I especially request the tabling of the documents submitted and discussed by the New Brunswick government during Premier McKenna's meeting last week with Prime Minister Chrétien and the federal and provincial ministers to address the New Brunswick government's fears relating to the content of the proposed reforms, which, in Mr. McKenna's opinion, would have a negative impact on New Brunswick's seasonal workers in particular, and on Atlantic Canada in general.

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I have absolutely no knowledge of the documents of which Senator Simard speaks. I can certainly look into his question. The premiers of the Atlantic provinces have been very helpful in expressing their views and offering their advice. If there is anything further I can do to with my friend's request, I will do it.

THE ENVIRONMENT

REVIEW OF CANADIAN ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION ACT—
REPORT OF COMMONS COMMITTEE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Janis Johnson: Honourable senators, on June 20, 1995, the fifth report of the Standing House of Commons Committee on the Environment and Sustainable Development entitled, "It's About Our Health — Towards Pollution Prevention," was presented in the House of Commons by Charles Caccia, the chairman of the committee. That House committee undertook an extensive review of the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, the results of which are in this report. The report contains 141 recommendations and is the result of 12 months of hearings held in Ottawa and across Canada.

The key to the report is a call for more aggressive control and preventative use of toxins in Canada. The committee also believes that a strong federal role is required in the area of environmental protection for the management of toxic substances and the setting of national standards.

Honourable senators, in the House of Commons on June 20, the minister said that the usual time for the federal government to respond to such reports is 150 days. With regard to a response to the report, Minister Coppins also said the following:

I hope to be able to do that in less than half that time.

We are now well into December and, according to her comments, the federal government should have responded to the report by now. We have heard nothing; at least, I have not been able to find anything. In fact, the standing committee's report should have been answered by November 18.

Does the Leader of the Government have any idea just when the government intends to respond formally to this most critical issue?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I cannot give my honourable friend a date, but I know that the Minister of the Environment is very aware of the need to get the response out and is working very hard on doing that. As my honourable friend noted, the report is fairly massive; it is from a House committee and has 141 recommendations, all of them important. The minister and her colleagues are undoubtedly giving their most careful attention to providing a coordinated response to the report.

Senator Johnson: Would it be possible for the Leader of the Government to find out for me whether they intend to act, once they have responded, on the toxins situation with any kind of legislation?

Senator Fairbairn: I will certainly endeavour to do that.

[Translation]

HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE REFORM—DIVISION OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR JOB TRAINING—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Roch Bolduc: My question is directed to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. Mr. Axworthy recently tabled his bill on unemployment insurance reform. Under the present scheme, a 4-per-cent premium is paid by the employer and a 3-per-cent premium is contributed by the employee, for a total of 7 per cent. If we include workers' compensation as well, this amounts to 10 or 11 per cent of the total payroll. This increases production costs by the same amount and deprives employees of a certain amount of money.

Instead of reducing premiums for employers and employees, why does the minister prefer to make the provinces solely responsible for manpower training, while providing that contracts will have to be negotiated between the federal government and the provinces?

Does the minister have an explanation? It seems to me that the issue of manpower training should be straightforward. Why not take this opportunity to deal with the matter once and for all?

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, on an issue as important and as complex as this one, there will always be disagreement on the best route for the government. In this case, as he recognizes, there will be premium reduction but it will not be to the level that my honourable friend would wish.

• (1510)

The minister is embarking on a course of employment measures that would involve training, skills development and, in some cases, wage supplements because, over the last two years, he has consulted heavily with the public, the provinces, the private sector and the labour sector and found that one of the most fundamental difficulties in our workforce today is the speed with which the market is changing and the capability to ensure that our workforce has the ability, flexibility and adaptability to change as rapidly.

We have a real problem in Canada. Part of it is in an area which is of concern to me; that is, literacy and all that goes with it. Another problem we have in Canada is that the workforce in place today is the workforce upon which we will be depending for the next 20 years. This government believes that cooperative measures must be taken with other governments, the private sector and individuals in choosing the right kind of training they know they will need. That is an important component of any employment insurance program that is to take this country into the next century.

ATLANTIC CANADA OPPORTUNITIES AGENCY

AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT—EFFICACY OF INFRASTRUCTURE
JOB STATISTICS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Donald H. Oliver: Honourable senators, my question is for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. Last month, the Auditor General said that the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency needs to improve the way it measures and reports results. The Auditor General said, in a news release, that his concerns focused on the accuracy of the estimated jobs created and maintained, and the appropriateness of underlying assumptions used by the agency.

[Senator Johnson]

My question concerns, not the job-creation record of ACOA, but another program. The government is claiming that its infrastructure program has created 100,000 jobs. This is in spite of the fact that in November, there were 51,000 fewer construction jobs than one year ago. Given the way the ACOA job-creation numbers were called into question, can the government leader assure us that the infrastructure job figure would stand up to the Auditor General's scrutiny?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): I would certainly hope so, honourable senators. My colleague the President of the Treasury Board, under whom the infrastructure program exists, has been monitoring it very carefully from the day it began. I can consult him for reassurance on the figures which have been published.

MANITOBA

FEDERAL ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT OF FORESTRY PROJECTS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Mira Spivak: Honourable senators, last May I raised the issue of proposals to cut down large portions of the boreal forest in western Manitoba and eastern Saskatchewan to supply timber for wood products plants. Some of those forests are in the beautiful Duck Mountain Provincial Park. Manitoba allows logging in provincial parks. I also asked whether the federal minister was considering a federal environment assessment review of these projects.

The Minister of the Environment has now said publicly that the government may intervene with its own environmental review. This is good news. However, I am most concerned about the minister's timing because environmental advocates and others are caught in a jurisdictional hiatus, the very thing which the CEAA, in the wake of the Rafferty-Alameda dispute, was thought to prevent.

Will the government leader ask her colleague whether she will soon state the federal government's intent and its timetable on this issue? Also, what is the government's plan for the future, particularly in Manitoba, with regard to joint federal-provincial review panels to prevent duplication and the conducting of proper reviews? Manitobans are concerned that there has not been a proper review.

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I shall be pleased to speak to my colleague and to any other colleagues involved in this matter. It may be that the Minister of Natural Resources has an interest in it as well.

Senator Spivak: Could the Leader of the Government convey the reply in a timely fashion? A number of people in Manitoba are concerned about this issue, and I should like to be able to give them some information.

Senator Fairbairn: I will be pleased to do so.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

AUDITOR GENERAL ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Colin Kenny moved the second reading of Bill C-83, to amend the Auditor General Act.

He said: Honourable senators, Bill C-83 has far-reaching implications for how federal government departments will define their business and make their decisions. It explicitly integrates environmental and sustainable development considerations into the work of the Auditor General. It establishes the position of Commissioner of Environment and Sustainable Development within the office of the Auditor General, and it requires federal departments to prepare sustainable development strategies.

This bill goes to the heart of federal government planning and decision making. It will ensure that decisions made by federal government departments are sustainable development decisions, whether they be decisions on the management of buildings and operations or decisions on federal policies and programs. This means that the environment and sustainable development will not be taken into account as an afterthought after the real decisions have been made. Rather, environmental, social and economic considerations will be integrated into all federal planning and decision making.

Bill C-83 fulfils the commitment to establish an environmental auditor general and will be a catalyst for converging environmental and economic agendas across all government departments. Bill C-83 incorporates the environment and sustainable development into the Auditor General Act. It gives the Auditor General the explicit legal mandate to take into account environmental effects, alongside the traditional considerations of economy, effectiveness and efficiency, in his general auditing duties. It will ensure that, regardless of who the Auditor General is, the environment and sustainable development will be integrated into his or her audits of government spending.

Bill C-83 also creates the position of Commissioner of the Environment and Sustainable Development in the office of the Auditor General. By situating the commissioner in the Auditor General's office, the government has shown that it means business, that it is not afraid to be held up to public scrutiny for its performance in integrating the environment and sustainable development into all of its planning decisions.

• (1520)

The work of the Auditor General's office will benefit from the sustainable development presence of the commissioner, and the commissioner will benefit from the auditing expertise within the office of the Auditor General. The environment and sustainable development will be integrated in the work of the office of the Auditor General. This kind of integration is what sustainable development is all about. In effect, the commissioner will be the Auditor General's right-hand person on environment and sustainable development issues. He or she will assist the Auditor General in performing his general auditing duties, and he or she will be required to report annually on the government's environmental sustainable development performance.

Through the general auditing duties of the Auditor General and through the establishment of the commissioner, this bill will ensure that federal government departments are held up to public scrutiny for their sustainable development performance. It will do more than that. This bill will be instrumental in moving Canada toward sustainable development. The government must be more active and forward looking if it is to make sustainable development a real practice in all its activities.

Bill C-83 addresses this need. It requires departments to prepare sustainable development strategies within two years of this legislation coming into force. These strategies must be pragmatic and results-oriented. They should establish concrete objectives and action plans to achieve these objectives.

In a very real sense, every minister should be a minister of sustainable development. They will also establish benchmarks against which the Auditor General and commissioner can assess the sustainable development performance of federal departments. Departments will be required to update their strategies every three years as they learn from experience and as their understanding of what it means to put sustainable development into practice grows. The commissioner is required to monitor and report annually on how well federal governments are faring on the extent to which they are implementing their sustainable development action plans, and on the extent to which these action plans are effective in achieving departmental sustainable development objectives.

The government is committed to encouraging Canadians in the development of federal policies. Departments will consult with interested parties while developing and updating their sustainable development strategies.

Bill C-83 will also ensure that Canadians continue to have a voice. It will authorize the Auditor General to forward petitions from the public on environmental matters to the responsible ministers. Ministers will be required to respond to these petitions within a specific time frame. If they cannot, they must personally notify the petitioner in writing — a rare provision in law. The commissioner will monitor and report annually on the number, subject-matter and status of petitions received by ministers.

Honourable senators, the concept of sustainable development has been embraced throughout the world. It is not a difficult concept to embrace. Who can argue that social, environmental and economic considerations should not be considered in decisions that will have an effect across society? Who could argue that the synergies between a healthy environment and economic prosperity should not be realized?

What is more difficult is to turn sustainable development into operational practice. This is what Bill C-83 is intended to do. The commissioner created under this bill will hold the federal government up to public scrutiny for its progress in making the shift to sustainable development in all its planning and decision making.

On motion of Senator Spivak, debate adjourned.

BRITISH COLUMBIA TREATY COMMISSION ACT

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Len Marchand moved the second reading of Bill C-107, respecting the establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission.

He said: Honourable senators, the legislation before us today creates a statutory framework for the British Columbia Treaty Commission. It is a response to a very old question. It helps to complete some of the saddest unfinished business of our country.

As we approach the 21st century, the time has come to complete the work of the 19th century. The time has come to resolve the land question of British Columbia's First Nations. By providing a forum for negotiating a settlement, this bill will do just that.

Honourable senators will know that the province of British Columbia is unique in a number of ways, not the least of which is the historic relationship between First Nations and the governments of that province. Unlike many provinces where ownership of land and resources was clarified through treaties, British Columbia signed very few such agreements. Only a handful of treaties were signed in the pre-Confederation period, and since then, only Treaty 8, covering First Nations in the Peace River area, has been signed. As a result, issues which have long been settled elsewhere remain unresolved in British Columbia. As we often say among ourselves, "We have no treaties; we did not cede the land in any way, nor did we lose the land in any wars."

Few treaties have been signed, honourable senators, because, historically, the Government of British Columbia has taken the view that whatever rights to land and resources First Nations may once have had were extinguished long ago. The consequence of that position was decades of legal acrimony, decades of uncertainty and decades of distraction from other important issues.

That situation began to change in 1990 when the Government of British Columbia reversed its long-held position and opened the way to resolving these issues. Following on the British Columbia government's decision, the Government of Canada acted quickly to advance the process. Later that same year, both governments and the B.C. First Nations agreed to establish a task force to make recommendations on the mandate and process for treaty negotiations. Incidentally, Bill C-107 is essentially the same bill as Minister Siddon of the previous government had ready to present.

By June of 1991, the British Columbia Claims Task Force had released its report. One of its key recommendations was the creation of an arm's length British Columbia Treaty Commission. In the ten months that followed, representatives of Canada, British Columbia and the First Nations Summit negotiated the agreement which established that commission.

On September 21, 1992, both the federal and provincial governments joined with the First Nations Summit leadership in signing the British Columbia Treaty Commission Agreement. One of the terms of that agreement was a commitment to establish the legislation.

In May of 1993, both the First Nations Summit and the province fulfilled their part of that commitment. Now the time has come for the federal government to honour its part of that bargain.

The mandate of the treaty commission is straightforward. It is to facilitate, not negotiate, modern-day treaties. Its main functions are to assess the readiness of parties to negotiate, allocate negotiating funding to First Nations groups, assist parties to obtain dispute resolution services and to monitor and report on the status of negotiations.

The British Columbia Treaty Commission consists of five commissioners. Two are nominated by the First Nations Summit, one by the provincial government and one by the Government of Canada. The chief commissioner is appointed by all three parties.

The First Nations Summit includes all British Columbia First Nations which have agreed to participate in the commission's treaty and negotiation process. The summit provides a forum for these First Nations to meet and discuss treaty issues. Not only did the summit assist in the creation of the British Columbia Treaty Commission itself, it continues to provide direction to the commission together with the Governments of Canada and British Columbia.

Honourable senators, I believe the architects of this process have worked well. It was understood that resolution of these issues could have an impact on those not party to the negotiations. A province-wide consultation process has therefore been established so that interests not represented at the negotiating table will still have their voices heard.

The process will operate at two levels. The first is the 31-member Treaty Negotiation Advisory Committee which brings the perspectives of municipalities, business, labour, fishing, wildlife, agriculture and environmental groups together in the treaty-making process. The second level brings the diverse interests of the various regions of British Columbia to bear on the land claims process. Regional advisory committees are being struck in each treaty negotiation area so that local voices may be heard. These committees will work directly with federal and provincial negotiating teams.

• (1530)

I am pleased to note, honourable colleagues, that in the three years since its creation, the commission has made quite a bit of progress. To date, 47 First Nations, representing over 70 per cent of British Columbia's First Nations, have submitted statements of intent to negotiate. Not all of the bands or First Nations in British Columbia are a part of this process, but the door is open for them to join in.

One of the most celebrated cases, the Calder case — he is a Nisga'a — is outside of the process. However, we are hoping and praying that the Nisga'a, the Government of Canada and the Government of British Columbia will reach an agreement very soon, and that it will set a precedent for the rest of us to follow.

Honourable senators, settling land and resource issues will create an environment for investment and increased economic activity. It will send a clear signal. A treaty settlement will provide a land base for many First Nations and, with that land base, a proper foundation upon which to build strong, self-sufficient communities. It will allow First Nations to become involved in a number of economic activities presently closed to them, such as commercial mining, forestry and fishing. It is hoped and expected that this revitalized aboriginal economy will be beneficial to all British Columbians and Canadians.

Honourable senators, the aboriginal community of British Columbia is very anxious that this bill pass. I ask my colleagues, especially those on the other side, to expedite it as soon as possible. We would be very grateful.

On motion of Senator Andreychuk, debate adjourned.

CRIMINAL CODE

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Anne C. Cools moved the second reading of Bill S-13, to amend the Criminal Code of Canada (abuse of process).

She said: Honourable senators, Bill S-13 seeks to remove uncertainties in the use of judicial privilege, its exercise and its extent. It clarifies doubts and upholds the principle that judicial privilege is not available for barristers' use to mislead, obstruct or defeat justice itself, or to commit wrongdoing. It responds to the mounting evidence that certain practices by barristers in judicial proceedings need correction. The proposed correction is a Criminal Code sanction, which will define certain behaviours, activities, conduct and practices of barristers as abuses of process and codify them as criminal offences.

Honourable senators, courts and civil litigation attempt the just resolution of dispute. When, as a last resort, Canadians as litigants turn to the courts in search of a just resolution to their disputes, they must be assured that their causes will be advanced judiciously and truthfully, and that court processes will not be marshalled against them to add greater insult to their already aggrieved status, either by inflicting malicious injury or inflicting bankruptcy upon them.

Honourable senators, for generations, integrity was thought to be an essential element of justice. In the July 1995 Supreme Court of Canada judgment in the case of Hill v. Church of Scientology of Toronto, Mr. Justice Peter Cory noted the importance of integrity and barristers' integrity. He said:

Clients depend on the integrity of lawyers, as do colleagues. Judges rely upon commitments and undertakings given to them by counsel. Our whole system of administration of justice depends upon counsel's reputation for integrity.

He quoted David Hawreluk's essay "The Lawyer's Duty to Himself and the Code of Professional Conduct," citing Lord Birkett that:

The advocate has a duty to his client, a duty to the Court, and a duty to the State... and he shall be... a man of integrity.

That integrity is an essential plank of litigation, and judicial process is the substance of Bill S-13. Bill S-13 addresses abuses perpetrated by barristers on the courts, on judicial processes and on citizens. It amends the Criminal Code to create provisions aimed at the abuse of process; provisions which will deter barristers and legal counsel from actions that are contrary to the interests of justice.

Bill S-13 addresses the barristers' violation of their privileges and their privileged positions as officers of the court and asserts the duties owed by them to the court as its officers. This bill will create three new offences in the Criminal Code, making it an offence for counsel in judicial proceedings to, first, make public statements outside the tribunal that are known by counsel to be false or that counsel failed to take reasonable measures to ascertain were false; second, institute or proceed with proceedings known by counsel to be brought primarily to intimidate or injure another person; or, third, knowingly to deceive or participate in deceiving the tribunal or to rely on false, deceptive, exaggerated or inflammatory documents.

Honourable senators, the abuses and violations within the conduct of civil litigation and judicial proceedings are commanding parliamentary intervention. Bill S-13 is such intervention.

Our newspapers frequently report on the varied and abundant problems in the legal profession and the bar. In Toronto, the Law Society of Upper Canada's problems are featured daily in the news. On June 24, 1995, a story line in The Toronto Star read, "Fraud alleged in legal aid lawyers' bills." A June 1995 Law Society report states that the billings "...are disturbing and in our view suggest serious fraud." These articles report the problems of the Immigration Bar, the Law Society and the Legal Aid Plan. On June 24, 1995, The Toronto Star, writing about the newly elected treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada, Susan Elliott, said:

...she plans a consultative approach to dealing with the legal profession's numerous problems.

Honourable senators, last March, the Civil Justice Review, co-chaired by Mr. Justice Robert Blair and sponsored by the Attorney General's ministry and the Ontario Court of Justice, reported. In their examination of the civil justice system of Ontario, they uncovered enormous problems in the practice of civil justice and civil litigation, one being the use of false affidavits and false allegations in civil litigation. The Civil Justice Review's first report devoted a chapter, "Focus on the Family," to these enormous problems in the practice of family law and civil litigation. Mr. Justice Blair's report said:

Lawyers were criticized for their drafting of lengthy, damaging, and sometimes unsupportable affidavit material.

The Review was frequently told about... the often poisonous nature of lengthy affidavit materials.

The ugliness of false accusations and falsehood in civil litigation and family law proceedings is stark. Justice Blair reported:

We were told... that perjury in these affidavits is rampant.

...it is clearly a perception... that such perjury goes unpunished.

Justice Blair's report addresses the frustration felt by the public on these questions of false allegations, saying:

Concern and frustration were expressed about the number of allegations made in affidavits that were not capable of being substantiated in any way.

Some contents of affidavits... were reported by members of the public to be damaging forever.

False allegations in child custody and divorce cases now have attained a state of crisis in the civil justice system in Ontario. These abuses are not confined to the province of Ontario. They are bedeviling civil litigation and the courts of every province of this land.

• (1540)

Recently, Manitoba's government launched an inquiry into the matter. On September 3, 1995, the Winnipeg Free Press reported that:

So many parents falsely accuse their former partners of child abuse that the government plans a special probe this fall ...

Two recent judgments, one in the Ontario Court (General Division) and the other in the Supreme Court of Canada, make manifest the mischiefs which this bill seeks to correct. The first, the case of B(D) and B(R) and B(M) v. the Children's Aid Society of Durham Region and Marion Van Den Boomen, was judged by Mr. Justice Somers in the Ontario Court (General Division) in 1994. On July 13, 1995, I addressed this chamber regarding this particularly grievous case of Reverend B., an Anglican minister whose estranged wife, supported by the Children's Aid Society, during a child custody proceeding, falsely accused Reverend B. of sexually abusing his two daughters, age 2 and 4.

On exonerating Reverend B., Mr. Justice Somers' judgment stated:

... one can certainly understand the frustration the father must have felt in this case attempting to deal with allegations against him which were untrue ...

Justice Somers condemned the treatment of Reverend B., the plaintiff, by the defendants, Durham Children's Aid Society and his ex-wife, saying:

While as I have said I do believe that much of the damage sustained by the Plaintiff was as a result of the machinations of his former wife, I feel that the Defendants played a strong and at times heavy handed role in the matter.

After nine years and considerable financial and emotional cost, Reverend B. was victorious, but the damage to him and his two little girls is unspeakable. The enormity of this legal and judicial malignancy is driven home by Mr. Justice Somers, who informed that the Children's Aid Society, on realizing that they had, in the society's own words, "backed the wrong horse," and the society, having declared that the girls were not in need of protection, still persisted in their false accusations and litigation against Reverend B. Mr. Justice Somers described this deliberate persistence in false allegations and the society's actions in this regard as "utterly unconscionable."

It is an abuse of process when court processes and judicial proceedings are employed to inflict malicious injury and pain on individuals for the purpose of advancing another's interest or obtaining another's advantage during civil litigation. That some lawyers assist and benefit from such abuses is troubling and a terrible problem that must be remedied.

The second case, Hill v. Church of Scientology of Toronto in the Supreme Court of Canada, is a famous libel case involving the use of false allegations by lawyers Morris Manning, Clayton Ruby, and Michael Code to defame and destroy Crown attorney Casey Hill. I addressed the Senate on this case on November 23, 1995.

In his judgment on this case, Mr. Justice Peter Cory articulated the court's position and the common law against the use of false allegations, saying:

To make false statements which are likely to injure the reputation of another has always been regarded as a serious offence.

Mr. Justice Cory spoke directly to lawyers' responsibility, saying:

As an experienced lawyer, Manning ought to have taken steps to confirm the allegations that were being made.... Manning failed to take either of these reasonable steps. As a result of this failure ... a qualified privilege which attached to his remarks was defeated.

Mr. Justice Cory spoke strongly to the malicious use of falsehood to inflict injury within judicial proceedings, saying:

Scientology's behaviours throughout can only be characterized as recklessly high-handed, supremely arrogant, and contumacious. There seems to have been a continuing, conscious effort on Scientology's part to intensify and perpetuate its attack on Casey Hill without any regard for the truth of its allegations.

Wanton disregard for the truth and the perpetration of deceit upon the court is the behaviour that this bill seeks to censure: in short, the behaviour of lawyers Morris Manning, Clayton Ruby, Michael Code, and countless other counsel. Such ruthlessness and malice must not wear the protective cloak of justice and judicial privilege. It must stand naked and be seen for what it is — unbridled, predatory malice and spitefulness intended to ruin its prey, psychologically and financially. It is criminal activity and deserves a place in the Criminal Code of Canada.

On law as a profession, the eminent author Mark Orkin, in his book Legal Ethics, quotes the Canons of Legal Ethics approved by the Canadian Bar Association, describing the lawyer as:

... more than a mere citizen. He is a minister of justice, an officer of the Courts, his client's advocate, and a member of an ancient, honourable and learned profession. In these several capacities it is his duty to promote the interests of the State, serve the cause of justice, maintain the authority and dignity of the Courts, be faithful to his clients, candid and courteous in his intercourse with his fellows and true to himself.

The Court must have ministers; the attorneys are its ministers.

Moreover, the barrister's oath in Ontario partly reads as follows:

... nor shall you promote suits upon frivolous pretences. You shall not pervert the law to favour or prejudice any man, but in all things shall conduct yourself truly and with integrity. In fine, the Queen's interest and your fellow citizens' you shall uphold and maintain according to the constitution and law of this Province.

Lawyers as ministers of justice and officers of the court hold and enjoy privilege. Privilege includes solicitor-client privileges, judicial privilege, both absolute and qualified, that shield statements made in judicial proceedings and court documents from civil liability. Privileges are precisely that: exemptions from the general law.

Parliamentary governance has always recognized the need to ensure the proper conduct of lawyers and has always imposed sanctions for improper conduct. About this, Orkin says:

From its beginnings in England the legal profession was faced with the problem of maintaining high standards of moral and ethical conduct on the part of its practitioners. In the face of ... serious abuses the First Statute of Westminster, enacted in 1274, imposed sanctions on lawyers who perpetrated "any manner of deceit or collusion in the King's Court."

Deceit and fraud upon the court is an old dilemma. It was commonly held that no lawyer was to resort to false delays or false witnesses and was never to allege, prefer, or consent to any corruption, deceit, lie or falsified law. Orkin said:

Not only is a lawyer required affirmatively to uphold the law; he is also under a duty not to subvert the law.

Honourable senators, the Criminal Code must take cognizance of the improper conduct of barristers and must uncloak the shield that this improper conduct uses to shelter itself from scrutiny, accountability, responsibility, and sanction. Bill S-13, first, addresses the problem of public statements made by barristers which are false, and, second, it addresses the problems of deceit and fraud perpetrated upon the court by barristers.

Previously, the legal profession claimed to be non-commercial and claimed that the practice of law was a public service. These claims have foundered. Currently, the practice of law, like most financial interests, is a commerce, a commercial interest competing in the marketplace for success, dominance, and commercial supremacy. Parliament has an obligation to be as vigilant in its superintendence of this interest as it is of any other commercial interest. Government and Parliament owe no obligation to the bar and to barristers guaranteeing them enormous profits or enormous legal fees.

Moreover, we are told that the profession is self-regulatory and independent, yet it is well known that the elections of the benchers of the Law Society of Upper Canada are dominated by a few large Toronto firms. The law society does not regulate certain activities of its members. If it did, Clayton Ruby would have censured his and the actions of his colleagues, Morris Manning and Michael Code. At the time, Ruby was a bencher and the Vice-Chairman of the Discipline Committee. In addition, these members of the law society have a financial interest in the status quo. The law society does not censure these wrongdoings, nor will it.

Bill S-13 limits the use of privilege as a defence to civil liability by barristers in instances of their own wrongdoing in the conduct of judicial proceedings. It will assist the punishment and prosecution of wrongdoing perpetrated by barristers. Courtroom dynamics should be understood. Judges and barristers are joined by their common membership in the profession, the bar association, and the law society. Moreover, judges are subject to discipline by the law society in respect of their own conduct as members.

Honourable senators, common law evolved barristers' privileges to support and promote justice based on the premise that privileges would not be misused. The trend has been that the common law has expanded bit by bit, case by case, the exercise and the extent of these privileges. In short, the profession simply takes what it needs as it needs it. Judges and courts have summary jurisdiction over the conduct of the barristers as officers of the court, but their reluctance to exercise this jurisdiction leaves these questionable behaviours to the law society, which takes no action. The result is: no censure.

Mr. Justice Blair, in his Civil Justice Review's First Report, states that the civil justice system is "in a crisis situation." Bill S-13 addresses a mischief that has caused this crisis. This mischief is of a peculiar kind and quality, one that has been cultivated by some in the bosom of the profession, caused sometimes by greed, sometimes by vanity, sometimes ignorance. It is a disease within the profession, characterized by its insistence, its persistence, and its unconscionability.

Bill S-13 will criminalize barristers' persistence in the false allegations after they have been proven to be false and causes the Criminal Code of Canada, as a statute, to oust an insufficiency in the common law. It will criminalize the wanton and reckless disregard of the truth in the use of false allegations within judicial proceedings.

On motion of Senator Haidasz, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

[Translation]

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable John Charles Major, Puisne judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Deputy Speaker, the Honourable the Speaker of the Senate said:

I have the honour to inform you that His Excellency the Governor General has been pleased to cause Letters Patent to be issued under his Sign Manual and Signet constituting the Honourable John Charles Major, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, his Deputy, to do in His Excellency's name all acts on his part necessary to be done during His Excellency's pleasure.

The Commission was read by a Clerk at the Table.

The Honourable the Deputy Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act to amend the Cultural Property Export and Import Act, the Income Tax Act and the Tax Court of Canada Act. (Bill C-93, Chapter 38, 1995)

An Act respecting firearms and other weapons.
(Bill C-68, Chapter 39, 1995)

An Act to establish a system of administrative monetary penalties for the enforcement of the Canada Agricultural Products Act, the Feeds Act, the Fertilizers Act, the Health of Animals Act, the Meat Inspection Act, the Pest Control Products Act, the Plant Protection Act and the Seeds Act.
(Bill C-61, Chapter 40, 1995)

An Act to amend the Customs Act and the Customs Tariff and to make related and consequential amendments to other Acts. (Bill C-102, Chapter 41, 1995)

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until Wednesday, December 6, 1995, at 1:30 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, December 6, 1995

The Senate met at 1:30 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

SENATORS' STATEMENTS

NATIONAL DAY OF REMEMBRANCE

SIXTH ANNIVERSARY OF TRAGEDY AT L'ÉCOLE POLYTECHNIQUE

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, six years ago today, a deeply disturbed individual walked into l'École polytechnique in Montreal armed with a mini-Ruger 14, plenty of ammunition, and a stated grudge against feminists. He shot 27 people, killing 14 young women, before turning the gun on himself.

This chilling event shook the country and, in its aftermath, this day, December 6, was set aside as a national day of remembrance and action on violence against women in all its forms.

This has been a truly depressing year for public exposure to this kind of this issue, be it the ghastly tragedy of Kristen French and Leslie Mahaffy; the four women murdered in Montreal last week, including a young policewoman in her office; the fear which permeates the Abbotsford area of British Columbia where a killer roams free, while taunting police authorities and the population; or the anger and despair in the small town of Taber, near my home town in southern Alberta, where a family was shattered by the rape and shooting of their mother.

It is true enough that little can be done to prevent the seemingly random actions of a person gone mad, but work can be done by governments, communities, families and individuals to expose, to condemn and to diminish the frequency of this type of violence with its very special characteristics.

This government has taken a number of legislative initiatives during the last two years to improve our justice system, including the passage of the following bills: Bill C-72 to prevent the defence of extreme intoxication to excuse violence; Bill C-104 to regulate the collection and use of DNA evidence; Bill C-41 to treat abuse of trust and hate crimes as aggravating factors in determining the severity of sentencing; and, Bill C-68 which will strengthen the control of firearms and help police forces across the country to enforce the thousands of prohibition orders that are issued every year in response to domestic conflicts.

This is a not an issue of concern to women only. It is of concern to all of us — men and women together. We must accelerate the campaign against violence, in all its forms, wherever it exists, against women and men, against children and the elderly.

Many victims outside of our knowledge have been injured beyond repair or lost their lives through hatred and violence. We do not know who they are, but we do know the women of l'École Polytechnique. With their families and friends, we repeat their names with great sadness: Geneviève Bergeron; Hélène Colgan; Nathalie Croteau; Barbara Daigneault; Anne-Marie Edward; Maud Haviernick; Barbara Marie Klueznick, Maryse Laganière, Maryse Leclair, Anne-Marie Lemay, Sonia Pelletier, Michéle Richard, Annie St. Arnault, and Annie Turcotte.

Honourable senators, we simply must make a much more powerful effort to produce a safer and more secure future for all our citizens, whatever their age, whatever their gender, wherever they live. That is the best memorial we can offer.

Hon. Erminie J. Cohen: Honourable senators, there are pivotal moments in every country's history. In the United States, those moments have been the assassinations of leaders and the landmarks of their space program. In Canada, some of our recent historical moments have been the days when referenda have been held, landmark elections, and this day.

We all remember where we were when we heard about the killing of 14 young women at l'École polytechnique in Montreal on December 6, 1989. It was a day that shocked Canadians into some soul-searching about the nature of our society. It was a day that jolted us out of our complacency about violence against women. It compelled the federal government of the day into taking action, and it continues to inspire Canada to take a leadership role in addressing the issue of violence against women at home and on the international stage.

At the United Nations World Conference on Women in Beijing, Canada sponsored a resolution calling on all countries to take responsibility for ending violence against women, no matter what cultural excuses were used.

On that day in December, 1989, too many men looked in the mirror and felt a twinge of empathy for Marc Lépine. On that same day, too many women looked at the men around them and felt a fear that they had not felt before. Too many parents looked at their young daughters and wondered how they would be able to give them the confidence necessary to meet life's challenges in the face of such senseless rage.

How can we let our young daughters walk alone to school or home from part-time jobs? How can we tell them not to take shortcuts to the library without instilling in them an everyday fear that puts limits on their horizons? How can we understand what it feels like for victims of rape and violence and the survivors of the Montreal massacre if we do not take this day to think about it?

We must pledge ourselves to work for greater understanding between men and women, girls and boys, so that they will enjoy a future that was denied the 14 women who died six years ago.

This day is called a Day of Remembrance. It reminds us of the women of Bosnia who were tortured and raped throughout the long war that tore Yugoslavia apart, and of the many women who suffered the same treatment in other wars throughout history. These victims and survivors are finally being given recognition and a voice to express their pain. They have a right to demand that their suffering not be condoned through the silence of governments but recognized for the war crime and genocidal act that it is.

The long-term implications for these women and the future generations they are expected to raise are finally being looked at head on by educators and policymakers. These girls and women must not be left alone to bear a shame that should be borne by all of society. We must honour the resolutions made at the U.N. conference in Beijing so that we can help restore the hopes, dreams and confidence of these women so that they can, in turn, instill them in their own children.

In this way, honourable senators, we can ensure that there will be no recurrence of the kind of tragedy we saw in Montreal on December 6, 1989.

[Translation]

Hon. Lise Bacon: Honourable senators, we will never forget what happened on December 6, 1989, when 14 young women lost their lives at Montreal's École polytechnique.

As victims of a brutal and deadly aggression, these young women will never have the opportunity to live the bright future that was theirs. Nor will they have the opportunity to fulfil their potential and aspirations, and to share them with their close ones.

December 6 is a reminder that violence is all too present in our society, and that violence against women, whether verbal or physical, is a problem which must not only make us think but also act.

Twenty-five per cent of all women have experienced violence at the hands of their current partner or of a former one. On average, a woman is shot to death every six days in Canada. Firearms are the weapons of choice for spousal homicides. We could provide many more statistics, but these sad figures are enough to convince us that thought must be followed by action.

Although progress has been made in recent years in terms of making people aware of the issue of violence against women, we must still act at every level to fight this plague. In that regard, the federal government has taken significant measures, including a three year campaign to promote public awareness and collective measures against violence in our society. In 1995-96, the theme includes, among other issues, violence against women and children. The campaign also includes national consultations on violence against women; amendments to the Criminal Code and other legislative initiatives; the establishment of a national crime prevention council, in July 1994, and many more initiatives.

[English]

Canada has also taken steps to put the issue of violence against women on the international agenda. At the fourth United Nations World Conference held in September 1995, Canada played an important role in ensuring that the conference's final document, the Platform for Action, included measures to eliminate all forms of violence against women.

The massacre that took place at l'École polytechnique in Montreal on December 6, 1989, and recent events — I am thinking particularly of the murder of Constable Odette Pinard in Montreal last week — painfully remind us that, too often, violence is part of our everyday lives, and that it is our duty to act and to take measures to stop violence. In any society, violence is unacceptable. It will always be unacceptable.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Hon. Mira Spivak: Honourable senators, the loss of 14 young women at l'École polytechnique in Montreal six years ago was a tragedy which galvanized Canadians. Their deaths spurred many Canadians to act to make this country a safe one for all women. Their memory has become our touchstone.

We must address systemic violence and systemic gender inequality, or we risk the horror of similar tragedies.

[Translation]

Each year, I also become more aware of what we owe to the families of these 14 young women. We are indebted to their parents, who used their sorrow and their pain as a springboard to positive action. We can hear their voices. Last year, in particular, we heard them ask the government to provide better protection for all Canadians. They made that request:

...with their heart, their soul, their guts, their intelligence, their common sense...

And, to quote Suzanne Laplante-Edward, in reference to her daughter Anne-Marie:

...with in mind the wonderful memory of their beloved children.

These parents continue to work to make Canada a better place, and we owe them our gratitude.

[English]

With each year that passes, there are signs of hope that we are addressing some of the root causes of violence against women. This past summer, Statistics Canada gave us a detailed picture of women in Canada that shows there is progress in narrowing the gap of gender inequality; that there have been substantial increases in the educational attainment of women; and that there has been substantial growth in the number of women in the labour force.

In recent years, women have increased their representation in several professional fields. For example, in 1994, women made up 32 per cent of all doctors and dentists in this country. A dozen years earlier, they made up only 18 per cent.

The report, however, discloses that substantial inequality remains. On average, women's incomes are just 58 per cent of men's average incomes in Canada. Women make up more than half of all people living on low incomes in Canada. Women are much more likely than men to feel worried about their personal safety. We still have a society in which 42 per cent — I was surprised to learn this figure was not at 100 per cent — of women feel unsafe walking alone after dark in their neighbourhoods.

According to the United Nations development programs newly released 1995 Human Development Report, globally, women constitute 70 per cent of the world's poor; represent two-thirds of the 900 million illiterate; and receive only 26 per cent of total earned income. They hold only 14 per cent of the world's managerial and administrative positions and occupy only 10 per cent of parliamentary seats.

[Translation]

The campaign against violence is far from over, as demonstrated by last week's killing of a Montreal policewoman and mother of two children, who was shot point-blank while writing a report in her office. This savage attack against a 30-year-old woman reminds us, once again, that we still have a long way to go.

On this national day of commemoration and activities to condemn violence against women, we remember a tragedy, and this moment of reflection gives us strength and determination. These 14 young women studying in Montreal left us, sadly, a legacy that will bear fruit. We owe them and their families our sincere gratitude. Above all, we owe them, on this day of commemoration, our repeated assurances that their sacrifice has not been in vain.

• (1350)

NATIONAL UNITY

QUEBEC REFERENDUM—
COVERAGE OF EVENTS BY CBC FRENCH NETWORK

Hon. L. Norbert Thériault: Honourable senators, I would like to comment on the media coverage provided by the Société Radio-Canada during the referendum.

Honourable senators, the obvious bias of some journalists at the SRC regarding Quebec separatism has bothered me for some time. For instance, the coverage of the monster rally, where nearly 100,000 Canadians travelled to Montreal to tell Quebecers that they wanted a united Canada, left something to be desired.

The CBC, the English network, said there were 150,000 people, while the SRC and RDI estimated that there were about 35,000. You must admit there is quite a spread between the two estimates. Is it so hard to get the real figures? Was this not one of the biggest demonstrations in the history of Canada?

Complaints about the way in which the SRC fulfils its mandate have been heard before. Back in 1987, the CRTC was concerned about the fact that francophones outside Quebec did not receive from their national broadcasting service the kind of programs with which they could identify, such as local news, specific editorial content or specific subjects. The CRTC added that wherever they happened to live, francophones outside Quebec should be able to identify with the national service. That is why, again according to the CRTC, the SRC should adapt its French programming to satisfy the needs of francophones outside Quebec.

In fact, the SRC willingly took part in an exercise to identify the television needs of francophones outside Quebec. In 1988, it released a study which proposed a detailed action plan covering the many aspects of problems relating to coverage area and programming. At the time, the SRC estimated that $80 million would be needed to implement the report. This remains the most exhaustive study ever made by the SRC to examine the television needs of these communities.

Today, eight years after the CRTC's decision and seven years after the SRC tabled its report, I must conclude that the SRC has failed to adapt its French television services in a manner that is satisfactory. Instead of the expected increase in local programming, francophones outside Quebec, after the budget cuts in December 1990, lost one local station — the one in Toronto which is not negligible in an area with several thousand francophones — and were given only 24 hours of general or local programming on all stations outside Quebec, instead of the 41 hours produced before the study. Recent budget cuts had the effect of further reducing local French programming outside Quebec, especially in Ottawa and Moncton.

Lately, I noted some attempt to provide more Canadian news coverage with programs like SRC Bonjour but here again, this does not suit western Canada because of the time difference. Le Téléjournal with Bernard Derome, Le Point with Lépine and Poulin and special features on the SRC's news program remain firmly focused on events in Quebec. RDI might be an alternative for broadcasting local news, except that RDI is not available everywhere in Canada.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, the time allotted to Senator Thériault has run out. Does he have permission to continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Sen. Thériault: Honourable senators, you know it is not often that I take up the Senate's time. As an Acadian, must I accept seeing the French fact reduced almost exclusively to Quebec on state television? Being from the Maritimes, I figured out long ago that I needed to access other national networks to get news of my region.

Honourable senators, is it normal for me hear more about Acadians on CBC radio's Morningside than on its francophone counterpart produced in Montreal. and for Montreal?

This is an upsetting and unacceptable situation. Imagine if there were a sovereign State of Quebec and if the state television, Radio-Québec, were openly promoting Canadian federalism. No one would tolerate that, nor will we tolerate it from Radio-Canada today.

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, I shall wait until tomorrow. I know what is on the Order Paper, and just how heavy our agenda is.

[English]

QUEBEC REFERENDUM—RESPONSE OF SOME QUEBECERS
TO COMMUNICATIONS FROM SCHOOLCHILDREN
IN OTHER PARTS OF THE COUNTRY

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, on October 31, schoolchildren in Grades 3 and 4 of the Bisset Elementary School in Alberta sent out letters stating their thoughts on the referendum: that they were very happy about the result. The envelope was addressed to "any elementary school, Grade 3 or 4, in Québec City."

Approximately three weeks later, their teacher, Mr. Kent Richardson from St. Albert, was surprised to receive the envelope on which was written: "Return to Sender." Inside, he found the letters from the schoolchildren accompanied by an editorial cartoon from Le Devoir and the name of a teacher, Madam Christiane Lévesque of l'École Saint-Jean-Baptiste, in Quebec.

Madam Lévesque, when reached by Radio-Canada yesterday, stated that she returned the envelope to the schoolchildren and that she did not appreciate receiving the envelope in the first place.

This morning, I took the initiative to talk to Mr. Kent Richardson, the teacher from St. Albert. He told me that this started as a comparative study between Alberta and Quebec, which is part of the curriculum in Grades 3 and 4 at Bisset Elementary School. This study is intended to increase the appreciation, tolerance and sensitivity of the students towards a different culture. It was supposed to be completed by the end of the year. It started in September and culminated in October and was, by way of a project, to have students prepare letters to state how they felt about the result of the referendum. In fact, many students stated what they felt before, but Mr. Richardson believed that the students also could do something after the fact.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, it is a pity when schoolchildren, in expressing how they feel, come up against this kind of lack of understanding on the part of an adult. Not only should eight- and nine-year-olds be encouraged to state their thoughts but their initiatives should be greeted with courtesy.

I find such incidents most unfortunate. I hope that Mrs. Christiane Lévesque will return to a better frame of mind and that Quebec leaders, whom I will be contacting this afternoon, that is to say the mayor of Quebec City or the office of either Mr. Parizeau or Mr. Bouchard, will let these children know that they are sorry.

[English]

I expressed my deep sadness to Mr. Richardson and asked him to convey my admiration to his students. In addition, I agreed to speak to his students at any time.

Since Mr. Richardson wishes to pursue this endeavour, I asked my friend Mark Assad, the member for Gatineau—La Lièvre, if he could find a school for me that would be receptive to this kind gesture made on behalf of these children from Bisset Elementary School. Approximately 10 minutes ago, he agreed to do so. Mr. Richardson and his students intend to find a school in Quebec with canadiennes françaises — not in Montreal, where it would be easy to organize. Mr. Assad is convinced that, without a shadow of a doubt, he will find a school that will accept this letter, which was sent in good faith.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

• (1400)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

ENERGY, THE ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

RESPONSE TO INTERIM REPORT ON THE SAFETY IMPLICATIONS OF AUTOMATED WEATHER OBSERVATION SYSTEMS

On Tabling of Documents:

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators I have the honour to table a response to the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources on their Interim Report on the Safety Implications of Automated Weather Observation Systems, AWOS.

FISHERIES

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ANNUAL REPORT OF DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES AND OCEANS ON THE ATLANTIC GROUND FISH FISHERY TABLED

Hon. Eileen Rossiter: Honourable senators, I have the honour to table the second report of the Standing Senate Committee on Fisheries, which results from the committee's examination of the annual report of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans and deals with the Atlantic groundfish fishery.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Rossiter, pursuant to rule 97(3), report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

CODE OF CONDUCT

SECOND REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Donald H. Oliver, Joint Chairman of the Special Joint Committee on the Code of Conduct, presented the following report:

Wednesday, December 6, 1995

The Special Joint Committee on a Code of Conduct has the honour to present its

SECOND REPORT

Your Committee has examined its Order of Reference adopted by the Senate on Wednesday, June 28, 1995, and by the House on Monday, June 19, 1995, and recommends the following:

That the name of the Committee in French be changed to "Comité mixte spécial sur un code de conduite".

Respectfully submitted,

DONALD H. OLIVER
Joint Chair

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Oliver, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

[Translation]

PARLIAMENTARY ASSEMBLIES OF FRENCH-SPEAKING COUNTRIES

REPORT OF CONFERENCE OF SPEAKERS, PARIS, FRANCE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I have the honour to present, in both official languages, the report of the conference of speakers of Parliamentary assemblies of French-speaking countries, which I had the privilege of attending as Canadian parliamentary delegate.

The conference, held in Paris on October 16 and 17, 1995, at the invitation of the speaker of the French National Assembly, brought together more than 40 speakers of French-speaking parliamentary assemblies.

INTERNATIONAL ASSEMBLY OF FRENCH-SPEAKING PARLIAMENTARIANS

REPORT OF CANADIAN SECTION AND FINANCIAL REPORT OF 22ND SESSION OF GENERAL AMERICAN ASSEMBLY

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, pursuant to rule 23(6), I have the honour to present, in both official languages, the report of the Canadian section of the International Assembly of French-Speaking Parliamentarians and the financial report of the 22nd session of the General American Assembly of the IAFSP, held in Quebec City from July 12 to 14.

[English]

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Hon. John B. Stewart, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs have the power to sit at 3:15 in the afternoon today, even though the Senate may then be sitting, and that rule 95(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

SOCIAL PROGRAMS IN CANADA

NOTICE OF INQUIRY

Hon. L. Norbert Thériault: Honourable senators, I give notice that on Thursday, December 7, 1995, I will call the attention of the Senate to concerns with respect to social programs in Canada.

GUN CONTROL LEGISLATION

PRESENTATION OF PETITIONS

Hon. Paul Lucier: Honourable senators, I have the honour to present two petitions regarding Bill C-68: one from the people in the Yukon, and one from some people in British Columbia.

QUESTION PERIOD

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

AVAILABILITY OF OPPORTUNITY FOR THE PROPOSAL OF AMENDMENTS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lowell Murray: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate concerning Bill C-110 which is now before the Justice and Legal Affairs Committee of the other place.

My question is prompted by reports that, in recent days, a number of cabinet colleagues have come to the conclusion that the bill needs to be amended in order to provide a five-region veto, extending the veto to British Columbia as a region.

In particular, a media report of yesterday's date states that the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, Brian Tobin, began favouring a separate veto for B.C. after participating last Tuesday in a radio open-line show in Vancouver.

This report is confirmed by one of Mr. Tobin's press aides who is quoted as saying, "Tobin had been struck by the strength of West Coast public opinion on the issue." The same report stated:

Justice Minister Allan Rock is also believed to be backing a separate veto...

Further on, the article states:

B.C.'s minister, David Anderson, is "more than on side" for a fifth region and has been working around the clock to lobby his cabinet colleagues, says Liberal Peter Warkentin, vice-president of the party's B.C. region.

My question is this: Is the government giving consideration to proposing amendments to Bill C-110 before its passage by the House of Commons?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I can say to my honourable friend, quite honestly, that I have no knowledge that that is the case.

Senator Murray: Honourable senators, is it a fair and accurate statement of the government's position that you are determined to pass Bill C-110 without amendment through the House of Commons and send it in that form to the Senate?

Senator Fairbairn: I cannot answer that question either. It is clear that strong views are being expressed regarding parts of this proposed legislation.

The bill is now before the House of Commons. As you know, it is being studied by the House of Commons committee today. We must wait and see what transpires. I am being absolutely honest with my friend in stating that I cannot answer his questions.

• (1410)

Senator Murray: The government has no plans at the moment to propose amendments to this bill. Is that the situation?

Senator Fairbairn: Should that be the case, it would be announced as of this moment. I am not aware of any.

CLARIFICATION OF SITUATION IN RELATION TO ABORIGINAL ASPIRATIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lowell Murray: I couple my next question, honourable senators, with the expressed hope that, before any further steps are taken, including proposed amendments to the bill, the government would consult with the premiers, especially the premiers of the four provinces in Western Canada who are affected by the present bill and would be affected by any amendments thereto.

Honourable senators, the minister also will have noted statements attributed to the head of the Assembly of First Nations concerning the possible impact of the amending formula on the constitutional aspirations of aboriginal peoples. I think it would be important, at an early date, for the responsible minister, Mr. Rock, to clarify the situation with regard to this bill and its relationship to the constitutional aspirations of aboriginal peoples.

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): I thank my honourable friend for his comments. He has had a very long history of involvement on this particular file of government and national policy. I shall certainly make his views known to my colleague.

VISITORS IN THE GALLERY

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I draw your attention to the presence in the gallery of a former colleague of ours, Charles R. McElman. Welcome, again, to the chamber.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I also draw your attention to some other distinguished visitors in our gallery: a delegation of senior officials of the Federation Council in the State Duma of Russia, who are in Ottawa this week to study our parliamentary system, under a parliamentary exchange program that we have with the Parliament of Russia. I would add that three of the delegates are very fortunate in that they will be going from Ottawa to the province of Manitoba to spend some time in Winnipeg.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

DISTRIBUTION OF VETO POWER—STATUS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, I am pleased that Senator Murray was inspired by my question of yesterday.

Yesterday, I asked the Honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate if she would inform her colleague of my wishes. I do not expect to be told any caucus secrets, although I am touched by yesterday's invitation by Senator MacEachen to come back to the fold. That invitation is now on the record. I have been waiting for an invitation from the government whip, but I have not received one yet.

Senator MacEachen: I may change my mind!

Senator Prud'homme: Honourable senators, I would ask the Honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate if she conveyed my strong wishes of yesterday to whomever she met this morning, either in cabinet or in caucus, about a veto for British Columbia?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I shall be pleased to do so this afternoon when I meet with some of my colleagues.

HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT

BRITISH COLUMBIA—IMPOSITION OF WAITING PERIOD FOR PAYMENTS UNDER CANADA ASSISTANCE PLAN—SUSPENSION OF TRANSFER PAYMENTS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. David Tkachuk: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. The Minister of Human Resources Development, Mr. Axworthy, is withholding payments to British Columbia as result of that province's three-month residency period requirement before application for welfare. Minister Axworthy claims that the three-month waiting period is a barrier to the free movement of people in Canada. Would the minister explain to us how the three-month waiting period constitutes a barrier to the free movement of people in Canada?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, the Minister of Human Resources, with considerable regret, took the decision that he did because the Government of British Columbia was clearly in breach of the law governing the Canada Assistance Plan. Mr. Axworthy would far prefer to settle the issue of mobility rights without implementing this kind of penalty. It is not something that the Minister of Human Resources wishes to do. However, there is a law in place, and he believes the federal government must abide by that law. He and his officials hope to talk again with the minister in British Columbia.

Senator Tkachuk: Honourable senators, that may be, but he does not say that. He says that the Government of British Columbia is causing a barrier to the free movement of Canadians. I do not know much about how the minister thinks, but there is nothing stopping anyone from moving to British Columbia, as far as I know. I just want to know what the barrier is and, if the barrier is three months, what would make it better? Would it be one month? Would it be two weeks? Would it be 15 days? Would it be the same requirement as that for voting in British Columbia, namely, six months? What is the actual barrier to prevent you, or me, or any Canadian, from moving to British Columbia?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, there is no barrier preventing Senator Tkachuk from moving to British Columbia at all. I am sure he would be more than welcome there.

The barrier, as I said before — and I will be pleased to get the exact language of the law for my honourable friend — is found in the question of the rights of Canadians, wherever they live in Canada, to be able to move to other parts of Canada and not lose their eligibility to access the Canada Assistance Plan. It is set out clearly in the law. That is the difficulty in which the federal minister finds himself. If there is, through negotiation, discussion and cooperation, a method of resolving this issue, the minister would be a happy man. He left himself available, up until the moment when this action became necessary this week, to try to find a favourable conclusion to this difficulty.

However, I will be pleased to get the exact wording of the law, which leaves the minister with no other alternative but to take the action that he has taken. He has done so with great regret and hopes that further communications with his counterpart in British Columbia will resolve the situation.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

VETO PROPOSALS—EFFECT ON FUTURE STATUS OF YUKON

Hon. Paul Lucier: Honourable senators, my question is for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. It concerns Bill C-110. The provinces object to being lumped together in a veto. However, we in both northern territories do not have that problem. We have been totally ignored. We are not being lumped with anyone. We do not have any say at all. Could the Leader of the Government assist me on this matter?

I have a letter from the Office of the Government Leader of the Yukon Territory, Mr. John Ostashek, which states:

Yukoners are proud to be Canadian and wish to see the federation work, but success cannot be achieved by measures which will take away from our rights. The veto proposals will make eventual provincial status even more difficult to achieve; they are regressive and unfair to the Yukon and NWT. Exclusion of our interests and our voice is particularly troublesome at a time when we join fully with the provinces and the federal government in a variety of intergovernmental forums and at First Ministers' conferences.

• (1420)

The veto could, eventually, have a serious effect on the Yukon and the Northwest Territories. We are not talking about provincial status now, but we do know that we will want to achieve that at some point in the future. We have always felt that the achievement of provincial status should be settled between the territory involved and the Government of Canada, which is how every other province became a province. Then there were no vetoes from anyone.

Can something be done in Bill C-110? Can we be assured that, at some later point, this matter will be addressed and that the people of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories will be able to feel that they count in this equation? We are not merely entities sitting on the side to be dealt with when everything else is in place.

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I should like to answer the last part of my honourable friend's question first with a very strong statement to him and those he represents that they do indeed count. They are of great importance, not just to any government but to the country as a whole.

Senator Lucier will know that honouring the commitment made during the referendum and bringing forward the measures that the Prime Minister has recently outlined does not alter the current amending formula, nor does it amend the Constitution. It is seen as a bridge to 1997 when a formal review of the amending formula must be conducted by the first ministers. The suggested changes are not of a constitutional nature.

The government is also committed to doing everything it can to create a degree of consensus which will allow us to improve our federation, short of constitutional amendment. That is what the Prime Minister has committed himself to do. In the past, my honourable friend has made him very conscious of the position of the Northwest Territories and the Yukon, particularly on the question of provincehood.

[Translation]

HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE REFORM—CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN FEDERAL AND NEW BRUNSWICK GOVERNMENTS— REQUEST FOR TABLING OF DOCUMENTATION

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: Honourable senators, my question is for the Leader of the Government, and relates to my question of yesterday about the reform of the unemployment insurance program.

From the answer I was given by the government leader, I felt obliged to reformulate my question to enable her to clarify her response and to confirm her commitment to table the documents I asked for yesterday.

I suggested she should agree to table all the documents exchanged between the Government of New Brunswick and the federal government, including the documents Mr. McKenna used to convince the federal government of the flaws in the reform, or at least of the dissatisfaction of the four Atlantic premiers with the reform and their continued concerns about it.

In response to my question, the government leader said:

If there is anything further I can do in response to my friend's request, I will do it.

I just want the documents, Madam Minister. I can understand that she does not have in her possession the documents expressing the Government of New Brunswick's objections to the negative impact of the reform on seasonal jobs.

However, I think Canadians — and certainly the people of New Brunswick — are entitled to know exactly which points Mr. McKenna does not like in the reform. Otherwise, we are limited to interpreting Mr. McKenna's words of rather weak opposition as another frivolous statement, devoid of meaning. Given that speech evaporates and the written word endures, I, and the people of New Brunswick, would like to know the content of these documents so that I can confirm Mr. McKenna's attachment to the workers in New Brunswick who could be affected by the passing of this bill.

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I believe the answer to that question is the same in substance as the answer I gave my honourable friend yesterday. I will take his requests seriously and present them to my colleagues to find out if there is any documentation, and if so, what the nature of it is, and whether there is a possibility of tabling such documentation. I undertake to do that.

In spite of our political differences, I am sure my honourable friend would agree that Mr. McKenna's words and speeches are very compelling in themselves.

[Translation]

Senator Simard: Honourable senators, to return to my question, we know that spoken words are fleeting. No one in Canada can accept, or even imagine, an official statement of the Government of New Brunswick being made orally.

If the McKenna government is serious, and I believe it is most of the time, it will certainly have prepared documents giving some statistics about the people likely to be affected by this reform. It is totally inconceivable that Mr. McKenna would have restricted himself to a spoken statement which could be interpreted in any way one might wish in the weeks, months, even years, to come.

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I am not disputing what my honourable friend has said; I am simply saying that I do not know. I will try to find an answer for my colleague. However, it may be that I cannot delve into the domain of any provincial government, and the questions my honourable friend poses may be better asked of Premier McKenna.

[Translation]

Senator Simard: Since I am a senator and since Canadian money and federal unemployment insurance and employment legislation is involved, I do not think I need to contact the legislature of New Brunswick to get an answer.

Moreover, where the legislature of New Brunswick is concerned — and you will have to take my word for this — there have been no consultations between the Leader of the Government of New Brunswick and myself in recent days.

Yesterday, an official request was made to the Government of New Brunswick and its premier for the Legislative Assembly to be recalled and for there to be a debate on this matter in New Brunswick. All New Brunswick parties are in agreement that the legislation of Messrs Chrétien and Axworthy is not appropriate in the least.

Do you know what Mr. McKenna's answer was to Leader of the Opposition Valcourt's request? That there would be no special session. Do you believe I would get a positive response from Mr. McKenna if I asked for those documents?

There are numerous precedents for tabling before this house correspondence, letters or documents which have been exchanged between these two governments in the past, as well as with other provincial governments.

My question is therefore as follows: Will the minister commit herself to a serious investigation in order to obtain these documents for tabling, within a week or, at the very least, before adjournment?

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, once again, I have committed myself to convey my honourable friend's question to the proper sources to see if documents exist and whether it is possible to accede to my friend's request. I will do that.

[Later]

[Translation]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE REFORM—CORRESPONDENCE
BETWEEN FEDERAL AND NOVA SCOTIA GOVERNMENTS—
REQUEST FOR TABLING OF DOCUMENTATION

Hon. Gerald J. Comeau: Honourable senators, my question follows on that of Senator Simard. The Government Leader in the Senate has committed herself to obtaining for us the correspondence containing the recommendations of the Premier of New Brunswick, Mr. McKenna. I would also like to see tabled the correspondence of Mr. McKenna, who has had very little to say so far, concerning the changes Minister Axworthy has proposed for Nova Scotia.

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I repeat that I will ascertain if anything is available and, if so, I will check to see if it is appropriate to follow through.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE REFORM—
RELATIONSHIP TO REDESIGN OF OVERALL SOCIAL PROGRAMS—
GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Brenda M. Robertson: Honourable senators, two years ago, after the Liberals formed the government, some rather interesting proclamations and announcements were made by Mr. Axworthy regarding the study and redesign of all programs supporting the social safety net. These announcements were made over a considerable period of time.

Knowing, as most of us do in this chamber, the strong inter-relationship between social programs, can the honourable leader advise us why her government and Mr. Axworthy dropped the study on the restructuring of the social network in favour of a piecemeal approach demonstrated by isolating the reform of unemployment insurance from other programs?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, as my honourable friend will know, an exercise was begun by Mr. Axworthy some time ago. He has taken a great deal of time and effort to consult, to gather information and views from the public, the provinces and interested stakeholders in all areas on the broad subject of social reform. He has not done that once; he has done it a great many times.

He has not, in any way, backed away from his intense concern to establish a secure social network for Canadians. He has chosen the method in which he is now engaged. It involves a different way of approaching what will now be called the "social transfer". It will include policies for the elderly.

My honourable friend refers to this approach as piecemeal. The minister has had extensive consultations, and he has initiated an approach which he and the government believe will constitute security for Canadians of all ages, and in all parts of this country, for many years to come.

Senator Robertson: That is an interesting answer, honourable senators.

Have the discussions between Minister Axworthy and the people of this country indicated that the preference is that one program at a time should be addressed without considering others? Will each program be tinkered with, separate and apart from the others? If that is done, honourable senators, I submit to you that it will not work.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I respect my colleague's views on this process. She comes to this chamber from the province of New Brunswick and with a great deal of experience of how these programs work. My honourable friend will know, for instance, that over many years unemployment insurance has been dealt with in a manner that does not separate it from the social network. The issue itself is complex and special in the way that it affects the lives of Canadian workers. Following advice and consultation, governments in the past sought to come to the best possible conclusions on the unemployment insurance issue. However, in dealing with unemployment insurance, governments have been accused of tinkering. I do not believe it was tinkering before, and it is not tinkering now.

Honourable senators, in a very determined way, the Minister of Human Resources Development has tried to combine the difficult social problems involved in work and education in an attempt to find different methods of job creation. He has attempted to pull more of that into the ambit of employment services than has been the case in the past. However, his motivation is the same as that of previous governments: to establish the strongest foundation and sustainable security for Canadians in the areas of employment, pensions and health care. That is his motivation. He is making choices based on the best advice and knowledge that he can accumulate through public consultation and discussions with all who are involved in the social network.

Honourable senators, I personally believe we should give the minister all the support we can as he strives to achieve the objectives that we all wish to achieve.

Senator Robertson: Honourable senators, obviously there is a major difference in opinion. In due course, we will have an opportunity to debate this issue.

DELAYED ANSWER TO ORAL QUESTION

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I have a response to a question raised in the Senate on November 20, 1995, by the Honourable Senator Berntson regarding the sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada.

JUSTICE

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA—
ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—
NUMBERS OF RCMP INVESTIGATIONS PUBLICIZED—
REQUEST FOR PARTICULARS

(Response to question raised by Hon. Eric Arthur Berntson on November 20, 1995)

From what is known of the nature of the documents that were publicly disclosed and the manner in which they have been made public, these documents were not documents created by the Government of Canada or edited by the Government of Canada.

The Government of Canada has no reason to believe that the reported disclosure resulted from governmental action.

In light of this information, the Government of Canada is not asking for an investigation at this time.

To our knowledge, no letters of request to other countries have ever been made public.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

AUDITOR GENERAL ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Kenny, seconded by the Honourable Senator Roux, for the second reading of Bill C-83, to amend the Auditor General Act.

Hon. Eric Arthur Berntson (Deputy Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, Bill C-83 aims to give the Auditor General a stronger mandate to monitor departmental activity concerning the environment. It also ensures that such activity is reported to the House of Commons annually.

By way of background, honourable senators, reaching this point has involved travelling a somewhat winding trail. The former PC government made environmental concerns a key part of federal planning. In 1989, the PC government launched the National Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, an initiative to include environmental concerns and economic planning. In particular, a sustainable development strategy was included in the Conservative Green Plan introduced in December 1990. The strategy focused on forestry, the agri-food industry, and fisheries.

In their Red Book, honourable senators, the Liberals pledged to make sustainable development a major component of Canada's strategy for economic growth. They promised to create an "Environmental Auditor General" to monitor the "greening" of government. In the spring of 1994, the Standing Committee on Environment and Sustainable Development recommended the creation of a new and independent office, designated "The Commissioner of the Environment and Sustainable Development." This was in spite of testimony from the Auditor General pointing out that his office was already doing similar work.

• (1440)

In her response, however, to the committee's report, Environment Minister, Sheila Copps, stated that a new office separate from the Auditor General would not be created.

In substance, the passage of Bill C-83 would implement five changes. First, it would require that all full departments develop a sustainable development strategy. Second, it would require the Auditor General to make an environmental report to the House of Commons at least annually. Third, it would require the appointment by the Auditor General of a commissioner of the environment and sustainable development who would assist the Auditor General in performing his duties relating to the environment. Fourth, the commissioner will also monitor the progress of departments in respect to their sustainable development strategy. Fifth, it would impose guidelines regulating the treatment of all petitions related to environmental development issues received by the Auditor General. The commissioner will forward all petitions to the appropriate minister who will acknowledge receipt of the petition to at least one petitioner within 15 days of reception and respond to the petition within 120 days.

Honourable senators, this is not a complicated bill, although there may be some need for clarification regarding some concerns raised at the committee stage, which I suggest is the appropriate place to raise such concerns.

Hon. Mira Spivak: Honourable senators, I wish to indicate my support for Bill C-83, which will create the commissioner of the environment and sustainable development under the Auditor General Act.

Senator Kenny ably explained in detail the forward-looking elements of the bill. However, I have some concerns with respect to it.

I welcome the amendments that will expand the watch-dog role that auditors general have informally taken upon themselves for 10 years or so. As the Auditor General himself pointed out in his November report, in the past decade his office has explored environmental issues from almost every conceivable angle as part of its mandate to report matters of significance to Parliament.

With this bill, he will have a new partner — perhaps a new "deputy" is the appropriate term. The new commissioner of the environment and sustainable development, appointed by and reporting to the Auditor General, will be charged specifically with keeping watch on what government departments say they will do to further sustainable development and telling Parliament, and the public, the extent to which they are doing it.

The new office is certainly worthy of support. It makes some sense to locate it within the Office of the Auditor General. Time and again we hear that unsustainable development not only harms the natural environment, human health and our country's credibility in the international community, but also, in the long run, it is more expensive.

The Auditor General reaffirmed that point in his recent reports that tell of the economic fallout from delays in finding permanent disposal for radioactive waste and PCBs. In just one hour this week I also heard people concerned with global climate change speak of many measures governments could introduce that would not only mitigate the impact of climate change on the environment, the economy and human health, but how they would also save taxpayers money.

This bill requiring departments to give some thought to the impact of their procedures, their programs and their policies on the environment and Canada's progress toward a sustainable society is certainly worthy of support. We need this mechanism to require our officials to see the big picture and to take a long-term view. Long gone are the days when asking employees to recycle or follow environmentally friendly procurement practices will meet the environmental challenges we face.

That being said, I am aware that the bill does not go as far as many might have hoped. It does not allow the new commissioner to judge the merits of departmental policy. It does not create an ombudsman for the environment, or even a quasi-ombudsman as we have for the protection of access to government information or personal privacy. The new commissioner will simply pass on petitions received from the public to the responsible minister and report the response.

At the end of the day, the effectiveness of this bill will depend on two unknowns: It will depend on the quality of the sustainable development strategies that departments produce, and it will depend on the political will of the government to act on the deficiencies reported to Parliament by the new commissioner. In short, the effect remains to be seen.

However, I support this bill in the spirit of willing suspension of disbelief. It is a good, if limited, step. I sincerely hope that the government heeds the words of my colleague opposite who, yesterday, said that it will ensure the decisions made by federal departments are sustainable development decisions and that environmental, social and economic considerations will be integrated in all federal planning and decision making. That is a hoped-for result. I support it and hope that it will come to pass.

Hon. Colin Kenny: Honourable senators —

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to remind honourable senators that if the Honourable Senator Kenny speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on second reading.

Senator Kenny: Honourable senators, I am sure that the members of the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources will consider this bill carefully.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Kenny, bill referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources.

BRITISH COLUMBIA TREATY COMMISSION BILL

SECOND READING

On the Order:

[Senator Spivak]

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Marchand, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Losier-Cool, for the second reading of Bill C-107, respecting the establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission.

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk: Honourable senators, it is with pleasure and some trepidation that I rise today to participate in this debate at the second reading of Bill C-107, respecting the establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission.

Bill C-107 will provide confirmation of Canada's obligation under the B.C. Treaty Commission Agreement. It is a very serious undertaking. It is also an opportunity to make progress.

The past summer in British Columbia was one of the worst summers of discontent. There was fear, anguish, violence, and very nearly death. The rule of law was flouted. Governments seemed paralysed by indecision.

To an unfortunate extent, public goodwill has been eroded toward legitimate native grievances. Legitimate grievances exist and persist if governments do not ensure consultation and efforts are not made toward developing understanding and consensus on the important matter of the lands, waters and bounty of British Columbia.

The place for native/non-native dialogue is not atop a barricade. Grievances should never be settled at the point of a gun. Progress will not happen as a result of expensive, do-nothing solutions produced by the vast Native Affairs bureaucracy.

The establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission will enable us to commence a process that has a chance of working. It guarantees consultation at a pace agreed upon by the peoples most concerned — those at the grassroots.

The B.C. Treaty Commission Agreement was signed on September 20, 1992 by the Progressive Conservative government, the Government of British Columbia, and an organization called "the First Nations Summit." The agreement endorsed the 1990 British Columbia Claims Task Force Report which recommended a new treaty-negotiation process for British Columbia. The Liberal government, elected in October of 1993 — 26 months ago — inherited this insightful and honourable effort just as they inherited so many other excellent initiatives.

The commission's purpose is to facilitate the treaty negotiation process; it will not negotiate or make decisions on entitlement. The commission will be the keeper of the process by which negotiations can proceed effectively to resolution. The negotiations will be carried out among the individual First Nations and the two governments.

I read with some interest the Minister of Indian Affairs' introduction of the bill on October 19, 1994 when he said that:

...its aims and objectives lie close to the heart of government.

He added that:

...his Ministry's goal for Canada is to develop a Canada where aboriginal children would grow up in secure families and healthy communities with the opportunity to take their full place in Canada.

This emphasis on security and health of communities is an important commitment by the minister. He will be held to it. All communities in British Columbia will become more secure and healthy when the uncertainty that has prevailed in British Columbia over native land claims is combatted with rigorous consultation.

It would be natural if Canadians, and certainly if First Nations peoples, felt despondent about the matter of native self-government and native issues in general because, in fact, we do talk and talk but often little is done. Real, honest consultations have been lacking.

The recognition of an inherent right of self-government would not, by itself, meet the aspirations of native peoples. In short, it would not, by itself, solve the challenges that confront natives, nor would it redress historic injustices.

The quest of the First Nations Summit for treaties requires what the Honourable Jean Charest calls "result-oriented government."

Canadian achievements in the area of native rights, such as Nunavut, have often been remarkable. With the helpful vigilance of the native peoples themselves, solutions to complex questions will yield tangible measures.

Often, however, we pay lip service to section 35 of the Constitution. It is time that we, in fact, lived by our rule of law.

Many British Columbians imagine that improved access to land, waters, resources, and certainty regarding Indian land claims in B.C. will address, in part, our indebtedness to native peoples and be the start of something honourable and prosperous.

I believe that Bill C-107 is, in the main, a valuable piece of legislation. However, it should be studied by the committee, word for word and clause by clause, to ensure that its aspirations are, in fact, attainable.

Hon. Len Marchand: Honourable senators —

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, if the Honourable Senator Marchand speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on second reading of this motion.

Senator Marchand: Honourable senators, I thank Senator Andreychuk for her remarks on the bill. It appears as if there may be unanimous approval of this bill. I commend its passage to honourable senators.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Marchand, bill referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Aboriginal Peoples.

ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES READJUSTMENT BILL, 1995

MOTION TO INSTRUCT LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS
COMMITTEE TO TABLE FINAL REPORT—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government), moved:

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the Message from the House of Commons dated June 20, 1995, and on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham dated June 28, 1995, regarding Bill C-69, An Act to provide for the establishment of electoral boundaries commissions and the readjustment of electoral boundaries.

Hon. Sharon Carstairs: Honourable senators, I do not wish to speak today to the —

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, I rise on a point of order.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable Senator Kinsella, are you rising on a point of order?

Senator Kinsella: Yes, Your Honour.

Honourable senators, the point of order which I rise on today has to do with the motion that has been moved by Senator Graham and which my colleague Senator Carstairs has begun to debate.

I object to the Senate considering this motion because I believe it to be in direct contravention of our rule 63 in that the motion is dealing with a matter the substance of which was considered by the Senate and voted on by the Senate, which vote was negated. Rule 63(1) clearly provides:

A motion shall not be made which is the same in substance as any question which, during the same session, has been resolved in the affirmative or negative, unless the order, resolution, or other decision on such question has been rescinded as hereinafter provided.

That is to say, provided by subsection rule 63(2).

As honourable senators are aware, that rule speaks to the extraordinary tests that must be met to rescind such a motion, which involve five days' notice and at least two-thirds of the senators present voting in favour of that motion.

Last week, on another motion that was attempted to be put before us, I had occasion to rise on another point of order. His Honour made a ruling on that point of order. There were several elements to the debate which were duly considered by His Honour.

As senators will recall, it was pointed out that it was felt that because there had been a certain time span between the motion that had been considered by the Senate and voted upon, and the time that was mentioned in the motion then before the house, they were, therefore, different matters. I review that because the point of order I am raising today is being raised at a different point than the one raised last week.

Honourable senators, this matter is of some seriousness because it speaks to the order of the assembly and the rights of all senators to know what is before them in their deliberations, as well as to know when a decision is made in a given session and what that decision is.

If one were to accept the argument that a senator merely needs to recommend, after a vote had been taken on a motion, that the date be changed and then introduce the same motion, then the whole purpose of rule 63(2) would be redundant. Why have a superior test that has to be met when the assembly intends to change a decision that had been taken deliberately? The fact that we have rule 63(2) certainly infers that. However, I think that it is more a matter of consequence than simply inference. There is one of implication, that is, because we have rule 63(2), it is of a higher order; it is just not something in the procedural literature; rather, it is a rule of this chamber and therefore carries much more weight than what a learned scholar on procedure argues in his or her writings.

The very existence of rule 63(2) implies that there must be a significant, substantial difference in the matter that is being deliberated upon by the Senate in order for it to be rescinded.

Honourable senators, I checked the Companion to the Rules of the Senate which we all have available to us. At pages 190 and following there is a good review of the history and the purpose of rule 63. We should reflect upon what is stated therein. I think it is clear that the point of order that I wish to make on this motion is that we are focusing very specifically, in a very limited way, on the motion that is before us. That is to say, it is part of the Orders of the Day and it is seeking to undo something which we did on November 22.

If we were to make that change, then we would have to meet the test of rule 63(2), which I think would create chaos.

The other point is this: We do not want to find ourselves in the situation of a senator coming forward every other day and saying that he or she will move a motion on a matter which has been decided previously, with the only change being the date. It could go on and on and we would make no progress at all.

I draw the attention of His Honour and honourable senators to Bourinot's Parliamentary Procedure, fourth edition, at page 328 where the matter of renewal is dealt with after the question has been put. It provides, in part, that when the question on a motion has been put by the Speaker to the house for its determination, it is then in the possession of the house.

We were seized of the question, which is the substance of the motion before us today. We were seized of that question several weeks ago and we made a deliberate determination on it. Effectively, we are now being asked to reconsider it. If we are to reconsider it, then I submit rule 63(2) must apply.

[Senator Kinsella]

However, in the alternative, and perhaps mutatis mutandis, it is more important that we not allow that to occur because the general practice in Parliament is that a matter which has been the subject of the judgment of the House and where that judgment has already been expressed, the matter is disposed of and it is not until a new session that that question may appear again.

As Bourinot states at page 328 of the fourth edition:

It is, however, an ancient rule of Parliament that "no question or motion can regularly be offered if it is substantially the same with one on which the judgment of the house has already been expressed during the current session". The old rule of parliament reads: "That a question being once made, and carried in the affirmative or negative, cannot be questioned again, but must stand as a judgment of the house".

Honourable senators, my submission is that this house has made its judgment on this substantive matter. That judgment cannot be overturned save and except by the measure provided for in rule 63(2).

Hon. John B. Stewart: Honourable senators, on November 30, His Honour dealt with the main point now raised by Senator Kinsella. On that occasion the Speaker quoted the terms of the motion which Senator Carstairs proposed to move. He said:

The second objection relates to the point of order raised by Senator Phillips, that a motion that has already been decided cannot be raised again.

In dealing with that, His Honour said:

I have examined the earlier motion of Senator Fairbairn, seeking to have the Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs report on the message of the House of Commons and the motion of Senator Graham that was defeated on division last week. That motion proposed that the committee report no later than Wednesday, November 22. This new motion orders the committee to report no later than Monday, December 11.

As I understand Senator Kinsella, he is saying that the motion which has been moved this afternoon is substantially the same as the one to which the Speaker referred as "the earlier motion" because, of course, Senator Carstairs' proposed motion never became a motion because it was found to be out of order.

If Senator Kinsella's point this afternoon is to prevail, he will have to show that the ruling His Honour made on November 30 does not apply to this motion in the way that it applied to the motion of Senator Carstairs, if indeed she had made that motion.

There is another more serious point to consider, although it may not be the decisive one. We must distinguish between different kinds of motions. Obviously, we make the motion to adjourn from time to time, and such a motion might be defeated. That does not become a bar to moving that motion an hour or two later. I say that just to get us into the water.

Motions are of two kinds: First, there is a motion which seeks to have the house, in this case the Senate, formulate a resolution; and a resolution adopts a principle or states the views or the opinion of the house. Second, we have motions which relate to how we do our business, that is, motions which relate to our domestic order.

I have not had occasion to check the precedents in this regard. However, I think honourable senators will find that, historically, the rule against repetitious motions is a rule against asking the house to reverse its opinion or to change its views on a proposed principle during the same session. That is why an attempt to have a second reading motion for the same bill in a session is ruled out of order. It would be an attempt to have the house adopt a principle that had already been rejected by the house.

However, when we come to matters of domestic order, we are on different ground. I should like to cite an example of how it is different. I will illustrate my point by an example. I am referring to Erskine May.

There is the motion called the "previous question" and that motion is that the question be not now put. Erskine May explains the implications of putting a previous question which was agreed to by stating:

If it be resolved in the affirmative, the Speaker is prevented from putting the original question as the House has thus refused to allow it to be put. The original motion may, however, be brought forward again on another day, as the decision of the House merely binds the Speaker not to put the question thereon at that time.

Let us assume, for example, on a question on third reading the house decided that it did not want the question to be put now and that was negatived. However, on the following day it would still be in order to put the question. Even though the question was put and negatived on one day, on the following day it would still be in order to move the same motion a second time, or a third time or fourth time on successive days. There is a decision on the motion that the question be not now put.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: To postpone.

Senator Stewart: No. There is no question of postponement. It is that it be not now put this day. It is still in order to move exactly the same motion on the next day or the day after that.

The reason it is possible to move exactly the same motion is that it does not state an opinion, a resolution or a view of the house on a substantive matter; it is a matter of the domestic affairs of the house.

I mention that in a sense as a footnote to my earlier comments. I think that His Honour has already answered the question by the decision he gave on November 30, 1995 when Senator Carstairs attempted to bring forward a motion and the Speaker ruled that the proposed motion would be out of order by reason of the motion which had been dealt with earlier.

Honourable senators, I wanted to raise this other point because I think we might slide into a situation which would be embarrassing for us if, in the future, we did not distinguish between motions which determine the views of the house for a session, and motions which deal with the conduct of our business.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, I agree with Senator Kinsella that rule 63(1) prohibits the introduction of this motion. It is very definite. It makes no exceptions.

I should like to refer to one part of His Honour's ruling last week, where he stated:

... we are soon approaching an extended adjournment or a possible prorogation of the parliamentary session ...

Honourable senators, I have no idea where that information came from. We on this side have no information of an adjournment, and we have no information of a possible prorogation. I heard the rumour last December of a possible prorogation. I heard it again at Easter, and again in June. I find a reference to it in a ruling made by His Honour.

It is most unusual to use the rumour mill as the basis for making our decisions. We should have a more reliable basis upon which to reach a decision than the rumour mill. I would hope that His Honour will reconsider at least that portion of his ruling.

I would raise the question of the procedure leading up to the decision which was made on this motion. The two motions are identical except for the dates. Everyone was notified, and a decision of the Senate was to be taken. If honourable senators look around the chamber today, they will see that the attendance was much greater when that vote was taken than it is today. I submit to His Honour, with the greatest of respect, that the decision has already been taken. It was taken by almost 98 out of 104 senators.

Senator Prud'homme: The Speaker did not vote that day.

Senator Phillips: Thank you very much for the correction, senator.

With the exception of those who were unavoidably absent, or late, the full Senate took the decision, and they took it with the understanding that it was to be the final decision. The whip sent out a notice to everyone. We saw senators whom we had not seen for a long time.

I am sure that, if Your Honour will reflect, rule 63 definitely applies today; and it applied when the previous vote was taken.

Senator Graham: Honourable senators, in his ruling on November 30, the Speaker referred to a motion that we dealt with earlier in the Senate on Bill C-69. To quote from the Debates of the Senate:

...I am persuaded that, on the whole, there is sufficient difference in this motion, in comparison with the one that was proposed last week, to allow it.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Read the whole sentence.

Senator Graham: That is it.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: That comes after a comma.

Senator Graham: Honourable senators, this is exactly what we are doing today. The motion today is in conformity with the Speaker's ruling of November 30. In fact, the motion today actually flows from that ruling. With all respect, I submit that by asking the Speaker to reverse himself, we would, in effect, be putting His Honour in an intolerable position.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: You have had your share of doing that.

Senator Carstairs: Honourable senators, Senator Kinsella made reference to the Companion to the Rules of the Senate, page 109. I would refer him to page 189. I think that indeed the Companion is very clear as to specifically what applies under rule 63 and what does not apply under rule 63. It states:

This rule may generally be referred to as the "same question rule"...

It goes on to state:

"That no bill of the same substance be brought in the same session."

Of that there is no question. It then clearly indicates what we are debating at this moment. It states:

The same question rule, however, has a somewhat limited application with regard to the motions proposed during the passage of a bill in the Senate. For example, certain amendments such as a six month hoist may be proposed at both second and third readings. As well, Rule 77 provides that, "At any time before a bill is passed a Senator may move for the reconsideration of any clause thereof already carried."

Clearly, it is possible, even with rule 63, to have, on a number of occasions, what are essentially procedural motions rather than substantive motions. We are clearly dealing with a procedural motion in this instance. A vote was taken on November 21 which was very specific. It said that there would not be an order of this house to require the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee to report the next day. That is all we voted on. We did not vote on Bill C-69. We are now being asked to support a motion which would say that the committee should report on December 13.

Presumably those on the other side were not opposed to the bill being voted on because, if they were going to take that stance, then they would have, in fact, voted against the bill. If they did not vote against the bill, they simply voted on a date and time. They now have an opportunity to vote on another date and time. The committee has had almost two additional weeks to study the debate and to propose, perhaps, new amendments to the bill. The fact that the committee has not met in that time is somewhat irrelevant.

This is clearly another procedural motion asking that this bill be brought from committee to the floor of this house so that debate in this chamber can take place on Bill C-69.

Hon. Lowell Murray: Honourable senators, I should like to take a minute of your time: Senator Stewart in his opening remarks does us a service by raising the question of adjournment motions as an example which, even if defeated, can, after an intervening procedure, be moved again. That is indeed the case. He does us a service because he draws our attention to the fact that our rules make a distinction between procedural or dilatory motions on the one hand, and substantive motions on the other.

Senator Carstairs has put forward the proposition that Senator Graham's motion is a procedural motion. It is not a procedural motion. According to our rules, a dilatory or procedural motion can be moved at any time, and without notice. The government acknowledges that Senator Graham's motion is a substantive motion by having given the required notice and by having presented it in this form. There is no question but that it is covered squarely by rule 63(1) as a substantive motion. Therefore, rule 63(1) applies.

It is up to the Speaker to decide whether this motion of Senator Graham's is the same in substance as the question which we resolved some 10 days ago. It is certainly obvious to me that it is exactly the same, and therefore would be found to be out of order under rule 63(1).

My purpose in rising is to rebut the contention of Senator Carstairs that this is simply a procedural motion. It is not; it is a substantive motion.

Hon. H.A. Olson: Honourable senators, we should acknowledge that members opposite have now agreed that there are different kinds of motions. Senator Murray calls them "procedural" and "substantive." What we are really arguing about here is whether or not, by once refusing or voting to not request a committee to return a bill to the floor of the Senate, that it can never be done again in the same session.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: That is right.

Senator Olson: How ridiculous can you get?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: It is in the rules.

Senator Olson: Even you do not believe that, Senator Lynch-Staunton.

Senator Stanbury: It cannot possibly be true.

Senator Olson: It cannot be true. Does it apply just to Bill C-69, or is it applicable to any bill that has been sent to a committee?

Senators opposite have said that it is not enough to just change the date. Senator Kinsella made that comment. Would it be enough if we were to change the number of the bill? Would it be enough, then, if we were to call it Bill C-71? We are not dealing with substance and Senator Murray knows it. We are not dealing with a substantive motion; we are dealing with a housekeeping, procedural motion.

Senator Murray: Is this a substantive motion or a procedural motion? Perhaps, for openers, we should have a ruling on that. If my friend has precedents to back up what he is saying, then let him present them.

Some Hon. Senators: Order, order!

Senator Olson: Perhaps it would be a good idea for senators opposite to sit down and listen to some reason, to see how ridiculous they are. In making such an argument, the Senate will prevent itself from ever recalling an act or a bill from a committee.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: That is a Bouchard argument. Do you want a referendum every week?

Senator Olson: If honourable senators opposite believe that, then I do not think there is much use in me and Senator Stewart.

who was perfectly logical, trying to make the argument. There are different kinds of motions. However, even if honourable senators accept that there are different kinds of motions, they then say that this one is a substantive motion that is covered under rule 63(1). That is what senators opposite seem to be arguing now. I am afraid it is hopeless. There is no use trying to argue with them.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I am not ruling on the matter; the Speaker will do that.

Senator Olson: Unfortunately, I have to address the senators, but I do hope the Speaker is listening, of course.

In any event, the logical extension of what Senator Kinsella and others opposite are arguing is so completely ridiculous that I hope they are not sincerely trying to confine the Senate to that kind of a box. If that is what they believe, then I am afraid they may have another motive.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, this is a very interesting debate. We should get back to the essential issue: is it a substantive or procedural matter?

I respectfully submit it is a procedural matter. Beauchesne's, citation 559 defines substantive motions as follows:

Substantive motions are self-contained proposals, not incidental to any proceeding, amendable and drafted in such a way to be capable of expressing a decision of the House.

Substantive motions usually concern bills or resolutions. In this House, often the date on which a report is to be presented is changed. Recently, I was in the Senate when it was decided to authorize a committee to report at a later date than had been agreed.

For instance, the Special Joint Committee on a Code of Conduct was to report to this house by the end of November. There was a motion to postpone presentation of the report until the end of March. This did not lead to a lengthy debate because it was a procedural matter. We agreed that since the committee had not been allowed enough time, we would extend the deadline. In this case, only the date was changed.

[English]

In Erskine May, it states that, when a certain motion in relation to the procedure of the house — and I deal with this motion as a procedural motion — has been rejected on a particular day, it may be revived on subsequent days. We do it all the time. I now hear the Tories arguing that this is a substantive motion. I am with my colleagues in that I think this is a procedural motion.

Hon. Duncan J. Jessiman: Honourable senators, no one yet has looked at the definition of "motion" under our own rules. In the Rules of the Senate of Canada, "motion" is defined as follows, and I will read the pertinent parts:

"Motion" means a proposal made by a Senator that the Senate or a committee thereof do something...

The motion was to instruct the committee to report. We voted on that. "Motion" as defined comes under rule 63(1).

Hon. Eric Arthur Berntson (Deputy Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, on November 21, 1995, the motion before us, which was defeated, stated:

That it be the instruction of this House to the Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, November 22, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the Message from the House of Commons, dated June 20, 1995, and on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham dated June 28, 1995, regarding Bill C-69, An Act to provide for the establishment of electoral boundaries commissions and the readjustment of electoral boundaries.

The motion that is before us now, honourable senators, reads as follows:

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the Message from the House of Commons, dated June 20, 1995, and on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham dated June 28, 1995, regarding Bill C-69, An Act to provide for the establishment of electoral boundaries commissions and the readjustment of electoral boundaries.

As I understand it, what we are trying to determine now is whether this is a procedural or a substantive motion. Indeed, the motions are identical except for the date.

Aside from all the arguments that have been made by Senator Murray and others as to whether or not this is a substantive or procedural motion, we need look no further than His Honour's ruling of November 30, in which he stated, in part:

...I am persuaded that, on the whole, there is sufficient difference...

Why would His Honour be looking for difference, if he did not believe that this was a substantive motion?

The issue has been decided. We now have the Speaker's ruling which says that what we have before us is a substantive motion. We must decide whether or not the date alone is enough, indeed, to allow for a ruling of sufficient difference.

Fortunately, on the motion that was, properly, not put before the House by Senator Carstairs, the Speaker was able to find sufficient difference by virtue of some speculation that we might adjourn for an extended period or prorogue the house. That is all well and good. However, with respect, I think it is somewhat weak. The fact is that we are dealing with a substantive motion, not a procedural one. Is the date enough to justify that? I say that it is not.

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury: Honourable senators, the difference in date is the essence of this debate. If I ask you to do something tomorrow, and you say, "No, I am not going to do it tomorrow", is there any reason why tomorrow I cannot say: "Well, will you do it now?"

Senator Berntson: It is procedural.

Senator Stanbury: Whether you call it procedural or substantive, I am saying that it is ridiculous to suggest that if the Senate decides today that it does not want the committee to report, it cannot say tomorrow that it does want it to report. There are no precedents for this situation. No committee has ever been in this situation.

Senator Berntson: Honourable senators, my learned friend eloquently advances an argument to which I must respond, because it is almost as ridiculous as what he alleges is ridiculous on this side.

If we were to take his argument to its conclusion, and we had identical motions before this house every day, the only difference being the date, we could, stretching this logic to its limit, have that motion, except for the date, changed every day, 365 times a year. Why, then, would we even bother having rule 63 in the rule book?

Senator Murray: Honourable senators, on the question of whether this is a procedural or substantive motion, I did not have much luck in English in convincing my friends opposite. Therefore, in response to Senator Gauthier:

[Translation]

I would respectfully draw his attention to rule 23(4), regarding dilatory and procedural motions, which provides, and I quote, that:

...dilatory or procedural motions, which can be moved without notice and must be decided without debate.

Senator Graham gave 24 hours' notice in the case of the motion currently before us. A debate was held, in the case of an essentially identical motion resolved ten days ago. Clearly, then, we are talking about a substantive and not a procedural motion, according to the definition in our rules.

[English]

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, I have already said enough on this subject. However, I should like to say that this reminds me somewhat of the referendum question, where the PQ government says, "I will make you vote until we get the results we want."

Senator Graham: Honourable senators, before the Speaker rises, I would draw the attention of the Honourable Senator Prud'homme, and other honourable senators, to rule 98 which states:

The committee to which a bill has been referred shall report the bill to the Senate.

Senator Berntson: We will.

Senator Graham: What we are asking is to let Parliament do its work.

SPEAKER'S RULING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, if no other honourable senator wishes to participate in the debate, I would thank all of those who have participated.

I take the question of rulings seriously. If I am prepared to rule now, it is not because I have not given this matter serious consideration. I have met with my Table Officers on several occasions to thoroughly discuss this matter. Thus, I would make it clear that my decision has not been taken suddenly or lightly.

I would refer honourable senators to page 2390 of the Debates of the Senate of November 30, where my first comments on this matter can be found. At that time, I made the point that the issue is not as simple as it may seem. Once again, the discussion of this afternoon attests to that.

At page 2390, I quoted from Erskine May, where I said:

...or an amendment which is the same, in substance, as a question which has been decided during a session may not be brought forward again...

However, I also stated that Erskine May goes on to explain that whether the second motion is substantially the same is finally a matter for the judgment of the Chair. I now find myself in the position of having to make a judgment call. That is not an easy task. Several aspects must be considered.

It was suggested that I was speculating on when this session might finish. Perhaps that is speculation. However, one thing is certain: Christmas Day is on December 25. There is no speculation in that regard. If we were to follow normal Senate procedure and practice, we would finish our work at the end of next week. However, that may not happen; we may continue.

I believe the original notice of motion was given on November 2. It is now December 6. Therefore, considerable time has elapsed since the first notice was given. The vote was taken two weeks ago. It seems to me that the time difference in a circumstance such as this is a valid consideration. It is conceivable that, as time marches on, senators may adopt a different point of view from that which they had two or three weeks ago.

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, oh!

The Hon. the Speaker: That is a decision for the Senate to make, not the Speaker.

In addition to the conditions I mentioned last week related to the different time elements proposed in this motion as compared to the first motion, I draw honourable senators' attention to a portion of that discussion related to the procedural/substantive question. I will not go into detail on that; however, it is a point that honourable senators should keep in mind.

There are certainly precedents whereby the Senate has changed dates without rescinding the previous order. I would remind honourable senators that we frequently adopt orders of reference for special studies with a fixed reporting date. We set up a special committee and instruct the committee to report by a particular date. On more than one occasion, the reporting date has been changed. Never, to my knowledge, have we questioned whether we had to rescind the previous decision. The decision to change the date was made by a motion on the floor of the Senate. There was no regard to the fact that the same question was before the Senate with the only difference being a change in date.

Based on my ruling of November 30, as well as further study which indicated that, indeed, we have changed dates in regard to instructions to committees on previous occasions without rescinding, it being done simply by a decision of the Senate, I conclude that the motion is in order.

Hon. Sharon Carstairs: Honourable senators, as I said earlier, I do not wish to speak to the principles of Bill C-69 today. I shall, however, speak to the process. Nothing would please me more than to have Bill C-69 before this chamber where debate on the strength and weaknesses of that bill could take place. That is what this motion purports to do.

I should like to give a brief history of this bill and its predecessor, Bill C-18, which have been before this chamber for quite some time — almost two years to be exact. The bill was returned to the House of Commons with amendments in May of this year. The House of Commons rejected all but one of the Senate amendments and returned the bill to this chamber on June 20, 1995.

Despite the desire on this side to debate and vote on the proposition that we, as a chamber, not insist on our amendments, Bill C-69 was returned to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, and there it remains, and remains.

The question arises: Why is it still there? Is it still there because there are so many witnesses that we cannot possibly hear them all? To my knowledge, there is not a single witness waiting to be heard on this particular bill. The question then arises: Is it because the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee is meeting morning, noon and night and simply does not have enough hours in the day to deal with this particular piece of legislation? The answer to that question is also no.

This bill has been sitting in committee because the other side has determined that they simply will not allow the bill to come to a vote. This has been the case since July of this year, some five months. There has been exactly one meeting on Bill C-69 since that time.

A second meeting was scheduled. Staff were on call and ready to conduct a clause-by-clause study of the bill on Tuesday, November 21, but that meeting was cancelled. It was cancelled presumably because the committee was not at all under any instruction from this house to report.

The question that must be answered, is: Is this process parliamentary? I would suggest, honourable senators, that it is not.

Senator Pitfield has indicated that he has real problems with Bill C-69. On November 22, he stated his difficulty with the process. He said:

Perhaps I am unduly influenced by the scene last night when our colleagues denied, as I see it, the elected government the right to manage the government's business. Vote down the electoral boundaries, as some of us wanted to do, but do not refuse us the right to bring it out of committee so we cannot vote at all.

Senator Pitfield has addressed the essence of this question. That question is the right of all senators to debate and to vote on Bill C-69. By leaving it in committee and, in turn, by not scheduling a committee meeting to consider Bill C-69, no one, neither members of the committee nor members of this chamber, are able to debate and vote.

In response to a question posed by Senator Gauthier to the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Senator Beaudoin, as to when this bill will be returned to this chamber, the Chairman replied, and I quote:

I am perfectly prepared to have the committee sit to hear other witnesses and prepare a report before Christmas, if you like.

The next day, in a further comment, Senator Beaudoin stated:
— a report is out of the question for now.

Clearly, it is the intention on the part of those who control this committee to let the bill die in committee. Why?

If the committee accepts the view of constitutional specialist Professor Hutchinson that the bill is unconstitutional, rejecting the view of Professor Baines that the bill is indeed constitutional, then let us vote on this matter.

As senators, we have a responsibility not to support unconstitutional legislation. If honourable senators believe that Bill C-69 is unconstitutional, then they must cast their votes accordingly. However, it is not parliamentary, nor is it very brave, for this chamber to abrogate its responsibility by not voting at all.

Senator Pitfield and I would clearly vote differently on Bill C-69. However, we are in total agreement that this vote should be held.

Honourable senators, I urge you to listen to Senator Pitfield, and I repeat what he said:

Vote down the electoral boundaries, as some of us wanted to do, but do not refuse us the right to bring it out of committee so we cannot vote at all.

On motion of Senator Berntson, debate adjourned.

PEARSON INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT AGREEMENTS ACT

MOTION TO INSTRUCT LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS
COMMITTEE TO TABLE FINAL REPORT—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government), moved:

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the motion and the Message referred to it on October 5, 1994, relating to certain amendments to Bill C-22, An Act respecting certain agreements concerning the redevelopment and operation of Terminals 1 and 2 at Lester B. Pearson International Airport.

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury: Honourable senators, once again, we are debating a motion to require the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee to report a bill to this chamber. Bill C-22 is an important piece of legislation. It would cancel the Pearson airport agreements and establish a regime for the assessment of damage claims arising out of that cancellation. Most important, it would fulfil an election commitment made by the Prime Minister to the people of Canada, an election commitment that has been frustrated by a few individuals in this house.

I do not stand here today to debate the merits of Bill C-22. The issue today is whether we will ever get the opportunity to debate the merits of that bill; whether I will have the opportunity to persuade you, openly and in full view of the Canadian people, why I am convinced that the bill is valid; whether someone else will have the opportunity to stand up publicly and try to persuade me that I am wrong; and whether we will have the opportunity to put the matter to a vote or decision by this whole chamber.

Public debate and public vote are why we are here. They are the cornerstone of our parliamentary system and our role in that system, but they are being thwarted by seven senators, members of the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, who are refusing to release Bill C-22 to this chamber.

Bill C-22 was first sent to the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee in June 1994 — 18 months ago. After hearing several witnesses, the committee reported the bill back to this chamber with certain amendments. I opposed those amendments. I believed then, as I do now, that they would have gutted the bill and frustrated the will of the Canadian electorate. Indeed, the amendments were rejected by the elected majority of the House of Commons.

The message from the other place was referred to the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on October 5, 1994. There it has sat for 14 months. For the first three months the committee heard witnesses who raised questions and issues about various provisions of the bill, debated among themselves and with committee members, and generally assisted the committee with its study of the bill. In a good-faith effort to speed the bill's progress through the committee, in December 1994, one year ago, the government presented a series of amendments specifically designed to address the concerns witnesses had raised. The amendments clearly went very far toward satisfying the concerns of the witnesses who had opposed the bill. Only two witnesses returned to object to provisions of the bill as it would have been amended.

Once again, the government attempted to resolve the differences between the two sides by proposing further amendments to meet these latest objections, and once again the government was met with new objections; objections that gained in creativity what they lacked in legal substance.

At that point, there could no longer be any doubt about the motives or objectives of the Conservative majority in the committee. This was no longer a serious legal and constitutional analysis of proposed legislation; it had become a partisan battle, and it saddens me deeply to have to say, as someone who witnessed the hearings, that the Canadian Constitution and the principle of the rule of law were transformed into mere tools or weapons for this battle.

Twice the Minister of Justice appeared to answer questions and satisfy committee members that the bill was constitutional and legally valid under the Canadian law. He was very clear. On May 16, 1995, he said:

With great respect to those who have expressed their opinions and reservations about the original bill, in preparation for my appearance this morning I reread the testimony I gave on July 4 last. Nothing that has been said in the intervening months causes me to change my view of the constitutional validity of Bill C-22 as originally enacted by the House of Commons.

[Senator Stanbury]

In what the minister described as "a continuing effort engaged in by both sides to find common ground on the important points in issue concerning the rule of law, access to the courts and constitutionality," he explained the second set of amendments proposed for the legislation.

Professor Wayne MacKay, a constitutional law professor at Dalhousie Law School, was equally clear when he testified on these amendments. "At all three points in time," he said, that is before any amendments, after the first set of amendments and after the second set of amendments, "my bottom line has been that there are not constitutional problems with this bill."

One by one, respected legal scholars declined to lend their names and reputations to the Conservative members' manipulation of legal principles. The Canadian Bar Association, which had testified earlier on the bill, expressly refused to allow its name to be used to endorse the testimony of one of its members who appeared before the committee last May when he argued that the bill continued to be invalid and unconstitutional.

I think the last hearing held on the bill was particularly revealing. One of the grounds of attack used by the Conservative committee members related to Canada's obligations under the North American Free Trade Agreement and whether Bill C-22 would violate those obligations.

At the last hearing, Mr. Konrad von Finckenstein testified. Mr. von Finckenstein is a senior lawyer with the Department of Justice. He negotiated NAFTA and the FTA. Intimately familiar with the obligations of those agreements, he was able to assure the committee that Bill C-22 would not place Canada in a breach of its international obligations.

This should have resolved the issue. Instead, faced with strong and persuasive evidence that the bill was unobjectionable, legally and constitutionally, the Conservative members of the committee used their majority position to muzzle further discussion and debate. Almost six months have passed and the committee has taken no further action on Bill C-22. No witnesses have been scheduled. The attempts by Liberal members of the committee to schedule the bill for a vote have been rebuffed. In other words, seven members of this chamber have successfully hijacked an important piece of legislation. Their ransom? Nothing less than breach of promise to the Canadian electorate.

Honourable senators, I have served in the Senate for over 25 years. For 20 of those years I have served on the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee with pride and satisfaction that we were considering the legal issues of bills and other matters with care, professionalism and a strong consciousness of our duty and role. I am proud to say that our deliberations were often nonpartisan. I have been pleased to serve under the chairmanship of my colleague opposite, Senator Beaudoin.

Clearly, something has changed. Today, we are debating not one but two motions to require the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee to report legislation back to this chamber so that the merits of those bills can be debated openly, freely and in the public eye. Instead, the bills lie buried, hidden from view and debate. Our requests in committee to bring them forward for consideration even by the whole committee have been rejected out of hand.

Here in this chamber on November 28, the Honourable Senator Jean-Robert Gauthier asked the Chairman of the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, the Honourable Senator Beaudoin, when the Senate could expect a report from the committee on Bill C-22. At that time, Senator Beaudoin replied:

I am fully prepared to call the committee again to consider Bill C-22 and report on it, if you wish, but I must tell you immediately that the report will state that the bill does not adhere to the principles of the primacy of law and the rule of law, which are part of the Canadian Constitution.

He said the committee would report the bill but, as yet, we do not have it.

The next day Senator Beaudoin rose to correct his previous answer. He said:

As for Bill C-22, the experts who came to testify have clearly established that the bill remains unconstitutional; in the absence of new amendment proposals from the government, the bill is still in committee.

Do senators in this house accept the opinion of those experts as against the great preponderance of evidence as to the bill's constitutionality? How do we find out that they do if no report is made to the Senate? Has the committee any suggestion from the minister that further amendments will be forthcoming? If not, do individual senators get a chance to decide whether the many amendments already made by the minister to accommodate the concerns, real or imagined, of the seven Conservative members of the committee, satisfy any real concerns of senators as a whole? How do we find that out if no report is made to the Senate?

Denying senators the right to debate and vote on a bill is not the role of the standing committee. Indeed, this approach undermines the principles on which our committee system is based. Bill C-22 was sent to the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee after second reading. This chamber had already approved the principle of the bill. The bill was sent in apparent good faith to the committee for further study of the details of its provisions.

Yet, this committee has taken it upon itself — not even the full committee but seven members of that committee — to hold the bill, refusing to release it for open debate until the government offers amendments that these members desire but have no expectation of receiving. Nor do they have any intention of preparing amendments themselves that would satisfy their own desires, or of bringing them forward in a report to this house.

In his speech in this chamber over one year ago, in debate on this very bill, Bill C-22, Senator Lynch-Staunton said:

The Senate, as has been repeatedly stated over the years, does not exist to obstruct and delay indefinitely.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Quite right.

Senator Stanbury: He went on to say:

It must be conscious at all times of the will of the elected representatives. This is particularly true of government policy supported by a majority of commoners. In this case, however, it is not the policy that we challenge — cancellation of Pearson agreements — but the principle which is being violated — denial of access to the courts. It is as simple as that.

What he was concerned about was denial of access to the courts. Noble words, but let us not be misled by these words, for this senator, Senator Lynch-Staunton, who is, of course, an ex officio member of the committee that will not release this bill, is purporting to defend the principle of access to the courts by denying access to this chamber, access to public debate, and to a public vote; in short, denying access to the fundamental institutions of our parliamentary democracy.

One of the professors, described by Senator Beaudoin as an expert, and invited by my Conservative colleagues to testify on Bill C-22, was Professor Andrew Heard of the Simon Fraser Institute. He was asked to comment about the propriety of the Senate's continuing to challenge Bill C-22 after the other place had rejected the amendments. He did not mince his words when he said:

I believe the Senate has the opportunity to deal with the bill effectively on one occasion. Having done that, having forced the House of Commons to reconsider and debate the issue again, if the House of Commons makes its will clear, my view is that the Senate should ultimately yield on its consideration of the House of Commons' insistence on the original form of the bill.

Not only has the Conservative majority refused to yield to the views of the elected majority in the other place but it has refused even to allow the question to be debated here.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Like you did on the GST.

Senator Stanbury: Does that make it proper?

Seven individuals, honourable senators, have usurped our role; seven people have decided that they know best, that they will not even allow us to discuss, let alone vote on the legislation; seven people have decided to hijack the Canadian parliamentary process and hold it hostage to imposing their preferred policies on the Canadian government and the Canadian people.

The Senate rules are very clear. Rule 98 states:

The committee to which a bill has been referred shall report the bill to the Senate. When any amendment to the bill has been recommended by the committee, such amendment shall be stated in the report.

The Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee has had Bill C-22 in its present form for 14 months, including the amendments. It heard witnesses and it considered the bill from all sides. For the last six months it has failed to call one witness or schedule one meeting to examine the bill. The committee has completed its study. There is no good reason why it does not report the bill back to the Senate. Yet, the chairman of the committee has risen in this chamber to tell us point blank that, unless the demands of seven members are met by the government, that committee will not report the bill to this chamber.

So far, two bills are thus being held for political ransom. What will be next? How else will the declared will of the Canadian electorate be frustrated? What, then, is our democracy? Honourable senators, we must recognize these acts for what they are: Nothing less than abuse of power — for now, a form of tyranny with respect to a few select conditions, but tyranny nonetheless.

How can we restore faith in our committee system? I have always believed that our strength and credibility as an institution is founded largely on the high quality of our work in committee. I know that many of you share this conviction. But what studies will be entrusted to committees if there is no trust that they are, and will always remain, accountable to this chamber and to the Canadian people? Obviously, we will have to ask our Rules Committee to prescribe ways in which we can give more explicit instructions to our committees to avoid this kind of abuse in the future.

I have never believed that because we are appointed to the Senate we are therefore not accountable to the Canadian people. In fact, the trust placed in us is, if anything, that much greater. The traditional checks of the ballot box do not apply directly. Let us not violate that trust. Let us not undermine the credibility and respect of this chamber. The chairman of the committee was very clear: Unless and until he and his Conservative colleagues on the committee receive amendments that accord with their view of what the bill should say, they will not allow it out of committee. That, honourable senators, is seven individuals holding Canadian policy hostage.

We must put a stop to this now. I ask you, for the credibility of each of us and the future work of this institution, to support the motion to bring this legislation to the floor of this chamber for debate. Whatever the result, win or lose, we must join together to stop this dangerous precedent from taking root.

On motion of Senator Berntson, debate adjourned.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, as all honourable senators know, the Senate convenes at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesdays because committees are sitting. This has been an interesting afternoon, and I thank all honourable senators for their participation and patience. After discussions with the leadership opposite, we have agreed to ask that all remaining orders, motions, reports and inquiries stand.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

SPEAKER'S CHRISTMAS PARTY

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: I wish to remind honourable senators that all senators are invited to join the Senate staff at the Speaker's annual Christmas party which will take place in the Speaker's chambers and the Senate foyer at 5:30 p.m. today.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, December 7, 1995

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

[Translation]

SENATORS' STATEMENTS

LA FRANCOPHONIE

SIXTH SUMMIT HELD IN COTONOU, BENIN

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honorable senators, in my capacity as International Vice-President of the AIPLF, I have just taken part in the Sixth Summit of the Francophonie held from December 2 to 4 in Cotonou, Benin.

Canada, represented by the Prime Minister, the Right Honourable Jean Chrétien, was among the forty-seven states and governments attending. UN Secretary-General Boutros-Boutros Ghali also honoured us with his presence.

The forty-seven heads of delegation addressed issues relating to three major areas: first, the international political situation; second, the world economic situation and third, the strengthening of the Francophonie.

As a result of the proceedings, some twenty resolutions, as well as a statement — the Cotonou Declaration — were adopted by the heads of delegation during this summit.

Honourable senators, I should like to report to you on the key results of the summit, in a brief review of some of the points discussed among the heads of state and of government.

The Cotonou Summit was held this year as one of the activities marking the 50th anniversary of the UN and the 25th anniversary of the Cultural and Technical Cooperation Agency. The heads of state and of government pointed out that the Francophonie cannot address the major problems and challenges facing the planet on the eve of the 21st century in isolation. Key issues relating to economic and social development and to the prevention and resolution of conflicts involve all countries, whether or not they are members of the Francophonie.

The discussions on preventing conflicts led to a resolution inspired by the conclusions of the international francophone meeting held in Ottawa last September, a Canadian initiative.

Among its other resolutions, the summit also formulated one on supporting democratization, law-abiding societies and human rights.

With respect to the world economic situation, the summit adopted a resolution on economic cooperation, recommending in particular that priority be given to the countries of the south through savings mobilization, promotion of private enterprise, development of partnerships, restructuring and regional integration of the countries of the south, with an emphasis on sustainable development.

Finally, the summit formulated resolutions on cooperation and development within francophone institutions, specifically increasing the francophone presence on the international scene and launching ambitious initiatives and large-scale projects. The most significant of these resolutions, since it affects structures, is the one on the creation of a secretariat of the Francophonie within the ACCT, the agency of the Francophonie. That secretariat will probably include an official spokesperson who will represent the Francophonie on the international level, as Secretary-General Boutros-Boutros Ghali does the UN.

It was agreed that the heads of state and of government of the countries with French as a common language would meet in Hanoi, Vietnam in 1997 for the Seventh Summit of the Francophonie.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

DELAY IN DELIVERY OF OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, before I call on another honourable senator under Senators' Statements, I should like to advise honourable senators that there has been a delay in the production of documents because of the power outage yesterday. Therefore, some of the documents which we are accustomed to receiving daily are not ready on time. This is due to no fault of the staff.

I might add that we have been advised that there could be further power outages today, creating some problems with the Oasis system. I would ask for your forbearance with these problems.

[Translation]

THE SENATE

CRITICISM BY MEMBERS OF THE MEDIA

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, this morning in a newspaper which is read by all the members of the diplomatic corps, of the House of Commons and of the Senate, and I am referring to The Hill Times, there is an editorial on —

[English]

The editorial is entitled, "Electoral Boundaries Showdown," in which reference is made to comments attributed to a very esteemed colleague, Dr. Ted McWhinney, who is a great scholar and Liberal MP from Vancouver.

He is quoted as saying that he objects vigorously to honourable senators holding up Bill C-69. He says this about senators:

...who principally couldn't...elected as dog-catchers...

Talking about us, he says that the worst offenders are people who never run for public office. I do not know who will help me draft a nice open letter to him. I will start now.

If he thinks we have never been elected, he is wrong. I count among us at least 41 who have previously held office. No one else than, for instance, Senator Robichaud —

[Translation]

Who would dare say that Senator Robichaud, a great Premier of New Brunswick, Senator Buchanan, a Premier of Nova Scotia, and Senator Lise Bacon, Deputy Premier of the Province of Quebec, did not serve their country well?

[English]

Who could forget about Senators Austin and Olson? Who would deny the long-time service of Senator MacEachen to this country? Who would deny the service of Senators Perrault, Haidasz, Thériault, De Bané, Hervieux-Payette and Carstairs, as well as Jean-Robert Gauthier, who was a long-time member of Parliament? Who could forget Senators Bonnell, Rompkey, Thompson, Corbin and Stewart, who is also a scholar? Who could forget Senator Stollery, who is a knowledgeable person about many countries?

On this side of the chamber, who could forget Senators St. Germain, Kelleher, Berntson and Carney? Who could say that Senator Carney did not serve her country well? Then there are Senators Robertson, Murray and MacDonald. Who would say that Senator Ottenheimer did not serve Newfoundland well? Who would deny that Senators Simard, Cochrane, Rossiter, DeWare, Lavoie-Roux —

[Translation]

Senator Lavoie-Roux, an eminent minister of the Quebec government who served as Minister of Social Affairs; Senator Comeau, who served his province; Senator Ghitter, who was Deputy Premier of the Province of Alberta; Senator Rivest, a prominent constitutional adviser to the Premier of Quebec; Senator Forrestall, who served his province for many years; Senator Gustafson and many other honourable senators who ran for public office and are so modest I will not refer to them by name.

[Senator Prud'homme]

[English]

Perhaps I have forgotten one or two names. However, the last one I want to mention is you, Your Honour, who has served so well the Province of Manitoba.

Because we have been attacked, the time may have come, honourable senators, for some of us to put our heads together and tell this fine gentleman from British Columbia that we have no lessons to learn from anyone.

I repeat, for as long as I am a member of this chamber, I do not intend to rubber stamp proposed legislation. If Canadians — not members of the House of Commons — do not like the Senate, it is for them to decide what to do with it. We have a constitutional duty to exercise, and we will exercise it. We are not a rubber stamp. Not only do I intend not to be pushed around by anyone in this place, but also I certainly do not intend to be pushed around by members of the House of Commons.

UNITED NATIONS

INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS DAY

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk: Honourable senators, I rise today to note that this Sunday, December 10, is International Human Rights Day. Some might approach this day with indifference, but Canadians recognize the importance of this day.

Perhaps there now exists the notion that human rights are luxuries to be considered when times are good or when it suits our interests. This notion, however, is both fallacious and short-sighted. Human rights must be considered a necessity, if we are to progress into the next millennium and beyond. In this regard, long-term ramifications must be paramount.

Respect for human rights is not only a fundamental value but also a crucial element in the development of stable, democratic and prosperous societies at peace with each other. Rights are central to democracy. Indeed, the correlation between high levels of political freedom and high levels of human development is well documented.

Canada's traditional commitment to human rights, world peace and democratic development has been widely acknowledged. As Canadians, we bought into these values because we held them to be important. We believed that improvements on the international stage would foster gains that would also be felt domestically. It was not only a matter of principle on our part, but also about contributing to our own internal well-being.

As Canadians, we also believe that our attention to human rights offered a reflection of ourselves and our society. What was true then is equally, if not more, relevant today. The question remains: What kind of identity do we seek to promote at home and abroad?

On International Human Rights Day, let us ponder the future as we reflect on our past accomplishments in this area. I encourage all senators over the course of this year to reflect on how we, as Canadians, can further this fundamentally worthwhile cause. When we awaken every day to the right to walk this country freely and to talk freely, to name only two of our rights, we should reflect that others in this world do not have these rights. They pay with their lives.

As we work to overcome our problems, and help others with their injustices, we must remember that rights must be balanced with responsibilities to ourselves and to others.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

CONFIGURATION OF ORDER PAPER

Hon. H.A. Olson: Honourable senators, I rise to comment on the Order Paper that is on our desks today. The structure and format of it, as well as the size of the print, are considerably different from the Order Paper which we normally find on our desks.

I prefer this new version. It is an improvement over the old one. Whether the change in style was caused by power outages or whatever, it does not matter. The "Daily Routine of Business" is on the inside of the first page, which is helpful.

I do not propose to make a long speech about it. I only want honourable senators to know that I prefer it, whatever the cause.

[Translation]

NATIONAL UNITY

QUEBEC REFERENDUM—RELEVANCE OF CBC PROGRAMMING FOR FRANCOPHONES OUTSIDE QUEBEC

Hon. Jean-Claude Rivest: Honourable senators, I would like to draw the attention of our friend Senator Thériault to some comments he made about the Société Radio-Canada. I share his concerns. The SRC provides very little programming for francophones outside Quebec. I could not agree more with Senator Thériault.

As far as media coverage of the referendum campaign is concerned, however, I simply want to bring to the honourable senator's attention that a study by an impartial firm indicated that the SRC had given 50 per cent air time to the "yes" side and 50 per cent to the "no" side.

Since I was invited several times by the SRC to comment as spokesman for the "yes, no, maybe so" side, I have to say before this honourable house that I have every confidence in the journalists and professionals who work for the SRC. I see I am supported in this by Senator Bacon, who is nodding her agreement.

Senator Bacon: No, no!

[English]

UNITED NATIONS

UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, Senator Andreychuk has drawn our attention to the fact that on Sunday next, we celebrate International Human Rights Day.

A little known historical fact is that on December 10, 1948, Canada joined the other members of the General Assembly of the United Nations in proclaiming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. However, two days prior, on December 8, 1948, it was not so clear that Canada would be a signatory to the declaration. Fortunately, we joined the world community in marking that standard of achievement, which has become known as the Magna Carta of the 20th century.

All of that is to underscore the point that we have to be vigilant and alert in the protection and promotion of human rights in our own country. We can never take human rights for granted.

Honourable senators, one of the basic human rights recognized by the Declaration of Human Rights is the right to be free from racial discrimination. Racial discrimination, race hatred and race conflict thrive on scientifically false ideas and are nourished by ignorance. For all practical social purposes, race is not so much a biological phenomenon as a social myth. The myth of race has created an enormous amount of human and social damage.

In recent years, racial discrimination has taken a heavy toll of human lives and caused untold suffering. It still prevents the normal development of millions of human beings and deprives civilization of the effective cooperation of productive minds. The biological differences between ethnic groups should be disregarded from the standpoint of social acceptance and social action. The unity of humankind, from both the biological and social points of view, is the main thing. To recognize this and to act accordingly is the first requirement of a modern society.

• (1420)

Hon. Doris M. Anderson: Honourable senators, I too wish to rise to speak about the Human Rights Day on Saturday, December 10.

Since its adoption on December 10, 1948, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights has been, and continues to be "the most important and far-reaching of all United Nations' declarations, and a fundamental source of inspiration for national and international efforts to promote and to protect human rights and fundamental freedoms." Our own Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the human rights legislation of the provinces clearly reflect the influence of the universal declaration.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights helped chart a course for individual nations to follow. It set standards which have become part of international law, and which helped to shape the domestic policies of many countries.

Honourable senators, in 1948, the members of the newly-formed United Nations realized that "to deny human beings their basic human rights was to set the stage for political and social unrest. Human rights affect the daily lives of everyone." Between countries and individuals there is a relationship between respect for human rights and the maintenance of peace.

Maxwell Yalden, Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, stated recently that:

It would be foolhardy and dishonest to suggest that the UN and the declarations and conventions it has spawned have created an era of peace and mutual respect among the nations and peoples of world. We have only to look at the atrocities in Rwanda, in the former Yugoslavia and other trouble spots around the world to see that this is evidently not the case. When it comes to international human rights, the pace of progress is often painfully slow.

He continued:

It is equally dishonest to focus only on failures. The fact is that the UN and its agencies have been a major contributor to stability and the steady advancement of human rights.

Honourable senators, as the United Nations enters its second half century, the challenge ahead is to overcome the easy cynicism surrounding the UN's effectiveness and ensure that human rights remain on the international agenda. The world community now has the responsibility to follow through with the commitment of the universal declaration to the proposition that "All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights."

Honourable senators, in 1993, the World Conference on Human Rights unanimously reaffirmed the principles of the universal declaration. Promoting them internationally is therefore not purely a question of values but a mutual obligation of all members of the international community.

In 1986, Parliament's Special Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations declared an all-party consensus that "the international promotion of human rights is a fundamental and integral part of Canadian foreign policy." The government regards respect for human rights not only as a fundamental value but also as a crucial element in the development of stable, democratic and prosperous societies at peace with each other.

On November 10, 1995, in his opening statement at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in New Zealand, the Prime Minister stated:

We owe it to the world, and above all to the people who live in difficult situations, to speak out in the face of flagrant violations of democratic principles and basic tenets of justice.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

PRIVATE BILL

EVANGELICAL MISSIONARY CHURCH
(CANADA WEST DISTRICT) BILL—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Hon. Gérard-A. Beaudoin, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, presented the following report:

Thursday, December 7, 1995

The Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs has the honour to present its

SEVENTEENTH REPORT

Your Committee, to which was referred Bill S-12, An Act to amalgamate the Alberta corporation known as the Missionary Church with the Canada corporation known as the Evangelical Missionary Church, Canada West District, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Thursday, November 30, 1995, examined the said Bill and now reports the same with the following amendment:

Page 2, lines 14 and 15: strike out lines 14 and 15 and substitute the following:

"Province of Alberta has, by chapter 46 of the Statutes of Alberta, 1995, authorized"

Respectfully submitted,

GÉRALD-A. BEAUDOIN
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Beaudoin, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(b), bill placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading later this day.

CORRECTIONS AND CONDITIONAL RELEASE ACT CRIMINAL CODE CRIMINAL RECORDS ACT PRISONS AND REFORMATORIES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Hon. Gérard-A. Beaudoin, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, presented the following report:

Thursday, December 7, 1995

The Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs has the honour to present its

EIGHTEENTH REPORT

Your Committee, to which was referred Bill C-45, An Act to amend the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, the Criminal Code, the Criminal Records Act, the Prisons and Reformatory Act and the Transfer of Offenders Act, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Wednesday, October 18, 1995, examined the said Bill and now reports the same without amendment but with one observation.

The Committee is concerned that so many technical amendments to the French text of the Corrections and Conditional Release Act included in Bill C-45 should be necessary to remove discrepancies between the two official versions of the Act. Because legislation is now drafted in both official languages, Committee members believe it should have been possible to achieve greater consistency between the two at the time of first passage in 1992.

Respectfully submitted,

GÉRALD-A. BEAUDOIN
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Graham, bill placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

TOBACCO PRODUCT RESTRICTIONS BILL

FIRST READING

Hon. Stanley Haidasz presented Bill S-14, to restrict the manufacture, sale, importation and advertising of tobacco products.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

On motion of Senator Haidasz, bill placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Hon. Donald H. Oliver, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications have power to sit at three o'clock in the afternoon, Tuesday, December 12, 1995, even though the Senate may then be sitting, and that rule 95(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTION PERIOD

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

SCHEDULE FOR CONSIDERATION OF LEGISLATION—POSSIBILITY OF PRE-STUDY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lowell Murray: Honourable senators, I want to ask a question of the Leader of the Government concerning Bill C-110. Perhaps the Leader of the Government can enlighten us as to the legislative schedule and expectations in the other place. When might we expect this bill to arrive in the Senate?

I doubt very much that this bill, as contentious as it is proving to be in the country, will get very quick passage here. I have been thinking about pre-study. Ideally, before the bill arrives here, the government would have amended it in such a way as to correct the problems and build the support that we all know is necessary for such an initiative to gain favour in all parts of the country. In that case, I would hope that there would not be much difficulty on this side.

To some extent, it is a question of timing. How much time does the leader think is left in the debate in the other place? If we were to conduct a pre-study, would there be enough time for us to try to influence the outcome in the other place? Would the government be agreeable to such a procedure?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I understand my honourable friend's concerns and I agree with him. This is a very important piece of legislation.

Concerning the timetable for the bill, it received clause-by-clause review yesterday. The committee will report to the House of Commons on Monday. Under their procedures, it is anticipated that debate on the bill will be completed by next Wednesday.

To deal with the other part of my friend's question, at this point in time the bill, as I said, is now in report stage. It would be premature of me to draw any conclusions about how it will come out of report stage, and certainly before the final vote in the House of Commons.

I am aware of my friend's concern and the concern of others, that we have an opportunity to get on with this matter as quickly as possible, and I hope that will be the case.

Senator Murray: It is not for me to speak on behalf of all my colleagues on this matter, but I think I can give the honourable senator an educated guess as to what will happen if that bill comes out of report stage as it is presently drafted. The chances are very strong that we will try to amend it here. I hope that my friend, and her friends in the other place will take that into account. We could not possibly complete — and I am looking at the leadership here — a bill of this nature in its present form before Christmas. The friends of my friend in the other place should not be making long-term reservations if they want to pass this bill in January, before a possible prorogation in February — that is, if that is what is in the cards.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I am aware of the concerns involved here. Indeed, throughout this process, the government itself has heard the concerns expressed by Canadians from all across the country. My friends opposite have been very frank in their comments, and I understand their position.

However, again, I cannot speculate at this point in time. It would be premature to predict how the bill will proceed in the next phase of its existence.

[Translation]

LITERACY

OECD INTERNATIONAL SURVEY—LINK BETWEEN
ADULT LITERACY AND EMPLOYMENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, my question is directed to the Leader of the Government in this house. It concerns the international survey on adult literacy published yesterday. The report indicates there is a close connection between adult literacy and employment. Highly literate adults are more likely to have better paying jobs, and are mainly found in growth sectors like business and financial services.

According to the survey, literacy is no longer exclusively a matter of mastering three basic skills: reading, writing and arithmetic. The survey revealed that although formal schooling was very beneficial, continuing education was also very useful to update and improve skills. The challenge is to find ways to ensure that the adult population gets training and development.

My question is as follows: How will the measures to assist training provided in the government's new employment insurance policy that was announced recently help Canadians improve literacy levels on a national scale?

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I thank Senator Gauthier for his question and for recognizing the publication of the new report entitled "Literacy, Economy and Society" produced by the OECD. All senators have been sent a copy. Canada is very much in the lead as a result of the study by Statistics Canada from 1989 to 1991, which is recognized for its excellence in other countries of the world.

• (1440)

This survey is unique. Never before have other countries joined together in assessing the base of their own capabilities in order to then be able to draw their policy objectives to focus on competition and the development of their economies in such a rapidly changing world.

In Canada, as indeed in the United States, the survey showed that we were positioned differently from European countries, perhaps because they are smaller and their governments and jurisdictions are less diverse than ours. However, many European respondents were clustered in the middle range in the survey. In terms of Canada and the United States, many respondents were found to be at the top of the proficiency level, according to the survey, but a very disturbing number were assessed to be at the very lower levels.

This is a challenge to us. We must realize that the people in our labour force now will be the same people who will be working in it 20 years from now, and we must find methods to address this structural difficulty, or our country will simply not progress and be competitive. The result will be that our citizens will not have the opportunities that we would wish them to have.

As to the new employment measures, one of the fundamental aspects of the changes introduced by my colleague Mr. Axworthy was to try to shift the focus to employment opportunities and assistance. The literacy component of those changes can be found in the part of the new program which will more directly help citizens to individually seek out the kind of training which they need to modify their own difficulties. Presently, people train for jobs or careers in areas where there are no job possibilities and the training does not meet the needs of individuals. That part of the new program is directed specifically at trying to deal with basic skills and the ability to increase them so that workers in our labour force can be retrained and be more flexible to the very rapid changes in our society.

Another focus encourages unemployed people, through wage subsidies and earning supplements, to enter and stay in the workforce, even if they have jobs that may not pay as well as they have been used to.

If one thing came out of this international study, it was the notion that if university graduates, who come out as highly literate, and others with lesser backgrounds do not have the opportunity to continually use these skills, they will lose them.

That is one of the very troublesome statistics at the core of that study, and it is one with which we in Canada must come to grips. It is not just for government, because government cannot do it alone; it is a problem which must be solved by government and the partnerships that we have been forging over the last several years.

VISIBILITY OF LITERACY SECRETARIAT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: The Ottawa Citizen, in an editorial this day commenting on the OECD Statistics Canada report, stated that this country does not have a national literacy policy. Further into the article, it indicates that our National Literacy Secretariat is orphaned in the Heritage department.

As minister with special responsibility for literacy, can the Leader of the Government in the Senate reassure Canadians that, indeed, the federal government has formulated policies to deal with this situation, and that she will bring this important diagnosis — because that is what it is — to the attention of the authorities, both federal and provincial, so that we can jointly find some cohesive and possibly very comprehensive programs that will resolve this very difficult situation in which we find ourselves?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): I would be very pleased to do that. This is one of the issues that I think all of us can truthfully say is a non-partisan issue. It is one on which people in this chamber have worked together, others in the House of Commons from different persuasions have worked together, and people all across this country have worked together.

The country does have a literacy program. My friends in this house who were in the former administration deserve a great deal of credit for bringing forward policies in 1988 in response to the first study on the national level of literacy. That was a private study conducted by Southam. Canadians were shocked by the results contained therein.

As a result of that, the National Literacy Secretariat was set up. It is by no means an orphan, and it certainly is not in the Heritage department. It is alive and well and an example of creative leverage in the federal government that all departments would be well advised to consider. It is small and compact. It has a small budget, although I wish it had a bigger one. However, with a small budget, it levers millions of dollars among provincial governments, among businesses, and among community associations all across this country. It is where it belongs: at the very heart of the Human Resources Development department.

This study particularly shows that the objective, throughout this country and at every level, of creating jobs for Canadians, not just for tomorrow, but for the future, and jobs Canadians can do, very much requires the kind of cooperation for which the National Literacy Secretariat is responsible. It has been given additional assignments in the last year and a half in terms of the TAGS program in Atlantic Canada. It has also been given the responsibility for the Youth Literacy Corps, and it is at the forefront of research and development of literacy materials.

We cannot, as a federal government, deliver services, so we must work in close cooperation with the provinces and with all of the agencies and associations across this country, private and public, who are ready, willing, and able to provide not only money but technology and, most important, awareness on this issue. It is difficult for people to understand that there are significant numbers of Canadians who do not have the kind of ability that everyone in this house has to read and write and to solve problems in an everyday way.

This is major challenge for Canada. It was a challenge for the OECD. I think there has been more publicity on this report than almost any other report I can think of in the last five or six years, and part of it once again is the shock value of realizing that, in a country as progressive and as wealthy as Canada, a great segment of our society remains unable to fully participate or contribute to our national life.

FUTURE MEASURES TO BE INSTITUTED—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Erminie J. Cohen: My question is also on literacy. On December 10, the world observes Human Rights Day. The right to literacy is a critically important human right.

Honourable senators will recall that last October the Leader of the Government in the Senate and minister responsible for literacy was absent for the unveiling of the government's social security reform paper. Last week, the Minister of Human Resources unveiled an entirely new employment strategy. There was no mention of the word "literacy".

Yesterday, the first international adult literacy survey commissioned by the OECD was released. That study revealed that 42 per cent of Canadians have weak reading skills, scoring in the bottom two of five reading levels. What is worse, honourable senators, is that many Canadians who have trouble reading will not admit that they have a problem. It is therefore not surprising that today's Ottawa Citizen editorial was entitled "Literacy Lacking Leadership."

• (1450)

My question to the Minister with special responsibility for literacy is: What policies have been, or presently are being, implemented to lower the unacceptable rate of illiteracy in our country that she alluded to, and when can we expect some progress in this matter?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I thank Senator Cohen for her question. It is a difficult one. I do not concur in any way with the Citizen editorial that there is a lack of leadership on literacy in this country. One of the difficulties with that issue is that there is no one level of government or sector in our society that can singlehandedly lead the charge on this issue. Furthermore, as I said earlier, the problem is made infinitely more difficult because, as an example, yesterday as the survey came out, other countries including the United States were able to have their minister for education or their secretary of the department of education speaking on behalf of a cohesive unit. In Canada, we have 12 ministers of education, and because of our jurisdictional makeup, we do not have a ministry of education in the federal government. Therefore, leadership must be shared across jurisdictional lines, and I will pay tribute again to the efforts at the federal level to establish a method of doing that with the National Literacy Program and the establishment of the National Literacy Secretariat, which does cross those jurisdictional lines. In a cooperative way, it is also part of the provincial literacy initiatives and part of the major private sector initiatives in every part of this country. Therefore it is not a question of a lack of leadership. In fact, single leadership in this country would not do the job; it is the partnerships and cooperation that will.

In response to Senator Cohen on the question of where we go from here, as she knows, we have a great number of programs that are being worked on cooperatively across the country, and as the issue evolves, there is a shifting emphasis on some of those programs. Right now, one of the most critical areas is workplace literacy. Finally, people are understanding that the place to teach and train people with limited skills is right there in the place where they work. The other area where we have seen a very dramatic emphasis in the last couple of years is family literacy, because that is where one sees the beginnings of the problems or the successes in individual lives in this country.

The international survey is an enormous one, and the statistical data that it has amassed will take some time to analyze. Canada had one of the largest groups to be surveyed of any of the countries, and there will be a specific Canada report out in March which will go through various sectors of our society and give us a much clearer picture of exactly the right tools to use in that case.

This Canada report will be the most important piece of evidence on literacy that we have ever had in this country. After it is out, there will be a succession of specific papers — on gender, on immigration, on different aspects of the problem. Those will come out over a period of probably almost two years.

We all know that awareness is difficult to achieve, but the fact of this survey and the subsequent Canada report will make it truly impossible for people to ignore the issue of literacy in the months and years ahead. It will help us build, with partners, a national strategy relevant to the 21st century.

AGRICULTURE

GRAIN TRANSPORTATION—POSSIBLE SALE OF HOPPER CARS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Leonard J. Gustafson: Honourable senators, my question is in relation to the possible sale of hopper cars. As senators will know, the old boxcars wore out on the prairies, and they were replaced with a wonderful product called hopper cars which were especially built to actually hold grain. I understand the government is thinking about selling these cars to the railroads — perhaps the word “giving” would be more relevant here — at 25 per cent of their value.

My question is: Is this really the intention of the government? Has the government thought of what would happen if, let us say, an international investor were to buy up all of the shares of the railroads, and thus end up owning our hopper cars, as opposed to the farmers, the agricultural community, or the taxpayers of Canada? Is the government giving serious consideration to this very serious problem?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I must confess to Senator Gustafson that I do not know the answer to that question. I will ask my colleagues the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Transport if they can help me out on that one.

Senator Gustafson: I would just like to emphasize the fact that many of the farmers to whom I have spoken have a deep concern about the government entering into this type of agreement with the railroads, at a time when there have been so many changes — some probably positive, but some not so positive — in the areas of grain transportation.

Senator Fairbairn: I fully understand the concerns of my honourable friend, and I will make inquiries. I agree with him that this has been a very tumultuous year in agriculture, in transportation and in the grain trade, some of it good, some of it very difficult. On the one hand, it has left our farmers in some senses invigorated in their efforts, but on the other, there has been a sense of some uncertainty, which all of us understand. I will pursue those questions and try to get the most precise answers I can.

NATIONAL FINANCE

REDUCTION IN DEFICIT ANNOUNCED BY MINISTER—RAMIFICATIONS FOR TRANSFER PAYMENTS TO PROVINCES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. David Tkachuk: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. Yesterday, the Minister of Finance said that in the fiscal year 1996-97 or 1997-98, the deficit of the Government of Canada would be reduced from the present forecast of $23 billion for the following year to $17 billion. However, he did not really say how that would be accomplished. Perhaps I could have an indication from the Leader of the Government on this matter.

Does the government intend to find the extra $7 billion it needs through the methods it has used over the last two years — which is to transfer $7 billion of that problem to the provinces by way of cuts to social transfer payments, and to raise the remaining large portion of those cuts by increasing taxes, or will they cut the costs of government?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, my honourable colleague Senator Olson commented during the question that the government will seek to achieve these goals through good management, and he is absolutely right.

The Minister of Finance yesterday indicated that by the end of the 1996-97 fiscal year the government would have achieved its goal of reducing the deficit to 3 per cent of GDP — perhaps even a little bit better, but cautiously 3 per cent. Further, in the following year they would take the deficit down to 2 per cent, with the ultimate goal being the elimination of the deficit completely, as the minister has stated on a number of occasions.

As far as his methods are concerned, honourable senators, the Minister of Finance has used a variety of tools to achieve his goals. He made his statement yesterday, and I am sure he will hear back from Canadians. However, we will not know exactly how he intends to achieve those continuing goals until the next budget.

• (1500)

My honourable friend knows that in the past year and a half he has had assistance through a process called "program review", in which departments throughout the government have been asked to look within themselves to see how they can control costs in terms of better management, duplication and overlap with the provinces, and this is an ongoing discussion.

The one thing that the minister did say yesterday is that this government will maintain a balanced approach and be ever conscious of the human dimension as it proceeds with the very necessary program of deficit reduction.

Senator Tkachuk: I differ a little bit on the question of good management, because to date the federal government has achieved the majority of its cuts — that is, 75 per cent of the difference in the deficit from 1994-95 to 1996-97 — by increasing taxes. That has resulted in a total of $5 billion over these three years. They have also cut approximately $4.4 billion in social transfer payments, so that the provinces must deal with the problems of health care, social welfare and university education. The dramatic cut that is being asked of the provinces, for example in the case of British Columbia, represents approximately a 30 per cent decrease in the amount of transfers they received from 1994-95, compared to what they will be expected to deal with in 1996-97. The federal government has not taken it upon itself to make the same cuts in its operating expenses as a result of program review but has let other governments in Canada deal with them.

Provinces should be able to plan two years from now on the basis of their transfer payments. Will there be increases in taxes, or will the federal government reduce operating costs?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, just as my honourable friend declined to accept my comments about good management, I find it difficult to agree with him on some of his assertions. I should also like to remind him that through social transfers the federal government continues to move billions and billions of dollars into the provincial sphere.

Ultimately, Senator Tkachuk, we will have to wait for the Minister of Finance to pull together the advice that he is receiving and bring it forward in his budget early in the New Year.

GOODS AND SERVICES TAX

FORECAST FOR ELIMINATION OR REPLACEMENT— GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: Honourable senators, I should like to ask two short questions. If I get two short, complete answers, then I will be happy. I will appreciate it, and I am sure honourable senators will appreciate not only the questions, but also the answers.

Returning to the earlier comments about yesterday's economic and fiscal update by the Minister of Finance, even the Leader of the Government got carried away. We all know that this fiscal update did not go as far as promising that there would be no deficit in the current account years from now. Some people with whom I spoke this morning said that even the Minister of Finance got carried away by trying to predict what might happen in 1997-98. However, the Minister of Finance cannot even indicate what his follow-up would be to the statement this past summer when, again, in trying to make good and lead Canadians to believe and conclude that for once a Liberal Party promise would be fulfilled, the Prime Minister indicated that he would eliminate the GST.

Yesterday's fiscal update did not even mention the treatment that might be given in next year's budget to the GST, the elimination of the GST, or replacement of it by some other formula.

Can we read something into this omission yesterday?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, not at all.

Senator Simard has referred to the government and its promises, and seemed to imply that it never keeps them. However, I should like to remind him, from a discussion we had earlier today, about a couple of the promises that it has kept. We are restoring the funding of the National Literacy Program, ensuring that the Government of Canada will contribute to the international study and that Statistics Canada will continue to lead internationally in this issue. Therefore, we do keep promises.

On the question of deficit forecasting, as my honourable friend should know, this country has a fiscal history which is littered with missed deficit targets. One of the rather refreshing trends of the last two years is that this government has met its targets. It is on track to continue to meet its targets and, indeed, is broadening its targets with a view to eliminating the deficit, at the same time moving ahead on the central issue of creating jobs for Canadians.

Concerning the GST, the honourable senator will know what I have said on many occasions in the house; namely, that this is a very important commitment of the government. It is being pursued at the federal-provincial level. I told my honourable friend of the reports from the Minister of Finance on encouraging progress in the federal-provincial discussions. We will come to a conclusion on this issue which will be not only good for all Canadians but fairer for all Canadians. My honourable friend will have to be a little more patient as the Minister of Finance and his colleagues in the provinces move together towards a solution on this issue.

REMOVAL OF TAX ON READING MATERIALS—
GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: Honourable senators, speaking of literacy and encouragements, the Leader of the Government in the Senate, approximately three or four years ago when the GST was being debated and fought against by the then opposition, made a commitment that she, her party, and a Liberal government — and Senator Hébert also gave his commitment — would do all they could, almost the day after coming to power, to exempt books from the GST. That would certainly do a lot, not only for the literacy sector but also for all Canadians.

• (1510)

Where is the promise? Must we continue to exercise patience and wait another two years? We all know that two years have passed since your government was elected. Can we hope that the government might keep its second promise?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will repeat what I have said before: I am quite aware of comments that were made during the GST debate. I have repeated on a number of occasions that I will do everything in my power to have the GST discontinued on books.

My honourable friend must understand that, in the process which is now underway, the federal government is taking great care to develop a satisfactory and fair solution on the question of this tax, which has been an enormous burden on individuals in this country. It is not operating in a piecemeal fashion; it is dealing with it as a whole entity. Honourable senators can be assured that, as it progresses, I will continue to do as I already have. I have made it clear to the Minister of Finance that my zeal for the notion of taxation on books has not changed.

[Translation]

NATIONAL UNITY

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS—REQUEST FOR TABLING OF DOCUMENTS PREPARED BY NEW BRUNSWICK OFFICIALS

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: I have a second question, to do with the excellent program Le Point. Therein was a report concerning a document, prepared by the Premier of New Brunswick, and the Red Book, of which Mr. Donald Savoie is one of the co-authors. Mr. Savoie was also a member of the transition team following the election of the Liberal government in 1993.

The program, as I understood it, must have left some Quebecers and Canadians a bit up in the air. I would ask the Leader of the Government to table this document in the house. The document is important because of the three elements that Prime Minister Jean Chrétien and his government intend to debate at this point: the distinct society, the veto and the decentralization of federal powers.

What surprised me considerably and concerns me especially in the context of the current debate, is that Professor Savoie and Premier McKenna had identified significant points and changes in policy and made very valuable suggestions that could satisfy Quebec and the other provinces.

The program revealed that Premier McKenna even went to Ottawa in the days prior to October 30 and was told by the Liberal government and the Prime Minister not to release the document. At the time of the referendum, the federalists, including Mr. Jean Chrétien, did not see any problem.

I think Canadians should know the entire content of the document. They do not want an incomplete or unofficial version. It would seem that part of this document has been tabled. Part of it was made public during the summer. I am interested in seeing the official version so that the work done by Premier McKenna and Mr. Savoie may be appreciated.

I would like to make a comparison with the present position of the Liberal government on the three questions that I raised, and that make up the program we are to steam through, that is, the regional veto, the distinct society and all that. I think it would be interesting.

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, first, I did not see the Le Point program. Therefore, I can only listen with interest to my honourable friend and, perhaps, inform myself from others as to its content.

As far as Professor Savoie is concerned, I am somewhat confused. There were co-authors of the policy book that the Liberal Party used during the 1993 election campaign, and which it still uses. They were the current Minister of Finance, the Honourable Paul Martin, and Chaviva Hosek. I am not aware of Professor Savoie's contribution to a transition team.

However, my friend has been asking all week about documents. I am looking into that, as he knows, to see what might be there and what is appropriate to do with them.

As interesting as I am sure they would be, Mr. McKenna may have a great number of his own documents that are not possessions of the Government of Canada. I am aware of what my honourable friend said yesterday about his inability to get at these documents. However, it may be that Mr. McKenna himself is the person who has the authority to decide which documents he chooses to make public or not.

The honourable senator can be assured that I will do my best. Beyond that, there may be other channels that he may wish to pursue.

LITERACY

OECD INTERNATIONAL SURVEY—POSSIBILITY OF FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Stanley Haidasz: Honourable senators, in view of the comments made by the Leader of the Government in the Senate in her capacity as minister responsible for literacy in Canada, I want to thank her for the information she has given us and for the comments made by Senators Cohen and Gauthier this afternoon.

In view of the fact that there are some shocking problems with regard to illiteracy in Canada, would the minister give consideration to the feasibility of either a federal-provincial meeting on literacy or a national conference of experts on the matter?

• (1520)

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, that is a very interesting suggestion. In order to have the aspects of this report clearly looked at and communicated publicly, it may well be that some type of conference could be held in the future.

Another aspect of this issue that is of growing interest and deserves to be looked at publicly is the area of technology and how it is changing the face of how we deal with literacy and training, and how we help people in regions of this country far removed from metropolitan centres. All of these issues might well make for a fruitful conference.

[Translation]

NATIONAL FINANCE

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND—OBJECTIVES AND METHODS OF DEFICIT REDUCTION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, my supplementary follows from the response the Leader of the Government gave to Senator Tkachuk regarding the increased rate of deficit reduction compared with the GDP.

You are no doubt aware that the International Monetary Fund suggested earlier this week to the government that it set as an objective a 1.4 per cent ratio between the deficit and the GDP. I am well aware that the Minister of Finance set 2 per cent as the new target in his speech yesterday.

Following this recommendation by the IMF, does your government foresee ways of further accelerating deficit reduction?

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, the IMF has suggested cuts that Canada might engage in to accelerate the reduction of its deficit. Of course, the views of that organization are always received with respect and interest. However, I think the Minister of Finance has a much better idea of the priorities with which the government of this country should work in trying to balance not only the cutting exercise in the reduction of the deficit but also the notions of the protection of security for our citizens and what is needed to create jobs and employment for Canadians.

The IMF has every right to make its views known, but we must recognize that it has also applauded this country for its efforts in the last two years. The trend of deficit reduction in Canada has been clearly set out, and, most important, our goals have been met. They will continue to be met. They will be met in a way that, I would suggest, only a national government with the best interests of its country at heart is qualified to judge.

Honourable senators, this is not a paper exercise in Canada; it is an exercise that keeps in mind the lives of individuals. Therefore, the IMF, in suggesting that we should swiftly reach a balanced budget and eliminate our deficit, may not have the same priorities as the Minister of Finance. He will carry out the exercise leading up to his next budget based on those considerations as well.

[Translation]

OECD INTERNATIONAL SURVEY ON ADULT LITERACY

NOTICE OF INQUIRY

Leave having been granted to return to notices of inquiry.

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, I give notice that on Tuesday next, December 12, 1995, I will call the attention of the Senate to the report on the international survey on literacy and Employment Guide.

[English]

THE SENATE

CRITICISM BY MEMBERS OF THE MEDIA—CORRECTION

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, with your permission, I wish to correct what I said earlier. The article I quoted had just been published. I will definitely be in for a bad weekend if I do not mention the grateful exercise in municipal affairs of our good friend Senator Lucier. My father was involved as well in municipal politics in Montreal. Senator Lynch-Staunton was elected many times. On top of that, Senator Balfour sat with me in the House of Commons three times, as did Senator Phillips.

I made a mistake. Senator Murray was never elected. He was a minister, but not elected. Finlay MacDonald also had something to do with the political process. At any rate, I wanted to bring these corrections to your attention.

Hon. Finlay MacDonald: Honourable senators, I thank Senator Prud'homme for including my name in that illustrious company. I must remind the Senate, however, that I am one of those who lends credence to the accusation of Mr. McWhinney in the other place, because in 1963 I was a candidate for federal office in Halifax, Nova Scotia. It was reported after the results came in that I had shaken the hands of 40 per cent of the electorate and the confidence of the remainder.

Some Hon. Senators: Oh! Oh!

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I was not aware that under Routine Proceedings we had an item entitled "Confessions." However, the Senate being the friendly body that it is, I suppose such a comment is in order.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, before we proceed to Orders of the Day, I should indicate that we wish to call, in order, motion Nos. 1 and 2. The next item would be Bill C-103 under "Presentation of Reports from Standing or Special Committees." We will then go directly to item no. 3 on the Order Paper, which is Senator Fairbairn's statement on the resolution. We will then proceed according to the Order Paper for the remainder of the day.

Senator Kinsella: Could we have an explanation as to why?

Senator Graham: This procedure falls within the rules introduced and adopted by the house under the previous administration. It is not necessary to give an explanation because all of the precedents were established by Senator Lynch-Staunton when he was in this particular position. On a daily basis, he moved the orders around. Since this administration has been in place, we have only done this on one occasion.

Senator Fairbairn has asked that she address the resolution at that particular time. At that time, it may very well be revealed why she has made that request.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES READJUSTMENT BILL, 1995

MOTION TO INSTRUCT COMMITTEE TO TABLE FINAL REPORT—DEBATE CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Robichaud, P.C.,

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the Message from the House of Commons dated June 20, 1995, and on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham dated June 28, 1995, regarding Bill C-69, An Act to provide for the establishment of electoral boundaries commissions and the readjustment of electoral boundaries.

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, my comments will deal with both motions before us, No. 1 and No. 2, since the principles behind them are about the same. Despite the Speaker's ruling yesterday, I still feel that we are into "déjà vu all over again."

I will not go into details on our objections to Bill C-22 and Bill C-69, but I should like to remind honourable senators of the following: In our view, Bill C-69 simply is not in the public interest.

In fact, Bill C-69 is not even a government bill, although it was sponsored by Minister Gray. It is a bill prepared by back-benchers, the only bill that has come before us that was not prepared by the government. It was prepared and drafted by those who have the most vested interest in electoral boundaries.

• (1530)

Our objection is simple: The present process has effectively come to an end, because the maps with the recommendations from the house have now gone to the electoral commissions. Once those are confirmed, an election held after January, 1997 will be based on the redistribution founded on the census of 1991. If Bill C-69 came into effect today, an election on the basis of the 1991 census could not be held before January, 1998. That 12-month lag is crucial, because history tells us that most elections are held within four years, or so, of the previous one.

We are merely arguing to ensure that the Senate of Canada and the House of Commons respect the constitutional obligation that redistribution following the most available census figures be started and completed as expeditiously as possible. Bill C-69 is an attempt to cancel a process which is nearly completed.

All redistributions cause grief to sitting members. It is unfortunate, but inevitable. However, that is a minor consideration when compared to the need to equalize, as much as possible, the vote of each and every Canadian. That is an impossible task to complete, particularly because of restrictions imposed by our Constitution, but at least redistribution every 10 years allows that effort to be made.

We are told that the Senate should stay out of this, that the Senate is not elected, and that this process should be the preserve of the elected members. Well, it so happens there are also about 30 million Canadians who are not elected. To say that redistribution should be left only to those who are its direct beneficiaries reveals a most strange understanding of what the parliamentary system is all about, to say the least.

Bill C-69, with just a few changes, including having it come into effect only after the current redistribution process has been completed, would meet with our approval — with a few changes, including, in particular, that it not interrupt the current redistribution. That is what we are asking the government to do.

As for Bill C-22, it is clearly unconstitutional. The overwhelming evidence shows, with few exceptions, that it is unconstitutional because it denies the rule of law. Even the government has accepted this argument, however reluctantly, by proposing two sets of amendments, in an attempt to satisfy the objections of those who say, including the Canadian Bar Association unanimously, that the bill violates the Constitution. The government has introduced two sets of amendments which go some way, but not all the way, to meet objections which have been so eloquently and so convincingly presented.

Even Minister Rock has said that this bill is unprecedented. This is an unprecedented bill. There is no legislation in the history of the Parliament of Canada which denies access to the courts as this one would if passed. We do not want to be party to a precedent of this sort.

In his remarks of yesterday, Senator Stanbury complained that we were not allowing the Senate to decide on bills, that seven senators were obstructing the right of the Senate to take certain decisions. Let me put our position into perspective. Since becoming the opposition, we have received nearly 100 government bills in the last two years or so. Of those, we have delayed a decision on only two: Bill C-22 and Bill C-69.

We were accused of delaying Bill C-68. However, when you look back on the circumstances, it is thanks to a decision and a recommendation by this side that a vote was taken on Bill C-68 on November 22 that would allow the House of Commons, in the event that our amendments were passed, all the time available to consider the amendments and decide whether or not to send the bill back to the Senate before the Christmas recess. Those who say we delayed Bill C-68, looking back on it, will realize that we co-operated with the government's agenda.

Senator Stanbury suggested a lack of will on our part; a lack of courage, even, to bring these bills to a vote here. Let me tell him and his colleagues that it is not a lack of courage that prompts us to keep these two bills in committee; rather, it is a mark of courtesy and respect for the elected house.

We could have voted against these bills when they first came before us. There was a strong feeling in our caucus that these bills were so reprehensible or so distasteful that our immediate instinct — certainly that of many of us — was to vote against them. Despite that, we decided that we had too much respect for the will of the elected house, no matter how we might disagree with it, or feel that it is not fair or right, though legally proper, to spontaneously and instinctively vote against it. Rather, our role is to bring to the attention of the other place the flaws in the legislation and to urge consideration of them, and improvements that can correct the flaws. That is why the two bills are still in committee — to give the government a chance to improve upon them, and not risk losing them before improvements can be made.

It would have been so easy to dispose of Bill C-22 when it first came before the Senate, when our numbers were even greater and we could have easily defeated it, but we said, no, we will not take advantage of our numerical superiority. That is not our role. Our role is to act as an opposition, not as an obstruction.

Liberals obviously have difficulty in differentiating between opposition and obstruction. When they were sitting on this side, particularly from 1988 onward, they engaged in the systematic obstruction of every major piece of legislation brought forward by the Conservative government. Let me give you three examples:

In 1988, the Liberals refused to pass the legislation ratifying the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement, which forced an election. The patent bill, which allowed pharmaceutical companies a longer period of patent protection, was sent back to the house three times — deliberate obstruction. As Senator Simard mentioned in his question, we had the GST debate, about which the less said the better.

The tragedy of those three amongst many interventions is that now that the Liberals are in power, they have done nothing about those matters. They have embraced free trade, in some cases even more strongly than the Conservatives who supported it at the time. There has been no amendment tabled to shorten the patent protection allowed pharmaceutical companies, which was the subject of a major debate here. It has been two years now, and we are still waiting. As Senator Simard pointed out, we have not even had an amendment to the GST to exempt periodicals and books; an amendment which the Leader of the Government so passionately supported at the time.

The tragedy is that the Liberals did not oppose so much as they obstructed; and the irony of the situation is that, once in power, they have embraced the policies which they so damagingly obstructed.

I suppose that should not be too surprising from members of a party which, not long ago, denounced distinct society and today embraces it as though it were their own discovery.

One of the reasons bills are not moving as fast as the government would like is that the Senate has refused to engage in pre-study. Senator Murray asked, but did not get a direct answer, about Bill C-110, the veto bill. We hear that it may only come to us on Wednesday or Thursday of next week, without amendment. The Senate has a major responsibility to at least listen, if not respond, to the concerns of regions. Does the government really expect that when Bill C-110 comes here on Wednesday or Thursday we will pass it automatically just because we want to get home for Christmas? To do so would be a complete abdication of our responsibilities.

We did suggest pre-study to the government leadership. This is not a partisan issue. Federal-provincial relations and harmony between the various jurisdictions in this country is not a Liberal, Conservative, NDP, Reform or Bloc issue. It is a question of keeping this country together. Thus far, we have received no answer.

It would be easy for the government to engage senators on both sides in the legislative process, particularly with regard to bills of a largely non-partisan and technical nature. There is talent on both sides which cries out to be used. Unfortunately, the government neglects some of the greatest talent available in this house.

The government has a choice which I offer on behalf of my colleagues. It is the following: Bring the necessary amendments to the two bills which are in committee, or risk losing the bills entirely. It is as simple as that. If the government wants to pass the bills down without amendment, it will risk losing them. If we have held them back in committee, it is only to give the government an opportunity to improve on them. If our role is to be, as both Senator Carstairs and Senator Stanbury are suggesting, to move everything along for a vote rather than holding it back for improvement, the government faces the possibility of defeat on bills which deserve to be defeated in their present form.

If Bill C-69 were defeated, the Senate would be applauded, because Bill C-69 only serves the interests of a small group of dissatisfied members of the Liberal caucus who, once having been elected in the ridings they now hold, refuse to accept the principle behind redistribution. As one member said, "I worked years for this. Now that I've got it, don't take it away from me." It is a sense of proprietorship that should not be accepted.

I fail to understand why the government buckles in to these malcontents rather than accepting the principle that, while redistribution will hurt sitting members, the purpose will be served; that is, to give each Canadian a vote which is as equal as possible to that of other Canadians.

As far as we are concerned, a vote against these two motions will be a vote of respect for the House of Commons. By voting against them we will be telling the government that we are keeping these bills here while waiting for the government to improve them. We are asking the government to meet us part way. We are not being adamant or pig-headed, but we are saying, as have Patrick Monahan, the Canadian Bar Association and other observers across Canada, that Bill C-22 is unconstitutional.

We are not saying that the government cannot cancel the contracts, although we question the propriety of doing that. We are saying that the government should allow those affected by the cancellation their day in court. We are not pleading for them. We will not go to court with them. We are indifferent as to whether they win or lose, but we say that they have the right to go to court.

In the case of Bill C-69, we are simply saying that the process has come to an end. We have already spent $5 million to $6 million. The maps will be deposited and confirmed in early January. They will be proclaimed then and confirmed a year later as the basis for the next election. Why, for the sake of a few malcontents, tear all that apart and restart the system under new rules with additional expense, and, most important, allow the next election not to be held on the basis of the 1991 census?

For these reasons, I urge that the two motions be voted down.

On motion of Senator Hébert, debate adjourned.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

MOTIONS RESPECTING BILLS C-69 AND C-22—VOTES DEFERRED

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, following discussions on both sides, an agreement has been reached with the opposition party with respect to how we will proceed on the two motions standing in my name on the Order Paper respecting Bill C-22 and Bill C-69.

Accordingly, pursuant to rule 39, I move:

That at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, December 12, 1995 any proceedings before the Senate shall be interrupted and all questions necessary to dispose of the motions by the Honourable Senator Graham of December 6, 1995, to instruct the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs to present their final report to the Senate on the message and motion regarding Bill C-22 and the message and the motion regarding Bill C-69, shall be put forthwith without further debate or amendment and that any votes on any of those questions not be further deferred.

Motion agreed to.

• (1550)

EXCISE TAX ACT INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE— DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the twenty-sixth report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, (Bill C-103, to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Income Tax Act, with an amendment), presented in the Senate on December 5, 1995.

Hon. Michael Kirby: Honourable senators, I rise to speak on the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on Bill C-103.

On November 30 and again on December 5 of this year, pursuant to an order of reference adopted by the Senate on November 7, the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce met to study Bill C-103. The bill seeks to amend the Excise Tax Act by imposing an 80-per-cent tax on the value of advertising in the Canadian split-run edition of periodicals. The bill would make the tax payable, in the words of the bill, by "a responsible person." Such a "person" is defined in the bill as being a publisher, distributor, printer or wholesaler.

The bill also amends the Income Tax Act by adding an anti-avoidance rule to section 19 of the act. This section provides rules for the deductibility of expenses for advertising in newspapers and periodicals.

That, honourable senators, is what the bill does. In layman's language, the bill effectively makes the cost of producing or selling any future split runs of magazines in Canada prohibitively expensive.

The report of the committee, however, contains an amendment. What the amendment does is to change the date that this legislation becomes effective from the date proposed in the bill March 26, 1993, some 33 months ago, to the date that this bill receives Royal Assent. I will comment in a minute on why the committee has recommended that amendment.

I should add, almost parenthetically, that the committee also seriously considered several other amendments, specifically two amendments recommended by the Canadian Bar Association. The reason we did not make further amendments was that Minister Dupuy, when testifying before the committee on Tuesday morning, gave us his guarantee — and we on the committee assumed his guarantee meant the government's guarantee — that amendments to deal with the concerns of the bar association would be introduced by the government in the next omnibus tax bill. A bill of that type normally comes before the Senate and then the committee in the spring of every year. Given that undertaking from the Minister of Canadian Heritage, we decided to set aside the issue of whether we would make the amendments recommended by the Canadian Bar Association. We proceeded to consider the issue of whether the bill ought to go into effect on March 26, 1993, as recommended by the government, or whether it ought to go into effect at the time of Royal Assent.

There are two reasons why the committee voted to make the effective date the date of Royal Assent. I will only comment on one today. I will leave it to other members of the committee — Senator Kelleher, Senator Oliver and others — to comment on the second reason, namely, the substantial concern that the committee had about U.S. trade retaliation. This concern arose because of the way the bill is, first, retroactive, and, second, because it singles out a specific magazine, Sports Illustrated. This bill has been interpreted by its critics as a punitive measure targeted at a single publication. Let me leave that trade issue aside, however, and talk about the other reason for changing the date on which the bill becomes effective.

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce has had a long-standing concern with retroactive legislation. Many times in the past, during the 10 years I have been on this committee, members on both sides of the aisle have given speeches expressing their profound concern and opposition to legislation which is effectively retroactive, because it makes past business decisions ultra vires; legislation that essentially nullifies the effect of business decisions, that, in fact, at the time they were taken, were perfectly legal.

Bill C-103 is intended to prevent future split runs of new magazines. It is intended to prevent new periodicals from coming out with split runs. This is a legitimate goal. The amendment contained in our report absolutely preserves that goal. Our amendment continues to preserve the fundamental thrust of the policy contained in the act, which is that Canada ought to have a policy stopping future split runs.

The issue before the committee was whether we ought to go back 33 months and prohibit Sports Illustrated from doing split runs as well. Our view was that going back in history for 33 months, during which time only one publication has started a split run, namely Sports Illustrated, was a form of retroactivity. The evidence before the committee was not at all conclusive that Sports Illustrated had even been told that what they were doing was against any government policy. In fact, the evidence, in my view, leans the other way.

In 1990, for example, Time Canada, which is the parent company of Sports Illustrated, sought and obtained a letter from Investment Canada confirming that Sports Illustrated would not be subject to the Investment Canada Act. That is an important consideration because one way of stopping split runs is by using the conditions of the Investment Canada Act. Sports Illustrated Canada in fact has an exemption from that act by a decision of Investment Canada in 1990.

Two years later, in December 1992, Time Warner of Canada advised the government that they would begin publication of Sports Illustrated in Canada in 1993. Witnesses from Sports Illustrated and from Time Canada testified before the committee last Thursday that at no time did they receive notice that their plans were in contravention of Canadian law. There is correspondence between Time Canada and Revenue Canada through that first six-month period in 1993. However, the correspondence deals with Tariff Code 9958. It indicates clearly, in the terms of a letter from the Deputy Minister of Customs and Excise, that the split-run editions being printed in Canada were not in breach of this provision. Tariff Code 9958 is the element of Canada's Tariff Code which stops split runs from being physically brought over our border. The Department of Customs and Excise came to conclude that the split-run edition of Sports Illustrated did not violate Tariff Code 9958.

Honourable senators, it is true — and this is where the evidence is somewhat conflicting — that during this period early in 1993, Perrin Beatty, the then Minister of Communications, gave an interview to the press in which he indicated that he was not in favour of the Sports Illustrated split-run edition. Subsequently, after Sports Illustrated had published two split-run editions, Mr. Beatty indicated that a policy would be introduced which would effectively prohibit Sports Illustrated from proceeding with future split-run editions.

Honourable senators, these facts raised in the minds of committee members two issues: First, is it reasonable to expect businessmen in this country to take business decisions on the basis of statements made by a minister which they read in the media? Surely, if you have a particular view, you ought to communicate it directly to the company involved. Second, and perhaps more important, even if one were to accept the premise that the minister had made a statement and that it was clear, there is no getting around the fact that what this bill proposes to do is to go back 33 months in history. It attempts to go back three years and implement a policy which was only announced via a media statement some three years ago.

The Charter of Rights has been used in the criminal courts to have charges that have stood for too long dropped. The courts have ruled that if you do not proceed to deal with a charge within a reasonable period of time, then you cannot proceed with the charge. You are required to drop it.

Surely, honourable senators, the business community of Canada is entitled to an obligation that says, if the government announces its intention to implement a policy, and if the announcement is to become the effective date of implementation, there must be some reasonable period of time in which that policy is implemented and put into legislation. Even this scenario stretches credulity. The fact is, in our view, if you can go back three years, in an extreme case you could go back 10 years. You could go a long way using retroactive legislation. The principle is a dangerous one.

• (1600)

Finally, honourable senators, I am comfortable with our decision because of the findings of a task force that looked at this question. The Task Force on the Magazine Industry published its report in 1994. The task force was chaired by Mr. Tassé, the former deputy minister of Justice; and Mr. O'Callaghan, the former publisher of The Edmonton Sun and other publications. That report, which was issued in March 1994, did two things. It called for an excise tax of 80 per cent on the value of advertising in a split run. It called for precisely the same measure as is contained in the current bill. The O'Callaghan-Tassé Task Force also said that Sports Illustrated should be grandfathered. It came out against retroactive legislation.

Honourable senators, first, this amendment seeks to preserve a stated policy of governments on both sides of the house in the last few years; namely, that future split runs should not be allowed. Second, it seeks to do what the task force on the Canadian magazine industry recommended; namely, it seeks to make this bill non-retroactive. Under the amendment, the legislation would go into effect the day it is passed.

Third, it seeks to preserve a position which the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee has held under a variety of chairmen during the 10 years I have been on the committee, and regardless of what party was in power. That stance is that there should be a principle of business law in Canada which states that retroactive legislation, particularly legislation that goes back almost three years, should not be allowed.

Honourable senators, simply put, these are the things that the amendment seeks to do.

Let me make two other comments for those who will make the argument that this bill is a disaster for the Canadian magazine industry. Factually, that is incorrect. The reality is that the Canadian magazine industry has competed with Sports Illustrated split runs for two and one-half years. When we asked whether or not that competition had led to the collapse of any Canadian magazine publications, we were told categorically "no."

Remember that this bill prevents Sports Illustrated from increasing the frequency of the number of split-run editions it produces. It limits them to 12, which they did in the last year. Therefore, it clearly does not increase the level of competition among Canadian magazines, and Canadian magazines have competed successfully against this particular split-run edition for two years. Therefore, that argument holds no water.

As to the argument that if we amend the bill and send it back to the other place, the bill will die on the Order Paper because the Commons will be unable to deal with it in sufficient time before prorogation, I do not believe it. If the other place chooses to adopt our amendment, they can deal with it in a simple motion. What goes back from here is a motion to accept the bill, as amended. It can be dealt with in a matter of 60 seconds in the other place.

Fundamentally, this raises a question that I and other senators have spoken about in this chamber for a long time. Every time we get to a major break in the parliamentary calendar, whether it is December or June, we are repeatedly told that we must do things to keep people in the other place happy, or to keep the government in the other place happy. If honourable senators will check the record of the last year, I have twice said — and I have stated it categorically in writing to members of my own committee — that it is time that we stopped having our agenda driven by the timetable of the other place.

I am sure that some people will advance the timing problem as an argument. In my view — and this is a position that I have held for a long time — this argument is not related to this bill. We in this chamber should take what we believe to be the right legislative action. If it requires that the other place adjust their timetable a bit, so be it. I am tired of being pressured to change my position simply to keep the other place happy.

Honourable senators, this was not a partisan vote. Conservatives and Liberals voted for the amendment and voted against it. The tradition with the Banking Committee is that things seldom, if ever, split along partisan lines. I have outlined why I support the amendments and why I am with the majority. I have outlined the views of the majority with the exception of the trade issue, which some other members on the committee will address.

I hope I have dealt in advance with the arguments of those who oppose this amendment. There is no doubt in my mind that this is not a disaster for the Canadian magazine industry. They have competed successfully with Sports Illustrated for two and one-half years. In fact, they are being protected because the public policy in this bill has been preserved; it stops future split runs. Finally, honourable senators, we should not be stampeded into doing something simply because it makes life easier for people in the other place.

The Banking Committee has done its job, and I recommend that this report be adopted by the Senate in a speedy fashion.

Hon. Donald H. Oliver: Honourable senators, I commend the Honourable Senator Kirby on the excellence of his remarks.

First, I should like to point out that the amendment proposed by the committee in the report which the chairman of the Banking Committee presented on Tuesday contains a technical error.

MOTION IN AMENDMENT ADOPTED ON DIVISION

Hon. Donald H. Oliver: I therefore move:

That the report be not now adopted, but that it be amended by replacing the line:

“on the day this Act is assented to, a particular number of”

with the line:

“on the day of the coming into force of this section, a particular number of”.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, have heard the motion in amendment moved by the Honourable Senator Oliver and seconded by the Honourable Senator Kinsella.

Is it your pleasure to adopt the motion in amendment?

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, Senator Davey is prepared to speak on the report of the committee. Before he does, I should like to indicate and emphasize that the government cannot support the motion moved by Senator Oliver. We do not support the amendment that the committee intended to put forward. Consequently, we cannot support this motion, which is designed to advance the amendment.

What the committee proposes in its report is an amendment that would have give special status to Sports Illustrated magazine. As Senator Davey will undoubtedly explain, Sports Illustrated, though warned by the previous government not to do so, took advantage of new technologies to establish a split-run edition in Canada. It now wishes to be exempt from the provisions of Bill C-103, which would prevent split runs.

The committee's proposed amendment would give Sports Illustrated what it was after. That amendment is contrary to the policy established not only by this government but by the previous Conservative administration. Consequently, we do not support the amendment brought forward by the committee and we cannot support Senator Oliver's motion in amendment, as it would, in effect, go against our intention.

Having made the points that have to be made traditionally, we have allowed such technical defects to be corrected. In the spirit of cooperation and in view of those traditions, we will not oppose this motion to clarify an egregious drafting error.

I do want to make it perfectly clear that, although we will not stand in the way of Senator Oliver's motion, we are adamantly opposed to the report of the committee, and we will be voting against it.

Honourable senators, perhaps you can direct me on the correct procedure. I think Senator Davey wants to speak on the report.

The Hon. the Speaker: Are you ready to proceed, Honourable Senator Berntson?

Hon. Eric Arthur Berntson (Deputy Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, I think it would be in order to speak on the report and the amendment simultaneously. I fully expect that there will be further debate. We are pretty thin on both sides here today, and there may well be other members who want to speak to the amendment before we dispose of it.

Senator Graham: I want to point out that we are not supporting Senator Oliver's motion but we are not opposing it.

• (1610)

Senator Kirby: May I clarify the problem? The amendment drafted by the Law Clerk's office had a technical error in it because of the way it phrased the starting date. Senator Oliver's amendment fixes that error.

Honourable senators, given that Senator Graham has just said — and this is not meant to be a debate between three Nova Scotians, which is what is taking place here — that the government will not oppose Senator Oliver's amendment, it seems to me appropriate that we adopt the amendment now and proceed to debate the other issue.

Senator Berntson: Let it go.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to proceed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Are there any other honourable senators who wish to speak on the amendment? If not, then I will put the amendment to the Senate.

It was moved by the Honourable Senator Oliver, seconded by the Honourable Senator Kinsella:

That the report be not now adopted, but that it be amended by replacing the line:

“on the day this Act is assented to, a particular number of”

with the line

“on the day of the coming into force of this section, a particular number of”.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Some Hon. Senators: On division.

Motion in amendment adopted, on division.

The Hon. the Speaker: We are back to the report of the committee, as amended.

Hon. Keith Davey: Honourable senators, 25 years ago this week, I chaired a committee that conducted a detailed analysis of the mass media. I should like to quote from a book which came along a little later. This is quite a remarkable book entitled The Rainmaker. You can purchase it, if you can find it. I would like to quote from chapter 8, a section called “The Uncertain Mirror”. The reference was to me.

Out of football, out of advertising, out of politics, what next. As a constant observer of all media and newspapers in particular, I had become increasingly concerned over a number of years about media concentration. More and more Canadians were getting news and other information from fewer and fewer people. And as Canadians, most of us viewed what was happening in the world at large through the eyes of American reporters.

On March 18, 1969 I expressed those concerns in a speech I made to the Senate. I proposed a special Senate committee to determine whether we had the press we needed in Canada or simply the press we deserved.

I will not go on and talk about the report except to say that at page 145 you will find a fascinating picture of members of the committee. In that picture, sitting beside me, is my friend Senator Petten. Senator Sparrow was also a member and Senator McElman — who was here yesterday — was one of the key members.

I have two quotations from The Rainmaker relating to the discussion we are about to have: First, I said:

There is something about the media that is turning people off. It has got something to do with society itself and the way it is changing and the way people react to it. If the media turn people off, it is because society at large turns them off. If newspapers are losing friends, it is part of the same process by which Parliament is losing friends, and the courts and the corporations and the schools and the churches.

Remember, it was some number of years ago that I wrote these words. I went on to a section called “The Troubled Magazines.” Here is what I said at that particular time:

Magazines are special. Magazines constitute the only national press we possess in Canada. Magazines add a journalistic dimension which no other medium can provide — depth and wholeness and texture, plus the visual impact of graphic design. Magazines, because of their freedom from daily deadlines, can aspire to a level of excellence that is seldom attainable in other media. Magazines in a different way from any other medium can help foster in Canadians a sense of themselves.

That was true then; it is true today: Magazines in a different way from any other medium can help foster in Canadians a sense of themselves.

Having said that, honourable senators, I shall try to explain my strongly-held position. These were things that we were talking about some number of years ago; this is stuff I am talking about today.

I am taking this opportunity to speak on a very important and urgent issue, Bill C-103. The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce has accepted in principle Bill C-103. This is important because the bill reinforces Canada's magazine policy. Failure to pass the bill now will risk placing our national magazine policy in a legal enforcement vacuum and expose Canadian publishers to unfair competition for advertising revenues.

While the committee accepted all of Bill C-103, it has proposed one important amendment. I am asking the Senate to reject this amendment because I believe it to be fundamentally wrong and to fundamentally contradict the spirit of Bill C-103.

Let me explain, honourable senators. Bill C-103 maintains the integrity of a long-standing government policy to promote the Canadian magazine industry. This policy has had great success, despite Canada's relatively small market size and our dual language community, which renders our own market even smaller.

Canada's magazine policy has its roots in the 1961 Royal Commission on Publications which was led by an esteemed member of this chamber, Senator Gratton O'Leary. The royal commission recognized that advertising revenues are the key to a viable Canadian magazine industry. Senator O'Leary's recommendations in 1961 formed the basis of what is still today a very successful policy. It uses the provisions of the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act to protect the advertising base of genuine Canadian publications.

A loophole that was created in 1993 by a change in technology now threatens to undermine this policy. Bill C-103 will close this loophole, thereby ensuring that the policy continues to be enforced. I am pleased that the committee has approved our legislative approach to closing the loophole.

Criticism of Bill C-103 has been levelled by spokespersons from one of the largest transnational communications empires in the world, Time Warner. There has also been widespread support for the bill from the Canadian Magazine Publishers Association, from Maclean Hunter, from advertisers and from the broader culture and arts community. This bill enjoys widespread support from all political stripes, from members of the previous government, and, of course, the current government.

Let me explain briefly the background to Bill C-103. In 1993, Time Warner believed they had found a way to by-pass Canada's long-established policy. They decided to make use of a loophole in the application of the policy and announced the launch of a split-run edition of Sports Illustrated. In a split-run edition, a publisher uses articles and other editorial content prepared and paid for in the magazine's domestic market and inserts advertising targeted at another market. In the case of Sports Illustrated Canada, the editorial content of the Canadian split-run edition is largely the same as the U.S. edition but contains advertising directed at Canadians. Split-run magazines, with their recycled articles, siphon off advertising revenue from legitimate magazines with original content.

The government responded clearly and unequivocally in 1993. Revenue Canada informed Time Warner that the spirit and intent of Canada's legislation must be respected. The Honourable Perrin Beatty, then the Minister of Communications, stated publicly that the government was committed to upholding its magazine policy. A task force was created in March, 1993 to update enforcement measures and ensure that the policy established in 1965 could still operate effectively in the face of new technology.

I must say just a word or two about that time. I spent too much time badgering the then Leader of the Government in the Senate, Senator Lowell Murray. He greatly influenced much of the positive activity which resulted, and I have great respect for Senator Murray because of that particular activity.

Despite the clearly expressed intentions of the government in 1993 and its methodical approach to solving an enforcement issue, Time Warner decided to begin publishing a split-run edition of Sports Illustrated. I stress that the company knew the intentions of the minister in 1993 and knew the intention of Canada's policy. Other foreign magazine publishers did not imitate or follow Time Warner. They did not try to exploit a temporary loophole.

Now, in 1995, the government has proposed the legal means to close the loophole with Bill C-103. Time Warner, however, is now looking for special treatment. Before the Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, Time Warner argued that Sports Illustrated Canada should be grandfathered, and therefore be given special status under Bill C-103. Time Warner has misconstrued this legislation in suggesting that it is retroactive, and unfairly targets Sports Illustrated Canada. The reality is just the opposite. Only one magazine is seeking special, unique privileges that are not available to any other foreign split-run publishers.

• (1620)

Let me explain that, honourable senators. First, the bill is not retroactive. No company will pay any excise tax for split-run editions until after the coming into force of this act. There will be no tax claimed on activities carried out before Bill C-103 becomes law. Time Warner, therefore, will be allowed to keep its earnings from the Canadian market from the split-run editions of Sports Illustrated Canada that they have published since 1993.

Bill C-103 simply closes a loophole that now exists in the application of a policy. Like any other tax legislation, the new regime should apply equally to all. It will apply from Royal Assent onward, and will not apply retroactively. The amendment proposed by the Senate committee would unfortunately grant special status to Sports Illustrated Canada. A special privilege would be given to this magazine only so that it can continue to publish split-run issues in the future that would be exempt from the tax provisions that apply to everyone else.

