Mr. Maurice Tremblay (Lotbinière): As you know, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) announced yesterday our party's new long term dairy policy, thereby formally committing the federal Government to this major industry in Canada's overall economy.

I, for one, am delighted with this new policy, in view of its direct impact on my riding which depends heavily on the dairy industry, but especially because our party is keeping one more promise made during the last election campaign.

Need I remind the House of the total indifference of the previous Liberal administration to the needs of Canadian farmers which accounted for a 12 per cent reduction in the number of farms, a 2.5 per cent decrease in farm population, a 800 per cent increase in farm bankruptcies, a skyrocketing increase in interest rates, as well as a nearly 400 per cent increase in operating costs.

Our Government, through the Department of Agriculture, will inject in the farm industry more than $1.5 billion over the next five years, which will give at last the dairy industry a stability it had not known since 1980.

This, Mr. Speaker, is another demonstration of the constant concern of our Government for the farm producers of this great country.

INCOME TAX ACT

WORDING USED TO DESCRIBE CALCULATION OF EMPLOYMENT TAX CREDIT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, Section 127 (16) of the Income Tax Act, describing simply how to calculate one's employment tax credit, reads as follows:

For the purposes of subsections (9.1), (9.2) and (13) to (15), "employment tax credit" of a taxpayer at the end of a taxation year means the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of

(a) his taxpayer employment credits, determined in prescribed manner for that taxation year and any of the five immediately preceding taxation years and

(b) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount required to be added in computing his employment tax credit at the end of that taxation year or at the end of any of the five immediately preceding taxation years by virtue of subsection (15)—

exceeds the aggregate of

(c) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted by him under subsection (13) in any of the five immediately preceding taxation years in respect of

(i) his taxpayer employment credits as so determined, and

(ii) amounts added to his employment tax credit by virtue of subsection (15), for each of those taxation years, and (d) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount required to be deducted in computing his employment tax credit at the end of that taxation year or at the end of any of the five immediately preceding taxation years by virtue of subsection (14) or (15).

Sec. 127(17)

(17) "Tax otherwise payable". In this section, "tax otherwise payable" by a taxpayer under this Part means the amount that would, but for section 120.1, be the tax otherwise payable by the taxpayer under this Part.

Sec. 127.1 Refundable Investment Tax Credit

(1) Where a taxpayer (other than a person exempt from tax under section 149) files

(a) with his return of income (other than a return of income filed under subsection 70(2)—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise that the Hon. Member's time has expired.

INSURANCE

ST. JOHN AMBULANCE ASSOCIATION—INCREASE IN PREMIUMS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, last week I asked the Minister of State for Finance what action she would take, along with her provincial colleagues, to curb the astronomical liability claims which are threatening the very survival of many property and casualty insurance companies. Many companies have withdrawn completely from certain liability risks. As a result, many school boards, municipalities, truck lines and others are without liability coverage.

Just this morning I learned the local St. John Ambulance Association is without liability insurance. They have never had a claim yet they have seen their premiums go from $36,000 to $205,000 a year. They simply cannot afford it. As a result, they have no liability insurance for their hundreds of volunteers.

Clearly the outrageous size of claims and the unaffordable rate increases are the responsibility of the provincial Governments.

I applaud this Government for its swift action to meet with various interest groups which have been so hard hit by these developments, and for taking steps to strengthen the solvency and capital base requirements of insurance companies.

However, as my colleague, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), has pointed out, the Government should also take a leadership role in establishing a Canadian reinsurance facility. The reinsurance industry, largely located in Europe, is vacating the North American market, creating chaos of crisis proportions. The time for action is now, Mr. Speaker.

STATUS OF WOMEN

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MEN'S AND WOMEN'S WAGES

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of the House the findings of a Statistics Canada survey of wages and salaries of Canadian men and women. This survey confirms what we already knew, but it is useful at times to remember that discrimination against women on the labour market is very widespread.

In Canada, men on the average earn $3.00 more per hour than women. The survey shows that the wage differential between men and women decreases as the number of years of schooling increases. For instance, women with grade school education earn 36 per cent less than men, while women with university degrees earn 19 per cent less than their male counterparts.

The discrimination areas noted are totally unacceptable. They show that women must fight on many fronts, including employment, equality, equal salary for work of equal value, entry in non-traditional trades, and higher education for our daughters.

Mr. Speaker, finally, I would like to point out the toothless nature of Bill C-62. It will certainly not help women take their rightful place on the labour market. The Government's refusal to impose fines for non-compliance, its refusal to integrate time-tables and objectives into the Bill unfortunately show that this Conservative Government is much less concerned with women than its rhetoric would have us believe.

PUBLIC SERVICE

REDUCTION THROUGH ATTRITION

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, much unfounded concern has been generated recently over so-called lay-offs in the federal public civil service.

I want to reiterate our Government's intention to accomplish this goal through attrition and not massive lay-offs. We have committed ourselves to reducing the size of the federal civil service, which the previous Liberal Government allowed to grow much faster then the economy.

Like Canadians across the country, my constituents in Saskatoon East told me that they want to see a lean, efficient Government working for them here in Ottawa. We indicated our intention to reduce the size of the federal civil service during the campaign of 1984. We introduced the current policy in the May, 1985, Budget.

It has never been our intention to eliminate all positions overnight. We have committed ourselves to decreasing Government expenditures and reducing the size of the federal public service by 15,000 positions all across Canada by 1990. Canadians also told us that they do not want us to lay off 15,000 people to reach this goal; nor do we. That is not the way to go about attaining our objectives. Rather, we intend to reduce the size of the federal Government wherever possible through attrition.

• (1415)

To illustrate just how realistic and effective is this goal, I would like to cite the most recent figures released by the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret). Figures from all Departments show that of 5,000 federal employees across Canada whose jobs will not be renewed after March, 1987, a maximum of only 700 could possibly face lay-offs. Special measures have been implemented to ensure that they are given jobs and/or retraining priority. So let us hear no more scare tactics—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE IN VANCOUVER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. When she was the energy critic sitting on this side of the House, she complained regularly about the fact that American motorists were getting a better deal than Canadian motorists. As late as January 31, 1984, she said that it was costing our tourist industry about $2 billion in revenue, and that is cited in Hansard. I want to ask the Minister, as she and I both represent adjacent ridings in Vancouver, why it is that it costs the average family in Vancouver $13 more to fill the tank in an average car than it does across the border in Seattle.

Mr. Crosbie: Ask Marc Lalonde.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Member refers to prices in Vancouver. I would just like to point out that under the figures which he used in the House the other day, gasoline prices have actually fallen, using the 47-cent per litre price which he used, from the 50 cents per litre that occurred in Vancouver when he was Prime Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

WESTERN ENERGY ACCORD

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, let us be absolutely a little more direct here.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): When the Minister announced her Energy Accord in March, prices were $7 less per tank in Vancouver than they are today. How does she explain that one?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Member knows that we have deregulated the industry and that we should give the industry and consumers the opportunity to benefit from the price changes which are in the system. I would like to point out that when the Liberal Government brought in the National Energy Board—

An Hon. Member: You mean "program".

Miss Carney: —Canadian consumers were slapped with an 80 per cent increase in the price of gasoline.

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHY GASOLINE IS MORE EXPENSIVE IN MANICOUAGAN THAN IN EASTERN UNITED STATES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is not too good at comparing prices in Vancouver and Seattle.

Could the Minister explain to the House why people in the Prime Minister's riding of Manicouagan are paying for gasoline $13 more than the people in the Eastern United States, just across the border?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, we have said many times in the House that Governments do not set the price of gasoline, that market forces set the price of gasoline. They reflect transportation and distribution costs and competition in market regions.

INDUSTRY

INQUIRY WHEN GOVERNMENT WILL PUBLISH REPORT OF PETROLEUM COMPETITION INQUIRY

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I had a question for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, but, in his absence, perhaps the Prime Minister could answer in his place. Following the closing of the Gulf refinery, six NDP Members asked yesterday for an investigation under the Combines Investigation Act, claiming that the major oil multinationals might have agreed to reduce competition. In view of the great many complaints from across Canada about the high costs of oil products, could the Prime Minister tell the House just how many other groups will have to ask for such an investigation before the Government decides to make public the results of this investigation on competition in the oil industry?

[English]

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, may I be permitted simply to reject the premise of the Hon. Member's question, but to say that I will bring the question to the attention of the Minister who will respond to the Hon. Member on his return to Ottawa.

PRICE OF GASOLINE—PROTECTION OF CONSUMERS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, the question has been directed to the Minister a great many times. That is why I should like the head of the Government to tell us when his Government will assume its responsibilities and protect Canadian consumers who are paying exorbitant prices for gasoline, especially in Montreal where only two refineries remain following the closing of the Gulf refinery.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I assume this representation will be submitted to the responsible Minister. In my opinion, however, it is clear that Canada has experienced enormous difficulties following the implementation of the National Energy Policy which has stifled the oil industry in Canada. We are already witnessing major improvements for consumers in this area.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

POSSIBLE SALE OF CANADAIR—IMPACT ON URBAN MILIEU

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Last night I attended a meeting in the region of Montreal. Despite opposition from thousands of Canadair employees, the municipality of Saint-Laurent refused to change the regional development plan to ensure the survival of Canadair.

Is the Minister now prepared to assure the city that the Government intends to request from any potential Canadian buyer a guarantee that Canadair will remain on its Saint-Laurent site for years to come?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, let me assure the Hon. Member, other Members of the House and the public at large, that there is no intention to have Canadair move from its present location. I do not think the Hon. Member serves anyone well by making such alarmist comments.

LOCATION OF CANADAIR—REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT COMMITMENT

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Minister should be aware that a thousand Canadair workers are not reassured by those comments and that is why we are asking if the Minister will inform the City of St. Laurent that it is not the Government's intention to allow Canadair to move, and that it will be a condition of any sale of Canadair that it will stay for a very long period of time on its site in St. Laurent next door to the Cartierville Airport.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member would do a great service if he would tell not only the thousand workers to whom he has referred but Canadians in general that there is absolutely no intention of that. Certainly any discussions we have had with would-be buyers anticipate Canadair staying exactly in the area in which it is now active.

REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE REFERRAL

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, now that the Minister has admitted that discussions have been held with prospective Canadair buyers, can he assure us that, as in the case of de Havilland where we had constructive and positive proceedings, we will have parliamentary committee meetings before the sale is finalized so that Parliament can discuss and consider any prospective sale of Canadair?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has gone back to a refrain that we have heard in these halls many times. I can only answer him by saying once again to date we do not have a would-be purchaser with money in hand indicating that he has a deal he would like us to accept. The Hon. Member's question is dealing with a hypothetical situation and I cannot answer it.

FINANCE

FEDERAL TAX ON GASOLINE

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Last September the Government raised the tax on gasoline, and again this month the Government raised the tax on gasoline. It is due to go up again. Why is it that a trucker in British Columbia has to pay 80 cents more per gallon than a trucker in Washington? Why is it that western farmers will pay $84 million more this year because of the increase in federal taxes? Will the Minister move to end pricing gas by federal taxes?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, when the Hon. Member is speaking to the trucker to whom he has referred, perhaps he should tell him why it was that under the NEP gasoline prices went up 80 per cent, and gasoline prices, since we took office in September, 1984—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): World prices are going down. We are not getting it.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Leader of the Opposition is—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Go ahead.

Mr. Rompkey: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): It's still my turn.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Leader of the Opposition has said that prices are going down now. If the National Energy Program had stayed in place, prices would still be going up since they were being set by arbitrary decree of Government. Under the deregulation program which was brought in by the Government last June, prices are designed to reflect the market-place. However, the Hon. Member knows that a period of time amounting to approximately two months will be needed to allow the crude oil to go through the pipeline to the refineries and to the consumer.

● (1425)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): How are the American prices now?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Leader of the Opposition has learned—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —and he agrees with exactly what—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Supplementary question.

REQUEST THAT TAX BE REDUCED

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, it is the Minister's turn now. I wish to read to him a question he asked in the House on June 3, 1981, in which he stated:

> The world price of oil has been level over the last four months, and it looks as if it will be going down . . . Surely this means that there is less need for a tax increase—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Rompkey: That was his question then and it is his turn now.

Mr. Speaker: Question, please.

Mr. Rompkey: Will the Minister guarantee that there will be a tax increase—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: A decrease!

Mr. Rompkey: Will the Minister guarantee that there will be a tax decrease—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Make up your mind.

Mr. Rompkey: —and now that he has signed the Western Accord and the Atlantic Accord will he sign a consumer accord?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, since September, 1984, the price of gasoline in Toronto, if I can use my own town as an example, has gone up 6.5 per cent from 45.2 cents a litre to 48.2 cents a litre during the roughly 14 months that we have been in office. That is a great deal less than the 80 per cent which the National Energy Program decreed the price of gasoline would go up under the previous Government. No one on this side of the House needs any lessons in gasoline pricing from the Liberal Party after that record.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Copps: There is more to Canada than Toronto, Mike. You may not know it.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE IN VANCOUVER

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Is the Minister aware that since her Government took office in September, 1984, that while world oil prices have continued to drop gasoline prices in her own riding of Vancouver Centre have risen—and if I can use the gallon figure—by 28 cents a gallon—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: —this reflecting an 11 cent per gallon tax hike and a profit hike of 17 cents a gallon? Why does the Minister refuse to stop this price gouging of the Canadian consumer when the market system is obviously not working for the consumer?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I can point out the fact that the Hon. Member represents a Party which supported a NEP which resulted in an 80 per cent increase to consumers, during a time when the NEP was in place—

Mr. Deans: We did not!

Miss Carney: —and did not provide any mechanism at all for price decreases if market prices dropped.

PETRO-CANADA PRICING PRACTICES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Finance. Is the Minister aware that in his own riding of Etobicoke Centre Petro-Canada is, in fact, a price leader and that it charges 1.4 cents per litre more than the neighbouring Shell station on Renforth Drive? Will the Minister recommend to his cabinet colleagues that Petro-Canada be directed to take the lead in reducing gasoline prices for consumers rather than raising them?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, Petro-Canada has something in the order of 4,200 service stations right across the country.

Mr. Waddell: I'm talking about the one on Renforth Drive.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): They are vigorous participants in the market-place at each of those 4,200 locations. To give the Hon. Member an example of how vigorous a competitor Petro-Canada is, after this Government removed the Canadian Ownership Special Charge to reduce the price of gasoline in July of last year, Petro-Canada was one of the first off the mark to reduce its own prices.

Mr. Waddell: Do it again!

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

CRUISE MISSILE TEST

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Defence. It concerns yesterday's off-target landing of the unarmed Cruise missile at Cold Lake. Can the Minister tell us what malfunction occurred? Will he be giving a full report to the House, and hence to Canadians, when investigations are completed?

• (1430)

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Cruise test yesterday, in fact, was successful. The Cruise completed its mission perfectly and it was—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: It just crashed a few minutes early, that's all.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Axworthy: If you ignore the fact it crashed, that's fine.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. Members who ask questions might want to stop and hear the answers.

Mr. Andre: Mr. Speaker, it was during the recovery phase when the Cruise was flying a figure eight in preparation for parachuting down—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: You should ask Otto Jelinek about that.

Mr. Andre: —that in fact it failed. It was—

Mr. Nunziata: Try again. We want to take you seriously.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is there another question?

Mr. Hopkins: I will give the Minister a chance to complete his answer, if he wants to.

An Hon. Member: He has nothing to say.

Mr. Speaker: I take it the Hon. Member does not have a question? Does he have a question?

Mr. Hopkins: Mr. Speaker, I must say that answer sounds like Tory perfection in boxcar letters.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: What's wrong with that?

COURSE FLOWN BY MISSILE

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): My supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Will the Minister explain why the missile is reported to have passed within three kilometres of Wandering River, Alberta, when strict assurances were given to Canadians that no Cruise missile would pass within eight kilometres of any community?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am informed that in fact the Cruise flew within the test corridor as defined and published, and so on, which is well known to everyone. It did not wander outside the corridor and it did not crash outside the corridor.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Andre: It crashed, rather than parachuted to the ground, within the target area. That is all that happened.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE—EFFECT ON TOURISM

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. This week alone the Canadian Automobile Association, the Tourism Industry Association of Canada, and the Canadian Food and Restaurant Association have all stated that high gas prices are a cause of Canada's $2 billion a year tourism deficit. I would like to ask the Minister if she is unaware of the view of the tourism industry, if she believes it is wrong, or if she simply does not care?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): I am glad the Hon. Member asked that question about the alleged damage which has been done because I have just been given some job-creation figures for my province under the Conservative Government.

Mr. Murphy: Come on. Answer the question.

Miss Carney: I would like to point out to the House that under the Liberal administration in British Columbia—

Mr. Murphy: Shame!

Mr. Orlikow: Answer the question.

Miss Carney: —the monthly average of job creation was 473 jobs as compared to 1,933 jobs under the Conservative—

An Hon. Member: Five times as many.

Miss Carney: Five times as many. So those industries are not suffering under this administration.

Mr. Parry: It would appear that that Minister knows as little about job creation as she does about the rule of relevance.

GASOLINE PRICE REDUCTION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): My supplementary is as follows: Does the Minister intend to take her responsibility and use her authority to reduce the price of gas for Canadian consumers, tourists and native people in the North, who are now paying up to $1.80 a litre?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, when it comes to relevance, I suggest that the NDP look at its Party.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McCurdy: Pitiful. Even your boss thinks it's pitiful.

Miss Carney: I have made the point in this House—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Fulton: Settle down.

Mr. McCurdy: It's perfectly okay to refuse to answer the question.

Miss Carney: We have made the point in the House that, under the National Energy Program, prices to consumers rose 80 per cent, from 30 cents a litre to 52 cents a litre and, under this administration we have set in place a deregulated system where savings can be passed on to consumers.

Mr. McCurdy: When?

Mr. Deans: When?

Mr. McCurdy: Pitiful.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—COMMITMENT TO PRESENT LOCATION

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and it concerns Canadair. Up until now we have gotten precious little information about the Government's plans so I will try to get back to basics. It has already been mentioned that yesterday evening 1,000 Canadair workers attended a public meeting about the future of the company because of the fears which have been aroused by the Government. The Minister said again today that he has no—

Mr. Speaker: Order. With great respect, that is three statements. May I just have a question?

Mr. Berger: Will the Minister end the fears of the workers and customers of Canadair by giving an absolute and unconditional commitment by the Government that Canadair will be continued whether it is sold or not?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, let me assure the Hon. Member that there is no intention on the part of the Government of Canada to "discontinue"—to use his language—Canadair. In fact, if the Hon. Member just waits a few days he will hear of some very interesting announcements with respect to Canadair and its future employment increases.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR MEETING WITH EMPLOYEES

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister promise that he will initiate immediately a dialogue with the union and employees of Canadair who have been kept in the dark by this Government, to avoid a situation similar to what happened at de Havilland, where the workers were ignored completely in the plans of the Government?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as I am sure most Hon. Members in this House realize, we, in the case of de Havilland, have done the most significant thing for those workers. We have assured their jobs for many years to come.

Mr. Crosbie: Right on.

Mr. Stevens: And let me assure the Hon. Member that we will also keep, as a paramount consideration, job security for the workers of Canadair for many years to come.

DISARMAMENT

REQUEST FOR END TO CRUISE MISSILE TESTING

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister who will know quite well that agreeing to test the Cruise missile in Canada was one of the most controversial and unpopular decisions of the previous Liberal Government. In view of the dangers to public safety revealed in yesterday's test, and particularly in view of the new hopes for arms reduction talks in Geneva—massive reductions in arms—will the Prime Minister now commit Canada to participate in the process of arms de-escalation and end Cruise missile testing in Canada?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is not our view that the breaching of an agreement by Canada would contribute to the de-escalation of arms build-up in the world. As the Hon. Member knows, I will be making a statement later today indicating some practical steps which Canada takes. We think it very important, if we want to make real progress on these questions, that we focus on practical steps which can be achieved by a country like Canada.

Ms. Jewett: In a way I am glad the Minister answered because the Prime Minister does not know what to say on the issue.

Mr. Nystrom: As usual.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER REWRITE PROPOSED STATEMENT

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): May I ask the Minister, however, in light of what he has just said, if he will now rewrite the statement he is going to make and include in it a positive Canadian contribution to de-escalating the arms race, which would be to give notice now that we are going to end Cruise missile testing?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, no.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGATIONS OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT—LETTER WRITTEN BY LIBERAL MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. Is the Minister aware of a letter which was sent yesterday by the Hon. Member for York South-Weston and the Hon. Member for Hamilton East to the Chairman of the Human Rights Commission, which was released to the press, and in which the Hon. Members requested the Commission to undertake an investigation into charges of sexual harrassment allegedly made by a female officer of the RCMP in British Columbia? If so, can the Minister inform this House if he believes the charges and demands made in this letter are justified?

● (1440)

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am indeed aware of this letter which was distributed to the news media by those two Hon. Members yesterday. I can indicate to the House that I spoke in the last few minutes with the constable in question who tells me the following things. First, that neither Member, either before or after sending their letter, has spoken to her.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Beatty: Second, that the views expressed in the letter—

Ms. Copps: That is an outrage! That's a lie! I was—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Beatty: —that the views expressed in the letter did not represent—

Ms. Copps: Don't make these statements in this House. You're a liar!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Send her back to kindergarten.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Out, out!

Mr. Speaker: Will the House come to order, please?

Mr. Nunziata: He should be—

Mr. Speaker: Will the House come to order?

Mr. Nunziata: He should be—

Mr. Speaker: Order! The Hon. Member for York South-Weston will come to order, and the House will come to order, now!

The Hon. Member for Hamilton East knows full well that I have no choice but to ask her to withdraw immediately and unequicovally what she has just said. I therefore invite her to withdraw the statement she has just made now.

Ms. Copps: The smear campaign by the Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Where is the Leader of the Opposition?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): This is sub judice.

Ms. Copps: Okay, Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances, because of my respect for the House, I will withdraw to the Speaker.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): What else are you going to say?

Mr. Beatty: Secondly, the constable indicates that those two Members of this House have no authority to speak on her behalf, and that the allegations which they make in their letter are false.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Why don't you let it be investigated?

Mr. Beatty: Third, the constable herself asks that the letter be withdrawn—

Mr. Nunziata: You're trying to influence the decision.

Mr. Beatty: —a request which I think the Hon. Members, in honour, should meet, along with extending their apologies for this gross invasion of a distinguished member's—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Withdraw.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

Mr. Rossi: Everybody knows it's fixed. It's a fixed question and you know it.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—REPORTS ON COSTS AND BENEFITS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question—

Mr. Rossi: Fixed.

Some Hon. Members: Quiet.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Yesterday his Secretary of State for External Affairs, in something of a religious confessional, said that no one understood him or his Government's trade policy, which is not surprising.

Mr. Crosbie: Why don't you have your Leader explain it again?

Mr. Axworthy: Does the Prime Minister not think that if there is some misunderstanding it is because his Government has been very secretive about the facts relating to the trade strategy? It refuses to reveal any of the reports prepared by it on the costs and benefits, jobs, and other economic impacts. So I would ask the Prime Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I take it the Hon. Member has asked a question?

Mr. Axworthy: Pardon me?

Mr. Speaker: I take it he has asked one question?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I am asking the question.

Mr. Speaker: I take it he has asked the question?

Mr. Axworthy: No, I am asking the question now.

Mr. Speaker: You mean this was all preamble? The Hon. Member has one question, then.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, will the Prime Minister now commit to releasing all the reports prepared by his Government relating to the costs and benefits of free trade negotiations with the United States?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend is right. We probably owe a further explanation to him, given the powerful clarity of the statement on trade by the Leader of the Opposition on the weekend.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: —which eliminates any doubt as to where the Liberal Party stands—

Mr. Crosbie: They stand everywhere.

Mr. Mulroney: —on both sides of the issue.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): That is better than where you stand.

Mr. Mulroney: I can tell my hon. friend that we will undertake, and have, with the distinguished assistance of people like Ambassador Reisman, negotiations designed to enhance trade between our two countries and create new riches and new jobs. In the process we will be forthcoming and ask for the full co-operation of my hon. friend who, I know, would seek the same objectives.

Mr. Speaker: Short supplementary.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would certainly be glad to co-operate if we had the information, which we do not have.

WATER RESOURCES—STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO CANADIAN NEGOTIATOR

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my supplementary question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Yesterday he denied in this House that Mr. Reisman had made a statement on water resources.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

Mr. Blaikie: That is not a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member had a very long preamble. Does he have an immediate and short supplementary?

Mr. Axworthy: Yes, I have. I would like to ask the Minister if he will retract the statement he made yesterday in view of the fact that Mr. Reisman's office has said that he somehow forgot the fact that he had issued an official statement relating to his position on water resources? What does he intend to do about the statement because it is greatly confusing the negotiations on water resources and exports to the United States?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as the House will know from reading the newspapers, yesterday, I had a chance encouter in the corridors with Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —who indicated to me that they were here in their capacity as policy advisers on international affairs to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): So, they told me, is Goofy.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

NATIONAL REVENUE

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TAX CREDIT—KITCHENER MINI-SUBMARINE SCHEME

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. Since the Conservative Government's moratorium on the Scientific Research Tax Credit scam a further $1.5 billion to $2 billion has been lost to the Public Treasury. Included in this is $2.7 million to a group of arms dealers and drug runners who were going to build miniature submarines in Kitchener, Ontario.

Can the Minister explain how, after his Government's moratorium, con artists like those in Kitchener were able to rip the Government off for $2.7 million on such an implausible scheme?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, first, I am surprised at the tenor of the question from the Hon. Member opposite who is a very responsible and knowledgeable critic. He knows it would be improper for me to give any information on something as specific as that because of the terms of the Income Tax Act.

Mr. Deans: That is a great portfolio; you don't have to say anything.

Mr. MacKay: If he would like to provide me with further details I would be pleased to discuss it with him later, if that is proper. However, under the circumstances I can say nothing at the present time.

COST OF AUDITING TAX CREDIT PROGRAM

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, most of the facts are already public. I was hoping the Minister would explain how, after the moratorium, they tightened up the process of granting these research tax credits. I wonder as well if the Minister can confirm that it will take a minimum of $12 million and some 90 auditors just to audit this tax credit scheme?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member points out a very relevant problem with which this Government has had to come to grips. There is no doubt that the SRTC program has been an embarrassment and caused difficulties. It is not an embarrassment for our Government because it is something we inherited, and we are doing the best we can. I think the Minister of Finance ought to be congratulated for the promptness with which he acted to close off this program which has caused so many difficulties and problems for the taxpayer. I appreciate his help in this regard.

To the extent that I can be forthcoming with information, I will. However, I repeat that I cannot give information in an irresponsible way in the House of Commons which affects the rights of individual taxpayers or companies.

SPORTS

NATIONAL SKI TEAM—INSURANCE COVERAGE

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport. He is well aware of the very significant role which the Canadian Ski Team has played in developing our national spirit and pride. Will he advise the House what progress, if any, has been made in solving the liability insurance crisis of the team and saving the rest of the ski season?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that the insurance industry has responded positively to our challenge and is today presenting a proposal to the Canadian Ski Association. I am confident that this initiative will enable the Canadian Ski Team to complete its season as planned. In the meantime we are actively pursuing other options in order to develop a long-range, comprehensive solution for all amateur sports affected by these insurance difficulties.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—POULTRY AND DAIRY MARKETING BOARDS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs who is responsible for the free trade negotiations with the U.S. Ambassador Niles said yesterday that Canada must place everything on the negotiating table. Yet many farmers in the poultry and dairy industries are concerned about the loss of marketing boards in these negotiations. Can the Minister assure these farmers who want to buy quotas and expand that the marketing boards will not be negotiated away in these negotiations?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Government has made clear for some time that it regards the system of marketing boards which is in place in the country as part of the distinctive fabric of the country. We do not intend to change the distinctive fabric of our country.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Does that mean that the Government is withdrawing marketing boards for agricultural commodities, such as we have in poultry and dairy, and the Canadian Wheat Board, from the table in negotiations with the United States?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we cannot withdraw something that was not there.

PUBLICATION OF STUDIES

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. I want to start out by saying that the petty, partisan answers of the Minister of External Affairs debase this House—

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! Order, please! I interrupted the answer of the Right Hon. Minister of State for External Affairs for the same reason I am interrupting the Hon. Member's preamble. Could he just put his question?

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, I have a serious question which must be put in the House. It is the following. How can the Government persist in criticizing the studies that other Governments, such as those of Ontario and Manitoba, make public, and yet keep all federal studies secret? How can the Government be taken seriously when it follows that course?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member would know, he is incorrect when he suggests that all federal studies are secret. He, the House, and anyone seriously interested in the approach being taken with these potential negotiations, would know that one of the signal accomplishments of the First Ministers' Conference, presided over by the Prime Minister, was an agreement between federal and provincial Governments that we would work together on the establishment of common facts and a common data base as a prelude to any negotiations. That process is now well advanced.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, I have listed 42 studies that are still secret.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT PUBLISH STUDY ON CLOTHING AND TEXTILE SECTOR

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is as follows: Can the Minister immediately make his study on the clothing and textile industry public so that we may find out whether this report confirms the Quebec study which estimates the loss of jobs in Quebec at 30,000?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, first, I am certain that there will not be that many jobs lost in Quebec or elsewhere. Second, I shall take this question under consideration.

FISHERIES

ISSUANCE OF CLAM FISHERY LICENCE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Can the Minister tell us how it is possible to issue a fishing licence to Mother Snow's Fine Foods Ltd. for a test fishery when it does not have any vessels with which to carry out this fishing, as was confirmed by Mr. Bob Nicolay of American Original, the company from which the vessels were supposed to be leased?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the answer to that question is very simple. The entry permit that will have been issued by my Atlantic regional officials to this particular company would be for the purpose of allowing entry of the necessary vessels. I take it from the Hon. Member's question that he personally does not favour the development of this important clam resource off the coast of Cape Breton in Nova Scotia.

Mr. MacLellan: What I do not favour is a hoax on the people of Cape Breton.

BLANK LICENCES INQUIRY

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Is it not true that on January 10 the Minister's office requested the Atlantic regional office to issue two licences in blank to Mother Snow's so that they could market them in the United States and fill in the names of the vessels when they became known?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, this Minister has invited applications for entry permits for vessels equipped to fish for the clam resource, from a number of participants. When those vessels meet the necessary conditions as prescribed, which are fair and equitable and primarily concerned with the development of an economic opportunity in Cape Breton, such licences and permits will be issued.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

POSSIBILITY OF FLOODS IN SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of the Environment, and because of the urgency of the question, I will direct this question to the Prime Minister. Is he aware that southwestern Ontario faces what experts agree may well be the worst flooding catastrophe in modern history, with devastation, not only to shoreline property but to whole towns, as well as public health danger which may result from the effect on sewage systems?

Will the Prime Minister direct his Government to do at least as much as the United States federal Government has done and provide federal help to the hard-pressed municipalities in their efforts to prevent the devastation, instead of waiting to pay the costs after the damage is done?

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond on behalf of the Minister of the Environment. I can inform the Member that the Minister of the Environment, as recently as last Friday, met with the Minister responsible in Ontario, the Minister of Natural Resources, had fruitful discussions, and is anticipating further discussions to consider that subject.

REQUEST THAT TASK FORCE BE ESTABLISHED

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, does the Government agree that there is a long-term problem at issue here and that it would be appropriate, at this stage of the game, to take long-term action such as the formation of a task force to look at the issue of lake levels and flood problems around the lake? Will the Canadian Government consider how it can, with the American Government, address that broader, long-term issue which will be with us for a long time?

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Government is very aware that this is a long-term problem that has existed for some time and will exist into the future. It is prepared to approach it on that basis. We hope that our discussions with Ontario will be fruitful.

EXTERNAL AID

AFRICAN FAMINE RELIEF PROGRAM

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister for External Relations. In light of her recent trip to Africa and the excellent results obtained on behalf of contributors to African relief, can the Minister assure the House and all Canadians that the vital relief carried out by the famine relief program will be maintained until such time as concrete recovery is in place?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, Mr. David MacDonald should present his report to me on March 31, which report should contain recommendations to guarantee that the Canadian Government will provide assistance and take action so that such a tragedy will not happen again.

This report will have been the fruit of many consultations between Canada and the African states. We are looking for answers, ideas and advice. I shall therefore examine this report carefully in co-operation with the parliamentary and departmental sub-committees, and I trust that we shall be able to develop a policy enabling Canada to take effective action when we want to provide assistance to those who need it.

INSURANCE

EFFECT OF INCREASED PREMIUMS

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Finance. The insurance critic for the Consumers' Association of Canada said: "They will pay more for insurance, they will pay more for products, they will pay more for services, they will pay more in property tax. In the end, the individual pays it all". Can the Minister assure us that the consumers of Canada will not have to pay for his mismanagement of the insurance industry?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, we have gone over this particular issue in the House before. I think the Hon. Member should understand that this is not just a Canadian problem. It is an international problem because of the major accidents that have taken place, including the air accidents last year and some of the shipping accidents, as well as the general world-wide trend to larger settlements.

My colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, is meeting with the industry and some of her provincial colleagues in order to address this problem. As I have said before, this problem must be balanced between the provincial responsibility for premiums and contract law, and the federal responsibility for solvency and capital adequacy. That is the approach we are taking.

Petitions

LIABILITY COVERAGE FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, we all know that insurance companies make a good profit on property insurance. Will the Minister meet with the insurance industry and ask it to provide liability insurance to small businesses as a short-term solution until the Government finds a long-term solution?

● (1500)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I believe the Hon. Member is asking the federal Government to step in and order the insurance companies to do something that falls within provincial jurisdiction. For that reason I say to the Hon. Member that I will bring his concerns to the attention of my colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, and possibly she will raise that point with her provincial colleagues.

Mr. Speaker: One question, the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt.

AIR CANADA

REMOVAL OF OPERATIONS FROM GANDER TO ST. JOHN'S, NFLD.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. In light of the fact that Air Canada has announced that it intends to move its operations from Gander to St. John's, will he assure the House and the people of Gander that no decision will be made to move Air Canada from Gander until he has checked all the necessary information?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, of course I will undertake to check all of the available and pertinent facts. I had the privilege of meeting with representatives of Gander yesterday, including the Mayor and other interested representatives from that community. I intend to consult further with parties. I am sure the Hon. Member knows that the request was made by Air Canada to make the transfer and it was based on a commercial decision.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of three, presented by Hon. Members on Wednesday, January 22, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Petitions presented by the Hon. Members for Abitibi (Mr. St-Julien) and Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

PRIVILEGE

ALLEGED MISSTATEMENT OF MR. BEATTY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege because, for the second time in two days, the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) has made misstatements in the House with respect to the performance of my duties as a Member of Parliament. I feel that his misstatements have abridged, and prevented me from performing, my duties.

I would ask you to consider this as a question of privilege because when he stands up and makes statements which are untrue or which attempt to cast aspersions on my carrying out my responsibilities as a Member, I feel that that is a breach of my privilege.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member clearly feels that there is a grievance. However, I believe she understands that she is raising a matter that is a question of statement of facts, and whether or not it is a misstatement, she has the right to correct it under Standing Order 22 or in future statements.

It would be difficult to find that it constitutes a question of privilege. However, I think she has used the opportunity to make her point.

ALLEGED INCORRECT STATEMENT OF MR. CLARK (YELLOWHEAD)

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) gave the House false information, perhaps unwittingly, or without wit. However, the fact of the matter is that it was false information which I ask to have withdrawn today so that the record of the House can be properly corrected.

We received a description of a family reunion he had yesterday in the halls of Parliament and I think it is a major abridgement of the privileges of the House. The records of the House should be set straight by the Secretary of State for External Affairs so that we be given proper information and not descriptions of a family reunion.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is again presenting a dispute as to facts as a question of privilege. I believe he knows full well that that simply is against all of our practices and traditions.

STATEMENT OF MR. BEATTY ON CASE BEFORE HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) and I filed a complaint with the Human Rights Commission under Section 32 of the Human Rights Act which gives the right to any Canadian to file a complaint before that Commission.

The Human Rights Commission is a quasi-judicial body.

We recognize, of course, that the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) is not a lawyer. Today, during Question Period, the Solicitor General—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that our practice is to require him to put his question of privilege that he wishes to raise early in his comments.

Mr. Nunziata: During Question Period today the Solicitor General commented on a case that is before the Human Rights Commission. My rights as a Member of Parliament have been affected by the Solicitor General's comments on a case and attempting to influence the course of justice—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: —and attempting to influence a possible decision by the Human Rights Commission.

I would ask that the Solicitor General stand in his place this afternoon and withdraw whatever remarks he made with respect to the merits of the case.

Mr. Speaker: I take it that the Hon. Member is arguing that his privileges have somehow been breached because of a statement made by the Hon. Minister. That clearly cannot be a question of privilege because every Member is entitled to state his or her opinion. There is clearly no question of privilege.

Ms. Copps: It is interference with the system of justice.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have yet to hear anything put to me that sounds like a question of privilege.

Mr. Nunziata: A separate point, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Is the Hon. Member raising a second question of privilege?

Mr. Nunziata: Yes, Mr. Speaker. It is my understanding that we in the House are bound by the sub judice rule. Therefore, if a particular Member—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member please resume his seat.

The Hon. Member is clearly trying to argue again the question of privilege upon which I just ruled. He knows, I believe, that he cannot do that. Therefore, I have heard no question of privilege.

POINT OF ORDER

PRACTICE OF HOUSE RESPECTING CASES SUB JUDICE

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Citation 335 of Beauchesne says that Members are expected to refrain from discussing matters that are before courts or tribunals which are courts of record. If I am not mistaken, the Human Rights Tribunal has the status of a court of record. It can issue final decisions that can lead to penalties and affect the rights and status of invididual Canadians.

If I am correct, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully submit that you consider whether the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) has breached that convention by what we consider to be his quite inappropriate remarks during the Question Period. I will not repeat the remarks, they are on the record, but I submit that there is a basis for finding that the Solicitor General has breached the convention through those quite inappropriate remarks and, at the very least, should withdraw them.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I am glad that the Opposition House Leader has raised it. I want simply to make three points. First, the letter which has been widely distributed by the Hon. Members for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) and York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) with respect to this matter clearly indicates that they are appealing to the Human Rights Commission in its investigative capacity, as opposed to having a resolution of the matter.

The legislation is clear and Your Honour will know that the Human Rights Commission has two functions. One is to investigate a matter and, if it subsequently finds there is a prima facie case, to have an adjudication on the matter.

My second point with respect to the remarks made by the Opposition House Leader is that the Human Rights Commission is certainly not a court of record. The Hon. Member is a distinguished lawyer and should understand the meaning of that term.

Third, if there is any basis upon which the Hon. Member can rely, I would ask him to speak to the Member for York South-Weston who breached his own point yesterday when, after having filed this complaint, he got up and referred to it in the House of Commons. He is complaining about the very thing he did himself yesterday.

Mr. Nunziata: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Will the Hon. Member for York South-Weston please resume his seat. I am now dealing with a point of order. First, questions with regard to the sub judice rule are not a rule of the House but a time honoured convention of the House. The Hon. Member will know that it has been a tradition of the Chair to intervene if the Chair believes that the convention has been breached.

With respect to questions that are before the Human Rights Commission, I know of no previous case that comes to mind. However, I am guided by the request by the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) that I examine the matter.

I am also grateful for the comments and advice of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn).

I do not know the facts with regard to the question of the status of the courts.

An Hon. Member: Neither does the Government House Leader.

Mr. Speaker: Heckling is a honourable and noble art and I respect it. However, all of the interventions all of the time on every matter are not helpful, Sir.

• (1510)

What I propose, as I think I should, is to reserve on the matter and determine the facts of the case.

The Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) is claiming his right to present another case of privilege.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn), a few moments ago indicated that I had commented on the case yesterday. During Question Period yesterday I put a question to the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) advising him I had filed a complaint. I asked him whether he would co-operate and facilitate the investigation.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is becoming a debate about what was or was not said by whom in Question Period. That is clearly not a question of privilege.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask a question of the Government House Leader which I think will not turn out to be particularly controversial, and that is, to ask him to state the business the Government wishes to present to the House for the coming week.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, today we will continue consideration of the divorce legislation. I am hopeful we may be able to conclude consideration of those Bills by the end of today.

In any event, tomorrow I would take up Bill S-6, the tax convention Bill. There may be a disposition to deal with this Bill at all stages, Mr. Speaker.

We would then proceed with Bill C-59, the Senate amendments with respect to the Customs Act which are of a technical nature and which I have discussed with the Opposition House Leaders, and Bill C-76 regarding the Toronto Island Airport. On Monday and continuing into next week we will take up the following Bills: Bill C-82 respecting the PGRT; Bill C-86 respecting CDIC; Bill C-85 respecting the Petroleum Incentives Program Act; and Bill C-90 respecting pensions plans.

I will be monitoring the progress of the Bills and will continue to consult with Opposition House Leaders in the event there are any changes to this agenda.

POINT OF ORDER

REQUEST FOR MR. SPEAKER'S RULING ON WHAT ARE APPROPRIATE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS IN QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, might I prevail upon you to take under advisement the possibility that you may at some point in the not too distant future make a statement to the House with regard to what you, as the Speaker in this House, consider to be both proper questions and answers in terms of the relativity both of the preamble and the question itself, the acceptance of preambles and the appropriateness of answers to be given.

I think it would be very helpful for all Members of the House if it could be clearly understood on both sides what the Speaker would deem to be appropriate and acceptable given that those things have to be flexible, and what you, Sir, would deem to be appropriate and acceptable from those who question and from those who answer.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for his representation. Most Speakers have at some point in their tenure delivered such an opinion, and I intend to do so.

The Hon. Member will have noticed that I had to smile slightly when he asked me to consider what are proper questions and answers. I do not think he meant quite what those words might imply. I certainly take his meaning, and will be glad to respond as quickly as possible.

DISARMAMENT

GOVERNMENT POSITION ON ARMS CONTROL NEGOTIATIONS—STATEMENT OF SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, for Canadians, no duty is more challenging than to contribute constructively to peace among nations. In a world threatened by the spread of arms, we are one country which, decades ago, chose deliberately not to acquire nuclear weapons. We had the capacity. We made the choice, not as a gesture but as a practical contribution to the control of arms. That is part of the character of Canada.

One of the first acts of this Government, Sir, was to reconstitute the Consultative Group on Disarmament and Arms Control Affairs. On October 31, meeting with that group, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) spelled out six Canadian goals in arms control and disarmament. First, negotiated radical reductions in nuclear forces and the enhancement of strategic stability. Second, maintenance and strengthening of the nuclear non proliferation regime. Third, negotiation of global chemical weapons ban. Fourth, support for a comprehensive test ban treaty. Fifth, prevention of an arms race in outer space. Sixth, the building of confidence sufficient to facilitate the reduction of military forces in Europe and elsewhere.

[Translation]

In a statement to Parliament a year ago I expressed the Government's satisfaction about the fact that the United States and the Soviet Union had agreed to resume negotiations in Geneva. Their decision to meet again and broaden the scope of the agenda to include the prevention of a space arms race and its suppression on earth was an act of confidence and political responsibility. Those negotiations have been going on for the past nine months.

[English]

As I said last year, we should be under no illusion that the course at Geneva will be an easy one. It will be long and arduous. We are encouraged by the signs of progress, in particular, the tabling last fall of detailed American and Soviet proposals which contained some important common features; a 50 per cent reduction of nuclear arsenals, limits on warheads as well as launchers and sublimits on ICBM warheads. We hope that in this international year of peace the experienced negotiators of both sides will be able to enlarge significantly on this common ground. Agreement on an equitable formula for the radical reduction of nuclear forces and on the appropriate relationship between offensive and defensive strategies and systems will remain the key challenges.

We welcome the broad-ranging proposal issued last week by General Secretary Gorbachev and its reaffirmation of the Soviet Union's commitment to nuclear disarmament. That is the most recent in a long history of suggestions by both superpowers on how to achieve general and complete disarmament.

In this context, Sir, conventional arms, where the Soviet Union has an overwhelming superiority, will also have to find their place. The Soviet Union has the opportunity to address this imbalance in its response to the western proposal, tabled in Vienna last month, at the talks on mutual balanced force reductions.

The Soviet Union does not address the issue of missiles deployed in Asia. But we take satisfaction from the fact that Mr. Gorbachev seems to be moving closer to President Reagan's 1981 zero-zero proposal on the elimination of intermediate-range missiles in Europe. The explicit Soviet recognition of the importance of verification in the negotiations of arms control is gratifying, as is the apparent movement toward long-standing western positions on the need for on-site inspection. The exact nature of what the Soviets will accept in this regard will have to be determined. We also note potentially constructive references to issues before other arms control forums.

It is, of course, too early to offer more than this tentative assessment of the proposals. They contain some intriguing new elements alongside well-worn positions and some disturbing preconditions that could hamper negotiation. They clearly warrant very serious consideration, but there are also many aspects that require clarification in the on-going negotiations. The real test of the Soviet Union's commitment to radical and verifiable arms reductions will come when it moves from the stage of public diplomacy to the confidential confines of the negotiating room.

The Geneva Summit and the decision to hold regular high level talks do improve our chances of progress in arms control. Besides getting the leaders together, these regular meetings pave the way for annual assessments of progress made in arms control and encourage the leaders to settle matters which cannot be resolved by their negotiators.

Through avenues open to us, Canada will actively promote the holding of serious and meaningful negotiations. The House should note that the United States made it a point to inform and consult its allies since negotiations resumed in Geneva. Meetings and discussions between the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and President Reagan have enabled Canada to influence the positions of the Americans on arms control.

In Brussels last December I called a special meeting of Canadian ambassadors on arms control with a view to pinpointing specific fields where Canada might contribute to the achievement of concrete results. One such means consists in requesting more frequent NATO meetings focused on the status of the various arms control negotiations and their impact on the policies of the Alliance.

[English]

We will not, however, be talking only among ourselves. This Government is committed to promoting a more active and meaningful dialogue with the countries of the Eastern bloc. In September, the Prime Minister wrote to General Secretary Gorbachev outlining Canadian views and priorities in respect of arms control and disarmament. Last month I sent a team of Canadian officials to Moscow for consultations on arms control with top Soviet experts, Ambassadors Petrovsky and Karpov. Similar consultations are planned with other East European countries this year. We are ensuring that the key players in international security affairs are made directly aware of Canadian views.

It is important that the House consider what else Canada can do. What specific practical contributions can we make to arms control? This Government's activity will be focused in three directions—first, encouraging compliance with existing treaties; second, developing verifications mechanisms; and, third, building confidence between East and West.

To deviate from a policy of full compliance is to threaten the credibility and hence the viability of arms control. Canada firmly supports the regime created by the AMB treaty and the existing SALT agreements on limiting strategic forces. Our stance toward SDI research is rooted in the need to conform strictly with the provisions of the ABM treaty. We will continue to urge the parties to these treaties to do nothing to undermine their integrity but, rather, to work to reinforce their status and their authority.

Effective verification provisions can help ensure compliance with arms control treaties as well as facilitate their negotiation. Verification is an area where Canadian expertise and diplomacy come together. At the UN this fall, a Canadian initiated resolution on verification was unanimously adopted. We are second to none in ouir activity to develop verification procedures and technology which meet the practical requirements of arms control agreements actually under negotiation or envisaged.

To cite only the most important projects recently completed or under way, let me note first the Peace Satellite or PAXSAT project which examines the technical feasibility of a satellite-based system for monitoring potential arms control agreements covering outer space or conventional forces in Europe; second, research into seismic technology for detecting low-yield nuclear tests which pose a major obstacle in the way of agreement on a nuclear test ban; third, the elaboration of operational procedures for effective investigation of incidents or alleged chemical weapons use, the results of which have recently been handed over to the UN Secretary General; and, fourth, the tabling at the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva of a working paper on the nature of the legal regime governing outer space.

We must not forget that the prospects for progress on arms control are clearly linked to an improvement in the general East-West relationship. Confidence can be gradually generated through political actions which promote East-West consultation and co-operation.

The enhancement of the political dialogue with the Soviet Union and the countries of Eastern Europe, and the inclusion in it of a healthy element of people-to-people contact, are major objectives of our Government. This past year has seen an impressive number of high-level visits between Canada and Eastern bloc states.

Canada was host to the human rights experts' meeting of the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe and is playing an active part in the other CSCE mandated meetings which are working to realize the principles of the Helsinki Final Act. Canada believes the CSCE can be an important vehicle for advancing our security and humanitarian goals.

So, as the fourth round of Soviet-American nuclear arms talks get under way in Geneva, this Government will assist, in every way possible, the process of negotiation toward an equitable agreement. By encouraging compliance with the fundamental arms control treaties, by developing practical solutions to verification problems, and by supporting an improvement in the East-West political relationship, Canada can make a distinctive and significant contribution to achieving the critical objectives of the Geneva negotiations. That is our goal, our duty and our Canadian tradition.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I rise on this occasion because I think it is a very important subject which is not often debated in the House. I thank the Minister for making a statement at this time. It is a policy area where we have to try not to be partisan and to try to find a proper solution in our contributions as a nation to peace.

[Translation]

In 1982, at the second Special Session of the United Nations on Disarmement, then Prime Minister Trudeau stated: "You would have to be deaf to remain untouched by the clamour which is now rising all over the world against the arms race. Millions of men and women around the world are addressing a most pressing appeal to their leaders."

Today, four years later, the clamour is the same because, while the climate has improved between the major powers these last two years, no new disarmement agreement has been signed and the arms race unfortunately continues.

What we are discussing today is the implementation of this political will or impulsion on which Mr. Trudeau focused his peace and security initiatives a few years ago.

With its plan to eliminate arsenals, to reduce conventional forces and to develop measures related to chemical weapons, the proposal made last week by Mr. Gorbachev could be a very important step leading to a breakthrough between the two super powers. This gesture seems to express a renewed political will. For this reason and because of the novelty of some of its elements, the Soviet proposal deserves serious consideration. The offer made by Moscow certainly justifies some optimism, but it should also be viewed with caution.

We know that, as concerns arms control and disarmement, like the Minister said earlier, the road to success is always very rocky. The Gorbachev proposal must be carefully examined and it will call for a very reasonable reply. However, preliminary analysis already shows that the plan submitted by the Soviet leader contains new and encouraging elements.

[English]

It is a good opportunity for us that this proposition has many elements which are extremely important. As the Minister mentioned a few minutes ago, the willingness of the Russians or the Soviets at this time to permit site inspection—and they have affirmed that they will accept that—is very important. In that field we cannot rely only on satellite verification. It will always be there, but it is a great confidence builder when both sides agree that there might be and will be some site verification.

There is a new sign of flexibility that I welcome. It is something we should all applaud. There has been somewhat of a move away from the insistence that the disarmament negotiations between the U.S. and U.S.S.R. be different from the negotiations that should occur with France and Great Britain. I do believe there was a very difficult political problem there and I see the new disposition of the Soviets to put in the second phase or have later on discussions with the British and French Governments as a positive sign that there will be more flexibility and early progress in the negotiations. I do think that is very positive.

There is a problem to which the Minister did not refer and that disturbed me a bit. I think he should have referred to it. Everyone recognizes that the main obstacle to progress at this time is SDI. I do not know, but some say that SDI was developed and put forward because it would put pressure on the Russians to return to the negotiating table after they had quit. On tactical grounds, I felt that that was a valid argument. Now that the Soviets have returned to the negotiating table and are willing to put forward some new propositions, I think that the NATO nations should talk to the Americans and try to do something positive regarding SDI. It should not necessarily be put aside forever, but perhaps the point should be made that it slow down or be frozen for a period of time in order to give a chance for talks to make progress. I believe that that is the main obstacle to progress.

The Minister did well to point out at this time the issue of conventional arms control. That is a very important point. Everyone recognizes that it might be possible to debate nuclear armaments and have some kind of equilibrium depending on the way one looks at it. However, the Eastern bloc has a great advantage in conventional arms and it should be pointed out very clearly to the U.S.S.R. that this should be reduced as quickly as possible while not necessarily linking the two. In my mind I tend to make a big distinction between the grave danger of nuclear armaments and the conventional arms, which are of a different nature.

What can we do here to help? Of course, there is not much, but I think we have to make Canada's point of view known. The point of view of my Party, at least, is that we should press the Americans on SDI as I think it is a crucial point that must be put forward by Canadians. I would urge the Minister to reconsider his position on that.

In 1982 when Mr. Gorbachev came here, it was in a different context. He came to lead a parliamentary delegation and he created a big impression on Canada. I think we used that occasion to create an impression on him. I remember that when he came before the committee, which was then chaired by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), he was the first senior officer of the Soviet Union to speak to Parliamentarians. That helped us to understand some of their positions. When Gorbachev made his great tour of Canada with the then Minister of Agriculture, I think it was the first opening up that there was for this leader who became a leader of a great power. It allowed him to know what the western world was all about. When Mr. Gorbachev went to Great Britain last year as the head of his Government, we saw that he was already acquainted more closely than anyone else who had come from the Soviet Union in the past with our thinking and our way of living and to the desire of the western world for peace. I am glad we have been informed that in the month of June, there will be another delegation of Russians coming to meet Canadian Parliamentarians. I think we should encourage that type of thing because it helps when people who are perhaps not in a position of power but who have contacts and access to people in positions of power bring about more understanding and comprehension between the people.

As the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) said, political contributions and dialogues are extremely important. We never know if a dialogue is making a contribution, but it is a fact that when we talk to each other, there is a chance of doing something. However, when we do not talk but live in complete isolation, we live in a very narrow corridor which sometimes leads to confrontations. However, when we talk, we can always find a corridor that will lead to solving the problem. I think what we should do is to help improve the dialogue, but we should put some pressure on the Americans to show the Soviet Union that the Americans are not living in isolation.

I do not know whether or not we should at this time reconsider our position on the Cruise missile. This was an issue during the period of time when the Alliance wanted to see solidarity and wanted to see if, in a period of crisis, we would stick together. We are all democracies and want to show that we can participate in decisions and not only follow those that come from Washington.

As the Secretary of State for External Affairs pointed out, there was a meeting of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the other leaders with Mr. Reagan after he met with Mr. Gorbachev in Geneva. Showing that we can talk together and that we can influence each other might be a good way of creating a better climate for peace.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I think that Mr. Gorbachev's proposal deserves serious consideration: without being naïve we should keep in mind that it does include some questions which—we would not have believed that a few months ago—might be raised around the negotiation table and which are there now.

Peace must be given a chance, and we ought to tell our American friends that they must take this proposal seriously—the ball is in their court, so to speak—so that later on we will not be accused of having missed a good opportunity.

I urge the Minister to continue along those lines and I think he should now give special consideration to the Strategic Defence Initiative issue, Star Wars, to show that if nuclear disarmament is possible then there is no need for a defence against a weapon that will disappear. In any case, the problem I am raising will not be an easy one for him, but I think it deserves every consideration.

I also urge him to promote exchanges so as to prevent a cold war climate such as we had two years ago. We should resume political, cultural and economic exchanges with the Soviet Union because, that is the way it is, if our interdependence with them grows stronger we will inevitably be forced to live in peace and reject war, particularly nuclear war which in fact would end in world-wide destruction, and that is what we want to avoid at all costs.

[English]

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to thank the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) for making a statement in the House today on the U.S./U.S.S.R. nuclear arms control negotiations. I agree that there were some very significant elements in the Gorbachev proposals, and the Secretary of State for External Affairs has mentioned several of them including a genuine reaching out for on-site verification and a willingness to put off until Phase II the inclusion of discussions of French, British, Chinese and other nuclear weapons. I also agree that it was disappointing that we did not see the question of SS-20s in Soviet Asia raised by Gorbachev.

I recall the meeting to which the Hon. Member who just spoke referred which occurred when Mr. Gorbachev was in Canada in 1983, I believe. In committee, I asked him in very brief detail about what at that time were 110 SS-20s on the Chinese border. Indeed, I found his answer to be somewhat hopeful even then in the sense that it was an embarrassment to have this being brought up constantly. The sheer numbers are mind-boggling. Even at that time, as I recall, the matter was not immediately dismissed as being one which could be legitimately included in discussions and negotiations. Perhaps I was looking at the matter in my ususal optimistic way and it may not have been as strong as that. However, I certainly received the impression that it was not out of the question in terms of being discussed. It was not rejected out of hand.

With respect to the Gorbachev proposals, surely the Minister has missed what I found to be the most exciting aspect of them, that is to say that there is a timetable. To my knowledge it is the first time that either major power has said more than that they are simply working toward total disarmament, or total nuclear disarmament, but have actually provided a timetable with respect to it. Of all the Gorbachev proposals I found that one to be the most innovative.

Phase I deals with strategic weapons which are capable of attacking the other power's homeland, although there will be some difference of opinion with respect to the definition of that particular strategic weapon. Phase II, which would begin in 1990, proposes that other nations join in the elimination of nuclear missiles and nuclear battlefield weapons. The third phase, which would take us up to 1999, calls for the elimination of all remaining nuclear arms.

The idea of setting a timetable is not only innovative but it gives us all something to look forward to down the line. It gives a measure of hope even greater than the hope we are securing from the fact that negotiations are now taking place in Geneva. It makes one feel as if we might make it to the end of the century. I would have liked the Minister and his Department to have seen that measure as the key to the Gorbachev proposals. Although I am one who basically tends to think that proposals and negotiations should take place at the negotiating table as opposed to in the public forum, I thought there was very good reason for putting the idea forward publicly for the very reasons I have given. The idea that we might see an end to nuclear escalation by the end of the century certainly gives one hope.

The Secretary of State for External Affairs referred to the six points spelled out by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) last October. I would like to mention two of them, since I feel they deal with an area in which the Government is not taking the type of concrete steps it could take and which would be more than simply symbolic. If taken they would show how strongly Canada feels in this respect. I would like to deal with the fourth point first, which is that Canada supports a comprehensive test ban treaty. The previous Government also supported such a test ban. I think what the Minister and all of us were assured of last August was the fact that the Soviet Union placed a five-month moratorium on nuclear testing. One of the Gorbachev proposals of the other day was to extend that moratorium for another three months. This is a unilateral moratorium.

The evidence I was able to secure from the Americans showed that they had finished some rounds of testing but that there was no increase in testing during the first half of 1985. If Canada truly believe in supporting a comprehensive test ban treaty, then I just cannot understand why the Minister did not say today that the unilateral proposal of the Soviets with respect to the three-month extension is admirable. It is something that we are happy to see. It is something we would like to see the United States and other nations, in particular, France, undertake. Will we not say publicly that this is a valuable step which Moscow has taken and one which should be emulated by the United States and France? Only in that way can we reach a comprehensive test ban sooner. I am disappointed that this Government, as did the previous Government, says that Canadians support this move and then does not mention the initiatives which have been taken. I am disappointed that the Government will not say whether or not it supports them and publicly and privately urge the United States to follow the same example. Of course, France should also be encouraged in this respect, until it ceases testing.

With regard to the fifth recommendation, we wish to prevent an arms race in outer space. I do not yet feel reassured that the Government is dedicated to preventing the weaponization of space and an arms race in space. The Minister said that our stance to SDI research is rooted in the need to conform strictly with the conditions of the ABM Treaty. I do not feel that there is an enormous amount of evidence right now which shows that the Americans, and to a lesser extent the Soviets, are distinguishing between research, testing and development. To this end we sometimes hear President Reagan include everything short of deployment as part of research. The other day in Washington there was an announcement from the Pentagon that the Americans are now calling the testing of the airborne optical adjunct a demonstration. It is a funny world in which we live when a test becomes a demonstration. The reason the Americans call it an adjunct is that they do not want to use the word "component". It is a component of the SDI.

We need a clear statement from the Government with respect to how it interprets the question of research and the tremendous intermingling of research, testing and development. Perhaps this is not the time for the Minister to undertake to do that, but we certainly need something to that end. Similarly, we need a real commitment, which I had hoped we would have received from the Government today, with respect to the ABM clause being reinserted into the NORAD Agreement. I was disappointed that the Minister did not mention anything in that regard.

Anti-satellite weapons give me as much concern as does star wars. The reason they do is that they take away your eyes and your ears. When we strike down satellites we lose our eyes and our ears. The Minister mentioned the Peace Satellite or PAXSAT project which will examine the technical feasibility of a satellite based system for monitoring potential arms control agreements covering outer space or conventional forces in Europe. What on earth is the point of our going ahead and developing a peace satellite if we do not also take a very strong position opposing the development of ASAT weapons, opposing it today and saying publicly that we do? So I would hope that the Minister on the next occasion he has in the House will delineate more fully Canada's position on the real meaning of star wars research, Canada's position on reinserting the ABM Treaty clause, and Canada's position on ASAT weapons. If he also says, at last, that we will stop Cruise missile testing, I will be the first to applaud.

PETITIONS

SUPPORT FOR BILL C-258

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, I am honoured to present to this House two petitions from the citizens in my riding of Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington requesting this House to support Bill C-258, an Act respecting International Peace and Goodwill Day. This Bill will change the name of Boxing Day, December 26, to International Peace and Goodwill Day and will demonstrate to the rest of the world Canada's continued commitment to world peace. The first petition is from members of the Marmora Village Council. The second petition is from citizens of the Denbigh area.

OPPOSITION TO BILLS C-47 AND C-48

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, I have here four petitions signed by Montreal residents who strongly object to Bills C-47 and C-48, and ask the Government to support Ricardo Didone's efforts to ensure the child's rights to the parent who does not have custody.

And as in duty your petitioners will ever pray.

[English]

PROPOSAL RESPECTING AUTOMATIC JOINT CUSTODY OF CHILDREN

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition with quite a number of names on it from both Edmonton, Alberta, and Montreal, Quebec. It is from the organization for the protection of children's rights of Canada. It proposes to implement a new law in Canada involving automatic joint custody of children unless individual circumstances warrant otherwise.

CHILDREN'S ACCESS TO DIVORCED PARENTS

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I am presenting a petition on behalf of a number of people from the Province of Quebec who are deeply concerned and are expressing their concern in a petition to the House. Their concern relates to the rights of children to be able to have adequate access to their parents who are divorced or separated. I present this petition to the House which calls for access for young people to their parents.

IMPACT OF TELEPHONE SYSTEM DEREGULATION ON ELDERLY AND HANDICAPPED PEOPLE

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure of presenting a petition which was gathered by Mr. William Pierce and other retired members of the International Woodworkers of America which is based in Vancouver. The petitioners say that the telephone is vital in meeting the health and communication needs of the elderly and handicapped. They pray and call upon Parliament not to deregulate the present telephone system in order to keep local call costs within people's means.

OPPOSITION TO BILLS C-47 AND C-48

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I too wish to present a petition on behalf of hundreds of residents from the Montreal area who object to Bills C-47 and C-48 because they do not improve the situation of children of separated or divorced couples, and ask the Government to support Ricardo Didone's efforts to ensure the child's rights to the parent who does not have custody.

[English]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have four petitions which protest to this House Bill C-47 and Bill C-48. They support the aims of Mr. Ricardo DiDone, which are the education of new generations in school on the responsibilities of marriage, compulsory mediation prior to divorce and so on. These four petitions represent Canadians from Cowansville, Granby, Montreal and other places in Quebec.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have in front of me several thousand names and hundreds of petitions. I do not intend to read all the names—do not get frightened, Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to do that. However, as I was looking at these petitions which arrived in my office over the five or six days, I thought it would be of interest to note that there is not just one language, English, represented, or one language, French, but a multitude of languages such as Italian, Greek and Arabic. I found that so fascinating that I would like to bring to your attention that the lack of the kind of humanizing changes in our divorce Bill is creating great anguish among many parents, particularly—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order. I am sorry to call the Hon. Member to order but the tradition is that we present the petition, the nature of it, and then conclude.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Read the Arabic.

Mrs. Finestone: I wish I could. Every language is a new window on the world, Sir, and if I could read it, I would, with pleasure.

An Hon. Member: Right on.

Mrs. Finestone: As a result of that particular suggestion, Mr. Speaker, I will read the petition. We protest Bill C-47 and Bill C-48 dealing with divorce and children of divorce where two parents are forced to attack one another in order to win a child, an act that is totally inhumane and unacceptable. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to support the aims of Mr. Ricardo DiDone which are, the education of responsibility in marriage in school for new generations, to require compulsory mediation prior to divorce, to support shared parenting as a concept, to ensure the right of children to communicate with the non-custodial parent, that both parents have access to anything that is pertinent to the wellbeing of the child, and last, but not least, if not respected with valuable reason that custody may be reversed when it goes back to the court.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I have two petitions here, the first from a group of residents of Shefford, Quebec, and the second from a group of residents of the Montreal, LaSalle area. The petitioners now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present their petition to protest Bill C-47 and Bill C-48 dealing with divorce and children of divorce where two parents are forced to attack one another in order to win a child, an act that is totally inhumane and unacceptable. They support the aims of Mr. Ricardo DiDone which were enumerated by the last speaker. I, therefore, present these petitions to the House.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

DIVORCE AND COROLLARY RELIEF ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, be read the third time and passed.

FAMILY ORDERS ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ACT

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, be read the third time and passed.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to speak on third reading of these Bills. I am only going to speak for a few minutes because I have had ample opportunity at second reading and in committee, both in this House and in the other place, to speak on this Bill and I know there are other Members who have comments to make. It is hoped that we will conclude consideration of these three Bills this afternoon.

I want to thank my Parliamentary Secretary, the Hon. Member for Cambridge (Mr. Speyer), who has been absolutely outstanding in looking after the legislation now before the House, both here and in committee. It was a long, intricate and difficult task. We heard from many different groups with different interests; this is only natural because this involves a very important part of human social relations. He has done a marvellous job. He is a man of great ability and it is a pleasure to have him associated with me. I only hope that so long as I am Minister of Justice I will have him labouring at my side.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: I also want to thank Members of both opposition Parties who I think, by and large, have been most co-operative and responsive and responsible in connection with this legislation. Not quite as responsive and responsible, of course, as we, but almost. In any event, both opposition Parties have been quite helpful. The fact that we are going to conclude this today I think demonstrates their helpfulness with respect to the legislation now before us.

Reform of our divorce laws was made a priority in the Speech from the Throne. Of course, the fact that it was a priority is seen by the attention it has been given in the last 12 months. It is true, of course, that our predecessors in Government were also interested in this subject matter, but the legislation they proposed was never dealt with. We have given it priority and we have met the commitment made in the Throne Speech when this Parliament began. I am very pleased that this is the case.

The proposals for reform I think have been very well received. There are of course many compromises in this legislation. It is a controversial area we are dealing with. As I said, there were many people and groups with different and opposing viewpoints and I think we have a most acceptable compromise in many of these areas. However, I will make this commitment. We will be watching carefully what happens over the next two or three years. If we see any inadequacies, or if any of the fears which have been expressed with reference to the question of maintenance for women who have not had careers or whose career has been a marriage turn out to be true, if we find there are still inequities after this legislation has been in effect for several years, then I will certainly be receptive to further changes which might be needed.

This Bill addresses a long-standing question concerning the objectives of maintenance and they are outlined in our legislation. The judges will now know what our objectives are: Recognition of the advantages and disadvantages which arose from the marriage or its breakdown; sharing the economic burden of child care; relieving economic hardship; where practical, promoting economic self-sufficiency within a reasonable time. These objectives are not mutually exclusive. They have no special order of priority and henceforth, once the legislation comes into effect, maintenance orders should address all those objectives unless one of them does not apply.

The legislation will not impose hardship on those who cannot attain economic self-sufficiency. If, as I just mentioned, we were to discover that, contrary to our intention, this does occur, then I will certainly consider changes. That is, once it is proven, if it ever does happen to be proven.

We have to encourage those who are capable of attaining self-sufficiency to do so, so that the supporting spouse can continue on with his or her life. We cannot forget that approximately three-quarters of all divorced persons eventually remarry and we should not unnecessarily hinder remarriage. As well, during consideration of this Bill in committee, representations were made about barriers to remarriage which may apply to a conscientiously religious wife under Jewish religious law if the applicant for a divorce refuses to co-operate in the religious formalities required to permit her remarriage. Regrettably, the issue was raised late in the day.

There are a number of complex questions about the nature of this problem as well as matters of constitutional law which have to be resolved. I can advise the House that we have met with representatives of the communities affected. I have instructed my officials to establish an expenditious process of consultation with representatives of all the various interests in order to resolve those outstanding issues. We will give sympathetic and careful consideration to this issue and an equitable solution will be found if at all possible, as soon as possible.

The Bill recognizes that all arrangements regarding children should be made solely according to their best interests, having regard to all the circumstances. The Bill provides for that. We provide the power to award custody or access in favour of either or both spouses. Any award has to take into account that a child should have as much contact with each spouse as is consistent with the best interests of the child. The legislation stresses that maintenance of the children is a joint responsibility of the parents. I believe that fathers are being given some reasonable consideration as parents in this legislation and we will also be watching to see what happens in the future with respect to custody of children and how the system operates.

I think it is plain that there are many cases of unfair treatment with reference to fathers as parents in the previous situation. We are actively promoting reconciliation of spouses. I will not go into the details because the House is familiar with them. We are encouraging mediation of custody and support issues and will continue to do that. We are requiring that spouses be informed of any mediation facilities. I support voluntary mediation. We are supporting family mediation in Canada and we will continue to do that. We are distributing to family law practitioners a research report describing mediation services available in Canada. This will help the practitioners inform their clients of mediation services as required by the Act.

Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the relese of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses complements the provisions of the Divorce Act. Her Excellency the Governor General has been informed of the purport of that Bill and has given her consent, so far as Her Majesty's prerogatives are affected, to the consideration by Parliament of the Bill. She has said that Parliament may do therein as it thinks fit.

This is going to be a most useful Bill because of the two remedies which will assist in enforcing family orders and agreements. The first will allow a limited release of information from designated federal information banks to locate a missing spouse or child where there has been a breach of a support, custody or access provision. The second remedy will allow the garnishing of designated federal moneys where a support provision is in default. We have had a scandalous situation in this country for years with reference to maintenance orders, some 60 per cent to 80 per cent of which are not enforced, although statistics show that 80 per cent of all those involved have the ability to make the payments required. This tragedy and national scandal is going to be ended within a year when this legislation is fully operative. Due to the complications of computer systems and the like, it may well be the end of March, 1987 before we have both the tracing and garnishing provisions of this new legislation in full force and effect. However, once they are in full force and effect this national scandal and tragedy will be ended. I believe there will be a considerable saving to the taxpayer who spends at least $1 billion annually to support dependent spouses and their children today, in part because maintenance orders cannot be satisfactorily enforced.

Finally, the new Divorce Act and the Enforcement Assistance Act are a humane step forward in handling the problems that beset the Canadian family. They provide opportunities for spouses to reconcile, to reduce the confrontation and dispute that surrounds divorce, and to concentrate on what is best for their children. That is what they should be concentrating on. It is up to each divorcing person, with the assistance of their lawyer and, hopefully, mediators and conciliators to take advantage of the opportunities that this legislation will provide to reduce the trauma of divorce for themselves and their children.

This legislation represents an important part of the commitment of the Government to social justice. I believe it to be one of the great social and, certainly, familiar pieces of legislation of this century. It compliments the steps that were taken in 1968 and helps to complete a social revolution. I believe that the legislation will result in women, children, and men all receiving better, fairer, more just, and more humane treatment in this area than has been possible in the past.

That is why I am pleased to have initiated this legislation by the Government with the willing support and backing of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who, I would like to add, is very much interested in this, and who was very supportive on several occasions when support was needed. The Prime Minister believes in social justice. He gave his firm support when it was needed and I would like to thank him for that.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I believe that this legislation will decrease the sum total of human unhappiness, sorrow, tension, and frustration which now exists in the area of divorce and maintenance. I cannot say that it will add to the sum total of human happiness, although perhaps it will, because I think it will make it easier for remarriage and the more satisfactory care of children of a broken marriage. All in all, Mr. Speaker, I am more than happy to be associated with this legislation. I would like to thank all Members of the House who have been helpful in connection with it.

Finally, I want to thank my Parliamentary Secretary and the Members of the House of Commons Justice Committee who were very diligent and conscientious in handling the legislation that was put before them. I move third reading.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Pursuant to Standing Order 46, it is my duty to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby)—Children—Convening of conference on missing children; the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell)—Young Offenders Act—Introduction of amendments; the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi)—Visible minorities (a) Government's negotiations with representatives of Japanese Canadian interned during World War II (b) Request for further negotiations.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

DIVORCE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Crosbie (St. John's West): That Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act, be read the third time and passed.

DIVORCE AND COROLLARY RELIEF ACT

MESURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Crosbie (St. John's West): That Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, be read the third time and passed.

FAMILY ORDERS ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Crosbie (St. John's West): That Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, be read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald).

Ms. McDonald: Is it possible to put a question to the Minister? It is in order.

[English]

I would like to raise a couple of questions with the Minister apropos his remarks.

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I had understood the rules of the House to be that with respect to the initial speaker there were no questions allowed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I am informed that it was a speech for an unlimited time and, therefore, there are no questions afterwards. We will now resume with the reply by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone).

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. For the sake of clarification, so that we all understand what the rules are, in today's Order Paper it says:

—unlimited time—Prime Minister, Leader of the Opposition, Minister moving motion and Member replying immediately after the Minister.

It goes on to say:

—20-minute maximum—all other speakers

—Speeches are subject to a 10-minute question and comment period.

I take it that you have just ruled that there will be no questions asked of the Minister or the Member speaking after the Minister. Unlimited time has been accorded to both of them. Is that your ruling?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Yes, that is correct. If I understand the Order Paper correctly, we are referring to the 20-minute speeches that come afterwards. Therefore, the Hon. member for Mount Royal may now start.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak on a subject so close to the daily lives of all Canadian families. Divorce law relates to all of us, whether directly through personal experience, or indirectly through a family member or friend. There are very few places throughout Canada where personal lives have not been touched by divorce or separation in some form or another. We all acknowledge that it is a painful and difficult experience which requires very sensitive care.

I think we all acknowledge that the time had come for change in our divorce laws, but change in, of, and for itself is just not enough. When children are involved and two adults can no longer get along living together and agree to a divorce, it is important that the adults are able to remain as caring, concerned parents, that access to their children is accommodated, and that the children are traumatized as little as possible as a result of the marriage breakdown. We must endeavour as well to ensure that the continuity of their lifestyle be maintained. Wherever and however possible the use of children as pawns to settle scores, to punish or to reward, must be minimized. There is enough unhappiness, sorrow, and frustration without manipulating our children. That is totally unacceptable.

Over all, Mr. Speaker, Bills C-46, 47, and 48 introduced by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) resemble the proposals of the previous Liberal Government in January of 1984 with some exceptions which, regrettably, are serious. However, I do not wish to say that this is not a good Bill in that it is needed in today's society. It is a good step forward. I am pleased that the Minister brought it in and I felicitate him and the Chairman of the Committee, and, in particular, his Parliamentary Secretary, for their hard work. I think that this Bill will bring about increased social justice malgré all its warts.

With respect to the measures the Minister has addressed, and in that he is prepared to be open-minded and hear new arguments, I would say that we have moved forward and I am pleased with this Bill. However, I think it is important to reiterate those areas with which I have concern and those principles which our Party believes are concrete proposals for change within the divorce legislation.

These are, first, to accommodate reconciliation by requiring, where possible, a neutral third party rather than legal counsel of either spouse, who are certainly not unbiased parties, to convene a conference. This mandatory conference should take place in a neutral environment to explore all the possibilities open to these families which include mediation, reconciliation, and the introduction of a lawyer to represent the children's interests. There are many, many options with regard to reconciliation or the termination of a marriage. These are very important issues.

Second, to reduce recrimination by eliminating those sections of the Bill dealing with grounds for divorce based on fault in favour of marriage breakdown as the sole ground for divorce. That has been a major plank of the Liberal view of how divorce should proceed in this country when we are close to the 21st Century.

My third point with respect to the Liberal stand concerns the elimination of the language of "custody" and "access" and replaced these confronting words with the principle of "shared parenting". The shared parenting or co-parenting principle is a much more human approach which we should be considering. I wanted to change the language because it is a vehicle of culture. We know that language can impact on a society and, particularly, direct the courts and the parties who are reading this Bill.

The Bill is not written only for legal counsel, it is written for people upon whose lives it will impact. For that reason I and my Party recommended and defended as best we could the use of language such as "care and control" when talking about custody and "contact" when we refer to access. Unfortunately, that was ruled out of order. Care, control and contact are soft words that indicate we want a non-confrontational, less adversarial approach in this Bill. It would consider the privileges, rights and responsibilities of the mother and father and keep in mind the grandparents and the rights of children to maintain a healthy, balanced relationship with all members of their family. We know that there is nothing stronger than a strong family unit.

The fourth point we want to stress is the strengthening of Bill C-48, the related Bill regarding maintenance enforcement by creating the National Maintenance and Custody Orders Enforcement Agency as a central repository for enforcement of maintenance and custody orders. The Government's move to have centralized information is only one step toward the action that will be required in order to relieve the personal anguish and suffering due to the lack of contact with one's children as well as——the hunger one feels in the stomach—

[English]

—because we do not get the money we require to support our families.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, there are rather serious deficiencies in this legislation, and I hope that the Minister, who has shown some openness of mind this afternoon, will reconsider at the last minute his refusal of our amendment proposals and will accept to open up this legislation to make it more humane and better able to meet the needs of Canadian men, women, and especially children.

[English]

Presentations to the committee by groups such as the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women and The National Association Of Women And The Law have emphasized the grim statistics regarding marriages that end in divorce—a frightening figure of 40 per cent in Canada. Of those divorces, 50 per cent involved children.

The trauma for Canadians involved in divorce is great and frequently represents a first contact with the legal system. That is why I want the Bill to read in clear English that can be understood rather than legalese that can only be understood by counsel. I am not a lawyer and I would like the language to be clear so that I can understand all of the ramifications without constantly having to check it with legal counsel. The Bill should be understandable to Messieurs, Mesdames, tout le monde at all times, in all language, in all Bills.

While the best interests of the parties must be guaranteed, it has traditionally been women and subsequently their children who have borne the economic and social hardships resulting from divorce. Figures show that 49 per cent of female-headed single-parent families had incomes below the poverty line in 1983. That is unacceptable in a country as rich as ours. Regardless of our overwhelming debt, we are still a land of plenty. One only needs to travel throughout the world to recognize that there is no need for poverty in this great land of ours.

The question of poverty among our older single, separated and divorced women was addressed on the question of spousal allowance. My only comment is that it indicates the malaise we are living with in this society.

As the National Action Committee pointed out, 10 per cent of divorcing women are aged 50 and over. Few of these women are in a position to go back to the workforce. After working in their home they are being asked to go back to work in the market-place which is an impossibility. We know that society is in an active stage of evolution from industrial, to post-industrial to a high-tech society. We are faced with a new language in the country and it is unrealistic and unconscionable to expect these women who worked at home to find work in the workplace. We are protective of such women but I raise the issue in the hope that the law is made clear on the matter.

The significance of the Divorce Act for women and children is overwhelming and not in any way to be ignored. The welfare of women as the most vulnerable group must be addressed and it is in this context that we emphasize the importance of strengthening Bill C-48 to create a federal-provincial enforcement mechanism respecting custody, access, support and maintenance orders across the country.

Once again, the Conservative Government has broken its promise to the Canadian people. On May 1, 1985, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) issued a news release in which he promised that the Conservative Government would: "Humanize the process of divorce and at the same time safeguard the family relationship". That promise has been broken in a number of ways.

The Government would have Canadians believe that marriage breakdown represents the sole grounds for divorce while the fact is that the new Act retains fault grounds such as adultery and cruelty which exist in the current Divorce Act.

It disturbs me that I would have to bring to the attention of the House that from January 13 to January 17, 1986, a national forum on youth and the law was held. The issues according to this document that were addressed included family law issues, the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, cultural minorities, access to justice and youth and crime. This was sponsored by the Department of Justice and it prepared and approved the report. It circulated a very attractive and interesting brochure, with a blue maple leaf. I do not know who has see blue maple leaf on God's trees, but there is a blue maple leaf on the folder. In the context of this particular colloque—

—forum. Have you ever seen blue maple leaves? Or are they red where you come from? Red and green. However, in this regard—

[English]

Let me point out what was in that document because it is rather mind-boggling. It states with regard to family law who can marry and the impact of the Criminal Code if one takes certain actions. It discusses divorce and the reform of the divorce law and related matters. It states that at the time of its writing a new Divorce Act, 1985 and the Family Orders and Agreements Enforcement Act are awaiting final reading by the House of Commons and may very well be passed by the date of this youth and law forum. That is correct, for these laws could have been passed but they were not brought back on time. It says the proposed Divorce Act, 1985 will provide that marriage breakdown be the sole basis of divorce. Marriage breakdown would be established when the spouses have lived separate and apart for one year, and where one spouse has committed adultery or cruelty, in which case immediate divorce may be granted. I do not call that marriage breakdown as the sole cause.

• (1630)

Then it says the proposed Divorce Act should also recognize that support provided by one spouse to the other should promote economic self-sufficiency. That is true. Then we arrive at the last of these paragraphs which I will read and which I find fascinating:

> Mediations would be conducted by an independent third party, such as a social worker, with the goal of having the spouses come to an agreement on the issues of support, custody and access, instead of fighting them out in court.

That is exactly the amendment I proposed which the Government turned down, and which was supported by my friends in the Opposition. The Government uses a public document and a public national forum to promote an issue that it is not prepared to support in this House. That is rhetoric, unacceptable and mind-boggling, as I said before.

Contrary to the Conservative promises that they would promote economic self-sufficiency of spouses where practicable, the new Bill severely limits the financial protection given to spouses, particularly to women. The new Bill provides insufficient direction to the court as to which factors must be taken into account in awarding support orders, a weakness that represents a step backward rather than promised progress, the promotion of term orders as a major focus in this Bill. I find that regrettable. There is a place for term orders. There should be an end, and there should be an end to the long tunnel with a light that indicates where we are going, but not a directive that you cannot, in essence, really have preferential treatment for a term order.

The Conservatives promised to assist the many spouses who fail to receive the support for themselves and their children to which they are entitled through court orders. Unfortunately, these spouses will still be required to spend needed income to hire lawyers in order to access federal information resources and to pursue complicated legal channels so as to get the support they deserve for themselves and for their children.

I think we have gone a good first step, but we did not go the step further that would be helpful. I have another area of serious concern, that is, the question of the definition of the child of the marriage. If you will recall, we addressed that issue. The age of a child 16 and 17 is not covered. These young people are at a very vulnerable stage. There should be some assurance of continuation of support. The key concern is that responsibility for children should not terminate when they reach age 16. That youth is our future. Why should they be sitting wondering where they sit. Why put them in limbo? It is unconscionable to have done that. The argument of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), and the legal counsel to the Minister of Justice was not supportable.

One of the reasons we are here as legislators is to change what is unacceptable. If other provinces have not had enlightened change or have not been able to move in their laws, then we should set the guidelines, set the road and set the marker. The Province of Ontario has done so. The Province of Quebec has done so.

It is clear that age 18 is the age of majority. It applies in the Elections Act and in the Young Offenders Act. There is no excuse not to have age 18 apply here and lead the way. Further, not knowing where they stand by the time they are going to hit their sixteenth birthday creates such hardship on young people who have already gone through the trauma of a divorcing family. What kind of a birthday present is that? It is supposed to be sweet 16. How sweet will it be if you do not know if you are going to continue receiving maintenance support and you do not know whether your college will be assured? If that was the lifestyle which you as a young person were ready and able to carry on, I cannot see why you should not be allowed to have that carried on through the support of the non-custodial parent. I think of the very sad case of dependent young adults who are handicapped where there might be a death of the spouse receiving the custodial support funds which puts a whole situation into jeopardy. That ought to be reconsidered.

We agree that education is the key to success in today's society; then the potential for jobs in a highly competitive industrial society must be considered. This human capital, which is our youth of tomorrow, with so many tens of thousands in society who are living in a divorced situation, must be considered. I would say the Bill is flawed in that area.

It is hard to ask, as the Minister said, for the mothers or the fathers to concentrate on raising their children, and the children may have other concerns too, when they do not know what is going to happen to their future. The argument is weak from the ministry. I believe the attitude of the Ministry has been all pervasive. In my own view it has been constrained.

We as legislators in this House should move to adopt some of the more sensible and humanizing changes to this legislation which were recommended, not only by my Party, not only by the New Democratic Party but also by members of the Conservative Government itself.

I am concerned about the inclusion of fault grounds in this Bill which emphasize the attachment of blame and lead to a vindictive adversarial process. It is my position that by eliminating the direct opportunity for mud-slinging, which fault grounds provide, the focus of divorce will shift from an unproductive ground of accusations and counter accusations to the more important issues at stake in a marriage breakdown, namely, the restructuring of the family so that everyone suffers as little as possible, both emotionally and financially.

There are a number of tools that could be put in place to ensure the least negative, psychological impact on all parties involved. One such example would be the filing of a plan with the court assuring maximum contact between the child of the marriage and the non-custodial spouse with a mechanism to ensure that this is respected.

The Government's goal to make divorce less confrontational and more humane are seemingly at odds. The Government's position underscores the difference between laudable, high-principled, rhetoric and reality in fact. It all seems so pointless and inconsistent.

The parties to a divorce can now get a divorce after one year of separation instead of waiting for three years. Fault grounds are not to be considered under this law in making decisions with respect to maintenance and custody orders, and through provincial channels immediate interim orders are available upon separation and prior to actual divorce. Why do you need to keep fault—adultery, physical and mental cruelty—in there?

With regard to spousal and child support, Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about the impact this will have upon women who end up economically disadvantaged after divorce. In Ontario, as an example, according to Statistics Canada in 1983, the amount awarded for both child and spousal support averages approximately 20 per cent of the husband's after tax income. That is really not very much money.

Further, as found by a Vancouver study, support awards are not only extremely low in relation to needs but they remained constant in the seventies. They have not kept pace with the rise in the cost of living and the general wage structure in our society.

The situation not only drastically affects ex-wives, but the children of the broken marriages as well. Fifty per cent of divorcing couples have children and in spite of the media attention to increasing custody awards to fathers, which I think is important, the wife still gets custody 85 per cent of the time.

Census figures show that single parent families are the fastest growing family type in our society. The view of husband, wife, picket fence, house and tow children is not reality. I would like us to remember that when we are developing social policy.

In the period from 1971 to 1981 there was a 50 per cent increase in the number of single parent families. Add to this the fact that from two-thirds to 75 per cent of fathers are in default of their support payments and the serious consequences this had on family life becomes then apparent.

What all this means, Mr. Speaker, is that the marked reduction in a custodial mother's income has potentially negative psycho-social effects on the children. A sharp decline in their mothers' standard of living often forces residential changes, moves; changes in their schools and in their teachers, and changes in the neighbourhood and their friendship circle. When the discrepancy between the children and the fathers' income and lifestyle become so different, children tend to feel angry and resentful and to share their mothers' feelings of deprivation and injustice. This does not set the stage for a happy home environment nor to future productive citizens.

When support and maintenance orders are not obeyed, and when unemployment rates are high, many of these families become dependent upon the welfare system. They are not welfare bums; I would like that to be quite clear. This situation means that the federal and provincial Governments are presently sharing a budget line—that is the CAP line—of $1 billion annually. It could be the big bankruptcy of the year. The cost recovery which could be found in this particular cost item in a budget where we could save big dollars is vital and could protect our human capital.

I am upset today that the Government has not seen fit to address the concerns of fathers across the country who have limited access to their children. Groups such as Fathers for Equality in Divorce, Fathers Fighting Back and the Association des hommes séparés ou divorcés de Montréal, which brought in the thousands of petitions that I read into the record today, are concerned over their lack of contact with their children. With custody being awarded 85 per cent of the time to mothers, for men, their contact with their children is accorded most often only every second weekend. When this limited access is denied, there is an impact upon the lives of the children. This is very painful not only for the fathers but for the children of the marriages who need the love and support of both parents in their lives.

We have recommended that maximum contact—that is called "access" in the formalized Bill—between the child of the marriage and the non-custodial spouse be made with a mechanism to ensure that it is respected. Several proposals were made to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs regarding mediation. The Minister mentioned the research which they are doing on mediation, the support they have given toward it and the fact that they have published a list of mediation facilities, yet the Bill does not provide for mediation. It is my hope that we will not have to wait too long for mediation to become part of divorce legislation.

A growing body of research indicates the benefits of mediating disputes which arise on divorce rather than litigating them. Canadian and American research conducted to date indicates benefits for the spouses of increased satisfaction over the outcome of their divorce, reduced costs and increased adherence to the mediated agreements. Also they indicate that mediated agreements are more likely to result in arrangements for shared parenting or at least for broader access in comparison with judgments awarded by the courts.

On this last point, the number of days of access awarded to non-custodial parents was almost twice as high for mediated as opposed to litigated or negotiated settlements. Mediated settlements average 9.2 days per month whereas litigated or negotiated settlements average 5.6 days per month for access.

My Party is concerned about the criteria the courts will be using in determining support orders. Undue hardship must not result, so it is vital that the Bill reflect all appropriate circumstances which might be used in making the judgment to award a support order.

I know there was not great receptivity on the part of certain members of Government to looking at what they perceived as my shopping list. My list was not a shopping list; my list was a guide, a guideline or a check-list which indicated some of the areas that should be considered.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It is quite correct that the Hon. Member has unlimited time, but there is an agreement that we will dispose of this Bill today. There are other speakers who wish to speak and, if she takes unlimited time, no one else will have the opportunity to speak.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Nicholson): Your point is noted, but that is not a point of order.

Mr. de Corneille: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I should like to point out for the record that this is a time during which a speaker may give an unlimited time reply to a Bill that is of very great importance to a large percentage of the population. In view of a Minister's statement today, we will carry on for a longer period of time. I am quite sure Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party as well as those of the Government will have opportunities to speak.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I understand the Hon. Member's concern, and I promise that I will not be much more than a few more minutes.

When I said that I had presented a check-list, it was not an exclusive list; it was to be a guideline and there were other criteria as the court saw fit. However, I am still determined that some day there will be laws which can be read and understood by laymen in society. That is the kind of law I would have liked, particularly in a family issue such as divorce.

Turning to a new matter, I believe that determination of when a spouse can reasonably become self-sufficient following marriage breakdown is a key factor and must not be restrictive. No one should view marriage as a life-time contract for support. I would hope that people view marriage as a life-time contract but not necessarily only for financial reasons. Economic self-sufficiency is a goal toward which all of us strive. Just as it is unrealistic today to expect support from one spouse to continue forever following a marriage breakdown, it is also equally unrealistic to believe that any time limit can be set on self-sufficiency. Each situation is unique, and that must be combined with a volatile and currently gloomy employment picture. Circumstances can create situations whereby self-sufficiency looms farther than closer on the horizon. That is the case which many women are facing today.

Other factors must also be considered in determining when a spouse can be expected to be determined self-sufficient. For example, older women who have never worked outside the home need ongoing protection orders under the law. Time limited orders for younger women could fail to recognize that their potential for self-sufficiency is dependent upon external forces of the market-place and the economy. These factors must be considered in the quest for economic self-sufficiency. The goal toward equality of opportunity in society and individual economic independence is desirable and one which I support, but it is not always realizable. A balance must be struck between the need to support women at different ages and at different stages of life and the need to allow the other spouse, generally the men, to get on with their lives, to see a light at the end of the tunnel and to resettle their lives without unnecessary heavy financial burdens. However, they cannot desist if there is no other option.

The National Action Committee on the Status of Women and The National Association of Women and the Law pointed out the unfairness of jettisoning older housewives without financial support as well as young women who may face unexpected restraints, not out of malice or ill will. The courts need freedom to consider extenuating circumstances in each case.

I hope, and indeed anticipate, that judges will interpret their support order decisions in a humane yet realistic way, awarding orders in a manner reflective of the unique situations of each family. Neither spouse should have to experience economic hardship because of marriage breakdown. This is therefore important in circumstances in which a spouse remained at home, did not accrue any pension or retirement benefits and would have had no opportunity to save independently or be self-supporting during the marriage. To suggest that she become independent immediately after a marriage breakdown is unrealistic and even if the goal of breaking the financial dependence or her spouse is admirable, the improbability of such a change occurring quickly is high. It is for those reasons that I have taken this position and am disappointed that the Bill does not reflect this reality.

With the release of the report by the Commission on Equality in Employment, the Abella Report, Canadians have become increasingly aware and supportive of the need to redress systems like the system for the collection of support payments which are woefully inadequate and economically punitive and debilitating.

Last, I would like to address my Party's belief in the establishment of a national maintenance and custody orders enforcement agency as the central repository for maintenance and custody orders. It would monitor all accounts due, provide prompt notification of default and provide vigorous pursuit of defaulters by, among other things, attachment of federal and provincial payments due to the debtor spouse. It would also act when the rights of non-custodial parents are abridged.

The main obstacle to maintenance enforcement in Canada today is the fact that it is the maintenance creditor who is obliged to initiate and pursue enforcement at his or her own expense. These maintenance creditors are usually women. Given the increasing number of Canadian lawyers who refuse to act in legal aid family matters and the inadequacy of current provincial mechanisms for enforcement, the likelihood of obtaining default maintenance payments is minimal at best under the law. The proposed agency would provide a streamlined process which removes the potential for confrontation because the enforcement is done through a third party which is not merely an information receiving and delivering agency. The lack of enforcement of court orders is not just a matter of money but is contrary to good social, public policy.

It is a sad fact that children become pawns in the struggle between two former spouses. The result is that custody and access orders are being ignored. With the creation of this national maintenance and custody orders enforcement agency, such orders will be enforced and disrespect for court orders will not be tolerated. Statistics available from Manitoba and other jurisdictions reveal that the cost of such a system is more than offset by the amount saved on income support payments to sole-supporting women and their children.

I am aware that a national maintenance and custody orders enforcement agency requires the co-operation of the provinces but the inequities and emotional and economic hardships being felt now as a result of defaulters must be rectified quickly. It is imperative that the federal Government show leadership in setting up this agency. The Minister had plenty of time to consult with his provincial counterparts. It has been years since our divorce laws have been changed. New circumstances, new ideas and new procedures form the substance of this legislation. It is important to keep on top of change and make certain that the legislation is reflective of the times, particularly when we are dealing with legislation as important as this, legislation which touches the lives of all Canadians.

We cannot always be sure the judicial interpretation will be as expected for these new measures. Despite our best intentions and those of the courts, it is important that we review and revise the changes in the law. For these reasons, my Party supports the built-in review mechanism which fulfils this need. It will also afford an opportunity for a Liberal Government to humanize divorce procedures.

Mr. Robinson: Don't hold your breath, Sheila.

Mrs. Finestone: I felt a great deal of regret yesterday when Mr. Speaker ruled Motions Nos. 11, 11A, 32B, 33 and 33A out of order on the grounds that they proposed to add concepts to the Bill which would expand the scope of the Bill beyond that on which the House had agreed in principle at second reading. I think the House had had time to address that issue. It was raised by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), very early on in our discussions.

I would like to explain a problem which involves the dissolution of a marriage under Jewish law, something which results from an act of free will by a man and a woman under the supervision of three rabbis. However, only the husband has the authority to give a Get. The refusal by a spouse to accord the Get is arising with alarming frequency. This has led to the Get being used in some cases as leverage to obtain financial and custodial considerations. It is of particular concern because without this religious Writ of Divorce, a person of Jewish faith is barred from remarriage under Jewish law.

I have attended committee meetings of the Canadian Jewish Congress and sub-committees which have addressed this issue. I am well aware of the role the B'nai B'rith League for Human Rights has had in this area. I know there was division within the community and I recognize the problem that was faced, but it could have been dealt with earlier. The Jewish community has now proposed a solution which was accepted by the Ontario Legislature in its recent family reform package. However, I am glad to learn from the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary that Justice officials are now considering that amendment. I can only hope that they will act quickly and that the proposals will be brought to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs for expenditious consideration.

I am pleased to speak on behalf of my Party. I accept the fact that we have taken a very positive step forward. I simply wish it had been a more giant step.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the bills now under consideration are an improvement over the previous bill introduced by the Liberal Government. However, there are still some deficiencies to correct, and very important ones. I am proud of the way that the NPD has fought to change the law to provide better protection for women and children, and especially to develop a better system to collect maintenance payments.

[English]

Unfortunately, the Government has refused some important amendments that would give much better protection to the homemaker spouse. The previous Bill would have permitted only fixed-term maintenance. Now indefinite maintenance is possible and I am very pleased by the very strong fight members of the NDP put up to see improved maintenance written into the legislation. However, the Conservative Government has refused amendments to permit reconsideration of maintenance orders when a judge might have guessed wrongly, the fixed term is up and the conditions have not changed.

Some changes have been made to deal with this unfortunate situation, but not enough. It remains that a woman who has been a homemaker-spouse for many years might not be able to get a job in the time a judge expected. How can she then return after her fixed-term maintenance is over with the argument that her circumstances have changed, something which the law requires, when her circumstances have not changed? She does not have a job and that is precisely the problem. We proposed an amendment which would have taken care of this situation. Unfortunately, while it was supported very broadly by the women's movement and urged by many women's organizations, it was not accepted by the Government.

We know the circumstances that divorced women face. On average, a year after a divorce, there is a 42 per cent increase in the standard of living for the husband but a 73 per cent decrease in the standard of living for the wife and children. This is unconscionable. While this low level of support is actually the case, the Government is not taking these facts of life seriously enough. The levels of maintenance are too low.

We proposed that very specific criteria be written into the law to ensure that there be some equality between the spouses after the divorce. In the case of a family that has lived together for many years and has had shared expectations of their standard of living, the wife at age 50 or 60 might indeed be able to get a job and become economically self-sufficient as the law requires. She may just be able to make ends meet, but having been in a marriage for 30 years, perhaps to a professional spouse, and having led a different kind of lifestyle, it seems very unfair that she should lose the standard of living to which she had become accustomed. Nowhere is it stated that equality of conditions should be made the object. They may be made the object by a judge, but that is not absolutely clear. When we consider the type of awards which are being made, and when we consider the decline in the standard of living, which is the result of court orders at the present time, we have to be worried, indeed. In fact, women are losing some of their negotiating power as a result of the one-year separation provision becoming grounds for divorce in most cases. So one might even worry that these awards could be lower still.

For those who might be worried about the problem concerning the husband not being able to pay adequate maintenance, and presumably there are some such cases—we expect they are few indeed—we must consider that Manitoba is able to collect 85 per cent of awarded maintenance. Clearly, husbands are able to pay. The old myth that they cannot is just a convenient excuse, and one which is certainly unfair. In fact, studies for Ontario show that the average award for spouse and children amounts to only 20 per cent of the after-tax income of the income-earning spouse. That is not a great deal of money. Yet, we do not see anything to ensure that there will be greater fairness. We know that maintenance awards have not been keeping up with the cost of living and that even while wages were rising—and they are not right now—they were not keeping up with those rising wages.

[Translation]

Bills C-46, C-47 and C-48 include very important amendments to the existing legislation. However, there are still deficiencies. Because of this, there will be cases of extreme hardship. Let us think about the woman who has stayed home to take care of the children of the marriage. The woman does not want a divorce. She has no opportunity at this time in her life to become economically independent. She has nearly reached the age of retirement. Unfortunately, such cases exist. If she finds a badly paid job without any experience on the labor market, it is very unlikely that she will ever have a pension because you have to contribute to a plan for years before being entitled to a pension.

What is even worse, a great many women are employed by small businesses which have no pension funds at all. A deficiency of the Bills under review is the lack of any automatic sharing of pension funds.

It is true that a majority of Canadian men and women are employed by corporations under provincial jurisdiction. But it would be quite possible to require the automatic sharing of pension funds under federal jurisdiction: The Public Service of Canada, Members of Parliament, judges, the Armed forces, banking establishments, airlines, insurance companies, which account for about 10 per cent of the work force. This sharing would be fair and a good example for the provinces to follow and adopt similar measures for situations under their jurisdiction.

It is a fact that most divorcing women are faced with a difficult situation. Without a right to half the pension funds, these women are forced to accept less. If they are in danger of losing custody of their children, they may be forced to give up their share of the pension to have access to their children. There have been cases where women had to negotiate between the conjugal home and the pension or between a maintenance and pension. Under theses circumstances, women generally choose on the basis of their immediate needs and give up their half of the pension, so that they will be poor when they reach retirement age. That is an unfair situation when we realize the contribution women make to their dependent children, their families, their marriages and the incomes of their husbands. It is clear that their husbands could not have earned high wages and obtained both promotions and pensions without the help of their wives at home.

It should be emphasized that the financial situation of women following divorce is generally very sad.

One year later, most women have seen their living standards lowered by 73 per cent, while their husbands' have improved by 42 per cent. That is under the present conditions where women have more negotiating power.

With the amended legislation, a financially dependent woman may be divorced against her will after one year of separation. She will no longer have the same means of negotiation.

It is the Government's responsibility to prepare very quickly a new bill to fill this gap. Justice demands an automatic sharing of the benefits of marriage, including and especially the pension.

[English]

Governments should move speedily toward creating a system for the collection of maintenance in co-operation with the provinces. We have seen some progress toward this end in the amendments which have been brought forward with respect to the divorce and maintenance legislation. However, they do not go far enough. In the Criminal Code, responsibility for the administration of justice is provincial. Yet, we have national statistics on computer files listing criminals because it is important that a criminal not be able to use provincial boundaries to escape his responsibilities. These criminals could have committed some trivial crime such as pickpocketing or shoplifting. Yet, those who fail to pay maintenance are not included. I think it is sad that we have such a high priority for those types of matters and such a low priority for the needs of a family. We know it can be done. Manitoba has an excellent system. Quebec also has a system of collection in place.

What this Government should do, and what it is being urged to do by numerous women's organizations, is bring in a full system for collection of maintenance in conjunction with the provinces. Part of the responsibility is federal and part is provincial. However, the Government should not use the excuse of there being partial provincial responsibility for its failure to act. It is true that it has acted in some respects. We are pleased to see the possibility of garnishment of federal moneys and the possibility of the establishment of a repository for names. These moves will facilitate the additional collection of maintenance. However, they simply are not enough. We need a system which will be automatic. We also need some type of organization. It should not be up to the dependent spouse to have to hire a lawyer in order to go to court and go through all types of complicated and expensive procedures. We know that the system can be taken care of because we have these successful examples in place.

It is with mixed feelings that I support passage of this Bill. There have been improvements. There has been a simplification in procedure with respect to uncontested divorces. The acceptance of marriage breakdown as a criterion for divorce is there. It is not as complete as we would like to see it but it shows a step in the right direction. It is a step toward removing the adversarial way of approaching marital difficulties. We think it will promote reconciliation and facilitate better relations with children and better relations between spouses who must continue to interact even if they are divorced for the sake of the children.

Reconciliation is dealt with in the Divorce Act. There is a recognition of the rights and needs of both parents to access. There is also recognition of the rights and needs of other relatives, in particular, grandparents, who were previously ignored. There have been some improvements with respect to putting in place an adequate maintenance collection system but we have not gone the full way yet. There have been improvements, as I have said, but there are also dangers with this legislation. Now, there is the possibility of a one-year divorce. For couples in which one partner does not want a divorce, and for the partner who is economically dependent, this could be extremely difficult. The protections are not adequate in the case of the long-time, economically dependent homemaker spouse, that person who has contributed so much by raising the children, who has contributed so much to the family.

I am pleased that the Minister has said that he will look into the situation with respect to the Get and the possibility of taking some action on it. It is a complicated matter but an important one.

I am also pleased to see that the Minister of Justice has said that he will be looking into the operation of these new laws and that he will consider making changes as problems arise. I do not think he has to wait with respect to the issue of pension splitting. We know what justice is and we already know where the problems are. So while I welcome the Minister's willingness to make further changes, I would urge him to act in those areas where we know action needs to be taken. The Minister of Justice has a responsibility to act for justice. That means justice for the dependent person as well as for those who are independent. I would call upon him to make that criterion of justice his guidance as he reviews further revisions to our divorce laws.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments? Resuming debate.

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to make a few comments on Bill C-47, the Divorce and Corollary Relief Act. This has always been a very difficult subject for Canadians. We do not have to go too far back in Canadian history to find that divorce for most people was simply impossible. I think that stems from a cultural and religious belief we have in the strenght of the family and of marriage. There was a tendency on the part of Canadians not to move forward in the area of divorce because it was felt that somehow we might cheapen the institution of marriage or it might lead to a breakdown of the family unit.

I remember as recently as 1974 when I was in law school being told point blank that divorce was against public policy in Canada and that while we have an absolute right to get married, we do not have the right to a divorce. That is something we had to establish to the satisfaction of a judge by means of a trial. So this is what we have come to and I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I had the same prejudice myself every time I heard Mr. Trudeau putting legislation before Parliament which would make divorce easier. I had the same reaction as many Canadians. I felt that it should be resisted.

However, we must come to the realization, and I think we have as Canadians, that marriages in many instances cannot and do not work and that the federal Government must use its legislative powers in that area.

Unfortunately, there are many people with religious convictions who perhaps misunderstand the legislation which is presently before this House. I would suggest to them, as I have stated to many of my clients, that the federal Government in this area is not threatening the jurisdiction of the church. There is a duality to marriage. For many people there is a sacramental or religious component. There is also the civil component in which the state is interested. But this confuses people. I have had clients of mine ask me: "I am proceeding with a church annulment. Will it be necessary for me to get a divorce?" I have to explain to them that, yes, it would be necessary. Just as the church cannot alter the marriage estate as far as the state is concerned, it also works in reverse. I suggest to them that they have nothing to worry about. The federal Government is just exercising its jurisdiction as it must, in coming to the realization that sometimes marriages just do not work.

The most important section with respect to the subject of divorce is Section 8 of the Act. That is the Section which establishes marriage breakdown as the grounds for divorce. It is a change in the Act. It shortens the period of time from three years to one year in which a person can apply to the court for a divorce on the basis of separation. I think that is a good thing. I think that is ample time to establish that a marriage is at an end and it is ample time for people to get their affairs in order. But it is not too long a time so that it serves as an impediment to people getting on with their lives. That was one of the unfortunate aspects of the old legislation. The three year and five year rules in the legislation meant that many people, because they did not qualify under that heading, had to go the fault route which produced, I think, some unfortunate consequences.

What it did by forcing people to go the fault route is make a difficult situation even worse. I have seen cases where divorce might have gone through very easily had it not been for many of the allegations which were contained in the petition for divorce. I have noticed in my short time in practice that many times lawyers, particularly older practitioners familiar with the rules prior to 1968, used to fill up the petition for divorce with as much dirt and as many accusations against the offending spouses as they could. Again, I always believed that this just made the situation much more difficult.

I think the one year route, however, to a large extent, gets around that problem. I do not believe that the arguments for leaving it at a three or five year period are really justified when we see what happens in the divorce courts.

I remember being in Welland County Court along with 30 other lawyers with our clients for the uncontested divorce list. In that jurisdiction the practice was that everyone was present in the court and then each case preceded with one after the other. I remember a case which was ahead of mine where the woman had to get up on the stand and indicate to the court in detail how her husband had beaten her. The final incident was that he had taken her by the hair and pulled her down the stairs. My client leaned over to me and said: "Is this necessary? And if so, why is it necessary?" My answer to her was that I did not know why it was. It seems to me that any arguments we might give as to the sanctity of marriage or the strengthening of the family unit would seem to be very hollow at that point.

I was very pleased when the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) came forward with these amendments, and I hope this House will take the opportunity to pass this legislation on third reading. Many people in my riding are waiting for the news of what this Chamber is doing and I urge my colleagues to expedite this Bill in order to make it the law of the land as soon as possible.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments? Resuming debate.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to take part in the debate on this very important piece of legislation and to underline one of the comments made by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Nicholson). There are many pieces of legislation which pass this Chamber that go largely unrecognized by the Canadian public. However, I am sure that I, as well as all other Hon. Members of Parliament, have been the recipients of many phone calls and letters asking when Parliament is going to pass these long overdue changes to the Divorce Act. Certainly, we in the New Democratic Party are prepared to co-operate fully in the House, as we were in committee, in ensuring speedy passage of these long overdue changes. For that reason, I will certainly not take the full time available to me. I know that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) would like the opportunity to put a few remarks on the record as well, particularly in view of her responsibilities as the spokesperson for our Party on the status of women.

I want to make it very clear initially that we welcome this Bill as being a significant step forward in the current divorce legislation. Indeed, it is an improvement on the previous predecessor Bill, Bill C-10, the Bill tabled by the previous Government. At the same time, I want to pay tribute to my colleagues from all Parties who were on the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, which was and is ably chaired by the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker). Certainly, he and his colleagues, including the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins), who I see in the House, and the Hon. Member for Niagara Falls, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), my colleague, the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald), and other Hon. Members. They all worked hard in committee to improve this Bill. I know there were a number of amendments which were adopted that certainly had that effect.

I would like to indicate as well that while we support the thrust of this legislation—and I am speaking now about all three Bills—there certainly remain serious concerns in two or three key areas. The first concern is with the decision of the Government to retain certain fault grounds for divorce. It would be our submission and it certainly has been our submission and, indeed, the submission of many witnesses who appeared before the committee, that it is a serious mistake to retain the fault grounds of adultery and cruelty in this Bill. The retention of those grounds will add to the pain, suffering and hardship which results at the time of divorce.

I would like to emphasize as well that we are dealing with marriages which have broken down, which have failed, and to those who argue that somehow the passage of this legislation is going to erode the sanctity of the institution of marriage, I would underline this fact. The fact is we should not be adding to the trauma and pain of a divorce. We should have it in our power to make that difficult situation less difficult and, to the extent possible, less costly. The Catholic Women's League made representations to both this Government and the previous Government with respect to the inclusion of grounds. I could do no better than to quote from their very strong and eloquent statement as to why grounds should not be retained. They said:

> The present system of having to "air one's marital laundry" in a public courtroom seems both demeaning and time-consuming.
> It is obvious that at a point of time where the matter is being heard by a Divorce Court Judge, any possibility of reconciliation has long since dissipated. The present system appears to lend itself to a good deal of mutual disrespect and disposes of any possible future friendship the spouses may have. Furthermore, the accusations and counter-accusations of the present adversarial system seem to do a great deal of harm to the familial relationship which often-times must survive the dissolution of a marriage because of children.

We strongly support elimination of the fault grounds in this Bill. Indeed, as long ago as 1966-67 Members of the NDP proposed precisely that. This was at the time the Divorce Act was initially adopted.

There are some who say that the retention of fault grounds is necessary because people want to get out early. Studies have shown clearly that where fault grounds are retained they will be used by those partners who want to end the divorce quickly. However, not only does that cause additional pain and hardship for the partners in some cases, it also causes hardship for the children and it can bring the administration of justice into disrepute. We all know, particularly those of us who have practised law, of instances in which evidence of adultery is effectively fabricated or constructed. The plainclothes detective is hired, appears in the window, files his affidavit and of course the divorce is granted on the grounds of manufactured adultery. Certainly the continuation of that system is not one which we can support.

The second major area of concern we have with respect to this legislation is the weakness in the area of support and maintenance. I spoke earlier today about the very severe problems caused by this Bill with respect to time-limited maintenance orders. The Government deliberately decided to overrule the Supreme Court of Canada decision in Messier vs. Delage which said that judges cannot gaze into their crystal balls and infallibly predict who will and who will not require support at the end of a fixed term of two or three years. That is why we in the NDP propose an amendment which would give discretion to the judiciary to continue an order if indeed the spouse was unable to find work or be suitably retrained.

I would note as well that it is important that in a time of economic and social instability the Government should be doing all it can to encourage and strengthen the family. For example, there is a need for more accessible child care, shelters for battered women, and enactment of measures designed to achieve full economic equality for women.

In this regard I would point out the very serious importance of laws which would overhaul Canada's pension system and ensure that the current discrimination against elderly women be ended. As well, the Government, by proposing measures such as the deindexation of family allowances and the child tax credit, is simply adding to the economic stresses faced by families today. Indeed, those stresses can themselves contribute to the breakup of families. So we believe that the criteria for support should have been significantly improved, as well as in particular, with the concerns already expressed with respect to time-limited maintenance orders.

In conclusion I want to underline the fact that we are supporting this legislation as a significant step forward. Certainly with respect to the question of maintenance, as my colleague from Broadview-Greenwood said earlier, we support the concept of national enforcement. The Province of Manitoba, under an NDP Government, has led the way in showing how such orders can effectively be enforced through a provincial enforcement agency. We believe that the constitutional arguments raised against this proposal by the federal Government are without substance. We would support the creation of a national enforcement agency so that women do not continue to be the victims of unpaid maintenance orders.

As well, the committee itself made a number of significant improvements in response to the concerns raised by witnesses appearing on behalf of fathers' groups. Time is limited and I am not going to outline each of the improvements, but certainly the committee took seriously its responsibility in this area. I know that fathers' groups feel that in some cases, particularly on the question of the presumption of joint custody, the committee did not go far enough but certainly there were improvements made and I think the House should recognize and support those improvements. Finally, I want to again commend the members of the committee who played an active role in improving this legislation and indicate that we in this Party are not going to wait five years for improvement. Both myself and my colleague from Vancouver East, as well as my colleague from Broadview-Greenwood, will be bringing forward in the very near future Private Members' Bills to improve this legislation and to ensure that the grounds are eliminated and the economic hardship facing older women in particular will not be aggravated by this divorce legislation.

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I take great pleasure in supporting this Bill in the few minutes remaining. It has been a long time coming and many tens of thousands of people have been waiting to see it pass through the House.

My concern relates to the predicament of wives, some of them of longstanding, who, after being deserted by a husband, find themselves after a period of one year in a divorce situation through no choice or fault of their own. Whether or not they will be fairly treated will depend on this Bill and some of the regulations which will flow from it.

I sympathize with the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) in trying to bring in a Bill which will cover all the different Acts in effect in this area. We have paid particular attention to widows and divorces. I do believe we have missed out badly in looking after divorced widows. When they draw a pension there is no guarantee that on the expiration of their ex-husband they will continue to draw that part of the pension. That is what I wish to address myself to.

It is generally accepted now in our more civilized society that a spouse has an express interest and equity in pensions earned while she is sharing a household and doing her share of the family duties with a person qualifying for a pension. I was pleased to note the recent order took into account a case which is all too familiar to many of us in our constituency offices. It involved a wife who worked while she put her husband through school. When he got a much higher education and was able to move into a professional status, he then decided to get divorced. There is now a precedent for the divorcee to be considered to have an earned share in the increased ability of the husband to earn money. Surely the same thing applies to servicemen and civil servants who draw pensions.

In the case of widows, the budget papers indicated that pension plans would be required to provide benefits to surviving spouses of plan members who are retired at the time of death. The benefit to the survivor will be no less than 60 per cent of the amount payable had both spouses lived. Survivor pensions will no longer be terminated if the survivor remarries.

In the case of divorcees the budget papers indicated that the value of pension credits and pensions already being paid will be split equally between spouses upon marriage breakdown to reflect the pension credits earned during the period of the marriage.

There is obvious concern in the proposed reforms to private sector pensions that provision be made to ensure fair treatment of women who are divorced or widowed. My plea is that we think of the one part that is still missing, that is the divorced widow.

I do not wish to take up a great deal of time today in the closing steps of this Bill, Mr. Speaker. I would like to compliment the Minister of Justice for bringing it forward. I would also like to compliment the sensible suggestions which came from some members of the Opposition.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I hope you will notify me when there is one minute remaining in the allotted time.

Forty per cent of Canadian marriages end in divorce. Single-parent families are the fastest growing type of family in our society. There was a 50 per cent increase between 1971 and 1981. We know that most mothers are left to be the head of single-parent families with inadequate support. Largely as a result of this one fact we have had a dramatic increase in the incidence of poverty.

When a marriage ends in divorce the woman's average income falls by 73 per cent and the man's average income rises by 42 per cent. In 16 out of 17 cases the women get custody of the children. However, 85 per cent of divorced women get no alimony at all. As for child support, when this is paid, the average award is only $200 a month for two children. This proves how drastically we need reform in the issue of divorce. It proves even more that we need basic security and protections, basically for the woman, her children, and her later years following divorce.

There are many aspects of Bills C-48 and 49 which we have supported. My colleagues have elaborated on this in considerable detail. We agree with no-fault divorce provided there is adequate financial support. That has been our main concern, and we regret very much that our amendments were not accepted.

The real weakness of the new legislation is the fixed term maintenance order which fixes maintenance awards for three years and does not allow for an extension. There are some other things which we do agree with in the Bill. As my colleagues have said, there is some exchange of information that will assist in locating defaulting spouses. However, we appeal to the Government to take much more drastic action along the lines of that taken by Manitoba which has a provincial enforcement rate of 85 per cent in the collection of support orders.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Mr. Crosbie (St. John's West) moved that Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act, be now read a third time and do pass. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Mr. Crosbie (St. John's West) moved that Bill C-47, and Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, be now read a third time and do pass. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Mr. Crosbie (St. John's West) moved that Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions,the garnishment and attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, be now read a third time and do pass. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the third time and passed.

CRIME VICTIMS ASSISTANCE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West) moved that Bill C-241, an Act to provide assistance for victims of crime, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in specific terms I am asking the House of Commons to give second reading to Bill C-241 which enacts the Crime Victims Assistance Act. My real purpose is to present the broader context of the subject of victims of crime. The role of victims in the criminal process has never been recognized in Canada and my purpose is to draw attention to that fact.

Hopefully the House and the committees of the House will give consideration in the future to the role of victims of crime in the criminal process. It goes without saying, Mr. Speaker, that I would accept an amendment to the motion to give second reading that would allow the subject matter of the status of victims of crime to be referred to an appropriate committee of the House such as the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

I will begin by explaining my motive in presenting this Bill to the House of Commons. Over many years of involvement with the administration of justice in Canada, I have noted on numerous occasions that victims of crime have in fact been the victims of the court process as well as victims of the criminal act which resulted in the court process. In many cases victims of crime are unaware of the criminal proceedings and the investigations leading up to the actual case before the court in Canada and, generally speaking, have no information on the investigation or the court processes. That is a matter to which I attempted to direct attention in the Bill.

Apart from that, Mr. Speaker, time and again we have seen persons victimized by criminal acts going without compensation. That is a very difficult subject involving both federal and provincial jurisdictions. Steps have been taken in many provinces and by the Government of Canada to provide a method of compensation. However, it is always difficult for the victim of a crime, and the family of a victim of a crime, to see a criminal offender walk away from a court after having inflicted personal injury or committed damage to property of the victim of a crime, without any requirement that any compensation be made or any retribution be given by the perpetrator of the crime. That is the second point that is addressed in this Bill.

I would also like to make a few remarks generally about Private Members' Bills. I know that as solicitors in the Department of Justice review a Bill such as this there will be a tendency to pick away, not only at the letter of the law, but at the substance of it, and engage in constitutional and jurisdictional arguments. It is not the duty of a private Member who presents a Bill in the House of Commons to dot all the "i"s, and cross all the "t"s and come up with a perfect piece of legislation. A private Member's Bill is really a vehicle for focussing attention on the subject matter of the Bill. I hope that if and when lawyers in the Department of Justice and elsewhere in the Government service have an opportunity to review the provisions of the Bill they will realize that the general intention is to aid and assist victims of crime rather than to establish a legal precedent that will stand the test of time, one that is emblazoned in iron or chiselled in stone. It is simply a document that presents a possible beginning to the resolution of a real social problem. It is with that in mind, Mr. Speaker, that I take the liberty of pointing out to the House of Commons some of the provisions of this Bill.

Basically, this legislation dealing with assistance to victims of crime has two major features. First, it makes provision for informing the victim of a crime, or the family of a victim in the case of a fatality, of the facts concerning the investigation as the investigation by the police and other officers proceeds. When that investigation reaches the point of court action, which, as my legal colleagues know, under a criminal process begins with the laying of an information against an accused person, the victim then is informed of the fact and of all the subsequent proceedings in respect of that information.

I am sure many lawyers may quarrel with the process and procedures that have been suggested by this Bill, but the fact is that in our criminal process under the Criminal Code of Canada an informant or person who lays an information—the person who actually makes the charge—has a status in the legal proceedings. Therefore, if the victim of a crime is also the informant, in that capacity they have a right to receive information and documentation concerning the case before the courts.

I am simply giving to any and all victims of a crime, or representatives of the victim of a crime in the case of a fatality, the status of informant and the right on their part and the obligation on the part of the police and the court officials to keep that victim or victim's representative informed of all the proceedings. I do not believe there is anything novel or difficult about that concept.

The second major feature of the Bill concerns a right given to a victim or the family, in the case of a deceased victim, to recover compensation from the offender. Those provisions may present greater difficulty. Let me explain my motive in attempting to codify this right into law.

Based on my experience, in many cases unless the compensation that might be provided to a victim of crime is provided quickly and expeditiously, with a minimum of legal difficulty, no compensation whatever will be recovered. It is trite to say that the victim of a crime has a right to sue in civil courts, a right that is protected by many provisions, both for the plaintiff, or claimant, and the defendant, or the person defending against the claim. However, there is a need and I believe a right on the part of a victim of crime in our society to more immediate redress.

I have attempted to establish that process and procedure which would provide that more immediate redress. I direct Members attention to that specific provision of the bill. Again, it is not without fault or difficulty and I would be the last to pretend that it does not present certain difficulties. However, it is based on a known and recognized principle of criminal law. For many years the Criminal Code of Canada has provided for restitution as part of the punishment or penalty imposed on the accused and convicted person. It is not entirely novel although it may be a new approach.

The point of the Bill is to provide two major features to aid and assist a victim of a crime. The first feature is that the victim receives information from the police and other officials with respect to the investigation of the crime and that they are kept informed of the court proceedings after a charge is laid and a court process is begun.

The second feature is a right to quick redress and compensation in certain circumstances and cases. I do not expect the House of Commons to endorse this Bill and all its provisions. However, I believe there is a real interest not only in the House but across the country to provide some assistance to victims of crime. If that is the desire of the House, and I believe it is the desire of Canadians, I ask the House to take some action to see that this subject matter is continued and attention is focused on it through our parliamentary process.

Dealing more generally with the subject of victims of crime, I want to point out to Members, as it has been pointed out to me on many occasions, that victims of crime have no role in the criminal justice system. They are the forgotten people. Over the years we have seen a great deal of public attention focused on the rights of persons suspected of criminal offences and the rights of persons charged with criminal offences. However, very little attention has been focused on the victims of criminal acts. I believe it is time that we change this and do something about the victims of crime.

I was pleased to be one of the Members of the House to have endorsed the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and all of its provisions that are applicable to persons who are suspected and charged with crime. I think we have some obligation to look at the other side of the coin. I cannot believe that Members of the House do not agree with that proposition.

I want to bring two specific points to the attention of Members of the House. One is the cost of the crime in relation to the victims of crime. I have a report that emanated from the Solicitor General of Canada (Mr. Beatty) that gives some details of the cost of crime to victims in Canada. I will simply provide one statistic contained in that report. As a result of a survey conducted through seven cities in Canada, it was determined that the cost of crime to victims in those seven cities in a one-year period was $431 million. That amount is made up of $211 million in unrecovered property and cash; $41.9 million in damage to property; $7 million in associated medical expenses and lost wages and, apart from that direct loss, claims of $170 million were paid out to victims by insurance companies. Therefore, we are talking about a significant problem and one that affects many Canadians.

In a more ideal society than we have in Canada in 1986—I know we are working to make it a better society—we would have a victim's bill of rights. I am sure many agree that victims of crime need special protection and ought to have special consideration under the law. A victim's bill of rights has been established, as I understand it, in 30 state legislature across the United States.

One might ask: What is a victim's bill of rights? I understand that it is a reference to a package of concerns to establish fair standards for treatment of victims and witnesses. While the legislation apparently varies from state to state, these standards include protection from intimidation and harm, the right to information about the case, the right to submit a statement to the court at the time of sentencing during plea bargaining or case dismissal, the return of property and the right to lost employment or wages.

I have only addressed two elements of a victim's bill of rights in Bill C-241. They are the right to information and a method of providing immediate redress and compensation. We still have a long way to go. It is not in any way a perfect document, and I am sure my colleagues in the House will remind me of that very soon. However, it is simply a start. I am attempting to draw attention to the plight of victims of crime. I am trying to demonstrate that something can be done through legislation to redress some of the wrongs of the past.

I am simply asking the House to make a start by referring the subject matter of this Bill to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. I hope my colleagues in the House will see fit to take that action so we may look at the neglected people in the criminal justice system, the victims of crime.

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I do not think the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) should apologize for his Bill. I congratulate him on his initiative. Any Bill of this kind requires much study. The subject is important.

Speaking as a Member and as a former Minister of Justice and Attorney General, I think the time for us to address this issue is long overdue, as it is also, I suggest, for the issue of compensation for those individuals who are accused and acquitted of crimes, sometimes with very serious disastrous financial consequences to them.

That being said, I do not want to go on at any great length about this Bill, other than to express my own view, which I am sure is shared by all my colleagues, that this is a matter which should be addressed by the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

I for one believe, and I hope other Members will agree, that indeed this matter should be referred and considered with a view to addressing the Bill, the technical assets of it and some of the other issues which obviously, as the Hon. Member has said, may indeed be incomplete. It is a private Members' Bill. I heartily support the thrust and the initiative.

Once again, I congratulate my friend from Halifax West and I encourage my fellow members to support the reference.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise on this important legislation to indicate on behalf of the New Democratic Party, as Justice spokesman for my Party, that we fully support the reference of the subject matter to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Certainly the question of victims' rights and the extent to which victims have been ignored traditionally in the criminal justice process is one which has, over the last three or four years, been very much coming to the fore. There have been a number of conferences, books and draft conventions. Indeed, the United Nations dealt with the subject at the last congress on the prevention of crime.

The whole question of the status of victims of crime has been drawn to my attention, not just in an abstract way but in a very real way, through a number of families, including a family in my own constituency of Burnaby, a mother, Mrs. Jacqueline Helm, whose daughter was murdered and who came to my office afterward and told me about the way in which her family was denied access to information and were systematically dealt with in a manner that was insensitive and which failed to reflect the concerns they had about the outcome of the trial, their sense of loss, and their lack of awareness of what was going on.

There are a couple of major concerns in the area of victims' rights. It is the view of victims of crime, and I am referring now to the report of the Canadian Federal Provincial Task Force on Justice for Victims of Crime, that they need more assistance to deal with their losses and suffering.

In speaking of the families of victims the task force stated that in addition they believe they should be compensated adequately for any loss or suffering which they have endured. Many of them also feel that they need to be active participants in the justice process. Most important, I hear the cry for more information and awareness about what is going on.

Many victims find themselves confused and bewildered by the criminal justice system, not just in terms of the specific case but basic questions as to how the system operates. Why is it the property they may have had stolen from them cannot be returned to them immediately? Why was a particular charge reduced? What was the nature of the plea bargaining that took place? Why did the trial have to be adjourned? Why was the individual not informed as a victim when the jury were to come in with their verdict? Why was restitution not ordered? What sort of criminal injuries compensation is available? And so on.

I see the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell) is in the House today. I want to commend the work he has done on behalf of victims of crime. Since he was first elected as a Member he has worked particularly hard with a group "Victims and Violence" and Don Sullivan to try to improve the quality of services to victims in Canada.

There is not just a need for information, Mr. Speaker, but as well the need for services for victims. I would point out the acute shortage of transition houses and rape crisis centres in our communities for victims of sexual assault, the importance of funding for crisis intervention centres and the training of workers within the system to recognize and respond to the needs of victims and to help the victims financially where there has been loss and suffering.

I think it is also important that we as a Parliament do what we can to prevent crime and thus to reduce the number of victims and potential victims of crime. We must attack the causes of crime.

The Senate committee has identified a number of causes in an excellent report which that Committee called "Child at Risk". The Canadian Council on Social Development and the Canadian Criminal Justice Association have talked about the importance of crime prevention through social development programs; attacking unemployment, particularly among young people; attacking poverty and the appallingly inadequate levels of welfare, particularly for single parents; the enhancing of programs for dealing with learning disabilities; the whole question of violence in our society, violence on TV, for example, and in the media; reducing the level of violence, the Rambo mentality which is so prevalent and the video games which children are playing involving killing as many potential victims as possible within as short a time as possible. We have to look at the violence ethic in our society. We have to look at effective forms of gun control to ensure that the level of violence is reduced and the number of potential victims is reduced.

We must not forget that there are also victims of crime within the prison system. Because people lose their liberty and are sentenced to terms of imprisonment does not mean they lose all of their rights. We must ensure where prisoners are victims of violence, as at Archambault prison not that long ago, that they too are provided with services. Hopefully that kind of violence at the hands of the state will not be tolerated or permitted.

As well, it is important we not just consider traditional forms of crime and traditional victims. One of the important themes of the United Nations in the work it has done on victims of crime is to ensure consideration of non traditional forms of crime as well. We must consider the victims of environmental pollution; victims of the destruction of our environment and our native people who are the victims of mercury poisoning in northwestern Ontario. We have to look at victims of environmental crime. Working men and women who are maimed and killed on the job are victims, and victims of what I consider to be crimes. We must look at abuses of power in our society, at corporate fraud, at negligence in the pursuit of profit and the unsafe and hazardous products that are inflicted upon us. There are victims in those areas of crime as well.

The range of concerns which must be addressed by the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs in examining the whole question of victims' rights is very broad indeed. We must look at victim input in the whole question of the laying of charges, victims' rights to fundamental information, pre-trial hearings, perhaps involving the victim and the accused and what is the onus of the burden of proof. As well we must look at the whole question of victim impact statements. This issue has been raised, and the implications have to be carefully examined. We have the role of the victim in the sentencing process and methods of determining compensation for victims. The Justice Committee will have an onerous task ahead of it.

I commend the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) for bringing this matter before the House. Certainly while I do have some questions about the specific details of his private Members' Bill, I am pleased to rise in support of the reference of this important subject matter for the rights of victims of crime and their families to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. I hope that that committee will give this subject the full and comprehensive study it so deserves.

Mr. Patrick Boyer (Etobicoke-Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, the debate over the last few moments indicates very clearly that we now have before the House an idea whose time has come. I salute the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) for bringing the matter of compensation for victims of crime to the attention of the thirty-third Parliament. As clearly evidenced by what was said by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) and the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), this matter will have the support of Hon. Members on all sides of the House to go to committee where it can be thoroughly aired and proper legislation brought forward.

The Hon. Member for Burnaby, in his usual scholarly way, referred to the many studies and works which have gone on up until now to deal with aspects of this problem. The Hon. Member for Halifax West clearly outlined why this is timely. Certainly in the evolution of law, legal recourse and remedy in the country, it has been an important development in shifting from tort law to a statutory right for compensation for victims of crime. We have seen this evolution beginning with such statutes as the Ontario statute providing compensation for victims of crime and the formation in the Province of Ontario of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board. At the beginning it was viewed as a remarkable departure, but now it has become more and more accepted and the concept of compensating victims of crime has been happily and speedily reconciled with other areas of tort law in criminal procedure.

I share the concern raised by the Hon. Member for Burnaby as far as factors in our society which lead to crime are concerned, and particularly reflect upon his point about violence on television. But a few weeks ago in my constituency of Etobicoke-Lakeshore we held a public forum on family violence. In the course of that evening's session, Ms. Diane Pôné, who is with the National Clearing House on Family Violence of the federal Government, reported on a conference which she had just that week attended in Chicago.

Something which is now developing in the United States—and we in Etobicoke-Lakeshore are in the course of pursuing it—is to have people monitoring television programs on which there is undue violence, noting which companies are sponsoring those programs, communicating with those advertisers and asking them whether they realize the amount of violence being portrayed in the programs which they are sponsoring. If they do, they are asked whether they are consciously doing it or whether they would agree either to cease supporting the programs through their advertising dollars or at least give the program producers a reflection of the concern which they get from the community. I do not think that these questions can be solved once and for all, and in the abstract. I look on this as an important development at the local level. It is beginning to put public pressure reflecting the genuine community concern on those who are disseminating such an unwarranted level of violence through society over the air waves.

I should like to make my final point. Again reflecting upon my point about the local initiative to respond to some of the problems of violence and referring to the organization, Victims of Violence, it is interesting and perhaps timely that just 24 hours ago in my constituency office in Etobicoke-Lakeshore I was meeting with Gordon Kearns and his wife, Lillian. They are certainly aware of the issues which we are now discussing because their daughter and their two grandchildren were murdered. They, along with others, were the founders of Victims of Violence National Link. Lillian Kearns, a constituent of mine, is Treasurer of this organization. They provided me with two brochures which are being distributed by the organization—one called "It Could Happen to You" and the other, a more descriptive pamphlet of the services which this very important community organization is providing.

I should point out that the organization is referred to in the police brochures of both the Metropolitan Toronto Police Force and the Peel Regional Police Force. There is an effective working relationship between Victims of Violence National and these two police forces. One idea which is central here is that violence does not discriminate. Men, women and children at all levels, in all walks of society, are victims of crime. The concept that it could happen to you is never more true than in this area.

The representatives of Victims of Violence came to see me for the same reason they have been seeing the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell). They have had difficulty with the Department of National Revenue getting registration for charitable purposes, which of course would be a great boon in their efforts to raise funds to continue their very worth-while support services to families who are cruelly bereaved through murder, or victims of other crimes. This is something on which the Hon. Member for Ontario and I are working, to see whatever changes are required in their application or their letters patent, and to see that whatever needs to be done be done swiftly so that the very important support work of the organization can proceed with all possible support.

That is one way in which community groups are doing their best. They will also get a very strong signal from the Government, from this Parliament, when the Bill which has been brought before the House by the Hon. Member for Halifax West is referred to committee and there considered fully so that we can, in turn, have proper legislation going forward for those too often ignored in the criminal justice process, the victims themselves. The ones who are most often forgotten or are left in the shadow of the process involving all machinery of justice, police investigation, criminal trial and incarceration, are the victims themselves. From speaking with the Solicitor General of Canada (Mr. Beatty) I know that he is extremely mindful of the role and importance of seeing that victims are getting a fair share of attention and that their rights are respected. In our criminal justice system, while doing all that is necessary and appropriate for those who have perpetrated crimes, we must be mindful that the rights of victims must be upheld.

I applaud the Hon. Member for Halifax West for bringing the Bill before the House. I join with other Hon. Members who have urged that the subject matter of the Bill go to committee and there, I hope, receive full and prompt attention.

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege, and it gives me great pleasure to speak on this subject today.

In 1981 a young girl lost her life. A young man was allowed out on mandatory supervision. Her father came to me and asked me what he should do. We spent a great deal of time together over the next few months trying to find out if the local police department had been notified that the young man who had committed the crime had been released from prison. Unfortunately, due to a strike in an office somewhere between Kingston and Oshawa, the local police department was not notified of this.

The victim's father, Don Sullivan, was a very distraught man at that time. Don has had the courage, dedication and leadership to help bring this Bill to the House for second reading. Don has done a great deal for humanity and a great deal for Canadians. He had to suffer throughout the terrible period of the trial when he could not receive information and did not know if the young man who had killed his daughter was in or out of jail. He received absolutely no co-operation from enforcement officers.

Don Sullivan created Victims of Violence as a result of a phone call he received one night from a mother who had experienced the same kind of tragedy. The two of them started it all at a kitchen table in Scarborough.

In 1982, Don Sullivan came to me for help. He never asked for a hand-out. He never wanted a grant to help him try to represent the victims. Once he started doing this, many people began coming to him. He had long-distance telephone call expenses. He had lost his job as a taxi driver. He was unemployed for a short period of time and then took on a job with the Harbour Commission police force in Toronto.

In coming to me for help, Don only asked that his organization be permitted to try to raise money through donations that could be tax deductible. He wanted to get a tax number from Ottawa. I ran into roadblocks that I could not have imagined when trying to provide this man with a tax number to permit him to raise funds to pay for his long-distance telephone calls, his postage and the information he was sending to other suffering people across the country.

I would like to tell the House of one other thing that occurred in order to prove the importance of victims rights. The husband of a lady who lives about three miles from me. One night tried to stop a vehicle one night. The occupants were stealing some tires that were chained to a tree in a rural area. The vehicle with the people who were trying to steal the tires drove off, dragged the man down the road and killed him. To this day no one knows who was in that vehicle. The wife of the man who was killed has suffered through hell since that time. She was never kept informed of what the police were trying to do to resolve the crime. She was never told anything. She was kept in the dark.

Finally, I went to see Don and told him that I had a problem. I asked if he could help me. Don called this lady and went to see her. That is the kind of person he is. He did this totally voluntarily. After he had seen her, she called me to tell me that she now felt she had someone with whom she could communicate. She realized that there was a group of people who had suffered the way she had.

Victims of crimes are ill treated and kept in the dark. We give all the protections that exist under the Bill of Rights to the murderers, the robbers and those who do wrong. However, we fail to look after those important members of our society who suffer, the victims. I suppose even I do not know how tough it is to experience a loss such as that suffered by Don Sullivan. However, I lived with his experience for some time.

Don has proved to be quite a force across the country. He has spent his own money. Organizations like Canadian Pacific Airlines have assisted him as he has travelled across the country. However, the only people who have not listened to Don Sullivan are those in the Government of Canada. I say hurrah to the Conservative Government. I am not being partisan, I am simply being supportive of Don Sullivan. The Conservative Government has taken this Bill seriously and is moving it to the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs so that we, on behalf of those people who have suffered, can deal with the issue of bringing into force victims' rights, and do for those people that which is absolutely essential in this day and age.

I must say that the former Solicitor General, the Hon. Member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay), acted exceptionally. He visited Mr. Sullivan, listened to him and told him that he had to do something about this. Then he started doing something. I understand that the Department has been in touch with Don since then. However, the critical action is in the form of this Bill, and I would like to pay my sincere and heartfelt thanks to the Hon. Member for Halifax West for bringing it before the House. I myself have been trying to draft a similar Bill. I am not a lawyer, but along with my assistant we have been working on it in an attempt to make its provisions very thorough. Perhaps she will be able to have some input and offer information that will be required for the deliberations of the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

I also commend the Hon. Member for Burnaby who has been very active and supportive of victims over the years. As well, I would like to make particular mention of the Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour) who was very helpful in supporting me in the creation of the western arm of Victims of Violence. The Hon. Member was able to go with Don Sullivan to help the organization establish a branch in western Canada.

A great many people have been touched by Victims of Violence. A great many people have become more complete human beings through their understanding of the message Victims of Violence is trying to get across. I hope the next time I rise to discuss this Bill in the House, it will have been finalized and will be acceptable to all the victims who have suffered over the last many years.

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to address the House this evening on the subject of Bill C-241, the proposed Crime Victims Assistance Act. I too would like to extend my congratulations to the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) for bringing this very important subject before Parliament.

Victims of crime have a number of concerns relating to their role in the criminal justice system and the assistance they would like to have in order to participate in this system more fully and with greater awareness of their rights. In some cases, crime victims would like to see changes to the law that would enhance their status in criminal proceedings. This, of course, would have to be balanced with a number of factors, including the right of the accused to have a fair trial.

I have already received a letter from a lawyer in my riding of Niagara Falls who pointed out very thoroughly some of the problems an accused may have in getting a fair trial. However, at the same time, he and all of us recognize the need for more adequate protection of victims of crime. Any changes to the law must therefore give careful consideration to the many interests involved in order to ensure that the best solution is found to meet the concern in question.

The Bill before us attempts to ensure that adequate and fair compensation be awarded to crime victims.

Today, in Canada, crime victims have several means of recourse to some sort of compensation. First, there is the Criminal Code which makes limited provision for compensation, and the emphasis should be placed on the word "limited". I know that in most cases the victims of crime are not even aware of their right to appear before a court to make a claim for restitution.

Second, for many centuries the victims of crime have been able to pursue civil remedies, seeking redress through civil proceedings. Again, the utility of that measure is often called into question. Many times the perpetrator of the crime is an individual with no means of support. Other times the victim of the crime does not have the money to obtain legal counsel in order to pursue the matter through the courts.

There is also a third way by which victims of crimes can be compensated. I am referring to the criminal injuries compensation boards. I believe that in nine of the ten provinces, with the exception of Prince Edward Island, there is a criminal injuries compensation board in place. My experience in the Province of Ontario has not been very good in this respect. It is my belief that the awards by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board of Ontario are not even coming close to compensating victims. Much more money, both from the federal Government and the provincial Government, has to go into this area.

Therefore, I believe there are shortcomings with respect to all three of the alternatives I have just mentioned. It is essential that the question of compensation be addressed in a much broader context, one that takes into account the existing measures to see how they can be improved upon.

Bill C-241 proposes to ensure that crime victims have access to compensation through criminal proceedings. It contemplates measures which go far beyond the present provisions, in some instances perhaps raising constitutional concerns. However, the spirit of the Bill is highly commendable. It attempts to provide for a one-stop shopping, more economical type of solution, providing for an enhanced role for victims in criminal proceedings, giving victims special standing in court proceedings and access to information which is not even available to the accused. These proposed changes, however, may not be the most desirable solution to address the issue of compensation to victims and the status of victims.

The question of how to provide assistance to crime victims has been under consideration in Canada at both levels of Government. Both levels of Government have been actively following up on the 1983 task force report on justice for victims of crime. That report recommends a number of improvements, including legislative amendments which would better meet the concerns of victims. Compensation is one of the issues which received attention in the report. However, I do not think any solution in this area should be considered without reviewing, not just the task force report but all the different issues raised. That is why I believe there is a disposition in the House to have this matter referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs for full consideration. Accordingly, I move:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-241, an Act to provide assistance for victims of crime, be not now read a second time but that the Order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject-matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Accordingly, the order is discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject-matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Order discharged and Bill withdrawn.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

CHILDREN—CONVENING OF CONFERENCE ON MISSING CHILDREN

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, it is my purpose in rising this evening to deal with the question I raised with the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) on December 18, 1985, concerning missing children. I cannot help but think, as we have seen the disposition of the House with respect to the crime victims legislation which will now be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, that the House might have taken the same action with respect to a Bill I presented to the House on October 1, 1985, entitled the Missing Children's Search Act. Just as we considered crime victims in Private Members' Hour today, we might also turn our thoughts to the subject of missing children because, in many cases, those missing children are the victims of crime and criminal acts.

My specific reason for asking the Solicitor General that question on December 18, 1985, was that at of a press conference he held the day before in which he announced specific measures with respect to missing children. Among the measures announced by the Solicitor General was one to establish a central registry on missing children to be operated by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. It would obtain and maintain facts and other information concerning missing children across Canada. In addition, the Solicitor General announced an intention to form a Canadian information centre on missing children. Beyond that, the Solicitor General promised a national missing children's day, presumably to focus attention on the subject of missing children across Canada. He said that there would be a national conference on missing children.

When asked in the House with respect to the matter he indicated that the conference would be held as soon as possible. I hope the Parliamentary Secretary to the Solicitor General (Mr. Towers) will give us some information on when that conference might be held.

In addition, the Solicitor General announced a missing children's research project for the City of Montreal, the purpose of which would be to examine the facts and circumstances related to missing children in that city with a view to making recommendations on what further action might be taken.

My first duty is to compliment and congratulate the Solicitor General on taking these steps, because the subject of missing children—and it is a broad subject—has been almost totally neglected at the national level for the past decades as the problem has developed on the streets of urban centres and the roads of rural centres across Canada. I do not apologize at all for raising this subject as many times as I am given the opportunity to raise it in the House of Commons because the subject of missing children is only the tip of a much deeper iceberg, that is, the social wrongs which prevail against children in our society.

The Solicitor General, as I said, has proposed a project for the City of Montreal. I would like to refer specifically to activities in that city. I have before me a newspaper clipping from December of 1985 which quotes Thom Garfat, who is the Director of Treatment at the Youth Horizons Reception Centre in Montreal. He points out very graphically what is at the heart of my concern.

First, the article indicates that over 120,000, and as many as 150,000, children ran away from homes in Canada in the year 1984. That makes it a major problem in terms of numbers. One has to ask oneself: What happens to these runaways who do not return home or are not returned home? Unfortunately, Mr. Garfat provides the answer:

> After a short time, some turn to prostitution to support themselves. Or they end up involved in breaking and entering, stealing credit cards and cash. They may even like it.

That is the problem I want to address. I hope the Solicitor General (Mr. Crosbie) will give grave consideration to this problem in the days, weeks and months which lie ahead, because missing children either are or become the victims of criminal activity and that is what makes it a problem for law enforcement agencies across Canada.

The Government of Canada and the Governments of each and every province and territory would be derelict in their duties to the youth of Canada if they did not address in very specific terms what has become the problem called "missing children". I should say that not only runaways create the problem. An even greater problem lies in the fact that children are being taken from their home environment by strangers or, indeed, by members of the families in situations where there are custodial or other family disputes. The point is that across North America we have a large number of young people who have become known as "missing". But the real situation, as pointed out by Mr. Garfat, is that the missing children have become victims of crime or get themselves into a criminal situation. If clear steps are not taken to rectify this situation, death and other forms of violence will result.

In my city of Halifax we have had a graphic demonstration of the dangers to young people on the streets of cities. There have been three teenage murders in a very short period of time. In at least two of the cases, the young girls had been engaged in prostitution. I suppose there are some people who would say that that situation should deprive those victims of sympathy, but that is not so. Quite to the contrary, it is people in that situation who should attract our attention and our sympathy because a young teenage girl involved in prostitution is a victim of our social structure and is not, in most cases, a voluntary actor in that kind of involvement.

I want to present to this House as many times as I have the opportunity the subject of missing children. As it states in the headline I have before me, missing children have become a U.S. national preoccupation. There are television programs put before a national audience about this subject. I believe Canadians are responding to the challenge to do something about missing children. I hope the Solicitor General and the Government of Canada can play a real and important role in that challenge to resolve the problem of missing children.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, in a question to the Minister, the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) underlined the importance of measures we are taking on missing children in Canada. He noted especially the urgent need for a national conference on missing children. I congratulate him on his initiative in bringing attention to this important matter.

While the main responsibility for the prevention, investigation and detection of missing children is on a local and provincial level, I feel there are a number of important steps which can be taken by the federal Government to respond to the problem. The most immediate and direct action which can be taken is to have the RCMP create a central registry of missing children in Ottawa in order to assist police forces and concerned agencies across Canada in locating and identifying missing children. An important by-product of such a registry is the generation of national statistics on missing children in Canada, data which we do not now have. We are also setting up four major research projects to examine the phenomenon of missing children in great detail. We must know much more about the dimensions of the problem and how different police departments attack the issue.

The first such project in Montreal should be up and going in about three months, thanks to the co-operation of the Quebec and Montreal urban community Governments. We are now negotiating with other jurisdictions with a view to developing three more research projects to delve into this complex problem. There will have to be continuing consultation between all levels of Government and provincial and municipal police forces, the private sector and, of course, the voluntary sector which has been doing so much good work in this area.

I see our role as one of getting the ball rolling and bringing the concerned parties together to collaborate and provide expertise from their own spheres of responsibility. To this end the Minister will convene in Ottawa in late April a national conference on missing children. This conference is urgently needed, as my hon. friend from Halifax West has noted. At this conference the Solicitor General will bring participants up-to-date on the development of the central registry and research projects. The conference will provide an important forum for the exchange of ideas and information. There will be a discussion on further measures that can be taken to respond to the problem of missing children.

Two important agenda items will be proposals made by the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) to establish the designation of May 25 as National Missing Children's Day to focus public attention on the measures that can be taken to minimize the risk of children becoming victims. The second item is for a Canadian Information Centre on missing children. The role and ambit of this Centre needs to be the subject of consultations with other levels of Government and the voluntary sector. However, I see it having the potential for an important role as a clearing house for the exchange of information on effective prevention programs and facilitating the co-ordination of efforts across Canada. It is our hope that private sector groups already involved with missing children will play an important role in the Centre.

I must close, but in doing so let me say that I believe all Hon. Members and the people they represent are concerned for the thousands of children who go missing every year in Canada. They want to see elected representatives at all levels working with police and others to find solutions to this problem which causes so much needless anguish and suffering. I thank the Hon. Member for allowing us the opportunity of discussing this important matter at this time.

YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT—INTRODUCTION OF AMENDMENTS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, on January 16 I applauded the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) for his swift action in announcing a major overhaul of the Young Offenders Act. That Act came into being in 1982, and Phase II came into effect as of April 1, 1985. It involved raising the minimum age at which a youth could be tried in an adult court from 16 to 18, as well as raising the age at which a youth could be prosecuted from seven to 12. I have spoken on this important and vital issue on at least five occasions over the past year. I have from the start been totally supportive of the basic principles and philosophy of the Young Offenders Act. I would like to now just highlight the four principles which underlie this important piece of legislation.

First, young people are personally responsible for their acts and should be held accountable before the law. Second, young people, like all Canadian citizens, enjoy rights which are protected by the Bill of Rights and Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Third, society has a right to be protected from criminal behaviour. Fourth and last, juvenile justice laws and procedures must recognize and deal with the fact that young people have special needs because they are at various stages of development and maturity. If there is any group in society that deserves that second or third chance, it is our youth.

The Solicitor General has promised a reform package of legislation within the next two months. I would just like to highlight what I believe will be forthcoming. These are major improvements.

First, the procedures and language of the Act sometimes makes it difficult for the authorities to deal quickly and effectively with young offenders who have, for example, violated probation conditions or failed to keep the peace. Such limits are clearly unacceptable. Second, the rules which govern detention after arrest are inflexible and can cause hardship for both police and the young people affected.

• (1840)

For instance, just today, Mr. Speaker, I was talking with Inspector Jim Clarke, head of the Youth Bureau for Metropolitan Toronto. He was highlighting again the problem of detention. Under current provisions, if two youths are apprehended and one is under 12 and the other over 12, they cannot be placed in the same cruiser to be taken home. We had an example of that where the youths were brothers, and yet could not be sent home in the same cruiser. Of course this causes, particularly small municipalities, a real problem in terms of cost.

Third, there appears to be circumstances in which the inability of police to make names or other identifying information publicly known has been an impediment to effective law enforcement or has created an unreasonable risk to the public. This concerns the problem of missing children which, by coincidence, was debated just a few minutes ago. While it is essentially a provincial matter, I believe the federal Government can show leadership to try to get more consistency in these age ranges that exist throughout the country. For instance, in Quebec I believe the limit is up to 17 and in Ontario it is 16. I think we could play a leadership role in that particular area.

Fourth, there were no comprehensive records systems under the old law, but the Young Offenders Act has introduced such systems clearly authorizing the use of fingerprints, youth court records in an adult court, and so on. Unfortunately, the records provisions have created a wide range of technical and administrative problems. Indeed, I am told that there was not even a clear definition of what constituted a record.

Fifth, Mr. Speaker, modifications should be made to the Criminal Code provisions dealing with counselling criminal behaviour. No one who abuses children by involving them in criminal acts should be immune from criminal prosecution.

Sixth, the current provision requiring that the evidence of a child witness be corroborated by other evidence is clearly unacceptable. The court should assess the testimony on its own merits. Similarly, an oral statement made by an accused who refuses to sign a written waiver should be admissible on its merit.

Seventh, the language of the Act is now unclear about the maximum length of sentence that may be applied for subsequent convictions. The courts should be capable of imposing appropriate sentences for new crimes, with the result that the total sentence for different offences could be longer than three years. The current maximum sentence under the Young Offenders Act is three years unless the case is referred to an adult court. Last April 12 a most regrettable crime was committed by a 14-year old in Scarborough, Ontario. Three people were murdered, yet the sentence given was only three years as provided by the Young Offenders Act. Fortunately, a family court judge has been asked to reopen the trial to determine if the case should be referred to an adult court.

In summary, Mr. Speaker, it appears that most of the major flaws in the Young Offenders Act will be corrected within a few months. The Solicitor General is to be commended for moving so sensitively and quickly to provide remedial action. He has listened to various concerned groups in society and acted wisely and compassionately. I commend and applaud him for that.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Hon. Member for his interest in this very important matter of concern to all of us. I firmly support the basic principles and philosophy of the Young Offenders Act. My belief in these principles has been confirmed in the discussions of the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) across Canada with concerned citizens, police, correctional workers, the legal profession, provincial authorities, and others. Not only did we need to reform the old juvenile justice system, but we needed a law to ensure that young people have the same rights and obligations as do adults.

The basic philosophy of the Young Offenders Act is as follows. One, young people are personally responsible for their acts and should be held accountable before the law. Two, young people, like all Canadian citizens, enjoy the rights that are protected by the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Three, society has a right to be protected from crime. Four, juvenile justice laws and procedures must recognize and deal with the fact that young people have special needs because they are at various stages of development and maturity.

Certain provisions of the present law pose problems and it is up to the Solicitor General to deal with these problems, with all our support. Concerns about the handling of youth court records, the ban on publication of offenders' names and the difficulty of enforcing sentences are some of the major concerns which moved the Minister to initiate consultations across the country. He wanted to hear from those who work with the Act every day—judges, police, concerned citizens, youth court workers, Crown and defence counsel—to identify the nature of these concerns and get a good idea of what improvements were required.

The Government recognizes that the provinces and territories must be consulted on such important national matters. Parliament legislates criminal law but it is the provinces which must administer it. That means they have to do their part. In two areas in particular—providing the court with alternatives to sentencing a young offender to prison and providing adequate legislation to deal with children under the age of 12—the provinces have an especially heavy responsibility.

The deputy minister has been meeting with his provincial and territorial counterparts this week and the Solicitor General will be meeting with provincial and territorial colleagues early next month for a final discussion of proposed improvements. As soon as possible thereafter he will present to Parliament a package of amendments that will make the Young Offenders Act much more responsive to the concerns of those who have to work with it. He will be asking for the opposition parties' co-operation in passing the Bill as soon as possible.

Action is required to enable authorities to deal effectively and quickly with young offenders who have, for example, violated probation conditions and other conditions of their sentences. It is required to give police more flexibility in detaining young offenders after their arrest. The present rules at times cause hardship for the police and young offenders. It is required to allow publication of names in those circumstances where a young offender who might be a danger to the public has escaped custody or where public assistance is needed to apprehend the offender quickly. Action is required to improve the Act's record-keeping provisions, which have caused a wide range of technical and administrative problems. These problems will be addressed and evident omissions resolved. The law will be clarified to ensure that records in cases of acquittal by reason of insanity are kept.

Action is required to ensure that modifications to the Criminal Code provision dealing with counsellig criminal behaviour are made to ensure that no one who abuses children by involving them in criminal acts will be immune to criminal prosecution. The Solicitor General will be discussing this point with our colleague, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie).

Action is required to ensure that courts are capable of imposing appropriate sentences for new crimes with the result that the total sentence for different offences could be longer than three years.

I thank the Hon. Member for providing the opportunity of discussing this major issue at this time.

VISIBLE MINORITIES—GOVERNMENT'S NEGOTIATIONS WITH REPRESENTATIVES OF JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERNED DURING WORLD WAR II. (B) REQUEST FOR FURTHER NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to review a question that I posed to the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Jelinek) on January 16. The date is significant because that is the date we learned of the U.S. Congress plans to move very boldly on three separate fronts with respect to the Japanese American citizens. One front was the personal compensation; the second was a foundation and the third was a general apology. I believe we should use the opportunity to compare what Canada is doing with respect to the Japanese Canadian redress issue.

I am sure my friend opposite will suggest that, looking to the past 43 years, the Government is making an attempt to correct a past injustice. However, the debate should take the perspective of what the Government and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised when he was Leader of the Opposition. We should consider in perspective what the Prime Minister promised on the hustings during the last federal election when he said that the package needs to be negotiated and the wrongs need to be righted.

We should also consider this debate from the perspective of the Minister's predecessor who said in a press release dated December, 1985 that the Government would move on two fronts. First, it would negotiate a redress package and second, it would negotiate it with and through the National Association of Japanese Canadians which happens to be the legitimate body, elected across the country, to represent the views of the Japanese Canadian community. The Minister in his response said: "We are consulting, and I am consulting with the Japanese Canadian Association". I said during Question Period then, and I repeat it here tonight that that is a false and an untrue statement. I have met with membership organizations in Vancouver, in Winnipeg, in Toronto and in Ottawa. They all suggest the great and growing frustration which the community is having dealing with the Government, particularly with this new Minister. He is not consulting with this organization, Mr. Speaker. He is circumventing the organization. The national president of the association only had one opportunity to meet with this Minister and that was in the lobby of the Winnipeg airport for 20 minutes. Is that consulting, Mr. Speaker? Is that what you would call negotiating a redress package? Of course it is not.

The previous Minister stopped the negotiations after two meetings and tried unilaterally to propose a solution to Parliament. That failed miserably. There is movement afoot, words and rumour around Ottawa, that a second unilateral package may be forthcoming.

My question tried to get a commitment from the Government that this Minister would honour the statements, pronouncements and speeches made by his Prime Minister, that he would honour the commitment his predecessor, the former Minister of State for Multiculturalism, made in his accord last December stating the two proposals I outlined earlier.

That is what the Opposition is talking about. We are talking about the Government's promise and the Government's commitment to the Japanese Canadian community. Now we have a Minister who refuses even to meet with the national associations, let alone negotiate. We have also a Minister who is much more political and partisan in dealing with this issue than his predecessor. Not only is he playing up the differences that might exist in the community on a national issue—there are divisions on every national issue we debate, discuss and move in this House of Commons, but there is never unanimity—but after consulting you need to work with the national vehicles and this Minister is not doing so.

Another factor is that this Minister's advisory council on multiculturalism has taken a public stand against a negotiated compensation package. The advisory council is there to advise the Minister. Everyone knows that. In such a delicate and sensitive issue, in an issue the Government has yet to resolve, this Minister allows this council to publicly make the statement it did. The Japanese community, the Opposition Party and Canadians at large know perhaps why that public pronouncement was made. it seems this Minister is preparing the skid. It seems this Minister is asking this council to oil the skid. That is inappropriate. It is inappropriate because it does not give credibility to the commitment, the clear commitment the Government and the Prime Minister made with this Particular constituency.

In closing, I urge the Government to come clean on the matter. If the Minister rises repeatedly, as he does, and says "we are consulting with Canadians and, after we have consulted, we will arrange a package", that is fine. He is a Minister in charge of a national constituency; let him consult. What I want to hear from the Government is that following the completion of his consultations with whomever he wants, whichever Canadian he chooses, he will return to the negotiating table, present his findings and, in a give and take atmosphere, negotiate a settlement that is not only appropriate and politically acceptable to the Minister or to the Government but also satisfactory to the concerns of the community which a redress package would attempt to address. It is only logical. Let us have the Minister live up to his Government's commitment. Have the consultations, but for goodness sake be honourable, be fair and be just. Return to the National Association and together strike an agreement of which the entire House and the country can be proud.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) for raising this most important issue if only to set the record straight.

At the present time, the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Jelinek) is consulting broadly with Canadians on how we can show regret in a meaningful way for the past wrongs to Japanese Canadians. This matter is of concern to all Canadians as it relates to the subjects of equality and human rights.

Shortly after being appointed Minister of State for Multiculturalism, the Hon. Member for Halton, called Mr. Art Miki, President of the National Association of Japanese Canadians, representing a major component of their community, to establish contact and organize follow-up meetings. The Minister met with him and other representatives of the NAJC in Winnipeg on September 16, 1985, and again in Toronto on October 31, 1985.

These discussions focused on the following items: first, appropriate wording for a parliamentary resolution acknowledging mistreatment of Japanese Canadians; second, possible changes to the War Measures Act; third, a possible pardon for infractions of war-time regulations; fourth, possibility of restoring Canadian citizenship to those who were deported; and, fifth, a meaningful financial settlement.

The Minister has also met with other members of the Japanese Canadian community in several centres and has come to understand that there exists a wide range of views on the most appropriate solution to this issue. It is well known that the National Association of Japanese Canadians is having a study completed by Price Waterhouse and that they wish to have the results of the study before the Government acts.

I would share the views of the Hon. Member for York West, and I say that it is the hope of the Government that with the good will of all Canadians we will be able to arrive at a just and meaningful settlement to this issue.

REFUGEES

DEPORTATION OF SIKH CLAIMANTS OF REFUGEE STATUS

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, the Government's decision to resume deporting Sikh refugee claimants to India is causing considerable concern in the Sikh community in Canada. In announcing this decision the Government cited a number of hopeful signs, such as the democratic election of a moderate Government in the Punjab last September. Naturally, we welcome such signs, and we hope that there will be communication and dialogue to bring order, stability, and peaceful solutions to the social upheaval in that part of the world.

At the same time we want to be very sure that the Government's decision is based on the most reliable and up-to-date information available. The ban on deportation was temporary; but a decision to return to normal procedure should be taken only on the basis of carefully gathered and evaluated information which indicates that actual conditions no longer warrant the existence of a moratorium.

INCOME TAX ACT

WORDING OF SECTION DEALING WITH BONDS AND MORTGAGES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, today's reading of the Income Tax Act will be from Chapter 16(3) and (4) which read as follows:

(3) Where, in the case of a bond, debenture, bill, note, mortgage, hypothec or similar obligation issued after June 18, 1971 by a person exempt from tax under section 149, a non-resident person not carrying on business in Canada, or a government, municipality or municipal or other public body performing a function of government,

(a) the obligation was issued for an amount that is less than the principal amount thereof, and

(b) the yield from the obligation, expressed in terms of an annual rate on the amount for which the obligation was issued (which annual rate shall, if the terms of the obligation or any agreement relating thereto conferred upon the holder thereof a right to demand payment of the principal amount of the obligation or the amount outstanding as or on account of the principal amount thereof, as the case may be, before the maturity of the obligation, be calculated on the basis of the yield that produces the highest annual rate obtainable either on the maturity of the obligation or conditional upon the exercise of any such right) exceeds 4/3 of the interest stipulated to be payable on the obligation, expressed in terms of an annual rate on

(i) the principal amount thereof, if no amount is payable on account of the principal amount before the maturity of the obligation, or

(ii) the amount outstanding from time to time as or on account of the principal amount thereof, in any other case, the amount by which the principal amount of the obligation exceeds the amount for which the obligation was issued shall be included in computing the income of the first owner of the obligation—

SPORTS

TRIBUTE TO PIERRE MONDOU

Mr. Louis Plamondon (Richelieu): As a poet once wrote, Mr. Speaker, "Aux âmes bien nées la valeur n'attend pas le nombre des années".

A good many residents of my riding have decided to hold a gathering this evening in the fair city of Sorel to tell the young people of Canada what Pierre Mondou has done to show them the way to success. More than ever before Canadian youths need examples of determination, courage, and community spirit. Few of our sports heroes have lived up to such expectations, most of them choosing to bask in their own glory rather than to remain simple and pleasant company. Exceptions are few, but some of them did understand the leading role they were expected to play in our society.

This young man has just put an end to a long and promising career in our national sport, but he has never turned down requests for assistance from sports and social organizations in the beautiful Province of Quebec. He has never failed to promote the aspirations of young people and make them benefit from his advice and experience.

Today I echo the sentiments of the Pierre Mondou celebration organization committee and say to him: Sports-minded people throughout Quebec and the rest of Canada will miss you, but they will always have fond memories of you, your outstanding talent, and your engaging personality.

SMALL BUSINESS

CARREFOUR PME

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, again I am pleased to speak on behalf of the small- and medium-sized businesses of Quebec City. Since November 1985 they can avail themselves of the services of "Carrefour PME", an operation which we think is unique.

The purpose of this operation is to encourage small- and medium-sized businesses to use the services and programs of both levels of Government in all matters related to staff recruiting as well as the preservation and promotion of employment. Mr. Speaker, those Quebec City businesses should be thankful to the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, the Quebec Minister of Manpower and Income Security, the Chamber of Commerce and Trade of Greater Quebec City for taking this initiative.

Congratulations on this common agreement! Mr. Speaker, accomplishments inevitably stem from dialogue. Close to 2,000 companies will benefit from grants to small- and medium-sized businesses. This operation reflects the Canadian Government policy under which small businesses are allowed a free rein to expand. Let us leave our small-and medium-sized businesses operate in the sectors to which they are suited so that we will be able to create more jobs and give a boost to our economy.

Mr. Speaker, we believe in private enterprise and in its freedom of action.

REFUGEES

ADVICE GIVEN BY ALLEGED UNSCRUPULOUS LAWYERS AND CONSULTANTS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) has recently ordered an investigation in suspected cases of phoney refugees. It is a move that speaks to the need of locating illegitimate cases so as to better facilitate an expeditious and proper processing of the numerous legitimate files. However, the Minister has failed to exercise balance. Yesterday, for instance, Toronto's Portuguese community drew attention to the reality that many of its citizens are lured to Canada and subsequently misinformed and misled by unscrupulous immigration lawyers and consultants. Not only is it an issue of misleading advice but the fees which are being imposed on would-be citizens are grossly exhorbitant.

This latest charge is not a new phenomenon. The practice has been allowed to continue for some time. In fact I have met constituents who illustrated clearly how they have been hoodwinked and cheated of their moneys by so called consultants. Therefore, if the Minister wishes to rid the system of phoney refugees as she should, she should also be prepared to track down the phoney immigration consultants and lawyers who live off the immoral proceeds derived from innocent and trusting individuals.

