 per cent to 50 per cent of the abortion requests coming to the hospital, and therefore taking quite a narrow application of the law, we found that our therapeutic abortion committee was approving abortions for 66 different reasons under the present law. I suggest that it was far too liberal an interpretation of the law.

We must take seriously the argument not to force our morality on others. Therefore, when it comes to the topic of abortion I suggest that we should be as thorough and objective as possible. Rather than talking about the side issues that surround this topic, and becoming involved in all the emotions that come into play, let us address the central issue: Are we dealing with a human being who should have the full protection of the law or are we not? If we are dealing with a human being, let us ensure that they have the full protection of the law. If not, let us withdraw this section from the Criminal Code and let people simply do what they wish. We must be as objective as we can.

I am particularly interested in the fact that in 1975 in West Germany the Lower House was asked to deal with that country's abortion law. Its practice is quite similar to ours today. It was cognizant of the fact that from 1933 to 1945 Germany had denied human rights to a certain segment of its population. It wanted to be very careful that it was truly a full democratic state in the true sense of the word, giving full protection of the law to all its citizens, including the unborn if that foetus was considered a person. Therefore, the question was given to the Supreme Court which called in 133 world experts, including geneticists, obstetricians and gynaecologists. They were asked to address this question of whether or not a foetus is a human being and therefore should be accorded the full and equal protection of the law. After two weeks of considering this question this group brought in a unanimous recommendation. In answer to the question: "When does the foetus gain the civil right to life?", they answered:

> Life, in the sense of historical existence of a human individual, exists according to definite biological-physiological knowledge, in any case, from the fourteenth day after conception.

The reason they chose the fourteenth day after conception is that it is possible for the cells to divide into twins or triplets up to that point.

Their statement is remarkable because it was unanimous and specific in stating that life exists from the fourteenth day because the cells could divide into twins or triplets before that time. We should also note that this recognition of life is even before the woman knows that she is pregnant. Therefore, according to these 133 world experts, we are dealing with a human being.

I submit that if that is the evidence and we are trying to be as objective as we can, as we must, then our actions should begin to follow the facts. We would be required to do so in economic policy and we are surely required to do so in all of our social policy. Let us begin being honest about abortion policy. The abortion statistics in this country today are a travesty of justice. It is a pure refusal of people to address the facts because they do not want to be bothered. They have already made up their mind.

The House will know that Dr. Morgentaler opened a clinic in Toronto. This was challenged in the courts and he was acquitted. The Government of Ontario appealed and the acquittal was overturned. Now he is permitted to continue with his clinic in spite of that. The existence of the clinic is against the law which specifically states that abortions much be dealt with by a therapeutic abortion committee in the hospitals. Even Grade 3 children could understand that. However, we sit here in our comfortable seats and ignore that fact as if it does not matter. It is a sad commentary on Members and a sad commentary on our society.

Let us begin to be objective. This Bill asks that we at least have someone present to speak for that child. Surely that is a minimum request. This Bill is attempting to have us think and become objective again in order to be truly supportive of the weaker in our society who need the full protection of the law. The strong will look after themselves. The rich will look after themselves. Let us begin defending those who cannot defend themselves.

I urge Members to seriously think about what we are doing and pass this Bill to committee so that we can have an objective, fair and calm discussion, not addressing all the side issues but the real issue about the protection of the unborn.

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, I also welcome the opportunity to speak to this Bill introduced by my seatmate, the Hon. Member for Cape Breton Highlands-Canso (Mr. O'Neil). The Bill before us today proposes that the unborn child be represented by legal counsel for the purposes of the therapeutic abortion committee meetings pursuant to the provisions of the Criminal Code. This would be a fundamental and welcome change to the present procedures and I would also like to see this Bill go to committee.

Today we are focusing our attention once again on a very important moral issue. In 1969, the Criminal Code was amended to provide that an abortion could lawfully be performed by a qualified medical practitioner in an accredited or approved hospital if the therapeutic abortion committee of the hospital has issued a certificate stating that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy would or would be likely to endanger the woman's life or health. However, the life and health of the mother are very rarely, if ever, endangered.

Many doctors are signing death warrants instead and many so-called doctors, such as Dr. Morgentaler mentioned by the Hon. Member for Kitchener (Mr. Reimer), are performing abortions in non-approved locations. This situation should be investigated. Furthermore, in some provinces the federal law is not obeyed at all. In some locations the abortions are outnumbering the live births.

In 1979, the federal Government appointed the committee on the operation of the abortion law to conduct a fact-finding study to determine whether the procedure provided in the Criminal Code for obtaining therapeutic abortions was operating equitably across Canada. This group, under the chairmanship of Robin Badgley of the University of Toronto included as other members of the committee, Dr. Marian G. Powell of the Toronto General Hospital and Montreal lawyer, Madame Denise Fortin-Caron. The committee was not asked to consider the merits of the abortion law itself or to make recommendations but I believe this should have been done at the time.

Earlier, I spoke to a Bill similar to this one. With modern technology such as imaging created by ultrasound vibrations, new medical evidence has emerged and has proven that life exists since conception.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired. It being five o'clock, this House stands adjourned until Monday next, pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 5 p.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ACT, 1973

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved that Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973, be read the third time and passed.

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I have spoken on this Bill before but we on this side still have to rise to continue putting the case that we have been putting. It seems, however, that the Government is unable or unwilling to listen. There was some suggestion last week from a Conservative to my left, whose riding escapes me for the moment, that we were not taking this matter entirely seriously. Let me put that to rest first of all. We take this issue very seriously indeed. I do, particularly, coming as I do from the Province of Newfoundland.

The basic argument against this Bill is that it hits those people in Canada who can least afford the added burden, namely, the low income people. You can make all the arguments you like about the family allowance Bill per se, but if you add it to the other measures that have been taken that impact on low income people in various parts of Canada, it is true that they are going to be hit very hard.

The family allowance will be deindexed from 1986 onward. The child tax credit, although it will be raised to $454 per child in 1986 and thereafter, will be deindexed from 1989 onward. The child tax exemption will be reduced from $710 per child in 1986.

We talked about the tax exemption last week, Mr. Speaker. The $50 federal tax deduction is being eliminated and some families will pay $100 more in federal tax. The federal sales tax is being increased. If you add it all together, there will be a net reduction for low income people. This coming year and thereafter low income people across the country will get less money net than before as a result of Bill C-70 and the other measures taken by the Government. That is an unacceptable situation, Mr. Speaker, because of the economic situation existing in Newfoundland and in provinces like Nova Scotia, particularly in the Cape Breton area. It seems that the Government has written off the Atlantic region completely.

Let me put that in context. The Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), who is the Chairman of the Finance Committee, suggests that all of these measures have to be taken because the deficit has to be reduced and the fiscal house has to be put in order. He says that to take up the slack, we must put the private sector front and centre. That makes sense in theory, but not in reality.

In Newfoundland and in the Atlantic area the private sector is weaker than it is in other parts of the country. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) tells us continuously about the 300,000 or 400,000 jobs that his Government has created since coming to power, but that may or may not be true. That may or may not stand up in analysis. But the very studies to which the Prime Minister is referring that confirm, to him at least, that the Government has created 300,000 or 400,000 confirm also that only 8 per cent of those new jobs have occurred in the Atlantic area. The private sector in that area is weaker than in other parts of the country.

Our economy has depended upon Government intervention and government support systems of economic survival until now. The case I want to make is that we must not take away those programs, we must not cut those programs, and we must not tamper with the social security system, until such time as we have put something else in its place.

Ms. Mitchell: What do you mean by "until such time"? Not at all.

Mr. Rompkey: If the Government does that, there will be a double whammy in the Atlantic area. Not only are the new jobs not being created, but we are losing support in terms of Government programs, transfer payments and social security programs on which we have depended until now.

That is one of the main reasons my province came into Confederation. We are a new province in Confederation. I was not born in Canada. I was 13 years old, as I keep saying, when my people came to this country. That is true; I was 13 years old in 1949. One of the reasons we joined Canada was the kind of economic and social security which Canada could offer us. That is one of the reasons we are part of Confederation. Only 52 per cent of our people voted to join. The very issue on which Newfoundlanders voted to join Canada is being tampered with now and is being taken away as far as we can see. This is happening at a time when we have the highest cost of living and the highest unemployment rate anywhere in the country.

Statistics Canada will show that our unemployment rate is something like 20 per cent. I think it is more than that. If we add in the hidden unemployed, those people who have given up looking, the unemployment rate is something like 40 per cent. I would say that among young people it is more like 50 per cent. That is the situation which has to be addressed and put in context in this debate.

At the same time that we have that high unemployment rate and that high cost of living, what else is happening? People are being laid off in the Department of Fisheries. Hundreds of people will be laid off in that Department this year. Everyone knows how much we depend on the fisheries. Everyone knows how many public servants there are in our province in that Department. Transport is being cut. The latest cut about which we are hearing and we want confirmed, and I hope disavowed, is that there will be a complete and utter shut-down of Terra Transport, which is CN Rail in Newfoundland. It is the last remaining vestige of railway service in Newfoundland and it will be done away with by the Government. We have to add all these factors together.

It is not enough to say that we have signed the Atlantic Accord and that it will be the salvation of our people. It will not be, because those jobs will not come for years. When they do come, how much will we make out of the Atlantic Accord? Perhaps it will be $200 million per year, but the provincial deficit is something like $300 million per year. It will not be the salvation of our people.

I have put these points on the record to show that it is not only this Bill on family allowances. This Bill, along with other measures, will have a very serious impact on people in my province and on people in the Atlantic area. The Government has to recognize that. If it looks at nothing else, it should look at the polls and see the reaction of people to this particular issue. That kind of attitude must change. They cannot tamper with those programs. The Hon. Member to my left who said that they cannot be tampered with in any way is quite right. However, the point I am working is that at a time like this it is particularly unacceptable and unbrearable for people to be subjected to the kinds of cuts we are experiencing, not simply in Government programs upon which we have depended for a long time. The small craft harbours budget is something else which we use to create jobs. Even make-work programs have changed now so that people in rural areas are disadvantaged. Projects such as Canada Works are more difficult for people in rural areas to take advantage of because they involve training elements and that kind of thing. There seems to be a general, over-all thrust or drift to the right, which is having a completely unbearable impact in my particular area. This family allowance Bill is something which highlights it.

People have rights to fair and equal treatment. We cannot have blanket policies which fit everywhere in Canada. We know that. Joey Smallwood used to tell the story from time to time about Procrustes' bed. Procrustes was a Greek who operated what we would call a motel today. He had one bed, and every traveller who came to that inn had to fit that bed. If he was too long, he chopped him off; if he was too short, he extended him so that he would fit the bed. That cannot be done in Canada. Canada is a country of regions, and we must have a sensitivity to that reality. One of the things that is absent, as I see it, in the present Government is a regional development policy. I have asked for it in the House before; I have asked for it to be enunciated. It has not been enunciated. What happened to DREE? What has been put in its place? Where is the regional development policy of the country? Not all areas of Canada are equal. If they come in with blanket programs saying that they will slash willy-nilly across the country, it will impact more heavily on those people who are already in an unequal position. That is the reality and that is the situation.

I return to my main point. The Government has not announced what its economic development policy will be for Newfoundland. I hope the Hon. Member for Mississauga South will address this issue because he is a proponent of free enterprise carrying the load. The thesis is: "You are going to be all right because we are going to put private enterprise front and centre and it will be the saviour of the country". I am saying that there is no evidence that that is happening in Newfoundland. There is evidence in the meantime that the public service programs and social security programs on which historically we have heavily depended all the while that we have been in Confederation are now being chopped and nothing is being put in their place. Not only is that wrong in principle, as my friend to my left said, but it is particularly wrong at this stage in our development because it will simply sink us economically altogether.

I want to see the reaction of the Premier of Newfoundland not only to those measures but to the measures which will impact upon us very soon—today, tomorrow or in the next few days—with the cut-backs in CN Rail and the complete wiping out of Terra Transport in Newfoundland. The only reaction can be to fight it with all our might. I hope there will be a consolidation or a firm coalition of all those who are interested in fighting that battle. It is a battle which has to be fought. This a bad Bill in and of itself. It will impact negatively on low-income people. If we add the family allowance changes, the child tax credit changes, the child tax exemption changes, the sales tax and the deindexation of the income tax, there is a net reduction to low-income people. Those people cannot bear that in principle and should not have to bear it in principle. They should not have to bear it at a time when their economic future is in grave doubt and grave uncertainty. That is the reality, that is what is happening. I do not know how often we have to point that out to the Government. It seems that any such plea is falling on deaf ears, come from where it may. The latest group to add its voice to those of others is the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops which has been very active in my province as well. Indeed the Pope, when he was in this country and spoke in Flat Rock, Newfoundland, addressed this very issue. Surely he is more eloquent than I am, but I have a responsibility today to stand in the House of Commons and echo what he said and what the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops said. They said: "We have noted the rationale for the restructuring of social programs, namely, deficit reduction". Whatever the merits of such a strategy, society must not succumb to an ideology of restraint that subordinates human dignity and human needs to abstract economic theories. That is the point. You cannot succumb to an ideology of restraint that subordinates human dignity and human needs to abstract economic theory.

• (1120)

Low-income people, no matter where they live, have a right to be served by the Government of Canada and the Parliament of Canada, and have a right to those services that they have historically enjoyed: They say: "It is our fear that the social and human impact of the proposed changes to the family allowance will only add to the already widespread suffering of our families, particularly families headed by women".

According to the recent report on poverty by the National Council on Welfare, the number of families living below the poverty line has increased for the fourth year in a row. The most vulnerable groups include one-parent families headed by women, unattached young people and the elderly. That is the constituency that this Party has historically tried to defend by bringing in those social security systems and regional development policies and by making sure that people who did not have were helped in some way. There has to be that Government intervention in areas of this kind. I am speaking particularly on behalf of my own province.

This Bill is wrong in principle because it hits, along with other measures, particularly at low-income people who should not have and cannot afford to bear that burden. It is particularly wrong at this particular time when the economic situation is so fragile and in such great difficulty, and in the absence of any regional development policies to show the regions of the country that are have-not regions that you have some way of securing their economic future. That is the reality of this Bill. That is why we should defeat it if we can, and that is why we have to do whatever we can, use every vehicle or mechanism at our disposal, to point out to the Government the error of its ways and to hope, in the final analysis, in the eleventh hour, that it will change its mind.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there any questions and comments?

Mr. Kilgour: Let me say to the Member who just spoke that I understand that the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), a member of his own Party, indicated on Thursday that under this Bill low-income families would be better off until 1991. We believe that that is the case as well. I would simply ask the Member why it is that he is opposing a Bill that will help the low-income families of Canada, including those in his own province. Why is he opposing this Bill?

Mr. Rompkey: It may be true that for a while there is going to be some sort of net benefit, but the long-term prospects are for a net reduction, and those figures are incontrovertible whichever way you look at them. The reality is that over the long term—and the long term is not going to be very long in coming—there is going to be a net reduction to low-income people. I think that is unacceptable. If you add up the various budget measures, the changes in family allowances, the changes in the child tax credit, the changes in the child tax exemption, the deindexation of personal income tax exemption and the sales tax, if you add all those together, you get a net reduction in the amount coming in to low-income families. That is what I am saying is uncceptable, not simply in principle but unacceptable at a time and in areas where you have a very fragile economy that has historically been dependent on Government services that are now disappearing and where you have nothing else to put in its place. That is the real tragedy, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Kilgour: I direct my question to the Hon. Member. Does he accept, speaking at least under 1991, that if this Bill is passed by the House, low-income families in Newfoundland, as is the case elsewhere across the country, will be better of because of this Bill than they would be under the situation that exists today?

Mr. Rompkey: You could take a trip for a week, Mr. Speaker, and we are going to feed you very well in the first couple of days, but we are going to starve you for the rest of the week. I do not think anybody would accept a proposition like that. If I am going on a trip, I want to make sure that I am fed for the whole trip. If I were going north with the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) and he said, "You could come with me for a week and we are going to have turkey for the first few days, following which we are going to have to go on water", I could not accept such a proposition, and neither will my people accept that.

Mr. Edwards: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the partial concession that my friend, the Hon. Member for Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador (Mr. Rompkey), has made to my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona, and I would further ask him this question, since he is a man of intellectual integrity. When he was alluding to the joining of Canada in Confederation by Newfoundland in 1949 I think I heard him say that part of the deal was the indexation of family allowances. I wonder if the Hon. Member can inform me what specific indexation existed in 1949.

Mr. Rompkey: I appreciate the question, Mr. Speaker, and the Member that it is coming from. The issue in 1949 obviously was not indexation, because indexation occurred later. We did not really have inflation in 1949, but we encountered inflation thereafter. As a result of that inflation it was decided to index family allowances, and indeed other measures, so that low-income people could keep up with costs that they were confronted with. There was no indexation obviously at the time of Confederation.

The point that I was making was that we negotiated the terms of union, a contract with Canada in 1949. One of the strong selling points made by Mr. St. Laurent and his Government at that time, and by the Parliament of Canada, was that Newfoundland would be eligible for social security payments such as family allowances. If you had to take in Newfoundland one symbol of the support for and the importance of Confederation to us, it would be family allowances. Certainly that was a high priority. There were other things that we encountered too, such as funds for economic development, and later on programs for economic development. At the time of Confederation in 1949 when that contract was made between the two sovereign countries, one of the outstanding issues that sold Confederation, only to 52 per cent, but it did sell, was the issue of family allowances. I am saying now that our people are looking at this issue and thinking back about how important this and other Government programs have been to them. They will be judging in a historical context the doing away with what was very important to them and one of the fundamental and essential points on which they agreed to come into this country.

Mr. Edwards: Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the Hon. Member has given us a historical perspective, and I am wondering if he can inform us which Party first altered the indexation of family allowances and when it was done, and which Party imposed a 5 per cent limit on those allowances when inflation was well into the double digits?

Mr. Broadbent: Good question.

Mr. Rompkey: It may be a good question. What we are here discussing is an issue that is happening here and now. The fundamental point that I am making is that measures are being imposed on low-income families who can least afford to bear that burden. One of these days you may get a chance to govern—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rompkey: —in the meantime you have to stick to the issues. What is happening here and now is that there is a net loss to low-income families, regardless of what we did or did not do. I will tell you something we did not do, and that is, was we did not cut Government programs in places that depended on us. This Party has a record in the Atlantic provinces, and I think the indication of that record is the fact that we have seven Members from there. What is happening here and now is that there is a net loss to low-income families. Whatever it was we did, something we did not do was to cut—

• (1130)

Mr. Heap: You know what you didn't do.

Mr. Rompkey: I am telling you what we did not do. We did not cut Government programs in places that depended on them.

Mr. Benjamin: You didn't do a lot of things. That's why you're sitting over here.

Mr. Heap: You cut family allowances.

Mr. Rompkey: This Party has a record in the Atlantic provinces and I think an indication of that record is that we have seven Members here in the House of Commons from Atlantic Canada while the Party whose Members are screaming on my left does not have one and is not likely to get one.

The people know our record in the Atlantic provinces. It is that, over the years, we stood up for those people. We stood up for those people in have-not areas and those people with low incomes who have not had the same kinds of economic opportunities as those whom my friends from the left represent who live in the wealthy economic areas like downtown Toronto and elsewhere. That is the record of this Party in the House of Commons, and the people from the Atlantic area know that. They are going to judge us on that and they are going to judge the Party opposite on what it does. The measure we are discussing strikes at the fundamental rights and abilities of people to survive and to have a future in this country. That is completely unacceptable.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member who just spoke represents a very important province, the Province of Newfoundland. I was most interested in his comments about the commitment regarding family allowances that people from Newfoundland felt when they entered confederation.

Following up on the last point that was made, does the Hon. Member realize that if family allowances had been fully indexed from the time they were brought in by the Liberal Party at the insistence of social policy groups, not the least of which was the CCF, way back in the 1940s, the women of Newfoundland would now be receiving over $50 per month rather than $32 per month? While he is up, will he tell us what the women of Newfoundland think about this?

Mr. Rompkey: Mr. Speaker, I know what the women of Newfoundland think about family allowances, something which has been quite rightly identified with this Party. I know what the women of Newfoundland think about the child tax credit, which quite rightly is identified with this Party. I know what the women of Newfoundland think about other measures this Party has brought in over the years. If "if's" and "and's" were pots and pans, there would be no work for tinkers.

One may have all kinds of ideas, but one may or may not have the ability to put them into effect. The fact is that we did have ideas and we put them into effect. Over the years, the people have known that this Party stands for family allowance and child tax credit. The people have known that this Party stands for a regional development policy that supports and helps low-income and have-not areas of the country. That is the record of the Liberal Party in Canada, and Newfoundland and the women and men of Newfoundland know that that is so.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the House will forgive me a slight digression at the outset of my speech. I would like to respond very briefly to the exchange we just heard between a Conservative Member and a former Liberal Minister who is now on this side of the House.

Coming from the Conservative side of the House, we heard what is now the classic rationale for Conservative policy. This rationale began not very many days ago when the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) was asked both in and out of the House why he shut down a refinery in Montreal. He indicated that he was simply trying to catch up with the Liberal Party which had shut down three refineries while he had shut down one. If it was all right for the Liberals to do it, the Prime Minister said, then that was a coherent, cogent reason for a Conservative Government to do the same thing.

We are now hearing the same thing about family allowances. A Member from the Conservative side of the House asked a former Minister if he would admit that the Liberal Party cut back on family allowance indexing when it was in power. To understate it considerably, that does not persuade me that it is right for the Conservative Party to do today what was wrong for the Liberal Party to do a decade ago.

On the other hand, we heard the former Minister of the Crown make a backhanded compliment to members of my Party by saying that one day we may govern, and we certainly believe that that is true. If I understood him correctly, he added that in the meantime, we have to deal with issues. The implication was that the Liberals deal with issues between elections but when they get elected they forget them.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, you will excuse a somewhat partial person if he says that that sort of sums up this little debate and my views of these two old Parties.

I do wish to turn to the substance of the issue and not simply deal with some of the arguments that have been made, although it seems to me that those arguments are pretty germane to what is going on right now. In my judgment, today is really a sad day for Canada, Canada's families, Canada's children, Canada's parents and particularly Canada's mothers.

As far as my Party is concerned, the central issue involved in the debate is the question of fairness. Later on today, the Conservative majority will rise unanimously to demonstrate by its vote its concern not for fairness but for unfairness. That will dramatically illustrate that the Government is not only insensitive to the claims of fairness but is also insensitive in the face of opposition to this particular measure on the part of a wide range of groups that represent every part of our country.

Many very good points have been made about family allowances in this debate. However, for me there are two crucial aspects to the history of family allowance in Canada. First, when family allowances came into being, our society recognized by state action the value of children by earmarking a very specific sum of money to be directed to children in society. That was an important action. Normally, in most of our transactions, a good part of which is totally justified in a market economy, people have the freedom to choose how they dispose of their incomes. That is part of what freedom is all about. However, my Party has long held the view that the allocation of financial resources in society ought never to be exclusively determined by market considerations.

Historically, the fundamental reason we came into being was that we favoured the view that society itself, through its elected men and women, ought to interfere with the marketplace constructively, positively and without embarrassment to decide that there are certain collective goals for the community as a whole that ought to be met by spending income. When we decided many years ago on family allowances, we were saying as a society that children and families are important and that the state is earmarking a particular sum of money to go to the children of our society. That is important and has become part of our social history.

The second important aspect of family allowances is something which, though not intended as such, was immediately perceived and has remained, and that is, what it has meant for many women in Canadian society. The point that has now been recognized by members of all Parties but is not made today is that the only cheques many women in Canadian society receive in their own names are the family allowance cheques, and that is a very important consideration. I am sure Members on all sides of the House have run into women in rural Canada, urban Canada, the Atlantic provinces, the West, downtown Toronto and downtown Montreal who have said that the family allowance cheques, though perhaps they are not an awful lot in dollar value except for low-income families, are important to them because the cheques come in their names. These two points are very important. I would suggest that a Government sensitive to these elements of social justice in our past would not be changing them now for the future.

Some 40 years ago family allowances were introduced. I would argue that they have an important place in the shared set of social values which most Canadians support. Without going into all the details of the history from that point in time onward, I do wish to mention a few crucial points.

We heard from a former Liberal Minister who gave what I would call a selective view of the history of family allowances. He failed to mention that in 1971, after they had been introduced, members of the Liberal Party, with a majority Government, attempted to abolish family allowances entirely. They did not attempt simply to reduce them or curtail their increments but, in 1971, the Liberal Party tried to abolish them entirely. They did not get away with it. They backed down after a prolonged debate in the House of Commons.

Then, in the early 1970s—and I say so with some pride and without trying to be sanctimonious—in the early days of minority Government, which held office from 1972 to 1974, a whole range of social programs were indexed. At that time I was proud to be chairman of my caucus. I took part in the discussions. We made the case that social programs, most of which but by no means all—which is important in terms of their effects—must go out to people who need the money. We made the case that when the economy is inflating, those social programs should be indexed to reflect the change in the cost of living. I wish to say to our Liberal colleagues in the House that they did not automatically respond by saying "Isn't that a good idea. Let's do it". There was something to do with power and its maintenance involved. We put it to them bluntly that if they wanted to remain in office one of the things they had better do is to index not only family allowances but pensions and other social programs. We won an important battle. We want to preserve those benefits.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I say to the Minister responsible for this Bill, and I know he has had this referred to him a number of times, that when he was on this side of the House and when he spoke on the subject on September 6, 1973, he joined in support of the indexation principle. Following that debate the Minister moved to the other side of the House and he has shifted his argument. However, I want to be as fair as I possibly can to the Minister. He responded to one of my colleagues earlier in this debate in defending his current position. He admitted that when he was on this side of the House he took the position that full indexation was to be supported. Now that he is on the other side of the House, he says that we need a change because of the deficit. That is what he said in the House recently. He said that the deficit has increased significantly as a proportion of our GNP.

I wish to say to the Minister two things in this respect. First, in a document which he prepared as a forerunner for a discussion of pensions he said that there would not be any change in terms of cutting back on social programs, in this case pensions. He said that money from those programs would not be allocated away from them to deal with the deficit. This year, when the economy was inflated and when the debt was just about as real, he made a commitment that there would be no change in social programs in order to use that money for the deficit. However, he is now doing just that.

Second, I want to say to the Minister that it is our view that if you are taking revenue to deal with any economic problem faced by a Government—a Government which will take money from pensioners or recipients of family allowances—it should never do so except in the final result. By God, it should certainly never do it when it is giving a $500,000 capital gains tax gift to the rich in Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I say to the Minister that the argument simply does not wash. As Leader of a social democratic Party I would be prepared to say that at certain times absolutely everyone must pay his or her share. In wartime, or under certain other circumstances, I can understand that, and in this category I include pensioners and recipients of the family allowance. However, I say this should be done only if there is a real crisis. I am certainly not saying that we have that type of situation in Canada today. I do not accept that, when we continue to have one of the most unfair tax systems in the world and this Government keeps that unfair tax system in place.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I also want to say that although indexation was brought in by a minority Government, after the Liberals regained a majority they began the process of cutting back on family allowance increases which were to be related to cost of living increases. Members of the Liberal Party reduced the amount through their six and five program, which was a decision they made in the early 1980s, and before that, in 1978, there was another reduction.

If we look at the history of the Liberal Party simply on this issue we see that their members sound like great social democrats now that they are on this side of the House. However, if we look at the history in recent years and compare the results of what family allowances would have been if they had been left alone with what they are actually now, as has already been pointed out by other members of my Party, we find that the family allowance would be at least one-third greater than it is today. I say to our Liberal colleagues that in criticizing the Conservatives just for once they should be a little more honest, a little more fair, and they should remember their own past.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: The Government knows that single parents at the poverty level will be hit hardest by this Bill. The Government also knows that some 90 per cent of single-parent families happen to be headed by women, and that over 50 per cent in this category are living at the poverty level. Therefore, the Government knows that while it is taking needed money away from these Canadians, it is giving millions of unneeded dollars to the rich in the form of this special capital gains tax hand-out. When this measure was brought in I said, and I repeat it now, that instead of showing more compassion for the poor of Canada, or for the ordinary citizen, what we have is a Conservative Government which, quite literally, is taking from the needy to give to the greedy. That is what the Tories are doing.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I would now like to say a few words on this important issue in our other official language.

[Translation]

I repeat, Mr. Speaker, poor and needy families will be the worst off. Wait until the economy is in better shape, says the Government or, more accurately, the Prime Minister. Everybody knows the Prime Minister's stock answer on economic indicators. I challenge the Prime Minister to put his money where his mouth is. I challenge the Prime Minister to listen to Canadians and withdraw Bill C-70 today.

The Prime Minister could start today by keeping his promise to maintain our social programs instead of increasing the financial burdens of those who already have trouble coping. The Government is giving Canadian families a long list of broken promises. Perhaps the Prime Minister would like to use his latest excuse: the Liberals did too. As if two wrongs made a right. As I said before, it is an excuse we cannot accept.

In his consultation paper on "Child and Elderly Benefits", the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) stated that cuts in family allowances would not be used to reduce the deficit. However, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) was forced to admit that this money would in fact be used to reduce the deficit. And the Minister of National Health and Welfare, who is here in the House today, made the same admission. I now want to ask the Minister: Who else is going to pay the bill? Certainly not the oil multinationals or the chartered banks or rich investors, individuals and groups which have already been given a lot of money by the Conservatives. Mr. Speaker, Canadian families are paying the bill, families across this country, families in rural areas and in our towns and villages. For many children, these cuts mean they will not have the running shoes they wanted, no school supplies, fewer healthy snacks. In its intransigence, this Government has ignored the voice of the poor, women and even the churches.

Day after day, New Democratic Party members have been tabling petitions in the House demanding that the Government fully index family allowances. Hundreds of thousands of signatures, even more than for old age security pensions.

This Government says it consults, but it does not listen. Before Christmas, the Government refused to meet with the Coalition des Québecoises pour les allocations familiales, a group representing a host of community and women's organizations.

Last week, twenty major religious, family, native peoples, anti-poverty, labour and women's groups sent a telegram to the Prime Minister, asking him to withdraw Bill C-70. Today, Mr. Speaker, is the last day in this debate in which the Prime Minister can show he not only consults but listens.

• (1150)

[English]

Indeed, this may be the final day of debate on this Bill. It would be somewhat Utopian of me, I suspect, at this time to expect that the Prime Minister will hear the last minute appeal I have made or, more relevantly, respond to the appeals that have come from groups of men and women from all parts of the country. However, I want to assure the Prime Minister that while this might be the last day on which we can speak on this particular Bill, we in the New Democratic Party know that the Budget is coming up and in the weeks ahead we have an obligation to continue to push for fairness in tax matters and to promote fairness, particularly in terms of programs as they affect children. I give notice to the Government that this day it may, because of its numbers, have won the battle, but the war for justice will continue right up to the Budget.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I say through you to the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), would the Hon. Member tell us if he accepts the fact that, with respect to a family of low income, under the reforms we are proposing, the mother will have more money in her purse for the next five years than she would have under the present legislation?

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I willingly agree with what the Hon. Member has said. Indeed, we have stated in a number of speeches that if one looks at the specific changes the Government is making, there is that improvement. However, we have also added that we cannot look at that in isolation from all of the other tax measures and actions taken by the Government. Our calculation is that by 1990 there will be a net reduction in benefits precisely for those people about whom the Hon. Member is now asking.

[Translation]

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I think the matter is even simpler: Is the Hon. Member prepared to admit that the Bill we have before the House today will put more money in the pockets of low-income mothers than is the case at the present time? Yes or no?

[English]

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I find the question to be a variation of the one the Hon. Member just asked. I would be happy to send him our analysis of the other range of measures which have been brought in in order to show that the net effect for the people about whom he talks will be negative, not positive. The crucial point for us on social programs is—if the Hon. Member agrees with the two points I made early in my speech—first, that the family allowance is an important recognition by the state of the needs specifically of children and, second, that still, at this point in our history, it is the only cheque which comes into the home of many women, and if the Government is sensitive to the moral claims of these two categories, it simply should not alter them in any negative way in any manner whatsoever.

[Translation]

Mr. Desrosiers: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Leader of the New Democratic Party.

He said earlier that family allowance cheques were addressed to the woman of the family. I wish he would explain, because I may have misunderstood, and I hope these allowances are not paid to women since they are supposed to be for the benefit of Canadian children. I hope you understand this.

I would like to know . . . I wish you would explain what you meant when you said that the cheques were made out to the woman of the family.

[English]

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, of course, I do not mean to imply in any sense one or two things the Hon. Member may be getting at, for example, that single parent fathers do not also receive cheques, because they obviously do. But compared numerically with women, the vast majority of the cheques go to mothers. Perhaps the Hon. Member was also implying—and I am not sure—that the moneys sent to whatever parent might be spent for a variety of family reasons or, alternatively, since there is no sort of state inspection or interference, and ought not to be, with respect to how the parents spend the money, they clearly can be spending the money in any way they deem appropriate. There is no doubt at all that the intention of the program is to put money into the pockets of parents to be used for the bringing up of their children. I add immediately that I have not the slightest doubt that, in the vast majority of cases, that is still how that money is spent.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say at the outset to the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) that my family is the most important thing in my life as well. I also recognize that he is a very fair individual and is looking at this question from a realistic point of view. However, I would like to underline one fact and ask for a comment from him. The family allowance cheques will still be going to the mothers who have been receiving them, and those cheques, indeed, will have increased for the first month of 1986. In other words, the Government has merely tinkered with the system, we have maintained the concept of universality, and there has been an actual real increase in the cheques for this year. In the spirit of fairness, I think that direction should not be lost sight of.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, to pick up on the language used by the Hon. Member himself, there has not been a real increase at all. If the word "real" is used as it normally is in economics, it means to take into account increases in the cost of living. If I may turn it right around for the Hon. Member, this is what this debate is all about and, unlike the Conservatives, we want to provide the recipients of family allowances with real increases as opposed to bookkeeping entries. As the Hon. Member knows, there has been an increase all right, but it is all of 31 cents a month instead of about four times that amount.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) and our Leader. Very often we have heard Government Members justify the cut-back in old age security and in the family allowance on the basis of the general notion that we are living beyond our means. Yet our expenditures on social programs are well below those of seven countries of the OECD. Therefore, I find it hard to believe that we in Canada are spending beyond our means. Would the Hon. Member comment on whether the cause of our deficit is not that we are living beyond our means, but that we have not been collecting the revenues we should have been collecting?

● (1200)

Mr. Broadbent: We have been living beyond our means in the sense that the vast majority of people are subsidizing a small minority of rich individuals and very large corporations who have been receiving a disproportionate share of the tax breaks paid for by the rest of Canadians.

Very quickly, on that entirely reasonable and fair-minded question, I would like to make two points. One is that if we took a harder look at our sources of revenue, namely that $30 billion-plus category of tax expenditures, which is to say money going to the corporations without a cost benefit analysis, we may, as the Auditor General has suggested a number of times, find not simply millions but billions of dollars in additional revenue. We would then not have to attack family allowance recipients and pensioners and other people who need the money.

The second point is simply to say to Government Members that the Prime Minister of Japan was here recently and I hope our Prime Minister had a serious chat with him. Intermittently over the last decade the deficit in Japan has been larger than ours as a percentage of its Gross National Product, but the Japanese are not doing too badly. They have an unemployment rate of 2.5 per cent. It we could get unemployment down to about 7 per cent, set that as a goal, then instead of whacking away at social programs for needy people we would have enough revenue to wipe out the deficit. That should be the task of this Government.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The period for questions and comments is now over. We will continue debate with the Hon. Member for Scarborough Centre (Mrs. Browes).

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak on third reading of Bill C-70. I have listened with interest to some of the comments made today by members of the opposition Parties. I am pleased to note that both Parties have acknowledged that families are going to be in a much better financial position over the next few years than they would under the legislation presently in place. This Bill fulfils important commitments our Government made to Canadians upon taking office some 17 months ago. The first commitment was to bring federal social assistance to those who need it most, and at the same time, to reduce further our huge national deficit so that our children will not — I repeat, will not —have to bear that massive financial burden caused by past Government overspending.

Bill C-70 demonstrates to Canadians that this is a caring Government. We care about those in our society who are less fortunate than others, and we are doing something about it. The child tax credit, which benefits low-income Canadians, will be increased by $70 this year and $35 in each of the next two years. This is a significant benefit, and just this morning we had both opposition Parties acknowledge the fact that families are going to be in a better financial position.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Browes: The child tax exemption, which benefits primarily upper-income Canadians, will decrease in the years ahead.

Over the short period of time that this Government has been in office, it has presented some truly extensive social policy legislation. It is legislation that will help people. We care about people and we will truly help those people in need in communities right across this country. For example, we have extended the spouses' allowance. This is excellent legislation which is helping people, especially older women who are most in need. We broadened the definition of disability for income tax purposes. That was a truly caring policy. We increased pensions for veterans and introduced greater flexibility in the Canada Pension Plan.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Browes: Mr. Speaker, members of our Party and Government have high ideals regarding strengthening family values. The legislation I have mentioned will truly help people.

Opposition Members have referred to certain things such as the report of the National Council on Welfare, and we talk about poverty in Canada. In my opinion the best way to reduce poverty is to make sure people have jobs. Families can be strengthened if family members have jobs. They have to have a job in order to eliminate poverty. This Government, over a short period of time, has created over 400,000 jobs right across the country. We can be truly proud of that fact because it means that a caring Government is helping people right across the country. Another very significant piece of legislation which will help families concerns the enforcement of maintenance orders resulting from marriage breakdown. When we talk of single-parent families we know this legislation will help. This Government cares about how Canadian tax dollars are spent. By redirecting social assistance to those who need it the most, we are using federal resources in an efficient and effective manner.

During the election, and since this Government took office, three important themes have formed the cornerstone of Progressive Conservative policy-making. The first was economic renewal. The second was national reconciliation. The third, which we have touched on today, is social justice. Surely the primary reason for social assistance is to help those in need. Therefore, it only makes sense to direct federal money to those people. How can we as Members of Parliament be content with social assistance programs which actually benefit upper-income Canadians more than they do lower-income Canadians? Yet, that is precisely the situation that we have had under the previous legislation. Bill C-70 and future legislation will bring sensibility to the situation by helping those in need by increasing the child tax credit and decreasing the child tax exemption.

My friends opposite disregard another important feature of Bill C-70, that is, the burden that previous legislation has put on the backs of our children and of future generations. I will quote from a very famous individual, Franco Modigliani, a Keynesian economist and the most recent winner of the Nobel prize for economics. He recently wrote: "In reaching levels unprecedented in peacetime, the deficit has become a serious threat to the wellbeing of younger and future generations of Americans". That quote was in reference to the American deficit which, on a per capita basis, is far less than our own.

Industrialized countries around the world are re-examining their social welfare systems in order to find better methods of assisting their underprivileged citizens. New Zealand's recently elected socialist Government has introduced proposals to realign social policies in redirecting moneys. Britain, the United States, and even that bastion of social democracy, Sweden, are all taking a second look at their state welfare programs to find more efficient ways of using scarce tax resources.

Here in Canada, Mr. Speaker, we are faced with the same challenge. The Government is meeting that challenge with sensible, practical programs that will take care of Canadians in need without recklessly spending their money. In short, Mr. Speaker, Bill C-70 is a progressive piece of legislation that will be of benefit, not only to thousands of Canadians today, but to millions of children in the future.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, does the Hon. Member have any idea that over 150 organizations, including many expert social policy groups, women's groups, groups associated with children, and many other groups, unanimously opposed this legislation because it was regressive? How can she say it is progressive when it is reducing the indexation on family allowance? This means that the universal family allowance benefit, which I think most Canadian parents, and certainly most Canadian women, feel is a right of their children, is being eroded and will be eroded even more in future years.

The Member referred to the fact that the real way in which to deal with poverty in Canada is to have jobs. I wonder if she has recently talked to women in her riding who are on social assistance. There is no question that we need jobs. I would be the first to say that. We need better jobs, better paying jobs, and full-time jobs. However, that is not exactly what is happening for low-income women, for women who have not been in the labour market, or for many women who are in job ghettos earning pretty low rates of pay. Women are being pushed into part-time jobs and are not taking home a full or adequate pay cheque. Does the Member not agree that these very women particularly need, not only a fully indexed family allowance, but an increased family allowance? The Liberals are the ones who eroded it in the beginning, otherwise it would be worth much more.

Does the Member not think that women who are not working in the workforce, but are certainly working hard at home raising, in many cases, large families, need a fully indexed family allowance? We certainly need jobs, we need better paying jobs, we need women in those better paying jobs, and we need full-time jobs. However, that in no way disputes the need for an adequate support program and fully indexed family allowance.

Mrs. Browes: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Hon. Member brought a number of points to the attention of the House, and I would like to respond to them. I think it has been a very healthy exercise to have a discussion on this particular issue. I was pleased, as a Member of Parliament, as a mother, and as a grandmother, to meet a great number of mothers and grandmothers on Parliament Hill during this discussion. I think that is healthy because it means that mothers, grandmothers, and women across the country are becoming more involved in legislation.

The important thing about this legislation is that it in fact creates an increase in the family allowance. It is important to recognize that through this legislation there is an increase in the family allowance and a reduction in the escalation of that increase. The increase is $11.28 annually. In addition to that, there is a $70 increase in the tax credit for the present year and an increase of $35 in the two subsequent years. That is an important item to recognize.

I firmly believe that the creation of jobs is the way to reduce poverty. I am very pleased to see further legislation in this House which addresses opportunities for women in the work force. I refer to the employment equity Bill which is in committee at the present time. That is the kind of legislation that will give women more opportunities in the workforce in order that they can become self-sufficient.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Browes: Mr. Speaker, Bill C-70 is one piece of legislation that is helping people.

Ms. Mitchell: How can you say it is helping anybody?

Mrs. Browes: The Opposition Members in the Chamber this morning have both acknowledged that this legislation will put more money into the hands of the people who need it most. Families are going to be better off with this legislation. They have recognized and acknowledged that this morning. On top of that, we have other legislation that will assist people in getting jobs. We have created over 400,000 jobs already in the past few months. In addition to that, people will be given more opportunity across the country to get jobs. We have been eliminating poverty and helping families.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, as has previously been mentioned, this is the last day of debate on this important piece of legislation. It brings to mind a short story I read several years ago by Flaubert about the last class. It was about the last day of a class held in a French schoolhouse just before the First World War. People faced with the enormity of what they were all of sudden going to have to cope with in terms of that holocaust found themselves having to express, perhaps in more truthful terms, their own feelings, commitments, and attitudes with regard to what they had achieved and what they hoped to achieve. The conclusion of the short story was that at the end of the class the question was how many would remain and how many would come back after the war was over.

I think that has great symbolic value for Members on the Conservative side of the House. This debate symbolizes the question of how many really will come back after having entered into the kind of measures that they are now proposing to the House. Of course, we know what the answer is.

• (1220)

I was struck yesterday listening to news accounts that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), so typical of the man, blamed the Draconian drop in the support of his Government to the Press Gallery. Somehow the image machine is not working as efficiently as he had hoped. Never once did he question whether it might not be something that the Government is doing wrong. Never once did he ask himself that what the Government was trying to propose was honestly and clearly being perceived by Canadians as being in the wrong direction. Never once did he really ask himself—and the last speaker might have had the honesty to ask herself—whether the Government cared about what Canadians thought about the Government or about issues. It is obvious he did not.

If the Government were more sensitive and responsive to Canadians, it would see that the measures that we are debating today, along with many others, are the real cause why the Government has frustrated the expectations of so many Canadians and as a result is being paid at this moment the most useful response, namely, withdrawal of support.

I cannot believe that any Prime Minister in the history of this country could somehow, with any form of integrity, greet with equanimity the latest poll result, which revealed that 50 per cent of Canadians believe he is doing a worse job than in the previous three months. That is half of the population.

There is a reason for that result. We see before us today in the legislation we are debating a fundamental dishonesty in the case being presented by Members opposite. They are trying to say that people will be better off as a consequence of this legislation.

Mr. Edwards: That is absolutely right.

Mr. Axworthy: That is what the Government is trying to convince Canadians of. But what the Tories do not take into account is that this legislation is part of a package. It is part of a total presentation by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) which will end up in a net reduction of income for poor and middle income Canadians.

When the Tories talk about fairness, caring and sharing, why is it that by 1990 Canadians who make less than $10,000 will have $400 or $500 less income because of these tax measures and withdrawal benefits? How do the Tories explain that particular equation? What we have is a withdrawal of the child tax deduction in the income tax, increases in sales tax and in user costs in transportation. All the tax measures adding up to what economists call the family basket mean is that a family earning less than $10,000 will have $500 less income to purchase goods and services. A family making a modest income, between $15,000 and $25,000 a year, will have $1,000 withdrawn from that income package. Yet we see Members saying that we must sing hallelujah to this legislation because people will be better off.

People do not take one piece of legislation in isolation. People are pretty canny. They sit down and count how much is left in their pockets when it is all over. They know that the net result of this Government's actions based on the May Budget and subsequent legislation, including this Bill, will be a net drop in purchasing power. It will strike at Canadians least able and capable of carrying that burden. Even if you look at the tax burden itself, never mind the other kinds of eliminations and erosions, but again, if you take a family earning $10,000 a year, the net tax increase to that family will be 2 per cent. It does not sound too bad, but for the person making over $80,000 a year the increase is only 1.6 per cent.

Is that the way fairness is now being defined in Canada? People see through this type of thing very clearly. All the attempts to gear up the image machine, to intimidate the Press Gallery and all the attempts in this House to try to provide the big lie will not work because people are too smart for the Conservatives. They see through the camouflage and the smoke screen. They realize, when it comes down to the full and total picture, that Canadians will be poorer. Even more dramatic is the fact that those who are substantially well off in this community will not be touched in the same way.

I would recommend to Members opposite that they read the national poll commissioned by Maclean's magazine which was published in the year end issue. Decima Research, one of the polling outfits used extensively by the Conservative Party—presumably Conservatives trust its accuracy—asked for the mood and attitude of Canadians. The most frightening result of the poll is that Canadians increasingly see themselves in a class-divided society. Canadians see Canada divided between haves and have-nots. People see that the kind of disenfranchisement that is becoming so much a part of Margaret Thatcher's United Kingdom is now beginning to take hold here. That is not a poll done by Liberals, New Democrats or social agencies, but by Decima Research and printed in MacLean's magazine.

People see that a fracturing of society is on the increase. This perception on the part of Canadians across Canada runs counter to the principal objectives set by the Conservatives in the last election about national reconciliation. In other words, the goal is almost in reverse proportion to the result. We are not receiving or gaining more sense of a community, we are not bringing people closer together, rather, over the past year, people feel more divided than before.

Why does the Government, with its majority and its sensitivity which it claims, it has not respond to those facts instead of worrying about whether the Press Gallery is giving it a fair deal? It would seem to me that this is a far more serious issue to be faced.

I believe the flaw we see in the family allowance situation is due as much to the failed promise as to the specific items within it. I think many Canadians are prepared to support innovation in social security legislation. They see that is a need to come to grips with the problems of income security.

The family is changing in Canada. I am presently engaged in a major study in my own constituency on the contemporary kinds of families we have. We have social agencies and churches joining us in going door to door to find out what the new modern day family is like. It is an interesting examination, Mr. Speaker. People are saying that in many cases the supports on which people rely to give them assistance in dealing with their children and with each other are being withdrawn.

We are beginning to pay a terrible price for the constant erosion of social services over the last 10 years at the municipal, provincial, federal and even the voluntary level. There is not in any way the same reach of assistance. Sometimes it is counselling, sometimes support and sometimes listening. Many holes are beginning to appear in the social security network.

As Liberals we are not afraid of looking at new ideas and innovations. We were castigated by the Leader of the New Democratic Party in 1971 for suggesting a guaranteed annual income. We know New Democrats are in some ways the real reactionaries in society.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): You are right.

Mr. Axworthy: New Democrats really do not want anything that was done to change. We recognize that the income security programs devised in the 1940s and 1950s, of great relevance and importance, should be re-examined under the new economic conditions of the 1970s and 1980s. I guess the New Democrats do not want to do that.

• (1230)

We need to have an open mind. We have to be prepared to ask: How do we best provide for families? The family structure is a different one at this time. There are many more single parents and there is a breakdown of the extended family. There is greater disparity among families because they live in different regions. There are different demands upon them because of changes in the workforce. Our security and social services systems should be responsive to those facts.

In this case the Government turned around the argument. One of the reasons it obtained a great deal of support in the 1984 election was that it promised Canadians that it would take a new look at things and that it would be innovative. One area was social policy. However, when it came down to changing the way in which the federal Government dealt with families, it listened to the accountants, not to social policy thinkers. The only changes which are being made are the ones which will allow the Minister of Finance to bring down the deficit. That is the reason the Government is changing family policy. It is not bringing in anything new. It is not taking a broader look at the family. It is not examining other kinds of family issues to see whether it can reallocate or redirect. If that were the case, we could have a very different debate in the House. We could be debating a new policy direction for families. Instead, we are debating a false and flawed premise that somehow families will be assisted by giving the Minister of Finance a piddling few dollars from their family allowance package.

That is why the Government is going wrong. It did not have the courage to launch into an honest and open debate about how Governments and the state can best assist and deal with family requirements and needs in the 1980s and 1990s. I am saddened by that. I looked forward to that kind of debate. It could have been an important debate in the House. Instead, we in the Opposition must try to defend what is there now. We see the wrong attitude when the Government begins to restructure or change the social programs. It is not doing that to improve the programs. It is not doing it to try to assist families more effectively. The Government is doing it because the mandarins in the Department of Finance say that they have to get the deficit down and that they will take it from families, not from corporations. That is the fundamental flaw in what we are debating today. It is too bad the Conservatives are shaking their heads. I do not know whether they are shaking their heads in sorrow, as they should be doing, or because they find themselves faced with a harsh reality.

Mr. Jepson: It is for you, my friend.

Mr. Axworthy: They do not have to worry about me. I can look after myself; I have been doing it for a long time.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: That is right. I have also looked after Manitoba, which is more than the Minister of National Health and Welfare is doing. We certainly looked after our provinces. That is one reason the Tories will lose in Manitoba. The people of that province know who cares about them.

The fact of the matter is that this is a family allowance reduction. It can only be counted in those terms. It is drawing money away from families. I take with some amusement the last speaker saying that Canadians would be out in the streets clapping with wild applause when they get a 31-cent increase in their family allowance cheques this month. Will that send them rushing out to buy services? The problem with attacking family allowances—and in some way it is an easier target—is that the benefits are oftentimes invisible or hidden. Many of the families who receive family allowance often cannot get their problems or issues out of the forefront.

I have conducted an examination of families in my riding and have found out that the family allowance is absolutely essential for many mothers to buy services for their children which are otherwise not available to them. It may provide some better medical help or some decent counselling. It may simply provide bus money or transportation money to allow them to visit or go somewhere else, something which allows them to round out their lives.

One cannot simply apply calculus and say that it is of more benefit to one family than to another. There is an entitlement involved. If we return to the Marsh report of 1943, we see that it contained a basic principle which we are trying to defend, that is, that the opportunity to have a family—and it is a rare opportunity—also carries certain costs which cannot be pigeon-holed in the Department of National Health and Welfare or in the Department of Finance. Those are costs which every family has in terms of its own unique arrangements and needs, so we put some small amount of discretionary income into their hands so they can apply it where they feel the most pressure. Sometimes it may concern schooling or purchasing a certain consultative service in the health field. Nevertheless, it gives each family a certain entitlement or trust provided by the collective society to help them make their choices. If we erode that entitlement and do not replace it with anything else, we reduce their level of choice and their ability and capacity to help their families and children seek out the support services they need. This is why the debate in the House is such an important one. It should encompass the full range of options and choices.

I am sorry the Minister of National Health and Welfare has left momentarily. I was very saddened after the debate on deindexation affecting senior citizens. He was heard to utter a statement that the Government was withdrawing from the field of social policy innovation and reform, that it would no longer engage in it because it was burnt badly. Now it will simply draw into a fetal crouch, not use its mind and imagination to seek out the different alternatives. That is a serious mistake; it is a fundamental error. Instead, the Government is nickle and diming Canadians to death. It is picking away at the income base of low and modest income Canadians. That should not be the action of a federal Government which says that it cares, a federal Government which was elected on fond promises of giving families more hope and aspirations. Families cannot be given more hope and aspiration if $1,000 per year is to be taken out of their pockets by 1990. There is no way any Tory can justify doing that. That does not even take into account the hidden costs which are being brought in every day. We see the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) adding a few dollars to air transportation, licensing and certificates. We see other costs related to farmers. The total basket of costs is rising and income is going down. Yet, we heard the last speaker saying that they cared. It is very difficult to rationalize caring when we look at the facts.

Obviously we oppose this legislation, not only on the grounds of what it is doing in the context of family income but also because it represents the wrong direction or approach to dealing with the issues of family life. We must encourage the Government to open and broaden its approach and not to base its revenues upon some kind of restrictive, punitive equation put forward by the Minister of Finance. We should look at the revenues available and see how they can be applied in a more flexible, varied and sensitive way to families. Then we will have a healthier country and a healthier economy. The Government's proposition is a self-defeating one.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I sat here and watched that particular Hon. Member when he was a Minister of the previous Government for quite a lengthy period of time. I find some of his remarks to be absolutely incredible. He said that taking $1,000 per year out of the pockets of families was abhorrent. It is a correct statement; to take $1,000 might indeed be abhorrent, but he participated in a Government which took thousands of dollars per year out of the pockets of families through regressive taxation such as the taxes on fuel to heat homes. There were thousands of dollars in indirect taxation in the last four years of that Government. The taxes which affect children and families almost tripled. That was a Government that gave money out, borrowed money, increased indirect taxation and put the burden on those same children for the future through the deficit. That is what kind of a Government he is supporting. That is his idea of social policy.

I have talked to the people in my riding, poor families who said to me, "We need more money". Rich families say to me, "We need less money and we know that the poor need more." This Government and this Minister have brought in a policy related to family allowance, which says that the rich shall get less through the universal family allowance program, slightly less because of the deindexing, but the poor shall get more through the credits. The Liberals frequently talk out of either side of their mouths, but I think the previous Minister who just spoke speaks out of two mouths. I want to straighten out those two mouths.

Who is the Hon. Member speaking for today? Does he disagree with the assertion that the poor tell us they need more money, and that is what the Government is doing is giving the poor more money than they were going to get under the other system, or is he speaking on behalf of the rich and trying to tell us that the rich in this country do not want to donate that money to the poor? When I move throughout my riding I hear people say this is a good policy. It takes money away from the rich and it gives money to the poor. Who is he speaking for, the rich who want to protect their pockets or is he trying to convince this House that the poor do not need more money? Which is it? Speak with one mouth. Tell us who it is you are representing.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond to the Member with the big mouth, never mind two mouths. The fact of the matter is that this Party speaks for all Canadians. We do not, as you do, try to divide between rich and poor. We believe that our mandate has been to ensure that every Canadian, regardless of class or treatment, is given fair opportunity to speak.

The Hon. Member spoke about the income that will be received by the poor. The fact of the matter is, I say to the Member from Calgary, that if he goes back and looks at the net income of a family under $10,000, he will find that by 1990 they will be receiving in the range of $400 to $500 less under the present system of programs.

Mr. Hawkes: What about this year?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, we are talking about a Bill that deals over a four-year period. Why does he not deal with the terms in his own Bill? He is asking the question, I am giving him the answer. They will receive less. That is the flaw. Furthermore, the other element of the specific child program is the reduction of the threshold from $26,000 to $23,000, which in today's dollars is taking it down to $20,000, which would reduce the eligibility of families for the child tax credit, so that fewer families will be eligible to receive it as a result of this legislation.

What this Government is doing is redefining those who are poor now. We could eliminate poverty if we followed the Conservative example of redefining how poverty is measured—we could bring it down to nothing. We could say there is no poverty because anyone who makes less than $1,000 is rich. That is what you are trying to do, you are redefining the limits and the levels by reducing the threshold. By introducing the other forms of tax withdrawal you are increasing the tax draw from poor income families. The Government is also putting a heavier burden on modest income families, those who are making $15,000 or $20,000. We are talking at that time about close to $1,000 of additional taxes for them. If you add up the combination of taxes and benefits they are going to be $1,000 poorer net in their disposable income.

I would ask the Member the question in return: does it not bother him that in fact the poor people in his riding, or the modest-income people in his riding, are going to be receiving less money to purchase the goods and services that their families need?

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) a question, it is a simple one. I want to preface it first of all by saying that I was in the New Democratic Party, a member of this caucus in the House, in 1972, and there was a minority Government situation and the Liberal Party was tenuously holding on to power. One of the things that we forced that Party to accept so that we could support them in that minority period was the indexation of programs, old age pensions, family allowances and tax exemptions. In 1982, or thereabouts, the Liberal Party's Government started the process of deindexing those programs. It brought in the six and five. The question I want to ask the Member is this, how can he stand so boldly in this House and castigate the Government for its part in the deindexing of family allowances, when in fact it is exactly the same path that his Government put us on?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to answer that question. The Hon. Member was not in the House of Commons during that period. He is an astute student of public affairs and I am sure he was reading the daily press so he knows that we were at that time faced with an acute rate of inflation. In order to bring some economic stability into the country we had to find a way of reducing it. The six and five program was introduced as a major measure. We brought in six and five on the principle that, first, it was temporary, and, second, it was geared to the rate of inflation. The rate of inflation did come down. This Government now is benefiting in large part in terms of an economic renewal based upon those programs. It happens to be the case that we now have a 5 per cent inflation. The fact of the matter is that we introduced that as a means of arresting inflation. Within the next year the rate of inflation came to 6 per cent within one year because of that program, and they are now living on the benefits of that rate of inflation and indexation. That is the reason it happened. Now you are not honest enough or you are not forthright enough to give the credit where it is due. We brought inflation down in this country, that was the reason for that program, and you should be thankful for that.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, the only ones who believe the statement that we have just heard from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) are the Canadians who voted for the Liberal Party in the last election. They are the only ones that are convinced by that argument. Nobody else in Canada is. Look at their numbers. What I heard today reminds me very much of what I heard yesterday from his Leader when he talked about the Liberal policy on freer trade. It is going to be bilateral, unilateral. I tell you it was really a class act out of the campaign of 1984. Boy, Chick was really chic yesterday.

Let me just give this Member once more the figures of the record of that Government. Let us go back to 1976. The family allowance was frozen at $22.08. Under full indexing it would have been $24.55, that is a difference of $2.47 a child per month. That was in 1976. Did we hear any cries of anguish from the Liberal Party at that time? Did we hear any cries of anguish from Canadians at that time? Canadians were so used to being hammered by that Government that they did not know the difference.

• (1250)

In 1979, when the child tax credit was introduced, the family allowance was reduced from $25.68 to $20. Under full indexing, it would have been $27.97. That is a difference of $7.97 per child per month. However, Liberal Members would never mention that.

In 1983 and 1984, when the family allowance was subjected to six and five, under full indexing family allowance would have been $29.82 in 1983 and $31.93 in 1984. Under six and five, it was reduced to $28.52 in 1983 and $29.95 in 1984. That is a difference in 1983 of $1.40 per child per month and in 1984 of $1.98 per child per month. Let the record speak for itself.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, once again I welcome the opportunity to comment on this question because the Hon. Member has introduced a number of new elements to the issue. First he talked about the definition—

Some Hon. Members: New elements?

Mr. Stewart: It's called the truth. You didn't recognize it.

Mr. Axworthy: It is obviously lunchtime. You can tell because the beasts are going wild in their cages again. They have not yet had their full dose of pablum from their national leader. Let us talk about the definition of trade for a moment.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: The Prime Minister has said many times: "What do I believe in? I'm not sure. I want fuller trade and I want freer trade". This is the Party that does not know where it is going on the trade policy. Thank God there is one Party that had the courage to put forward its position on free trade, and that is what we did yesterday. I would be glad to send that document to Ministers opposite. It will probably be the most intelligent thing they will have read so far regarding the trade policy, because they have certainly not read anything like that from their own Cabinet.

Let us talk about the one change the Hon. Member mentioned. The Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) said that he wants to be honest about this. The difference is that when we brought in that change, we brought in the child tax credit and we said very clearly to the Canadian people that we wanted to help pay for poorer Canadians. The net result was that poorer Canadians received substantially more income. That was a result of that action and that was the change that took place. We had proper social reform. We brought in a child tax credit and said that we would limit the family allowance in order to pay for it so that poorer families would receive more money. Under the new Government's measure, they will receive less money. Now answer that question.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I think all of us in this caucus feel that this is a pretty dark day for Canada's children as well as for the women of Canada and for families generally. The family allowance is a very important contract that we as a country have with Canadian families.

We have now come to the final day of debate on the third reading stage of Bill C-70, the Government for the second time having imposed closure on this debate. We are very disappointed that the Government at no time has really reconsidered this Bill based upon the very massive protests of many Canadian groups regarding the deindexation of family allowances.

There have been consultations, advice, appeals and protests made by well over 100 organizations, all of which I could list if I had the time. These organizations appeared last spring when we debated the reform of the family benefits and when the Government invited them to get involved in consultation. Many of them gave expert opinions at that time, opinions which were disregarded. Despite feelings that this consultation had been a farce, these organizations returned to the legislative committee which dealt with Bill C-70 to give their opinions.

I am referring to groups from every walk of life. Women representatives of poor people's groups told us from firsthand experience what it means to be trying to budget for a family with lower welfare rates and how important the family allowance, and a fully indexed family allowance, is to them because when they go to the grocery stores, they have to pay the full price of the food and other items they need for their families.

We heard from community groups from all provinces. We heard from many women's groups. I would say that there has been a massive stimulation of the women's movement across Canada as a result of this Bill. We heard from women's groups from practically every province of Canada and particularly from the Province of Quebec where over 50 or 60 organizations formed a new coalition to protest this Bill and present their views on it to committee. Of course, these are views that very dramatically and militantly oppose Bill C-70.

We heard from many churches. We heard from the United Church, from the Canadian Council of Bishops and from the Anglican Church, all of which oppose Bill C-70. We heard from many different labour groups. We heard from child care groups across Canada. We in our Party heard from native groups. We did not hear from them in committee because the committee did not agree to hear from native women's associations. However, we received letters and have spoken with them directly and we know that many native women's groups object to this Bill.

We heard from parent-teachers' associations right across Canada, associations which represent a huge network of parents with school-age children. They oppose this Bill very strongly. We heard from social work experts and from social policy groups including the CCSD, the National Council on Welfare, NAPO and many other associations including the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, a very strong opponent of the Bill.

The Government has paid no attention to these representations. It spoke of consultation, yet these groups were unanimous in their opposition to this Bill. The organizations presented fact after fact to support the very negative, retrogressive, cumulative effects of this Bill as well as the effect it will have by symbolizing what the Government is doing to Canadian families.

For months now, petitions have been flowing in from ordinary Canadians right across Canada. It has been very difficult for mothers with young children to involve themselves physically in this protest by going to meetings and organizing in the way the old age pensioners did last spring. However, there is no question that this has been the largest mass petition campaign that we have ever seen in the House of Commons. As an example of that, my office just sent over the petitions that came this weekend. I suppose there are another 500 separate petitions here which came in only two or three days. The petitions are flooding in from all parts of Canada. Yet the Government has been ignoring them.

I know the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) received all kinds of petitions directly but he has not mentioned this to the House. There have been telegrams and letters sent to the Government. The people have tried everything they can think of to try to get the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and the Prime Minister to change their position on this matter.

This is the Government that talked about consultation and about listening to people. I know from talking to people that the people are very disillusioned at this point. Over 100,000 people have signed petitions opposing Bill C-70. That is the largest petition campaign ever launched, and the petitions are continuing to flow in. I would say that the Government ignores these petitions at its peril.

There is no question that there has been a wave of disillusionment and lack of confidence in this Government. There is the feeling that most of the promises the Government made have now been ignored.

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, if you will agree, I will call it one o'clock and resume later.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

EFFECT OF CHANGES ON CANADIAN ARMED FORCES PERSONNEL

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, Canadian Armed Forces personnel and other groups of Public Service employees are furious at the Government because of changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act. As of January 5 those people are no longer eligible to collect UIC benefits because of pension incomes and severance pay. That is unfair, Mr. Speaker, and I will tell you why.

Many Armed Forces employees are forced to retire as young as 40 years of age. That is a condition of their employment. Naturally, they want to embark upon a second career. While they look for that second job, they should be eligible for UIC benefits. The changes say that they cannot collect UIC benefits while they look for work. If other Canadians can collect while on a job hunt, why can't these people? Their pension incomes will not pay the bills, which is why they go back to work.

These people are not milking the systems; they are in between jobs after they retire. They deserve those benefits. After all, they paid into the UIC fund for years. However, when they need it, the Government takes it away.

My office has been flooded with calls from people who are worried about the effect of these changes. They are worried about grocery and utility bills. The Government must take off its blinkers, open its eyes, and look at how its policies are hurting Canadians. I call upon the Government to reverse this decision immediately.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

RESUMPTION OF LOGGING ON SOUTH MORESBY IN QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, logging begins again today on South Moresby in the Queen Charlotte Islands. The logging industry has, of course, accepted licences in good faith from the provincial Government to log parts of the island. My concern, shared by my Party, is that indiscriminate logging will destroy this priceless heritage forever.

Despite the efforts of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and two federal Ministers, and the protests of thousands of concerned individuals across Canada—indeed, from around the world—the British Columbia Government has abdicated its responsibility to find a solution. At stake is an environmental treasure, unique plant, fish, and wildlife, and the most magnificent primeval rain forest on the face of the globe with trees over 1,000 years old. Also threatened is the traditional homeland of the Haida people. For 10,000 years they have built a culture and tradition unique in the world.

Environmentalists, not just in Canada, but everywhere around the world, are watching how our country responds to this growing crisis. It is totally unacceptable that we have not been able to work out a solution. I cannot believe that this country will throw it away.

Given the resignation last week of the B.C. Forestry Minister, given the conflict of interest involved in his case and in the case of another Minister, given the B.C. Government's refusal to discuss native claims, and given that the federal Government agrees with me that all or part of South Moresby ought to be converted into a national park or a park reserve, I once again urge the Prime Minister and the federal Government to take action, to talk to the people of British Columbia and their Government in order to prevent the irreversible loss of a priceless national treasure.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

CRUISE MISSILE TESTS

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, the Government continues to show contempt for Parliament and the people of Canada by withholding information. For example, we learned this morning that the Cruise missile will once again be tested over Canada tomorrow. The Government obviously knows the schedule of these tests, but it refuses to tell Canadians in order to prevent demonstrations against an unwise and unpopular policy.

Similarly, we have just learned that the Government has kept secret a number of agreements with the United States on nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons. It knows that such agreements would be controversial so it denies them, even to a committee composed largely of its own members which this House has asked to examine Canada's defence co-operation with the United States. That information leaks out through journalists or American citizens, but not before the Government has undermined its credibility and shown that it really has no respect for this House or the people it represents.

I am sure the Government will face a storm of criticism over these matters. I am just as sure that it will blame its problems on a conspiracy of the Opposition and the media. However, the Government's problem is not that its message cannot get out; the problem is that the Government is sending out one message loud and clear—it cannot be trusted to tell the truth to the people of Canada or to the Members of this House.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

PLIGHT OF ELDERLY POOR WOMEN

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, over the weekend the Minister responsible for the Status of Women (Mr. McLean) made a presentation to members of the Conservative Caucus. He outlined some of the shortcomings in his Government's pledge to achieve social justice and economic equality for women. He then left copies of his presentation in the New Democrats' caucus room.

It is deplorable that this Minister has so little clout among his cabinet colleagues he has to go to his Party's backbenchers to ask them to pressure Ministers to live up to the campaign promises made to Canadian women. The Minister shows the lack of progress in improving the situation of the elderly poor. His own figures point out that 71 per cent of Canada's elderly poor are women, and 80 per cent of the unattached elderly poor are women.

The Conservative Government congratulates itself on the extension of the Spouse's Allowance last year. But that change discriminates against 80,000 single and divorced people between the ages of 60 and 65 who are living in poverty. The majority of these people are women. When will the Government address that injustice?

The Minister says "Canadian women are still being shortchanged", and calls for further Government action. When will the Government listen? When will the Government introduce measures implementing the promises it made to Canadian women during the election campaign?

HOUSE OF COMMONS

VOCABULARY USED BY CERTAIN MEMBERS

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, I would like to convey to the House of Commons of Canada my deep concern about the quality of the vocabulary used by some Members of the House, highly questionable in terms of semantics and not at all in keeping with the dignity of this institution.

Canadians expect a much better performance from those they elect to represent the various parts of the country here in Ottawa.

This undignified and vulgar vocabulary is used mostly by a few Quebec Liberal Members in their attacks against Quebec's Conservative Ministers and, in certain cases, even against the Right Hon. the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney). The expressions heard are so vulgar that our interpreters are sometimes at a loss for words, and their full meaning in both languages is difficult to grasp, Mr. Speaker.

The Members of this House, and more particularly the few marginal Liberal Members from Quebec, should have the decency to use words which at least can be found in the dictionary.

If they have no respect for their colleagues in the House, they should at least mind their languages for the sake of Quebecers and other Canadians.

Finally, unless he enjoys such vulgarities and if he still has any authority left, their leader should call those few marginal Members to order.

YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT

PROPOSED CHANGES WELCOMED

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, I join with millions of Canadians in applauding the proposed changes to the Young Offenders Act announced by the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) last week. Many aspects of the current Young Offenders Act have left Canadians disenchanted with the application of law and justice in our society. How, they ask, can a young boy in Scarborough murder three people and receive only three years in punishment? How can a group of young people in Toronto savagely beat a young man and also receive minimal sentencing?

The proposed changes come as welcome relief because they address such critical issues as arrest and detention, the publication of information to assist police in apprehending those who escape custody, improved record keeping and counselling, and provisions to allow for longer sentences.

While the spirit and principles contained in the initial Act are commendable, the application of it has left many people wondering where the justice in their legal system has gone. We need to put proper enforcement into this law so that people can feel safe in their neighbourhoods and communities.

I thank the Solicitor General for the proposed changes and urge the Government to continue to improve the Young Offenders Act in order to rebuild the confidence Canadians—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that her time has expired.

FISHERIES

SUCCESS OF SALMONID ENHANCEMENT PROGRAM

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, the Salmonid Enhancement Program in British Columbia has been an incredible success story. SEP, as it is known, was initiated in 1977. It was designed to increase the population of the Sockeye, Coho, Chinook, Chum and Pink salmon, and the Steelhead.

Results to date indicate SEP production has become an important part of the West Coast fishing industry. In 1984 alone, 20 per cent of the value of the salmon catch in commercial, sport and food fisheries was a direct result of enhancement facilities. For those who are into cost-benefit ratio factors, the SEP ratio was about 1.6 to one. As well, the Salmonid Enhancement Program contributes substantially to job creation in remote communities such as those on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

We are now in a transition phase. SEP I is over and SEP II will soon begin. It is important that our commitment to salmon enhancement be maintained and expanded. Acknowledging that it is no longer 1977, and that our public debt has grown substantially since then, we must ensure that we utilize whatever means are available to fund fully this worth-while program.

Those who benefit from salmon enhancement must join the Canadian Government in a partnership which ensures a growing commitment to grow fish. When the production of salmon is brought back to historical levels of abundance this nation will benefit for generations. In other words, salmon enhancement enhances the future of Canada.

EMPLOYMENT

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF JOBS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Mr. Fernand Ladouceur (Labelle): Last December 19, Mr. Speaker, our Government announced that it would earmark $210 million to create youth employment next summer under the Challenge 86 program.

We on the Government side can only be pleased about this announcement, if only because of the tremendous success of Challenge 85 which enabled us to create 101,000 summer jobs for students. Mr. Speaker, that sums up our approach and our determination to restore confidence in our economy and seek long-range solutions aimed at achieving full employment.

Speaking for myself, Mr. Speaker, I can only say that the residents of the beautiful riding of Labelle are quite enthusiastic about our Government's constructive and long-term strategy with respect to employment planning and job creation. Instead of being based on a near-sighted approach to the real needs of the people, our strategy takes into consideration the full development and use of a huge pool of human resources readily available for future investment.

Youth employment has improved since the September 1984 election. The unemployment rate among young Canadians aged 15 to 24 has dropped from 18.3 to 16.2 per cent in November 1985, a decline of 2.1 per cent. Mr. Speaker, such has been our performance on behalf of the people—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his allotted time has expired.