Second, let me stress that Bill C-103 does not unfairly target Sports Illustrated Canada. Time Warner was simply the only publisher which attempted to circumvent the spirit and intention of our policy on magazines, so clearly known throughout the publishing world.

A number of other magazines had the technology to exploit a technical loophole in 1993. Instead, they chose voluntarily to respect Canada's policy. Would it be fair to reward Sports Illustrated Canada with a privileged status continuing into the future because they used a loophole that everyone else knew would be temporary? To do so would single out Sports Illustrated Canada from all the other publishers who respected our policy. We cannot, in good conscience, grant Sports Illustrated a privileged status, which is the intention of the Banking Committee's amendment.

My third and final point — perhaps repetitious — deals with a very practical issue. If the amendment is adopted, it will force the legislation to return to the other place. There will be serious delays because the government today, as with the government in 1993, will not propose measures that support split-run publications.

In my opinion, delay caused by this proposed amendment will send the wrong message to Canada's cultural community: That the Government of Canada cannot defend its own cultural policy in the face of a campaign, organized by lobbyists and representatives of large, transnational corporations, which seeks to divert the advertising revenues of Canadian publications.

Bill C-103 as proposed by the government is an effective, balanced and careful response to the problem. The cultural community and former and present ministers have strongly asked that Bill C-103 be passed in its original form.

Therefore I must appeal to honourable senators not to support the amendment. Senator O'Leary's magazine policy still makes sense. It has worked well for 30 years. The amendment proposed to us would seriously harm this policy. I do not need to remind honourable senators of the timing problems that would be caused by the proposed amendment. You are well aware of the pressures that this Parliament is facing as we come to the close of the first session. This bill must be passed without delay if we are to provide the legal authority to close a loophole that now exists in the enforcement of magazine policy.

If we adopt this bill with an amendment, its passage will certainly be delayed because the amendment is so manifestly unfair. The magazine policy enforcement loophole will remain; it will be exploited, and we in this chamber will not have rendered good service.

I urge my colleagues and fellow senators to pass Bill C-103 without amendment.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

On motion of Senator Berntson, debate adjourned.

QUEBEC

MOTION FOR RECOGNITION AS DISTINCT SOCIETY—
DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government), moved:

Whereas the people of Quebec have expressed the desire for recognition of Quebec's distinct society;

(1) the Senate recognize that Quebec is a distinct society within Canada;

(2) the Senate recognize that Quebec's distinct society includes its French-speaking majority, unique culture and civil law tradition;

(3) the Senate undertake to be guided by this reality; and

(4) the Senate encourage all components of the legislative and executive branches of government to take note of this recognition and be guided in their conduct accordingly.

She said: Honourable senators, the purpose of this motion today is to enable the Senate of Canada to join with the House of Commons in moving what we would call a parallel resolution to that being debated in the other place at this time.

I believe it is the view of a great many of the representatives in this chamber that they would wish to have an opportunity, not just to discuss or debate or express their views on this very important issue, but also to be, in the end, part of a parliamentary declaration on the question of the distinct society.

During the Quebec referendum campaign, as all of us know, the Prime Minister of Canada made three commitments: First, to recognize that Quebec forms a distinct society within Canada; second, not to make any constitutional change that affects Quebec without Quebecers' consent; third, to undertake changes to bring services and the decision-making process closer to the citizens.

The motion that we have before us today, honourable senators, is only one part of a more comprehensive package by which the Government of Canada indicates its strong intention to move this country forward, to show progress within our federation, and to fulfil commitments made to all Canadians, and particularly to Quebecers.

The government is delivering on its promises only approximately one month after the Quebec referendum. During the last weeks of that referendum campaign, we all witnessed Canadians from every part of the country expressing their great attachment to the Province of Quebec. These signs came not only from politicians or public figures; they came from the people we represent, who live and work and raise their families in the towns, villages, and cities, and in the vast rural and northern expanses of this land.

All of us, I think, were struck by the importance of this genuine expression by individuals of attachment to Quebec and to Canada. Very clearly, Canadians care about their country. They care about Quebec. They are part of this country, and the same applies to the people of Quebec.

On October 30, Quebecers voted to stay together with other Canadians. They also sent a strong message to the rest of the country, and especially to politicians, that changes are needed. The referendum vote itself undoubtedly was a cliff-hanger. The Government of Canada, being a responsible government, could not, should not, and cannot ignore these messages.

• (1630)

The Prime Minister himself committed to change during the rally in Verdun, Quebec; on national television; at the massive and moving rally in the heart of Montreal on October 27; and again on national television directly following the October 30 vote. This motion on distinct society responds to one of the three commitments that he made.

When the Senate votes and, I hope, supports this motion, it will formally express its acknowledgement of the reality that Quebec is a distinct society, which includes the fact that Quebec has a French-speaking majority, a unique culture and a civil law tradition.

Recognition of Quebec as a distinct society is a natural part of Quebec's and Canada's evolution. Historically, provincial differences have dictated the need for different approaches, remedies and accommodations within our federal system. For example, provincial representation varies in both the House of Commons and the Senate. Three provinces — Manitoba, New Brunswick and Quebec — must print and publish their laws in French and English. The others are not subject to that requirement. Constitutional school rights apply in some but not all provinces. Quebec, Ontario, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Manitoba and Newfoundland must apply those rights, while New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia do not. Quebec, as we have said, has a civil law rather than a common law system. The Canadian federation leaves room for flexibility. In fact, this has always been one of its strengths.

Recognizing the distinctiveness of Quebec within Canada does not take anything away from the rest of the country. Recognition of Quebec's francophone character does not exclude others. On the contrary, it contributes to ensuring the continued evolution of Canada as a unified nation.

Canadians also have a very strong tradition in valuing our minorities and knowing that it is the value we place on those minorities which preserves, protects and promotes our democracy. Nothing in this motion in any way detracts from these values.

Furthermore, the motion takes away no existing or potential aboriginal or treaty rights, including the inherent right to self-government. The government has demonstrated a very real and sincere commitment to ensuring that aboriginal people have the tools for governing themselves. It has kept the promises it made to aboriginal people by tabling the inherent rights policy, and announcing its readiness to negotiate aboriginal jurisdiction and authority in a broad range of key areas, which it is doing with repeated success in various parts of Canada. The recognition of Quebec as a distinct society would have no impact on aboriginal peoples' exercise of their jurisdiction.

Honourable senators, in terms of this discussion, we are talking about a very important statement and a commitment that this house, along with the other House of Parliament, would make to this province; a commitment without which, I believe, Canada cannot be whole. It represents a very important guiding principle for the legislative and executive branches of the federal government as well as for the people of Canada.

At the beginning of my remarks I said that this resolution represents one part of the government's commitment to change as outlined following the referendum. I should like to say a few words on the question of the veto which the government is prepared to exercise on behalf of the provinces by federal legislation.

The Government of Canada proposes to place its veto power, which it exercises through its position in Parliament, at the disposal of the regions. Such a veto would preclude the federal government from supporting an amendment to the Constitution that does not have the support of the regions. Let us be clear that the current veto, requiring seven out of ten provinces with 50 per cent of the population, remains unchanged. The regional veto is an overlay aimed at giving an extra protection to the regions.

By establishing the regional vetoes, the government is delivering on a promise that no change to the Constitution would be made without Quebec's consent. The purpose of the regional veto is to unify, not to divide, and the government has listened carefully to Canadians from all parts of the country on this issue.

Honourable senators, I apologize for being unable during Question Period today to be more specific in my answers to questions by Senator Murray. However, as a result of the consultation and the listening that has taken place, Minister of Justice Allan Rock announced a short while ago that the Government of Canada will propose an amendment to Bill C-110, currently before the House of Commons, that would provide a veto for British Columbia.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Fairbairn: The object of these efforts is to bring Canadians from every region together, not to make them feel left out. Throughout the last week, it has become very clear that the people of British Columbia feel incredibly strongly that their province has attained full regional value. They, along with the people who represent them here in the Senate, particularly those in the government caucus in the other place, have made a very strong case that with its population, its size, its growth and its unique Pacific orientation economically, British Columbia deserves to be designated as a region. The new western region will be comprised of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and western regional approval of constitutional amendments would require two provinces with 50 per cent of the population.

Honourable senators, we will be watching with great interest as this amendment is put forward in the other place. It is our hope that it will form part of the legislation that will be sent to us for discussion next week.

In addition to the motion we have before us today, and Bill C-110, the government has moved forward on transforming the unemployment insurance system in a manner which respects provincial jurisdiction in education and training. The Government of Canada will withdraw from labour market training. It will work in partnership with provinces to eliminate program duplication, and help Canadians find jobs and improve skills needed to enter or achieve progress in the labour force.

Honourable senators, withdrawal does not mean abandonment. It is a recognition of the desire expressed by all Canadians for their governments to become closer to their citizens. The proposed changes in labour market training will clarify the roles and responsibilities of the provinces and the Canadian government.

• (1640)

The three initiatives which the government has proposed constitute a significant first step. They are a realistic approach to the fact that the Quebec premier-in-waiting and the Government of Quebec have indicated that they are not willing to undertake any constitutional discussions.

As I said earlier, honourable senators, there will be a first ministers conference on the amending formula in April 1997, and constitutional amendments can be considered at that time. The proposals of today are seen as a bridge carrying us through until that moment when we must undertake that review as part of our constitutional obligations.

Honourable senators, on the eve of the Quebec referendum, we were all very concerned that we would lose our country. That political reality shocked us. It forced us to look within ourselves, and to come to grips with the deep emotions that we too often ignore or suppress or feel awkward in expressing. Nevertheless, we did express them quite openly. They were genuine. What was at stake was the very existence of Canada.

Now that Quebecers have voted no, some other Canadians may feel that perhaps the issue is not that pressing, that there is time to consider it in various different ways. I would suggest, honourable senators, that that is the route of complacency and benign neglect. Let us not forget that separation, pure and simple, is the current Quebec government's agenda.

Honourable senators, I am deeply convinced that this country can live united while showing flexibility in the way in which our federation functions. This motion is one of the steps taken to ensure that we will have a stronger and more modern Canada, one that works better for all of its citizens regardless of where they live; one which truly offers the climate in which to grow even stronger, in terms of economic opportunity and social values of fairness, compassion and generosity.

We have still a long way to go, honourable senators, but as a beginning, this motion declares our intention to try together to make this unique experiment flourish. It is a commitment on the part of the Senate so that the whole Parliament of Canada will share in this undertaking. I therefore ask all of my colleagues to join me in support of this motion.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): I move adjournment of the debate.

Hon. H.A. Olson: Honourable senators, I understand that it is up to the Leader of the Opposition to make the next speech. However, if he does not intend to make that speech until next Tuesday, I wish to advise my honourable colleagues that other parts of Canada have a great deal of interest in this motion, especially the amendment that has been made by the Minister of Justice. If you wish to adjourn the debate now, four or five days will elapse before we get back to this motion. In that time, as has been my experience many times with this type of situation, the wrong spin can be put on what is being done.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Please proceed. I will allow Senator Olson to speak.

Senator Olson: I yield to the Leader of the Opposition to make the first speech because the Leader of the Government has moved the motion. I have no problem with that. I am merely puzzled that he is not ready to comment on the speech that was just made.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I am not ready because I have just heard my colleague's speech. However, if Senator Olson wishes to speak, I am willing, as are others, to hear what he has to say.

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, my colleague has been saying all afternoon to me that he will have questions, but he will not ask for an adjournment. I would very much like to listen to Senator Olson because I believe in what he has just said. If you speak three or four days later, the spin doctors will go before you. I like that expression. It is new to me.

I would not like this to be taken as a precedent. In the British tradition, if one does something one day, the next day it is a precedent. I agree that Senator Lynch-Staunton should speak next because that is the custom. However, if he wants to delay making his speech, that is fine, too, but it should not create a precedent.

Senator Olson: I agree that it will be a precedent. I was not asking for any precedent to be set. Senator Lynch-Staunton has indicated to me that he is not ready to speak at this time. I have no problem with that.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: Honourable senators, when I recognized Senator Lynch-Staunton, Senator Nolin rose at the same time. I understand he wishes to ask a question. I will recognize Senator Nolin, and then, as I understand it, Senator Lynch-Staunton will yield to Senator Olson.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, the resolution you presented is, without a doubt, central to the concerns of Quebecers. I intend to speak to the resolution next week.

I do have a few questions. In your comments you referred to a parliamentary statement consisting of two parallel statements. Why did the government not take the legislative route, which is the usual approach in Parliament? Why two parallel statements, even if they are identical?

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, may I indicate to Senator Nolin that I believe the resolution or the motion before the Senate today is quite authentic. It was the choice of the government initially to move this resolution in the House of Commons where individual members are elected, and thus reflect the wishes of the country.

I must be candid with the honourable senator. Perhaps my choice would have been a joint resolution, which has been used in the past. However, in this case, a different choice was made. Indeed, I was encouraged, and readily agreed, as I indicated at an early stage to the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, to bring forward our own resolution and pass it in concert with that of the House of Commons.

[Translation]

Senator Nolin: Honourable senators, paragraph 4 of the resolution reads as follows:

The Senate encourage all components of the legislative and executive branches of government to take note of this recognition and be guided in their conduct accordingly.

If this had been a bill, the judicial branch would have been obliged to take note of it. Do you not see this as an oversight, considering the importance of this decision?

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Certainly not to my knowledge, Senator Nolin. The guidance I received in putting forward this motion was to have the resolution in precisely the same form as that introduced in the other place.

• (1650)

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, in her speech, the Leader of the Government in the Senate made reference to the veto bill that is now in the legislative process, going beyond the item of the distinct society resolution that we are debating here. It has been reflected upon and articulated by some that the federal Parliament is fettering, as it were, the exercise of its veto. Effectively, it is the federal veto that is exercised, but it could be seen to be harnessed, or fettered, or subject to this legislation.

What does that do in terms of the duty of Parliament, from time to time — as it does with all legislation that we deal with concerning matters of amending the Constitution of Canada — to seek out as best it can what constitutes the federal and Canadian public interest? That is when Parliament exercises its best judgment as to what constitutes the public interest of Canada. Will that responsibility that Parliament has, both in ordinary legislation and in amendment of the Constitution process, be minimized or lessened so that instead of exercising what would constitute the Canadian public interest, it will be taking into consideration what would constitute the public interest of a region such as these regions — that is, if this is how the amendment will be brought forward.

What are your thoughts on the need for Parliament to be able to exercise its judgment as to what constitutes the Canadian public interest, which can be radically different from what would constitute the public interest of Atlantic Canada; or what would constitute the public interest of Quebec; or what would constitute the public interest of Ontario; or what would constitute the public interest of Western Canada, or the three provinces of the West and the province of British Columbia?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, first, this is not a constitutional amendment; it is a first step, or a bridge, as it has been described, leading us toward the obligation set forth in the Constitution to have a review of the amending process in 1997.

The Parliament of Canada, with its elected representatives in the House of Commons from every corner of the country, has its daily obligation and responsibility to reflect the public interest of the country and the people in the country.

In terms of this bill, the honourable senator used the word “fettered”. It is really more of a loan within this period of time. If an amendment were to be approached, for whatever reason, then fundamentally the current amending process which has been in place since the early 1980s is there. It is fundamental to any changes.

The federal government has said that, in the interim, before any consideration would be given to reviewing or adjusting that process, there will be an overlay offered by the federal government. The people in the regions will have an opportunity to have their views met. They, too, are Canadian public interests, but they will have the opportunity to have their views met if there is an abiding concern over anything that might be envisaged in this kind of amendment.

Anyone in this chamber would know that if there is a region in Canada that finds a particular change for its own people so overwhelmingly offensive, the central government — that is, the federal government — will have to have very severe thoughts about ever pursuing it.

This particular proposal simply says to the regions, and the variations of combinations within them, that “Your view counts as well, and we want to be influenced by it.”

Senator Kinsella: How does the government envisage determining what constitutes the will of the different regions? For example, what means will be utilized to determine what constitutes the will of Atlantic Canada as a region?

Senator Fairbairn: Very early on when this proposition was first put forward, Senator Murray asked me whether or not that would be specifically stated in the bill and/or defined in the bill. It is not.

What the government has said, and what the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice have said, is that the regular process of deciding these kinds of things would be through a legislative discretion within provinces. The other possibilities are through the government of a province and through a referendum, for which some provinces such as my province of Alberta, the province of British Columbia and others, have laws already on the books. This took place at the time of negotiations for the Charlottetown accord. They have a legal obligation within their own provinces to express themselves on these issues through referenda. There are a variety of methods whereby this could be exercised.

Hon. Gérald-A. Beaudoin: Honourable senators, it is true that this is not a constitutional proposal. I agree entirely in that regard. It is a proposal under a legislative form. However, the fact is that since the next federal-provincial conference on the Constitution must be convened before April 17, 1997 — which is not that far away; it is a matter of 16 months — does the Leader of the Government in the Senate not think that what we are doing now is the first act of a very important conference in 1997? We are adding, to a formula of amendment that has been there since 1982, a legislative process as they have done in some other provinces with respect to referenda.

The federal Parliament, on authority, may deal with the National Assembly or with the people of Quebec by referendum under this formula. Does the minister not think that we must take into account that what we are doing now is a very important preliminary to what will take place in April 1997? Does she not think that even if there is a very substantial difference between that and a constitutional amendment, the fact is that, ideally, to save this country, we should now act in such a way as if we were very close to revisiting the amending formula?

• (1700)

The argument put forward by my colleague Senator Kinsella is important because the veto of the federal authority is a prerogative. To a certain extent, it is up to the federal authority to bind itself. However, we must take into account that we are already discussing some feasible amendment to the amending formula for 1997.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, in response to Senator Beaudoin, who is far wiser on these issues than am I, this is a first step along the way of suggestions as to what will be the formal review in 1997. There may be many more when the time for the conference arrives, and when the first ministers are around the table, involving whoever else they wish to involve. These legislative proposals that are being put forward at this time will quite probably be part of that discussion. However, they will not be the only part of that discussion. It will be a very open discussion with, perhaps, many other variations — perhaps better variations — placed on the table at that time.

I repeat, this is a bridge. Essentially, it is in response to an honourable commitment that was made. The Prime Minister, as he was addressing that commitment, considered that in this interim period the other parts of Canada also might benefit from that kind of an assurance during the period of time prior to the 1997 meeting.

Senator Nolin: Honourable senators, the Leader of the Government in the Senate referred to the speech of Mr. Chrétien given in Verdun. I want to remind honourable senators as to why we are discussing the veto now. This is what he said:

[Translation]

To those who believe, as our opponents claim, that constitutional changes that would affect Quebec could be made without the consent of the Government of Quebec and the National Assembly, I say that will not happen. You have my formal commitment as a Quebecer, as a Canadian and as the Prime Minister of Canada.

[English]

Is it the provinces which will decide how they want to manifest the fact that they do not consent to a change in the Constitution? Is it the federal authority which will decide if it will be by referendum? Or will it be the National Assembly of Quebec or the Government of Quebec?

This is an important question, because the Prime Minister stated clearly in Verdun that there would be no change to the Constitution which would affect Quebec's powers without the consent of the government or the National Assembly. I now see some flaws in this proposal.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, when we are in debate on the bill next week, we can probably get into more of the details than we can today.

I believe one of the efforts guiding the Prime Minister was to have flexibility in terms of choice in regard to this particular proposal. As I say, we can get into that in greater detail next week.

The Prime Minister has noted in his comments in the House of Commons as well that he has never said that it is the "preferred choice." However, he has made the point that, in the case of constitutional amendments, the position of the legislative assembly of a province has been very important in those kinds of decisions.

Senator Olson: I appreciate the position taken by the Leader of the Opposition with respect to what has just taken place. I do not know whether I should have known this or not; however, I did not know that this amendment to the resolution was to be made today. I am not complaining about that. However, it surprises me, and perhaps it is a pleasant surprise.

I know, too, that it is expected of me as a senator from Alberta to raise this matter. These kind of things can have a domino effect. Indeed, to some extent that has already happened — although not so severely in Alberta, if I may say so, as what we have been told has happened in British Columbia by some senators from that province. I refer to Quebec receiving a veto and the rest of us going by way of regions and, indeed, the four western provinces.

Even before the announcement was made by the government concerning the amendment, it was my opinion that British Columbia did, de facto, have a veto on the basis of the Prime Minister's announcement. I am not trying to belittle that. I am saying that I am certain that if British Columbia had complained about an amendment or about the amending formula being proposed, the Government of Canada would not have lent its authority to veto an amendment. There is no question in my mind about that.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Why have the bill, then?

Senator Olson: Why have the bill? It is very simple; surely the Leader of the Opposition can understand that the Prime Minister made a commitment during the referendum debate.

Let me tell the honourable senator one or two things about that referendum campaign that went on in Quebec.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I was there.

Senator Olson: I hope I do not hurt somebody's feelings by saying this —

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I was there while he was out west, raising funds for the Liberal Party.

Senator Olson: He does that so very well, which is why we like him to come to our province.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: He did it during the referendum campaign, before he showed up in the last week of the campaign in a panic.

Senator Olson: No, he did not show up in a panic, in any way, shape or form. What he did was make certain commitments about which my honourable friend knows.

I can tell honourable senators this: There were millions of people in what is flippantly referred to as the "Rest of Canada" who stood helplessly by, frustrated that they could not get involved in what was about to happen, or what might lead to the breakup of their country. They did not like it. They expected the Prime Minister to speak and to act for them, and he did. Is that not clear? It is completely clear to me. He made some commitments.

I should now like to talk about what is involved in the motion that is before us and, indeed, the proposed amendment in the other place. I think that, de facto, Alberta has a veto, if by themselves they want to use it. First, it has that de facto veto because of having a majority of the population in the three Prairie provinces.

Senator Berntson: Go and stick it to Saskatchewan and Manitoba, then.

Senator Olson: Everybody wants to get ahead of themselves. Wait until I explain it.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: We want you to catch up.

Senator Olson: I have caught up. I think they have a veto. I guess that perhaps Alberta's population is greater than both Manitoba's and Saskatchewan's populations put together.

Senator Berntson: Right on.

• (1710)

Senator Olson: That satisfies one part of the requirement. I would bet anything that if Saskatchewan or Manitoba vociferously disagreed to an amendment, it would not be passed, regardless of Alberta. Indeed, the Parliament of Canada could lend them its veto.

I hope honourable senators opposite will make a speech on this. Surely they have a view. I am trying to explain a few things from Alberta's point of view. Quite frankly, I do not think you understand. Alberta, and indeed the other two Prairie provinces effectively have a veto.

It is not terribly worrisome to me, because I do not think it will ever be tested between now and April of 1997. At that time, there will be a formal meeting of all 11 governments of the provinces and the territories to deal with this subject. The Leader of the Opposition in the Senate knows that.

An Hon. Senator: Why have it?

Senator Olson: The honourable senator asks, "Why have it?" He would not have said that a month or more ago when we were in the middle of the campaign. Of that I am certain. The answer to "why have it" was to try to do what he could — and the Prime Minister did it well, apparently — to see that the referendum did not get a majority for the "yes" side.

The Prime Minister was asked by the leader of the Reform Party. "If it came out 50 per cent plus one, are you going to just acquiesce to that and that is the end of the debate?" He asked that question because many people in Western Canada were asking how many more referendums it would take. It was a perfectly legitimate question. I know why he did it. I understand a little bit about politics in Western Canada, too. It was a good question from his point of view.

The Prime Minister's answer was clear. He was not ready to break up the country for 50 per cent plus one. Well, it happened to be 50 per cent minus something like 50,000 votes.

All I want to say now is that I do not believe we need to raise the spectre of this domino effect, that Alberta ought to be next. Why not Alberta? British Columbia's population is slightly larger than Alberta's. I think Alberta has 2.7 million people, while British Columbia has about 3.8 million. That is going up, by the way, at the rate of 8,000 a month.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: They are all leaving Alberta.

Senator Olson: I should advise my honourable friends that Alberta's population is increasing rapidly too, in case they did not know.

In any event, who will get ahead?

I do not think that we should let a few radio commentators do to Albertans what I believe happened in British Columbia. Two or three of them raised their rhetoric and heightened the attitude amongst the population. It is just a terrible thing.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Does Premier Harcourt have a radio program?

Senator Olson: I do not care what he has; I am giving you my view.

I believe that British Columbia had a de facto veto under the proposition made by the Prime Minister, even before it was amended. Some people did not agree with me. I guess Premier Harcourt was one of them. He has a political problem in B.C. that I do not have. I understand that pretty clearly.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: But your party has. That is why you caved in and allowed them in.

Senator Olson: I do not think accommodating the people in any part of this country, including British Columbia, should be regarded as a cave-in.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: You caved in.

Senator Olson: No, we did not.

One principle of politics — something that the Conservatives never learned — is that you should listen to the people.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: We consulted.

Senator Berntson: You should listen to them before.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: We had 10 premiers on-side.

An Hon. Senator: Order, order!

Senator Simard: "Order, order"? He makes sense.

Senator Olson: Honourable senators, I wanted a few minutes to explain this domino effect. I know what spin doctors can do to these kinds of things if they get started on the wrong foot. I want them to know that I believe Alberta has an effective de facto veto, in the same way as Ontario or Quebec or British Columbia has now.

I hope it does not get any further than that.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

On motion of Senator Lynch-Staunton, debate adjourned.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Government Notices of Motions:

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(h), I move:

That when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, December 12, 1995, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

PRIVATE BILL

EVANGELICAL MISSIONARY CHURCH (CANADA WEST DISTRICT)
REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs on Bill S-12, to amalgamate the Alberta corporation known as the Missionary Church with the Canada corporation known as the Evangelical Missionary Church, Canada West District, presented in the Senate on Thursday, December 7, 1995.

Hon. Gérald-A. Beaudoin moved the adoption of the report.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: When shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Leonard J. Gustafson: With leave, now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Some Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, there has been discussion between the leadership on both sides, and I would ask that all orders, reports, motions and inquiries stand.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, December 12, 1995, at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, December 12, 1995

The Senate met at 2:00 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

PAGES EXCHANGE PROGRAM WITH HOUSE OF COMMONS

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, before I proceed to call Senators' Statements, I wish to inform you that we have with us today two new House of Commons Pages who have been chosen to participate in the exchange program with the Senate for the week of December 11 to December 15.

I should like to introduce Peter Holland from Montreal, Quebec. Peter is pursuing studies in international business at Carleton University.

The other Page is Nancy Lobb, and she is also studying international business at Carleton University. She is from Holmesville, Ontario.

SENATORS' STATEMENTS

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

PROLIFERATION OF FRENCH TELEVISION STATIONS IN ONTARIO—COMMENTS IN MEDIA

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, a series of articles in The Toronto Sun on December 5, 6 and 7 severely criticized the spending of public money on French television in the Greater Toronto Area by Radio-Canada, or CBC, and TFO, Télévision française de l'Ontario, an arm of the provincial educational TVO network.

The Toronto Sun has used, or I should say "misused," Bureau of Broadcast Measurements, or BBM ratings, to make their point that French-language television in Toronto is a waste of money and should be drastically reduced in the name of budget restrictions.

The Toronto Sun editorial of December 7, entitled "Pull the Plug," argues that there are too many French-language television services in Toronto: TVO, TFO, Radio-Canada, CBC and RDI. RDI is the French equivalent of Newsworld. In the editorial, they make the following assertions:

First, we're officially bilingual (fine this isn't Quebec.)

What a red herring of a statement!

Honourable senators, I ask: Is bilingualism as referred to in the editorial only for Canadians living in Quebec? Surely not! Canada has two official languages and the federal policies to implement that reality. Canadians expect their federal government to serve them in the official language of their choice, and CBC Radio-Canada, our national broadcaster, has a policy, approved some 20 years ago, which states that the publicly funded broadcaster must serve official language minorities wherever and whenever there are 500 or more living in a community. That policy goes for the English in Quebec and the French speakers outside Quebec.

As for TFO/TVO, The Toronto Sun knows very well that is an excellent educational television network in Ontario and that TFO, the French arm of TVO, averages 175,000 viewers every week.

Further, The Toronto Sun editorial implies that bilingualism "is not an argument that impresses anyone any more." We in Canada just lived through a difficult referendum in which our Quebec compatriots reaffirmed their belief in a united Canada. One would think The Toronto Sun would show more understanding and generosity towards their French-speaking citizens in Toronto and elsewhere in Ontario.

In the same editorial, The Toronto Sun argued that these services of French-speaking television are mainly aimed at larger French markets like Ottawa-Hull, and they make the comment that the "status quo is untenable."

Honourable senators, if one were to follow the logic of The Toronto Sun, we should cut budgets to French television in Ontario according to an undetermined formula where numbers would so warrant. What a silly proposal in a province as large as Ontario, where the French-speaking population is spread over most of its territory.

To get an idea of the position of The Toronto Sun, the editorial is accompanied by a cartoon that promotes the idea of expatriating French-speaking Canadians from Toronto to Quebec. There should be no need, in their view, for French-speaking services any more since the savings of closing down French television could be used to buy French-speaking Ontarians a house in Quebec and move them to that province.

Honourable senators, I have only one thing to say: Shame on The Toronto Sun for advocating such a deportation of their French-speaking fellow citizens living in Toronto. Shame on them!

HEALTH

ADVERTISING OF TOBACCO PRODUCTS— MEASURES ANNOUNCED BY MINISTER

Hon. Mira Spivak: Honourable senators, I would commend the Minister of Health for the very strong proposals she presented in the other place yesterday to control tobacco products in Canada.

As the minister acknowledged, the Tobacco Products Control Act does not have the flexibility of either the Hazardous Products Act or the Food and Drug Act regulating products that cost far fewer lives.

Well before the Supreme Court annulled key elements of the TPCA, many health advocates thought it required substantial amendment or replacement. The minister has now proposed new legislation to incorporate many features of the Hazardous Products Act and the Food and Drug Act and to restore the complete ban on advertising of tobacco products which the Supreme Court struck down.

This is good news. I am glad the government is providing the evidence to support its position on advertising. I am also pleased that the minister is addressing point-of-sale advertising, access to cigarettes by young people, packaging and labelling, sponsorship of sports and cultural events by tobacco companies, and the very elements of tobacco products.

There will, no doubt, be protests from tobacco manufacturers and from sporting and arts organizations that rely on tobacco sponsorship. I can only say: Do not be deterred. Do not bend. Other measures should be considered to replace the funding that tobacco companies have provided to these organizations such as cigarette taxes or other industry funding. Perhaps Canada's banks might be interested, given their current profit picture.

In her blueprint, the minister also cited some very telling statistics that I hope her colleague the Minister of Finance will take to heart. Federal revenue from excise taxes and duties on tobacco products in fiscal 1993-94 was $2.6 billion. However, the societal costs attributable to smoking that year were $11 billion, more than four times as much. Of that amount, $3 billion was spent directly on health care. The remaining $8 billion was due to lost productivity.

These are not statistics a finance minister can afford to ignore. What can he do about those billions of health care dollars paid every year by governments, and the billions more lost to a productive economy? As the Health Minister's blueprint said:

Higher prices are a very important disincentive to smoking, especially for youth. An effective means of raising prices is through taxation.

I sincerely hope that the strong tobacco control measures proposed yesterday by the Minister of Health will, next spring, find their way into a bill which is just as strong. She has my support. I also hope that the Minister of Finance will see the wisdom of the health minister's blueprint and again raise tobacco taxes in the next budget.

JUSTICE

POLITICAL NON-INVOLVEMENT IN POLICE INVESTIGATIONS—STATEMENT OF MINISTER TO MEDIA

Hon. Marjory LeBreton: Honourable senators, I rise to put on record shocking revelations regarding the Minister of Justice, Mr. Allan Rock, as reported in yesterday's Globe and Mail that, within days of being elected in 1993, he alerted the RCMP to allegations that he had heard about Progressive Conservatives and Swiss bank accounts. He stated:

"I have had the practice...as long as I have been in this job, that if anybody comes to me with information, implicating anyone else in wrongdoing or suggesting any such thing, then my practice is to pass that on to the RCMP."

Then, after denying that he was aware that his department had sent a letter to Swiss authorities naming former prime minister Mulroney, he continues:

"Politicians should not be involved in police investigations."

However, that statement is immediately contradicted when Mr. Rock states:

"Whenever I received any information of alleged wrongdoing, I passed it on, and in this particular instance that you are asking about, where we now know there is a police investigation, I did not now there was a police investigation under way and didn't know about the letter of request to a foreign government."

This, two years later, I might add. The Globe and Mail story continues:

On the specific issue of whether and when Mr. Rock spoke to the RCMP about the allegations, the minister said yesterday —

And again there is a contradiction:

"I don't think it is appropriate for me to communicate to others, and particularly publicly, the information that I may have given the RCMP, about information that came to me concerning such matters."

The Globe and Mail reports that the minister said that, in such instances, it was his practice to alert his informants that he had spoken to the RCMP so that they would not be surprised.

The most shocking statement of all, however, is this one out of the mouth of the Minister of Justice when he said:

"I have never had an instance occur where I have passed information on and heard back from the RCMP in any way whatsoever... There is more than one circumstance in which I have given information to the RCMP...and I have never had a call back from the RCMP."

Mr. Rock is the Minister of Justice, and as such is the protector — one would hope — of the rights of individuals and the administration of justice for all. In his statement, he says, "as long as I have been in this job." It begs the question: To what job is he referring? He says, "Politicians should not be involved in police investigations," even though he calls his informants to alert them of his referral to the RCMP.

This is shocking and unacceptable. We have a Minister of Justice, the protector, supposedly, of our rights and justice system, who admits that he is a police informer.

What are Canadians to think? There is something seriously wrong here, and the Canadian public should be gravely concerned. The Minister of Justice owes us all an explanation.

MANHUNT IN BRITISH COLUMBIA—
REINSTATEMENT OF DEATH PENALTY

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, I recently had the opportunity of meeting with Ms Cheryl Smith, aunt of Tanya Smith, the young Abbotsford woman who was recently murdered in British Columbia. I spoke with Ms Smith in regard to her sincere concerns about the justice system in Canada.

I am sure many of you have heard the horrific circumstances that led to the death of Tanya Smith on October 14 of this year. While walking with a friend near the MSA hospital in Abbotsford, British Columbia, Tanya was abducted and murdered by a man who later dumped her body into the Vedder River near Chilliwack, B.C. A province-wide manhunt is under way in British Columbia to find and capture Tanya's murderer, who has spent the last two months taunting police.

Obviously, the person who murdered Tanya is a sick and dangerous individual. When captured, he should spend the rest of his life in prison. This is the expectation of most Canadians and the wish of the Smith family.

In our discussion, Ms Smith emphasizes that, once this murderer is captured and brought to justice, she wants him put away for life with no chance of parole. However, she is disappointed that the government and the Minister of Justice, Allan Rock, is not willing to make the necessary changes to ensure that people who commit such crimes are not eligible for parole. In fact, Liberal Member of Parliament John Nunziata introduced a private member's bill that would have addressed part of Ms Smith's concerns. However, the government, including the Prime Minister and the Justice Minister, Mr. Rock, voted against these changes.

Unfortunately, we cannot do anything to lessen the loss and the pain felt by those who knew and loved Tanya Smith. Tanya's murder is a true tragedy. However, we can do something in her memory that will help to protect Canadians from these types of criminals. I know that families across Canada, including the family of Tanya Smith, believe that the government is not doing enough to protect our children from these types of criminals. Thus, I implore the government and the Minister of Justice to introduce real, substantive, measures, not symbolic tinkering, to amend the law and protect our children from this evil. Even the consideration of reinstatement of capital punishment is foremost in the minds of the families of victims right across this country.

Honourable senators, the majority of Canadians want the reinstatement of capital punishment, but governments have failed to act in that direction to protect the children of our country. I would urge that some action be taken immediately.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

AUDITOR GENERAL ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Hon. Pat Carney, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources, presented the following report:

Tuesday, December 12, 1995

The Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources has the honour to present its

NINETEENTH REPORT

Your Committee, to which was referred the Bill C-83, An Act to amend the Auditor General Act, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Wednesday, December 6, 1995, examined the said Bill and has agreed to report the same without amendment.

Respectfully submitted,

PAT CARNEY, P.C.
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: When shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Graham, bill placed on Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(h), I move:

That when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Wednesday, December 13, 1995, at 1:30 p.m.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 3, 1995-96

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-116, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Public Service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1996.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

On motion of Senator Graham, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 57(1)(f), bill placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

NATIONAL PROTECTED AREAS STRATEGY

TO AUTHORIZE ENERGY, THE ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES COMMITTEE TO EXTEND DATE OF FINAL REPORT—NOTICE OF MOTION

Hon. Pat Carney: Honourable senators, I give notice that tomorrow, Wednesday, December 13, 1995, I shall move:

That, notwithstanding the order of reference adopted by the Senate on Wednesday, April 27, 1994, the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources, which was authorized to undertake a study of the policy options available to the government to complete the network of pristine areas that represent Canada's natural regions and the creation of a national protected areas strategy and to make recommendations thereon, have power to present its final report no later than Sunday, March 31, 1996, and

That, notwithstanding usual practices, if the Senate is not sitting when the report of the committee is completed, the committee shall deposit its report with the Clerk of the Senate, and said report shall thereupon be deemed to have been tabled in this chamber.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Hon. Donald H. Oliver, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications have power to sit at three o'clock in the afternoon on Wednesday, December 13, 1995, even though the Senate may then be sitting, and that rule 95(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

ABORIGINAL PEOPLES

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Aboriginal Peoples have the power to sit at three-thirty in the afternoon today, Tuesday, December 12, 1995, even though the Senate may then be sitting, and that rule 95(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

JUSTICE

DAMAGE TO PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS—NOTICE OF INQUIRY

Hon. Anne C. Cools: Honourable senators, pursuant to rules 56(1) and (2), and 57(2), I give notice that, on Tuesday next, I will call the attention of the Senate to the frequent reports in the national and international media, including varied allegations naming the former Prime Minister, the Right Honourable Brian Mulroney; the Minister of Justice, the Honourable Allan Rock; Justice lawyer Kimberly Prost; former Premier the Honourable Frank Moores; the Royal Canadian Mounted Police; Airbus Industrie SA; Georgio Pelossi; diplomats and others, being matters that have become an aggressive and shameful public spectacle; and to the handling of these matters; and to the erosion of parliamentary process, and to the damage caused to parliamentary government, to the Prime Minister's Office, to the principle of ministerial responsibility, to Parliament, and to senators, including myself, who voted on Bill C-129, the bill to privatize Air Canada, on August 4, 1988, in the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce; and to the belief that Parliament, in the interest of public confidence, should take cognizance of these matters, and not leave them to conjecture, speculation and the media, but instead take these matters into Parliament's consideration.

QUESTION PERIOD

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SEARCH AND RESCUE HELICOPTERS REPLACEMENT PROGRAM—STATEMENT OF REQUIREMENTS— REQUEST FOR ANSWER

Hon. Gerald J. Comeau: Honourable senators, my question is for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. It follows upon a question raised by my colleague Senator Forrestall last month.

Could the minister please inform this chamber of the statement of requirements for the purchase of 50 new search and rescue helicopters, those which will replace the Labradors, as announced by her colleague on November 8?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I have forwarded all the questions of Senator Forrestall and Senator Comeau to the Department of National Defence in order to obtain that information. I have not yet received a reply.

Senator Comeau: Would the leader please ask the Minister of Defence to speed up the request? There is much interest. Obviously, the tenders will be called soon.

At the same time, would the Leader of the Government ask the Department of National Defence when public tenders for the replacement of the Sea Kings will be called?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I would be pleased to do that.

COMMUNICATIONS

RADIO CANADA INTERNATIONAL—FUTURE PROSPECTS FOR CONTINUANCE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Donald H. Oliver: Honourable senators, my question relates to Radio Canada International. Can the Leader of the Government in the Senate inform us as to the current state of Radio Canada International and what the government's plans are in relation to its continuance?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I believe the corporation is prepared to make an announcement on that issue. I would just as soon wait until that has been done before I respond in detail to the honourable senator's question.

Senator Oliver: Honourable senators, if the answer is that the government will no longer support RCI, is the Leader of the Government prepared to go to bat in cabinet to try to save this important agency?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, leaving the cabinet aside, Senator Oliver will know that this government, and governments before it, have respected the arm's length principles laid out in the Broadcasting Act. Let us wait to see what the corporation has to say. At that time I will consider whether I can go any further than that, although I probably will be unable to do so.

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: One of the things that characterizes this country is its international reputation.

During my time in the House of Commons, I always vigorously defended Radio Canada International, which has earned this country a world-wide reputation. Radio Canada International is listened to everywhere in the world, and it is respected everywhere by people who want to get news other than what they can get by tuning into the Voice of America or the BBC.

Let me assure the minister that Canadians abroad have always been proud, not only to listen to Radio Canada International but also to hear what others have to say about it.

[English]

I understand the minister's intelligent approach with respect to an arm's length principle. However, there is more to consider than that. Radio Canada International serves our national interests abroad. Therefore, I would join with anyone in this place who would try to convey to the minister our strong support for Radio Canada International. I, for one, would like to impress on the minister that many senators are strong defenders of the glory of Canada abroad. Everything feasible should be done to keep Radio Canada International.

Will the minister convey to whoever is concerned our strong views in this regard?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I would be pleased to do that.

NATIONAL FINANCE

MEETING OF FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL MINISTERS— DISCUSSION OF POSSIBLE NATIONAL DEBT MANAGEMENT PLAN— GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, noting the profound desire for change demonstrated in the referendum, on November 3 the Honourable Jean Charest asked the Minister of Finance the following question:

I wonder whether the Minister of Finance might not use this opportunity to put forward a national plan to the country to eliminate the public deficit and debt with objectives we could all support and joint deadlines and whether now is not a singular time to do so for the benefit of the country as a whole.

In response, Mr. Charest was told that this subject had been discussed at two recent meetings of finance ministers. The Minister of Finance stated:

I agree with him totally about what must be done, namely, drawing up a federal-provincial master plan with very clear objectives of consolidating public finances at both levels of government.

Can the Leader of the Government in the Senate advise honourable senators whether the Minister of Finance will be actively pursuing such a national debt management plan as advocated by the Honourable Jean Charest at this week's meeting of finance ministers? When does the government expect to move beyond discussions and announce a joint plan to the country in order to return stability to our financial and investment communities so that jobs can be created?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators will know that the agenda of ministers of finance, both federal and provincial, will undoubtedly be a broad one. I am sure a discussion of deficits and debt will arise.

Within the past few days, the Minister of Finance has made clear the federal government's position on its own deficit reduction program, which is on track. Indeed, he indicated an extension of the three-year plan. I am sure he will be interested to hear the views and the reports of his colleagues from across the country on their plans.

DEBT AND DEFICIT MANAGEMENT—EVALUATION OF INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, I have risen in this place on numerous occasions to ask questions of the Leader of the Government in the Senate as to why 3 per cent of the GDP was picked as an acceptable level of deficit. On many occasions, she has said that this was a figure acceptable to world financial markets. We now see that the government has had to back off and go to 2 per cent of GDP as an acceptable level of deficit.

When will the government start dealing seriously with the deficit in this country? It is eroding confidence in the region from which I come. It is eroding investment from outside the country, as well as from within. This is because definitive action is not being taken.

It appears that the federal government is trying to hide behind the actions which have been forced upon the people of the provinces of Ontario and Alberta. It is hoping that it can use those actions as a smoke screen so that it does not look so bad in dealing with the finances of this country, and doing what has to be done to create jobs. When will this action to deal with the deficit be taken?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, Senator St. Germain makes a pretty good speech. However, I do not agree with him.

Senator St. Germain: Thank goodness you do not agree with me!

Senator Fairbairn: I would like to point out to Senator St. Germain two or three details.

The federal government has put together its deficit reduction plan, which is the first plan in years to contain targets which have been reached. Indeed, the targets have been surpassed. It has set out these targets in an effort to cut the deficit in a systematic and realistic way, while at the same time leaving the federal government able to provide the services that Canadians need.

The reason for the 2-per-cent level is that the government is being extremely successful in what it is doing.

Senator St. Germain: That is because it had no choice.

Senator Fairbairn: As far as the international community is concerned, there is support for Canada's record. The fact is that Canada does not simply talk about reducing its deficit — it is darned well reducing the deficit. That is happening on track, and better than ever contemplated, and enables us to go even further. That is the one way to help create an economic climate in this country which will create jobs and, ultimately, bring down the debt.

Senator St. Germain: Honourable senators, why is it that the Japanese are currently reassessing their position as far as investing in our foreign debt is concerned, and the dollar has dropped to about 72.4 cents? Is this the result of good management? Is this because you have taken the proper steps at the right time? Quit trying to fool the world. You cannot fool everyone. The IMF told them an acceptable level of deficit should be 1.5 per cent of GDP, and that is why the government took the action it did. It had no choice.

I believe that the government is remiss in its inactivity, and that inactivity is causing the loss of jobs right across this country. The government is fearful of doing what is right.

• (1440)

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, Senator St. Germain is absolutely wrong. The international community is watching Canada as this government keeps its word on bringing down the deficit. It has been doing it year after year, in contrast to the past when to say that deficit cutting projections were overshot in a major way was to put it mildly. The deficit reduction program of this government is accepted with admiration around the world because it is working. It is not just a bunch of talk.

With regard to jobs, it is only through the government's continued pursuit of its objective of eliminating the deficit that there will be increased jobs in Toronto, Vancouver, Montreal and Lethbridge. That is our objective.

[Translation]

Hon. Roch Bolduc: How can the Leader of the Government state that the program is recognized worldwide, when the lead institution, the International Monetary Fund, says that what is being done is incorrect, that we are dragging our feet, that it will cost an additional $100 billion over the next three years?

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, Senator Bolduc is far more expert in this area than I am, but the International Monetary Fund is offering a prescription for Canada within the confines of its own room where it is tabulating its statistics and its projections. It does not have the responsibility of governing this country for the people of Canada. This government is seeking a mix and balance, combined with a flexibility, that is supportive of Canadians in the services they require, as it systematically reduces the deficit.

JUSTICE

POLITICAL NON-INVOLVEMENT IN POLICE INVESTIGATIONS— STATEMENT OF MINISTER TO MEDIA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Marjory LeBreton: Honourable senators, my questions are directed to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. They deal with the shocking and troubling revelations, reported in yesterday's Globe and Mail, that the Minister of Justice passed on information to the RCMP about Progressive Conservatives and Swiss bank accounts.

What information did he pass on, and on what date? From whom did he get this information? Against whom were these allegations levelled, and which of his informants did he alert that he had contacted the RCMP?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I cannot respond to Senator LeBreton's questions today, nor would she expect me to. However, it has been made clear by the Solicitor General that whatever concerns the Minister of Justice was passing on, they had nothing to do with Swiss bank accounts.

Senator LeBreton: Honourable senators, I suggest that the leader read the story in today's Globe and Mail about the Solicitor General and the Minister of Justice.

As I mentioned in my statement, Mr. Rock stated that he has never had an instance where he passed on information nor heard back from the RCMP. He went on to say that there was more than one circumstance in which he had given information to the RCMP, and that he had never received a call back from the RCMP.

This situation is extremely serious, and the government should treat it as such. How many times has the Minister of Justice performed the function of a police informant?

Hon. David Tkachuk: Honourable senators, to follow up on the question by Senator LeBreton, the major function of the office of the Minister of Justice is to protect individuals from the power of the state and the potential misuse of the power of the police in the administration of justice and due process. We have heard reports, which are basically gossip, about certain people, all without evidence. If the Minister of Justice cannot protect a former prime minister from the excesses of the state and the misuse of the power of the police, how can we expect him to protect citizens in the course of the due process of law?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, these are very important issues and they are taken very seriously. One of the underlying tenets which has been repeated in recent weeks is that it would be completely wrong and inappropriate for a minister of the Crown to be involved in police investigations. My honourable friend has made some suggestions — and I use that word because I do not want to use another — about the operation of the RCMP in Canada which I find highly questionable and quite disturbing.

Senator Tkachuk: Honourable senators, I should like to follow up on that point. I am not a lawyer. However, I know that you cannot investigate someone for murder if there is no body. There must be evidence before police investigate citizens and write to other state officials about a matter.

We must have an investigation of the Department of Justice. There is a pattern here: Bill C-22 is going to court; Bill C-68 is going to court; I am sure that Bill C-110 will go to court. Now we hear this gossip, yet people are saying, "We should not interfere with the police investigation. We should let the police run amok and decide who they want to investigate, without due process."

Who will be responsible when nothing is found? Will it be the Minister of Justice or the Commissioner of the RCMP? Someone has to be responsible, and no one is responsible right now.

AUTHORITY FOR STATEMENT ON POLITICAL NON-INVOLVEMENT IN POLICE INVESTIGATIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. R. James Balfour: Honourable senators, would the Honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate state the authority for her statement to the effect that it is inappropriate in all circumstances for a minister of the Crown to be involved in a police investigation?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, Senator Balfour asks for an authority. It has been a convention of government for a very long time that it is improper and inappropriate for a minister of the Crown to be involved in the operational, investigative work of the national police force. That has certainly been the view taken by this government and, I suspect, by appropriate ministers in other governments.

Senator Balfour: My honourable friend has not answered my question. Would my honourable friend please cite the authority for the statement she has made?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I am conveying to Senator Balfour the convention as it is regarded, certainly by this government and, I would suspect, by the governments preceding it, that for ministers to involve themselves in a police investigation is inappropriate. I would be more than pleased to seek background for that statement and furnish it to my honourable friend.

• (1450)

Senator Balfour: I assume my honourable friend's comment applies both to the Solicitor General and the Minister of Justice?

Senator Fairbairn: That is the information by which I am guided, Senator Balfour. The minister said this repeatedly: He is not involved directly, nor should he be involved directly, in the operations of the RCMP.

Senator Balfour: Would my honourable friend now agree that she is saying something quite different?

Senator Fairbairn: I am sorry, I do not see the difference, Senator Balfour.

Senator Balfour: By using the word "directly," I assume you do not mean that the Solicitor General would put on dark glasses and a false beard and follow the RCMP around in the day-to-day conduct of their duties. Earlier, I had understood the honourable leader to say that neither the Minister of Justice, nor the Solicitor General nor any other minister of the Crown, would be "involved" in a police investigation. Is that your position?

Senator Fairbairn: Yes, it is.

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, I asked a question previously of the Leader of the Government in the Senate about the possibility of someone using the power of the Ministry of Justice against a political opponent. In view of what has transpired to date, and the fact that the Minister of Justice is telling the media that he received certain information just after the 1993 election, does the honourable leader still stand by her position that this whole RCMP exercise is not politically motivated, nor is it a witch hunt, as I had suggested it was and still believe that it is?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I stand by the position very firmly that these events are not politically motivated, and certainly not, in the words of my honourable friend, a "witch hunt."

Hon. David Tkachuk: In other words, what you are saying is that when the state was running around interning Japanese during the Second World War, the Minister of Justice should have stepped in to ensure that due process was applied to all the people of Canada. That is what you are saying.

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA—ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—KNOWLEDGE OF GOVERNMENT MINISTERS—REQUEST FOR PARTICULARS

Hon. R. James Balfour: Would my honourable friend tell us precisely on what dates the Minister of Justice and the Solicitor General became aware of the government-to-government communication, addressed under the letterhead of the Minister of Justice, to the authorities of the Swiss government concerning the Airbus matter?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): I will attempt to secure those dates for Senator Balfour.

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA—ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—LIBEL ACTION BY FORMER PRIME MINISTER—SOURCE OF FUNDING FOR GOVERNMENT COUNSEL

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, my question is for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. I want to know who is paying the fees for the attorneys to represent the Minister of Justice in the action launched by the Right Honourable Brian Mulroney?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I assume that the Government of Canada is paying the legal costs.

Further to the question from Senator Balfour, I have indicated before in this chamber that the first intimation the Minister of Justice had of a letter being sent to Switzerland was when he received a phone call from Mr. Tassé. I will check the date.

Hon. R. James Balfour: A letter being sent, or that a letter had been sent?

Senator Fairbairn: A letter had been sent.

Senator Phillips: In view of the sleazy way in which the Minister of Justice and the Solicitor General of Canada initiated this inquiry, would the honourable leader not agree that the Minister of Justice should at least pay for his own attorneys?

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

SIERRA LEONE—PROPOSED NATIONAL ELECTIONS—CONTRIBUTIONS TO SUPPORT FUND—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen: Honourable senators, let me say that this is not a supplementary question to the previous questions.

In view of the proposed elections to be held, or expected to be held, in Sierra Leone in 1996, does the Leader of the Government have any information on the support that is being given by other countries to the election fund which is necessary to carry out this election? What has Canada contributed to the fund? What have other countries contributed? How much is still required to mount an effective election in that country?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I cannot give my colleague any detailed information today on that matter, but I would be more than happy to seek out such information and transmit it to him.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

CORRECTIONS AND CONDITIONAL RELEASE ACT CRIMINAL CODE CRIMINAL RECORDS ACT PRISONS AND REFORMATORIES ACT TRANSFER OF OFFENDERS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Hon. Landon Pearson moved the third reading of Bill C-45, to amend the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, the Criminal Code, the Criminal Records Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and the Transfer of Offenders Act.

Bill read third time and passed.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A) ADOPTED

Leave having been given to proceed to Order No. 3, Reports of Committees:

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the nineteenth report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance (Supplementary Estimates (A), 1995-96), presented in the Senate on December 5, 1995.—(Honourable Senator Murray, P.C.)

Hon. Lowell Murray moved the adoption of the nineteenth report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

He said: Honourable senators, the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance has considered the Supplementary Estimates (A) for the fiscal year 1995-96, and we recommend them to you for your approval. As honourable senators are aware, an appropriations bill has received first reading and will be brought forward for second reading later this day.

As the committee report indicates, these are the first Supplementary Estimates of the 1995-96 fiscal year. Together with the Main Estimates for this year, they raise total budgetary estimates to $166.6 billion, which is some $3.1 billion more than the expenditure framework announced by the Minister of Finance in last February's budget.

When officials of the Treasury Board Secretariat appeared before the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on November 23, they provided a number of reasons for this disparity. Some expenditure items were included in the Main or the Supplementary Estimates, even though they had already been charged to the expenditures of previous fiscal years. For example, there is a $1.2 billion statutory item in the Supplementary Estimates of the Department of Agriculture and Agri-Food for grants to grain producers under the Western Grain Transition Payments Act. Because the Auditor General has urged the government to treat such amounts as a kind of account payable at the time they are announced, the entire $1.2 billion has been charged to the 1994-95 fiscal year. Similarly, the Main Estimates included $800 million for multilateral debt relief payments charged to the previous years. Consequently, when budgetary expenditures are added up at the end of the current fiscal year, $2 billion will be removed for these items. This may confuse some. However, it will no doubt warm the heart of the Auditor General at whose instance it is being done.

The 1995-96 Main Estimates also did not anticipate the passage of Bill C-76 last June which repealed the Atlantic Region Freight Assistance Act, the Maritime Freight Rates Act and the Western Grain Transportation Act. Of course, if the estimates had purported to take account of legislation that had not been passed, then, of course, we would have another complaint. The subsidies payable under these acts were included in the Main Estimates but will be subtracted from budgetary expenditures next spring.

Now that central policy reserves have been eliminated, the funding for most new expenditures in the Supplementary Estimates must come from reductions in authorities previously granted by Parliament, or what the Treasury Board calls "frozen allotments." In other words, new expenditures in departments must come from within their existing budgetary allotments. For example, the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, or TAGS, has a component in Fisheries and Oceans to buy back fishing licences and to encourage East Coast fishermen into other pursuits. The major income maintenance and training programs under TAGS are the responsibility of the Human Resources Department. Because the demand for income maintenance was higher and that for licensed buy-back lower than were forecast when the Main Estimates were prepared, the increased appropriation of $49.3 million in Human Resources Development is being funded by a decrease of the same amount under Fisheries and Oceans.

I am not sure whether the report of the Fisheries Committee of the Senate tabled the other day by our friend Senator Rossiter considered and commented on this phenomenon of a lower than anticipated licence buy-back. However, it is a matter that the Fisheries Committee of the Senate may want to look into in due course. In any case, only the increase is shown in the Supplementary Estimates. In other words, such transfers are double counted, to be corrected when the 1995-96 books are closed.

Another example is the $110.5 million being transferred from the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade to the Canadian International Development Agency which does not show up as a reduction in the department's estimates. This transfer was authorized by an Order in Council under the Public Service Rearrangement and Transfer of Duties Act to permit CIDA to assume what had been the department's responsibility for operating expenditures and the payment of grants and contributions in respect of "countries in transition," a term that is applied to the former Soviet bloc countries of Central and Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union.

Your committee's chairman was surprised to learn during the examination of this expansion of CIDA's activities that there has never been any legislation authorizing CIDA and setting out its mandate. Instead, CIDA was established in the 1968 estimates and has its mandate and spending authorities renewed each year in the appropriation acts for the Main Estimates. This is a matter which, in the fullness of time, the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate may wish to consider.

Honourable senators, this completes my remarks on the report on Supplementary Estimates (A).

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance is presently studying the implications for the public service of Bill C-76 and the likely effects of the Canada Health and Social Transfer on provincial programs of health care, post-secondary education and social assistance. We heard interesting testimony on the CHST from the Caledon Institute of Social Policy and a rather different perspective from representatives of the Fraser Institute. We also met with the Associate Deputy Minister of Health, Mr. Richard Van Loon; with the Deputy Minister of Health for Alberta, Dr. Jane Fulton; and with the Honourable Joy MacPhail, the Minister of Social Services for British Columbia in her capacity as chairperson of the Provincial Social Services Ministers of Canada.

We will complete the pre-Christmas phase of our hearings on December 14 when Dr. David Zussman and Sheldon Ehrenworth of the Public Policy Forum will discuss the government's program review and the prospects for renewal of the public service during and after the current downsizing program.

With those few remarks, honourable senators, I commend this report and the subsequent appropriations bill to your favourable consideration.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

EMPLOYMENT EQUITY BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Leave having been given to revert to Presentation of Reports from Standing or Special Committees:

Hon. M. Lorne Bonnell, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology, presented the following report:

Tuesday, December 12, 1995

The Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology has the honour to present its

TWELFTH REPORT

Your Committee, to which was referred its report dated November 22, 1995 on Bill C-64, An Act respecting employment equity, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Thursday, November 30, 1995, examined the said report and has agreed to modify it as follows:

Your Committee now reports Bill C-64 without amendment, given the commitments made by the Minister of Human Resources Development to the Committee on this day, as follow:

That, by the first of March 1996, he will propose amendments to Cabinet to extend coverage of the Employment Equity Act to Parliamentary employers;

That he will prepare letters for the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration and the House of Commons Board of Internal Economy urging them to establish the mechanisms and policies needed to implement the principles of employment equity as envisioned in Bill C-64; and

That guidelines and communication materials will be developed, in consultation with the Honourable Senator Noël A. Kinsella, other concerned Committee members, representatives of the Department of Canadian Heritage, groups representing members of visible minorities and covered employers, in relation to the proposed definition of "members of visible minorities."

The Committee expects that any improvements to this definition resulting from the consultations would be incorporated into the Employment Equity Act at the same time as amendments relating to Parliamentary employers are introduced. Regarding this last commitment, the Committee draws the Minister's attention to the proposed definition prepared by the Honourable Senator Noel A. Kinsella as follows:

Page 2, Clause 3: replace lines 5 to 7 on page 2, with the following:

"sons, other than aboriginal peoples, who are, because of their racial origin or colour, in a visible minority in Canada;"

Furthermore, the Committee, in light of the anticipated coverage of Parliamentary employers, urges the Minister to consider an amendment to clause 6 of Bill C-64 that would have the effect of safeguarding the merit principle where it occurs in existing policy or practice of these employers. The Committee, in this case, draws the Minister's attention to the proposal made by the Honourable Senator Ethel M. Cochrane as follows:

"Page 6, clause 6:

(a) add after line 9 the following:

"(c) with respect to the Senate, the House of Commons and the Library of Parliament, to hire or promote persons without basing the hiring or promotion on selection according to merit in cases where existing policy or practice requires that hiring or promotion be based on selection according to merit;" and

(b) re-number paragraphs (c) and (d) and any cross-references thereto accordingly."

The Committee recalls the commitment made by officials from Human Resources Development Canada about the development of guidelines related to the definition of "persons with disabilities." The Committee expects that these guidelines will likewise be developed following consultation with the appropriate stakeholders.

Finally, the Committee suggests that a letter also be prepared for the Parliamentary Librarian regarding the implementation of employment equity at the Library of Parliament.

Respectfully submitted,

M. LORNE BONNELL
Chairman

• (1510)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Losier-Cool, bill placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 3, 1995-96

SECOND READING

Hon. H.A. Olson moved the second reading of Bill C-116, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1996.

He said: Honourable senators, Bill C-116 deals entirely and exclusively with Supplementary Estimates (A) for the fiscal year 1995-96. The explanation given by Senator Murray was particularly useful. However, in addition to what he said about a number of items in the report from the committee, I wish to draw one or two other things to the attention of honourable senators.

In total, these Supplementary Estimates (A) increase Canada's forecast net spending requirements by an additional $2.4 billion, representing planned expenditures provided for in the budget of February 27, 1995, or reallocations under the new expenditure management system. Approximately $936 million must be approved by Parliament through this appropriation bill. The remaining amount of approximately $1.5 billion represents the net changes to forecast spending pursuant to a number of statutory items that have already been approved by Parliament.

Some of the major items in these Supplementary Estimates are, first, an increase of $453 million for most departments relating to the operating budget carry forward to be used for various operational requirements. Senator Murray dealt with some of those.

Second, there is an increase of $1.2 billion for the Department of Agriculture and Agri-Food for payments in connection with the Western Grain Transition Payments Act. Senator Murray also dealt with this. He also dealt with the amounts of money withdrawn from the budget, the most important item being the $560 million that was paid as a freight subsidy in the last budget. Now, $1.2 billion needs to be authorized in connection with the transition payments. This exercise has not yet been completed, although the applications are in from the producers. In the future, they will be paying all of the amount that the railways will charge for grain transportation; something which, in the past, was partially paid for by the government at a cost of $560 million.

Third, there is an increase of $154 million for the Department of Finance for the assumption of debt related to Canada Eldor Inc., and to meet commitments by Canada under the Eldorado Nuclear Limited Reorganization and Divestiture Act.

Honourable senators, with those additional comments to Senator Murray's explanation of the report from the committee, I would commend Bill C-116 for favourable consideration by the Senate.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Graham, bill placed on Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES READJUSTMENT BILL, 1995

MOTION TO INSTRUCT LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS
COMMITTEE TO TABLE FINAL REPORT—VOTE DEFERRED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Robichaud, P.C.,

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the Message from the House of Commons dated June 20, 1995, and on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham dated June 28, 1995, regarding Bill C-69, An Act to provide for the establishment of electoral boundaries commissions and the readjustment of electoral boundaries.

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham, Deputy Leader of the Government: Honourable senators, if no other senators wish to speak on this motion, we have a house order for all votes on this matter to be taken at 5:30 this afternoon.

The Hon. the Speaker: If no other honourable senator wishes to speak, debate on this item is considered concluded, and the vote will be held at 5:30 this afternoon by order of the Senate.

PEARSON INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT AGREEMENTS BILL

MOTION TO INSTRUCT LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS
COMMITTEE TO TABLE FINAL REPORT—VOTE DEFERRED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Lucier,

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the motion and the Message referred to it on October 5, 1994, relating to certain amendments to Bill C-22, An Act respecting certain agreements concerning the redevelopment and operation of Terminals 1 and 2 at Lester B. Pearson International Airport.

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham, Deputy Leader of the Government: Honourable senators, I believe the same procedure would follow for this item on the Order Paper.

The Hon. the Speaker: Does any other honourable senator wish to speak? If not, the matter is considered debated, and the vote will be held at 5:30 this afternoon by order of the Senate.

QUEBEC

MOTION TO RECOGNIZE AS DISTINCT SOCIETY—
DEBATE CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Fairbairn, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Graham,—That

Whereas the people of Quebec have expressed the desire for recognition of Quebec's distinct society;

(1) the Senate recognize that Quebec is a distinct society within Canada;

(2) the Senate recognize that Quebec's distinct society includes its French-speaking majority, unique culture and civil law tradition;

(3) the Senate undertake to be guided by this reality; and

(4) the Senate encourage all components of the legislative and executive branches of government to take note of this recognition and be guided in their conduct accordingly.

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, since the motion before us states the obvious, one can only wonder why the matter has even been raised. It is more a statement of fact than a subject for debate. Perhaps the Prime Minister anticipated such a reaction in this place, as his motion calling for recognition of Quebec as a distinct society is addressed exclusively to the house. One would have expected that a joint declaration would have been more appropriate.

Instead, Mr. Chrétien tabled his motion on November 27, and the Leader of the Government in the Senate tabled an identical motion in this place eight days later. One would have thought that, given the importance that the government places on the motion, it would have realized that a joint declaration of the two houses would have lent it more significance. Perhaps one can find in the notes accompanying the motion the reasons for not doing so.

The notes say that the motion does not amend the Canadian Constitution. "Nevertheless, it is a solemn and important commitment by federal elected representatives, who are the only ones to speak on behalf of all Canadians." The word "all" is underlined. What the Prime Minister is saying is that this chamber does not have the responsibility nor the obligation to speak for Canadians. He says in his notes that only federal elected representatives can speak on behalf of all Canadians.

I will leave it to my colleagues to ponder the significance of that statement. Certainly, if it is not an insult to the 104 members in this place, it is certainly a lack of appreciation of what our parliamentary system is all about.

In any event, honourable senators, what is before us is a symbolic motion, as was confirmed in Prime Minister Chrétien's remarks in the other place, and Senator Fairbairn's comments here in this chamber last week. However, it is more than that, unfortunately. It is largely a hasty reaction to the result of the October 30 referendum; a result which put the federal government in a state of shock and disarray, from which it has obviously not yet recovered.

Honourable senators, these motions have been received in Quebec with a large yawn, while causing consternation in much of the rest of the country. This is but a first step, says the Prime Minister, but he does not say a first step towards what. He has said that now is not the time for constitutional discussions because the Government of Quebec has indicated unequivocally that they did not want to take part in such discussions.

In that statement, honourable senators, can be found the reasons for the government's embarrassing floundering, but even more worrisome, it confirms the Prime Minister's refusal to accept obligations of national leadership. For if there is one issue which must be the ultimate responsibility of the head of the federal government, it is the one dealing with national unity. Mr. Chrétien may detach himself from the daily routine of government. However, he cannot remove himself from the obligation inherent in his office which makes national unity its main and constant priority.

Obviously all Canadians are suffering from constitutional fatigue. There is no question about that. From the patriation of the early 1980s to Meech Lake to Charlottetown, few days went by without the constitutional debate being in the forefront. When Mr. Chrétien became Prime Minister, he made it plain that the Constitution would be low on his list of priorities, if on it at all.

Events, however, particularly in Quebec, do not stop because Ottawa closes its eyes to them. The election of the Bloc Québécois, the election of the Parti Québécois, and the closeness of the referendum results have led the Liberal government to the conclusion that Quebec is riddled with separatists and that any attempt to modify the Constitution is simply a non-starter.

What Mr. Chrétien and his advisors do not understand is that many non-separatists voted for the Bloc Québécois because of their disenchantment with the two traditional main-line parties. They voted for the Parti Québécois in large numbers because of their belief that a change of government after nine years was essential. Many voted "yes" in the referendum because changes in federal-provincial relations were long overdue.

What Mr. Chrétien and his advisors do not understand is that nationalism is very strong, very pronounced and very permanent in Quebec and has been for over 100 years. You can condemn nationalism all you want, but you cannot make it go away.

Over the years, relations between Ottawa and Quebec, and Quebec and the other provinces, have been difficult, at times dangerously strained. One can think of the reaction to the Manitoba Schools Act, to Regulation 17 in Ontario, to the conscription crises during two world wars, les Gens de l'air. The list is much longer, but the conclusion remains the same. Who best to protect Quebec's majority society than Quebecers themselves?

I would remind honourable senators of those who, over the years, have been the most ardent proponents of greater recognition of Quebec's distinctiveness, people like Henri Bourassa, André Laurendeau, Maurice Duplessis, Jean Drapeau, Jean Lesage, Daniel Johnson, Sr., and Robert Bourassa, to name but a few. They were not separatists. They believed that the more control Quebec had over its own affairs, the better off it would be, without in any way compromising the unity of this country, perhaps even reinforcing it.

That feeling persists today. It may manifest itself in different forms, but there is one constant which remains: The vast majority of Quebecers want to remain part of Canada.

This is what Mr. Chrétien and his advisors do not understand. They interpret Mr. Bouchard taking over the premiership of the province and his blunt refusal to engage in constitutional discussions as reason enough to abandon every attempt to do so. In a way, I can understand the Prime Minister's reluctance to engage in any constitutional round until obliged to do so in early 1997.

Mr. Trudeau was unable to include Quebec as a formal party to the 1982 agreement. Mr. Mulroney was unable to see the Meech Lake Accord ratified and the Charlottetown agreements approved in the referendum. They were both severely politically damaged as a result. Nevertheless, whether or not one agrees with the objectives of both of them, as Prime Ministers they took the lead. While they may not have succeeded in achieving their goals, they did not fail in bringing leadership to that one overriding concern which falls to the Prime Minister of Canada to tackle and to cope with: national unity.

Mr. Chrétien fails Canadians not only by not taking the initiative but by trying to convince Canadians that his hands are tied because the Quebec government will not take part in constitutional discussions, as if Mr. Bouchard should be recognized as a valid spokesman of the vast majority of Quebecers who want to stay in Canada. Mr. Bouchard will no more speak for them than Mr. Parizeau has. It is for Mr. Chrétien to speak for them, as he must speak for all Canadians who want this country to remain united.

Provinces speak for themselves as individual entities which are part of the whole. The national government is the only one which can speak for the whole country as one indivisible unit.

This is a responsibility which Mr. Chrétien is refusing to take on by introducing a so-called "unity package" which, in his mind, fulfils vague commitments made only because of a last-minute decision to participate in the referendum campaign, after spending time in Western Canada assuring his listeners that the No side would win handsomely.

Yes, it could be replied that these are but first steps. First steps to where? Entrenchment in the Constitution? No, not for the moment anyway, because of the Quebec government's intransigence. To where? Silence.

April 1997 is when the Constitution will be revisited, at least as far as the amending formula goes. Does the government have any other proposals for discussion then? Silence.

They are silent because they are lost. Naively, they actually expected that by not raising the Constitution, it would fade into the background.

The Prime Minister should, as soon as possible, bring down a set of proposals which would be subjected to the approval of all supporters of federalism everywhere, including those in Quebec, who — it cannot be repeated too often — form the vast majority of its population.

Every federal government knows, or should know, that separatists and ultra-sovereignists will never be satisfied unless they and the provinces acquiesce to an association which is so tenuous that it can only lead to the breakup of the country.

Canadians are united with few exceptions in forging an alliance, for that is what a federation is all about, which will keep Canada one while accepting that some of its make-up deserves special consideration and treatment.

I suppose we should be reassured that the Liberal government has at least finally decided to accept the words "distinct society" in its vocabulary. The sudden conversion of those who so adamantly opposed the Meech Lake Accord is welcome, but really not that convincing. One only has to read the Meech Lake Accord when it refers to Quebec and compare it with what is before us.

I will ask for my colleagues' patience to allow me to read the proposed constitutional amendment of 1987. It stated:

The Constitution of Canada shall be interpreted in a manner consistent with

(a) the recognition that the existence of French-speaking Canadians, centred in Quebec but also present elsewhere in Canada, and English-speaking Canadians, concentrated outside Quebec but also present in Quebec, constitutes a fundamental characteristic of Canada; and

(b) the recognition that Quebec constitutes within Canada a distinct society.

The motion before us has no reference to minorities. As to the words "unique culture," the less said the better after the Prime Minister's inability to define it himself last week.

What we have before us, in Senator Fairbairn's motion, is simply a general, but not all-inclusive, statement of fact, whereas the Meech Lake Accord was a formal commitment to a stark reality.

This is what is lacking from the Liberal government: both an intention and a commitment, as has been so embarrassingly witnessed by the inability of the Prime Minister to explain what he means by "culture," "Canadian," "Quebec" or other terms; and by the Minister of Justice who said he could not widen or increase the number of regions in the veto bill because it would cause a domino effect. Then, less than 24 hours later, he announced an amendment to the veto bill to include British Columbia as a region.

This sort of improvisation is a sorry admission that the Liberal government has no coherent policy on national unity, with the result that the forces of disunity have taken the initiative.

To make things worse, Mr. Chrétien said yesterday that the federal government might disallow a Quebec referendum if it did not agree with the question. That is unwarranted provocation which will enthrall separatist supporters and cause dismay within the federalist majority.

Even Mr. Trudeau refused to go this far when he was asked to disallow Bill 101, the Quebec language bill, parts of which were later confirmed to be unconstitutional.

There is a disquieting restlessness in Canada these days. The provinces are again being treated as second-class partners, as Ottawa takes on the role of big brother, trying to flex a muscle it no longer has, the spending power. For, deliberately or not, the last federal budget, with its massive shifting of discretionary spending to the provinces, has introduced a new era in federal-provincial relations, one during which the federal government will inevitably withdraw from various jurisdictions and transfer them to the provinces. As the roles of each change, so must the relations between them.

It is hoped that the government will convene the premiers before 1997 to discuss whatever constitutional changes are required to meet the new realities of federal-provincial relations. The question is not so much what the Quebec government may or may not want, as it is what the vast majority of Canadians, including Quebecers, want.

The reason for the urgency, in my opinion, is that there may well be an election in Quebec before the summer, for the new premier will certainly be tempted to capitalize on his personal popularity to achieve from an election what he just missed achieving in the referendum — the mandate to negotiate new terms or to declare sovereignty.

The federal government must take the initiative now and submit clear and precise proposals for full discussion, even if they lead to reopening the Constitution, if for no other reason than that, I, along with the vast majority of Canadians, do not want to lose this country, certainly not by default, which may well happen if the inertia and paralysis which affects this government persists much longer.

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, there is an old Irish proverb which says that it is better to be quarrelling than lonesome. If that is true, it could be said that at no time in our collective history have so many Canadians had so much companionship. All the rancour, all the bitterness and all the cynicism which cloud our great federation seem to have centered on the forthright and realistic initiative put forward by the Prime Minister. He has asked us to recognize Quebec as a distinct society and make constitutional change contingent on the approval of specific provinces and regions of the country.

As we all know, these proposals are not comprehensive, definitive or particularly novel. They are simply a framework for change and for a future "re-imagining" of Canada.

This "re-imagining" will depend entirely on the will of all the parties concerned to negotiate in good faith. Since that will is unclear, the Prime Minister could not logically commit himself at this time to anything other than honouring his word to Quebecers to start the process of change.

We have before us a very specific proposal, but what lies behind all of the specifics is really the unique reality of our country.

Too many voices across Canada see federalism as a zero sum game. Too many voices now tell us that cooperation cannot be possible because every gain for one region means an equal loss for another region. Such voices have become more numerous, increasingly bitter and, may I say, more futile over the last decade. They add to the rhetoric but contribute nothing to the solutions. "We want more," the voices say, "always more. What is more for us, is less for you. What is less for us is more for you."

Honourable senators, the zero sum concept of our federation is rooted in attitudes and ideas which consider compromise and cooperation, the glue of our great federation, to be impossible. I have said before in this chamber that Canada is an easy target for its enemies because it has been built on a vision and a dream based on tolerance, justice, cooperation and compromise. Once cooperation, tolerance and compromise become unfashionable and impossible, the dream dies.

On another front, over the last few weeks the world watched as the leaders of the Bosnian tragedy met in Dayton, Ohio. I thought, as I watched, "Pity we couldn't bring the three of them together on a speaking tour all across Canada to tell us what the ultimate cost of wanting even more really means."

As the Christmas season approaches, one might think of them as the latter day spirits of Jacob Marley spelling out a grim future for an unrepentant Scrooge. I wondered, "Is it that bad? Do we really need that lesson on this subject all over again?"

I thought, too, of the thousands upon thousands who wait in immigration offices around the world, seeking access to the best country on earth. These people do not think for one minute that the red maple leaf flies over a vast zero sum game which circumvents one-fifth of the globe. Otherwise, they would not seek access to Canada in such huge numbers. They want to come here to find peace, freedom, understanding, compassion and respect for the rights of the individual. Those are the values which bind all Canadians: Quebecers, Nova Scotians, British Columbians, Manitobans and aboriginal peoples who, together, keep alive the ideal of unity in a single natural harmony.

All of these values make up the soul of Canada of which the great Robertson Davies, whom we all mourned last week, once wrote, "...needs nourishment, exercise and above all, love, if it is to reach maturity." That nourishment will not come from indifference; it will not come from intolerance. The exercise will not come from rancour and mean spiritedness; it will come only from faith and hope and action; it will come from generosity and compassion. The national soul will not survive without the love of all of our citizens, all of our communities, all of our provinces, all of our regions.

Canadians showed the wealth of these human resources in the historic national unity rally in Montreal. As I stood in the crowd, I remembered, as no doubt so many did — no matter which solitude they came from — these are the resources which have won Canada respect and admiration in all parts of the world.

• (1540)

These are the human resources which helped liberate Europe and conceived an air bridge to Kigali amidst the horror and the slaughter in Rwanda. These are the human resources which conceived and built a compassionate, freedom-loving society north of the 49th parallel. These are the human resources which explored and threw open a continent, resources which found no mountain or no river too hard to cross.

Canadians were called upon to undertake all these adventures in wartime and peacetime. They did not say, "We want more, always more. What means more for you means less for us." No, Canadians did not say that. Quebecers did not say that. New Brunswickers did not say that. Ontarians did not say that. Newfoundlanders, Albertans, the people of Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan did not say that. They said, "We are Canadians. We are ready. We will do what is needed. We will do what is necessary."

In Canada today, when so many voices so stridently observe that our country is only a zero sum game, it seems to me that we must reacquaint ourselves with the real truth about Canadians. When our people are asked to choose between hope and darkness, they choose hope. When our people are asked to choose between generosity and selfishness, we have, throughout our history, chosen generosity.

We must remember when times are tough and when times are bitter, as certainly they are in our country today. Most important, we must remember that national unity is a daily act of will. The national unity rally should not have ended in Montreal. National unity must be a never-ending campaign.

[Translation]

I think that the peaks of the rally were marked by ordinary Canadians. I think of the citizens of small cities who see to it that their children learn both official languages, or of the inhabitants of Lac-Saint-Jean who take their vacations in British Columbia or in Newfoundland, and of those who teach their children that we do not live in a vacuum in Canada, but that our distinctive trait is our strength, wherever we live.

[English]

We must fight, honourable senators, line by line, word by word, the campaign of lies and deception being waged by some people about the real meaning of our country. We must level the playing field of ideas, not only in Quebec but throughout the whole of Canada. We must ensure that in the struggle for the hearts and the minds of Quebecers, indeed of all Canadians, the forces of pan-Canadian vision are seen and understood in every small village and town, in every school and university, in every urban and rural forum possible.

We must ensure that all Canadians are reacquainted with our national soul. We must ensure that those forces within Canada today which reject compromise and compassion, which reject tolerance and social justice, and, in doing so, reject the values which are and have been the glue binding Canadians of all regions and all provinces, are seen and understood to be what they are — forces which debilitate and weaken the resolve and the will to be Canadian. We must remember that the red maple leaf is a symbol of hope for the future of the planet, and is recognized as such in all forums of the world community.

Honourable senators, we must level the playing field of ideas in this country with new conviction, because, as I have said many times before, history and the future, surely, must be on our side. I would never want to downplay the enormity of the challenges ahead, but I believe a little historical perspective might be in order.

In 1891, our young federation appeared to be at a critical crossroads, and in a letter to Edward Blake, Wilfrid Laurier confided his fears. I quote briefly from that letter:

We have come to a period in the history of this young country where premature dissolution seems to be at hand. How long can the present fabric last? Can it last at all?

Now, 104 years later, many of us ask ourselves the same questions. It may be that, in another 104 years, new generations of Canadians will still be struggling with vital questions pertaining to the perfecting of the greatest multicultural federation on the face of the earth. That is what it has always meant to be part of the adventure of this great nation — always searching, always struggling to build a better and stronger country for all Canadians.

For this and future generations, we must not falter. We must not fail in this resolve and in this resolution.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, it is obvious that I will support the motion of the Leader of the Government.

I would like to take this opportunity for examination of the proposal to share some comments and the outcome of my research with you.

There is no doubt that the 1995 referendum has given us breathing space. The result was not conclusive when it comes to the reality of numbers, as no one can conclude that because 49.4 per cent of Quebecers aged 18 or more have voted yes, 49.4 per cent of Quebecers are separatist.

I do not think those are the conclusions to be drawn. However, there is one lesson to be learned from this: that Canada is certainly sick, and we must find a remedy.

Last week Senator Beaudoin spoke about a 16-month window of opportunity. I think this is a very realistic way of looking at the constitutional future of our country. Within 16 months, the premiers and the Prime Minister must reach agreement on the constitutional amending formula.

There is no doubt that Quebec's separatist political leaders will attempt to find in the outcome of this conference, which could be held earlier, the proof that Canada is truly ill, and that there is no cure.

I have read and reread the Prime Minister's statement to the House of Commons in order to seek some inspiration from it, and I must tell you that I was inspired. In my opinion, the Prime Minister has acknowledged, as he did in the referendum, the principles which underlie our history. I ought to interject here that I feel the only way this discussion can be held is in an extremely open and extremely positive atmosphere.

Senator Graham referred to the rally on October 27. I must say that the Canadians who were there were moved by hope and a vision that anything was possible, and that together we would be able to find a way to cure this malaise.

These Canadians, and others who unfortunately were not present but would have liked to be there, sent a very clear message to the politicians. The message was to stop their short term politics, set aside partisan considerations and find a solution, because they believed it could be done, and the politicians would have to find a solution because Canadians were convinced there was one.

Today, I want to be very positive and share a few thoughts with you. I think we have to ask ourselves a very important question. Why does the vast majority of Quebecers demand a statement recognizing the distinct identity of Quebec within Canada? I think we have to ask that question. As a Quebecer, I will try to answer that question, and I hope other Quebecers will have a chance to do likewise.

To be able to answer this question, we must look at Canada's past history and try to identify the roots of the celebrated compromise other colleagues have mentioned since we started the debate on this resolution.

We should recall that, in the course of the debate that resulted in the British North America Act, 1867, the Fathers of Confederation were faced with a political problem. The politicians of Upper Canada, with the demographics on their side, had clearly identified proportional representation as the way of the future. Politicians in Lower Canada agreed, while realizing that demographics might not be in their favour. However, that was a minor problem.

Economic considerations caused the representatives of Upper Canada and Lower Canada and the Atlantic colonies to craft a compromise. It was multilateral between four colonial entities with their colonial borders, but it was also bilateral; a compromise between two clearly identified communities, one francophone and the other anglophone.

Although a Conservative, John A. Macdonald was no strong proponent of a federal state, favouring instead a unitarian state, a single Parliament with proportional representation for everyone.

George Étienne Cartier, for his part, supported what would become a federal state. For him and for the representatives of the provinces — or rather, the Atlantic colonies at the time — the best and only way to protect their local reality was to give this new, emerging country a system with two levels of government that could best protect the realities of the mainly anglophone and francophone communities.

Let us not forget that the Quebec community is not limited to its francophone majority. Even then, Quebec had a thriving anglophone community. It was important for these two communities to be able to develop within Canada.

George Étienne Cartier's option prevailed. The existence of two cultural and linguistic communities, with different values but capable of joining forces to create a country, was finally recognized in 1867.

We could engage in a long debate on what Mr. Macdonald received in return. The federal government ended up with powers traditionally devolved to federation members. We, in Canada, decided to be more creative and to consolidate some of the powers at the federal level, leaving the provinces free to pass legislation to protect their realities, thus allowing Quebec to preserve its language, denominational system, including culture and civil law, among others.

Canada evolved on the basis of this compromise. It became sovereign through the Statute of Westminster. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council and the Supreme Court of Canada tempered the over-centralizing effects of these federal powers. Some still remained, to the great displeasure of several Quebec premiers. I am referring in particular to the federal spending powers. Nevertheless, Canada has continued to evolve.

Then came the years 1981 and 1982. This is truly the critical point of my argument this afternoon. I believe Canada broke its own tradition during those years.

I told you about the collective rights that had been recognized in the BNA Act. In 1982, Canadians, except for Quebecers, adopted a charter of individual rights, without recognizing the existence of these famous collective rights.

By contrast, the charter recognizes the collective rights of aboriginal peoples. It recognizes, as an interpretative clause, multiculturalism in Canada, but it makes no reference to existing collective rights in Quebec, nor in the rest of Canada.

Earlier, an honourable senator referred to the linguistic duality found in the Meech Lake Accord. That duality is part of the Canadian reality. In 1982, there was no such interpretative clause. Since then, Quebecers have been trying to have that reality acknowledged.

The Meech Lake Accord was an attempt to solve the issue. Unfortunately, as we all know, it failed. Given what we have gone through since 1990, with the experience of Meech I am convinced that if we could turn back the clock we would get overwhelming support for the 1987 constitutional accord.

This is simply what Quebecers want. This is why we want a rule of interpretation in the Canadian Constitution which would say to the Supreme Court that there exists a charter of individual rights and that no one objects to it. Since 1982, everyone has become used to living with the charter.

However, the Supreme Court should not forget that there is also an interpretative clause which requires it, when determining whether an individual right exists or not, to also recognize collective rights.

Honourable senators, during the Meech Lake debate, the question was asked as to whether the collective rights of Quebec took precedence over those guaranteed by the Charter. Not one Quebecer can be found who will tell you that these rights should have precedence over the rights guaranteed by the Charter. However, both sets of rights must be considered at the same time; they must coexist. That is the challenge facing us.

In 1982, we agreed to recognize in our Constitution the existence of aboriginal or treaty rights. In 1995, we are looking for an expression of this coexistence. We do not have an answer yet, but we are looking for one. The people of Quebec do not get the impression that this quest for their collective rights is taking place in the rest of Canada. What they are asking for is not the end of the world. All they want is the natural historical consequence of the conditions set in 1867, and that prevailed, albeit imperfectly, until 1982.

Some will say that the legislative basis for the collective rights of francophones and of the anglophone minority in Quebec can still be found in the British North America Act. What role does the Charter play in all that? A major role.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senator, your speaking time had expired. Is leave granted to allow the honourable senator to proceed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Nolin: I shall be brief. Could this rather technical interpretative clause have, for all intents and purposes, a merely symbolic value as well? Quite certainly. I have decided to support the motion now before us.

I hope that it will only be a first step, and that it will lead, within the 16 months remaining before the April 1997 deadline, to the entrenchment of this declaration in our constitutional documents, as the people of Quebec are demanding, and rightly so. It is not too much to ask to see this reality entrenched in our Constitution. They are asking for no more and no less than that.

I would like to read an excerpt from a booklet distributed to all households in Quebec during the referendum campaign. The booklet contains — and it was not easy to write — the beliefs of federalists and those of independentists-separatists. Under the Quebec Referendum Act, the Chief Electoral Officer must distribute to every home in Quebec a document like this. All three federalist political parties present in Quebec approved that text. We agreed on a text. There is a sentence worth reading carefully, under the heading “Quebec’s Place in Canada.”

Because of our history and our francophone majority, we are a true national community. We have all recognized the existence of that national community. We have even done it on your behalf.

Now we have to deliver the goods. We will surely vote in favour of the resolution. In the remaining 16 months, we will have to do more than that. Let us not be afraid to travel throughout our regions; in particular, those of us who are from Quebec should go outside Quebec. Let us go and explain to people living in other regions that this is not so complicated. There are certainly other things that Quebecers will want to recognize in the changes announced at the time of the referendum.

The distinct society declaration is symbolic for Quebecers, but particularly for non-Quebecers. They have heard all kinds of nonsense about the meaning of the distinct society. Today, I tried to give you my version of that definition. It does not give Quebec more powers, but certainly not less. It is simply a recognition of history. We owe it to ourselves to spread that information. We have 16 months to do so. It is important for us to get on with this task with firm resolve, and with the conviction that we will succeed.

[English]

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury: Honourable senators, it is my privilege to join my colleagues on both sides of this house in supporting the resolution that we have before us, to recognize Quebec as a distinct society within Canada.

As a country, we have survived a turbulent history in recent decades while modernizing our Constitution. The most recent challenge was the most frightening. Canadians everywhere came face to face with the prospect of losing Quebec; Quebecers came face to face with the prospect of losing their special place in Canada. Canadians everywhere rallied together in support of a united Canada.

During the referendum campaign, the Prime Minister made a commitment to recognize that Quebec forms a distinct society within Canada. The first opportunity to do that in a constitutional way will not come until 1997. However, in the meantime, Parliament can bind itself to act on that principle, and that is what this resolution is about.

Quebec is a distinct society within Canada — we all know that. Its French-speaking majority, its unique culture and its civil law tradition all combine to make it a distinct society. Canadians throughout this land acknowledge and take pride in Quebec’s distinctiveness. We are enriched by it. That was the message that resounded loud and clear during the referendum campaign.

Recognizing the distinctiveness of Quebec within Canada does not take anything away from the rest of the country. To the contrary, it continues the natural course of evolution of our country set in motion from its inception.

From the eighteenth century, the history of our emerging country has been one of tolerance, mutual respect and accommodation. The right of the Quebec people to maintain their historic language, religion and civil law was recognized in the very beginning. Our differences have put us to the test, but also, I believe, our differences lie at the heart of our greatest achievement: our distinctiveness, if you will, as a country.

Our ability as a country to accommodate cultural and linguistic differences has set us apart from other nations. We have fought the trend of assimilation to one North American mould. We have waged our battle through laws — laws such as the Official Languages Act, and constitutionally entrenched rights to minority language education; laws that express our character as one nation, uniting — without erasing — histories, cultures and languages into a single, united future.

To understand a country, I have always looked to its origins. Our soul as a country owes its strength and character not only to our European ancestors from Britain and France but also to the Inuit of the far north, the many tribes of native Indians and those people whose origins are of the English, French and Indian peoples, the Métis. These are the people who formed our foundation, who settled the rock and soil on which we live, who built our cities and established our institutions. This foundation of mutual respect and tolerance, our flexibility as a nation, has made Canada an attractive beacon for peoples of many different cultures, histories, religions and languages. It is together that we will forge our future.

By recognizing the distinctiveness of Quebec, we honour this heritage, the concept of our forefathers. We honour Canada. At the same time, we show our faith in our future, in our ability to find a path that both accommodates and unites us in our differences.

We cannot say that the English-speaking majority in this country has always understood how to accommodate our differences. We cannot say that no fissure has developed. The referendum vote was far too close for complacency. It signalled the need to recognize, in word and deed, a new phase in our nationhood. This resolution is an important step toward that goal.

I will tell honourable senators that I am worried, not about whether Quebec can retain its distinct character within Canada, for I have absolutely no doubt of Quebec's ability to thrive within this great country. However, I am worried because I wonder whether the separatists' goal is really about distinctiveness, or whether it is really about power. As politicians, I think we understand the danger of individuals manipulating national aspirations for political gains.

Our Constitution has allowed our provinces and regions to retain their own character and uniqueness. Quebec has been able to tailor its educational, industrial and social programs to meet its linguistic and cultural needs. The real battles which we all face are not over these matters; they are over the powers our Constitution gives to the federal government. They are over foreign affairs, financial and fiscal management and international trade. These are the powers that the separatists covet. There is nothing to suggest that Quebec's independent exercise of these powers would add a morsel of food or a penny of wealth to the citizens of Quebec. There is reason to consider that these problems are most efficiently addressed by a large and unified nation; but these issues are not discussed by the separatists in the debates on sovereignty. Our appeal must be to the people of Quebec, not to the officials who want those powers, and who make it clear that they are not interested in any other solution.

The Prime Minister has made a commitment to undertake changes that will bring services and the decision-making process closer to the citizens of Canada. The unemployment insurance system is being transformed in a manner that respects provincial jurisdiction in education and training. Labour market training is being revised to eliminate program duplication and foster a true partnership between the federal government and the provinces to help Canadians find jobs and ensure that they have proper skills for the technology-based job market that we now face.

I have confidence in the ability of Canadians everywhere, and especially of Quebecers, to pierce the fog of lies and misrepresentations that some have wrapped around this debate.

This resolution is a first important step to assure Quebecers that our country, united, can grow stronger and thrive in the economic, technological and cultural challenges of the twenty-first century. Together, we can meet these challenges. Together, we can maintain our unique character.

I invite honourable senators to join with me in supporting this resolution.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, it is not my normal nature to mix or associate with the politically famous or infamous, depending on your viewpoint. Rather, my pleasure comes from associating with normal people, such as the members of this chamber.

Today, I feel ambitious. I will rub elbows with some famous Canadian politicians and give my reasons for rubbing elbows with those particular individuals.

Senator Graham: Sit back and relax!

Senator Phillips: Do not relax, Senator Graham. I consider you among the well-known Canadian politicians.

The first individual with whom I will rub elbows is the Right Honourable Pierre Elliott Trudeau. In case honourable senators have forgotten, he was the Prime Minister during the 1982 Constitution talks. Mr. Trudeau shifted his position on every subject. He was like a ship without a rudder. When a breeze came along, he drifted with it. However, there was one subject on which he did not veer, and that was the distinct society clause.

Recently, Mr. Trudeau held an event in Ottawa in which he donated certain papers to the National Archives. I believe, too, there was a book-launching at the same time. On that occasion, Mr. Trudeau reiterated his opposition to the distinct society clause.

• (1620)

I recall the questions asked of him in the television interview. His response was, to paraphrase, "How can you be distinct from another Canadian?" I remind honourable senators of that comment.

It would come as no surprise to anyone if I said that Mr. Trudeau is not among my political heroes. However, having given him honourable mention on the distinct society clause, I hope I do not have to buy or read his book.

The Leader of the Government in the Senate was what I would describe as "the Marjory LeBreton of Mr. Trudeau's office." She exerted great influence on the Prime Minister of the time. She persuaded him to break every commitment and every promise except one, and that was his opposition to the distinct society clause. Mr. Trudeau never veered; he never hesitated. He was opposed to it.

After having spent the majority of her life telling the rest of us what a super human being, a super intellect and a super Constitution-maker Mr. Trudeau was, today Senator Fairbairn, in this motion, denies the whole thing. She says that Mr. Trudeau is a washout and a dud.

This raises an interesting question. There is only one explanation for why Senator Fairbairn, in that former incarnation, could persuade Mr. Trudeau to change his mind on everything except the distinct society clause, and that is that she supported him in his opposition to it. Today the Leader of the Government in the Senate, Senator Fairbairn, denies all of that. That is to say that Mr. Trudeau was a failure; a washout. Honourable senators, there has not been a denial like that since Peter denied Christ almost 2,000 years ago.

Senator Fairbairn goes beyond her own denial. She insists that Senator Hébert, Trudeau's old China hand, deny him also. I know that Senator Hébert has written a book on his association with Mr. Trudeau in China and elsewhere, and he made a fortune on it. However, I ask my honourable friend whether he would knuckle under to Senator Fairbairn and deny Mr. Trudeau.

Senator Gauthier: Damn right he will.

Senator Phillips: I suspect that will be the truth, Senator Gauthier.

I have a great deal of sympathy for the honourable senator when he is knuckling under. It must be very unpleasant for him.

Senator Gigantès, who is faced with very difficult family situations, a former wordsmith for Prime Minister Trudeau, will have to deny him as well.

I remember when the Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate was president of the Liberal Party. He and the Prime Minister used to walk down Sparks Street, sometimes hand in hand, and provide photo opportunities. I recall that when that was happening one of the colleagues on his side said, "That is an example of the two extremes in intellect."

Will Senator Graham now deny the intellect of Prime Minister Trudeau? Will he say that he is a washout and a dud and condemn him? I hope not, because Cape Bretoners, and Nova Scotians in general, are usually very loyal. I hope that Senator Graham will keep up his Nova Scotian traditions and remain loyal.

No discussion would be complete without the participation of Senator Carstairs, another very distinguished Liberal with whom I am rubbing elbows today. I need not remind honourable senators of Senator Carstairs' history as the leader of the Liberal Party in Manitoba. She campaigned throughout Manitoba and, indeed, several other provinces, opposing the inclusion of the distinct society clause in the Constitution. Where is she today? She is, unfortunately, silent. Senator Carstairs was closely associated with Elijah Harper, the NDP member of the Manitoba legislature. You will recall that Elijah Harper delayed the Manitoba legislature.

Senator Carstairs is a very persuasive person, except in her arguments. She must have exercised a great influence on Elijah Harper, because he left the NDP and joined the Liberal Party and is now a member of the other place.

• (1630)

He joined the Liberal Party because that was his chance, his best opportunity, his most effective way —

Senator Thériault: — to get elected.

Senator Phillips: — of opposing the distinct society clause. I wonder how Elijah feels today.

Prime Minister Chrétien, in his book Straight from the Heart, expresses pride and, in fact, boasts about his prominent part in developing the 1982 Constitution. Honourable senators, I must confess that I read part of the book, but only part of it. I did not finish it. Enough is enough when you are reading that nonsense. I presume that, throughout the book, he supported the fact that the distinct society clause was not included in the 1982 Constitution, and that he was proud of his part in forcing the 1982 Constitution on Quebec.

He continued his opposition to the distinct society clause throughout the discussion on Meech lake, and he continued it throughout his discussion on the Charlottetown accord.

Has anyone forgotten the joyous meeting between Mr. Chrétien and Clyde Wells at the Liberal leadership convention? The television cameras were all in place, and Mr. Wells was making a belated entrance because he was busy opposing the Charlottetown accord in the Newfoundland legislature. Mr. Chrétien met Mr. Wells at the pre-arranged spot and thanked him for the delay he had caused.

In fact, Premier Wells does not seem to have given up his opposition. In October of this year during the referendum —

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: I apologize for interrupting, but the rules require that I point out that the honourable senator's time has expired. You may continue with leave. Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: Please continue.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, this is most awkward for me because I have just begun. However, I will attempt to consolidate my remarks.

I was mentioning that Premier Wells, during the referendum, reiterated his statement that he would never agree to a distinct society clause that implied that his people were inferior in any way to those in the other provinces.

We in the Progressive Conservative caucus were rather fortunate to have in our midst the Honourable Arthur Tremblay to advise us on constitutional issues. Since his retirement from the Senate he has been an adviser to the PQ government.

Senator Cools: Shame! Shame!

Senator Phillips: He opposes the proposal before us.

We were equally fortunate in having the Honourable Senator Beaudoin as our constitutional adviser. I frequently ask Senator Beaudoin for advice on legal matters, not only constitutional matters but others, and he always advises me of the issues on both sides of any argument.

I watched him on CBC Newsworld when he was being interviewed as an expert on the Constitution. He said, "Well, if it is in the form of a resolution, it could be meaningless. If it is in the form of legislation, it could mean something." Then he came to the point that left me wondering. He said, "It all depends on how the courts interpret it."

I am not criticizing my honourable friend for that statement. It is a very valid point. What is there in this resolution that the courts must interpret? John Crosbie said, when we introduced the Constitution in 1982, that it would be 50 years before the interpretation would be complete. I hope that we are not getting into the same situation here.

During the October referendum, the Prime Minister ignored the predictions that the sovereigntists would win. Waving in front of the television camera, he would say, "Remember the 1982 referendum? I was there. I know. The polls were worse than they are today, and the people voted 60/40. They will do the same thing. It is a non-event. Do not worry about it."

It was not until the international monetary markets began to take note of the impending separatist win that Prime Minister Chrétien decided to take a serious look at the situation. His reaction was most interesting. He looked around and realized, "By God, I have no one in the Liberal cabinet or the Liberal caucus who can change this direction", so he called upon Jean Charest. Somebody had to save Canada. Jean Charest turned the tide, and he did not do it by making a lot of promises, constitutional or otherwise. He stayed with basic, economic questions. He was most effective when he asked, "What kind of future do you want for your children and grandchildren?" That, honourable senators, was the turning point in the referendum. He received very little credit or thanks. In fact, he was not allowed to speak on the CBC, nor was he allowed to speak in the House of Commons on this motion.

• (1640)

Senator Simard: Shame!

Senator Phillips: That, honourable senators, cannot be described as gratitude for saving Canada.

The Prime Minister introduced a rather pathetic package which he misnamed "the unity package." This raises an interesting point. How much time and how much study went into preparing this package? The Prime Minister spent most of November in Israel, Australia and New Zealand. Did Mr. Chrétien receive his inspiration for this package from the Star of Bethlehem, from gazing up at the Southern Cross, or did he receive his inspiration when he made one of his brief visits to the Northern Hemisphere, looked up at the big dipper, said, "Ah, there is the answer," and then dumped the whole contents of the big dipper over us?

The package is ill-conceived, ill-prepared — in fact, honourable senators, I would say that it was drafted by Michel Dupuy during Question Period.

The 1982 Constitution came "straight from the heart." I ask honourable senators: Where did this "misunity" package originate? I suspect that the Prime Minister has had indigestion as a result of the referendum and has regurgitated the Victoria proposals.

This "misunity package" has created more disunity than the October referendum. I say to the Prime Minister with respect: Jean Charest saved your bacon in October. It is time to send for him again, honourable senators, because Canada needs him.

I ask honourable senators this: Why the haste for a constitutional conference on this legislation? A constitutional conference must be held in 1997. I believe that in approximately 15 months from now we will have a constitutional conference. Why create all this discord and disunity? Why have provinces take a viewpoint now and entrench themselves in a certain position from which they will find it difficult to extricate themselves later on?

I would suggest, honourable senators — in fact, I recommend strongly — that we take time to prepare a package that will satisfy Quebec, the western provinces and, indeed, all parts of Canada. I feel that there is a movement towards separation in the western provinces that we are ignoring. If Quebec can have a referendum, so can the other provinces. This government is moving towards a financial crisis. Imagine what would happen to the dollar if we had a referendum in Quebec, a referendum in Alberta, and one in B.C.?

Honourable senators, I hope I am not interrupting the conversation over there.

Senator Prud'homme: I thought that was coming.

Senator Phillips: That is quite possible, honourable senators, if we ignore the aspirations of various parts of the country.

One of the things I wanted to mention — and I will condense this part, even though I should like to expand on it — is that one of the reasons for the discontent in Western Canada is the fact that the cabinet representation from Western Canada is the weakest I have seen on Parliament Hill since 1957. It is soft, secret and, above all, it is scared; scared to speak out for its region. The west now realizes that they cannot depend on the Liberals of Mr. Chrétien. Preston Manning and the unreformed are ineffective. Honourable senators, it is time to send for Mr. Charest again. Not only does Quebec need him, so does the rest of Canada.

Earlier, I mentioned the Constitution conference — and here, again, I will abbreviate my notes. I have a couple of questions; the Prime Minister may have answered one of them yesterday. What happens to the distinct society clause when the constitutional conference occurs in 1997? Does it expire? What happens to the regional vetoes? Do they expire? Have we given them just a temporary measure, only to say, "Here. Enjoy this for 15 months. We will then take it away later on"?

Prior to Hallowe'en, the stores in our area had sales on potato chips and Mrs. Phillips bought some to hand out to children on Hallowe'en evening. I noticed, as I passed them out at the door, that the kids would look at me and say, "Oh, no. Not more potato chips!" Honourable senators, I think Quebec will interpret this exactly that way. They will say, "Oh, no. Not more potato chips — and only until next Hallowe'en."

One omission from the so-called unity package that saddens me is any mention of Canada's native people. If the Prime Minister spent a little more time in Canada, he just might have remembered that the native people, too, have a language problem. They, too, have a cultural problem. It is in far more danger than the language of the majority of people in the province of Quebec.

It is my hope that the resolution, or at least Bill C-110, the veto bill, will go to a Senate committee. Once there, I hope the Senate will fulfil its function and remember that minorities are a very special part of our responsibility.

• (1650)

Frequently we hear the apologists for the unity package — and there are many, honourable senators — say that this is only the first step. A Chinese proverb says that every journey begins with a single step. Well, honourable senators, at my age, before beginning a journey, I like to know several things: I like to know where we are going and what to expect when we arrive there, plus the time of arrival. The idea of this being only a first step does not appeal to me. I want to know where we are going, why we are going there, and when we will get there.

Honourable senators, the past few months was a period of great emotion for Canadians. Surely all the emotion and the undue friction of the last months deserve a better answer than this pathetic motion from a posturing Prime Minister.

Honourable senators, forgive me for taking so long, but I could speak on this subject for hours.

In concluding, honourable senators, when you send your Christmas card to the Prime Minister, instead of writing on it "Enjoy your Florida holiday," write on it, "Send for Jean Charest; you need him again!"

On motion of Senator Bacon, debate adjourned.

EXCISE TAX ACT INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Kirby, seconded by the Honourable Senator Davey, for the adoption of the Twenty-Sixth Report, as amended, of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce (Bill C-103, An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Income Tax Act, with an amendment), presented in the Senate on December 5, 1995.

Hon. Lowell Murray: Honourable senators, when I spoke at second reading debate on November 7, I indicated the support of my party for the principle and intent of this bill. In doing so, I was on pretty solid, historic ground.

The purpose of this bill is to maintain the integrity and effectiveness of a policy, the origins of which are to be found in the report of the O'Leary Royal Commission which had been appointed by Prime Minister Diefenbaker in 1961. That policy is to prohibit the importation into Canada of split-run editions of foreign periodicals. These are the bogus Canadian editions of large foreign publications. For the incremental cost of printing a few thousand extra copies on top of their U.S. press run, with a page or two of Canadian content, they are able to siphon off Canadian advertising dollars. The Canadian magazine industry could not have survived such competition. In any other field, these split runs would be defined as "dumping."

The Canadian magazine industry today is alive and relatively well in part because of the recommendations of the O'Leary Royal Commission. The legislation implementing that policy has been in force for 30 years. Until the arrival of the Reform Party in 1993, it had the support of all parties in Parliament. It is Conservative policy; it is Liberal policy; and, most important, it is understood at home and among our trading partners to be Canada's policy.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Murray: It is an important part of our cultural policy protected under the Free Trade Agreement with the United States, under the NAFTA and, I believe, under the new GATT agreements as well.

The challenge to the policy, and therefore to the survival of the Canadian magazine industry, came in 1993 when Time Warner decided to circumvent the prohibition on the importation of split runs by using electronic transmission of page proofs and printing the so-called "Canadian editions" in Canada. Subsequent actions by the Mulroney government, by the Campbell government and by the Chrétien government have already been outlined in the debate on second reading and in the committee. They form the background to Bill C-103.

This bill was given second reading by the Senate on November 7 and was referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. The committee met in a marathon session of a day and a half on November 30 and December 5 and heard from all interested parties. Concerns were expressed, notably by the Canadian Bar Association, about the drafting of this bill. Also expressed were substantive policy concerns about perverse and unintended effects of the legislation such as preventing Canadian magazines, in the future, from penetrating the U.S. market using split runs. Ironically, the bill intended to protect the Canadian magazine industry also protects the U.S. against Canadian split runs. Harrowsmith magazine is an example of a Canadian magazine which has penetrated the U.S. market through split runs. The Hockey News may be another.

Honourable senators, I share these and other concerns. However, when the time came for the committee to report, I found myself in disagreement with my Conservative colleagues on the committee as well as with some of my Liberal colleagues on the amendment which is now before us. I believe, therefore, that I owe the Senate an explanation.

First, let me say that I did try at the committee to canvass the alternatives to Bill C-103. One alternative which appealed greatly to me was to amend the Tariff Code to capture electronic transmission.

Government witnesses deployed various abstruse arguments in an effort to discourage me from pursuing this alternative. I suspect, and I have some reason to believe, that behind their reluctance to try this policy is the conviction that it would be more vulnerable than is Bill C-103 to a challenge under international trade law. I am not in a position to dispute this. Under the circumstances, therefore, I must accept their judgment.

I also explored the possibility that Bill C-103 is unnecessary because the regulations brought in under the Investment Canada Act in July 1993 by the then minister, the Honourable John Charest, effectively closes the door to other foreign publications doing what Sports Illustrated Canada has done. It certainly seems as if the Charest regulations have been effective, because no other foreign publication has tried to follow in the footsteps of Sports Illustrated in the past two-and-a-half years.

However, the government and the Canadian magazine industry are absolutely convinced that many U.S. publications — Vanity Fair and others have been mentioned — could publish split-run Canadian editions without ever establishing a business, an office or even a telephone number in Canada, thus escaping the authority of the Investment Canada Act.

However, we are left with Bill C-103. The question before us is not whether to defeat it but whether to amend it in such a way as to grandfather 12 issues of Sports Illustrated Canada. This is not a matter of retroactive legislation. As Senator Davey pointed out in his speech here last Thursday, the excise tax on split-run editions will apply only to split-run editions that are published after the day on which the bill receives Royal Assent. The issues of Sports Illustrated Canada that have been published over the past months, and previous to the date of Royal Assent, will not be subject to the tax.

Why, then, should Sports Illustrated Canada be given a licence to publish 12 split runs a year in the future?

The chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, in his speech last Thursday, expressed doubt that Sports Illustrated "had even been told that what they were doing was against government policy." The evidence, Senator Kirby suggested, leans the other way.

Honourable senators, the policy and the legislation prohibiting importation of split runs has been in effect for 30 years. There could not have been the slightest possibility of a doubt, especially on the part of an organization as sophisticated and experienced as Time Warner, as to Canada's policy, as to its purpose and its intent. Almost from the moment in January 1993 when Time Warner announced their plans to commence publication of Sports Illustrated Canada, repeated public statements by responsible government officials, elected and appointed, affirmed Canada's intention to uphold the spirit and intent of our policy and legislation, and to plug any loopholes that might be found.

Let me place a couple of those declarations briefly on the record. On January 13, 1993 — two days after the Time Warner announcement — the Minister of National Revenue, the Honourable Otto Jelinek said:

The rules and regulations in place now are going to be applied and if they attempt to circumvent them, we will do whatever is necessary.

The news article from which I am reading goes on to state:

Jelinek said the rules are meant to ensure that the struggling domestic magazine industry has access to advertising revenues and are not undercut by foreign giants that can offer lower rates.

"We fought to maintain our cultural exemption under free trade," he said.

On January 20, 1993, it was reported:

Marie-Christine Dufour, senior communications adviser to Minister of Communications Perrin Beatty, says that the approval of Investment Canada isn't enough, if other regulations aren't being met.

Talking about the Time Warner plan, she is quoted as having said:

At first glance, this seems to be contravening the spirit, if not the letter, of the tariff. Perrin Beatty is committed to the Canadian magazine industry and we will do everything in our power to maintain that protection.

From the February 1993 issue of Masthead magazine, it was reported:

The government's position seems solid all the way to the top. Asked if Beatty has the support of his cabinet colleagues on this issue, a senior Department of Communications official said, "The Prime Minister himself has said to the minister that he wants the department to come down hard on this." The official implied that the government wants to be seen as standing behind the cultural industries exemption in the Free Trade Agreement.

On February 3, 1993, Mr. Beatty is quoted as having said:

We will do everything to support that policy fully. We're determined to ensure that the Canadian magazine industry is able to survive in the country.

Again, Mr. Beatty, on February 9, 1993, said that he wants to ensure the Canadian cultural policy is respected regardless of the technicalities. Here is the quotation:

"If somebody were to find a loophole in the law we would want to find ways to ensure that the letter and the spirit of the policy were respected," he said.

"We will defend the policy vigorously."

Though Revenue Canada has not yet completed its review, Beatty suggested that Time-Warner, which owns Sports Illustrated, is at least violating the spirit of the federal magazine policy.

March 17, 1993 the Minister of National Revenue is quoted as having said:

"If they're going to want to circumvent the rules, then we're going to look at changing the rules to protect the Canadian industry," Jelinek said...

Finally, on March 26, when we appointed the O'Callaghan-Tassé task force, the news release over the names of Communications Minister Beatty and Revenue Minister Jelinek announced that there would be a formal review of "the necessary measures to enhance its policy in support of the Canadian magazine industry."

A little later Mr. Beatty is quoted as saying:

"The Government wants to ensure that the instruments within its current policy framework that have fostered the development of this industry are up-to-date and effective"....

"Canada has produced a vibrant, home-grown magazine industry whose livelihood depends on Canadian advertising revenues," Mr. Beatty said. "It is a fundamental characteristic of our cultural policy," he added.

Finally, honourable senators, I ask you to pay particular attention to this statement from March 26, 1993, when we appointed the O'Callaghan-Tassé task force, a statement attributed to Mr. Jelinek:

"The electronic transmission of page proofs across the border for printing and distribution in Canada was not envisaged when the policy instruments were established in 1965," the Minister said. "That is why updating enforcement mechanisms is absolutely vital."

Honourable senators, I do not think that those statements by responsible Canadian officials could have left any doubt — if any doubt existed — as to the intentions of the government, faced with the decision and the business plan of Time Warner and Sports Illustrated Canada. Time Warner found that technology could be used to circumvent the legislation and to frustrate its purpose and intent.

Honourable senators have heard the government statements of 1993 that I just quoted. Against this background, what Time Warner did was not illegal; just contemptuous of Canada, of Canada's policy and of Canada's interest.

I say, honourable senators, that the technology was widely available to other foreign publications, but other foreign publications were respectful of our policy and did not try to thwart it. Only Time Warner did so, and they now seek an exemption from this legislation to the extent of 12 issues per year of Sports Illustrated Canada.

Honourable senators, I believe Parliament's answer, Canada's answer, must be "No" — no bonus, no dividend, no reward for thumbing your nose at Canada's long-standing policy.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

On motion of Senator Kinsella, debate adjourned.

CODE OF CONDUCT

REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the second report of the Special Joint Committee on the Code of Conduct (name change in French), presented in the Senate on December 6, 1995.

Hon. Donald H. Oliver: Honourable senators, I move that the report be adopted now.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is now about three minutes before the time when we would interrupt the proceedings and ring the bells. The only item left is the adjournment motion.

If it is agreed, honourable senators, we will suspend the session now. The bells will start to ring at 5:15, as provided for in the rules.

Is that agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The sitting was suspended until 5:30 p.m.

• (1730)

ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES READJUSTMENT BILL, 1995

MOTION TO INSTRUCT LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS
COMMITTEE TO TABLE FINAL REPORT NEGATIVED ON DIVISION

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it was moved by the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Robichaud, P.C.:

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the Message from the House of Commons, dated June 20, 1995, and on the motion of the Honourable Senator Graham dated June 28, 1995, regarding Bill C-69, An Act to provide for the establishment of electoral boundaries commissions and the readjustment of electoral boundaries.

Motion negatived on the following division:

YEAS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Adams	Kolber
Anderson	Lewis
Austin	Losier-Cool
Bacon	MacEachen
Bonnell	Marchand
Bosa	Milne
Bryden	Olson
Carstairs	Pearson
Cools	Perrault
Davey	Petten
De Bané	Pitfield
Fairbairn	Poulin
Gauthier	Rizzuto
Gigantès	Robichaud
Grafstein	Rompkey
Graham	Roux
Haidasz	Stanbury
Hays	Stewart
Hébert	Stollery
Hervieux-Payette	Thériault
Kenny	Watt
Kirby	Wood—44.

NAYS
THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Andreychuk	Kelly
Angus	Keon
Atkins	Kinsella
Balfour	Lavoie-Roux
Beaudoin	LeBreton
Berntson	Lynch-Staunton
Bolduc	MacDonald (Halifax)
Buchanan	Meighen
Carney	Murray
Charbonneau	Nolin
Cochrane	Oliver
Cogger	Ottenheimer
Cohen	Phillips
Comeau	Prud'homme
DeWare	Rivest
Di Nino	Roberge
Doody	Robertson
Doyle	Rossiter
Eyton	St. Germain
Ghitter	Simard
Grimard	Spivak
Gustafson	Stratton
Jessiman	Sylvain
Johnson	Tkachuk
Kelleher	Twinn—50.

ABSTENTIONS
THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Nil.

PEARSON INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT
AGREEMENTS BILL

MOTION TO INSTRUCT LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS
COMMITTEE TO TABLE FINAL REPORT NEGATIVED ON DIVISION

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it was moved by the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Lucier:

That it be an instruction of this House to the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs that no later than Wednesday, December 13, 1995, it present its final report to the Senate on the motion and the Message referred to it on October 5, 1994, relating to certain amendments to Bill C-22, An Act respecting certain agreements concerning the redevelopment and operations of Terminals 1 and 2 at Lester B. Pearson International Airport.

Motion negatived on the following division:

YEAS
THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Adams	Losier-Cool
Anderson	MacEachen
Austin	Marchand
Bacon	Milne
Bonnell	Olson
Bosa	Pearson
Bryden	Perrault
Carstairs	Petten
Cools	Pitfield
Davey	Poulin
De Bané	Prud'homme
Fairbairn	Rizzuto
Gauthier	Robichaud
Gigantès	Rompkey
Grafstein	Roux
Graham	Sparrow
Haidasz	Stanbury
Hays	Stewart
Hébert	Stollery
Hervieux-Payette	Thériault
Kenny	Watt
Kirby	Wood—45.
Lewis

NAYS
THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Andreychuk	Kelly
Angus	Keon
Atkins	Kinsella
Balfour	Lavoie-Roux
Beaudoin	LeBreton
Berntson	Lynch-Staunton
Bolduc	MacDonald (Halifax)
Buchanan	Meighen
Carney	Murray
Charbonneau	Nolin
Cochrane	Oliver
Cogger	Ottenheimer
Cohen	Phillips
Comeau	Rivest
DeWare	Roberge
Di Nino	Robertson
Doody	Rossiter
Doyle	St. Germain
Eyton	Simard
Ghitter	Spivak
Grimard	Stratton
Gustafson	Sylvain
Jessiman	Tkachuk
Johnson	Twinn—49.
Kelleher

ABSTENTIONS
THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

The Senate adjourned until Wednesday, December 13, 1995, at 1:30 p.m.

Nil.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, December 13, 1995

The Senate met at 1:30 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

PEARSON AIRPORT AGREEMENTS

THIRD REPORT OF SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Finlay MacDonald, Chairman of the Special Senate Committee on Pearson Airport Agreements, presented the following report:

Wednesday, December 13, 1995

The Special Committee of the Senate on the Pearson Airport Agreements has the honour to present its

THIRD REPORT

Your committee, which was authorized by the Senate on May 4, 1995 to examine and report upon all matters concerning the policies and negotiations leading up to, and including, the agreements respecting the redevelopment and operation of Terminals 1 and 2 at Lester B. Pearson International Airport and the circumstances relating to the cancellation thereof, has, in obedience to its Order of Reference, examined the said subject and now tables its report with the following observations.

Although your committee is satisfied that all essential elements of this inquiry have been produced and subjected to public scrutiny, it reserves the right to hold further hearings if additional relevant evidence emerges. It has therefore adjourned sine die.

Your committee notes that while it was granted a budget of $298,000, it has completed its study under budget. A full accounting of expenses will be given at a later time pursuant to Rule 105.

Respectfully submitted,

FINLAY MACDONALD
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator MacDonald, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

BRITISH COLUMBIA TREATY COMMISSION BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Aboriginal Peoples, presented the following report:

Wednesday, December 13, 1995

The Standing Senate Committee on Aboriginal Peoples has the honour to present its

TENTH REPORT

Your committee, to which was referred the Bill C-107, An Act respecting the establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Wednesday, December 6, 1995, examined the said Bill and now reports the same without amendment.

Respectfully submitted,

A. RAYNELL ANDREYCHUK
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Graham, bill placed on the Orders of the day for third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

SMALL BUSINESS LOANS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-99, to amend the Small Business Loans Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

• (1340)

On motion of Senator Graham, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 57(1)(f), bill placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

CRIMINAL CODE

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

Hon. Anne C. Cools presented Bill S-15, to amend the Criminal Code of Canada (plea bargaining).

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

On motion of Senator Cools, bill placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading on Tuesday, December 19, 1995.

NATIONAL PROTECTED AREAS STRATEGY

ENERGY, THE ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES— COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO EXTEND DATE OF FINAL REPORT

Hon. Eric Arthur Berntson (Deputy Leader of the Opposition), for Senator Carney, pursuant to notice of December 12, 1995, moved:

That, notwithstanding the order of Reference adopted by the Senate on Wednesday, April 27, 1994, the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources, which was authorized to undertake a study of the policy options available to the government to complete the network of pristine areas that represent Canada's natural regions and the creation of a national protected areas strategy and to make recommendations thereon, have power to present its final report no later than Sunday, March 31, 1996, and

That, notwithstanding the usual practices, if the Senate is not sitting when the report of the committee is completed, the committee shall deposit its report with the Clerk of the Senate and the said report shall thereupon be deemed to have been tabled in the chamber.

Motion agreed to.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Hon. John B. Stewart, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs have the power to sit at 3:15 in the afternoon today, Wednesday, December 13, 1995, even though the Senate may then be sitting, and that Rule 95(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTION PERIOD

JUSTICE

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA—ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—APPROACH TO SWISS GOVERNMENT FOR INFORMATION—AUTHORITY FOR PROCEDURE FOLLOWED—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. David Tkachuk: Honourable senators, I have a question concerning the letter sent to the Swiss government inquiring about Swiss bank accounts in the Airbus situation. I want to preface my remarks by saying that, in this country, in order for the police to get into the bank account of a citizen, they would need a search warrant. In other words, they would have to ask a judge for permission, and evidence would need to be given to that judge before the police could proceed.

In respect of a letter being sent to the Government of Switzerland asking for access to a citizen's bank account, it would be necessary to follow some procedure, such as that under the Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters Act, or under a treaty between Canada and Switzerland, outlining how a Canadian citizen can protect his right to privacy.

I want to know under what authority, act or treaty the federal government acted in sending the letter to the Government of Switzerland regarding the alleged bank accounts of Mr. Mulroney and Mr. Moores.

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I am sure that I have answered before in this house that there was a clear procedure followed on the question of the letter that was prepared within the Department of Justice, on the request of the RCMP, addressed to the Swiss government. This same procedure has been followed on many previous occasions.

Although it seems to have occurred in this case, for whatever reason, no one can recall that there has ever been a breach of confidentiality in other cases in the past. The Swiss authorities have been very respectful of that confidentiality, and it has been very much a part of the form of correspondence in this case.

I believe there is a treaty with Switzerland — I think it goes back to 1993 — as to the exchange of this kind of correspondence.

Senator Tkachuk: Perhaps the honourable leader could respond to my question. The point I was attempting to make was that, in order to get into a bank account or an alleged bank account in Canada, one must obtain the permission of a judge. If the RCMP wants to get into a bank account, the government has said that there are lots of these kinds of actions or inquiries; that this kind of thing happens all the time; that since it is secret, therefore it can happen. I do not think that, just because it is secret, it can happen.

What is the procedure normally followed in these cases? Do the police need some kind of evidence before they can go on hunting and fishing expeditions into the personal affairs of Canadian citizens? What evidence was brought forward? Who authorized that evidence? Was it an official or a deputy? Who is named in the treaty as authorizing that this inquiry could proceed and that letter be written? That is what I should like to know.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, with respect to that specific part of my honourable friend's question, I will inquire as to what the answer is, and whether I can give it to him.

I would repeat to my honourable friend that I know he is making a case for how things may be done in Canada.

• (1350)

I have been relating to him and to other senators for many days now that there is a process which has been used repeatedly in the past. I will not argue the efficacy of that process with my honourable friend. I am simply stating that there is a process whereby these communications are transmitted to Switzerland. I am advised that, in this case, the same process was followed as has been followed in other instances when this kind of assistance was sought from Switzerland.

Senator Tkachuk: Honourable senators, I will try to end my queries on this last question. The leader has told me and other honourable senators that there is a process. I want to know what the process is, because I think it is important that citizens of the country know how they are protected under that process when actions are taken by the police and the state, and when letters are sent to foreign governments asking for information about them.

Please, therefore, do not tell me that there is a process; explain to me what the process is. Was the same process followed in the case of the Airbus inquiries to Switzerland as was followed in cases involving other citizens of Canada? If we do not need any evidence to inquire about such things, maybe we should change the process. I just want to know what the process is.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I have explained what the process is.

Senator Berntson: No, you have not.

Senator Fairbairn: The RCMP, in the course of its inquiries, seeks assistance from the Department of Justice to transmit, government to government — in this case to Switzerland — a request for assistance. The process followed in this case is the same as the process that has been followed in other cases.

My honourable friend shakes his head. I can only give him the information that I have been given. The information I have is that this procedure is exactly the same procedure as has been followed in other cases.

Senator Tkachuk: Honourable senators, I must break my own rule here and ask another question. This is very frustrating. From whom do they ask permission? Does the secretary in the RCMP sergeant's office say, "Gee, I would like to write a letter to Switzerland and inquire about Senator Gustafson," or is there some process within the police department? Does some bureaucrat who is in charge of the cops have to authorize the request? Does it then flow to the Department of Justice? Do they write to the clerk in Saskatoon, or do they ask the deputy, the minister or some director in charge? Someone must be consulted.

It is not good enough to say that a letter was sent to the Department of Justice which then sends a letter to Switzerland. Who sends the letter and to whom? Who signs it off? Where does it go? Who carries it over there? Who has access to it? What happens to it then? It is not good enough to say it goes from one department to the other. I want to know the process. I want to know the process whereby we protect Canadian people in such instances.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I appreciate my friend's question, as I have appreciated his rhetoric and questioning before the Pearson inquiry committee.

Senator Berntson: What has that to do with it?

Senator Fairbairn: I am saying that Senator Tkachuk is in good form today. He is in predictable form. It is a very invigorating performance to witness; I simply make the comment.

My honourable friend has asked a myriad of very specific questions, the answers to which I am not sure I can provide, partly because a court case is in progress.

Some Hon. Senators: Oh! Oh!

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, there is a matter before the courts, and I certainly would not be respecting my responsibilities if I were to say anything that would in any way affect or impede that process. That is all I am saying.

I will take my honourable friend's series of questions as notice and see what kind of answers I can provide.

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA—ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—STAGE OF TREATY WITH SWITZERLAND AT TIME OF REQUEST—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. R. James Balfour: Honourable senators, my question is also to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. Is it true that the treaty to which my honourable friend referred was not actually signed between the governments of Switzerland and Canada until some two months after the letter in question was dispatched?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will check that information.

Senator Balfour: Is my honourable friend saying she does not know whether the treaty was in force when the letter in question was dispatched?

Senator Olson: Ask Mulroney. He would know.

Senator Fairbairn: I am aware that there is a treaty, and I will check on Senator Balfour's question.

Senator Balfour: Honourable senators, I am nonplussed to learn that the Leader of the Government in the Senate was not aware that this agreement was not actually signed until some two months after the letter in question was dispatched. I would ask her to either explain her lack of knowledge or enlighten this chamber.

Senator St. Germain: Or resign from cabinet.

Senator Balfour: Are you asking a question, Senator Olson?

Senator Olson: Yes.

Senator Balfour: Would you stand in your place? I will yield.

Senator Olson: I cannot ask you a question.

Some Hon. Senators: Stand up!

Senator Olson: It is against the rules.

Senator Balfour: I will rephrase the question. Does my honourable friend not distinguish between civil proceedings, such as have been launched in connection with this Airbus matter, and criminal proceedings when seeking a reason why facts cannot be disclosed in this chamber?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I am in no position to give a legal opinion. I have been trying, as best I can, to gather information to convey to this house. I want to be sure that the information that I gather is as complete as it can be. I am very respectful of my honourable friend's question. I wish to be able to give him a precise answer, and I shall do so to the best of my ability.

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA—ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—MOTIVATION
OF MINISTER IN INSTITUTING INQUIRIES

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, my question is to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. As we consider how the Minister of Justice operates and signs warrants that virtually challenge the Constitution on several pieces of legislation, whether it be Bill C-18, C-68, C-22 or others, and in view of this overambitious minister's contradictory statements as to when he received information and to whom it was given, is the minister prepared to stand in this place and say this process is not politically motivated or a fishing trip?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I am absolutely prepared to stand in this place and say it was not politically motivated.

COMMUNICATIONS

RADIO CANADA INTERNATIONAL—FUTURE PROSPECTS FOR CONTINUANCE—REPORT OF SENATE COMMITTEE ON CONTINUED
FUNDING—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Janis Johnson: Honourable senators, like many other Canadians, I am very upset about the demise of Radio Canada International. My colleague Senator Oliver raised the issue yesterday, and I am sure we have all read the articles in the papers today regarding the cuts at RCI. One hundred and twenty employees have received notice that the service will be closing on March 31. Radio Canada International's service is broadcast primarily on short wave in eight languages to more than 126 countries. It has been around for approximately 50 years now. I believe it has played an important role in delivering Canadian news abroad.

Will the Leader of the Government in the Senate tell us: What is the government's position on the cuts announced yesterday? Is it the federal government's position that Canada does not need an international service like the one provided by RCI? Does the government not have a responsibility to safeguard this service which promotes Canada abroad?

• (1400)

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I sympathize with my honourable friend's point of view. The announcement in this matter was made yesterday afternoon. It has been the position of the government that it is the responsibility of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to decide the future of this international service.

As the honourable senator knows, the previous government transferred part of the funding responsibility for this service to the Department of Foreign Affairs in order to help maintain the service. Over the past year, however, there has been a fairly rigid regime of reductions and cutbacks. The Department of Foreign Affairs has found that it does not have the funding necessary to continue its contribution to this service, and makes that comment with great regret. Therefore, the CBC itself, in its budget reductions, has chosen this particular route.

Hon. Eric Arthur Berntson (Deputy Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, who reduced their budget?

Senator Fairbairn: This decision has come from the CBC. I cannot offer my friend any comfort today that the Foreign Affairs Department is in any position to pick up the cost of the service.

Senator Johnson: Honourable senators, I ask the leader to appeal to her colleagues, and make them aware that the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications held hearings on this issue. We studied the matter and recommended in our report tabled last spring that funding for RCI be continued. It was a unanimous report of the Transport and Communications Committee.

I should like to have some assurance from the Leader of the Government in the Senate that she will bring this report to the attention of the ministers in cabinet. The work that has been done by the members of our committee regarding Radio Canada International was extensive. We certainly had a great deal to contribute to this discussion. Will the Leader of the Government in the Senate make a commitment to me to pass this information along to her government so that they can at least review the situation perhaps one last time?

Senator Fairbairn: I can make that commitment to Senator Johnson and, if she has the report handy, I would be pleased to make that commitment, as I did yesterday in answer to questions from my friend Senator Prud'homme. I did convey the concern expressed by Senator Prud'homme and others yesterday in this chamber. I will be happy to pass on the Senate committee's report and its conclusions to my colleagues.

Hon. Marcel Prud'Homme: Honourable senators, I am glad that Senator Johnson asked that question. I was also on my feet to ask the minister if my message of yesterday had been conveyed, and I am glad to hear that it has been conveyed.

I should like to emphasize that, even though it is the CBC's business to do what it wants with Radio Canada International, I think that the future of Radio Canada International is too important an issue to be left to the CBC. I am positive that it is a political question which should be decided at the political level, for the political interests of Canada. That, in my humble estimation, should precede the mandate of the CBC to decide whether or not to cut the funding for that service.

Since yesterday, we have been inundated — and very spontaneously, which is a little different from the gun control representation — with hundreds of thousands of calls from very genuine, unorganized groups of people who got in touch with me as soon as they learned of my interest and my question to you.

I wish to re-emphasize that this is not a partisan matter. This is very important.

[Translation]

This is of great significance for the power and glory of Canada. It is of the utmost importance that nothing be spared to save this institution which has served Canada well.

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I take my honourable friend's representation seriously, as I did yesterday.

He would know, however, that his is not the only voice out there, because there is no question that this is a very respected and popular service of long standing in this country.

I wish I were able to give a different answer than I have given to him and to Senator Johnson. However, I will certainly transmit today's Hansard and the report of the committee to my colleagues so that they will have that information before them as well.

HUMAN RIGHTS

VISIT OF FEDERAL COMMISSIONER TO CHINA—REMARKS REPORTED IN MEDIA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Consiglio Di Nino: Honourable senators, my question is also for the minister. In The Globe and Mail of November 29, there was an article about Mr. Yalden's visit to China. He is quoted as having said that he:

"...didn't come all the way out here to express misgivings about shortcomings. I'm not looking for some negative things to say."

When asked if he would raise the issue of human rights abuses with the Chinese, he is quoted as having said:

"I don't suppose I'd take kindly if some Chinese visitor would start asking me about illegal abortions, for that matter, and whether (Dr. Henry) Morgentaler ought to be doing what he's doing."

Honourable senators, since I have expressed my concerns about human rights abuses in China in the past, perhaps the Leader of the Government in the Senate could tell us if Mr. Yalden is expressing government positions in these matters?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I presume that Senator Di Nino is referring to Mr. Max Yalden, who is the head of the Human Rights Commission. This was a visit of his own to China. However, I would be pleased to see Mr. Yalden's comments.

My honourable friend knows — because many senators in this house have exchanged views on this issue over the last many months — what the Prime Minister, the Foreign Affairs Minister and others have conveyed to the Chinese. I can speak only on behalf of my government colleagues. I would need to take a look at Mr. Yalden's remarks before responding to my honourable friend.

Senator Di Nino: Obviously, it will be seen as a position of the government. I think that should be clarified.

Could the minister obtain for us some report, if possible, of Mr. Yalden's visit and what results from such activity once he returns?

Senator Fairbairn: I will do my best, Senator Di Nino.

FURTHER INCARCERATION OF CHINESE
DISSIDENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, if there is timidity in the position of the Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission with respect to human rights abuses in China, could the minister inform this house as to the position of the Government of Canada with respect to the incarceration for another 15 years of Mr. Wei Jingsheng?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will seek information on my friend's question.

QUEBEC

DISTINCT SOCIETY MOTION—LEGAL OPINION SOUGHT ON INTERPRETATION OF WORDING—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate a series of questions arising out of the distinct society motion.

I do not wish to debate the distinct society issue, but contained in the resolution are the words "people of Quebec." I am sure that Senator MacEachen, for one in this chamber, will be aware of the fact that, internationally, we have scrupulously avoided the use of the words "people" or "peoples" in any sense, except when we refer to nations. In fact, bureaucrats, parliamentary delegations and others have been given advice over the years that we not use the words "people" or "peoples" and, in particular, within the International Labour Organization and the Human Rights Commission, that we not use this phrase because it leads to self-determination in the international law, practice, and international diplomacy fields.

• (1410)

In light of that policy, could the honourable senator advise me whether the international lawyers in the Department of Justice were asked for their comments? Were the lawyers in the Department of Foreign Affairs consulted as to the use of these words and the implications that they may have? Further, is the government concerned, or has it made a determination that the phrase "people of Quebec" in no way diminishes the rights of the aboriginal people in the Province of Quebec? Finally, does the government believe that this proposal could, in fact, lead to an opening of recognition by other countries of Quebec's desire for self-determination?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, this question will require inquiries on my part, except for one part of it.

I mentioned in my speech of last week that nothing in this resolution would detract in any way from the rights of the aboriginal people and the protection of their interests within the Constitution, and that very much includes their inherent rights.

Senator Andreychuk: Honourable senators, would the minister also include in the answer whether Department of Justice lawyers and/or lawyers within the Department of Foreign Affairs have given that opinion? It is my understanding that some officials have indicated that this portion was included inadvertently, and that lawyers were not consulted on this issue.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, my honourable friend would know that I cannot give to this house legal opinions given by the law officers of the Crown to the government. However, I have taken note of the honourable senator's questions, and I will seek to obtain whatever clarification I can for her.

Senator Andreychuk: Part of my concern is that it seems there has been quite a change, perhaps not in policy but in procedure, in the Department of Justice. In fact, the certificate that any particular act or piece of legislation complies with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms seems to be given rather freely with the comment that if we do not comply, citizens can take us to court. I am very concerned because the Department of Justice has a unique responsibility to each and every citizen to ensure that the Charter of Rights is upheld, as they uphold other laws.

Senator Fairbairn: I will certainly pursue my friend's question, but I would suggest to her that there would be no statement or documents put forward by the Department of Justice that would in any way impede the protection of Canadian citizens under the Charter.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Claude Rivest: Honourable senators, in light of the international dimension of the matter raised by Senator Andreychuk, could the Leader of the Government ask the Department of Justice to find examples in other legal or constitutional texts, in our constitutional law or our statutes, of the expression "aboriginal people" or even "Acadian people?"

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will add my honourable friend's question to the list.

AGRICULTURE

WESTERN GRAIN MARKETING—POSSIBILITY OF NATIONAL PLEBISCITE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Leonard J. Gustafson: Honourable senators, my question to the Leader of the Government in the Senate is with regard to a grain marketing plebiscite.

As you know, the Province of Alberta held a plebiscite on whether there should be a choice in the marketing of grain, and the farmers of Alberta voted two to one in favour of choice. On May 13, 1993, in response to a question about barley marketing, the Prime Minister of Canada said that farmers should be consulted through a plebiscite.

Is it the intention of the Minister of Agriculture and the government to honour the promise that was made by the Prime Minister of Canada over two years ago, on May 13, 1993?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, we are aware of the plebiscite in the Province of Alberta, and the views and opinions of Alberta farmers are very important to the process that is currently under way in the Department of Agriculture.

My honourable friend will also know that this issue stretches beyond provincial boundaries in Western Canada. For that reason, the whole future of the marketing system is under debate, not just in Alberta but throughout the west. As a result, the government has launched the Western Grain Marketing Panel to review the entire process. That panel is doing its job. The plebiscite which took place in Alberta will be a part of that review process. I cannot tell my honourable friend when that process is scheduled to be completed and reported upon, but I will try to find out for him.

Senator Gustafson: Honourable senators, is the honourable leader aware of the urgency of this issue? Honourable senators will know that farmers have been taking grain across the border into the United States. In fact, one of the senators from the United States tried to bring grain into Canada, accompanied by a farmer at Estevan and was turned back. A number of truckloads of grain have crossed the border going the other way. There is a great deal of uncertainty here. Does the leader not realize that it is important that a solution be found to this difficult situation?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I am aware of that. I am aware that there are very strong views on this issue. I am aware also of the strength of the views contrary to the plebiscite held in Alberta. For many years, this matter has been more than a prickly issue in Western Canada; it is a fundamental issue. As technology changes and different regimes are put in place, it becomes even more complicated.

It is for that reason that the current process of review is under way. It will not be just a process carried out in boardrooms, but in town hall meetings throughout the west. The question itself has caused some controversy in my province, and this broader process will involve the farmers, to hear what they have to say.

My colleague the Minister of Agriculture will want this process completed as expeditiously as possible. There are huge issues at stake here, including the one perspective of dual marketing and the other perspective of improving but still protecting the entity of the Canadian Wheat Board for the benefit of farmers. It is definitely not an issue to be taken lightly, as my friend well knows, and the minister is trying to gather the broadest set of opinions that he can. We will then have the tremendous responsibility of coming to a conclusion in the months ahead.

Senator Gustafson: Honourable senators, I am concerned about what is happening with a number of issues relating to agriculture, that they all seem to be ending up before panels, with no decisions being taken. It is my view that it is time the government took some responsibility and made some decisions in the best interests of farmers. We cannot continue to have blue, red and yellow ribbon committees. We are being "committed" and "panelled" to death, but no decisions are being taken. That is not just my own view; it is what I am hearing from farm groups and others across the country.

• (1420)

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, the best interests of farmers is the goal that is being pursued by this Minister of Agriculture. While one can become impatient, perhaps, with panel reviews, on the other hand an issue such as this, which involves access to a consultation process, is important in itself, even though it may take a little bit longer.

I cannot emphasize enough to my honourable friend the importance given to this particular issue by the Minister of Agriculture. He is hoping to be able to make a decision. However, he wants to be in the position of having a broadly based measure of opinion throughout the prairies before he makes such a decision.

COMMUNICATIONS

RADIO CANADA INTERNATIONAL—POSSIBILITY OF ALTERNATIVE FUNDING—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, I am afraid that today I am not speaking with my usual vigour because of a bad case of laryngitis. It is a bit like a baseball pitcher developing a sore arm — you cannot work at your profession.

I should like to identify myself with the remarks made previously by honourable senators regarding Radio Canada International. An all-party recommendation of a few months ago suggested that Radio Canada International is doing excellent work, that it should be allowed to carry on and be provided with the necessary funds to do so. However, budget cutbacks are such that the CBC has had to reduce its commitment to RCI.

My question relates to the future of this valuable agency. This is not the time for Canada to get out of the international communications battle. It is a time when all our trading partners are communicating as never before. There are 24-hour news channels in Britain, Italy and Spain. The distinguished Leader of the Opposition is aware of that revolution, since he has his own satellite dish.

At a time of incredible global revolution in techniques such as digitalization and new methods of transmitting signals from one nation to the other, this is not the time for us to leave the scene.

I wish to ask the Leader of the Government in the Senate if consideration can be given to alternative suggestions and other ideas to maintain RCI's viability. Of all countries, there is now a degree of privatization in the Russian short wave service. Some of you, no doubt, have listened to Radio Moscow.

Hon. Pat Carney: Is this a question?

Senator Perrault: Yes, it is a question. I am sorry that Senator Carney seems so little interested in international trade and relations.

Senator Carney: I am fascinated by your question.

Senator Perrault: For example, the other day it was startling to hear a commercial on Radio Moscow concerning the Odessa steel factory. The commercial stated that the steel beams built in Odessa have a tensile strength equivalent to the best steel beams in the world. A phone number was provided for further information.

Is there a possibility that we can find some alternative funding for Radio Canada International — perhaps some of it in the private sector? What about the major trading entities in Canada providing some partial subsidization for RCI — an agency which is doing this country a great deal of good?

My question goes beyond assuring that Radio Canada International goes out with a bang, rather than a whimper. Beyond that, I would like to see it made sustainable so that it is possible for the agency to survive. A number of people in that organization have been striving gallantly for months to keep the entity alive. It has done great communications work for us. Let us hope that there are some alternatives.

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, Senator Perrault with laryngitis still has a stronger voice than almost anyone I know.

I have listened to the honourable senator's question about alternative funding. I will take the suggestion, along with the other ones that have been made in this house, to the appropriate place. I now have the report from Senator Johnson. I will transmit the views of senators on both sides of this house to my colleagues in cabinet as quickly as I can.

Senator Carney: Honourable senators, I should like to add to Senator Perrault's suggestion with a specific question of my own.

Could the Leader of the Government look at the suggestion of the honourable senator that the Department of Foreign Affairs help fund the short wave system, beyond whatever contributions they may now be making?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I will look into that matter as well.

ANSWER TO ORDER PAPER QUESTION TABLED

CANADA POST CORPORATION—REVIEW BY PRICE WATERHOUSE OF CONTRACTS IN SYDNEY, NOVA SCOTIA—
REQUEST FOR PARTICULARS

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government) tabled the answer to Question No. 102—by Senator Forrestall.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

AUDITOR GENERAL ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government) moved third reading of Bill C-83, to amend the Auditor General Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

[Translation]

EMPLOYMENT EQUITY BILL

THIRD READING

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government) moved third reading of Bill C-64, respecting employment equity.

Hon. Thérèse Lavoie-Roux: Honourable senators, I would simply like to say a few words at the third reading stage of Bill C-64. Consideration of this bill has probably taken too long.

As a preamble, I would point out that this kind of thing happens all too often. This bill was tabled in the House of Commons in the fall of 1994, but we did not get it until October 1995. By then, there was a pressing need to pass the bill. This is a valid bill. Everyone agrees on the principle of the bill.

When the time came to put forward a valid amendment — that everyone, including Minister Axworthy, supported — I could not do so three weeks ago because there was not enough time. The House was about to adjourn. Every time they do not want a bill to be sent back to the House of Commons with an amendment — as happened this fall — they threaten to adjourn the House. We in the Senate cannot work like this.

Minister Axworthy wrote me that he had heard of my putting forward a very valid and articulate amendment. It was very nice of him. He said that if we sent the bill back to the House, he was willing to ask the cabinet and then the House of Commons to include an amendment in Bill C-64. This amendment would apply to both Houses and to the Library of Parliament, as it does to employers in the federal public service and the private sector. They will have to comply with the provisions of the bill in achieving equality in the workplace.

This amendment was first proposed in October by Senator Johnson. The minister agreed to include it in the bill. He came to see us this week. He made a real commitment to the committee concerning this amendment.

At any rate, because the minister made that commitment, we decided not to move an amendment, which would have forced the Senate to send the bill back to the House of Commons. Given the goodwill demonstrated by the minister and the commitment he made concerning this amendment as well as the other two that were put forward, one by Senator Kinsella, on which he may want to elaborate, and the other by Senator Cochrane, on which she may also want to elaborate, these amendments could be entertained by the minister, then submitted to cabinet and eventually included in the legislation.

The minister told us that, by March 1, 1996, amendments would be submitted to cabinet to ensure that the Act respecting employment equity also applies to parliamentary employers. It was totally inexplicable that this had not been provided for by the bill all along. Problems were expected because of the fact that outside pressure could be brought to bear on both Houses.

The amendment was prepared in consultation with the Senate's legal counsel. It provides for mechanisms safeguarding the house against any such interference. The minister also said that he would urge the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration and the Board of Internal Economy of the House of Commons to develop the mechanisms and procedures necessary to implement the principles of employment equity contained in Bill C-64, previous to making the change he plans to make in March.

• (1430)

I will not elaborate on the other two amendments. After the minister made this firm commitment before the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology, we Conservative senators decided that we had achieved what we had set out to do. We had no reason to doubt the minister's good faith. That is what mattered to us. We decided not to move an amendment, but rather to report on these particular points that the minister had raised. We shall wait and see how things turn out.

There is no doubt that the minister will carry out his commitment in March. In the meantime, both this place and the other place will have prepared to implement the legislation.

I regret that needless hassle has to be caused for lack of time. Had it not been for the vigilance of my two colleagues Senator Kinsella and Senator Cochrane, the bill would not have come this far.

Bill C-64 deals with the whole issue of defining the concepts of "visible minorities" and "persons with disabilities." It would not have been complete, even if we set aside the amendment I had moved to begin with. Bills like this one are drafted too hastily. It is difficult to explain how such deficiencies can creep into bills. We have found an example regarding the definition of "visible minorities" and "persons with disabilities."

[English]

Hon. Janis Johnson: Honourable senators, I want to thank my colleagues on the committee who helped us with Bill C-64.

Senator Bonnell: What about the chairman?

Senator Johnson: We did it despite the chairman. We came to an agreement with Senator Bosa in the chair.

I am very pleased to add to my colleague's remarks. I did respond to Senator Losier-Cool when she introduced the bill on behalf of the government, so, in very succinct terms, I should like to put exactly what has evolved.

My colleague Senator Lavoie-Roux has given you the history. We in the committee have had a lot of fun and games just trying to come to terms with the amendments, after concluding that we all agreed with the principle. As honourable senators know, we did come to the conclusion that we would recommend passage without amendment. However, there are some caveats, and they include several things to which some honourable senators have already referred.

When the work was undertaken, I wanted to include parliamentary employers under Bill C-64. That was my only major recommendation when I first spoke on this legislation. That recommendation turned into an amendment which led to other amendments as we continued to study the bill. I think we did a very good job of coming up with some other recommendations to improve the legislation.

As you know, we heard from a number of witnesses, many of whom indicated their support for the proposal to have this bill apply to Parliament, specifically the House of Commons, the Senate and the library as employers.

Yesterday morning, the minister appeared before us for the second time to talk about the bill. During his testimony, he agreed there would be some benefit to including Parliament employers under the Employment Equity Act. In his letter to Senator Lavoie-Roux on December 4 regarding our proposed amendments, he also stated that we had developed a sound and innovative legislative proposal for extending coverage of Bill C-64 to include the staff of Parliament.

The very fact that he appeared before us twice and wrote this letter to Senator Lavoie-Roux is some indication of how we have worked together to try to make this very positive legislation, rather than just opposing it and presenting negative amendments.

Also, the minister stated very clearly at yesterday's meeting that he supports our amendments to include Parliament. Last month, Max Yalden, the Commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, appeared and said that, in his view, the House of Commons and the Senate should be included, and that the law should apply to the two bodies.

Honourable senators, when Robert Marleau, the Clerk of the House of Commons, appeared before the committee, he was asked if it would make a difference to the pursuit of the principle of employment equity if the House of Commons was included under the bill. Mr. Marleau responded that it would make a lot of difference to the principle of employment equity awareness in the House of Commons, and that there would be a net benefit.

[Senator Lavoie-Roux]

The testimony from witnesses before both the Senate and House standing committees reviewing this legislation indicates to me that Bill C-64 should apply to Parliament as employers.

I was delighted that my recommendation became an amendment, that it provoked this further discussion and that, because of it, the Social Affairs Committee took a closer look at the issue of including Parliament. Based on Mr. Axworthy's words and commitments yesterday, the bill will be reported without amendment, but with commitments which will, in time, become part of the legislation. Number one, by March 1, Mr. Axworthy will propose amendments to cabinet to extend coverage of the Employment Equity Act to parliamentary employers. Number two, the minister will write letters to both the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration in the Senate and the House of Commons Board of Internal Economy, urging them to establish the mechanisms and policies needed to implement the principles of employment equity as envisioned in Bill C-64. Number three, the minister made the commitment that guidelines and communications materials will be developed in consultation with my colleague Senator Kinsella and other concerned committee members, stakeholders and the Department of Canadian Heritage in relation to the proposed definition of "members of visible minorities."

• (1440)

Honourable senators, given the commitments made by the Minister of Human Resources Development, I feel that Bill C-64, a piece of legislation which clearly improves the existing Employment Equity Act, should be passed. I know and expect that the minister, being a good Manitoban, will keep his commitments and that parliamentary employers will soon fall under the act.

Thank you, honourable senators, for your cooperation on this important piece of legislation.

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, Bill C-64, now in debate at third reading, is an affirmative action piece of legislation which, as you know, is provided for under section 15(2) of our Charter of Rights and Freedoms. This employment equity bill rests upon sound constitutional ground.

As Senator Johnson and Senator Losier-Cool explained to you during second reading debate, the principle is supported by members on both sides of this chamber. In committee, unanimous agreement on the principle of the bill continued, but there certainly was no unanimous agreement on the quality of the bill. It is a very poor piece of drafting, in my judgment. That poor drafting speaks directly to a number of serious issues with which this Parliament, in particular, seems to be faced. In terms of quality control, it is my opinion that the examination of legislation in the committees of the other place is the worst it has ever been in the past 35 years. I am not too sure why that is the case. As some would suggest, perhaps it speaks to the composition of the opposition in the other place. Perhaps they are not providing for the kind of critical examination for which an opposition is responsible in examining legislation. The opposition is not always simply to oppose for opposition's sake. Rather, in the epistemological sense, they must attempt to find the best drafted legislation that will serve the public interest of Canadians. We have identified imperfections and sometimes even contradictions in other bills but, due to a variety of pressures, we have given the nod and let them pass.

Honourable senators, I am not excited about the content of the report that we have received. Even though we have identified flaws in this piece of legislation, a recommendation has been adopted, and the Senate has decided to accept the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology.

Part of the poor work on the drafting of this bill relates to one of the problems that was identified, namely, the definition of "visible minorities" in that act. This could have been obviated had the government done what it has been promising it would do for the past two years — that is, set up the Race Relations Foundation. It has yet to do it. This foundation was established by legislation brought forward by the previous government. The legislation has been sitting there, but no action has been taken to implement it. Here is an example of where the government could have used the expert knowledge of people who would have been working with the Race Relations Foundation. Such experts could have helped the government understand in contemporary terms why race is not accepted in any quarter as a scientific concept, and why it was so offensive to see "race" as part of the definition of "visible minorities." Then, of course, there is the absurdity, in my judgment, of the definition of "la race blanche" in the French text.

Honourable senators, the report has outlined these issues. I think it is a poor way to do business, but we sometimes find ourselves in the situation where, in the interests of larger considerations, we are prepared to take the word of a minister. It is not clear to me whether the commitment we have is from the minister or the government. I refer to the undertaking in the report that it will be a matter of government policy that we will see a new piece of legislation in the spring of 1996.

Hon. Peter Bosa: Honourable senators, I too wish to make a brief intervention on this subject.

Those senators present at the proceedings of the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology on Bill C-64 have experienced first hand the worthiness of committee work in the Senate.

I agree with Senator Kinsella that Bill C-64 leaves much to be desired. Perhaps there is a good explanation for that. We have a crop of new members in the other place and, as has always been the case, they are much more interested in the intent of the legislation and getting re-elected than in refining the fine words of laws that are passed.

Senator Lavoie-Roux: That is quite serious.

Senator Bosa: It is serious, but that is the way it has always been. That is why committee work in the Senate is so important.

We were all in agreement, both opposition and government supporters, that Bill C-64 ought to have been amended. We heard an explanation as to why the staff of Parliament was left out of the bill. We were told that they were left out because Parliament is an entity unto itself and does not want to be subject to the rules of other jurisdictions. When the minister appeared before us for the second time, he agreed that that could be changed.

I should like to congratulate those members of the committee who worked particularly hard on this bill, namely Senator Lavoie-Roux, Senator Kinsella, with his amendment, Senator Johnson and Senator Cochrane.

Honourable senators, I think we have all learned a good lesson from this episode. If we keep the same spirit in the future, bills coming out of committees will be improved, and there will be a more harmonious feeling among the members who participate in the workings of those committees.

Hon. Sharon Carstairs: Honourable senators, I too wish to thank the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs for being so vigilant on this particular piece of legislation. Had they been able to make amendments instead of recommendations, this legislation would have been enhanced. There is no question in my mind about that. I look forward to further amendments to the employment equity bill which will bring about that enhancement. I congratulate and thank Senators Lavoie-Roux, Johnson, Kinsella and Cochrane for moving this piece of legislation in such a positive way so that employment equity will be found in all levels of the public service, including the two Houses of Parliament and the Library of Parliament.

Hon. M. Lorne Bonnell: Honourable senators, it is wonderful to find everyone thanking and congratulating everyone else for the great work of the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology. However, as you know, whatever project you enter into today, you must have good leadership. Any project without leadership is a failure.

• (1450)

Consequently, with the leadership we had, we were able to bring in our report on the bill without amendments, and we were able to say that some of our senators had made a motion to make amendments and present them to the house. However, they backtracked on that when they heard the facts.

Senator Berntson: We will make them again at third reading, if you like.

Senator Bonnell: That is a good idea. However, there was one person who was not thanked, or even mentioned, and that was Senator Bosa. Senator Bosa acted as chairman for a short while the other day when I was caught in the storm. He looked after the committee meeting for me, and I want to thank him for that.

At the same time, I also want to thank Senator Cools, who raised the racial issue and the definition concerning visible minorities, and brought those matters to our attention in the first place. Our great senator from New Brunswick, Senator Kinsella — following the leadership from Senator Cools — added his support. That is why the matter came up in the first place and was suggested as the subject of a possible amendment.

The thing that surprised me, as a non-biased chairman, was that when the first amendment and the first report were before the committee, a couple of senators walked in just as the vote was being held. They had not heard any of the evidence or the witnesses — and they probably had not even read the bill — but they came in without saying one word and just voted to put the amendment through.

Senator Doody: They were probably well briefed!

Senator Bonnell: Some leadership somewhere else must have briefed them, then.

Honourable senators, I want to thank all of the members of the committee for their great, hard work. Even with the persuasion that they were subjected to from witnesses — although not from the leadership — they were able to see the light and bring the bill forward without amendments. I am quite sure that Canada will benefit from that.

In the Province of Ontario, they are doing away with such things as equity bills, whereas here, in the Senate of Canada, with all the Conservatives here, we are putting forth these equity bills in spite of what their government is doing in Ontario.

Hon. Rose-Marie Losier-Cool: Honourable senators, as the sponsor of this bill, and mostly as an ardent fighter for affirmative action and equity, I, too, want to thank all my colleagues for their participation in making this bill a better piece of legislation, as Senator Kinsella has just pointed out.

[Translation]

What is important today is that we now have a progressive law on employment equity, which will offer all Canadians the same opportunities in the job market.

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, the question before the Senate is the third reading of Bill C-64. If no other senator wishes to speak, I will put the motion.

It was moved by the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Losier-Cool, that Bill C-64 be read the third time now.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 3, 1995-96

THIRD READING

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government), moved third reading of Bill C-116, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1996.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

EXCISE TAX ACT INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE— MOTION TO ADOPT NEGATIVED

Leave having been given to proceed to Government Business—Reports of Committees:

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Kirby, seconded by the Honourable Senator Davey, for the adoption of the twenty-sixth report, as amended, of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce (Bill C-103, An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Income Tax Act, with an amendment), presented in the Senate on December 5, 1995.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, if no other honourable senator wishes to speak on Bill C-103, I will proceed with the motion for the adoption of the report.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: No.

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

The Hon. the Speaker: Would those honourable senators in favour of the motion please say “yea”?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Would those honourable senators who are opposed to the motion please say “nay”?

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the “nays” have it.

And two honourable senators having risen.

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): I understand there is an agreement for a 15-minute bell.

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Your Honour, my colleague Senator Hébert and I have agreed on a 15-minute bell.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, the whips have agreed to a 15-minute bell. The bells will ring until 3:15. At 3:15, the bells will cease ringing and the vote will be held. Is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Please call in the senators.

• (1515)

The Hon. the Speaker: It was moved by the Honourable Senator Kirby, seconded by the Honourable Senator Davey, that this report be now adopted.

Motion negatived on the following division:

YEAS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Andreychuk	Keon
Angus	Kinsella
Atkins	Lynch-Staunton
Beaudoin	Meighen
Berntson	Nolin
Bolduc	Oliver
Buchanan	Phillips
Di Nino	Rivest
Ghitter	Roberge
Grimard	Rossiter
Gustafson	Simard
Kelleher	Tkachuk—24

NAYS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Adams	Kenny
Anderson	Lavoie-Roux
Austin	Lewis
Bacon	Losier-Cool
Bonnell	MacEachen
Bosa	Marchand
Carstairs	Milne
Cochrane	Murray
Comeau	Olson
Cools	Ottenheimer
Davey	Pearson
De Bané	Perrault
DeWare	Petten
Doody	Poulin
Doyle	Rizzuto
Fairbairn	Robertson
Gauthier	Robichaud
Gigantès	Rompkey
Grafstein	Roux
Graham	Sparrow
Haidasz	Spivak
Hays	Stanbury
Hébert	Stewart
Hervieux-Payette	Thériault
Johnson	Watt—51
Kelly

ABSTENTIONS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Carney—1

Hon. Pat Carney: Honourable senators, I want the record to show that I abstained because of a possible conflict of interest.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Graham, bill placed on Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, as you know, several committees have been scheduled to sit at this time, this being committee day. We have quite a heavy Order Paper yet to go, but there has been discussion between the leadership on both sides, and discussion with those honourable senators who have items on the Order Paper. There appears to be general agreement that we would stand all remaining orders, and ensure that, on Thursday and other occasions, we give all honourable senators an opportunity to voice their opinion and debate the very important motion standing in the name of Senator Fairbairn.

I would urge all honourable senators who are members of the committees that are sitting at the present time to go directly to those committees, but I would first ask if there is agreement that we proceed in the fashion I have outlined.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, December 14, 1995

The Senate met at 2:00 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

SENATORS' STATEMENTS

TWEED AND DISTRICT HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, on Saturday, December 9, 1995, I attended the inauguration and opening of a heritage house by the Tweed and District Historical Society. I was invited to attend by the Reeve, Dr. Gibson Allen, and his wife, Dr. Barbara Allen. Tweed is located in the County of Hastings, Ontario, some 30 minutes' drive from Belleville.

During the inaugural ceremony, the members of this small but vibrant community demonstrated the importance of preserving their traditions and remembering their communal roots. One of the rooms was named The A. Gibson and Barbara Allan Gallery in recognition of the wonderful contribution that this couple has made to the community. Dr. Barbara Allan, a doctor of psychology, was the village reeve before her husband. In the 12 years she occupied that position, the village was able to develop, and her husband is now continuing the work.

I met interesting people such as Mrs. Eileen Geen, the President of the Tweed and District Historical Society, who enlightened me on the fascinating history of the region. I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Evan Morton, who is a fabulous curator and also the deputy reeve. Last but not least, I met a grand and charming lady named Grace Porrit, who is, by her own admission, 93 years young and the proud granddaughter of the gentleman who built this house in the District of Tweed.

Honourable senators, I am proud to have been invited to such an event. I have a great deal of respect for people who can say, like others, "Je me souviens," of what Tweed has been for so many years.

I hope that the next time you go back to Toronto, you will take the scenic route through Carleton Place, Smith Falls and Perth, to stop in Tweed and visit the heritage house of the Tweed and District Historical Society. I can assure you of an unbelievable reception. If you say you are from the Senate of Canada, I am sure Dr. Allen and Mrs. Allen will be more than delighted to receive you and that Mr. Evan Morton, the curator, will be more than happy to explain to you the history of the region.

HUMAN RIGHTS

TIBET—INSTALLATION BY CHINESE OF PANCHEN LAMA

Hon. Consiglio Di Nino: Honourable senators, for the past three decades or more, Canadians have engaged in a debate to ensure the survival of a distinct and unique Canadian culture in Quebec, an objective we all support.

During this same period, we have been witnessing one of the world's oldest and unique cultures being systematically destroyed. I speak, of course, of the situation in Tibet. Added to all the other horror stories coming out of that country for the last 45 years is the most recent shameful act perpetrated by the Chinese against Tibetan culture.

Last week, the Chinese government installed its own Panchen Lama, Tibetan Buddhism's second highest religious authority, and apparently abducted a young boy and his family, whom his Holiness the Dalai Lama had selected as the Panchen Lama after following a strict, traditional search in accordance with Tibetan Buddhism. The Chinese chose their candidate by drawing lots. The whereabouts of the young Panchen Lama and his family are unknown, and the Chinese government has stonewalled all inquiries about them.

Honourable senators, Beijing's actions are part of a planned systematic extinction of a rare and important world culture. Shamefully, the world is standing by, waiting for business deals, while the cries of agony and despair from Tibetans and a few other brave souls who are not willing to prostitute themselves on the economic altar are ignored. I wonder how we would respond if what is being eradicated was a plant or an animal species.

• (1410)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SPECIAL COMMISSION ON RESTRUCTURING OF THE RESERVES—REPORT OF SOCIAL AFFAIRS, SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY COMMITTEE PRESENTED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Hon. M. Lorne Bonnell: Honourable senators, I have the honour to present the thirteenth report of the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology, which deals with the report of the Special Commission on the Restructuring of the Reserves, tabled in the Senate on November 7, 1995.

I ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report, see today's Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate.)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Bonnell, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

INTERNAL ECONOMY, BUDGETS AND ADMINISTRATION

FORTIETH REPORT OF COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Colin Kenny, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented the following report:

Thursday, December 14, 1995

The Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration has the honour to present its

FORTIETH REPORT

Your committee has examined and approved the supplementary budget presented to it by the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance for the proposed expenditures of the said Committee for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1996 to engage the services of such counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel as may be necessary for the purpose of its examination and consideration of such bills, subject-matters of bills and estimates as are referred to it as authorized by the Senate on February 22, 1994. The said supplementary budget is as follows:

Professional and Other Services	$ 70,200
TOTAL	$70,200

Respectfully submitted,

COLIN KENNY
Chairman

FORTY-FIRST REPORT PRESENTED

Hon. Colin Kenny, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented the following report:

Thursday, December 14, 1995

The Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration has the honour to present its

FORTY-FIRST REPORT

Your committee has examined and approved the supplementary budget presented to it by the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources for the proposed expenditures of the said Committee for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1996 to engage the services of such counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel as may be necessary for the purpose of its examination and consideration of such bills, subject-matters of bills and estimates as are referred to it as authorized by the Senate on April 27, 1994. The said supplementary budget is as follows:

Transportation and Communications	$42,420
TOTAL	$42,420

Respectfully submitted,

COLIN KENNY
Chairman

FORTY-SECOND REPORT PRESENTED

Hon. Colin Kenny, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented the following report:

Thursday, December 14, 1995

The Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration has the honour to present its

FORTY-SECOND REPORT

Your committee has examined and approved the budget presented to it by the Special Joint Committee on a Code of Conduct for the proposed expenditures of the said Committee for the period of August 31, 1995 to March 29, 1996, for the purpose of its consideration of a code of conduct for Senators and Members of the House of Commons, as authorized by the Senate on June 28, 1995. The said budget is as follows:

Printing	$28,592
Advertising	335
Witnesses' Expenses	2,345
Miscellaneous	670
TOTAL	$31,942

Respectfully submitted,

COLIN KENNY
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these reports be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Kenny, reports placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-110, respecting constitutional amendments.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

On motion of Senator Graham, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 57(1)(f), bill placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-108, to amend the National Housing Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

On motion of Senator Graham, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 57(1)(f), bill placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

[Translation]

INTERNATIONAL ASSEMBLY OF FRENCH-SPEAKING PARLEMENTARIANS

SEMINAR HELD IN PORT-AU-PRINCE—REPORT TABLED

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, pursuant to rule 23(6), I have the honour to present, in both official languages, the report of the Assemblée internationale des parlementaires de langue française concerning the seminar for exchanging views and information on parliamentary democracy in action, held at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, November 16 to 19, 1995.

[English]

REPORT OF CANADIAN DELEGATION AND FINANCIAL REPORT OF TWENTY-FIRST SESSION HELD IN OTTAWA AND QUEBEC CITY

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, pursuant to rule 23(6), I have the honour to present, in both official languages, the report of the Canadian delegation to the International Assembly of French-Speaking Parliamentarians and the financial report of the twenty-first regular session of the AIPLF held in Ottawa and Quebec City respectively from July 7 to 12, 1995.

JUSTICE

REQUEST OF MINISTER FOR INVESTIGATION BY CANADIAN JUDICIAL COUNCIL INTO REMARKS OF QUEBEC JUDGE—NOTICE OF INQUIRY

Hon. Anne C. Cools: Honourable senators, pursuant to rule 56(1), (2) and rule 57(2), I give notice that, two days hence, I shall call the attention of the Senate to the request of December 12, 1995, by the Minister of Justice, the Honourable Allan Rock, to the Canadian Judicial Council for a full investigation into the behaviour of the Honourable Mr. Justice Jean Bienvenue of the Quebec Superior Court; and to the fact of Mr. Justice Jean Bienvenue's express apology for his comments regarding the Holocaust; and also to Mr. Justice Jean Bienvenue's expressed shock at the deliberate cruelty of the accused, Tracy Theberge, in the murder of her spouse by the use of a razor blade to cut his throat.

CONSTITUTION ACT, 1867

POWERS OF SENATE—NOTICE OF INQUIRY

Hon. Anne Cools: Honourable senators, pursuant to rule 56(1) and (2) and 57(2), I give notice that I will call the attention of the Senate to:

Section 31(4) of the Constitution Act 1867, which reads, "If he is attainted of Treason or convicted of Felony or of any infamous Crime," being the powers of the Senate to attain Senators; and to the Senate's powers, including the powers of judicature, the powers to pass bills of attainder and bills of pains and penalties, the powers of impeachment, and the powers of judicial review as per the ancient customs and usages of Parliament in accordance with the Constitution and the Law of Parliament; and to section 18 of the Constitution Act, 1867.

[Translation]

QUESTION PERIOD

HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT

CHILD CARE—FEDERAL OFFER OF FUNDING—PROVINCIAL CUTS TO PROGRAMS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Roch Bolduc: Honourable senators, my question is directed to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. This morning we received a press release from Mr. Axworthy, the Minister of Human Resources Development, announcing that the government wants to inject $720 million into a new national child care program. The minister says this is what they promised in the Red Book, but Mr. Martin, the Finance Minister, says there is no more money, that we must live within our means and tighten our belts. Could the Leader of the Government in the Senate make some sense of all this?

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, as Senator Bolduc would know, the issue of trying to increase child care spaces in this country has been one pursued by this government and the one before it. Yesterday, the minister announced measures that he hoped would result in a substantial increase, partly through cooperation with the provinces, of child care spaces in this country. He will be engaged in discussions with provincial governments and ministers on their suggestions and their interest in sharing in this program.

This child care proposal has been out there for some time. According to Mr. Axworthy, interest has been expressed by a number of provinces in sharing with the federal government the plan to increase the levels. He is offering up to $630 million over the next three to five years for these kinds of partnerships with the provinces and the territories, with ongoing funding being available afterwards.

I take the point of my honourable friend's question. Each level of government, at the moment, is certainly under restraint and constraint in very many areas. In this one, I believe a very dedicated effort will be made by both the provinces and the federal government to join together to access funding which will increase child care spaces.

To complete the answer, although this is not germane to my honourable friend's question, the issue of child care commitments was further addressed yesterday with a $72-million commitment for First Nations and Inuit child care; and with an $18-million fund over three years for a research and development program.

[Translation]

CHILD CARE—FEDERAL OFFER OF FUNDING—
FISCAL INEQUALITY AMONG PROVINCES

Hon. Roch Bolduc: Honourable senators, the provinces are in a tight spot because the federal government is reducing transfer payments to the provinces. The provinces are closing hospitals. They are closing hospitals in Quebec. Meanwhile, the federal government proposes a child care program. To me, this makes no sense at all. Only the provinces that have enough money will participate.

First of all, it means there will be no transfer; second, a major consequence of this policy will be to make some provinces more equal than others. Third, there will be no transfer within society itself, because the middle class has the advantage and the little guy is paying, as usual.

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, Senator Bolduc has stated that only the provinces with money will profit from this measure. We will have to wait and see what results from discussions with the provinces, because it certainly would be the hope of the federal government that all the provinces would join in this program.

My honourable friend knows that it is not simply a case of providing child care spaces in this country. A huge number of employable people, single mothers in particular, are kept out of the workforce because there is no place for their children to be cared for during the working day. It is much more than a social problem; it is an economic problem. The freedom to enter the workforce should be available not only to women in middle-income areas but also to those at the lowest end of the opportunity scale.

This issue must be of concern to every level of government because it is not just a social issue; it is an economic issue as well.

Hon. L. Norbert Thériault: Honourable senators, I rise on a supplementary question. Although I do applaud the announcement by the government, I do have a concern. Did I hear the minister correctly when she mentioned a long-term commitment?

Formerly, as a provincial politician, my concern was always that federal governments would start programs, finance them for a few years, and then drop out of them, leaving the provinces to carry on alone.

Would the minister be kind enough to tell the Senate what she means by "long-term commitment"?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, although I should have the dollar figure here, I do not. These spaces will be set up over some three to five years, using the initial amount of $630 million. After that time, the government has committed itself to an annual payment to the provinces, at a smaller level of course, to facilitate the continuation of the program.

Senator Thériault: Honourable senators, it was my understanding of the announcement that was made that the costs in the next three to five years will be split 50-50. Does the minister mean that, after three to five years, the contribution will be less than 50 per cent?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I cannot answer the question of whether the contribution will be less than 50 per cent. The sustaining money will be less than the initial investment to set up the spaces.

The federal government has placed on the table the offer of a continuing, sustaining contribution to the provinces. I will obtain the correct details for response to my honourable friend's question about the percentage of sharing.

[Translation]

CHILD CARE—FEDERAL OFFER OF FUNDING—LACK OF CONSULTATION WITH PROVINCES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Honourable Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, I find that these programs smack of improvisation and lack of consultation.

I served thirty years in the House of Commons. I remember very popular programs being created and then abandoned, fobbed off on the provinces. What I find unusual here is the talk of reorganizing the giant federal machinery.

One of my colleagues across the way refers to employment, wanting to get people back to work. I hope that does not refer to some of us. Some people are capable of paying for their children to be looked after, if that is necessary.

I wish to make it clear immediately that I am not opposed to these projects, but to the lack of consultation with the provinces. Who knows how long the program will last? If the federal government no longer looks after existing programs, the provinces are faced with a very difficult problem. On the one hand the projects are good, but on the other the provinces are in danger of running into huge problems when they cannot withdraw from something that started out on a 50-50 basis but ends up with all on them.

Is this a definitive program or just a statement of the federal government's intentions? Will there be meetings with the provincial counterparts to find out whether or not it is acceptable? I have nothing against the announcement itself. It was in your Red Book during the campaign; I am not surprised. Now that the program is announced, now that the decision is out on the table, will there be consultation with the provincial governments? If the provincial governments say no, they will not take part —

[English]

— will they lose that money? Will they have a knife held to their throat and be told, "If you do not accept, you will lose the money"? It is embarrassing to lose 50 per cent of a good program. It is a lot of money, especially in Quebec and Ontario.

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, as Senator Prud'homme would know, during the social policy review that was carried out well over a year ago, the question of child care was central to those broader discussions. The issue is well known to the provinces, and they have been asked to consider options as to how they might wish to implement it.

Mr. Axworthy made his announcement yesterday based on funding that was laid aside in the budget, pursuant to the promise that, after the economy achieved a period of three per cent growth, which it did, that money would be available for child care. He has written to his colleagues in all of the provinces asking them to communicate their views to him and inviting them to get together to discuss this issue.

I cannot answer what really is, at this point, a hypothetical question as to what would happen if some did come on board and some did not. The minister's goal is to try to reach an accommodation that would permit this program to become a national program. He understands — and he made the point in his statement — that the delivery of this type of program rests within provincial jurisdiction. In that sense, he is respectful of the provinces, but he is saying, "Let us get together now. We have the financial capabilities to initiate this program. Let us work together and do it on a national basis."

That is the goal of the minister. I am sure all honourable senators would wish these particular federal-provincial discussions success.

[Translation]

CHILD CARE—FEDERAL OFFER OF FUNDING—
COMMENTS IN MEDIA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: Honourable senators, are we to believe the media, which are reporting on the reaction of surprise on the part of the Minister of Finance, Mr. Paul Martin, at the extemporaneous and chance announcement by his colleague Mr. Axworthy yesterday? How do we interpret this surprise expressed by Mr. Martin? Are we to understand that this is another aspect of the strategy of improvisation, which is based on the polls, to bolster Mr. Chrétien's current popularity?

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, absolutely not. Senator Simard should believe that if a sum of money as large as $720 million were involved in a program, the Minister of Finance would be well informed on the program, well informed on the announcement, and well informed on the source of the money. He is completely aware of the program and extremely supportive of it.

[Translation]

CHILD CARE—FEDERAL OFFER OF FUNDING—DISCUSSIONS WITH PROVINCIAL FINANCE MINISTERS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, why did the Minister of Finance not discuss the matter with his provincial counterparts, if he already knew?

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, there were a great many issues on the agenda for the ministers of finance. I am not aware personally of whether or not this issue crept into their discussions. Certainly, this subject, and the imminence of its announcement, has not really been a secret in terms of the federal-provincial discussions that go on continuously, not only between the Minister of Finance and his colleagues but also between the Minister of Human Resources Development and his colleagues.

[Translation]

PEARSON AIRPORT AGREEMENTS

SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE—REQUEST FOR PARTICULARS OF EXPENDITURES ON CONSULTANTS

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, my question is on a wholly different matter. Yesterday afternoon, we were given the third report by the special Senate committee on the Pearson Airport Agreements. We learned, with considerable interest, that the committee did not spend its entire budget of $298,000.

We discovered, from a cursory read of the committee's main report, that your government had hired consultants to help it along during the deliberations of the special Senate committee. I would like to know how much your government spent on specialty firms of lawyers and accountants to help it develop its strategy during the deliberations of the Special Senate Committee on the Pearson Airport Agreements.

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will certainly try to obtain an answer to the honourable senator's question. At the same time, I congratulate the committee itself for coming in under budget.

HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT

CHILD CARE—FEDERAL OFFER OF FUNDING—RESTRICTIONS ON CATEGORIES OF PROVIDERS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Mira Spivak: Honourable senators, my question is directed to the Leader of the Government in the Senate, and it goes back to the child care question.

In the newspaper coverage of the announcement, I read that two conditions were attached to the minister's proposal. This money is to go towards affordable and quality child care.

Will there be any restrictions on whether the child care is non-profit or private? Must the child care institution be of a certain size? In particular, will any child care chains receive funding?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will need to ask my colleague Mr. Axworthy for particulars on this question. I am sure these issues will be part of the federal-provincial discussions. It is a good question, and I will obtain an answer for the honourable senator.

Senator Spivak: Is this to be "government-to-government"? By that I mean, will it be administered by the provincial governments?

Senator Fairbairn: Yes.