I call upon the Minister to investigate this crooked practice immediately and introduce regulations which will put an end to this illegal and insensitive gouging practice.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE

Mr. Richard Grisé (Chambly): Mr. Speaker, it is a well known fact that good news generally does not retain the attention of national media, although it has not been lacking since the Conservative team came to power. For instance, after having advised us of the hundreds of thousands of new jobs created by our Government since September 1984, Statistics Canada published this week its most recent data on inflation. For the year that has just ended, the rate of inflation was 4 per cent. Mr. Speaker, we would have to go as far back as 1971 to find such a good performance. The data published by Statistics Canada are a far cry from the skyrocketting rates to which Canadian consumers had been used under the former Liberal administration. The stability of inflation rates over the past few months has created a climate of confidence favourable to economic recovery.

Mr. Speaker, the economic policies of the Conservative Government make it possible for the Canadian people to forget now about the dark years of the Liberal administration. Although they are not widely publicized, those data certainly please Canadian consumers.

FISHERIES

GRANTING OF CLAM FISHING LICENCES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call on the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to take a hard look at the way his Government is allowing itself to be used by Tories who would put their own financial gain before the welfare of the country. The Cape Breton clam scam is the latest example of the Government's lack of integrity. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Siddon) overruled his officials to grant two valuable licences to Mother Snow's Fine Foods Ltd. The Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay) lobbied the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans on behalf of the principals of that company. At the same time the Department of National Revenue was trying to execute thousands of dollars in outstanding judgments against those principals.

It is my opinion that the Minister has commited a serious breach of his responsibility and the Prime Minister should immediately demand his resignation. There are serious questions about the financial viability of the company and its principals. They appear to be relying on other companies to supply vessels and on the Government of Canada to supply grants to fund the entire endeavour. Three principals of Mother Snow's are being sued by Kristan Seafoods International for double-crossing it and appropriating company secrets without permission. Statements of claim against those principals and the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans have been issued.

It is my understanding that this company has applied for a DRIE grant of close to $1 million to build interim processing plant facilities. The facts of this case seem to be that a group of individuals whose only assets, intangible as they are, were Rick Logan, the member—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member his time has expired.

ENERGY

SELECTION OF MINISTER AS "OILMAN OF THE YEAR"

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, in the years between 1979 and 1985 the editors of Oilweek magazine were unable to reach consensus on the selection of the "Oilman of the Year" award. This traditional feature was then suspended. Undoubtedly, one of the obvious reasons for the lack of an award was the lamemtable state of the oil industry brought on by the previous Liberal Government's National Energy Program. This year Oilweek magazine did choose an "Oilman of the Year". With the rebirth of the Canadian petroleum industry, the choice was unanimous—The Hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney).

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gormley: The Minister was recognized as the "Architect of Restoration". To illustrate this, one need only look at the Western Accord which will phase out the Petroleum Gas Revenue Tax and the Petroleum Incentive Program. These measures are commitments made and honoured by our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and Government. The latest figures indicate that oil well completions are up 21 per cent over last year. Even more important, this year's figures are almost twice as high as the 1983 level.

Considering what this outstanding oil person, the Prime Minister, and Government have done for energy policy in Canada, the selection of "Oilman of the Year" should not be a problem in coming years.

Oral Questions

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

LEVELS OF REMUNERATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, in this world there are winners and losers. For example, this week Canadians learned of two people who won huge prizes. One of them was my constituent, Mr. Jean Viau of Green Valley, Ontario, who won $10 million. The interest alone on that amount is over $2,000 per day. On the other hand, Simon Reisman also won the jackpot. He gets $1,000 per day and he did not even buy a ticket. I wonder if he will buy himself a red Corvette as well.

However, life is so unfair. Take Bill Davis, affectionately known as "Acid Rain Bill". He works part-time as well, but only gets $1 per year. It is universally recognized, of course, that he is worth at least twice that much. Meanwhile, the sad reality is that two of my constituents, Mr. Dalrymple and Mr. Cameron, employees of the Department of Public Works in the post offices in Rockland and Hawkesbury, are being fired by the Tory Government because apparently they make too much money at $8 or $9 an hour. That is the reality of the Tory Government giving more to the rich and taking away from my poor constituents.

HEALTH

PLIGHT OF NONSMOKERS IN THE WORKPLACE

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, at the risk of incurring the wrath of Canada's five million smokers, let me call attention to the plight of nonsmokers in the workplace. A recent grievance decision involving employees of the Department of Health and Welfare classified smoking as dangerous to the workers exposed to the smoke. The evidence is overwhelming that cigarette smoking is dangerous to health. It is required that each package carry a health warning.

There is cogent evidence that exposure to passive smoke is equally dangerous to health. Why should nonsmokers face an unnecessary risk to their health pursuing their employment? The State of Maine has enacted laws requiring employers to have a smoke-free area in each workplace. The Government of Canada would be wise to consider a similar law.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—MANDATE OF NEGOTIATOR

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Deputy Prime Minister. In an on-going series of personal musings Simon Reisman, our trade negotiator, today expressed the view that he has yet to receive any mandate from the Government concerning the trade initiative, even though it was announced over six months ago.

Does the Deputy Prime Minister not find it very strange and unusual to be paying someone $1,000 a day to be our chief trade negotiator without giving him any instructions or mandate on what his job should be? Can he tell us when Mr. Reisman will receive his mandate so that he can get on with the job?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think Mr. Reisman has made what his mandate is very clear. His mandate came out of the First Ministers' Conference. It is to work with the provinces to develop a common data base and a common set of understandings of what the impact of the negotiations would be on various industries and various regions of the country. That is what he is working on right now, leading up to the possible start of serious discussions with the Americans this spring.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO NEGOTIATOR

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer, but apparently Mr. Reisman does not know that because he is quoted today as saying that he is still awaiting his government mandate. When will Mr. Reisman be given his mandate? When will he be permitted or told to come before committee so that we can find out what his mandate is and so that the public will know exactly what the Government intends to do on the trade negotiations?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I just told the Hon. Member what Mr. Reisman's mandate is.

Mr. Deans: Tell Mr. Reisman.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I just told the House what the mandate was, in response to the previous question. I do not think there is anything further to add.

Mr. Deans: Is he supposed to watch Question Period to find out?

GRAND CANAL PROJECT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in the same interview Mr. Reisman said that he was never associated with the Grand Canal Company which is dealing with water export proposals. Yet in a speech three months ago to the Ontario Economic Council he said that he was closely associated with the company and, in fact, was its chief economic adviser.

Is it not time for Mr. Reisman to submit a conflict of interest report so that he can be held accountable for his associations? Will Mr. Reisman be asked to come before committee so that we can determine what his associations and accountabilities are?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that the hon. gentleman would raise Mr. Reisman's character in that light, particularly in view of the fact that when the Member's Party was in government the then Leader of that Government arranged to pay $1,600 a day to a very deserving civil servant to settle the COPE native claims. The kind of statement made from the backbench opposite during Statements, and the kind of aspersions that the hon. gentleman is casting upon Mr. Reisman's character, are totally unwarranted and unjustified.

ENERGY

PRICE OF OIL

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, you will have noted that the mystery of high oil prices remains. Today the newspapers tell us that industry does not know why the prices are high. At the same time Imperial Oil reports an increase of $150 million in profits in 1985. Prince Yamani tells us that oil may go below $15 a barrel. Petro-Canada will not comment. Will the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources please tell us what steps she is taking to solve this mystery on behalf of Canadian taxpayers?

• (1120)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that such a distinguished Member has trouble understanding what is happening with oil prices. However, I can tell him that revenues earned by the oil companies are being reinvested in new jobs in Canada.

Since the introduction of our new energy regime, the reinvestment ratio of the industry has risen to 70 per cent, which has created 60,000 person years of employment in the last year alone. That is what has been happening in the oil and gas industry and there is no mystery about that.

PRICE OF GASOLINE

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, the mystery remains. It is quite clear that the Minister does not know at all why prices remain at their current level. Yesterday, however, the Minister of Consumer Affairs stated that he felt—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is becoming a preamble to a supplementary. Just a question, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, my question to the Minister is therefore as follows: To what level will prices have to fall—they have now reached $18 a barrel—before Canadian consumers can benefit from lower prices?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I should point out that gasoline prices in his home City of Montreal have already dropped marginally since we went to deregulation in June. As the decrease in oil prices moves through the system, he can anticipate further benefits to the consumer.

OIL COMPANY PROFITS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Today Imperial Oil's profits were reported at $684 million for 1985, which is up 28 per cent or $151 million over 1984. Its profit in the final quarter was $250 million, which is up by approximately 50 per cent over the final quarter last year. Obviously the Minister is going to bat for the big oil companies. When will she go to bat for the ordinary Canadian motorist who is continually being ripped off at the pumps?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I understand that the reason the Hon. Member must raise this question in the House is that the turn-out at his press conference was so dismal. Let me point out to the Hon. Member again that it is the moneys being earned by the oil and gas industry which are being reinvested in new jobs right across Canada. I pointed out that 60,000 new jobs were created in the last year alone. Industry investment rose 20 per cent to $10 billion in 1985. Canadians all across the country have benefited from those new jobs.

The Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake pointed out that drilling has reached an all-time record. Those benefits are being spread across the country.

Mr. Waddell: The Minister sounds like a broken record from the Canadian Petroleum Association.

PRICING PRACTICES OF OIL COMPANIES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, why does the Minister not deal with the facts? Is she aware that the Government's own Director of Combines has said that the big oil companies stamp out competition by shutting down independents, and refusing to sell gas to them and using unfair and anti-competitive contracts? In short, prices always go up. What will the Minister do to break up these anti-competitive practices so that Canadian motorists can take advantage of the dramatic decline in world oil prices?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member has any evidence of collusion or activities of that nature, why does he not present it to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs?

Mr. Waddell: I do not know where the Minister has been for the last 15 years. The Department is constantly saying that.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER ISSUE INSTRUCTIONS TO PETRO-CANADA

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, getting back to the consumers and motorists, the Minister has an opportunity to show some leadership in this case. Is she prepared to move, under Section 7(2) of the Petro-Canada Act, by making Petro-Canada a price setter? Is she prepared to break up some of these anti-competitive practices so that the Canadian consumer will not get ripped off at the gasoline pumps?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, no, I am not prepared to do that and I will tell you why.

Mr. Waddell: You just want to be with the oil companies.

Miss Carney: If he wants to listen to me, this afternoon I will be meeting with the Minister responsible for the offshore, Mr. Bill Marshall, of Newfoundland. We will be working toward the development of Hibernia in which a major partner is Petro-Canada. That is where Petro-Canada's revenues will go, right into jobs in the offshore, in the oil patch in the West, in British Columbia and in the High Arctic.

PRICE OF GASOLINE—CANADIAN AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION TELEGRAM

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, the problem is that Newfoundlanders now need 64 cents a litre to pay for their gasoline. They need those jobs now and they need a lower price.

My question is for the Minister of Finance. I want to read him a telegram from the Canadian Automobile Association. Two million members say "I've had enough":

> I agree with the Canadian Automobile Association that gasoline taxes are too high—I want to know what you plan to do to relieve motorists of this inequitable tax burden.

What is the Minister's answer to those two million Canadians?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Energy has commented on the way lower international oil prices flow through the system, through the refining and marketing parts of the system, until they reach the consumer. It takes about two months. During that period of time, as the Hon. Minister has just said, consumers can expect to see the lower prices reflected at the pump.

In 1980, in St. John's, the price of gasoline was 32.4 cents a litre. In 1984, after four and a half years of Liberal Government, the price was 54.8 cents a litre.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): That was an increase of about 60 per cent in the price of gasoline. Surely the Hon. Member should be asking himself when he looks in the mirror in the morning: "Why didn't I speak out?" Why didn't the Hon. Member speak out against the Minister of Energy of his own Government?

REQUEST FOR TAX REDUCTION

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, it was that Member who asked for a reduction in taxes. Why did he increase taxes 58 per cent last year?

If high gasoline prices were a crime, he would be charged as an accomplice.

Will the Minister move to reduce taxes and give us a fair and equitable gasoline price?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member likes to use these big percentage figures. It was 2 cents a litre—2.1 cents to be quite precise, that we increased gasoline taxes.

Mr. Rompkey: There is another tax.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Yes, there is another tax that is coming on in due course.

I ask the Hon. Member to think why that is so. The reason is that we were left with a $35 billion deficit which was rising—

An Hon. Member: You have other options.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Hon. Member would just listen to the answer to his question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If we can get this deficit down—

Some Hon. Members: Come on!

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members, please.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If we can get this deficit down, all consumers will benefit because we will have lower interest rates. That is the direction in which the Government is going. If the previous Government had not left us with that huge deficit, we would not have to be doing these things to get the deficit down.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Minister of Energy. She will know when in opposition on a number of occasions she and her colleagues, through motions and speeches in the House and policy statements, made a pledge to the people of Canada to reduce taxes on gasoline to promote tourism. Now that the Member is in government, why has she changed her mind? In opposition she said taxes on gasoline must be reduced to assist tourism. Now in government she increases taxes. Why did she change her policy? Why did the Government change its policy?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, this Government has done more for consumers in deregulating the oil and gas industry so consumers can experience price decreases. Under the National Energy Program, remember, prices went up 80 per cent.

The Minister of Finance has already answered the question about the requirement to keep taxes on, namely, it was to deal with the horrendous deficit for which we all have to pay.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I suspect that the Government knew what the deficit was before it took power.

Considering Expo 86 is about to open, and knowing that American tourists once they fill up in Canada are not going to travel throughout Canada, will the Minister explain once again why the position on gas taxes is different when the Tories are in government than what they had pledged to the people of Canada when in opposition?

• (1130)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I think that question has been answered adequately by the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Deans: You are the only one who does.

Miss Carney: When he is so concerned about Expo, may I point out that prices of gasoline, net of taxes, are actually down in Vancouver.

Mr. Waddell: That is absolute nonsense.

SPACE WEAPONRY

UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE—CANADIAN POSITION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence.

In view of the new statement made by the General Secretary of the Soviet Union, Mr. Gorbachev, is the Government planning to make another proposal and to put pressure on the American Government so that the main obstacle to achieving rapid progress in nuclear disarmement, namely the Star Wars

Project, be put on the table to help find a quick solution to this major problem?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman, who I believe was absent yesterday, has not checked yesterday's Hansard where the Secretary of State for External Affairs covered that.

An Hon. Member: He was here yesterday.

Mr. Nielsen: I am sorry, he was here.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: He was not in Question Period.

Mr. Nielsen: He could not have been listening—

Mr. Chrétien: I was listening.

Mr. Nielsen: —because it was covered fully by the Secretary of State for External Affairs yesterday.

Mr. Gauthier: No, it wasn't; that is the reason for the question.

NEW PROPOSAL BY U.S.S.R.—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I can tell the Deputy Prime Minister that I was here in the House and said that this was the weak point in the situation.

Is the Government planning to change its policy in view of the Gorbachev proposal as it did last spring, when, after beginning by supporting the Star Wars project, it then decided not to support this project following pressures by the Canadian public? Does the Government plan to show some sense like last year and put pressure on the Americans to eliminate the major obstacle to negotiations which would bring lasting peace?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, as to the Strategic Defence Initiative of the United States, the Government position on that has been made clear repeatedly over the months. There is no Government-to-Government participation with that initiative. As to the general nature of the remainder of the hon. gentleman's question, that was covered by the Secretary of State for External Affairs who very clearly set out Government policy on the matter yesterday.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS

COSTS OF MEDICARE AND EDUCATION

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. According to figures produced by Statistics Canada, the federal Government's contributions to medicare and post-secondary education costs have been rising more slowly than the actual costs of those programs. With this in mind, will the Minister of Finance indicate whether he would be willing to let the present Established Programs Financing legislation run its full course to the end of March, 1987? Will he let it go its full course before he makes those cuts?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is dealing with apples and oranges here. There are many elements in provincial health care costs which the federal Government has never had any responsibility to finance or to participate in their financing. He is including those figures in the calculation which he just used in his preamble. As far as the substantive question is concerned, we have made our position quite clear on it. We will be introducing legislation shortly to deal with this matter, and its effect will take place on April 1, 1986.

CASH PAYMENTS TO PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, the Minister seems to have a problem understanding that costs are increasing in medicare and post-secondary education, but especially in medicare because people are getting older and our technology is more advanced. Will the Minister admit that, as a result of the course of action to which he is committed, the Province of Quebec will actually be receiving less money in cash from the federal Government at the end of this decade than it will be receiving from the federal Government next year? As a result of the program which he is introducing it will actually receive less cash from the federal Government.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member understands why that is. There is a formula under which provinces are recompensed in cash plus tax point transfers. Some years back the Province of Quebec opted to take more by way of tax point transfers. Therefore, when changes to the program occur, this only affects the cash element. That is the reason for the change.

HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

SOLICITOR GENERAL'S STATEMENTS

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Last May 27 in the House, speaking about the Solicitor General of the day, the Prime Minister agreed with the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain when that Member said that it was not apppropriate for a Solicitor General to comment on a matter which was before a tribunal for investigation. The Prime Minister said that he would discuss it with all members of his Government and "ask them to bear in mind the injunction of which his hon. friend speaks so well". Will the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister apply this fundamental principle to the current Solicitor General, in view of what that Solicitor General said in the House yesterday about matters before the Human Rights Commission for investigation?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I do not see any validity in the allegations contained in that preamble. I do not share the view, but if he really believes that he is correct he should be speaking to the Hon. Member for York South-Weston, and perhaps to the Hon. Member for Hamilton East, rather than directing criticisms here.

COMMENTS BY MINISTERS

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I am talking about the conduct of Ministers for which the Deputy Prime Minister and the Prime Minister are responsible. I ask him why the Government will not continue to apply the fundamental principle that Ministers should not comment on matters before courts or tribunals, including matters before the Canadian Human Rights tribunal, for investigation.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I allowed the first question because I understood his dilemma, but my dilemma with the second question, I think the Hon. Member will know, is that since he asked me to rule on the matter as a point of order, and I have reserved on that, I think I should really make a decision and come back on that question prior to these questions being put, with respect.

FISHERIES

ISSUANCE OF CLAM FISHING LICENCES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. It relates to the Cape Breton clam scam. Would the Minister confirm that he lobbied the Minister of Fisheries to obtain valuable clam fishing test licences for Mother Snow's Fine Foods, while at the same time the Department of National Revenue was attempting to collect thousands of dollars in unsatisfied judgments against a principal of the company?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I think the question relates to the procedure in which experimental licence applications have been invited from a number of different contenders who seek to develop an important economic opportunity off the coast of Nova Scotia. That procedure has been carried out by Atlantic regional officials in accordance with specific criteria, established to be fair and equitable to all applicants. Any representations made to myself as Minister of Fisheries were made by Members of Parliament from Nova Scotia in accordance with their duties as Members representing their respective constituencies.

ROLE OF MINISTER OF NATIONAL REVENUE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister of National Revenue confirm for the House that he admitted in a public forum that he lobbied on behalf of Mother Snow's Fine Foods and its principals when it—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the Hon. Member please resume his seat? The Hon. Member knows that questions can only be placed to Ministers with regard to their administrative responsibilities.

SOCIAL SECURITY

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE—NUMBER OF APPLICANTS

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of National Health and Welfare my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. It concerns some disturbing statistics issued to me by the Department of National Health and Welfare respecting the eligibility of widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 64. Apparently only 30 per cent of 40 per cent of eligible widows and widowers have bothered to apply for the extended spousal allowance. Does the Minister blame his dismal record on the poor advertising campaign to inform the public, or did the Government seriously overestimate the number of persons eligible for that program?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member was correct in that that is a question which is more appropriately put to my colleague, the Minister of National Health and Welfare. He knows that we have gone to a good of trouble, both in direct advertising as well as in advertising through Government cheques, to try to advise all Canadians who could be eligible for this. We believe that the statistics originally set out are accurate statistics. We are still trying to advise people who could be eligible that the program is there. I thank the Hon. Member for his question, because it helps bring that to the attention of Canadians.

REQUEST FOR REMOVAL OF MARITAL STATUS CRITERION

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Will the Minister, with the resulting $200 million in savings, now extend that program as we advocated during the time of debate on the Bill to all people between the ages of 60 and 64 regardless of marital status?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this Government is always looking at various options to consider regarding eligibility of people for programs. I will take his comments as a further representation.

AIR CANADA

INTERNATIONAL FLIGHTS—PROPOSED TRANSFER FROM GANDER TO ST. JOHN'S NFLD.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport knows that the taxpayers have spent millions of dollars upgrading Gander as an international airport, spending over $6 million last year. Gander is open far more often than St. John's, which is as fogged in as the Minister of Justice. He should also know that if Air Canada does move, St. John's would require additional millions spent to accommodate that airline, and that other international flights could then very well follow Air Canada out of Gander. Is the Minister going to let Air Canada undermine the importance of Gander as an international airport?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member would expect me to respond to Air Canada's request to transfer its international flights from Gander to St. John's. It has made that representation to me and I am considering all the facts related to the decision that could be made. I will consider everything the Hon. Member has referred to, in the course of coming up with that decision.

DEREGULATION POLICY INQUIRY

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, is it the Minister's policy under his proposals for deregulation to allow airlines to abandon expensive taxpayer supplied infrastructure whenever they want at airports, at great additional expense to taxpayers?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, Air Canada is a Crown corporation and it requested a transfer of flights based strictly on a commercial decision. We will have to respond to that and certainly take all those things into consideration. The Hon. Member talks about deregulation. We are not in the process of deregulation; it is regulatory reform that is going to be the package that will be developed. It will be a policy unique to Canadian needs, which will serve the best interests of all Canadians.

REASON FOR TRANSFER REQUEST

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Can the Minister confirm that the reason Air Canada is requesting to move its transatlantic flights from Gander to St. John's is that 80 per cent of the transatlantic traffic emanates from St. John's? There is no connecting flight to Gander. The infrastructure to handle that one flight a week is already in place.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, indeed that is the contention of Air Canada. There are others who dispute those figures. That is part of the ongoing assessment in dealing with this very important issue. Those things will be taken into consideration before a final decision is made.

FISHERIES

EAST COAST—1986 GROUNDFISH ALLOCATIONS

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. In light of the fact that the 1986 Groundfish Management Plan for the Scotia Shelf cuts the inshore fishermen by 21,901 metric tonnes and increases the allocation for the offshore vessels by 35,978 metric tonnes of fish more than what they caught last year, will the Minister meet with the inshore fishermen of Yarmouth and Digby to reconsider those allocations for a fair and equitable sharing of that resource?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I also thank the Hon. Member for raising this very important question. Indeed, the allocations for the 1986 groundfish season on the Scotian Shelf are slightly reduced from the actual catches of last year. In some cases there have been offsetting increases granted, but the division in cod allocation for 1986 is based on the same formula as the division for 1985. At the present time I am exploring the possibility with my colleague, the Minister of Fisheries for Nova Scotia, of adjusting that division. I will be meeting with him on Sunday to discuss this question further.

INCREASE IN RED FISH QUOTA

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Also in 4RST, the red fish quota has been increased by 5,000 metric tonnes for the vessels located outside the Gulf. Fishermen who are traditionally fishing the Gulf fishery claim that those stocks are declining. Will the Minister reconsider that extra 5,000 metric tonne allocation that was given to the offshore outside Gulf vessels?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): The decision to add an additional 5,000 metric tonnes to the 4T red fish quota was based on a long-term plan adopted by the previous Government, of which he was a supporter. On the basis of biological advice it appeared there were sufficient increases in red fish stocks to absorb such an increase. That is the basis on which this decision has been made. At the same time we are looking for alternative stocks which might be fished by the fleet in the southern Gulf based in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, in order to give them additional advantage as well.

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): My question is for the Minister of Finance. The Canadian dollar has dropped to 70.72 cents U.S. this morning, the lowest level in the history of Canada. How does the Minister account for this continued devaluation of Canadian currency?

An Hon. Member: Blame it on the Liberals.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have made it a practice not to comment on specific levels of the Canadian dollar. The Hon. Member has read a number of stories in the media and they give a range of reasons for the performance of the Canadian dollar. I encourage him to read them.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER ISSUE INSTRUCTIONS TO BANK OF CANADA GOVERNOR

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): I must say that I find that a cop-out. The Minister of Finance is responsible for financial conditions in this country and should be answering questions about the Canadian dollar. Will he direct the Governor of the Bank of Canada today to present alternative ways of protecting the Canadian dollar other than raising interest rates which will detrimentally affect the positions of millions of Canadians?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me make two comments on that suggestion. First of all, I have said, and will say again to the Hon. Member, that it is not possible for the Governor of the Bank of Canada, or for the Minister of Finance, to wave a magic wand and hold the level of the Canadian dollar or the level of interest rates. Those levels are set by the market-place. The Bank of Canada will moderate movements upwards and downwards in both of those key markets. It is not possible to set the rate.

What I have said, and I will say it again, is that the important thing is that we establish the right fundamental economic environment in this country, and that is what we are working on. This will lead to a degree of stability, and, in time, some increase in the level of the Canadian dollar. We have to get to the fundamentals, and one of those fundamentals is getting the size of the federal government deficit down, and the Hon. Member continually retards our ability by the comments that he makes. That is what we have to be working on, and I look forward to his support on that.

AIR CANADA

SEAT SALE—EXCLUSION OF SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport and concerns Air Canada. Last week our state carrier announced a seat sale which excluded Saskatoon and Regina. Once again it appears my Province of Saskatchewan, a province in which Air Canada enjoys a virtual monopoly, has been excluded. Can the Minister take steps to encourage Air Canada to examine its policy in this regard?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have raised this question with the President of Air Canada and he has reminded me that the sale proposed by CP was a ten-day sale, a very limited time, for flights between February 1 and March 6, with discounts of up to 80 per cent. He reminded me that Air Canada provides year-round discounts of up to 70 per cent, with other bonuses such as vouchers and certain sun sale fares added on top of that. Indeed, the residents of Saskatchewan are well served by Air Canada, and at competitive prices.

I think it would be fitting for me to say to the Hon. Member that this year Air Canada was named the winner of the 1985 Passenger Service Award by Air Transport World which recognizes the high level of service that the airline provides.

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. In view of the fact that the Canadian dollar tumbled to 70.72 cents U.S. today—an all-time trading low against the American currency—does the Minister agree that this reflects a judgment by the international community on his Government's handling of the Canadian economy?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, no, I would disagree fundamentally with the Hon. Member's statement. What has been going on for the past ten years—since the fall of 1976—is that the Canadian dollar has been in a downward slide. It takes time to turn that around.

In response to the specific question posed by the Hon. Member, I ask her to read the OECD report, which was issued just before Christmas, in which there were no policy recommendations. Normally, reports from the OECD contain policy recommendations. The OECD said that the reason for that was because it agreed very much with the basic policies which this Government has brought in since September, 1984. It has no advice to give to the Government of Canada because everything we are doing is right.

Mr. Gauthier: You never listen anyway. You weren't even in power then.

Mr. Axworthy: We give it free every day but you won't listen.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I know that you would not allow me in my preamble to get into a disagreement with respect to the OECD report. Thus, my supplementary question is simply—

Mr. Speaker: Well done.

Miss Nicholson: Is the Minister therefore saying that he intends to take no action whatever to prevent the dollar going through the 70-cent barrier?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that I do not comment on specific levels of the Canadian dollar. She knows the intervention policy—

Mr. Riis: It's the lowest it's been in history.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —of the Bank of Canada, as I have indicated to her and other Members of the House as recently as two answers ago. If she wishes to disagree with the report of the OECD, I think she will find that there are many more people who would disagree with her than she has indicated.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF CLAIMANTS FOR REFUGEE STATUS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Immigration to whom I gave notice by telephone this morning. As the Minister knows, since the Supreme Court declared ten months ago that the Charter forbids the Canadian Government to deny refugee status to anyone without an oral hearing, the number of refugee claimants in Canada has mushroomed from 14,000 to over 20,000.

When will the Minister take action on the recommendations of the Sixth Report of the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration, which was tabled last December, and which recommended just, speedy, and compassionate administrative measures for clearing up the backlog of refugees and reducing the delay, thereby taking away the motivation for the racket of phoney refugee claims?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the Hon. Member for his question. I want to assure him that the sixth report which was tabled in the House on December 19 is being studied by myself and by my colleagues. We are looking at the whole matter of the backlog and at a new refugee determination system on an urgent basis.

I wish to commend the members of the committee for their very thorough analysis of this troubling issue and to assure them that their recommendations wills be very useful especially at this time, as we bring proposals before the House.

VISA REQUIREMENT FOR PORTUGUESE VISITORS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, can the Minister, then, assure the House that he will not consider imposing a visa requirement on visitors from Portugual, at least until he has taken these just measures to reduce the backlog of refugee claimants and so cut the motivation out from under this phoney racket of refugee claims?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raises the issue of a number of people who at this moment claim to be refugees and who are asking for those claims to be tested. I wish to assure the Hon. Member that I have been in close contact with the Portuguese community and that the action of the Government at this time is on those who are encouraging fraudulent claims. I appreciate very much the support of the Portuguese community, and also the support of all communities involved in identifying these abuses. I am now gathering information in that regard and where appropriate prosecutions may be undertaken.

HOUSING

INCREASED STARTS AND SALES IN 1985

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, my question today is directed to the Minister reponsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing. It centres around a recent statement published by the Toronto Home Builders' Association that there was a 71.5 per cent increase in the sale of new homes in the Toronto area in 1985. Can the Minister explain to Canadians how this amazing increase took place? Does he feel that it might just be a once-in-a-lifetime occurrence?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member brings an increase in sales to the attention of the House. I would also like to say to the Hon. Member that home starts in the last year were up 21 per cent over the previous year. That is as a result of the economic and financial handling of the economy by the Minister of Finance and this Government.

Mr. Frith: What about the dollar?

Mr. McKnight: The Hon. Member should know that barely into the second year of the mandate of this Government it has created 44,000 more jobs than the Liberal Government created in four and a half years—44,000 more.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, one of the reasons for those sales happens to be because interest rates are 2.5 percentage points lower than they were on election day in 1984. Another reason is because the unemployment rate has gone down since 1984—

Mr. Boudria: Thank you!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INSURANCE

SOLVENCY OF INSURANCE COMPANIES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. Yesterday the Minister of Finance said that the solvency of insurance companies is a federal responsibility. Can he explain to the House why 15 insurance companies cannot pass the test of solvency in accordance with the TRAC report of 1985 published by Colander Publications Inc.? Are we headed for another bank fiasco such as we saw last year?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, my colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, is not in the House today.

Mr. Frith: She'll deal with this matter as she did with the CCB matter.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I suggest that the Hon. Member ask the question of the Minister when she is here on Monday.

Mr. Gagliano: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: In the context of just-to-take-notice, it is a little difficult.

CORPORATIONS

MITEL TAKEOVER—EFFECT OF RULING BY BRITISH REGULATORY BODY

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, as we feared and predicted, Mitel's future has been thrown into doubt by the interference of British regulatory agencies. My question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. Has the Minister contacted British authorities to find out what the British monopolies report to the Minister of Industry—which has now been delivered—has actually said, so that some policy responses can be developed here quickly in order to respond to the potential difficulty which Mitel could face?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I will take that very clear and very precise question as notice. I will bring it to the attention of the appropriate Minister who, in turn, will be in touch with the hon. gentleman.

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR—INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. During the election campaign of 1984 Conservative candidates across Canada were distributing what they called "Liberal dwindle dollars" worth 75 cents U.S. Will the Minister not now admit that the Liberal dwindle dollar worth 75 cents was a lot better than what his Government has been able to accomplish? Would he specifically tell the House today what he will do to stop interest rates from rising in view of the Tory dwindle dollar worth 70 cents? And how am I going to be able to tell my constituents that their interest rates will not increase as a result of the lack of confidence in the Government?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, what I would suggest his constituents should do is to encourage him to come to the Minister of Finance and say: "Keep up the good work. You're doing a great job".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The economic policies of this Government are sound now because the OECD simply says they are right. Everyone who is watching what we are doing says we are going in the right direction because we have created 450,000 jobs. We have interest rates down by 2.5 percentage points.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: More.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We have investment up 11 per cent.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of 11, presented by Hon. Members on Thursday, January 23, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), and the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petitions presented by the Hon. Member for York-Sunbury (Mr. Howie) by filing with the Clerk of the House also do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed Bill S-7, an Act to amend the Act of incorporation of Pine Hill Divinity Hall, to which the concurrence of this House is desired.

I am in receipt of a notice of a desire to raise a question of order from the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

POINTS OF ORDER

MR. SPEAKER'S RULING ON SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise a point of order for the purpose of seeking some clarification of a ruling you made during Question Period with reference to the supplementary question I asked. Of course, I recognize the point of your comment but I really want to ask about the extent to which one can ask a Minister about the general policy of the Government even though the matter may have been seemingly raised in a point of order earlier.

My question was intended to be about the policy of the Government on Ministers commenting on matters before tribunals and it did not relate to the application of the sub judice convention with respect to your work in the House, Mr. Speaker, or comments by other Members.

I just want to add this final point, Sir. The policy of the Government about comments of Ministers regarding matters under investigation is something which applies to what Ministers say, whether or not they are speaking in the House. In fact, the comments by the Solicitor General of the day, the Hon. Member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay), which were the subject of the exchange between the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) in the House last May 27, were comments made outside of the House to a group of journalists.

So I respectfully submit, by way of conclusion, that my questions were intended to relate to the policy of the Government that Ministers should not comment on matters under investigation by tribunals whether or not the comments were made in the House itself.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) makes a fair point and I think he knows that my difficulty at the time was in having to make the decision on the spot as to whether the question related to the matter which is under reservation or to the general policy question. Given what I thought I heard asked, I felt I had no choice but to make the statement I did.

I think the Hon. Member for Windsor West indicates in his comments that he appreciated the difficulty I was under. I also appreciate his submissions on the question and I will be back to the House, I hope, at the earliest possible moment, probably Monday, on the issue itself.

CLARIFICATION SOUGHT OF MR. SPEAKER'S RULING ON SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it would be possible for the Chair to review the proceedings today in which the supplementary question I asked of the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay) dealt with what would appear to be a ministerial requirement to be aware of actions in his Department in which they are attempting to collect moneys owed. Therefore, the question was seeking an answer to the Minister's awareness of his responsibilities, as Minister of National Revenue, concerning moneys owed by individuals upon which he was undertaking—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I take it the Hon. Member is asking me to review the question he asked and determine whether in fact, on the spot, I made a correct judgment. I will be happy to do that. I thought I heard a different question than the one the Hon. Member has just described. However, I am prepared to review the "blues".

PRACTICE OF HOUSE RESPECTING MOTIONS UNDER S.O. 31

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, in view of the Minister's answers to the questions about the falling dollar, I would have wished to move a motion for an emergency debate. Am I right in thinking that the requirements for notice make this impossible today and that it will have to wait until Monday?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is indeed correct, so the House will know, simply because of the requirement to submit a notice in writing in advance, as stipulated under Standing Order 31.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Let me deal with what I think is now going to be attempted procedurally and indicate that if one wanted to try something procedurally along the lines of unanimous consent, it would have to be done at the point at which a Standing Order 31 notice would normally be dealt, and that would come later on.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I thought the Speaker was deaf unless he was being directly addressed.

Mr. Speaker: That was neither a point of order, nor true.

PRACTICE RESPECTING FILING OF PETITIONS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order dealing with petitions. I tabled some petitions yesterday and I take it today that you have ruled they were not acceptable or did not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form. They were photocopies of originals which I tabled yesterday thinking that your ruling to the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme)—

Mr. Speaker: I can see where the Hon. Member is going. The Hon. Member knows the rules require that a petition be submitted in its original form. The question I was asked by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) was whether an Hon. Member could go to the Clerk of Petitions to obtain a photocopy of a petition which had been accepted. I think the Hon. Member may have misconstrued that. He does know that the requirements are that the only petition the Clerks can verify as to whether it is in order is the original petition. A good try, though.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, question No. 384 will be answered today.

CANADA-UNITED KINGDOM RECIPROCAL SOCIAL SECURITY AGREEMENT

Question No. 384—Mr. Young:

Did the Prime Minister make a representation to the Prime Minister of Great Britain that the Governments of Canada and Great Britain enter into a reciprocal social security agreement and, if so, did the Prime Minister of Great Britain respond to that representation and what was the nature of that response?

Mr. Len Gustafson (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): The question of a reciprocal social security agreement between Canada and the United Kingdom was raised once again during the Prime Minister's visit to London, April 28 to May 1, 1985, at the Senior officials level. Canada reiterated its position that the conclusion of such an agreement remains a high priority and that it would be prepared to start negotiations at any time. To date, the British Government has not expressed any interest in undertaking such negotiations.

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all other questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question mentioned by the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

INCOME TAX AGREEMENTS, 1985

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council) (for the Minister of Finance) moved: That Bill S-6 (from the Senate), An Act to implement an agreement between Canada and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a convention between Canada and the Cooperative Republic of Guyana and an agreement between Canada and India for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to implement an agreement between Canada and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a convention between Canada and the Cooperative Republic of Guyana and an agreement between Canada and India for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax.

The three tax conventions under review are similar to those which Parliament has approved in the past. As you know, Mr. Speaker, 36 tax conventions are now in force in Canada. Once ratified, the three conventions under review will be the first agreements of this kind between Canada and these countries.

The various income elements in these conventions will receive a tax treatment similar to that provided for under the other conventions already signed by Canada. Actually, the dividends paid to non-residents by Canadian corporations are generally subject to a maximum 25 per cent rate in Canada. As usual, under the agreement signed between Canada and India, the withholding rate is reduced from 25 per cent to 15 per cent. However, the recipient must be a corporation holding at least 10 per cent of the shares of the corporation that pays the dividends, and where they are paid on earnings resulting from a new capital injection made after the date this agreeemnt was signed, that being October 30, 1985.

In general, interests paid by a resident of one country to a resident of the other country are subject to a 15 per cent tax rate. There are however exceptions, where interests are paid by or to a Government. In the case of Guyana, interest paid to a resident of Canada are subject to a 25 per cent withholding rate.

As far as royalties are concerned, the agreements provide for a general tax rate of 10 per cent in the source country. However, under the agreement with India, a 30 per cent rate will apply to technology transferred under arrangements made or contracts signed after the date the agreement was signed. In Canada, the statutory rate of 25 per cent will apply to royalties paid to residents of India.

The agreements also deal with other items, Mr. Speaker, especially the taxing of capital gains, income derived in respect of professional services or other dependent activities and pensions. In all those cases, Canada has maintained the right to tax those items pursuant to the policy previously in force.

The tax agreements further provide for a relief from double taxation on foreign income of Canadian residents, subject to the limits provided for them by Canadian law. Furthermore, they provide for dividends received by Canadian corporations on the tax exempt surplus of their foreign affiliates residing in the country with whom Canada has reached a tax agreement to be tax exempt in Canada from now on.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the agreements signed with Guayana and India include provisions about the credit for fictitious income tax. Under such provisions, fiscal incentives granted under a specific statute of those countries will be recognized for the purpose of computing the foreign tax credit in Canada. This means that Canadian investors will benefit directly from those incentives without any possibility of the Canadian tax eliminating them.

On the whole, Mr. Speaker, the provisions of each of these agreements present fair solutions to various problems of double taxation between Canada and those various countries. Each of the countries involved hopes to be able to implement within the shortest possible time frame a valid bilateral tax agreement.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I recommend that this House give speedy attention to this Bill.

[English]

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, as I said the last time we had one of these tax treaty Bills before us, commenting on a Bill of this nature is always somewhat anticlimactic in that the treaty has already been signed by the Governments concerned, usually after protracted negotiations, and parliamentary approval by both countries is the last step. It is rare for amendments to be made to this kind of Bill, although in 1980 the then Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs amended a Bill containing 11 tax treaties. They removed approval for one. That treaty was signed in 1976 but not finalized and has never since been renegotiated.

The Bill before us today concerns taxation between Canada and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a convention between Canada and the Cooperative Republic of Guyana, and an agreement between Canada and India for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax.

These measures should make for additional convenience for residents of Canada who have either family businesses or other business interests in those countries. It should make for certain additional smoothness in managing their tax affairs. On balance, the terms of the respective double taxation conventions provide an equitable solution to problems of double taxation and should be acceptable to most Canadian residents.

The convention also contains tax sparing provisions in the case of Guyana and India. Under these provisions the tax incentives granted by the domestic legislation of those countries will be recognized in computing Canadian tax. Therefore, Canadian residents will be allowed to deduct the amount of tax which would have been payable in the absence of special incentive legislation in the other country.

In Canada, double taxation of foreign source income of Canadian residents is alleviated by way of a foreign tax credit. In addition, dividends received by a company resident in Canada from the exempt surplus of its foreign-affiliate resident in a treaty country will be exempt from tax in Canada. The right of Canada to tax pensions and annuities paid to non-residents is protected.

Some of the other matters also dealt within these tax treaties include capital gains and non-discrimination. Under the conventions, discrimination on the basis of nationality is prohibited. This will ensure that nationals of a country receive equal treatment to that received by nationals of the other country in the same tax circumstances. However, this does not prevent a country from providing fiscal incentives, for example small business deductions, on the basis of the residence of the taxpayer.

In conclusion, this appears to be a relatively straightforward piece of legislation. We on this side have no particular reason to debate it at length and we would like to see it move into committee.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to have an opportunity to rise to say a few words regarding Bill S-6. Not to prolong the discussions around this Bill let me just say that the previous two speakers have indicated its nature. As the Hon. Member indicated, everything is signed, sealed and delivered and we are going through a formality because it must be done. One can hardly get excited or enthused about something that is really an afterthought. However, it is important that Canada take the initiative to complete these agreements between Canada and, in this case, India, Guyana and the U.S.S.R.

Double Taxation

More and more now Canadians are going abroad and involving themselves in entrepreneurial initiatives and doing business in other countries. Of course, until these tax treaties are arranged, it means that people are often taxed twice, once in the country in which they are doing business, and again in the country of their citizenship. In a sense, Bill S-6 ensures that income earned will only be taxed once. I suppose that as far as the Government is concerned that is not a major item, but it is a signal that the Government now sends out to Canadian investors and business people that doing business in India, the USSR, and Guyana will now be made easier. The matter of taxation of one's personal affairs will not be jeopardized by being involved in business or work of one kind or another in these three countries.

Having had the opportunity in the last number of months to travel to both India and the Soviet Union on Government matters, it seems to me that this is a very timely and important Bill. The opportunities for enhanced trade, to do business, and to make deals in the U.S.S.R. and India particularly, are quite limitless. The country of India is booming industrially. It needs a great deal. It can use much of the technology that has been developed to a high level in Canada, whether in telecommunications, transportation, or the construction of hydro electric works. There is an opportunity, not only for Canadians to involve themselves in doing business in these countries, but also for Canada to play a role, particularly in countries like Guyana and India, in terms of assisting their development toward self-reliance and self-determination in economic terms.

I am very impressed with the advances that the poor country of India has made in terms of developing its industrial and communication infrastructure. I was quite amazed that one can actually send a letter from Bombay to Calcutta in one day. This is a country of nearly 800 million people and 800,000 villages. Yet, its mail system is very sophisticated relative to ours. The development of transportation and hydro electric systems is escalating, to a large extent, because of Canadian technology and assistance from both the private and the public sectors.

In the Soviet Union there are many areas in which Canadian entrepreneurs, investors, developers, and exporters and importers could do business. The technology that has been developed primarily in western Canada is directly transferable to the development of a great deal of their petro-chemical industry. Canadians often have a mind-set which prohibits them from doing business in the Soviet Union. I think it would be fair to say that Canadians also have a problem doing business in countries such as India with such a different cultural milieu. It requires a sophisticated and knowledgeable approach. I am pleased to see that many Canadian firms are developing that ability.

Bill S-6 will go a long way toward removing the discrimination which presently exists and accomplishing a system of economic justice for Canadians who choose, for one reason or another, to accept employment in another country. This discrimination is not intentional, Mr. Speaker, but rather the product of lack of co-ordination between the tax systems of various countries or a failure of those systems to accommodate adequately the special circumstances of particular income earners. Under these agreements all income earners, whether employed in Canada or in one of the countries named in the Bill, will now be placed on a much more equal footing. It is our intention, as New Democrats, to facilitate the passage of this Bill to allow Canadians to get on with doing business in these three countries.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre), seconded by Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth), moves that Bill S-6, an Act to implement an agreement between Canada and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a convention between Canada and the Cooperative Republic of Guyana and an agreement between Canada and India for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

CUSTOMS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND—CONCURRENCE IN SENATE AMENDMENTS

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue) moved the second reading of, and concurrence in, amendments made by the Senate to Bill C-59, an Act respecting Customs.

Mr. Towers: Mr. Speaker, I believe there is an understanding that this Bill will go to Committee of the Whole. Is that not right?

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It does not often happen that the House deals with amendments coming from the Senate and this is in my case a first experience. Consequently, I would need some explanations. I take it for granted that the five Senate amendments will be considered as a whole, meaning that we will be speaking on five amendments and afterwards if we deem it advisable we will pass or reject them and advise the Senate accordingly. Is it the procedure to be followed?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Indeed, it is. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) has described exactly the procedure to be followed.

[English]

The matter is put to the House as if it were second reading to give Members an opportunity to debate it. Members may agree to the amendments or may further amend the amendments. I will then put the question, after which the Bill will be sent back to the Senate.

Mr. MacKay: Mr. Speaker, in answer to my colleague opposite, I would like to ask the concurrence of the House in some minor technical amendments made by the Senate to Bill C-59, the Customs Act Bill. As the House knows, this Bill was given third and final reading here in early November after consideration by the House and by the House committee designed to review it. It was subsequently sent to the Senate, where it was also passed before the end of last year.

During study of the Bill in the Senate it was discovered that some minor corrections were required. There are four technical changes which have been made to Bill C-59 in Sections 64, 142 and 160. Two of these are minor corrections made to the French text so that both language versions of the Bill are identical in meaning. The third is a correction in a cross-reference to a subsection of one of the Bill's clauses. The fourth is the reinstatement of a line which was inadvertently dropped from the printed version of the text. None of these changes have any bearing on the substance of the Bill or alter any provisions in any way. As was stated when this Bill was presented in the House by spokesmen from all Parties, it is a much-needed and long-awaited overhaul of an important federal statute.

We are anxious, as are those who are affected by the provisions of this Bill, to have a new Customs Act in force as early as possible. As a result, with the co-operation of all Members we are working toward a target for proclamation of this new Act as well as the regulations in early June of this year, if possible. Therefore, to help expedite passage of this important legislation, I hope that Members will agree to the minor amendments that I have described in order that we may obtain Royal assent to the measure as soon as possible.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment briefly on the matter under consideration, namely the amendments proposed by the Senate. I agree with the Minister that we must act without delay and refer the amendments back to the Senate, if they are in order.

Mr. Speaker, it goes to show that the Senate can be useful. To many of us who used to have doubts about it, this confirms that the Senate really acts as an Upper House of sober second thought on proposed legislation. As the Minister himself admitted, one sentence was missing from the Bill and the Senate reinstated it. Amendments of technical and terminological nature have been introduced.

I think it is a good thing. The Senate should take full credit; it reviewed a rather complex and extremely long Bill, it was able to study it and propose amendments, which proves that the Senate is a worthy institution, an important Upper House.

I agree with the Minister, Mr. Speaker, but I do not want to take too much time. All Parties in the House and all Members agree that a revision of Bill C-59 respecting customs was long overdue. It has to be made easier to read and understand, it needs to be amended to simplify the existing statute, bring the terminology up to date and, for example, eliminate the requirement that importers prove their innocence in a court action; all these are good points.

I have no intention of going into the details of the Bill, but I would simply say that my party supports the amendments. We commend the Senate for its initiative, and we will support these amendments at the appropriate time.

• (1230)

[English]

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, we also have no strong arguments to raise with respect to this Bill. The Bill reflects changes upon which both this and the previous administration agreed. On behalf of our spokesperson who usually deals with this subject, I can indicate our Party's support for the general thrust of the Bill.

However, a number of important points that were raised in committee are worth repeating. Union representatives who spoke in the committee raised some questions with respect to the honour system as an impractical vehicle for collecting funds that are owed. They have made some suggestions that might surpass the present approach to sending out several notices with the hope of a return. They believe such an approach could possibly mean that importers will wait until the second notice before paying.

Our greatest concern about this Bill is that it seems likely that it is part of a process to reduce the number of Customs employees who are administering the system. For instance, it is suggested that reductions of perhaps 875 person years could be involved. While some of this will be within the administration cadre itself, there will also be a reduction of operational personnel which will discontinue certain functions and cost 164 positions. There will be a reduction of support staff that will cost another 360 positions.

While we recognize the service at the point of contact with the public, there is a concern that we are cutting back on the level of service which is important to make the Customs service operate effectively and efficiently. Questions have been raised within the legislative committee about the logic of some of those cuts and we are not entirely satisfied with the answers that have been provided.

It is difficult to consider this Bill which will involve such cuts in person years without taking into account the fact that there seems to be a move to cut back positions and reduce person years within the Public Service generally. If this Bill were to be seen as an isolated effort to rationalize and improve a particular part of Government, rather than being what seems to be part of a broader, almost ideological effort to cut back the Public Service personnel at a time of continued high unemployment, we would have much less trouble approving the Bill. However, given that fact, we cannot help but protest the level of cut-backs which seem to be suggested.

A total cut-back of 875 person years is certainly being questioned by Customs officials within my City of Windsor. It is their opinion that a reduction in this manner cannot be made without ultimately costing the service of the Customs branch itself. We hope that this provision does not detract from other elements of the Bill with which we generally agree.

There is certainly a need to update and streamline the Customs service which our spokesperson has recognized throughout his involvement in this Bill. Therefore, we do not intend to emphasize our opposition to the Bill.

However, we are concerned about some of the pilot projects which are under way in an attempt to achieve this streamlining. The unions which have been asked to implement these streamlining efforts have raised questions about some of these projects. The two projects in particular to which I want to refer are the minimum documentation project in the Toronto region and the postal improvement project taking place in the Montreal region. The object of both these pilot projects is to provide the Department with data on the administration of these elements in the Bill and problems that could be encountered.

We have been made aware of an internal memo of a meeting of senior departmental officials that was held at the end of July, 1985, that contains some rather disturbing notes, particularly with respect to the postal improvement project. According to the estimates discussed at this meeting, the move to allow individuals to receive non-duty paid goods through the mail and then to trust them to pay the duty afterwards will result in lost revenue in the Montreal region. It is expected that the loss could be as much as $100,000 per month. If one extrapolates this throughout the system as a whole, we could be talking about estimated losses in revenue of $6 million annually.

The memo referred to also gives a clear indication that the Department has set agenda on this item as becoming a national program, regardless of the revenue losses. If difficulties are encountered, as the Assistant Deputy Minister informed the committee, the objective will be to solve the collection problem rather than to scrap the system. I personally think that makes sense. If you try to deal with the problem and attempt at the same time to streamline the system itself, one has to ask the question, can this kind of streamlining be done with less cost of personnal and is it not possible to avoid job loss through pesonnel and is it not possible to avoid job loss through transfer of personnel to other duties?

We have heard from union representatives that the early release programs, particularly in the area of mail, could increase the work-load by some 15 per cent. Officials who are charged with inspection of the mail will at the same time experience a reduction in person years of 25 per cent. As a result, there is a work-load increase at the same time as a decrease in personnel.

The Auditor General himself has recognized some of these problems in his recent report in which he states:

—the Department has fewer resources than it had in earlier years, it is coping with a larger workload and has limited information on the public's compliance and on its own success of detecting non compliance.

I continue to quote from the Auditor General:

As a result of our review, we have a concern that the deterrent and enforcement aspects of Customs in some other areas may have diminished.

In short, while Bill C-59 may be a step forward, that progress will falter if the Government proceeds with its intention of reducing the ability of the customs branch to monitor the goods being imported into Canada. Customs officials have to be more than servants of the importers. They carry a very important responsibility to the public as a whole. They deserve our respect. They deserve our support. We would have hoped that person year reduction would not damage the Customs branch itself. As I say, at a time of continuing high unemployment there is certainly concern about this in the Windsor office of the Customs branch. A demonstration took place this week. Customs officials marched with other public servants.

We would urge the Minister himself and the Government to look again at these 875 cuts, which we are told will occur over the next five years. We urge him to examine the arguments we have made and the arguments which Customs workers and representatives have made to try to reflect and honour the service to this country of the Customs officials and to avoid those 875 cuts. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for this chance to speak on the Bill.

Motion agreed to, amendments read the second time and concurred in.

DISPOSITION OF BILL S-6

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have had some consultations with the opposition Parties respecting Bill S-6. We have a proposition to put to the House which I think you will find accepted by unanimous consent.

Notwithstanding the fact that the second reading motion has been passed, we would like to have that motion rescinded and the motion amended to have the reference not to a legislative committee but to committee of the whole. We would then be in agreement to proceed to committee of the whole immediately. Once that is completed, there will be a disposition to proceed to third reading stage, rather than having the Bill sit over in the normal course to another day's sitting.

In essence, I think there is disposition to dispose of this item in all stages today. If my suggestion is acceptable, perhaps you could put the rescision proposition and then put the motion as I proposed to amend it to read to committee of the whole.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, in essence the agreements have been reflected in the words of the Government House Leader except, Mr. Speaker, I do not think I can give him a guarantee that the Bill will be adopted today. We accept referral to committee of the whole third reading, and passage of the Bill hopefully sometime.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the proposal of the President of the Privy Council. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Hnatyshyn) agreed to.

INCOME TAX AGREEMENTS, 1985

MEASURE TO ENACT

House in Committee on Bill S-6, an Act to implement an agreement between Canada and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a convention between Canada and the Corporative Republic of Guyana and an agreement between Canada and India for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax—Mr. Wilson—Mr. Danis in the Chair.

The Chairman: House in Committee of the Whole on Bill S-6, an Act to implement an agreement between Canada and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a convention between Canada and the Co-operative Republic of Guyana and an agreement between Canada and India for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax. Part I, Canada-U.S.S.R. Income Tax Agreement.

On Clause 1—Citation of Part I

Miss Nicholson: Mr. Chairman, I have only two brief questions on this Bill. Perhaps the Minister might be willing to deal with them under Clause 1. Schedule IV of the Bill lists certain exceptions for India. For instance, there is a difference in the treatment of India with regard to the rates on royalties and fees. In the case of India, a rate of 30 per cent on royalties and fees for technical services applies, but only in respect of technology transferred under agreements made after the date of signature of the agreement, and in Canada the statutory rate of 25 per cent will apply. I believe that for the two other countries covered in the agreement, the rate is 10 per cent. Could the Minister explain both the reason for the difference and the probable amounts involved? Actually, I do not know which Minister will be answering my questions. Perhaps, since the Minister of National Revenue was not here at the beginning of my remarks, he would like me to repeat my questions.

Mr. MacKay: Mr. Chairman, I apologize to my colleague. I was across the House speaking to another colleague, and I am not too certain what were her questions. Do they concern Bill C-59?

Miss Nicholson: We are on Bill S-6.

An Hon. Member: The Parliamentary Secretary will answer.

Miss Nicholson: Mr. Chairman, since I have two general questions, rather than ask them when we touch upon each clause, it might save time if I just asked them and they were answered on Clause 1. Then I would not have any further questions to ask.

The main issue was the difference in the treatment of India—what were the reasons and what are the financial implications? There is a difference in the treatment of royalties and fees for technical services.

Also, in the case of the Canada-India Double Taxation Agreement, the rate of withholding tax on dividends is reduced from 25 per cent to 15 per cent only if the recipient is a company which owns at least 10 per cent of the shares of the company paying the dividends, and if the dividends are paid out of profits from investments made after the date of signature of the agreement. Could I have an explanation of the different treatment of India and of the possible financial implications of both these measures?

[Translation]

Mr. Vincent: Mr. Chairman, as I said in my speech at the second reading stage, there are indeed differences in the rates for India, the USSR and Guyana, and this is quite normal. These agreements are negotiated between Canada and various countries and they have to respect the tax laws in those countries.

However, I believe that these differences are minimal. In monetary terms, I am unfortunately unable to provide accurate figures to the Hon. Member because it is only when the agreement is applied that people will be able to benefit and that we shall find out its full financial implications.

However, Mr. Chairman, I repeat that this comes from the fact that Canada has to negotiate with these various countries and that they each have their own tax laws.

Clause agreed to.

Clauses 2 to 18 inclusive agreed to.

Schedules I to III inclusive agreed to.

On Schedule IV—

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, I simply want to come back to the question asked by my colleague for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) because Schedule IV deals with this issue, namely, the application of rates lower than 30 per cent to India, Guyana and the USSR. I wonder if the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance could assure us that the Government can provide a written answer to the question asked by the Hon. Member for Trinity, which answer would be more detailed than that provided by the Parliamentary Secretary and would perhaps include the financial data which interest us, namely how much this is expected to cost the taxpayers.

Mr. Vincent: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) wants us to make projections in advance about future investors in India or in Canada. This is rather complex. I can assure the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier that he will receive a written answer about the 30 per cent rate. As for other figures, we shall be happy to communicate them to the Hon. Member as we obtain them.

The Chairman: Shall Schedule IV carry?

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

TORONTO ISLAND AIRPORT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-76, an Act respecting the operation of the Toronto Island Airport by the Toronto Harbour Commissioners, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Hon. Harvie Andre (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Andre (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I rise with some pleasure to introduce third reading debate on Bill C-76, an Act to amend the Toronto Harbour Commissioners' Acts of 1911 and 1939. Toronto Island Airport serves a large general aviation community and a limited number of commercial air services, one of which uses, Toronto-built DASH-7 and DASH-8 aircraft. They use this airport in the operating of convenient services for the people of Toronto. The airport acts as well as an alternative or reliever airport for Pearson International Airport. It is located strategically on land owned by the City of Toronto, the Toronto harbour and the federal Government. Until June of 1983 the airport was operated by the Toronto harbour commissioners on behalf of the City of Toronto. The lease between these two parties expired at that time, and in the absence of a new operating agreement the possibility existed that the airport might have to be shut down.

• (1405)

With this in mind, and in recognition of the vital role the airport plays in the Toronto area, the federal Government of the day agreed to bring before the House of Commons certain amendments that would correct that situation. The previous Government entered into a 50-year lease agreement in June of 1983 with the City of Toronto and the Toronto harbour commissioners to ensure that the airport, as I have indicated, would continue.

Negotiations leading up to the signing of the long-term lease were protracted, due in part to the environmental concerns raised by representatives of the City of Toronto with respect to the type of air operations that would be allowed at the airport.

As to the good faith of all parties, once again I remind the House that the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) was a member of the Government at that time, and I mention that because I find it strange that now almost three years later when we are dealing with it he finds areas of concern that did not really give him much heartburn at the time. Bill C-76 should be viewed within the context and the terms and conditions of the lease agreement that was signed by the three parties in June of 1983. The Bill is designed primarily to enable the Toronto Harbour Commission to implement its obligations in the operation of the airport contained in the lease agreement. Specifically, the City of Toronto insisted that certain conditions be included in the lease to prohibit all jet aircraft and aircraft generating excessive noise. Those noise levels are set out quite specifically in the lease agreement, from operating at the airport as a prerequisite to the city entering into a long-term agreement. The former Minister of Transport, on behalf of the federal Government, agreed to make recommendations to Parliament with respect to amendments to the Toronto Harbour Commissioners Act. Such amendments are designed to give effect to the very specific and clearly set out conditions in the agreement. Such amendments do, among other things, provide the statutory authority to allow the Toronto Harbour Commissioners to make by-laws to prohibit jet powered aircraft and aircraft generating excessive noise from operating at the airport, and will provide a maximum fine of $25,000 upon summary conviction for owners of prohibited aircraft who use such aircraft at that airport. That is not to say that in the event of emergency the airport cannot be used by aircraft generating noises above these specific limits set out in the agreement or jet powered aircraft. The federal Government has invested capital over the last few years and plans further expenditures to upgrade the airport for general aviation purposes. These expenditures were recognized as necessary by all parties to the lease agreement.

The purpose of the upgrading is easiest and shortest to explain, rather than to get into detail, by indicating that the airport at the time was in a state of deterioration leading to conditions that might prove unsafe.

Among the work that is planned and contemplated, already under way are such items as utilities and drainage, sewage treatment, runways, taxiways and aprons, security fencing, field lighting and upgrading or replacing the existing terminal building, and a new control tower.

The start-up for construction that has been noted recently in the press relates to construction that is specifically designed to upgrade the safety of operations at that airport.

The Government will be spending a further $3 million on a new control tower for the airport. That control tower and that construction work is scheduled for completion in 1987. The tower will enable the airport to handle the forecast growth in air traffic in a safe and more efficient manner. The provision of this facility is in accordance with Schedule E, Section 6 of the lease, which gives responsibility for all necessary air navigation systems and air traffic and meteorological services at the Toronto Island Airport to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski). I would like to stress that these expenditures have been, and will continue to be, carried out within the terms of the lease agreement and in full consultation with the City of Toronto and the Toronto Harbour Commissioners. All federal expenditures at the site are designed to make the Toronto Island Airport a more modern, safe and efficient facility.

Bill C-76 also includes an additional amendment, at the request of the City of Toronto, concerning the method of appointment of commissioners by the city to the Toronto Harbour Commission. The amendment will allow for members to be appointed by the majority of the Toronto City Council without nomination by the executive committee. This will bring the city's commissioner appointment process into line with city appointments for other agencies and commissions under its jurisdiction.

I wish to advise the House that six minor amendments have been made to Bill C-76 on the recommendation of the legislative committee struck to review the proposed legislation. I might add that the committee heard from several local residents and expert witnesses on environmental issues in the Toronto Island area during its deliberations of the Bill. Amendments related to such areas as expansion of facilities, power of commissioners, prohibition of offending aircraft and fines for offences. These suggestions, where possible, have all been incorporated into the amended Bill which is before us.

In conclusion, in recommending Bill C-76 for third reading, the federal Government is fulfilling its obligation under the lease agreement for the Toronto Toronto Island Airport. The amendments are fundamental to the proper execution of specific terms and conditions of the lease and have the full support of the City of Toronto and the Toronto habour commissioners. They provide the basic framework for the operation of the airport for many years to come for the benefit of users of air services to and from the City of Toronto. At the same time, the lease agreement and Bill C-76 ensure that environmental concerns raised by the city and local residents to preserve the integrity of the neighbouring park land and the harbour area will remain prime considerations governing operations at the Toronto Island Airport.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate this afternoon in the third reading debate on Bill C-76. It is a Bill which proposes to transfer the operating and financial responsibility of the Toronto Toronto Island Airport from the City of Toronto to the Toronto Harbour Commission. Despite the words of the Parliamentary Secretary, and the reassurances offered by the Government, my Party has serious reservations about the spirit of the Bill. More important, we are concerned with the holes in it and the sneaky way in which it was drafted.

In 1983, as the Parliamentary Secretary outlined, the City of Toronto negotiated with the Liberal Government of the day a new lease which was to run for a period of 50 years. The City of Toronto, in responding to the concerns of the citizens, particularly the residents of the Island, environmental groups, naturalists' organizations and other interested bodies negotiated a specific lease with specific conditions. It was drafted in 1983 in order to protect the constituencies of the individuals I have just mentioned.

What was contained in the lease? If we look at the agreement between the City of Toronto, the islanders and other interested bodies, we will see that the first issue raised is that there is to be no extension of the existing runways, or construction of new runways. Second, a bridge or a tunnel for vehicles connecting the city and the island will not be built. Third, it was agreed that the lands upon which the airport are located will not be expanded. Fourth, it was decided that no jet-powered aircraft will be permitted to operate from the Toronto Island Airport, except in the case of emergencies. Fifth, aircraft generating excessive noise levels will not be permitted within the Toronto Island Airport vicinity, except in the case of emergencies.

The intention of the agreement to which I have referred was designed to safeguard the infrastructure of the Island, and the City of Toronto which surround the Toronto Island Airport. One of our major objections with respect to Bill C-76—one which we have had from the outset—is that it is not clear whether this particular lease arrangement is still in force. In fact, in committee we made amendments in this regard and each and every one was defeated. One of the first amendments we proposed was that in respect of the interpretation of this piece of legislation, it should be specified clearly, in black and white, and in simple English, that the terms of the agreement, and the conditions embodied therein, should be in force in the guiding principles of Bill C-76. The amendment was rejected.

Clause 7 of the Bill states:

—the Commissioners shall, in accordance with the terms of any agreement entered into by them, and where there is no such agreement, may . . . make by-laws for the regulation and control of the Airport and all persons engaged in the operation of aircraft at the Airport, including by-laws prohibiting the landing or taking off of

(a) jet-powered aircraft, and

(b) aircraft of any kind on the grounds that aircraft of that kind generate an excessive level of noise on landing or taking off.

This piece of legislation enables the commissioners to draft by-laws, including by-laws which would prohibit jet planes and other planes which make excessive noise. Conversely, it is clear that they could also make by-laws allowing those jet planes which were not permitted in the previous agreement to operate from the Toronto Island Airport.

When one considers that the conditions of the lease arrangement are not specified in any part of the Bill, and when one couples that with the powers which the commissioners will be granted to draft by-laws, one realises that that is why I say the Bill is faulty and, perhaps, sneaky. The confusion in the Bill provides a window which will allow the commissioners, at some time in the future, the ability to draft by-laws which would permit these types of planes to operate. I am not saying that this would happen this year or next, but it is something that could happen in five years' time.

Mr. Robichaud: They won't be here in five years.

Mr. Marchi: My hon. friend says not in five years because they will not be in government. That is a very true statement.

What I have pointed out is a serious part of the legislation. While we are proposing to transfer responsibility from the City of Toronto to the federal Government to operate the airport, we are losing some conditions which, in 1983, the citizens fought very hard to include in the lease arrangement in order that their communities and interests would be protected. The Bill is very wishy-washy on those terms and on those conditions.

There is another issue to which we in the Liberal Party took exception, that is to say, that the Government did not permit the right of occasional access for individuals living on the Island. Witnesses who appeared before the committee said that during certain times in winter the ferry they take to get to the Island is not permitted to dock at the regular place and it therefore docks at the Toronto Island Airport. These residents would get off the ferry at that point, cross some airport land and go into their communities and homes. What the witnesses basically said is that they would like some kind of agreement that when they disembark at the Toronto Island Airport, they are permitted to cross those lands to get to their homes. We put that suggestion into the form of an amendment. That amenedment was turned down. We still do not know why. What would be so wrong if we were to allow the right of way, if you will, of these individuals during a particular part of the year to travel a few feet across that land in order to get to their homes? By refusing this, what we have done is to have left this very important tradition, if you will, to the good will of the commissioners, which then becomes simply a discretionary favour. We in this Party cannot explain why the Government did not extend that courtesy to individuals who have already made this their practice over the last number of years.

There is also the question of expropriation. Here again is an indication of the fuzzines and confusion of this particular piece of legislation. In Clause 5(1) there are provisions for the commissioners to extend expropriationary powers, and in Clause 5(2) those powers are removed. Therefore, witnesses came forward to the committee saying that if Clause 5(2) says we do not have these powers, then why bother having Clause 5(1)? The other important question is, why introduce those new powers? It goes back to the terms of the lease. One of the conditions was that the Toronto Island Airport was not permitted to expand beyond its present capacity. Therefore, we would not need the powers of expropriation. For what purpose would you need expropriationary powers if in fact the airport, by the terms and conditions of the lease, was not permitted to expand? Therefore, when individuals living on the Island and interest groups look at Clause 5(1), they are alarmed, and for good reason. They feel that the condition that the airport was not permitted to expand will be undermined. Once again, we made suggestions in committee and the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) during second reading drew to the attention of the House and the Minister—I believe it was the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) who introduced second reading for the Government—the suggestion that he should take a close look at the whole question of expropriation. He enforced that by saying that there was no mention in the Bill of an appeal process for those citizens. The whole question of expropriation is one which gives a very alarming signal to Torontonians, particularly those individuals who live on the Island.

Another aspect of the issue with which this Party cannot agree is with respect to the consulting process which the Government undertook. It was a struggle to get witnesses to come before the committee because Conservative members of the legislative committee who looked at Bill C-76 did not want to hear witnesses.

An Hon. Member: Order.

Mr. Marchi: They agreed reluctantly to hear only a number of witnesses in a very hurried-up process.

Bill C-76 is not an omnibus Bill. It is a particular and specific piece of legislation which has the greatest impact on the airport, people living on the Island, environmental groups, naturalist organizations and Torontonians in general. Therefore, this Party, through the Hon. Member for Davenport, suggested that it would be logical, sensitive and productive to conduct a public meeting, preferably on the Island, to look at Bill C-76 in order to provide the greatest opportunity for individuals in Toronto to come before that committee and explain their fears and aspirations with respect to Bill C-76. Again, that recommendation was turned down by members of the Government and, again, this Party asks why, as do other Canadians. Why do they turn down an opportunity to allow for greater input into what is basically a very localized issue? It would have only meant an extra meeting or two but it would have assured us that before proceeding in this House we would have the concurrence of individuals who would be directly affected by this Bill. But it seems that the Government just likes to talk about consultation. It tells us it likes to talk to Canadians in order to reach a broad consensus. But when it comes down to the point of whether the Government will do it or not, it does not. It is like the de Havilland situation. The Government said how great the deal was. It told us: "Here is a corporation whose shareholders are Canadians living from coast to coast". Yet it was a struggle to get information from the Government and it was a struggle to get a committee to investigate the de Havilland situation. This particular piece of legislation can be looked at from the same perspective. The opportunity for discussion and input from residents of the City of Toronto, who are involved directly in this situation, was turned down by the Government.

Another matter is the approach the Government takes in looking at Bill C-76. We had an indication of this by the Parliamentary Secretary who quoted statistics about the landings and take-offs, and perhaps more so by the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) in his speech at the beginning of second reading in which he told us how many planes land, how many planes take off, and the fact that we are going to expand the airport, that we are going to get a new control tower and so on. But the Government looked at this from a very narrow perspective. It looked upon this issue as purely a landing and taking-off type of operation. It failed to look at the whole infrastructure of the Island.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Marchi: Hon. Members opposite laugh.

Mr. Forrestall: What do you do with an airport except take off and land?

Mr. Marchi: Perhaps they laugh because they do not understand the seriousness and complexity of the infrastructure surrounding this particular airport. The Island should not only be looked at as a take-off and landing strip for Dash-7's and Dash-8's. That is only one part of what the Island is used for. It is a beautiful set of islands. Perhaps Hon. Members opposite who are laughning do not understand that on Ward Island there is a beautiful community of individuals and families. They also probably do not understand that there are parks and trails on these islands and that this is a green oasis for some 250 bird species. Millions of birds are counted annually on that island. There are countless environmental groups, naturalist organizations, and visiting children who go to the Island each and every single day.

The islands are used as a recreational and environmental centre for Torontonians. In the hub of one of the largest cosmopolitan cities in the world, these islands represent an escape valve, an environmental treasure. So it is fine to look at the question from the aerospace perspective, but that should be complemented by the other issues I have outlined. We cannot separate the two because the entire infrastructure is there on the Island. Therefore, to look at the islands as just a take-off and landing pad is a mistake. We in this Parliament are also responsible to the individuals who live on the islands and their recreational and environmental aspects.

That brings us back to the initial terms and conditions arrived at in 1983. It did not happen by chance or by accident that those terms and conditions were drafted as they were. They resulted from public hearings and input from environmental groups and residents of the City of Toronto. It was only then that the federal Government negotiated the agreement which secured the viability of the islands for the various individuals and groups. This Bill could have offered the protection those individuals and groups were looking for if the Government had at the very outset, in the interpretation clause, specified very clearly once and for all that the terms and conditions of the lease agreement are still in force. Had that been done, we would not have needed to talk about expropriation. We would not have needed to give additional powers to the commissioners to write by-laws. The conditions would set the course and determine how the airport was managed.

The Parliamentary Secretary said that the Hon. Member for Davenport all of a sudden has concerns that he did not have some years ago. Of course he has come concerns now because in 1983 there was no cause for concern. The concerns were addressed in the lease arrangement. He is concerned now, as am I and my Party, because those terms and conditions are very fuzzy and iffy because they are not referred to in this legislation. Therefore, even though we are at third reading, I had hoped the committee and the Government would have accepted the amendment we put forward to indicate very clearly that the terms and conditions fought for and on behalf of the City of Toronto residents, Island residents and environmental groups and organizations, would still be respected. That is not the case and that is why we fear this legislation is not as strong as it should be.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I am partly in agreement with the Hon. Member who has just spoken. This Bill is not what it should have been. However, I think on one major point the work of the committee may have been useful, although the Parliamentary Secretary gave me some reason to be uncertain about that. The main concern expressed is that this should not become a jet port or an airport which will accommodate noisy planes or such a large volume of planes as to disrupt the surface traffic patterns downtown. The main reason for a large volume would be the landing of jets, quite apart from the question of their noise. This was the central part of a debate in Toronto City Council for several years which resulted in that lease arrangement referred to. That allowed a STOL port but not a jet port. The main concern of our Party was to focus on that and make sure this Bill was written in a clear enough way so that the conditions of the lease regarding the use of jets could be protected.

Our concern was in part whether the lease would be superseded by the legislation. Various opinions were given. However, there was an amendment agreed to by the Government as follows. Where it says that the commissioners shall, in accordance with the terms of any agreement entered into, and so on, make by-laws for the regulation and control of the airport, et cetera, it refers to jet-powered aircraft. In other words, they shall do this in accordance with the terms of any agreement they have entered into. That, I take it, includes the lease. It also says that they may, in a like manner and subject to like conditions, as in the case of by-laws, make by-laws and so on, but where there is no such agreement they may or may not. But where there is an agreement, they shall do it in accordance with the agreement. I am hopeful that that amendment will protect the effect of the lease signed three years ago. I was made a little less certain of that when the Parliamentary Secretary said that jets are now permitted to land there in an emergency.

Mr. Forrestall: Of course they are.

Mr. Heap: He adds: "Of course they are".

Mr. Forrestall: If you lost your wings and there was a runway under you, where would you go?

Mr. Heap: However, he has opened the prospect, through enlarging the runways and bringing in more sophisticated control equipment, of encouraging a great many more emergencies.

Mr. Mazankowski: You would rather see the passengers perish?

Mr. Heap: We know the Government of Canada has traditionally had a very flexible idea of what is an emergency. That is to say, there are emergency powers under the War Measures Act, which the Government has liked to use in other times than wartime or even when there was not an emergency. An example would be during the four years following World War II. I hope it is not the intention to redefine "emergency" to allow frequent or even regular landing of jets on the Toronto Island Airport. There are some other concerns as well, but that is the central concern and I am very happy that the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young), with the support of the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), was able to persuade the committee to introduce at least that amendment. Perhaps had there been more foresight we would have asked for a better definition of the word "emergency". I understand the Minister agrees with his Parliamentary Secretary because he was shouting that we do not want them to have to use parachutes.

Mr. Mazankowski: No, I did not say that. I said I don't want the pilots and passengers to perish. That is what I said. Perish. Die.

Mr. Heap: I thought you said parachutes. No one is asking that they should perish. What I am concerned about is that future regulations of Government do not stretch that word "emergency" beyond what is absolutely necessary for life. It should not be used as a regular alternative landing field instead of Pearson Airport.

Some of the other concerns dealt with the matter of the tunnel. Nothing in the amendments prevents the building of the tunnel except the terms of the lease. The terms of the lease can be changed with the agreement of City Council, as can the terms reflecting the use of jet planes. However, there can be pressures put, through extension of the runways and facilities, such as to make it almost impossible to refuse the use of a tunnel. In other words, there will be a creeping extension of the airport which will perhaps some day include a tunnel. This is something that the people of the City of Toronto and Toronto City Council will need to watch very carefully.

A tunnel at the Toronto Island Airport could have two very destructive results. It could eventually bring an unlimited number of private automobiles onto the Toronto Island. At present there are some vehicles there which are strictly under the control of the Metro Parks Department. The Island is a wonderfully quiet and restful place for that reason. In the area in which there are several hundred houses people can walk and children can play without dodging cars. There is no traffic noise there and it is a very restful place. The whole park area is, likewise, restful. There are a few maintenance vehicles such as the fire engine and the police vehicles, but they are driven by public servants who operate with that sense of obligation. The park is a very valuable resource for 200,000 to 300,000 people who live in the downtown area of Toronto. Many other people go there as well, but it is particularly used by people from the downtown area where there are very few parks and there is a great deal of hot concrete in the summertime.

It is predicted that by the end of this decade the number of passenger movements will be increased by one-third from 150,000 to 250,000 per year. Presumably they will be further increased after the end of this decade. There is a concern that the tunnel would provide a means of bringing cars onto the Island as well as bringing passengers to the airport.

A further problem exists with that tunnel at its other end. The harbour front is becoming a residential and recreational area for the people of Toronto. Residential buildings to house

2,000 or 3,000 people will be built immediately adjacent to the parking lot for the present ferry terminal in two or three years. There are already residential buildings approximately one-half mile to the east, but these will be directly adjacent to the terminal near the foot of Bathurst.

To have the airport eventually linked up to a renewed Spadina Expressway, to the terminus of a Scarborough expressway, and to the terminus of the 400 extension from the northwest, all pointing to downtown Toronto and carrying an immense amount of traffic to the Toronto Island Airport, would considerably disrupt the present fairly stable life of downtown Toronto. The commercial areas as well as the residential areas there are at present in a reasonable equilibrium, but are full to completion. A motivation for bringing new expressways downtown would endanger considerably the present balance of life in downtown Toronto.

The fears of many people were confirmed by the news stories published as soon as this Bill passed committee hearings. The news stories indicate that the purpose of this legislation is more than meets the eye. It is more than simply to take the financial burden off of City Council, the reason given for its introduction. The news stories reflected the Minister's speech given at the beginning of this debate. They say that there could be a $20 million expansion of the airport including refurbishing of the terminal building, more modern control towers, state of the art computerized landing equipment, increased parking facilities, and so on. Another headline in the same Liberal paper, The Toronto Star, says that the door is now open to an island tunnel. A similar headline in The Globe and Mail says that the tunnel to the Toronto Island Airport is likely.

That could be a serious matter, Mr. Speaker. The suggested purpose for this expenditure of public funds is to enable the airport to be privatized. In other words, the suggestion is that the Government will be following the pattern of pouring public money into a losing public project until it is almost at the point of viability, as it did with de Havilland, and then, having made it profitable with more public money, it will sell it off to a private entrepreneur. In that case controls on the use of the Toronto Island Airport will be far more difficult to maintain. We will find that by-laws and leases will be treated very lightly after it has been made a valuable plum for sale by the Government and sold to a private entrepreneur.

The Bill will go through, and the principal and immediate problem felt by a great many people in the City of Toronto appears to have been placed under some control by the amendment regarding the lease. However, there is still a considerable danger that those who have had the effective control of this, such as the Hon. Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), will be using public funds for the up-grading of the Toronto Island Airport so that it can be sold to private entrepreneurs who, of course, are the friends of the Government. The Government refuses to use those funds to upgrade effectively bus transport or rail transport, such as that in the Windsor to Quebec City and Toronto to Ottawa corridors. We are still running old rattletrap trains there, when they are not broken down or running late.

The Minister is presumably going to refuse to put more money into a mode of transport that can carry everyone at an economic price, and will, rather, be pouring those dollars into the airport. The people of Toronto will be watching to see what the Government does in the next year or so with the airport that Toronto produced but that other people now wish to take over.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, it might be useful to Members if I begin by reiterating briefly the comments I made in my opening remarks with respect to any capital structural changes. All investments at the Toronto Island Airport will be carried out only after full consultation with the City of Toronto and the harbour commissioners, and within the terms and conditions of the lease agreement. The Hon. Member has raised a very legitimate question. The lease very specifically prohibits the construction of a bridge or vehicular tunnel from the mainland to the Island. While the lease would in fact permit the construction of a pedestrian tunnel only, it is the position of the Government, which was also the position of the previous Government, that, unless the City of Toronto agrees to and supports the construction of a pedestrian tunnel, the Department, as a signatory to the lease itself, would not support any plans for any form of an access tunnel including a pedestrian one. I thought I would make those two points, which may set the hon. gentleman's mind at rest.

The previous speaker had some concerns about embracing the right of access in the Bill. The difficulty with that is that no one has ever had a right of access. In order to maintain safety and control of the ninth busiest airport in Canada, people cannot be allowed to cross a very active runway on their own volition. It must be in the control of the operators of the airport.

Historically, access across airport land has been a matter of negotiation between the people on the Island and the operators of the airport, and it has seemed to work very well. So far there has not been any difficulty and, quite frankly, we do not foresee any difficulty in the future.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I want to intervene briefly in this debate on Bill C-76. My colleagues, the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) and the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap), were active in the committee as well as at second reading stage of the Bill. Of course, the Bill is of more direct concern to them and other Members from the Metropolitan Toronto area.

However, there are developments in this case which are very similar to developments in other airports that will occur particularly in the months and years ahead. I believe this should be brought to the attention of the Ministry.

With the expansion of air traffic, the number of aircraft, the landings and take-offs, the number of passenger airlines, the infrastructure for airports and the personnel required to operate them and protect the public interest must also increase. I believe that this infrastructure must increase before, not after the fact.

The Canadian Aviation Safety Board recently announced that it would hold a public inquiry into the risk of collisions involving aircraft on the ground, in response to a dramatic increase in near misses since 1983. There were 73 reported incidents in 1983, 124 in 1984, and over 200 in 1985. I agree that this increase justifies such an inquiry, especially when one considers the economic changes contemplated by the Minister's office in the form of deregulation, reregulation or a new regulatory regime. One must also consider the fact that the Department of Finance and the Treasury Board have a hypnotized attitude about the deficit and have applied pressure to cut costs and the size of the Public Service.

Of course, there are appropriate areas in which cuts or delayed expenditures can be made. However, some areas should not be cut, including some for which there is no complaint from the taxpayers about how much of their money is spent. These areas include proper, safe and secure facilities whether it is airports, railroads or other facilities. I have yet to hear a taxpayer of any political stripe complain about such expenditures. In fact, they would support increased expenditures in that area.

The situation will not improve if the same number of people or fewer must monitor the movement of increased traffic, whether it is at Toronto Island Airport or anywhere else.

Another statistic which needs the attention of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, the Minister and the Government is the equally dramatic increase in what are called internally operating irregularities while in the air. In 1984, 92 incidents were reported where public safety may have been jeopardized and the minimum separation between aircraft was violated. The number of such incidents in 1985 was 164. This is of particular concern at a place like Toronto Island Airport with its high and ever-increasing volume of general aviation traffic. According to my information, Toronto Island Airport currently has the required number of traffic controllers to do the job. However, that is not the case for all airports. I urge the Minister and the Government to re-evaluate their policies of reducing the number of air traffic control staff by some 142 as a result of the A-base review.

Not only is an inquiry on ground near misses and air near misses necessary, a complete study of ground control and air control needs for the future must be conducted, including a clear assessment of our flight service station needs and airline dispatcher requirements. If the Government intends to move in the direction of more local control of airports, the structure of monitoring those aspects of air safety must be strengthened. There must be as many inspectors in the field as necessary, even a few more than necessary, to ensure that the job is done and to keep tight control while we undergo these changes in both regulation and jurisdiction.

As I mentioned to the Minister in Question Period today, once the taxpayer has committed and spent millions of dollars to build and maintain a large airport infrastructure, and deregulation or a new regulatory regime allows an airline to pull out of an airport simply to suit its convenience or meet its "sound business practice", it would seem to leave the taxpayers in the lurch, with an airport on which they spent tens of millions of dollars. There must be some reasonable provision so that expenditures for such an infrastructure are not left idle, underused or wasted.

Last year, the people of Canada spent over $6 million at Gander airport to improve it as an international airport. We do not know how many more millions of dollars were spent in the years prior to that. If Air Canada can decide, in the interest of "sound business practice", to pull out of Gander and go to St. John's, what will other international airlines do? If we enlarge the international operations out of St. John's, the taxpayers who have already spent a great deal in upgrading and improving the Gander airport will then be called upon to upgrade, improve and enlarge the facilities in St. John's. Other airlines operating internationally will say: "Well, this has all been done by Air Canada. Now that the Government has improved and enlarged the facilities in St. John's, we want to pull out of Gander too and go to St. John's."

There are two questions. What about the people and the employees at Gander, and what about the investment we have in Gander? It seems to me that some kind of long term planning needs to be done, although I know my good friends across the way are not noted for what is called long term, and in their books, there is paranoia about state planning, but in this area and in this instance it is more than justified. Then you allow your transportation industry, in this instance the airlines, to operate relatively freely within the context of that long term planning.

What I said earlier about Toronto Island Airport is now applied to Gander, so let us go back to Toronto Island Airport. That airport will need more improvements, not only a control tower but other items as well. It will need more personnel because traffic is bound to increase. It will need all of that and so will a lot of other airports in the country. You can do none of it if you continue in an atmosphere of paranoia and hypnosis about cut-backs, restraint, reducing the budget in an area that has to do not just with public convenience and the convenience of airlines or general aviation operators, but with safety and security. Those surely are not the kinds of areas you cut back on.

The cut-back of 142 controllers as a result of the A-base review, whatever the dickens that is, is the opposite direction. My colleague and good friend, the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East (Mr. Belsher), the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) and I along with other colleagues were in Washington the last three days. If there was any one thing that was urged upon us from people both for, against and in the middle of deregulation, it was not to make the same mistakes they did. The main one and the one urged upon us by people from both sides of the argument was to put in place, before opening the entries and exists, a sufficient number of trained inspectors to allow for a 10 per cent, 20 per cent, 30 per cent increase in aircraft. This would require a proportionate increase in inspections and enforcement of regulations having to do with safety and security.

They told us that after the 1978 legislation in Washington which brought in deregulation in transportation, because of the drive to reduce the deficit, to cut-back and show restraint the Americans chopped 200 inspectors from the Federal Aviation Administration. They have had to frantically try to replace them.

As I recall, and my colleagues will correct me if I am wrong, they have replaced 166 of them and are now rushing to get trained, hired and put in place something in the order of 150 to 200 more inspectors this year and 250 or 300 next year in an effort to catch up with the growth and increase in airline and general aviation traffic. That kind of preparation in advance is particularly applicable to the high volume airports. I believe I heard someone say today that Toronto Island is fourth or fifth highest in the country in movements—

An Hon. Member: It is ninth.

Mr. Benjamin: That makes it a pretty high volume airport. You do not wait until after you have that increased movement to put in place people who have to be there to provide more than sufficient air traffic control, inspection and enforcement of regulations. That situation applies to every airport in Canada.

Therefore, if you are going to be ready for increased activity at Toronto Island, if you are going to be ready under whatever kind of regime the Minister wants to bring in, you better start now. Budget increases had better be reflected in some very quick Supplementary Estimates which would have the support on all sides of this House. If the Minister has a problem with the Treasury Board, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay), he will have the support of Members from all sides to get the increases required to train, hire and place more inspectors, more air traffic controllers, better enforcement capabilities and a better investigative capability.

We all know, and we were told in Washington earlier this week, that the increase in violation, whether loss of separation in the air, near misses or even the odd accident on the ground, is just not tolerable. The increase in Canada in the same kinds of incidences is not tolerable. We do not have the capacity to deal with it. I do not blame our lack of capacity on the present Government.

I remember a reduction of something like 19 inspectors as per the Estimates back about 1976 or 1977 when we needed more inspectors, not less. This was at the time of the six and five program of cut-backs, restraing and whatnot. The Government cut back in the wrong places which increased risk and increased the possibility of problems. Let us quit waiting until there is some kind of a tragedy, when we all rush to close the barn door after the fact.

We need to be more prepared to handle certain situations with our present volume of air traffic. We must be prepared ahead of time for an increased volume. I am making a wild guess, but I suspect the Minister needs at least $100 million or $200 million in his budget for the training and placement of inspectors, for investigations capacity, air traffic control and the facilities and structure they need to carry on a proper job.

What is being done here today with the Toronto Island Airport requires more than just looking at what a new contractual agreement will be with the City of Toronto and the Toronto Harbour Commission and the federal authority. It is what is done before, during and after the entering of such agreements. If we are going to be slack and lacking as we have been and as we are now, we are just asking for that much more trouble, and we increase the odds that we will get a lot more trouble.

I hope the Minister will be hearing from his colleagues who were in Washington as well. We should learn from their mistakes. We cannot copy everything they have done, because our situation is very much different. However, we can and should learn from their errors, about which they were quite candid in telling us. If we do not learn from them, we place in jeopardy the people in Canada who have to travel.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

PETROLEUM AND GAS REVENUE TAX ACT INCOME TAX ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-82, an Act to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act and the Income Tax Act, as reported (without amendment) from a legislative committee.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (for the Minister of State for Finance) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Mazankowski (for the Minister of State for Finance) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-82 is an important piece of legislation. In fact, it can be considered a cornerstone of the Western Accord which was announced by my colleague, the Hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney), on March 28, 1985. This event marked the end of more than a decade of dispute between the federal Government and western provincial Governments concerning energy pricing and taxation.

As my colleagues on this side of the House have emphasized in the preceding debates on the Bill, the Act to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act contains the necessary changes to speed the oil and gas industry along the road to recovery.

To refresh the memories of Hon. Members, the Bill contains four significant policy changes to the PGRT. It will completely phase out the PGRT by reducing the existing tax rates applied to both conventional oil and gas production and synthetic production in a gradual fashion over the next three years, ending up with a zero per cent rate in 1989.

A second change is designed to stimulate new activity immediately. The Bill allows a full tax exemption for revenues from new wells drilled after March 31, 1985. In addition, enhanced oil recovery projects including waterfloods are provided with options that will result in a more favourable treatment during the remaining years of the PGRT. Major new projects will also be exempt.

A third change was introduced which will assist companies that are able to realize income tax savings from new exploration and development expenditures under the regular income tax. A new mechanism was included in the Bill which will allow 30 per cent of the value of new unused exploration and development expenditures to be applied against the PGRT.

The final new measure included in the Bill is a $10,000 annual deduction for individuals starting with the 1986 tax year. This measure will remove the burden of the tax for several thousand Canadians who have very small amounts of royalty income from producing oil and gas wells. I commend the Bill to all Hon. Members for their approval.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to participate in the debate on Bill C-82. Our critic, the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan), had to be absent from the House this afternoon. He has asked me too make a few comments on it.

I have gone over the speech of the Minister at second reading and have looked at the debates in committee. I tried to imagine how a person from Ottawa-Vanier, a consumer like me, would look at the proposed legislation to phase out the PGRT over a period of three years, in terms of what it does for consumers and for multinational oil companies, in terms of what it does for those who have received so much from the Government and for those who are still expecting so much from the Government.

By removing the PGRT, which was worth about $2 billion per year in revenue to the Government, the Government gave in to the wish of the industry. During the election campaign, the PGRT issue was indeed a hot one. The Leader of my Party, The Right Hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner), made a commitment to review this measure which was considered harsh by many and which was taxing revenues but not taxing income. In my view, and in the view of many people who think in similar terms, it was a fair object of review.

With the removal of the National Energy Program, the Government gave away a lot of revenue to the oil industry, to the oil companies operating in Canada; so much so that predictions indicate that their incomes will increase by about 160 per cent by the end of the decade. The elimination of the PGRT by itself will increase profits to the companies in the order of 75 per cent in the same decade. At the wave of the magic wand, the Government gave up revenue or income for the Canadian public and gave it to the oil companies.

I return to my original thought concerning what a consumer like me will get from all this. We want lower prices, and I think consumers can expect them. I will get to the debate on lower prices for oil because market prices for oil are going down these days. It is apropos that we will be talking to that subject in a few minutes. However, before dealing with that subject matter, I want to review some of the comments made by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) and to look at the promises made by her Party during the last election campaign. When the Energy Minister was speaking to the Cities and Energy Conference in March, 1985, in Vancouver, she described deregulation as "much better" for consumers. She said:

> This is especially true in today's world of falling international oil prices.

That is very interesting, since deregulation of the industry on June 1 the consumer has seen prices rise mainly because of the increased taxes with which the Government has burdened the consumer. The Government removed the PGRT so that oil companies would not have to pay the tax and told consumers that they would have to foot the bill. Today we see that prices at the pump are going up.

World prices started to waver, to quiver and to show some decline when the OPEC countries started to have difficulty getting along and world prices were dropping in January. The price paid at the pumps in January this year took another jump. Remember, the Government added another 1 per cent sales tax, from 10 per cent to 11 per cent in January. That was reflected immediately in the cost of gasoline at the pump. Yet the Energy Minister said things would be much better for consumers. It possibly is much better for the consumer, and being a chiropractor I think it is good that people should walk more. If you are earning a living, and if you are a salesman, a farmer, or if you are travelling for any type of income then you have to pay higher prices at the pump because the oil companies are getting a nice generous gift from the Government.

I just want to come back—

Mr. Boudria: If the oil companies don't get you, the Tories will.

Mr. Gauthier: I want to refer to a table that was leaked after the last Budget. It is entitled "Direct Impacts of Budget Measures by National Accounts Component". This document, interesting as it was, reveals that the indirect taxes and the increase in the energy excise taxes will bring into the Government about $395 million additional in 1985-86, $930 million in 1986-87 and $915 million by 1990-91.

The removal and the phasing out of the PGRT, interestingly enough, was going to cause—

—what is called in French a "manque à gagner", I am not sure what it is in English. So we are talking about a $125 million less revenue in 1985-86. The Government will lose $125 million in revenue in 1985-86, $920 million in 1986-87, and $2.449 billion in 1990-91. It means that the Government will have to get the money from Canadian consumers. It means that it will be forced to raise taxes, as it has done already. The sales tax increase from 10 to 11 per cent will generate just about enough money in 1986-87 to compensate for the $920 million gift the Conservative Government gave to the companies through the PGRT. Consumers will pay $930 million more in taxes, so it works out to the same thing. They take the money from someone's pocket and put it in someone else's pocket. All we have to know is from which pocket the Government likes to take the money.

An Hon. Member: From both pockets!

Mr. Gauthier: Well, it seems obvious enough. From both pockets! Hopefully the new Budget will do justice to corporate taxes. We hope, we do not know, but we will see. Maybe there will be some justice in the system one of these days, but right now the consumer is the one who picks up the tab and gives the money to the Government which hands it out to the oil multinationals. You will all have time to speak. Do not worry, we have plenty of time. You will have an opportunity to rise one after another and repeat your partisan spiels.

Mrs. Mailly: Be objective!

Mr. Gauthier: Objectivity is my strong point.

[English]

In the same conference in Vancouver in March of 1985, which I referred to a few moments ago, the Minister told us, and I quote her again, "We can't be complacent that lower prices will continue over the long term". Therefore we have to do two things. The first is to build protection for consumers if international oil prices surge. The second is to get on with the job of conservation. International oil prices are not surging. They are falling drastically. The consumer in Canada does not benefit, and the question is why not? I could read a whole series of articles published January 22, 23, and 24. "Oil prices continue to fall but not at gas pumps". "We could wait months before gasoline prices drop", Carney, Toronto Star. "Oil prices continue to fall but not at gas pumps", Gazette. "Mulroney confuses PetroCan's role", Toronto Star, and it goes on.

"Carney predicts lower prices at gas pumps". "Rip-offs at the pumps", Calgary Sun. "Excessive gas prices cost us $8.5 million a day: Broadbent". "Wilson won't lower PetroCan's gas prices", the Gazette. I can go on, Mr. Speaker. In the Toronto Sar today "It is true, it has the right colour, it is true", on the headline. I am happy to see all my friends around here on a Friday afternoon. They are all welcome because we love to have these Friday afternoon debates. I was wondering if Petro-Canada would come across, as we thought it should, as it was intended it would. And for Canadians the window on the industry—

Mr. Marchi: Now it's the broken window.

Mr. Gauthier: It was to bring stability, it was supposed to assure adequate supply at fair prices. Remember, those were the things, a window on the industry, adequate supply and fair prices.

We see the oil prices tumbling and it is not easy to explain. I do not understand that. I am not an oil specialist. We look at the Toronto Star today and try and find out. Some of us have to rely on thenewspapers to get information sometimes. I see where the oil prices on the world spot market have plunged below $20 U.S. a barrel today, and that is $28.13 Canadian at yesterday's exchange rate. While Canadian oil is now supposedly deregulated and reacts to world prices, Canadian light crude oil is priced between $30.20 and $30.80 Canadian. That is $2.07 to $3.67 Canadian above world spot prices.

We are not at this time reflecting what I thought was a mandate of Petro-Canada to be the window and to keep prices at a fair level. No, we are telling the Canadians the spot price, the heck with it.

The next question is how do Canadian oil companies set their price on the barrel? A journalist, Mr. John Spears of the Toronto Star asked the question how Petro-Canada sets its price for a barrel of oil. The answer of Petro-Canada was no response, "we are not talking". Great help, that is a great window. As one of my Members said, somebody broke that window some time ago. No one at the Calgary head office of Petro-Canada, conceived as a window on the oil industry, could answer how, or explain for that matter how the price of a barrel of crude oil is fixed in Canada. He went to another company, Imperial Oil. In his own words, Imperial Oil Limited was more forthcoming. It has posted its price for crude lower than Petro-Canada at $30.20 Canadian or about $21.50 U.S. Again, a dollar and some cents above the spot market, the world price.

We wonder how these Conservatives, supposedly well informed Members of Parliament on the Government side can continue to support such a policy as transferring wealth from the consumers of Canada, the Canadian public in general, to those oil compagnies which will not have the decency to even give us an answer. I can see that you are indicating I have but five minutes left, Mr. Speaker. I think that I have unlimited time on third reading. I would appreciate if Your Honour would advise me as to how much time I do have since I have some notes I would like to go through.

The Minister told us that market prices were at work. She said that we have to rely on the market because the market sets the price. She told us that her Government believes in deregulation and in market prices. Some of us would like to know what the market is doing. We would like to be able to explain to our constituents why it is that when they get to the gas pump they have to pay a 58 per cent increase in taxes on gasoline. This is the amount they had to pay last year. I will repeat the figure for the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly)—58 per cent.

Mrs. Mailly: Yours was 80 per cent.

Mr. Gauthier: Right now this is costing Canadians about $1 billion. In 1990 it will cost Canadians about $2.5 billion in lost revenue, which the oil companies will receive. How can the Hon. Member stand up in her riding and tell the tourists that come to Gatineau, whom she wants to draw there—

Mrs. Mailly: Gas costs less in Gatineau now than when you were in power.

Mr. Gauthier: How can the Hon. Member justify that to people in her riding?

Mrs. Mailly: By creating jobs. People once working in Alberta have now come home to work.

Mr. Gauthier: I want to talk about creating jobs. In Nova Scotia, for example, oil and gas searches were carried out by the private sector under PIP grants. Do Hon. Members remember the Petroleum Incentives Program?

An Hon. Member: We remember it!

Mr. Gauthier: It created jobs.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: It created jobs in the Beaufort Sea and in the Atlantic.

Mrs. Mailly: It created jobs in Belgium!

Mr. Gauthier: All the urban Tories who are in the House are laughing. All the urban Tories who are laughing should talk to some of those people in the eastern provinces just to find out how many rigs are working right now in Nova Scotia. There was but one rig working last year. When PIP was in effect there were many rigs working, sometimes up to a dozen, and at other times even more than that.

Mrs. Mailly: They were in the States.

Mr. Dick: They could buy them. You gave the money away to the rich people.

Mr. Gauthier: You will get your chance to speak on this later.

Mr. Dick: You gave them $2 billion.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I take it that I do have unlimited time—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No, you do not.

Mr. Gauthier: If I do not have unlimited time, then I would like to get on and deal with what the Government is doing in terms of oil conservation. I take it that the Tory Members in the House believe in energy conservation. I take it they believe in insulation as well. What has the Government done in this respect? It took away the insulation program. The Government even imposed a tax on wood stoves, which is a way to heat homes. I hope that over the weekend I will be doing some wood stove heating because it is agreeable and it saves energy. We did not tax wood stoves before.

Mr. Boudria: The Tories did that?

Mr. Gauthier: The Tories did that.

Mr. Boudria: Unbelievable!

Mr. Gauthier: They should tell that to the farmers in their constituencies. That was a great progressive move.

Mrs. Mailly: They don't have to pay capital gains on the sale of their farms.

Mr. Gauthier: What does the Conservative Government do with the taxes? It gives them away to the oil companies.

I see, Mr. Speaker, you are indicating to me that I have but two minutes left.

Some Hon. Members: Too bad!

Mr. Dick: You are usually more rational.

Mr. Gauthier: I would just like to put some statistics on the record, which is something I am sure the Hon. Member for Gatineau would love me to do. Let us consider how much taxes have risen in the 12-month period from October 1984 to October 1985. As I have said before, the Government raised taxes by 58.1 per cent. That is incredible. In the United States motorists have been benefiting from the falling oil prices. The Americans have kept up with the times, they have not had any tax increases. In fact, their level of taxes has remained steady.

In Halifax, in October of 1984, the price of a litre of regular gasoline was 52.6 cents. In October 1985, the price of a litre of gasoline in Halifax had risen to 57.7 cents. This is as a result of a policy put into place by a Government which states that when gas and oil prices decline it will impose more taxes just in case the consumers should have an advantage over the big friends of Government. I am speaking of the big oil companies. The Government makes it difficult for the consumer, and especially hard for farmers. I am looking at my friend, the Hon. Member for Mississauga North (Mr. Horner).

Mr. Horner: There is not one farmer in my riding.

Mr. Gauthier: He does not have one farmer in his riding. He should have. It would make him more sensitive to their needs. Farmers have to buy gas and oil. If greater taxes are imposed on farmers, their profits are reduced and they have a difficult time with the administration of their farms. As an urban man the Hon. Member should understand that.

The Minister says that it will take a few months before lower priced oil works itself into the system. That is a very interesting point. When oil prices were going up, the oil companies were saying: "We have to ratchet the price of oil right now because it is going up". However, when the price is going down the Minister says that the product has to work itself through the system and that market forces are at work. That is excellent logic. The oil companies ratchet the price—

An Hon. Member: What does ratchet mean?

Mr. Gauthier: It means to ratchet up. That is what the Government has been doing with these taxes. That is how it gains income. It is affecting the consumers in the country to the extent that today they are paying through the nose for things they should be getting at a fair price, which was the idea at the inception of the National Energy Program. We assured Canadians that they would have a constant supply of oil at a fair price. Now, Hon. Members on the Government side should get their act together and tell the Minister to keep oil prices down. They should be telling their Minister to keep the price of gasoline down at the pumps as well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Calgary North (Mr. Gagnon).

Mr. Gagnon: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment with respect to the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). First, he should be congratulated on his remarks. I have never heard a speech with so many half-truths and so much misinformation. He has certainly shown that this is a subject about which he knows very little.

I would like to deal with some specifics. The PRGT is a unique tax on one certain extractive industry, that is to say the oil and gas industry located in western Canada. Can the Hon. Member point out to me a comparable tax which is levied on other extractive industries, such as the nickel industry in Sudbury, or the copper ore industry, or the iron ore industry which is found in Labrador and Quebec, or on the asbestos or gold industry? Is there a gold revenue tax? The Hon. Member must remember that this measure was simply a grab for a great deal of money—in fact, $2 billion a year.

The second point the Hon. Member fails to mention is that the consumer receives the money. If he were to look at the facts he would see that part of the National Energy Program gave $1.7 billion a year in dividends to the oil companies. Another $500 million a year went through the system under the Petroleum Compensation Charges. Who received that money? Again, it was the oil industry. And the Hon. Member says that the consumer pays! The oil companies are the ones who have benefited the most, the Essos, the Gulfs, the Mobils, the Shells and the Domes—the big, big companies. All that and the Hon. Member has the nerve to say that the consumer pays. I suggest the hon. gentleman get his facts straight.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, the PGRT helped to pay for the PIP grants. I accept that, and I think it is a fact. The PIP was to encourage companies, especially Canadian ones, to explore and find new supplies of oil in areas which were not being explored through conventional measures by the oil companies at the time. I am thinking about the Canada lands and the offshore and the Arctic lands. Evidently, to encourage these large companies to explore lands in the north—

Mr. Dick: Drilling for money, not for reasons.

Mr. Gauthier: —we had to encourage them through the Petroleum Incentives Program.

Mr. Dick: All they did was drill for money. They drilled to get the money.

Mr. Gauthier: The Hon. Member says they were drilling for money. Does anyone else drill for anything else? They were drilling for oil and they found some—

Mr. Dick: Very little.

Mr. Gauthier: —which we now have—

Mr. Dick: Where are they putting it?

Mr. Gauthier: —and unfortunately with this Government it will be difficult to bring it down here because its policies are making them go bankrupt and getting out of there.

Mr. Dick: They love it.

Mr. Gauthier: That is the difficulty with this Government. It does not understand—

Mr. Dick: You don't know anything about the oil industry. Why don't you admit it?

Mr. Gauthier: —that basically at the time the program set in place was to make the PIP program available to industries so that—

Mr. Dick: Don't believe it.

Mr. Gauthier: —they did better and could better explore in Canada.

Mr. Dick: You don't know what you are talking about.

Mr. Gauthier: I think that assured Canadians of a constant and sure supply of Canadian oil and that was basically why the PGRT was put in place.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I was interested to hear the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) talking about a subject about which he knows nothing.

Mr. Gauthier: I will admit I am not the expert you are.

Mr. Dick: I do not intend to get into it because I do not think I know as much as some of the people who live in the area where the oil is found. I will not try to embarrass myself by trying to talk about something I know nothing about.

Would the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier not agree that when the oil prices were going up in the mid-1970s that his Government introduced a policy that it could not pass on the new higher rates to the consumer for three months because it took that long for the oil to work through the industry and get to the pump? Will the Hon. Member agree to that?

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, the National Energy Program, as I understand it, and as I understood it—

Mr. Dick: Not the national energy policy. It was in the mid-1970s.

Mr. Gauthier: Does the Hon. Member want to continue his question or does he want me to answer the question?

Mr. Dick: Then why don't you answer it?

Mr. Gauthier: I am trying to answer the question, if the Hon. Member would give me a chance to start. The National Energy Program indeed tried to equalize prices for Canadians. It indeed subsidized the east. Wherever acted increases were put in place—and there were some increases. I would like to remind the Hon. Member that in 1972 when I came here, a barrel of oil was about $2.50 a barrel and a bushel of wheat was about $3.50 to $4. The bushel of wheat is still $3.50 to $4, yet a barrel of oil right now is about $20 U.S. although it was about $38 a barrel.

Yes, indeed, there was a crisis at the time. Yes, indeed, the OPEC countries were establishing their right to their natural resources, and I do not disagree with that. I do not think I would argue very long with the Hon. Member about the need to increase the oil prices and the exchange rate on oil versus grain. I don't think any argument can be made there. I do not think anyone here would disagree with the fact that oil, which is no-renewable, had to command a higher price than $2.50 a barrel. None of us would argue with that.

Mr. Dick: I know that.

Mr. Gauthier: Yet, it would have been economically difficult for Canadians at that time to be the object of the "seven sisters", of the big oil companies which had control of the industry, world-wide, at the expense of those companies in Canada. Therefore we tried to put in a system which would be a buffer and which would give the oil a chance to work its way through. Yes, there was a three-month delay in trying to get the increases, but at the pump.

Mr. Dick: Okay. I agree.

Mr. Gauthier: It was done pretty well immediately on the barrel of oil, I admit that. I have researched today and I will do more research on it tomorrow but every time the oil prices went up, every time there was even a rumour of oil prices going up, the gas prices went up at the pump.

Mr. Dick: Three months later.

Mr. Gauthier: That was the official policy of the gas companies and the Governments, and I do not believe that the gas and petroleum distributors, the persons selling gas at the pumps—

Mr. Dick: Your Government ruled they couldn't do it for three months.

An Hon. Member: Let him answer.

Mr. Gauthier: I am talking about at the pumps. They usually increased the price and they are still free to do so. By the admission of all of the companies today their distributors are free to set the price they want. Is that not true?

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Gauthier: Yes, it is. Look at the papers, look at the Government's policies, phone the companies; I did. I may not be the oil expert of the Hon. Members opposite but I know what to do and that is to do a bit of research and to make a few phone calls. When I found I was going to speak this afternoon, I made a few phone calls and I do not think I am wrong in stating the fact that the oil companies have told us that at the pump the distributor is free to set the price. It was the market force at that time. If the market force operates in that way all of the time, then there are some difficulties, but the Canadian energy program we put in place—

Mr. Dick: You insisted on a 90-day lag.

Mr. Gauthier: —was set on the oil prices as a whole which represented about 30 per cent of the input to the gas pump.

Mr. Dick: I want to compliment your Government for putting in the three-month lag.

Mr. Gauthier: If the Hon. Member wants to debate, why does he not get up? They cannot hear him on television and they would love to hear him.

We are making an argument in debate and we should be able to understand each other. I am telling the Hon. Member that, yes, there were some workings in those days of allowing for the increases but it was buffeted by the National Energy Program.

Mr. Dick: I agree.

Mr. Gauthier: Thank you for the agreement.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier finally did agree that there was a three-month lag for which I want to compliment his Government and he should recognize that there is also a three-month lag when the prices come down for the same reason.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on third reading of this Bill. I must say to people who are perhaps watching this debate on television that it is a beautiful afternoon in Ottawa. The skating rink is full. I was enjoying skating on the canal about 12 minutes ago—

Mr. Towers: That is something you know a lot about.

Mr. Waddell: —and they managed to find me and get me into this debate, and I do not object at all.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: It is an important debate and I do not mind being here to speak on the Bill, if my friends will listen.

An Hon. Member: You are on thin ice.

An Hon. Member: You had better start skating.

Mr. Waddell: I hear the heckles that it's thin ice and I had better get skating. I hear all the comments and I opened myself up to them. However, let me say a few things—

Mr. Boudria: That's all you need, an executive manner.

Mr. Waddell: —about this particular Bill because it is an important moment to again bring the Bill before the House since all week we have been debating in Question Period the rising energy prices. I do not accept for a minute that it is going to take three months or so for oil prices to come down at the pumps. It should not. That is what I was trying to point out in Question Period today. If we had a competitive system instead of this system, which is really not very competitive where four large companies basically run the whole show, we would in fact get prices coming down for Canadian consumers. I believe the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney), who has been the rising star of this Government, and who has received all that good publicity, has finally had the chickens come home to roost because there is a motorists' revolt going on. They are tired of paying these high prices for gasoline at the pumps when they see world oil prices dramatically declining. Even without world oil prices dramatically declining, in the last six months they have come down from $29 a barrel to $26 a barrel U.S. but they did not come down at the pump. Forget about the $20 a barrel which is what it came down to today, the price did not come down at the pumps. We should be asking ourselves why the Canadian motorist did not get a break. I will not go into the Donato cartoon which says it takes some time to get through the system.

Mr. Boudria: I saw the oil can in your hand.

Mr. Waddell: I want to talk about this Bill and I want to tie it in with the gasoline prices. Before I speak of the PGRT, I would like to remind Hon. Members that the Minister said in this House today, in response to a question put by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis)—I don't have the Hansard so I will paraphrase what she said—if we look at British Columbia, we see the prices there have gone up only because of the tax increases which they had to impose because of the deficit.

I have two things to say about that. One, the Tories did not have to increase taxes because of the deficit. It was because the Government is giving $5.5 billion to the oil companies in this Bill we are debating. That is the reason for the tax increases which motorists have to pay. Second, the Minister is wrong. She is not really telling the facts as they are. I looked into this. In British Columbia the price of regular unleaded in September, 1984, was 50 cents a litre. In January, 1986, the price was 56.2 cents a litre. Where did that increase come from? This is what the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) is missing. He said it came from tax increases. That is not accurate either. Tax increases were only 2.8 cents a litre. Where did the other 3.4 cents come from? It was the oil companies increasing prices.

We had oil prices declining from U.S. $29 a barrel to U.S. $26 and prices at the pump went up. The reason for that is that the Government is increasing its taxes and the oil companies are piggybacking increases at the same time. All this in a declining market. Why? Because we do not have a competitive system. We had 1,000 letters about this over the last few days delivered to the eight NDP Members of Parliament from British Columbia. These letters are from motorists who are mad. They have had enough and the Government had better watch it.

This Bill repeals the PGRT. What is the PGRT, asks the very knowledgeable Member for Calgary North (Mr. Gagnon). The PGRT is what James Laxer once called Ottawa's most effective tax instrument for taxing petroleum companies which have been masters of tax loopholes. It was directed to revenue from well-head production of gas and oil. The Conservative lament is that the tax is not profit sensitive. That is, it is difficult to wriggle out of paying it. This tax really hit the oil companies. For once they actually had to pay the tax. My friend says it is a unique tax. Well, it is sort of a unique industry.

The price of oil went from $3 a barrel in 1973 up to something like $38 a barrel. That was a tremendous windfall and the companies were making tremendous profits. It was just revealed today that last year Imperial Oil made $650 million, this in spite of the National Energy Program and so on. The figures have been constantly going up except for one brief period during the recession. Imperial Oil made $250 million in the last quarter of 1985 while motorists were paying more and more at the pump, yet this Government proposes to give the companies more money. Then the Minister wonders why I say she sounds like a broken record from the Canadian Petroleum Association.

As a result of this Bill, the federal treasury, over the next four years, will hand over to the oil companies the proceeds it would normally have collected from the PGRT. That is $2.4 billion a year. You do not have to believe me. I am just a little socialist, five foot six, not five foot three, from British Columbia. Let me quote Peters and Company in Calgary, a respected energy analyst. They have projected that in 1986 the loss to the federal treasury will be $430 million. That is a result of this Bill we are debating right now. In 1987 it will be $680 million. In 1988 it will be $1.36 billion. The following year it is $2.79 billion. By 1990 it will total $5.26 billion. This Bill means we are giving up in taxes some $5.26 billion. What is the Government's excuse for doing this? This is a rich industry. It received windfall profits when we went to world oil prices. They had a lot of old oil in the ground which was priced at about Canadian $28 and then went to Canadian $38. That was a nice windfall and who benefited? Texaco, Imperial, Shell; the big boys.

Then this tax is removed. Why? The Government is not stupid. It is not doing it just because it is totally in the pockets of the oil companies. The Government's argument is that this will get more money to the oil industry and it will create jobs. Government Members wave around the figure of 300,000 jobs. No doubt by giving all that money to the oil industry some jobs will be created. That is good. It is also good that the economy of Alberta picks up. However, they have swallowed the line of the Canadian Petroleum Association hook, line and sinker.

Mr. Towers: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. Is the Hon. Member honest enough, does he have enough integrity, to admit that the PGRT killed the economy of the Province of Alberta?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Waddell: That is called smuggling a question in on a point of order. I do not think the PGRT killed the economy of western Canada. There was a recession. It affected the United States, too. The PGRT hurt some companies.

Mr. Towers: Killed them.

Mr. Waddell: The Government then moved to alleviate the problem. It made exceptions up to $500,000. As a matter of fact, when the Conservative Government came in the Liberals had all but abandoned the NEP if you want to know the truth. The oil industry was making good profits. Do you know what the profits were for the majors in 1983? From 1982 to 1983 Gulf went from $201 million to $218 million. Imperial went from $289 million to $332 million. Shell went down from $133 million to $102 million. In 1984 it went up to $158 million. Texaco went from $275 million to $344 million. Does that look like the oil industry was killed? Look at the revenue sharing. You can get this information from the Government's own Petroleum Monitoring Agency as I did. Look at how much money the industry made and how much there was to share. In 1980 the industry had as its share $6.3 billion. In 1981 it was $6.7 billion. In 1982 it was $9.4 billion; in 1983, $10.6 billion and 1984, $11.6 billion.

There is no doubt there was a recession in Alberta. There is no doubt that the tax, when it was originally put in place, had an effect on the industry. It hit some smaller outfits. However, that was changed. The fact is that this was a tough, effective tax which actually took money out of the pockets of the oil companies for a change and put it in the federal treasury. It was a tremendous fight between Trudeau and Lougheed. Lougheed accepted it in the end. Trudeau and Lougheed toasted the deal they had made. The Conservatives need not complain; Lougheed made the deal. Alberta put in place a form of PIP grants and so on. Let us not talk myth, let us talk reality.

I do not know how much longer I have, Mr. Speaker? One minute?

Mr. Towers: Too long.

Mr. Waddell: Too long. All right. I was making the argument before I was interrupted that the Conservatives were not stupid. They argued that they needed to give the oil companies more money so more jobs could be created. I was saying that the figure of 300,000 jobs was taken right out of a brief we got in committee from the Canadian Petroleum Association in 1984. It was exactly their brief. The Conservative energy program was exactly the proposals in that brief. So they bought it, hook, line and sinker. Big oil has its own agenda as it has always had. They want more tax breaks so that they can invest money and—I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, you said I had five minutes left.

• (1600)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: You have six minutes left to be used the next time the matter is debated in the House.

Mr. Waddell: Well, Mr. Speaker, could I conclude today?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Waddell: I think I was mislead. I thought I had six minutes today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: You cannot use the remaining six minutes unless you have unanimous consent.

Mr. Waddell: I just want to conclude in one minute.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There are six minutes left in the time allotted, but he may conclude now in a few seconds.

Mr. Waddell: I will just conclude by saying that the Government is going to have tremendous problems because of this Bill. The Government gave up tax revenues of $5.3 billion until 1990. The Government has a deficit problem. Where is it going to get that money? Although I hate to say it, because the price of oil is falling dramatically I do not think it will be raised through the oil companies reinvesting and creating 300,000 jobs. They will just not create all those jobs and the Government will not get that additional revenue. The Government has a real problem with its energy policy and deficit. This Bill is a tremendous mistake and the Government will live to regret it.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I recognize the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to comment further on your ruling to the effect that the time of the Hon. Member in response to the motion is limited to 20 minutes, but I think it would be necessary to set the record straight for the future.

I would simply remind you that pursuant to Standing Order 36.(1) the length of speeches and comments in response . . . I will read the Standing Order:

36. (1) Unless otherwise provided in these Standing Orders, when the Speaker is in the Chair, no Member, except the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition, or a Minister moving a government order and the Member speaking in reply immediately after such Minister, shall speak for more than twenty minutes—

Today, Mr. Speaker, you gave the floor to the Parliamentary Secretary of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Vincent) who spoke on behalf of the Minister, or so I thought. When you recognized the Member of the Opposition who replied or responded to whomever I thought was the Minister—his Parliamentary Secretary or the Minister, it is the same to us—you told me that the limit was 20 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, in the future would it be possible to know if, in a case like this—perhaps I should have risen after the Minister's motion and asked you to give me the floor before giving it to the Parliamentary Secretary, but according to our tradition we do not do that, we let the Minister or his Parliamentary Secretary make his remarks—Mr. Speaker, could we have this matter cleared up next week, namely how should we interpret the Standing Order in the future?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am quite aware of the fact that Standing Order 36.(1) can be interpreted in two different ways, and that is why I will ensure that you are given a final ruling on this matter next week.

It being four o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

INTERNATIONAL PEACE AND GOODWILL DAY ACT

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington) moved that Bill C-258, an Act respecting International Peace and Goodwill Day, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to present to this House for consideration and second reading debate an Act respecting International Peace and Goodwill Day. The purpose of this legislation is to change the name associated with December 26 from Boxing Day to International Peace and Goodwill Day in honour of Canada's commitment to world peace. This Bill is a direct result of my great concern about the world's present situation and what kind of future we are building for ourselves. I strongly believe that we are masters of our own fate. We, as Members of Parliament representing peace-loving Canadians, have an opportunity to further stress the importance of international peace and goodwill by supporting this initiative.

Never before in the history of the world has there been a more crucial time to demonstrate the need for peace and goodwill. We are living in a world constantly threatened by nuclear war. We are collectively held hostage in fear as each new act of terrorism is committed. Acts of terrorism and the build-up of nuclear arms must be stopped.

Nuclear war became a very real threat to the world once the first nuclear bomb was dropped on Japan. This event was recently brought to our minds yet again when His Excellency the Prime Minister of Japan spoke to this House. No other country has experienced the horrible reality and aftermath of nuclear war. We have a duty to ourselves and the rest of the world to ensure that this does not happen again.

Somehow we have been sidetracked in our peaceful goal. Instead of trying to stop the growth in numbers of nuclear weapons, we became obsessed with equalling our powers, not limiting them. We have lived in a world where the major global powers have been consumed with preparing for a nuclear war, not preventing one. There are presently enough nuclear weapons to kill, several times over, each human being on earth.

In that past year we have seen some very real and positive steps taken toward limiting the arms race. It was most heartening to see the two superpowers, President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev, come together for the first time in a summit meeting on disarmament. The Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) reminded us yesterday that decades ago Canada chose not to acquire nuclear weapons. This was a practical contribution to the control of nuclear arms. We are continuing to encourage and facilitate any meetings or discussions to further the goal of world peace.

The whole world seems to be growing in its awareness of the terror and futility of nuclear war. The United Nations has designated 1986 as International Peace Year. This comes at a time when all citizens of the world are becoming more and more aware of the need and urgency to seek lasting peace. Mr. Speaker, we are responsible for the future of this planet, and we have not been doing a very good job. It is time we took stock of what our actions have brought about. We must take a close look at the obvious consequences we will face if we allow this world situation to worsen. We must redirect our thinking and rid ourselves of any arrogance toward earth and each other and replace those negative attitudes with respect and love for this planet. It is our home and we are responsible for the shape of things to come. Our citizens are crying out for world peace. We have a duty to seek that which our citizens want.

We are a fortunate country and have long enjoyed the benefits of a peaceful and prosperous nation living in a free and democratic society. Our history shows how often Canada has been in the forefront by helping other countries through troubled times. We have consistently demonstrated our compassion and goodwill toward others. This is another opportunity for Canadians to take the lead.

Designating December 26 as International Peace and Goodwill Day will demonstrate to the rest of the world that Canada and Canadians are committed to the goal of world peace. Such a change in name will not detract from any of our traditions. No one is more aware of customs than I am. My strong belief in our traditions are on record as a descendant of the United Empire Loyalists who carved a great society out of this harsh Canadian climate. I believe that such a name change will in fact enhance our historical view of Boxing Day. The traditional concept of this day, being one to honour and celebrate goodwill toward mankind, will be expanded and enriched as we include the whole world in our goal of world peace. Unless we recognize the imminent danger we face, not just as Canadians, but as human beings, we run the risk of losing everything.

Our goal today should not only be to respect our traditions, but to learn from our mistakes and make a positive legacy for future generations so that they will have an opportunity to enjoy and appreciate what we so often take for granted. We must work toward world peace if we are to have a world in which to carry on our traditions. There are many concerns, challenges and battles which face all of us on a daily basis, but without lasting peace this may be our last challenge. It is only fitting that we mark a day of peace directly following the day we celebrate the birth of the Prince of Peace. This can be a concrete reminder to us all where our hope should be placed.

In conclusion, may I again stress that the creation of International Peace and Goodwill Day will demonstrate to the world Canada's commitment to continue seeking world peace while maintaining the principles of our tradition. I urge all Members of the House to support this legislative proposal. I realize that as a Private Member's Bill it may take a long time for this idea to become reality. Therefore, I would not be against withdrawing this bill as long as the subject is referred to the relevant standing committee of the House.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate on the motion brought before the House by the Hon. Member for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet). Certainly no Member takes exception to the spirit of the matter we are debating today and I believe there is unanimity in the House when we talk about peace and goodwill. Therefore, I believe the proposal to designate an International Peace and Goodwill Day certainly has much merit. I hope the Government and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will take note of this proposal made by one of their Members.

I have one concern. If we consider this motion in greater detail, perhaps we should determine whether this day should replace the other tradition of Boxing Day. Rather than replacing one tradition with another, perhaps we should be adding another tradition in this country. For instance, there has been much discussion about allocating a day in the second or third week of February as a day of celebration for our heritage. Perhaps International Peace and Goodwill Day could be considered in the same scope.

Recently I received a letter from one of my constituents who read an article about the Hon. Member's proposal. While she is not against peace, obviously, she feels that Boxing Day is also part of her heritage and part of a tradition. Therefore, I think it would be valuable for a parliamentary committee which is reviewing this motion to study it from the perspective of how we deal with the tradition Canadians have come to know as Boxing Day as opposed to the International Peace and Goodwill Day proposed by the Hon. Member.

A day that is devoted entirely to thinking about peace is significant in itself. The Hon. Member noted very well that the designation of such a day will certainly not solve the ills of the world or reduce the number of nuclear warheads but it might force Canadians to focus some of their thoughts and attention on the whole issue of world peace.

We discuss a wide variety of issues in the House of Commons which may make the news in The Globe and Mail or concern our constituents. These issues develop a political momentum which gives us the food for debate in this Chamber. These debates sell newspapers and allow constituents to determine the views of the Government and Members about certain issues of the day. However, as a new Member of Parliament, I have found that this House sometimes loses sight of the more significant issues of the day and what are the international and national forces at play in every corner of the world. Parliament should be addressing those issues and this motion reminds us and all Canadians of the real and important issues.

While the other issues with which we deal in Parliament are important, there is nothing more important in our priorities and nothing more crucial or urgent than the question of peace and goodwill. We were reminded of that in the United States recently when they celebrated for the first time the day devoted to Martin Luther King Jr. That celebration revived a sense of what America is about and brought to mind where America still must go in achieving the dream of Martin Luther King, for which he fought so valiantly. Perhaps we can parallel that sense in this country so that our young people especially can take the time during such a day to value the peace we enjoy in this country and consider what we can do as a nation to ensure that the peace we enjoy is spread across the globe.

In that spirit, I will conclude my remarks so that other Members may contribute to the debate. As far as I am concerned, the Hon. Member's idea has merit and deserves the attention of the Government. Hopefully we can work out a structure in committee whereby the tradition that Canadians have come to enjoy on Boxing Day can be complemented by a special day for peace and goodwill. I congratulate the Hon. Member and hope that the parliamentary committee will begin discussion to ensure that the Hon. Member's idea will become reality and Canadians can be proud that we enjoy peace and are attempting to ensure it spreads throughout all countries.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to the proposed Bill respecting International Peace and Goodwill Day which, in effect, would substitute that day for our current Boxing Day holiday.

At the outset, I want to congratulate the Hon. Member for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet) for bringing this important matter to our attention. Let me also throw a bouquet to the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) for his very thoughtful remarks which I share, as an individual Member of Parliament.

This is a very important matter that we Canadians keep before us, those ideals and aims dear to our heart and that may, as in this case, have great portent for our freedom and our very existence. Next to the food and shelter that help keep us alive, I suggest that the peaceful enjoyment of life is of supreme importance. Whatever we may think of the effectiveness of naming a holiday to promote an ideal, I am sure that no one in the Chamber doubts the importance of peace in the world. International peace has long been a major interest of Canada and we are by no means alone in our concern for peace. Indeed, the United Nations has chosen this year, 1986, as International Peace Year.

The extreme seriousness of widespread belligerence is pointed out in a recent United Nations study which found that more than 20 million people have been killed in approximately 150 armed conflicts since 1945, when the 51 founding member states signed the United Nations Charter. For every 100,000 people on earth there are 600 soldiers but only 85 doctors. The average world military expenditure for each soldier is over 50 times that of average public spending on education for every school-aged child. Global military spending has reached approximately $1 trillion a year, with developing countries spending 20 times more for military purposes than for economic development. In view of these alarming facts, it is clear that the U.N. Charter's main objective: "To save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind", remains a goal and not an achievement. While a global war may have been averted since the founding of the U.N., peace remains elusive in some regions of the world.

There are two opposing philosophies on the means of maintaining international peace. One of these calls on the major powers to build up such a terrifying potential for massive mutual destruction that no sane person would risk ending the world as we know it. The other is to outlaw the weapons of war altogether. Certainly in a world still experiencing quite shocking starvation in some regions; a world in which the more fortunate nations are responding with great generosity to human need, the enormous expenditure of energy and human ingenuity in developing the means to destroy life is incongruous, to say the least.

The Government of Canada recognizes the need to have a defence capacity, but has a firm commitment to promote peace and encourage the superpowers to draw back from the current dangerous level of nuclear weaponry. Our Ambassador for Disarmament, Douglas Roche, tells us that many individuals and groups throughout Canada are working to inform the wider public of the critical issues of peace and security facing the world today. He says there are tens of thousands of teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, scientists, students and parents committed to devoting their energies to a wide range of activities, both political and educational in nature.

The long term educational activities of this widening body of Canadians are having a profound effect. The numerous public seminars, conferences and debates held throughout the country, as well as the hundreds of publications produced, are of fundamental importance in making the terrible complexities of the arms race comprehensible to the public.

Non-governmental organizations are uniquely and strategically placed to help develop an informed public opinion. It is this public opinion that will contribute to the political process and thereby the construction, development and support of policies which will advance the cause of peace, with freedom and justice. The Canadian Government maintains a disarmament fund to help promote public discussion and education on this vital subject.

During the 1984-85 fiscal year, allotments to this project totalled $575,000 while research and publication contracts totalled another $178,000. There were 53 recipients, including the McGill Centre of Research on Air and Space Law and a coalition of 26 women's groups which organized a conference entitled "Women's Alternatives for Negotiating Peace", at Mount St. Vincent University in Halifax in June 1985.

Other recipients included the Canadian Institute for International Affairs, Science for Peace, the Canadian Coalition Conference Planning Committee and the Canadian Disarmament Information Service. Disarmament Fund contributions, mainly for the organization of conferences, were also provided to a number of post-secondary institutions including the University of Moncton, Laval University, Carleton University, Simon Fraser University, the University of Manitoba, St. Mary's University, Trent University, York University and the University of Toronto.

May I say that the Bill put forward by the Hon. Member is a really important first step. It is particularly appropriate in this International Year of Peace as decreed by the United Nations. I would agree with the Hon. Member who moved this motion, and I think I would gain the sympathies of all Hon. Members in this House to move the following: I move:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "that" and substituting the following therefor:

Bill C-258, an Act respecting International Peace and Goodwill Day, be not now read a second time but that the Order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates.

International Peace and Goodwill Day Act

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak since we are debating the motion of the Hon. Member for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Scott) as opposed to the Bill originally proposed by the Hon. Member for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet), although I am pleased to speak to either one of the two issues. Both will do precisely the same thing.

I want to congratulate the Member for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington for moving this motion and presenting this idea to the House of Commons. I hope the House adopts this motion as a matter of policy. It is not partisan in nature. Most of all my hope is that the matter does not die on the Order Paper.

We do many things as a House of Commons in Private Members' Hour. Very many valuable issues are raised by this process on occasion. Sometimes the issues that are raised in Private Members' Hour are more partisan than others. Either the Government or the Opposition uses the occassion to talk the Bill out, a procedure we use to put a Bill at the bottom of the list. This effectively kills the Bill because it has been talked out of the House. We do not want to do that with this issue. Generally, I hope, we would not do that with any issue. Be that as it may, the Bill we are discussing now is fundamental to all of us in terms of asserting the authority and supremacy of Parliament and enhancing the role of the private Member in this non-partisan issue. Most fundamental of all, we are discussing world peace.

I congratulate the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) who said so eloquently in his remarks that many times we miss the point when we are discussing issues which are somewhat trivial when you compare them to the issue we are discussing today. The symbolic gesture that we are attempting to pose as Canadians to the rest of the world is the special place in our hearts for peace and disarmament.

We know we have that place in our hearts and we have had it all along. The role we have played as peacemakers during the 1950s, during the Suez crisis and the other United Nations peacekeeping forces in which we have participated is testimony to the fact that we are very much interested in those kinds of issues. The initiative of Mr. Trudeau in the last year or so prior to his departure from office in his world-wide attempts to promote peace is noted by all of us, and other Prime Ministers and leaders of this country have done these things throughout the ages.

We remember Canada's participation in both World War I and World War II where we distinguished ourselves. We have worked hard at various international forums to ensure those kinds of atrocities would never happen again.

As sad as those incidents were then, a war today would be far more catastrophic than what occurred during those wars. Not long ago we celebrated the fortieth anniversary of the dropping of the bomb on Hiroshima. The time we take today to remember this event is indeed time well spent and reminds us of how important it is to have peace. Over 200,000 lives were destroyed in August of 1945. Needless to say, the bomb exploded that day would be miniscule when compared with the fire power of the world today. It has been estimated that the nuclear powers now have enough capacity to destroy our planet 40 times over. If it were desirable—and of course it is not—to have enough to destroy it even once, one really wonders what is the purpose of having 40 times that capacity to start with. This is happening at a time when many children on the face of the earth are dying of starvation. We are spending almost $2 million every minute of every hour of every day on armaments generally. When we know that only a small percentage of the interest on that money could totally alleviate world starvation, we have to speak more about the kinds of issues which the Hon. Member for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington brought to our attention.

J. Robert Oppenheimer, known as the father of the bomb, recalled thinking of words from a Hindu book and said:

> I am become death, the shatterer of worlds.

It is important for us to remember that today and to take every action we can as legislators to indicate our commitment toward peace.

Perhaps for some of my constituents Boxing Day is symbolic, but many of them do not even know what that day signifies. The only thing they know is that it is the day after Christmas. Be that as it may, it has an historical significance for some people. Of course in Britain, the day after Christmas represented the day, so I am told, that rich children gave the boxes from their toys to the poor children to play with. Perhaps the day could be symbolically important in terms of our assistance to people who are experiencing poverty. However, most people have long forgotten what Boxing Day stands for or stood for. Everyone knows how catastrophic a war would be. Everyone knows how important it is to play our small part as a nation domestically and to indicate internationally that we recognize at least one day as having that symbolic importance.

In conclusion, I congratulate the Hon. Member. I am happy to have had the opportunity to participate. With the measure which we are adopting today, we will at least go a small way in beating our swords into ploughshares.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It has been moved by Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth), seconded by Mr. Cadieux:

> That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "that" and substituting the following therefor:
> "Bill C-258, an Act respecting International Peace and Goodwill Day, be not now read a second time but that the Order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates."

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment to the main motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment (Mr. Scott, Hamilton-Wentworth) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion, as amended, agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Accordingly, the order is discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates.

Order discharged and Bill withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall I call it five o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Definitely.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired. It being five o'clock, this House stands adjourned until Monday next, at 11 o'clock a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 4.35 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, January 27, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PETROLEUM AND GAS REVENUE TAX ACT INCOME TAX ACT

The House resumed from Friday, January 24, consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)) that Bill C-82, an Act to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act and the Income Tax Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to speak on Bill C-82, a Bill with respect to the petroleum and gas revenue tax. The Government, in deleting this tax, promised a great deal. It promised us that this would be the haven of the oil and industry in western Canada and that, as a result of this Bill, the funds which were being freed up from this tax would be put back into the oil and gas sector. It told us this would ensure for us in Canada continued expansion of the oil and gas industry. We are now hearing a very different tune from the Government.

As we on this side of the House speak on behalf of the consumers of Canada, we are told that the prices are the way they are because we have to pay for our social programs and for the development of the oil and gas industry in Canada. I myself and Hon. Members on this side of the House thought we had already paid for the development and expansion of the oil and gas industry. The Government told us when the PGRT was done away with that this was going to be the vehicle through which we would have continued expansion. In the words of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney), this was to be the engine for growth in the oil and gas sector. That evidently is not what the Government is saying at the present time. It is saying that high prices are the guarantee of expansion in the oil and gas sector. The oil companies are now declaring higher profits. They have had the benefit of the funds which were freed up as a result of doing away with the petroleum and gas revenue tax and they have not been taxed on any windfall profit for the old oil they discovered years and years ago. So they are enjoying quite a good deal out of the policies of the Government. However, the Canadian oil companies and the consumers lost the benefit they had through the new oil reference price and by losing that benefit they are placed in the same position as the multinationals but do not have these large reserves of old oil on which they can rely. What we have now with prices going down is a Western Accord, an Atlantic Accord and a Budget presented on May 23 which did not take into consideration the needs of the consumers. Yet the Government is steadfast in saying that the high prices of oil and gas are the answer.

It has been said again and again that it is lower gasoline prices in Canada that are good for the economy, that lower prices will reduce inflation and will allow the manufacturers, industrialists and entrepreneurs a little leeway so they can look after the indebtedness they incurred as well as be able to modernize and expand, and that their backs will come away from the wall in many cases. But the Government is steadfast in its belief, and why? Because it assured the Canadian public that by doing away with the petroleum gas revenue tax the oil and gas industry was assured that its expansion and steady growth would not waver. This is not what Canadians believe. Canadians believe that the Government is callous with regard to the needs of the consumers. They believe they have been forgotten. The Government told the country that it wanted to do away with the petroleum and gas revenue tax in order to develop the energy sector, then immediately it passed along the benefits to the multinational oil companies without any regard to the needs of the consumer. In fact, any regard to the needs of the consumers was negative because the Government immediately proceeded to put on a further tax in September and then again in January of this year.

The Government spent over $1 billion to bail out two banks. On the other hand, our own Crown corporation, Petro-Canada, on two occasions over the last three months raised the price of gasoline. When that company was brought into being the then Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, Donald Macdonald, told Canadians it would assure us of a supply of oil and gas at a reasonable price. That was the purpose of Petro-Canada initially. What has it now become? It has now become a vehicle for this Government to increase the price of gasoline. Members of this House, like Canadians generally, see Petro-Canada's prices as being higher than those of other companies. Yet the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources stated last week that she did not know anything about Petro-Canada's higher prices. Why is Petro-Canada doing this? To serve the Government's crazed ambitions.

Mr. Skelly: Crazed ambitions?

Mr. MacLellan: Yes, crazed ambitions. The short-term reason, the Government says, is that it is not satisfied with the profit on the downstream activities of Petro-Canada. Yet this same company took over another company, Gulf Canada, which had a more successful downstream operation, and it is now preparing to get rid of the employees of Gulf Canada who were responsible for this more profitable downstream operation. It just does not make any sense, but then again the oil and gas policy of this Government does not make any sense.

The long-term reason for Petro-Canada increasing prices is that the Government wants to put Petro-Canada in as profitable a position as possible so that it can be privatized. When the shares are sold in the market they will be much more attractive because of this more profitable position of Petro-Canada. The Minister stated on television last evening that it was the Government's intention to privatize Petro-Canada but the Government says it does not know whom that will be. How does the Government expect to fool the Canadian public, by using their money? It is the public who is paying higher gasoline prices. It is the public's money that the Government is giving to the multinational oil companies by doing away with the PGRT. It is the public's $1 billion this Government is using to bail out bankrupt banks. If the Government continues this policy the public will be using their money to buy back from themselves their own Crown corporation. Given the economic difficulties being experienced by people in this country, this is not inequitable, it is immoral.

Higher gasoline prices do not hit just wealthy Canadians; they have a much greater effect on low-income Canadians. Increased prices are hitting very, very hard. Yet gasoline prices have been going down in all other parts of the western world for months.

It is unfortunate, but the Government's policies are having a very derogatory effect on Canadians' opinion of Petro-Canada. Canadians know that Petro-Canada is the leader in these price increases. As a result, they are developing a more jaundiced attitude towards this Crown corporation. What they saw as a very positive step, a most encouraging beginning, has now become a nightmare. The Canadian consumer is being consumed by the policies of this Government through this Crown corporation being used in this way. How long can this go on? How long can Canadians continue to pay these prices? We have been told by the Minister that the world-wide reductions in the price of oil will be passed along to the consumer. We do not know how long that is going to take or to what extent the price reductions will be passed along. Why? Because we do not know whether the oil companies are going to give the full benefit of these reductions to the consumer or whether they are going to increase their margins. We certainly do not know what the Government is going to do with respect to its tax policy regarding gasoline. However, we do know that if the price of gasoline went up, consumers would be paying more tomorrow. There would not be any of this waiting for two or three months until they use up their present reserves and then pass along the increase to consumers. Oh, no, that only applies when the price goes down. When it goes up, the increase is passed along to consumers the next day. That is not what we had in mind when Petro-Canada was formed.

The Government has told us that we should not complain about higher oil and gas prices because the Husky upgrader, the Hibernia field and the Venture deal are at stake. The Government is saying it needs these higher prices so it can pass along the profits in order to develop these projects. People may have believed that story last spring when the Western Accord was signed, but to give out that same story a second time as being the reason for higher gasoline prices is just not going to wash anywhere in this country. It is time for the Government to come clean with Canadians and admit that the reason it is letting prices go up is that it wants to do away with Petro-Canada, privatize it and make it look as good as possible with regard to profits so that it can get the best possible price for a private issue of shares. Also, the Government has made a commitment to the multinationals, the major players in the oil and gas industry, that they will be looked after.

The Government has not given that same assurance to consumers recently as it did during the election campaign. During the election campaign, that was only one of many promises that the Government made to the people of Canada. The Government has not made that promise lately because it knows that even it cannot give that kind of assurance with the picture so grossly balanced in favour of the companies and against consumers.

This is becoming a major question in the country at the present time. Consumers are angry. They are furious with the Government, not only because of the higher prices or because the Government led them believe one thing and then did another, but because the Government is now insulting their intelligence by dragging out the same answers that it dragged out last year and the year before during the election campaign. The Government is telling Canadian consumers that it is giving them the right answers and they should believe them. However, not only are the Canadian consumers not believing but, with each maladjusted reason that the Government brings forward, the hypocrisy of the Government, its lack of concern for consumers, and the complete loss of confidence of the Canadian public in the Government becomes more apparent.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, would the previous speaker give us an indication of what the effect on taxpayers will be if the revenue from the PGRT is removed? Would he give an indication of the type of thing that will happen to Government services and the type of thing that will happen to the tax burden on people in Canada and, in particular, in the region of the country which he represents, because of this ill-conceived plan of the Government?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I would be pleased to do that. By 1990 the reduction of the PGRT will cost the Canadian taxpayer between $2 billion and $3 billion in taxes, which the multinationals, the oil and gas producers, will no longer have to pay and which will be passed along to the Canadian consumer. In addition, in the last year the Government has given over $1 billion to bail out two banks in the country.

How is the Government going to replace these revenues? It is going to replace them with the earnings of the people of Canada. At the same time as the Government is partially deindexing family allowances and exorbitantly taxing gasoline, again taking from those who need help the most and who can least afford to bear this tax, it is giving to the largest corporations in the country. Therefore, not only are people being taxed more, but they are not getting the benefits of this taxation. It is going to companies which, for the most part, are owned outside of Canada. In the case of the banks, the largest amounts were owed to groups, individuals, and corporations outside of Canada, not to mention the corporations in Canada which could afford to bear the cost of these losses more easily than could individuals in the country.

As well, the Government is reducing the number of civil servants. It is telling the Canadian people that the reason we have such a high deficit is that the Public Service has not been doing its job. The Government says there are too many civil servants and that they are lazy. The Government is using the public servants, former Governments, and the people of Canada as a scapegoat for its activities and poor policies. It is one thing to act in this way and another to use innocent parties who have laboured hard in good faith in the country as a scapegoat.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I remember hearing the Member ask the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) a question last week about the fact that Petro-Canada was increasing the price of gasoline, in other words, moving with the pack of multinational companies in moving up the price of gasoline. If I may paraphrase, the Member asked the Minister why Petro-Canada, which was supposed to be our window on the industry and was supposed to have been established to ensure fair and equitable prices on the market, was following the pack like sheep. He asked, secondly, whether it was the policy of the Government to increase the profit picture of Petro-Canada so that it could be sold to the general public. Over the weekend we heard the Minister state on TV that that was her policy. Could the Member give us his views on Petro-Canada and on how he feels about the promise of the Minister to privatize it?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, as I have said before, I think this is one of the most insidious features of the Government's policy with respect to oil and gas. The Minister stated on television last evening that it is her design to privatize Petro-Canada. When I asked her last week why Petro-Canada was leading price increases and why, during the last three months, Petro-Canada increased the price of gasoline on two occasions, she said that she had no idea and did not know of these price increases. I have grave doubts about the response of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources in this regard. I think it is becoming increasingly clear why the Government is allowing Petro-Canada to increase its gasoline prices.

The irony is that it is beautiful for the multinational oil companies to have Petro-Canada leading the price increases because when Petro-Canada increases its prices the other companies come right in behind and increase their prices by the same amount. What can the Government do to prohibit this when its own Crown corporation is leading the way? The multinationals get a free ride. They can increase their prices without the Government being able to say anything to them.

Where is the report of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, which has been repeatedly postponed, which the consumers of the country have every reason to believe will do something to help them? It is being postponed and postponed until the Government feels that it can be released without any of its aims, such as the privatization of Petro-Canada, being hindered. This is not a Government acting in the best interests of consumers or of the people of the country.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I listened attentively to my hon. colleague. He is right when he talks about consumers being upset with respect to increasing prices at the gas pumps. This is something that cuts across all lines. It is not specific to a certain region or community of the country. It cuts across all economic and class lines and is something that all individuals and families can appreciate. At the very time when the price of world oil is dropping at a very significant rate, they are going to the pumps and paying more. One response given by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) in the House of Commons is that it has not worked its way through the system and the drop in world prices have not been reflected at the gas pumps. Yet this morning I had an interesting conversation with a visitor from Nebraska who said that prices in the United States are continuously dropping. Somehow, just to our south, that price decrease has worked its way into the system, yet we have a response that it has not worked its way through our system to be reflected in the price at the gas pumps.

Is the Minister's response a valid statement or is it just an excuse? The prices in the United States are definitely working their way to the pumps at the gas stations but we have not seen that happen in Canada. Why?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for that important question. It highlights the difference between Canada and the United States where consumers have the benefit of a price decrease within a matter of days. In fact, in certain places in the United States where the price is lowest, such as the State of Maryland, Americans are paying approximately half of what Canadian consumers are paying for gasoline. That is an unconscionable difference, to the detriment of Canadian consumers.

The Minister tells us that we will have the benefit of this world price decrease but it may take two or three months to be passed on to the consumer.

Not only have we not seen a price reduction, there has been an increase in the price of gasoline even though the Minister was telling us at the time of the Western Accord and the Budget that deregulation would mean lower prices for Canadian consumers. That is what we were led to believe, but the prices continued to increase.

Even if the Minister wants the price to go down, there is no guarantee that the oil and gas companies will pass those reductions on to the consumer. The oil and gas companies in this country know that they have the Government under their thumb and that it dances to their tune. It is the oil companies rather than the consumers who will tell the Government what its policy on oil and gas will be.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, who will be the primary beneficiaries as a result of the elimination of the PGRT? Can the Hon. Member indicate one resource company in Canada that would be the largest beneficiary of the removal of this tax and tell us where the enormous profits earned by it might be disposed of other than in Canada?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, the beneficiaries from the elimination of the PGRT will be the major oil companies in this country. The reason is that the five major multinationals in this country own 75 per cent of the old oil. This is $3 a barrel for oil that was found prior to 1974. Today, the world oil price has been reduced to under $20 U.S. a barrel from some $28 U.S. a barrel a few months ago. That is still a major difference from the $3 a barrel for oil which these multinationals found and still have locked in their reserves. They will still make a major profit.

They are complaining that lower prices mean that they cannot go ahead with upgraders in the West and cannot proceed with offshore projects like Beaufort, Hibernia and Venture. That will simply not wash in this country.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, today's debate is very interesting because it illustrates the irony of the Liberal Party's position. My remarks are not intended to detract from the excellent speech made by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) who clearly pinpointed the problem. I see that the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) is nodding her head in agreement. No doubt she feels guilty about participating with a group who is ruining this country. I believe she understands the problem, and if she had a greater voice in Cabinet, there would be much less danger of the Government pursuing this road to destruction. Perhaps there should be a Cabinet shift, as my colleague points out, to place her in charge of energy.

However, it is ironic that the Liberals complain about cutting the PGRT because it is they who started the ball rolling. I recall making many of the same arguments in the last Parliament that the Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys are making in his speech about the devestation that would follow this kind of action.

I believe that the basic problem is that the PGRT is a very large source of revenue to the Government of Canada. It is essentially a royalty that is imposed on reserves that we hold and that revenue is guaranteed during the good and the bad times. It can be used to provide services and benefits for Canadians.

It is my understanding that Imperial Oil is the largest holder of old oil in Canada. I understand that at one time the cost of production of that oil, which was discovered years ago and is still in the ground waiting to be produced, was something in the order of 50 cents a barrel. Let us assume that it is slightly higher, if the Tories cannot accept that figure. Nevertheless, the cost of production was very modest compared to today's prices.

Imperial Oil, which holds the largest conventional reserves of old oil stands to be the largest beneficiary. If this tax is eliminated, it will be an absolute windfall to Imperial Oil and the other major multinational oil companies, without any benefit to Canadians. Imperial Oil can decide to invest those profits in the South China Sea or elsewhere in the world. This Bill will add to its $600 million profit this year.

Furthermore, the tax revenues to the Government of Canada will drop while the profits to Imperial Oil and the other large multinational oil companies will rise. The oil companies will pay less taxes on their profits as a result of the tax incentives to oil companies contained within the provisions devised by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney). While they will pay less tax under the guise of exploring for oil and guaranteeing the security of supply, the revenues to the Government will decrease by more than $2 billion. The dramatic rise in profits of the oil companies will not be taxed because of the tax incentives that have been proposed allegedly to help with exploration and improved upgrading of the technology.

The fact is that the Government has given the major oil companies an absolute windfall which it does not intend to tax. The net result for the taxpayer will be reduced Government services. For instance, post-secondary education will suffer, job creation will suffer and health care will suffer because the Government will simply not have the money if it continues to do this on every front. It will simply destroy its source of revenue and be unable to provide the services required by the people of Canada. Moreover, if the Government intends to maintain these services and the oil companies do not have to contribute, you can be sure that the Canadian taxpayers will have to pay more. Let me just say as a brief summary on that line of thought that this initiative was the product of the past Government. Because of the ideological fixation of the present Government in power, this was an ideal opportunity to continue down the same misguided track, basically providing windfalls for banks, oil companies and shafting ordinary Canadians.

In terms of the energy policy at work in the Government, the point was made by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources last night who mentioned that she would like to privatize PetroCan, which does not surprise anybody.

Mr. Nickerson: Hear, hear!

Mr. Skelly: Hear, hear! Another philosophically fixed individual, excellent. I think it is time the Government stood up, came clean with Canadians, and told them exactly what its game plans are. There is no doubt the Government wants to privatize a company upon which Canadians have spent billions and billions just to get a foothold on the energy industry in Canada.

In the past, energy has been controlled by multinational corporations. Decisions have been made outside Canada and Canadians have suffered enormously for the failure to have any kind of a window on the industry or any kind of control over it. The present Government would turn the industry back to the multinationals and allow the future of Canadians to be mortgaged to them.

We had PetroCan put together, but it would have been a very different operation had it been struck under an NDP Government. In about October, 1973 the concept was first laid out in this House in a speech by Tommy Douglas who outlined the basic principles under which a national energy corporation should operate. Had those principles been followed, we would not be looking at a major oil company in Canada that was as much as anything a price leader and a participator in price fixing, but at a price leader in terms of giving benefits to Canadians and leading in price reduction.

Ultimately it struck me that the purpose of Petro-Canada was to allow Canadians to have an influence in the way that energy was developed and that would involve benefits to Canadians, not to the multinationals. Where possible, Petro-Canada would form joint ventures with other multinationals in the development of resources to give guidance and establish directions of benefit to Canadians and so make sure that Canadians stayed ahead with exploration and technology. But the Conservatives would have privatized that. They want to put their faith in the multinationals who have shafted us in the past and, given a chance, will shaft us in the future.

What about security of supply, Mr. Speaker? I believe the President of Imperial Oil prior to the energy crisis in the early 1970s said that we have 900 years worth of oil, and after that, he said, we will be out of oil.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): They lied.

Mr. Skelly: They lied. What do we have though in terms of any adequate information on direction and development of the energy industry in Canada without at least something on the scale of Petro-Canada?

I for one am pleased that the Conservative Party has finally come clean and told us what it wants to do with Petro-Canada. It wants to get rid of it and take away the investment that has taken years to build up which put the corporation in the position of having some influence on the direction in which energy development goes in Canada. To dump it borders on absolute negligence. I am certain people on the benches opposite will be held accountable for the decisions Cabinet has taken.

It will be interesting to watch gas pricing come the next election. In British Columbia gas pricing has had a terrible effect on communities, especially rural communities and those farther away from the main centres where the price of gasoline runs between 60 cents and 70 cents a litre. What about the cost of doing business in those communities? British Columbia is probably one of the provinces in Canada that has had the least recovery after the devastating recession. The communities I represent on the coast of British Columbia are having an extremely difficult time getting involved in the recovery that appears to be going on in central Canada and in other areas of the country one of the main problems being the cost of energy. When you are paying 60 cents or 70 cents a litre, it is an extremely large share—

Mrs. Sparrow: In B.C. they don't pay.

Mr. Skelly: Nobody pays 60 cents to 70 cents a litre?

Mrs. Sparrow: In B.C. they don't.

Mr. Skelly: It is time to provide a little proof for the Member. Communities in B.C. cannot get involved in an effective recovery because of the cost of ferry travel, the cost of air travel and the cost of doing business, of which freight is an extremely large percentage. Consumers are being shafted.

Gas pricing will have an effect on the Hon. Member for Cariboo-Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway). It would be nice to hear him talking about the effects of gas prices in his riding. It would be nice to hear him say that we should get rid of Petro-Canada. I suspect people will put two and two together and suggest that a properly run Canadian owned oil company would change that direction.

But the problem goes back to the nature of the Government. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources indicated that she is going to privatize and get rid of an important asset which the Canadian people have built up. I think the ideological fixation that the Government has that everything must go back to the private sector and that there is no place for a mixed economy is fairly interesting. That is the kind of thinking and action that has brought the Conservatives from about 52 per cent support, according to the Gallup poll, to 38 per cent. I would suspect that this fall is not finished. It is not just the Government's failure to do anything effective with gas pricing and the failture to do anything constructive with Petro-Canada to set some price decrease in place that have caused the drop; a lot of other things have influenced people, such as, as one example, patronage activities that would even have embarrassed the previous Government, which was a patronage leader.

People believe that the Conservative Government is the government of big business, a government for banks, oil companies and for everybody but the ordinary Canadians. That is the bottom line. Thirty-eight per cent support in the Gallup poll is not the stopping point for this outfit either, Mr. Speaker.

It is a real tragedy because there was a crying demand for a change to set a different course of action from the stale Liberal Government that was stuck in its ways, that made patronage an art, and that did not represent the wishes of Canadians. It was past time for the Liberals to go. They should have gone well before they were sent to their just reward in September, 1984.

For this Government to turn around and commit political suicide in a year and a half is astounding. The people never endorsed what the Government proposed. People were looking for a sound change, not the kind of disaster that is being inflicted on them by questionable activity.

It is interesting that those back-benchers are silent on this PGRT Bill.

Mr. Blenkarn: Oh, come on!

Mr. Skelly: They are silent on gas pricing. I hear one of them moaning and groaning now. They should jump up and tell the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) that he is dead wrong. One example I love is that the Prime Minister said that they had to cut the old age pension, that it was the best thing since sliced bread.

Mr. Valcourt: He never said that.

Mr. Skelly: They fought in the trenches for days, weeks and months on that. After his back-benchers had returned to their ridings and told people that there had to be a cut in indexation and that the deficit had to come down, the Prime Minister turned around several months later and said: "I guess we were wrong; we do not have to do it". The upshot is that he made his back-benchers look like fools. I do not know how they can return to their ridings and explain "Tunagate", the clam scam or the many other things for which the Government will really be remembered.

Mr. Valcourt: A drop in unemployment and a drop in interest rates.

Mr. Skelly: The Hon. Member is talking about the fortuitous accidents that happen to befall the Government.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Skelly: Prior to the last election it was predicted that there would be a recovery. They are the beneficiaries, standing there with their hands open and their minds empty. It is incredible to watch them claim responsibility for the upturn in the economy. That is complete rubbish, and Canadians know it. I ask them to look at the Gallup poll. If they think Canadians believe them, why is the Gallup poll at 38 per cent? Canadians think that the Government is the worst thing that has happened to the country since it was formed. One does not have to travel very far to get that opinion. They were the same people who had tremendous expectations that there would be the dawning of a new era; it was really the dawning of a disaster. Enough suffering over a five-year period will convince Canadians generally that the course of action was a bad one and that they will have to look at something different from the Liberal Party and of course something completely different from the Conservative Party. If we are talking about the PGRT, it is time to turn this around. If we are talking about protecting pensions and post-secondary education, it is time to turn this around. The back-benchers of the Conservative Party cannot sit over there and say nothing. They have to rise and criticize the Prime Minister. They have to rise and condemn the Cabinet for the direction being taken. Where will their seats go? What are they doing to the people they represent?

Mr. Valcourt: You are worried about my seat! Don't worry about my seat.

Mr. Skelly: I find that surprising. The PGRT concerns us all. The Hon. Member who just spoke out should tell the people whom he represents about the wrong-headedness of the Government, the wrong direction it is taking and the harm which will come from it. If he were truly representing his riding, he would tell them how he dissociates himself from the direction of the Government. Then I think he would have his seat, but he probably would have crossed the floor by that time. When the lights go on and he realizes the direction which should be taken, he will certainly look at some other option.

There are few people over there with the courage of their convictions, able to stand on principle and represent the people in an effective way. So far we have had one, that is, the former Minister of the Environment and Minister of State for Transport. She has risen and said: "I have had enough of this; this is the wrong direction in which to be travelling". I predict that there will be more. Not everyone on those benches can continue to carry the line. I hope, when the next speaker for the Conservative Party rises in her place—

Mr. Keeper: Do you think she will?

Mr. Skelly: —to comment on the PGRT, that as one of the back-benchers in the Conservative Party she will speak in the interests of ordinary Canadians, not just in the interests of banks and oil companies. I am convinced that that will commence, that there will be a change, a move toward principle. That is what will turn around the Prime Minister and turn around the ideological fixation of the Cabinet. Then the harm to Canadians will be stopped, and they will proceed in a different direction. I see that my time is drawing nigh. If someone would pit me a question, I would certainly be glad to carry on for another 10 minutes and develop some of the things which I had to let sit in my speech.

Mrs. Sparrow: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question and comment. I thought I would take this opportunity to inform my colleague just what the PGRT was. He related it directly to reserves. The PGRT was a well-head tax on gross revenues from production; it had nothing to do with reserves. The phase out of the PGRT does not hand billions of dollars to the oil companies. The moneys which were generated from this unfair tax went mainly to PIP, plus a very expensive means for keeping an artificially low-priced crude and natural gas in the country. This is one of the main reasons that we have got into so many difficulties.

Mr. Axworthy: Did she say "artificially low-priced crude and natural gas"?

Mrs. Sparrow: Also I want to inform my colleague that oil and gas investments are up by some $2 billion or more in the past year, that is, up by 25 per cent. This investment is creating thousands of new jobs across the country by stimulating exploration, an activity which creates energy security. The number of wells drilled is up by 23 per cent, and land sales are up by 73 per cent. Could I ask my colleague what he has against creating 25,000 new jobs directly related to the oil industry? What does he have against creating new jobs or new investment for the country?

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I thought the statement of the previous speaker was an excellent one. Her statement that the Liberal Government had kept the price of oil, gasoline and other fuel products artificially low during its term of office is astounding. It summarizes the position of the Conservative Party. There is no denying it; everyone in the House and in the country heard her say that during the Liberal regime of the last few years they kept the price of gasoline artificially low. That is a farce. Everyone knows what happened to the price of gasoline. Next to interest rates it is probably the worst thing that has happened to Canadians. I draw as a conclusion from what she said in her statement that the Conservatives would like to see the price of gasoline rise. They would like to see the profits of Imperial Oil continue to rise and sky-rocket as they have.

Mrs. Sparrow: Do you know about supply and demand?

Mr. Skelly: It is astounding. I have drawn from her statement the following conclusions—first, that the price of gasoline has been kept artificially low over the years and that the Conservatives will increase it; and, second, that they will not tax the windfall profits of oil companies from dramatically increased prices of oil and gas as a result of these incentives. Therefore, with fewer government revenues, services will have to be cut and it will basically be a disaster. I firmly believe that, and I think down deep she does as well.

Mrs. Sparrow: No.

Mr. Skelly: I think she is a little reluctant to speak out at this time. There is not that many of them speaking out against the direction of the Government, and the consequences are very serious. I had hoped that when she spoke we would have a situation where another Conservative was taking a more independent position in the interest of ordinary Canadians.

Mrs. Sparrow: You bet we are interested in ordinary Canadians.

Mr. Skelly: I cannot understand what they are taking which would affect their perception in such a way as to distort the facts concerning the 25,000 new jobs. It is the recovery which is going on in some areas of the country. It is happening in spite of the Conservatives, in spite of the Conservatives. There would likely be more jobs if the Conservatives would simply get out of the way and stop throwing obstructions in the way of development and expansion of employment. Only 38 per cent of Canadians believe the nonsense that was included in the statement of the previous speaker, who is simply repeating the nonsense of the Prime Minister. At any rate, thank you for your tolerance, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Hawkes: It is amazing to sit in this Chamber year after year. There was an election sought in 1979 on the issue of taxation at the gas pump. Our Party proposed we increase taxation at the pump. We lost that election and we got the PGRT. Here is a member of the New Democratic Party supposedly standing up for the ordinary man.

Mr. Speaker, five years later, after having supported that program, he fails to understand that a tax which is levelled at the well-head, the PGRT, is a tax which works its way through the entire refining process. It shows up at the consumer level, not on gasoline that goes into a Cadillac, not exclusively on that. It shows up in the budget of every senior citizen in this country who has to heat his or her home.

He stands up here as if he were the champion of the downtrodden and those who cannot afford it. Well, he defeated a Budget that had taxation on gasoline so that those who drove a Cadillac paid more, those who drove a small car paid less, and those who drove no car paid nothing. His Party in turn came and supported the PGRT, which took money out of the pockets of senior citizens who they could not avoid paying it because they had to heat their homes. His Party turned down a tax credit that was to go to those same senior citizens that would have reduced costs for the poor segment of society. That is the kind of proposal that this Party has made time after time, year after year. It is working; the poor people in this society are better off today because we are the Government. The 500,000 who are working today are ordinary Canadians drawing an ordinary income, and they love it.

For the Hon. Member to speak with that kind of hypocrisy is almost more than this House should be required to bear.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hawkes: Let's get rid of the PGRT.

Mr. Skelly: We have seen over the last century people who have distorted history to fit their own needs. I have never heard a better example of it. The Hon. Member does not recall the Member from Alberta admitting after that particular election that he was wrong and saying: "Yes, I was wrong. I take full responsibility for the Budget and the foul-up and everything else". What happens is that the distortion is enormous. The man stood up after the election and said, "I screwed up, it was my fault. I made a dumb move". Now, we all accepted that, why can't you guys? They wanted to go to the polls. With the Social Credit Party and the Government there was a one-seat margin, that was unsustainable. He came in with a housing tax credit and went to the people, and the people felt about him the same way they feel about the present Government. It is time to get rid of it. If you called the vote today you would not be sitting on that side of the House. Unless some of you guys start standing up and speaking out on behalf of Canadians and against the Prime Minister and the Cabinet and the direction they are taking, you are going to go the way of the 1979 Parliament. You are going to be a memory around here and a picture on the wall. I would be glad to continue, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Resuming debate.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, this is an interesting paradox. We are here debating a Bill whose time has passed. Outside in the world around us the whole structure of the oil industry and oil pricing is shattering into pieces. The whole premise upon which the Western Accord was built has not been totally erased. Oil prices have now dropped something like $7 in the past three weeks, $5 billion worth of revenues have been lost, and as a result the basic philosophy that was contained in the Western Accord is under severe and total disruption.

Here we are in Parliament debating a Bill which is going to put in place a structure that is already obsolescent, that is no longer relevant to the conditions of the oil industry and the conditions faced by Canadian consumers. It is perhaps a prime example of how the machinery of Government grinds slowly. In this case the machinery of the Government has become totally immobilized, frozen in its tracks. The reason is that the ideological basis upon which the whole Western Accord was built has now been totally challenged. Like all good ideologues, the Conservatives are incapable of being able to adapt to new conditions. They are frozen and immobilized in the cast of their own preconceived thought and therefore can no longer adapt or change or respond to new conditions.

As a result, we are being faced with a policy that is beng put in place that in fact will be running counter to the economic vitality and growth of this country. Just look at the PGRT that was defended just a moment ago by the Member from Calgary. I want to quote to you an article which just recently appeared in the Western Economic Review. I guarantee you, this is not a magazine that is put out by any Liberal source. It is called "Macroeconomic Impact of the Western Accord". It was printed in the fall, 1985 volume. It said:

> The 1990 federal deficit will be $3.9 billion higher than it would have been otherwise as a result of the elimination of the PGRT.

I would guess that, since this Government was elected to office that about a million times, maybe two million times we have heard the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), plus every Conservative Member of Parliament and I do not think there has been one who has not said that the primary objective of the Government of Canada is to reduce the deficit. Is that not what all of you have been saying? Once we get the deficit down, unless we get our economic machinery in order, the economy will not thrive. That is your stated objective. The number one single objective of the Conservative Government was deficit reduction. If you look at the economic analysis, the cumulative loss from 1985 to 1990, according to a very objective economic analysis of the macroeconomics, based upon the proper forecasting method, will be $12.2 billion. I quote again from page 105 of this article which reads:

> The net cumulative loss for the federal Government is $12.2 billion between 1985 and 1990.