HUMAN RIGHTS

CELEBRATION OF FIRST MARTIN LUTHER KING DAY IN UNITED STATES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, today inaugurates a new national holiday in the United States which honours the life of Martin Luther King. It is a commemoration which many Canadians will want to share as Martin Luther King embodied a spirit which was universal in its meaning and impact. There is a tendency nowadays to look back at the 1960s as a time of disruption and disorder. In reality it was a time when men and women of all races and backgrounds sought to find a way to be free. They sought to break the tradition of years of discrimination and inequality. For some of us who lived, worked, and studied in the U.S. during the time of the civil rights movement, it was a profound experience to observe this human struggle which was so pure and divine in its attempt to achieve change for mankind.

All Canadians can honestly say that we share with the Americans their memory of the meaning of this man and the cause he represented so well. We commit ourselves to the ongoing struggle for equality which he represents. As Robert Kennedy said when he learned of the assassination of Martin Luther King, "Let us dedicate ourselves to what the Greeks wrote so many years ago: To tame the savageness of man and make gentle the life of this world".

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, the Liberals have finally reached a decision about their stand on enhanced trade but they appear to be as confused as ever. I would like to clarify a few important points for them. First, when will they get it through their heads that the term "free trade" is their own fiction? Our Government is seeking to secure trade with the U.S. in light of the quantity of protectionist Bills before the U.S. Congress. We are seeking an enhanced market for Canadian firms which wish to export their products south of the border. We are not seeking to open the borders between the two countries as the Opposition would have Canadians believe. It makes sense to secure and enhance access to the rapidly growing U.S. market which in 1984 alone purchased 75 per cent of our exports and generated 2 million Canadian jobs.

To set straight a second Liberal misconception, our Government is actively seeking to expand world trading markets. The Japanese Prime Minister said during his visit that he is impressed by our growing interest in Pacific Rim Trade. Our Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) has just returned from meetings in the U.S., Australia, and New Zealand, and is about to embark on a two-week trade tour of Asian countries. We have also offered to host the next GATT meeting in Montreal. The national trade strategy document tabled at the First Ministers' Conference in Halifax stresses our Government's commitment to international trade. I hope I have set the Liberals straight on this very vital issue so that they will stop misleading Canadians.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

RESUMPTION OF LOGGING ON LYELL ISLAND, B.C.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of the Environment I would like to ask a question of the Deputy Prime Minister. He will know that logging has resumed today on Lyell Island and South Moresby in the Queen Charlotte Islands. The federal Government, particularly through the intervention of the Prime Minister, seems not to have convinced the Premier of British Columbia. Therefore, will he report to the House on the conversations between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premier of British Columbia on the status of logging on South Moresby in the Queen Charlotte Islands?

Hon. David Crombie (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I can assist.

The matter, of course, continues in the Province of British Columbia. The communication between the Prime Minister and the Premier involved a number of questions which the Prime Minister, the Department of Justice, and others are still considering. As the responsible Minister I kept in constant touch with the parties involved over the Christmas break and as recently as last night. I would like to assure the right hon. gentleman and the House that matters are delicate and difficult but, I think, sensible. We are trying to achieve a process through which we can satisfy all parties. Those discussions are on-going.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, we appreciated the visit of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development to British Columbia on this very serious environmental and native claims matter. Would he advise the House whether the Prime Minister has protested, to the Premier of British Columbia, about the resumption of logging on the Queen Charlotte Islands prior to the filing of the report of the B.C. Wilderness Committee?

Hon. David Crombie (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, some weeks ago the Prime Minister asked me to undertake, on behalf of the Government, our positions, and also to make sure that we invoke, evoke, or provoke, but certainly establish a process to allow the contending interests to be accommodated. He has made that clear to everyone, including the Premier of the Province of British Columbia. The letter from the Premier of the Province of British Columbia to the Prime Minister reflects that fact.

HAIDA LAND CLAIM

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Would the Minister prevail upon his Prime Minister to protest, in strenuous terms, the resumption of logging? Since we seem to have no resolution of the logging or environmental matters, could the Minister give us a brief status report on the Haida land claim?

Hon. David Crombie (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Yes, indeed. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the matters are quite related. Some of the questions raised by the Premier of the Province of British Columbia and by other people in that province I think will be dealt with, at least in part, by the recommendations contained in the review of land claims which I commissioned last July. I have now received that report. It is being translated, edited, and printed. By the beginning of February I am hoping that there will be some recommendations before the Cabinet and for public discussion which will assist us in that regard.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

FUTURE OF NEWFOUNDLAND RAILWAY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. Last September 10 in this House I asked the Minister about plans to shut down the Newfoundland Railway. At that time the Minister accused me of spreading rumours. In the interim the Minister himself, the Premier of Newfoundland, and CN have all confirmed that plans are under way to axe the Newfoundland Railway and the 800 jobs involved.

Will the Minister come clean with Newfoundlanders and assure us in the House today that he will put an end to back room secret negotiations, consult the railway employees involved who, to this point, have not been consulted, and consult the Newfoundland business community before any decision is taken to axe that railway?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I presume the Hon. Member is referring to an article that appeared in The Globe and Mail this morning which is, unfortunately, grossly inaccurate, indeed potentially damaging and, to a great extent, alarmist.

• (1420)

To deal precisely with the point which the Hon. Member has raised with respect to the Newfoundland Railway, CN's five-year plan does not propose the abandonment of the Newfoundland Railway. If it is to be maintained as an imposed public duty, CN should be compensated for any losses that are derived therefrom.

I can assure the Hon. Member that if there is any decision to be made with respect to the future of the Newfoundland Railway, particularly regarding his allegation that it might be discontinued, full discussions and consultations will be carried out with the Government of Newfoundland and all affected parties.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET EMPLOYEES AND UNIONS

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the operative word in the Minister's answer is "if" it is to be maintained. That is precisely the point. Negotiations and discussions are now ongoing. They have been ongoing for months. The employees affected have been told nothing.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. No preambles please, just a question.

Mr. Tobin: I ask the Minister again if he will do the proper thing—I know he agrees with me—go to Newfoundland, convene a meeting with the employees affected, the unions and their representatives, lay the cards on the table and come clean with the people of Newfoundland about the future of that railway, instead of dealing in the backroom with Brian Peckford?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, it is too bad that the Hon. Member does not stick around his riding once in a while, or at least in his own province. He would find out that there have been discussions, ongoing discussions, with the unions. I know that he would like to see the Newfoundland Railway scrapped so he could have a political issue. We are not going to fall for that trap, I can assure him.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—REQUEST FOR PARLIAMENTARY EXAMINATION OF POSSIBLE FUTURE SALE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Given the obvious desire of the Government to sell off Crown corporations at no matter what price, and given the recent unfortunate, to put it euphemistically, experience we have had in the case of the de Havilland sale, will the Minister now give the House his unequivocal assurance before any decision is reached in the selling of Canadair that all the details of such a decision will be brought before Parliament before it is finalized?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What is unfortunate is your conduct.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member for Oshawa who has repeated once again a question that has been raised several times in this House—

Mr. Broadbent: And not answered.

Mr. Stevens: —I have indicated what we must first obtain in relation to Canadair is a willing buyer. To date we do not have a willing buyer for Canadair. How can I answer such a hypothetical question?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

INQUIRY IF GOVERNMENT WILL PRESENT ALL DETAILS CONCERNING POSSIBLE SALE OF CANADAIR

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, it is not hypothetical in the least. On December 10, the Government said in the House that it intended to sell Canadair. That is a decision. My question concerns the procedure. Can the Minister give the House the assurance that the Government will submit all details regarding the sale of Canadair prior to this report?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Again, if I may reply to the Hon. Member, Mr. Speaker, he must know that in the case of de Havilland we solicited interest in the sense of would-be buyers from 135 different individuals or corporations, both within Canada and without. That is the process we are going through in relation to Canadair. We are attempting to identify who might be interested in making an offer to purchase Canadair. To date we do not have such a buyer who has indicated that he would come with a proposal cash in hand.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT COMMITMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I will try again. The Minister has said it is not a hypothesis but a reality that the Government will sell Canadair. He said that on December 10. Given the fact that the President of Canadair said publicly it will be sold—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Broadbent: —will the Minister commit himself now, in terms of the process of selling off the Crown corporation, that details will be presented to Parliament so Canadians can make a judgment before the decision is reached?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You have tried three questions. That has been answered.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, how many times do I have to answer the same question?

• (1425)

Mr. Broadbent: You have not answered it once.

Some Hon. Members: Just answer it once.

Mr. Stevens: We do not have the makings of a deal with respect to Canadair at the present time. How can I answer in hypothetical terms?

DISARMAMENT

SOVIET UNION'S PROPOSAL TO END NUCLEAR ARMS RACE

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Last week the Soviet Union made what is potentially the most significant proposal since the beginning of the Cold War to end the disastrous nuclear arms race. This proposal deserves the most comprehensive and detailed review, not only by the U.S. but also by all members of the Western Alliance. Will the Minister request an urgent and special meeting of all NATO Foreign Ministers to review the new Soviet peace proposal, which is very vital not only to the United States but to the western world and to the world in general? Will the Minister call a special meeting of the NATO Foreign Ministers?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I, and I am sure all Hon. Members of the House, share the view of the hon. spokesman for the Liberal Party the importance of Mr. Gorbachev's most recent proposal and, indeed, the importance of the process. I intend to be making a statement in the House later this week with regard to arms control matters generally. I will naturally ensure that the Hon. Member and the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam receive copies of that statement in time to permit them to reply on behalf of their Parties.

INQUIRY WHETHER PRIME MINISTER COMMUNICATED WITH UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister has indicated that he intends to make a statement in the House on this very important subject, I would like to ask him whether he has been in touch with the President of the United States to inform him of Canada's interest in having this new proposal examined as soon as possible and perhaps also to ask him whether it would be convenient to have a meeting of the External Affairs Ministers concerned as soon as possible.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there is an ongoing dialogue between the Canadian Government and the Government of the United States, and also between the Canadian Government and the Soviet Union, more specifically regarding the proposals made by Mr. Gorbachev.

I think that for the time being, it will not be necessary to have an emergency meeting of External Affairs Ministers of NATO or other countries, but should anything happen to make such a meeting necessary, the Canadian Government will always be ready to propose such a meeting.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

LOGGING PRACTICES ON LYELL ISLAND, B.C.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. I think all Hon. Members of the House know how complicated is the issue of logging on South Moresby. The Minister is aware that the Department of Fisheries and Oceans suggested that charges be laid against Western Forest Products and Frank Beban Logging some time ago for their logging practices on Lyell Island. It has been before the Department of Justice for some time. Could the Minister advise the House today, in light of the resumption of logging on Lyell Island, whether or not a decision has now been made by the Government of Canada on whether to prosecute those two forest companies for their logging practices in the South Moresby area?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, that is not a question for the Government of Canada to decide. It is a question for the Attorney General of Canada to decide in his capacity as Attorney General.

Mr. Deans: Did you ask him?

Mr. Crosbie: It is not the custom to discuss in public whether or not charges may or may not be laid in any particular situation. If charges are laid, I will be glad to confirm them at the time.

PROSECUTION RECOMMENDATION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, in light of the controversy which has surrounded the particular logging practices on Lyell Island and the fact that these particular charges relate to logging which occurred over four years ago, and the fact that a logging stream—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is becoming a preamble. May I just have a question, please?

Mr. Fulton: What advice has the Minister been given by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans! It is my understanding that it has recommended prosecution. I wonder whether the Department of Justice has agreed with that view.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, that is a repetition of the first question. It is not the practice—and certainly it would not be a good practice—for there to be discussion in the House about whether charges should or should not be laid against anybody in any particular situation. If charges are laid, then the effect will become known.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CANADA-UNITED STATES AGREEMENTS

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. Last December the Minister gave us a commitment in the House that he would keep the members of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence fully informed about the Canada-United States defence agreements. Over the weekend we have learned that other agreements have come up about which he has not told us. I have a list of the titles in my hand. Did the Minister know about the existence of these agreements prior to this weekend? If he did, why were they withheld from parliamentarians after his commitment in December to keep the standing parliamentary committee fully informed?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I recall very clearly the exchange last December 4 and December 5 in respect of the Hon. Member's question. He knows that the committee chairman requested a list of all unclassified agreements and that the committee has received this. He also knows that the committee has made no request for classified information. He also knows that I offered, last December, in camera briefings if I were to receive a request from the committee. I have not received such a request.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. He will know that he made a commitment to keep the committee members informed about all titles of defence agreements between the United States and Canada. The question is simple. Why did the Minister not inform the committee of the existence of these documents, instead of trying to weasel out of it now?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the committee requested and received the information it sought. It has not requested classified information, a request which I told the Hon. Member last December I would consider if it were made. Indeed, I reminded him that I was appearing before the committee the very next week, after he put his question, so that he could question me fully on these matters, and he failed to ask a single question in respect thereto when I did appear.

TORPEDO TEST RANGE AGREEMENT

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister and it is on the same matter. At least one of the agreements we learned about over the weekend which had been denied to us before is unclassified. The Minister may not be aware of that. It is the exchange of notes to provide for the continued operation and maintenance of the torpedo test range in the Strait of Georgia. In view of the fact that that is unclassified and was left out of every list the committee was provided, is it not the case that the Minister and the Government wanted to deny the committee and the people of Canada knowledge of any agreements having to do with nuclear co-operation, nuclear deployment on Canadian soil?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that is a very mischievous question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): You have a mighty short memory.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member knows that that arrangement has been in the public domain for many, many, many years.

Ms. Jewett: Why wasn't it on the list?

Mr. Nielsen: How she has been so lax in bringing herself up to date in respect of that knowledge I cannot explain, but it certainly has been in the public domain long enough for even her to have learned about it.

Ms. Jewett: If I may say so, that was a really feeble answer. This was not given to the committee, and the Minister knows it.

NUCLEAR WEAPONS INQUIRY

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, in relation to this dozen or more than a dozen documents of which we are now aware, could the Minister tell us whether No. 1811A, the one concerning the placement of U.S. airborne nuclear ASW weapons at bases in Canada, probably Comox and Greenwood, is the agreement concerning which his predecessor denied exactly a year ago that there was any intention in Canada to allow the United States to place nuclear depth charges at those two bases?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, again it would appear—perhaps I am not being fair with the Hon. Member—that she is trying to re-arouse fears that I thought had been put to rest by the very lucid answers of the Secretary of State for External Affairs on many occasions in the House, that there are no nuclear weapons on Canadian soil. We do not intend to have any nuclear weapons on Canadian soil. Why can she not believe it?

Ms. Jewett: What about this agreement?

Mr. Nielsen: With regard to what she calls an agreement, if the Hon. Member wishes to have any information before that committee, she should ask for it. I have received no request whatsoever in respect of classified information. The unclassified information has all been made available.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

LYELL ISLAND LOGGING—REQUEST FOR REIMPOSITION OF MORATORIUM

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. Last December the Minister counselled patience regarding the confrontation between the British Columbia Government and the Haida people over the logging on Lyell Island. I would like to ask the Minister whether he is prepared today to use his good offices on behalf of the Government and all fair minded Canadians, to ask the Government of British Columbia to reimpose the moratorium on logging on Lyell Island, and to keep that moratorium in effect until there has been a just and satisfactory settlement of the Haida claim.

• (1430)

Hon. David Crombie (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, one of the ways I think which we have been able to allow a beginning of a process by which the confrontation goes, and sensitive and sensible negotiation discussion begins, has been to make sure that I, on behalf of the Government, would not go around telling other people what I thought they ought to do. What I have tried to do at each and every turn of the road, and I intend to continue it, is to explain to people that all Canadians want a resolution that respects the interests of all parties, and they want it in a peaceable and sensible manner. That is the approach of the Government, that is the approach I intend to take.

EXISTENCE OF ABORIGINAL TITLE

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): The Minister should not be shy about telling the British Columbia Government what to do because he is the trustee of the Indian people in this country. The B.C. Government has asked for a clarification of the Government's native claims policy. On the basis of the report now received by the Minister, is he prepared to tell B.C. that aboriginal title does exist in that province, and that he is prepared to get negotiations under way and settle the Haida claim and the other outstanding claims as well?

Hon. David Crombie (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): I am seldom shy in these matters, and I would like to take the opportunity to tell him with respect to the Haida claim, and indeed all of the claims of British Columbia, in my judgment people should approach them in an understanding that this is probably one of the most crucial events that is going to affect that province in a long, long time. Therefore, it ought not to be used in a political or partisan way. That is why I have attempted in my discussions with the Haida people, and indeed all Indian people in British Columbia, to make sure that they have the fullest possible opportunity to make their views known.

I commissioned a report as a consequence of a review of land claims, and that includes British Columbia. That will be before all Canadians for public discussion in the early part of February.

Finally, let me say, with respect to the very important questions affecting relations between the Indian people in Canada and British Columbia, and of the relations between Canada and British Columbia, those are contained in the correspondence which Minister Smith in British Columbia put out. Those are questions which I have, and also the Justice Department has, because they are matters that go to the root of an extremely important issue. I am hoping, Mr. Speaker, that all Members of this House will give it sufficient time so that we will have a solution that is going to be to the benefit of all and not just of some.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

PROVISION OF SERVICE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct some questions to the Minister of Transport. He and I agreed a number of years ago that Newfoundland has never been fully in Confederation when it comes to transportation. We have had nothing but deterioration of rail, trucking, and ferry services ever since 1949. Will the Minister guarantee to the House that he will require Canadian National to provide, as an imposed public duty, equitable and efficient transportation services to the Province of Newfoundland, including the upgrading of the railway line by changing it to standard gauge track, and the improvement of the ferry services?

• (1440)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I can give the Hon. Member the assurance that this Government is committed to providing Newfoundland with the best transportation service possible, including the utilization of all modes, and that is the sort of discussion that is going on at the present time with the provincial Government, the unions, and all interested parties.

REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE INVESTIGATION

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, just so we do not have another de Havilland operation, will the Minister assure the House that he will make it possible for the Standing Committee on Transport and for Parliament to investigate fully the transportation services in the Atlantic provinces and particularly in Newfoundland before any decision is made to sell the CN trucking services or to close down the CN Terra Transport rail operations?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, I rely upon the advice of the Transport Committee on various issues and will certainly invite its interest and comments with regard to any transportation initiatives that are taken anywhere in the country.

TEXTILES AND CLOTHING

COMMISSION'S RECOMMENDATIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Further to the tabling of the report by the Textile and Clothing Board submitted at the end of last December, which says that unless special protective measures are taken, between 40,000 and 60,000 jobs will disappear in the near future, does the Minister intend to implement many of the Board's recommendations, especially to restrict imports of these products, to adopt a program of duty free imports and also to adopt a new national textile policy?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member whom I commend for the interest that he has taken in the textile and clothing industry in Canada, we of course have noted many of the recommendations in the report and specifically now have discussions ongoing among the various Departments to try to work out a satisfactory arrangement that will ensure that there will be a viable textile and clothing industry in Canada.

INSURANCE

LIABILITY COVERAGE—DIFFICULTIES FACED BY SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance. Now that the Minister has met the Ontario Minister responsible for insurance and understands that insurance falls within the jurisdiction of the federal Government, can the Minister tell the House of Canadians what she is going to do to help the thousands of small businesses that are at the risk of losing everything they have worked for because they have no liability insurance?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I have always understood what my responsibilities are and I do not need any lectures from Liberal Members on that. I met in a very positive way with—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: You win more with smiles.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mrs. McDougall: I met with the industry this morning. We have agreed on a number of things that we can do. I had already been working, as I have told the House, on a longer term policy that will prevent this kind of boom and bust cycle in the future, or at least help dampen it. In the short term, as problems are brought to us, we are resolving them with the industry in a very hard-headed way.

Mr. Gagliano: Mr. Speaker, that translates into nothing.

[Translation]

SOLVENCY GUIDELINES FOR INSURANCE COMPANIES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): The Superintendent of Insurance Canada establishes solvency guidelines for insurance companies. I wonder if the Minister could confirm whether guidelines are being observed and whether he could table these guidelines for the information of the House.

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I have told the Hon. Member many times that I will be bringing forward policies dealing with solvency and with the capital base which is part of this boom and bust cycle. We are dealing with this problem in a very realistic way and are helping people so that this situation does not reach this stage in the future again.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

GULF-ULTRAMAR TRANSACTION—REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Last Thursday and Friday in the House, the Prime Minister said that he would look into the matter of investigating a possible violation by Ultramar of Section 32 of the Combines Investigations Act, because Ultramar set a pre-condition prohibiting the sale of the refinery to a possible competitor on the Quebec market.

Mr. Speaker, my question is as follows. Could the Minister inform the House today whether he has asked the Director responsible for combines investigations to start an investigation immediately of this important matter?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, the question is entirely hypothetical. We will deal with the matter as soon as a transaction takes place and we are aware of the terms.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. In that case, how can the Minister say he defends the interests of consumers when he refuses to order immediately an investigation of a question that the Prime Minister referred to in the House last week as an important matter?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I think we were answering these questions over and over all last week. I would like to remind my hon. colleague that we have made sure, I and my colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, that security of supply of petroleum products in Quebec is not in jeopardy and that there is no reason for Quebec consumers to be concerned.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

COMPANY'S FINANCIAL STABILITY

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. I am concerned about today's media reports with respect to the alleged financial difficulties of CN. In fact the word "insolvency" has been thrown around. Can the Minister reassure the House about the financial stability of CN?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I can indeed provide the House with that assurance. As I said earlier, the article that appeared in today's Globe and Mail was not only grossly inaccurate and irresponsible but was alarmist and potentially damaging.

I can assure the Hon. Member that CN is certainly facing challenges in coping with the traffic decline and the shift in traffic patterns, but those challenges are not unique to CN. I can assure the Hon. Member as well that CN is not insolvent. As a matter of fact its five-year plan would indicate a reduction in the corporate debt. Having regard to the fact that CN has enjoyed a very high credit rating in the international bond market, it has every reason—

Mr. Broadbent: Socialist!

Mr. Mazankowski: —it has every reason to foresee that continuing in the future.

TERRA TRANSPORT—MORATORIUM ON RATE INCREASES

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Transport and deals with Terra Transport. The Minister knows that the CTC imposed massive rate increases on Terra Transport. He also knows that the Cabinet imposed a moratorium on those increases because, if they were allowed to go ahead, it would spell the virtual death of the Newfoundland Railway. I want to know that the Minister is not going to allow to happen through the back door that which might otherwise happen through the front door, and that is the increase in those rates. Will the Minister give us an assurance that the moratorium is in place and will he tell us whether or not it will continue?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am still waiting for the final report, but I think the Hon Member knows that one has an obligation to fulfil the legislative requirement that transportation rates must be compensatory. It is in that context that the whole issue has been examined. I am awaiting the final recommendation of the CTC in this regard.

MINISTER'S DISCUSSIONS WITH UNIONS

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, the supplementary question I wish to raise with the Minister has been raised already. He has said that there have been consultations and that he has talked to unions.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Question.

Mr. Rompkey: Will he say specifically which unions, either nationally or provincially, he has discussed the Terra Transport situation with? We want an assurance that the Minister is fighting for the 800 jobs that are at stake here.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have not only talked with the unions but I have talked with the Hon. Minister of Justice who is highly regarded by the union movement in St. John's and throughout Newfoundland.

Some Hon. Members: Who?

Mr. Mazankowski: I can assure the Hon. Member that—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1450)

Mr. Mazankowski: I can assure the Hon. Member that the unions appreciate the work that the Minister of Justice and I are doing. They feel quite secure that they will receive a fair deal.

ENERGY

INCREASES IN GASOLINE PRICES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. On March 28, 1985, on the date we debated the Western Accord, as reported at page 3473 of Hansard the Minister said in the House:

> If the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) is right that by creating a market environment prices will continue to decline, obviously that provides the environment for gasoline prices to decline. They certainly are not going to increase in a declining market.

Aside from tax increases, why are gasoline prices increasing in a declining market? What does the Minister intend to do about it in order to protect the Canadian consumer?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I believe the Hon. Member is addressing an issue of great concern to consumers. I wish to point out that the increases in gasoline prices about which consumers are concerned, of course, are the federal, municipal, and provincial tax loads which have been imposed on gasoline prices. May I remind the Hon. Member that those taxes go to pay for the social services which Canadians desire.

CONSUMER PROTESTS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, in fact it is the wholesale prices which have gone up the most. My colleagues have received over 500 of these protest coupons today—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Waddell: Why is the Minister ignoring these protests and just saying to hell with them?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: Why is she ignoring them? Why does she not stand up for the Canadian consumer instead of the oil companies?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, given the presentation of the question, it was not possible to hear it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It took the whole weekend caucus to figure that one out.

Mr. Deans: Watch the news.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MIDDLE EAST—SEARCH FOR STABLE PEACE

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The strongest defence against terrorism in the West is stable peace in the Middle East based on recognition of Israel and the justice needed for Palestinians. What initiatives can Canada take to seek that type of peace, in view of Yassir Arafat's recent proposal for an international conference on the rights of Palestinians?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think the House would agree that the recent cycle of terrorism in the Middle East has added even more instability to a situation that is already difficult. It makes it imperative, in the view of this Government, that an answer be found, a response, to the terrorism which is growing in the world. Canada intends to be part of that response to terrorism.

With regard to the more basic and continuing problems in the Middle East, Canada intends to continue the constructive approach which has been followed by Canadian Governments of both Parties.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

FUTURE OF MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. In light of a very alarming newspaper report which states that everything east of Montreal is a disaster, and the recommendation to close Terra Transport, would this not spell an end to the Moncton shops? Will the Minister stand in his place today and reject and dismiss this recommendation so as to save the shops in Moncton?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, the statement to which the Hon. Member refers I have described as grossly inaccurate and irresponsible. As well, I think I can say that the President and Chief Executive Officer of CN will be issuing a statement rejecting out of hand the contents of this morning's article. I hope that will clarify the issue once and for all.

REQUEST FOR PROTECTION OF JOBS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has often expressed his concern for the 1,200 jobs in Moncton. However, rumours still persist. Will the Minister commit himself right now to protecting these 1,200 jobs in Moncton? They mean a lot to the City of Moncton. Will he commit himself in this respect?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has no monopoly on concern.

Mr. Caccia: It's in his riding.

Mr. Mazankowski: Of course I am concerned, as is the management of CN, which is assessing the maintenance requirements right across the country, recognizing that there has been a drastic decline in traffic and recognizing the fact that there has been a shift in the traffic pattern. All of these factors are taken into consideration. I am sure the Hon. Member would not want me to superimpose my authority on the Board of Directors and the legitimate managers of CN.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Yes, we do.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

INSURANCE

LIABILITY COVERAGE—INCREASES IN PREMIUMS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Finance. I was interested in her earlier answer today in the House with respect to her responsibility. Does her responsibility go so far as to guarantee Canadians, whether they be operators of day care centres, municipalities, or small businesses, that they will be able to afford insurance at rates and levels which they need in order to continue to operate? Will she provide such a guarantee?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, life does not include any guarantees.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Only for uninsured depositors.

Mrs. McDougall: We have told people who are having problems with insurance that we are prepared to help them work out their problems on availability. We will also take a look at problems having to do with affordability. Speaking of jurisdiction, let me remind the Hon. Member that premium structure falls under provincial jurisdiction.

MINISTERIAL REVIEW

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister confirm the statement made by the insurance industry's spokesperson this morning to the effect that the Minister and her predecessors have been reviewing the situation in the insurance industry for the past four years? If that statement is correct, then why has it taken a crisis in the country before the Government is prepared to act?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I suggest that question is better directed to the Leader of the Opposition.

PETRO-CANADA

INCREASED PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister promised consumers would benefit from deregulated rates. Even though gasoline prices are going down everywhere else in the world, they are going up in Canada. These price increases are being led by Petro-Canada. Why does the Minister allow this? After having raised its prices after a tax increase put forward by the Government, why has Petro-Canada twice increased its price in the last few months, further gouging the Canadian energy consumer?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any particular price increases imposed by Petro-Canada.

An Hon. Member: You should be.

Miss Carney: But I would like to hope that Petro-Canada will be able to generate—

Mr. Broadbent: Where do you buy your gas?

An Hon. Member: Drive your own car for a change.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: If you don't watch out we will nationalize Petro-Canada.

Mr. Blaikie: It would be a good idea.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Riis: Go buy some gas, Pat.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Miss Carney: As I was saying before I was interrupted, I think the Hon. Member would agree with me that we want Petro-Canada to have sufficient revenues to develop Venture in his constituency.

SHARE ISSUE INQUIRY

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister admit that the reason Petro-Canada is increasing its prices is to create a better profit picture so that it can better present its dossier to the private sector and so that it can issue shares to the public, forcing Canadians to pay yet again for their own Crown corporation?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, no.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Skeena, one question.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

APPOINTMENT OF BOUNDARY NEGOTIATOR BY UNITED STATES

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I am sure he is aware that George Shultz has appointed Mr. Derwinski as the U.S. negotiator on boundaries between British Columbia and the United States.

Mr. Crosbie: He's been up before.

• (1500)

Mr. Fulton: Since the Minister's own Department has already—

Mr. Crosbie: Who do you think you are, Martin Luther?

Point of Order—Mr. Prud'homme

Mr. Speaker: Order. I apologize to the House. I had forgotten the Hon. Member had already been up today. Excuse me.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: Come back tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am apologizing to the House and to the Hon. Member. I had forgotten he had already been up today. With one minute left, I should have—

Mr. Broadbent: You recognized him.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Because other Hon. Members were rising at the same time—

Mr. Broadbent: He had the floor.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps the Hon. Member for Oshawa could wait to hear what I have to say before he comments. There were other Hon. Members rising and I should have gone to someone else at the time. I would have simply corrected that fact at that moment if there was time left. The time having expired, rather than go to someone else, I think it simply makes sense to end Question Period at that moment, although I should have recognized someone other than the Hon. Member for Skeena at the time.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Friday, January 17, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

I am also in a position to give a response to a question of order raised by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme).

POINT OF ORDER

REQUEST FOR PHOTOCOPY OF PETITION PRESENTED IN HOUSE—RULING OF MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker: Last December 20, the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) drew my attention to the fact that he wanted to obtain complete photocopies of certain petitions and that he had been advised that, according to our practice, he could not have a photocopy of the signatures but could indeed have a look at those petitions.

I checked the precedents and I must confirm to him that the practice of the House of Commons has been that petitions presented by Hon. Members may be consulted upon request, but there has been hesitation in the past about providing copies of the signatures on the petitions. There are many reasons for this, but the fact remains that petitions presented in the House are public documents and that, in my opinion, any petitioner signing such a document knows full well that a third party may consult the document and obtain the name of petitioners. The petitioner may or may not give his or her address, for that does not change anything to the petition and is not contrary to our Standing Orders.

I must say to the House that I would be reluctant to order that petitions be photocopied at the request of the public at large, but the question to be determined is whether a Member has the right if not the privilege to obtain a copy of one or more petitions presented in the House. It seems quite logical to me that, if a Member may present a petition in the House, the same Member or another Member may also obtain a copy, including the signatures. If a petition comes to the House through an Hon. Member, it seems to me that a copy may be taken out by a Member and, as in many other cases, Hon. Members are responsible for what they do with it.

Therefore I have asked the Clerk of Petitions to send a complete copy of a petition to a Member who will ask for one.

Mr. Prud'homme: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

PETITIONS

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): I have a number of petitions with hundreds of names from Kamloops, Invermere, Terrace, Cranbrook, Prince George, Courtenay, West Vancouver, Surrey, Delta, Coquitlam and Vancouver. I could go on and on but they have been signed by the citizens in virtually every town in British Columbia. The petitioners suggest that the massive cut-backs to child tax benefits are really an unfair attack on women and families with children and are especially unfair to single parent mothers. They ask that the Government reinstate full indexation of universal family allowance and rescind a number of the regressive tax increases in the last Budget.

FEDERAL GASOLINE TAX

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): I also have a petition which was actually incorrectly submitted. I will not submit all of the loose papers, but there is an appropriate petition which makes the same point. The petitioners are concerned about the increasing federal taxes on gasoline. It is priced at a rate per litre which some people are finding extremely excessive.

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate the Hon. Member may have a point to make but I think he knows he is presenting petitions and not making speeches.

Is the Hon. Member finished with his presentation of that petition? All right.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a number of petitions signed by residents of Winnipeg, mostly from my own constituency, who believe that the family allowance deindexation will not be offset by changes to the child tax credit and that the poorest families will be worse off by 1990 as they fall further and further behind. The petitioners humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance and rescind the unfair tax increases.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have three petitions, two of them on the same subject. One petition is from the city of Regina and one from The Battlefords-Meadow Lake area of Saskatchewan. These more than 200 petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the full indexing of the family allowance program and to rescind all the unfair tax increases in the Budget.

CALL FOR RETENTION OF SUB-POST OFFICE IN REGINA

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): I have a further petition which is something of a phenomenon in that its over 4,000 signatures were gathered in the period of one month. The over 4,000 petitioners in Regina humbly pray that this Parliament sees to it that the Canada Post maintain sub-Post Office No. 26 in the Golden Mile Plaza in Regina.

[Translation]

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND CHILD TAX CREDIT

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions I would like to table, since today is the last day of debate on Bill C-70. These petitions ask the Government to change its position, to drop its opposition to full indexation and reinstate full indexation of family allowances and the child tax credit.

My first petition is from the riding of Ottawa-Vanier. Another petition is from Saint-Henri-Westmount in the province of Quebec. Another petition on the same matter is from Berthier-Maskinongé-Lanaudière, Quebec. Another petition is from the federal riding of Saint-Jean and another from the riding of Berthier-Maskinongé-Lanaudière, Quebec. Another petition is from the federal riding of Saint-Maurice. Another from the federal riding of Champlain in Quebec. From the city of Toronto, we have a number of constituents in that city asking the Government to allow full indexation of family allowances. Another petition from Toronto. Another from Vancouver-East, British Columbia. And another from Kamloops-Shuswap, British Columbia. And lastly, a petition from Red Deer, Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, that is a total of 45 to 50 petitions in only a few days, which is quite a lot.

[English]

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I too, have several petitions. The first petition is from residents of Kayuga, Burford and Brantford, Ontario. The operative clause reads that the petitioners humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

In addition, I have another petition from several citizens of the City of Cambridge, Ontario, who also petition the House of the same purpose.

I also have a petition for several centres in British Columbia wherein the petitioners humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

I have another petition from various suburbs of the City of Toronto which has the same operative clause.

I have another petition from Nova Scotia with many names of residents of many different communities in that province who petition the House for the same purpose.

• (1510)

Another petition is from Cambridge, St. Catharines, Kingston, Pickering and many other centres in Ontario for the same purpose.

I have another petition from Milton, Listowel, Niagara Falls, Kitchener and Toronto, Ontario, for the same purpose.

Finally I have a petition from Hamilton, Port Dover, London, Toronto, Sarnia and other places in Ontario with the same operative clause.

CONCERN ABOUT FUTURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to present a petition signed by a number of constituents of the federal ridings of Moncton, Westmorland-Kent and Fundy Royal. The petitioners express their concern regarding the assessment being conducted by CN of its maintenance capacity in Canada. They ask the Parliament of Canada to take into consideration their concerns and make sure that in no way will the efforts undertaken by CN downgrade their facilities in Moncton.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty and responsibility to present several petitions from Newfoundland, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. They petition Parliament on the grounds that deindexation of universal family allowances and massive cut-backs in the public commitment to child benefits are an unfair attack on women and families with children, especially single-parent mothers. Moreover, they call upon Parliament to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances and rescind unfair tax increases.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions to bring to the attention of the House today. The first is from the Delta, Burnaby, Richmond and Vancouver areas of British Columbia. The petitioners are very concerned that deindexation of universal family allowances and cut-backs in the public commitment to child benefits are an unfair attack on women and families with children, especially single-parent mothers. They call upon this House to do whatever it can to reinstate full indexation.

The second group of petitions is from all over Ontario and they bear a large number of signatures. The petitioners are concerned about budget hand-outs such as the $500,000 in tax-free capital gains, RRSP deductions and billions of dollars going to the banks while at the same time the universal family allowance is being cut back. I am pleased to provide these to you today, Mr. Speaker.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I also have quite a number of petitions from British Columbia and the Maritime provinces. The petitioners ask for reinstatement of full indexation to family allowances. The petitions from British Columbia include the communities of Surrey, New Westminster, Coquitlam, Vancouver, North Vancouver, South Canbrook, Kimberley, Invermere, Haney, Richmond, White Rock, Burnaby, Port Alberni, Dawson Creek, Saltspring Island, Surrey and many from the City of Vancouver. There are also petitions from Delta, Nelson, Castlegar, Ganges on Saltspring Island, Port Moody, Fruitvale, Port Hardy, Lac-la-Hache, Richmond, Sechelt, Salmon Arm, Kitimat—

Mr. Frith: Sounds like a bus schedule.

Ms. Mitchell: It does sound like a bus schedule but they say that people all over British Columbia are concerned.

The second group of petitions are from Lunenburg and Bridgewater, Nova Scotia. There are petitions from Dover, Riverview and St. John's, Newfoundland. There are also quite a number from a number of different communities in Nova Scotia. They all protest Bill C-70.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a number of petitions which ask the Government to reverse itself on the plan to deindex family allowances. The petitioners reside in Labrador and Quebec. There are petitions from the ridings of Sudbury, Gander-Twillingate, Nickel Belt, and Victoria, as well as from the Okanagan and Esquimalt areas of British Columbia.

CONTROL OF PORNOGRAPHY

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House petitions from Fraser Valley East churches, including the Chilliwack Alliance Church, the St. Paul Lutheran church, the Chilliwack Seventh Day Adventist Church, and the Gillanders Road Neighbourhood Group. These petitioners urge the federal Government to establish clear obscenity legislation and enforce stricter control over pornography. They are truly concerned about maintaining community standards of decency.

[Translation]

CALL FOR WITHDRAWAL OF BILL C-70

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition I would like to table, and it is a large one. It contains the signatures of 700 people from the Montreal area, and these signatures were collected by the Organisation d'aide aux assistés sociaux de la rue Delisle, in Montreal.

Petitioners believe that society as a whole should share responsibility for children, and that the principle of universality should be maintained.

They humbly ask the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) to immediately withdraw Bill C-70 which proposes to de-index family allowances.

[English]

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour to present a number of petitions from a number of communities in Nova Scotia, including Halifax, Dartmouth, Sackville, Pugwash, Wentworth, Truto and Springhill. The petitioners ask this House to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances and rescind unfair tax increases from the last Budget.

I also have the honour to present a petition from my own riding, specifically Norway House, where a number of native people have again expressed their concern over the Government's intention to destroy universal family allowances absolutely by partial deindexation of that very necessary source of income to the people of that community.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have the duty and privilege to present a number of petitions. Many of them are signed by residents of my own constituency. Others are signed by residents of the Cities of Kitchener, Waterloo and Guelph, Ontario. The petitioners state that deindexation of universal family allowances is an unfair attack on women and families. They further state that this attack will not be offset by changes to the child tax credit and that other tax increases in the May Budget will place an unfair burden on low and middle-income earners.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present on behalf of about 450 residents of Moncton and surrounding areas a petition protesting the downsizing or closure of the CN shops in Moncton. Twelve hundred jobs are being threatened and already 225 lay-off notices have been sent to the workers. They ask the Government to try and stop that very depressing situation.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions from various communities in British Columbia. Unlike some Conservative Members, including one Minister, from British Columbia, I am going to read them out instead of tabling them secretly with the Clerk.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member just do that as opposed to giving us a preamble?

Mr. Waddell: No more preambles, Mr. Speaker. I have petitions from Gibson's Landing, Maple Ridge in the Fraser Valley, and Vancouver, including my riding of Vancouver-Kingsway. Numerous people have protested this Bill and they call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances and rescind unfair tax increases.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and honour to present a series of petitions from Halifax and Dartmouth, Nova Scotia. I have another series of petitions from Vancouver and Burnaby, British Columbia. The petitioners call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances and rescind unfair tax increases.

• (1520)

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions with regard to the family allowance from Halifax and some from the Province of Saskatchewan, in partiuclar, from the City of Regina. I also have petitions with regard to family allowance from my own riding of Winnipeg North Centre. These petitioners point out that the deindexation of the family allowance is an unfair attack on women and families, and particularly on single parent mothers, and that these cut-backs in family allowance are inequitable in light of the hand-outs to banks and oil companies.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to report that the people of the riding of Spadina are still sending in petitions against the Government's proposal of partially deindex the family allowance. They call it an unfair attack on women and families with children. They petition this House to reinstate full indexation universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

[Translation]

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to table in the House a petition signed by about 400 people from Moncton, Salisbury, Sussex and Petitcodiac, in which petitioners describe the situation at the CN shops in Moncton and ask the Government to take steps to protect these jobs.

[English]

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and duty to present petitions, not only from my own riding, but from all across Canada. I have petitions from the communities of Campbellton, Tide Head, and Dundee in New Brunswick. I have petitions from Toronto, Thunder Bay, and Manitoba. All of these petitions call upon the Government of Canada to continue to index the family allowance at a full rate so that the children of the country can get the food and clothing that they need.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—PENSION INCOME DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by a number of labour leaders from Thunder Bay and northwestern Ontario who are calling on the Government to change its approach on the use of pension income as it relates to unemployment insurance. The petitioners call upon the Government to reverse its decision which came into effect as of January 1 of this year.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, it is an honour and privilege to present petitions from various areas of Canada dealing with family allowance. These petitioners protest the decision to deindex the family allowance, point out the consequences for even the poorest families, and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation. Some of the petitioners are from the Vancouver area and various areas of the lower mainland including Surrey, Delta, and Burnaby. There is a petition from the City of Kamloops in British Columbia as well. I also have petitions from persons living in Ottawa and various parts of the City of Toronto. I have petitions, as well, from persons living in various communities in Nova Scotia, including Sackville, Dartmouth, and various parts of Cape Breton. All of these, of course, call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and privilege to present petitions today from all corners of the Province of Ontario calling upon the Government to reinstate full indexation of the universal family allowance and to rescind the unfair tax increases. I have a similar petition signed by residents of Campbellton and Dalhousie in New Brunswick also calling upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I also have the privilege of tabling a petition signed by residents of Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, Rosemont, Outremont, Laurier and Vaudreuil-Soulanges in the province of Quebec, who are asking the Government to withdraw Bill C-70 which proposes to deindex family allowances.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I wish to advise the House that the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 401, 402, 404 and 405.

[Text]

PENSION PLAN EARNINGS AND CONTRIBUTIONS

Question No. 401—Mr. Cassidy:

Since 1952 by year, what percentage of the combined total of pension plan interest earnings, and employer-employee pension plan contributions and other payments made to finance pension plan benefits and their indexing for (a) public servants (b) members of the Canadian Armed Forces (c) members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were provided by (i) pension plan interest earnings (ii) employer pension contributions and other employer payments (iii) employee pension contributions?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board):

(a) Public Service Pension Plan

Percentage of Combined Interest Earnings Employer-Employee Pension Plan Contributions and other Payments to finance Pension Plan Benefits and Indexing

| Year | Employee Contributions (Percentage of Total) | Employer Contributions and other payments to finance pension benefits and indexing (Percentage of Total) | Plan Interest Earnings (Percentage of Total) |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1952-53 | 22 | 51 | 27 |
| 1953-54 | 33 | 48 | 19 |
| 1954-55 | 33 | 39 | 28 |

CANADIAN FORCES SUPERANNUATION ACCOUNT

Question No. 402—Mr. Cassidy:

1. With reference to the answer to question No. 4,485 of the 1st Session of the 32nd Parliament, how much of the $2,438 million decrease in liabilities that was experienced by the Canadian Forces Superannuation Account (CFSA) for past service by the decision that was taken to carry out an actuarial valuation of the RCMPSA under a 3 per cent annual inflation scenario, arose because inflationary interest earnings on CFSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries were committed to reducing past service employer pension costs in respect of current employees?

2. How much of the decrease in employer pension costs from 19.0 per cent to 10.8 per cent of contributory payroll for future service that was experienced by the CFSA resulting from the decision that was taken to carry out an actuarial valuation of the CFSA under a 3 per cent annual inflation scenario, arose because inflationary interest earnings on CFSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries were committed to reducing future service employer pension costs in respect of current employees?

3. Were representatives of CFS pensioners consulted on the action taken to commit inflationary interest earnings on CFSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries towards reducing past and future service employer pension costs in respect of current employees and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): 1 and 2. Before 1975, the actuarial valuations of the CFSA were based on a 4 per cent interest assumption. Rates of future salary increases and inflation were not projected.

In the 1975 valuation, the rate of interest was assumed to be 6.5 per cent per annum. Salary increases were assumed to be 5.5 per cent annually. These rates included an implicit assumption of 3 per cent inflation.

If no implicit assumptions for inflation had been used, the other economic assumptions could be regarded as being 3.5 per cent for real interest rates and 2.5 per cent for real salary increases. The effect of using an implicit inflation assumption of 3 per cent and therefore interest and salary increase assumptions of 6.5 per cent and 5.5 per cent, respectively, instead of 3.5 per cent and 2.5 per cent was to:

(a) decrease the CFSA actuarial liabilities by $2,438 million. Of this amount approximately $2,090 million could be attributed to using a discount rate of 6.5 per cent during the plan members' retirement years, instead of 3.5 per cent; and

(b) reduce the full employer annual current service cost that would have been required from 19 per cent to 10.8 per cent of contributory payroll. Of the 8.2 per cent of pay decrease, about 6.2 per cent of pay is attributable to using a discount rate of 6.5 per cent interest rather than 3.5 per cent during the retirement period of plan members.

3. Representatives of Canadian Forces pensioners were not consulted about the change in economic assumptions used to value the CFS Account. The benefits of pensioners were not affected by the change in these assumptions. The assumptions were changed to enable realistic cost comparisons with private sector plans.

Also, pensions are not negotiable with plan members.

PUBLIC SERVICE SUPERANNUATION ACCOUNT

Question No. 404—Mr. Cassidy:

1. With reference to the answer to question No. 3,487 of the 1st Session of the 32nd Parliament, how much of the $3,648 million decrease in liabilities that was experienced by the Public Service Superannuation Account (PSSA) for past service by the decision that was taken to carry out an actuarial valuation of the PSSA under a 3 per cent annual inflation scenario, arose because inflationary interest earnings on PSSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries were committed to reducing past service employer pension costs in respect of current employees?

2. How much of the decrease in employer pension costs from 11.6 per cent to 6.5 per cent of contributory payroll for future service that was experienced by the PSSA resulting from the decision that was taken to carry out an actuarial valuation of the PSSA under a 3 per cent annual inflation scenario, arose because inflationary interest earnings on PSSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries were committed to reducing future service employer pension costs in respect of current employees?

3. Were representatives of PSSA pensioners consulted on the action taken to commit inflationary interest earnings on PSSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries towards reducing past and future service employer pension costs in respect of current employees and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): 1 and 2. Before 1977, the actuarial valuations of the PSSA were based on a 4 per cent interest assumption. Rates of future salary increases and inflation were not projected.

In the 1977 valuation, the rate of interest was assumed to be 6.5 per cent per annum. Salary increases were assumed to be 5.5 per cent annually. These rates included an implicit assumption of 3 per cent inflation.

If not implicit assumptions for inflation had been used, the other economic assumptions could be regarded as being 3.5 per cent for real interest rates and 2.5 per cent for real salary increases. The effect of using an implicit inflation assumption of 3 per cent, and therefore interest and salary increase assumptions of 6.5 per cent and 5.5 per cent, respectively, instead of 3.5 per cent and 2.5 per cent was to:

(a) decrease PSSA liabilities by $3648 million, which included a decrease in pensioner liabilities of about $2850; and

(b) reduce the full employer annual current service cost that would have been required from 11.6 per cent to 6.5 percent of contributory payroll. Of the 5.1 per cent of pay decrease, about 3.6 per cent of pay is attributable to using a discount rate of 6.5 per cent interest rather than 3.5 per cent during the retirement period of plan members.

3. Representatives of PSSA pensioners were not consulted about the change in economic assumptions used to value the PSS Account. The benefits of pensioners were not affected by the change in these assumptions. The assumptions were changed to enable realistic cost comparisons with private sector plans.

Also, pensions are not negotiable with plan members.

ESTIMATED LOSSES IN SUPERANNUATION ACCOUNTS

Question No. 405—Mr. Cassidy:

As of December 31, 1984, what was the estimated loss in accumulated interest and principal that the Public Service Superannuation Account, the Canadian Forces Superannuation Account and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Account have experienced from the time these accounts were first established as a result of employer contributions being credited to these accounts one fiscal year in arrears instead of being credited currently on a monthly basis to coincide with the current contributions made by employees from their pay cheques?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): In accordance with legislation, employer contributions are credited to the Public Service Superannuation Account one fiscal year in arrears, and to the Canadian Forces and RCMP Superannuation Accounts one quarter in arrears. If these employer contributions had been credited to these accounts at the same time as employee contributions, the estimated difference in interest earnings would be as follows:

|---|---|
| Public Service Superannuation Account | $ 385 million |
| Canadian Forces Superannuation Account | $ 90 million |
| RCMP Superannuation Account | $ 15 million |

[Translation]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ACT, 1973

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Epp (Provencher) that Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973 be read the the third time and passed.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I understand that I have 13 minutes left, not enough time to tell how strongly we oppose Bill C-70. We are joined by over 100 organizations that have appeared on Parliament Hill and by many more than 100,000 petitioners who oppose the deindexation of the family allowance so very strongly.

Why is the NDP and all these groups and citizens protesting so very strongly? It is for the same reason that we opposed the Liberal's six and five deindexing and the earlier cuts made by the Liberals to the family allowance. First of all, Bill C-70, as we have said many times, is an attack on families. The family allowance cheque is the only family benefit that goes to all families that are rearing children. It recognizes the costs and responsibilities that parents take on when they raise children. It is the way in which taxpayers, who do not have children, contribute to the rearing of the next generation. It recognizes the value of children and of parenting. It shows that we are a caring society. It is also a very important means of subsidizing the heavy costs of larger families, a point that the Federation of Labour from P.E.I. pointed out was not stressed enough in committee.

By refusing to index the family allowance to the full cost of living the Government is not only taking money from children in real terms but is denying all the principles of this very important universal social program that I just mentioned. It is really denying the fact that this program is a social right to Canadian parents. It is a social contract between their Government, their children, and themselves. It is this contract that is being eroded.

This gives very bad signals to parents. It tells them that kids will have to pay for the deficit, that parenting is not important to the Government, that the Government is willing to allow family allowance to be eroded over the years—and that is where the significant decrease comes—and that children and families are not a priority of the Government. Those are the signals that people are getting, and the Government should realize that. The Ministers and Members sitting in the House should realize that this is a very serious and very negative matter from a political point of view.

Bill C-70 is an attack on women. We heard from the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, from the Canadian Advisory Council, and from many, many women's groups across Canada. This has aroused the anger of women so much that in Quebec a very strong and very determined new coalition of 60 or more organizations was formed which will continue to protest to the Government. They have lost all confidence in the Government and its actions.

As my Leader said this morning, women are concerned because they need that cheque for their kids, they deserve it, it is their right, and it should be fully indexed. They are also concerned because, in most cases, the cheque comes to women in their own name. I do not think that many men, who have always been in the workforce, realize what it means to a woman who has been raising kids in the home, who has been working very hard and gets no financial recognition, benefits, or adequate pension as do people in the workforce. The one thing she does get is a family allowance cheque which is hers. I am sure that in most cases she uses it for the children, but it is she who gives it to her children.

In the case of low income women, as they told us, this is money that the mother uses to buy food, especially toward the end of the month when the welfare cheque has been used up. To Canadian women the Government's decision to deindex means a reduction in the value of the family allowance cheque, and they feel that this is insulting, degrading and humiliating. It makes women very angry. They will not forget that anger, I can assure Hon. Members in this House.

• (1530)

The family allowance is little enough as it is. If the Liberals had retained full indexation and done what they should have done as a social commitment and a human right, we would have had family allowance cheques over $50 a month today, and that is the least they should be.

It is incredible that the Government would try to fool women and play around with this important program. The Minister put out a press release before Christmas saying that cheques would not be reduced but increased in January. He even put the cheques out ahead of this debate with an increase of one cent per day per child. The amount should have been four times that to cover the real costs of living.

We have heard from many people that Bill C-70 will be hardest on small families. It will be hard on large families who have a fair income because the cost of raising several children is very great. This Bill will be particularly hard on single parent families, 90 per cent of whom are headed by women who are poor.

The Minister can mouth his platitudes saying that he wants to help those in greatest need. Members who spoke this morning repeated that message but the facts show that that is not true. The family benefit programs and the steps taken in the Budget will hurt poor families badly. I will give some facts to substantiate that statement.

We heard from many mothers on low income and many social policy groups that deindexation is hardest on the poor. I know women in my riding who after using up their welfare cheques use their family allowance cheques. By the end of the month they are out on the streets. I can tell Hon. Members that because of Bill C-49 these women are out on the streets getting picked up and are subject to criminal charges. How do you think women and mothers feel, Mr. Speaker, when they know their Government cares so little for them that it is cutting the cost of living increases?

Bill C-70 is regressive social policy. We heard this repeatedly from social policy groups. One woman parliamentarian—I was really disappointed to hear her—said it is progressive. That is ridiculous. Combined with other Budget measures, it favours the rich and hurts the poor.

The National Council on Welfare and the Canadian Council on Social Development have this documented. The National Council on Welfare said that over the next five years a single mother with two children earning $15,000 annually will lose nearly $2,000 under the Government's Budget. On the other hand, a one-earner couple at the $80,000 a year level will gain nearly $6,000. It is incredible, isn't it, Mr. Speaker? The child tax credit is also being deindexed after three years. We sometimes forget about the child tax exemption, which will be reduced by deindexing. Higher income people will get a reduction for capital gains exemptions and a much higher ceiling on non-taxable RRSPs. Although the poorest families will have an increase in the child tax credit—I hope Members are listening because they keep giving out myths—the increase in the child tax credit does not come until 1987. In the meantime, in 1986 sales taxes imposed on the poorest families will be much higher than the increase in the child tax credit.

How can the Conservatives argue that the Budget helps the poorest families? They are either uninformed or unintelligent—I do not think that is true—but they must be deluded and certainly very cynical if they continue to repeat that argument.

The savings from the reduction on the indexation on family allowances also takes money from the lower income families according to the Canadian Council on Social Development. Their research shows that as a result of 3 per cent deindexation the Government will retrieve $49 million in 1986 alone. Of these savings, $33 million will come from families whose incomes are under $50,000. Average and poor families are being hit by Bill C-70, the families raising children.

The cumulative effect of deindexing the family allowance is another thing we must remember. It is only a little bit of money, a quart of milk a month, starting this new year. On the other hand if we look at what happens over the years with deindexation, the Canadian Council analysis shows that if inflation continues at 3 per cent, in 20 years time the family allowance will be only with $18 a month instead of $32, a loss of $168 a year. The child tax credit—get this—will be reduced to $326 from $384 today even though during part of that period there is an increase in the child tax credit.

The other thing we do not realize is that the turning point for income eligibility for the child tax credit is also affected. The CLC says that in 20 years time only those earning $14,000 a year, extremely poor families, will be eligible for the child tax credit. People up to the $26,500 income range are eligible today. This plan is insidious. As the years go by the family allowance wil be eroded, proving that the Government is attacking a universal program.

Bill C-70 also contains a section giving the Minister power to declare missing children as presumed dead. Child finder groups and parents with missing children are very concerned about this section. We think it should have been withdrawn. Native women have a special plea but were refused being heard. The Bill has a tremendous impact on their families and communities.

Bill C-70 represents a final betrayal by the Government which will come back to haunt it. The Government promised consultation. That promise has been a complete farce. Very qualified groups who were heard at committee twice unanimously opposed deindexing. Their consultation has been ignored. They will not ignore the Government, I know. The Government promised to protect universal social programs. Remember universality was sacred. I have already shown how universality has been attacked by Bill C-70.

Remember the Leaders debate, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister said he was going to be very sensitive to women's concerns, that women would have equal participation in society and that he was going to focus on women. He is focusing on women, all right. He is attacking women and their children. Women have told us over and over again that they have lost confidence in him. Even the Government advisory group has said how strongly it opposes this Bill.

The Conservatives said and the Minister who is sitting in the House says repeatedly that they want to help those in greatest need. The facts show that Bill C-70 and the other Budget measures are hurting families in greatest need. That is more rhetoric and another promise down the drain. The Government said it would recommend cuts to social programs when the economy improved. The Government now says the economy has improved, that there are more jobs, yet the Government is not willing to reconsider its stand.

We urge the Government to put a sunset clause in Bill C-70. We tried for amendments in committee and here at report stage so we could look at the Bill in a year if the Government would not do away with the Bill. We were ignored which shows that the Government either lied to the people about its intentions or it is lying now when it says the economy has improved.

An Hon. Member: Order.

Ms. Mitchell: I want to say that by refusing to reconsider Bill C-70 which will hurt women, children and families and, in fact, this country, despite the unanimous recommendations of all expert witnesses who appeared and despite a massive country-wide protest as seen in petitions, by reneging again and again on promises, the Government, while trying to distort the facts has permanently alienated Canadians. Canadians have lost confidence in the credibility and in the humanity of the Government.

• (1540)

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell). The Hon. Member repeatedly mentioned throughout her speech terms like "progressive". Also she mentioned helping poor people with lower incomes. Does she accept, as I believe her Leader did this morning, that Bill C-70 will help lower-income mothers and their children for the next five years and will take away funds from high-income mothers and their children? As I understand the word "progressive"—

Ms. Mitchell: You do not understand it.

Mr. Kilgour: —one hits harder people with higher incomes and one helps people with lower incomes. Could the Hon. Member tell the House what is her understanding in respect of low-income families and this particular Bill?

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, it must be a very strange definition of progressive legislation.

Mr. Frith: It is the definition of Progressive Conservative.

Ms. Mitchell: Yes, there is a different definition of "progressive" when we talk about Progressive Conservatives. I mean, what can one answer?

Mr. Kilgour: Answer my question.

Ms. Mitchell: I have documented throughout my speech that they are reducing the indexation on family allowances for poor people and of course it will hurt them. Meanwhile, the costs of their food, clothing and so on are rising. Of course it is hurting them. As the Minister himself said, we cannot really take this Bill in isolation from some of the other budget measures as well. I gave the facts in the documentation from CCSD and from the National Council of Welfare which proved beyond a doubt that they are hurting most the lost income families. They are hurting families at the expense of other taxpayers as well.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, with respect, we have to be honest with each other in the House. The Hon. Member just said that we must not take this Bill in isolation, that we must look at other Bills. We have only one Bill before us. Does the Hon. Member know about the tax credit and the fact that low-income families, mothers and children, will have more in their family purse under this Bill for the next five years than they have right now? If she wants to rise, would she please speak to the Bill before the House, not to 17 other Bills or 17 other issues? My question relates to Bill C-70 only, and I submit that that is the lurking fallacy in everything the Hon. Member has been saying.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, how can a mother have more money in her purse as a result of this Bill, when the cost of living is rising by 4 per cent and the Minister is only giving 1 per cent in the way of any kind of adjustment for the cost of living? How can she have more money in her purse if she has to pay out that extra money?

Mr. Kilgour: It is called a tax credit.

Ms. Mitchell: Let us talk about the real world. Let us talk about the real value of money and what that mother has to pay when she goes to the grocery store. It is ridiculous to try to give the impression to families across the country that the Minister is being generous by giving a cent per child per month when he should be giving four times that much for indexation to the real cost of living. It is inconceivable that he can pursue this point.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) has accused Government Members of lying about their intentions and of being deluded.

Mr. Frith: Polluted.

Mr. Hawkes: Deluded, Mr. Speaker. I have heard the New Democratic Party respond to some six to eight Budgets in my time here. It has a standard line; before that Party even sees the Budget, it says: "It favours the rich and hurts the poor".

Mr. Keeper: That is the fact in this Budget. Do you want the truth?

Mr. Hawkes: "That is the fact in this Budget", hollers some dishonourable Member from across the floor.

Mr. Keeper: The Budget hurts the poor and favours the rich. That is the truth.

Mr. Hawkes: In December, 1979, in this Chamber, on a motion from that Party a Budget was turfed out, the Budget of the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie). The National Council of Welfare, which the Hon. Member for Vancouver East is so fond of quoting, stated unequivocally at that time that it was the fairest Budget to the poor people of the nation in the decade of the seventies, and they threw it out.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hovdebo: Why didn't you keep it?

Mr. Hawkes: They sit in the Chamber and do not talk about the reality that a poor mother in Canada today, as of January 20, 1986, will have more money in her pocket for her children because of the family benefits policy of the Government than they were to have before my Party came into office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hawkes: Let us talk about the mothers today who need to buy food and skates for their children to participate in hockey.

Mr. Keeper: What about the excise tax?

Mr. Hawkes: They are to get more money as a consequence of the family benefits policy than they were to get before.

Mr. Keeper: What about the excise tax?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): What about the highest income tax in Canada?

Mr. Keeper: You raised that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Could we listen to the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) put his question or comment, please?

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, my question is a very simple one. It strikes at the heart of the delusions of the New Democratic Party and the Hon. Member who just spoke. I believe that that Party has deluded itself into believing that a penny a day slower growth in family allowance benefits is the most important part of the policy of the Government. I would like to be clear on its belief. Does that Party believe that that is more important than 500,000 more Canadians working, 1,000 more each and every day since the Budget was brought in? Does that Party think that a penny a day is more important than the over-all policy thrust which is to take from the rich and give to the poor where they need it and to stimulate the economy so that the really poor without jobs can have jobs? We were elected on jobs, jobs, jobs; reconciliation and justice. Taking from the rich and giving to the poor is justice; reconciliation is working with the economy—

Mr. Keeper: But you give to the rich.

Mr. Hawkes: —and jobs come out the other end of that process. One thousand more people per day are working in the country since the Budget was brought down. Is that not more important than a penny a day?

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I know the Hon. Member is enjoying his rhetoric. I appeal to him as a rational person and as a person who has been involved in social work as I have myself. I am sure he really knows the social situation of people. Over a hundred groups, most of which were very well qualified social policy groups with lots of data, unanimously disagreed with the Bill and said that it was harmful. How can he, as a person who taught in a school of social work in Alberta, not believe what they are saying?

Mr. Frith: He is stubborn.

Ms. Mitchell: It is very difficult to understand. As I answered this morning on the question of jobs, of course we are all for jobs. I wish there were many more full-time jobs at decent rates of pay for the very mothers about whom we are talking. They are lucky if they get part-time jobs. Many of them are being phased out of work into part-time jobs. He knows as well as I do that it is the children about whom we are talking. When a worker with no children gets x dollars and a parent, a mother or father, gets the same x dollars and has to support several children, surely it makes sense that the Government recognize those children. Surely it makes sense that they are recognized adequately. It is an insult and it goes against an appreciatiaon of family values and children to say that that amount will be deindexed. They cannot tell me that the Government could not find $50,000 or a little less than that to cover full indexation for this year. I do not want to use rhetoric again, but the Hon. Member knows perfectly well that they did not hesitate to find over $1 billion for the banks, to get new uniforms for the Armed Forces or to give all kinds of bonuses to the oil companies. Surely the children, the next generation, are just as important. Why be so miserly, so inhumane as to reduce the indexation on family allowances? I am very disappointed in the Member.

Mr. Speaker: Question and comment period is over. We will resume debate. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mrs. Bertrand).

[Translation]

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words at the third reading stage of Bill C-70.

The Bill was debated at length during second reading. It was studied in great detail in committee, and whatever could be said against or in favour of the Bill has already been said. In fact, today is the twenty-ninth day of debate on this piece of legislation.

During the next three years, this Bill and the amendments to the Income Tax Act concerning child benefits will gradually replace the present system with a fairer and a more sensible substitute, while maintaining the basic principle that families with children are entitled to certain benefits that are not available to families without children.

The proposed set of reforms guarantees that the highest after-tax benefits will go to families with the lowest incomes and that payments will be reduced progressively as a family's income increases. That is not the case at the present time, when a family with an income of over $30,000 receives higher after-tax benefits than a family with an income of $10,000.

I get the impression that the Opposition, especially the Liberal Opposition, tends to forget that between 1974 and 1984, it supported measures that made a fifty per cent cut in social programs. In 1976, the same Opposition reduced family allowances from $25 to $20 per month, reduced and finally eliminated the fifty-dollar child tax deduction in effect at the time, reduced the exemption for children from 16 to 17 years old, and finally, in 1982, the same Opposition capped indexation of family allowances at six and five per cent.

In fact, considering only what happened in 1976, if family allowances had been fully indexed to the consumer price index without interruption from 1974 onward, monthly family allowance payments would have been $51.83 per child this year, instead of $31.00 as is now the case.

Now, to the Members of the other Opposition Party who are such staunch defenders of the underprivileged. Did you tell those people about whom you are so concerned—and I am sorry to see the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) leaving the House now—did you tell those people the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth? Did you explain to them that the purpose of this Bill is indeed to give more money to the poorest among them? Would the Hon. Member for Vancouver East tell me whether she is prepared to go back to her riding this weekend and explain to the head of a single-parent family who earns $10,000 that, thanks to our new legislation, within five years this parent will have $250 more to raise his or her family?

Will the Hon. Member for Vancouver East be able to tell the parent that, because he or she will have $250 more, she will vote against the Bill this evening?

How does one explain this situation?

We have realigned our social policies under other amendments, particularly with respect to the child tax credit. Will Members of the Opposition tell families earning $10,000 a year that their child tax credit will be $734 in 1985, $768 in 1986, $908 in 1987, $1,048 in 1989? Did you tell that to your constituents?

If we examine the measures announced by our Government to help families we find that, generally speaking, the child benefit system will be changed somewhat over the next few years, but always to the benefit of poorer Canadians.

I said earlier that our family policy is an employment policy as well. If the father, the mother or the children in that family find work within the coming weeks or months, it will certainly compensate for the missing 94 cents on their monthly allowance cheque. In my opinion, that is more important to a family. Quebec's economy has been steadily recovering. Ever since the election, we have created, in Quebec alone, 136,000 jobs, that is an average of 9,067 jobs per month, compared with a total of 37,000 jobs created by the Liberal administration in 55 months.

It is clear that requests will continue to be made for still more money to help the poor in our society, to improve their living conditions, something we can understand. We fully support this concern for social justice.

The situation of families with children changes constantly. The federal programs designed to help these families cannot always automatically adapt to changing conditions. Therefore, it is sometimes necessary to reorient these programs, and that is the purpose of Bill C-70. We believe that we have adopted a realistic and equitable approach and we intend to continue to work in this direction.

Last December 5, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) announced the creation of a parliamentary task force on child care in Canada, to deal with the future orientation of policies in view of the changing needs of Canadian families. In our development policy, we are offering women, as an example, a labour market promotion and integration program to help them acquire the professional qualifications they need to meet the requirements, for some jobs as well as a practical knowledge of the labour market. In the health caucus, we have been studying for the past few weeks all aspects of poverty. We are concerned about these families and children who are living in poverty in Canada. We have heard experts deal with the subject: Mr. Ken Battle, Executive Director of the National Council on Welfare, Mrs. Sylvia Gold, of the Council on the Status of Women, Senator Brenda Robertson, who is familiar with this issue since she is a former Minister of Health from New Brunswick, the former Minister of Development, and in the coming days, we shall be hearing Mr. Michael Walker of the Fraser Institute in Vancouver. This is what we have been doing to help those who need it the most. In addition, we shall develop other social policies as our economy improves in the future.

Bill C-70 is a controversial piece of legislation. The Opposition parties and a number of groups and individuals have denounced it. Their arguments have not convinced me, but I respect the sincerity and the beliefs of most of them.

Like I was saying earlier, as our economy improves, the Government and the Department of National Health and Welfare hope to do even more for those really need it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments; the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi).

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) referred to the amounts the mothers would be receiving in 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989. I therefore ask her, what would they have received had the family allowances not been deindexed?

Give me the amounts—you cannot answer by yourself.

• (1600)

Mrs. Bertrand: I always abide by my Minister's wise advice.

You are asking me what would have been the amounts. I told you earlier what they would have been, if you and your Government, had not put a stop to that de-indexing. Instead of the $31 now received by families, it would have been $51. And I gave you tables, I have other tables but let me say it might be exhaustive at times to give figures. I gave you figures, I gave you tables, how much more families would be getting for the income tax credit, and this is what counts, because this is not taxable.

Mr. Rossi: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I am asking the question once again. She answered what it would have been. I am asking what it would be if you were not deindexing and that is the question.

Mrs. Bertrand: Then it is $11.28 less a year for family allowances, but $70 more in the first year as far as the tax credit is concerned, $35 more in the second year, and still $35 more in the third year for the tax credit.

[English]

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I had hoped to address the last stage of this Bill in a very general way by outlining the concerns of the Liberal Party and myself as the Health and Welfare critic regarding Bill C-70 which will deindex family allowances. However, after hearing some of the very technical arguments placed before us today, I feel almost compelled, and I will do so, to refute some fo the technical arguments made about this Bill so that we may draw our own conclusions at the end of the debate.

It seems to me that there are two basic arguments that Conservative Members have been using this afternoon. The first is that the total package of child benefits including the family allowance, the child tax credit and the child tax exemption will compensate for the reduction in family allowance. That was inherent in the questions that were put to the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) by the Hon. Member from Edmonton and the Hon. Member from Calgary. I think a few moments will be required to carefully consider the technicalities involved here.

That argument does not take into account the timing of the increases and deductions that are part of this program. Let me therefore begin with that premise and hope that Hon. Members opposite will understand exactly what it is they will be doing to low-income families. Indeed, Conservative Members have created the perception that the proposed changes to the total package of child benefits will compensate for the reduction of income to families following the deindexation of the family allowances. The other perception that is being created is that the end result will be a fairer distribution of benefits; that is to say, a greater proportion of benefits will go to families with lowest incomes. Unfortunately, neither of these highly desirable outcomes will occur. The reason for that is that the practical, negative effects of the proposed changes are not being recognized.

The single major problem with examining the three programs from a fiscal perspective is that the timing of the increases in the deductions are not being placed in the context in which they are going to occur. As an example, the reduction in the family allowances is to begin in January 1986, as soon as this Bill has passed. As a matter of fact, as I indicated in the House in December in debate and during Question Period, the Government did not even wait until the Bill was passed by Parliament before it presumed to change the figures that were to be placed on the family allowance cheques.

The deindexation will begin in January 1986. I hear from Members opposite that the child tax credit is being increased by $70. What the Government does not make clear is the fact that the $70 increase in the child tax credit will not be received by families until April 1987, some 14 months from now, because the child tax credit will not fully impact on families until another year goes by as it is only given out at income tax time. Quite simply, a family will lose the benefit of indexation for 14 months while awaiting the reported compensating adjustment. The Hon. Member from Edmonton and the Hon. Member from Calgary indicated that this was supposed to compensate, but they are going to have to be forced to admit that it will take 14 months before anyone, regardless of family income, will receive one benefit from the child tax credit.

In addition, there will be a second reduction for some families because this Bill lowers the turning point or the point at which one receives partial reduction of the child tax credit from $26,330 per year to $23,500. We lost the argument regarding that point in committee. As a matter of fact, the committee recommended that the turning point be much higher than that which is indicated in this Bill. We recommended that the turning point should be Statistics Canada's definition of family middle income which is $34,000 to $35,000 per year. Through this Bill, the Conservative Government has indicated that it feels that a family that earns $23,000 per year is sufficiently well off and does not require the full benefit of a child tax credit. Hence, families are going to begin to lose benefits under the child tax credit at that income level.

I will now deal with the import of these changes and I hope Hon. Members will listen carefully. The result of these changes is that between January 1986 and April 1987, all families in the country, regardless of income, will have their family allowances reduced by approximately $30. This short-term loss will be significant in and of itself but it will not begin to compare with the combined over-all effects of the proposed changes.

The Government will choose to proceed with its changes despite opposition from individual families. We have heard of the petition campaign that was launched by the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party. As well, I must admit that there have been some back-bench Conservative MPs who have had the courage to present petitions from their own constituents outlining opposition to the family allowance deindexation. Despite all of that, despite individual families showing displeasure at the Government's intentions and despite the professional service groups that are opposed to this Bill, a net gain will only occur to those families with incomes of less than $10,000 per year. The cumulative total gain after four years for those families will be $76. More important, all families with incomes of more than $10,000 will experience a net loss of income. That is because Conservative back-bench MPs are not taking into account when the family allowance will be deindexed and when the child tax credit will impact on families. I will not even deal with the child tax exemptions which, I believe, properly belong in Bill C-84.