HUMAN RIGHTS

FURTHER INCARCERATION OF CHINESE DISSIDENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk: Honourable senators, yesterday Mr. Wei Jingsheng was sentenced to 14 years in China for peacefully advocating that democracy was necessary in that country. In light of the fact that stability is important for our trade and investment in China, and that stability requires economic and social development for peoples, as we perceive democratic principles and good government, could the Leader of the Government in the Senate tell me what steps of protest the government will be taking in regard to this action in China?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable Senators, I will take that question as notice. The situation of Mr. Wei Jingsheng was raised yesterday but, as yet, I have not received a response. I will add the honourable senator's question to those asked previously.

Senator Andreychuk: Will this affect in any way the Prime Minister's visit to Asia and his dealings with any of the Chinese leaders and delegations?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, as my honourable friend would know, the Prime Minister's visit to the Far East in January does not include China. I will also add that question to my list.

Hon. Ron Gitter: Honourable senators, as a supplementary question, surely the fact that an individual in China has been placed in jail for 14 years for expressing a political point of view must be so disgusting and distasteful to a country like Canada; the fact that our Prime Minister has done nothing and has been silent, as far as I know; the fact that the minister does not even know what statements have been made by him; and the fact that Canada is losing its reputation as being a defender of human rights, I would suggest, are of such importance that it is not sufficient for us to take matters like this under advisement.

We should all be standing up yelling and screaming at China and at our government's inactivity. We should be doing something about it, rather than hiding behind whatever we are hiding behind.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I know Senator Gitter's passion on these issues, and I respect it.

If he wishes, he can level blame, or whatever he wishes to do, on me, because I have been unable to respond in the last 24 hours. I have undertaken to answer the questions posed by honourable senators. I will do that to the best of my ability, having had the opportunity to consult with my colleagues and find out the answers.

I am not prepared on this, or on any other subject in the Senate — and my friend Senator Murray has been in this position before — to stand up here on my own, not having completed my homework, and give an answer in this house.

Senator Ghitter: Honourable senators, I very much appreciate the position in which the honourable leader finds herself. However, in making her inquiries, would she please express to the Prime Minister and cabinet the utter dismay and concern, if not disgust, of many of us, at the inactivity of the federal government and their lack of courage in responding to such a terrible situation? We expect to see more courage being exhibited by our government; we do not expect them to sit back or to hide. Perhaps our Prime Minister should eat something different for breakfast.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I will wait for Hansard to be printed. I will then be pleased, as I always am, to circulate the views of the Senate to my colleagues in the cabinet and in the caucus. I am sure that my honourable friend would wish me to do so in the language he has used, which is certainly not language I would use.

Senator Ghitter: You may use my language any day!

VIGILANCE TOWARDS SITUATIONS DEVELOPING IN OTHER COUNTRIES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk: Honourable senators, I should like to ask a supplementary on this issue.

I would ask the Honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate, in her response to my question, not to limit my question to whether or not the Prime Minister will visit China. He will visit Asia.

My concern, honourable senators, is that we are somehow reticent to speak up on human rights issues which arise in larger countries in Asia, yet we seem to feel free to speak out on those issues as they relate to smaller countries.

I would like to be sure that the answer I receive includes an answer to this question: Do we wait until executions occur before we find multilateral environments in which we can speak out? Must we lose valuable and important lives before we take a stand on human rights issues?

It would seem to me that we should not always wait until the most dastardly steps are taken before we speak out or impose sanctions. Nipping human rights issues in the bud is the way we should proceed, whether on a bilateral, regional or multilateral basis. Is the government moving on any one of those three fronts?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, my first comment would be that every life is important, regardless of what country it is in.

I also would dispute, with great vigour, the suggestion that there is anything cowardly about the Prime Minister of Canada. There is not.

Honourable senators may not agree, and some do not agree on the other side — perhaps all those on the other side — with the Prime Minister's policy on human rights and trade and international affairs. That, of course, is part of our political, democratic process in this country. However, the fact of the matter is that the Prime Minister of Canada has, on numerous occasions, expressed his views privately and publicly on the question of human rights. That is a fact.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Fairbairn: Whether he has done it in the manner or using the language which my honourable friends opposite would wish him to use, is another question entirely.

I have given a commitment, first, to try to find out the facts that are being sought in the questions asked of me; and, second, I have made a commitment, rather than paraphrasing the views of my friends opposite, to ensure that, word for word, passion for passion, extreme language for extreme language, their questions will be passed on. That is what I intend to do.

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, we have had this debate before. I am very much on the minister's side on this question. You will all remember that we have debated the matter of picking and choosing who we should be more inclined to defend in the area of human rights.

I remember the teachings of my father who said, "I hope that when you get up in the House of Commons to talk about human rights, you do not pick and choose. You either believe in the universality of human rights, or you do not. If you start to pick and choose, then you are biased." Therefore, I hope that you will extend your examination of the issue to other cases throughout the world.

On the eve of a great celebration in Canada, I do not wish to throw out the names of people who are rotting in prisons in certain parts of the world, their sole crime being that they have informed us of nuclear possibilities and technologies which exist in some parts of the world.

• (1450)

I am purposely being vague and general, in order not to offend anyone in the Senate. In the past, certain individuals have drawn to our attention certain events that are taking place in certain countries, but we have never raised those issues. Therefore, although some honourable senators have mentioned a name that is very well known internationally, there are other cases.

I hope that, from time to time, we will have full debate on the subject of human rights, in order that we will not be seen to pick and choose but to be universal. The same policy should apply to China, which is very big, as applies to smaller countries. It makes me very uncomfortable to see people give so much attention to one particular case and seem to be ignoring other cases that are occurring throughout the world.

Would you, therefore, kindly extend your inquiries and provide us with the names or other studies that have been done? I assure you that I will read them all.

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I appreciate my honourable friend's position. I will certainly convey his views, as I will those of other senators, to my colleagues in cabinet. As I said, we can ratchet up the rhetoric all we wish in this house but the fact remains that everyone in this house, and everyone in the Canadian government, is gravely concerned about human rights and human rights abuses, wherever they occur in the world.

INDONESIA—UPCOMING VISIT BY PRIME MINISTER—DISCUSSIONS OF ABUSES IN EAST TIMOR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, my question is directed to the Leader of the Government in the Senate and is on the same topic.

In the next few weeks, the Prime Minister will be leading a delegation to Indonesia. Indonesia has been the subject of inquiry by the International Commission of Jurists, by Amnesty International, by the United States of America's State Department Country Reports, and others, the consensus of which are universally that there are very serious problems in relation to the respect for human rights in Indonesia.

In light of the fact that there is ample objective evidence to suspect that there are serious violations of human rights occurring in Indonesia, does the Prime Minister of Canada intend to raise the question of human rights during his visit to Indonesia?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I assume that Honourable Senator Kinsella is referring to violations occurring in East Timor. Again, I will seek specific information from the Prime Minister. However, Senator Kinsella should know that this issue was discussed by the Minister of Foreign Affairs with the Indonesian foreign minister at the recent APEC meeting in Osaka, and our embassy in Jakarta makes Canada's views on this situation known to the Indonesian government on a very regular basis.

[Translation]

CAMPAIGN PROMISE OF ANNUAL REPORTS—
GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, since we are talking about human rights, during the election campaign your party promised to publish annually a report on the status of human rights. I recall that we have asked the same question several times since then, and we are still waiting for this report your government was supposed to publish. What is the situation so far?

[Senator Prud'homme]

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will check on that matter for my honourable friend.

[Translation]

HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE REFORM—PROGRAM FOR STUDY OF LEGISLATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: My two questions concern Bills C-111 and C-112 and the employment reforms announced several months ago, and now being considered in the House of Commons.

These reforms continue to cause considerable concern and even panic among the people of New Brunswick, especially among seasonal workers in the Atlantic provinces and probably across the country as well. The New Brunswick press has been reporting on this panic situation for the past month.

In this morning's edition of L'Acadie nouvelle, the province's francophone newspaper, Nelson Landry writes that Liberal ministers should stop playing minister for a few days, forget about Pearson airport and the sale of CN, and take some time to explain these controversial bills. It is suggested they come to New Brunswick and stop hibernating in Ottawa.

What time-frame is the government considering to ensure that the Senate will be able to give full consideration to both bills? Will the Senate again be the victim of a persistent, unilateral rumour that the current session will be terminated?

[English]

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, the Honourable Senator Simard is aware that Mr. Axworthy's proposals have been placed before a House of Commons committee which, in the period when the House of Commons will be adjourned, has pledged to begin wide-ranging studies on this legislation, which has indeed received a great deal of interest and a great deal of support in all parts of Canada, including Atlantic Canada, for the principles which it puts forward. As my honourable friend knows, there have been concerns expressed as well.

• (1500)

It may be my honourable friend's belief that members of Parliament, whether they be in the House of Commons or in the Senate, are hibernating in Ottawa, doing nothing. However, let me assure him that Atlantic Regional members of Parliament, both senators and members of the House of Commons, from this side of the house, have been absolutely engrossed with this legislation. Their influence has been felt on this legislation through the many months in which it has been developed, revised and re-revised.

The question of seasonal workers has been one of the most important areas that members from Atlantic Canada have been pressing upon Mr. Axworthy. Parts of this legislation are definitely sensitive to the seasonal nature of the work that many people in Atlantic Canada and the province of Quebec experience.

Senator Simard: I appreciate the Leader of the Government in the Senate's rhetoric in her answer. However, New Brunswickers do not take comfort in what might be done by their own provincial and federal ministers or MPs in Ottawa. They want to see them in New Brunswick, face-to-face, and many newspaper editors are supporting such a meeting.

I hope that during the Christmas holidays these members will be seen and heard, and that they will not, as has been the case in the last month, send civil servants as messengers to explain and defend this government's legislation. I hope Ministers Young and Robichaud will do their job.

My second question on the same subject —

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, oh!

Senator Simard: If honourable senators opposite want to cut me off, they may do so. I will tell New Brunswickers that, again, Liberals have precluded me from asking questions on their behalf.

Senator Di Nino: Ask the question.

Senator Simard: Is the government considering Bill C-112 as budgetary legislation? I think I am on the right track when I say that budgetary legislation, or policies, or programs flowing from the budget, can come into force before the legislation is passed. Is that the nature of these bills, or will the —

[Translation]

Will these bills come into force after Royal Assent, or in January?

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I should like to go back to my friend's first question. I do not know where all these newspaper editors to whom he refers spend their idle hours, but I can tell the honourable senator that we have had our representatives from Atlantic Canada out doing town hall meetings before, during, and after the release of this information. They have brought back to the minister the concerns of Atlantic Canadians. I am told that Senator Rompkey has attended eight meetings himself, and has informed the minister of the views of the people of Newfoundland and Labrador. The people from New Brunswick —

Senator Simard: Answer my question.

Senator Fairbairn: My honourable friend can say what he wishes, but I would not even attempt to use the word "rhetoric" in his presence, he being a master of rhetoric. However, there is no one in the federal cabinet who brings a more sensitive and impassioned approach to this issue than Minister Fernand Robichaud. He has done an absolutely splendid job on this issue.

In the case of the honourable senator's second question, as I recall it —

Senator Graham: It was a long time ago.

Senator Fairbairn: The program put forward by the Minister of Human Resources Development is based on the budgetary provisions that he has enunciated, not something that will be produced in the future. He has brought forward a program with a solid foundation, and it will be carried out in that manner.

The hearings that will take place on this issue will be important and interesting. The issues that will be disputed and the options put forward during those hearings will be considered carefully by my colleague Lloyd Axworthy.

Senator Simard: Honourable senators, I will take just 30 seconds. The minister has not answered my second question.

My question is this: When will this legislation come into force? Will it be January 1, 1996, before this house has had a chance to approve this legislation, or six months from now, or two years from now?

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, the legislation must be passed first. It will not come into force until it is passed by this house.

Senator Simard: Thank you. Stay tuned.

JUSTICE

RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF LAW REFORM COMMISSION— LEGISLATIVE AGENDA

Hon. Finlay MacDonald: Honourable senators, my question is for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. I think she will agree with me that there is no government of any political stripe that has a monopoly on the introduction of dumb legislation.

Senator Gauthier: Right on.

Senator MacDonald: The last government introduced legislation which I and a few of my colleagues voted against, even though it was our own government. It involved the dissolution of think-tanks and agencies of that particular kind. Think-tanks are the type of things of which bureaucracies are terrified.

One of these was the Law Reform Commission. It was with delight that I learned from either the Red Book or the Speech from the Throne that the present government would re-establish this commission.

Senator Haidasz: It has been done already.

Senator MacDonald: I realize that, but I do not know where that legislation is exactly. That is the question.

Over the noon-hour period, I was listening to comments about sweeping reforms in the Criminal Code, as introduced by Mr. Rock. Could the minister indicate what priority is being placed on — honourable senators, the Table Officer has just handed me Bill C-106, which deals with the introduction of the Law Reform Commission of Canada. This is an independent agency, as we know, totally separate from the Department of Justice. Is there any priority for this legislation? Will we receive it this term? Where is it now?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, the Law Reform Commission legislation, as the honourable senator knows, is still in the House of Commons. I do not think the Minister of Justice has made any secret of the fact that the legislation is a priority with him. The House of Commons has had a crowded calendar. I agree with my honourable friend when he says that the sooner this commission is restored, the better. I will be delighted to take his concerns, together with mine, to the Minister of Justice.

PRIVILEGE

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, yesterday there was a vote. By agreement between the two whips, as indicated in the Debates of the Senate, the bells calling the senators rang for 15 minutes. I have had this problem before. I have no whip, and I was unaware that there was to be a vote after a 15-minute bell.

This situation could be embarrassing to me in the future. I have never missed a vote since coming to the Senate. I was here until 3 p.m. I was in the other chamber while the vote was taking place. I am not informed when there is an agreement between the two whips. I would like to have as good a record as possible, but there is no method of informing me of quick decisions in this regard. I regret this situation, because I usually receive cooperation from people in the Senate.

• (1510)

ORDERS OF THE DAY

BRITISH COLUMBIA TREATY COMMISSION BILL

THIRD READING

Hon. Len Marchand moved the third reading of Bill C-107, respecting the establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

EXCISE TAX ACT INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government) moved the third reading of Bill C-103, to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Income Tax Act.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Lowell Murray: Honourable senators, we do not intend to hold up the third reading of this bill. However, I think I should make a few comments for the record.

There has been an unfortunate and potentially troubling turn of events relating to this bill. This is perhaps the result of everyone trying to deal with a legislative overload at this time of year. I know some of my Senate colleagues on this side feel strongly about this matter, and I wanted to flag some of those concerns for honourable senators.

At the recent meeting of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, the Canadian Bar Association presented a brief which raised what I, as a layman, consider to be serious legal problems surrounding Bill C-103. Without going into detail, these issues relate to the liability which the bill would impose on persons such as printers, distributors and wholesalers, without notice of that liability and without sufficient knowledge of their liability. It is obvious that the government is trying to find someone from whom to collect the potential tax. Of course, the government is dealing with a situation in which the real culprits or offenders may be resident in some other country and not within our ambit. Hence, the government cannot collect the tax from them.

Some of these problems had been identified when the bill was before the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance. I should note here that just before they passed the bill in the House, almost the last words out of the mouth of the chairman of that committee, Mr. Jim Peterson, were — and I paraphrase here — “Well, perhaps they can fix it up in the Senate.”

Honourable senators, when the bill came to the Senate committee, the Canadian Bar Association, which had not presented a brief to the House of Commons committee, appeared before our committee and raised these issues.

Following the Canadian Bar Association presentation, the Minister of Canadian Heritage, the Honourable Michel Dupuy made a presentation. Mr. Dupuy assured us that if we did not insist on amending the bill along the lines suggested by the Canadian Bar Association, he would produce a letter of undertaking to fix up the bill at the earliest or some future opportunity.

As honourable senators know, in the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, we are accustomed to that kind of understanding. As far back as the days of Senator Salter Hayden's chairmanship, which is when I came here, the committee routinely accepted from the government undertakings to make future amendments to a bill that the committee found deficient in one respect or another. That gave me no difficulty at all, provided that the substance was satisfactory, especially to my legal colleagues on the committee.

After at least one false start, we finally got a letter from the Minister of Finance, Mr. Martin, incorporating the undertaking that Mr. Dupuy had given. So far so good.

The essence of the undertaking that Mr. Dupuy had given was that the government would exempt the first issue of any future split-run edition before imposing the taxation penalty on anyone. I must say that I do not find that particular undertaking offensive at all, although some do. I do not find it offensive because I believe that that is the way the tariff code has operated for these past 30 years.

The tariff code that has been in place for 30 years to my knowledge has never been invoked officially against any import. What has happened on occasion is that when the first edition of some split-run magazine comes into the country, Revenue Canada looks at it, and they flash a red light at the perpetrators. They tell them, "This is not in compliance with our laws, and you must stop it or we will invoke the tariff against you; here is what you must do to find yourselves within the four corners of our law." That is the way that the Customs Tariff has operated, as I understand it, and it has been effective. That is the way in which the Government of Canada has enforced the policy in the legislation over the years.

Honourable senators, I do not find the undertaking given by Mr. Dupuy and Mr. Martin offensive on that point, although, as I say, some honourable senators do.

Aside from that, honourable senators, the Canadian Bar Association still finds the government's proposals, and Mr. Martin's letter, substantively defective. That is what I think I should place on the record.

Under today's date, a memorandum is addressed to the Chairman of the committee, Senator Kirby, from the Canadian Bar Association. They state:

As a practical matter, granting a tax exemption for the first split-run issue would provide little protection. Further, the alleged undertaking by the Minister that the split-run tax will not be applied against distributors, printers and wholesalers — who really are innocent parties in all this, I think —

— except upon notice that a particular issue offended the provisions of the Excise Tax Act will be of little comfort unless that protection is in the legislation.

They go on to deny the contention of the government that it is very difficult to hold the publisher, in some cases, liable. They state:

Provided the legislation was properly drafted and enforced, the tax burden should ultimately, and effectively, fall on the publisher. The participants in the distribution chain likely would take steps to ensure this result (through indemnities et al.), but the actual collection burden for the tax would rest with the government rather than with persons only remotely connected with the publisher (and advertisers).

I will not put the whole letter on the record, but the final paragraph reads as follows:

While we concede that collection difficulties may occur under the CBA's proposed amendments, that does not justify Bill C-103 in its present form. Those same collection concerns occur in other taxation areas, yet the possibility of non-compliance in those areas has not led to such extreme collection mechanisms.

Honourable senators, these legal concerns that have been expressed by the Canadian Bar Association have been responded to in various ways by the officials and by the Minister of Finance. I thought it important to put them on the record. We will not try, although we did seriously consider, putting forward formal amendments as proposed by the Canadian Bar Association, which would force a division and possibly send the bill back to the House of Commons, with unpredictable results.

• (1520)

Our friends opposite should understand that we have a potentially serious problem here. If this law is struck down some months down the road, the government will have nobody to blame but themselves. I would have hoped that, over the past few days, the government officials from Mr. Martin's department and the people from the Canadian Bar Association might have put their heads together and come up with a satisfactory formula. This should not be beyond the imagination and expertise of people in the legal and accounting professions, and among tax professionals. I do not think they tried hard enough. I hope we will not pay the price by having this bill struck down in the courts a few months from now.

Honourable senators know how I feel — and how we all feel — about the principle and intent of the bill. We are taking a lot on faith in this matter. Indeed, we have taken on faith from the Department of External Affairs and International Trade the fact that this bill is the least vulnerable of all the alternatives under international trade law. I hope they are right about that, too, because if the Canadian Bar Association is right, and if some of the critics of the provisions as they affect international trade law are right, then we will be in much worse difficulty some months down the road than we are now.

Senator Oliver has taken a keen interest in these matters, and if he had been in the chamber, I would have deferred to him rather than intervene myself. He is here now and is nodding his approval, at least on the last point.

We will not hold up third reading of the bill. However, as we say, on your heads be it if this law runs into trouble some months down the road.

Hon. John B. Stewart: Would Senator Murray entertain a question?

Senator Murray: Of course.

Senator Stewart: I was not in the chamber to hear all of the address of Senator Murray so I do not know whether he put before the Senate the letter from Peter Grant of McCarthy Tétrault?

Senator Murray: Honourable senators, my friend dignifies my intervention by calling it an address.

I did not put Mr. Grant's letter on the record, although I do have it. A more official response to the Canadian Bar Association would be to place on the record that letter and the letter from Mr. Martin, along with the considered response of the Department of Finance found in notes which, to my knowledge, are in the possession of the Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate. Perhaps Senator Graham would wish to place those notes on the record?

Mr. Grant is a lawyer with McCarthy Tétrault who represents a number of Canadian-owned periodical publishers. He also acts generally for the Canadian Magazine Publishers Association.

Senator Stewart: I ask the question, honourable senators, because of Senator Murray's suggestion that we were proceeding on the basis of faith. I am not a lawyer, so I must be careful about what I say.

I will read a few sentences from Mr. Grant's letter to suggest that this is not entirely an act of unfounded faith:

The focus of the bill on distributors and wholesalers therefore makes eminent good sense, particularly when coupled with the undertaking by the Minister not to act against them except upon notice that a particular issue offended the provisions of the Act. This will then be self-policing, since in cases where the publisher is not itself able to be taxed, and the distributor, wholesaler or printer is notified instead, that distributor, wholesaler or printer will simply contact the publisher and decline to print or distribute future issues unless given appropriate evidence or assurances by the publisher that the subsequent issues are not published on a split-run basis, or that the original assessment was improperly made....

Far from being "design flaws," therefore, we think that the structure of the Bill is appropriate to make it effective, and we believe the Minister's undertaking provides an entirely useful response to the concerns raised by the CBA.

It is true that this is a case of lawyers disagreeing, and I suppose that is how they make a living.

Senator Murray: The CBA would want to see those undertakings written into the act. That is clear from their submission.

I must say, personally, that we are placing quite a burden on wholesalers and distributors and the like. They would not be "guilty" parties.

Hon. Keith Davey: Honourable senators, I have a copy of the same letter. I accept the observations made by Senator Murray, which are generous indeed. There may be a problem, but let us get this bill through now.

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, these observations are valid. It is the government's intention to address this concern by amending the legislation in the new year to exempt the first split-run issue of a periodical in cases where a distributor, printer or wholesaler would be otherwise responsible for paying the tax.

The amendment will assist distributors, printers and wholesalers by giving them time to become aware of the existence of new split-run titles in the case of high-profile magazines such as People or Newsweek. The identity of a new split-run title would likely become widely known among the general public.

In the case of smaller trade magazines, industry associations could monitor the emergence of any new split-run titles and inform their members accordingly. Where a particular publication became known as a split-run title, a printer, distributor or wholesaler could seek a contractual indemnity from the publisher before agreeing to handle future issues of the publication. These amendments are intended to be included in legislation in the new year.

The Hon. the Speaker: Before I put the vote for third reading, are there any other senators who wish to speak on this bill?

If not, it was moved by Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, that the bill be read the third time now. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to approve the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

[Translation]

SMALL BUSINESS LOANS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. Céline Hervieux-Payette moved the second reading of Bill C-99, to amend the Small Business Loans Act.

She said: Honourable senators, this legislative measure is based on two basic key components of the government's program: employment and growth. The first of these is the important role played by small business in the development of the Canadian economy. The senators are well aware of the role small business plays in the new economy of Canada in the 1990's, an economy characterized by rapid technological growth, lively competition and innovation. As the world economy grows, the small players begin to play an increasingly significant role. Small business has the flexibility required to take advantage quickly of new markets, to adapt to change and to exhibit a spirit of dynamism and innovation.

Today, Canada has some 2 million small businesses, one third more than in 1982. Ninety-nine per cent of all registered businesses have fewer than 100 employees. Since 1992, small businesses have created almost all of the new jobs in Canada. Canadians will continue to look to small business for job creation and economic growth. Small business and self-employment create close to two-thirds of private sector jobs and represent 60 per cent of our economic production.

In addition to their essential role in our economy, small businesses face unprecedented challenges. In a climate of intense competition, they need to upgrade their administrative capacities, find employees with skills that suit their market niche, acquire the technology required for innovation, and very quickly develop the capacity to take advantage of foreign markets. They have to bear the burden of regulation, which takes up the precious time of administrators who ought to be spending it on urgent business decisions. Despite the fact that the federal tax on small business in Canada is one of the more generous in the world, the tax burden continues to be a big problem for small business.

The government has solved these issues as they relate to small business in various ways, and the senators are familiar with many of these already. Nevertheless, the bill we are examining today addresses one of the most universal and confusing problems faced by small business: the need to find sufficient funding.

Lending institutions have a tendency to look for minimum risk, and small businesses are generally more risky than big ones. In addition, the cost to a bank or to a venture capital fund for preparation of a business plan and financing proposals, as well as for monitoring the progress of a business, is more or less the same whether a big or small loan is being applied for. Lenders are less likely to handle small loans which do not bring them much profit, yet they are aware that today's small business may be tomorrow's multinational.

However, lenders have shown that they are quite prepared to lend to small businesses if the federal government is prepared to share the risk. That is why, since it came into force in 1961, the Small Business Loans Act has played a fundamental role in helping small businesses acquire the capital they need.

The program based on the Small Business Loans Act offers loans for capital spending. The money may be used to finance the purchase of property required for the operation of a business. The borrower may also use the money for renovating, improving, updating, expanding, building or acquiring business premises. A small business may take advantage of the program to purchase, install, renovate, improve or update equipment.

The small business loans program provides lenders with a government guarantee to cover losses connected with such loans. The rate of coverage has changed over the years. When the Small Business Loans Act was passed in 1961, the government provided 100 per cent coverage. In 1985, the rate of coverage dropped to 85 per cent. Since April 1993, the rate has been 90 per cent, and as of January 1, 1996, it will again be reduced to 85 per cent.

While guaranteeing repayment of loans approved under the Small Business Loans Act, the government has established a program administered by private sector lenders who make their own decisions on approving loans. At Industry Canada, the Small Business Loans Administration Branch registers all loans approved by lenders under the Small Business Loans Act. If a loan is repaid promptly, the SBLA is no longer involved. If there is a payment default and the lender submits a claim under the Act, the SBLA gets involved.

The program is very successful. Since 1961, more than 400,000 loans have been approved under the small business loans program. These loans total more than $15 billion.

The program has expanded considerably in recent years. The annual dollar amount of loans approved under the program did not exceed $100 million till 1978. Between 1978 and 1980, this amount increased rapidly to $500 million. Between 1980 and 1983, the total annual amount varied from $400 million to $750 million, except in 1985, when it peaked at one billion dollars.

Since 1993, as the average maximum loan increased from $100,000 to $250,000 and the annual income of eligible businesses rose from $2 million to $5 million, there has been a considerable increase in the amounts borrowed under the small business loans program. In 1994, loans totalled $2.5 billion, and in 1995, they topped $4 billion.

This is good news, honourable senators. It means that small business loans have become an invaluable tool for small businesses which need capital to expand.

However, the increasing popularity of the program has its downside, and here I should mention the second pillar of the government's Agenda: Jobs and Growth, which is a consideration in the bill before us today. The first pillar is the need to support small business, and the second is the need to reduce government spending.

The government feels this is essential to protect the interests of small businesses. Lenders may decide to pay all or part of the administration fees instead of charging them to borrowers, so as to compete with other lenders. Small businesses would, as a result, have access to financing at a lower cost.

Furthermore, if administration fees are included in the rate of interest, small businesses would have a better idea of the real cost of a loan approved under the Small Business Loans Act. As a result, they would be more inclined to investigate the possibility of getting a loan at lower cost elsewhere.

Clause 4(3) amending subsection 7(1) of the Act, which provides that the minister may propose regulations on a host of subjects, would enable the minister to propose regulations amending the costs. Under the former legislation, the minister could propose regulations on the rate of interest. It will be possible to react more quickly to new circumstances under the Small Business Loans Act and thus recover costs.

The other amendments concern certain technical aspects of the Small Business Loans Act.

Clause 1(6) gives the minister discretionary power to ignore certain minor violations of the law with respect to the payment of a claim if he considers that they were unintentional, that they did not change the amount of the loss, and that they were corrected before default, or within two years of the initial payment of the loan. This clause provides more flexibility, taking into account the difficulties that sometimes plague small business.

Clauses 3(1) and 3(2) concern the extent of responsibility for the percentage guaranteed and serve to reduce the responsibility according to the amount of the loan. This measure, known as the rule of 90, 50 and 10 per cent, was established to encourage low volume lenders to use the program.

Thus, small businesses, particularly those outside major urban centres, will have greater access to capital.

The Small Business Loans Act paid up to 90 per cent of amounts below $125,000; 50 per cent of the part of the loan below $500,000 and 10 per cent of loans above $500,000. Following the amendments, the amount to which the highest rate of guarantee applies is doubled to $250,000. The highest rate of guarantee will be changed to 85 per cent on January 1, 1996.

Under clause 4(1), the minister will be able to propose regulations on the discharge of securities, including personal guarantees, a lender may require during the term of the loan. This amendment will mean the administration of the Small Business Loans Act will more closely follow current commercial practices where, in certain instances, a borrower may be discharged of a security required to guarantee repayment of a loan.

Honourable senators, these amendments will improve the Small Business Loans Act and make it even more effective in helping business find the financing it needs. It should also be said that the amendments will help the Small Business Loans Act achieve these objectives at no cost to taxpayers. The program will recover the costs.

We can see how much the program has helped people start up new businesses and how it has helped young businesses grow. In 1994, more than 14,000 start-up loans were granted, representing a third of all loans. Fifty-three per cent of loans were given to businesses in operation for less than three years.

This is why Bill C-99 is important for the government's program to promote jobs and growth. It helps adapt the Small Business Loans Act to the 1990s. Thus this legislation will remain a practical resource for lenders and borrowers in weighing the pros and cons of a proposed business. It will give business people a hand, since access to financing can make the difference in turning their dream into a reality. It will give small business access to the capital it so desperately needs in order to expand. This will be made possible through the lenders' keen business sense and the recovery of costs.

I hope honourable senators will join me in supporting this bill.

• (1540)

[English]

Hon. Donald H. Oliver: Honourable senators, I wish to congratulate the Honourable Senator Hervieux-Payette for the excellence of her presentation on Bill C-99, to amend the Small Business Loans Act. Her outline of the bill was so complete and comprehensive that there is very little that we want to add to it from this side.

As she has already stated, the main purpose of Bill C-99 is to move the small business loans program from partial to full cost recovery. Through the Small Business Loans Act, the federal government guarantees private sector loans to small businesses. The program dates back to 1961.

Basically, there are five major things being changed by way of this bill. The first is that it reduces the maximum loan guarantee to 85 per cent of a loan from 90 per cent. Second, it provides for an annual administration fee; lenders would only be able to pass on the fee through interest rates. Third, it allows the government to impose a claim processing fee. Fourth, it allows the government to regulate the release of security and personal guarantees given by borrowers; this is so that the full amount of the security will not continue to be held after a sizeable portion of the loan has been paid off, as in the past. Finally, it allows the government to make future changes to the level of guarantees and program fees through regulation.

It is the issue of regulation that the senators on this side would like to canvass somewhat. It is the understanding of those of us on this side that the committee will meet tomorrow morning, and at that time it is to be hoped there will be some representations from the minister in relation to the regulation-making power. In addition, we hope there will be some commitment from the department that we can see these regulations before they are brought into force.

With those remarks, honourable senators, we would be prepared to have this bill go to committee.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: When shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Hervieux-Payette, bill referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. H.A. Olson moved the second reading of Bill C-108, to amend the National Housing Act.

He said: Honourable senators, I want to say a few words of explanation regarding Bill C-108. I want to assure my honourable colleagues that my speech is down to about 25 per cent of what I had originally intended to say.

I am pleased to speak in support of Bill C-108, to amend the National Housing Act. The purpose of this bill is to increase the ceiling for mortgage loan insurance under the National Housing Act. This will enable the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation to continue underwriting home mortgage loan insurance within the legislative limit.

NHA mortgage loan insurance works in the following fashion: Most lenders cannot grant a mortgage for more than 75 per cent of the value of a property without mortgage loan insurance. What this means is that those Canadians who are not able to save a down payment of 25 per cent would be locked out of home ownership without mortgage loan insurance.

NHA mortgage loan insurance provides approved lenders with insurance against borrower default on residential mortgage loans. With NHA mortgage loan insurance, Canadians can take out a mortgage with an approved lender, and they need a down payment of only 10 per cent of the value of the property, or, indeed, only 5 per cent if they are first-time home buyers.

Bill C-108 will increase the existing limit on outstanding loan insurance from the current $100 billion to $150 billion. The bill also includes a provision to increase the ceiling further through appropriation in the future.

I would advise honourable senators that similar increases have come to the Senate before, in particular in 1988 and in 1992, and the amendments on those occasions were uncontested. While the amendments contained in this bill represent administrative matters, passage of this bill is essential if CMHC is to continue the operation of this loan insurance program.

In 1994 alone, CMHC mortgage loan insurance helped to house over 300,000 Canadian families at no cost to the government. This means that last year approximately 40 per cent of the residential mortgage stock in Canada involved financing by CMHC mortgage insurance. Without mortgage insurance, Canadians who do not have a 25 per cent down payment would generally never have access to home ownership.

The CMHC mortgage insurance fund is self-financing and self-sustaining, and therefore does not cost the government anything. In fact, CMHC policy requires that it be self-sufficient, financed strictly from the premiums and the fees that it charges over the long run. Premiums are charged as a percentage of the loan, based on the amount of the loan and its ratio to the value of the home. Premiums are set so as to ensure that the fund is sufficient to cover any claims.

There has been some suggestion that the government should get out of the business of mortgage loan insurance and leave it to private industry. It is important to point out, though, that without CMHC providing mortgage loan insurance, Canadians would face a private sector monopoly which would inevitably result in higher prices and, unfortunately, fewer choices. Housing would then be less affordable, especially for first-time buyers who make up the majority of NHA borrowers.

It is also important to keep in mind that CMHC mortgage loan insurance provides relatively equal access to mortgage financing for Canadians regardless of where they live in the country. In contrast, the chief competitor, the GE Capital Mortgage Insurance Company, only operates in 18 areas of the country.

Competition is the best way to keep prices at the lowest possible level and to ensure innovation in the mortgage industry to meet the changing needs of Canadian housing and finance consumers.

Besides helping Canadians to become homeowners, CMHC mortgage insurance has also been a key to the health of the housing industry in Canada. By fully protecting approved lenders against default on the part of borrowers, mortgage insurance encourages investment in residential construction. Housing constitutes an engine of economic growth responsible for creating many thousands of jobs and business opportunities in communities all across the country.

It should be pointed out that housing accounts for about 7 per cent of GDP, over half of all construction, and one out of every 12 jobs in Canada. House construction and renovation create jobs and business opportunities. For every $100 million of construction spending, 2,310 person-years of employment are created on site and in directly related supply and service industries.

Today, the private housing market is able to meet the housing needs of the vast majority of Canadian households. There is no doubt that CMHC mortgage loan insurance has played a critical role in that achievement.

Honourable senators, I have much more information on this topic which I would be glad to provide to you. However, I feel I have said enough to persuade you that this is a very useful measure, and we should proceed with it immediately.

Hon. Roch Bolduc: Honourable senators, this bill will allow the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation to insure up to $150 billion in mortgages, an increase of $50 billion from the current limit.

I am fully aware that without mortgage insurance many Canadians would never get mortgages at anything less than very high rates of interest, if they could get a mortgage at all. I have no problem with the CMHC continuing to provide this valuable service.

This insurance is provided on a cost-recovery basis, although it should be noted that there were losses in both 1993 and 1994. Last year, the loss was $93 million, which will be made up in future years.

I have a problem with the $50-billion increase provided in clause 1 of this bill, as we are given no information on the projected growth of the mortgage insurance portfolio.

In 1993, CMHC's only private competitor, the Mortgage Insurance Company, withdrew from the market. No doubt this has caused CMHC to think it needed such an increase in its limit, which was exceeded last year.

By way of an aside, honourable senators, I find it troubling that CMHC could surpass its statutory limit, as it did in 1994, and not find out about it until well into the next year.

Honourable senators, in considering this request for a higher mortgage insurance limit, it should also be borne in mind that earlier this year a new private-sector competitor entered the market. GE Capital Mortgage Corporation has acquired the residential mortgage insurance assets of the Mortgage Insurance Company of Canada. Perhaps $150 billion is needed; perhaps not.

The main problem with this bill does not lie in the $150-billion limit outlined in clause 1. The main problem with this bill is clause 1(b), which says that this amount may be increased at any time by a one-dollar vote in a supply bill. Honourable senators, I consider that to be a problem because of the lack of opportunity to study and debate any future increases. Supply bills in the other place are introduced and passed under a "guillotine" process. There is rarely any debate.

Estimates are supposed to be examined in committee, but it is not unusual for such a meeting not to be called, or for the committee not to report back. While a supply bill is automatically passed by the House of Commons on the last day of the supply period, there is nothing to stop the government from tabling a supplementary estimate containing a one-dollar vote just a couple of days before.

Individual items in a supply bill often receive limited scrutiny. These same supply bills come here and we are put under pressure to pass them quickly. It is a very serious matter for the Senate to amend or defeat a supply bill. In any event, supply bills are supposed to authorize spending, not insurance limits, not borrowing, and not the creation of new programs.

A one-dollar vote has already been used twice in this Parliament in connection with the CMHC. Last year, a one-dollar vote authorized the government to guarantee up to $50 billion of the residential mortgage insurance portfolio of the CMHC's former competitor at an estimated cost of up to $350 million; and a one-dollar vote was used to permit CMHC to borrow up to $15 billion on the Crown guarantee.

Honourable senators, I am concerned about these and other uses of one-dollar votes, as they strike at the very heart of Parliament.

I am sure that, if Senator Stewart were around, he would ask some questions about it.

In another bill now before us, Bill C-116, a one-dollar vote is being used to allow the Canadian International Development Agency to expand its mandate to include "countries in transition." This would create a whole new program, and should be the subject of separate legislation. However, there is no legislation governing CIDA, a corporation with a budget of more than $1.5 billion which was created by an order in council. That, in itself, is a cause for concern.

Earlier this year, one of our senators — I believe Senator Tkachuk — raised the matter of a one-dollar vote being used to grant unlimited borrowing authority to the Canadian Museum of Nature. What will be next? Will it be a one-dollar vote to allow the Minister of Finance to borrow any amount he wishes? If the opposition in the other place are asleep at the switch, who knows; it might happen.

In the debate on this bill in the other place, the focus was on the proposed $150-billion ceiling. I have news for the Bloc Québécois and Reform Party members in the other place: Once this bill passes, the limit may not stay at $150 billion for long, because it will be easy to increase it. Through a single vote in a supply bill, $150 billion could easily become $500 billion or more, or whatever other number the government chooses to insert.

[Translation]

In terms of parliamentary control, it is not a good method. The end of a session may not be a good time to review paragraph (b). This, in my opinion, is rather disturbing. I think that an appropriation bill is not the best way to authorize additional amounts for the purposes of insuring loans. It should still be done through a statutory law providing for a specific amount. If the amount allowed is exceeded, an additional amount will be authorized.

[English]

Senator Olson: Honourable senators —

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Olson speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Olson: Honourable senators, I listened carefully to the troubles with respect to the manner in which this legislation is put forward. I will undertake to ensure that the honourable senator's concerns are conveyed to those responsible.

I would point out, however, that when the Estimates are tabled before both Houses of Parliament, they are sent here, and they are almost immediately referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance. If the honourable senator, the chairman, or any members of that committee would like to specifically consider the situation respecting CMHC, they may do that immediately.

The committee does not need to wait for anything. It will always be subject to the scrutiny of Parliament, but it is up to the committee to decide which item in that enormous book of Estimates they wish to select for special study. At any time, the honourable senator could focus the committee on that particular subject.

It is a great experience to attend meetings of the National Finance Committee. I believe the committee exists for the purpose of the opposition to select items they wish to investigate in depth. In most cases, the examination is better than that carried out in the other place because we examine the expenditure of money before it is spent. The House of Commons Public Accounts Committee examines expenditures after the money is spent, in conjunction with its examination of the report of the Auditor General.

This house has the opportunity and structure to deal with all of my honourable friend's objections at any time he wishes to raise them. I know that he is an active member of that committee, and, therefore, he can do it.

Hon. William M. Kelly: Would Senator Olson entertain a question?

Senator Olson: Of course.

Senator Kelly: Having just heard Senator Bolduc's remarks and the response of Senator Olson, I certainly hope that Senator Olson is not saying that objections of this sort ought not to be raised in this chamber. He is surely not saying that these matters should be dealt with in committee, and that the chamber should not be bothered with these things.

Senator Olson: The honourable senator can rest assured that I was not suggesting anything of the kind.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Olson, bill referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

NATIONAL FINANCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Leaving having been given to revert to Motions:

Hon. Lowell Murray, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(f), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance have power to sit at five o'clock in the afternoon, today, December 14, 1995, even though the Senate may then be sitting, and that rule 95(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government) moved second reading of Bill C-110, respecting constitutional amendments.

She said: Honourable senators, I am pleased to have the opportunity today to introduce Bill C-110 in this chamber. Through this bill, the federal government is recognizing the interests of each of the regions of Canada in future proposals for constitutional amendments.

As honourable senators know, this legislation is the fulfilment of one of the three commitments for change made to Quebecers by the Prime Minister during the referendum campaign. As the Prime Minister said in Verdun on October 24:

Any changes in constitutional jurisdiction for Quebec will only be made with the consent of Quebecers.

Another part of that commitment that he made includes the resolution on the distinct society of Quebec, passed by the House of Commons this week and now being discussed in the Senate. Then there is the broader commitment, also discussed on a number of occasions during the referendum, with regard to the desire, not only of Quebecers but of all Canadians, for a change in the way their governments work with each other; the resolution of the issues of overlap and duplication in jurisdictional areas; and, as my colleague the Minister of Human Resources Development has indicated by his new employment measures, the recognition and respect for the responsibility of the provinces in the areas of education and labour market training.

As honourable senators will agree, the desire for change is not a sentiment exclusive to the people of Quebec. Canadians in every part of this country want to see a better working relationship among the different levels of government. They want to see more cooperation and less duplication, and more efficient and effective government at all levels. These measures are also a response to that desire. As such, they do not at all represent a culmination of our efforts on national unity. Rather, they represent a new beginning for Quebec and, indeed, for all of the provinces within a united Canada.

With the legislation before us now, the Government of Canada is sending a clear signal to the people of Quebec and all Canadians that we want to move this country forward. This is an important message to Quebecers in view of the single-minded obsession of the current government of Quebec, the Parti Québécois, and the Bloc Québécois to separate that province from the rest of Canada.

During the referendum campaign, there was — and many of us were part of it — a heartfelt outpouring of emotion from people all across Canada. They believe in this country. They want Quebec to remain part of us, and they want us to continue to build a stronger country together in all parts of Canada: east, south, north and west. This bill is an attempt by the federal government to reflect that emotion and reinforce and strengthen the bonds that exist among all Canadians across this land.

The provisions of Bill C-110 are a practical way of guaranteeing to all Canadians, including Quebecers, that we will not proceed with constitutional change without the support of each of the regions of this country: Atlantic Canada, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies, and now British Columbia. It represents a strong political commitment, supported and backed up by an act of Parliament, that the federal government will use its veto power to protect the regions against constitutional proposals that go against their best interests. That is what the federal government does in determining what is in the national interest. In the case of general constitutional amendments affecting the whole country, it does not make practical or political sense to proceed in the absence of a national consensus.

• (1610)

As all colleagues recognize, this legislation does not change the Constitution of this country. It will not change the current amending formula, or the delineation of powers, or any other aspects of our Constitution. It guides, however, the federal government in making a decision on whether or not to give federal consent to a proposed amendment.

A concern has been expressed in some circles that this legislation could have the effect of hindering the recognition and the implementation of the aboriginal and treaty rights of Canada's first peoples, but these rights are already recognized and protected in the Constitution Act, 1982.

The government takes the position that the inherent right of self-government is an existing right in the Constitution. My colleague the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development is working in cooperation with aboriginal peoples and the provinces to move forward with the job of turning the recognition of these rights into a reality for the first peoples of this country. This legislation does not affect that process, nor should it.

During the discussion on the distinct society resolution, Senator Kinsella raised the question of how the veto legislation might be interpreted to relate to other acts of Parliament, so-called ordinary legislation. One of his concerns, as I understood it, was whether we could somehow find ourselves in a position of having to have regional agreement on regular legislation. I should like to assure Senator Kinsella and others that the bill before us cannot be interpreted as applying to anything other than proposed constitutional amendments. What we are discussing here is exercising the federal constitutional consent to constitutional change in such a manner as to ensure that any future proposal will not go forward without a consensus in each of the regions of Canada.

As honourable senators may know, some western premiers have suggested that Bill C-110 will make it virtually impossible in the future to amend the Constitution in certain areas. What they are referring to is that, by expanding the veto under Bill C-110, more people will now have to agree to constitutional change, or at least not to say "no," than under the current constitutional amending formula, which requires the agreement of a minimum of seven provinces with 50 per cent of the population.

As it now stands, the federal government holds veto power by virtue of the fact that it must agree to any proposed change. The whole point of this legislation is to give each of the five regions protection, through the loan of the federal veto power, against future constitutional amendments to which the 7/50 rule applies and with which the people in those areas do not agree.

Obviously, with more people having recourse to a veto, there will be more of an emphasis on the provinces finding agreement among themselves, and clearly, in taking advantage of this new authority, the provinces would take great care to first give serious consideration to the consequences.

I wish to say again, as I did last Thursday, that I support the amendment to this legislation announced last week and passed this week, which will provide a veto for British Columbia. As I said before, the object of this bill is to bring Canadians from every region together, not to make them feel left out. The people of British Columbia feel strongly that their province has attained full regional value, and have done so for many years now.

The government has listened to the people in Western Canada, to views from members of its own caucus, and to other parliamentarians in the House of Commons and the Senate. It responded to the expressed need to reflect British Columbia's status as a specific region of this country. With its fast-growing population, size, economic growth and unique Pacific orientation, British Columbia deserves to be designated a region.

Senator Carney: We knew that.

Senator Fairbairn: This alteration has not only strengthened the role of that province in future constitutional discussions but it has also strengthened the role of each of the three prairie provinces. The amended bill will give a veto to two or more of the prairie provinces, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, representing at least 50 per cent of the population. While in practical terms this results in a strong hand for Alberta in refusing consent on an amendment, since it has more than half the population of the area, the other two provinces increase their influence as well. The requirement is that consent to an amendment must come from at least two of the three prairie provinces, and therefore Alberta requires either Saskatchewan or Manitoba in order to give prairie approval.

For years, the argument coming from that part of the country has been the same, and it can best be described by the slogan, "The west wants in." I would submit to you, honourable senators, that with this amendment, the west is in a much stronger and more significant position than it has ever been in the past. This also demonstrates that Prime Minister Chrétien and the government are ready and willing to be flexible and to respond to the wishes of a significant and important area of this country.

As we enter into a discussion about veto powers and possible future constitutional change, we should also remember that individual provincial governments already have significant veto powers in several important areas of our Constitution, and this legislation in no way diminishes those existing powers. For example, every province has a veto on all changes requiring the unanimous consent of all the provinces. These refer to changes in the office of the Queen, the Governor General, and the Lieutenant Governor of a province; changes in the minimum provincial representation in the House of Commons, which currently cannot be less than the number of senators from each province; the use of English and French nationally; and the make-up of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Another type of change contemplated by the Constitution provides that wherever there are proposed changes that affect one or more but not all of the provinces, those provinces affected by the proposals have an absolute and unconditional veto over any such amendment. Some of our colleagues here will remember the constitutional amendment that was adopted to build the fixed link between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. Prince Edward Island was guaranteed a permanent ferry service in the British North America Act. It was a precondition to their joining Confederation, and an amendment to the Constitution was required to change the wording, allowing for a bridge to be built to ensure that a connecting link would still be maintained. The change was made, the bridge is in fact being built, but it could not have gone forward if that province had decided to exercise its veto.

• (1620)

Provinces also have virtual veto power over some amendments made by the existing general amending formula, which requires seven provinces with 50 per cent of the population to approve certain changes. Where an amendment approved under this rule reduces any provincial power, right or privilege, any province can opt out and not participate in the changes. If it is on a matter involving a transfer to the federal level of jurisdiction over culture or education, the federal government is required to financially compensate the opting-out province.

The only areas in which there is no existing veto is where the general amending formula applies, but where the opting-out provision does not. It is these types of amendments to which the bill before us is directed. Honourable senators, this basically includes three categories: One is in amendments which would add powers to the provinces rather than reduce them or take them away. We remember that in the Charlottetown accord of 1992, it was proposed that some such categories as natural resources, forestry, mining and municipal institutions become provincial responsibilities which would fall under this particular part.

The second category involves changes in national institutions, such as the powers of the Senate, the principle of proportionate representation of the provinces in the House of Commons, and changes in the Supreme Court other than its composition.

The third category is in the creation of new provinces or the expansion of the territories of existing provinces. Senator Lucier expressed his concern last week that adding a regional veto to this provision could have a serious impact on the Yukon and the Northwest Territories as they move toward the goal of eventual provincehood. As I mentioned to him when he raised the issue, the federal government is committed to doing everything it can to create a degree of consensus that will allow us to improve our federation. Senator Lucier and others in this house have made all of us very conscious of the position of the territories, particularly on this important question. As I said earlier, I believe that the existing provinces would not take advantage of their new authority without giving very serious consideration to the consequences of doing so.

Honourable senators, the federal government has indicated that it is likely that the regional veto formula contained in this bill will be on the table at the first ministers' conference which must take place no later than April of 1997. There may be other proposals on the table, but this would be one of them. As honourable senators know, that conference is constitutionally required to discuss the issue of the amending formula. This bill builds a bridge between now and that conference in 1997.

Honourable senators, there is also the issue of how a province indicates consent for constitutional change, a matter which has been raised by Senator Kinsella, Senator Beaudoin and Senator Nolin. This bill in no way changes the general amending formula, nor does it change the constitutional requirement that provincial authorization for making an amendment must come through a resolution of the legislative assembly. Provincial legislatures retain all the powers and vetoes that the Constitution Act, 1982 provides. The provincial consent, which is being talked about in Bill C-110 as a trigger to proceeding with federal consent to an amendment may, for example, be expressed by a formal provincial legislative resolution or by a decision of the provincial government itself. A third option could be to give consent by an act of the legislature.

The government is indicating that before we get to the legal procedure involving an amendment, it wants those conditions met; that is, that any constitutional proposal in the areas I have mentioned is acceptable to the people in the five regions of this country. If it is not acceptable to the people in one of those five regions, we will not proceed.

The bill we are considering today, honourable senators, is a self-imposed restriction on the consent authority of the federal government. As such, it is very much in the same legislative category as that of the provisions of provincial governments such as Alberta and British Columbia, which have obliged themselves to carry out referenda to determine the wishes of their populations. That is what occurred during the Charlottetown accord.

What, then, of the regional veto itself? As honourable senators know, the idea of a regional veto as part of the amending formula for our Constitution has long been a component of endless constitutional discussions. The Victoria Charter of 1971 contained an amending formula with a regional veto. It was based on four regions, not five as this legislation provides. That formula was supported by the federal government and all of the provinces. While it did not proceed for other reasons, it helped set the stage for further consensus on constitutional change. Similar proposals were contained in constitutional studies, such as that of our friend Senator Beaudoin and Jim Edwards on the Beaudoin-Edwards committee in 1991, and, on our side, at the 1992 convention of the Liberal Party of Canada. That became part of one of our resolutions.

I mention these previous proposals, honourable senators, only to make the point that, in presenting this legislation today, the Government of Canada is not engaged in promoting some wild new concept. The idea has been around for many years. I believe there is a consensus that such a proposition makes sense as a way of further protecting the interests of the regions of this country. While this legislation will not change the Constitution itself, it will complement the current amending formula and serve as a bridge to the day when agreement on constitutional change and constitutional amending formulae can be reached.

Honourable senators, this bill is about building a stronger Canada; it is about giving our support as a government and a Parliament to the aspirations of all Canadians. As the Prime Minister said when he spoke in the House of Commons last week:

In Canada, we overcome our difficulties through a spirit of compromise and mutual respect. The spirit of cooperation and partnership that inspires us should motivate us to continue building this country in an atmosphere of generosity and respect. The measures we are taking today mean change without revolution, progress without breakup.

I sincerely hope that all members of this chamber will see these proposals for what they are — an honest attempt to respond to the aspirations of Quebec and to all regions and all Canadians, and an honest reflection of our deep commitment to build a stronger and more united Canada.

Therefore, honourable senators, I would urge all members to support this legislation, and to do so in a time frame which is fair and reasonable given the commitments made during the recent referendum in Quebec.

• (1630)

Hon. Lowell Murray: Honourable senators, I am pleased that my honourable friend, the Leader of the Government in the Senate, has touched, if briefly, on some of the concerns about this bill expressed by the leaders of aboriginal associations. I wish to offer a word from my own perspective on this matter. Even if by some miracle this formula of regional vetoes were to be constitutionalized as an amending formula, I do not believe it would be any more difficult than it is now to achieve what the aboriginal peoples — and most citizens, I think — desire, which is a constitutional amendment on aboriginal self-government.

As matters now stand, such an amendment requires the consent of the Parliament of Canada and seven provinces having at least 50 per cent of the population. However, up to three provinces that dissented from such an amendment could opt out of it because, obviously, such an amendment would likely affect provincial powers. If those provinces were British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, where most of the aboriginal peoples live, the constitutional amendment would not be of much practical effect, if I may put it that way. I tend to think that, as a practical matter, we need near-unanimity to get an amendment that will truly protect and serve the interests of the aboriginal people.

As I said, even if by some miracle that amendment becomes constitutionalized, I do not think the situation in respect of an amendment on aboriginal self-government would be much more difficult.

I want to say that I do understand and appreciate the frustrations and the concerns of Chief Mercredi, who is First Chief of the Assembly of First Nations, and who has been the spokesman on many of these matters. I do hope that the government will take the extra step to try to reconcile their policy with the concerns of the national organizations.

However, in the present circumstances, lacking as we do a constitutional amendment on self-government, I believe that the path being followed by Mr. Irwin is a constructive one. Perhaps it is the only practical course open to us at the present time. I may be wrong about this, but I think there is at least a possibility that these self-government agreements that may be negotiated with various aboriginal groups could be entrenched in the Constitution. I certainly hope so because that, in itself, would provide a basis of experience with aboriginal self-government that might well hasten the day when we can achieve a constitutional amendment on aboriginal self-government.

Honourable senators, as the Leader of the Government has pointed out, the immediate background to this bill is a commitment made by the Prime Minister during the referendum campaign in Quebec in October. I want to say a word about the referendum result, and about the challenge it poses to all of us; a challenge to the existence of our country and, of course, the relationship of this bill and the issues it addresses to that challenge.

Some 94 per cent of Quebecers exercised their franchise in the referendum of October 25. Almost one half of them voted yes to a question which was intended to lead to the separation of Quebec from Canada. For a federation as old as ours, for a country as successful as ours and as blessed as ours, that referendum result was just pathetic.

Let us be clear about the causes of this state of affairs: Let us not be misled by superficial explanations offered by some commentators attributing the result to charisma, or the lack of it, of various leaders, or to deficiencies in the campaign strategy and tactics of the federalist organizers. No doubt such factors did play a part. However, a 94 per cent turn-out, honourable senators, is indicative of a highly motivated electorate.

What must concern us is the size of the vote for sovereignty and the reasons behind it. That vote was driven by a profound sense of rejection and alienation in Quebec, the most recent causes of which are the imposition on Quebec of the 1982 Constitution by the federal Parliament and the nine English-majority provinces, and by the failure of the Meech Lake Accord in 1990.

We know that a significant proportion of those who voted yes are not convinced separatists. They are discouraged federalists who believed that a no vote would be a dead-end for Quebec's hopes of redress and security in Confederation. Now we must win back those discouraged federalists. Sometime within the next 24 months, almost certainly, there will be another Quebec referendum, as Mr. Lucien Bouchard has promised it, or perhaps an élection référendaire. Some published public opinion polls in Quebec show that support for sovereignty has increased since the referendum. The existence of the country is hanging by a thread.

The central issue, the only issue, that has the possibility of breaking up the country is Quebec's place in Confederation. Yet almost everywhere one looks today outside Quebec, one sees reluctance to confront the issue, attempts to temporize with it, and stratagems to finesse it by addressing other issues. With the greatest of respect to those who are properly concerned about such matters as overlap and duplication in the management of the federation, it was not overlap and duplication that drove 94 per cent of Quebecers to the polls on October 25; it was something much more profound than that.

Honourable senators, this bill addresses one key element relating to Quebec's place in Confederation — a formula for amending the Constitution. The bill would establish a process that would let Quebec and any one of four other regions control the federal veto on certain amendments over which every province does not now have a veto, notably the Senate, the Supreme Court and the creation of new provinces.

It has to be said about this bill, as it has to be said about the distinct society resolution which is also before us that, if passed, these will become acts of the federal Parliament; they will not, as the Leader of the Government has said, be part of the Constitution.

• (1640)

It cannot be said too often that the security which Quebec needs in Confederation, through recognition of her distinctive character, and through her role in the amending process, can only be achieved by entrenching these matters in the Constitution. If, by the time of the next referendum campaign, the other provinces and the federal government cannot deliver these fundamental guarantees, then I believe that the federalist leaders and the federalist cause in Quebec will have been gravely compromised. No patriotic rally in Montreal or anywhere else will save us.

Mr. Lucien Bouchard could not be more clear: He is counting on us to fail in our quest for constitutional guarantees so that he can give the final, successful push to send separation over the top in 1997.

If, however, the nine provinces and the federal government can agree on several key constitutional proposals to secure Quebec's place in Confederation, and, even better, if they can pass such proposals through Parliament and their legislatures, preferably before 1997, then it is Mr. Bouchard and the separatists who will be on the defensive. If they accept such proposals, then Quebec's place in Canada would be confirmed and secured. If they refuse, they would lose the moderates whose support has been so crucial to them. Either way, separatism will have been defeated.

One hears Prime Minister Chrétien say that he is not offering constitutional proposals, because Mr. Bouchard and his future colleagues in Quebec City refuse to negotiate anything other than separation. However, our strategy in Ottawa and the nine provinces is not to try to convert Mr. Bouchard and his colleagues to federalism. We are not trying to satisfy the separatists. Our goal must be to reinforce the federalists in Quebec and to win back those whom we lost in the last referendum. A credible constitutional offer from Ottawa and from English Canada, an offer that is generally acceptable to federalists in Quebec, is the worst political nightmare of Lucien Bouchard and his colleagues.

The government wanted to make good on the commitment of the Prime Minister in the referendum campaign — a laudable enough objective. I regret to have to say that they have been incredibly inept in bringing this bill forward. This bill, according to ministers, was to be a bridge to the first ministers' conference on the Constitution, which must be held in 1997. Some bridge. Without a plan, without a sound foundation, Mr. Chrétien and Mr. Rock have cobbled together a jerry-built structure that has not at all improved our chances of succeeding in 1997, when the price of failure could be the break-up of our country.

[Translation]

It seems obvious that the government had not consulted the premiers of Alberta and British Columbia before tabling Bill C-110 in the House of Commons.

It is also obvious that, in the entourage of the ministers responsible for constitutional issues, there is a deplorable lack of advisors who know and understand the western provinces. This is a serious problem which must be addressed immediately.

In her speech, the Leader of the Government traced some of the history of that famous Victoria formula. She does not appear to have drawn the conclusions that are obvious. By trying to resuscitate the Victoria formula, the government made a huge mistake.

The concept of a Canada with four regions has been unacceptable to British Columbia for a long time. The very idea of regional vetoes, although accepted in Victoria and advocated by Mr. Trudeau in 1980, was rejected by the premiers in 1982.

I know that the Victoria formula was no more acceptable to the western provinces during the negotiations that preceded the Meech Lake Accord in 1987. In the amending formula to Meech, we applied the unanimity rule to several issues that, since 1982, could have been amended by seven provinces representing 50 per cent of Canada's population. These included amendments affecting the Senate, the Supreme Court and the establishment of new provinces. Thus, in the Meech Lake Accord, we had succeeded in reconciling Quebec's demand for a veto with the principle of equality for the provinces.

Even our colleague Senator Beaudoin suggested this Victoria formula. I do not challenge its merits. He recommended it in the report of the Beaudoin-Edwards committee. However, the provinces opposed it once again. As everyone knows, the tabling of Bill C-110 in the House of Commons, two weeks ago gave rise to an uproar in Alberta and British Columbia. Mr. Rock and the government finally yielded to the pressures of these provinces. They amended the bill to grant a regional veto to British Columbia. However, that late move did not succeed in calming things down, particularly in Alberta.

As the Leader of the Government pointed out earlier, Alberta, by virtue of its demographic weight, will control the regional veto of the prairie provinces. Yet, Premier Klein still seems opposed to the idea. The premiers of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, who welcomed the original version of the bill, are now much less enthusiastic.

If Bill C-110 had been approved by the House of Commons in its original form, Conservative senators would probably have proposed replacing the four regional vetoes with a version of the Meech Lake formula, namely the unanimity rule.

In its present form, the bill will be reviewed by a committee, which will hear provincial government officials. I feel that any interim, unilateral legislative measure passed by the Canadian Parliament must have a reasonable chance of being constitutionalized at the 1997 conference. Otherwise, Bill C-110 would be futile.

[English]

I must say, in light of the reception accorded Bill C-110 in various parts of the country, I am not very sanguine that this formula can achieve the unanimous consent that would be necessary to incorporate it as part of the Constitution in 1997.

• (1650)

Prime Minister Chrétien's commitment, as I understood it, was that until an amending formula acceptable to Quebec was adopted in the Constitution, the federal government would not proceed with any constitutional amendments affecting Quebec's place in the federation — those are my words, my interpretation of his commitment — without Quebec's consent.

That straightforward commitment could have been backed up by a parliamentary resolution. We would have had a proper bridge, in the interests of Quebec, to the 1997 conference. Instead, the Prime Minister resurrected the idea of four, then five, regional vetoes. With that idea arose all manner of rivalries, resentments and divisions.

Bill C-110 has failed the most elemental test of a national unity initiative: It has proven —

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable Senator Murray, I hesitate to interrupt you, but your time has expired.

Is there leave for the honourable senator to continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Murray: I thank honourable senators.

It has failed the most elemental test of a national unity initiative: It has proven to be divisive.

Now, however, it has landed in our laps. A Senate committee, and ultimately this chamber, must try to deal with it without doing further damage to the prospects of success — that is to say, the prospects of Canada's survival in 1997. Let me be clear on the question of Quebec's veto. Permit me a personal reference. It was 14 years ago this week that I stood in this chamber, a few feet from where I am now standing, to oppose the Constitution Act of 1982. On that occasion, December 7, 1981 — and this is the first time that I have done this, namely, quote myself — I said:

Whatever I know of the history of our country, and everything I know or believe about the nature of our country, tells me that no Canadian Constitution can endure that does not have the support of both Quebec and English Canada in general.

The evidence indicates that this measure lacks the necessary support of Quebec. The evidence shows that a majority of the National Assembly of Quebec, representing government and opposition parties, does not support the measure.

I then asked:

Does Quebec have a veto? The courts will be called upon to render a judicial decision on that. I believe that most Canadians acknowledge, as an essential fact of our national existence, that Quebec has had and does have a veto on changes which affect her own status and the powers of her legislature.

Later, I said:

This measure was born of a constitutional consensus of which Quebec is not a part. The Charter of Rights, the fact that we will now have an amending formula, even the achievement of patriation, in my opinion, are vastly outweighed by the definitive, historic fact of Quebec's exclusion and opposition. That being the case, this Constitution cannot last and will not last. It does not have the dual consensus of support which is an essential element of survival in this country.

Honourable senators, not long afterwards, the Supreme Court ruled that Quebec did not have a veto. For 117 years — that is, until 1982 — no federal government proceeded with any significant constitutional amendment over the opposition of Quebec.

Even Mr. Trudeau spoke, after the fact, of Quebec's "traditional veto." I think I am quoting him exactly — I had better be. I am referring here to an exchange of letters that he had with Premier René Lévesque.

Honourable senators, what we are talking about here and now in 1995 is whether Quebec, the only majority French-speaking society in North America, is to have the security of knowing that its place in Confederation — specifically its place in institutions such as the Senate and the Supreme Court — will not be changed without its consent. My party has always respected that principle, and I trust and believe that we will continue to do so.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre De Bané: Honourable senators, I listened carefully to Senator Murray's important contribution. I listened to his criticisms. I did not agree with some of his comments, nor with some of the points he raised in this chamber. I must say, however, that I am grateful for his great sensitivity to Quebec's situation.

That being said, after hearing him say how things should be done today, when he himself was very involved for several years in an effort that failed despite all his hard work, in that area and in others, I think that we should perhaps leave well enough alone. We should set an attainable goal rather than aim for an unreachable ideal. The honourable senator himself spent an enormous amount of energy on this. He knows how that effort failed in 1990.

Like the Leader of the Government, I maintain that this bill is an extremely important step precisely to reassure Quebec about the changes that could affect it.

As the Prime Minister pointed out, this bill fulfils one of the three commitments he made on behalf of the federal government during the referendum campaign: not to go ahead with any constitutional change that could affect Quebec without Quebecers' consent.

[English]

The bill does more than respond to that undertaking. It ensures that constitutional amendments concerning all Canadians will not be made without substantial support from all regions of Canada, Quebec included.

As the Prime Minister said, the Government of Canada recognizes the legitimacy of Quebec's long-standing desire that its consent be given before major constitutional changes are undertaken. The Prime Minister went on to note that the government equally acknowledges the interest of all parts of Canada in such amendments. If they are to be supported widely by Canadians, they should be the result of a broad consensus throughout the country.

It is for these reasons that the government is committing itself, through this legislation, to exercising its veto over proposed constitutional amendments that do not enjoy sufficient support in all five regions of Canada.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, in the absence of a constitutional amendment — which is impossible as long as the Government of Quebec refuses to consider any constitutional amendment for the renewal of the Canadian Constitution proposed by the federal government or other provinces — this bill fulfils the commitment made by the Government of Canada not to assent to any general constitutional amendment without the consent of the regions, including Quebec.

[English]

Some will ask: Why a bill rather than a proposal to amend the Constitution?

• (1700)

While I have just given the very pragmatic reason for the approach the government is taking, it does lead me to ponder whether governments in Canada have perhaps become obsessed with the idea that Canada's constitutional problem can be resolved only with constitutional amendment, rather than looking to more practical solutions. Let us give ordinary legislative administrative changes a chance.

How will this regional veto work? To answer this question, it is first necessary to outline the relevant amending formulas found in Part V of the Constitution Act, 1982. The three key formulas are the unanimity formula, the bilateral formula, and the general amending formula. For amendments under the first two, each province has a veto. The unanimity formula covers such pivotal matters as changes to the use of French or English at the national level, the composition of the Supreme Court, and changes to the amending procedures themselves. None of these can be changed without the consent of every province. Consequently, provinces have no need of the federal veto to protect them against these kinds of changes.

The so-called "bilateral formula" is used to make amendments to provisions of the Constitution that apply to less than all provinces. In particular, it covers changes to boundaries between provinces and to minority language rights within a province. Changes to this type of provision can be made only with the consent of Parliament and of each province to which the amendment applies. Again, every concerned province has a veto and does not need additional protection from the federal government.

The general amending formula applies to two categories of general amendments. One includes changes to the institutions of the national government and expansion of existing provinces or creation of new provinces. The other covers all other general amendments that cannot be made under another formula, such as changes to the division of powers or changes to the Canadian Charter.

[Translation]

The only right comparable to the veto granted to the provinces under this new amending procedure is the power to opt out of any amendment that restricts the rights or legislative powers of the province. To that extent, the provinces have a real veto power, as they can prevent a given amendment from being applied on their territory.

For the rest, a general amendment not sanctioned under the 7/50 general amending formula could, however, be binding on the provinces. It is against these kinds of general amendments, which cannot be opted out of, that the bill will afford the provinces protection through a regional veto.

In short, at present, only the House of Commons has an absolute veto that it can use against just about any constitutional amendment. This bill ensures that Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia, as well as the Atlantic region and the Prairies have a general veto on any constitutional amendment in areas over which they currently have no veto or opting-out right. They will be able to impose this veto on any change to national institutions such as the Senate, to the foundation of new provinces and to any change in the distribution of powers or in the rights and freedoms guaranteed under the Charter. In that regard, I think that we are going as far in here as in the Meech Lake Accord.

[English]

The bill does not attempt to provide a veto for every province since this would be simply to compound the problems which unanimity brings. It does provide an overlay on the operation of the 7/50 formula which commits the federal government to ensuring that, before it decides to have the House of Commons or the Senate consent to an amendment, it is satisfied that the amendment enjoys the requisite degree of consent from every region of Canada.

Under the bill, a constitutional amendment would have to receive the consent of at least seven provinces, including Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia, two provinces from the Atlantic region representing more than 50 per cent of that region's population, and two provinces from the prairie region representing more than 50 per cent of the prairie population, before the federal government could propose it to Parliament.

I should like to speak about the amendment to Bill C-110 which the government introduced to add British Columbia as a fifth region under the bill. As the Minister of Justice stated when introducing the amendment, it is the result of the government's having listened to members of its own caucus, members of Parliament and senators from British Columbia, and to the population of British Columbia who clearly and convincingly expressed their views and those of their constituents to the effect that the time has come for the province to be recognized as a region for the purposes of this bill.

Bill C-110 as amended responds to the need for a realistic reflection of British Columbia's status as a specific region of Canada. British Columbia is one of the most rapidly growing provinces, with 12 per cent of the country's population in 1991, 12.5 per cent in 1994, and it is projected to be 13.2 per cent in 2001. While it is smaller than Ontario, at 37 per cent, and Quebec, at 25 per cent, it has almost 42 per cent of the population of the western provinces and it is projected to have 45 per cent by 2001. The size and the population of British Columbia, its contribution to the Canadian economy, and its unique Pacific positioning were factors that contributed to the recognition of B.C. as a fifth region.

Under the bill, the federal government could not proceed to introduce an amendment if one of the five regions refused to give its consent, even if the requirements of the 7/50 formula were met.

[Translation]

The bill does not amend the Constitution; however, a statute enacted in Parliament does create a legal obligation and the federal government will be required to comply with that law.

There has been some suggestion that this represented an unconstitutional obstacle to an area of federal jurisdiction or an indirect change to the procedure of constitutional amendment. It is our feeling that the bill would hold up to a legal challenge of its validity in that it is within the normal purview of Parliament to limit or direct the actions of government. The bill is not intended to create a revision procedure which would take precedence over the amending mechanisms set out in the Constitution. It is merely a mechanism which can guide the federal government with respect to a provincial and regional consensus sufficiently strong to justify a general constitutional amendment approved by the Commons and the Senate.

As far as Quebec is concerned, this veto is along the same lines as our intent in the same respect in the Meech Lake Accord.

[English]

There will be a first ministers' conference by April, 1997 on the amending formula. At that time, constitutional changes could be discussed. However, this government did not want to wait so long. We should not forget that the current Quebec government's agenda is separation. Canada has to find ways to modernize our great country in unity. Our country has been recognized by the United Nations as one of the best places in the world in which to live because of our quality of life. We should keep making improvements to the federation while respecting the specific needs of the various regions of the country.

• (1710)

I would ask honourable senators to support this bill which gives to Quebec a regional veto and which goes a step further in giving regional vetoes to Ontario, British Columbia, the prairie region and the Atlantic region.

Hon. Pat Carney: Honourable senators, I rise today to speak against Bill C-110, respecting constitution amendments. This is a very short bill; only six paragraphs long, slightly over one page. It contains only two clauses. The first clause deals with the veto, and the second clause deals with definitions. Yet, this tiny scrap of paper, this bridge to Confederation, has already proven capable of demolishing much of the goodwill created by the very close referendum result in Quebec. I will give you a random sample of headlines from British Columbia's media at the time: "Chrétien's West blunder sparked anger in B.C."; "Adding fuel to B.C. ire"; "Chrétien on Monday worsened Confederation's chances"; "Misdeal"; "Dated ideas underlie Ottawa's willingness to offend B.C."; "Chrétien plan 'insult to B.C.'"; "Mighty misguided"; "Mr. Chrétien knows how to unite B.C., if not Canada"; "Plan condemned as offensive view of the country."

I could go on, honourable senators, but you can see why the efforts of the government to unite Canada on such an important issue has already been destroyed by the contents of this bill, even in its amended form.

I will use my time, honourable senators, to tell you what British Columbians have been saying about this bill. However, before I talk to you today about the reaction of British Columbians, I wish to make two important points.

First, British Columbians generally love our country. Canadian unity is important to us as a Pacific province, and we are proud to be part of Confederation. As a matter of fact, we feel that we contributed to Canada when we joined Confederation in 1871 as an equal, independent colony. We can claim to have created the present concept of Canada by joining Confederation. We made possible the vision of a country that stretched from sea to sea to northern sea. Some of us can ask with justification: Where would they be today — the rest of Canada — without us? What if we had joined instead with our natural, geographic allies, Alaska and the Pacific Northwest? Would the prairie provinces, dependent on ice-free Pacific ports to ship their grain, have joined central Canada when they were carved out of the Northwest Territories? Would the maritime provinces have stayed in a smaller scale of Confederation, or would they have joined the expanded United States of America?

This is a point that was understood by our first Prime Minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, who was very conscious of the role of British Columbia as a land bridge to the Pacific. In talking about the railway, which was the rainbow that was to unite us, he wrote to Sir Stafford Northcote, who was Chancellor of the Exchequer in Benjamin Disraeli's cabinet. He said:

Until this great work is completed, our Dominion is little more than a "geographic expression." We have as much interest in B. Columbia as in Australia, and no more. The railway once finished, we become one great united country with a large interprovincial trade and a common interest.

You can see, honourable senators, that Canada has always benefited from the participation of British Columbia.

However, the view of British Columbia and our angry reaction to much of this bill reflects the view that it has caused disunity. It has strained the tired and torn body of Confederation. It looks backward to the past when we should be looking to the future. Not only is the content of the bill flawed because it will impose a straitjacket on the future and make it difficult to change our Constitution by the rent-a-veto to the provinces, but the very process itself is flawed. I want to remind honourable senators how important it is.

Our Confederation has evolved from the original Fathers of Confederation and the original union. We added British Columbia. We carved the prairie provinces out of the plains and out of the Northwest Territories. Even this week in the new territory of Nunavut, which has evolved in the last few years from the Northwest Territories and the old Rupert's Land, the people of that area have voted and chosen Iqaluit as the new capital of their region. We have, as the Leader of the Government in the Senate pointed out, the issue of provincial status for the Yukon. In order to grow, thrive, adjust and adapt, we need a Constitution and a confederation that can be more flexible. This bill will hobble that approach.

In terms of the flawed process, it is of course a unilateral attempt by the federal government to impose change through the back door which it cannot achieve through the front door.

I was a member of the cabinet that introduced and brought forward Meech Lake. I was a member of the Parliament that approved Meech Lake. I did that not because it was so great for Quebec, which of course we believed it to be, but because we believed that it was good for the unity of the entire country. It was good for B.C., Alberta and all of the provinces. We do not have that view of the bill before us today.

Before I discuss the view of British Columbians, I would mention some of the views put forward by the Liberal government. First, we have the statement by the Prime Minister that this bill, even as amended, is good for British Columbia. He told British Columbians:

Some people are trying to characterize this tremendous progress as a setback. Do not believe them. It is the opposite. It's the start of a new era of British Columbia's strength in Canada.

We always knew we were a region. I do not see why it took so long for other people and Liberals in central Canada and Ottawa to understand that. There was very clear knowledge among B.C.

Liberals that we were a region. I am surprised that Prime Minister Chrétien did not understand that.

Then we have the comments of the minister responsible for national unity. This is what the western member of the unity committee of cabinet, Anne McLellan, is reported as having said in The Ottawa Citizen about British Columbia's claim that it should be treated like Ontario and Quebec:

"I don't understand the basis for their claim. It can't be population, because their population is nowhere close to Quebec's and Ontario's. It's much closer to Alberta's than either of the other two. They are not the homeland of one of Canada's two founding people or Canada's first peoples. I think one needs to inquire about the basis of the claim..."

If Minister McLellan had been a little more attuned to British Columbia's reality, she would know that one of our claims is that B.C. was probably the original multi-cultural, multi-ethnic part of Canada. Chinese Canadians were among our earliest non-aboriginal citizens. Fifteen hundred of them died attempting to build the railway that united us, one for every 450 yards. As Liberal Ted McWhinney pointed out, that is one of the unique aspects of our province.

Hedy Fry, is MP for my former seat of Vancouver Centre —

Senator Cools: Splendid woman.

• (1720)

Senator Carney: We have a good record in Centre, three out of three in the last few elections, two Conservatives, one Liberal.

Ms Fry has written in the Vancouver Sun that, while many were angry that British Columbian MPs voted to move Bill C-110 to committee, one only has to look at the process, and she goes on to argue that the bill was dealt with in a reasonable way in committee. We should be aware of the fact that the bill was introduced in the House of Commons on November 29 and reported and passed with amendments on December 13.

In that period, there were only 11 days to deal with this tiny piece of paper which is now before us, and which has such an impact on British Columbians as well as the rest of Canada.

Let me just share with you some of the views of British Columbians reviewing this bill. First of all, we have Premier Harcourt who, on December 12, just this week, wrote to the Right Honourable Jean Chrétien. He pointed out that it was gratifying that the government decided to recognize British Columbia as a region in its own right, as has been noted in this house. He wrote:

However, the change from four regions to five does not address the fundamental problems inherent in the regional veto approach itself. The proposed veto structure puts us in a situation where change in the interests of the West are almost impossible.

I should like to remind honourable senators about the responsibility of this chamber. This chamber represents the regions. British Columbia has now been recognized as a region by the Liberal government through this bill. Does that mean we will get our share of regional representation in the Senate? The region of British Columbia, as defined by this bill, only has six senators. The region of the maritimes has 30. Is that equal? Is that fair? The region of Quebec has 24 members, and so does Ontario. Even the tiny provinces of Atlantic Canada have more senators than the region of British Columbia.

I am asking the Liberal members of this chamber: Where will they be if British Columbia decides that it wishes to have more senators, perhaps elected senators? Prime Minister Mulroney was the first prime minister to appoint to this chamber an elected senator, the late Stan Waters from Alberta. If initiatives like that of Reform MP Jim Abbott proceed, so that senators can be elected in B.C. and then appointed to this chamber by the Prime Minister, will you be so supportive of our efforts? Will the Quebec government and the province of Quebec be supportive of our efforts to increase our share of Senate seats to that consistent with a region? We will wait and see.

Senator Berntson: Of course, you would have to give six more to the prairies.

Senator Carney: The senator from Saskatchewan agrees that, of course, the west's representation in the Senate will require beefing-up, according to this regional veto which has been introduced.

To return to the Premier's letter to the Prime Minister:

The position of British Columbia remains that Bill C-110 is seriously flawed and should be withdrawn.

The minister in B.C., Andrew Petter, who is chair of the cabinet working group on national unity, did not have an opportunity to even appear before the Justice Committee. I am pleased and gratified that members of this chamber will give him that opportunity to appear before the committee set up by the Senate. His position is that:

...simply granting British Columbia a veto, while preferable to the current proposal —

That is, before the amendment.

— will not address the myriad of other problems with the federal government's proposed "rental" veto.

The fact that Ontario and Quebec obtain provincial vetoes while other provinces are relegated to being part of a region, creates two classes of provinces, with special status for Ontario and Quebec.

And now, of course, British Columbia.

The regional veto is an attempt by the federal government to amend the constitutional amending formula through the back door. Because Bill C-110 will change the way that the amending formula works in practice — for instance, proposed amendments which meet the current 7/50 test could be defeated by one region exercising its veto. The 7/50 amending formula was adopted in 1982 and the provisions for regional vetoes were rejected.

The proposed scheme does not even pass its own test. The scheme does not have the requisite approval of the western region.

If this piece of legislation were in effect today, it could not pass because British Columbia, as the region, opposes it and Alberta, the de facto majority in the region of the Prairies, opposes it, let alone Quebec's opposition. This law could not even pass under the test of its own implementation. That is the flaw that Minister Petter so correctly points out in this bill.

We have also heard from Mel Smith, who is known to many of you. He was, for a period of 20 years, the senior constitutional advisor to four successive British Columbia premiers. He is very familiar with this issue. He points out:

The fact of the matter is that in 1981 governments considered that they put the amending formula issue to rest after 54 years of negotiations.

We already paid for the amending formula that we have in the Constitution. We should not have to pay again in 1997 to remove this offensive legislation from the books.

The amending formula agreed to at that time was the quid pro quo for accepting Mr. Trudeau's Charter of Rights, a formula that recognized to a substantial degree the judicial equality of the provinces with a high degree of flexibility so as to protect provincial interests.

He makes the point which I and other British Columbians have made:

British Columbia badly needs reform of the National institutions of the country so as to give it more power in Ottawa. Obviously, the results of Bill C-110 would be to effectively block such reform and, in my view, will lead to national disunity.

The media has shown surprising unanimity on this issue. I have picked as a representative sample the Vancouver Sun's editorial of December 8, 1995.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: Senator Carney, I regret to interrupt but the rules require that I point out that your time has expired.

If there is leave, the honourable senator may continue. Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Carney: Thank you, honourable senators.

To continue the quotes from British Columbians, the Vancouver Sun reported, under a headline called "Veto Mania" stated:

More regions, more vetoes equal more trouble for Canada.

Well, snap our suspenders, British Columbia has got its veto. Maybe now we can get together with Ontario and Quebec and form a support group, called it Provincial Survivors of Confederation.

If vetoes are the name of the game, B.C. should have one. But vetoes are a bad idea. Canada already has a Constitution; it already has an amending formula. Proliferating vetoes impede change, and change — a representative Senate, for example — is part of what B.C. needs to take its rightful place in today's Canada. Prime Minister Jean Chrétien should have taken all the vetoes away, not given out another one.

...This veto may temporarily cool British Columbians down, but because it inhibits change it will neither appease them nor cure what ails the country.

I can remind members of this chamber that five B.C. Reform MPs broke their party ranks and voted for the amendment that gives B.C. a regional status. Of course, they voted against the bill.

Then I have a series of comments from people who have either written or phoned us. Any B.C. senator will tell you that the switchboards have been lit up ever since this bill received first reading. From Vancouver:

Mr. Chrétien has made a well-intentioned, but nonetheless disastrous, attempt to satisfy Quebec's insatiable demands while still keeping the rest of Canada in line. The result, I predict, will be a Canada even more deeply divided and troubled than that which already exists.

I have a letter from North Vancouver:

To have the Prime Minister, accompanied by Sheila Copps with tears in her eyes, blaming the West for being responsible for the problems in Quebec shows their total ignorance of the West and all we stand for.

This is one from Vancouver:

I am writing to express to you my concern and anger at that the way the CHRETIEN GOVT. continues to ignore the voice of B.C.

I think the time has come for B.C. to have a massive temper tantrum, and we must make it clear to OTTAWA that we will be heard.

Another one, addressed to the Prime Minister, again from North Vancouver, dealing with the constitutional proposal, reads:

The essence of this proposal was already roundly defeated in the Charlottetown Accord referendum of 1992 in all parts of Canada. In addition, the process by which this initiative is being put forth is flawed. You have not consulted with the people or the government of Quebec, nor have you done the same thing with the other nine provinces and territories.

I want to remind honourable senators in this chamber that British Columbia rejected the Charlottetown accord by a higher percentage than any other part of the country, so you can see why they are particularly bitter about this. This letter shows why they are upset.

Another letter from Victoria:

I am outraged by these peremptory and dictatorial actions by the Prime Minister. I think he must have lost his mind. I am aware that he has made wild, irrational and totally insupportable promises to the people of Quebec on the eve of their provincial referendum. One would have thought fatigue would have explained much of this — and a general inability to understand that "if you are up to your ass in alligators, perhaps it is time to drain the swamp!"

I could go on and on. Here is another one, again from the Lower Mainland area:

I applaud your comments. It's exactly how I feel. It's how people in my office feel, and it's how the people I ride the bus with feel.

Honourable senators, I will not take up your time. There is the odd letter that speaks in support of the distinct society status, but I think that honourable senators understand the general tenor of the remarks in British Columbia.

Honourable senators, you have been very patient. I wish finally to say that the approach to which British Columbians are responsive is one that looks forward. The approach to which British Columbians warm is one that I use, and it is one that our leader Jean Charest uses. It is an approach that simply takes the position that we should abandon these out-of-date instruments of the past, and instead look for new ways, new instruments, new visions of Canada. Let us move on in a way that will create true unity. Otherwise, I can advise the members of this chamber that the question that my colleague Lowell Murray put earlier, the question of what do the federalists in Quebec want, will have to be broadened because the issue will then become, in the next referendum, what do the federalists in Canada want in order to keep the country together?

I can tell honourable senators that the answer in British Columbia quite probably will be that we want equality among Canadians. It is an essential part of our culture, our ethic, our history, and it is something which I do not believe British Columbians will willingly give up.

On motion of Senator Graham, debate adjourned.

NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Leave having been given to revert to Presentation of Reports from Standing or Special Committees:

Hon. Lowell Murray, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, presented the following report:

Thursday, December 14, 1995

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance has the honour to present its

TWENTIETH REPORT

Your Committee, to which was referred Bill C-108, An Act to amend the National Housing Act, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Thursday, December 14, 1995, examined the said Bill and now reports the same without amendment.

Respectfully submitted,

LOWELL MURRAY, P.C.
Chairman

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon H.A. Olson: With leave, now.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

[Translation]

QUEBEC

MOTION TO RECOGNIZE AS DISTINCT SOCIETY ADOPTED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Fairbairn, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Graham,—That

Whereas the people of Quebec have expressed the desire for recognition of Quebec's distinct society;

(1) the Senate recognize that Quebec is a distinct society within Canada;

(2) the Senate recognize that Quebec's distinct society includes its French-speaking majority, unique culture and civil law tradition;

(3) the Senate undertake to be guided by this reality; and

(4) the Senate encourage all components of the legislative and executive branches of government to take note of this recognition and be guided in their conduct accordingly.

Hon. Lise Bacon: Honourable senators, from time immemorial, nations have had to face the challenge of designing a system under which their citizens are able to live their lives and develop their potential while respecting certain fundamental values. Those values include peace, freedom, tolerance and justice.

Our federal system respects those values, as all Canadians will testify, whether they live in Newfoundland, the Yukon, British Columbia or Quebec. Our federal system does not harm the interests of a single region in this country. On the contrary, it has enabled them to develop their potential. Every part enjoys the advantages of the whole, not only because of the possibilities within the system but also because of the system's outside connections.

On the international scene, all provinces enjoy an enviable position thanks to Canada's privileged position in the world. The federal government does not watch the evolution of this country as a spectator. It supports and encourages that evolution. Far from being frustrated, the development of the various regions within the Canadian federation is stimulated.

At a time when the current trend is toward the formation of large units and no individual country can claim to have exclusive control of its affairs, it is surprising that some people should see our federal system as constricting.

Our system is certainly not constricting, nor is it doomed to "eternal stagnation," since federalism is, by definition, flexible and adaptable.

As our leader said last week, and I quote:

Historically, the differences between the provinces have caused our federal system to seek different means, options and arrangements.

Our federal system is ideally suited to people of different languages and cultures who wish to be free to discuss and settle their differences in a spirit of compromise and mutual respect. We have done so in the past and we will continue to do so.

On November 27, the Prime Minister announced three initiatives in response to commitments made during the referendum campaign in Quebec. I would like to comment on the first commitment, which was to recognize Quebec as a distinct society within the Canadian federation.

The people of Quebec have expressed the desire to be recognized as a distinct society. The motion on distinct society asks us to recognize that Quebec is a distinct society within Canada; that this distinct society includes a French-speaking majority, a unique culture and a civil law tradition; and to undertake to be guided by this reality; and to encourage all components of the legislative and executive branches of government to take note of this recognition and be guided in their conduct accordingly.

This motion goes to the very heart of Quebec's distinctiveness. It stipulates that Quebec's distinct society includes a French-speaking majority, a unique culture and a civil law tradition. This definition of Quebec's distinctiveness is not restrictive and is true to reality.

Canada has a tradition of respect for diversity and the Canadian reality includes the Quebec reality. Although there is no talk of constitutional changes at this stage, it is important to emphasize that this measure represents a solemn commitment that would set a standard in the drafting of laws and regulations.

I would like to remind you that the Quebec government under René Lévesque, used this approach to recognize the rights of aboriginal people, and that no one has ever questioned his action.

Some are opposed to this motion because they play down its importance. Mr. Bouchard himself was very clear on this. He said that he would not support any constitutional changes. Others, however, are opposed to this initiative because they see it as broader than it really is.

In an article published in the December 2 edition of La Presse, Albert Malouf, a former judge with the Quebec Court of Appeal, said this:

In my opinion, the reason why the other provinces reject distinct society is that they do not understand its meaning and fear that it may give Quebec additional powers.... People of goodwill negotiating in good faith should be able to overcome this problem.

I will conclude my remarks, because I know that several of my colleagues want to speak, by saying that one thing is for certain: Quebec's distinctiveness is an obvious, inescapable reality. The motion before us would simply recognize this fact.

Hon. Gérald-A. Beaudoin: Honourable senators, we have before us a motion on the distinct society.

The text of the motion is factual: it identifies a fact. This is a minimum. The concept has raised many heated discussions. This time around, we are not asked to entrench this concept in the Constitution. This is a formal statement made by both federal houses.

[Senator Bacon]

Naturally, many will deplore right off the bat the fact that the motion is not constitutional in nature. Many would have preferred the wording used in the Meech Lake Accord or in the Charlottetown accord, the former going somewhat further than the latter. I have no intention of reopening a debate that has filled a great many pages, if not entire bookshelves.

The principle of this statement is not bad. Quebec must see Canada as it is; Canada outside Quebec must see Quebec as it is. This is the basis on which the future of Canada must be built.

The October 30 referendum is forcing us today, more than ever, to see things as they are.

[English]

The concept of distinct society is not new. In 1867, in the British North America Act, the administration of property and civil rights was awarded to the provinces. In the same act, section 94 dealt with the possible uniformization of the common law system, but civil law was left out because Quebec had a different system of private law.

Since August 1, 1866, Quebec has had a civil code. It was Sir George Étienne Cartier who, in the Parliament of the province of Canada, had proposed some years earlier the codification of the Quebec French civil laws under the name of "Code civil du Bas-Canada."

The concept of distinct society goes as far back as the Quebec Act of 1774. Can you imagine? The Parliament at Westminster adopted a statute restoring the French laws in Quebec, then a colony of the British Empire.

Lord North was a man of vision. My French ancestors in Quebec sided with the British Crown at the moment the American insurgents sent delegates to Montreal to convince les canadiennes to be on their side.

The word "distinct" does not mean superior or inferior. It means different; not more, not less. It does not give additional legislative powers or competencies.

[Translation]

It has the merit, however, of identifying, of setting the people of Quebec within the Canadian federation. It has symbolic value, of course, but it also has value in itself. It indicates that, in Canada, there is more than one community, starting with the aboriginal people who have been living on this land for millenniums and whose constitutional rights were recognized through section 35 of the Constitution Act, 1982.

Is it better to mention the distinct society or not? I think we should, because it reflects a reality. Given that a Constitution is tailor-made, it is better to see the stuff it is made of.

The concept of multiculturalism was entrenched in 1982, in section 27 of the Charter of Rights. Why not the distinct society then? For the time being, we have before us a formal statement binding on Parliament.

The courts, and the Supreme Court of Canada in particular, have been juggling with the concept, for example in the Ford decision, where the Supreme Court addressed the issue of the French face of Quebec and the marked prevalence of the French language. In its 1916 reference on insurance, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council interpreted the expression "trade and commerce" used in section 91 of the Constitution as meaning only extra-provincial trade, to protect Quebec's civil law, they said.

Just one word on the different meanings of "distinct society" in the Meech Lake Accord and in the Charlottetown accord.

[English]

In the Meech Lake accord "distinct society" is not defined as such; it is, however, the case in the Charlottetown accord. When you define, you always restrict. In the Meech Lake Accord there is an equilibrium between "distinct society" and "linguistic duality" while in the Charlottetown accord "distinct society" is a concept, a declaration, amongst others in the Canada clause.

[Translation]

I want to say a word about the difference between collective and individual rights. The Supreme Court of Canada stated on a few occasions that, as a rule, the 1982 Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms concerns individual rights. So far, it has only recognized as collective rights the denominational rights protected by section 93 of the 1867 Constitution Act, and the rights of aboriginals entrenched in section 35 of the Constitution Act, 1982.

However, it ruled that certain individual rights, including linguistic rights and freedom of association, involve collective aspects.

I support the recognition of Quebec as a distinct society. I hope that this recognition will be entrenched in the Constitution at the earliest opportunity.

[English]

I wish to add a few words on Bill C-110, which is related to the other. That bill will add one more element to a formula of amendment which is already heavy. The Parliament of Canada, which has a veto in most cases, is ready to not use its prerogative, if one of the five regions of Canada is against a proposal of amendment. However, who will speak for Canada?

[Translation]

The veto formula would not apply to sections 38(3), 41, 43, 44 and 45, but it would, of course, apply to sections 38 and 42.

I always felt we should do something to facilitate the entrenchment of a veto for Quebec. That province has wanted a veto since 1927. In my opinion, if the Constitution provides that Quebec is distinct and has a veto, and if an adjustment is made in the distribution of powers, Quebecers will choose to remain in Canada. Otherwise, there is a strong possibility that they will decide to leave Canada when another referendum is held in that province.

The next constitutional rendez-vous is scheduled for April 17, 1997. It is mandatory. We must immediately work to ensure that, in 1997, we can offer a veto to Quebec in those sectors where its survival is at stake, or at least, in the areas which reflect its distinct nature. We are very close to the April 17, 1997 deadline, when we will have to review the 1982 amending formula. The decisions that will be made in the months to come will impact on those of April 1997.

We must take a more in-depth look at this issue before going any further. A Senate committee could do that.

I am still not convinced that the measure is unconstitutional. However, I think it borders on the unconstitutional. It puts together two formulas, sometimes by relying on the Constitution, sometimes on an act. This is another reason why we should review this issue in committee and consult a few experts.

I hear the argument that no constitutional amendment can be proposed because Mr. Lucien Bouchard will never accept anything. I say that if Canada, apart from Quebec and the Canadian Parliament, agree on significant constitutional amendment proposals, that is on the distinct society, on a veto and on an adjustment in the distribution of powers, Mr. Bouchard will react. And if he does not, Quebecers will.

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: Do I understand that it has been agreed not to see the clock?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Jeremiah S. Grafstein: Come, let us now praise Canada, for Canada is a distinct society. The rest is commentary. Canadians, themselves, can count the ways.

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, I rise to speak in favour of the resolution before the Senate proposing that the Senate recognize Quebec as a distinct society. In my perspective, it would have been much more preferable had this reality become part of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms in 1982, much the same way as section 27 of the Charter instructs the courts through the Constitution itself that they must interpret all of the rights of Canadians in a manner consistent with our multicultural heritage. The model I prefer would see, right in the Constitution itself, recognition of Quebec as a distinct society, with the same kind of interpretive instruction flowing with it.

In my view, it would have been preferable if all governments in Canada had supported the Meech Lake Accord which proposed the explicit recognition of Quebec as a distinct society, as alluded to by Senator Beaudoin and others.

Further, we in New Brunswick supported the 1992 referendum on the Charlottetown accord at the ballot box, which accord included the recognition of Quebec as a distinct society.

Honourable senators, I stand as a New Brunswicker who is proud to be supporting this resolution, for it speaks to a reality which I am convinced will some day find expression in the Constitution of Canada, becoming much more than a resolution or a guide for parliamentarians in this chamber.

However, what are we to say to those who argue that such a recognition gives to Quebec rights that other Canadians do not have? First, let us reflect on section 27 of the Charter. Section 27 does not give special rights to ethnocultural communities in Canada. It does guarantee that all Canadians will enjoy the rights contained in the Charter, and that the courts and tribunals must interpret those rights in a manner consistent with the multi-cultural heritage of Canada. Therefore, the distinct society resolution, although one which only gives guidance to Parliament, will be utilized in very creative and imaginative ways so that the initiatives of Parliament are undertaken in direct response to the needs of the people of all parts of Quebec and all parts of Canada.

In particular, this resolution gives us the opportunity to recognize that all rights are not self-executory, that there are many rights which are programmatic by nature. For example, in Canada, the right to education is recognized as a human right. That view is reinforced by the fact that we are a signatory to an international covenant on human rights which recognizes the right to education. However, the right to education is meaningless if we do not have an education system, a school system. Thus, governments and society have to intervene to give flesh and bones to a right such as the right to education.

• (1800)

It is hoped that Parliament will seize the day and respond directly to the needs of the people, whether they are in Rivière-du-Loup, Chicoutimi, or in any other part of Canada, and that it will do so in a manner that is guided by this resolution. Parliament has to be creative, it has to seize the day — it must take control of the national agenda on national unity. No longer will it be acceptable for the federal government, or Parliament, to be paralysed by the type of timidity and hesitation shown during the October 1995 referendum in the province of Quebec.

Leadership in the securing of economic, social and political stability within the Canadian federation must come from the Government of Canada. It must come from all members of the Government of Canada. In my view we have to be supportive of the government and the Prime Minister when he or she is right and has a program which is supportable.

We know that the leadership must come from the Government of Canada. We know that the Government of Canada has responsibility and speaks for the people of Quebec, as it speaks for the people of New Brunswick and the people of whatever part of Canada in which they find themselves. It is not simply the government of New Brunswick that speaks for New Brunswickers; the Government of Canada speaks for New Brunswickers as well.

The people of Quebec have their spokespersons in Parliament. We know, from his own words, that the leadership that is necessary as we enter the twenty-first century will not come from Lucien Bouchard. He has told us bluntly that he will not accept “any constitutional agreement short of recognizing Quebec as a sovereign equal to Canada.” He also said, “I am a sovereigntist” when asked if it would ever be possible for him to sign a deal in which Quebec would remain in Confederation.

We have to recognize that kind of reality. Parliament must act, as must the federal government. There must be a plan and a vision. Leadership cannot be provided on an ad hoc basis. We need to set out creative principles, rich principles. I believe the recognition of Quebec as a distinct society is such a principle.

We need also to set out some of the non-negotiable parameters. We must explode, we must expose, we must expunge the error, the myth, that a province of Canada has the right to determine unilaterally whether to secede from Canada. This view should no longer be given any currency in this country. The time has come to reject categorically the myth perpetuated by the separatists that there exists for any province the legal right to secede.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, I am extremely pleased to take part in this debate, and extremely pleased with what I have been hearing up until now. I have heard comments, arguments, analyses of the October 30 referendum. These were both interesting and pertinent. What has been said up until now has been highly interesting, highly pertinent, highly constructive, and I congratulate my colleagues on this.

It is too easy to analyze the situation as some newspaper editorials have done, concluding that there is an obvious malaise in Quebec, the result of a campaign by francophone nationalists with a very ambiguous referendum question. Others will say — another facile conclusion — that the 1995 No campaign did not have anything in it to attract Quebecers.

It is also very easy to say that renewed Canadian federalism was not properly explained to Quebecers. It is also too facile an explanation to say that the sovereigntist politicians were more successful in selling their ideas, better organized, and that the No campaign did not work.

I have heard all of these things, as you have, and there is probably an element of truth in all of them. But it must be understood — and this is essential — that Quebec is a distinct province, distinct from the other nine. Yes, there is a serious malaise. All one has to do is read the daily newspapers in Quebec, or switch on the radio or TV. It is a source of concern to Canadians. It is a source of concern for a francophone living outside Quebec. I am part of this great country of Canada. I am also part of a francophone minority which is mainly centred in Quebec but which also exists, and will continue to exist, outside Quebec. This is my Canada and I am free to live in it in the official language of my choice, no matter where I am within its borders.

[Senator Kinsella]

We must listen carefully to the message of Quebecers. Some may be surprised by what they describe as "vibrant nationalism," but I am not. When I was just a little fellow growing up in Ottawa, I remember the discussions in my grandfather's house about French Canadian nationalism. At that time, though, they called it "French Canadian patriotism." Nationalism was not in fashion. Until the Bloc populaire came along, patriotism was the buzz word. "Nationalist" came along later when the Bloc populaire had made the term wider known.

Remember the plebiscite in 1942. There were some very heated discussions at the time. In the evening, after Un Homme et son péché, I do not know whether people who grew up in this area remember, but at seven o'clock, we listened to Un Homme et son péché, and after the program we would sit around and talk. There was no television, and we would turn off the radio at the end of the program.

I grew up in a francophone area. I was marginalized in a community consisting of a majority of anglophone Protestants in Ottawa. In the province, this community used religion and language as a reason to exclude Catholics and francophones from publicly funded education.

I remember a statistic that became an incentive for me to enter politics in 1966. The study showed that only 14 per cent of Franco-Ontarians finished Grade 10, and that shocked me. Eighty-six per cent of francophones in Ontario did not finish Grade 10, but it was not their fault. There were no schools. As for speaking French in Ottawa, west of the Rideau Canal we were told to "Speak white." I remember because I was born and raised here.

Quebec was distinct because I could go to Montreal where, more often than not, I managed to be served in French. I had a few experiences which indicated that even in Montreal, at Morgan's for instance, it was not always easy to make yourself understood. But I remember distinctly that I felt uncomfortable about going west of the canal in my own city. I thought: I live in a village; Lowertown is a village.

I saw poverty and illiteracy; it was almost a way of life. That has changed dramatically. In my lifetime there have been remarkable changes in our institutions, our schools, our health services and general attitudes. Religion is no longer referred to as a divisive factor. People hardly even mention language as a bone of contention in Ottawa. I think we have learned to live together.

Quebec is making it fairly plain that things are not right there, and we will have to listen as it speaks. The message is not really so complex.

The Prime Minister said three things in the referendum: it would seem Quebec wants to be a distinct society — it already is. I do not need to give you any examples. Read the words spoken here, and you will have the whole background. If that is not enough, read the excellent article in The Ottawa Citizen yesterday, December 12, by Peter G. White entitled "Accommodating Quebec, no threat to anglophones." You will see my argument is supported by other reasonable people, anglophones, if you like, but people who understand this fact, as did Senator Murray, today, and as does Senator Kinsella, and as do a number of Liberal senators who have spoken.

I belong to the school that believes in taking action. I am well aware that Mr. Bouchard is forbidding and even cool to any constitutional amending formula. There is no need to get excited, we can do it easily; there is the 7/50 formula. We can certainly put it to the people of Quebec. The amendments, which must be implemented by 1997, are feasible.

It is a good start having a resolution passed by both houses of Canada's Parliament. It is also a good idea to table it with Bill C-110. I support this provision.

I close my remarks by saying that we have a few years, barely two, to understand one another. Let us pay careful attention and make sure this country continues to be the experience of the century, a fantastic one, in terms of Canadian federalism — where two peoples learn to live together, to share and to respect one another.

• (1810)

[English]

Hon. Landon Pearson: Honourable senators, as I rise today to speak briefly on the resolution to recognize Quebec as a distinct society, I do so with the conviction that I have always recognized and valued Quebec as distinct.

Although I grew up in southwestern Ontario, I spent part of my childhood at school in the Eastern Townships where I learned to appreciate young both our differences and our similarities. Later, I spent a summer as a student at Trois-Pistoles, improving my French and exploring the lower St. Lawrence.

More important, most of my adult life was spent in the Canadian foreign service where, once abroad, francophones and anglophones alike find out how much more we are like one another than we resemble any other nationality. What we also discover serving together outside Canada is that it is the very distinctiveness of Quebec society that seems to have created those special characteristics we share as a nation, those values of tolerance, generosity and openness that continue, in spite of our current cranky mood, to attract immigrants from all over the world.

It is our experience in evolving side by side by side that has led us to develop the variety of national and provincial institutions that have been needed to preserve the distinctiveness of Quebec and the rich variety of the rest of the country. It is my firm conviction that all of us, including Quebec, have benefitted from the ways in which these institutions have shaped, and continue to shape, our political and cultural life.

If we fail to honour the reality that our whole is greater than the sum of our distinctive parts, then we will all be diminished.

[Translation]

Yesterday my husband and I got a card from a former colleague, a Quebecer now posted in Europe. He writes, and I quote:

From afar, Canada, so rich and varied, is a sorry sight. One might say it is looking for a fortune or a treasure... that it already has in its possession.

[English]

Honourable senators, we are at a crucial moment in our history as a nation. Last week, a letter in The Globe and Mail quoted my late and much lamented father-in-law when he opened the federal-provincial conference on the Constitution in 1968. He said:

There are times in the life of a country when the assurance of good intentions, the discharge of normal duty and acceptance of routine responsibility are not enough. What such times demand is the exercise of courage and decision that go far beyond the needs of the moment. I believe that this is such a time for Canada. Here the road forks. If we have the resolution and the wisdom to choose now the right course and to follow it steadfastly, I can see few limits to what we may achieve together as a people. But if we lack the courage to choose, or if we choose wrongly, we will leave to our children and our children's children a country in fragments, and we ourselves would have become the failures of Confederation.

It is to those children I would now like to turn. I have a suggestion to make to the Senate. For some time I have been asking myself how the Senate can best promote a stronger sense of national unity. The Senate has many strengths. We are a national institution with an important role and honourable traditions. We represent all the provinces and territories. We also represent much of the cultural and ethnic diversity of Canada. My committee experience has shown me that we actually know how to listen.

What I should like to propose is that we engage in an intergenerational dialogue, that we talk with our children and youth, that we consult with them for ideas on how to preserve our country, which will be theirs, in ways that fulfil the aspirations of its various communities without losing the virtue of the whole.

I have had considerable experience organizing consultations with children and young people on important issues, as have a great many others on both sides of this house. This is not a partisan issue.

I should like to return to this chamber in February after the break with a strategy for the implementation of this idea. In the meantime, I would appreciate knowing who among you would be interested in developing a strategy with me.

While recognizing the sad fact that the level of political literacy among the young is abysmal, their idealism remains high. We could draw strength from that and offer them our knowledge and experience. Working together, the elders of the nation and the young of the nation, would do honours to us all.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, today we have heard some rather stirring speeches, and some shorts ones. While I am usually quite long-winded when I talk about Canada, I will try to be brief.

When I hear a senator say, before sitting down, "Canada is a distinct society, thank you," it gets my dander up. I heard this too often in the other place from people who, in my opinion, never understood anything about what Canada is all about.

I truly intended not to take part in the debate. God knows how often I have talked about the distinct society. I was among those who had doubts. I am proud enough; I do not need to be told that I need a crutch. This is why, at first, I was against this motion. When I understood the true motivation of my colleagues in the other place who were opposed to the distinct society, it dawned on me that they did not understand anything. Thus, in reaction, I had to be in favour of something I truly viewed as a crutch.

It is not because I am a French Canadian that I need a crutch to claim this fact. I am as proud as anybody else in Canada.

Canada, the country of my dreams, is morose. Canada, the country said to be number one, is looking for its identity. And yet, what kind of example are we giving other countries? People as different as myself and His Honour the Speaker pro tempore, who incidentally speaks several languages, including mine, can claim anywhere in the world that we are both equally proud to be Canadians. This is the image we want to give to the rest of the world. Neither claims to be superior to the other. It would appear that it is no longer a sin to talk about "le peuple du Québec."

We do not understand each other in Canada about the meaning of the terms "nation," "country," and "people." Yet, in the resolution, I saw for the first time the word "people" which seemed to frighten so many people before. Now it is being used. What is going on? I always said the opposite, the "French-Canadian people," I never said the "Quebec people."

The French-Canadian people is a reality. Look at Senators Gauthier, Bacon, Hébert; look at all our senators sitting here; that is a reality. Some are from Quebec, their heart is from Quebec.

• (1820)

The heart is from Quebec and the rest comes from different regions of Canada. Such is the French-Canadian people. It is not limited to Quebec. Some seem to want to confine it to Quebec. The tragedy is that, all together, we are unable to find a solution to a problem which, in fact, if you compare us to the other countries of the world, is not really a problem at all.

We have been talking about that since I became an MP. I raised the question in one my friend's classes in Alberta — yes, I said it, I said "my friend," Mrs. Carstairs — but not in Manitoba; in Alberta.

A while back, probably 20 years ago, I visited the country with the distinguished chairman of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and of the House on the Constitution, Senator Molgat. I believe it was in 1971. Everything is written there.

I never paid homage to my friend Jean-Luc Pepin. I was waiting for an adequate moment. He really understood the essence of Canada. He was extraordinarily receptive. With John Robarts and the commissioners, he really did understand what Canada is all about. We have forgotten about him.

So many missed opportunities over the last 20, 30, 40 or 50 years. We always go back to the same question when, in fact, it is so easy to understand.

[English]

There are in this country nine provinces — you may also say two territories, but nine provinces where a majority of the people speak English. Good. There is one province where the people speak le français.

[Translation]

That is the distinct society, that is the difference. If the late Jean Marchand were here today, he would explain that, with a much more heartfelt outpouring of emotion than I can, to those who still have not understood what Canada is all about.

I am a federalist, and here I am trying to convince you about things that you are probably convinced about. Imagine what it would be if I were not a federalist. I believe in my country. It is mine!

When I look at Senator Pearson, Senator Losier-Cool, Senator Anderson, Senator Milne and all the new senators who have come to join us, I can assure you of one thing: this country is mine as much as it is yours. I will not let it go easily. But we must understand together what it is all about.

In my province, more and more people refer to the State of Quebec. They are already far ahead of us. They say that it is over; they are already living their independence. That is a dangerous mirage. They are already living their independence, while we are making efforts every day.

To your surprise undoubtedly, when I speak about Canada, I am ready to face any sniggering, any grin; I was about to say, any disgust.

This country is mine. My ancestors built it on other people's land. We must understand and give justice to the first citizens who were here before the first French settlers. I am ready to say that to the Indians, and I did so. I am ready to return to them with humility! These French settlers on other people's land gradually built a country and others came to join them in famous battles that some people would like to continue in 1995. These are historical facts. We must look at them and accept them. Millions of other Canadians came to join us.

I am one of those who would like to say everywhere: "I am proud to be a Canadian." This would please my friend Senator Phillips. This is what we say spontaneously everywhere in the world except in Canada. As soon as we, French Canadians, are outside the Canadian borders, what do we say? We say that we are Canadians. We all call ourselves Canadians; my Canadian passport; I am a Canadian. It is when we return to Canada that we insist on calling ourselves French Canadians.

[English]

That seems to excite so many people in Western Canada, the fact that I did not do the translation when they say French Canadian. French Canadian! Everyone gets dizzy. I have heard it all around Canada on hotlines. Yet that is only a translation for which we are not responsible. I am not responsible, Senator Phillips, for the translation "French Canadian" —

[Translation]

I say Canadien français! Canadien français! If only we could explain how important these differences are, there would be much more understanding.

[English]

Honourable senators, very humbly, I say to you all that the Senate has a role to play at this time in our lives. I said it this morning at a committee meeting. I said it to the Justice Committee. I say it here. We have a role to play. We have something to offer to Canada.

Never mind the insults of some commoners from the House of Commons where I spent 30 very happy years. Never mind them. When I look at all of you individually, I do believe we all have something special to offer to this country. If only we could utilize all our talents. I believe we should strike special committees to travel across Canada, composed of nonpartisan people who do not wish to simply score points against each other.

• (1830)

These people will know how to remain married to each other. We should, as Senator Pearson said earlier, allow younger people to speak to us, dream in front of us, or be sick in front of us if need be. We must have the patience to listen to them.

I went through that with the Honourable Speaker of the Senate, Senator Molgat, and Mr. MacGuigan, who is now a judge of the federal court. It gave Canadians an opportunity to vent their anger in whatever way they wanted. I know, honourable senators, that we can listen to their concerns with patience and we can help them truly understand what this country is all about. The result at the end of the exercise will always be positive.

I have no authority, but surely the leadership of both parties can come up with a better idea or refine my idea as to what the Senate can do. Do we have a more gentle, knowledgeable or respected person both in so-called "English Canada" — I say that because I do not like these expressions — and in "French Canada" than Senator Roux?

[Translation]

In the great and beautiful artistic community, he can speak of authority and wisdom. The same is true of each and every one of us: we all have our own little area, our own affinities in this country. We can all talk to one another in this country. I am certainly not the one who is going to throw a big party this evening and say: "Is it not wonderful, we are distinct." Are we even able to recognize the obvious fact that there are people in this country who speak French. They could have learned Papuan, it might have solved the problem. Some speak better than others, that is true. They can be encouraged to improve their language skills through our cultural institutions, by fighting to preserve Radio Canada, the Canada Council and the National Film Board. The little people must not be made fun of; they are watching.

When I hear public figures use coarse language thinking that it brings them closer to the people, I can assure you that these people despise us. They know that our French is somewhat better than theirs. I say it in my perhaps roundabout, disjointed way. I had not planned to take part in the debate. My speech on Canadian nationalism is ready. I drew my inspiration from Jean-Luc Pepin. I would not like to sow discord among Canadians, however. I would not like to say how angry Senator Grafstein's speech made me. I completely disagreed with him because his speech was so full of contempt for us. I, for one, do not hold anybody in contempt. Quite the contrary.

Honourable senators, I am imploring you. At this tragic time in our history, it is a crime not to find a solution to ensure the survival of our country. Millions, if not billions, of human beings are watching us in disbelief. What is going on in Canada?

Of course I will vote in favour of the motion. I will not go and get a band, or the media, or the troubadours. Really, this amounts to recognizing such an obvious thing. For some it is little, while for others it is already too much. Maybe this is what Canada is all about. If we were all unhappy at the same time, there would be something wrong. If we were all very happy, there would be something wrong. If one were happier than the other, it would certainly not work.

Since it seems that everyone is a little unhappy, this may be the new chance for survival for countries as different as ours. I thank you for your patience. I implore you and I ask you to meditate on the meaning of Hanukkah, Christmas and New Year's Day.

[English]

When we come back in 1996, perhaps we can rededicate ourselves to Canada. There are various religions where people rededicate themselves to Jesus. Well, let us rededicate ourselves to Canada!

Our appointments as senators are almost lifelong. We receive much from the people of Canada. Surely we must do as our gracious Queen asked us to do and put aside our preoccupations and rededicate ourselves to those we serve by finding a solution to our constitutional dilemma.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, I should like to ask Senator Prud'homme a question. As always, I was very impressed with his remarks.

In my brief remarks the other day, I did not have an opportunity to come to the portion in my notes dealing with ancestry. I believe Senator Prud'homme and I share a common view and that is, regardless of your ancestry, today we are Canadian. It does not matter whether my ancestry was English, Welsh or, on my mother's side, Scottish. Today, I am a Canadian.

Senator Prud'homme's ancestry is French, but he always says that he is a Canadian first.

Senator Prud'homme: It was an accident of birth, I am sure!

Senator Phillips: Yes, but you are a Canadian first. Do you deny that, senator?

Senator Prud'homme: Absolutely not!

Senator Phillips: I am fed up with people who say they are French, English or Italian.

Senator Bosa: I knew you were going to mention that.

Senator Berntson: What about Norwegian?

Senator Phillips: Yes, Norwegian, and maybe even Ukrainian. To me, there comes a time when you must say that you are Canadian. You can be proud of your ancestry, but you must also be proud of your present allegiance.

Is it not time for the Canadian government to terminate funding to these groups who want to be Norwegian or Italian first? An Italian can come to Canada and get citizenship very easily, as can people of many other nationalities.

• (1840)

Is it not time to stop saying that we are French, English, Italian or Greek? Why not just say we are Canadians and be proud of it? I am proud to say that I am a Canadian. Is my honourable friend not proud to say the same? Having asked the question, I am sure that I know the answer.

Senator Prud'homme: Senator, earlier I told the chamber about my delightful weekend in Tweed. I did that for a purpose. I love Tweed. It was my third visit there. I was told that I could run for deputy reeve of Tweed. Tweed is in the maple syrup country of Ontario. It is very close to Belleville.

I made my statement about Tweed today for a purpose. Not many French Canadians go to Belleville these days, let alone in the past, to make speeches, and certainly not to Tweed. I spoke in Tweed about pride, about the fact that I had come there to witness their pride, because they were kind enough to witness my pride.

My friend Senator Phillips and I have known each other since 1960. When we met for the first time, people expressed surprise at the fact that I had spoken to him, as if it were impossible for the two of us to speak to one another. Over the years, we have teased each other about our respective views. We have travelled together to China and other places and come to know each other.

Yes, senator, I am proud to be Canadian. You say that you are tired of hearing people say, "I am French." I have never said that senator. I have said, "Je suis très fier d'être Canadien français."

Senator Phillips: I did not accuse you of that.

Senator Prud'homme: Senator Gauthier and other traditionalist French Canadians will know why we do not accept your suggestion that we should all simply be Canadian, that there should be one Canada. This has connotations. "Let's all be Canadian" has always been interpreted by French Canadians as meaning "Let's all be English and Protestant." I am sure that Senator Robichaud could tell us many stories about that. It is natural for us to say, "Je suis Canadien français," not "I am French Canadian." There should be no translation for that, not in Winnipeg and not anywhere else.

I would rather not speak to the issue of multiculturalism now, because that will require a very long speech.

I remember how we became multicultural. We were bilingual and bicultural, and one morning we got up and found ourselves multilingual and multicultural. That was in the great days of the great leader Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Mr. Nunziata is now campaigning to abolish multiculturalism. Before I answer you, senator, I will listen to the views of Mr. Nunziata in the other chamber, who is an advocate of abolishing multiculturalism.

I am as proud as Senator Phillips is to be Canadian. If the honourable senator and I travelled across this country, we could show people what Canada is all about. People need only listen to both of us and shake our hands to know immediately the kind of country in which we live.

Senator Phillips: Senator Prud'Homme made reference to our association. He may have left on the record the impression that we were not friends after our first meeting. I wish to correct that. We became immediate friends.

My family came to Canada in 1830. My father's side spoke English; my mother's side was Scottish, and they spoke Gaelic. As I grew up, the elders spoke "the tongue." That later disappeared. I guess my generation was too stupid to learn "the tongue."

My point is that although I know the honourable senator takes pride in being French Canadian, and I do not disrespect him for that, I believe it is time that we all began to say we are Canadian. I believe that friends, such as Honourable Senator Bosa, Honourable Senator Haidasz and others, have spent too much time on their ancestry and not enough time on being Canadian.

Would you agree with me, honourable friend?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: Honourable senators, I will only take a few minutes to echo the comments made by some of my honourable colleagues and to state my support for this motion recognizing Quebec's distinct society.

I will not go over again the good reasons my colleagues set out during debate on this motion. I wholeheartedly agree with the reasons linked to the history of the Province of Quebec and the history of Canada since 1867, to the culture of Quebec, to the Quebec institutions which have supported development not only in Quebec but throughout Canada, and to the uniqueness of Quebec.

Since I was born in Quebec, I feel that I would not be fulfilling my duties if I were not to rise and support this motion for all the reasons mentioned by my colleagues.

I think this motion should have been moved some other time, rather than at the end of a session. Several Canadians believe that it would have been better for this motion to be debated at length in the House of Commons and in the Senate. Also, I think this motion should not have been the result of some kind of panic and improvisation, as so many Canadians from Quebec like to remind us.

I hope there will be unanimous consent in the Senate to adopt this motion. It is a small step, I agree, but it is a step in the right direction. I would have liked this motion to recognize the people of Quebec and not just Quebec's distinct society.

Honourable senators will remember that in December of 1992 the Senate considered the opportunity to entrench the recognition of the Acadian society in New Brunswick. Following this debate, Parliament entrenched not only the recognition of the Acadian people but also some of the collective rights of the Acadian community.

I was very pleased and very grateful, but also disappointed, because the then provincial government did not see fit to include all of the collective rights guaranteed by the provincial legislation which had triggered off the debate, resulting in a government motion and finally leading to the entrenchment of the recognition and the rights of the Acadian community.

Senator Robichaud was here at the time. He knows this provincial legislation very well, as do all my other colleagues from the maritimes, particularly those from New Brunswick. This provincial legislation, called Bill 88, recognized not only the existence of the Acadian society in New Brunswick but also several collective rights.

In any case, the House of Commons and the Senate completed their work on this matter in 1992. In February 1993, a reception was held at Rideau Hall to celebrate and applaud this recognition of the rights of Acadians in New Brunswick.

In closing, I hope that, after the adoption by both houses of Parliament of this motion recognizing Quebec as a distinct society, the day will come soon when the people of Quebec are recognized as one of Canada's founding peoples. Perhaps, at the same time, the Acadian people in Canada will also be recognized, in addition to the recognition of the existence of certain collective rights for Acadians in New Brunswick.

Motion agreed to.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Government Notices of Motion:

[Senator Simard]

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, it may be in order for me, with the agreement of the leadership of the other side, to explain the plan for the rest of the day.

First, I want to thank honourable senators for their patience. We did not see the clock at six o'clock.

We have one more item which we would like to deal with, if there is agreement, and that is Bill S-14 standing in the name of Senator Haidasz. Senator Haidasz tells me that he will only be about ten minutes. I would ask all honourable senators to bear with us.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: May I just ask the Honourable Deputy Leader of the Government for clarification? When he says tomorrow, I presume that we will adjourn to ten o'clock in the morning?

Senator Graham: To clarify the situation, the rules call for us to sit Monday to Friday. When we adjourn on Thursdays, unless there is a special adjournment motion, we normally adjourn until nine o'clock Friday morning.

In order to clarify the situation further, I move, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(h):

That when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, December 15, 1995, at ten o'clock in the morning.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

TOBACCO PRODUCT RESTRICTIONS BILL

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Stanley Haidasz moved the second reading of Bill S-14, to restrict the manufacture, sale, importation and advertising of tobacco products.

He said: Honourable senators, I should like to make a few remarks to explain the highlights of this bill, after which I would invite honourable senators to participate in the debate or refer the bill to committee.

It is with a great deal of gratification that I accept this opportunity to make a few remarks on Bill S-14, to restrict the manufacture, sale, importation and advertising of tobacco products. In short, this bill is called the Tobacco Product Restrictions Bill.

As a physician, as a member of the House of Commons and now as a member of the Senate, I have tried to impress upon those who will listen that tobacco is a dangerous substance and that we should do everything we can to control its use by controlling its manufacture and sale.

Honourable senators, as far as the danger of tobacco is concerned, its main constituent is nicotine, which is a highly addictive substance regarded as a narcotic. It is just as addictive as heroin itself. This alone should move us to consider the restriction of the manufacture and sale of tobacco.

Clinicians have identified 26 tobacco-related diseases, 22 of which occur in adults and four of which occur in children. Tobacco also contains approximately 4,000 noxious substances which we call "tars," 50 of which are carcinogenic. In addition, tobacco, because of nicotine, is extremely addictive.

Tobacco use is a great problem, especially in our young generation. In spite of all the advertising that the Department of Health has produced on TV and other media, the use of tobacco by the young generation is increasing. Unfortunately, it is increasing greatest among young girls. Statistics have also shown that in the past few years cancer of the lungs in women who smoke has now surpassed breast cancer, which is an epidemic in itself.

Furthermore, in addition to all these physical damages, economic health experts have proven to us that the total cost to the Canadian economy of the use of tobacco is about $20 billion annually. It is estimated that that figure will rise to $25 billion in 1995. This year, there are 48,000 premature deaths because of its use, deaths which are completely preventable. Hundreds of thousands of smokers develop chronic tobacco-related diseases.

For these reasons, I appeal to all honourable senators to become interested in this problem because it is so damaging to people as well as to the economy of our country.

I will not detain honourable senators any further. Rather, I urge honourable senators to participate in the debate of this bill if they can. If that is not possible, then I ask honourable senators to study it in committee so that we may bring to the Canadian people legislation which I believe will greatly reduce the damages that tobacco products produce.

On motion of Senator Berntson, for Senator Kelly, debate adjourned.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, as indicated earlier, there is agreement to stand all remaining orders.

The Senate adjourned until Friday, December 15, 1995 at 10 a.m.

THE SENATE

Friday, December 15, 1995

The Senate met at 10:00 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

SENATOR'S STATEMENT

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

EXPORT STATISTICS

Hon. Jack Austin: Honourable senators, I have some good news to report on this our last sitting day this year. I should like to present to honourable senators some trade statistics which have just been made available.

In the first nine months of the year, Canada's merchandise exports grew by a remarkable 20 per cent, and the trade surplus by a dramatic 63 per cent compared to the same period last year. This rapid growth in our exports is diversified. It is primarily occurring in value-added and major export sectors such as industrial goods, machinery and equipment, and automotive products, as well as in more traditional sectors such as forestry products.

It is also taking place in all major world markets. Our exports to the United States were up 17 per cent in the first nine months of 1995 over the same period in 1994; to Latin America, 29 per cent; to Japan, 32 per cent; to the European Union, 42 per cent; to China, 44 per cent; and to all other Asia-Pacific nations, 47 per cent.

The robust expansion of Canadian exports of goods and services has greatly increased the share of our national income derived from trade. As a portion of our GDP, our exports amounted to 26 per cent in 1992. In 1994, this figure reached 33.2 per cent; and by September, 1995, the annualized rate for these exports had grown to 36.6 per cent of our GDP.

For individual Canadians, this means exports have become the most significant factor in the growth of our GDP and one of the most important contributors to job creation. Indeed, based on economists' estimates, every $1 billion in exports sustains about 12,000 jobs.

Honourable senators, it is no mistake that the Prime Minister and the premiers have organized a Team Canada effort to promote our trade abroad. The Prime Minister, along with most of the premiers, will visit India, Pakistan, Malaysia, and Indonesia in January of 1996. That visit will further our trade effort. These statistics demonstrate that that effort is certainly worthwhile.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

SMALL BUSINESS LOANS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Hon. John B. Stewart, Acting Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, presented the following report:

Friday, December 15, 1995

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce has the honour to present its

TWENTY-SEVENTH REPORT

Your Committee, to which was referred the Bill C-99, An Act to amend the Small Business Loans Act, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Thursday, December 14, 1995, examined the said Bill and now reports the same without amendment.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN STEWART
Acting Chairman

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(b), I move that the bill be read the third time now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Donald H. Oliver: Just before you put the motion, Your Honour, I should like to make a few remarks. I attended the Banking, Trade and Commerce committee meeting this morning. This bill received first reading in the House of Commons in June of 1995, and it came to us at the very last moment.

• (1010)

One of the arrangements we thought we had was that the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce would have an opportunity to review and consider the regulations pursuant to that bill before they were published in the Canada Gazette, but when we arrived at the committee meeting this morning, we had received a letter dated today, December 15, from the minister, the Honourable John Manley, stating:

To assist the committee in its consideration of the Bill I have asked departmental officials to come before you prepared to consult with the committee on the draft regulations. This is consistent with my commitment to provide the committee with the opportunity to be consulted prior to the Gazetting of the regulations flowing from this bill.

Honourable senators, this is like being jammed. Perhaps a better way to deal with situations such as this is to have bills of this nature introduced in the Senate, where we have more time and more patience to review them, and where we would not be jammed by not being afforded enough opportunity to consider important regulations. With respect to this particular bill, the regulations have more power than the bill itself.

I just wanted to put those remarks on the record, honourable senators.

Senator Stewart: Honourable senators, I would find it very difficult not to agree with what Senator Oliver has said. This is indeed a bill which could have started in the Senate, and been dealt with thoroughly and expeditiously by this house. It was introduced in the House of Commons before the House of Commons took its long summer recess. Now it is sent over to us before the House of Commons departs for its Christmas break.

A government which was concerned with getting the legislative business of the country dispatched in an orderly way would have introduced this bill, and many other bills, in the Senate. I agree entirely with what Senator Oliver has said with regard to starting bills such as this in the Senate.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, do any other honourable senators wish to speak before we proceed to third reading?

If not, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(b), it was moved by the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Stewart, that this bill be read the third time now.

Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

[Translation]

QUESTION PERIOD

QUEBEC

THE DISTINCT SOCIETY RESOLUTION—COMMENTS BY THE CHAIR
OF THE STANDING COMMITTEE ON CANADIAN HERITAGE—
GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, the House of Commons and the Senate have passed the resolution on a distinct society for Quebec. I would like the Leader of the Government to take note of the following statement. The House Standing Committee on Canadian Heritage is becoming the object of increasing controversy. In my opinion, its Chair ought to take a Canadian history course.

[English]

To put it mildly, I am extremely upset at the views expressed by the chairman and a couple of members of the majority concerning their understanding of what Canada is all about, what culture is all about, and what all the cultural activities taking place in Quebec are all about.

If we really want to have a harmonious country, we must understand the nuances and the differences that exist and occur, especially within different cultures. If we want to have a successful future in this country, we must have vision. Vision means being able to predict difficulties ahead of time.

I am particularly concerned about the way in which some members of that committee interpret their mandate — and I am not talking about the new member, Mr. Peric, who seems to understand what Canada is all about, more than do the others, although he has just been nominated to be on that committee; and Mr. Serré. They are two Liberals who understand that, even if at times we do not like what the National Film Board may produce, or what the CBC is putting on the air, if we are to know each other, first we must know who we are.

We may disagree with the National Film Board, but I think they are doing a good job, as is the CBC French broadcasting division. They are there to show Canada as it is today.

Before we adjourn for the Christmas break, may I ask the minister to again draw to the attention of her caucus, and to the attention of that committee in particular, the sensitive nature of the mandate of that committee, and the fact that members of that committee should at least know what is happening? The chairman was interviewed by someone at La Presse. He admitted, after prompting, that he had never seen a Quebec film, nor had he ever heard a Quebec song. He never saw, he never heard and he never read.

I am very sceptical as to what they will accomplish at the end of their work in that committee. I am upset today, to put it mildly. I am following the work of that committee. Too many inflammatory statements are being made. They are only helping the Bloc Québécois in their efforts to show that Ottawa does not understand anything.

I am putting this forward in the form of a comment, and also in the form of a question. Will the Leader of the Government in the Senate kindly draw to the attention of her colleagues that some of us — and I see some people on both sides nodding, which means that other senators are following the activities of that committee — are extremely concerned about the behaviour of the majority of the members of that committee?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I will certainly take the comments of Senator Prud'homme to the chairman of the committee and to the minister involved.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, since our deliberations verge on the confidential, I would like to follow up on the question asked by Senator Prud'homme. Every time the Chair of the Heritage Committee demonstrates a flagrant lack of knowledge about Quebec, he provides Mrs. Tremblay of the Bloc Québécois with ammunition. His comments get on the 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. news broadcasts, and they hit the front pages of the newspapers in Quebec the next morning. Perhaps this gentleman does not read the newspaper, does not listen to the Quebec news in French, but we federalists in Quebec end up having to defend people like him. I must admit that I have no great respect for the gentleman. Will you be passing this confidential comment on to the minister responsible?

[English]

Senator Fairbairn: Honourable senators, I do not believe that the statements made in this house are as confidential as the honourable senator thinks, but I will certainly send the full exchange in our Senate Hansard to the chairman, and also to the minister.

ABORIGINAL PEOPLES

SCHOLARSHIP FOR ABORIGINAL VETERANS—REQUEST FOR RESPONSE TO REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk: Honourable senators, I was pleased to read in the newspaper that a scholarship is being set up for aboriginal veterans, as our Senate committee had recommended. However, I was somewhat disappointed that the information came to me, as chair of that committee, through the media and not through a Senate information system. Neither did it come to me from the government. To this date, there has been no response to the Senate report.

While I think the scholarship was a first good move, there were many other recommendations that, in my opinion, are valid, and of value particularly at this time to aboriginal peoples and to veterans.

[Senator Prud'homme]

When will the government respond to the report on aboriginal veterans passed unanimously by the Senate?

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I too am disappointed on Senator Andreychuk's behalf. I will definitely pursue this matter. I cannot give her a date with regard to the latter part of her question, but I will actively pursue that, too. This is not a satisfactory way of progressing on this issue.

[Translation]

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

RIDEAU HALL

December 15, 1995

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that The Honourable John Charles Major, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 15th day of December 1995, at 12:00 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

Yours sincerely,

Judith A. LaRocque
Secretary to the Governor General

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate
Ottawa

ORDERS OF THE DAY

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Fairbairn, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Graham, for the second reading of Bill C-110, an act respecting constitutional amendments.

Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin: Honourable senators, several points have already been raised by my colleagues. I would now like to draw the attention of the Senate to some of the circumstances around the rather hasty consideration of this bill in the House of Commons.

For instance, the Saskatchewan Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs mentioned in a letter — unfortunately I was not able to obtain a copy, since the clerk of the committee in the other place was not willing to send me a copy — that he did not receive notice of this bill in time to prepare a well-considered presentation. Consequently, he was unable to appear before the committee.

I think it is important to refer this bill to a committee of the Senate and give representatives of the various provinces who have shown an interest an opportunity to be heard. First of all, I think it is essential, when one is about to amend the procedure for adopting constitutional amendments, at least to hear what the representatives of the provinces have to say.

Second, I would like to draw the attention of this House to the wording of Bill C-110, comparing it with what the federalist forces proposed to Quebecers before the referendum. The No side's manifest said that the government of Quebec should have full autonomy in the areas under its jurisdiction and that there should be no change in the relationship between the Government of Quebec and the Government of Canada without the participation and agreement of Quebec. That is the kind of federalism Quebec federalists believe in. When I read the wording of Bill C-110, I have the impression the government is delivering a lot more than the customer ordered. So much more that it has managed to upset an attempt to improve the cordial relations that should exist between the federal government and the provinces. Several authors and experts on Canadian constitutional relations maintain that constitutional discussions in Canada are practically meaningless because of this insistence on talking about texts. Perhaps we should change our attitudes instead of fighting about every comma and semi-colon and terms we have trouble defining.

It would be appropriate for the Parliament of Canada, through the good offices of the Senate, to initiate a dialogue with the Canadian provinces and aboriginal peoples. The latter rushed to prepare a presentation which they gave before the committee of the House of Commons. They admitted they did not have enough time to prepare their brief. An Inuit group even submitted an amendment. They tried. They admitted they did not have enough time to be able to explain their position. It is our duty to give these people a chance to appear before a committee of the Senate and give them enough time to prepare their presentation.

This question is central to Canadian constitutional amendments. We would be making a serious mistake if we rushed to adopt this very important bill before we adjourn for the holidays without first hearing from representatives of the provincial governments, aboriginal peoples or from any other group or individual who would like to offer us their comments.

[English]

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, as I began my study of Bill C-110, a number of preliminary questions presented themselves. The first focuses on what impact this legislation would have on the exercise of the federal veto as this relates to the responsibility of Parliament to take constitutional and unity decisions in the pan-Canadian interest, or in the national interest.

In other words, is there a difference between the common good of Canada as a whole and the sum total of ten provincial or five regional interests? It seems to me that there may well be a radical difference between what constitutes the pan-Canadian interest and what constitutes the sum total of interest of all the constituent parts.

That begs the question: Can the national public interest of a country be different from the bona fide public interest of some parts of a country? Will the proposal contained in this bill interfere with the responsibility of Parliament to identify, articulate and act in the public interest of the nation as a composite whole? Is there something qualitatively unique about our national or pan-Canadian interest? Does the model for the exercise of Parliamentary responsibility which underlies Bill C-110 enhance or inhibit the desire of so many of us to see Canada grow and develop, as all modern societies must? Are there other examples of federal states wherein this kind of a limitation is placed on the federal, the national or the central government? Have the drafters of this bill conducted comparative studies in this regard?

Another area of reflection arose from my initial study of examples which may already be in place. For example, does the Diefenbaker 1960 Canadian Bill of Rights serve as an example of how Parliament agrees statutorily to limit its legislative authority? In other words, is that not an example whereby, through statute, Parliament says it will not exercise its supremacy in certain areas, those areas being defined by the Canadian Bill of Rights? Thus, Parliament has limited itself in that regard. Perhaps that is an example for the model that we have in Bill C-110.

Alternatively, does the example that I raise around the 1960 Bill of Rights pose more questions as to the issues of justiciability? As we know, should Parliament enact a piece of legislation, or undertake an initiative that would run counter to its own statutory provision, that is, the Bill of Rights, then the courts could adjudicate. What is the adjudication mechanism or the model of justiciability that would flow from Bill C-110?

Further, honourable senators, I have a question as to the supremacy of legislation. Will the limitation imposed on Parliament by Bill C-110 have supremacy over other statutes or other powers of Parliament? As I first read it, there is nothing in the bill that indicates the status of the bill in terms of its supremacy over other measures. The constitutionality of the provision in Bill C-110 has been alluded to by others. Those types of questions must also be resolved.

Clearly, honourable senators, the government has heard the message that it must lead in the area of national unity, and I salute the government for having heard that message. I also salute the government and the Prime Minister for having made an effort to begin to take action. However, when one leads, one must know where and how one will get to the destination. In other words, a plan or vision is necessary.

My final point relates to the provision in the bill found in clause 1(1) which speaks to the consent of the provinces, the regions, being sought. There is no indication in the bill as to how that consent would be determined.

A number of questions present themselves as a result of my reading of the bill which makes it difficult to simply focus on the principle of a bill such as this. If the principle is that the government is attempting to identify a manner in which it can begin to address, in 1996 terms, the problems of national unity, then we can all easily agree with such a laudable principle. However, in regard to whether this particular model and, therefore, the principle of this bill is appropriate and whether it meets the objective of facilitating national unity, the jury seems to be very much out.

Honourable senators, we will serve the country well by examining the bill in a serious and studious manner and by hearing from the provinces, which have the right to be heard by the Senate when a measure affecting their interest is before Parliament. Obviously, we will want to extend the opportunity to the provinces, as we must pursuant to our rules, to voice their reaction and to offer their guidance.

As I reflected with colleagues the other day, it seemed to me that the juncture at which the country finds itself these days is one where the old language has failed us. We now need to identify new grammar to express national unity.

It is to be hoped that, as the committee examines this bill and attempts to deal with some of the questions which I have raised on this first round of analysis, we will be able to make a healthy contribution to an objective which I think we all share.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Maurice Simard: Honourable senators, in my capacity as Progressive Conservative senator for the people of New Brunswick and, more specifically, the francophones of New Brunswick, I rise to speak on Bill C-110. This bill concerns Canada's unity. I must say I was surprised to see the government introducing the measures included in this bill. We can find no fault with the general objectives of the bill. Like many Canadians, I cannot imagine Canada without Quebec. We want Quebec to be part of Canada.

[English]

On the other hand, we also know that what the Chrétien government is really doing is nothing more than an exercise in public relations. They are terrified of talking to their partners in Confederation about what they could really do to stop Quebec from leaving Canada. However, that is what they must do, and that is what the Constitution Act, 1982, which was passed by another Liberal government, says they must do. For some reason, though, this Liberal government will not do it. Instead, they force this high-profile, empty legislation through the House of Commons, brazenly hoping that the people of Canada will think they look good. Simply trying to look good is not enough, and the people of Canada know that.

[Translation]

• (1040)

In fact, Canadians know that, in the weeks and months preceding the referendum in October, the government was bragging about there being no problem and claiming to be looking after job creation. This government's job creation record leaves something to be desired.

This government has done nothing. It was much more concerned with its image and shining it up. We have heard the Prime Minister and some of his ministers say often enough that there was no problem. We could see they were more concerned with keeping their popularity for a period of time. This is primarily the cause of the serious situation in which we find ourselves today.

As a francophone from New Brunswick, I am naturally concerned about the fate awaiting Canada's francophones and New Brunswick's Acadians, should Quebec separate.

In the meantime, the government gives us this bill, which some describe as meaningless. I am tempted to agree. To date, the bill has caused a lot of anxiety. If it were passed in its present form, without consultation, it could take the country to the brink.

As a New Brunswick francophone, and speaking for Canadians there of all cultures, I am proud to belong to the only officially bilingual province in Canada. This status has been enshrined in the Constitution since 1982.

[English]

Not only are we proud of New Brunswickers, but we are proud of Quebec. That is why, in 1987, the Conservative governments of Canada and New Brunswick were prominent in trying to ensure that the Meech Lake Accord, which recognized Quebec's distinctiveness, got approval by the governments of the day, so that it could be entrenched in the Constitution. It was a tragedy for Canada when it was rejected. However, we must not stop trying, as has the Chrétien government, evidently. Canada is far too important to all of us.

I will now turn to the proposed amending formula which is contained in this empty Liberal bill. This version of what is called generally by many "the Victoria formula" is not a bad thing for New Brunswick. In fact, it was supported by the Government of New Brunswick when it was first proposed in 1971, and then later in the constitutional negotiations which led to the 1982 amendments. It gives the provinces in the Atlantic area more say on new amendments than does the current formula.

That it also gives a veto to Quebec and Ontario, and now to British Columbia, by recognizing them as regions and not simply provinces is not a matter of unequalness but of common sense. New Brunswick's participation in Canada's constitutional development is surely better served when it is one of two in a region which can stop a constitutional change than simply one of seven in the vast national population. Therefore, as with the Quebec distinctiveness part of this public relations manoeuvre of the Chrétien government, I support the amending provision in theory.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, I have the feeling that those talking this way, like myself, would like things to be done right, would like a study done and consultation on this bill. If this bill was not urgent for two years, I have a hard time understanding why the government is insisting that it be passed in such haste, in less than a week.

[English]

Indeed, some of us may have had reservations about the provisions of the 1982 constitutional amendments. The fact is, though, they are the law, and they are the only way we can find our way out of this quandary in which we find ourselves. The Senate can help in finding the way, honourable senators. It can do things which the Chrétien government evidently is afraid to do. We can hear from Canada's premiers and from other Canadians who better recognize the urgency of this matter than does the Chrétien government.

The problem with this bill is, as I have indicated, not what it purports to do, but its impotence.

[Translation]

This bill is definitely not enough. The people of Quebec and New Brunswick, and even those of Canada as a whole, know that it is not enough.

[English]

Surely we can expect more from a prime minister who is evidently one of the most popular in recent Canadian history, and who commands a healthy majority in the House of Commons. However, given the unfortunate fact that we cannot expect anything except platitudes from this government, surely the people of Canada are expecting something from the Senate. I, for one, do. Let us get on with it.

• (1050)

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I ask for leave to adjourn this particular item until later this day.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

On motion of Senator Graham, debate adjourned to later this day.

PRIVATE BILL

EVANGELICAL MISSIONARY CHURCH (CANADA WEST DISTRICT)
BILL—MESSAGE FROM COMMONS

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons returning Bill S-12, to amalgamate the Alberta corporation known as the Missionary Church with the Canada corporation known as the Evangelical Missionary Church, Canada West District, and acquainting the Senate that they had passed the bill without amendment.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SPECIAL COMMISSION ON RESTRUCTURING OF THE RESERVES—
REPORT OF SOCIAL AFFAIRS, SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the thirteenth report of the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology (study — Report on the Restructuring of the Reserves), tabled in the Senate on December 14, 1995.

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government), for Senator Bonnell, moved the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

INTERNAL ECONOMY, BUDGETS AND ADMINISTRATION

FORTIETH REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the fortieth report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration (supplementary budget — National Finance Committee), presented in the Senate on December 14, 1995.

Hon. Colin Kenny moved the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

FORTY-FIRST REPORT ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the forty-first report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration (supplementary budget — Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee), presented in the Senate on December 14, 1995.

Hon. Colin Kenny moved the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

FORTY-SECOND REPORT ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the forty-second Report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration (Budget — Code of Conduct Committee), presented in the Senate on December 14, 1995.

Hon. Colin Kenny moved the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

ONTARIO COURT GENERAL DIVISION

MOTION TO STRIKE SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE AND REPORT UPON THE CONDUCT AND BEHAVIOUR OF CERTAIN OFFICERS AND JUSTICES—DEBATE CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of Senator Cools, seconded by the Honourable Senator Carstairs:

That a Special Committee of the Senate be constituted to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain justices and barristers of the Ontario Court of Justice (General Division), raised by the Honourable Senator Cools in her speeches on Parliamentary Privilege in the Senate in terms of:

- (i) failing to take judicial notice, of the Law of Parliamentary Privilege, the Constitution of Canada, and the laws of Canada pertaining to the Senate;
- (ii) failing to uphold and enforce the said laws, and the immunities and privileges of the Senate;
- (iii) interfering with and frustrating the enjoyment and exercise of the said laws, immunities, and privileges;
- (iv) inducing failure to observe and comply with the said laws, immunities, and privileges;
- (v) impeaching proceedings in Parliament;
- (vi) threatening sanctions on the vindication of the said laws, immunities, and privileges;
- (vii) their conduct and behaviour generally relating to, the Law of Parliamentary Privilege, the Constitution of Canada, the independence of the judiciary, constitutional comity, the dignity of the Senate, and the due administration of justice;

That the Committee be further empowered to consider and report upon related matters which may concern the privileges of the Senate;

That the committee have power to send for persons, papers and records, to examine witnesses, to report from time to time and to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be ordered by the committee;

That the committee be composed of seven members, four of whom shall constitute a quorum; and

That the Committee of Selection be instructed to decide and report upon the membership of the Special Committee.—(Honourable Senator Cools)

Hon. Anne C. Cools: Honourable senators, I rise to complete my remarks regarding this motion for a special committee. I shall continue from where I left off on November 1, 1995.

Mr. Justice Matlow exceeded his jurisdiction by failing to take judicial notice of, and failing to uphold Parliament's privileges as commanded by the Constitution Act, 1867, and the Parliament of Canada Act, sections 4 and 5. He arbitrarily waived the procedural rules of the Courts of Justice Act and also Judge Lee Ferrier's court order to support his own position. He abandoned the common law principle of economy in the exercise of power and breached the convention of judicial independence in this injudicious assumption of power. In this, a political act, he politicized the bench and compromised both judicial and parliamentary sovereignty. He acted without impartiality. He declined to discern truth and countenanced falsehood and perjury by admitting two sworn and perjurious affidavits in evidence that day, despite another judge's order forbidding their admission. He granted these affidavits judicial protection by attaching Her Majesty's judicial privilege to them.

Honourable senators, I accuse Anne Molloy, the author and commissioner of these false affidavits, of further breaches of parliamentary privilege. She cast reflections upon the Senate, claiming that the well-respected Mr. Justice Lissaman had lied to her, saying that he had had a telephone conversation with this senator, wherein I had attempted to influence him. She later admitted her falsehood, claiming uncertainty that Mr. Justice Lissaman had said that he actually spoke to me. She compromised Judge Lee Ferrier, using his court order to compel this senator's attendance as a witness at a cross-examination during yet another Senate sitting. Finally, she and the deponent of the affidavits, Rhoda Lipton, later admitted that the affidavits were false and were intended to mislead justice.

Honourable senators, when I insisted that barristers not serve legal process in the Senate, Ms Molloy — a barrister — wrote that my position was “unreasonable and obstructive” and threatened:

“...Unless...you are agreeing to this form of service, ...I will be seeking an order....”

She did. She sought and obtained a court order. Justice Matlow ordered service of legal process in the precincts of the Senate. She used first embarrassment then legal process and court orders to threaten and intimidate this senator, her strongest tool being the threat of criminal contempt of court. She was unscrupulous.

Honourable senators, Her Majesty’s court, its processes, its judges and its officers were deployed to obstruct and interfere with the performance and the exercise of the functions and duties of a senator, thus the Senate.

Honourable senators, Mr. Justice Matlow committed a contempt of Parliament in his order of June 14, 1994, when he wrote in his own hand:

The plaintiff...as a litigant, ...is entitled to no special treatment...Counsel should endeavour, so far as possible, not to schedule matters that would interfere with the plaintiff’s parliamentary duties, if some dispute arises, the further direction of the court can be sought.

By hearing motions requiring this senator’s personal attendance on a Senate sitting day at Osgood Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday, June 14, 1994, he impeached proceedings in Parliament. He unilaterally cancelled a mutually agreed upon day of Monday, June 13, 1994, a non-Senate sitting day, and unilaterally ordered a new date of Tuesday, June 14, 1994, a Senate sitting day. That morning, the honourable judge repeatedly and brutally refused to acknowledge a document on parliamentary privilege prepared by the Senate’s Assistant Law Clerk, Mr. Mark Audcent. He refused to allow me to address the Court on parliamentary privilege. Justice Matlow employed his judicial station to intimidate this senator. This senator resisted his provocation. She avoided his unappealable summary and punitive powers of contempt of court.

Moreover, at the commencement of three further proceedings instituted by the opposing barristers for Mr. Justice Matlow’s adjudication on parliamentary privilege, the honourable judge again refused to adjourn and again ruled to proceed. In his judgment, delivered at 2:00 p.m., the very hour the Senate was sitting that day, he ruled against parliamentary privilege and awarded excessive costs against this senator, compensating them for their time spent on privilege. These proceedings, instituted without proper notice and service upon me, manifested again Mr. Justice Matlow’s support of these barristers’ questionable actions.

Honourable senators, the Senate’s resolution of June 9, 1994, to sit on Tuesday, June 14, 1994, was an order carrying the full force of Her Majesty’s command. That order is the law. All must heed. On this, Sir Erskine May, in his treatise The Law, Privileges, Proceedings and Usage of Parliament, states:

Every question, when agreed to, assumes the form either of an order or of a resolution of the House...By its orders the House directs its committees, its members, its officers, the order of its own proceedings and the acts of all persons whom they concern;...

No court may amend, alter or deviate from an order of the Senate.

On limits, even judicial limits to the powers, privileges and immunities of Parliament granted by section 18 of the Constitution Act, 1867, the Right Honourable Bora Laskin, former Chief Justice of Canada, said:

There is no limit anywhere in law, either in Canada or the United Kingdom....

Any judicial action to disobey or countenance disobedience of the Senate order of June 9, 1994, is not a limit in law; consequently, it is a transgression of the law. Mr. Justice Matlow and barristers Anne Molloy, Bruce Drake, Eva Frank, and Robin Basu breached the unwaivable immunities and privileges of the Senate and offered indignity and offence to the Senate.

I shall repeat my accusations: There was repeated and persistent disobedience to the laws of the Senate. There was refusal to serve legal process at the senator’s residence, as required by law, and insistence on service within the precincts of Parliament. There was repeated and persistent compulsion of a senator’s attendance in court on Senate sitting days. There was use of judicial censure to exert pressure on this senator regarding the exercise of her parliamentary privileges. Further, the honourable judge and these barristers deliberately brought eight proceedings on a Senate sitting day. Of these eight, three were instituted for the questioning, adjudication, and defeating of parliamentary privilege in the courts, which three succeeded. The honourable judge and the barristers impeached parliamentary proceedings in the courts. The honourable judge and the barristers breached the unwaivable immunities and privileges of the Senate, and offered indignity and offence to the Senate, and to the courts.

• (1100)

Thus I ask honourable senators to constitute a special committee to examine this matter. The committee would examine the circumstances, but, primarily, the committee could re-establish the primacy of parliamentary allegiance to parliamentary business and the upholding of the law of parliamentary privilege.

I ask honourable senators to consider my remarks today in conjunction with all my other speeches on this subject-matter in this chamber over the past year.

On motion of Senator Watt, debate adjourned.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, that concludes the order paper, except for the motion by Honourable Senator Graham that Bill C-110 be dealt with later this day. What is your pleasure, Honourable Senator Graham?

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, we are not prepared to proceed at the present time, but there has been a discussion with the leadership opposite and, in view of the fact that we have Royal Assent at 12:00 noon, we shall proceed with this item at 11:45 a.m.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senator, that we will proceed with this item at 11:45 a.m.?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: On that basis, I leave the chair until 11:45 a.m.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

• (1140)

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham: Honourable senators, I want to thank you all for your patience.

With respect to our further deliberations on Bill C-110, certain agreements have been reached by the leadership on both sides. Those arrangements and agreements will be put forth immediately. They are being printed and translated so that we have them in both official languages, and they will be available immediately following Royal Assent. Consequently, I suggest that we adjourn during pleasure at this time.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, if we are moving on this, perhaps I might take this opportunity to extend to our staff, the Pages, and other officers of this chamber, as well as to colleagues opposite, our best wishes for the season.

Canada is a great multicultural country. Obviously, by definition, it is also a multi-faith society. Various faiths across Canada have in common at this time of the year the season of peace and goodwill. In that spirit, on behalf of my colleagues on this side of the chamber, I extend to all, but in a very special and warm way to our friends on that side of the chamber, every best wish for the season and all prosperity in 1996.

[Translation]

Hon. Jacques Hébert: Honourable senators, I would not forgive myself if I did not repeat in the other official language the warm and very nice things my honourable colleague opposite just said and tell our staff, and the Pages, how much we appreciate what they do for us and what a pleasure it is to work with them.

We do not express our gratitude very often over the year. We are so preoccupied by some problem, which, as it turns out the next morning, was unimportant, that we walk by the Pages without even noticing them. I am sure that they understand and that they know. We are taking this opportunity today to tell them again that they are appreciated. And we wish all of you a happy New Year.

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: I consulted my caucus, which has selected me to speak on its behalf and to associate myself with the well-chosen words spoken by the government whip and the opposition whip.

I wish also that this time off will be a time to think things over, and that we will come back in top form to launch into a major moment in the life of our country by looking for solutions together. Perhaps the solution could come from the Senate. I firmly believe it could.

[English]

I hope that the Leader of the Government and others will reflect, during the Christmas season and in the New Year, on the role that independent senators should play here. I think I can say that we are extremely eager to participate more and more in the affairs of the Senate.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, the Senate will now adjourn during pleasure to await the arrival of the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

[Translation]

• (1200)

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable John Charles Major, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act amend the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, the Criminal Code, the Criminal Records Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and the Transfer of Offenders Act (Bill C-45, Chapter 42, 1995)

An Act to amend the Auditor General Act (Bill C-83, Chapter 43, 1995)

An Act respecting employment equity (Bill C-64, Chapter 44, 1995)

An Act respecting the establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission (Bill C-107, Chapter 45, 1995)

An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Income Tax Act (Bill C-103, Chapter 46, 1995)

An Act to amend the National Housing Act (Bill C-108, Chapter 47, 1995)

An Act to amend the Small Business Loans Act (Bill C-99, Chapter 48, 1995)

An Act to amalgamate the Alberta corporation known as the Missionary Church with the Canada corporation known as the Evangelical Missionary Church, Canada West District (Bill S-12)

The Honourable Gilbert Parent, Speaker of the House of Commons, then addressed the Honourable the Deputy Governor General as follows:

May it please Your Honour:

The Commons of Canada have voted certain supplies required to enable the Government to defray the expenses of the public service.

In the name of the Commons, I present to Your Honour the following bill:

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1996 (Bill C-116, Chapter 49, 1995)

To which bill I humbly request Your Honour's assent.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy Governor General was pleased to retire.

[English]

• (1210)

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

MOTION TO ESTABLISH SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE ON BILL C-110 ADOPTED

Leave having been given to revert to Government Notices of Motion:

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, as I indicated earlier, there has been discussion on both sides and, accordingly, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 57(1)(d), I move:

That a special committee of the Senate be appointed to consider, after second reading, the Bill C-110, An Act respecting constitutional amendments; and

That the following senators be appointed to serve on the Special Committee: namely, the Honourable Senators Andreychuk, Beaudoin, Carney, Carstairs, De Bané, Kinsella, Lewis, Gauthier, Marchand, Meighen, Murray and Rivest, and that three members constitute a quorum; and

That the committee have power to send for persons, papers and records, to examine witnesses, and to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be ordered by the committee; and

That the committee have the power to sit during adjournments of the Senate; and

That the committee have power to retain the services of professional, clerical, stenographic and such other staff as deemed advisable by the committee; and

That the committee present its final report to the Senate no later than 9 a.m. February 1, 1996, and

That no later than 5:30 p.m. on Friday, February 2, 1996, any proceedings before the Senate shall be interrupted and all questions necessary to dispose of all remaining stages of the said Bill shall be put forthwith without further debate or amendment, and that any votes on any of those questions not be further deferred.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, rule 51(1)(d) of the Rules of the Senate stipulates that two days' notice must be given for any motion for the appointment of a special committee. Obviously, a single senator could probably unduly prolong the debate. I will not do so. Some honourable senators may recall that we came back in July because too little time had been spent on consultation. Every senator counts; I cannot repeat that too often.

[English]

Once more, a group of extremely knowledgeable senators has been appointed. Once more, it has been done without even consulting others who may have something to offer.

In the early 1970s, I had the honour to travel to every province and territory of Canada on a special committee under your chairmanship, Your Honour. You know the role that some of us played at that time in calming Canadians who were ready to jump on the table. As a matter of fact, some did that very thing in Hull. Some rejected us. With calm, patience and a focus on historical perspective, we succeeded in producing a remarkable report the reading of which I recommend to honourable senators. That report was, of course, rejected out of hand, like all the other reports.

There are solutions to many of the problems of today in that report under His Honour's signature as joint chairman of that special committee of the House of Commons and the Senate.

Some of our Pages told me that they were impressed by my speech yesterday on some of the historical background of Canada. As I said, some others of us have something to offer. For how long will we retain this clubby atmosphere? Is that what we want for the future of the Senate? I am not bragging; I am saying that I have a lot to offer and that constantly excluding independent senators will one day create big problems.

I am known for my extraordinary charm, pleasant character and patience, but one day I will get up and say, "I am sorry, but you will have to come back next week." I read something about the possibility of that scenario before I came in this morning. If it is your wish that I replace Senator Frith, who used to know how to use the rule book very well, I will. However, I did not come to the Senate to count points.

I regret this situation. This will be very important work. I will not go on vacation. I will attend this committee, as a non-member, to demonstrate my extreme interest. However, it is not the same when you are not a member.

Your Honour is the ultimate protector of senators. When someone has something to offer, that person should at least be advised of what is planned. I learned of this deal only moments ago. I respect Senator Graham. He is a long-time friend. As a matter of fact, I supported him when he ran for president of the Liberal Party, the same time when Senator Davey wanted to run.

I have to lighten the tone of my remarks, because I am becoming too passionate.

I think I have made my point. I understand the rules and I understand that there must be a balance between the two sides. However, people must use their heads. I spoke to Senator Pitfield and Senator Lawson about this matter. It is conceivable that, in the future, some of you may decide to sit as independents. We often hear rumours. It is comfortable in this corner.

I shall not make honourable senators come back next week, although I could.

Hon. Eric Arthur Berntson (Deputy Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, it is true that over the last several days there has been discussion with regard to how we should proceed with Bill C-110. This motion is the result of that discussion.

The return of the Senate on the Thursday before the House of Commons returns from its Christmas recess will not be welcomed by all senators as it goes against the usual custom of resuming our sittings one week following the House of Commons. We have agreed to this in recognition of the government's unstated but more and more obvious desire to have certain pieces of legislation passed before the long-rumoured prorogation becomes a fact. It is becoming more and more obvious that that is indeed a likelihood.

Out of an abundance of caution, however, I wish to make it clear that it is my understanding that if it is the government's intention to prorogue on or about February 5, the government will not bring any more contentious legislation before this chamber with the expectation that it will be dealt with prior to prorogation.

Hon. Willie Adams: Honourable senators, Bill C-110 will affect all Canadians. Is it the intention that this committee will travel, or will it hold its hearings here in Ottawa?

Senator Graham: Honourable senators, I take Senator Adams' point seriously. However, I must say that how the committee disposes of the business before it is up to the committee members themselves.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

SECOND READING

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Fairbairn, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Graham, for the second reading of Bill C-110, An Act respecting constitutional amendments.—(Senator Graham).

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, unless any other senator wishes to speak on this motion, I suggest the question be put.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Fairbairn, seconded by the Honourable Senator Graham, that this bill be read the second time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Graham, bill referred to the Special Senate Committee on Bill C-110.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham, Deputy Leader of the Government: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(h), I move:

That when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Thursday, February 1, 1996, at nine o'clock in the morning.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham, Deputy Leader of the Government: Honourable senators, there seems to be a disposition that all remaining orders and motions stand.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, before I call on Senator Graham to move the adjournment motion, I wish to take this opportunity to wish you all a Merry Christmas. May 1996 be good to all of you. I hope that you have a good recess in the meantime.

I would like to express my appreciation to all those who serve the Senate for their constant help during the year. We sometimes tend to forget them. I want to remind them that all honourable senators appreciate their services. I refer not only to those we see here in the chamber but to those who work elsewhere and serve us nonetheless.

The Senate adjourned until Thursday, February 1, 1996, at 9 a.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, February 1, 1996

The Senate met at 9:00 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

NEW SENATOR

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I have the honour to inform the Senate that the Clerk has received a certificate from the Registrar General of Canada showing that Shirley Maheu has been summoned to the Senate:

INTRODUCTION

The Hon. the Speaker having informed the Senate that there was a senator without, waiting to be introduced:

The following honourable senator was introduced; presented Her Majesty's writ of summons; took the oath prescribed by law, which was administered by the Clerk; and was seated:

Hon. Shirley Maheu, of Rougemont, Quebec, introduced between the Hon. B. Alasdair Graham and Hon. Lise Bacon.

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the honourable senator named above had made and subscribed the declaration of qualification required by the Constitution Act, 1867, in the presence of the Clerk of the Senate, the Commissioner appointed to receive and witness the said declaration.

[Translation]

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I would like to wish a cordial welcome to this chamber to our new colleague, Senator Shirley Maheu of Saint-Laurent, Quebec.

[English]

Well known on Parliament Hill and to many colleagues in this chamber, she has represented the riding of Saint-Laurent—Cartierville since 1988.

Senator Maheu has devoted herself to being a voice for the people of the community she has represented so well. Before coming to Ottawa, she served for six years as a municipal councillor for Saint-Laurent, where she is simply known as "Shirley," which I believe is indeed a tribute to her genuine warmth and commitment.

As a member of Parliament, Senator Maheu was appointed critic for multiculturalism and citizenship in 1990. She served as Deputy Chair on the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism and Citizenship. In 1994, she became the Deputy Chair of the Committees of the Whole House, a role which requires a firm hand in the debates in the other place, an experience which may be of great value in this chamber.

Over the years, Senator Maheu has worked on a number of boards and organizations in her community, including helping to found the Carrefour Multi-Ethnique, a group which helps refugees and immigrants adapt to Canadian life. She has been associated with the Red Cross, the Insurance Brokers of Quebec, and the Chamber of Commerce of Saint-Laurent, all of which will assist her contribution to the work of this chamber and its committees.

Along with her personal warmth and good humour, Senator Maheu brings with her a passion for this country and the place of her province within this country. We warmly welcome Senator Maheu as a colleague, and we look forward to sharing that commitment here in the Senate.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, I join my colleagues in wishing the most cordial of welcomes to our new senator from the region of Montreal, and to wish her the greatest success in her new duties.

[English]

It is interesting to see that another former member of the House of Commons is joining us. We benefit from the experience that many current senators have gained in the House of Commons, and they of course have benefitted from the fact that, once here, they soon realize that some of the things they may have heard and even said about this place are, shall we say, slightly exaggerated. I have no doubt that our new colleague will quickly realize that this house has an extraordinary amount of knowledge, breadth of experience and political savvy which should be the envy of the House of Commons, and to which she will no doubt make her own special contribution.

[Later]

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, I take great pleasure in wishing Senator Maheu the most cordial of welcomes. During my political career I had occasion to come to know her well, since we sat together on the Liberal caucus. You know what tragedies often occur in politics when there is an electoral redistribution.

I had to change ridings four times. The fourth time, Senator Maheu certainly took the most Liberal portion of my area. Ninety per cent of those she acquired from Saint-Denis voted Liberal. Consequently, I had to reorganize, which I did successfully, despite the efforts of a friend, a senator whom I shall not name.

I would like to mention here this morning one particular reason why I am familiar with Senator Maheu. We are often asked to visit schools and colleges, part of a good elected representative's duties. I always give as my answer something I learned from my father when he was a Montreal municipal councillor: devotion first and foremost to those we represent.

As Senator Graham has said, if someone called Senator Maheu's office, there would always be a response. The call would be taken and there would be a call back. In Saint-Laurent—Dollard, a call to the office of Mrs. Maheu could always be counted on to bring a reply, although not always a favourable one. Her staff lent an attentive ear. Ms Maheu was available on weekends. She had those two qualities: devotion to duty coupled with availability. This is a well-known fact in the entire riding of Saint-Laurent.

That is a riding I have always envied. I nearly represented it, but circumstances would have it otherwise. It is a riding of high economic activity. Imagine, 70,000 jobs, when the population is 70,000.

[English]

Seventy thousand jobs in a city that has around 70,000 people — that shows the dynamism of the city that Shirley Maheu mainly represented, including a part of Montreal called Cartierville.

[Translation]

She had, however, an extraordinary associate, her husband René. Of course, in the riding, this does not in any way diminish the talents of Senator Maheu. He is always there, representing his wife when Senator Maheu is in Ottawa to fulfil her parliamentary duties. I want to include him on this memorable day in his wife's life and thank him for what he has done. And there is more. There are Senator Maheu's four children: Ronald, Richard, Daniel and Marc, one of whom made his mark in the municipal council of Saint-Laurent. There is a family of six, plus grandchildren, all involved in making Senator Maheu's term as a member of the House of Commons a success. I just wanted to mention this for the record.

I am delighted, I must say, but someone has decided to keep us apart. I do not know why you are away over there. My fellow independent senator came to sit on our side, but she was put way over there. We are very close, just the same. I wish you a most cordial welcome, and I only hope that our long friendship will continue throughout our years together in the Senate.

[English]

THE HONOURABLE JOHN SYLVAIN

TRIBUTES ON RESIGNATION FROM SENATE

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, I should like to make a few remarks about the senator who has just left us. It is always with regret that we bid farewell to a colleague when he or she reaches the mandatory retirement age, but at least we can prepare for such an eventuality. A voluntary retirement, however, is both unusual and unexpected, thereby making it even more difficult to accept.

John Sylvain has not made me privy to the reasons for his decision to leave us. On the other hand, I have not hidden from him my distress and that of my colleagues at his having taken that decision, not only because it now allows our friends opposite to be numerically superior to those who form the Official Opposition, although I do admit that this is of more than passing concern, but because the entire Senate will miss the benefit of the knowledge and experience of a colleague who has not made insignificant contributions to the legislative process of Parliament.

As a member of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, and more recently as its deputy chairman, he distinguished himself in both debate and the study of bills. He was a member of the Special Joint Committee on Defence Policy which gained a great deal from his familiarity with the Armed Forces as a member of the RCAF during the war and later with the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. He also made a special contribution to the subcommittee which studied the film The Valour and the Horror.

Whether in committee or in this chamber, his interventions were always thoughtful and well prepared. It is hard to believe that his accomplishments here were all achieved in less than five and a half years. All of us will miss him.

[Translation]

On behalf of all of my colleagues, I should like to express our thanks to Senator Sylvain for his contributions to the Senate and to our caucus, as well as our very best wishes for the future to him, his wife Yolande and all of his family.

[English]

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I wish to join with my colleague opposite to pay tribute to Senator Sylvain of Rougemont, Quebec.

To say the very least, Senator Sylvain is a gentleman in every sense of the word. He is distinguished, hard-working, and I have found him quite down to earth. He has made a fine contribution to the work of this place, and most certainly as a representative of the province of Quebec.

John Sylvain has a history of service to this country going back to the years he served in the Royal Canadian Air Force as a bombardier navigator during the Second World War and afterwards as a captain with the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps until 1949. After receiving a Bachelor of Commerce degree from the University of Ottawa back in 1950, he embarked on an extensive career in the insurance business, culminating in a term as President and Chief Executive Officer of United Provinces Insurance Company from 1976 to 1982 and as a consultant for Dale-Parizeau Insurance Brokers from 1982 to 1992.

This background has been of great benefit to the Senate, particularly to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, where he was able to apply his expertise, as a member and more recently as deputy chair, on several pieces of legislation and on a number of complex issues facing the financial industry. His military experience has also provided valuable insight to his work as a member of the Subcommittee on Veterans Affairs, as was mentioned by the Leader of the Opposition, and the Special Joint Committee on Canada's Defence Policy.

Above all, honourable senators, he has been an articulate and dedicated advocate for his country. Remarking on the feelings of patriotism Canadians expressed during the referendum, he said:

I believe we can build on these feelings, and move toward redefining our country. There is much unfinished work to do...

There certainly is much work to do, and we know that John Sylvain will continue to be a strong voice in Quebec as the debate for the future of Canada and all its citizens unfolds in the weeks and months ahead.

In working with Senator Sylvain, I personally found him to be formidable, well-informed, direct and always fair. We will miss him here. We will miss his commitment, his humour and his friendship.

On behalf of all my colleagues, I congratulate him for his splendid work in this institution. We convey our warmest wishes to him and to his family.

Hon. Michael Kirby: Honourable senators, I, too, would join with Senator Lynch-Staunton and Senator Graham in honouring our colleague the Honourable John Sylvain.

We have heard this morning about Senator Sylvain's service to Canada in the military, in public life, and his profound personal interest in national unity. As Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, however, I would comment on Senator Sylvain's service from a somewhat different perspective. I worked with Senator Sylvain a great deal during his five years in the Senate, and more particularly during the last two years when he served as deputy chairman of the Banking Committee.

John Sylvain brought to the committee tremendous experience with financial institutions, and the insurance business in particular. His understanding of the financial services industry was extremely valuable to the committee over the last five years, and in particular during our hearings concerning the collapse of Confederation Life. The ensuing report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce included a series of recommendations to the government regarding policy changes which could minimize the risk of future insurance company failures. Virtually all of those recommendations were subsequently adopted in legislation passed by Parliament a few months ago.

Much of the work and the expertise that went into the development of those recommendations was that of Senator Sylvain. He not only brought to this task his understanding of the issues, he brought something else which I think has been fundamental in helping build the reputation of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce; namely, he approached all such business issues in an absolutely non-partisan fashion. Because of his approach to the issues and his willingness to seek a non-partisan solution to complex business problems, every single bill which came before the committee during Senator Sylvain's time as deputy chairman was passed unanimously. We were able to reach the compromises that worked best for public and business policy, as opposed to those that would reflect particular political ideologies.

As committee members, we will miss Senator Sylvain during our future deliberations; we will miss his judgment, experience and non-partisanship. I have come to know Senator Sylvain as a friend as well as a Senate colleague, and I personally will miss his advice, his understanding and his company.

On behalf of the committee, I wish Senator Sylvain, his wife and family all the best, and thank him for his faithful and outstanding service to Canada.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Hon. Colin Kenny: Honourable senators, I, too, am pleased to have had the privilege of serving with Senator John Sylvain on a number of associations and committees. Our shared interest in defence matters brought us together as members on the Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association, as well as on the joint committee on Canada's defence policy.

Senator Sylvain served with distinction in World War II as an RCAF officer, flying missions in Europe, Africa and Asia. He was a never-ending source of military expertise.

Some of my most memorable moments in the Senate have been on association and committee trips in the company of Senator Sylvain. With the Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association, we travelled to Madrid, to Bruges and to Washington. We crossed Canada and northern America and went to Europe as members of the Special Joint Committee on Canada's Defence Policy. John always brought common sense and gentle reason to our deliberations. He always put Canada first. He will be sorely missed by me and by all members of this house.

I wish him well. I know he is leaving to spend more time with Yolande, and with his six children. I wish him a happy retirement.

[Translation]

Hon. Louis J. Robichaud: Honourable senators, I would also like to welcome Senator Maheu. I am saddened by the departure of Senator Sylvain. There was talk of two happy events. Senator Sylvain is leaving at his own request, for the best, for himself.

THE LATE HONOURABLE FERNAND E. LEBLANC

TRIBUTES

Hon. Louis J. Robichaud: Honourable senators, we have in the Senate a tradition whereby we mark the passing of those who sat as senators for several years. At this time, I would like to do something that is very painful for me, and something that I rarely do. I am sad to say that our former colleague, Fernand E. Leblanc, recently passed away.

As many of you will know, Senator Leblanc was a very fine member of Parliament, and a very fine senator. He chaired the National Finance Committee, something of which he was very proud. He occupied the office next to mine in the East Block. He was a great friend, and will be sorely missed. I want to express my deepest sympathy to Ms Claire Leblanc and their two sons, François and Daniel.

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Honourable senators, I wanted to welcome Senator Maheu and then express my regret at the departure of Senator Sylvain. It is appropriate for me to say a word about my friend Senator Leblanc. We were elected on the same day, February 10, 1964.

[English]

We both were elected in a by-election in 1964. Mr. Leblanc replaced the Honourable Lionel Chevrier, and I replaced the Honourable Senator Azellus Denis.

[Translation]

Like his father-in-law before him, Senator Leblanc was the last senator of a Liberal regime. In 1957, his father-in-law, Senator Lefrançois, was the last senator appointed under Louis St. Laurent.

In 1979, in order to provide a seat for David Berger, now our ambassador to Israel, Senator Leblanc gave up his seat in the House and joined us in the Senate.

There is no need for me to tell you that my family and I share the sentiments expressed by Senator Robichaud, since the two families have been associated for some 50 years. I therefore join with Senator Robichaud in offering our most sincere condolences to Senator Leblanc's wife and their two children.

[English]

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): I too should like to join with Senator Robichaud and Senator Prud'homme in deploring the loss of our former colleague, who only had less than three years to enjoy his retirement from this place. The late Senator Leblanc has left us a legacy, particularly with regard to the special status his chairmanship gave to the National Finance Committee, the work he did on that committee, and the standards he established in the study of Estimates and in the general supervision and examination of public finances. He had a special rapport with various government officials, particularly those at the Treasury Board. The committee attained special standing which it maintains today.

I join with all my colleagues in extending to his family, to his wife and his two children in particular, and to his many friends, my deepest condolences.

Hon. Peter Stollery: Honourable senators, I should like to add my words to the respect being paid to our former colleague Senator Leblanc, with whom I served in four parliaments in the House of Commons and here in the Senate. He was a fine man and I should like to take this opportunity to add my own respects and my regrets to his family.

THE LATE RENÉ JALBERT

TRIBUTES

Hon. Lise Bacon: Honourable senators, it is with much sadness and regret that I rise today to pay tribute to one of our country's great heroes, René Jalbert, who passed away on the morning of January 21, shortly before his 75th birthday, having lost a courageous battle with cancer.

Mr. Jalbert was a hard-working, dedicated man of tremendous loyalty, respect, and high acclaim. The praise is justified, due to his lengthy record of service to both Quebec and Canada. Mr. Jalbert was office administrator for a Quebec delegation in New York City from 1969 to 1971 and then spent three years as Joint Protocol Chief of Intergovernmental Services. He became Sergeant-at-Arms for the Quebec National Assembly in 1974. Many honourable senators may have had an opportunity to make Mr. Jalbert's acquaintance here in this chamber, where he ably served as Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod from July 1985 to June 1989. When he left the Senate, he assumed responsibilities as a Citizenship Court Judge in Montreal for a period of five years, a term that ended only two years ago when he was 72 years old.

Honourable senators, you may recall that René Jalbert was awarded the Cross of Valour, Canada's highest declaration for bravery, in 1985, after he persuaded a heavily armed Corporal Denis Lortie to surrender himself to Quebec police officials following the gunman's shooting spree in the Quebec National Assembly. He was heralded for his bravery and quick thinking. He was hesitant to accept such praise, but did so with a great amount of modesty and humility.

Mr. Jalbert enjoyed a distinguished, 27-year military career. He served in England and France in World War II. In 1945, he was transferred to the Carleton and York Regiment, where he became a captain, and subsequently became a helicopter commander. In 1952, he became a company commander of the Royal 22nd Regiment, Quebec's famed Van Doos, serving in Korea and Germany. In 1961, he was assigned as military liaison for the International Control Commission in Vietnam, and later served in Cyprus until 1969.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, allow me to borrow a few words from the eulogy given by Mr. Jalbert's daughter.

Mr. Jalbert earned high praise and was decorated for his courage during the National Assembly shooting. This man, who was always in a good mood, was never less than modest even within his own family.

I think that all those who knew him never failed to notice Mr. Jalbert's characteristic modesty, even after the May 8, 1984 events. Obviously, this former soldier was in no hurry to retire and worked almost until the end.

After Ottawa, as Ms Jalbert said, we thought that he would slow down. He, however, went on to serve as a Citizenship Court judge in Montreal for four years before his mandate came to an end.

On behalf of the Senate, may I convey our heartfelt condolences to Nanette Jalbert, her daughter, Linda, and her son, Marc. I think that all those who knew Mr. Jalbert feel a little richer for having met such a man.

Hon. Thérèse Lavoie-Roux: Honourable senators, I too want to say a few words to mark René Jalbert's passing. I was in the National Assembly when the dramatic events we all know about occurred. We knew him before, of course, since we used to rub shoulders with him every day. He was a very nice and, no doubt, very courageous man. We did not know as much about his military career at the time.

I think one must experience the anxiety and distress we felt during those terrible events to really understand Mr. Jalbert's courage, strength, sang-froid and sense of responsibility to others.