It may come as a matter of some suprise—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Hawkes: I am having trouble following the speech. Could he tell us what is price assumption there for a barrel of crude so we can follow that argument?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to submit this article to the Hon. Member so perhaps he could start his education at some point of time.

The fact that we are trying to make—

An Hon. Member: Education both ways.

Mr. Axworthy: Some people I know are beyond retraining, but those of us who are Liberals always have an optimism about the basic flexibility of human nature, so there is always hope for the Member from Calgary.

● (1210)

The fact is that the primary goal established by the Conservative Government is being totally contradicted by this Bill. The Government is countering its stated goal of reducing the deficit by eliminating the PGRT in the way it has been done.

Let me deal with a further point made in the same article to which I had referred. It is pointed out that in addition to the net loss of revenue coming from the total elimination of the PGRT, the imposition of new excise taxes will add an even further burden to the economy. The article indicated that the excise tax offsets the impact of the Western Accord in terms of whatever employment stimulation or growth potential there might have been. I believe those are facts that should be taken into account.

We cannot measure the effect of the Western Accord in isolation. We must measure it in relation to the substantial increase in excise taxes that have been imposed on the Canadian consumer. This will reduce consumption and have a negative effect on employment. The Government's policies are running headlong into one another. There is no rhyme or reason to them, there is no symmetry to them. If we wonder why Canadians are losing faith and confidence in the Government, it is because they realize that the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) do not talk to each other any longer. They have put totally contradictory policies in place.

The kind of analysis contained in this particular article to which I have referred becomes even more serious and dramatic when taking into account the conditions we now face. The entire Western Accord was built upon the basic assumption that oil prices would remain flat or decline only marginally. There is a very small range of gas prices upon which the Western Accord was based. Those are not my words, Mr. Speaker. In the Western Accord itself, there is a contingency plan which indicates that if prices increase dramatically or decrease dramatically, the Government will have to step in to impose a new regime. That is part of the policy of the Western Accord. Yet the Government is frozen from doing anything about it.

The Western Accord was based upon a very narrow price range for oil at the well-head, a price range that already in the past week has been totally exceeded. What answers have we got from the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources? She has shrugged her shoulders and said that it is the market-place that will decide. The market-place is not deciding. The fact is that there is no connection between pricing and demand at this point in time. Again the facts totally contradict the premise of the policy.

At the same time that the Government said it would deregulate the oil and gas industry by removing taxes, it was coming at it from the other flank by imposing a whole new set of federal taxes to offset totally, contradict, eliminate and wipe out the benefits of that deregulation. The question of credibility is a very important one for a Government. This Government probably holds the record for losing the confidence of the Canadian people faster than any other Government. It has even surpassed the incredible diminution of support for Mr. Diefenbaker's Government. This has happened not because the Government is malevolent but just because it does not know what it is doing.

The energy policy was supposed to be the centre of the new economic order which was the basis of the entire Conservative Government campaign. Energy was to be the driving engine of growth. The Hon. Member for Calgary South (Mrs. Sparrow) rose to say that there would be 25,000 new jobs created and new investment. I would ask her if that is going to happen with a $5-billion loss in revenue in the past month.

Mrs. Sparrow: It already has.

Mr. Axworthy: No, it has not happened. I am sorry. What is going to happen to Hibernia? Where is the Husky upgrader? Has a decision been made on that? No, it is still in limbo. What about the various heavy oil projects and the frontier exploration? What is going to happen to all the major oil projects as the price begins to fall dramatically and there is no cushioning? What is going to happen to the engine of growth? What is the Government doing about it? It has a Bill before the House to eliminate the PGRT based upon an analysis done three or four years ago. It has nothing to do or say about the conditions we face today.

Taking a macro-economic or budgetary point of view, the thrust of the Government's other economic policies is running totally counter to the elimination of the PGRT. It strikes me as exceedingly hypocritical for a Government to be lauding its efforts to reduce the deficit while we know full well that the increase to the deficit will be $3.5 billion.

The Government had alternatives. A series of papers were produced by the Economic Council about a year and a half ago dealing with changing the tax regime on the oil and gas industry as it should have changed as conditions changed. There is the possibility for an excess profit tax as a way of recapturing some revenue. Certainly a Liberal Government would never have introduced the kind of heavy burden of additional excise taxes that has created the counter-movement to the results of the elimination of the PGRT. Surely Conservative Members of Parliament and of Cabinet would have enough wit to realize that if they take taxes off from one side and increase them on the other, they will totally eliminate whatever benefits are supposed to be created. If the PGRT is eliminated and a substantial amount of cash revenue is added to the oil industry, one would assume that there would be more investment. That was the risk that was being taken. It is a different philosophy but we have to accept it.

We had a different point of view. We felt that revenue should be more broadly shared and that the Government should have a larger part of that revenue so it could be allocated toward social programs and other programs of economic benefit. I would repeat to Members from western Canada that a direct result of that was the ability to change the western grain transportation system, something which in itself is generating a large economic impact in the West through new capital investment. That was paid for by the recovery of revenues through the PGRT. We felt that there were other economic initiatives in western Canada that had to be financed including the modernization of the railway system to meet the demands of the coal and grain producers for a modern transportation system. We had to recover revenue somewhere and rather than having it all concentrated in one industry, we tried to share it. Conservative Members were against that and they won the election. That is fair enough. Why then should they turn themselves up on their heads by introducing a whole new set of excise taxes that negate that influence?

The rationale for the Conservative position was put very clearly by my colleague this morning. Who is being taxed? Conservative Members feel that it is much fairer and more equitable to raise taxes from the consumers than from the industry. That is the difference between our two positions. That is the real nub of the issue. The Government will put the taxes directly on to the consumer, in this case, except that it lost just one small piece of economic rational thinking, namely, that taxes are taxes are taxes, and that when we draw that money from the consumers, it will also have an impact upon the energy industry itself because it will reduce consumption. It will reduce growth and it will draw money away from consumers in terms of the purchase of other goods and services including the products of the oil industry. That is why this particular study in the Western Economic Review properly points out that:

Furthermore, an examination of the impact of the increase in the motive fuels excise tax suggests that attempts to recoup the revenue losses from other sectors of the economy may undo much of the positive impact of the accord—

There is, I think, fairly clear and irrefutable evidence that we are debating a Bill which simply does not make much economic sense. It should be sent back and be redrafted. It should be looked at not only in relation to the larger budgetary objectives of the Government, but it surely must be reviewed and re-examined in light of the new conditions of the oil and energy sector of our economy. Surely we can expect that from a Government who has representatives from the oil producing sector in good numbers, people who claim they know the oil industry well, and we take them at their word. When those Hon. Members went back to their constituencies this weekend, they must have heard what the concerns were. There is a major dislocation and disruption taking place. If those Hon. Members have not heard that, then I suggest they get out of the isolation ward in which they exist, because I certainly have heard it. Oil industry people have talked to me in the last 48 hours and they have told me what is going on. Equally so, if those Hon. Members are not, at least, talking to people in the industry, I suggest they talk to the people who put their ballots in the box on September 4, because they are the ones who are going to the gas pumps every day. They are now starting petitions right across Canada demanding to know why it is that at least the promise made by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources when she spoke at a conference was not kept. She said: "Falling oil prices will immediately result in better deals for the consumer". They are asking why that has not occurred.

It strikes me that if there is to be from this Government any sense of responsiveness to the interests of the people of this country, then surely it must open its eyes and ears, listen, watch carefully what is taking place in our energy sector and try to come to grips with it.

Before I conclude I would like to comment on the point which was raised by my colleague, our energy critic, when he said that what was even more disturbing were the comments made by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources last weekend concerning Petro-Canada. We know that this Government is hell-bent on privatization, but there should be one fundamental test of whether one privatizes a Crown corporation or keeps it in the public sector. Does it serve the public's interest? Petro-Canada was established for a number of reasons well known to this House. It was primarily to make sure that there was some ability for Canadian interest to help shape energy policies and, more important, to provide some leadership on behalf of the public. There was a very wide suspicion that not always did the oil industry, the multinationals, work totally in the interests of the consumer and that it would be helpful to have a countervail. I believe that Petro-Canada, over the initial years of its functioning, served that purpose. What we have had revealed to us this weekend is really a secret conspiracy, that even before the Government privatizes and puts the shares on the market, it has basically given the mandate to Petro-Canada to be a gouger like everyone else. Rather than trying to lead the industry, at a time when oil prices are falling to bring prices down, to be responsive, in fact the Government was responsible for two substantital wholesale price increases. The Crown corporation which was established to serve the public interest is being encouraged in fact to pump up its own revenue base so that the share offering can be at a higher level when the Government wants to privatize.

If anything is more nefarious than that kind of shenanigan, that kind of financial inflation by the Government of the Petro-Canada revenue base, I do not know what it could be. The Government has distorted and destroyed the public interest in that Crown corporation, and that, I think, is one of the most serious indictments that can be raised. The Government is not coming clean with the Canadian public and it is using an agency of Government, not to serve the public interest, but to work against it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments on the speech of the Hon. Member? Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is the following one. Mrs. McDougall, seconded by Mr. Oberle, moves that Bill C-82, an Act to amend the Petroleum Gas and Revenue Tax Act and the Income Tax Act, be now read the third time and passed. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mrs. McDougall), which was agreed to on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Speaker: Shall I call it one o'clock and introduce the next matter at three o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 12:59 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Speaker: Before calling Statements pursuant to Standing Order 22, I am advised that there may be a desire to have a special brief period of statements and to have procedures delayed accordingly. At the conclusion of this round of special statements, we would then call Statements under Standing Order 22.

THE LATE GÉRARD DUQUET

Mr. Gaston Isabelle (Hull-Aylmer): Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that I face my task today of announcing to the Members of this House the passing away of a former colleague, the former Member for Québec East, Gérard Duquet.

Mr. Duquet was extraordinary: always courteous, smiling, friendly, and diplomatic. As a Member he was always ready to serve.

On his many trips as an official representative of his country, he always conducted himself with honour and distinction, and those who had the pleasure of travelling with him will remember the eloquence and pride with which he spoke of his love for his native country, Canada.

He was elected in 1965, and although as a Member of Parliament, his great dedication often exceeded his physical strength, he never let this show.

During his long political career, his greatest joy was to be a faithful representative and intimate associate of the community he represented in Parliament.

He held a number of positions in the House, but those he preferred and in which he made a major contribution were the positions he held on the Standing Committee on Management and Member Services.

A fierce defender of the rights of his colleagues, he always represented the voice of experience, rational thinking and logic. Finally, he was a true parliamentarian, and his colleagues will remember him as a paragon among members, dedicated to his country and to his constituents. Mr. Speaker, he belonged to the elite of our parliamentary system.

I am sure all my colleagues will wish to join me in addressing our sincere condolences to his wife, other members of his family, and to his friends.

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I cannot but agree with the words spoken by the Hon. Member for Hull-Aylmer (Mr. Isabelle), who knew the former Member for Quebec East, Mr. Duquet, personally, and perhaps even better than I did.

When I arrived in the House of Commons in 1968, I had the pleasure of getting to know our colleague, and, Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my deepest regrets at his passing away. I also would like to say I believe Mr. Duquet was always very much respected on both sides of the House, for his speeches as well as for his actions. He was a politician who, through his achievements, demonstrated his lively interest in the province of Quebec and his country. I know that practically his whole life was dedicated to politics. I think I can say, without exaggeration, that he did so out of a desire to serve his fellow men.

Today, speaking on behalf of all my colleagues, the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) and the entire Cabinet, I wish to offer his family the customary condolences, and I want them to know we shall remember with respect his contribution to the House of Commons and the manner in which he served a community which he represented so faithfully and so well.

[English]

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my two colleagues in paying tribute to Mr. Gérard Duquet for his service both to Canada as a whole and to his community in particular. Mr. Duquet, as I had come to know him, brought to the House of Commons a considerable breadth of experience, not only in matters parliamentary but in terms of the community which he served and the business world. He was very highly regarded by his associates in business throughout the time leading up to his election to the House of Commons. He brought to the many committees of the House that he sat on a perspective which is so necessary in coming to decisions.

● (1405)

He was also representative of a large number of the people within the province that he served so well, representing them not only here but within the many organizations that stem and flow from the Province of Quebec. I want to extend on behalf of my colleagues, and to join with those of other Members of Parliament, our deepest sympathies to his family and to his friends.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the House would want to show its respect and its sympathy in the usual way.

[Editor's Note: Whereupon the House stood in silence.]

Mr. Speaker: We will now proceed to Statements Under Standing Order 22 with eight minutes extended.

AGRICULTURE

SUGAR-BEET INDUSTRY IN ALBERTA AND MANITOBA

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I want to spend a few moments talking about an industry in western Canada that is in danger of dying, an industry which has importance for something like 50 communities, and which is now desperate for some assistance from the Government. I speak of the sugar-beet industry, which over the years has provided a very important source of income and employment in the Provinces of Alberta and Manitoba.

Unless a decision is made this week on a national sugar policy, that industry will not be in a position to plant a crop next year. That will mean the livelihood of many farmers and producers, as well as of many workers in the sugar refining plant in Winnipeg, will cease to exist. That is not necessary since there have been widespread consultations and many promises.

There have been commitments for action on the part of the Government. What has been missing is an answer to the serious plight of that industry. The time is growing short, and unless some specific response is made within a matter of a few days we will no longer have a very important industry in a very important region of our country.

I rise today to urge the members of the Cabinet to come to grips with the sugar-beet problem in Canada and to come forward with a policy so that industry can survive.

TAXATION

INCOME TAX ACT 1985

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa-Centre): Mr. Speaker, since my colleagues conducting the New Democratic Party's 1986 tax review are already in Winnipeg today to start our national tour and consult with Canadians on the tax system, I would like to demonstrate the straightforwardness and clarity of our legislation with a reading from the Canadian Income Tax Act, 1985.

This is Section 110.1(3):

(3) Idem. For the purposes of this section, subject to subsection (2), interest included in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year shall be deemed to include

(a) the amount by which the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an annuity payment included by virtue of paragraph 56(1)(d) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year exceeds the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the capital element of the payment as determined or established under paragraph 60(a);

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the aggregate of amounts each of which is an amount included by virtue of subsection 148(1) or (1.1) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year in respect of the disposition of an interest in a life insurance policy exceeds

(ii) the portion thereof arising from a disposition described in subparagraph 148(9)(c)(ii) in respect of that policy; and

(c) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount included—

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired.

ABORTION

DISPOSAL OF BODIES OF ABORTED BABIES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, Statistics Canada's figures show that from 1975 to 1983 there were 548,133 abortions in Canada. What a grizzly compendium! Half a million babies were murdered in the womb.

What did we do with these babies that were aborted? They had no burial; instead, their cut-up bodies were treated as medical waste and incinerated with hospital garbage. Doesn't that make you sick?

I have no evidence that this is going on in Canada, but in some countries foetuses are commercialized and sold to manufacturers. At the Swiss-French border in 1983, guards intercepted a truck loaded with frozen human foetuses destined for a cosmetic factory. U.S. hospital authorities revealed that they had collected $68,000 from commercial firms for organs of aborted and dead premature babies.

Canada does not keep statistics on the number of aborted babies born alive. Sometimes something goes wrong in the abortion process and a baby is born alive. In the U.S., some of these babies have lived while others were left to die. In fact charges have been laid against people who stood by and did nothing to save the life of a live aborted child.

We seem to have rights for everyone except the unborn. It is high time that we recognized, by legislation, the rights of the unborn; their right to live!

VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS

TORONTO POLICE FORCE'S AID TO COMMONWEALTH CARIBBEAN ISLANDS

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, last October I was contacted by the Metropolitan Toronto Police Force which requested my assistance in securing transportation for surplus goods it had collected and was donating to communities in various Commonwealth Caribbean islands, particularly Jamaica and Grenada. This program, initiated by the Commonwealth Caribbean Committee operates without a budget and solely on the volunteer time donated by concerned individuals.

On behalf of the Commonwealth Caribbean Committee, I wish to extend my thanks to the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen) for agreeing to provide cargo space aboard Armed Forces Hercules for hospital equipment and educational material destined for the islands. In a letter to me, the Toronto Police Force said of this assistance:

> This program is important to needy communities and children in these Commonwealth Caribbean islands. It also shows them that Canada is a nation that cares about others less fortunate than we are.

Not only does the Government care about the underdeveloped areas of the Caribbean, it is backing this up with action, action that will directly benefit those who are most in need. This is a Government with a heart.

INSURANCE

NATIONAL SKI TEAM—COST OF LIABILITY COVERAGE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, we hear that the cost of liability insurance for our national ski team has increased by 420 per cent, so that the association will have to spend $150,000 more than it was expecting to pay this year.

We wonder whether the Conservative Government was serious when it announced last week it would help our Canadian skiers. The result is so disastrous that the Canadian Ski Association is not sure it is going to take out this insurance, owing to a lack of funds. Is the Conservative Government going to act responsibly and pay the difference of $150,000, and thus make it possible for our athletes to take part in international competitions? The Conservative Government is actually letting the insurance companies hold our athletes to ransom.

This morning, Mr. Speaker, we heard that—

[English]

> Soaring insurance costs may force parachute worlds to move from B.C. in '87.

How can the Government allow this to happen?

INCOME TAX ACT

CALL FOR SIMPLIFICATION

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Today's Income Tax Act can only be described as a compilation of incomprehensible mumbo-jumbo. Why has something which is relatively simple in concept grown to be such a monster? The answer lies in the Liberal-NDP approach to taxation which has prevailed over so many years. The socialists have looked upon income tax as primarily a means of redistributing income from the productive to the non-productive sectors of society. During their tenure in office, successive Liberal Governments, egged on by their friends in the New Democratic Party, added layer upon layer of obfuscation and incomprehensibility.

The time has come to make a real effort to simplify and render understandable our tax legislation. The basic idea behind taxation must be to raise, in as painless and equitable a way as possible, only those moneys required for necessary public purposes.

We must strip away the yellowed layers of socialist varnish to reveal a fair, honest, equitable, and understandable tax system.

HEALTH

GLUE SNIFFING RE-EMERGENCE IN WINNIPEG

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, glue sniffing has re-emerged in Winnipeg as an urgent concern and it probably has national dimensions as well. It involves the abuse of common household dimensions as well. It involves the abuse of common household products such as nail polish remover and contact cement. The effect of glue sniffing is to cloud the brain. It encourages vandalism, the exchange of sexual favours, and it has even killed young people through accidental over exposure.

The Winnipeg Indian Family Centre burned down recently. The community sought the causes of glue sniffing and found it in unmet human needs, lack of recreational facilities, and in free access to the product.

We had a bylaw in Winnipeg which regulated the sale of these products, kept them behind the counters and limited the age of people allowed access to them. The bylaw worked and the incidents of glue sniffing decreased in numbers. However, the courts threw the bylaw out. It is now a federal responsibility. The federal Government must act. We need to know whether the federal Government cares enough about community concerns and children, or if it will only respond to the business desire for the products to remain unregulated. These products can kill. Something can be done—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member knows the rules against displays. The Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek.

THE ECONOMY

EFFECT OF GOVERNMENT DEFICITS ON EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, the head of the Canadian Labour Congress recently stated: "Government should realize their concern for jobs for all Canadians must override their preoccupation with deficits". What an incredible statement! If deficits are the answer, then why do so many remain unemployed after years of deficit financing? If, according to the Liberals and the NDP, deficits create jobs, why is it that 1.5 million Canadians were out of work when we took office? The truth is that deficits do not create jobs, they cost jobs.

Deficits rob Canadians of financial, social, and human resources. Money used to pay interest on the outstanding debt are simply not available for other government purposes, or indeed, to reduce taxes.

September 4, 1984, marked a watershed. For the first time in a generation we have a Government which is willing to face up to the deficit. The goal is job creation all right, but job creation through responsible deficit reduction. During the first seven months of this fiscal year the deficit actually went down. We have created more jobs in 17 months than the Liberals did in the previous five years. These encouraging figures are concrete proof that the policies set forth in the May Budget are paying off. This represents a clear break with a trend established by successive Liberal Governments which pushed an ever-increasing deficit burden onto the backs of Canadians and nearly destroyed our economy. Stay the course, Mike Wilson, you are on the right track!

INDIAN AFFAIRS

NEW BRUNSWICK—PROVINCE'S POSITION ON CONTROL OF EDUCATION FUNDS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, Indian control of Indian education is supposed to be a long-standing policy of the federal Government. The policy recognized that if Indian students were to have the same opportunities that are available to other Canadians, Indian communities would have to participate in making basic decisions about schools and curricula. Unfortunately the Conservative Government of New Brunswick has given notice that it will no longer recognize a 1967 Indian education agreement with the federal Government.

The province does not agree with the section which allows individual Indian bands to control their education funds directly. The Kingsclear Indian Band in New Brunswick has asked for its education funding directly from the federal Government so it can purchase education services as desired by the Band. Instead of co-operating with the Band, the Conservative provincial Government has chosen to end the agreement. As the federal Government now claims to support Indian self-government, it should support the New Brunswick chiefs on this issue. Talk about self-government is a meaningless fraud unless Indian people have control in areas, which, by departmental policy, they already should have control.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

SEXUAL HARASSMENT ALLEGATIONS—ROLE OF LIBERAL MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I rise to express the opinion that the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) and the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) should rise in this House and issue a formal apology to the two female peace officers whose privileges were abused by the actions of those two Members last week. They should also write a formal letter of explanation to the Commissioner of the RCMP so that the personnel files of the two peace officers contain a clear explanation showing that the Hon. Members acted on their own and without permission of the two peace officers concerned.

As Members of Parliament we have an awesome power to do good or bad. In this case the two Members put their political interests above the personal interests of the two female peace officers. Women in the workplace have enough problems without MPs adding to the load. I am sure our colleagues will do the honourable thing and issue an apology, as well as a letter of explanation to the Commissioner.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

EMPLOYMENT

VANCOUVER FOOD BANK EMPLOYMENT GRANTS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Last week her Department cut off grants to the Vancouver Food Bank which will affect 10 full-time employees. Since food banks in several cities, together with other charitable organizations, are dealing directly with the sick and needy, why would her Department choose to cut off the food bank at this time?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that the programs in which my Department is engaged are now directed toward the training of people for long-term employment. We are making very real contribution to the way in which people will be able to take advantage of the job development and job-creation programs, and in employment growth in our country. It is for that reason I was pleased to see that in British Columbia the number of new jobs created in the last month increased substantially.

EFFECT OF NEW PROGRAMS ON CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, that answer is not going to impress the thousands of people who have to line up at food banks to feed their families, I tell you that.

The Minister has changed the rules. That threatens the future of thousands of charitable organizations dealing with the sick and needy. Her bureaucracy is now insisting that charitable organizations like the Vancouver Food Bank fire their existing employees and hire new ones so they can qualify under her program. Would she look into it because it is a mess?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased with the way these new programs are developing. I can tell the Hon. Member that in British Columbia some 1,650 new job training and job-creation projects have been created this year. Some 7,200 are now involved in these projects which will give them new opportunities for the future. This involves the expenditure of some $56 million this year which has already been allocated. I feel that in doing this we have not only supported those projects directly involved in the training of people in co-operation with the private sector, but 70 per cent of them are operating in co-operation with community organizations which are dedicated to helping individuals.

● (1425)

CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS—SUBSIDIES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the Montreal area alone, 500 community organizations have let the Minister know they have been "cut" by her department. They have no more funds. I will put the question directly to the Minister once again. Why should these charitable organizations have to fire their experienced employees? Why should they have to hire new staff to be eligible for her Department's subsidies? Why the confusion?

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, as I explained to the Leader of the Opposition, 70 per cent of the projects already approved in the Province of Quebec are sponsored by community organizations. The rules have not changed except for the requirement of a training component so that the people who are involved in these projects have a better opportunity than they had in the past of acquiring a permanent job when they finish.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Today in the Atlantic provinces a litre of gasoline can be as high as 75 cents. Mr. Speaker, that is higher than the Canadian dollar and, unlike the Canadian dollar, gas prices are going up.

Does the Minister realize how crippling this is for a worker who puts gas in his pickup truck, or for a fisherman who puts gas in his outboard motor? Will she move now to roll back that increasing spiral so that workers in the Atlantic provinces can earn a decent living?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, as I have already informed the House in response to similar questions last week, Canadians buy more than gasoline when they fill up their tanks at the gas stations. They are paying for social services such as old age pensions—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: —and for post secondary education. They are paying for the whole range of social services that Canadians have indicated they want to support.

Ms. Copps: They are paying the multinational oil companies their profits.

Mr. Rompkey: Mr. Speaker, that answer is as valueless as gas prices are expensive.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the Minister that a logger in central Newfoundland pays 55 cents a litre for gas for his chain saw.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a supplementary question, please.

Mr. Rompkey: At that price it is not the trees that are geting cut down, it is the loggers.

Will the Minister establish a fair price for gasoline? That policy and others of the Government are crippling the economy of the Atlantic area.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the Hon. Member's rhetoric should have been saved for the time when his Party was in power. His Party increased gasoline prices 80 per cent under the NEP.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

PETRO-CANADA

REQUEST FOR RETENTION IN PUBLIC SECTOR

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Last week we were urging the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources to instruct Petro-Canada to live up to its public mandate by keeping prices down to a reasonable level. She refused. Last night on the television program Sunday Report we learned why, when the Minister announced her intention to continue with the privatization of Petro-Canada.

Last August the Prime Minister said: "It is Conservative policy to maintain Petro-Canada". Any privatization of Petro-Canada would have the effect of destroying its public mandate and making it a profit maximizer just like Shell or Imperial Oil. Therefore, will the Prime Minister undertake to the House to maintain Petro-Canada completely in the public sector?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, we will not give that undertaking if my hon. friend is requesting an undertaking that, forever and a day, Petro-Canada will be 100 per cent state owned. It may very well be that the national interest could best be served by issuing a part of the shares in favour of ordinary Canadians. That may very well be in the national interest and, if it is, we will proceed along those lines. However, there is no doubt that this Party is supportive of the concept of a national energy company, but one that does work on behalf of all Canadians.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, ordinary Canadians now own Petro-Canada completely. They do not need a change from that.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Considering that Petro-Canada cannot serve a broad national mandate on the one hand and be a profit maximizer on the other—which is acknowledged by the Chairman of Petro-Canada in the current annual report of that Corporation—will she admit that she refused to instruct Petro-Canada to bring down prices last week because she wants to maximize its profits in order to fatten it up to be sold off to the private sector? Will she admit that?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Broadbent: Obviously they are not going to bring down prices and are setting out to destroy Petro-Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: The last Conservative Prime Minister who laughed about the fate of Petro-Canada lost his job. I warn the Prime Minister that the same thing will happen to him.

CORPORATION'S MANDATE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Considering that the Act was passed—

Mr. Crosbie: You're wasting gas, Ed.

Mr. Broadbent: Considering that the Act to establish Petro-Canada that was passed by Parliament gives it a broad mandate to explore, refine, and have reasonable prices, will the Minister admit that the new mandate given to Petro-Canada's Chairman completely violates the Act by requesting Petro-Canada to maximize its profits and, therefore, ignore the consumer as well as other Canadian interests?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the mandate is given to Petro-Canada by the Minister responsible for Petro-Canada, which is myself. I represent the Government and hold a share. The mandate says in particular that the Corporation is now being given a new mandate by its shareholder to operate in a commercial private sector fashion with emphasis on profitability and the need to maximize the return on the Government of Canada's investment. This involves billions of dollars of our most valuable frontier resources.

I remind the Hon. Member that this was the first Government to collect a dividend from Petro-Canada. We collected $30 million from Petro-Canada in the last Budget. One cannot ask a company to operate as if it is a private sector company, collect dividends from it which are returned to the Government of Canada, and then ask it to indulge in artificial pricing.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The people of northern Ontario are outraged because the prices for gasoline remain at an all-time high at the same time that world oil prices are falling very dramatically. Will the Minister explain to the motorists of northern Ontario why they can save $10 in filling up their tanks simply by driving across the bridge from Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, to The Soo, Michigan? Why are northern Ontario's neighbours in Minnesota paying the equivalent of 46 cents a litre when my constituents in Nakina, Ontario, are paying more than 63 cents a litre?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the reason is that taxes in Canada account for approximately a third of the cost of gasoline. Canadians are paying for medicare, old age pensions and other social services at the gas pump; Americans are not.

WORLD OIL PRICES

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is not addressing the issue of falling world prices. When world oil prices rise there is almost immediately a price increase at the pumps. Now, when they are falling, there is a long delay before there is even a small decrease in the price of gasoline at the pumps. Will the Minister explain why?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I know that the Hon. Member would not willfully mislead the House, so I assume that he has forgotten that under the Conservative regime, when my colleague, the present House Leader, was the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, he put in place a mechanism to ensure that price increases could not be imposed for 60 days to allow those increases to move through the system. Similarly, I have advised the House that, as crude prices come down and those decreases to through the system—I remind the House that Canadian companies dropped the price of crude last week—we expect that Canadians will have some benefit at the pump.

PETRO-CANADA

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT STUDY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. He indicated that at some point the Government might be prepared to sell some part of Petro-Canada to the private sector. Does he not recognize that a report commissioned for the previous Conservative Government in Ontario stated that the Government must act so as to protect minority shareholder interests and cannot operate as an instrument of over-all government policy if it sells part of its shares publicly? Is that what he wants to see happen?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, of course that is not what we want to see happen. That is why we are proceeding with such care to examine the issue of public participation in Petro-Canada.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, am I to understand from the Minister's answer that it is no longer Government policy to sell off part of Petro-Canada but that she is considering the possibility? Is it Government policy to sell off part of Petro-Canada or is it Government policy not to sell it? Which is it?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, before the Hon. Member gets completely carried away, let me read from the rest of Petro-Canada's mandate as dictated by me.

Mr. Broadbent: That is your mandate. That is not the Act.

Miss Carney: If the House cares to listen, it states: "However, the Government maintains the right as a shareholder to formally direct Petro-Canada to carry out certain activities in the national interest".

Some of these include Hibernia and Venture and the High Arctic. Our intention with Petro-Canada is to ensure that it will be in a position to develop these very vital resources for our energy supply in the future.

GULF REFINERY CLOSURE IN MONTREAL—EFFECT ON CONSUMERS EXPECTING PRICE REDUCTION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, the people of Montreal are also continuing to pay a lot for gas, despite the fact that world prices have started to fall dramatically.

I want to direct my question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, and inform her that this morning regular gas was selling for 59 cents a litre at the Petrocan station at 5985 Côte-des-Neiges, Montreal.

Meanwhile, in Boston the same gas was selling for 41.7 cents a litre, and 43 cents a litre—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. These are becoming long preambles. May I have a question, please?

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I would like to ask the Minister how closing down the Gulf refinery in Montreal can help the Montreal consumer who is waiting in vain for a drop in gas prices to reflect the drop in the price of crude oil?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I believe the Hon. Member is confusing two issues. I stated in the House that the supply and demand situation is quite in balance in Quebec. I have also said in the House that, as the price decreases work their way through the system, consumers in Montreal and other parts of Canada can excpect some benefit.

May I point out that one of the reasons why Montrealers pay such high prices as he quotes is that the provincial Government in Quebec applies a very high rate of tax. It is about 22 per cent of the cost of a litre of gasoline. I suggest that he is addressing his question to the wrong Minister.

REDUCTION OF GASOLINE PRICES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I simply want to ask the Minister how many thousands of signatures the national committee for the reduction of gas prices will have to collect before the Government decides to act in the interests of consumers?

In other words, what will it take for the Government to break down and to do something about the price of gas?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Government has already acted to the benefit of consumers by putting in place a market-sensitive system where gas price decreases can be passed along to the consumer, not like his Party which put in place a system whereby gas prices increased 80 per cent under that Government.

TOURISM

EFFECT OF GASOLINE PRICES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Tourism. Last Wednesday he told the House, as reported at page 10038 of Hansard:

—price has not had a significant impact on Americans' intentions to holiday in Canada.

On that day and since, he and I received several telegrams from different tourism industry associations, including the Tourism Association of Canada and the Northwest Ontario Travel Association, saying that high gas prices are a problem. Will the Minister take some action to lower those prices, or will he continue to tell the industry that he knows their business, they don't, and "father knows best"?

Hon. Jack Murta (Minister of State (Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, studies conducted by both Tourism Canada and the tourist industry in the United States have indicated without a shadow of a doubt that the price of gasoline in Canada does not have a significant impact on an American's intention to travel in this country.

What we want to do and what we are doing in Tourism Canada is going out and raising the awareness of Canada in the U.S. market so that more people will come up into this country. The price of gasoline is not a factor.

REPORTED STATEMENTS IN 1984

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Minister for an answer which, though mistaken, was at least understandable. Since the Prime Minister and several of his colleagues said in 1984 that the price of gasoline was a problem for the tourist industry, would the Minister tell us now that the Prime Minister was wrong or that conditions have changed since 1984 and, if so, would he tell us how?

Hon. Jack Murta (Minister of State (Tourism)): No, I won't, Mr. Speaker. The question is quite irrelevant.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: Arrogance is catching over there.

PETRO-CANADA

DECEMBER PRICE INCREASE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Last Monday the Minister stated that she did not know of any price increases by Petro-Canada in recent months, yet there have been two such price increases in gasoline in the last three months. Why, for instance, on December 9 was the price of gasoline increased by Petro-Canada when the price of crude had been decreasing worldwide in the months before that price increase?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware—and I will check Hansard—of making the comments which have been attributed to me. I do not comment on specific companies' marketing practices in specific areas. Governments do not set the price of gasoline. They reflect competition in the market-place, transportation and world prices. I may point out to the Hon. Member, because he is the critic in this field, that the component of a litre of gasoline which is directly attributable to the cost of crude is around 40 per cent to 44 per cent. Therefore it is not possible to have the kind of dramatic declines in gasoline prices as he is suggesting has taken place.

PRICE CHARGED BY OTTAWA SERVICE STATION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, if market conditions prevail, why, in July when crude went down from $28 per barrel U.S. to $26.93 per barrel, did we not feel any decrease in this country? We only received increases in gasoline prices. Why is the price of gasoline charged by Petro-Canada on the Merival strip in Ottawa West 1.3 cents per litre higher, according to a very irate consumer, than the price of gasoline charged by any of its competitors? Why is the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is two questions.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am truly unaware of a question directed to the Minister. If he wants to know about the cost of gasoline at an individual gas station, I suggest he should ask either the dealer or Petro-Canada directly.

PUBLIC SERVICE

EXECUTIVES' SALARIES—REMUNERATION OF PETRO-CANADA CHAIRMAN

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. On Friday he made public the Burns Report on executive compensation in the Public Service. Why, when Mr. Burns recommended a maximum salary range for Bill Hopper, Chairman of Petro-Canada, of $340,000, did the Prime Minister have the gall to increase his maximum salary range to some $475,000, which is more in one day than old age pensioners on the GIS and OAS receive in two months? Why did he have the gall to hand out such a handsome increase to Mr. Hopper?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in response to the Hon. Member I should start by saying that the proposition which he put forward is purely and utterly false. There is no basis in fact in what he said in respect of that particular increase. The situation is that there was an advisory group on executive compensation in the Public Service created by Mr. Trudeau. It made recommendations with respect to senior positions in the Public Service and in Crown corporations. The average increase is about 5 per cent in respect of compensation, less than that recommended by the particular group. I simply say to the Hon. Member that the particular group in question recommended higher compensation, but the decision of the Government was to give it on a lower basis, about 5 per cent on the average.

SALARY OF VIA RAIL CHAIRMAN

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Prime Minister to answer a question about his old crony, Lawrence Hanigan, former PC candidate and now Chairman of VIA Rail. Why did he agree to increase the maximum pay for Mr. Hanigan by some $36,000 per year, which is a 40 per cent increase, while at the same time chisel the children of the country with a 31-cent per month increase in family allowances?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, again the proposition put forward by the Hon. Member is simply false. I wish, when he poses questions in the House, he would get his facts straight. That has absolutely nothing to do with the facts. The reality is that the 1984 range refers to his predecessor, Mr. Renouf, whose job was part-time. There was no increase in respect of Mr. Hanigan at all.

Oral Questions

GREAT LAKES—SHORE-LINE FLOODING IN KENT RIDING

Mr. Elliott Hardey (Kent): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. It deals with continuing shore-line flooding in my riding which is part of the Great Lakes basin, particularly during the storm of December 2. Recognizing that this is a problem which calls for a long-term solution, could the Minister indicate to the House what action he is taking toward identifying such long-term measures?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada shares the Hon. Member's deep concern on this matter. He will appreciate that the situation in Lake Erie is a little unlike that in Lake Ontario and Lake Superior in the sense that the lake itself cannot be regulated as to the water level. However, the Secretary of State for External Affairs and I are exploring together ways in which our two Departments can act urgently on the matter directly, and indirectly through the International Joint Commission. In the meantime, because the matter is very largely within provincial jurisdiction, I have met with Vince Kerrio, my counterpart, the Minister responsible for natural resources, and we have earmarked $8.4 million on an urgent basis for damage reduction. We are exploring how we can co-operate in other ways as well.

IMMIGRATION

VISA AND WORK PERMIT FEES

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Immigration. Last year the Government dramatically increased the fees for individuals seeking Canadian citizenship. Now the Government is imposing fees for visas sought by immigrants, students, workers and visitors wanting to come to Canada. Given that this is another regressive move by a Minister who should be an advocate for his constituency rather than act as the Minister of Finance, is he prepared to abandon this immigration tax fully? If he is after revenues, why does he not tax the phoney immigration consultants who are raking in thousands of dollars on the backs of innocent individuals?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member should inform himself of the facts. The Government is not in fact imposing any processing fees on refugees, short-term visitors or students at this time. What we have here is a partial cost recovery. This processing fee is in line with what other countries are doing. There is no evidence that it will in any way impede the immigration flow into Canada. Those who are coming are being asked to pay only a third of the cost. This is a processing cost, not a cost for a visa.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, it is a disgrace that Canadians are being asked to pay $125 to try to bring in their mothers and fathers to this country; it is simply a disgrace. Does the Minister honestly feel that this fee is a fair and morally acceptable one and that it does not run counter to the plans of increasing immigration and enhancing his colleague's plan of strengthening the tourist industry?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member cannot have it both ways. On the one hand he stands and tells the Government that we must maintain the human face of the Government, that we must maintain the services to those least able to protect themselves. In this particular case we have underlined our humanitarian concerns for refugees. We are examining the student aspects, and we are merely offsetting the cost here by assessing those who can afford to pay a portion of it. If Canadian citizenship is worth anything those who wish to immigrate, they will be ready to pay this portion of the cost, and that is all that is being asked.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

GREAT LAKES WATER LEVELS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): My question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In response to the United States State Department request for Canadian help in controlling Great Lakes water levels and serious flooding, Ontario Hydro was to reduce flows into Lake Superior from the Ogoki reservoir. Will the Secretary of State indicate Canada's response to allegations from the American portion of the International Joint Commission and the State Department that Ontario Hydro, in effect, reneged on that agreement?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I believe the Hon. Member is referring to a report in a Detroit newspaper. That newspaper report is false.

LAKE ERIE—INTERNATIONAL JOINT COMMISSION STUDY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I think the matter does bear a more careful look than has been indicated by the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Nevertheless, I have a supplementary question which is directed to the Secretary of State with respect to Canada's role in controlling levels in the Great Lakes, and, therefore, serious flooding. Will the Secretary of State agree with the request by the International Joint Commission and the U.S. State Department for Canadian participation in a joint reference to the International Joint Commission to reopen the IJC study on full regulation of Lake Erie levels?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago that precise question was raised by the Progressive Conservative Member for Kent and it was replied to by the Minister of the Enrironment.

TRADE

REMOVAL OF TARIFF ON COMPUTER PARTS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): My question is for the Minister of State for Finance. Last week the Government removed the tariff on the importation of computer parts. Will the Minister advise the House whether there were similar trade concessions given Canada by other nations and what the impact of all of this will be on our own computer industry, particularly the 3,000 workers in my constituency who work for IBM?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for his question, because the tariff elimination on both semiconductors and computer parts I think is going to enhance our trading opportunities enormously in the future. The Canadian industry is very pleased with this move. Both Japan and the United States have made similar moves. We are looking for expanded trading opportunities, which can only benefit the industry and the workers in Canada.

INSURANCE

FOREIGN OWNERSHIP OF INSURANCE COMPANIES—INCREASE IN PREMIUMS

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Finance. Since court settlements are very high in the United States, and since 75 per cent of insurance companies operating in Canada are foreign-owned, why is the Minister allowing the insurance companies to cover their loss in the United States at the expense of the Canadian consumer by increasing policy insurance premiums?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, there is a foreign component, but there are also many domestic companies involved in this industry. As I have said in this House before, we are working on the issue of availability of insurance where we see problems. We are narrowing down the focus of the discussion to where we see the real longer term problems, and we will be dealing with solvency and capital issues of all companies operating in Canada in the near future.

REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. After ten Liberal Members, now the Superintendent of Insurance Canada also wants to investigate the insurance industry. Does the Minister intend to open the books on the insurance industry so that Canadians can find out why we have this crisis situation?

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I think the concern we have expressed on behalf of the consumer and the work we have done with a number of people having problems, and with the industry, have started to bring some benefits on the consumer side where there have been real problems. The examination of the industry which we have been doing on an ongoing basis and which was part of our financial institutions discussion over the summer months and into the fall, I think has clarified a lot of the things we need to know, and we are continuing to improve in this sector.

WELFARE

USE OF FOOD BANKS ESTABLISHED BY VOLUNTARY AGENCIES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): I would like to direct a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Has his Department done any studies into the increasing use of food banks established by voluntary agencies which are providing meals or food baskets, helping to meet the needs of the poorest people in Canada, and whether this is due to the fact that the welfare plan established by the provinces, of which the federal Government pays 50 per cent of the cost? Why are the provinces not meeting the needs of the people?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): We are well aware of the food banks and their work. That question has been asked earlier in this House. Regarding the level of welfare payments, the Member is correct in identifying that the provinces have established the levels of payment. In my own province, if he takes a look at its levels, they are not the highest in Canada. I think what he also clearly identified is that the federal Government keeps paying on a cost-sharing basis 50 per cent of the costs incurred which come under provincial jurisdiction.

WELFARE PAYMENTS IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): When we see that in a province like New Brunswick a single person on welfare gets $108 a month when the poverty level is over $9,000 a year, surely the Government of Canada should be discussing with the provinces the inadequate assistance given, rather than simply saying we will pay 50 per cent whether it meets the needs of the people or not. Would the Minister discuss this question with the provincial Ministers?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): I will discuss it. In fact at the last meeting of Ministers Social Welfare the question was discussed. At that time it was agreed between the provinces and the federal Government that we would be twinning the cost of social assistance where people wanted to take training or were able to take some part-time work and they were afraid, for instance, to lose dental benefits or pharmacare benefits for their children, especially single women. It was twinned, and a number of people have taken advantage of those kinds of opportunities. I think we are getting people from welfare into greater independence. This is a constant issue before us.

LOTTERIES

TRANSFER OF RESPONSIBILITY TO PROVINCES

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice, and arises out of the recent Criminal Code amendments transferring the sports pool lottery games to the provinces. Coming from a vulnerable community on the frontier, may I ask the Minister can those amendments be interpreted as paving the way for provinces to get into slot machine and Las Vegas type gambling operations as some of the provinces now interpret that legislation?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the legislation in question was passed with the co-operation of all Members of this House, I am glad to be able to report, and with the support of all the provinces. I think that the legislation that was passed does not extend the law very extensively in this direction. It may help to clarify it. The situation is, of course, that even before these amendments were passed the provinces could, if they decided to do so, permit Governments or licensed charitable organizations to conduct casinos. Slot machines have been operated by Governments in Manitoba and Alberta without complaint.

To sum up, Mr. Speaker, the matter is now in the hands of the provinces. They can allow gambling such as permitted by the Bill if they wish, or forbid it. It is in their hands. It was part of an arrangement entered into with them and all Members of this House supported the legislation. I do not think there is any chance of Las Vegas style private gambling in this country.

AGRICULTURE

SUGAR-BEET INDUSTRY—REQUEST FOR NATIONAL POLICY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture. As the Minister well knows,the sugar-beet industry of western Canada is in danger of dying unless immediate action is taken. This will influence thousands of jobs and the livelihood of many hundreds of communities in the west. Can he assure the House this afternoon that the Government will bring down a national sugar policy this week so the farmers can properly go about preparing for the planting of next year's crop?

• (1500)

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I certainly appreciate the interest of the former Minister in this very important subject. However, I am sure the former Minister will recognize that this Government need not take a back seat to any Government in the measures it has taken on behalf of the agricultural industry.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wise: He will know that we have passed more agriculture legislation in eight months than the previous Government did in eight years.

We have also taken over 107 initiatives which transferred well over $2 billion from the Consolidated Revenue Fund to the agricultural industry. That indeed is a record.

REQUEST FOR EARLY ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, that brief and enlightening history was fascinating but it is of absolutely no help to the sugar-beet growers of western Canada. The Minister knows how crucial it is that those thousands of producers have an answer immediately so that they can prepare for next year's crop. Will a national sugar policy be announced this week?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, my colleague, the Hon. Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board, has provided the leadership in this particular issue. As everyone will know, he has consulted with each and every sector of the industry. However, to this point in time the Government has not yet made a decision.

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

RADIOACTIVE WASTE DISPOSAL RESEARCH

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister will be aware of a concern expressed by the Manitoba Government and others about the list of potential American radioactive dump sites released recently, and she will also be aware of an impending agreement between AECL and the U.S. Department of Energy for further co-operation at the Lac du Bonnet underground research laboratory. Given this concern, will the Minister, who is responsible for AECL, instruct AECL not to enter into any agreement with the U.S. Department of Energy with respect to research on radioactive waste disposal until such time as those sites which could potentially affect Canada are removed from the American list?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should be aware that I have already conveyed to the Premier of Manitoba my assurances that the AECL research site will not become a permanent site.

UNITED STATES DUMP SITE

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, that is not the question I asked. It is a question I have asked before but it is not the one I just asked. I asked the Minister if she will instruct AECL not to enter into any agreement with the U.S. Department of Energy with respect to the URL and Lac du Bonnet until such time as the American sites which could potentially affect Canada are removed from the list of sites. If not, we will be co-operating in polluting our own backyard.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the House will know that largely through the personal initiative of Members of the House such as the Hon. Member for Shefford, the Government of Canada was successful in persuading the United States to remove the Vermont site from the list. There has now been a new list brought forward containing a few number of sites that might raise problems for Canada. I have already been approached by the Hon. Member for Brandon-Souris and Conservative Members from Saskatchewan, and I am sure their pressures will be brought to bear as effectively upon the Government of the United States as were the pressures brought by the Conservative Member for Shefford.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—ROLE OF PROVINCES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister clear up for the House today which version of events is correct vis-à-vis the provinces' role in free trade negotiations: his version as reported in the press today or his version from Halifax; full participataion or third-party participation?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there is no inconsistency. Ambassador Reisman was in fact to have met tomorrow but will be meeting on February 4 with provincial representatives pursuant to the document agreed upon in Halifax to define further the manner in which this kind of co-operation can be brought about.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that the negotiator has been elevated to ambassador. I realized that his salary might have been elevated but I was not sure that he had become an ambassador.

Obviously the people of Canada want to know whether or not the provinces will have a direct role at the negotiating table as was promised by the Prime Minister at the Halifax discussion. Does he stand by the statement he made in Halifax or has he once again misled the people of Canada as to his intentions?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of the Hon. Member, there has been no eleveation of Simon Reisman recently. He was appointed ambassador some months ago on the same day we appointed him to his present job. Like many other things, that has just dawned on the Hon. Member.

In regard to the methodology, there is nothing inconsistent at all with what has taken place. Ambassador Reisman is working very closely and well with his provincial colleagues to develop a plan which will ensure the greatest degree of participation possible for the provinces in the process. That has been our objective as opposed to other views taken by previous Governments that would have completely excluded the provinces from the elaboration and implementation of this kind of process. We are in favour of full participation.

INTRODUCTION OF BANKRUPTCY LEGISLATION

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. Is it still the intention of the Minister to introduce bankruptcy legislation with teeth and power to renegotiate interest rates and reduce debt, as he described it, as he promised a month before Christmas?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, we continue to study that approach and we are looking at a number of options at the moment.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PRAIRIE WILDLIFE INTERPRETATION CENTRE

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment and concerns the future of the Prairie Wildlife Interpretation Centre near Webb, Saskatchewan. The 1986 summer season is fast approaching and I would ask the Minister if he could comment on the future of the centre, both for this coming summer and for the long term.

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, briefly, we want to keep the Centre open. We want to arrive at an arrangement that would enable everyone concerned to know of it well in advance of the arrangement. For that purpose, I wrote to the Minister responsible for parks and renewable resources in Saskatchewan on January 9, proposing that there be a cost-shared arrangement split 50-50 between the federal Government and the province. I certainly have not received a response to date. If that proposal is not possible, then I would prefer in the short term a contractual arrangement with the private sector. The main thing is that we are going to keep that Centre open and we are going to make an arrangement at an early date.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Westmorland-Kent (Mr. Robichaud) on Friday, January 24, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

POINTS OF ORDER

PRACTICE OF HOUSE RESPECTING CASES SUB JUDICE—RULING OF MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker: I am in a position to advise the House as to my views on a point of order respecting the sub judice convention.

On Thursday, January 23, 1986, the House Leader for the Official Opposition (Mr. Gray) raised a point of order with respect to remarks made by the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) in response to a question from the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins). The Opposition House Leader felt that the Solicitor General had breached the sub judice convention of the House in his response. After having had the opportunity to examine the matter in detail, I am now prepared to rule on this point.

In this specific case, the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) and the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) wrote on January 22, 1986, to the Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission requesting that an investigation be undertaken into certain charges of sexism within the RCMP. As the commission may or may not proceed with such an inquiry, it certainly seems to me that it would be premature for me to rule that such a matter should be considered sub judice at this time.

When there are matters which are sub judice, it is clear that the Chair does have discretion, and I might take this opportunity to remind Hon. Members of the guidelines set down by the Special Committee on the Rights and Immunities of Members in its first report tabled April 29, 1977. The committee recommended that the Speaker —should only exercise this discretion in exceptional cases where it is clear to him that to do otherwise could be harmful to specific individuals.

Further, the committee states:

—a Member who calls for the suppression of a matter on grounds of sub judice should be obliged to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Chair that he has reasonable grounds for fearing that prejudice might result.

In terms of the specific application made by the Hon. Member for Windsor West, I have not been convinced of such possible prejudice.

I may say to Hon. Members that the freedom of speech accorded to Members of Parliament is a fundamental right without which they would be hampered in the performance of their duties. It is therefore my feeling that the Speaker should interfere with that freedom of speech only in exceptional cases where it is clear that to do otherwise could be harmful to specific individuals.

CORRECTION OF RECORD REGARDING REFERENCE TO MEMBER

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order simply to correct the record. In the House a few moments ago, I referred to the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) when naturally I intended to refer to the Hon. Member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Charest), the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) and the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin).

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak to this point of order. The record should be allowed to remain as it is because the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) was in the forefront of the fight which caused the Americans to withdraw the dump site. Other Hon. Members may have played a role, but the lead role was clearly carried out by the Hon. Member for Shefford, and the record should continue to make that clear.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will know that the record will show what has been said by all those involved.

PETITIONS

SUGAR-BEET INDUSTRY

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, it is an honour to submit a petition today signed by over 18,000 residents of southern Alberta. It concerns the continued existence of the sugar beet industry in Canada. The concern is widespread in view of the fact that while there are only some 600 producers, this petition bears the names of over 18,000 Albertans. Cabinet has before it a proposal with respect to a national sweetner policy—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not want to interrupt Hon. Members when they are presenting petitions but the Hon. Member is outlining the subject and not simply presenting a petition. I think he knows he should simply make a summary and read the prayer, perhaps.

Mr. Thacker: It is critical that Cabinet make a decision this week and I pray that it will do so.

CHILDREN'S EVIDENCE IN SEXUAL ABUSE CASES

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from my constituency of Essex-Windsor asking for action on the Badgley Report on sexual abuse of children. In particular, this petition urges the Government to take action on that part of the report which will permit children to give evidence in proceedings which deal with sexual abuses affecting them.

It has been undertaken by the Block Parents Groups throughout Essex-Windsor and represents an important initiative.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): I have a second petition which deals with the question of family allowance and protests once more the cut-back in family allowances which has been implemented by this Government. It comes from my constituency, particularly the Town of Essex.

CHILDREN'S EVIDENCE IN SEXUAL ABUSE CASES

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which has also been circulated by the Block Parents Association. It has collected some 700 signatures. It again refers to the failure to act on the Badgley Commission Report and it specifically expresses concern about the need for changes in the Criminal Code and the Canada Evidence Act to make it possible for children to testify without the requirement for technical corroboration. I would like to emphasize the fact that this is the first of many petitions since this is the beginning of a cross-country campaign to get a response to this issue.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Introduction of Bills.

Mr. Belsher: I have a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Are we finished with petitions?

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, the Hon. Member did not rise. Is he now rising on a petition?

Mr. Belsher: I was up three times, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I am perfectly happy if the House agrees to go back to petitions. However, I did look and the Hon. Member did not rise.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

OPPOSITION TO DIVORCE LEGISLATION

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House a petition from the Association for Reformed Political Action located in Fraser Valley East. This association believes that marriage is an institution given to mankind by God and that the marriage vows carry the obligation of life-long commitment given under oath before God and witnesses. They are concerned about the federal Government's divorce legislation and ask Parliament to retract any legislation which would permit no fault divorce, no court divorce, or any other means of making divorce quick and easy.

Mr. Speaker: First reading of Senate Public Bills.

Mr. Cochrane: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: May I remind Hon. Members that if they do not rise, I cannot recognize them.

Mr. Cochrane: If you don't see me, you don't know I have risen.

COST OF WOODS GORDON STUDY

Question No. 203—Mr. Greenaway:

1. What was the total amount paid to/or billed by the firm Woods Gordon for the study of the administration of the Income Tax Act by Revenue Canada?

2. Did Woods Gordon subcontract any of the work and, if so (a) to whom (b) what was the value of each subcontract (c) what was the nature of the work done by the subcontractors?

3. Will there be further costs associated with this study which Revenue Canada will have to bear and, if so, at what cost?

4. Will the study be made public and, if so, on what date?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): 1. Total amount paid: $2,206,708.

2. (a) Dimension Consultants. (b) $205,000. (c) Survey of staff attitudes and concerns.

3. No.

4. Woods Gordon's summary report was tabled in the House of Commons on June 25, 1985.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

S.O. 31

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 31

DROP IN EXCHANGE VALUE OF CANADIAN DOLLAR

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a notice of application under S.O. 31 from the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I would like to propose a motion pursuant to Standing Order 31 for the adjournment of the House to discuss an important and specific matter requiring urgent consideration, that is, the collapse of the Canadian dollar to an all-time low against American currency.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) properly gave me notice of her intention to request an emergency debate on this matter under Standing Order 31. I certainly agree with her and with all Hon. Members that the pressure on the Canadian dollar is undoubtedly a matter of grave concern. However, I think all Hon. Members will also know that it is a problem of a continuing nature rather than that of a sudden emergency. My predecessors have consistently ruled in such cases that Standing Order 31 does not contemplate the raising of ongoing problems on an emergency basis except in very special circumstances. For example, on June 2, 1982, Speaker Sauvé ruled in relation to an exactly similar application that the falling dollar was a problem of a continuing nature and not in the nature of a genuine emergency calling for immediate and urgent consideration. On November 9, 1976, by way of a similar example, Speaker Jerome made a similar ruling in respect of a request for an emergency debate on the rising level of unemployment.

I would also point out that although as yet no allotted days have been designated during the current period, it does seem to me the opportunity to debate this matter could well occur within what is a reasonable space of time. Therefore, in the present circumstances, I am obliged to rule that the application does not meet the requirements contemplated by the Standing Order.

CANADA DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION ACT

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)) moved that Bill C-86, an Act to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

She said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill, as the House knows, provides for important amendments to the law under which the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation operates. The primary goal of this corporation and of this Bill is to protect small depositors in our financial institutions by strengthening the financial position of the deposit insurance system. I am confident that this goal has the support of all Hon. Members and I would hope that the House will give prompt second reading to the Bill and refer it to committee for more detailed consideration.

It is a straightforward Bill which contains two main provisions. The first provision would authorize an increase in the premiums paid by member institutions of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. This would represent the start of an ongoing process initiated by our Government to reduce the size of the CDIC's deficit. The second major provision would permit the appointment of additional members to the board of directors of the CDIC. New members would then come from the private sector and would provide a new kind of expertise for the corporation's decision-making process.

I will elaborate a little later on these two provisions but first I would like to outline the context in which this Bill is being presented. Early in our mandate we recognized the need to update legislation affecting financial institutions and virtually every aspect of this important economic sector. This legislation which we are discussing today is only one aspect of a broad ongoing effort to bring about reform of the supervisory and regulatory framework for financial institutions in Canada.

The discussion paper on the regulation of financial institutions, which I issued last April, placed the issues and the need for reform squarely before the public and this Parliament. The specific proposals in the paper have attracted widespread discussion, debate, and some additional proposals. I do want to point out to Hon. Members that this process has been helpful and effective in our ongoing policy review and I want to thank Members for participating fully in this debate. In particular, the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs has presented its report with a very large number of very thoughtful recommendations. The committee addressed the issues which the Government outlined in the discussion paper last April, and its report is a most important contribution towards the goal of strengthening and supervision of our financial institutions.

In the ongoing process of policy development that report will certainly be a key reference point. In the meantime, however, the Government feels that early action is required in certain areas specifically. We can and must make a start now on rebuilding the resources of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. That step was recommended in the committee report. In addition, certain steps can and should be taken now to reinforce the regulatory powers of both the Inspector General of Banks and the Superintendent of Insurance. Those measures were proposed separately in a draft Bill. Interested parties have submitted their comments and we shall take action on those measures soon.

Let me say quite clearly that these Bills are really interim measures. They must be considered on their merits, but further and more fundamental measures must be taken to deal adequately with the broad issues facing us in the field of financial institutions. Those effective and responsible measures will be developed in the ongoing process of discussion and consultation begun last spring.

The problems affecting the deposit insurance system which are addressed in this Bill are not a recent development, as Hon. Members know. The deposit insurance fund moved into a deficit position following the failure of several member institutions in 1983, just about three years ago. The deficiency in the fund at the end of the 1983 calendar year was $332 million. This deficit was based on estimated losses totalling $650 million arising from the failure of several member institutions in 1983. In its 1984 annual report the Corporation revised its estimate of expected losses to incorporate a change in the accounting treatment of member institutions which are in the process of being wound up through agency agreements, and to reflect the failure of member institutions in 1984 and early 1985. As a result of these provisions the 1984 annual report indicated that the deficit in the fund totalled $871 million. It is the corporation's belief that this provision was more realistic and reflected more accurately the financial risk attached to the likelihood of recovering the funds advanced by the corporation to institutions experiencing financial troubles. More recent failures this year have put added pressures on the deposit insurance system.

The basic function of the CDIC has been to provide insurance for small depositors through an insurance fund financed by premiums paid by member institutions. It has always been intended that this would be a self-financing operation and, under its statutory powers, the CDIC has been able to finance the deficit of recent years through loans from the Consolidated Revenue Fund. That is not a long-term solution and it has been evident for some time that the deposit insurance system should be returned to a sound, self-sustaining basis. The CDIC plays a key role in supporting public policy objectives in the financial system, particularly in the protection of consumers, which has to be our number one goal, and in contributing to public confidence in the stability of our system.

Those were the main considerations in the action I took last January to set up a committee from the private sector to evaluate and recommend changes to the deposit insurance system. This was done by a committee chaired by Robert Wyman of Vancouver which submitted its report last spring, and I do want to commend Mr. Wyman and his fellow members of the committee for the very substantive piece of work they did.

When the problems of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank were made public on September 1, I reaffirmed this Government's determination to follow through with action in this field. Under this Bill the premiums paid by CDIC member institutions into the deposit insurance fund will be increased from the present level of one-thirtieth of 1 per cent to one-tenth of 1 per cent of insured deposits. That premium rate is consistent with the recommendation of the standing committee. There is a sunset provision as well. The legal authorization for this increase will expire at a given time, and it was designed so that a subsequent level of premium payments can be determined as part of the complete review of the deposit insurance system which is now under way. That review was advocated by the Wyman Committee which also recommended an increase in the rate of premium payments.

Other recommendations of the Wyman Committee Report, including further steps to restore the financial position of the deposit insurance fund, are being considered in the over-all policy review of CDIC legislation. The elimination of the CDIC deficit will necessarily be an extended process, and the earlier we begin, the better. The longer we delay an increase in premiums paid to the CDIC, the higher the deficit will grow due to the burden of interest payments to finance past deficits. At the level of insured deposits in 1984, the CDIC will have a premium increase of over $160 million with a higher premium rate. This will greatly assist the corporation in recouping its deficit. I therefore urge Hon. Members to pass this Bill as expeditiously as possible.

In this Bill as well the Government has decided to take immediate action on another recommendation of the Wyman Committee that the composition of the board of directors be broadened through the appointment of directors from outside the Public Service. Such individuals would bring to the corporation knowledge and expertise from the private sector, perhaps a regional perspective, and thereby enhance the decision-making process at the board level of the CDIC. The Bill would authorize the appointment of up to four directors who are not employed in any capacity in the Public Service of Canada. At present the CDIC board consists of five members: The Chairman of the Board, who comes from outside the Public Service, the others are board members by virtue of their office; the Governor of the Bank of Canada; the Deputy Minister of Finance; the Inspector General of Banks; and the Superintendent of Insurance. The Government was fortunate earlier this year in obtaining the services of Ronald McKinley, a former Chairman of the Clarkson Company, as Chairman of the CDIC. Mr. McKinley will make and has already made a valuable contribution in developing and implementing new policies for the CDIC. The proposal in this Bill will enable us to seek out further expertise from the private sector in the process of strengthening the deposit insurance system.

In conclusion, once again I urge that the House give this legislation speedy passage. The CDIC plays a key role in protecting the savings of small depositors in our financial institutions. This Bill will increase its ability to do that job and thereby help to build greater confidence among the public in the strength and stability of our financial system in the future.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, the ongoing review of the regulation and supervision of Canadian financial institutions began in the last Government. The Bill before the House today takes two more steps along the road. In her appearance before the House of Commons Finance Committee on September 9, 1985, the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) gave notice of the provisions of this Bill and of draft legislation, both of which she described then as items of high priority and both of which were tabled in the House on November 29, 1985.

Bill C-86 proposes to do two things. First, it proposes an increase in the premium level paid by the CDIC's member institutions. Currently they pay one-thirtieth of 1 per cent of their insured deposits. Bill C-86 proposes to triple that to one-tenth of 1 per cent. The increase is to be in effect for one year only. Second, the Bill proposes increasing the size of the CDIC's board of directors to include members from outside the public service.

While the CDIC is meant to be funded by its member institutions, it has been operating from a deficit position for some time, existing on funds borrowed through its $1.5 billion line of credit from the Consolidated Revenue Fund. The CDIC deficit, now estimated at over $1 billion, reflects the recent troubles of Canadian financial institutions, the spectacular failure of several Ontario trust and loan companies, and, more recently, the Government bail-out and subsequent failure of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the failure of the Northland Bank.

In 1982 deposit insurance coverage was increased from $20,000 to $60,000 after the Ontario Government seized three trust companies, believing public funds were at risk. In order to protect those funds, the federal Government moved to ensure all depositors in the institutions at the new higher rate.

In 1985, as part of the CCB bail-out, the CDIC committed $75 million. According to its 1984 annual report, CDIC did not make any provision for loss as it expected to be fully reimbursed. Later, when the CCB went into receivership and the Northland Bank seemed doomed to follow, the Government announced its intention to reimburse all depositors in both institutions, even those whose deposits exceeded the $60,000 limit.

Insofar as insured deposits are concerned, CDIC paid out $250 million to Canadian Commercial Bank depositors and $170 million to Northland depositors. That, of course, does not include the payments to uninsured depositors which were authorized by a separate Act passed in this House and which came to $430 million for the Canadian Commercial Bank and $470 million for Northland. At this point estimates are putting the CDIC's deficit at $1.2 billion.

Apart from the financial stresses imposed by the failure of financial institutions in recent years, the CDIC is also having to deal with the burden of administrative work which it was never designed to deal with. The CDIC was established in 1967, basically to maintain an insurance fund to protect the savings of Canadians and the ceiling on deposit insurance targeted the protection toward the small or so-called unsophisticated depositor. Until the "Trust companies affair" in Ontario and the collapse of Fidelity Trust in Alberta, the CDIC had quietly processed premiums and dealt with administrative paperwork but, with the trust company difficulties and the later bank failures the CDIC was drawn into a new and unaccustomed monitoring role.

The CDIC is, after all, the insurer and not the regulator under present legislation. Its staff and board of directors are small. While staff size has increased in the last four years, many of the new preoccupations of the agency are being handled by outsiders: consultants providing information and analysis with regard to institutions being wound down, agents on long-term contracts to look after particular problems, and private sector committees set up by CDIC to deal with such things as the disposition of real estate assets on CDIC's books.

Currently the CDIC has an estimated $1 billion in real estate financed by 18 failed institutions all across Canada. CDIC resources have been stretched very thin by the circumstances. Clearly it was, and is, necessary to have review and change in a system that, through force of circumstances, has exceeded its operational bounds and evolved beyond its original purpose.

Of course, the experience of CDIC in the past few years has been paralleled by tremendous change and ferment in the financial services industry in general. Deposit insurance is an integral part of the system. This is why the House of Commons Finance Committee and the Senate Banking Committee considered together the Green Paper on financial institutions and the private sector Wyman committee report on the CDIC. Because deposit insurance is really inseparable from financial institution regulation, it is necessary to put the provisions of Bill C-86 in context.

We are in the middle of a review process whereby reasonable caution must be balanced with the feeling of urgency engendered by the events of the last three years. The interaction of several factors including concentration of ownership and control, predominance of real estate related activities, high-risk transactions, and adverse economic conditions has shown the vulnerability of existing prevention and detection mechanisms. The legislation coming out of the current review process must steer a very careful path indeed. The supervisory system must be effective, but must not be so rigid as to stifle the industry, cut off emerging policies, or over-emphasize supervision. It must also, as far as possible, reconcile the interests and objectives of the parties involved, particularly in different jurisdictions.

The draft legislation to increase the powers of federal regulators tabled with Bill C-86 last November is the Government's first step in addressing the issue. The two proposals in Bill C-86 are more in the nature of interim measures. While there appears to be general agreement that CDIC premiums should increase to reflect recent risk experience, it is clear that the proposed increase will not be sufficient to clear the deficit. The assumption appears to be that this increase for one year will ease the deficit somewhat until a long-term solution is found. From the Minister's statements I gather that she is expecting to offer us long-term solutions in the near future.

The House of Commons Finance Committee recommended eliminating the CDIC deficit in 10 to 25 years through surcharges on member institutions. The Senate committee and the Wyman committee both recommended eliminating the deficit in 10 years and separating deficit financing from operational financing. Since the Bill before us is apparently not designed to address the long-term situation of CDIC, these are matters we would do well to keep in mind since the House is sure to be considering the issue again, presumably before this temporary premium increase expires.

The second proposal in the Bill, that to increase the size of the CDIC's board of directors, is a proposal also made by the Wyman committee and the Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. The objective here is to have the benefit of private sector expertise on the board of directors. The board as presently constituted has public servants only, with the exception of the chairman. In this case, the information in the Bill is limited and will need to be fleshed out in committee. I hope the Minister will be able to provide the committee with the draft regulations because there are a number of questions that come to mind about the role of these directors and how to ensure that they are people who are close enough to the financial services industry to have practical and useful experience without getting into conflict of interest situations at the same time.

The Wyman committee is against appointing people actively employed in CDIC member institutions, although it recommended the participation of individuals with extensive background in financial services and professional expertise in the areas of real estate, liquidations, corporate and commercial law and accounting. The Senate committee, on the other hand, recommends provincial as well as private sector representation on the board, specifying a 13-member board with industry as well as independent members.

The Bill itself does not make clear just what form the private sector representation will take. However, the Minister's comments during her September 9 appearance before the Finance Committee indicate that the Government's appointments will seek to avoid direct industry participation. At that time the Minister said:

> Conditions concerning the eligibility of prospective Board members would be incorporated in the legislation to ensure that conflicts of interest do not arise and that no Board member is associated with any single member institution.

We need to know more about the conditions of eligibility. It is clearly desirable to have private sector experience on the board of directors, but it is difficult to judge just how beneficial or practical this will be without knowing what conditions or constraints the Government will put around the appointment of new board members. I trust that there will be more information forthcoming in committee.

This is not a controversial Bill and, while we have some questions on which we hope to get further information in committee, we will not be putting up very many speakers or holding it in the House for long at this stage.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, we in the New Democratic Party will not be obstructing this legislation in any way. We intend to see that the matter is dealt with expeditiously today so that it can go to committee where the necessary questions can be dealt with.

This legislation deals with the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. I know that many Members in the House are quite familiar with this subject but there are others in the public who may not be familiar with the function of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, even in light of the publicity that has swirled around the banks in the last months.

The Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation is a body which insures deposits in banks so that ordinary people will not lose their shift if a bank should fail. Individual accounts are insured to a maximum of $60,000. That is a worth-while and useful function in a society such as ours which depends so heavily on credit. This is a relatively minor piece of legislation and does not deal with the regulation of financial institutions in any fundamental way.

The purpose of this legislation is twofold. First, it increases the size of the board of directors of Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation from five to nine members. We question why there is such an increase at this stage as well as the fact that the seats will be allocated to private sector members only. Will such appointments be on the basis of merit and knowledge in the financial institutions and concern for consumers in the country or will it be on the basis of partisan political considerations as we have seen lately?

We are concerned that the Bill does not provide any assurance that the best qualified individuals for the job are being appointed. Why can there not be provision in the Bill for these appointments to have parliamentary review before they are made? The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has spoken in the past about Order in Council appointments being reviewed by a parliamentary committee. The Conservative Party spoke very strongly about parliamentary reform when in Opposition and this would be an opportunity for the Government to take some action.

Mr. McDermid: It is in the parliamentary reform. You are holding it up.

Mr. Blenkarn: Approve the parliamentary reform.

Mr. Keeper: Allow Parliament to review those appointments of new board members to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation before they are final.

Mr. McDermid: Put the parliamentary reform through and we will get it.

Mr. Keeper: I hear comments from the sidelines. Why does this legislation not provide for a public review of these Order in Council appointments before they are made? Furthermore, why does the legislation continue to provide for alternates to sit on the board of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation? We will not know who these alternatives are and what interests they represent.

We have further questions about the detail of this legislation we would like the Government to answer before it is approved. One possible explanation for why the Government is increasing the size of the board is contained within the recommendations of the Wyman Report. A major component of that report states that we now live in an environment of deregulation and it is essential that CDIC reflect this reality. That is a possible explanation of why there is an increase in the size of the board and why those board members are private sector members only. I question the notion that we can talk about an environment of deregulation when it comes to banks, trust companies and loan companies.

Surely the experience of the last several months with bank failures has shown that we have an environment of inadequate and ineffective regulation. The notion that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation should reflect an environment of deregulation is a misdirection of public policy. We on this side of the House wonder why there is no representation of consumers on this board. Why does the legislation not contain a provision for that? Could the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs not represent consumer interest on this board, to balance the private sector interests in this legislation? Why is there not some citizen form of representation to take care of consumer interests? The increase in the size of the board is a token of reform. It is not real reform or a fundamental reshaping of regulations for our financial institutions. No new powers are being given to the board. By way of example, let us consider the number of people in Canada who monitor and inspect banks. There are something like 16 of them, whereas in a comparable situation in the United States there are something like 1,500 people doing that work. There are changes of substance which have to be made in terms of regulating our banks. The Minister mentioned that changes would be coming in the future. We hope that they live up to that promise.

Another change brought about by the legislation is an increase in premiums, the premiums paid by banks, trust companies and loan companies to insure their depositors' savings. Since the corporation has a deficit of $1.2 billion, it is clear that an increase in premiums is justified. At the same time that the premiums are being increased, why do we continue to allow banks and trust companies to obtain rebates on their insurance premiums in good years? If it is necessary to increase the rates of premiums, why do we allow that to continue in the legislation? I would welcome being able to go to my insurance company in a good year, when my house did not burn down, to obtain a rebate. That is not possible for ordinary citizens; the insurance industry does not work that way.

Why are large banks, trust companies and loan companies able to go to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and say: "This has been a good year. There have been no catastrophies, so give us a rebate on our insurance premiums"? Presumably they paid for insurance on the chance of a disaster occurring and since there was not one they already had the service. Why do we privilege banks this way? Why are premiums being increased at the same time as this provision is being allowed to continue in the legislation? Why do we leave the status quo such that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation has no clout or no option to cancel an insurance policy? If a trust company is not performing well, why does the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation not have the capacity to say: "Hold it a minute; you are too bad a risk and we choose not to insure you"? We wonder why that option is not in the legislation governing CDIC to give it a little clout, as it insures banks, trust companies and loan companies.

The increased premiums could likely be passed on to consumers by the trust companies and banks. This raises a fundamental question. While it is possible to justify the increase in premiums on the basis that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation has a large deficit, it points to the fundamental fact that regulating our financial institutions is not simply a matter of insurance. It has something to do with what risks are involved and what we can do to reduce those risks. With the rates of insurance going wild these days, with insurance companies taking advantage of municipalities, for example, in terms of their insurance needs, it should be obvious that to approach the problem simply from the point of view of insurance is inadequate. This piece of legislation in itself is minor, in a way; it contains only a couple of provisions. We are lacking more fundamental reform of the regulations for financial institutions. This legislation is only a stop-gap measure.

The problem of regulating financial institutions is a major one. If we refer back to the headlines with regard to CCB and Northland, we know that there are real questions with regard to the efficacy of the regulations of our financial institutions. Why was the Canadian Commercial Bank able to operate as it did over a period of years without our regulatory agencies exposing the problem, without our regulatory agencies saying that there was a serious problem which needed to be dealt with and the Government reacting and handling the situation? I have talked with some acquaintances in the financial community who indicated that there was a well-known rumour in the community that the Canadian Commercial Bank was not being well managed. There are very serious questions about how we regulate financial institutions.

As long as we insure the deposits, not only those of ordinary Canadians of average income but those of very large depositors, such as large banks and foreign banks, we need effective regulations which turn up the problems before they become too big, because in the end the public is asked to pay.

There is much documentation with regard to the difficulties in terms of our regulations affecting financial institutions. A number of reports have called for broader reform than what is before the House today. We have received a Senate report, a report of the Finance Committee and one by the Wyman committee appointed by the Minister.

We hope to see more fundamental reform coming from the Government. We hope it comes soon. By way of example, we support the recommendation of the Finance Committee which called for a national financial administrative agency which would co-ordinate efforts in the area of the regulation of financial institutions, including the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Inspector General of Banks and the Department of Insurance which inspects trust companies and loan companies. We await with great interest more fundamental reform coming from the Government.

I want to say at this point that the handling of the collapse of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank has had its negative fall out, particularly for credit unions. They are good financial institutions which have served us well. They represent the value of co-operation, people getting together to solve their own problems. Yet, from the backwash of the problems of the failure of the Canadian Commercial Bank, some people have gone to their credit union to ask: "Are you insured by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation?" The credit unions are not. They are sound financial institutions but they are not insured in this way.

Credit unions would like to find some way to be affiliated with the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. I do not have a concrete proposal as to how that should be done, but they would like to be affiliated so that they can reassure people of their soundness and so that the Government can see the soundness of these financial institutions. That is something that needs to be on the agenda for the Government when it is considering the reform of financial institutions.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words in the other official language. This legislation has two aspects. The first is that it increases the size of the Corporation's board of directors. Now we would like to know why the increase applies only to private sector representation and not to the public sector, such as the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs? And why not have consumer representation?

The other specific measure provided under this legislation is an increase in insurance premiums for banks and other financial institutions.

We would like to know why the Corporation's premiums are being increased without giving the banks the option of cancelling insurance contracts. Why increase the premiums while maintaining the option of giving the banks a discount?

Mr. Speaker, the main issue, as we see it, is that the legislation before the House today raises a number of questions. In fact, it neglects the most important thing that has to be done in the future, which is to carry out a reform of the legislation regulating financial institutions, a thorough reform.

Mr. Speaker, we all know that we have had a lot of problems with the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northlands Bank. These problems have shown that we ought to review our regulations for the financial sector. Are these regulations effective? Experience has shown that they are very weak. When is the Government going to carry out a reform in this area?

Mr. Speaker, these are some of the things we want this Government to do very soon.

[English]

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, we have to commend the Government for bringing in this interim measure to bit by bit get control of the problem of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. Members will appreciate that as of the financial end of last year there was roughly $1.2 billion in anticipated losses and shortage. Obviously, with certain costs expended this year in handling the problems of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank, that shortage will be substantially increased. It is important that premiums, as authorized under the present statute, be increased. That was the reason the House of Commons Finance Committee recommended that the premiums be increased from one-thirtieth of 1 per cent to one-tenth of 1 per cent on an interim basis until such time as a new organization might take a look at the whole matter and determine a premium or a method of getting rid of the enormous liability faced by this deposit insurance account. The Bill, in this sense, follows the suggestion of the House with respect to premiums.

I want to address the House briefly with respect to the question of directors. It is exceptionally important that this corporation have private directors that know their way around the street. Unfortunately, the course of this corporation over its period of existence has been a corporation directed by public servants in Ottawa. As a practical matter it has not even been the Public Service referred to in the Bill. While the governor of the bank, the Superintendent of Insurance, the Inspector General of Banks, the Deputy Minister of Finance, are supposed to be directors, in fact, they send their substitutes. There were really no meetings. There was really no getting down to it and looking at the interests of the corporations. Therefore the corporation, to some extent, was operated almost as a department of Government.

When we had problems with the Crown Trust, Greymac, and the Seaway affair, the Government came to the House and said: "We have a political problem, we are not covering enough people on their deposits; therefore increase the amount of coverage, back date it and pay everybody $60,000 insurance". That was fine for the people who received the money, but it certainly was not a happy condition for those who were contributing the money. That is a good part of the reason we have this massive deficiency. A second reason for the deficiency is that for political reasons Governments have said to the board: "Well, you should cover everybody". Therefore the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation covered everybody in Greymac, Crown Trust and Seaway.

When my mayor in this City of Mississauga said we should not bail out uninsured depositors, I had to remind her we bailed out the City of Mississauga for $1 million on the Greymac affair. We bailed out municipalities and credit unions and everyone else with the CDIC on trust company failures. When the other side talks about bail-outs let us say that they were the guys who invented the bail-out.

It has been a problem for successive Governments to know when to draw a line. It is all very easy to say: "Don't pay anybody except the insured depositors". We have paid people other than insured depositors and it is only in the case of the banks, the Canadian Commercial and the Northland, that a Government was honest enough to come to the House of Commons and say that it will pass a statute to bail out or pay off uninsured depositors. When this happened previously, it was done through CDIC and the board of directors with no reference to the real issues in the market-place.

In a sense, the banks and trust companies that have been contributing the money to make the insurance fund work have in many cases and properly so said that they do not mind paying for liabilities resulting from guarantees for $20,000 or even for $60,000. However, they wonder if we really expect them to pay a liability resulting from guaranteeing all and sundry. They have a point there.

If we are going to expect the financial institutions, through a special tax on deposits because that is what a premium is, to pay this back-debt largely created by a previous Government that wanted to look reasonably good and did not want to declare honestly in the House what the situation was, then we ought to at least make sure that the directors of the CDIC come from the organizations or organizational groups that put up the money. It is in that sense that I suggest that two of these directors have trust company backgrounds and perhaps be nominated by the Trust Companies Association and two have banking backgrounds and perhaps be nominated by the Canadian Bankers' Association. I think it is essential that institutions we are insuring realize that they are using their money for the Deposit Insurance Corporation to look after only $60,000 worth of deposit insurance.

When insuring institutions that are likely to or could go into default, the directors of the corporation should have the knowledge of the street that is required of any insurance corporation. This insurance corporation has not been run well. It has run up massive deficits and in many senses, those massive deficits are the result of politics playing with the fund. It is time that policics not be allowed to play with the fund. The fund is there to protect depositors up to $60,000, not to protect all and sundry, and not to give funds away. If Parliament wants the corporation to insure people beyond that amount, another solution must be found.

In its report to the House dated November 6, the House of Commons Finance Committee recommended that we have an arrangement through the National Financial Administration Agency whereby the agency, acting as liquidator, could arrange to pay out an estimated liquidation value to depositors with more than the $60,000 insured amount. That type of approach would relieve the pressure that is always on Government to pay out to uninsured depositors.

The Government agreed to cover the uninsured depositors and then debenture holders and preferred shareholders came to the Government to ask: "Why not us?". It seems that every time people get into trouble, they come to the Government and ask: "Why not us too? Why are we not included?". That situation has to cease. I think it is important that this corporation be operated in a sensible commercial fashion.

The Bill before us is an interim measure. It only deals with two issues. One of these issues is an increase in premiums but there is no indication in the Bill how those premiums will work to pay off the deficit. Premiums will pay off the deficit over time, and it was the view of the Finance Committee of the House that this type of premium run until December 31, 1986, and that the National Insurance Administration Agency, a new organization for financial institutions, presumably put into place during this calendar year, be in a position to take over the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and perhaps operate it as the Canada Deposit Insurance Fund. That fund would set the premiums applicable to cover the deficit and make sure that the premiums were collected.

My friend from the New Democratic Party suggested that Parliament should have some sort of say as to the appointment of the directors. That is exactly what Parliament wants but it is his Party that is opposing the reform of Parliament that would allow Parliament and the committees of the House to confirm and review Order in Council appointments. When members of the NDP hold up parliamentary reform but at the same time make the statements with respect to directorships that that Member made, we begin to wonder where they stand.

Mr. Keeper: Put it in the legislation.

Mr. Blenkarn: Parliamentary reform would require all directorships to be approved. What does the Hon. Member want, just to have this one approved and none of the others? Is that the kind of reform he wants? Is that the attitude to parliamentary reform that his Party supports? It is not ours. Hopefully he will have an opportunity to debate that issue and stand for or against parliamentary reform in a very few days.

I would like to return to the question of the mess in which the former Government got the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. Because it was afraid to come to Parliament for appropriation and did not want to increase the deficit unduly, the former Government directed that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation borrow money on the Seaway matter, the Greymac matter and the Crown Trust matter from the trust companies it had appointed as the agents to wind up those defaulting trust companies. Until very recently, Central Trust was able to receive one-quarter over Canadian bank prime rate to lend money to the Government of Canada. The Midland Bank which, as shown by the Morrison Report, was largely responsible for the shenanigans that went together with the Seaway matter, was able to receive one-quarter over bank prime rate for the money the Midland Bank lent to the CDIC to organize that receivership. Much of the problem with this corporation exists because not only did it borrow money but it borrowed money on the guarantee of the Government of Canada that it be lent at one-quarter over bank prime rate. In other words, the Government required the CDIC to pay more than any Crown corporation or agency of Government has ever had to pay in interest. Why was that? Because the Government wanted to hide back in the bush the cost of what it was doing.

Hon. Members will know that in Supplementary Estimates (B) filed this year, the present Government is coming clean with the people of Canada. It put through an estimate of nearly the $900 million required to pay the liability run up over those years of bailing out uninsured depositors. Yet we heard the rhetoric of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) who was talking about uninsured depositors. They bailed them out and we had to pay the cost of that bail-out.

It is important that this Bill pass and that it pass quickly. It is important for the House of Commons to get down to the business of reorganizing the inspection system and the prudential management system of financial institutions. The management and supervision of these institutions has been sadly lacking. We have all heard and seen the evidence on television and elsewhere given before the Estey Commission. Many of us who were involved in the report of the Finance Committee heard a great deal of evidence, both in public and in camera, with respect to how institutions in the financial field were supervised and managed. It is time the Government brought forth a package of legislation. It is my hope that the Minister will be bringing to the House a package of legislation which will get down to the business of properly supervising and managing our institutions.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments? Debate.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I must confess that I do hesitate to rise to speak to a Bill relating to a matter which is somewhat arcane to a microbiologist by trade. However, there are some observations I do wish to make now that the opportunity has presented itself.

The Bill, as has been indicated by several previous speakers, attempts to implement some needed changes in the manner in which the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation functions. This really is just a part of a whole list of changes which have been recognized as necessary in the regulatory system for financial institutions in Canada. As has been indicated in the Wyman Report and elsewhere, there has, over the last decade or so, been rather dramatic changes in the economic and political conditions which affect the environment in which our financial institutions operate. We are familiar with most of these; double digit inflation, rather more dramatically extreme business cycles, frequent changes in interest rates, high interest rates and Government deficits. In this environment, financial institutions sought rapid growth and higher profits and this was in part pursued through new technologies being made available, especially in the area of computers and communications, including credit cards, automated teller machines, satellite communications and so on.

As a consequence, the financial services industry has changed immensely. There are new products such as daily interest accounts. Rapid transfer of funds from across international borders is now possible in response to perceptions of imminent dangers. We have had an increased muddying of the waters regarding the separation of what is termed the four pillars; banking, trust, insurance and investment.

The regulatory mechanism clearly has not kept pace, nor has the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. In addition to the federal Government's Green Paper on the Regulation of Financial Institutions, and the House Finance Committee's report on financial institutions, we have had two reports specifically having to do with the CDIC, the Wyman Report and, of course, the Senate Banking Committee report on deposit insurance.

The period from 1967 to 1982, as we know, was uneventful for the CDIC. Indeed, through much of that period rebates were returned on premiums because of the surplus which existed in the insurance fund. However, in 1982 there was a rather dramatic change which was the first sign of more serious and catastrophic changes which have occurred in the last year. One of the events which most recently took place was the failure of the CCB and the Northland Bank. The Wyman Report and the Senate report suggested a number of changes to the CDIC to permit it to operate in a high risk environment, to control the degree of risk to which it was exposed and to put it on a more sound financial basis. In general, what was recommended both by the Senate report and the Wyman Report was to allow the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation some ready degree of selectivity with respect to its making available insurance and its continuation for financial institutions based upon certain standards of performance.

Corollary to this, it was pointed out that the CDIC should have the mechanisms for getting greater information with respect to its insured institutions which would adopt standards of performance which the CDIC would monitor. Furthermore, both reports recommended that there be greater authority accorded to the CDIC to step in and ensure that the operations of insured institutions met standards which would put such institutions on a solid basis, and to be able to do so promptly.

In order to do all of this, the need was pointed out for increased staff to carry out these regulatory, supervisory and examining functions, as well as to develop the criteria for establishing what constitutes sound practice. Co-insurance was suggested to prevent multiple deposits which are a way of insuring that all deposits are insured by using a number of institutions, and it was also suggested that this be a means of increasing greater recognition of risk on the part of depositors.

Increases in premiums from one thirtieth of 1 per cent to one tenth of 1 per cent of insured deposits was suggested, and that the Canadian Deposit Insurance Fund be set at a level of .75 per cent of the total insured deposits. Finally, changes in the composition and size of the board were suggested.

In spite of rather extensive recommendations for change in the CDIC, this Bill deals with only two. It increases the level of premiums, which is fine. One might have hoped there would be some reference to the need to increase the total amount of the fund in proportion to insured deposits but that might come at a later time. Perhaps it is not so critical in the present context. What is serious, I think, is what has been recommended with respect to the composition of the board. The Bill would increase the size of the board from five members to nine, and it would do so substantially by increasing the number of private members from industry who sit on the board. The net result of this would be to provide a majority on the board of non-Government personnel. Thus we would have a situation in which if there is need for the CDIC to obtain moneys from the Consolidated Revenue Fund, the determination would be made not by Government officials but by a majority of private individuals who would be doing so, I would suggest, inappropriately.

Interestingly enough, this proposition is inconsistent with what was recommended by the Wyman and the Senate reports. We take no exception to the need to have industry representatives on the board who have no present connection with the particular institutions. This would have the effect of solving one of the problems which was revealed during the CCB and the Northland affairs, and that is a certain degree of conflict of interest in which others on the board, the Superintendent of Insurance, the Governor of the Bank of Canada and the Inspector General of Banks, made a decision outside of the context of the CDIC which determined subsequent action by the CDIC. I think there are many of us who would support the argument that there needs to be some other disinterested representation on the board to ensure that that kind of thing does not occur.

However, as I indicated earlier, it is inappropriate that institutional representatives from the private sphere should outnumber the other representatives. There is another problem which arises with the Bill and that is that the Bill allows for alternate members to replace these private or institutional representatives on the board. Now we have a situation where we may have alternative members of the board, in direct contradiction of the recommendation of the Wyman Report. There can be no merit in having a relatively uninformed person involved in the decision-making process. More importantly, there is no basis on which one can clear away any possible suspicion of a conflict of interest. There is also a potential conflict of interest concerning the permanent members of the board in the sense that the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) promised there would be regulations concerning the eligibility of prospective board members but no such provision appears in the Bill. We raised the question of how we can be sure that we will not be faced with the problem of conflict of interest. How can we be sure of the appointment of members who will act in the interests of the public rather than those of some particular institution? We asked those questions because there is no specific process by which Parliament can have an opportunity to vet prospective appointees. This is a serious deficiency in the Bill and it ought to be addressed by an amendment.

Beyond all that, speaking of the principle of the Bill, we can say that it is a step forward. In the face of rather significant requirements for changes in the operation of the CDIC which are not addressed in this Bill, it is a very tiny step. Therefore, I want to emphasize once more the deficiencies in this Bill which warrant re-examination. First we have the question of the majority of members of the Board being from the private sector, which specifically was rejected by the Wyman committee and the Senate committee. The second problem is the proposition that there should be alternate members. This is really quite unacceptable and it should be changed by amendment forthwith.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mrs. McDougall, seconded by Mr. Hnatyshyn, moves that Bill C-86, an Act to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 46, it is my duty to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner)—Aboriginal Rights—Lyell Island logging—Request for reimposition of moratorium. (b) Existence of aboriginal title; the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway)—Young Offenders Act—Request for amendments to deal with sentencing; the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie)—Trade—Water resources—Position of Canadian negotiator. (b) Grand Canal project.

PETROLEUM INCENTIVES PROGRAM ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Right Hon. Joe Clark (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved that Bill C-85, an Act to amend the Petroleum Incentives Program Act, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, at the end of October last the Minister—

Mr. Gauthier: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. I know the situation is different today than it was last Friday because we are at second reading, not third. Nevertheless, the first three speakers on second reading have 40 minutes each, I understand. Do I take it now that this is the second speaker on the Government side? If I follow your ruling on Friday, the Minister moves the motion, decides not to speak and that is his speech. Then the Parliamentary Secretary speaks, that is the second speech. The third speech will be on this side or to my left. That will be the first three speakers if I follow your logic of last week, unless you are going to change your mind and tell me I was right on Friday.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: For second reading proceedings, each of the first three speakers will have 40 minutes. As far as the argument—

—the Hon. Member raised Friday is concerned, there will be a decision this week. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, the first speaker on the Government side is the Hon. Member who has the floor, not the Minister who moved the motion. Is that what you are saying?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: As the Hon. Member is aware, this is not quite the same as the point he raised Friday. I would refer him to Standing Order 36.2

(2) When second reading of a Government bill is being considered, no Member except the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition shall speak for more than:

(a) forty minutes if that Member is the first, second or third speaker;

So the first three Members will have 40 minutes each, without subsequent questions or comments. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid).

[English]

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, as I was saying before we were so unnecessarily interrupted—

Mr. Gauthier: Oh, I am not too sure of that. I am not too sure of that.

Mr. McDermid: Have you finished? I was talking about last October when the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) announced the Progressive Conservative Government's new frontier energy policy. She said that policy, along with the Western and Atlantic Accords, marked the end of the previous Liberal Government's National Energy Program. The NEP was synonymous with inordinate Government regulation and a stifling tax regime. It robbed Canadians of opportunity and it seriously impaired the economic and energy potential of this country. The Petroleum Incentives Program, or PIP as it is referred to, was one of the NEP's most damaging measures. Today I am pleased to address this House on a Bill which will eliminate PIP payments as of March 31, 1986.

Some 14 months ago the people of Canada gave the Progressive Conservatives an overwhelming mandate for change. We presented Canadians with a choice and they voted for our approach to energy, to government and to the economy. Our overriding goals were national reconciliation, economic renewal, and social justice. Fundamental changes were required for us to achieve these goals. We identified five key economic initiatives that form the basis of our Government's long-term approach to fiscal and economic management. They are: reduction of the deficit; establishment of a positive investment climate; strengthening of Canada's trade relationships; removal of Government obstacles in the market-place; and reform of the NEP.

We have already made important progress on each of these five initiatives. The rate of growth of the federal deficit has declined as a direct result of the May Budget introduced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). The Budget stimulated economic growth and produced appropriate Government revenues. It applied the first substantial restraint in Ottawa's spending in almost a quarter of a century. We have reduced spending this year by $4.4 billion. A total of $75 billion has been eliminated from planned expenditures to 1990. More than $1 billion of those cuts originated in the Minister's Department.

The Economic Council of Canada recently said in its annual report that the Budget has "changed for the better many of the ominous trends related to deficits of the past decade". We will be strengthening our deficit-cutting measures in the future. The Council also referred in its report to Canada's weak investment record in 1984. This poor performance was directly attributable to the policies of the previous Government. The Economic Council identified the Atlantic and Western Accords as two initiatives that will encourage expanded investment in Canada. Today the energy industry and other industrial sectors are attracting vital foreign investment.

One of the first moves to create a positive investment climate was to abolish the restrictive Foreign Investment Review Agency. FIRA was replaced with Investment Canada, a body that is positive in nature, rather than a negative force like FIRA was. Enhanced international trade is key to our future prosperity. Here, again, we are making important progress. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) announced in this House several months ago that he had approached President Reagan to express Canada's interest in pursuing a new trade agreement with the United States. That agreement moved one step closer to reality recently with the setting up of the preparatory committee for trade negotiations.

The Government will be pursuing clear goals in our talks with the United States. At stake are more than two million jobs which depend directly on Canadian access to the U.S. market. We are also intent on expanding markets for Canadian goods in other regions of the world. The Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) has identified the Pacific Rim as a priority area. The Government will assist the private sector in expanding into this huge, but extremely competitive, market.

Another fundamental goal is the removal of unnecessary Government obstacles in the market-place. Deregulation is underway in key industries such as communications, transportation, and energy. Direct grants to industry are being replaced by fiscal incentives that encourage profit-making and investment.

Our fifth economic initiative, Mr. Speaker, was to replace the Liberals' National Energy Program. This called for radical restructuring of the operating environment for the energy industry in Canada. The Progressive Conservative Party has always supported the goals of the National Energy Program; opportunity, fairness, and energy security, but we have vehemently opposed the measures put in place by the previous Government to achieve these goals. The National Energy Program did not create opportunity, it crippled the industry's entrepreneurial spirit. The National Energy Program was not fair. It discriminated against regions of the country and against foreign firms operating in Canada. The National Energy Program did not create energy security, it provided grants that rewarded activity rather than success. The National Energy Program, in fact, was an unprecedented exercise in market intervention, discrimination, and confiscatory and retroactive measures.

The Petroleum Incentive Program damaged Canada's international reputation, split the country regionally, and cost the federal treasury billions of dollars. PIP discriminated against western Canada. It paid up to 80 per cent of drilling costs in the frontier regions and only 35 per cent on provincial lands. It discriminated on the basis of nationality. Canadian taxpayers paid dearly for this program. PIP was costing them an average of $1.6 billion a year and the total cost of the program will be in excess of $7 billion.

The Bill before this House today will eliminate petroleum incentive payments as of March 31, 1986. We are not abandoning our existing commitments under PIP. This Bill contains provisions in which expenses will be eligible for payments after March 31, 1986. Companies with exploration commitments in place when the Western Accord was signed will find that we will honour these commitments to the end of 1987. Our proposal for the phase-out of PIP is both realistic and reasonable. It comes as no surprise to the industry. We promised it at Prince Albert before the election, we announced it in the Western Accord, and we gave the industry a full year following the Western Accord to adjust to the new circumstances.

The Progressive Conservative Government recognizes that investment in Canada can best be achieved by rewarding success rather than by subsidizing effort. While eliminating PIP we are ending many burdensome taxes which rob the industry of its ability to reinvest and to grow. However, we recognize that additional incentives are required to maintain exploration in the high-risk frontier regions. To help bridge the gap between the termination of PIP and the timing of expected frontier oil and gas developments, we recently announced that a new tax-based incentive will be introduced by the Minister of Finance. The 25 per cent exploration tax credit will be applicable to exploration expenses in excess of $5 million per well anywhere in Canada. It will encourage continued exploration in the frontiers without discriminating against other oil and gas regions of Canada.

To ensure that the tax credit assists companies that are currently non-taxpaying, which are mostly Canadian companies, it will be refundable at a rate of 40 per cent. It also allows non-taxable companies, in certain circumstances, to pass the tax credit on to their investors who may be in a taxable position.

The exploration tax credit began on December 1 and will continue to the end of 1990. It will be applicable only to well expenses that do not qualify for federal or Alberta petroleum incentive payments. It is an equitable and cost-effective measure to encourage frontier exploration and ensure energy security for Canadians. However, there is little doubt that some companies created only to get PIP grants will have to restructure their operations. We are telling them they must be as innovative in adapting to our regime as they were in adapting to the last.

The industry recognizes and accepts the new realities, Mr. Speaker. I would like to quote from a recent report in Doig's Digest on life after PIP. That sounds like a soap opera. The author of that report wrote: "Now that Ottawa has removed the last parts of the National Energy Program, industry finds itself without a Linus blanket and it will now have to stand on its own two feet in a highly competitive market-place". The Digest also referred to PIP as a bad dream and as noted that its phase-out means that: "Economic and geological considerations, rather than politics, will now take precedence in the drilling of frontier wells".

The termination of PIP and the introduction of the exploration tax credit are fully consistent with the Government's goals as set out in the Prince Albert statement of July, 1984. We promised at that time to replace the Petroleum Incentives Program with more efficient tax-based incentives which encourage Canadian companies to participate in oil and gas development. The Prince Albert statement enunciated the following principles: energy as an engine of economic growth, energy self-sufficiency, increased Canadian participation, fair treatment of consumers and producers, and co-operation between the federal and provincial Governments and industry.

The principles outlined in Prince Albert are evident in the new natural gas and frontier energy policies the Minister announced in this House last fall to great applause. Our new frontier energy policy creates an internationally competitive exploration and development regime. One element of that regime is the 25 per cent exploration tax credit I spoke of earlier, but the new policy is much more far-reaching. It corrects some of the National Energy Program's mistakes and allows us to build on our energy strengths. We will be replacing the National Energy Program's controversial Canada Oil and Gas Act with an entirely new piece of legislation, the Canada Petroleum Resources Act. Under the National Energy Program legislation, the Government was able to confiscate 25 per cent of successful drilling projects retroactively. That provision damaged Canada's investment climate and our international reputation.

There will be no Crown share provision in the new Canada Petroleum Resources Act. The National Energy Program management regime was highly interventionist, placing greater reliance on bureaucratic processes than on market forces. Our legislation will emphasize market solutions.

We are ending the National Energy Program inflexible royalty regime and replacing it with one that is profit-sensitive and encourages investment. It will be modelled after the Alberta royalty regime that applies to oil sands and enhanced oil recovery projects. Royalties will be modest in the first few years but will rise as projects begin to earn reasonable profits. Royalties will be subject to further consultation and negotiation on a project-by-project basis.

The new system takes account of the role provincial governments play in royalties. In the Newfoundland offshore, for example, the provincial Government will set royalties as agreed in the Atlantic Accord.

The National Energy Program gave special treatment to Petro-Canada, even though it was competing against private firms that did not have the benefit of special favours. Under our legislation there will be no more special favours. Petro-Canada will compete in the market-place like other companies.

The National Energy Program gave the Minister broad discretion in using extraordinary powers to direct the industry in the frontiers. There was no way to appeal such decisions. Some of these powers are being eliminated. Others will be maintained but we will limit their extent and the way they are used. The National Energy Program required 50 per cent Canadian ownership of frontier production projects. We support that goal, but we oppose the tactics used to achieve it.

The National Energy Program gave the previous Government the power to expropriate holdings without compensation in order to raise ownership to 50 per cent. That provision was applied to projects that started before the requirement was implemented. We are keeping the 50 per cent requirement but it will not be applied retroactively. There will be no expropriation without compensation. Instead, the industry will be expected to develop its own solutions to achieve greater Canadian participation. The sale of assets to raise the Canadian ownership level will be used only as a last resort. In those cases, they will be sold at market value.

This approach is fair to all investors. However, it will still provide opportunities for increased Canadian ownership. It is important to note that Canadian ownership in the oil and gas industry rose to 47 per cent from 42 per cent in the last year. This represents more progress in one year than the previous three years under the National Energy Program. Our domestic ownership requirements have been accepted by industry. At our request, Mobil Canada has agreed to offer for sale sufficient portions of the Hibernia and Venture frontier projects to ensure that our 50 per cent ownership objectives can be met, even for these 1979 discoveries.

When the Minister introduced our new frontier energy policy in the House, she also announced that we have reached an agreement with the producing provinces on natural gas markets and pricing. The natural gas negotiations were difficult for governments and the industry but we succeeded in coming to an agreement that achieves a balance between the interests of consumers and producers. For consumers, the Toronto wholesale price is immediately frozen for the year. Their access to natural gas supplies at competitive market prices is immediately enhanced. There will be a one-year transition period in which we move away from a Government determined natural gas price to one created by negotiation between the buyers and the sellers. After November 1, 1986, all natural gas prices will be determined through these negotiations.

Consumers will not pay the toll increase of 11 cents a gigajoule recently granted TransCanada Pipelines. We have eliminated the Canadian ownership special charge which added to the price of natural gas. This should mean lower home-heating costs this winter. As a matter of fact, my last bill from the utility which services my home, Consumers Gas, contained a letter which announced a reduction on my bill. It is there for all to see, a lower price for me to heat my home this winter. The proof is in the pudding.

Producers gain greater access to the valuable export market under the new agreement. Exports already represent some $4 billion in sales annually. As much as a quarter of those revenues might have been lost if we had not changed the export rules. The Toronto wholesale price will no longer be used as a bench-mark for export prices. These will now be determined on the basis of a more equitable and more logical regional price test. The new test ensures that Canadian consumers will not pay more for Canadian gas than their American neighbours.

Under the new agreement, producers may export gas by order without limits on the amount, as long as the terms of the contracts do not exceed two years. The National Energy Board is holding hearings on the best way to determine an appropriate surplus. We are pressing the provinces and the industry to do what is necessary to realize the benefits of the natural gas agreement during the transition period. We were particularly pleased to hear that Ontario's Energy Minister, Vince Kerrio, supports the introduction of interim contract carriage during the transition period. This will enable lower prices negotiated by large Ontario industrial consumers with Alberta gas producers to occur now.

The Government of Canada has moved quickly on a number of provisions in the natural gas agreement. The National Energy Board regulations were amended to remove volume limits on short-term export sales. Last November 8, the National Energy Board issued for comment guidelines for short-term sales and changes to contracts and licences.

The National Energy Board began its hearings, which started last November 19 in Calgary. It scheduled a hearing for January 13 into duplication of demand charges, TransCanada's T-Service tariff and other matters. That hearing has been held in abeyance for a couple of weeks. Meanwhile, the National Energy Board has received an application for T-service to be provided by TransCanada on an interim basis. The Minister's Department has drafted terms and conditions for a natural gas pipeline review panel and circulated them for comments from the provinces, as hads been decided in the gas agreement. A committee to monitor the implementation of the agreement was established in co-operation with the provinces. The committee met for the first time on January 15 and I can report that it had a very productive meeting.

We are encouraged by the willingness of the producers to offer direct sales to end users. For example, a major Ontario petro-chemical plant, Cyanamid, and Alberta producers have negotiated a direct sale with prices well under current levels. The company is working out interim transportation arrangements with the transmission and distribution companies involved in getting the gas to the plant. I believe the message is clear. Given the right energy policy environment, markets can work for the benefit of both producers and consumers.

In February, 1985, we reached an agreement with the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador. The Atlantic Accord makes the province an equal partner in the development of its offshore oil and gas resources. It ended years of bitter federal-provincial disputes which created uncertainty at a time when the industry was planning to commit billions of dollars to offshore exploration and development. It provides for revenue sharing in offshore oil and gas resources on the same basis as if they were on land. I could go on and speak about that particular agreement as well as the Western Accord and the gas agreement. All of these are very important.

We are now talking about the phasing out of PIP and accomplishing this with the introduction of this Bill. With the Atlantic Accord and Western Accord, the new frontier energy policy and the natural gas markets and pricing agreements, the Progressive Conservative Government has corrected much of the damage caused by years of ill-conceived Liberal policies. We did it in only 14 months, without sacrificing the interests of consumers, producers, distributors or taxpayers. We did it without the disputes which were so much a part of the daily business of the previous Government. We have united Canadians using energy as the engine of economic growth. I am sure Bill C-85 will receive rapid passage because of its wide acceptance across Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being five o'clock, the House will now proceed to consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

LOBBY REGISTRATION ACT

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East) moved that Bill C-248, an Act to register lobbyists, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization.

He said: Mr. Speaker, first of all let me say in respect to the genesis of this Bill that it is a Bill which has been around for more than a decade in one form or another. The present Bill before the House which I have the honour to sponsor was last put forward by the late Walter Baker who at that time was the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton. He felt strongly on the subject. Indeed, we owe a great deal to his research in bringing the subject to the point where it is today. Where we are today, of course, is that the Government has indicated its desire to move in the form of legislation to provide for the registration of lobbyists. In compliance with that commitment, it has wisely, in my opinion, tabled a Green Paper last December 5 entitled "Lobbying and the Registration of Paid Lobbyists—a Discussion Paper". I use the word "wisely" because this is a very complex issue. Indeed, on the surface it would seem to be a very simple, straightforward matter, that is, to provide for a form of registration for lobbyists. However, it is complex because before we can do that we have to define what is a lobbyist.

Let me illustrate. Is a solicitor coming to Ottawa on behalf of a client to seek a patent, to seek a copyright, or some form of legal exercise, a lobbyist? The immediate response is no, and I agree with that. Yet, he is doing it on a fee for service basis. We had to be extremely careful not to cast too broad a net in our definition of what is a lobbyist.

For the purposes of this Bill I have classed lobbyists in three categories. First, there are trade sector lobbyists. They are obvious; they have been here for years. For example, we have the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, the dairy people and the cheese people. The various people involved in agriculture have offices here to protect and look after their interests and indeed to pursue these interests with the Government of the day. This is a legitimate exercise. We have these trade lobbyists. They have offices in Ottawa and they operate up front.

Then we have a second group. These are the people who represent the voluntary sector. The obvious one which comes to mind is the Canadian Red Cross, but there are others. For example, we have people who operate offices here and have paid executives on behalf of the Right to Life movement. They pursue the interests of their organizations by trying to influence the Government to change the Criminal Code and the legislation affecting abortion. Of course we have people who pursue other interests in terms of representing the voluntary sector, whether it be capital punishment, the rights of non-smokers and those of smokers or what have you. All of these are legitimate in, and of, their own right. Not only do these people have the right to lobby the Government and Parliament, but we had to be careful not to do anything to restrict that right. We have to be extremely prudent that we do not, by way of legislation, restrict the rights of citizens in any way to have access to the Government and to Members of Parliament.

Then there is a third group. These are the so-called consultants who operate on a fee for service basis. We have seen a growth in this group over the past dozen years or so. Indeed, I would anticipate with the reforms in this institution that they will become even more active as they target Members of Members of Parliament, who will have considerable leeway in their legislative powers, will become legitimate targets for lobbying. For example, if we are to reform private Mmebers' business, as I hope we will, notwithstanding some of the reservations expressed by members of the Opposition Parties, then there will be private Members' Bills which will become law. Obviously private Members would then be the target of lobbyists who will want to get various Bills of one kind or another through to become law. It is all the more urgent that we address this matter. It seems to me that it flows almost consequentially from the work of the Special Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons. Indeed, I presented the Bill for first reading just a few days after the presentation of the Second and Third Reports of the Special Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons; I believe it was on the day we adjourned, which would have been June 28 last year.

Just as a matter of interest, I examined the Order Paper and I think that currently there are a total of 60 private Members' Bills in place. I do not know what will be the fate of this particular private Member's Bill, but certainly we all know what happens generally speaking to private Members' Bills in the House—they are talked out, so no one takes us seriously. Indeed, not even the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), speaking on his own behalf presumably and speaking on behalf of his Party, took private Members' business seriously when he said, as quoted in The Globe and Mail of January 21: "It is not the role of the private Member to legislate on matters of great national significance". I do not agree with that. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain is a great parliamentarian who has contributed significantly to parliamentary reform. He was an active member of the Lefebvre committee in the last Parliament and provided leadership and support to the reform committee whose reports are now before the House. I do not believe that that truly reflects his views. When we examine the Order Paper and the 60 private Members' Bills which are there, 18 of them come from the Party represented by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain. Just taking a look at some of the private Members' Bills, we have Bill C-202, an Act to Amend the Criminal Code (capital punishment); Bill C-205 an Act to Amend the Criminal Code (gun control); an Act to revoke the conviction of Louis Riel; an Act to amend the Criminal Code (abortion); an Act to require assistance in the search of missing children; an Act respecting the conservation, export and diversion of water resources; and an Act to amend the Criminal Code (child abuse). I believe that these are matters of great national significance. I further believe that no one would deny Members of Parliament the right to bring in Bills to address these matters of great national concern and ultimately to have these Bills become law.

Bill C-248, which has been before the House since June 28, has been postponed on three separate occasions. I postponed it deliberately because I was hoping that the measures dealing with the reform of private Members' business would be in place and that this could be the kind of Bill which— and I say "could" because it would be subject to the scrutiny and judgment of my parliamentary peers—could be deemed worthy of second reading and going on to a committee. I deliberately did so because I felt that we would now have in place provisions whereby that could happen. Of course I refer to the private Members' provisions of the Third Report of the Special Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons. I hope indeed that will happen. In any event, I felt it was time to get on with this Bill. In fairness to other Members who have Bills, I should really address mine and give the House a chance to speak to it.

I have talked about the fundamental right of private citizens to be able to make representations to the Government and to Parliament. I talked about the absolute necessity to be very careful in anything we do so as not to deny or restrict in any way that fundamental right. That is a fundamental right of any citizen in a democratic society. My concern is not with these people, although I must repeat, we have to be careful not to do anything to restrict that legitimate activity. My concern is to address what we call the paid lobbyists, because their actions are beyond public scrutiny. It is my conviction that it is time we formally recognize the presence and the role of the professional lobbyists in our parliamentary system. I see nothing wrong with that. Indeed, I think that the professional lobbyist has an important part to play in our parliamentary system.

We must be careful that we put in place certain standards in order to ensure that the activities of paid lobbyists respect the fundamental ethics of our parliamentary practices and proceedings. All of us in this House have our own standard of ethics. In addition to that we are guided by the provisions of the Senate and House of Commons Act in terms of how we conduct ourselves vis-à-vis conflict of interest. As well there is a move to provide further guidelines governing conflict of interest for Members of Parliament.

The difficulty is to find the lobbyists. I will quote for the House how the Bill attempts to do that, and I am not suggesting in any way that this is at all adequate, because that is a judgment that should be made, and hopefully will be made, by a parliamentary committee. The Bill says a lobbyist is:

> Any person who, for payment, attempts to influence, directly or indirectly
> (a) the introduction, passage, defeat, or amendment or any legislation before either House of Parliament, or
> (b) a decision to be taken on any matter coming within the administrative jurisdiction of a Minister of the Crown, whether or not that matter has come or is likely to come before either House of Parliament for legislative action.

At least that is an attempt at a definition. I would like to see a parliamentary committee take that and go to work on it, either improve it or change it or throw it out. It is conceivable that Parliament, in its wisdom, may decide that, we should not legislate in this area. We should not have a Bill governing the conduct and registration of lobbyists. We should at least take a look at the question. That is what the Bill attempts to do. It attempts essentially to put in place a registry. That is why I suggest in the Bill that the registry, since it concerns both Houses Of Parliament, be administered by the Clerk of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Commons.

Under this registry, paid lobbyists would be required to register at the beginning of each calendar year. They would have to submit their name and business address, the name and address of the person on whose behalf they are employed to lobby, and the duration of the employment for that purpose. Finally, Mr. Speaker, the Bill would also outline penalties for non-compliance.

I want to take a look at other countries because I think the House should learn from what has happened in other jurisdictions. I took a look at Australia, which is probably closest to us in terms of the way they administer their affairs and the fact that it is a federal state with a Westminster type of Parliament. In Australia there are two registers. One is a special register for lobbyists representing foreign Governments and agencies. That is not a bad idea. I believe an argument could be made for that kind of registry in and of its own right. The other is a general register of lobbyists and their clients. Both of these are kept by the Department of the special Minister of State in Canberra. He is a Minister for Parliament. The registers are confidential and are only for the use of Ministers and officials on a need-to-know basis. Under the Australian system, lobbyists can actually be denied access to government Ministers and officials if those lobbyists are not on the register. Furthermore, Ministers and senior public servants can be dismissed for non-compliance.

I move on to the United Kingdom. There is no legislation in the United Kingdom, and consequently no form of mandatory registration. What they have in the United Kingdom is a very strong code of personal conduct regarding the activities of lobbyists. Their actions are governed by two major public institutions. These are the Public Relations Consultants Association and the Institute of Public Relations. Both of these groups have codes of conduct and are empowered to expel members for violations of these codes. Nothing, however, prevents expelled members from continuing to lobby the Government. The United Kingdom Government is very interested in what we are doing. It has expressed great interest in what comes out of this legislation, and indeed the Government's Green Paper and its intention to proceed with a Bill.

Finally, Sir, we have to take a look at the jurisdiction nearest to us, and perhaps the one with which we are most familiar, and that is the United States. The activities of the congressional lobbyists in the United States are covered under the provisions of the 1946 Regulation of Lobbying Act. The Act required lobbyists to register with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives. They must also provide detailed information on themselves, their clients and their individual or individuals lobbied.

There has long been a consensus, however, that the American lobbying Act is in serious need of review. Indeed, it is legislation that really is almost unenforceable because the Act lacks definitive punitive powers. it only deals with lobbyists who are dealing with Congress. It does not cover lobbyists who are dealing with the executive branch of Government, nor does it cover lobbyists who are dealing with the very powerful regulatory agencies that are in place in the United States. We must be careful not to make the mistake that they made in the U.S. in 1946 in bringing in a Bill that is, to all intents and purposes, ineffective and consequently one that is itself the subject of lobbyists, because now they are in a catch-22 situation. The lobbyists are so strong they do not want this Bill changed so they constantly keep pressuring Congress to leave the lobbyist Bill alone, for their purposes saying it is all right the way it is. We must not get ourselves in that kind of a situation.

I hope that either this Bill or its subject matter or the Government's Green Paper—preferably both—would be referred to an appropriate Standing Committee very quickly. I would like that committee to take a look at the provisions of this Bill, which I do not believe are adequate and which I believe casts far too broad a net. In the spirit of the way in which we operate in private Members' time here it is a means of getting this before the House. It is merely a parliamentary vehicle. Let us take a look at it and see how seriously flawed it is. Let us take a look at the American experience to see how flawed that experience is and how ineffective it is. Let us take a look at what happened in Australia. Let us hear from the people who are actively involved professionally in lobbying in Canada—these are people whom we all know, they are respected corporate citizens of this country, whether they are in the voluntary sector or whether they are trade lobbyists or whether they are professional lobbyists—I think we should hear from them. When we have the evidence in then we can decide first if we are going to legislate, and I believe we should, and second, what kind of legislation we should put in place. If there is ever a case to be made for Parliament legislating itself as opposed to having legislation emanating from the Government it is on this kind of measure, a measure to govern the conduct of the people who are going to be making representations to Members of Parliament and to Members of the Government with regard to public policy and legislation. Such a study, in my view, is an immediate necessity. I believe there is a consensus in the country that such a study is really long overdue and that there is the need to legislate in this particular area.

Before I take my seat, I want to congratulate the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) for bringing in the Green Paper. I want to congratulate the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) for the leadership he has shown in the statement he made to the House last year announcing it was the intention of the Government to bring in a measure to provide for the registration of lobbyists. I would also like to thank my late colleague, the Hon. Walter Baker, who brought this Bill to the House and provided a great deal of the research on which I have depended in coming to my conclusions on this subject. Finally, may I say to the Members of the House that I commend this measure to them in the hope that it will get to a Parliamentary Committee.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I too am pleased to join the debate and I want to congratulate the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) on his initiative. I think it is an issue that concerns all Canadians and I believe that is so not only of the question of the registration and approach of lobbyists to the Government but also of all of the questions surrounding a number of patronage issues on which, unfortunately, the Government has chosen thus far not to act.

For the purposes of today's discussion, I think we must zero in on something a little more specific and that is whether or not a private Member's Bill such as the one drafted today will indeed be used to complement action in this area or whether it could subsequently be used by the Government as a smokescreen so that it does nothing. Of course, I am referring specifically to the Government Green Paper which is now before the House under discussion and has called for public response to the suggestion that we bring in legislation dealing with lobbyists.

Unfortunately, the promise that was made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) last September to move immediately with legislation on the issue of lobbying has followed the route of a number of unfulfilled promises and has become hollow. My fear is that if we specifically address ourselves to the private Member's Bill, however well intentioned it may be and I believe it to be well intentioned, that private Member's Bill, with the Government's majority, will go nowhere. Those of us who would suggest that a private Member's Bill will see the light of day in terms of legislation are not looking at the facts as they have shown themselves to be over the last number of years.

On this subject, a comment was made in last April's issue of a business magazine. This article dealt with the changes on Parliament Hill and with how lobbyists should get their messages across. The comment made by lawyer Arthur Drache in that article is as follows:

> For the most part, the ordinary member of Parliament has little power to affect legislation, even if he were Uncle Harry's next-door neighbor.
> Uncle Harry is a Congressman in the United States.
> Unlike their congressional brethren in the U.S., where individual legislators have the power to affect proposed legislation, Canadian federal parliamentarians outside the ministry and cabinet committees ratify rather than legislate. They examine only what they're allowed to examine.
> "Your local MP doesn't have a heck of a lot of clout in deciding public policy," says lawyer Arthur Drache. "The ministers and your key decision makers in the bureaucracy are your vital audiences."

This article was attempting to address the business community on the dos and dont's of lobbying.

We know that at this point in time, the private Member is largely ignored when it comes to cabinet and executive decision making. We can look to the factory-freezer trawler issue as one very blatant example of this. If in fact that private Member through a private Member's Bill does not have the ear of the Government, I fear that if we focus attention on the specific private Member's Bill as presented by the Hon. Member for St. John's East, we will forget the fact that the Prime Minister made a promise almost six months ago to immediately bring in legislation to deal with the question of lobbyists. He did not promise a discussion paper. He did not promise another study. He did not promise a Green Paper. He promised action and legislation and he said that he wanted to move immediately on this very difficult issue.

[Translation]

I shall, if I may, take a few minutes to recall the answer given by our Member who is an expert on these matters, the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria), who unfortunately cannot be with us today because he is at the Standing Committee on Agriculture. The Hon. Member said that on September 9, 1985, during a speech in the House of Commons, the Prime Minister himself stated: I have therefore asked my hon. colleague, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, to prepare legislation as soon as possible to regulate lobbying activities. We all know that three months and ten days later, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs tabled, not legislation, not a bill, but merely a working paper inviting Canadians to give their views, a decision that has further delayed fulfilment of a commitment that is long overdue.

The working paper offers legislative options such as self-regulation—and we all know that is not going to work for lobbying—and a code of ethics. If we look at self-regulation and the specific case of Mr. Frank Moores, we see that in January, the Government decided to ask all federally regulated companies not to hire professional lobbyists like Government Consultants International.

[English]

We know that the Prime Minister issued a directive on January 7 stating that all Crown corporations must cancel all contracts with consulting firms including those run by Conservatives to lobby the federal Government on their behalf. Despite this so-called directive, Petro-Canada continued its contract with Government Consultants International, an Ottawa-based lobbying firm owned by the former Newfoundland Premier, Frank Moores. We know that at least one Crown corporation has absolutely ignored a so-called government directive.

We are talking about the issue of self-regulation or an in-house code of ethics for paid lobbyists because that is what has been suggested by the Minister in the Green Paper. I hope that that suggestion will never see the light of day. If there is self-regulation, we know that there will not be a positive response on the part of paid lobbyists.

When it comes to the issue of lobbying, my concern is that for the most part, there are a number of organizations that come to the Government on issues of national importance on a daily, weekly, monthly and yearly basis. Are we to focus on the Canadian Council on Social Development? I think not because it has a board of directors and is a non-profit organization that can open its books to anyone at any time. Similarly, the National Action Committee on the Status of Women would have no problems in registering, I daresay. At the same time, these are not the organizations that have been able to influence the corridors of power for sums of money about which we know nothing. I believe the most important thing for us to do is to get a definition of lobbyists and specifically paid lobbyists on the table in the form of Government legislation.

All of us in the House would love to see parliamentary reform which would allow the private Member's Bill to come forward in a way which we have not seen, not only during this administration but during past administrations. We know that generally speaking, private Members' Bills are going nowhere. I do not want to give the Government a chance to ignore its basic responsibility and its promises to the people on the issue of lobbying by presenting what can be seen as a red herring in the form of this private Member's Bill.

It would be my concern and the concern of members of my Party that by allowing this particular private Member's Bill to supplant in the order of business a government-led piece of legislation which could already be on the table, we would be saying that this is not an important issue for the Government but is simply a private Member's issue which really does not deal with the agenda that the Government has set for 1986 even though the Prime Minister himself promised legislation specifically governing lobbyists. Our particular concern is with those lobbyists who are paid literally hundreds of thousands of unpublished dollars to affect public policy and budgets.

I should be a little skeptical about government legislation on lobbying when I look at the promises made by the Prime Minister on the issue of patronage. That is an issue which in fact elicited much public debate during the course of the leaders' debate prior to the election of September of 1984. We know that the Prime Minister who once stated: "You dance with them that brung you", is in fact applying that particular philosophy of politics in his own daily life. We can look to an article which was written by Jeffrey Simpson in The Globe and Mail last Saturday. He bumped into someone from Antigonish and this constituent and great friend of the Prime Minister was extremely upset because he had not received a job from the Government. He talked about a number of Government appointments which have been made by the office of the self-same Prime Minister who spoke in such volumes about the previous Liberal administration. He asked, and I quote:

"And how about my old friend Sam Wakim? He walked off with a chunk of the Export Development Corporation's legal business. Took it from an Ottawa firm to a Toronto firm."

"The Prime Minister denied knowing anything about it."

"Were you born yesterday? Sam's an old St. FX graduate. Classmate of Brian's. Read him the first edition of The Globe every night.... Good for Sam. Good for Pierrette. Good for Ian MacDonald. Wrote Brian's biography.... "Ian's a nice guy.... Jean Bazin. Rodrigue Pageau's wife. Roger Nantel. Fernand Roberge. Lucien Bouchard.

An Hon. Member: What's this all about?

Ms. Copps: The Hon. Member asks me what this is all about. I guess it is what makes us in the Opposition just a little skeptical about the Government's alleged intentions on the issue of registration for lobbyists. We know this Prime Minister and this Government have raised the art of patronage to a form of heights so high they have never been seen by any previous administration. In that regard, I guess we are a little skeptical about the kind of positive legislation which will come forth from the Government.

We know, for example, that Government Consultants International, despite directives from the Prime Minister's office, has continued to work for Petro-Canada. Is it perhaps Government Consultants International which is having such an effect on the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) so as to paralyse her and the country in the face of rising gas prices at a time when the price of oil is falling to world lows? Why is it that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources refuses day after day in the House of Commons to act on the question of the rising price of gasoline in contradiction to every economic trend in every other country in the world? Perhaps, GCI has got to the Minister. Perhaps GCI and its lobbyists through Petro-Canada, have turned the Minister into the mouthpiece for Petro-Canada rather than making Petro-Canada an instrument of public energy policy.

It is in that regard that we are just a little skeptical not only about the intentions of the Minister with respect to his Green Paper but of the concern that we in this House look only to the private Members' legislation, as suggested. I think it was suggested with some measure of respect and merit by the Hon. Member for St. John's East. If we turn to his legislation, then we will ignore the Government's responsibility to deliver a Government law to cap these excesses immediately so we can start getting some sanity back into Petro-Canada, into the company which was supposedly formed to help the energy prices and policies rather than to hurt it as we see occurring at the current moment.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, if we look at the lifespan of Private Member's Bills since the Sixties, even under the Liberal Government, it is clear these Bills do not survive unless the Government has the political desire to pursue the matter.

Mr. Speaker, since last December a discussion paper by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) was tabled, which, in fact, discusses this particular subject, I would like to ask the Government why it is not proceeding with its own legislation, as promised by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) last September. Why is he maintaining this smoke screen, as it were, pretending with Canadians that the Government is doing something concrete about lobbying, while at the same time refusing to table a Bill in this House?

[English]

As I said before, I believe the Hon. Member for St. John's East has a legitimate beef. I think he has a beef which could be supported by all Members on all sides of the House. He pointed out in his remarks, and I think we can testify to the fact, that lobbyist legislation is working in other countries. It is working in the United States and in a number of other countries. At the same time, if we look at the congressional system in the United States which allows the private Member much more action and activity, we find that those same private Members have been hostaged, in a sense, to the political action committees and to the packs which have sprung up in the thousands of members across the United States. I would hate to see the day when we in the Parliament of Canada were hostage to packs in the same way as we now see happening in the United States. Unfortunately, if we proceed with parliamentary reform and the absolute removal of executive responsibility through the Cabinet, we are going to see ourselves fractured into the kind of congressional system which has led to the abuse of lobbyist power in the United States.

I believe there are two sides to that coin and I believe it will be addressed in the issue of parliamentary reform in the weeks and months to come. At the same time, if we look at the release which the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) tabled in the House on December 9, we find he speaks specifically to a number of major initiatives which he says "are intended to ensure the highest possible ethical standards for both the Government and the Public Service". Among these is a proposal to prepare legislation to govern certain aspects of lobbying.

Notwithstanding these broad and, I think, defensible comments, the Minister did not come in with a law or with legislation. He came in with another discussion paper so that we could discuss why it is that the Government-owned Crown corporation of Petro-Canada can, with immunity, violate directives from the Prime Minister's office by continuing to hire for consultation Government Consultants International, a firm which obviously has extremely political connections with the Progressive Conservative Party since it is headed up by the former Conservative Premier of Newfoundland.

These questions are not going to be answered by a discussion paper. They will not be answered by a private member's Bill, however well intentioned that private member's Bill may be. These questions will be answered when the Government is prepared to come up with legislation which will define exactly what a lobbyist is and when it comes up with a piece of legislation which is prepared to tell the people of Canada just how much these gun-slingers are being paid and just what intention, direct and indirect, they have in the changing and modifying of public policy within Canada. We know it is likely in the very near future that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will bring forth a Budget. In the same way, we know that, obviously, the Minister of Finance will be tapped by a number of interest groups, particularly the business community. I think it is fair to say that the lobbyists which have had the most success happen to come from the business community. In an article called "Pitching Your Message To Ottawa" by Graham Davies, it indicates quite clearly the Government's interest in the messages borne by representives of the business community. The article states, and I quote:

> —there is a new co-operative climate that is enticing planeloads of corporate executives, bankers, oilmen and small-business operators to the nation's capital. They are coming to Ottawa to take up the Conservative Government's challenge to engage in dialogue and consultation on the Tory program for economic renewal.

The Government wants to get its Budget message across. One can expect to pay up to $200 for such a hired gun, but we would like to know who is speaking for the young people, the unemployed and the senior citizens? Who is speaking for these people at the same time these paid lobbyists are currently being allowed to carry on their activities unfettered behind the corridors of power without being accountable to the Parliament of Canada? I believe that one way of dealing with this situation is by demanding that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs immediately introduce legislation, backed by the Government and not simply a Private Members' Bill, which will address the very serious issue of paid lobbyists. That will ensure that those people who are influencing Government public policy are on the record. It is time we opened the books. It is time Petro-Canada told us how much Government Consultants International is being paid and why it has been successful in convincing the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources not to hold the cap on gas prices. With that in mind, we would like to see Government action, not another Private Members' Bill or a discussion paper.

Mr. Lewis: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. In response to the last speaker's request for government action, I am prepared to advise the House on behalf of the Government that we are prepared to refer the subject matter of this Bill to the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization. Further, in accordance with government Motion No. 71, we are prepared to refer the document "Lobbying and the Registration of Paid Lobbyists", prepared by the Government, to the same committee. The committee is to report its findings no later than March 30, 1986. If I have unanimous consent of the House I am prepared to make such a motion shortly before six o'clock, immediately after the NDP has had an opportunity to respond.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Copps: It's a red herring.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: On that same point of order, Mr. Speaker. The Government wants to again send this document "Lobbying and the Registration of Paid Lobbyists", a discussion paper which has already been referred—

Mr. Lewis: No. It is on the Order Paper.

Mr. Gauthier: It is a proposed motion. Why don't you move it?

Mr. Lewis: I just said—

Mr. Gauthier: Move it on Government time under Government Orders, not Private Members' Hour. You do not need to do it in Private Members' time. It is a Government initiative which asks for a report not later than March 30, 1986. My point is if it is a government initiative and a Minister wants to stand in his place during Routine Proceedings and make that motion, we would give it serious consideration. However, for the Parliamentary Secretary to try and bootleg that thing at this time when we all want to speak on this important initiative I think is wrong.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McDermid: We will see who talks it out.

Mr. Gauthier: Stick around. I have learned a lot from you, McDermid.

Mr. Blaikie: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker. I would have had some reservations about only the Bill going to committee. I hope I will have a chance to speak in a few minutes about why I do not like—and I speak only for myself—the whole thing. However, in any event, I have no quarrel with it going to committee in this form only because the whole paper is being referred as well. That would have the effect of doing what the Government wants to do and I do not think it would give the Government the kind of out which my colleagues to the right maintain it will. Therefore, I have no objection to such a motion being made.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, my last comment was that you can hardly bootleg something like this on a point of order. The Hon. Member has to have the floor to do that. If the Member wants to speak to his motion some time in the debate, which was my point, then he can do so. To come in on a point of order and try and push that through in that way I think is irregular.

Mr. Lewis: I said shortly before six.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We are still in debate. If something is to happen it will happen before six o'clock, but nothing had happened yet.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I want to begin by commending the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) for his traditional persistence in pursuing matters of great importance to him, and particularly for the tradition, now well established, of carrying on the work of the Hon. Walter Baker. Many times in this and other Parliaments I have found myself on the same wavelength as the Hon. Member or, for that matter, the Hon. Walter Baker, particularly with respect to parliamentary reform. However, I want to say at this point—and I stress that I am speaking only for myself because, as I believe he pointed out, Members from my Party have indicated support for the idea of registering lobbyists. Indeed, the first Private Members' motion to that effect was not from the Hon. Walter Baker but from another deceased Member of this House, Barry Mather, an NDP Member of Parliament. Therefore the reservations that I express are only my own and I want to make that clear from the beginning.

My concern is that by moving to register lobbyists, we are making a statement about politics in Canada. We are defining the kind of politics we regard as entrenched in and part and parcel of the life of Canada. I do not say this out of any naiveté. I realize lobbying has gone on from before Confederation. I know many hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent in the financing of paid lobbyists here on the Hill. However, my concern is, to put it simply, that by moving to register lobbyists we are accepting a certain view of politics which I want to reject. There have always been competing views of the political process here in Canada. By moving to register lobbyists we are saying that a particular view of politics has won the day. I call that kind of politics "brokerage politics" or small "l" liberal politics, that is the view of politics that sees the role of Government, indeed of Parliament, as engaging in a series of trade-offs between the interests of various groups in the country. There are other views of politics which have existed alongside that view. That is, the politics of competing ideas; competing ideas about the common good; competing ideas about the public interest; competing ideas on many levels. There is also what I might call the co-operative model. This is the reason that some countries have not gone so far as to register lobbyists. They say they do not really need to do that because they have more of a consensual or co-operative view of politics. They sit down with various sectors and work out a consensus between them.

What I am saying to the Hon. Member for St. John's East, and I hope he can see my point, is that by moving to register lobbyists we will be giving a kind of legitimacy, or sanctity if you will, to an element of our political process which I think is to be lamented. In that sense I am opposed to the idea. It will have the effect of allowing one particular view of politics to win out over those others, which I admit are always going to be somewhat blurred or overlapping, but which nevertheless are in competition with each other. Rather than declaring a victory for one view of politics over the other I would just as soon they continued to compete with each other in the potitical market-place, to use a phrase popular with Members on the Government side.

There is also a difficulty in deciding what a lobbyist is. I once worked for the United Church in a social action ministry in the north end of Winnipeg. I often went to City Hall to argue for better housing or different landlord/tenant regulations and various other things affecting people in the area in which the Stella Mission was located. Was I a lobbyist? I was not being paid directly by the groups on whose behalf I was speaking. I was being paid by the church, which was concerned about a particular area. The Hon. Member for St. John's East said we have to watch that we do not cast the net too broadly.

I guess the point I am making is that as soon as you begin to cast the net you have given weight to this particular view of what politics is all about and it is only a matter of time before you debase the coinage of everyone who is interested in advocating a certain view of what the country should be like. We are then all on the same level with the high-priced consultants who are doing the lobbying in the back corridors on behalf of PetroCan or whoever. That reduces everyone to this kind of money-grubbing level. I object to that. I know that is not what the Hon. Member has in mind. What he has in mind is to bring under control and make more visible the high-powered lobbying that goes on here so that Canadians will know more about what is going on.

However, I think that experience in the United States will bear out that those who are doing things which they would rather not have the public know about will still find ways to do them. They will still find ways to have the inappropriate influence that the Hon. Member wants to bring under public scrutiny. It is those who speak out on behalf of others who cannot hire people to speak for them, people who speak on behalf of the poor and powerless in our society who do not have any clout, who will be eventually listed and will receive the most scrutiny.

As I am sure you and other Hon. Members can see, Mr. Speaker, I have a great deal of reservation about this whole concept. I think the argument could be made that it would be a sad day for Canadian politics when we come to the point where we think that our politics are so much like this that we want to institutionalize it in this way. I am sure that other Members of my caucus would have a different view. I make this argument all on my own.

I thought it was unfortunate that the Hon. Member for St. John's East referred to that quote by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans). I do not think that is helpful in the current context of trying to nurse the process of parliamentary reform to a happy conclusion.

This is my first opportunity to say something in a public forum, about much comment recently about what bothered the NDP with regard to the reforms at the last minute when everything seemed to be going so well. If you check the record on Private Members' Business you will see that what the Government finally presented in the form of proposed Standing Orders in the third week of December is different than what the reform committee recommended.

In the proposed Standing Orders which the Government introduced just before we recessed for Christmas, the Special Committee on Private Members' Business was given the power to allocate consecutively the five hours of debate which would be given to each of the six Bills that would be selected out of the 20 priority Bills for coming to a vote. That was not in the original proposal of the committee. The original proposal specified that those five hours would take place intermittently, whereby a Bill would come up for an hour's debate, even though it had been designated for a vote, then the other 19 Bills would be debated. That process would be repeated so that no matter what was introduced as a private Member's Bill there would be sufficient time for the public to come to understand what was happening. It would be a much more lengthy process than that which would be possible if the Standing Orders proposed before Christmas were to be enacted. Under that proposal the private Members' committee could decide that a particular Bill should have five hours of consecutive debate. A private Member's Bill could go from start to finish in about a week and a half. That is not what the committee had recommended.

I want to make it clear that our caucus is not holding back on a committee proposal. We are holding back on a Government proposal which is different than what the committee proposed. I do not think that has always been clear. That may be a wrinkle in the Standing Orders which was quite unintended by the Government and quite innocent. It has not been brought out into the light of day that this is the problem.

I thought I could, under the rules of relevancy, get away with using this opportunity to explain that since the Hon. Member for St. John's East referred to an article about parliamentary reform. I wanted to use this opportunity to clarify the problem. It is not an insurmountable problem. If the collective political will in this place still exists to go ahead with the exciting new kind of Parliament that many of us had in mind when they made those recommendations, we can still do that. For God's sake, let us not lose that little window of opportunity that we have by getting stuck on proposals that are already made. I say that in particular to the Government. Let us try to get in step with the proposals which the committee originally made and see what we can do. I have no intention of talking out the Hon. Member's Bill so I will sit down even though there are a few more things I could say.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think that the debate on this matter has been healthy and helpful. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, if I have the unanimous consent of the House, I will move:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "that" and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-248, an Act to register lobbyists, be not now read a second time, but that the order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn, and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization".

And, further, that in accordance with Government Motion No. 71, the document "Lobbying and the Registration of Paid Lobbyists" prepared by the Government and tabled in the House be referred to the same Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, and that the committee report its findings no later than March 30, 1986".

I think there has been an indication from my colleague in the NDP that he wishes this matter to be discussed and does not wish the Bill to be talked out. I think there is a disposition among my colleagues that the matter go to committee to be discussed fully. Therefore, I would ask that you ask for unanimous consent to put this motion to the House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent that the motion be put to the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is no unanimous consent.

Mr. McDermid: I have not heard anyone say "no". Call for the yeas and the nays.

M. Gauthier: You guys have to get your procedure together. Bring somebody in there who knows something about procedure. You can't put a motion if you haven't got unanimous consent, and you haven't got it.

An Hon. Member: Yes we have.

Mr. Gauthier: No you haven't. I am standing in my place waiting for the Speaker to recognize me.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the introduction of the motion?

Mr. Gauthier: No.

Ms. Copps: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is none.

Mr. McDermid: Now we know where the Grits stand.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like the record to show that the only nays came from Members of the Liberal Party.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am now more convinced than ever that the Government was trying to bootleg something in here by the back door by using the Parliamentary Secretary to do something which I do not think is in keeping with what we would call Private Members' Hour. Doing Government business in Government time, fine, but doing Government business in Private Members' Hour, no, Sir. That is clear? That is why, Mr. Speaker, I want to speak on this Bill because I think it is very important that we address this Bill and the subject matter at hand.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Bill provides for the registration of lobbyists, and a declaration by them stating in whose interest they are working. It imposes a fine and disqualification from lobbying for those convicted of evading these provisions.

This is in fact the purpose of Bill C-248, and . . .

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry but I have to interrupt the Hon. Member. The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS—LYELL ISLAND LOGGING—REQUEST FOR REIMPOSITION OF MORATORIUM. (B) EXISTENCE OF ABORIGINAL TITLE

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, on several occasions questions have been raised in the House of Commons concerning an Indian nation in the Province of British Columbia and a dispute it is having with respect to one part of the area claimed as hereditary lands, and economic activities taking place in that area prior to a just settlement of this outstanding claim.

I want to provide the House with a little background before I register the discontent I have with the response from the Minister. Let me begin by saying that the question of the Haida Indian people and the logging that has been going on at Lyell Island have been raised by myself and many other Hon. Members of the House, including the Leader of the Opposition, who has said that the logging on that island ought to be the subject of a continuous moratorium until there is a just settlement of this outstanding claim.

I must begin by talking about the hereditary lands of the Haida people, the Queen Charlotte Islands themselves. The Haida people call these lands "The Land of Haida" or "beautiful islands".

Part of the Queen Charlottes is known as South Moresby. What a unique and fascinating area of Canada this is. South Moresby is therefore a part of the Haida lands that they claim as having been in their possession for thousands of years. South Moresby contains the highest concentration of endemic plants, birds, mammals and insects of any area of its size in all of North America.

There are major archaeological sites located in South Moresby, as part of the Haida lands. So valuable and important are these archaeological sites that responsible citizens of Canada who have the required knowledge and expertise to make these judgments have gone to the United Nations to ask that this be declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

One will find on South Moresby primeval rain forests containing western red cedar, yellow cedar, western hemlock and sitca spruce, among the largest of their genera.

The claim of the Haida people has already been accepted by the Government of Canada. The Province of British Columbia is a signatory to the Constitution of Canada which recognizes that aboriginal rights do exist. Since we have a recognition of rights and a claim that has been accepted, it is only logical that we would want to postpone any development, whether it is cutting down trees, building roads, establishing new towns or mining, until there is a just settlement.

At one moment in time the British Columbia Government seemed to have recognized that point, because on one part of South Moresby, which is called Lyell Island, it imposed a moratorium upon a logging company which wanted to log in that area. Suddenly, without announcement and to the surprise and dismay of the Haida people, that moratorium was lifted. Naturally the Haida protested. What Member in the House would not stand, as did the Haida, to protect their own homelands? They stood against the power of the British Columbia Government and the police. Now we know why. We know that there was some conflict of interest going on among the Ministers of British Columbia and that particular logging company. That is a Canadian scandal, at least a scandal which belongs to British Columbia that we all regret.

I raise this matter at the time of adjournment and ask the Minister to use his authority and power as the trustee of the Indian people to urge the B.C. Government to reimpose that moratorium; let the logging stop, go to the bargaining table and negotiate a just, fair and equitable settlement. We know how to do that in Canada. We have done it before. We can do it for the Haida people in British Columbia. It just requires the political will.

I call upon the Minister, who has the right sentiments, emotions and approach, to provide stronger leadership in this particular case. We need not worry about the sensitivity of the British Columbia Government. It has already betrayed that sensitivity. We have to bear in mind, above all, the rights of the Haida people who have title and want to negotiate a just claim. I call upon the Government to give leadership and fill the trusteeship role. Let us begin to bargain in good faith with the Haida people over South Moresby and Lyell Island.

Adjournment Debate

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity on behalf of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) to clarify the Government's position on this important question.

Perhaps a little background would be useful to keep the matter in perspective. Lyell Island is part of the South Moresby Archipelago in the Queen Charlotte Islands in the Province of British Columbia. The whole of the Queen Charlottes and the surrounding seas are claimed by the Haida Nation, who base their claim on the concept of aboriginal title. The claim was submitted to Canada in November, 1980. It was then reviewed and accepted, pursuant to the current policy on comprehensive native claims, on Juen 30, 1983, for eventual negotiation. Negotiations with the Haida have not yet begun.

As noted previously, the area covered by the entire claim is very large, and it is left to the negotiations to set out the specific rights and benefits which the Haida should derive in a claim settlement agreement. As stated in the current federal policy, where claims fall in areas of provincial jurisdiction, or where provincial interests and responsibilities are affected, the provinces must be involved in claims negotiations. Right now, although 14 claims have been accepted in British Columbia, only the claim of the Nishga Tribal Council is under active negotiation.

In July of last year the Minister appointed a task force on comprehensive claims policy and charged the task force with making recommendations on improving the present policy and facilitating the negotiating process. The report of this task force will be formally submitted shortly, and the Minister will be reviewing these recommendations with a view to the development of a more efficient and effective policy and process.

In the specific situation of Lyell Island, the provincial Minister of the Environment announced on October 18 of last year that logging on Lyell Island could resume. Logging has been suspended since June, 1984. On October 20, 1985, a contingent of Haida physically blocked the resumption of logging. Ten of the Haida were eventually convicted of contempt of court and given suspended sentences. The Minister visited British Columbia in early December and met with both the Haida and his counterparts in the provincial Government and, as a result, the province agreed to a series of meetings with Haida leaders. Logging was temporarily suspended for the Christmas season. Logging resumed on January 20, but the Haida have suspended their blockage pending another meeting on the issue with the B.C. Attorney General which is scheduled for early in February. It would not be appropriate to speculate on what the outcome of this meeting might be. I can assure the House that the Minister stands ready to offer whatever further assistance he can to all the concerned parties in seeking a solution to this dispute.

YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT—REQUEST FOR AMENDMENTS TO DEAL WITH SENTENCING

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): As you know, Mr. Speaker, I have asked a number of questions in this House over the past year and a few months relating to the Young Offenders Act and problems with it. I asked a question relating to the Young Offenders Act on December 19 that specifically dealt with the case of a 14-year-old who was charged and later convicted of the murder of three separate individuals. The penalty meted out by the judge on that conviction was limited to a total of three years, because of the provisions that now exist in the Young Offenders Act.

After I asked that question, Mr. Speaker, as you are aware, the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) announced that he was going to be bringing forward amendments to the Young Offenders Act. That was a source of great delight to me, and I believe to most of the people in this entire country.

For many months now a great number of problems with the Young Offenders Act have been pointed out in this House. Police forces across the land, parole officers, members of the public and a great variety of people in this country have expressed concern about a number of difficulties that exist with the Young Offenders Act. Nobody has ever suggested that we should do away with the Act altogether, scrap it or go back to the Juvenile Delinquents Act or any similar legislation. What we have been suggesting is that there be amendments to the Act, amendments that would deal with the problems that have been arising, and arising quite regularly across this country since the Act came into force.

The Solicitor General has now announced that he is going to be introducing a series of amendments that will hopefully deal with most if not all of the problems that have been pointed out over the last few months. He has indicated he is first going to be dealing with the question of violation of conditions of parole, or those who fail to keep the peace while they are on parole. That is a problem that has been pointed out by police departments and law enforcement agencies; the difficulty of actually dealing quickly with young offenders who breach the terms of their probation. The Solicitor General has now, to the delight of everyone, indicated that he is going to be introducing amendments which will allow the police to deal more effectively with the detention of young offenders after arrests. There are difficulties relating to different categories of young offenders, whether at the lower or upper end or the range defined by the Young Offenders Act.

In addition he said that he wants to make some changes with respect to that part of the Act that states that a young offender's name cannot be published, even in a situation where that may present a danger to the public. The Solicitor General has indicated that he is going to propose amendments to the Act which will allow for the retention of records of young offenders acquitted of crimes, particularly in instances where they have been acquited by reason of insanity. At the moment those records are destroyed; no record at all is kept. He has indicated that he is going to make it a crime for an adult to counsel a young person to commit a crime. That will be included in the Criminal Code, of course, rather than the Young Offenders Act. He has indicated that he is going to make changes to the rules of evidence with relation to corroboration of children's evidence. Finally, he is going to make some changes with respect to the maximum sentences that can be meted out.

Now, all of those things are excellent suggestions and I applaud the Solicitor General for them, but there are still some problems. There is still that problem, as I pointed out in my question of December 19, dealing with the matter of a 14-year-old who was tried as a juvenile offender, not tried as an adult under the Criminal Code. In that case, the Solicitor General indicated that under the Young Offenders Act that sort of proceeding could be moved up to an adult court but the provincial Attorney General has indicated that the problem lies with the Young Offenders Act. I do not know who is right but I think we need to have the question clarified. We have to make sure that the public understands that if there is provision now in the Young Offenders Act to deal with that, it should be dealt with that way and that the problem does not lie with the Act.

Second, there is still the problem in relation to those who are under 12 years of age. That has not been dealt with by the Solicitor General of Canada in his suggestions for amendments to the Act. I think it is still a problem which troubles police departments and the public across the country. I hope the Solicitor General will address that problem so that we can put to rest once and for all the fears and concerns of the people of Canada with respect to the Yound Offenders Act. It would be dreadful if we introduced amendments to the Act and then found that they did not deal with all the concerns and problems.

Obviously, we will have to see the actual amendments before we can put to rest the concerns of the public. I hope that tonight the Parliamentary Secretary will tell us that all of these things including the problem relating to those under 12, will be deal with and dealt with adequately. Perhaps then we will be able to put to rest the fears of the people of Canada.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Young Offenders Act has established a comprehensive process for dealing with young people who have been accused or convicted of criminal offences. Its various procedures and programs seek to ensure that the particular needs of the adolescent offender are recognized and responded to. The Act has created a basis for a system of juvenile justice that has been broadly supported.

The limits of the Act and of juvenile justice are also recognized and the legislation, therefore, provides for young people accused of serious crimes to be tried in the ordinary courts as if they were adults. The Act provides that at any time before the courts have made adjudication, the Crown or the young person may apply for a transfer and the court must then decide whether or not to make such a decision.

In giving consideration to this matter, the court must take the following factors into account: first, the seriousness of the offence and the circumstances in which it was committed; second, the age, maturity, character, background and record of the accused; third, the adequacy of the Young Offenders Act or the Criminal Code to deal with the circumstances of the case; fourth, the availability of treatment and correctional resources; and fifth, any other factors raised in the hearing that the court considers relevant.

In making its deliberations, the court is guided by the principles of the Act which are specifically stated in Section 3 of the Act including the declaration that (a) young people are responsible for their own behaviour; (b) society must be afforded the necessary protection from illegal behaviour; and (c) the special needs of young people should be dealt with.

Clearly the Young Offenders Act has made provisions that enable courts to assess individual cases and make determinations about the most appropriate way of dealing with specific situations. This way the law and the courts are able to react to the need to protect society without abandoning the special needs of young people immediately.

The transfer provision has proven an effective means of dealing with these two issues, and transfer hearings have permitted the facts of each case to be thoroughly examined and, as necessary, appealed before the superior courts. It is obviously crucial then that the hearing itself take place. The Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) will therefore propose an amendment to the Young Offenders Act that will require a mandatory transfer hearing where there has been a death. Under the present law, a hearing is at the discretion of the Crown. This proposal would ensure that the juvenile justice system retain the flexibility it requires while guaranteeing that the question of transfer be heard by the courts in every case where the most serious crimes are involved. This and other matters will be placed before Parliament as soon as possible. I thank the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) for bringing this matter before the House of Commons at this time.

TRADE—WATER RESOURCES—POSITION OF CANADIAN NEGOTIATOR. (B) GRAND CANAL PROJECT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I rise to pursue a question I asked first of the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), and then of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), although the Prime Minister chose not to answer my question and had the Secretary of State for External Affairs answer it. It had to do with the position of the Government of Canada with respect to water exports. I am referring in particular to the concerns which many Canadians have about the opinions expressed both before and refer Mr. Reisman's appointment as Canada's free trade negotiator. He is well known as a promoter of what is known as the Grand Canal project, which is a project to dam James Bay and pipe the water back down into the Great Lakes and to the United States.

Mr. Reisman in the past has said that in his view water exports could be the cornerstone of any free trade agreement with the United States. It has been worrisome enough that someone as well known as Mr. Reisman would have this view, but more so to myself and others when people like the now Premier of Quebec, Mr. Bourassa, are promoting this game. We know that there is a powerful group of people in the country who are in favour of this proposal.

Mr. Reisman was made the chief negotiator for the Government of Canada on free trade. The Government was asked its position and the Secretary of State for External Affairs said to me on a previous occasion in the House that water was not on the negotiating table. That is why it is a mystery to me that the chief negotiator continues on occasion to talk as if it is.

I asked the Secretary of State for External Affairs to clarify the Government's position which, as far as I can make out, continues to be that water is not on the negotiating table. I asked him to tell Mr. Reisman that in his capacity as chief negotiator for Canada in the free trade negotiations with the United States he should shut up about water exports, if for no other reason than out of respect for the view of his employer, the Government of Canada, which has said that that is something that is not to be discussed. I also wanted to find out where the Prime Minister stood on this question. I asked him to tell the House whether or not he maintained his earlier enthusiasm for the Grand Canal Project. The Secretary of State for External Affairs, said I was referring to things people said before they came to this House. I am not referring to things people said before they came to this House. The Prime Minister in this House previously indicated that he regarded this project with enthusiasm. So we need the Prime Minister's clarification.

We also need clarification from the Liberal Party. It is confusing for the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) to rise and ask difficult questions of the Government about Mr. Reisman's pronouncements on water export when right behind him is sitting the Hon. Member for Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador (Mr. Rompkey) who has risen in the House to ask questions and to say things which have been positive about the Grand Canal project. The Liberal Party like to have it both ways on free trade and on a number of other issues and it is trying to have it both ways on the Grand Canal project and our water exports. I do not believe my colleagues in the New Democratic Party, or the Government, should let the Liberal Party get away with that. I believe that should be pointed out and that is precisely what I am trying to do here today. We have some very powerful Liberals in this country who are lining up behind that project. It is not just the Premier of Quebec. I know there are former Liberal Members of Parliament involved in the promotion of this scheme and who are very excited about it. So I think it is misleading, to say the least, on the basis of the questions asked by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, to assume that the Liberal Party has somehow made up its minds about water exports and about the Grand Canal projects because it certainly has not.

I know the Parliamentary Secretary will not be able to clarify the Liberal position on this, but I hope he will be able to clarify the position of the Prime Minister and his Government. I hope that what will be forthcoming will be a statement by the Government that they have made it very clear to Mr. Reisman that he is not to talk about water exports anymore, that he is not to talk about the Grand Canal project, and that he ought to show respect, if not for the views of the NDP environment critic, at least for the views of the Government whose very handsomely-paid employee he is.

Mr. Chuck Cook (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will try to clarify the issue for the befuddled Member.

In the past few months many attempts have been made to link the question of large-scale export of water by diversion with that of Canada-U.S. trade negotiations. The Hon. Member has been involved in that. The Government has made clear on more than one occasion its position on these assertions. In fact, as early as September 30, 1985, the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) stated, at the time of the release of the report of the federal inquiry on water by the Pearse Commission, that he saw no linkage between exports of water and free trade. Since then the Government has reiterated the position that Canada-U.S. trade negotiations will be just that—trade negotiations—not negotiations designed to surrender in any way Canada's control over our own natural resources. The Government of Canada has not been approached by any U.S. state or federal agency, formally or informally, on the question of exports of water.

Mr. Blaikie: What about Canadian?

Mr. Cook: Nor is it expected that this topic will be raised in the context of trade negotiations.

Much has been made of late concerning Mr. Reisman's views on water exports to the U.S. Mr. Reisman has stated clearly that he has not commented upon or issued any statement concerning water exports since his appointment as free trade negotiator. Recent comments concerning water published in the media and attributed to Mr. Reisman were in fact drawn from an unauthorized statement given by a member of Mr. Reisman's staff without his knowledge. Mr. Reisman, as trade negotiator, obviously will take his instructions from the Government, and the Government has made it perfectly clear that Canada will always retain full control over its natural resources.

Surely that answer should be sufficient, even for a Member who wants to continually confuse things.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.28 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, January 28, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PETROLEUM INCENTIVES PROGRAM ACT

The House resumed from Monday, January 27, consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-85, an Act to amend the Petroleum Incentives Program Act, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, in opening the debate for the Liberal Party I would like to comment on the address by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid). In his opening remarks he said that his Government was elected because the people wanted a change. I think they got it. A good Liberal Government has now been replaced by a Government which makes one devastatingly bad decision after another, which has a very detrimental effect on Canadians and their economic future.

Mr. Gustafson: What about the 21 per cent interest rates?

Mr. MacLellan: The Parliamentary Secretary said it was a goal of the Government to do away with the National Energy Program. I would say that it was not only a goal, it was an obsession. Having developed this mania, the first and foremost pillar of the energy policy of this Government is to do away with anything that had any relationship whatsoever with the NEP. The Government did this instead of looking at the programs to determine for itself what would be in the best interests of Canadians.

Another thing of great concern to me is the abandonment of the Foreign Investment Review Agency and the implementation of Investment Canada. I am very concerned about this, particularly now. With the reduction of oil prices we are entering a period where Canadian companies with a high debt load are very, very vulnerable. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said in his speech in New York in December of 1984 that Canada is open to investment. I am concerned that what Canada is open to is raids by foreign corporations on Canadian companies. If oil prices continue to decline and stay down, as I think they may, for even a short period of time, then Canadian companies with high debt loads and oil and gas reserves are very vulnerable to foreign multinationals who do not want to do their own exploration because they find it easier and cheaper to pick up the assets of Canadian companies at bargain-basement prices. Nothing in this Government's philosophy would prohibit that from taking place. This situation has to be watched very closely because if we do not monitor it from the very beginning we could very much regret it later on.

The Parliamentary Secretary also mentioned that the Government was interested in the deregulation of communications. This also is a subject of great concern to me particularly where it affects the CBC which has had its budget severely reduced. The CBC is very much admired throughout the world, and for the last 40 years various Governments have considered it to be part of the cement that binds this country together. I am very concerned that it may be reduced to a remnant of its former self. I am also very concerned about our book publishing industry being placed on the table in our free trade negotiations with the United States. I am concerned as well about those negotiations themselves. The way this Government is developing it, free trade seems to boil down to: What does the United States want? Let us be nice to them. Let us be perceived as being more than friends, as being agreeable. Let us be perceived as not interfering with the wishes of the United States in whatever relationship it wishes to have with Canada. I think that is a rather frightening position to take, particularly when these free trade talks will have such tremendous importance for the future of Canada. If we tie ourselves down to a continental approach to free trade leaving no room for latitude on an international basis, and do away with the trade surplus that we have just because the United States is not happy with it, I think we will be asking for economic disaster in the future.

There is a position which could be taken which is more important and serves Canada's interests much better than does the present one. I am concerned that we are giving the country the appearance of being too agreeable. We are talking free trade with the United States in the belief that that is what they want to talk with us. The indications from Americans are not that they want to talk free trade on a one-on-one, equal-partner basis. We are having difficulty convincing the United States of the importance of some of our industries. I have already mentioned the book publishing industry and other things that we want to keep off the table. We are having trouble convincing them of the importance of our fisheries in Atlantic and western Canada and of the fact that these industries should not be available for countervailing tariffs.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am most willing to listen to the Hon. Member, but I am hunting for the relevance of book publishing, fishing, and trade with the Americans to Bill C-85 which deals with PIP grants. If the Member cannot tie those together, perhaps he should conclude that he has concluded his speech and cannot think of anything else to say and is, therefore, doing what he is doing now.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that the Hon. Member is at least listening to my speech. From the non my comments would go downhill. I am replying to the comments made yesterday by the Parliamentary Secretary. If the Member will give me his continued attention, he will hear some other points which he may consider to be more relevant. I hope he will be generous in that regard.

I am also concerned about the attitude that is being taken in the United States with respect to the import of oil and gas, particularly that imported from Canada. As the Hon. Member who just intervened knows, as do all other Members in the House, the American Government wanted a more reasonable price for natural gas imported into the United States. This was granted and a very reasonable pricing mechanism was set in this regard. We are now hearing disturbing rumours of the possibility of an import tax to apply to oil and gas imported into the United States from Canada. This is all in the context of free trade and I think it is a disturbing environment in which to have these discussions on free trade.

I am also concerned about the comments of our chief negotiator who has mentioned that he favours the inclusion on the table of the sale of water from Canada to the United States. We know that eventually the thing that Americans will want most from Canada will be Canadian water. For the negotiator to say that what the Americans want most is what he wants to give them, does not appear to be good negotiating practice.

I feel that through this Bill the Government is abandoning the whole thrust of off-shore exploration. That is very damaging for frontier development. The Government has said that it is going to be doing away with the Petroleum Incentives Program, but will replace it with an exploration tax grant and that this will be the answer. However, that is certainly not the answer. We have seen that it is not the answer as exploration on all frontier areas, including the off-shore, is declining. It is maintaining a certain level that is not, in itself, alarming, mainly because the petroleum incentive grants will be continued until the end of March of this year and then will be grandfathered to December of 1987.

However, the outlook for the period after March 31 of this year, and particularly after December of 1987, is a concern to areas that have come to depend on off-shore explorations and to Canadians in general who are very concerned about the security of supply of oil and gas. That will be very, very important in the future. We cannot for a minute assume that our conventional resources will be enough to carry us through for very long. Due to the way in which we are selling them, we need to replenish our reserves in order to be able to assure Canadians that there are reserves within the Canadian boundaries that will be there when we need them.

It is shortsighted to ignore the security of supply question. I was pleased to hear the Parliamentary Secretary make mention of his Government's commitment to Canadianization. I do not, however, agree with his statistic that in the last year the Government increased Canadianization from 42 per cent to 47 per cent, more than the former Government did in the previous three years. In the previous three years the former Liberal Government increased Canadianization from 28 per cent to the 42 per cent level.

I am hoping that the Government will not rest on this statistic of 47 per cent, as the Parliamentary Secretary has assured me it will not. I hope the Government will continue to increase the Canadianization of our oil and gas industry. The increase from 42 per cent to 47 per cent is almost entirely the result of Olympia & York's purchase of Gulf Canada and the takeover of Gulf Canada's downstream assets by Petro-Canada in Ontario and western Canada. We now know, of course, that Ultramar has taken over the downstream assets of Gulf Canada in Quebec and Atlantic Canada.

It is very important that we maintain this Canadianization theme. That is not to exclude multinationals, because I feel that the exploration, refining, and marketing of oil and gas in the country owes a great deal to foreign corporations because they have shown us the way.

To a large extent, people who work for Canadian companies at present started in the oil and gas industry with multinational and foreign oil companies. However, we cannot forget about the Canadian aspect as, I think, has been done in this sale. I think we are telling Canadians that we will look at the statistics of Canadianization, but unless you are a Canadian company that can beef up the statistics and that is meaningful in the percentage of Canadianization, we really do not have time to be concerned about your problems. I am afraid that that will reflect itself if this new Bill is passed. This Bill is doing away with what was an 80 per cent grant under the Petroleum Incentives Program to Canadian companies that are not paying taxes and giving these same companies a 10 per cent grant, or 40 per cent of the exploration grants which the Government is offering under this proposed legislation.

I believe the effect of this will be to remove small Canadian companies completely from frontier exploration and place them in great difficulty. When one also considers the position in which the Government has placed Canadian companies as a result of the Western Accord, by not leaving any buffer for them in times of declining oil prices, one realizes that these Canadian companies will be hurt very badly.

It is unfortunate that the Government decided that it should remove the new oil reference price, which was of great help to Canadian companies. Now small Canadian companies that have investments and are indebted are on the same footing as the multinationals which have their resources and no debt problems. Furthermore, these multinationals have vast supplies of old oil on which they will be able to declare a windfall profit.

It is disturbing to think what this Bill will do for offshore exploration and exploration in the Beaufort. We have seen that the Petroleum Incentives Program does pay dividends. Frontier exploration was going nowhere until the former Liberal Government convinced Petro-Canada that it should be involved in this exploration. At the time Petro-Canada became involved in Hibernia and Venture, those two projects began to take hold. We have seen the reserves that have been delineated in Venture and the very positive results—

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am attempting to listen to the Hon. Member and ascertain the point he is making in his speech. He has mentioned that the exploration did not take place in any significant amount until the policy of the last Liberal Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order. Obviously that is a point of debate. I admit that it may be a point, but rather than a point of order, it is a point of debate. All Members will have a chance to participate in the debate.

Mr. MacLellan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for protecting me from that unruly group opposite. Let me return to the very pertinent point I was making concerning Petro-Canada's very important role in developing the offshore exploration and delineating the reserves with respect to Hibernia. We have been encouraged in recent months by the finds in Hibernia, such as Ben Nevis. The most recent find is the Husky Bow Valley discovery. We have also been encouraged by the announced discovery by Gulf in the Beaufort. Therefore, we are finding very significant reserves of oil and gas on the frontiers. What is the policy of the Government with respect to utilizing and developing these discoveries in the near future? I suggest that it is as a result of the Petroleum Incentives Program that we have reserves that can be developed now.

I believe that a great deal more of delineation drilling must be carried out to establish further the size and context of these reserves. This will not happen under the amendment that the Government is making in Bill C-85, and I believe that is unfortunate.

At least through the actions of the former Government with the Petroleum Incentives Program we know that some reserves exist and can be developed in the near future. It is very important that these be developed soon because we are rapidly running out of conventional supplies, particularly in oil. If we do not begin planning to bring on these new supplies we will leave ourselves in a vulnerable position.

Let me explain the serious effects these provisions will have in Nova Scotia. In September, 1984, there were nine rigs operating off the coast of Nova Scotia. After the Government's announcement of these planned amendments to the Petroleum Incentives Program and its eventual replacement with the exploration grants, there was just one rig operating off the coast of Nova Scotia one year later. In September, 1984, there were 3,000 people employed in the offshore of Nova Scotia, but there are only 500 people employed at the present time. That is a very serious reduction in activity in Nova Scotia and we hope that this can be turned around. However, in order for this to happen, it must be done by the multinationals through the format of these amendments.

The multinationals will wait until they feel the time is right to do any further work and, therefore, all of our frontier resources may be left where they are in their present undetermined and insufficient state of delineation. This is a concern to all of us who are worried about our security of supply, the Canadianization of our oil industry and the state of our energy policy in this country.

I believe it is significant to note that the Government has been saying continually that it wants the market to tell it exactly what should be done. I am afraid that the market will do just that, which means nothing will be done in the future in frontier development.