Another argument has been running through the minds of Conservative Members in this debate. They claim that the result of the changes will be a fairer distribution of benefits or that a greater proportion of benefits will go to families with the lowest incomes. If that had been the intent of the Bill and if that had been the intent of the Government when this debate was launched some 15 to 16 months ago, the Government could have brought forward a Bill that would have had the agreement of all three political Parties. Instead, we ended up with the worst of both worlds.

I believe there has been a betrayal by the Government of the trust placed in it by the electorate on September 4, 1984. The people evidently trusted the Conservative Party during the election campaign of 1984 and the few months following the election. They believed the Government when it said that universality was a sacred trust not to be tampered with. They believed the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) when he indicated in the social policy review that any savings which would be found in these programs would be redirected to those families who need it the most as opposed to committing it to deficit reduction. In the Bill before us we see the full truth of the Conservative social policy. In effect, what we have is a social policy which is Robin Hood in reverse, and I have used that phrase before in this debate.

In a very technical way let me speak to Conservative Members of Parliament who have used that second point in their speeches, that is to say that there will be a fair distribution of benefits. Statistics Canada states that some 78 per cent of Canadians live in urban centres. In its annual review of poverty published in May of 1985—just 10 months ago—the National Council on Welfare indicated that a family of four living in a moderate to large urban centre with a family income of less than $19,000 a year would be living in poverty. I ask Hon. Members to bear that in mind because the argument here is that this Bill will aid those families who need it the most. The net effect of the proposed changes on families with incomes of less than $20,000 is that they will experience a loss of child benefits and, subsequently, a loss in their capacity to provide an adequate level of food, clothing and shelter for their children. Futher, it is generally accepted that the major beneficiary of the child benefit programs are well-to-do families. The effect of deindexation will have the most negative effect on lower income families. As a result of this Bill's passage, and I have no doubt that it will be passed, in excess of $16 million will be withheld from families living below the poverty line. I think that is a shocking indictment of a Conservative Government's social policy. What is more shocking is the temerity of the back-bench MPs who stand in their place in the House and foster they myth that the social legislation which is before Parliament and the Canadian public is actually going to help those families who need help the most.

The average family income in 1984 was $35,853. The proposed deindexation will have the effect of saving an estimated $49.5 million in 1986. In other words, that is contrary to what the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) promised at the beginning of the debate on universality some 15 months ago. It is also contrary to what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) indicated at that time. More damning is the fact that when the Minister of National Health and Welfare assumed the mantle of his office he did so to represent not only his own constituents but those in our society who need help the most. The Hon. Member opposite from Edmonton laughs. If politicians are to be believed in this world, then they should at least live up the campaign promises that they make. That is why the Canadian public no longer trusts the Government. The Government continually breaks its promises.

Mr. Kilgour: Get on with your speech.

Mr. Frith: The Hon. Member does not want to hear the truth. He raised a technical question with the Hon. Member for Vancouver East and now that he has had the benefit of a technical response he wants to lapse back into some general philosophical discussion.

The point is that the Minister of Health promised the Canadian public 15 months ago that any moneys found—any savings as a result of the review of the child benefits program—would never be used to reduce the size of the federal deficit. Yet, that is exactly what occurred six months later, when, on May 23, the Minister of Finance introduced a Budget which will widen the gap between the rich and the poor in our society. The Minister of Health now has the gall to defend the measures in Bill C-70 while being conspicuously silent on the even more damaging effects Bill C-84 will have on family incomes in the country.

Having said that, I would like to end my remarks on some of the general formalities. At the very beginning of this debate I indicated to Members of the House that the intent of the Government was laudatory. When the child benefits package was referred to committe, members of the committee were asked to consult as widely as possible with various groups across the country and make recommendations to the federal Government suggesting ways and means by which the family allowance, the child tax credit and the child tax exemption could be altered to ensure that more money could be put into the hands of those families who need it the most. That was the original laudatory intent at the beginning of the debate on the child benefits package.

I have indicated to Hon. Members before that when we received that mandate from the federal Government the committee spent, if I am not mistaken, some nine or ten weeks listening to various groups from across the country. The groups and individuals who appeared before the committee did so in the belief that if they gave proper advice, and if we were able to wade through the various testimony, that the three political parties could come up with a better package to recommend to the Minister of Health in order to change the child benefits package. We did so.

With respect to the child tax credit, we recommended that the Government significantly improve the package because we happen to believe it is a socially progressive way by which we can put more money into the hands of poor families. We also recommended that the Government look seriously at eliminating the child tax exemption so that any savings which would result to either the federal Government or the provincial Governments would be funneled into lower income groups. Those were the recommendations of the committee to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

Frankly, it seems that we wasted our time in that committee because not one of the general directional recommendations which we made was accepted by the Minister, or the committee on planning and priorities when it considered proposals not only to deindex personal exemptions but, worse still, to deindex the family allowances and old age pensions. Largely because of the senior citizens in the country who were so outraged by the thought of having their pensions deindexed, we were able to mount such a successful campaign that the Government had no choice but to back off with its plans. I take it what the Government decided to do was to hang tough, so to speak, with respect to the equally negative effects that this Bill will have on family benefits.

As I mentioned at the beginning of my speech this afternoon, despite the fact that the petition campaign which was launched was the most successful in Canada's history, in which we received between approximately 100,000 and 150,000 signatures, the Government's plan to deindex family allowances stands. This Government remains committed to the direction it established fiscally on the night of May 23.

What I think is most disturbing about the debate is the following. The blank cheque which Canadians gave to the Conservative Party on September 4, 1984, to institute fundamental change in order that Canadians who are not as well versed in the problems facing social programs in the country said, in essence, to the Conservative Party: "We are giving you authorization for change to these systems".

I had hoped when we began the debate on the review of family and seniors' benefits that all three political parties could have recommended a much better system. I believe we could have recommended a system such as the one referred to by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East. She indicated to the House, and I reiterate, that time and time again professional groups in Canada have come before the Government, not only this one but others, to put forward proposals which would achieve the goals and objectives which were originally established when the debate on child benefits began. That was, namely, to put more into the hands of those who need it the most. It seems to me that if the objective of the exercise is to fundamentally alter the social policy of this country, then the time is right for that kind of debate.

• (1620)

The Budget which was tabled on the night of May 23, 1985, gives us the following lesson. If we are going to create the fundamental will to change the social benefit structures, then fundamental to the success of that objective must be the political support of middle-income Canadians. In order to achieve that political support, the perception and reality must be widely held by middle-income Canadians that the burden of deficit reduction will be shared equally by the corporate sector and by personal income. That, in essence, is where the Conservative Government failed. It failed because it misunderstood the feelings of middle-income Canadians who recognized that in order to deal with the problem of deficit reduction there would have to be some altering of the social programs. What they are asking is if the Government intends middle-income Canadians to expect to have changes in those programs, then the Government must be equally committed to a reform of the Income Tax system so that the corporate sector takes on its fair share of the burden. Until the day occurs on which a Minister of Finance rises in the House of Commons and indicates that the corporate sector of this country will have to assume its fair share of the burden of tax, I feel the Government is going to have a difficult time creating the political will to undertake the necessary reforms to our social benefits structure.

I say that in a particular sense. What I have gathered from my travels across the country is that what so incensed middle-income Canadians is that a Budget which was introduced at a time when we were just beginning an economic renewal and growth, would have deindexed the senior citizens, family allowances and personal tax exemptions while at the same time allowing $500,000 worth of capital gains exemption for individuals. The Government did not once question the loss of tax revenues as a result of tax decisions made by Revenue Canada. It did not question the amount the corporate sector paid toward tax revenues and so it created a system in which the rich will get richer and the poor will get poorer. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that is no way to generate the political will to undertake the national debate we so badly need. It is not the fault of the Opposition Party. It is the fault of the governing Party for having failed to properly put into perspective the necessary tools so that that debate could have occurred. I can think of no other shame than the failure of the Conservative Government to bring into the House of Commons a social security package which would benefit those lower income groups and achieve the necessary political will in this country. The Government has now lost the opportunity.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 46, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow)—Medical care (a) Funding of cancer treatment centres. (b) Medical research; the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway)—Insurance—Municipalities' difficulties in obtaining liability coverage; the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo)—Agriculture (a) United States and European Community wheat trading practices. (b) United States farm commodity subsidies.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ACT, 1973

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Epp (Provencher) that Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973 be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments on the speech of the Hon. Member?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I find it very, very painful to sit here and listen to this Liberal hypocrisy. We heard this morning from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) who tried to justify the six and five program as not having any impact on the Family Allowance. He said it was introduced to lower inflation. Well, it lowered inflation from 11 per cent to 7 per cent.

Mr. Gauthier: Oh, no. To 4 per cent. Be honest. Don't be a hypocrite. Get your facts straight.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): But unemployment went from 7 per cent to 11 per cent, which reminds me of the 711 stores which went bankrupt in just the way the former Government was taking us down the fiscal path to bankruptcy.

Mr. Gauthier: That is nonsense.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): We have talked of fairness during this debate and I want to ask the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) if he thinks it is fair that the Liberals destroyed the family allowance base by seriously eroding it in 1976 and 1979?

Mr. Gauthier: You cannot be serious.

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, the assumption that the Government's introduction of the six and five program led to a decrease in over-all benefits has to be taken into context. When we introduced the six and five legislation, inflation in this country was running in the double digits. Within 11 months of the introduction of the six and five program, inflation had fallen to below 4 per cent. The net effect in terms of purchasing power from the six and five program was zero or minimum.

I would like to suggest one other thing, Mr. Speaker. This is where one finds out the difference between a Liberal and a Conservative. At least, under the six and five program we had the intelligence and compassion to double index the poor in our society in order to make sure that none of the poor suffered as a result of that program. That is more than I can say for this Conservative Government. When it introduced the Budget on the night of May 23, it was going to deindex every senior citizen without any care for those senior citizens who already lived below the poverty line. Perhaps the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mr. Turner) would care to respond to that.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment and I guess it could be construed as a question. I am really quite shocked that the Conservatives somehow feel it is sufficient when they receive criticism from us, and from the Liberals, about what they are doing to Family Allowances, to simply say there is nothing wrong with what they are doing because the Liberals did it when they were in office. What a defence.

Mr. Frith: And we paid the price.

Mr. Keeper: And as my colleague said: "We paid the price", and the Liberals did pay the price for doing what the Tories are doing now. The Tories are now beginning to pay the price as is evident by the Gallup polls.

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, I could not fail to reply to that leading question. I just fed the line to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) and it is correct. We did pay the price for some of those things, and I am going to suggest to the Conservative Members opposite that at the rate they are going, they will pay the same price. I am astounded every day in Question Period that the favourite trick of the Government in response to questions put by the Opposition is to blame the media because the message is not getting through. Have you ever considered, Mr. Speaker, that perhaps the message did get through and the public does not like it? That is also a possibility.

Mr. Gauthier: Kill the messenger.

Mr. Frith: The point is that 17 months ago the Conservatives assumed office, the Canadian public gave them the mandate to undertake some fundamental change and they flubbed it. That is the honest to goodness truth and I am awaiting the question to be put by the Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour). I would be delighted to answer it.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I would tell the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) that he need not worry, we will get back when the next election is called, I can guarantee him of that.

Mr. Rossi: That's what you think.

Mr. Kilgour: I will quote the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) at page 9859 of Hansard:

> From 1987 to 1990, as the child tax credit increases, the family receives more benefits. There will be a gain in 1987 of $64, in 1988 of $75, in 1989 of $96 and in 1990 of $44. That does not sound bad at all but the forecast changes.

I would put to the Hon. Member—and I ask him to honestly answer this question—where does he disagree with the figures of his own colleague who presumably got them from the same research department from which the Hon. Member is getting his figures?

Mr. Frith: I have a very simple answer, Mr. Speaker, but it is quite technical. Let me put it to the Hon. Member so he will understand it. It is because at that time our research bureau did not take into consideration the timing of the increase and the deductions and place them in the context in which they were going to occur. In other words, no one in this debate has addressed themselves to the issue that the deindexation is going to occur beginning January 1, 1986, yet not one cent of the changes to the child tax credit can be in the hands of the consumer until the income tax year of April, 1987. As a result, for the next 14 months, every family in this country, regardless of income levels, will lose under Bill C-70.

Mr. Halliday: I have a question, Mr. Speaker. I enjoyed listening to the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) and I must say I enjoyed working with him on the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs. He is a co-operative member. I particularly liked his reference today to the need for reform of the tax system. I agree with him and I have spoken about that in the House a number of times. Indeed, we have to look at a system which taxes profits as not being a sensible system. But, unfortunately, the Liberal Party, back in 1971, chose to bring in a system which did not essentially change the philosophy behind our tax system. I am not going to go into this in detail. I agree with the Hon. Member that we need a system which will tax corporations effectively so that you and I as individual citizens have more disposable income available for investment.

• (1630)

Having said that, the Hon. Member mentioned in reply to the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Tupper), I guess it is—

Mr. Gauthier: Ottawa-Carleton.

Mr. Halliday: The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mr. Turner). He said that the net effect of six and five on purchasing power was about zero. If that were true, surely the net effect of our partial deindexation of 3 per cent would also be zero.

The Hon. Member also made reference to the fact that our present policy will increase the gap between the rich and poor. How does he explain that all during the years of Liberal reign, when presumably they were doing such wonderful things in the way of social policy, the gap widened? I am surprised he is so upset about a slight change now when it obviously got worse during his Government's term in office.

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, those are two very important questions. Research will show that from 1971 until 1981 we narrowed the gap between the haves have have-nots in our society. That was confirmed recently by the National Council on Welfare. It was during the recession of 1981-83 that the gap widened. The report I referred to, as an example, indicated significant improvement in narrowing that gap among our seniors as a result of targeting our resources to those who needed help the most. What is critical here is that the fundamental social policy direction of his Government is to purposely widen the gap through taxation. That is at the root of the problem we on this side have. The gap between rich and poor is going to widen as a result of a deliberate tax policy.

As to the difference between the way we approach six and five and the way his Government is doing it is this. Under six and five we did not touch the base, we attacked the capping. As a result there was no loss of purchasing power. For example, when inflation was 11 per cent and we brought in the six and five program, had we not been successful in getting the inflation rate down quickly the people affected would have lost purchasing power. However, inflation came down so quickly that they in fact gained under that program. The Hon. Member's Government is not going to index the first 3 per cent of inflation and that will widen the gap. That is what we have been saying in debate.

In conclusion I will say this. One of the advantages of being in Opposition is that you do not carry the responsibility of Government in the sense that every time we approach policy review it is assumed to be Government policy. The mistake the Conservatives made is that during the 13 years they spent in Opposition, with the exception of the time of the Clark Government, they did not take the time to fundamentally come to grips with what they wanted to do with social policy and, the other side of that coin, fiscal or tax policy. As a result we get the kind of budget we saw on the night of May 23. I can promise you this: During the run-up to the next general election the Liberal Party will have in place alternatives for the Canadian public on social policy and tax reform which will clearly differentiate from that of the neanderthal Conservative Party.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The period for questions and comments is over. Resuming debate.

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to deliver these remarks on behalf of the Minister who, for procedural reasons, is not able to speak at this time.

Mr. Gauthier: He refused to make a speech and you know it.

Mr. Rossi: Tell the truth.

Mr. MacKay: My colleagues are a little agitated. As I understand it, had they a little more generosity or were a little more forthcoming the Minister could have delivered the speech himself.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, just to make sure the record is clear, the Minister made a speech this morning when he moved the motion on third reading. He did not say a darn thing and that is usual for him. That was his fault, not ours.

Mr. MacKay: That certainly does not sound like the Minister I know, who is the soul of generosity and co-operation.

Mr. Gauthier: We call him tricky Epp.

Mr. MacKay: In any event, it is a pleasure for me to deliver these remarks on his behalf. As the House knows, this will be the last day of debate on Bill C-70. The Bill has been before the House and its committees since September 13, 1985. It was debated for seven days at second reading, considered for 13 sitting days in a legislative committee, before the House for eight sitting days at report stage, and we are considering it today at third reading. It seems to me that this was a pretty fair opportunity for my colleagues to have discussed it. We heard many times in these debates charges by Members of the Opposition that the Bill was being railroaded through the House without proper or adequate time for debate and representations. Allow me, on behalf of the Minister, to put these charges in some perspective.

In 1982 and 1983, when the Family Allowances Act was last amended to limit indexation of family allowances in 1983 and 1984 under the six and five program, there were three days of debate at second reading, three sitting days in committee and four days of debate at report stage and third reading. To sum up, compared to that legislation, this Bill has been considered over twice as long at second reading, four times as long in committee, and over twice as long at report stage and third reading. This Bill has been before the House and in committee for 29 sitting days, while the so-called six and five Bill on family allowances was before the House and in committee for a total of 10 sitting days. That is almost a three-to-one ratio. I believe any responsible person in this House would have to conclude that, compared to similar Bills in the past, there has been ample opportunity to debate the provisions of this Bill and to hear representations on it.

Perhaps because of the length of this debate and because it has been a controversial Bill,there is in some Members' opinion little new to say about it. However, I think it would be useful at this stage to briefly review how this legislation forms part of an over-all reform of the child benefit system, and correct some of the inaccurate statements which have been made concerning the Bill by Members of the Opposition. Between now and 1989 this Bill and the amendments to the Income Tax Act now before the House dealing with the child tax credit and the child tax exemption will gradually replace the current child benefit system with one which is both more rational and more equitable. While maintaining the principle that all families with children should receive after-tax benefits from the federal Government not available to families without dependent children at the same income level, the new system will ensure that the largest benefits go to those families with children who have the lowest income and that benefits are reduced gradually as family incomes rise. That does not happen under the current system which pays larger after-tax benefits to a family with children and an income over $30,000 than it does to a family with children and an income under $10,000. Moreover, as at least one Member of the Opposition has had the frankness and honesty to recognize, families with two children and incomes at the $10,000 level will get more child tax benefits next year and the following three years under this system than they would have if the current system had remained in place. To quote from the speech of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) last Thursday, for a family with $10,000 income there will be a gain in 1987 of $64, in 1988 of $75, in 1989 of $96, and in 1990 of $44. That does not sound bad at all. Actually, the figures she cited for 1988, 1989 and 1990 are a few dollars below the gains which the Government has projected. However, let us accept for the sake of argument that the Hon. Member was using correct figures. What concerns that Hon. Member and a number of witnesses from groups who were sincerely interested in the situation of low-income families with children is, therefore, not what will happen under this package of reforms between now and 1990 or 1991, but what will happen in 1992 and after if no further changes are made to the proposed legislation governing the child tax credit.

• (1640)

This is a legitimate concern and the Minister has asked me to say, on his behalf, as he said in committee, before that time arises, and as the fiscal and economic situation of Canada improves, he will be asking Cabinet to approve measures to enrich the support provided to lower income families with children, and to better protect that enriched level of support from inflation.

Another concern that has been raised about this package of reforms, Mr. Speaker, is that while more money is total will go to the lowest income families with children than under the current system, there will be a reduction in the purchasing power of the monthly family allowance cheque, and that this will be a difficult adjustment, particularly for low-income parents who find themselves too often with too much month left at the end of the money. Again that is a valid concern so far as it goes, but it needs to be placed in perspective.

The fact is that while in theory the family allowance has been fully indexed to inflation since 1974, in fact the degree of inflation protection has been significantly less than that. In 1976, 1979, 1983, and 1984 under the previous Government, inflation protection was either reduced or eliminated in times of high inflation. In 1979 the family allowance was even reduced $5.68 per child per month from its 1978 level as part of a more general reform of the child benefits system. The result, Mr. Speaker, is that if what is proposed in this Bill had been in place uninterrupted since 1974, that is, indexing above 3 per cent increases in the CPI, family allowances would have been $6.88 per child per month higher in 1985 than they were in fact under theoretical full indexing.

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues that the Minister recognizes the importance of the monthly family allowance cheque in the day-to-day budgeting of low-income parents. He is prepared to examine a more periodic payment of the child tax credit to such families to deal with that concern, although Members should be aware that many low-income parents prefer to receive the child tax credit, as they do at present, in a lump sum so that they can use it for large purchases such as clothing or appliances.

Let me repeat to those who have raised concerns in the House and elsewhere that the gains for low-income families with children under this package of reforms are less substantial than they ought to be, and less insulated from inflation than they ought to be after 1991. The Minister shares their concern and the Government hopes to bring forward an effective response well before 1991.

Those who have called attention to the importance of the purchasing power of the monthly family allowance cheque for low-income parents have raised the legitimate point that something less than full indexing for all parents may be a more effective solution for those people. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, some Members of the Opposition have been content with expresing legitimate, or even arguable concerns about this Bill. Whether out of ignorance or malice, or some combination of the two, they have seized upon a relatively minor clause in this Bill designed to deal with a very limited number of tragic situations, a clause which has been for some time in other income security legislation, and used it to sow unnecessary apprehension and even distress among the parents of missing children in the country.

I refer, of course, to Clause 5 of this Bill which allows the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), upon being satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the death of a child on whose behalf family allowance is being received has occurred, to determine a date, for the purposes of this Act, of the dealth of the child without waiting for or being bound by death certificates issued by other authorities.

When the Bill came before the House for second reading the first Member to raise objection to this clause was the Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps). Her line was taken up in that debate and later in committee by many other Opposition Members, notably the Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) and the Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart). The latter took his opposition to the point of exploiting the case of a particular parent of a missing child by misrepresenting to the mother the motive and effect of this proposed clause, and by continuing in these misrepresentations in statements to the press after he had ample opportunity in committee and in conversations with officials of the Department to educate himself as to the real purpose and effect of this clause.

Those of us who have been in the House for some years, Mr. Speaker, know that when Members see something in a Bill which they do not understand, or which appears ambiguous, there is a proper code conduct to follow. You phone or approach the Minister of the Minister's staff. You ask for an explanation or clarification. If it is satisfactory, the matter ends there. If not, you raise it publicly.

I understand that the time allocated has now expired.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It being 4.45 p.m., it is my duty, pursuant to Order made on Tuesday, January 14, 1986, to interrupt the proceedings and put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of the third reading stage of the Bill now before the House.

[English]

The question is the following one. Mr. Epp (Provencher), seconded by Mr. Hnatyshyn, moves that Bill C-70, an Act to amend the Family Allowances Act, 1973, be read the third time and do pass. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

Family Allowances Act, 1973

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Epp (Provencher)), which was agreed to on the following division:

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENT RESPECTING ABORTION PROCEDURES

The House resumed from Thursday, September 12, 1985, consideration of the motion of Mr. Gormley that Bill C-226, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (abortion), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Jusstice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak to this Bill introduced by my colleague, the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley). The Bill that is before us today proposes to remove from the Criminal Code the endangerment of health of the mother as a ground for abortion.

The Hon. Member deserves a great deal of credit for his commitment to the protection of the unborn. I respect his views and I share those views in many ways. Like him, I realize the vital importance of this issue for all Canadians. I must say, however, that I do not think that Private Members' hour is the only place to be considering an amendment to the Criminal Code on such a significant clause and issue. We can have our discussion and we can acquaint Members with issues involved. It is essential, however, that we ensure that any decision to amend the Criminal Code as proposed will be taken only after a full examination of all the issues and with the full understanding by all Members.

Recently the Minister of State announced new immigration objectives of the Government of Canada. There are those in my constituency who have written to me in protest and they are saying flatly, no more immigration or more sharply reduced below the numbers that we have announced. They say that without knowing that Canada, in 1965, was the youngest nation in the world in terms of our population and age. Now, in 1986, we are the oldest in terms of the average age for a population. We are sustaining a net loss in our population. For whatever reasons young Canadian couples are either not having any children or are having one or two children. Diminishing population is not in its own right a valid reason to change current law in the Criminal Code pertaining to abortion, but I am still moved to ask why so many foetuses are destroyed, and where it would be difficult to medically demonstrate a valid and serious health risk to the mother in each case.

Too frequently we find the risk itself is minimal and that those who use this particular route use it as a form of birth control. The sadness is that there are in Canada today many childless couples who yearn for that great gift, that great fulfilment of life, a child of their own or a child by adoption. This points out the fact that as a society we have not reached that desirable level of social development to fully respond to those needs. That is one of my greatest concerns. If society were well equipped to handle this very situation, if there could be a greater measure of care and understanding of the end results of existing laws, if we could respond to that great need out there among so many people to have that blessing and that opportunity for fulfilment in their lives, it is my view that this would be a better country as a result.

I think it is important as well to briefly review the law of abortion. Until 1969 the law in Canada relating to abortion had changed little since 1892. It generally provided that it was an indictable offence for which one could be sentenced to imprisonment for life to procure the miscarriage of any woman. I can remember as a young man scarcely understanding all these facts of life, as they are frequently referred to, the stories of the back-room butcher shop, the back-room operations, and the horrors that resulted from those operations, scarcely realizing at that time the enormous consequences to the mother and inevitably the destruction of the foetus.

In 1969 the Criminal Code was amended to provide an exception to the offence of procuring an abortion. It was not an offence if the abortion had been approved by a therapeutic abortion committee of an approved or accredited hospital. The grounds for approving an abortion was that the continuation of the pregnancy would likely endanger the life and health of the mother. That provision in 1969 we hoped would help to resolve some of the problems associated with this entire issue, an issue that affects so many people and in so many ways, but which unto itself divides the country in terms of perception and view. One of the agonies of those who support this Bill, or the concept behind this Bill is that there are so many differing standards from province to province, from city to city.

I would like to reflect on the attitude of a given community as opposed to the attitude of another community in the same province or in some different province where standards may vary, where economic circumstance may vary, where a variety of conditions may vary. On the one hand you find that the statistics for abortion are very low, and on the other hand, in another community, very high. It is perhaps difficult to put your finger on what causes that variation of perception of fact and of viewpoint.

The abortion amendments have not had the effect of placating any of the individuals or groups who have an abiding interest in the matter of abortion and whose views range from one extreme in which all abortions are considered to be murder to the opposite extreme in which abortion on demand is advocated. In that context, the remarks of Mr. Justice Blackmun of the United States Supreme Court in Roe v. Wade are equally applicable to the Canadian situation. He said:

> We forthwith acknowledge our awareness of the sensitive and emotional nature of the abortion controversy, of the vigorous opposing views, even among physicians, and of the deep and seemingly absolute convictions that the subject inspires. One's philosophy, one's experience, one's exposure to the raw edges of human existence, one's religious training, one's attitudes towards life and family and the moral standards one establishes and seeks to observe, are all likely to influence and to color one's thinking and conclusions about abortion.

It is obvious that the 1969 amendment has left many people dissatisfied. The issue of what our abortion law should be and what sort of protection should be given to the unborn is one of the most emotional debates in the country. A great many Canadians are concerned about the issue and the ramifications of the continuance of the debate on what the law should be.

Some have resorted to the courts to clarify the law, particularly since the advent of the Charter. In at least two cases, Borowski and Morgentaler, the courts in Saskatchewan and Ontario have upheld the abortion provisions of the Criminal Code. In the Borowski case, the plaintiff alleged that a foetus was a person and therefore the term "everyone" in Section 7 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms provided protection for the unborn. In short, the court was asked to determine whether or not the foetus was, from the time of conception, or shortly thereafter, a legal person for all purposes. Of course, this was one of the issues as well before the United States Supreme Court in the case of Roe v. Wade.

I must say that Mr. Justice Blackmun has a great sense of perception and feel for the case. I personally find that I have never had the opportunity to meet him in person but I have great difficulty relating to Morgentaler when I see him on television. I have great difficulty relating to that man. As well, possibly because of my very nature which is somewhat reserved—although at times in the House that could be questioned—I have difficulty relating to Mr. Borowski, not because of the issue, not because of his dedication but perhaps because of his stridency and the sometimes extreme measures to which he seems to go. Nevertheless, my position on this issue has always been clear.

Again, I believe Mr. Justice Blackmun has probably identified the problem from his heart, mind and soul to a greater extent than anyone else whose opinions I have read. In Roe v. Wade, Mr. Justice Blackmun noted:

> We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins. When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy and theology are unable to arrive at any concensus, the judiciary at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer.

I can imagine to what depths this learned judge must have gone in his own conscience to provide that very brief decision, a decision which says so very much.

I believe that the question of protection for the unborn should be decided by Parliament. What other direction exists? The issues involved are extremely complicated and involve questions which are essentially religious and moral in nature. The court is not the proper place, in my view, to resolve this controversy.

One need only look to the United States to see the problems which a court-imposed solution created. In the 12 years since the U.S. Supreme Court gave a virtual green light to abortion on demand in its landmark decision Roe v. Wade, an estimated 15 million legal abortions have been performed in the United States. More than one-quarter of all pregnancies now end in abortion at a rate of roughly 4,000 per day. In some areas such as New York State, the number of abortions every year nearly equals the number of live births. At the same time, the vocal minority that never accepted the original court ruling has grown in size, sophistication and frustration and has taken its fight to the streets. The debate has now turned violent in the United States with doctors and nurses who perform abortions being harassed and with clinics being bombed. That debate is on the wrong track. Surely there is in that land as in this land a Congress that can provide more appropriate direction than the court room.

An important question to ask is what are the ramifications of preventing access to a therapeutic abortion when a woman's health is at risk. I must ask what that constitutes. As I said earlier, the perception of when a woman's health is at risk and the degree to which it is at risk varies from physician to physician, province to province and hospital to hospital.

Another question to be asked is would today's amendment be an unacceptable intrusion into the field of medicine. The present law recognizes the fact that medical practitioners may find circumstances under which pregnancy is likely to endanger a woman's health. It is in keeping with medical practice generally that danger to health be treated when such indications are present as, in the opinion of medical practitioners, would endanger the health of the patient.

The present abortion law makes no attempt to interfere with the practice of medicine, a matter within provincial jurisdiction. It does not attempt to tell physicians which factors may or may not be included in their medical determination of what constitutes a danger to life or health even when not all physicians agree on the weight to be given the various factors in particular circumstances.

One of my concerns is that very weight that is applied in paticular circumstances. One must consider so many different things. One must consider not only the convictions of the physician himself, not only the health risk to the mother but in medical and scientific terms, what other avenues are available to the physician regarding the risk to the life of the patient. Do we have available to us all the expertise that exists at the Ottawa General Hospital regarding complications developing as a result of pregnancies or abortions or do we have available to us information from a small, under-funded, under-staffed and under-equipped country hospital which must face the same kinds of consequences? I would like to add that the report of the committee on the operation of the abortion law submitted in 1977 found that there was no consensus for major changes to the abortion law. These findings have been confirmed in a number of studies and surveys conducted in recent years.

• (1730)

The committee also found that most Canadians were neither in favour of removing abortion from the Criminal Code nor of refusing therapeutic abortions under all circumstances. There is no indication that there has been a major shift in public opinion. I say that the only way in which we can make that major shift is by providing the medium, the social and economic opportunity, for the mother to make a decision to save the life of the foetus. In that context, it is my hope that as a private Member I can address myself with dedication to the provision and improvement of our own social structure so that so many of these unborn will have the chance to reach a life of fulfilment and be able to enrich the lives of their natural or adoptive parents.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak to Bill C-226. I would like to begin my remarks by indicating that I am speaking as an individual Member of Parliament. I am not speaking on behalf of the Liberal Party of Canada with respect to its position on abortion. I think that my Party's position with respect to the subject is clear. The official position is that it supports the existing legislation. I would like to say that I do not support my Party's position. I have indicated that on a number of occasions, including one occasion last November here in the House of Commons. At that time I commented on the acquittal in Ontario of Dr. Henry Morgentaler. I indicated that in my view the abortion law must be changed and that greater protection must be afforded the innocent unborn. I said that I would do what I could to ensure that the legislation was changed.

I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley) for taking the initiative and for having the courage to present to the House a Bill to amend the Criminal Code of Canada. He has taken a tremendous step in the right direction. I think he proposes a good amendment. It is specific, straightforward, and deals squarely with the issue.

The issue today is not whether or not we should change the abortion law. The issue today is whether or not a particular Member of Parliament, in this case the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake, will have the opportunity to have his Bill discussed at the committee stage. We all have views with respect to abortion. However, we all know the process which we are going through here today. This is Private Members' Hour. A Bill has been introduced by a Private Member, a Conservative Member. One hour has been allotted to discuss this Bill. The Bill was before the House once before in September. On that occasion a number of Members of Parliament spoke to it. It was decided by the Government at that time that the Bill would be talked out. According to the process which is in place, if the Government does not support a particular motion or Bill, or for that matter if members of the Opposition Parties do not support a Private Member's motion or Bill, all they need do is talk it out.

I guarantee Hon. Members that the Bill which is before us today will be talked out. We will see Conservative Members of Parliament talk until the hour has elapsed. Therefore, the Private Member will be denied the opportunity of having his proposed legislation discussed at the committee stage. I call upon members of the Conservative Party, those Members who will make the decision with respect to whether or not this Bill will go forward, to allow it to go to committee. In this way we can have a good debate on the subject matter.

Mr. Gormley: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nunziata: In this way, all Members of Parliament will be able to appear before the committee and express their views. Canadians who are interested in the subject will also be able to come before the committee and express their points of view on this important issue.

We all recognize that the issue is a divisive one. There are those who are for abortion and there are those who are against it. We recognize that it is nearly impossible to reconcile these two polarized positions with respect to abortion. However, I submit we must have the opportunity to debate the subject. We have a duty to those who are interested and concerned about the issue to hold a national debate, not just during Private Members' Hour, but at the committee state. In this way Canadians can come forward and express their points of view with respect to the issue of abortion. However, the Government will not allow that. I suggest that by not allowing a national debate the Government pays a disservice not only to the issue but to the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake who brought forward this piece of legislation. It also pays a disservice to the democratic system of Government.

The Government has spoken about enhancing the role of the back-bencher. We know that a committee known as the McGrath Committee recommended ways of enhancing the role of the back-bencher, since it was recognized that back-benchers play a very small role in the policy-making function. We do not legislate when we sit in the back rows. Those who make a difference are those who sit in the front benches on the government side—the Ministers. They are the ones who formulate policy and decide when legislation should go forward.

Thus, it was recognized, and applauded by many, that there was a need to enhance the role of the back-bencher and, therefore, measures should be brought in. If the Government is serious about enhancing the role of the back-bencher and ensuring that back-benchers have a say in bringing forward legislation, then why not allow Bill C-226 to go to committee for debate? Not only is it necessary but it is incumbent upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to allow this. I say this because during the election campaign in the summer of 1984 the Prime Minister went on record, and I have a copy of a letter which he sent to a concerned individual, in this regard. He stated that if his Government were elected he would allow a free vote on the subject of abortion. That was the position of the Prime Minister at that time. Talking out this piece of legislation could lead one to seriously question the integrity and honesty of the Prime Minister of Canada.

During the election campaign he promised to have a vote in the House of Commons on the issue of abortion. We are now some 17 months into the Conservative mandate and we all know that the Government has frittered that mandate which it received on September 4. Nonetheless, the promises are still there. One of those promises was that there would be a debate, a discussion, on abortion in the House of Commons and that each and every Member of Parliament would be given the opportunity to vote according to his or her own conscience. That is what the Prime Minister said in his letter. I challenge the Government to allow that to come about by allowing this Bill to go forward.

• (1740)

I can speak on the merits of this Bill today. I can give the reasons why I am opposed to abortion and why I believe changes are necessary. However, I am not going to convince anyone at this point to change their mind because everyone who is sitting here in the Chamber, including yourself, Mr. Speaker, know that this Bill is going nowhere. It is an effort on behalf of a private Member but because of the Government of the day, the Bill is going nowhere.

It looks good as far as the Government is concerned to allow private Members to bring forward legislation but when it comes time to refer this Bill to committee, I will bet my mortgage—

Mr. Speyer: You don't have one.

Mr. Nunziata: The Hon. Member says I don't have a mortgage but what is it to bet one's mortgage? A mortgage is a liability. The Government is a liability to the people of Canada. It has mortgaged the people of Canada.

The Government will not allow this Bill to go forward and I say once again that that is a disservice not only to the Hon. Member but to the people of Canada. It would also lead one to ask about the integrity and honesty of the Government. It is just another example of promises made and broken.

If Hon. Members here in the House today truly believe in enhancing the role of the back-bencher, if they really want to have a say in the policy formulation of the nation's business, then they should allow this Hon. Member the opportunity to have this issue discussed at committee. We are not asking anyone to pass a law here today to change the Criminal Code of Canada. That would be unreasonable without a national debate. What is necessary is the opportunity to at least discuss this matter. All the Hon. Member is asking for is just the opportunity to have this matter discussed. If, at the end of it all the law is not changed because the majority of Hon. Members of this House decide that the existing legislation is the best possible compromise, then so be it, democracy has worked its course, Parliament has spoken. Members of this House of Commons have indicated where they stand on that particular issue and one cannot complain. That is the beauty of democracy. However, to deny debate, to deny the opportunity of discussion, is to do a very serious disservice to our democratic process and to the whole idea of enhancing the role of the private Member.

I simply urge, in closing, that Conservative Government Members who intend to speak out this Bill refer the subject matter to a special committee in order to hear all Hon. Members of Parliament and all interested Canadians so at least democracy will be better served.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I cannot really say that I welcome the opportunity to enter into this debate, but it is an important subject and serves to be addressed. Abortion is obviously a matter which is very controversial and raises the feelings of people to very high levels. Therefore, it is important to approach this debate in a calm and reasonable fashion. The Private Members' Bill before us in effect seeks to eliminate abortions except where the life of the mother is directly threatened. We know from studies that countries which have laws outlawing abortions do not eliminate abortions. So, even if this Private Members' Bill were to go to committee and were to be passed, in the final analysis it would not achieve its stated objective, which is to do away with abortions.

Very restrictive abortion laws would simply return us to the days before the present law on abortion in which desperate women would be forced to induce the abortion themselves or to approach a back-room abortionist. Those would be very unsafe abortions and we could have women die in these desperate circumstances. The one virtue of the present situation is that if a woman is to have an abortion we can at least guarantee that the abortion is a safe procedure.

I am a Catholic and a father, so I do not approach the subject of abortions lightly. It is a very serious matter and I am sure that any woman who finds herself in a situation in which she has to make a decision about whether or not to have an abortion does not approach this decision lightly, either. It is important in those situations to take whatever advice one can from one's family spiritual leader but in the final analysis, what it needed is the kind of law which is enunciated in the policy of my Party, that is, simply, that the issue of abortion does not belong in the Criminal Code, it is a medical procedure, and a woman should have the right to choose to use that medical procedure in consultation with her doctor. That is the way the choice should be made rather than having the woman go before a bureaucratic committee or be under some restrictive laws which purport to eliminate abortions and which in fact simply drive them underground where the procedure would then become unsafe.

The medical profession has examined this question very carefully. The Canadian Medical Association has come to the conclusion that whether or not a woman has an abortion should be a matter for the woman in consultation with her doctor. The people who have to undertake the procedure carefully studied the matter and have come to that conclusion. Not only have medical doctors looked at the question of abortion but the United Church as well. It has studied the issue very carefully and in depth. It has come to a similar conclusion. It believes that it is a matter of conscience and that the individual person should make the decision, guided by her own moral values. The question of abortion has no easy solution. That is why we, in the final analysis, have come to the conclusion that the decision must be left to the woman and to her doctor. This does not mean that we promote or favour abortions because we certainly do not. If we really want to achieve what this Bill purports to seek, that is, to eliminate abortions or to reduce the number of abortions, then we have to look for effective ways of doing that. This Bill would not achieve that end. If we really want to reduce the number of abortions, then we must make sure that the means for preventing contraception are available. Rather than the Government cutting funding for planned parenthood, it should be making sure that people in general have access to the means to prevent a pregnancy. In that way they will not have to face the difficult decision of whether or not to have an abortion.

We also need good education in human relations. We have to educate our children about what love is and about what male and female relationships are all about so that they do not enter this domain in ignorance to then be taken advantage of. We need good education in order that young people can make wise decisions. We also need to augment our assistance to single parents. There are many young single parents in this country and we have to make sure they have adequate financial assistance. We have to make sure that the doors of opportunity in the form of employment are open to them. That is no easy task. We need to have extensive affirmative action programs which will ensure that someone who has the responsibility for a child can at the same time continue their education and acquire the skills which will allow them to earn a decent living.

• (1750)

There are a lot of things which could be done in an effort to reduce the number of abortions which take place. This, of course, does not make the question any easier to deal with but we do know from studies in those countries which combine access to abortion along with adequate preventive measures that the number of abortions are less than in those countries which seek to eliminate abortions by way of very harsh laws. While the question is difficult, it is important to keep a balanced perspective. We must understand that so long as abortions go on, they should be done in a safe environment and the appropriate person should make the decision about whether an abortion should take place or not. That, in the final analysis, is the woman. At the same time that Governments ensure equitable access to abortions they should also ensure that preventive measures are in place to reduce abortions.

[Translation]

Mr. Édouard Desrosiers (Hochelaga-Maisonneuve): Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. I just want to share some of my thoughts on this subject. I come from a family of fifteen children. If my parents had known the system we have today, you would not have had the great privilege of seeing me in the House this afternoon.

I must tell you I am against abortion. I am against these criminal acts, and I entirely disagree with the Member for the New Democratic Party who claimed this should not be considered a crime. I disagree. Anyone who kills a child is a criminal.

I am for the right to life. I think every member of this House should realize that destroying a child in its mother's womb is a criminal act.

Mr. Prud'homme: Are you against capital punishment too?

Mr. Desrosiers: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Prud'homme: Are you against capital punishment?

Mr. Desrosiers: We will get back to that later. We are now talking about Bill C-226.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to say that I support this Bill and that if I were in a position to have it adopted today, I would be even happier. Unfortunately, we all know the intricacies of parliamentary procedure and the rules we must follow. I wanted to say openly that I am against abortion.

[English]

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Mr. Speaker, it is a shame that the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) left the Chamber. He also left some unfortunate views on the table which need some kind of explanation. I do not know whether he did that deliberately or whether he really lacks an understanding of how this House of Commons works although that does seem a little incredible given his 16 months in this Chamber.

However, what we have before us today in the form of Bill C-226 is, of course, a Bill. If we were to cease talking about that Bill at this very moment, Mr. Speaker would put the question, the bells would ring, Members would come in and vote on the principle of the Bill. If the majority were in agreement with that principle, then the Bill would go to committee. Therefore, it is not a question of passing the subject matter of this Bill to committee. If the Hon. Member was familiar with this Chamber and the notion of parliamentary reform, he would know that standing committees of the House of Commons can inquire into a subject matter of their own choosing provided it falls under the mandate of the particular committee. If the Hon. Member serves on a committee which does not have the mandate to discuss this subject matter, he can go to his Whip and ask to be put on the committee which does have that mandate. It is that simple. The subject matter could be discussed in committee provided the majority of Members want to discuss it. However, what the Hon. Member was asking this House to do was to move to the voting stage where you either accept or reject a principle affecting human life. It affects the woman more than the man, the unborn child more than the living child. He asked us to pronounce on that principle after less than two hours of public debate.

That request comes from a Member who supported days of filibustering over a penny a day in connection with family allowances, as well as a whole host of other issues. These were not life-and-death issues, but he is now asking Members of this Chamber to pronounce on a life-and-death issue after less than two hours of debate. That should run against the grain of responsibility which all Members of this Chamber should have. I find the notion simply unacceptable.

The Hon. Member was also asking the Government to respect the notion of parliamentary review and reform and the independence of Members by telling us what to do. If there is an illogical fallacy anywhere in this Chamber it is to say to Members of this Chamber that we should all be in favour of reform and independence, and then ask the Government to tell us what to do. Let me assert in the clearest possible terms that no member of the Government has ever told me what I had to say or the way I had to behave concerning Private Members' Hour. If any Member of the Government tries to tell me at any point in the future about the way I have to behave or what I have to say, then they are asking for trouble. This is Private Members' Hour where we reach private decisions about what we would like to do.

I believe I have some 20 minutes to speak to this Bill and I have considerably more than 10 minutes left to address myself to its substance. It being six o'clock I wonder if I might be guaranteed the floor as the first speaker when this debate resumes because it deserves careful thought, consideration and debate and I would like to continue that debate when this Bill next comes before the House.

• (1800)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

MEDICAL CARE—FUNDING OF CANCER TREATMENT CENTRES. (B) MEDICAL RESEARCH

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, on January 13, I put questions to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) which were prompted by reports from Toronto, Winnipeg, and now from Ottawa, about the inadequacies of facilities for the treatment of people suffering from cancer in those and other cities in Canada. We have an aging population and, because cancer so often affects people as they get older, we have an ever-increasing number of people who suffer from cancer. They are, as reported in the stories of some days ago, and as I tried to indicate in my questions on January 13, finding it increasingly difficult to get the treatment which they need and deserve, and which would be available if the facilities were what they ought to be.

I raise the question for two reasons. First, I am very concerned about the needs of cancer patients which are not being met. I also raise it because the needs and shortages which are apparent are symbolic of a deeper crisis, that of the shortage of funds for some of the most important programs which provide needed services to the people of Canada.

What are the problems, Mr. Speaker? We have had the decision of the Government to reduce funding for the Established Programs Financing which are funded in part by the federal Government and in part by the provincial Governments. The programs fund our medicare system, our hospital system, and our post-secondary education system. Similarly, the Government has decided that by 1990 it will reduce by $6 billion the funding which would have gone to the provinces to help finance these programs.

I make it clear that I am not talking about cuts in programs. I am talking about reductions in funding by the federal Government which would have been in place had the Government not unilaterally changed the agreements which it had with the provinces. By the year 1990 the federal Government will reduce funding to these programs by $2 billion a year; by 1990 the reduction in funding for these programs will amount to $6 billion.

The federal Government obviously has plans to reduce funding for the research councils, in social sciences and humanities, natural sciences and engineering, and the medical sciences. We are seeing progressive cuts, not only for Established Programs Financing but in funding for the Social Science Humanities Research Council such that a $20 million addition is needed to get the operation back to the 1971 level.

There was a budget cut of $29 million in 1985-86 in the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council funding so that equipment purchases and support of joint university and company research are not possible. We see a chronic under-funding of the Medical Research Council's budget despite a promise in the last election that this would be rectified. It would require a $30 million funding increase to meet the minimum requests by the Medical Research Council revised five-year plan. There has been an over-all reduction in research spending in all departments and agencies of $140 million set out in the budgetary statement a year ago last November. These have continued to accelerate throughout the past year.

● (1805)

I remind Members of the House that when they were in the Opposition, and during the election campaign, the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) pointed out very clearly how poorly the research efforts in Canada compared with the research efforts in virtually all of the other western industrialized countries. The Conservative Party promised to increase the percentage of gross national product devoted to scientific research and development from the present 1.5 per cent to 2.5 per cent, an amount which is spent or exceeded by virtually all of the other countries. The Tories have broken their promises about what they would do if the people of Canada elected them to govern. The Tory Government is ignoring one of the most fundamental needs of any country in the world in this decade and the next, that is, to provide the education and scientific research efforts which are required if Canada is to play its role and meet the needs of the 1980s and 1990s.

I call on the Government to rescind the actions it has taken and to provide the funding required for these programs.

[Translation]

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to provide some clarification regarding what was incorrectly referred to by some members as cuts in transfer payments to the provinces for health care and post-secondary education.

My colleague, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), has stated on a number of occasions that federal transfer payments for health care and post-secondary education will continue to increase from year to year. In fact, the Minister said that federal transfer payments should increase at the same rate, at least, as expenditures for all other federal programs. It will guarantee that total outlays for transfer payments to other Government levels will not decrease.

One thing for sure is that our Government is firmly committed to health care. With respect to the general question of federal transfer payments for health care programs over the next five years, the total amount to be paid to the provinces under established programs financing will be $66 billion, or about $19 billion more than all such transfer payments to the provinces in the last five years. There is no way such an increase can be described as a cut-back.

Along with increases in other transfer payments, including equalization payments to have-not provinces, those higher health care transfer payments guarantee that all provinces will be in a position to maintain health care programs which compare favourably with those of other countries. That is what Canadians expect and appreciate. The health of Canadians will not be jeopardized by this Government.

Some Members of the Opposition would have us believe, among other things, that cash shortages in Ontario cancer treatment centres are the direct result of federal under-funding of health care programs under established programs financing. Let me set the record straight.

Pursuant to the provisions governing such financing, the provinces are free to allocate health program funds as they see fit. The Government believes it would be acting quite inappropriately and even unconstitutionally if it were to tell the provinces just how much they ought to set aside for health programs, thus unduly affecting their priorities.

I am pleased to see that the Premier of Ontario has acknowledged the serious problem which the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) has raised in the House, but nevertheless I believe it is up to the provinces to come to grips with it.

Finally, even if the federal transfer payments growth rate were to be reduced, the payments themselves will continue to increase, at least at the same rate as inflation. I hope the provinces will still be able to control their health care costs and yet meet the needs of their citizens. The Minister has assured his provincial colleagues that the federal Government, ever respectful of provincial jurisdictions, will continue to work with them to meet the challenges we must face with respect to health care system.

INSURANCE—MUNICIPALITIES' DIFFICULTIES IN OBTAINING LIABILITY COVERAGE

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, we have a gigantic problem with liability insurance. It is so great in fact that a Montreal economist, whom you know very well, Mr. Speaker, Dian Cohen, referred to it as a national disaster.

I suppose the problem started a few months ago and showed up in the trucking industry when it was having difficulty obtaining liability insurance. Since that time there have been increasing problems in this whole area. In fact, around the Christmas season we found an increasing number of activities which were having a great deal of difficulty getting any form of liability insurance; either they could not get it at all or they had to pay an exorbitant premium to get some form of liability insurance.

The most pressing area at the moment is the municipalities across the country. In my own municipality we are having enormous problems with the whole area of obtaining liability insurance. In fact, in Metropolitan Toronto, five of the seven separate municipalities—that is, the six area municipalities and the Regional Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto—are without any form of liability insurance at the present time and have been without liability insurance since January 1. The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto, the City of Toronto, the City of Etobicoke, the City of York and my own home municipality, the Borough of East York, are without any liability insurance and have been since January 1. Fortunately, the other two area municipalities in Metropolitan Toronto, North York and Scarborough, have liability insurance, but they have had to pay a very substantially increased premium over what they had been paying.

I hear reports that this is not just a local Metropolitan Toronto problem; in fact, it stretches right across the country. There were reports in local newspapers over the weekend that neither the City of Vancouver nor the City of Victoria have any liability insurance whatsoever. Apparently the City of Calgary has insurance, but the price of the premium is up substantially even though it has had to cut the amount of liability coverage. The City of Regina also has had some difficulty getting liability insurance. It has it but at a higher price. This is a problem right across Canada. I believe Montréal Nord has the same problem. This indicates that it is a national problem, not a local problem in any way, shape or form.

Also, it is quite clear that the difficulty faces not only municipalities. School boards as well have this problem. For instance, in Ontario they are required to have liability insurance or they are not supposed to open their doors. What is happening, because they cannot obtain any legitimate form of liability insurance, is that they are paying a premium to get $1 million worth of coverage but the coverage also provides a $1 million deductible. Many school boards in the Toronto area are paying something like $25,000 for an insurance policy with $1 million coverage but with a $1 million deductible. It means that they have absolutely no insurance. Day-care centres are also having this problem. In my own municipality the family day care service apparently as of February 28 is not going to have any liability insurance coverage at all, and the Cradleship Creche, another organization with substantial day care centres, also is not going to have any liability insurance at all and faces the prospect of closing down altogether. School bus companies have the same problem. So it is truly, in the words of Dian Cohen, a national disaster.

• (1815)

What is the problem? It has been variously described in a number of ways. First of all, it has been suggested that the problem lies with some of the very substantial court judgements that have been handed down recently. For instance, there is the case that has been pointed to time and time again in the City of Brampton outside Metropolitan Toronto of the rider of a trail bike who was injured and the courts awarded that person some $6.3 million, against the City of Brampton. That is the classic case held out as an example of why liability insurance companies are no longer prepared to provide this form of insurance. Is that the real answer?

I saw a report in the weekend paper of a United States court decision as well where a young boy attempting to break into a public building fell through a skylight in that building and was awarded damages by the court, even though he was in the act of breaking and entering. So that is the sort of thing that we are faced with in the courts.

The Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) indicated that part of the problem lies in the undercapitalization of these companies. Another Member suggested that maybe we need a new reinsurance scheme and that the federal Government should be participating in that reinsurance scheme. A number of suggestions that have been made. It has been suggested that we should be putting a limit on liability. In a case like the one in the States with the break and enter and the boy being awarded damages in that situation, it seems to me to make some sense that we should be considering some sort of limitation on liability. Another suggestion of the Minister was to improve the capitalization of the insurance companies, and that surely has to come and come quickly. A third suggestion was to sit down and talk with the provinces and try to come up with some answer. A fourth suggestion was that the federal Government get involved in a reinsurance company to help the whole reinsurance aspect.

There have been other suggestions; that perhaps the insurance companies are conspiring together to stop any liability insurance. Generally, you and I know that if there is a need the private sector will get in there and fill it. It may be costly, but they will get in there and fill it. Something, however, has to be done because this is a crisis. There have been four, five, or six different suggestions of what we should do. Something does have to be done and quickly.

In my view the federal Government should be taking a leadership role. We should be talking to the provinces and the insurance companies. We should be considering some of these other alternative proposals and getting back to the Canadian people and reporting to them as to what has happened. I hope tonight we will hear some news from the Parliamentary Secretary of a positive nature, that the Government is going to be taking some action, and going to be reporting to the people of Canada what that action is.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): The Government is aware and of course concerned about the problems currently being faced by municipalities, school boards, companies and certain other organizations, including sports clubs, in obtaining adequate liability coverage at a price they consider reasonable.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) have each met with a number of representatives of the organizations that have been experiencing these difficulties. The Government has also been seeking industry assistance in solving these problems.

While the Ministers have considerable sympathy for the organizations encountering difficulties, they also have some understanding for the reasons why the industry is cutting back on coverage and increasing premiums. The current situation is caused by poor operating results, fear on the part of the industry about the uncertainty of the magnitude of future liability awards, and by a significant tightening of reinsurance markets. Of course, all these factors are interrelated and the situation they cause is not confined to Canada. I am informed that the situation in the United States faced by organizations needing liability insurance coverage is even more severe.

The Hon. Member asks whether legislation will be introduced to limit or cap what appears to be the principal reason for the tightening of the liability insurance market and the large premium increases, namely, the claims the insurance companies have to pay. In answering the specific question asked by the Hon. Member, I must tell him that a reform of the law of tort falls within provincial jurisdiction and is thus outside the competence of the Parliament of Canada. Similarly, the relationships between policyholders and companies are subject to provincial jurisdiction and, therefore, the question of premium or rate control falls outside the jurisdiction of Parliament.

• (1820)

Because of the particularly serious situation in Ontario and because a number of the matters that have been suggested as possible solutions to the current difficulties fall under provincial jurisdiction, the Government of Ontario announced that it is establishing a task force. The mandate of the task force is to develop a report on solutions for cost and capacity problems in the property and casualty industry in Ontario. The terms of reference of this task force are far ranging; the task force is to report in three months. The Minister of State for Finance indicated that she is ready to assist the task force in any way she can, and said that she can be particularly helpful in the area of solvency standards, a subject over which the federal Government has some jurisdiction. A considerable amount of work has already been done in this area at the federal level.

The Government will also press ahead with legislation designed to strengthen solvency standards and regulatory requirements for insurance companies. The objective here is to promote financial stability which, in turn, should encourage new capital and better availability of reinsurance, something that would ease capacity problems.

AGRICULTURE (A) UNITED STATES AND EUROPEAN COMMUNITY WHEAT TRADING PRACTICES. (B) UNITED STATES FARM COMMODITY SUBSIDIES

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, on Friday last I asked two questions in the House on the position of the United States in the export grain market. I asked those questions in order to register the alarm and concern of producers who know that the United States can affect our markets more quickly and to a greater extent than any other country in the world. Unfortunately, the Minister replied by making excuses for the United States and registered no particular concern for the Canadian producers.

Last May the United States Government introduced the bonus incentive commodity export program to reduce its stock level of grains which existed as a result of a program of basic loans. A great deal of grain was accumulated under the auspices of the Government. The effect of this program was to reduce the price of U.S. wheat on the world market. In fact it resulted in allowing a buyer to receive a free bushel of grain for every two or three bushels he purchased. The subsidy was anywhere from $22 to $66 per tonne and this was paid when the wheat was sold, as in the particular cases which I have documented, to Egypt and Algeria. The EEC has a similar program.

The Minister gave no indication of any action the Government intends to take to counter this unfair practice.

Again, during the last month, the United States passed its new agricultural Bill. That Bill is expected to pour $52 billion in subsidies into the U.S. agricultural market in the next three years. Again, the Minister indicated that he had no action planned and used this time to again make excuses for the U.S. Government. He said: "I think we should at least applaud the U.S. direction rather than what the EEC is trying to do".

● (1825)

Those billions of dollars in subsidies will help to collapse the international commodity market. The prices of many agricultural commodities are already too low. Our greatest concern here is that the Government which is proposing to put this $52 billion into subsidies is the Government of the country we are now wooing for a free trade agreement.

The Minister would not comment upon the effect cheap grain would have on our market. I hope that he will investigate the effect a $1.30 bushel of grain available on the open market will have coming into Canada. I hope he will consider the effect a $1.92 bushel of corn will have coming into the feed markets of Canada. If we have an open border, and if those grains can come in at those prices, then we cannot compete with those grains.

I hope the Minister will look at this matter before he opens up a free access agreement with the United States. American officials admit that we will be competing with their Treasury and not with their agricultural producers. Those subsidies will keep those producers producing. What I am saying is that the Minister should quit excusing the United States and put in place a plan which will protect our producers from these unfair marketing practices.

Mr. Pierre Blais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I do not think the Hon. Member has pointed out everything which is happening with the U.S. market. While speaking about some Bills which are before the U.S. Government, he did not speak about the Bill which plans to reduce the U.S. deficit to zero by the year 1990. With respect to the matter he raises, I think it is important to have a good relationship with the United States.

The 1985 U.S. Farm Bill, recently signed into law by President Reagan, gives the Government great concern regarding the state of the international grain markets and future grain prices. The 1985 Farm Bill provisions present the potential for grain prices to decline in the short term. However, many other market factors will also have a major bearing on the level of future grain prices. Commodity prices in 1986 will be very sensitive to planted acreage changes and weather patterns in the United States. The U.S. farm program for wheat for 1986 requires particiating U.S. farmers to reduce wheat-base acreage by 25 per cent.

Also, the 1985 Farm Bill puts into place a conservation program which will remove a substantial amount of marginal farm land from production. Although there may be downward pressure on commodity prices, as a result of the U.S. program the potential this year is for U.S. grain supplies to come into a better balance with demand. As this adjustment occurs over time grain prices should strengthen.

[Translation]

In spite of the fact that the American Government is injecting $2 billion in its export sales program, we believe that it will continue to be careful and to limit as much as possible the application of this assistance program. We are going to monitor very closely this program and make our representations to the Government in due course.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Therefore, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.30 p.m.

The House met at 11 a.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Friday, January 17, consideration of the motion of Mr. Hnatyshyn that Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Resuming debate with 17 minutes remaining, the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia).

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I noticed with some degree of curiosity the fact that in this debate Tory Members of Parliament and the one who preceded me, the Hon. Member for Richelieu (Mr. Plamondon), carefully tiptoed around the bad news in Bill C-84. It is very curious to note that they hardly mentioned, in the course of the debate, the existence of a measure which was introduced whereby the personal deduction, the one that we are all allowed to deduct on our income tax form every year, will be seriously affected.

Some 10 years or 15 years ago, that amount was roughly $1,100 per person in Canada. It was the Liberal Government then which introduced the concept of indexation in order to protect the purchasing power of individual taxpayers in light of inflation, and therefore introduced the idea of indexing the personal deduction. Over the years that deduction has risen. Last year, when we filled in our income tax forms, it was $3,960. This year it is $4,140 per person. However, from now on, things will change; the personal deduction will not rise with inflation. Therefore, the capacity of Canadians to maintain or keep pace with inflation will be diminished. In this Bill—and this is what is so surprising about Tory MPs being so thoughtful in not mentioning it to their electors—only anything above 3 per cent will be permitted.

Let us suppose that 4.4 per cent is the inflation rate this year. In the calculation next year of personal income tax deductions, 3 per cent will be deducted and it will allow for an increase of 1.4 per cent in that deduction. Taxpayers will remain behind in their capacity to keep up with the erosion caused by inflation. If we take a period of five years and suppose that in the next five years we will have an accumulated 20 per cent inflation, because of the budget proposal allowing for only anything above 3 per cent, instead of keeping up to the tune of 20 per cent or so, taxpayers will only be allowed 5 per cent in their personal deductions. Every household will be affected by this measure. It means paying more income tax, and not in relation to one's ability to pay. It will be harder on those with lower and middle incomes.

The examples, as provided to me by the research bureau of our Party, speak for themselves. In the case of a single working mother with three children and an income of approximately $27,000 per year, that mother will have to pay 53 per cent more in income tax in 1990 than she paid in 1985. Let us look at it from another angle. A single pensioner with an income of $8,500 per year will lose $420 in purchasing power from 1986 to 1989. This loss will primarily be due to partial deindexation of personal income taxes. Are you surprised, Mr. Speaker, that the Tory MPs are not including this feature in their speeches?

Another aspect of the Bill about which the Tories have been strangely silent is the cancellation of the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. It is a unique measure for everyone who wants to save tax money and to put aside a little sum yearly until there is enough for the downpayment on a house. Many Canadians have made use of this measure, which was introduced in the seventies by the then Liberal Government. This savings plan is gone, compliments of the Tory Government. Here is another dismantled feature of which the Tories can be strangely proud in their blind determination to dig their own political grave. How pathetic it is, Mr. Speaker, to remove saving incentives from people planning to buy a house and who therefore stimulate, directly or indirectly, the housing industry and therefore help in the maintenance and creation of jobs. It takes a special Tory cunning to devise such backward tax legislation. No wonder the Tory Government is slipping so badly in the polls.

• (1110)

What is the cumulative effect of these and other budget measures? Well, I am told that by 1990 the direct tax on the individual taxpayers of Canada will have gone up by some $5 billion. Thus, Mr. Speaker, this Bill and the Budget takes money from the pockets of the Canadian consumer and imposes taxes on the same person when he or she is a buyer. More money will have to be paid by the average consumer on gasoline, certain health care products, soft drinks, candy, pet food, and woodburning stoves. Then, because the federal tax imposed on other goods has been increased, the Canadian consumer will have to pay more taxes on construction goods, cable and pay TV services, alcoholic beverages and tobacco, to mention a few.

We, the Official Opposition, pay a lot of attention to the deindexation of old age pension and on taxes aimed at the elderly and the disadvantaged. We take pride in having been instrumental in forcing the Government to lift taxes on health care products and remove the deindexation of old age pensions.

Let me come back to Bill C-84 again. There is another measure that is quite revealing, that is, the $500,000 bonanza on capital gains, which is, in plain terms, a tax break for those who make a gain in their capital assets for up to $500,000. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, how can a Government so devoted, at least in words through its speeches and election statements, to reducing the deficit, come up with such a measure and justify it? All of a sudden the need to reduce the deficit is forgotten and this measure is introduced, which means reduced revenue to the Government and therefore a reduced capability of reducing the deficit that the Government is so worried about. How very strange, Mr. Speaker.

I find it rather amusing to read in today's news a statement by the Canadian Council on Business and the BCNI, urging the Government to lead the charge in the fight against reducing the deficit. Did you, Mr. Speaker, hear anything from the BCNI complaining about the $500 capital gains tax? I did not. That has gone unnoticed by the very people who are asking the Government now to reduce its expenses and be tough with the deficit. In the opinion of this very same institution it is all right to pursue these tax breaks. It is perfectly legitimate, therefore, to favour capital gains anywhere in the world, be it on your yacht in the Bahamas, a condominium in Florida—

An Hon. Member: Or a farm in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Caccia: —or on foreign securities or properties abroad. It is so diffused that we would like, as the Hon. Member is interjecting, to see it focused, and not only on capital gains made in Canada, because he is quite right in what he has just said, but also focused in a manner that would permit the measure to be linked to economic growth and possibly to the creation of jobs.

Then we, on this side of the House, would look at that measure with great interest and we would not be critical of it because it would make sense. It would then be a form of tax incentive that would have an economic growth purpose, and it would then bring us closer at least to a desired goal that we all share, namely, the maintenance of existing jobs and the creation of new ones.

Bill C-84, therefore, has negative features in it that have not been highlighted enough. I do not blame Members opposite for not having written home about its negative features, because obviously they do not want to upset the population. I am saying to you that not until the effects of this measure will be felt, and only some of them will be felt in the future but some have already been felt, will Canadians appreciate it. They will not like the idea of being denied the features to which they have become accustomed over the years, namely, to see their personal deduction on the income tax form increase every year as inflation increases. That is a feature that has become part of our economic and social structure. It has been supported by Canadians at large and in a way it makes sense. That removal is a serious setback, and it falls more heavily, I submit, on people in the low and middle-incomes brackets than on those who have higher incomes and, therefore, can afford this type of initiative and not suffer under it as badly.

The impact of the measures, of course, has to be seen, not just by looking at them one by one, as I have tried to do, but by looking at the other Bills. When you put together the totality of the picture and you begin to see what is happening to gasoline prices, certain health care products, what is happening to the removal of the tax shelter for the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan, the deindexation of family allowances, you see a picture that is emerging here indicating that what is happening is a massive shift in the tax burden. It is most unfortunate that this Government chose to shift this burden on to the low and middle-income Canadians in an attempt, which is contradictory in itself, to reduce the deficit, on the one hand, and, on the other, to allow certain measures like the personal capital gains tax exemption. Those measures are in conflict with this highly proclaimed desire to reduce the deficit. The two simply do not jibe. They are in conflict with each other. While the Government introduces a tax break on the one hand for those who are already doing reasonably well in society, it is coming down heavily on those who may be on fixed incomes or struggling between the lower and middle-income ranges and who do not see the fairness and equity in this kind of taxation policy.

I realize the political necessity for Conservative back-benchers to tiptoe around these negative measures which are bad news back home. This morning I have been offered an opportunity to bring them to the attention of the House and I am glad to do so because I think that Canadians are not well served by taxation policies that put out contradicting signals and place an unfair burden evenly on everyone, regardless of capacity to pay.

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) and his assertion that Bill C-84 is being dealt with in a sneaky fashion by the Government. I would also like to comment on his second assertion that Government Members are somehow avoiding or tiptoeing through the matter. As one who has never been accused of tiptoeing through anything in my life, I would like to comment on one particular point the Hon. Member raised.

Regarding the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan, I found it paradoxical that this particular Hon. Member who served as a member of the previous Government would mention the removal of the RHOSP as a tax shelter and make some very misplaced comments regarding the benefit to the economy involved in freeing up RHOSP funding. It strikes me as being paradoxical that when Liberal Members have a good idea but do not have time to implement it and when a new Government logically follows up on that and initiates that good idea, it somehow becomes very wrong.

I am conscious of the rule of relevancy, but just by way of illustration, I just returned from the de Havilland hearings before a committee of which I am a member. The Hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner), the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice (Mr. Chrétien) and even the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), who is in the House today, spoke during the Liberal leadership campaign about not underwriting millions of dollars for de Havilland and about selling these things. The Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount said that if that is a neo-Conservative notion, anyone who says it is a neo-Conservative notion has lost his marbles. The Liberal Party had a clear idea then.

I would like to illustrate the distinction between the Liberal Party having a good idea for cutting de Havilland loose and the new Government carrying through with it and being vilified by this very Party. Let us deal with the RHOSP.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I appreciate that the rule of relevancy exists. I know the Hon. Member will now get to the point.

Mr. Gormley: I will indeed, Mr. Speaker. The RHOSP, a savings vehicle which was tax sheltered until now, was not originally designed in the 1970s to be something that would go on in perpetuity. It was a tax-saving measure which encouraged young people to save for a first home. However, this Government, quite rightly, found itself in the position of having a very positive opportunity to unleash no fewer than $2 billion into the Canadian economy through a consumer-driven recovery as part of the Government's plan.

I return to the very strong indications that the last Liberal Government was inclined to do away with the RHOSP but, because quite rightly the Canadian people threw the Government out on its ear, it did not have an opportunity to do so. I am very surprised that with two former Cabinet Ministers in the House this morning, Cabinet Ministers who were no doubt privy to the discussions regarding doing something with the RHOSP, Liberal Members would vilify the proposal that will partly lead to the consumer-driven recovery and will be to the benefit of the Canadian economy.

Not wanting to tiptoe, something which I never do, I wanted to bring this to your attention, Mr. Speaker. I know Hon. Members of the House are most interested in hearing of the benefits of this proposal and the rather inconsistent approach taken by the Opposition.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Since there was no question, perhaps the Hon. Member could take another question and then answer it.

Mr. Duguay: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make one or two comments with regard to the RHOSP program and the allegation of the Hon. Member for Davenport that the former Liberal Government had brought this measure into effect in order to stimulate the housing industry. In May of last year, being very interested in this matter, I asked officials of Canada Mortgage and Housing who were appearing before committee their view of the RHOSP program and in particular I asked about the original objectives of the program, the reason for its implementation and the history of the program including its effect on housing starts as compared with its tax shelter implications. The answer given by officials of CMHC who were present at the time the former Government brought in the RHOSP was rather revealing.

As I understood it, the answer indicated that by 1974, there was a lot of pressure on the housing market. One of the purposes of the RHOSP was to try, in the short run, to cool off the demand for housing by encouraging people to save and purchase a house in the future. With regard to the effect of the program, CMHC officials indicated that over a 10-year period, RHOSP had not had a significant impact on the level of housing starts and that the desire for home ownership remained very, very strong. It was thought that that desire would swamp the impact of setting funds aside through the RHOSP. Over a 10-year period, RHOSP would not have had a large impact on housing starts.

Finally, with respect to reasons for the termination of the program, by and large it did appear that RHSOP was more of a tax shelter or a way of sheltering income than a stimulus to housing. A number of industry associations have commented that RHSOP in its current format was not an effective instrument.

When the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) tells Hon. Members on this side of the House that we are not putting out all of the facts about some of the changes that will occur because of Bill C-84, he should recognize fully that his Government brought in this plan for purposes that he now ignores. He is making believe that we are changing it for other purposes that never existed. I think the Hon. Member owes his constituents and mine the integrity of at least referring to the real reasons his Government brought this measure into force.

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, it was very amusing to hear those two interventions. Evidently, the tongue has to be active when the teeth are hurting. Those two Hon. Members feel very much at ease when they engage in this strange exercise of shadow-boxing with the past. They were not here when the measure was introduced. They were simply quoting some officials who said that the RHSOP was perhaps not greatly stimulating the housing industry. That is debatable. The fact is that it was a measure that was picked up gladly by young families wanting to buy homes. It did have some effect on the housing industry. The question of whether the effect was great or small can be debated at the right time and in the right place.

In my experience, in Toronto where there are a great many people engaged in construction and the housing industry, the RHOSP was considered to be a good measure by the entrepreneurs, both small and large. As well, it was considered to be a good measure by the families who made use of it. I fail to see these two interventions as being relevant to the substance of the issue that is before us. The Hon. Members are simply trying to engage in a nice game of smoke and mirrors. They are trying somehow to create the impression so as to make people believe that this is a good measure. The plain fact of the matter is that this is a bad measure. It will be one for which the Tory back-benchers will be asked to account when their turn comes in the next election.

• (1130)

Mr. McDermid: Could I ask one short question, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) rose in his seat prior to the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid).

Mr. Stackhouse: I was going to make a comment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There is time for a short question by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Hon. Member for a clarification, if I might. From what he said I understand that the Liberal Party would support the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption if it were to pertain entirely to gains within the borders of Canada. Is that what the Hon. Member said this morning?

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to elucidate the point for the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) who is famous for catching things halfway but not fully.

Mr. McDermid: You are famous for presenting them that way.

Mr. Caccia: What I said is that if the measure were of such a nature as to focus on creating economic growth and jobs in Canada, then we would look at the matter probably in a supportive manner. I cannot speak for my Party's critic, but having read his speeches I believe there are grounds to believe that the matter would be looked at in a positive light.