I was not in Quebec City for Mr. Jalbert's funeral but I saw it on television, and I felt saddened. He was 74 years old. That is not so old. Some of the honourable senators in this chamber are 74 years old, I think, and I am sure that they are not ready to go tomorrow. I felt especially sorry for his wife, son and daughter, who can be extremely proud of him.

As Senator Bacon and Ms Jalbert pointed out earlier, he was a very modest man. As a matter of fact, I think that such modesty is the mark of all great men and women. At one point, someone even wanted to make a movie of the events, but he would never have gone along with that kind of thing. He felt he had done nothing but his duty.

I think that the time has come to reiterate how grateful we are to him. Again, I wish to express our sincere condolences to Mrs. Jalbert and her children. For young and old alike, Mr. Jalbert will remain a model of both sobriety and courage, as evidenced by the Cross of Valour he was awarded. He will be a model for all those who, at some point in their lives, have to assume major responsibilities. He did his brave deed unselfishly, because it was his duty. One must be aware that even though doing one's duty may seem like an outdated concept in today's society, one which unfortunately appears to have no value, we still need people like him in real life, people with a profound sense of duty. Thank you, Mr. Jalbert.

Hon. Jean-Claude Rivest: Honourable senators, I would like to associate myself with all these tributes. Anyone who worked with this gentleman in the Senate or in the Quebec National

[Senator Bacon]

Assembly was able to appreciate his tremendous qualities, which Senator Bacon and Senator Lavoie-Roux mentioned.

As a member of the National Assembly, like Mr. Jalbert I experienced tragedy right up close. Let me remind this House of the outstanding and extraordinary courage shown by Mr. Jalbert on that occasion. The kind of courageous, noble and engaging action that Mr. Jalbert took at the time reflects a lifetime of self-effacement, dedication, sincerity and a sense of duty, as Senator Lavoie-Roux indicated.

Like everyone in Quebec and everywhere in Canada, in the Armed Forces, in the Senate and at Citizenship Court who was fortunate enough to know Mr. Jalbert, I shall miss him. He personified, to the fullest and even to excess — with his courage — the greatness of a noble, worthy and eminently respectable human being, whom we shall all miss.

Hon. Fernand Roberge: Honourable senators, I too wish to pay tribute to the great Canadian that René Jalbert was. After a brilliant career in the military, René Jalbert served his fellow citizens at the National Assembly and received the highest accolades after the Lortie incident. He demonstrated outstanding courage and sangfroid, thus preventing worse bloodshed.

Later, Mr. Jalbert came to Ottawa and became Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. His good humour and infectious smile touched his family and friends. I am very proud of having been counted among his friends. I would like to offer my deepest condolences to his wife, Nanette, his daughter, Linda, who worked for me for many years, and his son, Marc.

[Later]

[English]

SENATORS' STATEMENTS

CANADIAN WAR MUSEUM

TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT OF VETERANS

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, I was outraged recently to hear that the Canadian War Museum advised 13 veterans of the Corps of Commissionaires, 11 World War II veterans and two Korean War veterans, that their services were no longer required as tour guides at the museum. These veterans are to be reassigned, and will be replaced by individuals who are not veterans.

Most of the veterans working at the war museum are well into their seventies and will be retiring soon. However, rather than allowing them to finish their careers by working at the museum, the government has ordered them out. The abrupt manner in which these veterans were notified of their termination is nothing less than disgraceful. They deserve better from their country. These veterans served our country with honour, courage and distinction. They, and they alone, can bring an important and unique perspective to this historic museum. Our children should know about Canada's significant contribution in protecting democracy and freedom in the world, and who better to tell them about that than the veterans of these conflicts?

I, more than most, believe that the government should make every effort to reduce spending and eliminate waste. However, the performance of these jobs by these people is not wasteful. We cannot afford to forget those who answered the call of their country in a time of need. In these times when Canadians are debating the very future of our country, it is important to have input from those who can remind us of the human price that was paid for protecting this country. Perhaps then Canadians will realize that we owe it to those who died protecting our country to keep our country unified.

I urge the government to reconsider this decision and to allow these 13 veterans to conclude their careers at the Canadian War Museum.

THE HONOURABLE MURIEL MCQUEEN FERGUSSON

TRIBUTE TO FIRST FEMALE SPEAKER OF THE SENATE

Hon. Rose-Marie Losier-Cool: Honourable senators, I rise today to bring you greetings from the first female speaker of the Senate, Senator Muriel McQueen Fergusson of New Brunswick. I met Mrs. Fergusson at the screening of a documentary entitled The Honourable Muriel McQueen Fergusson which premiered at a private ceremony in Fredericton, New Brunswick on January 17.

Senator Fergusson is now 96 years young, and alert. She is planning a visit to the Senate and to Ottawa this spring. She wishes you all a very happy 1996.

The documentary depicts Mrs. Fergusson as no ordinary philanthropist, but a person responsible for guiding the course of Canadian history, particularly for women. Semra Yüksel, a Turkish-born producer, was so intrigued by Senator Fergusson that she dedicated more than five years of her time to making this 25-minute documentary. Her company is called Arcolect International. With help from the CBC, the Canadian-New Brunswick Cooperation Agreement on Cultural Development, the National Film Board of Canada and Atlantic Media Works, this documentary was made possible. It will be shown on CBC on February 3 at eight o'clock and, according to our wishes, perhaps here at the Senate in March.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, I had never met Senator Fergusson before January 17. I had heard about her work, especially with respect to women in New Brunswick, and knowing this made me even prouder to be a member of the Senate and to represent New Brunswick in particular.

[English]

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

INTERNAL ECONOMY, BUDGETS AND ADMINISTRATION

FORTY-THIRD REPORT OF COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Colin Kenny, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented the following report:

Thursday, February 1, 1996

The Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration has the honour to present its

FORTY-THIRD REPORT

Your Committee recommends the adoption of a Supplementary Estimate of $3,265,000 for fiscal year 1995-96.

This Supplementary Estimate is requested to fund unanticipated expenses and capital expenditures for the current fiscal year and will result in significant savings. Initiatives recommended for implementation include the installation of in-house printing capabilities and an Early Departure Incentive Program which are expected to result in annual savings of $1.2 million.

After an initial capital investment of $885,000, operating costs for information and printing will be reduced by 85.6 per cent and annual savings will amount to $600,000.

These expenditures have a payback period of between 16 and 18 months, significantly less than the time that Treasury Board uses as a guideline.

This Supplementary Estimate will also cover essential upgrades to the Senate's computer network communications capacity and compatibility with the House of Commons and Library of Parliament.

As the Main Estimates are prepared 12 to 18 months in advance, special and joint committees will also be funded by this Supplementary Estimate.

Respectfully submitted,

COLIN KENNY,
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Kenny, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

FORTY-FOURTH REPORT OF COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Colin Kenny, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented the following report:

Thursday, February 1, 1996

The Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration has the honour to present its

FORTY-FOURTH REPORT

Your Committee has examined and approved the Senate Estimates for the fiscal year 1996-97 and recommends their adoption.

A summary of the Expenditure Budget 1996-97 accompanies this report.

Respectfully submitted,

COLIN KENNY,
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Kenny, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

FORTY-FIFTH REPORT OF COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Colin Kenny, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented the following report:

Thursday, February 1, 1996

The Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration has the honour to present its

FORTY-FIFTH REPORT

Your Committee has examined and approved the budget presented to it by the Special Committee of the Senate on Bill C-110, An Act respecting constitutional amendments, for the proposed expenditures of the said Committee, as authorized by the Senate on December 15, 1995. The said budget is as follows:

Professional and other services	$ 4,900
All other expenditures	100
Total	$5,000

Respectfully submitted,

COLIN KENNY,
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Kenny, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

REPORT OF SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE ON BILL C-110
PRESENTED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators I have the honour to present the report of the Special Committee of the Senate on Bill C-110, an act respecting constitutional amendments, which contains three amendments. I ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report, see today's Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate.)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Kinsella, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration later this day.

[Translation]

CANADIAN UNITY

NOTICE OF MOTION TO ESTABLISH SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE

Hon. Gérard-A. Beaudoin: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 57(1)(d), I give notice that on Friday, February 2, 1996, I will move:

That a special committee of the Senate be appointed to examine and report upon the question of Canadian unity;

That, notwithstanding rule 85(1)(b), the Honourable Senators Andreychuk, Beaudoin, Carney, Carstairs, De Bané, Gauthier, Kinsella, Lewis, Marchand, Meighen, Murray and Rivest act as members of the Special Committee;

That the Committee have the power to engage the services of such counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel as may be necessary for the purpose of its examination and consideration of the said order of reference;

That the Committee have the power to send for persons, papers and records, to examine witnesses, and to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be ordered by the Committee;

That the papers and evidence received by the Special Senate Committee on Bill C-110 in the First Session of the Thirty-fifth Parliament be deemed to have been referred to the Special Committee hereby appointed;

That the Committee have the power to sit during sittings and adjournments of the Senate;

That the Committee be empowered to permit coverage by electronic media of its public proceedings with the least possible disruption of its hearings;

That the Committee have power to adjourn from place to place within Canada;

That the Committee submit its final report no later than December 15, 1996; and

That notwithstanding usual practices, if the Senate is not sitting when the final report of the Committee is completed, the Committee shall deposit its report with the Clerk of the Senate, and said report shall thereupon be deemed to have been tabled in this Chamber.

Senate on October 17, 1995, by the Honourable Senator Kinsella, regarding trade in goods manufactured in labour camps; a response to a question raised in the Senate on November 8, 1995, by the Honourable Senator Nolin, regarding the search and rescue helicopter replacement program, the proportion of Canadian content in contract bids; a response to a question raised in the Senate on November 23, 1995, by the Honourable Senator Doyle, regarding the sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, the rank of RCMP officers engaged in the investigation; a response to a question raised in the Senate on December 5, 1995, by the Honourable Senator Comeau, regarding the replacement search and rescue helicopters; and a response to a question raised in the Senate on December 12, 1995, by the Honourable Senator Comeau, regarding the search and rescue helicopter replacement program.

ENVIRONMENT

CHANGES TO WEATHER REPORTING SERVICE ADVERSELY AFFECTING RURAL AND ISOLATED AREAS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

(Response to question raised by Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk on June 21, 1995)

The safety and security of Canadians is not being affected by the changes to the Weather Services. Alerting of Canadians to severe and significant weather events remains a high priority for Environment Canada (EC). These warnings are freely available to Canadians through:

- Distribution through media partners
- WeatherRadio/WeatherCopy
- Automated Telephone Answering Devices (ATADs)

Rural and isolated areas continue to receive timely warnings of significant and severe weather through the excellent collaborative relationship between EC, media organizations (radio and television) and emergency measures organizations.

Routine weather information is also available through these means. Note that Environment Canada does not use 1-800 services to distribute its weather information, but instead relies on the mass distribution capabilities of its partners and the other methods noted above.

In addition to these services, a 1-900 service is available for users who have specialized needs for weather information. The 1-900 service carries detailed weather information for a particular application specifically tailored to those who need to make decisions that will likely have an economic impact on their line of business. Examples of these would be construction companies, film companies, and other planners of outdoor activities. These clearly identifiable clients with specialized needs are served through the 1-900 service for a fee, and it would not be expected to support this activity from the tax base.

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted?

Hon H. A. Olson: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, in that case, the notice will stand. Leave has been requested to deal with this motion tomorrow and denied. As two days' notice is normally required, instead of tomorrow this matter will be put on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting following.

QUESTION PERIOD

THE SENATE

ABSENCE OF GOVERNMENT LEADER FROM CHAMBER

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, it is with regret that I must inform the Senate that the Leader of the Government in the Senate, Senator Fairbairn, is unavoidably absent today due to illness. I am hopeful that she will be here with her usual vigour tomorrow to answer all questions any honourable senators may have. In the meantime, we would be happy to take notice of any questions, as usual.

DELAYED ANSWERS TO ORAL QUESTIONS

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senator, I have a response to a question raised in the Senate on June 21, 1995, by the Honourable Senator Andreychuk, regarding changes to the weather reporting service; a response to a question raised in the Environment Canada is fully embracing the Quality Service Initiative to ensure that Canadians receive the best level of service that we can afford:

– Policies on levels of service are being developed and service standards are being implemented.

– Front-line employees are becoming increasingly service-oriented in this era of downsizing.

– Users of all of EC services are polled on a regular basis to ensure that the service they receive meets with their needs.

– EC remains in close contact with the media, who are important partners in delivering weather information to Canadians.

CANADA-CHINA RELATIONS

TRADE IN GOODS MANUFACTURED IN LABOUR CAMPS—GOVERNMENT POLICY

(Response to a question raised by Hon. Noël A. Kinsella on October 17, 1995)

Schedule 7 of the Customs Tariffs Act prohibits the importation of any products produced by prisoners (from any country). Any allegations concerning entry of products produced by prisoners is brought to the attention of Canadian customs officials for appropriate action. No cases of importation of such goods from China have been detected to date.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SEARCH AND RESCUE HELICOPTER REPLACEMENT PROGRAM—PROPORTION OF CANADIAN CONTENT IN CONTRACT BIDS—REQUEST FOR PARTICULARS

(Response to question raised by Hon. Pierre Claude Nolin on November 8, 1995)

As previously announced by the Minister of National Defence, the procurement strategy for the acquisition of the new Search and Rescue Helicopters is to be an open competition. Bids will be evaluated as to their compliancy with the stated operational requirements and their price. Bidders will also be expected to present suitable industrial and regional benefits plans. That may include direct benefits, i.e., direct Canadian content, or indirect benefits. No specific goal has been set with respect to Canadian content on the helicopter. That is left to each bidder to propose. While some Canadian content is expected, given that the strategy is to acquire a proven off-the-shelf helicopter, opportunities for direct content will be more limited than if a new, developmental aircraft was being considered. Canadian content is more likely from some of the aircraft sub-systems, integrated logistic support, and follow-on in-service support.

JUSTICE

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA—ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—RANK OF RCMP OFFICERS ENGAGED IN INVESTIGATION

(Response to question raised by Hon. Richard J. Doyle on November 23, 1995)

The Sergeant rank is the senior investigator level within the RCMP Major Fraud Unit of the Ottawa Commercial Crime Section. This Unit is responsible for the investigation of secret commissions and the senior member of this unit was assigned. The Major Fraud Unit is supervised by an Inspector who has participated in, and is currently participating, in all aspects of this investigation. The Officer in Charge of the Criminal Operations Branch of the RCMP "A" Division is at the level of Chief Superintendent and is responsible for all criminal investigations within his Division. This Officer is monitoring this investigation and is aware of all developments as they occur.

TRANSPORT

SEARCH AND RESCUE HELICOPTER REPLACEMENT PROGRAM—PURCHASE OF UNITS WITHOUT TENDER—GOVERNMENT POSITION

(Responses to questions raised by Hon. Gerald J. Comeau on December 5, 1995)

The Government has not changed its position with respect to holding an open bidding process for the selection of the replacement search and rescue helicopters. The Government will ask the private sector to submit bids for either a traditional purchase or for a lease option. The successful bidder must meet Department of National Defence specifications, recommend financing mechanisms, and provide a maintenance component.

SEARCH AND RESCUE HELICOPTER REPLACEMENT PROGRAM—SUITABILITY AND SAFETY OF REPLACEMENT UNITS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

The Department of National Defence (DND) has reduced the set of operational requirements for the replacement search and rescue helicopters from that of the cancelled EH-101 helicopter contract in terms of range, speed, endurance and capability for flight in icing conditions. By reducing these requirements, DND is permitting a broadening of the potential field of competitors wishing to supply the replacement helicopter fleet, and is reducing the cost to taxpayers.

However, the overriding concern for the Government remains that the new helicopters must fully satisfy safety requirements for passengers and crew, while providing a strong search and rescue capability.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SEARCH AND RESCUE HELICOPTERS REPLACEMENT PROGRAM—STATEMENT OF REQUIREMENTS—REQUEST FOR ANSWER

(Response to question raised by Hon. Senator Gerald Comeau on December 12, 1995)

As announced by the Minister of National Defence during his November 8th press conference, no decision with respect to the replacement Maritime helicopter has been made. However, since the Sea King helicopters are approaching the end of their operational life, work has begun to identify options and plans to put into service new, affordable replacement Maritime helicopters by the end of the decade.

TRANSPORT

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL STRATEGIC HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM—REPORT OF AUDITOR GENERAL ON DIVERSION OF FUNDS—PERTINENT DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, in response to questions asked in the Senate on November 21, 1995, by Senators Forrestall and Comeau regarding the Nova Scotia highway improvement program, I should like to table a number of documents.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, before we proceed with the Orders of the Day, perhaps I could explain that we will be proceeding with the report of the Special Senate Committee on Bill C-110 and the debate that follows. As has been agreed, we will recess from 12:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m. for the normal lunch break, at which time the caucus on this side will be meeting. We will then continue with the Order Paper during the afternoon. There will be discussion between both sides as to how we shall proceed.

We will be sitting tomorrow. There is a house order that all votes relating to Bill C-110 take place not later than 5:30 on Friday. It may be that by unanimous agreement the vote or votes will be advanced. Under normal circumstances, we sit on Fridays at 9:00 a.m. We wish to accommodate all honourable senators in that regard and, as has been agreed upon already, there will be discussion between the leadership on both sides as the day progresses as to how we might proceed tomorrow.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Special Senate Committee on Bill C-110, respecting constitutional amendments.

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators, in speaking to the motion that this chamber should adopt forthwith the report of the Special Senate Committee that studied Bill C-110, respecting constitutional amendments, we would be adopting three very important, valuable, valid, legitimate amendments that would improve immensely the bill and would help to achieve, in a clear, non-mystical fashion, the objective which the government set for itself in meeting the Prime Minister's commitment.

Honourable senators, before dealing with the report, as chairman of the committee I should like to say a few words about the work of the special committee. As honourable senators will recall, the committee was established on the last sitting day of the Senate in 1995. The committee was working under an order of the Senate to report on February 1, 1996. I believe it was ordered that we report the bill to the Senate before 9:00 a.m. today. We are a few minutes late in doing so. However, the report has now been presented.

Given the time we had for our study of Bill C-110, members of the committee decided to conduct a focused set of hearings. We heard from over 25 very well-informed, invited witnesses; witnesses deliberately chosen by the committee in order to keep our study focused. I believe we achieved that objective.

I listened attentively during the hearing process. I should like to underscore how greatly impressed I was by the preparation of all members of the committee. I was impressed by the quality of the questions and the interventions by all senators who served on the committee.

It is proper and right to note that there is no question that the two political parties represented in the Senate of Canada believe in the future of a united Canada. While we may differ on the means to achieve this goal, we certainly do not disagree on the importance of the goal itself. I believe this came through clearly in our hearings.

Before we can determine whether Bill C-110 is or is not an appropriate response to the problem of Canadian unity, we must look at the chain of events which resulted in this bill now being considered. As we all know — and I will not dwell on it — the Canadian Constitution, along with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, was patriated without the agreement of the Government of Quebec and its National Assembly. This patriated Constitution had with it an amending formula which did not give to the province of Quebec a veto over future constitutional change that may adversely affect that province.

Since that time, there have been two attempts to enshrine in the Constitution a veto for Quebec. Unfortunately, neither the 1987 Meech Lake Accord nor the Charlottetown accord received the approvals necessary to become part of our Constitution. Most recently, when it looked as though the federalist forces in the Quebec referendum were about to go down in defeat, the Prime Minister of Canada promised that no constitutional change that would affect the powers of Quebec should ever be made without the consent of Quebecers.

On November 29, 1995, the Prime Minister stated:

Quebec has long claimed a veto over amendments to the Canadian Constitution to ensure that it is a full participant in the evolution of the Constitution and to have protection against amendments that could diminish the powers...of the National Assembly and the Government of Quebec.

The Government of Canada recognizes the legitimacy of those demands.

These are the words that gave rise to Bill C-110.

Unfortunately, we have heard other words, for example, the words of the Minister of Justice during our committee hearings, and those of the new Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs, Stéphane Dion, when he was sworn in. Both gentlemen have described Canada as a "country in crisis". Minister Dion graphically described our country as being "in bad shape".

When one listens to the words of the Prime Minister and the words of these two ministers, one is led to the inevitable conclusion that the bill before us is a less than adequate attempt to address these problems.

Let us consider for a few moments the process associated with this bill. If we learned anything from the Meech Lake Accord and the Charlottetown accord, it was that the process is almost as important as the substance in devising constitutional amendments in our country. Above all, the process must be inclusive of all those affected, and in particular those who may believe that their rights are being diminished by any proposed amendment.

The process followed for developing Bill C-110 fails the consultation test. All the witnesses who appeared before us who were either learned in matters of constitutional studies or who believed they might be affected testified that they were not consulted; that is, all witnesses with the exception of the Minister of Justice and officials from his department.

The Honourable Andrew Petter who chairs the National Unity Committee of the Government of British Columbia, the Honourable Stephen Kakfwi, the Minister of Justice and Intergovernmental and Aboriginal Affairs for the Government of the Northwest Territories, the Honourable Alan Nordling of the Government of Yukon, and all the representatives of the aboriginal peoples of Canada who appeared before the committee told us that they were never consulted before this bill was tabled. Minister Petter commented that this lack of consultation was "not the way for the federal government to foster national unity."

The National Chief of the Assembly of First Nations, Ovide Mercredi, was even more outspoken on this point. He stated:

Bill C-110 represents a significant violation of the legal principles guiding Crown conduct with respect to Canada's constitutional and lawful obligations regarding inherent aboriginal and treaty rights. The process being utilized to push this legislation through does not allow for our input nor the input of Canadians generally.

Honourable senators, a serious concern about the lack of consultation was expressed to the committee. This lack of consultation, coupled with the problems created by the questionable wording of the bill, only underscores the suggestion that the bill was cobbled together quickly, without much thought, in order for the government to be seen to be doing something about national unity.

Ms Mary Dawson, Associate Deputy Minister of Justice, in reply to some of my own questions, admitted that no comparative studies were ever done on this model of legislation, and that her department did not have a lot of time to prepare the draft bill.

The Minister of Justice, Mr. Rock, was our very first witness. He let us know that we were now dealing with a Canada of regions, that if we did not like the solutions presented by the bill to the method by which Quebec could secure a veto over constitutional change, we were not to worry.

This bill, the minister assured us, need not be a permanent solution. If some do not like it, well, it is not intended to satisfy everyone anyway.

The minister went on to explain that this bill gives us a modification of the 7-50 amending rule. It operates apart from the Constitution and it really only fetters the federal government by binding ministers of the Crown.

Mr. Rock also attempted to assuage the fears of Canada's aboriginal peoples, stating that amendments to increase their rights would not be subject to the provisions of the bill, but amendments to diminish their rights would be caught by the provisions of the bill. He referred to it as a "durable enhancement" of the amending process. Alas, he was the first and also the last witness to give the bill more than modest support.

Under questioning by our colleague Senator Murray, it became clear that Minister Rock was unsure as to which parts of the Constitution would be affected by this overlay of the amending formula. Senator Rivest wanted to know who gives the consent from the province required under subsection (1) of clause 1 of the bill. Would it be the government, the people, the Legislative Assembly or some other group? This bill seemed to create uncertainty.

Our colleague Senator St. Germain wanted to know how it was that British Columbia, when the bill was first introduced, was not a region and then, lo and behold, it became a region.

Taking Minister Rock at his word that this bill is transitory, that this bill is a bridge to comprehensive reform in the future, Senator Meighen suggested that a sunset clause be added. Such a clause would kill the bill around the time of the next constitutional conference which is mandated for 1997. Mr. Rock did not like this idea. He told us not to "oversell" 1997, for it was just a way station on the road to constitutional redevelopment.

Honourable senators, it also became apparent that this bill created a higher approval hurdle for the proposed constitutional amendments than we have at present. The test of 7 provinces and 50 per cent of the population becomes, under this bill, a test of 7 provinces and 94 per cent of the population.

I must admit that, after our Monday morning session with the minister and his officials, I personally came away with real questions about the potential effect of this bill on future constitutional change in our country. The drafting regarding how provincial consent should be given left many questions in my mind. I was concerned about the bill's effect on Canada as a whole. I was especially concerned about the effect of the bill on Quebec because it does not do what the Prime Minister said it would do, namely, it does not really give a veto to Quebec.

Our colleague Senator MacEachen said it better than any of the witnesses when he tried to explain the limited application of this bill. He said:

I think that it is absolutely necessary to underline again that this limitation —

— namely, the amending formula contained in Bill C-110 —

— is on the executive, not on the Parliament of Canada.

It is a regulation of ministerial behaviour. That is all it is. It does not confer anything on anyone. It guides ministerial behaviour, period.

I agreed with Senator MacEachen in that.

Witnesses who followed the minister — witnesses from the academic community, ministers of the Crown from British Columbia, the two territorial ministers and the aboriginal representatives — raised even more problems with the bill.

My colleagues on the committee and myself were then at that point where we had to weigh the evidence and assess our individual analyses of the bill. In order to draw appropriate conclusions as to the efficacy of this bill, certain tests, it seemed to me, had to be devised. For me, these tests would provide the scale against which we would measure the problems created by the bill as reported by the witnesses and as found during my own study.

I felt two tests would be useful: First, does this bill indeed fulfil the promise made by the Prime Minister of Canada during the referendum campaign?

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I am sorry to interrupt but the honourable senator's 15-minute period is up. Is leave granted for Honourable Senator Kinsella to continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Kinsella: The first test would be whether the bill fulfils the promise made by the Prime Minister, namely, to give Quebec a veto over any future constitutional change which affects it. Second, does the bill advance the state of federal-provincial relations or, if you like, the cause of national unity in our country?

In order to answer the first question, one must look carefully at the bill. Close examination reveals the following problems which directly affect its usefulness as a veto for Quebec. First, the bill does not confer any special powers on the Province of Quebec. It fetters the ability of ministers of the Crown to introduce constitutional amendments in Parliament unless the amendments meet the tests of the bill.

Second, we recognize that any back-bencher, or indeed any honourable member of this house, can still introduce a constitutional amendment which could adversely affect Quebec's powers or its place in the federation.

Third, the bill will make more difficult the attainment of any future constitutional change which could increase the power of Quebec because such a change would be subject to regional veto.

Fourth, there may be a tendency in the rest of Canada to conclude that, with a resolution dealing with distinct society and with this bill, the issues which gave rise to the close vote in the October 30 referendum have been finally addressed and satisfied.

Fifth, this bill is not a constitutional amendment. It is simply an ordinary statute of the federal Parliament and is subject to change by Parliament.

Senator Berntson: A sham.

Senator Kinsella: In my opinion, Bill C-110 is very much less than an adequate response to the commitment made by the Prime Minister of our country. It does not confer on Quebec a constitutionally entrenched veto over constitutional change which directly affects that great province.

My second test in analyzing the evidence on the bill deals with the potential effects this bill may have on federal-provincial relations and on national unity.

In that regard, the Honourable Andrew Petter, Chair of the British Columbia government committee on national unity, believed the bill was less than helpful because it established four classes of provinces. He stated:

This hierarchy of provinces is inherently divisive and ultimately will undermine, not strengthen, the commitment to national unity.

Professor Doug Schmeiser of the University of Saskatchewan, a long-time constitutional negotiator, endorsed Minister Petter's views even though Schmeiser only saw two classes of provinces — those with a veto and those without a veto. Whether or not one believes in the concept of equality of the provinces, in order to change the amending formula one needs the approval of all of the provinces and of the federal Parliament. However, because of opposition to this bill in British Columbia and Quebec, the bill not only fails that test but fails its own test as well, which is more of a paradox.

Further, the bill does not establish the means whereby consent is to be given by the provinces. This is a very serious matter and the subject of one of the three amendments before you. This potentially divisive and inherently confusing matter needs to be addressed.

Honourable senators, the bill leaves it to the federal government to determine when consent has been demonstrated. This leaves the federal government potentially in the position where it can disregard the word of the duly elected government, or go over its head and hold a referendum in a given province. Such an approach offends the principle of federalism as expressed in the current Constitution.

The bill may also be unconstitutional. However, I will leave the in-depth analysis of that topic to others during this debate. Suffice it to say that some of our witnesses, for example, Professors André Tremblay of the University of Montreal and Professor Schmeiser, both held the categorical view that the bill was in difficulty in that regard.

Some argued that it is an attempt to amend the Constitution without following the rules set down in the Constitution. It is a bill which contradicts the constitutional amending formula and could be declared to be inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution and of no force and effect, as provided in section 52 of the Constitution Act, 1982.

I also believe that the method by which this bill was devised is less than helpful to Canadian unity. The lack of consultation by the federal government with those involved in the process must stop. Ignoring those who are intimately involved in the constitutional process does not foster support for even quasi-constitutional initiatives such as this one.

Although the government claims that this measure is a temporary one and can be repealed when a new formula is devised, one witness, the Dean of the Faculty of Law at Queen's University, Professor John Whyte, was of a different view. He advised us that this will be a permanent change to the Constitution. He argued that that is because no province, once given a veto, will want to give it up. He felt that even though the bill only deals with ministers of the Crown, because of party discipline it will have a paralyzing effect on all government members. It will also have a paralyzing effect on future changes to the Constitution.

As Gordon Gibson of British Columbia pointed out, Constitutions should be hard to change, very hard; but change should not be impossible.

I believe that, on balance, honourable senators, having heard all of the evidence, this bill does very little to advance the cause of national unity. However, in trying to assess the realpolitik of our times, and desiring to be constructive in opposition, we should bear in mind the words of another distinguished witness who was extremely helpful to the committee, Mr. Claude Ryan, who stated:

[Translation]

Following your kind invitation, I must first state clearly whether I support or reject Bill C-110. I strongly emphasized that this legislative measure must be of a transitory and temporary nature —

Provided that the ambiguity concerning the conditions related to provincial consent is eliminated, the answer to that question must be in the affirmative.

[English]

With respect to the three amendments that have been brought before this chamber, in seriousness, and as a result of careful study, and from a desire to be supportive and helpful, we believe the bill, as a temporary measure, is salvageable, but only with the three amendments that we have brought forward.

First, we propose a sunset clause. The bill has been represented by the government as temporary. They say it is only temporary, that it is a bridge to a new and more complete answer to national unity that will be brought in by the federal government. Some of us are sceptical; I, by nature, am not. However, I am cautious and I wish to be prudent.

As recently as last week, the government changed the minister in charge of intergovernmental affairs. There is a constitutional conference scheduled for next year. If this bill is designed to be a temporary measure, then let us ensure that it becomes a temporary measure by ordering its demise through a sunset clause. Let us keep the government's feet to the fire, so that the objective and the promise made by the Prime Minister of Canada to the people of Quebec, that there would be a constitutional amendment to ensure that no changes would occur affecting the province of Quebec without that province's consent, will be realistically and seriously acted upon. This bill does not do that.

To allow this bill to stand without a sunset clause would be, in the view of some, to perpetuate a myth. The myth is that there is a constitutional veto at the disposal of these provinces and regions. There is no constitutional amendment; just a policy supported by a statute of a government, all of which is temporary in and of itself.

Second, honourable senators, in a federation, consent to constitutional change should ultimately come from the elected representatives of the people. This is the way in which the 1982 constitutional amending formula is written. It would not be constructive to give the federal government the power under this bill to bypass the provincial legislatures when determining the meaning of consent. Mr. Ryan and Mr. Johnson, strong federalists in the province of Quebec, have been outspoken in this regard.

Therefore, your committee has proposed an amendment establishing that consent must come from a provincial legislature. If a particular province wishes to hold a referendum, it may. Some provinces like to operate this way, and it should be their choice, but at least let us assure the representatives of the people in the provinces that they have the final word in these matters.

Finally, honourable senators, the committee heard great concerns raised by the aboriginal peoples of Canada regarding the potential effect that this bill may have on future constitutional amendments affecting them.

The government has told them that this bill does not negatively affect the aboriginal interests and the process. If that is the case, then there should be no reason to oppose an amendment which puts into effect this guarantee.

Before I close, honourable senators, I do want to mention a matter that was raised at our meeting yesterday by our colleague the Honourable Senator Beaudoin, in which he seemed to have received the support from all members of the committee. Senator Beaudoin proposed that the Senate establish a special committee to deal with matters affecting Canadian unity. That was the subject of the notice of motion which Senator Beaudoin raised earlier this day.

As mandated by the Constitution, a constitutional conference will be held in 1997. It is felt that the Senate is ideally placed to study these issues and to report its findings and make recommendations to Parliament, to the government, and to Canadians.

The Senate is populated by representatives of two major political parties in our country — parties that share the high, non-negotiable value of the future of Canada as a matter of critical importance. The future of a united Canada is a must. Senator Beaudoin's idea has merit. Perhaps we may hear the views of other senators on this topic.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre De Bané: Honourable senators, I welcome the opportunity today to speak at the report stage of Bill C-110. After all the testimony heard during the past two weeks, I think it would be appropriate to recall the context in which Bill C-110 was drafted. I say appropriate, because otherwise a number of considerations, valid and legitimate though they may be in several respects, are not altogether relevant to this debate and may cause us to lose sight of the essence of this bill.

As I pointed out during the debate on second reading, Bill C-110 is intended as part of the federal government's response to the commitments made by the Prime Minister when the referendum on the independence of Quebec was held last October. During the referendum campaign, the Prime Minister committed himself to recognizing Quebec as a distinct society within Canada and to preventing the adoption of any changes affecting the province without the consent of Quebec.

During consideration of Bill C-110, we were offered a range of views. There were those who supported the bill in its present form, while others suggested changes or, and this was the view of the majority, rejected the bill outright.

I must admit I was not convinced by the rationale behind statements that passage of this bill would endanger the future of federal-provincial relations and renewed federalism and, more specifically, relations between the federal government and Quebec.

On the evidence, the danger does not come from this legislation but from the Parti Québécois government in power in Quebec; nor do I subscribe to the rhetoric of those who argue that this measure falls short of Quebec's traditional demands and therefore should not be adopted. If we consider what is currently feasible within the Canadian political context and the federal government's desire to meet its commitments quickly and tangibly, we cannot do otherwise but reject such arguments and support this bill.

I listened carefully to witnesses who suggested amending the bill. I also noted the motions to that effect that were tabled by some of my colleagues. Nevertheless, my conclusion is that the bill is valid and worthwhile in its present form.

I would like to come back to the four aspects that we discussed most frequently in the Senate and which formed of the basis for these motions. First, the constitutionality of the bill; second, whether it would be desirable to introduce a non-derogation clause to protect the rights of aboriginal peoples; third, the procedure according to which a province would express its consent; and fourth, whether it would be useful to have a sunset clause.

A number of witnesses raised the subject of the constitutionality of Bill C-110. In fact, this point was raised in the questions put to the last witness heard by the committee, Associate Deputy Minister of Justice Mary Dawson. Some expressed reservations and even doubts, but most of the constitutional experts heard before the committee who analyzed various arguments that could be brought before the courts to support the constitutionality of the bill concluded that such arguments would outweigh any that would question the bill's constitutionality. That was the opinion of Minister Allan Rock who appeared at the beginning of the committee's proceedings, and I quote:

[English]

The better view is that the legislation is within the constitutional powers of Parliament and is valid as an enactment.

Minister Rock gave three reasons to support his position. First, Bill C-110 does not interfere directly or indirectly with the amending formula contained in the Constitution. The Houses of Parliament remain free to perform their constitutional role in relation to constitutional amendment, giving the federal consent as the Constitution requires.

Second, Bill C-110 is an expression of Parliament's unquestioned authority to establish conditions or procedural requirements, in this case binding ministers of the Crown, in well-defined circumstances and for sound policy reasons.

Third, there is little support for the contention that the bill abrogates some norm or convention of equality of the provinces. The Constitution itself contains no such express principle, nor are there sufficient grounds to suggest that a convention along these lines has developed.

[Translation]

On Tuesday, we heard Mary Dawson, the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice. She contended that the arguments put forward by certain witnesses against the constitutionality of the bill did not hold. She also said that she was satisfied the bill was consistent with the Constitution. I therefore have no hesitation, and I suggest you do likewise, in accepting the opinion of the Minister of Justice and the senior officials of his department, and of most of the experts in constitutional law who passed before us.

I can, in fact, quote the conversation between Senator Murray and Ms Dawson, the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice, at Tuesday's hearing.

[English]

Senator Murray: I have several specific questions. The first has to do with the constitutionality of the bill. It would be very difficult for me to summarize the arguments which have been made by several witnesses to the effect that it is unconstitutional, because they come at it from different angles. You are aware of the arguments which have been made as to its constitutionality. Do you see any merit in the arguments at all?

Ms Dawson: No, I think this bill is constitutional. Much discussion can be had on that question, but I am satisfied that the bill is constitutional.

Senator Murray: Stephen Scott testified that in his opinion this bill is an amendment to the Constitution of Canada under section 44. Do you agree with that statement and does it make any difference?

Ms Dawson: I will answer the second part of the question first. I do not think it makes any difference so I have not worried about it very much. Any amendment made under section 44 is made by an act of Parliament and this is what we are now dealing with, so if it were a section 44 amendment, we are doing it the right way.

I would not have immediately characterized it as a section 44, but I am not sure where the boundaries are and I did not worry about it in this context. It could be.

Senator Murray: And it would not make any difference?

Ms Dawson: I cannot see what difference it would make.

[Translation]

The impact of that bill on aboriginal peoples was discussed by the official opposition.

A number of aboriginal groups came before the committee. We spent a day discussing this issue at length with them. In fact, the Minister of Justice specifically alluded to it in his statement.

[Senator De Bané]

[English]

Amendments to Bill C-110 were suggested by the aboriginal representatives appearing before our committee. One of the amendments called for the inclusion of a non-derogation clause to ensure that the interests of aboriginal peoples are not adversely affected. The most convincing explanation for why a non-derogation clause in favour of Canada's aboriginal people is not necessary in order to preserve flexibility in amending the Constitution to add to aboriginal rights was offered by Ms Mary Dawson, Associate Deputy Minister of Justice.

As Ms Dawson testified, Bill C-110 does not cover amendments that derogate from the powers, rights and privileges of a province which are subject to the 7-50 amending formula. Since any amendment to add to aboriginal rights, depending on the wording, could entail taking away from provincial rights, such amendments would not come within the scope of the bill and would not be subject to the regional vetoes.

On the other hand, the bill would decrease the likelihood of an amendment being introduced that would take away from existing aboriginal rights, because such an amendment would not be one in which a province may exercise a veto under sections 41 or 43, or may express its dissent under section 38(3) of the Constitution Act of 1982, and therefore would not fall within the exceptions of the bill.

The federal government would have to have the support of the five regions of Canada before introducing a constitutional amendment to the detriment of aboriginal rights.

[Translation]

Last Tuesday, during Ms Dawson's testimony before the committee, there was an interesting exchange between Senator Carstairs, Senator Murray and Ms Dawson on this issue. I invite the honourable senators to read the transcript of that exchange between the two senators and Ms Dawson.

The other issue raised by the official opposition is the expression of consent by the provinces. The question is whether provincial consent can be given only by a legislative assembly, as is the case under the amending formula provided in the Constitution Act of 1982, or if, as suggested by the rather vague wording of Bill C-110, that provincial consent can be obtained through other means.

Several witnesses expressed their view on that issue. Some asked that the conditions relating to consent be clarified. When asked whether those who drafted the bill had deliberately chosen ambiguous terms, the Minister of Justice and the senior officials of his department said that the intention had been to use a flexible wording.

While there is no doubt that a province will be able to express itself through its institutions, namely its government and legislative assembly, in very rare instances, this flexible wording could allow the federal government to seek the consent of a province through other means, including a public consultation by way of a referendum. Let us not forget that while our country is a federation, it is first and foremost a democracy.

Sovereignty is in the hands of the people. Sure, we are a federation, but we are first of all a democracy and we cannot blame the government for going directly to the people, under exceptional circumstances, so as to get their point of view and solve a deadlock between the Canadian government and a provincial government.

Finally, on the question of a "sunset clause," several witnesses spoke of such a clause to be included in the legislation, by virtue of which the act would cease to be in effect at a specific date. Others indicated their receptiveness to that idea, so much so that we have a proposed amendment which would abrogate the legislation on December 31, 1997. First of all, let me state that a sunset clause is not in the least necessary for the bill to be properly applied. Since this is a standard bill, I would add that Parliament has all of the authority available to it to amend or abrogate the legislation whenever it sees fit.

More fundamentally, a sunset clause whereby the legislation would be in effect only until the end of December, 1997 might mean that, if there is no further legislative initiative on the part of the federal government —

The Hon. the Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt you, Senator De Bané, but your fifteen minutes are up.

Does Senator De Bané have permission to continue, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator De Bané: All this idea of a sunset clause would do would be to give Quebec a veto that would be taken away in December 1997.

In this atmosphere of uncertainty surrounding the sunset clause, one of our witnesses, Mr. Claude Ryan, reminded committee members of the old adage "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

Let us therefore keep the veto within this legislation in effect, so long as the right of veto has not been entrenched in the Constitution. We already have the deadline of 1997 in the Constitution and all of the evidence points to the procedures for constitutional amendment being reviewed at that time. I believe it is preferable to leave the decision-makers with a certain leeway, given the nature of the ups and downs of politics, and we have learned from experience, I think, that government gets the best results when there is no pre-determined deadline.

In fact, in purely practical terms, we must not rule out the possibility that, after the 1997 conference and the elections whose outcome we cannot predict with certainty, it will not be a suitable time for Parliament to pass legislation that would keep the veto powers in effect in order to offset the impact of the proposed clause.

For all these reasons, I oppose introducing a sunset clause into Bill C-110.

In closing, this bill is effective and realistic, and it honours the commitments made by the Prime Minister during the last referendum. It is also an important element of the federal government's overall strategy to resolve the country's constitutional difficulties in the near future, with the help and the cooperation of the provinces, we hope. I am satisfied that the bill is consistent with the Constitution, that it in no way takes away from the rights of the native peoples and that it will be effective without a sunset clause or clarification of the terms of provincial consent. For this reason, honourable senators, I ask you not to support the amendments proposed and to pass the bill in its present form.

I would like to say a few words as the senator for Quebec in this house. A look at the constitutional reform of 1982 obviously reveals many improvements, which were included precisely to respond to the claims French Canada had made since 1867. They cover the inclusion of both languages in the Constitution; the matter of French schools across Canada; equalization payments; devolution to the provinces in the area of natural resources; the fundamental indissociable rights of human dignity that no government should take away from its citizens; and the rights of speech, conscience and assembly and also language rights; all these enshrined in the Canadian Constitution.

No doubt the failure of the 1982 legislation lay in the fact that its amending formula deprived Quebec of certain protective measures. This is what this legislation undertakes. This, therefore, honourable senators, is why I ask you to pass this bill without amendment.

Hon. Jean-Claude Rivest: Honourable senators, given the importance and significance of Bill C-110 with regard to national unity, I would like to talk to you briefly on this major piece of legislation, which, in my view, hardly measures up to the basic problem facing this country, namely the troubling issue of national unity.

In introducing this bill, to refer to commitments presumably made by the honourable Prime Minister of Canada during the referendum campaign, be it regarding distinct society or a Quebec veto, is to forget something much more important in real life and in dealing in practical terms with the situation, and that is the fact that, for many years now, the message that Quebec sent to Canada as a whole, and which was taken up by the federalist side in the referendum debate, is not so much to recognize the existence of a distinct society per se, or to give Quebec veto power over constitutional amendments. In any case, these initiatives appear to be only a way to correct the tragic mistake made by a segment of the Canadian public opinion in rejecting the Meech Lake Accord, since these two notions were formally recognized, not only politically but also constitutionally.

As we know, and for obvious reasons, some people in Canada opposed the conclusion and ratification of the Meech Lake Accord. Both measures initiated by the honourable Prime Minister seem to have been intended as some kind of mild remedy to the tragic mistake made at that time. Ever since the failure of Meech, national unity has become a source of increasing concern, expressed in more and more tragic terms, when we think about the impact it will have not only in Quebec but also across Canada.

What was promised, what Quebecers and all Canadians saw when they rallied in Montreal to show their love for Quebec and their commitment to keeping this country united, was that the Canadian government was expected to come up with a real plan to change the nature, configuration and evolution of this country.

As mentioned by Senator Kinsella and pointed out by others to the committee, a motion to recognize Quebec's distinct society and Bill C-110, which makes the federal veto rest not on a constitutional basis at all but rather on a purely statutory basis, were introduced in Parliament as a result.

This bill, of course, is characterized by this government's total lack of initiative in light of the seriousness of the problem we must face. In fact, in realpolitik terms, according to a recent poll conducted in Quebec, far from weakening after the passing of a distinct society motion or the introduction of Bill C-110, Quebecers' support for sovereignty just passed the 50 per cent mark and reached — this is approximate, since this is only a poll — 52 per cent.

Honourable senators, if the Canadian government thinks that these two specific measures meet the expectations of the Quebec people and the desire for change expressed not only by those Quebecers who voted Yes but also by a very large proportion of those who voted No, it is sadly mistaken. Quebec's political reality clearly shows that the initiatives taken so far by the Canadian government are totally artificial and inadequate.

During the proceedings of the committee studying Bill C-110, the Minister of Justice, to whom this situation was pointed out, said that we should not look at Bill C-110 separately but as part of an overall plan that, unfortunately, has not yet been disclosed to the House of Commons, the Senate and the Canadian people.

We are being told today that cabinet ministers are meeting to consider such a plan. How can members of the House of Commons and honourable senators appreciate the relative merits of Bill C-110 as part of an overall plan for change of which we have not been informed? Clearly, in addressing the problem of national unity, the Canadian government is resorting to improvisation, which we, as parliamentarians, feel it is extremely important to denounce.

This kind of improvisation in today's serious circumstances threatens to compromise the future of our country, Canada. The government must bear a very great responsibility in this.

In particular, Bill C-110 was described as a purely statutory measure that had absolutely nothing to do with the constitutional guarantees that Quebec and other regions of Canada have always demanded to protect the rights and privileges of the member states of the federation, the provinces. This first, obvious limitation of Bill C-110 shows just how wide the gap is between the measure being applied and the situation to be corrected.

Second, some experts heard by the committee also said that this measure may be unconstitutional in that it sets a new process for exercising the federal veto power by subjecting it to regional vetoes.

Is that or is that not an indirect amendment to the current amending formula, as provided in the Constitution Act? There are doubts as to whether such a bill would hold up to a court challenge. How can the Senate and the House of Commons pass a bill that may not stand up to scrutiny, under the Constitution? What would the veto granted to British Columbia, Ontario or Quebec mean if, when exercised, its constitutionality could be challenged by someone in Canada?

The primary object of a veto is to be absolutely sound from a constitutional point of view. However, a doubt exists. Some claim, as Senator De Bané suggested, that such a process would be constitutional. Other experts have told us that it would be unconstitutional. From a legal point of view, the only criterion that applies when a veto is either being contemplated or is actually given, is its soundness. We do not have that sense, as regards Bill C-110.

How can we associate ourselves with such a measure? Another extremely important point raised is that the provision granting such a veto to Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia does not specify whether that veto is to be exercised by the people or by the government of these provinces, and of the prairie and maritime provinces, based on the proportions set in the bill. Senator De Bané tells us that the wording is purposely vague; that, ultimately, sovereignty must lie in the hands of the people, and that we might even have a public consultation process when it comes to amending the Constitution.

This is all very well in theory, but we must not forget that we have a federal system in Canada. The division of sovereignty between the federal and provincial governments is such that where constitutional change is concerned — according to our current amending formula — this constitutional responsibility has been given to our federal and provincial institutions. In other words, veto rights and the right to make amendments are prerogatives of the House of Commons or the provincial legislatures.

If some provinces, or even the Canadian government, decide to involve the general public in this process, they are free to do so. In a federal system, however, what right does the Canadian government have to decide unilaterally, since it shares sovereignty with the provinces, that in a given province not the legislative assembly but the people will decide? This incongruous aspect of the bill was, in fact, condemned by Mr. Ryan.

Some provinces, especially British Columbia, have already decided that in constitutional matters, as is their prerogative, a referendum will be held to authorize their legislative assembly to exercise its constitutional amending powers. This is entirely in accordance with the spirit and the very nature of our federal system. British Columbia will decide that its citizens will authorize their legislative assembly to act. It is not up to the Canadian government to decide how each entity of the federation will exercise its legislative power to amend the Constitution. That is the nature of the federal system.

The proposal set forth in Bill C-110 reflects a concept of how our federal system works that has caused so many problems, especially in Quebec. This concept of federalism is almost like trusteeship federalism. The Canadian government knows what is best for all member states of the federation!

That is not what a federal system is about. The division of sovereignty between the central government and the provincial governments must take precedence. In their respective jurisdictions, the provincial governments and federal government are fully sovereign. That is how a federal system works. Basically, we must go back to that concept, because that is how it was when Canada began. That is what we must reinstate.

Honourable senators, people often ask: "What does Quebec want in constitutional matters?" Basically, this is what Quebecers want the federal government and Canada, as a whole, to respect concerning the operation of our federal system.

Quebecers will make a decision on the future of our country based on three principles. First, Quebec will ask to be named and acknowledged as a part of this country.

Of course, the distinct society we proposed in the Meech Lake Accord met this expectation. If people say that Quebec plays a major and probably much too great a role in the evolution of this country, why not simply recognize it in the Constitution once and for all? It is a question of acknowledging the contribution of the people of Quebec to the Canadian identity per se.

If any region of Canada were to separate from the rest of the country, Canada would suffer a great loss. If Quebec leaves the Canadian federation, to a large extent this will be the end of one of the main features of this country: that is its linguistic and cultural duality. Quebec's contribution is unique and exceptional not only in linguistic terms but also because Quebec's linguistic reality affects Canadian culture as a whole. When our artists, our authors, write a novel or produce a play in French, they do so not in the French or Swiss style but in the Quebec and Canadian style. Their contribution to this country is unique, and Quebecers want this to be recognized.

Second — and there is a direct connection here — this country was created to give a government to those who were then called "Canadiens," in other words to French Canadians. Quebecers want a real government that would be respected and never questioned. They want the powers of the Quebec National Assembly to be enshrined in the Constitution. However, constitutional guarantees are not enough.

We want the powers of our National Assembly to be secure — not all the powers, because we share some with the Parliament of Canada. The Canadian government serves Quebec well. We want our powers to be politically secure. We will have to examine how the federal spending power is exercised in terms of the development of Canadian standards to ensure that the National Assembly's political powers are not modified. We want the powers of our National Assembly to be secure without completely changing the structure and composition of this country.

We can see, honourable senators, regarding these two criteria, how pathetic the measures contained in Bill C-110 are. Its limitations and constraints were highlighted by, among others, Senator Kinsella, in regard to the nature of the problem facing Canada and Quebec in maintaining national unity.

To ask us, as Quebecers, to associate ourselves with this initiative, although it is not because the bill is unjust and totally bad in itself, is to send a message to all Canadians — who are showing some signs of nervousness in this matter — that could be very disastrous for the future.

By passing, in the Parliament of Canada, a resolution on the distinct society and a bill on a statutory veto for Quebec, the government is sending the message that Quebec's demands and concerns have been met.

What room to manoeuvre will federalists in Quebec, who believe in the future of this country, have to try to convince everyone in Quebec and Canada that there are a lot more important things to do to restore our country's true meaning and its cohesiveness, which will enable Quebec, Canada and all the other regions of Canada to cope with the exceptional challenge facing us as a country and entity? That is the urgent message I wish to pass on to the Canadian government: to do a lot more responsible things which help build the country rather than simply suggesting secondary measures, not to say stalling tactics, which contain, in their very wording, flaws that have been clearly highlighted by the proposed amendments.

[English]

Hon. Sharon Carstairs: Honourable senators, we are today, as we will be tomorrow, debating an important bill. It sets a tone. As we have heard from Senator Rivest, it is not enough, and much more needs to be done. However, what we have to deal with today is the bill itself. We have to understand its background, from whence it came, and understand where it will lead us in the future.

I should like all honourable senators to think back to October of 1995 when the early days of the referendum campaign seemed to be going well for the federalist side. However, an event occurred which none of us expected: There was a change of leadership on the other side. That change necessitated a need to change the strategy of the No side.

As a result, the Prime Minister gave a speech in which he made some promises to the people of the province of Quebec. Essentially, he indicated three things: He said that, in so far as it was possible for him to act, Quebec would be recognized as a distinct society. He said that, in so far as it was possible for him to act, Quebec would be given a veto. He also said that changes would be made in the distribution of powers.

I say "how" he could act because, as honourable senators know, prime ministers cannot act alone on the constitutional file. In order to send a signal quickly, because a signal was required, the Prime Minister had to do certain things over which he had some control. I suggest that is why he proposed the resolution which he did in the House of Commons. He understood that, indeed, he could not get it through this chamber without the support of senators. It was senators who said that they wanted to debate that resolution in this chamber. It was then brought into this chamber, where it was passed.

Bill C-110, a very simple bill, was then introduced. The bill states that no minister of the Crown will introduce in the House of Commons any amendment to the Constitution which does not have the approval of Quebec, British Columbia, Ontario, and at least two provinces in the Atlantic and two in the prairies.

The Minister of Human Resources Development at the time, the Honourable Lloyd Axworthy, then introduced Bill C-111 into the House of Commons, which bill changed the way in which manpower training would be controlled by the federal government.

Were these three measures adequate? No. Were they perfect? No. Were they inclusive enough? No. However, they were a beginning, a start.

At the outset, I want to clearly state how much I appreciate the debate and the interchanges we have had over the last two weeks. The Senate has a different and unique way of debating issues. In my view, it is one that is most welcome.

• (1130)

We heard at first, for example, from some that the bill is unconstitutional. We must deal with that aspect first because, clearly, we cannot pass a bill in this chamber that is unconstitutional if we know it to be such.

Honourable senators, there was certainly some constitutional opinion that Bill C-110 is unconstitutional, but the balance of opinion was clearly that it is a constitutional piece of legislation. Perhaps the most interesting exchange for me came from the representative of the province of British Columbia. I thank Mr. Petter for attending because he was the only one from the provinces who did. We had representatives from the territories, but representatives of other provincial governments, although invited, chose not to attend.

Mr. Petter, of course, argued that Bill C-110 is unconstitutional because it puts a layer on top of the present constitutional amending formula. I was interested in that opinion because I knew of the referenda legislation in the province of British Columbia that prohibits the government of British Columbia from introducing in the British Columbia legislature a constitutional amendment that has not been earlier submitted to a referendum. If the votes in that referendum are 50 per cent plus one opposed, the provincial government may not then introduce the amendment in the British Columbia legislature. In my view, that is far more of a layering of the constitutional process than that proposed in Bill C-110. Mr. Petter, of course, argued that that was not unconstitutional, but that what Bill C-110 will do is unconstitutional.

We then heard from Andrew Heard of Simon Fraser University, who was remarkably consistent. I admired him for that, and said so. He thought both approaches were unconstitutional. That is at least a fair argument to make because if one is true, then certainly the other is true. The balance of the legal opinion we received on this issue was that we are dealing with a piece of legislation that is constitutional.

Honourable senators, today we are dealing specifically with a report submitted by the committee, a report on division which recommends amendments. Do these amendments give the federalists in the province of Quebec a greater comfort level? I suggest that they do not, because anything seeking to amend this legislation will just make the separatists in the province of Quebec chortle. They already believe the bill to be wrong, and claim that it does not mean anything. They have said that. They reject it outright. Can you imagine what fun they will have over this particular legislation if we now attempt to amend it, even though they rejected it in the first instance?

We heard from many during our committee sessions that this bill will make the amendment process of our constitution just that much more difficult. I agree. I think Senator Murray and I, having in this case a unique common mind, prefer a situation in which just Quebec is given a veto. However, I, for one, recognize that that is not politically saleable in this country.

Yes, Bill C-110 makes the amendment of our Constitution much more difficult. By instituting regional vetoes in addition to the rule of 7 out of 10 provinces representing 50 per cent of the population, we have in fact gone from 7-10-50 to 7-10 and 92.2 per cent of the population. Yes, it is more difficult.

Honourable senators, I think there is a great fallacy abroad in the land — that is, that we make constitutional amendments on an everyday basis. Constitutional amendments are rare; they do not happen often.

Having spent the vast majority of my life as a history teacher, I asked my researcher to take a look at the American Constitution and to tell me exactly how many amendments there had been in the 200-year history of that country, and what impact they have had. It turns out that there have been 27 amendments to the American Constitution since 1783, 16 of which took place in the last century. There have been 11 in this century, but really only 10, because one introduced prohibition and the other repealed prohibition. I found it fascinating that the last amendment to the American Constitution was passed in 1992. It dealt with congressional salaries, and it took 203 years to pass in the United States.

Yes, honourable senators, Bill C-110 will make constitutional amendment more difficult but, at the same time, I think it is essential to recognize the Quebec veto. However, the reality in Canadian society is that if one recognizes the Quebec veto, then Ontario will demand a veto by virtue of the size of its population, and, as we quickly learned, so too will British Columbia.

One specific amendment about which we heard a great deal during our committee sessions is the so-called consensus issue. How can a federal government determine whether the people of a province support a particular amendment to the Constitution if that determination is not made by way of a vote in a particular provincial legislature? Let us not confuse Bill C-110 with the amendment process to the Canadian Constitution. That amendment process will still require every single provincial legislature to pass such an amendment, or 7 out of 10 of them to pass such an amendment, in order for that amendment to become part of the constitutional law of Canada. Bill C-110 says that the federal government will not introduce an amendment into the House of Commons. A minister of the Crown will not introduce an amendment unless the government has ensured that there is consensus.

Honourable senators, let us take a hypothetical situation and assume that Alberta refuses to introduce an amendment into her legislature. She absolutely refuses. She has 59 per cent of the population of the prairie region; hence, without the support of Alberta, the federal government cannot act. The amendment has the support of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, but it does not have the support of Alberta because Alberta's government will not introduce the amendment into its legislature, nor will it abide by its own legislation and act by way of a referendum.

Honourable senators, if the amendment proposed by the opposition passes, it would absolutely tie the hands of the federal government in that they could not consult with the people of Alberta to see if a consensus existed. They could not introduce an amendment in Alberta — Alberta would still have to do that — but they could then introduce it in the House of Commons. Therefore, in my opinion the amendment which the Conservatives have suggested is meant to take away any flexibility that the federal government might have under Bill C-110. I do not think that is a positive accomplishment.

The second amendment I wish to deal with is the one relating to the sunset clause repealing the act on December 31, 1997. A number of individuals proposed a sunset clause, but none of them proposed that it would be December 31, 1997. John Whyte from Queen's University suggested the year 2000; Patrick Monahan said five years; Professor Meekison said five years. None of those suggestions reflect the narrowness of the amendment that has been proposed by the Conservatives in this chamber today.

Honourable senators, I must say that I do not like sunset clauses because I think they create an unnecessary pressure.

From my experience in another role, I have learned that provincial governments are averse to such pressure being imposed upon them; it reduces their flexibility. They will not take kindly to the idea that they must do something by December 31, 1997. A conference must be held in April of 1997, but it is highly unlikely that they will be able to reach a consensus by the end of that conference and, if they did, many legislatures in this country do not have a fall term. Unless they call a special term, they will not necessarily be able to get that legislation through.

I do not see the value of a sunset clause. Indeed, I accept Claude Ryan's logic on this. A sunset clause is not a positive; it is a negative. It will be considered a backward step because the message it sends to the people of Quebec is that they can have a veto for a year and a few months, but that we do not intend it to apply in the long term. I do not consider that to be an achievement.

The issue which gave me the greatest difficulty and the greatest concern was that concerning the aboriginal peoples. Will their powers be diminished as a result of this legislation? Will they be enhanced? Will they remain unchanged? We heard very eloquently from our aboriginal leadership that, in their view, their powers would be diminished. This bill would make it more difficult for them to achieve a constitutional amendment which would entrench the rights of self-government in the Canadian Constitution. I personally believe those rights are already entrenched, but we have never had a constitutional challenge nor a response in that regard. I would thank this government for acting as if those rights are entrenched.

Still the question exists. The aboriginal people argued that if the requirement of 7-10-50 was changed to be, in essence, 7-10-92, it would be more difficult to entrench the rights of self-government in the Canadian Constitution. I was most interested in Ms Mary Dawson's testimony with respect to the impact of this legislation on our aboriginal people. I was particularly concerned about section 38(3) of the Canadian Constitution.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I hesitate to interrupt Senator Carstairs, but her 15-minute period is up. Is leave granted that she may continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Carstairs: Section 38(3) is the provision in the amending formula which states that provinces can opt out if their legislative powers or their propriety rights or the privileges of the government of the province has been affected.

It is very difficult for me to believe that we could have any rational aboriginal self-government that would not impact on the propriety rights and the legislative powers of provinces. If it did not impact, then there would be no new rights for our aboriginal people. If there are no new rights for our aboriginal people, then what is self-government all about?

Section 38(3) gives to every single province in this country the right to opt out. Self-government will mean nothing if provinces can opt out. No one argues that section 38(3) is changed by this bill because that section requires unanimous consent. That provision cannot be changed, and this bill has no effect upon it.

Sections 35 and 35(1) recognize aboriginal rights in the present Constitution and guarantee that, if changes are made to section 91.24, then constitutional conferences must be held, and aboriginal people must be there. Those sections are not changed by this bill.

This bill takes an almost-neutral position for aboriginal people. On the one hand, there is a benefit because this bill will make it more difficult to take powers away from our aboriginal people by requiring a formula of 7-10-92.2 per cent. On the other hand, it will be more difficult to give them more power. The balancing effect, I would suggest, is a neutral one.

I cannot accept the amendments as proposed opposite. They will weaken the bill. A strong signal must be given to Quebec that the Prime Minister's commitments will be fulfilled in their entirety. Then we can begin the new process of ensuring that Quebec remains a part of our country.

[Translation]

Hon. Gérald-A. Beaudoin: Honourable senators, I would like to comment on our amendments briefly. Senator Kinsella has spelled out very clearly the reasons for our amendments on the aboriginal issue, and on section 91.24 of the Constitution Act 1867, and on sections 25, 35 and 35.1 of the Constitution Act, 1982. I have nothing to add to his comments.

I would like to deal with the other two amendments, including the one on the sunset clause. The French equivalent of that, in commercial and international law, is "clause d'extinction" and not "clause crépusculaire," a phrase I always had reservations about.

Furthermore, I would like to talk briefly about the consent of the provincial legislatures. Let us deal first with the sunset clause. Should this bill we want to amend be passed, it would necessarily be a temporary measure. In April 1997, the Prime Minister of Canada has to meet with his provincial counterparts to review the amending formula. He has an absolute obligation to do so. It is imperative. The whole part of the Constitution Act, 1982 on the amending formula has to be reviewed.

I think Quebec is not adequately protected as far as representation in the Senate and the creation of new provinces are concerned, and a better protection of its representation in the Supreme Court of Canada is in order. Quebec already enjoys a fair amount of protection for its representation in the Supreme Court, but legal experts have raised doubts about the protection provided by section 41 of the Constitution Act, 1982.

I think we should already be preparing for that 1997 conference. It is not an easy task, because the amending formula is always a very difficult issue in federal states. We should get down to work as soon as possible.

Intellectuals and experts have already been discussing that for a few weeks. They have been talking about a plan A and a plan B. The first one concerns constitutional amendments, and the second one deals with what has to be done should Quebec ever secede. People with a great deal of experience, like Gordon Robertson, Keith Spicer and many others, have made outstanding contributions to the debate and given us food for thought.

[English]

My opinion is that parliamentarians should be involved right now, starting with honourable senators. I would like it if we put the emphasis on plan A rather than on plan B. Although both plans are important, I hope that plan B will never apply. Therefore, with respect to the sunset clause, the pressure will be on the first ministers, on parliamentarians and others to find the solution, a constitutional one, not only a legislative one.

[Senator Carstairs]

[Translation]

Quebecers need to see that constitutional changes are possible. We have seen that in the referendum we nearly lost. The distinct society and the amending formula are the focal point of constitutional change. I feel we must give Quebecers constitutional protection in the areas they consider vital: language, culture, civil law, the amending formula. Their place in major Canadian institutions must also be assured.

The question of constitutionality was raised before our committee. Personally, I have serious doubts about the constitutionality of Bill C-110. We have a constitutional formula that is already complex. Added to it are a legislative formula, a statutory formula, a statutory veto. I understand why the Prime Minister and the government did so.

However, I have some doubts about the approach, and I am absolutely sure that if the government changed its mind, if it were to table a resolution, that action by the government would be perfectly valid because, in any conflict between the Constitution and Bill C-110, the Constitution would take precedence. Section 52 of the Constitution Act, 1982 is very clear on this.

There were mixed opinions on the constitutional issue among the experts who appeared before us. The debate on constitutionality was, however, in favour of the sunset clause we have proposed. Let us find an amending formula that is constitutional in nature and will satisfy Quebec and Canada as soon as possible.

There has been much referendum talk in our country in recent months, perhaps even years. It must be kept in mind that the referendum is not part of the amending formula. A consultative referendum may be worthwhile; I am not against that. However when you start to mix referendums and amending formulas, in some cases there may be a danger of failure, which we would do well to avoid. Are we heading in the right direction by adding to an already complex amending formula both provincial and federal referendums? Here again, with the proposed amendments, I feel this is acceptable.

Second, I should like to look at the matter of consent by the provincial legislatures. Do you remember November 1981? It is part of Canadian history. There are two interpretations, I know. However, an important incident occurred.

Claude Ryan, who appeared before our committee, put considerable emphasis on consent by the National Assembly of Quebec and the legislative assemblies of the other provinces.

Daniel Johnson, who did not appear before our committee, but who gave press conferences, put considerable emphasis on consent by the legislative assemblies.

In my opinion, they are right. Ours is a federal and parliamentary system. These are two basic criteria. Powers are shared between two levels of government. Amendment powers in our system, however, lie with the provincial legislative assemblies and the two federal Houses.

I think they are quite right to insist on this second amendment. Some will say: Yes, but the Australians have an excellent referendum amendment formula.

I remember that, with the Pepin-Robarts commission, a referendum amendment formula accepted in the country's four main regions was proposed. It was not accepted. We came back to our basic parliamentary system.

We must not forget that a referendum is always an option. The federal and provincial governments can always hold a referendum, provided it is simply advisory. I am beginning to have strong doubts about certain referendums that prevent a government or a provincial legislature from speaking if the referendum is not positive.

The federal government can always hold a referendum if it deems one appropriate. I consider Claude Ryan's argument to have more respect for the federal system. I think that our amendment, which requires the approval of the legislative assembly, wins out over the government proposal.

In closing, I would like to say a few words about spending power. There is no doubt in my mind that there must be guidelines on federal spending. There is no way around it. There is no doubt in my mind that we must change our Constitution in cultural terms.

Quebec has a very specific role to play in this area. There are, we must not forget, three basic elements to a federal system: the division of powers, the interpretation given it — thus the importance of the makeup of the Supreme Court — and the way it is changed — the amending formula. This is the heart of federalism.

If Quebec feels itself protected in the major central institutions and in the amending formula, and if the Constitution recognizes its distinct nature, it will not, in my opinion, leave Canada.

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I believe an agreement has been reached between the two sides that we will adjourn from twelve o'clock until two o'clock. We will resume from where we stand now in this matter.

I should like to advise you as well that I plan to have a reception this afternoon in honour of our new senator, Senator Maheu. It will be held in my chambers at five o'clock, or immediately following the adjournment should it be later than five o'clock. I would ask honourable senators to remind their colleagues who are not here. It will therefore take place at five o'clock if we have adjourned before then. If we adjourn after five o'clock, it will be at the adjournment. I leave the Chair to return at two o'clock.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

[Translation]

• (1400)

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier: Honourable senators, Bill C-110 before us today has certain political merits but no constitutional pretensions. The bill is a statute of the Parliament of Canada and can be repealed or amended as Parliament sees fit.

It is important to remember that only the House of Commons has an absolute veto in constitutional matters. By tabling Bill C-110, the government has decided to lend its veto to the regions of this country, of which there are five, in the event of proposals for constitutional change.

In effect, the federal government is putting in place a set of criteria that will guide the future use of its own veto power. It is a discipline the federal government imposes on itself by giving Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia, the Atlantic provinces and the prairies guarantees that no constitutional amendments will be proposed without their consent in areas where the provinces have no veto or the right to opt out. This veto applies to changes in national institutions like the Senate, to the creation of new provinces and to certain changes in the division of powers.

The Prime Minister made this political commitment at the end of the referendum campaign, in response to the wishes of Quebecers. It meant providing guarantees that, in the future, no decision on constitutional change would be made without their consent. We should recall that, since 1867, no major constitutional changes have been made without the consent of the provinces, including Quebec. The repatriation of the Constitution in 1982 left considerable bitterness in its wake which the Prime Minister is now trying to remove with Bill C-110.

Some have claimed that the bill does not constitute an adequate response to the expectations of Quebecers. We would like Quebec to support this initiative, but unfortunately, as you know, the present government of Quebec is opposed to any constitutional talks. Clearly, at this time the only way for the federal government to honour its commitments quickly was to table a bill guaranteeing Quebec its veto. This bill is a positive step, and indicates that the federal government is open and prepared to respond to the expectations of Quebecers.

For its part, the Conservative opposition put forward three amendments, which are currently being debated at report stage. The first amendment is aimed at defining provincial consent, the second at exempting Native people and their rights from possible enforcement of the act, and the third at including a sunset clause that would invalidate the bill after December 31, 1997.

I must say that when Bill C-110 was tabled, I myself considered the possibility of amending the bill to include a sunset clause. I even asked the Law Clerk of the Senate to draft such an amendment. However, after hearing the evidence, I concluded that instead of improving the bill, such an amendment may restrict and reduce its scope. Including a sunset clause would send Quebec and the other provinces the wrong signal and make them question the federal government's political will to honour its commitments in the future. Should the next constitutional conference preserve the status quo, Quebec and the other regions would be back at square one without a veto.

I am surprised that the Conservative senator from Quebec agreed to this amendment, especially since, on January 22, Professor Benoît Pelletier, from the Faculty of Law of the University of Ottawa, told the committee reviewing Bill C-110, and I quote:

— I do not think it is necessary to include a sunset clause, especially since, as Senator Rivest pointed out, the main purpose of the bill is to offer some protection. In my opinion, it would be somewhat inconsistent to boast about the protection and then turn around and specify when it will end.

On January 25, Professor Steven Scott of McGill University expressed the same opinion, and I quote:

[English]

With a sunset clause attached, those who might otherwise have some reassurance from it would say, "Well, what sort of reassurance is it now with a sunset clause? It does not even have the permanency of an ordinary act of Parliament..."

...if I were sitting and making the legislation, I would probably not add the sunset clause, on the grounds that, as it is, it is sufficiently diluted not to create undue complications for the constitutional process.

[Translation]

Those of us who have been involved in the constitutional negotiations over these past 15 years know how difficult it is in Canada to have constitutional amendments passed. By proposing and accepting a sunset clause, the honourable senators of the opposition are pinning all their hopes on the next constitutional conference without leaving themselves any way out in the event that it fails.

How is the consent of the provinces to be read or received? Our Conservative colleagues, who supported the said amendment to exclude aboriginal peoples and aboriginal rights from the operation of Bill C-110, were of the opinion that the provinces' consent should be limited to that of provincial legislatures.

On November 30, 1995, Justice Minister Allan Rock told the House of Commons committee the following:

It will be up to the federal government to determine what this phrase means every time a new situation arises. Depending on the circumstances, the federal government might interpret as consent, for example, an expression of consent by the provincial government of the day, a resolution of the legislative assembly or a direct expression of the population's agreement through a referendum.

It is therefore obvious that, since it cannot predict the future, the federal government saw fit to exercise caution by giving itself some leeway. Everyone will agree, however, that it would be political suicide for the federal government not to authorize a constitutional amendment that has been consented to by a majority of the population of certain provinces.

In this respect, Benoît Pelletier, a law professor at Ottawa University, theorized that:

Should the Parliament of Canada and the Government of Canada feel that the government of the province in question no longer has the support of its population— in exercising the veto that it has and that it may use at its discretion, why would Parliament not hold a referendum in an attempt, not to break the deadlock — because, again, the legislative assembly will always have the final say, the provincial legislature will always have the final say in passing the resolution it considers appropriate — but to impress upon the government of the province in question that the course it is taking is not the course its population wishes to take — Holding a referendum is just one way of confirming provincial consent because a province is not only a government, not only a legislative assembly, but also a population.

[English]

Concerning the question of the aboriginal peoples and the amendment which is before us, it is an important one where constitutional amendments are concerned, and all members of the committee agreed on that point. The witnesses gave good presentations with convincing, substantive arguments in support of their positions.

As Senator Carstairs explained, all of us wanted to be fair and just with our First Nations. Aboriginal leaders believe that Bill C-110 will impede or impair their justifiable aspirations to full recognition of their rights.

The majority of those who appeared before the committee did not accept the government's assurances that their rights under sections 25 and 35 of the Constitution Act, 1982 and under section 91.24 of the Constitution Act, 1867 were protected.

In her testimony on January 30, 1996, Ms Mary Dawson, the Assistant Deputy Minister of Justice, made some reassuring comments. When asked about the need for a non-derogation clause which would ensure that aboriginal rights were not adversely affected, she said:

It would be harder to take an aboriginal right away under this bill than under the current situation. Taking away aboriginal rights would fall under the 7-50 rule. It would not fall under the exemptions in the bill because it would not fall under sections 41, 43 or 38(3) of the Constitution. All I was saying is that the bill would apply. Given that the bill puts additional impediments in the way of changing the Constitution, it would therefore make it more difficult to take away aboriginal rights.

As to adding rights, Ms Dawson stated:

That is the converse of adding rights rather than taking them away. I am suggesting that adding rights would, by and large, be covered by section 38(3) and therefore would not be in the ambit of the bill.

Evidently, there are political costs for adding these amendments. I certainly do not believe it is wise for the Senate to take those risks. Let me explain.

On the aboriginal non-derogation amendment, Stephen Scott, a professor at McGill University, said the following:

While that may be perfectly reasonable in one sense, it would probably impair the saleability of the bill in another respect because it would draw more attention to particular constitutional amendments of that kind and suggest that we will proceed with constitutional amendments dealing with aboriginal matters whether or not Quebec likes it. That is obviously the way the Bloc Québécois would present such an amendment.

There is a general understanding that under the present 7-50 formula Quebec could be absent from the required seven provinces, with 50 per cent of the population, and yet an amendment dealing with aboriginal rights could be accepted. I do not have to tell honourable senators how such an initiative would play in Quebec. If that province were isolated from that constitutional change, Bill C-110 unamended would prevent this.

Second, on the definition of "consent from the provinces" and the amendment of designating the legislative assembly, it appears to me that the government would lose its option to deal directly with the government of a province or, alternatively, with the people in a referendum which could gain the needed consent.

Third, concerning the sunset clause, some weeks ago I had the idea that such a provision should be considered. However, I have changed my mind. After hearing experts and after careful consideration, I believe it would be political dynamite to adopt such a clause, mainly because it increases the expectations for the constitutional conference which must be called by 1997. Some provinces would complain, I am sure, that they are being forced into a corner. Pressed unduly, they could refuse to budge on this issue. If the conference, which must be called by early spring 1997, fails, I can assure you that Mr. Bouchard, the Premier of Quebec, would not miss the occasion to say to Quebecers after December 31, 1997, "Canada failed to agree on a constitutional amendment; we in Quebec do not have a veto anymore." I do not think we want that political flak. We do not need such a situation. It would be counter-productive to national unity.

In concluding, I wish to repeat what Senator Beaudoin said in the committee. It may not be fair to do this, but I think he made a good statement. He said:

You had better grab something that is on the table and at least you will have something in your pocket. After that, if you want something more, get innovative and try to find a way, but at least you have the other.

Bill C-110 is on the table. It may not be the perfect solution, but it is the best guarantee the government can give at this time until it has all the provinces' support to solve the problem in a more innovative and permanent way. I hope that this bill will be accepted without amendments. The political risks are too high to do otherwise.

Hon. Pat Carney: Honourable senators, I am speaking today to urge you to support, in a spirit of constructive compromise, the proposed amendments to Bill C-110, an act respecting constitutional amendments.

These amendments have been proposed by the special committee struck by this chamber to consider this ill-considered government initiative, which was hastily drafted to give some substance to the Prime Minister's post-referendum promises to Quebecers.

I listened carefully to the honourable senator who spoke before me, the Honourable Senator Gauthier, but I cannot support his logic, and I know that he will, in fairness, listen to mine.

The bill itself on which we have spent so much time is, as I have said before in this chamber, a very modest bill. It is very small in size. It consists of only two important clauses, one of which contains the concept of regional vetoes and the second of which contains a definition. If it is passed, this bill may become an infamous piece of legislation, in spite of its modest size and content. It is to that possibility that I want to address myself today.

The difficulties and deficiencies inherent in this bill were well presented, carefully and constructively, by the committee's chairman, Senator Kinsella, earlier today. I will not repeat them here, but I do urge honourable senators to consider them.

In summary, no one likes this bill. The only witness who supported it without reservation was the Minister of Justice himself. Even he stressed that Bill C-110 is transitory. He described it in terms of being a "way station on the way to constitutional reform." Instead, the bill could be a dead end to necessary reform, because the provinces may be unwilling to give up regional vetoes in return for more permanent constructive measures.

To British Columbians, the regional veto is the most visible feature of this bill. When it was first brought forward by the Prime Minister, the bill referred only to four regions that would exercise a veto: The Atlantic provinces, Quebec, Ontario, and something called "the West."

Your Honour, since you are from the west, you will be aware of the outcry that came from British Columbia on this issue. The faxes went into overdrive, there was a spontaneous combustion of concern, the Prime Minister's phones rang off the office walls, Liberal MPs joined with Reform MPs and Conservative senators in seeking redress. Eventually, the government revised the bill. In the redraft, which involves only two clauses, British Columbia was included as one of the regions.

This is an important recognition, and I want to acknowledge that in discussing this bill. It acknowledges the "known fact" that B.C. is, by all tests of geography, history, attitude, demography, and its increasing multicultural nature, a separate region, part of the west but "the Pacific province."

However, this important gain masks the fact that the bill itself is ineffectual. As B.C.'s constitutional minister, Andrew Petter, pointed out to the committee, it does not meet its own test. Simply put, if the measures were in place now, this bill could not be passed.

One of our correspondents from British Columbia wrote me and said very clearly that if this new, unofficial amending formula were in place, the new measures would not survive the vetoes being proposed. That is a deadly failure of this bill. We are put into the position of being in a ridiculous dilemma. We are asked to consider a bill to limit constitutional initiatives by federal ministers which may, in fact, rule out successful federal initiatives to effect constitutional change in the future.

Several witnesses pointed out that the bill tries to achieve constitutional change through the back door by an act of Parliament which the government cannot achieve through the front door of successful constitutional amendments. However, in the process, this bill firmly shuts both doors. The front door approach requires, as we all know, an amending formula of seven provinces containing more than 50 per cent of the population. The back-door bill we have before us would take that threshold to seven provinces and about 94 per cent of the population. If passed, it will firmly trap us in a permanent constitutional stalemate on these key issues.

Constitutions must be flexible to accommodate the evolving realities of a sense of country. Canada is a very young confederation. Increasingly, it is seeking mature relationships among the distinct, vital and component parts of our country to achieve that sense of citizenship which we all enjoy. It is my feeling that Bill C-110 will stultify this evolution and this growth.

The bill before us is more likely to intensify the destructive forces of deconfederation than to nurture new forms of re-confederation. This reality should not be masked by the illusion of equality gained through a transitory, ad hoc system of regional vetoes contained in Bill C-110.

Many British Columbians understand this reality. It always amazes me how closely the affairs of this chamber are followed by people in British Columbia. My mailbag does not contain one letter of support for this legislation. I am sure members on both sides of this house would like to hear from the people of British Columbia directly.

From Salt Spring, we have a correspondent who describes these initiatives as full of "judicial potholes" which can only be divisive and destructive. He adds that at this time none of us knows which way the country will go, but that we must open our minds to new ideas. I know that many of us agree with that sentiment.

From the Okanagan, we have a correspondent who states:

You, and the Senate, now have a magnificent opportunity to prove that the Senate is an essential part of the Governing system of Canada. Bill C-110 will soon be reviewed in the Senate. You are fully aware of the straight jacket implication of the veto on constitutional change to one or more of its component parts. Giving a veto to any province or region is folly in its most blatant form. The present amending formula provides sufficient restrictions on amendments.

From Chilliwack, I received a letter which states:

We think that without really wanting to the House of Commons has passed a bill that will destroy Canada as we know it, and hand Quebec nationalists their dreams on a silver platter...

We implore you and your colleagues in the Senate to vote down, or hold up forever this destructive piece of legislation. This time the Senate has the opportunity of being the saviours of Canada, and truly a body of sober second thought.

A correspondent from Vancouver sent me a copy of a letter he sent to the Prime Minister in which he states:

Re: Makeshift Unity Proposal

I cannot begin to express my total disgust at the insulting proposal you put before the House of Commons last week as a feeble attempt to placate the separatist elements in Quebec. This is the first time in my 27 years in Canada that I have been driven to write a letter of this type...

The first thing wrong with proposing anything at this time is that it is being done precipitately without proper thought as to the possible consequences...

He elaborates on that point, and then states:

The second problem I have with the specific proposal you've made is that it purports to change the effect of the constitutional amending formula without changing the constitution. It is therefore dishonest and, in fact, ineffectual, since it can be reversed by a future government of Canada. The net result of these aspects is that it is stupid, since it then becomes quite transparent and will achieve precisely the opposite effect to that which is intended. It is a move which any moderately capable spin doctor would be ashamed of.

Those comments were repeated in more eloquent form by witnesses from B.C. before our special committee.

I wish now to refer to the views of the Honourable Andrew Petter who chairs the B.C. National Unity Committee of Cabinet and who is our Minister of Forests. He points out, as Senator Kinsella indicated today, that this ill-conceived unity package was presented without any consultation with the provinces. Among his points I would emphasize four.

He points out that the federal response moving to five regions does not alter the fact that any regional veto scheme is inherently flawed. I admire the minister for saying that because in B.C. people are in love with the concept of regional vetoes. Yet, the minister has said, "It is one thing to give us a regional veto, but the fact is that the concept is flawed." I commend him for making that point.

Second, he points out that it is a back-door attempt by the federal government to change the way the amending formula works in practice, and that it could not even pass its own test.

Third, he shows that the federal government is acting unilaterally at this time, before the first ministers are constitutionally mandated to review the amending formula by April 10, 1997. He summed up by stating:

In short, we believe that the unilateral action of the federal government in imposing Bill C-110 not only fails to promote national unity, but impairs it.

The committee also heard from Andrew Heard, a professor at Simon Fraser University. I wish to emphasize the key points that he made when he told us:

While I applaud proposals that aim at saving this country from partition, I must voice grave worries when proposals would make the needed constitutional change extremely difficult, even impossible, to achieve.

He told us how this proposal does, for the first time in Canada, set up a hierarchy of first-, second-, third- and fourth-class provinces.

Gordon Gibson, a political commentator in B.C. who is a former Liberal and highly respected former politician told the committee that, in his view, Bill C-110 is a political mistake, incompletely conceived, with the best of intentions. I would stress that there is no getting away from the fact that there is support for the government's intentions in this bill. We all support the intentions of a bill or any measure which is designed to reduce constitutional tensions. As my colleague Michael Meighen says, this is the wrong step in the right direction. The step is not helpful and has failed to gain support in all parts of the country.

Senator Kinsella, as chairman of this committee, has suggested three modest amendments. One of them is the sunset clause. If this bill is a temporary, transitory bill, then why not limit it? The minister says that it is a transition measure. That being the case, we should ensure that it does not take on a life of its own and be on the books 100 years from now. On that issue alone — and I am looking at senators in this chamber who may not have made up their minds on this issue — we would propose this modest amendment.

The second amendment deals with defining the nature of provincial consent and suggesting that that consent should be through the legislative assemblies of the provinces. I was shocked when the minister and the law officers of the Crown told us that this bill, by intention, was vague about how provincial consent could be obtained.

This is not an issue particularly in British Columbia because, in British Columbia, provincial law requires that a referendum be held before a province takes a position on a constitutional amendment.

Our confederation is based upon the concept of a partnership between a federal Parliament and provincial legislatures. For a federal government to say, "We have designed this bill so that we can circumvent provincial legislatures; we can go around them directly to the people to attain something called 'provincial consent'", undermines the very partnership concept of Confederation. For that reason alone, as Claude Ryan and other witnesses told us, the bill is indefensible.

The final amendment deals with the position of the aboriginal citizens of this country. This is important in British Columbia where we are on the verge of signing treaties which will help stabilize a tense situation in British Columbia. The concept that this bill could destabilize that process would be very difficult for British Columbians to live with.

In summary, the amendments proposed by the committee, modest though they may be, will, as Senator Kinsella says, salvage this bill. If it does not give substance to the bill, it will at least make it work in our best interests.

I am worried that the bill, as others have indicated, will be considered the last word on constitutional reform. Some people in this country would be willing to settle for this modest measure. That should concern us all, because it is by no means the answer to the constitutional crisis we face.

A special committee to deal with the unity issues, as suggested by Senator Beaudoin, could be helpful in allowing members of this chamber to go out and talk to Canadians and to try to procure new ideas, new solutions, new visions and new dreams of the country to replace the tired and discredited ones.

I am deeply concerned that my colleague Senator Olson registered his objection to that suggestion this morning. It raises a fear in my mind that this bill is all there is from the government side of the house. Having passed this bill, Senator Olson, his colleagues and his government, will consider that the file on constitutional change is closed. I am hopeful that the concept of a special committee will be supported by all members of this chamber.

[Translation]

Hon. Lise Bacon: Honourable senators, in my opinion, Bill C-110 is an indication of the government's good faith in its search for concrete and practical solutions to the Canadian constitutional impasse.

The issue of a veto, particularly for Quebec, is not a new one. Allow me to briefly mention the major developments relating to that issue.

During the first century of our Confederation, the veto as it relates to constitutional amendments was of little interest, since the power to amend the Constitution Act, 1867 still rested with the British Parliament.

However, the Balfour declaration, in 1926, on the independence of the colonies and the adoption, in 1931, of the Statute of Westminster made it necessary to adopt a truly Canadian amending formula.

Still, from 1926 to 1931, the veto issue did not trigger a great or passionate debate since, from either a legal or a constitutional point of view, the best argument in favour of a veto seemed to be based essentially on the need for each province to agree to patriate or significantly amend the Constitution.

From 1931 to 1964, during the constitutional talks, the provinces continued to contend that their unanimous consent was required to patriate the Constitution or adopt an amending formula.

Yet, in 1964, the provinces adopted, at least in principle, the Fulton-Favreau amending formula that was proposed to them. This was a precedent. Although complex, the formula required the unanimous consent of the provinces regarding certain issues, including anything related to the distribution of powers.

The Fulton-Favreau formula was abandoned in 1966 because the provinces did not unanimously support its adoption. In 1971, the provinces agreed on a new formula, the so-called "Victoria Charter", to patriate and to amend the Constitution. The formula included a regional distribution which gave a veto to any province representing or having represented 25 per cent of the population. This meant Ontario and Quebec, as well as various combinations of two eastern provinces and two western provinces.

The new proposal was also rejected, for various reasons, including political ones. In 1981, the newly re-elected Parti Québécois government decided to oppose the repatriation of the Constitution by forming an alliance with seven other provinces.

For the first time in its history, the Quebec government waived its veto, which was not entrenched in the Constitution but which it had nevertheless always enjoyed, in favour of a provision allowing it not to be subject to a constitutional amendment and get reasonable compensation instead. This is what we call the opting out formula.

That decision was to have major consequences, as pointed out by a former colleague of mine, constitutional expert Gil Rémillard, in his book entitled Le fédéralisme canadien:

By accepting the amending formula proposed to it in 1981 by the seven other provinces, Quebec signed a document that was to have major consequences, since that document provides that all provinces are equal. In other words, Quebec waived the veto that it had always sought until then. Quebec's signature on that document also means that, at least formally, its government gave up its specificity.

We had to wait until the Meech Lake Accord in 1987 and the Charlottetown Agreement in 1992 for new proposals that would allow the Province of Quebec to regain its veto. As we know, these two agreements never came about: the first one was not ratified by the majority of the legislatures and the second one was not approved by the majority of voters during a Canada-wide referendum.

As you can see, for some time now, the Province of Quebec has been asking for a veto on amendments to the Canadian Constitution to ensure that it can fully take part in its evolution, and that it is protected from future amendments that could take away some of its powers, rights and privileges and those of the National Assembly.

I firmly believe, therefore, that the bill before us is an appropriate response to the urgent message sent to the federal government on referendum night, October 30, by the people of Quebec, who want quick and concrete action to renew Canadian federalism.

The purpose of the bill is to show clearly, right after the referendum, what the position of the federal Parliament is on this issue. Of course, it is not to say that it will settle everything right away, federalism being a progressive system, but it is a first step in the right direction towards what I call national reconciliation, to use an expression we are familiar with and one which the new premier of Quebec kept using until a little while ago.

I can hear some people saying: Yes, but what does an ordinary act mean compared to amendments enshrined in the Constitution? Actually, I heard my colleague Senator Rivest ask this very question this morning.

To those people I would say, first of all, that constitutional reform has always been a complicated process, not only in Canada but in all democratic countries which are part of a confederation. Hence, the significance of the bill, which should help our country make a first step in a very complicated area, as I said earlier.

It will not be too late in April 1997, at the next constitutional conference, to review the existing amending formula. In the meantime, this regional veto fills the gap, recognizing that some provincial concerns are well-founded.

As for the weight of an act of Parliament compared to a constitutional amendment, a federal statute adopted by the Parliament of Canada should not be taken lightly. The present government and all future governments will be bound by it, and it is not every day that a statute is repealed. Once this bill has been enacted, changing it would be very costly. All future governments will be very aware of that fact.

It seems to me that regional vetoes are more appropriately dealt with in a statute than in a simple resolution, as is the case for the distinct society issue, because they require the federal government to act in a certain way.

In practice, this bill will affect amendments that are subject to the 7-50 rule. These include changes in the distribution of powers in favour of the provinces, changes regarding federal institutions, the extension of existing provinces into the territories or the creation of new provinces, and other constitutional amendments of a general nature.

Bill C-110 does not change the Constitution or the procedure for amending the Constitution. It just indicates some cases where the government will impose its own veto.

The provinces already have significant individual vetoes under the Constitution. For example, each province has veto power in matters that require unanimity such as the composition of the Supreme Court and the amending formula itself. In addition, each province has veto power regarding any alteration to its boundaries and any constitutional amendment relating to that province in particular.

Moreover, the right to opt out of an amendment that transfers provincial legislative powers to Parliament, with reasonable compensation if the amendment relates to education or other cultural matters, is another form of veto power given to a province.

Bill C-110 creates a new regional veto which, in fact, would apply to proposed changes to national institutions such as the Senate and the House of Commons, to the creation of a new province and to all changes dealing with the distribution of legislative powers where the federal Parliament transfers powers to provinces.

It should also be noted that all constitutional amendments dealing with areas in which provinces already have a veto power, for example the composition of the Supreme Court of Canada and boundaries between provinces are, I repeat, specifically excluded from the bill.

Honourable senators, the history of our country, Canada, is the result of a consensus envied by many countries around the world. However, consensus does not mean stagnation. That is why discussions aimed at improving and adjusting the original consensus are held periodically.

Some will say that all these rounds of constitutional talks are a serious waste of time, energy and money. To them I say that regular discussions show that our federation is capable of evolving and adapting. Discussions also prove the great openness of mind of those who have lead the destiny of this country to this day. But we must do more.

As was pointed out so aptly by new federal Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs Stéphane Dion at his swearing-in, and I quote:

Our second strength is that our federation is based on decentralisation. A strong Canada is more than a strong federal government. It means a strong federation. Canada is fortunate in that its provinces enjoy considerable autonomy, which is conducive to creative emulation. It was a province, Saskatchewan, that paved the way for our public health systems. It is thanks to decentralization that eight provinces out of ten are on the way to balancing their budgets, each using its own resources and its own strategies.

...The Swiss have the most powerful municipal system in the world and take great pride in this very decentralized system, as another reason to feel Swiss. Similarly, Canadians have nothing to fear from decentralization. We know enough about it to make it work for us.

Honourable senators, for a country as vast and complex as Canada to be able to continue to develop and prosper, those who are responsible for its future must be attuned to the needs and demands of its citizens.

Bill C-110, on which we will soon be asked to vote, is tangible and concrete proof of this awareness, which is part and parcel of a federal system that is constantly evolving and is able to adjust to the needs of its citizens and to economic change.

On October 30 last year, Quebecers said once again that they wanted Quebec to continue to be part of Canada. They also said they were dissatisfied with the status quo and wanted change. By tabling Bill C-110, the Government of Canada has shown that it understood the message and that it is listening.

The outcome on October 30 told us we cannot take Canada for granted. In other words, we have to move and act quickly to prepare for the future, and the bill before us is, in my opinion, a step in the right direction.

Honourable senators, Bill C-110 is a concrete and tangible initiative that confirms the government is determined to do what it can, and must, to protect Canada's regions in the event of constitutional change.

We must not miss this unique opportunity, and that is why I urge the members of this house to vote for this bill and invest in the continuity of this country.

[English]

Hon. Edward M. Lawson: Honourable senators, we hear more and more from across the country that it is time to hear from ordinary Canadians on the issue of separation and the unity of the country. That is a good idea but, unfortunately, many of the ordinary Canadians with whom I have spoken are somewhat confused.

After the results of the last referendum, the Prime Minister said that he would ensure that the next question would be more clear and precise. We then heard the Minister of Justice say that the government would examine the matter to determine whether it is legal to separate.

One ordinary Canadian said to me, "If the intention of the Fathers of Confederation was that it would be easy for provinces to separate, they would have put in revolving doors instead of borders, so that the provinces could come and go as they pleased."

Surely that was not the intention. Whenever a problem arises, the government strikes an ad hoc committee. As one ordinary Canadian said to me, the government is making a "mockery of adhocery."

I was speaking with ordinary Canadians at a hockey game in B.C. recently. They said that it appears, from what the Prime Minister has said, that he concedes that there will be another referendum. That will be the third. They said that Minister Rock is studying whether or not this is legal. They said that surely to God someone should have checked this 15 years ago, or at least prior to the last referendum. Should someone not have done that and, if it is not legal, stopped the process? That is a valid question.

They asked what the rules are for separation. I told them that I do not know. They said that, although I may not know, surely the federal government knows. I told them that the federal government does not appear to know.

They explained that, in the playoffs for the Stanley Cup, it is known in advance that the two finalists will play until one team wins four out of seven games. The same holds true in the World Series. They suggested that perhaps we should adopt that rule. If we did, since Canada has won two, Quebec would have to win the next four out of five in order to win the right to separate.

While speaking of baseball, one of those ordinary Canadians with whom I was talking recalled the great Casey Stengel who was the manager of the New York Yankees, with great success. He then became the manager of the New York Mets, where he lost 23 games straight. He gathered the players together and cried out, "Doesn't anybody here know how to play this game?"

That is what ordinary Canadians are asking. Does anyone here know how to play the separation game? Perhaps one should add "other than Quebec."

This is not the Stanley Cup of separation or the World Series of separation. The prize is greater than a cup or a trophy; it is the future of our country.

Recently we read in the newspaper that the Prime Minister has said that 50 plus 1 will not do it. Well, what will do it? Will 50 plus 2 do it? Two-thirds? Seventy-five per cent? No one seems to know. How can ordinary Canadians render any assistance when no one understands the rules?

Mr. Parizeau says that we cannot stop the vote so we should forget what Minister Rock is saying about it being legal or illegal. Premier Bouchard says that we cannot change the numbers, that it would be undemocratic to change them, and that we would be held in disrepute around the world if we did so.

Of course, Mr. Bouchard has a position on everything, and it is to be constantly on the attack. He is an intellectual bully. He may be an intellectual, but if you strip it all down, he is still just a bully; and we seem to be rolling over and playing dead. That is not satisfactory.

We have some suggestions from ordinary Canadians. On the issue of whether it is legal or not legal: find out. If it is not legal, declare in Parliament, by whatever it takes, that there will be no future separations by any province — end of transaction.

With regard to how to respond to Premier Bouchard, since there is the precedent of two previous referenda, we should tell him in a straightforward manner that, although there have been two mistakes made, that is no justification for continuing to make mistakes. That is not a bad suggestion from ordinary Canadians.

I have heard a number of suggestions on how to proceed if it is determined that it is legal to separate. Some people from British Columbia have said that we should not talk only about Quebec separating because they may decide to separate themselves, and they therefore suggest some new rules.

The first is that any province may apply to the federal government for approval to separate after having received its own legislative approval. It would then apply to the federal government for approval. The federal government must examine the question to see whether it meets the test of clearness and precision. It must be something simple such as, "Are you prepared to have your province separate from Canada, to give up your citizenship and to assume your share of the debt?"

The suggestion is that the federal government should set precise rules. That is necessary because, as I read in Rick Gibbons' column in today's Ottawa Sun:

Tell an unchallenged lie often enough and it eventually becomes gospel.

That, more than anything, is what really confronts the Chretien government today in Quebec.

And they really only have themselves to blame for it.

Separatists have been given such free rein to spread their myths and outright distortions about the province's lot in Canada in recent years that their lies have come to be accepted as truth.

In reference to a Globe and Mail poll, this journalist says the following:

Among other things, the poll discovered that a majority of Quebecers actually believe that they pay disproportionately higher federal taxes to Canada and get much less than other Canadians in return from federal spending or from unemployment insurance.

The facts speak otherwise...

The federal government has a great responsibility to ensure a precise question.

The suggestion of my ordinary Canadian friends is that when the federal government determines the question it should send it to the provinces and, if it is not prepared to apply the unanimous rule, it should apply the rule in existence for any other constitutional amendment, which is that it must receive the approval of seven provinces representing 50 per cent of the population. When that is done, the matter will come back to Parliament.

Parliament would then have to approve the next step. My ordinary Canadian friends propose that, when that is finished, the federal government should advise the province which has requested to separate that it may proceed to call a referendum on the specific question drafted by the federal government, with no interference or further involvement by the federal government, with one exception: that is, that it will supervise the vote in order that we will have none of the fraudulent voting practices that occurred in the last referendum.

If the question is passed with a majority previously decided upon by the federal government — be it 60 per cent, two-thirds or whatever — my ordinary Canadian friends suggest that there be a national referendum in order that ordinary Canadians can have a say in deciding the future of their country. They will no longer accept being told, "Don't get involved; don't rock the boat: this is a Quebec issue." They say, as do I, that it is not a Quebec issue, it is a Canadian issue which affects the country as a whole, and that we have the right to be involved.

Although this plan may have many flaws, it is certainly much more clear and precise than what has been happening to date.

That brings me to Bill C-110. If the government had continued with its previous strategy, which, in my view, was no strategy at all, I could not have supported the present position and could not support this proposed legislation. However, I accept that the government seems to be adopting a new policy of tough love.

I am particularly concerned about the Prime Minister's commitment, made during the war of the referendum, to give Quebec distinct society status, the veto and so forth. If he had done that as an ordinary member of Parliament, that would be his problem. However, he did that as Prime Minister on behalf of us all. I am from the old school that says that if you give your word, you keep it; if you make a commitment, you honour it. In view of that, I will support this bill.

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, I had the distinct honour and pleasure of sitting on the special committee struck to study Bill C-110. I would thank my colleagues on both sides of the house for the patience and understanding which was displayed in that committee and for the sound and intelligent debate which was held on this issue.

I have heard what my colleagues from British Columbia, Senators Lawson and Carney, have had to say on this matter.

• (1500)

There is, without question, in the minds and souls and hearts of Canadians right across this country a desperation for a comprehensive plan to emerge with some logic for dealing with this contentious issue of separation which has been haunting us since 1980.

I will be brief today. Much has already been said on the aspects of the legislation by senators on both sides. I, like many, was taken aback in that we were being asked to support Bill C-110 as presented to us by the Minister of Justice. He came before us and said that the bill was transitory and political in nature. Senator MacEachen brought this point forward while the Minister of Justice was before the committee. Asking individuals to set aside their partisanship requires a bit of consideration and deep thought. I know that Senator MacEachen understands that very well, inasmuch as, I am sure, in the final analysis he will rise in support of Canada over and above any partisanship.

One thing that has concerned me ever since I have been in this place is the fact that whenever we are dealing with legislation, whether it be Bill C-68 or Bill C-110, there is no consultation. That consultation is critical if we are to deal with the numerous challenges that face us as a nation, whether it be with our aboriginal people, with regions, or with provinces.

During the hearings I heard our aboriginal people state that they had not been consulted. I listened to presentations on behalf of the Province of British Columbia, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon, and there was no consultation.

As Senator Carney pointed out, it is a bit of a strange situation when a bill which is presented does not even pass its own test, because the established regions clearly spoke out against the legislation, and the Province of British Columbia asked us not to amend it but to kill it.

I wish to qualify British Columbia's position for the Senate. The party in power in British Columbia is very close to calling an election, and there may have been some electioneering in the position they have taken at this particular point in time, in spite of the fact that Minister Petter from British Columbia made an excellent presentation on behalf of his province.

My greatest concern is that this particular piece of legislation builds huge expectations. I am concerned that the government, in presenting Bill C-110, has not really dealt with the problem head on. They are trying to do through the back door what they should be doing through the front door.

If we are trying to protect and deal with the interests of Quebec, why did we not draft a piece of legislation which gave them vetoes in the areas that they feel must be protected? Why are we giving vetoes to everyone and virtually creating a gridlock situation? We should have been proceeding in the spirit with which Canadians opened their arms to deal with this situation. This was the most opportune time to come forward with legislation of that nature.

I said I would not speak long, and I will not. I will conclude by saying that we must defeat separatism. Failure is not an option. We must go forward. We must defeat these people who are advocating separation, whether it be in my province, the province of Quebec or any other province or region in this country. We must work together. We must team up and set aside our partisanship.

It may be hard for some of you to believe that I would stand in this place and say that after the partisan positions I have taken, but I have never dealt with an issue such as we are dealing with now. I ask honourable senators to consider what was said about my leader during the referendum, particularly the fact that what he said was delivered with emotion. I knew that he would deliver his comments with emotion, but I am saying that it is said and others have said it.

I find it strange that to deal with this problem of separation, we are holding meetings all over, and yet the government is trying to deal with it from a one-sided point of view, as opposed to bringing in more people and groups from right across the country to try to resolve something that will surely destroy us if we fail.

I believe that the Senate should set up a committee. Numerous groups have been in contact with my office, and I am sure they have been in contact with other honourable senators. They have ideas. I speak of universities, academic groups from all sectors, and industrial groups. The head of the Bank of Montreal has said that we came within a whisker of losing our country. I speak of BCNI and whatever organization you can think of. They are prepared to come forward and give their time and knowledge to this cause.

Honourable senators, it is time that we buried the hatchets of partisanship. Believe me, it is time that we dealt with this issue head on, and started working with all good men and women in this country. This is no time to be involved in political activity or partisanship. We are dealing with an issue that could decide the future of our country.

I know that it is hard for those of us who have been in parties, who have been presidents of parties and have been in cabinets and political campaigns, whether they be national campaigns or provincial campaigns, to believe that we should take such a stance. However, we have never faced anything as severe in the history of our country. I urge each and every honourable senator to consider this aspect as we go forward.

Hon. H. A. Olson: Honourable senators, I do not believe that I have ever heard such a repetitious litany of weak arguments from the opposition in all the years I have been here —

Some Hon. Senators: Oh! Oh!

Senator Olson: — to support their reasons for bringing in these amendments. Senator St. Germain makes a plea for non-partisanship and all that nonsense. That is junk, because then they bring in three amendments which have nothing in them except some manifestation of partisanship.

Senator St. Germain: Did you consult us before you —

Senator Olson: Consult? You were at the committee. In fact, you had a majority at the committee. You bring in these kinds of amendments. Why?

Senator St. Germain: Why did you not consult us before you drafted the legislation?

Senator Olson: In case you do not remember, you guys did not get elected. You lost every seat you had but one. You saved Charest, and that is all.

To deal with the arguments that have been made, if I may, Senator Kinsella, the chairman of the committee, tells us that Bill C-110 must pass test number one: Does it give Quebec what it wants? He went on to argue that no, it does not.

It depends on who you are talking about in Quebec. In case honourable senators opposite have forgotten again — they seem to forget things easily on the other side — the vote was 50 per cent plus to stay with Canada. They should remember that.

• (1510)

It was not the other way around at all.

Senator Kinsella said that the second test was this: Does the bill undermine the development of a Constitution? Does it establish the means by which the provinces can give their consent? He then said that the bill offends the principle of federalism, whatever that means. Then he asked if the bill advances the cause of national unity. Whoever said the bill was designed to do any of those things?

Honourable senators, the Prime Minister, the Minister of Justice, and everyone else who appeared before the committee, said over and over again that Bill C-110 is a bridge —

Senator Berntson: To what?

Senator Olson: — from now until the required constitutional conference in 1997. That is clear.

Senator Berntson: It is a bridge into the fog.

Senator Olson: The opposition says that the bill means nothing. I agree that it is not an amendment to the Constitution. Hence, what is all the fuss about?

Senator DeWare: We do not trust you.

Senator Olson: Of course, we understand that, but why come along with all these arguments that the bill is vital to Canada if it means nothing to you anyway?

The Prime Minister made a commitment, and the people in my part of Canada were grateful that he did. He made a commitment during the referendum campaign that he would do this.

Senator Berntson: He made a commitment to get rid of the GST.

Senator Olson: Perhaps members on the other side of the chamber do not understand that some political leaders keep their promises.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Have you read the Red Book recently?

Senator Olson: Senator Kinsella, the chairman of the committee, said that the Conservatives wanted to be supportive and helpful in dealing with Bill C-110. I must say that I do not think they are being either supportive or helpful. I am having a great deal of difficulty understanding why they introduced these amendments. Are they attempting to throw a wrench into the gears? If that happens, we must send the bill back to the House of Commons. They must then reconvene and deal with those amendments. We know that 102 members voted against the bill in that chamber. We have some problems.

Please do not say that you want to be nonpartisan and pass this bill in the interests of Canada, and then argue that the scenario you would be setting up if we support these amendments would be supportive and helpful, because it is not. It is very definitely not supportive or helpful.

The Prime Minister has said, over and over again since the Liberal victory a couple of years ago, that he does not want to get into a constitutional debate again until the spring of 1997 when he is obliged to do so because of a decision made by all the first ministers some time ago.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Except one.

Senator Olson: Except one, but 10 out of 11 is not bad. Perhaps every first minister will attend the next conference.

Honourable senators, everyone admits that this bill is a temporary measure. It is a bridge to get us from here to there. The Prime Minister is keeping the promise he made during the referendum campaign. However, supporting these amendments will only gum things up. These amendments add nothing useful to Bill C-110, either temporarily or in the long term.

Senator Berntson: Did you read it?

Senator Olson: Of course I read it. It is only two or three pages in length. It was not difficult to read.

What puzzles me is that the Leader of the Conservative Party, Mr. Charest, was one of the very helpful people in the referendum campaign.

Senator St. Germain: You are right. Without him, you would have lost.

Senator Olson: I am not sure about that. Do not overemphasize what he did.

Canadians, even from my part of Canada, know about Mr. Charest's contribution and they appreciated it. However, now we have the Conservatives coming along with these amendments. Who is running this party anyway?

Senator Berntson: Come along with this gang.

Senator Olson: And wreck all the good you had bestowed on yourselves because of the activities of your leader during the referendum campaign?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Mr. Charest is opposed to the bill.

Senator Olson: I have not heard him say that.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Oh, yes.

Senator Olson: Unless that is demonstrated to me, it is difficult for me to buy, because he is in favour of what he did himself, and of what was done by Jean Chrétien and others in Quebec during the referendum campaign. Has he changed his mind since then?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: He is in favour of entrenching the Meech Lake Accord in the Constitution.

Senator Olson: The Meech Lake Accord and the Charlottetown Agreement were defeated years ago.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: What is this bridge? The honourable senator does not seem to know what body of water this bridge will be crossing.

Senator Olson: If you want to live in the past, go ahead; we do not. We will keep our word to the people of Quebec until 1997 when there will be a constitutional conference with all governments being represented. It is to be expected that all will attend and work everything out.

I appreciated what Senator Lawson had to say. I am not sure I agree with all of the details he gave with respect to what the rules should be, but I think there should be rules rather than have people stand back and watch someone else decide what will happen to their country.

The most frustrating part of the referendum campaign was that the people from my part of the country felt they had to sit idly by, helplessly watching someone else decide the fate of their country. They did not like that. They did not like it, and they do not want it to happen again. Mr. Chrétien has that message too, and he intends to be involved.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Why did he not get the message before the referendum? He was out west raising money for the party and lulling everyone to sleep.

Senator Olson: You are so smart in retrospect. You know all the answers. Your hindsight is 20/20.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Where was Mr. Charest during the referendum? Where Mr. Chrétien should have been.

Senator Olson: Mr. Charest does not have any party.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Well, he saved your bacon.

Senator Olson: I am not sure that the generosity of the other side will allow me to finish.

Honourable senators, let us be clear on the rules of the game. The new Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs has said that some things ought to have been said before. If Canada is divisible, so too is Quebec. If Mr. Bouchard wants to divide Canada, he had better face up to the consequences. If my memory serves me correctly, the Northern Cree of Quebec have already voted 96 per cent in favour of remaining part of Canada.

I would bet anything that, if a vote were taken in the region from Montreal to west Quebec, an overwhelming majority would vote to remain Canadian. I would also bet that, if a vote were taken in the Eastern Townships of Quebec, those people would also opt to remain Canadian. They do not want some people in another part of Quebec to decide whether they can remain Canadian or not.

Let us face it, we need some better rules. We need some support from this opposition which Senator St. Germain calls "non-partisan". He suggests that we set our partisanship aside and that we all pull together. I agree with that. Let us not introduce these kind of amendments which just gum up the works.

If we defeat these amendments and pass Bill C-110, a bridge from now until the spring of 1997 will be built. At that time, Canada's leaders will get down to the business of considering what the whole country needs and wants by way of changes to the Constitution, including the amending formula.

What is so unreasonable about that? I ask senators opposite: Why not do that as opposed to bringing in these partisan amendments for no good reason at all, amendments which I do not think are supported by your leader?

Senator Berntson: I am sure he would have called you first.

Senator Olson: I saw him yesterday morning at breakfast, although I guess I should not say that.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I saw you, too.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I hesitate to interrupt the Honourable Senator Olson, but his time has expired. I leave granted for the honourable senator to continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Olson: I thank honourable senators.

I agree that we should set aside our political partisanship in the interests of Canada and do the right thing. Let us defeat these amendments so that we can pass this bill which is the necessary bridge to next year. Then all governments can consult and consider what a good Canadian Constitution ought to contain.

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, I should like to ask a question of Senator Olson, who is a senior member of the Liberal Party. If a province decides to secede from Canada, is it government policy that there can be divisions within that province if a pocket of the population wants to remain in Canada? Is the government preparing a policy based not only on the possibility of the country being broken up, but on that part of the country being broken up further? Are we talking about fractioning the country rather than keeping it together?

Senator Olson stated that there was a possibility that the Eastern Townships would opt to stay in Canada while other areas would opt to remain without. Is this the honourable senator's personal view, or the view of the Government of Canada which, obviously, was discussed at your caucus meeting in Vancouver?

Senator Olson: Honourable senators, I thought I made it perfectly clear that what I was saying was that the new Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs said that, following the logic that if Canada is divisible, it means that Quebec is divisible. Is there anything wrong with that?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Where is the logic that Canada is divisible?

Senator Olson: Who has said that we agree with that? Mr. Bouchard needs to understand that.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Senator Olson has twice quoted the new Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs to the effect that Canada is divisible.

Senator Olson: No, he did not. You left out the word "if."

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I suggest that the honourable senator read the statement made by Minister Dion on the day he was sworn in and that he look for the word "if." I do not think he will find it.

Senator Olson: I am sure it was in the newspapers. I believe the Prime Minister also said that afterwards in Vancouver. Let us not be unclear about what I said.

Mr. Bouchard has jumped up and said, "Oh, no." I remember a time about three months ago, prior to the referendum, when someone made the same suggestion. Mr. Parizeau was still in charge of something — he was the premier of Quebec, as a matter of fact. He became very indignant and said, "For God's sake, leave the borders alone." He made that statement on a television interview which was broadcast all across this country.

My answer to Mr. Parizeau is, "For God's sake, leave the borders of Canada alone." That is what the people in my province want. That is what they will demand the next time, if there is to be any more of these types of referendums. They want to have something to say about the future of Canada.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Does the Government of Canada now feel that Canada is divisible?

Senator Olson: That is not for me to answer.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Senator Olson raised the subject.

Senator Olson: I do not make statements for and on behalf of the government. The honourable senator knows that very well.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: That is reassuring. What concerns many of us is the fact that the government is considering the possibility that this country will break up, instead of doing all it can to convince Canadians, as the rest of the world says, that this country should remain intact.

Senator Olson: Do not throw up straw men which you know have nothing to do with it.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: You started it, senator.

Senator Stanbury: I agree with Senator St. Germain. Let us be non-partisan.

On motion of Senator Graham, debate adjourned.

TOBACCO PRODUCT RESTRICTIONS BILL

SECOND READING

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Haidasz, seconded by the Honourable Senator Cools, for the second reading of Bill S-14, to restrict the manufacture, sale, importation and advertising of tobacco products.

Hon. William M. Kelly: Honourable senators, some of you may be aware that in another part of my life I am the chairman of a tobacco company. In order to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest, therefore, I have refrained from speaking on any initiative that comes before this place that relates largely or exclusively to tobacco.

I have, however, decided to speak today to Bill S-14 because I have concluded that Bill S-14 raises a serious issue. Because of my knowledge of the business, I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to at least comment on this matter.

I will not debate the objectives of Bill S-14, namely, whether tobacco, or any product for that matter that is legally sold in Canada, should be separated out for this kind of special legislative treatment. I will simply comment on the efficacy of Bill S-14, and whether Bill S-14 will achieve its stated objectives.

The purpose of Bill S-14, at least in the context of the issue I wish to address, is to reduce what Bill S-14 sees as the health hazards associated with tobacco by imposing a reduction in tar and nicotine levels. It is this aspect of the bill that I wish to focus on. First, let us look at some history.

For the past decade or so, the federal and provincial governments followed an aggressive policy of tobacco taxation aimed at discouraging consumption. High increases in tobacco taxes became a feature of federal budgets beginning in the mid-1980s but particularly in 1990, 1991 and 1992. The question is: Did that exercise work? The answer is no, it did not.

As the Minister of Health herself acknowledged during her press conference on December 11 last year, high tobacco taxes had no discernible impact on consumption. Instead, high tobacco taxes put in motion the laws of unintended consequences. High tobacco taxes in Canada gave rise to tobacco smuggling on an unprecedented scale. They also gave rise to the illegal production of contraband cigarettes in Canada for sale through the underground market. They encouraged smokers to move to "roll your own" tobacco products and to raw tobacco. What they did not do was discourage consumption.

According to Statistics Canada, in 1989, tobacco prevalence or incidence of usage was slightly below 30 per cent. By 1993, it had edged up to nearly 31 per cent. By late 1992, in some parts of Quebec there was no legal market left. The entire market consisted of smuggled or contraband product. In Ontario and New Brunswick, it was estimated that up to one-third of the market was supplied by smuggled or contraband product.

The federal government acknowledged this situation, and in January, 1993 they rolled back tobacco taxes to the point where smuggling was made uneconomic, and five provinces lowered their tobacco taxes in response to the federal initiative. As a consequence of this rollback, tobacco smuggling appears to have declined to pre-1990 levels — at least in these five provinces.

Perhaps this point must be made as well: According to Statistics Canada figures, consumption did not increase as a consequence of the tax rollback. In fact, the minister herself acknowledged that there has been no discernible difference in consumption rates between those provinces that participated in the tobacco tax rollback and those that did not. At her press conference on December 11, the minister said:

No, we are not saying there has been any evidence of increase since the tax rollback. We know that the numbers have not changed much, especially if you look in terms of across the country. Those provinces that lowered their taxes and those that did not, the take-up in smoking is about the same.

Yet today, we still live with the legacy. The smuggling network initially set up for tobacco has now turned to beverage alcohol, firearms, stolen credit cards, even illegal aliens. I am told that more than 20 per cent of wine and distilled alcohol consumed in Canada today is smuggled. Furthermore, we have fairly active interprovincial smuggling for the first time in Canada. The smuggling of tobacco products from low-tax provinces to high-tax provinces — in the Lower Mainland of B.C., for example — Finance Canada calculates about one-third of the market is smuggled. Most of that is accounted for by interprovincial smuggling.

While we all abhor this kind of underground activity, we must all take cognizance of the fact that a growing proportion of our citizens are willing to break the law in order to obtain the commodity or service they want at a price that they are prepared to pay. There are also those, evidently, who are prepared to break the law and take considerable risk to supply that demand. The long-term implications of that are grave because it represents an unprecedented erosion of the social contract between the government and the governed.

In the same vein, I want to draw attention to another counterproductive set of initiatives. Anti-tobacco advertising was mentioned by Senator Haidasz in his remarks. The federal and provincial governments have spent millions on various types of anti-smoking advertisements, yet apparently without discouraging smoking.

The federal Department of Health pulled a series of anti-smoking advertisements after they found that teenagers, the intended audience, were laughing at them. Ontario focus groups, set up to evaluate a series of Ontario government-sponsored advertisements, found that one of them made smoking look sexy.

The moral is as old as the story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden. That which is forbidden becomes more desirable through the act of being forbidden. Authors and publishers understand this well: Criticize or ban my book if you will; it will only add to the sales.

Whether or not we are courageous enough to recognize it, in the main, past government initiatives to reduce smoking have been extremely costly but they have been public policy failures. With that experience in mind, let us now turn to Bill S-14. This bill would prohibit the sale of cigarettes that have more than 1.0 milligrams of tar and 0.3 milligrams of nicotine. In the press release accompanying this bill, Senator Haidasz correctly pointed out that these levels correspond to so-called ultralight cigarettes which are currently on the market, and are produced by two of the three Canadian tobacco manufacturers.

Bill S-14 overlooks the fact that only about 1 per cent of the market currently buys these products. If Bill S-14 comes into force, 99 per cent of the market would be left out; ninety-nine per cent of consumers would be faced with a product selection which does not satisfy their preferences.

With history in mind, what would they do? Bill S-14 assumes they would merely adjust their smoking tastes, or give up smoking altogether. I think, honourable senators, we know better. Our recent experience with tobacco smuggling in response to high Canadian taxes proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that Bill S-14, as did high tobacco taxes, would set in motion again the law of unintended consequences. Smokers would not meekly adjust their tastes or give up smoking; they will instead, in large numbers, search out the products they want, even if that means buying smuggled or contraband cigarettes. The smuggling network which already exists will happily satisfy that demand.

At the end of the day, no one is further ahead — except, of course, the smugglers — while a very major portion of the market will shift from legal product to smuggled or contraband product. Tax revenues will be lost. Retailers and wholesalers across the country will suffer.

As a consequence, Bill S-14 will not achieve the objectives it was designed to achieve. I am also advised that there are a number of technical problems with Bill S-14 which would, on their own, effectively neutralize its impact, or cause serious enforcement or interpretation problems. I do not intend to get into those matters today. I trust that the technical experts will appear before the committee and make their views known.

Honourable senators, my message and my point today are very simple: For goodness sake, let us learn from past experience and not make the same mistakes again and again. This government, with the expenditure of considerable capital, recently rolled back tobacco taxes in order to stop tobacco smuggling and contraband. Governments have spent millions on anti-tobacco advertising which even the anti-tobacco lobby acknowledges did not work. With that recent history in mind, and with all respect to my friend Senator Haidasz, whose motives I am sure are unimpeachable, why would we put in place a measure that would only resuscitate the very smuggling activity which has so recently been reduced to manageable levels?

Honourable senators, in my view I have now fulfilled my duty as a senator by calling attention to the very serious issue raised by Bill S-14, of which I happen to have knowledge because of my corporate affiliations. Having fulfilled that duty, I intend to go no further lest some perceive a conflict of interest. I shall abstain from voting on Bill S-14 at any stage during its review.

Hon. Stanley Haidasz: Honourable senators, if there are no other senators who would like to participate in this debate, I should like to do so.

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform honourable senators that if Honourable Senator Haidasz speaks now, his speech will have the effect of terminating debate on this bill.

Senator Haidasz: Honourable senators, I should like first to thank Senator Kelly for his remarks. At the beginning of this debate, I invited all senators to take part in an effort to improve this bill, which I think is necessary in order to stem the more than 40,000 deaths in Canada every year from tobacco-related diseases. At least 330 people die annually in Canada from second-hand smoke, the side-stream smoke which non-smokers inhale when they are in a smoking environment.

It is up to the members of the committee which studies this bill to determine whether it requires amendment.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Haidasz, bill referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology.

[Senator Kelly]

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Government Notices of Motions:

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(h), I move:

That when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Friday, February 2, 1996, at ten o'clock in the morning.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

MOTION TO AMEND ORDER ESTABLISHING SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE ON BILL C-110 ADOPTED

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(i), I move:

That, notwithstanding the order of the Senate adopted on December 15, 1995, no later than 1:30 p.m. tomorrow, Friday, February 2, 1996, any proceedings before the Senate shall be interrupted and all questions necessary to dispose of all remaining stages of Bill C-110, An Act respecting constitutional amendments, shall be put forthwith without further debate or amendment, and that any votes on any of those questions not be further deferred; and

That the bells to call in the Senators be sounded for thirty minutes, so that the vote will take place at 2:00 p.m.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

PEARSON AIRPORT AGREEMENTS

THIRD REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the third report of the Special Committee of the Senate on the Pearson Airport Agreements, tabled in the Senate on December 13, 1995—(Honourable Senator MacDonald (Halifax))

Hon. Finlay MacDonald: Honourable senators, I tabled the report of the Senate committee inquiring into the Pearson Airport Agreements on December 13 last. We recessed two days later, leaving no time to begin the debate on the consideration of that report. I do not know how many honourable senators have read the report, which is long, or have compared the report with the dissenting opinion; nor do I know whether any minds were already made up with regard to the evidence and the conclusions.

We had 30 days of public hearings during which we heard 65 witnesses, comprising many hours of sworn testimony, and went through 45,000 pages of documentation. We tackled a difficult issue with painstaking research and probing questions.

My purpose today is to deal almost entirely with the dissenting opinion, or the minority report as it is called. At 125 pages, it ranks as one of the longest minority reports on record. I trust, honourable senators, that because of its creative complexity you will grant me leave to continue should I exceed my allotted time.

In the interests of time, I have prepared an appendix which I had hoped to have appended to the record of today's proceedings. However, it has not yet been translated into the other official language. Therefore, I will ask permission to table that document when it is finally prepared.

The present government purported to be relying on the Nixon report, a study commissioned before the new government was even sworn in. It was completed within 30 days and accepted without further study or debate four days later.

As witness after witness appearing before us testified to the transparency of the process, the benefits of the agreements and the absence of political interference, serious doubts began to arise regarding the reliability of Mr. Nixon's findings. On page 105 the minority report reads:

• (1550)

Mr. Nixon was assigned a difficult task, made more challenging by the time constraints — time constraints that were necessitated by the new Government's decision to move forward expeditiously with respect to Pearson airport. (At that time, of course, the Government could not foresee that its actions to implement its chosen policy would be frustrated by the Conservative majority in the Senate.)

Nor could they foresee that two years later the Senate would establish a full inquiry to examine the Pearson Airport Agreements.

Realizing this, and not surprisingly, the Liberal members of our committee allot the Nixon report only seven short paragraphs. His report was not based on any substantive research. He sought out people who would state opinions to support a predetermined conclusion. For example, of the 66 interviews he conducted, always in private, 23 were with members of the Liberals' Toronto caucus, and most of the remainder were with people opposed to privatization anyway. He took no notes. The few public servants he did interview and who later testified before us found Mr. Nixon's approach cursory.

I have no doubts about the sincerity of Mr. Nixon's dedication to the public interest, as he saw it. As a matter of fact, I like Mr. Nixon. I admired his candour when he told our committee:

I very strongly support the partisan method of our democratic process and I support it in any way I possibly can.

Our own inquiry, however, resulted in concerns about the judgment underlying Mr. Nixon's confidence in the process and its results. These concerns only deepened when we considered the number of people with whom he did not meet and should have met because they were crucial to meeting his mandate.

He did not interview two former Ministers of Transport, the Honourable Doug Lewis and the Honourable Jean Corbeil. He did not interview Mr. Glen Shortliffe, the former Clerk of the Privy Council and the former Deputy Minister of Transport. He did not interview any senior member of the Treasury Board Secretariat. He did not interview Mr. Don Dickson, the former Director General of Finance of the department. He did not interview Austin Douglas, the former Associate Director of Transport Canada. He did not interview Michael Farquhar, the Director General of Airport Transfer, nor did he interview Mr. Keith Jolliffe, Financial Advisor, Transport Canada. He did not interview Mr. Ed Warwick, the former General Manager of Major Crown Projects at Pearson airport. He did not interview Mr. Gerry Berrigan, Regional Director of Airports. He did not interview Mr. Ron Lane who was the chairman of the all-important Evaluation Committee. He did not interview anyone representing Paxport or Claridge, the two proponents. He did not interview Mr. Paul Stehelin of Deloitte and Touche. He did not interview any lobbyists.

In short, Mr. Nixon denied himself the opportunity to get information from the key people intimately involved in the policy, the process, and the negotiations. Our committee interviewed them all and recalled some of them several times, always under oath. These were the officials who testified unambiguously to the integrity of the process and the consistency of the transaction with the prevailing public policy objectives. Their testimony was not analyzed, but simply obliterated from the minority report.

The Liberals in our committee retained an Ottawa lawyer to write what they termed their "minority report," to employ every device to systematically take words, statements and events out of context and impute meanings which do not stand up under examination. It was an attempt to keep up appearances. This report was overseen and approved by the Prime Minister's Office. It is my opinion that few Liberal members on the committee participated in a meaningful way in the writing of this minority report. Indeed, this report is not in the ordinary sense a report at all, since that term implies a commitment to reflect the evidence.

Where no evidence or quotation was available, they left the innuendo and insinuations unsupported. For instance, the shadow of possible political manipulation loomed large in Mr. Nixon's justification for cancellation. On page 6 of the minority report, they write:

Was there political manipulation? Absolute proof may be difficult to retrieve.

I think it would have been impossible, since the chief negotiators who would have been affected by it have sworn that it did not occur. The minority, in spite of strenuous efforts, was unable to uncover one piece of tangible evidence to back that assertion of Mr. Nixon.

Again, in Mr. Nixon's report, he writes:

It is clear that the lobbyists played a prominent part in attempting to affect the decisions that were reached, going far beyond the acceptable concept of consulting. When senior bureaucrats involved in negotiations for the Government of Canada feel that their actions and decisions are being heavily affected by lobbyists, as occurred here, the role of the latter has, in my view exceeded permissible norms.

Mr. Nixon's view was not shared by one single bureaucrat. However, bravely, the minority report ploughs on. On page 118 they write:

While it is always difficult to specify with any certainty how much lobbying is acceptable, and at what point it becomes excessive, in this case the Committee saw clear evidence of extraordinary influence...

However, their so-called "evidence" reveals their motives.

Then the authors revealed their frustration with a truly amazing conclusion on page 125:

With or without a Nixon Report, the Prime Minister was clearly justified in cancelling the Pearson Airport Agreements...

Did the Liberal members on my committee decide to jettison the Nixon report? Did they assume it would not be necessary for us to kick Nixon around any more? No, not yet. He still has a lot to answer for.

If the Draconian provisions of Bill C-22 cannot be supported by the Nixon report, on what basis can they be justified? Certainly not on the basis of the advice of the government's own advisors. Every one of the principal negotiators for the government testified before us, as did the senior officers responsible for preparing the request for proposals and reviewing the proposals. All testified that the process was fair and the ultimate deal a good one. With the exception of one who has retired, all of those officers are still with the public service, some having been promoted and others still carrying out the duties assigned to them in 1993. All of them spoke frankly and unequivocally at the hearing. There was no stonewalling. No one feigned memory loss. No one challenged their integrity. And, deliberately, none of their key testimony found its way into the minority report.

Page 5 of the minority report states that the transaction was proceeded with against the advice of public servants. Then, in a mystifying inconsistency, one turns to the next page where they characterize the professional comportment of the same public service as:

...an understandable reluctance on the part of civil servants to point fingers in public at their former political masters or to criticize the terms of the deals they themselves negotiated.

[Senator MacDonald]

Honourable senators, this does not square. You cannot have it both ways. Moreover, it is both insulting and unworthy of the Liberal senators who wrote it.

In the case of Pearson, there is only one conclusion: The present government deliberately failed to seek advice from its permanent officers or, if they did obtain it, they totally ignored it.

It is now time to turn to that which really shows what I consider to be the total impoverishment of the minority report. It is simply this: The concerns expressed in the minority report are quotes from documents written months or even years before the contracts were fully completed. These problems were resolved in the final agreements. Yet, time and time again, the minority reports quote critical reports prepared in the early stages of negotiations which have no relevance to the final agreement. This was without reference to the fact that the issues raised were all ultimately resolved.

Faced with the solid rebuttals of the government's own permanent advisers, the Liberal members were forced to seek solace in the minutiae of the painstaking review carried on by the previous government and its advisors throughout the whole process. Negative quotations were sought from any source, however ill-informed. Failing that, they relied on their own questions and comments during the proceedings.

For instance, at the press conference on December 13, my friend Senator John Bryden — I wish he were here — read and distributed a statement in which he said:

It gave the developers an exorbitant rate of return, a return of 23.6 per cent when independent estimates provided to the Department and to the Inquiry stated that a return of 14 - 15 per cent would have been adequate and normal in this case, particularly since virtually all of the risks in the development were laid-off on the airlines, the passengers, or the government.

I do not know why Senator Bryden made this very misleading statement. By comparing a rate of 23.6 per cent to a rate of return of 14 to 15 per cent, he implies that the developers were to receive almost 9 per cent more than that which was considered adequate or normal.

As you know and as Senator Bryden had to know, the 14.1 per cent tax negotiated by Transport Canada is simply an after-tax rate, while the 23.6 figure quoted by him is a before-tax rate. There is simply no basis for comparison. However, Senator Bryden's statements are now a danger to his own government. Exorbitant rates of return at no risk, as he alleges, may mean large damages payable by the Crown to the developers.

The Crown's strategy in the litigation before the Supreme Court of Ontario has been to entirely disclaim its own early analysis. The Crown's current position is that the developers underestimated its costs and overestimated its revenues.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Honourable senators, Senator MacDonald's speaking time has expired. Is leave granted so that he may continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator MacDonald: The Crown is putting forward the view that the developers would not have realized any profit whatsoever over the next 57 years of the term, but that, in fact, they would have lost in excess of $150 million.

The government lawyers will likely argue this month in the Supreme Court of Ontario that at least a 20-per-cent after-tax return to the developers would have been more appropriate.

You may well ask: How could a government so shamelessly adopt a position that contradicts all of its prior pronouncements? The simple answer is that they have seemingly done so in the expectation that no one will notice.

Then Senator Bryden, in dealing with the issue of Air Canada and the request for proposals, stated:

When the Request for Proposals was issued in March, 1992, Canada was in a recession, and the Canadian airline industry was in free fall.

Air Canada wanted the redevelopment delayed.

Again, this is typical of the Liberal methodology for dealing with the entire Pearson story. They pick a point in time, recite a negative story, and then never, ever tell the listener or the reader that, at a later point in time, the situation completely changed. Using this technique, they have attempted to completely distort the Pearson saga.

Unlike Mr. Nixon, our committee has a record which Senator Bryden has conveniently forgotten. He does not tell you what the committee heard in evidence. In the case of Air Canada, the Pearson agreements were negotiated in such a fashion as to alleviate the initial financial burdens on Air Canada while meeting its long-term needs. Air Canada, Pearson's largest tenant, gave the Pearson agreements their full support.

As we heard from Air Canada, through Mr. David Robinson, Director of Real Estate for Air Canada:

The most successful airports in the world such as Schiphol Airport in Amsterdam and Changi Airport in Singapore, have achieved their success for one very important reason: they stayed ahead of the demand curve by developing terminals and runways well in advance of anticipated passenger demand. We have all but lost that opportunity at Pearson to the detriment of Air Canada, other carriers, the Pearson community and the local economy.

The ideal time frame to have commenced the redevelopment of Terminal 2 was in 1993 while passenger numbers were down. Carrying on construction around existing facilities is less than ideal under any circumstances, but the disruption to the travelling public would have been substantially less compared to the impact it will have today and in the future. I would note for senators that the Open Skies agreement, an important accomplishment of the current government, will generate 50 per cent more transborder passengers in Terminal 2 over the next three years.

Then, in last month's publication of the enRoute magazine, Air Canada's monthly magazine, we note these remarks from Mr. Hollis Harris, the chairman of Air Canada:

We have already paid a heavy price for the paralysis at Pearson. Toronto ranks as the tenth largest city in North America, yet Pearson ranks twentieth in terms of passenger volume.

Despite new construction, the terminals, runways and in-transit facilities are inadequate and unable to compete with those of other airports. Clearly, if Pearson cannot handle future passenger and cargo growth, customers will simply go elsewhere.

That is the story you did not get from my friends on the committee who wrote the minority report.

• (1610)

There is yet another story you did not hear which directly affects Air Canada. Page 73 of the minority report, under the heading "Concessions Won By the Developers," deals with rent deferral. The rent deferral was an integral part of the transaction and leads directly to Air Canada's consenting to the arrangement. By rent deferral, I mean that the government agreed to reduce the rental for each of the first three years of the ground lease by $11 million per year. This was not a gift to either Air Canada or to the developers, as the Liberals would like us to believe. It was rent deferred, not forgiven. It had to be paid back. The terms were that it would be paid back over 10 years, starting in year four with interest at the rate of 2.5 per cent above prime.

You will not find any reference in the minority report to the deferred rent having to be paid back by the developers. In fact, by not referring to the fact that this money was to be paid back, the writers of the minority report conclude that "the agreement was not reached on wholly commercial terms." Honourable senators, this is not only an omission, it is more serious than that. This is a deliberate misrepresentation.

In referring to the Pearson redevelopment project, Senator Bryden continues:

It was even opposed by Conservative MPs in the Greater Toronto Area.

However, he made us aware of only one. Don Blenkarn, former Member of Parliament from Mississauga South, was his favourite. In March 1992, before the request for proposals was even announced, he wrote to Minister Corbeil expressing his concern regarding the public perception of political interference which had come to his attention. It was this kind of perception, of course, that caused the government to be particularly cautious in establishing the procedures and the audits that they did to ensure that no such interference occurred.

You may wonder why I consider this worthy of mention. I suppose I do so for two reasons: first, because it was in the evidence, and we followed nothing but the evidence; and, second, because I am becoming amused at Senator Bryden's desperate search for anything which might help him. Although Mr. Blenkarn would not have been privy to these steps and the eventual transaction, his letter is cited not less than four times in the minority report. As a matter of fact, his letter, literally, is the first paragraph of the minority report.

While I am in a storytelling mood, perhaps the most remarkable quote is that of one Lawrence Mitoff, who apparently wrote a letter to his local member on October 2, 1993. We had never heard of Mr. Mitoff. He was not mentioned at the hearing, nor was his letter found in any departmental file. It would appear that a copy of his letter found its way into Mr. Nixon's file. There is no indication of how it got there or whether it was actually sent to anyone else. It is in the Liberal minority report.

It appears that Mr. Mitoff, a Mississauga resident, was so concerned about giving Tory hacks Canada's only profitable airport that he resigned from the Conservative Party. In a fit of pique, he returned his PC Canada Fund card. He was concerned about the construction of a runway near his home. It had nothing to do with the terminals at all, but his letter guaranteed him a place in a minority report. As Andy Warhol said, "Everybody will be famous for 15 minutes." We will miss him!

Let me digress for a minute. Many of you will remember that in the Senate on March 2, 1995, Senator Lynch-Staunton, Senator Pierre Claude Nolin and myself asked the Leader of the Government in the Senate essentially the same question. The question was: Why the delay? The question is as follows:

Is there any impediment whatsoever respecting the immediate redevelopment of the Pearson airport?

The written reply we received some weeks later from the government was brief. It stated:

The transfer of control to this non-profit airport authority and the subsequent redevelopment cannot proceed until Bill C-22 is finally passed into law.

However, two months ago — in fact, while we were on a recess — on Tuesday, December 19, Transport Minister Doug Young announced that a financial agreement to transfer the airport from federal to local control had been reached. Ah, the road to Damascus! Saul of Transport!

However, both parties refused to release details of the financial agreement that was reached for the 60-year lease that will be signed. Mr. Valo, who is the chairman of the Greater Toronto Airports Authority, did shed some light on the situation. He said:

This terminal concept will establish Pearson as the global standard for airport comfort, convenience and efficiency.

He estimated the cost at $2 billion and projected its completion within 20 years, noting that the development would be related to demand. That is the year 2016. So much for staying ahead of the demand. Some of us might not even be around.

The significance of this was not lost on The Globe and Mail. The day following Mr. Valo's announcement, on December 20, Terence Corcoran wrote:

Mr. Young is responsible for the delay. For more than a year, he has been living off the phoney story that Pearson could not be developed until the government reached a settlement with the companies who were awarded the contract with the Tories in 1993. There was no truth to the claim that a settlement was needed — and yesterday Mr. Young proved that he was misleading everybody.

While we are at it, also unbeknownst to our committee, in March of 1995, the Pearson airport general manager undertook a report on the safety system of the airport. Not surprisingly, this report was only disclosed a month ago on January 4, again while the Senate was recessed. It seems that the current problems are not limited to Terminal 1. The resulting report identifies over 50 specific areas of concern.

Contrast this with where we would have been today, February 1, had the contracts not been cancelled. During the first two- and three-year period, the $100 million quick-start first phase to correct life and safety deficiencies would have been completed and a new Rapidair facility for Air Canada would have been built. As well, a $254 million renovation would be well advanced, resulting in the completion of Terminal 2 renovations, a Terminal 1 transborder stage, and the construction of a new parking structure and administration building — all this accomplished without spending a penny of the taxpayers' dollars and with the ownership of the terminals remaining in government hands.

Again, on December 13, speaking at his press conference about the development, Senator Bryden stated:

It was also opposed by the then Leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, Jean Chrétien.

In retrospect, I tend to agree, but there are questions to be asked.

On March 12, 1992, during Question Period, Mr. Chrétien asked several questions. First, he asked the Minister of Transport this question:

The government has announced that it is rushing ahead with plans to privatize Terminals 1 and 2 at Pearson airport an airport that makes $100 million profit every year... Why does he want to give $100 million of profit to the private sector at the expense of the Government?

To be charitable, Mr. Chrétien was a victim of lousy research. However, the foundation of misinformation was laid. The Pearson airport never ever made $100 million in profit in any year, let alone every year.

The airport's financial statements for the two years ending 1993-94 present a complete analysis of the airport's profitability. It is important to note that the statements provided present the airport's profit from all operations, including landing fees, terminals, runways, cargo operations — everything. As shown, the airport's reported profitability from all those operations is in the $40 million to $50 million range in those two years.

During that period, Transport Canada issued a request for proposals to construct new runways at the airport, and to operate the airfield for a term of 25 years. In that particular request for proposals, Transport Canada indicated that it was earning $32 million per year in profit on the airfield. Assuming this, it follows that the remaining businesses at the airport, including Terminal 3 and the operations of Terminals 1 and 2, generated some $10 million to $20 million in profit, which would bring it up to the $50 million mark. In other words, the Crown's profit from all non-airfield operations, including Terminal 3, is less than the ground rent which the developers would have paid in respect to Terminals 1 and 2 alone. Also essential to this analysis is the understanding that under the Pearson agreements, the Crown would not have been required to expend a single dollar for capital improvements, while at the same time the developer was obliged to invest hundreds of millions of dollars. It follows that, under the Pearson agreement, the profits represented by the ground rent would have gone straight to the Crown's bottom line.

On the other hand, given the cancellation, one must assume at that time that the Crown would itself be obliged to spend these moneys, and one must consider the effect of the expenditures on the Crown's profitability. If nothing else changed and Transport Canada would spend, on average, $100 million per annum for the next eight years to develop Terminals 1 and 2, then instead of earning a profit of some $10 million to $20 million in non-airfield operations, the Crown would lose some $80 million to $90 million per year. Accordingly, when capital costs are considered, the Pearson agreements would have generated in excess of $100 million more per annum to the Crown than if the Crown were itself to operate Pearson.

Perhaps the most appropriate assessment of the Crown's return is the report prepared for Transport Canada by Deloitte & Touche dated August 17, 1993. According to these calculations, the net present value of the rental payments to the Crown under the ground lease agreements was approximately $809 million to $900 million. That is the rental payments that the developers would have had to pay to the Crown. If the developers defaulted on this agreement, the government would repossess all three terminals.

It is worth repeating Deloitte's conclusion that during the 57-year life of the Pearson agreements, the gross taxes paid to both the federal and provincial governments by the developers would have been approximately $3.8 billion. Said David Broadbent, the chief government negotiator, "This was a good deal for Canada."

Tell me, honourable senators, what in the name of heaven did Mr. Chrétien mean when he said that the government is giving $100 million of profit to the private sector at the expense of the government? These were the only questions asked by Mr. Chrétien in the House. On the Pearson airport matter, he was silent between March 2, 1993 and early October 1993 when he was out on the campaign trail.

In the test used generally by public servants, that is, were the dollar returns for the Crown in this proposed transaction better than the next best alternative, in the case of the Pearson deal the answer was demonstrably "Yes."

Throughout the minority report, the questions and concerns of the Treasury Board are raised as if they provide evidence that the public servants themselves were opposed to the Pearson transactions. As honourable senators know, it is the task of Treasury Board officials to question every aspect of a proposed government transaction. They are the naysayers. They must point out all possible risks for the government. This, of course, is of great use to the negotiators who can then address the issues. In fact, that is exactly what happened in the Pearson transaction. The issues raised by the Treasury Board were resolved to the satisfaction of the secretariat and the board itself.

Proof of this came later in the unqualified endorsement of Mr. Mel Cappe, the senior Treasury Board participant in the file, who testified as to the integrity of the process. This unqualified endorsement does not appear in the Liberal minority report.

Senator Bryden, at his press conference, and the Liberals in the minority report, attempt to make a great deal out of the contracts entered into between Pearson Development Corporation and the corporations which formed the partnership. These contracts were to be for services rendered both during and after development of the terminals. It is argued that these contracts somehow detract from the profit to the Crown, or are simply a sham to syphon off money from the airport to member partners.

Of course, what we are not told is that these agreements must be on commercial terms and conditions, and that they do not detract from the return to the Crown. Also, the members of the partnership are some of the most knowledgeable corporations in Canada regarding construction, design, management, et cetera.

The government also had the right to review these contracts. However, again, the most flagrant misrepresentation about any of these contracts by the Liberals is the same one they make about the rate of return. If what they are now arguing in the litigation before the courts of Ontario is correct, there will be no money to pay any of these contracts.

Witnesses disagreed, among other things, about some of the critical standards that need to be applied, including the limits, if any, which apply to governments during election periods. Senator Stanbury will remember the animated discussion about this in a hearing held by the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee.

These issues need to be reasonably considered and resolved if a credible judgment is to be made of the Pearson deal. The committee heard from a panel of three university professors. The panellists disagreed with one another, with the panellist selected by the authors of the minority report standing alone in his contention that, during an election period, a government is obliged to confine itself to routine decisions, and that the final sign-off of the Pearson agreements was not routine.

According to the minority report, the two other panellists were reluctant to endorse these opinions. This is not so. The truth is that they disagreed with these opinions and provided the committee with extensive argumentation in support of their views. One searches the pages of the minority report in vain for any indication that there was serious disagreement, or that arguments were made which had been considered on their merits.

Instead, the minority report provides lengthy quotations — virtually an entire page — from its favourite expert.

In contrast, the panellists whose thinking does not pass the tests of the Liberal political correctness are virtually banished from the pages of their report. Their views on the issue of constitutional conventions are dismissed in a single line. There is no analysis of the respective merits of the arguments presented to the committee. Indeed, there is no analysis at all; there is merely careful selection.

Another of those professors, Andrew Heard, while suggesting prudence, put the matter in perspective. He said:

So if one concedes, for the sake of argument, that a cabinet must avoid implementing certain decisions during an election campaign period, then the sorts of decisions that are prohibited are important and irrevocable. And as we see with Bill C-22, the Pearson contracts are not irrevocable. One can debate the means chosen to revoke the contracts, but a successor government and Parliament clearly has the power to revoke those contracts.

He said further:

In conclusion, I would argue that the signing of the Pearson Airport Agreements did not contravene any constitutional conventions, whether those conventions are founded upon precedent or upon constitutional principle.

Now, colleagues, it is time to review the bidding.

In March 1992, the government was ready to announce the request for proposal, RFP, to redevelop the two terminals. This RFP had been drafted with the assistance of outside consultants over a 17-month period during which the government had requested input from interested parties. The evaluation criteria and process were drawn up. Officials from the Departments of Transport and Justice and from the National Transport Agency became involved. The independent investment firm of Richardson Greenshields provided professional financial counsel. Price Waterhouse was put in charge of security procedures for the bidding process and reviewed evaluation criteria and methodology. The auditing firm of Raymond Chabot Martin Paré oversaw the process to verify that the terms of reference had been respected. Deloitte & Touche were retained to evaluate fair rates of return for the developer and the government.

The government's evaluation committee worked through July and August of 1992 comparing the bids proposed by the two proponents, Claridge and Paxport. The evaluation committee submitted its unanimous report to the Deputy Minister of Transport in October, and the draft report of the audit group was submitted shortly thereafter. Both bids were considered acceptable, but the Paxport proposal was judged the best overall acceptable proposal. It scored the highest on business development and operational plans.

In December 1992, the government announced that negotiations would begin with Paxport to enter into a contract to redevelop and operate Terminals 1 and 2. Shortly thereafter, Paxport and Claridge came together in a single company to be known as the T1T2 Limited Partnership, of which the Pearson

Development Corporation, PDC, was to be the managing partner. The rationale for this merger was that there were business synergies existing between the two developers since the Claridge group was already the owner-operator of Terminal 3, while the Paxport proposal was the more advantageous to the Crown. The merger with Claridge gave the government financial reassurance.

The financial negotiations proceeded through the early months of 1993. By June, a non-binding letter of intent was signed on the federal government's behalf by the Deputy Minister of Transport and the Pearson Development Corporation. By early July, the government and the Pearson Development Corporation were so deeply committed to the redevelopment contract that they agreed that October 7, 1993 would be the closing date. That is, in July they agreed that October 7 would be the closing date. On August 27, 1993, following Treasury Board approval, an Order in Council authorized the Minister of Transport to enter into the lease and redevelopment agreements with the partnership.

From that date, August 27, until October 7 — and I emphasize this — the only activity on the Pearson file was by public servants. There were no further changes requiring approval from Treasury Board, nor was there any ministerial involvement or intervention. From a political aspect, from the view of cabinet, it was a done deal.

On September 8, Prime Minister Campbell announced dissolution of Parliament for an election to be held on October 25. Still working toward the agreed October 7 closing of the deal, lawyers for both parties drew up the final legal documents. Material documents were signed by the parties on October 3 and put into escrow until October 7. This, you will remember, was the closing date established three months earlier.

During that election campaign, highly partisan rhetoric, amplified in the media, provoked public opposition to the Pearson redevelopment contract, even though the transaction had survived a most elaborate and thorough bidding process.

Encouraged by politicians and interest groups, the media suddenly started advancing claims of cronyism and patronage concerning the Pearson transaction. It made for banner headlines. Oddly enough, no mention was made of the fact that Claridge, which ended up with two-thirds ownership of the partnership, had very strong Liberal connections.

On October 5, Mr. Chrétien made the project an election issue, stating that the contract would be reviewed and, if necessary, cancelled, should he become Prime Minister. On October 7, Prime Minister Campbell was asked to confirm that the documents should be released from escrow, thus allowing the long-awaited redevelopment to proceed. She did so.

There was no doubt whatsoever as to the government's legal and constitutional right to proceed. Moreover, Prime Minister Campbell had been assured in writing several weeks previously by some of Canada's most senior public servants that the selection of the developer had followed "an entirely transparent" competitive process. In a memorandum to her, which is now part of the public record, these officials added that, "we can assure you that officials have reviewed the file and confirm that due process has been followed at every stage."

Following the election, but before the ministry was sworn in, Mr. Chrétien commissioned the Nixon review which was delivered on schedule in a document now proven to be riddled with false allegations and innuendo. Nonetheless, Mr. Nixon recommended cancellation of the contract, which Mr. Chrétien did indeed cancel on December 3, four days later. The Financial Post headline after the release of our report read, "P.M.'s Cancellation of Pearson Deal was a Capricious, Ill-advised Decision." The article read:

Were there provisions in the Pearson agreement that it was reasonable to believe could be improved? If so, a responsible course of action would be to initiate talks with the developers to explore possible gains and tradeoffs, but not necessarily wholesale cancellation.

While I agree with the author, I think he might have misread the political mood of that day. An unpopular government was going down to defeat and Mr. Chrétien, who is nothing if not a politician, could taste the blood. The Pearson saga had taken on a life of its own. Mr. Chrétien was driven to keep a promise made during the heat of an election campaign, regardless of the consequences which ensued, and without regard to public policy. He could be likened to the man sitting in a cafe during the French Revolution. When a howling mob rushed by the window, he jumped and told his friend, "I have to catch up with them. I am their leader."

• (1640)

Senator Grafstein: What election was that?

Senator MacDonald: The French Revolution.

Senator Grafstein: Oh, it was not an election?

Senator MacDonald: The public servants who had worked over so many years to find a workable solution to this Pearson mess had every right to be proud of the results they had achieved.

I wish to thank the Committees Branch of the Senate who worked tirelessly with us over the four-month summer period. I thank all committee members for the courtesies extended to me as chairman. I reserve a special commendation for the counsel to the committee, John Nelligan, Q.C., whose extensive legal background and goodwill kept us all focused and, in many cases, kept us composed. I commend the Library of Parliament, whose draughtsmanship meticulously recorded the evidence we heard, omitting none, and my Conservative colleagues who spent hours and days analyzing the evidence and making additions and corrections where necessary.

I offer a special thanks to my colleague and deputy chairman, Senator Michael Kirby. He alone on our committee has had the greatest experience in government at the highest levels, and he had the conviction and the courage to join with me in writing the appendix underlining the difficulties we experienced in obtaining documents and timely information. In our appendix, we recommended more precise rules to assist parliamentary committees, accountability in the area of document production, a less far-reaching definition of what does and does not constitute a cabinet confidence, and less excessive application of solicitor-client privilege.

Our parliamentary system is heavily weighted in favour of the executive. Together, the cabinet and the bureaucracy are a formidable opponent to anyone, be they individuals or parliamentary committees seeking to examine issues of public policy, particularly controversial ones like Pearson airport. Parliamentary committees offer an effective counterbalance to these forces provided they are given their due place. Unfortunately, this is not now the case. There must be a better way.

By making the ground rules governing the powers and prerogatives of parliamentary committees more clearly understood and accepted, we increase their legitimacy. By increasing their legitimacy, we encourage their use. By encouraging their use, we make government more accountable. Surely this is good for the health of our political system and its political institutions.

I am disappointed that my Liberal colleagues, for reasons best known to themselves, refused to allow the Kirby-MacDonald appendix to be the unanimous report of the committee. As members of a chamber too often described as one of sober second thought, it is our responsibility to reach reasonable conclusions about these reports. If we acquiesce in the view that the two reports of the Pearson committee are merely contrasting expressions of partisan emotion without scrupulous regard to the evidence, we give direct support to those who might question why this chamber exists.

Hon. Michael Kirby: Honourable senators, I rise in part to respond to some of the comments Senator MacDonald has just made, and in part to give you an overview of some of the key findings of the Pearson inquiry from the perspective of my colleagues and myself.

I wish to thank Senator MacDonald for the very good job he did as chairman of the committee, and for the leadership he provided to the committee during what was a very difficult time for all of us, but I think particularly for him.

As he pointed out in his remarks, the committee had a very difficult task to do. Some 45,000 pages of documents were given to the committee in a relatively short period of time. We had to digest those documents and use them to prepare for cross-examining a witness the following morning. We heard, as Senator MacDonald pointed out, some 65 witnesses covering a period of over 130 hours of testimony.

Yet, through all of the tension that frequently surrounded the committee, Senator MacDonald kept affairs under control, kept things moving along, and kept the committee to its fundamental task, which was attempting to determine the facts that lay behind the decision to proceed with the privatization of Pearson airport, and subsequently the negotiations and ultimately the signing of the contract. In handling this difficult and often emotionally charged task, I wish to say on behalf of myself personally, as deputy chairman, and in particular the rest of the Liberals who were with me on the committee, that we think Senator MacDonald did a superb job.

Having said that, I wish I could say the same thing for his speech of a few minutes ago. While I think he is obviously an excellent chairman, he did a very strange thing in his remarks. I have never heard anyone stand up and give a speech explaining a report, in which they entirely ignore their report. Senator MacDonald said that he would focus on the minority report, and I assume he did so because he knows as well as I do that the majority report is largely indefensible.

He did several other interesting things in his speech. In spite of the frequency with which former prime minister Brian Mulroney's name, memoranda to him, statements by him, et cetera, featured in the committee hearings and, indeed, in the minority report, it is interesting that in spending an hour, as he did, commenting on the minority report, at no point in his comments did Senator MacDonald make any attempt to refute anything that the minority report says about the role and activities of the former prime minister in the ultimate negotiation and awarding of the contract. I will come to the details of Mr. Mulroney's involvement in a few minutes. However, since he attempted to deal with such very minor issues as the rent deferral issue, I must assume the fact that Senator MacDonald refused, or neglected, to comment on the issue of the role of the former prime minister, as portrayed by the Liberals in the minority report, implies that he obviously agrees with our assessment of the role of the former prime minister.

One statement that Senator MacDonald made is categorically false, but I will give him credit for the fact that he may believe it to be true. However, early in his remarks, he made the observation that the report of the minority members of the committee was "overseen" by the Prime Minister's Office. In order that there is absolutely no confusion on this issue, and to be absolutely categorical about it for the record, absolutely no one in the Prime Minister's Office, or associated with the Prime Minister — in fact, no one other than the Liberal members of the committee and our own staffers saw what was in the minority report until that report had been completely signed off and sent to the printer. I wish to clarify that for the record. I assume that Senator MacDonald may well have believed what he said, but when he claimed that the report was overseen by the Prime Minister's Office, that statement is categorically false.

Let me then turn to many of the facts surrounding the minority report and, indeed, surrounding the hearings and the majority report as well, which, in the course of presenting his analysis of a few minutes ago, Senator MacDonald chose to carefully ignore.

While it is true that we can argue about the politics of this issue, and we can even argue about some of the judgments that were made both by the Conservative government and, as Senator MacDonald has done, by the Liberal government after it was elected, it seems to me we cannot argue about the facts as they were presented to the committee. I should like to mention a number of these facts to you today, in part because they were so carefully ignored by Senator MacDonald in his hour-long speech which ended just a few minutes ago. Second, they were completely and utterly ignored by the Conservative members of the committee in their majority report.

Honourable senators, let me place on the record some facts as they were presented by witnesses to the committee. I will deal first with an issue which Senator MacDonald raised in his comments. One of the reasons why the Liberal members of the committee concluded that the Pearson agreement was a bad business deal for Canadians — and Senator MacDonald is right that we stressed this fact — was that developers on this project would have received a pre-tax rate of return of 23.6 per cent. The majority report says that the figure should have been 14 per cent, but they fail to point out that the 14 per cent calculation was based on a model for assessing the rate of return which model was provided by the developers themselves. On that basis alone, it has a significant lack of credibility.

Far more important than that, however, is the fact that the rate of return — whether one takes the 23 per cent or even Senator MacDonald's 14 per cent — does not tell the whole story. Not included are a significant number of side deals, side agreements, from which the various members of the Paxport and ultimately MergeCo consortium were going to enrich themselves — non-arm's length construction contracts, management contracts, engineering contracts, consulting contracts. All would have earned consortium members millions of dollars above the money they would have made from the redevelopment and management of Terminals 1 and 2. All of these additional side deals and side contracts would have earned the participants in the consortium millions of dollars above the rate of return that was calculated and presented to the committee by several witnesses.

It is an interesting observation, honourable senators, that the mention of these side contracts and side deals appears absolutely nowhere in the majority report.

Since some honourable senators did not spend the summer listening to these witnesses, let me tell you about two or three of these side contracts just to give you the flavour of the package of proposals which had been put together in this regard.

We learned from witnesses before the committee that there was an agreement to pay $3.5 million to a company headed by Don Matthews, the head of the Paxport consortium, with no obligation whatsoever for Mr. Matthews to provide any specific goods or services under the terms of that contract. It was essentially a one-paragraph, $3.5-million, 10-year contract with no specification whatsoever as to Mr. Matthews' obligations while earning that sum.

It is an interesting observation, honourable senators, that such a fact is not in the majority report. Neither does the majority report include the fact that there was another contract, this one for $2 million, payable to Fred Doucet, a prominent Ottawa lobbyist at that time with close and long connections to Prime Minister Mulroney, having served in the Prime Minister's Office for a number of years. This $2-million fee was contingent on the Pearson airport redevelopment contract being signed. Again, it just so happens — inadvertently, I am sure — that the Conservatives did not bother to mention this particular contract in their report.

There are a number of other similar contracts including one for a post-employment package to a past-president of Paxport for four years' work at a sum which many of us regarded as exorbitant. This, too, was carefully and absolutely ignored by both Senator MacDonald a few minutes ago and in the Conservative report as tabled in the Senate a few months ago.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Because they have nothing to do with the Pearson agreements.

Senator Kirby: Where was all this money to come from to pay these amounts?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Irrelevant.

Senator Kirby: The answer is, unfortunately, that these outrageous payments were to come ultimately from money provided by the air-travelling public. Ultimately, Canadian air passengers, particularly those passing through Pearson, would have to pay increased charges for everything in order to make these payments.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Where is that in the testimony?

Senator Kirby: Well, I am absolutely delighted.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: You are improvising!

Senator Kirby: Senator Lynch-Staunton, this is one of those rare occasions when you are doing a superb job of playing the straight man. I realize you find that difficult to do but I thank you for the prompt. The fact of the matter is that one of the documents which was put in evidence before the committee was a Transport Canada report written by the Transport Canada officials who Senator MacDonald says — and I agree — did such an excellent job.

One of these Transport Canada officials, in a letter to the Deputy Minister of Transport of the day, summarized his views of the Paxport proposals in the following way.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: The Paxport proposal has nothing to do with the agreement. That is not fair.

Senator Kirby: That official said:

The Paxport proposal as it now stands would certainly leave the Crown better off financially but only at a high cost to the airlines and the travelling public.

Senator Lynch-Staunton has asked where the evidence is to show that these high costs would eventually be absorbed by the Canadian travelling public. That evidence appears in a variety of places including, in one illustrative example, the letter to the deputy minister written by a senior official of Transport and from which I just quoted.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Paxport did not even sign the agreement. You are the straight man to Nixon.

Senator Kirby: The minority report points out the flawed process, as described during the lengthy hearings, which led first to the request for proposals and then to the awarding of the right to negotiate a contract and ultimately to the actual negotiation of the contract.

Again, since I do not really want to repeat the entire report, let me simply illustrate my point to honourable senators by giving two or three examples of these flaws.

First, the request for proposals was issued at a time when the redevelopment of the terminals at Pearson airport was neither wanted nor needed by those people who best understood the industry and the problems at Pearson. The committee heard evidence that, in 1992, passenger levels were actually on their way down at Pearson airport, and that the recession meant substantial upheaval in an already troubled airline industry.

One of the witnesses before the committee was a former president of the Air Transport Association of Canada, who testified and gave documents in evidence to show clearly that the Air Transport Association of Canada was strongly opposed to the redevelopment. In fact, they urged the government not to proceed to the redevelopment of the airport as a whole, specifically Terminal 1, until a clear need had been established.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: What did they say?

Senator Kirby: You are doing a far better job today than you normally do, Senator Lynch-Staunton.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Quote the press. I am trying to help you.

Senator Kirby: You may ultimately get, one day, to assume a job on this side of the house. That may take a long time, but keep working at it and it may happen.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: You are reading Nixon, Volume 2.

Senator Kirby: Air Canada strongly opposed the redevelopment of Pearson airport.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: When?

Senator Kirby: Canadian Airlines also opposed it. The City of Toronto went on record as opposing private sector development. All this was happening at a time when the government was contemplating proceeding with requests for proposals.

Even Claridge — who, as a result of the mess that developed, ultimately came to control T1T2 — opposed the issuance of the request for proposal, saying that it was neither needed nor wanted by the industry.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: When? What year?

Senator Stewart: Read the articles.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Read the details, like Nixon.

Senator Kirby: The fact is that there was only one private sector advocate of Pearson redevelopment and that was the Paxport consortium, headed by Don Matthews, which was the ultimate winner of the proposal.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I regret to interrupt Senator Kirby but his time has expired. Is leave granted for him to continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Nixon, Volume 2.

Senator Kirby: Given the amount of interruptions, this may be a story with many more volumes than two.

The request for proposals also contained a number of specific abnormalities and unusual things. Again, because it will take too long to give the complete litany, let me give honourable senators two or three examples.

First, there was no expression of interest stage despite the fact that the public servants — to whom Senator MacDonald correctly paid tribute — recommended that an expression of interest stage ought to be undertaken with respect to this development because of the size of the project.

• (1700)

It is an interesting observation that Paxport, the ultimate winners of the contract, lobbied strenuously for a one-stage proposal with no expression of interest stage. It is interesting how that turned out to be what happened.

As an illustrative example, the request for proposals contained a 90-day response period in spite of the fact that the government's own consultants, Price Waterhouse, recommended a 60-day response period. An interesting observation is also carefully ignored in the majority report that — surprise, surprise — Paxport recommended a 90-day response period for their request for proposals.

As a third illustrative example, the response date for the request for proposals was five months ahead of the date — that is to say, in advance of the date — set for the report of an environmental assessment review panel on the development of additional runways at Pearson. The decision to put out the RFP before the panel reported led two members of the environmental assessment review panel to threaten publicly to resign. Why did they do that? They did so because a previous minister of transport had said that no redevelopment of the Pearson terminals would take place until after the environmental assessment review panel had reported.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Which minister?

Senator Kirby: Honourable senators, we have 130 hours and literally thousands of pages of evidence that further illustrate the abnormalities involved in this process that ultimately led to the calling of an RFP. The fact of the matter is that the advice that the government followed was not the advice of the public servants Senator MacDonald talked about. It was not the advice of professional firms such as Price Waterhouse and others. The advice that the government followed in deciding the process it would use to ultimately issue the RFP and then ultimately award the contract was the advice given by Paxport, the ultimate contract winners, not by the independent public servants we talked about earlier today.

On the basis of that process, honourable senators, it was self-evident to the Liberal members of the committee that it was absolutely true and indeed a factual statement to say that the RFP process itself was seriously flawed. These flaws in the process continued beyond the issuance of the RFP. They continued into the negotiation stage of the contract itself.

Again, let me illustrate the flaws in the negotiation process by showing you two or three examples of some of the things that happened during the process.

One of the things which surprised the members of the committee — and I made this observation a few minutes ago — was carefully ignored by Senator MacDonald in his long speech and by the Conservative members of the committee in their report. One of the things which did not appear at all was the unusual pressure from the highest levels of political office to get this agreement done, and get it done extraordinarily quickly.

Let me give you one of the examples. The Clerk of the Privy Council, in his own words, held weekly meetings to keep the Prime Minister informed of what was going on. Indeed, in the words of the public service witnesses, the purpose of these weekly meetings was to keep the deal on track. The clerk, in turn, briefed the Prime Minister directly on the status of negotiations at regular intervals.

In spite of the fact that the Prime Minister was being advised on a regular basis of the numerous concerns of Transport Canada officials and others in the industry about proceeding with such an initiative at this time and proceeding with it so quickly, the pressure from the Prime Minister, his office and his senior officials to proceed quickly to get the deal done continued unabated. It is interesting that none of that is mentioned in the Conservative report.

In his remarks, Senator MacDonald made an observation that I have had some experience over the years in senior positions in government. When I heard about this role of the Prime Minister from people like the Clerk of the Privy Council when he appeared as a witness before the committee, I expressed astonishment about what I felt was a truly unbelievable level of interest by the Prime Minister in one simple business transaction, which is the way it was attempted to be portrayed by Conservative members of the committee.

The chief negotiator — again referred to by Senator MacDonald a few moments ago — David Broadbent, who had considerable experience in senior positions in government since he had been a former federal deputy minister, said in response to a question that he could not think of a “comparable situation” when asked about this level of interest by the Prime Minister in what was essentially a business transaction. Yet, Prime Minister Mulroney's role in pushing this deal through to completion as quickly as possible and before he left office is carefully and completely ignored in the majority report and in Senator MacDonald's speech. In the careful ignoring of this element of history, which I assume is the basis of Senator MacDonald's speech, he clearly agrees with our summary of these events since he attempted to pick up every other point in our report with which he disagreed.

Ultimately, and in spite of all this pressure from the Prime Minister, they could not get the agreement done in time. Mr. Glen Shortliffe, who had been Clerk of the Privy Council under Prime Minister Mulroney, said before the committee that "Eventually, even Mr. Mulroney had to accept the fact that he could not get the deal pushed through" before he left office.

The question that those of us on our side of the committee asked ourselves repeatedly was this: Why was the Prime Minister trying to push anything through? What was so crucial and so incredibly important that the head of the country should focus all his energy, time and attention on it and be determined to try to get it pushed through? "Pushed through" are not my words; they are the words of his own Clerk of the Privy Council. Why was the Prime Minister so determined to get this deal pushed through before he left office?

The answer obviously was not that the Paxport offer was too good to refuse. Paxport, at the time they were judged to have the best overall proposal, had no experience in operating or redeveloping airports.

I would add parenthetically that the president of Paxport made an observation at one point. When Donald Matthews' son was asked what he knew about airports, his answer was that he did not know very much at the time.

In addition, there were a number of reports. The Edlund report was prepared for Industry Canada, and the Gauvin report, which was prepared for Transport Canada, expressed a lot of concern about the Paxport proposal and other elements of the negotiations as they evolved. They were specifically concerned about the financeability of the proposal, the lack of equity in the Paxport proposal from the Paxport partners themselves, and the overly optimistic revenue forecasts contained in the Paxport proposal. All of these concerns, expressed early on in the negotiations by public servants, were carefully ignored by those who had been told to get the deal done, and were carefully ignored by the Conservatives in their report and by Senator MacDonald in his speech. All of these concerns ultimately became true.

What ultimately happened, as you all know from the newspapers and the history of this event, is that the financeability of the proposal from Paxport's point of view became impossible. Paxport ultimately had to merge with Claridge to form a new company called "MergeCo" in order to finance the project. This happened virtually immediately after the agreement was done. I will come to the timing on that issue in a moment, because that is the important issue.

It is interesting that, even before Paxport had been selected as having the best overall proposal, Prime Minister Mulroney received a memorandum from his Clerk of the Privy Council informing him of failings in the Paxport proposal. This memorandum told the Prime Minister that there was no need to start construction until 1996 — this, by the way, was 1993 — and that the local airport authority option was still viable.

Senator MacDonald made the point a few minutes ago that the local airport authority option was proceeded with by the current government. In 1992-1993, Air Canada was concerned about the costs and had asked that the development be postponed.

The memorandum from the Clerk of the Privy Council to Prime Minister Mulroney ended by saying that, unless some clear concessions were made, "Paxport will have little incentive to complete the project on terms acceptable to the federal government."

Indeed, at the bottom of that memorandum, Mr. Shortliffe added a note in his own handwriting saying that there was very little incentive for the bidders to get together, and that he was looking into "bid compensation." In other words, he was looking for a way to compensate the bidders for the costs that they had incurred in going to the trouble of preparing a response to the request for proposals.

This memorandum cited the weaknesses of the Paxport proposal referencing the possibility of getting the bidders together. It was sent to the Prime Minister three weeks in advance of Paxport having been announced as having the best overall proposal. In other words, well before the winner had been announced, well before Paxport had been awarded the right to negotiate a contract, the Prime Minister and his senior public servant, the Clerk of the Privy Council, were discussing the possibility of having the two bidders get together in order to solve the financial problems that public servants were concerned would arise with the Paxport proposal.

During this same period Mr. Mulroney, as was put in evidence by his own Clerk of the Privy Council, asked the clerk to try to arrange things with respect to the Pearson issue "so that everybody could get a piece of the action." That is an interesting observation for a prime minister in looking at a business deal of this nature.

Another interesting observation is that neither Senator MacDonald nor the Conservative majority report mention this evidence at all. In his opening comments a few moments ago, Senator MacDonald accused the Liberals of having selected facts. It is interesting that there is not one single comment related to the role of Prime Minister Mulroney as expressed, not by us, but in the words of the person who knew the Prime Minister best at the time, that is, the Clerk of the Privy Council. None of this evidence entered the Conservative report or, indeed, Senator MacDonald's comments. If he is to accuse us of having used selective facts, then one should ask whether his report has not also used selective facts quite extensively. After all, this was looking at a transaction of the Mulroney government initially and, albeit briefly, the Campbell government at the end. Whole references to the Mulroney period were carefully omitted by the Conservatives in the writing of their report.

If we look at the remainder of the negotiation process, we find that the government did not make the money that it was supposed to make. The money it was supposed to make was the primary reason the contract was awarded to Paxport in the first place. Return to the government was the main factor in the analysis of the proposals as done by public servants. Despite the fact that this is what got them the proposal in the first place, in the course of the analysis the government was forced twice to reduce its rate of return in order to come up with a proposal with which Paxport could live. They agreed, for example, to a rent deferral of 15 per cent in order to allow the cash-strapped airline industry to be able to afford the higher rents upon which the Paxport proposal was based.

Parenthetically, I must say something to Senator MacDonald about Senator Bryden's very clear press release. I realize there is a danger in members on our side using technical language which members opposite have difficulty understanding. Rent deferral was referred to in that press release. Most people who understand the English language understand that a rent deferral does not mean a rent cancellation. It means a deferral to be paid at some time in the future. Therefore, the honourable senator's accusations regarding Senator Bryden having said one thing when he referred to rent deferral are false. I think Senator MacDonald ought, at least, to accept the fact that he specifically used the word "deferral" on the assumption, obviously false, that senators opposite would understand what the word "deferral" means. From now on we will try to use words which have a few less syllables.

In spite of the fact that this contract was awarded to Paxport because of its high rate of return to the government, we not only had a rent deferral of $33 million, we had a far more serious concession in the course of these negotiations, namely, the federal government was to be prevented from developing any airport facility within a 75-kilometre radius of Pearson until traffic volume at Pearson airport reached 33 million passengers. Otherwise, the government would have to pay a penalty fee to the Paxport consortium.

I ask honourable senators whether they think that granting such a monopoly status to this consortium is not a significant concession for which they will find, as they go through the negotiations that the government received essentially nothing in return.

Honourable senators, I could detail a number of the other concessions that were made in the negotiations; concessions which clearly hurt the revenue position of the government and which clearly helped substantially the consortium. They did so in such a way that, in the end, they completely undercut the primary reason Paxport was awarded the contract in the first place, namely, because they were to provide such a high rate of return to the government.

To give an illustrious example, I should like to read from an update on these negotiations written by public servants to the assistant deputy minister of finance. These words are not taken out of context. They reflect the flavour of what this memorandum and a whole bunch of others said.

Transport officials have been working at a furious pace to meet the goal of signing these agreements by the end of May...

Parenthetically, I should tell honourable senators that the significance of "the end of May" finally became clear when the Clerk of the Privy Council told us that Prime Minister Mulroney wanted the contracts signed before the Conservative leadership convention. The pressure to get it done by May 31 was to meet the timing of Prime Minister Mulroney.

I will continue with the quotation I started earlier:

We are concerned that Pearson Development Corporation will soon be in position to charge monopolistic fees...

Parenthetically, it is easy to demand monopolistic fees when you control the airport for a 75-kilometre radius around Toronto, and when no one can come in to compete with you. That is an understandable statement. The statement goes on:

Safeguards need to be built into the ground lease so that the airlines cannot be hit with charges beyond those contemplated in the original proposal...

The fact of the matter is that, ultimately, those safeguards were not built into the final deal.

Continuing with the memorandum, it states:

Clearly if this deal stands, a communications plan should be developed which defends the higher prices and ground rents;

Risky projects might require a rate this high to attract investors, however, our initial impression of the T1/T2 project is that the developer bears very little risk...

Finally, honourable senators, the concluding paragraph, which was written in the middle of May 1993, states:

Unfortunately, given the government desire to sign a deal within two weeks, it is unlikely that Transport Canada would be successful in negotiating a lower rate from the developer. No doubt, Pearson Development Corporation feels it has an upper hand in the negotiations.

Honourable senators, I ask: Why would they not think they had an upper hand? They knew the Prime Minister wanted the deal signed before he left office. They knew he was prepared to give them a monopoly position. They knew all they had to do was wait it out and they would bear all the advantages in the negotiations.

None of the evidence that I just put on the record was mentioned by Senator MacDonald, and none of it appears anywhere at all in the majority report.

Senator Stewart: Not even anything to refute this.

Senator Kirby: I am glad Senator Stewart made that observation. Senator MacDonald went to extraordinary lengths in his opening remarks to say that he was not going to defend his own report — defending the indefensible is difficult even for him, so I understand why he did not try. Instead, he decided that he would try to attack our report. It is interesting — and I am glad Senator Stewart raised the point — that all of the points I just raised, which are in our report, were not mentioned by Senator MacDonald. Therefore, honourable senators, the only conclusion we can draw is that he agrees with those criticisms, just as he agrees with every comment that we made about Prime Minister Mulroney in the course of our discussion.

In fact, we learned how public servants felt about this process. We saw all kinds of documentary evidence attesting to the fact that there was clearly intense political pressure to get this deal done on time — “on time,” by the way, being related to the exit strategy of the Prime Minister. This became a sufficiently significant issue with public servants that one Treasury Board official advised his colleagues to keep notes so as to preserve an audit trail. In the words of his memorandum — the official’s words, not mine — one public servant wrote to another, “Keep these notes so as to preserve an audit trail so that we will not get hung out to dry.” Public servants were clearly worried about what would happen in the event that there was an inquiry into the signing and the process by which this contract was developed.

I ask honourable senators: If this was such a good deal, if the process was so perfect, if everything was as wonderful as Senator MacDonald and the Conservative members have said it was in their majority report, why do you think civil servants would send themselves messages saying that they must keep notes, otherwise they would get hung out to dry? Why would you do that if you really believed that the process was perfect? In fact, why do you think, during this stretch, that the Department of Transport went through three deputy ministers and four chief negotiators? Do you think that was an accident? Why did Treasury Board officials complain several times, in memoranda and in evidence before the committee, that the chief negotiator was reporting directly to the Privy Council Office?

In case honourable senators have forgotten, the head official in the Privy Council Office is the Clerk of the Privy Council. That is the same clerk who was reporting on a weekly basis on this issue to the Prime Minister and getting instructions back. Treasury Board officials complained several times that the chief negotiator was reporting directly to Privy Council officials instead of going through them.

Why do you think a senior assistant deputy minister in the Department of Transport, a man the committee heard called “highly professional and hard working” by two successive deputy ministers in Transport, was sent home for five weeks of paid gardening leave in the middle of the negotiations? Is there any possibility that this occurred simply because Paxport felt that this person was not cooperating sufficiently with them, was being a little too slow in the negotiations? Is there any chance that is the reason this happened?

All of these peculiarities, all of these odd situations, for anyone who knows how the public service works, are documented in the report. They are not figments of our imagination. We did not make them up. Witnesses came and told us about them and produced documents that confirmed the report. But, guess what? If you listen to Senator MacDonald, or if you read the majority report, is it not amazing that all of these facts are not touched on at all?

That leads me to one final fact which is crucial to this entire issue because it is incontrovertible and uncontested. It is the fact that these agreements were signed by a government 21 days before election day, an election that everyone in the country, every public opinion poll, every Tory candidate, and anyone who even thought about public issues, knew the government would lose.

Forgetting entirely about the rest of the process, this decision to sign an agreement that would be legally binding on an incoming government, an agreement that would represent a major public policy initiative with profound implications for the country’s largest air terminal for 57 years, taken three weeks before election day, is, in my view and in the view of the Liberal members of the committee, sufficient reason on its own, entirely independent of any other factor, to justify the cancelling of this contract.