There is a severe contradiction in this case, which is typical of the Government. It relates to the specified portion which the Minister says she will invest between the end of March, 1986 and the grandfathering period for the Petroleum Incentives Program to the end of December, 1987, which allows the Minister to determine how much she will invest in the Petroleum Incentives Program. This gives her great latitude and directly contradicts her statement that she wanted to let the industry know what would be available to them so that everyone would have an equal opportunity.

There are those who say that all oil companies, regardless of their country of origin, should have an equal opportunity. I am not ashamed to say that this Party is not opposed to giving Canadian companies an advantage in this country. Canadian companies, particularly in the formative years, take very great risks because of the difficulty of establishing a foothold in the oil and gas sector. We have seen many of them suffer financial set-backs as a result of the recent recession. Some of them are still in difficulty, and I think it is unfortunate that these companies may not be allowed to regain their feet and participate in a meaningful way in this oil and gas exploration.

I ask the Government to reconsider these amendments and to consider proposals that have been made by other groups such as the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada who have set forth to the Minister their own recommendations for the replacement of or amendments to the Petroleum Incentives Program Act. Its recommendations were not adhered to. But if there should be changes to this program, then the changes presented by the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada are very reasonable and I think they should be examined and re-examined by the Government. I think it is unfortunate that that has not been done.

More consideration must be given to frontier development, to the areas affected and to our energy future. We must have assurance of supply. I am concerned that judging from the way the Government is talking, no special attention will be given to frontier oil exploration and development. I am not only concerned about the frontier but also about the fate of projects like the Husky upgrader. I feel as well that it is very important to encourage exploration in the western sedimentary basin in western Canada. I think it is a very important sector for job creation and it will be very important for the economic development of western Canada. But the Government has given billions of dollars to the oil companies through the abandonment of the petroleum revenue gas tax. This will mean billions and billions of dollars lost to the private sector by 1990. One estimate is that by 1990 the Canadian taxpayer will have lost a total revenue source of $12.2 billion and this money will go to the oil and gas industry.

The Minister has said that she is confident that this will flow through to exploration and development, which will create an engine for growth in the energy sector and will be of benefit to all Canadians. We in the Liberal Party would like to be assured that this will happen, but we do not have confidence that either the Minister or this Government really know what they are doing in relation to this ambition. We have not seen any lasting indication other than some platitudes given out by the multinationals and the large players in the oil and gas industry. We have not seen any concrete action being taken. Granted, it will take time for the intentions of the industry to manifest themselves, but we have not seen the intention clearly that the industry, on a continuous basis, will put back into exploration and development what they have been given through the abandonment of the petroleum and gas revenue tax.

One of the great tests will be what this industry is going to do with respect to frontier development, if it is going to continue to explore. Indications are that it is moving away from frontier development. Fortunately, we have these optimistic finds which will, hopefully, keep the attention of the oil and gas sector so that it will continue to explore and develop these very great potentials. The tragedy is that it is almost certain that the small Canadian companies, and perhaps companies other than Petro-Canada, will not be able to participate in exploration and development when the PIP program is finally over.

I think it is very unfortunate for the long term future of our oil and gas industry that the Canadian companies are being shut out from the role they can play and the benefits they can achieve. I ask the Government to reconsider the amendments it is putting forward in Bill C-85. I ask it to consider the need for further exploration of the frontier and the fact that these resources should develop. I ask the Government to assure us that there will be a higher percentage of Canadian participation than is becoming evident at the present time.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, our energy critic is unavoidably absent today so I have the opportunity to say a few words about the Bill to amend the Petroleum Incentives Program Act. This was a controversial program right from the beginning. I remember it well when we were debating it during the debate on the series of Bills which brought in the National Energy Program. It was something that the New Democratic Party opposed at that time on the basis that this was another form of a historical series of giveaways to the energy sector and to the oil companies in particular, and another form of the energy policy whereby Canadians should pay the shot for exploration, a policy entrenched over the years under successive Liberal Governments.

I believe at one time in the North we were paying 110 cents for every dollar that was spent on exploration. The Canadian taxpayer was taking all the risks, yet it was the companies which actually found some profit from the distribution and sale of that particular resource. So the Petroleum Incentives Program was part and parcel of that approach to energy development, and in that respect it deserved all the criticism it received at that time.

The irony is that that policy has been done away with by a Conservative Government, and one would like to think that is because there has been a change in direction. Well, there has been some change in direction in terms of the rhetoric of the Government about relying more on the market-place, but we still have an energy policy that is based on public risk and private development.

The Hon. Member who spoke before me indicated that the Government, although it is taking away the Petroleum Incentives Program from the energy companies, also gave to the oil companies in the form of the abolition of the PGRT some—to use the Hon. Member's figures—$12.2 billion. So we have not had a change in the over-all approach that the public should make the investment and take the risk, and the private sector, with the exception of Petro-Canada, should take the profit where profit is eventually made, in what I admit is sometimes a very long term process, with great lead times. Nevertheless it is a policy which we in the New Democratic Party find objectionable. We find it so because our view with respect to resource development has always been that if it is the public that has to pay for the exploration and the development and take the risk, then it is the public that should ultimately have the equity, ownership and control of those resources. This seems to me to be, in a strange way, in keeping with the free enterprise philosophy of Hon. Members opposite. Those people who take the risk ought to benefit when, having taken that risk, things turn out well. That has been the argument that has been proferred with respect to why entrepreneurs should have the full benefit of whatever profits come from their particular investment. After all, it was they who took the risk, so they should now reap the benefit, having been willing to take that risk with their money. I make the same argument on behalf of the Canadian public. If it is the money of the Canadian public which is being used to take the risk, if its money is being invested in exploration and development of energy resources, whether it is offshore, in western Canada or wherever it happens to be, it should be the public which reaps the benefit of that risk in terms of ownership, in terms of control and in terms of the ultimate profitability of the resource. For some reason or other that has always been an anathema to the Party which forms the Government now and, in many respects, it was only very partially accepted by the Liberal Party when it was in Government in the form of the National Energy Program.

Perhaps Governments have had to sink so much money in one way or another into oil and gas exploration because there is something fundamentally uneconomic about our approach to energy policy. I say "uneconomic", because if we use "economic" in the strict, capitalist sense of the word, and if exploration and development of these resources were so economic, it would not require massive public investment in the first place. This would have been something which the private sector could have done on its own in the expectation that it would have been a worth-while investment. I say that only to pose the question of whether or not we should have been on a different track altogether for some time now. Instead of our response to the fact of dwindling conventional oil reserves being that we had to search madly for every last drop of oil within our territory, regardless of the environmental and social consequences of that particular activity, we could have faced up to the fact that Joe Green was wrong in a different way. Joe Greene, the former Liberal Minister of Energy, told us at one time that we had enough conventional oil to last us for hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of years. That was just before the energy crisis.

We could have faced up to the fact that Joe Greene was wrong by taking a conservationist approach to energy policy. I realize that some things happened. There was the Canadian Home Insulation Program and the program for conversion from oil to gas. There has been a number of conservation programs undertaken by various levels of Government in Canada. However, all these things together are just a drop in the bucket compared with the money which the public has been consistently asked to spend on this other approach, that is, to spend billions and billions and billions of dollars on frontier oil and gas exploration.

I am not maintaining that these resources should never be developed, but I am maintaining that they should be developed by the public, for the public and only when it is possible to do it in a way which does not disrupt the very sensitive environment or ecosphere that we find, for instance, in Arctic Canada. The price we will pay to find that last barrel of oil, if we go about it in the way in which we are now going, will be too high in the final analysis, not just in terms of price per barrel on the market-place or what we may not get back for our investment, but too high in terms of the social and ecological consequences.

I think also of what could be the consequences of too rapid or too eager development of our offshore resources in Atlantic Canada. Perhaps people who are on site and are involved in it have less reason to worry than someone, I admit, speaking from a distance who has not been able to see exactly what is happening. However, I say this as one who worries about these things. It has been one of my nightmares that there should be a blow-out on the East Coast and that terrible damage should be done to our fishery, a renewable resource which, if cared for properly, could go on for thousands and thousands and thousands of years. Yet, we put these renewable and everlasting resources at risk when we try to do things in a hurry because we are not willing to take another and possibly even more difficult approach in terms of public opinion, that is, to ask Canadians to accept the reorganization of our energy life so that we can be more conserving of the resources that we have and do not have to be pushed to the wall in the development of as yet unavailable resources. I put before the House this choice, which I think we still have not in the expectation that the Government will suddenly change its mind, but because I think these things have to be put on the record constantly.

In this context, because I have been talking about our whole approach to energy policy and because the Bill is part and parcel of the Government's approach to energy policy, I should like to say a word about the role which I think Petro-Canada could play in our energy policy, if the money, for instance, which was being saved by the cancellation of this particular program were to be used for the appropriate expansion and development of Petro-Canada. I find it increasingly difficult these days to speak about Petro-Canada because not only the Conservative Government but the Liberal Government before it asked Petro-Canada to operate in a way quite similar to any other large corporation. For me, this violates the reason we want a Crown corporation in the first place. Crown corporations have been put in a very difficult position because they have been asked by successive Governments to operate on a commercial basis, going back to the mid-1970s when the Government of that day asked the CNR to operate strictly on a commercial basis. It has not as yet totally done that, but it has made decisions on that basis. Crown corporations by these decisions have been put in a very difficult position. They have been unable to operate in a way that would bring to them the kind of credit which could and would come to a Crown corporation if it were to do what my colleagues and I think Crown corporations should do in any event, that is, to be an actor in the market-place, which is different from the role of other actors in the market-place. Petro-Canada, unlike other Crown corporations, should be an example to others in northern development when it comes to dealing with native people and to a sensitivity to the environment. It should be an example when it comes to sensitivity to employment needs and the needs of communities, workplace safety and health, all these kinds of things. However, I have to report sadly that this is not the case. There has been the odd occasion when Petro-Canada has done something which was a cut above the rest of them, but on many other things I have been furious with Petro-Canada for acting just like every other corporation.

Petro-Canada has, like everyone else, done away with its full service stations and the jobs that are available to young people. They tore out their full service stations and put up self-serve stations. In my view we have far too many of them. I would have thought that PetroCan, of all Crown corporations, would not have done that, or that it would not have been a Crown corporation that tore up a very traditional location in Winnipeg of a restaurant and gas station and put in a self-serve station.

These actions, as well as those with regard to price, have, over the years, eroded to a certain extent the enthusiasm that people have had for PetroCan. I want to say to the House, and to Canadians through the House: Do not be discouraged about the possibilities because of what various Crown corporations have been instructed to do by their various Governments. The Crown corporations still have that potential, which was always there and stil is there, to be the kind of economic instrument that the people who originally thought of Crown corporations knew they could be, that is, acting in the public interest and able to do things that other corporations are not able to do, and do them better, in a more socially and ecologically responsible way because they are backed up by the Government and by the people of Canada through their Government. They do not have to be accountable to their short-term profit margins.They do not have to make bad decisions based on what their last quarterly profit margin was. They do not have to lay off people to get a better credit rating because, as it is now, the Government has said to them, "You have to borrow money on the open market now; you cannot come to us any more".

All these bad decisions that Crown corporations make often have their origin in the instructions that they have been given by Governments. That is why these are fundamentally political questions in the final analysis. People are angry. I have complaints about PetroCan not charging less for gas than other companies. Well, it is very difficult for a Crown corporation to operate that way if it has been told by Government that that is not the way it is supposed to operate. In some cases the people like to have it both ways. They want Crown corporations to make money, they do not want them to lose money, but at the same time they want the Crown corporations to give them a break in terms of price. There is that irony there as well.

In any event, I think the larger point is that the relationship between how we understand Crown corporations, how Governments understand them, and the instructions that are given to them. Also, how they behave in the market-place has to be better understood than it is now. Instead what we have from this Government is a mysterious policy. We are not sure whether it is asking PetroCan to behave in certain ways because it is setting it up for privatization. We are not sure exactly what the Government is doing, as is the case with so many other things that the Government does, because there are mixed messages. I suppose only time will tell just exactly what sinister plots lurk in the minds of those who will make the final decisions with respect to the future of PetroCan.

I say to the Government that if it thinks the imagination of Canadians has in any way been diminished over the last several years about what is possible in terms of public ownership in this country in those very, very important sectors of our economy like energy, then it is very sadly mistaken. That imagination may have been dulled somewhat over the years by the bad name that has been given to public ownership by successive Liberal Governments. It is still there and any Government that moves to extinguish it by making a move on PetroCan or any other major Crown corporation in this country will find, to its lamentable surprise, that the Canadian people will not put up with that kind of action.

What we have before us is a very minor amendment. It is not minor in terms of money, but it is minor in terms of changes of approach. To my mind, the Conservative and Liberal approaches to energy development, to my mind, have more similarities than they have differences. It is in the interests of both the Liberal and the Conservative Parties to make out as if they had very serious differences about how energy should be developed in this country. It serves to distract people from the fact that there are a great many more similarities than differences. The more fundamental thing to say is that the approach of both this Government and of its predecessor Government has been very, very similar. I think the extent to which it is different is the extent to which this Government at least says that it wants to rely more on the market-place. It may find that the market-place is not the happy, productive, fruitful context that it maintains it is. When it does that, maybe Canadians will then be at a point once again when they can reconsider their energy future and ask for a Government that would opt for an energy future that is based on conservation and on development of renewable resources, and that is based on a picture of the future that does not just extend into the next decade or into the decade after that, but one which tries to carry out what could be called responsible stewardship, not just for the near future but also for the future that belongs to generations to come.

Mr. Speaker: Are there questions, comments? On debate, the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby).

Mr. Crosby: Excuse me, Mr. Speaker, I have a comment. Is it in order at this point to comment on the speech of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie)? I was interested in his remarks concerning—

Mr. Speaker: Just let me make things clear. The first three speakers, according to the rules, speak for a period of 40 minutes, and now we enter into a period of debate, which I presume the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) is doing, a 20-minute speech and a 10-minute question and comment period thereafter. I am saying this because the Hon. Member for Halifax West referred to a comment. I am saying this just to make things clear. The Hon. Member for Halifax West.

Mr. Crosby: I do not want to engage in making difficulties. I did rise to make a comment not being aware of the process preceding the delivery of the speech by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill. I see no other Members rising. If that is the case perhaps I can proceed just by way of making a comment, which was simply in relation to Petro-Canada. The Member for Winnipeg Birds-Hill paid a great deal of attention to the marketing role of Petro-Canada in the Canadian oil industry. I just want to point out to him what we have been saying in the House of Commons for some time, namely that the role of Petro-Canada is an evolving one. It has not been, as far as I know, the subject of any special terms in that role, and what we look at in Canada today in relation to Petro-Canada is simply the evolution of this organization over a period of time under its statute, which was passed in 1974. The company was given certain purposes and objects, and it continues to have those purposes and objects. People should judge PetroCanada as they see it in the world today.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raised the point of the statutory nature of PetroCan. The point we have been trying to make in the last few days is the one that the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) tried to make yesterday in response to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) who was reading to the House what she called the mandate of PetroCan. It was not so much the mandate of PetroCan but what she had instructed PetroCan to do and how she had instructed it to act as of a certain date.

The fact is that the mandate for PetroCan is in the legislation. If the Government wants to change the mandate of PetroCan, it ought not to do that simply by issuing instructions from the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Government should return to the House of Commons to change the mandate of PetroCan. That is certainly in keeping with the kinds of things I know Progressive Conservative Members of Parliament have said over the years about Parliament being involved in instructions to Crown corporations so that things do not happen by ministerial decree over and above what Parliament had already decided. The point we have been trying to make these last few days is that if the mandate of PetroCan is to be changed, let it be changed here in the House of Commons and not by ministerial decree.

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to speak this morning in support of Bill C-85, an Act to amend the Petroleum Incentives Program Act. There were three demand-driven programs of the National Energy Program that created uncertainties in estimating and containing costs in the National Energy Program expenditures. They were, the Canadian Home Insulation Program, the Canadian Oil Substitution Program and the Petroleum Incentives Program grants. We have disposed of two of those, and now Bill C-85 disposes of the final one, one which an oil analyst has called a bad dream.

This nation's energy riches should no longer be a source of endless division and regional tension, the results of the National Energy Program. The NEP was not in any sense a national program and was only indirectly an energy program. Its central and urgent goal was to implement a political and regional program designed to keep the Liberal Party in power through the strengthening of that Party's appeal to the voters and/or consumers of central Canada.

During the years between 1973 and 1984, the producing provinces and companies had been required to subsidize directly the central Government and consumers through artificially low prices for crude oil and natural gas to a cumulative total of over $50 billion. The provisions of the National Energy Program, therefore, only further compounded the antagonism of the producing provinces which were suffering the consequences of this unfair treatment. The program was conceived under a veil of secrecy, designed to victimize a region and an industry without any discussion with the concerned provinces or the industry.

Three stated objectives of the NEP were, increased Canadian content in the energy industry, oil self-sufficiency by 1990, and increased fairness in revenue sharing. In reality, the publicly stated objectives, each sounding sincere and reasonable, were simply smokescreens for the true but hidden objectives of the program which were more wealth and more power for Ottawa. The Western Accord put a stop to the most vicious raid on the resources of one region to the principal benefit of another region that had occurred in the history of the country.

There can be no doubt that the two big losers as a result of this program have been the consumers and the Canadian exploration firms. Officials in Ottawa decided that they knew better than the market where exploration dollars should be directed. The infamous PIP system, biased in favour of Canadian firms, seduced many of them into unfamiliar and financially dangerous operations. Normal exploration investment criteria were discarded because 80 per cent of the funds came on request from Ottawa.

What has been achieved? No new major fields have been discovered. What has been lost? A great deal has been lost. Billions of precious exploration dollars have been misdirected and we have lost that greatest of all assets in the energy business, time. Investment decisions have been distorted and the future of a number of Canadian firms was placed at a very great risk. The authors of the National Energy Program failed to understand the basic reality of resource investment, which is the law of supply and demand. Even OPEC is now realizing that it cannot escape this discipline for very long.

A few years back, world prices would have resulted in a much larger piece of the revenue pie for Canada. Canadians working amicably together have never failed to make arrangements that serve the nation, and I am proud to say Albertans have always been major players in the attainment of these national purposes. Other countries adjusted more quickly to the real world of energy costs than Canada because of Liberal consumer-shielding policies. As a result, we lost ground in the competitive industrial markets of the world. The price freeze of 1973 was the industry's sentence, and its guillotine was the National Energy Program.

PIP grants were intended to meet not only the Canadianization and the 1990 self-sufficiency goals but also the need to know goal. Significant savings in PIP expenditures were achieved through the commitment by Alberta to the market development incentive program through which Alberta virtually took over the PIP program in the province itself. PIP was called a lot of things including a massive misdirection of taxpayers' money and a program that actually encouraged companies to drill dry holes.

When in opposition, the present Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) asked the then Minister if there were some limits to the hand-outs he was prepared to give to the oil and gas companies. The Auditor General pointed out in his 1983 Report that performance measurement systems, although more advanced in the PIP operations, were generally not well developed for evaluating efficiency and developing and making comparisons to the standards. Although an attempt to develop a framework for monitoring the program's impact and effect was undertaken at one point, it was actually never pursued and it cost the federal Treasury an average of $1.6 billion per year, money that was subsidizing activity rather than rewarding success.

This Bill eliminates PIP incentives as of March 31, 1986. From that day forward companies wishing to explore and develop Canada's oil and gas resources will have to do so on the basis of geological and economic factors, not on the basis of Government hand-outs.

We are not abandoning previous commitments. PIP commitments which were in place before the announcement of the Western Accord will be honoured until the end of 1987. This generous grandfathering provision will enable industry to adjust to the new approach. That approach puts the emphasis on opportunities created in the market-place. Politicians and bureaucrats will no longer determine where the industry should be drilling for oil and gas. Once again, those decisions will be in the hands of industry.

The Government of Canada recognizes frontier exploration as a high risk investment which requires additional incentives to help bridge the gap between the termination of PIP and the timing of expected frontier oil and gas developments. Recently, we announced that a new tax base incentive will be introduced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). This 25 per cent exploration tax credit will be applicable to exploration expenses in excess of $5 million per well for wells drilled anywhere in Canada. To ensure that the credit assists companies which are currently non-tax paying, it will be refundable at a rate of 40 per cent.

The exploration tax credit was made available beginning December 1 and will terminate December 31, 1990. It is an equitable and cost effective measure to encourage frontier exploration without discriminating against other regions. We anticipate the tax credit will cost taxpayers between $150 million and $250 million annually. PIP cost us some $1.6 billion annually.

In replacing PIP with a tax-base incentive we have fulfilled one of the specific commitments made in the Prince Albert statement of July, 1984. Hon. Members are well aware of the Prince Albert statement. It was a key element in the election platform on which the Progressive Conservative Party won the most resounding electoral victory in the country's history. As the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has said, we have achieved virtually all the goals we set for ourselves at Prince Alberta. We promised to use energy as an engine of growth, and we have done so. We promised increased Canadian participation in the energy industry, and we have achieved it. We promised fair treatment of consumers and producers; both groups are now benefiting from our policies. We promised co-operation between the federal and provincial Governments and industry, and we have delivered upon that promise as well. The Atlantic and Western Accords, the new frontier energy policy, and the natural gas markets and pricing agreement are proof that the Prince Albert statement was, in fact, a constructive reaction to the previous Government's destructive National Energy Program. In March we signed the Western Accord with the Provinces of British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan. The agreement radically restructured the operating environment for the energy industry in Canada.

The previous Government was fond of acronyms. We eliminated a long list of them in the Western Accord, ones such as COSC, Canadian ownership special charge; PCC, petroleum compensation charge; and the IORT, the incremental oil revenue tax. They were representative of the burdensome tax regime under which the petroleum industry had been labouring.

As a result of the Western Accord, oil exploration in western Canada is now higher than at any time in our history. The number of wells drilled is up 23 per cent over the the comparable pre-Accord period. Land sales are up an amazing 73 per cent, which means there will be even more exploration in the West next year. The benefits from exploration and production activity do not stop at the Manitoba border. Investment and employment spinoffs will stimulate economic activity in all regions of the country. We are replacing a rigid frontier royalty regime with one that is flexible and profit-sensitive.

The National Energy Program enabled the Government to confiscate 25 per cent of successful oil and gas development in the frontier. This Government does not confiscate property. There will be no Crown share provision in the new regime. Our commitment to 50 per cent Canadianization ownership on frontier production projects is as strong as that of our predecessors; but we will achieve this goal in a more equitable and more realistic fashion.

In summary, our frontier energy policy establishes a profit-sensitive royalty regime. It establishes non-discriminatory and regionally balanced exploration incentives and a stable management regime. Finally, it establishes fair Canadianization requirements.

Oil and gas investment intentions are up by about $2 billion—more than 25 per cent over last year. This investment is creating thousands of new jobs right across the country by stimulating the exploration activity which contributes to our energy security. Foreign investors are looking favourably on Canada once again. Salomon Brothers of New York recently published a ringing endorsement of our new energy policy and investment climate. Canada can benefit from increased foreign investment. Without it, many of our energy projects simply would not proceed. No foreign investment would mean lost opportunities, lost jobs and reduced energy security.

The overhaul of the National Energy Program was one of the five economic initiatives identified by the Progressive Conservatives when we were elected last year. The others were: reduction of the deficit, establishment of a positive investment climate, strengthening of Canada's trade relations, and removal of Government obstacles in the market-place.

Important advancements have been made in each of these areas. We reduced spending this year by $4.4 billion and we have identified cuts of some $75 billion from planned expenditures by 1990. The restrictive Foreign Investment Review Agency was replaced by Investment Canada, a body which actively solicits foreign investment. We have initiated discussions on a new trade agreement with the United States. This agreement is vital to our future economic growth. The Pacific Rim has also been identified as a priority area for trade development. We removed Government obstacles in the market-place, not only in the energy industry but in other key sectors such as transportation and communication.

In the second quarter our energy trade balance of payments rose by approximately $400 million over the same period last year. Business investment was up by an annual rate of 11 per cent in the third quarter of 1985. Residential housing investment, an excellent indicator of consumer confidence, rose 63 per cent in the third quarter, one of the largest increases in ten years.

The people of Canada elected the Progressive Conservatives on the basis of our campaign promises. What sets us apart from the previous Government is that we have delivered on those promises in the energy sector, and in other sectors. That is why this country is back on the road to economic recovery.

It has been a pleasure for me to speak in support of Bill C-85 this morning.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments?

Mr. Rompkey: Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Hon. Member on her speech and the defence she made not only of her Party's policies but of the region she comes from. She said that under the National Energy Program more wealth and power came to Ottawa. The corollary, of course, is that there was less wealth and power in the West. Would she also not agree that a case may be made that wealth and influence was distributed a little more across the country? Would she not agree that because of the NEP we had more drilling offshore? Husky, which is I think threatened under this new policy, was a major player in the Newfoundland offshore. Canadian companies benefited. Canadians got jobs in areas where unemployment is the highest in the country. This would not have happened if the NEP was not in place. She is right when she says more wealth came from the West to Ottawa, but to be fair, would she not agree that wealth was distributed to the Atlantic, jobs were distributed to the Atlantic, and Canadian companies participated in exploration in the Atlantic offshore which would not have been able to do so otherwise?

Mrs. Sparrow: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague's questions. I would like to address them first in the context of the PGRT which was implemented under the NEP in 1980-1981. The PGRT was a tax on gross revenues at the well-head and could not be deducted for purposes of corporate taxes. In effect it was double taxation. This unfair taxation forced many of our resource companies to cut back on their exploration budgets. If not half, easily 38 per cent of the drilling rigs in western Canada were forced to move out of the country or else the companies involved simply went broke. It also created extremely high unemployment in western Canada. Alberta's rate of unemployment went up from 3 per cent to 13 per cent to 13.5 per cent, and that is a huge jump. I recognize eastern Canada's problems, but you cannot compare them because we went up from 3 per cent to 13.5 per cent, and that is an increase of more than 450 per cent. All these people out of work meant increased unemployment insurance payments as well as welfare benefits. It was a tremendous burden on our social programs.

My hon. colleague knows that most of the money raised through the PGRT was used to offset the PIP grants. That was extremely costly. It was also discriminatory because the Liberal Government was saying that if you drill in a certain area we are going to supply 80 cents or 90 cents on the dollar. Without good, sound business judgment and good geological surveys, companies were forced into the frontiers and there is very strong evidence to indicate that they drilled dry holes simply for the sake of getting money.

You do not have to be a politician to know that you should spend your dollars wisely. The program we have introduced of gradually reducing the PIP grants and bringing in a 25 per cent tax credit incentive, is going to put the resource companies in a position where they base their drilling programs on good geological surveys and good seismic tapes before they start drilling exploratory wells. We are creating a climate which is far more beneficial for all firms.

I recognize that drilling activity on the East Coast was very strong over the last few years and the companies involved certainly were using the PIP grants. However, a lot of the activity was in areas where they did not have good geological information. I hope that over the next few years the proven reserves in the Venture situation will produce more proven reserves and that we can get some production, because certainly New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, that whole area, needs the jobs. I have to agree with the Hon. Member there. However, I think it was unfair for the Government to be handing out taxpayers' dollars to influence people to drill anywhere they wanted just so they could get tax dollars. The PGRT did put more money into Ottawa's hands and created a lot of animosity out West. The Government did not really consult or communicate with the provinces or the industry. It is most important and to everyone's benefit that we communicate and talk about our concerns and problems, not just the Government and the industry but consumers are winners as well.

Mr. Rompkey: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member also said that there should be fair treatment for producers and consumers. Is it fair to say, in doing away with the PGRT and the increase in federal taxes on gasoline, that perhaps the burden of taxation has been shifted from producers to consumers? Are consumers, particularly motorists, not paying now a greater share? We just learned a few days ago that the major oil companies' profits have increased greatly over the last year, yet they are paying less, as my hon. friend has just pointed out, because they are not paying the PGRT. Consumers have seen federal taxes on gasoline go up 58 per cent in one year. I agree with the Hon. Member that there must be fair treatment of producers and consumers right across the country. However, would she agree that there has been some shifting of taxation from producers to consumers?

Mrs. Sparrow: No, I cannot agree with my hon. colleague from Newfoundland. The phasing out of the PGRT is, in one respect, putting more money back into the ground to allow further exploration and development in the resource area. If we allow resource companies the flexibility to invest in Canada, and their investment is up $2 billion over the last year, they will create jobs. People will get off of unemployment insurance and welfare. These jobs are created not just in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan. A lot of people from eastern Canada live in Alberta, especially Fort McMurray.

Mr. Rompkey: Yes, eight thousand.

Mrs. Sparrow: Eight thousand. I am thrilled about that because this country has to work together. That is what the Hon. Member is driving at. We have to look at all regions and their economies. I cannot agree that it has shifted the tax burden. It does allow resource companies the flexibility to go out and invest in the country, create more activity and jobs. We will then have more housing starts and get people off social welfare programs.

The new 25 per cent tax credit will work extremely well. The Government has discussed this with the industry and its provincial counterparts. They have all agreed. So I am sorry but I cannot agree with the Hon. Member concerning the shifting of the burden.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I have just a brief comment on the exchange between the Hon. Member for Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador (Mr. Rompkey) and the Hon. Member for Calgary South (Mrs. Sparrow). They have talked about some programs and creating employment in one region or another. We should remember that we do not make good use of our resources and make our country strong by weakening one region as compared to another. There may be concern about jobs that were created in the eastern part of the country as a result of the National Energy Program remaining, but he should remember what the National Energy Program did to western Canada. I have never heard a more graphic illustration of what the National Energy Program meant to western Canada than this: I had an opportunity to talk to a young couple in northern Alberta who were in the energy business. They were digging sump pits and preparing sites for drilling rigs. They were a young couple, presumably in their mid-thirties, starting out with a stake in their country, building a home in a community, and establishing some family ties and roots. They told me that when the National Energy Program came out they went to work the next morning digging sump pits. As a result of the National Energy Program's impact on the company they were working for, they filled in those same holes that afternoon.

That is what the National Energy Program did to western Canadian drilling activity, and that affected jobs right across the country. We should bear in mind that if we have a resource, it is Canadian and should be thought about as being developed in the Canadian context for the good of all Canadians rather than for the sake of pitting one region against the other.

When one thinks in terms of what happened to the one young couple whom I had an opportunity to visit with in northern Alberta, and of how that related to the whole province and the whole western region, one has an idea of the impact on employment in that part of the country and what it subsequently did to employment in other parts of the country. We should think about this as a natural resource for the benefit of all Canadians, rather than talking about whether one region should have it or someone else should control it. We should develop it in the best interests of us all.

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, the value of this Parliament was brought home to me again today because, following my friend from Calgary South, I get the opportunity to give a view from the Atlantic region. I thought her speech was a good one and that she certainly defended her particular area, which is what she was sent here to do. She certainly defended the policies of her Party, which is also what she was sent here to do. However, it is for the people of Canada to judge. I think that in any fair debate there must be a balance in order to let them come to that judgment. I would like to try to give a view from Atlantic Canada because its view of PIP and the National Energy Program is quite different.

The Hon. Minister across the way says that it is a Canadian resource which must be treated as such and looked at fairly. It is true that it is a Canadian resource. The problem is that that Canadian resource is in various parts of the country. It is in the West, in the East, and in the Beaufort. We are not talking about weakening one area at the expense of the other, but about the regional disparity that exists in the country. All sections of the country are not equal.

There are 8,000 people from the Atlantic area in Fort MacMurray simply because there are no jobs back home for them to take. I do not think it is a bad thing for Atlantic Canadians to be working in the West. Thank God that the West was able to produce jobs when it did. However, a lot of those people would rather have stayed at home if they could have done so. The greatest export of Atlantic Canada has been some of our best young people. It is not that they do not like western Canada. They have simply had to go there because they had no alternatives. I would rather they had chosen western Canada as an alternative, given options, rather than simply have gone there because they had to. That is the problem in the Atlantic area.

I hope that sets the theme for what I want to say. I am talking about an area which, historically in the country since Confederation, has been disadvantaged. We do not like that, but it is a reality. That is the basis upon which I want to make my remarks, Mr. Speaker.

As I see it, the scrapping of PIP means a reduction of activity in the off-shore in the Atlantic. That is, indeed, borne out by statements from some people in the oil industry. The Canadian Petroleum Association says it is a step forward for the energy policy in the country. Mr. Jim Hamilton, an oil industry analyst in Calgary, says that the bottom line is that there will be greater activity in the western sedimentary basin. That is our fear. We know what the track record is. We know that under PIP there was activity off-shore. We know that under PIP there were drill rigs out there. We know that under PIP more Newfoundlanders got jobs on the off-shore than ever before. Eighty of them lost their lives on the Ocean Ranger, but more of then went back after the Ocean Ranger sank because they wanted jobs and they wanted to make their contribution in developing the off-shore of Canada.

That activity existed under PIP. We do not know whether it would have existed had PIP not been there because it was there and it did the job. Not only did it put Canadian drill rigs there, it required that every company that wanted to drill off-shore must show a percentage of Canadian materials used and a percentage of Canadians employed in order to get those grants. The grants were not simply to drill. There were strings attached which were peculiarly Canadian. That is what I am afraid will now stop.

I also think the preference for Canadian companies is a concern for oil associations in the Atlantic area. The Association of Atlantic Petroleum Producers is concerned about this very fact as well. In an area where unemployment is the highest in Canada, we see the danger of the reduction of the kind of activity that has given us jobs. The fact is that jobs are now reduced from 3,000 in the Atlantic off-shore in 1984 to about 500.

This is what the Conservative Government has been putting forward as the fundamental plank in its platform. Whenever we ask the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) a question, she says that the Government has signed the Western Accord and the Atlantic Accord and that they are the cornerstone of its economic and job-creation policy for the Atlantic region and for Newfoundland. I am concerned about that from the point of view of exploration activity and further proving of the reserves that are there.

We have complained about the cut-backs in Government programs such as RRAP, CHIP, and COSP, which my hon. friend referred to. It is true that they have cut back CHIP and COSP, which existed not only for conservation and off-oil purposes, but were also creating a lot of jobs for small businesses. The carpenters, electricians, plumbers, pipefitters, and people who install tiles and insulation, were all working with small businesses. The incentive to do that no longer exists and a lot of small businesses have dried up.

However, when we complain about the cut-backs in such programs, about lay-offs in the Ministry of Transport and the Department of Fisheries, and about the possible closing down of railways and two heavy water plants in the Atlantic area, the Minister of Energy says that oil is going to be the saviour, that the day is coming when oil will create those jobs in the Atlantic area. When we complain about reductions in social security, about changes in the Unemployment Insurance Program, and about changes in family allowances and the old age pension, they still tell us to wait, that oil is going to be the engine of the economy in Atlantic Canada. They say that oil is going to create those jobs and that people with those jobs are going to pay the taxes which will look after family allowances, old age pensions, and unemployment insurance. Well, is it, Mr. Speaker? We have seen no evidence that that is the case so far.

The fundamental assumption of the Conservative Party is that we must let the private sector do the job and leave business alone. PIP was the direct opposite. It was government intervention to encourage and coax the private sector into exploring in areas where it was not before, into using Canadian materials, and into creating jobs in an area of Canada that was desperate for employment. That was the role of the Petroleum Incentives Program. It was Government intervention in the private sector in order to skew, bias and focus that private sector on an area that needed that attention. Where is the incentive for the private sector to continue that exploration offshore now that the world oil price is dropping?

We fear, as Mr. Hamilton said, that the bottom line is that there will be greater activity in the western sedimentary basin. I am not attempting to pit one section against the other because I think it is wrong in this country, as my hon. friend has said, that one region should prosper at the expense of another. I simply want to state the case in the area from which I come.

We have been assured that Hibernia is still on target in spite of the fact that the world price is going down. We also know that the Offshore Trade Association of Nova Scotia has pleaded with the Government for special measures for the East Coast. It has said that there must be special measures for the East Coast in view of what the Tory Party has announced. The Offshore Trade Association of Nova Scotia—not the Liberal Party, the New Democratic Party or consumers—said that the new policy will kill exploration off Atlantic Canada. I am a layman and I must take the word of the private sector in Atlantic Canada. It says that this new policy will kill exploration in Atlantic Canada.

The Independent Petroleum Association also wants change. Under the new plan, non-taxable Canadian companies will recoup only 10 per cent of costs, whereas under the National Energy Program it would have been 80 per cent to 90 per cent. I must mention Husky Oil again among these many small Canadian companies because Bob Blair has been a major player in the offshore of the Atlantic. I congratulate him as a Canadian for the role he has played. I hope he continues the work he has been doing because we need people like him.

We need him in the offshore, but whereas he received 80 per cent or 90 per cent before, he will only get 10 per cent now. Perhaps his company will become non-taxable, but my fear is that those changes which will take place will not be of benefit in the Atlantic area. I fear that many small Canadian companies will not be involved in frontier exploration. Even the Canadian Petroleum Association agrees that there will be less activity in the Atlantic and more activity in the western sedimentary basin.

Many in Atlantic Canada believe that the tendency is for the Government no longer to look after our interests. What is the evidence to support that view?

First, there are the cut-backs in Government programs on which we have historically depended. The Provinces of Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island have been at a disadvantage since they joined Confederation. We lost our traditional trading markets and became a colony of central Canada. Newfoundland was a colony of Britain and we transferred our colonial status from Britain to central Canada. This was not done through any devious means by any Party, but it is simply a reality.

We must recognize that there are disadvantaged areas that need special help. However, that special help through Government support, intervention and assistance has been dropping. The Atlantic area has historically depended on Government programs, but those government programs have been slashed. Naturally, we are hardest hit because when central Canada catches a cold we get pneumonia. That is the reality in this country.

We have been thrown to the private sector, but the private sector in Atlantic Canada is historically weak. We do not have manufacturing. We are a natural resource based economy which exports fish, lumber, pulp and paper, minerals and young people. We do not produce automobiles or manufactured goods. We do not produce value-added foodstuffs. The private sector in the Atlantic provinces has been historically weak, and we are told that companies outside the Atlantic provinces which have been in their present locations for a number of years are heading to the West.

We have seen world prices plummet under the present Government, yet there is no Government policy to protect Canadian consumers. However, there was a made-in-Canada price under the National Energy Program. Now we are at the mercy of the war between OPEC and the North Sea. When the Minister is asked why the multinationals are still making huge profits in light of falling prices, she states that it is necessary to do so in order to carry out exploration and drilling. Yet we are told by the Canadian Petroleum Association and the offshore industry in Atlantic Canada that these activities are moving to the West and there must be special arrangements made for the Atlantic area. How will the Minister focus that exploration and drilling on the offshore?

The Minister says that the high federal taxes on gas are necessary in order to pay for social programs. If that is true, why is the Government cutting unemployment insurance and family allowance? Why is it cutting out programs such as COSP, CHIP and RRAP? Why is the Government laying off civil servants in Fisheries and Transport? The Government is fundamentally affecting the economy of the Atlantic area as a result of such action.

I suggest that PIP is a graphic illustration that we are the victims of a double-whammy in the Atlantic region. Government services, including social security, are being cut back, yet incentives to the private sector are being taken away. There is no focusing of the private sector in that area and, whether or not the Government realizes it, it has cut the Atlantic adrift by its non-interventionist attitude toward the private sector. I submit that that is the issue as we debate the Petroleum Incentives Program.

That program graphically illustrates the difference between the policies of the previous Government and the present Government. We knew that we had to give special help to the Atlantic area because of its unique situation. We also knew that that area would be lost without the help of the federal Government. However, the Tories have said that they are withdrawing in order to make room for the private sector which will benefit that area. Where is the evidence of that? The same article from which the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) quoted that 400,000 new jobs have been created indicated that 8 per cent of those new jobs are in the Atlantic area. While I welcome the fact that there are more jobs in Quebec and Ontario, which is good for Canada, my point is that every federal Government in this country must have a regional development policy. All areas of this country are not equal. While I do not want to set one area against another or see division in this country, I do want fairness and equity. I do not see any evidence of that in this new program. I believe that cut-backs in the Petroleum Incentives Program and the PGRT are symptomatic of the Government's new approach.

We saw the same thing in the late 1950s and early 1960s when Mr. Diefenbaker was Prime Minister. He attempted to do away with a section of the Terms of Union called Term 29 which allowed us equalization payments over a period of time in view of the disadvantage we suffered. People wore black arm bands in Newfoundland as a result of that, and it is pretty close to the time when we have to trot them out again. Quite seriously, if there is not a change or a recognition that there are stronger and weaker sections of the country, particularly within the private sector, if there is no recognition of regional disparity and some attempt to come to grips with it and to devise policy to overcome the problem, then we are not going to have a strong country.

We do not want to be a have-not area. We want to make our contribution. I referred earlier to the 80 people who lost their lives on the Ocean Ranger. Even after that rig sank, young Newfoundlanders went back to the rigs on the offshore with all the dangers attached to them because they wanted to make a contribution not just to themselves, their families and their province, but to this country. What they are asking for is an opportunity to do that.

I say to the Government that it is not going to make that happen by doing away with Government intervention in the economy. This Government, like previous Governments, has to support and protect the livelihood of the people who work and live in the Atlantic area.

Mrs. Sparrow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate my colleague, the Hon. Member for Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador (Mr. Rompkey). I certainly agree that eastern Canada does have some problems. I agree with him that we should not pit one region against the other. However, on September 4, 1984, the Conservative Government came into power and faced a massive national debt of some $200 billion. It costs us and the people of Canada $26 billion per year just to service the debt which was left to us by the previous Government. If we do not address this situation—and I want to add that the Government is addressing the situation—we will end up in a disastrous state. For every $3 we raise in revenue, $1 goes to service the debt. If we do not attack this national debt today, in five years it will take $2 out of $3, and we will have to cut down on at least a third, if not 50 per cent, of all of our social programs. So we are taking a look at absolutely every area, every portfolio, and we are simply looking at it from the perspective of the national debt.

The Hon. Member said something about closing the heavy water plants in the East. Was it New Brunswick?

Mr. Rompkey: Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Sparrow: Nova Scotia. I am the Chairman of the National Resource Committee. We have had the AECL appear before us and, if I understand my facts, those two heavy water plants had a 12-year supply but there was no market for their commodity. This does not make economic sense. Actually, in all reality, these plants should have been cut back and terminated many, many years ago.

I also wanted to ask my colleague about Canadian exploration and development expense. The Government has in place two expenses. The Canadian exploration expenses are deductible at a rate of 100 per cent. The Canadian development expenses are deductible at a rate of 30 per cent on a declining balance. Of course, this will depend upon the taxable position of each and every company. So there is an opportunity for exploration expenses to be deducted. Development, of course, is when we drill a delineation well into a proven area, and that comes under development expense. However, we have to realize that there are more ways for deductions to take place.

My colleague also made the comment about Canadianization. He was quite right that PIP grants were based on COR content, or the Canadian ownership rate. But we in the Conservative Party have maintained the 50 per cent Canadianization on a production licence. We agree with the Hon. Member that Canadianization within the resource industry is most important. I think that doing it on the production licence is perhaps the best way.

I wonder if the Hon. Member would give me his thoughts with regard to the write-off of exploration and development expenses?

Mr. Rompkey: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the Hon. Member's first point, which was on the deficit, I agree that it is a problem. I also agree that the Government and Parliament have to address what is becoming a serious problem. However, I do not think it should become a problem that is out of all proportion to everything else. I do think that we have to attack the reduction of the deficit with fairness and equity. I make the point again that not all areas of this country are equal. When we start cutting Government programs willy-nilly off the top, indiscriminately, it has a more serious effect on areas which have historically depended on those Government programs. That to me makes eminent sense. It certainly is a reality where I come from. If we start to cut all of those programs and if we increase taxes indiscriminately without at the same time having a regional development policy—and that is what I see as fundamentally lacking—we can attack the deficit all we like but we are going to create a great deal of hardship for those people who historically have found it very hard to bear that particular burden.

With respect to the tax breaks which are being given, possibly the Hon. Member is closer to that than I am, but I understand that small Canadian companies which before could take advantage of the PIP program may not be able to take advantage of it now. One of the things the Government did was to allow small companies to go to investors and say: "You can get a tax break if you invest in our company". We allowed taxes to flow through to smaller investors to capture that particular pool of investment capital. That is the kind of thing I fear will not happen now. I think the play will be biased more towards the large multinationals and I am not sure that I want to put myself in the hands of those large multinationals, because I feel I would be more vulnerable. I would rather be dependent on a smaller Canadian company which takes its fate in its hands and its Canadian dollars and tries to do the job.

The difficulty I see in the change of policy is that it will skew and bias exploration and development away from small Canadian companies towards large multinationals.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): There being no other questions and comments, we will resume debate. Question? Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) on debate.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to join in this debate. I notice I only have three minutes to add my comments to the Bill which is before the House—

Mr. Towers: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Once you have started to put the question, is debate not completed?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I had not yet put the question to the House. I did see the Hon. Member for Sudbury rise before the question had even been put. There seemed to be some hesitancy about whether or not he was going to rise.

Mr. Frith: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker, the reason you saw some hesitancy was that I thought when you said "question" and Hon. Members opposite were saying "question", there was a question to be put to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador (Mr. Rompkey), so I was not clear as to whether or not the question to be put was a question to my colleague or the question on the motion. I am glad that I am able to clarify that for your help and judgment.

I want to indicate that—

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like a little clarification. It is my understanding that once the Chair rises and begins to put the question, in fact that is the termination of the period allocated for debate. I think if the Chair would like to check the "blues", it will see that the Chair had began to put the question. So regardless of any misunderstanding of Hon. Members across the floor, it would seem to me that once the Speaker rises to put the question, that signals termination of debate.

Mr. Rompkey: May I make a contribution to that same point of order, Mr. Speaker? It was my understanding that the Hon. Member opposite was rising to ask a question because I did not think the 10 minutes had expired. Questions had been asked and I had been answering. I was waiting for a question to come from across the way. The clear understanding on this side was that there were further questions to be raised in the question period.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Chair having determined that the question had not been put to the House and having recognized the Hon. Member for Sudbury for the purpose of resuming debate, things will stand there.

It now being one o'clock I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock p.m.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

DISASTERS

EXPLOSION OF SPACE SHUTTLE CHALLENGER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, no one who watched the television reports of the explosion of the NASA space shuttle earlier today can remain unmoved by this tragic and horrible event.

I and the members of my Party join with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), as I am sure do all Members of the House and every Canadian, in expressing our shock and dismay to the President of the United States on this terrible accident, and in offering our deepest sympathies to the families and friends of the brave and courageous astronauts. Our hearts go out to them all. Canadians have closely followed the progress of the space shuttle program and have participated with the production of the Canadarm, and even with our own astronaut, Marc Garneau.

With the enormous advances we have made in the area of high technology, it is sometimes easy as human beings to forget the great risks involved and the great personal bravery of those courageous men and women who are exploring the frontiers of space. As we have shared from time to time in the joy of the adventure, so we share in the sorrow of this tragic event.

[Translation]

To the families of the astronauts we offer our sincere condolences at this time of suffering.

[English]

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I join with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), who spoke earlier to the country outside the Chamber on this important matter, and with the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) in extending our profoundest sympathies to the Government of the United States and, most directly, to the families of the men and women who were killed today in this unfortunate tragedy.

Indeed it is the case that men and women who are on the frontier of knowledge in this important domain experience extraordinary risks. It is extremely sad that we have encountered the results of those risks today in the loss of such good and decent people whose work will one day benefit us all.

AGRICULTURE

SITUATION OF SUGAR-BEET INDUSTRY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, sugar-beet producers in Canada are in a situation of crisis and need immediate help. If the Government does not take the necessary steps immediately, 3,000 jobs will be lost. Those steps are as follows: a stabilization payment for the years 1983 and 1984 which has not taken place yet, and a long-term sugar policy for the country.

The industry is 90 years old in the Province of Quebec and 60 years old in the Province of Alberta. The industry was quite viable until 1982 and satisfied some 10 per cent of the Canadian sugar requirement. It falls under the Agricultural Stabilization Act and therefore there is no logical reason for the Government dragging its feet as it is today in refusing to give the farmers of Alberta, Quebec, and Manitoba what is rightfully theirs in terms of stabilization.

There is a further threat now. The Government of Quebec owns the factory in that province and, unless a long-term sugar policy and payments can be established by the Government, the factory will be sold. In that province some 1,300 people will be out of work immediately unless the Government acts. We see again and again that the Government is prepared to rescue various groups and industries, but it never seems—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): Mr. Speaker, as a Quebecer concerned about the interests of Quebec, I would like to quote in the House from what Jean-Louis Roy had to say in today's Le Devoir, following an interview with the Prime Minister, and I quote:

Mr. Mulroney gave an impressive inventory of the complexities of the Canadian system. He appeared to be firmly resolved, however, to pursue the same goals he set out during the 1984 election campaign; . . . He appeared to be anxious to maintain his objectives, especially with respect to intergovernmental relations, . . . and to settle the matter of the Constitution Act, 1982, and to do so with regard for Quebec's interests.

Mr. Mulroney justifiably emphasized the changes that had taken place in this area since he formed the Government, as well as his firm determination to find new formulas that would make the traditional, endless bickering a thing of the past.

It is still too early to judge the long-term effects of the reconciliation policy initiated by Mr. Mulroney. In the present circumstances, however, it is clear that it is in the best interests of all concerned. It is fortunate that the Prime Minister of Canada is keeping this policy high on his list of priorities.

And Mr. Roy goes on to say:

The man we met . . . can make partisan judgments and earthy comments on his opponents. But he is also capable of dignity, frankness and courage.

"Living together" is a major operation.

And as the Member—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time is expired.

VISIBLE MINORITIES

REDRESS FOR JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERNED DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the Government is fumbling the ball in its attempt to redress the great injustices done the Japanese Canadians in the 1940s.

The Government began well. The then Minister of State for Multiculturalism issued a press release on December 15, 1984, which reflected the promises the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) had made as Leader of the Opposition.

Early in 1985, however, the Minister refused to continue the negotiations he had both promised and begun. He also declined to consider the matter of compensation for property losses. His successor now appears to be threatening unilateral action on redress all too reminiscent of the arbitrary action the Government considered a year ago.

We in the New Democratic caucus are convinced that the process of arriving at a substantial redress package is as important as the content of the package. The Government has to begin negotiating with the National Association of Japanese Canadians. The Government has to negotiate compensation for property and other losses being evaluated by Price Waterhouse. The Government has to be sure that its plans to deal with non-monetary aspects of redress are also acceptable to the National Association of Japanese Canadians. It has to deal seriously with the legitimate representatives of the Japanese Canadian community. It cannot hope to arrive at a proper redress for injustices in the past if it refuses serious discussions today with the National Association of Japanese Canadians.

NATIVE PEOPLES

FORTHCOMING NATIVE BUSINESS SUMMIT

Mr. Jack Scowen (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, on June 23 to June 26 the Native Business Summit will take place in Toronto. For most native people, business means small business and all of the problems that attend it. Conference sessions will address financial planning, technological developments in business services, and opportunities for expansion and the development of new markets. Opportunities abound in serving the local communities and the surrounding regional economy.

Special sessions will be held on light manufacturing, retail and wholesale businesses, service industries, tourism, media and entertainment and new technology. Native small business will be reviewed in relation to the need to create linkages within the regional context and to expand on those activities which have a traditional orientation.

Residential and commercial development is a multibillion dollar business in Canada. Native business leaders believe that native people are ideally positioned to play a major role in it. Indian reserve lands in Canada, at 10,000 square miles, represent one of the largest land holdings in the free world. For example, many reserves have prime lands close to major urban centres with potential for both residential and commercial development.

It is estimated that some 50 large-scale resource development projects will impact directly on native communities in the 1980s and 1990s. Many are in the petroleum industry but several others involve the hydroelectric, mining, water control—

Mr. Speaker: I want to remind the Member his time has expired.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

CANCELLATION OF COAL MINING PROJECTS

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, it is all too common for the management of the Cape Breton Development Corporation to blame the work force for problems it has created itself.

In the past few weeks there has been a steady stream of broken promises from the Government and the breaking of faith on the part of management. The Government of Canada has decided that the Donkin Mine will not be developed. The coal preparation plant at Prince Mine has been axed and, worst of all, the Government has turned a blind eye to the plight of the Town of Glace Bay, a community built on coal mines that now finds itself without its economic heart. The Government refuses to consider a coal mine for this community which has an unemployment rate more than five times the national average.

● (1410)

Industrial relations are falling to an all-time low. The present management has taken a giant step backward by instituting a system of having front line supervisors start counselling UMWA coal-miners. These men do not need a paternalistic management; they need one that recognizes the contributions and sacrifices of men who risk their lives every day to extract a resource. If management wants respect, it should start respecting the men who have made the real contribution to the Cape Breton coal industry.

DISARMAMENT

U.S.S.R. PROPOSAL TO REDUCE NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, all Canadians, including those in a grade nine class in Virden, Manitoba, with whom I recently met, fervently desire the preservation of world peace. As a result, we applaud any serious proposal, irrespective of its origin, which might lead to fully verifiable nuclear disarmament.

While many Canadians, myself included, believe that the credibility of General Secretary Gorbachev's recent proposal for a nuclear-free world by the year 2000 would be substantially enhanced by an immediate decision to withdraw Soviet invasion forces from Afghanistan, the Gorbachev initiative still deserves serious consideration. Consequently, I and other Canadians welcomed the positive and thoughtful statement which the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) made in response to the Gorbachev proposal last Thursday. Now, however, I urge both the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Secretary of State for External Affairs to capitalize upon Canada's significantly improved relationship with the United States to ensure that American officials explore thoroughly this and any other proposal which may lead to fully verifiable nuclear disarmament.

Soviet officials must also be reminded of the need to address the substantial imbalance in conventional arms which is in the Soviet's favour, as that imbalance has led to the establishment of the western European-based nuclear forces as a deterrent. The fear and distrust which have prevailed since the cold war have let to a rapidly escalating arms race. If, as we hope, there is now a mutual will on the part of all world powers to de-escalate that arms race, much of the fear and distrust will disappear.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

NEW GOVERNMENT POLICY CONCERNING BENEFITS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government's new policy on unemployment insurance for early retirees is unfair and unjustified.

Formerly, an early retiree who met all the criteria was entitled to unemployment insurance, even if he was getting a pension. Now this pension is considered as income, and early retirees are no longer eligible for the full amount of unemployment insurance benefits.

Even worse, these people have not been informed of the new policy. It was adopted by Order in Council, and the Government gave this new measure very little publicity. There was no debate in the House on the subject.

Furthermore, Armed Forces pensioners are also being denied unemployment insurance benefits, despite the fact they contributed to the Unemployment Insurance fund throughout the period they were in the Armed Forces.

Mr. Speaker, I think this new Conservative measure is very unfair to our pensioners, and in my opinion, the Government ought to get rid of this policy.

DISASTERS

EXPLOSION OF SPACE SHUTTLE CHALLENGER—CONDOLENCES TO UNITED STATES AND BEREAVED FAMILIES

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, along with the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and the Leader of the New Democratic Party, I earlier had the sad obligation on behalf of the Government and the people of Canada to convey our deep and genuine condolences to the people of the United States and the families of the bereaved as a result of today's tragedy. ## THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR—STATEMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER OF JUSTICE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Yesterday the comments about the deficit of the Minister of Justice, who is a former Minister of Finance, contributed to the continuing fall of the Canadian dollar, which now stands at 70.39 cents as of 1.35 p.m. today, the lowest point in Canadian history. Was the Minister of Justice speaking for the Government and was he expressing the view of the Government that the re-election of the Conservative Party is more important than good government?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, obviously that is not what the Minister of Justice said. As a former Minister of Finance he has been totally supportive of the present Minister of Finance in his determination to deal with the deficit whose dimensions have staggered the country, given the heritage which was left with us. The position of the Government is that set out by the Minister of Finance and is that which I enunciated to the editorial Board of Le Devoir on Friday, which was printed on Saturday and Monday, and on which we are absolutely unbending and inflexible, that is to say, that we will deal in an ongoing, vigorous, productive and successful way in getting rid of the deficit which is paralysing growth in Canada.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, this is not the first time that the Minister of Justice has caused the Prime Minister embarrassment in this fashion. Indeed, before the election he told the country: "If we told you everything we were going to do, you wouldn't elect us". It is that attitude which is causing confusion in the markets today. Since the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Justice are sending out conflicting signals to the world markets, will the Prime Minister ensure that his Government finally speaks with one voice and request of his Ministers that they think before they speak?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in regard to the deficit, and the comments before the election, it seems to me that before the election the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition said that he was going to cut the deficit by 50 per cent in less than seven years. All he has done since he took his seat opposite is try to add to the deficit and to the problem. He was the father of the deficit. He brought it about.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: I can say that there is no contradiction between the views held by the Minister of Finance and the views held by the Minister of Justice. They are entirely consistent with the views which I set out. I know that the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition will appreciate the seriousness of this since he is not unaware of the implications of deficits, which is what I set out to the editorial board of Le Devoir, and which says that this Government is consistently and unswervingly committed to reducing that deficit in the interests of national economic growth.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR POLICY STATEMENT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, that is a recent conversion of the Prime Minister, who stated on CTV just before Christmas that the deficit was not going to be dealt with brusquely and was not necessarily a priority of his Government. Because of the confusion which his Ministers have aroused, would he request the Minister of Finance to make a statement in this House to set forth clearly and unequivocally what the position of the Government is on the Canadian dollar as it relates to the interest rate structure?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, with respect, may I tell my right hon. friend, because I know he will want it corrected, that the statement he attributed to me in regard to CTV is absolutely false. I said no such thing at any time. I know he will want to read the transcript and reflect upon it.

Mr. Frith: Another retraction.

Mr. Mulroney: There will be a retraction, and it will come from the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. We never said that, and we have said the opposite.

Mr. Rossi: Why don't you blame the press again?

Mr. Mulroney: The transcript is there. We have been consistent. I know my right hon. friend believes in fairness. I either said it or I did not. I am telling him I did not say it. He will want to read that transcript and apologize for misleading the House on a very important matter.

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance is quoted by the wire service as saying that the Government is doing what it can domestically to bolster our currency. This suggests that the Government is going to increase interest rates, which is one thing it can do, or intervene and purchase Canadian dollars. Would the Minister indicate whether he is undertaking to do both those things in order to prevent the dollar from breaking through the 70-cent barrier because of the statements of the Minister of Justice?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, that is a very broad question. Let me focus on a couple of points. I have made it very clear during the past year, and any time this question has been raised, that the policy of the Government and the Bank of Canada is to try to moderate changes in interest rates and exchange rates. We can only moderate because of the substantial financial requirements of the Government of Canada caused by the huge deficit which we have to deal.

What I was focusing on in that response to the media this morning was that we are going to do what we can here in Canada to stabilize the level of the dollar by following fundamentally sound economic policies. At the heart of that is the following of a much tighter fiscal policy than was the case with the previous Government, to get the deficit down, not as an end in itself, but as a means to an end, because by getting the deficit down we can afford our social and economic programs, our defence commitments, as well as the other things.

INCREASE IN INTEREST RATES—CONSEQUENCES FOR TAXPAYERS

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. I think my question was quite clear. Will there be an increase in interest rates this week? Is he going to buy Canadian dollars? And if he has to keep the dollar from falling below 70 cents, how much is it going to cost the Canadian taxpayer in terms of interest rates, buying dollars, and so forth? Can he give us an estimate?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the response to that question is essentially the same as the response to the first question. The Hon. Member knows it is not possible for the Government of Canada or the Bank of Canada to say precisely what interest rates will be or what the level of the Canadian dollar will be. That will be decided in the market-place. We do moderate, as I said in my previous response, movements in interest and exchange rates, both up and down. That has been the policy and it is designed to reintroduce stability in the market-place. That is the continuing policy of this Government.

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Today, the Canadian dollar fell to record levels. And today the Minister of Justice indicated there is no consensus in Cabinet on economic policy. That is the exact opposite of what the Minister of Finance said. This confusion is dangerous for the dollar. Where is this Government's sense of direction?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member claims that the Minister of Justice said there was no consensus on a major issue. That is false! The Minister of Justice never said such a thing. There is a very clear consensus in this Government on all major current issues.

[English]

LA PRESSE ARTICLE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister in question is quoted at length in the La Presse article. Has the Prime Minister asked the Minister of Justice if what has been attributed to him about the confusion in the Government is incorrect? Has he got that explanation? If not, on what basis does he make the statement that he just did, that there is coherence in the Government, when the whole country sees nothing but confusion?

● (1425)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my answer is exactly the same. As far as I know, there is no reference to anything the Minister might have said to that effect. On the contrary, the Minister of Justice never made such a statement. So I do not think you should build your argument on this because it is construed out of something that does not exist, which means that the premise of your question is false.

[English]

REQUEST FOR PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I hope that the Minister of Justice will get up at the end of Question Period and correct what the Prime Minister says is an error. It was he who had the interview. It was he who was quoted. It is the Government of Canada that is confused.

Would the Prime Minister himself, or the Minister of Finance, undertake to have a debate in this House within the next two days on the over-all economic direction of this confused Government?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I may be wrong, and I will take another look at it, but with regard to the statement just attributed by the Leader of the New Democratic Party to the Minister of Finance—

Some Hon. Members: The Minister of Justice.

Mr. Mulroney: I find no such statement.

Mr. Fulton: Confused again.

Mr. Mulroney: The allegation is absolutely false.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister has said many times that Governments do not set the price of gasoline, that markets do. Perhaps the Minister can explain why the markets are not working and why Petro-Canada's wholesale price for gasoline is 7 cents a litre higher than the New York Harbour wholesale price.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, in view of the Hon. Member's gloom and doom in the past about drilling activity, I thought he was rising to ask me about the new well that Shell is spudding off Sable Island and the other one that will follow later.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: He is also, Mr. Speaker, a member of a Party that had a rigid, regulated energy policy which increased the price of gasoline by 80 per cent, from 32 to 50 cents a litre. I attempted to explain to him that our energy policy will ensure that consumers do get the benefits of decreases in gasoline prices. I can assure him that I have communicated with industry executives to ensure that consumers get the full and fair benefit of the price declines which are in the system now.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, it is just the opposite. The policy of the former Liberal Government kept the prices of gasoline down.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Copps: Right on!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Axworthy: That shows how smart you guys are.

Ms. Copps: That's what he gets for telling the truth. The truth hurts.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Read the McMillan Binch newsletter.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member for Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton come to order please? Question, please.

Mr. MacLellan: Why does the Minister not just admit that Petro-Canada is keeping the price high so it can increase its profits to get the best return possible on its share issue? Why does the Minister not just admit that?

Ms. Copps: Tell the truth.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am so bedazzled by the Member's statement that an increase of $1.20 a gallon on gasoline under the Liberal administration is a decrease in price.

Mr. Axworthy: It was below world price.

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR—REQUEST FOR ECONOMIC STATEMENT

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister. I am sure he will agree that part of the reason our dollar is suffering so in international money markets is because there is confusion about what exactly the Government's economic policy is, and the statement attributed to the Minister of Justice adds to that confusion.

Would the Prime Minister not agree that we cannot afford to wait five more weeks for the Budget of the Minister of Finance in order to clear that up? Will he ask the Minister of Finance, or direct him if need be, to make an economic statement now about where the Government is going with regard to the deficit and the dollar?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Where is Bob White?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think the falsity of the affirmation of my hon. friend is clearly established by the OECD report. I know it was inadvertent, because my hon. friend clearly forgot the OECD report which categorized the action of the Government of Canada as being clear, consistent, logical, and destined to bring about great economic progress. I think he would be happy with the fact that the OECD gave Canada what I think can be described as very high reviews as a result of the policy instituted by the Hon. Minister of Finance. They substantially refer to coherence as opposed to any degree of confusion.

● (1430)

Where there is truth by implication in my hon. friend's statement is that the dollar is indeed affected by one substantial thing, the deficit. From the year of Confederation it took us 100 years to accumulate a net debt of $18 billion, and in 15 years the Liberals took that debt from $18 billion to $190 billion and built a further $120 billion into the system. That is the degree of profligacy and waste that has hurt Canada, and we are now working to rebuild.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deans: It could be falsitude. I am not sure what that means.

NEWSPAPER REPORTS OF COMMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER OF JUSTICE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, does the Prime Minister agree with the Minister of Justice, as quoted in an important journal in Quebec today, that it would be politically suicidal for the Government to pursue the cuts necessary to meet the deficit reductions that the Minister of Finance has spoken about and, therefore, that plan of the Minister of Finance should be abandoned?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, he never said any such thing and that is a typical socialist trick of distortion and fabrication. People have had it up to their ears with you.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deans: You look at it.

Mr. Mulroney: It is not there.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

INQUIRY WHEN O'FARRELL REPORT WILL BE GIVEN TO RESTRICTIVE TRADE PRACTICES COMMISSION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

Yesterday, his Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs was still refusing to send the O'Farrell Report to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission which is completing its investigation and, as I heard this morning, intends to report and publish its findings in April.

Could the Prime Minister give the House the assurance that the O'Farrell Report will be sent to the Commission in due time, in other words, now, so that it can consider the report's findings before publishing its own report in April?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the documentation will be submitted in due time, as appropriate.

REASONS FOR DELAY

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, what we must realize is that the investigation is drawing to a close, and that the appropriate time is now.

I would therefore ask the Prime Minister whether he could inform the House why his Government is dragging its feet on sending the O'Farrell Report to the Canadian Restrictive Trade Practices Commission. Why are we seeing this attitude which consists in obstructing the activities of a Commission that is conducting an investigation in the interests of Canadian consumers?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I assume the Minister will follow the usual procedure and process, and at the appropriate time, to borrow your expression, the report will be submitted to the parties concerned.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE—REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT INTERVENTION

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

The National Committee for the Reduction of the Price of Gas which was set up recently in Montreal, has sent a telex to the Prime Minister, asking for an immediate reduction of six cents per litre in the price of gas at the pump. The price of gas in Montreal is at least 15 cents more per litre than in neighbouring American states.

When is the Minister going to listen to consumers and order Petro-Canada to take the lead in reducing the price of gas?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I really fail to understand how the Hon. Member who represents the New Democratic Party could want me to inflict a policy on Petro-Canada that would damage it. It is owned by Canadian taxpayers. Why would we impose self-inflicted wounds on the corporate body of Petro-Canada?

Petro-Canada is not a price leader, it is a price follower. I have assured the Hon. Member that Petro-Canada will pass on the savings on gasoline prices when Petro-Canada receives them.

MINISTER'S APPROACH

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, from Newfoundland to northern Ontario to Vancouver Island, consumers across the country are asking the Government for relief. If the Minister is not prepared to direct Petro-Canada, will she tell the House what she will do for Canadian consumers?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have already put in place a system on behalf of the Government which will ensure that savings will be passed on to consumers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: I have told the House that I am communicating with industry executives to ensure that all of that price decrease is passed on to consumers.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ELECTIONS IN THE PHILIPPINES—INQUIRY IF GOVERNMENT INTENDS TO SEND OBSERVERS

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Does the Government intend to send observers to the upcoming elections in the Philippines, to give the Western world the assurance that these elections will be held in accordance with standards normal in a democracy?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that is not our intention.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT AID

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Can the Minister give the House the assurance . . . Could he offer private groups—and I am thinking of certain Canadian and other groups that are going to send observers, ordinary citizens, to observe the election—the assurance that they will be able to count on the Government's support, so that as private groups, they can at least exercise some pressure on the Government of the Phillippines so that these elections will be held under the best possible conditions?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member has a specific group in mind, I may take the option of the Canadian Government taking such action into consideration.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE—ROLE OF OIL COMPANIES

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister said yesterday that prices "reflect competition in the market-place" and that the market-place will ensure that Canadian consumers benefit from falling world oil prices.

Is she aware that the Director of Investigation and Research under the Combines Investigation Act reported in July, 1984, that: "The Canadian consumer has been forced to bear the increased prices that result from anti-competitive arrangements in the marketing and refining sectors—" of the oil industry and, if so, will she now instruct Petro-Canada to break the price-fixing monopoly of the big oil companies in this country?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, with respect, I suggest that the Hon. Member has just supported my point because the date he mentioned, July, 1984, is when the Liberal Government was in power. I agree that their energy policy was against competition and against the interest of the consumers. That is why I am telling the House that our energy policy is in the interest of consumers.

ROLE OF PETRO-CANADA

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister agrees with the Director of Investigation, does she not agree further with the Director of Investigation that: "Petro-Canada has a role to play in fostering more competition at the pump"? Will she ensure that such a role is now played by our national oil company so that the consumers can get the benefit of lower oil prices?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, since I have directed Petro-Canada to act as if it were a privately-owned commercial operation that does respond to market pressures, I can assure the Hon. Member that that is in fact what is happening.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

COMPENSATION FOR VICTIMS OF CRIME

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. Canadians are becoming increasingly concerned about the apparent lack of compensation that victims of crime receive. Will the Minister tell the House what measures the Government is proposing to assist those who are tragically affected by crime?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the compensation schemes for the victims of crime are primarily matters for provincial Governments. The Government of Canada has a policy under which the costs of compensation for the victims of crime are shared.

We will be bringing in new initiatives in the victims' field in the next several months. We also hope to increase the proportion of the burden of the cost of compensation that the provinces share.

As of now, only one province does not have such a scheme. We will do what we can with the resources left to us by our predecessors to see that the percentage contributed by the federal Government is improved.

VISIBLE MINORITIES

REDRESS FOR JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERNED DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Multiculturalism). It concerns the Japanese Canadian redress. Earlier today my Leader and I met with the National Association of Japanese Canadians and it is not impressed with the Minister's recent pressure and intimidating tactics. Given that it was Canadian citizens whose rights were trampled on, and given that the process needs to include those who were wronged, is the Minister prepared to await the Price Waterhouse report commissioned by the community and then negotiate a package with the National Association as his Government said it would only last year? What is so wrong with this process?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, here is a Hon. Member who is representing the Liberal Party which in the last 43 years—

Mr. Caccia: Answer the question.

Mr. Jelinek: —has had ample opportunity to deal with this situation and did nothing whatsoever.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jelinek: The Hon. Member is not only hypocritical in asking such a question, but inconsistent, because two weeks ago—

Ms. Copps: Order.

Mr. Jelinek: —he asked: "Why aren't you moving right away?" Now he is saying: "Wait". Can he not make up his mind and stop playing political football with the Japanese Canadians?

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, Diefenbaker and Clark tried their best to ruin this country but—

Mr. Mazankowski: Shame!

Mr. Marchi: —we are looking to this present Government.

REQUEST THAT ACTION BE POSTPONED PENDING RECEIPT OF REPORT

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask this Minister, who knows about skating better than anybody else—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is difficult for me to know whether the Hon. Member has asked a question if I cannot hear him over the noise from this side. Would the Hon. Member come to a question, please.

Mr. Marchi: Will the Minister stop with the threats, await the report, and negotiate in partnership with the national association so that the two parties and, indeed, all of Canada, can have an agreement of which we can be proud for once and for all? What is he afraid of?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): I can tell the Hon. Member that I am not afraid of him, that's for sure.

Mr. Gauthier: Skate around the edge.

Mr. Broadbent: What is this, a shoot out at the O.K. Corral?

Mr. Jelinek: The Hon. Member knows very well—he is grandstanding again—that I have been discussing this matter with all Japanese Canadian associations, including the National Association of Japanese Canadians. I met with them yesterday, and with Mr. Miki. I think we had a very fruitful discussion.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): So you say.

Mr. Jelinek: We are looking forward very soon to a solution or resolution which will bring honour and dignity to the survivors of the wrongs which were attributed to a Canadian Government 43 years ago.

PORNOGRAPHY

REQUEST FOR TIGHTER CUSTOMS AND EXCISE LAWS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. A dreadful type of cancer is eroding the morals and dignity of this country. I am referring to the insidious proliferation of hard-core violent pornography. Over 200 magazines depicting hard-core violent pornography involving women and young children now enter this country.

Ms. Copps: And he cut back on customs.

Some Hon. Members: Shush.

Mr. Attewell: When are the customs and excise laws going to be tightened to prevent this garbage from coming into the country?

Mr. Keeper: What about the inspectors?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, my colleague realizes that our Department administers the customs tariff which prohibits the importation into this country of obscene material.

Mr. Keeper: Without staff.

Mr. MacKay: I can assure my colleague that my officials will be working closely with the officials of the Department of Justice in terms of a legislative response to the Fraser and Badgely Commissions. In the meantime I can assure all Hon. Members that this Government will be vigilant in attempting to keep this sort of material from being imported into the country.

Mr. Broadbent: There are only two inspectors in the whole country.

IMMIGRATION

POSSIBILITY OF HIRING FOREIGN WORKERS IN ORDER TO CUT WAGES OF CANADIANS—GOVERNMENT'S POLICY

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Immigration). As the Minister is aware, his colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, has discussed and rejected a proposal by the multinational corporation Daewoo to import hundreds of Korean workers to work in a textile plant in Quebec or elsewhere in Canada at lower wages than those paid—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The question, please.

Mr. Heap: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Has the Minister previously considered bringing in foreign workers to cut Canadian wages?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member for Spadina, who has obviously been misled by a story which appeared in Maclean's magazine, the truth is that I have spoken once to an official of Daewoo. They put a proposal into our Department which we, out of hand, told them is unacceptable.

REASONS FOR REJECTING PROPOSAL

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister who answered for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Was the reason for rejection the proposed cut in salaries, or will the Minister in future be willing to consider a deal that includes bringing in foreign workers to cut Canadian wages?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the main thrust of the question is, of course, hypothetical, but let me assure the Hon. Member that there were at least five reasons why we thought the proposal from Daewoo was unacceptable as presented.

Mr. Broadbent: Give us a few.

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

GRANT FOR CAPE BRETON LOBSTER PROCESSING FACILITY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. In his absence the Government of Canada has given financial assistance to Clearwater President John Risley to open a two million pound lobster holding and processing facility in Arichat, Cape Breton. Lobster fishermen in that area fear that the proposed lobster pound will destroy many more jobs if in fact the farming operation takes place. Will the Minister undertake to give to those fishermen a written undertaking, and a directive to that particular company, to not carry out a lobster farming operation in that particular facility?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, once again the Hon. Member is playing catch up. The information he has conveyed to the House is something which has come to our attention and is now under review.

Oral Questions

LOBSTER FARMING—REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL UNDERTAKING

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister would be in a position today to give a commitment since I have with me petitions from 11 communities in Cape Breton which are all opposed to this farming operation. Would the Minister not do the honourable thing, stand in his place today and give a written undertaking to those fishermen in those communities that there will be no farming operation?

Mr. Blaikie: Get your pen out.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I may feel I can do many things, but I do not know how to stand and give a written undertaking.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NICARAGUA—UNITED STATES' SUPPORT FOR CONTRAS

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister who will know that President Reagan has recently initiated plans to provide an additional $100 million in largely military support to the Contras who are fighting to overthrow the legitimately elected Government of Nicaragua. I wonder if the Prime Minister has yet expressed to the President Canada's opposition to this military support for the Contras? If not, will he express our concern about this militarization and outside intervention by the United States when he meets with the President in March?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the position of the Government of Canada, as is well known by the United States administration and by others, is that the basic cause of the situation in Nicaragua and throughout Central America is an economic problem. We think it is unfortunate that that problem has been aggravated by the intrusion of a superpower conflict. That is well known.

In addition to expressing our views, the Government of Canada has, in various countries in that region, tried to contribute by economic development assistance to improve the lot of the people who live there. We intend to continue to do that.

CANADIAN POSITION

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, the question is really whether or not the Government approves the giving of military aid to the Contras and I would like a direct reply to that question.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the question is really whether it is the purpose of the foreign policy of a sovereign country to give lectures to others, or to act within our own capacity to achieve the results we can achieve. We believe it is our business to do our business, and we are doing it.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

LOCATION OF UNITED STATES NUCLEAR WASTE DUMPS

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. The United States is investigating the possibilities of storing nuclear wastes in underground storage dumps, most of which are along the Canada-U.S. border. Will the Minister assure the House that he will insist upon full Canadian consultation and agreement before such dumps are constructed?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, yes, I think the position of the Government of Canada is clear. Certainly it has been made clear to American officials. When I met with my counterpart, Lee Thomas, the head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, on October 17, I put Canada's position to him, as did the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and the Secretary of State for External Affairs to their respective counterparts. We oppose the location of such plants close to the Canadian border, especially if preparatory field work would be required in this country. That position is clear, and it will remain so.

Mr. Blaikie: They are doing it in Epp's riding.

RAILWAYS

FUTURE OF NEWFOUNDLAND RAILWAY—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. In today's The Globe and Mail, and indeed in Newfoundland's press yesterday, the most senior ranking Conservative of the House of Commons from Newfoundland, the Hon. Member for St. John's East, is quoted as saying that the Government of Newfoundland ought to stop pretending that the railway in Newfoundland has a future and should make a deal with the federal Government to close it down in exchange for highways moneys. Does the view expressed by the Hon. Member for St. John's East indeed reflect the attitude of the Government of the day in respect of the Newfoundland Railway?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think it reflects the attitude and the position of the Hon. Member who just posed the question. The Government is discussing the broader issues of transportation in Newfoundland, and certainly the future of the railway is one of the items under consideration.

TIMING OF GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I was quoting the Hon. Member for St. John's East. Does the Minister agree with the comment attributed to the Hon. Member for St. John's West last week who told the Mayor of Bishop's Falls that a definitive decision within two weeks would be announced on the future of the Newfoundland Railway? Could the Minister tell us whether or not in the next 14 days the people of my province can expect an answer in respect of the Government's intentions regarding the Newfoundland Railway and its thousands of employees?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, my understanding is that my colleague indicated that a decision may be coming down within a matter of weeks, not within a matter of two weeks. That is what the Hon. Member informs me. I can assure the House, and indeed the Hon. Member, that if a decision is made he will certainly be notified amply, and I will expect him to respond in kind.

FISHERIES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns the Nova Scotia clam scam. Is the Prime Minister aware that the Minister of National Revenue lobbied the Minister of Fisheries on behalf of Mother Snow's Fine Foods and Dennis Snow to obtain fishing licences, and that Dennis Snow owes thousands of dollars in outstanding judgments to the Ministry of National Revenue? Does the Prime Minister condone this activity on the part of the Minister of National Revenue, or would he ask the Minister to resign for such a blatant conflict of interest?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the implications contained in the allegations in the preamble to that question are not only wrong but are right next door to being scurrillous. The fact of the matter is that the regional director in Halifax invited applications for an experimental clam fishery to last for four months. Four such applications were received for six licences, two of which were granted by the regional director in a perfectly proper fashion.

APPLICATION FOR DREE GRANT—REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, would the Prime Minister undertake to investigate an application by Mother Snow's Fine Foods for a $900,000-odd DREE grant to fund an interim processing operation in relation to these ill-gotten clam licences? Would he undertake to investigate the grant and cancel it on the basis that the principals are not entitled to that particular licence?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, as the Acting Minister of Fisheries I will take into consideration the almost contemptuous remarks of the hon. gentleman. I know nothing of his allegations, but if they should in any way be even close to the truth, then they will be acted upon. I would not, if I were the Hon. Member and having regard to all of the other allegations which he has made in the past, hold my breath on this one.

PUBLIC SERVICE

SALARY INCREASES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. It is a fact that collective bargaining in the Public Service has been dragging on for months. Last week we heard that a number of senior executives of Crown corporations and other senior public officials have obtained from the Government salary increases of 3, 5 and 8 per cent and, in some cases, even as much as 40 per cent.

How can the Prime Minister find $475,000 to pay the president of a Crown corporation, when during the last sixteen months the Government has laid off 3,000 public servants, when the Government has a privatization policy that takes jobs from low-income Canadians, and when its human resources management system is a disaster, how can he justify spending this kind of money on the top brass and giving so little to those earning an average wage?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I would like to react to some of the premises of my hon. friend's question. Recently, it was announced that senior executives in the Public Service would receive a 2.3 per cent raise, compared with the average 3.5 per cent negotiated through collective bargaining with our employees. I think that on this level, the principle of equity is being observed, and that the premises of the question are absolutely false.

[English]

REQUEST THAT PRIVATIZATION COST BENEFIT STUDIES BE TABLED

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, given that there is very little information forthcoming from the Government on questions concerning the negotiations on the salaries of public servants, and given that I take it the Government has made cost studies on the benefits of privatization, for example, will the Minister table in the House those studies on cost benefits which he has? Does he have studies on the social costs to public servants who lose their jobs because of the policies of the Government?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I think we have been most forthcoming in all the information for which the Hon. Member has asked. I will be more than happy to make available to him any studies which we have bearing on the rate of remuneration and bearing on the cost benefits type of information for which he is asking that we have at our disposal.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

HAIDA CLAIM TO SOUTH MORESBY, B.C.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Could he report to the House today on whether or not he has had any further response from the Premier of British Columbia in relation to the negotiations with the Haida people regarding South Moresby?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I inform the Hon. Member that the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, as he knows, has been dealing very directly with this issue. I will convey the question which the Hon. Member asked to the Minister when he has returned.

AGRICULTURE

SUGAR-BEET INDUSTRY—STABILIZATION PAYMENTS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister because we cannot obtain answers from the Minister of Agriculture concerning the sugar-beet industry in Canada. This industry is 90 years old. When specifically—on what date—will the agricultural sector involved in the sugar-beet industry be receiving the 1983 and 1984 stabilization cheques? When can farmers expect a long-term sugar policy from the Government?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I do not know why the Hon. Member is confused. I do not know whether he was in the House yesterday. I think it was yesterday that a question was posed to me in respect of the future of the sugar-beet industry in Canada. Of course the Government took action earlier to provide stabilization payments to ensure that the 1985 sugar-beet crop was planted.

Mr. Boudria: I asked about 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Wise: It was to ensure that last year's crop was planted. Of course growers in the Province of Manitoba and in the Province of Quebec took advantage of the program. However, it was not possible to reach an agreement in the Province of Alberta.

Also, in response to a question which I received yesterday from one of the Hon. Member's colleagues, I indicated that to this point in time the Government has not made a decision in respect of the sugar policy.

SITUATION IN QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to know specifically with respect to Quebec farmers whether the Minister is aware that Quebec's refinery will shut down if it does not receive assurances from the Federal Government that there will be a long-term sugar policy.

Does this Government want to wipe out 1,000 jobs in Quebec in this sector?

[English]

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should realize that beets are not just grown in the Province of Quebec, but are also grown in the Province of Alberta and in the Province of Manitoba. We are concerned about this issue and we have spent a great deal of time and effort on it. I want to compliment, indeed everyone in the industry should compliment my colleague, the Minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board, who has provided some real leadership.

An Hon. Member: Where are the cheques?

Mr. Wise: We have not yet reached a decision.

POINT OF ORDER

TIME LIMITED ON SPEECHES AT THIRD READING—RULING OF MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker: I should like now to give a ruling with regard to a matter raised by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) on Friday, January 24, 1986. The Member for Ottawa-Vanier asked for clarification on the interpretation of Standing Order 36(1) in relation to the length of speeches at third reading. Having considered the matter and verifying precedents I am now prepared to rule. Standing Order 36(1) reads as follows:

Unless otherwise provided in these Standing Orders, when the Speaker is in the Chair, no Member, except the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition, or a Minister moving a government order and the Member speaking in reply immediately after such Minister, shall speak for more than twenty minutes at a time in any debate.

In situations where a Minister moves the motion for third reading and speaks first it is quite clear that the Opposition Member replying immediately after the Minister would be entitled to unlimited time. It would appear logical to me to carry this practice further and say that in those instances where the Minister's Parliamentary Secretary makes the first speech on behalf of the Government, he or she should have unlimited time and the Opposition Member replying immediately thereafter should also be entitled to unlimited time. This is the interpretation of the rule that the Chair intends to follow henceforth.

PETITIONS

FUTURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour today to present a number of petitions from the southeastern part of the Province of New Brunswick in which the signatories are expressing their concern with regard to the future of the CN shops in Moncton. They are concerned that the current assessment being conducted by CN with regard to their maintenance capacity may have negative implications for the thousand or so workers working at the CN shops in Moncton. They call this matter to the attention of Parliament and ask us to stop in any way any effort to downgrade the shop in Moncton.

EFFECT OF FREE TRADE NEGOTIATIONS ON AGRICULTURAL PROGRAMS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have 138 petitions signed by 1944 electors of the riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell asking the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) to give his immediate personal assurance that no agricultural programs will be sacrificed in the free trade negotiations between Canada and the United States of America.

INQUIRY INTO USE OF NANOOSE BAY TEST RANGE

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of copies of two petitions relating to the Canadian Forces Maritime Experimental and Test Range at Nanoose Bay, British Columbia, pointing out that the use of this range causes environmental damage, contributes to the nuclear arms race and is of doubtful economic value. One petition calls for all weapons testing at the said test range to be brought to an end, and the second calls for a full public inquiry before the present agreement is renegotiated.

FULL INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCE AND REPEAL OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have petitions from the residents of Spadina who are still protesting and objecting to the deindexation of family allowances and they ask the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of universal family allowances and to rescind the unfair tax increases.

LOBSTER FARMING OPERATION AT ARICHAT, NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions from the residents in Cape Breton who are opposed to a farming operation of lobsters, which was started with money given to Mr. John Risley of Clearwater. These petitions are from residents in Main-A-Dieu, residents of Isle Madame and Gabarus, and Fourchu, residents of Glace Bay, Cape Breton, residents of Bras d'Or Lakes, residents of Buysborough, residents of Auld's Cove, residents of L'ardoise and Richmond County, residents of Port Morien in Cape Breton. All these residents are opposed to a lobster farming operation in Cape Breton, but I want to underline, Mr. Speaker, that they are not opposed to economic development taking place in these areas.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, today it is again my duty to table a petition from people in the Moncton area, expressing their concern about the CN shops in Moncton. There are persistant rumours that the guarantees given by the Minister last summer no longer are guarantees as such.

Mr. Speaker, people are concerned more than ever before.

PETROLEUM INCENTIVES PROGRAM ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-85, an Act to amend the Petroleum Incentives Program Act, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Frith: I would just like to indicate that there is a disposition on our side of the House, if the Government so wishes, to vote on this Bill at the present time.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is as follows: Miss Carney, seconded by Mr. LaSalle, moved that Bill C-85 be now read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: On division.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

PENSION BENEFITS STANDARDS ACT, 1985

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Finance) moved that Bill C-90, an Act respecting pension plans organized and administered for the benefit of persons employed in connection with certain federal works, undertakings and businesses, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): I am very pleased indeed and very proud to be moving second reading of Bill C-90, a measure which will bring, I think, long awaited reform to the federal Pension Benefits Standards Act. This legislation, we are very pleased to report, is a landmark in the evolution of Canada's pension system. It and other measures the Government is taking to improve pensions in Canada mark the culmination of a decade of intensive study, debate and deliberation. Over this long period progress towards a consensus on pension reform has been painstaking and it has been frequently contentious. I am very proud to be able to say that the legislation before us today is based on consensus. It is a consensus involving compromise to be sure, but a very genuine consensus. This Government, I believe, has again demonstrated its ability to work together with Canadians to achieve concrete results on a very important matter.

The Bill before us now represents major changes to the minimum standards affecting federally regulated pension plans. This Government has acted decisively to improve pension benefits, a key component of the quality of life of Canadians in their retirement years. Bill C-90 will ensure greater fairness, greater flexibility and greater security for Canadians participating in these plans. More than that, it will provide Canadian workers with opportunities to exercise individual initiative and responsibility in saving for their retirement years.

The Pension Benefits Standards Act sets the basic standards which pension plans provided by Canadian companies operating in Canada, subject to federal jurisdiction, must meet. We are proposing to improve those standards in so many fundamental ways that the existing legislation must be completely and fundamentally rewritten. Since the Act was passed 20 years ago, social standards have changed, the economy has changed and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms has established a new legal touchstone. Bill C-90 reflects those changes.

Before describing the main features of the Bill, I would like to say something about the place of employer-sponsored pension plans in Canada's pension system and the principles that underlie that system. First, we share a collective obligation to ensure that Canada's elderly do not live out their lives in poverty. This is our fundamental and most general social responsibility, a responsibility which the Government accepts as fundamental to human rights and to our social programs in Canada.

Old age security benefits combined with a guaranteed income supplement provide basic security for those over 65. Spouses' allowances help others in need who have not yet reached 65. The Government has recently extended such help to all widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 64. On this base is built the Canada Pension Plan and its parallel in Quebec, the Quebec Pension Plan. These are compulsory plans to which all Canadians in the paid labour force must belong and they ensure that workers and their spouses can maintain a reasonable standard of living in retirement.

As I am sure you are aware, Mr. Speaker, in December the Government concluded a historic agreement with the provinces which share responsibility for the Canada Pension Plan to put its financing on a firm footing for the future and to adapt the benefits it provides to changing needs and expectations. Legislation to give effect to this agreement will be introduced in the spring.

[Translation]

Furthermore, in addition to the basic mechanisms of the Canada Pension Plan, Canadians must be able to determine, on an individual or collective basis, the additional amount in pension benefits that would meet their needs upon retirement, which means that they must accept responsibility for saving enough money to maintain the standard of living they want for their retirement. Canadians want to be self-reliant and they want to have a choice.

What the Government can do is encourage supplemental retirement savings. As you know, tax provisions to assist retirement savings have been expanded considerably, and according to the new Pension Benefits Standards Act I am discussing today, pension plans offered by employers will have to meet basic standards that set higher and fairer levels than was the case in the past. Consequently, many more Canadians will be eligible for such plans and will want to participate, and more Canadians and their spouses will receive better pensions from the plans to which they contribute at the present time.

[English]

I want to emphasize that this legislation sets basic standards in what is essentially a voluntary system, not a compulsory one. Employers are not compelled by this legislation to offer pension plans and employees are not compelled to join them. However, if plans do exist and they exist widely, they must meet certain standards of fairness and adequacy that are the best we can provide. Employers are free to exceed these standards and indeed many do. Unions are free negotiates benefits and indeed many have. The system is a flexible one in which employers, employees and unions can work out specific arrangements which best suit their circumstances and their expectations.

The Government recognizes, of course, that what Canadians deem adequate today will change as society itself changes. For this reason, there may be a need in the years to come to again review this legislation. The changes being proposed now, however, reflect today's realities. They will put an end to the uncertainty of the past several years that has caused many employers to delay reforming their plans and others to delay introducing them. Employers and employees will know where they stand.

The changes being proposed to the Pension Benefits Standards Act reflect extensive consultation with the general public, with employers and labour, with women's groups and pensioners and with the pension industry. Their insights have been most valuable. The changes also reflect lengthy and close consultation with provincial Governments. In Canada this is essential because the pension system is a shared federal and provincial responsibility.

The federal pensions standards legislation applies directly to some 650 employer-sponsored plans covering 500,000 people. Indirectly, the terms of the legislation will apply to a further 500,000 federal public servants because the Government has undertaken to see, in consultation with the Public Service unions, that the Public Service pensions will generally meet these standards. Provincial legislation applies to more than 14,000 employer-sponsored plans covering some 3.5 million people.

It is important to know that for pension reform, to which we are very committed, to serve the needs of Canadians, both employers and workers, we and the provinces must enact similar pension standards. Fundamental to our efforts has been our view that Canadians, no matter where they live, should have the same opportunities to build pensions for their old age. They must not be deterred from moving freely between provinces because of concerns about their pensions, and companies operating in more than one jurisdiction should not face needless and costly administrative burdens in having to conform to different pension standards.

In view of the importance of having a high degree of uniformity across the country, I am particularly gratified that the Ontario, Quebec and Alberta Governments are planning to implement parallel legislation concurrently with our legislation. Other provinces have indicated that they will consider similar legislation at a later date, hopefully in the very near future. This Government which has taken the lead on this matter will continue to work closely with the provinces as pension reform is translated into reality.

The changes introduced in the legislation before us are timely. Canadian society has altered dramatically in the last 20 years. Women have entered the paid labour force in unprecedented numbers. Traditional family structures and marriage patterns have changed. Career patterns are different and new working arrangements are evolving. At the same time, the Government, employers and employees alike must be concerned about the cost burden imposed by pension plans.

Both employers and employees must judge pension plans to be worth while and cost effective. They must be willing to pay for them. The cause of pension reform will be set back rather than advanced if the cost or administrative burden of plans became such that employers were discouraged from sponsoring plans and workers were discouraged from joining them. A balance is required. We believe and are proud to report that a balance has been achieved. For instance, it is estimated that for employers, the proposals in this legislation will increase the costs of average pension plans by about 8 per cent to 10 per cent. This in turn will increase payroll costs by about half of 1 per cent. We have taken very great care to avoid imposing retroactive costs.

I submit that the proposed changes are fundamental and are far reaching. They will serve Canadians well and they will be affordable.

I would now like to outline to the House what some of these changes are. Current pension standards on vesting, for example, specify that persons do not acquire rights to the part of their pensions contributed by their employers until they reach 45 years of age and have 10 years' service or membership in their pension plan. This is clearly a Draconian standard in today's times. Although many employer-sponsored plans have not been that rigid, the standard nonetheless has deprived many young people, and people who have left the labour force or changed jobs even after considerable time with employers, of a good part of their pension benefits. Employees now will be entitled to vested benefits two years after joining a pension plan. That is an improvement of eight years. They will then be able to leave their jobs if they wish and not jeopardize their pensions.

As a result, the amount of pension which today's mobile Canadians can accumulate over their working lives will be significantly increased. Because women tend to move in and out of the paid labour force more often than men, the proportion of women benefiting from this change will be particularly high. That is something that I am very pleased to report to the House. Vested benefits will also be locked in. This means that the funds will remain in a pension plan or be transferred to a locked-in RRSP to provide for retirement income as they are intended. This early vesting and locking in will therefore result in more persons having private pension coverage at retirement and many persons having increased pension coverage at retirement.

Portability is another important matter. Pensions will be portable, allowing Canadians who change jobs the option of leaving their pension entitlements with their former employer, transferring them to their new employer, or locking them into an RRSP. This long awaited pension reform will remove an obstacle which has stood in the way of many Canadians wanting to make significant career changes. Also, by encouraging a more mobile labour force, portability will enhance the competitiveness of our economy and of the country's prosperity. People will be more willing to move where there are job opportunities as these open up.

I would now like to turn to minimum employer contributions. For the first time, the new legislation will require that in all circumstances employers pay for at least 50 per cent of the value of pensions earned by their employees. This usually happens now with long-service employees, but not with those who spend shorter periods with an employer. So this change will particularly benefit young workers and mobile workers, many of whom are women. In the case of pension entitlements which employees have earned when they change jobs, the same objective can be met by indexing these deferred entitlements. These amendments also improve access to pension plans since they ensure that more workers will have the opportunity to join plans.

Of major importance are the provisions which will require employers to allow part-time workers to join pension plans currently available only to full-time workers, provided they have earned at least 35 per cent of average wages, or met an equivalent hours-related criterion for two consecutive years. As Hon. Members know, increasing numbers of people, especially women, are taking part-time jobs. For the first time many of them will be able to build up pension plans. Also important is the provision that all full-time workers in any group for which a pension plan exists will now be eligible to join the plan at any time, provided they have at least two years of service. At present, some plans have more restrictive eligibility requirements.

I would now like to deal with another important social issue, that is, flexible retirement. The new standards being proposed in the legislation before us will permit employees more choice in deciding when to retire. Canadians will be able to elect early retirement anytime within a ten-year period before the normal retirement age specified in their pension plan. Should they do so their pension will be appropriately adjusted to reflect the longer period over which the benefits will be paid. This change is in keeping with evolving patterns of retirement and may be particularly attractive to many working women who are younger than their retired husbands and wish to join them in retirement.

Another area of concern has been information and pension committees. A major thrust of the PBSA amendments is to encourage pension plan members to be more knowledgeable about their plans and to participate in decision making about them if they wish. The amendments will require pension plan sponsors to provide members and their spouses with regular information about the amount of benefits earned, their accumulated contribution and the plan's financial situation. This will help them to plan responsibly and knowledgeably for retirement. As well, representation of plan members will be required on pension committees, if the plan has 50 or more members and if a majority of the members request representation.

I have emphasized two or three times the implications for women because that is what I am most proud of in this legislation. In Canada today pension policy must recognize that working patterns for many women have changed dramatically and will continue to change. At the same time, pension policy must recognize that many women will continue to choose more traditional family roles. It is our responsibility to ensure that the pension needs of both are met.

In describing the changes I have outlined thus far I have mentioned that while they are designed to deal with fundamental shortcomings affecting everyone, several of them will be of particular significance to women because women, on average, change jobs more often and hold more part-time employment than men. There are a number of other changes, however, which are explicitly intended to remedy the failures of present standards to meet women's pension needs.

I would now like to turn to the subject of equal pension benefits. One such change will ensure that women and men who retire under similar circumstances will receive the same monthly pensions. Many plans meet the standard now, but others may have lower periodic benefits paid to women than to men because a woman's life expectancy is longer than a man's. This change is fair because it costs women just as much to live month-by-month as it does men.

I would now like to speak about survivor benefits. The new provisions concerning survivor benefits are of major significance to women. Many women now find themselves totally unprovided for, or inadequately provided for, by their husband's pension plan if he dies. The new standards will require pension plans to offer survivor benefits which will provide surviving spouses with at least 60 per cent of the pension which would have been paid had the retired plan member lived. These benefits will not be ended if the survivor remarries, as has been the case in the past. If the plan member dies before becoming eligible to retire, the full value of the pension that has been earned will be transferred to a locked-in RRSP for the spouse.

With regard to credit splitting, the new standards will also ensure that women do not lose their share of pensions or pension savings if their marriage breaks down. Pensions already being paid, or the value of pensions earned during marriage, will become part of the family assets to be divided on breakdown of the marriage, according to the provisions of provincial family law legislation.

I now wish to deal with the controversial area of inflation protection. As Hon. Members well know, this is a question which, over the years, has been of persistent concern to the architects of pension reform. Indeed, no other issue has been such a source of disagreement and such an obstacle to reform. The Government recognizes the need to maintain the purchasing power of pensions provided by employer-sponsored pension plans. However, many business groups continue to be opposed to mandatory inflation protection because they do not believe that it is affordable or predictable. There is no provincial consensus on this matter either. Therefore, we must acknowledge that to mandate inflation protection at this time could have serious negative repercussions on the willingness of businesses to establish or to continue pension plans for their employees.

This outcome would not be in the interests of employees and of course we will have to continue to work at it. As well, it has proved impossible to achieve any agreement on what method or formula might be appropriate for providing inflation protection, and we will continue to work at that. However, we cannot delay pension reform solely for want of agreement on mandatory inflation protection when there is agreement in so many areas, and when the need for reform is so great. We have therefore adopted a voluntary approach to inflation protection. I want to stress that the majority of large pension plans already provide inflation adjustments which amount to about 40 per cent of the increase in the Consumer Price Index. We will build on this by encouraging all firms under the jurisdiction of the federal Government, especially Crown corporations, to provide such inflation adjustments both to pensioners and to the pension savings of persons still working. These firms will be required to report regularly on the adjustments they make and the source of funds they use for these purposes. Information on both the inflation adjustments and the sources of funds will be submitted to the Superintendent of Insurance and the resulting statistical information will be made public.

The Government will be closely monitoring the response of pension plans to the voluntary approach. As we gain a clear picture of how well it is working, we will once again be consulting with the provinces, with business, and with other groups which have an interest in effective pension arrangements to determine what further action is necessary and nudge ourselves toward further action if we come to that conclusion. Clearly, there will be a need to review the question of inflation protection on an ongoing basis. That is just what we will be doing.

Canadians have been awaiting reform of the pension system for a long time. Much work has been done on this over the years and I know that the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) has done a lot of work in this area. He is to be congratulated for the work that was done while his Government was in office. However, we on this side of the House are very proud today that a consensus has been reached which reflects the realities and values of the Canada of today. I believe all Canadians will welcome the significant achievement which this Bill represents and will be anxious to see the changes take effect. I am proud to present this Bill on behalf of the Government. I hope all Members will support it wholeheartedly so it can receive speedy passage on behalf of those who are approaching their retirement and those who must plan ahead in the pension fund reform context.

Canadians are eager to see this legislation pass because if it receives speedy passage it can take effect at the beginning of 1987 as proposed. This can only happen if the measures are in place in sufficient time for employees to make the substantial adjustments in their plans which may be required. Again, it is with very great pride that I present this Bill to the House today.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, as the spokesman for my Party on this issue may I say that I, too, am prepared to give this Bill relatively swift passage in order that the legislation go to committee. There are some areas in this legislation with which I have some concern. I think we can make some improvements to the legislation without causing a fundamental problem for the Government. One in particular that I want to mention, while the Minister is still in the House, is this. At the time the all-Party parliamentary task force travelled across the country meeting individuals and other groups, but particularly representatives of religious groups which prohibit membership in private associations, we took their presentations into consideration. The Province of Manitoba took their concerns into account and this wording was placed not only in the Manitoba legislation, but the previous Liberal Minister of Finance, Mr. Lalonde, accepted that wording in the draft Bill we had prepared. I have had representations from the same religious groups. They are very small in number, and I think the Government would do well to listen to what they have to say and amend the legislation to alleviate their problem.

The Minister indicated that this Bill has been a long time coming. I could not agree more. In recent months there have been public opinion polls which indicate that the Canadian public in general is very confused about the role of pension plans in this country, both public and private. That has led to a misunderstanding on the part of most Canadians as to what role pension plans play. The Minister indicated that this legislation is only going to deal with the private pension plans covering areas of federal jurisdiction. As she said, that covers some one million Canadians. My understanding is that a consensus has been reached with the provincial Governments on a pension reform package which will be undertaken in each of the provinces concerned. That of course will cover a great many more workers. However, we have to use this debate not only for the purposes of this Bill but as an educational tool to explain to Canadians the difference between public and private pension plans. Fundamental to that explanation must be the acceptance by the people of Canada that there is a role to be played in pension planning by Government, by the individual and their employers.

In years past, when one was advocating a pension system, it was based on the premise that Old Age Security would cover 25 per cent of the average industrial wage. The public pension system, known as the Canada Pension Plan outside of Quebec where it is called the Quebec Pension Plan, would cover an additional 25 per cent. In other words, at age 65 Canadian workers would be guaranteed at least 50 per cent of the average industrial wage. It was up to the individual to supplement that through personal savings or a private pension plan. In effect, they would then be able to live in retirement with the standard of living they were accustomed to before they reached the age of retirement. That triad of Government, business and the individual has served Canadians relatively well.

One of the major concerns which led to the creation of the all-Party task force on pension reform was that in the latter part of the 1970s and the early part of the 1980s some 54 per cent of OAS recipients also qualified for the guaranteed Income Supplement. That was considerably higher than most other OECD countries. For that reason the task force was asked to investigate why pension benefits for retired Canadians was so much different than in Europe. I must say that in the North American context, which we must take into consideration because our major trading partner is the U.S., our neigbhour to the south has a worse track record than we do regarding private pension plans. The caveat I want to place on that is that Canadians are much more familiar with the RRSP as a vehicle whereby the average Canadian can plan his retirement income. That is an important consideration when one looks at a snapshot view of the pension system in our country. The point I am making is that the triad I referred to earlier was intended to serve Canadians reasonably well.

The trends that are now impacting on Canadian society had a great deal to do with the type of recommendations that the task force made to the Government of the day, which were accepted by the Government at that time, and have now been accepted by the present Government. I think that speaks well for the committee members on that task force on pension reform. I know, as I think Members opposite know, that when a report of a parliamentary task group is accepted by two different stripes of political philosophy in Government, the task force has done a reasonable job of deciphering the actual needs of the Canadian public with regard to pension systems.

I talked about what kind of trend lines had a degree of impact on the recommendations that the all-Party task force made. The most important one was the assumption of the change in work patterns. Previous to the 1960s when the Canada Pension Plan was first being thought of, the premise was that most Canadians would enter the workforce at age 18 and exit at age 65. As a result, the maximum pension under the Canada Pension Plan, before the introduction of the changes that will come into effect in the spring of 1986, was based on the premise that one would be in the workforce for 47 years. People now recognize that the odds of young people, who are taking post-secondary education, entering the workforce at age 18 and staying in the workforce in the same place until age 65 are very remote. Due to the way in which the economy is unravelling and due to the post-industrial age, it is evident that young people will have to be retrained several times during their working careers to develop different life skills in order to have a meaningful job in our society.

As a result, we suggested that the system will have to be much more flexible than it was in the past to accommodate that emerging work pattern. That was one of the major reasons which led to our recommendation to make the maximum pension under the public pension plan system payable upon 35 years in the workforce as opposed to 47.

The fact that young people are going to have to go in and out of the workforce in order to be retrained led us to make the recommendations that we did with regard to the need for earlier vesting of pension plans and a more portable pension plan system. I am pleased that the Government has accepted the idea of a two-year vesting period. The locking in of the Registered Retirement Savings Plan can create a vehicle for better portability of the pension system. Therefore, the emerging work patterns had a significant impact on the recommendations of the task force and that is what is being reflected in the legislation before us.

Another major trend that had an impact on the legislation was the emerging family patterns in the country. Only one in every five marriages in the country reflect what we think of as the traditional family structure which existed one generation ago, that of the male being the worker and the wife staying home and raising children. Only 20 per cent of Canadian families now reflect that situation. I read in an article yesterday that that kind of family structure is only represented by 7 per cent of the American population.

One can see that this emerging family pattern had severe impact on the way in which the legislation was drawn up. That was one of the major factors that led to the number of changes in Canadian pensions that affect women. That is to say, upon marriage breakdown pension assets should be divisible, survivors' benefits should be increased, and upon remarriage they should not lose their entitlement to a pension. I see that the Government has accepted those premises in the legislation before us.

In addition, one of the major trend lines that also had an effect on the legislation before us is the concern that all Members of the committee had about the ability of the next generation to sustain the burden of intergenerational pension income. That is a very complicated way of saying that we have some concern about the next generation of Canadians being able to sustain the burden of income for the next generation of elderly.

I would like to speak a bit about the differentiation between a public pension plan system and a private one in the country. Very few Canadians are aware that if you are over the age of 65 today and draw a pension from a public plan, namely from the Canada Pension Plan system, for every dollar you draw you have only paid 17 cents. The other 83 cents will be picked up by the next generation of Canadians.

The burden that is capable of being handled by the next generation has been studied in Europe. Under the present Canada Pension Plan system, my children, in the year 2010 and beyond, will have to pay roughly 9 to 10 per cent of their income to cover the Canada Pension Plan at that time. I do not believe that that is an excessive burden compared to that in most other industrial states which demographically reflected, in 1985, the state that Canada will be in in the year 2010. I speak of the United Kingdom, Germany, and France where the present average age and number of workers supporting the system reflect what the Canadian reality will be in the next generation.

We did, however, have some concern about what impact any changes to the public pension plan system would have on the capability of the next generation to carry that burden. I believe that was taken into account when we recommended that the Canada Pension Plan system not be expanded, because we were not concerned about whether the next generation could sustain that burden. The committee chose not to expand the Canada Pension Plan. We did, however, include homemakers in the Canada Pension Plan. There are some 2 million Canadians in the country, namely the homemakers, who do not have access to a private or a public pension plan system.

As a result, homemakers who have chosen to stay home and raise a family, which has value to Canadian society, find themselves being penalized. That was one of the major reasons that we recommended the inclusion of homemakers in the Canada Pension Plan. In the consensus package which the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) indicated had emerged, the inclusion of homemakers in the public pension plan system is still under review by the provinces. Therefore, one should bear in mind that if the inclusion of homemakers in the Canada Pension Plan does not become a reality in the future, with the exception of some of the technical changes that are going to be made under the Public Service Benefits Act, there will be very little which will significantly improve the lot of women in the country.

If there is a failure to include homemakers in the Canada Pension Plan, I think serious consideration should be made to the Cofurantes model which advocated that there would be an improvement in the first half of the average industrial wage replacement earnings by the public pension plan system. Without that, very little will be done for women in our society who either stay at home and raise a family or are unfortunate enough to work at only very low paying jobs. It comes as no surprise to any of us in the Chamber this afternoon that if you work in a poor-paying job you will have a poor-paying pension because they are earnings-related. For that reason, when we debate the changes to the Canada and Quebec Pension Plans some consideration should be given to that idea in the event that the inclusion of homemakers in the public pension plan system is rejected by the provinces.

I also want to indicate some other areas of concern that I have with respect to the legislation before us. When we look back on the debate that occurred in the country in the seventies and eighties we see that one of the major factors that led to the establishment of the task force on pension reform, besides the dismal record that we had in terms of today's elderly population with regard to the Guaranteed Income Supplement and other things, was the concern about inflation protection. If you were one of the 40 or 45 per cent of males fortunate enough to have access to a private pension plan in the workplace and you did not have any inflation protection on that pension plan, with inflation at 11, 12 and 13 per cent per annum in Canada from 1978 until 1983, if you retired in 1978 on what you thought was going to be a reasonable pension plan, that inflation had a significant impact on your purchasing power over a very short period of time. In other words, many pensioners in this country who retired in 1978 found that the purchasing power of their private pension decreased by half within five years. For that reason, the Government of the day asked the Parliamentary Task Force on Pension Reform to investigate whether or not inflation protection should be included in an over-all private pension plan system in this country.

In the Lalonde Budget of February, 1984, the principle of inflation protection was accepted by the Government with the formula to be the Consumer Price Index minus 2.5 per cent. Although that formula did not reflect a consensus across the country, the principle of inflation protection was accepted by the Conservative Government of Bill Davis in Ontario.

There is a good case to be made that despite the fact we have not been able to reach a consensus on pension reform, it is no reason that the federal Government should not lead by example in this country in areas in which it has responsibility and require those employers to have an inflation protection rider in their pension plan system. I make this point because it is one area which will cause great concern when this Bill goes before committee. I expect many pensioners in this country to appear before the committee and submit their views on the need for inflation protection under the private pension plan systems.

Inherent in this debate as to whether or not the Government should legislate inflation protection is the definition of what is a pension. What is a pension? Is it a reward for years of service to the company or is it a form of deferred wage for employees? If one accepts the view that a pension is a form of deferred wage, I suggest that such an asset belongs to the worker and not to the company. Furthermore, if that is the case, then we are going to fail again in legislation before the House. As the Minister stated, this is the first time in 20 years that we have had an opportunity to change the legislation and if we again fail to protect Canadian workers with respect to inflation protection, I do not think we have done our job.

We have yet to determine whether or not a pension belongs to the employer or the employee. Therefore, a number of companies have found that there is a surplus in the pension plans as a result of the actuarial assumptions that were made at the time they introduced the pension plan. They have taken advantage of this and simply asked an insurance company to bid on an annuity that would pay their obligations under the pension plan and then pocket the surplus in the pension plan system. The law allows them to do this and it is perfectly understandable. The surplus in the pension plans which I believe belong to the workers are used by the employers for their own purposes.

I believe there is something fundamentally wrong with that concept of a pension and I had hoped the Government would have reflected in its legislation the definition that the pension belongs to the workers and not to the companies. I believe that definition was agreed to in that committee. I suggest that is a serious flaw in this legislation, but I also recognize that it will be very difficult to deal with because I do not underestimate the cost to the Government in accepting such a proposal.

I agree with the Minister that this is good legislation. I will not strenuously object to this legislation because it will go a long way to ameliorating a situation that has existed for the last 20 to 25 years. However, that does not mean we should not do our job as parliamentarians and ensure that the members on the committee at least understand the concept I am trying to get across that those assets belong to the workers and not the employers. I will be asking the committee to seriously consider this flaw in the Bill when it goes to committee. The pension groups will have an opportunity to explain their views.

I know that many Members of the House have constituents who are CN pensioners. I can assure the House, having investigated the way CN, a Crown corporation, has treated its pensioners, that it leaves a lot to be desired. One reason why the company has been allowed to treat its pensioners in that manner is that the current legislation does not clearly define who has the control of the assets in the pension plan system. Again, we are passing legislation, that I suspect will be the standard for the next 25 years, which is missing the mark on inflation protection and the definition of who owns a pension plan system.

It is also important to recognize some concerns about the definition of "part-time" in this legislation. My friend from the New Democratic Party, the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young), will speak in more specific terms about this matter but it should be drawn to the attention of Government Members who may be sitting on that committee. The issue of part-time workers is an area of potential concern for us all.

There are rare opportunities for Parliament to reopen legislation. It has been 20 years since we dealt with this legislation and when we deal with amendments to the Canada Pension Plan it will be our first opportunity to significantly change the rules and regulations of the public pension plan system since it began in 1966. Therefore, I caution Members that when we pass this legislation we must attempt to ensure that it is tailored for the needs of the emerging generation that will be entering the workforce. I am looking particularly at the pages in the House who will be in that workforce in the next several years. Earlier, I spoke of the emerging work patterns in this country. It appears that more people will find themselves in and out of the workforce, seeking retraining as a result of working in industries that will become obsolete.

Another emerging work pattern concerns work sharing or part-time work. This, combined with an apparent decrease in union membership in this country, indicates that the Government should be careful that it brings forward legislation that will ultimately protect the Canadian worker. The participation of Canadian workers in a union has significantly decreased between 1961 and 1981. When one considers the emerging entrepreneur class in this country, the majority of jobs being created are in companies that employ 20 people or less. These employees will be primarily non-unionized and the trend lines indicate that the owners of those enterprises will be women. Furthermore, women who enter the workforce do so on a work-sharing or part-time basis. Therefore, we should be very careful with the definition we use for "part-time" because it will have a significant effect on women entering the workforce. I hope that the committee accepts the recommendations of the task force with respect to the issue of part-time work and workers. We will have ample time to call witnesses on this issue in the committee.

A royal commission on part-time work was commissioned in the latter part of 1982. It reported to Parliament and made many recommendations with respect to benefits. If that emerging work pattern which I have described comes into being, it is important that the benefits that are made available to full-time workers are equally accessible to part-time workers, otherwise I suggest that we would have failed to do our job properly.

When I talk about the need for information disclosure and employee participation, I want to commend the Government because I think that is an excellent part of the legislation. Union workers and all other workers, even those not covered by union contracts, indicated to the all-Party task force on pension reform the need for information dissemination to the workers. I talked earlier about the fact that no legislation defines to whom the pension assets belong, why that is such an important definition and why it has to be ascertained. I believe that for too long a lot of employees have not had access to information about the actual extent of the funds which are kept in pension plans which have been used by employers for other purposes.

I agree that our track record when we were in Government left a lot to be desired in terms of pension reform. I suppose the fact that we failed to act on pension reform until 1984 was due largely to the fact that there was not a consensus in this country as to how we should undertake pension reform. That having been said does not take away from the fact that up job creation with the agreement of the employees. However, I am opposed to an employer unilaterally grabbing the money for purposes for which it was not intended without discussion and without seeking the agreement of the people who have a vested interest in that pension fund. I believe that that is absolutely wrong and I do not think even my good friend, the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse), would disagree with that.

Mr. Stackhouse: I don't disagree at all.

Mr. Young: The other problem I have with the Bill is another departure from that which was promised in the budget papers and that is the treatment of part-time workers and their eligibility to participate in private pension plans as covered by Bill C-90. The budget papers seemed to indicate that part-time employees would now be covered by private pension plans. After reading the legislation, I am not as enthusiastic or optimistic as the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) seemed to be that that will in fact happen. I will not go through the complicated formulation used in the Bill, but in essence, the Bill indicates that if a part-time employee earns more than $8,000 per year, he will be eligible to participate in a private pension plan.

The latest figures I have on the earnings of part-time employees are out of date, but considering what has happened to the economy and, as I understand it, what has happened to part-time workers, I think the figures I am going to use are probably not too far off. In 1981, 72.3 per cent of part-time workers had incomes under $5,000; 19.5 per cent had incomes between $5,000 and $10,000; and only 8 per cent had incomes of over $10,000. As the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) pointed out earlier, 72 per cent of all part-time workers are women, 40 per cent of part-time workers work less than 15 hours per week and 33 per cent of part-time jobs lasted for less than a full year. If these figures still hold true, and I would hope someone could present figures that are different, I can see that an awful lot of part-time workers will not be eligible to participate in private pension plans because their incomes are too low. I think that that is unfortunate.

Another point I wish to address is with respect to the vesting provisions in the Bill. As I read the budget papers last May, and I have reread them since, I am of the impression that an employee would be eligible for vesting after two years of service. However, if one takes a close look at the Bill before us, one will see that it does not say that. What it says is that the employee will have a vested pension two years after enrolling in the plan. That is totally different from full vesting after two years of employment because, under most plans, an employee is required to work for an employer for one full year before he or she becomes eligible to enrol in the pension plan. Many other plans require that the employee be employed for two full years before he or she can join the pension plan and have a right to the contributions made, which is otherwise known as vesting.

With respect to the scenario I envision under the Bill, we are not talking about two years vesting as an employee but really a minimum of three years of employment before becoming eligible for full vesting or, in some cases, even four years. Also, if an employer elects to change this provision under the pension plan, it would totally destroy the principles about which this Bill speaks. It is not inconceivable that an employer could do that because most pension plans are not subject to arbitration under grievance procedures. If, after $x$ years of employment an employer chose to say: "I don't like this full vesting stuff", what he could do is up the period of time whereby one could enter into the plan. This is something which could be avoided. I had hoped that the Bill would have made it more difficult for an employer to do that.

What happens to an employee once he or she leaves the pension plan? If an employee withdraws his or her contributions to the pension plan, then what the budget papers spoke about was the employee being entitled to a rate of return on the contributions equal to what one could expect to receive on a non-chequing savings account. I was not too happy with that provision; and it was also removed from the Bill. What the Bill says is that whoever supervises pension funds will have the right under the Bill to establish what a reasonable rate of return on the contributions will be. That is also somewhat of a disappointment to me since, under many pension plans today, an employee is fortunate if he or she receives a 4 per cent return on contributions made over the years into the pension plan. Even though the provisions in the Budget were not satisfactory, they were better than what is contained in the Bill before us.

I would much rather have seen a proposal which suggested that the rate of return be the same as that on treasury bills. At least in that case there would have been a standard application. However, that is removed. The Bill says that it will now be up to the head honcho in charge of these pension plans and no guarantee will be provided. I would have preferred to see some equitable rate of return guaranteed to the employee. As I understand it, that will not now happen. I see some Members opposite shaking their heads. I will wait and listen with interest to what they have to say on the subject. I wait to be educated on the point. I have gone through the Bill with a fine-tooth comb and that is what it seems to say to me. I certainly hope I am wrong in this respect, since it would pay a disservice to employees who have withdrawn contributions made to a pension plan to be treated less equally than they may be at the present time.

The Government also seems to have back-tracked from its budget promise with respect to pension splitting on marriage breakdown. It did not go as far as I would have liked to see it go. I have argued in the past that pension splitting on marriage breakdown should be mandatory. The Government seemed to indicate that it saw some merit in my argument. However, when it presented the Budget it backtracked from the point. The Government is now saying in this Bill that pension credit splitting should be based on provincial property laws. That satisfies nothing. One of the major problems on marriage breakdown is that most women—and it is mostly women who are affected by this lack of mandatory splitting, and the evidence is there to prove it—are in their early forties. By that time most of their family have gone and for one reason or another the marriage no longer works. Invariably, it is the husband who leaves.

The woman, who has not been in the workforce for a number of years because she has been raising a family in a great many cases, has to find a job. She has increasing pressures placed upon her to do so because she has to have an independent income and because she wants to get on with her life. What happens in some cases is that the couple goes into a lawyer's office, the husband's lawyer, who says to the wife: "Look, you really don't want to be bothered getting into a big court hassle about how your husband's pension credits will be split". Invariably, they end up offering her some cash settlement in lieu of a pension promise to be paid from the contributions made by the husband, which were really made on behalf of both of them over the married years.

When the woman reaches the age of 65 she suddenly discovers that she has an inadequate pension income. It is not as though she would receive an adequate pension under the present legislation, but she would have been better off if she had been able to hold on to that portion of the pension credits she had helped contribute toward as a result of her work on behalf of the family. It seems to me that what should have been included in this Bill was a provision making credit splitting mandatory. It should not be a matter of getting some sharp lawyer with a sharp pencil trying to bamboozle the parties. It should be a matter of right and it should be spelled out in the Bill.

Another area about which I feel strongly, and which has been a source of amazement to me over the years, is the one in which an individual becomes disabled in the workplace for whatever reason and applies to the Canada Pension Plan for disability benefits and they are granted. At the same time, the employer may have some sort of disability insurance carried with an insurer. What happens in these cases is that the employer says: "Because you receive a disability benefit under the Canada Pension Plan we do not feel we should duplicate that by providing you with the full benefits promised to you under the plan". What happens is that the employer deducts from the disability insurance the amount the individual receives under the Canada Pension Plan. I feel that the employee has bought this insurance and is fully entitled to any benefits derived therefrom. On that basis alone it is unfair.

What I cannot understand is why Government's have not acted on this point. In effect, we are allowing the Canada Pension Plan to subsidize the insurance industry. That is exactly what is happening. Rather than the insurance industry having to cough up the full amount of disability pension to that recipient, they deduct what the Government gives the individual from the moneys they owe him or her. That is totally unfair and it really is about time that the Government acted and put a stop to it. There are many disabled people out there and they are suffering enough without having to undergo the strain being imposed upon them. As was pointed out, I was a Member of the all-Party committee which dealt with the problems that disabled people face. It was unanimously concluded that there are costs associated with disabilities which able-bodied people do not have to face. It seems to me that principle should be recognized by both the Government and the insurance industry and the disabled should not have that additional pressure placed on them simply because they are disabled. That is quite apart from the fact that it should never have happened in the first place.

Even though I may have a minute or two left, Mr. Speaker, I have made the main points that I wanted to make. I hope that in committee we will be able to move some amendments to make the Bill stronger, and help the Government live up to the promises it made in the budget statement. In general terms we support what the Government is trying to do in this Bill. That does not mean to say we are totally happy with it and I would be surprised if the Government thought we were. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be very happy to answer any questions which I am sure Tory Members have.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Pursuant to Standing Order 46, it is my duty to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp)—Trade—Canada-United States negotiations (a) Lumber exports. (b) Suggested trade promotion in United States; the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson)—Banks and banking—Canadian Commercial Bank (a) Government's information in March. (b) Range of information; the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell)—Finance—Balanced budget initiative.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PENSION BENEFITS STANDARDS ACT, 1985

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Finance) that Bill C-90, An because only a half of all workers, and only a third of women workers, belong to any occupational public pension plan. It will have very little effect, if any, on today's older workers. It will not come as any great surprise that I will be arguing that if we are to achieve full universal coverage, which means immediate vesting, full portability and full inflation protection, there is no substitute for the Canadan Pension Plan and the Quebec Pension Plan. If all workers and their spouses are to have adequate retirement incomes, the benefits under these plans will have to be increased. At the present time the CPP and QPP pay about 25 per cent of pre-retirement earnings. This Party calls for a doubling of those benefits of up to 50 per cent of pre-retirement earnings, up to the average industrial wage.

With respect to inflation protection, I would make the argument that a pension which is not protected against inflation is no pension at all. It would not provide any guarantees that a retired worker would have the right to access to an adequate retirement income after age 65, or earlier, if a pension plan had that kind of provision in it. In terms of arguing the support of what the Government should have done—even though I said at the outset that we support this Bill because it does provide a better pension for employees in the federal jurisdiction who have a private pension plan—we are favourably disposed to support anything that provides a better pension for Canadians. That does not mean to say we are not prepared to argue that there is another approach, that in our view it has not been adequately dealt with by this Government. That is vastly improving the public pension system in Canada, primarily the Canada Pension Plan and its counterpart, of course, the Quebec Pension Plan.

I know Members will be interested to listen to the words of "Mr. Pension" himself, the Hon. Stanley Knowles in a debate that took place in the House on November 9, 1964 when the Canada Pension Plan was being considered. What Mr. Knowles said he liked most about the Canada Pension Plan, the two-stage plan which we are now developing for Canadians in their years of retirement, was that we were trying to reach a position of providing pensions that are adequate. He did not suggest that the levels which would be achieved by combining the Canada Pension Plan, at its best, with old age security at its present level were really the last words on adequacy. At least we are talking about pensions of quite a different order from that which seemed to be accepted a few years or decades ago. I hope that having accepted the principle that retirement security should be on the basis of adequacy, we will go on improving that basis, finding ways and means of raising the levels of our pensions so that all Canadians can look forward to retirement in decency and dignity.

The arguments that Mr. Knowles advanced on November 9, 1964, can still be used today in support of improvements being made to the Canada Pension Plan. I am sure that several Members from the Government side will hastily jump to their feet and say "Hold on, just a second". The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) on December 13 announced that he had arrived at some kind of an agreement with his provincial counterparts, as required under the provisions of the plan, and they will propose some amendments to the Canada Pension Plan to improve it somewhat.

These changes, by the way, have been a long time coming. I congratulate the Government for entering into that discussion with the provincial counterparts and getting that kind of an agreement. However, to date we have not seen any legislation that would give effect to the discussions, I would assume successful discussions that took place between the Minister of Finance and his provincial counterparts. We will see what that legislation has to say, of course, and whether it does provide for the improvements that we are led to believe developed. The reason I say that is because the proposals that were made by the Minister of Finance in his Budget of May of last year spoke about the need to improve various provisions under the Pension Benefits Standards Act, particularly as it affected women and a number of other areas. From that date last May you find on close examination of Bill C-90 that there has been a departure from the promises made in the Budget in a number of important respects.

There was a proposal in the Budget that employee representation on pension boards, for example, would be possible and would include the right of a bargaining agent, that is an organizaation which represents employees in a union, for example, to have the right to representation on a pension board. That is taken away in the Bill. All the Bill talks about is an employee who, upon election of a majority of the employees in the group affected, would have the right to be on the pension board, but only for the purposes, as I understand the Bill, and I am quite willing to be corrected in that regard, of examining information which may be presented by the fund's auditors. The power of decision-making participating in the decision making has been removed, and yet that was promised in the May Budget.

Therefore, the bargaining agents on behalf of employees will not have that right under this Bill. They did not have the right in the first place, but the Budget gave them the right. The Bill takes it away from them again very quickly, which is really quite a disappointment. It has been an issue in the trade union movement for years that employees should have the right through the bargaining agent to representation on the board that manages their pension fund. It is un fortunate that the Government did not maintain that provision in the Bill.

On the disclosure of information to employees who are enrolled in the pension plan, the Budget papers indicated that employees would have the right to information concerning the funding of a pension plan. With this Bill, the Minister of Finance has backtracked somewhat from the promises made in the Budget papers. The Budget papers specify the financial data would be made available to bargaining agents of plan members. This has been removed from the proposed legislation. Another possible problem arising from that is that the Bill states that the acturial and financial statements may be examined at the Canadian head office or other mutually agreed upon place of the administrator of the plan. The administrator of the plan, as I understand it, means the employer.

It does not take too much imagination to see a pension plan member who is employed in a remote area of the country such as in northern Ontario, Newfoundland or B.C., who when planning for retirement may wish to take a look at the assets in the pension fund and how those assets are invested, et cetera, et cetera. I can just imagine Inco, for example, or the Iron Ore Company or some other company saying: "Well, look, that information is certainly provided for under this legislation, however if you want to see that information you will have to go to the company's head office in Toronto", or somewhere else. That would make it virtually impossible for that employee to examine the fund's assets.

To live up to the spirit of what I think Bill C-90 is trying to do, it would seem reasonable for an employer to say: "Look, if you want to examine various areas of your pension fund, surely to goodness we can get the information for you and provide it to you either at the workplace or mail it to your home". We all know that an awful lot of employers—and I do not want to be unfair when I say this—view pension funds as something that belongs to them rather than something that belongs first of all to the workers and to them if they make a contribution to that pension fund. There are two parties involved here and I do not think that any employer has the right to act unilaterally and go over the heads of its employees.

It would seem to me that it would be reasonable to have spelled out in the Bill that if information is to be shared, first it should be shared through the bargaining agent on behalf of the employees and then with the employees themselves on reasonable request. No one would expect an employer to run around day after day providing up-dated information but surely a periodic report of the pension fund itself could be made available on a reasonable basis. I believe the omissions in the Bill leave it open to some abuse and I would like to see that tightened up.

Another issue I feel rather strongly about is the omission from the Bill of what happens to surpluses in pension funds. The House may be interested to know that I placed a question on the Order Paper some time ago asking how many companies had actually applied to withdraw money from pension funds under federal jurisdiction, money which they considered to be surplus to the needs of the fund, and I received a fairly quick response from the Government. In the five-year period covered by 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984—information was not available for 1985—the total amount of surplus funds requested was in the area of $58 million, an awful lot of money. In nearly every case, approval was given to withdraw those surplus funds from those pension plans. As I said, theses figures were not available for 1985. I have since placed a further question on the Order Paper requesting that that information be made available to us.

That money is money that employers have unilaterally withdrawn from pension funds. I suppose an argument can be made for this and I have no strong arguments to be made against it under certain circumstances. In many cases, those funds are being withdrawn to create jobs within the company or the corporation and in many cases this has been done with the acquiescence of the union involved. I have no difficulty with that. Where I do have difficulty is with the employer unilaterally grabbing that money without any agreement from the employees who are covered by that pension plan.

A very blatant case in point of this is the current dispute with Dominion Stores. Dominion Stores grabbed $62 million from its employees' fund claiming that it needs to use it to shut down Dominion Stores. That $62 million is employees' money. Up until about two years ago, those employees paid into that pension fund. Yet Conrad Black has stepped in and grabbed $62 million, is using it to shut down Dominion Stores and is leaving a big question as to whether or not there will be adequate funding in that pension plan to pay the pensions that are owed to employees. At the same time, Conrad Black has the unmitigated gall to lay those workers off in such a way that he can avoid paying them severance pay under provincial legislation.

Mr. Benjamin: It's called free enterprise.

Mr. Young: If that is free enterprise, then they can stuff it because that is legalized theft from those employees. There is no other way it can be described. To do that and then to manipulate the shutdowns of those stores so that the employees can no longer apply for severance pay under provincial legislation is—

Mr. McCrossan: It's the NDP-Liberal coalition in Ontario.

Mr. Young: I could respond to that but it would probably be recorded in Hansard.

Mr. Stackhouse: What protection is the union giving?

Mr. Young: Actually, that is an interesting question. According to a report in the Toronto Star of Saturday, January 25, it is clear that the union has challenged first what has happened to those pension funds and also the manipulation involved in laying those employees off. I had a meeting with the employees of one of the Dominion Stores over the weekend and they have some questions that demand answers. There is absolutely no question about that.

Mr. Stackhouse: That's why I put the question to you.

Mr. Young: I am all for as much information being given to people as possible and I think they are entitled to that information. If I can assist them in getting that information, I certainly intend to do so.

Mr. Fulton: I wonder if the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is assisting.

Mr. Young: I think I have expressed my sentiments on what happens to surplus funds. I have no disagreement with surplus funds being used for purposes other than pensions if used for

Act respecting pension plans organized and administered for the benefit of persons employed in connection with certain federal works, undertakings and businesses, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted with this opportunity to speak to Bill C-90, respecting the Pension Benefits Standards Act. As you know, Mr. Speaker, and as was pointed out by both Opposition parties, this is the first time in twenty years that this Act is being amended. This legislation affects 500,000 employees in Canada, 500,000 people who will at last be able to take advantage of the benefits arising from these positive amendments to Bill C-90, the Pension Benefits Standards Act.

Perhaps it would be useful to recall briefly the measures that will be amended and that are important, and I am thinking first of all, of the portability of pension plans. As we know, the existing legislation contains no provision allowing an employee who changes employers or decides to start up his own business to transfer his pension plan. Thanks to the new legislation, Mr. Speaker, if the employee changes employers, he will be able to transfer his pension plan to the new employer, and if he decides to start his own business, he can transfer the pension plan he had with his former employer to a pension plan to be set up within his own business. Mr. Speaker, I believe this is a very positive step.

Furthermore, as far as access to the plan is concerned, according to the existing legislation, it is necessary to have been employed by an employer for ten years in order to have access to the plan, while from now on, the 500,000 employees we mentioned earlier will have access to the plan after two years, and this applies to full-time employees. Part-time employees will also have access after two years, provided 35 per cent of average annual pensionable earnings under the terms of the Canada Pension Plan Act corresponds to their income as part-time employees.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat, this is a very positive measure.

Under the existing legislation, when employees lose or leave their jobs, in some cases they cannot recover a single penny of their pension plan contributions. With Bill C-90, Mr. Speaker, the employee will automatically be entitled to at least half the value of his pension plan with the employer. I feel this too is a very fair measure that will ensure that employees are able to benefit from the money contributed to their plan.

Mr. Speaker, as far as retirement age is concerned, employees will be entitled to receive their pension benefits ten years before the normally prescribed retirement age. I think that in many cases, this measure will be welcomed by employees who want to take early retirement. This was not possible before. Employees could retire, they could stay home, but were not entitled to receive their pension before reaching the prescribed retirement age.

The same applies to employees who decide to leave before becoming a member of the pension plan. According to the existing legislation, they lose all pension rights. Under the new system, if the employee has no pension, in other words, if the amount contributed is not sufficient to say he has a pension, the employer has an obligation to reimburse contributions paid by the employee, plus interest.

The Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) said that perhaps the employers will be making money at the expense of their employees under the new legislation. With all due respect for my colleague, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that he is badly mistaken because the employees will have to be reimbursed, with interests.

I would like to refer to another very significant measure concerning the surviving spouse. Under the existing legislation the surviving spouse is not entitled to anything at all, but once Bill C-90 becomes law the employer will be expected to pay the surviving spouse at least 60 per cent of the pension of his or her deceased spouse. In the case of an employee who dies before retirement, the employer will then have to transfer to the spouse's Registred Retirement Savings Plan the amount set aside for that employee who died before retirement age or before retiring.

Mr. Speaker, those measures were long overdue. It has been 20 years since any kind of change or addition has been made to take the current legislation situation into account, so these are important measures which reflect the socio-economic reality and the family patterns in 1986.

Mr. Speaker, marriage breakdowns are another reality of 1986. As we all know, there are now more marriage breakdowns than there were 20 years ago, but nothing has been done about it since then. In any future marriage breakdown, each spouse will get half of the pension. Earlier today the Hon. Member for Beaches said he was against this measure . . .

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Parliamentary Secretary, but it being five o'clock the House will now proceed with the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

[English]

SOCIAL SERVICES

SUGGESTED COMMUNICATIONS PROGRAM TO AFFIRM IMPORTANCE OF MARRIAGE AND FAMILY LIFE

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of sponsoring, with the Provinces, a communications program, including the use of television, that will affirm the importance of marriage and family life.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is only Private Members' Hour and we do not have the stimulus of Government business before us. This is only a motion and will not initiate legislation that will call forth direct action. However, Mr. Speaker, I say to all Members of the House and to all who are joining with us that this Parliament cannot discuss any issue of greater importance to the people of Canada than that of the quality of family life. To support that I quote none other than the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who said: "Nothing matters more than this. It's the family that counts. That's what makes our society, and that's what makes our country".

Through the ages the family has taken many forms, but in every civilization and by every tradition the family has been the basic institution of society. The tragic irony of these times in which we live is that never have people needed more what the family offers men, women and children, and never has the family been under greater challenge than it faces now. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that Parliament must join all other people and institutions of goodwill in helping the family cope and face that challenge.

We have recently passed amendments to the Divorce Act that were required. They passed without dissent and we can, therefore, conclude that they had at least the goodwill of all Members of the House. They were necessary amendments. However, even though they were a necessary word to issue forth from Parliament Hill, they were, nonetheless, inevitably a negative word. I ask the House today whether we cannot also send forth a positive word. Is the only word that Parliament can offer the country on the subject of marriage and marriage breakdown this necessarily negative word? Can we not offer a "yes" on the quality of family life? The need for it is illustrated by one of those who have written on the subject of divorce and separation by saying that: "This national and local government policy has more often addressed issues of divorce law than it has addressed the needs of families".

I would like to focus attention on the way in which those needs of families demand the attention of Parliament and the Government. I recognize the necessity for providing an opportunity for divorce and the dissolution of marriage. It is necessary, no matter how regrettable, but let us not forget that it demands a high cost, and usually a cost from those who should least have to pay it.

In one recent study entitled The Divorce Revolution the writer points out and supports the conclusion that for most women divorce means a long list of negatives including less financial income, fewer skills with which to cope, lower self esteem, increased anxiety, and greater fear of the future. The author makes this comment after that discussion: "For all its aims at fairness, the current no-fault system of divorce is inflicting a high economic toll upon women and children". Another study, Marriage and Divorce in Canada, compiled in 1983 and funded by the them Government of Canada concluded: "The financial arrangements made by most divorcing families were not usually adequate for dependent children".

I recognize and welcome the way in which our new legislation is at least designed to help the enforcement of court support orders but, at the very best, that benefit will be limited to the payment required by those orders. So very frequently, if the payment is made in full, it is less than is required for the kind of life the family once knew, and perhaps less than the family requires for a decent human existence. I ask Parliament to face the question of whether we are really counting the cost of marriage breakdown. Certainly we must provide legislatively for it, but are we counting all the costs that this breakdown inflicts upon people, particularly women and children?

One of the studies of Family Service Canada has reminded us that the cost goes beyond that which can be reckoned in dollars and cents. It identifies four areas in which children are affected particularly: one, the change of physical domain, not always for the better; two, emotional disturbance; three, reduced academic performance; and, four, a routine disruption which, among children particularly of young age, can be negative. In each of these areas vital to the lives of children very often parents demand that children pay a price no child should have to pay.

What are we going to do about it? We have already passed legislation. Can I point out, Mr. Speaker, that there is open to Parliament, and certainly open to Government, a step that does not require legislation. Laws can achieve only limited results. We cannot and should not say: "Thou shalt stay together", but we can provide, as Governments do all the time, education that aims at encouraging people to remain together, and at affirming the qualities, values, and necessities of family life. We need to do that, particularly now that we have passed the amendments to the Divorce Act that we rightly passed last week. Even though the law does not say to anyone: "Thou shalt be divorced", the fact remains that what is legalized is approved, and what is approved is very often adopted. It has been demonstrated over the years that the liberalization of divorce law has led to the increase of divorce action.

For example, the rate of divorce in this country increased from 6.4 divorces per 100,000 people in 1926 to 222 divorces per 100,000 people in 1975. The divorce rate grew approximately 35 times in those years. I will admit the cogency of what two writers on marriage and divorce law have said, namely, that legislative changes lag behind social reality. I will admit that the amendments we passed last week were an effort at legislative catch-up with social realities. However, let us also admit that legislative changes also shape social realities. We can expect that the amendments we passed, which I believe we rightly passed, will lead, not intentionally, but almost inevitably, to an increase in the number of divorces and the rate of divorce in Canada.

Therefore, I submit that we need some educational program that will provide a positive message to the country that Parliament is not simply saying that we will make divorce easier and quicker. We are not saying that. Rather, we are providing, through the amendments which we passed last week, a relief for those who rightly need it. At the same time, we are recognizing the importance of family life and marriage for the wellbeing of society.

We are taking the educational route as our way of saying yes to the family. I am suggesting that on the one hand we have legislated for marriage breakdown; let us now educate for family build-up. This resolution urges that the Government consider, along with the Governments of the provinces, a program of public education that will affirm the family and will make use of television in so doing.

Let us recognize that already both the Government of Canada and the Governments of many of the provinces include within their educational programs certain provisions for educating people on the merits and values of the family. I say that simply to submit that there is no problem of principle in this resolution. The Government is already providing educational programs vis-à-vis the family. This is also true in the provinces. I do not think we have a principle to debate about whether it is in the legitimate scope of a government. It has been established over many years that governments have the right as well as the responsibility to provide educational efforts of this kind. It is a valid dimension of Government responsibility.

The issue that should concern Parliament is whether these existing programs are enough. Are they effective enough to do the job? With all respect to those who have devised those programs, I would have to say that the facts demand the conclusion that they are not enough because we have seen such a rampant increase in marriage breakdown over the past several years.

If we believe that it is in the interest of society as well as individuals concerned that the family be reinforced, then I say we ought to be open to think new thoughts and try new methods of becoming more effective on behalf of the family.

For example, we have seen in recent years how much power there is in the use of television for educational purposes. For several years now the Government has educated us on behalf of physical fitness and has done so with remarkable success. It has used television to arouse public concern for physical fitness and has enlisted support for such efforts as Participation and has done it well because of television. We have seen in recent years an increasing effort by Governments to inculcate the merits of safe driving and to educate us not to drink when we are driving. Governments have used television for this purpose.

Recently we have seen Governments adopt the use of television to persuade us not to smoke cigarettes and contribute to our own illness and the illness of others. Can we in Canada, as others have done elsewhere, use television with all its powers to communicate the value of family life and use this medium of communication to arouse within our people again a concern for the importance of the home and the importance of marriage that contributes so much to the quality of home life?

Fine family educational programs are presently sponsored by our Government. These are sometimes carried on by the Government directly through its departments and sometimes they are carried on by agencies that have been funded from Government funds. In discussing this motion, I think we simply need to take another step, a powerful forward step that can mean an increase in the effectiveness of the Government's efforts to reinforce family life.

I have discussed the possibility of this with experts and authorities in the use of television. I have discussed it with television writers and producers who are capable of creating short, dynamic, persuasive messages on the family. I am persuaded by what they have submitted to me. I know that any Department of the Government and any committee of the House would find quite instructive and encouraging the kind of program that expert writers and producers have put together and which requires only the necessary funding to communicate throughout the country.

When I use the word funding, I am not thinking in terms of large amounts. For example, one estimate for five spots produced at one time would come to $176,600. If a one-spot message were produced at one time, the estimated cost is $45,400. We are not speaking about extravagant amounts or astronomical figures of the kind we have become almost too familiar with in the House. We are speaking about something well within the power and capacity of the Government and the people of Canada which would not add appreciably to the cost required of the people but would achieve an objective which I am confident the people of this country would endorse.

Such a series need not judge anyone or reflect negatively on anyone who has sought relief from a matrimonial tragedy. It is just the opposite. It has been my experience as an observer and student of society that a remarkably large number of people who suffer a marriage breakdown go on to attempt a second marriage. They do not give up on marriage. We would not be offering simply a message that reinforces those people who enjoy a stable marriage and a stable home, but one for those who have suffered a troubled marriage and a troubled home and are seeking to begin life again.

Surely that is worth the effort of this Parliament. It is worth the effort of this Parliament to provide something that will reinforce those who are trying to carry on or trying to start again. This can be a way by which the House of Commons will say yes to the family and concur with the words of the Prime Minister that it is the family that makes our society and makes our country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to speak to the question of the quality of family life. I agree with the Hon. Member who just spoke that this is an extremely important question and a very basic part of the quality of life in our society.

I do not want to be particularly partisan because I do not believe that this is a partisan issue. I am sure everyone in the House supports strengthening family life. However, I feel so deeply about the family allowance program, I cannot help but mention Bill C-70. When the Member quoted the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) saying that nothing is more important than family life, indeed Bill C-70 seemed to contradict this when there was no agreement on the part of the Government to withdraw the Bill which will reduce the value of family allowance. However, I will put that aside because that is not the debate for this evening.

I believe it is very important that we discuss the whole question of family life and the reasons for family breakdown and divorce. I and my Party also share the Hon. Member's concern about the very high incidence of family breakdown with the stress and unhappiness of the couples that occurs, not to mention the unhappiness that often happens to the children as well.

I know the Hon. Member is very serious about this issue, however I think there are many more questions we must consider besides that of a communications program which would be targeted to expounding the value of marriage and family life and perhaps deal with it in a somewhat superficial way. I am not saying that I am opposed to this idea but I am suggesting that the cause of family breakdown is much deeper and must have more significant remedies.

I now understand, after hearing the Hon. Member speak, that one of his motives for proposing this Bill was to put forward the positive side of family life. We talked much about divorce and the very high incidence of family breakdown when we were debating Bill C-48 and Bill C-49, certainly, the increase in divorce and the desperate situation in which women and children find themselves. We had statistic after statistic showing how much harder it is in economic and social terms on women who are left alone with children.

I think we should look at the many factors which contribute to family stress, the things which happen before a family breakdown. We must look at ways to strengthen families. To do that we must in a very realistic way look at the new type of families in our society. We have a very rapidly changing society where many of the values and taboos which my generation grew up with have changed, and we must open our minds and attitudes to the different values of younger people today. Many of us, perhaps, yearn for the traditional family we see quoted so often in StatsCan; two parents, the man working and the woman looking after two children, one boy and one girl. We know that in reality the norm for Canadian families today is that the two parents work. When we talk about families, we have to include single parent families. Just because there is only one parent raising a family, it does not mean, as we used to believe, that it is a so-called "problem family". I strongly commend many single parents, both mothers and fathers, who are doing a wonderful job of raising children on their own.

We must also look at blended families. We are seeing many remarriages and families coming together in different kinds of arrangements in which, I am sure, there are many stresses involved. We must certainly look at two working parents in most families. I think we must also look at extended families. In my riding, there are many families who come from Asia, and it is the grandparents who take on a lot of the child care while the two parents work. The aunts and uncles as well often work to try to pay off the mortgage and everyone lives together in one home. We also have communal families where young people choose to live together. So let us keep our minds open when we think of the supports which are needed for families.

There is no question but that there are many serious stresses and family problems. We know that 40 per cent of Canadian marriages end in divorce and single families are the fastest growing type of family. I mentioned the other day that there has been a 50 per cent increase in single parent families over the period between 1971 and 1981.

Another very serious family situation which we have not recognized and are not doing enough research on is the increasing incidence of adolescent pregnancies. It is a tragedy when young teenage girls become pregnant and decide to keep their children. In fact, we have children raising children. One wonders about the life of the new child and what kind of maturity he or she will gain when the mother has no chance to become an adult in the real sense of the word herself. A recent article in the Toronto Star stated that 40,000 teenagers in Canada become pregnant each year, which translates into one pregnant teenager in 11. I want to come back to this subject and talk about a TV program which could be targeted to this group.

We are seeing today many changes in attitude toward marriage. Customs have changed. The whole question of legalizing marriages is something else which is quite different and trial marriages are fairly common. Perhaps, for many people, that is the way to go, although my generation is not used to this custom. Fortunately, young people are no longer under so many taboos and must make their own decisions. However, I am sure all of us would agree that where children are involved, a very secure situation with loving parents certainly is very important.

We need to look at the reasons for marital breakdowns and family problems and at the kind of community support and Government funded programs which will help to ease stress and prevent family breakdown. There is no question that unemployment and underemployment causes stress in many families when the father, who has been the traditional worker, reaches the age of 30 or 40 years and finds himself out of work. There is a tremendous impact on how he feels about himself. This creates stress along with, of course, the family not having enough money. The lack of job security is, I am sure, a major contributor to family stress.

We see many women who have to work and who want to work but who are working at a low rate of pay. They are being forced into part-time jobs and do not have adequate child care. We have a very damaging child care situation where people are forced very often to use babysitters.

Many families are living in poverty or in near poverty conditions. What does this do to a marriage? I would like to quote the Minister responsible for the Status of Women (Mr. McLean) who said in his briefing notes to the Conservative caucus, and I quote:

until this legislation was introduced, the average worker who did have access to a private pension plan did not have this contributions and the employer's contributions locked in until he had either reached the age of 45 years or had worked for that company for 10 years. One, therefore, can understand that there would be a problem when companies laid off workers.

I think of International Nickel in my home town of Sudbury, which has, over the last several years, a tremendous lay-off and attrition record. At the time the company began laying off its employees, a lot of them had not worked for the company for 10 years and left International Nickel without a dollar in their pockets from the pension system. Because there was a failure to define the ownership of the pension fund, the company had been allowed to use that surplus which was built up in the fund in any way it wished. That has not been addressed in this legislation.

There is no clear-cut definition of pension assets and I believe that is a flaw in this legislation. I believe we should have a full debate in committee as to whether or not we as parliamentarians believe that that sort of situation should be left for the next generation. If we do, then I think it is a disservice not only to Canadian workers but to society as a whole. I say that because if we go on the assumption that my definition of a pension is correct—I firmly believe that a pension belongs to the worker. I view it as a deferred wage—then surpluses which have been built up in pension funds should be used to significantly improve retirement packages so that workers can take advantage of early retirement and leave the jobs for our young.

The Hon. Member opposite will agree that one of the towns in his riding, Port Colborne, suffered a tremendous blow from the lay-offs which occurred at the International Nickel Company in Port Colborne. I am sure he agrees that had there been legislation in place which clearly indicated that the pension fund surplus belonged to the workers, they could have bad significantly improved retirement packages which would have allowed people as young as 54 years and 55 years to take early retirement. That way the jobs in Port Colborne and Sudbury could have been kept for the younger workers. However, that was not the case. Because a lot of the workers were worred about inflation and their ability to make a living from the time they took early retirement until they hit the age of 65, they did not take advantage of the early retirement options which were offered by the company. As a result, the company had no option but to lay off the younger workers. Those younger workers then left Port Colborne and Sudbury and I believe that circumstance had a very deteriorating effect on the local economies of those two towns.

I mention Port Colborne and Sudbury as examples, but that type of situation, I am sure, happens in every community across this country. To a large extent, it reflects a downturn in the economy of our natural resource based industries. I suggest that that pattern has been repeated in Atlantic Canada, northern Quebec, northern Ontario and in parts of British Columbia. I cannot speak for the Prairies but that certainly is the pattern. I wish we could have had legislative tools at our disposal so that we could have improved the track record of those communities and kept the young people there rather than giving them no option but to ship out of those communities to seek employment elsewhere.

I would like to deal now with that part of the legislation which deals with the new Registered Retirement Savings Plan. I think it is very important that the public understand clearly that there will now be a different kind of Registered Retirement Savings Plan in effect after this legislation goes through. With the existing system, up until the taxation year of 1986, if one belongs to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan in one's place of work, one has access to a $3,500 Registered Retirement Savings Plan. If one has no access to any pension plan system in one's place of work, then a maximum of $5,500 per year is allowed to be put into a pension plan. That is so that these people will have similar benefits when they reach the age of retirement to other Canadians who belong to a defined pension system.

I understand that my colleagues to my left have difficulty with this legislation. Both the Lalonde Budget of 1984 and the Budget of the now Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in 1985, significantly improved the limits under the Registered Retirement Savings Plan systems. It is going to be done in a staged manner so that over the next four or five years people who do not have access to a private pension plan, that is, those who previously had been under the capping rule of $5,500, will have, by yearly increments, their limit increased to somewhere in the neighborhood of $15,400 by the year 1990-91. Some people have asked why we are so generous with those individuals because it will represent a further financial drain resulting, as it will, in higher forgone revenues.

The major reason we accepted this premise was because in our investigation of private pension plan systems, we found roughly 45 per cent to 50 per cent of males in our society have access to a private pension plan at their place of work. In the neighborhood of 30 per cent of Canadian women have access to a defined pension plan at their place of work. When we investigated the actual tax systems of those pension plans, we were astonished to learn that under the legislation that has existed in this country for the last two decades, people who belong to a defined benefit plan—and that includes every one of the table officers and all of the Hansard reporters—receive tax assistance because their pension plans are not taxable. In the year they work, they have to now determine what is the value of that tax assistance. When we look at the public pension plan systems in Ottawa—we investigated this across the country and, frankly, Ottawa is no different from provincial houses—we find that most of the employees belong to a 2 per cent, best five year, defined benefit program. Not all Canadian workers have access to such a rich pension system but the tax legislation reflects the fact that some 500,000 Canadians alone work for the federal Government and there is almost an equal number who work for the provincial Governments. I suspect—and I do not have all the numbers—that when one adds in the people who work for the municipalities we are looking at a large chunk of the Canadian working population.

Let us assume for the purposes of discussion that the table officer in front of me works for the federal Government for 35 years. At the end of that time he will be entitled to 35 years at 2 per cent. Therefore 70 per cent of his base salary will be his pension. The public pension plan system is enriched even further. It guarantees that the best five years of that 35 years will be the maximum pension payable to the person. In other words, we should not underestimate the value of that pension plan. Perhaps the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) will want to argue with some of the numbers, but a significant portion of Canadian workers come under the public pension plan system.

An Hon. Member: The best six years.

Mr. Frith: I stand corrected. It is not the best five years; it is the best six years. There is a large number of people who work for the federal Government and earn between $65,000 and $70,000 per year. Their pensions will be equal to 70 per cent of their best six years. In order to create the necessary pension sum somewhere in the system, we are talking about significant amounts of dollars that are all non-tax deductible.

Everyone who belonged to a defined benefits program was receiving significantly different tax assistance for their pension than those who did not have access to a defined benefits plan at their place of work. Therefore we decided as a committee to adopt the philosophy of a life-time sum for tax assisted purposes. In that way, regardless of whether one worked as a private entrepreneur, for Government or for private industry, everyone would be treated equally under the tax laws. That is why we brought in the definition of a life-time limit for the purposes of tax calculations. Because that is not well understood, many Canadians now object to the fact that the Budget of the Minister of Finance and the Lalonde Budget of February, 1984 will significantly improve access to pensions for those who work as private entrepreneurs. It should be understood that under the proposals affecting RRSPs and defined benefits plans we will all be treated equally.

I see Mr. Speaker signalling that I have two minutes within which to wind up. I do not know why that is. I thought there was a ruling by the previous occupant of the chair that we would have unlimited time. In any event, I will respect Your Honour's ruling because my colleague in the New Democratic Party, the Hon. Member for Beaches also wants to speak on this matter.

Under the proposed legislation RRSPs will be locked in, which we recommended. We also recommended the creation of a new vehicle, a registered pensions account. The problem in respect of RRSPs was that when people thought of those plans, the connotation was that that asset was in fact a deferred savings. However, under legislation, when people drew money from their RRSPs, they were forced to go to insurance companies to purchase annuities. When they purchased annuities and passed away, all the assets did not go into their estates; they went back to the insurance companies. From my experiences during the time I chaired the parliamentary task force on pension reform, many Canadians would like to have a second say with a committee of the House as to whether or not a monopoly should be given to insurance companies. I understand that it is not just insurance companies now, that some banks are allowed access under a different type of fiduciary vehicle for people to draw their moneys from RRSPs. Because we have significantly improved the size of RRSPs—we have gone from a maximum of $5,500 per year to $15,200—that problem will be magnified in years ahead if we do not deal with the monopoly situation as to from whom annuities can be purchased. I hope the committee takes its time and asks various people from the financial community to come forward with different ideas on how to use RRSPs. I also hope the Government is flexible and that the committee remembers that just because the Government has put this forward as legislation does not mean that it has to be passed as is. It is one area in which we can do a service to Canadians. I hope the Hon. Member for York-Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan) will be on that committee. It is one area in which we can become involved that could be a significant improvement to the legislation.

In conclusion, this legislation has been a long time coming. It reflects the only consensus on pension reform which has developed in the country in the last 20 years to 25 years. It is long overdue. It will receive passage this year so that it can impact on taxation year 1987. I sincerely hope that Hon. Members opposite remember my concerns in those three areas and that they take them into consideration when the matter is brought back for final reading on the floor of the House. Hopefully the improvements to the public pension plan system will reflect my concerns. Between the two pieces of legislation, it was well worth spending the time which Hon. Members opposite and I spent in 1983.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, in general terms we support the proposals set out in Bill C-90. It should be understood that there are a couple of significant changes. The Bill will bring into force the pension provisions presented by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in his May 23 Budget.

The Bill sets a minimum standard for pension plans in federally regulated industries—for example, railways, banks, broadcasting, airlines, et cetera—covering some 500,000 workers. It does not apply to federal servants whose pensions are governed by the Public Service Superannuation Act. As I understand it, the Government plans to extend comparable changes to those employees although it has not said when.

As I said, we will be supporting the Bill as it improves the situation of those with private pension plans. However, there are some problems with the legislation, specifically its lack of a provision providing mandatory inflation protection and its failure to prohibit the removal of surpluses by plan sponsors from pension funds.

The legislation does not mean that all retirees and their spouses will enjoy adequate retirement incomes, simply

For many wives and mothers, working outside the home is a matter of necessity, not a matter of choice. In many families, both parents must work just to keep the family income above the poverty line. In 1982, almost 10 per cent of all two spouse families were living below the poverty line. If women had not worked outside the home, 15 per cent of those families would have been poor. In other words, 62 per cent more families would be poor if the women did not work outside the home.

Therefore we must have decent child care. We must have support for families. The fathers must be able to share the load at home. There must be the kind of parenting and family relationships so that both parents can share this burden and the home responsibilities do not create additional stress.

I could go on and talk about poverty, I have lots of poverty statistics here, but surely Hon. Members realize that probably more than anything else, lack of adequate income and the worry about poverty is what puts stress on marriages and on relationships, whether or not the couple are married, as well as on their children. It certainly is a major social problem which faces us today when we talk about family life.

According to a consultant for the Canadian Council on Social Development, 630,000 more Canadians will be forced below the poverty line by the May, 1985 Budget. This is something I hope Hon. Members will reconsider, and Bill C-70 did not help in this matter. There is a lack of affordable family housing. The Government, unfortunately, has cut back on social housing. That is something else which creates a great stress on families who live in rented accommodation, or cannot get into a home at a rate they can afford or are overburdened with debts and high mortgage payments.

The stress on children and young people is shown as well in the trends of today's society. We have increasing child abuse. In inreased by 50 per cent in 1985. Yet the Government has not taken action on the Badgely Report which was tabled well over a year ago. In fact, I think it is getting close to two years now. We have already started a child care task force but that is not the answer. What we are going to have to do is put money, planning and negotiations with provincial Governments, into a comprehensive and universal child care system across Canada which is affordable.

An increase in child abuse has also been documented. However, I say to the Hon. Member that I am not suggesting that it is not a good idea to promote family life programs. We know that such programs have been started by family agencies, counselling agencies and family centres such as the one in my riding. We know that they are very effective programs which promote communications, assertiveness when necessary, child development, sharing in parental roles and home tasks, involvement of the children in family meetings and so on. It would be a great idea to have a television program which concentrated on these matters, not just to say: "Isn't family life wonderful", but some real stimulation of thinking and involvement on the part of the viewing audience, as well as related discussion groups in communities.

I have mentioned adolescent parents and the concern about the high incidence of teenage pregnancy. A couple of years ago Planned Parenthood designed a television program which was especially targeted to young adolescents, to help provide a positive education in family life, to help them understand themselves and their sexuality, and to help them think about responsible sexual behaviour. Unfortunately—and this was in the Liberal regime, so maybe the Conservatives will have a change of heart in this respect—the federal Government cut funds from Planned Parenthood which were designated for this program. The Conservative Government has cut even more funds from organizations such as Planned Parenthood. We should be increasing funding for these organizations and others. Surely this is a way to put our real intentions where our mouths are. It is not a lot of money, but it very important money which should be given priority when we talk about strengthening families.

I am sure we are beyond the point of moralizing about traditional family marriages in a television program. We want to look at the real life situation of many families undergoing stress. Certainly I strongly support Government sponsored programs which would promote family life education, would encourage pre and post-marital counselling, family planning, child development and a whole range of human relations and would perhaps offer problem solving situations in which families are interested and need. I think television would be a very good adjunct, but of course it should go beyond television as well.

As I said, we must have a very positive program if we are to strengthen families. We must recognize new types of families and egalitarian relationships between couples. We must have economic programs, job programs and retraining programs. There must be many opportunities for men and women and young people so that they will have economic security in the future. We must think of the stress on many parents who are forced into having adult children live at home, still dependent upon them, and the kind of frustration experienced on the part of both the children and the parents, not to mention the economic stress created. We must have affordable housing. We must have income support programs which do not condemn families to the poverty cycle. It is not too late to work toward reindexing fully the family allowances and increasing child tax credits even more. Social assistance programs are abominable. To think that the Prime Minister was talking the other day in Quebec about cutting back on the unemployment insurance program, another program which is certainly not adequate for many families with children.

In closing, I commend the Hon. Member for his aim in advocating programs and Government action to promote family life education and to strengthen families. I urge that it go beyond television programs to many of the other economic and social programs which I have suggested.

[Translation]

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): As Members of Parliament, Mr. Speaker, we may be especially aware of the importance of family life.

Marriage and Family Life

I am sure that at one time or another, we have all realized just how difficult it is to reconcile the demands of a heavy schedule with the desire to be with our families. We know just how much we need the support, encouragement and understanding of our families to carry out our duties here.

Also, we have all eventually realized how important it is to enhance the quality of the time spent together with our families, no matter the quantity.

For most Canadian men and women, the family is the place where, in an atmosphere of love and confidence, each member can establish the balance between his or her personal needs on the one hand, and on the other the demands of a social position, the pressures resulting from the duty to get an education and earn a living.

We are asking a lot from the family, and in turn it is asking a lot from us, since we have the responsibility to ensure its success and survival. Anything that can hurt the family unit can have tragic consequences for its members.

While striving to strenghten and support the family unit, we must be careful not to idealize it or consider it as too narrow to embrace the life experience of a great many Canadians. It is true that most Canadian families fit the traditional mold. There is no doubt in my mind that it is through the participation of both the father and mother, to the greatest possible extent, that parents can better bring about the full development of their children. But let us not forget that there are in our country a great many men and women who, as heads of single families, are working very hard to provide their children with a positive family surrounding. These men and women must accept singular challenges and also fight against the remaining stereotypes developed by past generations.

We must also take more into account these other men and women who have the necessary love and understanding to assume the demanding role of step-parents. In short, we are now living in a society where there are many variations of the traditional family, and a narrow vision of the legitimacy and viability of these new families will change nothing to their existence.

In our modern families, there is another dimension which the public has paid too little attention to and which it has not taken enough into account. I refer here to the increasing number of these children who, as adults, are taking care of their parents. This means for a number of them caring for a father or mother in addition to their heavy workloads as housekeepers, breadwinners and parents. For others, it means looking after them in their old age while wanting at the same time to prepare for retirement and feel discharged of the great many demands of life.

I am thinking also of adoption. The time when adopted children were the target of the other childrens' teases and mockeries are gone, hopefully for good. Canadians have shown that they are really able to provide a family environment for children who have lost their parents. In the last few years, hundreds of orphans and refugee children from other countries and children with special needs or requiring special care have been adopted in Canadian homes. The adoptive parents have thus provided these children with an opportunity to grow and develop which they would have been denied otherwise.

Of course, the family does not live in a constant state of harmony. External and internal pressures can undermine the capacity for adjustment of the best parents and their children.

However, since the public is now aware of problems such as various forms of violence against children, women and the elderly, widespread efforts are being made to prevent such violence, put an end to it and understand its origins and consequences. I believe that, in these difficult times, a lot can be done if we provide the family and its members with the means to use their existing strengths as an entity and as individuals.

We are now witnessing a phenomenal increase in the number of organizations and non-government groups which devote their energies to strengthening all aspects of the family institution. Many of these organizations are rooted in the community and provide a wide range of official and informal services which are perfectly adapted to the needs of the environment. One of the secrets of their success is their ability to work with the families without interfering with its essentially personal relationships.

We accept as normal the requirement to study and train in our professional occupations. Outside the home, our lives are deeply influenced by the knowledge gained by ourselves and others. On the other hand, we can assume without much training or preparation two of the most basic roles in life, those of a spouse and of a parent. For a number of years, the Canadian Government has been financially supporting programs to prepare people for married life and parenthood, that are implemented in the community by qualified non-government groups.

Preparation for married life is in essence an experience designed to help participating couples learn how to live together in marriage. It is aimed at preventing marriage breakdowns. Participating couples learn better to communicate. Each partner learns how to understand his own family background, in order to appreciate the other partner's attitude towards the fact of being married and how he or she defines the role of a partner in marriage. Those courses also deal with other topics that are basic to a stable relationship, such as financial management and the need to have a positive sex relationship. A good marriage preparation course can help couples prevent conflicts or, where applicable, find a satisfactory solution.

Often the courses on parental guidance are provided within a prenatal program including health and social needs. Those courses deal especially with the years during which the child-parent relationship develops and the vital association or partnership of both parents in the education and care of children.

Because it is interested in promoting qualified support services, the Government also wants to prevent marriage breakdowns. The increasing number of centres across Canada is an alternative to the adversarial approach too often used in dealing with the issue of divorce and the care of children. Couples considering divorce may avail themselves of the services of a mediator who will help them mitigate the negative impact and frustrations often associated with that decision, and find the best formula for the care and protection of children, and also for parental visits.

In every undertaking of governments and non-government groups alike, the vital question is not the means, because it is both necessary and desirable that there be a diversity of frameworks and services. The capital issue is the message. Are we to assume that a single message or a single set of values will meet the needs of a population with such a varied mosaic of cultures, life experiences and family contacts as we have in Canada? I do not think so. The Government might assume responsibility for emphasizing the value of marriage and family life, or again it could be the numerous non-government bodies already existing. Where does the responsibility lie? A considerable amount of care and sensitivity will have to be exercised if Canadian families are to feel understood, appreciated and encouraged.

A study of Canadian teenagers conducted this year points to the existence of an interesting paradox in the way they view the family. For many teenagers, family will be losing its influence in the future; on the other hand they have—and this is food for thought—high aspirations and expectancies as to their own roles in establishing a family and fulfilling its needs. Essentially, this is a very positive sign, because our youth always have been a strong factor for change and social progress. The forthcoming generation of families perhaps will tap that tremendous source of energy, giving a new meaning and vigour to family life.