The fact is that this measure is diffused to any form of capital gains anywhere in the world, which does not generate economic benefits to the Canadian economy. Therefore, we are not moving in the right direction. I went on to say that this measure flies in the face of the Government's declared determination to reduce the deficit. One does not reduce the deficit by providing a $500,000 capital gains tax exemption in 1985, or any other year for that matter.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to advise Hon. Member that the time allotted for questions and comments has now expired. The Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Parry) on debate.

Mr. Caccia: Hear, hear!

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the applause of the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), even though it might have been intended for one of his colleagues.

Mr. Penner: I will give you some applause, too. We expect a good speech now.

Mr. Parry: Mr. Speaker, in examining Bill C-84, which is before us today for its last day of debate at third reading stage, I would like to take a few moments to go back and recount a little of the process which has brought us to where we are today. I think that by any objective analysis or measure it is a process which is seriously flawed, a process that is deserving of much more attention by this House and by this Government than it has apparently been given.

Of course, traditionally, the Bill is a large one, and this year's Bill is no exception. After all, the Bill consists of amendments with respect to the Income Tax Act and related statutes, the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, the Financial Administration Act, and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act. The list of titles should give Hon. Members one initial clue, at least, as to the complexity of the task which is being undertaken. It should also give us some clue to enable us to ask questions as to why the process should be so complicated and so lengthy.

The Bill includes 235 pages of revisions to the Income Tax Act and related statutes. I believe that the time which should have been given to the examination of a Bill of this size in committee was completely out of proportion with the very niggardly amount of time which was eventually allowed to the committee. The belief that Members of Parliament can knowledgeably and with a full mastery and understanding of the topic and the facts review and, if necessary, revise a measure of length and complexity in one week of committee hearings flies in the face not only of common sense but of parliamentary tradition and everything for which that tradition stands.

There were witnesses who would have been happy to appear before the committee and who were not asked to appear even though they offered to do so. There were witnesses who, frankly, were just not allocated enough time to expound on their points of view. We had a process which saw minimal participation from members of the Government. With the 210 Members which is at its disposal many of the committee hearings proceeded with only one or two government Members, more than the combined members of the Opposition. The Canadian Bankers' Association asked to appear before these hearings but was not invited. On a complex Bill such as this we were given only one week of hearings. The committee meetings were hurried, with little advance notice of the meetings being given.

I would like to contrast that very compacted, intense and demanding schedule with the schedule the Government followed between the presentation of its Economic Statement in May and the tabling of this Bill in November. After all, that represents a period of approximately six months. At committee we were assured by the Assistant Deputy Minister that his staff were fully engaged all of that time and that they were working lengthy hours. He told us that there was extended cross-checking, drafting and redrafting taking place. Given the objectives laid out in the Economic Statement, he assured us that his people could not possibly have produced the legislation, mountainous as it was, in a lesser period of time than the six months which they had. I do not think that I should be disputing these assertions of the Assistant Deputy Minister because I have some understanding of the complexity of the legislation which they were being asked to review and revise. Rather, I think we should look at the endemic afflictions in the Income Tax Act and in the process of Government, and, in particular, the way that this Government handles that legislation. We should ask why those things were allowed to exist, have been allowed to continue to exist, and why the six months was necessary to prepare legislation which Parliament was asked, in committee, to review in the period of a single week.

I identified two causes for this breakdown in the legislative process. The first cause is, of course, the complexity of the existing Income Tax Act. I would like to quote from a letter which was sent to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) by The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants on March 29, 1985. On the front page of the letter, in bold type, doubled-sized, it states: "The Problem: The Tax System is too Complex". That is a pretty forthright and plain statement which should be completely comprehensible to members of the Government. The letter is from an organization which certainly could not be accused of being hostile either to the Government's philosophical viewpoint or, inherently, to its legislative program.

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants goes on to state in the letter:

—simplicity must be a key component of an effective self-assessing system . . . The dramatic growth of commercial tax preparation services bears testimony to the fact that more and more taxpayers are finding individual tax returns too complex to complete themselves.

As a prime cause of the delay we have the length of time taken in the drafting and the complexity of the income tax system. The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants goes on to list some 50 recommendations aimed at simplifying the income tax system in order to make it more comprehensible to the average Canadian and easier to administer, thus, I would assume, making it more efficient in the collection of taxes. The Institute puts its ideas under the following headings:

—Simplifying Compliance for the Ordinary Taxpayer
—Directions for Change in the Taxation of Ordinary Taxpayers
—Complementary Directions for Change in Corporate Taxation
—Changes in the Style in Which Tax Legislation is Drafted.

● (1140)

Heaven knows, it shows an artistic tolerance to refer to the drafting of the Income Tax Act as having style.

In a 20-minute speech, it is impossible to cover these individual proposals for simplification, as it is equally impossible to cover my own ideas or those advanced by professionals and experts in this field. Let us say, Mr. Speaker, that having gone into this process fully aware of complexity of the Income Tax Act, knowing the difficulty and the length of time taken to draft revisions in a consistent and arcane but understandable form, the Government took it upon itself to double its task and to compound the initial error by the second major factor in the length of time taken. I refer to the institution of the $500,000 capital gains exemption.

This is an exemption on which the Government has already been, and very deservedly so, rebuffed by professionals. When I spoke to this Bill at second reading I quoted the comments of Canadian tax professionals. The comments were almost unanimous and were widely supported in the industry. It was pointed out that the $500,000 exemption was alone responsible for well over half the drafting work required to bring this Bill to the House. Therefore, by a simple division we can calculate that if the Government had not persisted in this flawed initiative, if the Government had not pressed on, regardless, with its idea of giving a major break to the wealthy, and if the Government had not decided that its top priority in the revision of the Income Tax Act was the satisfaction of those interests whose support it saw as essential, it could essentially have given Parliament another three months and a far more workable, manageable and practical schedule for the revision of the Income Tax Act and a thorough review of those proposals at committee.

It is not my purpose today to go into a detailed examination or analysis of the capital gains tax regime as it previously existed and as it will exist now. I will, however, pose some fundamental questions. I will make some observations that I believe are highly pertinent to the whole question of capital gains taxation or, as we are going to have it, the tax free status of those capital gains. The oft canted phrase that capital gains taxation inhibits job creation is essentially an unproven hypothesis.

The level of capital gains taxation was in itself reduced compared with the level of taxation of other forms of income. The whole belief that in some way the presence of capital gains tax in Canada was leading peole not to invest in small business because in some way they greatly feared they might make a profit at it and be able to sell it at a gain, defies common sense, and no analysis has been produced to prove or even to strongly support such a hypothesis.

The capital gains taxation as it was, and the tax free status that it will enjoy, flies in the face of the recommendation by, I believe, the Benson Committee that "a buck is a buck is a buck" and that all forms of income should be subject to taxation on a more or less equal basis.

It is a fact taken from the tax statistics published by the Government that 63 per cent, nearly two thirds, of all capital gains go to those people who have incomes of $50,000 and over. They make up only 4 per cent of the population. We do not see what is accomplished by this tax free status the Government proposes. We do believe that there is certainly room for favourable treatment of capital gains aimed at keeping business capital in operation, and aimed at conserving, shall we say, a pool of business capital for the support of existing and future operations. But the idea of this blanket exemption, I would emphasize, applies to a capital gain whether made inside the country or outside. We do not see how this capital gain tax exemption is accomplishing the purpose which the Government states it has. What we do see is that the exemption is rewarding a group which the Government knows is its supporter.

May I return for a moment, since I notice the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) is in the House, to the process of the six month hiatus and then the introduction of Bill C-84.

I would like to quote the Hon. Member's words to him. In doing so I would like to say that I naturally make allowance for optimism—that, after all, is a failing we should encourage in all of us—and naturally I make allowance for a certan degree of hyperbole generated by his loyalty to his Party. He said:

> I am sure that with the Hon. Member's seniority in the House—

He is referring to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis). Let me continue:

> —he is aware that when this legislation passes this stage in the House of Commons it will go to committee for a very thorough study in which I hope the Members of his Party will participate.—The debate in which we are now engaged is certainly not the last opportunity for critical assessment of this legislation, as the Member knows.

It would have been nice if the Hon. Member for Scarborough West had been at committee to see the supposedly "thorough study" which he predicted when he was speaking in the House. I can assure him that that was really not the way it went.

Under this capital gains tax exemption, the investor can benefit from untaxed gains on a wide range of capital property. It could be a condominium in Florida, which I gave as an instance in my first speech on this Bill, or it could be foreign securities, really any assets on a world-wide basis. We do not see the benefit that this will bring to the small business sector and to job creation in the business sector in Canada.

There are some good points to this Bill. I will make brief mention of them. One is the proposal to allow a tax credit of $700 to an individual investing in a labour-sponsored venture capital organization. That, with the relatively simple and short drafting process it entailed, is going to do a great deal more for investment in small and medium sized businesses than the plethora of clauses which were needed to institute the capital gains tax exemption.

My Party is in support of the surtax on upper incomes. What I would say is that it appears that all the things we see in this Budget as being in any way in support of fairness or equity are temporary, and all the things that hit ordinary middle and lower income Canadians seem to be permanent. That is a telling criticism to which the Government should pay some attention.

It amuses me to hear my colleagues in the Liberal Party, those who were responsible for the abolition of marginal tax rates above the present level, talk about tax fairness. One of the things we in the New Democratic Party will be doing in the coming weeks is travelling to centres in Canada with Tax Probe '86, a commission which will be chaired by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap.

• (1150)

I would like Hon. Members of the Liberal Party to reflect on the difference between the taxes paid by upper-income earners under the present regime, which of course the Government has not changed, compared with those payable under the tax regime abolished in 1981.

One of the things we are going to be doing in Tax Probe 1986 is of course looking for examples of unfairness, inconsistency, incoherence and uneven application in the tax system. Since we have the medium of television available, I would like to say to all those who may be watching that we welcome their participation in bringing forward any such instances they can find.

Turning again to Bill C-84, it is best summed up as the legislative concretion of an insider's Budget. It was a Budget designed to reward the few without overly aggravating the many. We found out—and I say more power to Canadians because of it—that the many were indeed prepared to be aggravated when they saw manifestly inequitable measures being introduced. This Bill is the homage that the Progressive Conservative Government is paying to its supporters, and it appears that that homage shows a certain disdain for the ordinary taxpayers of Canada.

The National Council on Welfare, commenting on the changes to child benefits, said that after the various changes are phased in, raising the child tax credit, lowering the turnover point for the child tax credit, reducing the children's exemption, and partially deindexing all family benefits, even the poorest parents—and I underline those words—will receive less than they would from the existing child benefit scheme. Contrast that with the Government's $500,000 capital gains tax exemption. That is not the sort of sum the average low-income person is able to earn in a working lifetime. That is a sum completely beyond the bounds of the imagination of the poorest 20 per cent of Canadians. The fact that we have that kind of an exemption in a Budget which is taking from the parents of poor children will stand as a telling indictment of this Government and its legislative priorities.

To cover a couple of more points before I reach the end of my time I would like to refer to the deindexation of personal income tax brackets. Although we have to go back a long way before we find something to give the Liberal Government credit for, we can give it credit for having the sense to introduce indexation to ensure that the Government did not profit from inflation. That was a laudable objective. Now we see the Progressive Conservative Government removing the first 3 per cent of that indexation, making sure that in future the Government will get its pound of flesh from the operation of inflation on our monetary system.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret but the Hon. Member's time has expired. Questions or comments?

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to some of the comments of the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Parry). He made reference to some of the actions of the previous Government. I do not intend to be an apologist for actions of past Liberal Governments—

Mr. Jepson: There is not enough time.

Mr. Johnston: —because I myself have criticized our tax system in the past. There is room for substantial reform and I hope that the NDP travelling road show will confirm some of the points I have already made concerning the tax system. When we are in Government and bring forward tax reform measures I hope the NDP Members will see fit to support them with the enthusiasm they have manifested here this morning.

Mr. Jepson: They will all be retired by then.

Mr. Johnston: Indeed, many of the Tory Members will be retired by then.

Mr. Jepson: Don't count on it.

Mr. Johnston: The Hon. Member made reference to marginal tax rates. In 1981, the Liberal Government reduced the top marginal rate to 50 per cent, for reasons which were fully debated and explained at that time. The Hon. NDP Member suggested in his remarks that marginal rates should be much higher. Having made that statement, I think it behooves him to tell us what he views as being the marginal rates in excess of 50 per cent that the NDP might like to see applied. Would it go to 60 per cent, 70 per cent, 80 per cent, 90 per cent, or perhaps 100 per cent at some point? Would he be able to give us some response to that?

Mr. Boudria: How much do you want to increase taxes?

Mr. Parry: Mr. Speaker, I would like to assure the Hon. Member that rather than evade the substance of that sort of question I would like to meet it head-on.

I do believe that changes to the marginal rates would have to be carried out in consultation with the provinces. I make no judgment as to the process when marginal rates were reduced. I point out to the Hon. Member that the present top federal tax rate of 34 per cent does not take effect until the average person in that bracket reaches an income in the region of $70,000 to $75,000 per year. If there were a change to the marginal tax rates to bring them back to where they stood previous to 1981, they would likely not impact on any taxpayer whose gross income was under $100,000. So we are talking about a decidedly high income segment of the population.

I would also like to say that this Party would certainly not envisage a tax regime in which, for example, marginal rates reached those that, for example, prevailed in Britain after the war, something which I am familiar with and which I can speak to. I personally do not believe that any marginal tax rate which resulted in an effective tax rate above 65 per cent would be supported by a future NDP Government. I do not think it would be supported by the provincial Governments, some of which of course might at that point not be NDP Governments.

However, to reduce the top marginal tax rate to between 51 per cent and 55 per cent, as it is today, is to allow those people who have incomes over $100,000 to escape paying their fair share of taxes which they are perfectly well able to do.

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I just want to say a few words in response to the Hon. Member's reference to a statement I made in a previous debate on this Bill. I thank him for the quotation. Every knock is a boost and I always appreciate free publicity from the NDP. I want to respond directly to the quotation because it refers to the limited time which there was for the Finance Committee to examine the particulars of the legislation relating to this capital gains tax exemption. I joined him in regretting the limited time, as I am sure every member of that committee did. I was there the night that it was introduced, although he seems to have forgotten that.

• (1200)

However, the reason was obvious to us all, namely, the tardiness of the officials of the Finance Department in bringing the recommended legislation before us. Whatever the justification for the long delay, that was the reality. The committee had no option but to give priority to the rights of the taxpayers who had based their investment policies on the budget proposals, which they had every reason to believe would be adopted, and to act accordingly.

The real concern which the House should have with respect to the capital gains tax exemption is whether or not it has benefited the people of Canada. The record shows that this budget proposal, and many other proposals in the 1985 Budget and other economic legislation and programs of the Government have combined to fulfil the election commitment of the Government to renew the economy. Every economic indicator for months and months has supported the fulfillment of that renewal. The number of jobs which have been created and the number of people who have found renewed hope for themselves by getting back to work indicates the effectiveness of the economic policies of the Government, of which the capital gains tax exemption is a part.

The real purpose of that exemption was not to give a benefit to particular investors, but to stimulate the economy and increase the number of jobs that private investment would produce. The result is there. It is true that you cannot identify a particular job and say that the capital gains tax exemption produced it, any more than you could deny it. However, taking the picture as a whole, we see encouragement to the private sector and investment, and the obvious positive results.

In conclusion, the reference to this budget proposal being in favour of supporters of the Progressive Conservative Party has a strong ring of truth to it. The fact is that we are the Government because of the very large number of supporters that we have. This Budget has been in their favour and, if the New Democratic Party had as many ordinary Canadians supporting it as we do, it would be here and we would be where it is.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will recognize the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Parry) for a very short rebuttal.

Mr. Parry: Mr. Speaker, we all, of course, anticipate that day.

Mr. Stackhouse: Hope springs eternal.

Mr. Parry: I thank the Hon. Member for his intervention. He is, of course, a living demonstration that when one gets to around the age of 60 one does not necessarily have to be appointed to the Senate or as a high court judge in order to get a job.

I thank the Member for the implied criticism of the Government. If the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) had not stepped out, I am sure the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) would have gotten one of the famous glares that can be received in this House.

Very briefly, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that he cannot attribute job creation to the presence of the capital gains tax exemption. That is entirely too speculative or hypothetical for even such an optimist as himself to sustain.

[Translation]

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity today to discuss the legislation proposed in the Bill to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act.

Mr. Speaker, three important events have taken place since 1917 with regard to our tax system. In 1917, the Income Tax Act was adopted and tax measures introduced. In 1971, the capital gains tax became a reality, and today, in 1986, we are about to amend the capital gains tax legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill is further to the Notices of Ways and Means tabled on May 23, 1985 and November 21, 1984. The proposed legislation is part of a comprehensive strategy aimed at providing for durable economic growth, creating jobs, creating a climate of confidence, and providing a durable and consistent framework for economic recovery. The strategy is already working, and as a result, since September 1984, 420,000 Canadians were able to obtain employment. This means 420,000 new jobs since September 1984.

Through this legislation we are proposing to introduce a $500,000 capital gains tax exemption. Our purpose is to make this country more investment-oriented.

Mr. Speaker, I shall, if I may, go back to what was said in Hansard of June 18, 1971, by the Hon. E. J. Benson, Minister of Finance, who moved, and I quote:

> That this House approve in general the budgetary policy of the Government.

Some Hon. Members said "hear, hear!"

And I wonder what they were cheering about. Those were Liberal Members, and they were cheering the inflation that was to result from one of the measures that would prove most destructive to economic renewal and economic development: the taxation of capital gains. They were cheering a measure that slowly but surely would prove to be destructive and devastating, as insidious as getting small but regular doses of arsenic in your food. They cheered, and look what happened. If we set the value of the dollar in 1971 at 100, today, fifteen years later, as a result of this measure it now takes $306 to buy the same amount of consumer goods you could buy for $100 in 1971. Mr. Speaker, I call this a Liberal hold-up when Canadian men and women who thought they had managed to accumulate a certain capital, have seen their dollar become a thirty-five-cent dollar in fifteen years. That is what the Liberals were cheering about!

And all this cheering led to an increase in interest rates, up to as much as twenty-three per cent in 1981. So much for their cheering! And it all paved the way for one of the worst recessions in forty years. That was something to cheer about. As a result, many of our businesses have disappeared. Our developers no longer had any incentive. And what happened then? The State was forced to put Canadians on the dole because there were no developers left and nobody felt like opening a business. Anxious to hang on to office for years and years, the Liberals began to redistribute the money borrowed by the State, not its wealth nor its taxes. These days 40 cents of every tax dollar collected are set aside to pay the debt run up by the Liberals.

Taxing capital gains had to be the worst decision ever made since Confederation. Mr. Benson stated that it has been the most significant tax reform since 1977. It was the most significant indeed, in the sense that it also proved to be the most devastating. He was not aware of its full impact, as I have just described it.

To quote him, this measure was intended "to broaden the income tax base through the capital gains tax". The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) was not there at the time, but in a moment I will name some of the Liberal Members who were there.

I am referring to the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) who was in the House a moment ago and who made statements to which I want to respond. The Hon. Member for Davenport had to leave. He should have waited to hear me out, he said something about capital gains and, in 1971, he was one of the Members who voted in the House—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) on a point of order.

• (1210)

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw your attention to something you are certainly aware of, and I am sure you will remind the Hon. Member that referring to the absence of a Member is contrary to the Standing Orders of the House.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I appreciate what the Hon. Member is saying. I do not believe that I heard that remark but I am sure the Hon. Member realizes that we should not mention the absence of any Member from the Chamber. The Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) has the floor.

[Translation]

Mr. Fontaine: Well, Mr. Speaker, I might point out that the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) is in the House, yet he does not seem to have anything to say about Bill C-84. The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior was here to vote in 1971, and now he should apologize for having driven Canada into such a precarious economic situation. The Hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner) was here in 1971, as was the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice (Mr. Chrétien). Also present then were the Hon. Members for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan), Hull-Aylmer (Mr. Isabelle), Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault), Windsor West (Mr. Gray), Algoma (Mr. Foster), and Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East (Mr. Allmand). There were 13 Liberal Members who in 1971 supported the capital gains tax and they are still here now. It is unfortunate that they are still here. All I can wish for them is that after the next election we no longer see them here.

We heard earlier the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Parry) dealing with capital gains. This Member of the socialist party from Western Canada was discussing capital gains with a flagrant misunderstanding of what it all means.

Mr. Speaker, he suggested that failing to tax capital gains would reduce Government revenues. Well, that is because he never understood anything about free enterprise, and Canadians are well aware that his Party never did understand and that is why there were never more than 22 per cent of the population who ever had any degree of confidence in this Western Canadian socialist party.

We also heard earlier the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), a former minister in the previous Government, suggesting that the measure would deprive this Government of tax revenues. Mr. Speaker, is this sheer unthoughtfulness, or is it a blunder on his part? He should realize that the immediate aim of exempting the first $500,000 from capital gains is simply to give business an incentive, a reason to invest more, and this would increase tax revenues.

Mr. Speaker, when I hear the Hon. Member for Davenport suggest that this measure will deprive us of considerable tax revenues, frankly, I wonder what he understands about economic principles. It is because of that kind of people who do not understand anything about economic principles that $200 billion were sunk into our deficit. Because of people who failed to understand anything about the economy and who borrowed money for redistribution our country has reached a level where we can no longer borrow. It was at that point that we came to power and we are going to pull this country out of the chaos in which you put it.

Mr. Speaker, what did the 1971 decision prevent? It took incentives away from the free economy, from people who wanted to build up a new heritage. People need to build up a heritage during their lifetime but this is no longer possible within the taxation structure that was set up by the Liberals. So, what did people do? Instead of investing, those who had a bit of money loaned it. They loaned it to businesses, to the Government, and this is why we accumulated a deficit and stopped creating jobs, because nobody was investing any more.

Mr. Speaker, who borrowed the money available because of the depressed situation which had been created for our promotors and business people? It was the Liberals, Mr. Speaker. For whom did they borrow? They borrowed for the Liberals. How much did they borrow, Mr. Speaker? They borrowed $200 billion.

Mr. Speaker, they borrowed so that they would be able to appoint Mr. Ivan Head, a former staff member of ex-Prime Minister Trudeau, to a position at the International Development Research Centre. They borrowed to appoint Mr. Roméo LeBlanc to a Government position. They borrowed to appoint Perry Anglin, from the Office of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, Deputy Minister of Revenue Canada.

They borrowed to appoint many of their friends, for instance Mr. Jean Fournier, from the Office of Mr. Jean Chrétien, who was given the position of Deputy Minister of Finance. They borrowed to appoint another one of their friends from another Minister's office, Mr. William MacEachern, to the Aviation Safety Board. They borrowed to appoint another one of their friends, Mr. Bob Rabinovitch, to another important Government position. It was with these borrowings that they appointed their friends. And there are still many people who protect them at the upper echelons of the Government.

Mr. Speaker, we have been through a long and progressive recession since 1971. We have witnessed continuing inflation as $1 now equals 35 cents. It now takes $3.08 to purchase what you could buy for $1 in 1971. The Liberals increased the interest rates. Canada went from being an exporter of manufactured goods to being an exporter of raw materials. The Liberals so discouraged investment and initiative that foreign interests were the ones who decided to invest in this country, and the Liberals then created FIRA to stop them. What inconsistency on the part of the previous Government! They tried to screen foreign investments with FIRA. Mr. Speaker, the Liberals sold Canada on credit.

Mr. Boudria: As for you, you gave the country away.

Mr. Fontaine: Fifteen years have gone by since 1971. We must now applaud the courage of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and of the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) for having been willing to implement the capital gains exemption. It is one of the most, if not the most, effective initiative for economic recovery. Contrary to what some would say, this initiative is not designed for the wealthy and the multinationals. For them, $500,000 is not a significant amount. This is another initiative for ordinary taxpayers, for our business people. Nowadays those who purchase shares from brokers and who are interested in investing in Canadian companies do so because they want to make a profit. Formerly, when they made for instance a $1,000 profit on their investments, they had to pay income tax on 50 per cent of this amount, namely $500, at a tax rate of maybe 40 per cent. Which means that they had to pay $200 in income tax on that $1,000. On the one hand, they had less money to reinvest and, on the other hand, they lacked incentive.

Mr. Speaker, people involved in small businesses will also benefit from this because they will be able to find in their own environment, in the area where they do business, people eager to invest in their businesses, for they will know that they will be entitled to tax-free profits. That is how our 750,000 small and medium-sized businesses will grow. There will be more investors and these investors will be able to rely on their neighbours, the working people all over the country. Those who do not invest their money will lend it. They used to lend it and to purchase foreign goods with their income, so that we had developed as a nation of consumers instead of a nation of builders.

This legislation will also liberate small businessmen who had transmission problems. What was the use for our small businessman of starting businesses when they knew quite well that in the end they would have to reassess the value of their businesses and pay income tax? Then they lacked incentive; now, with this $500,000 exemption from capital gains tax, we are giving them back incentive.

This way, Mr. Speaker, the firms will remain the property of our businessmen, will make it possible for our 750,000 administrators, developers, owners of small- and medium-sized businesses to hope again to show a profit, and that is the only way in the western world to encourage economic development. The fact of the matter is that since our Party came to power on Parliament Hill, we have managed to create 415,000 new jobs, including 130,000 in the Province of Quebec.

● (1220)

Since we came to power, our country has had the best record for job creation among the summit countries. We have managed to reduce interest rates by three per cent. The unemployment rate has gone down, and this year, the rate of inflation his its lowest point since 1971. This is important to people who have savings, because savings are very sensitive to inflation. Now, we are going to make sure their money maintains its value.

Our plans and programs have the support of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. We enjoy the support of local Chambers of Commerce and the Canadian Federation of Independent Businesses and business associations. It must be said that the Liberal Party exhausted this country's resources. It made us borrowers and consumers of credit. Mr. Speaker, the Liberal Party, and this is a serious thing, looked on business as the exploiting class. It discouraged business through the tax system. It destroyed the ambition of our business people. That is what this party did in 1971 and 1984. The Liberal Party forgot that the role of the state is essentially to distribute part of the wealth, wealth which must first be earned. It decided to borrow that wealth, and today we have to do something about this situation. We are going to reduce borrowing and take steps to develop our economy.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding I might say that we are among the richest countries in the world. We have coal and oil on three oceans. We have our fresh water resources, hydro-electric power, wheat and lumber. Our population consists of one-third Francophones, one-third Anglophones and one-third—the ideal mix to exploit these natural resources, but first, Canadians must be given a framework within which they can become free and develop their resources, a framework that the Liberals dismantled. This must be said. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) is giving Canadians, our human resources, a chance to exploit these resources. Let us do so, and meanwhile, my last message to the Liberals is: Keep quite and repent your sins! I would even say: Admire what we are doing!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria).

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, the arrogance of the Conservative Government is obvious when a Conservative Member suggests to the House that Opposition Members should not be allowed to exercise their right to speak. They are expected to remain silent, lost in admiration before a Government that is sinking fast in the polls. This Conservative attitude is becoming increasingly flagrant.

[English]

I suggest that the Hon. Member should consider seriously changing his speech-writer; I think he definitely needs a new one.

[Translation]

I have a question for him, he mentioned the value of the dollar. I noticed he said he wants the dollar to maintain its value. Can the Hon. Member tell us how come during the last election campaign the Conservatives handed out what they called a "One Liberal dwindled dollar", a cardboard dollar with a quarter of it missing, representing 75 cents. How do they explain that since then the dollar has dropped below 75 cents, another piece of it is gone and it is worth only 71 cents under this Conservative administration? In his reply, would he also indicate, concerning his reference to savings—

[English]

Mr. Duguay: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member is fond of calling others to order for naming Members in the House. I am sure he knows full well that props are not allowed in the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member is right, but I did not see the prop.

Mr. McDermid: He needs a prop to prop him up.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will take that under advisement. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) has the floor.

[Translation]

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I note that Hon. Members who always read their speeches simply will not let us read a document in the House. I also take notice of this Conservative approach, it is like all others.

Finally, the Hon. Member said that Canadians keep too much money in savings accounts, a sure sign that they lack confidence to invest in the private sector. If that is so, why would the Hon. Member tell us we must change registered retirement savings plans and raise the ceiling, which would only increase savings, when he has just contradicted himself in his remarks? How can he make such a statement when the Budget contains measures which are altogether contrary to what he is saying? In fact, is that not one more proof of the fact that he ought to get himself a new speech writer?

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the two questions and the remark of the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria), I can assure you that anything I say here in the House of Commons comes from me. I do not read speeches written by others, I can draft my own and I am very proud of it.

When I say that I get involved in Government policy, it is a matter of personal belief, my friend. You may have been trained to read speeches written by your Ministers, even though they may even have been unable to draft them properly, but that is not the way we operate.

To reply to your question about inflation, I said that a dollar was worth $1 in 1971 and that it now costs $3.06 to do the same things, whether we are talking about buying a car, food, or housing, or building roads.

Your thinkers, and I did say yours, systematically implemented a system which provoked this inflation and unfairly took away the savings of Canadian men and women by reducing their purchasing power. You were not honest with the Canadians who had savings in the seventies and eighties. Their money is now worth only one third of its value in 1971.

Terms to describe what you did to them are not allowed in the House of Commons, but I think that everyone should be told about it. In case you did not understand, that is what inflation means.

Second, you speak about savings. It is very clear that you, the Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria), do not know the difference between an investment and a loan. Our tax proposal will promote investment. For your information, investment means the money that is put into a business as equity, as shareholder assets, as owner equity, and this is what gives the business the means to develop.

As for you, you told the Canadian people: Invest in loans of the Government of Canada. You paid up to 22 per cent for Government of Canada loans. You told Canadians: Bring us some money, we need it to redistribute among our friends. You do not know the difference between an investment and a loan and you never did. That is why you are not even able today to comment the speech and the tax proposal of our Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). As for me, I can both comment and defend them.

I trust that we shall eventually stop talking about this issue and go on to other things which are also important for Canada. Stop trying to delay these initiatives!

[English]

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) indicated that the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) was approaching the issue with some arrogance. It is not only that; the Hon. Member for Lévis was approaching the whole issue with a very selective process of misleading the Canadian public. He suggested that this side of the House was giving confused signals and messages to the Canadian public. The Hon. Member had the audacity and temerity, a word which his Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) likes to use, to suggest that this particular piece of legislation, together with the other pieces of legislation flowing from the Budget introduced last May, was somewhat fair and just to Canadians.

Did the Hon. Member for Lévis explain to his constituents that people earning $15,000 will be expected to pay 36 per cent more in taxes by 1990, compared with a $100,000 earner who will have to pay 4 per cent more or a $200,000 earner who will have to pay 2 per cent more? Did the Hon. Member portray the reality of the Budget to his constituents? Does he feel that those figures to which I just referred coming from the documents of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) are reality and are in fact fair? Why was that schedule imposed rather than a more equitable balance between all Canadians from all parts of the country, not just the gulf that is certainly getting larger between rich and poor under this administration?

• (1230)

[Translation]

Mr. Fontaine: The Hon. Member for York-West (Mr. Marchi), as usual, and like his colleagues, is going to dwell on details as he does every day, during Question Period for instance, anxious as he is to have Canadians forget we created 430,000 jobs. During the Summer of 1984, Canadians understood our message on a balanced budget. This is what we are giving them today, Mr. Speaker. So they understood our message and now they are thanking us. They are telling us: "Carry on, you are doing well". We have the support of people who know about the economy, people like you, people in Chambers of Commerce, businessmen's organizations, economists, consumers in general, business people who trust us, who invest, who have hired 430,000 people. That is our message, Mr. Speaker, and that is our performance. Therefore, I do not have to answer questions about details that they keep asking to victimize this Government.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated. The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner).

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, I did my best to try to follow the arguments of the Hon. Member from Lévis (Mr. Fontaine). I suspect that perhaps what he was trying to do today was to launch a new school of economic thought. If that is the case, I would suggest to him that, other than himself, I doubt that anyone else would be interested in enrolment.

I have spent some time on Bill C-84 and done some analysis of it. I have come to one inescapable conclusion, and that is that Bill C-84 takes what has been in this country a snail's pace movement towards tax reform and it has slammed that into reverse.

When the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) introduced his Budget on May 23 he told the House of Commons that this Budget was going to be tough and it was going to be fair. I have to agree that this Budget is tough. It certainly is very tough on lower income Canadians and on middle-income Canadians. Members who support the Government must be feeling a little awkward, a little uncertain of themselves when they contemplate the figures that were mentioned by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and repeated by the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) that a man or a woman earning $15,000 is going to face, over the next four years, a cumulative tax increase of 36 per cent. To earn $15,000 is to have a person hovering around the poverty line. To face an increase like that is very, very difficult for Hon. Members to justify. So it is a tough Budget, it is tough on lower and middle-income Canadians, and it does provide some nice fat, juicy fare for the well-to-do. I will come back to that a little later on.

I do want to give the Minister of Finance some credit. The Minister of Finance must be given some credit for assisting his Party and assisting his Government to slip so significantly in the public opinion polls. Now he cannot take all the credit, he is getting some help from his colleagues in the Cabinet, and he is certainly getting quite a bit of help from his Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

During the recess of Parliament when I was in my constituency I spoke to a citizen for whom I have great respect and he made an interesting comment. He said, "You know, I am not a person who has studied political science or even economics". He was in another important field of endeavour, but he said, "It occurred to me that if I were the Minister of Finance and I were preparing a Budget for the nation, I would certainly not attack or move against either senior citizens or children".

You know that the senior citizens of this country fought back and they won, and no more needs to be said about that except that there is a lingering suspicion in the minds of many Canadians, because of that error made by the Minister of Finance, that the Conservative Party that now forms the Government wants to erode the social security system that has been built up over a long period of time. Even though the senior citizens did win their battle, the children of this country continue to be the losers. Thanks to the family allowance measure that went through the House yesterday, children are going to get an additional one cent a day in 1986. I want to say that they will get one cent a day, but if those same children were to buy one or two confectionery items then this Government is going to reach into the blue jeans of those tykes and take out all of the loose change.

An Hon. Member: The dentists think it is wonderful.

Mr. Penner: Surely the Conservative Party is not now going to dictate what people shall eat or what they shall buy. Surely the Member who has just spoken is not saying that in this measure the Government wants to move against the confectionery industry.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On a point of order, the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley).

Mr. Gormley: I have been listening with great interest to this Member. I heard him refer to Bill C-70, I heard him refer to other ways, means and motions. I am wondering if he is going to come to the point and discuss Bill C-84 at some point before his time expires.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I know the Hon. Member, he is a colleague of mine from the class of '68. I know that he knows what relevancy is in this House. I am sure he is getting to the point.

Mr. Penner: I hope that unnecessary intervention will not be subtracted from my time, Mr. Speaker. I will say something about Bill C-84. I would like to concentrate my attention on three objectionable aspects of Bill C-84. First, there is the partial deindexation of the tax system. Second, there is the reintroduction of an exemption from taxation of capital gains. If time allows, I would like to say something about the effects of Bill C-84 on the tourist industry.

I have mentioned in this House before, with respect to the indexation of the tax system, that this idea was first brought into the precincts of Parliament by no less an outstanding Canadian and parliamentarian than the Hon. Robert Stanfield. At that time the Minister of Finance, who is now the Leader of the Opposition, engaged in a national debate across this country about whether indexing the tax system was valid. He played the role of devil's advocate and gave some speeches to the contrary, but Canadians convinced him that it was a fair reform measure in our tax system. Parliament subsequently introduced it in a Budget that he brought in.

To do away, even partially, with the indexation in our tax system, to deindex it partially is, I believe, to take that slow tedious process of tax reform and to put it into reverse gear. The Leader of the Official Opposition has called this measure a sneaky one. I do not think that is unparliamentary, Mr. Speaker, because if you take a look at what it does, you will find that it is actually rather sneaky, because in 1985 what you have with this measure is just a small tax bite. You take out $80 million out of taxpayers' pockets in 1985, and in the year in which we are now that tax bite gets a little larger because the amount goes up to $635 million. From the calculations which have been done for us we note that by 1990 what began as a tax bite becomes one huge tax grab. Somewhere close to about $5 billion will be taken from the taxpayers' money.

Regarding this measure, one commentator has said that in the future, there will be a cloudburst of tax increases, and another described it as being a time bomb built into our tax system. After looking at Bill C-84, the Consumers' Association of Canada stated that the tax changes introduced by this measure will create a new kind of poverty in Canada, the middle-income poor.

Most Hon. Members will know that about one-half of Canada's economic growth was directly due to consumer spending on goods and services. With millions of dollars, soon to be billions of dollars, being taken from consumers' pockets, do Hon. Members who are supporting this Bill not think that there will be a setback in the economic recovery that they said they would encourage if they were elected to office? There is bound to be a setback.

The purchasing power of middle-income earners, because of Bill C-84, will be eroded. True, this erosion will begin slowly but it will increase as we move through the 1980s and into the 1990s. That is my first strong objection to this Bill. I am glad my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), moved to have the deindexation clause in Bill C-84 removed in order to retain what is a very strong reform measure in our tax system designed to protect taxpayers against inflation so that the Government is not able to live off the avails of inflation. If the Hon. Member for Lévis were here, he would be interested in hearing my comments.

My second objection has to do with the reintroduction of the capital gains tax exemption.

Mr. Vincent: Order.

Mr. Penner: Don't get too excited. he is the one who raised the issue.

[Translation]

Mr. Vincent: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I think the Hon. Member knows very well that reference should not be made to the presence or absence of Members in this House, and I find it very unfortunate that we have to call that to their attention almost every day.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I believe the Hon. Member realizes that, and I do not think it will happen again.

Mr. Penner: The Hon. Member for Lévis had drawn me into the debate and I was anxious to reply to him. I neglected to note that he had left the Chamber. I apologize.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Penner: All Hon. Members who follow requests for changes in our tax system will know that in the business community and in financial publications, there has been for a long time now a request for the ending of the capital gains tax. In speeches and in various publications, business leaders have said that this particular form of taxation ought to go, and in arguing that it ought to go, they have presented a rationale or justification for it. I would like to summarize briefly that justification.

The rationale is that if we were to abolish the capital gains tax, there would be a higher level of personal investment and risk capital formulation. If we removed the capital gains tax, we would encourage Canadians to rethink the way in which they invested their money, a way which tended to be primarily through term deposits or Canada savings bonds. Rather than using those instruments for investment, the abolition of the capital gains tax would encourage people to put their money into private or public equity, more risk taking would be encouraged, and the flow of investment capital into areas of the economy that would show the greatest promise of job creation would be enlarged. That is the justification for that measure. However, there are those who counter these arguments. I refer specifically to Professors Brooks and Peltomaa who, in 1979, wrote a publication entitled Canadian Taxation. On page 7 of that publication, they said:

> The tax reform process in Canada clearly reveals that even the most ludicrous of ideas, if supported by business interests, are often acted on by the Government.

They went on to argue that it is difficult to justify the exemption of capital gains from taxation. I will not repeat all of their arguments because I do not want to spend all of my time quoting. However, let me bring Members of Parliament up to date.

Immediately following the May 23 Budget, The Globe and Mail reported that it had in its possession a document from the Department of Finance that argued that changes in capital gains taxation might well have only a small effect on the ability of corporations to obtain new equity financing. That argument was not made by members of the Opposition but by an analysis done within the Department of Finance itself.

Many tax experts argue that the removal of the capital gains tax will do no more than encourage a great deal of speculation in the real estate market and that that speculation will drive the price of land up. If an increase in the price of land is coupled with the abolition of the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan, a program which helped young couples save money, how are we going to help young people to acquire the homes they believe they have a right to acquire at some point in their lifetimes as Canadian citizens?

In my view, the capital gains tax exemption is nothing more than a generous windfall for the rich of Canada. It does not require the rich to invest any further if they do not see fit to do so. Within Bill C-84, there is not even a minimum requirement that the capital should come from Canadian investment within Canada. One tax analyst from Coopers & Lybrand said that he was surprised that Ottawa made the exemption so wide open rather than aiming it toward investments in Canada that create jobs. He went on to reflect further and said that he did not think that we could solve Canada's unemployment problems by exempting capital gains from taxation in any event.

I believe we must conclude that the capital gains tax exemption is a very special gift from the Government to its well-to-do friends and supporters. Of course, the Government has the right to do that. I do not argue with that. However, I believe that that is the way this measure is seen by the public. The Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Parry) drew to the attention of the House the fact that, according to the 1982 statistics, 63 per cent of the capital gains tax exemption will accrue to people who are earning $50,000 per year or more, about 4 per cent of the tax-paying population.

I would argue that a fair, just and equitable tax system should be based on the ability to pay. That is not very profound, but I believe that that is what a fair taxation system should be. All sources of income which increase the economic power of the recipient, including capital gains, should be recognized in determining the tax base. If that sounds familiar, it is because that was a statement that was made by the Royal Commission on Tax Reform, the Carter Commission. Hon. Members will know that the Carter Commission was set up during the Government of the Right Hon. John G. Diefenbaker and reported during the time Mr. Pearson was in office. Finally, some parts of the Carter Commission Report were incorporated into a White Paper, the so-called Benson White Paper. There was extensive debate in the country, and certainly a great deal of it in Parliament. As a new Member of Parliament at that time I remember being overwhelmed by all the lobby groups and special interest groups which wanted to protect their own special place within the tax system. Indeed, it was a very demanding period of time.

The tax reform measures which were finally introduced following the debate of the Benson White Paper can only be described as a partial tax reform. In no way was it complete. However, there were certain principles which were enunciated during that debate which I think are difficult to challenge. For example, it has long been accepted in Canada that a tax system should be based on ability to pay and that Governments should levy progressively more tax on higher income earners as compared to those who earn lower incomes.

We had a discussion earlier about marginal rates. It is always difficult to know where to draw the line between that which is fair and which must be done in order not to stifle initiative, innovation, and all of those other features which help a nation to grow and expand, and that which is unfair. We know that there is a strong concentration of capital gains in higher income tax brackets. Therefore, to bring back an exemption for those people runs directly contrary to the most basic principles of tax reform. I think we have taken a retrograde and regressive step in reintroducing this exemption. I regret it very much. It creates further inequities in our tax system. It adds more complexities to a tax system which my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount, has already described as unfair in many of its aspects and one which is certainly confusing to most taxpayers. After all, there is a whole profession out there of people who simply live off the income tax laws because only a very small handful have the time or the inclination to understand them as fully as they should.

I wish to come back to the Benson White Paper, which the Hon. Member for Levis mentioned in his speech. I admit that I was a supporter of this particular measure. I do not deny that for one moment. The White Paper expressed a great deal of sympathy with Mr. Carter's recommendations for the taxation of capital gains. I think it is probably a good idea to go back to that White Paper. Mr. Speaker, you know very well what a controversial document it was. Here is what the document stated in part, and I remind Hon. Members that it was stated in 1969:

> A Canadian who is able to realize a substantial stock market profit or real estate gain clearly has an increased ability to pay; he is better able to pay for a new car, or to pay for stocks and bonds, or to pay income taxes, than is his neighbour who has not had such a gain. At present, Canada does not tax this ability to pay. As a result, some very well-to-do Canadians pay far less tax than others with similar abilities to pay, and less even than others with much lower incomes (all because these particular Canadians receive a large part of their income as 'capital gains'). Moreover, it has been possible for the sophisticated to arrange their transactions in such a way that they receive as capital gains amounts that would have been income had the transaction been carried out in the normal manner.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired. Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne).

[Translation]

Mr. Champagne: As we know, Mr. Speaker, we had mild weather recently and January is the month for head colds. I am afraid my hon. colleague has a superior one considering that the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) has just told us he is against capital gains. He just said we are offering hand outs to the rich—we as a Government—that they help only the rich. But the question I am going to ask him is this: How is it that the Hon. Member did not rise in this House, when he was in Government, to castigate the then Minister of Finance because there were more than 200,000 Canadians, the most affluent, who were paying no income tax? How can he reconcile that? He now opposes our allowing capital gains, he suggests that it is for the rich, but when in Opposition he failed to do his duty as a Member by not rising and telling his Minister of Finance: Make the most affluent pay, make the rich pay income tax. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that his head cold is at its worse and I hope the Hon. Member will take good care of himself.

[English]

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, apart from the personal comments, I would like to say that I never for one moment suggested that I was against capital gains. I do not remember saying that. What I said is that capital gains ought to be taxed.

Mr. McDermid: They are.

Mr. Penner: They are now; but they will be exempted up to a total of $500,000 in the course of a person's lifetime. That really amounts to an interest-free loan from the Government. I am saying they ought to be taxed.

The former Liberal Government under Finance Minister Benson brought in a capital gains tax which was only partial in terms of reform, since capital gains were still taxed at a lower rate than was income. I do not know if the Hon. Member has experienced the following difficulty, but I know that I have. It is difficult for me to say to the man who carries a lunch pail to work and who works under very adverse conditions, let us say in a pulp and paper mill or in a mine in my constituency, that he must pay the prevailing rate on the income that he earns under those very difficult conditions. Many of the people who carry out those jobs find that by the time they reach their mid-fifties they are burnt out from working in the bush, the paper mills or the mines. It is not easy work at all. It is very difficult to say to such a worker: "If you have extra dollars and you could send them out to work for you, did you know that they would be tax-free?" It is difficult for me to justify saying that to a person who works hard for his living.

I would like to deal with the second point about the minimum tax. The Hon. Member will know that in this Party we have not opposed at all the idea of a minimum tax on those who find that by using every aspect of the tax system they end up paying no tax at all. However, if the Hon. Member will look at the history of that measure he will see that at the beginning there were few people involved in that category and that over the years more and more people were able to use the tax system to their advantage. Certainly through extensive investments in Canada and through the use of the dividend tax credit they have found that they now escape taxation altogether. We have had to face up to a problem. The problem is that every Canadian ought to contribute to the national well-being and should be taxed. No one is arguing to the contrary. However, it has only become a large problem with a significant number of taxpayers in recent years.

Mr. Jepson: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner). Over the last few months I have noticed a theme in the House whereby members of the Opposition have alluded to legislation being sneaky and less than truthful. They have a clear agenda to create a credibility gap between the Government and the people, which I think is disastrous to the people of Canada.

The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior was a member of a Government which, when in office, told the people of Canada that it would not increase gasoline prices by 18 cents a gallon. He was a member of a Government which told the people of Canada at voting time that it would not put in place wage and price controls and, yet, brought those measures in. I do not understand how people from the Hon. Member's Party can be in a position to judge as to whether or not a piece of legislation is sneaky. I think this does a great disservice to all Canadians. As we reflect on the school of economics adhered to by the Liberal Party, we see that it is a Party which left my Government a $200 billion deficit, with some $22 billion on an annual basis. I understand why members of that Party do not understand the progressive legislation which is before the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before I call it one o'clock, I would like to advise the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) that five minutes remain in the time for questions or comments.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

CALL FOR NEGOTIATION OF AIR POLLUTION TREATY WITH UNITED STATES

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in 1909 we signed the Boundary Waters Treaty with the United States. Article 4(2) says:

> That boundary waters and waters flowing across the boundary shall not be polluted on either side to the injury of health and property on the other.

The same principle, Mr. Speaker, should apply to air. We need a treaty on transboundary air pollution. The first step in this direction took place in 1980 when the United States signed a memorandum of intent with us. The acid rain envoys chose not to build on the memorandum of intent and thus made, in my view, a serious mistake.

Today, and every day, because of the prevailing winds, the United States is still causing transboundary environmental interference. Every day the United States is still causing serious economic damage to Canada. Despite the progress of science and technology it is not possible to change the direction of prevailing winds. We are thus the recipients of sulphur dioxide emissions from the United States, millions of tons per year.

Next March the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will meet the President of the United States again. Thus the action on acid rain shifts to the top. The Prime Minister chose this course of action, and we wish him well. We will applaud him if he succeeds with a reduction plan of substance. If he does not, then he can blame the prevailing winds or, to be consistent with his statement Sunday, he can always blame the media.

INCOME TAX ACT

LANGUAGE USED IN WORDING OF SECTION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, to date the Government has failed to act on its promise to simplify the tax system so I can only conclude that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) understands Section 127 of the Income Tax Act which reads:

> In applying Subsection (9) in respect of
> (a) a qualified property or qualified transportation equipment acquired after November 16, 1978 or qualified construction equipment acquired after April 19, 1983, the references in paragraphs (a) and (b) thereof to "5%" shall be read as references to "7%", the references in paragraphs (a.1) and (b.1) thereof to "5%" shall be read as references to "13%" and the references in paragraphs (a.2) and (b.2) thereof to "2.5%" shall be read as references to "3%";
> (b) a qualified expenditure incurred by a taxpayer after November 16, 1978 and before his taxation year that includes November 1, 1983, or a qualified expenditure incurred by him in that taxation year or a subsequent taxation year if he deducted an amount under Section 37.1 in computing his income for the year,
> (i) where the expenditure was incurred by a Canadian-controlled private corporation in a taxation year of the corporation in which it is or would, if it had sufficient taxable income for the year, be entitled to a deduction under Section 125 in computing its tax payable under this Part for the year, the references in paragraphs (a) and (b) thereof to "5%" shall be read as references to "25%" and the references in paragraphs (a.1), (a.2), (b.1) and (b.2) thereof—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

FISHERIES

DAMAGE CAUSED BY GRAY SEALS TO EAST COAST FISHERY

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands-Canso): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to highlight once again the economic damage to the East Coast fishery being inflicted by the gray seals.

Proliferation of seals and seal worms has been a major concern over the past few years. To outline the gravity of this situation, the following points must be made. The seal population along the Nova Scotia coastline is approximately 100,000 animals; one gray seal consumes 3,200 pounds of fish annually; total consumption of fish by seals along the Nova Scotia coastline exceeds 200 million pounds annually; the Sable Island herd will increase by 12,000 in 1986, and an immediate control kill is required to reduce the seal population.

A major policy decision must be made to decrease the size of the herd and place controls limiting future growth. With the push for quality enhancement, it is difficult to achieve high quality without addressing this problem.

In addition, extensive damage is being done to fishermen's gear by the seal population. Nets and traps are being destroyed by these animals.

I commend the Minister of Fisheries (Mr. Siddon) for his recent comments to the effect that he is prepared to address this problem, and I encourage all Members of the House to support the Minister in this respect.

• (1405)

This problem threatens the viability of the Atlantic fishery and therefore the backbone of the Atlantic economy. It is time for all of us to acknowledge—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member his time has expired.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

REPEAT BROADCAST OF "NEAT TO BE DEAD" SONG

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, last Thursday I made a statement concerning the CBC's irresponsibility in broadcasting a song with the theme that it is "neat to be dead", in which children expound on the virtues of death. In light of the program's morbid content I asked for an apology or at least a retraction from the CBC. I thought it would end there, but this was not to be. What happened? The song was broadcast in its entirety again yesterday at approximately 8 a.m. on CBC Radio in Toronto.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Pennock: Most Canadians can put this song in perspective. My concern is with the one child who cannot, the one child who is having difficulty at school, the one child who listens to the radio talk about death this way: "It's fun to croak! Oh, boy, it's cool, it sure beats school, it is ever neat!"

Does the CBC realize that one-third of all suicides in Toronto last year were committed by children under the age of 19? This is no joke. A serious social problem exists when children and teenagers not only attempt suicide but contemplate suicide as a viable way to get around the pressures of today's society. I ask the CBC was it really worth it? To broadcast this song again was not only irresponsible but outrageous.

My final remarks are directed to one Canadian, the President of the CBC, Mr. Pierre Juneau: Your accountability to the people of Canada is no different from that of a Minister of this Government in that—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

Mr. Pennock: —you owe it to the people of Canada to do the honourable thing and resign.

HUMAN RIGHTS

CANADIAN ROLE IN WORLD-WIDE STRUGGLE

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the United States celebrated a new federal holiday commemorating the fight for equal rights for American blacks spearheaded by Dr. Martin Luther King. By creating this statutory holiday, Americans underscore the right to equality of opportunity and equality of rights for all citizens. This is a human rights day. But Mr. Speaker, we are sadly aware that these freedoms do not exist the world over.

It is important that all nations join the fight for universal respect of individual human rights. Canada and Canadians are in the forefront in taking up this global challenge. The task is not easy, but the challenge is a worthy effort. Canada, this young nation of ours, can stand proud in the world of nations for we are a role model, although still not perfect. Although still not perfect, we can be proud of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms in our Constitution which accords to all Canadians the fullest spectrum of freedoms. Canada is not only a signature of the Helsinki Accords, but speaks out for its principles, of particular note in the interests of Soviet jewry.

S.O. 22

Just recently our Parliament declared Raoul Wallenberg Canada's first honorary citizen. This will ensure that his name and deeds in the interests of human rights and decency will forever be a part of our country's history. It also allows us to seek information as to his whereabouts. You, Mr. Speaker, graciously hosted a reception to mark our new honorary citizen. The President of the United States received Coretta King to mark Dr. Martin Luther King Day. Both acts are encouraging in the fight for world-wide respect of individual human rights.

FOOD AND DRUGS

BAN ON TOBACCO ADVERTISING ADVOCATED

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, 15 years ago an all-Party committee of this House recommended unanimously that tobacco advertising be banned. Since then some 300,000 Canadians have died from tobacco-related diseases. In short, tobacco use has been responsible for more deaths than all the wars, car accidents, epidemics, and illegal drugs in all of Canada's history. Yet, instead of legislating an advertising ban, the Liberal Government of the day permitted tobacco companies to adopt a voluntary code of advertising.

Violations of the code, such as sports sponsorship and advertising near schools, have been rampant, and there are no penalties for violations. Today the Non-Smokers' Rights Association released a study of the extent of these violations. To me the worst is advertising directed to children. While adult men, including some Hon. Members, are wisely quitting smoking, the tobacco companies are going after the youngsters, and the age of the onset of smoking is now down to 12.

The request of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) to the companies that they ban the most flagrant abuses has simply been very politely ignored. The tobacco companies know that children smoke the most advertised brands. It is time that the Minister take the advice of every medical association and health advocacy group in the country and bring in legislation for a complete ban on tobacco advertising.

DEPORTATION OF UNITED STATES JAIL ESCAPEE

Mr. Sid Fraleigh (Lambton-Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, today a blow was struck for the justice system in Canada. I want to express my appreciation, and that of the great majority of Canadians, for the decision of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) to return a convicted killer, Joseph Kindler, to the United States where he will meet with the consequences of the crimes he committed in that country. I am sure the Canadian public will support the Minister's decision to ensure that Canada does not become a haven for those who have committed murder in another jurisdiction. Since the crime was committed in the United States, the laws of the United States should apply.

With his decision the Minister of Justice has shown Canadians that our system of justice is prepared to take difficult decisions to ensure that those pursuing criminal activities in other countries will not have Canada to turn to in an attempt to escape the consequences of their actions. I join with many Canadians in thanking the Minister of Justice for reaffirming our faith in the principles of law and order that exist in our country.

QUEBEC CARNIVAL

TRIBUTE TO ORGANIZERS AND PARTICIPANTS

Mr. Marcel Tremblay (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, the headquarters of the Quebec Carnival are situated in my fine riding of Quebec East. Believe me, there will be a lot of action there within the next few days!

Quebec Carnival is known internationally and I am proud of its slogan C'est chez nous que ça se passe!

As has been the case over the past 32 years, there will be activities for all tastes and all categories within our society. Quebec Carnival, with its hundred of thousands of volunteers, has shown the Quebecers joie de vivre as well as their spirit of tradition, sharing and popular participation.

It is a great opportunity for all Canadians to get to know one another and to share this great event with millions of our American friends who will be there to take part in the various activities or who will watch us through the miracle of TV broadcasting. For the first time, Mr. Speaker, the ABC network will broadcast its Good Morning America program from the Old Capital!

I raise my hat to all the businessmen who are involved in this event. I congratulate most sincerely the duchesses who through their charm, personality and talent, will show a facet of the true Quebec life. Best of luck to all of them as they compete to be queen of the Quebec Carnival, something I would not miss for the world.

From Parliament Hill in Ottawa, I wish every success to good old Bonhomme Carnaval, to Carnival president Gilles Savard, and his great team. The Quebec Carnival is another proof that volunteers have a place in our community. Volunteering pays, Mr. Speaker!

PUBLIC SERVICE

RELOCATION OF LAID-OFF EMPLOYEES

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, during the 1984 election campaign the Leader of the Conservative Party sent a letter to the public servants of Canada. I will read to you one such letter that was sent to Mr. Jack Donegani, President of the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada. It says in part:

> A PC government will negotiate directly with public service unions and associations toward the establishment of an improved collective bargaining system based on the provisions of the Canada Labour Code.

It says further:

> We will pursue joint bargaining as a means of achieving greater fairness and efficiency in the collective bargaining process.

What a difference a year makes, Mr. Speaker. During the year 1985 some 2,464 employees of the Public Service of Canada were declared surplus to the Government's need. The Government went out of its way to tell the public servants of the country that it would help them to relocate and find other jobs within the Public Service. As of January 3, 1986, 1,999 of those employees had yet to be relocated. The failure rate of the Government in terms of relocating public servants to other jobs within the Government has been in the order of 80 per cent.

It is a disgrace. Perhaps the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) said it best during the election campaign when he said to the people of Canada and to the media: "If the people of this country knew what the Progressive Conservatives wanted to do, we would never get elected".

COST OF GOVERNMENT BORROWINGS

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, workers in Canada know that if they continually spend more than they make they will end up in the poor house. Businessmen who spend beyond their income, even though the expenditures are for good purposes, will go bankrupt and lose everything they have. For many years the Government, under the Liberals, and aided by the NDP, spent millions of dollars that it did not have, and now $1 out of every $3 collected in taxes goes to pay the interest only, without reducing the debt that was built up through their extravagance.

If this borrowing continues, the interest will increase until we are paying $2, then $3 out of every $3 collected, and then $4, until our credit is ruined and we cannot borrow any more and we can't pay our bills. We will have to cut out donations for worthy causes and we will have to cut pensions for the aged, pensions for the crippled, and family allowances. That is why millions of people in Canada elected the PC Government with a mandate to cut the deficit and to live within our means. Yet every time we make a cut the Liberals and the NDP yell their heads off.

• (1415)

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), and the PC Party have a vision of a prosperous Canada, not a bankrupt nation. We can make sacrifices now and reduce the principal and interest and eventually eliminate the debt and build a nation, or we can go on in Liberal and NDP fashion and borrow ourselves into oblivion.

FISHERIES

ISSUANCE OF LICENCE FOR EAST COAST CLAM FISHERY

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans is being sued by Kristan Seafoods International Inc. for issuing a licence, against the advice of his senior bureaucrats, to Mother Snow's Fine Foods Ltd. for a test clam fishery off the coast of Cape Breton Island.

Were the Minister and the Government not aware, when this licence was issued, that three of the five principals had outstanding judgments against them, and in fact two of the principals themselves are being sued by Kristan Seafoods for representing themselves as working for Kristan Seafoods while gathering information for their own licence application and leaving Kristan Seafoods high and dry?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Acting Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, that is quite a statement by the Hon. Member. I will provide the answer as Acting Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. The short answer is that two licences of an available six were granted to Mother Snow's after the regional director had interviewed and received applications from three, I believe.

The regional director in Halifax issued those two licences.

Mr. MacLellan: Quite a situation indeed, Mr. Speaker.

ALLEGED POLITICAL PRESSURE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, Kristan's statement of claim against the Minister states that the Minister did know of the action against the two principals when the licence was issued by Fisheries and Oceans.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Question, please.

Mr. MacLellan: Were not the Minister and the Government led to issue this licence because of political pressure, because one of the five principals is Richard Logan, former chief of staff to the ex-Minister of Defence, the Member of Parliament for Cumberland-Colchester?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, those are definable only as allegations by the Hon. Member. I am surprised that he would make such allegations knowing, as he obviously does, that an action to which he has referred has been commenced in the courts by Kristan. It is totally improper for the Government or indeed any Member to be raising questions that are sub judice.

ENERGY

INCREASE IN PRICE OF GASOLINE IN VANCOUVER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Last March when she announced her Energy Accord, she told me, as reported in Hansard on March 29, that motorists would benefit from any decline in world oil prices. According to the figures from her Department, world oil prices have fallen from $28 U.S. a barrel when she made that announcement to $20.50 U.S. a barrel today.

In Vancouver, a city which both she and I have the honour of representing, motorists paid 47.3 cents a litre for gas in March. Today Vancouverites are paying 56.7 cents per litre; that is an increase of 20 per cent. Why are the people of Vancouver paying 20 per cent more to fill up their tanks when world oil prices have fallen 25 per cent in the same period?

● (1420)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Member has correctly indicated that oil prices have fallen from $28 per barrel internationally to $20 per barrel today, but he has neglected to say that that decrease took place only in the last few weeks. Actually oil prices rose toward the end of last year, and they historically stay high during wintertime. Therefore the decrease in the international price of oil which we are experiencing now will not show up at the pumps until a few months from now when the oil is moved to the pumps.

COMPARISON WITH UNITED STATES PRICES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, returning to the Minister's own figures, prices at the pump are down 2.8 per cent in Los Angeles over 12 months, down 3.7 per cent in Detroit, down 2.1 per cent in Seattle, up 14.9 per cent in Calgary, up 15.2 per cent in Toronto, and up 23 per cent in Saint John, New Brunswick. In view of the fact that the Canadian Government has raised taxes at the pump 58.1 per cent in those 12 months, the same period, why are Americans benefiting from falling oil prices while Canadian motorists are taking it on the chin?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the answer is that the Americans were lucky enough not to have a Liberal administration—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: —such as the one which left this Government with such a massive deficit that we need those taxes as revenues to pay it down.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I have been talking about the last 12 months, a period in which this Government has been in power. The Minister's bravado does not fool anybody, and the arrogance is becoming contagious along those front benches, absolutely contagious.

EFFECT ON TOURIST INDUSTRY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, does the Minister realize that in six months British Columbia ran up a $200 million tourist deficit, largely attributable to higher gas prices, and that the outrageous gas prices in British Columbia are jeopardizing the future of Expo 86?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, it is so typical of a Liberal to be negative toward Expo 86, which will be the best thing that ever happened to our province.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: We built it.

Mr. Rossi: You are on your way out, Pat.

Ms. Copps: A cabinet shuffle.

Mr. Axworthy: Talk about being full of gas.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

INCREASED GASOLINE TAXES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. I would like to follow up on that line of questioning and ask is she aware that in her own riding of Vancouver Centre taxes have gone up 2.8 cents per litre over the period the Conservatives have been in power, and pump prices have gone up 3.4 cents per litre, so that gasoline prices have gone up over 6 cents per litre. Why did the Minister tell me yesterday that it was only federal and provincial taxes that were responsible for gouging the consumer?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, Governments do not set the price of gasoline. Possibly under a socialist Government they would set the price of gasoline, but under a market system the price of gasoline goes up and down with the market.

Mr. Tobin: Then why has it not gone down?

Miss Carney: I point out again that the extra taxes imposed on gasoline were put on by this administration to help pay for some of the social services that Canadians want.

Mr. Waddell: Governments do not set the price of gasoline; six oil companies do that, and the Government should do something about it.

TIME LAG BETWEEN WORLD AND CANADIAN PRICES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the same Minister. If she continues to predict that world oil prices will go down, and therefore will be reflected at the pump, what will she do to stop this time lag to make the Canadian oil industry more competitive and prepared to react to world prices going down? Is she prepared to do something about the competition in the oil industry?

Mr. Deans: A lack of competition.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, what I did was to bring in a new energy policy which would make the Canadian market much more responsive to world conditions.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: We are seeing what happened.

Mr. Axworthy: Look at the result.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): It is going in the wrong direction.

PUBLIC SERVICE

IMPACT ON EMPLOYMENT OF GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. We know that the public Service Employment Act does not contain any provision under which Government employees can negotiate lay-offs or job security. According to Government policy, 15,000 jobs are to be eliminated within five years, 5,000 this year and 10,000 in the following four years. We know that this would have serious and devastating consequences for public employees, their careers and their families. Would the Minister tell the House whether his Government will make sure that, in the future, collective bargaining will cover this important and necessary provision so that lay-offs and job security can be negotiable?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I would like to emphasize the fact that we indicated in the May Budget that 15,000 person years would be eliminated over the next five years, including 5,000 during the next fiscal year. We have negotiated with all our unions a policy concerning employees who might be adversely affected by this program. As I indicated in my press release last Friday, most of them will be re-assigned either in their own Departments or in others. We have already reached agreement with the unions to deal with those employees who might be faced with the sad reality of being laid off during that period.

[English]

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the facts are that there are 2,000 public servants at this time who have been declared surplus by the Government. My question is: has the Minister lost control of the situation, the unions are talking about strike action—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a question.

Mr. Gauthier: My question is: has the Minister lost control of the situation, unions are threatening strike action. Will the Minister not keep his word on the Government's commitment to public servants and allow negotiations to take place on security of jobs and on the question of designation. And I will say, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the reality is that the Member opposite has lost control of the facts and we set them out very clearly in the Budget last May, that there would be a reduction of 2 per cent in the coming fiscal year in the number of person years in the Public Service, and 1 per cent every year thereafter for four years for a total of 15,000 person years. I have said very clearly that we expect that 3,200 people will be placed or replaced within their own Departments, 1,100 will be replaced within other Departments, and that at a maximum 700 would be possibly laid off over the coming year. Those are the facts, and remember them.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY

REQUEST FOR RENEWAL OF IMPORT QUOTAS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I have a question for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. According to a report that the Minister received before Christmas, Canada is in danger of losing between 50,000 and 60,000 jobs if the quotas are not renewed in the clothing and textile industry. I want to ask the Minister now is the Government prepared to announce that it will be renewing these quotas, and second, in terms of whatever new arrangement is made with the United States concerning trade, will he assure the House that we will not lose the right as a nation to apply such quotas.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I assume that the Hon. Member is referring to an article that appeared today with respect to a Quebec study.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): That was yesterday's question.

Mr. Kelleher: Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member is in fact referring to the release of a Quebec study I would advise the Hon. Member in the House that we are not aware of that report. We have not seen the report and are not in a position to comment on it until it comes into our possession.

STUDY UNDERTAKEN BY QUEBEC PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I do wish the cabinet Members would pay attention to the questions being asked. I asked the Minister responsible about a report, a copy of which I have and that he received some time ago. I would like to combine both. Since we now know from a federal Government report that 50,000 to 60,000 jobs are threatened by the absence of quotas and since we know, according to a secret study done by the Government of Quebec, about which there has been news in the last 24 hours, that 30,000 jobs in the Province of Quebec alone would be threatened by free trade, has the Minister obtained a copy of the Quebec report? Second, will he assure us that the quotas will be renewed?

• (1430)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, obviously my colleague thought that the Hon. Member for Oshawa was at least current with the reports.

In answer to the Hon. Member for Oshawa, let me assure him, as I assured one of his colleagues yesterday on this subject, that we have this matter under review. We received the report to which the Hon. Member is referring last December, and we find it helpful. I would point out to the Hon. Member that the main problem for the textile and clothing industry in Canada comes from such countries as Korea, Taiwan, and Hong Kong, the low-wage countries, and that our feeling is that that is perhaps where the negotiations have to take place to ensure that we will have that viable textile and clothing industry to which I referred yesterday.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN—EFFECT OF IMPORTS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, since we have made no progress in terms of the answers to the specific questions with either Minister, I would like now to ask a question of the Minister who is sitting behind the Minister who has just replied, the Minister Responsible for the Status of Women. Considering that 64 per cent of clothing and textile workers are women, and considering that the Minister lectured his caucus colleagues and members of the Cabinet on the weekend about the need for the Government to be sensitive to major economic decisions which impact on women, I would like to ask the Minister if he has urged his cabinet colleagues to renew the quotas and to make sure we do not move into a free trade arrangement with the United States, an action which will release thousands of women onto the labour market.

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for the question. The rather pathetic story is an indication of just how seriously the Government takes the matter. In fact I have had discussions with my colleague, the Minister responsible for trade, about the negotiations and about the importance of having within our negotiating team a unit specific concerns relating to the impact on women of any decisions that are made.

INSURANCE

LIABILITY COVERAGE FOR TRUCKING COMPANIES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Finance. A group of Canadian trucking companies have been negotiating a loan guarantee with the federal Government in order to acquire an insurance company that has gone bankrupt, but so far there have been no results. Can the Minister do something so that the trucking companies can acquire this loan to buy the company and get liability insurance before it is too late?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, the truckers have been working very hard to come to a solution to their problem and I do commend them for it. We have been working with them on this.

The insurance company in question is in the hands of an Iowa regulator who is liquidating the company at the moment, and our regulators are in constant touch with him. Progress is being made and we will be in touch with the truckers again on this matter.

REQUEST FOR ACCELERATED NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I know that the Government has been negotiating but we found out that if, in a couple of days, no decision is reached by the federal Government, the trucking industry will be left without insurance. Could the Minister speed up the negotiations in order to assure that the trucking industry will be able to receive insurance?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, speed is not traditionally of the essence in this town, but it is something at which I am working as fast I can.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

INQUIRY IF RESTRICTIVE TRADE PRACTICES COMMISSION IS STUDYING GULF-ULTRAMAR TRANSACTION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

The Minister is aware that Canada's Restrictive Trade Practices Commission is examining the circumstances of the sale of Gulf to Ultramar.

Mr. Speaker, my question is as follows. Could the Minister give the House the assurance that the Commission will examine the actions of Shell and Ultramar to find out whether threats made by these companies to close down their refineries in Montreal constitute a violation of Section 32 of the Combines Investigations Act?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I believe I gave a satisfactory explanation last week. As I said before, the Canadian Restrictive Trade Practices Commission is responsible for deciding who should be heard when it decides to hold an inquiry, to conduct hearings and to receive testimony. I have no control over this Commission, so I have no comments on the subject.

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC HEARINGS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister allow public hearings to be held so that the consumer can be sure that Shell and Ultramar did not try to restrict competition in Quebec in order to increase oil prices and profits?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I merely want to point out that, as I said last week and as I said again yesterday, Quebec consumers have no reason to be worried about security of oil supplies, anymore than they should be worried about artificial price increases, because we are monitoring the situation very carefully.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGATIONS OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT OF WOMEN MEMBERS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General and concerns the very serious allegations of sexual harassment and sexism within the RCMP. The Solicitor General has initiated an internal investigation but that simply is not good enough. What is necessary is an independent investigation. Will the Solicitor General not agree that an independent investigation into the serious allegations is necessary in order to avoid the possibility of a whitewash and a coverup?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I suppose I have much more confidence in the integrity of the Commissioner and of the senior members of the RCMP than the Hon. Member does.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Beatty: I have asked the Commissioner of the RCMP to look into the particular circumstances. One of the difficulties that we have is that an allegation has been made by people who have not identified themselves. We have done a search to see if there were specific grievances filed by female members of the force alleging sexual harassment. We have not been able to locate any. I can certainly give the undertaking that in any instance in which a member of the force comes forward with an allegation of sexual harassment, it will be fully investigated and, if it is found to be substantiated, then action will certainly be taken.

WOMAN CONSTABLE'S ALLEGATION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, surely the Solicitor General is not serious. In September of last year he was made aware of a specific case, the case of Nancy Fehr, Constable No. 32359, who said in a report to the Equality Rights Commission—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is this a preamble? Just the question.

Mr. Nunziata: Is he aware of the allegation made by this particular constable in her statement in the report, of which he should have been made aware, which is as follows:

> We have to suffer silently the harassment for fear of being totally ostracized from the working peer group.

Why was the Minister not aware of this allegation when it was made?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, what I indicated was that I am not aware of any grievance filed by members of the force. I have asked the Commissioner to investigate the report that I have from the RCMP indicating that they cannot find any official complaint received from any regular member. The other undertaking that I have given is that the Government is quite clear in terms of its opposition to sexual harassment in any form and in any instance—

Mr. Nunziata: Prove it.

Mr. Beatty: Let the Hon. Member come forward with an allegation by any member of the force. We will ensure that it is fully investigated, and if it is substantiated we will take firm action.

Mr. Nunziata: It's right here.

Mr. Beatty: However, rather than simply trying to smear the RCMP, the Hon. Member should be acting with some responsibility and should be undertaking to come forward with hard evidence.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES BOUNDARY

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. Since George Shultz has now appointed Edgar Dewinski as his U.S. representative for discussions on the two British Columbia boundaries with the United States and since discussions have now taken place between Ottawa and Victoria on this issue, would the Minister be prepared to table in the House the four major components of the Strait of Juan de Fuca boundary and the Dixon Entrance boundary so the people of Canada can know exactly where the Governmenlt stands on this issue, so we do not get sold out like we did in 1903 by Wilfrid Laurier?