Senator DeWare: The decision was taken in August.

Senator Kirby: At some point, honourable senators, the issue of responsible government must be taken into account in this process.

Honourable senators, the fact of the matter is that had the Conservative government, which at that point had become the Conservative government of Prime Minister Campbell, acted responsibly and behaved in accordance with Canadian tradition and in accordance with the traditions of the British parliamentary system, Senator MacDonald and I would not be before you today debating this issue. In fact, had they behaved appropriately, it may very well be that the Conservative Party might not be reduced to the mere two seats it now has in the House of Commons.

What was the hurry? That is the question the other side has never answered. If they really believe, as they claim, that this contract was in the best interests of Canadians — and I understand that they must make a case, and if you have a bad case you do the best you can — if they genuinely believe that it was fair and equitable, and if they, in their hearts, believe that there was no flaw in the negotiation process, why did the government insist on signing it 21 days before they left office? If the deal was that good, does anyone doubt that it would have been preserved and signed by an incoming government? What, after all, was the rush? Who stood to benefit? That must be the question, then, if the deal was signed.

Did the Canadian people stand to benefit? Were they any better off by having it signed 21 days before the election than they would have been if it were signed six weeks later? Clearly not. Nothing happened in that intervening 21 days. The only people who stood to benefit were the MergeCo partners, the partners of Paxport, and ultimately of Claridge as they got into the deal — clearly not the Canadian public.

What defence did members opposite put up for this clearly extraordinary act of signing the contract 21 days before the election? They tried to claim, until they were finally shot down by lawyers who were called as witnesses, that the government had no choice but to sign the contract. The fact of the matter is that, right up to the day before the date of signing, there was no contract between the parties. Indeed, the Clerk of the Privy Council testified that serious negotiations were going on up to 24 hours before the contract was signed. Clearly, there was no contract.

The argument the Conservatives then attempted to make was essentially that there was some kind of law of semi-contract; that there was a deal of some kind. However, if they were still negotiating major issues — which the public service witnesses said they were — then clearly there was no legal contract, nor was there a legal obligation on the government to sign anything 21 days before the election. Indeed, if there was any obligation on the government, if they had had any sense of understanding of the responsibility of a government during an election campaign, their obligation was not to sign the contract.

Senator MacDonald is quite right: We quote one of the witnesses who came before the committee, Professor John Wilson, who described that as a reckless disregard for propriety.

Let me make a parenthetical comment. Senator MacDonald then proceeded to imply that the other two witnesses who talked about this issue, Professor Heard in particular, came out in favour of this process. Professor Heard said that no formal constitutional convention was broken. We know that. We never argued that. We never even argued that it was illegal. We just argued that it was immoral and, as Senator Grafstein said a few minutes ago, it was clearly against Canadian political convention.

We concede that the government had the legal right to do it. However, it is not a constitutional issue but a moral issue. It is an issue of what is appropriate, proper, reasonable and sensible for a government to do during an election campaign.

Madam Bourgon, the Clerk of the Privy Council, was asked by Conservative senators what factors should be taken into account with regard to government decision-making during a transition period. She cited three factors and, having served in the Privy Council office myself, I agree with those.

The first factor was that you do not do things which will bind future governments. Guess what? The Pearson contract bound future governments for 57 years.

The second factor was whether there were alternatives. There certainly were. There was the alternative of waiting three weeks to see the outcome of the election before making a decision.

The third factor was to not do things which cause controversy. It is hard to believe, for anyone who read the newspapers, at least in the Metropolitan Toronto area 21 days before the election, that signing this contract would not be full of political controversy.

Every one of the three criteria which the Clerk of the Privy Council says should be considered by a government in making a decision as to what it will and will not do during an election campaign were violated by the decision of the government of Prime Minister Campbell to sign the contract.

Lest you think that this is a simple Canadian view of only Canadians on this side of the house, that these are things that should not be done during an election campaign, and that we are being holier than thou, in Australia, which also follows the practices of the British parliamentary system, there is an explicit written statement from the Prime Minister's Office that a "caretaker government," the phrase they use to describe a government during an election campaign, is very constrained in terms of what it can do during an election. Specifically, it is instructed to avoid implementing major policy initiatives. It is instructed to avoid making significant appointments; a specific example being appointments to the judiciary. This Australian convention also explicitly prevents governments from entering into major contracts during an election campaign, so do not try to tell us that we are trying to dream up some new, holier than thou view of what is appropriate during an election campaign.

The fact is that Canada should have a law similar to the Australian practice. The Australian practice is clearly what it is because the people and politicians of Australia clearly understand, as do the politicians in Canada — except those who were in office at the time — what is appropriate, right, proper, moral and responsible during an election campaign.

In summary, honourable senators, we reached the conclusions we did because we believe that the entire process was flawed. It was flawed from the decision to issue the RFP; it was flawed because of the terms of reference of the RFP; it was flawed because of the way the negotiations proceeded; and it was flawed, ultimately, because of the decision to sign the contract during the election campaign.

It was bad public policy. It was public policy that flew directly in the face of the government's own policy on airport devolution. It was flawed because it ran counter to several statements made by Conservative ministers during the process, including, for example, statements about the role of the local airport authorities, the role of two airports and, ultimately, the role of privatization.

Therefore, honourable senators, we on this side, having looked at the facts which came before us, which, if you look at our terms of reference, is what we were asked to do, reached the inevitable conclusion that the decision to cancel the deal was the right decision.

What did the Conservative senators do? Senator MacDonald confirms something that I have been saying for some time; namely, that the entire Conservative strategy with respect to this issue was to discredit the Nixon report. Their logic was that if they could discredit the Nixon report, it would follow that the decision to cancel the agreement was the wrong decision.

We did not do that. We set out to investigate whether the decision was the right decision, to look at the facts, and to reach our own decision. We were not there to attack the Nixon report. We were there to write our own report and see whether we would reach the same conclusion as that reached by Bob Nixon.

Our analysis is different from his because we had some facts that he did not have, we had more time than he had, and we had a lot of information that he did not have. I concede that our analysis is quite different from his, but our conclusion is the same. The fundamental position of the Tories was to attack and discredit Nixon, thereby discrediting the decision. They absolutely refused to look at any facts whatsoever which made Nixon's conclusion the right conclusion.

In the end, it is not our judgment or that of the Conservatives which matters. What ultimately matters is the judgement on this issue of the Canadian people. Canadians knew in October of 1993 that this deal was wrong. They knew that it was important that this deal be cancelled in order that the needs of Pearson airport could be addressed in a manner which is appropriate and consistent with the public interest rather than the private interest of a small group of people. The public interest was paramount, and the people of Ontario, and those of Metro Toronto in particular, knew that.

Honourable senators, in the court of public opinion, which is what ultimately matters, my colleagues opposite and their friends in the previous Conservative administration have been judged harshly by the people who ultimately have the right to make that decision: the Canadian electorate. That, honourable senators, is the bottom line of this very sad chapter in Canadian politics.

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Prud'homme: Would the honourable senator be prepared to consider the possibility of presenting a bill aimed at preventing future governments from entering into such contracts in their final months or weeks of their mandate, or during an electoral campaign?

We will recall Senator Pitfield's words, extraordinary ones in my opinion, on these matters. They made a real impression upon me. What I am thinking of is what could be done in future to avoid what the senator described as an abuse, to ensure that any new administration, including this one, will not have the opportunity to get into the difficulties that have befallen all governments, as Senator Pitfield so aptly described.

[English]

Senator Kirby: The answer to your question is a categorical "yes." This case confirms my strong belief that we should have in Canada a law which puts into effect the Australian convention. It should not be left to convention, whim and political judgment. During the Pearson hearings we learned that a government which knows that it will be defeated is removed from any constraint to be responsible. The way to deal with that is by passing a law. I have had some unofficial talks with members on both sides of this chamber about the desirability of doing that in the next session.

On motion of Senator Bernston, debate adjourned.

• (1740)

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I wish to make a brief intervention at this time. It has been a long day. With the exception of Senator Thériault's inquiry, No. 73, there appears to be agreement that all other orders, inquiries, motions, and reports stand. If we do have that agreement, I would suggest that Senator Thériault's inquiry be called now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[Translation]

SOCIAL PROGRAMS IN CANADA

INQUIRY—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. L. Norbert Thériault rose pursuant to notice of Wednesday December 6, 1995:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to concerns with respect to social programs in Canada.

He said: Honourable senators, it is 5:30 p.m. This is likely the last time I shall have the privilege of speaking to this chamber, for which I have such great respect. I am pleased to have heard an old-style political debate between Senators MacDonald and Kirby, Maritimers both, and a credit to us.

I am also aware that the Speaker has announced a reception tonight in honour of the new senator, but before leaving I have some things to say. I will need a bit more than 15 minutes, perhaps even 30.

I do not expect senators to stay to listen to me, but if there were some way to get what I have to say recorded in the Debates of the Senate, even if there is no one present, I would appreciate that.

Honourable senators, I will not stop reflecting on certain matters that have been of concern to me throughout my political career just because I will no longer be in the Senate. Some of them will remain with me, and it is precisely of those I wish to speak today.

My attachment to Canada is unconditional. This country has always been one to confront us with stimulating and sometimes difficult challenges. Behind the political decisions, people require and deserve actions that are focused on the greatest public good. You will not find it surprising if I tell you that what lies behind my words is a basic concern with the future of social programs. One might say that my entire life in politics has been closely linked to that concern.

I had the honour of being at the helm of the ministry of Health under then Premier, now Senator, Robichaud. I had the honour of being at the head of that ministry when it inaugurated health insurance in the late sixties. Those who remember what New Brunswick was like at that time will need no convincing that that policy made a real difference.

The times they were a-changing, whether CCF policies in Saskatchewan or the Lesage government's reforms in Quebec. Today as well, the times they are a-changing. I would merely like assurance that, in the changes that are to come, we do not lose sight of the intent and the scope of past changes. Our country must continue to produce wealth and, in order to do so, it is imperative for our public finances to be put in order. However, is the ultimate measure of the wealth of a society not the condition of its least fortunate members, its poorest members? I have always believed that, and I still do.

I have always been one of those people who believe that better program management is essential. I have never hidden my view that the federal government must maintain its capacity to set national standards for social policy, while leaving program administration for the provinces, in order to attain the desired objectives.

National standards must reflect the legislative provisions prescribed by the Official Languages Act for attaining the desired objectives. This approach has the two-fold advantage of sharing responsibilities and bringing social program administration under one and the same mechanism, thus allowing economies of scale by eliminating program duplication and overlap. It strikes me as essential, moreover, for the Canadian government to preserve its ability to intervene in various ways to support the development of francophone communities outside Quebec.

Devolution of powers could be very damaging to the development of these communities unless accompanied by specific guarantees that take into account the local economy. The local experience with school boards is a case in point. One of these specific guarantees is recognition of linguistic duality. In other words, any proposal for devolution of powers to the provinces should include a clause recognizing the Official Languages Act.

Honourable senators, it is my opinion that Canada's social security system must be updated to adjust to the situation we are facing at the end of this century. That is what the government did when it announced its proposals for changes in unemployment insurance, now to become employment insurance. I come from one of those regions with a resource-based economy. These sectors are now in decline. Less manpower is needed by industry. Comparatively speaking, these regions are more dependent on transfer payments than the national average. However, the people in my community are proud and want to take charge of their own lives.

The aim of social assistance policies should be to get people who are able to work off the welfare rolls. It is not true that most welfare recipients would rather live on government handouts than work. Canadians want to earn an honest living. When GM announced in January 1995 that 500 jobs might be created at its plant in Oshawa, 25 000 people turned up one morning to apply for one of those jobs. They came from all over Canada to apply for a job that had yet to be created. Do not tell me that Canadians do not want to work.

We must not concentrate only on reducing the deficit. It is my conviction that it is our duty to develop a Canadian social security system that is fair and equitable for all Canadians. Any changes should respond and adjust to the particular circumstances of individuals and regions faced with an economy based on seasonal jobs. The employment insurance system will require that the unemployed make a serious effort to find work. I agree with this type of measure. We must break the dependency cycle. However, such measures do not deal with the fundamental problem of an economy based on seasonal employment.

In the fisheries, for instance, the industry must diversify by processing seafood while increasing the added value and developing a marketing strategy for the sale of quality products on international markets. It is not enough to protect and rebuild resources to get this industry out of the doldrums. Modernizing the fisheries and new marketing strategies are two aspects that are essential to the development of this economic sector.

• (1750)

[English]

I now turn to my concern about health care. In this current wave of reform and cutbacks, it is of great importance that we maintain the highest health care standards for all of our citizens, standards which we have worked so hard to establish and maintain since World War II. It is crucial that we do not end up with special health care access and services for the privileged. We cannot allow this to happen while the majority of Canadians witness the demise of universal health care. There should be no distinction in health services based on region or class.

I know that some people are attracted to the U.S. style of health care system, but this example in itself should be a good deterrent to such a temptation. Even if our American neighbours can brag about having some of the best hospitals in the world, I, for one, would not brag about a system where millions of people, mostly poor, have no insured coverage whatsoever in 1996.

That is not to say that there are no savings to be made in operating such a system. Even the Americans will acknowledge that the Canadian way of doing things is actually less expensive. Studies show that the Big Three automobile producers estimate that, for every vehicle built in Canada, there is a net savings of $1,000 in the health care premiums paid to its Canadian workers. This constitutes a clear competitive advantage for us. A healthy workforce is also good for the economy.

Change is inevitable. In 1994, in Ontario alone, the government spent $450 million to deal with the common cold in emergency rooms. You do not need to be a rocket scientist to figure out that we no longer have those sums of money to deal with that obnoxious cold for which there is no cure in any event.

Clearly, there are some ways in which we could improve our health care system. These days we are more prepared to stress preventative measures which could also be cheaper in the long run.

Ultimately, what matters is the health of the Canadian people, including our children in the classrooms and the elderly. Equal access to our health system, from sea to sea, is also important.

There are different ways to reform the system. While Roy Romanow, Frank McKenna and Ralph Klein have all shut down hospitals, and while Mike Harris will do the same and Quebec will likely see closures shortly, we can still see important differences in their respective approaches. The first two have concentrated, first and foremost, on the good health of the people, while the other two are obsessed, almost exclusively, with the bottom line.

Do I need to remind you which vision I favour? The bottom line is there to serve the quality of life of the people. It is, in itself, neither an abstract concept nor a holy quest; we should never forget this.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, I have long regretted the fact that the unemployment insurance plan was not flexible enough to permit a capable individual wanting to improve his lot to take training without losing his benefits. My view of things, where a little imagination is needed not to see all UI claimants as system abusers, is fair.

[English]

Training in the workplace remains our best bet, but it must at first simply exist. In entire regions where small business accounts for most of the jobs, training is nonexistent. Our previous UI system was inadequate because it favoured dependency on the system over individual and collective responsibility to find work. Nowhere is this dependency higher than in regions built on seasonal industries.

If a UI recipient decides to pursue training, the system should encourage this person to do so without loss of benefit. This could be done by a mix of grants, low- or no-interest loans and actual employment benefits. There is a false perception out there about seasonal workers. Many Canadians think that the government programs aimed at seasonal workers are too generous and just feed dependency.

I have always thought of seasonal workers as professionals of their trade. A fisherman will never be able to fish the whole year through. He must follow the natural cycle of his industry. Governments must understand this and take it into account. I will never accept, as is proposed in the new reforms for UI, that these folks should be treated as second-class citizens.

I am hopeful that Doug Young will fix that. I have faith that with Doug Young as Minister of Human Resources Development, it will not be the bureaucrats and the rich industrialists from central Canada who will make the policy decisions; he will make those himself.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, this does not mean that we should not reform the social programs for the people working in this sector. An Acadian working in the Acadian peninsula who earns $50,000 or $100,000 in two or three months should not be entitled to unemployment insurance benefits. I feel that school age young people who have not completed high school, should not be entitled to unemployment insurance. In addition to the costs to government of unemployment insurance benefits in many of these cases — I am talking of school age young people — a further investment is made in training these young people to get them into the job market. Had they completed their studies, we could have saved the benefits and the training costs. To achieve the same results, such a measure perhaps might be effective in preventing school dropout and its ever-increasing, disastrous effects.

I am not satisfied either that tightening conditions of eligibility or reducing levels of benefits are the solution. These actions may shift the problem and cause the unemployed to swell the ranks of those on welfare. Our aim should be to eliminate unemployment and not the victim of the situation. Savings to be made in the area of unemployment should come from a drop in its use with equivalent job creation.

The savings should be reinvested, in part at least, in a job creation strategy to fight the deficit. Let us not forget that those who work pay their share of income tax and help reduce the infamous deficit. The new high tech world economy requires a period of transition and adjustment for workers.

[English]

I fear that entire rural communities do not even have an access ramp to the information highway. More and more so, we are talking about this highway as the road to the economy of the future. In many rural communities, this highway has yet to be accessed. Small businesses are not fully equipped to take their place on this highway. They often lack the specialized staff which would be the backbone of their ability to compete.

I would point out that, in New Brunswick, under Premier McKenna, we are the leader in this field. What has been done in New Brunswick can be done all over the country, and I highly recommend it.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, the Government of New Brunswick did not stop at improving the state of public finances. It placed the provincial economy on new economic paths, including those of telecommunications, while focussing on the bilingual character of the province's labour force. It demonstrated its vitality and even an aggressiveness, for which some criticized it, in its efforts to draw business to New Brunswick. The McKenna government showed political vision and will, which are today paying off. Other Canadians deserve as much.

In my opinion, the Liberal social security philosophy should be backed up by a real strategy based on the development of Canada's regions. More than ever before, the federal government must act as a catalyst in the creation of jobs. It must promote the development of private business by upgrading human resources and improving the adaptability of our communities. The proportion of the population that has benefited from post-secondary training and still remains unemployed or is in a threatened job increases relentlessly.

The aftermath of an economic crisis is extremely difficult and hard to accept for a country like ours. The technological sector can create only so many jobs. What is more, it has a direct influence on the increased rate of unemployment because, for example, robots are replacing workers increasingly. This is why Canada, and we are all involved, must strive to create jobs in order to remedy the problem of unemployment found throughout the country. The challenge is to carry out this feat within the reduced fiscal manoeuvring room available.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is six o'clock. Is it agreed I should not see the clock?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Thériault: Thank you, honourable senators, and I must again apologize because this is very likely the last time I shall have the opportunity of speaking to the Senate. I appreciate the time you are giving me.

The social and intellectual climate we are living in is hardly a reassuring one. In the name of economic doctrine, one barely open to question, there seems to be unanimity of opinion and an absence of debate. However, do not misunderstand me. The deficit and debt issue is an absolute priority for the country.

The Minister of Finance's budget forecast of a $24-billion deficit next year is on the right track. It is still too high for the good of the country. We have reached the point of borrowing money just to pay our grocery bills. That is shocking, and cannot continue. I agree with the Minister of Finance's last economic statement, that the deficit must be a maximum of 3 per cent of the gross national product. The lower it is, the better. The battle against the deficit must continue to be a priority until the deficit is eradicated.

• (1800)

[English]

Having said this, there are different approaches to deficit reduction. There is Ralph Klein's way; there is Frank McKenna's way; there is Mike Harris' way; and there is Paul Martin's way. When reading editorials in The Globe and Mail or The Financial Post, one would be forced to think that there is only one way to slash the deficit, with only one tool to do the trick. That tool is a torch so governments can slash every program in the community and then burn the remains.

Honourable senators, if I were the last person left on earth, I would fight this view of things to the end, this blind, right-wing ideology, not for ideology's sake but because behind every statistic and number lies a human being. Someone who has worked hard often does not make ends meet.

My point of view does not exclude any reform to social spending or any cuts to social services. Of course there have been abuses. Of course some programs are a trap of dependency. However, what we need is to get people out of this dependency. To see welfare as a big case of massive fraud is preposterous. In my opinion, only ideologues such as David Frum, who grew up in Toronto's posh confines and probably never knew anyone or any family on welfare, could reach such an ignorant conclusion. Let me tell you that it is easier to reach such conclusions if you are from Rosedale or Westmount than if you are from my region of Canada.

Honourable senators, it is the unanimity of the right-wing view that really bugs me. Call this outdated, but I am still preoccupied with the people behind the statistics. As a democrat and a pluralist, I am still preoccupied by the unanimity of horrors in the media and elsewhere. The recession we have endured since 1990 has been devastating. It was caused by a number of factors, the high cost of government spending being one of them perhaps, but I will underline one of them. One cause which has been grossly overlooked is the high interest rates imposed by the Bank of Canada at the beginning of the 90s. Why did the central bank maintain such high interest rates while industry was on its knees, when families could not afford to buy a new home to kick-start the construction industry and could not afford new household appliances to spur the manufacturing sector?

[Translation]

It could even be argued that this overly tight monetary policy has contributed to the deficit by favouring financial capital over manufacturing capital.

Such detailed analyses have rarely appeared on the editorial pages. Here again, they said that social program expenditures had to be reduced. These represented 19.7 per cent of the gross national product in 1994, whereas the figure for 1992 was 17.8 per cent.

In the present climate, almost no role will be left for governments to play. Elected officials will be there to facilitate companies' doing business. It is commonly said that businesses are by far the best managers of the economy, anyway. There are excellent Canadian entrepreneurs. Some of our companies, such as Bell Canada and Bombardier, are among the world's best. However, might the recent bankruptcies of Campeau, the Reichmanns and the like not also be an indicator that there are management errors in the private sector? That sector, too, is human.

According to Mike Harris, Preston Manning, Diane Francis and The Financial Post, the only raison d'être for any government, is to eliminate the deficit. Social expectations, like collective well-being, are reduced to a strict minimum.

[English]

Do not get me wrong — government has a responsibility to foster a good business climate, but if it must sacrifice its social responsibilities, is business willing to pick up the slack? We have not seen any trends pointing in that direction yet, and rightly so, because that is not the job of business — it is the job of government.

In early December, The Globe and Mail reported two different but complementary stories. The first was that the Royal Bank recorded a record profit of $1.3 billion. Good. The next day, the same paper reported that one out of six Canadians is barely literate. They have problems reading textbooks, application forms and manuals. I mention these two examples because I think they are closely linked. Literacy is economy; good health care is economy; public infrastructure is economy. However, too many politicians today forget about that. It does not seem too difficult to understand that if we cut too much from the colleges and universities, we will pay a price for this somewhere down the road.

Senator Kinsella: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Senator Thériault: According to the neo-conservatives, we should not consider investments in the public sector until we clean up our public finances. However, what if it takes five or ten or fifteen years? Who will look after the people affected by cut-backs? The churches? The Salvation Army?

Honourable senators, Canada is a rich country, and it can do much better than that. The vulnerable and the needy are not going to go away, even if they are less dependent on government programs. Taxes are way out of all proportion. What about Germany with its vigorous economy, although its citizens are taxed more than we are?

They realize over there that the common good is not just the good of one segment of society but is imperative for a healthy economy. I am sure this understanding exists among Canadians as well.

We must appeal to our greatest common virtues in order to put our financial house in order, review the tax system and impose a minimum tax as a direct contribution towards reducing the deficit.

Canadians want to work, and job creation is the real solution to the fiscal crisis. Canadians want to take care of the most vulnerable in our society. Canadians want to keep their social programs. It is only common sense to find various ways to reduce the deficit, because the American way, the way of the neo-conservatives, leads inevitably to a society of rich and poor, a society where the middle class is constantly shrinking and intolerance is the order of the day. That is what is at stake. That is what I am worried about.

Like my colleague Senator Roux, I am a pacifist at heart. Like him and most Canadians, I would like to see a review of the national defence budget, in light of our problems with the deficit. I am worried about the differences in treatment of budget cutbacks. The easy target, as I said before, is our social programs, which are being slashed in a spectacular way. The real challenge is to take a courageous and responsible attitude by reducing the national defence budget. Whether we like it or not, money is being wasted on defence while the needs of the public are not being met. In fact, it is estimated that the world spends 20 billion American dollars a week on defence, while the same amount spent annually between now and the year 2000 would be enough to meet all the objectives set for this period at the world summit on children held in 1990, objectives that include reducing malnutrition by half and achieving an immunization rate of 90 per cent.

[English]

Nonetheless, the budget of the Department of National Defence for 1995-96 will still be 27 per cent higher after inflation than it was in 1980-81 when the last Cold War build-up began. In 1994, Canada remained the twelfth largest military spender in the world. Between 1994 and 1995, world military spending dropped by 29 per cent while Canadian military spending increased by 3 per cent.

[Translation]

It was social security that budget cuts affected the most. I believe that the role of Canada, the envy of everybody, is to help prevent conflict in the world. It must provide an example by providing more humanitarian aid.

When we realize that social injustice and intolerable inequality lead sooner or later to revolts such as hunger strikes and civil or international wars, we who live in peace must give thought to security and to the prevention of wars. This is where, in my humble opinion, our country can and must make its mark.

The aim of our considering this question is to do away with the myth that violence is man's attraction to war, a natural component of human nature. We must stop thinking that violence is natural and war inevitable.

Canada must provide an example. No military force can succeed when the international or political diplomacy of the countries involved is not based on an accurate assessment of the political situation, adapted to local realities.

Canada's requirements, in terms of national security, coastal and air surveillance, rescue, and police force back-up, cannot be met in the context of a major war. Our troops need training and equipment in keeping with the missions they will now be expected to carry out. The review of the military organization also must be in response to this new mission. It must be directed toward a diplomatic resolution of conflicts. Canada's real challenge is not military, but technological and economic.

At a time when Canada is embarked upon a major deficit reduction operation, it would be the height of paradox if it were to forgo the rare means at its disposal to take up and win the urgent and vital battle to put the country back on the rails of prosperity and to reaffirm unity and its national identity.

What would be the point of having the finest shield if only to defend symbolically the borders of a nation that no longer had the means to keep its standard of living and security?

In the past ten years, Canada's national debt has almost tripled, going from $168 billion in 1983-84 to $458 billion in 1993. It has forced the government to spend a third of its tax revenues on servicing the debt. This is totally unacceptable. The National Council of Welfare stated in its 1993 report that one Canadian in six was poor; that nearly five million people lived below the poverty line.

According to the May 1994 issue of the magazine Affaires, business paid $14 billion for jobs in 1976 and only $7 billion in 1992. Individual income tax increased on average by 7 per cent annually between 1984 and 1992. Those in the high income bracket pay an average of 10 per cent of their income in taxes, whereas the average worker pays 40 per cent. Business people and the rich have some 59 ways of completely avoiding paying taxes in addition to over 105 tax shelters, deductions and tax credits available to them. Nearly 400,000 businesses pay no taxes despite receiving over $36 billion a year in government subsidies.

Investors, too, should pay their fair share of taxes. In his tax reform paper proposing a single tax system, Dennis Mills, the hon. member for Broadview—Greenwood in Toronto, shows how the tax system is unfair by giving preferential treatment to investors. For example, a worker making $50,000 a year will pay 23.7 per cent of his income in taxes, while an investor with the same $50,000 income will pay 17.5 per cent. This amounts to 6 per cent of $31,100 a year. A worker earning $100,000 will pay 34.1 per cent in taxes as opposed to 21.3 per cent for the investor. In this case, the difference is even greater as the investor will pay 12 per cent or $12,800 less in taxes.

Therefore, the higher the investor's income, the more tax shelters there seem to be. We should take a good look at the tax shelters used by Canada's wealthy families. The taxes recovered by the government could be used to fund social programs and to reduce the debt. I think that asking those Canadians who are better off to pay more money in taxes based on their income would give us a way to fight the deficit. We must stop continuously going after lower-income taxpayers.

I listened carefully to today's debate on Bill C-110. Even with the best social programs in the world, how can this country get ahead while the federal system is paralysed by Quebec separatism? This is a matter that bothers me and that will eventually have to be resolved once and for all.

We have been hearing the same thing over and over for far too long. I look forward to seeing this malaise dissipated as soon as possible. Must I remind you that the October 30 referendum was won by the federalist side? It is true that the results could hardly have been any closer, but it was a clear victory nonetheless.

It is easy to understand the strategy behind the separatists obstinately persisting in talking and acting as if they had won. They are trying to create the illusion that the way to separation is all laid out and obstacle-free. In their quest for separation, however, separatists have been using for nearly 30 years tricks as questionable as humiliating Quebec. To go to such lengths is incomprehensible to everyone in the world, except for old-stock nationalists, of course. This approach had an impact on Quebec's economy as well as on the rest of Canada.

• (1820)

The ultimate proof, in my mind, of their dead-end mentality is found in the nosedive Montreal has taken. Montreal used to be, for us Acadians in particular and for other French Canadians as well, a leader of the economy and in the promotion of the French language. Montreal used to be a large urban reflection of what we were collectively. Needless to say, that it is no longer the case. First of all, instead of being the metropolis of all French Canadians, Montreal has become the private preserve of Quebecers, as advocated during the quiet revolution. Does anyone who is not a Quebecer feel comfortable in Montreal today?

Second, Montreal's economy is so weak that the city is no longer the focal point it once was. It no longer attracts those workers from the maritimes who keep looking further and further west for work. Montreal is the mere shadow of its former self. Worse yet, there is a clear connection between Montreal's decline and the obstinacy of the nationalists, who are obsessed with having a country at any cost. They have no qualms about sacrificing their most important city. It does not bother the most radical of them to know that other French Canadians no longer feel at home in this metropolis. It does not bother the nationalists that there is a constant malaise between them and immigrants, who symbolize the future.

If you compare Montreal to Toronto, the contrast and decline is even more apparent. Walking through a Toronto ethnic neighbourhood, it is easy to see where the open-mindedness and healthier economy is to be found. While experiencing economic difficulties of its own, Toronto has clearly taken over from Montreal as this country's metropolis, and this for the most part because of the nationalists' obsession and stubbornness.

I have never believed in nationalism, this ideology based on race and narrow-mindedness. When Quebec nationalists refute such accusations, they invariably point to their open-mindedness and tolerance. However, these values are universal and are shared by all Canadians; indeed, they form part of Canada's reputation on the international scene. Do not get me wrong; Quebecers are open-minded and tolerant, they are also Canadians. Separatist propaganda makes no mention of the fact that Quebecers are an integral part of our country.

At the constitutional level, the time has come to make some changes and to counter the Bloc Québécois' efforts to state its separatist views in a Parliament that it considers to be a foreign institution. The time has come to stop the Reform Party members who see bilingualism as an obstacle to their narrow and limited view of the country. What does the Reform Party know about bilingualism? Surely as much as its COR party cousins in New Brunswick, which has just been wiped off the political map along with its bigoted ideas regarding Acadians. Quebec must join the Constitution of its own volition. If we are to have a strong Canada, Quebec must be part of it as a major partner. I cannot imagine a strong Canada without a strong Quebec. However, I insist that the rights of French-speaking minorities and all other minorities must be adequately protected in any constitutional agreement.

The Canadian government has a responsibility to make realistic and acceptable offers to a majority of Quebecers. English Canada must also accept these offers with an open and positive attitude. Should that process fail, we all know what the consequence would be.

I supported the Meech Lake Accord and the Charlottetown Agreement, and last October I participated in the huge rally held in Montreal to promote Canadian unity. I also support the current change. I am in favour of Quebec rejoining the great Canadian family. This is an urgent and pressing issue which must be settled as quickly as possible.

Even in making such a profession of faith, I can never satisfy Quebec separatists, who do not even want to hear proposals from Ottawa, and who dream only of embassies, and of a presidential residence. We must solve this issue as quickly as possible. We must make sure that Quebecers can overwhelmingly support Canada.

At a time when opinion polls dominate political life, perhaps we should remember that government's role is to govern. We must put in place ways to create new businesses by stimulating and encouraging economic expansion. We should never forget the reasons for a healthy economy. We must do everything we can to stimulate Canada's economy, because work, dignity and prosperity must be available to everyone. When, for any reason, this is impossible, the government should still be responsible for supporting and helping the most vulnerable in our society. Social justice is a policy, a political choice that Canada has made ever since it was founded, and a political choice it must maintain today.

Government's role is also to define and defend the public space. It is not necessary to privatize everything to be efficient. We must take a pragmatic attitude instead of being hung up on obsolete ideologies. As we enter the twenty-first century, we absolutely must deal with this constitutional issue that has been plaguing us for far too long. Canada must take its place at the forefront of the industrialized world. The stakes are high, and we have practically all the assets we need to make Canada the country of the next century.

Honourable senators, I must express my gratitude for having been allowed to say something that I needed to say and also — since this is probably my last time here — to pass on my very best wishes to everyone here. You have your work cut out for you. When I arrived here 17 years ago, it seemed to me that I had a whole lifetime ahead of me. Now that time is nearly over, there is one thing left for me to say: Here in the Senate, I met the best people I have met anywhere in my life, men and women devoted to their country, honest and sincere, informed, specialists in all areas. We have not yet found a way to work together, perhaps because we are too tied up in our own partisan politics. I would ask you, however, in the coming months or years, when the future of the country is at stake, to try to put partisan politics aside and to work together to preserve this wonderful country which we all love.

On motion of Senator Berntson, debate adjourned.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham, (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, there will, of course, be other opportunities to pay appropriate tribute to the life, times and many accomplishments of our dear friend and colleague Senator Thériault, but, before moving the adjournment, may I observe, on behalf of all honourable senators in the chamber and elsewhere, that we have just heard from one of the greatest, most sincere, most eloquent, most forceful, and most persuasive social consciences in all of Canada.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

The Senate adjourned until Friday, February 2, at 10:00 a.m.

THE SENATE

Friday, February 2, 1996

The Senate met at 10:00 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

SENATORS' STATEMENTS

THE HONOURABLE SHIRLEY MAHEU

TRIBUTE ON APPOINTMENT TO SENATE

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I am particularly disappointed that I was unable to be here yesterday, through no fault of my own. I wish to extend the warmest of greetings and welcome to the newest senator in this chamber, Senator Shirley Maheu.

I know that many things — all complimentary — were said about Shirley yesterday, and I should like to echo them. She is what is known as a “people’s politician.” She is a listener. She pays attention to the people whom she represents. This is as important in the Senate as it is in the other place.

Yesterday, the remark was made that she is simply known as “Shirley” around her area. I have a special way of corroborating that fact because my city of Lethbridge is twinned with her city of St-Laurent. I know from the exchanges that have taken place over the years how highly she is thought of and respected.

She will be a great addition to this chamber through her experience in her former constituency, her experience in the other place and her desire to reach out to people, as she has done particularly in the area of citizenship and immigration. Last, but definitely not least, her addition to this chamber, I am sure, is expressed in her fervent love for the unity of this country and Quebec’s place in it.

THE HONOURABLE JOHN SYLVAIN

TRIBUTE ON RESIGNATION FROM SENATE

Hon. Joyce Fairbairn (Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, there is another very important person to whom I wish to pay tribute today, the former Senator John Sylvain.

Honourable senators, I speak as a colleague of Senator Sylvain, who admired him enormously. He brought to this chamber not just a background in his personal field, which was commerce and the insurance business, but a willingness to share that background and, as a result, the Senate was the benefactor of the tremendous work he did on one of our major committees, the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

He also brought with him a military background in both the active and reserve forces, which was of great assistance in some of the work done by the Subcommittee on Veterans Affairs of this place.

More than anything, though, whenever one had conversations with John Sylvain, he talked about this country. The last intervention he made in this house concerned the work all of us in Canada have to do to keep the country strong and united.

I wish him and his family well. I know that as the weeks and months unfold, and the debate about our country unfolds, there will be in Quebec a strong and passionate voice from John Sylvain for a strong and united Canada with Quebec at its heart.

THE HONOURABLE EARL A. HASTINGS

TRIBUTE ON RESIGNATION AS CHAIRMAN OF INTERNAL ECONOMY COMMITTEE

Hon. Colin Kenny: Honourable senators, on behalf of Senator Di Nino and myself, I should like to inform the Senate that at yesterday’s meeting of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, the following motion was passed:

That the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration expresses its appreciation to the Honourable Senator Hastings, Chairman of the Committee from February 24, 1994 until December 14, 1995, for his leadership and contribution to the work of this Committee and to the Senate of Canada.

Honourable senators, it would be appropriate to remind the house of the accomplishments of the committee under the leadership of Senator Hastings. In addition to the routine but nevertheless essential duties of reviewing budget applications from committee chairmen and from the administration, Senator Hastings’ successes were many.

In the nearly two years that he served as chairman, he oversaw major construction initiatives, including the renovation of the 1910 wing of the East Block, which is scheduled for completion in the summer of 1997, and the construction of the new committee room in the Centre Block, which is scheduled for completion early in 1998.

Under his leadership, the committee improved the enhanced program for visitors to Parliament, as proposed by the Speakers of both Houses, opening the doors for the first time in Canada’s history to permit visitors to behold the two Houses of Parliament from our own viewpoint here within.

Although it has been a topic of discussion for several years, it was Senator Hastings who had the Internal Economy Committee give the Senate administration an official mandate to discuss with their House of Commons counterparts matters of mutual interest to identify potential cost efficiencies.

Senator Hastings is an open-minded individual. It was under his leadership that the Internal Economy Committee blessed the electronic distribution of documents on the Parliament site of the Internet. Transcripts and reports from three major committees, the Special Committee of the Senate on Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, the Special Committee of the Senate on Pearson Airport Agreements and, currently, the Special Committee on Bill C-110, an act respecting constitutional amendments, have been accessed by the public over the Internet.

His biggest achievement by far, however, was the repatriation of the administrative support role to the parliamentary associations. As a reflection of our constitutional equality with the other place, fully half, or four of the eight parliamentary associations, namely, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization/North Atlantic Assembly Parliamentary Association, Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association and the Canada-France Inter-Parliamentary Association, are now being administered by Senate staff. This represented a huge cost saving. In addition, Senator Hastings advocated the creation of a smaller Joint Inter-Parliamentary Council that he, as chairman of Internal Economy, would jointly chair along with an appointee of the House of Commons.

In brief, honourable senators, circumstances have not permitted Earl Hastings to continue in his role as the chairman of the Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee. However, Senator Di Nino and I invite all senators to recognize the significant contributions that he made to the betterment of the Senate in that role.

THE HONOURABLE MARJORY LEBRETON

CONDOLENCES ON RECENT BEREAVEMENTS

Hon. Colin Kenny: Honourable senators, I would be remiss if I did not say a few words about the recent tragedy that has befallen a distinguished member of our committee, the Honourable Senator Marjory LeBreton. On behalf of all members of the Internal Economy Committee, we extend to her our prayers and best wishes.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

YOUTH CRIMINALITY— CONGRATULATIONS ON RECENT PRODUCTION

Hon. A. Raynell Andreychuk: Honourable senators, I rise today to commend the CBC for its production entitled, Little Criminals.

Little Criminals, which aired on Sunday, January 21, is a fine piece of work which portrays quite accurately the complexities surrounding the issue of youth criminality. The movie follows the exploits of an 11-year-old boy who, because of his age, is not subject to prosecution on criminal charges. The boy's problems are portrayed as his criminal activities are explored, as his brutal family life is revealed, and as his poor living conditions are exposed.

By addressing subject-matter that is both emotionally charged and complex, the CBC ventured where other broadcasters would, perhaps, not dare. The result, however, was a quality production which, although shocking at times, was couched in a contextual framework which allowed for a better understanding of the phenomenon of violence and, in particular, youth violence.

Little Criminals as a CBC in-house production came into being thanks to the hard work and creativity of its all-Canadian actors, writers, researchers and producers. It was filmed in Vancouver, and its story line is a result of the extensive research of its writer, Dennis Foon. Although fictional, the movie can be considered a collection of true stories, as many experts attested in The Making of Little Criminals which aired on CBC the day before.

According to the producer, public response has been phenomenal. In addition to receiving highly favourable reviews from critics, 1.6 million Canadians were interested enough to tune in. These ratings are considered by CBC to be some of the best that that time slot could offer. Perhaps most significant is the fact that Little Criminals has created not only awareness but action as well. Producer Phil Savath has indicated that he has been contacted by various groups across the country, ranging from school groups to victim awareness groups, to crime prevention groups. These groups have been spurred to action and have made requests for copies of the movie, as they seek information with regard to how they can help in the tackling of this problem.

By producing Little Criminals without partners, the CBC was able to reap 100 per cent of the dividends. Already, the movie has been sold to channels in Britain and Italy, while American cable companies have also expressed interest and are expected to buy soon.

The CBC and all those involved in the making of Little Criminals deserve much credit. As a viewer, I was personally impressed and would like to commend the CBC for taking on such a difficult and potentially controversial subject-matter. The problems surrounding the issues of youth and youth crime need to be addressed realistically, responsibly and in a manner that takes into account Canadian values and experiences. Little Criminals, and its evident impact, is to be applauded in this regard. Let us hope its success translates into more of this type of programming. Canadians can and will be proud of a public broadcaster that is able to both create awareness and spur positive action.

I do not wish to enter into the debate surrounding the recently released Juneau report. That being said, it is my opinion, however, that Canada can accommodate a public broadcaster that is willing and able to deliver efficiently programming that is not offered elsewhere.

Little Criminals shows that programming that is distinctively different and Canadian is palatable. In this respect, Little Criminals is a meritorious production and may point to a possible way ahead for the CBC.

THE HONOURABLE ROYCE FRITH Q.C.

TRIBUTE ON RETIREMENT AS HIGH COMMISSIONER TO LONDON

Hon. M. Lorne Bonnell: Honourable senators, I rise to say a few words about a friend of ours, His Excellency Royce Frith, High Commissioner to London. Yesterday, I returned from London, England. The former Senator Frith asked that I should extend his best wishes to his honourable colleagues in this chamber, and especially to the Speaker. He told me that he would like to have stayed a little longer in his job as High Commissioner, but that he is looking forward to having a year to travel around his native province of Ontario and his country of Canada to know all of it better, and to get a little rest for a change.

THE HONOURABLE JOHN SYLVAIN

TRIBUTE ON RESIGNATION FROM THE SENATE

Hon. M. Lorne Bonnell: Honourable senators, I should like to say a few words about John Sylvain who, I regret, has left us. John Sylvain was a member of the committee which I chair, the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science and Technology. He was very active on behalf of the veterans of this country.

John Sylvain was also a member of our NATO Parliamentary Association, to which he made excellent contributions, especially while at a conference in Italy.

He and his good wife are excellent companions and great Canadians. The members of the House of Commons in England asked me to pass on their regrets that he has left the Senate and will no longer be active in NATO.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA

OUTSTANDING COMMUNITY SUPPORT FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS

Hon. Mira Spivak: Honourable senators, I wish to draw your attention to a secret that the people of Manitoba have known for a very long time and which The Globe and Mail let out of the bag only last weekend.

Winnipeg is the performing arts capital of Canada, and possibly of North America. That claim is based on the number crunching of a Toronto consulting firm. Its study of performing arts activities in North American cities found that, on a per capita basis, Winnipeg enjoys about 75 per cent more professional activity than Toronto. Its citizens privately contribute about 10 per cent more to sustain the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, the Manitoba Theatre Centre, the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra, and many more professional companies, than do their counterparts in Toronto in support of their performing arts.

• (1020)

Support for the performing arts in Winnipeg is broad-based, enthusiastic and loyal, which allows professional artists to nurture their talent in relative comfort and safety. Winnipeg-based companies have produced Evelyn Hart, John Hirsch, and countless other performing artists. I should also note that Winnipeg has also produced many renowned visual and literary artists, including Pulitzer Prize winning author Carol Shields.

As The Globe and Mail acknowledged, Winnipeg is a thriving cultural centre, large enough to support a wealth of activity and small enough for everyone to feel a part of it. I am pleased to represent a region of the country that, year after year, decade after decade, affirms the value of the arts and enjoys them. I applaud the people and the artists of Winnipeg. I am glad that Toronto and our national newspaper have "cottoned-on" to our secret.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

NATIONAL PROTECTED AREAS STRATEGY

REPORT OF ENERGY, THE ENVIRONMENT
AND NATURAL RESOURCES COMMITTEE TABLED

Hon. Pat Carney, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources, tabled the following report:

Friday, February 2, 1996

The Standing Senate Committee on Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources has the honour to present its

TWENTIETH REPORT

Your Committee, which was authorized by the Senate on Wednesday, April 27, 1994, to undertake a study of the policy options available to the government to complete the network of pristine areas that represent Canada's natural regions and of the creation of a National Protected Areas Strategy and to make recommendations thereon, now presents its report entitled Protecting Places and People: Conserving Canada's Natural Heritage.

Respectfully submitted,

PAT CARNEY, P.C.
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Senator Carney, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

QUESTION PERIOD

DELAYED ANSWERS TO ORAL QUESTIONS

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I have a response to questions raised in the Senate on November 22 and 23, 1995 by the Honourable Senator Forrestall, regarding the search and rescue helicopter replacement program; a response to a question raised in the Senate on November 23, 1995 by the Honourable Senator Kinsella, regarding science and technology research; a response to a question raised in the Senate on December 6, 1995 by the Honourable Senator Tkachuk, regarding the welfare residency requirement in British Columbia; a response to a question raised in the Senate on December 13, 1995 by the Honourable Senator Gustafson, concerning western grain marketing; and a response to a question raised in the Senate on December 13, 1995 by the Honourable Senator Balfour, regarding the sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada.

TRANSPORT

SEARCH AND RESCUE HELICOPTER REPLACEMENT PROGRAM—STATUS OF EH-101 CONTRACT—NATURE OF MILESTONE PAYMENTS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

(Response to questions raised by Hon. J. Michael Forrestall on November 22 and 23, 1995)

On November 5, 1993, following a promise outlined in the Government's Red Book, to cancel the $5.8-billion EH-101 helicopter program, termination notices were issued to the two prime contractors: EH Industries Limited and Paramax Systems Canada Incorporated (subsequently Unisys GSG and now Loral Systems Canada Incorporated).

The settlement agreement with Loral Systems Canada which was announced publicly on March 31, 1995, totalled $166 million. It included the amounts due to Loral, its subcontractors and suppliers. Of the amount, $98 million was for work completed prior to termination and the balance of $68 million was for work in progress at the time of termination and termination costs.

On January 23, 1996, the details of the settlement agreement reached between the Government of Canada and E.H. Industries Limited were made public.

The settlement agreement with E.H. Industries totals $157.8 million. This includes $136.6 million for the cost of work completed prior to termination and work in progress at the time of termination, and $21.2 million for termination costs.

A further $155 million was spent on project definition, research and development and project implementation.

INDUSTRY

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH—CUTS TO BUDGET—TIMING FOR RELEASE OF STUDY—GOVERNMENT POLICY

(Response to question raised by Hon. Noël A. Kinsella on November 23, 1995)

The government plans to announce its science and technology strategy in the near future. We will be setting out a response to a far-reaching review of S&T which included consultations in communities across Canada, an internal review of federal S&T policies and programs, and a report by the National Advisory Board on Science and Technology.

The strategy will re-enforce S&T as a priority for this government. It will advance the critical role played by S&T in relation to the health and well-being of Canadians, sustainable job creation and economic growth, and the advancement of knowledge.

Objectives and principles for guiding federal S&T activities and initiatives will be part of the strategy. We will increase the effectiveness of federal S&T research by emphasizing scientific excellence, full value for money and the dissemination of knowledge and technology throughout the Canadian economy.

HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT

BRITISH COLUMBIA—IMPOSITION OF WAITING PERIOD FOR PAYMENTS UNDER CANADA ASSISTANCE PLAN—SUSPENSION OF TRANSFER PAYMENTS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

(Response to question raised by the Hon. David Tkachuk on December 6, 1995)

Pursuant to the provisions of the Canada Assistance Plan, (RSC, 1985, c. C-1, s.6(2), an agreement between each province and the Government of Canada shall provide that the province a) will provide financial aid or other assistance to or in respect of any person in the province who is a person in need... and d) will not require a period of residence in the province as a condition of eligibility for assistance or for the receipt or continued receipt thereof.

In the case of Findlay v. Canada, (1989, 57 DLR, (4th), 230, confirmed by the Federal Court in 71 DLR, (4th) 422) the Federal Court determined that where a province (in that case Manitoba) is in breach of its agreement with Canada under CAP it is illegal for Canada to make payments to the province under the Canada Assistance Plan as long as the breach continues.

Thus, according to the precedent set in the Findlay case, it would be illegal for Canada to make payments to the Government of British Columbia under the Canada Assistance Plan as long as the province continued in breach of its CAP agreement by having residency requirements for eligibility for social assistance.

AGRICULTURE

WESTERN GRAIN MARKETING—POSSIBILITY OF NATIONAL PLEBISCITE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

(Response to a question raised by Hon. Leonard J. Gustafson on December 13, 1995)

The Western Grain Marketing Panel has conducted a series of town hall meetings across western Canada. These meetings concluded on January 26, 1996. They provided farmers with the opportunity to express their views regarding the strengths and weaknesses of Canada's current grain marketing system and what features they would like to see in the system of the future.

The Panel will now hold formal hearings in Winnipeg, during the period March 11 to 22, 1996. These hearings are being held for farmers and organizations to advance their arguments and supporting evidence for or against different marketing methodologies which will be subject to examination and cross-examination.

The Panel is to present its final report to the Minister by the end of June, 1996.

JUSTICE

SALE OF AIRBUS AIRCRAFT TO AIR CANADA— ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—STAGE OF TREATY WITH SWITZERLAND AT TIME OF REQUEST—GOVERNMENT POSITION

(Response to question raised by Hon. R. James Balfour on December 13, 1995)

The letter of request in the Airbus investigation was sent to Switzerland on September 29, 1995. This was a non-treaty request. At that time, a mutual legal assistance treaty between Canada and Switzerland had been negotiated but was not in effect. The treaty came into effect on November 17, 1995.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE—VOTE DEFERRED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Kinsella for the adoption of the Report of the Special Committee on Bill C-110, respecting constitutional amendments, with amendments.

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, during the referendum campaign last fall, the Prime Minister spoke of his commitment to recognize Quebec as a distinct society, and to make constitutional change contingent on a regional consensus. In my judgment, this was a fair-minded promise to renew our federation which was, in part, made to encourage and support all those who voted "no" to secession. We must remember that, first and foremost, this was a basic act of reassurance to the people of Quebec.

The challenge of building consensus will always be with us. It is a daunting challenge. In the quest to achieve a greater balance within our federation, and in our efforts to create a better understanding between all of our citizens, Bill C-110 represents our pledge not to proceed with constitutional change without the support of each of our great regions.

As the Prime Minister has repeatedly explained, this modest legislation is basically a commonsense bridging approach to the rekindling of a spirit of cooperation and tolerance in our country.

Honourable senators probably do not need to be reminded that, in our country, the practice of politics has become almost more dangerous than war. Winston Churchill once said this to emphasize that: in war, you are killed only once. In fact, the game in Canada has become so deadly, the tone of our political life at times so sour, that even a modest and fair-minded measure such as the bill before us is deemed to give too much to some Canadians and too little to other Canadians.

Bill C-110 is an attempt at drafting a little more equity into our federation, and yet its appearance draws criticism from all those players who think in the interests of the short term, in the self-interest of one region or another, of one player in one region against another in the same region.

This self-centred approach is the opposite of the generosity of spirit which led to the creation of this great country. Ask any of the thousands of people who wait in immigration offices around the world what a Red Maple Leaf symbolizes for them. I have seen it personally, and I have heard it firsthand from people who have treasured the presence of our peacekeepers in places such as Nicaragua and on the Angolan border. It symbolizes promise, it symbolizes tolerance, it symbolizes hope, it symbolizes generosity. Most of all, it does not symbolize selfishness.

Perhaps it is time that we all took a look at ourselves in the looking-glass of the world community, in order to get a better sense of the real truths about ourselves and about the real meaning of being Canadian.

Canada has been conceived and has evolved on an infrastructure of hope. Bill C-110 is a modest addition, on a temporary basis, to that infrastructure. It represents no structural shifts in the foundations of our country. We must remember that this regional veto is only one of the building blocks in the larger national unity design. It does not imply permanence or finality, nor is it meant to be a measure that addresses the constitutional aspirations of all parties in the federation.

• (1030)

It is simply a reminder to all Canadians that we are a real country, and that although one of the principal players argues differently and falsely, the Government of Canada will continue to guard and protect their interests. It is a challenge to secessionists to explain to all those Quebecers who do not share their views and who opt for Canada, why they will not accept what for so long Quebec has wanted. In this respect, Bill C-110 is the proverbial velvet glove concealing the iron hand.

Honourable senators, when Minister Rock appeared before our committee, he fairly and forcefully dealt with the fears expressed by many Canadians over the intent of the government with regard to this legislation. Many legitimate concerns about the significance of Bill C-110 have been put forward throughout the country. I refer to only a few examples raised in the ongoing discussions over the last few weeks.

There has been a fear that the bill constitutes an attempt by the Government of Canada to unilaterally alter the present constitutional amending procedure. There have been important and legitimate fears and concerns raised by our aboriginal people, such as the concern that the effect of the bill is to exclude them from the amendment process. I believe Minister Rock has put to rest the bulk of these concerns in an honest and fair-minded fashion.

As I have said, honourable senators, Bill C-110 is part of the infrastructure of hope. It is meant as a reminder to all those who doubt and who have lost conviction or, in some cases, who despair about the future of Canada, that this country has been built to outlast its enemies. It is meant as a reminder that the federal government will exert friendly pressures — the best kind, as Lester B. Pearson once observed — to ensure that it is not such an easy target for its enemies. We must never forget this, because there are many voices in our federation telling us that the dream is impossible. They say that cooperation cannot be possible because every gain for one region means an equal loss for another region.

In a speech I gave on the unity issue in this chamber on December 12, I pointed out that too many voices across Canada see federalism as what has been called by some a “zero-sum” game. In other words, the voices say, “We want more, always more. What is more for us is less for you. What is less for us is more for you.” In this kind of mug’s game, we will all be losers and we will be losers forever.

As these voices become more numerous in our country, the resolve and will to be Canadian, the spiritual glue of our country, becomes debilitated and weakened. We must remember that countries are often lost when people surrender, and where they surrender first is in their hearts and in their minds.

It was once said — by Abraham Lincoln, I believe — that he has a right to criticize who has a heart to help. Selfishness within and amongst the regional alignments in this country is the gravest threat that we face today, not just because of the unity issue but — what is even more important — because it imperils the national soul.

In the Atlantic region, much needed signs of cooperation serve as portents of hope. Nova Scotia’s Premier John Savage and New Brunswick’s Premier Frank McKenna have agreed to extend to Premier Catherine Callbeck and Prince Edward Island full status where they think it is essential under the prospective veto rule. In this regard, the Atlantic provinces have exercised one of the basic principles of successful negotiation. They have taken the interests of the other parties into account — a simple truth indeed, but perhaps one of the most important truths in the ongoing struggle to revitalize our federation. However, it must be emulated by all those who presently feel that criticism is a right, but that a heart to help is unnecessary.

Recently, I heard a wise man talk about how you treat people equally and/or the same. He was responding to a presentation by a leader in one of the regions of the country who was asserting, even complaining, that his province wanted to be treated equally, the same as every other province. My friend responded by saying that he had three daughters. He treated them all equally but not necessarily the same, because they had different needs. I believe the same analogy can be applied to our regions — equal but not necessarily the same.

Honourable senators, we must remember that the Red Maple Leaf which flies over this united country is a symbol of hope for millions of people the world over. We must not fail because of mean spiritedness or rancour or lack of will to insure that it flies forever, not over a vast, zero-sum game, but over a united Canadian dream based on tolerance, on justice, on cooperation and on compromise.

Honourable senators, Bill C-110 is part of the infrastructure of hope. As such, for all those who have the heart to help, it is an indispensable building block in a re-imagined Canada which will leave the old world behind.

Hon. Consiglio Di Nino: Honourable senators, in the past, I supported the Meech Lake Accord; I participated in the debates on the Charlottetown Agreement and its promotion. In fact, the Metro Toronto area, where I made some small contribution during that referendum, is one of the few areas of the country where the accord was accepted. I have often spoken on behalf of, and in support of, Quebec's distinctiveness, as well as Quebec's importance to Canada. Frankly, I doubt Canada would be a country without Quebec.

• (1040)

I have always maintained that the main difference between the USA and Canada is the French factor. However, I have a number of concerns about the unity package, this "peace offering" made by Prime Minister Chrétien to Quebecers, including the bill we are debating. This offer is an ill-conceived, knee-jerk reaction to the federal government's failures during the months preceding the Quebec referendum. Those failures nearly cost us our country.

This package of goodies to try to appease Quebecers does no such thing. I do not believe the majority of Quebecers support Mr. Chrétien's offer. Canadians across this country mirror their sentiments, albeit in some cases for different reasons.

The hastiness with which these goodies were put together without consultation and the closing off of debate in the other place has aroused the anger of many Canadians, including many political leaders. The manner in which this offer was conceived and rammed through the House is both disrespectful and contemptuous. It has further alienated some regions of our country, resulting in further dividing some communities, and it may very well damage attempts at real negotiations to keep Canada together.

Many Canadians are losing their tolerance for meaningful reconciliation, and the actions of this government are not helping. This offer to Quebec reinforces the fact that the Liberals have no agenda, no policy, no real plan to deal with the Quebec issue. Mr. Chrétien should have taken the advice of Mr. Charest and others who asked for a period of time to let us catch our breath and reflect in a calm and tranquil manner before plunging once more into the turbulent waters of constitutional reform.

Honourable senators, the problem is really not insurmountable. In my opinion, the real problem is that Canadians do not know each other very well. It is not accidental that the Montreal area voted overwhelmingly in favour of the "No" side. This is the area of Quebec where Canadians of all backgrounds have had more opportunity to meet and to get to know each other better. Finding opportunities for Canadians to get to know each other is not a difficult challenge; it is one which we should take on.

Honourable senators, one of my main concerns is that these debates seem to be an emotional dialogue between the federal government and French-speaking Canadians in Quebec. At times, it seems to be more about revenge than justice, more about politics and turf than people and their needs.

I am told that recognizing Quebec as a distinct society is about identity. I repeat that I have supported, and continue to support, this notion because it only recognizes reality. Distinct society does not confer special privileges; it only recognizes what is a fact. However, when we raise the question of identity, then we must talk about the identity of Canadians, all Canadians, including aboriginal communities and Canadians whose background is neither English nor French. For obvious reasons, the dialogue has been about Quebec, Quebec culture and the two founding nations. This has been going on for such a long time that Canadians of other backgrounds, including First Nations, have felt excluded. These Canadians have as much of a stake as everyone else in Canada's future and are committed to a united and strong country. In future discourses, they must be included to ensure that their place and their role is both recognized and assured. I have no doubt that most Canadians would welcome the just and equal treatment of all other Canadians who, in turn, mostly accept the cultural, language and civil law reality in Quebec.

In all of these unity debates, seldom if ever are communities other than those of French or English background made to feel part of the process. Maybe it is right to ask, as aboriginal communities have asked, who is included? Are all Canadians equal? Are some more equal than others? When other communities have been included as a part of the debate, it has often been in negative terms. We heard Mr. Bouchard talk about "white babies." We heard Mr. Parizeau accuse "ethnics" of being responsible for the "No" side win. We heard Mr. Landry insulting and disparaging new Canadians. Too many others have made similar remarks. These kinds of accusations seem to be too frequent, and for those of us who passed through those dark days of discrimination, and for those among us who are today suffering from discriminatory practices, these accusing and irresponsible statements echo the silent alarms of discomfort and fear felt by some of us in the past.

What is this word "ethnic" or, for that matter, "multicultural"? When I walk down the street, do people point and say, "There goes an "ethnic," or "Hey, look at that multicultural"? When I came to Canada, I did not know I was a multicultural or an ethnic. Do these terms make me better or worse than others? When I swore the oath of allegiance, I thought I would be a Canadian like everyone else. Little criticism has been heard — and only from a few of our political leaders — about these people who speak so callously and so contemptuously of other Canadians.

Because this unity dialogue has gone on for so long and because, understandably, the attention has been on Quebec's wonderful culture, primarily focused on English-French issues, other communities are beginning to question and to ask whether their presence, their contributions, their values, have any meaning in this whole dialogue. Little or no public discourse has dealt with the valuable contribution made by the rainbow of cultures which continues to help make Canada what it is today — the best country in the world — a fact that seems to be lost in this long and acrimonious debate.

This bill and the whole unity package being offered to Quebec not only does not make a meaningful and substantive contribution to solving the problem, it may damage the opportunity for reconciliation because it was conceived without due thought and without consultation with Canadians who care fervently about Canada and who, by omission or commission, are being left out.

It seems to me this government is desperate and has nothing better to offer. Mr. Chrétien should reach out to Canadians, all Canadians. They can help him. They have the answers. Some, as Senator Graham has just done, will make spirited and eloquent speeches in support of Bill C-110, but apart from the Prime Minister and his flock, who is in favour of this bill?

Remember, this is the same gang who defeated the Meech Lake Accord, gave lukewarm support to the Charlottetown Agreement and who, during the referendum, said to us: "Shut up and trust us; we know what is best for you." Look what happened.

Honourable senators, I think we should send the whole package back to the other place and ask the government to take more seriously its responsibilities to Canadians.

Hon. Anne C. Cools: Honourable senators, my seatmate, Senator Charlie Watt, had intended to participate in this debate but has been delayed in arriving. He is presently in transit, and called me to ask that I read into the record on his behalf a letter from the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada, or ITC, articulating their position on Bill C-110.

The letter is written and signed by Mary Sillett, the vice-president of ITC. It is addressed to Senator Watt and dated February 2, 1996. With the Senate's indulgence, I shall read this letter in its entirety, thus:

Dear Senator Watt,

We have reviewed the amendments proposed to Bill C-110, "An Act respecting constitutional amendments" tabled in the Senate by the Special Senate Committee and we wish to inform you of ITC's position.

ITC re-iterates our first preference that the federal government should withdraw this Bill in its entirety because it is unconstitutional and because it is not conducive to national unity in the long term.

Furthermore, the federal government should be retaining its current powers to respond, and to speak in its own Parliament, through proposed constitutional amendments, in the event of a 'yes' vote. Whatever the federal government's national unity strategy, there is no guarantee that it will forestall another referendum. This means the risks attendant to a 'yes' vote, however small or large, are still with us. Why should the federal government in any way be weakening its ability to act on behalf of all Canadians in its own Parliament?

Nevertheless, we urge you to vote in favour of proposed amendment number 2 of the Committee's Report. This amendment to clause 1 of Bill C-110 would provide at least some protection to our position in any future constitutional reform negotiations. Unfortunately, the proposed amendments do not preserve our current constitutional position in its totality. We point out the following shortcomings:

1) the amendment proposed as a new subsection 1(3) to the Act should have referred generally to any proposed amendment referring to aboriginal peoples or aboriginal and treaty rights in order to cover amendments outside the sections named (you may recall that in the Charlottetown Accord, the proposed amendment on recognition of aboriginal peoples governments as one of three orders of government and proposed protections or recognition of aboriginal language and cultural rights did not fall in any of the sections named in this Bill but rather were contained in proposed new sections to the Constitution including new sections of the Constitution Act, 1867 and the Constitution Act, 1982);

2) at a minimum there should have been a reference generally to any amendments to Part II of the Constitution Act, 1982 rather than listing specific sections of Part II as is done in proposed paragraph 1(3)(b) — (again you may recall that during the negotiation of the Charlottetown Accord, it was Inuit who first proposed and who successfully argued for the recognition of the inherent right of self-government as a new section to Part II rather than including it as a subsection to s.35 — in order to avoid any extinguishment arguments arising from the word 'existing' in s.35(1)).

Finally we wish to comment on some important strategic questions raised by the proposed sunset clause calling for the expiry of the Act on December 31, 1997. The addition of an expiry date suggests that the legislation is a temporary measure pending a constitutional conference in 1997. At such a conference, Quebec's approval and that of the other provinces and regions would be required under Bill C-110 for any proposed amendment to proceed. Under the proposed amendments, Quebec's approval would have to be secured through the provincial legislative assembly. Securing Quebec's approval at the 1997 conference for anything aimed at national unity does not seem at all likely given Premier Bouchard's statements (both as Premier and as the former Leader of the Bloc Québécois) that he does not support participating in any constitutional negotiations before another referendum in Quebec on separation.

Because Bill C-110 would severely hamper the federal government's ability to respond to a possible 'yes' vote, perhaps this amendment inadvertently will suggest to the Parti Quebecois a possible deadline by which it should hold another referendum in order to retain this advantage.

On the other hand, if the 1997 constitutional conference does not produce an amendment entrenching the Bill C-110 vetoes, and if another referendum is not held by December 31, 1997, then the federal government's current powers to table proposed constitutional amendments to deal with any constitutional crisis generated by a referendum held after that date would be preserved.

We ask you to convey our position to your colleagues in the Senate and urge them also to vote in favour of proposed amendment number 2 of the Senate Committee's report. We will be sending copies to the Prime Minister as well as to Senator Kinsella, Minister Dion, Minister Irwin and Minister Rock.

Sincerely,

Mary Sillett,
Vice-President

Honourable senators, as I have said before, Senator Watt had called me and asked me if I would do him the favour of reading this letter into the record. It was not my intention to participate in this debate on Bill C-110, but I thought a colleague deserved this consideration. For me, it is an honour to do a small service for the Inuit people of Canada.

Senator St. Germain: Will you support the amendment, senator?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen: Honourable senators, I should like to begin by congratulating the committee and its chairman for the work that the committee did in the examination of Bill C-110. I certainly was impressed with the work of the committee. It renewed my appreciation of the potential value of Senate committees.

The committee was a good committee. On our side, I was pleased to work with Senator Marchand and Senator De Bané, with whom I served in the House of Commons and in the Government of Canada, and with Senator Gauthier, with whom I worked in the House of Commons. Senator Carstairs was not part of my past history, but her perspective on the committee was always present and always valuable.

I will depart from a rule I have had for a long time, which was never to praise my political opponents in public. I did not mind doing it in private, but in public it was a different matter. However, I must say that I was impressed by the members of the opposition, each of whom brought a very important perspective to the work of the committee, particularly Senator Murray, who certainly showed objectivity and understanding, even vision, as he approached quite a number of the items under discussion. I will not say I was surprised. Of course, Senator Beaudoin was very valuable, as was Senator Rivest and the others. We learned, of course, from Senator St. Germain the value of non-partisanship. It has infected even me in my approach.

I followed or examined Bill C-110 from a very limited perspective; that was the perspective of a parliamentary practitioner: how would it work, and how would Bill C-110 potentially affect the constitutional process in the future? Many witnesses had differing perspectives. Some had expected that Bill C-110 somehow would meet all the constitutional aspirations of Quebec, of the west, and of the aboriginals, to name a few examples. Naturally, they would be deeply disappointed because Bill C-110 did not do that. It was not intended to do that. It had a very limited purpose.

It was from that perspective that I viewed the bill. Many of the witnesses, I found, burdened the bill with their expectations, and when their expectations were not fulfilled, they found that the bill had many shortcomings. Minister Rock, in his appearance before the committee, made it clear that the bill is modest, limited and procedural. I certainly agreed that it is procedural.

• (1100)

I remember an old standing order of the House of Commons. Standing Order No. 33 conferred a right on a minister to move closure, a right enjoyed by no other member of the House of Commons. That was the conferring of a parliamentary right. This bill really establishes a parliamentary prohibition upon a minister of the Crown; that is, a minister cannot move a constitutional amendment without the consent of all the regions. Mr. Rock inferred that this objective could have been achieved by a declaration of government policy. This government and the Prime Minister could have said that they will never introduce a constitutional amendment unless there is consent from all the regions. That would have done the job. From a technical point of view, it would have lacked the political impact of parliamentary action. It would have lacked the transparency of parliamentary action. It could have been done by changing the standing order to read that no minister will move a constitutional amendment except in such circumstances.

Honourable senators, I can understand why these options were discarded in favour of a bill which, in its simplest form, prohibits a minister from moving a constitutional amendment except in particular circumstances. Bill C-110, in a sense, declares in a profound way the policy of the Prime Minister that no bill will be introduced by himself or his ministers unless these conditions are met. That declaration in the bill is a response to the crisis in Quebec. It is intended to be a powerful political message that, in the future, this government will never act to amend the Constitution without the consent of Quebec, period.

Honourable senators, I must say that I agreed with the analysis made by the chairman of the committee in saying that fulfilling the rule established in Bill C-110 would require a higher level of consensus than is presently required in the Constitution. The chairman of the committee, Senator Kinsella, said that it would require seven provinces representing 94 per cent of the population of Canada. I do not quarrel with that. However, that result flows from a limitation on ministerial action. It does not limit the ability of a member of the House of Commons to introduce a constitutional amendment; it does not limit the right of a senator to introduce a constitutional amendment; nor indeed does it limit the right of a provincial legislature or a premier.

In the committee, I explored the possibility of moving ahead with a constitutional amendment at a lower level of consensus than that required by Bill C-110. That is possible. There is no prohibition on securing a constitutional amendment under the lower hurdle of 7/50. I think that is important to bear in mind from a procedural point of view. I am talking about the process and what is possible procedurally. I am not judging what may be politically possible in the future, or what political circumstances may recommend particular courses of action.

Notwithstanding the provisions of Bill C-110, I say that constitutional amendments could go forward at a lower level of consensus provided by the current Constitution, which requires seven provinces representing 50 per cent of the people. I can foresee circumstances in which that would happen, and could happen. It might be a good thing if it did happen.

Taken together, honourable senators, Bill C-110 and the Constitution provide protection for Quebec in the way the Prime Minister suggested, and allow for changes beneficial to Quebec to go forward under the 7/50 formula in particular circumstances. Senator Rivest and others on the committee talked about the protection that this would provide to Quebec. We agreed that that was the intent, but raised the point that the higher hurdle would prevent changes beneficial to Quebec from occurring. My answer is "not necessarily so" because such changes could happen, procedurally at least, under the 7/50 formula.

Nothing in Bill C-110 prevents the federal government from launching a constitutional process and putting proposals before the provincial governments for constitutional change. Presumably that must happen in 1997 under the present framework.

The federal government, in line with Bill C-110, will have to strive for maximum consensus; namely, the Prime Minister will say, "I cannot introduce a constitutional change under Bill C-110 unless I have all the regions with me." However, suppose a single region were to withhold its consent? What happens then? Has the process come to a dead halt? The federal government and the Prime Minister have done their best, and they have reached that point in the discussion where one region says "no." We know that the federal government cannot introduce a motion, but the Premier of Ontario could, as could the Premier of Quebec, or the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate or in the House of Commons, or any other member. Constitutional change could conceivably go ahead under the 7/50 formula.

I put this question to one of our constitutional experts. In such circumstances, I said, there would be nothing to prevent ministers and government supporters from supporting that constitutional amendment. Nothing in the law provides for anything except a prohibition on ministerial action. This particular constitutional authority said, "That would be against the spirit of the law." That shook me a bit, but I was sure another constitutional expert would disagree with that view, and it did happen with the very next expert.

• (1110)

I then said, "What about the spirit of the law?" He replied, "All that is possible. Your outline is possible." I then repeated: "What about the spirit of the law?" He said, "When you talk about the spirit, you are talking about the spirit world. I am talking about the legal world, and in the legal world it is possible. I put that forward to you as my conclusion."

I understand that the right and favourable political circumstances must exist in order for this to happen, but what if much progress was made at a constitutional conference, and an amendment of particular interest to Quebec was opposed by one region of the country?

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable Senator MacEachen, I hesitate to interrupt you, but the 15-minute period is over.

An Hon. Senator: Let him continue.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted for the honourable senator to continue?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator MacEachen: If at that stage there is an amendment that is of interest to Quebec and suddenly a region says "no," obviously the federal government cannot introduce a resolution.

However, there is another alternative, which brings me to this tricky question of consent. It is alleged that the bill is ambiguous because it does not say from which entity consent will be sought before a resolution can be introduced in the Parliament of Canada. Will it be the consent of the government, or of the legislature, or of the people? That is unclear, and it is intended to be remedied by the amendment proposed by the committee, namely, that you must have the consent of the legislature of the provinces — that is, everyone, so to speak — before the federal government could introduce a motion.

That consent is not the consent of a province to a constitutional amendment. That is a different beast altogether. The consent here is merely a consent to introduce a resolution in Parliament. If that consent is not forthcoming, a particular region says, "No. We do not agree. We do not give the government's consent. We will not put a resolution before the legislature," and the process is stopped. At this point, the federal government, not having received the consent of the government or governments of a region, or of the legislature, could seek the consent of the people in a referendum. If a referendum were held and the people said, "Yes, we agree with this particular constitutional amendment," then the federal government could introduce a constitutional amendment in the Parliament of Canada. That would be all.

That, in itself, would be a powerful symbol to a province like Quebec, yearning for particular change. If the people of a region said, "We agree with that," it would be a powerful message in itself. However, it would not change the Constitution, not at all.

At no point does this bill remove from a legislature the necessity of passing a resolution which gives its consent to a constitutional amendment. The legislature is never bypassed. It cannot be bypassed because it is in the Constitution that legislative action is required for a constitutional amendment.

You would then say, "Well, what is the point of having a referendum? The people say "yes," and the government has said "no". Honourable senators will have noticed an interesting discussion in the committee, in which Mr. Ryan and Senator Murray participated, about the political results of that type of situation, namely, if the people in a region were saying, "Go ahead. Put your resolution in Parliament," but the government or governments were saying "no." Mr. Ryan argued that, if that happened in Quebec, the Government of Quebec would act with greater restraint if it had refused, in that case, to give consent to the Government of Canada to introduce a resolution. He then went on to say, "Well, there could be. It would become a political problem or a political issue in the province which might be resolved by an election." However, this instrument in the hand of the federal government, namely, going to the people, will never bypass the legislature in consolidating a constitutional amendment, but it has a political potential that may be useful.

I was not consulted about the bill, but I would think that is why it is there, namely, to advance the constitutional process by going to the people when you think that there is a possibility that the people will support an improvement when the government will not take any action. It provides some momentum.

I understand the arguments that have been made, but I am simply saying that the committee has recommended to the Senate that we remove this possibility of referendum in this context, and that the Government of Canada could only move with the consent of the legislature. I regard that as not a good amendment because it removes a possibility of referendum action that might be useful in a political situation. However, at no time, as I understand it, would it bypass the legislature in achieving a constitutional amendment. The government may reconsider as a result of the referendum; the legislature may reconsider and legislative action would be taken. That is my procedural analysis. All this must be considered in a particular political context.

My colleagues have dealt with the aboriginal situation, and I will not add to it. However, let me say a word about the expiry date. Senator Kinsella used the word "kill" in connection with this amendment. Instead of "kill now" he says "kill later." Why not kill the bill now rather than at the end of December, 1997? The effect of that amendment will be to kill the bill two years hence. Right? There is no doubt about it. So why have it in the meantime? Why not kill it now?

Some Hon. Senators: Good idea.

Senator MacEachen: The committee reported the bill with amendments. One of them was to kill the bill — not now, but later. The committee did not recommend to kill it now because it must see some merit in the notion of giving protection to Quebec against any amendment that would be introduced against its will. Otherwise, they would kill it now. Why kill it later, when you have no guarantee that anything will have been put in its place?

That is what worries me about that amendment. You could have said that the bill would expire when an equivalent provision had been provided in the Constitution. Instead, you want to say to Quebec that they are protected, but only until the end of 1997. If the Constitution has not been changed by then, the minimum protection provided in Bill C-110 will fall to the ground. I do not like that. I would like to see the protection continue until some equivalent agreement is reached.

I hope, Senator St. Germain, that I have lived up to your enjoiner of non-partisanship. I have stuck to a procedural analysis.

Hon. Lowell Murray: Honourable senators, I had not intended to take part in this debate, and I shall not detain you for very long. You will be disappointed if you expect me to live up to Senator MacEachen's description of my contribution as "visionary," but I do hope you will find in my remarks some objectivity.

I would speak first about the protection which this bill offers to Quebec. Senator MacEachen, speaking as he has from the perspective of a parliamentary practitioner, outlined to us the bill's flexibility and the many ways in which an end run can be effected around the bill. In doing so, he underlines the inadequacy of the protection that the bill offers to Quebec or to anyone else.

He points out that the bill is a restraint only on ministers of the Crown. Private members of the House of Commons or of the Senate can initiate resolutions for constitutional amendments. Ministers of the Crown could even support such resolutions. The only restraint is that ministers of the Crown would not be able to introduce such a resolution. It seems to me that he is giving some aid and comfort to those in Quebec who see the bill as an entirely inadequate protection of their interests.

If the first ministers achieve agreement on an amending formula in 1997, then of course the bill will no longer be necessary. First ministers must have unanimity in order to achieve any change in the amending formula. This bill does not affect that process.

I am, however, concerned that this bill, by erecting the higher hurdle it has, would make it more difficult, perhaps even impossible, one day to entrench the recognition of Quebec's distinctiveness in the Constitution. That is only one of the reasons why I do not want to see Bill C-110 as a permanent part of the constitutional landscape in this country.

If the first ministers, in 1997, fail to achieve agreement on a new amending formula, the federal government and the federal Parliament will have to consider another approach. It may well be that another bill or another resolution or another policy statement by the federal government and the federal Parliament will have to be brought forward.

Bill C-110, as a practical matter, cannot last. It is a change to the amending process which has been unilaterally decided by the federal government and Parliament against the opposition of several provinces. We know that British Columbia is opposed because their minister came to the committee and told us so. The Premier of Alberta has indicated his opposition. Saskatchewan and Manitoba which, in the early going, seemed to have good things to say about Bill C-110 in its original form, have backed off from their early support for the bill. That is quite an insufficient consensus in a country like this for a permanent change in the amending process.

It seems to me it would be bad federal-provincial relations, bad for the future constitutional development of the country and bad for national unity to leave Bill C-110 in place longer than December 31, 1997, if the first ministers have failed to achieve agreement on an amending formula. If, unfortunately, they cannot agree in 1997, we must revisit this situation, and revisit Bill C-110, in the light of the situation that will then exist.

Since I proposed the amendments on behalf of my colleagues, I have no difficulty whatever in supporting the proposed sunset clause; nor indeed do I have any difficulty supporting the non-derogation clause in respect of aboriginal rights. I have listened to the letter read by our colleague Senator Cools earlier. I am also aware of the arguments put forward quite logically by Minister Rock and by the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice Ms Dawson to the effect that aboriginal rights are already protected. However, the aboriginal leaders who want an amendment have told us, as we have been told by minorities many times: If that is true, why not put it into the bill, and confirm and secure the protection of our rights in this legislation? Therefore, out of an abundance of caution, if you like, we decided that we would propose the non-derogation clause in respect of aboriginal rights.

With regard to the method of obtaining consent, the bill is far too flexible in that regard. It would enable the federal government, in respect of the same amendment, to take a different approach with different provinces. The Prime Minister could say that, in the case of Nova Scotia, he would accept a letter from the premier as sufficient consent, but from New Brunswick, only a resolution of the legislature will be sufficient, and from Quebec, only a referendum will suffice. The bill leaves it entirely in the hands of the federal government to decide, province by province — or indeed amendment by amendment — what constitutes adequate consent. I do not think that is very good legislative practice. It is even worse as constitutional practice, and worse still in terms of federal-provincial relations and the harmony that we want to promote in this country.

With those few words, honourable senators, I declare my support for the report presented by our colleague Senator Kinsella.

Hon. Gerry St. Germain: Honourable senators, I seek to ask a question of Senator MacEachen relating to Mr. Ryan's evidence.

Both Senator Murray and Senator MacEachen have had great exposure to Mr. Ryan, to his past experience and to his ability to deal with issues of this nature.

• (1130)

On this question of consent, why would the government not be listening to someone who is living day-to-day in the fray with the separatists and who knows first hand the reaction of Quebecers? I understand the present leader of the Liberal Party, Mr. Johnson, is also opposed to the flexibility in the bill with regard to consent. All these people are great Liberals. I am certain they would not exercise partisanship.

Why does the honourable senator think that this would be ignored? He pointed out so deftly in his closing remarks the divisiveness that this could cause in dealing with future constitutional amendments in this country.

Senator Murray: Honourable senators, there is a long history to this question of referenda. As long ago as the 1981-82 process, a proposal for referenda was on the table as part of the formal amending process, and it fell off. At the time, Prime Minister Trudeau wanted to keep in hand the possibility of a referendum to break the deadlock that existed among the first ministers. There is much history to the discussion of referenda.

In the present circumstances, the government decided that it wanted to leave open the possibility of going over the heads of a Parti Québécois government in Quebec City and a legislature which has a majority for the sovereigntist party, and appeal directly to the people in this process. As a parenthetical comment, I should say that the government already has the right and the power to hold a referendum in Canada, or any part of Canada, thanks to the legislation passed back in 1993.

I think it is predictable that, if the federal government invoked that possibility, it would get the backs up in Quebec, not just of the separatists but the federalists as well. There are Quebecers who can speak more authoritatively about this than I, but Quebecers have invested in the Quebec legislature and National Assembly a certain trust and confidence, in terms of that legislature speaking for the Quebec community.

It was entirely predictable, in my view, that people such as Daniel Johnson and Claude Ryan and other federalists would object to the idea, not of a referendum but of the possibility of an end-run by a federal government over the heads of the duly elected Government of Quebec on a matter on which there is authority vested in the government and legislature of Quebec. They take the position that this is a federation, after all, and if the Quebec government wants to have a referendum so as to obtain consent to a federal initiative, the Quebec government should be in a position to do it. There should not be an end-run by the federal government.

Senator MacEachen: Honourable senators, I refer for a moment to the comments of Claude Ryan before the committee on this point. They are as follows:

It is quite conceivable that reasonable proposals from the federal government and the provinces will be rejected by the current majority in the Quebec National Assembly. What happens then? The federal government is free at any time to consult with Quebecers. It can stage a referendum at any time. It does not need Bill C-110. Assuming that it wins its case in a referendum, then you are faced with a hitherto unseen political situation.

I refer to this, and the following sentence:

At the very least, the Quebec government will have to act with considerable restraint. Another election battle will be waged. It will be up to those who support this initiative to defend it come election time and to defeat the government. That is how the democratic process works.

That is what I had in mind as I analyzed the ability of the federal government to consult the people on a constitutional amendment to which the government may have been opposed. It just stirs up and opens the political arena to move the process forward.

I understand that is all it is. Never at any point would the federal government go to the people to overrule the legislature in approving a constitutional amendment. That is not possible under this bill.

I found Mr. Ryan's comments very interesting. I agreed with most of them.

Hon. Stanley Haidasz: Honourable senators, I appreciate this opportunity to make a few remarks on Bill C-110, which I believe is an important piece of legislation in the whole strategy of achieving Canadian unity.

As we all know, the cabinet met yesterday, and, according to the press, they said that they have agreed upon a strategy of Canadian unity. I have confidence in the Prime Minister and his new team to achieve that goal to which we all aspire.

This legislation comes just a few months after that awful referendum of October 30, in which the federalists only won by approximately 1 per cent of the vote. What appals me is that Premier Jacques Parizeau, in speaking to the public after the result, stated that the separatists simply lost because of the ethnic vote in Montreal and some financial assistance of Quebec corporations.

Nonetheless, I still have some caveats with regard to Bill C-110 which I wish to express to discharge my duty to the public record. I will be supporting the bill, as I said, because I have confidence in the Prime Minister, who has been involved in many federal-provincial conferences and who led the one which helped formulate the new Constitution which we now have.

I should like to deal with the precedents that this bill sets. We must not forget that Parliament is not the executive branch of the Canadian government. The government exerts a crucial role, and, if one followed the media over the past generation, one would conclude a preponderant, almost unilateral, role. However, we are historically and legally a parliamentary democracy, of which Parliament is the custodian. A custodian behaves often like a servant, it is true, but Parliament is never and should never be the servant of the government. It is the other way: Government, great leader of parliamentary debate and initiative, is a humble servant of the Parliament of Canada. Unfortunately, Bill C-110 ignores that fact. That is what makes it inflexible, as some speakers before me have mentioned.

Honourable senators, I make this point for the record: The preamble of every bill in Parliament asserts that the Crown acts on the advice and consent, not of the Government of Canada but of the Senate and the House of Commons of Canada — the Parliament of Canada. The government has advised Parliament in this bill that it conceives an overriding political value in enacting a statute that does some highly irregular things.

Does Parliament consent to Bill C-110? With reservations, perhaps Parliament consents. Accordingly, does Parliament advise the Crown to act? If so, in this case, I maintain, with reservations, some of which have been expressed by previous speakers in this place.

What of the reservation that this process and this bill sets precedents? First, there is the precedent that it treats Parliament as a servant of the government, which is wrong. Notwithstanding the portent and consequences of this bill, upon which I will touch momentarily, the bill proposes to set aside the confines of the present constitutional pro forma approaches to change, at least insofar as the executive is concerned. That is more than a consequential matter; it is of prime constitutional significance. Were we to stand strictly on principle, it ought to be referred to a Committee of the Whole, as was done in our debate on the Meech Lake Accord.

Honourable senators, I believe it is important to say for the record that if consent had been sought not to convene a Committee of the Whole, I would not have granted leave; rather, I would agree to convene such a Committee of the Whole and recommend it, as I hope would every honourable senator in this place. Unfortunately, leave was not sought to proceed as we now are proceeding.

The formula proposed by Bill C-110 will set a precedent of its own. We know that precedents are dangerous things. Apparently the political argument on the bill — and I do not say necessarily a bad or baseless argument — held by a number of important minds is that Quebec has, or should have, a right to veto by convention. In several tests, the courts have not recognized a conventional right as argued thus far. Enactment of this bill can have one effect, which is to change that finding at court, but it can also ossify an artificial basis of that veto. Where argument for a better basis may come to light without detailed study, it cannot be concluded that the enactment of this bill will not prejudice the result even of the constitutional conference to which we are looking forward in 1997.

Honourable senators, I am not to be taken this morning as saying that good arguments for a veto by convention for Quebec might not succeed in future. I can think of at least one related to the old principle of duality of founding partners of Confederation; namely, that Quebec happens to be the only province whose government is elected in general by a francophone majority. In other words, the one place in Canada where the preponderant francophone opinion or interest lies is Quebec, notwithstanding significant francophone communities in the other provinces of our country. By contrast, when looking to anglophone interests, there are, of course, several provinces to consider.

Language and cultural rights and fundamental freedoms, including religious and confessional education rights and freedoms of the francophone population of Canada, are on equal footing, whether by Charter or by natural law, with those rights and freedoms of the anglophone population of this country. Indeed, there well may be other rights and freedoms cognate or rationally related to these few I have mentioned which also are to be paired with rights enjoyed by anglophones and our aboriginal peoples, or even matched three ways with a plethora of cultural ingredients whose members constitute a third of the Canadian population. I refer to the non-francophone, non-anglophone, non-aboriginal sector of Canadian society to which I belong. It is reasonable, therefore, to balance effective or de facto veto powers held by some combination of mainly anglophone provinces with a veto power held in Quebec.

Thus far, my simple argument for acknowledging some basis in convention for an implicate right to veto in matters germane or highly important to Quebec obviously points to a different formula than is enunciated in Bill C-110, but that is not the point of my observation. My point is that if there is a good argument, a jurisprudential argument and a constitutionally sound argument to be found that Quebec should be accorded a veto power to match certain combinations of other provincial powers to withhold consent, it is not likely to be that formulated in Bill C-110 except by a phenomenal stroke of luck.

We should be asking ourselves today before we vote: What may be the effect on convention, case law and precedent that will be introduced for some indeterminate length of time with the statute, Bill C-110? That is the important question we should be considering at this moment as a body of sober second thought.

Honourable senators, my points thus far with respect to precedent are, first, that a statute takes the role of an act of government, using an act of Parliament as servant, and that is a step which is irregular in custom. I maintain that always the government is a servant of the Parliament of Canada, the representative of the people of Canada. Add to this neglect to assess its significance in sufficient detail in Committee of the Whole, and one has an abrogation of custom that appears unparliamentary in its haste. We are forgetting that we are a parliamentary democracy.

Finally, to enact as statute a measure that is bound to set precedent is to alter the very equation we wish to solve, rather like the famed Heisenberg Uncertainty principle. We seem to be saying that Quebec is a problem of quantum mechanics, say tunnelling, best grasped with gambits, guesses or gambles. At any rate, it is uncharacteristic of sober second thought.

Honourable senators, as to details, I will be brief. Mr. Claude Ryan, who appeared before our special committee endorsing this bill, could not say it would go far to encourage earnest participation of the Quebec government in negotiating constitutional change. Of course he could not, and that is no blame on him. However, so extreme a measure ought to be avoided where its assurances are slim.

Mr. Ryan could not disagree that participants in the process in Quebec may even find the bill counterproductive. However, it is a matter for consideration that this bill is only temporary, and only a first step in our efforts to attain Canadian unity.

There are other obvious weaknesses in the bill, honourable senators, but I will not take your time to describe them. You have heard of them from previous speakers. I will only say that this bill is apparently deliberately vague in the extreme about what constitutes the consent, or withholding of consent, of a province. It could, I suppose, be interpreted as including a last-minute telephone call from a premier's office, or perhaps from a lieutenant governor. However, one shudders at the concept. Of course, it is amenable to the interpretation that it would take a resolution by the government of the province, but that is little better.

• (1150)

Besides the obvious resolution of a province's Parliament or legislative assembly — and Mr. Ryan, among others, felt it important to limit the objects to that — it does not exclude recourse to referendum, either by the provincial authorities or even, conceivably, by the federal government, to find either consent or confidence in a purported veto by the people of the province.

Should a referendum be contemplated, as the objects allow, I am astounded to find no other language to guide principle of sufficient majority. No guidance is given to us in this bill, in the event of a referendum under the terms of this bill, as to what result would be required — for example, a two-thirds majority, or a 50 per cent plus one, or something in between. What is it that the government wants, as far as a referendum being the final voice of the people to which the government has to listen?

Indeed, there is nothing in the bill to discriminate a weak popular vote from a substantial referendum majority which, of course, depends in no small measure on the enumeration and surveillance practices, as was seen in the recent Quebec referendum.

The argument that this is just a bill, that it is dispensable as a statute and, in fact, binds only the ministers of the Crown, is not a good one, but Bill C-110 will be law, I believe, by two o'clock this afternoon. It will become a statute. The courts will know that rather than using the cabinet resolution signals it could have used, the government has chosen, with purpose, to enact these principles, using Parliament to do so. These principles, however they are applied, so long as they meet the vague test of this statute, will establish practices and make any contest or appeal of the referendum results more difficult. In the wrong hands, this bill could become an instrument for undermining democratic representation, one of the bases of political freedom and responsibility.

I do not say that this bill is in the wrong hands, but again, the bill has no sunset clause. Who is to say that it will not be found to be the least onerous action to take politically just to let it stand, to do little or nothing at the time of negotiations in 1997? That is no magical year, honourable senators. Some of us will still be here to see it. How will we feel as we vote at two o'clock this afternoon?

The concept of Bill C-110 is something like an end-run, as we have just heard, around the Constitution. Not touching the Constitution with a 15-foot pole is one thing; running circles around it is another. I think it is the running circles that will draw the foundation of law in Canada, the extant Constitution itself, into doubt, into ill-regard, like some old codger the children of Confederation need not heed.

If perhaps there are terms in the Constitution of 1982 that were ill-conceived or inconvenient to change today, it is well that the government would take a leading role in promoting change, but with due caution and due regard for what does work — what has worked for, well, one-eighth of a millenium at least.

Nevertheless, honourable senators, I applaud the federal government's intention to limit its freedom in propounding change. The government is showing its desire to let Quebec and other provinces know that it will not contemplate introducing into Parliament, of all high places and bars in the land, any motions or resolutions that it has reason to believe would not have approval in populous provinces or regions.

For the record, however, this may be a most ill-advised instrument with which to make that laudable announcement. I believe the people of Canada are accustomed to taking on faith the fact that what is done in Parliament is intended to be in their best interests, and as a senator, I worry that this precedent may only serve to undermine a presumption to which I think all persons are by right entitled.

Should this bill not carry in this house, should Parliament not prorogue imminently, then I would recommend the bill be reintroduced and amended, or at least subjected to a proper discussion, and probable amendment, in Committee of the Whole.

Honourable senators, it is already twelve noon. Our clock at 2 p.m. will show whether Parliament reigns today.

Hon. Noël A. Kinsella: Honourable senators —

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I wish to inform the Senate that if Honourable Senator Kinsella speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on this motion.

Senator Kinsella: Honourable senators, we have engaged in a very fruitful debate on the report of the Special Committee on Bill C-110 which, as Senator MacEachen pointed out, was a very focused study on Bill C-110.

Honourable senators, the record will show, I think, that we have met our responsibility of examining a bill that was passed by the House of Commons, albeit under the press of closure in the other place. Although we received this bill prior to the Christmas break, we used that period of time to do our individual studies of it, and to prepare for the careful, focused hearings that we did conduct.

The proposition we have heard from colleagues opposite is that there are some problems with this bill. I am not sure whether those problems, as they have seen them and as they have articulated them in the debate here, will lead them to the conclusion that they will therefore vote in support of the committee's recommendation that there be three amendments which would eminently improve this bill.

As I have listened to the debate, all senators seem to agree that this bill is a first step. We seem to have a divergence of views as to whether or not it is a hollow step. Most on this side are of the opinion that there is a bit of a façade abroad with reference to the bill. The façade or myth is that many in the public are expecting that this bill somehow will solve the constitutional amendment problem — and they underscore the term "problem" — that we have in Canada. It is a problem that goes to the heart of the nation.

• (1200)

In my judgment, these days we are experiencing a rupture in the fabric of Canadian life. The community of brothers and sisters in the province of Quebec are experiencing daily a serious fracture in their community life. Because Quebec society is living with this rupture, Canada is living with this rupture. It is a fracture that goes to the very foundation of our country. It is a fracture that cannot be rectified with Polyfilla. We have to re-engineer the very foundation of this great Confederation, a Confederation in which the practice of freedom has enjoyed immense success for over 127 years.

The Canadian Confederation, in my view, has proven itself in so many ways. Notwithstanding that, the reality we live with today is that there is a fracture in our country. I am not satisfied, nor do I think are colleagues who support the government, that this particular measure will be much more than a band-aid over a major wound. We must do much more. We must assume the leadership. We must articulate the vision of Canada 2000. We must underscore the need for national conciliation. We must be imaginative and creative in order to bring our country into the 21st century. We must provide this country with a renewed foundation on which it will stand for another 127 years!

Honourable senators, it is important — and I think we have done this here — to demythologize this bill, particularly that somehow we have come up with a constitutional veto for the people of Quebec, a demand they assumed the Prime Minister of Canada was committed to as he made his important undertaking in Verdun on October 27, 1995. If the government proceeds with its great communication plan to camouflage the reality that we do not have a constitutional amendment that responds to the real needs as articulated by the people of Quebec and their leadership, the people will see through the veil.

We, on this side, have stated that we support the principle; we support the step in the direction of trying to come to grips with the notion of a veto for Quebec. However, this measure, as Senator MacEachen accurately described for us, is simply a restriction on the executive and on the Government of Canada. It does not even place a limitation on the actions of backbenchers or of members of the Houses of Parliament.

Honourable senators, we are prepared to accept that this is a first step. We are anxious to know what the other steps will be because this is not a significant beginning.

By way of a notice of motion, we have before us a proposal that this chamber should strike a committee to identify some of the constitutional amending options the Government of Canada and other governments might wish to look at as they prepare for their mandated conference of 1997. I hope that in the fullness of time this chamber will be able to act on that recommendation by our colleague Senator Beaudoin.

One of my concerns centres around a concern that Claude Ryan and Daniel Johnson raised about how provincial consent will be determined should Bill C-110 receive Royal Assent. Thus, it is the subject of a specific amendment in the report of our committee. That question and this amendment also speak to a divergence in vision that we on this side and our colleagues on that side have about the nature of Confederation itself. If the vision of Sir John A. Macdonald and the Fathers of Confederation was that Canada is the coming together of real entities — the four initial partners in Confederation — then the proposition that the central government should have the power and the tools to interpret the public interest of the parts, as distinct or separate or in place of the public interest being determined by the parts, is a fundamental difference in vision.

I believe in Confederation. My values, my starting point and my criteria are that the provincial parts of Canada are sovereign within their spheres of jurisdiction. They have the legitimate right and responsibility to interpret the public interest of their provinces and their peoples. On the other hand, within its sphere of jurisdiction, the federal government has the duty and responsibility to ascertain and articulate what would constitute the pan-Canadian public interest. Bill C-110 commits an affront to the fundamental principles of Confederation. We are taking the federal Parliament into the realm of what is legitimately and appropriately the jurisdiction of provincial legislatures.

Honourable senators, we heard from one colleague opposite that perhaps it would have been better to kill the bill now rather than allow a sunset clause. There is agreement amongst many of us on this side that that would be a better course of action. However, our approach and commitment at the beginning of the study of Bill C-110 was that we would be as constructive and helpful as we could. We felt that the three amendments we brought forward in that spirit of attempting to be constructive would find a good degree of support from members opposite, for these amendments do not detract from the fundamental principle and objective which the Prime Minister set out in Verdun.

• (1210)

Therefore, I urge all honourable senators to give full consideration to supporting the adoption of this report.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it was agreed by motion yesterday that we would complete discussion at 1:30 p.m. with a vote at two o'clock. The discussions on this particular motion are now complete. The bells will ring at 1:30 p.m. and the deferred vote will be held at two o'clock.

We will now proceed with other items on the Order Paper.

PEARSON AIRPORT AGREEMENTS

THIRD REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE—
DEBATE CONCLUDED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the consideration of the third report of the Special Committee of the Senate on the Pearson Airport Agreements — (Honourable Senator Berntson)

Hon. John Lynch-Staunton (Leader of the Opposition): Honourable senators, I had not intended to speak to this report until after I heard Senator Kirby yesterday. Even then, I will only briefly make reference to some of his comments in view of the time and the day. When we return, I certainly intend to put down an inquiry and continue the discussion, particularly with reference to the minority opinion and Senator Kirby's reflections on it, as they were made yesterday.

First, as one who was not exactly passive in the debate on the motion that set up the committee, I wish to thank all the members, the chairman, members on both sides, and the staff at all levels for having given so much to make this committee, a very unusual committee, the success it was. In particular, I wish to thank them for having, in many cases, altered summer plans to bring their energies and efforts to the successful completion of the committee's work. Many had to alter plans. They did so gracefully. I thank them in particular, and all those associated with the committee's work, for the excellent contributions they made to it.

I have nothing to add to what Senator MacDonald said yesterday. However, as I said earlier, I have a lot to say about what Senator Kirby said. First, I want to remind honourable senators about the purpose of the committee, of which some seem to have lost sight. Our concern here has not been with the cancellation of the contracts themselves. We believe it was an unwise decision, but we also accept the fact that the Government of Canada has a right, through the parliamentary process, to cancel the agreements.

Hon. John G. Bryden: That is not what the terms of reference say, senator.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I am trying to explain the purpose of the inquiry.

Senator Bryden: Read the terms of reference. Events leading up to and the negotiation and the cancellation of the contract. That is what it says.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Our argumentation on the Pearson controversy has never been with the government's right to cancel the contracts, although we do question the wisdom of so doing. The purpose of the committee was sparked by certain statements made by a number of ministers of the Crown, including the Prime Minister, the Minister of Justice and, in particular, the former minister of Transport.

The former minister of Transport, in his appearance as a witness before the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee to discuss Bill C-22, set the tone of his approach by asking me, the first questioner, whom I was representing. This implied, quite unsubtly, that my colleagues and I were there objecting to Bill C-22, not on the question of the rule of law or the other arguments we had raised, but to represent the interests of certain individuals and companies who had a vested interest in the contracts themselves.

That statement set off a litany of what I can only call vitriolic statements which, in summary, accuse just about everyone involved with the Pearson agreements and those involved with the protestations over Bill C-22 with having one motivation, namely, to protect the interests of Conservative supporters.

I will not read all the condemnation to which we and others have been subjected. Let me just remind honourable senators of some of the more colourful ones. First, that the Pearson agreements were the biggest rip-off in Canadian history.

Senator Bryden: That has been proven accurate.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Second, that they were "a cesspool of intrigue," and senators in this chamber on this side were involved, in condemning Bill C-22, "to line our friends' pockets."

These were not just casual statements made in the heat of debate; these were calculated condemnations of parties involved in a straight-up agreement, and of senators concerned over a reprehensible bill drafted to obscure the true motivation of those who cared about the rule of law.

In particular, two provocative statements were made — one by the former minister of Transport when he said, in commenting about our concerns, that he would "let the Conservative majority in the Senate continue to try to take care of their friends." The other statement, by the Minister of Justice, is a little more subtle but the implication was the same when, in commenting on the changes we wanted to make to the bill, he said that he regretted the changes. He went on to say that he observed that the majority of the committee that made those recommendations are Progressive Conservative senators and that he thought that had a lot to do with it.

The implication is clear. Over and over again, government members have deliberately embarked on a campaign of condemnation of colleagues on this side, and have characterized the agreements as being in the worst interests of Canadian taxpayers.

This alone justified an independent inquiry. If Canadian taxpayers were so badly ripped off; if favourite friends of previous governments were so well taken care of, surely an inquiry was essential in order to see, first, the validity of the charges; and, second, if there was any, to take whatever proceedings were necessary against whatever individuals were found to be involved in criminal activity.

Senator Bryden: We have already heard this speech.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Third, an inquiry was necessary to find out if there are members of Parliament who happen to sit in this chamber who are carrying out their responsibilities with the sole purpose of lining their friends' pockets.

The government refused to set up an independent inquiry. It was not with any enthusiasm — and I am quoting myself — that we made a motion to set up a Senate inquiry. We knew that the interpretation of the results would be obscured by the partisan nature of the makeup of the committee, but better a Senate inquiry than none at all.

As it turns out, none of the major malicious statements made by any minister were ever proven by any witness who came before us. There was no cesspool. There was no rip-off. There was and is no lining of pockets.

Senator Bryden: I do not know what inquiry you attended. What about the $3.5 million? Stick to some facts.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Order, please. Senators will have an opportunity to participate in the debate. Senator Lynch-Staunton has the floor.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: None of those who made those statements have had the decency to retract them, even less to apologize for them. That does not surprise me in the least, because these are the same people who showed no concern whatsoever when the Department of Justice sent a letter to a foreign country indicating that a former prime minister had engaged in criminal activities —

• (1220)

Senator Bryden: Your Honour, I rise on a point of order.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: The honourable senator rises on a point of order.

Senator Bryden: Honourable senators, is the honourable senator using the debate on the Pearson inquiry report to also deal with the Airbus scandal?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: Honourable senators, that is not a point of order; it is a point of information. I am commenting on the Pearson report and giving some background to it. If some of the things I say are touching a nerve, so be it.

I will add one thing, whether or not it is out of order: Given a choice between casting my lot with Brian Mulroney or with those who would deny innocent citizens the rule of law or a former prime minister the presumption of innocence, I will pick Brian Mulroney any time.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Lynch-Staunton: As for the report itself, I do not have the time and this is not the day — particularly in view of the vote to be held at 2 p.m. — to reply to Senator Kirby's diatribe. It is hoped that we will have another occasion because we cannot let his tirade go unanswered. Any unsuspecting reader of Hansard may take it for fact when it is, in large part, a harangue based on hearsay, selective documents, irrelevant facts and out-of-context statements. It is a perfect sequel to the Nixon report, the contents of which were long ago discredited. The report's author and his associates as witnesses in front of the committee proved equal to the report and the unprecedented legislation which it fostered.

Senator Kirby's presentation should be attached to the Nixon report as Volume 2, as both start from preconceived notions to arrive at incoherent conclusions. Both take particular offence at the fact that the Pearson contracts were concluded shortly before the last federal election and that, somehow, this was a violation by a government of established tradition, particularly by a government whose chances of being re-elected were universally considered to be nil.

As a result, the cancellation of the contracts, claim Liberal ministers and their supporters, will cost taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars if Bill C-22 is not passed. This will be said to be the fault of a Conservative government which directed a sweetheart contract to its supporters, which had to be cancelled because it was against the public interest. So goes the Liberal line, incorporated in the Nixon report, parroted in the Pearson committee minority opinion and in Senator Kirby's remarks of yesterday.

The evidence is all to the contrary. The agreements were not signed by Conservative or government supporters. The contracts were in the public interest.

Here we are, over two years later, and nothing but the bare minimum is being done at Pearson airport. A lease with the airport authority has yet to be signed. Both carriers and travellers plead for improvements to Terminals 1 and 2 which everyone knows have been long overdue. Had the contracts been respected, hundreds of millions of dollars in private capital would have been invested and thousands of jobs would have been created in a region which is desperately in search of jobs. Cancelling the contracts was done for no other reason than narrow, partisan purposes.

I intend to elaborate on this and other aspects of the sad, not to say tragic, Pearson story on another occasion. Now I want to comment on the myth that the main contracts were signed in late October 1993. They were not.

All of the evidence indicates that both parties recognized that, by the end of August 1993, negotiations had led to agreements from which neither party could unilaterally remove itself without being exposed to major financial damages.

Senator Bryden: That is absolute nonsense. That is absolutely not true. How can you stand up there and simply state what goes against the facts found in the evidence and the report?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: This is what Prime Minister Campbell was faced with. Had she refused to allow the deal to be closed in October, some 20 days before the election, without the approval of the other parties, an immediate claim for damages would have ensued.

I urge honourable senators, including and in particular Senator Bryden, to read the testimony of the now Clerk of the Privy Council and other government officials involved in the negotiations, including senior Treasury Board officials. They will find in that testimony unanimous agreement that, as the negotiations moved to a successful conclusion, beginning in the early summer of 1993, potential liability based on the backing off of one party or another was increasing accordingly.

It is all there in the testimony by those involved in the negotiations on behalf of the Government of Canada. A deal began to take shape.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: A deal began to take shape as early as June 1993. The closing date of October was set sometime in early July.

Senator Bryden: No contract until October.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: The date was set sometime in early July.

Senator Bryden: There is evidence that there was no contract until July.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: That confirms that both sides were committed to a successful conclusion of negotiations which took place at the end of August. It took place at the end of August.

Honourable senators, I am very new here, but is there any rule of this house that the statements of a senator must bear some relevance to the facts about which he is reporting?

Senator Berntson: Obviously not. We listened to it all day yesterday.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: If Senator Kirby is an example, the honourable senator has answered his own question. My intervention has been an exception, which is perhaps why the honourable senator rose.

The closing date of October had been agreed upon in early July. By the end of August, the deal was successfully completed. At the end of August, cabinet approval was given to a Treasury Board submission, and an Order in Council was issued giving the Minister of Transport authority to sign the contracts based on the submission made to cabinet.

There we were, in the same position as someone who had agreed to buy a house. The price was set and the actual closing date was to take place a month or two months later, but there has been an agreement between the two parties before the final, formal closing. In this case, a firm commitment between the two parties was made at the end of August. What happened in October was a formality.

At the end of August, honourable senators, the Government of Canada and Pearson Development both knew that they were committed to each other and that any breach of that commitment, other than by mutual agreement, would have costly legal and financial repercussions.

What Prime Minister Campbell agreed to was not the signing of the contracts but their release from escrow where they had been put, already signed, by the minister and Pearson Development until certain obligations were met. Did Prime Minister Campbell have a choice? I suppose she did. Yes, politically, it no doubt would have been preferable had she decided to postpone the closing date until after the election. Politically, that might have been the best choice.

However, in terms of the country's interests, this would have been the wrong choice as taxpayers would have been exposed, as has been confirmed in testimony from all sides, to damages arising from a unilateral breach of contract. As Prime Minister, Ms Campbell had no choice.

• (1230)

Let me remind honourable senators that, during the campaign, Mr. Chrétien spoke of reviewing the contracts and about the public knowing all the facts. Immediately after the election, Pearson Development Corporation agreed to postpone the execution of the contracts to allow a review to take place. The events that followed are well known. The so-called "review" by Robert Nixon was nothing but a politically motivated argumentation against private development, and a recommendation that the contracts be annulled based on innuendo, prejudice and preconceived notions.

To compound this, honourable senators, the government then introduced Bill C-22, which would give the Minister of Transport absolute discretion in the determination of the type of damages to be awarded and the amount. Unfortunately, these decisions have had repercussions way beyond our borders, for this would be the first time that not only has a Canadian government repudiated a contract without justification, but also has refused the repudiated party the right to seek redress before a neutral party. Our reputation abroad has suffered tremendously from this unprecedented action.

If a convention was broken, it is not because of what Ms Campbell did in October of 1993; it is because of what the Prime Minister authorized a few weeks later: the breaching of the convention that one honours the obligations of his or her predecessors and, in disagreement, respects the rule of law and fairness in changing or abrogating them; something which was not followed in the case of the Pearson Airport Agreements.

Some may question whether or not this is indeed a convention, so let me quote to colleagues a statement made by the Prime Minister himself when he was in India recently, signing trade agreements at the time that either an election had been called, or was about to be called. I do not have precise information, but what I have learned since is that a vote is expected in India in April. No exact date has been announced, but the election campaign is on, and was on at the time.

The Prime Minister, after signing trade agreements, was asked by an Indian reporter if any Canadian trade deals would be jeopardized or could be jeopardized if the government lost the election. If the Indian government signs contracts in which the government has an involvement, could a successor abrogate the contracts?

Senator Stollery: After the writ has come out?

Senator Lynch-Staunton: I do not know their system, but the election campaign was on. The situation is similar enough to the one we were in for me to make mention of it.

The Prime Minister replied — without blushing, by the way, because I also heard him on television — that a change in the government would have no effect. He said that “governments make it a tradition to respect the words of previous governments.”

I can only assume that, in this case, the statement is not divisible. What Mr. Chrétien said applied to agreements this country makes outside Canada also applies to agreements made by the Canadian government domestically.

Senator Olson: Why not tell the rest of the story? He said before the election that he would cancel the contract.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: No. He said before the election that he would review the contract. The word “cancellation” appears nowhere. He said that he wanted the public to know all the facts. That is a long way from giving Mr. Nixon a 30-day mandate, with the first draft report coming out on November 18, halfway through that mandate, with a conclusion, even before Nixon heard from his so-called witnesses, for, by the way, many of the witnesses who should have been there were not invited, and of the others he had little recollection, and had no notes with which to jog his memory. It is also interesting that Mr. Nixon has made no comment on the Pearson report, and with reason.

Honourable senators, let us hope that the government has learned from this tragic story, and that it will not be repeated by it or its successors. In particular, if the Prime Minister’s statement is not divisible, he has no choice but to see that Bill C-22, whether in its existing form or as a successor bill, will not be brought here again to do dishonour to the Parliament of Canada.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Bryden: Honourable senators, I wonder why we are doing this today. I was not here yesterday, but why was this issue raised yesterday? The purpose of these past two days has been to address serious issues relating to the future makeup of our country. These issues may have implications not only for us but for generations to come. I am bewildered as to why, at this time, we are back to continuing to pick at the political cadaver of the last days of the moribund Mulroney government.

Senator Lynch-Staunton: The item is on the Order Paper.

Senator Bryden: I had the opportunity to read the debate of yesterday. The only reason I can think of as to why Senator MacDonald, the chairman of the committee, would have taken an hour to review and rehash what has gone on and attack the minority report is that he, for some reason, felt he needed a rematch after what happened at the press conference on December 13. The way I read what happened yesterday, he was overmatched. I do not think Senator MacDonald did such a bad job on December 13; not nearly as bad as some of his friends opposite implied. Given what he had to work with, he did a very good job.

This place, surely, has had enough of the Pearson deal. I would think that the Canadian public has had enough of the Pearson deal. They voted on this issue. It was a large part of what happened in October of 1993. We have invested goodness knows how many dollars in the inquiry that took place this summer. It changed no one’s mind in particular. What it did do is present once again to the jury of the Canadian public what this deal was all about. That jury turfed the Conservative Party, which entered into that deal out of office, and virtually obliterated it. I found no indication that anything that came out of that inquiry changed their opinion.

Honourable senators, I want to draw the attention of this house to something that happened which may be of interest. On December 13 last, the committee report was tabled and a press conference occurred with media interviews. On December 15, a lead editorial appeared in The Globe and Mail, together with a treatise on Bill C-22 by Professor Monahan. The lead editorial basically reiterated the conclusions of the Conservative majority, with Professor Monahan supporting the fact that he thinks Bill C-22 is unconstitutional.

On December 21, I faxed a letter to the Editor-in-Chief of The Globe and Mail replying to both. Predictably, the paper refused to publish it. Being basically a fatalist, I put my letter in the file, thinking that the time is past, the issue is done, we have beaten this dead horse as much as we can beat it. Then, lo and behold, I came back here to find that it has been resurrected. Since I could not get it on the public record through The Globe and Mail, I should like to put it on the public record now.

This is a letter dated December 21, 1995, to William Thorsell, Editor-in-Chief of The Globe and Mail. It reads:

Dear Editor:

I was disappointed, although not surprised, that your editorial “A lapse of judgment on the Pearson Airport” (Friday, December 15), presented such a one-sided view of the evidence and conclusions of the Report of the Special Senate Committee on the Pearson Airport Agreements, that it might more properly have been authored by Conservative Senate leader John Lynch-Staunton than an editor of what purports to be Canada’s national newspaper. Your editorial omitted many important facts, which I hope you will allow me to present to your readers, so that they may draw their own conclusions about the “Pearson Airport affair.”

Fact: The evidence showed that the Pearson contracts gave the developers $200-$250 million more in profits than prevailing rates of return required....

Fact: The rate of return to the developers was not 14%, as stated by the majority report, but a pre-tax 23.6% —...

Fact: The model used by the Government in assessing the rate of return was a model provided by the developers themselves — who were hardly impartial or disinterested in the results of the assessment....

Fact: Over and above their 23.6% profits, the developers would have earned millions of dollars in non-arms length side agreements. These included construction contracts, management contracts, engineering contracts, international promotional contracts and consulting contracts. One of these contracts, signed during the election campaign, was a no-cut promise to pay $3.5 million over ten years to a company headed by Don Matthews, with no obligation by Mr. Matthews' company to provide any goods or services in exchange for this money. None of these contracts was mentioned anywhere in the majority report.

Fact: Time after time when lobbyists pitted themselves against the recommendations of the public servants, the Minister of Transport expressly directed the public servants to accept the lobbyists' recommendations. The public servants' dismay was evident in a 1991 memorandum shown the Committee, which said: "Paper trail — Min[ister] can overrule us...but audit trail on decisions." This evidence was omitted from the majority report.

Fact: Mr. Fred Doucet, a long-time close personal friend of Prime Minister Mulroney, won for his company over $2 million for lobbying services for Mr. Matthews' groups —...

Fact: Mr. Bill Neville, another lobbyist for Mr. Matthews' group, not only received "full debriefings" on what transpired in secret Cabinet committee meetings, but was also brought in on Kim Campbell's transition team and helped shuffle senior public servants involved in the Pearson file.

This while he was still invoicing Paxport.

Senator Tkachuk: Where is that in the evidence? Read it out of the evidence.

Senator Bryden: It is in the evidence. You just did not do your homework, senator. The letter goes on:

Fact: Prime Minister Mulroney was very heavily involved in this file. There was repeated evidence that pressure was being exerted from the very top to conclude the deal before Prime Minister Mulroney left office.

Senator Tkachuk: Who said that?

Senator Bryden: It's in the file.

Senator Tkachuk: Don't just say it. Who said it?

Senator Bryden: I can cite the transcript if you want. I am reading the letter. I do not want to confuse the fact that I am reading my letter. To continue:

None of this evidence was mentioned in the majority report...

Fact: Mr. Shortliffe, Mr. Mulroney's top civil servant, testified under oath that Mr. Mulroney asked him to try and arrange things with the Pearson project "so that everybody could get a piece of the action." ...

Excessive profits, sweetheart deals, busy lobbyists, political pressure — this was how Canada's largest and most profitable airport ended up in the hands of a private group of developers in a 57-year lease. And who would pay? The travelling public, in increased charges for virtually everything at the airport.

We detailed all this evidence (and more) in the minority report. Our report was not, as suggested in your editorial, an interpretation of the evidence. Our report simply quoted the evidence before the Committee. The evidence speaks eloquently for itself. This was a bad deal, negotiated by a flawed process, and pushed through during an election campaign in a way that the academics who testified described variously as "bizarre," "imprudent," and "constitutionally inappropriate exercise of power."

It was evident from reading your editorial that you had confined yourself only to the majority report. I invite you, but more importantly, I invite your readers to read both reports. I ask them as taxpayers, as members of the travelling public, and as citizens, to decide whether the Chrétien government had any choice but to cancel this deal.

Having participated in the hearings, I cannot say it was a worthwhile expenditure of time or taxpayers' money — not in these times, when government services have to be drastically reduced, and every tax dollar has many needy hands reaching for it already. The evidence simply confirmed the judgment already made by the Canadian electorate in October, 1993. The Liberals in the Senate did not ask for the inquiry; but the Conservative majority voted for it. And we did our best to get at the truth.

It was an interesting coincidence that on the same day that your one-sided editorial appeared, on the op-ed page was a treatise by Professor Patrick J. Monahan entitled, "Why the Pearson legislation may be unconstitutional." Its entire thesis is based on the assumption that the Pearson agreements resulted in a "fairly bargained contract", and that the cancellation of this contract by Bill C-22, which restricts the proponents' legal claims to the recovery of actual costs incurred, but denies any claims for lost future profits and consultants' and lobbyists' fees, would somehow be contrary to the rule of law referred to in the preamble to the Constitution. Two points need to be made in regard to this thesis.

First, the vast preponderance of evidence presented at the inquiry into the Pearson deal established that this was not a fairly bargained contract. It was enormously generous to the developers, failed to protect the interests of the travelling public and the Canadian taxpayers, and its terms were virtually dictated by the proponents directly, or indirectly through their lobbyists, with the acquiescence if not the active promotion of the Ministers and Prime Ministers. This was not only in violation of the Conservative Government's own policy on airport devolution, but was also in total disregard for the Government's three principles governing major contracts, that require competition, equal treatment, and openness and transparency of process.

Second, this was not a contract entered into by a Government and then cancelled by the same Government. It was a contract driven to completion and directed to be signed by the Prime Minister in the dying days of the Conservative Government, and it was cancelled by a succeeding government, whose mandate was, inter alia, to do exactly that. If one were to follow Professor Monahan's thesis to its logical conclusion, any succeeding government must either perform such a contract, no matter how exorbitant the costs, or if it cancels the contract, incur the risks of huge damages for lost future profits and lobbying fees that may be awarded by the courts at the expense of Canadian taxpayers. Surely this is taking a reference to the rule of law in the preamble to the Constitution to ridiculous extremes.

It should also be pointed out that Professor Monahan's view is not the only one expressed by constitutional experts to the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee of the Senate.

• (1250)

In addition to the Justice Minister and his constitutional experts, Professor Wayne MacKay of Dalhousie Law School, and others, find Bill C-22 to be in total compliance with the Constitution and well within the powers of the Parliament of Canada. Indeed, if one reviews the testimony of the various 'constitutional experts' before the Committee, one is reminded of what is sometimes said of the expert opinions of economists, that they have an opinion not because they know, but because they are asked.

Under the guise of the reference to the concept of the rule of law in the preamble of the Constitution, Mr. Monahan is setting the stage for gross abuses of power by outgoing governments. If accepted, his argument would allow — perhaps even encourage — governments that have lost the trust of the electorate, to engage in a patronage spree beyond anything we have seen before. Governments would have no constraint on their power to conclude rich deals with their friends and supporters. Any succeeding government would then be bound — by Mr. Monahan's thesis — to honour such contracts. If they were to elect to cancel the contracts, they would still be liable to pay the friends and supporters damages for all the profits they anticipated receiving.

A court cannot rewrite a bad contract, even one made by a government on its way out of power. And according to Mr. Monahan, Parliament is powerless to undo such a contract, unless the parties can claim damages for all the profits and fees as if the contract had been completely performed.

Surely this is absurd; surely this is not how our parliamentary and judicial systems protect our interests as citizens. And what value does our vote then have? The electorate voted to undo the deal; yet Mr. Monahan's thesis would refuse the electorate that right. Or would it?

Bill C-22 would cancel the Pearson contracts, and provide a mechanism for the Government to reimburse the developers for their reasonable costs and legal fees, plus interest. If one reviews the testimony before the Senate Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, it is this reimbursement mechanism that Mr. Monahan has declared falls afoul of the rule of law.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: I regret that I have to inform the honourable senator that his speaking time has expired, but he could, of course, continue with the unanimous consent of the house.

Is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Bryden: Honourable senators, allow me to continue from where I was before I was so graciously interrupted. My letter continues:

It will be a rather bizarre result of the Conservatives' position on this bill, if the Government is forced by the Conservatives to return with a new bill, one which would cancel the agreements and provide no compensation at all. All the witnesses who appeared before the Senate Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, including Mr. Monahan, are on record as saying that this would be perfectly constitutional and well within the power of the Parliament of Canada.

Remember, honourable senators, that this was written on December 21. Continuing with my letter:

I believe that Bill C-22 is constitutionally sound, and sensible public policy in view of the circumstances of this particular — highly unusual — deal. This bill has been debated twice in the House of Commons, studied in the House of Commons Transport Committee, debated extensively in the Senate, and has now sat in the Senate Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee for 18 months. Twice the Government attempted to break the gridlock on the bill, by proposing amendments that would address the concerns raised by the Conservatives' experts; however, each time one concern was addressed, a new one suddenly emerged.

It is time to pass the bill, so that it can be a law to be considered along with other laws by the courts during the legal action on the contract which is currently before the courts. That is the proper action for the Conservative majority in the Senate to take at this time, unless the real purpose of continuing to hold up passage of the bill is, to use Senator Finlay MacDonald's words, to have it "die on the order paper." In trying to understand the motive for such stonewalling of this bill, during this season of the year —

Remember, I wrote this on December 21 —

— I turn to the words of Mr. Scrooge when confronted by the ghost of his former partner Marley, in Dickens' A Christmas Carol: "There's more of gray than of grave about you, whatever you are!" An objective observer might conclude in this case that there is much more of gray than of grave constitutional concerns motivating the Conservative majority in the Senate on Bill C-22.

Hon. H.A. Olson: Honourable senators, I have a word or two to say in this debate because of the interventions and heckling of the two members from Saskatchewan, who seem to think that the government has done something wrong by dealing with a matter that was finally authorized just before the election, long after the writ was issued. They should go back and read some of the debates of one of their compatriots, the Right Honourable John Diefenbaker, and see what he had to say about governments making long-term commitments of any kind after the writ is issued.

While the government of the day did have a majority — and could legally and constitutionally sign these agreements — morally, and in the name of decency, they should have waited at least until they saw whether or not the people would endorse them. My understanding is that the Prime Minister of the day signed the deal nine days before the election day. Why could the government not have waited to see whether or not it had the moral authority of the electorate in Canada?

Senator Tkachuk: You should appoint a judge.

Senator Olson: No. You should not appoint a judge to determine what payments will be made out of the public treasury. That is done sometimes but it is not a good idea generally. Parliament has control of the purse strings in this country, and so it should. That is what the bill calls for. It calls for the government to pay some of those expenses.

I recommend that Senators Berntson and Tkachuk read some of Mr. Diefenbaker's speeches about the type of situation in which the previous Conservative government found itself. All they needed to do was to refrain from signing the agreements until election day, because the present Prime Minister, then the Leader of the Opposition, had already advised the government, the public and the participants to the deal that if the Liberals were elected, that deal, that arrangement, would be cancelled, so it was no surprise to anyone.

The government of the day did not have the moral authority to sign that deal, and it should not have signed it.

Senator Lynch-Staunton's remarks are what have spurred me to make these few comments. He says that someone else is at fault. There is no one else at fault except the government and the Prime Minister of the day, who signed the deal nine or ten days in advance of the election, when they really did not have the moral authority to do so.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: If no other senator wishes to speak, this order is considered debated.

• (1300)

INTERNAL ECONOMY, BUDGETS AND ADMINISTRATION

FORTY-THIRD REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the forty-third report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented in the Senate on February 1, 1996.

Hon. Colin Kenny moved the adoption of the report.

He said: Honourable senators, the report before you requests approval of a supplementary estimate for the present fiscal year 1995-96 totalling $3,265,000. The supplementary estimate is requested to fund unanticipated expenses for the current year. It will generate savings in future years or will result in increases in productivity.

The items for which the supplementary funds are required are as follows: first, the Early Departure Program which resulted in the elimination of 16 positions from the Senate; second, an upgrade to the Senate's very much outdated computer communications network; third, the requirements of the special joint and standing committees whose expenditures were not foreseen at the time that the Senate set its budget for the fiscal year; fourth, the implementation of in-house printing which will result in annual savings of $600,000 in printing costs.

I should note that in 1994-95 your committee asked for and received a supplementary estimate of $1,873,000 for the purchase of computers and a new sound system. However, much of this money lapsed as there was insufficient time to complete these projects. This year, we do have the necessary time and we are confident that all our projects will be completed before the end of the fiscal year.

I should like to provide honourable senators with a little more detail on why your committee is requesting these funds. I will begin with the Early Departure Program. During 1995-96, the departure payments made to employees whose positions were eliminated amounted to $875,000. This was partially offset by salary savings of $418,000, leaving $457,000 currently unfunded. The funding of departure payments for government departments is usually approved by Treasury Board provided that the payback period is reasonable, that is, no more than two or three years.

While it is obvious to senators that the Senate is not a government department, your committee has nevertheless applied standards which are as high or higher than those applied by Treasury Board. The Senate's payback period is 16 months, which is significantly better than the Treasury Board guidelines.

I should like now to talk about the upgrade to the Senate's computer communication network. As many senators know, our present system is outdated. It has limited capacity and is subject to frequent breakdowns. It is quite apparent that there is a need to communicate electronically with the House of Commons and the Library of Parliament.

Just last year, the other place upgraded its computer communication network and funded it through supplementary estimates worth $3,800,000. In order for us to be technically compatible, the Senate must also upgrade, which will cost a total of $1.408 million.

I will now discuss our proposal to upgrade the Senate's sound system. Funds have been set aside to establish an adequate system for sound distribution inside and outside the Senate chamber for requirements of simultaneous interpretation. The Internal Economy Committee has been putting off this problem for many years. Our sound system is so inadequate that staff has been informed that no amount of repair will provide us with the reliability we require. If we do not replace it now, we will continue to experience forced adjournments because the system is not functioning. This disrupts our sittings and delays the passage of legislation and other work of the Senate. As well, an improved, updated system will result in much better quality in the translation and interpretation of our proceedings.

It has been an established practice to fund special and joint committees from supplementary estimates as these costs cannot be anticipated during the budget process. The total amount we are requesting this year is $515,000 which breaks out as follows: Pearson airport committee, $298,000; joint scrutiny of regulations committee, $151,381; the special joint committee on code of conduct, $31,942; the special committee on euthanasia, $26,300; the official languages joint committee, $4,300; the Library of Parliament joint committee, $3,000.

Finally, I would like to discuss in-house printing. A few months ago, the internal economy committee, under my predecessor the Honourable Senator Hastings, asked Senator Cohen to review the findings of a staff committee on official Senate documents. Her recommendation was that the Senate establish an in-house printing capability. This proposal was accepted by our committee at its meeting last month. While requiring a capital investment of $885,000, this proposal will result in projected cost savings of $600,000 each year or $50,000 per month.

This figure has been confirmed by an outside, independent auditor's projection, Progestics Consultants of Ottawa, a firm specializing in technical audits. Our payback period for this capital investment will be less than 18 months. It is in our interests to proceed with this project as soon as possible.

The printing of official documents is currently being done by the government printing office formerly known as the Queen's Printer. That office is now disbanded. The option of having Senate documents printed by private companies was considered but rejected on the grounds that it would be less expensive to do the printing in-house. The only printing planned to be done outside the Senate is for specialized materials, such as embossed printing, invitations for the opening of Parliament and the binding of Senate journals and the Debates of the Senate.

In conclusion, I would like to thank a number of senators for their special assistance with this supplementary estimate. I wish to thank Senator Nolin for moving the motion to adopt these estimates in committee; Senator Cohen for her work in reviewing the findings and the recommendations of the staff committee on official Senate documents; Senators Nolin, Carstairs, Milne and Comeau for their preliminary work respecting the proposals for the Senate's new computer program; and to the leadership of both sides of the house for their cooperation which made this process more simple. I also want to thank the Senate staff for all their work, particularly on such short notice.

Honourable senators, I ask your support for this report. It is a report which requests funds for the Early Departure Program to reduce person-years with a pay-back period of 16 months. It requests funds to upgrade our computer system so the Senate is not left behind in this area of technology, and so that we will be able to electronically communicate with other branches on Parliament Hill. It includes a proposal to improve the chamber sound system which is intolerable. It includes a proposal for in-house printing which will generate savings of $50,000 a month.

As a result of these supplementary estimates, the total annual future savings generated from both the in-house printing program and the Early Departure Program will be $1.262 million. These are important steps forward in the administration of the Senate and, I believe, worthy of your approval.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the forty-fourth report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented in the Senate on February 1, 1996.

Hon. Colin Kenny moved the adoption of the report.

He said: Honourable senators, before getting into the details of this report, I should like to thank senators from both sides of the house for the work they did on the Estimates. In particular, I want to thank our former chairman, Senator Hastings, for his contribution to and leadership of the committee. I also wish to thank Senator Di Nino, our deputy chairman who filled in for our former chairman when he was away. I also want to thank Senator Bosa, who chaired the very busy and difficult subcommittee on budgets and personnel.

• (1310)

I wish to thank Senator LeBreton for moving and adopting these Main Estimates in our committee and for her support of them. Finally, I wish to thank all members and other senators who attended for their comments and advice.

Honourable senators, this report before you today seeks approval for expenditures totalling $40,712,500 for the operating and capital expenditures of the Senate for the fiscal year 1996-97.

These estimates show a budget reduction of 3.1 per cent, which reflects a cumulative reduction of 9 per cent over the last five fiscal years. In 1991-92, the Senate's budget was $44 million. For next year, our committee is asking for estimates of $40.7 million. Under the leadership of Senator Lavoie-Roux, the Internal Economy Committee decided some time ago that the Senate's budget must be reduced through a combination of hard work and tough decisions, and it has implemented significant budget reductions.

Senator Lavoie-Roux and her committee, through different administrative initiatives, implemented a variety of reductions which resulted in greater efficiencies in operation. The number of person years were reduced, as were the overall salary costs. Your committee and, indeed, the entire Senate owe Senator Lavoie-Roux a debt of gratitude for her efforts in controlling and reducing the costs of running our legislature.

In 1994-95, the Senate budget was set at $42 million; the following year, there was no change. On April 4, 1995, the Senate approved a reduction of 4.2 per cent in the expenses of the Senate, a target not yet reached. Since that time, 16 person years have been eliminated: two in the Legislative Services Directorate, four in the service of the Black Rod's office, and 10 in the Services Directorate.

Although the total salary savings in 1995-96 caused by the elimination of these positions amount to $418,000, the total annual future savings will be $662,000. Additional savings have also been achieved in other areas of the budget. For example, reductions in staff replacement in senators offices, printing of brochures, the elimination of Senate tour guides, reducing expenditures on furniture, fixtures and books for the Senate reading room.

Since the present fiscal year is not completed, it is unclear how close to the target of 4.2 per cent expenditure reduction we will come. However, the results thus far are very positive, given the fact that these reductions only took effect part-way through the year.

I will now discuss some of the highlights of this budget and bring to your attention some of your committee's concerns.

First, senators' research and office expenses: The budget for senators' research and office expenses is still not fully funded. Even with an increase in the 1996-97 budget, a major discrepancy exists in this portion of the Senate estimates. There remains a shortfall of 20 per cent. As you know, unlike the House of Commons, senators have only one secretary on their permanent staff and must rely totally on their research and general office budget to provide them with research and support assistance to carry out their duties. While recognizing that members of the House of Commons have different responsibilities and must maintain constituency offices, nevertheless they have operating budgets in excess of $170,000. Some have geographical and electoral supplements in excess of $16,000 and $32,000 respectively, over and above their $170,000 operating budget. As well, the administration of the House of Commons funds a wide range of office equipment in addition to the members' operating budgets, and all of these items are fully funded in the House of Commons estimates.

I should like to turn now to in-house printing. Contingent upon the approval of the supplementary estimates, the budget for outside printing services has decreased significantly. In the next fiscal year, the Senate will begin printing its official documents in-house. These documents are committee proceedings, Hansard, the Senate minutes, and Senate bills. This program calls for an increase of 1.5 person years as well as additional equipment and maintenance costs. However, we estimate that even with these additional expenditures, the net savings for the Senate will be $600,000 annually, or $50,000 per month. Your committee has agreed that it will conduct a review of this program and other items in six months to ensure that our cost saving measures are on target.

With regard to staff reductions, as I mentioned earlier, a number of positions were eliminated as part of the budgetary restraint measures implemented in 1995-96. These staffing cuts, combined with the elimination of the tour guide program and other miscellaneous reductions, have resulted in the salary budget being reduced by $971,000.

I must confess, honourable senators, that this is one of the most difficult areas of our expenditure plan with which to deal. These are not just numbers but real people with families and careers who must face major readjustments in their lives. It is not an easy task to watch them just walk out the door. The Internal Economy Committee was determined to see that they were treated fairly. Many of our employees were disheartened to learn that what they perceived to be a long-term career with the Senate would not happen and that, unexpectedly, they would be faced with major decisions affecting their families. They have had to reorient themselves, and have been assisted by the Senate in this regard through counselling services and retraining programs.

For many, such changes have not been easy. Some are returning to a school environment after having been away for several years, and have had to learn new skills. The Internal Economy Committee's decision to eliminate these positions has touched the lives of our employees in a real way. We did not proceed in this direction without serious reflection and consideration.

I must remind honourable senators that your committee still has concerns regarding the budget. For example, last year's budget for furniture and fixtures restricted purchases relating to health and safety issues and very basic office equipment. If this funding is to be maintained at the current level, the Senate will soon see a significant deterioration of its furniture and equipment. You cannot cut indefinitely both the budget for the purchase of new furniture as well as the budget for making repairs to existing furniture. You should cut one or the other, but not both of these items.

In the long run, the Senate must make a major expense to rectify accumulated problems. Moreover, needs arising from new activities and increased usage of technology will not be addressed with the current level of resources available. For example, many of the desks and chairs which have been purchased over the years are not adapted for computers; even our computer work stations will have to be adjusted to accommodate the new Windows environment which we are moving towards. Building and maintenance alterations have also been reduced in the last year and cover health and safety problems only. With this level of resources, it is impossible to adapt to the evolving needs of the workplace. It is also difficult to keep up the basic maintenance of buildings. As an example, there have been occasions when projects performed by Public Works on pipes or electrical wires have remained unfinished because of the Senate's incapacity to proceed with this part of the work.

Honourable senators, our budget estimates for 1996-97 leave very little flexibility to deal with ongoing operations in future years. Furthermore, the Senate's ability to adapt to a changing environment may be seriously hampered. Senate managers have cut their budgets to the bone, and our committee has no room in these estimates to deal with unexpected problems. This is not a desirable situation for those charged with the administration of an organization to be in. Many of the reductions do not represent permanent cost savings and are merely a deferral of expenditures. We believe that these expenses will have to be incurred at some time in the future, but at a higher cost to the Senate. This will mean increases in future budgets which will make it difficult to reach 100 per cent funding for senators' research and office expenses.

• (1320)

Honourable senators, I ask for your support for the adoption of this report. We started the process of cutting the budget of the Senate some years ago. Our 3.1 per cent reduction for 1996-97 continues the same expenditure reduction trend. As an institution, we have been very responsible and successful in controlling our expenditures in this era of fiscal restraint. If we compare the Senate with the other place, our record is very positive.

Over the past five years, Senate expenditures have been reduced by 7.2 per cent. During this same period, the actual expenditures of the House of Commons have increased by 7.4 per cent. There exists in favour of the Senate a difference of 14.6 per cent with regard to actual expenditures.

In terms of budget estimates, in the last five years the budget of the Senate has decreased by 9 per cent. Over the same period of time, the estimates of the House of Commons have decreased by only 5.3 per cent. Again, there is a difference in favour of the Senate in the amount of 3.7 per cent with respect to the budget estimates.

I believe the Senate has performed very well in demonstrating expenditure restraint. We must also remember that the base we start from is lower than that of the other place. We are still 20 per cent short in funding fully for senators' research and office expenses. We are concerned that this budget leaves us with limited flexibility to handle unexpected problems, and your committee will certainly be challenged in the year ahead.

I thank many of the senators and staff who worked in the preparation of these estimates and ask that you give favourable consideration to this report.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Honourable senators, is it your pleasure to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

FORTY-FIFTH REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the forty-fifth report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, presented in the Senate on February 1, 1996.

Hon. Colin Kenny: Honourable senators, I move the adoption of the report.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

FISHERIES

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ANNUAL REPORT OF DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES AND OCEANS ON THE ATLANTIC GROUND FISH FISHERY ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the second report of the Standing Senate Committee on Fisheries entitled: "The Atlantic Groundfish Fishery: Its Future", tabled in the Senate on December 6, 1995. — (Honourable Senator Rossiter)

Hon. Eileen Rossiter: Honourable senators, I move the adoption of this report.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, I should like to comment with respect to the other items on the Order Paper today. There have been discussions, of course, with the leadership on the other side with respect to this matter. There is only one item on the Order Paper which an individual senator wishes to address today. I refer to Item No. 75 standing in the name of Senator Cools.

We are mindful that the bells will begin to ring at 1:30 p.m. for the vote to be taken at 2:00 p.m. and that the proceedings will be interrupted at that time. I leave it to Senator Cools either to begin now and resume after the vote at 2:00 p.m., or to deal with her item after the vote at 2:00 p.m. That is entirely in the hands of Senator Cools, knowing that she would have to be interrupted at 1:30 p.m.

Hon. Anne C. Cools: Honourable senators, I should like to make my speech today. I am quite prepared to use the few minutes prior to the ringing of the bells for the vote on Bill C-110, if that is acceptable.

Senator Graham: Honourable senators, I suggest that all other Orders, Motions, Inquiries and Reports, stand with the exception of Item No. 75.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

JUSTICE

DAMAGE TO PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS—DEBATE SUSPENDED

Hon. Anne C. Cools rose pursuant to notice of December 12, 1995:

That she will call the attention of the Senate to the frequent reports in the national and international media, including varied allegations naming the former Prime Minister, the Rt. Honourable Brian Mulroney; the Minister of Justice, the Honourable Allan Rock; Justice lawyer Kimberly Prost; former Premier the Honourable Frank Moores; the Royal Canadian Mounted Police; Airbus Industrie SA; Georgio Pelossi; diplomats and others, being matters that have become an aggressive and shameful public spectacle; and to the handling of these matters; and to the erosion of parliamentary process, and to the damage caused to parliamentary government, to the Prime Minister's Office, to the principle of ministerial responsibility, to Parliament, and to senators, including herself, who voted on Bill C-129, the bill to privatize Air Canada, on August 4, 1988, in the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce; and to the belief that Parliament, in the interest of public confidence, should take cognizance of these matters and not leave them to conjecture, speculation and the media, but instead take these matters into Parliament's consideration.

She said: Honourable senators, in rising to speak to this inquiry my intention is to place into formal debate in the Senate the question of certain allegations by the Minister of Justice against former prime minister Brian Mulroney regarding alleged wrongdoing on his part in Air Canada's billion-dollar purchase of aircraft from Airbus Industrie of Europe. I shall trace the passage into law in 1988 of Bill C-129, which bill privatized Air Canada. I shall show Parliament's interests, rights and obligations in this alleged Airbus matter. Finally, I shall address Parliament's role in these allegations.

For the record, I should like to state that I am neither a defender nor accuser of Mr. Mulroney. I have no assumptions or prejudgments about his guilt. As a matter of fact, consonant with the common law principle and the rule of law, I assume that he is innocent. My position is that as a member of Parliament I simply need to know the grounds supporting the Minister of Justice's allegations, as accusations of such enormity are not to be undertaken casually.

Since November 1995, I have been disquieted that these Airbus allegations have become an aggressive and shameful public spectacle, a situation of unlimited speculation and unbridled conjecture. Further, no one in Parliament, save a few senators appointed by Mr. Mulroney, such as the courageous Senator LeBreton, dare breathe a word in Mr. Mulroney's defence, lest they, too, be savaged in this current atmosphere. The sound of Parliament's silence in this matter is deafening. This scandal of unprecedented proportions goes to the heart of ministerial responsibility and undermines ministerial confidence and responsible government. It compels Parliament's interposition to assure public confidence.

Canada is a parliamentary and responsible government. Parliament is the Supreme authority of Canada, legislatively, judicially and administratively. The doctrine of ministerial government states that ministers are responsible to Parliament and must maintain its confidence. All government departments and agencies, as well as tribunals and courts, operate under this notion of responsibility. Similarly, all office-holders, ministers, deputy ministers, judges and police chiefs operate under the same doctrine. A minister answers to Parliament for every department of Canadian life. Parliament has a duty to hold its ministers responsible, and is constituted to maintain the responsibility of the ministry. No minister may abdicate responsibility.

Honourable senators, I have never been a supporter of Brian Mulroney. I recall that I invoked considerable wrath from senators on both sides for my rather brutal remarks about him in this chamber on January 19, 1994 during the Throne Speech debate. Among other descriptions, I said that he was:

A sorcerer's apprentice...

and

Deception was their hallmark.

Many senators on both sides thought that I was hard on him; consequently, they were hard on me. However, when I spoke at that time, I had no thought that Mr. Mulroney was or could be involved in any crime. Today, as a senator, I firmly believe that the government has a duty to proceed fairly, judiciously, non-capriciously, and to rise above the turbulence and tyranny of passion.

On August 17, 1988, the Senate passed Bill C-129, to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act, and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public.

Honourable senators, I shall continue my speech after the vote on Bill C-110.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: I regret to interrupt the honourable senator; however, it is now 1:30.

Pursuant to the order of this house, I now order that the bells be rung for half an hour.

Debate suspended.

• (1400)

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE—
MOTION FOR ADOPTION NEGATIVED ON DIVISION

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Kinsella for the adoption of the Report of the Special Committee on Bill C-110, respecting constitutional amendments, with amendments.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it was moved by the Honourable Senator Kinsella, seconded by the Honourable senator Doyle, that this report be now adopted.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those honourable senators in favour of the motion please say "yea"?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those honourable senators opposed to the motion please say "nay"?

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the "nays" have it.

And two honourable senators having risen.

The Hon. the Speaker: Please call in the senators.

Motion negated on the following division:

ABSTENTIONS

YEAS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Adams	Keon
Andreychuk	Kinsella
Atkins	Lavoie-Roux
Beaudoin	Lynch-Staunton
Berntson	Meighen
Carney	Murray
Cohen	Nolin
Comeau	Oliver
DeWare	Phillips
Di Nino	Rivest
Doody	Roberge
Doyle	Robertson
Eyton	Rossiter
Forrestall	Spivak
Ghitter	St. Germain
Gustafson	Stratton
Kelleher	Tkachuk
Kelly	Watt—36.

NAYS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Anderson	Lewis
Austin	Losier-Cool
Bacon	MacEachen
Bonnell	Maheu
Bosa	Marchand
Bryden	Milne
Carstairs	Olson
Cools	Pearson
Corbin	Perrault
Davey	Petten
De Bané	Pitfield
Fairbairn	Poulin
Gauthier	Prud'homme
Gigantès	Riel
Grafstein	Rizzuto
Graham	Robichaud
Haidasz	Rompkey
Hays	Roux
Hébert	Stanbury
Hervieux-Payette	Stewart
Kenny	Stollery
Kirby	Thériault
Kolber	Thompson
Lawson	Wood—48.

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Nil

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 59(1)(b), I move that this bill be read the third time now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Graham, seconded by the Honourable Senator Thériault, that this bill be read the third time now.

It is your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

An Hon. Senator: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Would those honourable senators in favour of the motion please say “yea”?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Would those honourable senators opposed to the motion please say “nay”?

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the “yeas” have it.

An Hon. Senator: On division.

Bill read third time and passed, on division.

[Translation]

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker pro tempore informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

RIDEAU HALL

2 February 1996

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that The Right Honourable Antonio Lamer, Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 2nd day of February 1996, at 3:00 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to a Bill.

Yours sincerely,

Judith A. LaRocque
Secretary to the Governor General

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate
Ottawa

[English]

JUSTICE

DAMAGE TO PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS—
DEBATE ADJOURNED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Cools:

That she will call the attention of the Senate to the frequent reports in the national and international media, including varied allegations naming the former Prime Minister, the Rt. Honourable Brian Mulroney; the Minister of Justice, the Honourable Allan Rock; Justice lawyer Kimberly Prost; former Premier the Honourable Frank Moores; the Royal Canadian Mounted Police; Airbus Industrie SA; Georgio Pelossi; diplomats and others, being matters that have become an aggressive and shameful public spectacle; and to the handling of these matters; and to the erosion of parliamentary process, and to the damage caused to parliamentary government, to the Prime Minister's Office, to the principle of ministerial responsibility, to Parliament, and to senators, including herself, who voted on Bill C-129, the bill to privatize Air Canada, on August 4,

1988, in the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce; and to the belief that Parliament, in the interest of public confidence, should take cognizance of these matters and not leave them to conjecture, speculation and the media, but instead take these matters into Parliament's consideration.

Hon. Anne C. Cools: I thank honourable senators for their indulgence.

Honourable senators, I am pleased to resume my speech on this order on the Airbus allegations. I had been saying that Bill C-129, the Air Canada bill, passed in this chamber in August of 1988. On August 18, 1988, it received Royal Assent.

Bill C-129 was examined by the Senate Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, chaired by a Liberal senator, Senator Ian Sinclair. I was a member of that committee, and I voted to pass that bill unamended, both in committee and in this chamber. The Mulroney cabinet proposed that a sound reason for privatizing Air Canada was the airline's need for fleet replacement conjoined with its need for capital, and proposed that such capital be raised by selling equity in the airline. My Liberal side, then in opposition and the majority in the Senate, accepted these proposals. We passed Bill C-129 without amendment. Government Senator William Kelly, moving second reading of Bill C-129 on July 21, 1988, said:

... Air Canada requires capital: capital to modernize its fleet and equity capital to regear its leverage... Over the next five years the airline will require $2.5 billion or more for fleet replacement...

On August 4, 1988, Deputy Prime Minister Don Mazankowski told our Senate Banking Committee that:

As a corporation, Air Canada will have access to new, cheaper equity capital... For employees, it will afford the opportunity to purchase shares...

Honourable senators, in March 1985, three years prior to the passage of Bill C-129, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and Minister of Transport Don Mazankowski dismissed the board of directors of Air Canada and appointed a new board in its stead — that is, 13 new directors.

In this chamber on March 19, 1985, Senator Ian Sinclair questioned government leader Senator Duff Roblin on the government's extraordinary action:

My question has nothing to do with patronage; my question has to do with a proper conduct of business organizations.

Is it not good business practice to have some continuity in boards of directors?

Honourable senators, while voting on Bill C-129, it never entered my mind that there was a connection between these 1985 appointments and the 1988 passage of Air Canada legislation, as is now alleged.

On August 2, 1988, Pierre Jeannot, chief executive officer of Air Canada, told our Senate committee:

It seems particularly appropriate to mention briefly a question of fleet renewal, since we have just announced the purchase of 34 new Airbus A320 aircraft, which will eventually replace our Boeing 727 fleet.

Air Canada had announced the same a few days prior, on July 20, 1988.

Honourable senators, I never contemplated any connection between this aircraft purchase, passage of this bill, and wrongdoing on the part of the cabinet or the Prime Minister.

Parliament is a judicial body whose members are vested with legislative and judicial powers corporately and institutionally held, enabling them to fulfil the functions of representative and responsible government. The Parliament of Canada is the supreme authority of the land, the "Grand Inquest" of the nation, and the highest court in this land.

Honourable senators, the Fathers of Confederation constituted and composed the Senate very deliberately. These wise men said that this Senate would last as long as this country, Canada, would last. They constituted this Upper House to embody the federal principle of Canada. It is the house traditionally empowered to investigate misconduct of persons in high office.

The Senate must take this matter into its cognizance and exercise the full range of its inquisitorial, judicial, penal and legislative powers to examine, to judge, and finally to exonerate or prosecute Mr. Mulroney by order or statute.

This Airbus scandal originates in a Ministry of Justice dispatch to the Government of Switzerland, which was leaked. This government-to-government dispatch carried the full force and weight of the Government of Canada and the Minister of Justice. This extraordinary document was executed by Kimberley Prost, senior counsel to the International Assistance Group of the ministry. The Toronto Star, on November 19, 1995, quoted this dispatch which claimed that Mr. Mulroney

...was involved in a criminal conspiracy to accept payments for influencing Air Canada's decision to buy airplanes from Airbus.

and that the conspiracy

...defrauded the Canadian government in the amount of millions of dollars.

The Globe and Mail, on January 8, 1996, in an article by former minister of Justice John Crosbie, also quoted this dispatch as follows:

...the investigation is of special importance to the Canadian government, as it deals with criminal activities of a former prime minister.

Extraordinary! The underlying implications are that Mr. Mulroney corrupted parliamentary proceedings by persuading members, commoners and senators, in government and in opposition, to pass Bill C-129 so that he could derive pecuniary advantage and enrichment; that is, that he degraded, corrupted and perverted voting and proceedings in Parliament.

Ms Prost's words and actions, speaking as the Ministry of Justice, thus impeach a government, a cabinet, and a Parliament itself. She impeaches proceedings in Parliament and the passage of Bill C-129, in which I participated as a legislator, as a parliamentarian, and as a senator.

Ms Prost has initiated actions reflecting on the highest level of ministerial responsibility, risking contempt of Parliament, and seems not to comprehend the fact that the substance of her dispatch is the substance of fallen governments, ministries, and ministers. Conversely, Mr. Mulroney's counsel, Roger Tassé, former deputy minister of Justice, certainly comprehends these matters. Ms Prost has risked a high breach of her position and of Parliament.

The Minister of Justice is no ordinary minister, and the Ministry of Justice is no ordinary ministry. They possess a distinct judicial character. The Minister of Justice is the Attorney General, the chief law officer of the Crown, the chief legal adviser to the government, and the chief legal adviser to Her Majesty. The Attorney General, as an office and minister, is deemed to embody the principles of justice and is, by convention and tradition, expected to uphold the judicial character and pre-eminence of Parliament.

The ministry's actions have politicized the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, effecting a divide between its police work and its political interests. The RCMP has been compelled to engage in politics. It must now protect its own position, its own interests and credibility, by engaging in preservationist and defensive activity. To date, the RCMP has laid no charges against Mr. Mulroney. It may now be compelled to do so, with or without evidence, whether the charges may be founded or unfounded. That a police agency is in this position is a grave matter, and is of grievous consequence to the citizens of Canada, to Parliament, and to Her Majesty. That a police agency's actions in investigating and laying charges have become suspect is an intolerable state of affairs in a parliamentary government.

The politicization of the mounted police is revealed even in news reports. The Toronto Star of December 23, 1995, cites an anonymous RCMP source as saying:

We figure we must have hit a nerve there,

and:

We're covered on this... We did our job. Based on the information we had, we're pursuing it.

Honourable senators, what is covered? Who is covered? We should bring these anonymous sources to the Senate bar.

This matter of alleged misconduct of a former prime minister involves more issues than allegations of ordinary crime. The Airbus allegations and the handling thereof have been deeply political, but the political activity has not been by politicians or Members of Parliament. Had a crime been committed, the matter may now be so obscured and confounded as to be justice denied. Further, the ministry's actions are also politicizing the judiciary and the courts. This is revealed as the media engages the judiciary, and is made evident in press stories on the judiciary's rulings, bearing such titles as "Customized Justice for Mulroney," "Mulroney Granted Fast-track Justice in Airbus Libel Suit." The Gazette editorial, "Customized Justice for Mulroney," from December 14, 1995, stated:

By according special treatment, Justice Poitras has perhaps made Mr. Mulroney's lawsuit less costly for him.

The editorial continued:

...If Justice Poitras's ruling is not favoritism, it at least gives the impression of it.

• (1420)

Uncharacteristically and improperly, the judiciary is responding. About Mr. Justice Rochon, the judge assigned by Chief Justice Poitras to hear the Mulroney libel suit in its entirety, The Toronto Star, December 18, 1995, reports that he:

...promised in an interview last week that the case will proceed in a transparent manner and that the media will be able to stay on top of the proceedings as it winds its way to trial.

The Toronto Star quoted Justice Rochon saying:

...I will take the necessary steps to ensure that everyone will be able to keep track of the case, reporters and everyone else.

I suppose "everyone else" includes all of us senators.

The courts, like the RCMP, have been placed in a novel and unlikely position. It would appear that both these organs of state are forgetful of Parliament's role in parliamentary governance. Parliament should remind them.

This story has been a bonanza for the media. The shareholders of press and broadcasting conglomerates involved in the commerce of reporting news rejoice in this windfall. Their primary objective is profit; not justice and fair play. The market value of publicity to certain persons, such as Mr. Giorgio Pelossi, the author of these allegations, is profound. He is undoubtedly measuring his substantial benefits. News reports nevertheless admit that Mr. Pelossi's personal credibility is in serious question since he is facing several serious criminal charges in Europe.

The Department of Justice and the Government of Canada allege that former prime minister Mulroney and former Premier Frank Moores were involved in criminal activity. It is now very questionable that Mr. Mulroney may ever be charged with a criminal offence. The instrument of criminal prosecution in Canada is the Criminal Code. The relevant sections are in Part IV entitled "Offences Against Law and Justice." I would assume that the sections concerning influence peddling and breach of trust by a public officer would be the contemplated charges against Mr. Mulroney.

Even if charges were laid, a conviction by the courts would be unlikely. The courts and their proceedings are bound by the rules of evidence, the burden of proof, and by judicial prohibitions on politics and political activity. In addition, it is fundamental to a successful criminal prosecution that each and every element of the offence be proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

The consideration and adjudication of those discreet elements necessary to be proven so as to form a conviction are beyond the court's competence and jurisdiction. Votes and proceedings in Parliament, cabinet decisions and documents and prime ministerial appointments are not subject to the court's jurisdiction.

Mr. Mulroney's issues are different from Mr. Moores' because Mr. Mulroney was in office as Prime Minister at the time of the alleged offences. The Criminal Code has general application in Canada for all citizens. However, when office-holders commit offences while in high office of Parliament, the plenary importance of the office subjects them to additional laws, authorities and courts. An offending prime minister is also subject to the law of Parliament, the lex et consuetudo parliamenti, to the high court of Parliament and the pleasure of Her Majesty. The misconduct of a prime minister while in office is the just business of the high court of Parliament, the "Grand Inquest" of the nation. Such misconduct activates and engages the judicial pre-eminence of the high court and Parliament.

The allegations are that Mr. Mulroney used the high offices of Prime Minister, the cabinet, the House of Commons and the Senate to traffic in appointments, influence, offices, proceedings and votes in Parliament and legislation. They allege that Mr. Mulroney was unfaithful to his office and to his country.

Honourable senators, these issues, so deeply clouded in suspicion, have not been properly put before the Canadian public, and have not been put before the Senate at all. Corruption and breach of high political office for pecuniary enrichment are more than crime. Such breach is a malversation. A malversation is the highest offence of office and is defined as corrupt behaviour committed in the exercise of an office or commission for economic gain. It is a grievous misconduct. No police agency, no court of justice may process a prime minister's malversation without Parliament's cognizance and direction. The only tribunal that is competent, qualified or constitutionally able to investigate and judge this matter is the Parliament of Canada. Further, Parliament's examination into this matter would not be inhibited or obstructed by any libel suit proceeding in the courts.

Mr. Georgio Pelossi's and Justice lawyer Kimberley Prost's accusations against Mr. Mulroney accuse me and every other senator in this chamber. It is odious to me that as a senator I stand accused in this alleged Mulroney malversation by virtue of my voting on Bill C-129, the enabling legislation. It is my right as a member of Parliament to know the truth. I wish to exercise that right. No court in this land but this court, Parliament, can examine and adjudicate the questions of prime ministerial activities, ministerial appointments, cabinet activities, political relationships, voting and proceedings in Parliament and wrongdoing therein.

Honourable senators, I ask Parliament to take cognizance of this matter and to engage the full range of its inquisitorial, judicial and legislative powers. Parliament must vigorously repudiate these allegations as a wanton, reckless and malicious attack on former prime minister Mulroney or, in the alternative, Parliament must give them credence and pursue him to destruction by issuing articles of impeachment; but Parliament must act decisively.

On motion of Senator Berntson, debate adjourned.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Government Notices of Motions:

Hon. B. Alasdair Graham (Deputy Leader of the Government): Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 58(1)(h), I move:

That when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, February 6, 1996, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

[Translation]

ROYAL ASSENT

The Right Honourable Antonio Lamer, Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Deputy Speaker, the Right Honourable the Deputy Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bill:

An Act respecting constitutional amendments (Bill C-110, Chapter 1, 1996)

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Right Honourable the Deputy Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, February 6, 1996, at 2 p.m.

The Thirty-fifth Parliament was prorogued by Proclamation on Friday, February 2, 1996

ABBREVIATIONS

1r, 2r, 3r	=	first, second, third reading
amdt (s)	=	amendment (s)
com	=	committee
div	=	division
inq	=	inquiry
m	=	motion
neg	=	negatived
qu	=	question
(r)	=	response (to a question)
ref	=	referred
rep	=	report
r.a.	=	Royal Assent
st	=	statement

Acts passed during the Session

PUBLIC ACTS

Chapter

Bill No.

Assented to February 8, 1994

1	West Coast Ports Operations, 1994	C-10
---	---	------

Assented to March 24, 1994

2	Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment	C-3
3	Customs Tariff amendment	C-5
4	Borrowing Authority Act, 1994-95	C-14
5	Appropriation Act No. 3, 1993-94	C-19
6	Appropriation Act No. 1, 1994-95	C-20

Assented to May 12, 1994

7	Income Tax Amendments Revision	C-15
8	Income Tax amendment	C-9
9	Excise Tax amendment	C-13
10	Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment	C-6
11	Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment	C-4
12	Criminal Code and Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment	C-8
13	Department of National Revenue amendment	C-2
14	Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment	C-29
15	Railway Safety amendment	C-21
16	National Sports of Canada	C-212

Assented to June 15, 1994

17	Income Tax Conventions	S-2
18	Budget Implementation, 1994	C-17
19	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994	C-18
20	National Library amendment	C-26
21	Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment	C-27

Acts passed during the Session—Cont'd

PUBLIC ACTS—Cont'd

Assented to June 23, 1994

22	Migratory Birds Convention, 1994	C-23
23	Canada Wildlife amendment	C-24
24	Canada Business Corporations amendment	C-12
25	Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment	C-31
26	Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994	C-40
27	Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement	C-16
28	Canada Student Financial Assistance	C-28
29	Excise Tax, Excise, Income Tax amendment	C-32
30	Department of Labour amendment	C-30
31	Department of Citizenship and Immigration	C-35
32	Auditor General (reports) amendment	C-207
33	Appropriation No. 2, 1994-95	C-39

Assented to July 7, 1994

34	Yukon First Nations Land Claims Settlement	C-33
35	Yukon First Nations Self-Government	C-34

Assented to November 24, 1994

36	Canada Petroleum Resources amendment	C-25
37	Excise, Customs and Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment	C-11
38	Department of Agriculture amendment	C-49
39	Canadian Wheat Board amendment	C-50

Assented to December 15, 1994

40	Marine Transportation Security Act	C-38
41	Department of Natural Resources Act	C-48
42	Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land Act	C-36
43	Yukon Surface Rights Board Act	C-55
44	Criminal Code amendment (miscellaneous matters)	C-42
45	Canada Grain Act amendment	C-51
46	Canadian Environmental Assessment Act amendment	C-56
47	World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation Act	C-57
48	Appropriation Act No. 3, 1994-95	C-63

Assented to March 16, 1995

1	Department of Industry Act	C-46
2	West Coast Ports Operations Act, 1995	C-74

Assented to March 26, 1995

3	Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules amendment	C-59
4	Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement Act	C-60
5	Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade Act	C-47
6	Maintenance of Railway Operations Act, 1995	C-77
7	Unemployment Insurance amendment (jury service)	C-216

Assented to March 30, 1995

8	Borrowing Authority Act, 1995-96	C-73
9	Appropriation Act No. 4, 1994-95	C-79
10	Appropriation Act No. 1, 1995-96	C-80

Assented to June 15, 1995

11	Department of Canadian Heritage Act	C-53
12	Lobbyists Registration amendment	C-43
13	Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment	C-75
14	Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company amendment	C-81
15	Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment	C-44
16	Appropriation Act No. 2, 1995-96	C-97

Acts passed during the Session—Cont'd

PUBLIC ACTS—Cont'd

Assented to June 22, 1995

17	Budget Implementation Act, 1995	C-76
18	Veterans Review and Appeal Board Act	C-67
19	Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment	C-37
20	Alternative Fuels Act	S-7
21	Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules amendment	C-70
22	Criminal Code amendment (sentencing)	C-41

Assented to July 13, 1995

23	Canadian Dairy Commission amendment	C-86
24	CN Commercialization Act	C-89
25	Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation Act	C-87
26	Royal Canadian Mint amendment	C-82
27	Criminal Code, Young Offenders amendment (forensic DNA analysis)	C-104
28	Small Business Bank of Canada Act	C-91
29	Government Organization Act (Federal Agencies)	C-65
30	Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment	C-85
31	Canadian Wheat Board amendment	C-92
32	Criminal Code amendment (self-induced intoxication)	C-72
33	Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances Unemployment Insurance amendment	C-54

Assented to November 8, 1995

34	Canada-United States Tax Convention Act, 1984	S-9
35	Explosives amendment	C-71
36	Excise Tax, Excise amendment	C-90
37	Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995	C-105

Assented to December 5, 1995

38	Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax and Tax Court of Canada amendment	C-93
39	Firearms Act	C-68
40	Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties Act	C-61
41	Customs, Customs Tariff amendment	C-102

Assented to December 15, 1995

42	Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories and Transfer of Offenders amendment	C-45
43	Auditor General amendment	C-83
44	Employment Equity Act	C-64
45	British Columbia Treaty Commission Act	C-107
46	Excise Tax and Income Tax amendment	C-103
47	National Housing amendment	C-108
48	Small Business Loans amendment	C-99
49	Appropriation Act No. 3, 1995-96	C-116

Assented to February 2, 1996

1	Constitutional Amendments	C-110
---	---------------------------------	-------

PRIVATE ACTS

Chapter

Bill No.