Mrs. Monique Landry (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, this Government sees the family as the very foundation of our society. Article 16 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights describes the family as a natural and basic element of our society. As such, it provides the best possible milieu for the moral, social and personal development of future generations.

Last year, in the Speech from the Throne, the Government strongly emphasized measures aimed at supporting and strengthening families in Canada. In doing so, we realized that the needs of families today differ considerably from the needs of past generations. The twentieth century has seen changes in all segments of our society. Like all other institutions, the family has undergone a profound transformation.

Many still see the family in traditional terms, that is, the father as the sole breadwinner and the mother staying at home to raise the children. In 1961, that was still the case in about two-thirds of Canadian families. Today, however, scarcely twenty-five year later, the situation is quite different: only 29 per cent of Canadian families live on the husband's salary alone. This radical change in the manner of earning the family income reflects other changes that are now affecting the social and economic structures of our country. It reflects the fact that for a great many families, two incomes are an economic necessity. In fact, statistics for 1982 show that if women did not work outside the home, 62 per cent more families would be living below the poverty line. The economic reality has brought about one of the major social upheavals in our history, and I am referring to the massive influx of married women on the labour market in the last twenty years.

Mr. Speaker, the role of the woman in the family has, by necessity, changed drastically. Unfortunately, our provisions for social assistance have not kept pace with this development. As a Government, we have a duty to help Canadian society, and Canadian women in particular, to adjust to new realities. The statistics give us a clear picture of these new realities. They show that in 1984, 59 per cent of Canadian mothers with children under sixteen were part of the labour force. Fifteen years ago, only 20 per cent of this group was seeking gainful employment.

Among these statistics, the most revealing are probably those on the number of working mothers with young children. Today, more than half of all women with children under three years of age have paying jobs. This situation clearly shows how important it is to provide assistance to working parents.

Another aspect that must be considered, and that is related to the former, is the changes in the very structure of the Canadian family. Much has been written about the disappearance of the extended family and the fact that parents can no longer depend on relatives to look after their young children, but that is not the only consequence of the so-called nuclear family. It is a fact, families are smaller these days. Couples have children later in life, they have fewer, or they even choose not to have any. This demographic regression has a significant impact on almost all aspects of this country's socio-economic planning.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, two main factors prompt women not to have more children or even not to have any. The first one relates to what I said earlier, namely that a great many couples find it necessary to have two incomes to meet the needs of their family. Many Canadians cannot even consider the income loss associated with maternity and the need to stop working to raise children. That is the reason why women's groups have formed a common front with thousands of Canadian parents who are asking for paid maternity leave and more readily available leave for looking after their children.

The other factor behind our diminishing population is the double responsibility which women must assume—family and professional responsibilities. Studies on that issue have revealed that, on average, working women spend close to four hours a day looking after their children and doing household chores, as compared with six for women who do not work and two for men.

In this day and age when all trends point to fewer working hours, women with children have a work week of 60 to 80 hours because to the working hours for which they are paid they must add the many hours doing house chores for which they are not paid.

Mr. Speaker, we must also consider the ever growing number of women who are the sole family source of income. At least one out of ten single-parent Canadian families is now headed by a woman. Those families are more likely to be struck by proverty. Indeed, a recent National Council on Welfare study has shown that five out of ten single-parent families headed by women are living under the threshold of poverty, against two out of ten such families headed by men.

This situation and other changes in the structure of families give rise to a number of concerns which Governments must consider and about which they have to take immediate remedial action.

High among such concerns is the need to make good quality and reasonably priced child care services readily available to all Canadians. As they know only too well, there is a wide gap between day care applications and the number of services available.

Consequently, many Canadian families are now forced to make inadequate arrangements which they must change regularly for the care of their children.

A task force led by Mrs. Katie Cooke has examined this issue. All the Members of this House are anxious to see the official report of this task force which should be tabled early this year. I am certain that it will contain a substantial research base which the recently created Parliamentary Task Force on Child Care will be able to use.

The Government has also taken action to alleviate the negative effects of marriage breakdown on the means and welfare of women and children.

Bill C-48 now before the House provides for access to information contained in federal data banks on spouses who default on their support payments.

In addition, this legislation would provide for the attachment of federal payments to enforce the support order.

A number of provinces have shown their interest by establishing automatic support order enforcement systems. Manitoba and Quebec already have such systems and other provinces, such as British Columbia, Alberta and Ontario, have announced their intention to implement them. To promote the creation of such systems, the federal Government has undertaken to pay $1 million of their cost.

The Government is also considering other aspects of family law. Among the issues examined by Status of Women Canada, let me mention the integration of commitments related to private family law and the welfare system and the development of instructions for the judiciary concerning appropriate child support levels.

Another issue which is of major concern to our Government is family violence. For many years, violence against women was a hidden fact and it is only recently that this problem has been revealed. We now know that the problem of battered women exists in all communities, among people of all cultures and all income levels. According to the statistics, one out of ten women is the victim of violence from her husband or partner. This Government takes seriously its commitment announced in the Speech from the Throne to provide additional assistance to the victims of family violence.

We have examined this problem in depth in close co-operation with the provinces and territories. In addition, we support our commitment by providing continuous financing for projects designed to help battered women and support halfway homes.

Mr. Speaker, there are obviously many areas in which this Government has acted efficiently to meet the changing needs of Canadian families.

I am certain that all the Members of this House will agree that we must continue to do what is necessary to guarantee the development of such important institutions as marriage and the family.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak for a few moments on what I consider to be a very important resolution brought to the attention of the House by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse). I would like to congratulate him for the very thoughtful remarks he made when speaking to the motion. As well, I would like to congratulate the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for International Trade (Mrs. Landry) for putting on the record what the Government has been doing up to this point in terms of securing what the Hon. Member for Scarborough West said was the principle of Governments realizing the importance of preserving family life. I do not think that there is any question about the principle of which the Hon. Member spoke.

The motion before us today reflects something very special about our lives as Canadians. We are fortunate to have the ability and will to examine fundamental concepts and relationships that sustain us as a society and to have the energy and resources to act upon what we learn of ourselves. As is often the case in matters closest to the essence of our lives, family life poses intriguing paradoxes for us.

The family is an experience common to us all but we have traditionally been very hesitant to intervene in destructive family situations for fear of interfering with matters of a very personal and private nature. The family is a basic unit of our society and yet we still have much to learn about its dynamics. We should expect that the family as a basic social element will reflect the earliest consequences of social adaptation and change. However, our response as a society to new and different family structures has often been less than supportive. For all the importance we attach to family life, how many of us can truly say that we devote as much energy to our families as we do to our jobs and public activities?

The attention the Canadian family is now receiving thanks to motions and resolutions like the one put forward by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West is no matter of expediency or ideological convenience. The past two decades have been especially hard on the family unit as we once perceived it in its traditional terms. The capabilities of the family for self-reliance and protection have been seriously challenged by the complexity and gravity of today's problems. However, at the same time, families in difficulty have available to them a wide and growing range of support resources offered through Government and an extensive system of voluntary and other services and informal—

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

TRADE—CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—LUMBER EXPORTS. (B) SUGGESTED TRADE PROMOTION IN UNITED STATES

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to say something more about concerns which were expressed in questions I asked on October 2, 1985. These were questions which reflected concerns expressed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), in various context, with respect to the threat to Canadian softwood lumber exports to the United States.

In Question Period on October 2 I focused on two different aspects of the problem. The first had to with the suggestion of the U.S. Ambassador that Canada might consider a voluntary restraint on exports of softwood lumber to the United States. The second dealt with lobbying efforts which were required in the U.S.

My suggestion to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) that the call for voluntary restraint on exports represented a suggestion of illegal activity by Canadian softwood lumber exporters was confirmed, in a sense, a few days later by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Weiner). He said that his understanding was that the Ambassador had expressed a personal view. He then went on to say that any such action might well have serious anti-trust implications and that these are considerations which he was certain would be taken fully into account by the Canadian industry.

Representatives of the Canadian industry in northwestern Ontario were certainly not in any doubt about these matters when, together with my colleague from Skeena, we met with them a few days before these discussions in the House of Commons. At those meetings we considered the importance of softwood lumber exports to northwestern Ontario. We were impressed and astonished—staggered even—to realize that 80 per cent, and more, of the lumber production of northwestern Ontario went across the border to the United States. We realized then that the threat to these exports resulting from the action of Congressmen in the United States was a threat which could really devastate employment in the industry in northwestern Ontario.

Thus we had the very best of reasons in our communities, in the City of Thunder Bay and in the surrounding towns where the lumber industry is so important, for emphasizing to leaders in industry and in unions to do everything they could to urge the Government of Canada to perform that lobbying effort which only the Government can carry on but which is so imperative.

I was pleased to receive a response from the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs with respect to the matter which suggested that the Government realized the importance of the matter and that it was, in fact, mobilizing an effort in various parts of the United States to form a coalition. I was also pleased to see later in the fall that success was attending these efforts and that a coalition had been gotten together. It was comprised of people involved in the transportation of the lumber and those who wanted to use it without having to pay the price increases. Those in the southern United States who are prepared to pay a premium for spruce, pine and fir lumber, which they use for framing purposes in house construction as opposed to using southern yellow pine which is simply not as good also, responded to the Canadian Government urging it to act in the U.S. to ensure that protectionism did not triumph.

In the last few days a conference sponsored by student foresters was held at Lakehead University. It focused in on these matters. There is very great reason to be concerned about what the U.S. Congress may yet do. Informal discussions have been under way in San Diego over the last few days to try to encure that the U.S. Government becomes sensitive to all aspects of the question. However, it seems to me that we face a threat in Congress which could end half a century of reasonably happy trade relations between Canada and the U.S.

In 1935 the Canadian Government was able to sign a freer trade agreement with the U.S. administration. That was a very happy development. Later we saw it develop into the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, GATT, which has been so important. What Representative Sam Gibbons is proposing in his Bill would have the effect of devastating the industry. That Bill may yet come to a vote in Congress, and, if it has the kind of support this winter or spring that it seemed to have last summer, it would be veto-proof. This would end an era of happy relations. It would be in complete contradiction of the freer trade developments which the Government has encouraged and which it seeks to pursue with the U.S. Therefore I say to a Government which did not take seriously enough the danger in quotas on fish and pork, that it is absolutely imperative that it respond to this threat and ensure that our softwood lumber industry is not devastated as it could be.

Mr. Chuck Cook (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there are times when Opposition Members do themselves, their ridings and their country no good in what they advocate. The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp) must remember that every opponent of Canadian lumber going to the U.S. will listen to his words with care.

With respect to the question of export restraint, there has been no proposal from the U.S. administration that Canada restrain its exports to the U.S. Furthermore, the administration continues to take a firm stand with Congress in rejecting any linkage of the lumber issue with the trade talks. Both the Canadian and U.S. Governments agree completely that the lumber issue should be addressed on its merits.

To that end, in the context of ongoing consultations, Canadian and U.S. officials met in San Diego, as the Hon. Member mentioned, on January 20 to examine and review issues related to our bilateral trade in lumber. Views were exchanged on production and consumption trends, forest management policies in both countries, as well as prospects for increased market opportunities in third countries. It was agreed to schedule another session in this series of discussions to consider questions raised by both sides. Arrangements for the next meeting are in the process of being confirmed. This has been the case from the beginning.

The Canadian Government continues to work very closely and co-operatively with the provinces and Canadian industry. Therefore, I suggest to the Hon. Member that he had better have another talk with the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) and realize that he is not serving his country well with this kind of question.

BANKS AND BANKING—CANADIAN COMMERCIAL BANK—GOVERNMENT'S INFORMATION IN MARCH. (B) RANGE OF INFORMATION

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, last fall, in the wake of the failure of the Canadian Commercial Bank, I asked many questions of the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall). In March, 1985, the Government had taken unprecedented action when it committed millions of dollars in taxpayers' money to bail out this bank. When that same bank went into liquidation so soon afterwards we in the Official Opposition raised again the same questions we had asked in March which the Government had not answered. By then it would have seemed it was more important than ever that we should have some answers to the very reasonable factual questions we were asking.

The fundamental question is: What information did the Government have when it decided to bail out the Canadian Commercial Bank? Despite all the questions asked of the Government in the House and in committee we were given just one response: The Government acted on the best information available. Not only is this an inadequate answer to the many specific questions I have raised on the subject, it is also less than accurate.

On September 26, for example, I asked the Minister of State for Finance if the group negotiating the CCB bail-out had considered the opinions of the bank's external auditors and the minutes of the CCB's internal audit committee. The Minister did not answer the question, and in my supplementary I asked for a specific response which, again, I did not get.

The bank's external auditors, in their appearances before the House of Commons Finance Committee and the Senate Banking Committee in October, said that they were not involved in any aspects of the design or evaluation of the March, 1985, support package. So there is the answer to my question in the testimony of witnesses over a month after I asked it of the Minister in the House.

After saying repeatedly that the whole matter of the banks failures would go to a parliamentary committee for in-depth study, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) instead appointed a commission of inquiry headed by the eminent Justice Willard Estey. While I look forward to seeing his report, I do not see that the existence of a non-parliamentary inquiry justifies the Government in its continued evasion of legitimate questions about the actions it took in bailing out the Canadian Commercial Bank.

Let us not forget that, after taking a purely political decision to bail out the bank without any recourse to facts that might have got in the way of that decision, the Government went on to guarantee the viability of the bank and, once it had failed, decided to appropriate nearly $1 billion of taxpayers' money to reimburse the uninsured depositors. While all this was going on and the Bills were being debated in the House and in committee and questions were being asked, the Government still gave us no answers.

Parliament was asked to approve the original bail-out, which we did, taking on faith the Government's assurances that it was necessary for the stability of the system and that the amount involved was sufficient to ensure the bank's survival. In fact, soon after the Canadian Commercial Bank failed Parliament was asked to approve the bail-out of uninsured depositors, people and organizations whose holdings exceeded the $60,000 ceiling on deposit insurance. Add to this the costs of reimbursing insured depositors, the considerable administrative costs to liquidate the failed institution, the consultants' reports, the Estey commission, the legal fees for Government officials appearing before the commission, and we have, out of that hasty and ill-considered decision last March, a multibillion dollar mistake for which taxpayers are footing the bill.

It would seem from the Government's demeanor in the House and in committee that we are simply expected to approve these expenditures, and that we should do so blindly without getting any information or response to the questions that we have quite reasonably and responsibly been asking. This is not acceptable. The Government has shown a sad lack of accountability and responsibility throughout this entire matter. Canadian taxpayers deserve better and the institution of Parliament deserves better.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the allegations made by the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) are false and unfortunately a little too partisan. The Hon. Member for Trinity constantly raises the issue of the information upon which the Government, together with two provincial governments, the six major chartered banks in Canada and the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, based its decision last March to bail out the Commercial Bank of Canada. We have indicated on many occasions to the Hon. Member and her colleagues that the best information available, on almost all subjects dealt with during the Question Periods in the House, were taken into account in the final decision made in this most difficult and complex issue.

• (1815)

As to the specific issue of the relations or communications with the Bank's auditors. I should like to remind the Hon. Member for Trinity that the auditors appeared before the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs during the hearings held last Spring to deal with this issue.

At that time, the auditors had had to answer a series of specific questions concerning communications with the Government or its representatives before and during the March events. I remember, Mr. Speaker, that the auditors had stated they had, in December of last year, completed their examination of the bank accounts as of October 31, 1984. Following that, they had only resumed auditing on March 14, 1985.

This, Mr. Speaker, as you certainly know, is current practice with bank auditors. Once they have completed year-end auditing in a bank, they usually resume their activities in that bank several months after the start of a new fiscal year. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the auditors may not be completely aware of events between the end of their client's fiscal year and the time when they resume auditing for the new period.

Mr. Speaker, it must also be remembered that to a very large extent, the terms of the package were aimed at the future, since the objective was to solve problems that were imminent but had not yet appeared as of October 31, 1984, nor for that matter on March 14, 1985.

Mr. Speaker, the extent of the contacts last spring between the Government or its representatives and the auditors of the Canadian Commercial Bank is clearly spelled out throughout the Committee proceedings. Furthermore, I am convinced the Estey Commission will also look into those issues. I am sure the Hon. Member will agree that all relevant information was used at the time of establishing the terms of the Canadian Commercial Bank rescue package.

FINANCE—BALANCED BUDGET INITIATIVE

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, a very simple but profound message must get out to all Canadians. It is simply that we must start paying our bills in this country.

On December 18 I asked the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) a question about a balanced budget initiative. I highlighted the fact that on the preceding Friday, December 13, 1985, President Reagan signed an historic public debt statute amendment whereby the United States must achieve a balanced budget by 1991. While the Gramm-Rudman Bill excludes the cost of servicing the debt, it is nonetheless a tough, disciplined measure to bring spending under control in that country.

I plan to introduce a private Member's motion shortly with the same purpose and objective. I say that it is time that Canadians understood that we must begin paying our bills.

Let me share some background on this topic. It took us a full 100 years to accumulate a total debt in this country of approximately $20 billion. In the last 10 years we have seen the annual deficit grow from a mere $2 billion to the height of $36 billion. We have seen our total cumulative debt rise from that $20 billion figure I mentioned to over $200 billion.

In simple round numbers, our country is now taking in roughly $65 billion in tax revenue each year but spending approximately $100 billion. In other words, we are spending $35 billion more than we are taking in. Theoretically, if we did not have to pay interest charges on that debt it would not be a problem. However, we must pay those interest charges and we must reduce that debt.

Let me give some examples to show the very serious trends that have developed over the last decade especially. In 1974-75, the interest component of our total expenditures amounted to 11 per cent. That left 89 per cent of our expenditures for other forms of Government projects with respect to Health and Welfare and in other areas.

In 1984-85 the interest cost is 22.6 per cent which, of course, reduces the amount available for other social programs to 77.4 per cent. Clearly, the dollars available for these other programs are shrinking. They are getting smaller and smaller because of the ever increasing burden of servicing that awesome debt.

Just last Saturday I held a policy committee meeting in my own riding of Don Valley East. It was chaired by Mrs. Lynn Brebner and Bill Mackness, the Vice President and chief economist of the Bank of Nova Scotia who was with us to lead the discussion. There were almost 70 people at that meeting and by the time we finished the hour of discussion and debate it was clear in the minds of those people just how serious the debt situation and the servicing of it is for our country. I only hope that type of discussion will take place with more and more people across the country so that they can understand the true magnitude of the problem.

The dollar has been declining for several years. There has been a lot of attention paid to that problem in the last couple of weeks. I would submit that one of the reasons for the decline, the underlying reason, can be summed up in one word, "confidence". The major investors of this world are not confident in the way this country has been run. They are not confident with the lack of fiscal accountability. The erosion of confidence started years ago. The National Energy Program was central to the problem of billions of dollars fleeing this country. The foreign investment review agency had a very negative effect on capital and even Canadians began investing abroad.

We are in the midst of a great economic performance. In the western world I suppose our numbers would rank highest of any. Yet in this up cycle we are toting up a deficit of something in the order of $34 billion this year. We should have a surplus this year, if the country had been run correctly for the last 10 years, to pay down the deficits of some tougher earlier years. We just cannot pursue Keynesian deficit expansion because it will inevitably drive up interest rates. There are many examples of countries which have tried that process such as Brazil, Argentina and Mexico. Clearly if wild and reckless spending was the solution, these countries would be enjoying a wonderful economic performance. Instead, their currencies have been debased and devaluated. Their standard of living has plummeted. They are basically insolvent. Mexico, of course, is in very dire straits because of the drop in oil prices and, unfortunately, it may not be able to service the colossal debt it has as a country.

There are many ways in which to tackle this tough problem, but let me name seven. First, we should take a closer look at grants to businesses and other agencies. We cannot keep pouring taxpayers dollars into as many schemes as we have in the past. Huge tax deferral processes have to be looked at more closely. We must downsize the size and cost of the Government, which has grown exponentially over the last decade. I was delighted to see the Government's initiative to have the Nielsen tax force review hundreds of programs of the Government. I know it will produce some savings and get at some of the waste which has been occurring. The major review of the Unemployment Insurance Commission under the leadership of Mr. Forget is an excellent example. Many Canadians feel there have been some abuses and waste in that area. We have started on the process of privatization of Crown corporations and we must move more quickly and on a broader basis to get companies which are not viable and not part of public policy back into the private sector so they can stop bleeding the treasury of the country. The new President of Canada Post, I understand, will be appointed shortly. We are haemorrhaging there. Yesterday we heard that $243 million must be poured into that organization. We also must examine in a co-operative way with the provinces transfer payments which are so costly to the overall treasury.

The equation is very simple. It is a combination of more taxes and less spending. I do not necessarily mean raising taxes, but with a healthier economy, with more confidence in it, businesses will do better and will pay more taxes, as will individuals, so the volume of taxes will rise. We cannot ignore the other part of the equation, and that is spending. Canadians expect us to be tougher in this area. It is not going to be easy. It is a massive communications job. As a matter of fact, according to a recent poll, Canadians highlighted that their first concern was unemployment, that their second concern was hunger in the world and that their third concern was the pursuit of peace. The deficit or the financial problem of the country ranked thirty-sixth, I believe it was. We can see the grave problem in terms of communicating to people what a tough and difficult situation we have ahead of us.

I have confidence that we as a Government will deal with it because to ignore it would be ignoring a tremendous albatross or burden, a burden which will be placed not only upon our children but upon our children's children if we do not turn around this massive, awesome problem.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a pleasure to hear questions in the House being put to the Government in a positive way, questions that give one something to think about and that are positive.

The Hon. Member for Don Valley-East (Mr. Attewell) has been talking about the budgetary measures taken by the United States. As you know, Mr. Speaker, both in Canada and the United States, the fiscal situation has deteriorated enormously since the beginning of the eighties and continues to be a serious threat to sustained economic growth in both countries.

Because of an increasing perception of the harmful economic impact of uncontrolled budgetary deficits, the U.S. Congress recently passed legislation known as the Gramm-Rudman Bill that will reduce a deficit of more than $200 billion in several stages, in order to obtain a balanced budget by 1991. Starting in 1986, the Bill sets certain ceilings for the budget deficit for each financial year. These levels may not be exceeded, and the main provision of this Bill authorizes the President of the United States to automatically impose spending cuts sufficient to achieve these objectives if the forecasts of the U.S. Congressional Budget Office (CBO) or the Administration for the budget deficit are higher than the ceilings set for each financial year.

Mr. Speaker, in the United states the proposed budgetary measures remain the responsibility of the Members of the Executive. However, the final version of the Budget is determined by Congress.

In recent years, this division of budgetary responsibilities has made it difficult to introduce measures to systematically reduce the deficit. The constraints provided under the Gramm-Rudman Bill are a response to this policy co-ordination problem.

In Canada, Mr. Speaker, the federal Government is in a better position to legislate its fiscal policies. As a result, similar legislation would not necessarily be useful.

Since our Government was elected, our strategy has been to co-ordinate fiscal policy and structural economic policies to create healthy economic growth. The Economic Renewal Program announced in November 1984 clearly established a set of policies aimed at increasing Canada's productivity and bringing about a general improvement in Canada's economic performance.

Mr. Speaker, the May Budget introduced the measures proposed in November 1984, plus a significant number of measures to reduce the constraints created by a rising federal deficit during 1980-84 in this country.

The Budget also established a medium-term strategy for reducing the federal deficit in order to create the requisite conditions for sustained and non-inflationary growth in Canada. Mr. Speaker, once implemented, these measures, will make it possible to reduce our deficit very substantially.

I predict that the next Budget will be another major step towards realizing this objective. Restoring our fiscal balance while maintaining the Government's flexibility to deal with contingencies remains an integral part of the Government's fiscal policy. The means used to achieve these objectives, however, must take into account the Canadian situation and remain acceptable to all Canadians.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.30 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 22

[English]

CANADA POST CORPORATION

DELAYS IN MAIL DELIVERY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I rise today on a matter that has caused a great deal of frustration and alarm in the city of Hamilton. All past Governments regarded regular mail delivery as an essential service which was guaranteed to all Canadians. This is not the case with the present Conservative Government. The deterioration of postal service in my riding and throughout Canada is indicative of the Government's stop-at-nothing attitude when it comes to cost-cutting.

Over the past few months my constituency office has been bombarded with complaints about poor mail service in Hamilton and the increasing number of occasions when there is no mail delivery. In the past two years 80 full-time positions have been eliminated. This has resulted in greater delays, more complaints, and an intensification of the negative view of Canada Post. On any given day 600 to 700 households in Hamilton do not receive their mail. People like Dawn Walker, Patrick and Sharon Le Donne, and Cheryl Seth are frustrated when they do not get their mail, and become incensed when they are told they can pick it up at the post office. As taxpayers these people have a right to regular household delivery.

Mothers, pensioners, and families on welfare are literally living from day-to-day and waiting for cheques that do not arrive because postal service has been stopped. Does the Government have no sense of how critical the prompt delivery of mail is? I had initially planned to mail my complaint to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté). However, because the arrival of such a letter is no longer guaranteed, I stand in this House to call upon the Government to cease its neglect of Canada Post.

IMMIGRATION

PLIGHT OF LANDED IMMIGRANT

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the House to the case of a woman, a landed immigrant since 1972, who is now being threatened with deportation.

Mrs. Weinroth still has permanent resident status, but an Immigration Officer in the Montreal area decided to interpret the Immigration Act and Regulations very strictly and is trying to have her status revoked.

Mrs. Weinroth was educated in Quebec from 1969 to 1979. Her family lives in Montreal. Her father teaches at McGill and her mother at Dawson College.

In 1979, she went to Michigan to continue her studies, and she had two children there. Since then, she decided to return to Canada but is now being threatened with deportation. Pending a decision on her case by an arbitration officer, I think it is unfair to threaten Mrs. Weinroth with deportation. She is now battling the U.S. courts for custody of her children, and I think the last thing she needs is to be worried as well about being prevented from taking up residence in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is of the utmost urgency to deal with this case and ensure that residents and permanent residents can feel safe and secure. At a time when family re-unification is the order of the day, I think it should be relatively easy to deal with Mrs. Weinroth's case.

SOCIAL SECURITY

PHILOSOPHY OF NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, in a recent interview with Le Devoir, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) presented his Government's blueprint for creating a society of "haves" and "have-nots". He said: "Canada must rethink its social philosophy."

The social philosophy we hold provides all Canadians with certain rights and services, such as medicare and old age pensions, and certain safeguards against the vagaries of a capitalist economy, such as unemployment insurance and income security programs. It is not a perfect system but it is a good philosophy which most Canadians are proud of and support. Our Prime Minister now says we can no longer afford this philosophy. He would have us embrace a pre-Depression philosophy which offers programs, through a means test, to the deserving poor, and relies heavily on voluntary charities such as food banks. He wants quiet consultation, but no embarrassing public debate or political confrontation. He forgets that social policy consultants claim Tory consultation was a farce since their views were ignored.

Instead of listening to consultants and the Canadian public, the Prime Minister relies on the Nielsen recommendations to cut all programs except the military. He allows his hatchet man to develop a new social philosophy, not Canadians.

RAILWAYS

DERAILMENT AT RAITH, ONT.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the derailment of a CP Rail train yesterday near Raith, not far from Thunder Bay, focuses the problems we face in ensuring safe train movement. The derailment, which fortunately occurred in a sparsely-populated area, was the result of a roller bearing burn out. This happened 45 kilometres past one hot box detector and 10 kilometres short of the next one. The technological problem is that burn outs occur more rapidly with roller bearings than with steel axles in brass seats. This means roller bearings fail with very little warning. One of the recommendations of the Grange Inquiry into the Mississauga derailment was that roller bearings should be installed on all tank cars. That recommendation is now in question.

The railway companies have sought approval to do away with cabooses and replace end-of-train crew members with an End-of-Train Information System which is to provide all the monitoring and supervision which crew members presently provide. That now appears more and more dubious.

I call upon the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) to institute a thorough investigation of these technological challenges. Derailment of trains, especially in the winter-time, appear to be inevitable in our rail transportation system. Let us be sure that on the trains and elsewhere we have all the means to deal with them as safely as possible.

PUBLIC SERVICE

REPRESENTATIONS MADE BY LINDSAY, ONT. UNION MEMBERS

Mr. W. C. Scott (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, on January 22 the Public Service Alliance of Canada asked all their locals to picket the offices of their local Members of Parliament. The Lindsay, Ontario local of the Canada Employment and Immigration Employees' Union, and Revenue Canada Customs Employees' Union, instead of picketing my office, chose to act in a very responsible manner and put their concerns in a letter to me. I am very pleased that they chose to put their faith in my efforts and the good will of our Government to assist them.

● (1410)

In their letter they urge the Government of Canada to negotiate contracts in good faith for their respective groups. I too urge the Government of Canada to give this very sincere representation every consideration, and to acknowledge the very constructive input of all these public servants.

SHIPBUILDING

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF BELL AIRE SHIPYARD IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, the people who used to work in the shipyards in British Columbia must be wondering what they have done to incur the wrath of the Conservative Government. The reason given for the announced closure of B.C. Marine Shipbuilders was that the company could no longer wait for the federal Government to deliver on its campaign promises to provide the industry with a policy designed to foster its growth. In fact, if it were not for an accident with a Fisheries Department ship, the workers at B.C. Marine Shipbuilders would already be on unemployment and a padlock would now be on the gates.

Now, more bad news for British Columbia courtesy of the Mulroney Government. The Bell Aire Shipyard in British Columbia will close its doors on Friday. Sixteen months after its election to office, the federal Tory team can point to the accomplishment that at least 728 shipyard workers in three B.C. yards have lost their jobs or are about to pick up their last pay cheques.

Nationally the number of shipyard workers who have the Government to thank for UIC instead of a regular salary runs into the thousands. Why does the Government not do the proper thing and assist shipyards in British Columbia and elsewhere to build ships needed for Canadian purposes?

Unions and the shipyard owners across the land speak in one voice. They told the Government well over a year ago that the Canadian shipbuilding industry could put 40,000 Canadians to work if only the Government would announce the policy it promises so often when it is seeking votes.

Is it too much for B.C. shipyard workers to expect the Government to live up to its promises? Shame on the Tories!

INSURANCE

LIABILITY COVERAGE—DIFFICULTIES EXPERIENCED BY SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, 20 insurance companies agreed to form a voluntary association in Ontario to provide liability insurance to small businesses and non-profit organizations that cannot otherwise get coverage. This group should be praised, but they cover a maximum of only a million dollars in liability insurance, which is not enough to help a Windsor, Ontario, machine tool manufacturing company with 300 employees needing $5 million liability product insurance.

The Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) is not coming forward with any solution to this national crisis. We need Government action immediately. The pretext of provincial jurisdiction is a way to do nothing to help small businesses and institutions get liability insurance. When is the Government going to act? Is it going to act right away?

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Duvernay): Mr. Speaker, this week I was very suprised to hear questions from the Opposition about the price of gas, and I realized how little these people know about the subject, or else they are putting up a good show.

I fail to understand why the Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) are asking why the price of gas in Montreal is 59 cents a litre and in Boston, 43 cents. Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, I was talking to one of my friends in the State of New York, who has a child that has been ill for several years. He told me he would be glad to swap the U.S. price of gas for our Canadian social services, because his son's illness has already cost him over $200,000 in medical expenses.

Mr. Speaker, he has no money left, he has lost his home, his son is still sick, but his gas still costs 43 cents a litre.

The other point I would like to make about the price of gas is that anyone who tells Quebecers that the price of gas has gone up is wrong. Mr. Speaker, the price has gone down, and this will continue, thanks to the Conservative Party and its policies.

I can assure the House that gas was selling for 59.9 cents a litre in September 1984 and even after the increase of 2.04 cents per litre in the Wilson Budget to pay for our social services. On January 28, 1986, the price of gas was 58.3 cents a litre. This means that the present price is lower than the price of gas when we were elected.

Mr. Speaker, I therefore want to make it clear that we have been—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired.

AVIATION INDUSTRY

PROSPECTS FOR DE HAVILLAND

Mrs. Claudy Mailly (Gatineau): Mr. Speaker, Canadians are proud of the accomplishments of de Havilland. The invention of the Dash-8 and the unbelievable potential of the stretched Dash-8 give Canada a world-wide lead in a highly competitive industry. That is why the Government of Canada wanted to guarantee the successful marketing of these aircraft by giving a new lease on life to de Havilland and enabling the company to prosper.

So far Canadian taxpayers have contributed $850 million to this Crown corporation. It would need hundreds of millions of dollars more just to survive, yet it would not necessarily be competitive.

As a result of the unbeatable alliance between Boeing and Canadian engineering resources, de Havilland will become Canada's jewel on the international scene. Thanks to the design, manufacturing and development of the Dash-8 and the stretched Dash-8, Canadians will crown their achievement by securing a significant share of the promising field of 20-to-50-passenger aircraft.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

CROWN CORPORATIONS

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Now that the evidence has been submitted to the parliamentary committee reviewing the de Havilland sale, it has become clear that in addition to the question of price the Boeing Corporation will also receive from Canadian taxpayers about $246 million—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I believe that this matter is still in committee. I do not know whether I should really interrupt the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, but questions about anything in committee should not be asked in the Chamber until it comes out of committee.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the facts which are now on the public record indicate that Canadian taxpayers are contributing $246 million to the deal, in addition to the give-away price. In view of the fact that it is more than a give-away, that it is an outrage, giving away a priceless Canadian asset—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: You are right.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —would he stop the sale when there is still time, allow a postponement of the concluding date this Friday, and take a look at it himself?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, I should like to remind him of what he said on May 9, 1984, in his leadership run in respect of Canadair and de Havilland. He said: "These are prime examples of what can go wrong when the Government gets into commercial businesses and fails to exercise proper supervision and control. Before these companies have stopped losing money, I venture to say that it will have cost us $5 billion". He concluded that the solution "lies in co-production with a few major manufacturers left in the world". In effect, that is what we are proposing.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister refused to conclude that statement by saying that I felt the solution was in a joint venture with an international company but retaining the control and the technology in Canadian hands. He has not finished reading that statement.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER INTERVENE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, once again my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Would he delay the conclusion and closing of the sale so that he can personally evaluate the evidence, make up his own mind about it, and give it the benefit of his personal attention before we sell away Canadian technology which took the country years and years to develop? Would he do it personally? That is my question to him.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if I may again reply to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, I would say first on the question of technology that obviously the Leader has not read the testimony which has gone before the committee, because it has been made abundantly clear that de Havilland has a world mandate including all the technology which is now there. Second, much of that technology remains, titlewise, owned by the Government of Canada, not by Boeing.

The Leader of the Opposition is asking us to delay the closing, totally ignoring the fact that de Havilland needs $60 million this quarter. If the closing is delayed still further, the Government of Canada will be called upon to put up that $60 million of fresh capital. Boeing has agreed to do it. I think it is in the public interest that Boeing be allowed to get on with the deal.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER STOP SALE OF DE HAVILLAND

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): For the last time, before the deal with Boeing is closed, I want to put a final question to the Prime Minister, before Friday.

Could he personally reconsider this dossier, to prevent the sale to Boeing of a first class Canadian company and irreplaceable Canadian technology?

• (1420)

[English]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, during the leadership campaign the Leader of the Opposition raised serious doubts in regard to this company. The finance critic was even more specific on behalf of the Liberal Party, indicating that he would dispossess the Government of that asset. The Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice, who is trying to pretend that he is otherwise occupied, was very much in favour of taking action to change the relationship within the Government of Canada.

Another bidder who came here indicated that it was, in his judgment, a miracle that the Government of Canada had received such an outstanding offer. We are very, very concerned. What we are doing is we are saying yes to solid jobs in Canada and not to a Liberal boondoggle of billions and billions of dollars.

REQUEST THAT CLOSING OF SALE BE DELAYED

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): My question is also directed to the Prime Minister. We are not criticizing the decision of the Government to privatize the company. I want to ask the Prime Minister this. Since it has become clear that the method used to privatize the company made it almost impossible for any Canadian interest to acquire the company, I want to ask him again—they are not bound to close on Friday—will the Prime Minister agree to delay the closing and make an effort, as was shown in the committee not to have been made, to place the company into Canadian hands. Will he make that effort?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the Hon. Member for York Centre, who sat on the committee that we have been referring to, I appeared before that committee for six hours. In total there were 20 witnesses, and there were ten meetings. I do not believe we will ever get through to the Hon. Member the magnitude of what has happened with respect to de Havilland. The public treasury has lost $1.186 billion to date on de Havilland. If it is allowed to continue under public ownership we must accept ongoing obligations of a further $1.575 billion. Those ongoing obligations get reduced to five hundred and some odd million if we do the Boeing deal. I say let's close it on schedule on Friday.

ORDER IN COUNCIL

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): My supplementary on the same subject is directed to the Attorney General of Canada. I have given him notice of irregularities in the Order in Council passed by the Government to guarantee the obligations undertaken in the Boeing deal. I want to ask him if he will step in on the grounds that I submitted to him, to prevent this deal from closing while the illegalities that are associated with that Order in Council can be examined and corrected.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the honourable gentleman from York Centre put all his legal knowledge together and came up with a definite red herring in connection with the legal authority for an Order in Council. There are no irregularities, and I am sure that the legal authority was there and everything was perfectly in order from the legal point of view. The hon. gentleman can cease his efforts in sabotaging this deal, which is a positive step forward for Canada.

REQUEST FOR PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister on the same subject. The Prime Minister will be aware that the sale of virtually any Crown corporations belonging to the people of Canada requires an Act of Parliament, with the unusual exception of Canadair, de Havilland, and one or two other corporations belonging to the CDIC. If the Government is convinced that it is such a good deal, will the Prime Minister undertake that there will be a motion and a vote in the House of Commons relative to the sale of de Havilland before the sale takes place, rather than hiding behind the law in order to avoid having Parliament decide on the sale of this Crown corporation?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre, what a strange partnership we have between the Liberals and the NDP. You will recall, Mr. Speaker, since you too were in the House when de Havilland was purchased, that the purchase went through under the Liberal Government that was then in power, with the consent of the NDP, as a $1 item in an appropriation Bill, with absolutely no debate in the House and without a committee review. Now when it comes time to sell the Crown asset, the socialists say: "How dare you sell it without months of debate and deliberation?" They have had their committee hearing. Now is the time for decisive action.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is also directed to the Prime Minister whom I remind that we had to fight like hell to even get that committee consideration. Since the Government promised not to be like the Liberals and to turn over a new leaf and have a new day in Parliament, will the Prime Minister undertake that Parliament will in fact be able to vote on the de Havilland sale, rather than hide behind a technicality in the Financial Administration Act that has permitted the Government to proceed with the deal so far without coming before Parliament in any way?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, how they like to change their ground: When I was questioned in December concerning what would happen at the committee proceedings that are just concluding, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre asked for a committee review so that he could hear witnesses and review documents. He got exactly that and now he asks: "Why can I not have more, such as a parliamentary debate and a vote on this issue?" We are at the point of decision. That decision requires a closure on Friday. This Government proposes to go ahead with that closure.

THE ADMINISTRATION

PROGRAM REVIEW TASK FORCE

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I would draw to your attention the fact that the Government has created a new national pastime: trying to reconcile the conflicting statements of the Prime Minister, the Minister of Justice, and the Minister of Finance on reducing the deficit. However, we need an additional piece of information in order to solve this mystery. I would ask the Minister of Finance if he would confirm the truth of the statement made by the Minister of Justice to the effect that there are disputes among cabinet Ministers to such a point where the Nielsen Committee, the committee chaired by the Minister's seatmate, is paralysed. Could he give us that additional information?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the only problem we are having on this side is reconciling the conflict between the statements made by Members opposite before they were in opposition and the statements they are making now. That is the puzzle with which we are faced, and that is the puzzle with which all Canadians are faced. Get your act together, boys, before—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The simple answer to the question that the Hon. Member has posed is that work on the committee headed by my seatmate, the Deputy Prime Minister, is moving along expeditiously and making good judgments and good decisions. The Hon. Member will see some of the results of those decisions in a very short period of time.

TIMING OF INTRODUCTION OF BUDGET

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has said that we will see the results of those decisions in a very short period of time. Before interests rates shoot up, or before the now called "Brian-buck" makes the "Diefen-dollar" look like pure gold, would the Minister tell us when he intends to remove this uncertainty, confusion, and incoherence by bringing in a Budget? Will he confirm that it will be before the end of February?

• (1430)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have already said that it would be in the latter part of February.

An Hon. Member: What day?

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE—MINISTER'S TELEX TO OIL COMPANIES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. It is reported that yesterday the Minister of Energy telexed the major oil companies regarding oil prices. Recognizing that this month alone the price of Canada crude oil has dropped from $37 a barrel to $30 a barrel, which is the equivalent of six cents per litre at the pump, did the Minister in her telex tell those oil companies that she expected a minimum six cent per litre drop in the price at the pump?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have already told the House that I communicated with the oil companies to say that this Government expects, of course, that any cost decreases will be passed on to consumers.

An Hon. Member: When?

Miss Carney: As the Hon. Member well knows, for me to order a company to make a specific price decrease would contravene combines legislation. I can no more order a company to lower the price of oil than I can order a company to lower the price of an automobile in Oshawa.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deans: We'll get to that.

OIL COMPANIES' PROFITS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, does the Minister recognize that the reduction from $37 a barrel to $30 a barrel, without an equivalent decrease at the pump, means a $5 million per day windfall profit for those oil companies every single day that that is left in effect? Does she think that it is appropriate that they should be allowed to rip off the Canadian consumer at the rate of $5 million a day while she sits and complains that she has no power?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's arithmetic is totally amazing. How can the oil companies derive a benefit of that amount of money when, in fact, that oil has not even moved into the system?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): One short supplementary question.

Mr. Deans: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My supplementaries are always short.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INSTRUCT PETRO-CANADA TO REDUCE PRICES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to talk to the Minister about how it happens; but let me ask her this.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: How what happens?

Mr. Deans: Does she not remember that the same oil companies which she now says should be left to let oil work its way through the system were found guilty by the Restrictive

Trade Practices Commission of ripping off the Canadian public by over $1 billion a year for 15 consecutive years? Why does the Minister not demand of Petro-Canada that it show leadership and bring the price down, forcing the others to do likewise?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I do not see how it could be in the national interest to ask Petro-Canada to sell gasoline at prices lower—

Mr. Deans: Why?

Miss Carney: —than what it paid for the crude oil.

Mr. Frith: How about increased market share?

THE ECONOMY

STATEMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER OF JUSTICE IN LA PRESSE

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. In view of the fact that yesterday the Prime Minister denied that the Minister of Justice said what was attributed to him in La Presse, and that last night the tape of the interview was played on national television so that Canadians could hear the actual words, does the Prime Minister now wish to modify his answers of yesterday?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rossi: That's you all right, a bluffer!

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance—there was no 18-minute gap in that tape.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I am afraid I cannot hear the Hon. Member's question. She is one of your own. If Hon. Members would not mind, the Hon. Member for Trinity has the floor.

Mr. Crosbie: There is an 18-minute gap in the question!

Miss Nicholson: Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Finance. Will the Minister make a statement under Motions to clear up the confusion and inconsistency in Government economic policy, including the blunder which allowed the International Monetary Fund to suggest that Canada is printing money at a rate four times higher than that of any other industrial country?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure what the Hon. Member is talking about. I know that we are creating jobs two and three times faster than other industrialized countries. I know that we are creating investment at one-and-a-half times the level of other industrialized countries. I know that the housing starts in Canada are increasing about three or four times faster than those in other industrialized countries. However, I am not sure from where the Hon. Member obtained that other statistic.

FISHERIES

ATLANTIC GROUNDFISH QUOTA ALLOCATIONS

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. In a letter dated December 17, 1985, I asked the Minister to review the Atlantic groundfish quota split between the inshore and offshore fishing industries. As thousands of jobs in my riding are dependent upon the fair allocation of this stock, and the successful resolution of this matter is of primary concern to my constitutency, will the Minister advise the House with respect to any progress on my request?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the representations made by the Hon. Member, beginning with his letter of December 17. When I met with my Atlantic colleagues, the Atlantic Council of Provincial Fisheries Ministers, on December 11, we decided jointly on a proposal with respect to the split of allocations between the inshore and offshore sector of southwest Nova Scotia. That proposal was supported by the Minister of Fisheries for Nova Scotia. With my colleague from Nova Scotia I am now examining the possibilities of amending the distribution of these stocks. I would point out that, in fact, the landings last year were at unprecedented levels in Southwest Nova. I think, as in all other respects, there even appear to be more fish in the sea under a Tory Government.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

STATEMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO PRIME MINISTER

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It relates to an interview which the Prime Minister granted to Le Devoir in which he was reported, on Monday, in Le Devoir, to have said that he would be slashing social programs in the upcoming Budget, especially the Unemployment Insurance Program, even if the Forget Commission has not reported by then. Why would the Prime Minister make such announcements in the press even before receiving the recommendations of the Forget Commission? Is the Forget Commission just a front for the Government to put the boots to the Canadian people?

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I never made that statement. The Hon. Member says that I talked about "slashing Government programs and slashing this . . .". That is not the case. I never said that. The transcript shows that I said Miss MacDonald announced some major changes, the concepts of Unemployment Insurance Programs in Canada that came into effect on January 1. "There will be more; meanwhile, there will be a thorough reform."

"With due respect for Mr. Forget and his colleagues, I think we should wait for the report". "So there was an indication." "When you say there will be more, were you referring to new measures to be announced in the Budget, etc.?" I said: "I was."

[English]

FORGET COMMISSION REPORT

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, in light of fact that that is in complete contradiction to what was reported in Le Devoir, can—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McDermid: That is the transcript, come on!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. If the Hon. Member has a supplementary question, would he please put it.

Mr. Rodriguez: Yes, I have a supplementary question. Again, the Prime Minister did not say it. Can he then categorically in the House say that there will be no slashing of the Unemployment Insurance Program before the Forget Commission has reported to the House?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the word "slash" was never used, either in English or in French, by me, at Le Devoir or anywhere else.

● (1440)

Mr. Rodriguez: Give the commitment.

Mr. Mulroney: It is a typical socialist stunt.

Mr. Rodriguez: Give the commitment.

Mr. Mulroney: You raise a false accusation and ask me to deny it. Well, I won't do it because I never said it.

INDUSTRY

BOOK PUBLISHING—CANADIAN OWNERSHIP

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, Canadians now control only 20 per cent of the $1 billion annual book publishing industry. That is 20 per cent of an industry which forms our ideas, controls our attitudes, and which the Minister of Communications has stated is essential to our identity and cultural sovereignty.

Mr. Crosbie: Speech.

Mrs. Finestone: Are the cabinet policy guidelines for the publishing industry, which have as their objective Canadian control and ownership, still in force and in effect today as they were when the Minister announced them in Baie Comeau in July?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I want to remind my hon. friend that questions referring to Investment Canada—and obviously, matters that concern investment concern Investment Canada—should be directed to my hon. colleague who is very competent in this area, the Hon. Member responsible for the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I will then repeat my question to the Minister of Divestment Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mrs. Finestone: Tell me, Mr. Minister, will you guarantee—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Boudria: Will he. Will he guarantee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Would you just give us the supplementary question, please.

Mrs. Finestone: Will the Minister guarantee to Hon. Members of this House and to the cultural communities listening that when he announces his decision shortly with respect to the take-over of Prentice Hall by the New York Giant, Gulf and Western, he will not transgress his own Cabinet's guidelines and subvert the Canadian publishing industry?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if I may have an opportunity to respond not only to the last question put by the Hon. Member but to the first one which was directed to my colleague, the Minister of Communications, the answer, of course, to the first question she put is "yes", and the answer to the second question she put is "yes" again.

INSURANCE

LIABILITY COVERAGE FOR VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS AND SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, my question today is directed to the Minister of State (Finance). It involves the current difficulties in obtaining liability insurance by Canadian voluntary organizations, small businesses, and municipalities. This has been a problem for over a month. The Minister has met with business people and Government officials. Has she anything to report to the House on the resolution of these problems?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated both in the House and outside the House, while this is partly provincial jurisdiction we have taken a number of steps to deal with what we see as a matter of great concern to Canadians. We have urged the industry to develop the pooling arrangement which it announced yesterday for Ontario and which we have asked it to extend to all of Canada. I have asked the re-insurance people to give urgent consideration to an expansion within the Canadian sector of a private sector solution.

We have met with people with particular problems, such as municipalities, and we have an interdepartmental task force. Despite jurisdictional issues, we are co-operating with the provinces and we intend to move as broadly as possible to deal with this issue.

THE ECONOMY

SITUATION IN MONTREAL EAST—REQUEST FOR SPECIAL DESIGNATION OF AREA

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. Yesterday in Montreal, I attended a meeting of the Montreal East Survival Committee, where people were concerned about the federal Government's dragging its feet on this issue. My question is as follows: The Committee would like to know whether the Minister will do what he promised on December 17 last year, when he announced he would very shortly be giving Montreal special status, to promote the economic development of this important Canadian city.

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the Montreal East Survival Committee asked me a number of things at that meeting. I followed up several of their requests. I was asked, first of all, to look into the possibility of having the CAMO expanded to more than nine members. Today, they are suggesting twenty-three members. This is one request I have already acted upon. The designated area question is being looked into as well as several other proposals made by the Committee at that time.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary.

When is the Minister going to meet his commitments, Mr. Speaker? And secondly, workers at Bombardier would also like to know whether the Minister is going to meet the commitments he made to this company, namely that Bombardier would be receiving major contracts for the construction of locomotives, and if so, when is he going to announce this in the House?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I think that the fact that 40,000 new jobs were created in Montreal in 1985 proves that we have achieved something.

We announced that Pétromont would be receiving $55 million in grants. Fifteen million dollars last September. We have just announced another grant of $50.9 million for Canadair. More than 400 new jobs have been created in this sector. We have a whole list.

Mr. Nystrom: Bombardier?

Mr. de Cotret: Mr. Speaker, I simply want to give my hon. colleague and the House the assurance that in the weeks and months to come, there will be many new announcements that will once again give Montreal the place it deserves in Quebec and in Canada.

REQUEST FOR ANSWERS TO DEMANDS OF MONTREAL EAST SURVIVAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I also have a question for the President of the Treasury Board, and I was surprised at the answer he gave my hon. colleague. In fact, the Survival Committee also asked me to put questions to the Minister.

Contrary to what the Minister was saying, he did not meet the Committee's requests, which included putting a stop on the sale of Gulf to Ultramar; giving Versatile Vickers its fair share of shipbuilding contracts; giving Bombardier contracts for repairs to rolling stock, and the designated area issue which is still being considered—

When is the Minister going to respond to these proposals?

The Minister has given no reply whatsoever to the Survival Committee's four main proposals.

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I think we have already shown what we can do. We are working on case. A number of questions are being considered, and as soon as we get the results, we will announce them.

I may add that I am regularly in touch with the President of the Montreal East Survival Committee, and that he understands what is being done. We are keeping him informed on all developments in this case.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET CHAIRMAN OF MONTREAL EAST SURVIVAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary for the Minister.

If he is regularly in touch with the President of the Survival Committee, perhaps he would agree to meet with him as he intends to come to the Hill next week and would like to see the Minister to discuss the Government's response to the Survival Committee's proposals.

Could the Minister inform the House whether he would agree to meet with the President of the Survival Committee?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, every time I was asked to meet with the President of the Survival Committee and his colleagues, I always accepted. And I shall therefore be delighted to meet him if he comes here next week. In fact, I have many times offered to meet him on a Friday when I am in Montreal to look after the Montreal Government Members Committee and various projects which are proceeding very well, I can assure you, at this time.

Mr. Nystrom: It is time to act.

SPACE RESEARCH

CANADIAN CONTRIBUTION TO UNITED STATES PROGRAM

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Science and Technology. All Canadians were touched by yesterday's tragic event over the skies of Florida. Can the Minister assure the House that Canada will continue its valuable contribution to the American space program despite the recent tragic event?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. It gives me the opportunity to express my personal regret at the events of yesterday.

There will be no interruption in terms of Canada's ongoing space programs. Many new efforts which the Government may wish to initiate into new space adventures are in a very preliminary evaluation and planning stage and I see no interruption in that effort.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO'S WATER SUPPLY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Yesterday's Ontario Government's report showed, through the use of independent monitoring, what previous Government tests had not. Not only do residents of southwestern Ontario face the threat of inundation by dioxin-containing flood waters but they are drinking dioxin-containing waters right now.

When will the Minister announce his promised program for the control of chemical contaminants of the environment? Will the plan include a national safe drinking water act, and an emergency initiative to produce a federal-provincial program to improve the purification of water systems in municipalities, including the use of activated carbon filters?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the short answer is that we will be introducing a new Environmental Contaminants Act that will address all the concerns that the Hon. Member raised which are within federal jurisdiction. Some of them, of course, are within provincial and municipal jurisdictions.

I should caution the Member, however, that even though we are very concerned, as is the Ontario Government, he should put this matter into perspective. It is not a matter of finding something in the water that was not there before. It is a matter, instead, of science reaching the point where it can detect certain things that could not be detected before. In fact, if one were to express the quantity of the substance found in terms of time instead of weight, it would be equivalent to one second in 32 centuries. In short, it is minute, it is sporadic, and it is not harmful.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE—MINISTER'S TELEX TO OIL COMPANIES

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I have recognized the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys. I thought that the Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville had asked all the questions that had to be asked about that particular question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McCurdy: He asked for a supplementary question.

Mr. Young: You don't know what he was going to ask.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys has the floor.

Mr. MacLellan: My question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister has finally admitted, through her telex yesterday to oil industry executives, that her market sensitive regime is not working and that Canadians are paying too much for gasoline. What guarantees can the Minister give that oil companies will pass along their savings to consumers, and when will this happen?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the Hon. Member is so negative about my attempts to assist Canadian consumers to receive full benefit of the world oil price decreases. I had looked for support from him on this issue.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, she has my support, if that is what she intends to do.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR PRICE GUARANTEES

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister said:

> I have communicated with industry executives to ensure that consumers get the full and fair benefit of the price declines which are in the system now.

That includes, I assume, those which are coming into the system. It is not unfair to ask her what guarantees she has that this will happen. What are these assurances, and when are Canadians going to get them?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the assurances are built into our new energy policy which is fair to consumers as well as producers, and is the opposite of the rigid regulatory system imposed by the Liberals under which gasoline prices increased 80 per cent from 32 cents a litre to 50 cents.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

WATER FILTRATION SYSTEMS IN SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment and is on the same subject as previous questions. It is an extremely crucial subject for the communities of southwestern Ontario. Is the Minister aware that Washington environmental experts have concluded that no studies whatsoever exist that probe the long-term cumulative effects of octadioxin? Will the Minister, therefore, protect our frightened communities in southwestern Ontario by share-costing with the Ontario Government the upgrading of filtration systems that are crucial in those communities?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to downplay the importance of the announcement that Jim Bradley made yesterday in Queen's Park. However, if the citizens in question are frightened, I think the Hon. Member has contributed as much as anyone else to that fright.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Murphy: Shame!

Mr. McMillan: The Hon. Jim Bradley, the Minister of the Environment of Ontario, said yesterday: "Drinking water supplies for all of these communities meet health-related objectives. I have the assurance of medical and toxicological experts that the levels do not pose a threat to human health".

The Hon. Jim Bradley made the announcement yesterday so that the information could be shared with the public in perspective. I urge the Hon. Member to take his advice. The situation is of concern in the sense that for the first time trace levels of dioxin have been found in water. Again, it is not because those substances in question were not there before; it is because science has reached the point of expertise of being able to detect them. That is the difference.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

FAMILY VIOLENCE INFORMATION CENTRE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In 1981, the Liberal Government gave $500,000 per year, for a period of five years, to the Family Violence Information Centre. The Centre takes care of battered women and women who have been sexually assaulted.

Since the Conservative Government came to power, the Centre's budget has been cut by half, one-third of the staff has been let go, and the information bulletin is no longer published. Today, it seems that the Conservative Government is about to cut the Centre's budget altogether.

Mr. Speaker, I wish the Minister would inform the House whether the Government intends to continue subsidizing the Centre or whether family violence is something we can afford to ignore.

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the specific issue which the Member raises, that of family violence, including child abuse and the related conditions, remains a priority of the Government. With regard to the Family Violence Centre in the Department of National Health and Welfare, if she looks at the figures on a year-to-year basis for the next three years, she will find them to be quite different from what she said they were.

Additionally, it is my view that we should have better information and a better approach than we have had to date. That is why I think it is my mandate, and that of the Department of National Health and Welfare, to give the very best information and to have a better system than that which was in place.

WOMEN'S REFUGE CENTRES—GOVERNMENT AID

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, women's shelters are writing us and describing their dismay at the fact that the Conservative Government is constantly cutting these budgets.

I therefore wish the Minister would give the House the assurance that he intends to continue to allocate decent amounts for operating these shelters, and otherwise, let him say he is only going to give them enough money to barely survive.

It is very important to provide protection for battered wives. After all, that was one of the Conservative Government's promises.

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, on that particular point, the response of the former Government was through the centre to which she referred. There were certain conditions and problems which were not resolved through the Canadian Assistance Plan which we have now resolved with the provinces. If the Member looks at the over-all program, she will find it to be quite different and a better situation today than when the Liberals were in government.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

ST-RAYMOND PAPER PLANT AT DESBIENS, P.Q.—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

The Minister is aware that St-Raymond Paper in Desbiens, Quebec, has been closed for fifty months and is trying to attract investor interest in this pulp and paper plant.

Although Cascades will open in Port-Cartier, does the Government intend to maintain its commitment to offer interested investors the subsidy that was to remain available until March 31, 1986?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, with regard to this type of matter, I am sure that the Hon. Member is well aware that our Department is constantly trying to interest investors in what will, hopefully, be viable enterprises in Canada. The project that he is referring to is one that we have had under study and review for some time. There is nothing to be announced at the present time, but I am certainly aware of the facts.

INQUIRY CONCERNING GOVERNMENT'S INTENDED MEASURES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister is not prepared to make a commitment in the House today, can he indicate any other measures he is going to take to save this company town of 1,500 people?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, obviously the Hon. Member had his supplementary question ready before he heard my first answer. I think that, if he reads my answer, he will see that his supplementary question is already answered.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Tuesday, January 28, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

PETITIONS

PROCESSING OF FOREST RESOURCE IN STEWART, B.C.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by almost all of the residents of Stewart, British Columbia, a wonderful little community. The petitioners humbly call upon this House to ensure that some part of the forest resource being logged in their area is processed in Stewart to create full-time jobs for the local economy.

PROTEST AGAINST JACK WEBSTER'S BCTV PROGRAM

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): I also have a petition signed by residents of the Queen Charlotte Islands, Vancouver Island and other areas of British Columbia who are concerned that Jack Webster of BCTV has repeatedly aired shows which present only one side of a very complex issue, that being Lyell Island. The petitioners call upon this House to make sure that Mr. Webster's personal vendetta against native rights and environmental groups, his fomenting of trouble and creating an atmosphere of hostility, is brought to his attention.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are always blaming the press.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, today it is again my duty to table another petition from people in the Moncton-Memramcook area and from Westmorland-Kent. These people are still worried about the situation at the CN shops, and they are asking the Government to give them the assurance that the jobs will be safe.

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and the privilege of tabling various petitions signed by a number of my constituents from the federal riding of Moncton, expressing their concern about the future of the CN shops in Moncton. They ask the Members of this House to put an end to all cuts in personnel at these shops.

TRANSPORT

CONCURRENCE IN SIXTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

That the sixth report of the Standing Committee on Transport be concurred in.

He said: Mr. Speaker, at the outset, to make sure there is no misunderstanding in this House or anywhere else, I want to say that my motion of concurrence in this report is not what I want to do.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Explain!

Mr. Benjamin: However, a rule which I have always considered to be very dumb says that the only way a report of a standing committee can be debated is by moving concurrence. This is true even if you disagree with all of it, some of it or none of it. I want to make it clear that my motion in no way indicates concurrence by my Party or by myself in the sixth report of the standing committee.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Abuse of the rules.

Mr. Benjamin: There are some items in the report we agree with. However, there are a number of items with which we profoundly disagree. As a result, we issued a minority report pointing out some of the areas where we disagree.

I want to say that I consider the time provided for the committee by this House, which really means by the Government, was not sufficient for the committee to hold hearings in other parts of Canada in order to hear all or even most of the witnesses who wanted to appear. Believe it or not, on an issue as large as this, affecting the entire economy and every region of this country, we did not have as witnesses the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association. The length of time provided for people to prepare submissions and give notice was inadequate, and that was not the fault of the committee. I want to say here and now, Sir, that all members of the committee worked diligently and long, hard hours trying to cover a subject of this size in the limited time provided.

The question which is really at stake here is that of deregulation or re-regulation or a new regulatory regime, whichever expression one chooses to use. I notice there has been much more use of the words "a new regulatory regime" over the last few weeks than there had been all last summer. Whatever you call it, we responded last August to the Government White Paper called Freedom to Move. We called it "Freedom to Manoeuvre", because it states it is:

"a trial balloon of Conservative ideology which solves fewer problems for the transportation industry than it will create. Clearly there are no pressing issues facing the transportation industry which call for actions by the Minister like those proposed in his policy paper". These proposals are for sweeping deregulation where there is no apparent need, and that clearly indicates that the paper is only a knee-jerk regurgitation of similar transportation initiatives undertaken in the U.S. by President Reagan and President Carter.

Our participation in this process—

● (1510)

Mr. St. Germain: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I hate to interrupt the Hon. Member on his excellent delivery, but it appears the Liberals have abandoned the House. Is there a particular reason?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would remind the Hon. Member that he should not reflect on who is or who is not in the House. I would like to say that there are Members from other Parties in the House.

Mr. Benjamin: And they are sitting with their natural allies, Mr. Speaker.

If I may continue, participation by members of the New Democratic Party in this whole process on the Government's White Paper has confirmed our long-held belief that there is some room for substantial improvement in Canada's transportation sector. The current regulatory environment is often cumbersome, inappropriate in some areas, and does not always produce the results intended. We recognize that in a changing world, in a changing transportation environment, regulations must keep pace. They must reflect the world of today and not of yesterday.

Let me give you an example, Mr. Speaker. Unless it has been changed and I do not know about it, under the House of Commons Act, the Constitution Act or whatever, there is still a regulation that while Members of Parliament are provided with free railway transportation, I am still entitled to check my horse in the baggage car. That is a regulation held over from before 1867 which I believe is still in place. However, if we continue down the slippery slope of deregulation, as this Government proposes, I may have to check my horse so I can get from Winnipeg to Regina in a couple or three days.

We agree that we have to propose transportation policies for the 1980s and 1990s in keeping with the nature and history of our country. Transportation policy is a policy that recognizes the important role of the private sector but that maintains the predominance of the public interest rather than private profit in directing the development of Canada's transportation sector. In essence, it has to be a policy based on re-regulation, not deregulation.

We believe the time has come for upgrading and updating our regulatory regime. We agree that the Canadian Transport Commission should be modernized and updated, its powers strengthened, its methods of operation streamlined, and that it should be more responsive to the consumer and the users of transportation in a shorter space of time than has been the experience in the past.

Much of the distrust or disbelief in the activities of the CTC over the last many years has occurred because there is a suspicion, not ill-founded, that whatever the railways or the airlines wanted they got one way or the other and sooner or later. There was not sufficient attention paid or response given to the needs of shippers and receivers or to consumers who pay the final price.

We feel that the sixth report of the Transport Committee, the minority report which my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus), and I submitted, and I believe a report from the Liberal Party, should be considered only as interim reports.

We feel that the House of Commons, with the approval of the Government, should extend the reference to the Transport Committee for further study, including permission to conduct public hearings in northern Canada and other outlying communities in southern Canada, and that the Committee be allowed to travel to the United States to gather information with respect to the Americans' experience with transportation deregulation, the number one recommendation in our minority report. The Government of Canada should undertake to have a complete independent market analysis and impact study done of the expected results of deregulation in Canada, the known results and effects of deregulation in the United States concerning all modes of transportation, including the effect on safety, security and employment prior to the drafting of any legislation.

The Government should increase funding immediately, in fact even retroactively if necessary, to provide for more inspection services, not only for the inspection and supervision of regulations regarding maintenance, safety procedures and so forth, but also of their enforcement.

If I may illustrate, Mr. Speaker, the present Government is doing no more than extending what the previous administration started with its restraint programs in 1975-1976.

Let us just look at air mode person years. Specifically, let us take general technical inspectors. The number of them for 1985-86 is 390, down 23 from 1984-85. On technical inspection—the people out on the ground—the number for 1985-86 is 201, down from 223 for 1984-85.

With or without deregulation, there is a growing volume of people travelling, a growing volume of aircraft, trucks, buses and cars in our transportation system. With or without deregulation, Sir, you have to enlarge the capability of your regulatory bodies and of the Department of Transport to inspect and enforce the regulations that are there for public safety and security.

You cannot have it both ways. I do not know of a single taxpayer of any political stripe anywhere in Canada who says that we are spending too much in the area of inspection and enforcement of regulations. In fact, taxpayers would support an increase in expenditures in that area. This nonsense about across-the-board reductions in order to satisfy the hypnotic influence of deficits is, I think, a disservice and is false economy. There are some areas in which you do not, I repeat, do not reduce expenditures. There are areas in which they must be increased. That is an area in which no Government with any conscience or feeling of responsibility could either allow or stand for reductions.

In a new regulatory regime, a re-regulated regime or a deregulated regime, a comparison of Canada with the United States is odious, as the old saying goes. The drafters of the White Paper overlooked the fact that that country has 10 times the population and more than 10 times the volume of traffic, both people and goods to move, in a smaller geography and in a milder climate. That in itself speaks volumes as to the applicability of their experience or ideological bent in Canada. The only parts of Canada which are readily comparable with the United States are the Quebec-Windsor corridor, if we are talking about rail and trucking, and Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal, and once in a while Edmonton, Calgary and Halifax. They are the only ones which are comparable. This means that three-quarters of the geography of Canada is left out, that cities such as Lethbridge, Regina, Saskatoon, Thunder Bay, North Bay, Timmins, London and Moncton are left out. If we found out anything in Washington last week, it was that deregulation in 20 cities meant a return to mediocrity and that smaller centres receive a lower quality of service. Although they sometimes received increased frequency, we are now being told that they are prepared to take 100 of those 200 cities, put them under the new regulatory regime and add 100 different cities because of what they have experienced. What applies in the United States does not apply here because most of Canada, in terms of transportation economics, is uneconomical.

In 1867 we decided that we would be a nation and that the nation as a whole would share in an equitable manner from coast to coast, from the forty-ninth parallel to the North Pole, in the cost of providing a reasonable degree of quality, safe and equitable service, and that the routes which were uneconomical would be covered both by taxpayers and by those routes which were economical. For all the criticism about cross-subsidization, if there is one thing that has worked reasonably well, it is the fact that we had, and in most cases still have an economical degree of service. If we looked at only the straight economics of it, we would pull out and leave it to jerkwater, fly by night operators who enter and exit whenever they please. Taxpayers have spent hundreds of millions of dollars on infrastructure, but under the freedom to move provision transporters can come in and pull out whenever they like. This is not only unfair to the transportation consumers who live in the communities, it is unfair to the airline or the trucking company which has built up the infrastructure and has serviced the communities for years. Such a company could have loyal customers and could have built up the business, but someone else can come in and out and skim the cream off the top. That is not free enterprise, that is not fair enterprise. It is nothing more than the worst kind of disservice to the people of the country and to our nationhood. If that is what the Government means by freedom to move—

Mr. Nowlan: It is not in our report.

Mr. Benjamin: Freedom to move is very plain. If there is one thing sure about freedom to move, it is the freedom to enter and exit. I admit that even the minority reports are lacking because we did not have enough time to go into that matter. However, we heard evidence from witnesses who told us what would happen.

What applies to a smaller or middle-sized city in the United States of 300,000 to 600,000 people applies to a community in Canada of some 5,000 to 20,000 people. That is the proportion. In the name of free enterprise, those who promote it and want freedom to move say that we can have champagne ideas in a beer market, in a market which will perhaps allow one or two airlines or trucking companies to break even or make a buck and provide a reasonable service. They believe that anyone can come in, divide it up in four or five ways and take turns going broke, take turns entering and exiting.

I do not want Air Canada or PWA to exit from the Cities of Regina, London, Moncton or Gander. They have provided a service in good and bad times. I resent the outfits or the johnny-come-latelies that want to start up airlines or trucking companies coming in for a few months of the year, skimming the cream off the top, and then existing. The company or business which was there in the first place is then left holding the bag and is forced to exit. In that event we end up with another area where we return to mediocrity in terms of quality, quantity and service, which we should work at to provide for every region of the country.

If it were left to free market forces, we might as well vacate three-quarters of the geography of our country, move to Vancouver, Montreal or perhaps a couple of other spots, and let the rest of it sit there. That is not what we are about, and we never have been. I do not suggest for a moment that that is how the Minister feels, but it is inevitable if it is left to free market forces or to so-called will of the market. When something like transportation, which is an essential public utility, essential to the public good and the national well-being, is left to the so-called free market forces, a major part of the country and at least half of our population will not be as well served as they were in the past, despite the warts and things which were not as good as we would have liked.

I am not denying that improvements and changes could be made, but I hope the Government considers the minority reports as interim reports and lets us continue our work. The topic is too large for us to report on it in a matter of three months or four months. I am not suggesting six years or seven years, as was suggested by the MacPherson Royal Commission, but we should have a year or a year and a half at most. We need another year before a new national transportation Act is brought before the House so that the seven provinces and two territories will have a chance to be heard and to present their views. Then we can say that we did a full and a more complete job.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I am wondering if I could ask my colleague if he could indicate to this House what he sees the ramifications of confidential rate setting to be on the movement of goods in this country as well as what the impact on the consumers will be.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, time did not permit me to get to every mode of transportation. I appreciate my colleague reminding me. Confidential rates are anti-competitive, anti-free enterprise and anti-free market. Confidential rates fly in the face of the principles espoused by my hon. friends opposite. Confidential rates provide advantages for large shippers and receivers. They mean exactly that, small shippers and receivers, manufacturers and processors will not be able to find out what those rates are. In actual practice confidential rates leads to corporate raiding. They can lead to fraud and bribery. I suppose that to get a piece of a $5 million market, a $5,000 or $50,000 little bribe would get you the information from a freight traffic manager from your competitor. But it flies in the fact of our principles.

We suggest that we broaden the whole principle of agreed charges in which you require railroads and trucking companies to compete, that one railroad or one trucking company cannot have the same agreed charges as another, and that the small shipper should have has exactly the same opportunity as a large shipper under a system of agreed charges. Under a system of confidential rates that a small shipper, receiver, processor and manufacturer would not get the same kind of deal. The Freedom to Move provisions even propose that you could have a confidential rate if you are a big boy and a big railroad or a big trucking company, and they would allow for rebates. That is the same as kickbacks. Under the former provisions of the Criminal Code that was illegal, but that is allowed it is foreseen, under confidential rates. You allow a rebate, a kickback. If that is free enterprise, I do not want any part of it. If that is taking part in the free market forces, that is nonsense, that is piracy if I ever saw it.

Mr. Tobin: I want to congratulate the Member who has just spoken for raising before the Canadian public his legitimate concerns about deregulation in particular on the air side. I want to say to the Member that he knows, as do all members of the committee, that one of the primary reasons there were minority reports on this government document called Freedom to Move, the Minister's white paper, was the fact that many members of the committee, and particular those in my Party and his Party, believed that the committee had not done its full homework. He knows that, for example, ignoring the U.S. deregulation experience south of the border, doing no research, making no visits, talking to no officials, doing no exploration was almost an act of extreme irresponsibility on the part of the committee, as was the presumption that and then presuming it could comment intelligently on deregulation for Canada.

Last week the Member who has just spoken, myself and a number of Members from the Conservative Party, who are also members of the Transport Committee, had an opportunity, through another vehicle, an exchange program, to be in Washington and to talk to many people who are experts in the field; Congressmen who are chairmen and vice-chairmen of various committees concerned, Republicans and Democrats, industry people, consultants and so on. I want to ask the Member whether he came away from that experience with the kind of feeling that I had. Whatever my reservations about freedom to move and unfeetered deregulation being introduced in Canada on the air side, I was not prepared for the kind of horror stories we heard in Washington. I came away with one compelling desire, and that is, to ask the Minister and the Government to make provision for the entire committee to go back down to Washington and repeat the program, hopefully in more detail, that Members of Parliament who were there last week went through. I believe that all Members, regardless of Party stripe, can benefit greatly from a visit to Washington, and perhaps will come back with some very strong and clear signals for the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) before he proceeds with this deregulation package, in particular as it pertains to the air side. I would like to hear the Hon. Member's comments, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Benjamin: I suppose the one feeling I had even before we left was it was that something of a sad commentary on our parliamentary system as it is functioning at present that we had to rely on an outside organization to see to it that some of us on all sides of the House got down to Washington for three days last week to the centre for parliamentary exchange, which was financed mostly by private contributions. I am sure my colleagues who were with me are as appreciative as I am of that opportunity. Three days was not enough time. We were only able to look at the air side. It did prove to me, Sir, that we need many days, not only to continue our study of the air side but also of the whole area of trucking, railroads, freight rates, marine. We have just scratched the surface, and that is why our main recommendation—I can remind my colleague in the Liberal Party—is that these be considered as interim reports, and that the House of Commons, at the behest of the Government, grant us an extended period of time to continue our hearings and bring in another report several months down the road in which we will have had an opportunity to look at the U.S. experience.

I recall what witnesses in Halifax, Stephenville and a few other places in Newfoundland had to say about the situation in Maine and Minnesota where the population is thin, there is a northern type of climate, and the communities are small, and what their experience there was. There are a couple of states, for example, the experiences of which are applicable to most of Canada. We need to have a lot more insight into and examination of those areas than we have had. I am not faulting the members of the standing committee, Sir, they all worked very hard, and so did the staff. We did not have enough time, and we all know it. We all need to go at this some more. I hope the Government will agree to that.

Mr. Nowlan: I would like to ask a question to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). In view of the question from the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin), two Members who were very involved in the Transport Committee, I have some comments to make about his interesting remarks that led off the motion to concur in the sixth report of the Transport Committee, notwithstanding the fact that both opposition Parties walked out when the crunch came and we were supposed to vote. I will come to that later. My question is directed to the Hon. Member for Regina West: What hat was he wearing when he replied to the question from the Hon. Member for Humber-Port-au-Port-St. Barbe, the hat of Doctor Jekyll or the one of Mr. Hyde? In his remarks he talked about how the United States was so different. Then he got the set-up question from his friend about the American experience. So really, will he cut the wheat from the chaff? If the American experience is so different, and if in the American experience there is no CN and no Air Canada, nor are there recommendations from the sixth report, which are not even anywhere in the deregulation environment in the United States, why is he even wasting time in this House by talking about the American experience?

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, it was not me or the New Democratic Party who used the United States as an example. We have been confronted continually from day one since the White Paper came down about the glories and the nirvana of deregulation in the United States. We have had it from Hon. Members in this House, people in the transportation sector of this country and the media. It was not we who started that. If the example that has been put to us time and time again since last July is such a good example, then surely it is incumbent upon the Government and the Parliament of Canada to see to it that if there is any validity to the American deregulation experience and if it is applicable to Canada, we should damned well look into it and report back to Parliament about it.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it is very difficult for a relatively junior Member such as I to speak after an Hon. Member with the experience and the great oratorical skills of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) has spoken. He was so articulate in putting the case. Indeed, the Hon. Member is absolutely correct. It is the Government of Canada that has been telling members of the Standing Committee on Transport and indeed the population of Canada over these last number of months not to worry about the negative effects of deregulation and to look at the success story in the United States.

We were led to believe that people in the United States were so excited and in such a state of nirvana about the great positive effects of deregulation, particularly on the air side, that they were flying without the benefit of wings. Reality was a sobering experience for Members of Parliament of all three Parties when they arrived in Washington last week.

Since many of us come from outlying regions, perhaps we had a bit of a regional bias about deregulation. Perhaps we were concerned that it would be beneficial to highly populated areas and not so beneficial to less populated areas. We went to Washington expecting to hear from American politicians and chairmen of aviation committees, both Republican and Democrat, that there is some dichotomy in their point of view. We felt that Democrats might be a little critical of deregulation and Republicans might say that it was a wonderful thing. That is not what happened.

Going to Washington was a frightening experience for Hon. Members from both sides of the House of Commons. The reality of the deregulation experience in the United States versus the scenario that has been painted for Canadians by the Minister and his officials are as different as day and night.

We have been told that fares have generally decreased throughout the United States air industry system and that consumers have been the big beneficiaries of deregulation. That is all we have been told. When we talk about safety, the Government says: "Don't talk about safety, we are engaging in economic deregulation, not deregulation of safety, so let us not talk about it". When we talk about the nature of Canada and the fact that it is a nation of 25 million people spread over the second largest land mass in the world, the Government says: "Don't worry about that. The free market will determine that Canadians are served somehow, some way no matter where they live".

What was the reality of the American experience? The United States is a country with a population 10 times the population of Canada. We heard some very frightening and alarming testimony from the people to whom we spoke in Washington. The American Government's own report produced by the Office of General Accounting on November 6, 1985, indicates that between 1979 and 1984, the airlines in the United States lost $4 billion. Listening to the horror stories of airlines popping up one day and disappearing the next, airlines going bankrupt and fly-by-nighters appearing and disappearing was akin to imagining a crap shoot. That is the way airline services were being provided to the people of the United States.

The same report indicated that more small communities will likely lose air services when federal subsidies end in 1988. Those small communities still getting air services are getting them because of federal subsidies. That is the American Government's own report.

American Congressmen did a wise thing. They went out into the country to hear from people who had been affected by the airline deregulation, the nirvana that has been described by Hon. Members opposite on occasion. What did the people have to say about it? I have a statement here from the mayor of a typical small American community. In the United States, a small community is one with a population of 50,000 to 200,000. Where I come from, when we talk about a population of 200,000 we are talking about the capital. When we are talking about a population of 50,000, we are talking about a city. When we are talking about a population of 10,000, we are talking about a good sized town. However, in the United States small centres have populations of 50,000 to 200,000.

Peggy Mensinger, the Mayor of the City of Modesto, California, when talking about airline deregulation, had this to say:

> In a little over three years and six airlines later, we now have a pure jet airline service back and have hopes of restoring the market that the four bankrupt commuters destroyed. Our enplanements dropped from a peak of 57,000 in 1977 to just over 21,000 in 1982 as a result of deregulation.

She talked about these great commuter airlines which are supposed to replace the jets, something about which the Minister speaks so fondly. It was supposed to be a new type of industry. This is what she had to say about those commuter airlines:

> Public rejection of the small commuter aircraft plus fourteen schedule changes in the eighteen months, frequent cancellations, and little or no concern for the passengers caused our annual enplanements to drop from 38,236 in 1979 to 29,750 in 1980.

A U.S. Congressman appearing before the committee which was looking at the effects of airline deregulation spoke of the plight of small rural communities. He said:

> We have had one airline after another, attempting to replace the service United abandoned, go bankrupt or get into severe financial difficulties so that service has been disrupted or reduced.
> All of the newly-designated EAS carriers have started off well, but something happens to them after that—they begin expanding too fast, their management may have miscalculated their expenses, a recession hits. All of these factors have hurt, not only the airlines attempting to provide service but also the harried Valley air passenger.

Again, statistics provided by the General Accounting Office in the United States show us that in the smaller centres with populations of 50,000 to 200,000, 82 community airports have lost all service. Nothing is flying, propellor or jet. In several hundred more small communities, there has been a dramatic reduction in the level of service. One might say that that is a small price to pay for deregulation because there has been a reduction in fares for people who live in the larger centres.

Let me tell the House what else happened as a result of deregulation. While there was a reduction in air fares in the larger centres and heavily travelled runs of the United States, the runs that would be the equivalent of the Toronto to Montreal run, in the smaller centres and the less travelled routes, there was a corresponding increase in fares. There now exists the anomaly in the United States of one being able to fly on certain days of the week with certain package deals from New York to Los Angeles for $99, no frills, in a plane on which I would not sit, while one can fly from New York City to a town in New York State, only a couple of hundred miles away, for $300. There is now an anomaly which exists in the United States where there is a three-point system. On a carrier which flies from point A to point B to point C the cost of a ticket to fly from point A to point B is $250. The cost is only $150 to fly to points A, B and C. Thus people flying to the point B destination buy a ticket to point C, the farthest destination on the route, get off at point B and throw away the coupon. Where is the fairness in that type of system?

There is another big, bad word which the Minister and Hon. Members do not want us to talk about. It is safety. They say: "Don't worry about safety. Let's not talk about it".

Mr. Forrestall: What are you talking about? It's the most important element of it.

Mr. Tobin: Every single individual we talked to in the United States, such as representatives of the major airline carriers, in particular, the President of the Airline Association of the country, Paul Ignatius, the Republican Vice-Chairman of the Aviation Committee from New York, Representative Molinari, the Democratic Deputy Chairman, James Oberstar, the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Aviation in Congress, Congressman Mineta, people we heard in confidence at closed-door meetings, such as the Vice-President of one of the major American airlines—every single person we talked to told us that safety in the American airline industry has suffered. Nobody wants to advertise that fact. No one wants to tell people that it is less safe than it was before. An industry which used to operate far and away, above and beyond the standards set by the Federal Aviation Administration, operates, we now see, at the fringe of the minimum requirements on safety required by the FAA. Congressman Molinari from New York said that in his judgment the airlines are now operating below the minimum standards.

Just how strongly does he feel about this subject? On November 14, 1985 he wrote a letter to the President of the United States, a letter signed by 77 members of the House of Representatives of the United States. The matter about which he writes is one which is presently under review in the United States. In fact, there is now a Bill before Congress with respect to it. What does he say in the letter? He states:

> As Members of Congress, we are very concerned that the safety of the air traffic control system is dangerously stressed because of the inexperience of a large percentage of our current controller force.
> The problems in our air traffic control system are very real and they are to the point where passenger safety is being directly affected. We have a system stretched beyond its human capacity and an FAA unwilling to even acknowledge that serious problems exist.

That is what he says about the air traffic control situation in the United States. Whay I have just read from is a letter sent to the President of the United States petitioning him to provide immediately an additional 1,000 air traffic controllers in that country. The problem with respect to air traffic controllers was exacerbated by a strike of controllers who were later fired by the President of the United States.

Mr. Nowlan: A totally different environment, and you know it.

Mr. Tobin: The Hon. Member said that it is a totally different environment.

Mr. Nowlan: Yes, it is.

Mr. Tobin: The Government of Canada promised to bring in airline deregulation in this country this year and a month-and-a-half ago it laid off air traffic controllers at Pearson International Airport, the airport which is projected to have the biggest increase in traffic in a deregulated environment. I ask the Hon. Member: Is that a different situation?

Mr. Nowlan: Yes.

Mr. Tobin: I can tell the Hon. Member what everyone in the United States told us. They told us we cannot begin to contemplate going to a deregulated environment with anyone who is fit, willing, able, daring enough and has a licence to fly an airplane until we have first made sure that we have adequate inspectors and the policing ability in our regulatory agency to look after that type of fluid environment. That is what we were told. They told us to hang on to our air traffic controllers and to hire more. They told us to begin to train more because we will need them. We were told that that was the experience in the United States and we should learn by it. It is not a totally different situation. We would be negligent as a Parliament even to consider entertaining particulars on the air side in terms of new legislation and new regulations in an unfettered free enterprise zone in the air industry in this country until we have gone to the U.S. and learned from the experience there, be it positive or negative. We have not done that. The Minister would serve Parliament and, indeed, Canadians well, were he to give all members of the committee an opportunity to examine that type of experience.

The Auditor General in a report to Parliament last June told us—and all Members of Parliament have access to his report—that there is not available in Canada today adequate inspection staff even to inspect every aviation company in Canada.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is because of you guys. You hypocrite!

Mr. Tobin: That is what the Auditor General said.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is because of you guys. He is not reporting on us; he is reporting on you.

Mr. Tobin: I would like to say something to the Minister. Whatever the cause—

Mr. Mazankowski: Take the blame and don't be such a hypocrite.

Mr. Tobin: I would like to say something to the Minister. Whatever the cause is, and if that is the fact, then is it not in same to move into a deregulated environment where more carriers will spring up overnight—and applications are already flooding in—until we first provide ourselves with the ability to inspect the existing number of carriers? By his angry outburst the Minister confirms that that is a fact. Yet he persists in proceeding with deregulation at a time when he is cutting back staff in his own Department.

Mr. Mazankowski: It's because you are misleading. That is why. Why don't you be truthful and honest?

Mr. Tobin: The Minister ought to acknowledge that, since I don't particularly give a damn—

Mr. Mazankowski: Why don't you be honest?

Mr. Tobin: I don't particularly give a damn why, how, when or where—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. There will be an opportunity for questions and comments. I hope that Hon. Members will allow the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) to finish his speech. He does have two or three minutes remaining.

Mr. Tobin: If the previous administration is at fault for not hiring enough inspectors, including this humble back-bencher from that administration, I apologize, while recognizing that that is the situation today. Nevertheless, the Minister wants to proceed with a deregulated environment. That, Sir, cannot be justified in any way, shape or form.

I have spent most of my time talking about airline deregulation, bursting the bubble of the U.S. example and providing Hon. Members with sober and serious fodder for contemplation in this House.

Mr. Mazankowski: Why don't you be serious?

Mr. Tobin: I wish to make a short comment—

Mr. Mazankowski: Why don't you be serious?

Mr. Tobin: I wish to make a short comment about railroad deregulation. I want to tell the Hon. Minister that if he believes and suspects that he may give in to the pressure which is currently being exerted on him, his Government and his colleagues in Cabinet by Canadian Pacific to do away with joint line rights, which is proposed in the Minister's package, then he will find a huge body of opinion in the industry in the country which currently supports his initiatives which will now rise up and denounce this package.

Mr. Mazankowski: I do not need your advice on that.

Mr. Tobin: I hope the Minister, who has done the right thing in proposing joint line rates in his White Paper, will stand fast and refuse to bend to the pressure being brought to bear on him by the huge CP conglomerate which is exercising every means at its disposal to have the Minister change his mind. I hope the Minister will follow his original instincts with respect to joint line rates. I say that to the Minister by way of cautionary note.

Finally, I would like to say to Members of the House that slowly but surely the people of Canada are becoming aware of the reality of airline deregulation in the United States and in this country. Canada is not just a miniature model of the U.S. Our industry in this country is distinct. Canadians realize that transportation policies since the first days of Confederation were used to shape this nation. John A. Macdonald did not build a railway because it made economic sense. He built it because he knew he had to have a link from sea to shining sea. He did it because it was a measure by which to develop Canadian unity and continuity. If there is anyone in this place who believes that Canada has changed so much since 1867 that we can leave to the market-place a decision with respect to who will be served by what type of transportation service at what cost and expect to have citizens feel a part of what it means to be a Canadian no matter where they live, then those people are crazy. We cannot say to Canadians in the North that their service is uneconomical so they will have to be isolated and cut off. We cannot say to Canadians in Atlantic Canada that their numbers are so small and their industry so weak that they can take the next wheelbarrow to Toronto when they go on business. We cannot say to the people in western Canada, who depend upon branchlines in order to continue to be successful farmers, that their branchlines are closed because the railroads have decided they are not important compared to the bottom line of their statement at the end of the year. If that is the mesure this Minister is proposing—and indeed that has been the U.S. experience—then I warn him it is a measure fraught with great political danger for the Government.

● (1600)

Mr. Angus: I ask through you, Mr. Speaker, is it not true that the move towards deregulation was started well before the Conservative administration took over? All we have really been doing is watching Conservatives, who are really Liberals in a hurry, accelerate the process.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, until a few moments ago I believed that, like his colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus) was a serious member of the committee and one who wanted to make a contribution. I see now that this is not to be. I say that with great regret because I find him to be a very humorous fellow to spend time with.

The Liberal administration in May, 1984 issued new directives with respect to airline regulation which began a process of deregulation. It provided for a regulatory framework which gave airlines more flexibility. There is no question but that the Government of the day—and I would propose following that course—moved into a less regulated regime. The spokesmen for transport in the New Democratic Party indicated that the time to do that had come. Perhaps the Hon. Member ought to check with his colleague.

There is a large difference between cutting some of the red tape and loosening Government regulations, much of which were no longer relevant, and making a provision on the airline side—and I think the Hon. Member would agree with this—that exit and entry of airlines in whatever communities can be done with only 60 days' notice. In other words, if an airline wants to pull out of a northern Ontario town, a town in Atlantic Canada or a town in the Prairies, it does so by simply saying it is leaving on 60 days' notice, and there is absolutely no method of appeal. No one has a chance to say: "Wait a minute. What about the economy of our community? We as Canadians think we deserve some kind of basic service". That no longer applies. The Hon. Member knows very well that under the old requirements of Transport Canada, public necessity and convenience determined whether or not the licence was granted. Under the formula of the Minister, the Government takes the approach that transportation is a derived demand. If the market-place says there is a need for a service, there will be one, if they pay enough for it. If it does not, there is no aircraft. It is a fundamentally different approach and I think my hon. friend would acknowledge that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Are there further questions or comments? Debate.

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Mr. Speaker, I must say I rise today with mixed emotions. I am glad, in a sense, that we are debating a very important report of the Committee on Transport, of which I have the honour to be chairman, although the genesis of the motion does leave me perplexed. The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) moved the motion and, as I understood some of the remarks by the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin), I gathered he sort of went along with the motion. The motion is to move concurrence in the sixth report of the Standing Committee on Transport. The motion is not to dissect and define air deregulation in the United States. But until the very last few moments of the speech of the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe, I did not hear a word on the sixth report of the Standing Committee on Transport. I will give full credit to the Hon. Member for Regina West. While I may disagree with him with all the passion I sometimes can muster, at least he is consistent in his direction. It may be a direction which goes down backside on a dead-end street, but at least he is consistent and he did talk about the sixth report of the committee.

That is why I am perplexed. Both of those gentlemen, spokesmen for their respective Parties, walked out when the crunch came in committee in camera, and did not vote one way or the other on the recommendations in the sixth report of the standing committee. Those Hon. Members know that the committee moved quite a way between the first draft report on October 15 and the report which was finally tabled in this House by myself on December 18. Notwithstanding, there was no opposition vote on any of the recommendations when the time for votes came. So I was frankly amazed to hear, out of the blue, a motion today to concur in a report which both opposition Parties did not find reason to vote on one way or the other.

We speak about parliamentary reform from time to time. We are on television now. I can understand the confusion of the public out there about this type of procedural hypocrisy in not participating in the votes and recommendations when the report is being written, yet, for whatever reasons—and I cannot impute motives to Hon. Members in the House of Commons, be they good or bad—out of the blue comes a motion to concur in a report which those Hon. Members did not have the guts to vote on behind committee doors. If I could say the words, that would be parliamentary hypocrisy—I guess I can say those words but I certainly could not say that those Hon. Members were hypocrites. Therefore, I will not trespass on the good graces of the Chair. That is why I cannot understand—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order.

Mr. Nowlan: —their ironic, paradoxical position in talking about the sixth report.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There is a point of order from the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin).

Mr. Nowlan: Here we go again, a lot of flurry with no substance.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, my colleague, for whom I normally have great respect when he is in a more passive frame of mind, is, first of all, imputing motives to Hon. Members.

Mr. Nowlan: I did not.

Mr. Tobin: Second, when an Hon. Member refuses to discuss the substance of airline deregulation and gets into technicalities as a response to some very good points made by two previous speakers, we know he is really a stick bouncing around in an empty barrel and makes a lot of noise.

Mr. Blaikie: That's not a bad comment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member has been in the Chamber for a long time. I admire him and know how far he can go and how far he cannot. And I know he knows how far he can go, therefore, he was treading very lightly. But I would like to listen to the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan).

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, I am glad I can get on the trail, the railway line or the airline, and get back to the sixth report of the Standing Committee on Transport. I must say that I do find it difficult as chairman of the committee to be critical of the remarks I heard from the two previous speakers because both of those individuals did contribute very constructively to the work of the committee in the examination of witnesses and in helping to write the report, and so on.

As I started to say before I was rudely interrupted by the Hon. Member, I remember an admonition from my sixth grade teacher, who did not have a university education and taught everything by rote. Every time I listen to the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe I think of her homily "empty vessels make the most sound". I must say I compliment the Hon. Member on the vastness of his vessel and, sometimes, the timber of his sound. But regardless of those rhetorical flourishes and parliamentary points on the floor of this august Chamber, I do want to compliment both the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe and the Hon. Member for Regina West, who did contribute in a constructive way to the production and recommendations of this report. Together with Members of my Party, they produced a report which differed from the Freedom to Move White Paper, and they were not all the bogeymen and men of straw which the Hon. Member for Regina West raised in his raving oratory in the earlier minutes of this debate. We produced a report that modified and restricted some of the demands of the market-place.

Members of the committee, who are not complete imbeciles, regardless of which Party they are from, know that there are not true market-place areas all across the country. That is why the Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), in one of the key recommendations, wanted to make sure that low density areas which do not have market-places of Toronto, Vancouver, and Montreal, would be protected with regard to the services they presently have. The Opposition did not want to vote on one recommendation of the report. Members walked out of the committee room when it got too warm. However, this is not the time of truth for Members of the Government. We will wait and see what the Minister produces in his legislation. There may very well be differences.

That, quite frankly, is why I, and other Members of the committee, intend to speak on this motion, which has come out of the blue, almost by surprise, from an Opposition that did not even vote for a recommendation. Now they are trying to agree with all the recommendations or to embarrass the Government and the Minister, for whom individually they have respect, and tie his hands with regard to the legislation that he and his officials are now drafting as a result of this report. This White Paper Freedom to Move was released on July 15, and the Transport Committee was seized with it on October 15, I believe, and produced a report before Christmas. I was the chairman of that committee, Mr. Speaker, and it was a good committee. Frankly, we produced a very good report.

Once again with regard to parliamentary reform, one of the reasons I like to stay around here is to ensure that we have true parliamentary reform to allow Members to voice their individual thoughts, whether they are in Government or not, as long as they do not defeat the Government on tax Bills, votes on the Budget, or votes on speeches from the Throne. I hope to see the day when I will be able to stand in the House and rail against a Government, if I am a Government Member, as long as it does not defeat the Government. That is the type of reform that will make this place live.

However, I started to have some doubts about the full extent of parliamentary reform when I listened to the speeches of the two previous speakers today. They both took an emotional and ideological bent that they never fully expressed in committee, the proceedings of which are not broadcast on television. I do not want to impute motives, but the Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) talked entirely about the American system and reflected on his experience of the Washington trip last week. He referred to the sixth report of the Transport Committee only in the last few minutes of his contribution. Members of the parliamentary reform committee, as well as Members of the House, must wonder if the televising of committees will be the be-all and end-all that some Members think it will.

Between October 15 and the time that we tabled the report in December, we had constructive criticism and penetrating examination of witnesses. There was not too much rhetorical dialogue in attempts to make points for the cameras rather than contributing to the substance of the debate at hand. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) and others should ensure that parliamentary reform does not distort the system completely. I was a member of the committee on parliamentary reform which helped to bring television into this Chamber. I think we had to do that because it was part of the reality of the day.

However, I wonder whether television in committees will permit the serious and constructive contribution from all Members which we had in the deliberations on this issue, or whether it will distort the whole procedure. If the contribution of the Hon. Member for Regina West and that of the Hon. Member for Humber-Port and Port-St. Barbe are any indication, I certainly hope that television will be excluded from committees in order to maintain constructive criticism and contribution from all Members and to avoid trying to make points for the camera, to enable us to produce a proper report which will help the Minister produce a proper Bill.

I have the greatest of confidence in the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski). I think that members of the Opposition did themselves a disservice by not repeating things they have said privately and in committee. During their contributions they could have taken a moment to compliment the Minister, regardless of whether or not they agreed with the Freedom to Move White Paper. They should have at least given him credit for not producing this paper behind closed doors. There were contributions and much individual involvement by responsible members of the transportation industry across the country. The Minister released this document on July 15 for public scrutiny and response, and there were responses.

I am not going to waste time giving credit to his officials. Mr. Keith Thompson had a dialogue with many people in the country on the Freedom to Move paper. I do not know everything that happened, but perhaps it was the dialogue with those affected in the industry which caused this to go before committee. There has never been any hesitation from the Minister in ensuring that the committee was seized of it at a certain time. To put it conservatively, our time reference was short, and I will come back to that.

I am glad there are a couple of Ministers in the House right now. The Government must stop saying that we inherited a mess. Of course we inherited a mess. That is why we got the crazy mandate that we did. The people knew that there was such a mess. I sometimes wish I could answer a question. After 17 months I would not always retort that our problems are due to the mess that we inherited. It is because of that mess that we got the massive mandate that we did get.

The way in which the Minister publicized the Freedom to Move paper and had the committee travel across the country, albeit in a restricted way due to the time reference, is much more positive, democratic, and parliamentary than unilateral 20 per cent chops of VIA rail, ignoring even the body that was supposed to look after it, the CTC. I had great respect for the Hon. Jean Luc Pepin, but he got carried away with his chopping without referring it for public discourse.

Despite the perils that he knew he might experience, the Minister threw this to the committee with no restrictions. In fact, as Members know, he wrote a letter to the committee amplifying the Freedom to Move paper and asking us to take on six other items which we touched upon in our report. He wanted to ensure that there was full discussion and full clarification of what he wanted to do, that is, to come up with a new national transportation Act. The majority of the witnesses whom we heard were in favour of the fundamental principles that we tried to reflect in our sixth report. The message was to get on with the job notwithstanding the words which the Hon. Member for Regina West coined, "yes, but". You are for the principle, but what about the implementation?

This, of course, is what amazes me about the motion today. The opposition Members did not even have the guts to stay in the room to vote on this. They moved the motion on the recommendations which, frankly, are very reasonable. Yet they walked out of the room and did not vote. They did not wait to see what legislation the Minister was going to produce.

There is no doubt that the committee operated under time restraints between October 15 an December 18. However, I give credit to the members of the committee, especially the Opposition Members, having been in opposition myself, along with the Hon. Member for Halifax—no, Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall).

Mr. Angus: How long have you guys been in the House together?

Mr. Nowlan: We change our ridings every so often. We have been in the House for 20 years, and I do not usually have to talk to him officially. I can usually say "Mike" or "Mr. Forrestall", but that is not parliamentary. I know your riding. It is Thunder Bay-Atikokan, I think. I do not usually refer to my colleagues formally when I have been in the House with them for 20 years. That is why I got hung up on his riding. However, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East knows, as do I, the procedural hurdles opposition Members could have thrown in the committee's path between October 15 and the tabling of this report. That is why I accept a lot of the rhetoric today. I know we are in an adversarial debate today. I really want to compliment the Members.

The report talks about joint uses of track; goodness gracious, we would not even have been on the track had the Members thrown in all the procedural hurdles and short circuits they could have thrown in. We would not have produced a report at all. So I really want to compliment them for not throwing sand in the gears. They knew, certainly the NDP Members knew, that they were not going to be able to buy this report in total, but I was really amazed at Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

I want to say this to the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe and the Hon. Member for Regina West. Let us not blame deregulation on the President of the U.S. We all know that this started long before he came along. It started under a fellow named Jimmy Carter, if I remember.

Mr. Benjamin: I said that.

Mr. Nowlan: If you read our report you will find that the first Act concerning deregulation was in 1978. There was another one in 1980. It is so easy to muddy the issue, to set up straw men and then knock them down. It is not Ronald Reagan who brought deregulation to Canada; it is the reality of the times.

I would like to point out that the committee heard from 95 organizations and 177 individual witnesses in that relatively short period of two months. We sat long hours. The chairman exercised his privilege and we eliminated lunch and dinner hours. We also found that Members' questions were inversely proportional to the length of time the committee sat. The longer we sat, the shorter the quesions. After six or seven o'clock the questions became rather short.

Are you indicating, Mr. Speaker, that my time is getting rather short? I am very amazed at that because I have not really got started. However, out of respect for the Chair I would not want to trespass too far. I will conclude by saying that I would have liked to have had a more relaxed time frame. It would have been nice to go to the seven provinces we could not get to. A deliberate choice was made to hear national briefs from Ontario and Quebec here in Ottawa. It was not a happy or easy choice. There were complaints from the Government side, especially from colleagues of mine from Quebec, who wanted to know why we were not going to Montreal. Colleagues from Ontario wanted to know why we were not going to Toronto. However, if Hon. Members look at the report, I venture to say after hearing from 95 organizations and 177 witnesses, that there is not one new thought or proposition left out there to be heard even if we sat for another six months. We heard from A to Z.

Are you getting impatient, Mr. Speaker? I am amazed at how fast the time went by.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): No, I am not getting impatient. The Hon. Member's time has expired. However, there is a period for questions and comments.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I will try to be succinct in my question and perhaps the Hon. Member will be succinct in his answer so that we can hear from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie).

I agree with the chairman of the committee that there was a good working environment in that committee. All Members from the three Parties were doing their part to achieve consensus in drafting the report. I think we were making tremendously good progress. I take some pride, as I am sure do members of the NDP, in having a role to play in the drafting of the report of that committee. However, the Hon. Member asked why I stood up and talked not about the report but only about my experience in the U.S. That makes the point precisely. The chairman of the committee admitted that time was restricted. He has admitted, in fact apologized on several occasions, graciously I might add, to provincial Governments because we could not go to their province. That is precisely the point. We did not have a chance to discuss the American experience despite all the claims that their experience was a great one. We were not given permission, much less the time and resources, to go to the U.S. That was denied not only to Liberal or NDP Members, but to Progressive Conservative Members of that committee. So if he wonders why I stood today and used the opportunity to talk about what I heard or saw in the U.S., that is precisely the reason. Until today no member of that committee has been available in this House or in committee to talk in any direct way about what we heard or saw of the U.S. experience.

I will tell the chairman that I am not holus-bolus opposed to changes in the current regulations. Changes have to be made. However, I want to make sure that we make changes which serve the country. We have to recognize the distribution of population and the geograhic differences in this country. We want to make changes which will not negatively affect safety. I do not doubt the Minister's best intentions in this regard. I do not doubt he means it when he says he will not allow a reduction in the level of safety in the airline industry or any other industry. I also believe that the American planners who brought in deregulation were equally sincere when they said there would not be a reduction in safety. However, there has been a reduction in safety, not because people are devious or insincere, but because they were not prepared for deregulation. There are some lessons we can learn from the Americans in that regard.

Given the spirit of the committee that we worked on together, given that the Minister has told us that legislation will not be introduced until April, does the Hon. Member not think that it would be appropriate for the committee to convene and spend perhaps two, three or four days in Washington in order to gain the benefit of their experience as we go through clause-by-clause study of the Bill when it comes forward? I ask that not in a confrontational way but with a genuine desire to improve the Minister's Bill.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, I will be even briefer. In the spirit of the committee, not in the spirit of the rhetoric we have all used here this afternoon, my answer would be this. The report of the committe, on page 41, repeats the clear admonition of the Minister that he would like to indicate unequivocally that the Government will neither propose nor present any regulatory reform which might be detrimental to safety standards. The Member well knows that it was as a result of the suggestion of the Hon. Member for Regina West and the contribution by the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe that we beefed up Recommendations 42 and 43 in terms of safety.

However, I will want to see the legislation. There may be the proper opportunity once we see the legislation, especially if it deviates fundamentally from some of the recommendations on safety in the report, to go the United States. The Member knows, as I know, that the United States is very different. We have not had a president execute a presidential decree to fire all the air traffic controllers. As I understand it—not having been in Washington last week but having been there before and having studied domestic air traffic policy with the Hon. Member for Regina West a year before and having read a little—the domestic air traffic control problem in the U.S. is part of the problem of safety in the U.S. more than deregulation.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I have a two-part question for the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) who has treated us to his usual variety of creative syntax, innovative arrangement of concepts and words and his usual convoluted logic.

He said that opposition Members on the committee—and this is a very curious phrase—did not have the guts to vote behind closed doors.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blaikie: That is a very strange concept indeed, Mr. Speaker. It seems to me that what would take guts would be to vote out in the open on the recommendations of the committee. That is exactly what opposition Members of the committee wanted Government Members to do. They wanted them to be on the record as to what they voted for and what they voted against. Government Members on the committee prevented that.

Could the Hon. Member explain how he could have the nerve to say that somebody did not have the guts to vote behind closed doors? Where does he get that kind of logic from?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blaikie: And I am not finished yet, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blaikie: Then he said that the Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) was waxing eloquent and was ideological about the debate. It is an ideological debate, whether the Member likes it or not.

Mr. Nowlan: I said consistent.

Mr. Blaikie: I think it is quite unfair. He knows the Member for Regina West as well as I do. He has worked with him over the years. He knows that the Member for Regina West did not say anything here today that he has not said in committee, on the hustings or in this House. It is quite unfair for the Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants to imply that somehow the Member for Regina West is surprising the House with his views. These are views that he has consistently held. I do not know anybody who knows more or cares more about the transportation system in this country. I would like the Member to clarify that remark.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, that will be very easy. The Hon. Member wants to hear from the Minister and other Members of the committee who can give another perspective to this ideological debate. In terms of the second question first, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill or birdie hills will—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nowlan: Birdie Hills, Winnipeg—Winnipeg-Birds Hill, that is the riding.

Mr. Blaikie: You are making my point.

Mr. Nowlan: That is the convoluted syntax on which the Hon. Member complimented me. Therefore, I decided to use it in response, in reciprocity.

In terms of the second question first, Mr. Speaker, that was my very point. I was not complaining about the Hon. Member for Regina West. I said he was consistent. It was a back-handed compliment. Of course, he was ideological. It did not surprise me. I know him better than the Member in a parliamentary way. That was not a complaint so I will not waste any more time on that. It was a back-handed compliment.

The members of the NDP contributed very constructively to the committee report when there was no television, but when television was close by the closed door, I knew they would have to take their walk. I knew that would happen because of ideology. That was my only point. That is what surprised me about the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe. He went completely against the Axworthy doctrine but why should that have surprised me? Anyway, that is the first question.

The second question is the guts behind closed doors. The Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill of all people, a reputed and a very constructive Member of the Parliamentary Reform Committee knows quite a bit about parliamentary procedures, knows that when a committee under our present rules goes in camera that the committee produces a committee report. Members are not there to produce individual reports. You are to produce a report of the committee that heard all the evidence not a report of the Member from Annapolis Valley-Hants or the Member from Fraser Valley or the Member from Bow River or even the Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill. It is a committee report. It is a definite procedure. Instead of partisan politics, let us have constructive philosophy.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. Questions and comments are now terminated.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants knows full well that committees can decide to reflect minority opinions. This committee decided not to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): This is debate and not a point of order. Order, please. The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus). There will be enough time for more questions and comments before the day is over.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate today. As a new Member of the House and someone interested in transportation for a number of years before coming here, I found it a privilege to sit on the Transport Committee as a full Member and to work with Members from all Parties on this subject and others.

I want to be clear at the outset of two things. Both are in terms of procedure. At the end of my comments in the debate today I will be moving a motion that this report not be concured in but referred to the standing committee for further consideration.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Angus: Because of the existing rules of the House, Members such as the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) and myself who, for very fundamental reasons, disagreed with the committee report had no other mechanism but to bring the matter before Parliament other than waiting for a Government Member to move concurrence.

With regard to the motion of concurrence, it should not come as a surprise to Government Members because the motion was placed on the Order Paper a day after the sixth report of the Standing Committee was tabled in the House. It is my understanding that our House Leader gave notification to the Government House Leader and the House Leader for the Official Opposition some time last week that we were planning to use the procedure of the House to bring about a debate today.

Mr. Benjamin: It was not out of the blue.

Mr. Angus: We decided as a caucus in December to no longer paticipate in the process of completing that report because Government Members would not allow us the opportunity to record our dissent to a number of the recommendations. We felt in all good conscience as New Democrats that we could not have our names aligned with the White Paper Freedom to Move. Change, Choice, Challenge without having some kind of clear indication as to where we stood on the recommendations made within it. We asked, as did the Liberals in committee, first to have the votes recorded, when that failed we asked for an opportunity to have a dissenting report as part of the majority report by Party and finally, to allow individuals to include dissenting opinions. Those three options were turned down, even though, in terms of the latter two, there were precedents in Parliament of standing committees making those kinds of provisions. I say sincerely that it was with great regret—and we said it at committee—that the Hon. Member for Regina West and I withdrew from the Standing Committee on Transport. Immediately after we made that decision, the Liberal Party decided to follow suit.

● (1640)

The report is a report of Conservative Members. Granted there was a lot of movement, a lot of discussion and a lot of good debate about the principles contained within the report along with the recommendations. I give credit to the Conservative Members of the committee who in many cases were prepared to listen with open ears and open minds and to be convinced that something was not appropriate. However, when it came down to the recommendations, we just felt that we could not play any more.

In the time available to me, I want to deal with some of the specific items in the report and to respond accordingly. So far today we have heard many times about the question of safety. The Government was very consistent in saying that safety was not negotiable. As far as the Government of Canada was concerned, safety was not an item on the table. We heard witnesses who suggested otherwise because when it comes to economic reregulation or deregulation there has to be an impact upon safety. I will give two examples. Currently in Canada there is some ongoing testing for an end of train unit to replace the caboose. This device would monitor certain functions of the railway to determine the safety of the train. The railroads argue that that is an economic decision, that they should have the right to make those kinds of changes in their operations because it is cheaper for them to operate. On the other hand the unions and those who provide the human service of monitoring the movement of trains, as well as others in Canada including the New Democratic Party, believe that it is a safety consideration. Under deregulation there would be no mechnanism. If a railroad decided that it would make an economic change, it could do it without having to consult or without having to apply to a regulatory body to ensure that proper hearings were held.

During our hearings in Vancouver we heard that safety was a matter of negotiation between unions and employers. We heard from Ms. Douglas, general chairperson of the Canadian Air Line Flight Attendants Association. She said:

> It pains me even to say it, but we have a proposal on the bargaining table; we are trying to negotiate smoke detectors in the washrooms. We have to try to negotiate it, because they cost money.

Also we heard in the testimony that in the negotiations flight attendants were asked by collective agreement to work longer shifts, perhaps to work as long as 18 hours continuously. Ms. Douglas responded as follows:

> Contrary to popular belief, flight attendants are not there just to be friendly and serve meals. That is certainly part of our job, but the basic premise for having flight attendants on the aircraft at all is safety . . . Other than in-flight problems which might arise, the times when flight attendants should be at their peak—when there are most likely to be problems—are on take-offs and landings.
> After a 14-hour duty day, your efficiency certainly drags. Pacific Western also has a proposal on the table to take away or substantially reduce the meals provided for flight attendants on the aircraft, so we work 14 hours and do not have meal breaks and have less in the way of meals and then be called upon at the end of a 14-hour duty day to perhaps have to evacuate an aircraft. That depends—in our training, we have 90 seconds in which to evacuate an aircraft safely before the possibility of smoke and fire makes an accident unsurvivable. So seconds count. Exhaustion at that point in time will cost lives.

Even when we talk about economic deregulation, it will have an impact on safety. All the inspectors and safety regulations which we can provide will not change that aspect. We heard from a number of charter groups which were concerned about the impact of economic deregulation on their operations. Questions were raised about a marginal airline or small feeder line which has not had a real good go at it. I am talking about lines which are close to the wire in terms of bank managers knocking at their doors and of running marginally for the last month or two. What can the last passenger on the last flight expect? What kind of shape will that aircraft be in? What corners will the company have had to cut in order to continue to operate? The reality is that we will probably not know until the first accident what part was not replaced earlier, what part was kept until the so-called standard date but was really stretched to the limit and failed when it was needed the most. We have to look at those questions.

I should like to turn briefly to the impact of deregulation on the trucking industry. I will particularly focus on northern communities which depend almost totally upon trucking for receipt of their consumer goods or perhaps the movement of products out of there in small volumes. We heard from the trucking industry—the Canadian Trucking Association, the British Columbia association and the Ontario association. One after another they indicated clearly that what would happen under a deregulated environment to smaller, isolated communities would be that service would go down and prices would go up. In British Columbia we were told that some of those communities would not get service because it would be uneconomical for them to continue to provide once or twice a week service to some B.C. communities. Right now it is uneconomical, but because of the regulatory regime there is a trade-off, what we call cross-subsidization where a company obtains a licence to travel from point A or point B, which is the bulk of the market, to larger centres. As a condition of the licence it has to provide a decent level of service to the smaller communities in between. The community of Atikokan in my riding relies totally on trucking for consumer goods. That community is already hard pressed because of the closure of mines and a downturn in their economy. Communities such as that will find themselves paying even more for the goods they need for their daily lives.

Let us take a look at employment. What is the impact on the industry as a result of deregulation? Currently close to three-quarters of a million Canadians are working in this sector. Any change will affect a large portion of the population. Eleven labour organizations appeared before the committee. Each expressed fears that the deregulation proposals would result in substantial job loss and reduced wages for their members. From the Canadian Labour Congress we heard that it was not confident that it would be able to escape being the chief victim of transport deregulation in Canada.

We have, as of yet, very little evidence for the Canadian scene. However, there is a fair bit of knowledge about what happened in the United States. Since 1980, 40,000 Americans in the airline industry lost their jobs. One hundred and fifty thousand jobs disappeared in the railway industry. The best guess for the trucking industry in the United States is that between 250,000 and 300,000 union members were put out of work in this sector and not replaced.

Earlier we had a discussion about confidential contracts and their impact on the transportation industry. One of the realities of American confidential contracts is that potash from the Canadian Prairies can be railed right through to Chicago via the United States lines at a cost cheaper than railing it on CN or CP to Thunder Bay, using Canadian workers, having money stay in Canada, and then shipped by boat to Chicago, again using Canadian workers, returning profits to Canada. If we allow ourselves to move in the direction of confidential contracts we are going to see more and more of that. We are going to see more north-south traffic and less east-west. We are going to see products moving from British Columbia by rail through the United States and back up through Detroit and Windsor, bypassing Canada almost entirely. We do not accept that. We do not think we can allow that kind of change, because we are such a big country. We must have our own environment. We have to ensure that Canadians can work and transport our goods and services across Canada. We should not be setting up a regime that will allow us to bypass most of this country and create the jobs south of the border.

I want to deal more with the air transportation side. I believe ordinary Canadians who feel that deregulation is a great thing are seeing it from the perspective of cheap seats, of the ability to fly from community A to community B at a reasonable price. I cannot blame them for wanting reduced prices. What the Canadian public does not realize is that those cheap seats are only available for consumers in the major transportation corridors. They are not available for those small theatre routes. They are not available across the North. They also are not aware that the bottom has been reached in terms of cheap seats. We heard testimony from officials of Air Canada and Canadian Pacific that prices are as low as they are going to go. There may be some adjustment for some first class or full-fare passengers, but not to any great extent. We want to see those advantages given to all Canadians.

In our Halifax hearings the Harmon Corporation of Stephenville, Newfoundland, presented us with some evidence from the United States. I just want to very quickly quote from it. This was a statement by a Richard B. Keinz, Assistant Commissioner, Minnesota Department of Transportation, Aeronautics Division before the Subcommittee on Aviation, Committee on Public Works and Transportation, House of Representatives, on June 9, 1983. They spoke about the experience in the State of Minnesota of deregulation. With regard to air fares he stated:

> Deregulation has introduced an opportunity for airlines to offer a variety of air fares. In the monopoly or single carrier markets, the variety appears to be mostly of the high variety.

In other words, after you clean out the competition and you get it down so that you are the only carrier, you decide what the market will bear and you boost the costs. We recognize that economics is a factor in setting fares. However, we have a difficult time rationalizing why it costs 4 cents to 20 cents per mile to transport a passenger from New York to Los Angeles as compared to 14 cents to 20 cents per mile to carry a passenger between Boston and Los Angeles, or 17 cents to 21 cents per mile to carry a passenger between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Los Angeles. In some cases it goes up as much as

$1 a mile. Clearly, there is a lot to learn from the United States experience. History has always pointed out that we should learn from our mistakes. We should also learn from other's mistakes. When, at the end of my comments, I move a motion, I will do so because I think the Standing Committee on Transport needs more time. We need time to travel to northern Canada. We need time to travel to those other provinces we did not have an opportunity to visit. We need time to visit the United States to speak to people who are key players in the aviation industry, the trucking industry and, the rail industry to learn from them how we can do better in a deregulated environment.

In conclusion, I would like to move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie):

That the sixth report be not now concurred in but that it be recommitted to the Standing Committee of Transport for further consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion is in order. Questions and comments?

Mr. Nowlan: Did I hear the last words of the Chair that the motion is in order even though it appears on the face of it that it is completely contradictory to the motion that we started with at 3.10 p.m.? We have been debating several hours since then. I know other Members want to speak on the substance of whether the NDP are moving a motion to concur or whether they now want to go to and fro and get out of the ballpark without a motion to concur. I know some of the parliamentary procedures, with respect, and I must say I expected the wording of the motion to be in a little different style, that the motion to concur totally in the report not be concurred in but certain elements be referred back for further reconsideration. That I would not object to too much, but to have the motion from the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus) to go completely opposite to the motion that was moved just after three o'clock is totally out of order. I know I cannot challenge the Chair and I do not want to really prolong the debate on the procedural matter, because I know there are many other Members who want to speak on the issue now that it is finally on the floor, even though it is on the floor through the schizophrenic procedural procedures of the NDP—

Mr. Blaikie: I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Nowlan: I have the floor birdie hill Winnipeg on a point of order. I really cannot appreciate the ruling of the Chair that there can be a motion at three o'clock to concur and one at five o'clock to not concur. It is like interring a body at three o'clock and disinterring it at five o'clock. It is like burying a body at three o'clock but exhuming it at five o'clock.

• (1700)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nowlan: How can we have the vampires on procedure from the NDP completely destroy any parliamentary procedure?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Chair has found the motion to be in order. Are there questions or comments on the speech made by the Hon. Member? If not, we will resume debate.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to say how pleased I am to enter this debate, notwithstanding the fact that the issue has been brought to the floor of the House in a rather convoluted and unorthodox fashion. First members of the NDP moved to concur and then moved not to concur. Notwithstanding that, I think it is a timely debate and a good one and I will try to stick to the thrust of the motion and cover some of the elements of the sixth report, the subject before us.

I have heard from various speakers that we have not had enough time to deal with this important issue and that it is such an important issue that it should be considered in detail. I would have thought that the House would have been packed today but most of the time there have been three or four Liberal Members and three or four NDP Members present. One wonders sometimes and has to question the sincerity of their bringing this motion forward when it seems to be filled with more rhetoric than genuine concern.

Notwithstanding that, I wish to begin by paying tribute to all Hon. Members who served on the standing committee. I know that this report does not necessarily reflect only the opinions of Progressive Conservative Members. I know other Members had a part to play in drafting the recommendations and I know they worked very hard under a very tight time frame. The report that has been brought forth is realistic and thoughtful and I must say that it is very valuable to those of us who are charged with the next phase of this process, the drafting of the legislation. I believe this is another clear step in the evolution of a new transportation framework. By all accounts, we recognize that the transportation framework needs to be overhauled.

I would like to compliment the chairman of the standing committee on the very eloquent and well reasoned speech he made today putting into context the proceedings at the standing committee and describing the events that took place. I also want to compliment him on the fact that never before have there been such a number of witnesses heard in such a short period of time and their evidence digested in such a comprehensive fashion. Something in the order of 95 witnesses were heard and 172 briefs were submitted. As the Hon. Member pointed out, after looking at that many briefs and hearing that many submissions, things become somewhat repetitious. I believe the views that were presented were presented quite clearly right across the country.

As has been pointed out in the committee report, the committee's deliberation was only one phase of this process. I find this debate to be rather strange, particularly since Liberal Members are criticizing this process. I have been around here for a long time and this is the first time I have seen a policy document come before a standing committee of the House for a full-fleged debate and a comprehensive analysis before the drafting process began.

This process started last February when I invited everyone in Canada who is interested in transportation to engage in the debate and the process of regulatory reform. I invited them to engage in the process of rewriting the National Transportation Act and putting in place a new legislative and regulatory framework. I said: "Let us have your views and thoughts. Either see us personally, send in a formalized brief, give us a telephone call or write it on the back of an envelope, but we want to hear from you". We heard from people from coast to coast. We sent people across the country to listen to special interest groups, to provinces and to labour groups. When we put the Freedom to Move paper together and released it in July for further public debate. We released it to the Standing Committee on Transport and now we are engaged in the process of writing the legislation.

This is a new process and I think it is working. I find it rather strange that Hon. Members would be complaining about time. They will still have all kinds of time when it comes to dealing with the actual legislation. However, surely there comes a time when we have to stop consulting and start drafting the legislation. We will certainly be entertaining the thoughts, suggestions and proposed amendments of Hon. Members when we deal with the legislation.

Surely now is the time to act. If Hon. Members want another mandate to study the legislation, I am sure that can be arranged. I believe that we all want to have the best piece of legislation that can possibly be delivered, legislation that is in the best interests of the Parliament of Canada and Canadians as a whole and indeed in the best interests of transportation.

A great many recommendations were made and I will not be able to touch on all of them. Some of the more important issues such as service to northern and remote areas are matters we are considering very seriously. A modified non-compensatory rail rate scheme, the role of transportation as a tool for economic development and the issue of foreign ownership in the transportation system are all items that are under active consideration.

On balance, I can say that the recommendations that are contained in the sixth report of the standing committee can be accommodated in a general way. There may be some details on which we may not agree but generally speaking we agree with the thrust of the recommendations and I think that Hon. Members will find many of the recommendations woven into the legislation when it is introduced to the House.

Hon. Members want more time. Perhaps we need more time to deal with some aspects of the issue but the fact is that it is time now to bring on the legislation. Canada's transportation network has reached a critical junction. We believe very firmly that we must overhaul our legislative and regulatory framework in order to achieve the kind of economic development we need. At the present time, we sense that the regulatory transportation regime that is in place represents an obstacle and indeed it is a burden on the economy. Quite frankly, we believe that it stifles growth and innovation and has prevented the system from providing the best service to the Canadian people. In fact, the other day I heard an airline executive say that under the current regulatory system, they have been more preoccupied with satisfying the regulator rather than the customer. Surely that must change and that is what we are trying to do. This will not be a revolution. Much of this has already taken place and what we are doing now is putting in place the regulatory and legislative mechanisms to authorize what has already been taken place for wuite some time.

In a recent report entitled The Canadian Common Market, the Canada West Foundation stated this regarding trucking:

—"the chaotic welter of provincial trucking regulations make it an administrative nightmare to move goods by truck across provincial boundaries and therefore impede the movement of goods".

That is not a political statement. It did not come from us. It came from a study team from western Canada. There are a myriad of regulations regarding trucking. There are 10 different regulations in each province and then there is another set of regulations thrust upon the trucking industry by the federal Government. There must be a move toward greater uniformity in the regulatory mechanisms covering the moving of goods from province to province.

I am sorry that the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) has just left the Chamber. He knows the effectiveness of the current appeal mechanisms under the National Transportation Act and, in particular, the captive shipper clause. For example, one appeal under Section 23 of the NTA took seven years to hear. Another case launched under Section 278 of the Railway Act took nearly eight years to be acted upon. I would like to say that there was only one such case in 20 years. That is clearly not satisfactory. Clearly, the desire and demand for reform is there and we are acting upon it.

I would like to point out other regulations to Hon. Members. Section 230 allows the Governor in Council to make by-laws governing spitting on trains. Nothing is wrong with spitting; but if one misses the spittoon one could be fined $40.

Ms. McDonald: At least.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is right, at least $40. I would like to thank the Hon. Member for that addition.

Section 366 states that railway companies which fail to provide notice written on a blackboard with white chalk that a train is running late are liable for a fine not exceeding $5.

Mr. Angus: That's better than the PA system!

Mr. Mazankowski: Those items are still part and parcel of the Act. I say it is time to move into a new era, and that is precisely what we are doing.

I know that my hon. friend from Regina West will concur in many of the ideas that have been talked about. He will not disagree with everything we have done because there are a great many factors in the Freedom to Move document with which I am sure he agrees but which philosophically he cannot embrace. I accept that. There are a great many ideas in the document which have been talked about for quite some time.

Sure, we will learn from the experience of others. There is no question about that. We are not talking about massive deregulation; we are talking about regulatory reform. We are talking about changing the legislative framework and the regulatory framework in such a way that it will take into consideration the uniqueness of Canada, our economy, our social infrastructure and our demography. These are factors which we will try to harmonize with the real facts of Canadian life. We are not copying the United States holus-bolus. We will learn from the American experience, and from the experience of others. However, that will result in a uniquely made-in-Canada transportation Bill with a corresponding regulatory framework which will meet and suit the needs of Canadians from coast to coast.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: We have heard from a great many people and we have talked with a great many others. Personally, I have gone out across the country. I must say that I have not found any antagonism toward the basic thrust of Freedom to Move. I have spoken to the Calgary Chamber of Commerce, the Atlantic Provinces Economic Summit Conference and the Traffic Club of Montreal Inc. I spoke about this topic during National Transportation Week in Toronto. I have spoken on the topic to the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Roads and Transportation Association of Canada, the Alberta Aviation Council, the Toronto Board of Trade, the Ontario Trucking Association and the Air Transport Association of Canada. I participated in a seminar at Concordia University on the subject. Monday last I spoke to the Saskatchewan Urban Municipalities Association. I have engaged in many panel discussions and many federal-provincial meetings on the topic. Our officials have also engaged in many federal-provincial meetings in which the basic points of contention were dealt with. We have tried to find a way to resolve them together in a consultative fashion.

The Hon. Member for Regina West talked about this being an ideological knee-jerk reaction. I must say that I find nothing more knee-jerk, in terms of an ideological reaction, than the comment which I suspect he is the author of found at page 26 which states: "We are philosophically opposed to confidential contracts". And he talks about us being philosophically hooked and reacting in a knee-jerk fashion! How can he say this when the CTC has gone out across the land in a very comprehensive fashion and has examined the issue of confidential contracting? As a matter of fact, the Commission examined the issue of confidential contracting, both on transborder traffic and, indeed, on domestic traffic. The Canadian Transport Commission's extensive deliberations and reports into these matters took some 18 days of public hearings. A second hearing held on the same subject yielded 77 submissions and 3,000 pages of transcript. It turned out to be a 19-day hearing.

I failed to mention that in addition to the debate which has been taking place here, and in other places in the country, not to mention within the industry, there has been a rather interesting debate ongoing with the CTC. It was the instigator of this process. The CTC has engaged in a number of hearings at which this matter was studied. Many of the recommendations of the CTC have been incorporated into this document.

We have all heard about the near unanimous support for the main thurst of economic reform. Even the Hon. Member for Regina West in a radio interview had to admit, and I quote: "I'd say a majority of the briefs so far have been in favour." Right on. There is no question about that.

Members of the Liberal Party brought down their own report. I had a chance to reread it last night. I have never seen anything so hollow, so inconsistent and so blended with contradictions. It is really quite consistent with what we are hearing from Members opposite. I would just like to touch briefly upon a couple of items because they make one chuckle. First, at page 9, they state that the Liberal Party does not support deregulation of the trucking industry at this time. That is strange since I have in front of me a number of quotations from the former Minister of Transport. One of them states:

> The next deregulatory salvos will be fired at the end of the month when Axworthy meets with the provinces to look at trucking. These talks follow meetings in January when Axworthy and provincial officials discussed ways to establish uniformity in trucking regulations—

That is a quote from The Financial Time of May 21, 1984.

In front of me I have another article entitled "One trump" which states:

> But Axworthy does have one trump card he can play if necessary. In theory, the National Transportation Act gives Ottawa control over trucks that cross provincial boundaries. In practice, Ottawa has allowed provinces to regulate trucks. "The provinces are acting on borrowed authority," says Axworthy. "This is not saying that we are going to take it back. But the message is there. If it is not taken up—well—we will just have to be at our persuasive best."

In a speech to the provincial Ministers, as reported in The Citizen of Ottawa on June 1, the former Minister of Transport said that the federal Government was prepared to regain control over interprovincial trucking, if the provinces did not agree to speed up his regulatory reform.

What has changed? Hon. Members opposite want to talk about unilateralism. There was no debate like this one. The former Minister of Transport was going to move in one fell swoop. He was going to take over control of interprovincial trucking. And Hon. Members opposite call that consultation! Complaints, primarily from members of the Liberal Party, have been to the effect that we need more time, more debate and more consultation.

I would now like to move to another item having to do with Air Canada. In it the Liberals talk about not privatizing Air Canada—I know I will find the reference somewhere.

Mr. Benjamin: Do not adjust your set.

Mr. Angus: And he is supposed to be organized.

Mr. Mazankowski: One becomes disorganized listening to Hon. Members opposite.

If I recall correctly, the recommendations in the so-called Liberal minority report stated that members of the Liberal Party would not propose to privatize Air Canada but, indeed, that they would entertain some partial ownership by the employees. What the former Minister of Transport said was that the Tories must sell Air Canada. I do not know for whom he speaks, but he is a leading front-bencher. He must have some clout.

They also state in the report that they want to maintain the CTC. When this was written in April of 1985 the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) had this to say about control of policy.

● (1720)

In truth, civil servants, crown corporations and regulatory agencies are involved intimately and powerfully in the business of policy making. Their near monopoly on information gives them disproportionate influence in the policy process; elected officials are often poorly equipped to control the system. The civil service moreover is often closely aligned with an influential elite—in this example, the major airlines—creating a very powerful network of protection.

What he is really saying is that it should be the legislators, the elected people, who make policy rather than the regulator, and that is what we are proposing to do.

I have to say one more thing in conclusion, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member from Newfoundland who just spoke has again added to the discredit of the Liberal Party when he talks about Terra Transport. He has condemned Terra Transport in his own province of Newfoundland as being dangerous and in poor shape. There are two things I want to say about that. The Hon. Member does absolutely no service to the railway by these kinds of alarmist statements. The fact is that in Newfoundland, Terra Transport's derailments are down by 75 per cent since 1983. Personal injuries are down by 19 per cent, axle bearing failures are down by 43 per cent and couple failures are down by 42 per cent. Therefore the railway is not as bad as the Hon. Member suggests. That is another clear example of the way in which the Hon. Member tends to discredit himself and the Liberal Party not only on these kinds of issues but on major issues, and today was no exception.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the remarks of the Minister, even if I do not agree with them all. It is too bad he and I and others did not have more time to get into more areas of transportation, but I want to ask him two questions. First, can the Minister assure us, and many organizations and individual shippers—and I am not asking him to disclose what will be in the legislation—that as a matter of Government policy the protection for captive shippers will remain in any regulatory reform? Second, again without trying to nail him down to any specific date, can the Minister give us a reasonable time frame as to when he intends to bring in his legislation on an amended National Transportation Act? When he does, can he assure us that once the legislation is brought in for first reading, the Standing Committee on Transport will have no problem in getting an order of reference to hold hearings and to report appropriate amendments back to the House? I understand that under the new rules, legislative committees are not to travel. Therefore, it means that in order for the Standing Committee on Transport to do the job, we would have to get the legislation after first reading. That would mean that the subject matter of the legislation would have to be referred to the committee. Can the Minister give me an approximate date when he intends to bring in the legislation and can he assure us that the kind of opportunity he himself spoke of a few minutes ago will in fact be there for the committee on transport? We should have adequate notice of several weeks so that interested organizations and groups will have time to prepare some submissions and so that the committee will have sufficient time to hear the submissions and make recommendations on each item of the legislation.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I could speak on the subject for 40 or 50 minutes rather than 20 minutes. First, may I say in terms of the process that we have heard from close to 200 groups, organizations and/or individuals. They have all had some input into either the document or the drafting process. With respect to captive shippers, I think the Hon. Member knows that one of the very important features of the Freedom to Move paper is to get a greater degree of protection for captive shippers. I think we have moved a considerable distance with respect to a number of items such as the mandated joint line rail rates, the inter-switching, the joint running rights and, particularly, the dispute resolving mechanism which involves mediation, arbitration, final offer arbitration, and the revised Section 23.

What I have been impressed with is that most of the customers, shippers and people who are going to be the major beneficiaries, support this piece of legislation because of its balance. I think we all recognize there is a balance which has to be maintained. We want to have a framework which will be fair to the shipping community as well as to the transportation industry because I think we all recognize that we need a healthy transportation industry. I am pleased by the fact that those who have come forth in support have recognized that we have tried to establish a clear balance which will be fairer to the transportation industry and to the shippers. With respect to a time frame, the date of April has been bandied about. That would certainly be my goal but I have no way of knowing whether we can achieve it.

With regard to hearings, I am not totally familiar with the new rules, or what sort of rules we will function under, but I can say without trying to weasel out of the direct question that I would naturally be interested in the kind of parliamentary committee hearing process which is customary in these kinds of massive legislative undertakings, unless the piece of legislation is so perfect that everyone will agree we can move it forward very quickly. It is a bit of a hypothetical situation but the fact is that if there is any way we can find an appropriate mechanism to engage in the kind of hearing process to which the Hon. Member refers, it will certainly have my support.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, the Minister made a rather frivolous remark in his speech about regulations regarding spitting. I want to raise a much more serious matter. There has been plenty of talk about freedom to move but there has not been any talk about freedom to move without danger to one's health. I wonder if the Minister would comment on the regulations as they currently stand, which are terribly inadequate. He will know that in railway transportation there may be non-smoking areas for passengers, and if they are violated there can be a fine imposed. However, the company has no obligation to provide a non-smoking area. In fact, companies do not at the present time. There is one experiment on one line where no smoking will be permitted. Otherwise, we have this phony situation where there is a sign saying "No Smoking" but, of course, polluted air circulates nonetheless. The air does not obey these signs.

In the case of airline carriers, there are no no smoking rules in Canada as of yet and there is no regulation in the case of buses. I have received representations from people across the country who are extremely concerned about their health. There are no non-smoking waiting areas in the terminals. I wonder if we could have some action on this matter. Will the Minister agree that it is a serious matter that 35,000 Canadians die per year as a result of smoking? When are we going to see some action for the protection of the travelling public?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I certainly take the Hon. Member's question seriously. I hope that she will not take my example of "spitting" as being frivolous. I was simply trying to point out the fact that we have some rules and regulations which are rather archaic and it is perhaps time they be modified or removed completely. It was in that spirit that I used that example, albeit it was somewhat extreme.

I am not an expert with regard to the Charter of Rights. I suspect people have a right to smoke or not to smoke. That might be something that—

Ms. McDonald: They have no right to make other people sick.

Mr. Mazankowski: That perhaps is a good point for debate. I think that one of the real advantages of the thrust of this legislation is that there will be more freedom for airlines to do the kinds of things the Hon. Member wants them to do. I understand that in the United States there are some airlines that prohibit smoking altogether. That is part of the competitive spirit. If customers demand no smoking on their airlines in a free, open, and competitive market such as we are discussing here, they are quite likely to get it. That is exactly what has happened in the United States, and I suspect that it could happen in Canada as well.

• (1730)

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I think the truckers of Canada are going to have a period of prosperity with deregulation which they have never had before. I want to make a comment first and then ask the Hon. Minister a question. At the present time, and for many years, the trucking business has been retarded because of regulations. If a trucker from Alberta wants to haul materials from Alberta to Quebec, he must have a hearing in Alberta at a cost of $3,000 to $4,000, a hearing in Saskatchewan which costs $4,000 or $5,000, just to pass through that province, one in Manitoba, one in Ontario, and one in Quebec. That makes it almost impossible for truckers to operate. As a matter of fact, a few years ago we had to route our trucks through the United States in order to build up a market for Alberta beef in Quebec. It is a shame when we must go through another country.

How are matters proceeding and what are the prospects for the possibility of having one hearing to ensure that truckers have the necessary insurance and finances to be permitted to operate? What are the prospects of that with the provinces?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, the point which the Hon. Member has just made is proof positive that the utopian ideal of attempting to regulate everything to perfection is a pretty distant ideal. That which the Member has pointed out has not been in the best interests of the trucking industry either. I have before me a table which shows the tremendous growth in the private trucking industry in the Province of Ontario. In 1971 the private in-house trucking industry handled 42 per cent of the intra and extra-provincial movements. That has risen to 55.2 per cent in 1983. At the same time, the for-hire trucking industry declined from 58 per cent of the business to 44.8 per cent of the business. This really indicates that the shippers are finding it more attractive, profitable and reliable to own their own trucks and put their own trucks in-house to provide that service. This is to the detriment of the for-hire trucking industry.

There has been a memorandum of understanding signed between the federal Government and the provinces to move toward a uniform set of regulations and to apply the reverse onus test, that is, shifting the burden of proof from the applicant to the respondent and, within a couple of years, phasing in the fitness test—fit, willing, and able—rather than that of public convenience and necessity. I hope we can continue in that time frame with the provinces.

I did not get an opportunity to touch on the safety issue, but at the same time we are working in concert with the provinces to establish a national safety code for the trucking industry to provide one set of regulations regarding safety right across the country.

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, as the Minister well knows, the National Transportation Act, particularly in Section 3, has a major omission, that is its refusal, if you will, to make reference to regional economic development. The committee has rightly made a recommendation that that be made a thrust of the new transportation act.

I am not asking the Minister to give secrets of the state, but could he elaborate for the House on what he believes the parameters of that phrase, "regional economic development", means from his perspective? Does it refer, for instance, to employment opportunities in the various regions as well? Does it refer, in his mind, to the role of Crown corporations, both from a fiscal point of view and a long-term economic perspective?

We have heard a lot of comment from the Premiers and other individuals that Crown corporations in transportation are certainly not living up to the spirit of their mandate, if not the law, as it reflects on the issue of regional economic development. I cite CN Marine and other Crown corporations which are playing a role in the economy, particularly of Atlantic Canada, but I also think of British Columbia and the prairie provinces. Could the Minister elaborate on that?

Mr. Mazankowski: I understand that we are short of time, Mr. Speaker, so I will try to be as brief as I can. Naturally, I am sympathetic to the point that the Hon. Member has raised with regard to regional economic development and transportation being a tool. I am guided to some extent by the agreed positions of the Government of Canada and all the provinces of Canada with regard to the ninth principle of the regional economic development paper. That principle states that transportation is recognized as a key to regional economic development. As it points out, all regions of Canada are highly sensitive to the use of transportation as an instrument of economic development. Therefore, regional development policy must take into account the types and adequacy of transportation systems, the levels of service, and the role which transportation facilities and infrastructure play in each particular region.

To deviate from that, when there has been agreement among all the key players, would perhaps be asking for trouble. I hope that we will be able to reflect the thrust of that adequately in the legislation. We are working at it and hopefully we will be able to do that.

With regard to Crown corporations, one of the things that really surprised me in this debate is the attack on Crown corporations with respect to both Air Canada and CN.

Mr. Benjamin: Not from us.

Mr. Mazankowski: I think we all recognize that while Crown corporations may be seen to have an advantage in terms of being backed by the federal Government, at the same time they are asked, from time to time, to engage in duties which are not necessarily duties which would be performed on the basis of a straight market discipline. Somehow or other that debate did not develop fully enough. Our position is that because we have a mixed economy, Crown corporations should be regulated and legislated in a similar manner so as to prevent any major distortions within that particular sector. I also firmly believe that if Crown corporations are asked to engage in an activity as an imposed public duty, they should be so compensated for it and that should be identified.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to participate in the debate which has been waging for the last several hours on the deregulation of our transportation industry. Toward that end I would like to focus the bulk of my remarks on the airline industry. We all know that the policy of deregulation is based on the report produced by the Government entitled Freedom to Move. I think it is very crucial, significant, and relevant to point out that this document took 15 months to prepare. It took 15 months to put the themes, proposals, and philosophies guiding this document on to paper. By comparison, this document has only been in the hands of the Transport Committee, which was asked to examine it and call public hearings on it, for two months.

I suggest that from a logical point of view, and from the point of view of Canadian tradition, that that somehow does not wash. I admit, as does my Party, that the airline industry and the transportation industry in general is in need of reform. It needs reform to cope with the new and evolving aspirations that we see around us. However, I suggest with all due respect that one cannot embark on a new and bold initiative which took some 15 months to put together, and then have only two months to examine it from a public opinion point of view. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) alluded to that when he said that the committee had a very short time to deal with this issue. There were some 92 interventions and 150 submissions to the committee and if there is that much interest, and there is, then two months is not sufficient to deal with it.

Another point I want to make concerns the statement that deregulation is going to benefit the consumer. The consumer will be paying less to move from point A to point B. That is an attractive feature. Obviously all Members have to be concerned over what it means for the consumer. If it means reduced airline fares, then we have to be very cognizant of that fact. However, we also have to be fair, honest and truthful and really look into this report. The Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) indicated the problems consumers have been having in the U.S. under deregulation. That country moved in 1978 to deregulation and up until 1984 U.S. airlines lost some $4 billion. Service in some remote areas has become irregular or non-existent. As well, the cost of air fares in those more remote parts of the country have increased.

We have seen companies in the U.S. go belly-up because they tried to expand too quickly or because they misread their own capabilities. Other companies, with an eye on their bottom lines, stopped serving a given community with only 60 days notice. How does that help the consumer? Those factors have to be taken into account before we can honestly say that the consumer will win or lose under deregulation. As well, a lot of the larger airlines in the U.S. have bought up smaller airlines which got into trouble under deregulation. How has that profited the consumer?

Deregulation was supposed to mean a greater opportunity for more airlines to create more competition. What is happening? In some markets these airlines are creating monopolies. We have seen that in our country even without deregulation. Canadian Pacific has purchased Nordair and Eastern Provincial. Air Canada owns a portion of Air Ontario. Under deregulation we can expect more such takeovers. What started as an attempt to loosen up the system, to provide more flexibility, more opportunity and lessen the monopoly some carriers have, has evolved into something worse, and it can happen here.

As well, Mr. Speaker, when we talk about the problems of service to remote areas in the U.S., we can expect even more of a problem in Canada. Canada is a very large country with its population centres spotted irregularly across the land. We have to look beyond the sixtieth parallel at the people in Yellowknife, Cambridge Bay and Coppermine. Those people do not look to air carriers only for transportation, they look to them to bring in their food and carry out the goods they produce.

If we look at the Toronto-Ottawa or Toronto-Montreal routes, that is one question. But if we look at Toronto-Yellowknife, then it is a totally different matter. We are talking about what this country is about. We are talking about the contact that each and every Canadian has with his country. Our carriers have a responsibility to serve the smaller communities and sparsely-populated areas of our country. However, if we go head first into deregulation what is going to happen to those communities? Is it the bottom line that will dictate whether an airline serves a particular community? If so, we will not have the same kind of country we have now and let's make no bones about that.

We have to learn from the U.S. experience, which brings us to another issue, that of safety. How often do we get up in this House to mourn a tragic accident after it happens? How many times do we say we should take precautions and try to avoid the accident in the first place? Well, here we have a golden opportunity to avoid asking ourselves that question repeatedly. The Hon. Member from Newfoundland pointed out the erosion of safety measures as a result of deregulation in the U.S. Many smaller companies, looking at the bottom line, do not have either the capital or human ressources to do the things they should be doing. In the U.S., as was done recently in Toronto, air traffic control operators were fired or laid off.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is wrong.

Mr. Marchi: There is also the issue—

Mr. Mazankowski: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. I do not normally rise to interject but a Member speaking in debate should state the facts, not falsehoods. Either inadvertently or deliberately the Hon. Member just made a grave error.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I do not stand in my place to mislead anyone in this House.

Mr. Mazankowski: You sure as hell are.

Mr. Marchi: I know the Minister follows the same policy.

Before he stood up I was going to look at the number of inspectors we have. The Minister rightly pointed out that perhaps the previous Government did not have enough inspectors. He said it was the Liberals' fault. That could be true. However, that is no reason to sit back and be smug and smile and at the same time move to deregulation without addressing the issue. This is not simply an opportunity to talk about what happened in 1982 or 1983.

● (1750)

If they wish to move on deregulation, the issue of inspectors has to be taken into account. If the number is not sufficient, it is not good enough to say it was the previous administration, the Clark administration or the Diefenbaker administration. Canadians want safety now. If safety is to be enhanced by an increase in the number of inspectors, Mr. Speaker, that is an issue we have to talk about courageously and out in the open.

There was also mention by my colleague that when the group went to Washington, a number of elected representatives and a number of airline officials indicated that the Americans are on the fringes of safety. Some went so far as to say they are below the standards of safety that Americans would like.

A recent poll suggested there was a 50 per cent reduction in confidence concerning travel on the part of Canadians. When we hear that the consumer is going to profit from a system of deregulation, it has to be balanced and tempered by the question of safety. It is fine to say that consumer A wishes to spend less money going from Toronto to Montreal—and that is valid—but consumer "A" is also worried about getting there safely.

If we cannot convince consumer A that deregulation is going to be safe, if we cannot convince him there are enough inspectors to inspect planes and if we cannot convince him that there are enough control tower operators to operate the traffic at the airports properly, then I suggest consumer A would rather pay more to have safety while he is going from point A to point B. It is not only a question of the dollar for the consumer, but a question of safety.

That brings us to the other issue. When we are talking about consumers and safety for consumers, we are talking about listening to consumers. The Government was elected on the grand declarations of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) that the Government would be one of openness, one to consult broadly and one to govern for Canadians by Canadians. That is great rhetoric, but when it comes to consulting, that does not happen. Look, for instance, at the de Havilland situation. It was such a great deal, the Government did not want anyone to see it. It was a struggle to get the committee we did to study the situation for a couple of weeks.

I went to a meeting last night in Toronto hosted by the Council for Canadians. There were 300 people all wanting more consultation. They were not happy about a committee studying a situation cocoon style in Ottawa. They said they, together with 25 million other Canadians who are shareholders in this company, have not had a meeting, have not had an opportunity to participate to give input or to ask questions about their vision and future for their company. This Bill has the same problem.

Mr. Mazankowski: It is not a bill.

Mr. Marchi: This report or the suggestion we are discussing today. The Minister hopes to bring in legislation.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is the point.

Mr. Marchi: Therefore, it provides the groundwork for the legislation the Minister wants to bring in.

How can the Minister be honest about saying the Government has consulted broadly when the committee has gone to only three of the ten provinces? How can the Minister say that in my Province of Ontario Canadians have been consulted, when the only city that had a public hearing was Ottawa? There is more to Ontario than just Ottawa. One of the busiest airports in the country is located in Toronto. Was there a public hearing in Toronto? Was there a public meeting in Toronto? Were there discussions with consumers in Toronto? No, Mr. Speaker. Are Tories prepared to say that they wish to consult, to listen and to move prudently? They cannot have it both ways.

This particular committee has not exhausted the avenues of bringing Canadians into a discussion. That begs the question why the rush, why the hurry? What is it that the Minister and the Government are facing with respect to deregulation? Before the Government moves on legislation it can, with the Government's parliamentary and absolute majority, pass anything it wants. What is so wrong with going the extra distance, with going to Toronto, to the other seven provinces and the smaller remote communities to discuss the matter openly, not behind closed doors in some committee room in the West Block in Ottawa? What is wrong with going out there on the street? Why has that not been done?

We have suggested in the House today and we have suggested all along that while we are prepared to have reform of our transportation industry, reforms must be cautiously done, they must be prudent and in concert with the wishes and aspirations of Canadians. Those wishes and aspirations have not been received in the way that they should.

We call upon the Government, particularly the Minister of Transport, who is a fairly competent Minister in his portfolio, to allow the committee the extra time. If the Minister can take 15 months to produce a document, surely to God we can have equal time to analyse the document with Parliament and with Canadians. That is our message, Mr. Speaker.

We are not against reforms. We are pro reform as long as Canadians have a say in the process and as long as Canadians can be assured that the airline industry will be delivering a system of which they can be proud, but more important with which they can feel safe.

Mr. Belsher: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment about the safety aspect. I must remind the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) instituted the Dubin inquiry in 1979. The findings of that report are now being carried out. The Aeronautics Act of last year is a part of that report. Safety issues are uppermost in the Minister's deliberations.

Talking about what happened in the U.S. over the air traffic controllers is another issue. It is not part of the deregulation problem. Last week only one organization condemned deregulation, namely, the machinists union. Even the President of the Airline Pilots Association said deregulation had benefited the majority of people. It had been detrimental to his union but to the majority of people it was of benefit.

With deregulation in the United States, employment has increased while ours in a regulated society has gone down. Even the aviation consumers action group headed by Ralph Nader told us there were 200 communities which had lost service prior to 1978. That was in a regulated environment. When we start talking about what is going to happen, the Hon. Member for York West should tell us in a balanced perspective way what it is he is talking about. The Minister has brought in regulations and has brought in a method of input even before the legislation is introduced. What more can the Hon. Member ask for?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member.

It being six o'clock, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6 p.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

EXCISE TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-80, An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: Before indicating the grouping, I gather the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) wishes to rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, there are two matters that I wish to raise. With regard to the amendments that appear in the Notice Paper in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong), with the consent of the House I would like to withdraw on behalf of the Hon. Member Motion Nos. 13, 17, 18 and 21. The reason is that the subject matter is dealt with in other amendments and it would be redundant in our opinion to debate them and take the time of the House.

I also wish to seek consent of the House to have the other amendments that are acceptable to the Chair for the purpose of debate moved by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) in the absence of the Member for Regina East.

Mr. Speaker: I take it that the Hon. Member is indicating he has the consent of the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) and that the Hon. Member for Regina East consents to other matters in his name being moved by someone else. Is that correct?

Mr. Deans: That is correct.

Mr. Speaker: For the information of the House, the same effect is obtained by not moving the motions when they appear. Since these are notices of motions on the Order Paper, we are now withdrawing the notice and, therefore, no unanimous consent is required.

I apologize to the House. I prefer to give my ruling in both official languages but I was only handed the English text. There are 19 report stage motions on the Notice Paper in amendment to Bill C-80, An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof.

Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) should be debated and voted on separately.

Motion Nos. 2 and 3 will be combined for debate and voted on separately.

Motion Nos. 4, 5 and 6 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), present me with some procedural difficulty. Motion No. 5 appears to change the formula by which the tax rate for regular leaded gasoline is adjusted. This would increase the charge on the public by increasing the rate of taxation for regular leaded gasoline. I would draw the Hon. Member's attention to Citation 524 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. Thus, I would be forced to rule the motion out of order. Since Motion Nos. 4 and 6 are consequential on Motion No. 5, they likewise could not be put to the House.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10 will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows: a vote on Motion No. 7 will also apply to Motion No. 9. Motion No. 8 will be voted on separately. Motion No. 10 will be voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 11 and 12 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motion No. 14 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motion No. 15 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) proposes to increase the tax rates on petroleum products and would infringe on Schedule II of the Bill. It appears to exceed the provisions of the Motion of Ways and Means, which makes the motion procedurally inadmissible. I would refer the Hon. Member to Citation 523 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition.

[English]

Motion No. 16 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motion Nos. 19 and 20 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motion Nos. 22 and 23 should be combined for debate. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 22 will obviate the need to put the question on Motion No. 23. A negative vote on Motion No. 22 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 23.

There may be some desire to make procedural argument with regard to Motion Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 15. Members are free to take some time to consider my comments and make some arguments if they wish, but I intend to begin with Motion No. 1.

• (1110)

Before I do, may I ask the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), just for clarity, whether he is seeking the consent of the House that the motion be in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

Mr. Deans: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Or does the Member simply want the motion moved on his behalf?

Mr. Deans: If I may, Mr. Speaker, it would be better if we just moved the motion on behalf of the Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong).

Mr. Speaker: The motion is as follows: Mr. Orlikow, for Mr. de Jong moves:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 15 by striking out lines 44 to 46 at page 14 and substituting the following therefor:

"(5) Subsection (3) shall be deemed to have come into force on July 1, 1985."

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am sorry, but I thought I heard you say July 1, 1985. I believe it was July 1, 1986. I may be in error, but that was my understanding.

Mr. Speaker: The Order Paper says July 1, 1985. Has the motion been submitted not in the way in which it was intended? If so, the House can, by unanimous consent, treat it as a typographical error, or another Member may move an amendment thereto.

Mr. Deans: If you would, Mr. Speaker, perhaps the debate could start as you put it, and I will check.

Mr. Speaker: Commencing debate. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, we moved this amendment because we believe the whole thrust of the changes and increases in the excise tax are very regressive. Sales taxes are a regressive form of taxation because everyone pays the same amount of tax no matter what his or her income. Consequently, these taxes take up a large proportion of the income of low-income consumers.

The Canadian Council on Social Development has estimated that for a family of four these sales and excise tax increases will result in an increased tax burden for a family with an income of $15,000 a year of $140.00; the increase and tax burden for a family with an income of $20,000 will be $282; and for a family with an income of $40,000 annually the increase will be $361.

Let us contrast the regressive increase in the sales and excise taxes with the $500,000 lifetime capital gains exemption announced in the Budget. In the 1982 taxation year, persons with incomes over $50,000 accounted for 63 per cent of the value of net taxable capital gains, according to the National Council on Welfare in its publication issued in July, 1985. This capital gains exemption applies on all capital gains, no matter where they come from. An investor can write off capital gains that accrue to his or her from an investment outside of Canada, for example, Florida real estate.

If one can make an argument to support this kind of proposal by the Government surely it can only be made if the money saved is invested in projects that will provide more jobs and a more efficient industry than we now have. Certainly there is nothing to be gained, except for the person not paying the tax by investing in a boat or a condominium in Florida.

On the other hand, if we look at corporation taxes, recent figures indicate that the effect of tax incentives will reduce the average federal corporation income tax from 36 per cent to 15 per cent, especially if qualifying under certain grant programs. When the benefits from special tax incentives are added, we are looking, in some cases, at extraordinarily generous levels of assistance. That is what the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) said in a speech to the Canadian Tax Foundation on November 28, 1984.

Let us look at what Bill C-80 does. It is the legislation which implements the key elements of last May's Budget, namely increases in federal sales taxes and excise taxes. The difference between the two taxes in that the sales tax is an ad valorem tax, being assessed as a percentage of the price of the good, for example, 7 per cent, while the excise tax is assessed at a fixed rate per unit of good, and, for example, 2 cents a litre on gasoline. This is being done at a time when oil prices around the world are coming down.

The main thrust of Bill C-80 is to increase revenue through changes in both the scope and rates of federal sales and excise tax. Another less important aspect of this Bill includes changes to the administration of the Excise Tax Act as far as retailers are concerned. The changes are similar to the current system under the Income Tax Act, and incorporate the recent changes to that statute in the areas of search and seizure and the deferral of collection action by the Government until the taxpayer has had an opportunity to resolve any disputes arising with respect to his or her tax liability.

Let me list the major tax increases in the Bill. We have taken all these figures from the budget papers. The rates of federal sales tax will be increased by 1 per cent effective January 1, 1986, and the new rates are 7 per cent on construction materials; 7 per cent on cable and pay television services; 14 per cent on alcoholic beverages; 14 per cent on tobacco products and 11 per cent on other taxable goods. The total cost to the Canadian consumer in 1986-1987 is $990 million. In other words, just when the consumer needs more disposable income to keep the economy going, these proposals take almost a billion dollars out of his pocket.

The federal sales tax is broadened. Sales tax exemptions for candy and confectionary, soft drinks, pet foods, a host of health products, non-prescription drugs and energy conservation equipment are repealed. The total cost to the Canadian consumer is $785 million to the end of fiscal year 1986-1987.

Let me pause for a moment and ask if there is one Member of Parliament who has not heard from our seniors about the adverse effect of the provision in sales tax which will now be applied to drug items, such as aspirin, liniments, cough syrups and a host of items which seniors use so frequently.

Excise taxes have been increased. Effective September 3, 1985, there is an increase of 2 cents a litre on gasoline and aviation gasoline; 2 cents a litre on diesel fuel and aviation fuel. Effective January 1, 1987, there is an increase of 1 cent a litre on gasoline and aviation gasoline and I cent a litre on diesel fuel and aviation fuel. The cost of this motive fuels tax increase to the end of fiscal year 1986-1987 is $1.325 billion.

The various per unit taxes on different categories of alcohol are increased by 2 per cent. The price of a package of cigarettes has increased by 25 cents a package of 25. The cost to the consumer by the end of the fiscal year 1986-1987 is $440 million. The cost to the Canadian consumer of these excise tax increases is $1.765 billion. When combined together, the cost of these tax increases to the end of fiscal year 1986-87 comes to $3.54 billion.

Let me summarize all the figures. The 1 per cent sales tax increase for 1986-87 will cost consumers $990 million. The broadening of the federal sales tax will cost consumers $785 million by the end of fiscal year 1986-87. Fuel tax increases will cost consumers $1.325 million, and the alcohol and tobacco excise tax increases, $440 million. The total, to the end of fiscal year 1986-87, will be $3.54 billion.

In the annual review published by the Economic Council of Canada in 1984, it was pointed out that corporate tax expenditures, forgone tax revenue, was between $30 billion and $50 billion per year. That is precisely what we object to so strenuously. At the same time as the Conservative Government of Canada is sticking it to ordinary Canadians, it is permitting and encouraging further giveaways to corporations, in particular to large corporations.

Let us look at some of the dubious corporate tax expenditures. Accelerated capital cost allowance allows a business to write off, against income, depreciation of assets at a faster rate then is actually the case. The cost in 1981 was $2 billion. This gives incentive to corporations to use capital instead of labour. It is an invitation to corporations to use more modern machinery and to lay off workers. Then we have the infamous one which was brought forward by the Minister of Finance in the Liberal Government, Mr. Lalonde, and continued by the Conservative Government, even though we have all seen how misused it was.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. We are at report stage, and I think speeches are limited to 10 minutes. I would like them to be pertinent to the amendment before us, if possible.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I was just about to rise to say to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) that his time had expired. I am sure he was getting to the point of relevancy, but I regret that his time has expired.

Mr. Orlikow: I wonder whether I could just complete the example I was trying to give. The infamous proposal made by the former Minister of Finance, Mr. Lalonde, was supposed to cost taxpayers $100 million or $200 million and was supposed to encourage scientific research. That proposal has been misused by corporations and by very bright tax lawyers and tax accountants. Through the quick flip which corporations have used, they have been able to sell research tax credits even though no research was ever done. It was estimated in 1984 that it would cost taxpayers $2 billion and, by the time it is closed off, $3.5 billion.

I have indicated some of the reasons we are opposed to this provision of the Bill and why we are proposing that the amendment be postponed.

Mr. Speaker: Before proceeding to debate Motion No. 1 further, I gather the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) is ready to make arguments on his motions.

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, a few minutes ago you drew my attention to Motion Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 15 standing in my name and to Citations 523 and 524 in Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. As directed by Your Honour, I have read those citations and have to conclude that the scope of the amendments which I am proposing at report stage does not fall within the framework of those citations. I must admit that I was hoping to find an appropriate vehicle for those amendments, because I feel very strongly about them for environmental reasons. From a policy point of view, I think they are worthy of consideration.

At this stage, and to make my intervention as short as possible, I thank Your Honour for directing my attention to the two citations. Of course I accept your directions. I will participate at third reading debate by putting forward the thoughts which are contained in those amendments.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for his comments. Therefore, Motion Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 15 will not be presented to the House.

Is the House ready for the question on Motion No. 1?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 1 which has been moved by Mr. Orlikow for Mr. de Jong. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 81(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. David Orlikow (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 16 by striking out line 40 at page 16 and substituting the following therefor:

"1986".

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 16 by striking out line 43 at page 16 and substituting the following therefor:

"force on January 1, 1987."

He said: Mr. Speaker, in debating the earlier motion I indicated the reasons for opposing virtually all of these. I do not need to make any long speeches about why we oppose the taxation on video cassettes.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to support Motions Nos. 2 and 3 which are combined for debate. Both motions have the effect of postponing for one year the effective date of tax increases on goods taxed under the Excise Tax Act. I do not feel strongly on spirits and so on, but I wish to address myself to Schedule V goods, construction materials.

We find many fixed-price contracts in the construction industry. It is extremely difficult, especially for small construction firms, to be asked to absorb the costs of this large increase in sales tax on construction materials without notice. Therefore, the proposal of the Hon. Member that the tax be postponed for one year is a compromise. It would be preferable not to have the tax at all, but at least a postponement for one year would avoid a situation where small construction businesses and contractors may be forced out of business because they are locked into fixed-price contracts.

[Translation]

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I also have a few comments to make in support of this amendment because it is a very important one for the construction industry.

As Hon. Members are aware, long-term planning is characteristic of this industry. Contracts are signed that sometimes, and I would even say often, extend over several years in order to finish the work under these contracts, and a tax increase on such short notice, as little as a month, will put the construction industry especially in a risky situation.

We all know that the profit margins, which are in fact quite small in this industry, depend on the amount of the contract. The tax would therefore have a disastrous impact on the growth and survival of this industry.

• (1130)

Mr. Speaker, I think it would make sense for the Government to give fairly generous notice, and that is why we are supporting this motion.

As a member of the Legislative Committee on this Bill, I would like to point out that the construction industry made some very substantial and serious representations, and I would ask my fellow members to support this amendment.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the motion before the House today proposes to postpone the implementation of a budgetary measure for one year.

I am a little surprised at the stand taken by the Opposition in this respect, especially when we realize that in previous Budgets, all fiscal measures usually became effective on Budget night. In this case, we have allowed a period of five weeks, that is, five weeks between notice and application of this change.

Mr. Speaker, I feel this Government has allowed for the specific cases referred to by the Opposition, and considering the five weeks the industry will have had to plan accordingly, I think this is entirely fair and square. Postponing the implementation of this legislation for one year would in the final instance make no difference at all to the problems experienced by the industry in general.

On the other hand, the federal Treasury would lose the sum of $90 million which it needs, considering the mandate we received from the Canadian people on September 4, 1984, which was mainly to reduce the deficit, a deficit that as you know, Mr. Speaker, we inherited from our predecessors. It is easy for them to say today: Don't do this, don't do that. The fact remains that the $34 billion deficit we have to work with and we must fight daily is a legacy of the former Liberal Government.

The changes we are proposing are aimed at getting a healthier economy and better productivity in this country, an economy that will at last be what it should be, the kind of economy the construction industry, like any other industry, would like to have.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I will try to speak to the motion under consideration rather than comment on the deficit, which is not even mentioned in the motion.

The Parliamentary Secretary has just told us that this measure will cost Canadians an additional $90 million in taxes. Mr. Speaker, I would simply remind the House that this excise or sales tax, or this additional Government levy will hit construction materials particularly hard, as shown in the amendment under study, and that it will also impact on prefabricated Canadian houses and structures such as summer cottages, which create a lot of jobs. As I recall, Mr. Speaker, shortly after this Bill was introduced a number of asphalt and building materials firms that had already been awarded municipal contracts urged the Government to heed their representations concerning contracts already granted to companies which had filed bids in good faith but now found themselves faced with new taxes on their products. On second reading, Mr. Speaker, I remember the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) pointing out to the House that it was unfair to levy such a tax at this time because contracts had already been awarded and that the additional tax would be levied at the manufacturer's level, which would inflate costs and severely reduce the operating and profit margin.

As well, Mr. Speaker, I should like to remind the House that this tax will affect energy conservation. For instance, slow combustion stoves used to be tax-exempt, and they can contribute to energy conservation in Canadian homes. Now the Conservative Government slaps a sales tax on low combustion stoves, hardly the way to encourage Canadians to switch heating systems and do their bit in conserving energy.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I intend to support this motion to put off the adoption of the Bill for one year, just so Canadians will have that much more time to plan their energy conservation efforts and review contracts that have already been awarded. The Government would have a whole year to reconsider and perhaps change this tax.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 2 moved by Mr. Orlikow for Mr. de Jong. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Motions Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10 are grouped for debate.

Mr. Orlikow (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 7

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 19

(a) by adding immediately after line 30 at page 19 the following:

"(4) The tax imposed by section 27 on the sale price of fabricated structural steel and pre-cast concrete for buildings and other structures shall be imposed on only sixty per cent of the sale price thereof."

(b) by adding immediately after line 37 at page 19 the following:

Motion No. 10

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 19

(a) by adding immediately after line 30 at page 19 the following:

"(4) The tax imposed by section 27 shall come into force on January 1, 1986."

(b) by adding immediately after line 37 at page 19 the following:

"(4) The tax imposed by section 27 shall come into force on January 1, 1986."

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, during consideration of Bill C-80 in Committee, representatives of various associations in the construction industry gave us very detailed explanations. This morning, however, for the information of the Members of this House, I would like to quote or perhaps even put forward some of the proposals made by these representatives of the construction sector before the Committee. The Canadian Construction Association said it failed to understand why the Minister tried to justify the amendment to Subsection 26.4 by saying, and I quote:

Construction practices have since changed substantially, and there is now virtually no on-site manufacturing of these products.

To the best of our knowledge, there has been no change in construction practices since this subsection was introduced in 1963, at which time the previous exemption from sales tax for construction goods was withdrawn. We do not know the origin of this statement and believe the changes were made without proper research being done as to the impact.

Mr. Speaker, we wondered about this during the Budget debate, and during question period we asked the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) whether there had been any consultation on the subject, and now representatives from the construction industry have admitted that there was no consultation.