● (1440)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, let me commend the Hon. Member on getting his question out.

I would like to advise him that even now he is a little bit ahead of himself. We are involved in some consultations with the Government of British Columbia to determine whether it would, in fact, be in Canada's interest to respond to the suggestion of the United States Secretary of State that there be preliminary discussions. If there are discussions preliminary to a negotiation, they will be to find out whether Canada's interest would be served by any such negotiation. Only if Canada's interest would be served would we enter into any such negotiation.

Mr. Fulton: I was just reminded, Mr. Speaker, that dead Liberals are okay!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are sitting next to 40 of them!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

DIXON ENTRANCE BOUNDARY

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs is this. I am sure he recalls in 1984 how aggressive the Americans were in relation to the Dixon Entrance boundary. Will the Minister rise in the House today to assure British Columbians that under no circumstances would 54°-40°, or the Dixon Entrance boundary, be moved even one inch south?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, if dead Liberals are okay, I wonder if the Hon. Member could explain why his Party has spent so much of its time and energy in keeping them alive.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member reads my first answer carefully he will see that I answered his question before he put it, even though he put it late.

AGRICULTURE

BEEF IMPORTS FROM EUROPEAN COMMON MARKET

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. It concerns the importation of Common Market beef into Canada. January 16 was the stated deadline for Revenue Canada to file a preliminary report on the dumping of subsidized EEC beef into Canada. Has that report been received? If not, why not?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member will realize that on September 24 the Canadian Cattlemen's Association made a request to the Anti-dumping Tribunal to commence a countervail action. That action commenced on october 16 and a preliminary determination was to be issued on January 16. The Deputy Minister Customs and Excise has issued a 45-day extension. The 45-day extension does not mean a 45-day delay but, rather, that the Deputy Minister has requested an extension to seek and assess additional information. He has made a firm commitment to make a preliminary determination before the end of January.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGED SEXUAL HARASSMENT OF WOMEN MEMBERS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. It deals with the sexist attitudes of the RCMP. I wish to ask him how he can expect the country to accept an internal investigation at a time when he ignores a statement made in a compendium to the report of the Committee on Equality Rights which clearly states on behalf of women in the RCMP:

> In situations of harassment my female member friends and myself find that there is no one outside of each other that we can go to for support for fair treatment. If we tell anyone we are seen as crybabies or troublemakers . . . We have to suffer silently the harassment—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question has been asked.

Ms. Copps: How can the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: The question has been asked.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I will do my best to discern what the question was.

An Hon. Member: He said it was asked.

Mr. Beatty: It appears to be Liberal Party policy simply to attack the RCMP.

I have had the opportunity to meet with a number of the female members of the force in my tours across the country. I must say that I am particularly proud of them. The force has recruited a tremendous group of female members.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Beatty: It may very well be that the Hon. Member feels that under the Liberal Government not enough was done in terms of the recruitment of women, and I agree.

Mr. Nunziata: This is not a partisan issue.

Mr. Beatty: One of the commitments that we have made is to boost the recruitment of women and natives in the RCMP. It is a commitment which I personally make.

Mr. Waddell: Then look into this.

Mr. Beatty: Further, I have indicated to the House of Commons that in any instance where a member of the force who is prepared to lay a charge of sexual harassment comes forward that we will ensure it is fully investigated. If it is found to be justified, stern action will be taken.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the women of the country and the Liberal Party do not want to be patronized. We want action.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

EMPLOYMENT EQUITY LEGISLATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, if the Solicitor General is not prepared to listen to the recommendations of the all-Party Committee on Equality Rights, perhaps the Minister of Employment and Immigration is. I would like to address my supplementary question to that Minister.

The Minister knows that the proposed—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is now becoming a long preamble. Does the Hon. Member have a question immediately, please?

Ms. Copps: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister of Employment and Immigration announce to the House that she will follow the recommendations of the all-Party committee and not exempt the RCMP and the Canadian Armed Forces from employment equity legislation which is before the House, since that specific exemption is in violation of the Canadian Charter of Rights?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I have been in this House now for almost 14 years.

I waited some 13 years sitting on the opposition benches for the Government of the day—in fact, pleading with it—to bring forward employment equity legislation. I am pleased and proud that this Government has finally brought employment equity legislation into being. I hope that Hon. Members opposite will see that it receives quick passage.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PUBLIC SERVICE

NUMBER OF LAY-OFFS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. It also concerns women workers and, in particular, women workers in the Public Service of Canada, clerks, messengers, and other support staff, who will be laid off by the Government by the thousands over the course of this year. The Minister will know that thousands of people were demonstrating across the country today for that very reason.

Is the Minister aware that the information collected by the union has led the Public Service Alliance to conclude that 3,500 federal employees will lose their jobs and be out of the Public Service by the end of this fiscal year? Will he explain how that can be reconciled with the figure of 700 which he gave last Friday?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I think I have already responded to that question. It is quite clear from our manpower planning exercise that we will reduce the number of person-years in the Public Service, as we said in the last Budget, by 5,000 over the next fiscal year. We expect that 3,200 will be relocated within their existing Departments, 1,100 will be placed in other Departments throughout the Public Service, and at a maximum 700 may be facing lay-offs. Those are the numbers.

REDUCTION BY ATTRITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware that his estimate amounts to only three-tenths of 1 per cent of the employees of the federal Public Service of Canada?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Are you aware?

Mr. Cassidy: Could he say why it would not be possible, if those cuts are to be achieved this year, to achieve them by attrition so that the Government can, in fact, guarantee federal public service employees, who do a fine job, the job security they seek?

[Translation]

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I repeat that we had lengthy discussionss with the unions last spring, to formulate a policy for redeployment in the work place to minimize the impact of any employment cutbacks that might occur. Listen, this is a serious matter. I think that we must show every consideration for people who might be displaced. A policy was agreed on with the unions to try and minimize the impact. As I said before, this impact will affect a maximum of 700 employees, and we are still trying to reduce that impact, and we hope to be able to re-hire these people in some way—

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SOUTH YEMEN—SAFETY OF CANADIAN CITIZENS

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

In view of the turbulence in South Yemen, could the Minister advise the House respecting the safety of Canadian citizens in that country and of any arrangements which might have been made for their removal?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as of noon today there was one Canadian in Aden, an employee of the UNDP Organization, who had requested to be left there who has now requested to be assisted in leaving. We are assisting in that leaving. There are 10 other Canadians in the country in the oil fields, far from the battle and violence. They are judged to be safe. If our judgment of that situation changes, we will act to help them leave South Yemen.

TEXTILES AND CLOTHING

IMPACT OF FREE TRADE WITH UNITED STATES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

We know that his department has prepared special studies on how free trade with the United States would affect the clothing and textiles industry.

Does the Minister intend to release these studies and the findings on the impact that free trade with the United States will have on Quebec workers?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, when I saw the Member rise and say he had a question for me, I thought he was going to comment on the 82,000 jobs that were created in the province of Quebec during 1985.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: You really thought that, did you?

Mr. Stevens: In answer to the specific question finally asked by the Hon. Member, I would like to inform him first that there is no special report that he refers to in our Department.

As far as the textile and clothing industry is concerned, it is something we have had under review. With the multifibre negotiations coming up this summer, we feel that Canada's negotiation posture must be identified as one that will ensure the jobs now being shared by Canadians in the textile and clothing industry will, in fact, continue.

Mr. Axworthy: The Minister, Mr. Speaker, I know has been absent for a long time but his Department has prepared sectoral studies on the impact of free trade on the textile and clothing industry.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister an important supplementary. Last May in an interview with The Financial Post he indicated that it was his intention in industries, such as textiles—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Axworthy: —to guarantee 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the domestic market—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that I am trying not to allow—

Mr. Axworthy: —I am asking a supplementary.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. I am perfectly happy to let the Member put his supplementary but I am trying not to allow preambles to supplementaries. Just a question, please.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, does the Minister intend to live up to the commitment he made last May to preserve 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the domestic market in textiles for Canadian manufacturers?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is, of course, taking something completely out of context. The reference he is making was a reference that I made in the article he has referred to in the context of the tremendous penetration which the previous Government allowed in the textile and clothing industry in Canada from foreign importation.

Mr. Broadbent: What are you going to do about it?

Mr. Stevens: It jumped 20 per cent, 25 per cent a year. What the Member is now referring to is a comment I made that I thought the textile and clothing industry should be allowed to enjoy a fair share of the Canadian market in relation to the total domestic product.

Mr. Axworthy: That is not what you said.

INSURANCE

REQUEST FOR FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL INQUIRY

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Finance. This morning the Minister met with the Federation of Canadian Municipalities who came to her asking for federal leadership in what is a national crisis in the insurance industry.

Will the Minister indicate whether she is supportive of the request to have a full federal-provincial inquiry into the state of the insurance industry as requested by the Federation of Canadian Municipalities?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, as I told the Association, at this stage nothing is off the table if it helps us reach a solution.

We agreed, and I think they announced later at their press conference, to push forward with a co-operative investigation by the industry and by the Superintendent of Insurance, spearheaded actually by the Association of Canadian Municipalities, so that we can put a focus on exactly what the problem is.

What we are trying to do is roll up our sleeves, deal with the very specific problem, and come up with a quick solution.

MUNICIPALITIES' DIFFICULTIES IN SECURING LIABILITY COVERAGE

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister be as hard-headed in dealing with the problem of municipalities that she suggested in the House yesterday with respect to the sports governing bodies to ensure in the short term municipalities can get insurance at rates they can afford and the coverage they need in order to continue the programs they offer? Will she agree to do that?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I think it is very important that the municipalities continue to offer their services to the public. To the extent that is affected by insurance, we are working with them toward a solution. I think the Hon. Member will find they said that we had a very positive meeting.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

NEWFOUNDLAND RAILWAY—DISCUSSIONS WITH UNIONS

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport.

This morning in Newfoundland Mr. Hubert O'Reilly of Cornerbrook, President of the United Transportation Union, issued a public statement contradicting the claim of the Minister of Transport yesterday in this House that the Government had consulted unions in Newfoundland on the future of the Newfoundland Railway. Mr. O'Reilly says he has never heard from the Minister or anyone in his Department. Why has the Minister misled the House of Commons with regard to this matter?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Tobin: When will the Minister be undertaking the kind of real consultation that he purported yesterday in this House was under way?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I might invite the Hon. Member to telephone Mr. Mike Walsh of BRAC. He will set the record straight for him.

MAINTENANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, that is the same kind—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Why don't you give him the telephone number?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a supplementary question.

Mr. Tobin: Unfortunately the Prime Minister's style is rubbing off on the Minister of Transport. BRAC is not the same as the United Transportation Union. They have not heard from the Minister, and you misled the House yesterday—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

An Hon. Member: Next question.

Mr. Speaker: I recognize the Member for just an immediate supplementary, and no more, please.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware that Terra Transport in Newfoundland has cancelled its maintenance program in spite of the fact that 57 bridges on the line between St. John's and Port au Basques have deteriorated to the point where "Go Slow" orders of 10 miles an hour have been issued in order for trains to go over those bridges? Is the Minister aware of that?

Mr. Crosbie: Make haste slowly.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): As I said yesterday, Mr. Speaker, we are examining the whole issue of transportation in Newfoundland. We are discussing it with the province, with members of the unions and other interested people. If the Hon. Member does not get a hold of Mike Walsh, he might try to get a hold of Fred Chancey who has also been involved in the discussions.

PENITENTIARIES

KINGSTON PENITENTIARY—THREAT OF VIOLENCE

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my quetion is for the Solicitor General. The Solicitor General is aware that he has been warned a number of times concerning the threat of serious violence at Kingston Penitentiary. Could the Solicitor General advise the House what steps he is taking with respect to this problem?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Yes, Mr. Speaker. One of the first prisons that I had a chance to visit as Solicitor General was Kingston Penitentiary. As the Hon. Member will appreciate, one of the serious problems we have there is a building that is extremely old which was severely damaged in a riot in 1971, and it is a protective care maximum security institution.

As a result of an incident that took place last fall, we had an investigation. A report was received by the Commissioner of Penitentiaries and myself just last week. We are taking a look at it at the present time. I had the opportunity yesterday to meet with Professor Hill of the correctional law projects at Queen's University. I am looking forward to meeting him in a few week's time to discuss the matter further.

COMMUNICATIONS

BELL CANADA—REPORTED PLAN TO REPLACE FLAT RATE LOCAL TELEPHONE SERVICE

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Communications. Is he aware that for three years Bell Canada has been actively planning to abolish the flat rate local telephone service, which led, as the Minister knows, to almost universal use in Ontario and Quebec, and planning to replace it with a pay-by-the-call system? This will cost local residents millions of dollars in extra charges. If the Minister is aware of the plan, what does he propose to do about this very backward step by Bell Canada?

● (1500)

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, like the Hon. Member, I read about this matter in the press, and it seems to me that the responsibility for defining and analyzing such policies lies primarily, as everybody in Parliament knows, with the CRTC.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of eight, presented by Hon. Members on Monday, January 20, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Certain petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), one petition presented by the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault), and one petition presented by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petition presented by the Hon. Member for Victoria—Haliburton (Mr. Scott) by filing with the Clerk of the House also meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

I am also in a position to respond to a point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) on Tuesday, January 14, 1986.

POINT OF ORDER

RULES REGARDING TELEVISING OF HOUSE OF COMMONS PROCEEDINGS—RULING OF MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker: I have had the opportunity to review the representations made to the Chair on Tuesday, January 14, 1986, by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) and the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) regarding the televising of the proceedings relating to the joint address of the Prime Minister of Japan. May I say to the House that I have also had the last seven joint addresses to the House reviewed, going back to May 5, 1980, when Prime Minister Ohira addressed the House. The review demonstrates that all the joint addresses by visitors to this Chamber since 1980 were televised in the same style and format. In every instance there were a number of what I could call cut-away shots taking in the reaction of such persons as the Prime Minister, the Leader of the Official Opposition, the Leader of the New Democratic Party, the spouses of the visiting dignitaries as well as other dignitaries in the Chamber.

Whether this method of televising special events constitutes a breach of the guidelines and is therefore out of order is a difficult question. In the first place, when the existing guidelines for broadcasting were agreed to in 1977, the coverage of special events was not addressed. In the second place, the standard reference used in House Orders for such events is not as clear as both I and the Hon. Member for Windsor West had thought. The words of the Order are that the speech, and I quote, "be made available to the media for transmission in the usual way", by the House of Commons broadcasting system. I ask myself, is it the transmission that is available in the usual way or is it the method of broadcasting that is to be followed?

The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain is perfectly correct when he requested that the guidelines be followed or changed. On May 28, 1985, on a similar paint of forder I asked that the reform committee inquire into this matter. Again, I strongly urge the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization to consider at least the specific question of what guidelines the Broadcasting Branch should operate under for special events such as joint addresses. I should indicate to the House that I intend to write to the committee on that matter.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to announce the business for tomorrow of which I have already informed the Opposition House Leaders. The business tomorrow will concern Bills relating to amendments to the Divorce Act and ancillary legislation, including Bills C-46, C-47 and C-48. I hope we can make progress on those important items of legislation tomorrow.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might ask the Government House Leader whether it is still the Government's intention to prorogue early in February.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, the premise of the question is of course incorrect. It is a fiction of the Hon. Member's very vivid imagination which is manifested by a lot of white hair.

PETITIONS

INCREASED EXCISE TAX ON GASOLINE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to table petitions signed by a number of individuals who oppose the recent increases in the excise tax on automobile fuel which has been levied to pay for the tax giveaways to the oil companies in the Western Accord.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to table another petition today from people in a number of communities in New Brunswick including Moncton, Richibucto, Buctouche, Salisbury and Sussex. Mr. Speaker, these people are worried about the situation at the CN shops, and the purpose of their petition is to ensure that the Government understands how important the jobs in Moncton are.

[English]

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND CORPORATION

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of my riding as well as ridings across Metropolitan Toronto who protest the sale of de Havilland to Boeing. They urge the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Government to maintain an active and effective Canadian interest in such a vital area of our economic life.

PSSA—RATE OF INTEREST

Question No. 407—Mr. Cassidy:

1. For each year since 1970, what was the average annual real rate of interest that (a) was earned (b) the actuarial valuation of the Public Service Superannuation Account (PSSA) assumed would be earned by the PSSA?

2. By what amount were the actuarial liabilities of the PSSA for past service increased as a result of changes made in the valuation assumptions on the real rate of interest that would be earned by the PSSA?

3. By what percentage of contributory payroll were employer PSSA costs for future service increased as a result of changes made in the valuation assumptions on the real rate of interest that would be earned by the PSSA?

Order Paper Questions

4. Were representatives of PSSA contributors and pensioners consulted on changes made in the valuation assumptions on the real rate of interest that would be earned by the PSSA and, if not, for what reason?

5. What are the corresponding answers to parts 1 to 4 with respect to the Canadian Forces Superannuation account and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Account?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board):

Public Service Superannuation Account (PSSA)

1. (a) Average Annual Real Rate of Interest Earnings

| Year | Per cent |
|---|---|
| 1970 | 3.9 |
| 1971 | 0.8 |
| 1972 | 0.9 |
| 1973 | -3.3 |
| 1974 | -5.8 |
| 1975 | -2.7 |
| 1976 | 1.3 |
| 1977 | -2.0 |
| 1978 | -0.6 |
| 1979 | -1.7 |
| 1980 | -2.6 |
| 1981 | -0.3 |
| 1982 | 0.8 |
| 1983 | 6.0 |
| 1984 | 7.1 |

(b) The real rates of interest assumed in the actuarial reports for the PSSA since 1970 were:

| Year | Per cent |
|---|---|
| 1972 | 4.0 |
| 1977 | 3.5 |
| 1980 | 3.0 |

2 and 3. The 1972 PSSA actuarial valuation used a 4 per cent interest assumption. Rates of future salary increases and inflation were not projected.

The 1977 PSSA valuation used assumptions of 6.5 per cent for interest, 5.5 per cent for salaries and an implicit inflation rate of 3 per cent which means that the real rate of interest was assumed to be approximately 3.5 per cent. The effect of assuming a 6.5 per cent interest rate instead of a 7 per cent interest rate (which would have retained a real rate of approximately 4 per cent) was to increase liabilities by about $843 million and current service costs by 1.5 per cent of pay.

The 1980 PSSA valuation assumed a 6.5 per cent interest rate and an implicit 3.5 per cent inflation rate (i.e., about a 3 per cent real rate of interest). The effect of assuming 6.5 per cent instead of 7 per cent for interest rates (which would have retained about a 3.5 per cent real rate of interest) was to increase liabilities by approximately $1,009 million and current service costs by 1.2 per cent of pay.

4. Representatives of PSSA contributors and pensioners were not consulted about the change in real interest rate assumptions used to value the PSS Account. The benefits were not affected by the change in these assumptions. The assumptions were changed to enable realistic cost comparisons with private sector plans. Also, pensions are not negotiable with plan members.

5. The real rates of interest earned by the Canadian Forces Superannuation Account (CFSA) and the RCMP Superannuation Account (RCMPSA) are the same as those shown for the PSSA in part 1 of this question.

The corresponding answers to parts 1 to 4 with respect to the CFSA and the RCMPSA are as follows:

(a) CFSA. The real rates of interest assumed in the actuarial reports for the CFSA since 1970 were:

|---|---|
| 1970 | 4.0per cent |
| 1975 | 3.5 per cent |

The 1970 CFSA actuarial valuation used a 4 per cent interest assumption. Rates of future salary increases and inflation were not projected.

The 1975 CFSA valuation used assumptions of 6.5 per cent for interest, 5.5 per cent for salaries and an implicit inflation rate of 3 per cent, which means the real rate of interest was assumed to be approximately 3.5 per cent. The effect of assuming a 6.5 per cent interest rate instead of a 7 per cent interest rate (which would have retained a real rate of approximately 4 per cent) was to increase actuarial liabilities by about $419 million and current service costs by 2.1 per cent of pay.

Representatives of Canadian Forces contributors and pensioners were not consulted about the change in the real interest rate assumption used to value the CFS Account. The benefits were not affected by the change in these assumptions. The assumptions were changed to enable realistic cost comparisons with private sector plans. Also, pensions are not negotiable with plan members.

(b) RCMPSA. The real rates of interest assumed in the actuarial reports for the RCMPSA since 1970 were:

|---|---|
| 1974 | 3.5 per cent |
| 1979 | 3.0 per cent |

The 1969 RCNPSA actuarial valuation used a 4 per cent interest assumption. Rates of future salary increases and inflation were not projected.

The 1974 RCMPSA valuation used assumptions of 6.5 per cent for interest, 5.5 per cent for salaries and an implicit inflation rate of 3 per cent which means the real rate of interest was assumed to be approximately 3.5 per cent. The effect of assuming a 6.5 per cent interest rate instead of a 7 per cent interest rate (which would have retained a real rate of approximately 4 per cent) was to increase liabilities by about $47 million and current service costs by 2.8 per cent of pay.

The 1979 RCMPSA valuation assumed a 6.5 per cent interest rate and an implicit 3.5 per cent inflation rate (i.e., about a 3 per cent real rate of interest). The effect of assuming 6.5 per cent instead of 7 per cent for interest rates (which would have retained about a 3.5 per cent real rate of interest) was to increase liabilities by approximately $80 million and current service costs by 2.0 per cent of pay.

Representatives of RCMPSA contributors and pensioners were not consulted about the change in economic assumptions used to value the RCMPS Account. The benefits of pensioners were not affected by the change in these assumptions. The assumptions were changed to enable realistic cost comparisons with private sector plans. Also, pensions are not negotiable with plan members.

PSSA—VALUATION ASSUMPTIONS ON REAL SALARY INCREASES

Question No. 408—Mr. Cassidy:

1. For each year since 1970, what was the average percentage increase in real salaries resulting from salary revisions that (a) Public Service Superannuation Act (PSSA) contributors received (b) the actuarial valuations of the PSS Account assumed would be received by PSSA contributors?

2. By what amount were the actuarial liabilities of the PSS Account for past service increased as a result of changes made in the valuation assumptions on the real salary increases that would be received by PSSA contributors from salary revisions?

3. By what percentage of contributory payroll were employer PSSA costs for future service increased as a result of changes made in the valuation assumptions on the real salary increases that would be received by PSSA contributors from salary revisions?

4. Were representatives of PSSA contributors and pensioners consulted on changes made in the valuation assumptions on the real salary increases that would be received by PSSA contributors as a result of salary revisions and, if not, for what reason?

5. What are the corresponding answers to parts 1 and 2 with respect to the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Act?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board):

PSSA Contributors

1. (a) Annual increase in real salaries resulting from salary revisions.

| Year | Per cent |
|---|---|
| 1970 | 4.9 |
| 1971 | 0.8 |
| 1972 | 0.7 |
| 1973 | -1.5 |
| 1974 | 0.6 |
| 1975 | 4.6 |
| 1976 | 5.2 |

| 1983 | 0.9 |
| 1984 | 0.2 |

(b) Actuarial valuations of the PSSA prior to 1977 assumed no real increase in salaries. The 1977 valuation assumed a 2.5 per cent real increase in salaries and the 1980 valuation was based on a 1.5 per cent real increase in salary assumption.

2 and 3. Changes in assumptions of real increases in salaries resulting from salary revisions produced the following changes in actuarial liabilities and current service costs:

| | Liabilities $ | Current Service Costs (% of pay) |
|---|---|---|
| 1977 valuation | 1102 million | 2.8 |
| 1980 valuation | - 759 million | -1.4 |

4. Representatives of PSSA contributors and pensioners were not consulted about the change in real increases in salary assumptions used to value the PSS Account. The benefits were not affected by the change in these assumptions. The assumptions were changed to enable realistic cost comparisons with private sector plans. ## INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Hnatyshyn that Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Speaker: When the House rose at one o'clock there were five minutes remaining in the question and comment period following the speech of the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner). I take it the Hon. Member for London East (Mr. Jepson) was in the middle of a comment. Is that right? No, he had finished. Therefore, we proceed to the reply by the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I will reply briefly to the comments made by the Hon. Member for London East (Mr. Jepson). As I recall, he took exception to my reference to certain measures in Bill C-84 as being sneaky in nature. I was of course speaking about the partial deindexation of our tax system. I was pointing out that what begins as a reasonable tax bite in 1985 grows to a pretty significant chunk in 1986; going from about $80 million to $635 million. By 1990 it becomes not a tax bite but a huge tax grab of some $4.5 billion.

I have to be honest with the Hon. Member. I was a little reluctant to use the term "sneaky". However, it was difficult to find another term quite as appropriate. It seems to me that if the Government wanted to be very forthright and not open itself to charges of being sneaky or devious, then it should have said to Parliament that the Government needs additional revenue in 1985 and it was going to ask for a 3 per cent increase. Parliament could have dealt with it on the basis of what the needs were and then granted the money. We could have then looked at the situation in 1986 and the Government could have come back with another 3 per cent or 4 per cent increase, whatever was required, and it could have justified it to Parliament. Instead, the Government chose to remove from our tax system one of the most important reform measures that I think has ever been introduced into the tax system. It is a means whereby we protect taxpayers against inflation so that Governments cannot live off the avails of inflation, as I said in my remarks.

In order for the Government to get more money it has to be forthright and deal with it on a year-to-year basis. I did not like to use that word, as I said. I checked with the Speaker and you will recall that I looked at you quizzically, wondering whether "sneaky" was a parliamentary term. I did not see a negative shake of the head from you, and you and I have very good communication, having served together since 1968. so I was bold enough to carry on and use the word "sneaky". I must say that it is not a favourite word of mine and I was searching for some way to describe the scrapping of one of the most important reform measures in our tax system. I guess I fell a little bit below the line of propriety in calling it sneaky, but I really find it difficult to come to any other conclusion.

Mr. Jepson: Mr. Speaker, while I appreciate the Hon. Member's penance here before the House, I think I counted "sneaky" about 20 times in his speech. Methinks thou doth protest too much.

I think it is clear that the people of Canada will not be fooled by this constant repetition of the word "sneaky" in an attempt to erode the credibility of a Government which has been very forthright in bringing forth positive economic measures for the country which have resulted in unprecedented growth in employment, in a 3 per cent drop in interest rates, in mortgage rates coming down, in new housing starts going up by a significant 26 per cent, in an increase in consumer spending, and in a spirit of real economic confidence in the business community. We are seeing a revival in the country which is unprecedented in the last 20 years. I must confess that I do not understand why we do not have the co-operation of the Liberal Party when we bring such progressive measures before the House.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I certainly must agree entirely with the Hon. Member for London East that the credibility of the Government is on the decline. As a matter of fact, I think it is more than on the decline, I think it is now into a free fall. I do not know what sort of radical measures the Prime Minister can take—

Mr. Jepson: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Gentlemen, the period for questions and comments is now finished, but I will recognize the Hon. Member on a point of order.

Mr. Jepson: Mr. Speaker, I certainly did not say that the credibility of the Government was in decline.

Mr. de Jong: He didn't have to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period for questions and comments is now terminated. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns) on debate.

Mr. Pat Binns (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to speak on third reading of Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act as well as provisions in other Bills including the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Having mentioned unemployment insurance, Mr. Speaker, I will take just a moment to mention that when the budget papers were submitted to the House by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) he made way for two very important provisions which reflect on the kinds of initiatives the Government is undertaking with Bill C-84.

With regard to unemployment insurance, the variable entrance requirement would have meant that in June of 1985 all workers in Canada would have had to have a minimum of 14 insurable weeks before being able to file an unemployment insurance claim. Of course, that was established under the former Government. Our Government undertook to review that timetable and has, in fact, set the deadline back to the end of December, 1986. That, of course, was a recognition that all areas of the country have not experienced full economic recovery. In my own area in Atlantic Canada, in particular, many good developments have taken place and there is a move toward strong economic development, but many people have still not been able to obtain more than 10 weeks of work.

In the meantime the Government established the Forget Commission on Unemployment Insurance. I am pleased to say that it has been travelling across the country to hear the views of Canadians. In the meantime, another initiative with regard to unemployment insurance which is being carried out by the Government is that the premium rates for employers and employees will remain constant in 1986 even though they were subject to change this year by the legislation of the former Government.

The Bill itself does represent a substantial component of the Government's program of economic renewal for Canadians. The Bill will ensure that economic growth is powered primarily by new initiatives in the private sector. Those kinds of initiatives will be supported, wherever possible, by the Government.

The Bill undertakes a number of amendments which provide important measures to ensure that our economy gets up and is moving in the way in which all Canadians would like to see. One of the most important measures is the lifetime $500,000 capital gains tax exemption provision. There is also a provision with regard to capital tax on larger financial institutions to ensure that large companies in the country pay adequate tax. There are modifications to the rules governing investment in small business by pension and other retirement income plans, on which I will elaborate more in a few moments. There are rules preventing taxpayers from splitting income among family members to reduce tax, again ensuring that the taxpayers of Canada all pay their fair share. There are changes to Revenue Canada's powers to audit and examine taxpayers' books and records, including its powers of search and seizure. These measures touch on a wide variety of issues including tax fairness, fiscal responsibility, taxpayers' rights, and efficiency of Government programs.

I think that the $500,000 personal lifetime capital gains tax exemption is perhaps the most important and most significant measure in this Bill, simply because it sets the direction and character of the kind of tax system which the Canadian Government wants to encourage. It, of course, recognizes that our economy can be dynamic and productive when the successes of individual Canadians are rewarded.

It is an especially positive step with regard to Canadian farmers because it enables them to reap immediate benefits. Commencing in 1985, the full $500,000 capital gains tax exemption becomes immediately available when a farmer sells qualified farm property. Part of the objective of this particular provision is, of course, to spur investment interest in small and medium-sized businesses in Canada. It is the feeling of the Government that these measures will create new investment income because people have been able to realize those capital gains and are able to turn them into equity in new businesses.

Even in this year significant steps will take place with regard to that capital gains provision. In 1985, the exemption will have a cumulative limit of $20,000 in capital gains. That will increase to $50,000 in 1986, $100,000 in 1987, $200,000 in 1988, $300,000 in 1989, and $500,000 in 1990 and subsequent taxation years.

Another important tool in economic recovery in this Bill, Mr. Speaker, especially as it relates to some of the more disadvantaged areas of the country, is the special investment tax credit. The fact that an investment tax credit of 50 per cent exists is encouraging new businesses to locate in my own area. I can think of companies that have located in our area specifically because that tax incentive is in place. I hate to point out individual companies, but one success story is that of a company called Wevea Canada which is now manufacturing harvester belts in Brudenell, P.E.I. That company exports throughout North America and around the world. I am sure that the 50 per cent investment tax credit had something to do with that location. This legislation extends this provision for another year. I am hopeful that other companies will take advantage of that extension in order to reap the tax benefits offered by this particular provision.

The Bill deals not only with economic initiatives, Mr. Speaker, but has taken into account many social needs as well. It is important to recognize at least some of the inequities that this Bill overcomes. The Income Tax Act currently allows a special deduction to be claimed by disabled persons, but this applies only to those persons who are blind or confined to a bed or wheelchair.

• (1520)

As a result of the proposed changes in the Bill, the definition of disability is broadened to include many severely disabled people in the country who are not necessarily confined to a bed or wheelchair. I believe that this is an important initiative because it is estimated that some 185,000 Canadians will benefit from these expanded provisions in this amendment.

The Government's attempt to attract investment income for small business is also obvious in the changes to the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. The objective of the measure is to allow some $2 billion in funds to be injected into the Canadian economy. Individuals will be allowed to withdraw their funds tax free and use that money to stimulate economic growth in the country.

At the time of the Budget some $2 billion had accumulated in RHOSPs and the availability of these funds to Canadians on a tax-free basis, coupled with other incentives in the Budget, represent a very large pool of funds that can be used to support entrepreneurial job-creating investments and the purchase of consumer goods. The Government is considering what pools of capital are available in the country to be invested and thereby stimulate the economy and create jobs.

The Government has certainly recognized in the Bill that there are those in the business and agriculture sector who continue to face economic difficulties. It is for that reason that the small business bond development program has been extended for two years. That program has provided reduced interest rates for farmers and small businesses in financial difficulty, and the Bill will simply ensure that its provisions can still be utilized for the next two years. In fact, Bill C-84 introduces measures which will allow taxpayers who have borrowed under the program either to refinance existing loans or to obtain new loans at any time before 1988, when the borrowers are in financial difficulty.

In addition to the benefits to social programs and economic activity, the Bill also provides new provisions for charities. The legislation contains two measures of relevance to registered charities. The first measure permits charities, in 1985 and subsequent taxation years, to engage in non-partisan political activities that are ancillary or incidental to their primary charitable purposes or activities. Currently, the Income Tax Act requires a charitable foundation to be constituted and operated exclusively for charitable purposes and requires all resources of a charitable organization to be devoted to charitable activities carried on by the organization itself. The difficulty is that the common law meaning of charitable purposes or activities has not included political activities. Therefore, a registered charity which engages in such activities could risk losing its tax exempt status.

However, the amendment recognizes that it is appropriate for a charity to use its resources within defined limits for ancillary and incidental political activities in support of its charitable goals. This means that non-partisan political activity in support of the charity's organizational goals is acceptable and recognized in the Bill.

Another major consideration in the Bill is the change with regard to child benefits in the country. The child tax credit will rise by $70 in the 1986 tax year and $35 in each of the tax years 1987 and 1988. The income threshold above which the child tax credit is phased out will be reduced to $23,500 from $26,330. The child tax exemption for children under 18 will be reduced from $710 per child to $560 in 1987; $470 in 1988, and will equal the annual value of family allowance payments in subsequent years. These child tax benefit changes are another social consideration which the Government has included in this Bill.

All of these provisions address a fundamental problem which the Government inherited when it came to office. It is that the country is faced with a substantial deficit which, in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1985, reached $37 billion. The country spent $101 billion providing services and support to Canadians yet brought in revenues of only $64 billion. Not only is the $37 billion deficit unbelievable, it is escalating very quickly. In fact, I believe that the accumulated deficit as of March 31, 1985, reached $190 billion in magnitude. As was pointed out by an Hon. Member earlier today, the country will simply go bankrupt if this situation continues.

I believe the Government has taken the responsible course of action and attempted to reduce expenditures wherever possible while cutting back on government services which have been duplicated or been found unnecessary, as well as increase the cost of some fees where warranted. I believe these steps allow the Government to make a balanced attempt to bring the deficit under control. If we do not accomplish that goal, we will hear economic horror stories that the country has never before experienced.

It is unbelievable to most Canadians that a third of all tax dollars raised last year went to pay interest on the debt. Of course, that debt is a result of the wild expenditures of a Government that thought it could never run out of tax dollars. Now we are suffering the economic consequence of that philosophy.

Many would suggest that the fact our dollar is not as strong as we would like is due to our large deficit. The Government's attempts at bringing the deficit under control is doing much to stabilize the value of the dollar, and I believe the Minister of Finance will have to continue that course of action.

One of my concerns as a Member of Parliament from Atlantic Canada is that the system used for deficit control is fair to everyone. We have special needs in Atlantic Canada, as do other regions of the country. This means that we must ensure that all new provisions are fair.

• (1530)

That is why I mentioned earlier that I was pleased to see the Forget Commission looking at the unemployment insurance system. If and when changes are made to that system, hopefully they will be fair to Atlantic Canada and other areas with high unemployment. I am pleased that the Government is taking its time to ensure that needless programs are not put in place and that the correct thing is done for all Canada.

It is obvious that I can support the provisions of Bill C-84. It places us on the right course, on the track to economic recovery. I am sure all Hon. Members of the House will want to join the Government in supporting it.

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Speaker, by way of a comment, I commend the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns) for his timely and well placed comments. I should like to add a few words in respect of the capital gains tax exemption. Bill C-84 includes the $500,000 capital gains exemption. I am very pleased that this day has come and that this capital gains tax provision will come to its final vote. It has been long awaited in the prairie agricultural community. However, I am disappointed that the Opposition, particularly the New Democratic Party, has attempted for as long as it has to delay passage of this capital gains tax provision. It is lamentable because the delay has added further uncertainty to the prairie agricultural community. Many accountants and tax lawyers have quite rightly had to tell elderly, retiring farmers to hold off because the Bill had not been passed. Despite assurances that it would be retroactive to January 1, 1985, because of the stalling tactics of the Opposition, these elderly farmers were very concerned and have in fact held off making major decisions.

It is with a great sense of pride and accomplishment today that we approach the final vote on this measure to bring the capital gains tax relief of $500,000 to prairie agriculture. It is also a great day for the small business community. This capital gains tax exemption is an act of confidence and of consideration by the Government for the small business people of Canada. I should like to add my further support to it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Would the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns) like to comment on the Hon. Member's comments?

Mr. Binns: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course the capital gains provision is one of the most important aspects of the particular Bill. It is something for which the farm community in Canada has been looking for a long time. It came as a surprise to many people in the business community that the capital gains provisions was not only provided for the farm community but in fact was extended to the business sectors of the country. That will have the kind of economic stimulus which the Government thinks Canadians want to see. It will give them an opportunity to see their money reinvested in new initiatives which will create work for Canadians. In fact, that is what the Government has been able to achieve in the last number of months. I think we have had something like 471,000 new jobs created since the Government took office.

In the Province of Prince Edward Island, the labour force last July reached an all-time record level with something like 67,000 people working in our economy out of the total population of soughly 125,000. More people have been drawn into the labour market. Employment has been at an all-time high level. Naturally we are still concerned about some of the high unemployment that still exists and will continue to work hard to see that we tackle existing problems. If the Government keeps on with the kinds of initiatives displayed in Bill C-84, we will see a rosier future.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, you are the finest man to have ever occupied the chair in this institution; I wanted to put that on record. I was somewhat surprised that the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns) rose in his place today to defend the tax changes being proposed by the Government. Normally that Hon. Member is one who is clear-headed, fairly intelligent, fairly representative of his region and one who is normally concerned. Perhaps the kind of Atlantic Canada in which he lives is radically different from the one in which I live, but I want to ask him how many people he knows who are jumping up and down in the streets, applauding the $500,000 capital gains provision, which the average citizen in Atlantic Canada cannot even begin to contemplate. It is a wonderful thing if one has millions to trade in the real estate market, in diamonds, in furs or in condominiums. I do not know how many farmers in Prince Edward Island—indeed, tobacco farmers in the Hon. Member's riding—are playing the stock-market or are trading in condominiums, diamonds or furs these days.

Does the Hon. Member agree with a tax regime which will mean, over five years, a 36 per cent increase for those earning $15,000 per year, which is the average in his riding and mine; which will mean a 4 per cent increase for those earning $100,000 per year, which is unheard of in his riding and mine; and which will mean a 2 per cent increase for those earning $200,000 per year, which is what our lucky cousins make on the mainland once in a while, in Montreal or Toronto? For those earning $200,000 per year it will mean a 2 per cent increase in taxes over five years, whereas for those earning $15,000 per year, the kind of people the Hon. Member and I know, the ones who sent us here, it will mean a 36 per cent increase in taxes over that period of time. Did I hear the Hon. Member correctly? Perhaps I did not. This is his chance to redeem himself, to beg forgiveness and to clarify the record.

Did I hear him correctly when he said that the budget measure would be good for the people of Atlantic Canada? Did I hear him correctly when he said that this was the kind of fair measure he would support and propose for the people of Atlantic Canada? Did I hear him correctly when he said that he represented a riding in Atlantic Canada? Could it be that the ivory tower and the splendour of the House of Commons has confused the Hon. Member? Could it be that the splendour, the carpet and the rich ornaments surrounding us in this place, have changed his mind and made him forget the reality of the people who live by the sea and off the land in Atlantic Canada? Could that be so?

Mr. Binns: Mr. Speaker, it comes as a surprise to me that the Hon. Member from Newfoundland has not recongnized that many of his own constituents have worked hard over the years and have realized capital gains.

Mr. Tobin: You live in a different world from the one in which I live.

Mr. McDermid: Everybody does.

Mr. Binns: He suggested that no people in Newfoundland or in Prince Edward Island have in fact been able to gain assets such as a farm or a business operation, at which they have worked hard, day in and day out, over the last 20 years to 50 years. Our Government has simply recognized those people so that they can take their life savings or investments and realize a capital gain. Hopefully that money will then be reinvested in businesses for their sons and daughters. That is the kind of initiative which will get the country going again. If the Government simply takes away all the tax dollars from those people who have realized these gains, it will have simply done nothing to reinvest money in Newfoundland and in Prince Edward Island.

I am disappointed. I thought the Hon. Member recognized the kinds of advantages this provision will provide for his constituents. Perhaps Hon. Members on this side of the House will have to send some material to his constituents pointing out the advantages of this provision, because obviously he has not recognized them.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): If there are no further questions or comments, we will continue with debate.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I feel very honoured to speak on Bill C-84. However, I feel a responsibility as the Member of Parliament for York West to rise in my place and address what is basically a series of inequities. It struck me, as it struck my other colleagues, as very odd for a Member from Atlantic Canada, the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns), to rise in his place and say the things he did. However, I think that has been par for the course, throughout the debates that we have been listening to today. Basically there are two sides to this financial equation that we find, not only in Bill C-84 but in other pieces of legislation such as Bill

C-80 and other documents flowing from the Budget that was introduced by the Finance Minister back in May.

● (1540)

Between now and 1990, nearly $37 billion in additional taxes will be collected. It is the largest single tax increase in the history of this country hitting the working and middle-class Canadians, those who can least afford another increase in their taxes. On the other side of the financial equation is that this legislation is allowing the wealthy to get wealthier, and the larger corporations to get even larger through tax gifts in the way of tax exemptions.

In the budgetary measures, for instance, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) together with the Conservative Government will allow $8.4 billion to go to oil companies before the end of the decade, starting with $124 million this year and ending up in 1990 with more than $2.5 billion. Couple that with the capital gains exemption that was briefly discussed only moments before. By 1990 this will amount to a $4.8 billion gift without any guarantee.

The Hon. Member for Cardigan said that somehow, this exemption is going to be reinvested into the economy, that smaller and medium-sized businesses and companies will prosper from that investment. He knows, and Canadians know that that is simply not true. There are no guarantees in the legislation that if someone shows a capital gain that that money will once again be channelled back into Canada, back into a Canadian company, a Canadian community. The Member for Cardigan and his colleagues did not mention that if someone shows a capital gains increase of some $200,000 there is nothing stopping that person or that corporation from going south of the border and investing in a Florida condominium or in European art. If they do that and money flows out of the country, how is it going to help the riding of the Hon. Member for Cardigan in Atlantic Canada, or those in British Columbia or in my Province of Ontario?

The other interesting aspect that this Government failed to tell Canadians is that with respect to the capital gains exemption, 63 per cent of the benefits from such a piece of legislation go to 4 per cent of Canadians. Yet we have this Government with the temerity to that it will benefit the entire country, that this is going to benefit thousands upon thousands of Canadians. If we look at past statistics, Mr. Speaker, what they are really talking about is 4 per cent of the Canadian population. How more specific, how more elitist can a Government become?

By looking very quickly at the facts and the figures, if you add the gift to the oil corporations and companies and you add the capital gains exemptions, it totals over $13 billion in gifts to the wealthier element of Canadian society. It is no wonder then that the Government is making this deficit up by increasing the taxes to over $37 billion by the end of the decade; $11 billion to come directly from the deindexation of personal tax exemptions, as well as removing the $50 tax credit that was available to every single Canadian. That is a shameful movement.

When you have a tax grab coupled with tax incentives for the rich, Mr. Speaker, I ask you, and Canadians are beginning to ask this Government, is that financial equation fair? Of course, you cannot say that it is fair or equitable because if you look at the other provisions you see very simply and very practically the unfairness of the tax measures and the direction that this Government says is an economic recovery.

It was mentioned by my colleague only a few moments ago in terms of the different tax ratios to various elements in our society that if you earn $15,000, by 1990 you will pay 36 per cent more tax. If you earn $30,000, you will pay 15 per cent more tax. If you earn $100,000, you will face a 4 per cent increase. If you are lucky enough to earn $200,000 or more, your increase is limited to 2 per cent. Is that fair, Mr. Speaker? Is it equitable that those individuals earning over $200,000 will face a miniscule increase while the earner with a family who is bringing home $15,000 is being told by this Government: "Listen, Mr. Joe Smith, you will have to salt away 36 per cent more tax by 1990"? Is that fair? Are Canadians going to accept that? I think not.

Look also at partial deindexation of the family allowances that was passed only yesterday, despite opposition from coast to coast and despite vocal opposition from Parties in the House of Commons. By the year 1990 this will amount to $400 million. The Government is removing $400 million from families which rely on that monthly cheque which is a social contract that they have with this country. Look at the pettiness. It is prepared to give the oil corporations $8.4 billion, and yet it moves in the family allowances deindexation area. How shameful. It could have at least given the oil companies only $8 billion and not deindex the family allowance.

We can look at the attempt at deindexation of the senior citizens' pensions as well. The Member across the aisle is upset, and I would be upset too to listen to the truth and see the facts as they are, Mr. Speaker. Our senior citizens were asked to take less money. The Member for Cardigan said that somehow we have to get the deficit under control. No one disagrees with managing our affairs in a proper way. What Canadians are not accepting and do not accept is the fact that some people are paying more of the share. The working class, the disadvantaged and the middle class are being asked to pay for those differences rather than their rich friends, their rich cousins, the rich corporations, the rich multinationals. All Canadians, whether they be poor or middle class, are prepared to shoulder the weight and do what they can in their own areas to help the Canadian economy. What they do not accept is being asked to do more than the wealthier elements in our society. That is unacceptable.

Look at the elimination of the RHOSP, a program that allowed families, particularly the younger families in our country, to salt away a few dollars each year in the hopes of buying that dream home. Well, the Tories took that away. Somehow they said: "No, you can't have those moneys, we have to eliminate the program so you can reinvest into the Canadian economy". Well, you just cannot have it both ways. You cannot expect the people to buy the homes and the consumer products and then take away a program that would allow younger couples to afford a home. This legislation is drawing away consumer power from Canadians. It is taking away money from those who can least afford to give it up and is making their pockets much emptier while making wealthier pockets fuller. This is helping to widen the gap between rich and poor, between haves and have-nots.

● (1550)

Over the Christmas break, results of an interesting study undertaken by Maclean's in co-operation with Decima Research were published. One of the major findings in that national study was the fact that a significant number of Canadians are growing more concerned about the differences between the rich and the poor. Simultaneously, they are concerned that there is coming into being a well defined stratification of different socio-economic classes. They are equally concerned that the Conservative Government cannot bridge that gap. The Conservative Government is seen as the one that is widening the gap and playing to its special constituencies. I would suggest that in the years to come, the perception highlighted by that study will be dominating discussion in the House.

In the past, we may have had our differences when it came to provincial issues, regional issues and even linguistic issues. However, what we have not seen and what we should not see in the future is a debate based upon the classification of economic wealth. We seen in other parts of the globe well defined class struggles and Canadians fear that this is beginning to take hold in Canada. One can see why that fear is beginning to be felt by Canadian families. That reason can be shown by the examples I outlined a few moments ago.

If we begin to increase the taxes paid by a family earning $15,000 per year by 36 per cent and the taxes of a family earning $200,000 per year or more by only 2 per cent, of course there will be a backlash. Of course there will be protests from those earning $15,000 annually who will not be able to take it any more and will not be able to shoulder the Government's deficit reduction plans by themselves. We need the help of all Canadians to shoulder the weight of the Government's economic renewal, if that is in fact what it is doing, and I think it is not.

The Government Party promised Canadian prosperity and economic renewal. What Canadians forgot to ask is economic prosperity for whom. Where are the provisions in this legislation that indicate that we as the Parliament of Canada are honestly looking at the interests of all Canadians and of all regions? We cannot say that we are.

We could go to any constituency and ask the senior citizens what they thought was fair about the attempt at deindexing their pensions. We could ask any individual earning $15,000 per year whether he thinks it is fair that he should shoulder an increase in tax payments of almost 40 per cent. We could ask any Canadian mother who is receiving a monthly cheque whether or not she would like to continue to receive the entire amount. We could ask any Canadian family if it should be prepared to pay more than its own fair share and more than the energy corporations that are receiving $8.4 billion bonanzas are paying. The answers are very obvious.

We cannot talk of equity and fairness when talking in terms of the numbers to which I have referred. That is the message Canadians are sending the Government. That is why we saw a serious slippage in the Government's popularity in the latest polls. That was not surprising.

Government Members went across the country, constituency to constituency, region to region, promising every interest group its fair shake during the election campaign. Of course, members of the middle and working classes decided to give the Conservatives a try. However, what has been delivered to them? What are they faced with? They are faced with inequity. They are faced with a Conservative Government which is historically preoccupied with the exact constituency to which this piece of legislation delivers. This is proving the old saying that Tory times are tough times. They are not tough times for the multinationals or for those who can afford to benefit from the capital gains tax exemption but for the majority of average working Canadians who put in eight-hour days and ask themselves if they are going to make it this month.

There is going to be a tremendous revolt in this country. I am not trying to sound alarmist. I am simply trying to follow the trends that are emerging. There is going to be a tremendous revolt if the Government continues in the economic direction it is taking because it is a perverse direction. It is a direction that alienates and ignores the majority of average working Canadians. The Government points out that 400,000 jobs have been created since it took office. I would like to see the real statistics. The bulk of those jobs are part-time jobs, jobs without any benefits and short-term rather than long-term jobs.

The real problem with the Government and with this piece of legislation is that average Canadians perceive themselves as being hoodwinked. If the Government were to say that we are in tough times and that in the next five to six years, we will all have to make sacrifices and work together in order to secure a healthy and prosperous future, that would be fine. That would be acceptable not only by the Government but by opposition Members whose role it is to ensure effective and proper Government. That is a language that Canadians would not only understand but would be prepared to accept. However, they are not prepared to accept a message from the Government indicating that the poor, working and middle classes are going to be taxed more and that those who already have a lot are going to get more. That is not a partnership. That is not collective action. That is an elitist, regressive and historically Conservative approach to the economic woes of Canada. It is not an approach that will make things better.

The Government may try to cover up in the short term but I assure the Government that that is not a long-term solution and it is not a solution that bodes well for the socio-economic forces in Canada. If the Government continues to move in this direction, it will fuel the fire of unfairness. There will be more class struggles, something that we have been able to proudly ignore while seeing on television these class struggles occurring in other parts of the world, including Great Britain. I fear that if the Government is given more latitude through this kind of legislation, we will not only see class struggles on our television sets but we will see them very clearly and vividly on our own Canadian streets.

You are indicating that my time is up, Mr. Speaker. Despite its absolute majority which can defeat any motion or win any vote, the Government should be prepared to pay attention to the views of Canadians who are saying that this piece of legislation and others are unfair and inequitable and they will not tolerate them.

• (1600)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Edmonton East (Mr. Lesick).

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, I have been listening to the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) go on and on and on with his gloom of doom and doom of gloom. I sometimes cannot believe everything I hear because it is no different from what we are saying. If the Hon. Member had listened carefully to the speech of the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns), he would have heard him outline very carefully the purposes of Bill C-84. He set out the advantages to the country and how we have to share the goodness while shouldering the problems which we have. There is equity in this measure.

With respect to the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption, it is a measure primarily for the small and medium-sized businessman. In some cases it is for the ordinary working man who manages to buy a second home and who makes a little money after he sells it. Would the Hon. Member deprive an ordinary working man of that capital gain? He spoke of some people going to the United States. Yet, he has not mentioned one person who supposedly received this mythical amount in capital gains.

He mentioned that the oil companies were receiving all of this money. They are just getting back the money which his Party took away as a result of the National Energy Program. We have simply righted a wrong. Is the Hon. Member aware that when the oil companies were doing well so were tens of thousands of people in Alberta, Ontario and Quebec? They were successful. The oil companies made money and they paid taxes. Does the Hon. Member know that after the National Energy Program was introduced some 25 per cent of businesses went bankrupt in one small city with a population of 30,000? Does the Hon. Member understand what that meant? It meant alcoholism, family break-ups, unemployment, and problems of all sorts. The Hon. Member said that we should not give them money. We all shared in this. However, the Hon. Member has to realize that.

Over the 18 years the Liberals Party was in power the economy came to a stumbling and bumbling halt. In 1985, the debt per person per year was $1,000. That is for every person in the country. In 1968 it was only $75. I ask the Hon. Member: Who will pay for that?

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Edmonton East (Mr. Lesick) says that I bring him doom and gloom. The central premise of my argument comes from a Tory polling firm, Decima Research, which has indicated there is a serious concern in the country in that some 35 per cent of Canadians are worried about the gulf which has been created between the rich and poor since the Conservative Government came to power. They are concerned that there is a stratification of a class system taking place in the country. They are concerned that the Government will not be able to bridge that gulf, or that it will not have the courage or determination to do so. Those are the concerns of Canadians. They are the concerns of individuals who may have voted for the Hon. Member from Alberta, for myself, and other Members of the House. I would like to ask the Hon. Member why his Government refuses to pay attention not necessarily to him, or any other Member in the House, but to the concerns of Canadians. If he accepts that premise, then he ought to accept the issues and difficulties which we are articulating with some degree of responsibility on behalf of our constituents.

The Hon. Member also mentioned that the capital gains tax exemption would be enjoyed by every average working Canadian. In that case I would like to ask him why the statistics with respect to capital gains over the last five years show that nearly 65 per cent of those gains are attributable to only 4 per cent of the population. Why was it not attributable to 50 per cent, 70 per cent, or even 85 per cent? If that were the case, then I might give him some credit—I would not have said the things which I said.

The Hon. Member points out that oil companies have paid their taxes, have worked hard and are now benefiting. Is he suggesting that other working Canadians have not paid their taxes?

Mr. McDermid: They were not taxed in the same way.

Mr. Marchi: What members of the Conservative Party are really saying is: "Look, we are now giving a break to the oil companies". Canadians are paying for that break because the whole tax grid is completely unfair.

Mr. McDermid: You don't know what you're talking about.

Mr. Marchi: If one considers a family which earns $50,000, then it is unfair. It is gross and perverse for that family to pay 35 per cent more tax when the rich in society are getting away with paying only 2 per cent.

I might have knocked over a glass of water, and Hon. Members might be laughing, but Canadians are not laughing because those are the facts. The facts show that the situation is unfair and inequitable. Whether in 1987, 1988 or 1989, this Government will pay the consequences of not listening to the aspirations of Canadians. We will then see who will be laughing.

Mrs. Sparrow: Mr. Speaker, I believe the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) mentioned in his opening remarks the handing over of some $8 billion to the oil companies.

Mr. McDermid: What a crock!

Mrs. Sparrow: I wish to set the story straight. We did not hand the oil companies $8 billion. It seems to me that in about 1980 or 1981 the Government of the day brought in the National Energy Program which instituted a form of double taxation. It imposed a well-head tax called the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax which, in effect, taxed oil and gas companies, resource companies, from 16 per cent down to 12 per cent on gross revenues. Then, this amount in taxation was not allowed to be deducted when the corporations computed their income tax returns. In effect, it was a form of double taxation.

During the three years following 1980, I wish to point out to the Hon. Member that the unemployment situation in Alberta went after 3 per cent to 13.5 per cent. We lost drilling rigs. We lost people who either went south of the border, to other countries, or who simply went belly-up. I wish to tell the Hon. Member that we can actually prove that 90,000 jobs were lost in the Province of Ontario due to the National Energy Program. Mr. Speaker, coming from that good province of Alberta, you are well aware of that point. We did not hand the oil companies $8 billion. What we did is correct an injustice. We have taken national reconciliation upon ourselves. We have developed economic renewal. As a result of the new energy policies brought in by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) some 25,000 jobs have been created in the energy sector. There will be spin-off jobs created for people living in Ontario and Quebec. Every automobile we buy comes from either Oshawa or Windsor. We buy cable and steel pipe from Hamilton.

I just wanted to correct what the Hon. Member for York West had to say. We have put people back to work. We have brought national reconciliation to the country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I have every respect for the Hon. Member for Calgary South (Mrs. Sparrow). However, I just cannot believe that she can rise in her place and say that this Government has brought about national reconciliation.

Mrs. Sparrow: You bet we have!

Mr. Marchi: Where and when? Members of the Conservative Government should take a hard look at the message being sent out by Canadians.

Mr. McDermid: Take a look at the Atlantic Accord and the Western Accord.

Mr. Marchi: They can have special caucus meetings every single weekend for the next year to see how to patch up their deficiencies. It is a crock for Hon. Members to tell me and this House that they are under way with national reconciliation and economic renewal.

I would like Members opposite to address the workers, the poor, the families, women and senior citizens, and ask them if they think this country is under a form of economic renewal and reconciliation.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

INCOME TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Finance) that Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, I was not here four years ago but I can tell you, the Member points to himself and says: "I was"—

Mr. McDermid: Yes.

Mr. Rodriguez: I want to tell you, Sir, without reading Hansard for the last four years, that he made speeches just like I heard from the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi). I am positive he made speeches like that.

It is six of one and half a dozen of the other. We call them the Bobbsey Twins of Bay Street but I think they are Siamese twins. Here the Tories are the Government and they do exactly the same thing that the Liberals did when they held Government.

Mr. Johnston: Come on, John.

Mr. Rodriguez: I heard the Member for York West, but am I hearing correctly in this place? Is something wrong? I listened to debate of report stage of Bill C-84. The Liberals brought in an amendment that said the $500,000 lifetime capital gain should only apply if you earned it with Canadian speculation, that is, if you bought a Canadian racehorse or the Group of Seven paintings and made profits on Canadian condominiums. The Government made this beautiful argument that you have to Canadianize profits. That is a new one on the national list. The Member for York West said just a little while ago that the capital gains tax is a give-away to the wealthy and it contributes to developing class structures. He is absolutely right.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I realize that I have a moment to ask a question subsequently, but what the Member said is a complete and utter distortion on the amendment which was brought into this House.

Mr. Fulton: That is a fact.

Mr. Johnston: Which, incidentally, allows—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

Mr. Johnston: I would point out to the Hon. Member that our Party brought—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I am sure the Hon. Member will have an opportunity during the questions and comments period to correct the Hon. Member. The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) has the floor.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, listen to the sensitivity. Tommy Douglas, former Leader of this Party, said whenever you see a pack of coyotes, you always know when you hit one because they start yowling and howling.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): We do not expect you to understand the amendment.

Mr. Rodriguez: I did not think we had pay dirt on that one. The Hon. Member's intervention was as clear on this amendment on capital gains as his position was on free trade.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: I want to make my intervention and comments on Bill C-84. You know that I always try to make my comments relevant to the issue at hand, Mr. Speaker. I have discovered over the time I have been here that a Budget portrays the priorities and the philosophies of a Government. It has always been thus. What does the Government consider important? Where does the Government see the country going? What is the Government trying to achieve?

We went through the campaign of 1984. We heard it all. We all tuned in to hidden Crop detectors. We know three quarters was "b.s.". Most of it was "b.s.", Brian's statements. We understand that and the people understand it. We heard it from Liberals before. We were going to have participatory democracy and the just society. We heard about how the land was strong and that Liberals were there to try to raise the class differences to create a more egalitarian society.

The Tories did not go that far. They have no commitment to egalitarianism. We know where the Tories stand.

Mr. Gormley: You are talking through your hat.

Mr. Rodriguez: How can a Government bring in $500,000 capital gains give-away—statistics show that 4 per cent take advantage of it—and claim that creates jobs? There is no evidence that a capital gain ever created a job. How can the Government tell Canadians that we have to cut the deficit because ordinary folks are living off the hog of the land? We have to pay at the pump, we have to pay at the store and even when you pay for pet food the Government is nailing you. Everybody knows sales and gas taxes are the most regressive taxes in any society. They are no respectors of income. Everybody pays whether they can afford it or not.

I accuse this Tory Government of taxing the poor while giving the rich generous tax breaks and the $500,000 capital gains exemption. We are now the only industrialized country in the western world that does not have a capital gains tax. Every industrialized country in the western world has some form of capital gains. I challenge the Tories to show evidence which I am prepared to accept if they can prove that by allowing capital gains it creates employment. There is no evidence of that whatever, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McDermid: Do you deny it to the farmers?

Mr. Rodriguez: Our position has always been, and it is consistent, excepting the farmers. They have been excepted.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: That has been our position. We dragged the Tories kicking and screaming into the 20th century on that issue and now they want to take credit for it. I have never seen anything so bold faced in my life. First we have the spectacle of Liberals stealing good NDP policy, and putting it into legislation and calling it their own. Now, the tories are starting to do it. At least give credit, for heaven's sake.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: Our position has been that the captial gains tax does more to exacerbate class distinctions in Canada. It does not create employment. We said that only those who are wealthy can afford to take advantage of the capital gains.

It seems to me to be unfair. I have said before in the House that a tax system ought to be progressive, fair and be distributive in its nature. Capital gains is indefensible absolutely. At the same time the Government is chiselling the children and women out of the family allowance. Here we have 31 cents a month. The Government is chiselling the children of Canada. What we have is one cent a day per child.

The Tories attempted to chisel senior citizens out of their full indexation. What happened? They found out that that did not wash, and they backed away. The National Council on Welfare noted in "Giving and Taking: The May Budget and the Poor" that in 1982 while those earning $50,000 and over accounted for only 18 per cent of total tax filers, they accounted for 63 per cent of the total benefits accruing under the capital gains provisions. Those are not the ordinary Canadians most of us represent who are in Atlantic Canada, in northern Ontario, Manitoba, northern B.C. and in the prairie provinces. Those are not the ordinary Canadians. Some of these people have earned over $50,000 and paid no income tax at all.

What about the corporations? The other day I toured the Falconbridge mines. They just bought the Kidd Creek mines for $650 million. The President, Bill James, was boasting that Falconbridge has not paid a penny of federal or provincial income tax in the last three years. He was proud as punch to tell me that. Does everyone not have a responsibility to support the country? Does everyone, including the Government, not have the responsibility to ensure that everyone in society pay according to their ability? That is a good socialist principle: From each according to his ability and to each according to his needs. That seems to me to be as applicable today as it was when it was first uttered.

• (1620)

Mr. Clark (Brandon-Souris): What was their taxable income?

Mr. Rodriguez: Oh, of course, after you gave them all these generous write-offs, depletions and tax expenditures! Do you want to talk about the tax expenditures? Take a look at this.

Mr. Crosbie: You were written off yourself.

Mr. Rodriguez: All you have to do is collect what should be collected and you would not have a deficit. Why do you have to keep taking it out of the hides of ordinary Canadians through all kinds of sales taxes? Why not collect what you are supposed to collect?

Mr. Crosbie: Where is it going to come from, you turkey?

Mr. Rodriguez: There is a biggest turkey I ever heard, the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie).

Mr. Crosbie: The hon. gobbler from Nickel Belt. You were written off yourself; now you are recaptured depreciation.

Mr. Rodriguez: Here is the moccasin lad whose Budget—

Mr. Crosbie: Don't try and hurt my feelings.

Mr. Rodriguez: —was rejected by this House and who caused his friend, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to go down in ignominy.

Mr. Crosbie: They are bound to find you there, wherever that is.

Mr. Rodriguez: There he is, the near leader of the Conservative Party.

Mr. Clark (Brandon-Souris): Which side were you guys voting on then?

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, here are the kinds of—

Mr. Crosbie: It was the reds leading the dead.

Mr. Rodriguez: —tax give-aways which really structure the inequalities in the system. This is from an advertisement in the Vancouver Sun. It says that this is Canada's last great tax break. If your annual taxable income is over $70,000 you can deduct up to $165,000 over four years and own an income producing hard asset with 100 per cent borrowed funds.

Here is another one. It is called a tax shelter. It asks why you should buy a vacation vehicle tax shelter. Because each $1,000 of initial investment can generate $2,640 in first year tax savings and up to 43 per cent first year write-offs. That is the vacation vehicle tax shelter. It tells you to act now and receive a 60 per cent tax write-off in 1985. You can get a condominium in the Harbourfront Hotel limited partnership. I do not know any folks in Nickel Belt who would be able to play fast and loose with these kinds of tax evasion schemes. Yet it has all been legalized. I do not see the Tory Government, which is so concerned about a fair tax system, moving to change any of that sort of give-away.

I accuse the Government of discriminating against lower-income Canadians. An example of that is the RRSP and the RPP.

Mr. Riis: Isn't that to help ordinary Canadians?

Mr. Rodriguez: Yes, these are non-taxable contribution limits. In 1986 it will be $7,500, in 1987 it will be $9,500, in 1988 it will be $11,500, and $15,500 in 1990. We oppose this because we believe that it will benefit upper-income Canadians to the detriment of lower-income Canadians. I accuse the Government of using the same rules but different laws with respect to this particular item and unemployment insurance and I will give an example. The Government made a change in the Unemployment Insurance Act which says that pension income will be considered earned income for UIC purposes. That became effective January 1, 1986. Yet in the RRSP provisions the Government says pension income is not earned income. That means a pensioner cannot set up a spousal RRSP because according to one law it is earned income and according to another it is not. Under tax law it is not earned income for setting up a spousal RRSP, while under the Unemployment Insurance Act pension income is earned income. You can't suck and blow at the same time.

Mr. Crosbie: You can!

Mr. Rodriguez: You cannot have it both ways.

Mr. Crosbie: You are doing it now.

Mr. Rodriguez: There is the greatest sucker and blower of all time, the Hon. Member for St. John's West. We know how he does it. He does it on Screech. I accuse the Government of making no effort whatsoever to reform the tax system so that it will become more progressive, fairer and—

Mr. Clark (Brandon-Souris): What about the minimum tax?

Mr. Rodriguez: Our Party is very concerned about that. We made it one of the issues in the campaign. Once again we forced the Leader of the Conservative Party, now the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), into admitting that we ought to do something about a minimum tax. Because of our concern we set up a task force which will go across this country listening to what Canadians have to say about how we can make the system fairer. I know the Tories had a tax task force which went across the country, but what they were more interested in was the mechanics of collection. They were laying the blame on tax collectors. What we are attempting to do is to listen to thoughtful suggestions from Canadians about how we can make the tax system fair. In the long run, if the people under the yolk of the tax system get to a point where they believe that the tax system is very unfair, they are going to kick up their heels. It is most unhealthy for a democracy to have a tax system so burdensome on people that it causes them to do things not in accordance with a free and open society and forces that society to react in a way which limits our freedoms.

Look south of the border. There is a country which has a national debt of how many trillions? I cannot imagine how much a trillion is. You can count 24 hours a day without sleeping or eating for 300,000 years before you would reach a trillion. The U.S. is a country similar to ours, a democratic and open society, and it is faced with this trillion-dollar debt. What are they doing with their tax structure at the moment? They are cutting taxes for ordinary Americans. What are we doing? We are going the other way. We are adding taxes. The Japanese have deficits but no one has mentioned that. They deal with that by borrowing from their own people and they pay it back.

Mr. Crosbie: What does it matter where you borrow it from, you have to pay it back.

Mr. Rodriguez: There is nothing here you have that—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to interrupt the—

Mr. Crosbie: Are you suggesting we do not pay it back?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski:) Order, please. I regret to say that the Hon. Member's time has expired. Questions or comments.

• (1630)

Mr. Fraleigh: Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to try to teach the Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) a few lessons in basic economics.

Mr. Crosbie: Impossible.

Mr. Fraleigh: Never having done anything to generate a job in his life, I hope he will listen. To generate jobs in this country it takes entrepreneurs who are willing to invest their money, something that is hard for a socialist to understand. The only thing that creates jobs is people who are willing to take some risks, spend their money, and create those jobs. The Member may have a hard time understanding that.

Mr. Riis: Like Dome Petroleum?

Mr. Fraleigh: That is a fact of life.

Mr. Riis: I think Dome Petroleum is a good example for you to use.

Mr. Fraleigh: If the Members would just listen, although I know it is hard for them. I know the socialists have a real problem in understanding this. Entrepreneurs invest their money if they know they are going to be allowed some return on that investment. However, the great socialists want to tax the entrepreneur to death so that he gets nothing in return for the risks he takes. Just listen and I will tell you about it. You never generated a job in your life, any of you.

Mr. Fulton: You're pathetic.

Mr. Fraleigh: Address those problems. I want to tell—

Mr. Riis: Aren't you wonderful? You are absolutely fantastic, aren't you? Just sit there and lecture us. You created all these jobs. You're wonderful. We're saying that you are wonderful. Please tell us more.

Mr. Fraleigh: I want to assure the Members of one thing. I made every dollar I ever got.

Mr. Waddell: How do you know we never generated a job? You're an asshole. You don't even know.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please!

Mr. Waddell: How do you know that?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please! We only have another seven minutes.

Mr. Riis: You're a bloody insult.

Mr. Waddell: That's an insult. I have had three businesses and two professions, so don't give me that crap.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will recognize the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez).

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I think the Member has generated a lot of hot air in a short period of time.

Mr. Riis: He's a brilliant orator.

Mr. Rodriguez: I would like to point out to him all the great entrepreneurs who took risks with the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank and then came running to the taxpayers. I think of the football club, the Calgary Stampeders, which, when it gets in trouble, comes to the public trough for a bail-out. I think of Inco and Falconbridge which received all kinds of tax concessions over the years, and yet the jobs have gone down the tubes.

I would like to put on the record that a study by the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion in February of 1985 shows that small and medium-sized businesses had a net job growth of about 375,000 between 1978 and 1982. In contrast, large businesses show a net job growth of less than 50,000. However, the tax and profit situation for the corresponding period, 1977 to 1981, gave the exact opposite picture. It was large businesses that saw their share of total corporate tax breaks increase from 64.5 per cent in 1977 to 71.9 per cent in 1981. They also saw their effective federal tax rate fall from 18.2 per cent to 14.3 per cent and their after-tax profits increase by 107.5 per cent over the same period. So don't talk to me about risk-taking and job creation.

Mr. Ravis: Mr. Speaker, I was hoping to speak to Bill C-84 this afternoon but, unfortunately, we are running out of time. However, I do have some comments and questions. It is interesting to hear the Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), the same old NDP destructive machine, making nothing but negative comments. I am beginning to wonder whether I have ever heard anything positive come out of the ranks over there. The reason that an NDP member is not representing my constituency in the House of Commons at this time is because my constituents got tired of it. They wanted to turn the country around and to hear something positive for a change. They were tired of the constant wailing that everything is negative about the world and that we should destroy it. That is not our way. We want to turn things around and we are making some very good progess.

How does the Member for Nickel Belt feel about the last 16 years of the great socialist experiment that this country went through? How good was that for the country? Why are we in the mess that we are in right now? I have a copy of the report of the OECD, a very well-respected international agency. They have placed Canada in much better light than it was in before. When I was running for election, Canada was "tail-end Charlie" with regard to many of the key economic indicators. Canada's growth today is ahead of that of the United States. The only country that is ahead of us in that regard is Japan on the Pacific rim. We are ahead of our fellow industrialized nations in the western world.

I would like the Member for Nickel Belt to respond to many of the accomplishments made by the Government in the last while. Why does he want to go back to the old socialist ways practised by the Liberal Government in the country? I will give the Member a chance to be positive for a change. Does he expect all of these things to happen overnight? What kind of time frame is he putting this in? We gave the other fellows 16 years. We have been here only 16 months, and look at the accomplishments that have taken place. I would like the Hon. Member to answer that honestly by telling us how he feels we have been doing in the last 16 months in terms of the number of people who have got back to work, the economic confidence in the country, and the number of people who have intentions of, not only making investments, but hiring people in the coming months.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I have a better model than the 16-month reign of the Tory Party at the federal level. The better model that I would choose is the Government of Manitoba which has—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: Just listen and be informed. The Province of Manitoba has the highest rate of private capital investment per capita with the lowest unemployment rate in the country. I think that is the model, Mr. Speaker. I can refer back to the 17 years that Tommy Douglas governed the Province of Saskatchewan. When former Premier Blakeney left office in Saskatchewan the Budget was balanced and he had a heritage fund with bucks in it. What has happened to the heritage fund? It is a "zilcho". The Tories with Devine have blown it. What happened to the deficit? It has gone up, up, and away.

Mr. Taylor: Why did the people kick him out?

Mr. Rodriguez: Tories and Liberals have run Canada for the last hundred-and-some-odd years and look at where we are today.

Mr. Crosbie: Yes, just look.

Mr. Rodriguez: I remember when the Leader of the Liberal Party was here. When he left and went into private law practice, because he could not get along with his Leader, the Tories were scratching around for a leader. The rumour was that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) went down to Toronto and they had lunch at Winston's. He tried to convince the Leader of the Official Opposition in the House to be the Leader of the Tories. We have to put a sign up here: "Crossing. Beware".