Assented to June 15, 1994

49 Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations S-5

Assented to June 23, 1994

50 General Security Insurance Company of Canada S-3

Assented to December 15, 1995

50 Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District) Act S-12

Aboriginal peoples

- Co-management agreements in Saskatchewan, request for particulars, qu, 1706-07
- Plight of Lubicon Indians, intervention of World Council of Churches, st, 1888-89
- Rate of illiteracy among native youth, government position, qu, 2384-8
- Report of Senate Committee on plight of aboriginal veterans, request for response, qu, 2233
- Right to self-determination, government position, qu, 2384
- Scholarship for aboriginal veterans, request for response to report of Standing Senate Committee, qu, 2540

Aboriginal peoples, native self-government, inquiry, 689, 1018

Speaker: Senator
Twinn, Walter P., 689

Aboriginal Peoples, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to change date of presentation of final report, 688
- Authority to engage services, adopted, 1678
- Authority to examine and report upon the treatment of aboriginal veterans following World War I, World War II and the Korean War, 8-9, 37-39
 - Manitoba Justice Inquiry, 38, 39
 - Métis veterans, 38, 39
 - National Aboriginal Veterans Association, 39
 - Transfer of land ownership, 38, 39
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 779, 872, 1085, 2462
- Membership
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Reports
 - 1st, Treatment of aboriginal veterans following World War I, World War II and the Korean War, 626, adopted, 681
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement bill C-16, without amdt, 743
 - 3rd, Yukon First Nations Land Claims Settlement bill C-33, without amdt, 784
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 4th, Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, without amdt, 788
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 5th, Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36, without amdt, 1039
 - 6th, Treatment of aboriginal peoples, extension of final report date, 1082, adopted, 1104-05
 - 7th, Yukon Surface Rights Board bill C-55, without amdt but with an observation, 1093-96
 - 8th, Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60, without amdt, 1355
 - 9th, Treatment of aboriginal veterans, tabled, 1469, 1481-83, 1493-94, adopted, 1655-56
 - Grievances, 1494
 - Independent investigator, 1494
 - Living conditions of veterans, 1482, 1494
 - 9th, Treatment of aboriginal veterans—Cont'd
 - Paternalism, 1482, 1494
 - Recognition of contribution, 1494
 - Remembrance Day services, 1482, 1494
 - Scholarship fund, 1482, 1494
 - Speakers: Senators
 - Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1481-82, 1655-56
 - Perrault, Raymond J., 1482-83, 1493-94
 - 10th, British Columbia Treaty Commission bill C-107, without amdt, 2486

Aboriginal rights

- Study of low-level military flights over Labrador, denial of opportunity for anthropologist to give full testimony, st, 992-93

Aboriginal war veterans honoured, st, 1724-25

“Above the Law”

See Book entitled “Above the Law”

Adams, Hon. Willie

- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee, m to establish, 2548
- Firearms bill C-68, 1910-11, 1912
 - Registration, 1910
 - Storage, 1911
- Gun control legislation
 - Consequences for aboriginal communities, st, 2346
 - Presentation of petition, 2317
- Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement bill C-16, 676
- Tributes on 18th anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 1522

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

- Consideration of Speech from the Throne, 5-6; termination of debate on eighth sitting day, 8; 36-37
- Motion for an Address in reply, Hon. Philippe Deane Gigantès, 9-12; seconded Hon. Anne C. Cools, 12-15; adopted, on div, 259

Speakers: Senators

- Angus, W. David, 256-59
- Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 49, 55-56
- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 243, 259
- Bosa, Peter, 104-05
- Buchanan, John, 143-45, 146
- Corbin, Eymard G., 149
- De Bané, Pierre, 142-43
- DeWare, Mabel M., 191-93
- Fairbairn, Joyce, 30, 31-33, 34, 35-36
- Ghitter, Ron, 59, 81-84
- Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 56-59
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 115-17
- Grimard, Normand, 87-88, 89
- Hastings, Earl A., 54
- Kelly, William M., 49-52
- Kinsella, Noël A., 146-49
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 26-30
- Molgat, Gildas L., 243, 259
- Murray, Lowell, 188-91
- Oliver, Donald H., 105-07
- Olson, H.A., 52-55
- Perrault, Raymond J., 85-87
- Rivest, Jean-Claude, 139-42, 143
- St. Germain, Gerry, 120-23
- Stanbury, Richard J., 78-81
- Thériault, L. Norbert, 141, 142
- Tkachuk, David, 117-20

Adjournment, 2, 184, 214, 298, 301, 350, 353, 397, 421, 479, 501, 570, 619, 627, 728, 790, 836, 871, 951, 1109, 1177, 1182, 1210, 1223, 1236, 1250, 1297, 1339, 1446, 1450, 1493, 1500, 1547, 1597, 1649, 1705, 1727, 1739, 1800, 1982, 2037, 2068, 2099, 2109, 2132, 2152, 2208, 2264, 2348, 2362, 2382, 2399, 2458, 2461-62, 2549, 2584, 2638

Leave having been given to revert to Government Notices of Motion, 1177, 1178

Agriculture

- Canadian Wheat Board
 - Continuation of marketing monopoly, presentation of petitions, 1282, 1547-48
 - Granting of monopoly powers for the export marketing of all grains and oilseeds, presentation of petitions, 919, 1204-05

Agriculture—Cont'd

Canadian Wheat Board—Cont'd

- Proposed increase in initial price of grain, government position, qu, 2119
- Timing of examination by experts, government position, qu, 2011
- Crow rate, costs of transporting grain, government position, qu, 666, (r) 834-35
- Delay in grain shipment from prairies, government position, qu, 321, (r) 455-56
- Farm Safety Week, st, 1297
- Grain handling capacity of Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert, st, 378
- Grain transportation, possible sale of hopper cars, government position, qu, 2440
- Handling of grain on west coast, effect of failure to meet commitments, government position, qu, 454, (r) 655
- Imposition of U.S. import tax on Canadian sugar products, discussion with President during upcoming visit, qu, 1211-12
- Improvement in international grain market, request for analysis of situation, qu, 1223, (r) 1361
- Movement of grain on west coast, government position, qu, 422
- Potato blight in New Brunswick, compensation for damages sustained by growers, government position, qu, 1213, (r) 1303-04
- Reduction in grain transportation subsidies, assistance to farmers for increase in rail freight costs, government position, qu, 1238
- Reduction of transportation subsidies, effect on Manitoba economy, qu, 1238
- Reinstatement of Crow Rate subsidy, presentation of petition, 1282
- Strike by west coast longshoremen, delay in introducing back-to-work legislation, 47-48
- Threat to sugar industry under new GATT rules, government position, qu, 1110-11, (r) 1240-41
- Toronto, status of trade negotiations, government position, qu, 239
- Transportation of grain, shortage of hopper cars, government position, qu, 285
- Western grain marketing, possibility of national plebiscite, government position, qu, 2491-92, (r) 2610
- Western grain transportation, backhaul to Thunder Bay, government position, qu, 1041, (r) 1190

Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties

bill C-61. 1r, 2176; 2r, 2212-14; ref to com, 2214; rep without amdt, 2362; 3r, 2372; r.a., chap. 40, 1995, 2411

- Absolute liability, 2213
- Animal and plant health program, 2212
- Appeals, 2212
- Enforcement of penalties, 2213
- Food safety, 2212
- Pesticides, 2212
- Tribunal, 2213
- Speakers: Senators
 - Hays, Dan, 2212-13, 2214
 - Rossiter, Eileen, 2213-14

Agriculture and Forestry, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to continue its special study on farm safety, 166, 232
- Authority to continue its special study on farm safety and extend date of presentation of final report, 1164
- Authority to continue its special study on the future of agriculture in Canada, 1339
- Authority to engage services, 166, 234
- Authority to examine the future of agriculture in Canada, 549, adopted, 594-97
 - Agriculture and Agri-food, House of Commons Subcommittee, 595
 - Beef industry, 595

Agriculture and Forestry, Standing Senate Committee—Cont'd

Authority to examine—Cont'd

- Bilateral concerns, 595
- Cereals and oilseeds, 594
- GATT, 594
- GRIP, 594
- Mexico, 596
- NAFTA, 594
- Pork industry, 594
- Shared expenses with Commons committee, 596
- Speakers: Senators
 - Gustafson, Leonard J., 597
 - Hays, Dan, 594-97
 - Stewart, John B., 596
- Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 302
- Authority to permit coverage of proceedings by electronic media, 689, 739
- Authority to postpone date of final report, adopted, 1740-41
- Authority to study the present state and future of agriculture and agri-food, 2226, 2239
- Authority to table final report on farm safety and farm related health issues, 1838, adopted, 1975
- Membership
 - See* Journals of the Senate
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 92
 - See* Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Department of Agriculture amendment bill C-49, 937
 - 3rd, Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-50, 983
 - 4th, Interim, future of agriculture in Canada, tabled, 1108, 1143-48
 - Agri-food industry, 1144
 - Atlantic Canada freight rate subsidy, 1146
 - Budget restrictions, 1145
 - Carryover stocks, 1148
 - Committee budget, 1147
 - Domestic subsidy reduction, 1146
 - Environmental impact studies, 1148
 - Farm income safety net programs, 1144, 1147, 1148
 - Food standards, 1145
 - Integration of market information and market intelligence, 1146
 - Market globalization, 1145
 - National Farmers' Union, 1148
 - Processed foods, 1147
 - Research and development, 1144, 1145, 1147
 - Rural development, 1145
 - Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities (SARM), 1148
 - Subsidies, 1146
 - Speakers: Senators
 - Haidasz, Stanley, 1147
 - Hays, Dan, 1143-46, 1147
 - Lynch-Staunton, John, 1147
 - Robertson, Brenda M., 1146
 - Spivak, Mira, 1147
 - 5th, future of agriculture in Canada, power to travel, 1109; adopted, 1175
 - See* Journals of the Senate
 - 6th, Canada Grain amendment bill C-51, without amdt, 1162
 - 7th, Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment bill C-75, without amdt, 1739
 - 8th, Canadian Dairy Commission amendment bill C-86 without amdt, 1923
 - 9th, farm safety, tabled, 1977, 2092-95, debate concluded, 2372
 - Speaker: Senator
 - Hays, Dan, 2092-95
 - 10th, Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-92, without amdt, 1978

- Agriculture and Forestry, Standing Senate Committee—Cont'd
 11th, Agricultural trade, report on fact-finding missions to Washington and Winnipeg, 2095, 2125-28
 American soils conservation program, 2126
 Canadian Wheat Board, 2126, 2127, 2128
 Canadian Wheat Board Advisory Committee, 2127, 2128
 Canola, 2128
 Confirmation of tabling of report, 2067
 Dual marketing, 2127, 2128
Speakers: Senators
 Gustafson, Leonard J., 2128
 Hays, Dan, 2125-28
 12th, Agriculture and Agri-food Administrative Monetary Penalties bill C-61, without amdt, 2362
- Agriculture Canada, federal expenditure on research, tabled, 1192
- Agriculture Food Canada, tabled, 2083
- Agriculture, grain handling capacity of Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert, inquiry, 377, 409-11, 540-41
 Abnormal weather conditions, 410
 Advisory Committee to the Canadian Wheat Board, 409
 Canada Grains Council, 409
 Canadian export of grain to United States, 410
 Volume of grain "unloads", 410
 West Coast longshoremen's strike, 410
Speakers: Senators
 Olson, H.A., 377, 409-11, 540-41
 Fairbairn, Joyce, 541
 St. Germain, Gerry, 411
- Agriculture, response of Minister to reports of Standing Senate Committee, inquiry, 2362
- Aird, Q.C., the late Hon. John Black, tributes, 1596-97
- Allmand, P.C., the Hon. Warren W., felicitations on thirtieth anniversary as Member of Parliament, st, 2229
- Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1r, 1084; 2r, 1114-15; ref to com, 1115; rep without amdt, 1518-19; 3r, 1542; message from Commons that bill passed with 10 amdts, 1798; m for concurrence in Commons amdts, 1802, 1832-34, 1884; amdts ref to com, 1884-85; rep agreeing with amdts, 1889; r.a., chap. 20, 1995, 1919
 Alternative fuel vehicles, 1114, 1115
 Comparison to gasoline-powered vehicles, 1115
 Costs, 1114
 Environmental benefits, 1115
 "FBI" program, 1115
 Financial cost benefit, 1115
 Fuel neutral, 1114
 Government's fleet of vehicles, 1115
 Incentives, 1115
 Refuelling infrastructure, 1115
See Journals of the Senate
Speakers: Senators
 Carney, Pat, 1834
 Kenny, Colin, 1114-15, 1832-33, 1834
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 1833
 Nolin, Pierre Claude, 1115
- Amateurism in journalism in Canada, inquiry, 550, 643-46
Speakers: Senators
 Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 646
 Corbin, Eymard G., 550, 643-46
 Hébert, Jacques, 646
- Anderson, Hon. Doris M. (introduced in the Senate Oct.3/95), 2058-60
 Remembrance Day, st, 2228
 United Nations, Universal Declaration of Human Rights, st, 2435-36
- Andreychuk, Hon. A. Raynell
 Aboriginal peoples
 Plight of Lubicon Indians, intervention of World Council of Churches, st, 1888-89
 Report of Senate Committee on plight of aboriginal veterans, request for response, qu, 2233
 Scholarship for aboriginal veterans, request for response to report of Standing Senate Committee, qu, 2540
 Aboriginal Peoples Committee
 Authority to change date of presentation of final report, 688
 Authority to engage services, adopted, 1678
 Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 779, 872, 1085, 2462
 Reports
 1st, Treatment of aboriginal veterans following World War I, World War II and the Korean War, 626, adopted, 681
See Journals of the Senate
 2nd, Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement bill C-16, without amdt, 743
 3rd, Yukon First Nations Land Claims Settlement bill C-33, without amdt, 784
See Journals of the Senate
 4th, Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, without amdt, 788
See Journals of the Senate
 5th, Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36, without amdt, 1039
 6th, Treatment of aboriginal veterans, extension of final report date, 1082
 7th, Yukon Surface Rights Board bill C-55, without amdt but with an observation, 1093-94
 8th, Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60, without amdt, 1355
 9th, Treatment of aboriginal veterans, tabled, 1469, 1481-82, adopted, 1655-56
 Living conditions of veterans, 1482
 Paternalism, 1482
 Remembrance Day services, 1482
 Scholarship fund, 1482
 10th, British Columbia Treaty Commission bill C-107, without amdt, 2486
 Aboriginal war veterans honoured, st, 1724-25
 British Columbia Treaty Commission bill C-107, 2422-23
 First Nations Summit, 2422, 2423
 Treaty negotiation, 2422
 Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, youth criminality, congratulations on recent production, st, 2607-08
 Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, 1931-32
 Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 474, 475
 Environment, changes to weather reporting service adversely affecting rural and isolated areas, government position, qu, 1843, (r) 2557-58
 External relations, commitment of France to continuing nuclear testing, government position, qu, 1763, (r) 2048-49
 Gingell, Judy, congratulations on appointment as Commissioner of the Yukon, st, 1469
 Gun control legislation, consequences for aboriginal communities, st, 2346
 Human rights
 Commitment to intervention with transgressor countries, government position, qu, 1684, (r) 2113
 Compensation to Canadians for past injustices, qu, 1167, (r) 1342
 Conflicting statements by Foreign Affairs Minister, request for clarification, qu, 1681-82
 Further incarceration of Chinese dissident, government position, qu, 2504

Andreychuk, Hon. A. Raynell—Cont'd

- Human rights—Cont'd
 - Imposition of embargoes and sanctions against transgressor countries, government policy, qu, 2366
 - Manufacture and use of land mines, government policy, qu, 2319
 - Ukrainian-Canadian community, redress for past injustices, st, 1108
 - Vigilance towards situations developing in other countries, government position, qu, 2505
- Human Rights, establishment of standing committee, inquiry, 93, 404-06
 - Civic-minded human rights culture, 406
 - Environmental issues, 406
 - "Human rights and cultural relativism", 406
 - International declarations and covenants, 405
 - International human rights, 404, 405
 - Political and civil rights, 404
 - Socio-economic rights, 404
- International relations, human rights, government policy, qu, 606, (r) 834
- International Year of the Family, st, 378
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 806, 807
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amnds, 2328-31
 - Aboriginal peoples, 2328, 2329, 2330, 2331
 - Treaties, 2328, 2329
- Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 724
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1441, 1442
- National defence
 - Disbanding of Canadian Airborne Regiment, st, 1296-97
 - Inquiry into the activities of Canadian Airborne Regiment, government position, qu, 1357, (r) 1987
- Nordic Council's Parliamentary Conference on the Arctic, report of official parliamentary delegation tabled, 92
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 770-71
 - Access to courts, 771
 - Compensation, 770
 - Inquiry, 770
 - Property rights, 770
- Quebec, distinct society motion, legal opinion sought on interpretation of wording, government position, qu, 2491
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, response of government to Report of Special Joint Committee, 1464
- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1388, 1390, 1405, 1406, 1420, 1421
- United Nations
 - Fiftieth anniversary of founding, st, 1921
 - International Human Rights Day, st, 2434-35
 - Resolution to halt nuclear testing
 - Government objection to wording in text, request for particulars, qu, 2234
 - Withdrawal of co-sponsorship, government position, qu, 2208-09
- Veterans affairs, aboriginal veterans, request for action on report of Standing Senate Committee, government position, qu, 1728
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1328-29
- World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1172
- Young Men's Christian Association, one hundred and fiftieth anniversary, st, 598-99

Andreychuk, Hon. A. Raynell—Cont'd

- Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, 1344-47, 1861-66
 - Aboriginal youth, 1346
 - Accountability, 1862
 - Adult court, 1345, 1864
 - Age of reason, 1344, 1345
 - Child poverty, 1345
 - Crime crisis, 1862
 - Custodial sentences, 1346
 - Disclosure of information, 1345, 1347
 - Ethnic gangs, 1346
 - "Facts" about crime, 1862-63
 - Information sharing, 1347
 - Jasmin report, 1862, 1863, 1864
 - Murder, 1346
 - Non-custodial sentences, 1345
 - Rehabilitation, 1344, 1345, 1346
 - Violent offenses, 1345
 - Youth courts, 1345
 - Youth crime crisis, 1347
 - Youth justice system, role, 1863
 - Youth unemployment, 1345
- Yukon First Nations Land Claims Settlement bill C-33, 785, 786-87
 - Citizenship, 786
 - Kaska Nation, 787
 - Yukon Surface Rights bill, 787
- Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, 761, 788
 - Citizenship, 788

Angus, Hon. W. David

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 256-59
- Income Tax amendment bill C-9, 326-27, 328
- Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, appointment of Donald Johnston as Secretary-General, length of term, government position, qu, 996, (r) 1089
- Schizophrenia, st, 1544-45
- Transport, condition of St. Lawrence Seaway, government policy, qu, 97, (r) 166

Appendices

- Canada Post Corporation, lease of premises in Sydney, Nova Scotia, intervention of Minister of Public Works, text of letter, 2084
- Clinton, William J., President of the United States, address to both houses, 1271
- Transport, Pearson International Airport, nominees to Canadian Airport Authority, 1023

Appointees to Immigration and Refugee Board, tabled, 1305

Appropriation No. 3, 1993-94 bill C-19. 1r, 267, 268; 2r, 273-74; 3r, 287; r.a., chap. 5, 1994, 298

Increases and decreases, 274

Speaker: Senator

Molgat, Gildas L., 273-74, 287

Appropriation No. 1, 1994-95 bill C-20. 1r, 267, 268; 2r, 274; 3r, 287; r.a., chap. 6, 1994, 298

Speakers: Senators

Doody, C. William, 274

Molgat, Gildas L., 274, 287

Appropriation No. 2, 1994-95 bill C-39. 1r, 620; 2r, 633, 699, 739; 3r, 739; r.a., chap. 33, 1994, 773

Speakers: Senators

Doody, C. William, 633

Stanbury, Richard J., 633

- Appropriation No. 3, 1994-95 bill C-63. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1098-99; 3r, 1112; r.a., chap. 48, 1994, 1178
Speakers: Senators
 Doody, C. William, 1099
 Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1098-99, 1112
- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79. 1r, 1422; 2r, 1453; point of order, 1453-58; Speaker's ruling, 1475-76; 2r, 1477; 3r, 1492; r.a., chap. 9, 1995, 1498
 Museums Act and National Museums Act, 1477
Speakers: Senators
 Bolduc, Roch, 1457
 De Bané, Pierre, 1453, 1455-56
 Doody, C. William, 1456, 1457
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 1455
 MacEachen, Allan J., 1456, 1457
 Stewart, John B., 1455, 1456, 1457-58
 Tkachuk, David, 1453-55, 1456, 1458
- Appropriation No. 1, 1995-96 bill C-80. 1r, 1422; 2r, 1458, 1477-78; 3r, 1493; r.a., chap. 10, 1995, 1498
Speakers: Senators
 De Bané, Pierre, 1458
 Doody, C. William, 1458
- Appropriation No. 2 1995-96 bill C-97. 1r, 1727; 2r, 1751-52; 3r, 1763; r.a., chap. 16, 1995, 1794
 Budgetary expenditure, 1752
 Non-budgetary expenditure, 1752
 Program review, 1752
Speakers: Senators
 Doody, C. William, 1752
 Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1751-52
- Appropriation No. 3, 1995-96 bill C-116. 1r, 2462; 2r, 2469-70; 3r, 2497; r.a., chap. 49, 1995, 2547
 Canada Eldor Inc., 2469
 Departments operating budgets, 2469
 Western Grain Transition Payments Act, 2469
Speaker: Senator
 Olson, H.A., 2469-70
- Army Cadet League of Canada
 Myriam Bédard, recognition of involvement as army cadet, st, 182
- Art Bank
 See Canada Council
- ASEAN Inter-Parliamentary Organization
 Fourteenth General Assembly, report tabled, 42
- Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation
 Summit Conference held in Osaka, Japan, st, 2241
- Atkins, Hon. Norman K.
 Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, report of Professor Savoie, tabled, 852
 Foreign affairs
 Celebration of fiftieth anniversary of diplomatic relations between Canada and Cuba, st, 1335
 Sales abroad of CANDU reactors, request for status report on environmental and financial concerns, qu, 1777, (r) 2077-78
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2334-35, 2336
 Aboriginal peoples, 2334
 Cost, 2335
- Atkins, Hon. Norman K.—Cont'd
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report—Cont'd
 Museums, 2335
 Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 722
 Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 981-82
 National Defence
 Possibility of purchase of nuclear-powered vessels, government position, qu, 1341
 Purchase of Upholder Class submarines, cost to government, qu, 1340, (r) 1551
 National Forum on Health, request for information, qu, 848
 Tourism, effect of budget cuts, government position, qu, 284-85
 Transport
 Necessary repairs to Pearson International Airport, government position, qu, 187, 188, (r) 287
 Pearson International Airport
 Importance of passage of Bill C-22 on development, knowledge of Robert Nixon, government position, qu, 1451
 Influence of government actions on attracting future business, qu, 1451, (r) 1536
 Privatization of Canadian National, reopening of negotiations with Canadian Pacific, government position, qu, 1255, (r) 1344
- Atlantic Canada
 Dependence on Scotia Synfuels project, reinstatement of special investment tax credit, government position, qu, 186-87, 517, (r) 555
 Tourism, source of employment, government policy, st, 510
- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency
 Atlantic Canada regional venture capital fund, equity financing needs of small business, government position, qu, 1110
 Auditor General's report, efficacy of infrastructure job statistics, government position, qu, 2404-05
 Cornwallis Park Development Agency
 Allegations of mismanagement
 Findings of National Defence investigation, government position, qu, 2318
 Response of minister, qu, 2177
 Stoppage of funds, government position, qu, 2167
 Circumstances surrounding appointment of Board of Directors, government position, qu, 2168
 Inventory control and hiring procedures, request for particulars, qu, 2211
 Request for answer to order paper question on KPMG report, qu, 2209-10
 Request for investigation by Auditor General, government position, qu, 2177
 Support for investigation by Auditor General into allegations of mismanagement, government position, qu, 2371
 Cuts by Minister to National Defence Adjustment Fund, government position, qu, 1340, (r) 1744
 Future of agency
 Government position, qu, 238
 Objectives and scope of government review, 252, (r) 423
 Grants to projects in New Brunswick, government position, qu, 452, (r) 556
 Location and nature of management, government policy, qu, 323
 Method of awarding projects, government policy, qu, 286, (r) 424
 Report of Professor Savoie, tabled, 852
 Request for information on projects, qu, 1471-72, (r) 1745
 Substitution of loans for subsidies
 Application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, qu, 1110, (r) 1191
 Government position, qu, 1087, (r) 1190
- Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, appointment and competence of chairman, government position, qu, 250-51

Auditor General amendment bill C-83. 1r, 2371; 2r, 2405-06, 2421-22; ref to com, 2422; rep without amdt, 2461; 3r, 2493; r.a., chap. 43, 1995, 2546
Commissioner of Environment and Sustainable Development, 2405, 2421
Environment, 2421
Petitions from public, 2406
Sustainable government, 2421
Speakers: Senators
Berntson, Eric Arthur, 2421
Kenny, Colin, 2405-06, 2422
Spivak, Mira, 2421-22

Auditor General amendment bill C-207. 1r, 628; 2r, 662-64; ref to com, 664; rep without amdt, 727; 3r, 727; r.a., chap. 32, 1994, 773
Four reports: one annual, three others, 663
Speakers: Senators
Berntson, Eric Arthur, 664
Frith, Royce, 628, 662-63, 664
Jessiman, Duncan J., 663
MacDonald, Finlay, 663

Auditor General, dispute with departments over unreported liabilities, government policy, qu, 1728, (r) 2075

Austin, P.C., Hon. Jack

Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation, Summit Conference held in Osaka, Japan, st, 2241
Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1523-25
Dominion Bond Rating Service, 1523, 1524
Down-sizing, 1523
Subsidies, 1523
Tobin tax, 1525
Transfers to provinces, 1523
Two-year targets, 1525
U.S. economy, 1523
Christmas Greetings, st, 1158
Environment, Globe '94, environmental exposition, Vancouver, st, 236
Grey Cup, congratulations to the B.C. Lions on winning the Canadian professional football championship, st, 993
Human rights, Canada-China relations, government policy, st, 545-46
International trade, export statistics, st, 2538
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 495
Stanley Cup, best wishes to Vancouver Canucks in National Hockey League championship, st, 482
Trudeau, Right Honourable Pierre Elliott, tenth anniversary of resignation, st, 784
World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1058-63, 1074-75, 1164, 1170, 1175
Agriculture, 1059
Agricultural tariffs, 1060
Anti-dumping, 1060
Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC), 1062, 1063
Asia-Pacific trade, 1062
Chemicals, 1061
Communications and electronic equipment industries, 1061
Countervailing, 1061
Cultural industries, 1063
European Union and Japanese implementation bills, 1061
Financial and telecommunications services, 1061
Free trade, 1061, 1074
GATT, 1058, 1059, 1060, 1062
Global tariffs, 1058, 1060
Government procurement, 1061
Import quotas, 1059
Intellectual property, 1059, 1060, 1061

Austin, P.C., Hon. Jack—Cont'd

World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation—Cont'd
International environmental standards, 1063
International rule-making, 1059
International trade relations, 1059
Multilateralism, 1061
NAFTA, 1062
Pharmaceuticals, 1061
Ratification and implementation, 1061
Subsidies, 1059, 1061
Trade disputes, 1060
Trade in services, 1060
Trade policy issues, 1061
Trade policy review mechanism (TPRM), 1059
Trade remedy rules, 1060
Uruguay Round, 1058, 1059, 1061, 1062
World Trade Organization, 1059

Axworthy, P.C., Hon. Lloyd, Minister of Human Resources Development and Minister of Western Economic Diversification

West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 67, 68-70, 71, 72, 73, 74

Bacon, Hon. Lise (introduced in the Senate Oct.4/94), 838

Budget 1995, statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1348-50
Debt, 1348
Debt ratio, 1350
Deficit, 1348
Federal government cutbacks, 1349
Health care systems, 1349
Old age pensions, 1349
Program spending, 1350
Quebec, 1349
Social programs, 1349
Social transfers, 1349
Subsidies, 1348, 1349
Transfers to provinces, 1349
Transportation adjustment program, 1349
Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2575-77
Criminal Code (sentencing) amendment bill C-41, 1825-28
Conditional sentence, 1827
Fines, 1827
Hate-motivated crime, 1826
Principles of sentencing, 1825
Purpose of sentencing, 1825, 1826
Reparation, 1827
Restitution, 1827
Sexual orientation, 1826
Violence against women, 1825
Jalbert, the late René, tributes, 2553-54
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdots, 2320-22
Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 2321
Enforcement, 2321
Ownership, 2321
Registration, 2320, 2321
National Day of Remembrance
Anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st, 1056
Sixth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st, 2413
National Unity, aftermath of Quebec referendum, explanation of comments in press, st, 2173
Quebec, m to recognize as distinct society, 2527-28

Balfour, Hon. R. James

Canadian Wheat Board, presentation of petitions, 1182
Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories, Transfer of Offenders amendment bill C-45, 2119-20

Balfour, Hon. R. James—Cont'd

Justice

- Authority for statement on political non-involvement in police investigations, government position, qu, 2465, 2466
- Sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government
 - Knowledge of government ministers, request for particulars, qu, 2466
 - Stage of treaty with Switzerland at time of request, government position, qu, 2488, 2489, (r) 2610
- National defence, peacekeeping in Bosnia, ability of troops to withdraw from Visoko if recalled, government position, qu, 1839
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 729-32
 - Compensation, 730
 - Inquiry, 731
 - Negotiations leading to agreement, 729
 - Nixon Report, 729, 730

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to engage services, 1632-33, 1658
- Authority to examine regulations proposed to the Export Development Act, 8, 37
 - Authority to extend date of presentation of final report, 132, 176-77
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 688, 728, 790, 838, 2316, 2360
- Authority to permit electronic coverage of proceedings, 211
- Authority to study state of Canadian financial system, 132, 177
 - Authority to extend date of presentation of final report, 994, adopted, 1022
 - Authority to extend date of final report, 2316; withdrawn, 2360
 - Authority to extend date of presentation of final report, 2362, adopted, 2380
 - Authority to table interim report, 1890, adopted, 1975
- Membership
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 183
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Income Tax Conventions bill S-2, without amdt, 183
 - 3rd, regulations proposed to the Export Development Act, tabled, 183, adopted, 243-44
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 4th, Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5, 280
 - Speaker: Senator Kirby, Michael, 243-44
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 5th, Income Tax amendment bill C-9, without amdt, 332, 336
 - 6th, committee's work plan, tabled, 395-96
 - 7th, Excise Tax amendment bill C-13, 396
 - 8th, Income Tax Amendments Revision bill C-15, 397
 - 9th, Department of National Revenue amendment bill C-2, 435
 - 10th, Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-27, 627
 - 11th, Canada Business Corporations amendment bill C-12, without amdt, 686
 - 12th, Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11, without amdt, 897
 - 13th, study of state of Canadian financial system, tabled, 950-51, 955-56, 1003-10, 1046-50, 1348, 1543
 - Co-insurance, 1004, 1007, 1046, 1047, 1048, 1049
 - Collecting premiums, 1008
 - CompCorp, 1005
 - Consumer protection and consumer responsibility, 1003, 1046
 - Deductible system, 1004
 - Deposit insurance, 1003, 1004, 1008, 1046

Banking, Trade and Commerce—Cont'd

Reports—Cont'd

- Government support, 1008
- Life and health insurance industry, 1004, 1005, 1006
- "Life and Health Insurance Policyholder Protection Fund", 1005, 1007
- Loans to Third World countries, 1048
- Market discipline, 1047
- Policyholder protection fund, 1006
- Regulatory system, 1003, 1006, 1008, 1048, 1049, 1050
- Rehabilitation scheme, 1006, 1008
- Risk-based schemes, 1047
- Stacking, 1009, 1046
- Subsidiary trust, 1008
- Superintendent of Financial Institutions, 1006, 1048, 1049
- Speakers: Senators
 - Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1348
 - Di Nino, Consiglio, 956, 1008, 1009
 - Kirby, Michael, 950, 955-56, 1003-06, 1008-10
 - Sylvain, John, 1007-08
- 14th, Department of Industry bill C-46, without amdt, 1181
- 15th, Income Tax amendment bill C-59, without amdt, 1339
- 16th, Budget, study on financial system in Canada, 1450, adopted, 1495
 - See Journals of the Senate
- 17th, Canada-United States Tax Convention Act, 1984 bill S-9, without amdt, 1547
- 18th, Budget, study of state of Canadian financial system, 1774; adopted, 1973
 - See Journals of the Senate
- 19th, Income tax amendment bill C-70, without amdt, 1889
- 20th, Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91, without amdt, 1980
 - See Journals of the Senate
- 21st, 1992 Financial Institutions Legislation, confirmation of tabling of interim report and m for consideration, 2067
- 22nd, Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90, without amdt, 2207
- 23rd, Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995 bill C-105, without amdt, 2207
- 24th, Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93, without amdt, 2246
- 25th, Customs, Customs Tariff bill C-102, without amdt, 2370
- 26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, with one amdt, 2398, 2446-49; m in amdt, adopted, on div, 2449-50; rep (con't), 2450-52, 2480-83; rep neg on div, 2497-98
- 27th, Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99, without amdt, 2538

Barnhart, Esq., Gordon

- Appointment as honorary officer of the Senate, felicitations, 178-81

Beaudoin, Hon. Gérald-A.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 49, 55-56
- Amateurism in journalism in Canada, inquiry, 646
- Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, tributes on occasion of resignation, 742
- Bouchard, Hon. Lucien, best wishes for a speedy recovery, st, 1056
- Canada-France Inter-Parliamentary Association
 - Meeting held in Paris, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2110
 - Twenty-fifth Annual Meeting, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 880
- Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28, 707
 - Provincial opting-out clause, 707
- Canadian Unity, Special Senate Committee, m to establish, 2556-57
- Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 414
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 463
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2570-71

Beaudoin, Hon. Gérald-A.—Cont'd

- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 987
- Criminal Code amendment (self-induced intoxication) bill C-72, 1945
- David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1160
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, point of order, 1897, 1900; m instructing com to table final report, 2235-36
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, Special Joint Committee reports
 - 2nd, Power to hold occasional meetings in camera, 744
 - Final, entitled "Of Life and Death", 1753-54
- Firearms bill, letter inviting submissions to travelling panels of senators, st, 2206
- House of Commons, decision to cease publication of committee proceedings, impact on bilingualism, st, 1527
- Humphrey, the late John Peter, tribute, 1448
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 967-68
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs
 - Schedule of work of the committee
 - Position of chairman, 2364, 2365
 - Response of chairman, 2370
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Authority to engage services, 184-85, 211
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 353, 1740, 1796, 1958, 2006, 2007
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 92
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension 1994 bill C-18, 420-21, 439-40
 - Commissions, 440
 - Decennial census, 439
 - Proportional representation, 439
 - Representation by population, 440
 - Two-year suspension, 439
 - 3rd, Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8, without amdt, 451
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 4th, interim, General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 482, 517
 - 5th, General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 483
 - 6th, Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendments, tabled, 547
 - 7th, Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations incorporation bill S-5, 548, adopted, 588
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, with six amdt, 788, 789, 801-02
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 9th, Criminal Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-42, with six amdt, 1096-97
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 10th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, with seven amdt, 1725-26
 - 11th, Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, without amdt but with observations, 1798-800
 - 12th, Criminal Code amendment (sentencing) bill C-41, without amdt, 1923
 - 13th, Criminal Code amendment (self-induced intoxication) bill C-72, without amdt, 1979
 - 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 1979-80, 2020, 2022-23
 - 15th, Criminal Code, Young Offenders amendment (forensic DNA analysis), without amdt but with an observation, 1980
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68 with 14 amdt, 2243-46, 2252-53
 - Aboriginal peoples, 2252
 - Antique weapons, 2253
 - Draft regulations, tabling, 2253
 - Governor in Council, 2253

Beaudoin, Hon. Gérald-A.—Cont'd

- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee—Cont'd
 - Museums, 2253
 - "Opting in" formula, 2252
 - Prison terms, 2253
 - Registration, 2253
 - 17th, Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District) bill S-12, with 1 amdt, 2436; adopted, 2458
 - 18th, Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories amendment bill C-45, without amdt but with one observation, 2436-37
- Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John, election by secret ballot as Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, st, 40
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1441
- Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-40, 705
- National Unity, result of Quebec Referendum, st, 2148
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2039-40
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 830
 - Royal Recommendation, 830
- Pepin, P.C., the late Hon. Jean-Luc, tribute, 2065
- Prince Edward Island, fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 206-07
 - Bilateral amending formula, 206, 207
- Quebec, m for recognition as distinct society, 2455-56, 2528-29
 - Federal-provincial conference, 2455-56
 - Quebec veto, 2529
- Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement bill C-16, 676
 - Boards to regulate land and water use, 676
 - Entrenchment in Constitution, 676
 - Environmental Impact Review Board, 676
 - Hunting and fishing rights, 676
 - Ownership of land, 676
 - Resource royalties, 676
 - Surface Rights Board, 676
- Senate, impact of decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, inquiry, 1644-45, 1646, 1647
 - Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 1644, 1645
 - Committees as part of parliamentary system, 1645, 1646
 - Constitution, 1644, 1645
 - Language rights, 1644
 - Official Languages Act, 1644, 1645, 1647
 - Participation in joint committees, 1645
 - Supreme Court of Canada, 1644, 1645
 - Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1426
 - West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1332

Beaulieu, Hon. Mario (resigned June 22/94)

- National finance, the deficit, budgetary and political risks, effect on foreign investment, government position, qu, 322, 323
- Tributes on occasion of resignation, 740-42

Bélisle, Esq., Paul C.

- Clerk of the Senate appointment, felicitations, 178-81

Berger, His Excellency David

- Felicitations on his appointment as Ambassador to Israel, st, 1977
- Scrutiny on views prior to his appointment as Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus, government position, qu, 2010-11, (r) 2115

Berntson, Hon. Eric Arthur, Deputy Leader of the Opposition

- Aboriginal Peoples Committee
 - Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 872-73
- Report
 - 6th, Treatment of aboriginal peoples, extension of deadline, 1104
- Aboriginal Peoples, native self-government, inquiry, 1018
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 243, 259

Berntson, Hon. Eric Arthur—Cont'd

- Agriculture and Forestry Committee report
 - 9th, special study of farm safety, 2372
- Agriculture, Canadian Wheat Board, granting of monopoly powers for the export marketing of all grains and oilseeds, presentation of petition, 1204-05
- Alternative Fuels bill S-7, amds ref to com, 1884-85
- Answers to Order Paper Questions tabled, request for answers, 1601
- Appointees to Immigration and Refugee Board, tabled, 1305
- Auditor General amendment bill C-83, 2421
 - Environment, 2421
 - Sustainable government, 2421
- Auditor General amendment bill C-207, 664
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee reports
 - 13th, study of state of Canadian financial system, 1348
 - 26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, m in amdt, 2449
- Budget 1995, statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1463
- Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 632
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1807
- Budget, statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 244, 607
- Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91, 1944
- Business of the Senate, 483-84, 556, 651, 837, 1010, 1075, 1368, 1369, 1381, 1421, 1428, 1952, 1963
 - Adjournment, 103, 584-85, 680, 681, 687, 764, 765, 911, 1775, 2229
 - Order Paper questions, request for answers, qu, 1472-73
- Canada-United States Tax Convention, 1984 amendment bill S-9, 1460
- Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 662
- Canadian heritage, responsibilities in relation to Canadian veterans and war memorials, tabled, 1206
- Certified General Accountants' Association bill S-8, 1293
- Composition of National Defence Minister's Advisory Group on Defence Infrastructure, tabled, 1555
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee, m to establish, 2548
- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 988
- Department of Industry bill C-46, 1114
 - Annual report, 1114
- Department of Natural Resources bill C-48, 998-1001
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee reports
 - Authority to extend date of final rep re National Protected Areas Strategy, adopted, 2487
- Reports
 - 7th, National Protected Areas Strategy, adopted, 1050
 - 8th, National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to extend date of final report, adopted, 1050
- Euthanasia and assisted suicide, enforcement of current Criminal Code provisions, presentation of petition, 1205
- Facing the Challenge of Change: A Study of the Atlantic Economy, details of costs and authors of study, tabled, 1206
- Firearms bill C-68, 1761
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1601, 1619, 1670
- Fisheries Committee
 - Authority to examine annual report of Department of Fisheries and Oceans, 411
- Fisheries, species and configuration of fish exported to Japan, tabled, 1206
- Foreign Affairs Committee, authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 1085, 1854
- Gatineau, donations requested for victims of recent fire, st, 1499
- Government funding of Canadian Jewish Congress archives, tabled, 1475
- Gun control legislation, presentation of petition, 2316-17
- Infrastructure program, request of municipalities of Canada, 394

Berntson, Hon. Eric Arthur—Cont'd

- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee reports
 - 23rd, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, 1583
 - 27th to 39th reports, adopted, 1885
 - Senate budget 1994-95, 37
- Justice, sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government, numbers of RCMP investigations publicized, request for particulars, qu, 2250, (r) 2420-21
- Learning Disabilities Association, st, 1485
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2427, 2428
 - Notice of motion to instruct com to table final rep, point of order, Speaker's ruling, 2389, 2393, 2394
- Reports
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 813, 816
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2292, 2299, 2334
- Lobbyists Registration bill, ref to Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, adopted, 1677
- Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, 1940
 - Compensation, 1940
 - Double dipping, 1940
- Merchant Navy Veterans and Civilian War-related Benefits bill S-4, 606
- Ministry of Canadian Heritage, funding levels for national sports organization, tabled, 1170
- National Crime Prevention Council, details of operation and composition, tabled, 1229
- National defence
 - Annual maintenance costs for Sea King helicopter fleet, tabled, 1112
 - Details concerning status of airbus, tabled, 1637
 - Membership of Honours Policy Committee, tabled, 1652
- National election, Red Book commitment to appoint ethics commissioner, government position, 283
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 679
- Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60, 1256
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders Committee report
 - 2nd, deletion of Rule 26 from Rules of the Senate, 1010
- Railway Safety amendment bill C-21, 439
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee report, 1246, 1247
- Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, 1918
 - Expenses for businesses, 1918
 - Vending machines, 1918
- Second World War, information from Soviet archives on Canadian armed forces personnel missing in action at Torgau, tabled, 1112
- Senate
 - Absence of approval for various projects, inquiry, 1127, 1350
 - Amendments to Bill C-22, refusal by Minister to appear before Senate Committee, qu, 1299
 - Lauriault, Mr. Douglas, resignation as page, best wishes, 837
 - Tribute to departing page, 392
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee report
 - 11th, Employment equity bill C-64, m in amdt, ref back to com, 2385-86
- Solicitor General, cumulative total of firearms recovered by RCMP, tabled, 1206

Berntson, Hon. Eric Arthur—Cont'd

- Transport
 - Failure of minister to properly brief Prime Minister on reports respecting Pearson Airport Agreements, government position, qu, 1488
 - Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program, Nova Scotia, diversion of funds, request for examination by Auditor General of Canada, order withdrawn, 1736
 - Measure to terminate railway strike, m to debate ref to Committee of the Whole, 1373
 - Pearson Airport Agreements, extent of knowledge of Mr. Nixon at time of review, government position, qu, 1488
 - Pearson International Airport, transfer of administration to local airport authority, nature of legal impediment, qu, 1501
 - Report of the Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, inquiry, 2345
- Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-216, 1293
- Unveiling of Canadian War Memorial at Green Park, London, England, guest list, tabled, 1070
- Veterans affairs, Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Inquiry, 195
 - Motion to provide site, point of order, 433
- Veterans affairs, Royal Canadian Legion, inquiry, 1050
- Veterans Independence Program, eligibility of veterans residing abroad, tabled, 1206
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1318-19
 - Collective bargaining, 1318
 - Trade, 1319
- World War II, European theatre of operations, list of prisoners of war returned or repatriated to Canada, tabled, 1229
- Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, 758-59
 - B.C. Treaty Commission, 759
 - Gwich'in Comprehensive Land Claim Agreement, 759
 - Indian Act amended, 759
 - Native Agenda, 759
 - Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples, 759
 - Saskatchewan Indian Nations, 759
- Yukon Surface Rights Board bill C-55, 1043-44
 - Kaska nation land claim, 1043, 1044

Between the Lines, community literacy resource program, st, 1759Bills, Commons, (numerically)

- C-2, Department of National Revenue amendment
- C-3, Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment
- C-4, Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment
- C-5, Customs Tariff amendment
- C-6, Canada Oil and Gas Operation, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment
- C-7, Controlled Drugs and Substances
- C-8, Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment
- C-9, Income Tax amendment
- C-10, West Coast Ports Operations, 1994
- C-11, Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment
- C-12, Canada Business Corporations amendment
- C-13, Excise Tax amendment
- C-14, Borrowing Authority Act, 1994-95
- C-15, Income Tax Amendments Revision
- C-16, Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement*
- C-17, Budget Implementation, 1994
- C-18, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994
- C-19, Appropriation Act No. 3, 1993-94
- C-20, Appropriation Act No. 1, 1994-95
- C-21, Railway Safety amendment
- C-22, Pearson International Airport Agreements
- C-23, Migratory Birds Convention, 1994
- C-24, Canada Wildlife amendment

Bills, Commons, (numerically)—Cont'd

- C-25, Canada Petroleum Resources amendment
- C-26, National Library amendment
- C-27, Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporation, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment
- C-28, Canada Student Financial Assistance
- C-29, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment
- C-30, Department of Labour amendment
- C-31, Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment
- C-32, Excise Tax, Excise, Income Tax amendment
- C-33, Yukon First Nations Land Claims Settlement
- C-34, Yukon First Nations Self-Government
- C-35, Department of Citizenship and Immigration
- C-36, Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land Act
- C-37, Young Offenders and Criminal Code amendment
- C-38, Marine Transportation Security Act
- C-39, Appropriation No. 2, 1994-95
- C-40, Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994
- C-41, Criminal Code amendment (sentencing)
- C-42, Criminal Code amendment (miscellaneous matters)
- C-43, Lobbyists Registration amendment
- C-44, Immigration, Citizenship amendment
- C-45, Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories, Transfer of Offenders amendment
- C-46, Department of Industry Act
- C-47, Department of External Affairs amendment
- C-48, Department of Natural Resources Act
- C-49, Department of Agriculture amendment
- C-50, Canadian Wheat Board amendment
- C-51, Canada Grain amendment
- C-53, Department of Canadian Heritage Act
- C-54, Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment
- C-55, Yukon Surface Rights Board Act
- C-56, Canadian Environmental Assessment amendment
- C-57, World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation Act
- C-59, Income Tax amendment
- C-60, Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement Act
- C-61, Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties
- C-63, Appropriation No. 3, 1994-95
- C-64, Employment equity
- C-65, Government Organization Act (Federal Agencies)
- C-67, Veterans Review and Appeal Board Act
- C-68, Firearms Act
- C-69, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, 1995
- C-70, Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules amendment
- C-71, Explosives amendment
- C-72, Criminal Code amendment (self-induced intoxication)
- C-73, Borrowing Authority Act, 1995-96
- C-74, West Coast Ports Operations Act, 1995
- C-75, Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment
- C-76, Budget Implementation Act, 1995
- C-77, Maintenance of Railway Operations Act, 1995
- C-79, Appropriation Act No. 4, 1994-95
- C-80, Appropriation Act No. 1, 1995-96
- C-81, Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company Act
- C-82, Royal Canadian Mint amendment
- C-83, Auditor General amendment
- C-85, Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment
- C-86, Canadian Dairy Commission amendment
- C-87, Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation Act
- C-89, CN Commercialization Act
- C-90, Excise Tax, Excise amendment
- C-91, Small Business Bank of Canada Act
- C-92, Canadian Wheat Board amendment
- C-93, Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment

Bills, Commons, (numerically)—Cont'd

- C-97, Appropriation Act No. 2, 1995-96
- C-102, Customs, Customs Tariff amendment
- C-103, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment
- C-104, Criminal Code, Young Offenders amendment (forensic DNA analysis)
- C-105, Income Tax Conventions Implementation 1995
- C-107, British Columbia Treaty Commission Act
- C-108, National Housing amendment
- C-110, Constitutional amendments
- C-116, Appropriation Act No. 3, 1995-96
- C-207, Auditor General (reports) amendment
- C-212, National Sports of Canada Act
- C-216, Unemployment Insurance amendment (jury service)

Bills, Senate, (numerically)

- S-1, Railways (pro forma)
- S-2, Income Tax Conventions
- S-3, General Security Insurance Company of Canada
- S-4, Merchant navy veteran and civilian war-related benefits
- S-5, Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations
- S-6, Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication)
- S-7, Alternative fuels for internal combustion engines
- S-8, Certified General Accountants' Association of Canada
- S-9, Canada-United States Tax Convention Act, 1984 amendment
- S-10, First Nations Government Act
- S-11, Karla Homolka
- S-12, Evangelical Missionary Church
- S-13, Criminal Code amendment (abuse of process)
- S-14, Tobacco Product Restrictions Act
- S-15, Criminal Code amendment (plea bargaining)

Bills, Commons

- Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties bill C-61. 1r, 2176; 2r, 2212-14; ref to com, 2214; rep without amdt, 2362; 3r, 2372; r.a., chap.40, 1995, 2411
- Appropriation No. 3, 1993-94 bill C-19. 1r, 267, 268; 2r, 273-74; 3r, 287; r.a., chap. 5, 1994, 298
- Appropriation No. 1, 1994-95 bill C-20. 1r, 267, 268; 2r, 274; 3r, 287; r.a., chap. 6, 1994, 298
- Appropriation No. 2, 1994-95 bill C-39. 1r, 620; 2r, 633, 699, 739; 3r, 739; r.a., chap. 33, 1994, 773
- Appropriation No. 3, 1994-95 bill C-63. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1098-99; 3r, 1112; r.a., chap. 48, 1994, 1178
- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79. 1r, 1422; 2r, 1453; point of order, 1453-58; Speaker's ruling, 1475-76; 2r, 1477; 3r, 1492; r.a., chap. 9, 1995, 1498
- Appropriation No. 1, 1995-96 bill C-80. 1r, 1422; 2r, 1458, 1477-78; 3r, 1493; r.a., chap. 10, 1995, 1498
- Appropriation No. 2 1995-96 bill C-97. 1r, 1727; 2r, 1751-52; 3r, 1763; r.a., chap. 16, 1995, 1794
- Appropriation No. 3, 1995-96 bill C-116. 1r, 2462; 2r, 2469-70; 3r, 2497; r.a., chap. 49, 1995, 2547
- Auditor General amendment bill C-207. 1r, 628; 2r, 662-64; ref to com, 664; rep without amdt, 727; 3r, 727; r.a., chap. 32, 1994, 773
- Auditor General amendment bill C-83. 1r, 2371; 2r, 2405-06, 2421-22; ref to com, 2422; rep without amdt, 2461; 3r, 2493; r.a., chap. 43, 1995, 2546
- Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14. 1r, 282; 2r, 288-93; ref to com of the Whole, 293; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, Mr. David Walker, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance taking part in the debate, 293-97; rep without amdt, 297; 3r, 297; r.a., chap. 4, 1994, 298
- Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73. 1r, 1469; 2r, 1478-81; ref to com, 1481; rep without amdt, 1487; 3r, 1487; r.a., chap. 8, 1995, 1498
- British Columbia Treaty Commission bill C-107. 1r, 2371; 2r, 2406-07, 2422-23; ref to com, 2423; rep without amdt, 2486; 3r, 2508; r.a., chap. 45, 1995, 2546

Bills, Commons—Cont'd

- Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17. 1r, 512; 2r, 530-37; 556-58; ref to com, 558; rep without amdt, 618; 3r, on div, 631-32; r.a., chap. 18, 1994, 664
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76. 1r, 1713; 2r, 1729-30, 1747-51, 1763-70; ref to com, 1770; rep without amdt, 1773; supplementary rep, 1796; 3r, 1806-11, 1852-53, 1854-56; r.a., chap. 17, 1995, 1919
- Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company amendment bill C-81. 1r, 1689; 2r, 1719; ref to com, 1719; rep without amdt, 1774; 3r, 1774-75; r.a., chap. 14, 1995, 1794
- Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91. 1r, 1917; 2r, 1942-44; ref to com, 1944; rep without amdt, 1980; 3r, 1995-96; r.a., chap. 28, 1995, 2056
- Canada Business Corporations amendment bill C-12. 1r, 640; 2r, 673-75; ref to com, 675; rep without amdt, 686; 3r, 728; r.a., chap. 24, 1994, 773
- Canada Grain amendment bill C-51. 1r, 1131; 2r, 1136-38; ref to com, 1138; rep without amdt, 1162; 3r, 1163; r.a., chap. 45, 1994, 1177
- Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6. 1r, 353; 2r, 380-81; ref to com, 381; rep without amdt, 420; 3r, 437-38; r.a., chap. 10, 1994, 478
- Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25. 1r, 846; 2r, 846-47; ref com, 848; rep without amdt, 871; 3r, 871; r.a., chap. 36, 1994, 989
- Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28. 1r, 687; 2r, 705-14; ref to com, 715; rep without amdt, 743; 3r, 743; r.a., chap. 28, 1994, 773
- Canada Wildlife amendment bill C-24. 1r, 628; 2r, 702-04; ref to com, 704; rep without amdt, 726; 3r, 727; r.a., chap. 23, 1994, 773
- Canadian Dairy Commission amendment bill C-86. 1r, 1824; 2r, 1882-83; ref to com, 1883; rep without amdt, 1923; 3r, 1923; r.a., chap. 23, 1995, 2056
- Canadian Environmental Assessment amendment bill C-56. 1r, 1131; 2r, 1138-41; ref to com, 1141; rep without amdt, 1163; 3r, 1163; r.a., chap. 46, 1994, 1177
- Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31. 1r, 649-50; 2r, 658-62; ref to com, 662; rep without amdt, 686; 3r, 729; r.a., chap. 25, 1994, 773
- CN Commercialization bill C-89. 1r, 1838; 2r, 1914-16; ref to com, 1916; rep without amdt, 1922; 3r, 1929-31; r.a., chap. 24, 1995, 2056
- Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-50. 1r, 912; 2r, 935-36; ref to com, 936; rep without amdt, 983; 3r, 987; r.a., chap. 39, 1994, 989
- Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-92. 1r, 1924; 2r, 1945-47; ref to com, 1947; rep without amdt, 1978; 3r, 2019; r.a., chap. 31, 1995, 2057
- Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87. 1r, 1801; 2r, 1873-78; ref to com, 1878; rep without amdt, 1923; 3r, 1931-32; r.a., chap. 25, 1995, 2056
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29. 1r, 451; 2r, 457-62; ref to committee of the Whole, 462; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, Hon. André Ouellet, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Hon. Brian Tobin, Minister of Fisheries and Oceans taking part in the debate, 462-75; rep without amdt, 476; 3r, 476; r.a., chap. 14, 1994, 478
- Constitutional amendments bill C-110. 1r, 2501; 2r, 2515-27, 2540-43, 2548; ref to com, 2548; rep, 2559-82; vote deferred, 2610-21, neg on div, 2633-34; 3r, 2634; r.a., chap.1, 1996, 2638
- Controlled Drugs and Substances bill C-7. 1r, 2153; 2r, 2184, 2218-19; ref to com, 2219

Bills, Commons—Cont'd

- Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories, Transfer of Offenders amendment bill C-45. 1r, 2068; 2r, 2100-03, 2119-21; ref to com, 2121; rep without amdt but with one observation, 2436-37; 3r, 2467; r.a., chap. 42, 1995, 2546
- Criminal Code amendment bill C-72. 1r, 1924; 2r, 1944-45; ref to com, 1945; rep without amdt, 1979; 3r, 2019; r.a., chap. 32, 1995, 2057
- Criminal Code amendment (sentencing) bill C-41. 1r, 1796; 2r, 1825-28, 1870-73; ref to com, 1873; rep without amdt, 1923; 3r, 1923; r.a., chap. 22, 1995, 2056
- Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8. 1r, 332; 2r, 360-65; ref to com, 365; rep without amdt, 451; 3r, 451; r.a., chap. 12, 1994, 478
- Criminal Code, Young Offenders amendment bill C-104. 1r, 1924; 2r, 1949-51; ref to com, 1951; rep without amdt but with an observation, 1980; 3r, 1995; r.a., chap. 27, 1995, 2056
- Criminal Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-42. 1r, 855-56; 2r, 883-87; ref to com, 887; rep with six amdts, 1096; rep adopted, 1096-97; 3r, 1097; concurrence by Commons in Senate amdts, 1131; r.a., chap. 44, 1994, 1177
- Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment bill C-4. 1r, 353; 2r, 381-82, 402-03; ref to com, 403; bill withdrawn from com and ref to another, m adopted, 407; rep without amdt, 450; 3r, 450-51; r.a., chap. 11, 1994, 478
- Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93. 1r, 2152; 2r, 2182-83; ref to com, 2183; rep without amdt, 2246; 3r, 2272; r.a., chap. 38, 1995, 2410
- Customs, Customs Tariff amendment bill C-102. 1r, 2153; 2r, 2180-82; ref to com, 2182; rep without amdt, 2370; 3r, 2385; r.a., chap. 41, 1995, 2411
- Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5. 1r, 184; 2r, 225-27; ref to com, 227; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 287-88; r.a., chap. 3, 1994, 298
- Department of Agriculture amendment bill C-49. 1r, 871; 2r, 904-06; ref to com, 906; rep without amdt, 937; 3r, 937; r.a., chap. 38, 1994, 989
- Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53. 1r, 1182; 2r, 1216-19, 1229-30; ref to com, 1230; rep without amdt but with observation, 1529; 3r, 1529; r.a., chap. 11, 1995, 1793
- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35. 1r, 761; 2r, 761-63; ref to Committee of the Whole, 763; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard Corbin in the Chair, Mr. Bob Blackburn, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Citizenship and Mr. D. Martin Low, Senior General Counsel, taking part in the debate, 765-68; rep without amdt, 769; 3r, 769; r.a., chap. 31, 1994, 773
- Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47. 1r, 1182; 2r, 1220-21, 1244; ref to com, 1244; rep without amdt, 1355-56; 3r, 1378-81; r.a., chap. 5, 1995, 1446
- Department of Industry bill C-46. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1112-14; ref to com, 1114; rep without amdt, 1181; 3r, 1206; r.a., chap. 1, 1995, 1334
- Department of Labour amendment bill C-30. 1r, 688; 2r, 715-17; ref to com, 717; rep without amdt, 757; 3r, 757; r.a., chap. 30, 1994, 773
- Department of National Revenue amendment bill C-2. 1r, 332; 2r, 383-85; ref to com, 385; rep without amdt, 435; 3r, 456; r.a., chap. 13, 1994, 478
- Department of Natural Resources bill C-48. 1r, 984; 2r, 997-1001; ref to com, 1001; rep without amdt, 1018; 3r, 1018; r.a., chap. 41, 1994, 1177

Bills, Commons—Cont'd

- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69. 1r, 1547; 2r, 1555-61; ref to com, 1561; rep with seven amdts, 1725-27, adopted on div, 1730-35; 3r, on div, 1735; message from Commons agreeing with one amdt and disagreeing with others, 1836; m to concur with message from Commons, 1837-38; vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1844-47; Speaker's ruling, 1847; vote deferred on m to adjourn debate (con't), 1847-52; point of order, 1896-903; Speaker's ruling, 1913; m to concur with message from Commons, Speaker's statement, 1913; m to adjourn debate, adopted on div, 1913-14; m to concur with message from Commons, 1964-65; m to refer question and message from Commons to com, adopted, 1965-69; rep from com, 1979-80, 2019-24; m in amdt, 2024-30; neg on div, 2030-31; m in amdt, neg on div, 2031-36; rep adopted, on div, 2036-37; m instructing com to table final report, 2166, 2185-89; allotment of time for debate, 2201; m instructing com to table final report (con't), 2235-36, 2262, 2272-78; vote deferred, 2278; neg on div, 2290-91; m instructing com to table final rep no later than December 13, 1995, 2399, 2423; point of order, 2423-28; Speaker's ruling, 2428-29; m (con't), 2429, 2444-46; vote deferred, 2470; m neg on div, 2483-84
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18. 1r, 302; 2r, 310-15, 325-26, 336-50; ref to com, 350; rep with amdts, 420-21, 439-41, 485-98, m in amdt, neg on div, 498-99, rep adopted on div, 499-500; 3r, on div, 500; message from Commons concurring in two amdts and amending one amdt, 619; concurrence in Commons amdt, 619, 633-39; r.a., chap. 19, 1994, 664
- Employment equity bill C-64. 1r, 2117; 2r, 2134-36, 2157-59; ref to com, 2159; rep with amdts, 2316; m in amdt, ref back to com, 2385, 2385-86; rep modified, rep without amdt, 2468-69; 3r, 2493-96; r.a., chap. 44, 1995, 2546
- Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11. 1r, 628; 2r, 657-58, 672-73; ref to com, 673; rep without amdt, 897; 3r, 915-16; r.a., chap. 37, 1994, 989
- Excise Tax amendment bill C-13. 1r, 332; 2r, 366-69; ref to com, 369; rep without amdt, 367, 396; 3r, 425; r.a., chap. 9, 1994, 478
- Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90. 1r, 2118; 2r, 2136-38; ref to com, 2138; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2234; r.a., chap. 36, 1995, 2240
- Excise Tax, Excise, Income Tax amendment bill C-32. 1r, 745; 2r, 745-48; ref to Committee of the Whole, 748; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard Corbin in the Chair, Hon. David Walker, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance taking part in the debate, 748-51; rep without amdt, 751; 3r, 751; r.a., chap. 29, 1994, 773
- Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103. 1r, 2176; 2r, 2214-18; ref to com, 2218; rep with one amdt, 2398, 2446-49; m in amdt, adopted, on div, 2449-50; rep (con't), 2450-52, 2480-83, neg on div, 2497-98; 3r, 2508-11; r.a., chap. 46, 1995, 2546
- Explosives amendment bill C-71. 1r, 2110; 2r, 2133, 2155-56; ref to com, 2156; rep without amdt, 2174; 3r, 2201; r.a., chap. 35, 1995, 2240
- Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment bill C-75. 1r, 1689; 2r, 1718-19; ref to com, 1719; rep without amdt, 1739; 3r, 1763; r.a., chap. 13, 1995, 1794
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment bill C-3. 1r, 184; 2r, 222-25; ref to com, 225; rep without amdt, 248; 3r, 267; r.a., chap. 2, 1994, 298

Bills, Commons—Cont'd

- Firearms bill C-68. 1r, 1760-61; 2r, 1811-24, 1904-12; ref to com, 1912; m to instruct committee to table final report, 2109, 2121-24; m in amdt (Lynch-Staunton) adopted, 2124-25; m, as amended, adopted, 2125; rep with 14 amdts, 2243-46, 2252-62, 2320-42; m in amdt (Sparrow), neg on div, 2343-44; m for adoption of rep, neg on div, 2344; 3r, on div, 2344-45; r.a., chap. 39, 1995, 2411
- Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65. 1r, 1924; 2r, 1947-48; ref to com, 1949; rep without amdt, 1977; 3r, 2011-13; r.a., chap. 29, 1995, 2057
- Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44. 1r, 1182; 2r, 1219-20, 1241-44; ref to com, 1244; rep without amdt, 1760; 3r, 1782-84; r.a., chap. 15, 1995, 1794
- Income Tax amendment bill C-9. 1r, 302; 2r, 315-16, 326-28; ref to com, 328; rep without amdt, 332, 336; 3r, 360; r.a., chap. 13, 1994, 478
- Income Tax amendment bill C-59. 1r, 1236; 2r, 1256-57, 1287-89; ref to com, 1289; rep without amdt, 1339; 3r, 1362; r.a., chap. 3, 1995, 1446
- Income Tax amendment bill C-70. 1r, 1801; 2r, 1878-81; ref to com, 1881; rep without amdt, 1889; 3r, 1889; r.a., chap. 21, 1995, 1919
- Income Tax Amendments Revision bill C-15. 1r, 332; 2r, 382-83; ref to com, 383; rep without amdt, 397; 3r, 425; r.a., chap. 7, 1994, 478
- Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995 bill C-105. 1r, 2152; 2r, 2178-79; ref to com, 2180; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2234; r.a., chap. 37, 1995, 2240
- Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-27. 1r, 511; 2r, 558-50; ref to com, 560; rep without amdt, 627; 3r, 655; r.a., chap. 21, 1994, 664
- Lobbyists Registration amendment bill C-43. 1r, 1598; 2r, 1637-39, 1652-55; ref to com, 1655; order rescinded and ref to National Finance, 1677; rep without amdt, 1727; 3r, 1747; r.a., chap. 12, 1995, 1793
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77. 1r, 1428; 2r, 1428-34; ref to Committee of the Whole, 1434; consideration in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Hon. Lucienne Robillard taking part in the debate, 1434-45; rep without amdt, 1445; 3r, 1445; r.a., chap. 6, 1995, 1446
- Marine Transportation Security bill C-38. 1r, 912; 2r, 920-23; ref to com, 923; rep without amdt, 984; 3r, 996-97; r.a., chap. 40, 1994, 1177
- Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85. 1r, 1913; 2r, 1938-42; ref to com, 1942; rep without amdt, 1978; 3r, 2013-18; point of order, 2018; 3r (con't), on div, 2018-19; r.a., chap. 30, 1995, 2057
- Migratory Birds Convention, 1994 bill C-23. 1r, 627; 2r, 699-702; ref to com, 702; rep without amdt, 726; 3r, 726; r.a., chap. 22, 1994, 773
- Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-40. 1r, 687; 2r, 704-05; 3r, 729; r.a., chap. 26, 1994, 773
- National Housing amendment bill C-108. 1r, 2501; 2r, 2513-15; ref to com, 1515; rep without amdt, 2527; 3r, 2527; r.a., chap. 47, 1995, 2546
- National Library amendment bill C-26. 1r, 511; 2r, 528-30; ref to com, 530; rep without amdt, 654; 3r, 654; r.a., chap. 20, 1994, 664
- National Sports of Canada bill C-212. 1r, 397; 2r, 425-27, 441; ref to Committee of the Whole next sitting, 441; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, 476; rep without amdt, 476; 3r, 476; r.a., chap. 16, 1994, 478

Bills, Commons—Cont'd

- Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54. 1r, 1890; 2r, 1934-38; ref to com, 1938; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1981; 3r, 2019; r.a., chap. 33, 1995, 2057
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22. 1r, 665; 2r, 677-79, 692-99, 729-34, 769-72, 773-79; ref to com, 779; rep with six amdts, 788-89, 800-10; m in amdt, 810-13; allotment of time for debate, 813-14; m in amdt neg, 814-15; rep adopted on div, 815-16; 3r, 816-30; m in amdt neg, 830-31; point of order, 831-32; 3r (con't), as amended, on div, 832-33; Message from Commons disagreeing with amdts, 845; m to concur with Message from Commons, 845, 857-63; m referring question and Message from Commons to com, adopted on div, 863-66; m instructing com to table final rep, 2399, 2429-32; debate concluded, 2470; m neg on div, 2484-85
- Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60. 1r, 1223; 2r, 1255-56; ref to com, 1256; rep without amdt, 1355; 3r, 1378; r.a., chap. 4, 1995, 1446
- Railway Safety amendment bill C-21. 1r, 421; 2r, 438-39, 457; ref to Committee of the Whole, 457; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, 475-76; rep without amdt, 476; 3r, 476; r.a., chap. 15, 1994, 478
- Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82. 1r, 1890; 2r, 1917-19, 1932-34; ref to com, 1934; rep without amdt, 1978; 3r, on div, 1993-95; r.a., chap. 26, 1995, 2056
- Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement bill C-16. 1r, 649; 2r, 676; ref to com, 676; rep without amdt, 743; 3r, 743; r.a., chap. 27, 1994, 773
- Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99. 1r, 2486; 2r, 2511-13; ref to com, 2513; rep without amdt, 2538; 3r, 2538-39; r.a., chap. 48, 1995, 2547
- Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36. 1r, 912; 2r, 940-44; ref to com, 944; rep without amdt, 1039; 3r, 1058; r.a., chap. 42, 1994, 1177
- Unemployment Insurance amendment (jury service) bill C-216. 1r, 1236; 2r, 1257, 1293; ref to com, 1293; rep without amdt, 1338; 3r, 1362; r.a., chap. 7, 1995, 1446
- Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67. 1r, 1649; 2r, 1663-69; ref to com, 1669; rep without amdt, 1798; 3r, 1856-59; r.a., chap. 18, 1995, 1919
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10. 1r, 64; 2r, 64-67; ref to Committee of the Whole, 67; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Hon. Lloyd Axworthy, Mr. Michael McDermott and Mr. Robert Cooke taking part in the debate, 67-75; rep without amdt, 75; 3r, 75; r.a., chap. 1, 1994, 76
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74. 1r, 1315; 2r, 1316-24; ref to Committee of the Whole, 1324; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. P. Derek Lewis in the Chair, Hon. Lucienne Robillard, Mr. Pierre Hamell and Mr. James Lahey taking part in the debate, 1324-33; rep without amdt, 1333; 3r, 1333; r.a., chap. 2, 1995, 1334
- World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57. 1r, 1038; 2r, 1058-63, 1070-75; ref to com, 1075; rep without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 1163-64; 3r, 1164, 1170-75; r.a., chap. 47, 1994, 1177
- Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37. 1r, 1281; 2r, 1289-91, 1344-47; ref to com, 1348; rep without amdt but with observations, 1798-800; 3r, 1859-70; r.a., chap. 19, 1995, 1919
- Yukon First Nations Land Claims Agreement bill C-33. 1r, 751; 2r, 751-56; ref to com, 757; rep without amdt, 784; 3r, 784-87; r.a., chap. 34, 1994, 837

Bills, Commons—Cont'd

- Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34. 1r, 757; 2r, 757-61; ref to com, 761; rep without amdt, 788; 3r, 788; r.a., chap. 35, 1994, 837
- Yukon Surface Rights Board bill C-55. 1r, 994; 2r, 1042-44; ref to com, 1044; rep without amdt but with an observation, 1093; 3r, 1093-96; r.a., chap. 43, 1994, 1177

Bills, Senate

- Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7. 1r, 1084; 2r, 1114-15; ref to com, 1115; rep without amdt, 1518-19; 3r, 1542; message from Commons that bill passed with ten amdts, 1798; m for concurrence in Commons amdts, 1802, 1832-34, 1884; amdts ref to com, 1884-85; rep agreeing with amdts, 1889; r.a., chap. 20, 1995, 1919
- Canada-United States Tax Convention amendment bill S-9. 1r, 1373; 2r, 1458-60; ref to com, 1460; rep without amdt, 1547; 3r, 1574; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 2133; r.a., chap. 34, 1995, 2240
- Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations incorporation bill S-5. 1r, 273; 2r, 403-04; ref to com, 404; rep without amdt, 548, adopted, 588; m in amdt, 606-07; 3r, 607; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 650; r.a., 664
- Certified General Accountants' Association bill S-8. 1r, 1210; 2r, 1258, 1293; ref to com, 1293
- Criminal Code amendment bill S-13. 1r, 2371; 2r, 2407-10
- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6. 1r, 919; 2r, 956-59, 975-76, 987-88; point of order, 988; 2r (con't), 1012-14, 1044-46; ref to com, 1046
- Criminal Code amendment (plea bargaining) bill S-15. 1r, 2487
- Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District) bill S-12. 1r, 2316; 2r, 2386; ref to com, 2386; rep with one amdt, 2436, adopted, 2458; 3r, 2458; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 2543; r.a., 2547
- First Nations Government bill S-10. 1r, 1487, 1601-02; m for 2r, 1618; m to defer adjourned to await ruling of Speaker, 1618-22; Speaker's ruling, 1669-70; 2r deferred, 1670
- General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3. 1r, 78; 2r, 123-24, 173; ref to com, 173; interim rep, 482-83; rep without amdt, 483; 3r, 517; interim rep adopted, 517; passed by Commons without amdt, 761; r.a., 773
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-2. 1r, 41; 2r, 98-100; ref to com, 100; rep without amdt, 183; 3r, 203; r.a., chap. 17, 1994, 664
- Karla Homolka bill S-11. 1r, 2110; point of order, 2139-43; Speaker's ruling, 2367-68; order discharged and bill withdrawn, 2368
- Merchant navy veteran and civilian war-related benefits amendment bill S-4. 1r, 92; 2r, 156-57, 173, 193, 243, 259-60, 606
- Tobacco Products Restrictions bill S-14. 1r, 2437; 2r, 2536-37, 2582-84; ref to com, 2584

Black History Month, st, 1179-80Blackburn, Mr. Bob, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Citizenship and Immigration

- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35, considered in Committee of the Whole, 765

Bolduc, Hon. Roch

- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1457
- Auditor General, dispute with departments over unreported liabilities, government policy, qu, 1728, (r) 2075
- Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, tributes on occasion of resignation, 741-42
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1368, 1463-64
- Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 535-37

Bolduc, Hon. Roch—Cont'd

- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1852-53
- Canada Social Transfer, 1853
- Labour costs, 1852
- Net effect, 1852
- Right to negotiation, 1852
- Social policy, 1853
- Statutory restrictions, 1853
- Transfers to provinces, 1853
- Voluntary early retirement scheme, 1852
- Budget, methods of deficit reduction, government position, qu, 1097
- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 266, 373-75
- Collège militaire royal de St-Jean, 374, 375
- Fiscal policy, 373
- Industrial strategy, 373
- Price stability, 373
- Regulatory policy, 373
- Trade policy, 373
- Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association, report of Canada delegation tabled, 397
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 1089-90, 1091, 1092
- Air force, 1090
- Defence budget, 1090, 1092
- Navy, 1090
- Reserves, 1090
- Customs, Customs Tariff amendment bill C-102, 2181-82
- Duty deferral programs, 2181
- Manufacturing inputs, 2181
- Travellers' exemptions, 2181
- Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47, 1378-79, 1380-81
- Spending estimates, 1379
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
- National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 388
- Fisheries and oceans, timeliness of annual departmental report, government policy, qu, 2366
- Human Resources Development
- Child care, federal offer of funding
- Fiscal inequality among provinces, qu, 2502
- Provincial cuts to programs, government position, qu, 2501
- Unemployment insurance reform, division of responsibility for job training, government position, qu, 2404
- Intergovernmental affairs, possibility of agreement on professional development, qu, 985
- International trade, agreement on participation of provinces, government position, qu, 1574
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, notice of motion to instruct com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, Speaker's ruling, 2393
- National defence, Royal Military College at St-Jean, decrease in recruitment, government position, qu, 1357
- National finance
- Debt and deficit management, evaluation of International Monetary Fund, government position, qu, 2465
- Report of Auditor General, long-term management of debt and deficit, government position, qu, 2265
- National Finance Committee report
- 6th, Estimates, 1994-95, 657, 735-36
- Collège militaire royal at St-Jean, 735-36
- National Housing amendment bill C-108, 2514-15
- Mortgage loan insurance, 2514
- Official languages, access of francophones to Internet network, qu, 1651
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 778
- Science, research and development, tax credits for research and development, qu, 994, (r) 1169
- Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, st, 1612

Bolduc, Hon. Roch—Cont'd

- World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1170-71
 - Subsidy, 1171
 - Tariff cuts, 1171
 - Uruguay Round, 1171

Bonnell, Hon. M. Lorne

- Atlantic Canada, tourism, source of employment, government policy, st. 510
- Bosa, Hon. Peter, tributes on receiving Spanish Order, 855
- Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 578-79
- Carter, the late Hon. Chesley William, tribute, 91
- David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1162
- Department of Labour amendment bill C-30, 715-17
 - Additional funding from province, 717
 - Adjustment payments, 716
 - Atlantic Groundfish Adjustment Program, 715
 - Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, 715
 - Eligibility for benefits, 716
 - Fish Plant Older Worker Adjustment Program, 715
 - Labour adjustment, 715
 - Northern Cod Adjustment Recovery Program, 715
 - Unemployment in Newfoundland and Labrador, 716
- Employment equity bill C-64, 2496
- Frith, Q.C., Hon. Royce, tribute on retirement as High Commissioner to London, st. 2608
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report 13th, Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1082
- Inter-Parliamentary Delegation to Australia, report tabled, 877
- Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 723-24
- Marshall, Hon. Jack
 - Tributes on papal citation of special recognition, 845
 - Tributes on retirement, 981
- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 893-94
- National Flag of Canada, thirtieth anniversary of designation as national emblem, st. 1180
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2042-43
- Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54, 1934-35
 - Client services, 1934
 - Guaranteed income supplements, 1935
 - Retirement income, 1935
 - Retroactive benefits, 1935
 - Spouses' allowance, 1935
 - Temporary benefits, 1935
- Prince Edward Island, tribute to Sir Andrew Macphail, document tabled, 917-18
- Railway Safety amendment bill C-21, 438-39
 - Enforcement, 438
 - Fencing, 438
 - Native people, 438
 - Penalty, 438
 - Prospectors, 438
 - Safety, 438
 - Trespassing, 438
- Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick George, tribute, 685
- Senate
 - Prince Edward Island; appointment of new senator, government position, qu. 1453
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 1339, 1957, 2265
 - Reports
 - 6th, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-216, 1338
 - 7th, Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53, without amdt but with observation, 1529
 - 8th, Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44, 1760
 - See Journals of the Senate

Bonnell, Hon. M. Lorne—Cont'd

- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee—Cont'd
 - 9th, Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67, without amdt, 1798
 - 10th, Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54, without amdt, but with recommendations, 1981
 - 11th, Employment equity bill C-64, with amnds, 2316
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 12th, Employment equity bill C-64, without amdt, 2468-69
 - 13th, National Defence, Special Commission on Restructuring of the Reserves, 2499
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Sylvain, Hon. John, tribute on resignation from Senate, 2608
- Transport and Communications Committee
 - Authority to engage services, 250, 274
 - Marine safety, study on mandate and staffing of lightstations, question for chairman, qu. 954, 955
- Report
 - 8th, Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company amendment bill C-81, 1774
- Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-216, 1362
- Victory in Europe, fiftieth anniversary celebration ceremonies in Netherlands, attendance by veterans, st. 1887-88

Book entitled "Above the Law", inquiry, 848, 1063-65

- Integrity, 1064
- Oath of secrecy, 1064
- Police and media, 1065
- RCMP, 1064, 1065
- Two-tiered justice system, 1064
- Speaker: Senator
 - Kelly, William M., 848, 1063-65

Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14. 1r, 282; 2r, 288-93; ref to com of the Whole, 293; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, Mr. David Walker, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance taking part in the debate, 293-97; rep without amdt, 297; 3r, 297; r.a., chap. 4, 1994, 298

- Balance, 289, 290, 291
- Calculation of charges, 288
- Deficit, 292
- Domestic debt program, 289, 291
- Expiration, 288
- Foreign exchange account earnings, 288
- Personal income tax, 289, 290
- Reductions, 289
- Relationship between borrowing authority and budget, 289
- Roll-over treasury bills, 288
- Tax base, 289, 290
- Tax increases, 292
- Speakers: Senators
 - Doody, C. William, 291, 292, 293, 295, 296, 297
 - Fairbairn, Joyce, 293
 - Frith, Royce, 288-91, 292, 293, 297
 - Lynch-Staunton, John, 290, 292-93, 294-95
 - Murray, Lowell, 297
 - and witness in Committee of the Whole
 - Walker, Mr. David, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance, 293-94, 295, 296-97

Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73. 1r, 1469; 2r, 1478-81; ref to com, 1481; rep without amdt, 1487; 3r, 1487; r.a., chap. 8, 1995, 1498

- Authority to cover borrowing, 1479
- Business subsidies, 1479
- Canada Savings Bonds, 1480
- Debt operations, 1479
- Debt-to-GDP ratio, 1479
- Exchange Fund Account, 1479, 1480

Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73—Cont'd

Foreign currency debt, 1480
Government spending, 1478
Non-lapsing amount, 1479
Personal income tax rates, 1479
Smaller public service, 1479
Technical provisions of bill, 1479
Transfers to provinces, 1479

Speakers: Senators

Doody, C. William, 1480-81
Graham, B. Alasdair, 1487
Hays, Dan, 1478-80

Bosa, Hon. Peter

Adams, Hon. Willie, tributes on 18th anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 1522

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 104-05

Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91, 1942-44, 1995

Bank loans, 1943

Community Business Initiatives, 1943

Crown corporation's mission, 1942

New name, 1944

Small business, 1942

Davey, Hon. Keith, tribute on twenty-eighth anniversary of appointment to Senate, st. 159

Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53, 1218

Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35, 761-63, 766, 767, 768, 769

Backlog, 762

Citizenship ceremonies, 762

Responsibilities of new department, 762

Employment equity bill C-64, 2495, 2496

Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee report 3rd, Budget, National Protected Areas Strategy study, 639

Ethics Counsellor

Existence of Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, qu. 2383

Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, relevance to Parliamentarians, qu. 2384

Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, Special Senate Committee Report 1st, Budget, 587

Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90, 2136-37

Air transportation tax, 2136

Gasoline, 2136

Seizure and notification, 2136

Tobacco products, 2136, 2137

Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 842

Government of Canada, human rights policies, inquiry, 790

Health, impact of changes to tobacco taxes, inquiry, 523-24, 525, 717, 782

Action Plan on Smuggling, 782

Anti-smoking campaign, 523, 524, 525, 782

Cigarette smuggling, 524

Enforcement, 523

Government Action Plan on Smuggling, 523, 524

Health care costs, 524

House of Commons Standing Committee on Health, inquiry, 524

Impact of tax roll-back on smuggling, 782

Plain packaging, 524

Tobacco Diversification Plan, 523

Tobacco manufacturers, 523

Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44, 1219-20, 1782, 1784

Citizenship, 1219

Criminals, 1219

"Danger to the public", 1784

Bosa, Hon. Peter—Cont'd

Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44—Cont'd

Fair access, 1219

Right of appeal, 1219, 1220

Rule of law, 1219

Serious crime, 1220

Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995 bill C-105, 2178-79, 2234

Bill initiated in Commons, 2179, 2234

Copyright royalties, 2178

Double taxation, 2178

Exemptions to interest, 2178

Withholding tax rate, 2178, 2179

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee Reports

7th, Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee budget, 588

8th, Transport and Communications Committee budget, 588

9th, Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee budget, 589

11th, Agriculture and Forestry Committee budget, 640

Inter-Parliamentary Union

Inter-Parliamentary Conference on North-South Dialogue for Global Prosperity, Ottawa, Canada, rep tabled, 8,

inquiry, 9, 62-63

90th Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Canberra, Australia, rep tabled, 8, inquiry, 9, 61-62

91st Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Paris, France, rep tabled, 421, inquiry, 421, 525-26

Canada and France, bilateral relations, 525

Bilateral trade, 525

Fishing quotas, 525

Human rights, 526

Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, 526

92nd Conference, Copenhagen, Denmark, rep tabled, 872, Inquiry, 873, 923-26

Cultural exchanges, 923

Gender neutral language, 924

Human rights abuses, 925

Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, 924

Twelve Plus Group, 925

University exchange programs, 924

Uruguay Round, 924

World Summit on Social Development, 924

93rd Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Madrid, Spain, rep tabled, 1615, inquiry 1615, 1656-58

Canada-Spain fishing, 1657

Human Rights of Parliamentarians, 1658

United Nations Security Council, 1658

94th Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Bucharest, Romania, rep tabled, 2230, inquiry, 2231, 2368-69

Special Session of Inter-Parliamentary Council on Fiftieth Anniversary of creation of United Nations, report of Canadian Group, rep tabled, 2068, inquiry, 2068, 2162-63

Security Council, 2162-63

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports

2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 498

8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 789

Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 722

Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-40, 729

South Africa, first democratic elections, inquiry, 640

Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36, 943

Transport and Communications Committee, authority to study telecommunications, 1526

Tributes on receiving Spanish Order, 855

United Nations, Permanent Secretariat on Biological Diversity to be located in Montreal, st. 2361-62

West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 73

Bosnia

- Ban on sale of armaments, government policy, qu, 333
- Canada's commitment to NATO air strikes, government position, 93-94
- Coherence of NATO strategy, government policy, qu, 111-12, (r) 287
- Conditions for continuation of peacekeeping mission, visit of UN Secretary-General, government position, qu, 1040, (r) 1341-42
- NATO air strikes on un-designated safe areas, government policy, qu, 333
- Release of detained peacekeepers, 1087
- United Nations
 - Future role for peacekeepers, st, 1036-37
 - Request for NATO air strikes, government position, qu, 303-04
- Use of air strikes, Canada's role, government position, qu, 94, 115
 - See also* United Nations

Bouchard, Hon. Lucien

- Best wishes for a speedy recovery, st, 1056
- Best wishes on recovery, st, 1054
- Media handling of news of illness of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, st, 1055

British Columbia, proposals on national unity issues, unfair treatment of province, st, 2396British Columbia Treaty Commission bill C-107. 1r, 2371; 2r, 2406-07, 2422-23; ref to com, 2423; rep without amdt, 2486; 3r, 2508; r.a., chap. 45, 1995, 2546

- Commissioners, 2407
- First Nations Summit, 2407, 2422, 2423
- Regional advisory committees, 2407
- Treaty negotiation, 2422
- Treaty Negotiation Advisory Committee, 2407

Speakers: Senators

- Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 2422-23
- Marchand, Len, 2406-07, 2423

Brockhouse, Dr. Bertram Neville, felicitations on receiving Nobel Prize for physics, st, 950Bryden, Hon. John G. (introduced in the Senate Nov.29/94), 991-92

- Income Tax amendment bill C-59, 1256-57
 - Age credit, 1257
 - Business meals, 1257
 - "Butterfly transactions", 1257
 - Capital gains, 1257
 - Charitable donations, 1257
 - Entertainment expenses, 1257
 - Life insurance, 1257
 - Mine reclamation expenses, 1257
 - Regional investment tax credits, 1257
 - RRSP-based Home Buyers' Plan, 1257
 - Small business deduction, 1257
 - Tax shelters, 1257
- New Brunswick, Liberal victory in provincial election, st, 2090
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee report, 2622, 2623, 2624, 2625-28
- Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, 1918
- Saskatchewan, congratulations to Liberal Party on becoming official opposition, st, 1889
- Transport
 - Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1389, 1399, 1400, 1403, 1404, 1413, 1414, 1415-16
 - Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1578-79
- Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-216, 1257
- Jury duty, 1257

Bryden, Hon. John G.—Cont'd

- Victory in Europe, fiftieth anniversary celebration ceremonies, presence of Prime Minister, st, 1630
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1322-23
 - Collective bargaining, 1322
 - Fine, 1322, 1323

Buchanan, P.C., Hon. John

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 143-45, 146
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 460
 - Flags of convenience, 460
 - Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization (NAFO), 460
- Miles, Johnny, Cape Breton marathoner, tributes on ninetieth birthday, st, 2131-32
- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 891
- Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60, 1256
 - Indian moneys, 1256
- Transport, Federal-provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program, Nova Scotia
 - Diversion of funds, request for examination by Auditor General of Canada, m, 1700-01
 - Fleur-de-lis Trail, 1700, 1701
 - Highway 104, 1700
 - Restoration of funding to designated project, request for update, qu, 1690, (r) 1991-92

Budget

- Action against high interest rates, government position, qu, 1086
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, justification of funding, government position, qu, 163
- Changes to rules governing RRSP contributions, position of government, 96
- Closure and future use of Downsview Military base, government position, qu, 238-39, (r) 324
 - See* appendix p. 331A
- Closure of Military College at St-Jean, related additional costs, qu, 623, (r) 670-71
- Effect of carbon tax on cost of agricultural production, 94
- Elderly benefits assessed by household income, government position, qu, 953
- Elimination of tax breaks for health and dental plans, government position, qu, 1110
- Extension of wage freeze for public servants, government position, qu, 132-33
- Grants to municipalities in lieu of taxes, government policy, qu, 216, (r) 310
- Impact of budget on Atlantic region, concept of fairness, government position, qu, 165
- International Space Station Program, status of Canada's commitment, government position, qu, 161-63, (r) 221-22
 - Request for clarification, qu, 236, (r) 1985-86
- Methods of deficit reduction, government position, qu, 1097
- Military and funding cut-backs, effect on employment, qu, 134-35
- New Brunswick, effect of changes to unemployment insurance, government position, qu, 188, (r) 308-09
- Private pension income, possible elimination of tax credit, consultation with senior citizens, qu, 1239
- Proposed closure of Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean
 - Request for clarification, qu, 334, (r) 668
 - Reversal of decision, government position, qu, 185, 217, 218-20, (r) 309, 668
- Proposed closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean
 - Request for update, qu, 622
 - Resumption of discussions, government position, qu, 1111
- Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, 398-99
 - Cancellation of decision, government position, qu, 305
 - Question of privilege, 227
 - Reversal of decision, government position, qu, 237-38
 - Statement, 247
- R & D cut-backs, effect on British Columbia, qu, 135

Budget—Cont'd

- Reaction of International Monetary Fund to government's proposal to reduce deficit, government response, qu. 953-54
- Reduction of federal debt and annual deficit, government policy, qu. 952-53
- Registered Retirement Savings Plans, government position on possible changes, qu. 994-95, (r) 1112
- Removal of tax credit, effect on seniors, qu. 136-37
- Request for date of presentation, qu. 1225
 - Government response, 1227
- Request for formal debate, government position, qu. 1227-28
- Review of goal for deficit reduction, government position, qu. 1085-86
- State of the economy, government position, qu. 1226
- Tax increases for wealthy Canadians, government position, qu. 1223-24
- Threshold for clawbacks, consultations with senior citizens, qu. 1238-39
- Unemployment insurance, change in duration of claims, government position, qu. 163-64

Budget 1995

- Cancellation of goods and services tax, government position, qu. 1251
- Closure of agricultural research stations, government position, qu. 1286-87
- Cuts to Canada Council and other arts organizations, st. 1280
- Defence Industry Productivity Program, government position, qu. 1373-74, (r) 1552
- Definition of tax loophole, qu. 1237
- Elimination of Atlantic freight rate subsidies, st. 1295
- Elimination of Crow Rate subsidy
 - Effect on grain shipping ports, government position, qu. 1284, (r) 1360-61
 - End of grain marketing monopoly of Canadian Wheat Board, government position, qu. 1285
 - Maintenance of grain economy in Manitoba, government position, qu. 1286, (r) 1616
 - Possibility of assistance from Western Economic Diversification, government position, qu. 1286, (r) 1617
- Elimination of Public Utilities Income Tax Transfer Act, effect on Province of Alberta, government position, qu. 1251-52
- Inequality in funding treatment of Atlantic agencies, qu. 1302-03, (r) 1744
- Precedence of budget statement of Finance Minister over Red Book, government position, qu. 1250
- Ratio of spending cuts to tax increases, government position, qu. 1251
- Reduction to international assistance envelope, government position, qu. 1250-51
- Reform of Old Age Security
 - Effect on elderly women of application of clawback to household income, qu. 1287
 - Effect on older married women of application of clawback to household income, qu. 1252-53
- Status of RRSP as tax loophole, government position, qu. 1237-38, (r) 1549-50

Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1237, 1261-70, 1291-93, 1305-12, 1348-50, 1362-68, 1462-64, 1503-07, 1523-25, 1608-11

- Agriculture, 1262, 1291-93, 1308
- Air Command, 1305
- Atlantic Canada, 1310, 1311
- Canada Health and Social Transfer, 1506
- Canada Jobs Strategy, 1262
- Canada Social Transfer, 1504
- Child abuse, 1306
- Child care, 1506
- Child Development Initiative funding, 1507

Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance—Cont'd

- Child poverty, 1506
- Children, 1505-07
- Competition with U.S., 1292
- Debt, 1348, 1608
- Debt ratio, 1350
- Defence, 1611
- Deficit, 1348, 1362, 1363, 1608
- Dominion Bond Rating Service, 1523, 1524
- Down-sizing, 1523
- Employment, 1308
- Fairness, 1305, 1308, 1310, 1608, 1610
- Family violence, 1306
- Farm subsidies, 1264
- Federal debt, 1263, 1264, 1267
- Federal employment, 1261
- Federal government cutbacks, 1349
- Federal-provincial fiscal relations, 1365
- Financial strategy, 1266
- Freight subsidies, 1310
- GST, 1363, 1368
- Government cuts, 1364, 1365
- Grain prices, 1291
- Health care system, 1349, 1608, 1610
- Interest rates, 1261
- Land prices, 1292
- Landowners, 1291
- Maritime Freight Rates Act, 1262
- Medical services, 1307
- Medicare, 1367
- National deficit-reduction strategy, 1309
- National Finance Committee, role of, 1268, 1269, 1270
- National standards, 1365, 1366, 1367, 1504, 1505
- Old age pensions, 1349
- Post-secondary education, 1504, 1505
- Program spending, 1350
- Quebec, 1349
- Research and development, 1292
- St. Lawrence Seaway, 1292
- Senate, role of, 1268
- Seven-to-one ratio, 1267, 1312
- Social policy, 1504
- Social reform, 1263
- Social transfers, 1349
- Subsidies, 1348, 1349, 1365, 1523
- Tax increases, 1365
- Tobin tax, 1525
- Transfer payments, 1307, 1310, 1349, 1363, 1523, 1608, 1610
- Transportation Adjustment Program, 1310, 1349
- Two-year targets, 1525
- UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, 1506, 1507
- Unemployment, 1363
- Unemployment Insurance, 1262, 1263
- U.S. economy, 1523
- Welfare, 1307
- Western Grain Transportation Agency, 1264, 1306

Speakers: Senators

- Austin, Jack, 1523-25
- Bacon, Lise, 1348-50
- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1463
- Bolduc, Roch, 1368, 1463-64
- Carstairs, Sharon, 1305-07
- Cohen, Erminie J., 1309-11
- Cools, Anne C., 1263
- Gustafson, Leonard J., 1267, 1291-93
- Keon, Wilbert J., 1266
- Kinsella, Noël A., 1366, 1367, 1368, 1503-05
- Kirby, Michael, 1364-66, 1367-68
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 1366-67, 1368
- Murray, Lowell, 1261-63, 1367, 1525
- Nolin, Pierre Claude, 1266

Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance—Cont'dSpeakers: Senators—Cont'd

Olson, H.A., 1261, 1263, 1264-66, 1267, 1268-69
 Pearson, Landon, 1505-07
 Prud'homme, Marcel, 1268, 1269-70
 Roberge, Fernand, 1362-64
 Spivak, Mira, 1237, 1261, 1307-09
 Stewart, John B., 1269
 Stratton, Terry, 1608-11
 Tkachuk, David, 1267, 1268, 1311-12

Budget Implementation bill, 1995

Federal-provincial negotiations to establish standards for health and social transfers, qu, 1635
 Proposed amendments to reflect national standards, request for particulars, qu, 1635-36, (r) 1745

Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17. 1r, 512; 2r, 530-37; 556-58; ref to com, 558; rep without amdt, 618; 3r, on div, 631-32; r.a., chap, 18, 1994, 664

Atlantic Canada, 533, 557
 Benefit entitlement schedule, 631
 Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 533, 556, 557, 631, 632
 Cap on CAP, 631
 Child care, 534
 Deficit, 531, 632
 Economic growth, 530, 531
 Entrance requirement, 631
 Established Programs Financing, 531
 Freight subsidies, 532, 533, 534, 631
 Job creation, 530, 531
 Labour adjustment, 531
 Reduction in transfers, 532
 Social security reform, 532
 Transfer payments, 534
 Unemployment insurance, 531, 534, 535, 557, 631
 Wage freeze, 532, 631
 WGTA payments, 632

Speakers: Senators

Bolduc, Roch, 535-37
 Cohen, Erminie J., 533-35
 Doody, C. William, 531, 532
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 531, 532, 533
 MacDonald, Finlay, 556
 Olson, H.A., 530-31, 532-33
 Phillips, Orville H., 532, 533, 556, 557-58

Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76. 1r, 1713; 2r, 1729-30, 1747-51, 1763-70; ref to com, 1770; rep without amdt, 1773; supplementary rep, 1796; 3r, 1806-11, 1852-53, 1854-56; r.a., chap, 17, 1995, 1919

Adult students, 1764
 Aging population, 1750
 Assistance to business, 1729
 Canada Assistance Plan, 1748
 Canada Health and Social Transfer, 1729, 1748, 1763, 1764, 1768, 1809, 1853
 Canada Scholarship Program, 1764, 1769
 Canadian federalism, 1766, 1767
 Constitutional right to life, 1751
 Downsizing, 1730
 Early departure incentive, 1730
 Established Programs Financing, 1748
 Federal employment, 1730
 Freight rates, 1729, 1765
 Freshwater research, 1854-55
 Funding for universities and colleges, 1764
 Grain transportation, 1765
 Health, 1729
 Health care funding, 1750, 1751
 Labour costs, 1852

Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76—Cont'd

Labour relations, 1808, 1809
 Medicare, 1750, 1751
 National standards, 1768
 Net effect, 1852
 Post-secondary education, 1729, 1763, 1764
 Prairie farm land, 1750, 1765
 Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Association, 1807
 Quebec, 1767
 Reform of Western Grain Transportation Act, 1729
 Research and development, 1768
 Right to negotiation, 1852
 Royal Canadian Legion, 1856
 Social policy, 1853
 Statutory restrictions, 1853
 Student debt load, 1764
 Subsidies, 1730
 Surplus employees, 1730
 Transfers to provinces, 1729, 1748, 1853
 Transportation costs, 1750
 Universal health care system, 1750, 1751, 1766
 Voluntary early retirement scheme, 1852
 Western grain transportation subsidy, 1729
 Workforce Adjustment Directive, 1808

Speakers: Senators

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1807
 Bolduc, Roch, 1852-53
 Cochrane, Ethel, 1763-65
 Corbin, Eymard G., 1729-30, 1770
 Graham, B. Alasdair, 1806
 Gustafson, Leonard J., 1765
 Keon, Wilbert J., 1750-51
 Kinsella, Noël A., 1767-69
 Murray, Lowell, 1770, 1807-10, 1811
 Olson, H.A., 1806, 1807
 Phillips, Orville H., 1855-56
 Rivest, Jean-Claude, 1765-67
 Robertson, Brenda M., 1809, 1810
 Spivak, Mira, 1747-50, 1854-55
 Thériault, L. Norbert, 1810, 1811

Budget Plan, program funding, tabled, 1170Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 132, 208-11, 229-32, 244-46, 260-66, 328-31, 369-75, 427-28, 537-40, 560-64, 589-94, 607

Acid rain, 590
 Agricultural subsidy reform, 591
 Air pollution, 590
 Atlantic Canada, 370, 371, 372, 373, 538, 592, 593
 Atlantic Canada Opportunity Agency, 370, 372
 Atlantic provinces, 260
 Canada Investment Fund, 330
 Child poverty, 563
 Child welfare, 561
 Collège militaire royal de St-Jean, 374, 375
 Conservation Reserve Program in U.S., 592
 Conversion subsidies, 592
 Debt, 539
 Debt service charges, 245
 Defence bases, closures, 371
 Deficit, 208, 209, 427
 Democracy, 262, 263, 264, 427
 Emissions credits, 591
 Empowerment of people, 231
 Energy and air pollution taxes, 590, 591
 Environmental taxes, 589, 590
 Federalism, 262
 Fiscal policy, 373
 Fishing industry, 370
 Foreign debt, 229

Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance—Cont'd

Forest die-back, 590
 Funding interest groups, 328
 GDP, 330
 GST, 210
 "Greening" a budget, 589, 592
 Harmonization, 210
 Helicopter program, 209, 210, 539
 Individuality, 264, 427
 Industrial strategy, 373
 Inflation rate, 427
 Infrastructure Program, 369
 Interest rates, 369, 428
 International competitiveness, 210
 International Year of the Family, 560
 Jobs, 231
 Leaded petrol taxes, 590
 Military bases, 539
 National debt, 562, 563
 National debt management plan, 539
 Nationalism, 261, 262, 264, 265
 "Open" and "closed" society, 263, 264
 Pearson International Airport, 210
 Price stability, 373
 Quebec nationalism, 264, 265
 Recession, 230
 Refund system, 591
 Regionalism, 427
 Regulatory policy, 373
 Research and development, 230, 231
 Roll-back in payroll taxes, 329
 Small business, 230, 369, 538
 Spending restraint, 209
 Subsidy programs for business, 330
 Sweden, 589
 Tax force, mandate, 589, 592
 Tax increase, 538
 Tourist industry, 370
 Trade policy, 373
 Underground economy, 210, 229
 Unemployment, 230, 370, 371
 Unemployment insurance, 229, 370, 371, 372
 Unemployment rate, 208, 209
 United Nations, 561
 Young people, 231, 232
 Youth unemployment, 561, 562
Speakers: Senators
 Berntson, Eric Arthur, 244
 Bolduc, Roch, 266, 373-75
 Frith, Royce, 210, 266
 Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 211
 Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 261-65, 266
 Graham, B. Alasdair, 229-32
 Kelly, William M., 328-31
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 246
 Murray, Lowell, 208-11, 245, 265
 Nolin, Pierre Claude, 560-64
 Olson, H.A., 244, 245-46
 Phillips, Orville H., 132, 369-70, 371
 Roberge, Fernand, 537-40
 Robertson, Brenda M., 371-73
 Simard, Jean-Maurice, 260-61
 Stratton, Terry, 427-28

Budgetary savings for regional development agencies, tabled, 2092

Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company amendment bill C-81. 1r, 1689; 2r, 1719; ref to com, 1719; rep without amdt, 1774; 3r, 1774-75; r.a., chap. 14, 1995, 1794

Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company—Cont'd

Borrowing power, 1719
 Gateways Project, 1719
 Peace Bridge, 1719
 Transfer of administrative responsibility, 1719
Speakers: Senators
 Kenny, Colin, 1719
 Oliver, Donald H., 1719

Bujold, Don J., National Secretary-Treasurer, Transportation Communications Union

Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1422-24, 1425-26, 1427

Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91. 1r, 1917; 2r, 1942-44; ref to com, 1944; rep without amdt, 1980; 3r, 1995-96; r.a., chap. 28, 1995, 2056

Bank loans, 1943
 Community Business Initiatives, 1943
 Crown corporation's mission, 1942
 New name, 1944
 Small businesses, 1942
See Journals of the Senate
Speakers: Senators
 Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1944
 Bosa, Peter, 1942-44, 1995
 Graham, B. Alasdair, 1980
 Sylvain, John, 1980, 1995-96

Business of the Senate, 41, 63-64, 78, 138-39, 202, 207-08, 239-40, 275, 281-82, 298, 37962, 478-79, 483-84, 510, 541, 556, 651-52, 739, 800, 836-37, 837, 844, 868, 877, 882, 935, 1010, 1075, 1081, 1150, 1177, 1270, 1294, 1368-69, 1369-70, 1381, 1421, 1428, 1476, 1595, 1672, 1673, 1723, 1772, 1919, 1951-53, 1962-63, 1969, 2037, 2065-66, 2129, 2177, 2312, 2345, 2432, 2444, 2458, 2483, 2498, 2537, 2546, 2549, 2559, 2599, 2605, 2632

Adjournment, 25, 75, 103-04, 173, 249-50, 511, 584-85, 679-81, 687, 763-65, 845, 866-67, 900-01, 911, 933, 984, 994, 1038, 1057, 1084, 1334, 1529, 1584, 1632, 1676-77, 1775-76, 1916, 1975, 2056, 2189-90, 2229-30, 2536

Motion stands, 2174-76

Authority for committees to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 183-84

Budgets of committees, 395

Complaint on translation of speech, 1856

Configuration of Order Paper, 2435

Delay in delivery of official documents, 2433

Inquiries Nos. 17 and 18 reinstated notwithstanding Rule 28(3), 912

Inquiries Nos. 30 and 31 reinstated notwithstanding Rule 28(3), 1204

Motions respecting Bills C-69 and C-22, votes deferred, 2446

On presentation of petitions, 689

Order Paper questions, request for answers, qu, 1472-73

Points of order, 2371-72

Proposal to establish committee to investigate orders of reference, government position, qu, 955

Proposed agenda, 9

Report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on firearms legislation, votes on amendments, request for advice on procedure, qu, 2269-70

Select committees authorized to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 203

Speaker's ruling, 932

Cabinet, Liberal election promises on reduction in size, government position, qu, 1707-08

Campbell, the late Hon. Douglas L., tribute, 1673

Camus, Albert, accepted pronunciation of family name, st, 651, 652-53, 853-55

Canada Assistance Plan

Removal of programs from block funding to provinces, government position, qu, 1805

Canada Assistance Plan and established programs financing, levels of entitlement and further details, tabled, 1843Canada Business Corporations amendment bill C-12, 1r, 640; 2r, 673-75; ref to com, 675; rep without amdt, 686; 3r, 728; r.a., chap. 24, 1994, 773

Audit of financial statements, 674
Dissolving a corporation, 674, 675
Electronic filing, 674
Elimination of public financial disclosure requirements, 674, 675
Exemption from filing documents, 674
Keeping official documents, 675
Parliamentary review, 674
Retention of accounting records and files, 674
Small and medium-sized businesses, 673

Speakers: Senators
Grimard, Normand, 675
Kirby, Michael, 673-75

Canada-China relations

Diplomatic representations to China on sixth anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, request for information, qu, 1691

Human rights and commercial relations, government policy, qu, 1691-92, (r) 2154-55

Human rights in China and Tibet, m, 1297-98, 1483-84, 1562-63, 1670-72, 1793

Speakers: Senators
Kinsella, Noël A., 1672
Murray, Lowell, 1672
Perrault, Raymond J., 1671-72

Protest over granting of visa to Taiwanese official, government position, qu, 1691, (r) 2047

Representations on human rights abuses, government position, qu, 238, (r) 455

Representations on human rights abuses in China and Tibet, presentation of petition, 880-81

Trade in goods manufactured in labour camps, government policy, qu, 2112-13, (r) 2558

Validity of statement on freedom of religion in Tibet, government position, qu, 1692, (r) 2153-54

Visit to Canada of Chinese Premier, raising of human rights issues, government position, qu, 2112

See also China-Canada relations

Canada CouncilClosure of Art Bank

Government position, qu, 1534, (r) 1600-01
Request for answer, 1589

Possibility of reversing decision, st, 1835

Prior consultations with minister, government position, qu, 1960-61

St, 1886

Future of Art Bank, st, 2315

Reduction of staff in Atlantic Region, effect on programs, government position, qu, 1635, (r) 1694-95

Royal Winnipeg Ballet, loss of student grants due to budget cuts, possibility of alternate funding, government position, qu, 1895, (r) 2049-50

Canada Council, closure of Art Bank, inquiry, 1761; revised, 1782, 1828-32, 1974-75

Arts Council, 1830
Mandate, 1829
Purchasing back art, 1832

Canada Council, closure of Art Bank—Cont'd

Speakers: Senators
Carney, Pat, 1832
Corbin, Eymard G., 1828-32
De Bané, Pierre, 1974-75

Canada Council, consultations on the future of the Council, inquiry, 1165, 1195-98, 1232-33

Arts and culture, 1195, 1196
Budget of Canada Council, 1198
Canada Council, 1197, 1198
Culture, 1196
Deficit, 1197
Private sector, 1197
Response to question, 1204
Self censorship, 1233
Spending cuts, 1198
Speakers: Senators
Kinsella, Noël A., 1198
Lynch-Staunton, John, 1233
Roux, Jean-Louis, 1165, 1195-98, 1204, 1233

Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association

Council of Europe Committee on Economic Affairs and Development, Paris and Strasbourg, France, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2265

Council of Europe Parliamentary Assembly, Strasbourg, France, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2265

Report of Canadian delegation tabled, 397

Canada-France Inter-Parliamentary Association

Meeting held in Paris, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2110
Twenty-fifth Annual Meeting, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 880

Canada Grain amendment bill C-51, 1r, 1131; 2r, 1136-38; ref to com, 1138; rep without amdt, 1162; 3r, 1163; r.a., chap. 45, 1994, 1177

Agri-industry, 1136
Canadian Grain Commission, 1136, 1137, 1138
Competitiveness, 1137
Drying of grain, 1137
Elevator tariffs, 1137
Farmers, 1137, 1138
Free trade, 1138
Grain quality, 1137
Process elevators, 1137
Protection for producers, 1137
Safeguards for taxpayers, 1137

Speakers: Senators
Carstairs, Sharon, 1136-38
Gustafson, Leonard J., 1138

Canada Health and Social Transfer, effect on spending of provincial governments, government position, qu, 1634-35Canada-Japan Inter-Parliamentary Group

Fifth Annual Meeting held in Vancouver, report of Canadian delegation tabled, 1011

Report of Second Annual Meeting of the Asia Pacific Parliamentary Forum tabled, 78

Report of Third Annual Meeting of Asia Pacific Parliamentary Forum tabled, 1182

Sixth Annual Meeting held in Tokyo and Osaka, Japan, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2110

Canada-Newfoundland Cooperation Agreement for Forestry Development, tabled, 188

Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6. 1r, 353; 2r, 380-81; ref to com, 381; rep without amdt, 420; 3r, 437-38; r.a., chap. 10, 1994, 478

Canada Oil and Gas Lands Administration, dissolution, 380
Consultations, 437
Environment, protection, 437
Federal authorities, restructuring, 437
Frontier oil and gas, 437
Offshore areas, 437
Pipelines, 380

Speakers: Senators
Ghitter, Ron, 380-81
Hays, Dan, 437-38
Kenny, Colin, 380

Canada 125, breakdown of distribution of medals, tabled, 852

Canada Pension Commission, exceptional incapacity allowance, tabled, 202

Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25. 1r, 846; 2r, 846-47; ref com, 848; rep without amdt, 871; 3r, 871; r.a., chap. 36, 1994, 989

Competitive bidding process, 847
Employment, 846, 847
Land claims, 846
Norman Wells, 846, 847
Royalties, 847

Speakers: Senators
Ghitter, Ron, 847
Kenny, Colin, 846-47
Lynch-Staunton, John, 846
Molgat, Gildas L., 845-46

Canada Post Corporation, review by Price Waterhouse of contracts in Sydney, Nova Scotia, request for particulars, tabled, 2493

Canada Post Corporation, tabled, 2177

Delay in delivery of mail, government position, qu, 2168
Extension of contract on leases, request for information on members of consortium, qu, 1983, 2010, (r) 2115
Lease of premises in Sydney, Nova Scotia, intervention of Minister of Public Works, qu, 1982-83, (r) 2083
Request for answer, 2010
See appendix p. 2084

Canada Remembers, st, 1570, 1614-15
Fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st, 576-83

Canada's Armed Forces, st, 1371

Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee

Authority to change date of presentation of final report, 728; message from Commons, 783
Message from Commons, 149; m to appoint adopted, 149-56
Report
1st, presented and adopted, 159-60
Report entitled "Security in a Changing World", tabled, 911, 937-40, 989-90, 1077-81, 1089-92, 1099-1104, 1116-24, 1141-43
Aerospace industry, 1101
Air force, 1090, 1103
Balance of power, 1078, 1101
Civilian employees, 1120
Cooperation, 1117
"Cornwallis concept", 1142
Cultural policy, 1117
Cuts to headquarters staff, 1120

Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee—Cont'd

Report entitled "Security in a Changing World"—Cont'd
Defence budget, 1091, 1092, 1104, 1123
Defence conversion, 1118
Defence exports, 1101
Defence spending, 1103
Military equipment, 1090
Military weapons, 1118
Militia, 1122
NATO, 1078, 1100
National Defence White Paper, 1099, 1101, 1102, 1118, 1119, 1120, 1121, 1122, 1123
Navy, 1090
Non-governmental organizations, 1117
Peacekeeping, 1142
Process of joint committee, 1142, 1143
Reduction of forces, 1120
Reserves, 1080, 1090, 1121, 1122, 1123
Security threats, 1102
Ship-borne search and rescue helicopters, 1142-43
Submarines, 1121
Subsidizing regional development, 1104
Territorial sovereignty, 1103
Training, 1116, 1122
Voluntary community service, 1116
Weapons acquisition, 1117
Youth Training and Education Program, 1122
Speakers: Senators
Bolduc, Roch, 1089-90, 1091, 1092
De Bané, Pierre, 937-40
Forrestall, J. Michael, 940, 1142-43
Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 990, 1080, 1091, 1092, 1118, 1123, 1124
Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 1077-80, 1081
Kenny, Colin, 1080, 1090, 1091, 1102-04
Meighen, Michael A., 1118-23, 1124
Roux, Jean-Louis, 1116-18
Sylvain, John, 1099-1102

Canada's Foreign Policy

See Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy

Canada's presence and influence in Europe, st, 1485

Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28. 1r, 687; 2r, 705-14; ref to com, 715; rep without amdt, 743; 3r, 743; r.a., chap. 28, 1994, 773

Access to loans, 710, 711
Adult students, 714
Alternative payment formula, 706
Appeal mechanism, 709
Canada Student Loans Program, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713
Ceiling on costs, 709
Cost of attending university, 711
Designation of appropriate authority, 708
Disadvantaged students, 706
Eligibility requirements, 708, 709
Federal and provincial governments, 706, 714
Financial need, 709
Freeze on loan amounts, 706
Implementation date, 712
Income-based loan repayment, 706, 713
Increases in tuition fees, 713
Lending institutions, 713
Loan collection, 710
Loan guarantees, 706
Needs assessment method, 706
Powers of lending institutions, 710
Privacy, 709
Provincial opting-out clause, 706, 707

Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28—Cont'd

Repayment conditions, 706
 Repayment scheme, 710, 711
 Scholastic standards, 708
 Student debt, 711, 713, 714

Speakers: Senators

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 707
 Cochrane, Ethel, 712-14
 Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 705-07, 712
 Kinsella, Noël A., 707-12
 MacDonald, Finlay, 712
 Robertson, Brenda M., 712
 Stanbury, Richard J., 743

Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement, grains, breakdown in trade relations, government position, qu, 502-03, (r) 1088Canada-United States Interparliamentary Group

Thirty-fifth Annual Meeting held in Santa Fe, New Mexico, report of Canadian section tabled, 688
 Thirty-sixth Annual Meeting held in Huntsville, Ontario, report of Canadian section tabled, 1801, inquiry, 1802, 2051-52

Canada-United States relations, proposed imposition of U.S. border-crossing tax, government position, qu, 1183Canada-United States Tax Convention amendment bill S-9, 1r, 1373; 2r, 1458-60; ref to com, 1460; rep without amdt, 1547; 3r, 1574; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 2133; r.a., chap. 34, 1995, 2240

Arbitration mechanism, 1459
 Charitable organizations, 1459
 Collection of taxes, 1459
 Double taxation, 1458
 Social security payments, 1459
 U.S. estate taxes, 1459
 Withholding tax, 1458, 1459

Speakers: Senators

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1460
 Kirby, Michael, 1458-60

Canada Wildlife amendment bill C-24, 1r, 628; 2r, 702-04; ref to com, 704; rep without amdt, 726; 3r, 727; r.a., chap. 23, 1994, 773

Administration and enforcement, 703, 704
 Canadian Cooperative Wildlife Health Centre, 703
 Conservation, 704
 Courts, 703
 Definition of wildlife, 703, 704
 National wildlife areas, 703
 Natural wildlife areas, 702
 Penalties, 703, 704
 Protected areas beyond territorial sea, 703, 704
 Recovery of Nationally Endangered Wildlife, 702
 Wildlife conservation, 702

Speakers: Senators

Kenny, Colin, 702-03
 Spivak, Mira, 704

Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations incorporation bill S-5, 1r, 273; 2r, 403-04; ref to com, 404; rep without amdt, 548, adopted, 588; m in amdt, 606-07; 3r, 607; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 650; r.a., 664

Federal charters, 404
 Functions of organization, 403
 Lutheranism in Canada, 403

Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations—Cont'd

See Journals of the Senate

Speakers: Senators

Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 404
 Olson, H.A., 403-04, 606, 607

Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations, presentation of petition, 250Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Annual report 1993/94, production costs, tabled, 1070
 Evaluation of operations of corporation, qu, 252, (r) 325
 Felicitations on the appointment of Hon. Perrin Beatty, P.C., as President and CEO, st, 1499
 National Film Board, Telefilm Canada, commissioning of production of war films, tabled, 1191
 Pamela Wallin, cancellation of contract for Prime Time News Magazine, st, 1528
 Youth criminality, congratulations on recent production, st, 2607-08

Canadian Citizenship Week, st, 301Canadian Coast Guard, search and rescue operations, state of helicopter fleet, 45Canadian Dairy Commission amendment bill C-86, 1r, 1824; 2r, 1882-83; ref to com, 1883; rep without amdt, 1923; 3r, 1923; r.a., chap. 23, 1995, 2056

Exporting dairy products to U.S., 1882

GATT-WTO agreement, 1882

Levy system, 1882, 1883

NAFTA, 1882

Speakers: Senators

Hays, Dan, 1882
 Rossiter, Eileen, 1883

Canadian Environmental Assessment amendment bill C-56

1r, 1131; 2r, 1138-41; ref to com, 1141; rep without amdt, 1163; 3r, 1163; r.a., chap. 46, 1994, 1177

Authority of new agency, 1141

Cabinet response to panel recommendations, 1139

Intervenor funding, 1140

"One project, one assessment", 1139

Public participation, 1139, 1140

Use of previous environmental assessment work, 1140

Speakers: Senators

Kenny, Colin, 1138-39
 Spivak, Mira, 1139-41

Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31

1r, 649-50; 2r, 658-62; ref to com, 662; rep without amdt, 686; 3r, 729; r.a., chap. 25, 1994, 773

American film makers, 660

Investment bankers, 659

Loan guarantees, 659, 660

Provinces' role of counterpoint, 660

Tax breaks, 661

Telefilm Canada, 659

Venture capital, 660

Speakers: Senators

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 662
 Doody, C. William, 660, 662
 Frith, Royce, 658-60, 661-62
 Keon, Wilbert J., 660-61
 MacDonald, Finlay, 660
 Nolin, Pierre Claude, 661, 662
 Phillips, Orville H., 661
 Stanbury, Richard J., 662

Canadian forces reserves, unemployment insurance amendments, tabled, 360

Canadian Heritage

- Abolition of Art Bank, role of minister, qu, 1762, (r) 2076
- Actions of Film Review Board on adult films, government position, qu, 1452, (r) 1693-94
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, cancellation of contract of Pamela Wallin with Prime Time News Magazine, government position, qu, 1531
- Catalogue of national sports events, failure to publish in French, government position, qu, 1841-42, (r) 2080
- Expo 2005, report of independent evaluators, decision based on politics or merit, government position, qu, 1521-22, (r) 1600
- Government documents tabled unilingually, infraction of policy on official languages, government position, qu, 1892-94
- Responsibilities in relation to Canadian veterans and war memorials, tabled, 1206

Canadian Human Rights Act, opposition to amendment, presentation of petition, 1713

Canadian International Development Agency, filling of vacant positions without competition, government position, qu, 2269

CN Commercialization bill C-89. 1r, 1838; 2r, 1914-16; ref to com, 1916; rep without amdt, 1922; 3r, 1929-31; r.a., chap. 24, 1995, 2056

- Atlantic Canada, 1930-31
- Buying shares, 1914, 1915

Speakers: Senators

- De Bané, Pierre, 1914-15
- Forrestall, J. Michael, 1915-16, 1929
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 1929
- Robertson, Brenda M., 1930-31

Canadian National Exhibition, Lliquisivut, Inuit Spirit of the Arctic Pavilion, st, 1773

Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association

- North Atlantic Assembly
- Report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2166
- Report of Canadian Delegation to annual session tabled, 2264
- Report of annual committee meeting in North America, tabled, 2068
- Report of 1995 spring session tabled, 1890

Canadian Race Relations Foundation, particulars on establishment, tabled, 1695

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission

- Cable service to French-speaking communities, st, 599
- Increase in local telephone rates, government position, qu, 2167
- Issuance of specialty cable licences, st, 665

Canadian Unity, Special Senate Committee

- Motion to establish, 2556-57

Canadian War Museum

- Termination of employment of veterans, st, 2554-55

Canadian Wheat Board

- Expansion of powers, presentation of petitions, 1165
- Presentation of petitions, 1182

Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-50. 1r, 912; 2r, 935-36; ref to com, 936; rep without amdt, 983; 3r, 987; r.a., chap. 39, 1994, 989

- Check-offs, 935, 936

Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-50—Cont'd

- Competition in international market, 936
- Field performance, 935
- Levies, 936
- Plant breeding and research, 936
- Research and development, 936
- Specific qualities, 935

Speakers: Senators

- Gustafson, Leonard J., 936
- Olson, H.A., 935-36

Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-92. 1r, 1924; 2r, 1945-47; ref to com, 1947; rep without amdt, 1978; 3r, 2019; r.a., chap. 31, 1995, 2057

- Freight costs, 1945
- Pooling points, 1946, 1947

Speakers: Senators

- Gustafson, Leonard J., 1947
- Hays, Dan, 1945-47

Carney, P.C., Hon. Pat

- Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, m for concurrence in Commons amendments, 1834
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report
- 26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2498
- Budget
- International Space Station Program, status of Canada's commitment, government position, qu, 163, (r) 221-22
- Military and funding cut-backs, effect on employment, qu, 134, 135
- R & D cut-backs, effect on British Columbia, qu, 135
- Business of the Senate, 202
- Adjournment, 1775
- Canada Council, closure of Art Bank, inquiry, 1832
- Purchasing back art, 1832
- Communications, Radio Canada International, possibility of alternative funding, government position, qu, 2493
- Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2523-27
- British Columbia, 2523-27
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2573-75
- Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment bill C-4, 402-03
- Americas free trade agreement, 403
- North American Agreement on Environmental Cooperation, 403
- North American Agreement on Labour Cooperation, 403
- Panel determination, 402
- Side agreements, 402, 403
- Customs, Canadian pilots, clearance procedures at Mirabel Airport, qu, 914, (r) 1187-88
- Delayed answers to oral questions, 1588
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994
- British Columbia, concerns of constituents, st, 393-94
- Constituencies, provinces, and municipalities, process of consultation, government position, qu, 358-59
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 339-41, 347-38
- British Columbia, 339, 340
- Equality of voting power, 339
- Redistribution, 347
- Role of Senate, 341
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
- Authority to engage services and to travel, 353
- Authority to monitor matters related to the federal environmental assessment process, 110, 157
- Globe 94 Conference, Wilderness Vision Colloquium, North American Natural Gas Conference, reports of committee tabled, 727
- Jobs and the environment, authority to conduct study, 353-54
- National protected areas study
- Authority to conduct study, 353
- Motion to extend date of final report, 2462

Carney, P.C., Hon. Pat—Cont'd

Reports

- 1st, tabled, 78
- 2nd, Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6, 420
- 4th, Migratory Birds Convention, 1994 bill C-23, without amdt, 726
- 5th, Canada Wildlife amendment bill C-24, without amdt, 7267th, National Protected Areas Strategy, report of committee tabled, 993
- 8th, National Protected Areas Strategy, extension of final report date, 993-94
- 10th, Canadian Environmental Assessment bill C-56, 1163
- 12th, National Protected Areas Strategy, extension of final report date, 1546-47, adopted, 1590
- 13th, Entitled "Report of the Committee's Fact-Finding Mission to Washington, D.C., March 6-9, 1995", tabled, 1760
- 14th, Travel to British Columbia, National Protected Areas Strategy, tabled, 1760
- 15th, Travel to Nova Scotia, National Protected Areas Strategy, tabled, 1760
- 16th, Alternative Fuels bill S-7, adopted, 1889
 - See Journals of the Senate
- 19th, Auditor General amendment bill C-83, without amdt, 2461
- 20th, National Protected Areas Strategy, tabled, 2608
- Environment, automation of weather stations, reliability of technology, government position, qu, 1303, (r) 1986
- Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce, felicitations on appointment as first woman leader, st, 7, 8
- Federal-provincial relations
 - Infrastructure Program, Hay Report, presentation of petition, 161
- Gun control legislation, st, 2314-15
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 486, 491-94, 495, 497
- Lightstations, report of Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee, inquiry, 1843
- Ministerial response to Senate Committee reports, inquiry, 2153, 2222-26
- Privilege, 1492
- Transport
 - Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations
 - Consultations in British Columbia, st, 1037
 - Final report tabled, 1837
 - Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, consultations in British Columbia, inquiry, 1039, 1153-55, 1156
 - Automated navigational and weather systems, request for documentation, government position, qu, 1165, (r) 2070-71
 - Automated Weather Observation Systems, report of Senate committee, request for response from ministers, qu, 2233, 2234
 - Destaffing of lightstations in British Columbia, environmental impact assessment, government position, qu, 1040, (r) 1189
- Transport and Communications Committee
 - Marine safety, m to expand role of lightstations, 211, 232, 233, 234
 - Mandate, 233
 - Staffing, 233
- Transport and communications, marine safety, Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, st, 929
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 69

Carstairs, Hon. Sharon (introduced in the Senate Oct.4/94), 838
 Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1305-07
 Air Command, 1305
 Child abuse, 1306

Carstairs, Hon. Sharon—Cont'd

Budget 1995—Cont'd

- Fairness, 1305
- Family violence, 1306
- Western Grain Transportation Agency, 1306
- Canada Grain amendment bill C-51, 1136-38, 1163
 - Agri-industry, 1136
 - Canadian Grain Commission, 1136, 1137, 1138
 - Competitiveness, 1137
 - Drying of grain, 1137
 - Elevator tariffs, 1137
 - Farmers, 1137
 - Grain quality, 1137
 - Process elevators, 1137
 - Protection for producers, 1137
 - Safeguards for taxpayers, 1137
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2567-70
- Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2062
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, 1555-58, 1731-33, 1735; vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1848-49; point of order, 1899, 1900; m to refer question and message from Commons to com, 1967-68
 - Alternate maps, 1557
 - Appointment of boundaries commissions, 1557
 - Boundaries commissions, 1556
 - Creation of ridings, 1557
 - Criteria in drawing boundaries, 1558
 - Decennial redistributions, 1557
 - Lortie Commission, 1555
 - Public hearings, 1557
 - Public participation, 1557
 - Quinquennial readjustments, 1557
 - Scrutiny by parliamentary committee, 1558
 - 24-month suspension, 1556
- Employment equity bill C-64, 2496
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Senate Committee, Final Report, 1791-93
- Firearms bill C-68, 1811-14
 - Aboriginal people, 1813
 - Family violence, 1812
 - "Firearms possession certificates", 1813
 - Hunting and trapping, 1813
 - Penalties, 1811
 - Registration card, 1813
 - Registration process, 1813
 - Suicide, 1812
 - Sustenance hunters, 1813
 - Universal firearms registry, 1811, 1812
- Health, commemoration of World AIDS Day, st, 1037-38
- Humphrey, the late John Peter, tribute, 1449
- International Women's Day, st, 1296
- Johnson, late Dr. George, tribute, 1976
- Karla Homolka bill S-11, point of order, 2139
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 2006
 - Motion instructing com to table final report re C-69, 2262, 2276-78
 - Motion instructing com to table final report re C-69, 2423, point of order, 2426, m (con't), 2429
 - Notice of motion instructing com to table final report re C-69, 2370, 2377, 2379, 2392
- Reports
 - 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 2021, 2023-25
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2253-56, 2259, 2260, 2299, 2300
 - Aboriginal peoples, 2254, 2260
 - Antique weapons, 2254

Carstairs, Hon. Sharon—Cont'd

- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee—Cont'd
Confiscation without compensation, 2259
Mandatory minimum sentences, 2255
Minister of Justice regulatory powers, 2254, 2255
Museums, 2254
Opting out clause, 2255
Registration, 2254
Safe storage regulations, 2300
Suicide, 2300
Violence, 2300
Member of Parliament, definition, st, 2381
Molgat, Hon. Gildas L., felicitations on appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 949
National Child Day, st, 2243
Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2040
Schizophrenia, st, 1544
South Africa, establishment of new parliamentary system, st, 1449
Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36, 940-43, 1058
Adjudication process, 942
Band-specific agreements, 942
Compensation, 942, 943
Land title, 942
Manitoba Northern Flood Agreement, 942, 943
Moneys administered by band trust funds, 942
Status of Women, twenty-fifth anniversary of tabling of report of Royal Commission, st, 2090

Carter, the late Hon. Chesley William, tributes, 77, 91

Celebration of Christmas in Canada, inquiry, 1057, 1127-29

- "Christmas iconography", 1128
"Multiculturalisation", 1127
Political correctness, 1128
Respect, 1127
Speaker: Senator
Kelly, William M., 1057, 1127-29
See also Christmas, way of celebration in Canada

Certified General Accountants' Association bill S-8, 1r, 1210;

- 2r, 1258, 1293; ref to com, 1293
French counterpart for English name, 1258
Speakers: Senators
Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1293
Kirby, Michael, 1258

Certified General Accountants' Association of Canada, presentation of petition, 1204

Chambers, the late Hon. Egan

- Tributes, 434

Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange (retired May 14/95)

- National defence, closure of St-Jean military college, st, 131
Tributes on retirement, 412-20

Charbonneau, Hon. Guy

- ASEAN Inter-Parliamentary Organization, fourteenth General Assembly, report tabled, 42
Camus, Albert, accepted pronunciation of family name, 653
Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st, 578
LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, congratulations on his appointment as Governor General of Canada, 983
Molgat, Hon. Gildas L., congratulations on his appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 983
National defence, St-Jean Military College, proposed closure, st, 214

Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, 1r, 1801; 2r, 1873-78; ref to com, 1878; rep without amdt, 1923; 3r, 1931-32; r.a., chap. 25, 1995, 2056

- Convention, 1874, 1875
Global chemical weapons ban, 1874
"Killing century", 1873
Middle East, 1877, 1878
Speakers: Senators
Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1931-32
Grafstein, Jeremiah S., 1873-75
Graham, B. Alasdair, 1931
Kelly, William M., 1875-76
Prud'homme, Marcel, 1876-78

Child abuse and mortality, inquiry, 2010, 2219-22

- Speaker: Senator
Cools, Anne C., 2219-22

Child abuse and neglect, death of Matthew Vaudreuil, inquiry, 2382

- Speaker: Senator
Cools, Anne C., 2382

China-Canada relations, human rights issues, government position, st, 247

China, human rights and commercial relations

- Government policy, qu, 601-02
Government position, qu, 553, 604-05, (r) 835-36

Christmas Greetings, st, 1157-58, 1178, 2546, 2549

Christmas, way of celebration in Canada, inquiry, 42; withdrawn, 331

- Speaker: Senator
Kelly, William M., 42, 331

Citizenship and immigration

- Literacy courses offered in French language, st, 1570-71
Review of refugee status claimants, government position, qu, 501, (r) 833-34

Citizenship and Immigration Canada, tabled, 2083

Citizenship, conferral of Citation upon Yude Henteleff, Q.C., st, 1335

City of Winnipeg, tribute to Susan Thompson on re-election as Mayor, st, 2165

Civil Justice Review, inquiry, 1890-91, 2052-56

- Speaker: Senator
Cools, Anne C., 1890-91, 2052-56

Clerk of the Senate

- Annual Report for 1992-93 tabled, 22
Appointment of Gordon Barnhart, Esq. as honorary officer of the Senate, felicitations, 178-81
Appointment of Paul C. Bélisle, Esq., felicitations, 178-81
Commission issued to Paul C. Bélisle, Esq., 360
Statements of receipts and disbursements tabled, 22, 880, 2152
Ref to com, 25, 880, 2152

Clerk's accounts

- See* Clerk of the Senate, Statements of receipts and disbursements

Clinton, William J., President of the United States of America

- Address to both houses, 1995, printed as appendix, 1248
See appendix p. 1271

Coastal Fisheries Protection Act

- Amendments to regulations tabled, 547
Protection and management of straddling stocks, tabled, 852

- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29. 1r. 451; 2r. 457-62; ref to committee of the Whole, 462; considered in Committee of the Whole. Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, Hon. André Ouellet, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Hon. Brian Tobin, Minister of Fisheries and Oceans taking part in the debate, 462-75; rep without amdt, 476; 3r. 476; r.a., chap. 14, 1994, 478
- Conservation, 458
 Environmental conditions, 457
 Fisheries surveillance, 461
 Fishing zone 3N, 459
 Flags of convenience, 458, 459, 460
 Helicopters, 461
 International cooperation, 458
 Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization (NAFO), 457, 458, 460
 Overfishing, 458, 459, 460
 Penalties, 461
 Quotas, 457, 461
 Stateless vessels, 458
 Straddling stocks, 458, 459
 200-mile zone, 461
See appendix p. 480
- Speakers: Senators
 Buchanan, John, 460
 Comeau, Gerald J., 459-60
 Frith, Royce, 451, 452
 Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 459, 460
 Hastings, Earl A., 457
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 452
 Marshall, Jack, 461-62
 Molgat, Gildas L., 451, 460
 Petten, William J., 452, 457-59
 Prud'homme, Marcel, 452
 Rossiter, Eileen, 461
 Stewart, John B., 459
 Thériault, L. Norbert, 460-61
- In Committee of the Whole*, 462-75
 Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 474, 475
 Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 463
 Comeau, Gerald J., 470
 Fairbairn, Joyce, 462
 Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 471
 Jessiman, Duncan J., 468, 469
 Kinsella, Noël A., 465
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 462-63, 465, 466, 467, 472, 475
 Marshall, Jack, 473
 Molgat, Gildas L., 462
 Nolin, Pierre Claude, 473
 Ouellet, Hon. André, Minister of Foreign Affairs, 463
 Petten, William J., 475
 Phillips, Orville H., 469, 470
 Prud'homme, Marcel, 467-68
 St. Germain, Gerry, 463, 464, 465
 Stewart, John B., 471, 472, 473
 Thériault, L. Norbert, 473
 Tobin, Hon. Brian, Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, 463-64, 465-66, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474-75
- Cochrane, Hon. Ethel
 Budget
 Private pension income, possible elimination of tax credit, consultation with senior citizens, qu. 1239
 Threshold for clawbacks, consultations with senior citizens, qu. 1238-39
 Budget Implementation bill, 1995, federal-provincial negotiations to establish standards for health and social transfers, qu. 1635
 Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1763-65
 Adult students, 1764
 Canada Health and Social Transfer, 1763, 1764
- Cochrane, Hon. Ethel—Cont'd
 Budget Implementation, 1995—Cont'd
 Canada Scholarship Program, 1764
 Funding for universities and colleges, 1764
 Post-secondary education, 1763, 1764
 Student debt load, 1764
 Canada Health and Social Transfer, effect on spending of provincial governments, government position, qu. 1634-35
 Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28, 712-14
 Adult students, 714
 Canada Student Loans Program, 712, 713
 Federal and provincial funding, 714
 Income-contingent repayment, 713
 Lending institutions, 713
 Student debt, 713, 714
 Human resources development, National Literacy Secretariat, importance of program continuity and volunteer participation, government position, qu. 1214
 Literacy
 "Making Scenes Between the Lines" pamphlet, targeted adult market, government position, qu. 1894
 Request for kits for senators, qu. 1895
 National Child Day, st. 2243
 National finance, reduction in post-secondary education financing, qu. 667, (r) 851
 Post-secondary education
 Canada Scholarships Program, effect of cuts, possibility of replacement, government position, qu. 1341, (r) 1588
 Canada Student Loans Program, impact on federal funding, government position, qu. 605, (r) 835
 Effect of cuts to social transfer payments on university enrolment, qu. 1683, (r) 1990-91
 Effects of withdrawal of federal funding, government position, qu. 333
 Financing arrangements for student loans, government policy, qu. 333, (r) 424
 Growth in revenue from EPF transfers tax points, possibility of transfer to institutions, qu. 934-35, (r) 1377-78
 Increases in university tuition fees in Newfoundland, government position, 1532, (r) 1589
 Reinstatement or replacement of Canada Scholarships Fund, government position, qu. 1683-84
 Poverty in Canada, document tabled, 784
 Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick George, tribute, 684
 Youth
 Employment and training, student summer employment program, qu. 355, (r) 504-05
 Employment programs, government position, qu. 504, (r) 765
 Funding of training initiatives, government position, qu. 356
- Code of Conduct, Special Joint Committee
 Appointment, 1800-01, 1883-84, 1954-55, adopted, 1969-70
 Membership, 1981-82, adopted, 1996-97
 Message from Commons, 1798
 Reports
 1st, extension of report deadline, 2067, adopted, 2115
 2nd, name of Committee in French changed, 2416, adopted, 2483
- Cohen, Hon. Erminie J.
 Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency
 Future of agency
 Government position, qu. 238
 Objectives and scope of government review, qu. 252, (r) 423
 Grants to projects in New Brunswick, government position, qu. 452, (r) 556
 Budget, elimination of tax breaks for health and dental plans, government position, qu. 1110
 Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 533-35
 Atlantic Canada, 533
 Child care, 534
 Freight subsidies, 533, 534

Cohen, Hon. Erminie J.—Cont'd

- Budget Implementation, 1994—Cont'd
 - Transfer payments, 534
 - Unemployment insurance, 534, 535
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1309-11
 - Atlantic Canada, 1310, 1311
 - Fairness, 1310
 - Freight subsidies, 1310
 - National deficit-reduction strategy, 1309
 - Transfer payments, 1310
 - Transportation Adjustment Program, 1310
- Correctional service, use of male emergency response team to strip-search inmates at Kingston prison for women, government position, st. 1236
- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 1012-14
 - Abortion, 1013
 - Infanticide, 1013
 - Prostitution, 1013
 - Sexual assault, 1013
 - "Sixteen Days of Activism Against Gender Violence", 1012
 - Spousal abuse, 1013
 - Supreme Court rulings, 1012, 1013
 - Violence against women, 1012
 - Women as victims, 1013
 - Zero tolerance, 1012
- Energy, Hibernia Project, contract with Saint John shipyard, st. 1038
- Family violence, comments made by Senator Cools on International Women's Day, st. 1337-38
- Health
 - Controlled drugs and substances bill, required amendments, government position, qu. 2118-19
 - Impact of thyroid disease in Canada, inquiry, 1689, 1756-58
 - Graves' Disease, 1757, 1758
 - Public profile, 1756
 - Thyroid Foundation of Canada, 1756, 1757, 1758
 - Thyroid malfunction, 1758
 - Possibility of taxation on dental insurance plans, st. 983
- Human resources development, violence against women, importance of literacy, government position, qu. 1186
- International Trade, sugar, favourable Canadian International Trade Tribunal ruling, st. 2207
- Literacy, future measures to be instituted, government position, qu. 2439
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 982
- National Day of Remembrance, sixth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st. 2412-13
- New Brunswick
 - Reopening of Saint John's Imperial Theatre, st. 542-43
 - Twenty-fifth anniversary of Official Languages Act, st. 320
- Rabin, the late Yitzhak, tribute to former Prime Minister of Israel, 2195-96
- Saint John, New Brunswick, bilingual nature of work force, st. 653-54
- Senate
 - Remarks by Minister of Transport, st. 855
 - Request for clarification, qu. 873-74
- Status of Women, request for breakdown of program spending for current and next fiscal years, qu. 1376, (r) 1503
- Transport
 - Port of Saint John, importance of rail infrastructure, st. 870
 - Underutilized infrastructure at Canadian ports, need for proposed new berthage and cargo sheds in Minister's riding, qu. 1472, (r) 1554
- United Nations, Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, China, inquiry, 2386-89
 - Chinese women, 2387
 - Micro-banks, 2388
 - Micro-credit programs, 2388

Cohen, Hon. Erminie J.—Cont'd

- United Nations, Fourth World Conference—Cont'd
 - Rape in armed conflict, 2388
 - Refugees based on gender-related persecution, 2388
 - Sustainable economic development, 2388
- Women and literary, st. 2108-09
- Yukon First Nations Land Claims Agreement bill C-33, 756
 - B.C. Treaty Commission, 756
 - Gwich'in Comprehensive Land Claim Agreement, 756
 - Indian Act, amendments, 756
 - Native Agenda, 756
 - Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples, 756
 - Saskatchewan Indian Nations, 756

Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean, forty-second anniversary of visit by the Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, st. 896
See also National Defence

Comeau, Hon. Gerald J.

- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency
- Cornwallis Park Development Agency
 - Allegations of mismanagement
 - Findings of National Defence investigation, government position, qu. 2318
 - Response of minister, qu. 2177
 - Stoppage of funds, government position, qu. 2167
 - Circumstances surrounding appointment of Board of Directors, government position, qu. 2168
 - Inventory control and hiring procedures, request for particulars, qu. 2211
 - Support for investigation by Auditor General into allegations of mismanagement, government position, qu. 2371
- Cuts by Minister to National Defence Adjustment Fund, government position, qu. 1340, (r) 1744
 - Method of awarding projects, government policy, qu. 286, (r) 424
 - Request for information on projects, qu. 1471-72, (r) 1745
 - Request for investigation by Auditor General, government position, qu. 2177
- Budget 1995
 - Defence Industry Productivity Program, government position, qu. 1373, (r) 1552
 - Inequality in funding treatment of Atlantic agencies, qu. 1302, (r) 1744
- Canada Post Corporation, tabled, 2177
 - Extension of contract on leases, request for information on members of consortium, qu. 1983, 2010, (r) 2115
- Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 579-80
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 459-60; considered in Committee of the Whole, 470
 - Flags of convenience, 459
 - Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization (NAFO), 460
- Ethics Counsellor, desirability of independent counsellor reporting to Parliament, government position, qu. 2383
- Federal Business Development Bank, tributes on 50th anniversary, st. 910
- Firearms bill
 - Availability to other provinces of similar arrangements, costs to taxpayers, government position, qu. 2232, (r) 2351
 - Funding arrangements with government of Nova Scotia, request for particulars, qu. 2232, (r) 2351
- Firearms legislation, reluctance of Nova Scotia premier to take position, qu. 1759
- Fisheries, North Atlantic fishery, significance of presence of Spanish warships in relation to negotiations, qu. 1360
- Foreign affairs, G-7 summit in Halifax, position paper not submitted for parliamentary debate, government position, qu. 1741
- Governor General's Medal of Bravery, felicitations to recipients, st. 1673

Comeau, Hon. Gerald J.—Cont'd

- Human Resources Development
 - Reform of unemployment insurance system, guaranteed annual income as part of package, government position, qu. 2349
 - Unemployment insurance reform, correspondence between federal and Nova Scotia governments, request for tabling of documentation, qu. 2420
- International trade
 - Dispute with European Union on newsprint, government position, qu. 1776, (r) 2076
 - Pearson Airport Agreements, meeting of minister with British counterpart at G-7 summit in Halifax, government position, qu. 1762
- La Baie en Joie, congratulations to dancing troupe, st. 1835
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 963
- Marine Atlantic, M.V. Bluenose ferry service, tabled, 2083
- National defence
 - Maritime and aerial surveillance and control, enhancement of Arctic capabilities, government policy, qu. 2366
 - Search and Rescue Helicopters Replacement Program, statement of requirements, request for answer, qu. 2463, (r) 2559
 - State of Sea King helicopters, replacement of fleet, st. 654
- Nova Scotia
 - Congratulations to Dr. John Hamm on election as leader of provincial Progressive Conservative Party, st. 2149-50
 - Effect of budget on Cornwallis Peacekeeping Training Centre, government position, qu. 133-34
 - Necessity of peacekeeping training, government position, qu. 113
 - Proposed peacekeeping training centre, government position, qu. 620, (r) 986
 - Status of peacekeeping training centre at CFB Cornwallis, government position, qu. 112
- Official Languages, Standing Joint Committee report
 - 2nd, Estimates 1995-96, Vote 25, 1712-13, adopted, 1753
- Precincts of Parliament
 - Consultation with Senate before undertaking further work, government position, qu. 1167
 - Tunnel between East Block and Centre Block, appropriateness of expenditure, government position, qu. 1131
- Public Works, diversion of funds from designated Nova Scotia Highway Project, abuse of privilege by Minister, government position, qu. 1709
- Saskatchewan, congratulations to Liberal Party on becoming official opposition, st. 1889
- Transport
 - Cancellation of winter ferry service between Yarmouth, Nova Scotia and Bar Harbour, Maine, st. 2173-74
 - Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program
 - Introduction of toll booths on Trans-Canada Highway, qu. 1661, (r) 2046
 - Nova Scotia
 - Diversion of funds, request for examination by Auditor General of Canada, m. 1698-1700
 - Fleur-de-lis Trail, 1698
 - Highway 104, 1698, 1699
 - Tolls, 1698, 1699
 - Diversion of funds from designated project, knowledge of transaction by Prime Minister, government position, qu. 1679, (r) 2047
 - Request for answers, qu. 1926
 - Restoration of funding to designated project, request for update, qu. 1691
 - Return of funds to designated project, government position, qu. 1650-51, (r) 1988
 - Report of Auditor General on diversion of funds, government position, qu. 2266
 - Pertinent documents tabled, 2559
- Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1390, 1391, 1398, 1404, 1405, 1416

Comeau, Hon. Gerald J.—Cont'd

- Removal of emergency response capability from smaller airports, difference in standards of safety, government position, qu. 1531-32
- Replacement of search and rescue helicopter at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, st. 2008
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet, st. 449
- Search and rescue replacement program
 - Purchase of units without tender, government position, qu. 2400, (r) 2558
 - Suitability and safety of replacement units, government position, qu. 2401, (r) 2558
- Trans-Canada Highway, proposed toll booths in Nova Scotia, government position, qu. 1839, (r) 1993

Committee of Selection

See Selection Committee

Committee of the Whole

- Borrowing Authority Act, 1994-95
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29
- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35
- Excise Tax, Excise, Income Tax amendment bill C-32
- National Sports of Canada bill C-212
- Railway Safety amendment bill C-21
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74

Committees, Joint, Special

- Canada's Defence Policy
- Code of Conduct

Committees, Joint, Standing

- Library of Parliament
- Official Languages
- Scrutiny of Regulations

Committees, Senate, Special

- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide

Committees, Senate, Standing

- Aboriginal Peoples
- Agriculture and Forestry
- Banking, Trade and Commerce
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources
- Fisheries
- Foreign Affairs
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs
- National Finance
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders
- Selection
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology
- Transport and Communications

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association

- Bilateral visit to Britain and Northern Ireland, rep of Canadian delegation tabled, 25
- Forty-first Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference, Colombo, Sri Lanka, rep tabled, 2362
- Thirty-ninth Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference, Limassol, Cyprus, rep tabled, 25
- Thirty-third Regional Conference, Ottawa, rep tabled, 25
- Visit by Canadian Branch to Hong Kong, rep tabled, 1678

Communications

- Canadian magazine industry, proposed split-run enforcement measures, st. 279
- Fairness and honesty in newspaper reporting, st. 378
- Granting of public relations contract for G-7 Summit
 - Contravention of Treasury Board regulations, government position, qu. 1927-28

Communications—Cont'd

- Granting of public relations contract for G-7 Summit—Cont'd
 - Request for estimated final cost, qu, 1928, (r) 2081-82
 - Request for answer, qu, 1959
 - Request for particulars on advice given to RCMP, qu, 1928, (r) 2082
- Radio Canada International
 - Future prospects for continuance
 - Government position, qu, 2463
 - Report of Senate committee on continued funding, government position, qu, 2489-90
 - Possibility of alternative funding, government position, qu, 2492-93
- Satellite broadcasting, consultation with CRTC and with both Houses of Parliament, government position, qu, 1803-04

Composition of Advisory Board of Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, tabled, 852

Composition of National Defence Minister's Advisory Group on Defence Infrastructure, tabled, 1555

Conacher, late Hon. Lionel, tributes on induction into Hockey Hall of Fame, st, 917

Conflict of interests, lobbying, influence peddling and selling access, qu, 354-55, (r) 456

Conflict of Interests, report of Special Joint Committee presented, 41

Constitution

- Federal-Provincial negotiations, st, 182-83
- Government efforts to keep Quebec within Confederation, qu, 113

Constitution Act, 1867, powers of Senate, inquiry, 2501

- Speaker: Senator
- Cools, Anne C., 2501

Constitutional amendments

- Availability of opportunity for the proposal of amendments, government position, qu, 2416-17
- Clarification of situation in relation to aboriginal aspirations, government position, qu, 2417
- Distribution of veto power, status of British Columbia, government position, qu, 2400, 2417
- Schedule for consideration of legislation, possibility of pre-study, government position, qu, 2437-38
- Veto proposals, effect on future status of Yukon, qu, 2418

Constitutional amendments bill C-110. 1r, 2501; 2r, 2515-27, 2540-43, 2548; ref to com, 2548; rep, 2559-82; vote deferred, 2610-21, neg on div, 2633-34; 3r, 2634; r.a., chap.1, 1996, 2638

- Aboriginal and treaty rights, 2516
- Aboriginal peoples, 2541
- Aboriginal self-government, 2518-19
- Adjudication mechanism, 2541
- Amending formula, 2542
- British Columbia, 2523-27
- Canadian Bill of Rights, 2541
- Changes to national institutions, 2517
- Creation of new provinces, 2517
- First ministers conference, 2523
- Francophones of New Brunswick, 2542
- General amending formula, 2518, 2522
- National public interest, 2541
- Opting-out, 2517

Constitutional amendments bill C-110—Cont'd

- Powers to provinces, 2517
- Provincial representation, 2541, 2542
- Regional veto formula, 2518, 2522
- Supremacy of legislation, 2541
- Veto, 2516, 2517, 2543

Speakers: Senators

- Carney, Pat, 2523-27
- De Bané, Pierre, 2521-23
- Fairbairn, Joyce, 2515-18
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 2543, 2548
- Kinsella, Noël A., 2541-42
- Murray, Lowell, 2518-21
- Nolin, Pierre Claude, 2540-41
- Simard, Jean-Maurice, 2542-43

Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee

- Motion to establish, adopted, 2547-48
- Motion to amend order, 2584
- Report, 2556, 2559-82; vote deferred, 2610-21, neg on div, 2633-34

Speakers: Senators

- Bacon, Lise, 2575-77
 - Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 2570-71
 - Carney, Pat, 2573-75
 - Carstairs, Sharon, 2567-70
 - Cools, Anne C., 2613-14
 - De Bané, Pierre, 2563-65
 - Di Nino, Consiglio, 2612-13
 - Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 2571-73
 - Graham, B. Alasdair, 2610-11
 - Haidasz, Stanley, 2618-20
 - Kinsella, Noël A., 2556, 2559-63, 2620-21
 - Lawson, Edward M., 2577-79
 - Lynch-Staunton, John, 2580, 2581, 2582
 - MacEachen, Allan J., 2614-16, 2618
 - Murray, Lowell, 2616-18
 - Olson, H.A., 2580, 2581, 2582
 - Rivest, Jean-Claude, 2565-67
 - St. Germain, Gerry, 2579-80, 2581, 2617
- See Journals of the Senate*

Constitutional implications of unilateral provincial attempt to declare sovereignty or separation, inquiry, 769, 797-99, 1050

- Speaker: Senator
- Frith, Royce, 797-99

Contamination of National Parks and Historic Sites, tabled, 188

Controlled Drugs and Substances bill C-7. 1r, 2153; 2r, 2184, 2218-19; ref to com, 2219

- Chemical compounds, 2218
- Police infiltration, 2218
- Prescription drugs, 2184
- Treatment programs, 2184
- Volunteer drug prevention and drug victim support organizations, 2218, 2219

Speakers: Senators

- Poulin, Marie-P., 2184, 2219
- Rivest, Jean-Claude, 2218-19

Convention of World Parliamentarians on Tibet, second conference held in Vilnius, Lithuania, st, 1976-77

Cooke, Mr. Robert

- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 67

Cools, Hon. Anne C.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 12-15
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1263
- Business of the Senate, 1270, 2632
- Child abuse and mortality, inquiry, 2010, 2219-22
- Child abuse and neglect, death of Matthew Vaudreuil, inquiry, 2382
- Civil Justice Review, inquiry, 1890-91, 2052-56
- Constitution Act, 1867, powers of Senate, inquiry, 2501
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2613-14
- Criminal Code amendment (abuse of process) bill S-13, 2371, 2407-10
 - False accusations, 2408
 - False affidavits, 2408
 - Integrity, 2407, 2408
 - Judicial privileges, 2407, 2409, 2410
- Criminal Code amendment (plea bargaining) bill S-15, 2487
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m to instruct com to table final report, 2185, 2186
- Firearms bill, inquiry, 2348, 2372, 2373-76
 - Domestic violence, 2373
 - Gender feminist theory, 2374, 2375
 - Marksmanship, 2375
 - Spousal abuse, 2373
 - Spousal homicide, 2374
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1620
- Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 841
- Justice, damage to parliamentary process, inquiry, 2462, 2632-33, 2635-38
 - Air Canada bill C-129, 2632, 2633, 2635
 - Airbus scandal, 2632, 2633, 2635-38
 - Allegations against Mulroney, 2632, 2633, 2635-38
- Justice, request of minister for investigation by Canadian Judicial Council into remarks of Quebec judge, inquiry, 2501
- Karla Homolka bill S-11, 2110; point of order, 2139, 2140-42
 - Bill of attainder, 2140
 - Bill of pains and penalties, 2140, 2142
 - Law of Parliament, 2141
- Karla Homolka plea bargain agreement, presentation of petition, 2132
- Law of parliamentary privilege, inquiry, 984-85, 1019-22
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 968
- Library of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee Report
 - 1st, terms of reference, 249
- National Defence, future of peacekeeping forces in former Yugoslavia, government position, 1586
- Ontario Court General Division
 - Motion to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1164, withdrawn, 1281
 - Motion to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1281, 1625, 1627-28, point of order, 1641-43; m debated, 2169-70; point of order, 2171, 2172; m debated, 2544-45
- Practice of Family Law in Ontario, inquiry, 1958
- Questions of privilege, 845, 855, 867-68, 2105-06, 2107
 - Notice of motion pursuant to Rule 43, 836, 2098, 2152, 2163, 2202-04, 2205
- Speaker's Rulings, 919-20, 2211-12
 - Response to Speaker's ruling, 930-31
- Relationship between Parliament and the Courts, inquiry, 985, 1065-69
 - Appointment of judges, 1066
 - Attendance of members, 1068
 - Control over internal processes, 1067, 1068
 - Coordinate constitutional institutions, 1067

Cools, Hon. Anne C.—Cont'd

- Relationship between Parliament and the Courts—Cont'd
 - Hansard, 1067, 1068
 - Judicial independence, 1066, 1067
 - Parliamentary privilege, 1067
- South Africa, first democratic elections, inquiry, 793-95, 796-97
 - Afrikaners, 795
 - Bushman, 797
 - Canada-South Africa relations, 793-94
 - Illiteracy, 796
 - Murder rate, 795
 - Soviet Union-backed wars, 795
 - Violence, 795, 796
 - Zulu nation, 796, 797
- Supreme Court of Canada, decision on privileges of the Court, inquiry, 2176, 2356-58, 2359-60
 - Solicitor-client privilege, 2356, 2357
- Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67, 1663-65, 1856-58
 - Appeal process, 1664
 - Disability pension, 1663, 1664, 1857
 - Processing time, 1857, 1858
 - Veterans Review and Appeal Board, 1664
- Violence in society, inquiry, 1356, 1466-68, 1495-97, 1498
 - Child abuse, 1467, 1495-97
 - Crime, 1467
 - Delinquency, 1468
 - Mothers, role of, 1495-97

Corbin, Hon. Eymard G.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 149
- Amateurism in journalism in Canada, inquiry, 550, 643-46
- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, substitution of loans for subsidies, government position, qu, 1087, (r) 1190
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1729-30, 1770
 - Assistance to business, 1729
 - Canada social transfer, 1729
 - Downsizing, 1730
 - Early departure incentive, 1730
 - Federal employment, 1730
 - Freight rates, 1729
 - Health, 1729
 - Post-secondary education, 1729
 - Reform of Western Grain Transportation Act, 1729
 - Subsidies, 1730
 - Surplus employees, 1730
 - Transfers to provinces, 1729
 - Western grain transportation subsidy, 1729
- Business of the Senate, 1010, 1595
 - Adjournment, 1776
 - Complaint on translation of speech, 1856
- Canada Council
 - Closure of Art Bank
 - Government position, qu, 1534, (r) 1600-01
 - Request for answer, 1589
 - Possibility of reversing decision, st, 1835
 - Prior consultations with minister, government position, qu, 1960-61
 - St, 1886
 - Closure of Art Bank, inquiry, 1761; revised, 1782, 1828-32
 - Arts Council, 1830
 - Mandate, 1829
 - Purchasing back art, 1832
 - Future of Art Bank, st, 2315
 - Reduction in staff in Atlantic Region, effect on programs, government position, qu, 1635, (r) 1694-95
- Canadian heritage, abolition of Art Bank, role of minister, qu, 1762, (r) 2076
- Christmas, way of celebration in Canada, inquiry, 331

Corbin, Hon. Eymard G.—Cont'd

- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 975-76, 988
 - Parliament as lawmakers, 976
 - Social consensus, 976
 - Supreme Court rulings, 975
- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35, considered in Committee of the Whole, 765-69
- Economy, underground labour market, loss of tax dollars, government policy, qu, 98, (r) 220-21
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee reports
 - 3rd, extension of report date, 1002-03
 - Final entitled "Of Life and Death", 1972-73
- Excise Tax amendment bill C-32, considered in Committee of the Whole, 748-51
- Firearms legislation, comments of Liberal Member of Parliament, 1660
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1619, 1622
- Foreign Affairs Committee, authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 989
- Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65, 1977, 2011-13
 - Canada Council, 2011, 2012, 2013
- Health
 - Extension of Veterans Independence Program to senior citizens, inquiry, 195
 - Smoking within the precincts of Parliament, st, 91
- House of Commons, decision to terminate printing of committee proceedings, st, 1518
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee reports
 - 13th, Senate Estimates 1995-96, adopted, 1175-76
 - Inter-parliamentary relations, 1176-77
 - 14th, Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders budget, 1124
 - 17th, Parliamentary Associations, 1231-32
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1604
 - Senate budget 1994-95, 102
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, policy on administration of inter-parliamentary activities, equality between Houses of Parliament, qu, 1134-35, 1136
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 965-66
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 2006, 2007
- Report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amtds, 2282
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1445
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 981
- Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, 2015-16, point of order, 2018
- National Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, nonrepresentation of New Brunswick, qu, 605
 - Request for answer, 671
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2041
 - Power of parliamentary committees, m to refer paper to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 1130
- Precincts of Parliament, central heating problems, request for remedy, qu, 1168, (r) 1305
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders Committee
 - Authority to study and report upon decision of the House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, 1720-21
- Point of order, 1696, 1745-47, 1781
- Reports
 - 2nd, deletion of Rule 26 from Rules of the Senate, 1010
 - 3rd, amendment to Rule 17(1), recall of the Senate, adopted, 1640

Corbin, Hon. Eymard G.—Cont'd

- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, point of order, 1017
- Rules of the Senate, infringement of Rule 26, qu, 188
- Second World War, participation of Canadian troops in Italian campaign, inquiry, 550, 782-83
- Security and Intelligence, possibility of establishing Senate Committee, inquiry, 1221, 1508-10
 - Canadian Security Intelligence Service, 1508, 1509, 1510
- Senate, impact of decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, inquiry, 1594-95, 1645, 1656
- Transport and Communications Committee, authority to permit electronic coverage of proceedings, adopted, 1648
- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1421
- Treasury Board, possible amendments to Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, government position, qu, 1041
- Veterans affairs, Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, m to provide site for memorial, 176
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 75

Correctional service

- Incidence of tuberculosis in Ontario penitentiaries, government position, qu, 1239, (r) 1550
- Kingston Prison for Women, brutal conduct of emergency response team towards inmates, government position, qu, 1253
- Referral of tuberculosis problem in penitentiaries to Minister of Health, government position, qu, 1239-40, (r) 1550-51
- Use of male emergency response team to strip-search inmates at Kingston prison for women, government position, st, 1236

Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories, Transfer of Offenders amendment bill C-45. 1r, 2068; 2r, 2100-03, 2119-21; ref to com, 2121; rep without amdt but with one observation, 2436-37; 3r, 2467; r.a., chap. 42, 1995, 2546

- Child sexual offenders, 2101
- Detention, 2101, 2102
- Inmates' earnings towards room and board, 2102
- National Parole Board, credibility and accountability, 2102
- Residency requirements for high-risk offenders, 2102
- Sentences for multiple terms, 2102
- "Serious harm", 2101
- Treatment programs for sexual offenders, 2101

Speakers: Senators

- Balfour, R. James, 2119-20
- Pearson, Landon, 2100-03, 2120, 2121

Cory, Hon. Peter de C., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal Assent, 478, 664, 837, 2056-57, 2240

Court Challenges Program, reinstatement, congratulations to the government, st, 870

Criminal Code amendment bill C-72. 1r, 1924; 2r, 1944-45; ref to com, 1945; rep without amdt, 1979; 3r, 2019; r.a., chap. 32, 1995, 2057

- Defence of drunkenness, 1944, 1945

Speakers: Senators

- Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 1945
- Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 1944-45

Criminal Code amendment bill S-13. 1r, 2371; 2r, 2407-10

False accusations, 2408
 False affidavits, 2408
 Integrity, 2407, 2408
 Judicial privileges, 2407, 2409, 2410

Speaker: Senator
 Cools, Anne C., 2407-10

Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6. 1r, 919;

2r, 956-59, 975-76, 987-88; point of order, 988;
 2r (con't), 1012-14, 1044-46; ref to com, 1046

Abortion, 1013
 Daviault case, 956, 957, 958, 1044, 1045
 Infanticide, 1013
 Intent, 956, 957, 1044
 Parliament as lawmakers, 976
 Penalty, 958
 Prohibited acts, 958
 Prostitution, 1013
 Reckless conduct causing harm, 1045
 Self-induced intoxication, 1044, 1045
 Sexual assault, 1013
 "Sixteen Days of Activism Against Gender Violence", 1012
 Social consensus, 957, 976
 Spousal abuse, 1013
 Supreme Court rulings, 956, 957, 958, 975, 1012, 1013
 Violence against women, 1012, 1045
 Voluntary intoxication, 958
 Women as victims, 1013
 Zero tolerance, 1012

Speakers: Senators

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 987
 Berntson, Eric Arthur, 988
 Cohen, Erminie J., 1012-14
 Corbin, Eymard G., 975-76, 988
 Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 956-59, 988
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 987, 988
 Petten, William J., 988
 Stewart, John B., 988

Criminal Code amendment (plea bargaining) bill S-15. 1r, 2487Criminal Code amendment (sentencing) bill C-41. 1r, 1796;

2r, 1825-28, 1870-73; ref to com, 1873; rep without amdt, 1923; 3r, 1923; r.a., chap. 22, 1995, 2056

Conditional sentence, 1827
 Fines, 1827
 Hate-motivated crime, 1826
 Incarceration rate, 1871
 Principles of sentencing, 1825
 Purpose of sentencing, 1825, 1826
 Reparation, 1827
 Restitution, 1827
 Sexual orientation, 1826, 1872, 1873
 Violence against women, 1825

Speakers: Senators

Bacon, Lise, 1825-28
 Di Nino, Consiglio, 1872
 Jessiman, Duncan J., 1870-73

Criminal Code, amendments to sentencing provisions, st, 1180-81Criminal Code, bill to amend sentencing provisions, presentation of petition, 1958Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8.

1r, 332; 2r, 360-65; ref to com, 365; rep without amdt,
 451; 3r, 451; r.a., chap. 12, 1994, 478

Coastal fisheries protection, 360, 363, 365
 Consultation paper, Department of Justice, 361

Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment—Cont'd

Deadly force, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364
 Disabling force, 362, 363
 Fleeing suspect, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364
 Felonies, 361
 International law, 365
 Peace officers working in penitentiaries, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364
 Police, 361

Speakers: Senators

Frith, Royce, 360-63, 365
 Jessiman, Duncan J., 363-65
 Kinsella, Noël A., 363

Criminal Code, Young Offenders amendment bill C-104. 1r, 1924;

2r, 1949-51; ref to com, 1951; rep without amdt but with one observation, 1980; 3r, 1995; r.a., chap. 27, 1995,
 2056

Bodily substances, 1949, 1950, 1951
 "Designated offenses", 1949-50
 Disposal of substances and results, 1950
 Privacy, 1950
 Young offenders, 1950

Speakers: Senators

Graham, B. Alasdair, 1995
 Kinsella, Noël A., 1950-51
 Losier-Cool, Rose-Marie, 1949-50

Criminal Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-42. 1r, 855-56; 2r, 883-87;

ref to com, 887; rep with six amds, 1096; rep adopted, 1096-97; 3r, 1097; concurrence by Commons in Senate
 amds, 1131; r.a., chap. 44, 1994, 1177

Affidavit, 883, 886
 Arrest and interim release scheme, 884
 Arrest warrant by coroner, 884
 Bail dealt by telephone, 884
 Closed-circuit television, 883, 885
 Crime, increasing and unreported, 883
 Criminal courts, 883
 DNA registry, 886
 Eight-day remand rule, 883
 Pretrial detention, 884
 Pretrial proceedings, publicity, 884
 Pretrial proceedings by video, 886
 Privacy of witnesses, 884
 Protecting victims of violence, 884
 Publishing judicial proceedings, 884
 Raising monetary limit for theft, 886
 Statements videotaped, 886
 Supreme Court, workload, 885
 Uniform Law Conference of Canada, 883, 885

Speakers: Senators

Desmarais, Jean Noël, 885-86
 Lewis, P. Derek, 883-85
 Molgat, Gildas L., 887

Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment bill C-4. 1r, 353;

2r, 381-82, 402-03; ref to com, 403; bill withdrawn from com and ref to another, m adopted, 407; rep without amdt, 450; 3r, 450-51; r.a., chap. 11, 1994, 478

Americas free trade agreement, 403
 North American Agreement on Environmental Cooperation, 381,
 403
 North American Agreement on Labour Cooperation, 381, 403
 Panel determination, 402
 Side agreements, 402, 403
 Tri-national panels, 381, 382

Speakers: Senators

Carney, Pat, 402-03
 Lewis, P. Derek, 381-82
 Molgat, Gildas L., 407

Crow's Nest Pass, elimination of crow rate, government policy, 621-22

Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93. 1r, 2152; 2r, 2182-83; ref to com, 2183; rep without amdt, 2246; 3r, 2272; r.a., chap. 38, 1995, 2410

Appeal mechanism, 2182

Appeal percentage, 2183

Average annual dollar value of gifts, 2183

Criteria for evaluation, 2183

Speakers: Senators

Kirby, Michael, 2182

Spivak, Mira, 2182-83

Stewart, John B., 2183

Culture in Canada

See State of culture in Canada

Customs, Canadian pilots, clearance procedures at Mirabel Airport, qu, 914, (r) 1187-88

Customs, Customs Tariff amendment bill C-102. 1r, 2153; 2r, 2180-82; ref to com, 2182; rep without amdt, 2370; 3r, 2385; r.a., chap. 41, 1995, 2411

Duty deferral programs, 2180, 2181

"Duty drawback", 2180

Manufacturing inputs, 2180, 2181

Travellers' exemptions, 2180, 2181

Valuation rules, 2181

Speakers: Senators

Bolduc, Roch, 2181-82

Hervieux-Payette, Céline, 2180-81

Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5. 1r, 184; 2r, 225-27; ref to com, 227; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 287-88; r.a., chap. 3, 1994, 298

General Preferential Tariff, 225, 226, 287

Imports, 225

Speakers: Senators

Kirby, Michael, 287-88

Lavoie-Roux, Thérèse, 226

Lynch-Staunton, John, 226

Stratton, Terry, 226

Thériault, L. Norbert, 225-26

Davey, Hon. Keith

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report

26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2450-52

Communications, Canadian magazine industry, proposed split-run enforcement measures, st, 279

Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2510

Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 843

Lang, Hon. Daniel A., tributes on retirement, 615

Mass media, existing principles of journalism, movement to abolish, st, 1486

Tributes on twenty-eighth anniversary of appointment to Senate, st, 159

David, Hon. Paul (retired Dec.25/94)

Tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1158-62

Davies, the late Robertson W., tributes, 2395-96

De Bané, P.C., Hon. Pierre

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 142-43

Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1453, 1455-56, 1476, 1477

Appropriation No. 1, 1995-96 bill C-80, 1458, 1478

Canada Council, closure of Art Bank, inquiry, 1974-75

De Bané, P.C., Hon. Pierre—Cont'd

Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report tabled, 911, 937-40

CN Commercialization bill C-89, 1914-15

Buying shares, 1914-15

Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2521-23

British Columbia, 2523

First ministers conference, 2523

General amending formula, 2522

Regional veto, 2522

Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2563-65

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment bill C-3, 222-23

Capping, 223

Ceiling, 223

Equalization program, 222, 223

Five-province standard measures, 223

Five-year renewal, 223

Program floors, 223

"Tax-back issue", 223

Tax base changes, 223

International Assembly of French-speaking Parliamentarians, meeting of Executive and Committee on Parliamentary Affairs held in Bamako, Mali, on March 6 and 7, 1995, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 1547

Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, 1938-40, 1942

Assad plan, 1939-40

Compensation, 1938, 1939

Double dipping, 1938, 1939

Minimum age, 1939

National Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report 1st, presented and adopted, 159-60

National Library amendment bill C-26, 528-29, 530

Book deposit regulations, 528

Federal government publications, 529

Fine for non-compliance, 528

Legal deposit, 528, 529

National Archives, 529

Quebec publishers, 529

Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1395

Defence

Acquisition of nuclear-powered submarines, government position, qu, 1634

Lobbyists involved in acquisition, request for particulars, qu, 1634, 1993, (r) 2367

Protection of Arctic sovereignty, government position, qu, 1634

Reasons for acquisition of Upholder Class submarines, government position, qu, 1633-34, (r) 2364

Safety of Sea King helicopters, government position, qu, 2069

Delayed Answers, 955, 1616, 1928

Delayed Answers to Oral Questions, 972, 986, 1011, 1041, 1087, 1111, 1136, 1169, 1187, 1205, 1303, 1341, 1360, 1377, 1473, 1503, 1534, 1549, 1588, 1600, 1636, 1684, 1693, 1709, 1717, 1744, 1779, 1805, 2070, 2091

Request for answers, 915, 1685-86

Desmarais, Hon. Jean Noël (deceased July 26/95)

Criminal Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-42, 885-86

Affidavits, 886

Closed-circuit television, 885

DNA registry, 886

Pretrial procedures by video, 886

Raising monetary limit for theft, 886

Statements to be videotaped, 886

Supreme Court, workload, 885

- Desmarais, Hon. Jean Noël—Cont'd
 Criminal Law Amendment—Cont'd
 Uniform Law Conference of Canada, 885
 Health care, training of workers in underserved regions, inquiry, 600, 647-49
 Family practice specialty, 648
 General practitioners, 647
 General surgeons, 647
 Medical superspecialization, 647
 Northern medical centre, 649
 Paramedical and nurse practitioners, 648
 Senate, expression of thanks, st. 626
 Tributes, 2060-62
- Department of Agriculture amendment bill C-49. 1r, 871; 2r, 904-06; ref to com, 906; rep without amdt, 937; 3r, 937; r.a., chap. 38, 1994, 989
 Agri-food packaging and labelling, 905
 Annual report, 905, 906
 Change in name, 904, 905
 Clarification of mandate, 905
 Experimental farm stations, 905
 New responsibilities, 904, 905
 Power to designate inspectors, 905
 Redress procedure, 905
Speakers: Senators
 Hays, Dan, 937
 Olson, H.A., 904-05, 937
 Rossiter, Eileen, 905-06
- Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53. 1r, 1182; 2r, 1216-19, 1229-30; ref to com, 1230; rep without amdt but with one observation, 1529; 3r, 1529; r.a., chap. 11, 1995, 1793
 Alternative television service, 1217
 Annual report, 1229
 Amalgamation of departments, 1217
 Canadian flag, 1216
 Citizenship, 1218, 1229, 1230
 Copyright, 1217
 Diversity, 1218
 Fee structures, 1217
 Information Highway Council, 1217
 Integration, 1218
 Multiculturalism, 1216, 1218, 1230
 Parks and natural resources, 1230
 Racism, 1230
 Social cohesion, 1218
 Tourism, 1217
Speakers: Senators
 Bosa, Peter, 1218
 Haidasz, Stanley, 1216-17, 1218, 1219
 Kinsella, Noël A., 1217-18, 1229-30
- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35. 1r, 761; 2r, 761-63; ref to Committee of the Whole, 763; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Mr. Bob Blackburn, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Citizenship and Mr. D. Martin Low, Senior General Counsel, taking part in the debate, 765-68; rep without amdt, 769; 3r, 769; r.a., chap. 31, 1994, 773
 Backlog, 762
 Citizenship ceremonies, 762
 Responsibilities of new department, 762
Speakers: Senators
 Bosa, Peter, 761-63, 766, 767, 768, 769
 Di Nino, Consiglio, 763, 766, 767, 768
 Fairbairn, Joyce, 765
 Kinsella, Noël A., 763, 766, 767, 768
- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35—Cont'd
 and witnesses in Committee of the Whole
 Blackburn, Bob, 765
 Low, D. Martin, 765
- Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47. 1r, 1182; 2r, 1220-21, 1244; ref to com, 1244; rep without amdt, 1355-56; 3r, 1378-81; r.a., chap. 5, 1995, 1446
 International organizations, 1220
 Name change, 1221, 1244
 Spending estimates, 1379, 1380
Speakers: Senators
 Bolduc, Roch, 1378-79, 1380-81
 Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1220-21
 Graham, B. Alasdair, 1378
 Prud'homme, Marcel, 1380, 1381
 Stewart, John B., 1379-80
- Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1601
- Department of Industry bill C-46. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1112-14; ref to com, 1114; rep without amdt, 1181; 3r, 1206; r.a., chap. 1, 1995, 1334
 Aboriginal business, 1114
 Annual report, 1114
 Business network, 1112
 Canada Community Investment Fund, 1112
 Consumer policy, 1113
 Director of investment, 1113
 Federal Business Development Bank, 1112
 Federal regional development, 1113
 Fees, 1114
 Information highway, 1113
 Technology Partnership Program, 1112
 Tourism, 1114
Speakers: Senators
 Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1114
 Kirby, Michael, 1112-14
- Department of Labour amendment bill C-30. 1r, 688; 2r, 715-17; ref to com, 717; rep without amdt, 757; 3r, 757; r.a., chap. 30, 1994, 773
 Additional funding from province, 717
 Adjustment payments, 716
 Atlantic Groundfish Adjustment Program, 715
 Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, 715
 Eligibility for benefits, 716
 Fish Plant Older Worker Adjustment Program, 715
 Labour adjustment, 715
 Northern Cod Adjustment Recovery Program, 715
 Unemployment in Newfoundland and Labrador, 716
Speakers: Senators
 Bonnell, M. Lorne, 715-17
 Stanbury, Richard J., 757
- Department of National Revenue amendment bill C-2. 1r, 332; 2r, 383-85; ref to com, 385; rep without amdt, 435; 3r, 456; r.a., chap. 13, 1994, 478
 Auditing, 383
 Consolidation of two departments, 383, 384
 Customs officials, mandate and terms of reference, 383
 Elimination of duplication, 383
 International trade, 384
 Security at border crossings, 384
 Tax collection, 383
 Unionized employees, 384, 385
Speakers: Senators
 Kirby, Michael, 383-84, 385
 Simard, Jean-Maurice, 384-85

Department of Natural Resources bill C-48. 1r. 984; 2r. 997-1001; ref to com. 1001; rep without amdt. 1018; 3r. 1018; r.a., chap. 41, 1994, 1177

Amalgamation, 997
Greenhouse gas emissions, 998
Sustainable development, 998

Speakers: Senators
Berntson, Eric Arthur, 998-1001
Kenny, Colin, 997-98

Deputy Leader of the Opposition
Berntson, Hon. Eric Arthur

Deputy Leaders of the Government
Graham, Hon. B. Alisdair
Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.

DeWare, Hon. Mabel M.

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 191-93
Budget, New Brunswick, effect of changes to unemployment insurance, government position, qu, 188, (r) 308-09
Christmas Greetings, st, 1162
Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2062
Goods and Services Tax, removal of tax on reading materials, government position, qu, 1213-14
LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 967
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2337-38
Registration, 2337
Literacy, authenticity of kits released, government position, qu, 1891-92
Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-40, 705
Transport, New Brunswick rail service, inquiry, 933, 961-62
Cuts to VIA Rail, 961
Dayliner from Saint John to Moncton, 962
Discount on adult fares, 961

Diefenbaker, the late Rt. Hon. John George
One hundredth anniversary of birthday, st, 2087-89

Di Nino, Hon. Consiglio

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report
13th, state of Canadian financial system, 956, 1008, 1009, 1046-48, 1049-50
Co-insurance, 1046, 1047, 1048, 1050
Consumer protection, 1046
Deposit insurance, 1046
Loans to Third World countries, 1048
Market discipline, 1047
Regulation, 1048, 1049, 1050
Risk-based schemes, 1047
Stacking, 1046
Superintendent of Financial Institutions, 1048, 1049
Budget
Removal of tax credit, effect on seniors, qu, 136, 137
Business of the Senate, adjournment, 764
Canada-China relations
Diplomatic representations to China on sixth anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, request for information, qu, 1691
Human rights in China and Tibet, m, 1297-98, 1483-84, 1563
Human rights issues, government position, st, 247
Protest over granting of visa to Taiwanese official, government position, qu, 1691, (r) 2047
Representations on human rights abuses in China and Tibet, presentation of petition, 880-81
Validity of statement on freedom of religion in Tibet, government position, qu, 1692, (r) 2153-54
Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2612-13

Di Nino, Hon. Consiglio—Cont'd

Constitutional implications of unilateral provincial attempt to declare sovereignty or separation, inquiry, 1050
Convention of World Parliamentarians on Tibet, second conference held in Vilnius, Lithuania, st, 1976-77
Criminal Code amendment (sentencing) bill C-41, 1872
Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35, 763, 766, 767, 768
Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
Empowered to permit coverage of meetings by electronic media, 1294
Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee report
3rd, extension of report date, 1002
Forum for Young Canadians, st, 1371
Government of Canada, human rights policies, inquiry, 790-92
China, 790, 791, 792
Five-point peace plan, 790
Tiananmen Square, 790, 791
Tibet, 790
Health
Impact of changes to tobacco taxes, inquiry, 161, 266, 317-19, 524, 525
Additives in cigarettes, 319
Anti-smoking campaign, 524, 525
Anti-smuggling, 317, 318
Cigarette smoking, 317
Fine for selling tobacco illegally, 317
Health costs, 317, 318
Legal age for purchasing cigarettes, 317
Organized crime, 318
Plain packaging for tobacco products, 319
Tobacco smuggling, 318
Underground economy, 318
Human rights
China
5th anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, st, 543-44
6th anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, st, 1689
Nigeria, execution of Ogoni activists, possible restoration of democracy, government position, qu, 2318, 2319
Sale of arms to Thailand, government position, qu, 1087, (r) 1190
Tibet, installation by Chinese of Panchen Lama, st, 2499
Visit of federal commissioner to China, remarks reported in media, government position, qu, 2490
Immigration
Appointment of impartial members to Immigration and Refugee Board, government position, qu, 951, 952
Capping of family reunification quotas, government position, qu, 952
Deportation of member of terrorist organization, declaration of Federal Court of Canada, qu, 2250-51
Immigration and Refugee Board
Qualifications of new executive director, government position, qu, 1359, (r) 1551
Review of policy and appointment process, government position, qu, 1097-98
Imposition of right of landing fee, effect on poor immigrants, st, 1296
Reduction in numbers of immigrants, government position, qu, 952
Reduction of business class component, government position, qu, 46, (r) 114-15
Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44, 1241-44, 1782-84
Appeals, 1783
Borders, 1241
Contraband, 1782
Day passes, 1782
Deportation, 1243
Due process, right, 1783
Enforcement, 1241, 1242, 1782, 1783
15-day period, 1783

Di Nino, Hon. Consiglio—Cont'd

Immigration, Citizenship—Cont'd

Fraudulent documents, 1782, 1783

Illegal immigration, 1242

National security, 1241

Report to Parliament, 1783

Temporary release, 1782

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, policy on administration of inter-parliamentary activities, equality between Houses of Parliament, 1134, 1135, 1136

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee

Reports

Senate budget 1994-95, 89

13th, Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1082, 1124

14th, Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders budget, 1083, adopted, 1124

15th, Budget for CSCE Parliamentary Assembly, 1083, adopted, 1125

16th, Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide supplementary budget, 1083, adopted, 1125

17th, Parliamentary Associations, 1231

21st, Senate Estimates, 1995-96, 1507-08

22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1603, 1604, 1607

27th, Aboriginal Peoples Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

28th, Agriculture and Forestry Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

29th, Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

30th, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

31st, National Finance Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

32nd, Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

33rd, Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

34th, Library of Parliament Joint Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

35th, Scrutiny of Regulations Joint Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

36th, Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

37th, Transport and Communications Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

38th, Official Languages Joint Committee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

39th, Veterans Affairs Subcommittee budget, 1774

See Journals of the Senate

International trade, Pearson Airport agreements, meeting of minister with British counterpart, request for particulars, qu, 1586, (r) 1779

Justice, sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government, numbers of RCMP investigations publicized, request for particulars, qu, 2250

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

Instructing com to table final report re C-69, 2278

Report

16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2292-93

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee report

10th, Supplementary Estimates (B) and (C), 1994-95, 1077

Supplementary Estimates for the Senate, 1077

Di Nino, Hon. Consiglio—Cont'd

Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 769-70, 823, 824-25

Inquiry, 769

Public Works

Decision of Minister to build new federal building in Sault Ste. Marie, request for details of contract, qu, 1187, (r) 1536

Future of Harbourfront Centre, inquiry, 1529, withdrawn, 1569

Harbourfront, Toronto, closing due to funding cuts, government position, qu, 1533

Renovation of windows at Lester B. Pearson Building, cancellation of contract, government position, qu, 1532, (r) 1694

Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee report, 1245-46, 1247

Senate, absence of approval for various projects, 1052, 1053

Solicitor General, efficacy of security arrangements at residence of Prime Minister, request for results of investigation, qu, 2270, 2271

Transport

Application of International Civil Aviation Organization Standards at smaller airports, government position, qu, 1520, (r) 1685

Pearson Airport Agreements

Request for copies of all material or information on which Mr. Nixon based his report, qu, 1492

Transport Canada study, request for particulars, qu, 1491, (r) 1538

Removal of emergency response capability from smaller airports, government position, qu, 1520, (r) 1685

Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, 1866-70

Community policing, 1869

Custody, 1868

Operation Springboard, 1866, 1869

Violent crime, 1866, 1867

Youth gangs, 1867

Yukon First Nations Land Claims Settlement bill C-33, 786

Distinguished visitors, seminar, Canadian parliamentary system, st, 542Doody, Hon. C. William

Appropriation No. 1, 1994-95 bill C-20, 274

Appropriation No. 2, 1994-95 bill C-39, 633, 739

Appropriation No. 3, 1994-95 bill C-63, 1099

Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1456, 1457, 1492

Appropriation No. 1, 1995-96 bill C-80, 1458, 1478

Appropriation No. 2, 1995-96 bill C-97, 1752

Atlantic Canada, dependence on Scotia Synfuels project, reinstatement of special investment tax credit, government position, 187

Auditor General amendment bill C-207, 628

Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, 291, 292, 293, 295, 296, 297

Deficit, 292

Tax increases, 292

Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73, 1480-81

Exchange fund revenue, 1480

Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 531, 532, 631

Benefit entitlement schedule, 631

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 631, 632

Cap on CAP, 631

Deficit, 632

Entrance requirement, 631

Freeze on public service salaries, 631

Reduction in railway subsidies, 631

Unemployment insurance schedule, 631

WGTA payments, 632

Budget, unemployment insurance, change in duration of claims, government position, qu, 163-64

Doody, Hon. C. William—Cont'd

- Business of the Senate, 138, 139, 1476
- Canadian Coast Guard, search and rescue operations, state of helicopter fleet, qu, 45
- Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 660, 662
- Canadian Heritage, actions of Film Review Board on adult films, government position, qu, 1452, (r) 1693-94
- Commonwealth Parliamentary Association
 - Bilateral visit to Britain and Northern Ireland, rep of Canadian delegation tabled, 25
 - Thirty-ninth Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference, Limassol, Cyprus, rep tabled, 25
 - Thirty-third Regional Conference, Ottawa, rep tabled, 25
 - Visit by Canadian Branch to Hong Kong, rep tabled, 1678
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - 22nd, m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1507
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 789
- Lobbyists Registration bill, ref to Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, adopted, 1677
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1439
- National Finance Committee
 - Authority to engage services of personnel, 92, 130
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 585, 665, 688
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 92
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Supplementary Estimates (B) 1993-94, 248, adopted, 272-73
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 3rd, Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment bill C-3, 248
 - 4th, Supplementary Estimates (A), 1994-95, 600, adopted, 624-25
 - Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, 624
 - Bonus, 624
 - Employment and Insurance Program, 624
 - Mobility assistance, 624
 - Weekly benefit rates, 624
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 5th, Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 618
 - 6th, Interim, Estimates, 1994-95, 627, 655-57, 739
 - Interest rates, 656
 - Military colleges, consolidation, 657
 - Post-secondary military education, 656
 - Report of the Ministerial Committee on the Canadian Military Colleges, 656
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 7th, National Library amendment bill C-26, 654
 - 8th, Auditor General amendment bill C-207, without amdt, 727
 - 9th, Canada Student Finance Assistance bill C-28, without amdt, 743
 - 10th, Supplementary Estimates (B) and (C), 1994-95, 1056, 1075-76, 1077
 - Supplementary Estimates for the Senate, 1077
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 11th, Supplementary Estimates (D) 1994-95, 1450, 1476-77
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 12th, Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73, 1487
- Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54, 1890
- Precincts of Parliament
 - Authority to initiate project, st, 1132
 - Tunnel between East Block and Centre Block, request for information, qu, 1166-67

Doody, Hon. C. William—Cont'd

- Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick William, tribute, 684
- Transport
 - Reliability of Labrador helicopters on search and rescue missions, government position, qu, 604, (r) 836
 - Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet, government position, request for answer, qu, 882

Doyle, Hon. Richard J.

- Aird, Q.C., the late Hon. John Black, tributes, 1596-97
- Budget, closure and future use of Downsview Military base, government position, qu, 238-39, (r) 324
 - See appendix p. 331A
- Canada-China relations, human rights and commercial relations, government policy, qu, 1691-92, (r) 2154-55
- Citizenship and immigration, review of refugee status claimants, government position, qu, 501, (r) 833-34
- Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean, forty-second anniversary of visit by the Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, st, 896
- Davies, the late Robertson W., tribute, 2396
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 - National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 388-89
- Foreign Affairs
 - New directives on foreign service travel directives, request for particulars, qu, 1681, (r) 2073-74
 - Report of Auditor General on foreign service travel directives, government position, qu, 1681, (r) 2073
- Government services, refusal of airlines to negotiate discounts with Government of Canada, qu, 1709
- Health, reorganization of blood supply system
 - Government position, qu, 1803, (r) 2079
 - Timing of final report of Krever Commission, government position, qu, 2365
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee reports
 - Senate budget 1994-95, 59-61
 - 13th, Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1082
 - 21st, Re-examination of Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1461
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, policy on administration of inter-parliamentary activities, equality between Houses of Parliament, 1135
- Justice, Criminal Code, proposed revisions to accommodate cultural differences, qu, 914
- Justice, sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government, rank of RCMP officers engaged in investigation, qu, 2349-50, (r) 2558
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2294
 - Prestudy of bills, 2294
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 981
- Mass media, existing principles of journalism, movement to abolish, st, 1486
- Metropolitan Toronto
 - National Forum on Health, lack of representation of region, government position, qu, 903
 - Proposals for Social Reform, lack of representation on working group, government position, qu, 902-03, (r) 1228-29
- National Forum on Health
 - Appointment of representative from Metropolitan Toronto, st, 1449-50
 - Request for particulars on expenses, budgets and contracts, qu, 1453, (r) 1553-54
- National Library amendment bill C-26, 529-30
 - Deposit, 530
 - Fine for non-compliance, 530
- National Unity, reflections on referendums and promises, st, 2166
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2040
- Precincts of Parliament
 - Cancellation of East Block Tunnel project, request for information, qu, 1549, (r) 1694
 - Proposed renovations, government position, qu, 452-53, (r) 974

Doyle, Hon. Richard J.—Cont'dPrecincts of Parliament—Cont'd

- Proposed renovations to East and Centre Blocks, government position, qu, 306-07, (r) 974
- Tunnel between East Block and Centre Block, request for information, qu, 1166, (r) 1535
- Public Works, renovation of East Block, Senate input, government position, qu, 187, (r) 972-74
- Question of Privilege (Hon. Sen. Cools), m pursuant to Rule 44, 2107
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee report, 1246

Senate

- Absence of approval for various projects, inquiry, 994, 1051-52, 1053
 - Abbott Commission, 1051
 - East Block renovation, 1051, 1053
 - Senate's right to be informed, 1052
 - "The Long-Term Construction Project", 1051
- Civic contributions of members past and present, st, 2130-31
- South Africa, free and democratic elections, monitoring by Canadian delegation, qu, 399-400
- Spicer, Erik J., Esq., tribute on retirement as Parliamentary Librarian and designation as Parliamentary Librarian Emeritus, 278
- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1427
- Wars and remembrances, fiftieth anniversary of the victory in Europe, st, 1582-83

Economy

- Budget paper produced by Reform Party, st, 1235-36
- Creation of jobs for women through infrastructure program, request for particulars, qu, 1716, (r) 2074-75
- Effect of taxation on standard of living, st, 109
- Expected increase in debt service costs, government position, qu, 1109
- Failure of infrastructure program to create jobs, government position, qu, 1714-15
- Market factors affecting foreign investors, government position, qu, 1225
- Partisan nature of the Opposition in the Senate, qu, 1226
- Possibility of accelerated deficit reduction, government position, qu, 1226-27
- Possible redemption of Canada Savings Bonds, government position, qu, 1109
- Reduction in federal deficit, st, 1210
- Target for reduction of deficit, government position, qu, 1224-25
- Unacceptable level of unemployment, government position, qu, 1713-14
- Underground labour market, loss of tax dollars, government policy, qu, 98, (r) 220-21

Elections Canada

- Electoral Boundaries Commissions, introduction of new legislation, request for pre-study, qu, 1039
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, introduction of suspension bill, effect on commissions in each province, qu, 321
- Electoral boundaries readjustment process
 - Extension of deadline, request for particulars, qu, 2251-52
 - Transmission of maps by Chief Electoral Officer, request for information, qu, 1891
- Readjustment of electoral boundaries based on 1991 census, government position, qu, 1039

Electoral Boundaries Commission

- Revisions to riding boundaries, status of hearings, qu, 284
- Suspension of operation under proposed legislation
 - Government position, qu, 251-52
 - Proposed use of closure, government position, qu, 283-84

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69.