Subsection 26.(4) was put into the Excise Tax in recognition that without the subsection, prefabricated construction goods would attract more sales tax liability than alternative construction methods which can be performed on site. Subsection 26.(4) had four paragraphs. With respect to Bill C-80, in subsection 19.(1) and subsection 19.(2), the Government recognizes the validity of continuing the tax equity provided by paragraph 26.(4)(a), by providing for the sales tax on mobile homes and modular building units to be determined on the basis of 70 per cent of the manufacturer's selling price.

And that is the purpose of my amendment. It has been acknowledged indeed that mobile homes do have some parts which ought to be tax-exempt, and we fail to see why the same rationale would not apply in the case of the various precast concrete units. Here is what the Canadian Construction Association had to say to the committee:

We are recommending similar recognition be granted to precast concrete building sections and fabricated structural steel. There is no rationale which we can see that recognizes relief for one category of subsection 26.(4) without also applying to other categories within subsection 26.(4).

Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Construction Association tax consultants went on to say:

We do not understand that statement, because the disparity is now much greater than it was before—and the Canadian Prestressed Concrete Institute will be giving details on this in their presentation—but essentially what you have is a situation where the goods were taxed on the same value; that is, the materials, taxable materials, going into it before the budget. After the budget, prestress concrete was taxed on the factory gate selling price, including material, labour, overhead and profit. Of course, this includes all the non-taxable ingredients, such as sand, gravel and water, which were non-taxable before they all came in the tax base. The poured-in-place concrete becomes taxable on the cement delivered at the ready-mix plant, but the difference is that the on-site labour, overhead and profit are not in the tax base. Labour, overhead and profit should be added. In plant they are taxable, whereas they are not on site. The disparity is much greater. We do not understand the Minister's statement at all.

Mr. Speaker, this statement made by a member of the Canadian Construction Association was to the effect that the Minister had said that the major reason for this budget measure was to avoid any disparity between precast concrete and poured-in-place concret. The industry has shown that such is not the case. I say, therefore, that this provision in Bill C-80 is not right because it will create discrimination within the same industry between one type of construction and another.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee heard various testimonies concerning precast construction, including the following:

Let us now look at how Bill C-80 would be applied to our industry and to our principal competitor, cast-in-place construction.

When we compare two identical buildings which are built using the two different methods of construction we see that Bill C-80 will tax materials supplied by either method to the full extent: 6 per cent now, 7 per cent in 1986—no difference. However, when we compare the labour components we see that plant labour is fully taxed; yet the field labour, which has performed essentially the same function and achieves the same result, is not taxed at all. Plant overhead and profit are fully taxable. On the other hand, cast-in-place construction has no tax applied to this portion.

As we have shown in the slides, similar costs of labour and overhead and profit are fully taxed for precast construction and not taxed at all for cast-in-place construction. In our opinion, this is not equitable. The two methods are identical and the end result, the completed building structure, is the same.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that, to prove their point, these organizations even brought slides to the committee responsible for examining Bill C-80, and that all the members of the committee, representing the three parties, were unanimous in saying that this provision should be withdrawn from the Bill.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, if I understand correctly, among the amendments we are considering now is Motion No. 7 which I moved on behalf of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong). The reason we moved Motion No. 7 is quite simple. I would like to support the argument made by the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou (Mr. Gagliano) who just completed his remarks.

I am sure all Members of Parliament are aware of the fact that for a couple of years now, the construction industry in Canada has been in tremendous difficulty. A large number of companies have gone bankrupt. Many of them, and not only the small companies, have hung on by the skin of their teeth.

The situation in the City of Winnipeg is not an exceptional case. In fact, Winnipeg has done better than many other cities, particularly cities in Alberta and British Columbia. However, there have been periods when the unemployment rate among construction workers in Winnipeg has been at a low of 40 per cent and a high of up to 60 per cent or more. Hundreds of workers who had worked almost continuously during the 1960s and 1970s subsequently were without work for long periods of time, used up their unemployment insurance benefits or went on welfare. Some of them had to travel great distances to other provinces to get work and experienced lengthy separations from their families in order to get any kind of work at all.

We find it incomprehensible that the Government of Canada would propose to increase the tax on any activity associated with the construction industry. It is an industry which needs all the help it can get in order to become viable and for companies to be able to operate, make a profit and provide jobs for workers.

What we have proposed in this motion is that Clause 19 be amended in such a way as to permit the tax imposed on fabricated structural steel and precast concrete to be set at 60 per cent of the sales price. When we moved the motion we were simply acting upon concerns expressed by representatives of the industry that we put forward a measure which would ensure that the construction industry would remain competitive and that no advantage would shift to any particular sector of the industry.

In moving the motion, and in speaking to it, I hope the Government will pay attention to the concerns of the industry and support the amendment.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, like my colleagues who have already spoken to these amendments, I too regret that sales tax is being increased on building materials. In my own constituency a very large proportion of the workforce is employed in the construction industry and anything which dampens construction activity is certainly felt immediately in terms of jobs.

Clause 19, which we are suggesting be amended, proposes to impose sales tax on a percentage of the sales price of modular building units and mobile homes. As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou (Mr. Gagliano), has pointed out, there is an inequity here on which many representations were made by representatives of the industry to members of the committee. Therefore, the amendment has the effect of equalizing the tax burden on makers of prefabricated construction units vis-à-vis their competitors, builders of similar types of construction on site.

I support these amendments in the name of equity. However, I deplore the fact that the sales tax is being imposed in the first place.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the comments made by Members such as the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou (Mr. Gagliano) and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), I would like to say that the provisions related to the difference between goods manufactured at the construction site and those manufactured elsewhere, in subsection 26(4), were designed to distribute evenly the sales tax on completed buildings by ensuring that building materials would be subject to a tax whose absolute value would be the same, whether the materials were manufactured on the building site or in a plant.

Mr. Speaker, attempts to distribute fairly the tax on various buildings and construction projects by applying the concept of manufacture at the site of construction and outside the site have been ineffective for many years since the manpower required on a building site to put up a structure varies substantially according to the design, the type of material, the time available, the temperature and a number of other factors.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that both the Opposition parties and the Government want a fair taxation system, but this cannot be achieved by trying to distribute equally the tax on buildings or similar projects since the erected buildings themselves are not taxed.

The best compromise, Mr. Speaker, is to amend the present tax system, to tax all manufactured components on a common basis, whatever manpower, general costs or benefits are added afterwards during the construction.

Mr. Speaker, repealing subsection 26(4) will achieve this objective by ensuring that the federal sales tax on all building materials will be collected on the price charged by the manufacturer.

Mr. Speaker, as we have already pointed out, the only exception concerns mobile homes and modular building units. These products are complete or nearly complete houses or buildings when they are sold, which is not the case of other pre-fabricated building materials and structural components which are simply part of the final structure of the buildings.

Application of this provision to structural steel and pre-fabricated concrete products cannot be justified by saying that special provisions have been provided for modular buildings and mobile homes, as these are quite different concepts. It is like mixing apples and oranges.

This would be totally unfair to the manufacturers of ready-mix concrete and asphalt paving mixtures or of wooden trusses, which also come under the provisions of subsection 26(4).

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I think that to do so would be an insult to the many manufacturers of building materials who have always been fully subject to the sales tax on the price of their uninstalled materials.

Mr. Speaker, let me point out that I was also a member of the committee referred to by the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou (Mr. Gagliano). It is true that representations were made, but it is not true that all the committee members were unanimous on the proposals made by the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou. The change introduces more fairness into our tax system, and therefore I do not support the motion.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would also like to add a few comments, since Motion Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10 are combined for debate. I would like to suggest to the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary that oranges and grapefruits . . . since we deal with four motions, quite possibly this looks like a banana. But we should above all be careful not to add to the confusion. Therefore, to clarify, these are amendments dealing with off-site prefabrication, for on-site building. This is clear in my view.

Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 10 is aimed at deferring for one year the impact of that sales tax, that is regressive in our view; in other words, the tax imposed by Section 27 would come into force on January 1, 1986. Mr. Speaker, this was proposed to respond to the industry itself, which told the Committee: "You are foisting on us a burden that was not expected. You are foisting on us a tax that was not in our computations, in our estimates and which of course we have had to add to the selling price, with the end result that our profits will decrease". The industry itself has asked for a delay. To meet that request which is quite justified, the Government has been very reluctant as usual, but that representation was made by the industry. It is beyond me that the Government will not understand that contracts signed before those budget measures are leading to financial difficulties. This affects or jeopardizes good relations between the Government and builders, manufacturers. Some day the Government will have to listen to what Canadians are saying, and will have to give a just, fair and decent response to their representations.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I believe the amendment itself is quite simple. We want to defer for a year the impact of that tax, so that those people who were not expecting it can adjust their costs to this taxation.

Mr. Orlikow (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 11

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 34 by striking out line 46 at page 28 and substituting the following therefor:

"applies therefor within three years after he".

He said: Hon. Members who will look at the Bill will see that Clause 34 is a very lengthy and quite technical clause. It changes tax rates for a whole range of products. It also permits a person or company, where an error or overpayment has been made on payment of tax, to make a claim for compensation within a period of two years. The purpose of this amendment is to allow the individual or company the right to make a claim within the same time period as the Government.

It does seem to us that the people of Canada, as individuals or as companies, should have the same rights of fair treatment as the Government in terms of time during which they can apply to have errors or overpayments corrected. That is why we put forward this motion.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to repeat the argument which has been made by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow). However, I want to say that we in this Party also very much believe in the principle of equity. As the Bill before us stands, Clause 34 would allow a citizen who considers that he has overpaid in error only two years to get that error corrected whereas in a subsequent clause, Clause 37, the Government is allowed four years to come back with a reassessment.

This motion before us, and another one, will make the terms three years for both citizen and Government which, I think, is fair and something which I hope all Hon. Members in the House would support. I, therefore, support Motion No. 11 which changes from two years to three years the length of time in which taxpayers may apply for the refund of moneys paid in error pursuant to assessment.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this motion by the Opposition Member to extend the time period from two or three years seems to be asking a bit too much from our tax system. I dealt with taxation matters for a number of years before having the privilege of being elected here, and it is my view that for the taxpayer to have two years during which to apply for a refund or a reassessment from the federal Government is quite a reasonable period. Two years, Mr. Speaker, means that one has twice 365 days to look at one's books, to realize there is something to be changed, to write to the Government and apply for that change. Therefore, here again I must oppose that motion.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to go back to the comments made by the Parliamentary Secretary because, naturally, if he believes that two years, or 365 days multiplied by 2, are enough to enable Canadians to ask the Government to reconsider that tax, the same should be true for the Government. We see that in another motion, which we will discuss in a few minutes, a 4-year period is asked for the Government. I think that the point made by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson), is that in this instance the principle of fairness is involved. This principle says that the taxpayers and the Government should have their right to payments, to requests, to tax issues. However, if the amendment as proposed is not accepted, Canadians would have two years to make their case; if they think, for instance, that they paid too much tax, they will have just two years to ask the Government to reconsider its decision. However, at the same time in another motion, the Government is given four years to reconsider the tax paid by Canadians. The Parliamentary Secretary says no, but it is true.

If we read, for instance, the motion as proposed, we now know that two years are allowed, but the amendment would extend this period to three years during which the taxpayer could ask the Government to reconsider its assessment. I would like to talk about that, because it is linked to Motion No. 14 that we are now considering. The Government allows itself four years in which to prosecute a taxpayer. All we are asking for is equity, we want the taxpayer and the Government to have the same length of time in which to reconsider the tax, whether it be two, three or four years. We submit that if the Government can tell the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) that he did not pay enough taxes in 1981, fairness requires that the said Mr. Gauthier be given the right to tell the Government that he paid too much that year. All we are asking for with these amendments is equity, a notion clearly spelled out by the former critic on revenue matters.

We recall very well that when the present Sollicitor general was the National Revenue critic, he asked for equity for all, he wanted the taxpayers to have a reasonable length of time to appeal decisions of the Department of National Revenue.

Now that they are in power, the Conservatives decide to give the Government four years in which to prosecute taxpayers, but only two years for a taxpayer to appeal. This is not fair. It should be three years for both parties, as suggested by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg and supported by our expert on such matters, our president of the Public Accounts Committee, the Hon. Member for Trinity. It would be fair and equitable to give the taxpayer and the Government the same length of time in which to appeal decisions pertaining to tax matters.

Mr. David Orlikow (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 12

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 34 by striking out line 8 at page 46 and substituting the following therefor:

"January 1, 1988."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I represent an urban riding and I do not suppose I have more than about six or eight farmers in my constituency. However, one cannot live in a city like Winnipeg without realizing the importance of farmers to the economy of this country, particularly the economy of western Canada. There cannot be a Member of Parliament who is unaware of the great difficulties farmers have had in recent years. Partly because of drought, partly because of cold weather, partly because of the price they receive for their goods, and partly because their costs have gone up, more and more farmers have gone into bankruptcy. Many more than that have simply quietly closed up and sold out. Clause 34(4) says the following:

> Where gasoline or diesel fuel has been sold in bulk by a registered vendor to
> (a) a qualified farmer for farming purposes,
> (b) a qualified fisherman for commercial fishing,
> (c) a qualified hunter for commercial hunting,
> (d) a qualified trapper for commercial trapping,
> (e) a qualified person for use in logging, or
> (f) a qualified person for use in mining, for the sole use of the purchaser and not for resale and the tax imposed . . . has been paid or is payable in respect of the gasoline or fuel, a fuel tax rebate in an amount calculated . . . shall . . . be paid to that registered vendor if he applies therefore within two years after he sold the gasoline or fuel.

Very often it is difficult to keep track of these things. So many of them are unable to make their claim for a refund within two years. Therefore, we are proposing that this clause be amended and the period for making a claim extended by one year. The date specified in the Bill would be changed from January 1, 1987, to January 1, 1988. It seems to me that this proposal should have the support of all Members of this House, including Members on the Government side.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I am speaking in support of this amendment. Under the Excise Tax Act a repayment of the excise tax paid for gasoline and aviation fuel was available to certain purchasers who used the gasoline for specified purposes. Included among the categories of specialized users were the federal and provincial Governments, municipalities, farmers, hunters, trappers, certain commercial businesses, and public air transportation carriers. This measure is retained in part by virtue of Clause 26 and Clause 34 of the Bill. However, as of September 3, 1985, the amount of repayment is limited and the repayment measure is not extended to the newly taxed diesel and aviation fuels.

The amendment in Motion No. 12 extends for one year the expiration of the three cent a litre fuel tax rebate for fuel used for commercial purposes off public highways by farmers, fishermen, hunters, trappers, loggers and miners.

What we are dealing with to a certain extent is retroactive legislation, or at least legislation which gives commercial users very little time to adapt to what could be a substantial cost to their business. Whereas the Bill makes the change effective January 1, 1987, the amendment before us will make the change effective January 1, 1988. This seems more reasonable when one considers the impact on so many farmers, fishermen, hunters, trappers, loggers and miners who are not usually or necessarily the kind of people who have tremendous assets or are in a position to make provisions for sudden increased costs. Therefore, I hope the House will see fit to support this amendment which does not oppose the tax itself but does ask for a reasonable length of time to allow people to adjust to it.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I just want to comment briefly on Motion No. 12, which reads as follows:

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 34 by striking out line 8 at page 46 and substituting the following therefor:

"January 1, 1988."

So the purpose of the amendment is to extend the right of individuals who engage in fishing, trapping, logging and mining to deduct three cents per litre of fuel they use in these operations.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is only fair to allow these people, who up to now were entitled to a three-cent rebate per litre, to continue to enjoy this rebate for another year, that is, until 1988 at least, and as a result make their operations more profitable. And I am now thinking of a group I know well, I am referring to Ottawa Vally trappers in Calabogie, Arnprior and Renfrew—

[English]

—who earn their living mainly on trapping and tourists and a fuel rebate of three cents a litre is an important factor in their economic planning. I know that many of them have complained to me. I could give you names, but that is not necessary at this time. However, many of them have come to me and asked why the Government does not listen to them when they tell the Government that the rebate is important to them. They say it is important that they reduce their costs because they are under so much pressure. I am thinking of those in the trapping industry in the Ottawa valley who have seen their revenues decrease as a result of environmental concerns and the lobby which has been put up against their trade. In many cases this profession has been handed down for generations in the Ottawa valley. Third and fourth generations in the Ottawa valley have made a living on tourism, trapping and forestry operations. I know that mining is a very important component of the economy in the Calabogie area.

• (1220)

I plead with the Government to be responsive and understanding of the request that is made and to approve this extension of the rebate for another year.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, in light of the comments made by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), my great grandfather, who was a mineralogist in the Ottawa valley, would roll over in his grave if I did not stand up to support this amendment. He made his living in this way when nobody believed it was possible. The story in my family is that he once had a stake to Hemlow. I do not know what happened to it, so here I am.

I support the amendment and urge its support from those Members on the Government side of the House who have remained stangely silent during the recent debate in the House on the issue of gas prices. A number of those Members were very vocal on this issue during the election. I am thinking particularly of the Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) who promised that he would reduce the price of gasoline.

This amendment may not directly influence the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) because she is perhaps immovable. However, this is a measure on which ordinary Members can stand in the House and support an extension of a 3 cent a litre rebate directed toward specific occupations.

One such occupation is farming. We are aware of how farmers have been devastated by the continuing high price of gasoline and the fuel tax. Others who would benefit from this amendment include fishermen, hunters, trappers, loggers and miners.

There are Members on the government side who are concerned about the inequities in the current government policy on the price of gasoline. We know that the world price of oil is dropping while the cost in Canada continues to rise, with Petro-Canada as our game leader in the increase of the price per litre. Therefore, I urge those concerned Government Members to speak out and support this small amendment which only provides for a 3 cent per litre rebate. Those who are familiar with the agricultural sector know that 3 cents a litre means much to farmers who are teetering on the brink of bankruptcy.

We ask the Government to support such an extension so that farmers, fishermen, loggers, trappers and hunters can get a small break when it is obvious that other consumers will not.

I notice that one distinguished Hon. Member from Newfoundland is in the House today. I know he would like to support this amendment because of his concern about the fishermen. Perhaps he can convince other members of his caucus that the fishermen should get a break of 3 cents a litre by extending the rebate beyond the period set by the Government.

The Hon. Member is a former sea-going man and knows the importance of the cost of fuel to fishermen. He should express his views to show his colleagues in the House as well as his constituents the importance of this issue. I urge him and other Members who have remained silent on the issue to speak out in defence of those constituencies that will be assisted by this specific amendment.

If they remain silent, their campaign speeches in the next election will fall on deaf ears. For instance, the people who voted for the Hon. Member for Duvernay believed that he may occasionally speak against government policy in support of those issues in which he believed, such as lower gas prices. We have not seen that happen, and I urge those government Members who have constituency interests in the areas of farming, fishing, forestry and trapping to support this amendment which would give a break to those who really need a break in these tough times.

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to the House that the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) did speak out on this issue in the House yesterday and, in fact, pointed out that in September, 1984, the price of gasoline in his City of Montreal was 59.9 cents a litre, but that even after increases in the present Budget and the legislation before the House, the price of gasoline in Montreal on January 28, 1986, had fallen to 58.3 cents a litre. The Hon. Member has been speaking out, as have other Members, and the Government's action has brought results in this matter.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, this is a limited amendment which would extend the present rebates on gasoline and diesel fuel tax for another year. One of the tacit assumptions made by provincial and federal Governments about these gasoline and diesel taxes is that they are used for two purposes. One is to raise revenues for the Government, and the other is to provide some disincentive to consumers using the non-renewable resource of gasoline or diesel fuel as a source of energy.

The point has been made that this disincentive may influence consumers who live in cities and those who run factories to switch to alternative sources of power, such as electricity generated by coal or the use of coal directly. However, there are some sectors which are very important to the Canadian economy that do not have access to this technology for an alternative source of energy. Therefore, farmers and fishermen must rely on gasoline and diesel powered machinery for their production, as do those who are engaged in trapping, logging and mining. They need machinery which enables them to move freely in isolated areas in order to explore for minerals, drill test holes or construct mine shafts. In order for the economy of the country to benefit from these types of commercial activities, which are the backdone of Canadian economic activity, we believe it is only fair that this particular rebate should continue for another year. Therefore, we propose that it continue at least until 1987.

[Translation]

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I would also like to say a few words in support of this motion, because to me it is appalling that a one-year extension is being denied our farmers, fishermen, hunters and miners who represent a segment of our population that truly needs it. They should be allowed one more year to claim those three cents per litre on all the gas they use, for boats for instance, in the case of fishing and hunting guides.

There are other possibilities, Mr. Speaker. I fail to understand why Government Members would vote against this motion when we consider the tax give-away the multinationals received. Today, these Members want to vote against a motion that would not repeal the tax but give a one-year extension to these people who truly represent a segment of our society that needs it most. Here again, it is a matter of taking from the poor to give to the rich.

[English]

Mr. Morrissey Johnson (Bonavista-Trinity-Conception): Mr. Speaker, I merely want to say that perhaps being a member of the Party that has formed the Government I have a better opportunity to voice my opinion pertaining to the welfare of my constituents in our caucus than Members in the Opposition, who do not have that opportunity.

I want to assure the Member from Hamilton that I am concerned about this Bill. I want to say, though, that perhaps when the Hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) brings down his Budget some time near the end of the month there might then be benefits for fishermen and farmers of which we are not aware at this time.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am quite flabbergasted. Frankly I am astonished to hear the speeches of the Liberal Members. They were in office for over 20 years, and the only thing they managed to do during their last two years on the job was to raise oil taxes. Then we came up with an ad hoc measure to solve a temporary problem, and taxes went down three cents a litre. Well, Mr. Speaker, I can still remember that when this measure was announced in November 1984 the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston) stood in his place and said that it was a regressive step, that it would not improve the situation, and so on. Here we are one year later, Mr. Speaker, but this time it is a good measure which must be accepted and extended.

Mr. Speaker, no wonder I am surprised they did not implement this measure. How come they did not do anything? It was no good when they were in office, but now that they sit on the Opposition benches they have made a complete about turn. Well, we took action in a specific and temporary situation, Mr. Speaker, because we wanted to help Canadians through difficult times, but the problem is no longer critical and the Opposition motion ought to be defeated.

Mr. David Orlikow (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 14

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 37 by striking out line 33 at page 58 and substituting the following therefor:

"three years after the tax, penalty, interest".

He said: Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to make any lengthy speech at this stage. This amendment proposes that the penalty period and the assessment period, for people who are penalized for not doing what they should according to a section of the Act—which I find very difficult to understand and which I am certain people affected find just as difficult as I do—be reduced from four years to three years.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I think a number of Members have already made mention of this motion in relation to the previous one, which would give taxpayers an additional year in which to apply for reversal of possible errors or overpayment. It was pointed out then that in the Bill, as it is printed, the taxpayer has only two years in which to get an error corrected while the Government has four years.

In Motion No. 14, the amendment reduces from four years to three years the length of time during which the Government may assess or reassess taxes owed. Since the Government Members have declined to accept any extension of the two year period for a taxpayer, I hope that they may consider reducing the Government's discretionary period from four years to three years so as to reduce the inequity a little.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, allow me a brief comment. Reducing the verification period of assessments from four to three years is an unacceptable proposal. Taxpayers know about their own situation and they should attend to their files. But on the other hand, you will understand that in the case of the Department of Revenue, there are millions of applications submitted each year, and it must be realized that the federal Department of Revenue cannot be expected to examine and scrutinize, within two or three months, or two years for that matter, everything in terms of applications and returns from taxpayers. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the four-year period is needed for sound management, so that representatives of the federal Department of Revenue can make the required inquiries and verifications with taxpayers.

Mr. David Orlikow (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 16

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 51 by striking out lines 15 to 28 at page 111.

He said: Mr. Speaker, until now fruit beverages that contain less than 25 per cent fruit juices have been exempted from this taxation. We are told by manufacturers that many of the powered fruit beverages such as Tang are used primarily by those people living in remote areas of Canada who do not have access to a wide range of products or to fresh and frozen fruit juices, as well as by families with low incomes. To apply the excise tax to these products would simply add to the cost of living of such people. They are the ones who need the protection. They find it necessary to use this type of product and cannot afford the increased cost that will be imposed upon them by this tax. It is for that reason that I have moved this motion.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak in favour of the amendment. I am glad to see that the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) is present in the House at this time. The proposed exemption would significantly affect a large number of the people he is mandated to serve and whose interests he is charged with protecting.

For example, in my riding there are some 30 communities which cannot be reached by road and are totally dependent on air travel for all the goods coming to their communities. These people have to pay very high prices for anything which comes into their communities in liquid form.

If I might disregard for 30 seconds the rule of relevance, I would like to use the example of gasoline. In some communities in my constituency it does not sell for 55 cents, 60 cents or 65 cents per litre, which so rightly caused complaint in southern areas of Canada. Rather, it sells for prices ranging from $1 per litre to $1.80 per litre. That is approximately three times the price of gasoline in southern Canada. We see similar examples of price differential caused by air freight when we look at consumable liquids such as juices, fluid milk, pop and other fruit beverages. It is for that reason that I should very much like to see the House pass this amendment.

There are many communities in my riding where Tang is a staple. It is a staple to a greater degree than orange juice is a staple to those who are fortunate enough to be able to purchase a can of orange juice or a can of frozen orange juice at a price of $1.39 to $1.49. If these people had to purchase the same can, they would be paying something in the order of $3 to $4. This is no exaggeration. Those cans are not sold in northern communities because they are frankly unaffordable to the people who would buy them.

This is something that has implications. Of course we know the implications of a tax on this sort of food. It is a food, no matter how much some of us may ignore its presence in the market-place. I do not drink Tang except when it is the only alternative, but Tang and its commercial clones are fulfilling a very valuable role in northern Canada for people who do not have any access, particularly during the winter, to fresh fruit, vegetables or fresh juice in its fluid form. If the excise duty of 9 per cent is put on these beverages, we will see an increase, not in the order of one cent, two cents or three cents per package. When it gets to northern communities and because of freight costs, even on dry goods, we will see an increase in the package price of something in the order of 10 cents to 15 cents. That will not represent gouging; it will just represent those people in the transportation and distributing cycles taking their mark-up on the price which will have been inflated by the imposition of this tax.

I should also like to point out the position of low-income families in southern Canada. It is my belief that Tang is a popular product with those people. Very often it is used as a substitute, and it is a reasonably good one. Tang and the similar products of its commercial competitors are reasonably good substitutes for fluid juices. Many people rely on them as beverages and as a good source of vitamin C.

I do not accuse the Government of doing this intentionally, but I appeal to it to take into account that it would be an unintentional form of discrmination against the poor, particularly Indian and Inuit people in northern communities, if this amendment were not accepted. Therefore I entreat the Government to give it the most urgent consideration.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this amendment. The Bill applies sales tax to certain beverages which might be considered to be perhaps leisure beverages or without any food value. As the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Parry) just said, possibly it was unintentional, but the drafting is such that it nets in beverages made from fruit flavoured crystal mix, even when they include vitamin C and might be considered as a healthy fruit juice substitute or food rather than a leisure thirst quencher.

The aim of the amendment is to create an exemption from the sales tax for beverages made from fruit flavoured crystal mix, sold for the purpose of a breakfast drink or a substitute for fruit juice, when it is not represented to be a product which is used for making a soft drink or thirst quenching drink and when it contains vitamin C in an amount not less than 48 milligrams per hundred millilitres when the drink is ready to serve.

As has been pointed out already, certainly this kind of product is used in isolated communities in the North where frozen orange juice and fluid orange juice are not available as a source of vitamin C or, if available, only at prohibitive prices because of the unusual transportation costs. Also, there are families with limited storage facilities who use this kind of product.

It would seem as though this kind of product were netted in with soft drinks in error and that it was an oversight. The amount of money involved in making this exception and giving some relief to low-income families, particularly to Indian and Inuit families in the far North, is not great to the Government, but the benefits to the people concerned would be great. It is a simple amendment, and I hope the Government will see fit to accept it.

Mr. Orlikow (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 19

That Bill C-80, be amended in Clause 51 by adding immediately after line 42 at page 111 the following:

2.1 Feeds and supplements for addition to such feeds for guide dogs used by people requiring their assistance.

2.2 Feeds and supplements for addition to such feeds for horses used in productive purposes.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the clause to which I am proposing an amendment says:

Feeds and supplements for addition to such feeds, for animals, fish, fowl or bees that are ordinarily raised to produce or to be used as food for human consumption.

These shall be exempted from this increase in taxes. We support that idea. There are certain other very important groups which need the same kind of protection. There are blind people who require the use of a guide dog. Those guide dogs are fed dog food. Without the support of a guide dog which permits them a great deal of freedom of movement, which they would not have without the use of a guide dog, they will now have to pay extra tax imposed on dog food. We are suggesting that that should be exempt.

There are still a substantial number of farmers and people involved in logging, particularly in eastern Canada, who are engaged in agriculture or logging on land on which it is not possible to conduct operations using tractors, so they are still using horses. These are people who are operating very small operations. They are not big earners, we believe they are merely scratching out a living at quite a low standard. To impose a tax on the feed which they have to use for their horses would be to impose a burden on them.

This amendment includes the purchases of dog food and feed for horses as those products which would be exempt from the new tax.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): This Bill applies sales tax to pet food, but makes no exceptions, even in the case of food for a guide dog, which is needed by a blind person. The amendment would exempt pet food for a guide dog. The wording is:

Feeds and supplements for addition to such feeds for guide dogs used by people requiring their assistance.

I hope the House will consider this amendment seriously because blind people usually live on small incomes, very often on disability pensions. The small increase in sales tax on pet food is a large item if the total income is small. The issue here really is the mobility of blind people and their ability to enhance their lives and take advantage of opportunities for education and training. Many Members of this House worked in a very commendable and constructive fashion on two parliamentary committees which were concerned with enhancing opportunities for the handicapped. Members from all sides will know how important guide dogs are for blind people in enabling them to be mobile, to travel, to take advantage of new experiences and to take part-time work or to follow courses of instruction.

I would ask the House to consider very seriously supporting this exemption from sales tax on pet food in the case of guide dogs needed by blind people. The amount of money is small, but the amount of the contribution to human freedom is large.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): It appears that the original intent of the Government, when it proposed to exempt feeds and supplements for addition to such feeds for animals, fish, fowl or bees that are ordinarily raised to produce or to be used as food for human consumption, was to get away from attempts to collect taxes on the feed that would be going into productive usage of the use of Canadians. There are a number of procedures that would be almost mind boggling if we were going to try to figure out how these taxes would be collected if feed were to be taxed. You trade feed between farms, you raise it on your farm, you tax yourself for feed that you raise for your own uses and that of your own animals. The Government decided not to try to impose a tax on these kinds of feeds.

If the Government's intention was not to impose tax on the productive sectors of society and thus reduce its productivity, should have included, as this amendment does, people who must use guide dogs in order to contribute to society. People who are blind have to use guide dogs, most of them. There is no sense of consistency here if we are going to start taxing the feed for guide dogs. As well, it makes no sense to be taxing people who have to use horses to make their living, whether they are logging or working cattle in a live stockyard, as some people do. The tax on production there makes no sense either.

So we think the amendment is consistent with what the Government originally had intended, and I am sure that is why Your Honour recommended that it was a proper amendment. I simply hope that the government Members will support this amendment as well, because it is consistent with what I think is a very good approach in the Bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I simply want to make a few comments on the proposed change. The purpose of Motion No. 19 is to exempt feeds and feed supplements for the guide dogs trained to help many Canadians to live a normal life and be able to get out of their houses.

I believe that it would be completely fair and justifiable to show some understanding and sympathy for those people and to exempt from the tax not only the feeds, but also the additions to the feeds for the dogs which contribute to the safety and welfare of Canadians suffering from a visual incapacity, blindness or some other problem requiring the assistance of a guide dog.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that this proposal is completely fair and reasonable and deserves our support.

DISCOVERY OF DIOXIN IN WINDSOR WATER SUPPLY

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, yesterday we heard the very disturbing news of dioxin being found in the drinking water of the city of Windsor and three other Ontario communities. Today we have heard reports of a Health and Welfare study showing dioxin in the blood of Canadians in all parts of the country. Today as well, we have the report of the Joint Task Force on the toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River, a report which does not give clear and reassuring answers to the concerns of Canadians about toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River or the finding of dioxin in the drinking water of the people of the Windsor area. There is evidence that, over the long term, even small amounts of dioxin in water can have an adverse cumulative effect on health.

Yesterday in the House, the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan), commenting on the presence of dioxin in southwestern Ontario's water supply, said that the quantity of substance found is minute, sporadic, and not harmful.

S.O. 22

As a representative of the Windsor area, I must tell the Minister that his words are not enough to restore the confidence of the people. What we need is an urgent program of controls on industry and the necessary funds to ensure access to pure water for the municipalities downstream. The Government has an obligation to the United States and to its own people regarding the dioxins in the St. Clair River and the Government must act now. Words are not enough.

MEDICAL CARE

GREEN PAPER ISSUED BY NEWFOUNDLAND GOVERNMENT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, a couple of weeks ago the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador issued a Green Paper on our health care system expenditures and funding. In the Green Paper the Conservative provincial Government indicated that it was looking at privatizing the medicare system, making dramatic cuts to health services, increasing the provincial deficit, and raising the already high taxes of the residents of that province.

In this document produced by a Conservative provincial Government, the blame for this is laid strictly on the federal Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). The cut-backs that have now been announced a number of times by the Minister of Finance, supported, we presume, by the Cabinet, are going to have the result of destroying another sacred trust.

In the words of the Conservative Government of Nova Scotia, the Conservative Government of Newfoundland and of the New Demoratic Party of Manitoba, the Government is out to destroy medicare and post-secondary education through the back door by taking away the funding that is necessary. The Government will ensure that the universal program we have at the present time for health services is destroyed because of lack of funding. The Government should be ashamed of itself. Now that Conservative Premiers are attacking it, perhaps the federal Government will wake up and indicate in the Budget we expect next month that it will finally reverse the decision it announced on May 23.

CALL FOR REPRESENTATIONS TO SOVIET UNION ON BEHALF OF RAOUL WALLENBERG

Mr. Gerry Weiner (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the 41st anniversary of Raoul Wallenberg's arrest by Soviet authorities and the adoption last December 10 by the Canadian Parliament of an all-Party resolution naming Wallenberg as Canada's first ever honorary citizen are being marked by a nation-wide tour by Mr. Per Anger, former Ambassador of Sweden to Canada and Wallenberg's close friend and colleague in Hungary during World War II.

The Raoul Wallenberg story is a chronicle of courage, dedication, and resourcefulness in the face of incredible odds and great personal danger. During World War II, Raoul Wallenberg, together with Per Anger, an attaché of the Swedish Legation in Budapest, worked tirelessly to save the Jewish community of Hungary. They issued provisional Swedish passports placing thousands under the protection of the Swedish Government. It is estimated that Wallenberg and Anger, through their heroic actions, saved 100,000 Hungarians destined for Nazi death camps.

Despite their heroism and humanitarianism, both Raoul Wallenberg and Per Anger were arrested by Soviet authorities as they entered Budapest. Per Anger, head of the Stockholm-based Raoul Wallenberg Committee, firmly believes that the Soviets can be pressed into releasing Wallenberg, or at least be called to account for his treatment to date. As a nation renowned for its solid and noble record as a relentless advocate of human rights and human dignity, Canada is now well poised to make legitimate government-to-government representations to the Soviet Union on Wallenberg's behalf.

Through his brief visit with us, Per Anger has helped raise our sensitivity and awareness of a truly heroic chapter in an otherwise tragic story. The Wallenberg story is one of hope—hope for a man and hope for mankind. Per Anger's past and present actions fill us with hope. In this respect—

SENIOR CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING CHAMPIONSHIP HELD AT ALMA, P.Q.—CONTRIBUTION OF VOLUNTEERS

Mr. Clément M. Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, although remote regions such as the one I represent rarely benefit from major investments, sometimes they do have the opportunity to hold major events.

In my riding yesterday, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian senior cross-country skiing championship ended in Alma. This event, which was widely reported in the media over the past seven days, was an unqualified success. This unqualified success was made possible thanks to the hard work and incredible dedication of the athletes, coaches, organizers and volunteers who have demonstrated that volunteering is still alive and well in our modern society.

The marvelous display which was offered to us is most encouraging. Our youth's performance was most promising for the 1988 Olympic Games.

I would be remiss if I did not emphasize also the enthusiastic welcome of the Alma citizenry.

Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to pay tribute to each and every participant.

AGRICULTURE

MARITIME LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, 440 days is a long time to wait for anything. When one waits for 440 days for a Government to act in an emergency situation, it is really an abdication of responsibility.

In November of 1984 the Maritime Farmers Council met with the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) at which time they put forward a solid plan to save an industry worth hundreds of millions of dollars to the maritime economy. The proposal calls for moneys to be directed for research and development in order to make the maritime livestock industry self-sufficient in feed grain within 15 years. The second, and equally important aspect of the plan, calls for a reinstatement of federal feed freight assistance to the level of 60 per cent.

The Government has shown its true colours through inaction. On numerous occasions during the past 440 days I have asked the Minister for a decision on behalf of maritime farmers. The Council of Maritime Premiers has pressed for a decision, and the Maritime Farmers Council has been equally adamant in its demands for action.

Is the Government interested in maritime agriculture? After 440 days of hiding from this issue the answer is obvious. The answer is that the policy of this Government with regard to maritime agriculture is to let it wither and die. Shame—shame on this irresponsible Government!

RETAIL PRICES CHARGED FOR GASOLINE

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, for the past few weeks Canadians have been writing to their Members of Parliament about the gasoline retail price differential which exists between Canada and the United States. Not only does the retail price of gasoline vary between countries, it also varies between regions. Even cities which are close to one another will show price differences.

In my riding of Fraser Valley East the retail price of a litre of leaded gasoline in Abbotsford is 56.2 cents. Less than 40 kilometres away in Greater Vancouver the price for an identical litre of gasoline is also 56.2 cents. However, a transit tax of approximately one cent per litre of gasoline in levied in the Vancouver area, whereas Abbotsford has no such extra tax. Why then is the price of gasoline the same as in Vancouver?

Surely, the price of gasoline should be cheaper in Abbotsford than in Vancouver. But this is not the case.

In September of 1985 the Mayor of Abbotsford wrote to all the major oil companies about their pricing practices. In my opinion the Mayor received a less than satisfactory answer. Perhaps the oil companies were reluctant to pass on the benefits of cheaper gasoline to smaller communities. It seems that all the major oil companies follow a schedule of prices and are not anxious to compete with each other on prices. Only the independent gasoline retailers seem to be giving the consumer a break—at least they give a 4 per cent cash discount.

INCOME TAX ACT

MEANING OF "CAPITAL GAIN" AND "CAPITAL LOSS"

> Meaning of capital gain and capital loss
> (1) For the purposes of this Act,
>
> (a) a taxpayer's capital gain for a taxation year from the disposition of any property is his gain for the year determined under this subdivision (to the extent of the amount thereof that would not, if section 3 were read without reference to the expression "other than a taxable capital gain from the disposition of a property" in paragraph (a) thereof and without reference to paragraph (b) thereof, be included in computing his income for the year or any other taxation year) from the disposition of any property of the taxpayer other than
> (i) eligible capital property,
> (i.1) an object that Canadian Cultural Property Export Review Board has determined meets all criteria set out in paragraphs 23(3)(b) and (c) of the Cultural Property Export and Import Act and that has been disposed of,
> (A) in the case of a gift to which subsection 110(2.1) applies, within 15 months after the death of the taxpayer or such longer period as is reasonable—

COMMUNICATIONS

BELL CANADA—REMOTE AREAS—LONG DISTANCE CHARGES

Mr. Jean-Pierre Blackburn (Jonquière): Mr. Speaker, a few weeks ago Bell Canada filed with the CRTC new criteria for certain communities to be provided with regional service without long distance fees.

Mr. Speaker, at first sight one is tempted to welcome these relaxed criteria proposed by Bell Canada. But on closer examination of the proposals, they are unacceptable. Because of the new proposed criteria, only 40 new interconnections will be possible in Quebec and the implementation period needed will be six years. Moreover, of the 40 new interconnections in Quebec, 80 per cent involve three major cities in central Quebec, such as Montreal, Trois-Rivières and Sherbrooke. There is practically nothing for remote areas.

The Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area is a typical example, although the removal of long distance fees for calls between Jonquière and Ville de la Baie, a long awaited economic boon, has been requested for a number of years.

Mr. Speaker, the CRTC must turn down the new criteria as proposed. It should require Bell Canada to submit a special development plan for communities in remote areas.

Mr. Speaker, Bell Canada is the largest telephone company in Canada. It enjoys a monopoly situation and has always been protected. The CRTC is in a position to require Bell Canada to submit a special development plan to cope with the needs of remote areas.

RAOUL WALLENBERG—CALL FOR ACTION BY CANADA

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I rise today because the Honourable Per Anger, who is the former Swedish Ambassador to Canada, is in Canada today to express and share with us his experiences as a former colleague of Raoul Wallenberg and, once again, to bring to our attention the fact that Raoul Wallenberg is a prisoner in the Soviet Union. I would, therefore, like to bring to the attention of the House, that on January 16, the forty-second anniversary of the arrest of Raoul Wallenberg, I said that because of the fact he is now an honorary citizen of Canada it is incumbent upon our Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to do all that he can to secure Mr. Wallenberg's return to freedom.

I would like on this day to call upon the Minister of State for External Affairs to tell us what are his intentions and what action he will take in order that Canada may be in the forefront in its concern to bring Raoul Wallenberg back to freedom, thus guaranteeing his human rights.

EXPANSION OF OIL INDUSTRY'S ACTIVITIES IN ALBERTA

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of the House, and especially to the doomsters and gloomsters in the opposition Parties, the latest figures published by Oilweek magazine concerning the sale of oil rights in my home province of Alberta.

The final 1985 Alberta energy and natural resources land sale, as of December 11, brought in a total of $53.7 million, the highest total since March 26, 1980. This increase boosted the 1985 total to $796 million, the third largest in the province's history. What we are seeing today is the result of many of our Government's initiatives—the Western Accord, the new spirit of co-operation with the provinces, the forthright Budget we presented last May, and the favourable economic climate now prevailing in Canada. The most important thing, however, is that this high level of activity in the oil patch is creating thousands of jobs for Albertans and for Canadians right across the country.

We have reversed the tide of unemployment and dependency upon Government. We have revived the entrepreneural spirit in Canada and people are responding to the challenge. This the Liberals could never do. That is what responsible Government is all about.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFIDENTIALITY OF LIBERAL PARTY CAUCUS MEETINGS

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I have in my hand a transcript of the words of the Deputy Prime Minister in which he admitted he improperly listened to, eavesdropped or, if you like, was associated with the bugging of private meetings of the Liberal caucus.

In light of what the Minister of National Defence and Deputy Prime Minister said, I ask the Prime Minister whether he has obtained the resignation of the Deputy Prime Minister in light of the conduct of that Minister which obviously undermines his integrity and, therefore, that of the entire Government?

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will know that the Chair is in some difficulty on this question.

An Hon. Member: So is the Government.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Given the nature of the preamble and the fact the question concerns a Minister in the Cabinet, I think I must allow the Prime Minister to answer it. However, I must caution Members to deal, as best they can in all these matters, with questions to Ministers about their responsibilities as opposed to anything else.

Mr. Frith: We are talking integrity.

An Hon. Member: This has nothing to do with ministerial responsibility.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the question contains a number of very serious misstatements of fact and a really quite grotesque error which casts aspersions on the reputation of someone who has served his country honourably, in times of war and peace, for 30 years in the House of Commons, and I think it ought to be withdrawn.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION OF DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister is on tape as having said, referring to a meeting of the Liberal caucus:

—I was hearing every word that was spoken.

He also said:

There was a method by which we knew every Wednesday what was said in the Liberal caucus, word for bloody word.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): I ask the Prime Minister, in those circumstances—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Can I ask the Hon. Member to put a question on ministerial accountability, please.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I am asking a question of the Prime Minister about his responsibility to have people in his Cabinet who have the necessary integrity to be there.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): In light of the words of the Deputy Prime Minister himself, why does the Prime Minister allow that Minister to stay in his Cabinet?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, these questions are no doubt founded on an article which appeared in The Toronto Star this morning. That is a very interesting story. However, what that article was speaking about was events which are alleged to have occurred almost a quarter of a century ago. They were the subject of an interview, according to the article, with Mr. Stursberg in 1973; the subject of a book published in 1976; the subject of a tape, apparently, which has been available since January of 1981, and which appeared in Saturday Night magazine in January of 1985 in these words:

"One of Pearson's ministers said (in caucus) that he had two tasks: one, to destroy John Diefenbaker and two, to destroy Erik Nielsen. How do I know the words spoken in the Liberal caucus?" Nielsen smiles.

"No, there were no bugging devices. Wires were crossed on an electronic system being installed between the committee rooms and we knew every goddamn word that was spoken inside!"

Mr. Speaker, I think that perhaps I speak too much to the media.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER SECURE RESIGNATION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister stands condemned by the words from his own mouth which he said just a minute ago in the House. Does the Prime Minister not agree that he has a sacred trust as Prime Minister to defend the integrity of the parliamentary system, which includes the confidentiality of caucus meetings of all Parties and, as a result of the admission of the Deputy Prime Minister, he has no alternative but to seek and obtain his immediate resignation?

Mr. Nunziata: No respect for Parliament.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McDermid: Listen to who's talking.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, in my 28 years in the House of Commons I have seen virtually a flurry of plain brown envelopes flying around the place. The Opposition Members, when in Government, were familiar with that, as they are now in both opposition Parties.

It is a practice which I have given my best efforts to terminate but thus far they have been a total failure.

[Translation]

ALLEGATIONS CONCERNING MINISTER—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Prime Minister.

In light of the Toronto Star revelations that the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence indulged in electronic eavesdropping when he was a Member of the Opposition, does the Prime Minister find it acceptable to have as our NATO representative a man who in the past acted in such a deplorable manner showing a total lack of integrity?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member states that he has evidence allegedly showing that the Minister indulged in electronic eavesdropping.

Such a statement is absolutely false and the Minister has just made a categoric denial about it.

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister.

Did the Prime Minister read the transcript of those notes, or—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I had not recognized a supplementary question until I could hear it carefully. A supplementary question now, please.

INTERVIEW WITH DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister just said there were absolutely no facts to substantiate these accusations. Did he read the transcript of the interview with the Deputy Prime Minister, or did he listen to the tape which is the voice of the Deputy Prime Minister implicating himself directly?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I read it and thought carefully. From this, I concluded that, contrary to my hon. friend, there is no suggestion that the Minister was in any way responsible for or caused to happen any electronic eavesdropping for which he was directly or indirectly responsible that would in any way be illegal or improper under any circumstances.

Mr. Nunziata: It's immoral.

Mr. Mulroney: Of all Members, this Member talking about immorality should be struck by a bolt of lightening right on the spot.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER'S REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION INTO EAVESDROPPING IN 1973

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I also must direct a question to the Prime Minister about this matter. On October 17, 1973, the present Deputy Prime Minister, speaking to a request by the New Democratic Party for a review of a bugging that occurred in our caucus room, asked:

—that Your Honour—

That is, the Speaker:

—cause a further investigation to be made into the whole matter of eavesdropping—

He went on to say:

This offence is serious enough to require the offender to come before the bar of the House and give an explanation—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is getting long, that is all.

Mr. Deans: Given that the Deputy Prime Minister knew full well that he had been the recipient of eavesdropping information with regard to the Liberal caucus at that time, does he not think that the advice given by the Deputy Prime Minister should be taken now, and that all of those involved in providing the information to the Deputy Prime Minister should be brought before the bar of the House to explain their actions?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, my memory goes back a little further than that of the Hon. Member asking the question on this subject.

The first time the matter arose in the House of Commons was in the neighborhood of 22 years ago, to my knowledge. Indeed, it was raised by the then Leader of the NDP, Mr. Tommy Douglas, when the Chair asserted jurisdiction with respect to that matter and caused an investigation to be held. There have been at least two investigations subsequently that I can recall by Mr. Speaker, so that the idea of bringing unnamed persons before the bar of the House with respect to unsupported allegations is one which you should not, Sir, support, and which certainly falls within your jurisdiction.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: If hon. gentlemen opposite have a specific charge to make, then they should make it and take the consequences if they fail to prove it.

• (1425)

RECEIPT OF CAUCUS INFORMATION—REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. It is not necessary to make a charge. The Deputy Prime Minister has admitted that he was the recipient of information obtained out of a caucus room that he listened to himself and had translated.

In light of the admission of the Deputy Prime Minister—it is not a question of did he or didn't he, he did—does the Prime Minister not feel it would be appropriate now for the Deputy Prime Minister to step down from his position until such time as an inquiry is held into this affair and the results of it become known?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it could very well be that the Deputy Prime Minister, who is referring to information that may have been imparted to him by a caucus member dissatisfied with the way things were going in the caucus at that time—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Chrétien: Read the text.

Mr. Mulroney: That is possible. I think the appropriateness, Mr. Speaker, can be seen in a statement that His Honour made himself in an interview granted earlier this summer concerning a former Liberal Member of Parliament, a former Speaker, Ambassador Lloyd Francis. In response to a request for an investigation Mr. Speaker said:

> To go back behind decisions that were or were not taken about things that did or did not happen years ago, in my ind, is not appropriate. It's pointless.

That is the position the Speaker adopted in regard to that. I hold that it is no less appropriate today.

CONFIDENTIALITY OF CAUCUS MEETINGS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister should read the transcript. The transcript says:

> I could scarcely believe what I was hearing and I was hearing every word that was spoken. He was speaking in French and I had the benefit of translation service as well.

Quite clearly, the Deputy Prime Minister was listening to some taping of the Liberal caucus as it was happening.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): More indignation, Ian.

Mr. Deans: Given that the Deputy Prime Minister has admitted he did this—there is no statute of limitations on matters such as this—does the Prime Minister not feel it appropriate to have an investigation into all of the relevant matters and to ask the Deputy Prime Minister to step down until the inquiry is completed?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it should come as no surprise to that Hon. Member, or any Members who have been around here for very long, that information has a habit of finding its own way into other hands.

Mr. Deans: Every Wednesday?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: You can do better than this.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please.

Mr. Nielsen: I can tell the hon. gentleman that this information has been in the public domain for almost 13 years. I wonder why it comes as such a surprise now. I can also tell the hon. gentleman, indeed both opposition Parties, that I like keeping current, and welcome any information that might come to me from within their own Party caucuses.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1430)

CONSERVATIVE PARTY PRACTICE INQUIRY

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, the only comment I want to make at the beginning is the following: that behaviour became so unethical that it became a crime.

Mr. Chrétien: That's right.

Mr. Frith: Is it still the practice and policy of the Conservative Party to eavesdrop "word by bloody word" on the Liberal caucus and, if not, when did it stop—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. May I remind all Hon. Members, particularly experienced Members, that questions go to Ministers with regard to their ministerial accountability and not with regard to the way in which the Member is putting that question.

Mr. Frith: We are talking—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Whatever policy of whatever Party exists anywhere, it is not a matter for the House of Commons.

Mr. Frith: We are talking about the integrity of the Government.

Mr. Speaker: What is the question?

Mr. Frith: Is this the standard of moral behaviour that the Prime Minister will condone in a Deputy Prime Minister and then expect the young people of the country to look up to politicians?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that on a careful reading of the transcript my hon. friend would agree that that kind of suggestion he just made is both malicious and unfounded.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: The Deputy Prime Minister, as I have indicated before, has served this country with honour in times of war and in peace. His reputation as an outstanding Member of Parliament is second to none, and I think my hon. friend would want to withdraw that kind of cheap shot.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

DEFINITION OF MORALITY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. The dictionary defines "moral" as concerned with goodness of character or disposition. Can the Prime Minister explain why the bugging of MPs by the man who now holds the high office of Deputy Prime Minister falls into his definition—

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. It is perfectly clear to me that that question is out of order, as I am sure it is to the Hon. Member, because it attempts to make a charge without making a charge. Therefore, I remind Hon. Members that the questions have to be put to Ministers about matters which are under their current ministerial responsibilities. Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, I direct my question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. There is no need for a charge because there is an admission by the Deputy Prime Minister of improper conduct.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will give the Hon. Member one more chance, please, for a supplementary question only.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): It is not a matter of chance.

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Since the Deputy Prime Minister has admitted this improper behaviour of systematically eavesdropping on MPs—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Dingwall: —will he not do the honourable thing and seek the resignation of the Deputy Prime Minister?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond will resume his seat.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): No wonder John Turner is absent.

An Hon. Member: No wonder John Crosbie is absent.

Ms. Copps: Talk about integrity!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt.

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It deals with this very serious matter which has been revealed today. In light of the fact that the Deputy Prime Minister has suggested that he overheard what was going on in the Liberal caucus room as a result of an accidental crossing of wires, and in view of the fact that the Deputy Prime Minister said in the interview: "There was a method by which we knew every Wednesday what was said in the Liberal caucus, word for bloody word. I had nothing to do with it, but I had access to it", it clearly implicates the Deputy Prime Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a question, please?

Mr. Rodriguez: Will the Prime Minister do the honourable thing that is consistent with the traditions of Parliament and have the Deputy Prime Minister step down and order an investigation into all matters surrounding the bugging?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there have been allegations that there was bugging of MPs by the Deputy Prime Minister. There is a suggestion that there was an admission by the Deputy Prime Minister. Neither is accurate. There was an acknowledgment by the Deputy Prime Minister that certain information was conveyed to him in a way that rendered—

An Hon. Member: We are talking about bugging.

Mr. Mulroney: —of which he was not the initiator and for which he was not responsible. The Deputy Prime Minister has indicated that he was entirely without responsibility for the initiation of this—

Ms. Copps: That's right, irresponsible.

Mr. Mulroney: —and he has made no acknowledgment beyond that, but because the Member raises it seriously, I view it seriously. I think, given the statement of the Deputy Prime Minister and given the facts, if my hon. friend has a charge he wishes to lay that he ought to proceed with that charge, with the appropriate consequences.

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF EVENTS IN 1963-64

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, will the Prime Minister, consistent with his responsibility as the Leader of Canada, stop stonewalling and immediately launch an investigation into the actions of the Deputy Prime Minister in 1963-64 and his behaviour then?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we are dealing with a matter that occurred some 23 or 25 years ago. I suppose the timeliness of it does not diminish its importance. The matter was raised. The Deputy Prime Minister has responded fully. He has indicated the circumstances whereby certain information was imparted to him. If my hon. friend feels that this is either inappropriate or improper or illegal, an event which transpired a quarter century ago in the circumstances that have been related, I think he ought to lay a charge and the House will deal with it.

CRIMINAL CODE PROVISIONS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I remind the Prime Minister that a former Mountie was recently prosecuted for something which happened over 30 years ago. I want to ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he is now denying the words that made very clear in the transcript, within the meaning of the definition of "intercept"—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I caution the Hon. Member for York centre that his questions should be put to Ministers with regard to ministerial accountability. Questions put with regard to what a Minister said in an interview are really not in order, and I think the Hon. Member knows it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is an experienced Member and knows that. Therefore, his question, please.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, I ask the Prime Minister as to the standard of integrity which is to be permitted in his Cabinet, does he deny the statement? Does he disagree? Does he challenge the statement made in this transcript by the Deputy Prime Minister that he was listening to—"I was hearing and I was hearing every word that was spoken"—the caucus while it was going on, and that that is within the meaning of "intercept" in the Criminal Code?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is an interpretation that my hon. friend places on a construction of events. The Deputy Prime Minister has indicated that the incident which transpired was one in which he was entirely blameless with regard to the initiation thereof or any resonsibility flowing therefrom, on the one hand. Second, with regard to the point raised by my hon. friend regarding a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, it is true, and I indicated it earlier, that the timeliness of this is not affected by the passage of time, but in the case of the member of the RCMP a charge was laid. If my hon. friend feels that something is illegal, he ought to lay a charge and assume the consequences.

MINISTERIAL STANDARDS OF BEHAVIOUR

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, let me simply ask the Prime Minister this. Is it acceptable today among his Ministers for them to intercept, that is, to listen to discussions which are going on in the Liberal caucus or in the NDP caucus? Is that an acceptable standard of behaviour today for his Ministers?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I don't read anybody else's mail, I don't open brown envelopes, nor do I make unsubstantiated allegations against people without having the courage to stand up and put my seat on the line.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): My question is directed to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. Am I to understand that the Government's position is that deliberate electronic surveillance of what is going on in the caucus of another political party in Parliament would be immoral and illegal, but if thanks to an electronic accident, the Government happened to have access to what was being said in another caucus, it would be all right to go on eavesdropping? Is that the Government's position?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please. I know the Hon. Member believes seriously in his point, but it is now clearly entering into the realm of the hypothetical, beyond the realm of ministerial accountability, and into something that is between the Parties.

Does the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre have a question he wishes to put with regard to a Minister or to a matter that is under that Minister's jurisdiction?

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION OF DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question will be very simple, since the Deputy Prime Minister has admitted that in the past he listened to the caucus meetings without letting the other caucus groups know. Does the Prime Minister intend to ask for the Deputy Prime Minister's resignation, pending an investigation of this matter before the House?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The question is hypothetical. It has already been asked two or three times today. I am therefore going to rule it out of order. The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior.

REQUEST FOR REFERRAL TO COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): I think the Prime Minister must feel, as all Members do, that there has been a shadow cast across Parliament today. I would like to ask him would he be prepared now to have this entire matter referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections so that the air can be cleared and we can know exactly whether there is any ground at all for charges or for the call of the opposition Parties for a resignation.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in regard to the allegation, it has been denied by the Deputy Prime Minister. No charge has been laid. Therefore the matter is in the process of being resolved by the House.

Mr. Deans: There is no question about what happened.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please.

REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE REFERRAL

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): I want to ask the Prime Minister to think about the fact that we are not talking here only about what is legal; we are talking here about what is right. The Prime Minister has had a reputation of good faith about the reform of Parliament, and I want to ask him, for the sake of Parliament, will he do the honourable thing and at least refer it to the committee as the Hon. Member before me just requested, or even better than that, ask the Deputy Prime Minister to step down until this whole thing can be looked into. It is not a question of allegations, it is a question of a confession.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there has been no charge made. There is no allegation of illegality, or even impropriety, on the part of the Minister action 25 years ago, or thereabouts. Apart from the innuendo—

Mr. Deans: Why did you try to hide it?

Mr. Mulroney: Apart from the innuendo, which I think is unfair, and the spurious allegations, which I think are unworthy, if a charge is to be made I invite my honourable friend to make a charge, with the appropriate consequences.

INQUIRY OF THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): The Government cannot have it both ways saying the charges have been denied but at the same time they are not serious. It is a question of the respect that we all have for Parliament. I want to ask the Prime Minister does he not think that on the second Wednesday of the "every" Wednesdays that the Deputy Prime Minister was stepping out of line and casting the very shadow across Parliament that we now need to get rid of.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. I think the Hon. Member knows that that question is out of order.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

TOXIC CHEMICALS IN ST. CLAIR RIVER

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): My question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. I regret to say the Minister is creating the false impression that the proposed Environmental Contaminants Act will clean up the situation in the St. Clair River. Therefore I have to ask him whether he could explain to the House how this proposed Environmental Contaminants Act will clean up the existing toxic chemicals in the water, in the sewer outfalls, in the leachings from the dump sites and other existing and ongoing sources of pollution in the St. Clair River, or for that matter in any body of water for which we have an international responsibility.

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the introduction of a new Environmental Contaminants Act will mesh with parallel plans already announced by the Hon. Jim Bradley, the Minister of the Environment in Ontario. Together our Act and their actions will cover every aspect of the toxic chemicals question, from production through to use, through to disposal. For example, in the case of the Ontario plan, limits will be placed on the amount of chemicals that will be allowed to be discharged into the river. Ambient quality standards will be set for water. In concert with my colleague, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, the federal Government, for its part, will be setting vigorous drinking water standards. Together the total package will do everything that is required to hit the problem head on.

PROVISIONS OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): I would ask the Minister of the Environment to focus on the situation that we are facing today in the St. Clair River and the clean up of existing daily contaminations. Will he explain how his proposed Environmental Contaminants Act will tackle that problem?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): I never said the new Environmental Contaminants Act was designed to clean up existing pollutants in the river. We are doing that through other mechanisms, for example by working hand in glove with the Ontario Ministry of the Environment. The Environmental Contaminants Act is designed instead to prevent this kind of situation from happening in the future. We take the existing situation very seriously and we are taking actions to deal with it.

THE ADMINISTRATION

INQUIRY OF THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): My question is also directed to the Prime Minister. In view of the information that is available in the transcript about what the Deputy Prime Minister said at that time, can the Prime Minister expect the people of Canada to have faith—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Order, order, order.

Mr. Murphy: —to have faith in the integrity and judgment of the Deputy Prime Minister to use the enormous powers that he has—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, order. Forms and versions of this question have been asked all day. Order, please.

An Hon. Member: We have got to get some answers, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I do not doubt that I am going to hear more about this at three o'clock. But may I remind the Hon. Member for Churchill and others that the purpose of questions is to ask questions that are about matters that are under ministerial responsibility and accountability, not, on either side, in answers or questions, to cast aspersions.

POWERS OF DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): The Prime Minister knows that the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence has enormous powers. In light of his previous lack of judgment, how can any Canadian trust him now?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will not comment on the scurrilous aspects of that question except to say that the people of Canada, when they needed Erik Nielsen in peace and in war, found a man of courage and honour.

INCOME TAX ACT

REGISTERED RETIREMENT SAVINGS PLANS—AGE PROVISION

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): My question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The Minister has received many representations from senior citizens about how they convert their Registered Retirement Savings Plans after the age of 71. Some of them are concerned about the very restricted manner in which the present law requires that to be done. I was wondering if the Minister could advise this House whether he could make some changes in the Income Tax Act that would help seniors handle their money on retirement, perhaps in the Budget?

● (1450)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am very well aware of the interest the Hon. Member has taken in this issue. It is an issue that has been of some interest to me as well. I have read a number of letters regarding the debate that has been going on in some of the financial papers. I believe it is possible to go some way toward meeting the requirements of the senior citizens who express this point of view and it is something at which we are looking very closely. I am not now in a position to make a statement but I hope to be able to deal with this matter in due course.

THE ADMINISTRATION

EAVESDROPPING ON CAUCUS MEETINGS

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Prime Minister would be good enough to tell us when he learned of this practice of eavesdropping on the Liberal caucus, and perhaps the NDP caucus, and second, whether he has verified that the practice has been discontinued and that the Government is no longer eavesdropping on either Parties—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The first two parts of the question are in order but the third part is not.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the first I heard of any kind of allegation in this regard was in 1976 when I read the book.

INTERCEPTION OF CONVERSATIONS—REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION BY ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Is the Prime Minister aware that it is an offence contrary to the Criminal Code of Canada to intercept conversations? In view of the fact that that activity is criminal, is the Prime Minister prepared to instruct the RCMP to investigate the conduct of the Deputy Prime Minister to determine whether or not there was a breach of the Criminal Code of Canada?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as Acting Minister of Justice and Solicitor General let me just say that it is highly improper for the Hon. Member to make any kind of suggestion without stepping outside the House and laying a specific charge. Perhaps while he is in the process of considering this matter, he might ask his colleagues in the Liberal Party where they were when Marc Lalonde was putting out an all-points bulletin within the Department of Finance to read the present Prime Minister's mail. Where was he when the Liberal party was abusing its power in office?

AIR SAFETY

DEREGULATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil-Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport.

I had the pleasure of going to Washington, as part of an interparliamentary exchange, to examine the impact of air transport deregulation with the U.S. parties concerned. They were unanimous in saying that it had been a very positive experience, except where safety was concerned.

Mr. Speaker, my question is: Could the Minister inform the House whether safety will be a special concern when this sector is deregulated in Canada?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the document entitled Freedom to Move clearly points out that safety is the number one priority of the Transport Department. Second, the paper proposes that in the process of regulatory reform the Government will not permit or propose any diminution of safety as a result. In fact, it is quite the opposite.

As a fall-out from the Dubin Inquiry, steps have been taken to beef up the safety standards by passage of the Aeronautics Act and the Canada Shipping Act, another piece of legislation that will enhance safety in the marine sector. Further, the promulgation of the transportation of dangerous goods provisions last July was a further manifestation of the high priority the Government places on safety. Finally, the federal Government and the provinces have agreed to work toward developing a national safety code for the trucking industry, so I think that that is clear evidence.

THE ADMINISTRATION

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION OF DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Earlier today the Deputy Prime Minister said that what had happened was an accidental crossing of wires. I have a copy of the transcript in question in my hand so would the Prime Minister not agree that the words used were:

There was a method by which we knew every Wednesday what was said in the Liberal caucus word for bloody word.

Would the Prime Minister not agree that there has been enough doubt raised by what the Deputy Prime Minister said earlier and what the transcript indicates to ask the Deputy Prime Minister to step aside until the Prime Minister investigates—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please. I already indicated that questions that had been put on this matter would not be allowed to be repeated.

Mr. Young: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker? Come on!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East.

INQUIRY OF THE PRIME MINISTER

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Given the already high degree of public cynicism that exists with respect to politicians, does the Prime Minister not recognize that his failure to take any action on this absolute and total abuse of parliamentary privilege by his own Deputy Prime Minister and the man who was supposed to—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. The Hon. Member knows that she cannot say those things without being in violation of the orders of the House regarding casting aspersions on the character of another Member. Therefore, I will recognize the next Hon. Member.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York East.

Ms. Copps: You're in step with the Government.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Now the Hon. Member is casting aspersions on the Chair.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order. I do not propose to do anything about it because I understand that tempers are high today, but Hon. Members must understand that the reason there are rules with regard to privilege and the casting of aspersions is to protect everyone in the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Therefore, I think the Hon. Member, if she—

Mr. Prud'homme: He set the standard in 1963 and 1964.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis will please come to order. The Hon. Member for York East had the floor.

Ms. Copps: I had a supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have given the floor to the Hon. Member for York East.

ENERGY

PRICE OF OIL—STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO LEADER OF NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. I understand that today the Leader of the New Democratic Party, the Hon. Member for Oshawa, stated in Calgary that Canada needs a regulated price for oil to ensure that the industry gets enough revenue to allow development while assuring fair prices at the same time. Will the Minister advise the House if she agrees with this comment which appears to call for higher energy prices?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I was wondering why members of the NDP were so silent on the issue of gas pricing today. It shows what hypocrites they are, when in the House they talk about lower prices for consumers and—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think, given today's context, I must ask the Hon. Minister to withdraw that.

Miss Carney: Mr. Speaker, I accede to your demand and I withdraw the word "hypocrite". I would ask if "two-faced" is acceptable.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: The answer is no.

THE ADMINISTRATION

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER—REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE REFERRAL

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Prime Minister. The integrity of the Government and Parliament is under a shadow. Would the Prime Minister concede that the Deputy Prime Minister should be tried by his own peers in front of the Committee on Privileges and Elections?

Mr. McDermid: Lay a charge!

Mr. Marchi: Will the Prime Minister concede to Parliament, in the spirit of civility and parliamentary reform, that the admissions of guilt be investigated by his peers in this House—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please. First, that question has been asked. Second, the Hon. Member knows that there is a route through which he may request the consent of the House with regard to a matter going to the committee.

Mr. Marchi: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a question on a different matter, or a different question on this matter?

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I would simply like to ask the Prime Minister if he has the courage to rise in his place and send this matter to a committee of Parliament so that parliamentarians—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Marchi: Well, Mr. Speaker, what the hell are we here for?

● (1500)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

An Hon. Member: What's wrong with that?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. First, it is the same question.

Ms. Copps: It's a different question!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Second, the Hon. Member knows that questions of privilege are not the responsibility of the Government; they are the responsibility of the House. A question with regard to that matter is not a matter of ministerial accountability and is therefore out of order.

Presenting Reports from Standing—

Ms. Copps: Double-talk from the Speaker's Chair!

Point of Order—Mr. Gauthier

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member from Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) will withdraw that comment.

Ms. Copps: I withdraw.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Wednesday, January 29, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

On a point of order, the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

POINT OF ORDER

CONFIDENTIALITY OF CAUCUS MEETINGS—ASSURANCES SOUGHT FROM MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Like many people in the House, I would like to raise a point—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier. I will wait until the House quietens and clears. Those who wish to leave, please do. There will be a few minutes, I suspect, on this matter.

The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier.

Mr. Gauthier: As you know, Mr. Speaker, I occupy the position of Whip in my Party. There are others in other Parties who do the same thing. One of the basic obligations I have as Whip is to ensure that our deliberations, the workings of this caucus, are restricted to this caucus. I want an assurance from you, Mr. Speaker—because I cannot ask the Government the question—that our deliberations as a caucus in this parliamentary precinct are indeed not being interferred with, intervened in, or, for that matter, listened to by anybody else but the ones to whom they are directed, that is, members of my caucus.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member raises an important matter, one which I think all three Parties have taken seriously. Whenever a Party has asked the Speaker to have offices or caucus rooms checked, or swept, we have, of course, done so immediately. I received that type of request this morning from the Chairman of the Liberal Caucus. My instructions to the Sergeant-at-Arms were that that request be acceded to immediately, and steps have been taken to make sure that that was done. The Chair is happy to do that for any caucus at any time.

May I say to the Hon. Member this. Nobody can give the Hon. Member the assurance that somebody standing outside this building in some way, with electronic eavesdropping equipment, cannot do that. What I can assure the Hon. Member is that whenever the Chair or the Sergeant-at-Arms receives a complaint, or a concern, it is acted on as quickly as in humanly possible.

Mr. Nunziata: On a quesiton of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Miss Carney: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: On a question of privilege, the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata).

Miss Carney: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Prud'homme: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will deal with them in the order in which I have received them. The Hon. Member for York South-Weston is claiming privilege. Is the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) rising on the point of order which has already been raised?

Mr. Prud'homme: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Let us conclude this point of order I will then hear the question of privilege. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, in order that we can try to have an intelligent debate in the days, I am sure, and maybe even the weeks to come, on this matter, would Your Honour consider it the duty of a Member—any Member—to inform the Chair immediately upon knowing, or upon receiving information to the fact, that rooms of caucus—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is a different question. The Hon. Member indicated that he was rising on the same question. He is asking the Chair to give an opinion as to what the Chair believes is someone's duty. Clearly, the Chair cannot do that, and the Hon. Member knows that.

The Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) on a question of privilege.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order on the same issue, if you wish to deal with them all at once.

Mr. Speaker: The point of order that was raised with me was with regard to checking the caucus rooms. Is the Hon. Member rising on the same point of order?

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the reason I am rising on this point of order is because some months ago I requested—in fact of the Speaker's Chair—that a sweep of my offices be done. I would like to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, the inadequacy of this procedure in that the night before my office was swept I received a telephone call advising me that the sweeping would take place the next evening. It would seem to me that if the House is truly intent on having a proper sweeping procedure, the Speaker, or the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms, would not advise by telephone that they were going to be doing a sweep of those telephones. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, in that regard that you consider the possibility of looking at this question in a more general way because I do not feel we are being protected.

Mr. Speaker: I welcome the Hon. Member's recommendations on our procedures. I will be happy to take them and discuss them with the Sergeant-at-Arms. She may, in fact, have a very valid point. At first reading, she may have.

The Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) on a question of privilege.

PRIVILEGE

INVESTIGATION BY MR. SPEAKER OF REPORTED REVELATION BY DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister has admitted that he had access to certain conversations which took place in a caucus meeting, or caucus meetings, of the Liberal caucus some time ago. He has admitted to the fact that he had access to and made use of—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): What privilege is being claimed?

Mr. Nunziata: —information that was illegally obtained.

I submit that the Deputy Prime Minister, who was then a Member of Parliament, had a duty. His duty was to report to the police, and to those in authority, including—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order!

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member. He knows our practices. Could he please tell me what point of privilege he is raising, as opposed to making the case, I presume he wants to make, should there be a question of privilege found and put before the House? Could he therefore tell me what the privilege is, please?

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I would ask, in view of the importance of this particular matter, that Your Honour conduct an investigation. I am suggesting that my privilege as an elected Member of Parliament has been affected by the revelation and the admission of the Deputy Prime Minister that conversations in a private meeting of caucus were intercepted.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order! That is wrong and you know it.

Mr. Nunziata: As a Member of Parliament, I am—

Mr. Speaker: Order please. I am in a dilemma. Hon. Members know that the Chair requires one hour's notice of an application for a question of privilege, except those arising directly out of Question Period, in the sense of what goes on in Question Period.

Ms. Copps: You wouldn't let us deal with the question.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members have been free at any time to submit to me one hour's notice of an intent to raise this matter as a question of privilege. I understand the dilemma the Hon. Member for York South-Weston is in. I am not entirely sure that it is really a matter arising out of the Question Period itself. That is my procedural problem.

Let me indicate to the Hon. Member that I will hear his question of privilege. I think the Hon. Member for York South-Weston has finished his presentation as to whether or not there is a prima facie case. Does anyone else wish to speak on the matter?

Before we hear from anyone else, may I interrupt for one minute? The Hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) wishes to seek the floor on a point of order, I believe.

POINT OF ORDER

WITHDRAWAL OF TERM USED DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Yes, I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I do not want to show disrespect for the House. Therefore, I will withdraw any phrasing which the Chair finds unacceptable.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PRIVILEGE

INVESTIGATION BY MR. SPEAKER OF REPORTED REVELATION BY DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for York South-Weston has made a presentation claiming privilege arising out of the Question Period and the comments of the Deputy Prime Minister. Is there anything further on the matter? The Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn).

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put the matter into perspective.

Mr. Benjamin: Whose perspective?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: There have been references made to a transcript of statements made by the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Benjamin: Remember Favreau.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: There has been a statement made on the floor of the House by the Deputy Prime Minister in which he denies the least suggestion of impropriety. I think that the parliamentary tradition—and we are looking at this matter from the parliamentary tradition—is to accept the words of an Hon. Member. Accordingly, quite apart from the fact that a Member's question of privilege has to do with the ability of that Member to carry on his or her responsibilities, which are somehow impeded by activities which restrict his or her ability to carry out those responsibilities, I can think of nothing that would be less relevant to that whole situation than allegations of a general nature with respect to what transpired a quarter of a century ago.

On the basis of whether or not there is a prima facie case with respect to a question of privilege, I suggest, with all due respect, that the Hon. Member has not put forward one scintilla of evidence, or one point in his submission, which would indicate that he in any way is being pervented from carrying on his responsibilities, in terms of the Question Period, or in terms of debate on the floor of the House of Commons.

• (1510)

Mr. Nunziata: I would like to move the appropriate motion, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will understand there are some other matters to be dealt with.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I, too, would like to speak in support of the Chair finding this a prima facie case of breach of privilege in light of the fact that parliamentary tradition, which dates back to before the history of this Confederation and this Parliament, states that Members of each respective Party must have the opportunity to get together in a caucus forum and debate issues of importance not only to their own caucus and to their Party but also to the country.

I feel that if I cannot be guaranteed the privacy of those deliberations, and if I cannot be guaranteed, through some action on the part of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), that in fact the insidious intercepting of the caucuses' private deliberations is not happening—we do not know, it happened in 1964 and in 1965 and it could be happening now—it will directly affect the contribution I make in my caucus and subsequently in parliamentary debate. So I feel it is—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) will know full well that to argue that something could be happening today is not to raise a question of privilege.

Let me take one minute, if I may, and explain that I have not heard, arising out of the comments which have been made in Question Period, a prima facie question of privilege which was attempted to be made by the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata). That does not prevent, as a matter of form, someone who believes there is a matter of privilege arising from some other event or article—if that is the case they wish to make—from giving me notice of that matter. But out of what has been presented to me, and coming from Question Period, I see no question of privilege.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I have not been given the opportunity to present my case.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member presented his case. He has already presented the case the wished the Speaker to consider, I take it.

Mr. Nunziata: I want to plead my case, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I asked the Hon. Member if he had completed his case and he said, yes. That is why I went to the next Hon. Member, with respect.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, may I just ask now, with all respect, that you possibly give us some time? I had to absent myself from the House for a few minutes and I came back because I heard you were going to rule on this question of privilege.

I find it a very important point when I ask you if you could assure me, and members of my caucus, that no one else but those to whom the words spoken in my caucus are directed are hearing those words. I accept the fact that you say that that is physically impossible for you to guarantee and, in your view, you have done the utmost to avoid that. But the question at hand is that there is now a sort of veil—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: —an uncertainty in my—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Come on.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I understand exactly the point the Hon. Member is going to make. I think he knows that.

Mr. Deans: How do you know it?

Mr. Benjamin: Let him say it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I want to be very careful about where it is these things are being directed. May I say, for example, I have yet to receive from anyone a request that I look into the matter, other than the Hon. Member's request now that I look into the question of—I can say to the Hon. Member that I have done some checking this morning as to the existing systems. However, does the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) wish to make further representations?

Mr. Gauthier: You acknowledged that to me a few moments ago when you said that indeed you had received a request from the chairman of my caucus. I made that request earlier of the Sergeant-at-Arms. But I am asking you as Speaker of the House, as a person elected by us and responsible for certain things, to look into this matter. I take it that one of the things you are responsible for is the integrity of the work we do here and in caucus. I am asking you, Mr. Speaker, to look into this matter, get a copy of this paper and see if you can tell me, and Hon. Members of the House, that at this time you do not know of any existing case where such a thing would happen.

Mr. Speaker: What I tried to indicate to the Hon. Member earlier is that I have already undertaken some of those investigations and I am satisfied. I have reviewed our procedures. I did this some months ago. I am satisfied that everything that can be humanly done to prevent any such leak of information coming out of any caucus room is being done.

I am also satisfied, as I indicated before, that the systems which were in place 20, 25, 30 and even 15 years ago were not adequate to enable one to make that claim. The Hon. Member knows that. I have said that many times.

I am prepared to go back and look again to make sure that our systems are adequate, but I can give the Hon. Member the assurance that both the Speakers before me met regularly with the Sergeant-at-Arms as does this Speaker. We have developed plans to try to cope with these situations, and anything that can humanly be done that we know of, we are doing.

Therefore, I can only say to the Hon. Member that there is no way in the world that I can imagine, or that I know of, that we have not tried to ensure that these things do not leak.

Mr. Gauthier: May I make one last point?

Mr. Speaker: On a point of order?

Mr. Gauthier: On the same point of order. I understand what you are telling me, and I understand exactly where you stand in this matter of modernizing the system. I know it has been done in this building, but I also know that there is a lot of work still to be done in the other buildings. And you know that, Mr. Speaker. So I am asking you to give me the assurance that indeed that work will continue to be done so that we can avoid having situations which existed in prior years. That is what I am asking you.

Mr. Speaker: I undertake to give the Hon. Member absolutely the assurance he seeks.

Mr. de Corneille: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Are these different points of order, not on this matter? The Hon. Member for Eglinton-Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) rose first, I believe.

POINTS OF ORDER

POSITION OF PRIME MINISTER RESPECTING CONFIDENTIALITY OF CAUCUS MEETINGS

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, my concern arises out of the Question Period. It concerns my privileges and, for that matter, the privileges of all Hon. Members of the House of Commons. It arises out the remarks of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) himself. The Prime Minister did not agree to the question as to whether it is proper for Hon. Members of this House of Commons to have access to or listen to what is being said in a caucus. In view of his lack of concern in this matter, I feel—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Order.

An Hon. Member: Smarten up, eh?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will know that he is in fact disputing an opinion of another Hon. Member. It would be very difficult for the opinion of another Hon. Member of this House to constitute the basis of a Question of Privilege.

REASON FOR DENIAL BY MR. SPEAKER OF SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, as in all situations, I certainly will abide by your rulings, whatever they may be and however one may feel at the end of the day. But I guess I rise to ask you—and I ask this sincerely—as the Speaker elected by all Hon. Members of Parliament, if you would, for me and for my caucus colleagues, explain why you ruled out of order questions I had posed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) regarding the conduct and behaviour of a certain Minister within the Government, which we believe reflects, rightly or wrongly—allow me to conclude—on the integrity and the ability of that particular Minister to carry on his responsibilities—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Dingwall: —in view of the guidelines which have been set down by the Prime Minister—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Dingwall: —in view of the comments and statements made by the Prime Minister.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Dingwall: Could you comment on that?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is in fact making a speech.

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is verging on making a speech. He knows that is why I was trying to get him to be brief. In order to be as clear as I possibly can, perhaps I will just quote Standing Order 40:

No Member shall speak disrespectfully of the Sovereign, nor of any of the Royal Family, nor of the Governor General or the person administering the Government of Canada; nor use offensive words against either House, or against any Member thereof. No Member may reflect upon any vote of the House,—

In other words, the Hon. Member may wish to ask the question which was asked with regard to the confidence of the Prime Minister in another Minister. That question was asked by Hon. Members. But in asking that question, no aspersions may be cast upon the character of the Minister involved. If the Hon. Member believes he wishes to do something further along that line, I think he knows our historical practices with regard to the tabling of motions.

The Hon. Member sought clarification, and that is all I can give him.

Mr. Dingwall: I understand your desire, Mr. Speaker, and the expediency with which you want to deal with all these matters of points of order and questions of privilege, but I ask you, respectfully, after reading that particular rule—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Dingwall: —that you have just read, would you be prepared to review my question and indicate to me the offensive language which was used, specifically, in accordance with that particular rule? I wonder if you would be kind enough to do that because, as you have now stated it, I find your ruling to be more confusing than the first.

• (1520)

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Lewis: Reflection on the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows he is making a reflection on the Chair and I am sure he will want to withdraw it. However, I am not going to pursue that right now.

I would be happy to check the "blues". As the Hon. Member will know, I do not have written questions in front of me, I only have what I hear. What I heard was the Hon. Member making an assertion that the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) had at one point bugged the Liberal caucus. That is precisely what I heard in his preamble. I take that as an aspersion on character. Therefore I asked the Hon. Member to withdraw.

Order, please. Let me make it as clear as I can because I have a feeling we are going to go through this again. If the Hon. Member wants to make an accusation regarding the character of another Member, it is improper to do that through a preamble to a question. In our practices it is only proper to do that through a specific charge in a substantive motion laid on the Table.

Mr. de Corneille: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Anyone who wishes to make further representations with regard to these matters knows the proper route is to do it in Chambers or outside the House.

Order, please. I have yet to hear a point of order. Is the Hon. Member rising on a different point of order? Then the Hon. Member will resume his seat, please. He will not keep getting up on the same point of order.

CONFIDENTIALITY OF CAUCUS MEETINGS—ASSURANCES SOUGHT FROM MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to kindly tell us whether you will, in light of these rather disturbing threats to the environment of this House of Commons—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order. What disturbances to the environment of this House?

Mr. de Corneille: —indicate what you can do and intend to do to bring some kind of assurance to us as to—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I thought I had already answered that question.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Exactly right. Three times.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I cannot say more than that we do everything humanly possible to make sure that no such events could occur again.

REPORTED REVELATIONS BY DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege concerning what took place today. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said that whatever took place 22 or 23 years ago, it was important today, just as it was then—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Don't put words in his mouth.

Mr. Rodriguez: If what is alleged took place, it was as wrong then as it is today. I suggest that there is prima facie evidence in the actual recorded statements of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) that the conversations in the Liberal caucus—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is not making a case arising out of Question Period. He is making a case out of the entire subject. I am not going to rule one way or another right now but I am going to remind him of his obligation to give me that case in writing. That is not to prejudge his case.

Mr. de Corneille: That was the subject of the whole Question Period.

Mr. Speaker: The subject of Question Period was ministerial accountability.

Mr. de Corneille: Right, that is what he is talking about.

Mr. Speaker: No, he is talking about a different matter. That is the point I am trying to make.

Mr. Benjamin: We would like them to account for all of this.

Ms. Copps: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

REASON FOR DENIAL BY MR. SPEAKER OF MOTION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, according to Standing Order 56:

> Whenever the Speaker is of the opinion that a motion offered to the House is contrary to the rules and privileges of Parliament, the Speaker shall apprise the House thereof immediately, before putting the question thereon, and quote the Standing Order or authority applicable to the case.

During Question Period there was a motion to have this whole issue moved to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections by the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner). That motion was denied. Can the Speaker cite the appropriate Standing Order under which he acted?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The procedural expert who does not know what a motion is.

Mr. Speaker: Let me say it one more time, and this is the last time I will say this. A question to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) with regard to whether the Government is prepared to consider a motion may be a House Business question but it is not a matter of ministerial accountability. The Hon. Member knows as well that a motion cannot be put during Question Period. I did not rule out her question on the basis that she was attempting to put a motion—

Ms. Copps: I was asking about the question of the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner).

Mr. Hnatyshyn: There was no motion.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) asked a question. If I remember, it was the first time a question with regard to that matter was raised. Someone answered it. I allowed the answer because it was the first time that that specific question had been put. I do not know what point—

Mr. Marchi: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. No. Presenting reports from Standing and Special Committees.

Mr. Marchi: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Marchi: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) will please resume his seat.

Mr. Marchi: I haven't made a point of order yet.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York West will please resume his seat.

Mr. Marchi: Will you allow me to state my point of order?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for York West will please resume his seat.

Mr. Marchi: If you are going to allow the—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will please resume his seat.

Mr. Marchi: Well, give me a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Stop that joke and recognize him!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I appreciate that Members feel strongly about this question of making representations but they are not raising points of order.

Ms. Copps: Then hear his point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. They are making representations.

Mr. Rodriguez: You have not heard him.

Mr. Speaker: What is the Hon. Member's point of order, briefly?

DENIAL BY MR. SPEAKER OF TWO QUESTIONS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Very briefly, Mr. Speaker, you mentioned that Question Period is a session for ministerial accountability. I wish to know why my two questions were refused of a prime ministerial accountability—

Mr. Speaker: That is not a point of order. If the Hon. Member wants to come and talk to me about it, please come and do so. It is not a point of order.

Mr. Marchi: Why do I have to talk to you in your office if I can't talk to you now?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Because it is not a point of order.

Mr. Marchi: You won't even—

Mr. Towers: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The rules stipulate that the Speaker is entirely in charge of what can be put and what—order, please. Will the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) please come to order?

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, for God's sake allow me to finish the point of order and then declare it out of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the Hon. Member for York West please resume his seat?

Mr. Marchi: When can we ask the question of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) about the integrity of his Government?

Mr. Speaker: Will the Hon. Member please resume his seat? The Hon. Member knows full well that the questions which can be put in Question Period are entirely within the discretion of the Chair.

Mr. Marchi: You are not allowing answers, Mr. Speaker, in this Chamber today, absolutely.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member asked my opinion and I am prepared to give it to him. If he checks the rules he will find that the question of what is in order and what is not in order in Question Period is entirely at the discretion of the Chair.

Mr. Marchi: Would you allow me to finish, though?

Mr. Speaker: Order. Therefore, no question of order can be raised on whether a question is put or not. That is the point.

Mr. Marchi: But we have got to listen to you—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Marchi: You can't even have the decency to allow a Member to finish his point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: Presenting reports from Standing and Special Committees. Tabling of documents. Statements by Ministers. Petitions.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

PETITIONS

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, today it is again my duty to table in the House a petition from people in the Moncton area and in my riding, who are still very concerned about the uncertain fate of the CN shops in Moncton.

No assurances have been received from the Minister that jobs will be protected, and they are asking this House to use its influence to obtain guarantees from the Government regarding the jobs at the CN shops.

[English]

EFFECT ON PENSIONERS OF CHANGES TO UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

Mr. Aurèle Gervais (Timmins-Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present a petition on behalf of 101 pensioners, former employees of Abitibi Price in Iroquois Falls, and 253 of their fellow employees in the plant. The petition deals with changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act as it affects pensioners. They ask that all changes affecting the receipt of unemployment insurance benefits be grandfathered. They ask that, in cases where a pension renders pensioners ineligible for benefits, they be relieved from paying premiums. As well, they ask the Government to set aside a special fund to entice people to take early retirement to make way for younger people.

FUNDING FOR THERAPEUTIC ABORTIONS

Mr. Paul Gagnon (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by constituents of Calgary North who request that funding for therapeutic abortions be stopped and procurement of a miscarriage be a criminal offence.

• (1530)

Mr. Speaker: Prior to proceeding to Questions on the Order Paper, I should inform the House for the record that the Chair was in receipt of an application under Standing Order 31 which has, however, been withdrawn.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, Question No. 500 will be answered today.

CORRESPONDENCE FROM MR. ALBERT AULSEBROOK

Question No. 500—Mr. Young:

Did the office of the Minister of National Revenue receive letters dated (a) March 28, 1985 (b) September 16, 1985, with respect to a complaint made by Mr. Albert Aulsebrook to the office of the Hon. Member for Beaches and is it the intention of the Minister's office to respond to the letters and, if so, on what date?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): The records of this Department indicate that the office of the Minister did not receive the referenced letters.

Copies of this correspondence, provided by the Hon. Member's office, show that the issue relates to the Canada Post Corporation, which comes within the responsibility of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

EXCISE TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-80, An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and Motion No. 19 (Mr. de Jong) (p. 10322).

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, until such time as an investigation is held into the bugging of the Liberal caucus, I move:

That this House do now adjourn.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

And the division bells having rung:

Mr. Speaker: It being six o'clock p.m., the proceedings on the motion before the House have lapsed and pursuant to Standing Order 9(1) the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

The House adjourned at 6.01 p.m.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SITUATION IN HAITI—SAFETY OF CANADIANS—RIGHTS OF HAITIANS

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): According to news reports, Mr. Speaker, the Haitian Government was overthrown this morning and the former President for life has left his country for an unknown destination.

This incident comes on the heels of several weeks of disturbances and violence during which many people were killed. For the time being we have no idea who will lead the new Government, but we can already express the wish that the beginning of a new era in that country will spring from chaos.

Canada's Haitian nationals can attest to the repression and lack of respect for human rights which prevailed in their country of origin. They can also confirm the extensive poverty and misery which have been the bane of Haiti, a country where the unemployment rate hovers around 60 per cent and where three quarters of the people cannot even read.

Hopefully the Canadian Government will support the Haitian people in their quest for the most basic rights and will do its utmost to ensure the security of Canadians in Haiti, many of whom are working on development projects.

LABOUR RELATIONS

CANADIAN IMPERIAL BANK OF COMMERCE—APPEAL AGAINST CONTRACT FOR EMPLOYEES

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, it was with regret that I read the article in The Globe and Mail this morning which indicated that the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce intended to appeal the decision of the Canada Labour Relations Board with regard to granting Visa workers a first contract.

I regret the decision of the bank, recognizing it has the full legal right to do what it is doing, but it is another example of the banks, the Bank of Commerce in particular, doing everything they can possibly do to deny the rights of their workers. There has been case after case after case where the Canadian Labour Relations Board has ruled against the bank for intimidating its workers, for denying them basic justice, and for using management to intimidate workers when they have wanted to join a union.

Visa workers, who have been out on strike for many, many months, used their right to go to the Canada Relations Board to ask for a first contract, something which every person should be allowed to have, but the banks are fighting this request.

Considering the very dismal record of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, which has lost numerous cases in dealing with its workers, I think the House should be appalled and should express a very strong message of sadness, regret, and disgust with the behaviour of the bank.

NATIVE PEOPLES

CONFERENCES AT FORTHCOMING NATIVE BUSINESS SUMMIT

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, in just a few short months the Native Business Summit will take place at the Metro Convention Centre in Toronto. To be held over five days in June, the summit will feature four separate business conferences aimed at building growth in major sectors of the native economy. This summit marks the first such endeavour aimed at exploring opportunities for the expansion and development of new markets for native business.

The summit is aimed at Canada's top business and Government executives. Each of the four conferences will focus on a major area of native business concern. On Monday and Tuesday, June 23 and June 24, separate conferences on housing and real estate development will be held concurrently. The final three days of the summit will be given over to the first ever International Congress on Native Finance and Trade.

The importance of technological development will be a major theme throughout the summit activities. The chronic problem of making native business more competitive, given geographical, technological and financial constraints, will be explored.

A number of major speakers are being invited to participate, and native business delegates are expected from the United States and other countries. Organizers are planning for over 1,500 delegates to be in attendance at both the conferences and the trade show.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I think we should look at the Canadian economy in its proper perspective. The information produced last week by Statistics Canada clearly shows that our economic growth rate was nearly six per cent during the last three months of 1985.

[English]

Our gross domestic product rose .7 per cent in November, following a similar gain in October. It was the eighth consecutive month in which real output grew. The November gains were attributable to strong growth in construction, manufacturing, and trade. Capital goods industries experienced a great month as their output climbed 1.7 per cent. Manufacturers of machinery and equipment raised their output by 3.2 per cent. A surge in home building pushed construction growth up 2.7 per cent. "There is continuing strength everywhere in the domestic economy", indicated the Conference Board of Canada, and the board described these numbers as "absolutely fantastic".

[Translation]

The central theme of the Speech from the Throne in November 1984 was economic renewal. The Government is on the right track.

YOUTH

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT REVERSE DECISION ON KATIMAVIK PROGRAM

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I rise in the House today to deplore the fact that the activities of the Katimavik program have been stopped.

Katimavik was the only program providing periods of training for young people between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one. These periods were an opportunity for them to think for themselves, to take on responsibilities, to turn their lives around and discover the values of solidarity and personal initiative.

I see the demise of Katimavik as a distressing example of the Conservative Government's anti-social concerns. There is a prevalence of economic concerns at the expense of socially-oriented considerations, and this is a part of its program the Conservative party failed to reveal to the Canadian people during the last election campaign.

It is ridiculous to consider Katimavik in terms of the cost and benefit to the Canadian people, in other words, in purely economic terms. Katimavik was, until yesterday, undergoing a scientific assessment by the Department of Secretary of State. We have not had a chance to see the results, and now the Conservative Government decides to end the program.

I believe the decision announced yesterday is unacceptable. As a result, many opportunities for young people who have no other alternative today than welfare and unemployment insurance have disappeared.

I therefore ask the Government to reverse this decision.

CHILDREN

ESTABLISHMENT OF MISSING CHILDREN RESEARCH PROJECT

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, this week the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) announced a major missing children research project in my riding of Edmonton East as a first step in dealing with the serious problem of missing children. The project, in co-operation with the Edmonton police, will bring together community groups, Governments, and the private sector to improve methods of prevention and investigation for locating missing children.

Missing children is a serious problem of which we should all be aware. We should all be dedicated to finding new avenues to reunite these children with their parents. While it is recognized that the jurisdiction for this problem remains under provincial and local authority, the federal Government has committed itself to contributing to the solution.

We have established a central registry on missing children which will be linked to every police department in Canada. The Minister has proposed the establishment of a Canadian information centre on missing children for the exchange of information about effective programs and the co-ordination of efforts across Canada. The Government has also proposed a national missing children's day in recognition of this ongoing problem. We also have suggested a national conference at which experts can discuss better ways of responding to this national tragedy.

Mr. Speaker, the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) should be commended for his commitment to missing children in the quest to find effective measures to prevent this serious problem.

INCOME TAX ACT

ACCOUNTANT'S CRITICISM OF WORDING

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in Edmonton, and again on a CBC Radio interview this morning, Mr. David Devine, Chairman of the Public Affairs Committee of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, roundly condemned Canada's present Income Tax Act. In a notable display of professional objectivity, Mr. Devine stated that the Income Tax Act "creates far too much work for chartered accountants" and, moreover, "fosters a climate of suspicion". The Income Tax Act is a crumbling ruin of a legislative instrument, a morass of verbiage, quagmire of confusion overlaid with the successive swampy layers of years of Liberal amendments which were inequitable, inefficient and, to a large degree, incomprehensible.

The Government must not allow this sad tradition to continue. It must seize the spirit of Tax Probe 86 and give Canada an Income Tax Act that even an ordinary lawyer or accountant can understand fully, and the ordinary taxpayer can believe is fair.

RECORD REAL ESTATE SALES YEAR

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Real Estate Association reported yesterday that the real estate industry, helped by lower interest rates and an improving economy, had a record sales year in 1985.

Mr. Speaker, 1985 was the best year ever for the Canadian real estate industry, with 247,658 residential transactions. That is up 27.1 per cent from the year before, according to figures from the multiple listing service. Total sales, including residential, commercial and industrial properties and land, amounted to $280.3 million, an increase of $60 million. Sales were particularly strong in Halifax, Sudbury, Thunder Bay, Kitchener-Waterloo, and in Calgary.

In my home city of Calgary construction cranes, once a common site on the Calgary skyline but gone in recent years, are returning. Housing starts and prices are rising for the first time since 1981, and a growing shortage of top-drawer downtown office space is convincing developers to revive their projects.

The value of building permits issued last year was $478 million, 20 per cent more than the $400 million in 1984.

According to Ed Wernick, an independent Calgary analyst, renewed confidence in the oil patch has sparked a real estate recovery that is expected to continue for at least two years.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND TO BOEING CORPORATION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, today the Government is closing the deal to sell the de Havilland Aircraft Corporation to Boeing. It shows how proud the Government is of this transaction that the Minister responsible has left the country, the closing is taking place in secret at a law firm somewhere in the city of Toronto, whose identity the Government is refusing to reveal.

This is a tragedy today for Canada's economic sovereignty because in this closing Canada is losing a piece of its future. Now, I am not saying anything against Boeing. It is a competent, shrewd company that makes an excellent product, and it has made a very good deal. What I regret is that starting today a big part of the decision-making about the future of the aerospace industry of this country will be made in another country, the United States.

We had an opportunity with that company, with its worldwide reputation, with its excellent line of products, to continue to expand and become a healthy, competitive international company which could hold its own anywhere in the world. From the evidence that was made clear before the committee, the Government made no real effort to keep this company in Canadian hands. I am not a socialist and I am not against seeing the company sold. I am not anti-American—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

POSITION OF DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, we were advised by his office that the Prime Minister was to be here today and we have questions that we need to put to him affecting the Government, arising from the admission of the Deputy Prime Minister. I suppose I will put my questions to the Deputy Prime Minister but I do so with reluctance because only the Prime Minister can answer these questions. I would like him to convey to the Prime Minister that as a result of the—

Mr. Chrétien: Let's suspend it.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We are tempted to suspend Question Period, as a matter of fact, until the Prime Minister comes in. I will yield for the moment and ask the House Leader to contact the Prime Minister and get him here to face what we have to put to him.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will be happy to recognize the Right Hon. Leader later on in Question Period if he rises again. I now recognize the Hon. Member for York South-Weston.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I would like—I will defer to the Leader of the New Democratic Party.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Oshawa will know that it is the practice—

An Hon. Member: Where are you hiding him?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I recognize the Hon. Member for Oshawa.

ACCESS TO LIBERAL CAUCUS DELIBERATIONS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I too am deeply disturbed to find that the Prime Minister is not here. I acknowledge that Hon. Members on the other side have made the point that, from time to time, all Hon. Members are absent, but under the present circumstances, and since I am informed that his office did say that the Prime Minister would be here on a profoundly important matter, all I can do is express the deep regret of the Opposition and the people of Canada on this point.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Broadbent: I would like to ask a question of the Deputy Prime Minister since what is involved has everything to do with his present responsibilities as Deputy Prime Minister and as a member of the Privy Council. Considering that the Deputy Prime Minister has on record acknowledged that some years ago he had direct access to what was being said in the Liberal caucus and did so every Wednesday, and did not inform the Speaker at the time in order to have the alleged incorrect wiring corrected, and given that the Privy Coucillor's oath has everything to do with the character of the Member, does the Deputy Prime Minister think such activity is compatible with being a member of the Privy Council and the Cabinet of Canada?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, over the 28-plus years that I have been in this place, this matter has been raised with each successive Speaker, from Speaker Macnaughton through the Speaker Lamoureux, Speaker Jerome, Speaker Sauvé, and Speaker Francis. On each such occasion the Speaker dealt with any current concerns such as those that were raised yesterday and are being raised now by the Leader of the New Democratic Party. You, Sir, gave your assurance yesterday that measures were being taken to meet those concerns. In any event, Mr. Speaker, the matter is properly within your jurisdiction and not that of the Government.

OATH OF OFFICE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, that answer is totally unacceptable. The Deputy Prime Minister is a member of the Privy Council and knows what that oath entails. When he was asked to be a member of the Cabinet by the present Prime Minister and was sworn in, did the Prime Minister ask him if there was anything in his past in terms of activities as a Member of Parliament about which the Prime Minister should be told before the Deputy Prime Minister was sworn in as a member of the Privy Council?

• (1120)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Of course he did, Mr. Speaker. That is the practice of any Prime Minister who is worth his salt. My response to the Prime Minister, when he asked me that question, was the same as it is to the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party, that is, I have never done anything illegal or improper in my life, except being convicted once for going through a stop sign.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my last supplementary question concerns the adjective "improper", which the Deputy Prime Minister has just used. Does he consider that a Member of Parliament, who would systematically listen in or obtain information on a regular basis about what other caucuses are doing, in a process which would now be deemed to be illegal—does he consider this was appropriate activity for a Member of Parliament and for a man who was to become Deputy Prime Minister, and for him not to inform the Prime Minister of Canada that he had done that? Is that the proper kind of thing for a Member of Parliament to do?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the innuendo and allegations made in the preamble of the question put by the Leader of the New Democratic Party are absolutely false. They are simply not true.

Mr. Broadbent: Innuendoes cannot be true or false.

REQUEST THAT DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER CONSULT PRIME MINISTER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Deputy Prime Minister, in view of his admission of repeated and regular eavesdropping on the Liberal caucus—

An Hon. Member: Not true!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Yes, that admission was made—whether, over the weekend—because we cannot put the question to the Prime Minister today, but we will face him here on Monday—

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): One way or another!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —one way or another—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —he will discuss with the Prime Minister whether, in view of conduct that is considered by most fair-minded Canadians to be unethical—

An Hon. Member: Immoral!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —and which was later declared by Parliament to be illegal—in fact, a criminal sanction was put on it—

Mr. Andre: Never!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Yes, it was—conduct which affects the rights of every Member of this House and affects the privileges of this House, if he will discuss with the Prime Minister whether he should stay in the Government, because it goes right to the question of integrity and confidence in our national Government. That is my question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: You're a pinch-hitter.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —I think there has been some suggestion made by the Leader of the Opposition with respect to the Prime Minister.

An Hon. Member: Your Prime Minister is gutless!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: He knows full well that the Prime Minister has been on the floor of the House of Commons on a daily basis—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We do not comment with respect to absences of any Member of this House. However, I think it is important to understand that the Prime Minister has been here, and that yesterday he responded fully and frankly to every question—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —that was asked of him by Members of the Opposition.

Mr. Frith: If he has no better sense in the House than that, tell him to step down.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I simply want to say to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, with respect to the question he put, to understand that this matter took place over 25 years ago. The question is whether or not Members who somehow do—

Ms. Copps: Systematic eavesdropping!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —to quote the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, something in an improper way, should be qualified for Cabinet.

Mr. Gauthier: Sit down!

Mr. Caccia: Answer the question.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I ask the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, in a rhetorical manner, what about Privy Councillors who make public disclosure of confidential and secret documents, contrary to the Official Secrets Act, which was the case with his own members when they had a press conference with respect to cabinet confidences.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I want to suggest to the Hon. Government House Leader that some days are more important than others. My friend, the Hon. Member for Oshawa, came back from Vancouver to be here this morning, and I came in from Chicoutimi, because we consider this issue to be important—the Prime Minister does not!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): And we are leaving until he comes back!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Boo!

Mr. Kilgour: Babies!

Ms. Copps: Your Prime Minister is a coward!

Mr. Gauthier: What a bunch of cowards you guys are!

Mr. McDermid: Take your balls and go home!

[Editor's Note: Whereupon all members of the Opposition withdrew.]

Mr. Speaker: Question Period. Oral Questions. The Hon. Member for Calgary West?

Mr. Hawkes: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Oral Question Period. The Hon. Member for Kootenay—no?

Order, please. Question Period: Oral Questions.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Thursday, January 30, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petition presented by the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon) by filing with the Clerk of the House also meets the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Point of Order—Mr. Deans

PRIVILEGE

PROCEDURE DURING ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): I have a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) is seeking a question of privilege arising out of Question Period?

Mr. Nunziata: That is correct, Mr. Speaker. We, as Parliamentarians, are entitled to ask the Government of the day, including the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who heads that Government, questions which are relevant to the governing of this country. The Prime Minister gave an undertaking that he would be here today to answer questions arising out of the conduct of his Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen).

I would submit to you, Your Honour, that my privileges as a Member of Parliament have been affected because I have not been able to put questions to the Government relating to the conduct of the Deputy Prime Minister who holds the second highest position in this Government. I would ask that you, Mr. Speaker, refer the whole matter of the conduct of the Deputy Prime Minister relating to his use of conversations arising out of a Liberal caucus meeting, or several Liberal caucus meetings, some time ago, to the Elections and Privileges Committee so that we will have an opportunity to ask proper and appropriate questions which go to the very root and core of this Parliament.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member quite properly makes the point that he has the right in Question Period to ask questions of the Government, as do all Hon. Members of the Opposition. That, I take it, is exactly what we went through.

The Hon. Member may not know that the Government, at least in the system as we have it, is a collegial system of cabinet responsibility. In fact the Hon. Member is absolutely correct, that questions are put to the Government to be answered by the Government. That is what we have done.

I cannot see that there is a question of privilege involved in what the Hon. Member is saying. I have a feeling that what he has done is that he has mixed two possible questions of privilege, but I took it he was rising on the question of the availability of the Government to answer questions as his question of privilege, since that is what he began with. And since we have had questions put to the Government, and since the Government was here to answer questions, I do not see that there is a question of privilege.

POINT OF ORDER

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) on another point?

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse):

That we proceed to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder if the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain would mind letting me clarify for myself whether that motion is in order. In some cases such a motion is in order but I am not entirely clear whether it is in order on a point of order.

Mr. Deans: I did not rise on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, then I should not have recognized you.

Mr. Deans: You recognized me.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think that if the Hon. Member checks the "blues" he will find I recognized him on a point of order, assuming that is what he was rising on.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, if I may—

Mr. Speaker: May I express my dilemma to the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain?

Mr. Deans: You do your checking. Okay.

Mr. Speaker: Because I did recognize the Hon. Member on a point of order. If that is not what he was seeking, then I do not know on what basis I could have recognized him otherwise. May I check with the Clerk, please?

• (1130)

With respect, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain will know that I had presented the Clerk of Petitions' Report and had received a notice of a question of privilege. I have heard it.

There is nothing before the House until I indicate that we are at the Presenting of Reports stage. Threfore I recognized the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain on a point of order because I assumed that was why he was rising. I cannot accept his motion under a point of order. There must be a substantive matter of something before the House for him to be recognized on other than a point of order. The Hon. Member is now rising on a point of order?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are rising on a point of order.

Mr. Deans: Since the Speaker was receiving petitions, as he says—I am only going by what I heard—then stopped to hear a question of privilege, it is not unreasonable to assume that what was before the House was temporarily stopped in order that a question of privilege could be heard. My rising was then on the matter which was before the House prior to the question of privilege being raised.

The question of privilege does not stop the proceedings, but interferes with the proceedings. In actual fact we are still dealing with the matter that was before the House because that matter had not been terminated and I moved, quite properly so, that the House should now proceed to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate the sincerity with which the Members puts his argument. Normally we end Question Period with my statement in regard to petitions that were introduced the day before. I rose simply to do that. There is not a proceeding before the House at that time until we get to some matter under Routine Procedures.

It has always been our custom to hear questions of privilege or points of order that Members may wish to raise arising out of Question Period before we do that. It is on that matter that I recognized the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata).

The Hon. Member will know that normally other Members may have questions of privilege or points of order they wish to put at that time. Until we get to a matter, I cannot accept a motion, with respect.

I recognized the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain on a point of order, as is our custom, at that time. If he was not rising on a point of order, in fairness he should have informed me that I had improperly recognized him because I did specifically recognize him on a point of order. Therefore, since I gave the floor to the Member on a point of order, I cannot accept a motion as a result of the Chair recognizing him on a point of order.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Presenting Reports from Standing and Special Committees. Tabling of Documents. Statements by Ministers. Petitions. Introduction of Bills. The Hon. Member for Scarborough Centre (Mrs. Browes) on a point of order.

Mrs. Browes: Mr. Speaker, I have a petition that I wish to present.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Murphy: It's too late.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Deans: We passed that.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Scarborough Centre seeks the unanimous consent of the House to revert to Petitions.

Mr. Murphy: Not today.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. There not being such consent, introduction of Bills will continue. Introduction of Bills.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following question will be answered today: No. 426.

[Text]

SIGNING OF PETITIONS BY ARMED FORCES PERSONNEL

Question No. 426—Mr. Cassidy:

Are there any regulations, legislation or administrative rules which prohibit or limit Canadian Armed Forces personnel in Canada from signing or sending petitions to Parliament and, if so (a) has the Government sought legal opinion as to whether such restrictions are constitutional under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (b) are changes contemplated to such restrictions and, if so, what are they?

Mr. Robert Wenman (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Yes, Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Canadian Forces, Article 19.10 and Section 3 of Chapter 19 deal either generally or specifically with this matter.

(a) The regulations have been carefully considered in light of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedom.

(b) QR&O's and CFAO's are periodically reviewed in the light of changing government policy and legislation.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

EXCISE TAX ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Thursday, January 30, 1986, consideration of Bill C-80, An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and Motion No. 19 (Mr. de Jong) p. 10322).

Excise Tax Act

Mr. Speaker: Resuming debate. The Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn).

Mr. Deans: A point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain on a point of order.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse):

That the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) be now heard.

Mr. Speaker: That motion is indeed in order. In fairness, the House should know that I checked the record to find out who had spoken last. Various Members rose at the same time. I recognized the next Member in order of our normal sequence. It is perfectly in order to put that motion, given that a number of Members rose.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gauthier: No.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Churchill.

Mr. Gauthier: We said no.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, I did not hear any Members say no. All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

And the division bells having rung:

Mr. Speaker: It being five o'clock p.m., the proceedings on the motion before the House have lapsed and pursuant to Standing Order 9(1) the House stands adjourned until Monday next at eleven a.m.

The House adjourned at 5 p.m.

Monday, February 3, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

USE OF MACE CRAFTED AFTER FIRE OF 1916

Mr. Speaker: Prior to calling orders of the day, may I make the traditional announcement to the House that, in recognition of the seventieth anniversary of the fire which destroyed the Centre Block on this day in 1916, I would draw to the attention of Hon. Members the wooden replica of the mace on the Clerk's table. This mace was used for many years as a replacement for the original one destroyed by fire.

Prior to calling and reading of the order, I am in receipt, properly, of a request from the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) to raise a question of privilege. The Deputy Prime Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PRIVILEGE

POSITION OF DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, as you know, the proceedings last Friday terminated early. Over the weekend I had the opportunity of reflecting on the "blues" and this being the first opportunity that is available to me, I would like to say a few things that concern the various questions that have been raised in the House on matters which transpired almost a quarter of a century ago, here, in these buildings of Parliament.

As I indicated to Members on Thursday of last week, the substance of the article in that day's Star has been a matter of public record at least since 1976 when in his book, Peter Stursberg, quoted substantially from the interview I gave him in 1973.

Mr. Deans: This is a statement.

Mr. Nielsen: The full transcript and tape of that interview have been public since January 1, 1981.

Members will also be aware that in an article in Saturday Night in January of last year, statements similar to those made over a decade ago appeared. It is true that as a matter of happenstance I was able—

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order. With respect, the Deputy Prime Minister can hear what is beginning. I think he knows that I have been attempting in the past to be quite strict about requiring that the question of privilege which is raised be presented in its procedural form early in an argument with regard to questions of privilege.

Mr. Nielsen: It is true that as a matter of happenstance I was able as an opposition private Member to know what was said at meetings of the Liberal caucus. I say "happenstance" in that I did not initiate that opportunity. This took place during an intensely partisan period of parliamentary life during which Members on all sides were pursuing their responsibilities with a zeal that history will undoubtedly judge to have been excessively partisan and deeply regrettable. I have neither concealed nor denied the existence of this state of affairs. No one regrets more than I that events in this House of the past few days have likened themselves to the Parliament of the sixties. None of us who were in Parliament at that time, myself included—

Mr. Althouse: That is not a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I say, with great respect to the Deputy Prime Minister, that I think he is making a statement that is of deep and sincere importance to him, but I must ask him to come to the question of privilege, with respect.

Mr. Nielsen: I am in the middle of it now, or, coming very rapidly to it.

None of us who were in Parliament at that time, myself included, is proud of the excesses of that period. Indeed, I do not condone any invasion of a private Member's private conversation or caucus discussion, and Members are well aware of my views with respect to the Official Secrets Act and national security.

Ms. Copps: Order.

Mr. Nielsen: I offer these words because of my respect for Parliament. Hindsight and the passage of time have taught me that excesses of a quarter century ago ought not to be praised or repeated a quarter century later.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, while the events of which I speak are long past, I apologize to those who believe that proprieties were violated 25 years ago by my conduct.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: My deeper regret is that in the past few days the attention of this House has recalled this period and in so doing has prevented the House from dealing with the more crucial issues which are and ought to be before us—

Ms. Copps: Oh, come on. Get off the editorializing. A bunch of cowards.

Mr. Nielsen: Job creation, parliamentary reform, international trade—these are the issues for which I would like this Parliament to be remembered. I pledge to you, Sir, and to all Hon. Members that I am determined that my contribution to this House and the people of Canada will be to move forward on these important issues and not to recall or indeed return Parliament to the partisan bondage of the sixties.

It is my hope that my reflections today can lead us all in this pursuit.

Some Hon. Members: Hear hear!

Mr. Speaker: There has been no question of privilege raised.

Ms. Copps: Well, why didn't you say that before?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, Sheila!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. On a point of order, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner).

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, are you going to allow me, and perhaps the House Leader for the NDP, to respond to the statement?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

● (1110)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think everybody will know that I want to treat this as fairly as possible. I think, in fact, what we have heard is not a question of privilege but a statement by the Minister. I therefore propose to hear the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), I take it for his Party, and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) for his Party.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, we will, of course, want to analyse the words of the Deputy Prime Minister clearly to ascertain from those words whether that constitutes an apology. I want to draw to his attention, that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and to the House, the fact that we find great difficulty in accepting the description of what the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) termed happenstance. It was clear from the tape, which is now in the public record, that the eavesdropping of the proceedings of the Liberal caucus was more than happenstance, whether or not it was initiated by the Deputy Prime Minister. His own words indicate that eavesdropping was repeated and regular. I just wish to recite to Your Honour the words that fell from the mouth of the Deputy Prime Minister as recorded in the tape. He said:

> From here on in, this part is not for current publication. You can keep it and stare at it but you cannot disclose it. There was a method by which we knew every Wednesday what was said in the Liberal caucus word for bloody word.

He went on later to say:

> I could scarcely believe what I was hearing and I was hearing every word that was spoken. He was speaking in French and I had the benefit of a translation service as well.

Later:

> It is verbatim because I heard every word in that caucus, every single word. There are others who heard because I had to have somebody around.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that is more than happenstance. That reflects a regular style of conduct, and one which in those days, 20 years ago, and today remains unethical, unparliamentary, and as I stated on Friday, Your Honour, it transgress and offends the rights and privileges of Members of this House.

Of course, since 1974 the Parliament of our country has attached a criminal sanction to that type of conduct, whether the contact is initiated or abetted. I suggest to the Deputy Prime Minister that, at best, he was participating and abetting in that style of conduct. He himself, in this House on another occasion, but on the same type of subject, on October 17, 1973, and it is found at page 6942 of Hansard, said this:

> I do not think it is enough that the House simply ordered the tape to be produced by the offender. The offence is serious enough to require the offender to come before the bar of the House and give an explanation of the whole affair.

This was the Deputy Prime Minister speaking when he was, and still is, the Member for Yukon. He went on to say:

> It is an extremely serious affair and one that should be considered very seriously by the Chair. My suggestion is that Your Honour consider the advisability of having the offender appear before the bar of the House to explain the origin of the idea, the manner in which he accomplished his objective and, indeed, all of the details of the rather sordid action.

If the action was sordid when the Member from the Yukon, as he then was, was attributing it to another Member, then it remains sordid today.

Whether it was 20 or 25 years ago, the relevance today is the relevance we tried to bring up on Thursday and Friday, Mr. Speaker, whether that type of conduct, considered to be, I think by most fair minded people in this country, unethical, to be unprofessional, and which today is illegal, can be tolerated or condoned by the Prime Minister by retaining the Deputy Prime Minister as the number two person in his Government.

That is not the way in which the Prime Minister has been treating the matter. In Halifax over the weekend he said that eavesdropping is only human. He likened it to passing an open door and listening to a conversation. That is not what happened. This was deliberate, repeated and regular conduct.

Then we have the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), of all people—he who has the custody of the administration of the laws of this country—saying over the weekend on CTV, "So as to whether I" the Minister of Justice, John Crosbie, "would listen, if by accident the opportunity arose today, to another Party's caucus or whatever, yes, I would".

Some Hon. Members: Shame! Shame!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) will know that there is an equal time tradition in regard to these matters. I would ask him to conclude.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I will bring it to a close in just a moment, Mr. Speaker, and I am conscious of what you are saying.

For the Minister of Justice, having the custody and having a fiduciary position towards Canadians for the proper administration of our laws, to condone and laugh, even laugh at this type of conduct, is something that goes beyond the scope of my particular imagination.

We will read and reflect very carefully upon what the Deputy Prime Minister has said, and I appreciate his bringing it up at an early opportunity. We will govern ourselves accordingly after we have had time to reflect upon what he said.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I might, at the outset, say that had the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) sought the opportunity simply to make a statement rather than to rise on a point of privilege, I, for one—and I am sure I am speaking on behalf of my colleagues—would have been pleased to have had that opportunity made available.

I can appreciate that understanding is not always easy to come by. I can appreciate that those who might feel that they personally were offended will feel more strongly perhaps from that point of view over the issue of 25 years ago. I want to say, on behalf of my colleagues, that I accept the Deputy Prime Minister's recognition of the inappropriateness of the actions taken 25 years ago. I accept that the Deputy Prime Minister has indicated that not only does he deem that to have been inappropriate, but that he has taken steps over the intervening years to attempt to make sure that such a thing could not happen again.

I had hoped that that statement might have been made on Thursday last. It has caused a great deal of diffiulty for a number of people across this country, many of us in the House of Commons, having to come to grips with the defence that was offered at the end of last week. I seriously regret that this matter came to public attention at this point in the way that it did. I do, however, want to say that I share the concern of the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) over the statements attributed to, and I believe made by—since I saw them being said—the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). I consider that to be a very serious matter, and I would ask that at some point that be considered by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in reviewing the events of the last few days. It is quite inappropriate for a Minister of Justice to indicate in any way, shape or form that he might break the law, which certainly could be the inference drawn from the statements made by the Attorney General, the Minister for Justice.

Let me say to the Deputy Prime Minister that the confidence of this House is vitally important. We can disagree on issues and how they can be solved. We can disagree on whether better things can be done with regard to unemployment, with regard to the level of the dollar or with regard to interest rates. Those disagreements are fair. But the one thing we can never allow ourselves to disagree over is the quality and standard of conduct that we expect from Members of Parliament, regardless of where and regardless of when, as it affects their public duties.

For that reason, and for no other, I felt compelled to involve myself in the discussion, distasteful though it was. But I am pleased, I must say—I see the Hon. Associate Minister of Defence (Mr. Andre) huffing and sniffing in the background as is his normal practice. I want to tell the Deputy Prime Minister, who knows me well, that I personally, and I think on behalf of all of my colleagues, accept that the matter as far as I am concerned has come to an end.

POINT OF ORDER

DESIGNATION OF OPPOSITION DAYS

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a request to raise a point of order from the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to raise a point of order about the method by which this opposition day was designated, and for that matter the way in which the opposition day was designated for tomorrow.

On Friday, approximately 30 minutes before what would have been the normal time of adjournment, a senior advisor of mine received a phone call from a senior advisor of the Government House Leader saying that the Government intended to designate Monday and Tuesday as opposition days.

I am also informed by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), who happened to be in the House at that time—I believe he will be speaking as well with respect to this point of order—that he observed a letter being handed to the occupant of the Chair by a representative of the Government, that is to say, within a period of about half an hour before what would have been the time of adjournment.

Opposition days, I am told, were created about 17 years ago. For 17 years, ever since opposition days were added to our procedures, these allotted days have been designated orally in the House, and at least several hours notice has been given, not just a few minutes.

If the way in which, and I coming to a conclusion very shortly, Mr. Speaker, the Government proceeded on Friday is acceptable and continues, it means that it will be very difficult for the Opposition to consider in a proper and deliberate manner what it should do and how it should proceed with respect to the allotted day in question.

There is a time limit within which a motion has to be set down with respect to an allotted day on a Monday. The motion has to be set down on a Friday, and if the Government continues to use the method that was used Friday, I submit that it really distorts the concept of opposition days. It does not make it possible for Opposition Parties to consider in an appropriate and deliberate manner the form and subject matter of the motion in question. In fact, especially if this procedure is followed on a Friday, it might be impossible for Opposition Members to learn of the matter in time to put down any motion at all.

I ask you to consider this submission, Mr. Speaker, namely, the manner in which the Government designated today and tomorrow as opposition days, as contrary to the rules and, therefore, that these days have not been properly designated for the purpose the Government intends.

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I was here Friday afternoon, as you were most of the afternoon. At 4.37 p.m. exactly, the Hon. Government House Leader came into the House accompanied by the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Andre), the Hon. Member for Calgary Centre.

As a student of the British parliamentary system for many years, I know that we often deliberate in this House by precedent. As the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) came into the House at 4.37 p.m. exactly—and you will remember, Mr. Speaker, that I looked very attentively at your eyes thinking that something was going to take place before five o'clock, the reason I stayed here all afternoon—would you inform this House if the precedent established Friday will be the conduct for the future?

If the rule now says that at any time up to ten to five o'clock or ten to six o'clock on any given day the President of the Privy Council can assign the following day or the following Monday or the next day as an opposition day, as the House Leader of my Party just said, it is evident that we will not be in a position to fulfil our mandate, that is, to be given plenty of time to prepare ourselves when an opposition day is given to my Party or, for that matter, to the third party, the New Democratic Party. I would like you, Mr. Speaker, to advise us as to what is proper now.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is asking me to give advice as opposed to commenting on the validity of the point of order.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I will preface my remarks by indicating a couple of inaccuracies in the observations of the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme).

In the first place, I was not accompanied by the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Andre). I know he was in the House at the time, as was the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis. To suggest that I was accompanied by the Associate Minister is to suggest that I was accompanied by the Hon. Member from Saint-Denis. I would be glad to be accompanied by him, but I was not.

I think I should address the point that was raised, Mr. Speaker. I listened very carefully to the comments made by the House Leader for the Official Opposition. I suggest that I could not find a shred of evidence that there is a point of order in relation to the designation of today and tomorrow as the first and second allotted days in this supply period.

First, it is a matter of common knowledge that I was prevented by the Opposition on both Thursday and Friday from using the normal House hours to announce the business of the House of the coming week. As a result, I had no opportunity, because the bells were ringing, to make any announcement in the House. It was physically and procedurally impossible for me to do so. Indeed, it would not have been proper for you, Mr. Speaker, to have noticed me under the circumstances, even at the conclusion of the day, in order for me to stand up and announce the business.

Accordingly, when it became obvious that it would not be possible for me to do so, I informed both Opposition Parties' House Leaders by telephone, and Your Honour by letter, that these days would be opposition days. These actions were taken well before the end of the time provided for filing Notices of Motions.

With respect to the exact timing, Your Honour will know that letters and copies indicating the intention were delivered to your office in advance of personal delivery, which took place at or about 4.30 p.m. in the aftternoon. Prior to that members of my staff were in touch by telephone with the Hon. House Leader for the Opposition, as he points out. Opposition Parties were notified of our intention to designate those two days as allotted days.

Second, in spite of the fact that steps were taken by me advising all appropriate persons, and in spite of the fact that opposition Parties walked out of the House, it is clear that, in any event, the Official Opposition filed a motion for debate on this day. Therefore, that should speak to the reality that there was time to put in a motion on the environment which, I acknowledge, is an important topic of national interest.

• (1130)

Third, may I remind Your Honour of the fact that, pursuant to Standing Order 63(1), we have a continuing order for the consideration of the business of supply which enables Opposition Parties to file motions for consideration at any time prior to the time when that item of business is before the House. Indeed, Your Honour will recall that there have been a number of instances over the past years where Opposition Parties, including my Party when we were in opposition, tabled well in advance notices of motion with respect to our intended business with regard to any opposition day being designated by the Government of the day. Thus the practice of filing in advance of designation is well established.

Fourth, I would like to draw to the attention of the House two Standing Orders which give ample support to the actions which I took on Friday afternoon. Standing Order 23(2) provides as follows:

Government Orders shall be called and considered in such sequence as the Government determines.

If I may refer the House to the Order Paper and Notices for this day, the first item of business under "Government Orders" is the business of supply. It is clear that it is entirely at the discretion of the Government whether or not to call the business of supply. This power is not limited as to time. Nevertheless, our practice has been that the Government allot the days for the consideration of the business of supply at least 24 hours in advance of the actual day in order to give the Opposition the opportunity to lay down a motion within the required notice period. I have complied fully with that practice, which is not mentioned in Standing Order 63, or elsewhere in the Standing Orders.

May I underline that I was prevented from announcing in the House the days for the consideration of the business of supply by the actions of the Opposition, which now apparently complains of my procedure. In addition, I took all timely and reasonable measures to inform the Opposition of the Government's plan for the business of the House of Monday and Tuesday. As well, I fully complied with the provisions of Standing Orders 23(2) and 63 which govern our procedure in such instances.

Finally, if it is a question of allowing Members sufficient opportunity with respect to the item of debate on the floor of the House of Commons at any time, I simply point out that in tabling its motion the Official Opposition placed an embargo on that motion until it could be printed. By the same token, this action by the Official Opposition would put the majority of Members in a position in which they would not know the subject matter for which to prepare themselves in order to have a full and proper debate. In other words, there was an embargo placed on the subject matter. Of course, we are prepared to defend the position of our Government on a supply motion, but this matter does work both ways. I simply say to Your Honour that we have complied with the requirements with respect to designating allotted days. In this instance, the whole weekend was given for preparation for today's debate and, indeed, for tomorrow's debate.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of rectification. I have been in this place for some years. It is normal for the Government to make its announcements after Routine Proceedings have started, and not after Orders of the Day have been called. I remind the Government House Leader that his argument in telling us that he could not announce the business of the House because he did not have time is actually faulty and that it would not stand up to the traditions and customs of this place. He could have made his announcement before Orders of the Day had been called on both occasions. That is the normal manner for dealing with such matters.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I thought we were going to do business on Friday.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members might have assumed that I spent this morning checking precedents. I had a feeling this question might come up.

I simply say to the Hon. Member that the letters of the rules of our House have been completely followed. Therefore, I must find that there is no point of order.

May I confirm for the record one matter of fact. Hon. Members claim that I was presented with a notice while I was in the Chair at 4:37 p.m. on Friday. I was not, in fact, presented with such a notice at that time. The notice was sent to my office shortly before. What was presented to the clerk at 4:37 p.m. on Friday was his copy of the letter to me which had been sent to my office.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 63—THE ENVIRONMENT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport) moved:

That this House condemns the Government for its failure to recognize the importance attributed by Canadians to toxic chemicals in water and other elements of the environment.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in moving that this House condemn the Government for its failure to recognize the importance attributed by Canadians to toxic chemicals in water and other elements of the environment, on a suddenly called opposition day, I have to conclude that the Government gave us the clear impression of having lost its sense of direction late on a Friday afternoon. A major budget Bill was dropped at that time and we asked ourselves why. Some nine months after a May budget the Government has not yet passed the necessary Bills.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Caccia: We in the Opposition have to conclude that the Government is losing control of its agenda if, in fact, it has an agenda at all.

Hon. Members may wonder: Why toxic chemicals today? The answer is that it is time to put on paper the record of this Government with respect to cuts, inaction, unfulfilled promises, neglect, contradictions and secrecy since it took power in September of 1984.

Hon. Members may also ask: Why toxic chemicals in relation to what goes on in the country? This is, of course, an important issue to Canadians since toxic chemicals ultimately mean our water, our health and our food. Toxic chemicals affect the lives of every Canadian, not only those in the present generation but those in future generations. Therefore, the debate on toxic chemicals is really a debate on health. It is really a debate on the economy. What we propose to talk about today is the interest of future generations in water quality, which really means the interest of future generations in health, in the quality of the products which we consume and will be consuming, the cost of production where water is essential, and the cost of consumption as well in every household.

Scientists are telling us that toxic contaminants represent the greatest immediate threat to the interest of future generations because of the time which is necessary to remove them from water through natural processes. That time is exceedingly long. We are also told by scientists that some actions of the present generation so degrade the quality of water that future generations will have less flexibility in using water. In some areas waters have become so polluted that certain uses such as for beaches, swimming and municipal water supplies are in danger or are even precluded. Scientists are also telling us that contamination of fish and the destruction of forms of plant and animal life is taking place.

Scientists are reporting persistent toxic contaminants in the Great Lakes and, inevitably, in the St. Lawrence Basin. What this means is that present generations may reap short-lived benefits from exploiting water as a sink for waste chemicals only to pass immense costs on to future generations. The interests of the future users of water must be protected in light of the scientific reports we continuously receive. We must have, therefore, a commitment to action and to specific programs by the Government.

We have two principles to guide us; first, the conservation of the quality of water for the next generation. It should be in the same condition, not worse than we received it from previous generations. Second, we must conserve our options. We must conserve the diversity of the natural resource base. In applying these two principles, there are two methods we can adopt and follow; first, the correction of present abuses which have led to the degradation of our water and, second, the prevention of similar processes from reoccurring in future.

But what is the record of the Government, this so-called Progressive Conservative Government which is neither progressive nor conservative in terms of the environment? There are specific questions to be asked as to what the Government is doing about the Niagara River and what are its long-term plans? How does it plan to protect the water and the health of future generations? If industry needs incentives to accelerate sewer separation procedures, proper monitoring and installation of modern equipment, and if municipalities are increasingly in need of help with sewer treatment and the rehabilitation of creeks, rivers and other water bodies, what does the Government plan to do about it in the second year of its mandate?

I will give a brief chronology of Government action beginning in October, 1984, when the first very important Niagara River Toxics Committee report was produced jointly by Canada and the United States. There has been silence on the recommendations contained in this report. One month later, in November, 1984, the Government shelved the Guelph Toxicology Centre. So far we have lost two valuable years in launching a centre of excellence which is badly needed in order to better understand what is happening in the environment as a result of the presence of toxic chemicals. The government also cut funds from the National Research Council. It cut an important secretariat which, among other tasks, had to deal with toxic contaminants. The Government cut the Canadian Wildlife Service by $3.8 million. What a shameful performance on an issue which is becoming more and more visible and a source of preoccupation to Canadians.

In March, 1985, the Government decided not to seek the annual amount of $2.5 million from Treasury Board to conduct research along the Niagara River. It replaced it with a $1 million fund per year with private institutions on any topic under the sun, thus the momentum on the Niagara River is lost. Two months later, in May 1985, the former Minister of the Environment finally looked into the matter, went to Washington to discuss the situation of our international river and promised a plan for full and speedy action along the Niagara River. In October 1985, the head of the Environment Protection Agency of the United States, Mr. Lee Thomas, came to Ottawa. There was a meeting but there were no statements, and no action forthcoming. The plan which was submitted by Mr. Thomas, which was public domain south of the border, was kept under wraps in Canada.

In December 1985, the Royal Society of Canada and the National Research Council of the United States jointly produced an important and substantial report which received front page coverage by the media, because of its significance. It was produced by funds from The Donner Foundation. Since then there has been silence; no action, no reply, nothing.

In January of this year we hear there were two vacancies filled on the International Joint Commission which, as you know, Mr. Speaker, deals with these matters virtually on a daily basis. These were two vacancies which had been unfilled for some 14 months. But unfortunately the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) ignores a wealth of talent which is available and chooses to resurrect from the mausoleum of Tory "has-beens" two gentlemen, Mr. Fulton and Mr. Welch, whose familiarity with Great Lake issues match that of a cobra at the North Pole, to put it mildly.

What a disillusionment, Mr. Speaker, considering the talent which is available from non-government groups, from competent retired civil servants with long experience, and from other quarters. That was a real demonstration of the lack of understanding on the part of the Government as to the meaning and importance of having well equipped and prepared individuals working on the Canadian side.

Last week we received the second report on the St. Clair River. The Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) described it to the media as the end of a saga and announced to the world that contaminents and toxic chemicals will be checked one day when we have a brand new Environmental Contaminants Act. How naive can one be to think that the daily operations of the industries, past and present, can be improved by legislation yet to be written, let alone passed?

First, the Minister distanced himself from his own scientists on the whole danger posed by toxic chemicals. Then a few weeks later in November, in order to regain ground, he described the situation of the St. Clair River as awesome and even chastised one of his backbenchers, the Member from Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Jones), for not taking the matter seriously. Finally, with no reference to our obligation to the U.S. under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, he drops this hot potato in the lap of the Ontario Government and invokes, as the remedy, the yet to be conceived Environmental Contaminants Act.

The Minister of the Environment reminds me of Bugs Bunny hopping from one issue to another and making promises which he hopes will be forgotten. He is good at describing problems. He is hopeless in implementing solutions. He is good at public relations, and slippery on substance.

I must refer back to the authors of this report on the Great Lakes who say, at page 117, I believe: "Political capabilities for correcting mistakes are inadequate". How accurate. This description, it seems to me, applies to the present Government which, with cuts in research, cuts in the establishment of centres of excellence on toxicity such as the Guelph centre, cuts in the Canadian Wildlife Service, with inaction on the Niagara River, with ineptness in appointments to fill vacancies on the International Joint Commission, and in passing the buck on the St. Clair River, is sending out a message, as it has in other cases in which it faced difficult issues, which reads: "If it is complex, if it requires forward-looking thinking, we cannot". When the going gets tough, Mr. Speaker, the Government gives up.

We must conclude that the Government basically has no confidence in itself. The Government seems to have no agenda, and not only on toxic chemicals. When it promises legislation on toxic chemicals it promises an initiative which it found already in the works when it took office. The Enrivonmental Contaminants Act will not clean up the St. Clair River. It will not clean up the Niagara River. The Government is dreaming in colour if it thinks that that can be achieved by invoking an Act yet to be passed.

The existing toxic chemicals in the river bed, Mr. Speaker, come from sewer outfalls, leaching from dump sites, and other existing and on-going sources of pollution which cannot be dealt with through the legislation which the Government intends to introduce because we are talking of the present and of the past. In addition, the St. Clair is an international river. The Government has an obligation under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement to clean up the situation. The Government has several instruments at its disposal. One, it could reinstate the two-year accelerated write-offs under the Income Tax Act. This is an important incentive to industry to get modern treatment equipment in place, separate sewers, modernize monitoring systems, and to ensure that the highest standards of waste treatment are applied. Two, it could offer a special program to municipalities such as Sarnia to provide financial assistance for the installation of equipment and facilities for the best possible treatment of residential, commercial, and industrial waste waters that pass through the municipal sewer system. It could create a super fund with interested provincial Governments to remove toxic waste from dumps and, therefore, remove the source of future problems at leaking dumps.

To restore the confidence of the people who live alongside the St. Clair River, the Minister must come up with a plan of action. He must move swiftly. He must protect the St. Clair River because it has a bearing on the clean-up of the mess along the Niagara River where we expect the Americans to do something for us. To rely on the Environmental Contaminants Act to clean up the present situation, as the Minister said on several occasions last week that he would, is not realistic.

Action to clean up past and present contamination will cost money. The Government will be tempted to use the deficit as an excuse for not acting. Mr. Speaker, if there is money to bail out the banks, how can there be no money to protect the health of this and future generations of Canadians? If there is money for national defence why not defend our health, the quality of our water, the economy of our future, and the well-being of future Canadians?

It is also important to put on record some observations as to where these toxic chemicals come from. They come from buried industrial waste, from daily operations in industry, from the use of chemicals in agriculture, from municipal waste, from chemical production, and from the waste of businesses such as dry cleaners, photographic establishments, and garages. In other words, they come from the daily activities in our cities and on our farms. In Ontario alone, about half a million tons of hazardous industrial wastes are disposed of improperly each year.

Where do these toxic chemicals go? They go into the soil and gradually, over time, into the ground water. They go into our creeks, rivers, and lakes, directly or indirectly. By way of evaporation of water containing toxic substances they go into the air, into the cloud system, and eventually, through rain, they precipitate and come back onto crops and the soil and, eventually, into our food. Over time, Mr. Speaker, these toxic substances become an integral part of the human body.

Therefore, the question that follows is whether we can do something and whether we are still in time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Could I ask the Hon. Member to conclude his speech?

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, I will seek your permission to accelerate. The answer to that question, Mr. Speaker, could be a positive one if we see the problem not only as an environmental one, but as a threat to our economy and our health. You will ask, why the economy? Contaminated water eventually means cost of filtration and cost of treatment of water. Contaminated food eventually means costs in health care and the economic cost, if not borne by this generation, could be immense for the next.

The question that follows that is—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired. Is there unanimous consent to allow the Member to continue his speech for a couple of minutes?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not. Therefore, we will proceed with the period for questions and comments.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There was a statement that did take some 20 minutes of our time and we usually add that time to the daily deliberations of the House. Since this is our day, could you take it under consideration that we add the extra 20 or 21 minutes to the day?

• (1200)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will take the matter under consideration and make a ruling later today. Questions or comments?

Mr. Gurbin: I appreciate some of the comments by the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) and we are very grateful to be able to have this debate in the House today so that we can discuss a very important issue of concern to Canadians. This question deserves our attention and we want to consider it very seriously.

I am sure the Hon. Member will appreciate that I have some difficulty with many of his comments. While I would not accuse him of playing politics with the matter, he quite understandably was taking advantage of this debate to attract the kind of attention he might not otherwise get.

My first question relates to the accuracy, consistency and reliability of his comments with respect to his motion on the environment and the toxic chemicals about which we are all concerned. The Member alluded to the comments of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) with respect to the ability of the Environmental Contaminants Act to clean up the problem that exists in Canadian waterways and the Great Lakes in particular. I suggest it is clear that the Minister of the Environment has never said that that is the only tool at his disposal.

The Hon. Member himself indicated that many of the substances with which we are dealing are almost indestructible and for some time have found their way into human fatty tissue. Chemicals such as PCBs and dioxin in our waterways are particularly difficult to destroy. Most important, these chemicals are bio-concentrated which means that they are building up in our life systems in such things as fish and vegetation in the waterways. This is a long-term problem that has evolved over many years.

The Minister of the Environment has said very clearly that the amendments to be proposed to the Environmental Contaminants Act—

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, the ten-minute period for questions and comments should be strictly adhered to, and both questions and comments should be brief, so that the Member has time to answer.

This Hon. Member is making a speech!

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has already taken three minutes. I am sure that he is just about to conclude.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, I am trying to make sure that the Hon. Member for Davenport clearly understands my question. While he has one point of view, I want to make sure that he understands what the Minister has said to see if he does not agree.

I will attempt to be short in explaining the three critical points on which I would like the Hon. Member's comments. First, the Environmental Contaminants Act is long overdue for amendment. It will address the preventive aspect by placing the onus on the industries to deal with the many chemicals. Second, the changes to the Act will allow for the monitoring of chemicals from their introduction to their destruction. Furthermore, we intend to work very closely with the Province of Ontario—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to inform the Hon. Member that we have already taken more than half of the question and comment period. I give the floor to the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia).

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, it is no wonder that the Hon. Member (Mr. Gurbin) finds it difficult to understand some of the environmental points that have been made. It is not the first time he has had such difficulty.

His first question concerned the reliability of the information. It is information that is contained in the 1985 Report on the Great Lakes Water Quality. It is information contained in the Niagara River Toxics Committee, published in October, 1984. It is information contained in the joint report by the Royal Society of Canada and the National Research Council in the United States of America, entitled "The Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement: An Evolving Instrument for Ecosystem Management", which was published in December, 1985. These are documents from which I quoted in my intervention. If that is not reliable information I do not know what it is. It also is the record.

The Government now has a foundation on which to build its action as a result of the content of these reports. In the spring of 1985 the Government promised to take swift action along the Niagara River by the fall of 1985. The Government has been silent and has not delivered. The Government has not commented on the U.S. proposal, put forward an alternative or had the guts to say that it is not happy with the proposal from the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington. It is the question of such political activity that we are raising in the House today to illustrate the Government's lack of agenda on such an important matter.

I submit that when the Parliamentary Secretary speaks on this subject he would be better off to tell us the record of the Government and not simply comment on the Environmental Contaminants Act in the future. As I indicated, such a measure will not take care of the discharge and leaks of contaminants into our rivers. We must clean up the present mess and we must deal with industries which discharge their substances into the St. Clair River daily. Such action is necessary in order to show the Americans that we take our obligation under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement seriously with respect to the St. Clair River and we expect them to do the same along the Niagara.

These are the contemporary issues on the table. The question is not whether the information is reliable. What further information does the Parliamentary Secretary need before he is convinced that action must be taken?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments? If not, resuming debate.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, let me take this opportunity to extend to Members of the House and the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) in particular the regret of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) at not being able to be here today to participate in the debate. He is presently in Calgary announcing the Four Mountains Park Plan which provides guidelines for the management of four of Canada's greatest national treasures—Banff, Jasper, Yoho and Kootenay National Parks—over the next 15 years. The plan will ensure that the heritage resources in these parks are protected and preserved for future generations of Canadians.

On behalf of the Minister let me explain the Government's position on the environment and the Hon. Member's motion in particular. Before doing so, I found it rather interesting that the Member for Davenport thought that the debate should not take place today because there were important budgetary Bills that should be passed. I agree with him, but I find the argument which he puts forward to be a weak one, especially on behalf of the Liberal Party. On the one hand, if we look at budgetary legislation, they are the ones who have been blocking it, be it in the House or in committee. That is the first point to be made. To make it very specific let us look at the family allowance legislation which they passed. They started implementing a reduced family allowance benefit in January and got the legislation passed in December of that year. However, he lectured us on the fact that we should be getting these Bills through the House of Commons. I agree that we should get them through the House, and I agree with the British system in terms of the passage of budgetary Bills. In number of days after the Budget comes down they are passed, and the Opposition has that period of time within which to debate them. I agree with the Hon. Member, but I do not think he should use the argument both ways when he tries to make his point.

Mr. Penner: You were a great teacher when you were in the Opposition.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I am pleased I now have their attention.

The other point which I should like to make is that the Government indicated that we should have a regular period of time in which the Budget comes down so that ordinary Canadians and the provincial Governments can plan. In fact, that will be done this year. It speaks exactly to the point raised by the Hon. Member. I know he is interested in the environment. I mean that sincerely, but I suggest that his memory about budgetary items is not only somewhat faulty but has been put into a time capsule. If he is a Liberal, I would suggest that he should open up his mind a bit.

I should like to speak specifically to the motion before us. Toxic chemicals which we now find in all parts of the environment are indications that we have been living with the benefits of a chemical society and often without addressing the risks associated with those benefits. This is not a new problem and it is not only an issue with which this Government has to deal. I think the Hon. Member, as a former Minister of the Enrivonment, would indicate that he made some strides but, in his more sanguine moments, I am sure he would also indicate that he did not make as much progress as he thought he might, or as he wished. I think all of us have to have a common front on some of these issues.

The problem has been with us since we started to depend upon chemicals for our lifestyle. Of course, it was accelerated after the last World War. There are warning symptoms of a very real problem facing countries as they learn to deal with both the benefits and the risks of living with chemicals. We live in a global chemical society. We plough chemicals into our fields, we release them into the air, we treat our food with them, we wear them, and we use them in thousands of products. Each day Canadians enjoy a quality of life enhanced but dependent upon the use of chemicals. Possibly life without chemicals has become virtually impossible, and I would suggest even unthinkable. It is important for us to put forward both these points of view in this debate.

The people involved in that industry and in that research have done much to enhance our quality of life. We often discuss chemicals in a negative light when we deal with important environmental issues, but their benefits to Canadians are high and immediate. However, short-term benefits are creating a long-term legacy of continuing problems which we all have to address. We must ensure that we do not make decisions today that will cause problems for tomorrow's generations. The St. Clair River, which Hon. Members have discussed in the House, makes that point clear.

Many of us are interested in various forms of energy such as atomic energy. I have a research lab in my own riding, and tremendous work is being done by the men and women there.

The ability of a society in the western world to move forward in a technological sense, whether it is with that form of energy or chemicals, seems to be limited only by the ability of the human mind. Sometimes we are restricted by finances, but the ability to move ahead is absolutely critical. However, often the ethical and moral questions do not keep pace with that advancement, or they seem to lag. It is not that many of us are uninterested in these issues, but those components are often left out of the manner in which we structure research and development. It is not that we wish to ignore them, but the other issue becomes so important that we forget about them. That is to our detriment, and I say it very sincerely. Our task as a society must be to ensure that the unavoidable impact upon our environment does not render it unproductive. We must not impair its ability to provide for our survival and the survival of future generations. As we all know, we need the environment for the food we grow, the forests we use, the water we drink, the air we breathe and so forth.

As a society we are now releasing enormous amounts of chemicals into the environment, both deliberately and inadvertently. This is not a new problem; this is not a new issue. However, it is one about which we are all concerned. Therefore, on behalf of the Minister of the Environment I should like to indicate that the Government is committed to action. We are working with the United States, with specific states such as New York, toward a permanent solution, for example, to the leaking of dump sites along the Niagara River. We are co-operating with a range of jurisdictions to reduce the loading of dioxins entering the environment from all sources. With our federal and provincial colleagues we are looking at better ways to manage pesticides.

Our point of view must be made strongly and must be made in various fora. However, it is important for us to keep in mind that technology is giving us the capacity to determine in the case of dioxins their presence. As recently as a year ago, we were unable to do that. I know the Minister of the Environment has tried to put into perspective, for example, the level of dioxins by putting it in terms of time, namely, one second as compared with 32 centuries. To put it another way and to give Hon. Members some clarification, a year ago in my Department we were measuring it in parts per billion. A year or two before we were measuring it in parts per million. This year we have the ability to measure it in parts per quadrillion. Consequently, because of the new sophistication in testing, we have been able to discover it.

I am simply saying that these points have to be put forward. Very often when society hears these things it becomes naturally and rightfully concerned. In order to solve the problem and to inform the public, these issues should be put in this context so that solutions can be found.

I know of the concerns expressed by some people. The Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) knows about the public meeting which took place this weekend in the City of Windsor in respect of environmental issues. It was a further demonstration of the concerns of people regarding the issue which we are debating today.

As a Government and with the co-operation of industry, we have initiated a review of safety precautions and procedures at industrial sites across the country to avoid, for example, the terrible tragedy which we saw at Bhopal as well as other chemical accidents. I am pleased, on behalf of the Minister of the Environment, to notify the House that the Minister will be prepared to release that plan to Canadians when he returns to the House within a short period of time.

Also we have initiated an action plan with provincial Governments to eliminate PCBs from the Canadian environment. We are assisting in the clean-up of chemicals leaking from dumps, from land-filled sites and from storage facilities. The actions of the Government will reduce emissions from cars and light-duty trucks by 45 per cent over the next decade. These emissions not only affect the health of Canadians but, as we all know, contribute to acid rain. Nobody has been more active, Mr. Speaker, than the Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Darling) who is in the House today. Mr. Speaker, I see certain people, for instance, wearing buttons on their lapels saying stop acid rain. Well, I know one thing, the Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka doesn't carry around buttons, what he does is take action. He keeps on buttonholing Members of the Government, the Minister of the Environment and the Minister of Health. That is his job and he is doing it well. I think all of us we have to commend him for the work he has done.

Within six months this Government put in place a comprehensive federal-provincial program to reduce sulpher dioxide emissions by 50 per cent by 1994. We are acting to eliminate lead in gasoline, a very real danger to children. These are urgent problems that this Government is acting to solve. The Government is committed to solving permanently those problems that have plagued Canadians for so many years. Toxic chemicals are one of those problems which we are preparing permanent solutions to as, I have just outlined.

We are all aware of how costly environmental problems are, both in terms of public safety and in terms of financial commitment. The very fabric of our industrial economy is being affected by the enormous cost of dealing with our past approach to chemicals. For example, it cost Dow Chemicals close to $1.5 million to clean up the St. Clair River blobs, and we estimate that federal and provincial Governments spent approximately another $1 million more. These moneys, I think all of us would recognize, could have been more productively used in our economy, than for cleaning up after a problem has occurred.

The Government believes it is no longer adequate in Canada to deal with toxic chemicals after problems are detected. I know that is a human approach that will have to remain in place, but it is not enough. Our approach is two-pronged, first to clean up the problems that exist, as I've already demonstrated. Second, to prevent new ones from occurring. To be successful we must prevent chemicals from entering the environment in the first place. We must use foresight and common sense and structure all of our activities to prevent chemicals leaking into the environment. Based on a firm foundation of scientific knowledge and research we must anticipate and prevent problems rather than just continue to react.

What Canadians need and deserve, and I think what they are asking this Government for, is a comprehensive management approach for toxic chemicals, an approach that manages chemicals through their life cycle in a manner that prevents chemical leakage into the environment. This will mean that at any point in the life of a chemical, from start to finish—whether it is introduction into trade and commerce or manufacturing or transportation—during its use or disposal, all participants who use and care for that chemical must act in a responsible manner to protect the environment and the health of Canadians. We must find ways to manufacture chemicals in this country which are not subject to failure, such as I have already mentioned. We need more efficient manufacturing processes that produce less waste or, better yet, use the waste of one industry as a resource for the other.

We must recognize that things could go astray, and we must act quickly when they do. I think our workers, our communities and our environment deserve to be protected with every ability that we have to offer. When workers and consumers like ourselves use chemicals we must be equipped with the best information to use them properly, dispose of them safely, to act in emergency situations, and to choose alternative products and practices.

Chemicals, as all of us know, must be transported and stored in a manner that eliminates leakage to the environment. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), for example, has been very active in the field of transportation of dangerous products, dangerous goods. It is his initiatives, his type of legislation and approach to put forward a plan that will reduce not only the risk, but will ensure as well that if accidents occur, as they have for example in rail accidents just recently, there has been a very quick response time and a very adequate response time. I think we all want to commend the Minister of Transport for taking that leadership. If accidents do happen clean-up must be fast and effective and victims must be compensated in a just and equitable fashion. Ministers are working at these problems and in fact finding solutions and putting forward proposals.

We must not forget disposal, both of the chemical itself after its useful life, and of waste. Waste cannot continue to be added to the environment in the naive hope that the environment can safely accommodate it and cleanse itself. There must be adequate destruction facilities operating in this country to dispose of hazardous waste.

The sheer number of chemicals we use is intimidating. Over 65,000 are now produced commercially on the global market with over 1,000 new ones being added every year. Only a small fraction have been tested for their environmental and health consequences. We must clearly define the ground rules for allowing a chemical to enter the Canadian market. Since we are part of the global chemical market we are promoting the adoption and utilization of common international approaches to evaluating chemicals and setting those needed standards.

We must also promote alternatives to the use of high risk chemicals. Canada alone cannot test all the chemicals we use in a reasonable time frame. I can say that is also the case, for instance, in my own Department, especially in the Health Protection Branch. We have highly motivated people, but I think one has to also be reasonable in terms of the testing approach and the resources that are available. It has to be an international effort. It is one we are committed to put in place, and we are working through the OACD to do just that.

There is a crisis of public confidence in this country when it comes to chemical management. Our ability to solve the problems have not kept pace with our ability to detect the problems. The public is deeply concerned about the fragmented approach to dealing with chemicals, and our laws do not meet these public expectations. Most of our laws are the products of dealing with the problems of the past decades. They are inadequate to deal with the problems of today. Therefore, they must be revamped, they must be streamlined, consolidated, and they must address the real problems of environmental protection. I think that for all of us the challenge is clear.

The Minister of the Environment has already stated his intention of implementing a comprehensive solution to the problem. This package will include an environmental policy statement outlining the rights of each Canadian to a clean and healthy environment. It will streamline and strengthen existing federal environmental legislation, which will be more responsive to current environmental problems and provide for appropriate safeguards for all Canadians. It will address the need for more research into the effects of toxic chemicals. It will include a stronger legislative framework for regulating toxic chemicals to clean up problems that already exist and preventing new ones. It will include information to the public on living with chemicals, and it will define a cradle to grave management package for chemicals in Canada.

The key feature of the plan will be a new Environmental Contaminants Act, and consultations are already underway to ensure that use of all sectors of our society are involved in defining the problems of environmental contamination from chemicals, and are equally involved in proposing and implementing appropriate solutions.

The new Environmental Contaminants Act will provide this Government with stronger powers and shift the onus to industry to prove that their products are not harmful to humans or to the environment. It will require that all chemicals are subject to a review process prior to their entry to the Canadian market to ensure that no danger to health or the environment exists.

As a Government, Mr. Speaker, we are fully committed to addressing a wide range of interests and concerns about chemicals that exist in the country. Other Governments, industry, labour, consumer and environmental interest groups are already working with us on this key initiative. Ultimately our society will have to come to grips with the fact that so many of our environmental problems are rooted in the lifestyle we have chosen. We have chosen a chemical society, and with it the responsibility to protect our life support system from our dependence on these chemicals. We believe that Canadians are ready to take a major step towards learning to live successfully and respectively with the chemicals that we are now familiar with. It is a step this Government is committed to take and which we will give very determined leadership.

I thank the Member for the opportunity provided today, by the motion put forward, for myself personally and on behalf of the Minister of the Environment, of putting forward my views and the views of the Minister. Additional material on specifics will be added later on in the debate by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Gurbin).

Mr. Speaker: Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia).

Mr. Caccia: If I may be permitted two brief questions of the Minister. How does he envisage the clean-up to be carried out in the St. Clair River, which is an international water body? Second, since the Minister in his speech did not make any reference to the Guelph Toxicology Centre that was scrapped in November, 1985, by his Government, could he tell the House what his plans are to ensure the Centre be established?

● (1230)

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, regarding the St. Clair River first, as the Hon. Member will appreciate, more specific answers will come from the Minister of the Environment. It is clear for all of us that the co-operation shown by provincial and federal Governments has not only been exemplary but has also brought about confidence that these problems are being taken seriously and things are being cleaned up.

There are provincial guidelines, as the Member knows, respecting the St. Clair River. As the Minister for the Environment has often restated in the House, there was a very quick response time from federal members of the Department of the Environment. In my own Department of Health and Welfare as well officials, specifically of the Health Protection Branch, were in close consultation on the question. If there are any more specific answers needed, I think the Minister of the Environment will reply.

With respect to the toxicology centres, the Guelph Toxicology Centre, the one at Laval University and the one at the University of Saskatchewan and Saskatoon, I am sure that all of us would like to see some advance take place on further toxicology research and facilities to enhance research. We recognize very clearly that the kind of deficits facing Canadians, left by the Government of which the former Minister of the Environment was a part, is proof positive again that it is that kind of financing which puts into jeopardy some of the very good programs society and the Government wants. It is for that reason we are so concerned about getting the economy turned around.

I regard the Hon. Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard) not only as an excellent Member in the House but an expert on the environment. He is concerned about toxicology at the University of Guelph. Let me say to the Hon. Member for Davenport that the Member from Guelph is working actively on that. I am a great optimist that these questions will be resolved in due time to the satisfaction of us all.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I am always a little mystified by statements such as, the people have chosen a chemical society. It is really absurd. Surely the people choose to use salt, that is a chemical. They choose to use sucrose to put in their coffee, also a chemical. They choose to use a number of things, including that desk over there made of cellulose, a chemical. In none of those instances were serious environmental problems likely to be created. Are these matters to be determined by experts people trust, or by industrialists who begin the syntheses of these products? What about the Governments that have control over them. They provided no context within which people could choose or not choose whether their environment would be loaded with chemicals invented by the hundredfold. Knowledge of the potential risks were far beyond them.

I would point out in that context, as the Minister sits there smiling, that he is apparently no more aware than the general populace of the seriousness of the problem, by virtue of having referred to dioxin and one or two other chemicals when in fact what we are concerned with in Lake St. Clair are 58 chemicals.

We talk about toxicology studies, individual chemicals and about controlling them, from the cradle to the grave. But we have to take note of a number of facts. First, we are not concerned about individual chemicals, no matter how low the concentration. I appreciate, as do other Members on this side, that the increased fastidiousness of scientific detection methods are bound to show the presence, perhaps ultimately, of molecules among the millions. It is true as well that one has to make decisions about what are the risks. How are we to make decisions about those risks when we cannot define the tests of those risks? For example, the test for the risk of a particular chemical is never just whether the chemical is there or what concentrations are present on a particular day, but something more. The question of bio-accumulation is an issue which includes accumulation in our bodies. Even more important, and not addressed, are the effects of combinations of chemicals which in terms of both cumulative and instant effects are totally unknown. It is doubtful whether there is any answer to the question of whether there are acceptable levels of those chemicals individually or in combination, which raises a question pertinent to the Minister's particular area of jurisdiction of health and welfare, that is, what are and what have already been the effects of chemicals in the waters of the Great Lakes and in the drinking waters of the Great Lakes? Various scientists have expressed suspicion about the effects that have already occurred.

Does the Minister have any plans, as a part of the over-all Governments scheme to engage in epidemiological studies which will determine how we have already been affected by chemicals in the drinking water? Only a few years ago we were told they were at safe levels. But, in fact, we do not have any definition of content objectives for a quarter of these chemicals.

With respect to the epidemiological question, is the Department going to take initiatives in accordance with the over-all strategy of the Government to address the environmental concerns?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy), he says he is mystified. I will try to take him out of the realm of mystery and into the area of knowledge.

The Member says, for example, that he cannot accept the fact that we have chosen a chemical society. Let us be very practical. I am sure being the kind of person he with the sartorial splendour in which I see him here from day-to-day, that he does not have synthetic fibres in any of his clothes.

Mr. McCurdy: That is not the question.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I am sure the fibres he wears are all natural. What I am saying to him, Mr. Speaker, is very clearly, yes, in a practical sense this is reality for all of us. The Hon. Member cannot ignore that fact. That is the case. That is truth. He knows it and I know it.

What about the car he gets into tonight? It contains a lot of products from a chemical society. He knows that. He expects to use them and he expects to be transported in that way. He cannot simply say that there is an either/or, black or white situation because that is not the case. The Hon. Member lives with this situation every day. He should not try to project that somehow we can reverse society, or say that it would be a better society if we so chose. I would suggest that it is not. It was for that reason I was smiling, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member wants very often to make the point that there is a society into which we can revert which will be totally free of chemicals, totally free of any risk—

Mr. McCurdy: I do not remember saying anything like that.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): —and it was for that reason I was smiling.

Let me give the Member one very practical and quick example of what the Government is doing in terms of actions. Last week we announced guidelines on certain dioxins. Previously there were no guidelines. That is the kind of direct approach we took last week. The former Minister of the Environment tells the Government to do more, but those guidelines were not established earlier. We are setting guidelines. Our Government is taking a comprehensive approach from an environmental and a health point of view and, as I also stated, from a transport point of view. It is a total Government commitment which we will continue.

• (1240)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The time for questions and comments has expired. Resuming debate with the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie).

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin by saying a word or two about the environmental problem which is most recent in our minds. That, of course, is the St. Clair River problem on which we received a report just last week. I would like to address the question of guidelines, the subject which was just being debated, before I say the other things I have to say.

It is instructive to remember that of the 58 toxic chemicals found in the St. Clair River there are guidelines for only 23. With respect to what are acceptable toxic levels in fish, we have guidelines for only three of these chemicals. We are still in the dark about a great many things, both with respect to guidelines and with respect to the whole question of guidelines period. Many things which passed for guidelines years ago are now known to be quite unacceptable in terms of guidelines.

It is for this reason that it makes great sense for Members on this side of the House, and for people from other places, to call for the reinstatement of the Guelph Toxicology Centre and the cancellation of those cuts which were made in research by the former Minister of the Environment. If the Government is serious about addressing the myriad environmental problems which we face as a country, then it should want to have at its disposal the very best and latest in research. It can only do that by going back on some of the bad decisions which were made early in the life of this Government, and which I am sure many Members opposite now realize were bad decisions. I ask Members opposite to find the political wherewithal to correct those mistakes.

I am sorry that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) had to leave the House. I wanted to say to him that to proceed to do some of the things which he outlined on behalf of the Government would certainly be in keeping not just with any narrow concern about the environment but with the concern expressed in the preamble to the Canada Health Act on which he and I worked in a previous Parliament. As a result of an amendment moved by myself it was written into the legislative understanding of Canadian health that we realize it is not just a question of having a medicare system, but a question of dealing with the "social, environmental and occupational causes of disease". At that time I was pleased to have those words written into the Canada Health Act. It is about time that Governments got moving with respect to living up to that preamble in order to see that the type of legislation which needs to be in place is, in fact, put in place.

I would also like to say a word about whether or not we chose to have a chemical society. We could argue at great lengths about the question. The fact of the matter is that a great many decisions which were made about what type of products we would be offered in the market-place were made not by consumers but by people who decided to radically restructure the way things were manufactured in the post-war era. These people decided, in many cases for reasons of increased profitability and productivity, as it was understood then, to use synthetic substances as opposed to more traditional and renewable substances such as cotton, wood or rubber. These were decisions that were not made in the market-place. I grant the Government, which believes that all things are decided in the market-place, the theory that people could have chosen not to buy those products. However, it was often the case that they either bought something which was made of these synthetic substances or they did not buy anything at all because the former product was no longer manufactured.

As the Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) was trying to say, in many cases we are not just talking about choosing blindly, we are talking about informed choice. The fact of the matter is that it is only now that we are coming to be informed about many of the substances which were chosen, not by consumers but by the people making those products. That is not to say that there have not been people warning us all along since that time. I can remember even 10 years ago hearing concerns expressed about some of the things that are taken for granted today and at that time the people who expressed such concerns were regarded as some kind of doom and gloomers. They were considered to be party-poopers and against progress and the 20th century. We now hear things coming out of the mouths of otherwise very conservative people which sound much like the things they were probably derisive of some 10 or 15 years ago.

In this respect I wish to address what I think is the main problem for the Government as it concerns the environment. I do not intend to address in great detail the actual text of the motion, which is to condemn the Government for its handling of the problem of toxic chemicals. I do not think the previous Government did a bang-up job either. I think the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), whose good intentions with respect to the environment I do not question, is often too preoccupied with trying to defend the record of the previous Government, instead of putting it behind him and trying to do the best in the present context.

It seems to me that a Conservative Government has at least two problems when it comes to the environment. One of course is with respect to transboundary environmental problems. We know that the two most contentious issues in this respect are acid rain and pollution of the Great Lakes, particularly as a result of pollution from the American side getting into the Niagara River. It seems to me that the problem from a foreign policy point of view, as far as transboundary pollution is concerned, is that members of the Conservative Party are convinced that they can get what we as Canadians want collectively from America, in terms of action on how it is polluting our environment, by the soft-sell approach, by being nice to the Americans and by adopting the approach of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). I do not say that we should be nastry to them; but there is a difference between the buddy-buddy approach and the firm, friendly approach which I think needs to be taken with our American neighbours.

In this respect, for instance, we saw very different responses to the report of the presidential and prime-ministerial envoys on acid rain. Members on the Conservative side felt constrained to say something nice about a report which was obviously a bust. Mr. Lewis obviously obtained the upper hand over Mr. Davis in recommending something which fit quite nicely into the needs of American politics and into the scenario desired by those on the American side who really do not want to have to do anything about acid rain in the foreseeable future. Under the report of the envoys, the Americans have at least five years, or even beyond that, to continue to do very little or nothing. The Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) once said in committee that the acid rain issue would be the litmus test of whether or not the new approach to Canada-America relations was any good. So far I think the litmus test has proved to be just that type of test, only we have failed the test.

I do not want to spend too much time on the acid rain issue since we have the other problem of the toxic chemical pollution of the Great Lakes to consider. With regard to the Great Lakes, I say to the Government, we have to do everything we can when we find pollution on our side, to deal with it as effectively, as firmly and as immediately as we would want the Americans to deal with those pollutants which are affecting our environment. If we do not do this, then we will not be in a good position when we go to them and ask them for the very kind of action that we ourselves are reluctant to take. I believe the Government has undermined its own position on a number of occasions, particularly regarding Great Lakes pollution, although not so much with acid rain, an issue on which the Government has gone ahead. The Government undermined its position, particularly under the former Minister of the Environment and will increasingly do so under this Minister if we continue to receive nothing but rhetoric. The Minister, however, has a little time yet before he can be judged on whether he only speaks well, or, if he actually acts.

I was interested to hear the Minister of National Health and Welfare say that the Government hoped to be able to deal with these things once it gets the economy going. The fact is that the way the Conservatives propose to get the economy going is through imposing a deregulatory atmosphere on the Canadian economy and by accepting a notion of international competitiveness which I contend takes us in the opposite direction of where we should be going, if we are, indeed, serious about environmental protection and quality.