Mr. Riis: "Tory crossing".

Mr. Rodriguez: They can go back and forth.

Mr. Crosbie: What about your buddy up in the Senate, Hazen Argue? What about him?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that the period for questions and comments is now terminated. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston).

[Translation]

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I have only a few minutes until the end of debate to make my comments to the House.

[English]

Bill C-84 is the very centrepiece of the Minister's Budget. That Budget took nine months to produce. We had no Bill until November. Then, of course, it was pushed through the House and through committee. If there is one railroad that is operating well in this country it is certainly the one operated by Tory Members in the House of Commons.

● (1640)

I draw your attention to the comments of the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, the Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), who last week had the candour to admit in the House that: "Unfortunately, in the rush to put the Bill through and complete it during the day the detail with respect to several clauses were omitted". That is what we have been up against. The Bill has been pushed through quickly and we now only have a few minutes left to comment on it.

I note that there are a number of intelligent Tory Members in the House this afternoon. I see that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) is here. The injustice of this Bill must be very evident to him, as a former Minister of Finance.

How is this Budget and this Bill to be described? My Leader, the Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, has described it as a sneaky Budget because it taxes in an indirect way by changing the indexation provisions of the Act. We pointed out during the report stage that the amendment to the indexation provision on personal income tax will, by 1990-91, add over $4 billion to the federal treasury in one year alone. It is a direct assault on the pocket-books of the working men and women of this country. Indeed, it is sneaky.

The supply siders, of whom there are many in the House, regarded this Budget as a wonderful supply side Budget with its trickle-down effect. The House will recall the old horse and sparrow economics of John Kenneth Galbraith: "If you feed the horse enough there might be something left over for the sparrows". The thrust of that was the $500,000 lifetime exemption.

Of course, it is not even a supply side Budget because it attacks the sparrows. It puts an avalanche of taxes on the low and middle-income groups of this country. It is not even a trickle-down Budget, but it might better be described as a dribble-down Budget.

I think I could best go back to that great Conservative parliamentarian, Sir Winston Churchill, and use the description he gave of Russia in 1939 to describe this Budget. It is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma. I find this Budget incoherent, without direction and complex. The great mystery is why our Conservative friends not only want to shoot themselves in the foot, but directly in the head with these provisions.

The purpose of a riddle is to test the ingenuity of the person to whom it is put. I had a number of riddles I wished to put to my Conservative colleagues this afternoon. In the little time I have available I will put some for their consideration as they rise and vote like so many sheep to support what is clearly a bad piece of legislation.

Why does the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) want to encourage Canadians to invest outside Canada? That is the result of the combination of the proposed capital gains exemption, which is completely unfocused and can apply to a condominium in Puerto Rico or a boat in the Caribbean, with the proposed alternate minimum tax which penalizes people who receive dividend income from Canadian corporations. It is a clear signal to invite Canadians to invest outside the country. That is the first riddle.

Why does the Minister of Finance tell the House that he wants tax simplification but produces one of the most complex, convoluted and confused pieces of tax legislation that has been seen in this House since the early 1970s? Why does he intend to compound that error with an alternate minimum tax which further complicates a system when he should implement basic tax reform or at least produce a simplified version of a minimum tax? Why does the Minister of Finance tell us that he wants to reduce the deficit and at the same time forgo $4.5 billion on capital gains exemptions by the year 1990?

Why does he bail out banks at a cost of billions of dollars? Why does he give tax rulings which run into the billions of dollars to permit takeovers such as the Gulf Canada assets by Canadian concerns? Why does he even go so far as to buy retail gas stations, many of them in the very province you represent, Mr. Speaker?

I would like to leave you with that riddle this afternoon. I realize that my time has expired and I thank you for your indulgence.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that I was unable to hear the rest of the Hon. Member's speech this afternoon.

It being 4.45 p.m., it is my duty, pursuant to Order made on Friday, December 20, 1985, to interrupt the proceedings and put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of the third reading stage of the Bill now before the House.

The question is the following one. Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Finance) seconded by Mr. Epp (Provencher), moves that Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and related statutes and to amend the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, the Financial Administration Act and the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, be read the third time and do pass. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Hnatyshyn, for the Minister of Finance) which was agreed to on the following division:

(Division No. 181)

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) moved that Bill C-246, an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act (leave of absence), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of Bill C-246 is to amend the Canada Elections Act to allow employees covered by Part III of the Canada Labour Code to have extended leave of absence provisions if they are candidates running in a federal election campaign and are successfully elected as a Member of the House of Commons.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. This is your Private Members' Hour.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, there is a reason why I brought this particular Bill to the attention of the House for debate. I would hope that Members of the government side would not engage in their usual practice of talking out private Members' Bills. I believe that this Bill involves a very serious principle. The Bill goes to the very core of a democratic society which is open, free and egalitarian in most respects. We have the kind of society in which the citizens elect those who will govern them. The freedom of citizens to elect those who shall govern them is the very hub of a democratic society. Therefore, I believe the means by which that happens should be open and available to all citizens.

It seems to me that the House of Commons is composed mostly of Members who were self-employed or professionals. In this House of Commons, there are very few working-class people sitting as Members of Parliament. I believe one of the reasons for this is that there are too many impediments for working-class people to become Members of Parliament. The greatest impediment involves financial and employment security beyond the time when the electors may turn them out or they may step down from office for one reason or another. It seems to me that the federal Government should make sure that a vehicle exists to remove that particular impediment.

Part III of the Canada Labour Code only deals with those who fall under the jurisdiction of the federal Government. Therefore, my remarks are directed toward those who are covered by the Canada Labour Code. If it is agreed that this Bill should go to committee and pass, I am hoping that it will become an example for the provincial Governments. That is the kind of leadership role I hope the federal Government will play.

Part III of the Canada Labour Code allows employees, on application, and on approval by the Public Service Commission, to become candidates in a federal election. However, if they are successful and are elected, there is no provision for leave for the time they are Members of Parliament. They must resign their jobs. That has been the experience at this level over which the Parliament of Canada has jurisdiction. I believe that is a consideration which colours the decision of many people who are covered by the Canada Labour Code.

I have checked into the experiences of employees at other levels across the country. For example, union leaders who work for banks are given leaves of absence without question while accumulating seniority but only to carry out duties as union leaders. That provision does not extend to becoming a Member of Parliament. If successful in an election, they must give up their jobs.

Teachers fall under provincial jurisdiction but in most cases, if the particular school board does not have policy with respect to leave of absence for becoming a Member of a provincial legislature or a federal Parliament, the teacher must resign. In the private sector, INCO gives leaves of absence for public officials who are elected provincially or federally. No seniority accumulates while the person is on leave. Falconbridge Nickel Mines provide leaves of absence as well.

According to the UAW-General Motors master agreement, any elected official shall be granted a leave of absence for the first term and additional leaves may be granted upon written application by the employee. However, there is no guarantee the employee will be granted such leave of absence. These provisions usually contain words like "may grant" or "should grant".

It seems to me that the limitations with respect to employment that are placed on an individual who is thinking of becoming a candidate prevent that individual from exercising his fullest rights as a citizen. I consider the greatest service that I can give my country is to be here in the House of Commons.

• (1720)

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: I see Members opposite think that is a big joke. Obviously, they do not consider what they do here a service to the people of Canada. Why are they laughing? They think this is a big joke. In fact, it is a service paid to the country. Outside of defending one's country in time of war, in peace time the greatest service one can give to society is to be here participating—

Mr. McDermid: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: The Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) says: "Oh, oh". If Hon. Members opposite come to this place with that view, it is no wonder they have no motivation to bring about creative measures in order to make things better for the country.

Mr. McDermid: I will deal with you in a minute.

Mr. Rodriguez: Yes, you will. You will talk this Bill out.

In a democratic society we encourage our citizens and teach our children that it is necessary to exercise their franchise. As a citizen it really bothers me that in considering municipal elections, for example, we see that less than 50 per cent of eligible voters actually go out to elect municipal councils. In some cases, 16 per cent of eligible voters go out to elect school boards. Surely it is important for us to think that that is not right. Surely it is not right for us to think that there are not qualified people to run as candidates. In terms of motivation, commitment and understanding, exercising one's franchise is one of the greatest responsibilities which a citizen has. Therefore, people cannot exercise their franchise if there are not people who are willing to put themselves up to be chosen. That, too, is a worthy exercise. When one does that one is saying: "I want to be a part of this. I have some ideas and I would like to have the opportunity to put them into effect because I think I can help build a better Canada". Because of the present limitations, the widest possible range of candidates who may be elected to the House of Commons is actually prevented from seeking office.

In a survey which I saw of Members of Parliament in respect of their backgrounds I noted that less than 2 per cent were formerly what is called blue collar workers. Parliament should reflect the widest possible range of the Canadian population. Not everyone has a profession. If someone should decide to run, and wins, and is defeated after one term, then he just cannot go back into his law firm, accounting practice, medicine, or whatever it might be, and pick up where he left off. People who are in the public sector just would not have a job to go back to. I am asking the Government to show some leadership in terms of the public sector. People with families have that to consider when thinking about entering themselves as a candidate for election.

I think my proposed amendment is reasonable, appropriate and timely. The Government would show a great deal of leadership if it were to allow this Bill to go to committee and eventually pass. It is the type of leadership which would nudge provincial Governments to legislate in their own jurisdictions. It would certainly go a long way toward contributing to the development and building of a truly democratic society.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, I commend the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) for bringing to the attention of the House an amendment which is required to the Canada Elections Act. I think that Part III of the Act recognizes the principle established by the Hon. Member but that it stops too soon. If Hon. Members had listened carefully to the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt, they would have heard that he was making a valid argument and one which ought to command the attention of the House.

He established the rationale for his amendment deeply in the principles of democracy itself. That is to say that all sectors of the community, or all sectors of the nation, those from all walks of life, ought to be legitimately and properly represented in the House of Commons. To my knowledge, there is not a ruling class in Canada. There is not a group of people from which it is appropriate to draw Members of Parliament to the exclusion of other groups of people. The wider the representation of the community of Canada in the House of Commons, the better the Government we will have. However, that is not now the case. There are a large number of people in our society who are reluctant to come forward as candidates for the political Party of their choice in order to seek election. It is not that they fear the democratic process of being elected. They fear what the future may hold for them if they take this very dramatic and drastic step.

I do not think I need to remind Hon. Members that to seek to become a Member of Parliament is, in fact, a high risk endeavour. It is a high risk enterprise and a gamble. In a sense, what one is gambling is one's life—one's very self. It is quite different to put yourself before your fellow citizens to seek election to come to the House of Commons as a Member of Parliament than to go to Las Vegas, Atlantic City, or Nassau. In a sense, it is to gamble with your entire being, your economic long-term well-being, your own psychology and your own sense of self-worth. In terms of self-worth it goes up if elected but can be decimated if one is defeated. As the Hon. Member suggests, those who seek office are dealing with long-term security. They have to deal with their security in terms of their own place in society. The legislation which we have in place states that a leave of absence can be granted for those who come under the jurisdiction of the Canada Labour Code to be nominated as a candidate to seek election. However, there is no requirement in law to hold that place open while that Member is here in the House of Commons.

Therein lies the problem. We know what can happen if at the end of a term one retires for one reason or another. It could be because of health or the fact that one has not felt any degree of self-fulfilment or self-actualization in terms of being a Member of Parliament. There may have been frustration or disappointment involved, or one could have been defeated. Then, where is that person who sought to be elected? We know where that person stands. That person becomes an outcast. He or she can well feel despised and rejected. As the Hon. Member has pointed out, it is far more serious for some than for others. I do not think it is easy for anyone, Mr. Speaker. We should never gloss over that. We can always say that one can return to the practice of law. I have spoken with many former Parliamentarians who were lawyers and it is not that easy. You just do not pick up that quickly. It is difficult.

• (1730)

Some school boards can be very generous. They can grant a leave of absence, sometimes beyond one term, sometimes going into a second but there is no consistent policy. The law in Ontario, I might remind Hon. Members, says that if one is a qualified teacher in the province and you serve in the House of Commons or in the Legislature of Ontario, the years you serve in the Legislative Assembly, federally or provincially, may count as years of teaching experience when you go back to the class-room. All you are obliged to do is to make up your superannuation payments. They can count as years of experience toward the required years for your eventual requirement. That is a very generous principle. I think it has allowed quite a number of people from the class-room to consider going into the House of Commons for a period in their life. It has attracted teachers as much as this place in the past used to attract lawyers to a very extensive degree.

Let me come back to the basic principle of having as many people from as many walks of life as possible in the House of Commons. I believe because we have restricted it narrowly to those who feel they have an opportunity because of the privileged position they have in society, because it is less threatening, they run for public office and are elected. I think as a result of that, because the range has been too narrow, we have created a gap. I consider it a serious gap between the real community that we purport to represent and the precincts of Parliament itself.

Would it be possible—I do not want to be assertive here—that that is why the process of parliamentary reform has been so retarded, so slow to get moving? Is that why? It may be, I do not know. I do know that if we opened up the opportunity to serve in the House of Commons to other sectors of society, to other walks of life, and those people were able to hold their place during that term, or even seek a second term and then return, those sectors in society would benefit greatly when people came back. They would have experienced Parliamentarians, and I can see that almost all sectors of society would benefit from having the person come back by holding his or her place by way of a leave of absence.

If this practice were followed and if this amendment were accepted and the practice became an example for other sectors of society, imagine how the business community would benefit from having someone return to the community having been a Member of Parliament. Over the years I have been amazed at how little understanding the business community has of the workings of Parliament and of Government and how much wasted effort there is as it seeks to influence Parliament in one way or another for what that sector deems is good for it. What I say about business would apply to industrial workers, to organized labour and to professional organizations.

I believe that there needs to be a greater linkage between the real community and the parliamentary process. The British have come to recognize this. It is not exactly the granting of a leave of absence by various sectors. It points to the need to establish a linkage between the work of Parliament, the work of Government and the greater community beyond these precincts. I am arguing, Mr. Speaker, that that linkage could be forged if we allowed more people in greater varieties of occupations and callings to come here. There is another way in which it could be done as well.

In 1977 in Great Britain a trust was established known as the Industry and Parliament Trust. This trust offers to Members of Parliament of both Houses and all Parties an opportunity to gain direct experience of business by spending up to five weeks learning firsthand how a business operates, how Government impinges on a business and with what effect, and how labour relates to that company. The aim has been to help legislators to judge better the effect of possible actions by Government and to help them make better choices among alternative ways to pursuing the Government's purposes. You will be interested, Mr. Speaker, that within the first five years of that program, over 125 British Members of Parliament had completed a program with one of the participating companies. The acceptance of the program has been so great that there are now similar programs in Sweden, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and France.

If the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt were allowed to have this amendment adopted, he would be following that same basic principle, that is, the linkage, let me call it, between the real world and the parliamentary world, and the parliamentary world would be immeasurably strengthened and improved.

Let me throw in a personal note. I worked for a school board at the time I sought election that was generous enough to do exactly what the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt is proposing. I had not realized what the situation was at the time and it never even occurred to me until after I won the nomination for my Party and then returned to my job for the remaining months before the election and met a dear and delightful colleague, now deceased, who made the comment to me and said: "How can you possibly do what you are doing?" I was puzzled by her question. She said: "You are going out at the end of a limb and you are inviting your fellow citizens to saw off that limb, and then where are you?" Reality then set in. I established contact with the chairman of the school board and inquired about a leave of absence. It was granted, and it was granted on a second occasion in 1972. The curtain was drawn after that, and that was fine. If it can be done in that particular profession, why can we not extend this, first of all, by way of law? If it is established by way of law, then it can be established by way of example to involve and incorporate other members of society in other walks of life.

My Party would like to see this Bill go to committee for further study and analysis and to have other witnesses from the community express views on it.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to make a contribution to this debate and to outline some of the other viewpoints that might be taken with respect to the question of whether or not one's job should be left open ad infinitum—some might say ad nauseam—while one serves in this House.

First, I could not agree more with my friend, the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) with respect to the gamble, the precariousness of our position and the stress one has when one leaves a job or business or profession to become a Member of this House. We all enjoy our participation here. We all know the demands, and we all know that there are no guarantees. That is a given. I am in complete agreement with those stresses that my colleague outlined.

I want, however, to spend a bit of time dealing with some of the comments of my friend, the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) who made some errors as a result of probably not having access to the library in the basement of the building we share. Let me review for the Chamber the occupations of some of the Members of this House. My friend suggested that most Members of the House were professionals. I think that is in error. The House will be pleased to know that some 40 Members of this Party are either school directors, teachers or professors. The fact that we attract this type of person shows the scope of the Progressive Conservative Party. Approximately 15 per cent of our Members come from that profession and I think that speaks well for the Party. Unfortunately, the Liberal Party has no school directors and only four of its Members are teachers or professors. The NDP has done much better there.

● (1740)

We have talked about the risk of leaving your business to serve in this place. Our Party has 55 Members who are described as businessmen, businesswomen or business executives. The House will be distressed to know that not one Member of the NDP classifies himself or herself as a representative of business. The NDP likes to say that it represents business, but when it comes right down to the hard facts they just do not have anyone from that background. That speaks to the narrowness of their point of view on several occasions. Fortunately we have four accountants in our Party who have come here to serve. We also have administrators. The NDP seems to have a big gap in that profession. In fact, they have none. That speaks to the way they operate. I just wanted to be fair and point that out.

A lot of people would say we are fortunate to have 39 lawyers. My colleague from Simcoe South says we are fortunate that number is coming down and he hopes it will continue to go down. I would tell my friends across the way that we are also fortunate to have in our Party the only psychiatrist in the House. He told me the other day that he has nothing to do so I suggested we would be pleased to have him assist my friends on the other side. I think all of this is indicative of the experience, background, indeed the diversity our Party brings to the House of Commons. The people of Canada knew when they sent us here in September, 1984, that they wanted a respresentative group of people and we are very fortunate to have such a broad background of experience in our Party. I think it is reflected in the legislation we bring forward.

I know that what I am about to say is not exactly pertinent to the Bill but I want to get it out. During the last two elections in that great democracy to the south only about 53 per cent of the voters got out to the polls. In this country on September 4, 1984, because of the great interest in the election and because the people wanted to send Members with a broad background of experience to the House of Commons, we had a 75 per cent turn-out. That speaks to the fact that we in this country are very aware of the democratic process.

With specific reference to the Bill, what my friend is trying to do is extend the present provisions in the Canada Elections Act which speak specifically to that period of time when one is declaring oneself as a candidate for a nomination, running for the nomination and then running for election. I think we all agree with the provision presently in place. There is no question that every candidate should have the freedom to run for a seat in Parliament without the threat that his or her job would disappear for any reason whatsoever while doing so. We all agree with that because we all know what we went through when we ran for election. The last thing in the world you need is for someone to be saying: "I just moved into your job yesterday; what will you be doing if you do not make it?" No one needs that kind of grief along with all the other things we have to contend with in an election.

The question then becomes whether or not this provision should be extended in an open-ended fashion as my friend suggests so that the job is there forever. I suggest that would be an untenable extension of this provision. I would also suggest that the Canada Elections Act is pretty generous. I pay tribute to those who passed that Act originally, no matter what Party they represented. I think it speaks to democracy in that it allows anyone who wants to the opportunity to contest a nomination and run for a seat in this House. However, should employers be forced to keep that position open while that Member stays in the House of Commons? It could be for 10 or 15 years. Should the employer have to promote people and tell them that there could be a general election next year and if so-and-so does not make it, they will be right back in his job? Should employers have to do that? More important, perhaps, should employees be forced to operate in that iffy situation? They would not know whether the job to which they have been promoted, one in which they are working hard, will be taken back by someone after an election defeat. Perhaps it would not even be a defeat, simply that the Member decided to retire.

I suggest we might bring some criticism down on ourselves if we were to vote such a provision into law. We receive enough criticism as it is concerning our positions as Members of Parliament. Ask yourself if you want to put yourself in the position of guaranteeing that a job stay open and run the risk that criticism will fall on all of us henceforth. I think it would do an injustice to the other employees of a limited number of enterprises to which this provision applies, since they have the right to expect a promotion and advancement on the basis of their service and experience. To have someone else then come back and insert themselves in their career path could be seen as unfair.

I would also suggest that quite reasonable steps have been taken to ease the return of Members of Parliament to a job or professional occupation after we leave here. We all support this. It is not easy to defend yourself in this area because no one likes to talk about how much they make and those kinds of things. However, being politicians our salaries and other benefits are public knowledge. The House will know that after six years of service Members become eligible for a pension. They pay for this pension during their service in the House. It helps to ease the transition to another job or occupation.

Now, I would like to go back to what I said to my friend from Cochrane-Superior. There is no question that there are some risks in the practice of law. My former partners keep telling me: "Lewis, you have changed all the laws on us. The place is confused. The practice of law is not what it used to be". By inference I would have a great deal of difficulty catching up. I know that my client base has gone to other lawyers in my former firm and to other professionals in the City of Orillia. I know that close relationships with business contacts other than clients are gone because, being here five days a week, one cannot maintain that same relationship.

• (1750)

I know that it is not possible to pick up where you left off when practising law. The same applies to so many of the professions or occupations. I say this not only on the basis of keeping the job open, but also on the basis of the individual. How many of us would expect to step back into our previous occupation or profession at the same level of competence and familiarity? I think we would be kidding ourselves if we said we could. I think we all realize that we would lose something. No matter how good we were when we left that position, after five or 10 years here we would be kidding ourselves if we said that we could go back and pick up all the traces without missing a few steps. I think it is unreasonable from that standpoint also.

The Management and Members' Services Committee has recently tabled a report which looks after the same thing as the pension which I referred to is looking after. That is, it suggests that there be a salary paid for a period of six months after a Member ceases to serve in the House. I think that is understandable too. I, personally, would support that as a severance pay which would give one a chance to say: "Yes, I worked hard for my riding right up to the day of the election and then

I set about looking for a job. I did not say that, since an election has been called for some time next year and I have decided to retire, I will start looking for a job right now and let my responsibility to my riding fall down while I look after myself".

I appreciate my colleague bringing this Bill forward so we can have some debate on it. I know he brings it forward on a well-intentioned basis. I can understand why he is doing it. I think that the provision which guarantees every Member an opportunity to run for office is perfect. There is no question but that that should be there. I have a difficulty, however, with forcing that extension to the career of the Member. I have difficulty for the employer and the employee, and I would have difficulty looking anyone in the eye and saying that any Member could step right back into that position and do the type of job that the employer would expect. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I am speaking against the Bill and will vote against it at such time as it comes to a vote.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this Bill. As the House is fully aware, I always enjoy debating with my hon. friend, the Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez). I very rarely agree with him, but we do have some warm exchanges and we will probably have one today. I want to tell him that I understand perfectly why he is bringing this Bill forward. I was in the same position myself, being a provincial civil servant when I decided to seek public office. I won a nomination and got a leave of absence to run in the election, which I won.

Unless it has changed in the intervening seven years, in the provincial legislature there is the possibility of an individual being allowed, for five years, to return to the position, but not to the exact job, which he or she held when they ran for the first time. In other words, they could apply for a job for a period of five years in the category that they were in when they left. Once that five years was up, you are on your own. That basically meant that if you served one term and got defeated within five years, you could apply for a job at that level and would be given first consideration for the first opening that came along. I believe that is the way it is worded, unless it has been changed in the intervening seven years.

This is open-ended. I think the citizens of the country could rightly criticize us for taking care of ourselves forever. I just do not think that that is proper. We do make sacrifices to come into the House. The Hon. Member made reference early in his speech to there being no greater service to a country than to be a Member of Parliament, other than perhaps fighting to defend one's country. I took some exception with that. That is not because I am not proud of being a Member of Parliament, and not because I am not motivated for the job, because I am. I enjoy it very much and I plan to continue with it as long as the people of Brampton-Georgetown desire to have me as their Member of Parliament. However, I thought that that statement was rather arrogant and a rather inflated opinion of oneself.

People who work with the unfortunate in the country, at great sacrifice, are contributing to the country in a very meaningful way, no more and no less than a Member of Parliament. This is one way of serving the country, but there are so many other areas in which people make sacrifices to serve their country or their community, whether here or abroad. Therefore, although I respect very much the position that I hold here, I do not feel that there is no greater service in this country, because there are so many others that serve so well.

If the Member presented a more reasonable Bill which was not so open-ended, it would be worth while taking a very close look at it. However, I am concerned about this type of Bill that guarantees everything. What risk is there in running for Parliament? What sacrifice are you making? With these provisions one could say: "I should not worry about it. I am not serious about running. I can run and will be guaranteed my job. If I serve for 10 years and get a Member's pension I can return to my job and it will be there for me". What about the employer who must have that position available around every election time? That is quite a responsibility to place on an employer. I would not want to ask an employer to keep a position open in that way.

Mr. Rodriguez: That's not what I said. You didn't read the Bill. Why don't you read the Bill?

Mr. McDermid: Do we do that for the people in the communications industry, for example?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that the hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS—NIAGARA RIVER POLLUTION—UNITED STATES CLEAN-UP PROPOSAL. (B) GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, on October 17 last year, Mr. Lee Thomas, the head of the United States Environmental Protection Agency, met with Canada's Environment Minister (Mr. McMillan) to discuss an action plan for the cleaning up of the toxic waste dumps along the Niagara River. The Minister of the Environment would not discuss at the time the contents of the plan with the public or the House, even though the releasing agency, namely, the United States Environmental Protection Agency, considered this to be a public document. We were told to be patient.

Six weeks later, on November 28, I asked the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Gurbin) if he could shed any light on the contents of the Niagara Action Plan. Were all sites to be cleaned up? How much money was allocated? What was the schedule for clean-up? Would the waste be destroyed or just contained?

On that day the Parliamentary Secretary said that the proposals for specific clean-up plans were being narrowed down and would be released by the beginning of the year. Now it is the beginning of the year and still nothing has been released. Five million Canadians and some 24 million people, Canadians and Americans, who depend on the water are still no wiser as to the security of their water supply in the future. Why is there this foot dragging? Why will the Minister not practice the open Government so often alluded to by his Party? Therefore, when will the action plan be announced?

At the end of October last year, Occidental Chemicals reached an agreement with New York State and EPA officials to deal with the toxic wastes in the Hyde Park dump. The plan called for Occidental to spend $17 million to contain the chemicals that are buried there. The plan was released for public comment and the Environmental Protection Agency in the United States is receiving comments until February 25 of this year. It will take them into consideration and submit to the judge any alterations to the plan before it is signed as a court order.

It seems to me that this is an opportunity for the Canadian Government to make strong representations to the EPA on the necessary to excavate and destroy rather than to contain, and to comment on the progress of clean-up of all dump sites, not just Hyde Park.

My second question to the Parliamentary Secretary is: Are we taking advantage of this opportunity and, if so, how?

Finally, the St. Clair River is another piece in this toxic chemical jigsaw of the Great Lakes. The gravity and scope of the situation there is not yet fully known but could present the Ontario and Canadian Governments with a problem on the scale of the Niagara toxic dumps in New York State.

• (1805)

According to the "Pollution of the St. Clair River—Situation Report", released by Canada and Ontario in November, 1985, there are 18 deep wells which have been injected with wastes and seven land fills within Lambton County. If it is determined that wastes are leaking from the storage sites just mentioned, the consequences could be grave. It is therefore imperative that the Government make it clear from the outset that the St. Clair River situation will be dealt with in the manner which the Minister of the Environment and others have demanded from the United States in the Niagara area, namely, that toxic wastes must be destroyed. Attempts to contain leaking dump sites are not good enough, because it would be a repetition of the mistakes along the Niagara River.

In conclusion, it seems that the Canadian Government has an opportunity to show leadership in the cleaning up of the St. Clair River. We have to provide this leadership through our own actions, as Liberal Governments have done on so many other environmental issues in the past, and to demonstrate to our American neighbours that we are prepared to do on our side of the border what we are asking them to do on their side.

I have outlined the reasons for my intervention tonight. I would be grateful if the Parliamentary Secretary would kindly answer the questions.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I looked forward to replying to the Hon. Member because, as some people know—not too many—the action carried out by the Ministry during his brief tenure as Minister of the Environment was negligible. He knows full well that the Government has been working extremely hard on trans-border pollution problems, has privided more action and has got more interest in both this country and south of the border than the previous administration. He knows that the Government has made a very strong commitment to address the problem of toxic contaminants in the Niagara River basin. Also he knows of the very rapid, firm action of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) on the St. Clair problem. He should be applauding the Government for the action it took, the speed with which it took it, the competence in which it took action and the results of that action. I assure him on behalf of the Minister of the Environment that every precaution will be taken to ensure safety and good water in the Great Lakes by thee Government.

I should like to tell the Hon. Member that there are negotiations and ongoing work right now at a very hectic pace within the Ministry of the Environment with our neighbours to the south. A working document was provided to the Minister of the Environment and to Mr. Thomas of the United States EPA when they met in Ottawa last fall and put together the draft action plan.

I think the Hon. Member understands—I forget how long he was the Minister, but he knows that in order to have a good working agreement and to ensure that we take care of and attack the problem it is necessary to have mechanisms which ensure effective meshing of the various efforts on the Niagara. Of course that would pertain to the St. Clair as well. We are confident that this will be achieved as it is at the core of a comprehensive action plan to reduce the amount of toxic contaminants in the river.

It is the intention of the Minister and Mr. Thomas to have a co-ordinated, four-jurisdiction plan—and we are talking about four jurisdictions now—in accordance with the commitments made last May. We expect to announce the details of the four-party plan in the coming weeks. I assure the Hon. Member that every effort—and we are working very diligently on this—is being made to this end.

In conclusion, I reiterate the Minister's commitment to the reduction of toxic pollution in the Niagara River and Lake Ontario in order to improve the quality of these waters and, most important, to protect the health of Canadians who use them.

NATIONAL PARKS—WILDLIFE POACHING—HARSHER PENALTIES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): On Wednesday, December 4, I asked the Hon. Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) what steps he was taking to deal with the problem of poaching in Banff National Park. I have no quarrel with the Minister's reply but the time limitations prevented the whole story being told. The Minister said in part:

> Poaching, especially underground organized poaching, is becoming a serious problem in our national parks right across the country. Dozens of our big game species are being slaughtered, largely by non-Canadians for trophy purposes. For example, a bighorn sheep head will command about $50,000 on the black market. To meet the problem head on, we intend to change the fine, which is now only $500 and as such is not a deterrent but a licence, to $150,000 maximum. And we intend to include six-month jail sentences as a further deterrent.

The majority of trophy hunters are Americans and Europeans. To hunt legally as non-residents they must pay $7,500 to $10,000 for a guided ram hunt in British Columbia, Alberta or the Territories. Since one-half of these hunts are successful, a hunter can reasonably expect to pay $20,000 plus travel expenses before taking a animal. The chances of taking a trophy animal or the ultimate goal, a record trophy animal, are even lower, and thus the real value of a trophy ram to the hunter exceeds $20,000.

The current black market value of a ram's head ranges from $10,000 to $30,000. In such a market the risk of a $500 fine is of little consequence to a determined trophy hunter convinced his chances of taking a trophy animal are significantly higher in a national park. Trophy animals are becoming scarce in more accessible areas where they can be hunted legally.

As an example of what happens, in 1981 an elk was shot in Banff National Park and a bighorn sheep was shot in the Jasper National Park. As a result of a six-month investigation, an international poaching ring was broken and a B.C. guide outfitter was found guilty of poaching wildlife in both parks. His combined fines totalled $5,000 and he served a three-month jail term. He lost his B.C. guide outfitter licence and the right to sell his hunting territory, valued at more than $70,000. The application of the National Parks Act alone would have resulted in only $1,000 in fines.

The American hunter in the above case pleaded guilty in the U.S.A. court to illegally importing an elk head from Banff National Park and two eagles from British Columbia. He faced a maximum fine of $20,000 and five years in jail. He was fined $13,000 and sentenced to 40 days in jail. Canadian arrest warrants remain in effect for charges under the National Parks Act should he ever return, but if he does he will only be faced with a maximum fine of $500. This ring was broken up by our wardens and our RCMP.

In addition, there is an illicit trade going on in wildlife organs and body parts. For instance, the organs and body parts of a grizzly bear are valued in the aphrodisiac, jewellery and charm trade. The hide and skull range in value from $2,000 to $7,000 and claws sell for $50 to $125. Elk antlers are highly praised as an aphrodisiac and velvet antlers sell for $2,000 a pair.

In addition, organized poaching, in association with trophy hunting, is becoming a common practice and criminals are using advanced radio communications, night scopes, telemetry equipment and tranquilizers to increase their chances of success and reduce the chances of being detected. Law enforcement is only one of the several duties of the RCMP and a warden's job and consequently the poachers think they can get away with these trophies.

In addition, in the past decade there have been numerous cases of assault of wardens apprehending poachers. In 1983, two wardens in Riding Mountain National Park were robbed at gun point of their horses and radios by a poacher packing out six hind quarters of elk and moose meat. The poacher was later arrested by the RCMP in Winnipeg and convicted of armed robbery. Increased use of violence may be one negative aspect of higher penalties for poaching. On the other hand, better training, particularly in self defence and better equipment will hopefully counter this trend. The Minister, in increasing the fines and providing a jail term, I believe, is on the right track, and I hope we will be successful in saving the animals in our national parks. I also recommend that the RCMP and wardens be provided with weapons and equipement at least comparable to that used by the criminals and poachers so they can properly deal with this illegal work.

• (1815)

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, when one has the responsibility of speaking during the Late Show, one sometimes is very fortunate in having the opportunity to reply to a comment by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), a Member who represents probably one of the most beautiful ridings in all of this great country. It is a riding in which I spend a lot of time in order to enjoy its abundant wildlife.

When we speak of poaching, my heart breaks. This is so for anyone who has experienced the sight of young children seeing animals in the wild for the first time. I can recall my first experience with bighorn sheep. I was so close to them that I could almost touch them. When I hear about poaching I am saddened. I feel badly about it.

Quite frankly, I was amazed to learn the price people can receive for trophy heads. This price ranges between $10,000 and $50,000 on the black market and I understand that the $500 fine of which the Hon. Member spoke has been in place since 1919. An increase in the penalty is long overdue.

I can tell the Hon. Member that people go to a lot of trouble to poach. It takes a lot of work and a lot of planning but it is worthwhile if it pays off in the long run. Why go to the expense and trouble of taking a trophy animal legally when the National Parks present such an inviting alternative? We intend to provide poachers with a good answer to that question: the prospect of facing a fine of $150,000 and six months behind bars.

As the Hon. Member mentioned, the poaching problem does not stop there. He spoke of the retail prices of red meat, fish and poultry. These prices have made the poaching of meat increasingly attractive. This is particularly true of moose, deer and salmon. The black market value of a moose carcass ranges from $400 to $1,000. Again, a very small fine has been imposed for this kind of poaching. However, we intend to introduce a maximum fine of $2,000 for other offences under the National Parks Act, offences which include the poaching of meat.

Creating a deterrent is only part of the solution to the problem. There are currently 250 wardens in the system. That may sound like a lot of wardens but they have to enforce 140,000 square kilometres of parkland and they must cope with the highly organized poaching activities, the more sophisticated poaching techniques and the increased use of violence by individuals that are apprehended. Clearly, we cannot rely on the patrols and surveillance operations of the wardens to keep pace with poaching. We must have better equipment, better training and inter-agency co-operation between wardens and the police. As well, I think we as individuals who use the parks have a responsibility to report any undue activities we see occurring in the parks in order to help those who are trying to protect nature at its finest.

ENERGY—REFINING CAPACITY IN QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITION. (B) REQUEST FOR COMBINES INVESTIGATION

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, last week during Question Period, I asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) how he plans to protect the Montreal jobs and the oil consumption prices of Quebec consumers from the consequences of the shutdown of the Gulf refinery which was permitted by the Government, throwing hundreds of people out of work and creating a daily deficit of 50,000 barrels a day of refined products in Quebec. He gave no serious answer to the question. I asked again specifically whether he would take action under the Canadian Combines Investigation Act. His response was quite evasive. That is just not good enough.

● (1820)

To review the main facts briefly, Ultramar bought the Gulf refinery and closed it. It is the fourth refinery in recent years to be closed in the east end of Montreal. The policy of this Government continued the policy of the previous Government in allowing the refining capacity of Quebec to be reduced so that now there are only three refineries left. There are a total of 1,700 men and women out of work and Quebec lacks 50,000 barrels a day in its capacity to refine petroleum products. It is very clear that with the Government's knowledge and foresight Ultramar bought the Gulf refinery for the purpose of closing it and keeping it closed. It refused to resell it to Gaz Metropolitain which would sell refined petroleum products in Quebec.

While Investment Canada was studying the sale, Ultramar publicly threatened the Government of Canada that if the federal Government took action to keep the refinery open Ultramar would close its Quebec City refinery. Shell made the same threat regarding the closing of its own Montreal refinery. In other words, they blackmailed the Government into shutting down and helping them to keep the Gulf refinery closed for the use of the Quebec people. The Government bowed to their threats.

Now the three refineries which have been operating at three-quarters capacity will be able to operate at maximum capacity. Of course, they will have a great increase in profits. They will be able to squeeze the small retailers, the independent retailers, out of business. According to what we learned from the O'Farrell Report, as it has been leaked under the Combines Investigation Act, this will mean price gouging against the people of Quebec. There will be a monopolization of prices, or a cartelization of prices, that forces them up. However, the mysterious thing is that the O'Farrell Report does not make clear whether it is investigating the particular practices of Shell and Ultramar.

Today, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) asked the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) whether the O'Farrell investigation which is continuing will go into the practices of Shell and Ultramar. The Minister refused to give an answer. He would not say yes or no as a fact. Instead, he dodged, making the excuse that he cannot interfere with the work of the investigator. He was not asked to interfere; he was asked simply for a statement of fact which he studiously avoided giving.

Is he afraid to tell the truth? Is it intended by this Government that the O'Farrell investigation, under the Combines Investigation Act, will go in there with its eyes closed so that it will not see any facts embarassing to this Government? Mr. Speaker, we need a much more thorough investigation than it seems this Government yet wants.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, over the last several weeks there have been numerous questions raised about the closure of the Gulf refinery in Montreal east and the emergence of somewhat conflicting data, from a number of sources, relating to the impact this closure would have on refining capacity in Quebec.

The closure of the Montreal refinery brings to 13 the number of Canadian refineries closed since 1976—four of them in Montreal—as a direct result of the dramatically reduced demand for oil products in the country; I might say not only in this country but around the world. I met with 21 Energy Ministers last summer and they all talked about the rationalization of energy in their particular areas. Quebec has done a magnificent job of reducing its dependency on oil. It has reduced its oil share for energy use within the province from some 63 per cent down to 45 per cent in six years. The Quebec Government's goal is 40 per cent by 1990 and it will probably reach that goal. There is a dramatically reduced demand.

● (1825)

The capacity of the remaining three Quebec refineries is approximately equal to the 1985 Quebec demand. Moreover, demand in Quebec for petroleum products is projected to decline over the next few years, as I have said. Any requirement for temporary additional supply could be met by other means: exchanges, inventory drawdown, product imports from offshore or other provinces.

Furthermore, there is no reason that a particular region or province must be self-sufficient in petroleum products. Other provinces, such as P.E.I., Newfoundland, Manitoba, and certain regions in the United States—New York with a population of 15 million people—do not have refineries and rely completely on supplies from external sources.

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) remains firm in the view that current and future petroleum product supply projections for Quebec are accurate. But, as with any economic analysis, there will be differences.

When initially responding to this question in the House, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) stressed that the Government of Canada is committed to protecting the interests of Quebec consumers at all times. I want to reiterate that commitment. However, I would also like to impress upon the Hon. Member that no shortage exists.

Furthermore, the Hon. Member can be assured that with reduced petroleum product demand in Quebec, and Quebec's improved access under deregulation to competitively priced offshore product imports, the province is well supplied now and for the foreseeable future. In addition, the deregulation of natural gas and the abundance of electricity in the province of Quebec ensure that Quebec's energy future is secure.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

GOVERNMENT ATTITUDE TOWARDS ATLANTIC PROVINCES

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): In 1985, Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government left the Atlantic Provinces to fend for themselves. This region was not a priority, and the economic policies of this Government did not include the development of the eastern provinces.

Quite recently the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) bragged about a $30 million New Brunswick development agreement. In 1975, under the previous federal-provincial agreement with New Brunswick, the province received a $30.2 million grant. Not only did New Brunswick not rate an increase in ten years, it even incurred a loss. A comparison with another Canadian province reveals that it received $350 million under a 1985 federal-provincial agreement, or 200 per cent more than it did as a result of the 1975 agreement.

Mr. Speaker, how is it that certain Canadian provinces get 200 per cent more while New Brunswick has to make do with less money? In my opinion, New Brunswick deserved and still deserves a comparable increase. It goes to show that the Government is not overly concerned about the Atlantic Provinces, Mr. Speaker, a sure sign of the fact that New Brunswick's Cabinet representation is very weak and definitely insufficient.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGATIONS OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT OF WOMEN MEMBERS

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Last weekend six policewomen anonymously told a Vancouver newspaper about sexual harassment they face within the RCMP. Their stories of propositions and crude jokes shed light on the shocking resignation rate of women officers, which is five times higher than that of their male counterparts. If this reflects macho attitudes within the RCMP, does it also reflect macho attitudes in the day-to-day performance of police duties?

• (1405)

Our 1982 report to Parliament on wife battering recommended special training of police officers to deal more effectively with wife battering and it called for affirmative action to hire more female officers. RCMP officers must be non-sexist and sensitive to women if they are to intervene effectively in situations involving domestic violence and sexual abuse of children.

If women are being driven out of the force by intimidation and macho attitudes of senior officers, that is intolerable. It is not enough that the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) has asked for an internal investigation into these complaints. He should ensure that this investigation is objective and that former women officers are interviewed about their reasons for leaving the force. Experienced officers as well as new recruits should receive sensitivity training, with emphasis on women's rights as recommended by the 1982 report. Women should be encouraged to lodge complaints and have fair grievance procedures with no fear of recrimination.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that her time has expired.

HISTORIC EVENTS

ANNIVERSARY OF UKRAINE INDEPENDENCE

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, on January 22, 1918, Ukraine became a sovereign and independent democratic nation. Two days after the proclamation of independence, the Central Rada in Kiev passed a law establishing national and personal autonomy for minority groups—it was a first in modern history.

On January 22, 1919, Ukraine proclaimed the reunification of western and eastern territories into one Ukrainian state. After hundreds of years of injustice under foreign rule, Ukraine, at long last, entered the Commonwealth of Nations and took her rightful place as an equal.

Ukraine's freedom was short-lived, however. After four short years, her people were once again subjugated under the dominant Russian state led by a repressive Communist regime. When at times we take for granted the liberties we enjoy in Canada, we need only recall the adversity and strife suffered by Ukraine to appreciate our good fortune as Canadians.

It was the promise of freedom and justice that brought Ukrainians to Canada. It is the fulfillment of this promise that makes them proud to be Canadians. Let us join with them in marking this day as one of special significance for all who value freedom and the pursuit of liberty and justice.

AGRICULTURE

NEW DAIRY POLICY

Mr. Jean-Guy Guibault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell Canadian milk producers about our Government's commitment concerning the new long-term dairy policy. Under that policy, Canada's industrial milk producers will receive close to $300 million in financial assistance over the next five years.

Lasting stability in the dairy sector will be the result of this policy, and consumers will be able to expect affordable prices and quality dairy products.

The latest statistics indicate that revenues from industrial milk production in Canada amount to $3.2 billion and that more than 40,000 farmers earn their living in the dairy industry. The Government of Canada will continue to pay a $6.03 grant for each hectolitre of industrial milk produced for domestic market consumption and the special export program.

At the trade level we are taking measures to limit Canadian imports of powdered milk, and we will make every effort to restore a better trade balance in cheese products during the forthcoming GATT negotiations. Since 1980, milk producers have been asking the federal Government for long-term guarantees. On behalf of the Government of Canada—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his allotted time has expired.

HUMAN RIGHTS

LEGACY OF MARTIN LUTHER KING

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, this week Americans and people throughout the world honoured the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. From the Montgomery bus boycott in 1955 to the Memphis garbage strike in April, 1968, King galvanized an entire generation into action on civil rights. Interweaving his Christian beliefs with Gandhian tactics of civil disobedience, Martin Luther King challenged the doctrine of separate but equal, in every aspect of American life, from white and black drinking fountains to segregated education.

The dream of racial equality and social justice for which King died is a dream all of humanity must embrace. As King wrote in his famous letter from Birmingham: "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere". King's agenda for change and equality remains an unfinished dream in America, in Canada, and throughout the world. It is a dream all of us must continue to pursue.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF FIVE-YEAR DAIRY POLICY

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, today, in Winnipeg, while speaking to the annual meeting of the Dairy Farmers of Canada, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) gave the dairy farmers of our country something they have wanted since 1980. He gave them the commitment of the federal Government to a long-term dairy policy. Dairy Farmers in my riding of Oxford, and in every region of Canada, have waited a long time for a five-year Government commitment. At last, with this Government, they have it.

The new policy represents a federal contribution of nearly $300 million for Canadian industrial milk producers in each—I repeat, in each—of the next five years. Supply management, which has worked so well for dairy farmers, will continue to be a basic element of the policy.

The federal Government will continue to provide a subsidy of $6.03 per hectolitre of industrial milk. There are changes in butter marketing costs also. Measures will be taken to improve Canada's balance of trade in cheeses and to curb imports of so-called dry blends.

This Government has acted on nearly every point in the 16-point agriculture policy which we announced during the last election. Today, with the new dairy policy, we are delivering on another promise. Clearly, the farmers of Canada are, and will continue to be, a high priority with this Government.

INCOME TAX ACT

WORDING USED TO DEFINE INCOME

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, Section 4 of the Income Tax Act describing how to calculate one's income reads as follows:

(a) a taxpayer's income or loss for a taxation year from an office, employment, business, property or other source, or from sources in a particular place, is the taxpayer's income or loss, as the case may be, computed in accordance with this Act on the assumption that he had during the taxation year no income or loss except from that source or no income or loss except from those sources, as the case may be, and was allowed no deductions in computing his income for the taxation year except such deductions as may reasonably be regarded as wholly applicable to that source or to those—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): That's very clear.

Mr. Riis:

—sources, as the case may be, and except such part of any other deductions as may reasonably be regarded as applicable thereto; and

(b) where the business carried on by a taxpayer or the duties of the office or employment performed by him was carried on or were performed, as the case may be, partly in one place and partly in another place, the taxpayer's income or loss for the taxation year from the business carried on by him or the duties performed by him in a particular place is the taxpayer's income or loss, as the case may be, computed in accordance with this Act on the assumption that he had during the taxation year no income or loss except from the part of the business that was carried on in that particular place or no income or loss except from the part of those duties that were performed in that particular place, as the case may be, and was allowed no deductions in computing his income for the taxation year except such deductions as may reasonably be regarded as wholly applicable to that part of the business or to those duties—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

MEMBER'S ROLE

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, today I would like to share a few thoughts on the role of the Member of Parliament, whom I would define above all as an ambassador sent by his constituents to legislate on their behalf in Ottawa.

Basically, a Member fulfils his role as a legislator when he votes for or against a Bill before you, Mr. Speaker, here in this House.

A Member who speaks out frankly in defence of a principle and who has the courage of his convictions, will make his sincerity and intellectual honesty official by coming to the House to vote. A Member who, in the course of the legislative process, has organized or taken part in petitions and demonstrations would be repudiating his previous actions if he abstained from voting on that legislation.

Mr. Speaker, on January 20, 1986, the House voted on the Family Allowances Bill. The Hon. Member from Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) did not vote for or against the Bill. Mr. Speaker, he was absent—

COINAGE

OLYMPIC COINS—DEPICTION OF FEMALE ATHLETES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, as we enter 1986 no doubt Albertans, and all Canadians, are looking forward to increased public involvement in preparation for the Winter Olympics two years hence. As a country, and a Government, we will be sending a message to the world about our customs, our values, and our way of life. One of the most tangible ways of supporting our teams is through the purchase of Olympic coins.

Imagine the surprise of one potential purchaser when she wrote for the coin issue and saw another example of the Government's attidue toward women.

Of the ten specially issued coins, only two include female athletes, one of those paired with a male skater. This Government has talked loud and long about equality. Once again we see the reinforcement of the notion that only our men can compete on the world-class level, and only their athletic endeavours are worth minting for posterity and maternity. It is time we became equal partners on the ski slopes and in the skeet shoots. In the same way, we should become equal partners in the economy, earning 100 cents for every dollar earned by men.

• (1415)

I ask the Master of the Mint, and the Prime Minister of the country (Mr. Mulroney), to revoke the Olympic coin proposal and ensure equal status for world-class men and women athletes so that the world may know in Canada we not only talk equality, we deliver.

ENERGY

GASOLINE PRICES HIGHER IN MONTREAL THAN IN BOSTON

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Last March, the Minister promised five times here in the House that Canadian car owners would soon be paying less for gas. Ten months later, her statements fail to stand up against the facts. My question is as follows: Why should people in Montreal pay sixty cents per litre for gas when people in Boston pay only forty cents?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member, as a former Minister of Finance, knows there are different levels of taxation in different provinces. He is comparing apples and oranges in terms of the different tax regimes in different provinces. Yes, the province of Alberta does not levy a road tax. However, the province of Quebec has a higher tax level than any of the other provinces. Surely the Hon. Member, with his rudimentary understanding of arithmetic, would understand that.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Minister has hit the point when he zeros in on taxes because what has happened in the last 12 months under this Government is that the federal taxes on gasoline have been raised 58 per cent and they have been raised zero per cent in the United States. That is the big difference.

COMPARISON OF CANADIAN AND UNITED STATES PRICES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Would the Minister of Finance explain, in the absence of his colleague, why it costs $10.84 cents more to fill up a mid-sized Chrysler at a gas station five blocks from Parliament Hill than it costs to fill up the same type of automobile five blocks from the White House?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): I will explain it very clearly, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: The Americans didn't have a Liberal Government.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): On September 4, 1984, we were presented with a $38 billion deficit which was growing and growing very quickly. There were a number of elements we took into account in dealing with that problem. One was the most substantial drop in Government spending which any Government has brought in in the history of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): A very large proportion of our policies towards that have been on the spending side, part of which has been in excise taxes. That has had some impact on the price of gasoline. However, let me also add—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Supplementary question.

Mr. Gauthier: We asked a short question; we want a short answer.

FEDERAL TAX

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): The Minister of Finance, of course, neglects to remind the House that his colleague, when she signed the so-called Western Accord, promised Canadians that gas prices in this country would go down as oil prices went down, and that has not happened. Why do Canadian motorists pay $5 more federal tax when they fill up a tank than does an American motorist?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to what my colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said. At the time the regulation was changed on June 1 of this past year, there was going to be a new regime which would allow market forces to operate, and they are operating—

An Hon. Member: Sure, they are.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There is going to be a significant drop, as the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said yesterday, as the drop in the international price works through the system. I would think that the Leader of the Opposition would be congratulating us for having the foresight to bring in this policy which will lead to a reduction in gasoline prices.

• (1420)

REQUEST FOR TAX ROLLBACK

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, it is quite clear to the Minister that market forces are not working. World prices are going down and our prices are going up. That is the reality. In Newfoundland today we are paying a minimum of 63 cents a litre for gasoline. That is because federal taxes have gone up 58 per cent in the last 12 months.

Mr. Crosbie: Nonsense.

Mr. Rompkey: The Canadian Automobile Association said that tax is unfair, discriminatory, and a rip-off. Will the Minister roll back those taxes and stop that rip-off of discriminatory taxation?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, Canadians are not dumb. During 1980 to 1984 they saw gasoline prices rise more than in any four-year period probably in the history of the country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): It was the result of the National Energy Program, plus intense regulation, which squeezed out market influences in that particular industry. If the Hon. Member wants to go back and read what the NEP said, it called for a price of gasoline which, had we kept the NEP, would have been quite a bit higher than we have even today.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I am talking about the last 12 months where there was a 58 per cent increase in taxes. That was not to pay for the NEP; it was to pay for the capital gains exemption and the bail-out of the banks.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rompkey: There are parts of this country where a car is a necessity, not a luxury.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a question, please.

Mr. Rompkey: Will the Minister stop this discriminatory taxation and stop syphoning money out of the pockets of Canadian motorists?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, maybe the Hon. Member from Newfoundland is forgetting one thing which has happened this past year, that is, the Newfoundland Accord. If he wants—

Mr. Rompkey: How about a consumers' accord?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I think what the people in Newfoundland want are jobs. It is jobs that will be created by the Newfoundland Accord, jobs will be created by the development of that resource, and jobs will be created by the policies of this Government which brought in the Newfoundland Accord, and which will bring the Hibernia oil field onstream.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT INSTRUCT PETRO-CANADA TO REDUCE PRICES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Energy my question is also directed to the Minister of Finance. Yesterday his colleague said it will take months for Canadians to experience lower prices for gas which the Americans are now taking for granted. This delay is costing Canadian consumers $8.5 million a day.

My question is this. Petro-Canada was created not to act like Shell, Gulf and Esso simply to maximize its profits. It was created to act in the consumers' interest as well. Will the Government use the authority it has and instruct Petro-Canada to bring down its prices now?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, deregulation, which was brought in by the Minister of Energy six or seven months ago, is designed to take advantage—

Mr. Marchi: Where did she go?

An Hon. Member: Oh, shut up.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There is a cheap shot from the cheap seats in the back row.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York West, order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Go ahead, Mike.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary question.

CABINET'S AUTHORITY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): The Minister chooses not to answer the first question. I will put another, but related, question to him. Section 7(2) of the Act set up to create Petro-Canada gives Cabinet the authority to instruct Petro-Canada how to behave. Therefore, will the Minister of Finance tell the House why Petro-Canada was instructed to maximize its profits instead of acting in consumer interests as well? Will he use that same authority in the Act to tell Petro-Canada to start acting in consumer interests and reduce its prices now?

• (1425)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, Petro-Canada was taking $300 million to $400 million a year from the federal Treasury and we thought that was an excessive amount of money for that company to take. We told it to act as a commercial organization and that is what it is doing now.

I have been hearing from some of my constituents, and maybe the Hon. Member has been hearing the same thing from his constituents, that Petro-Canada is undercutting some of the oil companies in market pricing. Therefore, in some cases Petro-Canada is bringing the prices down, and I think the Hon. Member should be pleased with that.

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF PETRO-CANADA ACTIVITIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the same Minister, who knows perfectly well that Government instructions were the exact opposite. I want to ask the Minister why the Government asked Petro-Canada to model its activities on those of the multinationals in Canada instead of making decisions in the interests of Canadian consumers.

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I do not think the Hon. Member heard the answer to the first question. I will answer it again for his benefit.

Mr. Broadbent: I heard it.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I indicated that I have heard from a number of constituents that Petro-Canada has been undercutting the market and leading the price wars. Surely the Hon. Member should be pleased when that sort of activity takes place.

TRADE

WATER RESOURCES—ALLEGED STATEMENT BY CANADIAN NEGOTIATOR

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Mr. Simon Reisman, our chief negotiator with the United States, issued a statement to a Vancouver Sun reporter on Monday in which he once again reiterated his support for fresh water exports to the United States. In the statement he said: "I believed in it then, I believe in it now".

Why is Mr. Reisman still issuing public statements of this kind on such a very sensitive issue, knowing the important consequences it has for the discussions with the United States? Does he not believe that it seriously impairs the credibility of Mr. Reisman's role in negotiating a new trade agreement with the Americans?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am assured by Mr. Reisman's office that no such statement was issued.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MAKE INQUIRIES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I am assured by the Vancouver Sun reporter who had the statement—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I know the Government side has no belief in the veracity of the press, but this reporter said that Mr. Reisman's office issued a statement in which Mr. Reisman reiterated his point of view—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! I appreciate the Hon. Member's concern. What is his question?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, will the Minister determine, from independent sources and not from Mr. Reisman himself, whether Mr. Reisman did in fact make that statement? Will he examine the question of whether continued statements of this kind seriously impair the credibility of Mr. Reisman as a negotiator?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will ask Tom Axworthy.

Mr. Axworthy: There's a stupid answer.

PETRO-CANADA

PRICE OF GASOLINE—ROLE OF CORPORATION

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance, who today has obviously succeeded in hiding the Minister of Energy, which is no mean feat.

Some Hon. Members: Shame! Shame!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You ought to be ashamed of yourself.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Blaikie: It's no worse than what the Prime Minister said about Malépart.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway just ask a question, please.

Mr. Waddell: Is the Minister of Finance aware that Petro-Canada has in fact recently tried to stop stations from undercutting prices? Is the Minister aware that as recently as December the Director of Combines pointed out that Petro-Canada has not been acting on behalf of consumers, but has been acting passively like the other oil companies? Why will he not accept these kinds of reports and direct Petro-Canada—

• (1430)

Mr. Speaker: Order. This is the third question.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, not being the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, I am not aware of that particular report. If he would like to send it to me I will look at it.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker—

An Hon. Member: Stand up.

Mr. Waddell: —given that the real issue is to force the oil companies to follow declining world oil prices, as I think the Minister would agree, is he prepared to accept the principle that Petro-Canada must be instructed to do this on behalf of the consumers of Canada who are saying "Enough is enough"? Is he prepared to instruct Petro-Canada to take that lead and in fact make the major oil companies start to reduce prices?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think Petro-Canada has been aggressively trying to expand its market-place in the last little while. I believe it is in its own interest to do what the Hon. Member is asking for. We do not have to instruct Petro-Canada. It has been doing that itself, as I indicated to his Leader in answer to the same question that his Leader put to me twice.

FISHERIES

ISSUANCE OF CLAM FISHERY LICENCE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Will the Minister explain why a four-month test licence for a clam fishery was issued to Mother Snow's Fine Foods Ltd. when the vessels it needs may only be available for a two or three week period in April, and may not even be available at all? Why was this licence issued when Mother Snow's may not even have the vessels with which to conduct the test fishery?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is speaking hypothetically. In fact there is a tremendous economic opportunity and employment potential in developing clam resources off the coast of Nova Scotia and several licences are to be approved to that end.

LETTER ALLEGEDLY SENT FROM MINISTER'S OFFICE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, if this is an economic opportunity, why did Mr. David Wegenast of the Minister's office send a letter to Mr. Robert Van Eyk, President of Mother Snow's, telling him the licence had been approved, thanks to the intervention of the Member for Cumberland-Colchester and the Member for Cape Breton Highlands-Canso?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the facts presented by the Hon. Member are untrue.

TRADE

WATER RESOURCES—POSITION OF CANADIAN NEGOTIATOR

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Minister made it clear in the House some time ago that the export of Canadian water was not a subject of the free trade negotiations. It is clear that Mr. Reisman has been musing about his favourite subject again. Will he tell Mr. Reisman to either shut up about water exports or resign?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, to repeat to the New Democratic Party what I have said to their representative in the Liberal Party—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —I am advised by Mr. Reisman's office that no statement on that matter has been issued by Mr. Reisman since his appointment as chief negotiator. I and the Minister of the Environment, and others, have made it very clear that we regard the water question as separate from the possibility of negotiations on trade matters with the United States.

GRAND CANAL PROJECT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. Could he indicate whether he has given up his early enthusiasm for the Grand Canal project and, if so, could he tell the House why we keep paying Mr. Reisman a thousand dollars a day to talk about something which the Government says should not be discussed any more?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is reaching back to statements that were made by Members in the House or persons in the Public Service before they assumed their present responsibilities. I remember, to my great regret, when he used to be a Progressive Conservative.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou.

Mr. Blaikie: Privilege, Mr. Speaker. I have been slandered.

INSURANCE

DIFFICULTIES FACED BY SMALL BUSINESSES IN SECURING LIABILITY COVERAGE

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Small Businesses.

Most small businesses are now—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps the House will let the Hon. Member have his question heard.

[Translation]

Mr. Gagliano: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Most small businesses are in a crisis situation due to a lack of liability insurance.

The Minister of State for Small Businesses has not made a single announcement or statement to the effect that he is going to help small businesses. I am now giving you a chance to explain your position.

Are you going to help small businesses?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to answer questions I do not often get from my hon. colleague.

Yesterday and the day before, the Minister of State for Finance answered your questions. She gave clear answers and we discussed them together. And the answers she gave you were entirely to the point.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister does not have an answer, I will direct my question to the Minister of State for Finance.

[English]

You said in the House on Monday that there is no guarantee for insurance. Will you explain to the House how you could pay over a billion dollars to uninsured depositors in the bank fiasco when you cannot ensure insurance for small business?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, as usual the Hon. Member has his facts wrong. I said that life has no guarantees.

I have been meeting with the industry this week. Throughout the past two weeks we have adopted a very important role in this area and we are developing a long-term policy. We have rolled up our sleeves and helped people because we recognize that the whole purpose of having insurance is to help consumers and small businesses. We have met with small businesses and the industry. We are banging heads in order to get a solution to this problem on behalf of small businesses and consumers.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

CHRYSLER CORPORATION'S CAPITAL INVESTMENT PLAN

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Chrysler Corporation has announced a $12 billion capital investment plan, including $3.9 billion in the first year, none of which is going to be invested in Canada. Will the Minister initiate discussions with Chrysler to ensure that Canada will not be the odd one out and there will, in fact, be a fair share of that investment in Canada for the production of jobs and cars here?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, let me assure the House that it is not a question of initiating discussions. We have had discussions with the Chrysler Corporation, including with Mr. Iacocca himself. I can assure you that their attitude with respect to possible investment in Canada is very positive.

Mr. McCurdy: That is encouraging.

WINDSOR ENGINE PLANT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, in pursuing these discussions I hope the Minister will ensure that the idle engine plant in Windsor, with its one thousand workers, will resume production in Canada in the future, rather than continue the circumstances in which hundreds of thousands of engines are being imported into Canada from Japan, Mexico, and the United States.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I will clearly take the Hon. Member's comments as a representation. Let me assure him that the Canadian automobile industry is doing very well at the present time and it is the Government's intention to ensure that its viability and prosperity will continue for many years to come.

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS

PCB LEAK AT DIGBY, NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. I have learned this moring that there may be another PCB leak at the CP Express yard in Digby, Nova Scotia. Will the Minister inform the House what action the Government is taking in order to ensure the safety of my constituents?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I was informed of the incident to which the Hon. Member has referred. My understanding is that there were some 12 transformers being transported by the Nova Scotia Power Corporation, one of which appears to be leaking. The dangerous goods representative from Transport Canada is en route to inspect this accident. As well, the provincial Department of the Environment officials and officials from Nova Scotia Power Corporation are on their way to take samples and determine the percentage level of PCBs.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGED SEXUAL HARASSMENT OF WOMEN MEMBERS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I asked the Solicitor General to initiate an independent investigation into allegations of sexual harassment and sexual discrimination in the RCMP. The Solicitor General refused.

Therefore I, on behalf of the Liberal Party, had no alternative but to file an official third party complaint under the Human Rights Act.

Will the Solicitor General co-operate and facilitate this independent investigation by the Human Rights Commission into the very serious allegations of sexual harassment in the RCMP?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I was waiting with interest to see whether the Hon. Member would have the nerve to raise the issue again today in light of his behaviour yesterday.

The House will recall that yesterday the Hon. Member, quite improperly in the House of Commons, used the name of one constable and alleged that she was alleging that she was a victim of sexual harassment.

Unlike the Hon. Member, I have had a chance to speak to that individual who is a well respected member of the Force, who certainly did not give her consent to be used in this way by the Liberal Party.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Beatty: I want to indicate, and the Hon. Member is free to talk to this constable if he would like to, that the constable told me today that she has certainly not been a victim of sexual harassment.

I would like to ask the Hon. Member for York South-Weston and the Hon. Member for Hamilton East to withdraw the false allegations they made yesterday.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question. Just a question. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East.

COMMITTEE REPORT

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): First of all, it is impossible—

Mr. Mazankowski: Question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: —to withdraw the contents of a document that was tabled before the equality sub-committee and an all-Party committee of this House—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I appreciate the Hon. Member's dilemma, but just a supplementary question now.

Ms. Copps: If the Minister does not choose to believe that letter—

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Ms. Copps: —which was appended to the report, does he believe a second letter from Constable E. D. Genoway, number 33724, who states:

That female officers problems centred on a theme termed Women Not Wanted. Several pressures are listed, negative comments about women, etc. I have often heard such comments just as I have heard—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Question.

Ms. Copps:

—derogatory comments about French Canadian members, natives—

An Hon. Member: Racist.

Mr. Andre: Speech. This is debate.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Member has asked a long question now.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I find it curious that the Hon. Member would raise the issue now. I have had a chance to read the committee report. This report was made by divisional staff representatives. The Hon. Member was there at the time that was done and she did not feel it was sufficiently important even to ask a question.

Ms. Copps: I wasn't there.

Mr. Beatty: According to the minutes, she was Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Rossi: She wasn't even there.

Ms. Copps: I wasn't there. Get your facts straight, Boy Wonder.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Order, please.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, if the vice-president of the student council would let me finish, I would like to complete my answer.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This should stop on both sides. Next question. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre.

INDUSTRY

REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE REFERRAL OF POSSIBLE SALE OF CANADAIR

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and concerns Canadair. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has refused to consider our requests for parliamentary consideration of the sale of Canadair because, according to him, it is a hypothetical question. Today, I read in the Toronto Star that the Government is now examining six offers for Canadair. Since these are concrete offers and since a decision has been made to sell Canadair, why can't the Government make a concrete decision to put the sale of Canadair before a parliamentary committee?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, once again let me try to convey the facts to the Hon. Member.

Mr. Broadbent: That will be a change.

Mr. Stevens: We have no offer in hand from a would-be buyer with respect to part or all of Canadair. We have nothing to refer to any committee at the present time. That is where the matter stands.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary question.

Mr. Cassidy: This is the same answer which the Minister has given before. I regret the Prime Minister will not answer.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): I have a supplementary. Since Mr. Marshall of the CDIC says that he is under no special orders to make sure the new order is Canadian, why, having sold de Havilland to a foreign company, is the Government letting the other major aircraft manufacturer in this country go out of Canadian hands?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, once again, as I have indicated, we have no firm offer from anybody, Canadian or non-Canadian. The Hon. Member is obviously not well informed.

INVESTMENT CANADA

TIMING OF DECISION ON PURCHASE OF PRENTICE-HALL BY GULF WESTERN

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, my question today is directed to the Minister responsible for Investment Canada. It centres around the purchase in December, 1984, of Prentice-Hall Canada by Gulf Western.

As the Hon. Minister knows, Prentice-Hall employs nearly 250 people and pays out over $1 million in royalties. When can Canadians and concerned employees anticipate approval or, heaven forbid, disapproval of that purchase?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Let me asssure the Hon. Member, Mr. Speaker, that it will be sooner rather than later.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

CHRYSLER CORPORATION—INVESTMENT IN CANADA

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. In his discussions with Chrysler, will he remind the company of the role played by the Canadian Government and Canadian workers in ensuring Chrysler's survival and, therefore, of its obligation to spend a fair share here in Canada of its capital budget of $3.4 billion for 1986, and especially to ensure there is a new manufacturing project in Chrysler's former engine plant in Windsor, something that could create as many as 1,6000 new jobs?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as you have already presumably recognized, we are well ahead of the Hon. Member. We have already drawn that to Chrysler's attention.

WINDSOR ENGINE PLANT—REQUEST FOR FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister now commit to give equivalent assistance to Chrysler to re-establish that engine plant as a manufacturing project in Windsor, assistance equivalent to that already committed to Hyundai and Toyota? Will the Minister do at least that to ensure some balance in the development of the Canadian auto industry with jobs for Canadian workers in the southwestern Ontario region?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to assistance to Hyundai and Toyota.

To keep the record straight, any assistance from the federal Government in the case of Hyundai was with respect to the ERDA agreement that now exists with the Province of Quebec.

As far as Toyota is concerned, no assistance was requested and no assistance was given to Toyota.

TOURISM

EFFECT OF GASOLINE PRICES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible for Tourism. The now Prime Minister in 1984 acknowledged the effect that the price of gasoline was having on tourism in Canada. His "Tourism Tomorrow" paper points out that we are losing both market share and American automobile tourists.

Will the Minister make the strongest possible representations to his colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, and ask her to exercise her legal power and, in fact, responsibility to the people of Canada by directing Petro-Canada to reduce its prices?

Hon. Jack Murta (Minister of State (Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, what we are doing in the area of tourism is to be commended, I think, by all sides of the House. We are setting out to market Canada in a very positive and aggressive fashion. In my opinion that will prove successful.

As far as any marketing approach in the United States is concerned, and the Americans have been asked about the price of gasoline in Canada, price has not had a significant impact on American's intentions to holiday in Canada.

EXPO 86

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, intention is one thing and action is another.

If the Minister is not prepared to try to get a reduction in the price of gasoline, what is he prepared to do for Expo 86 and the tourism industry in British Columbia?

Hon. Jack Murta (Minister of State (Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, in the context of Expo 86 in British Columbia, the Government has spent many many millions of dollars not only promoting Expo 86, but in building infrastructure in Vancouver, of which I am sure all Canadians will be proud when they attend Expo 86 and see it.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

BROADCASTING OF SONG LAUDING SUICIDE

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): My question is directed to the Minister of Communications regarding the song "What's It Like To Be Dead". I understand from talking to phychiatrists this song, under certain circumstances, could encourage a troubled or unstable juvenile to commit suicide, yet the CBC continues to air it. Yesterday I asked Mr. Juneau to accept responsibility and resign. Will the Minister tell the President of the CBC in no uncertain terms that he should improve his judgment immediately? Will the Minister ask the CRTC to determine whether the song should be banned from all airwaves?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members know perfectly well that according to the Broadcasting Act, broadcasters themselves are responsible for program selection and content, subject to the general rules and surveillance of the CRTC. Consequently, responsibility for CBC programming lies entirely with the executive of the corporation and its board of directors. As Minister of Communications, I have no direct power of intervention in such matters. However, Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that I will inform the CBC and CRTC executives of the concerns expressed in the House.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

REQUEST THAT MINISTER RESCIND REGULATORY CHANGE

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. On January 1, despite many protests, the Minister cut the unemployment insurance benefits for those receiving early retirement pensions. On Monday this week a member of the Forget Commission described that action as premature and insensitive. Will the Minister now withdraw those proposals and refer them to the Forget Commission which is studying the entire unemployment insurance system?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, this question has been asked a number of times in the House of Commons and I have pointed out the regulation change was first announced on November 8, 1984. It was subsequently reannounced when the Government allowed one year's lead time for implementation of the regulation. That gave employers and employees a chance to adjust to this change in regulations before it came into effect on January 1, 1986. That has taken place.

We have also referred the whole question of premiums, who pays premiums, under what circumstances and when, to the Forget Commission, and I look forward to having their report.

PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, nothing the Minister said justifies the proposal, and it has not consulted widely with the people it affects. They are finding out about it now. Since many of these people have to retire early, why is the Minister forcing them to pay premiums if they can never benefit from the program? Why should they pay premiums for unemployment insurance which they can never receive even though they are under 65 years of age and looking for work?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the basic premise of the unemployment insurance system in this country, as enlarged upon by the former administration, was that universality of payment into the unemployment insurance fund is required for practically all paid employees. There are many who pay into that fund who never draw upon it. Indeed it is for that reason that I have asked the Forget Commission to take a specific look at this issue.

HEALTH

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF GAS LEAKS IN STONEY CREEK, ONT.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Will he act now to co-ordinate with the Minister of Labour and the Minister of the Environment a comprehensive study into the operations of Chipman Chemicals Limited, located in Stoney Creek, Ontario, in particular to determine the effect of three organophosphorus gas leaks in the last ten months on the employees of that plant and the residents in the surrounding area? The last leak took place yesterday and hundreds of people had to evacuate their homes.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the issue that the Hon. Member raises has also been discussed in some detail with the Member in whose riding the plant is located, namely, the Hon. Member for Lincoln. Not only has the Hon. Member taken a very close interest in it but the Hon. Member has also had staff at the site. It does fall somewhat into provincial jurisdiction. We are looking at what other action should be taken, whether the suggestion that he makes is the one that should be followed. Our over-all concern, regardless of jurisdiction, is the safety of the workers and the citizens in the surrounding area. I take his point, as well as the one from the Hon. Member for Lincoln very seriously, and we are following it up.