- 1r, 1547; 2r, 1555-61; ref to com, 1561; rep with 7 amdts, 1725-27, adopted on div, 1730-35; 3r, on div, 1735; message from Commons agreeing with 1 amdt and disagreeing with others, 1836; m to concur with message from Commons, 1837-38; vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1844-47; Speaker's ruling, 1847; vote deferred on m to adjourn debate (con't), 1847-52; point of order, 1896-903; Speaker's ruling, 1913; m to concur with message from Commons, Speaker's statement, 1913; m to adjourn debate, adopted on div, 1913-14; m to concur with message from Commons, 1964-65; m to refer question and message from Commons to com, adopted, 1965-69; rep from com, 1979-80, 2019-24; m in amdt, 2024-30; neg on div, 2030-31; m in amdt, neg on div, 2031-36; rep adopted, on div, 2036-37; m instructing com to table final report, 2166, 2185-89; allotment of time for debate, 2201; m instructing com to table final report (con't), 2235-36, 2262, 2272-78; vote deferred, 2278; neg on div, 2290-91; m instructing com to table final rep no later than December 13, 1995, 2399, 2423; point of order, 2423-28; Speaker's ruling, 2428-29; m (con't), 2429, 2444-46; vote deferred, 2470; m neg on div, 2483-84

Alternate maps, 1557, 1559

Appointment of commissions, 1557, 1559

Boundaries commissions, 1556

Constituency boundaries, 1558

Creation of ridings, 1557

Criteria, 1560

Decennial redistributions, 1557

Elimination of parliamentary stage, 1559

Equality of voting power, 1558, 1560, 1561

House of Commons growth, 1561

Lortie Commission, 1555

Operation of commissions, 1559

Public hearings, 1557, 1559

Public participation, 1557, 1559

Quinquennial readjustments, 1557, 1559

Redistribution process, 1558, 1560

Revision process, 1558

Scrutiny by parliamentary committee, 1558

Transparency, 1559

25 per cent maximum tolerance, 1560, 1561

24-month suspension, 1556

Speakers: Senators

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 1725-26, 1897, 1900, 2020, 2022-23

Carstairs, Sharon, 1555-58, 1731-33, 1735, 1848-49, 1899, 1900, 1967-68, 2021, 2023-25

Cools, Anne C., 2185, 2186

Fairbairn, Joyce, 1965-66, 2032-33, 2185, 2186-89

Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 1901

Graham, B. Alasdair, 1837, 1844, 1845-46, 1847-48, 1852, 1896-97, 2020, 2036

Kelly, William M., 2021

Kinsella, Noël A., 1852

Lewis, P. Derek, 2031-32

Lynch-Staunton, John, 1847, 1896, 1900, 1901, 1966-67, 2021, 2022, 2025-27, 2032

Murray, Lowell, 1558-61, 1726, 1727, 1730-31, 1844-45, 1851-52, 1964-65, 1968, 2020, 2029

Nolin, Pierre Claude, 1733, 1898, 1899-900, 1903, 2189

Olson, H.A., 1897-98

Phillips, Orville H., 1899

Prud'homme, Marcel, 1725, 1726-27, 1733-35, 1901-03, 1968-69, 2021-22, 2029-30, 2034-35, 2189

St. Germain, Gerry, 1899

Stanbury, Richard J., 1849-51, 1901, 2027-29

Stewart, John B., 1846-47, 1898, 1899

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, future of bill C-18, qu, 516-17

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994

British Columbia, concerns of constituents, st, 393-94, 394
Constituencies, provinces, and municipalities, process of consultation, government position, qu, 358-59

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18.

1r, 302; 2r, 310-15, 325-26, 336-50; ref to com, 350; rep with amdts, 420-21, 439-41, 485-98, m in amdt, neg on div, 498-99, rep adopted on div, 499-500; 3r, on div, 500; message from Commons concurring in two amdts and amending one amdt, 619; concurrence in Commons amdt, 619, 633-39; r.a., chap. 19, 1994, 664

Alberta, 336, 338

Allocation of seats among provinces, 311

British Columbia, 339, 340

Constitutionality of bill, 312

Constituency boundaries, 311, 313

Decennial census, 311, 313

Electoral boundaries commissions, 311, 312, 313, 345

Criteria to set boundaries, 312

Equality of voting power, 313, 336, 337, 339, 342

Formula for determining number of seats, 311

Impartiality, 336

Increase in members of House of Commons, 312

Partisanship, 336, 338

Proportionate representation, 313

Readjustment of boundaries, 311, 312

Redistribution process, 311, 313, 314, 337, 341, 344, 345, 346, 347

Representation by population, 312, 336, 337, 342

Role of Senate, 341, 348

Royal Commission on Electoral Reform (Lortie), 311, 314, 343, 346, 348

Size of House of Commons, 349, 350

Timeframe for readjustment, 312, 314

See Journals of the Senate

Speakers: Senators

Austin, Jack, 495

Beaudoin, Gérard-A., 439-40

Bosa, Peter, 498

Carney, Pat, 339-41, 347-48, 486, 491-94, 495, 497

Fairbairn, Joyce, 485-89, 633-35, 639

Frith, Royce, 440-41, 485, 487, 490, 494, 498

Ghitter, Ron, 336-38

Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 490

Lewis, P. Derek, 310-12

Lynch-Staunton, John, 341-42, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 440, 441, 487, 489-91, 497, 498, 637-39

MacDonald, Finlay, 639

Molgat, Gildas L., 342, 343, 344, 345-46, 347, 348, 441, 498, 500

Murray, Lowell, 312-14, 315, 344, 345, 346, 498, 635-37

Nolin, Pierre Claude, 325-26

Perrault, Raymond J., 488, 493, 494-95

Prud'homme, Marcel, 348-50, 496

St. Germain, Gerry, 497

Stewart, John B., 497

Thériault, L. Norbert, 493, 497

Employment equity bill C-64. 1r, 2117; 2r, 2134-36, 2157-59; ref to com, 2159; rep with amdts, 2316; m in amdt, ref back to com, 2385, 2385-86; rep modified, rep without amdt, 2468-69; 3r, 2493-96; r.a., chap. 44, 1995, 2546

Aboriginal people, 2134, 2157, 2158

Canadian Human Rights Commission, 2135, 2136, 2158

Consultation, 2135

Disabled, 2134, 2157, 2158

Discrimination, 2134

Downsizing, 2159

Enforcement, 2135

Employment equity bill C-64—Cont'd

Human Rights Tribunal panel, 2135, 2136

"Merit system", 2159

"Numerical" goals, 2158

Parliament as an employer, 2158

Persons with disabilities, 2494

Quotas, 2135

Race Relations Foundation, 2495

Review of legislation, 2135

Visible minorities, 2134, 2157, 2494, 2495

Women, 2134, 2157, 2158

See Journals of the Senate

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, M. Lorne, 2496

Bosa, Peter, 2495, 2496

Carstairs, Sharon, 2496

Graham, B. Alasdair, 2493

Johnson, Janis, 2157-59, 2494-95

Kinsella, Noël A., 2136, 2495

Lavoie-Roux, Thérèse, 2493-94

Losier-Cool, Rose-Marie, 2134-35, 2496

Employment, fluctuations in job creation statistics, situation in Quebec, government position, qu, 2401-02

Employment, tabled, 2385

Energy

Hibernia Project, contract with Saint John shipyard, st, 1038

Proposed carbon tax, government policy, qu, 48

Scotia Synfuels project, production of synthetic fuels, st, 202

Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources, Standing Senate Committee

Authority to engage services and to travel, 353, adopted, 385

Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 1339

Authority to monitor matters related to the federal environmental assessment process, 110, adopted, 157

Automated Weather Observation Stations, authority to table interim report, adopted, 1961-62

Empowered to permit coverage of meeting by election media, 1250, adopted, 1293-94

Globe 94 Conference, Wilderness Vision Colloquium, North American Natural Gas Conference, Reports of committee tabled, 727

Jobs and the environment, authority to conduct study, 353-43, adopted, 390

Membership

See Journals of the Senate

National protected areas strategy

Authority to conduct study, 353, adopted, 386-90

Motion to extend date of final report, 2462, adopted, 2487

Reports

1st, tabled, 78

2nd, Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6, without amdt, 420

3rd, National Protected Areas Strategy, 617-18, adopted, 639

See Journals of the Senate

4th, Migratory Birds Convention, 1994 bill C-23, without amdt, 726

5th, Canada Wildlife amendment bill C-24, without amdt, 726

6th, Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25, without amdt, 871

7th, National Protected Areas Strategy interim report, tabled, 993, adopted, 1050

8th, National Protected Areas Strategy, extension of final report date, 993-94, adopted, 1050

9th, Department of Natural Resources bill C-48, without amdt, 1018

10th, Canadian Environmental Assessment amendment bill C-56, without amdt, 1163

Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources—Cont'd

Reports—Cont'd

- 11th, Alternative fuels for internal combustion engines bill S-7, 1518-19, adopted, 1538-42
 - Bronson report, 1540, 1542
 - Conversion program, 1539
 - Electrochemical source, 1541
 - Fuel cells, 1541
 - Government's fleet of vehicles, 1539, 1542
 - Legislative process, 1541
 - Surplus cars owned by government, 1541
 - United States, 1540
- Speakers: Senators
 - Hays, Dan, 1541
 - Kenny, Colin, 1538-40, 1541-42
 - Keon, Wilbert J., 1540-41
 - Kinsella, Noël A., 1541
 - Nolin, Pierre Claude, 1542
- See* Journals of the Senate
- 12th, National Protected Areas Strategy, extension of final report date, 1546-47, adopted, 1590
- 13th, Entitled "Report of the Committee's Fact-Finding Mission to Washington, D.C., March 6-9, 1995", tabled, 1760
- 14th, Travel to British Columbia, National Protected Areas Strategy, tabled, 1760
- 15th, Travel to Nova Scotia, National Protected Areas Strategy, tabled, 1760
- 16th, Alternative Fuels bill S-7, adopted, 1889
 - See* Journals of the Senate
- 17th, Automated Weather Observation Systems, interim report entitled "Pull Up! Pull Up!", tabled, 1981, 2201-02
 - Response to interim report, tabled, 2415
- 18th, Explosives amendment bill C-71, without amdt, 2174
- 19th, Auditor General amendment bill C-83, without amdt, 2461
- 20th, National Protected Areas Strategy, tabled, 2608-09

Environment

- Automation of weather stations, reliability of technology, government position, qu, 1303, (r) 1986
- Cancellation of report on state of environment, possibility of discussion on sustainable development at G-7 summit, government position, qu, 1743, (r) 2201
- Changes to weather reporting service adversely affecting rural and isolated areas, government position, qu, 1843, (r) 2557-58
- Federal management of radioactive waste material, report of Auditor General of Canada, government position, qu, 1663
- Globe '94, environmental exposition, Vancouver, st, 236
- Greenhouse gas reduction strategy, failure to reach agreement, government position, qu, 1239, (r) 1304
- International Joint Commission, recommendations on toxicity reduction in Great Lakes
 - Government position, qu, 135, (r) 308
 - Guidelines for detection apparatus, government position, qu, 356, (r) 456
- Low-level military flights over Labrador, impact on human health and wildlife, st, 1572
- Manitoba, oriented strand board plant, possibility of hearing before independent review panel, government position, qu, 1549, (r) 1694
- Oriented Strandboard plant in Saskatchewan, extension of environmental review to cover downstream effects in Manitoba, government position, qu, 1633
- Oriented Strandboard plants, cumulative effect of harvesting on boreal forests, government position, qu, 1633
- Proclamation of Environment Assessment Act, status of draft regulations, government timetable, qu, 286, (r) 402
- Reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, establishment of national standards, government position, qu, 2319

Environment—Cont'd

- Review of Canadian Environmental Protection Act, report of Commons committee, government position, qu, 2403-04
- Sagkeeng First Nation, effect of pulp mill pollution, government position, qu, 218, (r) 454-55
- St. Lawrence Vision 2000, reduction of pollution, government position, qu, 304, (r) 555
- Study of low-level military flights in Labrador, government response to criticism of process, qu, 848, (r) 1205

Environment, sustainable development, inquiry, 1237, 1622-25

- Air quality, 1624
- Cod fishery, 1625
- Global environmental crisis, 1623
- Habitat preservation, 1622
- Network of wilderness lands, 1622
- Ozone layer, 1623
- Sockeye salmon, 1625
- Sustainable harvest, 1624
- Water exports, 1624, 1625
- Water management, 1624
- Wildlife conservation, 1622
- Speaker: Senator
 - Johnson, Janis, 1237, 1622-25

Environment and conservation, inquiry, 1843, 2103-05

- Harvested trees, 2105
- Louisiana Pacific oriented strand board plant, 2105
- Soil conservation, 2104
- Sustainable development, 2103
- Toxic chemicals, 2104
- Wetland conservation, 2104
- "Zero till" farming, 2104
- Speaker: Senator
 - Johnson, Janis, 2103-05

Environment Week, m committing Senate to maximum recycling, adopted, 1677-78Environmental assessment

See Canadian environmental assessment...et cetera

Estimates, 1993-94

- Supplementary Estimates (B), tabled, 183
- Ref to com, 184, 203-04

Estimates, 1994-95, tabled, 159, ref to com, 160

- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, review of activities by National Finance Committee, qu, 165
- Authority for Standing Joint Committee on Library of Parliament to study Vote 10 of the Estimates, 184, 203
- Supplementary Estimates (A), tabled, 510, ref to com, 511
- Supplementary Estimates (B), ref to com, 911-12
- Supplementary Estimates (C), tabled, 932, ref to com, 932-33
- Supplementary Estimates (D), ref to com, 1315
- Unemployment insurance cuts, plight of lobster fishermen, qu, 166, (r) 221
- Vote ref to Library of Parliament Committee, 1315
- Vote ref to Official Languages Committee, 1315

Estimates, 1995-96, tabled, 1250, ref to com, 1250

- Supplementary Estimates (A), tabled, 2199, ref to com, 2199-200
- Vote ref to com, 2200
- Votes ref to Official Languages Committee and Library of Parliament Committee, 1315

Ethics Counsellor

Desirability of independent counsellor reporting to Parliament, government position, qu, 2382
Details of terms of reference, tabled, 852
Existence of Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, qu, 2383
Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, relevance to parliamentarians, qu, 2383-84

Ethics of government, st, 1836

Euthanasia and assisted suicide, enforcement of current Criminal Code provisions, presentation of petition, 1205

Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, Special Senate Committee

Authority to extend date of final report, 1282-83, 1585, 1678-79
Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 484, 688, 869, 1081, 1131, 1223, 1445-46, 1649, 1678
Felicitations to members on tabling of report, st, 1711
Motion to change name of committee in French, 1518, adopted, 1543

Reports

1st, budget, 547, adopted, 587
See Journals of the Senate
2nd, power to hold occasional meetings in camera, adopted, 744-45
3rd, extension of final report date, 984, adopted, as amended, 1001-03
Final, entitled "Of Life and Death", tabled, 1704-05, 1720, 1753-54, 1786-93, 1970-73, adopted, 1997-2000

Speakers: Senators

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 1753-54
Carstairs, Sharon, 1791-93
Corbin, Eymard G., 1972-73
Keon, Wilbert J., 1970-72
Lavoie-Roux, Thérèse, 1787-91
Neiman, Joan, 1704-05, 1720, 1997-2000

Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District) bill S-12, 1r, 2316; 2r, 2386; ref to com, 2386; rep with one amdt, 2436, adopted, 2458; 3r, 2458; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 2543; r.a., 2547

Speaker: Senator

Gustafson, Leonard J., 2386, 2458

Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District), presentation of petition, 2264

Everett, Hon. Douglas D. (resigned Jan. 20/94)

Resignation from Senate, announcement and tributes, 19-22

Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11, 1r, 628; 2r, 657-58, 672-73; ref to com, 673; rep without amdt, 897; 3r, 915-16; r.a., chap. 37, 1994, 989

Addictive qualities, 672
Cancer deaths, 672
Civil provisions, enforcement, 658
Clearing stocks of kiddy packs, 673
Costs of smoking, 672
Enforcement, 658
Fines for violations, 658
"Kiddy packs", 658, 672, 673
Minimum age, 658, 672
Plain packaging, 673
Seized goods, 658
Smoking-related diseases, 672
Smuggling, 658
Stamping individual cigarettes, 658
Women smokers, 672

Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons—Cont'd

Speakers: Senators

MacDonald, Finlay, 673
Olson, H.A., 657-58, 673
Spivak, Mira, 672-73, 915-16

Excise Tax amendment bill C-13, 1r, 332; 2r, 366-69; ref to com, 369; rep without amdt, 367, 396; 3r, 425; r.a., chap. 9, 1994, 478

Agricultural sector, 366
Businesses, seasonal and part-time, 366, 368
Charities, 366, 367, 368
Financial institutions, 368
Goods and Services Tax, 366, 367
Homemaker services, 366, 368
Input tax credits, 366, 367
Rabbits, 366, 367, 368
Sales tax reform, 366
Speakers: Senators
Kirby, Michael, 396
Stratton, Terry, 367-68
Thériault, L. Norbert, 366-67, 368, 369

Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90, 1r, 2118; 2r, 2136-38; ref to com, 2138; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2234; r.a., chap. 36, 1995, 2240

Air transportation, 2136, 2137
Gasoline, 2136
GST, 2138
Seizure and notification, 2136
Tobacco products, 2136, 2137
Tobacco smuggling, 2137
Speakers: Senators
Bosa, Peter, 2136-37
Kinsella, Noël A., 2137-38
Olson, H.A., 2138

Excise Tax, Excise, Income Tax amendment bill C-32, 1r, 745; 2r, 745-48; ref to Committee of the Whole, 748; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Hon. David Walker, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance taking part in the debate, 748-51; rep without amdt, 751; 3r, 751; r.a., chap. 29, 1994, 773

Air Transportation Tax, 746
Anti-smuggling initiative, 746
Excise tax on exported tobacco products, 746
Fines, 746, 748
Flat tax, 746
Goods and Services Tax, 747
Health-promotion surtax, 746
Indian reserves, 746, 748
Interprovincial smuggling, 748
Inventory rebate, 746
National action plan on smuggling, 745
Provincial tax reductions, 746
Reduction in tobacco taxes, 746
Smuggling, 747
Surtax on profits, 747
Tax liability and offence provisions, 746
Three-year limitation on surtax, 747
Tobacco prices, 747
U.S. health tax on cigarettes, 748
Speakers: Senators
Corbin, Eymard G., 751
Hays, Dan, 745-47, 750, 751
Kinsella, Noël A., 747-48, 749, 750
and witness in Committee of the Whole
Walker, David, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance, 749-50, 751

- Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103. 1r, 2176; 2r, 2214-18; ref to com, 2218; rep with one amdt, 2398, 2446-49; m in amdt, adopted, on div, 2449-50; rep (con't), 2450-52, 2480-83, neg on div, 2497-98; 3r, 2508-11; r.a., chap. 46, 1995, 2546
- Advertising revenues, 2214, 2215
 Anti-avoidance, 2216
 Canadian magazine industry, 2214, 2215, 2217
 Circulation revenues, 2215
 Split runs, 2214, 2215
Sports Illustrated, 2214, 2215, 2216, 2217
Speakers: Senators
 Davey, Keith, 2510
 Graham, B. Alasdair, 2508, 2510
 Murray, Lowell, 2216-17, 2481-83, 2508-10
 Stewart, John B., 2510
 Stollery, Peter A., 2214-16, 2218
- Explosives amendment bill C-71. 1r, 2110; 2r, 2133, 2155-56; ref to com, 2156; rep without amdt, 2174; 3r, 2201; r.a., chap. 35, 1995, 2240
- Air India Flight 182, 2155, 2156
 Airports, 2133
 Detection, 2133, 2156
 International Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection, 2155
 Plastic explosives, 2133, 2156
 Terrorism, 2133
 Vapour detection, 2133
Speakers: Senators
 Kelly, William M., 2155-56
 Kenny, Colin, 2133, 2201
 Kinsella, Noël A., 2133
- Expo 2005
 Announcement of host city, government position, qu, 1574, 1707
 Selection of site, government position, qu, 1926
- External relations, commitment to France to continuing nuclear testing, government position, qu, 1763, (r) 2048-49
- Facilities at Banff National Park, tabled, 1555
- Facilities at Prince Albert National Park, tabled, 1555
- Facilities for employees at Jasper National Park, tabled, 1555
- Facing the Challenge of Change: A Study of the Atlantic Economy, details of costs and authors of study, tabled, 1206
- Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce, Leader of the Government and Minister with special responsibility for literacy
- Aboriginal peoples
 Co-management agreements in Saskatchewan, request for particulars, 1707
 Rate of illiteracy among native youth, government position, 2385
 Report of Senate Committee on plight of aboriginal veterans, request for response, 2233
 Right to self-determination, government position, 2384
 Scholarship for aboriginal veterans, request for response to report of Standing Senate Committee, 2540
- Adams, Hon. Willie, tributes on 18th anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 1522
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 30, 31-33, 34, 35-36
- Agriculture
 Canadian Wheat Board
 Proposed increase in initial price of grain, government position, 2119
 Timing of examination by experts, government position, 2011
 Crow rate, costs of transporting grain, government position, 666
- Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd
- Agriculture—Cont'd
 Delay in grain shipment from prairies, government position, 321
 Grain handling capacity of Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert, inquiry, 541
 Grain transportation, possible sale of hopper cars, government position, 2440
 Handling of grain on west coast, effect of failure to meet commitments, government position, 454
 Imposition of U.S. import tax on Canadian sugar products, discussion with President during upcoming visit, 1212
 Improvement in international grain market, request for analysis of situation, 1223
 Movement of grain on west coast, government position, 422
 Potato blight in New Brunswick, compensation for damages sustained by growers, government position, 1213
 Reduction of grain transportation subsidies, assistance to farmers for increase in rail freight costs, government position, 1238
 Reduction of transportation subsidies, effect on Manitoba economy, 1238
 Strike by west coast longshoremen, delay in introducing back-to-work legislation, 47-48
 Threat to sugar industry under new GATT rules, government position, 1111
 Toronto, status of trade negotiations, government position, 239
 Transportation of grain, shortage of hopper cars, government position, 285
 Western grain marketing, possibility of national plebiscite, government position, 2492
 Western grain transportation, backhaul to Thunder Bay, government position, 1041
- Aird, Q.C., the late Hon. John Black, tributes, 1596
- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1492
- Atlantic Canada
 Dependence on Scotia Synfuels project, reinstatement of special investment tax credit, government position, 186, 187
- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency
 Atlantic Canada regional venture capital fund, equity financing needs of small business, government position, 1110
 Auditor General's report, efficacy of infrastructure job statistics, government position, 2405
- Cornwallis Park Development Agency
 Allegations of mismanagement
 Findings of National Defence investigation, government position, 2318
 Response of minister, 2177
 Stoppage of funds, government position, 2167
 Circumstances surrounding appointment of Board of Directors, government position, 2168
 Inventory control and hiring procedures, request for particulars, 2211
 Request for answer to order paper question on KPMG report, 2209, 2210
 Request for investigation by Auditor General, government position, 2177
- Cuts by Minister to National Defence Adjustment Fund, government position, 1340
- Future of agency
 Government position, 238
 Objectives and scope of government review, 252
 Grants to projects in New Brunswick, government position, 452
 Location and nature of management, government policy, 323
 Method of awarding projects, government policy, 286
 Request for information on projects, 1472
 Substitution of loans for subsidies
 Application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, 1110
 Government position, 1087
 Support for investigation by Auditor General into allegations of mismanagement, government position, 2371

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

- Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, appointment and competence of chairman, government position, 251
- Auditor General, dispute with departments over unreported liabilities, government policy, 1728
- Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, tributes on occasion of resignation, 740-41
- Berger, His Excellency David, scrutiny on views prior to his appointment as Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus, government position, 2011
- Between the Lines, community literacy resource program, st, 1759
- Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, 293
- Bosnia
 - Ban on sale of armaments, government policy, 333
 - Canada's commitment to NATO air strikes, government position, 93, 94
 - Conditions for continuation of peacekeeping mission, visit of UN Secretary-General, government position, 1040
 - Coherence of NATO strategy, government policy, 112
 - NATO air strikes on un-designated safe areas, government policy, 333
 - Release of detained peacekeepers, 1087
 - United Nations, request for NATO air strikes, government position, 303, 304
 - Use of air strikes, Canada's role, government position, 94
 - See also* United Nations
- Bouchard, Hon. Lucien, best wishes on recovery, st, 1054
- Budget
 - Action against high interest rates, government position, 1086
 - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, justification of funding, government position, 163
 - Changes to rules governing RRSP contributions, position of government, 96
 - Closure and future use of Downsview Military base, government position, 239
 - Closure of Military College at St-Jean, related additional costs, 623
 - Definition of tax loophole, 1237
 - Effect of carbon tax on cost of agricultural production, 94
 - Elderly benefits assessed by household income, government position, 953
 - Elimination of tax breaks for health and dental plans, government position, 1110
 - Extension of wage freeze for public servants, government position, 133
 - Grants to municipalities in lieu of taxes, government policy, 216
 - Impact of budget on Atlantic region, concept of fairness, government position, 165
 - International Space Station Program, status of Canada's commitment, government position, 162, 163
 - Request for clarification, 236, 237
 - Methods of deficit reduction, government position, 1097
 - Military and funding cut-backs, effect on employment, 135
 - New Brunswick, effect of changes to unemployment insurance, government position, 188
 - Private pension income, possible elimination of tax credit, consultation with senior citizens, 1239
 - Proposed closure of Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean
 - Request for clarification, 334
 - Reversal of decision, government position, 185, 217, 218-20
 - Proposed closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean
 - Request for update, 622
 - Resumption of discussions, government position, 1111
 - Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, 399
 - Cancellation of decision, government position, 305
 - Reversal of decision, government position, 237, 238
 - R & D cut-backs, effect on British Columbia, 135
 - Reaction of International Monetary Fund to government's proposal to reduce deficit, government response, 954
 - Registered Retirement Savings Plans, government position on possible changes, 995
 - Request for date of presentation, 1225

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

- Budget—Cont'd
 - Government response, 1227
 - Review of goal for deficit reduction, government position, 1086
 - State of the economy, government position, 1226
 - Status of RRSP as tax loophole, government position, 1238
 - Tax increases for wealthy Canadians, government position, 1224
 - Threshold for clawbacks, consultations with senior citizens, 1238-39
 - Unemployment insurance, change in duration of claims, government position, 164
- Budget Implementation bill, 1995
 - Federal-provincial negotiations to establish standards for health and social transfers, 1635
 - Proposed amendments to reflect national standards, request for particulars, 1636
- Budget 1995
 - Cancellation of goods and services tax, government position, 1251
 - Closure of agricultural research stations, government position, 1286-87
 - Defence Industry Productivity Program, government position, 1373-74
 - Elimination of Crow Rate subsidy
 - Effect on grain shipping ports, government position, 1284
 - End of grain marketing monopoly of Canadian Wheat Board, government position, 1285
 - Maintenance of grain economy in Manitoba, government position, 1286
 - Elimination of Public Utilities Income Tax Transfer Act, effect on Province of Alberta, government position, 1252
 - Inequality in funding treatment of Atlantic agencies, 1302-03
 - Precedence of budget statement by Finance Minister over Red Book, government position, 1250
 - Ratio of spending cuts to tax increases, government position, 1251
 - Reduction to international assistance envelope, government position, 1251
 - Reform of Old Age Security
 - Effect on elderly women of application of clawback to household income, 1287
 - Effect on older married women of application of clawback to household income, 1253
- Business of the Senate, 1370
 - Order Paper questions, request for answers, 1473
 - Proposal to establish committee to investigate orders of reference, government position, 955
 - Report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on firearms legislation, votes on amendments, request for advice on procedure, 2269
- Cabinet, Liberal election promises on reduction in size, government position, 1708
- Canada Assistance Plan
 - Removal of programs from block funding to provinces, government position, 1805
- Canada-China relations
 - Diplomatic representations to China on sixth anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, request for information, 1691
 - Human rights and commercial relations, government policy, 1692
 - Protest over granting of visa to Taiwanese official, government position, 1691
 - Representatives of human rights abuses, government position, 238
 - Trade in goods manufactured in labour camps, government policy, 2113
 - Validity of statement on freedom of religion in Tibet, government position, 1692
 - Visit to Canada of Chinese Premier, raising of human rights issues, government position, 2112

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

- Canada Council
 - Closure of Art Bank
 - Government position, 1534
 - Prior consultations with minister, government position, 1961
 - Reduction in staff in Atlantic Region, effect on programs, government position, 1635
 - Royal Winnipeg Ballet, loss of student grants due to budget cuts, possibility of alternate funding, government position, 1895
- Canada Health and Social Transfer, effect on spending of provincial governments, government position, 1635
- Canada Post Corporation
 - Delay in delivery of mail, government position, 2168
 - Extension of contract on leases, request for information on members of consortium, 1983
 - Lease of premises in Sydney, Nova Scotia, intervention of Minister of Public Works, 1982, 1983
 - Request for answer, 2010
- Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st, 576-77
- Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement
 - Grains, breakdown in trade relations, government position, 502-03
- Canada-United States relations, proposed imposition of U.S. border-crossing tax, government position, 1183
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, evaluation of operations of corporation, 252
- Canadian Coast Guard, search and rescue operations, state of helicopter fleet, 45
- Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee, appointment, 253-56
- Canadian Heritage
 - Abolition of Art Bank, role of minister, 1762
 - Actions of Film Review Board on adult films, government position, 1452
 - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, cancellation of contract of Pamela Wallin with Prime Time News Magazine, government position, 1531
 - Catalogue of national sports events, failure to publish in French, government position, 1842
 - Expo 2005, report of independent evaluators, decision based on politics or merit, government position, 1522
 - Government documents published unilingually, infraction of policy on official languages, government position, 1893-94
- Canada International Development Agency, filling of vacant positions without competition, government position, 2269
- Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, increase in local telephone rates, government position, 2167
- Chambers, the late Hon. Egan, tributes, 434
- Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 413-14
- China, human rights and commercial relations
 - Government policy, 601, 602
 - Government position, 553, 605
- Citizenship and immigration
 - Review of refugee status claimants, government position, 501
- Clerk of the Senate
 - Appointment of Gordon Barnhart, Esq., as honorary officer of the Senate, felicitations, 178-79
 - Appointment of Paul C. Bélisle, Esq., as Clerk of the Senate, felicitations, 178-79
- Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, amendments to regulations tabled, 547
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 462
- Code of Conduct, appointment of Special Committee, m, 1800-01
- Communications
 - Granting of public relations contract for G-7 Summit
 - Contravention of Treasury Board regulations, government position, 1927, 1928

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

- Communications—Cont'd
 - Request for estimated final cost, 1928
 - Request for answer, 1959
 - Request for particulars on advice given to RCMP, 1928
- Radio Canada International
 - Future prospects for continuance
 - Government position, 2463
 - Report of Senate committee on continued funding, government position, 2489, 2490
 - Possibility of alternative funding, government position, 2493
- Satellite broadcasting, consultation with CRTC and with both Houses of Parliament, government position, 1803, 1804
- Conflict of interests, lobbying, influence peddling and selling access, 355
- Constitution
 - Government efforts to keep Quebec within Confederation, 113
- Constitutional amendments
 - Availability of opportunity for the proposal of amendments, government position, 2417
 - Clarification of situation in relation to aboriginal aspirations, government position, 2417
 - Distribution of veto power, status of British Columbia, government position, 2400, 2417
 - Schedule for consideration of legislation, possibility of pre-study, government position, 2437, 2438
 - Veto proposals, effect on future status of Yukon, 2418
- Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2515-18
 - Aboriginal and treaty rights, 2516
 - Changes in national institutions, 2517
 - Creation of new provinces, 2517
 - General amending formula, 2517, 2518
 - Opting-out, 2517
 - Powers to provinces, 2517
 - Regional veto, 2518
 - Veto, 2516-17
- Correctional services
 - Incidence of tuberculosis in Ontario penitentiaries, government position, 1239
 - Kingston Prison for Women, brutal conduct of emergency response team towards inmates, government position, 1253
 - Referral of tuberculosis problem in penitentiaries to Minister of Health, government position, 1239, 1240
- Crow's Nest Pass, elimination of crow rate, government policy, 621-21
- Customs, Canadian pilots, clearance procedures at Mirabel Airport, 914
- Davey, Hon. Keith, tribute on twenty-eighth anniversary of appointment to Senate, st, 159
- David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1159
- Davies, the late Robertson W., tribute, 2395-96
- Defence
 - Acquisition of nuclear-powered submarines, government position, 1634
 - Lobbyists involved in acquisition, request for particulars, 1634
 - Protection of Arctic sovereignty, government position, 1634
 - Reasons for acquisition of Upholder Class submarines, government position, 1634
 - Safety of Sea King helicopters, government position, 2069
- Delayed answers to oral questions, 1588
- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35, considered in Committee of the Whole, 765
- Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2060-61
- Economy
 - Creation of jobs for women through infrastructure program, request for particulars, 1716
 - Expected increase in debt service costs, government position, 1109
 - Failure of infrastructure program to create jobs, government position, 1714-15

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Economy—Cont'd

- Market factors affecting foreign investors, government position, 1225
- Partisan nature of the Opposition in the Senate, 1226
- Possibility of accelerated deficit reduction, government position, 1227
- Possible redemption of Canada Savings Bonds, government position, 1109
- Target for reduction of deficit, government position, 1224, 1225
- Unacceptable level of unemployment, government position, 1714
- Underground labour market, loss of tax dollars, government policy, 98

Elections Canada

- Electoral Boundaries Commissions, introduction of new legislation, request for pre-study, 1039
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, introduction of suspension bill, effect on commissions in each province, 321
- Electoral boundaries readjustment process
 - Extension of deadline, request for particulars, 2251, 2252
 - Transmission of maps by Chief Electoral Officer, request for information, 1891
- Readjustment of electoral boundaries based on 1991 census, government position, 1039
- Electoral Boundaries Commission
 - Revisions to riding boundaries, status of hearings, 284
 - Suspension of operation under proposed legislation
 - Government position, 251, 252
 - Proposed use of closure, government position, 283, 284
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m to refer question and message from Commons to com, 1965-66; m to instruct com to table final report, 2166, 2185, 2186-89
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, future of bill C-18, 517
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994, constituencies, provinces and municipalities, process of consultation, government position, 358, 359
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, concurrence in Commons amdt, 619, 633-35, 639
- Employment, fluctuations in job creation statistics, situation in Quebec, government position, 2401, 2402
- Energy, proposed carbon tax, government policy, 48

Environment

- Cancellation of report on state of environment, possibility of discussion on sustainable development at G-7 summit, government position, 1743
- Changes to weather reporting service adversely affecting rural and isolated areas, government position, 1843
- Federal management of radioactive waste material, report of Auditor General of Canada, government position, 1663
- Greenhouse gas reduction strategy, failure to reach agreement, government position, 1239
- International Joint Commission, recommendations on toxicity reduction in Great Lakes
 - Government position, 135
 - Guidelines for detection apparatus, government position, 356
- Environment, Manitoba, oriented strand board plant, possibility of hearing before independent review panel, government position, 1549
- Oriented Strandboard plant in Saskatchewan, extension of environmental review to cover downstream effects in Manitoba, government position, 1633
- Oriented Strandboard plants, cumulative effect of harvesting on boreal forests, government position, 1634
- Proclamation of Environment Assessment Act, status of draft regulations, government timetable, 286
- Reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, establishment of national standards, government position, 2319

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Environment—Cont'd

- Review of Canadian Environmental Protection Act, report of Commons committee, government position, 2404
- Sagkeeng First Nation, effect of pulp mill pollution, government position, 218
- St. Lawrence Vision 2000, reduction of pollution, government position, 304
- Study of low-level military flights in Labrador, government response to criticism of process, 848
- Estimates, 1994-95
 - Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, review of activities by National Finance Committee, 165
 - Unemployment insurance cuts, plight of lobster fishermen, 166
- Ethics Counsellor
 - Desirability of independent counsellor reporting to Parliament, government position, 2383
 - Existence of Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, 2383
 - Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, relevance to parliamentarians, 2384
- Everett, Hon. Douglas D., resignation from Senate, announcement and tributes, 21
- Expo 2005
 - Announcement of host city, government position, 1574, 1707
 - Selection of site, government position, 1926
- External relations, commitment of France to continuing nuclear testing, government position, 1763
- Federal-provincial relations
 - Administration of infrastructure program, government policy, 95, 96
 - Agreement on internal trade, nature and timeliness of amendments to bill, government position, 2210
 - Conduct of security services in Quebec, government operations, 1743
 - Effect of enforcement provisions of agreement on internal trade implementation bill on interprovincial trade, government position, 1715
 - Effect of federal policy on pharmaceutical industry in Quebec, 398
 - Status of relations, government position, 398
- Felicitations on appointment as first woman leader, st, 7-8
- Finance
 - Duplication of programs with provinces, government position, 874-75
 - Fiscal program update, possibility of tax increases, government position, 874
- Firearms bill
 - Availability to other provinces of similar arrangements, costs to taxpayers, government position, 2232
 - Funding arrangements with government of Nova Scotia, request for particulars, 2232
 - Motion to instruct committee to table final report, 2109, 2121-23
- Firearms legislation
 - Criteria and selection process for appearing as witness before committee, government position, 1548
 - Refusal by House of Commons Committee to hear testimony of renowned firearms expert, government position, 1548
 - Statement attributed to Prime Minister in caucus on voting of dissenting members, government position, 1777
- Fisheries
 - Aid for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, request for statistics, 1716
 - Atlantic Ground-Fish Strategy v. change in benefits, government position, 304
 - Collapse of Atlantic fishery, longer-term provision for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, government position, 1716
 - North Atlantic fishery
 - Presence of Spanish warships accompanying fishing vessels, government position, 1359

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'dFisheries—Cont'd

Significance of presence of Spanish warships in relation to negotiations, 1360

Presence of Canadian naval vessels on Grand Banks, government position, 1359

Support for vessels during moratorium, 334

Fisheries and oceans

Cuts in departmental budget, demise of Winnipeg freshwater science teams, government position, 1842

Establishment of Industry Renewal Boards, government position on buy-back of quotas and licences, 306

Extension of jurisdiction beyond 200-mile limit, government policy, 95

Memorandum of understanding to transfer freshwater science teams to Department of Environment, government position, 1842

Timeliness of annual departmental report, government policy, 2366

Foreign affairs

Economic assistance to Middle East, government position, 501

G-7 Halifax summit, request for tabling of pertinent documents, 1839-40

G-7 summit in Halifax, position paper not submitted for parliamentary debate, government position, 1741

Human rights issues, government policy, 285-86

Military intervention in Haiti and in Burma, government policy, 629

Negotiations towards inclusion of Chile in NAFTA, request for progress report, 1960

New directives on foreign service travel directives, request for particulars, 1681

Projected cost of G-7 summit in Halifax, request for details, 1762

Proposed visit of Chairman Arafat of Palestine, requirement for ministerial permit, government position, 502

Remarks of Senator Stollery on Mexico

Possibility of Canada's withdrawal from NAFTA

Government position, 1522

Request for answer, 1706

Response from Mexican Embassy, government position, 1522

Report of Auditor General on foreign service travel directives, government position, 1681

Return to democracy in Nigeria, efforts of department, 1744

Sales abroad of CANDU reactors, request for status report on environmental and financial concerns, 1777

Sierra Leone, proposed national elections, contributions to support fund, government position, 2467

Forestry, Clayoquot Sound

Grant by CIDA to protest group, 873

Grant by CIDA to protest group against logging, 882

Fournier, the late Hon. Edgar, tributes, 447

Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 839-40

Goods and Services Tax

Application on reading materials, 849

Application on reading materials and eye glasses, position of government leader, 857

Failure of government to abolish tax, timing for resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, 1533

Forecast for elimination or replacement, government position, 2441

Removal of tax on reading materials, government position, 1214, 2442

Government, progress of legislation, government policy, 42-43

Government services, refusal of airlines to negotiate discounts with Government of Canada, 1709

Health

Bovine growth hormone

Evaluation of health risk, representations from United States, government position, 2112

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'dHealth—Cont'd

Link between IGF-1 and breast cancer, government position, 1927

Canada Health Act, plan to amend, government position, 1598

Centres of Excellence for Women's Health

Nature and funding, government position, 136

Outcome of site selection process, government position, 2100

Classification of tobacco as hazardous product, government position, 44

Closer control on tobacco products, government position, 1804

Control of sale of tobacco products, need for legislation, government position, 2350

Controlled drugs and substances bill, required amendments, government position, 2119

HIV infection in women, reported increase in rate, application of discretionary portion of departmental budget, government position, 1213

Implementation of experts' report on plain packaging of tobacco products, consultations by Minister, government position, 1715

National Forum on Health, confusion and delay within government, 516

New legislation to curtail tobacco consumption, government position, 2233

Reorganization of blood supply system

Government position, 1803

Timing of final report of Krever Commission, government position, 2365

Report on tobacco packaging, request for particulars, 1663

Tobacco Demand Reduction Strategy, distribution of study on plain packaging, government position, 1521

Use of bovine growth hormone somatotropin, delay in investigation of human health risks, government position, 1840

Human resources

Discussions with provinces on manpower training, government position, 1574

Review of social programs, 856

Human Resources Development

British Columbia, imposition of waiting period for payments under Canada Assistance Plan, suspension of transfer payments, government position, 2418

Child care, federal offer of funding

Comments in media, government position, 2503

Discussions with provincial finance ministers, government position, 2503

Fiscal inequality among provinces, 2502

Lack of consultation with provinces, government position, 2503

Provincial cuts to programs, government position, 2502

Restrictions on categories of providers, government position, 2504

Inclusion of representatives of east coast fishermen on social security task force, 46

Installation of telephone communications network, 422

National literacy secretariat, importance of program continuity and volunteer participation, government position, 1214-15

Professional training, domain of provinces, government position, 45, 46

Proposed source of funding for creation of child care spaces, government position, 2119

Recommendation of committee report concerning literacy, government position, 1211

Reform of unemployment insurance system, guaranteed annual income as part of package, government position, 2349

Reported illiteracy rate in Canada, government position, 1183-85

Social Policy White Paper, government position, 96

Unemployment insurance reform

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Human Resources Development—Cont'd

- Correspondence between federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, 2419
- Correspondence between federal and Nova Scotia governments, request for tabling of documentation, 2420
- Division of responsibility for job training, government position, 2404
- Meeting between representatives of federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, 2403
- Program for study of legislation, government position, 2506-07
- Relationship to redesign of overall social programs, government policy, 2420
- Violence against women, importance of literacy, government position, 1186

Human rights

- Arms trading with transgressor nations, government policy, 1376
- Arrest of activist in China, government position, 1983
- Campaign promise of annual reports, government position, 2506
- Commitment to intervention with transgressor countries, government position, 1684
- Compensation to Canadians for past injustices, 1167
- Conflicting statements by Foreign Affairs Minister, request for clarification, 1681, 1682
- Discussions with Turkey on sale of aircraft, government position, 1376-77
- Establishment of Canadian Race Relations Foundation, government position, 1804
- Establishment of Senate committee on affirmative action, request for response to statement, 2208
- Further incarceration of Chinese dissident, government position, 2491, 2504, 2505
- Hiring by Canadian International Development Agency of former Guatemalan General as consultant, government position, 1634
- Imposition of embargoes and sanctions against transgressor countries, government policy, 2366
- Indonesia, upcoming visit by Prime Minister, discussions of abuses in East Timor, government position, 2506
- Manufacture and use of land mines, government policy, 2319
- Nigeria, execution of Ogoni activists, possible restoration of democracy, government position, 2318-19
- Possibility of imposing embargoes on transgressor countries, government position, 1682
- Promised amendments to act, government position, 1804
- Ratification of Human Rights Convention of Organization of American States, government position, 2070
 - Delayed answer, 2091
- Relationship to aid and trade, government policy, 1717
- Relationship to trade, request for debate, 1693
- Reports on record of various countries compiled by Foreign Affairs Department, government policy, 1377
 - Request for answer, 1717
- Request for debate on human rights and trade, government position, 914
- Sales of arms to Thailand, government position, 1087
- Three Gorges Dam Project
 - Displacement of Chinese citizens, government position, 913-14
 - Financial assistance, government position, 914
- Vigilance towards situations developing in other countries, government position, 2505, 2506
- Visit of federal commissioner to China, remarks reported in media, government position, 2490

Immigration

- Appointment of impartial members to Immigration and Refugee Board, government position, 952
- Capping of family reunification quotas, government position, 952

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Immigration—Cont'd

- Deportation of member of alleged terrorist organization, declaration of Federal Court of Canada, 2251
- Immigration and Refugee Board
 - Qualifications of new executive director, government position, 1359
 - Review of policy and appointment process, government position, 1098
 - Reduction in numbers of immigrants, government position, 952
 - Reduction of business class component, government position, 46
- Income Tax Act, Federal Court of Appeal, decision to strike down child support provisions, government position, 453
- Indian affairs
 - Cigarette smuggling on native reserves, 47
 - Clean-up of Canadian National train wreck debris on Birdtail Sioux Reserve, government position, 1453
 - Contraband alcohol on reserves, 96-97
 - Legal action against Canadian National Railway, government position, 1453
 - Status of negotiations on Oka, role of chief federal negotiator, 513
- Industry, science and technology research, cuts to budget, timing for release of study, government policy, 2350, 2351
- Infrastructure program
 - Cutback in government spending, effect on employment, government position, 356, 357
 - Effect on construction industry, government position, 2234
 - Financing for Kanata Palladium, government position, 335
 - Financing of professional sports infrastructure, government position, 335
 - Formula resolved among levels of government, 399
 - Government spending, effect on employment, renovations to athletic facilities in Edmonton and Calgary, 359
 - Source of funds for job creation, government position, 400, 401
- Intergovernmental affairs
 - Consultations with provinces on matters concerning fiscal transfers, 1599
 - Possibility of agreement on professional development, 985
- International relations, human rights, government policy, 606
- International trade
 - Agreement on participation of provinces, government position, 1574
 - Dispute with European Union on newsprint, government position, 1776
- Pearson Airport Agreements
 - Meeting of minister with British counterpart, request for particulars, 1586
 - Meeting of minister with British counterpart at G-7 summit in Halifax, government position, 1762
- Relations with European Union, impact on local industries, government position, 1600
- Reprieve from planned embargo on Canadian furs, possibility of banning leg-hold traps, government position, 2365
- Sale in Russia of United States pharmaceuticals, Canadian representations, government position, 217
- Status and acceptance of NAFTA, government position, 110, 111

Justice

- Appointment of sister of Minister of Transport to Court of Queen's Bench of New Brunswick, government position, 1301
- Authority for statement on political non-involvement in police investigations, government position, 2465, 2466
- Criminal Code, proposed revisions to accommodate cultural differences, 915
- Firearms legislation, efficacy of research of Minister, government position, 2272
- Firearms registration bill, availability of copies to senators, government position, 1215
- Gun control legislation

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Justice—Cont'd

- Avowal by the provinces not to finance registration, government position, 1662
- Comments of Prime Minister on provincial responsibility, request for clarification, 1662-63
- Consultation with provinces prior to introduction of legislation, government position, 1662
- Financial self-sufficiency of registration program, government position, 1662
- Impact of gun control legislation on rural society, government position, 1358-59
- Minister's view on efficacy of jailing non-violent young offenders, application of same principle to transgressors against firearms legislation, government position, 2271, 2272
- Parole supervision of high risk offenders, government position, 985
- Political non-involvement in police investigations, statement of minister to media, government position, 2465
- Re-establishment of Law Reform Commission, legislative agenda, 25-8
- Sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada
 - Alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government
 - Approach to Swiss government for information, authority for procedure followed, government position, 2487, 2488
 - Approval for letter to Swiss authorities, government position, 2247, 2248
 - Departmental letter to Swiss authorities
 - Minister's involvement, 2348, 2349
 - Source of leak to media, 2318
 - Equality of citizens before the law, request for confirmation, 2250
 - Knowledge of government ministers, request for particulars, 2466
 - Knowledge of Minister, government position, 2267, 2268
 - Libel action by former Prime Minister, source of funding for government counsel, 2466
 - Motivation for RCMP investigation, government position, 2248, 2249
 - Motivation of minister in instituting inquiries, 2489
 - Numbers of RCMP investigations publicized, request for particulars, 2250
 - RCMP investigative procedures, request for particulars, 2249
 - Rank of RCMP officers engaged in investigation, 2350
 - Request for apology to Government of Switzerland, 2266
 - Request for tabling of letter to Swiss authorities, 2250
 - Request for answer, 2317, 2318
 - Stage of treaty with Switzerland at time of request, government position, 2488, 2489
- Lang, Hon. Daniel A.
 - Tributes on retirement, 613-14
 - Welcome upon return to chamber, st. 301
- Lawson, Hon. Edward M., twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2096
- Learning Disabilities Association, st. 1486
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 963-64
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Firearms bill, m to instruct committee to table final report, 2109
- Reports
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 485-89
 - Commissions, 485, 486, 487
 - General election, 488
 - Lortie Commission, 485
 - Readjustment process, 485
 - Redistribution process, 486, 487, 488
 - Special House Committee on Electoral Reform, 485
 - 24-month suspension, 486, 488

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee—Cont'd

- 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, m in amdt, 2032-33
- 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amtds, 2341-42
- Literacy
 - Authenticity of kits released, government position, 1892
 - Future measures to be instituted, government position, 2439-40
 - Making Scenes Between the Lines pamphlet, targeted adult market, government position, 1894, 1895
 - OECD international survey, link between adult literacy and employment, government position, 2438
 - OECD international survey, possibility of federal-provincial conference, government position, 2443
 - Request for kits for senators, 1895
 - Visibility of literacy secretariat, government position, 2439
- Literacy Action Day on Parliament Hill, st. 1209
- Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 719-20
- Maheu, Hon. Shirley, tribute on appointment to Senate, 2606
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, 1428-31; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1434
 - Agriculture, 1429
 - Collective bargaining, 1429
 - Conciliation officers, 1429
 - Mediation-arbitration commissions, 1430
- Manitoba, federal environmental assessment of forestry projects, government position, 2405
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 977-78
- Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, point of order, 2018-19
- Metropolitan Toronto, National Forum on Health, lack of representation of region, government position, 903
- Ministry, lack of focus of Cabinet ministers, 666
- Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.
 - Felicitations on appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 948
 - Twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2096
- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 889-90
- National Day of Remembrance
 - Fifth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st. 1054
 - Sixth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st. 2412
- National defence
 - Canadian Airborne Regiment
 - Inquiry into conduct, possibility of reinstatement, 1254
 - Reasons for disbandment, 1356, 1357
 - Closure of Le Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean, government position, 951
 - Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, 513, 514, 602, 603, 620, 621
 - Related expenditures, request for information, 630
 - Request for answers, 629, 630, 666
 - Request for information, 603
 - Compensation for cancelled EH-101 contracts
 - Government position, 1503
 - Request for particulars, 1713
 - Consequences of cuts to transfer payments to provinces, government position, 1254, 1255
- Disbandment of Canadian Airborne Regiment, difference of opinion between Minister and Chief of Defence Staff, government position, 2068, 2069
- Disciplinary practices in Canadian Armed Forces, government position, 1186
- Disposition of Royal Military College at St-Jean, government position, 503, 504
- Effects of closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, 136
- Future of peacekeeping forces in former Yugoslavia, government position, 1587
- Initiative of NATO concerning peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation by Canadian Armed Forces, government position, 1741

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'dNational defence—Cont'd

- Inquiry into activities of Canadian Airborne Regiment, government position, 1185, 1357
- Length of tours of peacekeeping forces, request for information, 1375
- Maritime and aerial surveillance and control, enhancement of Arctic capabilities, government policy, 2366
- Peacekeeping costs charged to departmental budget, government position, 1213
- Peacekeeping in Bosnia
 - Ability of troops to withdraw from Visoko if recalled, government position, 1839, 1840-41
 - Participation in UN rapid deployment force, government position, 1761
 - Possibility of increasing size of force, government position, 1742
 - Request for parliamentary debate on increase in size of force, government position, 1743, 1744
 - Status of Canadians held hostage, possible discussion of set-up of UN force at G-7 summit, government position, 1778-79
 - Status of troops detained in Visoko, government position, 1838, 1839
- Peacekeeping in former Yugoslavia, withdrawal of troops, government policy, 1708
- Peacekeeping operations in former Yugoslavia, demise of Canadian Airborne Regiment, 1374
- Possibility of purchase of nuclear-powered vessels, government position, 1341
- Proportion of non-military items in departmental budget, government position, 995
- Proposed cut-backs to defence expenditures, government position, 114
- Purchase of Upholder Class submarines, cost to government, 1340
- Reduction of Canadian forces capability, government position, 359, 360
- Restructuring of Canadian Armed Forces reserve
 - Government response, 1519
 - Request for terms of reference of commission, 1374
- Royal Military College at St-Jean, decrease in recruitment, government position, 1357-58
- Royal Military College at St-Jean, effects of proposed closure on maritime students, 216
- Search and Rescue Helicopter Replacement Program
 - Nature of reduction in capability, request for particulars, 2232
 - Proportion of Canadian content in contract bids, request for particulars, 2232
 - Rationale for choice, 2231
 - Request for tabling of statement of requirements and report on search and rescue capability requirements, 2363, 2364
 - Statement of requirements, request for answer, 2463
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets, government position, 1098
- Training of First Mechanical Brigade for NATO exercises, government position, 1742
- National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee Appointment, 149-51, 152, 153, 154
- National election, Red Book commitment to appoint ethics commissioner, government position, 283
- National finance
 - Amount of deficit, government position, 303, 323-24
 - Amount of deficit for 1993-94, government position, 552
 - Bank of Canada
 - Pay increases to officials, 1984
 - Salary increases for officials, government position, 1959, 1960
 - Bank of Canada rate, effect on interest rates, 252
 - Control of debt and deficit, government position, 1925
 - Cutbacks in transfer payments to western provinces, government position, 401

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'dNational finance—Cont'd

- Debt and deficit management, evaluation of International Monetary Fund, government position, 2464, 2465
- Deficit reduction plan, government position, 515, 551, 552
- Downgrading of government's credit rating, government position, 239
- Goods and Services Tax
 - Status of intergovernmental negotiations, government position, 2402
 - Timing of resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, 2402
 - Undertaking of Prime Minister on deadline on replacement, government position, 2403
- Increase in bank rate
 - Deficit reduction plan, request for fiscal update, 689-90, 691
 - Government position, 630, 667, 691-92
- Interest rate, government policy, 310
- International Monetary Fund, objectives and methods of deficit reduction, government position, 2443
- Job creation, government policy, 1925-26
- Meeting of federal and provincial ministers, discussion of possible national debt management plan, government position, 2464
- Old age security, undertaking of Prime Minister during referendum, government position, 2403
- Reduction in deficit announced by minister, ramifications for transfer payments to provinces, government position, 2440-41
- Reduction in post-secondary education financing, 667
- Report of Auditor General, long-term management of debt and deficit, government position, 2265
- Report of Auditor General on national debt, government position, 2111
- The deficit, budgetary and political risks, effect on foreign investment, government position, 322-23
- National Flag of Canada, thirtieth anniversary of designation as national emblem, st, 1201-03
- National Forum on Health
 - Request for information, 848
 - Request for particulars on expenses, budgets and contracts, 1453
- National Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, nonrepresentation of New Brunswick, 605
- Request for answer, 671
- National security
 - Proposal to strike a special committee
 - Clarification of government position, 881-82
 - Government position, 876, 877, 903, 904
 - Request for answer, 1132-33
- National unity
 - Constitutional amendments, request for tabling of documents prepared by New Brunswick officials, 2442
 - Indian Affairs, document on post-referendum policy purportedly prepared by official, government position, 2382
 - Presence of aboriginal peoples at Quebec Round, government position, 2382, 2383
 - Quebec referendum, possible reduction in elderly benefits, government position, 2232
 - Quebec situation following referendum, government policy, 2167
 - Result of Quebec referendum, st, 2146
- National University Hockey Championships, congratulations to University of Lethbridge Pronghorns hockey team, st, 213-14
- Natural disasters in Alberta, st, 1724
- Natural resources, new federal-provincial silviculture agreement, government position, 1803
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2038-39
- New Brunswick
 - Share of patronage appointments, government position, 357
- New senators, 838-39
 - Introduction, 869, 991, 1447, 2058-59

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

- North American Free Trade Agreement
 - Extension of agreement to include Chile, government position, 1708-09
 - Inclusion of Chile, influence on existing agreement, government position, 1705-06
- North Atlantic Treaty Organization, respect of human rights as condition of continuing membership, government position, 1692, 1693
- Nova Scotia
 - Effect of budget on Cornwallis Peacekeeping Training Centre, government position, 134
 - Industry marine products, relocation of plant from North Sydney to Amherst, possible delay in implementation of decision, government position, 2349
 - Necessity of peacekeeping training, government position, 113
 - Proposed peacekeeping training centre, government position, 620
 - Status of peacekeeping training centre at CFB Cornwallis, government position, 113
- Official languages
 - Access of francophones to Internet network, 1651, 1652
 - Report of commissioner
 - Quality of debate, government position, 334, 335
 - Recommendation to discontinue bilingual bonus, government position, 305
- Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, appointment of Donald Johnston as Secretary-General, length of term, government position, 996
- Parks Canada
 - User fees, government position, 875
- Parliament, program of legislation, government policy, 282, 283
- Parliamentary Spouses Association, annual children's book show, st. 870
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee, request for particulars of expenditures on consultants, 2504
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, m to concur with Message from Commons, 845, 857-61
- Post-secondary education
 - Canada Scholarships Program, effect of cuts, possibility of replacement, government position, 1341
 - Canada Student Loans Program, impact on federal funding, government position, 605
 - Effect of cuts to social transfer payments on university enrolment, 1683
 - Effects of withdrawal of federal funding, government position, 333
 - Financing arrangements for student loans, government policy, 333
 - Increase in university tuition fees in Newfoundland, government position, 1532
 - Reinstatement or replacement of Canada Scholarships Fund, government position, 1683-84
- Precincts of Parliament
 - Authority to initiate project, 1132
 - Cancellation of East Block Tunnel project, request for information, 1549
 - Central heating problems, request for remedy, 1168
 - Condition of carpet in Senate Chamber, 1728-29
 - Consultation with Senate before undertaking further work, government position, 1167
 - Proposed renovations, government position, 453
 - Proposed renovations to East and Centre Blocks, government position, 306, 307
 - Request for definition, 1168
 - Role of Speakers as chairmen of Internal Economy Committees of both Houses, 1168
 - Tunnel between East Block and Centre Block
 - Appropriateness of expenditure, government position, 1131
 - Request for information, 1166, 1167
- Prince Edward Island
 - Fixed link, change in design of bridge, environmental assessment review process, government position, 185, 186

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

- Prince Edward Island—Cont'd
 - Fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 167-69, 172, 173, 240, 241-42, 243
 - Back-up ferry service, 241
 - Bilateral amendment, 167
 - Bridge, 167
 - Bridge construction agreement, 168
 - Clearance, 241
 - Compensation fund, 168
 - Constitutional obligation, 241, 242
 - Design changes, 172, 241, 242
 - Environmental review, 167
 - Ferry service, 242
 - Ferry workers, 168
 - Financing, 169
 - Ice, 241
 - Jobs, 168
 - Prince Edward Island Terms of Union, 167
 - Tolls, 169
 - Tourism, 169
 - Wood Islands-Caribou ferry, 242
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders Committee
 - Authority to study and report upon decision of the House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, 1723
- Public Service 2000, report tabled, 482
- Public Works
 - Cancellation of building contract in Dorval, Quebec, substitution of rental agreement, request for particulars, 1586
 - Cancellation of projects within parliamentary precincts, government position, 1216
 - Decision of Minister to build new federal building in Sault Ste. Marie, request for details of contract, 1187
 - Details of costs involved in cancellation of project, 1215
 - Diversion of funds from designated Nova Scotia Highway Project, abuse of privilege by Minister, government position, 1709
 - Harbourfront, Toronto, closing due to funding cuts, government position, 1533, 1534
 - Reconstruction of East Block Tunnel, status of project, 1215
 - Renovation of East Block, Senate input, government position, 187
 - Renovation of windows at Lester B. Pearson Building, cancellation of contract, government position, 1532
- Quebec
 - Distinct society motion, legal opinion sought on interpretation of wording, government position, 2491
 - Distinct society resolution, comments by the chair of the Standing Committee on Canadian Heritage, government position, 2540
 - Impending election and referendum, action for national unity, government position, 111
 - Motion for recognition as distinct society
 - Aboriginal or treaty rights, 2453
 - Civil law tradition, 2452
 - First ministers conference, 2454
 - French-speaking majority, 2452
 - Minorities, 2453
 - Unemployment insurance system, 2453
 - Unique culture, 2452
 - Veto, 2453
 - Prime Minister's proposals, means of gaining necessary consent of provinces, government position, 2363
 - Recognition as distinct society, m, 2399, 2452-54, 2455, 2456
- Rabin, the late Yitzhak, tribute to former Prime Minister of Israel, 2194
- Regional development, application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, 1183
- Remembrance Day, st. 2227

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Revenue

- Capital gains election, dissemination of information to public, request for studies on effectiveness of measure, 1237
- Income tax, capital gains election, effect on seniors, 1237

Revenue Canada

- Amount of export tax paid by tobacco manufacturers, net losses to federal treasury, government position, 1058
- Changes to excise tax on tobacco products, inequality of treatment of provinces, government position, 996

Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick George, tribute, 683-84

Saskatchewan, appointment of Lieutenant-Governor, nature of appointment, government position, 322

Science, research and development, tax credits for research and development, 994

Selection Committee, m in amdt, 17-18

Senate

Amendments to Bill C-22, refusal by Minister to appear before Senate Committee, 1299-300

Bolduc, Maurice, felicitations on election as President of l'Association professionnelle des sténographes officiels du Québec, st. 1583

Distribution of Debates and Minutes to Members of the House of Commons, 550, 551

House of Commons, changes to method of reporting committee proceedings, availability to senators of computer link, government position, 1651

Pearson International Airport, possibility of judicial inquiry, government position, 1300, 1301

Prince Edward Island, appointment of new senator, government position, 1453

Proposal for debate on foreign affairs and national defence, request for commitment, 553

Public statements by Minister of Transport regarding motives of certain senators, 1283, 1284, 1285, 1286

Position of Leader of the Government, 1298, 1299

Remarks by Minister of Transport, request for clarification, 874

Return to chamber of Deputy Leader of the Government, st. 742-43

Value of independent senators, government position, 2092

Simard, Hon. Jean-Maurice, best wishes on recovery, 1283

Spicer, Erik J., Esq., tribute on retirement as Parliamentary Librarian and designation as Parliamentary Librarian Emeritus, 276-77

Social affairs

Amount of funding available for child care strategy, government position, 1376

Implementation of national child care strategy, government position, 1375

Reform of child support systems, government position, 1357

Solicitor General

Efficacy of security arrangements at residence of Prime Minister Government position, 2200

Request for results of investigation, 2270, 2271

Review of security arrangements at official residences, publication of results, government position, 2200

RCMP marketing contract with Disney Corporation, request for particulars, 1959

South Africa, free and democratic elections, monitoring by Canadian delegation, 400

Status of Women

Anniversary of Privy Council decision, congratulations to winners of 1995 Persons Awards, st. 2116

Request for breakdown of program spending for current and next fiscal years, 1376

Sylvain, Hon. John, tribute on resignation from Senate, 2606

Tourism, effect of budget cuts, government position, 284-85

Training Initiatives Program, amount of funds available from Human Resources Development, government position, 1633

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

Transport

Abandonment of holdings on Partridge Island, New Brunswick, government position, 1534

Abolition of Atlantic Freight Assistance, possibility of notice to stakeholders, 1212

Application of International Civil Aviation Organization Standards at smaller airports, government position, 1520

Atlantic Region Freight Assistance Program, request for impact analysis, government position, 1057

Request for answer, 1167

Automated navigational and weather systems, request for documentation, government position, 1165

Automated Weather Observation Systems

Report of Senate Committee, request for response from ministers, 2233, 2234

Condition of St. Lawrence Seaway, government policy, 97

Destaffing of lightstations in British Columbia

Environmental impact assessment, government position, 1040

Request for judicial inquiry, government position, 1134

Existence of any impediment to redevelopment of Pearson Airport, government position, 1303

Failure of minister to properly brief Prime Minister on reports respecting Pearson Airport Agreements, government position, 1488

Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program

Canada-Nova Scotia Agreement, diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, government position, 1650

Discussions between ministers on diversion of funds from Nova Scotia Highway Project, request for particulars, 1660

Diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, possible interpretation by Auditor General of Canada, government position, 1650

Fulfilment of Red Book promises, government position, 1662

Introduction of toll booths on Trans-Canada Highway, 1661

Nova Scotia

Diversion of funds from designated project

Alternate methods of funding, government position, 1680

Knowledge of transaction by Prime Minister, government position, 1679-80

Diversion of funds to projects not covered by agreements, government position, 1680-81

Freezing of funds to await outcome of inquiry of Auditor General, government position, 1708

Request for answers, 1926

Restoration of funding to designated project

Request for answer, 1961

Request for update, 1690, 1691, 1926

Return of funds to designated project, government position, 1651

Return of funds to designated highway project, government position, 1662

Policy on diversion of funds to undesignated projects, request for particulars, 1683

Propriety of intervention by Minister of Public Works, government position, 1661

Report of Auditor General on diversion of funds

Government position, 2266

Request for tabling of pertinent documents, 2266

Importance of passage of Bill C-22 to development of Pearson International Airport, government position, 1285

Institution of public inquiry, government position, 1472

Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1382

Merger of Canadian Coast Guard with Department of Fisheries and Oceans, government position, 2112

Necessary repairs to Pearson International Airport, government position, 188

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'dTransport—Cont'd

- Nominees to Canadian Airport Authority, government position, 913
- Nova Scotia, funds for Wentworth Valley Highway Project, government position, 1549
- Pearson Airport Agreements, redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, request for information, 1471
- Pearson International Airport
 - Authorship of departmental report, request for clarification, 1470
 - Definition of legislative solution, government position, 1471
 - Delay in redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, 1302
 - Discrepancies in Nixon Report, government position, 1520
 - Discussion held by members of Liberal election campaign committee, government position, 1491
 - Evidence of Mr. Matthews before Senate committee, government position, 2100
 - Extent of knowledge of Mr. Nixon at time of review, government position, 1488
 - Function of Prime Minister at meeting with Matthews Group, 1530
 - Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister
 - Request for answer, 1111
 - Request for clarification, 1472
 - Instructions to Mr. Nixon on his mandate to review, government position, 1470
 - Legislative solution, request for particulars, 1489
 - Legislative solution to dispute, government position, 1587, 1588
 - Meeting of Prime Minister with Matthews Group, request for details, 1519
 - Personal knowledge of Leader of Government on policy proposal, 1491
 - Possible revision of report of Robert Nixon, government position, 1502
 - Public inquiry, government position, 1530
 - Refusal of minister to appear before Senate committee, government position, 1519
 - Request for appearance of minister before Senate committee, 1521
 - Request for copies of all material or information on which Mr. Nixon based his report, 1492
 - Request for copy of stamped receipt notation on Mr. Nixon's report, 1502
 - Request for judicial inquiry, government position, 1489, 1490
 - Request for public inquiry, government position, 901-02
 - Request for tabling of lawyer's time docket relating to meeting with Matthews Group, 1502
 - Transport Canada study, request for particulars, 1491
 - Verbal statements of Minister of Transport, request for written confirmation, 1471
- Pearson International Airport
 - Cancellation of lease agreement, 1041
 - Cancellation of leases preventing redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, 1490
 - Comments of minister on delay in renovations on Terminals 1 and 2, government position, 1585-86
 - Delay in redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, 1451, 1452
 - Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, 1058
 - Importance of passage of Bill C-22 on development, knowledge of Robert Nixon, government position, 1451
 - Influence of government actions on attracting future business, 1451
 - Motion to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1563-65
 - Request for government response, 1530
 - Possible negotiation of lease, government position, 986
 - Remaining impediments to redevelopment, 1132
 - Request for answers, 1531

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'dTransport—Cont'd

- Request for particulars on revenue from subleases, 1490
- Transfer of administration to local airport authority, nature of legal impediment, 1500, 1501
- Pearson International Airport redevelopment, alleged involvement of Prime Minister, 1451
 - Request for further answer, 1166
- Pensions of Route Canada employees, delay in resolution of dispute, status of negotiations, government position, 1728
 - Government response, 2091
- Privatization of Canadian National, reopening of negotiations with Canadian Pacific, government position, 1255
- Proposed sale of Halifax shipyards, government position, 114
- Proposed study of Atlantic Canada freight rates, government position, 554
- Railways work stoppage
 - Longer term arrangements for dispute settlements, government position, 1374
 - Status of negotiations at Canadian Pacific Rail and VIA Rail, 1360
- Relationship of Canadian Airport Authority to development of Pearson International Airport, 913
- Reliability of Labrador helicopters on search and rescue missions, government position, 604
- Removal of emergency response capability from smaller airports
 - Difference in standards of safety, government position, 1532
 - Government position, 1520
- Repairs to Ports of Halifax and Saint John, government position, 97
- Search and rescue helicopter replacement program
 - Purchase of units without tender, government position, 2400
 - Status of EH-101 contract
 - Government position, 2320
 - Nature of milestone payments, 2349
 - Suitability and safety of replacement units, government position, 2401
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets
 - Effect of replacements on viability of Canadian Forces Base Shearwater, performance standards for replacements, 1340
 - Status of EH-101 contract, government position, 2118
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet
 - Documents tabled, 603
 - Government position, 422, 453, 454, 604
- Strengthening national highway standards for truck safety, government position, 1521
- Timing of vote on motion to strike Special Committee, request for response, 1530, 1531
- Trans-Canada Highway
 - Federal-provincial agreements currently in force, request for particulars, 1680
 - Proposed toll booths in Nova Scotia, government position, 1839
- Underutilized infrastructure at Canadian ports, need for proposed new berthage and cargo sheds in Minister's riding, 1472
- Transport and Communications, directions to Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission on direct-to-home satellite distribution, comments of Minister of Canadian Heritage, government position, 1692
- Treasury Board, possible amendments to Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, government position, 1041
- United Nations
 - Human rights in China, defeat of resolution, request for copy of text, 2211
 - International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, 235

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce—Cont'd

United Nations—Cont'd

- Nuclear non-proliferation treaty, vote on reaffirmation, government position, 1599
- Peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation in rapid reaction force, government position, 1802
- Possible changes to application of veto, government policy, 1802
- Resolution to halt nuclear testing
 - Government objection to wording in text, request for particulars, 2234
 - Request for copy of offending text, 2209
 - Withdrawal of co-sponsorship, government position, 2208, 2209
- Veterans affairs, aboriginal veterans, request for action on report of Standing Senate Committee, government position, 1728
- Veterans Appeal Board, Order in Council appointment, government position, 554
- Victory in Europe, fiftieth anniversary commemorating the cessation of hostilities, st. 1581
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, 64-66; considered in Committee of the Whole, 67, 68
 - Arbitration, 65
 - Collective bargaining, 65
 - Costs of dispute, 65
 - Final offer selection, 65
 - Layoffs, 65
 - Penalties for non-compliance, 65
 - Wages, 65
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1316-18, 1324, 1333
 - Collective bargaining, 1316, 1317
 - Conciliation officer, 1317
 - Grain, 1317
 - Industrial inquiry commissions, 1318
 - International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, 1316
 - Mediator-arbitrator, 1318
 - Retiring allowances, 1317
 - "Side documents", 1317
 - Waterfront Foremen's Employers' Association, 1316
- Western Economic Diversification Canada, report of Auditor General, mandate of agency, government policy, 2268, 2269
- Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, 1762, 1763
- World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1074
 - Sugar industry, 1074
- Youth
 - Employment and training, student summer employment program, 355
 - Employment programs, government position, 504
 - Funding of training initiatives, government position, 356
 - Katimavik, reestablishment of program, 358

Family violence, comments made by Senator Cools on International Women's Day, st. 1337-38

Fane, Gary, Director, Canadian Autoworkers Union

- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1391-93, 1394, 1395-96, 1397-99, 1400, 1401

Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment bill C-75. 1r, 1689; 2r, 1718-19; ref to com.

- 1719; rep without amdt, 1739; 3r, 1763; r.a., chap. 13, 1995, 1794
- Aggregate principal amount, 1718
- Annual loan registrations, 1718
- Canola, 1718
- Credit, 1718
- Diversification, 1718
- Investment, 1718

Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans—Cont'dSpeakers: Senators

- Gustafson, Leonard J., 1718-19
- Olson, H.A., 1718

Federal Business Development Bank, tributes on 50th anniversary, st. 910

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment bill C-3. 1r, 184; 2r, 222-25; ref to com.

- 225; rep without amdt, 248; 3r, 267; r.a., chap. 2, 1994, 298

- Capping, 222
- Ceiling, 223
- Equalization program, 222, 223, 224, 225
- Five-province standard measures, 223
- Five-year renewal, 223
- Program floors, 223
- "Tax-back issue", 223
- Tax base changes, 223

Speakers: Senators

- De Bané, Pierre, 222-23
- Molgat, Gildas L., 267
- Tkachuk, David, 223-25

Federal-provincial relations

- Administration of infrastructure program, government policy, 95, (r) 138
- Agreement on internal trade, nature and timeliness of amendments to bill, government position, qu, 2210
- Conduct of security services in Quebec, government operations, qu, 1742-43
- Effect of enforcement provisions of agreement on internal trade implementation bill on interprovincial trade, government position, qu, 1715, (r) 1992-93
- Effect of federal policy on pharmaceutical industry in Quebec, qu, 398
- Infrastructure Program, Hay Report, presentation of petition, 161
- Status of relations, government position, qu, 397-98

Felicitations to Nova Scotians on recent election successes, st. 2108

Fergusson, the Hon. Muriel McQueen

- Tribute to first female Speaker of the Senate, st. 2555

Finance

- Duplication of programs with provinces, government position, qu, 874-75
- Fiscal program update, possibility of tax increases, government position, qu, 874
- Taxation of registered retirement savings plans, st. 918, 930

Firearms bill

- Availability to other provinces of similar arrangements, costs to taxpayers, government position, qu, 2232, (r) 2351
- Funding arrangements with government of Nova Scotia, request for particulars, qu, 2232, (r) 2351
- Letter inviting submissions to travelling panels of senators, st. 2206
- Presentation of petitions, 1741, 1958, 2045
- Statement, 2165
- See also* Gun control legislation

Firearms bill C-68. 1r, 1760-61; 2r, 1811-24, 1904-12; ref to com, 1912; m to instruct committee to table final report, 2109, 2121-24; m in amdt (Lynch-Staunton) adopted, 2124-25; m, as amended, adopted, 2125; rep with 14 amdts, 2243-46, 2252-62, 2320-42; m in amdt (Sparrow), neg on div, 2343-44; m for adoption of rep, neg on div, 2344; 3r, on div, 2344-45; r.a., chap. 39, 1995, 2411

Aboriginal and treaty rights, 1820, 1821

Firearms bill C-68—Cont'd

- Aboriginal hunters, 1821, 1907
- Aboriginal language speakers, 1822
- Aboriginal peoples, 1813, 1823, 1907, 1910
- Cost, 1908
- Crime, 1815, 1818
- Domestic violence, 1906
- "Firearms possession certificates", 1813
- Firearms registry, 1811, 1812
- Homicides, 1816
- Hunting and trapping, 1813
- Illegal gun use, 1815
- Long firearms, 1921
- Lost or stolen firearms, 1819
- New Zealand, 1823
- Outfitting and tourism, 1822
- Penalties, 1811
- Registration, 1813, 1817, 1819, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910
- Self-government, 1821
- Storage, 1815, 1911
- Suicide, 1812
- Sustenance hunters, 1813
- Violence, 1812, 1817

Speakers: Senators

- Adams, Willie, 1910-11, 1912
- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1761
- Carstairs, Sharon, 1811-14
- Fairbairn, Joyce, 2121-23
- Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1912
- Ghitter, Ron, 1814-19, 1907, 1909
- Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 1907, 1909
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 1760, 1761, 2124-25
- Lucier, Paul, 1819-20
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 1760, 1761, 2123-24
- Ottenheimer, Gerald R., 1820
- Roux, Jean-Louis, 1904-07, 1908, 1910
- St. Germain, Gerry, 1823-24, 1907, 1909
- Spivak, Mira, 1908-09
- Watt, Charlie, 1820-23, 1909-10

Firearms bill, inquiry, 2348, 2372-76

- Domestic violence, 2373
- Gender feminist theory, 2374, 2375
- Marksmanship, 2375
- Spousal abuse, 2373
- Spousal homicide, 2374

Speaker: Senator

- Cools, Anne C., 2348, 2372, 2373-76

Firearms legislation, st, 1545-46, 2263

- Comments made in House of Commons, st, 1738
- Comments of Liberal Member of Parliament, st, 1631, 1659-60, 1703-04, 1712
- Criteria and selection process for appearing as witness before committee, government position, qu, 1548
- Presentation of resolution, st, 2242
- Refusal by House of Commons committee to hear testimony of renowned firearms expert, government position, qu, 1548, (r) 1617-18
- Reluctance of Nova Scotia premier to take position, st, 1759
- Remarks made by Hon. Allan Rock, 1572-73
- Speaker's ruling, 1573
- Statement attributed to Prime Minister in caucus on voting of dissenting members, government position, qu, 1777

Firefighters of North America, tributes, st, 1545First Nations Government bill S-10, 1r, 1487, 1601-02; m for 2r, 1618; m to defer adjourned to await ruling of Speaker, 1618-22; Speaker's ruling, 1669-70; 2r deferred, 1670*First Nations Government bill S-10—Cont'd

- Royal Recommendation, 1619, 1620, 1621, 1622

Speakers: Senators

- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1601, 1619, 1670
- Cools, Anne C., 1620
- Corbin, Eymard G., 1619, 1622
- Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1601, 1602, 1618, 1619, 1620, 1621, 1670
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 1618, 1620
- Kelly, William M., 1602
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 1620, 1622
- Prud'homme, Marcel, 1602, 1620
- Stewart, John B., 1619, 1622
- Thériault, L. Norbert, 1619
- Tkachuk, David, 1602, 1618, 1620-21

Fisheries

- Aid for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, request for statistics, qu, 1716
- Atlantic Groundfish Program, change in benefits, government position, qu, 304, (r) 435
- Collapse of Atlantic fishery, longer-term provision for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, government position, qu, 1715-16, (r) 1928-29
- North Atlantic fishery, presence of Spanish warships accompanying fishing vessels, government position, qu, 1359
- Presence of Canadian naval vessels on Grand Banks, government position, qu, 1359
- Significance of presence of Spanish warships in relation to negotiations, qu, 1360
- Species and configuration of fish exported to Japan, tabled, 1206
- Support for vessels during moratorium, qu, 334, (r) 424

Fisheries and oceans

- 1993 Canadian fish exports, tabled, 239
- Cuts in departmental budget, demise of Winnipeg freshwater science teams, government position, qu, 1842, (r) 2080-81
- Establishment of Industry Renewal Boards, government position on buy-back of quotas and licences, qu, 305-06, (r) 424
- Extension of jurisdiction beyond 200-mile limit, government policy, qu, 94-95, (r) 137-38
- Memorandum of understanding to transfer freshwater science teams to Department of Environment, government position, qu, 1842
- Timeliness of annual departmental report, government policy, qu, 2366

Fisheries, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to examine annual report of Department of Fisheries and Oceans, 379, adopted, 411
- Authority to extend date for final report, 1679, adopted, 1701-02
- Membership
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 109
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, annual report of Department of Fisheries and Oceans on the Atlantic groundfish fishery tabled, 2415, adopted, 2632

Flicker, David, Vice-President of Government Affairs, CP

- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1419

Folk of the Sea, Newfoundland performing arts group, congratulations, st, 909Foreign affairs

- Celebration of fiftieth anniversary of diplomatic relations between Canada and Cuba, st, 1335
- Economic assistance to Middle East, government position, qu, 501, (r) 586-87

Foreign affairs—Cont'd

- G-7 summit in Halifax, position paper not submitted for parliamentary debate, government position, qu, 1741
 - Human rights issues, government policy, qu, 285-86
 - Military intervention in Haiti and in Burma, government policy, qu, 628-29, (r) 851
 - Negotiations towards inclusion of Chile in NAFTA, request for progress report, qu, 1960, (r) 2114
 - New directives on foreign service travel directives, request for particulars, qu, 1681, (r) 2073-74
 - Projected cost of G-7 summit in Halifax, request for details, qu, 1761-62
 - Proposed visit of Chairman Arafat of Palestine, requirement for ministerial permit, government position, qu, 501-02, (r) 587
 - Remarks of Senator Stollery on Mexico
 - Possibility of Canada's withdrawal from NAFTA
 - Government position, qu, 1522, (r) 2048
 - Request for answer, 1706
 - Response from Mexican Embassy, government position, qu, 1522
 - Report of Auditor General on foreign service travel directives, government position, qu, 1681, (r) 2073
 - Request for newly appointed Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus to appear before committee, qu, 1983-84
 - Return to democracy in Nigeria, efforts of department, qu, 1744, (r) 2075-76
 - Sales abroad of CANDU reactors, request for status report on environmental and financial concerns, qu, 1777, (r) 2077-78
 - Sierra Leone, proposed national elections, contributions to support fund, government position, qu, 2466-67
 - Strategy for G-7 Summit, recommendations of Joint Committee
 - Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, st, 1631
- See also* Foreign relations

Foreign Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to examine various consequences of European Union, adopted, 1678
- Authority to extend date for final report, 1356, 1632
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 912, 972, 988-89, 1084-85, 1854, 1925, 2230, 2416, 2487
- Authority to monitor and report upon the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement, 354; adopted, 390-91
- Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and North American Free Trade Agreement, authority to table final report, 1924
- Membership
 - See* Journals of the Senate
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 77
 - See* Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment bill C-4, without amdt, 450
 - 3rd, Budget, Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement, 549, adopted, 589
 - See* Journals of the Senate
 - 4th, World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 1163-64
 - 5th, Department of Foreign affairs and International Trade bill C-47, without amdt, 1355-56
 - See* Journals of the Senate
 - 7th, Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, without amdt, 1923
 - 8th, Free Trade in the Americas, confirmation of tabling of report, 2067

Foreign Affairs, Standing Senate Committee—Cont'd

- Special Economic Measures (Haiti) Regulations, 1993, report ref to com, 1598
 - Foreign policy
 - Congratulations on government initiatives, st, 685-86
 - Human rights in relation to trade, st, 1797-98

Foreign relations

- G-7 Halifax summit, request for tabling of pertinent documents, qu, 1839-40

Forestry

- Clayoquot Sound
 - Grant by CIDA to protest group, qu, 873, (r) 987
 - Grant by CIDA to protest group against logging, qu, 882
 - Government position, request for answer, qu, 935

Forrestall, Hon. J. Michael

- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, Cornwallis Park Development Agency, request for answer to order paper question on KPMG report, qu, 2209-10
- Budget 1995, elimination of Atlantic freight rate subsidies, st, 1295
- Business of the Senate, 1370
- Canada Post Corporation, lease of premises in Sydney, Nova Scotia, intervention of Minister of Public Works, qu, 1982-83, (r) 2083
 - Request for answer, 2010
 - See* appendix p. 2084
- Canada Post Corporation, review by Price Waterhouse of contracts in Sydney, Nova Scotia, request for particulars, tabled, 2493
- Canada Remembers, st, 1570
 - Fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st, 581-82
- Canada's Armed Forces, st, 1371
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 940, 1142-43
 - "Cornwallis concept", 1142
 - Peacekeeping, 1142
 - Process of joint committee, 1143
 - Ship-borne search and rescue helicopters, 1142, 1143
- CN Commercialization bill C-89, 1915-16, 1929-30
- Felicitations to Nova Scotians on recent election successes, st, 2108
- Goods and Services Tax, failure of government to abolish tax, timing for resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, qu, 1532-33
- Justice, sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government, request for tabling of letter to Swiss authorities, qu, 2250
 - Request for answer, qu, 2317
- Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 722-23
- Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85
- National defence
 - Compensation for cancelled EH-101 contracts
 - Government position, qu, 1503, (r) 1554-55
 - Request for particulars, qu, 1713, (r) 2074
 - Initiative of NATO concerning peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation by Canadian Armed Forces, government position, qu, 1741
 - Peacekeeping in Bosnia
 - Participation in UN rapid deployment force, government position, qu, 1761
 - Request for parliamentary debate on increase in size of force, government position, qu, 1743, (r) 2091-92
 - Status of Canadians held hostage, possible discussion of set-up of UN force at G-7 summit, government position, qu, 1778
 - Status of troops detained in Visoko, government position, qu, 1838, 1839
 - Restructuring of Canadian Armed Forces reserve
 - Request for answer, qu, 1502
 - Request for terms of reference of commission, qu, 1374
 - Search and Rescue Helicopter Replacement Program

Forrestall, Hon. J. Michael—Cont'd

- National defence—Cont'd
 - Nature of reduction in capability, request for particulars, qu, 2231-32
 - Rationale for choice, qu, 2231
 - Request for tabling of statement of requirements and report on search and rescue capability requirements, qu, 2363-64
 - Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets
 - Government position, qu, 1098, (r) 1191
 - Training of First Mechanical Brigade for NATO exercises, government position, qu, 1741-42
- National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee Appointment, 153
- Nova Scotia
 - Congratulations to Dr. John Hamm on election as leader of provincial Progressive Conservative Party, st, 2164
 - Industrial marine products, relocation of plant from North Sydney to Amherst, possible delay in implementation of decision, government position, qu, 2349
- Reform Party, bid to become Official Opposition in House of Commons, st, 2315-16
- Remembrance Day, st, 909
- Solicitor General, review of security arrangements at official residences, publication of results, government position, qu, 2200
- Superintendent of Bankruptcy, responsibilities regarding NSC Diesel Power Inc., tabled, 1601
- Transport
 - Abolition of Atlantic Region Freight Assistance, possibility of notice to stakeholders, qu, 1212, (r) 1473-74
 - Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, consultations in British Columbia, inquiry, 1155-56
 - Costs to keep lighthouse family, 1156
 - Destaffing of lighthouses, request for judicial inquiry, government position, qu, 1133-34, (r) 1191
 - Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program
 - Canada-Nova Scotia Agreement, diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, government position, qu, 1650, (r) 2046
 - Discussions between ministers on diversion of funds from Nova Scotia Highway Project, request for particulars, qu, 1660, (r) 2046
 - Nova Scotia
 - Diversion of funds, request for examination by Auditor General of Canada, motion, 1678, 1696-98
 - Fleur-de-lis Trail, 1696, 1697
 - Highway 104, 1697
 - Diversion of funds from designated project, alternate methods of funding, government position, qu, 1680, (r) 2047
 - Freezing of funds to await outcome of inquiry of Auditor General, government position, qu, 1708, (r) 2048
 - Restoration of funding to designated project
 - Request for answer, qu, 1961
 - Request for update, qu, 1690, 1926, (r) 1993
 - Propriety of intervention by Minister of Public Works, government position, qu, 1660-61
 - Report of Auditor General on diversion of funds, government position, qu, 2266
 - Pertinent documents tabled, 2559
 - Merger of Canadian Coast Guard with Department of Fisheries and Oceans, government position, qu, 2112, (r) 2252
 - Nova Scotia, funds for Wentworth Valley Highway Project, government position, qu, 1548-49, (r) 1709-10
 - Pensions of Route Canada employees, delay in resolution of dispute, status of negotiations
 - Government position, qu, 1727-28
 - Government response, qu, 2090-91
 - Proposed sale of Halifax shipyards, government position, qu, 114, (r) 221

Forrestall, Hon. J. Michael—Cont'd

- Pensions of Route Canada employees—Cont'd
 - Proposed study of Atlantic Canada freight rates, government position, qu, 553-54, (r) 834
 - Search and rescue helicopter replacement program, status of EH-101 contract
 - Government position, qu, 2320, (r) 2609
 - Nature of milestone payments, qu, 2349, (r) 2609
 - Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets
 - Effect of replacements on viability of Canadian Forces Base Shearwater, performance standards for replacements, qu, 1340, (r) 2071
 - Status of EG-101 contract, government position, qu, 2118
 - Strategic Highway Improvement Program, application of tolls on Canadian highways, tabled, 1695
 - Strengthening national highway standards for truck safety, government position, qu, 1520-21, (r) 1745
 - United Nations, nuclear non-proliferation treaty, vote on reaffirmation, government position, qu, 1599, (r) 1636-37
 - West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 73
 - West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1316-18; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1329-30
 - Fine, 1321
 - Foremen, 1321

Forum for Young Canadians, st, 1371

- Appointment of Mark Audcutt as chair of the board, st, 870

Fournier, the late Hon. Edgar (deceased Apr. 29/94)

- Tributes, 447-48, 449

Francophones outside Quebec

- Increase in population, promotion of French language in concert with federal government, st, 2130
- The referendum, a reminder of the urgent need for a partnership with the province, st, 2089

Frith, Hon. Royce (resigned Aug. 30/94)

- Adjournment, 570
- Auditor General amendment bill C-207, 628, 662-63, 664
 - Four reports: one annual, three others, 663
- Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, 288-91, 292, 293, 297
 - Balance, 289, 290, 291
 - Calculation of charges, 288, 291
 - Domestic debt program, 289
 - Expiration, 288
 - Foreign exchange account earnings, 288
 - Personal income tax, 289, 290
 - Reductions, 289
 - Relationship between borrowing authority and budget, 289
 - Roll-over treasury bills, 288
 - Tax base, 289, 290
- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 210
- Business of the Senate, 651, 800
 - Adjournment, 764
- Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 658-60, 661-62, 729
 - American film makers, 660
 - Investment bankers, 659
 - Loan guarantees, 659
 - Tax breaks, 661
 - Telefilm Canada, 659
- Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 414-15
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 451, 452
- Constitutional implications of unilateral provincial attempt to declare sovereignty or separation, inquiry, 769, 797-99

Frith, Hon. Royce—Cont'd

- Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8, 360-63, 365, 451
- Coastal fisheries protection, 360, 363
- Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8, 360-63, 365, 451
- Consultation document, Department of Justice, 361
- Deadly force, 360, 361, 362
- Disabling force, 362, 363
- Fleeing suspect, 360, 361, 362
- Felonies, 361
- International law, 365
- Peace officers working in penitentiaries, 360, 361, 362
- Police, 361
- Davey, Hon. Keith, tribute on twenty-eighth anniversary of appointment to Senate, st. 159
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 - National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 389-90
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee report
 - 2nd, Power to hold occasional meetings in camera, adopted, 744, 745
- Foreign Affairs Committee
 - Authority to monitor and report upon the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement, 391
- Kerr, Jean, felicitations on retirement from Senate, 783
- Lang, Hon. Daniel A., tributes on retirement, 614, 615
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 440-41, 485, 487, 490, 494, 498
 - 5th, General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 483
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 789, 802-06, 807-08, 811, 812, 813, 815
- National Finance Committee report
 - 4th, Supplementary Estimates (A), 1994-95, 625
 - Corporate Services Program, 625
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 695, 771-72, 773-75, 778, 824, 827, 828, 829, 832, 833
 - Bill of Rights, 775
 - Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 695, 774
 - Negotiations, 771
 - "Notwithstanding" clause, 695, 774
 - "Rule of law", 772, 774
- Point of order (Senators' Statements), 546
- Senate, role of the opposition, st. 598
- South Africa, first democratic elections, inquiry, 568
- Transport and Communications Committee, marine safety, m to expand role of lightstations, 233, 234
 - Staffing, 233
- Tribute on retirement as High Commissioner to London, st. 2608
- Tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 839-43, 844
- Veterans affairs, m to provide site for Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, 507
 - Point of order, 431-32, 433
- Yukon First Nations Land Claims Agreement bill C-33, 756, 784-85, 786
- Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, 759-60, 788
 - Citizenship, 759, 785
 - Instrumentality of political power, 760
 - Law-making powers, 759
 - Subsequent claims, 759
 - Supreme chief, 760
 - Voting rights, 760

Gatineau, donations requested for victims of recent fire, st. 1499-500

- Gauthier, Hon. Jean-Robert (introduced in the Senate Nov. 29/94), 991-92
 - Appropriation No. 3, 1994-95 bill C-63, 1098-99, 1112
 - Appropriation No. 2, 1995-96 bill C-97, 1751-52
 - Budgetary expenditure, 1752
 - Non-budgetary expenditure, 1752
 - Program review, 1752
- Citizenship and immigration, literacy courses offered in French language, st. 1570-71
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2571-73
- David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1161
- Defence, acquisition of nuclear-powered submarines, government position, qu. 1634
- Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47, 1220-21
 - Change department's official name, 1221
 - International organizations, 1220
- Firearms bill C-68, 1912
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1601, 1602, 1618, 1619, 1620, 1621, 1670
 - Royal Recommendation, 1619
- Francophones outside Quebec
 - Increase in population, promotion of French language in concert with federal government, st. 2130
 - The referendum, a reminder of the urgent need for a partnership with the province, st. 2089
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1603-04, 1607
- International Assembly of French-Speaking Parliamentarians
 - Exchange of information and seminar held in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, st. 2346-47
 - Executive meeting held in Porto Novo, Benin, report tabled, 1281
 - Meeting held in Beirut, Lebanon, report of Canadian Section tabled, 1801
 - Report of Canadian delegation and financial report of Twenty-first session held in Ottawa and Quebec City, 2501
 - Report of Canadian section and financial report of 22nd session of General American Assembly, 2416
 - Seminar held in Port-au-Prince, report tabled, 2501
- La Cité collégiale, official inauguration, st. 2099
- La Francophonie, sixth summit held in Cotonou, Benin, st. 2433
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2427
- Report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2332-33
 - Registration, 2332, 2333
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs, schedule of work of the committee, position of chairman, qu. 2364, 2365
- Literacy
 - OECD international survey, link between adult literacy and employment, government position, qu. 2438
 - Visibility of literacy secretariat, government position, qu. 2439
- National unity
 - Quebec referendum, coverage of events by CBC French network, st. 2415
- OECD international survey on adult literacy, inquiry, 2443
- Official languages
 - Access of francophones to Internet network, 1652
 - Dissociation from a stand taken by a member of Parliament, st. 1674-75
 - Proliferation of French television stations in Ontario, comments in media, st. 2459
- Official Languages Act, necessity of evaluating the law, inquiry, 1679, 1755-56
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee report
 - 1st, Budget, 1770-71
- Pepin, P.C., the late Hon. Jean-Luc, tribute, 2064-65
- Precincts of Parliament, request for definition, qu. 1168, (r) 1304-05

Gauthier, Hon. Jean-Robert—Cont'd

- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders, point of order, 1747
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders Committee, m to study and report upon decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, 1595, 1686-88, 1755
- Quebec, m to recognize as distinct society, 2530-31
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy
 - Motion to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee Report, 1313
 - Ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, point of order, 1015, 1017-18
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, response of government to report on Special Joint Committee, inquiry, 1211, 1258-61
 - Arts and culture, 1260
 - Human rights, 1260
 - International Assistance Envelope, 1260
 - Rule of law, 1260
- Senate, impact of decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, inquiry, 1526, 1592-94, 1595, 1646-47
 - Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 1593
 - Committees as part of parliamentary system, 1646
 - Constitutional rights, 1592
 - Cost-sharing, 1592, 1593
 - Duplication of services, 1594
 - Committee clerks, 1595
 - Purchasing, 1595
 - Security, 1595
 - Transportation, 1595
 - Interpretation, 1593, 1594, 1646
 - Official Languages Act, 1593
 - Savings, 1593
 - Translation, 1593, 1646
- Senate, status of Senator Kinsella, qu, 2091
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1329

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

- Application of rules to agricultural marketing structures, inquiry, 512
- Intellectual property rights and Third World agricultural development, inquiry, 1450, 1513-15
 - Ethiopia's Seeds of Survival program, 1514
 - Foreign aid, 1514
 - Gene banks, 1514
 - Intellectual property protection, 1514
 - Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, 1514
 - Mexico, 1514
 - UN Convention on Biodiversity
 - World prices, 1514
- Speaker: Senator Spivak, Mira, 1513-14

General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3.

- 1r, 78; 2r, 123-24, 173; ref to com, 173; interim rep, 482-83; rep without amdt, 483; 3r, 517; interim rep adopted, 517; passed by Commons without amdt, 761; r.a, 773
- Mouvement des caisses populaires et d'économie Desjardins, 123, 124
- Presentation of petition, 42
- Speaker: Senator Grimard, Normand, 123-24

German Canadian Congress, tour of northern German states.

- st, 352

Gerussi, the late Bruno, tributes.

- st, 2397

Ghitter, Hon. Ron

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 59, 81-84
- Budget 1995, elimination of Public Utilities Income Tax Transfer Act, effect on Province of Alberta, government position, qu, 1251-52
- Budget, state of the economy, government position, qu, 1226
- Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6, 380
- Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25, 847
 - Competitive bidding process, 847
 - Jobs, 847
 - Norman Wells, 847
 - Royalties, 847
- Canadian Heritage, Expo 2005, report of independent evaluators, decision based on politics or merit, government position, qu, 1521-22, (r) 1600
- Economy, budget paper prepared by Reform Party, st, 1235-36
- Electoral Boundaries Commission, suspension of operation under proposed legislation, proposed use of closure, government position, qu, 284
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 336-38
 - Alberta, 336, 338
 - Equality of voting power, 336, 337
 - Impartiality, 336
 - Partisanship, 336, 338
 - Redistribution process, 337
 - Representation by population, 336, 337
- Energy, proposed carbon tax, government policy, qu, 48
- Expo 2005
 - Announcement of host city, government position, qu, 1574, 1707
 - Selection of site, government position, qu, 1926
- Firearms bill, st, 2165
- Firearms bill C-68, 1814-19, 1907, 1909
 - Crime, 1815, 1818
 - Homicides, 1816
 - Illegal gun use, 1815
 - Registration, 1817, 1907
 - Safe storage, 1815
 - Violence, 1817
- Firearms legislation, st, 1545-46
 - Comments made in House of Commons, st, 1738
 - Comments of Liberal Member of Parliament, st, 1631, 1659-60, 1703-04, 1712
 - Criteria and selection process for appearing as witness before committee, government position, qu, 1548
 - Refusal by House of Commons Committee to hear testimony of renowned firearms expert, government position, qu, 1548, (r) 1617-18
 - Remarks made by Hon. Allan Rock, 1572, 1573
- Government of Canada, human rights policies, inquiry, 550, 640-43
 - Human rights education, 643
 - International Institute on Human Rights and Democratic Development, 641, 643
 - Multilaterals, 643
 - Tiananmen Square, 641, 642
 - Trading partners, 643
 - Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 641, 643
- Human rights
 - Canada's historic leadership role, st, 544-45
 - Further incarceration of Chinese dissident, government position, qu, 2504, 2505
 - Hiring by Canadian International Development Agency of former Guatemalan General as consultant, government position, qu, 1634, (r) 1685
 - Three Gorges Dam Project
 - Displacement of Chinese citizens, government position, qu, 913, 914, (r) 1088-89
- Infrastructure program, government spending, effect on employment, renovations to athletic facilities in Edmonton and Calgary, qu, 359, (r) 850

Ghitter, Hon. Ron—Cont'd

Justice

- Firearms registration bill, availability of copies to senators, government position, qu. 1215, st. 1223
 - Gun control legislation, financial self-sufficiency of registration program, government position, qu. 1662, (r) 1989
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
- 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds. 2256-59, 2260-61, 2262, Aboriginal peoples, 2258
 - Confiscation without compensation, 2260
 - Delayed implementation, 2259, 2261
 - Museums, 2262
 - Opting out clause, 2260
- Transport
- Pearson International Airport, implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, request for answer, qu. 1111
 - Pearson International Airport, implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, qu. 1057-58, (r) 1136
 - Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, st. 1613

Gigantès, Hon. Philippe Deane

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 9-12

Budget

- Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean
 - Question of privilege, 227
 - Reversal of decision, government position, 219
 - Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 211, 266
- Business of the Senate, 651
- Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28, 705-07, 712
- Alternative payment formula, 706
 - Canada Student Loans Program, 705, 706, 707
 - Disadvantaged students, 706
 - Federal and provincial governments, 706
 - Freeze on loan amounts, 706
 - Income-based loan repayment, 706
 - Loan guarantees, 706
 - Needs assessment method, 706
 - Provincial opting-out clause, 706
 - Repayment conditions, 706
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 990, 1080, 1091, 1092, 1118, 1123, 1124
- Defence budget, 1123
 - Reserves, 1080
- Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations incorporation bill S-5, 404
- Federal charters, 404
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Pamela Wallin, cancellation of contract for Prime Time News Magazine, st. 1528
- Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee
- Motion to appoint, 269
- Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 414
- Constitution, Federal/Provincial negotiations, st. 182-83
- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 919, 956-59, 988
- Daviault case, 956, 957, 958
 - Intent, 956, 957
 - Penalty, 958
 - Prohibited acts, 958
 - Social consensus, 957
 - Supreme Court rulings, 956, 957, 958
 - Voluntary intoxication, 958
- Criminal Code amendment (self-induced intoxication) bill C-72, 1944-45
- Defence of drunkenness, 1944-45
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, Special Committee, felicitations to members on tabling of report, st. 1711
- Firearms bill C-68, 1907, 1909
- General Security Insurance Company of Canada, 173
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
- Senate budget 1994-95, 103

Gigantès, Hon. Philippe Deane—Cont'd

- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 969
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
- 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 490
- Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John, election by secret ballot as Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, 40
- Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 721
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 980
- National defence, St-Jean Military College, effects of proposed closure, 201, 212-13
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2041
- Olympic Winter Games, congratulations to Myriam Bédard, st. 131
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 821-22, 823
- Quebec, strategy of separatists, st. 1336-37
- Senate
- On the nature of debate, st. 784
 - Statements of press concerning certain senators, st. 235
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology, authority to examine and report upon the future direction of the Department of Veterans Affairs, 176, 195, 351, 375
- Stanley Cup, participation of New Jersey Devils in the play-offs, st. 481
- Transport and Communications Committee, marine safety, authority to examine role of lightstations, 234, 246
- Unemployment Insurance, changes to legislation respecting jury service, st. 1248
- Veterans affairs
- Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial
 - Inquiry, 175, 193-94, 195
 - Site for memorial, m to provide, 176, 430, 431, 506
 - Dieppe raid, to honour veterans by creating commemorative decoration, m in amdt, 376
 - Fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 626
 - Role of commanders and politicians, st. 509
 - Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67, 1669
 - Veterans residing in England, 1669
 - Weber-Malakhov Arctic expedition, tributes, st. 2009, 2013

Gingell, Judy, congratulations on appointment as Commissioner of the Yukon, st. 1469

Gonthier, Hon. Charles, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

Royal Assent, 989, 1919

Goods and Services Tax

- Application on reading materials, qu. 849
- Application on reading materials and eye glasses, position of government leader, qu. 856-57
- Failure of government to abolish tax, timing for resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, qu. 1532-33
- Forecast for elimination or replacement, government position, qu. 2441
- Removal of tax on reading materials, government position, qu. 1213-14, 2442

Government

Progress of legislation, government policy, 42-43

Government aircraft

See Use of government aircraft

Government funding of Canadian Jewish Congress archives, tabled, 1475

Government of Canada, human rights policies, inquiry, 550, 640-43, 790-92

- China, 790, 791, 792
- Five-point peace plan, 790

Government of Canada—Cont'd

- Human rights education, 643
- International Institute on Human Rights and Democratic Development, 641, 643
- Multilaterals, 643
- Tiananmen Square, 641, 642, 790, 791
- Tibet, 790
- Trading partners, 643
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 641, 643
- Speaker: Senator
 - Ghitter, Ron, 550, 640-43

Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65. 1r, 1924; 2r, 1947-48; ref to com, 1949; rep without amdt, 1977; 3r, 2011-13; r.a., chap. 29, 1995, 2057

Canada Council, 2011, 2012, 2013

Speakers: Senators

- Corbin, Eymard G., 2011-13
- Hays, Dan, 1947-48
- Tkachuk, David, 1948

Government services, refusal of airlines to negotiate discounts with Government of Canada, qu, 1709, (r) 1992Governor General, His Excellency the Rt. Hon. Ramon John Hnatyshyn, P.C.

Deputies

- Cory, Hon. Peter deC., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 478, 664, 837, 2056-57, 2240
- Gonthier, Hon. Charles, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 989
- L'Heureux-Dubé, Hon. Claire, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 772-73
- McLachlin, Hon. Beverley, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 298
- Major, Hon. John, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 76, 2410-11, 2546-47
- Royal Assent, 1177-78
- Speech from the Throne at Opening of First Session, Thirty-fifth Parliament, 3-5

Governor General, His Excellency the Rt. Hon. Roméo LeBlanc, P.C. (from Feb. 8/95)

Addresses at installation printed as Appendix, 1179

See appendix to Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate Feb. 14/95

Deputies

- Lamer, Rt. Hon. Antonio, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 1446, 2638
- McLachlin, Hon. Beverley, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 1334, 1498
- Sopinka, Hon. John, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal Assent, 1793-94

Governor General's Medal of Bravery, felicitations to recipients, st. 1673Governor General's Performing Arts Awards, congratulations to recipients of Governor General's Awards, st. 909-10Grafstein, Hon. Jeremiah S.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 56-59
- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 261-65, 266
 - Democracy, 262, 263, 264
 - Federalism, 262
 - Individuality, 264
 - Nationalism, 261, 264
 - "Open" and "closed" society, 263, 264
 - Quebec nationalism, 264
- Business of the Senate, 64
- Canada-United States Interparliamentary Group, thirty-sixth annual meeting held in Huntsville, Ontario, inquiry, 2052
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 1077-80, 1081
 - Balance of power, 1078
 - NATO, 1079
 - Reserve force, 1080
- Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, 1873-75
 - Convention, 1874, 1875
 - Global chemical weapons, ban, 1874
 - "Killing century", 1873
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 459, 460; considered in Committee of the Whole, 471
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, point of order, 1901
- Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 842-43
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 971-72
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2261
 - Minister of Justice, 2261
- National Library amendment bill C-26, 654
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tributes on retirement, 2042
- Quebec, m to recognize as distinct society, 2529
- Rabin, the late Yitzhak, tributes to former Prime Minister of Israel, 2196-98
- Schneerson, the late Rabbi Menachem Mendel, tribute, 626
- State of culture in Canada, inquiry, 1500
- Transport, Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1569, 1577, 1578, 1580
- Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 421, 608-11
- World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1171-72
- Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, 1869

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair, Deputy Leader of the Government

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 115-17
- Adjournment, 1182, 1210, 1223, 1236, 1250, 1297, 1339, 1446, 1450, 1493, 1500, 1547, 1597, 1649, 1705, 1739, 1800, 1982, 2037, 2068, 2099, 2132, 2152, 2208, 2264, 2348, 2362, 2382, 2399, 2458, 2461, 2549, 2584, 2638
- Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties bill C-61, 2372
- Agriculture and Forestry Committee report
 - 9th, special study of farm safety, 2372
- Aird, Q.C., the late John Black, tributes, 1597
- Answers to Order Paper Questions tabled, 1305, 1475, 1549, 1601, 1637, 1652, 1695, 1710, 1843, 2092, 2493
 - Request for answers, 1601, 1685-86
- Appointment as Deputy Leader of the Government, 1179
- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1492
- Appropriation No. 1, 1995-96 bill C-80, 1493
- Appropriation No. 2, 1995-96 bill C-97, 1763
- Appropriation No. 3, 1995-96 bill C-116, 2497
- Auditor General amendment bill C-83, 2493
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
 - Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 2360
 - Report

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair—Cont'd

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee—Cont'd
26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, with one amd; m in amd, 2449; 2497
Study of state of Canadian financial system, m to extend date of final report, withdrawn, 2360
Study of state of Canadian financial system, m to extend date of presentation of final report, adopted, 2380
Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73, 1469, 1487
Bosnia, United Nations, future role for peacekeepers, st, 1036-37
Budget, request for formal debate, government position, 1228
Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 229-32
Empowerment of people, 231
Foreign debt, 229
International competitiveness, 229
Jobs, 231
Recession, 230
Research and development, 230, 231
Small business, 230
Underground economy, 229
Unemployment, 230
Unemployment insurance, 229
Young people, 231, 232
Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1806
Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91, 1980
Business of the Senate, 1270, 1294, 1368, 1369-70, 1381, 1421, 1428, 1476, 1672, 1723, 1772, 1919, 1951-52, 1953, 1962, 1963, 1969, 2037, 2129, 2177, 2312, 2345, 2432, 2444, 2458, 2498, 2537, 2546, 2549, 2559, 2599, 2605, 2632
Adjournment, 1334, 1529, 1584, 1632, 1676, 1677, 1775-76, 1916, 1975, 2056, 2189-90, 2229, 2230, 2536
Motion stands, 2174, 2175, 2176
Motions respecting Bills C-69 and C-22, votes deferred, 2446
Canada's presence and influence in Europe, st, 1485
Canada Council, closure of Art Bank, government position, request for answer, 1589
Canada-United States Tax Convention amendment bill S-9, 1373, 1574
Canadian Dairy Commission amendment bill C-86, 1923
Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee
Appointment, 255
Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-92, 2019
CN Commercialization bill C-89, 1922, 1929
Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, 1924, 1931
Clerk's Accounts, ref to com, 2152
Clinton, William J., President of the United States, address to both houses printed as appendix, 1248
Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee, m to appoint, adopted, 1970
Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2543, 2548, 2634
Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee
Motion to establish, 2547, 2548
Motion to amend, 2584
Report, 2610-11
Criminal Code amendment bill C-41, 1923
Criminal Code amendment (self-induced intoxication) bill C-72, 2019
Criminal Code, Young Offenders amendment bill C-104, 1995
Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93
Customs, Customs Tariff amendment, 2385
Defence
Lobbyists involved in acquisition, request for particulars, 1993
Delayed Answers to Oral Questions, 1187, 1205, 1228, 1303, 1341, 1360, 1377, 1473, 1503, 1534, 1549, 1588, 1600, 1616, 1636, 1684, 1693, 1709, 1717, 1744, 1779, 1928, 2045-46, 1805, 2070, 2091, 2113, 2153, 2201, 2252, 2351, 2366, 2385, 2420, 2557, 2609
Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53, 1529

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair—Cont'd

Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47, 1378
Department of Industry bill C-46, 1206
Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2061-62
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m to concur with message from Commons, 1837; vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1844, 1845-46, 1847-48, 1852; point of order, 1896-97; allotment of time for debate, 2201
Employment equity bill C-64, 2493
Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee, response to interim report on the safety implications of AWOS, tabled, 2415
Environment Week, m committing Senate to maximum recycling, adopted, 1677-78
Estimates, 1994-95
Supplementary (D), ref to com, 1315
Vote ref to Library of Parliament Committee, 1315
Vote ref to Official Languages Committee, 1315
Estimates, 1995-96, tabled, 1250, ref to com, 1250
Supplementary (A), tabled, 2199, ref to com, 2199
Vote ref to Official Languages Committee, 2200
Votes ref to Official Languages Committee and Library of Parliament Committee, 1315
Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90, 2234
Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2508, 2510
Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment bill C-75, 1763
Felicitations to Nova Scotians on recent election successes, st, 2108
Firearms bill C-68, 1760, 1761; m in amd to instruct committee to table final report, 2124-25
First Nations Government bill S-10, 1618, 1620
Royal Recommendation, 1620
Foreign Affairs Committee, authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 1854
Gatineau, donations requested for victims of recent fire, st, 1499-500
Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65, 1977, 2011
Governor General, addresses at installation printed as appendix to Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate, 1179
Health, impact of thyroid disease, inquiry, 1758
Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1604-05
LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 966
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports
Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-22 no later than December 13, 1995, 2399, 2429; debate concluded, 2470
Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69 no later than December 13, 1995, 2399, 2423; point of order, 2425, 2428; vote deferred, 2470
Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2378, 2379, 2389, 2390, 2391, 2392, 2394
Reports
14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 2020, 2036
16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2292, 2293-94, 2295, 2312, 2334, 2337
Prestudy of bills, 2295
Lobbyists Registration amendment bill C-43, 1747
Lobbyists Registration bill, ref to Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, 1677
Macdonald, Hon. John M., tributes on eighty-ninth birthday, st, 1571
Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, 1445
Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 982
Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, 2013
Miles, Johnny, Cape Breton marathoner, tributes on ninetieth birthday, st, 2132

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair—Cont'd

- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 893
 National Defence
 Report of Special Commission on the Restructuring of the Reserves, tabled, 2207; m to ref to Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee, 2246; adopted, 2278
 National Sports of Canada bill C-212, 425-27, 441, 476
 Hockey, national winter sport, 425
 Lacrosse, national summer sport, 425
 Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2039
 New senator, introduction, 2550
 Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54, 1890, 2019
 Ontario Court General Division, m to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1199
 Parks Canada, restored Fortress at Louisbourg, Nova Scotia, festivities 1995, st, 2008-09
 Pearson, Hon. Landon, felicitations on receiving honorary degree, st, 1673-74
 Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60, 1378
 Precincts of Parliament, locking of East Block doors, government position, qu, 1616
 Quebec, m for recognition as distinct society, 2473-74
 Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, 1890, 1918, 1919, 1978, 1993
 Security and Intelligence, possibility of establishing Senate Committee, inquiry, 1195
 Senate
 Absence of Government Leader, 1615
 Absence of Government Leader from chamber, 2557
 Tributes to pages and to staff, 2044
 Value of independent senators, government position, 2092
 Senate fund for Gatineau fire victims, st, 1528
 Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99, 2538
 Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee reports
 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 91
 5th, future development of the Department of Veterans Affairs, tabled, 897-98
 13th, National Defence, Special Commission on Restructuring of the Reserves, adopted, 2543
 Special Economic Measures (Haiti) Regulations, 1993, report ref to Foreign Affairs Committee, 1598
 Special Joint Committee Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, government response to recommendations of committee tabled, 1179
 Sylvain, Hon. John, tributes on resignation from Senate, 2551-52
 Transport
 Measure to terminate railway strike, m to debate ref to Committee of the Whole, 1373, 1382; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1401; m to debate ref to Committee of the Whole, 1422
 Pearson Airport Agreements
 Authorship of departmental report, request for clarification, qu, 1534
 Verbal statements of Minister of Transport, request for written confirmation, qu, 1534
 Pearson International Airport, cancellation of leases preventing redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, qu, 1535
 Transport and communications
 Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, proposed orders on directions on direct-to-home satellite distribution and on pay-per-view television programming, deposited with Clerk of the Senate, 1546
 Transport and Communications Committee
 Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 1702
 Authority to study telecommunications, 1526

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair—Cont'd

- United Nations, fiftieth anniversary of founding, st, 1920, 2147-48
 West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1316
 Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, st, 1614

Grey Cup

- Congratulations to organizers, st, 2263
 Congratulations to the B.C. Lions on winning the Canadian professional football championship, st, 993

Grimard, Hon. Normand

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 87-88, 89
 Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, tributes on occasion of resignation, 741
 Canada Business Corporations amendment bill C-12, 675
 Dissolving a corporation, 675
 Elimination of public financial disclosure requirement, 675
 Keeping official documents, 675
 General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 78, 123-24, 517
 Mouvement des caisses populaires et d'économie Desjardins, 123, 124
 Presentation of petition, 42
 Office of Prime Minister, status of car transportation, tabled, 310
 Ontario Court General Division, m to strike special committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain offices and justices, point of order, 1643-44
 Telefilm Canada, cuts in funding of Abitibi-Témiscamingue International Film Festival, st, 1659

Gun control legislation, st, 2313-15

- Consequences for aboriginal communities, st, 2346
 Presentation of petitions, 2090, 2100, 2110, 2132, 2133, 2153, 2177, 2208, 2231, 2247, 2316-17, 2400, 2416
See also Firearms bill

Gustafson, Hon. Leonard J.

- Agriculture
 Canadian Wheat Board
 Continuation of marketing monopoly, presentation of petitions, 1282, 1547-48
 Granting of monopoly powers for the export marketing of all grains and oilseeds, presentation of petition, 919
 Proposed increase in initial price of grain, government position, qu, 2119
 Timing of examination by experts, government position, qu, 2011
 Crow rate, costs of transporting grain, government position, qu, 666, (r) 834-35
 Delay in grain shipment from prairies, government position, qu, 321, (r) 455-46
 Grain handling capacity of Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert, st, 378
 Grain transportation, possible sale of hopper cars, government position, qu, 2440
 Handling of grain on west coast, effect of failure to meet commitments, government position, qu, 454, (r) 655
 Imposition of U.S. import tax on Canadian sugar products, discussion with President during upcoming visit, qu, 1211-12
 Movement of grain on west coast, government position, qu, 422
 Reinstatement of Crow Rate subsidy, presentation of petition, 1282
 Strike by west coast longshoremen, delay in introducing back-to-work legislation, qu, 47, 48
 Toronto, status of trade negotiations, government position, qu, 239
 Transportation of grain, shortage of hopper cars, government position, qu, 285
 Western grain marketing, possibility of national plebiscite, government position, qu, 2491-92, (r) 2610
 Western grain transportation, backhaul to Thunder Bay, government position, qu, 1041, (r) 1190

Gustafson, Hon. Leonard J.—Cont'd

- Agriculture and Forestry Committee
- Authority to examine the future of agriculture in Canada, 597
- Reports
 - 3rd, Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-50, 983
 - 11th, special study on agricultural trade, 2128
 - Canadian Wheat Board, 2128
 - Canola, 2128
 - Dual marketing, 2128
- Budget, effect of carbon tax on cost of agricultural production, qu, 94
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1765
 - Freight rates, 1765
 - Grain transportation, 1765
 - Prairie landowners, 1765
- Budget 1995
 - Closure of agricultural research stations, government position, qu, 1286
 - Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1267, 1291-93
 - Agriculture, 1291
 - Competition with U.S., 1292
 - Federal debt, 1267
 - Grain prices, 1291
 - Land prices, 1292
 - Landowners, 1291
 - Research and development, 1292
 - St. Lawrence Seaway, 1292
 - Canada Grain amendment bill C-51, 1138
 - Farmers, 1138
 - Free trade, 1138
 - Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement, grains, breakdown in trade relations, government position, qu, 502, (r) 1088
 - Canadian Human Rights Act, opposition to amendment, presentation of petition, 1713
 - Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-50, 936
 - Competition in international market, 936
 - Research and development, 936
 - Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-92, 1947
 - Crow's Nest Pass, elimination of crow rate, government policy, qu, 621, 622
 - Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District) bill S-12, 2316, 2386, 2458
 - Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District), presentation of petition, 2264
 - Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment bill C-75, 1718-19
 - Canola, 1718
 - Diversification, 1718
 - Firearms bill, presentation of petition, 2045
 - Grey Cup, congratulations to organizers, st, 2263
 - Gun control legislation, presentation of petition, 2317
 - Justice, firearms legislation, efficacy of research of Minister, government position, qu, 2272
 - Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amnds, 2262, 2326-27
 - Implementation of regulations, 2262
 - Transport, railways work stoppage, longer term arrangements for dispute settlements, government position, qu, 1374
 - West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, 66; considered in Committee of the Whole, 72
 - Collective bargaining, 66
 - Price of wheat, 66
 - Western grain transportation, Crow Rate, direct payment to farmers, government position, qu, 935, (r) 1188
 - World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1074
 - Agriculture, 1074

Haidasz, P.C., Hon. Stanley

- Agriculture and Forestry Committee report
 - 4th, Interim, Future of agriculture in Canada, 1147
 - Processed foods, 1147
- Brockhouse, Dr. Bertram Neville, felicitations on receiving Nobel Prize for physics, st, 950
- Conacher, the late Lionel, tributes on induction into Hockey Hall of Fame, st, 917
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2618-20
- Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53, 1216-17, 1218, 1219
 - Alternative television service, 1217
 - Amalgamation of departments, 1217
 - Canadian flag, 1216
 - Citizenship, 1218
 - Copyright, 1217
 - Diversity, 1218
 - Fee structures, 1217
 - Information Highway Council, 1217
 - Integration, 1218
 - Multiculturalism, 1216, 1218
 - Social cohesion, 1218
 - Tourism, 1217
- Fisheries
 - North Atlantic fishery, presence of Spanish warships accompanying fishing vessels, government position, qu, 1359
 - Presence of Canadian naval vessels on Grand Banks, government position, qu, 1359
- Health
 - Appointment of special committee on euthanasia and assisted suicide, m, 158
 - Control of sale of tobacco products, need for legislation, government position, qu, 2350
 - Protection of conscience in medical procedures, presentation of petitions, 215-16, 267, 332, 873, 901, 933, 985, 1085, 1183, 1250, 1356
- Humphrey, the late John Peters, tribute, st, 1354
- International trade, sale in Russia of United States pharmaceuticals, st, 131
 - Canadian representations, government position, qu, 216-17
- Literacy, OECD international survey, possibility of federal-provincial conference, government position, qu, 2443
- National Unity, result of Quebec Referendum, st, 2149
- Official report, 1164
- Peace in Europe, inquiry, 1574
- Public Works, Harbourfront, Toronto, closing due to funding cuts, government position, qu, 1533
- Question of Privilege (Sen. Cools), m pursuant to Rule 44, 868
- Remembrance Day, st, 896
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee report
 - 5th, study on the future development of the Department of Veterans Affairs, 926-28
- Tobacco Product Restrictions bill S-14, 2437, 2536-37, 2584
 - Addictive substance, 2537
 - Cost to Canadian economy, 2537
 - Lung cancer, 2537
 - Nicotine, 2537
 - Second-hand smoke, 2584
- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1390
- United Nations, International Conference on Population and Development, inquiry, 933, 1105-07, 1125-27, 1150-52
 - Abortion, 1126, 1152
 - Beijing Women's Conference, 1150
 - Canadian Safe Motherhood Project, 1125
 - "DALY Index", 1152
 - Desertification, 1106
 - Equity of sexes, 1106
 - Family, 1106

HMCS Winnipeg, commissioning of new frigate, st, 1836

Haidasz, P.C., Hon. Stanley—Cont'd

- United Nations—Cont'd
 - Family planning, 1126
 - Female circumcision, 1106, 1125
 - Fertility awareness, 1151
 - Fertility regulation, 1126
 - Freedom of religion, 1125
 - Over-urbanization, 1106
 - Programme of Action, 1105, 1106, 1125, 1126
 - "Vaccine against pregnancy", 1152

Halifax MKVII bomber, recovery and renovation of aircraft sunk in Lake Mjosa, Norway, during World War II, st. 1581-82, 2130

Hall, the late Hon. Mr. Justice Emmett M., tributes, 2263

Harbourfront Literary Festival of Authors, st. 2165

Hastings, Hon. Earl A.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 54
- Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, considered in Committee of the Whole, 293
- Business of the Senate, 1772
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 457; considered in Committee of the Whole, 462
- Correctional service
 - Incidence of tuberculosis in Ontario penitentiaries, government position, qu, 1239, (r) 1550
 - Kingston Prison for Women, brutal conduct of emergency response team towards inmates, government position, qu, 1253
 - Referral of tuberculosis problem in penitentiaries to Minister of Health, government position, qu, 1240
- Everett, Hon. Douglas D., resignation from Senate, announcement and tributes, 21-22
- German Canadian Congress, tour of northern German states, st. 352
- Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44, 1243
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee

Reports

- 1st, National Finance Committee budget, adopted, 280
- 2nd, Scrutiny of Regulations Committee budget, adopted, 281
- 3rd, Scrutiny of Regulations Committee budget, 281, adopted, 407
- 4th, Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 449, 450, adopted, 477
- 5th, Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 450, adopted, 477
- 6th, Public Works plan for Parliamentary Precincts, tabled, 450
 - See Journals of the Senate*
- 7th, Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee budget, 548
- 8th, Transport and Communications Committee budget, 548-49
- 9th, Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee budget, 549
- 10th, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, 618
- 11th, Agriculture and Forestry Committee budget, 618-19
- 12th, National Finance Committee budget, 619
- 17th, Parliamentary Associations, 1181, 1206-07, 1208, adopted, 1231, 1232

Appeals, 2212

- APEX fares, 1207
- Four-and-four proposal, 1207
- Joint inter-parliamentary council on parliamentary associations, 1207
- Mandatory reporting, 1207
- Program costs, 1207
- Spousal participation, 1207
- Travel costs, 1207

Hastings, Hon. Earl A.—Cont'd

- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee
 - 18th, Staff report entitled "Task Force on the Internet", 1210, adopted, 1230-31
 - 19th, Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee budget, 1372; adopted, 1460
 - 20th, National Finance Committee supplementary budget, 1372; adopted, 1460
 - 21st, Re-examination of Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1372, 1460-61, 1462
 - 22nd, Respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1487, 1507, 1603, 1605-06, 1608
 - 23rd, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, 1583, adopted, 1602
 - 24th, Agriculture and Forestry Committee budget, 1584, adopted, 1602
 - 25th, Approval of 3/12 of committee budgets, 1584, adopted, 1603
 - 26th, Parliamentary Associations, 1995-96 budgets, 1584
- Lawson, Hon. Edward M., expression of apology, st. 420
- North Atlantic Assembly, sixth report of Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association tabled, 1649
- Point of order (Senators' Statements), 546
- Public Service Health Care Plan, disparity in nursing care coverage, 600
- Public Works, consultation with Internal Economy Committee on cancellation of project, 1215
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee report, 1245
- Senate, House of Commons, changes to method of reporting committee proceedings, availability to senators of computer link, government position, 1651
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee
 - Authority to examine Veterans Health Care Regulations, withdrawn, 107
- Tribute on resignation as chairman of Internal Economy Committee, 2606-07
- Tributes on twenty-eighth anniversary of appointment to Senate, st. 159
- Agriculture, Farm Safety Week, st. 1297
- Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties bill C-61, 2212-13, 2214
 - Animal and plant health programs, 2212
 - Absolute liability, 2213

Hays, Hon. Dan

- Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties bill C-61, 2212-13, 2214
 - Food safety, 2212
 - Pesticides, 2212
 - Tribunal, 2213
- Agriculture and Forestry Committee
 - Authority to continue its special study on farm safety, 166, 232
 - Authority to continue its special study on farm safety and extend date of presentation of final report, 1164
 - Authority to continue its special study on the future of agriculture in Canada, 1339
 - Authority to engage services, 166, 234
 - Authority to examine the future of agriculture in Canada, 549, adopted, 594-97
 - Agriculture and Agri-food, House of Commons Subcommittee, 595
 - Beef industry, 595
 - Bilateral concerns, 595
 - Cereals and oilseeds, 594
 - GATT, 594
 - GRIP, 594
 - NAFTA, 594

Hays, Hon. Dan—Cont'd

Agriculture and Forestry Committee—Cont'd

Pork industry, 594

Shared expenses with Commons committee, 596

Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 302

Authority to permit coverage of proceedings by electronic media, 689

Authority to postpone date of final report, adopted, 1740-41

Authority to study the present state and future of agriculture and agri-food, 2226, 2239

Authority to table final report on farm safety and farm related health issues, 1838, adopted, 1975

Reports

1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 92

2nd, Department of Agriculture amendment bill C-49, 937

4th, Interim, future of agriculture in Canada, tabled, 1108, 1143-46, 1147

Agri-food industry, 1144

Budget restrictions, 1145

Committee budget, 1147

Domestic subsidy reduction, 1146

Farm income safety net program, 1144

Food standards, 1145

Integration of market information and market intelligence, 1146

Market globalization, 1145

Processed foods, 1147

Research and development, 1144, 1145

Rural development, 1145

5th, future of agriculture in Canada, power to travel, 1109; adopted, 1175, 1176

See Journals of the Senate

6th, Canada Grain amendment bill C-51, 1162

7th, Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment bill C-75, without amdt, 1739

8th, Canadian Dairy Commission amendment bill C-86, without amdt, 1923

9th, farm safety, tabled, 1977, 2092-95

10th, Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-92, without amdt, 1978

11th, Agricultural trade, report on fact-finding missions to Washington and Winnipeg, 2067, 2125-28

American soils conservation program, 2126

Canadian Wheat Board, 2126, 2127

Canadian Wheat Board Advisory Committee, 2127, 2128

Dual marketing, 2127

12th, Agriculture and Agri-food Administrative Monetary Penalties bill C-61, without amdt, 2362

Agriculture, response of Minister to reports of Standing Senate Committee, inquiry, 2362

Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73, 1478-80

Authority to cover borrowing, 1479

Business subsidies, 1479

Canada Savings Bonds, 1480

Debt operations, 1479

Debt-to-GDP ratio, 1479

Exchange Fund Account, 1479, 1480

Foreign currency debt, 1480

Government spending, 1478

Non-lapsing amount, 1479

Personal income tax rates, 1479

Smaller public service, 1479

Technical provisions of bill, 1479

Transfers to provinces, 1479

Business of the Senate, 1150

Canada-Japan Inter-Parliamentary Group

Fifth annual meeting held in Vancouver, report of Canadian delegation tabled, 1011

Sixth annual meeting held in Tokyo and Osaka, Japan, report of Canadian delegation tabled, 2110

Hays, Hon. Dan—Cont'd

Canada-Japan Inter-Parliamentary Group—Cont'd

Third annual meeting of Asia Pacific Parliamentary Forum tabled, 1182

Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6, 437-38

Consultations, 437

Environment, protection, 437

Federal authorities, 437

Frontier oil and gas, 437

Offshore areas, 437

Canada-United States Interparliamentary Group, Thirty-fifth Annual Meeting held in Santa Fe, New Mexico, report of Canadian section tabled, 688

Canadian Dairy Commission amendment bill C-86, 1882

Exporting dairy products to U.S., 1882

GATT-WTO agreement, 1882

Levy system, 1882

NAFTA, 1882

Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-92, 1945-47

Freight costs, 1945

Pooling points, 1946, 1947

Canadian Wheat Board, expansion of powers, presentation of petitions, 1165

Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee

Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 1339

Report

11th, Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1541

Surplus cars owned by government, 1541

Excise tax amendment bill C-32, 745-47, 750, 751

Air Transportation Tax, 746

Anti-smuggling initiative, 746

Excise tax on exported tobacco products, 746

Fines, 746

Flat tax, 746

Goods and Services Tax, 747

Health-promotion surtax, 746

Indian reserves, 746

Inventory rebate, 746

National action plan on smuggling, 745

Provincial tax reductions, 746

Reduction in tobacco taxes, 746

Tax liability and offence provisions, 746

Expansion of powers of Canadian Wheat Board, presentation of petitions, 1165

Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65, 1947-48

Gun Control legislation, presentation of petitions, 2100

Income Tax Act, deductibility of fees for student associations, presentation of petitions, 2100

United Nations, fiftieth anniversary of founding, st, 1956-57

Veterans affairs, Jewish war veterans of Calgary, unveiling of commemorative plaque, st, 300

Hazardous Products Act, removal of exemption for tobacco, presentation of petitions, 512, 662, 728, 790, 873, 1205Health

Advertising of tobacco products, measures announced by minister, st, 2460

Bovine growth hormone

Evaluation of health risk, representations from United States, government position, qu, 2111-12, (r) 2385

Link between IGF-1 and breast cancer, government position, qu, 1927, (r) 2081

Canada Health Act, plan to amend, government position, qu, 1598

Centres of Excellence for Women's Health

Nature and funding, government position, qu, 136, (r) 221

Outcome of site selection process, government position, qu, 2100

Classification of tobacco as hazardous product, government position, 43-45

Health—Cont'd

- Closer control on tobacco products, government position, qu, 1804, (r) 2079-80
- Commemoration of World AIDS Day, st, 1037-38
- Control of sale of tobacco products, need for legislation, government position, qu, 2350
- Controlled drugs and substances bill, required amendments, government position, qu, 2118-19
- Effect of reducing cigarette taxes, reclassification of tobacco as hazardous product, 90
- Establishment of special committee on euthanasia and assisted suicide, m, 132; adopted, 157-58
- HIV infection in women, reported increase in rate, application of discretionary portion of departmental budget, government position, qu, 1213, (r) 1343-44
- Implementation of experts' report on plain packaging of tobacco products, consultations by Minister, government position, qu, 1715
- New legislation to curtail tobacco consumption, government position, qu, 2233
- Possibility of taxation on dental insurance plans, st, 983
- Protection of conscience in medical procedures, presentation of petitions, 215-16, 267, 332, 873, 901, 933, 985, 1085, 1183, 1250, 1356
- Reorganization of blood supply system
 - Government position, qu, 1803, (r) 2079
 - Timing of final report of Krever Commission, government position, qu, 2365
- Report on tobacco packaging, request for particulars, qu, 1663
- Smoking within the precincts of Parliament, 91
- Tobacco Demand Reduction Strategy, distribution of study on plain packaging, government position, qu, 1521, (r) 1555
- Tobacco Products Control Act, decision of Supreme Court of Canada, st, 2066-67
- Tobacco smuggling, government action plan, 90
- Use of bovine growth hormone somatotropin, delay in investigation of human health risks, government position, qu, 1840, (r) 2080

Health Canada, savings in 1995 Budget Plan, tabled, 1710Health care, training of workers in underserved regions, inquiry, 600, 647-49

- Family practice specialty, 648
- General practitioners, 647
- General surgeons, 647
- Medical superspecialization, 647
- Northern medical centre, 649
- Paramedical and nurse practitioners, 648

Speaker: Senator

Desmarais, Jean Noël, 600, 647-49

Health, establishment of special committee on euthanasia, inquiry, 25-26, 124-30

- Assisted suicide, 130
- Attempted suicide, 129
- Costs of health care, 127
- Criminal Code, 126, 127
- "Death with dignity", 125
- "Living wills", 125, 128
- British House of Lords Report on Medical Ethics, 125
- British Voluntary Euthanasia Society, 125
- Dutch Rummelink Commission, 125
- Ethical issues, 130
- Euthanasia, definition, 127
 - Active, 127, 130
 - Involuntary, 127
 - Non-voluntary, 127
 - Passive, 127
 - Voluntary, 127

Health, establishment of special committee on euthanasia—Cont'd

- Euthanasia—Cont'd
- Germany, 124, 125
- Legal element, 129
- Medical intervention, 130
- Physician-assisted suicide, 125
- Relation between ethics and policy, 126
- Right to die, 130
- Role of health care givers, 126
- United States, 124, 125
- Speakers: Senators
 - Kinsella, Noël A., 129-30
 - Lavoie-Roux, Thérèse, 126-28
 - Neiman, Joan, 25-26, 124-26
 - Prud'homme, Marcel, 128-29

Health, extension of Veterans Independence Program to senior citizens, inquiry, 78, 195-98

- Accessibility to hospital services, 196
- Acute care, 196
- Ambulatory health care, 197
- Home adaptations, 197
- Home care, 197
- Transportation services, 197

Speakers: Senators

- Corbin, Eymard G., 195
- Kinsella, Noël A., 195
- Marshall, Jack, 78, 195, 196-98
- Molgat, Gildas L., 195, 198
- Neiman, Joan, 198

Health, impact of changes to tobacco taxes, inquiry, 161, 266, 317-19, 523-25, 717, 782

- Action Plan on Smuggling, 524, 782
- Additives in cigarettes, 319
- Anti-smoking campaign, 523, 524, 525, 782
- Anti-smuggling, 317, 318
- Cigarette smoking, 317
- Enforcement, 523
- Fine for selling tobacco illegally, 317
- Government Action Plan on Smuggling, 523
- Health promotion surtax, 524
- Health costs, 317, 318, 524
- House of Commons Standing Committee on Health, inquiry, 524
- Impact of tax roll-back on smuggling, 782
- Legal age for purchasing cigarettes, 317
- Organized crime, 318
- Plain packaging for tobacco products, 319, 524
- Tobacco Diversification Plan, 523
- Tobacco smuggling, 318
- Underground economy, 318

Speakers: Senators

- Bosa, Peter, 523-24, 525, 717
- Di Nino, Consiglio, 161, 266, 317-19, 524, 525
- Molgat, Gildas L., 319

Health, impact of thyroid disease in Canada, inquiry, 1689, 1756-58

- Graves Disease, 1757, 1758
- Public profile, 1756
- Thyroid Foundation of Canada, 1756, 1757, 1758
- Thyroid malfunction, 1758

Speakers: Senators

- Cohen, Erminie J., 1756-58
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 1758

Hébert, Hon. Jacques, Government Whip

- Adjournment, 479
- Amateurism in journalism in Canada, inquiry, 646
- Business of the Senate, 478
- Christmas Greetings, 2546
- Congratulations on award of Lewis Perinbam Prize, st, 1888
- David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1161

Hébert, Hon. Jacques—Cont'd

- Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 841
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee reports
- 10th, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, adopted, 640
- 12th, National Finance Committee budget, adopted, 640
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 969
- Library of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee
- Appointment of Senators, 161
- Official Languages, Standing Joint Committee
- Appointment of Senators, 161
- Parliamentary Delegation to Poland, report of delegation presented, 856
- Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 612
- Roux, Hon. Jean-Louis, felicitations on receiving honorary degree, st. 1674
- Selection Committee reports
- 1st, Speaker pro tem, 22
- 2nd, membership of committees, 22, 24
- 3rd, membership of Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 103
- 4th, membership of Pearson Airport Agreements Special Committee, 1676
- 5th, membership of Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee, 1981-82, adopted, 1996
- Senate, Mr. Duane Wilson, page, on the occasion of his resignation, best wishes for future, st. 1527

Hervieux-Payette, P.C., Hon. Céline (introduced in the Senate Mar. 28/95), 1447-48

- Customs, Customs Tariff amendment bill C-102, 2180-81
- Duty deferral programs, 2180
- "Duty drawback", 2180
- Manufacturing inputs, 2180
- Travellers' exemptions, 2180
- Valuation rules, 2181
- Income Tax amendment bill C-70, 1878-80, 1889
- Debt forgiveness, 1879
- Deficit reduction, 1878
- Foreclosures, 1879
- Foreign affiliates, 1879
- Funeral and cemetery arrangements, 1879
- Mutual funds, 1879
- Objections and appeals, 1879
- Real estate trusts, 1879
- Securities, 1879
- Tax fairness, 1878, 1879
- Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99, 2511-12
- Administrative fees, 2512
- Approving loans, 2511
- Discharge of securities, 2512
- Extent of responsibility, 2512
- Loans for capital spending, 2511
- Minister's discretionary power, 2512
- Rate of coverage, 2511
- Regulations, 2512

Hnatyshyn, P.C., Rt. Hon. Ramon John, His Excellency the Governor General of Canada

- Royal Assent, 1177-78
- Speech from the Throne at Opening of First Session of Thirty-fifth Parliament, 3-5
- See Governor General

Homolka, Karla

See Karla Homolka

Hopkins, M.P., Mr. Leonard, felicitations on thirtieth anniversary as Member of Parliament, st. 2229House of Commons

- Decision to cease publication of committee proceedings, impact on bilingualism, st. 1527
- Decision to terminate printing of committee proceedings, st. 1518
- See also Senate, impact of decision of House of Commons

Hucker, George, V.P., National Legislative Representative, International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers

- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1409, 1410, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1414, 1415, 1416

Human resources

- Discussions with provinces on manpower training, government position, qu. 1574, (r) 2046
- Review of social programs, qu. 856

Human Resources Development

- British Columbia, imposition of waiting period for payments under Canada Assistance Plan, suspension of transfer payments, government position, qu. 2417-18, (r) 2609-10
- Child care, federal offer of funding
- Comments in media, government position, qu. 2503
- Discussions with provincial finance ministers, government position, qu. 2503
- Fiscal inequality among provinces, qu. 2502
- Lack of consultation with provinces, government position, qu. 2503
- Provincial cuts to programs, government position, qu. 2501-02
- Restrictions on categories of providers, government position, qu. 2504
- Details of budgetary savings under 1995 budgetary plan, tabled, 1637
- Inclusion of representatives of east coast fishermen on social security task force, 46
- Installation of telephone communications network, qu. 422, (r) 850
- National literacy secretariat, importance of program continuity and volunteer participation, government position, qu. 1214-15
- Professional training, domain of provinces, government position, 45, 46, (r) 220
- Proposed source of funding for creation of child care spaces, government position, qu. 2119
- Recommendation of committee report concerning literacy, government position, qu. 1211
- Reform of unemployment insurance system, guaranteed annual income as part of package, government position, qu. 2349
- Relationship to redesign of overall social programs, government policy, qu. 2420
- Reported illiteracy rate in Canada, government position, qu. 1183-85
- Request for financial aid for fisheries organizations, 47
- Social Policy White Paper, government position, qu. 96, (r) 286-87
- Unemployment insurance reform
- Correspondence between federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, qu. 2419
- Correspondence between federal and Nova Scotia governments, request for tabling of documentation, qu. 2420
- Division of responsibility for job training, government position, qu. 2404
- Meeting between representatives of federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, qu. 2403
- Program for study of legislation, government position, qu. 2506-07
- Violence against women, importance of literacy, government position, qu. 1186

Human rights, st, 1676

- Arms trading with transgressor nations, government policy, qu, 1376
- Arrest of activist in China, government position, qu, 1983, (r) 2155
- Campaign promise of annual reports, government position, qu, 2506
- Canada's historic leadership role, st, 544-55
- Canada-China relations, government policy, st, 545-46
- China
 - 5th anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, st, 543-44
 - 6th anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, st, 1689
- Commitment to intervention with transgressor countries, government position, qu, 1684, (r) 2113
- Compensation to Canadians for past injustices, qu, 1167, (r) 1342-43
- Conflicting statements by Foreign Affairs Minister, request for clarification, qu, 1681-82
- Discussions with Turkey on sale of aircraft, government position, qu, 1376
- Establishment of Canadian Race Relations Foundation, government position, qu, 1804, (r) 2080
- Establishment of Senate committee on affirmative action, st, 1336
- Request for response to statement, qu, 2208
- Further incarceration of Chinese dissident, government position, qu, 2491, 2504-05
- Hiring by Canadian International Development Agency of former Guatemalan General as consultant, government position, qu, 1634, (r) 1685
- Imposition of embargoes and sanctions against transgressor countries, government policy, qu, 2366
- Indonesia, upcoming visit by Prime Minister, discussions of abuses in East Timor, government position, qu, 2506
- Manufacture and use of land mines, government policy, qu, 2319
- Nigeria
 - Execution of Ogoni activists, possible restoration of democracy, government position, qu, 2318-19
- Point of order, 546-47
- Possibility of imposing embargoes on transgressor countries, government position, qu, 1682, (r) 2113
- Promised amendments to act, government position, qu, 1804
- Ratification of Human Rights Convention of Organization of American States, government position, qu, 2069-70
 - Delayed answer, 2091, (r) 2155
- Relationship to aid and trade, government policy, qu, 1716-17, (r) 2114
- Relationship to trade, request for debate, qu, 1693
- Reports on record of various countries compiled by Foreign Affairs Department, government policy, qu, 1377, (r) 1805
- Request for debate on human rights and trade, government position, qu, 914
- Sale of arms to Thailand, government position, qu, 1087, (r) 1190
- Termination of discussions with multicultural organizations on redress for past injustices, tabled, 1695
- Three Gorges Dam Project
 - Displacement of Chinese citizens, government position, qu, 913-14, (r) 1088-89
 - Financial assistance, government position, qu, 914
- Tibet, installation by Chinese of Panchen Lama, st, 2499
- Vigilance towards situations developing in other countries, government position, qu, 2505
- Visit of federal commissioner to China, remarks reported in media, government position, qu, 2490

Human rights, establishment of standing committee, inquiry, 93, 404-06, 564-66

- Civic-minded human rights culture, 406
- Dignity of individual, 565
- Environmental issues, 406
- "Human rights and cultural relativism", 406
- Human rights function, 565
- International declarations and covenants, 405
- International human rights, 404, 405
- Linguistic minorities, 565
- Mandate of committee, 565

Human rights, establishment of standing committee—Cont'd

- Multiculturalism, 565
- Political and civil rights, 404
- Protection of minorities, 565
- Review of Senate committee system, 566
- Socio-economic rights, 404
- Speakers: Senators
 - Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 93, 404-06
 - Oliver, Donald H., 564-66

Humphrey, the late John Peters, tributes, st, 1354, 1448-49Husseini, Faisal Abdel Qader al, role in Middle East peace negotiations, st, 2098Immigration

- Appointment of impartial members to Immigration and Refugee Board, government position, qu, 951-52
- Capping of family unification quotas, government position, qu, 952
- Deportation of member of alleged terrorist organization, declaration of Federal Court of Canada, qu, 2250-51
- Immigration and Refugee Board
 - Qualifications of new executive director, government position, qu, 1359, (r) 1551
 - Review of policy and appointment process, government position, qu, 1097-98
- Imposition of right of landing fee, effect on poor immigrants, st, 1296
- Reduction in numbers of immigrants, government position, qu, 952
- Reduction of business class component, government position, qu, 46, 114-15

Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44, 1r, 1182; 2r, 1219-20, 1241-44; ref to com, 1244; rep without amdt, 1760; 3r, 1782-84; r.a., chap. 15, 1995, 1794

- Appeals, 1219, 1220, 1783
- Borders, 1241
- Citizenship, 1219
- Contraband, 1782
- Criminals, 1219
- "Danger to the public", 1784
- Day passes, 1782
- Deportation, 1243
- Due process, 1783
- Enforcement, 1241, 1242, 1782, 1783
- Fair access, 1219
- 15-day period, 1783
- Fraudulent documents, 1782, 1783
- Illegal immigration, 1242
- National security, 1241
- Report to Parliament, 1783
- Rule of law, 1219
- Serious crime, 1220
- See Journals of the Senate
- Temporary release, 1782
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bosa, Peter, 1219-20, 1782, 1784
 - Di Nino, Consiglio, 1241-44, 1782-84
 - Hastings, Earl A., 1243

Income Tax Act

- Deductibility of fees for student associations, presentation of petitions, 2100
- Federal Court of Appeal, decision to strike down child support provisions, government position, qu, 453

Income Tax amendment bill C-59, 1r, 1236; 2r, 1256-57, 1287-89; ref to com, 1289; rep without amdt, 1339; 3r, 1362; r.a., chap. 3, 1995, 1446

- Age credit, 1257
- Atlantic Canada, 1288

Income Tax amendment bill C-59—Cont'd

Business meals, 1257
"Butterfly transactions", 1257
Capital gains, 1257, 1288
Charitable donations, 1257, 1288
Entertainment expenses, 1257
Home Buyers' Plan, 1288
Life insurance, 1257
Mine reclamation expenses, 1257
Regional investment tax credits, 1257
RRSP-based Home Buyers' Plan, 1257
Small business deduction, 1257
Special investment tax credits, 1288
Tabling of tax bills, 1288
Tax shelters, 1257
Speakers: Senators
Bryden, John G., 1256-57
Oliver, Donald H., 1287-89

Income Tax amendment bill C-70. 1r, 1801; 2r, 1878-81; ref to com, 1881; rep without amdt, 1889; 3r, 1889; r.a., chap. 21, 1995, 1919

Debt forgiveness, 1879, 1880
Deficit reduction, 1878
Foreclosures, 1879, 1880
Foreign affiliates, 1879
Funeral and cemetery arrangements, 1879
Mutual funds, 1879
Objections and appeals, 1879
Real estate trusts, 1879
Securities, 1879
Tax fairness, 1878, 1879
Speakers: Senators
Hervieux-Payette, Céline, 1878-80, 1889
Simard, Jean-Maurice, 1880-81

Income Tax amendment bill C-9. 1r, 302; 2r, 315-16, 326-28; ref to com, 328; rep without amdt, 332, 336; 3r, 360; r.a., chap. 13, 1994, 478

GST credits, 316
Home buyers' plan, 316
Investment tax credit, 316
Quarterly instalment payments, 316
Small Business Financing Program, 316
Speakers: Senators
Angus, W. David, 326-27, 328
Kirby, Michael, 315-16, 336
Molgat, Gildas L., 332, 360
Stewart, John B., 327-28

Income Tax Amendments Revision bill C-15. 1r, 332; 2r, 382-83; ref to com, 383; rep without amdt, 397; 3r, 425; r.a., chap. 7, 1994, 478

Gender related terms, 382
Speakers: Senators
Kirby, Michael, 382, 397
Simard, Jean-Maurice, 382-83

Income Tax Conventions bill S-2. 1r, 41; 2r, 98-100; ref to com, 100; rep without amdt, 183; 3r, 203; r.a., chap. 17, 1994, 664

Capital gains, 99
Categories of rules, 98
Dividends, 99
Double taxation relief, 99
Interest, 99
International "juridical" double taxation, 98, 100
Non-discrimination, 99
Pensions, 99
Protocol with Netherlands, 98, 99
Right to tax, 98

Income Tax Conventions bill S-2—Cont'd

Royalties, 99
Tax treaties, 98, 99, 100
Speakers: Senators
Kinsella, Noël A., 99-100
Olson, H.A., 98-99

Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995 bill C-105. 1r, 2152; 2r, 2178-79; ref to com, 2180; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2234; r.a., chap. 37, 1995, 2240

Bill initiated in Commons, 2179, 2234
Copyright royalties, 2178
Double taxation, 2178
Exemptions to interest, 2178
Withholding tax rate, 2178, 2179
Speakers: Senators
Bosa, Peter, 2178-79
Kinsella, Noël A., 2179
Sylvain, John, 2179

Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-27. 1r, 511; 2r, 558-50; ref to com, 560; rep without amdt, 627; 3r, 655; r.a., chap. 21, 1994, 664

Automobile operating cost benefits, 558
"Cross-border purchase butterfly", 559
Depreciable property, 559
GST, 560
Life insurance companies
Loss of source of income, 559
Mining, 559
RRSP investments, 559
Residence rule, 559
Retirement income plans, 558
Scientific research and experimental development, 558, 559
Securities, 559
Tax increases, 559
Tax system, 560
Technical amendments, 558
Speakers: Senators
LeBreton, Marjory, 559-60
Thériault, L. Norbert, 558-59

Indian affairs

Cigarette smuggling on native reserves, 47
Clean-up of Canadian National train wreck debris on Birdtail Sioux Reserve, government position, qu, 1452-53, (r) 1684
Contraband alcohol reserves, 96-97
Legal action against Canadian National Railway, government position, qu, 1453, (r) 1684
Negotiations on Oka, appointment of chief federal negotiator, st, 527
Status of negotiations on Oka, role of chief federal negotiator, qu, 512-13

Indian Affairs and Northern Development, savings in 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1652Industry Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1637Industry, science and technology research, cuts to budget, timing for release of study, government policy, qu, 2350-51, (r) 2609Industry, trade and commerce, Hibernia drilling modules, tabled, 310Information Commissioner, annual reports tabled, 743, 1773

Infrastructure program

- Cutback in government spending, effect on employment, government position, qu, 356-57, (r) 850
- Effect on construction industry, government position, qu, 2234
- Financing for Kanata Palladium, government position, qu, 335
- Financing of professional sports infrastructure, government position, qu, 335, (r) 849
- Formula resolved among levels of government, qu, 399
- Government spending, effect on employment, renovations to athletic facilities in Edmonton and Calgary, qu, 359, (r) 850
- Request of municipalities of Canada, st, 394
- Saskatchewan Rural Roads Project, announcement by Deputy Minister, st, 393
- Source of funds for job creation, government position, qu, 400-01

Inquiries

- Aboriginal Peoples, native self-government, 689, 1018
- Agriculture, grain handling capacity of Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert, 377, 409-11, 540-41
- Agriculture, response of Minister to reports of Standing Senate Committee, 2362
- Amateurism in journalism in Canada, 550, 643-46
- Book entitled "Above the Law", 848, 1063-65
- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, 132, 208-11, 229-32, 244-46, 260-66, 328-31, 369-75, 427-28, 537-40, 560-64, 589-94, 607
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, 1237, 1261-70, 1291-93, 1348-50, 1462-64, 1503-07, 1523-25, 1608-11
- Canada Council, closure of Art Bank, 1761, 1974-75
- Revised, 1782
- Canada Council, consultations on the future, 1165, 1195-98, 1232-33
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, thirty-sixth annual meeting held in Huntsville, Ontario, 1802, 2051-52
- Celebration of Christmas in Canada, 1057, 1127-29
- Child abuse and mortality, inquiry, 2010, 2219-22
- Child abuse and neglect, death of Matthew Vaudreuil, 2382
- Christmas, way of celebration in Canada, 42, withdrawn, 331
- Civil Justice Review, 1890-91, 2052-56
- Constitution Act, 1867, powers of Senate, 2501
- Constitutional implications of unilateral provincial attempt to declare sovereignty or separation, 769, 797-99, 1050-51
- Environment, sustainable development, 1237, 1622-25
- Environment and conservation, 1843, 2103-05
- Firearms bill, 2348, 2372-76
- General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, application of rules to agricultural marketing structures, 512
- General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, intellectual property rights and Third World agricultural development, 1450, 1513-15
- Government of Canada, human rights policies, 550, 640-43, 790-92
- Health care, training of workers in underserved regions, 600, 647-49
- Health, establishment of special committee on euthanasia, 25-26, 124-30
- Health, extension of Veterans Independence Program to senior citizens, 78, 195-98
- Health, impact of changes to tobacco taxes, 161, 266, 317-19, 523-25, 717, 782
- Health, impact of thyroid disease in Canada, 1689, 1756-58
- Human rights, establishment of standing committee, 93, 404-06, 564-66
- Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Ninety-fourth conference held in Bucharest, Romania, 2231, 2368-69
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Ninetieth Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Canberra, Australia, 9, 61-62
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Inter-Parliamentary Conference on North-South Dialogue for Global Prosperity, Ottawa, Canada, 9, 62-63
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Ninety-first Conference, Paris, France, 421, 525-26

Inquiries—Cont'd

- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Ninety-second Conference, Copenhagen, Denmark, 873, 923-26
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Ninety-third Conference, Madrid, Spain, 1615, 1656-58
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Special Session of Inter-Parliamentary Council on Fiftieth Anniversary of creation of United Nations, 2068, 2162-63
- Joint Parliamentary Delegation, official visit to Brazil, 1650, 2050-51, 2161
- Justice, damage to parliamentary process, 2462, 2632-33, 2635-38
- Justice, request of minister for investigation by Canadian Judicial Council into remarks of Quebec judge, 2501
- Law of parliamentary privilege, 984-85, 1019-22
- Lightstations, report of the Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee, 1843, 2345
- Mexico, present state of affairs, 1339, 1510-13
- Ministerial response to Senate Committee reports, 2153, 2222-26
- National Film Board, failure to fulfil commitment, 302, 681-82
- National Unity, results of Quebec referendum, 2166, 2353-56
- North American Free Trade Agreement, transition period for application of rules, 512
- Nova Scotia, research reports on black community, 901, 959-61
- OECD international survey on adult literacy, 2443
- Official Languages Act, necessity of evaluating the law, 1679, 1755-56
- Peace in Europe, 1574
- Practice of Family Law in Ontario, 1958
- Proposals for Social Reform, 873, 906-08
- Public Works, future of Harbourfront Centre, 1529, withdrawn, 1569
- Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, 421, 608-12
- Relationship between Parliament and the courts, 985, 1065-69
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, response of government to report of Special Joint Committee, 1211, 1258-61, 1464-66
- Second World War, participation of Canadian troops in Italian campaign, 550, 782-83, 877
- Security and Intelligence, possibility of establishing Senate committee, inquiry, 1085, 1194-95, 1221, 1508-10
- Senate
 - Absence of approval for various projects, 994, 1051-53, 1127, 1350
 - Impact of decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, 1526, 1592-95, 1644-47, 1656
- Social programs in Canada, 2416, 2599-605
- South Africa, first democratic elections, 421, 566-70, 640, 793-97
- Supreme Court of Canada, decision on privileges of the Court, 2176, 2356-60
- State of culture in Canada, 1500
- Transport, Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, consultations in British Columbia, 1039, 1153-56
- Transport, New Brunswick rail service, 933, 961-62
- United Nations, Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, China, 2110, 2236-39, 2386-89
- United Nations, International Conference on Population and Development, 933, 1105-07, 1125-27, 1150-52
- Veterans affairs
 - Canadian Vietnam Veterans Memorial, 110, 173-75
 - Fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, 354, 407-09, 507-08
 - Royal Canadian Legion, 856, 877-79, 1050
 - Status of merchant navy veterans, 320, withdrawn, 682
 - Violence in society, 1356, 1466-68, 1495-98

Intergovernmental affairs

- Consultations with provinces on matters concerning fiscal transfers, qu, 1598-99
- Possibility of agreement on professional development, qu, 985

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, policy on administration of inter-parliamentary activities, equality between Houses of Parliament, qu, 1134-36

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee

Membership, 103

Reports

- 1st, National Finance Committee budget, adopted, 280
- 2nd, Scrutiny of Regulations Committee budget, adopted, 281
- 3rd, Scrutiny of Regulations Committee budget, adopted, 281
- 4th, Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 449, adopted, 477
- 5th, Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 450, adopted, 477
- 6th, Public Works plan for Parliamentary Precinct, tabled, 450
See Journals of the Senate
- 7th, Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee budget, 548, adopted, 588
- 8th, Transport and Communications Committee budget, 548-49, adopted, 588
- 9th, Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee budget, 549, adopted, 589
- 10th, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, 618, adopted, 640
- 11th, Agriculture and Forestry Committee budget, 618-19, adopted, 640
- 12th, National Finance Committee budget, 619, adopted, 640
- 13th, Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1082-83, 1124, adopted, 1175-77
International activities of parliamentarians, 1177
Inter-parliamentary relations, 1176-77

Speakers: Senators

- Corbin, Eymard G., 1176-77
MacEachen, Allan J., 1177
- 14th, Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders budget, 1083, adopted, 1124
 - 15th, Budget for CSCE Parliamentary Assembly, 1083, adopted, 1125
 - 16th, Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide supplementary budget, 1083, adopted, 1125
 - 17th, Parliamentary Associations, 1181, 1206-08, adopted, 1231-32
APEX fares, 1207
Contracting for outside professional services, 1207
Four-and-four proposal, 1207
Joint inter-parliamentary council on parliamentary associations, 1207
Mandatory reporting, 1207
Program costs, 1207
Spousal participation, 1207
Travel costs, 1207
 - 18th, Staff report entitled "Task Force on the Internet", 1210, adopted, 1230-31
 - 19th, Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee budget, 1372; adopted, 1460
 - 20th, National Finance Committee supplementary budget, 1372; adopted, 1460
 - 21st, Re-examination of Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1372-73, 1460-62, adopted, 1507-08
 - 22nd, Respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1487, 1507, adopted, 1603-08

Speakers: Senators

- Corbin, Eymard G., 1604
Di Nino, Consiglio, 1603, 1604, 1607
Doody, C. William, 1507
Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1603-04, 1607
Graham, B. Alasdair, 1604-05
Hastings, Earl A., 1487, 1507, 1603, 1605-06, 1608
Kenny, Colin, 1604
Lynch-Staunton, John, 1603, 1604, 1605, 1607
MacEachen, Allan J., 1606-07

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration—Cont'd

Speakers: Senators

- Stewart, John B., 1607
Stollery, Peter, 1604
Thériault, L. Norbert, 1604, 1607
- 23rd, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, 1583, adopted, 1602
 - 24th, Agriculture and Forestry Committee budget, 1584, adopted, 1602
 - 25th, Approval of 3/12 of committee budgets, 1584, adopted, 1603
 - 26th, Parliamentary Associations, 1995-96 budgets, 1584
See Journals of the Senate
 - 27th, Aboriginal Peoples Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 28th, Agriculture and Forestry Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 29th, Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 30th, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 31st, National Finance Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 32nd, Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 33rd, Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 34th, Library of Parliament Joint Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 35th, Scrutiny of Regulations Joint Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 36th, Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 37th, Transport and Communications Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 38th, Official Languages Joint Committee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 39th, Veterans Affairs Subcommittee budget, 1774, adopted, 1885
See Journals of the Senate
 - 40th, National Finance Committee supplementary budget, 2500, adopted, 2543
 - 41st, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee supplementary budget, 2500, adopted, 2543-44
 - 42nd, Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee budget, 2500, adopted, 2544
 - 43rd, recommending adoption of Supplementary Estimate, 1995-96, 2555, adopted, 2628-29
Computer communications network, 2628, 2629
Early Departure Program, 2628, 2629
In-house printing, 2628, 2629
Sound system, 2629
Special committees, 2628, 2629
 - 44th, recommending adoption of Senate Estimates, 1996-97, 2556, adopted, 2630-31
Budget reductions, 2630
In-house printing, 2630
Senators' research and office expenses, 2630
Staff reductions, 2630
 - 45th, Bill C-110 Special Senate Committee budget, 2556, adopted, 2631
Senate budget 1994-95, 7, 37, 59-61, 89, adopted, 100-03

International Assembly of French-Speaking Parliamentarians

- Exchange of information and seminar held in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, st, 2346-47
- Executive meeting held in Porto Novo, Benin, report tabled, 1281
- Meeting held in Beirut, Lebanon, report of Canadian section tabled, 1801
- Meeting of Executive and Committee on Parliamentary Affairs held in Bamako, Mali, on March 6 and 7, 1995, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 1547
- Nineteenth General Assembly, report tabled, 42
- Report of Canadian delegation and financial report of Twenty-first session held in Ottawa and Quebec City, 2501
- Report of Canadian section and financial report of 22nd session of General American Assembly, 2416
- Seminar held in Port-au-Prince, report tabled, 2501
- Tenth session of Regional Assembly, report tabled, 131

International relations, human rights, government policy, qu, 606, (r) 834

International terrorism, report of Canadian Security Intelligence Service, st, 1354-55

International trade

- 1994 export statistics, st, 1222-23 Agreement on participation of provinces, government position, qu, 1574
- Dispute with European Union on newsprint, government position, qu, 1776, (r) 2076
- Export statistics, st, 2538
- Pearson Airport agreements
 - Meeting of minister with British counterpart, request for particulars, qu, 1586, (r) 1779
 - Meeting of minister with British counterpart at G-7 summit in Halifax, government position, qu, 1762
- Relations with European Union, impact on local industries, government position, qu, 1600, (r) 2071-72
- Reprieve from planned embargo on Canadian furs, possibility of banning leg-hold traps, government position, qu, 2365
- Sale in Russia of United States pharmaceuticals, st, 131
- Canadian representations, government position, qu, 216-17
- Status and acceptance of NAFTA, government position, qu, 110-11
- Sugar, favourable Canadian International Trade Tribunal ruling, st, 2207

International Women's Day, st, 1296

International Year of the Family, st, 378

Inter-Parliamentary Delegation to Australia, report tabled, 877

Inter-Parliamentary Union

- Inter-Parliamentary Conference on North-South Dialogue for Global Prosperity, Ottawa, Canada, rep tabled, 8, inquiry, 9, 62-63
- 90th Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Canberra, Australia, rep tabled, 8, inquiry, 9, 61-62
- 91st Conference, Paris, France, rep tabled, 421, inquiry, 421, 525-26
 - Canada and France, bilateral relations, 525
 - Bilateral trade, 525
 - Fishing quotas, 525
 - Human rights, 526
 - Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, 526
- 92nd Conference, Copenhagen, Denmark, rep tabled, 872, inquiry, 873, 923-26
 - Cultural exchanges, 923
 - Fourth World Conference on Women, 925
 - Gender neutral language, 924
 - Human rights abuses, 925
 - Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, 924
 - Twelve Plus Group, 925

Inter-Parliamentary Union—Cont'd

- 92nd Conference—Cont'd
 - "20/20" formula, 926
 - University exchange programs, 924
 - Uruguay Round, 924
 - Women in political life, 925
 - World Summit on Social Development, 924, 926
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bosa, Peter, 923-25
 - Spivak, Mira, 925-26
- 93rd Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Madrid, Spain, rep tabled, 1615, inquiry, 1615, 1656-58
 - Canada-Spain fishing, 1657
 - Human Rights of Parliamentarians, 1658
 - United Nations Security Council, 1658
- Speaker: Senator
 - Bosa, Peter, 1656-58
- 94th Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Bucharest, Romania, rep tabled, 2230, inquiry, 2231, 2368-69
- Special Session of Inter-Parliamentary Council on Fiftieth Anniversary of creation of United Nations, rep tabled, 2068, inquiry, 2068, 2162-63
 - Security Council, 2162-63

Ivany, Terry W., President and CEO, VIA Rail

Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1401-02, 1403-05, 1406

Jalbert, the late René (deceased Jan. 21/96)

Tributes, 2553-54

Jessiman, Hon. Duncan J.

- Auditor General amendment bill C-207, 663
- Budget
 - Elderly benefits assessed by household income, government position, qu, 953
 - Reduction of federal debt and annual deficit, government policy, qu, 952-53
 - Registered Retirement Savings Plans, government position on possible changes, qu, 994-95, (r) 1112
- Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st, 580
- Citizenship, conferral of Citation upon Yude Henteleff, Q.C., st, 1335
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 468, 469
- Criminal Code amendment (sentencing) bill C-41, 1870-73
 - Incarceration rate, 1871
 - Sexual orientation, 1872-73
- Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8, 363-65
 - Fleeing suspect, 363, 364
 - Force, degree of, 363, 364
 - Foreign fishing vessels, 365
 - International law, 365
 - Peace officers, 363, 364
- Economy
 - Expected increase in debt service costs, government position, qu, 1109
 - Possible redemption of Canada Savings Bonds, government position, qu, 1109
- Gun control legislation, presentation of petition, 2317
- HMCS Winnipeg, commissioning of new frigate, st, 1836
- Health, Canada Health Act, plan to amend, government position, qu, 1598
- Justice, parole supervision of high risk offenders, government position, qu, 985, (r) 1188-89
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2427
- Manitoba, Progressive Conservative victory in provincial election, st, 1544

Jessiman, Hon. Duncan J.—Cont'd

- National defence
 - Canadian Airborne Regiment, reasons for disbandment, qu, 1356, (r) 1986-87
 - St-Jean Military College, effects of proposed closure on maritime students, qu, 216, (r) 309, 668
- National finance, report of Auditor General on national debt, government position, qu, 2111
- Pearson Airport Agreements Special Committee report
 - 2nd, Address to His Excellency the Governor General requesting documents, 2190-92, 2193
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 732-34, 828
 - Canadian Bill of Rights, 732, 733, 734
 - Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 732, 733
 - Nixon Report, 732
- Quebec, impending election and referendum, action for national unity, government position, qu, 111
- Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36, 943-44
 - Arbitration, 943, 944
 - Compensation, 943
- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1385, 1386
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 70-71

Johnson, Hon. Janis

- Communications, Radio Canada International, future prospects for continuance, report of Senate committee on continued funding, government position, qu, 2489, 2490
- Employment equity bill C-64, 2157-59, 2494-95
 - Aboriginal peoples, 2157, 2158
 - Canadian Human Rights Commission, 2158
 - Disabled persons, 2157, 2158
 - Downsizing, 2159
 - "Merit system", 2159
 - "Numerical" goals, 2158
 - Parliament as an employer, 2158
 - Visible minorities, 2157
 - Women, 2157, 2158
- Environment, federal management of radioactive waste material, report of Auditor General of Canada, government position, qu, 1663, (r) 2072-73
- Environment, review of Canadian Environmental Protection Act, report of Commons committee, government position, qu, 2403-04
- Environment, sustainable development, inquiry, 1237, 1622-25
 - Air quality, 1624
 - Cod fishery, 1625
 - Global environmental crisis, 162
 - Habitat preservation, 1622
 - Network of wilderness lands, 1622
 - Ozone layer, 1623
 - Sockeye salmon, 1625
 - Sustainable harvest, 1624
 - Water exports, 1624, 1625
 - Water management, 1624
 - Wildlife conservation, 1622
- Environment and conservation, inquiry, 1843, 2103-05
 - Harvested trees, 2105
 - Louisiana Pacific oriented strand board plant, 2105
 - Soil conservation, 2104
 - Sustainable development, 2103
 - Toxic chemicals, 2104
 - Wetland conservation, 2104
 - "Zero till" farming, 2104
- Fisheries and oceans
 - Cuts in departmental budget, demise of Winnipeg freshwater science teams, government position, qu, 1842, (r) 2080-81

Johnson, Hon. Janis—Cont'd

- Fisheries and oceans—Cont'd
 - Memorandum of understanding to transfer freshwater science teams to Department of Environment, government position, qu, 1842
- Harbourfront Literary Festival of Authors, st, 2165
- Health
 - Centres of Excellence for Women's Health
 - Nature and funding, government position, qu, 136, (r) 221
 - Outcome of site selection process, government position, qu, 2100
 - Income Tax Act, Federal Court of Appeal, decision to strike down child support provisions, government position, qu, 453
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdots, 2322-23
 - Registration, 2323
- Railway Safety amendment bill C-21, 457
 - Barriers to access, 457
 - Native people, 457
 - Rights-of-way, 457
 - Trespassing, 457
- Social affairs
 - Implementation of national child care strategy, government position, qu, 1375, (r) 1552-53
 - Reform of child support systems, government position, qu, 1357, (r) 1551-52
 - Training Initiatives Program, amount of funds available from Human Resources Development, government position, qu, 1633, (r) 1695

Johnson, late Dr. George, tributes, 1976

Joint Parliamentary Delegation, official visit to Brazil, inquiry, 1650, 2050-51, 2161

Speakers: Senators

- MacDonald, Finlay, 2161
- Olson, H.A., 2050-51

Joint Parliamentary Delegation to Brazil, rep tabled, 1649

Justice

- Appointment of sister of Minister of Transport to Court of Queen's Bench of New Brunswick, government position, qu, 1301
- Authority for statement on political non-involvement in police investigations, government position, qu, 2465-66
- Criminal Code, proposed revisions to accommodate cultural differences, qu, 914-15
- Firearms legislation, efficacy of research of Minister, government position, qu, 2272
- Firearms registration bill, availability of copies to senators, government position, qu, 1215, st, 1223
- Gun control legislation
 - Avowal by the provinces not to finance registration, government position, qu, 1662, (r) 1988
 - Comments of Prime Minister on provincial responsibility, request for clarification, qu, 1662, (r) 1989-90
 - Consultation with provinces prior to introduction of legislation, government position, qu, 1662, (r) 1988-89
 - Financial self-sufficiency of registration program, government position, qu, 1662, (r) 1989
- Impact of gun control legislation on rural society, government position, qu, 1358-59
- Manhunt in British Columbia, reinstatement of death penalty, st, 2461
- Minister's view on efficacy of jailing non-violent young offenders, application of same principle to transgressors against firearms legislation, government position, qu, 2271-72
- Parole supervision of high risk offenders, government position, qu, 985, (r) 1188-89

Justice—Cont'd

- Political non-involvement in police investigations, statement of minister to media, st. 2460-61
- Government position, qu. 2465
- Re-establishment of Law Reform Commission, legislative agenda, qu. 2507-08
- Sale of Airbus Aircraft to Air Canada
 - Alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government
 - Approach to Swiss government for information, authority for procedure followed, government position, qu. 2487-88
 - Approval for letter to Swiss authorities, government position, qu. 2247-48
 - Departmental letter to Swiss authorities
 - Minister's involvement, qu. 2348-49
 - Source of leak to media, qu. 2318
 - Equality of citizens before the law, request for confirmation, qu. 2250
 - Knowledge of government ministers, request for particulars, qu. 2466
 - Knowledge of Minister, government position, qu. 2267
 - Libel action by former Prime Minister, source of funding for government counsel, qu. 2466
 - Motivation for RCMP investigation, government position, qu. 2248-49
 - Motivation of minister in instituting inquiries, qu. 2489
 - Numbers of RCMP investigations publicized, request for particulars, qu. 2250, (r) 2420-21
 - RCMP investigative procedures, request for particulars, qu. 2249-50
 - Rank of RCMP officers engaged in investigation, qu. 2349-50, (r) 2558
 - Request for apology to Government of Switzerland, qu. 2266
 - Request for tabling of letter to Swiss authorities, qu. 2250
 - Request for answer, qu. 2317-18
 - Stage of treaty with Switzerland at time of request, government position, qu. 2488-89, (r) 2610
- Justice, damage to parliamentary process, inquiry, 2462, 2632-33, 2635-38
 - Air Canada bill C-129, 2632, 2633, 2635
 - Airbus scandal, 2632, 2633, 2635-38
 - Allegations against Mulroney, 2632, 2633, 2635-38
 - Speaker: Senator
 - Cools, Anne C., 2632-33, 2635-38
- Justice, request of minister for investigation by Canadian Judicial Council into remarks of Quebec judge, inquiry, 2501
- Karla Homolka bill S-11, 1r, 2110; point of order, 2139-43; Speaker's ruling, 2367-68; order discharged and bill withdrawn, 2368
 - Bill of attainder, 2139, 2140
 - Bill of pains and penalties, 2140, 2142
 - Law of Parliament, 2141
 - Private bills and public bills, 2139
 - Retroactive law, 2143
 - Speakers: Senators
 - Carstairs, Sharon, 2139
 - Cools, Anne C., 2139, 2140-42
 - Kinsella, Noël A., 2139
 - Stewart, John B., 2142-43
- Karla Homolka plea bargain agreement, presentation of petition, 2132
- Kelleher, P.C., Hon. James F.
 - Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47, 1244
 - Name change, 1244

Kelly, Hon. William M.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 49-52
- Book entitled "Above the Law", inquiry, 848, 1063-65
 - Integrity, 1064
 - Oath of secrecy, 1064
 - Police and media, 1065
 - RCMP, 1064, 1065
 - Two-tiered justice system, 1064
- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 328-31
 - Canada Investment Fund, 330
 - Funding interest groups, 328
 - GDP, 330
 - Roll-back in payroll taxes, 329
 - Subsidy programs for business, 330
- Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association
 - Council of Europe Committee on Economic Affairs and Development, Paris and Strasbourg, France, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2265
 - Council of Europe Parliamentary Assembly, Strasbourg, France, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2265
- Celebration of Christmas in Canada, inquiry, 1057, 1127-29
 - "Christmas iconography", 1128
 - "Multiculturalisation", 1127
 - Political correctness, 1128
 - Respect, 1127
- Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, 1875-76
- Christmas, way of celebration in Canada, inquiry, 42; withdrawn, 331
- Communications, fairness and honesty in newspaper reporting, st. 378
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 - National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 386-88
- Explosives amendment bill C-71, 2155-56
 - Air Indian Flight 182, 2155, 2156
 - Detection, 2156
 - International Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection, 2155
 - Plastic explosives, 2156
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1602
- International terrorism, report of Canadian Security Intelligence Service, st. 1354-55
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports
 - 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 2021
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2294, 2295-97
 - Aboriginal and treaty rights, 2295, 2296
 - Antique firearms, 2295
 - Delayed enforcement, 2295
 - Governor in Council, 2296
 - Interprovincial smuggling, 2295
 - Minimum sentencing, 2296
 - Museums, 2295
- Marine Transportation Security bill C-38, 996-97
 - Cruise ships, 996
 - Ecoterrorism, 997
 - Montego Bay Convention, 996, 997
 - Security enforcement, 997
 - Terrorism, 996
- National Housing amendment bill C-108, 2515
- Powers of parliamentary committees, paper referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 1130
- Precincts of Parliament, proposed renovations to East and Centre Blocks, government position, 307
- Security and Intelligence, possibility of establishing Senate committee, inquiry, 1085, 1194-95, 1561-62
 - Bristow affair, 1194
 - CSIS, 1562
 - Communications Security Establishment, 1562
 - Confidence, 1194
 - Credibility, 1194

Kelly, Hon. William M.—Cont'd

- Security and Intelligence—Cont'd
 - External review mechanism, 1194
 - Mandate, 1194, 1195
 - Monitoring, 1194
 - Parliamentary monitoring, 1194
 - Restructuring of committees, 1194
 - Right-wing terrorism, 1562
 - Security Intelligence Review Committee, 1194, 1195
- Senate, time limits for interventions under the rules, st, 1886-87
- Solicitor General, efficacy of security arrangements at residence of Prime Minister, st, 2199
- Tobacco Products Restrictions bill S-14, 2582-84
 - Anti-tobacco advertising, 2583
 - Smuggling, 2583
 - Tobacco taxes, 2583
 - Ultralight cigarettes, 2583
- Transport, Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1580

Kenny, Hon. Colin

- Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1114-15, 1542; m for concurrence in Commons amds, 1802, 1832-33, 1834
 - Alternative fuel vehicles, 1114, 1115
 - Comparison to gasoline-powered vehicles, 1115
 - Costs, 1114
 - Environmental benefits, 1115
 - "FBI" program, 1115
 - Financial cost benefit, 1115
 - Fuel neutral, 1114
 - Government's fleet of vehicles, 1115
 - Incentives, 1115
 - Refuelling infrastructure, 1115
- Auditor General amendment bill C-83, 2405-06, 2422
 - Commissioner of Environment and Sustainable Development, 2405
 - Petitions from public, 2406
- Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company amendment bill C-81, 1719
 - Borrowing authority, 1719
 - Gateways Project, 1719
 - Peace Bridge, 1719
 - Transfer of administrative responsibility, 1719
- Business of the Senate, adjournment, 1776
- Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6, 380
 - Canada Oil and Gas Lands Administration, dissolution, 380
 - Pipelines, 380
- Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25, 846-47, 871
 - Employment, 846-47
 - Land claims, 846
 - Norman Wells, 846-47
 - Royalties, 847
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 1080, 1090, 1091, 1102-04
 - Air force, 1090, 1103
 - Defence budget, 1104
 - Defence spending, 1103
 - Reserves, 1080
 - Security interests, 1103
 - Security threats, 1102
 - Subsidizing regional development, 1104
 - Territorial sovereignty, 1103
- Canada Wildlife amendment bill C-24, 702-03
 - Administration and enforcement, 703
 - Canadian Cooperative Wildlife Health Centre, 703
 - Courts, 703
 - Definition of wildlife, 703
 - National wildlife areas, 703

Kenny, Hon. Colin—Cont'd

- Canada Wildlife amendment—Cont'd
 - Natural wildlife areas, 702
 - Penalties, 703
 - Protected areas beyond territorial sea, 703
 - Recovery of Nationally Endangered Wildlife, 702
 - Wildlife conservation, 702
- Canadian Environmental Assessment amendment bill C-56, 1138-39, 1163
 - Cabinet response to panel recommendations, 1139
 - "One project, one assessment", 1139
 - Public participation, 1139
- Department of Natural Resources bill C-48, 997-98, 1018
 - Amalgamation, 997
 - Greenhouse gas emissions, 998
 - Sustainable development, 998
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 - Authority to engage services, 385-86
 - Automated Weather Observation Stations, authority to table interim report, adopted, 1961-62
 - Empowered to permit coverage of meeting by electronic media, 1250, 1293, 1294
 - Jobs and the environment, authority to conduct study, 390
 - National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 386, 387, 390
- Reports
 - 3rd, National Protected Areas Strategy, 617-18
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 6th, Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25, 871
 - 9th, Department of Natural Resources bill C-48, 1018
 - 11th, Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1518, 1538-40, 1541-42
 - Bronson report, 1540
 - Conversion program, 1539
 - Government's fleet of vehicles, 1539
 - Industrial benefits, 1540
- United States, 1540
 - 17th, Automated Weather Observation Stations, interim report entitled "Pull Up! Pull Up!", tabled, 1981, 2201-02
 - 18th, Explosives amendment bill C-71, without amdt, 2174
- Explosives amendment bill C-71, 2133, 2201
 - Airports, 2133
 - Detection, 2133
 - Plastic explosives, 2133
 - Terrorism, 2133
 - Vapour detection, 2133
- Hastings, Hon. Earl A., tributes on resignation as chairman of Internal Economy Committee, 2606-07
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, policy on administration of inter-parliamentary activities, equality between Houses of Parliament, qu, 1135
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee reports
 - 13th, Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1124
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1604
 - 40th, National Finance Committee supplementary budget, 2500, adopted, 2543
 - 41st, Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee supplementary budget, 2500, adopted, 2543-44
 - 42nd, Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee budget, 2500, adopted, 2544
 - 43rd, recommending adoption of Supplementary Estimate, 1995-96, adopted, 2628-29
 - Computer communications network, 2628, 2629
 - Early Departure Program, 2628, 2629
 - In-house printing, 2628, 2629
 - Sound system, 2629
 - Special committees, 2628, 2629
 - 44th, recommending adoption of Senate Estimates, 1996-97, 2556, adopted, 2630-31

Kenny, Hon. Colin—Cont'd

Internal Economy—Cont'd

- Budget reductions, 2630
- In-house printing, 2630
- Senators' research and office expenses, 2630
- Staff reductions, 2630

45th, Bill C-110 Special Senate Committee budget, 2556, adopted, 2631

LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 970-71

LeBreton, Hon. Marjory, condolences on recent bereavements, 2607

Migratory Birds Convention, 1994 bill C-23, 699-701

- Aboriginal rights, 701
 - Commercialization, 699
 - Court authority, 700
 - Enforcement, 700 Fines, 70
 - Game officers, 700
 - Hunting and use, 699
 - International North American Waterfowl Management Plan, 700
 - Latin American program, 700
 - Memorandum of Understanding with Mexico, 701
 - Permit programs, 700
 - Poaching and smuggling, 700
 - Recreational activities, 699
 - Sanctuaries, 699
 - Traditional hunting, 701
 - Trafficking, 699
 - Waterfowl census, 701
 - Waterfowl harvesting, 701
 - Wildlife conservation, 700
- Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, 1917-18
- "Doubloon", 1917
 - Savings, 1917
 - Vending industry, 1918
- Senate, editorial in Ottawa Citizen, st. 1795
- Solicitor General, efficacy of security arrangements at residence of Prime Minister, government position, qu. 2200
- Sylvain, Hon. John, tributes on resignation from Senate, 2552

Keon, Hon. Wilbert J.