One major element of any environmental protection program is going to have to be regulatory in nature. We are going to need more inspectors to ensure that the new standards set by any legislation which might be brought forward are enforced. We are going to need more research so we can adopt better and more informed guidelines. We are going to have to do a lot of things which are going to cost money and which are going to be perceived as a pain in the neck by the business community.

But the Government is committed to quite the contrary. The Government is committed, to use one of its favourite phrases "to getting the Government off the backs of free enterprise and letting it flourish". Let me say that it is free enterprise, in many respects, which got us into this problem in the first place, although to be fair I would have to say that when it comes to the environment there has been a blind spot on the left and on the right.

It is the very kind of progress or economic environment which created these environmental problems in the first place that the Government, at least in its rhetoric, wants to return to with a vengence. That is a fundamental contradiction in the mindset of the Conservative Government. I say to Hon. Members of the Government that they will not be able to have it both ways, particularly in an international context.

We often hear from the Government that it wants Canada to be more internationally competitive. This relates to the free trade argument and other arguments put forward by them about the nature of the global economy. But part of what is now happening in the global economy is that big investment decisions are being made according to what country has the least environmental regulations. They are made according to where those companies feel they can have the freest hand in dumping their wastes into rivers and lakes or expelling them into the air. For this reason the Government should be committed—and it clearly is not—to working for a new international economic order where countries do not have to adopt this "beggar thy neighbour" policy, trying to get investment money by saying they will turn a blind eye to what these companies may do to their environment. If the Government is not willing to work for that kind of economic order and is not willing to do what is necessary in Canada in order not to capitulate to those kinds of international pressures, then all the rhetoric and legislation in the world will go for nought. As long as we have an economic policy which is committed to accommodating ourselves to the international economic order rather than resisting some of those trends and trying to change the way the global economy is developing, Canada will be in a very difficult position.

So I say to Hon. Members of the Government that they have a conceptual problem because they are committed to a notion of how the global economy works which will make it very difficult to do what they want.

Mr. Gurbin: You are 50 years behind. The economy and environment are the same.

Mr. Blaikie: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Gurbin) says the economy and the environment are the same. I agree. That is precisely the point I am making. But up until now, within the context of an economy in which investment decisions and other financial decisions are made in terms of short-term profit margins, the environment is something which has not been taken into account. And it will not be taken into account until those people in the private sector, who make those kinds of decisions, are made accountable for the social and environmental costs which accrue to the public treasury as the result of their private decisions. I certainly do not see the Government moving in that direction.

The fact is that everywhere in the world people are being allowed to make the kinds of decisions which endanger the sustainability of the planet, certain resources and the environment, and it is the public that is finally asked to pick up the tab. I see no change coming from the Government with respect to that particular fact about our economy. So the Parliamentary Secretary can say that the economy and the environment are the same and I agree, but that is not the way our books are kept.

Many of the things which have been used up over the years have not been figured into how we account for the economy, like clean air, fertile soil and clean water. These are free goods which the private sector, and for that matter the public sector where it has been active, have just used up as if they didn't cost anything. These companies continue to do that, and if they are asked in Canada to figure that into their books they go to the Amazon Valley where they do not have to figure it in because the Government there will let them get away with not figuring it in.

That is the problem I am trying to point out to the Government. Until there is an international economic context in which multinational corporations, for instance, are not allowed to force countries to compete with each other in this mutually degrading way, we will not even have gotten to the major part of the problem and the need for that is completely contrary to the views of the international economy which are always espoused by this Government.

The Government sees the global economy as a wonderful competitive place where Canada gets in there with everyone else and tries to do its best to get investment. But the way the global economy works now is that we have to give up our values to really do so, our labour, environmental and social values. We give up whatever the international investment community thinks we ought to give up in order to qualify for investment, and the more other countries compete for that money on the basis that their governments could care less about such values, the more we in Canada will be put in an increasingly difficult position.

I say to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment that this is as true of the environment and environmental regulations as it is of any other basis on which we might compete with other countries. What I would like to see of the Government is not the "living on its knees" kind of policy where it takes the global economy as a given and tries to accommodate itself to it. I would like to see some resistence. I would like to see the Government fight for a better international economic order in which we do not have to do these kinds of degrading things in order to have the kind of country we want.

There are so many more things which could be said about what the Government should do. Had I had the time I would like to have talked about increased Government funding for the upgrading of municipal water treatment facilities. Many of our municipalities are now in a very difficult situation and are not able to afford to do the kinds of things which need to be done. I would like to talk about an environmental Bill of Rights, for instance, but I see my time is up.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

CALCULATION OF EARLY RETIREMENT PENSIONS AS INCOME

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, on January 1 the Mulroney Government robbed thousands of Canadians of their hard-earned unemployment insurance benefits by counting early retirement pensions as income. This was done despite a legion of protests, pleas, and petitions. Approximately one year ago the Government announced this measure, and because of this advance notice it believes that Canadians should be able to adjust to it and accept it. This is not the case. There was little publicity and little formal consultation.

Every day new individuals and groups are finding out that this measure affects them and cruelly reduces their forced early retirement income. Worse still, the Government is forcing certain employees, such as members of the Canadian Armed Forces who must retire early, to pay unemployment insurance premiums but will not let them collect the benefits.

The Government has appointed the Forget Commission to examine the entire unemployment insurance system. Why does it not show some commonsense by suspending this harsh measure and referring it to the Forget Commission where it can be studied in the context of other possible changes?

CANADIAN'S DEATH IN JAMAICA—ALLEGED LACK OF ASSISTANCE FROM CANADA'S HIGH COMMISSION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring to the attention of this House a matter of immense tragedy. A young constituent of mine was killed in an accident in Jamaica last Thursday morning. To the family, friends, and to me, the loss is enormous and personal. To our country and to the family, however, the grief has been transformed into agony by the thorough incompetence and uncaring attitude of Canada's High Commission in Jamaica.

During the past four days no one from our Commission travelled to the scene of the accident or to the hospital where this young Canadian lay. The father and a friend of the deceased received no assistance from the High Commission on arrival in Montego Bay and were forced to search out their lost kin in the basement of a hospital in Savanna la Mar. Throughout the day yesterday no duty officer could be raised to assist, despite repeated efforts by the family, myself, and External Affairs here in Ottawa.

I wish to thank those staff at External Affairs here in Ottawa who kindly assisted me and the family over the past few days, including the Under-Secretary of State, Mr. Taylor, who came sincerely to the task at 2 a.m. this morning.

I am confident that all Members of this House share in the grief of the family, and also share in the wisdom of recalling every member of Canada's High Commission to Jamaica to Ottawa for retraining in the basic elements of human decency. As the father, Warner Funk, Sr., said to me moments ago from Jamaica: "No parent should ever have to undergo such horror again".

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

GENERAL MOTORS PLANT IN SCARBOROUGH—VAN SALES TO UNITED STATES

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, last week the one millionth van rolled off the assembly line in the Scarborough plant of General Motors. That plant manufactures vans for sale throughout the entire continent of North America and, as a result, provides employment for 2,400 production workers plus 250 administrative staff. Its magnificent record of production and sales shows what can happen when Canadian labour and management work together, but it also shows what can happen when Canada and the United States work together.

I ask the House, how many of those 2,650 people would have employment if that plant could sell vans only to Canadians? How many more Canadians who benefit from General Motors spin-offs would have work but for the Auto Pact? The success of that agreement points the way of the future. It is the way of gaining guaranteed access to a market large enough to provide Canadians with opportunities that our 25 million people cannot provide on our own.

The Government has shown vision and courage by inviting the United States to join Canada in trade discussions which may expand this kind of opportunity in other industries, and this kind of opportunity for all Canadians. Almost 20 years ago one of the key players making that Auto Pact possible was the then Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Lester Pearson. One could wish his Party had the vision today that he had then.

AGRICULTURE

GOVERNMENT'S NEW DAIRY POLICY

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil-Papineau): Mr. Speaker, two weeks ago the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) announced our party's new long-term dairy policy, to be renewed for five years, including the subsidy program.

Dairy farmers in my riding are very happy with this decision which demonstrates the Government's formal commitment to this vital sector of our economy. The policy will also help to boost the recovery of the agricultural sector among the expropriated farmers of Mirabel. Canadian dairy producers still remember the unilateral cuts in quotas made by our predecessors, which caused many new dairy operations to go out of business.

Today I would like to remind the House that the dairy policy was the result of consultation between farmers and various parties in the industry, and that without this consensus and commitment to regulate production, no dairy policy would have been possible.

Considering their commitment and their sensitivity to the public's well-being farmers deserve our admiration, especially after surviving fifteen years of Liberal Government, which is quite a feat, Mr. Speaker, for an industry as regulated as the Canadian dairy industry.

DEMAND FOR RESIGNATION OF DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the time-honoured tradition of Parliament requires that every Member feel free to speak out in caucus without having to fear that his or her words are being intercepted by another political Party. The violation of this tradition by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) casts into question his ability to function in his current dual roles as Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence. Imagine what our allies must be saying about the possibility of interception that could exist on matters of national and international security.

What must the country think of a man who systematically eavesdropped accidentally every Wednesday for five months? What must the country think of a Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who fired one Minister of Defence for going into a bar, yet is prepared to take no action when another flaunts the tenet of public morality?

If the Prime Minister is truly serious about his own position as leader of the country, he has no choice but to demand the resignation of the Deputy Prime Minister. Anything less makes him party to the insidious, Watergate tactics best characterized by the Conservative Member for—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member knows the rules about comments. The Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

HAITI—CALL FOR CUT IN CANADIAN AID

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, Canadians have been appalled to hear of the carnage over the weekend in Haiti. There are reports of between 50 and 100 people being killed and many more injured in the anti-government demonstrations. Many Canadians would be even more appalled if they thought that their tax dollars were helping the repulsive regime of Jean-Claude Duvalier to maintain its grip on power.

Between Baby Doc and his father, the Duvalier family has tyrannized Haiti for 30 years. In the last 10 years Canadian aid has amounted to some $87 million, $8 million of that in the fiscal year 1984-85. With what result? The plight of the Haitian people is worse than ever. The flow of refugees to our country and others continues.

Baby Doc Duvalier is a cancerous growth on the Caribbean region and clearly has no intention of improving the desperate lot of his people. Until we see some willingness to respect human rights and democracy in Haiti, Canada should cut off its foreign aid for all but the most dire emergencies. My call is echoed by Canada's Haitian community as well. Let us stop aiding tyranny in Haiti now.

PROGRAMS AND CEREMONIES

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I realize this Chamber does not exactly dwell on good news and positive events but, if you will bear with me, I would like to spend a few moments bringing Members up to date on Expo 86 in my home province this year.

The television advertisements, the pamphlets and posters and brochures cannot begin to capture the excitement of what is about to happen in Vancouver this May through October.

Even the naysayers are surprised at the success of Expo 86 to date. The site itself is sold out. An unprecedented 8 million visits to the Fair have been sold three months before the door is even open.

On Vancouver Island our Expo 86 will begin on May 1, when Prince Charles and Diana, the Princess of Wales, will visit Victoria and Nanaimo. Together, Expo 86 and the concurrent Islands 86 celebration will host the largest international event on this Continent between now and the end of this century.

This weekend Members of Parliament from across Canada will get a preview look at Expo 86 and experience a Canada we have never experienced before.

From Canada Place on the harbour to the Expo site itself, "from Bonavista to Vancouver Island," as the song says, we are about to discover what is good about this nation, what is exciting about this nation, and what we have to offer the world. Expo 86, — what the world is coming to. The people of British Columbia have much to be proud of.

IMPORTANCE OF RECOVERY

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, by the end of today's Question Period, that is, in about 50 minutes, the Canadian Government will have increased its deficit by $16,346,000. In a single hour, the Government will have spent 0.5 per cent of its total annual revenue from taxpayers across Canada.

Mr. Speaker, will this Question Period be put to good use by Opposition Members? Are they going to consider these financial constraints we are subject to or are they going to waste the time of the House on trivialities?

Mr. Speaker, today's editorial in the Globe and Mail appears under the title "A budget for less debt". That, Mr. Speaker, is what it is all about. Hon. Members are here in the House to legislate and administer, and their main instrument is the Budget. Let us focus all our energies and our sense of purpose on this area, and Canada's economic renewal, which has been well under way since September 1984, will continue to progress for the benefit of us all.

That should be the objective of all the elected Members of this House.

TOXIC CHEMICALS IN ST. CLAIR RIVER

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, if the Government of Canada thinks that it can clean up the past and present activities on the St. Clair River through a yet to be introduced Environmental Contaminants Act, it is dreaming in colour. Existing toxic chemicals in the river-bed, sewer outfalls, leaching from dump sites, existing and ongoing sources of pollution cannot be dealt with through legislation not in the books. The St. Clair is an international river. The Government of Canada has a responsibility under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement to clean up the situation.

The Government has several instruments at its disposal. It could reinstate the two-year accelerated write offs under the Income Tax Act, an important incentive to industry to install modern treatment equipment, separate sewers, modernize monitoring systems, and ensure that the highest standards of waste treatment are applied. It could offer a special program for municipalities such as Sarnia to provide financial assistance for the installation of equipment and facilities for the best possible treatment of residential, commercial, and industrial waste waters which pass through municipal sewer systems. It could even create a super fund with interested provincial Governments, to remove toxic wastes from dumps and therefore remove the source of future problems at leaking dumps.

To restore the confidence of people living alongside the St. Clair River, the federal Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) has to act and move swiftly with the momentum created by the St. Clair River—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. member that his time has expired.

THE ECONOMY

IMPACT OF DEFICIT—CALL FOR ACTION

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, the deficit is the biggest single problem facing Canadians today. The deficit has become a cancer; it has entered our system and is spreading its disease throughout the country. There is virtually no day that goes by which does not remind us of how oppressive the deficit has become. It affects interest rates, thus hitting every home owner, every consumer, and every business person. It affects the funds available for social concerns and thus ultimately threatens every social program in Canada. It affects government plans and options, as was demonstrated when the drought hit many farmers this spring and summer. We were faced with a desperate situation and were forced to cope with a crisis, with scarce, borrowed resources.

I believe that three things must be done to allow us to rid ourselves of this dealdy, ever-growing weight upon us. The first is that the spending and raising of Canadian tax dollars have to be seen as related, working together. This means that we need a regularized structure in Parliament, tying the Estimates to the Budget and vice versa. Second, the Government of Canada needs to take many of the tough decisions required to reduce the deficit. Finally, the Canadian people must get involved by offering their help and energies to beat this problem. The deficit is too large a problem to be left in the hands of a few. It is a problem for all Canadians to tackle.

SPORTS

NATIONAL SOCCER TEAM—REFUSAL OF UNITED STATES CLUBS TO RELEASE PLAYERS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, all of Canada is proud of our National Soccer Team which is going to Mexico later this year to participate for the first time ever in a World Cup Tournament. Its success so far is a tribute to a concerted effort by so many individuals associated with the Canadian Soccer Association, and it has been made even greater by the fact that they have had to overcome as many obstacles off the field as on it.

The latest problem centres around the refusal of the Major Indoor Soccer League in the United States to release our Canadian stars to play with their national team in warm-up matches. In soccer all over the world it is a matter of pride for a club to have its players selected for a national team, and they willingly allow their players leave to participate in international soccer. But not in North America. Here the dollar rules, and club owners are afraid of losing attendance if their stars are released from time to time. It is a sign of immaturity which must be overcome if soccer is ever to be successful in North America.

I also have to wonder if the same reluctance would be shown if the players were to be released to play for a U.S. national team. It is time for the Sports Minister to offer his assistance in resolving this matter to allow our team, all of it, the time for practice and development which it so richly deserves.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. He will know that this morning the Canadian dollar reached an all-time low of 69 cents. I remember when this dollar used to be worth a hundred cents. It is now about two-thirds of that value under this Government. I want to ask the Minister of Finance what he is going to do to restore confidence in this country and world confidence in his Government. Obviously that lack of confidence is bearing down on our dollar.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have responded to this question on a number of occasions in recent weeks. Let me just repeat myself.

We have introduced, since September, 1984, a series of policies which are designed to address the fundamental problems of the economy, the fundamental problems of the deficit of the country, which is leading to some of the pressures that are on the dollar today. These have been widely recognized as being the right way to go.

The OECD, the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development, has said very clearly that it has no policy advice to give us. It is pleased with the directions that we are going, it is pleased with the economic performance of the country over this past 18 months, and has said that there is no need for a section in its report on policy advice because the things that we have set out are the things that it would be recommending to us.

[Translation]

INTEREST RATES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, not according to the Canadian and world markets, which indicate that the credibility of the Minister of Finance fell to its lowest level ever this morning.

I shall repeat my question: Is the Minister of Finance going to tolerate an interest rate hike in an attempt to protect the Canadian dollar?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if I might quote here:

—the hon. gentleman is as knowledgeable as anyone in the House on these matters, and he must know how precarious it would be for me to predict either movements of exchange rates or interest rates and thus allow the market to take a position for or against that statement.

That was said by the Minister on July 14, 1975. As reported at page 7525 of Hansard. I believe the Hon. Member knows who it is; it is he.

SPREAD BETWEEN CANADIAN AND UNITED STATES INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I think we might reserve for tomorrow some statements of the Minister when he was on this side of the House on what he thought the solutions ought to be. Two can play this game. I can tell the Minister of Finance our interest rates were within range of those in the United States. This morning our Treasury Bill rates are 400 basis points higher than American rates. In other words, we have a crisis in terms of the spread between the Canadian interest rate structure and the American interest rate structure. What is he going to do about this?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, when the Hon. Member was the Finance Minister—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The dollar was $1.02, $1.03.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Okay. At the same time interest rates doubled during his term of office. One of the causes for the weakness in the dollar, as has been reported, is concern about the size of the deficit an control over government spending. The last year that he was the Finance Minister of this country government spending increased by 29 per cent. This year there will be an increase in government spending of something like 4 per cent. That is what we are doing to stabilize the level of the dollar.

FINANCE

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN INTEREST RATE ON CANADA SAVINGS BONDS AND INTEREST RATE ON TREASURY BILLS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, on September 4, 1984, when the Conservatives came to power, the preferred rate was the same in Canada and the United States. Today, there is a difference of 200 base points.

My question to the Minister of Finance is as follows: The savings bonds issued by the Canadian Government last November pay 8.5 per cent interest to holders. Since February 1, the bonds are redeemable without penalty, so that Canadians can cash them. Now, the interest rate on one-year Treasury bills is almost 11 per cent. My question for the Minister of Finance is quite simple. Does he intend to increase the interest on savings bonds, so that Canadians can get the same rate of interest on their savings that banks and trust companies get on one-year Treasury bills?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member knows, he being a former Minister of Finance in the Quebec Government, that there is a lot of instability in the international market-place. Currencies are bouncing around in unprecedented ways, partly because of things that flowed out of the G-Five meeting last September, and some are related to the weakness in the international price of oil. These are things affecting the level of the Canadian dollar and the level of Canadian interest rates.

Our policy is to try to generate some stability into the market-place so that we can see those interest rates decline and get back to a more normal relationship relative to the United States, as happened this time last year.

REQUEST FOR INCREASE IN CANADA SAVINGS BOND INTEREST RATE

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I would have liked the Minister of Finance to answer my question. Since he did not, I will repeat my question. Does the Minister of Finance intend to increase the interest on savings bonds, so that Canadians can get the same rate of interest on their savings bonds that the Government is paying every month when it borrows by issuing Treasury bills, considering the gap between the present rates of 8.5 and 11 per cent? Is he going to increase the rate?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that there are differences between Canada Savings Bonds and marketable securities.

Marketable securities have interest rates which will range up and down, depending upon current market conditions. The Government has the same rate on Canada Savings Bonds for a full year because they are a different type of investment instrument. They can be cashed at any time. Canada Savings Bonds have a degree of stability to them that provide the investor with a lot more safety in holding that investment. For that reason the difference in interest rates is warranted.

THE CANADIAN DOLLAR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Today our dollar has dropped again. For the first time in our history, the value of the dollar has dropped below 70 cents.

Does the Minister of Finance have another solution to this problem, aside from a further increase in interest rates?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I want to correct an impression which the Hon. Member may have left inadvertently. We are not trying to increase the borrowing rate.

What the Bank of Canada has been doing during the course of these past few weeks is to moderate the pressures on interest and exchange rates, both up and down.

Mr. Orlikow: More bafflegab.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The purpose of this policy is to generate a degree of stability in the market-place. Once that stability is achieved, then we will see, as I indicated to a previous questioner, some narrowing in the interest rate spread. That is the policy of the Government, and we are going to continue that policy.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ASSURANCE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the stability to which the Minister of Finance refers means increased costs to farmers for production, increased costs for homes, and increased lay-offs for our export industries. Given all these negative effects that are inextricable when you raise interest rates, and which the Minister of Finance himself pointed out when he was on this side of the House, will he give us assurances that this Thursday will not see another increase in interest rates in Canada?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member said something he did not mean to say. The export industries in this country, contrary to what the Member said, are benefiting from this, not the way the Hon. Member—

Mr. Broadbent: Increased rates?

• (1425)

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member should get his story straight. There are two influences here. He has tried to cross his tracks in the question that he proposed.

In specific response to the question, I have indicated to the Hon. Member that because of the huge magnitude of the borrowing requirements of the Government of Canada it is not possible for us to put a pin in and say that that will be the level of interest rates. This is because we sell, I think it is, $3 billion every week of Treasury bills. We cannot keep selling that amount and hope to set interest rates at a fixed level. That is why I say we have to allow the market to set the interest rates. We are moderating the increase, both upward and downward, of both interest rates and exchange rates.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance knows that when he and his colleagues were campaigning to form a new Government they promised a change. The kind of change we have is more than a five-cent drop in the value of the dollar since the Conservatives come to power. Is the Minister now telling the House of Commons that the Government of Canada has no other option, in terms of dealing with this decline in the value of the dollar, except for the age-old one which has not worked in the past and which is not working now, which is another interest rate increase? Is that what the Minister is telling us?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have said clearly that we do have an entirely different approach to economic policy. That was set out in November of 1984 and repeated in May of 1985 in the Budget. The results of this policy are very clear: 450,000 jobs have been created—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Oh, come on!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The unemployment rate was 11.6 per cent; it is now 10 per cent. We have investment growing at a rate of 11 per cent per annum. We have housing starts which have gone up by 25 per cent over the past year. Consumer confidence is at a record high, as measured by the Conference Board of Canada. The Conference Board is saying that—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: More!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

THE ADMINISTRATION

EAVESDROPPING ON LIBERAL CAUCUS—STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER OF JUSTICE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. In light of the acknowledgement by the Deputy Prime Minister this morning in the House that his behaviour was wrong and that eavesdropping is not proper or acceptable, does the Prime Minister agree with the statement of the Minister of Justice that he would eavesdrop on the Liberal caucus today if the chance presented itself?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gauthier: Misquoted again, John?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am sure the Minister wants to reply. However, I have to say to the Hon. Member that, as he well knows, his question is seeking something well beyond the limits of Question Period. Therefore, I ask him that—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: Here we go again!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I therefore ask the Hon. Member to phrase his question in the context of ministerial accountability.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Justice is responsible for the lawful conduct of the Government of Canada. Can the Prime Minister keep in his Cabinet, as Minister of Justice, a person who indicated that that type of conduct is acceptable to him and that he would do it himself if he had the opportunity?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Nunziata: The PM won't defend you!

Mr. Crosbie: The hon. gentleman is not quoting me correctly.

Mr. Rodriguez: Come off it!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: I hope I will be permitted to finish my answer, Mr. Speaker.

I want to say that if I was too enthusiastic in defending my colleague on Saturday evening and left the wrong impression that I might countenance eavesdropping, I would like to correct that now. I agree with the statement made by the Deputy Prime Minister this morning, which was an excellent statement. I add my regrets to his, in the event that there was any mistaken impression to the contrary created by me. As Minister of Justice it is my job to administer and enforce the laws of this country, which I have done, am doing, and will continue to do. I will put my record against anyone on the other side, or anywhere else.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nystrom: Get him a muzzle!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for York Centre—a short supplementary.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO MEMBER FOR KITCHENER

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, on this question of proper conduct and statements by Ministers, I want to ask the Prime Minister whether he would not rather agree with his caucus colleague, the Hon. Member for Kitchener, who indicated that, rather than walking past an open window, eavesdropping is more like receiving stolen goods.

• (1430)

Mr. Speaker: Order. That question is out of order.

PETRO-CANADA

PRICE OF GASOLINE CHARGED BY SERVICE STATIONS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister in the absence of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. In 1983, 37 Conservative Members of Parliament opened a gas station to sell gasoline by the gallon and by the litre on grounds of their freedom to sell. Similarly, does the Prime Minister believe that Petro-Canada dealers should have the freedom to choose the price at which they sell at the pump?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member's question, I think he is referring to a case where a service station was in conflict with the company, Petro-Canada. There was a signed contract with that particular station. There was a breach of that contract and Petro-Canada took the action which the contract allowed it to take.

CLOSURE OF SERVICE STATION AT GRAVENHURST, ONT.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. The gas station of George and Cora McAra in Gravenhurst, Ontario, has been shut down because the couple want to give the consumers a break. Why should the Prime Minister not instruct Petro-Canada, at a time of dramatically falling oil prices, to allow people like the McAra's to give the consumer a break?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister made it very clear in her answer last week that we do not instruct Petro-Canada or any other company to raise or lower gas prices.

Mr. Broadbent: That is the problem.

Mr. McDermid: She has asked them. This Government does not set the prices, the market-place sets the prices—

Mr. de Jong: What market-place?

Mr. McDermid: —and we will see some action very soon in that regard, I am sure.

THE ADMINISTRATION

STATEMENT BY DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER ON EAVESDROPPING

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Will he withdraw and apologize for his own defence of the eavesdropping activities of the Deputy Prime Minister, activities which the Deputy Prime Minister considered wrong this morning and apologized for in the House?

Mr. Gauthier: No one answers that one, eh?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Ms. Copps: They are all gutless.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Need I read the Citations with regard to questions being put to Ministers with regard to ministerial accountability? With great respect to those who wish to put questions—and I do not wish to stop them—Hon. Members know our practices with regard to opinions or matters which lie outside ministerial responsibility, and I have no choice but to enforce them and rule that question out of order.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I will try to go straight to the heart of the Prime Minister's responsibility.

Mr. Gauthier: You will have a hard time.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Does the Prime Minister still believe, after what we heard this morning, that it is still appropriate for the Deputy Prime Minister to hold a position in his Cabinet?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I did not think it was possible for the Deputy Prime Minister to give to me, or the House, any further evidence of his integrity and value, but indeed he did this morning with his statement.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

RESPONSIBILITY OF MINISTER OF JUSTICE

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. While we certainly recognize and accept the apology of the Minister of Justice for the statements he made on the weekend, in view of the serious responsibilities of the Minister of Justice and the Attorney General of Canada, does the Prime Minister not recognize that having in effect counselled a breach of the law—that is, Section 178 of the Criminal Code—and suggested that it is entirely proper, the Prime Minister should, in the circumstances, relieve the Attorney General of his responsibilities?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, it is simply an incorrect statement of fact to say that I counselled a breach of anything. I counselled no breach of any of the laws of this country. I can tell the hon. gentleman that if he or anyone else breaches any of the laws, or counsels a breach of them, I will certainly be active to see that that offence is properly chastised.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We'll use you as a character witness.

Mr. Crosbie: There was no counselling of that nature by me and I am disappointed that the hon. gentleman would even suggest it.

Mr. Gauthier: Crosbie for character witness.

PROVISIONS OF CRIMINAL CODE

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I have Section 178.2 of the Criminal Code in front of me. In view of the fact that the Criminal Code very clearly states that it is illegal to intercept, or to take advantage of the interception in the situation such as he has suggested, does the Minister of Justice not recognize that the statements he made in effect counselled breach of the law, and that he should step down as the chief law officer of the Crown?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, someone on the other side should have intercepted that silly, tasteless question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: That wastn't the sharpest, John!

Mr. de Corneille: Bugging is tasteless.

HEALTH

CEREBRAL PALSY TELETHON—GOVERNMENT CONTRIBUTION

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil-Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Yesterday, the Tenth Cerebral Palsy Telethon was held across Quebec, during which some 15,000 volunteers collected nearly $4 million for research and nursing care for the victims of this terrible illness. My question to the Minister is as follows: Could the Minister inform the House what kind of research is being done in this field and how the Canadian Government contributes to an event like the Cerebral Palsy Telethon?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, first I think all Hon. Members of the House would want to join me in congratulating the volunteers for the Telethon which was carried on successfully in the Province of Quebec over the weekend. I think it is a commendable demonstration of volunteer action in helping to find solutions and answers to a very terrible disease. I commend all of those volunteers, including the Hon. Member who asked the question.

I want to say to her that through the NHRDP, the Medical Research Council, as well as some provincial based research organizations, there is research being carried on. At present we have approximately $7 million of expenditures, not only specifically in the area of cerebral palsy but in related diseases, by the various provincial and federal research organizations which are charged with this responsibility.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT IN ATLANTIC CANADA

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. He may not have noticed during his visit to Nova Scotia last weekend but Atlantic Canadians, including his former constituents of Central Nova, are still waiting for the brand new day which was promised to Atlantic Canada by the Prime Minister.

Given youth unemployment of 30 per cent in Newfoundland, 20 per cent in Nova Scotia and 23 per cent in New Brunswick, will the Prime Minister come forward with a first chance program to give the approximately 55,000 jobless young people in Atlantic Canada a chance for the dignity of a job?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, we realize that jobs have to be created, but we are pleased with the trends we see happening, particularly with young people. I may tell the Hon. Member that since we came to office 43,000 more jobs have been created for young people. Unemployment among young people is down by some 75,000. The unemployment rate is down from where it was during his regime by 2.6 per cent. At the same time we have put into youth programs some $180 million this year—

Mr. de Corneille: Yes, and the session is over, too.

Miss MacDonald: —for summer programs for students, an additional $30 million for students to take part in the census—

Mr. McCurdy: That's not additional. Come, on. Shame.

Mr. de Corneille: Shame.

Miss MacDonald: —and, as well, under Job Entry, which particularly is geared to disadvantaged young people, we have allocated some $125 million.

Mr. de Corneille: The session is over. Shame on you.

Mr. Tobin: The Minister in answering the question has taken the same attitude as the Prime Minister with respect to his promises to Atlantic Canada. He has ignored the region and he has broken—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

REQUEST FOR NEW EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, despite the statistics spewing from the mouth of the Minister of Employment and Immigration, which are relevant to the Atlantic region, would the Minister not recognize that unemployment is up in Newfoundland, up in Prince Edward Island, and has not hardly moved in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick? Will she not recognize the reality and the desperation in the Atlantic region and the anger of the demonstrators last week in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and come forward with a realistic program to give people in Atlantic Canada the dignity of a job, because the Government has not done it? The Prime Minister has not kept his word.

• (1440)

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask the Hon. Member to accompany me to some of the projects where young people are working, where young people have had an opportunity to go into training programs across Atlantic Canada and across the rest of the country. They have been able to take six to eight months of training and on-site work experience and, at the end of this, have been able to acquire permanent jobs. In Newfoundland, for example, employment among young people is up by some 2,000 and unemployment is down by 1,000.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

TREATMENT OF PENSIONS AS EARNED INCOME

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act which become effective January 3, 1986, treat pension income as earned income. This is creating a considerable amount of hardship for people, particularly those who have retired from the Armed Forces, who now have to report their pensions as earned income. They are still looking for work, but if they work they will have to pay premiums and would never be able to collect. Is the Minister prepared to withdraw that draconian measure of counting pension income as earned income for unemployment insurance purposes?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, as you well know, this question has been raised on a number of occasions before. Indeed, it has been raised on several occasions by the Hon. Member himself. I will repeat the answer that I have given earlier in the House. This regulation change was announced in November of 1984. There was a year allowed to make the adjustments necessary for the implementation of this regulation.

With regard to the point which he raises about premiums, I have also announced in the House that this issue has been specially referred to the Forget Commission of Inquiry. I have asked especially for a reply to the question of who pays premiums, under what circumstances, and whether there should be the same prevailing structure. These questions have all been referred to the commission of inquiry and I am looking forward to receiving the report.

FORGET COMMISSION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister a supplementary question related to the Forget Commission. Will the Minister then, as seems to be most logical, wait until she gets the Forget Commission report before she starts making changes to the Act and hurting people?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I may inform the Hon. Member, although I do know that he has recognized this previously, that the regulation change was announced long before the Forget Commission was established.

Mr. Orlikow: And we protested it then.

Miss MacDonald: In November of 1984 we announced when it would come into effect. The Forget Commission was not established until some six or seven months later.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

TROUBLES IN HAITI—SAFETY OF CANADIANS—ROLE OF DEPARTMENT

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister for External Relations.

Considering that the situation is deteriorating rapidly in Haiti, that dozens of people have been killed and hundreds more have been injured, can the Minister assure the House that the department guarantees the security of Canadians living there and looks after the relatives of Canadian families who are permanent residents of Haiti?

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): As I said in weekend reports, Mr. Speaker, the comments and reports we have heard do indicate that no Canadians have been injured or even affected in that country.

I too am concerned about the situation in Haiti and we are monitoring developments very closely.

Since we are a Government that knows how to listen, I called a working session for 6 p.m. later this day where I will be listening to the spokesmen of Montreal's Haitian community and seeking their advice, because they still have brothers and sisters living in Haiti.

ACCESS TO INFORMATION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister.

Some newspapermen and some Members from the Montreal region have told me that they are experiencing a lot of difficulties in trying to elicit information on that subject from the Department of External Affairs.

Would the Minister take the appropriate steps to ensure that the Canadian media and all interested individuals have readier access to information than has been the case in recent days?

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, as early as last Friday when we made the announcement, steps were taken to provide assistance to all Canadian families. I have been told that the service is excellent.

In light of the statement made in the House by the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice, I would urge him not to believe everything he says, hears or reads.

SHIPBUILDING

REQUEST FOR DETAILS CONCERNING CONSTRUCTION OF SECOND FERRY

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport.

As Hon. Members are aware, Canadians in Newfoundland are expecting an improvement in ferry services provided by CN Marine. Furthermore, workers at the Versatile Davie shipyards in Lauzon are expecting a contract for construction of a second ferry.

Could the Minister of Transport inform the House of any new developments?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, that particular issue is currently before Cabinet and I hope that we will be in a position to make an announcement within the next two to three weeks with regard to the acquisition of further ferry vessels for Canada.

PORTRAYAL OF WOMEN IN THE MEDIA

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Communications and is with regard to the appalling report of the Sex Role Stereotyping Committee of the CRTC which shows no improvement, and indeed some deterioration, in portrayal of women in news, public affairs, and drama. Would the Minister tell us what his concerns are in this area and what action he plans, given the total failure of the CRTC to effect any improvement in portrayal of women in the broadcast media, public and private?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, a paper on sexual stereotyping in the broadcasting media was published by the CRTC on January 31.

However, since we have just received the report at the Department of Communications, I am not now in a position to comment publicly on its contents.

However, I can give the House the assurance that this paper will be used as the basis for discussions on the subject that will be held during public CRTC hearings scheduled in Vancouver, Montreal and in the Ottawa area next April.

[English]

APPOINTMENTS TO CRTC AND CBC

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question concerns a very specific recommendation that the Department has had since since 1982 and has, therefore, certainly had time to study. That is the recommendation of the public members of the sex stereotyping task force that half of the appointments to the CRTC board and half of the appointments to the CBC board be of women, and that some of these individuals, men or women—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please!

Ms. McDonald: I am asking if the Minister is prepared to act—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the Hon. Member is making a long preamble. Could she just put a supplementary question?

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, is the Minister prepared to act on this recommendation on the appointment of women and the recommendation that some of these appointments be of people who are conversant with the problems and ready to act and make improvements?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, it was after reading this documentation that I decided to recommend to Cabinet an appointment that has now been made, namely that of Mrs. Lorraine Duguay as Director of the CBC. I am sure that with the Prime Minister's support, we will be able to increase appointments of this kind involving competent people and responding to part of the question raised by the Hon. Member.

LABOUR RELATIONS

GENERAL MOTORS WINDSOR PLANT—THREAT TO COLLECTIVE BARGAINING PRACTICES

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. I know that he is away on official business, so I will ask my question of the Prime Minister. The president of General Motors Canada, in a letter which was made public on the weekend, wrote in terms that indicate that the jobs of some 2,700 workers at the General Motors Trim Plant in Windsor are in jeopardy unless their union gives up longstanding collective bargaining practices, a demand the company is not making of GM workers in the United States.

Will the Prime Minister or his Minister take immediate steps to have General Motors drop this demand in view of the high levels of productivity and efficiency connected with the GM Trim Plant and its workers which are in the best interests of General Motors of Canada and our Canadian economy?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of all of the details raised by my hon. friend, but I will certainly take this as representation and notice and respond as quickly as I can. I was unaware of the thrust of one of the comments made by the president and I will be happy to examine it.

CANADA-UNITED STATES AUTO PACT PROVISIONS

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, will the Prime Minister draw to the attention of the President of General Motors Canada that the course of action that he has in mind could well be contrary to the spirit and approach of the Canada-U.S. Auto Pact which is based on having Canadian content and Canadian production where it makes, at the very least, economic sense in this country, which is very much the case with the GM Trim Plant in Windsor and the 2,700 jobs in that plant?

• (1450)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to look into it and review with the president, or even my hon. friend, the implications of that suggestion.

AIRPORTS

RENOVATIONS AT OTTAWA INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. We all know that the Ottawa International Airport has been undergoing renovations for what seems like an eternity. Can the Minister tell us when the renovations are expected to be finished, if they will be within budget, and if all safety precautions are being vigorously pursued during these renovations?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, this is a project that was inherited from the former administration. The contract and the time farme for the completion of this project were a responsibility of the former administration.

It is my understanding that the project is running roughly two to three months behind schedule. There have been a number of unforeseen problems, such as the high demand for certain types of labour, including electricians and plumbers who were in short supply and caused a bit of a delay.

Notwithstanding that, I am advised that the west wing will be open to the public within the next month or so, and that should alleviate many of the problems to which the Hon. Member refers.

YOUTH

TERMINATION OF KATIMAVIK PROGRAM

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, the ruthless termination of Katimavik, which was a program that served youth and many Canadian communities well, is another example of the Government's disregard for the concerns of youth.

My question is directed to the Minister of State for Youth, who is supposed to be an advocate for youth in the Government. Is anybody listening?

[Translation]

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, anyone who thinks that the end of the Katimavik Program means that the Government has turned its back on Canadian youth could not be further from the truth. In fact, the Government wants young people to have access to more permanent advantages and wants to make these available to more than just 2,000 young people at a cost of $10,000 a year, as has been the case under the Katimavik Program for ten years.

[English]

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW PROGRAM

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, that was a very interesting non-answer to my question. We know that a program has been promised. Why has this program, which is supposed to replace Katimavik, not been announced by now? Really, is not the cut in Katimavik just the beginning of a number of cuts in budgets for youth programs, including a threat to the Ministry itself?

[Translation]

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, announcing the winding down of Katimavik now was the sensible thing to do, to preclude further commitments since we do not intend to continue the program. And why wasn't another program announced right now? The answer is very simple. International Youth Year came to a close less than a month ago. We are now collating and compiling the findings of that year's consultations, and the new programs to be announced will respond directly to the needs and aspirations of our young people. They have said as much all last year. New programs are under way, and I think there will be room for more than 2,000 young people who will be able to contribute to the well-being of their communities and register for programs in which they can get practical experience and thus enter the labour market far more easily. All we ask is some patience.

[English]

REASONS FOR CANCELLATION

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Youth. There are over 750,000 unemployed youth in Canada today, regardless of the statistics given by both Ministers across the aisle. They are out of school, out of work and we will need a variety of programs to meet this growing crisis. How can the Minister justify the cancelling of the Katimavik program which addressed the learning needs of more than 20,000 young Canadians and gave them a sense of purpose, direction, and skills as contributing workers of our society? Why did you cancel that program?

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, at a time when money is scarce—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, come on.

Mrs. Champagne: —$20 million for 2,000 young people is $10,000 per young person. The Government, with many types of programs right now, is doing a lot more for a greater number of young people with that money. There will be new programs announced very soon.

Mrs. Finestone: Nobody in the Government has a right to balance the Budget on the back of our youth who are the future of this country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows that Katimavik won a United Nations aware for excellence and for the environment.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Finestone: The Minister also knows that 35,000 people have been—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have not heard the question with all the applause. Is there a question?

Mrs. Finestone: Why does the Minister not recognize that this program is invaluable in the development of social skills and job-related exprience, that it is an effective job strategy? Why can she not get that through her head?

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, no one said there was nothing good about Katimavik. However, it was not and is not meant to be a job-creation program. Are we to leave the $20 million there and not create jobs or give young people the possibility of acquiring skills? I know that $20 million for those Members is nothing. No wonder the deficit went up 10 times in 20 years.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

FAMILY VIOLENCE

FUNDING OF NATIONAL CLEARING HOUSE

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. On behalf of many organizations which are struggling to deal with the increasing number of battered women and abused children, will the Minister reinstate funds and renew the mandate for the National Clearing House on Family Violence which is due this month?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I answered this question in the House last week. The short version, as those Members opposite want, is that my answer this week is the same as last week.

Ms. Mitchell: That answer is not good enough.

MINISTER'S PLANS

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister has a better plan to assist battered women and children, what is it? Why is there a mystery? The women of Canada want to know and have the right to know.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, again, I answered that question last week, as well as the response to the Badgley Report. That answer stands as well.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

INCORRECT REPORT ON MONEY SUPPLY

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. In view of the fact that figures published by the International Monetary Fund last month wrongly implied that Canada was printing money at a rate almost four times higher than that of other industrialized countries, will the Minister say what effect, if any, this has had on the fall of the dollar?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I do not think it is has had any effect. The only person who was fooled by those figures was the Hon. Member who asked the question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, the Minister did not know about this when I asked him on Thursday and apparently he still has not troubled to issue a correction. However, I understand the Bank of Canada may have taken some initiative. Does the Minister feel that he has any responsibility at all for the fall of the dollar, or is he happy to be asleep at the switch?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

● (1500)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Wake up, Michael.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He does not even know what a switch is.

Mr. Andre: Take a switch to the Opposition.

An Hon. Member: You can have him.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I do not quite understand what the Hon. Member is getting at with the question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I have answered on many occasions regarding the policy of the Government in dealing with the dollar. If she has any suggestions on how she thinks it should be dealt with, I would be very happy to listen to her comments. However, at this point in time the only suggestions which I am getting from her are cheap shots that do not do any good for anything in relation to the Canadian dollar.

POINT OF ORDER

EXTENSION OF SITTING

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Earlier today the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) rose on a question of privilege and some time was taken in respect of that proceeding. In view of the fact that today is an opposition day and the Official Opposition has a motion before the House, may I suggest that the time of the House be extended by the period of time used by that question of privilege?

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Government Whip has already raised that, and we would agree to it. However, I would ask that when in future other Ministers apologize and back down, as did the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), the Government House Leader ask the House to allow it to be done as a statement by a Minister, so that it will be clear that the time could be added and the confusion on the part of the Government this morning could be avoided.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, we had some discussion about this, and I think it would be an excellent idea.

Mr. Speaker: I take it there is a suggestion that the time used for the statement by the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) and the replies thereto be added on to the day. I am informed that it will be 18 minutes, and I take it that there is no objection to it. It seems reasonable.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore the sitting day will continue an extra 18 minutes.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, my point of order concerns House business. I should like to ask the government House Leader if he might be in a position during the course of this week to inform the House of the date upon which the Budget will be introduced.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I am in consultation with my colleague, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). He will announce it in the House at the earliest possible moment so that there will be an opportunity for advanced planning by the Opposition. God knows they need advanced planning.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): At least tell us what year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

TRIBUTE TO THE HON. MEMBER FOR EDMONTON NORTH (MR. PAPROSKI) AS ACTING SPEAKER

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, last Wednesday, January 29, as a result of an urgent and pressing situation, the Hon. Member for Edmonton North (Mr. Paproski) replaced Your Honour in the chair. I was kind of appalled and saddened this morning to read in The Toronto Sun an article dealing with the Hon. Member's performance. With all due respect to your performance, Mr. Speaker, and without meaning to denigrate it in any way, we on this side of the House would like to say that the Hon. Member for Edmonton North did a fantastic job. He understands this House. He is a comrade of ours. Any time he wants to take the chair, he is welcome.

Mr. Speaker: I think all Hon. Members of the House know that I was away through an unavoidable delay caused by the failure of an airplane to leave Toronto. I have reviewed the tape, and I second the comments of the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) with regard to the Hon. Member for Edmonton North (Mr. Paproski).

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PETITIONS

TOURNAMENT CHESS—RECOGNITION AS SPORT FOR PURPOSE OF FUNDING

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure and privilege today to present a petition signed by a number of residents of the Province of Ontario who are chess players. These individuals call upon the Government of Canada to recognize tournament chess as an appropriate sport and to ensure that they have access to the same kind of funding as have other sports.

USE OF PENSION INCOME IN CALCULATING UIC BENEFITS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty and responsibility to present two petitions today. One is signed by 104 residents of the Province of Nova Scotia, and the other is signed by 300 citizens of Windsor, Ontario, Local 195 of the UAW. Both these petitions protest the change in the Unemployment Insurance Act which saw pension income being used as earned income for calculating unemployment insurance benefits. They call upon Parliament to reverse that Draconian change.

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN SHOPS AT MONCTON

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure of presenting another petition from the people of the Moncton area, Dorchester, Riverview and Shédiac. They are still concerned about the situation at the CN shops in Moncton and want the assurance of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) that the jobs at the CN shops in Moncton will be protected.

QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I wish to advise the House that Question No. 467 will be answered today.

[Text]

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES—SEPARATION AND RENTAL ALLOWANCES

Question No. 467—Mrs. Cossitt:

1. How much money is paid to Armed Forces personnel, at the present time, for (a) separation allowances for wives (b) rental allowances?

Order Paper Question

2. What is the total value in annual amounts of any perquisites provided in addition to the other two?

Mr. Robert Wenman (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1. (a) Separation expense is paid to the member and not his or her spouse or any other dependant. Separation expense has three components which cover food, lodgings and incidental expenses. The amounts paid are dependent on the circumstances of the member:

(a) If the member is provided with rations and quarters at a military establishment other than in Cyprus or the Middle East, he or she will receive $3.55 per day/$106.50 per month to cover incidentals.

(b) If the member is provided with military rations and quarters while serving in Cyprus or the Middle East, he or she will receive $91.50 per month to cover incidental expenses.

(c) If military rations and quarters are not available and the member is required to find semi-permanent commercial or non-commercial accommodation, he or she may receive:

(1) $308.70 per month, without receipts, to cover meals and incidental expenses;

(2) for commercial lodgings, actual and reasonable expenses, supported by receipts, to a maximum of $885 per month;

(3) for non-commercial lodgings, such as accommodation in a private home, actual and reasonable expenses, supported by receipts, to a maximum of $198.74 per month.

The total military expenditure for Separation expense during the period October, 1984 to September, 1985 was $3,301,500.

(b) Accommodation Assistance Allowance (Rental Allowance). Accommodation assistance allowance may be payable to members of the Canadian Forces serving at locations where the local cost of accommodation is significantly higher than the national average cost of similar accommodation. The actual amount that an individual member receives will vary with the location and the member's rank, status and family size. Effective November 1, 1985, nine locations qualify as accommodation assistance areas. The following depicts the range of rates applicable to each location:

| Location | Range (Monthly Rates) |
|---|---|
| Gander | 41-208 |
| St. John's | 52-157 |
| Halifax/Shearwater | 78-157 |
| Ottawa | 71-204 |
| Toronto | 55-110 |
| Vancouver | 55-110 |
| Whitehorse | 59-391 |
| Yellowknife | 360-719 |

The total military expenditure for accommodation assistance allowance during the period October, 1984 to September, 1985 was $6,854,484.

2. We are unable to estimate the total value of other perquisites since we would have to cover every allowance, grant and gratuity contained in the Queen's Regulations and Orders.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I rise again in respect of the questions which I put on the Order Paper on March 15, 1985, ten and a half months ago. I have risen time and time again to ask the Government when it intends to answer those questions which relate to the involvement of the former Solicitor General in a case involving the Premier of New Brunswick. It is clear that the Government is stonewalling and refusing to answer because the answers to those questions will tend to embarrass not only the Government but the Conservative Government of New Brunswick.

I should like to put the question again to the Parliamentary Secretary. When does the Government intend to answer those questions? If the Government does not intend to answer them, what would that mean in terms of the credibility of the Government when it speaks of enhancement of the role of the back-bencher?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I advise the House that we have made every effort to answer as many questions as possible. If the Hon. Member reviews the record, he will find that our percentage of answers is, if not equal to, very close to that of the previous administration. I know, and I know there are other Members, such as the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), who could tell the Hon. Member that some questions went four and a half years without being answered by the former administration. It is just that some questions get answered quicker than others.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I asked specifically with regard to Question No. 296.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nunziata: When does he intend to answer this question?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please, I think the Hon. Member has asked that question. I am only reluctant to grant him a supplementary question because of our practice not to grant supplementary questions during this period. However, if the Hon. Member has a very short supplementary question, I will recognize him.

Mr. Nunziata: Would the Parliamentary Secretary not agree that what is at issue in respect of my question on the Order Paper—

• (1510)

Mr. Speaker: Now, the Hon. Member is going beyond the practices of this period of question.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I, too, rise on a question arising out of statements by the Parliamentary Secretary. I tabled a question, Question No. 64, on November 9, 1984, dealing with the Government's economic statement. Since then we have seen a Budget, and we are about to see another Budget in the not too distant future. We have seen the dollar go through the floor, it is down to 69 cents. I would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary when I can expect to have an answer to a question that I asked on November 9, 1984?

An Hon. Member: Over a year ago.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that since the Hon. Member's question is pertinent to the issues of the day, and not character assassination, I will take this up and get back to the Hon. Member on her question which relates to the economic statement of the Government, naturally an important issue.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTION TO ADJOURN—S.O. 31

DROP IN THE VALUE OF CANADIAN DOLLAR

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 31, I move that this House do now adjourn for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely, the collapse of the Canadian dollar which, for the first time in its history, has fallen below 70 cents in U.S. funds.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) has given me notice of his request.

The Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) submitted a similar request last Monday. On that occasion, I indicated that although the pressure on the Canadian dollar is a matter of grave concern, the problem is of a continuing nature rather than that of a sudden emergency. Our precedents do not allow us to give ongoing problems the status of an emergency situation in terms of the provisions of Standing Order 31, except in very special circumstances.

Furthermore, there are six Opposition days left in the current period, one having been designated for tomorrow, so there will be an opportunity to debate this very important matter within a reasonably short time.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 63—THE ENVIRONMENT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Caccia:

That this House condemns the Government for its failure to recognize the importance attributed by Canadians to toxic chemicals in water and other elements of the environment.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, in speaking to the motion today I want to begin by expressing a word of commendation to my friend the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) for bringing to the attention of this House a matter that is timely, relevant and urgent. The Hon. Member for Davenport is certainly one of the most respected environmentalists in Canada today. I believe that my Party is fortunate to have him as our spokesperson and critic on environmental issues.

Canadians today in all parts of the country are deeply concerned about the quality of our environment. They look to the federal Government for leadership in the resolution of environmental problems and the preservation of a very rich natural heritage that we still possess. Inaction by the federal Government cannot be excused on the basis that there is a jurisdictional overlap between the provinces and the federal Government when it comes to environmental issues.

Canadians expect strong leadership from the federal Government. As the Member for Davenport pointed out in introducing this motion they are not at the present time getting the leadership that they expect and deserve. Inaction cannot be excused either because neglect of our environment may sometimes be profitable in the short run. Canadians know that environmental degradation inevitably harms the economy in the long run. For example, acid rain harms tourism and buildings. If we have poor forest management it leads to a shortage of wood. The effects of pollutants in air and water causes health problems. That, Sir, leads to absenteeism and much higher costs for our health care system.

There are many environmental problems in this country, Mr. Speaker, which really are the result of one sector of society trying to avoid paying the costs of waste disposal or of sustaining a particular resource. They just try to avoid it. These costs will not go away. They are simply passed on to others, another sector of society or, even more seriously, they are passed on to future generations.

The debate today in this House concerns the toxic chemicals issue, and no one should be misled. The task of intervening by the federal Government to control toxic chemicals which will find their way into our environment is an enormous task. Ours has been described as being a chemical age. Probably that is more to be regretted than it is to be cheered. We know that modern industry today uses some 60,000 chemicals in a very wide variety of processes. Many of these products that are used are new, they have been synthesized within this century.

For the most part we have only very limited data concerning their long-term environmental and health impacts. We just don't know enough about them.

There are 1,000 new chemicals that are utilized annually, but there is no comprehensive legislation to monitor and control them. This is not to suggest that the federal Government in the past has been inactive or unconcerned—not at all. The federal Government has six Acts regarding toxic chemical management. There is the Environmental Contaminants Act of 1976, the Clean Air Act, the Canada Water Act, the Ocean Dumping Control Act, Section 33 of the Fisheries Act, and, of course, the Migratory Birds Convention Act. In addition to that there are another 30 related federal Acts; that is, in a variety of statutes there are aspects that direct themselves to environmental matters. For the provinces there is a total of another 97 Acts that deal with specific aspects of toxic chemicals.

That is impressive, but all of this legislation has not proved successful. It has not solved our pollution problems resulting from toxic chemical disposal. I wonder why that is, Sir? The reason it seems—and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) referred to it in his speech—is that monitoring, regulating, and controlling have not kept pace with the development of new chemicals. Regulation development requires a political commitment, the exercise of strong political will and the direction of the necessary financial resources in order that we can keep pace.

The Minister of National Health and Welfare admitted this morning that those resources are not available. Does that mean that we should therefore conclude that there is not a political commitment on the part of this Government to face up to the big challenge of dealing with toxic chemicals entering our environment? There is reason to be suspicious that there is not that commitment.

As my friend from Davenport pointed out, the toxicology centre in Guelph, which had an allocation of $6 million at its disposal and was destined to become a centre of excellence in North America attracting the best of scientists, has ceased to function. We know that an important toxic chemical research program with respect to the Niagara River, which had an allocation of some $2.5 million a year, has been cancelled. We know the National Research Council was doing important research on toxic chemicals. There is no longer money available for it to carry on that work.

The key issue is that chemicals continue to be used in great abundance in our society. New ones are regularly introduced, but are done so without an adequate assessment program to deal with the risks they may pose.

The simple fact, and Hon. Members have to face up to it, is that Canada lacks an effective control and assessment policy for chemical usage and disposal. What does that mean, Mr. Speaker? It means we are gambling that there will be no ill effects either to the environment or to human health when one of these new chemicals is used and disposed of in some unacceptable way.

It is frequently charged that in Canada most chemicals have not been tested adequately to determine their toxicity, how they effect ecosystems and how they interact with other chemicals. Consequently, citizens of Canada, those who we represent here, are raising numerous questions about the safety of drinking water and the risks involved in the eating of fish.

There is a great deal of disagreement, of course, even amount experts about the impact of toxic chemicals on the environment. Some very clear signals, however, and problems do exist. The big proportion of fish with cancerous tumours that have been taken from the polluted areas of the Great Lakes is a very clear signal that we have a water quality problem.

A three-year study was undertaken by Environment Canada in co-operation with the Government of the Northwest Territories. It revealed high concentrations of certain agricultural and industrial chemicals, including PCBs, in polar bears. The very fact that PCBs and other toxic chemicals have been found in northern Canada—supposed to be our pristine wilderness—indicates that we have to rethink our approach to these toxic chemicals, to manage them better throughout their life cycle and to prevent them from finding their way into the environment affecting human health and wildlife as well.

We do not yet fully understand how these toxical chemicals got into the North. There can be no dispute here about federal responsibility. There is a federal responsibility to develop the best possible means of preventing that from happening. Our well being is intimately connected to the quality of this nation's air, water and soil. For example, PCBs and mercury were widely used for a long period of time and thought to be safe until scientists suddenly discovered that they have harmful effects.

Let me just take the case of mercury. The Indian people who live in northwestern Ontario in the communities of White Dog and Grassy Narrows are today tragic reminders of the sad fact that we did not carry out our responsibilities to guarantee their health and safety.

What we have, and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) admitted it this morning, is an ad hoc process by Environment Canada and the Department of National Health and Welfare in assessing and controlling the 60,000 chemicals now on the market. That is not adequate to protect the health and the environment of Canadians.

Our neighbour to the south does not have a great reputation for environmental concerns in many areas—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Putting it mildly.

Mr. Penner: Putting it mildly, yes. Nevertheless, if you take a look at the Americans' Environmental Protection Agency, it has a much more sophisticated and advanced process for monitoring, regulating and controlling toxic chemicals than do we. The Americans have clearly defined stages. They have decision-making criteria to identify and regulate hazardous chemicals. Canada does not have a system like that and it needs one.

On August 9, 1985, the Aboriginal Council of British Columbia wrote to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) supporting the efforts of the Kitsumkalum Indian Band Council in its fight to stop the herbicidal spraying of a chemical known as Garlon Ester 4. This case illustrates so well the need to prevent toxic chemicals from entering lakes, rivers and ground waters. There seems to be an absence of any strong federal leadership. In fact, the federal Government in this case, it is sad to say, was the culprit.

The previous Minister of the Environment, who has now left the Cabinet altogether and never really was regarded as much of a champion of our biosphere nevertheless acknowledged that considerable experience had been gained in coping with chemicals in Canada since the passage of the Environmental Contaminants Act of 1976. She indicated that much more had to be done. She called for, and she should be given credit for this, a comprehensive management plan. She said:

> Toxic chemicals must be and will be safely managed in Canada.

That is why my hon. friend and colleague from Davenport has called for this debate. We in this Party want to see the Government bring in such a comprehensive management plan. Will it do so? If so, when?

No one questions that there are some chemical substances that are of value to society; that is not the issue here today. It must be recognized that their widespread and unregulated use poses very great risks to human health and to the environment. Industrial societies such as ours are steadily increasing the potential exposure of citizens to chemicals which can cause cancer, birth defects, blood diseases, miscarriages, nervous disorders and damages to the liver, the kidney and the genes. All of the chemicals in use today will enter into the environment in one way or another. Too little is known about the effects of chemicals on living beings.

• (1530)

Possibly, hundreds of these chemicals pose no serious risks at all, but others are unquestionably dangerous. The federal Government is responsible for overseeing that we have national water safety standards in the country. It should be in a position to ensure for every Canadian, no matter where that citizen lives, the right to clean, safe drinking water. The federal Government should have the force of law behind it to order industries to have recycling centres for industrial discharge.

Think about it for a moment, Mr. Speaker. The concept that discharge of these chemicals is acceptable because they dilute in water surely has to be considered irresponsible. I would like to use an authority in this regard. I quote the words of Dr. Wilkinson of Carleton University who gave testimony before the Pearse Commission. He said:

> Toxic chemical waste ought not to be a topic of water management—but it is. We do need control of chemicals from creation to disposal. Storage in the ecosphere through dilution is irresponsible.

I think all Members in the House will agree that the emphasis has to be on prevention. The Government of Canada must have the power to prevent toxics from entering lakes, rivers and groundwater. If we have to rely on remedial measures, then we know that they are always expensive. They will be much more expensive than a systematic program of pollution prevention. Once a toxic chemical has been dispersed into the environment, it is usually difficult, or it may even be impossible, to clean it up.

I conclude by saying that this is an important debate. Its purpose is to stress, to elaborate and to emphasize the point that Canada needs a better system to assess and control toxic chemicals so that our citizens can be assured that their health, their safety and their concern for good environment is not constantly, daily, at threat.

[Translation]

Mrs. Bourgault: Mr. Speaker, I think that if we want to be consistent ... I realize this is an Opposition day, but the motion could just as well have read: "That this House condemns the previous Government for its failure to recognize the importance attributed by Canadians to chemicals." The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) referred to new toxic chemicals. He knows perfectly well—as he used to be on this side of the House, on the Government side—that it takes years to get a chemical certified for use.

I am aware of the Hon. Member's parliamentary record. I know that he is very interested in parliamentary procedure and reform, since he was a fairly active substitute member of the committee. The Hon. Member must remember those uncertain times of the urea formaldehyde foam insulation question, and in fact Canadians are still ... And we are still trying to deal with the difficult UFFI question. The Hon. Member will recall that at the time, approval of the product was ... the Government of Canada had not been careful enough, and I think we can never be too careful. Now, is the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior prepared to admit in the House today that what is happening to us now—and environmental matters are very important to my constituents in Argenteuil-Papineau: there are a number of organizations whose concerns include the quality of air, water, forests, in fact the quality of life in general—is not the fault of this Government, because if we realize ... It seems it takes two or three years for a chemical to be certified for use.

The Standing Committee on Agriculture, and in fact I am not sure whether it is the Caucus Committee or the Standing Committee, at any rate the Committee met with the Canadian Manufacturers of Chemical Specialties Association and told us: It may take three years to get a product certified for the market.

So if the present regulations ... and what I want to ask him is: Does the Hon. Member recognize that the present regulations are a consequence of the previous legislation? It is as simple as that. That this Government has a tremendous responsibility and is facing a tremendous challenge to deal with environmental matters and acid rain? That Canadians are not the only ones to blame for our acid rain, Mr. Speaker?

I would appreciate it if the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior would answer that, and if he would remember the days of UFFI. He must realize it is not easy for a government, and as my father used to say: It's easier to be on the outside looking into the ring than being in the ring yourself.

[English]

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I only have to say to the Hon. Member that the matter she raises is really peripheral. We are dealing here with a central problem. I was in this House when pollution matters and concern for the environment first became public policy issues. It happened in the late 1960s. Progressively, the Government became more and more concerned. A ministry was established, a Department was established and legislation was passed. Very frequently, as I indicated in my remarks, that legislation fell short of what citizens in the country expected from it.

The matter is simply this. We are dealing with a progressively serious problem. It is becoming more and more serious. So the issue now, as my hon. friend from Davenport has stressed by bringing this motion forward, is that the Government has been elected with a large majority to take leadership in a wide range of areas. Today in the House we are saying that one of the areas that must not be neglected is the area of toxic chemicals disposal. It is becoming a more and more serious problem, as represented by the questions which have been raised in the House about the St. Clair River. During previous administrations we had equally serious problems. We had to move on them; but there has to be a political will to do something about it and to commit the resources to those problems.

What concerns us is that there does not seem to be any clear statement of public policy from the Government on environmental issues. In fact, we on this side of the House seem to be getting the message that there is a drawback. If toxic chemicals are as serious as my hon. friend and experts in our community have indicated, then how can there be justification for major cut-backs when we ought to be allocating new resources to a comprehensive toxic chemical management program in the country? That is the challenge for this Government. I do not think that they are responding to the challenge, at least not to the satisfaction of either myself or the Hon. Member for Davenport.

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, I think all of us in this House, no matter what side we sit on, are very sympathetic with the main thrust of the Hon. Member's comments. Obviously, all of us are most concerned about the environment. We are most concerned about toxic waste, toxic chemicals and, in particular, about toxic chemicals in our drinking water. Those are matters of common ground. I do not think that anyone is holier than thou in that respect.

The Hon. Member also knows from statements made by the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) in the House last week that the Government has the intention within a very short period of time to introduce some very comprehensive changes to the Environmental Contaminants Act in order to make clear and to strengthen the whole thrust of the Government's enforcement and prevention policies in which the Hon. Member is interested.

The Hon. Member also knows that one of the main problems we face in dealing with the environment and the toxic chemical problem lies in the chemical dumps along the American side of the Niagara River, in particular those four infamous chemical dumps originally owned by the Hooker Chemical Company: the Love Canal, the Hyde Park dump, the S. Area dump and the 102 nd. Street dump. They are all along the American side of the Niagara River and they are all causing a great potential problem which somehow has to be dealt with. Those dumps have been there for a number of years. They did not just suddenly occur since September 4, 1984.

Since that time, of course, the present Government has been dealing with the American Government, the State of New York Government and with the chemical companies involved, trying to come to some sort of solution to the problem of cleaning up those dumps. The ultimate solution, of course, is to get rid of the chemicals, take them away and dispose of them somewhere else, and I mean actually dispose of them rather than just dump them in another site where they can cause the same sort of problem.

The present Government is doing something about that and it has been for some time. I am sure the Hon. Member has some thoughts of his own and is very disturbed by the fact that the Governments of which he was a part in the past were not able to do anything about those dumps. I hope he is prepared to admit to the House that the present Government is taking substantial action in that direction.

All of us, of course, are most interested in knowing what the Hon. Member would have done had he been the Minister of the Environment to clean up these dumps on the American side of the Niagara River. I hope the Hon. Member will help us with his own suggestions as to what he believes his Government should have done to clean up those dumps.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, first, no one disagrees for a moment that there has to be harmonization with our American friends in dealing with pollution problems that affect bodies of water which border our countries. Past administrations have always had an active policy of trying to seek that harmonization. But if my hon. friend, the Hon. Member for Davenport, were the Minister of the Environment, we would not have seen the $2.5 million cut in the toxic chemical research program for the Niagara River. I would like to ask my hon. friend how he justifies that.

Let me say on the third point that we have heard on many occasions a promise of an action plan, but I would like to see that action plan. We have not received the details of it as yet and only have indications that it will be forthcoming. Part of the reason for this debate is to get that action plan brought forward much more quickly because it is urgent it be done soon.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner). Some of us had the honour and privilege to visit northern Ontario and spend some time in some of its important industrial centres such as Dryden, Kapuskasing and Cochrane. Can the Hon. Member tell us if the people in his community are satisfied that at this time we as a Government are doing what should be done in terms of assessing possible damages of waste disposal and in terms of control and regulation? Are we making sure of the heritage we leave our children in northern Ontario, which is one of the largest and richest areas of the country? I am sure he will tell us that in his riding there are a lot of expectations and that we still have a lot to do.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I mentioned in my remarks the alarm which had been created in the Indian communities of Whitedog and Grassy Narrows as a result of the mercury pollution which had come from the pulp and paper plant at Dryden, Ontario. It was some years later that the Government of Canada, in co-operation with the Government of Ontario—a Liberal and a Conservative administration—and in co-operation with the industry, put vast amounts of money into a program in northern Ontario for the pulp and paper industry which did two things; first, it modernized the industry and, second, it introduced the very latest pollution technology. We in northern Ontario at this time are benefiting from that multimillion dollar program which was put in place by two levels of Government, plus the industry. More than $1 billion was spent in a very short space of time. So we have done much in northern Ontario to clean up the act of our industry. But we are not so convinced that other industries in other parts of Canada are doing as well.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Gurbin).

An Hon. Member: Hear, hear!

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): I have at least one person who is interested in what I might say. I think the debate thus far is starting to take some focus and the question is becoming action and political will. I believe that is the bottom line of the remarks coming from the opposition today. It has been said, and I have mentioned it before, that this is an appropriate debate. There is no question about that. It is one which the Government welcomes. The Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) would have dearly loved to have participated in the debate but he is out west today to make an announcement. I believe this is an example of action taken by the Government. The Hon. House Leader of the Opposition should perhaps take into account that the action the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) was asking for several months ago in a Standing Order 22 is now being implemented in the announcement of the four mountain parks plan. It will establish the arrangement between Parks Canada and the four mountain parks, with which most of us in Canada are very familiar and which are such a natural attribute and heritage to all Canadians. It will be an umbrella agreement, in co-operation with the people in the area and with the 3,200 organizations and individuals taking part in the formation of that plan.

The comments to which I would like to respond first are those comments made by the critic for the New Democratic Party this morning. He made two points to do with this Government and with what, in his mind, would be our difficulty in actually implementing the kind of environmental and management controls he feels would be necessary. He thought there would be a conflict between the economic objectives of the Conservative Government and the environmental goals which most of us who have a sense of the environment would like to see achieved.

I believe what we must do in fact is to look at actions when we are considering this whole issue. What actions have been taken? We have been in Government now for 18 months—sometimes it seems a lot shorter and sometimes a lot longer. Let us take, for example, the problem of PCBs. For a long time, possible controls for transportation of PCBs were on the books but were never promulgated. The Government in the spring of last year did that so that there would be rigid controls for the handling and transportation of PCBs. That could have been done a long time before. We have not allowed PCBs as far back as 1978. We had then a pretty full sense of what possible dangers they could lead to, particularly in terms of human health, but it was this Government which brought in this legislation within a period of less than a year from the time of coming to office.

Second, and I think this is a really key point because it also speaks to a point made by the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner), is the modernization of the pulp and paper industry. Before forming the Government we have had discussions over a period of at least five years concerning acid rain. We did not make as much noise as some members of the Opposition have from time to time. We did not shout and scream. Instead, we reached agreement with every province in Canada concerning our objectives, and then we went into action and put our money where our mouth was. That is the critical difference. Not only did we take action and achieve agreement, we have allocated $150 million to do precisely what the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior was suggesting we did not have the political will to do. We put forward that money, to be matched in many cases by the provinces, for the modernization of the smelting industry. I am sure the Hon. Member for Davenport would have liked to have achieved that had he got the co-operation or financial support of his Government when he was the Minister. We did it and it is a major accomplishment.

Along with that, we established automobile emission levels so that in September, 1987, for the 1988 model year, automobile emissions will be reduced by 45 per cent. We can start getting rid of the nitrogen oxide and hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions. Our standards will also result in significant reductions in the amount of lead in the environment, ultimately eliminating it as quickly as possible. Those are specific actions taken in the short time we have been in office. Those actions speak much louder than any words we hear from either of the opposition Parties. It is sometimes difficult in the hue and cry to be fully aware of the real action taken and the positive results achieved in that period of time.

What is hard for me to grasp, Mr. Speaker, is the inconsistency between some of the things the Liberal critic said and what he was able to accomplish. I have heard many excellent words spoken by almost everyone who stood up to speak today on the environment. There can be little debate about the fact that, as the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) said today, the problem of toxic chemicals has been with us since at least the 1940s. It has also been an increasing problem. We hear the Opposition talking about our lack of action, yet when we came into office we walked into a vacuum. As the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior indicated—

Mr. Caccia: The vacuum is in your brain.

Mr. Gurbin: —there were pieces of legislation all over the place which did not accomplish anything. We have a Liberal critic who I guess cannot read. I am not sure. They want a statement of will. The interpretation that he chooses to put on some of the things he has raised—

Mr. Gauthier: You are just a bunch of cheap shots. You don't get anything done.

Mr. Gurbin: If the Hon. Member wants to talk about cheap shots, he should read the speech by the Hon. Member for Davenport.

Mr. Gauthier: I was here when he made it. It was a good speech.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gurbin: He may like those cheap shots in the Hon. Member's speech, but I have to tell you that calling the Minister of the Environment names is not a very constructive thing to do if he wants to raise the level of debate.

Mr. Caccia: I didn't call him a name, just described him as Bugs Bunny.

Mr. Gurbin: At least I have refrained from making some of the obvious comments about the Hon. Member's personality. I think this debate is important enough that it should be at least raised to a higher level.

I would like to read the statement by the Minister which the Hon. Member for Davenport probably has not had an opportunity to read. His concept of what the Environmental Contaminants Act might or might not do is one thing. What the Government intends to do with it is, I think, reflected in the speech by the Minister in Peterborough about one week ago. I am going to quote directly from that speech and then follow it up with some specific comments to try to give a sense of the constructive actions this Government will be taking. The Minister said this:

> The new Act will regulate chemicals from "the cradle to the grave". Specifically, it will prevent the formulation, manufacture, distribution, sale, and use of any new chemical that has not been proven safe, and it will bring order to the system of managing chemicals already in trade and commerce. In cases where accidents occur—and accidents can certainly happen to even the most environmentally sensitive companies—the new law will cover every facet of clean up, including, possibly, compensation to innocent third parties.
> The preamble of the new legislation will set out, for all time, the purpose, intention, philosophy, and commitment of the Government of Canada to protect the environment and, thereby, to protect the health and safety of present and future generations alike. The preamble will constitute, in effect if not technically, this country's first "environmental bill of rights".

The Minister went on to say:

> The new law will be the strongest of its kind, not only in North America but in the western hemisphere.

I do not think there can be any clearer statement of this Government's intentions, and this will be followed by a specific action.

The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior has raised some important points. We have not even had an inventory of the some 65,000 chemicals presently in use in this country and the 1,000 new chemicals which come into the country every year. That has to be done, it is under way, and we will accomplish it. We are one of the few countries in the western industrialized world which does not have that information. This Government has had to live with that fact since coming into office some 18 months ago.

Earlier I spoke of a vacuum. I heard some comments about cheap shots and a Member opposite saying that the vacuum was in my head. Let me ask this question. Where was the statement of the Government's environmental policy up until now?

Mr. Gauthier: None.

Mr. Gurbin: There was none. There has been none by the Government of Canada until now. That is exactly right. Now this Government has made a statement. I would like to ask the Hon. Member for Davenport, if he were still in the House, where is our national water policy? We never had one. It is this Government which will produce a national water policy. Following the federal inquiry on water, in which the Hon. Member for Davenport had some part, we are at a stage where the Cabinet, for the first time, has given responsibility to an individual Minister in this area, and that is the Minister of the Environment. We are looking after our water and all its aspects, including the toxic chemicals therein, including exports, and diversions and all those things. We have that responsibility vested in one Minister, and he will take the responsibility for making sure we have a national water policy which will serve Canadian needs. That is a giant step forward and it helps to fill the void which has existed for so long.

A lot of issues surrounding toxic chemicals have been raised, certainly in the public's mind if not in this House, by the spill in the St. Clair River. It was an accidental spill but it brought to light some of the problems which have existed for heaven only knows how long. We could not have had a more rapid or specific response to a problem than that by the Minister of the Environment to the difficulties we faced with that spill. Within days we had a full-fledged federal, provincial and industry investigation. The best available facilities were used and federal Government spending has exceeded $1 million, and I assume that the company and the province have spent as much. The situation was followed on a daily basis. There was a competent staff which made a competent clean-up and found out that we were, in fact, dealing not only with a spill, but with a long-standing problem and probably some chronic leakage areas. These things have also been investigated. We received a final report last week, which gives us a framework to look into the future and 24 recommendations which are being acted on by the Government. I do not have time now to delineate all 24 of the recommendations and the specific responses, but this has now been accomplished, Mr. Speaker.

• (1600)

We talk almost blithely about cradle-to-grave management and research. The Government's commitment to research is mentioned frequently. We had many pieces of research on toxics for a long period of time, but it was difficult to know whether we were getting the most effective use of our resources and whether some of the intended expenditures were going to provide the best possible results for the money that would be spent. We had three separate inquiries into toxicology research in Canada; one through the National Research Council, one through Environment Canada, and the final one through the Science Council. All of these have been reported and the Government has taken some specific actions and will take more.

In conjunction with that, I will very quickly mention the toxicology fund. We have supplied seed money of $1 million for a toxicology fund which, under a joint management board, including people from private enterprise, has created a whole series of specific projects. Twenty-one have been submitted to date and, of those, 12 have been accepted. They provide some very interesting and unique approaches into very specific areas of toxicology research. Those things are presently under way. As was mentioned this morning, the Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard), who is very interested in the possibility of a toxicology centre in that part of the country, is working locally and with Ministers of the Crown to determine whether that type of facility is in fact necessary and appropriate.

To return to the main point, Mr. Speaker, our approach must provide a system that will deal competently and effectively with the issue of toxic chemicals and their potential for getting into our drinking water and affecting our health. It must deal with more than only the St. Clair River, the Niagara River, or a response to a particular spill.

Mention has been made of the IJC. The reaction of the Member for Davenport to the IJC was unfortunate and discouraging for all Members of the House. Be that as it may, the IJC is a specific part of the long-term approach, particularly with regard to national boundary waters. The IJC is probably best known to most Canadians for its very constructive and competent work in the 1970s when the Great Lakes, and Lake Erie in particular, faced eutrophication. The amount of difficulty was such that, for all intents and purposes, the lake was dead. I lived in that area and saw what happened to it. The co-operation that was achieved through the International Joint Commission is a real success story. That is the type of activity that we hope to be able to emulate and repeat time and again when it is necessary on matters of this type.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has filled the two positions which were vacant on the IJC with people who have a level of competence to deal with both political matters and the excellent scientific support staff of the IJC.

Mr. Caccia: Tell us about their backgrounds.

Mr. Gurbin: The unfortunate thing about the IJC, as the Member for Davenport and anyone who knows anything about it will know, is that during the administration of the last Government that body became almost useless. That was very unfortunate because that body was not able to accomplish many of the things it should have been able to accomplish because it did not have the respect or co-operation of both Governments.

Mr. Caccia: He doesn't know what the IJC stands for.

Mr. Gurbin: In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the Government has the action and the political will. In the future we will produce the results that are necessary to ensure that Canadians have a healthy future and that we manage the toxic chemicals that are an integral part of that future.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, could the Parliamentary Secretary clarify why the Government is allowing corn and soy beans to come into Canada from countries that use the chemical alachlor known by the trade name of Lasso? On December 31 the Government cancelled the temporary permit which it had allowed for this herbicide since last February. Farmers in southwestern Ontario who depend on this for use in the production of their crops are wondering why, if this chemical is being cancelled for use in Canada, corn and soy beans from the United States, where its use is allowed, are being allowed into Canada. Can the Parliamentary Secretary assure us that countries which use this chemical will not be allowed to ship corn and soy beans into Canada?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) has given us another example of Government action in an area where there had previosuly been inaction. My understanding is that we have, in fact, cancelled the use of alachlor in Canada. My understanding, subject to confirmation, is also that there is no residue left by the product. I am not positive of that and I will say that very clearly so that I do not intentionally mislead him. However, my understanding is that there is no residue left by the product. If that is the case, it poses no threat to our health through getting into to ecosystem in any way. Even if that is not the case, I understand his point that this would be legitimate grounds for claiming unfair advantage. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) will have to respond to that. I am not familiar with the details.

Mr. Fretz: Mr. Speaker, today we heard a well thought out and informative speech given by the Parliamentary Secretary. The House is grateful to him for the information which he has given us today.

With regard to the appointees to the IJC, I had the privilege of meeting today with Mr. Bob Welch, a very distinguished person from the Niagara Peninsula in Ontario who has knowledge and a grasp of some of the problems of the environment in the peninsula. Those of us who represent the Niagara Peninsula are grateful to have someone of his stature appointed to the IJC.

Mr. Caccia: That's too funny.

Mr. Fretz: I am glad that the Parliamentary Secretary mentioned that. The Member also mentioned that this is a Government of action regarding acid rain. The agreements which the Government has now made with the provinces and the expenditure of $150 million certainly let the people of Canada know that the Government is going to deal with this issue, and also the Bill of Rights to which the Parliamentary Secretary alluded.

During the 1980 election the then Prime Minister, Mr. Trudeau, journeyed to the Niagara Peninsula and came to Niagara Falls. The cleaning up of the Niagara River, Love Canal and Hooker Chemical with all the sludge pouring into the lower Niagara River was a major election issue at that time. The Prime Minister made some amazing statements, such as that this would be at the forefront of his Government's concern about the environment.

• (1610)

What did the former Government do during its four years to clean up the Niagara River?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker the inability of the former Government to accomplish anything is unfortunate. I understand that its intentions were often good, especially on the part of the Member for Davenport, but he was unable to accomplish anything.

I expect him to criticize the Government in our efforts to resolve some of these outstanding problems. However, the first step in being able to resolve these problems is to establish a level of communication and confidence. I recognize that it may not be a perfect first step.

Opposition Members have said that we are wasting time because it is the fault of the Americans that we have been unable to achieve a bilateral agreement on acid rain. However, such an agreement requires two parties, and the relative inability of the former Government to put this issue on the agenda with the Americans at the presidential and prime ministerial level speaks volumes in terms of the relationship.

We have established a working relationship and while we have our separate points of view, and hope to have the Americans understand and accept our view, this may not be accomplished immediately. However, we are on the right track and that is the great difference with what we have seen before.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I hope the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Gurbin) can assure us that Government will put controls on the importation of corn from those states which permit the use of alachlor in its production. Such controls are also important with respect to the use of alachlor in the production of soya beans because it obviously puts our farmers at a disadvantage in the production of that crop. I assume he will discuss this with the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) to ensure that corn produced with that chemical in the United States will not be allowed into Canada.

The Hon. Member talked about the Guelph Toxicology Centre. He said that the Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard) is reviewing the feasibility of that project with the Minister and other officials. That project was ready to proceed. It had the staff and was under construction over a year ago, on November 8, when it was cancelled by the Government. If it really wanted it to proceed it would not have cancelled that project. There was a $16 million commitment by the federal and provincial Governments and another $8 million from the private sector. It should have proceeded.

That project was moving ahead when the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) was the Minister of the Environment. It was a model project in a field in which we need a toxicology centre of excellence for training and research. We have seen over a year lost on a project that is essential to the environment and toxicology research, and I hope the Government will reinstate it immediately.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, we must take two factors into consideration when discussing a toxicology centre and toxicology research in Canada. First, we must consider how a toxicology centre will be run and on what basis. Second, there is the financial factor.

Let me give the Hon. Member a specific example. Toxicology research in Canada was taking place on a year-by-year basis. A number of the projects which were claimed to be cancelled were, in fact, completed. There was no long-term funding. That is precisely why the three groups from the National Research Council, Environment Canada and the Science Council were mandated, either by themselves or in cooperation with the Government, to determine what type of long-term toxicology research should take place.

We must also consider the operating costs of those establishments in addition to the capital expenditure. This is where fiscal responsibility must be taken into account, and I know that whatever determination is made for that facility, if it occurs, it will achieve concrete goals in the long-term best interests of this question.

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary dealt with the theme of action and political will. He gave a number of excellent examples of the demonstration of political will and action on the part of the Government which have been seen already. However, the Parliamentary Secretary is aware that there are some questions among the public as to the Government's will to proceed with some of these particular items, even though they have been announced.

Are the rumours about the postponement of the automobile emission standards correct? Second, as far as the amendments to the Environmental Contaminants Act are concerned, has the Government made a firm commitment to proceed with those amendments and, if so, when will we see them introduced in the House?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, as far as the automobile emissions are concerned, unfortunately, The Toronto Star editorial which dealt with this subject raised some unnecessary questions. If the research had been better, they would understand that the Government has not backed down. The controls were always meant to be effective for the 1988 models to be introduced in September, 1987.

We realized that some 1987 models would still be in production after September. The only change is to indicate that all 1988 models, as originally intended, will be affected. We will not impose these controls on companies finishing their 1987 model runs.

I believe it is general knowledge that automobile companies usually change their model runs in September. Rather than backing down, we have listened to the realistic proposals of the companies to let them finish their 1987 models production.

The Hon. Member asked about the Environmental Contaminants Act. We have a specific agenda and program for Cabinet submission. I do not want to give the Hon. Member a firm date for introduction to the House, but we do have a proposal and I hope we will be able to follow through with it. I think he will be happy with the time frame.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 46, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald)—Public Service—Smoking in the workplace. (b) Request for legislation; the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell)—Insurance—Increase in premiums; the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia)—Environmental Affairs—proposed Guelph Toxicology Centre. (b) Minister's position.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 63—THE ENVIRONMENT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Caccia:

That this House condemns the Government for its failure to recognize the importance attributed by Canadians to toxic chemicals in water and other elements of the environment.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the spokesman on the environment for the Official Opposition has moved:

That this House condemns the Government for its failure to recognize the importance attributed by Canadians to toxic chemicals in water and other elements of the environment.

This is an important and timely motion. All one has to do to confirm this is to look at the report which was published only last December by a special committee to review the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreements, of the Royal Society of Canada and the National Research Council of the United States of America. That report, speaking about the water quality of the Great Lakes, said that "toxic contaminants represented the greatest immediate threat to the interests of future generations". Unfortunately they represent a serious threat to the present generation as well. The fact is that when it comes to toxic chemicals in our environment, we are facing a serious situation, one that is potentially even more serious if urgent action is not taken right now.

• (1620)

Earlier today the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), speaking on behalf of the Government, tried to say that the Government has recognized the problem and its priority. To see if this is correct, let us look at the record just in connection with the problem of toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River. If we look at that situation, we see that in September, 1985, test results were released showing that what is now known as the toxic chemical blob on the bottom of the St. Clair River contained, among other dangerous chemicals, dioxin, one of the most toxic chemicals known to mankind. The fact of the matter is that the sample which provided these test results was taken more than a year before, in August, 1984. That sample was taken by divers working for the Great Lakes Institute of the University of Windsor, funded by a program provided by the previous Liberal Government. The Minister has never explained, at least not in any satisfactory way, why his Department sat on that sample for more than a year without completing the test results showing the dangerous toxic chemical situation connected with the toxic blob on the bottom of the St. Clair River. He has never explained why that sample was not tested immediately or why the action about which he talked in respect of setting up the joint task force of the federal and provincial Governments was not taken a year earlier, immediately after the sample was originally taken by divers working for the Great Lakes Institute of the University of Windsor.

Let us be clear about the situation we are describing. As I have said, dioxin is considered to be one of the most dangerous chemicals known to mankind. Last week it was disclosed that tests taken only recently showed traces of dioxin in the drinking water of Windsor and three other communities downstream from the St. Clair River. The federal Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) said that the amounts found in these tests were minute and below acceptable levels for safety. I will say more about that in a minute, but I repeat again that the Minister has never explained the delay in completing the tests on the sample taken in August, 1984 by the divers working for the Great Lakes Institute of the University of Windsor.

Let us be clear. When we are talking about acceptable standards for dioxin, the evidence is that the standard about which we are talking is a temporary standard, one set only in the last week or so. It is an interim standard, which means that it is one capable of being adjusted downward in the light of further research and further evidence. We are not talking about a standard which is the result of final conclusions by experts working in the field of toxic chemicals. In fact, what is disturbing about all this is that the United States Environmental Protection Agency indicated that there was no safe level for dioxins. Yet, the federal Minister of the Environment tries to tell us that there is nothing to worry about. He made a statement based upon what he admitted was only an interim or temporary standard, one capable of adjustment in the future. Perhaps the adjustment will be upward, but also, unfortunately, it could be downward.

It seems that if we are to take seriously what the Minister of National Health and Welfare said today and what the Minister of the Environment has said on other occasions about their desire to deal with the problem of toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River and toxic chemicals in our environment generally, I think there has to be a greater recognition than can be found in the Ministers' words so far that the situation is serious. We on all sides of the House, on behalf of millions of Canadians and their families and future generations, must insist that immediate action be taken by federal and provincial Governments to deal with the problem of toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River and generally in our environment, and what it means for people in downriver communities such as my own City of Windsor. There must be a commitment to action, a definite plan and a definite timetable for taking and implementing the action in question. We have not seen this as yet.

When I speak of the need for commitment by the federal Minister of the Environment and the federal Government, I say that to show that commitment the Minister must stop his practice of casting aside, downgrading publicly in the House, any of his own experts who raise concerns beyond those he is willing to recognize at the time those concerns are expressed. The House will remember how, in response to a question from myself, the Minister rejected and cast aside Darryl Cowell, one of his officials, who told the press that the leakage of toxic chemical wastes in the St. Clair River could create the biggest hazardous waste problem in North America. We now see from the report of the joint federal-provincial task force which looked into the situation in the St. Clair River that we cannot at all exclude the possibility that toxic chemicals are leaking into the river from dump sites or wells used for the storage of toxic chemicals. That report leaves that question very much open and calls for further detailed studies into the whole matter of possible leakage of toxic chemicals into the St. Clair River. Therefore, when the official of the Minister's Department, Mr. Cowell, pointed out the possibility that it could be the source of a great ecological disaster, the last thing the Minister should have done was to reject and rebuke publicly the official in question.

The Minister should not have done the same thing to Dr. Hallett of his Department when Dr. Hallett released disturbing findings about the levels of PCBs in the food we eat. When I raised that question in the House, the Minister said that Dr. Hallett was speaking at a seminar and, since it was not organized by his Department, it did not represent something which could be given credence and weight by his Department. I do not think it should have made any difference where Dr. Hallett made his remarks, provided they were worthy of attention and support. There seems to be confirmation of Doctor Hallett's concerns in the report of the Royal Society of Canada and the National Research Council of the United States, which I referred to earlier. I personally do not think it was completely a coincidence that Doctor Hallett chose to leave the Department shortly after he was publicly disavowed in this House by the Minister of the Environment. Certainly the Minister has not been creating in his Department a congenial atmosphere for experts who dare to challenge the Minister's own conventional knowledge on the subject. Also, as I have said previously, people like Doctor Hallett, I would think, know a lot more about the problem than does the Minister.

In addition to real commitment by the Minister and his Government, more commitment than has been shown until now, there has to be a meaningful plan of action. That plan must involve steps to be taken right now. So far the Minister's only answer is to say that at some vague, unspecified future date the Minister will be presenting legislation to this House to update the Environmental Contaminants Act. Well, surely that is not the answer, or at least it is only a very small part of the answer.

The report of the special task force of federal and provincial officials on the St. Clair River shows how much more has to be done. That report contains 24 specific and pointed recommendations. What concerns me, and I am sure it concerns the people of my community of Windsor and the people of the entire Great Lakes region, is that at no time in this debate today did the Government state clearly and specifically that it would accept and act on those 24 recommendations as a matter of urgency. Surely this is a minimum requirement to expect from this Government if it is to be taken seriously when it says it has a real commitment to taking action on toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River, in the Great Lakes, and in our environment generally.

This report shows that the industries are discharging into the St. Clair River higher levels of toxic chemicals than existing standards permit. The report also says that there are many toxic chemicals which are being discharged by companies into the St. Clair River for which standards do not yet exist. Surely immediate action should be taken on this. Certainly because of the lack of absolute certainty about what are safe standards for dioxin in drinking water, if they exist at all, the federal Government must act now, together with the provinces, to help municipalities like Windsor to have special filtration systems installed to remove dioxin from its drinking water, no matter how small the traces. The Minister certainly should not have rejected, as he did in the House, the utility of activated charcoal systems as an urgent response to the findings of dioxin in the drinking water of Windsor and three other area communities.

It is interesting that while the Minister says that activated charcoal filtration systems do not have to be made available to communities like Windsor at this time, only last week the Ontario Minister of the Environment was willing to say that he is working on setting up and installing, at the very least, some special experimental filtration systems in the area. I would strongly urge the Minister to consider the community of Windsor as one of the ideal and logical places for such a system.

I say that the burden of protecting Canadians from toxic chemicals in the water they drink should not have to fall primarily on the municipalities and municipal taxpayers. Surely, the real priority must be on stopping the discharge, the dumping of toxic chemicals by industry into the St. Clair River and other waterways. Our ultimate objective has to be zero discharge of contaminants by industry. Our real priority must be to stop these toxic chemicals from being discharged into our lakes and rivers. Governments must ensure that firms are in a position to have up-to-date equipment to ensure that there are no accidental spills. Governments might take steps to ensure that the amount of toxic chemicals that is above agreed on standards is not allowed to be dumped through sewer systems into our lakes and rivers.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, there are steps the federal Government can and must take now, steps of the kind outlined by the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia). The Government could reinstate the two-year accelerated write-offs under the Income Tax Act as an incentive to industry to get modern treatment equipment in place, to separate sewers, to put in modern monitoring systems, and to ensure that the highest standards of waste treatment are applied. This must be a step taken to buttress having in place an adequate and up-to-date system of control regulation. This is one of the key recommendations of the special task force of officials, federal and provincial, on the St. Clair River problem. They make clear that we do not have an adequate system of control regulation in place now, and this has to be an urgent priority. We must, as the report says:

> —develop control regulation for the industries and municipalities discharging to the St. Clair River. Through this control regulation, the Ministry of the Environment, with the scientific and technical support of the DOE, will establish effluent concentrations and loading levels for all parameters which, if exceeded, will trigger additional monitoring, remedial measures, abatement and prosecution.

The federal Government could well offer a special program for municipalities like Sarnia and Windsor and provide financial assistance for the installation of equipment facilities for the best possible treatment of residential, commercial and industrial waste waters that pass through municipal sewer systems. Also, as pointed out by the Hon. Member for Davenport and as I pointed out in the House last fall, the federal Government could create a super fund with interested provincial Governments to remove toxic waste from dumps, and therefore remove the source of future problems at leaking dumps. As I have said, this is something I called for in the House last fall, months ago, and at that time the Minister said he was interested in working to set up a super fund with the Province of Ontario. So far I have seen no progress by the Minister to carry out and put into reality the expression of interest he put forward in response to my question to the House last fall. This is something which has to be a priority of the Minister if we are to take him seriously and if we are to take the Government seriously.

We have to act now. We should not have to ask Canadians to even consider trade-offs between jobs in industries like those along the St. Clair River and their health and safety and the health and safety of their families and of the communities in which they live. The manufacturing and the installation of appropriate control technology is itself a form of job creating economic activity. The costs of control of toxic chemicals over time are surely less than the costs of the destruction of our environment, of our forests, of our waters, and of the loss of health of millions of Canadians through excess ingestion of toxic chemicals.

The report of the National Research Council and of the Canadian Royal Society points out the economical benefits of damage avoided, but it also deals with the terrible consequences of not dealing with toxic chemicals and the pollution they create right now. I raised this matter in the House on a number of occasions in the past and I am pleased to raise it in the House today to join in the cry for action by my colleagues in the Official Opposition, and hopefully other Members as well. I am speaking out for my constituents and my community, but also I am speaking out for all Canadians. We need more than the pious but unfortunately all too empty words of the Government and its representatives. So far we have seen nothing more. That is not enough for the people of my community and the people of Canada. Let us have action. Without that action, the Government stands justly condemned by present and future generations.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, I have two short questions. First, it should be very clear to the Hon. Member that neither the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) nor the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) have underestimated or tried in any way to suggest that the finding of dioxins in drinking water is unimportant or does not need to have serious attention paid to it. It is critical and is something worthy of further management in whatever way is necessary.

Is the Member aware that the Minister of National Health and Welfare has set forth, as of last week when this was first discovered, a joint federal-provincial task force to establish guidelines that were absent before? Is the Member aware that although we are talking about levels measured in parts per quadrillion, there have never been any levels established? The amounts actually found are 1/150,000. According to the interim level that has been established, which is perhaps not safe totally—maybe there is no safe level—we are now measuring this at 1/150,000 of that interim level.

I can only say that we are measuring quadrillions this year but next year we may be able to measure that very large difference the other way when we start adding zeros between what actually was accomplished when the Member was in Government and what he is saying now.

Second, did his Government not stop funding municipalities in 1980 for the major infrastructure problems they faced because of major costs? There was no intention and no effort, as far as I could see, to re-open those arrangements with the provinces. Is the Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) aware of ERDA under which provinces can indicate to what they want to allocate federal funds? Is he aware of the Pearse Report? And what about the question which the Minister of the Environment has asked all provincial Ministers? Thing like that will certainly be discussed in the future.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, we have to deal with the situation as it is today.

Mr. Murta: No.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): We have new and troubling information about the extent of toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River. We have new and troubling information about dioxins being found in Windsor's drinking water and other communities in the lower Great Lakes area. As his Minister said last week, we are finding out about this because of new technology which did not exist two years ago.

Mr. Shields: Come on, Herb.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): If, as the Minister said, the technology did not exist to show up these levels of dioxins, surely the answer is to deal with this new situation and be willing to put in place a new agreement to help municipalities like Windsor install, on an urgent basis, additional special filtration systems and, if necessary, to upgrade water filtration systems. I am not saying that one should be in a panic, but surely one has to take this information seriously.

The Hon. Member admitted that the standard in question is only an interim standard. It is a standard that is subject to change. Let us hope that further work will show that the standard might well be raised. There is a risk that it might have to be lowered. The lack of concern exhibited by the Hon. Member any turn out—and I hope it does not—to be misplaced. After all, there is other evidence. The Environmental Protection Agency of the United States said there is no safe level for dioxins.

While I recognize what was announced last week, I say that that is no reason for complancency. I say that that is no reason not to say that the situation of which we have become aware in the last few weeks is not grounds for a new program. That is no reason for the federal Government not to help municipalities install the necessary filtration equipment to remove dioxins and other chemicals that may turn up through new testing technology, until such time, at the very least, that further developments of that technology show the current concern of my constituents is not justified.

I do not think you can slough off that concern simply by talking about parts per million and further task forces. That is not good enough.

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I was interested in what the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) had to say in the debate. I could not help but think to myself that if I had been a newspaper reporter and was reporting on today's debate, particularly on the comments made by the Member for Windsor West, my column would probably start out something like: "Where were you, Herb Gray, when I needed you ? Signed, former Minister of the Environment, the Member for Davenport".

No one doubts for a moment the sincerity and the genuine concern for the environment displayed in this House over the past four or five years by the former Minister of the Environment. No one doubts that sincerity, Mr. Speaker. No one doubts for the moment the effort he made on behalf of all Canadians to focus the attention of all Canadians and Members of this House on the problems facing the environment and what they will do in the future. I have a genuine feeling of concern for the effort the Member put forward because he put it forward at a time when he was Minister of the Environment. His effort, though, fell on deaf ears.

Would the Member for Windsor West not agree that the climate in Canada when he was in Cabinet was such that his Government could not even talk sensibly to the various provinces and get co-operative action to attack some of these very serious problems facing the environment? Co-operation was non-existent during the latter years of his Government, particularly during the years when the Hon. Member for Davenport was the Minister for the Environment. No agreement was reached and truly very little discussion was taking place.

Would the Member for Windsor West not agree that the climate has now changed to such an extent that a number of agreements have been concluded? Action is taking place. There have been agreements with the provinces. An announcement was made on May 15 concerning further restrictions on the use and release of PCBs. PCBs are not something new that new technology has discovered, all of a sudden in the past year and a half discovered. We knew PCBs existed and were a detriment to health and to the environment if not handled and disposed of in a proper manner. We knew that three and four years ago. Where was the Member for Windsor West when the Member for Davenport was crying for assistance from his Cabinet colleague?

Our Government has, with co-operation of the provinces implemented tough new emission standards for cars and light duty trucks. These standards were announced on March 6.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): What tough new emissions?

Mr. Shields: We know also that the Member for Davenport was trying to get these things implemented and had absolutely no co-operation from his Cabinet or his Cabinet colleague, the Member for Windsor West at that time.

Would the Member for Windsor West not agree that he is now speaking out of both sides of his mouth? One time when he—

An Hon. Member: This is a speech. Where is the question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but we do not have much time left in the question and comment period. I would like to give the floor to the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

• (1650)

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): The Hon. Member's lengthy question can be handled with a very short reply.

Mr. Shields: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: First, we will hear the point of order of the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields).

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I still have a number of examples in my question—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has taken so far more than three minutes so far in the ten which are allotted to questions and comments. Unfortunately, there is but one minute left. We will hear from the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): The Hon. Member for Davenport has a tremendous record of achievement as Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): For example, he achieved not one but two agreements on acid rain with the provinces in March, 1984 and June, 1984. I am proud to say that he was able to achieve agreements such as this with the support of myself, other members of the Cabinet and the entire Liberal caucus.

The work in respect of emission standards on automobiles, about which Hon. Members opposite boast, had actually begun and was well under way at the time the Government changed. All Hon. Members opposite are doing is coasting on the momentun built up by the Hon. Member for Davenport when he was Minister.

When it comes to co-operation with the provinces, after experiences such as the provinces had with this Government in terms of the cut-backs on transfer payments and other programs, they are already starting to look back with sadness and nostalgia on what they now see were the golden days of co-operation with the previous Liberal Government. They are waiting for the moment which will come when the Canadian people will throw out this incompetent and untrustworthy Conservative Government so that they can get a better Government, a Liberal Government, in order to obtain real co-operation with respect to the environment and a great many other matters.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Unfortunately, the time allotted for questions and comments is over. Resuming debate with the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse).

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to be able to participate in this debate, particularly because the motion before us was moved by a former Minister of the Environment, the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), the constituency in which I had the great pleasure to grow up. Those were happier days when Davenport was a Conservative riding.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stackhouse: Nonetheless, I am happy that the attention of the House today is focused upon the subject before us. There are few concerns of the Canadian people more vital than the concern for the environment. I welcome the Hon. Member's motion. However, when I read it, I have to think that the motion itself borders on the hypocritical. It condemns the Government for ignoring the concerns of the people with respect to the development of their environment. It ignores the types of constant achievement to which reference has been made and which should be reiterated. The Government has taken many steps in this regard.

For example, it found some $300 million to help cut sulphur dioxide emissions in half by the year 1994. It has imposed more stringent emission standards for motor vehicles, cars and trucks, which will cut hydrocarbons by 80 per cent and which will bring about significant reductions in the emissions of carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxides and evaporative emissions. All of this will contribute significantly to the well-being of the environment and its impact upon our water supply. These are steps which have been taken. These are actions which have been declared and which are to take effect in the near future. The Government has also imposed stricter requirements for the transportation of PCBs.

I regret the wording of the motion. Not only does it ignore the positive actions which have been taken by the Government, it ignores the reality that we have a problem now. We have a problem now for two reasons. The first reason is the limited action which the previous Government and the previous Minister of the Environment took, something which is not recognized at all in the motion or in the presentations of Hon. Members thus far. Second, it ignores the reality that there is no quick fix available to anyone regardless of what Party is in office and regardless of who is the Minister. This is a problem of such enormormity and complexity that we are simply never going to have an immediate solution. However, we must take seriously the challenge and work progressively step by step and consistently toward keeping it under control and improving our environment.

If we look to some of the reports which are available to us, we will find one report entitled Time Lost, A Demand for Action on Acid Rain. This is a report put out by the Subcommittee on Acid Rain which was appointed during the years of the previous Government. On page 3 of that report we find a reference to the report of a previous committee of the House submitted in October of 1981 entitled Still Waters, which included 38 recommendations. Were they all enacted? Did they all become operative? Did they all transform the environment?

One reason for the debate today is that those 38 recommendations did not become fully part of the policies of the Government of the day. Thus, we find the committee of 1981 not having the satisfaction of seeing all its recommendations being put into effect. We find that its successor committee—there was need for another committee just a few years later—stated that the situation is so serious that:

—Canadians, including members of this Sub-committee, who have travelled to the United States to argue for more stringent controls on American polluters, Canadian government inaction and/or obstinacy with respect to domestic controls have been, quite frankly, an embarrasment.

That is how a committee of the House, with a majority of members from the Government of the day, reacted to the Government of which the Hon. Member who moved the motion and the Hon. Member who just gave his address were members. In the view of the committee the lack of inaction and the obstinacy of the previous Government was a cause of embarrasment. These were not simply critics from outside the House or members of the Opposition but Members who supported the Government.

I would like to turn to page 12 of the same report under the heading "Emission Control Standards". On that page there is a reference made to two recommendations which were put into the hands of the Government and of the Minister. It states:

Neither of these recommendations has been adopted by the Federal Government.

On page 13 it states:

The present Canadian regulatory position is therefore an enomaly, is environmentally harmful, and causes acute political embarrasment to Canadians in discussions with U.S. legislators and officials on the need for continental controls on acid rain.

That is the record of the previous Government and the several Ministers of the Environment which it appointed. That is the result—the embarrasment of Canadians generally in negotiating environmental policies with our neighbour to the south.

The report continues on page 41:

Clearly, the attack on acid rain, if it is to be successful, must be a joint Canada-United States effort. Unfortunately, the political will needed to tackle the problem is lacking in the United States.

That is a recognition of reality. We cannot solve the problem on our own, regardless of what Party forms the Government or what Member is the Minister. We need the co-operation of a neighbour with whom we must negotiate. There is no power that we have available to us by which we can compel them to act. We must pursue, as our predecessors did, a process of negotiation, anticipating in negotiation that we can persuade by information, by agreement and by bargaining that some action will be taken. However, let us recognize that if we are to have any sense of reality in the House of Commons at all, then there is no Government that can simply act unilaterally. No Government can simply take action which will not require the agreement of the United States if we are to deal adequately with the problem. So I have to ask why the Official Opposition Party affronts this House of Commons and the rationality of the Canadian people by condemning the Government for not making the environment a perfect situation which this resolution implies is within the scope of the Government, when that Party, having been 20 years in office, found itself incapable of achieving that kind of perfection.

I feel that anyone on this side of the House would border on the irrational if he or she were to say to the Opposition: "Well, you should have made it perfect. You should have achieved an environment in which there would not be a single pollutant in existence". We must have some common sense sometimes, and let us show it by recognizing the achievements which have become part of the Canadian scene in the past 15 months. We should respect as well those achievements which I gladly recognize as part of the record of the previous Government. But we must recognize that there are challenges we must take seriously and work hard at if we are going to carry forward that which we have begun since September, 1984.

Let me point out two difficulties which must be kept in mind in dealing with the environment. First, there is a sociological challenge, which receives all too little recognition in a debate such as we are having today. For this I cite the former United States Ambassador to Canada, the Honourable Adolph W. Schmidt. In addressing the Empire Club of Canada as far back as 1970, he pointed out the significance of two sociological developments. The first was unrestricted population growth which, we could add, escalated rapidly, which put a pressure upon the environmental outlets required for human existence. Coupled with that problem is the challenge of the congestion of population centres. Mr. Schmidt projected then that it was foreseeable that in a short time 90 per cent of the population of the United States would be living in five urban regions. Just conceive, Mr. Speaker, the pressure that would put upon the environment surrounding those regions.

Faced with the kind of population development we are experiencing on both sides of the border, and faced with the congestion of urban population, let us recognize that, yes, here is a challenge we have to face, a challenge which must be given a priority over and over again year by year. Let us not be so foolhardy as to believe or imply that some Government is just going to wave a magic legislative or budgetary wand and put an end to pollution.

Let us also face the reality of the political challenge. I quote from a short article in the New York Times which was authored by Charles Phelps which points out that the eight top polluting industries, sources of high sulphur coal, are in states with major deposits of that coal. These eight states hold 105 votes in the House of Representatives, which takes them half way to a majority in that chamber. In contrast, three quarters of the low sulphur coal in the United States is in three states with only six votes in the House of Representatives. That means that when we endeavour to negotiate a correction to the acid rain situation, which affects us all so significantly in Canada, we are up against a major political challenge. There is no way in which we can resolve that challenge and overcome it in the short term and by some magic that we, or another Party in this Chamber, might possess. Let us recognize the foolishness of thinking that we in Ottawa or those in Washington are going to solve it as if sweet reason were enough. We are dealing with a political reality. We have to keep pressing as did our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in seeing that it was on the agenda of the Quebec Summit and as he did in seeing that there was a top level commission appointed to report to the President and the Prime Minister. It was composed of such distinguished Canadian citizens as the former Premier of Ontario, the Honourable William Davis. My reason for referring to that is simply to indicate that the kind of progress we are enjoying under this Government and the kind of progress we achieved under the previous Government is expressive of reality. There is no revolutionary solution. We must expect that evolution will be the way we will follow. We will have to move step by step towards achieving the kind of environment we could wish for ourselves and for those who come after.

However, let us not ignore the positive results which that process has achieved. For example, in another study report to which I will refer called Water is a Mainstream Issue, an interim report of an inquiry on federal water supply which was appointed by the previous Government, there is a reference to the kind of progress we have enjoyed by working together and seeking co-operation from the provincial Governments as well as Governments of certain States of the Union and the American Government itself. We should not ignore the kind of achievement to which this report refers, and I quote:

> Notable progress has been made with point sources, such as effluent flow from major industries like pulp and paper and petroleum refining, and from municipal sewage treatment plants.

The report does not ignore the lack of progress in other areas and in other connections, and we should not ignore it. But let us remember and recognize that certain things are being achieved and certain progress is being made. The report goes on to ask a question which this House should not ignore and which the report does not answer. It is this:

> Can governmental controls catch up with the number and variety of pollutants? Do we need control of chemicals from creation to disposal, as urged by many environmentalists?

If the answer is yes, then certainly that answer is not going to receive quick actualization by any government that will command a majority in this House. It is going to have to be a matter of steady, gradual, but not slow, progress, and to that end this Government is clearly committed.

We should also recognize the wisdom of the International Joint Commission which states in its most recent report:

> Significant achievements have been recorded in controlling certain types and sources of pollution, particularly in the areas of point source control of phosphorus and in the control of a number of other conventional pollutants.

That report was dated December 31, 1984. I think very seriously about the condition of the lake on which my city borders, and where I have spent all of my life. I have seen the lake lose the kind of purity which it enjoyed in my boyhood. I recognize the progress which has been achieved by both federal and provincial Governments of both Parties in each instance, and I would like to take a moment to draw to the attention of the House that one great day each year which shows what can happen when there is environmental action taken. That is the annual salmon hunt sponsored by the Toronto Star. A large supply of salmon was put into Lake Ontario to see, first, if the lake could provide a life-giving environment again, and to see as well if a lampreycide was effective. In 1979 each salmon caught in that great tournament showed the marks of lamprey upon it, each one. However, in 1985 only one in 75 caught had those marks. I cite that not to say we are doing wonders, let us rest on our laurels and be proud of our record. I say it to point out how positive accomplishments can be achieved. We must keep working at this cause. A solution is possible, but it is not going to be done tomorrow morning. We have to keep working at it. The only way to do that is by steady, progressive action.

I want to close my remarks by simply saying this. One of the great political leaders of this country was the Hon. Tommy Douglas. I had a great affection and respect for him. He was in this House when I first arrived here. He used to close almost every speech with these words: "I shall not sleep, nor shall my sword stay idle in my hands, till we have built Jerusalem in this green and pleasant land". He spoke those words so frequently that one might have thought they were part of the Regina Manifesto. Actually they were written by the English poet William Blake. He was referring not to the prospect of socialism but to the horror of the impact of the Industrial Revolution upon rural England. I recall those words now as indicating the direction in which this House should go, one of moving forward progressively, taking those actions we can to bring that day which is not tomorrow or next year, but a day nonetheless within our scope, a day when we can have once again a green and pleasant land.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, most Members were somewhat moved by those last sentences—

Mr. Hicks: We were moved by the whole speech.

Mr. Baker: —from the English poet and mystic, William Blake. The complete quotation is as follows:

Bring me my bow of burning gold!
Bring me my arrows of desire!
Bring me my spear, oh clouds unfold!
Bring me my chariot of fire!

Listen to the rest of the words:

I will not cease from mental fight,
Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand,
Till we have built Jerusalem
In England's green and pleasant land.

I would like to ask the Hon. Member a question arising from those words.

Mr. Shields: Be nice.

Mr. Baker: I will be nice in putting the question but I do not think the question is very nice. Keeping in mind those words of Mr. Blake, how does the Hon. Member rationalize the incredible cuts made by his Government in toxicology research along with several scientific projects examining the effect chemicals had on wildlife?

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, my response is very simple, as befits the question.

Mr. Gauthier: You are going to get it. Now, be careful.

Mr. Stackhouse: He is going to get it first. We have a budget item which his Government never had. Some $300 million was budgeted for a combined research and action program which was designed to bring greater control of acid rain. As well, we have the emission standards this Government has put forward. We also have to recognize that the reason some Departments have been cut, and they all have worthy programs, is the deficit his Government allowed to accrue over many years. That deficit had a polluting effect on the fiscal and economic environment of this country.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, one of the themes put forward by Liberal Members today is that the Government does not have the resolve to deal with environmental matters. This Government has increased the fines for poaching in national parks from $5,000 to $150,000. Does the Hon. Member agree that that is a great example of this Government's determination to clean up our environment and encourage respect for that environment?

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I would respond in the affirmative to the question. That policy is in keeping with not only this Conservative Government but also that of the Right Hon. John George Diefenbaker himself. He convened the first federal provincial conference on ecology. He initiated the steps which were vital to any action being taken at all. Without that kind of co-operation between Ottawa and the provinces we cannot move forward. It is because of Mr. Diefenbaker's initiatives that we have been able to have such progress as we have enjoyed.

Ms. Copps: Given the Hon. Member's association with the Toronto area, which is obviously very concerned about the level of toxicity in the Great Lakes and in particular in Lake Ontario, does the Hon. Member support the Government's decision to abolish the berring-gull program? That program studied deformities in herring-gull eggs and the possible effect on human health in the future. Did he support the Government's cut-back of that program?

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I certainly support the Government's reinstatement of the longitudinal studies and the care with which it is addressing the prospect of studies which will be required to make progress in this area.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, my question was specifically whether he supported the abolition of the herring-gull studies.

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I may not have given the Hon. Member the answer she wanted but I think I gave her the answer that was apposite.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Copps: I did not hear an answer. I may have gone "deef", as it were, but I did not hear an answer. Does he or does he not support the cut-back in that program?

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I can only suggest that if she did not hear the answer, the Hon. Member should adjust her hearing-aid. I indicated that there has been a reinstatement of the program and we are moving ahead as a Government on that program.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, does the Hon. Member support the cut-back in government involvement in the Guelph Toxicology Centre?

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, the kind of support that the Government needs is that which is required for the positive programs it has initiated. One can regret the cut-back of any research effort and we can regret that with respect to many disciplines of thought and inquiry, including those which are part of our concern today. We regret the budget situation which we inherited, and which made it vital for us to do many things that we do not want to do. Two academic colleagues of mine from former times were in my office this morning, Mr. Speaker. They bring their just concerns about the future of scientific and scholarly research in the country. They recognize, as do all reasonable Canadians, that we are faced with a situation which is not of our devising and that we cannot excape that situation. We have to solve it. I invite the Hon. Member to support us in our attempts, through the next Budget, to solve it.

• (1720)

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a comment first. I would like to commend the Hon. Member for his very excellent address. I think he goes to the very root of all programs when he suggests that we have to cut our deficit and get our spending under control. If we do not get our spending under control, there will be no money to fight toxic wastes, no money for social programs, no money for old age pensions, and no money for child welfare. Consequently, the Hon. Member goes right to the very root of these issues.

A lot of the cuts that we have made were to do away with duplication. I met a group of scientists in Alberta who said that they are doing this research in their university and they asked why the Government is doing it elsewhere. When the Hon. Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) made cuts in the environmental program it was to do away with duplication. There were no cuts of anything that is vital at this time. Research is always important, but it is most important, as well, that we get control of our finances or we will not have any money at all to carry out research or control of toxic wastes. Were most of the cuts that were made in the environmental area not due to extravagance or duplication?

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I gladly concur in the reasoning which the Hon. Member has expressed. I add as well that it is an indication of the Government's interest in the subject of research in the environment that the needs of the Guelph research centre as a centre that can serve the well-being of Canada are undergoing reassessment. In this instance, as in so many, the Government is doing all that it can with the finances available to it. When we face the reality that most of the income tax revenue received by the Government is going to pay off interest on the debt, we see that there is very little surplus left for anything else.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, if we can escape from some of the partisan gibes which are going back and forth, I think that this particular issue—

Ms. Copps: The NDP is totally non-partisan.

Mr. Langdon: Not when it comes to the Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) I fear, but on issues we try to be. We have in front of us an immense challenge which, frankly, is a challenge at which the previous Government failed, and which the present Government, to its credit, is attempting to confront. The Minister has, I think, shown some concern and enthusiasm and, frankly, some very healthy skepticism with respect to the claims of industry with regard to the issue of toxic pollution of our waterways.

The challenge is extremely great and I must ask, at the start of a speech like this, whether it is a challenge that it is possible for this Minister ultimately to meet successfully. Basically what we as a people and a country are doing is using our earth and our surroundings as a garbage can. We are using it for garbage which is perhaps the most dangerous, hazardous and vicious that this planet has ever had to confront. We have to change our approach if we are going to succeed in creating a future for the generations that will come after us.

I think the challenge is particularly difficult for three reasons, Mr. Speaker. First, we have a scientific challenge which is very, very complicated. We can learn from this scientific challenge by looking at occupational health as an issue. We have discovered, for instance, that people who used asbestos to produce essential items during wartime found that the asbestos that they worked with, without thinking that it was dangerous, was in fact a time bomb. That time bomb did not hit days later, weeks later, or months later, but years later. Often that time bomb did not hit because of large amounts of asbestos, but because of extremely minute particles of that material which, in a cumulative way, over time, led to people developing the most horrendous possible diseases which debilitated them.

There has not been a single study done on the octadioxin which has just been identified in the drinking water of my community of Windsor, to determine its long-run, cumulative effect on people who imbibe it in a long-run, cumulative way.

Second, there is a lack of knowledge which, fortunately, we are starting to do something about. As an example of that lack of knowledge, Mr. Speaker, out of the 58 chemicals that make up the infamous blob in the St. Clair River, only three have standards which tell us how much can get into fish before those fish are dangerous to people. That lack of knowledge can only be seen as incredibly dangerous to the people who fish in Lake St. Clair in my constituency.

We have a challenge too, Mr. Speaker, to recognize that we as a country are committed to economic development and that our people have come to expect it. Yet, that economic development must recognize the environment as a central concern or else it is not an economic development that is counting the costs of economic growth. Those are intellectual and political challenges that are very, very tough for any Government, whether Conservative, Liberal, or Socialist. Those are very difficult intellectural challenges to face. Above all, however, they are challenges that must be faced with urgency and a passionate commitment to do something about them. Unfortunately, it is not yet possible to detect such action on the part of the Government.

Let me take Members of the House through the recent happenings on the St. Clair River. It is a drama which in fact turned out to be far more interesting, explosive and powerful to this country than the divers who first brought up the dioxin-laden globs in 1984 which set this struggle off first thought. In fact, it was one of those divers who came to my office a year after those tests were first conducted in 1984 and said that they discovered something but still have not heard from the various ministries, including Liberal and Conservative ministries, what that dangerous chemical was.

We began to ask questions about that discovery, what it was and how dangerous. It was only as those questions began to be asked in September, 1985—a year after those tests had been conducted—that the Ministries decided to begin retesting. It was then that they discovered that indeed the great toxic blob had in fact not disappeared but, even worse, was now present in concentrations twice as high as had been true when it was discovered in 1984. Furthermore, it was not the easy form of octadioxin that the Minister talked about but the much more dangerous toxic and hazardous forms of tetradioxin, in heavier concentrations than had been true in 1984.

Yet, a whole year had passed without any action being taken to clean up that disaster. Finally, after a second test was conducted which showed these dangerous concentrations and after pushing and prodding, the federal Minister and Ontario Minister finally took action and a joint study was conducted. That joint study, unlike virtually any other study I have seen, did not come up with a set of conclusions. It came up with a set of questions. I strongly suggest to Members of the House that they read through the recommendations of this recent report on St. Clair River pollution investigations. They will find repeatedly that the recommendations do not give an answer to what needs to be done but recommend what should be investigated further. It states, for example, that we must investigate the Michigan site and the source of the dioxins and furons.

In short, the report in itself if not an answer but an action plan to find an answer. That is why the crucial question that faces the Government right now is what it will do about the 24 recommendations in this report. If it can tell the House of Commons today that it will follow up on every single recommendation as urgently, fully and comprehensively as necessary to find the answer, it will finally have taken the first step toward convincing those who care about the environment that it actually has that sense of urgency and commitment.

I want to talk briefly about the politics of this issue. Frankly, I have found it to be a political learning experience. It has been exciting to use information, sometimes gathered from unorthodox sources, and to pose questions effectively so that the Government will move to take an issue seriously, as I believe it has done with respect to the St. Clair River issue. My colleague says that the Government needed that kick in the butt to get at this concern.

However, there is another part of the politics of this issue that has also been fascinating, that is, to see the Conservative Members of Parliament who represent the areas which are sources of this pollution try to defend their localities. Surely it is possible, as indeed the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) did today, for people to get up in the House and admit past mistakes. Surely it is possible for communities or companies to admit that they have not given the proper attention to pollution control.

Why was it necessary that the politics of this issue had to be raised by those Members who represent constituencies downriver from this pollution spill? It should have been Members of Parliament from the spill areas themselves who pushed this issue. Perhaps it is the nature of politics in our society that it is up to us in our communities downriver from these pollution crises to make the issue come alive and give it the drama which brings the attention that, in turn, builds the focus of Government on the issue as a crucial question which must be dealt with and corrected.

We have a new report. It is a report which carries with it the urgency of this issue. It is a report which tells us in the communities downriver from the St. Clair that we can expect some reassurance from the Government that it will take our problems seriously. It is a report which must be acted upon. I ask the Government, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Ministers responsible to take this report with the seriousness that it deserves. I ask them to see to it, in respect of the 24 recommendations in the report, that the possibility of underground sources of pollution is probed completely, and to see to it that the problems of fish in Lake St. Clair are studied as they deserve to be studied for the people of my constituency. Also I ask them to see to it that a year from today, instead of three of the 58 chemicals having standards for fish quality, all 58 have full standards for fish quality and for water quality, and that we have a sense of the cumulative impact of these different chemicals mixing together.

I should like to refer to our fight in Windsor. The Clean Water Alliance has been formed and met yesterday with 300 people to raise concerns about this issue. It is not only a fight for our selfish interests in the St. Clair River basin. It is a fight for change across the country to make pollution the urgent issue which it has to be. As our environment critic, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Brids Hill (Mr. Blaikie), has made clear, it is a fight for a safe drinking water Act, for an environmental bill of rights, for speedy introduction of tough amendments to the Environmental Contaminants Act, and for a tough Canadian response to the refusal of the Environmental Protection Agency so far to act in the Niagara situation.

We must stop using our earth and our environment as a garbage can. We must, on a non-partisan basis throughout the House, make a commitment to our future and the future of our children. We must make this issue have the urgency it deserves as we head toward the end of the 20th century and the beginning of the 21st century.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, I assume the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) was unable to hear the Minister's press conference in which he answered the specific questions that he asked. The report made 24 recommendations. The Minister in fact embraced the report and acted very specifically on three points which were made. In addition, he indicated a number of other specific Government actions.

Is the Hon. Member aware of the fact that the Department of the Environment has committed its full scientific and technical expertise to assist the Province of Ontario to implement the new limits on the effluents in order to control the toxic discharge? Second, the Department has already begun to improve water quality surveillance of the St. Clair River in order to get more accurate information on the amount of contaminant present in the river and to assess effectiveness of remedial action. Finally, the Department, under the Canada-United States upper Great Lakes connecting channels study, has begun investigating the ground-water contamination in the St. Clair area. This effort will be stepped up and in the next few years will focus on the Sarnia area.

Did the Hon. Member understand from the Minister's speech, which I quoted this morning, that we intend to implement the environmental bill of rights and the stronger measures in the Environmental Contaminants Act which he suggests? We do take the matter seriously including, despite other comments, the question of dioxins. There is no question that there may be no safe level of anything. We learned this about radioactivity; it may well hold true for many chemicals. There is no question about that, but there is a question about the politicizing of it in the way that has been done by some members of the Opposition.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, I should like to make two comments. Politicizing an issue, as it has turned out in this case, has the effect of making an issue come alive and making an issue ultimately lead to action. I certainly make no apologies for attempting to highlight this issue at each stage throughout the last six months. It has been important that such highlighting has taken place, not for my sake, but for the sake of the constituents whom I represent. They are the people who are downriver from this pollution; frankly they are the people I am here to protect.

In respect of the specifics of the Minister's comments at the press conference, yes, I have the press release. Frankly it is the press release which disturbs me because it simply makes reference to three points out of a total of 24 recommendations. If in accepting the report the Minister also accepts that he will attempt to implement, in conjunction with the Government of Ontario, each of the recommendations in the report, I do not have problems; I have a sense of security. However, there are detailed recommendations in the report, as I am certain the Parliamentary Secretary knows, which are in fact quite expensive. I refer to recommendation No. 8 on page 28 which reads as follows:

> To ascertain the extent of possible ground-water contamination in the Sarnia area, studies are required to
> (i) Define the ground-water flow pattern in the freshwater aquifer.
> (ii) Assess water quality in the freshwater aquifer and seepage discharge to the St. Clair River.
> (iii) Determine the hydraulic head relationships between the freshwater acquifer, the rock layers above the Detroit River Group, the deep well disposal zone and the caverns and the Salina formation.

To put a recommendation of that sort into effect is an expensive commitment. I recognize that, and I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary recognizes it as well. Nevertheless, it is a commitment which scientific experts at the meeting yesterday in Windsor said was absolutely crucial if we were to get to the bottom of the whole problem. Once more I make the point to the Parliamentary Secretary, and through him to the Minister, that we have so far had a sense of respect for the Minister, but that respect has to be earned continually. It is an unfortunate thing about politics. People are always asking: "What did you do for me today?" The Minister, the Parliamentary Secretary and the Government have to make a commitment to put financial resources behind the kinds of studies which will give us the answers. This voluminous and quite excellent report agreed that studies had to be set upon to give us answers.

• (1750)

Mr. Gurbin: I think if the Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) will refer to the "blues" he will find that the hydrological studies were one of the three specific things I mentioned. I cannot tell him the full extent of that. I understand that they are extensive. We are committing ourselves for at least two years, most particularly, because of the material we found in the CN tunnel, and it can only come from the ground-water. Unquestionably, the Minister understands what he is talking about. He has committed our resources to that. I cannot tell him how much that is or what that means in total. In so far as possible the Minister has committed the Government to undertaking whatever recommendations are necessary to achieve a satisfactory end.

Mr. Langdon: I have just a final comment, Mr. Speaker. I am certainly very, very pleased to hear that. That, in fact, was the question which I asked yesterday at this session in Windsor at which Environment Canada people were present. But I think what the Minister should aim at doing, and what will certainly give a sense of security to people, not just in Windsor but in each of those communities that has experienced dioxins in their water, is for the Minister to get up and make a statement indicating in financial terms the kind of allocation that is being made, with what urgency that undertaking is being made and, therefore, how quickly we can expect to see comprehensive and effective results brought about in what for us, frankly, has been a pretty traumatic experience of continual new pieces of news that potentially affect our environment and our people potentially very greatly.

Mr. Winegard: Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) because I think he has hit the nail on the head on many of the issues facing us today, because he is interested in research, and because the issue has been raised in this House on several occasions over the past few months. I would like to comment upon what the Canadian Centre for Toxicology can do in terms of this significant problem. When the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) was here this morning he talked about the problems of identification and control measurement, which we know are very difficult, and which take us into areas of high technology in which we have not been before.

More important, the Minister talked about advice to groups, and the kind of information that is required, the kind of thing the Hon. Member has just been talking about. One of the best things that ever happened to the Canadian Centre for Toxicology was when this Government said no in November of 1984, because that centre then went to work, and instead of producing a centre that was going to be operated primarily by government, it went back to private industry and said, "You have to help even more than you had planned to do". I watched those plans grow over the years. When it moves off the ground, this is going to be a good, trim, hard-hitting research centre which will deliver the kind of information that this country needs. It will be oriented more towards private enterprise than it would have been before this Government said, "Take it back, do something with it".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I please ask the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) for a short answer or a short comment?

Mr. Langdon: A short answer from me is almost impossible. I will say two things; first, I disagree with the Hon. Member, despite his compliments, that the way to progress is to cut back some of our research centres. I would simply make the point that one of the crucial resources which we have had in the Windsor area in attempting to understand this whole problem and to get action on it has been the Great Lakes Research Institute with its excellent record of detailed research throughout the St. Clair River Basin itself. I hope that we in Windsor will not have to face the way of improving our Great Lakes Research Institute which the Member has suggested for Guelph.

I would like to finish with just one strong plea, and that is, that we keep in mind the urgency of this issue in the sense of not letting it become a choice between economics and environmental protection, but instead that we make it quite clear that our commitment—and I say this as an economist—can be to economic growth that is environmentally sound and environmentally committed to the future.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Unfortunately, there is no more time.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin by congratulating the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) for introducing into the public forum an issue which is obviously of concern to every Canadian. That issue is specifically not only the particular problems which have been identified and are being examined in the St. Clair River, but also the general question of water quality and the concerns surrounding the level of toxic chemicals which are being found not only in the St. Clair River but also in other major bodies of water. As a Member of Parliament for Hamilton East I have in my riding an area known as the Windermere basin, which has been identified by the International Joint Commission as one of the most polluted bodies of water in North America. Naturally when we read daily accounts in the media about the difficulty facing the people in the St. Clair River area and those people who are concerned about their drinking water, we too, in the frontier of Lake Ontario have to be concerned in the same way because I think that there is a general feeling among the public that the whole story has yet to be revealed.

In fact, there are a lot of questions, and I have constituents who call my office and say, "Is the water safe to drink? We have seen in the City of Toronto on a number of occasions the beaches being closed and, in fact, even the water itself being examined for levels of toxicity which are absolutely unacceptable. I am sorry to say that even in my own community there is not a regular, systematic review done to measure the level of dioxin toxicity in the drinking water. It happens to be a piecemeal operation which does not address the very serious concerns which have forced many constituents into the private market to buy their water.

I would respectfully differ with the position of the Hon. Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard) who has suggested that somehow we will solve this problem by turning over our research capacity to the private sector. It is pretty clear that the private sector will have to concern itself first and foremost with the bottom line and with more immediate results. One of the benefits which had been derived from programs like the herring-gull program, which was snuffed out by this Government, and snuffed out not only by the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) but aided and abetted by the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret), and the slasher himself, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen).

This particular program was prepared to take a long-term look and to develop the kind of data base necessary to attack the problem in Lake Ontario which services the drinking water of more than three million people in its direct vicinity. Instead, in a penny ante approach to long-term environmental solutions, the Minister decided to cut off that program and to say that even though we were seeing deformities being identified in herring gull eggs we were not prepared to carry on with this program because it did not meet the Deputy Prime Minister's bottom line, even though at the time that same Conservative Government promised that the environmental project and the research would not be cut.

We know, Mr. Speaker, that that is simply not the case. We also know, with the cut-backs and the decision by the Government of Canada not to fund to Guelph Toxicology Centre, that the Government is abdicating its responsibility to the private sector suggesting that the private sector will be there to pick up the pieces. The private sector has some immediate short-term concerns relating to productivity and the bottom line. The private sector is not prepared to look at an over-all question of water quality, for example, in the area of the Great Lakes.

Let us take a look at the question of food production and how toxic chemicals impinge upon the food production on a daily basis. We have seen more and more reports about irradiation and what is being allowed to be done to preserve the shelf life of our food in a way that could be extremely detrimental to the health of every Canadian.

I would suggest that private companies in the business of food production will not hold back on irradiation because the long term effects of that process may not be known for many years. We have a responsibility in government to provide leadership in these most difficult areas. I say they are difficult because they involve co-operation at the federal, provincial and municipal levels.

I heard Members on the government side of the House citing, chapter and verse, the shortcomings of the previous Liberal Government with respect to its environmental policy. I would like to point out that one of the first and most effective actions of the new Liberal Government in Ontario has been to introduce a spills Bill which, for the first time, will allow companies, unions, workers and the public to have a handle on just what kind of toxic chemicals are being dealt with in industry across Ontario, information which was not only kept secret by the previous Conservative Government, but over which it chose to distribute its own products, its own toxic wines in our liquor stores.

The Liberal Government in Ontario has made it a number one priority not only to introduce the spills Bill but to act on legislation originally recommended by the then Leader of the Liberal Party, now Chairman of the Science Council, Stuart Smith. The Liberal Party has been on the record on this issue in Ontario for many years and finally has had an opportunity to put forth legislation which will make a change in the Province of Ontario.

At the same time, what has been the federal Government's response? Looking specifically at the question of acid rain, we see that the federal Government in its own intuitive nature has decided to appoint a dollar a year man, who is overpaid at that, in the person of the former Premier of Ontario. While this person was the Premier of the Province of Ontario—and I see the Hon. Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Darling) here, the issue crosses Party lines and concerns all Members—he was responsible for the sulphur dioxide emissions from Ontario Hydro, a Crown corporation. Ontario Hydro is one of the heaviest contributors to the acid rain problem in the Province of Ontario. The Premier chose to turn his back on the problem to protect Ontario Hydro and encouraged the belching of sulphur dioxide into the air by refusing to demand that stacks be properly equipped with scrubbers to prevent further emissions and further continuation of acid rain falling on the Ontario environment. But what does this person get as a reward for his decision to allow Ontario Hydro to pollute not only our air but also to create acid rain in the thousands of pounds? He is appointed the federal Government's envoy to the United States to deal with the American Government on the issue. He is to convince the Americans, in particular the President, who is reluctant to recognize that there is a problem that acid rain is an international problem demanding international solutions and a specific commitment on both sides of the Great Lakes.

I would suggest that his powers of persuasion will be rather muted in light of his own record when Premier of the Province of Ontario. He had an opportunity to do something but did nothing and sat aside without calling Ontario Hydro to task for polluting the air and for the acid rain problems which were directly the result of sulphur dioxide emissions from coal-fired generating stations which Ontario Hydro continues to use.

A number of questions have been raised by constituents, by mothers breast-feeding their children, by older men and women who feel they might be particularly vulnerable when the water quality is not as it could be. What we have seen from the Government, notwithstanding the rhetoric, the press conferences, the mutual meetings between Canada and the United States, which looked very positive at first blush, is a Government, a Minister of the Environment, and the Minister's predecessor, that have stood by and done nothing while the slasher in the person of the Deputy Prime Minister as well as the President of the Treasury Board have torn the guts out of the long-term environmental studies and long-term environmental programs which would have allowed us to come to grips with the problem.

If the current Minister were serious about his mandate, one of the first things he should do is to seek in the next Budget an immediate reinstatement of the herring-gull program. This would give the people on the Great Lakes an indication of just what is happening to the quality of water, something all of us hold very dear.

Without that assurance, Mr. Speaker, and with the Government's continual refusal to take its own responsibility when it comes to research, research that could be done by the Guelph Toxicology Centre, we are sacrificing the long-term interests and the long-term health of our citizens for short-term economic deficit slashing and short-term private sector gain.

We have only to look at the so-called advice that was given by the Deputy Prime Minister in his addendum to the Wilson Economic Statement of November 9, 1984, when he examined the kinds of research to be funded by the Government. He said that he wanted fewer researchers, and more specific, immediate results from that research.

If that were the mandate given to those involved in developing the Salk vaccine, it is possible we would never have had the vaccine simply because the bottom line did not show up in the first year, the second year, the third year or the fourth year.

The analogy could be made, albeit somewhat removed, in the context of the Government's decision to privatize and sell off to a foreign corporation the de Havilland corporation at all costs. Again, you see a sort of private sector mentality. "Let us give up our responsibility in the area of aerospace development". It is the same as the Government saying it is prepared to give up its leadership role in the examination of water quality in the Great Lakes. What about the question of toxicology which would have been a basis for investigation through the Guelph Toxicology Centre?

Unfortunately, I think the Government is falling behind the people in its consideration of what people are prepared to pay for. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the people of Canada are prepared to fund, not only at current levels but more generously, programs which deal with the environment and research which can lead us to making this place liveable for our children.

The Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) called the environment a garbage dump. I think that analogy bears some study. Not only do we have municipalities across Canada that are not in a position to deal with their own solid waste other than to dump it directly into major rivers, but we also have toxic chemicals being disposed of illegally in many cases and in a fashion which can leech into the ground and affect directly the water quality of many areas, like the riding of Hamilton East and the Windermere basin.

We know that some of the problems that arose from the Windermere basin were directly the result of the immoral activities of companies prepared to dump toxic waste without any bills of lading and without any proper and legal manifests simply because they wanted to get rid of what could be a highly toxic chemical. They were not prepared to spend the money they should have spent to dispose of it.

Unfortunately, if we as a Government say we will leave our environmental problems up to the private sector, then once again we are giving to them a role which should be a role taken by Government. The private sector is not in a position to develop the kind of research programs that will tell us 10 or 15 years down the road what action we must take to prevent the contamination of our water supply system.

With respect to the issue of the St. Clair River—the infamous blob as it has come to be known across the country—we have seen a number of factors which have impinged upon the situation to create a climate of fear and uncertainty for the area residents. We have also seen some concerns with respect to their very health and, indeed, the potential of carcinogenic materials as they directly relate to the constituents.

I think the people of Canada are prepared to see more funds set aside in the Budget and the adoption of more stringent regulations as they relate, for example, to automobile emissions. I say this because the people of Canada are ahead of our politicians when it comes to the development of a system of clean water and air supply. I say that coming from the most industrialized riding in Canada with such heavy industry as that which takes place at the Steel Company of Canada, Dofasco, and many of the minor, secondary industries which spin off and develop their products as a result of the primary industry. The residents of Hamilton East are prepared to say: "Yes, we want to see more budget money spent on the environment. We want to see more budget money devoted to the study of those herring gull eggs. We want to know what is happening to individuals and whether, in fact, unborn children will suffer potential birth defects as a result of the water we are drinking". People want to know, and they are prepared to pay the price for the knowledge.

The Minister involved said that the Government was faced with budget cuts and it had to deal with the past excesses of Liberal Governments. In fact, the long-term ramification of the decision to terminate or cut back government funding in these important areas is that 10 years hence we will not even be able to identify the problem, never mind seek solutions. In fact, most thinking people—and I believe most Canadians have given this particular matter serious consideration—will recognize that it is in the best economic interest of Hamilton East. It is in the best economic interest of Ontario and of Canada to begin to adopt strategies and approaches which will not only identify the problem through government-led research but which will also develop solutions. That means some tough legislation, such as the Ontario spills Bill which the Liberal Government of Ontario was prepared to introduce. It means some tough negotiations at the federal level. It means we have to appoint negotiators who are prepared to go in and fight for the rights of Canada, not simply appoint one-dollar-a-year people who are using the office as a camouflage for their own private activities and their own directorships. We know from statements which have been made by the Canadian Coalition on Acid Rain that there are some real concerns about the role the Canadian negotiator has played in the whole issue and whether or not he is really committed and fighting for Canada.

We must address some of the most difficult questions, for example, that of water quality. We know that water pollution is now costing us hundreds of millions of dollars a year in economic losses. This is because, in many areas, surface water will not be fit for household consumption, recreation or even industrial use until extensively treated. So there is the cost of treatment to be considered. Also, there is the fact that water quality in many areas appears to be declining. Unfortunately, I think many Canadians are of the belief that the St. Clair River situation is not an isolated case. I believe the Hon. Member for Davenport put the question well in this respect.

We can also look to the Niagara River near the great metropolis of Hamilton in the Niagara fruit belt in this regard. The Niagara River has become the receptacle for industrial chemical toxic substances which have, in fact, led to the discovery of more dioxins. A little more than a year ago in the riding of Hamilton East dioxin trace contaminants were found in the air emitting from one of our local sewage treatment facilities.

It seems to me that this is not simply a question of the St. Clair River and the blob. The blob is an example of what happens when a Government turns its back on research. That is what happens when a Government states, as this Government has stated: "We don't have time for research with respect to the herring gull program. We don't have the time to look at water quality from the public perspective. We will leave it to the private sector". The private sector has a role to play; but in this particular case it is the federal Government, in co-operation with provincial and municipal Governments, which should be taking the lead, in concert with companies which are prepared to share the burden. Frankly, with respect to an issue which concerns every Canadian, the leadership role should come from the federal Government.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine).

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, as you know, 20 million tons of sulphur dioxide are being released into the atmosphere, and I may add this did not start yesterday.

I want to ask the Members opposite what they were doing when they were in power about those millions of tons of sulphur dioxide. There were 4 million tons being released in eastern Canada.

Today, they are asking the questions, but what did you do about this during the last two decades? What did you do? There are thirteen salmon rivers in Nova Scotia that are now closed because you never did anything about the environment. In Ontario, 1,600 lakes are now dead, that is, they have no plant or animal life, because you did nothing for the last twenty years.

Today, I listened to the former Minister of the Environment making his speech. I would ask him to give the House some account of his past record and take his subject more seriously.

There are one million lakes in the province of Quebec that are going down the drain. Six hundred hunting and fishing camps will no longer be used, because of your neglect. Half of our Canadian forests have been getting acid rain for fifteen years, and you never lifted a finger. And today, you present motions in the House of Commons. And you expect us to take you seriously? With a record like that?

We, on the other hand, have opened negotiations, in fact, we now have ongoing negotiations with the United States in order to do something about the environment here in Canada.

So, I would urge you to be a little more serious and think about your motions. Think about your past record!

Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. I will not have time for further comments.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I think if the Hon. Member had been able to speak a little longer, he might have learned something, since he is obviously rather new to the subject.

Personally, I have been talking about this for years. The Hon. Member might have known, if he had listened to what I said about acid rain, that in many areas there is a provincial responsibility, for instance, at Ontario Hydro and Hydro-Québec, and this is also true of sulphur dioxide emissions. The provinces determine how many tons of emissions may be released into the atmosphere.

The Hon. Member would have known that in March 1984, for the first time, the federal Liberal Government managed to have an agreement signed by all the provinces in which they promised a 50 per cent reduction in acid rain within ten years of signing the agreement.

And now, the federal Conservative Government claims nothing had been done at the federal level up to now. The Hon. Member may have heard about the recommendations made by the Committee on Acid Rain, consisting of Members of all parties, and whose excellent chairman, the former Member for Sault-Sainte-Marie, made a number of recommendations in this respect.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but unfortunately, our time is up.

It being 6:18 p.m., it is my duty to inform the House that in accordance with Standing Order 63(11), the proceedings on the motion have expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 46 deemed to have been moved.

PUBLIC SERVICE—SMOKING IN THE WORKPLACE. (B) REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, on January 17 I asked extremely important questions of the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) regarding the right of employees to have clean air at their place of work. The President of the Treasury Board replied as follows:

—we have indeed come to an agreement with the unions to ensure that all employees will be able to work in a healthy environment.

He thought that the tribunal which had ruled in favour of an employee, Peter Wilson, who had taken a grievance to it, had gone too far because this tribunal had ruled in favour of the employee and in favour of the right to have clean air at the place of work. However, the President of the Treasury Board said:

—this Government and the Treasury Board want all our employees to work in a healthy environment.

● (1820)

If that were true, I would indeed be happy. Since then I have received a letter from the Public Service Alliance of Canada which has been supporting this employee in his grievance. This is the devastating reply to the comments of these two Ministers, and I quote:

I must take this opportunity to correct the misconceptions that the President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of National Health and Welfare have left. It is correct that the Public Service Alliance of Canada and other public service unions negotiated "Smoking Guidelines". There is ample documentation and correspondence which passed between the unions and the employer to demonstrate that it was the employer who blocked at every step of the way any attempt to put in place significant controls on smoking in the work place. The guidelines which I have attached are watered down beyond recognition from what the public service unions, and particularly the Public Service Alliance, originally put forth as a smoking guideline. Unfortunately, this was the most we could extract from the employer.

I have the guidelines and it is very clear what the Government had to say and what those on the staff side wanted. The staff wanted a clean working environment and the government did not give a damn, being perfectly content in deciding that smokers have the right to pollute the working environment and non-smokers have the right to put a little sign up saying "bad air, please go away". Of course, we know all too well that these kinds of regulations are totally ineffective. However, PSAC and other unions have vigorously put forward very sane and sensible proposals for decent air at the workplace and protection for all of their employees, and separate provisions for smoking employees in areas which are separately ventilated. This is what all of the experts tell us is absolutely essential if we are going to have a genuine safe place of work.

The report of the tribunal which ruled in favour of Peter Wilson is quite interesting. It is quite shameful when we see the stance the Government is taking, actually bringing in an expert to argue that lung cancer has not really killed all that many passive smokers. How many thousands of deaths does the Government want before it will take this problem seriously? We have plenty of evidence of its seriousness. There are 35,000 deaths in Canada a year from tobacco-related diseases, 5,000 of whom have been passive smokers. Is that not enough deaths for Treasury Board to take some action?

There have been all kinds of ridiculous discussions about what a dangerous substance is and it has been suggested that tobacco smoke has really not been proven to be dangerous. It sounds like the tobacco companies which, over the last 20 years, tried to argue that tobacco smoke does not cause lung cancer, heart disease or emphysema. It is an absolutely shameful exhibition on the part of the Government.

There was a very sad grievance by Mr. Tinpower of Air Canada, an employee who is trying to get clean air at his place of work. In fact, it was ruled that he was not in "imminent" danger. We know that lung cancer, emphysema and all kinds of bronchial ailments are not caused instantly. Therefore an employee cannot claim "imminent" danger. It is not as if there is some unsafe condition where some piece of equipment is going to fall apart and kill someone. However, we do know that tobacco smoke does cause death in very large numbers. To say that because it will not do so in the next 10 minutes somehow makes this danger any more acceptable is being very shortsighted indeed. I think this goes to show that what we need is adequate legislation which does not confine "dangers" to dangers which happen in the next 10 minutes but long-term dangers such as lung cancer, emphysema and heart disease.

The Canadian Medical Association Journal is very clear on this subject, and I quote:

> The sidestream smoke that both smokers and nonsmokers are forced to inhale from an "idling" cigarette may contain 40 times more of some potent carcinogens, such as N-nitrosodimethylamine, than the mainstream smoke that smokers willingly draw into their lungs. Indeed, smokers may be at even greater risk than nonsmokers from the carcinogens in sidestream smoke.

An article in the Canadian Medical Association Journal contains very clear recommendations as to what the Government should be doing in response to the seriousness of this problem, and I quote:

> The current patchwork legislation that aggregates smokers in public places and still allows them to pollute the common airspace must be superseded by a master plan for a smoke-free indoor environment. Legislation must oblige employers, merchants and transport companies to provide smoke-free environments for anyone who is not smoking.

This is only elementary common decency. Unfortunately, the Minister of National Health and Welfare has been loath to take any kind of action whatsoever. He talks about co-operation with the unions, but they have to push to get even the most insipid kind of guidelines passed. The Minister has been asked to take action here on the Hill because we have a very poor working environment. My own employees have complained to me that they are forced, in doing work for me, to work in places which are unsafe for their health. The Minister of National Health and Welfare has not been willing to take any action whatsoever. It is time that we had some action. Employees deserve the right to a smoke-free environment. We know that the dangers are, and these polite decisions on the part of Government—that it is a matter of cosy negotiations, and it does not come through when it is asked—is not enough.

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that Hon. Members are aware that the guidelines on minimizing the effects of tobacco smoke in federal workplaces have been approved by the Treasury Board and were issued to all Public Service departments and agencies one year ago, in February of 1985. These guidelines were initially developed by a joint committee of Treasury Board Secretariat and Health and Welfare Canada officials, and were subsequently submitted to the National Joint Council of Public Service Unions, which is the official forum for consultation between the employer and public service unions. It was agreed by officials of Treasury Board, Health and Welfare Canada and the National Joint Council that the application of these guidelines would be based, principally, upon courtesy and consideration between smokers and non-smokers.

Through these guidelines, Departments are directed to develop and publish their own detailed internal departmental policies on smoking in the workplace in consultation with their employees. This policy of consultation, rather than acting as a dictator, is an essential requirement for ensuring the development and successful application of an internal policy that will achieve the intent of minimizing the effects of tobacco smoke in the workplace.

Departmental policies must, however, include the designation of certain areas as non-smoking areas, such as elevators, stairwells, change rooms, computer rooms, clinics, health units, service wickets and counters, and any other locations where the public is served. Departments may also designate all or part of cafeterias, waiting rooms and lounges as non-smoking areas. Unless there is consensus among the participants, smoking is not to be permitted during meetings.

Other areas in the workplace may be designated as non-smoking or smoking areas through local consultation and agreement. "No Smoking" signs or symbols are to be made available for installation in all designated non-smoking areas. Employer and union participants in the National Joint Council recognize that these guidelines are an important first step in addressing this issue. However, it has been agreed by both parties that within a prescribed period of time, further joint consultation will take place to upgrade the guidelines to give effect to more stringent requirements. In fact, the National Joint Council is beginning consultation on the present policy guidelines with the view to reviewing and upgrading the guidelines into a standard of smoking in the workplace.

These consultations will take place with the benefit of direct input of health experts of Health and Welfare Canada who are represented in the National Joint Council in the Standing Committee of that forum which reviews and makes recommendations concerning occupational safety and health and physical working conditions within the Public Service of Canada. I am sure that the joint input of health professionals, employee and departmental representatives will evolve in the development of an appropriate and practicable standard which, when implemented, will respond to this important issue.

INSURANCE—INCREASE IN PREMIUMS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few comments about the property and casualty insurance business in Canada. On January 14, 1986, I asked the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) what the Government planned to do in conjunction with her provincial counterparts to help the crisis which has overtaken the insurance industry. I would hope that both levels of Government will go about analysing this situation in a calm and reasoned way.

When I spoke earlier on this topic, I mentioned the outlandishly high claims which are taking over this industry. Those claims, of course, result in soaring premium rates. I made the point that I hoped we did not become the California of the North. We have to work on this with other levels of Government because we have different responsibilities in this regard. The federal responsibility is to ensure that federally-regulated companies are solvent. I understand the Minister has some further steps to take in this regard.

I think the industry's problems can be summarized in three categories: availability; affordability; and solvency. I need not remind people that this industry is one of the most competitive in the country. As I understand it, no one company has as much as 10 per cent of market share. I think the largest has 8 per cent. I also think it is true to say that over the last number of years Canadians have been able to obtain insurance at some very reasonable rates, thanks to the aggressive tactics of hundreds and hundreds of general insurance agents. I have a couple of friends in this business in my own riding, Gordon Grant and Don Bell. They have been in the business for a number of years and share my concern that some steps have to be taken.

I would like to highlight some of the trends which have developed in this industry. As of the end of 1984 there were 243 regulated companies under federal jurisdiction in Canada. Another 77 companies are registered under various provincial jurisdictions. It is no secret this industry goes in cycles. It has had good times and not so good times. The industry's profits come from two sources. One is the underwriting profit, which is the difference between claims and earned premiums. The other is investment income. Between 1983 and 1984, while written and earned premiums increased $300 million, claims increased by $700 million.

The industry paid out $1.10 for every dollar of earned premium. However, in the liability section, which is where most of the problems have been, the industry paid out $1.38 for every dollar of premium earned. That has to have a dramatic and negative effect in several areas. One of those areas is the return on equity, or the return to the investor. That has gone from 9.4 per cent in 1982 to 10.9 per cent in 1983, and then a drastic drop to 1.2 per cent in 1984. We have not seen the 1985 results as yet but I am quite sure they will be just as bad as 1984.

Court claims are of particular concern to a number of people in the industry, as well as the average Canadian. A youngster in Brampton was awarded over $6 million just recently. There was a large award recently to a couple whose grandchild was the victim. In a good number of cases these claims are very valid, but when they are larger, two things happen. We all have to pay higher premiums to start with. In some cases the claims are so astronomical that the companies themselves cannot even begin to measure the risk inherent in a given type of coverage and therefore they back out of the whole market. Then no one can get insurance at any cost. We have seen that happen to a number of groups over the past few weeks, including our national ski team. There are also day care centres, school boards, municipalities and others who are running the risk of having no insurance at all. The Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) proposed that the federal Government put together a reinsurance package. That may be necessary, Mr. Speaker, because I gather that the world-wide capacity for reinsurance has dropped by a factor of about 75 per cent in just the last year or two.

Affordability is another key problem. People want insurance, but at what cost? The St. John's Ambulance group, which I mentioned in my previous remarks, saw its annual premium for liability go from $16,000 for $2 million of liability insurance coverage to $205,000 for $1 million of coverage.

Another specific example is that of a 20-year old trying to insure a 1979 Malibu for $250 deductible collision insurance and $500,000 liability insurance. He took the pro driving course and is a university student. In his case the insurance was going to cost $2,228. Something is out of control when we have premiums like this.

I would like to summarize, Mr. Speaker, by saying that this industry has had its cycles. The executives and leaders in that industry feel that they will work through it. The solvency aspect, which is the responsibility of the federal Government, is critical in this case. If people pay these premiums and have a claim, we must ensure that they are able to collect. I have confidence that this issue is getting a good amount of attention at all levels of Government. I do not believe we need strong government intervention in this. We do not need a knee-jerk reaction. We do not need the Government to set rates. This is a very competitive area and I think the market-place will render the proper premiums. Therefore, while I encourage each level of Government to take on its responsibilities, let us do it in a calm and reasonable way for the benefit of all Canadians.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell) for his very informed comments. It is clear that this issue has touched individuals and groups and communities of Canadians across the country. It is becoming an increasing concern for both them and the Government.

The Member for Don Valley East has ascribed the main problem to the level of court awards. While this is one aspect of the issue, the Minister is aware that there are other aspects and other considerations, some of which the Member touched on. In addition to court awards, I think the situation is also caused by poor operating results in companies, fear on the part of the industry about the uncertainty of future liability awards, and by a significant tightening of the reinsurance market as the Member mentioned. Of course, all the factors are interrelated and the situation is not confined only to Canada but is evident in other countries as well.

The Hon. Member asks what the federal Government will do to limit the costs. He has also indicated his desire not to have the Government become too directly involved. At the same time, I think we should establish very clearly the levels of responsibility. Since reform of the law of tort is not under federal jurisdiction, we must leave this aspect to the province. On the other hand, we do have responsibility with regard to the solvency standards and regulatory requirements.

One thing which should be noted is that the Province of Ontario, which has the responsibility for any direct changes, has indicated that there will be a task force. We have indicated that the federal Minister will co-operate fully with that task force and is prepared to assist in any way possible. The Minister thought she could be particularly helpful in the areas of solvency standards, the area in which the federal Government has some jurisdiction. A considerable amount of work has already been done in this area.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, the Government will press ahead with legislation with regard to strengthening the solvency standards and regulatory requirements for insurance companies. The objective is to promote financial stability which, in turn, should encourage new capital and better availability of reinsurance which would ease capacity problems and stabilize the premiums paid by customers.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS—PROPOSED GUELPH TOXICOLOGY CENTRE. (B) MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, on November 4 I asked the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) about the future of the Toxicology Centre in Guelph which had been scrapped by the Conservative Government in November of 1984. I inquired whether he would be willing to reverse that decision. As reported on page 8322 of Hansard, he indicated to the House: "I am not even sure it is true that the Government has cancelled the plan for the Toxicology Centre . . . That proposal still stands."

• (1840)

On December 14, when approached in Toronto by Christie MacLaren of The Globe and Mail, the same Minister is quoted as saying: "I am first of all subject to Government restraint and I have to work within that. I cannot expect the Department of the Environment to be totally exempted from such Government austerity". He was replying to a question related to the Toxicology Centre in Guelph and seemed to indicate that he was not sure whether such a centre would receive financing.

We in the Opposition would like to see the Government take a clear position. Where does that centre stand at the present time? Is it, as the Minister said on November 4, a proposal that still stands and, if so, when will an announcement be made and what will be the nature of that announcement? Is it a matter that the Minister put aside, as he did one month later, claiming that he has to be subject to the restraints of the Government?

It is very difficult to accept its reasoning on toxic chemicals and the necessity to put a centre aside on the basis of restraint because the first thought that comes to mind is whether the Government puts the health of Canadians in second place. I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary would be the last one who would want to assert that proposition. However, it is hard to believe that the Government would still vacillate on this matter in light of what has happened in recent months.

Let me draw the attention of the Parliamentary Secretary to the study that was published in December. It is a one-year report from the Royal Society of Canada and the United States National Research Council which concluded that the 37 million people living in the Great Lakes region ingest more toxic chemicals through their food and drinking water than anyone else on the continent. The scientists are reported as saying that they are concerned about the unknown long-term effects that minute amounts of many toxic chemicals may have on human health. The scientists are recorded as calling for an urgent clean-up of the many sources of air and water pollution, but also for research into the nature of the chemicals themselves and how they affect human health. However, when this report was announced in December, the recommendations for research came a year after the Government announced Budget cuts ending numerous studies on how pesticides and other toxic chemicals affected wildlife and after plans were scrapped to build the Guelph Toxicology Centre.

It seems that the Government does not know how to make up its mind and that we have a Minister who is giving vague answers just for the sake of keeping alive a hope, without really giving an indication as to what we might expect in the future. I find that kind of behaviour reprehensible because I believe the Canadian public and the scientific community are entitled to have an answer now. This has been dragging for too long. If the decision on December 4, 1984, when the centre was scrapped still stands, say so. However, do not raise false hopes with a statement in the House on November 4, 1985, then make a statement in Toronto which seems to wipe out every hope. The subject matter is too important for this kind of political game. I am sure that the Parliamentary Secretary, in his straightforward manner, will want to remove the doubts and come clean with the Opposition on that matter on behalf of his Minister.

● (1845)

Evidently, the question behind all this is one which has been in our minds all day long—when will the Government come to its senses and realize that the economy is in danger when environmental research is cut, dropped or given up? Research and better knowledge and information on toxic chemicals in this part of the industrialized world in North America mean in practical terms the protection of our water and the protection of our health because we all depend upon water. In the long term it also means the protection of the viability of our economy because water is obviously an essential element. If the substances in water are not understood, and if we cannot take remedial action because we do not understand clearly what is going on, in the long term we will certainly pay.

I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary has a very clear reply on the Guelph Toxicology Centre.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, there is no question that in the long run we will all pay for our sins, whatever they are. I have not read the comment which the Hon. Mmember quoted from a Toronto newspaper, so I am not sure whether that newspaper report is precisely true. I certainly see no confusion in what I understand compared with what the Minsiter said in the House. To make it very clear for the Hon. Member, he knows full well that the funds for the toxicology centre were cancelled in the November 8 statement. He has already been told enough times the rationale for that. Quite clearly it was to take a look in a comprehensive fashion at our research policy.

We have four toxicology research centres in Canada—Laval, Sherbrooke, Saskatoon and Vancouver. We have had three assessments of our research activities in Canada. One was conducted through Environment Canada, one through the National Research Council, and one through the Science Council of Canada. Those reports have in fact been completed. However, for the purposes of clarification—and I do not know whether the Hon. Member will be satisfied—the proposal as such has never gone away. There are people who continue to be very interested and there are people who have been actively working on that proposal and have made representations which the Government is seriously considering and looking at, in light of the modification of the representations and in light of the assessments which have been made on toxicology research right across the country. It is an example of a comprehensive look at a situation which we in government consider to be of utmost importance and which we intend to satisfy with a national water policy. In many areas of Government we have taken an active role and have displayed active leadership. We intend to continue.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being six o'clock p.m., this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 o'clock a.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 63—PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway) moved:

That this House demands that the Government instruct Petro-Canada and its retail outlets to reduce their prices at the pump by six cents a litre, a move which would enable Petro-Canada to fulfil one of its basic purposes which is to provide Canada with reasonable energy prices.

He said: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me to lead off in this very important debate, which at the moment is a major issue in the country. It is an issue which the Government is going to hear more and more about as there is a tax and consumer revolt out there in the country. Members will soon, if not already, be inundated with letters, telegrams saying, "Enough is enough", and that "the price of gasoline in Canada has gone too high".

Canadians are paying too much for gasoline at the pumps and for their home heating oil. The world price of oil is dramatically declining, but Canadians are being hosed at the pump. This Government, led by the present Energy Minister, is doing absolutely nothing about it. It is simply the friend of the big oil companies. It has forgotten the Canadian consumer. I say to the Government it forgets the Canadian consumer at its peril. Oil prices have come down 30 per cent since December 6, 1985; from $29 U.S. a barrel to $20 U.S. a barrel on January 28. Prices are even lower than that and still falling, and Canadians know that. Those who live close to the border can drive across and see that prices on the American side are dramatically lower. Contrary to what the Minister of Energy told me and this House last March, they can see that world oil prices are not being passed on. The decline is not being passed on to Canadian consumers.

In the Halifax Chronicle-Herald, January 28, Jim Meek, a very good energy reporter in the country, wrote about an application that was made to the Public Utilities Board there; it is the only jurisdiction in Canada where oil companies have to apply to increase their gasoline prices. I will quote what he says:

Milton Veniot, lawyer for the provincial Government, told the PUB that world oil prices have declined 35 to 40 per cent ($15 per barrel) in the past few weeks. A figure he said was equivalent to 9.4 cents a litre at the pumps.

A Shell Canada official, however, said outside the hearing that the actual figure is closer to 8 cents a litre.

Shell Canada is saying there is a decline in world oil prices which equals at least 8 cents a litre. We are saying in our motion today there should be a 20 per cent drop in pump prices. This is done by lowering the wholesale price by about 20 per cent. Right now the wholesale price of a litre of gas is about 30 cents. Therefore, it should be lowered by 6 cents a litre, and that is the figure in our motion.

The Minister of Energy has said, "Yes, it will take time to pass through the system". There have been cartoons to that effect in The Toronto Sun. "It will take time for it to pass through the system as we have a market system, and it will take time for these dramatic declines to pass through the system". This is tremendously naive on the part of the Minister of Energy. She just does not understand. In my submission that is not the way the industry works. The Government should know this.

There is a very famous report called the "Bertrand Report" done by the Director of Investigation and Research of the Combines Investigation Branch. It is entitled "The State of Competition in the Canadian Petroleum Industry". It was published about four or five years ago. Mr. Bertrand says, and I quote at page 19 of the first volume, right at the beginning:

In the 1958 to 1973 period, the majors—

Meaning the major oil companies.

—consistently used monopolistic practices to restrict competition from the independent sector and to impose the billions of dollars in excess costs on Canadians.

If you look at the way our oil industry works and at the Government's own studies you will see that this is what is called a classic oligopoly, it is non-competitive.

• (1110)

The pump does not immediately reflect declines in the market. I think the Minister is naive, at best, and at worst she is misleading us on this matter. Prices will not go down dramatically right away for two reasons. First, the Government is piling taxes onto the consumer at the pump and second there is an uncompetitive industry.

I looked at the price of gasoline in the Minister's own riding of Vancouver Centre, which is adjacent to my riding of Vancouver-Kingsway. When the Conservative Government took power in September, 1984 the price of gasoline was about 50 cents per litre. In January, 1986 the price was 56.2 cents per litre. Of that increase, about 2.4 cents was in taxes and about 3.8 cents went to the oil companies. We are faced with a combination of the Government increasing taxes and the oil companies increasing profits. The consumer is being hosed at the pump.

To be more specific regarding taxes, since the Conservatives took power, the Government first increased the federal sales tax on gasoline from 9 per cent to 10 per cent in October, 1984, a carryover from the Liberal Government. Then the Government raised the excise tax on gasoline by 2 cents per litre in its May 1985 Budget and this took effect in September, 1985. The Government then increased the federal sales tax again from 10 per cent to 11 per cent on January 1, 1986, and it has scheduled another increase for the excise tax to take effect January 1, 1987. At that time, there will be another increase of 1 cent per litre, also as a result of the Finance Minister's May Budget. The Government keeps piling on taxes at the pump and the provinces enter the picture after that. They tack on an ad valorem tax to the federal tax.

Motorists are saying that enough is enough. I and many of my colleagues have received hundreds and indeed even thousands of coupons from the Canadian Automobile Association saying that the cost of gasoline is discouraging both Canadian and U.S. tourism and damaging our economy, and that the high price is unfair to those who must use their cars to drive to work. They say that motorists are prepared to pay their share of the costs to help build and maintain the highways, but they think it has now become an inequitable tax burden. I agree with the Canadian Automobile Association. We must stop raising taxes at the pump.

In her defence, the Minister says that she needs the money because of the deficit and to pay for social services. There is some truth to that. Yes, the Government does need money to pay for social services. However, I would point to what happened last week in the House of Commons. The House passed Bill C-82 which phased out the petroleum and gas revenue tax to the tune of $5.3 billion up to 1990. The Government gave the oil industry $5.3 billion while telling the motorists at the pump that it needs their money to pay for social services. Why did the Government give all that money to a very rich and fat industry? When the Minister says that we need money for social services, I ask why she passed Bill C-82 which phased out the tax and gave such a great lump sum to the oil industry.

The Government says that we have to give money to the oil industry because it will create 300,000 new jobs. I took a good look at that figure. This is a capital-intensive industry which spends most of its money on equipment, much of it on foreign equipment, and not on job creation. Sure it creates some jobs, but that figure came right out of the brief of the Canadian Petroleum Association, the lobby group for big oil companies which makes submissions to the energy committees of the Senate and the House of Commons.

The Government and the Minister are patsies for the oil companies. It is very simple to be popular, as the Minister has been for the past 10 months, by giving money to the oil companies. However, we finally see that the result is that she is taking money out of the pockets of the motorists.

How poor is this poor oil industry? Imperial Oil just declared year-end profits last year of $680 million. For the last quarter of 1985 when oil prices were going down, its profit was $250 million, a record, up by $50 million for the last quarter. This is outrageous because at the same time the consumer is being milked at the pump.

There is no guarantee that prices will go down at the pump as they drop dramatically at the world level. I would like to indicate why that is so. Yesterday, I phoned Mrs. Cora McAra. She and her husband operate what was once a Gulf station, now a Petro-Canada station at Gravenhurst. I will refer to the notes I made while I was talking to her over the phone. She said that Petro-Canada wanted to have a difference of four-tenths of a litre in price between self-serve and full-service. The McAras wanted two-tenths of a cent a litre because the station down the road had that price and they wanted to compete with it. They even offered to pay the difference out of their own pockets. Petro-Canada refused. The McAras have a contract on consignment so Petro-Canada can dictate prices. However, the contract also indicated that they should be competitive.

A few days later, Imperial Oil, the other station to which I referred, put its price down to 47.9 cents per litre, so the McAras said to hell with it and decided to follow that move since they had to remain competitive. What did Petro-Canada, the instrument of Canadian oil policy, or so we thought, do? It closed the pumps on these poor people.