Oral Questions

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

ABOLITION OF PENSIONERS' RAIL PASSES—LABOUR RELATIONS BOARD RULING

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. As the Minister knows, the Canada Labour Relations Board has ruled that CP Rail broke the law when it arbitrarily abolished rail passenger train passes for its pensioners. In view of this ruling, what action is the Government able to take to make CP Rail comply with its legal and moral obligations to its pensioners?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the ruling of the Canada Labour Relations Board did not make any recommendation as to actions or remedies toward the company. What the ruling does is that it enables the bargaining unit on behalf of the pensioners to bring that question to the bargaining table. I am sure, knowing the interest of the representatives within the unions and their concern about the pensioners, a concern the Hon. Member has, and I also have, it will be a point of negotiation between the two parties.

PROTECTION OF RAILWAY PENSIONERS

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): The Minister has pointed exactly to the problem. CP Rail argues that the pensioners cannot be represented at the bargaining table. I want to ask the Minister can he suggest what action the Government can take with the support of Parliament to protect the retirement package of those 27,000 CP pensioners who depend on this small privilege as a part of the retirement deal that was negotiated for them in the past.

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I have already indicated to the Hon. Member that the representatives, through their bargaining unit, and the former employees who were members of that bargaining unit, have been recognized by the Canada Labour Relations Board to be able to have that issue negotiated between the two parties. I do not think it would be incumbent upon the Parliament of Canada to interfere between negotiations that are now legitimate on this point which impacts upon pensioners in Canada.

ENERGY

PETRO-CANADA'S GASOLINE PRICING PRACTICES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I have a question directed to the Minister of Finance which relates to an earlier answer he gave to the House. I suggest he misinformed the House—I am not saying deliberately—but I would like him to comment. Considering a report issued by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission just last month points out the following with reference to the testimony of the Chairman of Petro-Canada: "Even more telling was his frank admission that Petro-Canada, despite becoming the largest refiner-marketer in Canada, would continue to be a passive price follower." In other words, Petro-Canada—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is not a lead question. Just a question, please.

Mr. Broadbent: Will the Minister tell the House where he gets this information when he says to the people of Canada Petro-Canada is leading the petroleum companies in bringing prices down when this report says the opposite?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member reads the "blues" he will see I was referring to comments by people in my riding, by service station owners who were complaining about the pricing practices of Petro-Canada. That is the sum and total of the statement that I made in the response to the earlier question.

REQUEST THAT PETRO-CANADA BE INSTRUCTED TO REDUCE PRICES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I have a supplementary directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources I would like to ask the Minister, since she is given the authority in the Petro-Canada Act to instruct Petro-Canada to bring prices down if it is government policy, will she now act to save Canadian consumers some $8.5 million a day by instructing Petro-Canada to set an example and lower gasoline prices?

• (1500)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, we have asked Petro-Canada to act as a commercial operation in the private sector, as he referred to in his report. Petro-Canada is not a leader in gas-pricing policies, it is usually a follower. It would be detrimental to the company's interest on behalf of Canadians, because we own it, to give it that kind of direction.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Tuesday, January 21, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Order, please. I am in receipt of notices of a question of privilege and a point of order. I will deal with the question of privilege first.

PRIVILEGE

ALLEGED UNPARLIAMENTARY TERM USED IN QUESTION PERIOD

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I realize that many comments are made in the heat of debate. However, a Member from the government side of the House called me a racist during Question Period. I believe the Hon. Member knows who he is and I would like to give him this opportunity to withdraw that comment.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member has put the Chair in some difficulty. First, it is clearly not a question of privilege but a question of language, and I therefore take it the Hon. Member meant to raise a point of order on the matter. The Chair heard nothing along those lines, so if the Hon. Member is making an allegation that a particular Hon. Member said something—

Ms. Copps: He stood up and—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not know which Member the Hon. Member is speaking of.

Mr. Gauthier: He stood up.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have seen no Hon. Members rising on this matter.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, while the Chair may not have heard the comment clearly, the Hon. Member who has raised the point of order did hear a remark. That remark was unfortunate but it was made in the context of the document from which the Hon. Member was reading and the statement made by a witness rather than directed at the Hon. Member, whose facility in both languages is well understood and commendable.

Mr. Speaker: I do not know why it is that I do not feel less confused. Is the Hon. Member saying that he made the remark and is withdrawing it? Is that what he wishes the House to understand?

Mr. Brisco: That is correct, Mr. Speaker.

POINTS OF ORDER

INTERJECTION MADE IN PREVIOUS DAY'S DEBATE

Mr. Sid Fraleigh (Lambton-Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, I wish to rise on a point of order. Yesterday, as I was attempting to point out some economic flaws contained in a speech delivered by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), an interjection was made, an interjection which I myself did not hear at the time. However, I think if you will check Hansard, Mr. Speaker, you will discover that there was an interjection made by the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) and that that Hon. Member owes the House an apology. I ask for this apology not for me personally since I have been insulted by experts. I do not need any lessons from him. However, he does owe the House an apology.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, sometimes the Hon. Member makes it difficult for me to withdraw remarks. I will certainly withdraw that which I called him. I must say that there was a lot of motivation behind it.

An Hon. Member: What did you say?

Mr. Waddell: I will not repeat what I called him. I would like to withdraw that word, and while I am on my feet—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do appreciate that the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) will sit down and allow me to recognize him on another point of order.

WITHDRAWAL OF COMMENT RESPECTING MINISTER

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, while we are all being so generous, gentlemanly and womanly, I would like to withdraw a comment I made at the beginning of my question regarding the difficulty in finding the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney). I see her in the House now so obviously there is no difficulty. I had just hoped that she would come in at the beginning of the day.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I would like to advise the House and the Hon. Member that the Hon. Member's own Research Office was told that I would be in the House late.

PETITIONS

SITUATION OF FIREFIGHTERS AT VAL-D'OR AIRPORT

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty as the Member for Abitibi to table a petition signed by firemen at the Val-d'Or airport, concerning twelve firemen who have been without a contract since July 1984.

[English]

OPPOSITION TO BUDGET PROVISIONS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to present two petitions, one from the Kamloops Women's Resources Centre speaking out against a number of the provisions in the federal Budget that discriminate against women and families, and another signed by a number of women from Kamloops, British Columbia, asking the Government to rescind a number of unfair tax increases in the Budget, particularly those that impact most specifically on women and families.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, a bit belatedly, I would like to present a petition from citizens of my constituency who are protesting against the decision which the House has now taken to deindex family allowances. This petition and many others will stand as monuments to the Government's failure to be responsive in this matter.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I too have the privilege and honour to present a number of petitions from people from across Canada who, among other things, call upon the Government of Canada not to deindex family allowances and also point out that there is a very real need for tax fairness in this country.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 403 and 410.

[Text]

RCMP SUPERANNUATION ACCOUNT

Question No. 403—Mr. Cassidy:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 4,484 of the 1st Session of the 32nd Parliament, how much of the $209.3 million decrease in liabilities that was experienced by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Account (RCMPSA) for past service by the decision that was taken to carry out an actuarial valuation of the RCMPSA under a 3 per cent annual inflation scenario, arose because inflationary interest earnings on RCMPSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries were committed to reducing past service employer pension costs in respect of current employees?

2. How much of the decrease in employer pension costs from 19.8 per cent to 11.2 per cent of contributory payroll for future service that was experienced by the RCMPSA resulting from the decision that was taken to carry out an actuarial valuation of the RCMPSA under a 3 per cent annual inflation scenario, arose because inflationary interest earnings on RCMPSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries were committed to reducing future service employer pension costs in respect of current employees?

3. Were representatives of RCMPSA pensioners consulted on the action taken to commit inflationary interest earnings on RCMPSA assets in respect of pensioners and other beneficiaries towards reducing past and future service employer pension costs in respect of current employees and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): 1 and 2. Before 1974, the actuarial valuations of the RCMPSA were based on a 4 per cent interest assumption. Rates of future salary increases and inflation were not projected.

In the 1974 valuation, the rate of interest was assumed to be 5.6 per cent per annum. Salary increases were assumed to be 5.5 per cent annually. These rates included an implicit assumption of 3 per cent inflation.

If no implicit assumptions for inflation had been used, the other economic assumptions could be regarded as being 3.5 per cent for real interest rates and 2.5 per cent for real salary increases. The effect of using an implicit inflation assumption of 3 per cent, and therefore interest and salary increase assumptions of 6.5 per cent and 5.5 per cent, respectively, instead of 3.5 per cent and 2.5 per cent was to:

(a) decrease RCMPSA liabilities by $209 million, which included a decrease in pensioner liabilities of about $163 million; and

(b) reduce the full employer annual current service cost that would have been required from 19.8 per cent to 11.2 per cent of contributory payroll. Of the 8.6 per cent of pay decrease, about 6.3 per cent of pay is attributable to using a discount rate of 6.5 per cent interest rather than 3.5 per cent during the retirement period of plan members.

3. Representatives of RCMP pensioners were not consulted about the change in economic assumptions used to value the RCMPS Account. The benefits of pensioners were not affected by the change in these assumptions. The assumptions were changed to enable realistic cost comparisons with private sector plans. Also, pensions are not negotiable with plan members.

EMPLOYER PENSION PLAN CONTRIBUTIONS

Question No. 410—Mr. Cassidy:

1. Since 1952 by year, what employer pension plan contributions and other payments, expressed as a percentage of payroll, has the Government made to finance pension plan benefits and their indexing for public servants, members of the Armed Forces and members of the RCMP?

2. For the same years, what proportion of employer-employee pension plan contributions and other payments made to finance pension plan benefits and their indexing for public servants, members of the Armed Forces and members of the RCMP have been made by the Government as the employer?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board):

1. Employer Pension Plan Contributions and other Payments, as a Percentage of Payroll, made to finance Pension Plan Benefits and Indexing for Public Servants, Members of the Canadian Forces and Members of the RCMP

DIVORCE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: When shall the Bill be read a third time, by leave now?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I think there has been an agreement between the Parties with respect to Bills C-46, C-47 and C-48. For the purpose of third reading, we would have all Bills read together. I have no objection to having third reading on this Bill go ahead now, but I think the understanding was that the three Bills would be read together. I have an order to that effect that I will be presenting later on. I think that third reading should be, by consent, later this day or—

Mr. Speaker: That is fine. I understand the intent of the order. Therefore, I take it is intended to defer consideration of third reading of Bill C-46 at least for the moment. There may be consent to introduce it for third reading later today.

DIVORCE AND COROLLARY RELIEF ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

● (1510)

Mr. Speaker: As Hon. Members are aware, on this day's Order Paper, there are 43 report stage motions in amendment to Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief.

Motions Nos. 1, 3A and 3B should be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) An affirmative vote on Motions No. 1 necessitates the question being put on Motion No. 3B;

(b) A negative vote on Motion No. 1 shall apply to Motion No. 3B;

(c) Motion No. 3A will be voted on by itself.

Motions Nos. 2 and 3 give the Chair some procedural difficulty in that they appear to make a substantive amendment to the interpretation clause, which cannot be done. In this regard I refer the Hon. Member to a decision of one of my predecessors made on May 21, 1970, which I quote in part:

> Amendments of a substantive or declaratory nature should not be proposed to an interpretation clause;

In addition, Motion No. 3 goes beyond the principle of the Bill as agreed to at the second reading stage.

Motions Nos. 3A and 3B have been dealt with together with Motion No. 1.

Motions Nos. 4, 4A and 5 will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) An affirmative vote on Motion No. 4 obviates the question being put on Motion No. 4A;

(b) A negative vote on Motion No. 4 requires the question to be put on Motion No. 4A;

(c) Motion No. 5 will be debated and voted on separately.

[Translation]

Motion No. 6 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 7, 11, 11A, 15, 17, 22, 23, 25, 27, 32, 32A, 33 and 33A propose to add new concepts to the Bill which would expand the scope of the Bill beyond that to which the House has agreed in principle on second reading.

Motion No. 8 also proposes to add a new concept to the Bill and, furthermore, impinges on the financial prerogative of the Crown. I refer the Hon. Member to Citation 773(7) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition.

[English]

Motions Nos. 9 and 10 will be grouped for debate. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 9 will dispose of Motion No. 10. A negative vote on Motion No. 9 will necessitate a vote on Motion No. 10.

Perhaps I might interrupt my ruling to indicate that I understand that there may be a change of decision with regard to the motions of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). However, that does not change the necessity of making my comments now.

Motions Nos. 11 and 11A have been dealt with previously in conjunction with Motion No. 7.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 12, 13 and 14 will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 12 obviates the question being put on Motions Nos. 13 and 14;

(b) a negative vote on Motion No. 12 shall apply to Motion No. 14, and Motion No. 13 will be voted on separately.

Motion No. 15 has been dealt with together with Motion No. 7.

[English]

Motion No. 16 causes the Chair some difficulty in understanding its intent. Before making a decision, it would be the Chair's intention to ask the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata), in whose name the motion stands, to explain its purpose and intent. This could be done either when the motion is called in its numerical sequence or later on, should there be some procedural representations, about which I will have something more to say later.

Motion No. 17 was dealt with earlier when considering Motion No. 7.

Motion No. 18 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 19, 20, 21 and 26 will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) An affirmative vote on Motion No. 19 obviates the question being put on Motions Nos. 20 and 21;

(b) A negative vote on Motion No. 19 necessitates the question being put on Motion No. 20;

(c) An affirmative vote on Motion No. 20 obviates the question being put on Motion No. 21;

(d) A negative vote on Motion No. 20 requires the question being put on Motion No. 21;

(e) Motion No. 26 will be voted on separately.

[Translation]

I have already dealt with Motions Nos. 22, 23 and 25.

Motion No. 24 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 26 and 27 have already been dealt with.

Motion No. 28 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motions No. 29, 30 and 31 will be debated and voted on separately.

[English]

Motion No. 31A seeks to introduce into the Bill provisions to assist in the enforcement of orders made under subsection 2 of Clause 20. It would do this through the activities of a federal agency to be established by way of the acceptance of a motion to be proposed at report stage of another Bill presently before the House. The motion thus anticipates not only the adoption of another Bill before the House, but also the adoption of a motion to be proposed at the report stage of that Bill. This is clearly beyond the scope of the Bill it seeks to amend, namely, Bill C-47, and is therefore out of order. I would refer the Hon. Member to the Journals, March 28, 1969, page 863.

Motions Nos. 32, 32A, 33 and 33A have been dealt with previously in conjunction with Motion No. 7.

Motion No. 34 appears to infringe upon the financial initiative of the Crown and, therefore, should not be proposed to the House.

Motion No. 35 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motion No. 36 will be debated and voted on separately.

To summarize, the motions with which the Chair has some difficulty procedurally are Motions Nos. 2, 3, 7, 8, 11, 11A, 15, 17, 22, 23, 25, 27, 31A, 32, 32A, 33, 33A and 34. In addition, the Chair has requested some clarification with regard to the intent of Motion No. 16, either privately or when Members make procedural arguments. It would be my intention to hear the Hon. Member privately or when the Order is called again, or whenever he proposes.

I take it there may be some Members who may wish to make procedural arguments one way or another. I am in a little difficulty as to whether to allow some time for the digestion of these notes and to try to hear procedural arguments later this day, or should the matter come up again, another day, at the earliest time.

I appreciate there may be some understanding about report stage and, therefore, I am prepared to hear arguments now, if Hon. Members are prepared to make them. I am also prepared to hear them later today. In fact, if the critics, the House Leaders or Whips could tell me when would be a convenient time, I am prepared to come back and hear those arguments. If now is appropriate time, then we will hear them now.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, if I might, I do not know whether we have had an opportunity to consult with the opposition critics. I have not spoken to the House Leaders about the procedural argument with respect to this matter.

However, I do have an initial difficulty. I read with some interest your preliminary observations with respect to the procedural admissibility of a variety of report stage amendments. Your Honour suggests that we might consider proceeding on Motions Nos. 1, 3 and 3A. The difficulty I have is that I have some objections to Motions Nos. 1 and 3B, I believe it is, and if we are to debate them now we may find in due course that Your Honour has decided to rule them out of order. It might be appropriate to decide on having an early disposition of the procedural discussions and proceed to debate a motion which is acceptable to all Parties.

• (1520)

Mr. Speaker: Could I find out whether there is any difficulty with calling in the next group, which is Motions Nos. 4, 4A and 5? If the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) wants to make argument with respect to Motions Nos. 1 and 3A or Motions Nos. 1 and 3B, I am prepared to call Motions Nos. 4, 4A and 5, and hold off the argument.

Hon. Members will know that this procedure is an attempt to not to have the Speaker simply rule things out, as he has the right to do. It is an attempt to see if Hon. Members what to make argument. But the debate has to begin. I, therefore, propose to rule Motions Nos. 4, 4A and 5 in order and have them called in group for debate and to indicate, as I earlier indicated, what the effect on those would be and to give some Hon. Members time. Then, I presume, should the debate end on those matters, we might hear procedural argument at that moment. Is that fair?

Mr. Gauthier: That's good.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, there were two matters which crossed my mind. First, and I hope it is taken in the spirit in which it is offered, I wonder whether the Chair might consider the possibility in matters such as this, when the rulings are so complex, of trying a system whereby the House Leaders could perhaps be given the ruling in advance, or even a preliminary ruling. One of the problems—and I understand the difficulty from the point of view of the Chair—is that what is going to—

Mr. Speaker: With respect, may I simply respond to the Hon. Member by saying that I have no problem with that idea. May I simply explain the technical problem? Obviously, amendments can go on the Order Paper until quite the last minute, in effect, six o'clock the night before. Therefore, the Chair is not in a position to indicate its preliminary view in any way until approximately noon or 12.30 p.m. What happens, therefore, and it happened today, is that as soon as I have concluded a view, it is typed and, as it was today, it is distributed immediately to the House Leaders. I know of no quicker way to get my preliminary view out.

Mr. Deans: All right. I appreciate that, Sir. The other point I want to make is that we have agreed among ourselves that we would deal with this legislation and complete all of the deliberations by tomorrow evening. I would plead with my colleagues not to take a lot of time in debating the rulings, otherwise the time which is necessary for debating the Bill will, out of necessity, be shortened. It may then be very difficult to get everything done.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: May I just address that? I could not agree more, Mr. Speaker, with the remarks, but that is not to abrogate the necessity of having brief interventions with respect to the procedural admissibility of the various amendments. I think we can save ourselves even more time. In fact there are, in my submission, a number of these amendments which are, while based on profound and deep reasoning on the part of Hon. Members who put them forward, simply procedurally out of order and, therefore, we might save ourselves some time. Your suggestion, Mr. Speaker, I think, is a very good one. After we finish the first round of debate, we can come in at an agreed time, rise and make our presentations on the balance of the procedural arguments on a brief basis, and then allow the Chair to make a ruling.

Mr. Speaker: May I clarify this for everyone? Shall we hear procedural argument at four o'clock?

Mr. Gauthier: No.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) does not want to hear procedural argument?

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I think it would be appropriate for us to start debate now. My only difficulty is with Motions Nos. 4, 4A and 5, which the Chair has ruled to be in order. They should be debated now, but my difficulty is that the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) is in committee right now so he cannot move his motion. That would be my only difficulty.

Mr. Deans: Someone else can move them. You move them.

Mr. Gauthier: No, they have to be moved by the Hon. Member himself.

Mr. Deans: By unanimous consent.

Mr. Gauthier: Would Hon. Members give me unanimous consent to my moving that motion?

Mr. Deans: Sure.

Mr. Gauthier: Fine.

Mr. Speaker: We are taking the time now which should be put into procedural argument. This is about all the time that should appropriately be allowed it.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I would like to understand. Are we going to debate Motions Nos. 1, 3A and 3B?

Mr. Speaker: I received a representation from the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) that Motions Nos. 1 and 3B are out of order. The President of the Privy Council wishes to present argument on that matter. I take it, therefore, that there is consent that we should now proceed to calling Motions Nos. 4, 4A and 5 and have them moved by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), with consent, for the Hon. Member for York South-Weston or, at least, that motion which which is in the name of that Hon. Member.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby) moved:

Motion No. 4.

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 8 by striking out lines 38 to 44 at page 5 and lines 1 to 8 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"lished only if the spouses have lived separate and apart for at least one year immediately preceding the determination of the divorce proceeding and were living separate and apart at the commencement of the proceeding."

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (for Mr. John Nunziata) moved:

Motion No. 4A

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 8 by striking out lines 1 to 8 at page 6.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby) moved:

Motion No. 5

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 8 by adding immediately after line 8 at page 6 the following:

"(3) A court may only grant a divorce on the grounds set out in paragraph (2)(b) where breakdown of the marriage cannot be established on the ground set out in paragraph (2)(a)."

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I just want to speak very briefly to Motions Nos. 4 and 5. The intent of Motion No. 4 is to make the Divorce Act for Canada one based entirely on marriage breakdown without the accusation of fault by one partner about the other. This was the intent of the earlier legislation and this has been the position of women's organizations across the country. It has been the position of the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women and, indeed, it is the majority position of the Senate Committee which looked at this question. It is, of course, not the situation that there may not be any fault to determine between the couple. Indeed, there may be plenty of fault on one side and not on the other. However, our position for the sake of the children, for the possibility of reconciliation, and for the sake of making suitable arrangements for custody and access, is that it would be far better to have the divorce taken care of on the basis of marriage breakdown, established after a year's separation, and not on the basis of an accusation of a marital offence as it is in the present law.

The intent of Motion No. 5 is that if Motion No. 4 does not pass, in other words, if fault grounds are retained in the legislation, the fault would only be used in situations where there was some emergency or some real reason for proceeding quickly. This, the House will remember, was the argument used for reintroducing the fault concept. It was in cases of assault, child abuse and in cases of very critical breakdown in the marriage so that the couple should not have to wait for a year but should be able to proceed more quickly to the divorce.

Clearly, there is no need to have these fault grounds if the couple has already been living separately and apart for that year. So the intent of Motion No. 5, our amendment, is that if fault is retained, it will only be used for real emergency type divorces and that the normal course of events would be to use the one-year separation arrangement.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, I did not see the Hon. Member of the Liberal Party standing. Because the amendment is very much the same, I think probably I should let the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) speak and then I can respond to both Hon. Members.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the Parliamentary Secretary. The fundamental principle behind these three motions is to remove fault, in essence, from the divorce Bill. I believe what we have here is a difficult situation because in actual fact it would seem pointless to maintain fault in the present divorce Bill because we are going to have to take into consideration, if we maintain fault, that is, adultery or physical or mental cruelty, all of the actions which would be required to prove there is fault, which will entail hiring lawyers and compiling evidence in order to develop one's case.

As I recall the argument of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), he suggested that the reason for fault provisions was to facilitate immediate divorce in the case of anyone on those fault grounds. In today's society, the faulted spouse can go to his or her own province and get immediate relief and he or she can get provisional relief with respect to custody and maintenance. I suggest that this is in essence costly, vindictive and time consuming. There also seems to be a lack of consistency. Although you can go to court on the basis of fault, that is adultery and physical or mental cruelty, you cannot use those facts when it comes to awarding custody or maintenance. In a very small percentage of divorces are those reasons used as grounds. Marriage breakdown and a one-year period of separation would seem to me to be adequate. However, if the Government intends to maintain the fault provisions, I would very much like to support the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) in Motion No. 5. This would mean that should marriage breakdown take place and it is more than a year before it comes to court, then it should no longer be considered.

• (1530)

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, I have heard the submissions of the Opposition Party's critics and they are really making the same argument. When the Liberals brought in their divorce Bill, one of the fundamental concepts was no-fault divorce. Many people favour that concept. The Government did not choose that approach. It would be wrong to call this Bill a no-fault Bill. It is a hybrid because it contracts the three-year period of separation to one year for marriage breakdown. That is a very sensible social advance for people who do not want to have their private life made public.

On the other hand, this Party recognizes that fault should be retained, both on the grounds of cruelty and adultery. It is our view that marriage is a very special contract. Indeed, within some churches, including the Catholic church, it is a sacrament. Sometimes there is a fundamental breach of that contract and people ought to be allowed to sue on that basis. We have made a policy choice. There is no right or wrong but there is a question of policy preference. We are maintaining fault as grounds for divorce as it pertains to adultery and cruelty so that a person may seek and receive a divorce if those are the circumstances.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Debate? Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, are we going to be posing the questions now or are we going to be doing it at the end?

Mr. Gauthier: Now.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): So far as I know the questions will be asked now on motions which are grouped and not contested. If a vote is required, then it will be deferred.

The question is on Motion No. 4 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion, the nays have it.

Motion (Mr. Robinson) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The question is now on Motion No. 4A standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the report stage analysis which the Speaker gave us approximately 15 minutes ago, he made the point that a negative vote on Motion No. 4 required a vote with respect to Motion No. 4A. Is that what the ruling is?

Mr. Frith: That is correct.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): That is correct. That is exactly what we are doing. A negative vote on Motion No. 4 requires the question to be put on 4A.

Therefore, is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion the nays have it.

Motion No. 4A (Mr. Nunziata) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The question is now on Motion No. 5 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion the nays have it.

SomeHon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 5 (Mr. Robinson) negatived.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 6

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 9 by striking out lines 36 to 45 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"proceeding to draw the attention of the spouse the provisions of this Act that have as their object the reconciliation of spouses,"

She said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this amendment is to relieve the lawyer of the onus of advising the parties as to the existence of mediation facilities. I know there are lots of lawyers here, but I am sure you will understand that for many couples undergoing the trauma of a marriage breakdown there is a potential conflict of interest on the part of their legal counsel. A lawyer's primary duty is to promote the interests of his or her client. That is his legal responsibility. Lawyers are in a conflict of interest situation with the Bar which prohibits them from meeting with both spouses unless each is represented or has been advised by his or her own lawyer. As well, there is no monetary incentive for lawyers to do so.

● (1540)

My proposal is that, instead of putting the onus on a court or an affiliated party, we remove the onus on the affiliated lawyers to advise these parties of all alternatives to litigation. That is why I would like to have a neutral party advise the couple that there are a variety of options available, such as mediation, reconciliation, the appointment of a lawyer where custody is in dispute, the existence of official guardians, family courts, etc. This amendment would, in fact, require the parties to a marriage breakdown to have one meeting. Mr. Speaker, are we on the mandatory clauses, the second part?

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order, if I might, to be of assistance to the Hon. Member. Motion No. 6, as she has drafted it, has to be taken in concert with Motion No. 7 which has been ruled out of order on a preliminary basis. In other words, because the Speaker has indicated that mandatory mediation is beyond the scope of the Bill, perhaps Motion No. 6 really does not make sense in this form. I have a few words to say on that. However, I do not think that at this point in time the Hon. Member should be talking about mandatory family conferences for the simple reason that this has been preliminarily ruled out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): As a point of clarification, I will point out that I will allow debate because it has not been ruled out of order.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, obviously Motion No. 7 flows from Motion No. 6. It was my intent to indicate a different course of action, that is, one mandatory conciliation meeting, unless the circumstances of the case are of such a nature that it would be clearly inappropriate to do so. In the light of my understanding that the mandatory conferences is not acceptable to the Speaker and has been ruled out, I would, therefore, suggest that it is not consistent to argue Motion No. 6 if I cannot argue for the need for a mandatory conference under Motion No. 7.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I share the dilemma of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). My Party is certainly prepared to accept the concept of mediation, at least the minimal one meeting. However, it does seem to be quite impossible to proceed with the loss of Motion No. 7.

Mr. Speyer: In Motion No. 6 we are talking about the duties which are incumbent upon a lawyer. The effect of Motion No. 6 is to delete the obligation of the lawyer to discuss with the spouse the possibility of reconciliation of the spouses and to inform the spouse of marital counselling or guidance facilities known to him or her that might be able to assist the spouses to achieve reconciliation. Whether or not one believes in mandatory reconciliation, I do not believe it is very much of an obligation to tell a client that there are available counselling and guidance facilities if he or she wishes to entertain thoughts of reconciliation. That is a social obligation which I think a lawyer owes to his or her client. Notwithstanding how anyone feels with respect to mandatory mediation, I do not think that a lawyer should not have that obligation.

I, quite frankly, would hope that the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) would withdraw that motion because I think it is a useful social vehicle for lawyers to make clients who have just come in aware of the fact that there are guidance and counselling facilities available.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. In light of what the Parliamentary Secretary has just said, although I find it extremely regrettable because the cost to the state could be greatly reduced if we had such a mandatory conference, I do understand the impossibility of the situation and, therefore, I withdraw the motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent for the withdrawal of the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 6 (Mrs. Finestone) withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): We will then move on to the next grouping which is that of Motions Nos. 9 and 10.

Mr. Chris Speyer (for the Minister of Justice) moved:

Motion No. 9

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 11 by striking out lines 18 to 24 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"arrangements have been made for the support of any children of the marriage and, if such arrangements have not been made, to stay the granting of the divorce until such arrangements are made; and"

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wish to withdraw Motion No. 10, but I will be bringing in a motion to amend Motion No. 9, if that is in agreement with you.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Motion No. 10 will then be dropped. Consent is not needed, it not having been moved before the House. I understand that the Member now wishes to move an amendment to Motion No. 9. Is that correct?

Mrs. Finestone: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Does the Member wish to do it now, or in the course of debate?

Mrs. Finestone: I will do it in the course of debate, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, the thrust of Motion No. 9, as you can see, is that arrangements are to be made for the support of any children of the marriage, and if such arrangements have not been made, to stay the granting of the divorce until such arrangements are made. In other words, in the original Bill there was a provision whereby the courts could dismiss such an application if proper arrangements had not been made. As a result of a prestudy by the Senate, a recommendation was made to the Government dealing only with respect to children that, in those circumstances, as opposed to denying a divorce, it should be stayed.

We think that the Senate is right with respect to this and, as a result, the motion which was then presented to the House was one which had been approved and recommended by the Senate. The Government accepts the reasoning behind the Senate's proposal, in other words, the ability of the court to stay an action as opposed to dismissing it. I think that is eminently sensible.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the acceptance by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) of the recommendation from the Senate. I understand the importance of the ability to stay the proceedings, but I do not think it should be only in the interest of the children. In a marriage breakdown my concern is for the spouses as well as for the children of the marriage. I think we must protect all the parties in a marriage breakdown while upholding the responsibility of those spouses. In order to ensure that a court will make an equitable and fair decision with regard to all, I think a variety of factors must be considered by the courts before rendering that decision. It may only be the time delay in which a pension comes due or the splitting of a pension.

There are a number of considerations. There is the consideration of the age of the spouse and the length of the marriage as well as the life-style and employment potential. Each spouse has a right to a dignified life-style after marriage breakdown and such a marriage breakdown should not relegate a spouse to penury. The life-style of both the spouse and of any child or children should continue, where judged possible, at a level similar to that enjoyed during that marriage.

It has been found that fathers in a marriage are rarely accorded many of the access benefits. I believe we must consider both spouses in our deliberations. It has also been found that the feminization of poverty often takes place after divorce. Therefore, we must be very careful to look at the financial support mechanisms before we move toward granting that divorce.

It has been found that after divorce the male standard of living has increased by 72 per cent while the female standard of living has decreased by 43 per cent. One must consider the implications for the spouse as well as the children when 43 per cent of single-parent families headed by women are living below the poverty line. The decision on support impacts both on the spouse and the child.

I cannot understand why we would allow the court to consider only the child and not the parent in this particular instance. I do not think it can be done in isolation. Therefore, I move:

That Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, be amended in Clause 11 by adding immediately after the word "of" in the first line of the motion, the words

"either spouse and".

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to support this amendment. It deals with an extremely important issue. I believe the Government has been unnecessarily insensitive to the economic plight of divorced women and the difficulties they face in collecting maintenance and getting adequate settlements.

The proposed changes in the law mean that one final protection that divorcing wives previously had, the possibility of the divorce not being granted at all on account of inadequate provisions, is being lost with the new legislation.

We know that Canadian women have had all too little protection in their economic circumstances. It is the wife in the average family in Canada who stays home to look after the children. It is the wife who gives up the economic opportunities for training advancement. It is the wife who has suddenly to find a job as a result of divorce. It is the wife whose standard of living drops a considerable 42 per cent while the husband's standard of living, a year after divorce, increases by an average of 73 per cent. These facts show an enormous disadvantage to Canadian women on divorce.

Some friends have said that I should not advertise the fact that there is a financial advantage for husbands because more husbands might take advantage of knowing how good divorce might be for their standard of living.

The sad fact is that divorce has been extremely difficult financially, apart from all the other problems that both spouses and children have to endure. The loss of living standards suffered by Canadian wives is quite unconscionable. I will be speaking on further motions to give Canadian women more protection.

This is a eminently sensible motion which recommends that a delay be considered on grounds of support for children. Obviously the wording of the motion is non-sexist because it is normally the wife who will have the children. In most cases it would be the disadvantaged wife who needs the protection, and it seems to be eminently reasonable and fair that spouses be included in the consideration for the delay of a decree of divorce to ensure that reasonable and fair economic arrangements have been made.

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with great interest to both representations that have been made. They have been somewhat compelling in some circumstances but the whole spirit of the Act is that divorce was not to be granted or refused on any economic basis. That is how we began.

The only other consideration we have been taking into account is the Senate's recommendation dealing with children and our international obligations with respect to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights which states that parties to the present Covenant shall take appropriate steps to ensure equality of rights and responsibility of spouses to marriage during marriage and its dissolution and, in particular in the case of dissolution, provisions shall be made for the necessary protection of any children.

The representations that have been made have given me some cause for concern, but the whole spirit of the Act is that we cannot deny or grant a divorce on the basis of whether a person is rich or poor. Accordingly, the Government will not support the amendment to the motion.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I would like to support this motion because, as I heard one of my colleagues say a moment ago, whether a person is rich or poor should not even be a consideration in a divorce case. I agree that it is not a criterion for granting a divorce. However we do know that after a divorce one of the parents often faces financial hardships, and it happens to be the woman in most instances.

That is why I would suggest we must give more serious consideration to what is going to happen to either spouse rather than be concerned only with the children's welfare. The children's welfare must have priority, granted, but we simply must consider the future of one of the parents, the woman more often than not. As someone pointed out earlier, poverty seems to be the lot of women and, after divorce proceedings, women are definitely poorer and often find themselves in a very precarious financial situation.

Therefore I strongly support this motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The question is on the subamendment standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour of the subamendment please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed please say nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Pursuant to Standing Order 81(11) the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

We now move to the next grouping.

Motion No. 12

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 15

(a) by adding immediately after line 22 at page 11 the following:

"(b) the ages of the spouses;"

(b) by striking out lines 42 and 43 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"spouses arising from the marriage or its breakdown; and"

(c) by striking out line 46 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"within a reasonable period of time, as determined by the responsibilities of each spouse for any child of the marriage, by the reasonable expectations of each spouse with respect to employment, and by economic conditions."

Ms. Lynn McDonald (for Mr. Robinson) moved:

Motion No. 13

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 15 by striking out lines 31 to 46 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

(7) an order made under this Section that provides for the support of a spouse shall be directed to one or more of the following objectives:

(a) subject to paragraphs (b), (c), and (d) to promote the economic self-sufficiency of each spouse within a reasonable period of time;

(b) to recognize any economic advantages or disadvantages to the spouses arising from the marriage or its breakdown and to relieve any economic hardship of the spouses arising from the marriage or its breakdown;

(c) where the marriage is of long duration and where one spouse worked full-time in the home and was financially dependent on the other spouse during the marriage, to provide support for the dependent spouse throughout his or her lifetime and to equalize the standards of living of the spouse awarded support and the supporting spouse;

(d) where there is a child of the marriage and the spouses had agreed before divorce proceedings were commenced, that one spouse should stay at home full-time to care for the child, to fullfil the terms of that agreement insofar as it is economically practicable.

[English]

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to see that the Speaker has grouped these amendments together because that is where they belong. We in Canadian society recognize equality as a concept, which I fully support. It infers shared rights and shared responsibilities, the need to move toward economic independence of all persons in our society, but nonetheless there are certain factors in the structure of a marriage that must be considered. When you enter into a marriage there are certain consequences on your economic independence. There are choices that a couple makes on the roles they will play within that marriage. Those are choices in today's society and I think we should keep them, but they do have economic impact and they do determine the economic independence of each spouse. Upon separation and divorce, these factors lead to economic readjustment and they need to be very carefully weighed.

The age of a spouse should be included as a criterion. Age should be a consideration before the courts in these deliberations. I suggest that time at both ends of the spectrum should be considered, not only the length of time of cohabitation, which should be a factor, but age of spouse as well should be indicated.

The older woman who has never worked outside of her home will need ongoing protection for an indefinite period of time under the law. The time limited orders for younger women could fail to recognize their potential for self-sufficiency. It is not only based on the goodwill of the partner but it is dependent also on the external forces of the market-place and the economy.

Retraining and education may be required, which may take longer than anticipated. The sickness of a child may interrupt the length of retraining and education. These factors must be carefully considered.

I would strongly submit that a balance must be struck between the need to protect the older woman and the need to ensure that the younger woman has enough time for education and retraining, and has access to the market-place. It depends on the economy. There is also the need to allow the other spouse to get on with his or her life and to continue without a heavy financial burden if the potential for economic self-sufficiency is there. This way there is no injustice to either spouse. I think the key, Mr. Speaker, is to find balance with no injustice to either spouse.

Motion No. 12 recognizes, in Clause 15(5)(a), that a spouse may have subjugated his or her own earning capacity for the other spouse during the course of the marriage and thus would be dependent on the other spouse. This subclause would recognize the situation of those spouses and ensure that the courts take into consideration their dependent financial position during the marriage as well as after the marriage breakdown.

Men and women in the 40 to 49 year age group are four times more likely to divorce than younger people in the 18 to 29 year age group. In an American study, it was found and quoted by the Department of Justice in its fact book that women below the poverty line were less likely to have child support payments than those above the poverty line. Forty per cent of single women with children below the poverty line are awarded child support compared to 60 per cent of women above the poverty line.

The main purpose of adding age in this motion and that marriage be a condition of consideration is to provide a directive to the court that these factors be taken into consideration and not left as a discretionary factor to be considered by the court.

I am suggesting that we give clarity in our directions to the court and that the criteria of age and marriage are inclusive.

Let us try to be more clear and more concise. It is for that reason that I ask in the motion for the addition of those factors, and I ask for support for the motion.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I would like to address first the issue of Motion No. 12 and then spend a bit more time on our own Motion No. 13. I think the Hon. Member in proposing Motion No. 12 and dwelling on the issue of age is obviously getting at the crucial problem. I do not think her motion gets to it as well as the motion we have proposed.

Age is certainly a factor. It is particularly because of the situation of the older spouse, especially the homemaker spouse, that we have put forward Motion No. 13. Age is a matter which is more flexible, and it is the criterion itself that we have to go into not the fact of age. I do not think there is any particular age at which economic dependence happens, does not happen or can be overcome. We have to look at what is really happening in the situation of marriage breakdown for the spouse who has been in the marriage for a long time, particularly the homemaker spouse.

If we look back to the divorce Bill of the previous Government, the concept of economic self-sufficiency was so important in the Bill that it would have caused untold hardship to Canadian women. It said that a wife on being divorced would have to become economically self-sufficient. If she did not, tough luck. If she became economically self-sufficient at any level, that was her obligation. What about the homemaker spouse married, say, 30 years to a doctor, who has been full-time in the home, raised children, and done voluntary work or work that will not get her a good job in the market or a decent pension or any of those things? Let us be very clear that this divorce law will now make divorce possible after one year even for homemaker spouses or anybody else who does not want a divorce. It means the 50, 60 or 65 year old woman who has been married all her life and in the home, making a contribution to the community, can be divorced after a year of separation contrary to her will.

She is supposed to become economically self-sufficient. Perhaps she can do so. Perhaps she can get a job as a retail sales clerk, as a domestic, or as a waitress. These jobs will be tough for an older woman who has had many years of doing other kinds of activities, and will mean a serious decline in her standard of living. Why, for this abstract concept of economic self-sufficiency, should a woman suddenly have to endure that loss in her living standard? It is simply not fair. Her expectations are built up, the couple has worked together, and she has enjoyed a standard of living which her husband has been able to provide. Therefore, in Motion No. 13 let me direct you to a crucial part in paragraph (c) which reads:

—where the marriage is of long duration and where one spouse worked full-time in the home and was financially dependent on the other spouse during the marriage, to provide support for the dependent spouse throughout his or her lifetime and to equalize the standards of living of the spouse awarded support and the supporting spouse;

You see, it is possible for the dependent spouse to become economically self-sufficient at a much lower standard of living. Let me quote again the fact of life that in marriage the standard of living for men goes up and after divorce the standard of living for the wife goes down.

There is nothing in the present legislation which, if left unamended, would pay any heed to the necessity for justice and fairness between the spouses, and would recongize the contribution made by the homemaker spouse and his expectations.

The Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women was very clear on this in its brief to the committee and that criteria beset out. Yes, there are criteria, but there is no priority given, and it does not say "equalize". A judge could simply say, "Well, the criterion of economic self-sufficiency is here, so I award the most minimal support for, say, one or two years to permit the dependent spouse to become economically self-sufficient". That would be perfectly legal under the law as proposed by this Government. However, it would be absolutely contrary to our understanding of justice.

Let us look at paragrpah (d). It reads:

—where there is a child of the marriage and the spouses had agreed before divorce proceedings were commenced, that one spouse should stay at home full-time to care for the child, to fulfil the terms of that agreement in so far as it is economically practicable.

Now, for many couples the arrangement is made that the husband will go out and earn the living for the family and that the wife will stay home and look after the children. On divorce the awards of maintenance are so low, on average, that the wife has to go out and get a job to support herself and her child because awards are not adequate. Now, with this amendment it would say that where it is practicable—and obviously in some cases this might not be—the original plans of the couple to have a homemaker spouse would be continued. It seems that that is only reasonable. It has certainly been a very important concern of the women's movement of Canada that the possibility of the woman making the choice to stay home and look after her own children should be there.

A Government that makes a big thing about the family, about the desirability of a parent being able to stay home full time to look after the children so as to give the family the priority and support that all of us would like to see it have, should live up to its own rhetoric and respect that by making it possible, on divorce, for the homemaker spouse to maintain those plans that the couple had made.

If this amendment does not go through, Mr. Speaker, we are going to put Canadian women in a worse situation than they already are, because the legislation puts emphasis on economic self-sufficiency to a greater extent than do our current laws. If we are going to add this requirement, this new responsibility of economic self-sufficiency, we have to take care of the people for whom this is not practicable, and that is, the older homemaker spouse.

For very young couples this is not going to be at issue. A marriage breaks up and the homemaker spouse, if there was one at all, has not been out of the labour force for a long time, so that is not a case of hardship. We do know that there are older spouses who are divorced and their situation is tragic. It is only elementary justice that we see that these amendments get through which give that protection to the older homemaker spouse.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak to this particular piece of legislation. I was a member of the committee that considered this legislation, and at the committee level I indicated my perspective with respect to certain provisions of the Act. I spoke at the time specifically with respect to Clause 15. I want to commend my colleague, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), for taking the initiative in sponsoring Motion No. 12, which is a motion to amend Clause 15 of Bill C-47, which is before us here today.

The fact that this Government refuses to adopt this eminently reasonable recommendation is reflective of the attitude of the Government to women. We saw today that the Solicitor General of Canada (Mr. Beatty) refused to undertake an independent review of allegations of sexual harassment with respect to women in the RCMP. The Government refused to conduct that independent external review, which would suggest that it simply does not understand the problems that exist within the RCMP with respect to women, and the sexual harassment and discrimination which exist within the Force. The fact that the Government is refusing this reasonable and good amendment that would support the plight of women who are divorcing is further evidence of this Government's attitude towards women.

What is wrong with Motion No. 12? I would like to indicate the purpose behind Motion No. 12. It amends or suggests that Clause 15 should be amended. Clause 15 of Bill C-47 deals with corollary relief. A court that is dealing with a divorce has the jurisdiction under divorce legislation to give corollary relief. What is corollary relief? It deals with support for the spouse and/or children and deals with custody and access. This clause that we are attempting to amend speaks specifically of maintenance. What the Hon. Member from Mount Royal is suggesting is that the clause be amended by adding immediately after line 22 on page 11 the following, the ages of the spouses. What does she intend to do? Section 15(5) says:

In making an order under this Section—

That is when a court is making an award for corollary relief with respect to maintenance.

—the court shall—

And I underscore and emphasize the word "shall", mandatory, the word "must".

—take into consideration the condition, means, needs and other circumstances of each spouse . . . and of any child of the marriage for whom support is sought—

What the section is saying is that the court, when making an award for alimony, should take into consideration certain conditions. Then it goes on to specify the factors that the court must take into consideration when making an award. The Act, as it stands, says that the court must take into consideration the length of time the spouses cohabited. Great stuff. It is important that the courts take that into consideration in determining the quantum of support for a particular spouse. The reasons for that are obvious.

If, for example, a couple is married for a short period of time and one spouse is not dependent, or has not developed a dependency on the other spouse, one could not argue very forcefully the support or maintenance should be a higher amount or for a longer period of time. On the other hand, if a couple has been married for a long, long period of time, let us use the example of a 20-year marriage, then the court should take into consideration the length of time the spouses cohabited to the benefit of the spouse who was rendered dependent as a result of the length of the marriage. It is good to look at the length of time the two individual cohabited.

The amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal indicates that not only should the court look at the length of cohabitation but it should also be instructed, under the Divorce Act, to look at the ages of the spouses. One might ask why that is important, but I think it is quite obvious why it is important for a court to take into account the age of the spouses in determining the amount of maintenance or alimony that should be awarded to a particular spouse.

Let us say that a spouse is a 50 or 55 year old woman who has remained in the home and raised children for a long period of time. Obviously it will be much more difficult for a 50 or 55 year old woman to find employment, particularly in these difficult economic times, than it would be for a spouse who is 20 or 21 years of age. It is clear that the more elderly one becomes, the less employable one becomes. I would submit that opportunities for employment diminish with age. Of course, under a particular age, one's opportunity for employment may not even exist. However, there is a prime period of employment for individuals, and after that period of time passes, it becomes more difficult for males and females alike to become employed. Therefore, it is important that when a court deals with support for spouses, it be instructed to take into consideration the age of the spouses. I would suggest that in the case of a spouse who is 50 or 55 years old, an award should be greater since there has been a long period of dependency and the spouse is less employable than another spouse who is much younger.

I think the amendment we are discussing is a good amendment. It is a forward looking amendment and it is one that shows understanding for the plight of divorced women in society. It is an amendment that will assist women who are subjected, during the course of a marriage and after, to considerable pain and anxiety. However, the Government has refused to insert into the legislation something that will he elderly women who are divorcing men, who are generally in a stronger position and have more bargaining chips when the time comes to divide up family assets and determine how much support should go to one spouse or another.

I would invite the Minister who is present today to rise in the House to tell Canadians and Canadian women specifically why he is discriminating against the women of Canada in this particular clause of the Bill.

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I will respond very briefly to some of the criticisms contained in the motions and the oral representations made by Hon. Members. Clause 15 does deal with corollary relief and with questions of support. Different objectives have been stated within the Bill itself and everyone can read the Bill. However, I would like to emphasize a few things.

First, a number of Hon. Members spoke of self-sufficiency. Self-sufficiency has certain limitations, one of them being that, in so far as practicable, the Bill will promote the economic self-sufficiency of each spouse within a reasonable period of time. Also, within the same clause, there has to be a recognition of any economic advantages or disadvantages to the spouses arising from the marriage. There has to be an apportionment between the spouses of any financial consequences arising from the care of any child of the marriage and any obligation apportioned betwen them. Of course, most important, there is the relief of any economic hardship of the spouses arising from the breakdown of the marriage.

Dealing with one of the factual situations illustrated by the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata), when a women and a man have been married for a long period of time, we want to relieve economic hardship, but surely the crucial question is the duration of the marriage and the functions performed by each spouse. Let me illustrate. Suppose a young man of 25 who is a dentist gets married. The wife becomes a housewife and the marriage last 35 years. It would be wrong for a court to expect that there should be a limited order like the one which is specifically designed for young people whose marriages without children might last for a period of a year or two. If a marriage lasts 30 or 40 years, it is not the age of the spouses about which we are concerned but the duration of the marriage and the apparent inability of a person to return to the workforce after being out of it for 40 years. Age per se means nothing. It is the duration of the marriage and all of the circumstances that is the important factor.

Similarly, with respect to the amendment, there is no hardship arising out of a marriage. There is a hardship arising out of the breakdown of a marriage. The only hardship within a marriage might be adultery, but that cannot be considered any longer with respect to the awards of maintenance as provided by the Bill.

The final representation I would like to make on behalf of the Government deals with the NDP assertion that we are trying to equalize everything. That is not our intention. Specifically, it is a policy difference. We do not try to equalize but, in a given set of circumstances, try to make things fair.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure to the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

Motion No. 12 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Speaker: That takes care of Motion No. 14 as well.

Motion No. 14 (Mr. Robinson) negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 13 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 81(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

I am given to understand that the House is now ready to present some arguments. Is that correct?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity of making what I hope will be a very brief and pointed intervention with respect to the procedural admissibility of the motions on the basis of your tentative ruling. In reviewing the motions on the Order Paper, I discovered that the objections I had intended to raise in relation to Motion No. 1 related to Motion No. 2, which, you have cogently argued, is out of order. Therefore, I will move to Motion No. 3B.

Motion No. 3B standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), seems to achieve the same purposes as Motion No. 1, and that is, the extension of the definition of a child of a marriage to children up to age 18. This will extend the Bill's provisions well beyond the scope of the Bill as agreed to in principle at second reading stage. It seems to me that on strict procedural grounds this amendment, being beyond the scope of the Bill, ought not to be put to the House. I think Your Honour will find that Citation 773(1) applies to this amendment, and I quote:

● (1630)

An amendment is out of order if it is irrelevant to the bill, beyond its scope—

With respect to Motion No. 8 which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Calgary East (Mr. Kindy), it appears to import an entirely new concept into the Bill, namely, compulsory mediation. I know that Your Honour has addressed this matter. While the Bill provides for conciliation to be suggested to the parties prior to a divorce proceeding commencing, the conciliation is voluntary. Compulsory mediation, on the other hand, goes well beyond this provision to require the parties to participate in a process of mediation. As well, there are financial and jurisdictional applications, financial inasmuch as expenditures would be necessary for the implementation of this procedure, and provincially inasmuch as there are elements outside the jurisdiction of the federal authority and within provincial jurisdiction. I think this must be considered to be beyond the scope of the Bill and, therefore, irregular.

I might add in passing that this motion would appear to imply, as I indicated earlier, a change to the Consolidated Revenue Fund to pay for the mediator. I believe this is something Your Honour mentioned in your ruling.

With the complexity of this procedure, my recollection with respect to Your Honour's ruling is that I am reminded, and rightly so, that Your Honour pointed out the financial initiative of the Crown argument contrary to Citation 773(7) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition.

With respect to Motion No. 2, the fundamental principle upon which the custody provisions in the Bill are founded are a determination of what is in the best interests of the child.

Mr. Gauthier: That has been ruled out of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I understand that has been ruled out of order, Mr. Speaker. I will move along, then.

Since Motions Nos. 7, 15, 17 and 27 are consequential to the adoption of Motion No. 2, as they refer to shared parenting without defining it, and are thus dependent upon such an amendment, the interpretation clause containing Motion No.—

Mr. Gauthier: They have been ruled out, too.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I believe they have been ruled out of order, too.

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Motion No. 3 which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson)—

Mr. Speaker: Could I ask the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) to give me approximately two seconds. There is so much paper at the moment that I think I have Monday's Order Paper which does not include Motion No. 3B. I want to follow the Hon. Member's argument. I wish to make sure I have the right Order Paper. Please continue.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Motion No. 3 which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby attempts to eliminate the grounds for divorce established in the Bill as agreed to at second reading stage. The effect of the adoption of this motion would be to eliminate any ground of divorce other than separation during a period of one year. The result would be that no one could be divorced prior to the end—

Mr. Gauthier: That has been ruled out of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Have Motions Nos. 11, 11A, 32 and 33 been ruled out of order as well, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Gauthier: Motion No. 7 has been ruled out.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I appreciate that the President of the Privy Council has come with a prepared argument. I know he is well briefed. I take it he prepared these arguments prior to the matter being dealt with preliminarily.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I have dealt with the ones on which you have asked for comments.

Mr. Speaker: I think that the President of the Privy Council will find that, for instance, with respect to Motions Nos. 11, 11A, 33, and so forth, I have indicated in a preliminary manner that I intend to rule them out of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What was Your Honour's decision with respect to Motion No. 25?

Mr. Speaker: The same preliminary decision.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What is the status of Motion No. 31A?

Mr. Speaker: Motion No. 31A, if I remember correctly, I proposed to rule out of order because it went beyond the scope of the Bill.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I wish to thank Your Honour for the opportunity of speaking on these important matters.

Mr. Speaker: I will now here from the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) and then from the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) on Motion No. 16, I take it.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I would like some indication from the Chair with respect to the groupings of the motions to be debated. Could Your Honour indicate which motions are acceptable for debate among the Motions numbered 1 through 10? If I am allowed, I would like to bring to the attention of the Chair that I am not dealing with a matter of substance, I am dealing with a matter of interpretation, for example, with respect to Motion No. 3. I do not know if Your Honour has ruled it in or out of order.

Mr. Speaker: I indicated that in my view it is a matter dealing with an interpretation section and, therefore, out of order. I indicated that in my preliminary view. If the Hon. Member wishes to argue that it should be procedurally admitted, then I am perfectly happy to hear the Hon. Member's argument. I understand that this is somewhat of a new procedure. Whenever I deal with a matter of this type my intention has been to indicate at least my preliminary views as a result of my review of the Order Paper, and give Hon. Members a chance to try to persuade me that the Chair is wrong in doing so.

To reiterate my comments, I indicated to the House that I feel that Motions Nos. 1, 3A and 3B, at least on their face, should be admitted. The Hon. President of the Privy Council argues that Motion No. 3B should be ruled out of order. I indicated, at least procedurally, that Motions Nos. 2 and 3 should not be admitted. We have dealt with Motions Nos. 4, 4A and 5.

I take it that possibly answers the question of the Hon. Member. I take it she now wants to make representations with respect to Motion No. 3.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, in essence what we are saying is that this is a change in terminology. It is not a change in substance. It is not a change in any of the matters which I think would place it outside of the consideration of the law. I am suggesting that the words I have presented to you are words which have been used elsewhere in the Act and that I am not derogating, abridging or taking out words which are presently in the Act, such as the words "custody" and "access". I am suggesting a side bar effect. I think it is a shame that these words, which are humanizing words, have disallowed me the right to argue in the interests of fathers, grandparents, and of parents. I would have appreciated the opportunity to have argued in the—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would like to make a distinction for the Hon. Member so that we do not become confused. The Hon. Member is now entering into the merits of the argument she wishes to put if the motion is ruled admissible. I know she does not mean to do that. I take it she is now making a procedural argument to the effect that there is not a substantive amendment to the interpretation clause. If that is her argument, I am prepared to consider it.

I will now hear from the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) on Motion No. 2. I hope he will also have something to say with respect to Motion No. 16.

Mr. Nunziata: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I will address Motion No. 16.

As I understand the procedure, Your Honour has indicated a preliminary opinion with respect to the admissibility of some of the motions. Your Honour has yet to render his final decision. In effect, by so doing, Your Honour has invited Hon. Members to present arguments with respect to either the admissibility or inadmissibility of all the motions which appear on the Order Paper and which the Opposition intends to raise. It is my respectful submission that in order for members of the Opposition to effectively deal with Your Honour's preliminary ruling, we must have sufficient time in order to prepare argument for—

● (1640)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member wish to make a procedural argument with regard to Motion No. 3 or does he wish to make a submission? If he wishes to make a representation about procedure, he can do that somewhere else. The Hon. Member may not know it but the Chair has every authority and right—in fact he has an obligation—to come in here at three o'clock and tell the House which matters are in fact in order and which are not.

It has been my practice to try to develop a courtesy in consulting to the degree possible. Therefore, it is precisely the issue of what is the representation the Hon. Member wishes to make which we are now hearing. I, therefore, suggest that he restrict his comments to the procedural argument.

Mr. Nunziata: Well, as I understood it, Mr. Speaker, you had not rendered a final ruling with respect to admissibility, but you appear by what you have stated, I take it, to—

Mr. Speaker: Please. I have invited the Hon. Member to make procedural argument about Motion No. 3. If he wishes to make an argument about the procedure of the decisions of the Speaker, that is for another time and place.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I am being asked—and I will, because I am being asked at this point—to make argument on the spot as to the admissibility of Motion No. 2, and I intend to do that.

Mr. Gauthier: No, Motion No. 3.

Mr. Nunziata: Motion No. 2, first. You have indicated, Mr. Speaker, in your preliminary decision, which I have before me, entitled "Draft No. 3"—I take it I am referring to the correct document—that Motions Nos. 2 and 3 give to the Chair some procedural difficulty and that they appear to make a subtantive amendment to the interpretation clause, which cannot be done. In this regard, I refer the Chair to a decision made by one of its predecessors on May 21, 1970. It reads in part: "Amendments of a substantive or declaratory nature should not be proposed to an interpretation clause".

I take it from what I have before me, Mr. Speaker, that you are ruling this particular section or motion—

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Speaker: I invite the Hon. Member to come immediately to a procedural argument on a motion and not to pursue what appears to be a further discussion about the procedures of the consultation. The Hon. Member is—

Mr. Nunziata: I am addressing the merits of the—

Mr. Speaker: Soon, please.

Mr. Nunziata: All right. The question becomes, what is substantive and what is declaratory because one is relying on the fact that the amendment put in Motion No. 2 is either substantive or declaratory. It would be my submission that it is not a substantive amendment to the interpretation clause.

What Motion No. 2, which was moved by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), does is attempt to amend the definition of the "child of a marriage". The child of a marriage is defined in Clause 2 of Bill C-47 as follows:

"child of the marriage" means a child of two spouses or former spouses who, at the material time,

(a) is under the age of sixteen years, or

(b) is sixteen years of age or over and under their charge but unable, by reason of illness, disability or other cause, to withdraw from their charge or to provide himself with necessaries of life;

What the Hon. Member is moving is that that Clause be amended to define a child as being someone who is under the age of 18 years in both situations.

That is not, in my respectful submission, Mr. Speaker, a substantive amendment in that it does not, for example, redefine or eliminate the definition of a child to include, for example, a male child or a female child. It simply extends the definition in terms of age which is different from a substantive amendment which refers to a child by height or weight or whatever. This refers to a child by age and by simply defining "child" as 18 years of age rather than 16, one is simply expanding the definition of "child".

The purpose behind the amendment is to enable the courts to provide support for 16 and 17 year olds, children under the age of 18 years. Under the proposed legislation the court can only deal with children who are 16 years of age.

Mrs. Finestone: Under 16.

Mr. Nunziata: Under 16 years of age, yes. What we in the Official Opposition want is to raise the age because we believe that a child of 17 years is a child of the marriage.

Mr. Speaker: Now the Hon. Member is making a procedural argument. So that I am clear, I take it the Hon. Member is trying to tell me that an increase in the age is not, in his view, a substantive amendment. Is that what the Hon. Member is trying to say?

Mr. Nunziata: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: Thank you. I will be glad to consider that argument. Does the Hon. Member have something to say on Motion No. 16? It is entirely unclear to me.

Mr. Nunziata: It is unclear, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I cannot tell what is its purpose and intent.

Mr. Nunziata: It is also unclear to me because there appears to be an error in the printing of the text of the motion. I will tell you why, Mr. Speaker. The motion reads, and I quote:

—(a) by striking out line 41 at page 12—

And if one turns to page 12, one finds there is no line 41. That is the problem.

Mr. Speaker: That is part of it.

Mr. Nunziata: Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I do not know what it means.

Mr. Speaker: The motion is in your name.

Mr. Nunziata: It is, but it talks about striking out a line which does not exist. So there is an error.

Mr. Speaker: For clarification, is the Hon. Member saying that this Motion should not be here?

Mr. Nunziata: The Motion as it was printed is incomprehensible, Mr. Speaker. The author of the incomprehensibility is not this Hon. Member. It happened when the motion was printed. If the Chair could set the matter down, I will try to determine what those who did the printing were intending or what motion of mine they were addressing.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member. I am prepared to stand Motion No. 16 down, get a copy of the notice of Motion which was actually submitted to the Table and try to figure it out from there.

If there are no further procedural arguments, as Hon. Members would expect, I want to think about the words which have been put to me with regard to Motions Nos. 2, 3 and 3B. They appear, with the exception of the reservation with regard to Motion No. 16, to be the only motions about which Hon. Members have some concern. I, therefore, intend to confirm the ruling which was given earlier, with the exception of Motions Nos. 2, 3 and 3B, and Motion No. 16 is still reserved, while I review the words which have been said. I cannot call Motions Nos. 1, 3A and 3B because 3B is subject to representation by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn). Therefore, I propose to call Motion No. 18.

Is that understood?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved:

Motion No. 18

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 16 by striking out lines 15 and 16 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

"Section (6), the court may include in an order under this section a term requiring any person who has custody of a child of the".

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple motion. It was brought to our attention during the course of the prestudy by the Senate. As many Hon. Members who were at the Justice Committee will remember, it was the general consensus that some type of notice ought to be given when one parent was going to change residence. The Canadian Bar Association brought to the attention of the Senate that the amendment which was made at committee stage was ambiguous. As drafted, this could be interpreted as only allowing the court to make such an order where the custodial parent intends to change the child's residence at the time that custody is granted. That was not what was intended. It may very well be that a court would refuse to interpret the section that way but, as legislators, we want to make sure that there is no ambiguity.

What we want to do is to amend Section (6) to make it absolutely clear that the courts have jurisdiction when the intention to change a child's residence is formed at any time after custody is granted. This is nothing more than a clarification suggested by the Canadian Bar Association so that at any time after custody notification has been given, as well as at the time the custody order is made.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Divorce Act

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 18 standing in the name of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 18 (Mr. Crosbie) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 19 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson).

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, we would like to withdraw this motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent that the motion be withdrawn?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 19 (Mr. Robinson) withdrawn.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood) (for Mr. Robinson) moved:

Motion No. 20

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 16 by striking out line 30 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

"child and shall not take into consideration the sexual orientation of the parent."

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 21

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 16 by striking out line 30 at page 13 and substituting the following thereof:

"child including;

(a) the love, affection and emotional ties between the child and,

(i) each person making an application under section 16(1),

(ii) other members of the child's family who resides with the child; and

(iii) persons involved in the care and upbringing of the child.

(b) the views and preferences of the child, where such views and preferences can reasonably be ascertained;

(c) the length of time the child has lived in a stable home environment;

(d) the ability and willingness of each person making an application under section 16(1) to provide the child with guidance and education, the necessaries of life and any special needs of the child;

(e) the permanence and stability of the family unit(s) with which it is proposed that the child will live; and

(f) any indications of physical and mental abuse on the part of one spouse toward the other spouse, or as between a parent toward the child."

Motion No. 26

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 16 by adding immediately after line 44 at page 13 the following:

"(11) In making an order under this section, the sex of the parent or the age and sex of the child(ren) of the marriage are not relevant to a determination of an application made under this section."

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address Motion No. 20 which says that the court shall not take into consideration the sexual orientation of the parent in making decisions about custody. It is our position tht the welfare of the child should be the criterion on which the court makes these decisions. There should be no arbitrary discrimination including that of sexual orientation. The court has already developed perfectly adequate criteria by which it can decide which is the more suitable parent for custody. We want to make it very clear that sexual orientation should not be a bar to custody. Certainly there have been cases where this has been argued. However, we think in a country which has made decisions about non-discrimination, where we have very clear criteria which our courts are already working with, that the welfare of the child should be the paramount consideration, that this is perfectly adequate.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address Motion No. 21. Awarding custody to either parent is a matter requiring very serious consideration. There are a number of elements which need to be considered. What I have attempted to do here is to enunciate a series of considerations which the court should take into account as a guide or tool in making its decision. It is not an exclusive list. The Parliamentary Secretary and I, as well as Members of the committee concerned, had an exchange on this particular issue. What I have been saying from the very beginning is that it is very important that the court, counsel and those parents who decide to read the law, understand exactly what the intent is.

I find the argument concerning the "tender years" doctrine, a very important doctrine, to be a mild argument and not enough to remove the other things which I think have to be considered.

I have indicated in my motion that the factors which should be taken into account when making an order for custody are the following: The love, affection and emotional ties between the child and either the father, mother, the grandparents, paternal or maternal, should be considered. Each person making the application for custody has to be examined very closely, their motives, what they can do for the child and what are the best interests of the child. This includes other members of the child's family who reside with the child and persons involved in the care and upbringing of the child.

I have also suggested that the views and preferences of the child, where such views and preferences can reasonably be ascertained, should be considered. That is a fundamental principle. Children in today's society, perhaps even in previous societies, but particularly in this wide open world of communications, know what they think and they should be allowed to express their preference. It should be defined in the law. It should not be based on practise or precedent. It should be clear and easily readable. If we want a humanized approach then we want a law which is readable and comprehensible, not only for counsel but for those upon whose lives it will impact.

The length of time the child has lived in a stable home environment is also a rather key issue. The ability and willingness of each person making an application under this clause to provide the child with guidance and education, the necessities of life and any special needs should be examined and that makes good sense. Parents who sit down with mediators or family counsellors can use this as a check list to further the discussion. The permanence and stability of the family unit with which it is proposed that the child will live is very important as well. Any indications of physical and mental abuse on the part of one spouse toward the other spouse, or by a parent toward the child, would of course have an influence on the decision made. We have a serious concern about family violence in our society. It is a well known fact that, although officially one in ten women are battered, the unofficial statistics indicate that it is closer to one out of every five. Therefore, point (f) would be of key importance in the consideration.

• (1700)

I strongly recommend that the motion be considered as a guide to the court, although not exhaustive, indicative of a checklist for fathers, mothers, and grandparents.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I want to point out to Members of the House that traditionally, as incorporated in this legislation and through judicial decisions, there is only one factor that really determines custody, and that is the best interests of the child, taking into consideration the means, needs, conditions, and other circumstances.

I would like to make a comment with respect to an amendment proposed by the Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) in committee, but withdrawn today. It is now incorporated in Motion No. 26 moved by the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). It is that the age of a child not be considered in the awarding of custody. It seems to me that in the best interests of a child its age and relationship with its mother are very important factors. It may not be the determining factor, but is an important factor in a given set of circumstances.

The Member for Mount Royal and I disagree in that I do not want a checklist, to use her words, in drafting legislation. I want to follow the principle that the courts will do what is in the best interests of the child. I believe in the courts, and I believe in an appellate system when the courts are wrong. I do not want to have a whole list of things enumerated. I do want to give the courts the latitude to examine a given set of circumstances and make a determination. If they are wrong, God knows we have enough appellate courts to reverse them.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I would like to correct the misimpression that the Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) had proposed a motion which involved the age of the child. That is not the case. That is the motion of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) who, I believe, has already spoken. Is there unanimous consent to allow the Member to speak again?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have spoken only on Motion No. 20. I spoke very briefly and I would like to make a few very brief remarks on Motions Nos. 21 and 26.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Member is correct in what she has said. However, the Speaker has said that these motions have been grouped for debate. In any event, the House has given unanimous consent for the Member to speak. The Member may speak.

Ms. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be very brief indeed.

I do want to point out one difficulty with Motion No. 21. I think that most of the points raised by the Hon. Member are perfectly reasonable, whether one believes in a checklist or not. However, point (d) refers to the ability and willingness of each person to provide the child with guidance and education. This also includes the necessaries of life and any special needs of the child.

This has, in fact, been used in court cases to argue against custody being given to women because the economic circumstances of women are so much less favourable than those of men. There are instances in which it has been argued by the husband that his financial advantages would be such that the child should be given to him for purposes of custody. We think it would be very wrong that the ability of a husband to earn more money than a wife, as a result of all kinds of discrimination, should be a criterion in making these decisions.

Similarly, one worries about the reference in Motion No. 26 to the sex of the parent. I think that the welfare of the child is perfectly clear as it is, and we do not want an additional qualification. Adding the sex of the parent seems to imply that the courts have been making mistakes about this and need to be given additional guidance. I do not think that is the case.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Section 15 of our Charter of Rights and Freedoms with regard to equality indicates that one may not discriminate on the basis of sex. That is the reason it is in there.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think the Hon. Member is using a point of order to try to speak again on the Bill. Members may speak only once on a matter.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a different point of order. I think the Chamber agreed to hear the Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) a second time because of the grouping of the amendments and the confusion about which amendments were being discussed. I believe that the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), whose amendment is being attacked, did not have a chance to address that in her comments. Perhaps, with the unanimous consent of the House, we could allow the Member for Mount Royal to address the grouped amendments with particular attention to the amendment which she did not have a chance to address in her initial remarks.

Mr. Speaker: I take it the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) is suggesting that she wishes that the House consider whether it wants to hear the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) by unanimous consent a second time. Does the House wish to do so?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The House agrees to hear the Hon. Member for Mount Royal a second time.

Mrs. Finestone: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will be very brief. I was trying to point out that in my view it is illegal to draft the Bill in this way. I feel that this motion reflects the spirit of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and it is in the spirit of equality for all to prevent discrimination based on sex. The particular sex of the parent or the child should not be brought into consideration when the court is giving effect to any separation or parenting order. My concern is that the best interests of the child be served. The sex of the parent is not the consideration; it is the child who is the consideration. That was the whole point, Mr. Speaker.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I, too, would like to take a few moments to speak in defence of the amendment prosposed by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Although the Member for Cambridge (Mr. Speyer) claims that these issues are decided by the courts and that the courts should be directed only by their own judgments, I believe that the message which should go out from this House with respect to divorce legislation is that the best interests of the child are, above all, paramount, but at the same time there should not be discrimination on the basis of sex. The Member for Cambridge addressed the age issue implying that if the child were young perhaps the mother-child relationship would be stronger than the father-child relationship, thus giving the potential of custody being awarded to the mother.

I perhaps speak only from anecdotal evidence but, just as in a number of economic questions we women have been discriminated against on a regular basis, in the area of custody the courts have tended, in many cases, to discriminate against men who have made applications in a bona fide way. I am sure that many of us often hear stories of great difficulties faced by fathers who are really interested in the best interests of their children and who do not have the opportunity to seek custody because the overwhelming number of court judgments are biased in favour of women. Perhaps socio-economic custom is the reason for that.

However, the intention of this particular amendment, which was discussed at length in the context of our social policy group in the Liberal caucus, was to say that as a Parliament we feel that custody judgments should not be decided on the basis of who earns the best income. At the same time, they should not be decided on the basis of gender.

If we are truly committed to the notion that men and women should share an equal responsibility in parenting and nurturing, that responsibility should transfer itself into rights in a court of law. At the moment I believe that in many instances the court is still ruling in an unfair way, denying the men of our population the right of equal opportunity for shared or complete custody of their children.

The Member for Broadview-Greenwood says that we should let the courts decide. In fact, one reason why we set up a committee on equality to travel across the country was so that Parliament could decide that in matters of legal jurisdiction we do not want discrimination on the basis of gender. Past court judgments have shown that discrimination still exists on the basis of gender. This is an attempt to address that question. I believe it is a sound amendment in keeping with the Charter.

• (1710)

Rather than forcing parents into lengthy legal battles which are not in the best interest of their children in the long run, why can Parliament not send a direction to the courts saying that in 1986, if we believe in shared parenting and shared responsibility and joy of raising our children, surely that position should translate itself into court judgments.

The message we are sending to the courts is that the current system continues to be discriminatory, and one way to address that problem is by taking the gender out of the decision-making process in the courts. Obviously, many other factors must be considered, but I would argue that many Members have probably seen cases where men have been discriminated against in custody battles in court. Just as I would fight for financial equality for women, it is fair to fight for a movement toward equality for men in the issue of custody.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The first question is on Motion No. 20 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it. I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 20 (Mr. Robinson) negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 21 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Ms. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it. I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 21 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 26 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it. I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 26 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Speaker: I have reviewed the arguments made by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn). I have re-examined Motion Nos. 2 and 3, the Bill itself and Motion No. 3B.

The argument made with regard to Motion No. 2 is that it was not a substantive amendment to the Bill but one that simply changed the age 16 to a higher age. I must find that it is in fact a substantive amendment. A change in the number is a substantive amendment, as a matter of consequence. Because it is increasing the number, clearly it enlarges the scope of the definitions and, therefore, its application to the Bill. On either of those counts it would have to be ruled out. Therefore, I must rule Motion No. 2 out of order.

I have similar difficulty with Motion No. 3 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. It adds definitions to the interpretation clause, which is normally regarded as out of order. Unless I misread the intent of the amendments, they were definitions that were introduced to have an effect on later amendments. In other words, the change is clearly a substantive change in the interpretation clause whose purpose was to relate to other amendments which themselves have been ruled out of order. Therefore, I suggest to the Hon. Member that the change in the interpretation clause must be procedurally regarded as inadmissible.

With respect to Motion No. 3B, I indicated that my preliminary view was that the proposal was to change the definition within the Section only, if I recall, to introduce a concept of age. It is not at all clear that that would enlarge the scope of the application to the Bill. As I read it, it would suggest a change within that one Section. In that context I am prepared to give the benefit of the doubt and allow the Member to have her motion put.

As I indicated previously, I would expect it to be grouped with Motions Nos. 1 and 3A and that a vote on Motion No. 1 would dispose of Motion No. 3B. Therefore, I propose to turn to Motion Nos. 1, 3A and 3B.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order just for clarification. In light of the ruling on Motion No. 2, that a change from 16 to 18 is not in order, is that not absolutely inconsistent with your ruling—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary knows much better.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 2

(a) by striking out lines 11 to 19 at page 1.

Motion No. 3A

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 17 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"of education, illness, disability or other cause, to".

Motion No. 3B

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 6 by striking out line 46 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"opposed and the child of the marriage, hereinafter to be interpreted for the purposes of this Act to mean a child of two spouses or former spouses who, at the material time,

(a) is under eighteen years of age and who has not yet withdrawn from the charge of his or her parents, or

(b) is eighteen years of age or over and under their charge but unable, by reason of illness, disability or other cause, to withdraw from their charge or to obtain the necessaries of life, in".

She said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased with what you just said and I hope that I understand its intent. It allows me to express some very serious concerns. In Motion No. 1, I am seeking to strike out lines 11 to 19 at page 1 of the Bill which provides the definition of "child of the marriage". It reads:

"Child of the marriage" means a child of two spouses or former spouses who, at the material time,

(a) is under the age of sixteen years, or

(b) is sixteen years of age or over and under their charge but unable, by reason of illness, disability or other cause, to withdraw from their charge or to provide himself with necessaries of life;

I also seek to strike out lines 39 and 40 at page 2 and lines 1 to 7 at page 3 of Clause 2(2) of the Bill which states:

For the purposes of the definition "child of the marriage" in subsection (1), a child of two spouses or former spouses includes

(a) any person for whom they both stand in the place of parents; and

(b) any person of whom one is the parent and for whom the other stands in the place of a parent.

Before I deal with Motion No. 3A, let me deal with Motion No. 3B. My purpose in striking out those lines contained in Motion No. 1 is so that I could address, under Clause 6, the reason why I believe that one should have a different definition of "child of the marriage".

• (1720)

Clause 6 is to be amended by striking out line 46 at page 4. It should then read "When an application for an order under Section 16"—that is the custody section—"is made in a divorce proceeding to a court in a province and is opposed and the child of the marriage hereinafter to be interpreted for the purpose of this Act to mean a child of two spouses or former spouses who at the material time is under 18 years of age and who has not yet withdrawn from the charge of his or her parents or is 18 years of age or over and under their charge but unable by reason of illness, disability or other causes to withdraw from their charge or to obtain the necessaries of life".

The key here is that in today's society one can ill-conceive of a child just at the age of 16 having to go back to the court to be considered as a third party, or requiring unclear reasons to allow him or her to go back to school or to stay in school.

The whole spirit of my motion involves the need for consideration of youths age 16 and 17 who are at an extremely vulnerable age and at a very serious stage in their life. I think the assurance of support and maintenance is key to the stability, both mental and physical, of these young people. We should not terminate support at age 16. Very often children are still in school at that age. If not, they encounter very great difficulties in trying to find a job.

It should be noted that in the 1981 census Canada had over half a million single parent families headed by women, and almost 43 per cent of those single parent families had incomes below the poverty line. Their median income was $13,928 compared to the median income of $27,838 for all Canadian families. Interestingly enough, the median income for single parent families headed by men was $24,813.

With that many single parents with children under the age of 18 who need to have education and to be brought up well nourished so they can become active members in our society I think we need to consider including 16 and 17 year olds in our Bill.

It costs $1 billion to our treasury every year for welfare because we do not do a proper support job for single parents, particularly for women. There is a cost out of the Canada Insurance Plan for which the Government pays 50 per cent. When you are talking of a billion dollars, I think there should be room to extend the Bill, if that is what is necessary. It is up to parliamentarians to have the right to make those decisions.

In this respect, we have all kinds of federal legislation today which indicates 18 as the proper age for consideration. The argument that it is at the provincial level does not hold any water, because both at the provincial and the federal level the Elections Act, the Young Offenders Act and the Criminal Code, all use the age of 18. I see no reason not to apply that yeardstick in this instance which goes to the very core of our society and which impacts on children in homes. Whether the single parent is male or female, the important issue is that the child up to the age of 18 be supported.

Those remarks were with respect to Motion No. 1. and Motion No. 3B.

With respect to Motion 3A, that is a fall-back position. In the event this amendment is ruled out of order or the House does not accept it, at least make it clear to the courts that if you are only to protect children up to the age or 16 and if over the age of 16 there has to be illness, disability or some other reason, which is certainly not clearly defined, one should at least adds the words in the amendment that I proposed in Motion No. 3A, namely, in Clause 2 striking out line 17 at page 1, substituting that the child of the marriage would include one who is 16 years of age and over and is under their charge but unable by reason of education, illness, disability or other causes to withdraw from their charge and to obtain the necessaries of life.

I think this is a very small cost to protect the youth, the future of our country, and to allow them to dream dreams instead of having the nightmare of going to the courts. I strongly suggest that one of these amendments be accepted.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I refrained from interrupting my hon. colleague from Mount Royal—

Mr. Speaker: Is this an argument on Motion No. 1?

Mr. Nunziata: No, Mr. Speaker. I have some confusion in my mind. You have indicated that Motion No. 1 is in order. Is that correct?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Nunziata: If I may, Mr. Speaker, I would ask that you reconsider.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the the Hon. Member now making a comment on the ruling?

Mr. Nunziata: No.

Mr. Speaker: What is the Hon. Member trying to do, immediately, please, on his point of order?

Mr. Nunziata: Motion No. 1. strikes lines 11 to 19.

Mr. Speaker: With great respect what is the point of order, please?

Mr. Nunziata: The effect of Motion No. 1 is to strike something—

Mr. Speaker: What is the point of order?

Mr. Nunziata: —and to replace it with nothing.

Mr. Speyer: That is what I was saying.

Mr. Nunziata: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Speyer) agrees with me. I would suggest, on a point of order, that you cannot simply eliminate something and not replace it with something because you will not have a definition of a child.

Mr. Speaker: A motion to delete is always in order. The Hon. Member, with great respect, has made a comment on a ruling. Order. With great respect, if the Hon. Member tries that again—

Mr. Skelly: What is going to happen?

Mr. Speaker: I am going to hit him on the wrist with my rubber pencil.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald).

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak against Motion No. 1 and to make a few brief remarks on Motion Nos. 3A and 3B. It seems to me Motions Nos. 3A and 3B are eminently supportable. They are reasonable motions in the light of Canadian society at the present time where young people are still an expense at ages 16 and 17. We have a society that requires more and more education in order that young people get jobs. It seems quite reasonable that young people at the age of 16 and 17 be considered as children of the family for the purpose of this Act.

I support also the specific proposal of Motion No. 3A to add education to the list as one of the criteria for which support should be considered. I would urge adoption of Motions Nos. 3A and 3B.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak to Motion No. 1. The effect of Motion No. 1 is to strike out lines 11 to 19 at page 1 and to strike out lines 39 and 40 at page 2. First, by striking out lines 11 to 19 at page 1 it strikes out the definition of a child.

Mr. Speyer: Right.

Mr. Nunziata: The definition of a child as defined under the Act is that a child of a marriage means a child of two spouses or former spouses who at the material time (a) is under the age of 16 or (b) is 16 years of age or over and under their charge but unable, by reason of illness, disability or other cause, to withdraw from their charge to obtain the necessaries of life. The effect of Motion No. 1 is to delete it. Now you have to go to another motion. If you are going to delete it, what are you going to replace it with? I am sure all Hon. Members will agree that we must have a definition of a child.

• (1730)

We, in the Official Opposition, have made a recommendation. We have moved that the age, or the definition of a child be changed to define a child as being someone under the age of 18, or over the age of 18 and under the charge and care of the parent. I indicated previously in other submissions the reasons why we wanted to increase the age regarding the definition of a child.

Because you have ruled Motion No. 2 out of order we are left with Motion No. 3B to speak to. It says that we are changing the definition of a child to increase the age to 18 years. If Clause 1 carries then Motion No. 3B has to replace Motion No. 1, which would be a good result. We believe that there is not much difference between a child who is 17 and a child who is 16. Generally speaking, children are in high school until the age of 18 or 19, and we are saying that this Act, as is presented, discriminates against children who are 16 and 17 years of age, because the Act defines the child as someone under the age of 16. So a 16-year-old could not be the subject of an order by the court with respect to access or custody because you are defining a child as someone under the age of 16.

I would ask any Member in this House to say to me that a child who is 16 years of age is not a child and should not be subject to a court order. In the Province of Ontario a parent continues to have control over a child until the age of 16. It seems inconsistent to have provincial legislation that defines a child in one particular way, and federal legislation to define it in another. This definition appears under the present Act. If you allow this to carry the court would have no jurisdiction to order a husband to pay support for a 16-year-old child because the definition would not include a child that is 16.

The Parliamentary Secretary will argue, however, under Clause (b) if the person is 16 years of age or over and under their charge, but unable by reason of illness, disability or other cause, to withdraw from their charge or to obtain the necessities of life, then that would encompass a 16-year-old child. Why leave that discretion to the court? If I was a spouse and I wanted to argue that I should not pay support to a 16-year-old child I would argue that that particular 16-year-old child could fend for him herself and should go out and find a job.

The point we are trying to make is that the definition of a child should define a child as being someone 18 years of age or younger, because in modern day society when we speak of children that is whom we are speaking of. In Ontario you have to be 18 in order to enter into contracts; you have to be 18 in Canada to vote. Under other legislation have defined an adult to be someone 18 years of age and older. Therefore, should we define a child as being someone 18 years of age and under? There is an inconsistency. I point that out to the Parliamentary Secretary and I am very curious to hear his submissions with respect to the definition of a child.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the submissions that have been made by the Liberal Party, it seems to me they are trying to do indirectly what they cannot to directly as a result of your ruling. Let me try to explain this.

The definition of a child, for the purposes of this Act and the amendment that was proposed, was to be done by way of Motion 2. That motion was ruled to be out of order. What they have done is taken some solace in putting it with respect to Section 6 of the Divorce Act, which only applies to the transfer of divorce proceedings where there is a custody application, and where the essence of it is whether or not the child is substantially connected to one province or another. What you have is a hiatus, which I think the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) was alluding to, in these situations. You would not have, in light of the ruling that was made—quite proper in my view—

Mr. Speaker: Could I invite the Parliamentary Secretary, and all others, even when they have nice things to say about the Speaker's rulings to just say nothing.

Mr. Nunziata: Quit stroking, we can see right through you.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, the factual situation is that in light of the ruling that has been made there would be no definition of a child whatsoever. This is totally inadequate. By putting it under Section 6, which only deals with the transfer of divorce proceedings, under which the child comes within provincial jurisdiction, it makes absolutely no sense. I am not even going to deal with the merits, except to say this with respect to moving it form 16 to 18. We have heard from the Canadian Bar Association, the Quebec Bar Association, and both women's and men's associations, and not once has this ever been a problem to anybody. Over the whole range of the Act we have had numerous difficulties and policy choices. Until it was brought to the attention of the House by the Hon. Member, who I know feels very sincerely, it has never been a practical problem. If there is nothing wrong, what do we have to fix?

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Questions.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

Motion No. 1 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Speaker: That obviates the question on Motion No. 3B.

Therefore, the remaining question is on Motion No. 3A standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The question is on Motion No. 24 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Calgary East (Mr. Kindy).

Mr. Kindy is not here. Does anybody seek consent of the House to move the motion in Mr. Kindy's name?

I cannot call the motion.

Motion No. 28.

Mr. Nunziata: On that point, I know that Mr. Kindy, who happens to be a member of the governing Party—he is a Conservative Member and with respect—

• (1740)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nunziata: I would ask that his motion—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the Hon. Member seeking to present the motion in his name for the Hon. Member for Calgary East (Mr. Kindy)?

Mr. Nunziata: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) is seeking unanimous consent for the right to present the motion in the name of the Hon. Member for Calgary East. Is there such unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: There is not such unanimous consent. Therefore, we will go on to Motion No. 28.

Ms. Copps: You won't even stand up for your own Members.

Mr. Nunziata: You won't even wait until tomorrow so he can argue his own motion. That's how you treat your own Members. What about enhancement of the private Member?

Mr. Speaker: Would the Hon. Member for York-South Weston (Mr. Nunziata) please come to order?

Mr. Nunziata: Thank you. I think I have made my point.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 28

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 16 by adding immediately after line 44 at page 13 the following:

"(11)(a) Where one person is granted sole care and control of the child(ren) of the marriage under this section and manifests an unwillingness to comply in whole or in substantial part with the terms of an order respecting maximum contact with the child made under this section, or where reasonable grounds to believe that the person granted sole care and control will manifest unwillingness to comply in whole or in substantial part with such an order, the court may order that the parent granted sole care and control submit to the court a plan describing how maximum contact is to be arranged.

(b) the plan referred to in paragraph (a) is to be in a form determined by a competent authority pursuant to section 25."

She said: Mr. Speaker, what I have recommended for consideration is to add to Clause 16 after line 44 on page 13 an additional consideration which I feel is of great importance in the consideration of custody as provided by this Bill. Where one parent has been granted the sole custody of a child and has not been respectful of custody orders, great turmoil and difficulty exists for the children of the marriage. There is enough difficulty and turmoil involved in parental conflict and divorce proceedings already. I think it only makes it much more stressful for the child if one parent is absent, and particularly if that parent is absent not of his own free will but because there has been mischief on the part of the custodial parent who has not allowed access of the parent who has been given that right under the laws of the land by a court decision.

My amendment reads as follows:

Where one person is granted sole care and control of the child(ren) of the marriage under this section and manifests an unwillingness to comply in whole or in substantial part with the terms of an order respecting maximum contact with the child made under this section, or where reasonable grounds to believe that the person granted sole care and control will manifest unwillingness to comply in whole or in substantial part with such an order, the court may order that the parent granted sole care and control submit to the court a plan describing how maximum contact is to be arranged.

It would seem to me that it is only logical that, if we are to have a human and just approach to this, we must be respectful of the rights of the accessing parent and the children to see each other following a marriage breakdown.

As the Equality Committee travelled across the land heard from the Fathers of Equality, Fathers Fighting Back and L'Association des hommes séparés ou divorcés de Montréal. All these organizations made submissions to the Equality Committee indicating that fathers are frequently denied access to their children. Just recently there were a number of demonstrations on Parliament Hill. We have received petitions regarding this matter, and a young man has been fasting and has subsequently been joined in his fast by other men across the country.

On January 15 I made a statement, pursuant to Standing Order 22, regarding the sad case of Ricardo DiDone and his son, and the fact that there are those who are trying to remove his legal right to see the child and to remove his name from the child. I find this to be absolutely unacceptable. This is only one example of why it is important that a proper plan of action be deposited with a court, in order to show goodwill and respect for the accessing parent's rights on the part of the custodial parent. This kind of plan should be deposited with the court where there has been wilful lack of observance of a particular order of the court.

As we all know, many parents default on maintenance or support payments. Perhaps this is because many men are not given access to their children, or because the courts have awarded access to them on the most restrictive of options. In the particular instance of which I am thinking, this kind of access allows a father to see his child every second Christmas, every second Easter and once each summer. That is not sufficient. Often a father is only allowed to see his children every second weekend. That is not sufficient either. People who become Big Brothers or Big Sisters in Canada undertake to have four hours' of contact per week with the children for whom they are going to be substitute parents. Here we have willing parents who wish to have access to their children but for nefarious reasons are being blocked. This amendment would see to it that if there is a complaint brought by the accessing spouse to the court, the custodial spouse must submit to the court a plan of contact outlining how the court order will be respected.

We know that 85 per cent of custody awards made by Canadian courts are in favour of the female parent. I would suggest that this is a form of systemic discrimination against me. This fosters feelings of injustice and creates the high level of payment delinquency, almost 60 per cent on the part of divorced fathers. How can we expect fathers to pay much attention to their children if they are being blocked consistently over a long period of time? I think it is about time we added to this particular Bill a clause which will allow the accessing parent the right to visit with his child, and will provide, where he is not allowed to do so, a means to correct the situation. I believe this amendment will speak to that problem and will fill the gap that exists in the present Bill.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to speak in support of the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) in Motion No. 28.

As the Hon. Member indicated, in its deliberations on these three divorce Bills, the Justice Committee as well as the Subcommittee of the Justice Committee on Equality Rights heard extensive evidence from those fathers who felt that following their divorces they were being denied full access to their children. They wanted to continue to be able to play a role in the upbringing of their children and they felt that they were being denied that right through a variety of means. A variety of proposals were put forward in committee and indeed in the House as a means of resolving that concern. We also heard from women who indicated that in many circumstances, they wished fathers would play a greater role in the ongoing custody of children. We heard from people with a variety of perspectives.

As I understand it, the purpose of this amendment is to ensure that in those circumstances in which one parent is granted sole custody of the child or children of the marriage and that parent seems to be unreasonable in affording access or seems to be unprepared to comply with the terms of the access order, the individual can be ordered by the court to submit a plan describing how maximum contact is to be arranged.

● (1750)

I see this amendment as an additional means of ensuring that those fathers who want to maintain ongoing contact with their children and who want to ensure that access is a reality have to appear before the court in order to facilitate that process. I note that the amendment refers to care and control. Of course, the concept of care and control is one which is not found elsewhere in this legislation, since Your Honour has ruled out the amendment which made reference to it. So the concept of care and control, as opposed to custody, as I understand it, is one which is found only in this proposed amendment.

We agree with the thrust of the amendment. We are certainly sympathetic to the concerns of those fathers who genuinely feel that they have been denied the right to play a full role in the upbringing of their children. A number of other amendments which were adopted by the committee go some distance in meeting their concerns. Certainly, a number of the proposals which they made, in particular the proposal for a presumption of joint custody, were rejected by the Committee.

To the extent that this particular amendment facilitates access and contact between fathers and their children, we support the amendment.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I too rise in support of Motion No. 28. The intent of this motion is to confer greater rights to non-custodial parents. As the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) has pointed out, at the committee level we heard from a great many interest groups on the question of custody and access. Perhaps the group which was most moving was a group representing single, non-custodial fathers. We were told with considerable sincerity, integrity and honesty by non-custodial fathers that they are being short-changed in light of the present legislation. I submit that if this particular piece of legislation passes they will continue to be short-changed with respect to custody and access. Because of the statute law which exists, and because of the jurisprudence which has developed around that statute law, non-custodial parents are shut out from the care and upbringing of a child. That is unfair and inequitable.

The individuals who came forward on this particular subject convinced us that it was time to insert into the legislation a presumption of co-parenting. That topic met with considerable discussion and debate in our caucus and at the committee stage. There was no unanimity achieved with respect to the subject of the presumption of co-parenting.

In your wisdom, Mr. Speaker, you have ruled that our motion with respect to co-parenting is out of order. I do not intend to challenge Your Honour's ruling. However, as a result of that ruling Your Honour has allowed debate on Motion No. 28, which only goes part way with respect to the question of co-parenting. It is my belief that it is in the best interests of a child—any child—to have the love, affection and input of both parents. That is just not happening under the present legislation.

Under the present legislation one parent is given de facto custody of a child and the other parent, generally speaking, the father, is given access once every weekend, or once every second weekend, for a couple of hours. In my view, that is not in the best interests of a child or children of a marriage or, for that matter, for children born of a commonlaw relationship. Of course, we are not dealing with commonlaw relationships here; we are dealing with the children of a marriage.

It is in the best interests of a child to have both parents participate in the upbringing of that particular child. When I speak of participation I am not talking about the non-custodial parent simply having access once a week or once every two weeks. What I am suggesting is that the non-custodial parent should, in the best interests of the child, have some say in the upbringing of that child. He or she should have some say in the religious upbringing of the child and some input as to the type and quality of education the child should receive.

I suggest that if non-custodial parents were given more input in the upbringing of a child, more court awards with respect to support for children would be honoured. I say this because we were told that there are a great many non-custodial parents, generally speaking fathers, who have been ordered by the courts to pay support for their child or children. They have said: "Why should I pay support for a child who I cannot be involved with in terms of their upbriging? Why should I have to pay support simply to see my child or children once every two weeks for an hour on a Sunday afternoon?" So fathers have decided to disobey court orders. We were told by fathers' organizations that if fathers are given more say then they might start honouring their court orders for maintenance and support of children. I use the example of non-custodial fathers; but it could apply equally to non-custodial mothers as well. Generally speaking, however, in our society we are dealing with non-custodial fathers.

I was convinced, as were a number of other members of my caucus—not all, but a significant number—that we should support a move toward a presumption of co-parenting in the legislation. When one speaks of a presumption of co-parenting it does not mean that a child is with one parent for one week and another for the next. We are not speaking of de facto physical custody of a child. When we speak of the presumption of co-parenting what we are saying is that a court—I believe Your Honour is motioning that my time has almost elapsed.

Mr. Speaker: I am more worried about the question of relevancy, since the Hon. Member seems to be speaking at great length about a concept which interests him but which is not the concept of the amendment.

Mr. Nunziata: We were denied by the Government—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the Hon. Member might bring himself to the question of relevancy.

Mr. Nunziata: Motion No. 28 states:

Where one person is granted sole care and control the child(ren) of the marriage under this section and manifests an unwillingness to comply in whole or in substantial part with the terms of an order respecting maximum contact with the child made under this section, or where reasonable grounds to believe that the person granted sole care and control will manifest unwillingness to comply—

What we are saying is that where a parent manifests or exhibits a willingness to allow more participation by the other spouse, then that should be taken into consideration by the court. However, if a parent who is about to be awarded sole custody of a child says: "I am not going to facilitate access to the non-custodial parent", then the court should take that into consideration and require the custodial parent to submit to the court a plan describing how maximum contact is to be arranged. What we are saying is that if a person says that they are going to make it difficult for the non-custodial parent to have access, then the court should order that person to submit a plan. That plan would detail how that person would take care of the children.

It is obvious that the motion will not carry—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

It being six o'clock, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6 p.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

DIVORCE AND COROLLARY RELIEF ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Wednesday, January 22, consideration of Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs; and Motion No. 28 (Mrs. Finestone) (p. 10064).

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief with respect to the submissions that have been made regarding this motion. No one can disagree with the sentiments that are contained within the motion. As I understand it, if there is a demonstration by the custodial spouse of an unwillingness to comply with an order, then the motion provides that there will be some type of court plan with respect to access rights.

As the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) pointed out, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) anticipated that there would be some amendments dealing with care and control. As Your Honour knows, the Divorce Act deals with custody and access. To date, it does not deal with the notion of care and control. Therefore, from a technical point of view, this amendment would be the only place within the Bill where there would be the new notion of care and control.

More important than that, when there is a question of custody, the issue is which spouse will have custody of the child and under what circumstances. As we indicated yesterday, the sole criterion is the best interests of the child. In that case, one of the factors incorporated into the Bill, one which I think is a very major advance, is that the non-custodial parent should have maximum contact. If one of the spouses is unwilling to give maximum contact, that may be taken into consideration in the awarding of custody.

It seems to me from reading her amendment that the Hon. Member for Mount Royal anticipates that when one party is granted sole care and control of the children of the marriage and manifests an unwillingness to comply in whole or in substantial part with the terms of the order, this Bill can deal with that but that will only occur after the award of custody. In other words, it will not be the focus of the debate at the custody trial. These are circumstances which may or may not exist after the trial and may provoke an application to review the Order.

Although we totally agree with the sentiments expressed by the amendment that would have the court issue some type of plan if the non-custodial spouse so applies, it will in fact happen that if an application is made as a result of what one spouse believes is a violation of his rights, by provincial laws of evidence some plan will in all likelihood be asserted by the court if the custodial spouse is to remain the custodial spouse. I would like to compliment the Hon. Member on her sentiments. In light of the legislation and for the technical reasons that I have stated, however, I do not think that the amendment is necessary.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 28 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it. I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 28 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby) moved:

Motion No. 29

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 17 by striking out line 2 at page 14 and substituting the following therefor:

"may, on application by a former spouse or with leave of the court, by a child of the marriage make an order varying, rescinding or".

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this amendment is to ensure that in circumstances in which a child of the marriage is receiving support and the child's custodial parent dies, the child will continue to be able to receive that support. Indeed, the child would be able to apply for an order of variation on that.

● (1110)

The circumstances in which this amendment would be necessary would, hopefully, not occur too frequently. Nevertheless, it is an important amendment. The Lesser decision on this point left open the question of whether or not a child in circumstances such as this could apply independently for variation of the support order. To make the illustration clear, what we are talking about in terms of this amendment is a child who is, perhaps, disabled, and is 24 or 25 years of age, unable to look after himself or herself and is living with a parent who has been divorced. In this illustration, the parent dies. The question which must be resolved is: What is the status of the child with respect to bringing an application for support or for variation of the support order? As members of the Justice Committee will recall, this point was raised by a lawyer from Toronto, Linda Silver-Dranoff. The purpose of the amendment is to make very clear the status of that child to seek an application for variation in the courts even though the parent with whom the child had been residing may have died.

It was suggested in committee by counsel to the committee that, in fact, the Bill would not change the status quo. In other words, that standing would be granted to the estate of the custodial parent to continue a support application which was already in progress. The decision in the Lesser case left open the question as to whether or not the application could be made independently, as opposed to just continued by the estate, if the application had been originally made.

As I have said, the purpose of the amendment is to make clear that children, such as those who are disabled, as well as other children, are entitled to apply in their own right for variation of support orders. If, in fact, it is the intention of the Government that this Bill should be interpreted in such a way as to ensure that that would be the case, I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary will make the intention clear.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I support the motion of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). Notwithstanding Section 10, which indicates that a solution to the matter might be found therein, I think Hon. Members would agree that there is some lack of clarity as to what will happen to young people between the ages of 16 and 17 who are not protected by this Bill, and also to those who are disabled or, as suggested by the Hon. Member for Burnaby, those who make a separate application for variation in respect of a court order. The Lesser case brought this matter to the attention of the committee and we had lengthy discussions with respect to it. The case involved a youth aged 23 whose custodial parent had died and who required a variation order. It is a good thing that the matter went before the court in order that a decision could be made which would allow for support by the non-custodial parent.

I think it makes not only good, sensible public policy but it is humane that if the non-custodial parent can pay for support of his or her child of the marriage prior to the death of his or her spouse then, instead of becoming wards of the state, the non-custodial parent should continue to pay maintenance. I think there has to be some serious consideration given to this matter. I hope the Parliamentary Secretary will indicate to us that the Government will give the broadest possible interpretation to this measure so that we are not faced with children becoming wards of the state merely based on their ages when a parent is lost or the child is disabled.

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, although I understand the sentiments behind the amendment, we are unable to agree with it for a number of practical reasons. First, the Divorce Act deals with people who are attempting to dissolve a marriage. That is the essence of divorce. When it comes to children, some questions which arise are the following. At what age might a child make this application? What if a child wanted to come under the custody of another parent and that other parent did not want to assume the responsibility, then who will pay for the legal representations of the child? In our view, such a scheme would not be very practical. It would bring the child right into the midst of conflicting parents. I do not believe it is a real problem. As the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) accurately states, I believe the Department of Justice lawyers at the time of the hearings gave adequate answers with respect to the remedy for which a child in those circumstances could apply.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 29 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 29 (Mr. Robinson) negatived.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby) moved:

Motion No. 30

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 17 by striking out lines 17 to 28 at page 14 and substituting the following therefor:

"(4) Before the court makes a variation order in respect of a support order the court shall satisfy itself

(a) that there has been a change in the condition, means, needs or other circumstances of either former spouse or of any child of the marriage for whom support is or was sought occurring since the making of the support order or the last variation order made in respect of that order as the case may be, or

(b) that a change in the condition, means, needs or other circumstances of either former spouse or of any child of the marriage for whom support is or was sought, that was anticipated at the date referred to in paragraph (a) has not occurred."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of the amendment which is now before the House as Motion No. 30. I wish to indicate that this motion and the amendment go to the core of the philosophy which underlies the Divorce Act. Without any doubt, the change proposed in the amendment is absolutely essential if we are to ensure that the criteria for maintenance do not, in effect, seriously discriminate against older women.

First, I wish to indicate specifically and clearly what the purpose of this amendment is. As the divorce legislation is now worded, where a time-limited order for maintenance is made by the courts, an application to vary that order after the expiry of the time can only be made if the individual who is receiving maintenance can show that there has been a change in her circumstances, a change which is related to the marriage. In a number of cases, at the time of making a maintenance order, the judge is in the position of looking ahead to the future to try to determine whether or not, based on his or her best assessment of all the evidence, the individual in question will be in a position of being self-sufficient, financially independent, at the end of the fixed term, whether it be two years, three years, or whatever. I will speak about women in this case because the vast majority of cases deal with women. At that point in time the judge will have to make a prediction. He or she will have to determine whether or not this woman will be able to obtain retraining, for example and, if she is able to obtain it, whether she will be able to find a job during that period of time. The Supreme Court of Canada in Messier v. Delage made it clear beyond any doubt that the courts must not be permanently bound by those predictions. In other words, it should always be open to the woman to return to the courts and say: "Look, I have made an effort. I tried to find work but I was unsuccessful and I need to continue this maintenance; or I need a variation of the maintenance order".

We certainly all know that women continue to be the victims of discrimination in the workplace, and on average continue to receive wages which are 60 per cent or 62 per cent of the wages of men. As well, in these harsh economic times, it is even more difficult for women to find work. We are not just speaking of any women, we are speaking, in many cases, of women 50 or 55 years of age who have worked in the home for many years and who suddenly find themselves on their own and are told that they have to become self-sufficient within a fixed period of time.

The purpose of this amendment would be to change the criteria now contained in the Divorce Act to ensure that where the judge looked to the future and anticipated there would be a change in the circumstances of the woman, and that change did not take place, the woman in question would be entitled to say: "Look. You cannot cut me off. You cannot leave me high and dry at the end of two or three years without any support whatsoever". In many cases they have to go directly onto the welfare rolls and certainly, in many of our provinces, including my own, the amount one receives on welfare is well below the poverty level. That is what we are condemning women to in these circumstances.

My amendment, Motion No. 30, reads in part that where the judge anticipated a change in the condition, means, needs or other circumstances of either former spouse or any child of the marriage and that change did not occur, the individual in question would be free to return to the court and seek an extension of that order. In the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs that amendment was rejected despite the very strong support of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, the National Association of Women and the Law, and the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, all of which wre profoundly concerned that there was a great potential for serious injustice in this legislation.

I might say as well that what many of these national women's organizations and myself found particularly surprising and disturbing is that the amendment was rejected not only by members of the Government, the Conservative Members of the committee, but this fundamental and important amendment was rejected by a Liberal member of the committee. This amendment is essential to ensure that older women are not discriminated against in the provisions of the Divorce Act. At a time when we should be enhancing the protection of older women from economic hardship, the Government moves in the opposite direction. The representative of the Liberal Party said that she was really quite pleased to have cast her vote with the Government. She said: "I am voting against Mr. Robinson's amendment because I do believe that equal opportunity brings equal responsibility. If we want to promote equal opportunity for women and for men, then we have to also support the aspect of responsibility for self".

That is an extraordinary position to take by the Liberal Party on an amendment as vital and as fundamental to the concerns of literally hundreds of thousands of Canadian women, particularly older women. I hope that having reviewed this matter carefully and having heard the very eloquent representations made by the National Association of Women and the Law and the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, the representative of the Liberal Pary will stand in her place today and acknowledge that the Liberal Party made a mistake and that now, having seen the light, it is going to change its position and support this amendment which is of such vital importance to Canadian women.

I could do no better in concluding my remarks on this important amendment than to quote from a submission which was made to the committee by Dr. Eila Lamb, from Swan River, Manitoba. She is a professional woman who wrote to the committee on the subject of time-limited maintenance wards. She said, and I quote:

Time-limited maintenance awards, which are supposed to encourage women to become financially self-sufficient, have inherent drawbacks. One of the greatest is that the factors which will keep her relatively poor in terms of ability to earn a decent wage or salary lie largely outside her control: lack of appropriate counselling retraining that could lead to good employment; sufficient money for both training and maintenance; long, costly, arduous training required for hope of access to the better-paying jobs; economic and other factors which will limit her access to these jobs providing greater remuneration and which hold the promise of advancement.

I might add to that as well, Mr. Speaker, that the lack of access to proper child care facilities is another barrier to women in the employment arena. Dr. Lamb went on to say:

For a woman like myself, not having an extended family to offer at the least psychological support in her struggles, the odds against her succeeding are far greater than for the general male population.

And she said finally:

For a judge to be accurate in predicting future employment opportunities and future remuneration is ludicrous. Government, with access to a greater range of skill sand resources than one mere mortal, in this instance a judge, failed to predict future employment opportunities accurately. To place the onus on the woman to correct a too-brief time limit is not only unfair but also Machiavellian, as my experience indicates.

It is essential that this amendment be adopted if we are to ensure that women are treated fairly in the divorce courts of this country. This Bill, as it is now worded, would effectively encourage the practice of jettisoning older housewives without any financial support whatsoever. It is the "sink or swim" philosophy; if they do not make it within two or three years, forget it, they will go right on to the welfare rolls. That makes no sense whatsoever.

I know that my colleagues want to speak as well on this amendment so I will conclude by saying that I hope that the Government, having reconsidered, will support this amendment. I would particularly hope that the Liberal Party will finally recognize the grave error it has made on this Bill and that those Hon. Members will stand in their place and say they are prepared to support older women and the amendment of the New Democratic Party.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I do not think it is necessaray for me to receive a lecture from the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson).

Mr. Gauthier: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Finestone: I think my credibility with women and women's movements is well known throughout Canada, particularly in Quebec.

[Translation]

I was president of the Fédération des femmes du Québec—150,000 women making up 48 groups—and those Canadian women supported me by appointing me president, and I have defended the cause of women for a number of years. Mr. Speaker, I had very good reasons not to endorse the amendments proposed by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson): the fact was that I had already proposed amendments which, in my judgment, would bridge the gap in this Bill. I would point out to the Hon. Member for Burnaby that he did not support my recommendation, instead he wanted to push his own motion No. 13 rather than support my motion No. 12. But with respect to this, Mr. Speaker, I suggested to the Government which was making amendments concerning the age of the spouses that the marriage or its failure would be a case to bring before the court, and I proposed striking out line 46 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"within a reasonable period of time, as determined by the responsibilities of each spouse for any child of the marriage, by the reasonable expectations of each spouse with respect to employment, and by economic conditions."

I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but playing politics with the Divorce Act is something I find unacceptable.

That being so, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that I support this motion, not because of the Hon. Member for Burnaby, but because I had some difficulty in attempting to promote my views in this session, first and foremost in the best interest of children, and then in the interest of older women, women half way through their working lives who made a decision to stay at home and raise their children instead of rejoining the labour market. The minute those women concluded that their marriage was on the rocks and decided to apply for divorce, with the best of intentions they wanted to rejoin the labour force and be financially independent, but they were unable to fulfil their wishes and become self-supporting because the labour market did not give them a chance to show what they could accomplish and do something in their own best interest.

[English]

Had the amendments I just referred to been accepted by the Government I would not be standing here supporting the Hon. Member. However, I do so because I have a very serious concern. The Government has assured us that the problem of economic deprivation affecting older women who want to go back to work and their inability to meet their financial commitments is covered in Clause 10. I do not think this is a one-sided society. It is a partnership society. Men and women should have the right to continue their lives or start new lives when their marriage breaks down. Therefore, we must find a way to address the economic deprivation in which women find themselves when this happens. Because economic self-sufficiency is so important, and because the gap between rich and poor has become so pronounced, we must look directly at the face of poverty in our society today. What is the face of poverty today? I tell the Parliamentary Secretary that the face of poverty today is that of women. Poverty has been feminized. A major reason for that is the impact of divorce and the resulting maintenance and support payments which are not met. Sometimes they are not met for good reason. The courts do not have a mechanism for ensuring these payments. At the same time, the requirements for access to the child by the non-custodial parent are sometimes also not met. In most cases this involves the father. These fathers were also loving parents. Perhaps they were in the delivery room during the child's birth. They looked forward to their future relationship with their child. However, when the marriage broke down, and even though they wished to maintain their relationship with their children, they had a problem gaining access to their children.

As a result, they did not pay their support money, indeed they would sometimes run away and it is difficult to find them. The end result of all this is poverty for women, particularly single mothers. Statistics show this to be true.

It was for that reason that my friend, Sidney Cutler, a well-known Montreal lawyer, brought the Messier-Delage case to my attention. He pleaded this case and did so with intelligence. It concerns an application to set aside an alimentary pension paid to the ex-wife. In this decison the court said:

> The mechanism provided by the Divorce Act to take into account the conduct of the parties and changes in the condition, means or other circumstances of either of them is their right to apply to the court each time a change which is regarded as fundamental occurs. The judge must arrive at his decision on each occasion having regard to the actual circumstances, not in accordance with events which may or may not occur. Accordingly, the Court of Appeal properly intervened in the case at bar. The Superior Court erred in disregarding the actual factors submitted for its consideration, and hypothesizing as to the unknown future, which cannot be foreseen at this time. There was no reason to cancel respondent's pension eight months in advance on the assumption that she would no longer need or be entitled to it. If the situation arises, it can be dealt with.

What is important here is that we must leave an opening for the court to look at each individual case. We as a society believe in individual rights. None of us are soothsayers; we cannot foretell the future. Therefore, I support the amendment, notwithstanding the unnecessary politicization by my hon. friend.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak to Motion No. 30 because it is an extremely important matter. Since the Liberal Party is now supporting the NDP motion, I will direct my remarks to the hard-hearted Parliamentary Secretary, who is going to be, I hope, susceptible to an appeal on grounds of justice and reason.

The National Action Committee on the Status of Women is the largest women's organization in the country. It has made very strong representations on this issue and I think it is important to listen to them. The NAC brief pointed out that the subclause as currently worded in this very misguided part of the Bill:

> —would severely limit the right of an ex-spouse to obtain an extension of her or his time-limited support order after the original time limit specified in it had expired. In our view, this sub-section is by far the most objectionable feature of Bill C-47; its potential to do harm to divorced long-term homemakers is so great that we could not support the passage of this bill unless sub-section 17(8) were eliminated.
> The problem with sub-section 17(8) is that it would make it impossible to obtain an extension of a time-limited support order, on an application made after the expiration of the period specified—

—when there has not been a change in circumstances. The brief continues to read:

> This is totally unacceptable to us because it would make extensions impossible in the cases when it is most needed, which is when a court had judged, on the basis of scanty evidence concerning the capacities of a divorcing wife and the state of the labour market, that she should be able to become self-supporting within a given period of time and should therefore be awarded support only for that limited period. Should the ex-wife, who could be a 50-year-old woman who had been a lifelong homemaker, then find herself unable in spite of reasonable efforts to become self-supporting in the time limit prescribed, she would be unable to obtain an extension in her support payments because she could not demonstrate that her situation had changed.

This is a classic catch-22 situation since the very problem that created her need for support is precisely the fact that nothing has changed in her situation, that she was unable to find employment during the period of time specified.

What the Bill as presently worded would require is for judges to make these decisions. Of course, the Government has already rejected an extremely important amendment to give criteria to judges to make sure that those orders are adequate. So judges will be making decisions, but how do they know what the labour market is going to be like two years, three years or five years hence? They do not know. We do know, however, that unemployment among women has now gone above that of men. There were some improvements but it is getting worse. Judges have always erred on the low side in making their awards. An Ontario study shows that the average award for maintenance for the spouse and children counts for but 20 per cent of the income-earning spouse's after-tax income. I think this is extremely relevant. We are talking about awards which are not very large at all. We now have new legislation which is going to emphasize self-sufficiency and make women go out and get jobs, perhaps after a very long period of time at home. There are no guarantees in the legislation that equality of living standards will be an explicit criterion, and it will be up to a judge, 95 per cent of whom are men, to decide that equality of living circumstances should be a criterion at all. We must be extremely concerned about the Government's failure to take into account the serious plight of the homemaker spouse, particularly the older homemaker spouse.

• (1140)

I would also like to make a few remarks about the mistaken impression of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) on the situation of nonpayment of maintenance. She suggests that it is the fault of wives by not providing access to children which accounts for nonpayment. I think this is most unacceptable thing to say.

Mrs. Finestone: That is one of the reasons.

Ms. McDonald: She says that it is only one of the reasons, but it is certainly not borne out by any analysis of the situation. The Province of Manitoba, with the wisdom of an NDP Government, has instituted an excellent maintenance collection system. It is now collecting 85 per cent of maintenance orders. Does this suggest that wives and husbands in Manitoba are that much more civilized than those in other provinces? Are people really that much different? Do Canadians change their behaviour across provincial boundaries? I do not think so. This certainly shows that a good system for collection is possible. I do not think we should slur Canadian women and make them responsible for their own victimization by the nonpayment of maintenance orders. We know that 75 per cent of them are not paid, and this is extremely unacceptable. Maintenance is a very serious problem.

This Bill has gone further than the previous Bill. The Government has taken the advice of the women's movement, has accepted representations, and has made some improvements in it. This is an extremely important motion and I would urge the Government to make the extension of time limited maintenance orders possible by accepting our motion.

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat reluctant to enter into the obvious division of opinion between the opposition Parties. In committee I gave the fullest reasons why the Government rejected the amendment proposed by the Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). The Government's position goes even further than either the Canadian Bar Association or the Quebec Bar Association recommended. The new statutory provisions in this Bill call for a fixed time order in certain circumstances. Prior to that, awards for support went on for an indeterminate period of time until there was a change of circumstances. With more young people becoming separated or divorced it was thought that, using the analogy used by the Member for Burnaby, a man might pay an increased amount over a fixed period of time so that he can, to use the words of the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), see the light at the end of the tunnel. He would be finished with his obligations with respect to support.

That is a good initiative of the Government. It has been recommended by everyone and is not objected to by the other side. What does one expect when a person gets married at the age of 22 and gets divorced at the age of 25, as so often happens today? The Canadian Bar Association said that in those circumstances, especially dealing with young people, once the separation agreement has been made it cannot be reopened. We said that there may be some circumstances in which it should be reopened. To that extent we differ from the Quebec and the Canadian Bar Associations.

The representations made by the Member for Burnaby are absolute poppycock. Marriages of a duration of 30 or 40 years will not be the subject matter of time limited orders. The whole purpose of the orders are for young or older people involved in marriages of short duration. As an example, it may very well be unreasonable to expect the wife of a dentist, after having been married for 25 years, to get into the workforce, keeping in mind the functions she performed during the marriage. Such a case would not be the subject matter of a time limited order. These orders have a specific design.

We have put two qualifications on the time limited orders. A variation is necessary to relieve economic hardship from a change described in Section 4, which is the change of circumstances related to the marriage, and the changes, had they existed at the time of the making of the support order, would likely have resulted in a different order. It is pretty simple. This is our philosophy. We certainly go further than the Bar recommended, and there is absolutely no injustice whatsoever.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I really did not intend to rise to speak. As Members probably know, I have not been our Party's representative on this committee. However, as the critic for the status of women, and being concerned about social issues, I was extremely concerned with the response of the Parliamentary Secretary. It did not seem to me that he provided a guarantee for older women who are in desperate situations. There is no question about it. We had a task force on older women several years ago and talked to women all across Canada. The divorce and separation rate has gone up considerably since then. It is almost to be expected that 30, 40, or 50 per cent of women will find themselves on their own and in poverty in the years after their children are raised, and the maintenance arrangements related to divorce are not sufficiently flexible to provide for their circumstances.

I, therefore, wholeheartedly agree with my colleagues who prepared this amendment. I cannot, for the life of me, see why the Government would not support it if, as it says, it is concerned about older women and poverty as it relates to them. The remarks of the Parliamentary Secretary did not at all convince me that older women are protected in this regard.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 30 standing in the name of Mr. Robinson. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 81(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 31

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 17 by adding immediately after line 10 at page 16 the following:

"(11) for greater certainty, an application made before the period or specified event referred to in subsection (8) but heard after that period or specified event is not an application made after the expiration of a definite period or the happening of a specified event pursuant to subsection (8)."

She said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to move Motion No. 31 which is a technical amendment which would serve to tighten up the legislation for greater certainty and clarity in its application. The amendment adds:

For greater certainty, an application made before the period or specified event referred to in subsection (8) but heard after that period or specified event is not an application made after the expiration of a definite period or the happening of a specified event pursuant to subsection (8).

I will not go through all the arguments that I have used prior to this. However, I feel that it is very important, when considering an order varying a support order that provides for the support of a child of the marriage, to recognize that the former spouses have a joint financial obligation to maintain the child and to apportion that obligation between the former spouses according to their relative abilities to contribute to the performance of that obligation. The purpose of the amendment is to ensure that the law is clear with respect to term orders. It is to ensure that a variation for a term order can take place if an application is made before the term order is up but the court hearing has not been held before the term order expires.

• (1150)

I think the Parliamentary Secretary can appreciate that the courts are frequently jammed and a case cannot be heard before the deadline date. I want to be assured that all cases that have had a prior application will be heard subsequently, including the provision that one can vary at any time, not only at a given point within the course of the time accorded for varying a term order.

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I can alleviate some of the anxiety which the Hon. Member may have. The original draft of the Bill used the word "made" during the course of a fixed order. In other words, the apprehension was that an action may be instituted during that period of time but not heard, and therefore the person would be out of court. During the committee stage we changed the word "made" to "instituted" so that as long as the action is instituted within the fixed period of time there is no problem. It was cured at committee.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I thank the Parliamentary Secretary for that explanation and for bringing it to my attention. I would be pleased to withdraw that amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have the unanimous consent of the House to withdraw Motion No. 31?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 31 (Mrs. Finestone) withdrawn.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (for the Minister of Justice) moved:

Motion No. 35

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 26

(a) by striking out lines 26 to 29 at page 23 and substituting the following therefor:

"ing, may make regulations

(a) respecting the establishment and operation of a central registry of divorce proceedings in Canada; and

(b) providing for uniformity in the rules made pursuant to section 25."

(b) by striking out, in the English version, line 31 at page 23 and substituting the following therefor:

"section (1) to provide the uniformity in the rules".

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, this is the third amendment that has been agreed to by the Government as a result of the pre-study by the Senate. This amendment is proposed to meet certain concerns with the sufficiency of authority of the Governor in Council to create and maintain a central divorce registry.

The divorce regulations provide for the creation of a central divorce registry located in Ottawa, require court officers to make certain returns in relation to divorce proceedings and define the duties of officers of a central divorce registry. Doubts were expressed as to whether the existing legislation grants sufficient authority for the establishment of the registry.

The Government believes that Clause 26 of the Bill, contrary to Section 19(2) of the existing legislation, would allow the making of regulations for carrying out of the purposes and provisions of this Act. It is the view of the Minister that in this respect, the new regulation is more explicit and will provide sufficient authority for regulations under the Divorce Act.

The Government is not willing to accept or propose an amendment that would provide in the Bill itself for the establishment of a registry and the duties of its officers, but it does agree as a compromise that the regulations-making power, Clause 26 of the Bill, be amended so as to expressly allow the making of regulations for this purpose. It is proposed that Clause 26 be amended to give the Governor in Council the power to make regulations respecting the establishmment and operation of a central divorce registry. Such an amendment will, without being necessary, put the divorce regulations on a firm and clear statutory footing.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I am quite pleased. I spoke to this issue because it was of great concern to me from the outset. During the course of the hearings there did not seem to be any indication that we would be able to move in this direction due to finances. I am pleased that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) has agreed to a report that was submitted to him and included this particular motion which, incidentally, followed my motion.

The Senate Standing Committee on Constitutional and Legal Affairs brought this to his attention and the Standing Committee on Regulations and Statutory Instruments also recommended its inclusion.

The House only needs to refer to Motion No. 34 to see that I had requested that we make such an amendment which would establish a central registry. I understand the dilemma involved with the certain costs that were ascribed. However, the aim to ensure uniformity in the rules, to have a central collection and clearing house, and the fact that one will be able to can determine where and how the cases should be heard will let us take great steps toward enabling eventual national enforcement and maintenance proceedings that I believe are vital.

This will include not only information responsibilities but action responsibilities as well. In other words, the decision of the court will be put into application. If they are not applied, there can be a potential for no recourse by the spouse who therefore will not be so well served as he should have been, based on what the court had said. Therefore, it is with much pleasure that I support the motion of the Minister of Justice.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, we in the New Democratic Party are in support of this amendment, particularly given the fact that it originated with the very distinguished Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone).

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 35 standing in the name of the Hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 35 (Mr. Crosbie) agreed to.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 36

That Bill C-47, be amended by adding immediately after line 43 at page 23 the following:

"28. Not later than five years after this Act is proclaimed into force, such committee of the House of Commons as may be designated or established for the purposes of this section shall

(a) review the provisions of this Act relating to reconciliation and support orders; and

(b) within a year after the review is undertaken or within such time as the House of Commons may authorize, submit a report to the House thereon, including a statement of any changes the committee would recommend."

She said: Mr. Speaker, "not later than five years" means that at any propitious time one can use this clause which I am recommending in Motion No. 36. Motion No. 36 reads:

Not later than five years after this Act is proclaimed into force, such committee of the House of Commons as may be designated or established for the purpose of this section shall

(a) review the provisions of this Act relating to reconciliation and support orders; and

(b) within a year after the review is undertaken or within such time as the House of Commons may authorize, submit a report to the House thereon, including a statement of any changes the committee would recommend.

During the course of debate, some issues were not totally resolved around the table in the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. One of the issues concerned the Jewish Get. It relates to Jewish women who have problems with respect to the determination of their right to remarry because of a blockage at a religious level.

Certain issues need to be addressed, and I would not like to see a problem develop with the reopening of this Bill. There are certain matters concerning mediation. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) gave us a very interesting report and we heard from people who indicated that very good mediation statistics are being developed. There are some very good mediation services that are being evaluated.

At this time the cost to society is $1 billion and is shared federally and provincially through the CAP programs. These costs could be pared down significantly if we consider the results of mediation as they have been found in the United States. In the United States there is less impact on social costs because people fall onto welfare rolls, resulting in these families facing poverty.

• (1200)

What is important in this instance is that legislation, in fact all legislation not just this Bill, should be reflective of the times, particularly a Bill like this which touches the lives of so many.

We have, as an example, the Fathers for Equality who have spoken about what they perceive to be an injustice. I think that injustice will in short order see some remedial action in the courts as they become more sensitized and more aware of the roles fathers wish to play, can play and should play in the lives of their children.

If we do the studies, which I understand from the Minister of Justice are being undertaken, and we see that the decisions of the court with respect to access are not being respected in a significant measure, perhaps we will want to reopen this Bill sooner rather than later. All those decisions are being examined under the mediation study being undertaken by the Minister of Justice. I commend him and the Ministry for that study.

In a sense, as this Bill touches so many of our lives and is key and fundamental to all of us, I would like to see the sunset clause accepted by Government for it has a built-in review mechanism. It fulfils the need to establish a review at any time within the next five years, one which will be mandatory by the end of five years, by any committee of the House of Commons. We hope all those issues, such as mandatory conference, mediation and father's rights, will be reconsidered.

I just remembered that where we have fault as grounds for divorce, if those grounds have fallen into disuse—they are used in only 9 per cent of the cases now—then we could change this Bill to a strictly no-fault marriage breakdown Bill and remove the fault clauses.

I would respectfully suggest that we accept this amendment in good faith, as it is meant, for the men and women and particularly the children it touches. It will be in the best interests of our total society.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). The amendment would suggest that not later than five years after the Act is proclaimed and in force there should be a comprehensive review.

I do note, however, that the amendment would call for a comprehensive review of the provisions of the Act relating to reconciliation and to support orders, but it appears to be silent on a review of the provisions relating to custody. I find it somewhat curious that the Hon. Member is suggesting that we should not review the provisions of this Act with respect to custody. It is the provisions with respect to custody in many cases that raised serious questions during the course of our committee proceedings.

The five year review process is one that is important. Perhaps five years is an excessively long period of time, but there are a number of issues which I believe should be carefully studied. In some cases they should be reviewed well before the five year period.

The Hon. Member for Mount Royal made reference to the question of the Get, the requirement within the Jewish community that for a divorce to be finalized the partners to the divorce must observe a traditional religious requirement of obtaining what is known as a Get. We had representations with respect to this requirement during the hearings of the Justice Committee on the Divorce Act and amendments were proposed at report stage. They were, however, ruled out of order.

I want to make it very clear that we in this Party are prepared to support in principle the thrust of those amendments as my colleagues at the provincial level in Ontario supported similar amendments. While it has been suggested by the Member for Mount Royal that this might be one of the subjects of this five year review, I would hope that the Justice Committee would be prepared to hold hearings on this question much earlier than five years from now in order that the various views on this question might be given a proper and full hearing by the committee.

I suggest as well that there are a number of issues which should be reviewed by the House, if not during the course of the five year review, then well before then.

One of the regrets I have about the process of this Bill is that there was no national conference on custody and divorce such as was recommended by a number of groups. This would have brought together a wide range of individuals and organizations concerned about questions, such as joint custody, shared parenting and so on in order that they might have an opportunity to make submissions in an atmosphere of cooperation at a conference of that nature. This amendment, which proposes a five year review of a number of issues, should take that into consideration among other concerns.

We should look as well at the importance of mediation. Suggestions were made during the course of committee proceedings for mandatory mediation or a mandatory conference. Those suggestions were ruled out of order, Mr. Speaker. I suggest again that that is one of the areas that should be looked at seriously. If we can impose a scheme of mandatory mediation and if there are sufficient resources in our communities for that scheme to be effective, we may very well want to look at that.

I suggest that this five year process is an excellent opportunity for us to obtain statistics with respect to a number of the more important issues arising from the passage of this Divorce Act.

One of the suggestions the committee heard that could be reviewed during the course of this five year review is the tendency of courts to discriminate against fathers in the granting of access. We do not as yet have the statistics.

It has been pointed out that 85 per cent of custody awards are made to mothers. As a committee we did not have the statistics in terms of the number of fathers who have actually applied for custody and been denied, as opposed to the number of mothers. I suggest this is one of the areas that should be reviewed during the course of the five year period, if not beforehand.

I support the amendment of the Hon. Member. I hope she might consider broadening it to include a review of custody provisions as well as provisions for reconciliation and support orders. If there is one outstanding area, one area that still remains of considerable concern to those who made representations on this Bill, it is the area of custody and the questions raised by suggestions of joint custody, shared parenting and the fact that fathers do not divorce their children, they divorce their spouses. Fathers do not divorce their children. We want to ensure that there are mechanisms for maintaining that contact and relationship between fathers and their children. To the extent this review process will facilitate that, we welcome and support the amendment.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I will not take much time. I have been sitting here for the last two days listening to this interesting debate. Since we have a common ground here, I would like to make an amendment to the motion to deal with the problem of custody orders and possibly add that in terms of the five year review.

Before I move that amendment, I would like to say a few words. All of us have had many constituents and people coming with personal problems regarding the very important and difficult subject of divorce. I had a letter this morning dealing with the problem of access from a father who feels very disturbed about this whole question. Our critic told me that the five year review which the Government will be doing would probably help to solve some of these problems concerning access and custody orders.

My letter comes from a Mr. Royal L. Gauthier, No. 231-1965 Playfair Drive, Ottawa. He told me that he is divorced and has access to his child, but his child is now living with his former wife somewhere in Germany and she is giving him difficulty regarding access. I take it that the Government, in reviewing this whole question, will accept the amendment made by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), which is supported by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) and his Party. We could amend Motion No. 36 (a) which reads:

—review the provisions of this Act relating to reconciliation and support orders; and

By adding the words "and custody orders".

• (1210)

It would read as follows:

(a) review the provisions of this Act relating to reconciliation, support and custody orders; and

Mrs. Pépin: I so move.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The House has heard the terms of the amendment. The amendment is in order, and debate on it will proceed now.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, my original testimony as to why I felt that it was very important to include this amendment speaks for itself. I am pleased that the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) brought to my attention the omission of the words "custody orders", because it was meant to have been submitted in that way. When one talks about reconciliation and support orders, it is obvious that one hopes there will be a reconciliation within the family, that is, within the relationship between the father and the child or the mother and the child, depending upon the situation, and that would be reviewed very carefully. I should like to add to that a perspective which we sometimes forget. Very key to family relationships is the extended family. There are maternal and paternal grandparents; there are aunts and uncles on both sides; and there are cousins. The blocking of access to that lovely family relationship is of serious concern as well.

I heartily support the amendment. I thank all those who brought that absence to my attention. I hope Hon. Members of the House will take seriously their responsibility as legislators. Regardless, perhaps, of considerations by the Ministry, let us take the lead and indicate that we are serious legislators who want to improve wherever possible the content of the Bill. I hope we will allow for this kind of motion which will allow us to make changes at any time but with an obligation to do so within five years.

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I should simply like to add my words to those of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) and urge that together we in the House look upon this amendment as a friendly one designed to alleviate suffering, to create harmony and, especially for children, to create a situation which will improve the atmosphere in their homes and will provide them with the best access to their parents and the advantages of that. I hope the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary and his caucus will also look upon the amendment as a friendly one worthy of support.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this motion. I am a critic on the status of women and I think it is very important—naturally, women seek equality—to assume the responsibilities we must face. Most of the time nowadays the wife and mother gets to keep the children. If we take a closer look at divorce, when a father loses child custody, very often the children become a bargaining factor. That is why I fully agree with this amendment, and I hope the Government will support it because it is very important for a father to see his children regularly.

As we know, and this was mentioned earlier today, a man gets a divorce from his wife, not from his children. One of the problems in any divorce case is that children are involved. The law sees to it that they are financially protected, but I think that emotions do come into the picture; they are just as important and perhaps more so, and in that respect the legislation may have been lacking. I think this amendment would protect our children against emotional upsets for it is very important that children get to see their father regularly. Bargaining does take place now and again because a father may forget about alimony payments or quite simply refuse to make them altogether. More often than not they are his wife's only source of income, so she will say: If you want to see your children, well it is too bad but alimony payments must be made first.

An effort has to be made, and if both spouses could agree and realize that they both have the right to see the children they would be able to avoid that problem and think only of the well-being of the children. If the children's well-being is to come first, then we must find a way to make sure that a father can indeed get to see his children. Therefore I hope that the Government will accept this amendment which, in my opinion, is absolutely essential if we want to live in a stable society and have well-balanced children. They must be able to see both parents.

[English]

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, very briefly, I think Hon. Members on all sides of the House are trying to lay down within this Act principles of decency in dealing with children and the dissolution of marriage. There is no doubt that the Bill is not the final say in respect of legislation which will be coming before the House.

As a general policy matter, the Department of Justice is continually reviewing the Divorce Act. Certainly we will be monitoring the new provisions and their effect on society. The Whip of the Official Opposition read a letter from his constituent, and I should like to indicate that we all receive many letters on personal matters. It is a live issue on which people want some type of initiative. I suspect that before five years have elapsed there will be a reopening of this Act on a number of matters.

I will give an example which was raised by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) and the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). It concerns the very serious difficulty which people within the Jewish community are undergoing in respect of what is known as a Get. It is a very substantial problem. It was brought to our attention on October 4. There were no hearings with regard to the solution which was proposed. However, I can tell the House that it is fraught with some constitutional difficulties and some family law and divorce policy issues which have to be resolved. I have met with members of the Jewish community in respect of this matter. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) instructed his officials to establish an expeditious process of consultation with representatives of various interests in order to resolve outstanding issues. I confirm that discussions on this issue have already started. The Minister has indicated that the Government will give careful and sympathetic consideration to this issue. We intend to find an equitable solution. The point I am making is that issues such as this one will not be put on the back burner. There will be a reopening of the Act. It may very well be that the Justice Committee will convene to deal with this issue and other issues as well.

● (1220)

Although I reject a legislative commitment to a review, I certainly know as a practical matter that the Act will be monitored by Justice officials, and indeed I think we will find future legislation to deal with some matters that are not included in this particular legislation. I sympathize with the sentiments that have been expressed but I do think we have made a very good start.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The question is on the amendment to Motion No. 36 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion the nays have it.

Amendment (Mrs. Pépin) to Motion No. 36 negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The next question is on Motion No. 36 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Pursuant to Standing Order 81(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Motion No. 16 was to have been disposed of or dropped as the Speaker had indicated.

[Translation]

The House will now proceed with the recorded divisions deferred at the report stage of Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief.

Call in the Members.

And the division bells having rung:

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The first question is on Motion No. 3A. Mrs. Finestone, seconded by Mr. Gauthier, moved:

Motion No. 3A

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 17 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"of education, illness, disability or other cause, to".

The House divided on the motion (Mrs. Finestone) which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, with the unanimous consent of the House, I propose that the vote just taken be applied and recorded as such to the amendment to Motion No. 9 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), Motion No. 13 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), and Motion No. 36.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: 30 and 36.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): 30 and 36? I think we will have to have a separate vote on the main motion, No. 9.

Mr. Speaker: Do I sense agreement to that?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I am not quite clear as to whether consultations on the opposition side have taken place. However, one possibility is to reverse the vote on the main motion, No. 9, standing in the name of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). If the Opposition is voting on the main motion on the assumption it is defeated, then it will not be necessary for us to take another vote. I would simply ask the Opposition if it is agreeable to that proposition so that we can save ourselves another vote.

Mr. Speaker: I have a feeling that the matter will be decided by the voice vote on the main motion. Therefore, the next question is on the amendment to Motion No. 9.

I take it that it is understood we are dealing with the amendment to the motion of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), and that it should be negatived on the same recorded vote that was just taken on Motion No. 3A?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Mrs. Finestone, seconded by Mr. Gauthier, moved:

That Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, be amended in Clause 11 by adding immediately after the word "of" in the first line of the motion, the words

"either spouse and".

The House divided on the motion (Mrs. Finestone) which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Therefore, the next question before the House is on Motion No. 9 standing in the name of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). Mr. Crosbie, seconded by Mr. Hnatyshyn moved:

Motion No. 9

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 11 by striking out lines 18 to 24 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"arrangements have been made for the support of any children of the marriage and, if such arrangements have not been made, to stay the granting of the divorce until such arrangements are made; and"

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 9 (Mr. Crosbie) agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The next motion before the House is Motion No. 13. I take it that it is the pleasure of the House to adopt the same recorded vote on that motion as was adopted on Motion No. 3A and the amendment to Motion No. 9?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Robinson, seconded by Ms. McDonald, moved:

Motion No. 13

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 15 by striking out lines 31 to 46 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

(7) an order made under this Section that provides for the support of a spouse shall be directed to one or more of the following objectives:

(a) subject to paragraphs (b), (c), and (d) to promote the economic self-sufficiency of each spouse within a reasonable period of time;

(b) to recognize any economic advantages or disadvantages to the spouses arising from the marriage or its breakdown and to relieve any economic hardship of the spouses arising from the marriage or its breakdown;

(c) where the marriage is of long duration and where one spouse worked full-time in the home and was financially dependent on the other spouse during the marriage, to provide support for the dependent spouse throughout his or her lifetime and to equalize the standards of living of the spouse awarded support and the supporting spouse;

(d) where there is a child of the marriage and the spouses had agreed before divorce proceedings were commenced, that one spouse should stay at home full-time to care for the child, to fulfil the terms of that agreement insofar as it is economically practicable.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Robinson) which was negatived on the following division:

The next question is on Motion No. 30 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). I take it the same recorded vote would be applied as was applied earlier?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Robinson, seconded by Ms. McDonald, moved:

Motion No. 30

That Bill C-47, be amended in Clause 17 by striking out lines 17 to 28 at page 14 and substituting the following therefor:

"(4) Before the court makes a variation order in respect of a support order the court shall satisfy itself

(a) that there has been a change in the condition, means, needs or other circumstances of either former spouse or of any child of the marriage for whom support is or was sought occurring since the making of the support order or the last variation order made in respect of that order as the case may be, or

(b) that a change in the condition, means, needs or other circumstances of either former spouse or of any child of the marriage for whom support is or was sought, that was anticipated at the date referred to in paragraph (a) has not occurred."

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

The next question before the House is on Motion No. 36 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the intention of the House to apply the same recorded vote to that motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Mrs. Finestone, seconded by Mr. Gauthier, moved:

Motion No. 36

That Bill C-47, be amended by adding immediately after line 43 at page 23 the following:

"28. Not later than five years after this Act is proclaimed into force, such committee of the House of Commons as may be designated or established for the purposes of this section shall

(a) review the provisions of this Act relating to reconciliation and support orders; and

(b) within a year after the review is undertaken or within such time as the House of Commons may authorize, submit a report to the House thereon, including a statement of any changes the committee would recommend."

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that the Bill, as amended, be concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: When shall the Bill be read a third time? At the next sitting of the House?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations between the Parties. I think you will find there is unanimous consent to proceed with third reading. I have a draft order which I have given to opposition Members and I think you will find a disposition to accept this order as well concerning third reading. It reads as follows:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order of this House, when the Order for the third reading of Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act is called, the orders for third reading of Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, and Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, respectively, shall be deemed to have been called at the same time.

Mr. Speaker: Does the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) have the unanimous consent necessary for his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, third reading of Bill C-47 stands deferred until third reading of Bill C-46.

FAMILY ORDERS ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: There are two report stage motions on the Notice Paper in amendment to Bill C-48. Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) seeks to create a National Maintenance and Custody Orders Enforcement Agency. The creation of such an agency would entail the expenditure of moneys from the Consolidated Revenue Fund, which would require a Royal Recommendation signed by Her Excellency. I would draw the Hon. Member's attention to Citation 773 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, which reads in part:

(7) An amendment is out of order if it imposes a charge upon the Public Treasury—

In addition, the motion goes beyond the scope of the clause it seeks to amend. In this regard I would refer the Hon. Member to a ruling made by Mr. Speaker Lamoureux on March 28, 1969, Journals pages 862 and 863. For those reasons I must rule the motion out of order.

Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) also seeks to create an agency which would oversee the enforcement of maintenance and custody orders. However, its members would serve without remuneration. While this would circumvent the problem of infringement on the financial initiative of the Crown, the motion does present the Chair with other problems. As with Motion No. 1, it goes beyond the scope of the clause it seeks to amend. I must therefore rule it out of order.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that the Bill, be concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the order adopted earlier today, Bill C-48 will be read the third time when third reading is called on Bill C-46, which may be later this day.

S.O. 22

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock later this day.

At 1 p.m., the House took recess.

TRADE

WATER RESOURCES—STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO CANADIAN NEGOTIATOR

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) misinformed the House yesterday when he denied that Simon Reisman's office had issued a statement on water. According to Don Whitely of the Vancouver Sun, Mr. Reisman said: "In my judgment water will be the most critical area of Canada-U.S. relations over the next hundred years", and, regarding water export: "My views on water were developed when I was a private citizen. I believe in it then, and I believe in it now".

The chief negotiator for Canada in announcing his personal views on water and implying that water might be a main factor in up-coming trade negotiations, thus obliquely putting on the table an item that should never be dealt with as a tradeable commodity by Canada.

Who authorized Mr. Reisman to make such a statement? Can he be an independent thinker on water matters, if, in the past, he did business with the Grand Canal Company interested in water diversions and exports? Should Canada's negotiator be someone with former ties to such an enterprise? In view of his self-proclaimed interest in water exports to the U.S., what credibility does he have in the eyes of Canadians? Should Canada's negotiator engage in making public statements about the possible content of the negotiating process without authority from his Government?

If trade negotiations are to proceed, Mr. Speaker, the Government should replace Mr. Reisman with a Canadian who understands that water and sovereignty are two sides of the same coin.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

LACK OF SERVICE IN URBAN AREAS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have been informed by both Canada Post and the Letter Carriers' Union in Winnipeg that there are more than 700 homes and businesses in the urban part of my constituency which lack door-to-door letter carrier service. This number is constantly growing as new housing is constructed, and residents are justifiably angry that they cannot receive the mail service that they previously enjoyed. This same anger is felt in most urban areas across the country. These residents had always been led to believe that the green mailboxes they must use were temporary, but now we learn that Canada Post is proposing "community mailboxes" which are intended to be permanent.

Canada Post is clearly wrong in telling urban dwellers that there will be two classes of residents and two classes of mail delivery in our cities. Thousands of petitions have been signed protesting this discriminatory treatment. The Marchment Commission found that Canadians are willing to pay in order that daily home delivery service in urban areas be maintained. Clearly, Canada Post must maintain its service and expand its revenue producing activities if it is to gain the confidence of the Canadian public.

Canada Post must realize that better service brings with it more use of the mails and more jobs. The alternative of service cut-backs makes huge rate increases as inevitable as all the Canadians who are angry about the postal service they are not getting. I call on the Government to direct Canada Post to provide door-to-door mail service to all urban homes.

GOVERNMENT PROGRAMS AND GRANTS

PROVISION OF INFORMATION BY MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address the subject of federal Government grants. There presently exists a long menu of discretionary grants made through many Government agencies, including Regional Industrial Expansion, Employment and Immigration, Secretary of State, and Indian Affairs, to name a few.

It is often the case that communities, local non-profit groups, and local entrepreneurs have ideas which they believe will merit Government support. However, these people are sometimes intimidated by the vast array of programs and simply do not know where to begin. As a result, they hire the services of a consultant to research Government monies and prepare proposals even before a project has matured to the point where such an initial expense is justified. This is not to say that professional advice does not have value in the success of projects that ultimately require expert assistance. However, information from the Government Departments involved is often quite adequate to provide initial advice and direction at little or no cost. Going first to the responsible Government agencies may ultimately save the applicants both time and money.

In this regard Members of Parliament can and should serve as the first point of contact. MPs can provide an overview of Government initiatives and can assist local businesses and organizations in gaining better access to the system. I encourage Members of all Parties in this House to make it clear to their constituents that MPs are here as sources of information on grants and local economic development.

FISHERIES

GRANTS AND LICENCES AWARDED TO LARGE COMPANIES—EFFECT ON INSHORE FISHERMEN

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, the policy decisions of the Government will ruin the Atlantic fishery. Inshore fishermen and small processors will soon be wiped out if the Government continues to sweeten the pot for large companies at the expense of the small inshore operators.

Here are a few examples of the Government's policies. Fisheries Products International of Newfoundland was given $105 million, with no guarantee of not closing fish plants. The Nordick Group was given an offshore licence after it had paid lobbyists to buy an audience with the Minister. Three factory freezer licences were granted. National Sea Products was granted permission to increase the length of six of its trawlers. Dr. Art May, a man who understood and respected inshore fishermen, was fired from his job as Deputy Minister. The 1986 Groundfish Management Plan cut the inshore quota and increased the offshore quota.

Those examples smack of the Government's bias toward big business. If the Government is counting on small business to create tomorrow's jobs, it need not by-pass the Atlantic fishing industry which is a source of hundreds of jobs. Inshore fishermen and processors are small business operators. However, they are in danger of being wiped out because of the Government's policies. The 1986 Groundfish Management Plan is a testimony to that. The small community-based inshore fishery is being swallowed up by large fish companies.

I call upon the Government to redistribute the quotas immediately. Inshore fishermen want their fair share.

TOURISM

GOVERNMENT'S PROMOTION OF MULTICULTURAL ASPECTS

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to note that the Minister of State for Tourism (Mr. Murta), the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse), and the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Jelinek) have recently announced a series of federal initiatives in support of the Canadian tourism and cultural industries. This was done via an agreement recently released after months of consultation.

The Government recognizes the link between tourism and Canada's wide variety of cultural attractions. We have made multiculturalism, tourism, and culture a definite priority for the Government.

To illustrate the commitment of the Government, these three Departments will jointly contribute over $1 million toward a series of pilot projects. These projects are intended to evaluate the tourism impact on select Canadian cultural and multicultural destinations that will be promoted throughout the United States.

As well, the three Ministers will host a national conference on tourism and culture in the fall of 1986. To the Ministries of Tourism, Multiculturalism, and Communications, and to the Ministers responsible, I want to say: "Well done".