Mr. Orlikow: That's the free enterprise system.

Mr. Waddell: Yes, that's their system. There was a meeting between the McAras and Petro-Canada. Petro-Canada's representatives said that they were there to chastise and intimidate her. Petro-Canada said it was in the business of making money. If they lowered the price two-tenths of a cent here, the price would have to be lowered in other places and Petro-Canada did not want to do that. It said that this is the way it is going to be so the contract was terminated. The McAras will lose $50,000 because the contract was to go until May 1987. Mrs. McAra told me that lots of Petro-Canada dealers are in the same position. They are not happy because the price is staying high. That is the way Petro-Canada deals with ordinary Canadians and small business people.

The Conservative Government has directed Petro-Canada to act like a private-sector company. The Government is on the way to destroying Petro-Canada with its national policy. This is a perversion of what Petro-Canada was set up to do. Petro-Canada was set up to be a price leader. That is why I have put this motion before the House today. Petro-Canada should be taking the lead in getting prices down but that is not happening, and it could be happening.

I said earlier that this is not a competitive industry. I do not have time to go into detail, but let me say a few things about it. Government Members can refer to various restrictive trade practices hearings that have been going on for the last 10 years to learn why the industry is not competitive. There is the consignment sales trick, the example that occurred with Petro-Canada and the McAras. There is the fighting brands trick. That is simple. That is when the big oil companies form another oil company, pretend it is a small oil company and force small companies out of business or discipline independent dealers. Third, there is the matter of special allowances which control how much gasoline the dealers receive. Finally, there are contracts that restrict sales and purchases. All of this appears in the Bertrand Report.

I looked at the situation in the United States and found that what Mr. Bertrand said in his report was true. He said that one of the problems we have in Canada is that those who refine and wholesale the gas and sell it to the retailers are all the same people because 80 per cent of the industry is controlled by four or five companies. These companies can squeeze out the independents and create an uncompetitive industry. In three states of the United States prices are lower. In those states, there is a law providing that the retailer, the wholesaler and the refiner must be different parties. That is called divestment. California is another state where there are low prices. The reason is that there is lots of refinery capacity there.

● (1120)

What does our Government do in Canada? I note that the Hon. Member from the Montreal area, the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton), is following my speech. Let him tell me why the Government can close those refineries.

[Translation]

Why did the Government of Canada close the refinery in the Montreal area? Because it would lead to higher gas prices, another increase, and again the consumer is the scapegoat of Conservative policies.

[English]

I just say that we in the NDP are fighting for those people in the east end of Montreal in order that their refinery will not be closed, and so that they will have some refinery capacity. We are doing this so that the prices will not be restricted again and put up by the big oil companies. That is exactly what the Conservative back-benchers were saying; and I am reminded of the words of the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) who understands this.

The Government does not have to go as far as I suggest. It could just look at the report of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission. The Director of Investigation and Research in his report to the Commission last fall made a number of recommendations. He said, first, that we should end consignment sales and special allowances. Second, he said that we should end restrictive covenants; and, third, that we should end exclusive dealings. That would work. I ask Hon. Members to consider the McAra situation in this regard. Instead of just having to deal with Petro-Canada, the Government could deal with other oil companies as well and they would not be locked into a contract. That is one way the Government could go, but it is not doing that.

There is another option the Government has, and my Leader, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) has said this in the House. Under Section 7(2) of the Petro-Canada Act, the Government could order Petro-Canada to reduce prices and be a leader, not a follower, as the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) has said. It could be a leader in terms of getting prices down for motorists. I heard the Minister of Energy say that this may be illegal. I cannot see that. The Government is a majority shareholder in Petro-Canada. In fact, it is the only shareholder. Surely, even the majority shareholders of Imperial Oil could order Imperial Oil to do certain things. It is clear that the Government has the power under Section 7(2) of the Petro-Canada Act.

Also, in this regard, I would ask, since when is reducing prices a form of price fixing? I do not think that follows. In fact, I think it is a red herring and a cop-out. The Government could do certain things.

I wish to conclude by saying that we have to be fair in the country. We have to look at the broad view as well. There is a big slump in world oil prices—in fact, a dramatic slump. What we are arguing is that the Canadian consumer should benefit from that slump. Of course, there will be a problem on the other side. People will ask: "What about the Canadian producer?" We in the NDP have never argued for a market price for oil. We do not think there is a real free market in oil when there is OPEC and a few large American multinational oil companies which basically control world market. One or the other group controls the world market.

What has happened by going to world market prices is that the Minister of Energy has taken an enormous gamble by deregulating the industry. That is to say if the price drops dramatically below $20 a barrel, and it goes down into the teens or low teens, then that will create a problem for the western producers. There may be a point where the price becomes too low, and I acknowledge that. I am not advocating that the consumer always receive benefits and that the price go down to the lowest possible price at the pump. We have to keep Canadian industry—and I underline the word Canadian—and small producers alive. We have to watch that situation, and I draw that to the attention of the House. The point is that right now the price of oil is inflated by at least six cents a litre and something has to happen. It is only fair that the consumer receive some benefit because the consumer has not been receiving any benefit from the Government at all.

The Minister of Energy looked weak last week in the House. The Government's energy policy was exposed for what it is. The Minister was great when she was giving money away to the oil companies, but neither she nor her Government has the guts to get in there and protect the Canadian consumer. The Government can do this by using Section 7(2) of the Petro-Canada Act. In fact, it can be a leader instead of a follower.

I say to the Government: This consumer revolt will force action later if no action is taken now. Do not wait for 60 or 90 days in an uncompetitive oil system. Use Petro-Canada now as a leader and force those prices down in order to give the consumer a benefit. In this way all Canadians, through lower interest rates, increased purchasing power, and so on, will benefit. That is the intent of my motion today.

Therefore, to summarize, my motion reads as follows:

That this House demands that the government instruct Petro-Canada and its retail outlets to reduce their prices at the pump by six cents a litre, a move which would enable Petro-Canada to fulfil one of its basic purposes which is to provide Canada with reasonable energy prices.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid).

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I have a couple of questions I would like to ask of my hon. friend from Vancouver-Kingsway. First, how did he arrive at the six cents a litre figure? Second, his leader, once he came back from a visit to Calgary where he supported some provincial NDP candidate, advocated a floor price for oil. All of a sudden he said that we have to help the oil companies now that the price of oil is dropping so fast. Can the Hon. Member tell us what that floor price should be set at? How will he explain to consumers, if the oil price were to drop below that, that they would not benefit from that drop?

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I thought I answered both of those questions in my speech. At the beginning of my remarks I cited the Shell lawyer who said that the price was actually about nine cents a litre too high. I said that there should be a 20 per cent drop in pump prices. I also said that this should be done by lowering the wholesale price by about 20 per cent. I said that right now I think the wholesale price is about 30 cents a litre. Therefore, I advocated that the price be lowered by about six cents a litre.

The association of petroleum marketers is somewhat of an authority on selling gas at the pump, and on refining. This group markets 15 per cent of the gas in Canada and it has said that gasoline is from five cents to six cents a litre too high at the moment for consumers. I invite the Hon. Member to drop across the American border and see what the prices are there.

With respect to the fairness doctrine, I said in my speech that it has always been the position of the NDP that we have not advocated a market price. The Minister of Energy and the Premier of Alberta have hoisted themselves with their own petard. They have been so keen on deregulating, which the Western Accord did, that they have exposed the industry, if the price falls through the floor. The price has not fallen through the floor yet, but it has gone down dramatically.

What I am advocating at this point in time, as I said in my speech, is that there should be a break for the consumers. The consumers have not received any break and they deserve one. It is only equitable and fair that they receive one. If we do not do something then those oil companies will just keep the price high. They are not going to put the price down. There will have to be pressure brought to bear on them. I did not advocate a floor price.

Mr. McDermid: But your Leader did.

Mr. Waddell: The Hon. Member recognizes that there will be a problem if the price goes through the floor. The Canadian industry will be in real trouble. We have not reached that point yet. That is what I was saying in my speech.

I remind the Hon. Member that he should read the Western Accord, which was written by his own Government. I do not have a copy here in front of me. However, if he were to look at it he would find that it contains a clause which states something along those lines; it gives the Government the power to intervene if prices do get into real difficulty. I am simply saying that it is time to give the consumer a break. I have warned that to be fair in the future, if we see dramatically low prices, then we have to look at whether or not at that time the producer should be given a break.

Mr. McDermid: The Hon. Member has been the energy critic for his Party for a fairly long period of time. One would think by now that would understand the industry a little. In his speech he mentioned that the prices started to come down in mid-December after the OPEC meeting on December 9, but they did not really fall dramatically until—in his words—January 28. He knows as well as anyone else—and he is being mischievous in saying that prices can drop immediately—that it takes time for that oil to come out of the ground, to be pumped to the refineries, to be refined and to get to the pumps. He knows that takes from six weeks to eight weeks, at least. With the dramatic drop in late January, those prices will not hit the pumps until late March. The Hon. Member knows that.

● (1130)

What the Hon. Member would like to see is the national oil company, Petro-Canada, drop its price and lose money. The Government then has to come along and subsidize it, meaning the taxpayer has to subsidize gas prices at the pumps. That is completely unrealistic.

Mr. Orlikow: That's nonsense, and you know it.

Mr. McDermid: The Hon. Member knows that. He is just being mischievous in his presentation.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says I am being mischievous. That is an insult to all those thousands of Canadian consumers who are protesting these prices. I am making their argument today. The Hon. Member is saying they are being mischievous and is putting down ordinary Canadians, and they will not be put down like that. There is rebellion going on; there is a consumers' revolt. I do not know that prices are going to come down. I do not expect that the prices will necessarily come down in 60 days. That is no magic number. I put it to you, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources the boss of the Parliamentary Secretary, is not quite so sure either. Why else did she send a Telex—after a lot of prodding—to the industries? It is because she, too, is a little worried that they are not going to lower the prices. Their past history is to scoop up as much profit as they can. Unless we put the pressure on them, they are not going to lower the prices. It is not a competitive system.

The petroleum marketers told me that Mr. Conrad, whom I mentioned, has said that if prices were to be reflected, we could buy refined oil in New York which would be six cents to ten cents a litre lower. It is only a hope and a prayer that those prices are going to come down. The only way they will come down is if we keep the pressure on this Government and on the oil companies to get those prices down.

[Translation]

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) ought to be concerned about the fate of consumers of petroleum products.

I wonder whether the Government should have forced the company to price its products without consideration for the market place and whether the company should be subsidized to a degree.

In short, the suggestion of the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway is that we ought to levy additional taxes to subsidize people who buy petroleum products.

How can he reconcile his call for a six-cent a litre decrease with higher taxes, because in fact he is recommending that the Government make up the difference? Does the Government not represent all consumers? Should the Government not fill its coffers before redistributing the wealth? Higher expenditures mean a higher deficit, and I should think the Hon. Member knows full well we simply have to get a handle on that deficit if only because it is the only way to economic recovery.

So why would the Hon. Member not try to explain his theory on the basis of general economics rather than specific cases? How can the Hon. Member advocate unrestricted redistribution of wealth without asking taxpayers to ante up? I wish he would explain that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): A short answer from the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Waddell: It is not a matter of rates, Mr. Speaker. For instance, does the Hon. Member for Lévis want Imperial Oil to make more money after posting a $688 million profit in 1985? It is not a matter of subsidies, it is a matter of justice for consumers. There is no question of allowing Petro-Canada to boost prices. I am saying that Petro-Canada must be consumer-oriented, and there is a lot of money for Petro-Canada as well as for Imperial Oil and the other major oil companies.

[English]

Even with the price at six cents a litre lower, I think there is money there.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order. I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but the period for questions and comments is now over. Resuming debate.

Hon. Bob Layton (Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, I rise to inform the House that I cannot support the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). I think the motion is well meant. All of us would like to see the consumers get a break at the gas pumps. But it is also misguided because it proposes a disastrous means of achieving that end. In fact, the motion reflects a basic misconception on the part of both Opposition Parties that the Government of Canada should play the leading role in determining oil prices. The previous Government has a well documented history of interventionist policies.

The belief that Canadians can be sheltered from the effects of fluctuating oil prices was one of the cornerstones of the infamous National Energy Program. The NEP was hailed by the Liberal Party as the answer to all of Canada's energy problems. It was promoted as being fair to all Canadians. We were told that it would create opportunity in the industry and that it would ensure security of supply. But the reality did not live up to the promise. The NEP turned out to be one of the most damaging programs ever instituted by a Canadian Government. Under the National Energy Program, from October 1980 to this past year—less than five years—the prices consumers paid for oil and gas and oil products rose by 80 per cent. Let me remind Hon. Members that it was the Liberal Government of that day which was setting the prices.

Mr. Towers: Aided by the NDP.

Mr. Layton: Quite apart from the impact on consumers, the NEP spelled disaster for the industry. Under its interventionist policies and excessive tax regimes, the oil and gas industry stagnated. Foreign investment left the country. The industry lost its confidence and energy became an arena for federal-provincial bickering. Indeed, it divided our country.

It is not the policy of this Government to interfere with the marketplace. We believe that markets operate most effectively when they operate free of the whims of politicians and the machinations of bureaucrats. We have taken steps to free up the oil and gas markets and we are not about to reverse that process by acceding to this ill-conceived motion which is before the House today. The Government of Canada would no more order Petro-Canada to reduce its retail prices than it would tell General Motors what to charge for its cars or tell IGA what to charge for its bread.

One of the very first things we did as a new Government was to give Petro-Canada a new mandate. We told it to operate in a commercial, private sector fashion. We told it, if it wanted money, to raise it itself, because the taxpayers' purse is closed. The corporation has since shown it can compete as a private sector entity. It took the initiative in purchasing Gulf's downstream assets from Olympia and York using its own funds and borrowings.

We believe that Petro-Canada is and will continue to be an important player in Canada's energy industry. In many respects, it will be the leader, but it will be subject to the natural forces of the marketplace, as are private firms. This does not mean that we do not want lower prices for consumers. Indeed, we expect lower prices in the weeks and months ahead if the current world oil price slump endures.

The opposition does not have a monopoly on concern for the consumer. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) has written to the Chief Executive Officers of the oil refinery companies underscoring the expectation that consumers will see the benefits of lower prices. However, we are not in the business of ordering price reductions by Petro-Canada or any other firm. The prices that consumers paid under the National Energy Program have increased by over 80 per cent. Our policies are designed to strike a best balance between the interests of producers and those of consumers. We would not be benefiting consumers in the long run by taking a role in setting prices. We would only be disturbing the otherwise smooth workings of the marketplace. By taking a hands-off approach we are ensuring that prices will drop in an orderly and realistic fashion. Prices in the coming weeks will reflect supply and demand, local competition, and the depletion of the existing stocks of higher-priced crude.

To fully appreciate why domestic gasoline prices have not declined with world oil prices, Mr. Speaker, you must understand a basic operating principle of the oil industry. Retailing oil and gas is not like retailing bread. You do not move it through your store in a matter of hours or days. Much of our crude oil is purchased months in advance. I believe that the industry standard is to have one to two months of crude oil and product in reserve. As a result, Canada's oil companies have large inventories that were purchased in November and December before world prices began to drop sharply. This gasoline has to be sold before the cheaper crude now being purchased can work its way through the system.

Even Hon. Members across the floor cannot expect oil companies to sell gasoline at a loss. If they do, they should expect all other industries with feed stock and product inventories to pass through the news, and I emphasize "news", of price cuts on raw material instantly. This would apply to many of our industries including farming. Canadians can expect to see lower prices at the pumps, Mr. Speaker. Exactly when will depend largely on how quickly they deplete existing stock of more expensive crude.

I assure Hon. Members that the oil companies are well aware of the Government's stand on pricing. On January 28 my colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources sent telexes to the oil industry leaders telling them that the Government expects that consumers will benefit from crude oil price reductions. We are looking to industry to ensure that those reductions are passed on as soon as possible and we have no reason to believe that they will not be passed on.

I was surprised to read in press reports last week that the federal energy policy would have to be completely rewritten in the face of declining world prices. This would have been a typical response of the previous Government. With no confidence in ordinary Canadians, it would believe that the Government and the bureaucrats knew better than buyers and sellers. Quite to the contrary, our policies were developed to be flexible to the movements of the marketplace.

Price reductions have been anticipated for more than a year. We also anticipate that prices will begin to rise again in the early 1990s, about the time when many of Canada's megaprojects will come on stream. This is called long-term planning and it is something that there was all too little of under the previous Government.

I said earlier that our policies were designed to benefit both producers and consumers. They are, in fact, benefitting all Canadians. The Atlantic Accord was our first important energy agreement. It set the tone for everything that was to follow. As Hon. Members know, the Atlantic Accord ended years of protracted federal-provincial disputes over offshore resources. In establishing joint management in the offshore it made Newfoundland an equal partner in Confederation and paved the way for the development of the promising Hibernia field. While the most immediate benefits will be in eastern Canada, Mr. Speaker, all Canadians will benefit from the Atlantic Accord. It was an important step in establishing security of future oil and gas supplies.

I have already discussed the positive aspects of deregulation of crude oil prices which we achieved in the Western Accord. These prices are now determined by the market and increases will work their way through the production, transportation, and refining system to the gas pumps. But the Western Accord also removed inordinate taxation and regulation of the oil industry, and substantially improved its investment prospects. Investment means jobs and job creation benefits all Canadians.

A report for BP Canada and Petro-Canada Resources by the Canadian Energy Resource Institute illustrates the significant impact of just one project that will expand, given the environment created by the Western Accord. The Wolf Lake oil sands project northeast of Edmonton is expected to produce 61 million barrels of oil at a rate of 7,000 barrels a day. Preproduction costs are $115 million and operating costs are estimated at $1.1 billion over the 25 year life of the project. Wolf Lake will generate approximately $2.2 billion in income for those 25 years. Seventy-one per cent of this will occur in Alberta and 15 per cent will occur in Ontario and Quebec. The project could create 22,000 person years of employment, 5 per cent in Alberta and 34 per cent in Ontario and Quebec. Most of those jobs would be created through the life of the operating phase of the project. For every dollar spent on the Wolf Lake project during construction and operation, another $1.25 will be generated and spent throughout the economy. Those are the facts and they prove that producers are not the only ones benefitting from the new federal energy policy.

Our new natural gas markets and pricing agreement also reflects the all-important balance between benefits for consumers as well as producers. As the Minister of Energy has said, it is an agreement under which all parties win. In keeping with our policy that Government has no role in determining prices, the natural gas agreement provides for price deregulation as of November 1, 1986. After that all sales will be negotiated directly between buyers and sellers. This is already happening in some cases.

Producers benefit from this approach because it widens their markets and enables them to compete free of Government constraints. Relaxed rules for exporting natural gas also open up the U.S. market to Canada's industry. Consumers are also big winners, Mr. Speaker. Today they are paying less for natural gas as a direct result of this new agreement than they would have under the old regime. They can expect to benefit from a market characterized by competitive pricing and new suppliers.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, our new frontier energy policy promises long-term benefits for all Canadians. It frees industry from excessive taxation and regulation and establishes realistic and internationally competitive incentives for frontier exploration and development. This activity will trigger a new round of job creation and social and industrial benefits, and will eventually contribute to Canada's security of supply.

None of these benefits can be realized without investment from both foreign and domestic sources. Canada's oil and gas industry is regarded as an excellent investment, even in these days of declining prices. In fact, oil and gas investment intentions were up about $2 billion in 1985, more than 25 per cent over the previous year. The Petroleum Services Association of Canada has estimated that this investment has created more than 10,000 jobs in the energy sector alone.

A study done earlier this year for the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada illustrates the benefits of a $1 billion investment in upstream conventional oil and gas projects. According to the study by Woods Gordon, this investment generates secondary effects of up to $1.4 billion in the Gross National Product. It creates 30,000 person years of employment. These are jobs for Canadians, jobs for people who were hurt by the interventionist policies of the previous Government.

While 80 per cent of the direct spending would be in Alberta and Saskatchewan, 30 per cent of the total income generated and 33 per cent of the employment spin-offs will be in Ontario and Quebec.

Oil and gas development is only one component, albeit an important one, of the Government's over-all economic strategy. It is this strategy that has contributed 6.6 per cent in growth to Canada's GNP during the third quarter of 1985. In the 17 months since the Government was elected, more than 450,000 new jobs have been created. As our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has said, that accounts for nearly 1,000 jobs per day since September 4, 1984.

Productivity surged by 4.9 per cent in 1985. The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development predicts that Canada's growth in GNP in 1986 will be second only to Japan and that its traditional first-place ranking in job creation will resume in 1986. Inflation is being held at the 4 per cent range. Business investment was up by an annual rate of 11 per cent in the third quarter of 1985. These facts illustrate very clearly how our policies are helping the average Canadian.

To those who criticize our energy policy as being weighted in favour of the producers, I can only say that all Canadians are benefiting now from our initiatives of the past months and they can expect to benefit a great deal more in the future.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister said that it was not the policy of his Party and his Government to condone floor prices. One of the examples he gave was that his Government would not tell IGA what to charge for bread. Does that mean that his Government will abandon the floor price that it has offered to wheat producers over these past 50 years?

Mr. Layton: Mr. Speaker, there was no reference to floor prices in my remarks. We want the market-place to determine the price of commodities and services. I think this is the characteristic of our Government which is encouraging the development of our country.

Mr. Althouse: If the Minister is making it quite clear that the market-place will determine price, why does he continue to portray the previous Government as being the one which increased the price to consumers by 80 per cent when the price would have increased by 100 per cent if it was allowed to be at the market price? Why does he not point that out?

Mr. Layton: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has cited a hypothesis about what may have been the results.

Mr. Althouse: Would have been.

Mr. Layton: The facts are that the price increased 80 per cent under the National Energy Program when it was regulated and decided upon by the previous Government.

Mr. Waddell: The Hon. Member said that we should follow the market system and that ultimately the drop in world oil prices will be passed on to Canadian consumers as it filters through the system into the market. He also said that this reduction would depend on how quickly the oil companies deplete their existing supplies for which they paid more. Who will determine when the oil companies have depleted their supply of higher priced oil and commence refining the lower priced oil?

Mr. Layton: Mr. Speaker, I believe in the market-place. The Government believes that there will be a competitive element in the distribution and sales of petroleum products that will achieve those reductions in price. We can expect those prices to reflect exactly what the Hon. Member is looking for.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member believes in Tinker Bell and if he wishes hard enough for something it will become reality. He will be led by the oligopolistic oil companies that will make all kinds of money from this.

When the Government removed the Canadian special ownership charge of .7 cents a litre some companies dropped their price by .6 cents a litre and kept the remainder. It was finally up to Petro-Canada to put an advertisement in The Globe and Mail saying that the price should have gone down by .6 cents a litre. In some parts of the country the price went up in spite of the tax being removed last June.

Why will the Minister not make Petro-Canada a leader, as set out in the Act? Why does the Government not use Petro-

Canada as a price leader rather than a follower of the other oil companies? As I pointed out in my speech, in the case of the McAra family, it is even acting like a restrictive oil company.

Mr. Layton: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member represents the philosophy that bureaucrats and Government always have a better answer than the private sector. Our Government was elected by a mass of Canadians who were tired of that kind of Government and wanted a change from that kind of attitude.

With regard to price reductions, I am confident that the companies which are in competition for the market-place, including Petro-Canada, will look for every opportunity to bring their price down according to their costs. The prices will drop as a result of that pressure. That is how the market-place has always worked.

With respect to the contractual relationship between Petro-Canada or any of the companies and their dealers, those are the conditions of the contract.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister if he recalls the Atlantic caucus of the Conservative Party held on August 2, 1984.

An Hon. Member: Were you listening?

Mr. Boudria: I am reading from a press release—I do not like that accusation very much. I do not think any Liberal has to take those kinds of disparaging remarks from a Conservative when one of his own colleagues admitted being guilty to listening to opposition Members. Now he is accusing opposition Members of listening to Tory caucus meetings and I suggest that he apologize to the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Burnaby.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, the Minister has indicated his great faith in competition in the market-place. In light of that profound faith, does he support the decision of Petro-Canada to refuse to allow an independent operator in Ontario to maintain their prices at a lower level than some of their competitors? Does he support that policy?

Mr. Layton: Mr. Speaker, I hear the same question posed to the Minister and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister. It is my understanding that there were contractual arrangements in this instance. I am sure all parties to the contract knew what they were signing at the time.

• (1200)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Resuming debate.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, if Canadians were nervous about the energy policies of this Government before the Minister's speech, they are now petrified. The Minister has given absolutely no comfort to energy consumers but he has caused them to be further alarmed.

This is a very serious issue. People are very upset with this Government and its policy of increasing taxes on energy. Look at the difference between the cost of gasoline here compared with the U.S. It is remarkable. In Washington, D.C., gasoline costs 43.55 cents a litre. In Ottawa it is 56.3 cents. In Seattle, Washington, it is only 39.5 cents, but in Vancouver it is almost 20 cents more at 59 cents a litre.

[Translation]

In the Province of Quebec the price gap between the City of Baie-Comeau and the City of Portland, Maine, is unbelievable—61.9 cents a litre in Baie-Comeau, 45.43 cents in Portland, Maine, an unbelievable difference! It is not fair! But it is always the same story with Conservative Governments: the major oil companies are winners and the consumers are losers.

[English]

In October of 1984 a litre of gasoline cost 42.9 cents in Toronto. One year later that same litre had jumped to 49.4 cents, an increase of 15.2 per cent, even though the world price of crude oil had declined. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) talks about the Government not wanting interventionist policies. She says the Liberal Government's inverventionist policies were bad. In fact, the Liberal Government's policies put the consumer first and foremost. Those policies kept the price of our crude oil below the world price. That was a benefit to the consumer.

The policies of this Conservative Government are having a detrimental effect, not only on the consumer at the pump but on our economy as a whole. My heaven's, if this Government is such a boom to the business community, why is the Canadian dollar in a free fall on world money markets? This morning The Globe and Mail referred to this Government as a nervous Government, and that is one of the reasons why confidence in the Canadian dollar has fallen. Who can have confidence in this Government? The Minister said the former Liberal Government increased the price of gasoline by 80 per cent, from 32 cents a litre to 50 cents a litre. How can you have confidence in a Government whose arithmetic is wrong? Going from 32 cents to 50 cents a litre is not an 80 per cent increase. How in the name of heaven can the consumer trust the policies of a Government that cannot even divide?

An Hon. Member: How much is it?

Mr. MacLellan: It's 60 something per cent.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacLellan: But it's not 80 per cent. That increase would have been much higher had it not been for the policies of the Liberal Government. The one thing the Conservative Government does do well is squeeze every last cent out of the consumer at the pumps. They are paying more now even though the world price of crude has declined. The Minister says we are paying more because we are getting more than just gasoline. Sure we are. We are getting a lot more federal taxes. This Government has increased federal taxes on a litre of gasoline by 60 per cent. We are paying the federal Government 3.09 cents more for a litre of gasoline now than we were.

The Minister says we need the tax dollars to pay for social services which Canadians want and need. Why then does the Government raise taxes on gasoline when it is cutting back on social programs? If we need these increased taxes to increase social programs why is the Government at the same time decreasing indexation of family allowances? Why did the Government try to roll back indexation of old age pensions? Then, when the Government reversed its position, it said it was doing so because pensioners should not really be subject to partial indexation. This was the position after having said the opposite. And how is the Government going to pay for it? Once again by increasing the cost of a litre of gasoline in 1987 by one cent. This is incredible. The Government backed down on the deindexation of old age pensioners and said because it was doing the pensioners a favour it had to charge more for gasoline.

What is this doing to our economy? What is the Government trying to have the people of Canada believe, that increasing the price of gasoline is a favour to Canadians? This was not the story the Government gave us last spring when it brought in the Western Accord and did away with the Petroleum Gas Revenue Tax. Members opposite said by doing away with the PGRT we would be able to develop the energy sector, that it means up to 300,000 jobs for Canadians. This money we are not charging the oil companies will flow through the system to the benefit of Canadians by creating employment. That is what we were told. Yet the Government is now saying we need higher taxes to create this activity in the energy sector.

The Government says the industry will save $5 billion. That is a phenomenally large sum to place on the backs of Canadian consumers, but it is even more than that. Analysts have said that the federal Government will lose as much as $12.2 billion by 1990 as a result of doing away with the PGRT. We know who is going to have to pick up the tab for that. The Canadian consumer is being scalded for this amount through increased taxation at the pumps.

According to analysts the oil companies will see their profits rise as much as 160 per cent by 1990. The Government assures us that all this will flow through to the energy sector and industry. If the Government is so sure of that why is it scalding the Canadian consumer at the pumps? In 1984 the industry's profits were $3.1 billion. Energy analysts predict they could go as high as $8.1 billion by 1990. What do Canadian consumers do when they are being dangled from a 12-storey window by this Government? Who can they rely on? The former Liberal Government said they could rely on Petro-Canada. However, what has this Government done with Petro-Canada. It has told it to go out and scalp and scald the consumer. In fact, lead the way with price increases. That is what the Government said. As well, that company will become at least partially privatized. The Canadian people are being asked to pay for Petro-Canada yet a third time. Canadians have already paid through tax dollars to the extent of $4.3 billion. If you count the equity of Canada, which would be less the retained earnings to the end of 1983, including money from the Canadian ownership account, the amount would be over $8 billion that Canadians have paid for Petro-Canada. The people have paid for Petro-Canada already. They are paying again with Petro-Canada's usury and excessive charges at the pumps, Mr. Speaker. Now the people will have to pay a third time when buying the shares on the private market.

Mr. Boudria: The people are being gouged.

Mr. MacLellan: The Minister says it takes time for the cheaper crude to work its way through the system, so why did the price not fall in December? The price has been going down, albeit not that much, since October. Why did we not have a price decrease at least by December if the words of the Minister are correct, that it takes one to two months to work through the system? Not only have we not seen a decrease but we have seen an increase. The increase was led by Petro-Canada; it increased its prices twice in that same period of November and December. What kind of responsibility is that on the part of the Government?

What could be a nicer scenario for the multinational oil companies than to have Canada's own Crown corporation increase the price? The multinationals tuck in behind and increase their prices by the same amount. How can any Government say anything to them if the Crown corporation is leading the way and the multinationals are following? How can any Government say anything to them in that regard? This is incredible deceit. Petro-Canada is being asked to lead the increases running contrary to the welfare of the people.

The Minister told us that she created a market-sensitive regime, a system that allows prices to fall as world prices fall. Why is that system not working? Why is the wholesale price that Petro-Canada charges for a litre of gasoline 7 cents higher than the New York harbour wholesale price? Even when the cost of transportation is added on, the price is still at least 5 cents higher in Canada than it is in New York harbour.

If the Minister believes in her market-sensitive system, why did she feel the need to telex the major oil companies to let them know that the public is supposed to receive automatic price decreases? If they are automatic, why the reminder? The reminder was made because price decreases are not automatic. We still do not know the wording of that telex, Mr. Speaker. We do not know if any kind of burden was placed on the oil companies to bring down oil prices.

The situation with respect to consumers is just getting out of hand. It is a travesty that Canadian consumers are being asked to pay the prices they are paying for gasoline. One reason for this is to drive up the profits of Petro-Canada so the Government can present a share issue in the private sector to make the share issue as attractive as possible. It is great for the Government because of lot of its friends on Bay Street will look after the placement, and a placement of this size could mean as much as $30 million. It is great politics indeed.

Mr. McDermid: The Liberals spent that before breakfast.

Mr. MacLellan: We were told by the Minister that there were five different taxes which the multinationals have to pay. The Minister got rid of all five. What happened? The consumer got new taxes as a result. The industry got five taxes taken away. Consumers had 3.09 cents a litre added on to the price of gasoline, which we were told was supposed to look after our social programs and create jobs in the sector.

The Minister told us before, that by letting the money flow through to the industry there would be as many as 300,000 new jobs created. She told us that energy was to be an engine for growth. Those are the words of the Government. The Government's engine is a lot like the Government itself. It has a screw loose.

The Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton) has told us that jobs are being created in the private sector. The Minister of Energy is one step ahead of him. She is now preparing Canadians for the cancellation of projects. The Minister of State for Mines does not have his new doctrine yet. The old doctrine was to tell Canadians how many jobs the Government had created. The new doctrine is to soften the blow for all the projects which the Government said would be created but which will be cancelled. This is what the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources is doing at present by saying that these large projects may not go ahead. Canadians will not believe that at all.

The Minister said that by creating a market environment prices will continue to decline. That obviously provides the market for gasoline prices to decline. They are not going to increase in a declining market, she said. Those were her words last spring. But what happened, Mr. Speaker. Prices kept going up because of larger margins for the companies and because of greater taxes imposed by the Government. The Minister's own words less than a year later are not only hollow but they are misleading.

What is the Government doing about the situation? It is doing nothing. The Minister sent a telex, the content of which does not tell us anything. It tells us only that she does not believe in her own market-sensitive regime. The Minister of Energy has said that she is doing something about the situation and that the price decline will go through the system. But we were told that prices were going to go down last spring. People will not believe that prices will go down again unless they see something concrete from the Government, and the people are seeing nothing to indicate any good faith on the part of the Government with respect to consumers.

The situation is very serious. Consumers are having to pay a great deal of money which they cannot afford. The Government is losing on both sides. The Government is causing greater hardships to consumers. The Government is charging more for gasoline while at the same time it is preparing the way for decreased activity in the energy sector. Canadians are getting the worst of both worlds by the policies of the Government. It is indeed a very serious situation.

Does the Minister really expect us to believe that those nice oil companies will pass along savings to us because she sent them a telex? Does she honestly want us to accept the argument that the oil companies will not try and recoup lost revenues from falling crude oil prices by keeping the prices at the pumps high? Personally, I do not. I do not believe that price decreases will be passed on to consumers, certainly not to the degree consumers deserve. And I just realized something else this Government does well, it is called "conning the consumer".

Mr. McDermid: I always enjoy listening to my hon. friend. There were a couple of inaccuracies in his speech which I think should be corrected. He made the statement that the cost of a barrel of oil went down in October and November, when in fact it went up, quite to the surprise of the market-place, as a matter of fact. They expected it to go down in October and November, but it went up. The cost of a barrel of oil went up at that time, I think, because of the anticipation of winter coming on and the heavy use of oil. Of course, there has been a mild winter generally throughout the world. The amount of oil that was consumed was not as great and prices started to drop after the December 9 meeting of OPEC. I think if he checks his facts, and he may wish to comment on this, the price did go up for a barrel of oil in October and November, not down, as he said. Prices went up at the pump.

That is exactly the point we have been trying to make, there is a lag time. If he remembers, in 1979 under the then Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Joe Clark, and the present House Leader, the Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn, the Government stopped the prices from increasing for a sixty day period. We are going to see the same thing when prices come down as when you see them go up. If the Hon. Member wanted to be honest and fair with the Canadian people in his remarks today I think he would like to correct that statement.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I would like to go back and look at the figures. I certainly am prepared to consider the position of the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary. However, we are not prepared to consider that prices did go up. I know they did fluctuate in that period, and exactly what they were at any given time I am not really sure. It does not explain the reason why prices did go up in that October to December period, and why those price increases were led by Petro-Canada, which increased its prices on two occasions.

I am aware of what the Parliamentary Secretary says with respect to the former Minister of Energy controlling the lag price for 60 days. That is just exactly what I am saying; the energy sector is prepared to put the price increase on right away, but the Government stepped in on a former occasion to hold that back for 60 days so Canadians would not be scalded right away. This same energy sector waited until the absolute maximum period of time until it passed along the savings to the Canadian public, if at all. On the one hand the Government wants to take the price increase right away, and on the other hand it does not want to pass the saving on to the consumer at all. This is why Canadians are concerned about the market sensitive regime that the Minister talked about.

Mr. McDermid: I want to comment on a couple of remarks he made, especially the one that the Government of Canada paid billions of dollars to Petro-Canada to acquire Petro-Canada and that it should be competing out there in the market-place and should be leading.

He should talk to some of the private entrepreneurs, the business people in his community that, for example, have a Shell station, and who provide employment for Canadians. Or the Sunoco station, although Sunoco is not the greatest example, as it lost $10 million last year. I say this to let my friend from the NDP know about these billions of dollars that all these oil companies are making, including one that is 25 per cent owned by the Ontario Government.

I want to get back to Petro-Canada because these people complained to me that it is unfair competition. As a matter of fact I had a complaint from his province the other day about Petro-Canada offering discounts to teachers, and "how can I compete with that, because that is the national oil company and it is being treated unfairly out in the market-place"? You cannot have it both ways. What this Government is saying to Petro-Canada is, "Yes, you are owned by the Government; yes, you are a Crown corporation, but you get out there and you compete fairly with all those other Canadians that are out there working in the market-place".

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, the idea of the former Liberal Government was that Petro-Canada be a window on the market-place, and try to give the Canadian a fair supply of gasoline at the pumps, while at the same time giving them a fair price. This is not the philosophy of Petro-Canada at the present time. Certainly Petro-Canada was expensive to put together, but it was not the policy of the former Liberal Government that Petro-Canada buy up the whole private sector, as it seems to be at the present time.

The Government says that it wants Petro-Canada to be part of the private sector. The policy of the Government changed dramatically from the time of the election when Petro-Canada was going to be reviewed, to the time when Petro-Canada purchased the downstream assets of Gulf Canada from Olympia and York. In fact, during that period of time the Government changed its mind twice. First of all, they were going to purchase all of Gulf Canada, all of the downstream assets from Olympia and York. Then the Government was not going to purchase any from Olympia and York, and then, finally, it said it would purchase the downstream assets in Ontario and western Canada from Olympia and York.

The Government does not have any policy at all, which is damaging for the country and for the energy sector.

We used to have great public confidence in Petro-Canada in this country. Public confidence is eroding because of the policies of the Government. People do not look upon Petro-Canada as their asset in the market-place any more. They look upon Petro-Canada as just another oil company that is trying to gauge them. This was not the intention of the legislation, of the former Liberal Government but it seems to be the intention of the present Government.

Mr. Waddell: With respect to oil prices going up I want to ask the Member, and maybe he will deal with it in his speech as Parliamentary Secretary, why is it that when world prices go down it takes a time period for that to be reflected, but when prices go up that seems to be reflected instantly.

Sharon Olsen at 6639 St. Catharine Street, a single parent in my riding, with a very understanding boss who does not pay her very much, she got oil on October 18 from Petro-Canada to heat her house and had to pay $928 to fill her tank.

Mr. McDermid: How much a litre?

Mr. Waddell: 37.8 cents a litre.

Mr. McDermid: What is it in the United States?

Mr. Waddell: Plus added tax. The price increase in October was passed along to people right away. You do not get a long wait. It works to the advantage of the oil companies, but it does not work for the consumer the other way around. That is what we object to.

I want to make a brief comment about the National Energy Program. That program failed because of a number of reasons. One reason was—and the Member from Cape Breton alluded to it—that the program was projected on very high gasoline prices, and the gasoline prices did not go as high as expected. The other reason was the world recession at the time. Third, the program was flawed.

I am tired to hearing Conservative Members stand up in this House and tell lies about the fact that the NDP supported the National Energy Program. If the word "lie" is unparliamentary, I withdraw it, but you know what I mean. The fact is, and I can tell my friend, that the NDP did not support the National Energy Program, and I have all the votes to prove it. I wish the Members would stop saying that because they know it is untrue.

The flaw with the National Energy Program—I will tell the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) this because he was yelling about us supporting it—was that by means of PIP grants, all those rich grants, it took the exploration away from the Western Sedimentary Basin, from Alberta and Saskatchewan and put it into the frontiers and the offshore. I criticized that at the time, and I think the Alberta Members understand that. That was a big flaw in the National Energy Program. I wish the Conservatives would do our Party the justice of not repeating this untruth. The fact is that there were between eight and 10 votes on the National Energy Program legislation and we voted with the Conservatives on seven out of eight votes. I think we are dealing with elementary honesty. We can differ on a lot of things but we should not be hearing those mistruths spoken again and again in the House of Commons.

• (1230)

I will sit down in a moment, Mr. Speaker. The Government has its own problems just like the National Energy Program had. The Government made a deal for deregulation. Suddenly prices began dropping dramatically; the Government has no policy to deal with that.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, first I would like to congratulate my colleague, the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) for the excellent speech he made. Does the Hon. Member recall what was said by the Conservative Party during one of its orgies of campaign promises of the summer of 1984? On August 2, 1984, after the Altantic caucus of that day, the Conservative Party said that since the National Energy Program, gasoline prices have doubled largely as a result of increases in federal taxes, and that in contrast, prices in the United States have fallen sharply.

I wonder what the Hon. Member thinks of the logic of the Tories who at that time criticized the fact that prices were not going down as rapidly in Canada as they were in the United States. If it was wrong then, why is it right now that the prices in Canada are actually increasing at the same time as prices in the United States are decreasing?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, the National Energy Program meant that there would be a certain scale at which prices would come down in relation to world prices, and that scale was met. There was an assurance for the consumers that prices would come down because there was a formula that was put into effect to guarantee that.

It seems that the Government has been more concerned with getting rid of anything that had anything to do with the National Energy Program than it has been with providing solid policies for the country. As such, in many cases, it has thrown the baby out with the bath water. That is very unfortunate. The Government has created a situation that is of concern both to the consumers and to the energy sector itself.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to address this motion today, a motion which calls for the Government to direct Petro-Canada to institute a decrease of 6 cents per litre in the price at the pumps for retail gasoline. In doing so, I would like to address a myth that has been circulating in the House in recent days. I believe it is very important for us as members of the Opposition to expound on the reasons why gasoline prices should come down.

It was very evident from the speech made by the Hon. Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton) that the Government does not accept the fact that there are substantive economic reasons for the price of gasoline to fall. I am referring to the amazing statement made by the Minister of State for Tourism (Mr. Murta) to the effect that tourism in Canada is not affected by the price of automobile gasoline. Of course, it would be unparliamentary to attribute to the Minister improper motives for making that statement, and I cannot say that the statement is a variance with the truth because it is only, after all, a hypothesis. However, what I will say is that the statement was inaccurate, misleading and was totally at variance with the opinion of not only the best industry sources but the industry unanimously. It was at strong variance with the opinions of the former Minister of State for Tourism and it has aroused an outcry in the tourism industry about the insensitivity of the Government to industry in general and to the tourism industry in particular. It has shown the Government's evident lack of attention and concern to the opinions of that industry and to the possible fate of those in that industry when confronted by this sort of intransigence and blinkered attitude on the part of the Government.

The Minister of State for Tourism said in the House that gasoline prices do not affect the intentions of U.S. tourists to travel to Canada. I might say that that is manifest nonsense. I have not heard one person in the industry tell me that gasoline prices do not affect the intentions of U.S. tourists to travel to Canada. Moreover, I have not heard the same Minister say in the House that the price of gasoline did not affect the intentions of Canadians to travel. We must remember that the majority of tourists within Canada are, after all, Canadians. While American vacationers make a very great contribution to our tourist industry, it is, after all, to Canadians who Canadian tourist attractions and operators must first appeal.

The statement made by the Minister of State for Tourism ran contrary to the opinions of the industry as sampled by his own Ministry. I would like to quote from an impressively titled paper prepared for the National Tourism Tomorrow Conference entitled Prices: Perception, Reality and Value for Money. This is the result of what the Progressive Conservative Government has termed its consultation. These are the numbers that were produced by the consultative process of which the Government speaks so highly when questioned. On page 6 of the report, under the heading Consultation Results, the following is noted:

> There were 180 respondents to the consultation process who mentioned prices as the major problem. As well, comments about prices were often raised under another topic cited as the major problem.
> Comments about high prices as a problem were distributed as:
|---|---|
| Gasoline | 37.2% |
| Alcoholic Beverages | 29.4% |
| All Prices | 27.8% |
| Accommodation | 17.8% |
| Food | 13.3%— |

It is the opinion of the Canadian tourism industry as consulted by the Government, that the high price of gasoline is more of a problem for the industry than the prices of accommodation and food put together.

The tourism industry does itself credit by the fact that it has not been slow in raising this problem with the Government and in attempting to convince the Government that the industry does indeed know the factors in its economic equation that will affect the future of their industry. It would appear that the Government believes it knows better and that the industry itself has no business telling the Government what affects the industry's potential for success.

Pride of place in this effort must go to the Canadian Automobile Association which started a nationwide publicity campaign to condemn high gasoline prices and the very evident effort that the Government is making to keep gasoline prices high. The Executive Vice President of the Canadian Automobile Association has said that the Government has ignored recommendations from groups such as his which have pointed out the very negative effects that high gasoline prices have on the tourism industry, the transportation sector and the economy as a whole. He went on to say that this self-inflicted uncompetitive positioning is costing Canadians billions of dollars in tourism revenues, tens of thousands of jobs, something of which a Government that talks of job creation should take note, and millions of dollars in investment opportunities.

The Canadian Automobile Association is not alone in raising this problem and pointing out that Canadian gasoline prices are about 30 per cent higher than U.S. gasoline prices at the pumps. If the Government does not take some action now, that margin will increase further, unless, of course, it lets the dollar drop clear through the floor.

● (1240)

This is causing serious damage to our auto tourism industry and many other transportation-dependent industries, said the President of the Canadian Automobile Association.

On the very day that the Minister responsible for Tourism—and I wish he were here to listen—rose in the House to say that gasoline prices were not a problem, he and I received a telegram from the Tourism Industry Association of Canada, which states in part:

The cost of gasoline and jet fuel has for the past few years placed Canada at a serious competitive disadvantage relative to the U.S.A. The current drop in the world price of oil will further reduce the pump price in the U.S.A. in 1986.

The telex goes on to state, and I will just quote portions of it:

It is essential that Canada's Federal Government take the leadership in conjunction with the provinces and oil companies in initiating action to bring the price of transportation fuels in this country into a more competitive position.

That is the very clear position being taken by the Tourism Industry Association of Canada, which is the prime umbrella organization for the industry in the country. It is signalling the Government exactly what is needed.

Leadership is something we have not seen from the Government with respect to gasoline pricing. We finally managed to drag out of the Minister of Energy, after a few days of her habitual stonewalling, that she would indeed at least make the effort to send a telex to the gas companies saying that she expected that they would do something about the price of gasoline. We have not seen the telex, so we can only assume that, of course, it was phrased in such polite and diplomatic terms—

Mr. Della Noce: How do you know?

Mr. Parry: As if the Minister expected that they would do this entirely at their own convenience and, naturally, only after their profit motives have been met.

I hear an Hon. Member opposite asking how I know. The answer is, when the Minister tables the text of the telex in the House I will know for sure. Until then I have, as I am sure he has, the right to speculate on just what was and was not in that particular telex.

I am glad to say that it is not only the national organizations in the tourism industry, such as TIAC, the Canadian Food Association and the Canadian Restaurant Association which have raised this question. I also received a telex from an organization in my own riding, the North West Ontario Travel Association. It is a brief telex so I would like to take the time to read it in its entirety. It states:

The North West Ontario Travel Association feels that one of the greatest negatives to tourism in this area is the high cost of automobile fuel. Our members travel to sports shows in the U.S. and talk to large numbers of U.S. tourists and this high cost is continually questioned. It is noteworthy that in the "Tourism Tomorrow" paper——that international tour operators and wholesalers were surveyed showing that over fifty per cent felt that gas prices were noncompetitive.

That is a paper which was produced by the Minister of State for Tourism.

That is a telex from the North West Ontario Travel Association which is headquartered in the community of Fort Frances. The community of Fort Frances, for those who are perhaps ignorant of the geography of northwestern Ontario, is right across the Rainy River from the community of International Falls. I would like to quote the price of gasoline in International Falls, which is an American community. The price in International Falls was $1.24 U.S. per gallon for regular gasoline. That translates into 44.9 cents Canadian per litre for regular gasoline. In Fort Frances the price was 56.3 cents Canadian per litre. The retailers in International Falls told us that the wholesale price to them had been falling at the rate of approximately half a cent a day since the beginning of January when the price started to slide. It is not surprising that fully one-third of the business in International Falls is Canadian. After all, Canadians can obtain their gas 20 per cent cheaper across the river than they can in Fort Frances.

I would really like to hear the Minister of State for Tourism speak in this debate. I would llike to see him come here and let the House know what he plans to say when he goes to the food and restaurant associations' annual reception tonight. I would like to ask him how he will be able to look anyone there in the face and tell them that they are wrong and he is right and that, indeed, as is his stated belief in this House, gasoline prices do not make a difference to tourism in Canada.

I would like to know what he will say when he delivers his address to the members of the Tourism Industry Association of Canada's annual general meeting, which is to start in Winnipeg on February 17. I would like to know what he plans to tell them. Will he tell them in open session that they are all mistaken? Or will he get them aside one at a time in a corner and tell them that he is very sorry that they are mistaken, that he is right and gas prices do not make a difference?

I would like to know what the Minister will say to the Hon. Member for Halton (Mr. Jelinek) who, by some strange aberration, is now a cabinet Minister, and who said on March 22, 1984, and I quote:

When the Conservative Party forms the Government, I can assure you that its first priority in this regard is going to be to call a federal-provincial conference to deal with the problems of over-taxation and to set an example to the provinces by reducing or freezing taxation wherever possible in the tourist industry.

The Hon. Member for Halton went on to say that we must try to find ways and means of reducing them in certain areas. He also stated:

Further steps will be taken to upgrade the status of tourism within the federal bureaucracy in order to protect the entrepreneur from potentially damaging government programs and legislation.

If the Government's program to continue high gasoline prices is not damaging, I would like to know what is damaging to the tourism industry, which has said unanimously that higher gasoline prices are damaging.

The Hon. Member for Northumberland (Mr. Hees) had the figures right approximately two years ago on February 8, 1984 when he said in this House:

If the money had been used to reduce the cost of gasoline at the pumps, it would have made Canada a far more attractive place for tourists to visit. Eighty-five per cent of our dollars from foreign tourists comes from Americans visiting Canada. Of these, 74 per cent travel by automobile.

How sad that the present Minister of State for Tourism does not have the obvious command over figures which the now Minister of Veterans Affairs has.

I could go on in this regard. I could ask the Minister, were he here, what he plans to say to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), who, during the election campaign, said that gasoline taxes were reducing the competitiveness of Canada's tourism industry. After all, I could even ask the Minister of State for Tourism what he would say to his colleague, the present Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan), the former Minister of State for Tourism, who did a reasonably good job and who even earned a promotion. The present Minister of the Environment stood in this House and said that in order to help the tourist industry the two cents a litre tax on gasoline would not be introduced during the summer, during the prime tourist season, but would be postponed until September of 1985. At least he had the common sense to acknowledge that that was a significant factor in tourism in Canada.

The Government has given us an increase in the gas tax on three separate occasions, and there is another increase to come in January of next year. It seems that the deregulated environment cuts but one way. I would say that whether it be regulation or deregulation it should cut both ways.

I would like to offer a couple of quotations from this morning's newspaper. They happen to be from The Globe and Mail, which is an excellent Toronto newspaper. The headline is: "Oil prices tumble below $18 a barrel". The article states:

Meanwhile, Britain's Brent grade oil breached the $17 mark in Europe, trading down $1 at $16.90 a barrel.

On the inside of the newspaper—and I memorized this so I would not have to hunt for it—it is reported that the North Sea oil producers would still pump gas if the price fell to $5 a barrel. It reported that with oil prices going down to $18 a barrel and below—in U.S. dollars, of course—that that means the Saudis can now basically set the market where they want to and that they are inclined to set it lower rather than higher.

What does this tell us? It tells us that we have a situation of falling crude oil prices, a situation of which this country can take some advantage. It is a situation that the Government will apparently not address other than to send a telex to the major oil companies which, after all, anyone can do.

I would now like to move to the role of Petro-Canada. We have been hearing statements by members of the Government which, frankly, fly in the face of the original idea for which Petro-Canada was established. If that is the Government's opinion then it should do the honest thing and dispose of Petro-Canada. Let the Government be frank with the Canadian people. Let it tell them it is not going to do anything about oil prices, it is not going to exercise any form of judgment, policy setting, discretion or direction or any form of what it so negatively calls "intervention" in the marketplace because it does not believe in it. Instead of that, the Government is "tipsy-toeing" around this issue. It is letting the president of Petro-Canada sound off in ways which are obviously in conflict with the mandate he has been given. And, of course, the Government is ignoring its own history in this matter.

[Translation]

In connection with this matter, Mr. Speaker, I would like to emphasize the role played by various interest groups and residents of the City of Montreal. It would seem that last week in Montreal they set up a committee called the Canadian National Committee for the Reduction of Gas Prices.

[English]

That is something, of course, that were he not in this House, the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) would be rushing to lead. It is by way of recognition of the organization that we have mentioned in our motion the reduction of six cents a litre—

[Translation]

—because, Mr. Speaker, we know very well that the lower prices announced for gas and crude oil could be translated into a nine- or ten-cent reduction at the pump, as the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) pointed out, more than the six-cent a litre drop we advocate in our motion.

We listened to the speech of the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton)—which he read from beginning to end. Mr. Speaker, it would seem that he is not quite familiar enough with the subject and, as I just said, he cannot make a speech in the House without reading it word for word.

It looks like they drafted a nice little political speech which is not even remotely related to the matter under consideration.

[English]

I would like to conclude by saying that this is not simply a question of the price of gasoline staying at 56 cents a litre, instead of going down to 50 cents a litre. In my riding, even in communities which are situated on the highway, consumers are paying 65 cents a litre for gas. When one gets off the highway, there is the ratcheting effect of gasoline being used to transport gasoline, and the price goes up into the stratospheric range of $1 up to $1.80 a litre.

Mr. McDermid: Where?

Mr. Parry: Let me say that a reduction such as is foreseen in our motion would have the same exponential and ratcheting effect of bringing those prices down. I believe we should have a national supply regime and a national pricing regime which would ensure that people in remote communities do not have to pay these exorbitant prices for gasoline. However, I have to say with deep regret that I do not believe the Government will give that to us, but I would like to have some commitment from this Government for at least the 6 cents per litre reduction which this motion proposes.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I enjoyed listening to the remarks of my friend, the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Parry). He comes from probably one of the most beautiful parts of the province of Ontario and is vitally interested in the tourism business, as I understand it. Being a former chief-of-staff to a Minister of tourism, I understand his concerns. However, I think when he stresses the cost of gasoline and its effect on tourism he is being a little inaccurate. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that Tourism Canada did a study in 1984. Its analysis, by the way, covered a very long period of time. The conclusion was that gasoline is a minor item in the total expenditure of most automobile tourists. Not only was that report published in 1984, it has been generally accepted by the tourist industry. In fact, a study was undertaken by the Tourist Industry Association of Canada—which is an independent organization, if the Hon. Member wants to question the validity of the report of Tourism Canada—covering the same period and it reported the same findings.

Gasoline prices are relatively low on a list of factors effecting the choice of U.S. tourists of a vacation destination.

Mr. Waddell: When was that? What year?

Mr. McDermid: The report was released in 1984 and it covered a period from 1972 to 1983, which is a very long period of time in which we saw dramatic increases in the price of gasoline. The Tourism Industry Association of Canada agreed with the findings of the report that gasoline prices are not high on the list of reasons why a person does or does not travel to a certain destination. The Hon. Member may wish to comment on that.

Mr. Parry: Mr. Speaker, I have to state that I regret to hear the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid) using information that, while not completely obsolete, has at least had its value significantly deteriorated, not simply by the passage of time but by the change of circumstances. I would have to state that my recollection of the history of gasoline pricing in Canada and the United States indicates to me that there were times in 1972 to 1983 when it was cheaper to buy gasoline in Canada than it was to buy it in the United States. I can remember that on one occasion I myself noted that difference between Windsor and Detroit. I should like to say that it is only since around 1982, I believe—perhaps slightly earlier—that the divergence between the price of gasoline at the pumps in the United States and in Canada has become significantly large.

At the risk of reiterating my previous points, I would like to point out to the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary that the Tourism Industry Association of Canada is now, on January 22, stating that this is a major problem. If I could quote again, Canada's international trade deficit on the tourism account exceeded $2 billion in 1984 and 1985. Many Americans will visit Canada for Expo '86 and visiting tourists can contribute to the reduction of Canada's deficit. We must not leave them with the impression of overcharging.

I would have to say that while I do not doubt the validity of the conclusion presented by the Parliamentary Secretary for at least a portion of the period from 1972 to 1983, the fact is that in 1986 the perception has changed and the people who are even now coming back from United States sports shows tell me that the constant litany they hear from American tourists is that the price of gasoline is too high in Canada and they may not come this year. The price of gasoline is a significant factor in their decision-making process.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I listened very attentively to the speech made by the Hon. Member. I know he is very concerned with the tourism industry, as he should be, in respresenting his own constituency. I just wanted him to be aware, to strenghthen the point he raised, that the brief presented to members of the Liberal caucus last summer by the Canadian Automobile Association stated, and I quote:

> The resulting high gasoline prices, in a country with its own oil resources, have put our transportation dependent industries at an economic disadvantage. Tourism in particular has suffered a serious loss of business—

Reading further, it states:

> Presently, an American visitor is paying approximately 25 per cent more for motor fuel after taking into account the difference between the Canadian and American dollar and the Imperial and American gallon. This has engendered a perception by Americans that Canada is an expensive vacation destination.

I wanted to offer the Hon. Member that constructive comment.

Mr. Parry: Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) for that constructive comment. And I would like to say that I believe the key element is that of perception. This is perhaps where the Parliamentary Secretary is coming unstuck because, of course, perception and reality do sometimes differ. The fact is that, although gasoline is not the major component in the cost of running an automobile, once you have paid the cost of the automobile and got it on the road gasoline is a very significant component.

• (1300)

The other thing, of course, is that our American friends often underestimate the benefit they are getting from our sagging dollar and therefore do not realize that the difference is not as large as they imagine.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m., the House took recess.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 22

TOURISM

IMPACT OF HIGH GASOLINE PRICES

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, federal taxes on gasoline in Canada have increased drastically over the past year and a half. Gasoline in this country costs from 25 to 30 per cent more than in the United States.

I fail to understand why the Minister of State for Tourism (Mr. Murta) insists on saying that high gas prices do not deter Americans from coming to Canada. The Canadian tourist industry can only conclude that high gas prices mean fewer tourists, lower sales and reduced employment opportunities.

According to a Travel Industry Association of Canada survey, 400,000 more American tourists decide to bypass Canada every time the gas tax goes up 1 per cent. In the last year and a half we have lost more than 3 million American tourists, close to $500 million and thousands of jobs.

Just as I did, the Prime Minister and the Minister of State for Tourism have received many telegrams from major tourist associations such as TIAC, CAA, ACTA and CRFA. These are dedicated associations that have shown leadership in the tourism sector, and as such they deserve our respect and attention.

It certainly is not a coincidence that, as gas prices went up, so did our tourist deficit. And it certainly is not a coincidence either if—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired.

HUMAN RIGHTS

CHILE—ABUSES OF FUNDAMENTAL FREEDOMS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, Chile seems far away from Canada. We hear about it very little in our media, and a plane ride to Chile takes 18 hours. However, Chile is really our neighbour by virtue of a growing consciousness of global human rights and by virtue of our own actions in trade. Chile has a brutal regime which is based on fear and arbitrary authority. The press is censored and banned. Political parties are illegal. Freedom does not exist as we know it here in Canada. People are jailed, tortured, and killed.

What has been our response to the situation in Chile? What has been our response to our neighbour who has been mugged and robbed and left lying in the street? Well, Mr. Speaker, the people have reached out a hand to Chile, but our Government has passed by and kicked dirt in the face of the Chilean people. It has recently announced aid through a $19 million contract with Chile in the mining industry, and a $5 million line of credit for transactions with Chile.

We have a choice of whether to support Pinochet with our tax dollars or to provide leadership in the international community for a return to democracy in Chile. We can choose whether to support Pinochet or the Catholic church in Chile, the Human Rights Commission, and the unions. We need one standard with regard to international human rights. The Government has threatened full sanctions—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

NATIONAL PARKS

STANLEY PARK—SUGGESTED TRANSFER OF OWNERSHIP TO VANCOUVER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in April of this year Canada will join the citizens of Vancouver in celebrating the centennial of that great city. Along with Expo itself, a major focus of Vancouver's celebrations will be Stanley Park, the largest urban park in the country.

From time immemorial Vancouverites have claimed the park as their own. Our native peoples have lived and hunted in the park, and generations of British Columbians and visitors from all over the world have enjoyed its trees, its water, and the beautiful view of the snow-capped mountains. Perhaps no park in Canada evokes such civic pride and such a feeling of identity as Stanley Park. The part belongs to Vancouver in all but name. In fact, it belongs to the federal Government.

As a symbolic gesture to the city I am asking the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to recognize the historic association of the people of Vancouver with Stanley Park, and to dedicate the property over to the citizens of Vancouver in its centennial year.

ENERGY

HEAVY OIL UPGRADER PROJECT—NEED FOR GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, conventional supplies of light crude oil from western Canada are gradually declining as the older oil fields such as Leduc and Redwater run out. To remain self-sufficient in oil supply we must encourage the exploration and upgrading of our oil sands and heavy oils. If we do not, we will be turning the clock back and will become increasingly dependent on foreign crude oil.

● (1405)

The proven reserves of oil in the oil sands and heavy oil areas of north eastern Alberta stagger the imagination. There are enough reserves to supply Canada's needs for 200 to 300 years. We have the technology to produce this heavy oil and bitumen but the oil must be upgraded to light crude to meet Canada's refining requirements.

Husky has proposed a heavy oil upgrader at Lloydminster and has requested assistance in the form of loan guarantees. The Government of Alberta and the Government of Saskatchewan have agreed to assist. The federal Government has yet to make a final decision.

May I remind my colleagues that without Government help the Syncrude project would have failed. Without Government help, the Alsands project did fail.

We must recognize that special incentives are essential for most large energy projects to proceed in today's uncertain world. The Husky upgrader is vital to our nation's security. We must not and cannot allow ourselves to become dependent on foreign oil and thereby be hostage to a foreign power.

I urge all Members of the House to support federal Government assistance for the construction of the Husky heavy oil upgrader.

TASKS FACING NEW PRESIDENT

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, when the new president of Canada Post is appointed, he or she will have the monumental task of addressing a number of very serious problems. For example, the new president must make the corporation fiscally responsible by reducing the annual deficit of some $300 million. The president must also alleviate the labour unrest which is a major problem in some larger urban centres.

Furthermore, he or she must address some severe inequities which currently exist. For example, in my riding of Brandon-Souris some rural mail delivery routes are being dismantled, while other rural and town residents continue to pay an annual fee for the rental of their mail boxes at the local post office. This is a practice which they, understandably, believe to be discriminatory.

There are inequities as well in the cities, where thousands of mobile homeowners and new homeowners are not receiving home delivery even though some of the new homeowners reside on streets which already receive service.

It is imperative that these inequities be rectified. The new president must make the corporation one which is responsible and fair to all Canadians, both financially and service-wise, whether they live in rural or urban Canada and whether they live in older or newer sections of our cities.

EXTERNAL AID

HAITI—PROVISION OF ASSISTANCE THROUGH CANADIAN INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, in spite of Haiti's shocking record of Government by murder, Canadians must surely approve our decision to continue aiding that tyrannized country. As the Minister for External Relations (Mrs. Vézina) has said:

[Translation]

"We are not supporting a regime, we are helping a people".

[English]

Some people ask, however, if we are sure our aid is reaching the people and not the Government. For example, it has been alleged that most of the foreign aid to Haiti has stuck to the hands of its small elite. CIDA, however, claims that it has prevented that by dealing directly with Canadian businesses and Canadian non-governmental organizations that are working directly with the people of Haiti. The Government, therefore, should be supported in its decision to aid a people but not a government.

For that reason I also draw the attention of the House to the desire of that Duvalier corrupt regime for foreign investment and financing, and say that this should give our Government an opportunity to say to Duvalier: "Respect human rights first, then talk to us about investment".

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—REJECTION OF COLOURED PARLIAMENTARIANS BY RESTAURANT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, the words "rhetoric" and "reality" both begin with the letter "r". However, in the case of South Africa, that is all that they have in common. This past Friday we got a heavy dose of rhetoric from the President of South Africa. He said, among other things, that "apartheid was outdated". He said that he accepted one citizenship for all South Africans, implying equal treatment and opportunities. He expressed his belief that human dignity, life, liberty, and property must be protected, regardless of colour, race, creed or religion. That was rhetoric.

Yesterday we got a glimpse of the reality in South Africa. News reports tell us that a group of what are euphemistically referred to as "mixed-race" members of the South African Parliament were turned away from a "whites only" parliamentary restaurant. Two of those expelled were Government Ministers in charge of coloured affairs. So much for the rhetoric. That is the reality.

As an editorial in a Johannesburg newspaper put it today: "In a single action, Government has succeeded in making a mockery within a matter of hours of its grand reform moves".

The Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) six month deadline for reform in South Africa will soon be upon us. However, it is already crystal clear that in South Africa reform is just another word that begins with "r".

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, there is widespread concern about the Canadian dollar falling below 70 cents. There is much speculation as to the root causes. Clearly the sharp decrease in oil prices has a negative impact on producing countries such as Canada.

However, I would submit that the past decade of wild and irresponsible spending by the former Liberal Government is the root cause of our falling dollar.

The Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) rants and raves about the falling dollar and rising interest rates, yet he was the father of the deficit.

It took Canada 100 years to create a national debt of $20 billion. It took the Liberals a mere 10 years, starting in 1974, to increase the national debt to almost $200 billion.

In the mid 1970s the annual deficit was $2 billion. In 10 years the Liberals had increased this to $36 billion.

Our new Conservative Government is acting in a responsible manner to reduce the deficit, and thereby to reduce the crushing impact of interest charges on that debt which now absorb one-third of our revenues. Further tough measures are needed over the next several years to reduce the deficit and to restore financial stability and confidence.

What we do not need is the self-righteous, hypocritical, political posturing by the Opposition. The situation is too serious for that.

FORESTRY

SUMMIT CONFERENCE—ABSENCE OF MINISTER

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, why does the Government create a Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) and then hide him in the closet? Despite its professed concern with acid rain, the Government will have a delegation of only two officials plus a Parliamentary Secretary at the opening in Paris tomorrow of the first Summit Conference on the future of the world's forests.

The three day meeting is convened by President Mitterand and is being attended by representatives from 60 countries. Heads of State attending include Chancellor Kohl, the Prime Minister of Ireland, President Diouf of Senegal, Jacques Delors, President of the European Community, and Edourd Saouma, Director-General of the UN Food and Agricultural Organization.

Considering the significance of acid rain effects on Canadian forests and our vast forest resources, would it not be incumbent on Canada to have, as a minimum, the Minister of State for Forestry in attendance?

This is yet another indication of the priorities of the Government—if it has any—and its level of commitment to anything which does not relate to the deficit using archaic Tory bookkeeping mentality. Yet the state of our forests will very much affect the deficit about which the Government is so worried. Without healthy forests, we will see the deterioration and demise of one of Canada's major industries and a significant source of employment for many Canadians.

With these risks in mind, many people are asking why the Government showed so little interest, as demonstrated by the token representation Canada is sending to Paris.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

IMPROVEMENTS IN PERFORMANCE

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, nobody said that it would be easy. Nobody said that it wouldn't take time, but Canadians have responded to the new climate of confidence generated by their Government. They have rolled up their sleeves and are putting Canada back to work.

Since the election of September, 1984, 450,000 new jobs have been created, inflation has been reduced to 4 per cent, and interest rates have been reduced by 1.5 percentage points.

Canadians have refused to be misled by the doomers and gloomers in the Liberal Party and the NDP which have a vested interest in undermining Canadian achievement.

Consumer confidence is at an all-time high; manufacturers orders are up 15 per cent since the election; the value of building permits was up 25 per cent for 1985, representing over $3.5 billion of new construction.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government has confidence in Canadians and Canandians have confidence in their Government. Together we are clearing away the rubble of Liberal-Socialist failure and building a new future for the nation.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): My question is for the Minister of Finance. At 1.45 this afternoon the Canadian dollar slid to $69.50, and it is sliding at a faster rate than at any time in the history of the country. The Minister of Finance is clearly not in control of the situation. The financial markets of this country and around the world are voting non-confidence in the Government. I am asking the Minister of Finance when he is going to get matters under control.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the same question that the Hon. Member has given to me now, I have answered on a number of occasions. I ask him, before he makes any outrageous statements such as he has just made, to check the facts and then come back to the House.

[Translation]

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I did check the facts, Mr. Speaker, and I suggest that the Minister of Finance should begin to do his homework.

THE DOLLAR—MINISTER ASKED WHETHER HE WILL MAKE STATEMENT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Here is my supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Canadians are now captive passengers aboard a rudderless ship—there is nobody at the helm. Will the Minister assume his responsibilities and make a statement before the House to clear up the situation and attempt to stabilize the Canadian dollar market?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have made the policy of the Government very clear. First of all, we have addressed the fundamentals of the economic policy of this Government, and changed significantly the direction that this country has been going.

We set out, first, to change the direction of foreign investments by changing FIRA into Investment Canada. Second, we changed the national energy policy that would change the direction of foreign investments as it related to the energy industry in the country. Third, we have taken massive steps to get the deficit under control. Fourth, we have encouraged investment, both foreign and domestic, to get the competitive position of the country back in shape by encouraging investment in new plant equipment, in new technology. Those four things have been wisely regarded as the right things to do to get the fundamentals of the country back in shape, and they have been widely approved, particularly by the OECD in its report last year.

EFFECT ON PRICE OF IMPORTED FOODS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): That is all very well, Mr. Speaker, but the markets, the financial community, and the international situation don't believe the Minister. The dollar continues to go down. There will be no confidence in this Government. The Minister knows that as a result of the falling dollar Canadians, at this time of year particularly, have to import fruit and vegetables and other foodstuffs that are part of their regular food basket. What is he going to do to prevent the price of that food basket going up now that the dollar is going down?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have answered that question as clearly as I can with my response to his previous question. If he wants to go back and check the facts of what went on during his term of office when he set—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —when he set in place the slide in the Canadian dollar, it started at 105 when he was the Minister of Finance. It was those policies—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Minister may want to complete his answer and I think the House, please, should understand our obligations.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, let me make one point of contrast. During the term of office this Member was Minister of Finance—government spending was increasing by—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, order, order! Next question.

● (1420)

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. I am going to proceed to the next question. It seems to me that the Parties that ask questions should at least allow Ministers the quietness in which to answer them.

[Translation]

VALUE OF DOLLAR—MINISTER'S ALLEGED STATEMENT

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, someone in the House has to check the facts, and I think it should be the Minister of Finance. I must remind him that after the present Leader of the Opposition left the political scene in 1976 the Canadian dollar was trading at a premium against the American dollar. My question is very simple. The Minister told the Canadian Press that interest rates and the pressure on the dollar will go down as we get closer to the Budget date. Would the Minister explain why he made that statement to the Canadian Press?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, when the Leader of the Opposition left public life, he ran from the problems that he created himself during his term of office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Public spending during his time in office as Minister of Finance increased at a rate of 20 per cent. Both Hon. Members can check those facts. Yesterday I referred to the last year of the Right Hon. Member's term of office in which public spending increased by 29 per cent. It was the cumulative impact—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): How about a couple of surpluses?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): He does not like the facts. He talks about surpluses. He started off with a surplus. When he left office the deficit had gone up to $4.5 billion, from a surplus. He was the man who had the last surplus. That occurred in his first year in office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL STATEMENT

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, may I remind the Minister of Finance that it is now February, 1986, and at this time—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. Ministers should have the quietness in which to answer, and so should questioners have the quietness in which to put questions.

Mr. Garneau: It is now 1986 and the Canadian dollar is at 69 cents U.S. If the Minister of Finance is confident about the statement he made to the Canadian press yesterday, why does he not clear the air and make a statement today or tomorrow telling the Canadian people that somebody, somewhere in the Government, is in charge?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the point that I made in my first response today demonstrates clearly that we are in charge. We have clearly changed the direction of economic policy in Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): When we came into office the debt of the country had grown in the previous 15 years from $18 billion to $190 billion. We have taken steps to demonstrate that we are bound and determined to turn that around and to get the debt of the country under control, because no country can go on with debt increasing as it has for the last 10 years at a rate of 20 per cent per annum. In the last three years before we took office—

Mr. Garneau: What about this year?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Hon. Member would give me a chance to answer his question, I would give him the answer. In those last three years the debt was growing at 25 per cent annum. That cannot continue. We have turned that one around and that will be made very clear in the Budget that will be out in a few weeks' time.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PRESENTATION OF BUDGET—DATE INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. The Minister just said that he has moved the country in new directions. The clearest direction that Canadians have seen is the downward drop of the dollar.

Since the Minister himself has said, both as Minister of Finance and when he was in the Opposition, that the perception of Government stability is crucial for the international community's judgment of the currency, will he do something to establish some confidence in the Government by telling not only Canadians but the international community right now the date of the next Budget?

● (1425)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has referred to one statistic—the level of the Canadian dollar. I am going to ask him to consider the other statistics, which demonstrate very clearly that the economic track that this country is on has improved considerably over the last 18 months.

Mr. Deans: How about interest rates?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Some 450,000 jobs have been created. Inflation is stable. Productivity last year saw its best improvement in a number of years. The competitive position as measured by unit labour costs has improved considerably. The balance of trade is still strong. In response to the Hon. Member, interest rates are still a good deal lower than they were on September 4, 1984.

Mr. Deans: And the dollar is too!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I say to the Hon. Member that we are on the right track. We are not going to be knocked off that track by the irresponsible criticism of members of the Opposition.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows, because he follows this every day, that the interest rate structure has gone nowhere but up in the past month. He also knows that the interest rate being charged is about 3.5 per cent higher than that in the United States. Will he give his assurances, when Thursday comes around again, that he will not compound the problem of a falling dollar with another increase in interest rates? Will he assure us now that the interest rate structure will not go any higher?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, in the simplest possible way—because I have explained this to the Hon. Member on a number of occasions before—let me explain to him and Members of the House why what he is asking is not possible and, in view of the understanding which he has, it is irresponsible even to ask.

It is not possible, when the Government of Canada has to borrow $3 billion week in and week out as a result of the huge cash requirement that we have because of the size of the deficit, to set interest rates—fix them—as he would have us do. We are trying to stabilize the market-place. We are trying to moderate the pressures, both upward and downward, on exchange rates and interest rates.

Mr. Rodriguez: He sounds like John Turner.

Mr. Orlikow: He sounds like Marc Lalonde.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): That continues to be our policy. It is not possible for the Minister of Finance, or the Governor of the Bank of Canada, to say: "That is where interest rates will be and they will go no further". That is just not possible, simply because of the magnitude of the fiscal problem with which we were presented on September 4, 1984.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Minister the following question and I begin with the words of the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead when he was Leader of the Opposition—

Some Hon. Members: Who?

Mr. Broadbent: —after he had just described the position of the then Minister of Finance as pretending the Government can do nothing about interest rates and as passing the buck away from the Government, which has the responsibility for setting interest rate policy. I want to ask the Minister if what the Hon. Member for Yellowhead said when he was on this side of the House was true then, why is it not true now. Why will he not assure the people of Canada that he will keep interest rates down? That is the question to answer.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member likes to refer back to things said by the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead and things which I have said. I would like to draw the Hon. Member's attention to this. I am quoting, and I will do it quickly, from what I said on June 15, 1982:

> Why is there no confidence in the Canadian dollar? I have said this before and I will say it again, again and again. Why is the Canadian dollar weak? First, there is the National Energy Program; second, the attitude toward foreign investment;—

Some Hon. Members: Order, order!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre):

> —third, the budgetary proposals of last year; fourth, the high federal government deficit; and fifth, the federal-provincial squabbles.

In each of those five areas we are dealing with the problem in order to improve the economy as well as federal-provincial relationships, to stabilize the dollar—get it back up again—and get interest rates down.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MINISTER'S VIEWS

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I think we all have sympathy for the Minister who is somewhat exercised today. I do not think any of us would like to be known as the father of a 69 cent dollar.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Johnston: The Minister will recall that in September of 1984 when he assumed his portfolio the dollar was at 77 cents. He has told us at some length about all of the things he has done to strengthen confidence in the economy, and today the dollar stands at 69 cents. Would the Minister share with us, within these four walls, his own view of why the dollar has slid from 77 cents to 69 cents, notwithstanding all of the actions he says he has taken?

• (1430)

An Hon. Member: Right on.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member forgets the fact that when there are problems which have been building up for 15 and 20 years—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Chrétien: The problem is over there.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice was a major part of those problems and I am glad he is acknowledging it.

Mr. Chrétien: Sixty-nine cents now.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The problems are like a 100-car freight train which keeps moving—

Mr. Deans: Without someone in the caboose.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —and it is slow to stop it and turn it around. But we have made tremendous progress in slowing that freight train down, and we are turning it around because, as I indicated—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Box-car financing.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Questions and answers will please become shorter.

Mr. Johnston: I think the Minister should be cautious in using analogies.

Some Hon. Members: Why?

Mr. Kaplan: Because of the open window.

Mr. Johnston: For many reasons. I'll work on them.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): You're in the siding, shunted in the siding.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Will the Minister tell us—

Mr. Kaplan: A fast moving train past the open window.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Box-car finances.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Could the Hon. Member please just put a question.

Mr. Johnston: Will the Minister tell us whether he believes what he stated in July of 1984, that increasing interest rates were killing the economy and that a weakened dollar would be better for the economy than increasing interest rates? If he believes that, why is he today following both tracks at the same time—

Mr. Deans: Now you're following both.

Mr. Johnston: —on his freight train?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I did say that.

Mr. Broadbent: Because you're following Liberal precedent.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): And that is the exact response I gave to the Leader of the New Democratic Party. It is true that just to increase interest rates, having no regard to other policies, is wrong. That is why I was so critical through the years of the policies of the Hon. Member's Party. That is what I set out in Hansard on June 15, 1982, that we do not just increase interest rates. We must have the fundamental policies in place, and it is those fundamental policies we have been working on right from the start of this Government which are going to work. They have been working because of the jobs which have been created; 1,000 jobs a day—

An Hon. Member: And interest rates are lower.

Mr. Chrétien: Sixty-eight cents, sixty-nine cents, sixty-seven cents, bingo! Here you go.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Stability in inflation, housing starts up 25 per cent, these are the things which create the jobs and are the things people are going to reward us for by saying: "You are on the right track. You are doing the right thing".

MINISTER'S STATEMENT IN 1982

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance who, on June 16, 1982, had this to say when the dollar had fallen to 78 cents American, and I quote from page 18513 of Hansard:

> Surely the minister understands this. Does he not realize that every time the level of the dollar reaches a record low, his credibility also reaches a record low?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Riis: Does the Minister stand by his analysis of the credibility of the former Minister of Finance as it is tied to the value of the Canadian dollar?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker, and I will tell you why.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There are 450,000 people who have jobs today—

Some Hon. Members: Yeah, yeah, yeah!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —who didn't have them at that time who are saying: "Michael Wilson, thank you very much for everything you've done because you are on the right track. Keep at it".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: I suspect, Mr. Speaker, that the only thing falling faster than the Canadian dollar is the credibility of the Minister of Finance.

Some Hon. Members: Right on.

INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): A few weeks ago I asked the Minister of Finance whether or not he felt that increasing interest rates would add considerably to the debt. At that time he said it was a temporary phenomenon. Has he changed his mind?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry, I have not heard the question because we are getting another preamble.

Mr. Benjamin: You've got to listen for it.

Mr. Broadbent: He asked it.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mr. Broadbent: Yes.

Mr. Deans: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry. I rose in the middle of a preamble and did not hear a question. Is there a question?

An Hon. Member: It was finished.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, my question was simply this.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Talk about simple.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You are better at reading them.

Mr. Riis: Has the Minister of Finance changed his mind from saying that the increase in interest rates was a temporary phenomenon and, therefore, he had made no effort to calculate the impact on the increasing debt of the country?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I can quote a number of economists who would agree with the statement I made a little while ago.

Mr. Deans: You haven't calculated the cost.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I still stand by that statement. I say to the Hon. Member that words are cheap.

Mr. Deans: They certainly are.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Action is important, and it is the action of this Government which is important in that it is instilling confidence in what we are doing. I say to the Hon. Member it is very easy for him to rise in his place and make irresponsible statements—

Mr. Riis: Like what?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —because no one is going to listen to him.

Mr. Broadbent: The problem is they are listening to you.

Mr. Deans: Just remember, action is expensive.

An Hon. Member: Words, too.

JUSTICE

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF APPOINTMENT OF JUDGES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question to the Minister of Justice who recently sent New Brunswick Acadians a judge who happens to be a unilingual Anglophone from Saint John.

When the only Francophone judge of the Court of Appeal of Ontario retired last month, why did the Minister not appoint a Francophone to replace him, given the great number of francophone lawyers and judges in the Province of Ontario? Why this backward step?

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the appointment of a judge to the Ontario Court of Appeal was done after extensive consultation with, among others, the Attorney General of Ontario, the Chief Justice, and other members of the Court. There is a full panel to hear appeals in the French language in the Ontario Court of Appeal, including the supernumerary judge. I was advised by those with whom I consulted that the essential thing was to appoint a first-class person, and that person was appointed in the person of Mr. Justice Krever.

There is no problem with hearing appeals in French in the Ontario Court of Appeal. I am sorry that my hon. friend tries to raise an issue like this for political purposes instead of speaking to me privately about the matter.

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHY ANGLOPHONE APPOINTED INSTEAD OF AVAILABLE FRANCOPHONE

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, Section 135 of the Judiciary Act of Ontario reads, and I quote:

The official languages of the courts of Ontario are English and French.

Why does the federal Government refuse to co-operate with Ontario, considering that the province gives to all Canadians in Ontario the right to appear before a court of appeal or elsewhere and be heard by a judge who speaks his or her language? Why did it appoint an Anglophone judge when a Francophone judge was available?

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I find this really incredible.

An Hon. Member: Why?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): That's typical.

Mr. Crosbie: The Ontario Court of Appeal has a full panel which can hear any appeals in the French language, in that language, and this Government is doing more to advance the cause of bilingualism in this country in every way—or just as much, certainly, as our predecessors—and we certainly did not attempt to harrass with cheap shots on this particular issue in this House.

Mr. Gauthier: That's not true, and you know it.

PETRO-CANADA

CLOSURE OF SERVICE STATION AT GRAVENHURST, ONT.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Mrs. Cora McAra, who is being squeezed out of her gas station business in Gravenhurst, Ontario, told me on the phone last night that Petro-Canada would not let her lower her price two-tenths of a cent per litre because, in Petro-Canada's words, "other dealers would do this". What is the matter with precisely that, given that world oil prices are falling dramatically? Why doesn't the Government care about the McAras of this country?

• (1440)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the Hon. Member is raising a question which is the subject of today's debate. He knows it is our practice not to allow questions in Question Period on a matter which is on the floor. I am also reminded that it is the Hon. Member's motion which the House is debating.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am prepared to hear the Hon. Member's supplementary on a subject other than what is before the House for debate.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I think it is on a specific family.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: But I—well, Members may think it is funny but the McAras do not.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Next question. The Hon. Member for Notre-Dame—order, please. I recognized the Hon. Member and he did not put a question. The Hon. Member for Notre-Dame—

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will please resume his seat.

Mr. Waddell: You said I could put a general question.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will please resume his seat.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, point of order.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will please resume his seat.

Mr. Waddell: They're shouting me down and I'm trying to defend a family in Canada.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will please resume his seat.

Mr. Waddell: No, I will not sit down, Mr. Speaker. The point—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will please resume his seat.

Mr. Waddell: I will not. You want to kick me out of the House, kick me out. I will not sit down.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Typical NDP contempt for Parliament.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will resume his seat. I recognized the Hon. Member on a supplementary question. He rose, made a statement, and did not put a supplementary question. I am therefore going to the next Member.

Mr. Waddell: I was shouted down, that's why I couldn't—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I am not sitting down and I will leave the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Waddell: That's unfair.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—MANDATE TO SELL CORPORATION

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Yesterday some of us had the opportunity to visit Canadair in Montreal and meet with its President, Pierre Desmarais. Mr. Desmarais confirmed he had a mandate to sell Canadair without any restrictions or conditions. Since Canadair is now the only Canadian producer of aircraft, would the Minister give instructions to Mr. Desmarais not to sell Canadair unless majority control remains in Canada?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I can only give the Hon. Member the assurance that I have given several times before in connection with similar questions. As he indicated, Canadair is, hopefully, to be privatized but to date we have not been able to find a possible buyer who has indicated a positive interest in taking over Canadair. So his question really deals with a hypothetical situation.

REQUEST FOR RETENTION OF CONTROL IN CANADA

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, the President of Canadair has a mandate to sell the company without any conditions or restrictions. Will the Minister revise his instructions to Mr. Desmarais and make sure that they include that the company cannot be sold unless majority control remains in Canada? Will he tell him that those are his instructions and he does not have a wide open mandate?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, obviously the Hon. Member has been misinformed. Not just the President but also the Board of Canadair know it is our desire to privatize that company. The controlling shareholder, CDIC, knows it is our desire to privatize that company. However, the conditions under which we feel it should be privatized have been made abundantly clear. There are very strict parameters which we are interested in, when entertaining possible bids for Canadair.

Mr. Broadbent: What are they?

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—GOVERNMENT'S REACTION TO RECENT STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT BOTHA

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs concerning new events in South Africa. The recent speech by South African President Botha has received a mixed response from all sides of the issue. I would like to know the Government's reaction to these proposals, in particular the creation of a multi-racial council to advise President Botha of black demands in South Africa.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the recent speech by the President of South Africa touched upon some of the points raised in the Nassau Accord negotiated by the Prime Minister of Canada and other Commonwealth Prime Ministers this past fall. It has a long way to go before it meets other fundamental elements of the Nassau Accord. Our view is that we should continue to give encouragement to the Commonwealth group of experts who will be visiting South Africa and reporting back to representative Prime Ministers sometime in June or July.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): A supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre.

AGRICULTURE

SUGAR-BEET INDUSTRY—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture and concerns the Government's sugar policy. He will know that no sugar-beets were planted in Alberta last year due to the failure of his Government to restrict the dumping of cheap sugar on the Canadian market. Is it his Government's intention to follow the lead of virtually every sugar-producing country in the world by maintaining a floor price and imposing a surtax on imports, to protect beet and corn producers as well as the sugar refineries in Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, this is very similar to the question posed last week or perhaps the week before. My answer today would have to be the same as my answer then. The Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board has consulted far and wide. We are looking at a number of options. However, up to this point in time no final decision has been made.

ONTARIO AND QUEBEC CORN PRODUCERS

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, do those options include a look at the high fructose corn syrup industry as well? Is he looking out for the interests of Ontario and Quebec corn producers who stand to lose 20 cents a bushel if those refineries are shut down?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I thought the information contained in my first answer to the Hon. Member's question, where I indicated the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board had consulted far and wide, should be sufficient to answer his supplementary.

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

DISCOVERY OF AIDS DISEASE

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Associate Minister of National Defence. The disease called AIDS is now an epidemic in Canada. It has infected at least 2 members of the Armed Forces, one of whom has died. What extraordinary measures is the Department of National Defence proposing or taking to combat this deadly disease?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is correct the Canadian Armed Forces, as members of our society, are not immune to this disease. The Surgeon-General is closely monitoring the circumstances and is in close touch with officials of the Department of National Health and Welfare to ensure we are up to date on all the technological developments and further knowledge being made available daily on this disease. At this point in time it does not seem warranted that we take extraordinary measures in view of the uncertainty, I guess. However, the Hon. Member can be sure that we view it seriously and the Surgeon-General is closely monitoring the situation.

AGRICULTURE

INTRODUCTION OF FARMER-CREDITOR LEGISLATION

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. On July 10 last he promised to bring in farmer/creditor arrangements legislation to assist in the farm debt crisis which is certainly the most serious since the 1930s. Land values are dropping by 25 per cent to 50 per cent. Is the Minister going to keep his promise to the many farm organizations which have been demanding action in this regard, and to the farmers who have been forced off their land and out of their homes?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I cannot help but notice that questions from the Opposition become very repetitive. I know this question was posed a couple of weeks ago as well. I indicated to the Hon. Member, who I am sure posed the question at that time, that we were looking at a number of options. However, to this point in time no final decision has been made.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is simply waffling on his promise. He said a couple of days ago he was listening to the silent majority. Will he admit that that silent majority is really the big banks of this country? Why does he not listen to the elected representatives of the farm organizations of the country, and bring in legislation?

• (1450)

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I reject completely and totally the Hon. Member's observation that the Government is waffling. Indeed, if there are any experts in waffling, he should look around him because that is where he will see them. The Government has not waffled since it assumed office. We have passed more agricultural legislation than any Government in history.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wise: Check the record. Indeed we have taken over 170 initiatives supplying well over $3 billion to the agri-food industry. That is action. That is commitment. That is not waffling.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CRIMINAL CODE

BOMB THREAT HOAXES—REQUEST FOR STIFFER PENALTIES

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. The recent bomb threat hoax at the airports has cost Canadian taxpayers approximately $1 million through extra security costs. Apparently the only charge that can be laid in this situation is one of public mischief. Will the Minister consider introducing legislation in the House to provide new offences, new penalties, and perhaps restitution provisions, so that this type of situation can be dealt with more effectively in the future?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, that is a very good suggestion. As the Hon. Member points out, a problem exists. We are considering that situation in the context of the legal review which is now under way with reference to the Criminal Code. I will certainly be glad to consider the Hon. Member's suggestion.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—ROLE OF PROVINCES

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Secretary of State for External Affairs for bringing the provinces into unanimity on free trade. They are all agreed that Ottawa's promises of full participation have turned out to be meaningless.

Why will the Minister not accept the suggestion of all four western provinces that the provinces be equal partners in these free trade talks and have representatives in the negotiating room with the federal Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member reads too many newspapers. He should have learned long ago that they cannot always be counted on.

Mr. Benjamin: You had better read the want ads.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, this comes not from newspapers but from one of those western Ministers himself.

Some Hon. Members: Name him.

ACCESS TO FREE TRADE STUDIES

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, how can the Minister expect Canadians to have confidence in his handling of free trade talks when even the provinces have had to request public information about the free trade studies of the Government? Why is it that the Government keeps these studies secret from the people—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is a second question and it is long.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I was afraid Question Period would be over before the question got out. For the first time in Canadian history there has been an attempt made by a national Government to bring the provinces into full participation in a very important trade negotiation. There has already been agreement reached between both levels of Government as to how we, together, agree on data and on the facts that we want to bring into any negotiation. There are negotiations proceeding now between the federal and provincial Governments. We believe that they will be successful.

I want to make it clear, Mr. Speaker, that while the Government believes in ensuring—

Mr. Hovdebo: Question Period is over.

Mr. Orlikow: Time.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —that there will be full participation by all of the affected provinces, it should also be abundantly clear to everyone that the Government has the mandate and the will to speak for all of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deans: The answer should be no longer than the question.

PROVINCIAL FRESH WATER RIGHTS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question, too, is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Simon Reisman is meeting with provincial government representatives today. Knowing his personal commitment to the sale of Canadian water to the United States, will the Government at least allow provincial veto over any agreement on fresh water rights within their own boundaries?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that question has been raised before and has been answered before.

GRAND CANAL COMPANY PROPOSAL

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the question has not been answered. Contrary to the position taken by the Minister of the Environment, two months ago the National Research Council secretly approved—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a supplementary question, please.

Ms. Copps: Is the Minister aware that the National Research Council secretly approved a grant to the Grand Canal Company which is studying a proposal to divert Arctic waters through the Great Lakes? How can the Government expect provincial Ministers and provincial Governments to accept this "trust us" attitude on this very important issue in light of the confusing federal signals about whether or not our water is up for sale?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the question has been posed several times and has been answered several times. The question of Canada's water is not involved in the trade negotiations. That has been made clear a number of times. I think the Hon. Member would do the House and the country a service if, once the facts are known, she would not lend the stature of her office to sowing confusion in the country.

SOCIAL SECURITY

PROCESSING OF APPLICATIONS FOR GUARANTEED INCOME SUPPLEMENT

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. There are approximately 67,500 Guaranteed Income Supplement applications to be processed by the regional office in Regina. Last year 27 temporary staff were hired to do that job. This year it appears that only two are being hired, which seems inadequate for the job. Is this the same situation all across Canada? Is there not a danger that the applications will not be processed in time for April?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, before April 1 of every year those old age pensioners who are eligible, on the basis of income, for a part of or for the entire Guaranteed Income Supplement have to make application for it. I have again approved an insert to indicate to both eligible old age pensioners and family members that applications may be made well in advance, that they do not have to wait until the end of March to do it, and that they will be processed in due time.

The Member should also note that each year there are some eligible senior citizens who do not apply, either because they forget or are not aware of it. That is the reason for the insert. We have always put into place a system whereby these people can be taken care of.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL GUARANTEE

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, the incomes of some senior citizens will be dropped from $612 to $385 if the applications are not processed—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is again a preamble. Is there a question?

Mr. Hovdebo: Will the Minister ensure that seniors who depend on the $612 GIS get it even if the applications are not processed on time?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Member makes a totally misleading point. I just answered that. I said that these people are eligible for the OAS and the GIS and that there is not a drop. Other than if application is not made, it has always been paid on time and we will pay it on time again. There is no question about it. I wish he would not sow that kind of fear for senior citizens who are relying on that money, and that he would not use it for political purposes.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

EDUCATION

FINANCING OF POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Hon. Secretary of State. After all the lofty rhetoric and the promises that his Government has made that it would consult, work, and co-operate with the provinces, why has the Secretary of State for External Affairs now further antagonized the provinces by refusing, as recently as last week, to consult with and reveal to them the contents of the Government's report which, in fact, is about the provinces themselves and what they are going to do to finance post-secondary education? Why is he making a unilateral, one-sided report and keeping the provinces—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please!

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, if only my colleague were a bit more patient, we will be tabling that report in the House tomorrow. He will also have all necessary information about the provinces.

I must point out that the provinces were consulted about the figures in the report, and I think we will have every opportunity to comment on the report since it will be tabled tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Speaker: A short supplementary.

• (1500)

FUNDING OF TRAINING PROGRAMS

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, that is not what the provinces say. I do not think that answer is good enough because we are taking away from the provinces on every front. My supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: Quickly, please.

Mr. de Corneille: Will the Secretary of State stop the Minister of Employment and Immigration from reducing by 40 per cent the funds for training programs which are so vital to the survival of community colleges? Will he stop her from doing it?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, there is no connection between the report and the question raised by the Hon. Member, in the sense that the employment policies advocated by my colleague the Minister of Employment and Immigration include some which relate to the report mentioned. These are figures concerning funds allocated by the federal Government for provincial education last year. Again I say there is no connection, and the Hon. Member will have an opportunity to ask questions once the report has been tabled in the House.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Monday, February 3, 1986, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

POINTS OF ORDER

DISALLOWANCE OF QUESTION—SUBJECT MATTER BEFORE THE HOUSE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to ask first, if you can hear me—

Mr. Speaker: Hardly.

Mr. Deans: I do not doubt it. That may be part of my point of order.

I am sure you will recall that during the Question Period a question put by my colleague from Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr.

Waddell) was disallowed. Would you be kind enough to review the question within the context of the much more general motion put down in his name on behalf of this Party for the debate today. The noise level is sometimes high and, therefore, obscures the actual words of an hon. Member.

Perhaps you can determine whether it is indeed inappropriate for a Member to seek the answer to a specific question affecting a specific area, notwithstanding the fact that a much more general debate, which may encompass that but not specifically deal with it, is already under way. It is vitally important for the purposes of future Question Periods.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, we all realize that the occupant of the chair during the Question Period has a very difficult job, and we understand the challenges that involve the necessity for making very quick decisions.

Therefore, I want to draw your attention to what is clearly on the record of the House of Commons. There are many occasions, including a number under your distinguished Speakership, when questions were allowed on specific matters but which related to subjects that were then under debate in the House during Government Orders or on Opposition Days. For example, we regularly have questions during Question Period on matters pertaining to the Budget while the Budget debate is taking place. Let me give another example. After second reading debate on the Investment Canada Bill began in the House in the morning, questions were accepted during that day's Question Period on matters pertaining to that very piece of legislation.

I respectfully draw these precedents, and many others which I could give, to your attention for your consideration of the request made by my hon. colleague.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair thanks the distinguished Members for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) and Windsor West (Mr. Gray) for the quality and tone of their presentations. I think both Members know that the Chair is confronted with the citation stating that a question during Question Period should not anticipate the Order of the Day. It was on that basis only that I made my interjection. During that interjection I tried to signal that I was prepared to give a supplementary on a general policy question, separate from the one that is in the general motion.

The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain raises the Chair's dilemma when he talks about a matter which is specific for Question Period but flows within the general matter of debate. That is very difficult for the Chair to contemplate.

With regard to the matter raised by the Hon. Member for Windsor West, I will be happy to consider the matter. However, the distinction is usually made when the matter is broader than the specific question that is before the House for debate, such as the motion before the House today. However, I will consider the matter and return to the House. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mr. Turner) on the same point of order.

Point of Order—Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)

REFUSAL OF SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION—REQUEST FOR RULING ON QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE—JANUARY 15, 1986

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, perhaps this is also related to the fact there was a fair amount of noise during Question Period, but I attempted to rise for a supplementary question. You either did not hear me or perhaps did not see me.

You will recall that I rose on a question of privilege on January 15 and Your Honour said that at some point in the not too distant future you would be making a ruling on this issue that is frustrating us during Question Period. Are we getting close to that point in the future?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is confusing two matters. I made a ruling with regard to the matter he raises.

I subsequently had been asked by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) to deal with Question Period in general terms. I intend to do so at the earliest possible moment. Hon. Members will understand that the Chair has been rather occupied.

I might say to the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton that I did see him rise today and heard his claim for a supplementary question. He knows the Chair's practice in that regard. There is no bar on a supplementary question but I think he knows that it is the Chair's intention to allow as many Government questions on a given day as possible, within our normal practices.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order in relation to your comments about Question Period. I hope there will be an opportunity for certain Members from each Party to make brief suggestions to you with respect to Question Period at an appropriate time, if that is in order.

Mr. Speaker: With great respect, one of the reasons I have been waiting to deliver the ruling is that when the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) asked me to review the matter, the Parliamentary Secretary asked if I would wait for representations from him. I have yet to receive any.

Mr. Lewis: Does it matter if I invite you or you invite me? Surely we can get together.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If the Parliamentary Secretary wishes to make submissions to me on this matter, I am perfectly happy to receive them. I hope that he will do so. I do have an obligation to come back to the House as quickly as possible, and it has now been eight or nine days.

PETITIONS

POSTAL SERVICE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by 150 residents of the riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell, living in the vicinity of Orleans, Ontario. They demand justice from Canada Post when this organization refuses to provide these residents with door-to-door postal service they way most other urban communities in Canada are served. They are protesting the very unfair action by Canada Post and the Government of Canada relating to this issue.

[Translation]

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN SHOPS AT MONCTON

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, again today I have the duty to present to the House a petition from residents of the riding of Moncton and Westmorland-Kent. Those people are still concerned about the situation at the CN Moncton shops and, by presenting this petition, they want to make sure that the House is fully aware of the importance of those jobs to the Moncton region.

[English]

POSITION OF POSTMISTRESS WITH CANADA POST

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a petition signed by approximately 1,100 residents from Reserve Mines in the constituency of Cape Breton-East Richmond. Their petition is on behalf of a lady by the name of Evelyn Syms, a resident of Reserve Mines and an employee of Canada Post for the past 16 years who has proven to be an efficient and conscientious public servant. She attempted to seek a job with Canada Post for a position as postmistress and has been denied. The community wishes me to lay this petition before the House in order to register their complaint on behalf of Evelyn Syms.

ASSESSMENT OF MAINTENANCE FACILITIES—CN SHOPS, MONCTON

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I rise once again, and I appreciate the Speaker's indulgence in this regard, to present petitions signed by residents of the federal constituency of Moncton and Westmorland-Kent expressing their concern with regard to the Canadian National's assessment of the maintenance capacity of the shop facilities.

TAX INCREASES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise and present a petition on behalf of a number of residents of Halifax indicating their concern about the unfair tax increases of the last budget.

INDEXATION OF FAMILY ALLOWANCES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): I have another petition from Saskatchewan. People are still holding up some hope that the Government will come to its senses and reinstate full indexation of family allowances.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) is seeking the floor to move a motion?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry but I am still finding this Chamber very noisy. I have a notice of a Ways and Means Motion. I have not heard any of the things you have been saying.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair has enormous difficulty with the commotion going on. It is not surprising that other Members have difficulty hearing.

The Hon. Minister of State for Finance intends to move now a Ways and Means motion?

Mrs. McDougall: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

WAYS AND MEANS

TABLING OF NOTICE OF MOTION

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I wish to table in both official languages copies of a Ways and Means motion concerning the Atlantic Accord pursuant to Standing Order 65(1). Pursuant to Standing Order 65(2), I ask that an Order of the Day be designated for its consideration.

Mr. Speaker: The Minister is in fact operating under Government Notices of Motions.

Mrs. McDougall: Is it not in order, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: It is perfectly in order. The tabling of that notice can be done at anytime.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have put several questions on the Order Paper dating back a year ago. I have risen a number of times to ask the Parliamentary Secretary about them. He has assured me that he would use his kind office to facilitate the answering of those questions. Can the Parliamentary Secretary tell me whether he has made any headway on those several matters outstanding?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that I am making great progress, but I do not have any progress to report.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, this is a very serious matter. The Government is refusing, obviously deliberately, to answer questions from the Opposition.

Can the Parliamentary Secretary give a date to this House now when he will table the cost of the Shamrock Summit of March 17 last year, a question I have had on the Order Paper for almost a year? I know this is terribly embarrassing, but on what date will the Parliamentary Secretary table that information in the House?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I do not see why the Hon. Member should be embarrassed about that question. He asked it in good faith. I will look into it.

Mr. Gagnon: Mr. Speaker, it is not only the Opposition that needs some questions answered. I posed a question on December 14, 1984. Can the Parliamentary Secretary tell me when I could expect an answer?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I just want to indicate that we are treating everybody the same.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) is rising on a point of order under questions.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Parliamentary Secretary. With respect to Questions on the Order Paper, I understand that the Special Committee looking into Parliamentary Reform has made certain recommendations relating to questions on the Order Paper. Could the Parliamentary Secretary tell me what the status of those recommendations are and whether he supports the recommendations?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is out of order at this time.

Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 63—PRICE OF GASOLINE

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Waddell:

That this House demands that the Government instruct Petro-Canada and its retail outlets to reduce their prices at the pump by six cents a litre, a move which would enable Petro-Canada to fulfil one of its basic purposes which is to provide Canada with reasonable energy prices.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join in the debate today on the motion proposed by my friend, the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). I am pleased to see him back in the House after he beat a hasty retreat during Question Period. I hope in the few minutes allotted to me in this debate to be able to answer some of the questions he wished to pose during Question Period, and I would like to answer some of the points he raised in his remarks this morning.

Let me start off by commenting on my hon. friend's remarks about a revolt by consumers. It is interesting to note that the Member referred many times in his address to little paper clip-outs which he has at times thrown all over the House. Let me read what they contain. It starts off:

Dear — To: —
House of Commons

I've had enough.

I agree with the Canadian Automobile Association that gasoline taxes are too high.

The cost of gasoline is discouraging both Canadian and U.S. tourism and damaging our economy, and the high price is unfair to those of us who must use our cars to drive to work.

I am prepared to pay my share of costs relating to highways and roads, but I am against taxing gasoline to raise money to service our national debt.

You are my MP. I want to know what you plan to do to relieve motorists of this inequitable tax burden.

What it says is that taxes are too high. I submit that we all think taxes are too high. In every area we all think taxes are too high, but we also have certain responsibilities to provide the safety net we have, which they do not have in the United States. We have a responsibility to pay our debts which amount now to some $200 billion; the money has to come from somewhere. I think it is human nature to say: "Get the money somewhere else but not from us".

The Hon. Member has based his whole motion on these mail-ins. Yet the Member's motion says absolutely nothing about reducing taxes. What the Member for Vancouver-Kingsway says is reduce the cost at the pump by 6 cents a litre, but not in taxes. The Member does not refer to taxes. He did not even mention taxes in his speech. I assume he did it on purpose. It seemed obvious.

The tax on a litre of gasoline to the federal Government, no matter what the price, is 7.1 cents. Provincial taxes are higher, with the exeption of two provinces, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Those two provinces have no provincial sales tax on gasoline.

Rather they get their income from royalties at the wellhead. Other provincial taxes range—and I have the exact figures here—anywhere from 7.7 cents; Ontario's is 8.3 cents, and the provincial tax in Quebec is 12.9 cents. I can give the figures for the other provinces. In Nova Scotia it is 10.1 cents; in New Brunswick it is 9.8 cents. There are the taxes on a litre of gasoline.

We all complain about the taxes, and I guess we always have. I remember that when I first had to pay income tax some 30 years ago, with my first summer job, I complained about taxes. I think that will always be the case.

That is not what the Hon. Member is talking about in this motion. What he is saying is that one oil company that competes in the market-place must reduce its price of gas at the pumps by a certain amount—6 cents per litre. He does not take into account that the company may lose money if it has to do that, or perhaps just break even. Whatever the situation may be, he just arbitrarily says, change the price as dictated by that great white father in Ottawa. Dictate, set, control, that is the NDP philosophy. We understand that. That is why the New Democratic Party has never been in power, and never will be in my lifetime, and that is for sure. They want to control the Canadian people. They want to get their hands on them. The first thing they want to control is gas prices. Then they want to control the price of bread, and then the price of cars, and then perhaps your suits and your neckties. They want to control all the prices. They want everything, they want to dictate.

The difference in philosophy between the socialist parties and the Progressive Conservative Party is dramatic and realistic, and the Canadian people can see through this facade, this phoney issue brought on the floor of the House today by the Hon. Member. Let me tell the people who are watching today that the Hon. Member does not like big companies; he does not like big transportation companies; and he does not like big oil companies. He does not like anything big, except big Government, and he loves big Government. The more bureaucrats you have controlling your life the better it is. That is what he wants to do, he wants to dictate everything in this country, and he is at it again with this motion. This happens all the time with the socialists, and the Canadian people can see through it.

What we are saying is let the market-place work. World oil prices are falling rather dramatically, especially within the last three weeks. The Hon. Member admitted in his speech today that the great fall started about two weeks ago on January 28, or thereabouts. That is when we saw the great fall in prices.

However, most refineries in this country have a two-month supply on hand, especially at this time of the year when the weather is cold and we have tremendous fluctuations in temperature. They keep emergency supplies on hand. For the most part, that is the oil for which they paid $28, $29, $30 a barrel. It is there now and going through the system. Before too long it will be through the system. As a matter of fact I read just the other day that one of the purchases at about $18.50 a barrel, I believe, was for delivery on April 1. So we are talking lead time.

The Ottawa Citizen, in an editorial on January 31 said the following in reference to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney):

> Carney's intervention is little more than a counterpunch to the public relations drubbing the Government has been taking on this issue.

I readily admit that we have been taking a drubbing in public relations on the issue. However, there is much more merit to the things that Carney has been saying than those issuing from the mouths of mock, furious Liberals and New Democrats. It is juvenile to expect that a downturn in world oil prices will be felt instantly at the gas pumps. The cheaper oil now being bought will not reach markets until existing higher priced stocks have been exhausted. The Opposition sit there and holler while I read this because they do not like the truth. They don't like facts that are being presented. I have not known The Citizen to be too friendly to the Conservative Government over the last year and a half, but in this editorial they are bang on. This editorial was based on facts, not on innuendo, and not on great pie-in-the-sky public relations efforts on behalf of the Opposition.

We heard another complaint today about gas prices being cheaper in the United States than they are in Canada, and that is true. They do not have the provincial and federal taxes in the United States that we have in Canada. Also, they do not have the good roads we have in this country. They do not have the social security service nets that are provided in this country. Those costs have to be paid for by the individual. My hon. friend from Montreal who is very conversant in the energy industry, especially the retail end, made it very clear the other day that he has talked to many Americans who would gladly pay more for their oil and their gas if they had the social security, the old age security, the Guaranteed Income Supplements, and the health plans that we have in this country. They would gladly pay a few more cents a litre on their gas if they had these services.

Just as an aside at this particular point, the Hon. Member was talking this morning about home heating oil, but he failed to mention that home heating oil in Canada is 5 cents cheaper per litre than it is in the United States at the present time. He quite conveniently forgot to mention that this morning when he was bringing that point out. When they throw out these facts and figures he should remember that there are two sides to every story.

I might say to the Hon. Member that we fully expect that the decrease in the prices of oil will be seen at the gas pumps in this country in the not too distant future, but it does take time to go through the system. As a matter of fact, the Chairman of the Board of Imperial Oil Limited just yesterday was speaking to the prestigious Canadian Club in Toronto.

An Hon. Member: Oh.

Mr. McDermid: Well, the Hon. Member is upset because he has never been invited, and I understand why. He was talking about what is going on in the market-place today and he said:

The expected decline in prices at the retail level may come sooner than expected; industry competition in the refined product business will come on like gangbusters.

I submit to you that we have seen this already. I can only speak from my personal grass roots experience. Last week in the small community of Georgetown, which is in my riding, retail gasoline was selling at 44.5 cents per litre, up to about 47.1 cents per litre. In Mississauga, as I drove to the airport the other day, it was 46.5 cents per litre. The market-place is working, the competition is working, even before the new oil prices are coming through.

I can assure you that if the Government dictates that the price be lowered by "x" number of pennies, it will not go any lower, even when there are lower input costs, or when the market dictates that it drop because of competition.

My friends in the NDP do not believe in competition. They want everything big. They do not want anybody to compete. On the basis of what they say now, the first thing they would do is commandeer another oil company and tack it on to Petro-Canada. That is what they would do. The first thing they would do if they got into office is make Petro-Canada bigger, and that would probably just be the beginning. They would probably buy up every oil company and crank up the old Canadian debt even more than it is now.

• (1530)

There have been opposition complaints about the differential between gas prices in Canada and the United States and I touched on that. I would like to return for a moment to that editorial from the Citizen. The article reads:

Opposition complaints about the differential between gasoline prices in Canada and the U.S. are just as disingenuous.

That is a great word. I have never heard the Opposition described quite like that before. I have heard it described as being a rag-tag bunch and other things, but that is a good word. The article goes on:

Taxes make up just 15 per cent of the pump price of American gasoline. In Canada, federal and provincial taxes account for more than half.

Governments could cut those taxes, of course. Has the opposition any helpful suggestions about where that revenue loss could be made up? Or, failing that, which government programs should be eliminated?

No, not at all. This is just a phoney motion. It is mischievous.

I would like to cover one very serious point which was brought up by the Hon. Member today. I think he is doing a very great disservice to Mr. and Mrs. McAra of Gravenhurst. Mr. and Mrs. McAra are commissioned sales people for the company Petro-Canada. They had been approached by representatives of the company personally a number of times and were requested to add the amount of federal and provincial tax increases to the price of gasoline charged by Petro-Canada. It was right in the contract that the McAras had with Petro-Canada that they should do that, but they defaulted on it. Petro-Canada went out of its way to try to explain this matter to them and to help them, but they refused to change the price.

Mr. and Mrs. McAra's service station is located in what is affectionately called gasoline alley on Highway No. 11 just after Highway No. 400 between Barrie and Gravenhurst. In a stretch of perhaps half a mile or three-quarters of a mile, there must be 15 or 16 gas stations of all types, both independent and major. Gas prices in that area go up and down as the market dictates. It is a highly competitive stretch of road. The Hon. Member is from British Columbia and probably does not know about this part of Ontario. I know it very well because I travel it all the time as do a number of my colleagues. It is a highly competitive area and prices go up and down all the time.

The issue at hand is the addition of a tax which, under contract, must be applied to the price of gas. The McAras' agreement with Petro-Canada also indicates that the agreement can be terminated by either Mr. and Mrs. McAra or Petro-Canada with 24-hours' notice. Petro-Canada did not want to damage the ability of the McAras to carry on business and therefore promised to supply them with the product for another 90 days so that they could make the necessary arrangements to find another gasoline supplier. Petro-Canada will continue to supply them as long as they comply with the notice that was given.

I think it is very important to understand that the tanks and pumps and everything else were loaned to the McAras by the oil company. The company is allowing them to remain there until a new gas supplier has been found. I believe the company has been very fair to the McAras, and the Hon. Member knows full well that there are two sides to every story. Before he made some of the claims he did, he should have called to get the facts, something which he neglected to do.

I know my time is rapidly coming to a close, so in summing up, I would like to say that consumers will, because of the market-sensitive pricing we have put in place, realize benefits from the cut in the cost of oil. That is very important to remember. We believe that the market-place operates well. Members of the New Democratic Party, with the help of their friends, members of the Liberal Party, do not believe that. They want to dictate everything. If that has worked so well in the past, I want to know why gasoline prices in Montreal rose during the time of the National Energy Program, not by 80 per cent but by 94 per cent.

This mischievous motion that my hon. friend has put before us deserves to be defeated, pooh-poohed and shooed out of the House. It deserves to be exposed for what it really is, a public relations exercise to try to make it appear as though the Opposition is doing the consumer a favour when in fact it is making things more difficult for the consumer.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment to make and a question to ask of the Hon. Member. May I congratulate the Hon. Member on his speech? I would like to apologize to the Hon. Member for something which occurred some time ago. I saw the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) in the House and the spirit moved me. Some time ago I said some nasty words about the Hon. Member. He has always been straightforward with me. I disagree almost totally with what he said in his speech, but it was a good speech. I would like to make some comments on it and to ask some questions of him.

Am I doing the McAras a disservice by putting their case in front of the House of Commons? I wonder if the Hon. Member spoke to the McAras. If he spoke to them, he would find, as Mrs. McAra told me last night, that she wanted to lower the price of gasoline by two-tenths of a cent per litre between the service and self-service because the other stations were doing that. She offered to pay that difference out of her own pocket and Petro-Canada would not let her because, in its words, other dealers would want to do it. That is precisely the point. Petro-Canada should be the price leader rather than the price follower in this time of dramatically falling world oil prices.

The Hon. Member knows that the market-place in the oil industry is an oligopoly. He knows that four companies own 70 per cent of the market, another four companies own another 15 per cent of the market, and the independents own 15 per cent of the market and are always getting squeezed. If he does not know that, he should turn around and ask the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) about it. He owned a small station. He will tell the Hon. Member about it. The world market price is fixed either by OPEC or by Exxon. This great market out there is something to behold.

My friend brought up the red herring, no pun intended, about the big, bad socialists dictating the price. There are times when it is right to dictate prices and times when it is not right. The Hon. Member said that socialists dictate prices at all times. I am proud of the fact that when Tommy Douglas became Premier of Saskatchewan in 1944, he told the banks not to foreclose on the poor farmers. Their sons and daughters are still in business today because of that. There are times when we must use the power of Government.

The Hon. Member might be surprised to learn that I am a socialist who believes in a more decentralized Government, but we will talk about that some other time. Of course I mentioned taxes in my speech. I said that taxes on the consumer were too high and that there was a time to stop. I admitted that the Government could use the money for social services but I said that it was a cop-out to make that its only argument for taxing the motorist and for not reducing oil prices at a time of dramatically declining world oil prices.

As a matter of fact, we in the NDP put our money where our mouth is. I agree with the Hon. Member that provincial Governments are piggybacking higher taxes and that the Canadian Automobile Association should go after the provincial Governments as well. In the Province of Ontario, the NDP stopped the Ontario provincial Government from putting an increase on gasoline taxes not too long ago.

Mr. McDermid: Who?

Mr. Waddell: The New Democratic Party of Ontario.

• (1540)

Mr. McDermid: Who else?

Mr. Waddell: I don't know; maybe the Conservatives, too.

The Hon. Member cites The Citizen of Ottawa. The Winnipeg Free Press has an editorial, too. We can throw editorials at each other until we get tired. I quote from an article which appeared in the Winnipeg Free Press on January 25 of this year which states:

> Faced with dropping world prices that are too large to ignore, the government has fallen back on the time-worn excuse that price reductions take 60 days to work themselves through the system. If that is the case, they should be working their way through by now.

I want to ask the Hon. Member this question. How much lead time will it take for these prices to work their way through? I ask this question given the fact that there are companies such as Imperial Oil which not only own the oil but refine and market it, in some cases. The incentive for Imperial in that type of situation is to keep the prices high and not reduce them. I want to know from the Hon. Member how long it will take. Can the Hon. Member give me some figures? He says: "We expect decreases in the not too distant future". Will he give me some time limits? When will we see this $9 a barrel decrease reflected at the pump? If the Hon. Member would give me some time limits, then maybe we would stop pressing and the consumers would be satisfied. Let us have some specifics on the subject. How long will it take to go through? What guarantee does the Hon. Member have from the oil companies that, in fact, the prices will be passed along? From past conduct I have noticed that if there is an increase in the world price today it is placed on the consumer at the pumps tomorrow. However, if there is a decrease we hear: "Well, sometime in the not too distant future we expect a decrease". When and by how much?

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member asks when and by how much. First, I cannot say when. I can tell the Hon. Member that in some areas of Canada where there are great reserves of oil it has to be used up before the cheaper oil arrives. In those areas it may take a little longer. In other areas where there are low reserves it may take less time. However, we will see it in the next few weeks. There is no question about that.

The Hon. Member asks how much. That is impossible to tell. It will vary in different areas. If I say how much it will be, then it may turn out to be a little different at the gas pump at the Co-op in Georgetown, which it is today. It is 44.8 cents a litre there as opposed to the Shell station down the road where it costs a penny-and-a-half more. To say exactly what the price will be is foolish. The market has so much to do with it, and the Hon. Member knows that full well. He is being mischievous again.

I might say that it is interesting to hear the Hon. Member quote our good friend and great parliamentarian Tommy Douglas. He now sits on the board of directors of one of those big nasty oil companies, Husky Oil.

Mr. Waddell: It's a Canadian company.

Mr. McDermid: I know it is of great embarrasment to members of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Orlikow: Not at all. We are proud of it. Why should we be embarrassed? We have no embarrasment at all.

Mr. McDermid: I know it was of great embarrasment to the New Democratic Party when Mr. Douglas took on that job.

I think the Hon. Member knows the industry a little better then he makes believe. He knows full well that prices will vary from market to market because of the cost of transportation, refining costs, and so on and so forth. There are so many factors that come into play here. It is not just a simple matter of ten cents, six cents, five cents, or whatever it may be. He knows that full well. To be fair—and it may hurt a little but I am sure he can be fair—he should admit that that is a factor. We know that the prices are now down in Montreal. My friend, the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce), was never squeezed.

Mr. Della Noce: I stood up.

Mr. McDermid: That is right. He was never squeezed. He stoop up for his rights. He fought. To say that he was squeezed is very unfair.

To sum up, I would like to say that the system which is in place today is a market sensitive system which will benefit the consumer. We are seeing some signs of that already. In Mississauga the price of a litre of gasoline is 46.5 cents. Just two weeks ago it was 53 cents litre. That is because the market forces are at play. It is that price even before the low cost crudes have come through. That is the market forces working, and working to the benefit of the consumer.

The Hon. Member says that his Party is not proposing to dictate prices. What is he saying in his motion? He is saying that a Crown corporation should lower its gasoline prices by six cents a litre. He is price setting. That is what he is doing. He cannot fool the Canadian people with that.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member mentioned taxes. I wish to ask the Parliamentary Secretary this question. How can any Government justify increasing sales and income taxes, higher gasoline prices and taxes, and cuts in family allowances, all in the name of spending restraint, while in Bills which we have just passed it is pumping billions into the oil industry? It is pumping $5.3 billion in forgone taxes to an industry that is already fat to begin with and that has clever corporation accountants.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I will try to answer the Hon. Member's very complicated question.

Mr. Orlikow: It is only complicated to answer.

Mr. McDermid: I will try to make my answer as simple as possible. The taxation of this particular industry was unique. No other industry in the country was taxed in the same way. It was unfair.

Mr. Orlikow: It was too low.

Mr. McDermid: It caused untold damage to the economy. We are not handing the oil companies billions of dollars. We are removing the very expensive Petroleum Incentive Program which paid for activity and not results. It was a very expensive program. The NDP Members like to say that we are handing them billions of dollars—we are not. What we are saying is: "Your industry will be taxed fairly, just like every other industry will be taxed". The industry was not being taxed fairly before and now it is being taxed fairly. The industry is getting on with the job. Investment intentions are up $2 billion in the first year alone. The figures which the Hon. Member throws out go on and on for years and years down the road.

Mr. Waddell: They are your figures.

Mr. McDermid: In the very first year we have seen $2 billion in increased investment intentions. I think that is significant since it translates into jobs right across the country.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Resuming debate, the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria).

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity this afternoon to participate in this very important debate. It is important to the constituents of my riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell.

To put everything in context, I think we should perhaps establish for the information of all Hon. Members why this issue is so vital to the people I represent in the House of Commons. As Hon. Members know, Glengarry-Prescott-Russell is a large rural riding. Having an automobile in the constituency which I represent is not a luxury, as some claim it could be in certain urban centres, but it is indeed vital. It is as vital as having electricity, a telephone, or any of those other things which Canadian consumers need to have in this large country in which we live. The people of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell need their automobiles in order to go to work. They need them when they are unemployed in order to go out to find work. They need them to go and cash their welfare cheques, or to do anything else which they have to do, especially those who live outside the towns and villages of the riding. It is important to establish that having a car in the constituency which I represent is not only desirable but it is necessary for a large number of my constituents.

I also want Hon. Members to know that in the constituency I represent, which is large and rural, agriculture is one of the vital industries. We have been told time and time again that the largest input cost for farmers is the cost of fuel. Therefore, the farmers of the constituency I represent are worried about the price of fuel, the price of gasoline and diesel fuel and the other input costs which they have.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, earlier today I heard the Parliamentary Secretary of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid) say that Members of the Opposition are irresponsible when they raise such issues in the House and that they do so only to impress their constituents.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you what is wrong with a Member of the Opposition rising in the House and publicly defending the interests of the people who elected him? I, for one, will be doing just that today and I have no intention of apologizing to the Parliamentary Secretary of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources for defending the rights and even the needs of the voters of the riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell.

As someone pointed out earlier, it is a fact that the Conservative Government gave $5 billion to the oil industry, and that $2 billion went to the friends of the Conservatives—the bankers, Mr. Speaker.

So I want Government Members and all my constituents to know that additional taxes and the excessive profits of that industry are not necessary and that, in fact, it is false to pretend that excessive taxes must be paid on petroleum products to maintain old age security pensions. Those excessive taxes must be paid as a result of the useless expenditures of the Conservative Government we have today.

[English]

I would like to read briefly from an article in The Ottawa Citizen. It was written by John Ferguson of Southam News. He states in an open letter to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, and I quote:

> You may be Minister of Energy, but that doesn't mean you're Minister for Big Oil. You're supposed to be looking out for everyone's energy interests, not just the boys at the Petroleum Club.
> I know last year you got a lot of political credit for being one of Brian Mulroney's "no problems" ministers after you dismantled the National Energy Program and made Alberta happy.
>
> And maybe you kind of got used to siding with the oil industry. I mean, giving them billions in tax cuts and all that.
> World oil prices are falling and it shouldn't be any surprise that the opposition is a little curious as to when we're going to see lower prices at the pumps. After all, prices of heating oil and gasoline sure did jump up during the '70s when crude oil prices were rising, didn't they?

That is indeed a very important topic. When oil prices were increasing, consumers were hit with those increases. Now that oil prices are decreasing, consumers are hit with increases again.

Mr. Della Noce: False.

Mr. McDermid: That's not true.

Mr. Boudria: Surely, it is totally illogical that the consumers of Canada at the time of lowering gasoline prices are not paying any less for their gas and, in many cases, are actually paying more than they were two or three months ago at the time when prices started to go down.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid) said in this House that it takes a while before the lower oil prices flow through the system. Why is it that when prices were going up, they flowed through the system as fast as castor oil? It had an immediate effect, the next day. We were purged of the lower prices and the higher prices were inflicted upon the Canadian consumers. Now, of course, prices are going down but we are told it takes a while for the system to take care of it.

One responsible cabinet Minister a few days ago—and I believe it was the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney)—said in the House that the tourism industry was not affected by oil prices. In the riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell, during the last few years, we have done quite a bit of work trying to attract tourism to our area. As you know, Mr. Speaker, as do all Hon. Members, Glengarry-Prescott-Russell is the most beautiful constituency in Canada, even if I say so myself. In that riding, we are trying to promote tourism. We know, Mr. Speaker, you come very often to our area, but we would like others to come as well, and it is very difficult for us in eastern Ontario to attract tourists from the large cities like New York, Montreal and Toronto when we have these very high gasoline prices. It makes it very difficult for the family which wants to make one-day trips or people who come for weekends or even longer trips in the case of out-of-country tourists.

I want to say to the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) who, obviously, is a very knowledgeable person in the area of gasoline prices—and I also know he travels through the constituency he represents—that he knows that many people from his own riding visit the riding I represent. In fact, every Sunday we see thousands of his constituents in Carillon Provincial Park in Hawkesbury.

Mr. McDermid: I thought you said you didn't attract tourists.

Mr. Boudria: And that is beneficial for the area I represent. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has stated, very irresponsibly, that the tourism industry would not be affected by increasing gasoline prices. This statement is in direct contradiction to a submission made to the Liberal Party by the Canadian Automobile Association earlier this year. I quote it in part:

> The resulting high gasoline prices, in a country with its own oil resources, have put our transportation dependent industries at an economic disadvantage. Tourism in particular has suffered a serious loss of business—

So, Mr. Speaker, as you can see, the loss in our tourism business has been serious, according to the Canadian Automobile Association, and when it comes to believing the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources or the Canadian Automobile Association, I think I would rather listen to the CAA any time than to the Minister who has her own biased views on this issue. The report further states, and I quote:

> Presently, an American visitor is paying approximately 25 per cent more for motor fuel after taking into account the difference between the Canadian and American dollar and the Imperial and American gallon. This has engendered a perception by Americans that Canada is an expensive vacation destination.

So we can see that the Government is creating undue hardship to the tourism industry.

I would like to say a few words about the effective gasoline prices on agriculture. As I indicated previously, the largest input costs farmers have in fuel prices. I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary knows this. The Ontario Federation of Agriculture submits that there will be an excise tax increase of two cents per litre on gasoline, diesel fuel, aviation fuel and jet fuel effective September 3, 1985. This increase is not subject to any rebate. As well, the primary industries levy offset program is now being phased out. Consequently, farmers may no longer claim the 1.8 cents per litre rebate after March 31, 1985. Claims can be continued to be filled out for puchases between December 1, 1984 and March 31, 1985 for up to one year from the date of purchase. In other words, the farmers are telling us that they are subject to a tax increase.

What did the Tories say to the farmers of Canada during the last election campaign? Did they tell them that gasoline prices were going to go up? Did they say: "Vote for me and it will cost more to fill your tank"? No, the tories did not say that. The Tories promised many things. There is a list of 338 promises and I want you to know, Mr. Speaker, that if you want a copy of it, I will gladly send one to you, and any Canadian can write to me—no stamp necessary—and I will send them a copy of it as well.

The Tories promised that they would protect the consumer from price surges in oil markets. That was a promise made by the Tories.

Mr. Edwards: Yes, and we did.

Mr. Boudria: They promised this at a meeting known as the Atlantic caucus on August 2, 1984. They issued a press release after that stating that the price of gasoline in the United States, in Boston, was 50 cents per gallon cheaper than in Saint John and, according to the Conservatives, this was terrible. There should not be this difference, according to the Tories. But where are we today? What about the improvements the Tories made in this price differential between Canada and the United States? In October of 1984, the average Canadian price was 47.2 cents per litre. The average U.S. price was 39 cents per litre. Looking at the present situation, the average Canadian price in October, 1985 was 52.1 cents per litre. The U.S. price was 40 cents. As you can see, the difference between Canadian and U.S. prices, which the Tories themselves called unacceptable in August of 1984, is getting larger. Surely this would cause all Tory back-benchers to be in an uproar if they really had the interests of consumers and their constituents at heart.

• (1600)

In the first 12 months this Government was in office the change in the price of gasoline amounted to a 10.4 per cent increase. In the U.S. it was 2.5 per cent over the same time period. That should tell any Tory in this room that they are totally wrong when they tell the Canadian people that this is normal. In my view these price increases are unreasonable, both from a tax standpoint and that of the profit margins which multinational companies enjoy.

Mr. McDermid: What is that profit margin?

Mr. Boudria: I think it would be appropriate if we looked at many of the prices charged in Canada and the U.S. and drew comparisons. Let us look at the price of gasoline here in Ottawa, which is very close to my riding. On O'Connor Street we are told that the price of unleaded gas as of this morning was 56.3 cents per litre.

Mr. McDermid: It is 52 cents.

Mr. Boudria: In Washington, D.C., at the Gulf station on Massachusetts Avenue, right near Capitol Hill, do you know what the price is?

Mr. Della Noce: A dollar six a gallon.

Mr. Boudria: It is 43.55 cents in Canadian dollars.

Mr. McDermid: It is 44.5 cents in Georgetown.

Mr. Boudria: Do you see how unfair this is to the Canadian consumer? I think most Members, deep down inside, recognize that what is happening here is that the Canadian consumer is being gouged, and this is most unfair.

Let us look at the spot market for crude oil. In January, 1984 it was $29.80 a barrel in the U.S. In the United Kingdom it was $29.49. As of January 20 the U.S. price was $21.25 and the British price $20.10. Has there been a proportional decrease in gasoline prices? No. Has there been any kind of a decrease in gasoline prices in my constituency? None at all. The price has not decreased one bit. That is the sad reality.

Recently the Ontario Motor League wrote to my Leader and it made a few points very clear. It thinks the price of gasoline is indeed way too expensive. It says that 90 per cent of all passenger miles travelled in Canada are accomplished by automobile. In the constituency I represent that figure would probably be closer to 99 per cent. Total Ontario government revenues through various fees and taxes levied against motorists in 1985 amounted to $1.6 billion. Gasoline taxes in Ontario have increased 63 per cent since 1981.

Mr. Della Noce: Wrong again.

Mr. Boudria: If Members across the way think the Ontario Motor League is wrong, that is fine. I want the OML to know that that is the kind of knee-jerk reaction from the Tories. They refuse to accept anyone else's opinion. They think that their wrong opinion is right. That is why the Government is in deep trouble so soon after being elected. The Tories have wasted $5 billion in hand-outs to their friends in the oil industry, then $2 billion to bail out the banks. They have been wasting taxpayers' dollars and giving cushy jobs to their friends. Now there is no money to give a break to the consumer. That is the sad reality. My constituents are upset about this. They have been sending me letters, and I have a stack of them right here. They are not satisfied, they want the price to be lower, notwithstanding the fact that the Tories want to keep it high.

Mr. Della Noce: You are not doing your job; that is why they are not satisfied.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments.

Mr. Crosby: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment to make concerning the Hon. Member's speech, and then I have two questions I would like to ask him.

I am sure all Members of the House realize that the father of Petro-Canada is the Liberal Party of Canada. It was created by a Bill passed in this House in 1975. Part of the mandate given to the company by the Liberal Government was to operate an oil company free and independent of the direct control of the Government and the Parliament of Canada.

Mr. Waddell: No, it was not.

Mr. Crosby: It was given a mandate to carry out certain tasks in accordance with that statute and on the basis of its own independent advice. We now have before the House a motion to change that. The motion would have the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) and the Government interfere with that statutory mandate. I am surprised that the Hon. Member, an adherent of the Party that created this company, would now violate the principle on which it was based.

My other comment in this. Petro-Canada and, I believe, the other oil companies of Canada fix their prices on the basis of their costs. Is there any reason to believe that the current price of gasoline in my Province of Nova Scotia, for example, is based on the current price of crude? If not, if it is in fact based on higher-priced crude bought on the market some time ago when prices were higher, does the Hon. Member recommend that Petro-Canada in particular, as well as the other oil companies, should absorb that difference? If so, how does he suggest to the House of Commons and the companies and the people of Canada that they recover that cost? Does Petro-Canada charge it against other products? Does it reduce the price of gasoline and increase the price of oil? Does it sell windshield washer fluid for a price higher than it is today? Does it decrease its exploratory efforts? How is it going to recover the money it loses if it reduces the price of gasoline today, February 4, when the price it paid for the crude demands the price now fixed at the pump in Nova Scotia? Would the Member depart from the statutory mandate of Petro-Canada? Would he recommend that a Crown corporation charge a price to the consumer which does not allow it to recover its costs? The ultimate result would be, of course, that someone else is going to have to absorb that loss. That would probably be the taxpayers of Canada. So perhaps he just wants to transfer the cost from the consumer of the gasoline to the taxpayers of Canada. I want him to tell us how that is going to accomplish anything.

• (1610)

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, the mandate of Petro-Canada was clearly to give the consumers of the country a window—

Mr. Della Noce: What? What?

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, if the Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) wants the floor, would you tell him to shut up and ask his questions later?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Boudria: As I was saying, before I was so rudely interrupted by the Member for Duvernay, the mandate of Petro-Canada is clearly to be a window on the oil industry to ensure Canada's security of supply. We all know that that is what it was. We all know that it was necessary when it was established and that it is still necessary today. It was necessary to have a form of protection against multinationals which, at one time, were diverting supplies from our country to bring them elsewhere. We all know that is the reason it was created. We all know why it was necessary, and let us not forget that today.

Section 7(2) of the Petro-Canada Act permits, and in fact mandates, Petro-Canada to have the moderating influence on the industry which is so necessary to ensure that Canadian consumers are not gouged by foreign multinationals. Petro-Canada is ours, Mr. Speaker. It is yours and mine.

Mr. Crosby: Well, you lower the price then.

Mr. Boudria: It belongs to the people of Canada. They have paid for it with their tax dollars and they do not need to be gouged at this time by anyone, whether a multinational, a Canadian corporation, a Crown corporation, or anyone else. The hard-earned dollars of the Canadian taxpayer must be protected. If the Tories across the way are unwilling to do that, we in the Opposition want to do it for them.

[Translation]

Mr. Della Noce: Mr. Speaker, I want to respond to my colleague from Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) who said he gets a lot of complaints from his constituents, but he did not even answer my question. He is not alone, there must be many others who get complaints. But anyone who gets a complaint must answer and tell the truth, something he has yet to do. Either he does not understand, or he acts as if he does not. We get complaints—that is normal and par for the course—because consumers do not understand why oil prices went down, but not at the pump. There is an explanation, but the Hon. Member has to know what it is. There is a difference between a tax on the gross cost of a product . . . There is a difference between a provincial tax and a federal tax. There is a difference between a Crown corporation and a private sector company.

Well, my friend did not say anything about that, but it is quite easy to figure out, Mr. Speaker. When the price of oil products decreases, it takes a little while to work its way down to the car owner. The product must go through a pipeline, be shipped by tanker, carried to the refinery, delivered to the service station, and then pumped into the gas tank. That is where they will get the discount, that is where they will see the price go down. It is just a question of time.

Perhaps my colleague might tell his constituents—

[English]

The good price is coming, but it takes a little time until the new product comes in. When one is in business one understands that you need an inventory. The Member will never be in business. I hope that people will never believe what the Member just said. He is not telling the thruth. Tell the people that it takes time, as it took time when the price went up. It takes 40 to 60 days. I agree that when it is time for the oil companies to put the price down, inventories are always a little bit higher. We know that. However, when it is going down, it is the same story. I saw that with my own eyes when the Liberal Government was in power. I wrote a letter and went 14 months without an answer. I did not want that.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Della Noce: If the people of Quebec want to visit that Member, it is not because he is telling his people the truth, it is because gasoline is cheaper in his area. That is the only time we come to see you, because you are not telling the truth. I ask your constituents to write to me. They do not need to use a stamp. I will give them the right answer. Their MP is not doing his job. He just wants to make a show here. This is not a circus. It is a serious place and the Member must do his work and answer to his people.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I listened closely to the remarks of the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce). He did not say much, but still I listened closely. As I recall—and his riding is not all that far from mine, roughly 50 miles—his election campaign was an urgent plea in defense of small businessmen and individuals. Whatever happened to the calling of the Hon. Member for Duvernay, Mr. Speaker? Did he forget it? Or again would it be the arrogance of power, the Conservative arrogance so obvious in the attitude of the Hon. Member? Well, all I can say is that the electors of Duvernay will certainly remember.

He said that consumers do not understand. Quite the contrary, Mr. Speaker! Canadian consumers understand all right, they understand that this Government has failed to live up to its many promises to the Canadian people, and that explains why the popularity of the Conservatives has taken a nosedive.

[English]

The Member across the way says that I will never be in business, Mr. Speaker. Let me tell him that after the next election he will never be in politics.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The period for questions and comments is now over. Resuming debate, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow).

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, on listening to the comments and questions which are coming from the government side one would assume that all of the calls from this side of the House to lower gasoline prices for consumers now are unfair, that the facts and figures we have used have been taken out of context, that we have misrepresented the facts, and that we are mischievous. The Canadian Automobile Association, which has tens of thousands of members in every province in the country, started a campaign urging its members to send a message to the Government that the price of gasoline should come down immediately. If that association is wrong, as the Government says we are wrong, I cannot understand why the Minister did not call the officers of the Canadian Automobile Association into her office and, with her officials, showed the association why it is wrong and urged it to stop misrepresenting the facts and to stop this campaign for lower prices of gasoline.

Today we have heard from the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton) and the Parliamentary Secretary the same old tired and incorrect arguments blaming all of the ills in the energy industry on the national energy policy. There was a major mistake in the thinking that led to the national energy policy, but that same mistake was made by Mr. Lougheed, the Conservative Premier of Alberta at that time, and by Mr. Blakeney, the New Democratic Premier of Saskatchewan at the time. The thinking at the time was that there would be a continual increase in the world price of oil until the early 1990s when the world price of oil would be $60 to $70 a barrel. If that were true, we could bring the tar sands plant into operation and the Beaufort Sea and Hibernia would be viable. The federal Government and the producing provinces were to get more revenue and the oil companies would do better.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, that has not happened. The reverse has happened. The world price of oil has come down dramatically. It was $30 a barrel a few months ago and it is now below $20 a barrel. This morning in The Globe and Mail an analyst in the industry predicted that oil will go down to $15 a barrel. There was speculation in The New York Times a few days ago that oil would go down to $10 a barrel.

I suggest to Members on the Government side that they not crow so much about how well their policies have done and how successful they have been with regard to energy. If the price of oil goes down much lower than just under $20 a barrel as it is now, there will be very little exploration in the Beaufort and virtually no exploration off the Atlantic coast. It will not be viable to explore in these areas with oil being at such a low price.

Let us review the record to see how badly hurt the major oil companies were as a result of the National Energy Program. In July, 1985, the Government's own Petroleum Monitoring Agency reported on what happened to the industry in 1984. It said that the financial performance of the Canadian petroleum industry improved substantially in 1984 over 1983. Total industry revenues were up 6 per cent to $64.5 billion. When compared with 1983, net income from total operations more than doubled to $3.7 billion in 1984 while internal cash flow rose 21 per cent to $10.4 billion. That is not bad for an industry, and I am sure that many of the small business people in my constituency would be happy if they could have—

Mr. McDermid: What is that, related to investment? What is the return on investment?

Mr. Orlikow: I have limited time. The Parliamentary Secretary has spoken.

Mr. McDermid: Do you understand what return on investment is?

Mr. Orlikow: If I have time I will be happy to answer his question.

There was a 1984 increase in profits from $2.2 billion to $3.7 billion, an increase of 141 per cent.

The National Energy Program could not have been that bad for the oil companies. Let us look at the latest profit figures issued by Imperial Oil. In 1985 their profits were $680 million, an increase of over 40 per cent from the previous year. In the last quarter alone for which they reported, profits were $250 million, up over 50 per cent over the same period in the previous year.

The monitoring agency attributes the internal cash flow increase of 21 per cent, to $10.4 billion, to improved margins in the petroleum products market, increased production and higher prices for crude oil, the deferral of current taxes previously accrued, and the divestiture of losing operations.

The Parliamentary Secretary said that the oil companies pay their taxes like all other corporations. I suggest that no industry has ever had the kind of preferred position with regard to taxes as does the oil industry. This is true in every country in which they operate where they manipulate in such a way as to pay as little tax as possible. The explanation for their increased profits is not mine, but that of Ralph Gillen, the Chairman of the Petroleum Monitoring Agency.

He also said that the petroleum industry's net income on Canadian operations for 1984 accounted for 22 per cent of total non-financial industry income. According to Statistics Canada figures, the petroleum industry's share was 7 percentage points higher than it had been in 1983. Twenty-two per cent of all non-financial wealth generated in this country in 1984 came from the oil industry. During that year, the shares of this total revenue of $23.1 billion changed dramatically in favour of the oil companies. Their share of the total increased by 3 per cent to 54 per cent. The provincial government's share increased 2 per cent to 31.5 per cent, and the federal share decreased 6 per cent to 15 per cent.

All of this occurred under the National Energy Program, in advance of the even more handsome concessions given to the oil industry by the present Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney). My colleague, the Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) has estimated that these concessions will cost the federal Government a further $5.3 billion in forgone revenues by 1990. Those kinds of concessions to the oil companies come at the same time that the Government has added thousands of dollars in taxes to every Canadian family.

It is easy to produce accords such as the Western Accord and the Atlantic Accord when you are prepared to toss around money as the Government and the Minister have done in arriving at those accords.

We have been saying consistently and indicating even more directly today that the consumers have not been seeing any benefits at the pump as a result of those concessions to the oil industry.

The Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) talked about the importance of the price of gasoline to his rural constituency. I point out to him that the price of gasoline is very important to my urban constituents because most of them must use their cars to go to work. They know that a tank of gas costs well over $20. Rather than a reduction in the price of gasoline as a result of the market fall in the world oil price, we are seeing higher prices, higher taxes, fewer suppliers and fewer jobs.

Let us consider why these events have occurred and how we can prevent them from occurring in the future. Prices could be brought down if the Government had the courage to act in the interest of the consumer. Before this is possible there must be some recognition on the part of the Government that oil production, refining and distribution to the customer does not operate in a competitive market as it seems to believe. Rather, we are dealing with a tightly managed oligopoly.

During her recent embarrassing retreats on oil pricing in Canada during Question Period in the last couple of weeks, the Minister has shown no recognition of this fact at all. In response to repeated requests for government action to ensure that declining oil prices are passed on to consumers, she could simply have said that in a free market system lower priced supply of oil should mean lower prices at the pump. However, on January 20, as reported at page 9943 of Hansard, the Minister said, in answer to the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway, that:

> I wish to point out that the increases in gasoline prices about which consumers are concerned, of course, are the federal, municipal, and provincial tax loads which have been imposed on gasoline prices.

There have been increases by the Governments but she did not explain that while taxes have gone up 2.4 cents a litre, gas prices rose by more than 6 cents a litre in the time that her Government has been in office. In other words, the oil companies added another 3.6 cents a litre to the price they charge the customer.

On January 21, as reported at page 9994 of Hansard, she took a new tack, saying that while prices have dropped from $28 to $20 per barrel:

Actually oil prices rose toward the end of last year, and they historically stay high during wintertime.

She went on to say that the price decrease would not show up "until a few months from now". However, oil prices have been falling consistently since 1981 when they were $31 a barrel.

Last June prices were cut to $26 a barrel and the United States wholesale gasoline market dropped prices by 5 cents a litre. Why did Canadian consumers not get a comparable price decrease in this supposed market sensitive price regime? At that time it was freely predicted that oil prices would decline for another two years, as they have. Surely our oil companies could have seen the writing on the wall and the future price at the pump. The long-term market trend has been clearly down, everywhere but in Canada it seems.

● (1630)

On January 22, the Minister told my Leader, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), that she could not help save Canadian consumers $8.5 million a day at the gas pumps by instructing Petro-Canada to lower prices because:

It would be detrimental to the company's interest on behalf of Canadians, because we own it, to give it that kind of direction.

Let me pause a moment to ask, if Petro-Canada is not prepared to lower its price, as we said it should and could, why does Petro-Canada not permit its dealers who are prepared to use the market to try to sell more gasoline and to reduce the dealers' price by 2 cents a litre? The dealers are prepared to operate on a smaller margin, and it is Petro-Canada that is telling them they cannot. Petro-Canada is playing the same game, non competitive, as do the other major oil companies.

On January 28, the Minister announced:

I have communicated with industry executives to ensure that consumers get the full and fair benefit of the price declines which are in the system now.

Does the Minister have the kind of confidence in the free market system, which she says she has? Does the Minister believe the oil companies will treat their customers fairly? If the Minister believes the oil companies will really compete, why did she have to send that telex to the industry? In reality, the Minister knows that there is not any real competition. She knows the oil companies are working together. She knows they will squeeze the consumer for every penny they can get.

On January 24, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, in response to a question from the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway on the anti-competitive behaviour of the oil companies, said:

If the Hon. Member has any evidence of collusion or activities of that nature, why does he not present it to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs?

Surely the Minister should have known that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) has had in his possession for some time a seven volume report from the Director of Investigation and Research for the Combines Investigation Act that demonstrate just what I have said, that there is no competition.

In fact, the report shows that monopolistic and anti-competitive practices cost Canadians, from 1958 to 1973, $89.2 billion in 1981 dollars or $15,000 per Canadian family. I very much regret that the Minister and her Government cannot come to grips with the deficiencies in gasoline marketing which were detailed in this report at great length.

Instead of acting on this report, the report has simply been sent to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, which the Government has already said it will abolish and where the report is being studied to death. Yet, this report, if the Minister were really concerned about what has happened to consumers and if the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs was doing his job, has much to offer.

I would like to summarize its findings and emphasize its conclusions so that the Minister and Canadians will have squarely before them some legislative remedies which would break the stranglehold that big oil has on the production and distribution of gasoline in Canada, which it had during Liberal Governments and has had under Conservative Governments.

First, the report said that imported oil has been brought to Canada at higher than world market prices through transfer pricing by international oil companies following the lead of Imperial Oil, in violation of the conspiracy sections of the Combines Investigation Act.

The director recommended legislation to prohibit payment of these high transfer prices to foreign parent companies and to allow Canadian authorities to obtain information stored abroad by these parent companies. He recommended that all petroleum pipelines under federal jurisdiction be actively regulated and that legislation be enacted requiring integrated oil companies to divest their holdings in all existing pipelines subject to federal jurisdiction.

The director recommended that all refinery supply agreements in interprovincial and international trade be referred to the National Energy Board, with a referral to the Minister of Consumer Affairs, to investigate their effects on competition.

I could go on, but I note you are indicating that my time has nearly concluded.

We believe there is quite a legislative agenda which the Government could follow if it would look at that report and take it seriously. The Government opposite for all its talk does not want to deal with it.

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources will not admit that competition is severely curtailed—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ravis): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired.

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow). If I may be allowed a short preamble, I would like to go to the original motion. If you look at the motion, Mr. Speaker, it reads:

That this House demands that the Government instruct Petro-Canada and its retail outlets to reduce their prices at the pump by 6 cents a litre—

The Member for Winnipeg North says that some poor little service station operator was not allowed to reduce his prices unilaterally. First, the service station operator has a contract. All service station operators have contracts with the companies with which they do business.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): That is the problem.

Mr. Shields: Would the Member from Winnipeg North countenance the individual operator's ignoring a signed legal document and then putting himself in the position of going to court? Does he not understand that business works this way? When you go into business and set up something, does he not understand that you sign a contract and you agree to abide by it? I would suggest that Members are using that as a red herring.

What about this, Mr. Speaker, "Order Petro-Canada and its service stations to reduce the price of gas at the pumps by 6 cents". What if Petro-Canada ends up at the end of the fiscal year with a deficit?

Mr. Waddell: Not necessarily.

Mr. Shields: That was said by many Members. It is conceivable that it will end up with a deficit.

Mr. Waddell: It may.

Mr. Shields: It may. It doesn't really matter, but we will find out, that is what the Member is saying. If the company does end up with a deficit, who picks up the deficit? The taxpayer, Mr. Speaker.

We say to Petro-Canada to get out there and compete with the big boys. Be a window on the industry. When Petro-Canada is doing so, we do what the Member suggests and we order it to reduce prices at the pumps. Do not worry about what it is going to cost Petro-Canada. The taxpayer will pick up the costs at the end of the fiscal year. What a ridiculous situation, Mr. Speaker.

How does the Member square that with going with his Leader, old smiling Eddie, to Albert and saying. "We want a floor price on gasoline so that the price will not go down"?

Mr. Waddell: I dealt with that in my speech.

Mr. Shields: What about: "We will make the consumer pay. We want a floor price. I will be able to sell that when I go back to Ontario"? I have nor heard the Member say that in Ontario yet. I have not heard him say it here in the House. I heard the Member from Vancouver-Kingsway mention that kind of thing. How do you square this, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I hope that the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields), who is purporting to ask me some questions, will leave me a little time to answer. If he wants to make a speech, I will be very happy to listen to him. But if he wants me to answer the questions, I hope he will give me some time to answer them.

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I will be giving the Member ample time to answer the questions. The first question was on the contract. Does the Member know what the questions are?

Mr. Orlikow: I know.

Mr. Shields: He is ordering Petro-Canada to lower the price by 6 cents and if it goes into a deficit position, the taxpayer will pick up the deficit. How do you square that with the Leader of your Party running across the country, particularly in Alberta, saying to the people that we should have a floor on the price of gasoline when you know full well that in the long run it is going to cost consumers money at the pumps? How do you square that with saying in one breath this afternoon during Question Period, "Do something about the dollar, lower taxes, go after the deficit, secure the dollar", and then saying, "We'll lower the taxes on gasoline at the pumps"? That is where the problem is. The tax is at the pumps. That is the problem. Take your time now and see if you can answer those.

• (1640)

Mr. Orlikow: It is not difficult to answer those questions. First of all, Mr. Speaker, my answer will be in reference to the contract between the filling station operator and the oil company, and I do not refer just to Petro-Canada. They are all the same. The Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) is assuming that the little gasoline dealer is negotiating on the basis of equality with the oil companies. Nothing could be further from the truth. The oil company says to the dealer, "Here is a contract, sign it or you are out of business". So I say, of course they have a contract. Why should the believers in the free enterprise system defend a company that is not letting a retailer lower his price so he can help the consumer and get more business himself?

It may be that Petro-Canada would lose money if it followed our direction. I already quoted the kinds of profits which Imperial Oil made, and I am sure all the other oil companies are doing very well, and so is Petro-Canada.

Mr. Shields: Point of order, point of order. If I may ask the Hon. Member to quote the figure from Petro-Canada; how much was the profit of Petro-Canada? That is the question.

Mr. Orlikow: If the Hon. Member wants to do that, he can do it on his own time. I do not have that particular set of figures here, but I am sure Petro-Canada was not losing money.

The Hon. Member referred to the speech which my Leader made in Alberta. Let us be realistic; there is no way in which oil can be produced at as cheap a price in Canada; not in the Beaufort Sea, not off the Atlantic coast, not even in the conventional way in Alberta or Saskatchewan. There is no way that the price can be as low as the price of getting a barrel of oil in Saudi Arabia. I referred in my speech to an article in The New York Times in the last few days which speculated that the world price of oil could go down to as low as $5 per barrel. So what my Leader was saying should be obvious to everyboby; if we want to have an oil industry in Canada—and we do as much as anybody else—then we need to have policies which permit that industry to operate, to explore for oil and natural gas, to look for alternative sources, and to be viable, to be able to make a profit.

What we object to is the rip-off of the consumer which has gone on for these many years as reported by the Government commission that looked at it. What we are opposed to is the unconscionable profits which Governments, Liberal and Conservative, have permitted the oil companies to make over the years.

Mr. McDermid: I want to ask the Hon. Member what unconscionable profits are. I have never had a socialist explain this to me. The socialists have a great knack for saying that this company made $50 million or $100 million more than it made last year. It made 20 per cent more than it made last year. They throw these figures around. If I earned $1 this year and next year I earned $2, the increase in my profits is 100 per cent. They never, never relate it back to return on investment, never. They never point out that in certain years the return on investment was very poor; they never talk about that. They never talk about what is a fair return. Is 10 per cent a fair return, 2 per cent, 5 per cent, 15 per cent? They never talk about it. The reason they do not talk about it—and I am sure the Hon. Member will admit to this—is that they do not know about it. They do not understand a fair return on investment. They do not understand that part. Profit is a dirty word to them. They do not understand the concept of taking a risk, putting your money into exploration and expecting a fair return. What is a fair return? Tell me what a fair return is. The industry was taxed almost out of existence under the National Energy Program.

Mr. Orlikow: I wish the Parliamentary Secretary had listened to the speech which I made in which I quoted—

Mr. McDermid: I did, ad nauseam.

Mr. Orlikow: —in which I quoted figures which were prepared by the Petroleum Monitoring Agency. Let me repeat them again as follows:

> The financial performance of the Canadian petroleum industry improved substantially in 1984 over 1983, . . . Total industry revenues were up 6 per cent to $64.5 billion. When compared with 1983, net income from total operations more than doubled to $3.7 billion in 1984—

Mr. Shields: What's the return on investment? Answer the question.

Mr. Orlikow: The Member asks what is the return on investment. We can sit down, Mr. Speaker, when we both have time—

Mr. Shields: Well, do you know?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I wish the Hon. Member for Athabasca would not sit on his brains and I wish he kept quiet for a little while.

Mr. Shields: Do you know?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, we can go to the parliamentary Library at six o'clock and we can get out The Financial Times' report where we will see that no industry made as high a return on its investment as did the oil industry. It was much higher than that of the manufacturing industry, much higher than that of the retail industry. These are the facts, and the oil industry has done this for generations. It has played off Canada against the United States, the United States against Britain and all of them against the producing countries in the Arab states until they nationalized those companies. If the Members on that side want to cry for the oil companies, they can do it, but I know the Canadian people will not cry about the poor state of the oil industry in this country.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 46, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall)—Trade (a) Content of negotiations (b)Negotiation issues; the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie)—Atomic Energy of Canada Limited (a) Radioactive waste disposal research (b) United States dump site; the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway)—Trade—Removal of tariff on computer parts.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 63—PRICE OF GASOLINE

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Waddell:

> That this House demands that the Government instruct Petro-Canda and its retail outlets to reduce their prices at the pump by six cents a litre, a move which would enable Petro-Canada to fulfil one of its basic purposes which is to provide Canada with reasonable energy prices.

Mr. Jim Edwards (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I greatly appreciate the opportunity as an Albertan to speak in this debate and, indeed, as a Canadian. We have had an interesting airing of views, and I must say that it has benefited me greatly to hear the clarity and the sanity of the statements made by the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources

(Mr. McDermid) and my esteemed colleague from Athabasca this afternoon.

My friend from Winnipeg North has suggested that the Canadian Automobile Association is not wrong. His statement is partially correct and partially in error. What the Canadian Automobile Association is asking is for prices to come down as a result of taxes being lowered. I would invite the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), sometime when the occasion presents itself, to tell us precisely what programs he would like to have eliminated in order to accommodate the lower taxes.

An Hon. Member: Don't give $5.3 billion to the oil companies.

Mr. Edwards: I would like to put to rest once and forever this canard that money has been given to the oil companies. Nothing could be further from the truth. What has happened with the abolition of the National Energy Program is that justice has been restored to western Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Edwards: A Member for Vancouver should be absolutely ashamed to pretend that the New Democratic Party opposed the National Energy Program in order to benefit the Western Sedimentary Basin and the development thereof. Look at the people who were put into bankruptcy and look at the people who became suicidal. Look at the disasters inflicted upon western Canada by the National Energy Program.

• (1650)

Mr. Waddell: I invite you to look at the record.

Mr. Edwards: The question of what constitutes a fair return was a question posed by my friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, but not properly responded to other than by an invitation to the Library. Members of the New Democratic Party may laugh when the Parliamentary Secretary says that the industry was taxed almost out of existence, but that is the truth. The fact is that before the National Energy Program, the record of the industry, whether multionational or Canadian owned, was that of a reinvestment practice of 105 to 110 per cent. It was the National Energy Program which discouraged that.

Last Saturday, as is my practice on a regular basis, I held a town hall meeting in my riding of Edmonton South. It was attended by a good many people. This particular town hall meeting was held in opposition territory, one of the four out of 176 polls which I lost in the 1984 election. I might add, it was NDP territory. We heard some very interesting questions at that meeting. One of the questions posed was the question related to today's motion, and that is, "Why aren't you lowering the costs to gasoline consumers by ordering Petro-Canada to cut its price by a fixed amount?" I had no difficulty answering that question nor did the 114 other people at that meeting including, I would submit, many New Democrats who thought it was the height of folly to suggest that we increase the deficit in order to deliver a lower price at the pumps.

My hon. friend, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, has alluded to a very interesting editorial in last Friday's Ottawa Citizen, a newspaper which I do not always embrace but which I think has lucidly addressed this particular question. It is a newspaper which uses the expressions "the mouths of mock-furious Liberals and New Democrats" and "it is juvenile to expect that a downturn in world oil prices will be felt instantly at the gas pumps". The very idea that Petro-Canada should be manipulating prices is anathema to the people of Canada. Do we want Governments setting the price of bread, for example? That, I submit, is a Marxist, Third World concept.

Mr. Waddell: Ha!

Mr. Edwards: It is to laugh, is it?

Mr. McDermid: He wants the Government to set the price of bread.

Mr. Edwards: Perhaps the Hon. Member would relish the idea of the Governor General's Foot Guards charging Parliament Hill.

It is a fact, and I think the record should show, that 80 per cent of the personal taxes paid in this country go toward paying interest on the Liberal-NDP debt which was inflicted upon the country. We have to put our house in order, and the very thought of putting more money into Petro-Canada in order to lower the price of gasoline is foolhardy, to understate the case.

Let us look at what the Government has done in order to benefit the development of that great engine of growth, the energy industry, over the past 17 months. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) has secured the Atlantic Accord, the Western Accord and its companion document, the agreement on natural gas markets and prices, and has introduced the new frontier energy policy, each of which go effectively toward eradicating the last vestiges of the infamous National Energy Program. These are formidable accomplishments considering that, when they are assessed as a group of policy initiatives, they have a great total effect. It is even more noteworthy that these agreements have been concluded with the interests of all regions of Canada in mind and therefore all consumers.

As Hon. Members know, the federal Government is committed to establishing a new Canadian economic environment free of excessive regulation and market intervention within which industry and commerce in all regions can flourish. Since the signing of the Western Accord just 10 months ago, the industry has announced an array of projects and plans that cumulatively will involve the investment of over $10 billion, directly employing more than 46,000 Canadians in construction and ongoing operations. Companies have announced their intentions to pursue a number of other projects pending conclusion of the detailed negotiations with Governments and prospective partners totalling another $12.5 billion and employing upwards of another 28,000 Canadians. Not included in these figures is the massive investment plan to develop the Hibernia on the offshore of Newfoundland. Estimates here are that more than $5 billion will be invested with the creation of thousands of construction and ongoing jobs for Newfoundlanders and other Canadians.

The Government of Canada is well aware of the cyclical nature of oil prices and has designed its energy policy with that in mind. That is why we moved to market-sensitive pricing. As the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said recently, we are well positioned to take advantage of both the upstream and the downstream in energy. Our energy policy is still one of the most competitive in the world and will withstand the test of changing prices.

There has been a lot of confusion about the impact of the recent decline in crude prices. I am pained, to paraphrase what the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) said on a different matter here in the House today, to say that it ill becomes the dignity of the office of Hon. Members to contribute to that confusion. I would like to try to sort it out for Hon. Members this afternoon. First, let us look at the upstream.

Many questions have been asked about the viability of major oil and gas projects in light of declining world oil prices. First, production of many of the major energy projects currently under construction will not commence until the mid-1990s. It is therefore not so much current price levels but the future of oil price movements that determines the economic viability of these projects. Most observers, and I think even the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North with his suggestion of $5 per barrel, would expect prices to rebound in the early 1990s, possibly increasing at rates above the inflation rate. Indeed, the very fact that the long-awaited drop in oil prices appears to be taking place now removes the doubt. The sooner this happens, the less doubt about the eventual rise.

We all hope that there will continue to be peace in the Middle East, but it is a fact of which none of us need to be reminded that if peace does not prevail in the Persian Gulf, for example, this oil glut could be a very transitory occurrence. In the unlikely event that prices remain depressed over the long term, the return on these major projects would obviously be affected. Nonetheless, many of the major energy projects can withstand a fairly significant drop in the world price. In particular, we could refer to projects such as Hibernia, the existing oil sands operations and the many in situ bitumen projects in Alberta.

A statement was made very recently by an executive of Imperial Oil to the effect that Imperial Oil's major resource projects, particularly the Cold Lake heavy oil development, are actually quite resilient to price erosion.

That is the upstream. What about the downstream which of course has a more immediate impact on the consumer? Again, I remind the House of the positive steps the Government has taken to enable consumers to benefit from the recent decreases in oil prices.

Through the Western Accord, we deregulated the price of crude oil and freed it from the previous Government's rigid pricing policies. Crude oil prices are now set by the marketplace. Under deregulation, Canadian crude oil prices respond very quickly to changing international market conditions. This process is evident today. The recent substantial declines in international crude prices have already resulted in lower posted prices for Canadian crude oil. There is no doubt that the Western Accord and deregulation have resulted in a very effective and responsive Canadian crude oil market. This cheaper crude will be refined into cheaper gasoline. However, first, this lower-priced crude must work its way through the pipeline system into the refineries. A barrel of light Canadian crude typically takes five weeks to travel from Edmonton to Montreal. This industry operates like any other that stockpiles feedstock and products, such as the forest products industry and even farming. To say that lower oil prices should ignore inventories is to suggest that milk and bread should see an instant price drop as soon as farmers' own oil costs go down.

Furthermore, companies generally run down higher-priced inventories of crude and product before lowering prices to reflect their lower costs. These inventories, which cover from one to two months of requirements, are necessary to ensure that customers enjoy uninterrupted oil product supplies. I remind the House that it was the previous Government, the Liberal Government which prohibited companies from immediately passing through crude price changes to product markets. Instead, they were forced to wait until transportation lags and inventory draw-down had been accounted for. What we are saying is: Let the market decide—it could be sooner than the old rules would have allowed.

Once the companies begin to benefit from lower-priced feedstock, it is expected that these savings will be passed to consumers at the retail level in the form of lower gasoline pump prices. The industry has said that and it is generally acknowledged. I hear Hon. Members opposite scoffing.

Mr. Waddell: Do you believe in fairies, too?

Mr. Edwards: It is suggested that the oil industry is composed of fairies.

Mr. McDermid: He does not believe anybody but his Leader.

Mr. Edwards: I think I have heard enough fairy stories from Members opposite.

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources recently communicated with oil industry leaders by telex, as she has told us, telling them of the Government's expectations in this regard. The Minister has already received some very encouraging and positive feedback from these companies indicating their co-operation in providing these benefits to consumers.

Mr. Della Noce: We will be checking that, too.

Mr. Edwards: Of course we will. We are vigilant, always vigilant.

The Government also expects that Petro-Canada, as one of those companies, will act in a responsible manner in competing with other oil companies in the market-place. Furthermore, deregulation has answered that Canada's oil market is fully open to the forces of international competition. Most regions of the country are exposed to oil product imports from the United States and overseas. These imports help to keep Canadian oil product prices in line with those in international markets. The recent rapid decline in oil product prices could force Canadian oil product price redutions even before refiners benefit from lower crude oil costs. This is what free market forces are all about.

Here endeth the lesson: The motion to have the Government force Petro-Canada to lower its pump prices by six cents per litre is both unnecessary and unrealistic. The Government no longer finances Petro-Canada; and it certainly does not get involved in the day-to-day operations of Crown corporations. Government interference of this sort risks doing serious damage not only to Petro-Canada but also the Canadian oil industry which provides thousands of jobs throughout the country.

I conclude by reminding the House that the Government is committed to deregulation. This means allowing market forces to operation without Government interference. None of us want a return to the oppressive Liberal-NDP regime of regulation, the legacy of which is our national debt and our overweening deficit.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow).

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Hon. Member two questions. He reiterated again the usual Conservative argument that it was the NDP which created the tremendous difficulties for the industry. The United States has the most progressive Government that country has had in the last 50 years. A year or two ago Exxon, which invested between $2 billion and $3 billion to build a plant which would extract oil from shale, I believe in Colorado, closed down its operation. The Americans did not have a national energy program. Why did they close this operation down? They did so because the idea of building that plant was based on a very high-priced barrel of oil. Why did they do the same thing as companies did in Canada, when they did not have a national energy program to worry about?

The second question I wish to ask the Hon. Member is this. He suggests that when we propose a specific reduction in price, this is a Marxist idea and interferes with the free market. Can the Hon. Member explain why it is that Conservative provincial Governments in Ontario, Saskatchewan and Alberta operate marketing boards for milk, eggs and hogs, the purpose of which is to help producers and to put in place a price floor which interferes with the market? Is that not a Marxist idea as well, just to use the Hon. Member's thinking on the subject? Or is this the case because that is the only way in which industries can survive?