- Budget Implementation 1995 bill C-76, 1750-51
 - Aging population, 1750
 - Constitutional right to life, 1751
 - Health care funding, 1750, 1751
 - Medicare, 1751
 - Universal health care system, 1750, 1751
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1266
 - Financial strategy, 1266
- Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 660-61
 - Venture capital, 660
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee report
 - 11th, Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1540-41
 - Electrochemical source, 1541
 - Fuel cells, 1541
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee, Final report entitled "Of Life and Death", 1970-72
- Health, tobacco smuggling, government action plan, st. 90
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2042
- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1411

Kerr, Jean, felicitations on retirement from Senate, 783

Kinsella, Hon. Noël A., Opposition Whip

- Aboriginal peoples
 - Rate of illiteracy among native youth, government position, qu. 2384, 2385
 - Right to self-determination, government position, qu. 2384

Kinsella, Hon. Noël A.—Cont'd

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 146-49
- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1477, 1493
 - Museums Act and National Museums Act, 1477
- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, location and nature of management, government policy, qu. 323
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report
 - 26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2497
- Budget
 - Proposed closure of Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean
 - Request for clarification, qu. 334, (r) 668
 - Reversal of decision, government position, qu. 185, (r) 309, 668
 - Proposed closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, request for update, qu. 622
 - Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, st. 247
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1767-69
 - Canada Health and Social Transfer, 1768
 - Canada Scholarships Program, 1769
 - National standards, 1768
 - Research and development, 1768
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1366, 1367, 1368, 1503-05
 - Canada Social Transfer, 1504, 1505
 - National standards, 1504, 1505
 - Post-secondary education, 1504, 1505
 - Social policy, 1504
- Business of the Senate, 1270, 1952, 2129
 - Adjournment, 173, 764, 2190
 - Motion stands, 2175, 2176
- Canada-China relations
 - Human rights in China and Tibet, m. 1672
 - Trade in goods manufactured in labour camps, government policy, qu. 2112, (r) 2558
 - Visit to Canada of Chinese Premier, raising of human rights issues, government position, qu. 2112
- Canada Council, consultations on the future of the Council, inquiry, 1198
 - Budget for Canada Council, 1198
- Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28, 707-12
 - Access to loans, 710, 711
 - Appeal mechanism, 709
 - Canada Student Loans Program, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711
 - Ceiling on cost of university, 709
 - Cost of attending university, 711
 - Designation of appropriate authority, 708
 - Eligibility requirements, 708, 709
 - Financial need, 709
 - Loan collection, 710
 - Powers of lending institutions, 710
 - Privacy, 709
 - Regulations, 709
 - Repayment scheme, 710, 711
 - Student debt, 711
 - Scholastic standards, 708
- Canadian Citizenship Week, st. 301
- China, human rights and commercial relations, government position, qu. 553, 604-05, (r) 835-36
- Christmas Greetings, 2546
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 465
- Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2541-42
 - Adjudication mechanism, 2541
 - Canadian Bill of Rights, 2541
 - National public interest, 2541
 - Provincial representation, 2542
 - Supremacy of legislation, 2541
- Constitutional amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2556, 2559-63, 2620-21
- Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8, 363

Kinsella, Hon. Noël A.—Cont'd

- Criminal Code, Young Offenders (forensic DNA analysis) amendment bill C-104, 1950-51
 - Bodily substances, 1951
- Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53, 1217-18, 1229-30
 - Annual report, 1229
 - Citizenship, 1218, 1229, 1230
 - Multiculturalism, 1218, 1230
 - Parks and natural resources, 1230
 - Racism, 1230
- Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35, 763, 766, 767, 768
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1852
- Employment equity bill C-64, 2136, 2495
 - Human Rights Commission, 2136
 - Race Relations Foundation, 2495
 - Visible minorities, 2495
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee report 11th, Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1541
 - Legislative process, 1541
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee, authority to meet during sitting of the senate, 1446
- Excise Tax amendment C-32, 747-48, 749, 750
 - Fines, 748
 - Indian reservations, 748
 - Interprovincial smuggling, 748
 - Smuggling, 747
 - Surtax on profits, 747
 - Three-year limitation, 747
 - Tobacco prices, 747
 - U.S. health tax on cigarettes, 748
- Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90, 2137-38
 - Air transportation tax, 2137
 - Cigarette taxes, 2137
 - GST, 2138
 - Tobacco smuggling, 2137
- Explosives amendment bill C-71, 2133
- Foreign affairs, return to democracy in Nigeria, efforts of department, qu, 1744, (r) 2075-76
- Fournier, the late Hon. Edgar, tributes, 447
- Health, extension of Veterans Independence Program to senior citizens, inquiry, 195
- Health, report on tobacco packaging, request for particulars, qu, 1663
- Health and Welfare, establishment of special committee, inquiry, 129-30
 - Active euthanasia, 130
 - Assisted suicide, 130
 - Ethical issues, 130
 - Legal element, 129
 - Medical intervention, 130
 - Right to die, 130
- Human resources development
 - Recommendation of committee report concerning literacy, government position, qu, 1211
 - Reported illiteracy rate in Canada, government position, qu, 1183, 1184
- Human rights
 - Arms trading with transgressor nations, government policy, qu, 1376
 - Arrest of activist in China, government position, qu, 1983, (r) 2155
 - Discussions with Turkey on sale of aircraft, government position, qu, 1376-77
 - Establishment of Canadian Race Relations Foundation, government position, qu, 1804, (r) 2080
 - Further incarceration of Chinese dissident, government position, qu, 2491

Kinsella, Hon. Noël A.—Cont'd

- Human rights—Cont'd
 - Indonesia, upcoming visit by Prime Minister, discussions of abuses in East Timor, government position, qu, 2506
 - Possibility of imposing embargoes on transgressor countries, government position, qu, 1682, (r) 2113
 - Promised amendments to act, government position, qu, 1804
 - Ratification of Human Rights Convention of Organization of American States, government position, qu, 2069
 - Delayed answer, 2091, (r) 2155
 - Relationship to aid and trade, government policy, qu, 1716-17, (r) 2114
 - Reports on record of various countries compiled by Foreign Affairs Department, government policy, qu, 1377, (r) 1805
 - Request for answer, qu, 1717
 - Humphrey, the late John Peter, tribute, 1448-49
 - Income Tax Conventions bill S-2, 99-100
 - International double taxation, 100
 - Tax treaties, 100
 - Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995 bill C-105, 2179
 - Route of bills of this nature, 2179
 - Industry, science and technology research, cuts to budget, timing for release of study, government policy, qu, 2350, 2351, (r) 2609
 - Karla Homolka bill S-11, point of order, 2139
 - Bill of attainder, 2139
 - Private bills and public bills, 2139
 - Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2423-24
 - Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep, point of order, 2376-77, 2390, 2391, 2392
 - Literacy Action Day on Parliament Hill, st, 1209-10
 - Macdonald, Hon. John M., tributes on eighty-ninth birthday, 1571
 - Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1440, 1441, 1445
 - National defence
 - Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, st, 617
 - Disposition of Royal Military College at St-Jean, government position, qu, 503
 - St-Jean Military College, effects of proposed closure, st, 181, 201
 - National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee Appointment, 154
 - National Finance Committee report 6th, Interim, Estimates, 1994-95, 738
 - Collège militaire royal at St-Jean, 738
 - Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 696-97, 698
 - Canadian Bill of Rights, 696-97
 - Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 698
 - Denial of access to courts, 696, 698
 - International Bill of Human Rights, 697
 - Property rights, 697
 - Public policy, 698
 - Point of order, contravention of Rule 26, 240
 - Privilege (Hon. Sen. Cools), oral notice, 2205
 - Quebec, m for recognition as distinct society, 2455, 2529-30
 - Canadian public interest, 2455
 - Question of Privilege (Hon. Sen. Cools), m pursuant to Rule 44, 2107
 - Rabin, the late Yitzhak, tribute to former Prime Minister of Israel, 2198
 - Remembrance Day, st, 2227-28
 - Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, response of government to report of Special Joint Committee, inquiry, 1260, 1261
 - International Assistance Envelope, 1260
- Senate
 - House of Commons, changes to method of reporting committee proceedings, availability to senators of computer link, government position, qu, 1651

Kinsella, Hon. Noël A.—Cont'dSenate—Cont'd

- Mr. Duane Wilson, page, on the occasion of his resignation, best wishes for future, st. 1527-28
- Public statements by Minister of Transport regarding motives of certain senators, st. 1280-81
- Tributes to pages and to staff, 2044-45
- South Africa, readmittance into Commonwealth, st. 509-10
- Transport
 - Abandonment of holdings on Partridge Island, New Brunswick, government position, qu. 1534, (r) 1617
 - Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1565-67
 - Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1384, 1394-95, 1403, 1410, 1411, 1420, 1426-27
- Transport and Communications Committee, authority to study telecommunications, 1517
- United Nations
 - Fiftieth anniversary of founding, st. 1920-21
 - Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, China, inquiry, 2238
 - Canadian delegation, 2238
 - "Parliamentary observers", 2238
 - International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, st. 235, 1338
 - Universal Declaration of Human Rights, st. 2435
- Veterans affairs, m to provide site for Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, 431.
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 71, 72

Kirby, Hon. Michael J.

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee

- Authority to engage services, 1632-33, 1658
- Authority to examine regulations proposed to the Export Development Act, 8, 37
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 728, 838, 2316
- Authority to permit electronic coverage of proceedings, 211
- Study of state of Canadian financial system
 - Authority to extend date of presentation of final report, 2362
 - Authority to extend dates of final report, 994, 2316
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 183
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Income Tax Conventions bill S-2, without amdt, 183
 - 3rd, regulations proposed to the Export Development Act, tabled, 183, adopted, 243-44
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 4th, Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5, 280
 - 5th, Income Tax amendment bill C-9, 336
 - 6th, committee's work plan, tabled, 395-96
 - 7th, Excise Tax amendment bill C-13, without amdt, 396
 - 8th, Income Tax Amendments Revision bill C-15, without amdt, 397
 - 9th, Department of National Revenue amendment bill C-2, 435
 - 10th, Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-27, without amdt, 627
 - 13th, study of state of Canadian financial system, tabled, 950, 955-56, 1003-06, 1008-10
 - Co-insurance proposal, 1004
 - CompCorp, 1005
 - Consumer protection and consumer responsibility, 1003
 - Deductible system, 1004
 - Deposit insurance, 1003, 1004
 - Life and health insurance industry, 1004, 1005, 1006

Kirby, Hon. Michael J.—Cont'dBanking, Trade and Commerce Committee—Cont'd

- "Life and Health Insurance Policyholder Protection Fund", 1005
 - Policyholder protection fund, 1006
 - Regulatory system, 1003, 1006
 - Rehabilitation scheme, 1006
 - Superintendent of Financial Institutions, 1006
- 15th, Income Tax amendment bill C-59, without amdt, 1339
- 16th, Budget, study on financial system in Canada, 1450, adopted, 1495
 - See Journals of the Senate
- 18th, Budget, study of state of Canadian financial system, 1774
 - See Journals of the Senate
- 21st, 1992 Financial Institutions Legislation, confirmation of tabling of interim report and m for consideration, 2067
- 25th, Customs, Customs Tariff amendment bill C-102, without amdt, 2370
- 26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, with one amdt, 2398, 2446-49; m in amdt, 2449
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1364-66, 1367-68
 - Federal-provincial fiscal relations, 1365
 - GST, 1368
 - Government cuts, 1364, 1365
 - Medicare, 1367
 - National standards, 1365, 1366, 1367
 - Subsidy programs, 1365
 - Tax increases, 1365
- Canada Business Corporations amendment bill C-12, 673-75
 - Auditing of financial statements, 674
 - Dissolving a corporation, 674
 - Electronic filing, 674
 - Elimination of public financial disclosure requirements, 674
 - Exemption from filing documents, 674
 - Parliamentary review, 674
 - Retention of accounting records and files, 674
 - Small and medium-sized businesses, 673
- Canada-United States Tax Convention, 1984 amendment bill S-9, 1458-60
 - Arbitration mechanism, 1459
 - Charitable organizations, 1459
 - Collection of taxes, 1459
 - Double taxation, 1458
 - Social security payments, 1459
 - U.S. estate taxes, 1459
 - Withholding tax, 1458, 1459
- Certified General Accountants' Association bill S-8, 1258
 - French counterpart for English name, 1258
- Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93, 2182, 2183
 - Appeal mechanism, 2182
- Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5, 287-88
 - Generalized preferential tariff, 287
- Department of Industry bill C-46, 1112-14
 - Aboriginal business, 1114
 - Business network, 1112
 - Canada Community Investment Fund, 1112
 - Consumer policy, 1113
 - Director of investment, 1113
 - Federal Business Development Bank, 1112
 - Federal regional development, 1113
 - Fees, 1114
 - Information highway, 1113
 - Technology Partnership Program, 1112
 - Tourism, 1114
- Department of National Revenue amendment bill C-2, 383-84, 385
 - Auditing, 383
 - Consolidation of two departments, 383, 384
 - Customs officials, mandate and terms of reference, 383
 - Elimination of duplication, 383

Kirby, Hon. Michael J.—Cont'd

- Department of National Revenue amendment—Cont'd
- International trade, 384
- Security at border crossings, 384
- Tax collection, 383
- Unions, 385
- Income Tax amendment bill C-9, 315-16
 - GST credits, 316
 - Home buyers' plan, 316
 - Investment tax credit, 316
 - Quarterly instalment payments, 316
 - Small Business Financing Program, 316
- Income Tax amendment bill C-59, 1362
- Income Tax Amendments Revision bill C-15, 382
 - Gender related terms, 382
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-2, 203
- Pearson Airport Agreements Special Committee reports
 - 2nd, Address to His Excellency the Governor General requesting documents, 2159-60; m in amdt, 2160, 2161
 - 3rd, reserving right to hold further hearings and adjourning with no appointed date, 2591-93, 2594-99
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 677-79, 778-79
 - Cancellation clause, 677, 678
 - Management of airport, 678
 - Nixon Report, 678
 - Out-of-pocket expenses, 678
 - Public interest, 677, 678
 - Public policy problems, 677, 678
 - Reimbursement of developers, 678
- Sylvain, Hon. John, tributes on resignation from Senate, 2552

Kolber, Hon. Leo E.

- Rabin, the late Yitzhak, tribute to former Prime Minister of Israel, 2194-95

Korean and Second World War, information from Soviet Archives on disposition of armed forces personnel missing in action, tabled, 996

La Baie en Joie, congratulations to dancing troupe, st. 1835

La Cité collégiale, official inauguration, st. 2099

La Francophonie, sixth summit held in Cotonou, Benin, st. 2433

Lamer, Rt. Hon. Antonio, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal Assent, 1446, 2638

Lang, Hon. Daniel A.

- Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 578
- Public Service Health Care Plan, disparity in nursing care coverage, st. 599-600
- Tributes on retirement, 613-17
- Welcome upon return to chamber, st. 301

Lavoie-Roux, Hon. Thérèse

- Budget
 - Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, reversal of decision, government position, qu. 217
- Business of the Senate, 1370
- Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 416
- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 1044-46
 - Daviault case, 1044, 1045
 - Intent, 1044
 - Reckless conduct causing harm, 1045
 - Self-induced intoxication, 1044, 1045
 - Violence against women, 1045

Lavoie-Roux, Hon. Thérèse—Cont'd

- Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5, 226
 - David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1160-61
 - Employment equity bill C-64, 2493-94
 - Persons with disabilities, 2494
 - Visible minorities, 2494
 - Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, m to change name of committee in French, 1518, adopted, 1543
 - Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee, Final report tabled, 1705, 1787-91
 - Health, appointment of special committee on euthanasia and assisted suicide, m, 158
 - Health and Welfare, establishment of special committee, inquiry, 126-28
 - Costs of health care, 127
 - Criminal code, 126, 127
 - Ethics, 126
 - Euthanasia, definition, 127
 - Active, 127
 - Involuntary, 127
 - Non-voluntary, 127
 - Passive, 127
 - Voluntary, 127
 - Living will, 128
 - Human resources development
 - Reported illiteracy rate in Canada, government position, qu. 1184, 1185
 - Social Policy White Paper, government position, qu. 96, (r) 286-87
 - Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - Senate Estimates for the fiscal year 1994-95, 7, 100-01
 - Jalbert, the late René, tributes, 2554
 - National defence
 - Effects of closure of St-Jean Military College, qu. 136, (r) 308, 668
 - National Forum on Health, confusion and delay within government, qu. 515-16, (r) 850-51
 - National unity
 - Quebec referendum, possible reduction in elderly benefits, government position, qu. 2232
 - Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54, 1935-37
 - Access to client information, 1936
 - Appeal process, 1935
 - Cancelling benefits, 1935
 - Debt forgiveness, 1936
 - Information sharing, 1936
 - Retroactive benefits, 1936
 - Seniors' benefits, 1936
 - Voice mail, 1936
 - Women, 1936, 1937
 - St-Jean-Baptiste Day, felicitations to French Canadians, st. 742
 - Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee report
 - 2nd, Budget, subcommittee on Veterans Affairs, 547, adopted, 587
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 3rd, Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31 without amdt, 686
 - 4th, Department of Labour amendment bill C-30 without amdt, 757
 - United Nations, International Day of the Family, st. 448-49
- Law of parliamentary privilege, inquiry, 984-85, 1019-22
- Speaker: Senator Cools, Anne C., 1019-22

Lawson, Hon. Edward M.

- Canada Post Corporation, delay in delivery of mail, government position, qu. 2168

Lawson, Hon. Edward M.—Cont'd

- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2577-79
- Expression of apology, 420
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2323-26
 - Animal rights protectors, 2324
 - Competitive shooting, 2325
 - Farmers and ranchers, 2324
 - Native women's groups, 2325
- Senate, value of independent senators, government position, qu, 2092
- Twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2096-97
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, 66-67; considered in Committee of the Whole, 70
 - Collective bargaining, 66, 67
 - Final offer selection, 67

Leader of the Government

Fairbairn, P.C., Hon. Joyce

Leader of the Opposition

Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John

Learning Disabilities Association, st, 1485-86LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, Speaker of the Senate
(resigned Nov. 22/94)

- Appointment, 1
- Congratulations on his appointment as Governor General of Canada, 983
- Tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 963-72

Leblanc, the late Hon. Fernand E. (deceased Jan. 8/96)

Tributes, 2553

LeBreton, Hon. Marjory

- Budget 1995, reform of Old Age Security, effect on elderly women of application of clawback to household income, 1287
- Condolences on recent bereavements, 2607
- Economy, creation of jobs for women through infrastructure program, request for particulars, qu, 1716, (r) 2074-75
- Ethics of government, st, 1836
- Foreign affairs, projected cost of G-7 summit in Halifax, request for details, qu, 1761-62
- Gun control legislation, st, 2313-14
- Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-27, 559-60
 - "Cross-border butterfly", 559
 - GST, 560
 - RRSP investments, 559
 - Tax increases, 559
 - Tax system, 560
- Indian affairs, negotiations on Oka, appointment of chief federal negotiator, st, 527
- Justice
 - Political non-involvement in police investigations, statement of minister to media, st, 2460-61
 - Government position, qu, 2465
 - Sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government
 - Departmental letter to Swiss authorities, minister's involvement, qu, 2348, 2349
 - Request for apology to Government of Switzerland, qu, 2266
- Lobbyists Registration amendment bill C-43, 1652-55
 - Access to government, 1653
 - Administrative simplicity, 1653
 - Clarity principle, 1653
 - Openness principle, 1653

LeBreton, Hon. Marjory—Cont'd

- Lobbyists Registration amendment—Cont'd
 - Registration system, 1653
- Ontario, congratulations to Conservative government on taking office, st, 1956
- Senate, amendments to Bill C-22, refusal by Minister to appear before Senate Committee, qu, 1300
- Transport, Pearson Airport Agreements, meeting of Prime Minister with Matthews Group, request for details, qu, 1519
- Use of government aircraft, tabled, 2177
- Veterans Appeal Board, Order in Council appointment, government position, qu, 554
- Victory in Europe, fiftieth anniversary celebration ceremonies, alleged remarks of Prime Minister, st, 1614
- Violence against women, st, 1335-36

Legal and Constitutional Affairs

- Schedule of work of the committee
 - Position of chairman, qu, 2364-65
 - Response of chairman, 2370

Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to engage services, 184-85, 211
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 353, 1740, 1796, 1958, 2006-07
- Membership
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-22 no later than December 13, 1995, 2399, 2429-32, debate concluded, 2470; neg on div, 2484-85
- Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-68, 2109, 2121-24; m in amdt, adopted, 2124-25; as amended, adopted, 2125
- Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, m, 2166, 2185-89, 2235-36, 2262, 2272-78; vote deferred, 2278; neg on div, 2290-91
- Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69 no later than December 13, 1995, 2399, 2423; point of order, 2423-28; Speaker's ruling, 2428-29; m (con't), 2429, 2444-46, vote deferred, 2470; neg on div, 2483-84
- Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, 2370; point of order, 2370-71, 2376-80, 2381, 2389; Speaker's ruling, 2390-94
- Powers of parliamentary committees, paper referred to committee, 1070, 1129-30, 1153
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 92
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 420-21, 439-41, 485-98, m in amdt, neg on div, 498-99, rep adopted on div, 499-500
 - Commissions, 440, 485, 486, 487
 - General election, 488
 - Decennial census, 439
 - Lortie Commission, 485
 - Proportional representation, 439
 - Readjustment process, 485
 - Redistribution process, 486, 487, 488
 - Representation by population, 440
 - Special House Committee on Electoral Reform, 485
 - Two-year suspension, 439, 486, 488, 489, 490
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 3rd, Criminal Code, Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-8, without amdt, 451
 - 4th, interim, General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 482-83, adopted, 517
 - 5th, General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 483
 - 6th, Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendments, tabled, 547
 - 7th, Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations incorporation bill S-5, 548, adopted, 588
 - See Journals of the Senate

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee—Cont'd

Reports—Cont'd

- 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, with six amds, 788-89, 800-10; m in amdt, 810-13; allotment of time for debate, adopted on div, 813-14; m in amdt neg, 814-15; report adopted on div, 815-16
- Canadian Bill of Rights, 804
- Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 804
- Compensation, 802, 805
- Constitutionality, 803
- Courts, 806
- Democratic process, 806
- Government's mandate, 802
- Inquiry, 807, 808
- Nixon Report, 807, 808
- Provincial jurisdiction, 804
- Public interest, 802
- Rule of law, 801, 805
- See Journals of the Senate
- 9th, Criminal Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-42, with 6 amds, 1096-97; adopted, 1097
- See Journals of the Senate
- 10th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment 1995 bill C-69, with seven amds, 1725-27, adopted, on div, 1730-35
- See Journals of the Senate
- 11th, Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, without amdt but with observations, 1798-800
- 12th, Criminal Code amendment (sentencing) bill C-41, without amdt, 1923
- 13th, Criminal Code amendment (self-induced intoxication) bill C-72, without amdt, 1979
- 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 1979-80, 2019-24; m in amdt, 2024-30, neg on div, 2030-31; m in amdt neg on div, 2031-36; rep adopted, on div, 2036-37
- 15th, Criminal Code, Young Offenders amendment (forensic DNA analysis) bill C-104, without amdt but with an observation, 1980
- 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2243-46, 2252-62, 2278-90; point of order, 2291; con't, 2292-98; m in amdt, deferred, 2298-99; (con't) 2299-2312, 2320-42; m in amdt, neg on div, 2343-44; m for adoption of rep, neg on div, 2344
- Aboriginal peoples, 2252, 2254, 2256, 2258, 2260, 2262, 2279, 2282, 2284, 2285, 2287, 2295, 2296, 2304, 2305, 2328, 2329, 2330, 2331, 2334, 2336, 2337, 2340
- Animal rights protectors, 2324
- Antique weapons, 2253, 2254, 2295
- Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 2289, 2321
- Competitive shooting, 2325
- Confiscation without compensation, 2259, 2260
- Cost, 2290, 2335
- Customs, 2290
- Decriminalization, 2285, 2286, 2288
- Delayed implementation, 2259, 2261, 2282, 2289, 2295
- Domestic violence, 2300, 2302
- Draft regulations, 2253
- Enforcement, 2321
- Farmers and ranchers, 2324
- Governor in Council, 2253, 2288, 2296, 2302
- Guns as tools, 2297, 2298
- Interprovincial smuggling, 2289, 2295
- Mandatory minimum sentences, 2255, 2296
- Minister of Justice regulatory powers, 2254, 2255, 2261
- Museums, 2253, 2254, 2261, 2262, 2282, 2295, 2327, 2328, 2335
- National unity, 2286
- Native women's groups, 2325
- "Opting in" formula, 2252, 2255, 2260, 2289, 2290
- Ownership, 2321
- Prestudy of bills, 2294, 2295

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee—Cont'd

Reports—Cont'd

- Prison terms, 2253
- Provincial authority to legislate criminal law, 2289
- Regional representation, 2286
- Registration, 2253, 2254, 2262, 2280, 2281, 2283, 2284, 2288, 2297, 2301, 2320, 2321, 2323, 2332, 2333, 2334, 2337
- Regulation, 2288, 2289
- Safe storage regulations, 2300
- Senate's role, 2286
- Smuggling, 2281
- Suicide, 2300
- Treaties, 2328, 2329
- Speakers: Senators
- Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 2328-31
- Atkins, Norman K., 2334-35, 2336
- Bacon, Lise, 2320-22
- Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 2252-53
- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 2292, 2299, 2334
- Carstairs, Sharon, 2253-56, 2259, 2260, 2299, 2300
- Corbin, Eymard G., 2282
- DeWare, Mabel M., 2337-38
- Di Nino, Consiglio, 2292-93
- Doyle, Richard J., 2294
- Fairbairn, Joyce, 2341-42
- Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 2332-33
- Ghitter, Ron, 2256-59, 2260-61, 2262
- Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 2261
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 2292, 2293-94, 2295, 2312, 2334, 2337
- Gustafson, Leonard J., 2262, 2326-27
- Johnson, Janis, 2322-23
- Kelly, William M., 2294, 2295-97
- Lawson, Edward M., 2323-26
- Losier-Cool, Rose-Marie, 2327-28
- Lucier, Paul, 2260, 2283, 2284
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 2339, 2340-41
- Milne, Lorna, 2287-90
- Oliver, Donald H., 2281-82
- Pearson, Landon, 2303-05
- Perrault, Raymond J., 2340
- Pitfield, P. Michael, 2338
- Prud'homme, Marcel, 2291, 2299
- Roux, Jean-Louis, 2279-80
- St. Germain, Gerry, 2256, 2262, 2283, 2287, 2300-01, 2309-12
- Sparrow, Herbert O., 2262, 2290, 2297-99, 2300, 2309
- Spivak, Mira, 2261, 2262, 2284-87
- Stanbury, Richard J., 2308-09
- Stratton, Terry, 2260, 2287, 2301-03
- Tkachuk, David, 2305-08
- Watt, Charlie, 2336-37
- 17th, Evangelical Missionary Church (Canada West District) bill S-12, with 1 amdt, 2436
- 18th, Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories amendment bill C-45, without amdt but with one observation, 2436-37

Leneker, Terry, Chief Executive Officer, Canadian National

- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1385, 1386, 1388, 1389, 1390

Lewis, Hon. P. Derek

- Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, forty-first Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference, Colombo, Sri Lanka, rep tabled, 2362
- Criminal Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-42, 883-85
- Affidavit, 883
- Arrest and interim release scheme, 884
- Arrest warrant by coroner, 884

Lewis, Hon. P. Derek—Cont'd

Criminal Law Amendment—Cont'd

- Bail dealt by telephone, 884
- Closed-circuit television, 883
- Crime, increasing and unreported, 883
- Criminal courts, 883
- Eight-day remand rule, 883
- Pretrial detention, 884
- Pretrial proceedings, publicity, 884
- Privacy of witnesses, 884
- Protecting victims of violence, 884
- Publishing judicial proceedings, 884
- Uniform Law Conference of Canada, 883

Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment bill C-4, 381-82

- North American Agreement on Environmental Cooperation, 381
- North American Agreement on Labour Cooperation, 381
- Tri-national panels, 381, 382

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 310-12

- Allocation of seats among provinces, 311
- Constitutionality of bill, 312
- Constituency boundaries, 311
- Decennial census, 311
- Electoral boundaries commissions, 311, 312
- Criteria to set boundaries, 312
- Formula for determining number of seats, 311
- Increase in members of House of Commons, 312
- Readjustment of boundaries, 311, 312
- Redistribution process, 311
- Royal Commission on Electoral Reform (Lortie), 311
- Timeframe for readjustment, 312

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

- Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 2006
- Report

14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, m in amdt, 2031-32

Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick William, tribute, 684-85

Scrutiny of Regulations Committee reports

- 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, 214, adopted, 243

See Journals of the Senate

2nd, Illegal dispensations, tabled, 1038, 1149, 1150

Government response, 1149

Rules of joint committees, 1150

3rd, Disallowance, tabled, 1631-32, 1695-96

See Journals of the Senate

Transport, Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1579

West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1324, 1333

L'Heureux-Dubé, Hon. Claire, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

Royal Assent, 772-73

Library of Parliament

- Rep of Librarian for 1992-93 tabled, 420
- Rep of Librarian for 1993-94 tabled, 1689

Library of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee

- Appointment of Senators, 161
- Authority to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 202; m withdrawn, 317
- Estimates, 1994-95, vote 10 ref, 184
- Estimates, 1995-96
 - Supplementary (D), vote 10d ref, 1315
 - Vote 10 ref, 1315
- Membership, message from Commons, 48-49
- Report
 - 1st, terms of reference, 249; adopted, 369

Lightstations, report of the Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee, inquiry, 1843, 2345Literacy

- Authenticity of kits released, government position, qu, 1891-92
- Future measures to be instituted, government position, qu, 2439-40
- Making Scenes Between the Lines pamphlet, targeted adult market, government position, qu, 1894-95
- OECD international survey, link between adult literacy and employment, government position, qu, 2438
- OECD international survey, possibility of federal-provincial conference, government position, qu, 2443
- Request for kits for senators, qu, 1895
- Visibility of literacy secretariat, government position, qu, 2439

Literacy Action Day on Parliament Hill, st, 1209-10Lobbyists Registration amendment bill C-43. 1r, 1598; 2r, 1637-39, 1652-55; ref to com, 1655; order rescinded and ref to National Finance, 1677; rep without amdt, 1727; 3r, 1747; r.a., chap. 12, 1995, 1793

- Access to government, 1653
 - Administrative simplicity, 1653
 - Clarity principle, 1653
 - Code of Conduct, 1639
 - Conflict of Interest Code, 1637
 - Ethics Counsellor, 1637, 1639
 - Holtmann report, 1637, 1638
 - Levels of lobbyists, 1638
 - Tier I and Tier II, 1638
 - Not-for-profit organizations, 1638
 - Openness principle, 1653
 - Political process, 1637
 - Procurement process, 1637
 - Registration, 1639, 1653
 - Trust, 1637
 - Types of lobbyists, 1638
 - Consultant, 1638
 - Corporate-in-house, 1638
 - Organization in-house, 1638, 1639
- Speakers: Senators
- LeBreton, Hon. Marjory, 1652-55
 - Pearson, Landon, 1637-39

Losier-Cool, Hon. Rose-Marie (introduced in the Senate Mar. 28/95), 1447-48

- Criminal Code, Young Offenders (forensic DNA analysis) amendment bill C-104, 1949-50
- Employment equity bill C-64, 2134-35, 2496
 - Aboriginal people, 2134
 - Canadian Human Rights Commission, 2135
 - Consultation, 2135
 - Disabled, 2134
 - Discrimination, 2134
 - Enforcement, 2135
 - Human Rights Tribunal panel, 2135
 - Quotas, 2135
 - Review of legislation, 2135
 - Visible minorities, 2134
 - Women, 2134
- Fergusson, the Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute to first female Speaker of the Senate, st, 2555
- Gun control legislation, presentation of petitions, 2110
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2327-28
 - Museums, 2327, 2328
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2041
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee report
 - 11th, Employment equity bill C-64, 2385
- Violence against women, st, 2264
- World Teachers' Day, st, 2097-98
- Youth, education and employment, st, 1711, 1712

Low, Mr. D. Martin, Senior General Counsel, Department of Citizenship and Immigration

Department of Citizenship and Immigration bill C-35, considered in Committee of the Whole, 765

Lucier, Hon. Paul

Business of the Senate, adjournment, 764
Clerk of the Senate
 Appointment of Gordon Barnhart, Esq., as honorary officer of the Senate, felicitations, 180
 Appointment of Paul Bélisle, Esq., as Clerk of the Senate, felicitations, 180
Constitutional amendments, veto proposals, effect on future status of Yukon, qu, 2418
Firearms bill C-68, 1819-20
 Cost of registration, 1819
 Lost or stolen firearms, 1819
Gingell, Judy, congratulations on appointment as Commissioner of the Yukon, st, 1469
Gun control legislation, presentation of petitions, 2231, 2416
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2260, 2283, 2284
 Opting out formula, 2260
 Registration of long guns, 2283
Ministerial response to Senate committee reports, inquiry, 2226
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, centennial of association with the Yukon, st, 2242-43
Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1393, 1394
Yukon First Nations Land Claims Agreement bill C-33, 751-56, 787
 Champagne and Aishihik First Nations, 754
 Employment, 751
 Fish and wildlife harvesting rights, 751, 754
 Fishing branch ecological reserve, 754
 Heritage protection, 754
 Hunting and fishing rights, 754
 Land and financial compensation, 751
 McArthur Wildlife Sanctuary, 754
 Nacho Nyak Dun First Nation, 754
 Nisutlin River Delta National Wildlife Area, 755
 Old Crow Flats Special Management Area, 754
 Outfitting concession, 754, 755
 Right to buy interest, 751
 Teslin Tlingit Council Agreement, 755
 Vuntut Gwitchin First Nation, 753, 754
 Vuntut National Park, 754
Yukon Surface Rights Board bill C-55, 1042-43, 1093, 1094-96
 Disputes, 1043, 1095
 Land access, 1042
 Land claims, 1095
 Self-government, 1095
 Surface Rights Board, 1042, 1043
 Nomination of members, 1043, 1095
 Powers, 1095
 Umbrella final agreement, 1042, 1094, 1095

Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John, Leader of the Opposition

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 26-30
Agriculture and Forestry Committee report
 4th, Interim, Future of agriculture in Canada, 1147
 Committee budget, 1147
 5th, Future of agriculture in Canada, power to travel, adopted, 1175
Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, m for concurrence in Commons amds, 1833
Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1455
Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, appointment and competence of chairman, government position, qu, 250-51
Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee

Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John—Cont'd

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee—Cont'd

Reports
 6th, committee's work plan, tabled, 395
 13th, study of state of Canadian financial system, tabled, 950
Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, tributes on occasion of resignation, 740
Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, 290, 292-93, 294-95
Bosnia
 Canada's commitment to NATO air strikes, government position, qu, 93
 Use of air strikes, Canada's role, government position, qu, 94, 114-15
Budget
 Extension of wage freeze for public servants, government position, qu, 134, 135
 Grants to municipalities in lieu of taxes, government policy, qu, 216, (r) 310
 International Space Station Program, status of Canada's commitment, government position, qu, 161, 162, 163
 Request for clarification, qu, 236-37, (r) 1985-86
 Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, reversal of decision, government position, 219
 Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 246
Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 531, 532, 533
Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1366-67, 1368
 GST, 1368
Business of the Senate, 63, 64, 78, 207, 478-79, 556, 800, 877, 1081, 1369, 1370, 1951, 1952, 1953
 Adjournment, 249, 511, 680
 Motion stands, 2175
 Points of order, 2371, 2372
Canada-China relations, diplomatic representations to China on sixth anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, request for information, 1691
Canada Council, consultations on the future, inquiry, 1233
 Self censorship, 1233
Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25, 846
Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st, 577
Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee
 Appointment, 268-69
Chambers, the late Hon. Egan, tributes, 434
Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 412-13
China, human rights and commercial relations
 Government policy, qu, 601, 602
 Government position, qu, 553
Clerk of the Senate
 Appointment of Gordon Barnhart, Esq., as honorary officer of the Senate, felicitations, 179
 Appointment of Paul Bélisle, Esq., as Clerk of the Senate, felicitations, 179
Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, amendments to regulations tabled, 547
Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 452; considered in Committee of the Whole, 462-63, 465, 466, 467, 472, 475
Conflict of interests, lobbying, influence peddling and selling access, qu, 354-55, (r) 456
Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2580, 2581, 2582
Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 987, 988
Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5, 226
David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1158-59
Delayed answers to oral questions, 915
Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2060
Economy, reduction in federal deficit, st, 1210
Election by secret ballot as Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, 40

Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John—Cont'd

- Elections Canada
 - Electoral boundaries commissions, introduction of new legislation, request for pre-study, qu, 1039
 - Readjustment of electoral boundaries based on 1991 census, government position, qu, 1039
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1847; point of order, 1896, 1900, 1901; m to refer question and message from Commons to com, 1966-67
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994, British Columbia, concerns of constituents, 394
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 341-42, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 637-39
 - Redistribution process, 341
 - Royal Commission on Electoral Reform (Lortie), 346
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 - Authority to engage services, 385, 386
 - National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 387
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, Special Senate Committee Report 1st, Budget, 587
- Everett, Hon. Douglas D., resignation from Senate, announcement and tributes, 20
- Federal-provincial relations, status of relations, government position, qu, 397, 398
- Firearms bill C-68, 1760, 1761; m instructing committee to table final report, 2123-24; m in amdt, 2124
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1620, 1622
- Foreign Affairs
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 988-89, 1084
 - Authority to monitor and report upon the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement, 391
- Foreign affairs, military intervention in Haiti and in Burma, government policy, qu, 628-29, (r) 851
- Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 840-41
- Goods and Services Tax
 - Application on reading materials, qu, 849
 - Removal of tax on reading materials, government position, qu, 1214
- Government, progress of legislation, government policy, qu, 42, 43
- Gun control legislation, presentation of petitions, 2090, 2132, 2177, 2247, 2400
- Human rights
 - Arms trading with transgressor nations, government policy, qu, 1376
 - Canada's historic leadership role, 545
 - Canada-China relations, government policy, 545
 - China, fifth anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, 543, 544
 - Discussions with Turkey on sale of aircraft, government position, qu, 1376
 - Possibility of imposing embargoes on transgressor countries, government position, qu, 1682
 - Request for debate on human rights and trade, government position, 914
 - Three Gorges Dam Project
 - Displacement of Chinese citizens, government position, qu, 914
 - Financial assistance, government position, qu, 914
- Indian affairs, status of negotiations on Oka, role of chief federal negotiator, qu, 512, 513
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee reports
 - 4th, Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 450, 477
 - 5th, Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 477
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1603, 1604, 1605, 1607
- Senate budget 1994-95, 102

Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John—Cont'd

- International trade
 - 1994 export statistics, st, 1222
 - Status and acceptance of NAFTA, government position, qu, 110-11
- Justice
 - Sale of Airbus Aircraft to Air Canada
 - Alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government
 - Approval for letter to Swiss authorities, government position, qu, 2247-48
 - Knowledge of Minister, government position, qu, 2268
 - Motivation for RCMP investigation, government position, qu, 2249
 - Rank of RCMP officers engaged in investigation, qu, 2350
 - Lang, Hon. Daniel A., tributes on retirement, 614
 - Lawson, Hon. Edward M., twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2096-97
 - LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 964-65
 - Leblanc, the late Hon. Fernand E., tributes, 2553
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, 2272-76
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69 no later than December 13, 1995, 2444-46
 - Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2376, 2378, 2379, 2389, 2390, 2391, 2392
- Reports
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 440, 441, 487, 489-91, 497, 498
 - 24-month suspension, 489, 490
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 789, 811
 - 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 2021, 2022; m in amdt, 2025-27; m in amdt, 2032
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2339, 2340-41
- Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 718-19
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1435-36, 1437, 1438, 1443, 1444
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 977
- Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.
 - Felicitations on appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 948
 - Twentieth-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2096-97
- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 889
- National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee Appointment, 155, 156
- National finance
 - Amount of deficit, government position, qu, 302, 303
 - Deficit reduction plan, government position, 515
- National Finance Committee reports
 - 6th, Main Estimates 1994-95, 657
 - 10th, Supplementary Estimates (B) and (C), 1994-95, 1076, 1077
 - Internal Economy Committee and Treasury Board, 1076, 1077
 - Supplementary Estimates for the Senate, 1076, 1077
- National Unity, result of Quebec Referendum, st, 2147
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2039
- New senators, 839
 - Introduction, 869, 991-92, 1447-48, 2059-60, 2550
- North American Free Trade Agreement, inclusion of Chile, influence on existing agreement, government position, qu, 1705, 1706, (r) 2114
- Official languages, access to francophones to Internet network, 1652
- Ontario, Progressive Conservative victory in provincial election, st, 1797
- Ontario Court General Division, m to strike special committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, point of order, 1628; point of order, 2170, 2171, 2172
- Parliament, program of legislation, government policy, qu, 282, 283

Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John—Cont'd

- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee report
 - 3rd, reserving right to hold further hearings and adjourning with no appointed date, 2593, 2594, 2621-22, 2623, 2624-25
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 679, 693-95, 696, 778, 825-27, 829, 861-63
 - Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 695
 - Cancellation clause, 694
 - Denial of access to courts, 695, 696
 - Nixon Report, 679, 693-94
 - Royal Recommendation, 829
- Points of order
 - Contravention of Rule 26, 240
- Precincts of Parliament, tunnel between East Block and Centre Block, request for information, qu, 1166
- Public Works
 - Cancellation of projects within parliamentary precincts, government position, qu, 1215-16, (r) 1536
 - Consultation with Internal Economy Committee on cancellation of project, qu, 1215, (r) 1536
- Quebec, m for recognition as distinct society, 2454, 2470-73
- Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 611
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy
 - Motion to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee report, 1244-45, 1247
 - Ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, point of order, 1016, 1018
- Scrutiny of Regulations Committee report
 - 2nd, Illegal dispensations, 1149-50
 - Rules of joint committees, 1149-50
- Selection Committee
 - Appointment, 16; m in amdt, 16
 - Authority to extend deadline for selection of members of Special Committee on Pearson Airport Agreements, 1632
- Report
 - 2nd, membership of committees, 24
- Senate
 - Bolduc, Maurice, felicitations on election as President of l'Association professionnelle des sténographes officiels du Québec, st, 1583
 - Distribution of Debates and Minutes to Members of the House of Commons, qu, 550-51
 - Status of Senator Kinsella, 2091
- Social affairs, amount of funding available for child care strategy, government position, qu, 1375, 1376, (r) 1553
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee
 - Authority to examine Veterans Health Care Regulations, 107-08
- South Africa, first democratic elections, inquiry, 421
- Spicer, Erik J., Esq., tribute on retirement as Parliamentary Librarian and designation as Parliamentary Librarian Emeritus, 277
- Sylvain, Hon. John, tributes on resignation from Senate, 2551
- Transport
 - Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1382, 1383, 1384, 1392, 1393, 1397, 1398, 1399, 1402, 1403, 1409, 1410, 1417, 1418, 1421, 1424, 1425
 - New Brunswick rail service, inquiry, 962
- Pearson Airport agreements
 - Authorship of departmental report, request for clarification, qu, 1469-70, (r) 1534
 - Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, request for clarification, qu, 1472
 - Instructions to Mr. Nixon on his mandate to review, government position, qu, 1470, (r) 1537
 - Possible government inquiry, st, 880
 - Verbal statements of Minister of Transport, request for written confirmation, qu, 1535
- Pearson International Airport
 - Cancellation of leases preventing redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, qu, 1535

Lynch-Staunton, Hon. John—Cont'd

- Pearson International Airport—Cont'd
 - Comments of minister on delay in renovations on Terminals 1 and 2, government position, qu, 1585
 - Delay in redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, 1452, (r) 1536-37
 - Importance of passage of Bill C-22 to development, statement by Leader of the Government, st, 1295
 - Motion to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1590-92
 - Request for government response, qu, 1529, 1530
 - Transfer of administration to local airport authority, nature of legal impediment, qu, 1500, 1501
 - Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1282, 1350-52
 - Pearson International Airport redevelopment, alleged involvement of Prime Minister, qu, 1451
 - Public statements by Minister of Transport regarding motives of certain senators, qu, 1283, 1284
 - Position of Leader of the Government, qu, 1298, 1299, (r) 1361-62
 - Timing of vote on motion to strike Special Committee, request for response, qu, 1530, 1531
- Transport and Communications Committee
 - Authority to continue special study on report of National Transportation Act Review Commission, 234
 - Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 527
- Veterans affairs, m to urge government to provide site for Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, m in amdt, 521
 - Veterans Appeal Board, Order in Council appointment, government position, 554
 - Visit of United States President to Ottawa, st, 1248
 - West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 69, 73, 74
 - West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1316; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1325-26, 1327, 1330, 1331, 1332, 1333
 - World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1070-71, 1073, 1164
- MacDonald, Hon. Finlay
- Atlantic Canada, dependence on Scotia Synfuels project, reinstatement of special investment tax credit, government position, qu, 186-87, 517, (r) 555
 - Auditor General amendment bill C-207, 663
 - Budget Implementation, 1994 bill C-17, 556
 - Canada Student Finance Assistance bill C-28, 712
 - Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 660
 - Provinces' role of counterpoint, 660
 - Electoral Boundaries Commission, revisions to riding boundaries, status of hearings, qu, 284
 - Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 639
 - Energy, Scotia Synfuels project, production of synthetic fuels, st, 202
 - Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 - Empowered to permit coverage of meeting by electronic media, 1293, 1294
 - Ethics Counsellor, Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, relevance to parliamentarians, qu, 2383-84
 - Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11, 673
 - Clearing stocks of kiddy packs, 673
 - Foreign Affairs Committee, authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 1925
 - Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 841
 - Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - 4th, Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 449
 - Joint Parliamentary delegation, official visit to Brazil, inquiry, 2161

MacDonald, Hon. Finlay—Cont'd

- Justice, re-establishment of Law Reform Commission, legislative agenda, qu. 2507, 2508
- Lang, Hon. Daniel A., tributes on retirement, 615
- New senators, introduction, 992
- Nova Scotia, success of private shortline railway operations, st. 352
- Pearson Airport Agreements Special Senate Committee
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 1958
 - Change in date of first public hearing, 1888
- Reports
 - 1st, Budget, 1739, 1770, 1771
 - 2nd, Address to His Excellency the Governor General requesting documents, 2109, 2143-45; m in amdt, 2160-61
 - 3rd, reserving right to hold further hearings and adjourning with no appointed date, 2486, 2584-86, 2587-91
- Point of order (Senators' Statements), 546
- Powers of parliamentary committees, paper referred to Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, 1070, 1129-30
- Ritchie, the late Charles Stewart Almon, tribute, 1738-39
- Scotia Synfuels Project, grandfathering of investment tax credit, tabled, 996
- Second World War, participation of Canadian troops in Italian Campaign, inquiry, 783
- Senate, criticism by members of the media, correction, 2444
- Transport
 - Importance of passage of Bill C-22 to development of Pearson International Airport, government position, qu. 1285
 - Existence of any impediment to redevelopment of Pearson Airport, government position, qu. 1303, (r) 1361-62
- Pearson Airport agreements
 - Definition of legislative solution, government position, qu. 1471
 - Legislative solution to dispute, government position, qu. 1587, 1588
 - Request for public inquiry, government position, qu. 901, 902
- Pearson International Airport
 - Cancellation of lease agreement, qu. 1040-41, (r) 1169
 - Nominees to Canadian Airport Authority, government position, qu. 912-13, (r) 1011-12
 - See appendix, p. 1023
 - Possible negotiation of lease, government position, qu. 985-86, (r) 1012
 - Remaining impediments to redevelopment, qu. 1132
- Radio Canada International, invitation to Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Trade to respond to Senate committee report, qu. 1227
- Relationship of Canadian Airport Authority to development of Pearson International Airport, qu. 913
- Transport and Communications Committee
 - Radio Canada International, authority to study implications of reduction in funding, 200
- Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67, 1665-66
 - Bureau of Pensions Advocates, 1665
 - Human cost of bill, 1665
 - Merging Canadian Pension Commission and Veterans Appeal Board, 1665
 - Minister's power, 1665

Macdonald, Hon. John M.

- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 890-91
- Tributes on eighty-ninth birthday, 1571-72
- Veterans affairs, Royal Canadian Legion, inquiry, 856, 877-79
 - Head-dress policy, 878-79

MacEachen, P.C., Hon. Allan J.

- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1456, 1457
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2614-16, 2618

MacEachen, P.C., Hon. Allan J.—Cont'd

- Foreign affairs
 - G-7 Halifax summit, request for tabling of pertinent documents, qu. 1839
 - Sierra Leone, proposed national elections, contributions to support fund, government position, qu. 2466-67
 - Strategy for G-7 summit, recommendations of Joint Committee Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, st. 1631
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee reports
 - 13th, Senate Estimates 1995-96, adopted, 1176-77
 - International activities of parliamentarians, 1177
 - 17th, Parliamentary Associations, 1231
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1606-07
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 970
- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 891-92
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders, point of order, 1781
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee
 - Motion to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee Report, 1211, 1233-34, 1245, 1246, 1247, 1314
 - Report, tabled, 916, 944-47
 - Bipolar world order, 945
 - International security, 946
 - Sustainable development, 945
 - Trade interests, 945
 - Ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, point of order, 1014, 1015-16, 1018; Speaker's ruling, 1193-94
 - Dissenting opinion, 1014, 1016
 - Minority reports, 1016
 - Shared costs of joint committees, 1016
 - Stand-alone reports, 1014
- Transport, Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1580
- Trudeau and Our Times*, misleading information in Globe and Mail book review, st. 1157
- United Nations
 - Fiftieth anniversary of founding, st. 1922
 - Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, China, inquiry, 2239
 - Vatican delegation, role of, 2239
 - Human rights in China, defeat of resolution, request for copy of text, qu. 2211
 - World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1173-74

Macquarrie, Hon. Heath (retired Sept.18/94)

- Foreign affairs, economic assistance to Middle East, government position, qu. 501, (r) 586-87
- Foreign policy, congratulations on government initiatives, st. 685-86
- Middle East, peacemaking efforts, st. 91
- Prince Edward Island
 - Fixed link, change in design of bridge, environmental assessment review process, government position, qu. 185, 186
 - Fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 172, 204, 227-29, 242, 243
 - Dredging, 228
 - Dust storms, 228
 - Environmental Assessment Review Panel, 228
 - Wood Islands-Caribou ferry, 242
 - Transfer of Northumberland Strait Bridge office to Charlottetown, tabled, 851-52
 - Upgrading of Charlottetown Harbour facilities, tabled, 852
- Spicer, Erik J., Esq., tribute on retirement as Parliamentary Librarian and designation as Parliamentary Librarian Emeritus, 278
- Tributes on retirement, 718-26

Maheu, Hon. Shirley (introduced Feb. 1/96), 2250-51

- Tribute on appointment to Senate, 2606

Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77. 1r, 1428; 2r, 1428-34; ref to Committee of the Whole, 1434; consideration in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Hon. Lucienne Robillard taking part in the debate, 1434-45; rep without amdt, 1445; 3r, 1445; r.a., chap. 6, 1995, 1446

Agriculture, 1429

Collective bargaining, 1429

Conciliation commissioner's report, 1432, 1433

Conciliation officers, 1429

Mediation-arbitration commissions, 1430

Minister of Labour, role of, 1431, 1432

Railroading requirements, 1434

Speakers: Senators

Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1441, 1442

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 1441

Corbin, Eymard G., 1445

Doody, C. William, 1439

Fairbairn, Joyce, 1428-31, 1434

Graham, B. Alasdair, 1445

Kinsella, Noël A., 1440, 1441, 1445

Lynch-Staunton, John, 1435-36, 1437, 1438, 1443, 1444

Murray, Lowell, 1431-34, 1437, 1441, 1445

Olson, H.A., 1434

Stewart, John B., 1439, 1440, 1443, 1444

and witness in Committee of the Whole

Robillard, Hon. Lucienne, Minister of Labour, 1435, 1436, 1437-38, 1439, 1440, 1441-42, 1443, 1444

Major, Hon. John, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

Royal Assent, 76, 2410-11, 2546-47

Manitoba

Federal environmental assessment of forestry projects, government position, qu, 2405

One hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of legislation, st, 1630-31

Progressive Conservative victory in provincial election, st, 1544

Marchand, P.C., Hon. Len

Aboriginal Peoples Committee, authority to examine and report upon the treatment of aboriginal veterans following World War I, World War II and the Korean War, 8-9, 37-39

Manitoba Justice Inquiry, 38, 39

Métis veterans, 38, 39

National Aboriginal Veterans Association, 39

Transfer of land ownership, 38, 39

British Columbia Treaty Commission bill C-107, 2406-07, 2423, 2508

Commissioners, 2407

First Nations Summit, 2407

Regional advisory committees, 2407

Treaty Negotiation Advisory Committee, 2407

Diefenbaker, the late Rt. Hon. John George, one hundredth anniversary of birthday, st, 2089

Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 893

Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60, 1255-56

Boat Harbour Final Agreement, 1255, 1256

Compensation, 1255, 1256

Indian moneys, 1256

Relocation fund, 1255, 1256

Riparian rights, 1255

Treatment facility, 1255, 1256

Sport, Memorial Cup champions, congratulations to Kamloops Blazers Hockey Team, st, 481

Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, 760-61

B.C. land settlements, 760

Marine Atlantic, M.V. Bluenose ferry service, tabled, 2083

Marine Transportation Security bill C-38. 1r, 912; 2r, 920-23; ref to com, 923; rep without amdt, 984; 3r, 996-97; r.a., chap. 40, 1994, 1177

Cruise industry, 921, 922, 996

Ecoterrorism, 997

Foreign ships, 922

International Maritime Organization Standards, 921, 922

Law of the Sea, 922

Marine disasters, 920

Montego Bay Convention, 996, 997

NAFTA, 922

Piracy and fraud, 922, 923

Security enforcement, 997

Ship identification number scheme, 922

Terrorism, 920, 921, 996

Violence against passenger vessels, 921

Speakers: Senators

Kelly, William M., 996-97

Petten, William J., 920-21, 996, 997

St. Germain, Gerry, 921-23

Marshall, Hon. Jack (retired Nov. 26/94)

Business of the Senate, 139, 484

Canada 125, breakdown of distribution of medals, tabled, 852

Canada Pension Commission, exceptional incapacity allowance, tabled, 202

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, evaluation of operations of corporation, qu, 252, (r) 325

Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee

Motion to appoint, 255

Carter, the late Hon. Chesley William, tribute, 77

Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, protection and management of straddling stocks, tabled, 852

Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 461-62; considered in Committee of the Whole, 473

Composition of Advisory Board of Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, tabled, 852

Estimates, 1993-94, National Finance Committee, authority to study Supplementary Estimates (B), 203-04

Estimates, 1994-95

Reduction in services to veterans, tabled, 517

Unemployment insurance cuts, plight of lobster fishermen, qu, 166, (r) 221

Ethics Counsellor, details of terms of reference, tabled, 852

Fisheries and oceans, 1993 Canadian fish exports, tabled, 239

Health, extension of Veterans Independence Program to senior citizens, inquiry, 78, 195, 196-98

Accessibility to hospital services, 196

Acute care, 196

Ambulatory health care, 197

Home adaptations, 197

Home care, 197

Transportation services, 197

Industry, Trade and Commerce, Hibernia drilling modules, tabled, 310

Korean and Second World War, information from Soviet Archives on disposition of armed forces personnel missing in action, tabled, 996

Merchant Navy Veteran and Civilian War-related Benefits Act, effect on parallel legislation, st, 248

Merchant navy veteran and civilian war-related benefits amendment bill S-4, 92, 156-57, 260

Merchant navy veterans

Canadian volunteer service medal, tabled, 202

Status of benefit claims, tabled, 505

National Defence, Consultative Committee on Social Change, tabled, 138

National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee Appointment, 151

Marshall, Hon. Jack—Cont'd

- National defence
 - Costs of cancelling helicopter program, tabled, 852
 - Present structure and facilities of Canadian Forces training system, tabled, 852
 - Reduction of Canadian forces capability, government position, qu, 359-60, (r) 435-36
 - Reduction of military personnel, government policy, st, 352
 - Testing of LSVW vehicles, tabled, 852
- National Film Board, failure to fulfil commitment, inquiry, 302, 681-82
- National Community Tree Foundation Program, tabled, 336
- Newfoundland
 - Canadian Forces Reserves, tabled, 310
 - Effects of federal infrastructure program, tabled, 239
- Order of Canada, status of Advisory Council, tabled, 310
- Selection Committee report
 - 2nd, membership of committees, 24-25
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee
 - Authority to examine future development of Department of Veterans Affairs, 110, 176, 350-51
 - Authority to examine Veterans Health Care Regulations, 42, withdrawn, 107, 108
- Report
 - 5th, future development of the Department of Veterans Affairs, tabled, 898-900
- Subcommittee on Veterans Affairs authorized to meet during sitting of the Senate, 689
- Tributes on papal citation of special recognition, 845
- Tributes on retirement, 977-82
- Veterans affairs
 - Benny Farm housing project, approval of CMIC proposal, st, 181-82
 - Breakdown of pensionable disabilities, tabled, 852
 - Canada's role in World War II, st, 481-82, 509
 - Canadian veterans of Korean War, m to examine inconsistencies in recognition of service, 184
 - Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, st, 300
 - Inquiry, 109-10, 173-75, 194, 195
 - Motion to provide site for memorial, 176, 428-30, 431, 432, 433, 506, 507, 518-19
 - 49th parallel, 519
 - Motion in amdt, 519-20, 521
 - National Capital Commission mandate, 518, 519
 - Peacekeeping, 518
 - Point of order, 436-37
 - U.S. Embassy in Ottawa, 519
 - Vietnam War, Canada's role, 518
 - Presentation of petitions, 250, 267, 282, 302, 354, 501, 880
- Dental care for veterans, tabled, 310
- Dieppe Raid, m to honour veterans by creating commemorative decoration, 302, 375-76
- Disability pension applications to Canadian Pension Commission, tabled, 852
- Entitlement under War Veterans Allowance, tabled, 852
- Fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, inquiry, 354, 407-09
 - Canada Remembers Program, 407
- Fiftieth anniversary of World War II battles, st, 40-41
- Financial support to veterans associations, tabled, 852
- Particulars of Canadian Forces personnel deployed in South East Asia, tabled, 852
- Particulars of staffing, tabled, 852
- Proposed site of Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, st, 213
- Recipients of disability pensions, tabled, 852
- Recommendations to Task Force on Program Review, tabled, 765
- Responsibility for administering the Pension Act, tabled, 852
- Shaughnessy Hospital, British Columbia, tabled, 310
- Stalag Luft III, fiftieth anniversary of "The Great Escape", st, 279-80
- Status of Canada training regulations, tabled, 852
- Status of merchant navy veterans, inquiry, 320, withdrawn, 682

Marshall, Hon. Jack—Cont'd

- Veterans affairs—Cont'd
 - Status of pertinent legislation, tabled, 517
 - Veterans Independence Program, qualification of veterans, qu, 222
 - Veterans' pensions and entitlements, tabled, 672
 - War medals and awards, tabled, 310
- Veterans Affairs Canada
 - Breakdown of deployment of staff, tabled, 239
 - Vacancies in Corner Brook District Office, tabled, 203
- Veterans Independence Program, qualification of veterans, tabled, 202
- Veterans Land Administration, status of activities under Veterans Land Act, tabled, 852

Mass media, existing principles of journalism, movement to abolish, st, 1486

McDermott, Mr. Michael

- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 67

McLachlin, Hon. Beverley, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal Assent, 298, 1334, 1498

Meighen, Hon. Michael E.

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report
 - 13th, study of state of Canadian financial system, 1049
 - Regulator, 1049
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 1118-23, 1124
 - Civilian employees, 1120
 - Cuts in headquarters staff, 1120
 - Militia, 1122
 - National Defence White Paper, 1119, 1120, 1121, 1122, 1123
 - Reduction of forces, 1120
 - Reserves, 1121, 1122, 1123
 - Submarines, 1121
 - Training, 1122
 - Youth Training and Education Program, 1122

Member of Parliament, definition, st, 2381

Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85.

- 1r, 1913; 2r, 1938-42; ref to com, 1942; rep without amdt, 1978; 3r, 2013-18; point of order, 2018; 3r (con't), on div, 2018-19; r.a., chap. 30, 1995, 2057

- Assad plan, 1939-40
- Common-law relationships, 2017
- Compensation, 1938, 1939, 1940
- Double dipping, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 2016, 2017
- Minimum age, 1939

Speakers: Senators

- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1940
- Corbin, Eymard G., 2015-16, 2018
- De Bané, Pierre, 1938-40, 1942
- Fairbairn, Joyce, 2018-19
- Forrestall, J. Michael, 2016
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 2013
- Prud'homme, Marcel, 1940-42, 2016-18, 2019
- Simard, Jean-Maurice, 2013-15

Merchant navy veteran and civilian war-related benefits amendment bill S-4. 1r, 92; 2r, 156-57, 173, 193, 243, 259-60, 606Speakers: Senators

- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 606
- Marshall, Jack, 156-57, 260
- Molgat, Gildas L., 173, 193, 243, 259-60

Merchant navy veterans, Canadian volunteer service medal, tabled, 202

Metropolitan Toronto

- National Forum on Health, lack of representation of region, government position, qu, 903
- Proposals for Social Reform, lack of representation on working group, government position, qu, 902-03, (r) 1228-29

Mexico, present state of affairs, inquiry, 1339, 1510-13

- NAFTA, 1510, 1511, 1512, 1513
- Politics, 1510-13

Speaker: Senator

- Stollery, Peter A., 1510-13

Middle East, peacemaking efforts, 91

Migratory Birds Convention, 1994 bill C-23, 1r, 627; 2r, 699-702;

- ref to com, 702; rep without amdt, 726; 3r, 726; r.a., chap. 22, 1994, 773

- Aboriginal rights, 701, 702
- Commercialization, 699
- Court authority, 700
- Deforestation, 702
- Enforcement, 700
- Fines, 700, 701
- Game officers, 700
- Hunting and use, 699
- International North American Waterfowl Management Plan, 700
- Latin American program, 700
- Memorandum of Understanding with Mexico, 701
- Permit programs, 700
- Poaching and smuggling, 700
- Recreational activities, 699
- Sanctuaries, 699
- Traditional hunting, 701
- Trafficking, 699
- Urban sprawl, 702
- Waterfowl census, 701
- Waterfowl harvesting, 701
- Wildlife conservation, 700

Speakers: Senators

- Kenny, Colin, 699-701
- Spivak, Mira, 701-02

Miles, Johnny, Cape Breton marathoner, tributes on ninetieth birthday, st, 2131-32

Military College

- See Budget
- National Defence

Milne, Hon. Lorna (introduced in the Senate Oct. 3/95), 2058-60

- Firearms bill, letter inviting submissions to travelling panels of senators, st, 2206
- Gun control legislation, st, 2314
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
- 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2287-90
 - Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 2289
 - Cost, 2290
 - Customs, 2290
 - Decriminalization, 2288
 - Delayed implementation, 2289
 - Governor in Council, 2288
 - Interprovincial smuggling, 2289
 - Opting-in formula, 2289, 2290
 - Provincial authority to legislate criminal law, 2289
 - Registration, 2288
 - Regulation, 2288, 2289

Ministerial response to Senate Committee reports, inquiry, 2153, 2222-26

Speakers: Senators

- Carney, Pat, 2153, 2222-26
- Lucier, Paul, 2226

Ministry, lack of focus of Cabinet ministers, qu, 666

Ministry of Canadian Heritage, funding levels for national sports organization, tabled, 1170

Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-40, 1r, 687; 2r, 704-05; 3r, 729; r.a., chap. 26, 1994, 773

Speakers: Senators

- Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 705
- Bosa, Peter, 729
- DeWare, Mabel M., 705
- Neiman, Joan, 704-05

Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendments, ref to com, 510-11; rep, 547-48

Molgat, Hon. Gildas L., Deputy Leader of the Government

- Aboriginal Peoples Committee, authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 872

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 243, 259

- Termination of debate on eighth sitting day, 8, 36

Adjournment, 2, 103, 104, 184, 214, 298, 301, 350, 353, 397, 421, 501, 871

Appropriation No. 3, 1993-94 bill C-19, 267, 268, 273-74, 287

- Increases and decreases, 274

Appropriation No. 1, 1994-95 bill C-20, 267, 268, 274, 287

Army Cadet League of Canada, Myriam Bédard, recognition of involvement as army cadet, st, 182

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report

- 5th, Income Tax amendment bill C-9, 332

Borrowing authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, 282

Budget

- Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, reversal of decision, government position, 218

Business of the Senate, 41, 63, 64, 78, 138, 139, 207, 208, 239-40, 275, 281-82, 298, 379, 462, 483, 484, 837, 868, 877, 882, 935

Adjournment, 25, 75, 103, 104, 173, 249, 250, 845, 866-67, 900-01, 911, 933

Authority for committees to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 183-84

Authority for select committees to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 203

Budgets of committees, 395

Proposed agenda, 9

Canada Oil and Gas Operations, Canada Petroleum Resources, National Energy Board amendment bill C-6, 353

Canada Petroleum Resources amendment bill C-25, 846

Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee

- Authority to extend date of presentation of final report, 871, 887

Motion to appoint, 215, 252-53, 255

Carter, the late Hon. Chesley William, tribute, 77

Clerk's accounts, ref to com, 25, 880

Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 451, 460; considered in Committee of the Whole, 462, 476

Criminal Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-42, 887

Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment bill C-4, 353, 450-51

- Bill withdrawn from com and ref to another, m adopted, 407

Davey, Hon. Keith and Hastings, Hon. Earl A., tributes on twenty-eighth anniversary of appointments to Senate, st, 159

Delayed answers to oral questions, 114, 137-38, 166, 220-22, 286-87, 308, 324-25, 401-02, 423-24, 435-36, 454-56, 504-05, 849-51

- Answers to Order Paper questions tabled, 138, 188, 202-03, 310, 336, 360, 402, 505, 851-52

- Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.,—Cont'd
 Delayed answers—Cont'd
 Request for answers, 915
 Department of National Revenue amendment bill C-2, 456
 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 302, 342, 343, 344, 345-46, 347, 348
 Electoral boundaries commissions, 345
 Equality of voting power, 342
 Redistribution process, 347
 Representation by population, 342
 Royal Commission on Electoral Reform (Lortie), 343
 Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 386, 390
 Estimates, 1993-94
 Supplementary Estimates (B), tabled, 183, ref to com, 184, 203-04
 Estimates, 1994-95, tabled, 159, ref to com, 160
 Authority for Standing Joint Committee on the Library of Parliament to study Vote 10 of the Estimates, 184, 203
 Supplementary Estimates (B), ref to com, 911-12
 Supplementary Estimates (C), tabled, 932, ref to com, 932-33
 Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee
 Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 484
 Report
 2nd, Power to hold occasional meetings in camera, adopted, 745
 Everett, Hon. Douglas D., resignation from Senate, announcement and tributes, 19-20
 Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11, 915
 Excise Tax amendment bill C-13, 425
 Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment bill C-3, 267
 Fisheries Committee, authority to examine annual report of Department of Fisheries and Oceans, m adopted, 411
 Forestry, Clayoquot Sound, grant by CIDA to protest group against logging, government position, request for answer, 935
 Fournier, the late Hon. Edgar, tributes, 449
 General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 173
 Health
 Extension of Veterans Independence Program to senior citizens, inquiry, 195, 198
 Impact of changes to tobacco taxes, inquiry, 319
 Income Tax amendment bill C-9, 360
 Income Tax Amendments Revision Bill C-15, 425
 Income Tax Conventions bill S-2, 41
 Infrastructure program, request of municipalities of Canada, st, 394
 Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 Senate budget 1994-95, 7, 37, 89, 103
 International Assembly of French-speaking Parliamentarians, nineteenth General Assembly, report tabled, 42
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports
 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 441, 498, 500
 4th, interim, General Security Insurance Company of Canada bill S-3, 482
 Library of Parliament, Joint Committee
 Authority to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 202; m withdrawn, 317
 Report
 1st, 369
 Merchant Navy Veteran and Civilian War-Related Benefits bill S-4, 173, 193, 243, 259-60
 National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee
 Appointment, 155, 156
 National Sports of Canada bill C-212, 441
 Official languages, annual report of commissioner ref to com, 301, 328
- Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.,—Cont'd
 Official Languages, Joint Committee
 Authority to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 202; m withdrawn, 317
 Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 354
 Estimates, 1994-95, Privy Council Vote 20 ref, 160, 161
 Parks Canada, user fees, government position, 934
 Post-secondary education, growth in revenue from EPF transfers tax points, possibility of transfer to institutions, 935
 Prince Edward Island
 Fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 110, 166-67, 229, 243
 Railway Safety amendment bill C-21, 476
 Railways bill S-1, 5
 Scrutiny of Regulations, Joint Committee
 Authority to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 202; m withdrawn, 317
 Second World War, participation of Canadian troops in Italian Campaign, inquiry, 877
 Selection Committee
 Appointment, 6
 Report
 2nd, membership of committees, 24
 Senate
 Absence of Government Leader, 934
 Recognition of the role of women during Royal Assent, 299
 Tribute to departing page, st, 392
 Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee
 Authority to examine and report upon future development of Department of Veterans Affairs, 176, 351
 Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36, 943, 944
 St. Patrick's Day, felicitations, 222
 Transport
 Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet, government position, request for answer, qu, 882
 Transport and communications, marine safety, Ad Hoc Committee on Lightstations, government position, 932
 Transport and Communications Committee
 Authority to continue special study on report of National Transportation Act Review Commission, 234, 887, 888
 Authority to meet during Senate sitting, 866
 Marine safety, m to expand role of lightstations, 233
 Veterans Affairs, Veterans Independence Program, qualification of veterans, 222
 Veterans affairs
 Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, m to provide site for memorial, 176, 431, 433, 507-08
 Abbaye D'Ardennes, 508
 Battle of Normandy Foundation, 508
 Caen Memorial, 508
 Canada Remembers Program, 407, 507
 Dieppe raid, m to honour veterans by creating commemorative decoration, 376-77
 Establishment of Memorial Gardens in Caen, France, st, 213
 West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 70, 75
 Western grain transportation, Crow Rate, direct payment to farmers, government position, 933
- Molgat, Hon. Gildas L., Speaker of the Senate
 Appointment, 948
 Campbell, the late Hon. Douglas L., tribute, 1673
 Congratulations on his appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 983
 Felicitations in appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 948-49
 Twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2096-97
- Muir, Sen. Robert (retired Nov. 10/94)
 Best wishes on recovery, 844
 Tributes on retirement, 889-96

Multiculturalism, termination of redress discussions with ethnocultural organizations, st, 1235

Murray, P.C., Hon. Lowell

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 188-91
Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report
26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2481-83
Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, 297
Budget
Impact of budget on Atlantic region, concept of fairness, government position, qu, 165
Request for date of presentation, qu, 1225
Request for formal debate, government position, qu, 1227-28
Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 208-11, 245, 265
Deficit, 208, 209
GST, 210
Harmonization, 210
Helicopter program, 209, 210
Nationalism, 265
Pearson International Airport, 210
Quebec nationalism, 265
Spending restraint, 209
Underground economy, 210
Unemployment rate, 208, 209
Budget Implementation bill, 1995, proposed amendments to reflect national standards, request for particulars, qu, 1635-36, (r) 1745
Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1770, 1807-10, 1811
Budget 1995
Reform of Old Age Security
Effect on elderly women of application of clawback to household income, qu, 1287
Effect on older married women of application of clawback to household income, qu, 1252, 1253
Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1261-63, 1367, 1525
Agriculture, 1262
Canada Jobs Strategy, 1262
Federal employment, 1261
Interest rates, 1261
Maritime Freight Rates Act, 1262
Social reform, 1263
Tobin tax, 1525
Two-year targets, 1525
Unemployment insurance, 1262, 1263
Business of the Senate, 652, 1075, 1962
Adjournment, 764, 2230
Canada-China relations, human rights in China and Tibet, m, 1672
Canada Remembers, st, 1614-15
Chambers, the late Hon. Egan, tributes, 434
Constitutional amendments
Availability of opportunity for the proposal of amendments, government position, qu, 2416-17
Clarification of situation in relation to aboriginal aspirations, government position, qu, 2417
Schedule for consideration of legislation, possibility of pre-study, government position, qu, 2437, 2438
Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2518-21
Aboriginal self-government, 2518-19
Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2616-18
Correctional service, referral of tuberculosis problem in penitentiaries to Minister of Health, government position, qu, 1239, (r) 1550-51
Elections
Canada, electoral boundaries readjustment process, transmission of maps by Chief Electoral Officer, request for information, qu, 1891
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 312-14, 315, 344, 345, 346, 635-37
Constituency boundaries, 313
Constitutionality of bill, 314

Murray, P.C., Hon. Lowell—Cont'd

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension—Cont'd
Decennial census, 313
Electoral boundaries commissions, 313
Equality of voting power, 313
Proportionate representation, 313
Redistribution process, 313, 314, 344, 345, 346
Representation by population, 312
Royal Commission on Electoral Reform (Lortie), 314
Timeframe for redistribution, 314
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, 1558-61, 1726, 1727, 1730-31; vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1844-45, 1851-52; m to concur with message from Commons, 1964-65; m to refer question and message from Commons to com, 1965, 1968; allotment of time for debate, 2201
Alternate maps, 1559
Appointment of commissions, 1559
Criteria in drawing boundaries, 1560
Elimination of parliamentary stage, 1559
Equality of voting power, 1558, 1560, 1561
House of Commons growth, 1561
Operation of commissions, 1559
Public hearings, 1559
Public participation, 1559
Quinquennial census, 1559
Redistribution process, 1558, 1560
25 per cent maximum tolerance, 1560, 1561
Revision process, 1558
Transparency, 1559
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m to concur with message from Commons, 1837, 1838
Environment, proclamation of Environmental Assessment Act, status of draft regulations, government timetable, qu, 286, (r) 402
Estimates, 1994-95
Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, review of activities by National Finance Committee, qu, 165
Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide, Special Committee report
2nd, Power to hold occasional meetings in camera, adopted, 744
Excise Tax, Income tax amendment bill C-103, 2216-17, 2508-10
Canadian magazine industry, 2217
Sports Illustrated, 2216, 2217
Foreign affairs, remarks of Senator Stollery on Mexico
Possibility of Canada's withdrawal from NAFTA, government position, qu, 1522, (r) 2048
Request for answer, 1706
Response from Mexican Embassy, government position, qu, 1522
Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65, 1977
Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, policy on administration of inter-parliamentary activities, equality between Houses of Parliament, 1135
Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
17th, Parliamentary Associations, 1207-08
Contracting out for professional services, 1207-08
Justice, gun control legislation, consultation with provinces prior to introduction of legislation, government position, qu, 1662, (r) 1988-89
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2426, 2428
Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2377-78
Reports
2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 498
8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 810-11, 812
10th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, 1726, 1727

Murray, P.C., Hon. Lowell—Cont'd

- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee—Cont'd
 - 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 2020; m in amdt, 2029 reports
- Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 720-21
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, 1431-34; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1437, 1441, 1445
- Conciliation commissioner's report, 1432, 1433
- Minister of Labour, role of, 1431, 1432
- National finance
 - Bank of Canada rate, effect on interest rates, qu, 252, (r) 423-24
 - Goods and Services Tax, undertaking of Prime Minister on deadline on replacement, government position, qu, 2403
 - Interest rate, government policy, qu, 310
- National Finance Standing Committee
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 2348, 2363, 2399, 2515
- Reports
 - 13th, Lobbyists Registration amendment bill C-43, 1727
 - 14th, Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1773
 - 15th, Supplementary report, Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, tabled, 1796
 - 16th, Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65, without amdt, 1977
 - 17th, Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, without amdt, 1978
 - 18th, Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, without amdt, 1978
 - 19th, Supplementary Estimates (A), 1995-96, 2398; adopted, 2467-68
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 20th, National Housing amendment bill C-108, 2527
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2040
- Old age security, undertaking of Prime Minister during referendum, government position, qu, 2403
- Ontario Court General Division, m to strike special committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1165, withdrawn
- Ontario Court General Division, m to strike special committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, point of order, 1641
- Parks Canada, restored Fortress at Louisbourg, Nova Scotia, festivities 1995, st, 2009
- Pearson Airport Agreements Special Committee report
 - 2nd, Address to His Excellency the Governor General requesting documents, 2168
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 775-78, 827, 829, 831
 - Inquiry, 776
 - Nixon Report, 777
 - "Notwithstanding" clause, 776
 - Royal Recommendation, 829
 - "Rule of law", 776, 777
- Point of order, Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, 1016
- Rules which apply to joint committees, 1016
- Stand-alone reports, 1016
- Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 611
- Quebec, Prime Minister's proposals, means of gaining necessary consent of provinces, government position, qu, 2363
- Question of Privilege, point of order, 931
- Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, 1934
- Selection Committee report
 - 5th, membership of Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee, 1997
- Senate, absence of approval for various projects, inquiry, 1053

Murray, P.C., Hon. Lowell—Cont'd

- Transport
 - Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program
 - Diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, possible interpretation by Auditor General of Canada, government position, qu, 1650
 - Nova Scotia, diversion of funds to projects not covered by agreements, government position, 1680, (r) 2047
 - Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1387, 1396-97, 1398
 - Pearson Airport Agreements
 - Legislative solution, request for particulars, qu, 1489
 - Transport Canada study, request for particulars, qu, 1491
 - Verbal statements of Minister of Transport, request for written confirmation, qu, 1470
 - Railways work stoppage, status of negotiations at Canadian Pacific Rail and VIA Rail, qu, 1359-60
 - Timing of vote on motion to strike Special Committee, request for response, qu, 1531
 - Trans-Canada Highway, federal-provincial agreements currently in force, request for particulars, qu, 1680, (r) 1990
 - United Nations, resolution to halt nuclear testing, request for copy of offending text, qu, 2209
 - Walker, P.C., the late Hon. David James, tribute, 2063-64
 - West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1331
 - World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1063, 1073
 - Cultural industries, 1063
- 1995 Budget Plan
- Particulars on savings for Fisheries and Oceans, tabled, 1695
 - Particulars on savings respecting Department of Canadian Heritage, tabled, 1695
- National Anthem, obligation to perform by members of the House of Commons, consequences of demand by Reform Party, st, 2347-48
- National Child Day, st, 929-30, 2243
- National Community Tree Foundation Program, tabled, 336
- National Crime Prevention Council, details of operation and composition, tabled, 1229
- National Day of Remembrance
- Anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st, 1056
 - Fifth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st, 1054-55
 - Sixth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st, 2412-14
- National defence
- Annual maintenance costs for Sea King helicopter fleet, tabled, 1112
 - Canadian Airborne Regiment
 - Inquiry into conduct, possibility of reinstatement, qu, 1253-54
 - Reasons for disbandment, qu, 1356-57, (r) 1986-87
 - Closure of Le Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean, government position, qu, 951
 - Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, qu, 513-14, 602-03, 620-21, (r) 668, 669, 670-71
 - Related expenditures, request for information, qu, 630
 - Request for answers, qu, 629-30, 666
 - Request for information, qu, 603
 - Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, st, 617
 - Closure of St-Jean Military College, st, 131
 - Compensation for cancelled EH-101 contracts
 - Government position, qu, 1503, (r) 1554-55
 - Request for particulars, qu, 1713, (r) 2074
 - Consequences of cuts to transfer payments to provinces, government position, qu, 1254-55

National defence—Cont'd

- Consultative Committee on Social Change, tabled, 138
- Costs of cancelling helicopter program, tabled, 852
- Details concerning status of airbus, tabled, 1637
- Disbanding of Canadian Airborne Regiment, st. 1296-97
- Disbandment of Canadian Airborne Regiment, difference of opinion between Minister and Chief of Defence Staff, government position, qu, 2068-69
- Disciplinary practices in Canadian Armed Forces, government position, qu, 1185-86, (r) 1473
- Disposition of Royal Military College at St-Jean, government position, qu, 503-04, (r) 671-72
- Effects of closure of St-Jean Military College, qu, 136, (r) 308, 668
- Future of peacekeeping forces in former Yugoslavia, government position, qu, 1586-87
- Government treatment of military, st. 1248-49
- Initiative of NATO concerning peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation by Canadian Armed Forces, government position, qu, 1741
- Inquiry into activities of Canadian Airborne Regiment, government position, qu, 1185, 1357, (r) 1987
- Length of tours of peacekeeping forces, request for information, qu, 1375, (r) 1552
- Maritime and aerial surveillance and control, enhancement of Arctic capabilities, government policy, qu, 2366
- Membership of Honours Policy Committee, tabled, 1652
- Peacekeeping costs charged to departmental budget, government position, qu, 1213, (r) 1342-43
- Peacekeeping in Bosnia
 - Ability of troops to withdraw from Visoko if recalled, government position, qu, 1839, 1840-41
 - Participation in UN rapid deployment force, government position, 1761
 - Possibility of increasing size of force, government position, (r) 2155
 - Request for parliamentary debate on increase in size of force, government position, qu, 1743-44, (r) 2091-92
 - Status of Canadians held hostage, possible discussion of set-up of UN force at G-7 summit, government position, qu, 1778-79
 - Status of troops detained in Visoko, government position, qu, 1838-38
- Peacekeeping in former Yugoslavia, withdrawal of troops, government policy, qu, 1708
- Peacekeeping operations in former Yugoslavia, demise of Canadian Airborne Regiment, qu, 1374
- Possibility of purchase of nuclear-powered vessels, government position, qu, 1341
- Present structure and facilities of Canadian Forces training system, tabled, 852
- Proportion of non-military items in department budget, government position, qu, 995, (r), 1240
 - Request for answer, 1213
- Proposed cut-backs to defence expenditures, government position, qu, 114
- Purchase of Upholder Class submarines, cost to government, qu, 1340, (r) 1551
- Reduction in Canadian forces capability, government position, qu, 359-60, (r) 435-36
- Reduction of military personnel, government policy, st. 352
- Report of Special Commission on the Restructuring of the Reserves to the Minister of National Defence, tabled, 2207
- Restructuring of Canadian Armed Forces reserve
 - Government response, 1519
 - Request for answer, qu, 1502
 - Request for terms of reference of commission, qu, 1374
- Royal Military College at St-Jean, decrease in recruitment, government position, qu, 1357-58

National defence—Cont'd

- St-Jean Military College
 - Effects of proposed closure on maritime students, qu, 216, (r) 309, 668
 - Effects of proposed closure, st. 181, 201, 212-13
 - Proposed closure, st. 214
- Search and Rescue Helicopter Replacement Program
 - Nature of reduction in capability, request for particulars, qu, 2231-32
 - Proportion of Canadian content in contract bids, request for particulars, qu, 2232, (r) 2558
- Rationale for choice, qu, 2231
- Request for tabling of statement of requirements and report on search and rescue capability requirements, qu, 2363-64
- Statement of requirements, request for answer, qu, 2463, (r) 2559
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets
 - Government position, 1098, (r) 1191
- Special Commission on Restructuring of the Reserves, m to ref rept to Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee, 2246, adopted, 2278
- State of Sea King helicopters, replacement of fleet, st. 654
- Testing of LSVW vehicles, tabled, 852
- Training of First Mechanical Brigade for NATO exercises, government position, qu, 1741-42

National election, Red Book commitment to appoint ethics commissioner, government position, qu, 283

National Film Board

- Audit of president's expenses, tabled, 1229
- Failure to fulfil commitment, inquiry, 302, 681-82
- Speaker: Senator Marshall, Jack, 681-82

National finance

- Amount of deficit, government position, qu, 302, 303, 323-24
- Amount of deficit for 1993-94, government position, qu, 552
- Bank of Canada
 - Pay increases to officials, qu, 1984
 - Salary increases for officials, government position, qu, 1959
- Bank of Canada rate, effect on interest rates, qu, 252, (r) 423-24
- Control of debt and deficit, government position, qu, 1925
- Cutbacks in transfer payments to western provinces, government position, qu, 401
- Debt and deficit management, evaluation of International Monetary Fund, government position, qu, 2464-65
- Deficit reduction plan, government position, qu, 514-15, 551-52
- Downgrading of government's credit rating, government position, qu, 239, (r), 324-25
- Goods and Services Tax
 - Status of intergovernmental negotiations, government position, qu, 2402
 - Timing of resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, qu, 2402
 - Undertaking of Prime Minister on deadline on replacement, government position, qu, 2403
- Increase in bank rate
 - Deficit reduction plan, request for fiscal update, qu, 689-91
 - Government position, qu, 630, 666-67, 691-92
- Interest rate, government policy, qu, 310
- International Monetary Fund, objectives and methods of deficit reduction, government position, qu, 2443
- Job creation, government policy, qu, 1925-26, (r) 2050
- Meeting of federal and provincial ministers, discussion of possible national debt management plan, government position, qu, 2463-64
- Necessity to re-examine system for approving Estimates, st. 1486-87
- Old age security, undertaking of Prime Minister during referendum, government position, qu, 2403

National finance—Cont'd

- Reduction in deficit announced by minister, ramifications for transfer payments to provinces, government position, qu. 2440-41
- Reduction in post-secondary education financing, qu. 667, (r) 851
- Report of Auditor General, long-term management of debt and deficit, government position, qu. 2265
- Report of Auditor General on national debt, government position, qu. 2111
- The deficit, budgetary and political risks, effect on foreign investment, government position, qu. 322-23
- Total federal government securities, loans and international reserves, st. 1528

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to engage services of personnel, 92, 130
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 585, 665, 688, 2348, 2363, 2399, 2515
- Expenditure Management System, authority to examine and report upon program and other documents, 1584-85, 1736-37
- Membership
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 92
 - 2nd, Supplementary Estimates (B), 1993-94, 248, adopted, 272-73
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 3rd, Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment bill C-3, without amdt. 248
 - 4th, Supplementary Estimates (A), 1994-95, 600, adopted, 623-25
 - Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, 624
 - Bonus for work outside fishery, 624
 - Corporate Services Program, 625
 - Employment and Insurance Program, 624
 - Mobility assistance, 624
 - Weekly benefit rates, 624
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 5th, Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 618
 - 6th, Estimates, 1994-95, 627, 655-57, adopted, 735-39
 - Collège militaire royal at St-Jean, 735-38
 - Interest rates, 656
 - Military bases, closures, 657
 - Military colleges, consolidation, 657
 - Post-secondary military education, 656
 - Report of the Ministerial Committee on the Canadian Military Colleges, 656
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 7th, National Library amendment bill C-26, without amdt, 654
 - 8th, Auditor General amendment bill C-207, without amdt, 727
 - 9th, Canada Student Finance Assistance bill C-28, without amdt, 743
 - 10th, Supplementary Estimates (B) and (C), 1994-95, 1056-57, adopted, 1075-77
 - Internal Economy Committee and Treasury Board, 1076, 1077
 - Supplementary Estimates for the Senate, 1076, 1077
 - Speakers: Senators
 - Di Nino, Consiglio, 1077
 - Doody, C. William, 1075-76, 1077
 - Lynch-Staunton, John, 1076, 1077
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 11th, Supplementary Estimates (D) 1994-95, 1450, adopted, 1476-77
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 12th, Borrowing Authority, 1995-96 bill C-73, 1487
 - 13th, Lobbyists Registration amendment bill C-43, without amdt, 1727
 - 14th, Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, without amdt, 1773

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee—Cont'd

- Reports—Cont'd
 - 15th, Supplementary report, Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, tabled, 1796
 - 16th, Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65, without amdt, 1977
 - 17th, Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, without amdt, 1978
 - 18th, Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, without amdt, 1978
 - 19th, Supplementary Estimates (A), 1995-96, 2398-99; adopted, 2467-68
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 20th, National Housing amendment bill C-108, 2527
 - Supplementary (B), Estimates 1993-94, ref to com. 184
 - Supplementary (A), Estimates 1994-95, ref to com. 511
 - Supplementary (B), Estimates 1994-95, ref to com. 911-12
 - Supplementary (C), Estimates 1994-95, ref to com. 932-33
 - Supplementary (D), Estimates 1994-95, ref to com. 1315

National Flag of Canada, thirtieth anniversary of designation as national emblem, st. 1180, 1201-03National Forum on Health

- Appointment of representative from Metropolitan Toronto, st. 1449-50
- Confusion and delay within government, qu. 515-16, (r) 850-51
- Request for information, qu. 848
- Request for particulars on expenses, budgets and contracts, qu. 1453, (r) 1553-54
- See also Metropolitan Toronto

National Housing amendment bill C-108, 1r, 2501; 2r, 2513-15; ref to com. 1515; rep without amdt, 2527; 3r, 2527; r.a., chap. 47, 1995, 2546

Mortgage loan insurance, 2513, 2514

Speakers: Senators

- Bolduc, Roch, 2514-15
- Kelly, William M., 2515
- Olson, H.A., 2513-14, 2515

National Library amendment bill C-26, 1r, 511; 2r, 528-30; ref to com. 530; rep without amdt, 654; 3r, 654; r.a., chap. 20, 1994, 664

- Book deposit regulations, 528
- Federal government publications, 529
- Fine for non-compliance, 530
- Legal deposit, 528, 529, 530
- National Archives, 529
- Penalty, 528
- Quebec publishers, 529
- Speakers: Senators
 - De Bané, Pierre, 528-29, 530
 - Doyle, Richard J., 529-30
 - Stewart, John B., 530

National Missing Children's Day, st. 1675National Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, nonrepresentation of New Brunswick, qu. 605

Request for answer, 671

National security

- Proposal to strike special committee
 - Clarification of government position, qu. 881-82
 - Government position, qu. 875-77, 903-04, (r) 1042
 - Request for answer, qu. 1132-33

National Sports of Canada bill C-212. 1r, 397; 2r, 425-27, 441; ref to Committee of the Whole next sitting, 441; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, 476; rep without amdt, 476; 3r, 476; r.a., chap. 16, 1994, 478

Hockey, national winter sport, 425

Lacrosse, national summer sport, 425

Speaker: Senator

Graham, B. Alasdair, 425-27, 441

National unity

Aftermath of Quebec referendum

Comments of John Nunziata, M.P., st, 2174

Explanation of comments in press, st, 2173

Necessity of reviewing Pepin-Robarts report, st, 2228

Constitutional amendments, request for tabling of documents prepared by New Brunswick officials, qu, 2442

Indian Affairs, document on post-referendum policy purportedly prepared by official, government position, qu, 2382

Presence of aboriginal peoples at Quebec Round, government position, qu, 2382-83

Proposed establishment of committee on regional aspirations, 2150-52

Quebec referendum

Coverage of events by CBC French network, st, 2414-15

Possible reduction in elderly benefits, government position, qu, 2232

Relevance of CBC programming for francophones outside Quebec, st, 2435

Response of some Quebecers to communications from schoolchildren in other parts of the country, st, 2415

Quebec situation following referendum, government policy, qu, 2167

Reflections on referendums and promises, st, 2166

Result of Quebec Referendum, st, 2146-47, 2148-49, 2164-65

National unity, results of Quebec referendum, inquiry, 2166, 2353-56

All-party committee of senators, 2354

Meech Lake Accord, 2355

Speaker: Senator

Oliver, Donald H., 2166, 2353-56

National University Hockey Championships

Congratulations to University of Lethbridge Pronghorns Hockey Team, st, 213-14

Natural disasters in Alberta, st, 1724

Natural resources, new federal-provincial silviculture agreement, government position, qu, 1802-03, (r) 2078

Neiman, Hon. Joan (retired Sept. 9/95)

Appointment of special committee on euthanasia and assisted suicide, m, 132; adopted, 157-58

Business of the Senate, 1075

Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st, 580-81

Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee

Jobs and the environment, authority to conduct study, 390

National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 388

Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee

Authority to extend date of final report, 1282, 1585, 1678-79

Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 484, 688, 869, 1081, 1131, 1223, 1445, 1446, 1649, 1678

Reports

1st, budget, 547, adopted, 587

See Journals of the Senate

2nd, power to hold occasional meetings in camera, adopted, 744, 745

3rd, extension of final report date, 984, adopted, as amended, 1001, 1002

Neiman, Hon. Joan—Cont'd

Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee—Cont'd

Final tabled, 1704-05, 1720, adopted, 1997-2000

Health, establishment of special committee on euthanasia, inquiry, 25-26, 124-26

British House of Lords Report on Medical Ethics, 125

British Voluntary Euthanasia Society, 125

"Death with dignity", 125

Dutch Rummelink Commission, 125

Germany, 124, 125

"Living wills", 125

Physician-assisted suicide, 125

Relation between ethics and policy, 126

Role of health care givers, 126

United States, 124, 125

Health, extension of Veterans Independence Program to senior citizens, inquiry, 198

Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment, 1994 bill C-40, 704-05

Powers of parliamentary committees, paper referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 1130

Tributes on retirement, 2038-44

New Brunswick

Liberal victory in provincial election, st, 2090

Reopening of Saint John's Imperial Theatre, st, 542-43

Share of patronage appointments, government position, qu, 357

Twenty-fifth anniversary of Official Languages Act, st, 320

Newfoundland

Canadian Forces Reserves, tabled, 310

Effects of federal infrastructure program, tabled, 239

New senators, 838-39

Felicitations, 843-44

Introduction, 869-70, 991-92, 1447-48, 2058-60, 2550

Nigeria

Execution of Ken Saro-Wiwa and nine other Ogoni activists, st, 2313

Nolin Hon. Pierre Claude

Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1115

Government's fleet of vehicles, 1115

Budget 1995

Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1266

Budget, proposed closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, resumption of discussions, government position, qu, 1111

Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 560-64

Child poverty, 563

Child welfare, 561

International Year of the Family, 560

National debt, 562, 563

United Nations, 561

Youth unemployment, 561, 562

Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 661, 662

Tax credits, 661

Canadian Heritage, catalogue of national sports events, failure to publish in French, government position, qu, 1841-42, (r) 2080

Canadian International Development Agency, filling of vacant positions without competition, government position, qu, 2269

Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association, report of 1995 spring session tabled, 1890

Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 473

Communications

Granting of public relations contract for G-7 Summit, contravention of Treasury Board regulations, government position, qu, 1927, 1928, (r) 2081-82

Nolin Hon. Pierre Claude—Cont'dCommunications—Cont'd

Satellite broadcasting, consultation with CRTC and with both Houses of Parliament, government position, qu, 1803

Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2540-41

Aboriginal peoples, 2541

Provincial representation, 2541

Economy, market factors affecting foreign investors, government position, qu, 1225

Elections Canada

Electoral boundaries readjustment process, extension of deadline, request for particulars, qu, 2251

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, introduction of suspension bill, effect on commissions in each province, qu, 321

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, 1733; point of order, 1898, 1899-900, 1903; m to instruct com to table final report, 2189

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, future of bill C-18, qu, 516, 517

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 325-26

Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee report 11th, Alternative Fuels for Internal Combustion Engines bill S-7, 1542

Bronson report, 1542

Government fleet of vehicles, 1542

Foreign affairs, negotiations towards inclusion of Chile in NAFTA, request for progress report, qu, 1960, (r) 2114

Goods and Services Tax, application on reading materials, qu, 849

Human resources, discussions with provinces on manpower training, government position, qu, 1574, (r) 2046

Human Resources Development

Child care, federal offer of funding, discussions with provincial finance ministers, government position, qu, 2503

Installation of telephone communications network, qu, 422, (r) 850

Human rights, campaign promise of annual reports, government position, qu, 2506

Indian affairs

Cigarette smuggling on native reserves, qu, 47

Contraband alcohol on reserves, qu, 96, 97

Infrastructure program, effect on construction industry, government position, qu, 2234

Justice, sale of Airbus Aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government

Departmental letter to Swiss authorities, source of leak to media, qu, 2318

RCMP investigative procedures, request for particulars, qu, 2249, 2250

National defence

Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, qu, 620-21, (r) 670

Consequences of cuts to transfer payments to provinces, government position, qu, 1254

Peacekeeping in Bosnia, possibility of increasing size of force, government position, qu, 1742

Search and Rescue Helicopter Replacement Program, proportion of Canadian content in contract bids, request for particulars, qu, 2232, (r) 2558

National finance

Amount of deficit, government position, qu, 323, 324

International Monetary Fund, objectives and methods of deficit reduction, government position, qu, 2443

National Unity, result of Quebec Referendum, st, 2148

North American Free Trade Agreement, extension of agreement to include Chile, government position, qu, 1708, 1709, (r) 2114

North Atlantic Treaty Organization, respect of human rights as condition of continuing membership, government position, qu, 1692, 1693, (r) 1992

Nolin Hon. Pierre Claude—Cont'd

Official languages, report of commissioner, quality of debate, government position, qu, 334, 335

Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee, request for particulars of expenditures on consultants, qu, 2504

Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 698-99

Nixon Report, 698

Public Works

Cancellation of building contract in Dorval, Quebec, substitution of rental agreement, request for particulars, qu, 1586, (r) 1717-18

Decision of Minister to build new federal building in Sault Ste. Marie, request for details of contract, qu, 1186-87, (r) 1535-36

Details of costs involved in cancellation of project, qu, 1215, (r) 1536

Reconstruction of East Block Tunnel, status of project, qu, 1215, (r) 1536

Quebec

Distinct society resolution, comments by the chair of the Standing Committee on Canadian Heritage, government position, qu, 2540

Motion for recognition as distinct society, 2454, 2455, 2456, 2474-76

Parallel statements, 2454

Quebec's powers, 2456

Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 611, 612

Transport

Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program, fulfilment of Red Book promises, government position, qu, 1661

Pearson Airport Agreements

Discrepancies in Nixon Report, government position, qu, 1520

Possible revision of report of Robert Nixon, government position, qu, 1502

Redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, request for information, qu, 1471, (r) 1537-38

Request for copy of stamped receipt notation on Mr. Nixon's report, qu, 1502

Pearson International Airport

Cancellation of leases preventing redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, qu, 1490

Delay in redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, qu, 1301, 1302, (r) 1361-62

Government position, qu, 1451, 1452, (r) 1537

Request for answers, qu, 1531

Request for particulars on revenue from subleases, qu, 1490

Nordic Council's Parliamentary Conference on the Arctic, report of official parliamentary delegation tabled, 92

North American Free Trade Agreement

Extension of agreement to include Chile, government position, qu, 1708-09, (r) 2114

Inclusion of Chile, influence on existing agreement, government position, qu, 1705-06, (r) 2114

North American Free Trade Agreement, transition period for application of rules, inquiry, 512

North Atlantic Assembly, sixth report of Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association tabled, 1649

North Atlantic Treaty Organization, respect of human rights as condition of continuing membership, government position, qu, 1692-93, (r) 1992

Nova Scotia

- Congratulations to Dr. John Hamm on election as leader of provincial Progressive Conservative Party, st, 2149-50, 2164
- Effect of budget on Cornwallis Peacekeeping Training Centre, government position, 133-34
- Industrial marine products, relocation of plant from North Sydney to Amherst, possible delay in implementation of decision, government position, qu, 2349
- Necessity of peacekeeping training, government position, qu, 113
- Proposed peacekeeping training centre, government position, qu, 620, (r) 986
- Status of peacekeeping training centre at CFB Cornwallis, government position, qu, 112-13
- Success of private shortline railway operations, st, 352

Nova Scotia, research reports on black community, inquiry, 901, 959-61

- Black Role Model Program, 959, 960
- Culture and history, 959
- Economic independence, 959
- Education, 959
- James Robinson Johnston Chair in Black Canadian Studies, 960, 961
- Negative media reports, 960
- Racial discrimination, 960
- Racism, 961
- Visible minorities, 960
- Speaker: Senator Oliver, Donald H., 959-61

OECD international survey on adult literary, inquiry, 2443

Office of Prime Minister, status of car transportation, tabled, 310

Official languages

- Access of francophones to Internet network, qu, 1651-52
- Annual Reports of Commissioner tabled, 301, 784, 1546
 - Ref to com, 301, 328
- Dissociation from a stand by a member of parliament, st, 1674-75
- Proliferation of French television stations in Ontario, comments in media, st, 2459
- Report of Commissioner, recommendation to discontinue bilingual bonus, government position, qu, 304-05

Official Languages Act, necessity of evaluating the law, inquiry, 1679, 1755-56

- Speaker: Senator Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1755-56

Official Languages, Standing Joint Committee

- Appointment of Senators, 161
- Authority to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 202;
 - m withdrawn, 317
- Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 354
- Authority to meet during sittings and adjournments of the Senate, 421
- Estimates, 1994-95
 - Privy Council Vote 20 ref, 160
 - Supplementary (D), vote 25d ref, 1315
- Estimates, 1995-96, Privy Council Vote 25 ref, 1315
- Membership, message from Commons, 48-49
- Reports
 - 1st. Accomplishment during hearings, 727-28
 - 2nd. Estimates 1995-96, Vote 25, 1712-13, adopted, 1753

Official report, 1164

Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54. 1r, 1890; 2r, 1934-38; ref to com, 1938; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1981; 3r, 2019; r.a., chap. 33, 1995, 2057

- Access to client information, 1936
- Appeal process, 1935
- Cancelling benefits, 1935
- Client services, 1934
- Debt forgiveness, 1936
- Guaranteed income supplements, 1935
- Information sharing, 1936
- Retirement income, 1935
- Retroactive benefits, 1935, 1936
- Seniors' benefits, 1936
- Spouses' allowance, 1935, 1936
- Temporary benefits, 1935
- Voice mail, 1936
- Women, 1936, 1937
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bonnell, M. Lorne, 1934-35
 - Lavoie-Roux, Thérèse, 1935-37
 - Prud'homme, Marcel, 1937-38
 - Oliver, Hon. Donald H.

Oliver, Hon. Donald H.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 105-07
- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, Auditor General's report, efficacy of infrastructure job statistics, government position, qu, 2404-05
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report
 - 26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, with one amdt, 2449; m in amdt, 2449
- Black History Month, st, 1179-80
- Budget, 1995
 - Precedence of budget statement of Finance Minister over Red Book, government position, qu, 1250
 - Reduction to international assistance envelope, government position, qu, 1250-51
- Budget, Statement by Minister of Finance, inquiry, 592-94
 - Atlantic Canada, 592, 593, 594
- Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company amendment bill C-81, 1719
 - Borrowing limit, 1719
 - Gateways Project, 1719
 - Peace Bridge, 1719
- Business of the Senate, proposal to establish committee to investigate orders of reference, government position, qu, 955
- Canada-Japan Inter-Parliamentary Group, Report of Second Annual Meeting of the Asia Pacific Parliamentary Forum, tabled, 78
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, felicitations on the appointment of Hon. Perrin Beatty, P.C., as President and CEO, st, 1499
- Canadian Race Relations Foundation, particulars on establishment, tabled, 1695
- Code of Conduct, Special Joint Committee
 - Motion to appoint, 1954-55
 - Reports
 - 1st, extension of report deadline, 2067, adopted, 2115
 - 2nd, name of Committee in French changed, 2416, adopted 2483
- Communications, Radio Canada International, future prospects for continuance, government position, qu, 2463
- Employment, tabled, 2385
- Firearms bill, presentation of petitions, 1741
- Governor General's Performing Arts Awards, st, 909-10
- Human rights, st, 1676
 - Establishment of Senate committee on affirmative action, st, 1336
 - Request for response to statement, qu, 2208

Oliver, Hon. Donald H.—Cont'dHuman rights—Cont'd

- Establishment of standing committee, inquiry, 564-66
 - Dignity of individual, 565
 - Human rights function, 565
 - Linguistic minorities, 565
 - Mandate of committee, 565
 - Multiculturalism, 565
 - Protection of minorities, 565
 - Review of Senate committee system, 566
- Termination of discussions with multicultural organizations on redress for past injustices, tabled, 1695

Income Tax amendment bill C-59, 1287-89

- Atlantic Canada, 1288
- Capital gains, 1288
- Charitable donations, 1288
- Home Buyer's Plan, 1288
- Special investment tax credit, 1288
- Tabling a tax bill, 1288

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
4th, Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee budget, 477

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report

- 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amnds, 2281-82
 - Aboriginal peoples, 2282
 - Delayed implementation, 2282
 - Museums, 2282
 - Registration, 2281
 - Smuggling, 2281

Multiculturalism, termination of redress discussions with ethnocultural organizations, st, 1235National Unity, results of Quebec referendum, inquiry, 2166, 2353-56

- All-party committee of senators, 2354
- Meech Lake Accord, 2355

Nova Scotia, research reports on black community, inquiry, 901,
959-61

- Black Role Model Program, 959, 960
- Culture and history, 959
- Economic independence, 959
- Education, 959
- James Robinson Johnston Chair in Black Canadian Studies, 960, 961
- Negative media reports, 960
- Racial discrimination, 960
- Racism, 961
- Visible minorities, 960

Order-in-Council appointments to government boards and tribunals, tabled, 852

Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 819-21

- Constitutionality, 821
- War Damage Act, 1965 (Great Britain), 820

Proposals for Social Reform, inquiry, 873, 906-08

- Aboriginal peoples, 908
- Commission on Systemic Racism in the Ontario Criminal Justice System, 906
- Crime Prevention Council, 907
- Disabled, 908
- Discrimination within criminal justice system, 906
- Racism in Ontario justice system, 907
- Royal Commission on the Donald Marshall Jr. prosecution in Nova Scotia, 906, 907
- Treatment of blacks in Ontario prisons, 906
- Visible minorities, 908
- Women, 908

Request for answers, 1685

Senate, amendments to Bill C-22, refusal by Minister to appear before Senate Committee, qu, 1300

Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99, 2512-13, 2538-39

- Administration fee, 2513
- Claim processing fee, 2513

Oliver, Hon. Donald H.—Cont'dSmall Business Loans amendment—Cont'd

- Level of guarantees and program fees, 2513
- Maximum loan guarantee, 2513
- Security and personal guarantees, 2513

South Africa, first democratic, 570 elections, inquiry, 421, 566-70

- Apartheid, 566, 568, 569
- Child labour, 567
- Future of South Africa, 569
- Health system, 567
- Racism, 569
- Unemployment, 567
- United Nations Observer Mission in South Africa, mandate, 567

Transport

- Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program, Nova Scotia, return of funds to designated highway project, government position, qu, 1662

Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1388, 1393, 1404Pearson Airport Agreements, refusal of minister to appear before Senate committee, government position, qu, 1519Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1575-78, 1579-80Pearson International Airport redevelopment, alleged involvement of Prime Minister, qu, 1450Radio Canada International, invitation to Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Trade to respond to Senate committee report, 1227Transport and communications, directions to Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission on direct-to-home satellite distribution, comments of Minister of Canadian Heritage, government position, qu, 1692

Transport and Communications Committee

- Authority to continue special study on report of National Transportation Act Review Commission, 211, 234, 872,
887-88

Authority to extend date for final report, 1689, adopted, 1710

Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 527, 570, 866,
1204, 1702, 2230, 2437, 2462Authority to permit electronic coverage of meeting, adopted,
1057, 1204

Authority to study telecommunications, 1488, 1515-17

Cultural sovereignty, 1517

Industry convergence, 1515

Information highway, 1515

Canada's international competitive position in telecommunications, m to authorize committee to extend date for final report on special study, 2110, adopted, 2129Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, proposed orders on directives on Direct-to-Home Satellite Distribution Undertakings, authority for electronic coverage of committee proceedings, 1615, adopted, 1647, 1648Marine safety, study on mandate and staffing of lightstations, question for chairman, 954, 955Telecommunications, authority to permit electronic coverage of proceedings, adopted, 1740

Reports

1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 912nd, Competition in Transportation, Policy and Legislation in Review, 583, adopted, 607

See Journals of the Senate

3rd, Radio Canada International, 583, adopted, 607

See Journals of the Senate

4th, Marine safety, 583-84, adopted, 607

See Journals of the Senate

5th, Radio Canada International, study of mandate and funding,
686, 779-81, 782

Oliver, Hon. Donald H.—Cont'd

Transport and Communications Committee—Cont'd

- Funding cutbacks, 780
- History, 780
- Mandate, 780
- Purposes, 780
- 6th, Marine safety, study on mandate and staffing of lightstations, tabled, 951
- 7th, Marine Transportation Security bill C-38
- 9th, Budget, examination on Canada's international competitive position in telecommunications, 1837, adopted, 2000
 - See Journals of the Senate
- 10th, Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, proposed orders on directions on direct-to-home satellite distribution and on pay-per-view television programming, 1837, adopted, 2001-02
- 11th, CN Commercialization bill C-89 without amdt, 1922

Olson, P.C., Hon. H.A.

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 52-55

Agriculture

- Grain handling capacity of Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert, inquiry, 377, 409-11, 540-41
 - Abnormal weather conditions, 410
 - Advisory Committee to the Canadian Wheat Board, 409
 - Canada Grains Council, 409
 - Canadian export of grain to United States, 410
 - Volume of grain "unloads", 410
 - West Coast longshoremen's strike, 410
- Improvement in international grain market, request for analysis of situation, qu, 1223, (r) 1361
- Appropriation No. 3, 1995-96 bill C-116, 2469-70
 - Canada Eldor Inc., 2469
 - Departments operating budgets, 2469
 - Western Grain Transition Payments Act, 2469
- Bouchard, Hon. Lucien, media handling of news of illness of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, st, 1055
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1261, 1263, 1264-66, 1267, 1268-69
 - Farm subsidies, 1264
 - Federal debt, 1263, 1264
 - National Finance Committee, role of, 1268, 1269
 - WGTA, 1264
- Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 530-31, 532-33, 631-32
 - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 533
 - Deficit reduction, 531
 - Economic growth, 530, 531
 - Established Programs Financing, 532
 - Freight subsidies, 532
 - Job creation, 530, 531
 - Labour adjustment, 531
 - Reduction in transfers, 532
 - Social security reform, 532
 - Unemployment insurance, 531
 - Wage freeze, 532
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1806, 1807
 - Canada Health and Social Transfer, 1809
 - Labour relations, 1808, 1809
 - Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Association, 1807
 - Workforce Adjustment Directive, 1808
- Budget, statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 244, 245-46
 - Debt service charges, 245
- Business of the Senate
 - Configuration of Order Paper, 2435
 - Inquiries nos. 17 and 18 reinstated notwithstanding Rule 28(3), 912
 - Inquiries nos. 30 and 31 reinstated notwithstanding Rule 28(3), 1204

Olson, P.C., Hon. H.A.—Cont'd

- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, thirty-sixth annual meeting held in Huntsville, Ontario, report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 1801, inquiry, 1802, 2051-52
- Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations incorporation bill S-5, 273, 403-04, 588, 606, 607
- Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations, presentation of petition, 250
 - Functions of organization, 403
 - Lutheranism in Canada, 403
- Canadian Wheat Board amendment bill C-50, 935-36
 - Check-offs, 935, 936
 - Field performance, 935
 - Levies, 936
 - Plant breeding and research, 936
 - Specific qualities, 935
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2580, 2581, 2582
- Department of Agriculture amendment bill C-49, 904-05, 937
 - Annual report, 905
 - Change in name, 904
 - Clarification of mandate, 905
 - New responsibilities, 904
 - Power to designate inspectors, 905
 - Redress procedure, 905
- Diefenbaker, the late Rt. Hon. John George, one hundredth anniversary of birthday, st, 2088-89
- Economy, reduction in federal deficit, st, 1210
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, point of order, 1897-98
- Excise Tax, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11, 657-58, 673
 - Civil provisions, enforcement, 658
 - Clearing stocks of kiddy packs, 673
 - Enforcement, 658
 - Fines for violations, 658
 - "Kiddy packs", 658
 - Minimum age, 658
 - Seized goods, 658
 - Smuggling, 658
 - Stamping of individual cigarettes, 658
- Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90, 2138
- Everett, Hon. Douglas D., resignation from Senate, announcement and tributes, 21
- Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans amendment bill C-75, 1718
 - Aggregate principal amount, 1718
 - Annual loan registrations, 1718
 - Credit, 1718
 - Investment, 1718
- Firearms legislation, comments made in House of Commons, 1738
- General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, application of rules to agricultural marketing structures, inquiry, 512
- Human rights
 - Canada's historic leadership role, 544
 - China, fifth anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, 544
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-2, 98-99
 - Capital gains, 99
 - Categories of rules, 98
 - Dividends, 99
 - Double taxation relief, 99
 - Interest, 99
 - International "juridical" double taxation, 98
 - Non-discrimination, 99
 - Pensions, 99
 - Protocol with Netherlands, 98, 99
 - Right to tax, 98
 - Royalties, 99
 - Tax treaties, 98, 99

Olson, P.C., Hon. H.A.—Cont'd

- Infrastructure program, formula resolved among levels of government, qu, 399
- International trade, 1994 export statistics, 1222
- Joint Parliamentary Delegation to Brazil
 - Official visit, inquiry, 1650, 2050-51
 - Report tabled, 1649
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2426-27
 - Notice of motion to instruct com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, Speaker's ruling, 2393-94
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, 1434
 - Railroading requirements for Canada, 1434
- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 891
- National Finance, Standing Senate Committee, Expenditure Management System, authority to examine and report upon programs and other documents, 1584-85, 1736-37
- National finance, total federal government securities, loans and international reserves, st, 1528
- National Housing amendment bill C-108, 2513-14, 2515
 - Mortgage loan insurance, 2513-14
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2041
- North American Free Trade Agreement, transition period for application of rules, inquiry, 512
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee report, 2628
- Point of order, contravention of Rule 26, 240
- Precincts of Parliament, proposed renovations to East and Centre Blocks, government position, 307, 308
- Quebec, m for recognition as distinct society, 2454, 2456, 2457, 2458
 - Alberta veto, 2457
- Question of privilege, 1522, 1523
- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1385, 1418, 1419
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10, considered in Committee of the Whole, 72
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1319, 1320-21; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1327-28
 - Foremen, 1320
- World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1072-73, 1074
 - Agriculture, 1072, 1073
 - Dairy industry, 1072
 - Eggs, 1072
 - International grain market, 1073
 - Skim milk powder, 1073

Olympic Winter Games

- Congratulations to Myriam Bédard, st, 131

Ontario

- Congratulations to Conservative government on taking office, st, 1956
- Progressive Conservative victory in provincial election, st, 1797

Ontario Court General Division

- Motion to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1164-65, 1198-99, withdrawn, 1281
- Motion to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1281, point of order, 1625-29, 1640-44; Speaker's ruling, 2002-05; m debated, 2168-70; point of order, 2170-72; m debated, 2544-45

Speakers: Senators

- Cools, Anne C., 1625, 1627-28, 1641-43, 2169-70, 2171, 2172, 2544-45
- Grimard, Normand, 1643-44
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 1628

Ontario Court General Division—Cont'd

- Motion to strike Special Committee—Cont'd
 - Murray, Lowell, 1641
 - Robertson, Brenda M., 1626-27
 - Stewart, John B., 1628

Opening of Parliament

- Speech from the Throne by His Excellency the Governor General, 3-5

Order of Canada, status of Advisory Council, tabled, 310Order-in-Council appointments to government boards and tribunals, tabled, 852Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, appointment of Donald Johnston as Secretary-General, length of term, government position, qu, 996, (r) 1089Otteneimer, Hon. Gerald R.

- Bosnia
 - Ban on sale of armaments, government policy, qu, 333
 - Coherence of NATO strategy, government policy, qu, 111-12, (r) 287
 - Conditions for continuation of peacekeeping mission, visit of UN Secretary-General, government position, qu, 1040, (r) 1341-42
 - NATO air strikes on un-designated safe areas, government policy, qu, 333
 - United Nations, request for NATO air strikes, government position, qu, 303
- Business of the Senate, 78
- Canada-China relations, representations on human rights abuses, government position, qu, 238, (r) 455
- Carter, the late Hon. Chesley William, tribute, 77
- Clerk of the Senate
 - Appointment of Gordon Barnhart, Esq., as honorary officer of the Senate, felicitations, 180-81
 - Appointment of Paul C. Bélisle, Esq., as Clerk of the Senate, felicitations, 180-81
- Firearms bill C-68, 1820
- Fisheries and oceans, extension of jurisdiction beyond 200-mile limit, government policy, qu, 94-95, (r) 137
- Foreign affairs, human rights issues, government policy, qu, 285
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General, 966-67
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, notice of motion to instruct com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, Speaker's ruling, 2394
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 980-81
- National defence, future of peacekeeping forces in former Yugoslavia, government position, qu, 1586, 1587
- National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee
 - Appointment, 154
- Official Languages, Standing Joint Committee report
 - 1st, Accomplishment during hearings, 727-28
- Points of order
 - Contravention of Rule 26, 240
- Precincts of Parliament, proposed renovations to East and Centre Blocks, government position, 307, 308
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, point of order, 1015
- United Nations
 - Peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation in rapid reaction force, government position, qu, 1802
 - Possible changes to application of veto, government policy, qu, 1802, (r) 2049

Ouellet, P.C., M.P., Hon. André, Minister of Foreign Affairs

- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 463

Pages Exchange Program with House of Commons, 1703, 2241, 2361, 2395, 2459

Parent, Hon. Gilbert

Appointment to office of Speaker of the House of Commons, 3

Parks Canada

Location and composition of meetings, tabled, 1191
Meetings held by officials in Wolfville and Digby, Nova Scotia, tabled, 1652
Restored Fortress at Louisbourg, Nova Scotia, festivities 1995, qu, 2008-09
User fees, government position, qu, 875, 934, (r) 974-75, (r) 1168-69

Parliament

Program of legislation, government policy, qu, 282-83

Parliamentary assemblies of French-speaking countries, report of conference of Speakers, Paris, France, 2416

Parliamentary Delegation to Poland, report of delegation presented, 856

Parliamentary Spouses Association, annual children's book show, st, 870

Peace in Europe, inquiry, 1574

Speaker: Senator

Haidasz, Stanley, 1574

Pearson Airport Agreements

Special Senate Committee, request for particulars of expenditures on consultants, qu, 2504

See also Transport

Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee

Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 1958

Change in date of first public hearing, 1888

Reports

1st, Budget, 1739, 1770-71, adopted, on div, 1784-86

Point of order, 1771-72

2nd, Address to His Excellency the Governor General requesting documents, 2109, 2143-45, 2159-60; m in amdt, 2160-61, 2168, 2190-93

3rd, reserving right to hold further hearings and adjourning with no appointed date, 2486, 2584-99, 2621-28

Speakers: Senators

Bryden, John G., 2622, 2623, 2624, 2625-28

Kirby, Michael, 2591-93, 2594-99

Lynch-Staunton, John, 2593, 2594, 2621-22, 2623, 2624-25

MacDonald, Finlay, 2486, 2584-86, 2587-91

Olson, H.A., 2628

Prud'homme, Marcel, 2599

Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee, 2098-99

Pearson, Hon. Landon (introduced in the Senate Oct.25/94), 869-70

Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1505-07

Canada Health and Social Transfer, 1506

Child care, 1506

Child Development Initiative funding, 1507

Child poverty, 1506

Impact on children, 1505-07

UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, 1506, 1507

Pearson, Hon. Landon—Cont'd

Corrections and Conditional Release, Criminal Code, Criminal Records, Prisons and Reformatories, Transfer of Offenders amendment bill C-45, 2100-03, 2120, 2121, 2467

Child sexual offenders, 2101

Detention, 2101, 2102

Inmates' earnings towards room and board, 2102

National Parole Board, credibility and accountability, 2102

Residency requirements for high-risk offenders, 2102

Sentences for multiple terms, 2102

"Serious harm", 2101

Treatment programs for sexual offenders, 2101

Felicitations on receiving honorary degree, 1673-74

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report

16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amtds, 2303-05

Aboriginal peoples, 2304, 2305

Lobbyists Registration amendment bill C-43, 1637-39

Code of Conduct, 1639

Conflict of Interest Code, 1637

Ethics Counsellor, 1637, 1639

Holtmann report, 1637, 1638

Levels of lobbyists, 1638

Tier I and Tier II, 1638

Not-for-profit organizations, 1638

Political process, 1637

Procurement process, 1637

Registration, 1639

Trust, 1637

Types of lobbyists, 1638

Consultant, 1638

Corporate-in-house, 1638

Organization in-house, 1638, 1639

National Child Day, st, 929-30, 2243

National Missing Children's Day, st, 1675

Privilege, 1492

Quebec, m to recognize as distinct society, 2531-32

Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, response of government to Report of Special Joint Committee, 1464-66

Children's issues, 1464-66

Ritchie, the late Charles Stewart Almon, tribute, 1725

United Nations, Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing,

China, inquiry, 2110, 2236-38, 2239

Canadian delegation, 2238, 2239

Child marriage, 2237

Children's rights, 2238

Education programs, 2237

Female genital mutilation, 2237

Girl child, 2237, 2238

Inheritance, 2237

Parental responsibilities, 2237

"Parliamentary observers", 2238, 2239

Vatican delegation, role of, 2239

World AIDS Day, effect of pandemic on youth, st, 2397-98

Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, 1859-61

Jasmin report, 1860

Prevention of criminal behaviour, 1860

Primary prevention, 1860

Rehabilitation, 1859

Secondary prevention, 1860, 1861

Tertiary prevention, 1860, 1861

Pearson International Airport

See Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22

Transport

- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22. 1r, 665; 2r, 677-79, 692-99, 729-34, 769-72, 773-79; ref to com, 779; rep with six amdts, 788-89, 800-10; m in amdt, 810-13; allotment of time for debate, 813-14; m in amdt neg, 814-15; rep adopted on div, 815-16; 3r, 816-30; m in amdt neg, 830-31; point of order, 831-32; 3r (con't), as amended, on div, 832-33; Message from Commons disagreeing with amdts, 845; m to concur with Message from Commons, 845, 857-63; m in amdt referring question and Message from Commons to com, adopted on div, 863-66; m instructing com to table final rep, 2399, 2429-32; debate concluded, 2470; m neg on div, 2484-85
- Access to courts, 695, 696, 698, 771
 Canadian Bill of Rights, 696-97, 732, 733, 734, 775
 Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 695, 698, 732, 774
 Cancellation clause, 677, 678, 694
 Compensation, 730, 770, 817
 Constitutionality, 821
 Inquiry, 731, 769, 770, 776, 831
 International Bill of Human Rights, 697
 Management of airport, 678
 Negotiations leading to agreement, 729, 771
 Nixon Report, 678, 679, 693, 694, 698, 729, 730, 732, 733, 777
 Notwithstanding clause, 774, 776
 Out-of-pocket expenses, 678
 Property rights, 697, 770
 Public interest, 677, 678
 Public policy, 677, 678, 698
 Reimbursement of developers, 678
 Royal Recommendation, 828, 829, 830
 "Rule of law", 772, 774, 776, 777
 War Damage Act, 1965 (Great Britain), 820
- Speakers: Senators
 Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 770-71, 806, 807
 Balfour, R. James, 729-32
 Beaudoin, Gérard-A., 801-02, 830
 Berntson, Eric Arthur, 679, 813, 816
 Bolduc, Roch, 778
 Di Nino, Consiglio, 769-70, 823, 824-25
 Frith, Royce, 695, 771-72, 773-75, 778, 802-06, 807-08, 811, 812, 813, 815, 824, 827, 828, 829, 832, 833
 Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 821-22, 823
 Jessiman, Duncan J., 732-34, 828
 Kinsella, Noël A., 696-97, 698
 Kirby, Michael, 677-79, 778-79
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 679, 693-95, 696, 778, 811, 825-27, 829
 Murray, Lowell, 775-78, 810-11, 812, 827, 829, 831
 Nolin, Pierre Claude, 698-99
 Oliver, Donald H., 819-21
 Pitfield, P. Michael, 816, 831-32
 Prud'homme, Marcel, 808, 809-10, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 830, 831
 St. Germain, Gerry, 807, 808, 812, 813, 814-15
 Simard, Jean-Maurice, 679
 Spivak, Mira, 816
 Stanbury, Richard J., 813, 814, 816, 817-19, 823, 827
 Stewart, John B., 821, 827-30
- Pepin, P.C., the late Hon. Jean-Luc, tributes, 2064-65
- Perrault, P.C., Hon. Raymond J.
 Aboriginal Peoples Committee report
 9th. Treatment of aboriginal veterans, 1482-83, 1493-94
 Grievances, 1494
 Independent investigator, 1494
 Living conditions of veterans, 1484
 Paternalism, 1494
 Recognition of contribution, 1494
 Remembrance Day services, 1494
- Perrault, P.C., Hon. Raymond J.—Cont'd
 Aboriginal Peoples Committee—Cont'd
 Scholarship fund, 1494
 Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 85-87
 Business of the Senate, adjournment, 1775
 Canada-China relations, human rights in China and Tibet, m, 1563, 1671-72
 Communications, Radio Canada International, possibility of alternative funding, government position, qu, 2492, 2493
 Criminal Code, amendments to sentencing provisions, st, 1180-81
 Economy, partisan nature of the Opposition in the Senate, qu, 1226
 Firefighters of North America, st, 1545
 International trade, 1994 export statistics, 1222-23
 LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 967
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports
 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 488, 493, 494-95
 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2340
 Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 981
 National Unity, proposed establishment of committee on regional aspirations, st, 2150
 Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2040
 Precincts of Parliament, condition of carpet in Senate Chamber, qu, 1728, 1729
 Status of Women, anniversary of Privy Council decision, congratulations to winners of 1995 Persons Awards, st, 2117
 Transport, Radio Canada International, invitation to Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Trade to respond to Senate committee report, 1227
 Transport and Communications Committee
 Radio Canada International, authority to study implications of reduction in funding, 78, 198-200
 Cuts to language services, 198, 199
 Satellite service, 199
 Shortwave service, 199
 Report
 5th, Radio Canada International, study of mandate and funding, 781
 International broadcasting, 781
 Veterans affairs
 Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, inquiry, 194
 International peace parks, 194
 U.S. veterans' benefits to Canadian veterans, 194
 Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, m to provide site, 431, 433, 505-06, m in amdt, 506
 National Capital Commission mandate, 506
 Peacekeeping, 505
 Peace Parks, 506
 United States Embassy in Ottawa, 506
 Vietnam War, Canada's role, 505
- Petten, Hon. William J.
 Aboriginal Peoples Committee, authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 1085
 Adjournment, 951, 1109, 1177, 1727
 Leave having been given to revert to Government Notices of Motion, 1177, 1178
 Answers to Order Paper questions tabled, 996, 1070, 1112
 Business of the Senate, 1075, 1177
 Adjournment, 984, 994, 1038, 1057, 1084
 Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 452, 457-59; considered in Committee of the Whole, 475
 Conservation, 458
 Environmental conditions, 457
 Flags of convenience, 458, 459
 International cooperation, 458
 Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization (NAFO), 457, 458
 Overfishing, 457, 458, 459

Petten, Hon. William J.—Cont'd

- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill—Cont'd
 - Quotas, 457
 - Stateless vessels, 458
 - Straddling stocks, 458, 459
- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 988
- Davey, Hon. Keith and Hastings, Hon. Earl A., tributes on twenty-eighth anniversary of appointments to Senate, st, 159
- David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1162
- Delayed answers, 955
- Delayed answers to oral questions, 972, 986, 1011, 1041, 1087, 1111, 1136, 1169
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee, authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 1081
- Folk of the Sea, Newfoundland performing arts group, congratulations, st, 909
- Foreign Affairs Committee, authority to meet during sitting of Senate, 988, 989, 1084
- Lang, Hon. Daniel A., tributes on retirement, 616
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 971
- Marine Transportation Security bill C-38, 920-21, 996, 997
 - Cruise industry, 921
 - International Maritime Organization Standards, 921
 - Marine disasters, 920
 - Terrorism, 920, 921
 - Violence against passenger vessels, 921
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 982
- Powers of parliamentary committees, paper referred to Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, 1153
- Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick William, tribute, 684
- World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1164

Phillips, Hon. Orville H.

- Budget, 1995
 - Cancellation of goods and services tax, government position, qu, 1251
- Budget Implementation, 1994 amendment bill C-17, 532, 533, 556, 557-58
 - Atlantic Canada, 557
 - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 556, 557
 - Unemployment insurance, 557
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1855-56
 - Royal Canadian Legion, 1855-56
- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 132, 369-70, 371
 - Atlantic Canada, 370, 371
 - Atlantic Canada Opportunity Agency, 370
 - Fishing industry, 370
 - Infrastructure Program, 369
 - Interest rates, 369
 - Small business, 369
 - Tourist industry, 370
 - Unemployment insurance, 370, 371
 - Unemployment rate, 370
- Business of the Senate, adjournment, 2536
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, National Film Board, Telefilm Canada, commissioning of production of war films, tabled, 1191
- Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 661
- Canadian Heritage, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, cancellation of contract of Pamela Wallin with Prime Time News Magazine, government position, qu, 1531
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 469, 470
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, point of order, 1899

Phillips, Hon. Orville H.—Cont'd

- Human resources development
 - Inclusion of representatives of east coast fishermen on social security task force, qu, 46
 - Request for financial aid for fisheries organizations, qu, 47
 - Justice
 - Appointment of sister of Minister to Court of Queen's Bench of New Brunswick, government position, qu, 1301
 - Sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government, libel action by former Prime Minister, source of funding for government counsel, qu, 2466
 - Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2425
 - Notice of motion to instruct com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2370, 2377
 - Macquarrie, Hon. Heath, tributes on retirement, 721
 - Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 979
 - Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 894
 - National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee
 - Appointment, 152
 - National Defence, proposed cut-backs to defence expenditures, government position, qu, 114
 - National Film Board, audit of president's expenses, tabled, 1229
 - Official Languages, Special Joint Committee
 - Estimates, 1994-95, Privy Council Vote 20 ref to Joint Committee, 160, 161
 - Prince Edward Island, fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 169-70, 171, 172
 - Design changes, 172
 - Funding, 171
 - Straight Crossing Incorporation (SCI), 170, 171
 - Supervisory committee, 170
 - Tolls, 171
 - Tourism, 170
 - Quebec, m for recognition as distinct society, 2477, 2478-80, 2534, 2535
 - The Valour and the Horror, amount and terms of loans to producers, tabled, 1206
 - Transport
 - Institution of public inquiry, government position, qu, 1472
 - Pearson Airport Agreements
 - Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, request for clarification, qu, 1472
 - Request for judicial inquiry, government position, qu, 1489, 1490
 - Request for tabling of lawyer's time dockets relating to meeting with Matthews Group, qu, 1501-02
 - Pearson International Airport, implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, qu, 1058, (r) 1136
 - Pearson International Airport redevelopment, alleged involvement of Prime Minister, request for further answer, qu, 1165
 - Veterans affairs, Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial
 - Inquiry, 175
 - Motion to urge government to provide site, 520
 - Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67, 1666-68, 1858-59
 - Minister's power, 1667
 - Pension advocates, 1667, 1668, 1859
- Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60. 1r, 1223; 2r, 1255-56; ref to com, 1256; rep without amdt, 1355; 3r, 1378; r.a., chap. 4, 1995, 1446
- Boat Harbour Final Agreement, 1255, 1256
 - Compensation, 1255, 1256
 - Indian moneys, 1256
 - Relocation fund, 1255, 1256
 - Riparian rights, 1255
 - Treatment facility, 1255, 1256

Pictou Landing Indian Band Agreement bill C-60—Cont'dSpeakers: Senators

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1256
 Buchanan, John, 1256
 Graham, B. Alasdair, 1378
 Marchand, Len, 1255-56

Pitfield, P.C., Hon. P. Michael

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 16th, firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2338
 Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 816, 831-32
 Inquiry, 831

Points of order

Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, beyond scope of supply bill (Tkachuk), 1453-58; Speaker's ruling, 1475-76
 Contravention of Rule 26 (Olson), 240
 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69 (Lynch-Staunton), 1896-903; Speaker's ruling, 1913
 Karla Homolka bill S-11, bill of attainder procedure (Kinsella), 2139-43; Speaker's ruling, 2367-68
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 Firearms bill C-68, time of vote (Prud'homme), 2291
 Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69 (Kinsella), 2423-28; Speaker's ruling, 2428-29
 Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep (Phillips), 2370, 2376-80, 2381, 2389; Speaker's ruling, 2390-94
 Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85 (Corbin), 2018
 On motion to adjourn debate (Frith), 431-32, 433
 On motion to adjourn debate on private senator's bill (Corbin), 988
 On motion to strike special committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1625-29; Speaker's ruling, 2003-05; 2170-72
 Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders (Corbin), 1745-47, 1779-82; Speaker's ruling, 1843-44
 Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons (MacEachen), 1014-18; Speaker's ruling, 1192-94
 Dissenting opinion, 1014, 1016, 1017
 Minority reports, 1016
 Rules which apply to joint committees, 1016, 1017
 Shared costs of joint committees, 1016
 Stand-alone reports, 1014, 1016
Speakers: Senators
 Corbin, Eymard G., 1017
 Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1015, 1017-18
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 1016, 1018
 MacEachen, Allan J., 1014, 1015-16, 1018, 1193-94
 Murray, Lowell, 1016
 Ottenheimer, Gerald R., 1015
 Stewart, John B., 1017
 Senators' Statements (MacDonald), 546-47

Post-secondary education

Canada Scholarship Program, effect of cuts, possibility of replacement, government position, qu, 1341, (r) 1588-89
 Canada Student Loans Program, impact on federal funding, government position, qu, 605, (r) 835
 Effect of cuts to social transfer payments on university enrolment, qu, 1683, (r) 1990-91
 Effects of withdrawal of federal funding, government position, qu, 333
 Financing arrangements for student loans, government policy, qu, 333, (r) 424
 Growth in revenue from EPF transfers tax points, possibility of transfer to institutions, qu, 934-35, (r) 1377-78
 Increases in university tuition fees in Newfoundland, government position, qu, 1532, (r) 1589

Post-secondary education—Cont'd

Reinstatement or replacement of Canada Scholarships Fund, government position, qu, 1683-84

Poulin, Hon. Marie-P. (introduced in the Senate Oct. 3/95), 2058-60

Controlled Drugs and Substances bill C-7, 2184, 2219
 Prescription drugs, 2184
 Treatment programs, 2184
 Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2062-63

Poverty in Canada, document tabled, 784Powers of parliamentary committees, paper referred to Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, 1070, 1129-30, 1153Speakers: Senators

Corbin, Eymard G., 1130
 Kelly, William M., 1130
 MacDonald, Finlay, 1129-30
 Neiman, Joan, 1130
 Petten, William J., 1153

Practice of Family Law in Ontario, inquiry, 1958Precincts of Parliament

Authority to initiate project, qu, 1132
 Cancellation of East Block Tunnel project, request for information, qu, 1549, (r) 1694
 Central heating problems, request for remedy, qu, 1168, (r) 1305
 Condition of carpet in Senate Chamber, qu, 1728-29
 Consultations with Senate before undertaking further work, government position, qu, 1167
 Locking of East Block doors, government position, qu, 1616
 Proposed renovations, government position, qu, 452-53, (r) 974
 Proposed renovations to East and Centre Blocks, government position, qu, 306-08, (r) 974
 Request for definition, qu, 1168, (r) 1304-05
 Role of Speakers as chairmen of Internal Economy Committees of both Houses, qu, 1168
 Tunnel between East Block and Centre Block
 Appropriateness of expenditure, government position, qu, 1131-32
 Request for information, qu, 1166-67, (r) 1535
See also Public Works

Prince Edward Island

Fixed link, change in design of bridge, environmental assessment review process, government position, qu, 185-86
 Fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 110, 166-73, 204-07, 227-29, adopted, 240-43
 Amending formula, 207
 Back-up service, 172, 204, 241, 242
 Bilateral agreement, 167, 206
 Bridge, 167
 Bridge construction agreement, 168
 Bridge design, 205, 229, 241
 Clearance, 241
 Compensation fund, 168
 Constitutional obligation, 241, 242
 Continuous communication, 171, 172
 Cost, 204, 205
 Design changes, 171, 172, 242
 Dredging, 228
 Dust storms, 228
 Environmental review, 167, 205, 228
 Ferry service, 204, 205, 206
 Ferry workers, 168
 Financing, 169, 171
 Fisheries Liaison Committee, 168, 170
 Ice build-up, 205, 241
 Jobs, 168
 Prince Edward Island Terms of Union, 167

Prince Edward Island—Cont'd

Straight Crossing Incorporated (SCI), 170, 171
Tolls, 169, 170
Tourism, 169, 170
Wood Islands-Caribou ferry, 242, 243

Speakers: Senators

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 206-07
Fairbairn, Joyce, 167-69, 172, 173, 240, 241-42, 243
Macquarrie, Heath, 172, 204, 227-29, 242, 243
Molgat, Gildas L., 166-67, 229, 243
Phillips, Orville H., 169-70, 171
Prud'homme, Marcel, 172
Spivak, Mira, 204-06
Stewart, John B., 171-72, 229, 242-43
Macphail, Sir Andrew, tribute to, document tabled, 917-18
Transfer of Northumberland Strait Bridge office to Charlottetown, tabled, 851-52
Upgrading of Charlottetown Harbour facilities, tabled, 852

Privacy Commissioner, annual reports tabled, 845, 2067

Privilege, 1492, 2508

See also Questions of Privilege

Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders, Standing Senate Committee

Authority to act jointly with House of Commons Procedure and House Affairs Committee on examination of operation of joint committees, adopted, 1678

Point of order, 1696, 1745-47, 1779-82; Speaker's ruling, 1843-44

Membership

See Journals of the Senate

Motion to study and report upon decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, 1595, 1686-88, 1720-23, 1754-55

Reports

1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 202

See Journals of the Senate

2nd, recommending deletion of Rule 26 from Rules of the Senate, 932, adopted, 1010

3rd, amending Rule 17(1), recall of Senate, 1615, adopted, 1640

4th, printing separate Order Paper, changing title of Minutes to Journals, amending Rules 29(2), (5), 86(4), 105(5) and 128, printing new Rules of the Senate and requesting Library of Parliament to prepare new index to Rules, 1957, adopted, 2095

Property qualification of Senators, report presented, 360

Proposals for Social Reform, inquiry, 873, 906-08

Aboriginal peoples, 908

Commission on Systemic Racism in the Ontario Criminal Justice System, 906

Crime Prevention Council, 907

Disabled, 908

Discrimination within criminal justice system, 906

Racism in Ontario justice system, 907

Royal Commission on the Donald Marshall Jr. prosecution in Nova Scotia, 906, 907

Treatment of blacks in Ontario prisons, 906

Visible minorities, 908

Women, 908

Speaker: Senator

Oliver, Donald H., 873, 906-08

Prud'homme, P.C., Hon. Marcel

Allmand, P.C., the Hon. Warren W., felicitations on thirtieth anniversary as Member of Parliament, st. 2229

Prud'homme, P.C., Hon. Marcel—Cont'd

Berger, His Excellency David

Felicitations on his appointment as Ambassador to Israel, st. 1977
Scrutiny on views prior to his appointment as Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus, government position, qu. 2010-11, (r) 2115

Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1268, 1269-70

National Finance Committee, role of, 1269-70

Senate, role of, 1268

Business of the Senate, 64, 479, 484, 800, 1962, 1963

Adjournment, 1776, 1916, 2230

Motion stands, 2175-76

Canada Grain amendment bill C-51, 1163

Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 582

Canadian Heritage, government documents published unilingually, infraction of policy on official languages, government position, qu. 1893

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, increase in local telephone rates, government position, qu. 2167

Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 417

Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, 1876-78

Middle East, 1877-78

Christmas Greetings, 2546

Clerk of the Senate

Appointment of Gordon Barnhart, Esq., as honorary officer of the Senate, felicitations, 180

Appointment of Paul C. Bélisle, Esq., as Clerk of the Senate, felicitations, 180

Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 452; considered in Committee of the Whole, 467-68

Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee, m to appoint, adopted, 1970

Communications

Granting of public relations contract for G-7 Summit, request for particulars on advice given to RCMP, qu. 1928, (r) 2082

Radio Canada International, future prospects for continuance

Government position, qu. 2463

Report of Senate committee on continued funding, government position, qu. 2490

Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee, m to establish, 2547-48

Constitutional amendments, distribution of veto power, status of British Columbia, government position, qu. 2400, 2417

David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1162

Defence, lobbyists involved in acquisition, request for particulars, qu. 1634, 1993, (r) 2367

Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47, 1380, 1381

Spending estimates, 1380

Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2063

Distinguished Visitors, seminar, Canadian parliamentary system, st. 542

Elections Canada, electoral boundaries readjustment process, extension of deadline, request for particulars, qu. 2251-52

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, 1733-35; point of order, 1901-03; m to refer question and message from Commons to com, 1968-69; m to instruct com to table final report, 2189

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 348-50

Role of Senate, 348

Royal Commission on Electoral Reform (Lortie), 348

Size of House of Commons, 349, 350

Everett, Hon. Douglas D., resignation from Senate, announcement and tributes, 20-21

Federal-provincial relations, conduct of security services in Quebec, government operations, qu. 1742-43

Prud'homme, P.C., Hon. Marcel—Cont'd

- Felicitations on the occasion of his thirtieth anniversary in Parliament, 91
- Firearms legislation, presentation of resolution, st. 2242
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1602, 1620
 - Royal Recommendation, 1620
- Foreign affairs
 - Proposed visit of Chairman Arafat of Palestine, requirement for ministerial permit, government position, qu. 501-02, (r) 587
 - Request for newly appointed Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus to appear before committee, qu. 1983, 1984
- Foreign Affairs Committee Reports
 - 3rd, Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement, 589
 - 6th, budget, examination on the consequences of the economic integration of the European Union, 1885
- Health and Welfare, establishment of special committee, inquiry, 128-29
 - Attempted suicide, 129
- Hopkins, M.P., Mr. Leonard, felicitations on thirtieth anniversary as Member of Parliament, st. 2229
- Human Resources Development, child care, federal offer of funding, lack of consultation with provinces, government position, qu. 2503
- Human rights
 - Relationship to trade, request for debate, qu. 1693
 - Request for debate on human rights and trade, government position, qu. 914
 - Vigilance towards situations developing in other countries, government position, qu. 2505-06
- Husseini, Faisal Abdel Qader al, role in Middle East peace negotiations, st. 2098
- Indian affairs, status of negotiations on Oka, role of chief federal negotiator, 513
- Lang, Hon. Daniel A., tributes on retirement, 615-16
- Lawson, Hon. Edward M., twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2097
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 969-70
- Leblanc, the late Hon. Fernand E., tributes, 2553
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 1740
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2428
 - Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2379, 2380, 2393
- Reports
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 496
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 789, 808, 809-10, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816
 - 10th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment 1995 bill C-69, 1725, 1726-27
 - 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, 2021-22; m in amdt, 2029-30; m in amdt, 2034-35
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amtds, 2291, 2299
- Library of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee
 - Appointment of Senators, 161
- Macdonald, Hon. John M., tributes on eighty-ninth birthday, 1571-72
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 979
- Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, 1940-42, 2016-18, 2019
 - Common-law relationships, 2017
 - Double dipping, 1940, 1941, 1942, 2016, 2017
- Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.
 - Felicitations on appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 948-49
 - Twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2097
- Muir, Hon. Robert, tributes on retirement, 892-93

Prud'homme, P.C., Hon. Marcel—Cont'd

- National Anthem, obligation to perform by members of the House of Commons, consequences of demand by Reform Party, st. 2347-48
- National Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee
 - Appointment, 150, 153-55
- National flag of Canada, thirtieth anniversary of designation as national emblem, st. 1203
- National security
 - Proposal to strike special committee
 - Clarification of government position, qu. 881, 882
 - Government position, qu. 875-77, 903, 904, (r) 1042
 - Request for answer, qu. 1132, 1133
- National unity
 - Aftermath of Quebec referendum, comments of John Nunziata, M.P., st. 2174
 - Proposed establishment of committee on regional aspirations, st. 2150-51, 2152
 - Quebec referendum, response of some Quebecers to communications from schoolchildren in other parts of the country, st. 2415
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2042
- New senators, 843-44
 - Felicitations, 843-44
 - Introduction, 869-70, 2060, 2550-51
- Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54, 1937-38
- Official Languages, Standing Joint Committee
 - Appointment of Senators, 161
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee reports
 - 1st, Budget, 1771, adopted, on div, 1784-86
 - Point of order, 1771
 - 3rd, reserving right to hold further hearings and adjourning with no appointed date, 2599
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 830, 831
 - Motion to concur with Message from Commons, 864-66
- Pepin, P.C., the late Hon. Jean-Luc, tribute, 2065
- Precincts of Parliament, role of Speakers as chairmen of Internal Economy Committees of both Houses, qu. 1168
- Prince Edward Island, fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 172
 - Back-up system, 172
- Privilege, 2508
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders Committee, authority to study and report upon decision of the House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, 1721-23
- Quebec
 - Distinct society resolution, comments by the chair of the Standing Committee on Canadian Heritage, government position, qu. 2539-40
 - Motion for recognition as distinct society, 2454, 2532-34, 2535
 - Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 611-12
 - Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, 1918, 1919, 1932-34, 1993-95
- St-Jean-Baptiste Day, good wishes to French Canadians, 1916-17
- Selection Committee
 - Authority to extend deadline for selection of members of Special Committee on Pearson Airport Agreements, 1632
- Reports
 - 2nd, membership of committees, 22-24, 25
 - 5th, membership of Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee, 1982, 1996
- Senate
 - Criticism by members of the media, st. 2433-34
 - Correction, 2443
 - Proposal for debate on foreign affairs and national defence, request for commitment, qu. 552-53

Prud'homme, P.C., Hon. Marcel—Cont'd

Transport

- Measure to terminate railway strike, m to debate ref to Committee of the Whole, 1373; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1400-01, 1406
- Pearson Airport agreements, request for public inquiry, government position, qu, 902
- Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1567-68
- Trudeau, Pierre Elliott, congratulations on the occasion of his 75th birthday, st, 871
- Turcotte, His Eminence Jean-Claude, tributes on nomination as cardinal, st, 910
- Tweed and District Historical Society, st, 2499
- United Nations, fiftieth anniversary of founding, st, 1921-22
- Veterans affairs, m to urge government to provide site for Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, 520, 521-23
- Victory in Europe, homage to resistance movements, st, 1614
- Visitors in the gallery, 917, 932
- Wenman, the late Robert Lloyd, tribute, st, 1795-96
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, 1323-24; considered in Committee of the Whole, 1333
- Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, qu, 1763

Public Service Health Care Plan, disparity in nursing care coverage, st, 599-600

Public Service 2000, report tabled, 482

Public Works

- Cancellation of building contract in Dorval, Quebec, substitution of rental agreement, request for particulars, qu, 1586, (r) 1717-18
 - Cancellation of projects within parliamentary precincts, government position, qu, 1215-16, (r) 1536
 - Consultation with Internal Economy Committee on cancellation of project, qu, 1215, (r) 1536
 - Decision of Minister to build new federal building in Sault Ste. Marie, request for details of contract, qu, 1186-87, (r) 1535-36
 - Details of costs involved in cancellation of project, qu, 1215, (r) 1536
 - Diversion of funds from designated Nova Scotia Highway Project, abuse of privilege by Minister, government position, qu, 1709
 - Harbourfront, Toronto, closing due to funding cuts, government position, qu, 1533-34
 - Reconstruction of East Block Tunnel, status of project, qu, 1215, (r) 1536
 - Renovation of East Block, Senate input, government position, qu, 187, (r) 972-74
 - Renovation of windows at Lester B. Pearson Building, cancellation of contract, government position, qu, 1532, (r) 1694
- See also* Precincts of Parliament

Public Works, future of Harbourfront Centre, inquiry, 1529, withdrawn, 1569

Quebec

- Distinct society motion, legal opinion sought on interpretation of wording, government position, qu, 2491
- Distinct society resolution, comments by the chair of the Standing Committee on Canadian Heritage, government position, qu, 2539-40
- Impending election and referendum, action for national unity, government position, qu, 111
- Motion to recognize as distinct society, 2399, 2452-58, 2470-80; adopted, 2527-36
 - Aboriginal or treaty rights, 2453
 - Alberta veto, 2457

Quebec—Cont'dMotion to recognize as distinct society—Cont'd

- Canadian public interest, 2455
- Civil law tradition, 2452
- First ministers conference, 2454, 2455-56
- French-speaking majority, 2452
- Minorities, 2453
- Parallel statements, 2454
- Quebec veto, 2529
- Quebec's powers, 2456
- Unemployment insurance system, 2453
- Unique culture, 2452
- Veto, 2453, 2456
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bacon, Lise, 2527-28
 - Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 2455-56, 2528-29
 - Fairbairn, Joyce, 2399, 2452-54, 2455, 2456
 - Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 2530-31
 - Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 2529
 - Graham, B. Alasdair, 2473-74
 - Kinsella, Noël A., 2455, 2529-30
 - Lynch-Staunton, John, 2454, 2470-73
 - Nolin, Pierre Claude, 2454, 2455, 2456, 2474-76
 - Olson, H.A., 2454, 2456, 2457, 2458
 - Pearson, Landon, 2531-32
 - Phillips, Orville H., 2477, 2478-80, 2534, 2535
 - Prud'homme, Marcel, 2454, 2532-34, 2535
 - Simard, Jean-Maurice, 2535-36
 - Stanbury, Richard J., 2476-77
- Prime Minister's proposals, means of gaining necessary consent of provinces, government position, qu, 2363
- Recognition as distinct society, m, 2399
- Strategy of separatists, st, 1336-37

Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 421, 608-12

Speakers: Senators

- Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 421
- Hébert, Jacques, 612
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 611
- Murray, Lowell, 611
- Nolin, Pierre Claude, 611
- Prud'homme, Marcel, 611, 612
- Robichaud, Louis-J., 612

Quebec referendum

See National Unity

Questions of Privilege, 845, 855, 867-68, 877, 1492, 1522-23, 2105-07, 2163, 2202-05

- Notice of motion pursuant to Rule 43, 836, 2098, 2152
 - Response to Speaker's ruling, 930-31
 - Point of order, 931
 - Speaker's rulings, 919-20, 2211-12, 2351-53
- See also* Privilege

Questions (oral)

Aboriginal Peoples

- Co-management agreements in Saskatchewan, request for particulars, 1706-07
- Rate of illiteracy among native youth, government position, 2384-85
- Report of Senate Committee on plight of aboriginal veterans, request for response, 2233
- Right to self-determination, government position, 2384
- Scholarship for aboriginal veterans, request for response to report of Standing Senate Committee, 2540

Agriculture

- Canadian Wheat Board
 - Proposed increase in initial price of grain, government position, 2119
 - Timing of examination by experts, government position, 2011

Questions (oral)—Cont'dAgriculture—Cont'd

- Crow rate, costs of transporting grain, government position, 666, (r) 834-35
 - Delay in grain shipment from prairies, government position, 321, (r) 455-56
 - Grain transportation, possible sale of hopper cars, government position, 2440
 - Handling of grain on west coast, effect of failure to meet commitments, government position, 454, (r) 655
 - Imposition of U.S. import tax on Canadian sugar products, discussion with President during upcoming visit, 1211-12
 - Improvement in international grain market, request for analysis of situation, 1223, (r) 1361
 - Movement of grain on west coast, government position, 422
 - Potato blight in New Brunswick, compensation for damages sustained by growers, government position, 1213, (r) 1303-04
 - Reduction of grain transportation subsidies, assistance to farmers for increase in rail freight costs, government position, 1238
 - Reduction of transportation subsidies, effect on Manitoba economy, 1238
 - Strike by west coast longshoremen, delay in introducing back-to-work legislation, 47-48
 - Threat to sugar industry under new GATT rules, government position, 1110-11, (r) 1240-41
 - Toronto, status of trade negotiations, government position, 239
 - Transportation of grain, shortage of hopper cars, government position, 285
 - Western grain marketing, possibility of national plebiscite, government position, 2491-92, (r) 2610
 - Western grain transportation, backhaul to Thunder Bay, government position, 1041, (r) 1190
- Atlantic Canada
- Dependence on Scotia Synfuels project, reinstatement of special investment tax credit, government position, 186-87, 517, (r) 555
- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency
- Atlantic Canada regional venture capital fund, equity financing needs of small business, government position, 1110
 - Auditor General's report, efficacy of infrastructure job statistics, government position, 2404-05
- Cornwallis Park Development Agency
- Allegations of mismanagement
 - Findings of National Defence investigation, government position, 2318
 - Response of minister, 2177
 - Stoppage of funds, government position, 2167
 - Circumstances surrounding appointment of Board of Directors, government position, 2168
 - Inventory control and hiring procedures, request for particulars, 2211
 - Request for answer to order paper question on KPMG report, 2209-10
 - Request for investigation by Auditor General, government position, 2177
 - Support for investigation by Auditor General into allegations of mismanagement, government position, 2371
- Cuts by Minister to National Defence Adjustment Fund, government position, 1340, (r) 1744-45
- Future of agency
- Government position, 238
 - Objectives and scope of government review, 252, (r) 423
- Grants to projects in New Brunswick, government position, 452, (r) 556
- Location and nature of management, government policy, 323
 - Method of awarding projects, government policy, 286, (r) 424
 - Request for information on projects, 1471-72, (r) 1745
 - Substitution of loans for subsidies

Questions (oral)—Cont'dAtlantic Canada Opportunities Agency—Cont'd

- Application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, 1110, (r) 1191
 - Government position, 1087, (r) 1190
- Atomic Energy of Canada Limited
- Appointment and competence of chairman, government position, 250-51
- Auditor General, dispute with departments over unreported liabilities, government policy, 1728, (r) 2075
- Berger, His Excellency David, scrutiny on views prior to his appointment as Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus, government position, 2010-11, (r) 2115
- Bosnia
- Ban on sale of armaments, government policy, 333
 - Canada's commitment to NATO air strikes, government position, 93-94
 - Coherence of NATO strategy, government policy, 111-12, (r) 287
 - Conditions for continuation of peacekeeping mission, visit of UN Secretary-General, government position, 1040, (r) 1341-42
 - NATO air strikes on un-designated safe areas, government policy, 333
 - United Nations, request for NATO air strikes, government position, 303-04
 - Use of air strikes, Canada's role, government position, 94, 115
- Budget
- Action against high interest rates, government position, 1086
 - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, justification of funding, government position, 163
 - Changes to rules governing RRSP contributions, position of government, 96
 - Closure and future use of Downsview Military base, government position, 238-39, (r) 324
 - See appendix p. 331A
 - Closure of Military College at St-Jean, related additional costs, 623, (r) 670-71
 - Definition of tax loophole, 1237
 - Effect of carbon tax on cost of agricultural production, 94
 - Elderly benefits assessed by household income, government position, 953
 - Elimination of tax breaks for health and dental plans, government position, 1110
 - Extension of wage freeze for public servants, government position, 132-33
 - Grants to municipalities in lieu of taxes, government policy, 216, (r) 310
 - Impact of budget on Atlantic region, concept of fairness, government position, 165
- International Space Station Program
- Status of Canada's commitment, government position, 161-63, (r) 221-22
 - Request for clarification, 236-37, (r) 1985-86
- Methods of deficit reduction, government position, 1097
- Military and funding cut-backs, effect on employment, 134
- New Brunswick, effect of changes to unemployment insurance, government position, 188, (r) 308-09
- Private pension income, possible elimination of tax credit, consultation with senior citizens, 1239
- Proposed closure of Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean
- Request for clarification, 334, (r) 668
 - Resumption of discussions, government position, 1111
 - Reversal of decision, government position, 185, 217, 218-20, (r) 309, 668
- Proposed closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, request for update, 622
- Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, 398-99
- Cancellation of decision, government position, 305
 - Reversal of decision, government position, 237-38
- R & D cut-backs, effect on British Columbia, 135

Questions (oral)—Cont'dBudget—Cont'd

- Reaction of International Monetary Fund to government's proposal to reduce deficit, government response, 953-54
 - Reduction of federal debt and annual deficit, government policy, 952-53
 - Registered Retirement Savings Plans, government position on possible changes, 994-95, (r) 1112
 - Removal of tax credit, effect on seniors, 136-37
 - Request for date of presentation, 1225
 - Government response, 1227
 - Request for formal debate, government position, 1227-28
 - Review of goal for deficit reduction, government position, 1085-86
 - State of the economy, government position, 1226
 - Tax increases for wealthy Canadians, government position, 1223-24
 - Threshold for clawbacks, consultations with senior citizens, 1238-38
 - Unemployment insurance, change in duration of claims, government position, 163-64
- Budget Implementation bill, 1995
- Federal-Provincial negotiations to establish standards for health and social transfers, 1635
 - Proposed amendments to reflect national standards, request for particulars, 1635-36, (r) 1745
- Budget 1995
- Cancellation of goods and services tax, government position, 1251
 - Closure of agricultural research stations, government position, 1286-87
 - Defence Industry Productivity Program, government position, 1373-74, (r) 1552
 - Elimination of Crow Rate subsidy
 - Effect on grain shipping ports, government position, 1284, (r) 1360-61
 - End of grain marketing monopoly of Canadian Wheat Board, government position, 1285
 - Maintenance of grain economy in Manitoba, government position, 1286, (r) 1616
 - Possibility of assistance from Western Economic Diversification, government position, 1286, (r) 1616
 - Elimination of Public Utilities Income Tax Transfer Act, effect on Province of Alberta, government position, 1251-52
 - Inequality in funding treatment of Atlantic agencies, 1302-03, (r) 1744
 - Precedence of budget statement of Finance Minister over Red Book, government position, 1250
 - Ratio of spending cuts to tax increases, government position, 1251
 - Reduction to international assistance envelope, government position, 1250-51
 - Reform of Old Age Security
 - Effect on elderly women of application of clawback to household income, 1287
 - Effect on older married women of application of clawback to household income, 1252-53
 - Status of RRSP as tax loophole, government position, 1237-38, (r) 1549-50
- Business of the Senate
- Order Paper questions, request for answers, 1472-73
 - Proposal to establish committee to investigate orders of reference, government position, 955
 - Report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on firearms legislation, votes on amendments, request for advice on procedure, 2269-70
- Cabinet, Liberal election promises on reduction in size, government position, 1707-08
- Canada Assistance Plan, removal of programs from block funding to provinces, government position, 1805

Questions (oral)—Cont'dCanada-China relations

- Diplomatic representations to China on sixth anniversary of Tiananmen Square massacre, request for information, 1691
- Human rights and commercial relations, government policy, 1691-92, (r) 2154-55
- Protest over granting of visa to Taiwanese official, government position, 1691, (r) 2047
- Representations on human rights abuses, government position, 238, (r) 455
- Trade in goods manufactured in labour camps, government policy, 2112-13, (r) 2558
- Validity of statement on freedom of religion in Tibet, government position, 1692, (r) 2153-54
- Visit to Canada of Chinese Premier, raising of human rights issues, government position, 2112

Canada Council

- Closure of Art Bank
 - Government position, 1534, (r) 1600-01
 - Request for answer, 1589
 - Prior consultations with minister, government position, 1960-61
 - Reduction in staff in Atlantic Region, effect on programs, government position, 1635, (r) 1694-95
 - Royal Winnipeg Ballet, loss of student grants due to budget cuts, possibility of alternate funding, government position, 1895, (r) 2049-50
- Canada Health and Social Transfer, effect on spending of provincial governments, government position, 1634-35
- Canada Post Corporation
- Delay in delivery of mail, government position, 2168
 - Extension of contract on leases, request for information on members of consortium, 1983, 2010, (r) 2115
 - Lease of premises in Sydney, Nova Scotia, intervention of Minister of Public Works, 1982-83, (r) 2083
 - Request for answer, 2010
 - See appendix, p. 2084

Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement

- Grains, breakdown in trade relations, government position, 502-03, (r) 1088

Canada-United States Relations

- Proposed imposition of U.S. border-crossing tax, government position, 1183
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, evaluation of operations of corporation, 252, (r) 325
- Canadian Coast Guard, search and rescue operations, state of helicopter fleet, 45

Canadian Heritage

- Abolition of Art Bank, role of minister, 1762, (r) 2076
 - Actions of Film Review Board on adult films, government position, 1452, (r) 1693-94
 - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, cancellation of contract of Pamela Wallin with Prime Time News Magazine, government position, 1531
 - Catalogue of national sports events, failure to publish in French, government position, 1841-42, (r) 2080
 - Expo 2005, report of independent evaluators, decision based on politics or merit, government position, 1521, (r) 1600
 - Government documents published unilingually, infraction of policy on official languages, government position, 1892-94
- Canadian International Development Agency, filling of vacant positions without competition, government position, 2269
- Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, increase in local telephone rates, government position, 2167
- China, human rights and commercial relations
- Government policy, 601-02
 - Government position, 553, 604-05, (r) 835-36

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Citizenship and immigration
 - Review of refugee status claimants, government position, 501, (r) 833-34
- Communications
 - Granting of public relations contract for G-7 Summit
 - Contravention of Treasury Board regulations, government position, 1927-28
 - Request for estimated final cost, 1928, (r) 2081-82
 - Request for answer, 1959
 - Request for particulars on advice given to RCMP, 1928, (r) 2082
- Radio Canada International
 - Future prospects for continuance
 - Government position, 2463
 - Report of Senate committee on continued funding, government position, 2489-90
 - Possibility of alternative funding, government position, 2492-93
- Satellite broadcasting, consultation with CRTC and with both Houses of Parliament, government position, 1803-04
- Conflict of interests
 - Lobbying, influence peddling and selling access, 354-55, (r) 456
- Constitution
 - Government efforts to keep Quebec within Confederation, 113
- Constitutional amendments
 - Availability of opportunity for the proposal of amendments, government position, 2416-17
 - Clarification of situation in relation to aboriginal aspirations, government position, 2417
 - Distribution of veto power, status of British Columbia, government position, 2400, 2417
 - Schedule for consideration of legislation, possibility of pre-study, government position, 2437-38
 - Veto proposals, effect on future status of Yukon, 2418
- Correctional service
 - Incidence of tuberculosis in Ontario penitentiaries, government position, 1239, (r) 1550
 - Kingston Prison for Women, brutal conduct of emergency response team towards inmates, government position, 1253
 - Referral of tuberculosis problem in penitentiaries to Minister of Health, government position, 1239-40, (r) 1550-51
- Crow's Nest Pass, elimination of crow rate, government policy, 621-22
- Customs, Canadian pilots, clearance procedures at Mirabel Airport, 914, (r) 1187-88
- Defence
 - Acquisition of nuclear-powered submarines, government position, 1634
 - Lobbyists involved in acquisition, request for particulars, 1634, 1993, (r) 2367
 - Protection of Arctic sovereignty, government position, 1634
 - Reasons for acquisition of Upholder Class Submarines, government position, 1633-34, (r) 2367
 - Safety of Sea King Helicopters, government position, 2069
 - See also* National Defence
- Delayed answers to oral questions, request for answers, 915
- Economy
 - Creation of jobs for women through infrastructure program, request for particulars, 1716, (r) 2074-75
 - Expected increase in debt service costs, government position, 1109
 - Failure of infrastructure program to create jobs, government position, 1714-15
 - Market factors affecting foreign investors, government position, 1225
 - Partisan nature of the Opposition in the Senate, 1226
 - Possibility of accelerated deficit reduction, government position, 1226-27

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Economy—Cont'd
 - Possible redemption of Canada Savings Bonds, government position, 1109
 - Target for reduction of deficit, government position, 1224-25
 - Unacceptable level of unemployment, government position, 1713-14
 - Underground labour market, loss of tax dollars, government policy, 98, (r) 220-21
- Elections Canada
 - Electoral Boundaries Commissions, introduction of new legislation, request for pre-study, 1039
 - Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, introduction of suspension bill, effect on commissions in each province, 321
 - Electoral boundaries readjustment process
 - Extension of deadline, request for particulars, 2251-52
 - Transmission of maps by Chief Electoral Officer, request for information, 1891
 - Readjustment of electoral boundaries based on 1991 census, government position, 1039
- Electoral Boundaries Commission
 - Revisions to riding boundaries, status of hearings, 284
 - Suspension of operation under proposed legislation
 - Government position, 251-52
 - Proposed use of closure, government position, 283-84
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, future of bill C-18, 516-17
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994, constituencies, provinces and municipalities, process of consultation, government position, 358-59
- Employment, fluctuations in job creation statistics, situation in Quebec, government position, 2401-02
- Energy
 - Proposed carbon tax, government policy, 48
- Environment
 - Automation of weather stations, reliability of technology, government position, 1303, (r) 1986
 - Cancellation of report on state of environment, possibility of discussion on sustainable development at G-7 summit, government position, 1743, (r) 2201
 - Changes to weather reporting service adversely affecting rural and isolated areas, government position, 1843, (r) 2557-58
 - Federal management of radioactive waste material, report of Auditor General of Canada, government position, 1663, (r) 2072-73
 - Greenhouse gas reduction strategy, failure to reach agreement, government position, 1239, (r) 1304
 - International Joint Commission, recommendations on toxicity reduction in Great Lakes
 - Government position, 135, (r) 308
 - Guidelines for detection apparatus, government position, 356, (r) 456
 - Manitoba, oriented strand board plant, possibility of hearing before independent review panel, government position, 1549, (r) 1694
 - Oriented Strandboard plant in Saskatchewan, extension of environmental review to cover downstream effects in Manitoba, government position, 1633
 - Oriented Strandboard plants, cumulative effect of harvesting on boreal forests, government position, 1633
 - Proclamation of Environmental Assessment Act, status of draft regulations, government timetable, 286, (r) 402
 - Reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, establishment of national standards, government position, 2319
 - Review of Canadian Environmental Protection Act, report of Commons committee, government position, 2403-04
 - Sagkeeng First Nation, effect of pulp mill pollution, government position, 218, (r) 454-55
 - St. Lawrence Vision 2000, reduction of pollution, government position, 304, (r) 555

Questions (oral)—Cont'dEnvironment—Cont'd

Study of low-level military flights in Labrador, government response to criticism of process, 848, (r) 1205

Estimates, 1994-95

Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, review of activities by National Finance Committee, 165

Unemployment insurance cuts, plight of lobster fishermen, 166, (r) 221

Ethics Counsellor

Desirability of independent counsellor reporting to Parliament, government position, 2382

Existence of Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, 2383

Joint Committee on Code of Conduct, relevance to parliamentarians, 2383-84

Expo 2005

Announcement of host city, government position, 1574, 1707

Selection of site, government position, 1926

External relations, commitment of France to continuing nuclear testing, government position, 1763, (r) 2048-49Federal-provincial relations

Administration of infrastructure program, government policy, 95-96, (r) 138

Agreement on internal trade, nature and timeliness of amendments to bill, government position, 2210

Conduct of security services in Quebec, government operations, 1742-43

Effect of enforcement provisions of agreement on internal trade implementation bill on interprovincial trade, government position, 1715, (r) 1992-93

Effect of federal policy on pharmaceutical industry in Quebec, 398

Finance

Duplication of programs with provinces, government position, 874-75

Fiscal program update, possibility of tax increases, government position, 874

Firearms bill

Availability to other provinces of similar arrangements, costs to taxpayers, government position, 2232, (r) 2351

Funding arrangements with government of Nova Scotia, request for particulars, 2232, (r) 2351

Firearms legislation

Criteria and selection process for appearing as witness before committee, government position, 1548

Refusal by House of Commons committee to hear testimony of renowned firearms expert, government position, 1548, (r) 1617-18

Statement attributed to Prime Minister in caucus on voting of dissenting members, government position, 1777

Fisheries

Aid for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, request for statistics, 1716

Atlantic Groundfish Program, change in benefits, government position, 304, (r) 435

Collapse of Atlantic fishery, longer-term provision for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, government position, 1715-16, (r) 1928-29

North Atlantic fishery

Presence of Spanish warships accompanying fishing vessels, government position, 1359

Significance of presence of Spanish warships in relation to negotiations, 1360

Presence of Canadian naval vessels on Grand Banks, government position, 1359

Support for vessels during moratorium, 334, (r) 424

Fisheries and oceans

Cuts in departmental budget, demise of Winnipeg freshwater science teams, government position, 1842, (r) 2080-81

Establishment of Industry Renewal Boards, government position on buy-back of quotas and licences, 305-06, (r) 424

Questions (oral)—Cont'dFisheries and oceans—Cont'd

Extension of jurisdiction beyond 200-mile limit, government policy, 94-95, (r) 137-38

Memorandum of understanding to transfer freshwater science teams to Department of Environment, government position, 1842

Timeliness of annual department report, government policy, 2366

Foreign affairs

Economic assistance to Middle East, government position, 501, (r) 586-87

G-7 Halifax summit, request for tabling of pertinent documents, 1839-40

G-7 summit in Halifax, position paper not submitted for parliamentary debate, government position, 1741

Human rights issues, government policy, 285-86

Military intervention in Haiti and in Burma, government policy, 628-29, (r) 851

Negotiations towards inclusion of Chile in NAFTA, request for progress report, 1960, (r) 2114

New directives on foreign service travel directives, request for particulars, 1681, (r) 2073-74

Projected cost of G-7 summit in Halifax, request for details, 1761-62

Proposed visit of Chairman Arafat of Palestine, requirement for ministerial permit, government position, 501-02, (r) 587

Remarks of Senator Stollery on Mexico

Possibility of Canada's withdrawal from NAFTA, government position, 1522, (r) 2048

Request for answer, 1706

Response from Mexican Embassy, government position, 1522

Report of Auditor General on foreign service travel directives, government position, 1681, (r) 2073

Request for newly appointed Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus to appear before committee, 1983-84

Return to democracy in Nigeria, efforts of department, 1744, (r) 2075-76

Sales abroad of Candu reactors, request for status report on environmental and financial concerns, 1777, (r) 2077-78

Sierra Leone, proposed national elections, contributions to support fund, government position, 2466-67

Forestry, Clayoquot Sound

Grant by CIDA to protest group, 873, (r) 987

Grant by CIDA to protest group against logging, 882

Government position, request for answer, 935

Goods and Services Tax

Application on reading materials, 848-49

Application on reading materials and eye glasses, position of government leader, 856-57

Failure of government to abolish tax, timing for resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, 1532-33

Forecast for elimination or replacement, government position, 2441

Removal of tax on reading materials, government position, 1213-14, 2442

Government, progress of legislation, government policy, 42-43

Government services, refusal of airlines to negotiate discounts with Government of Canada, 1709, (r) 1992

HealthBovine growth hormone

Evaluation of health risk, representations from United States, government position, 2111-12, (r) 2385

Link between IGF-a and breast cancer, government position, 1927, (r) 2081

Canada Health Act, plan to amend, government position, 1598

Centres of Excellence for Women's Health

Nature and funding, government position, 136, (r) 221

Outcome of site selection process, government position, 2100

Classification of tobacco as hazardous product, government position, 43-45

Questions (oral)—Cont'dHealth—Cont'd

- Closer control on tobacco products, government position, 1804, (r) 2079-80
- Control of sale of tobacco products, need for legislation, government position, 2350
- Controlled drugs and substances bill, required amendments, government position, 2118-19
- HIV infection in women, reported increase in rate, application of discretionary portion of departmental budget, government position, 1213, (r) 1343-44
- Implementation of experts' report on plain packaging of tobacco products, consultations by Minister, government position, 1715
- New legislation to curtail tobacco consumption, government position, 2233
- Reorganization of blood supply system
 - Government position, 1803, (r) 2078
 - Timing of final report of Krever Commission, government position, 2365
- Report on tobacco packaging, request for particulars, 1663
- Tobacco Demand Reduction Strategy, distribution of study on plain packaging, government position, 1521, (r) 1555
- Use of bovine growth hormone somatotropin, delay in investigation of human health risks, government position, 1840, (r) 2080
- Human resources
 - Discussions with provinces on manpower training, government position, 1574, (r) 2046
 - Review of social programs, 856
- Human Resources Development
 - British Columbia, imposition of waiting period for payments under Canada Assistance Plan, suspension of transfer payments, government position, 2417-18, (r) 2609-10
- Child care, federal offer of funding
 - Comments in media, government position, 2503
 - Discussions with provincial finance ministers, government position, 2503
 - Fiscal inequality among provinces, 2502
 - Lack of consultation with provinces, government position, 2503
 - Provincial cuts to programs, government position, 2501-02
 - Restrictions on categories of providers, government position, 2504
- Inclusion of representatives of East Coast fishermen on social security task force, 46
- Installation of telephone communications network, 422, (r) 850
- National literacy secretariat, importance of program continuity and volunteer participation, government position, 1214-15
- Professional training, domain of provinces, government position, 45-46, (r) 220
- Proposed source of funding for creation of child care spaces, government position, 2119
- Recommendation of committee report concerning literacy, government position, 1211
- Reform of unemployment insurance system, guaranteed annual income as part of package, government position, 2349
- Reported illiteracy rate in Canada, government position, 1183-85
- Request for financial aid for fisheries organizations, 47
- Social Policy White Paper, government position, 96, (r) 286-87
- Unemployment insurance reform
 - Correspondence between federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, 2419
 - Correspondence between federal and Nova Scotia governments, request for tabling of documentation, 2420
 - Division of responsibility for job training, government position, 2404

Questions (oral)—Cont'dHuman Resources Development—Cont'd

- Meeting between representatives of federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, 2403
- Program for study of legislation, government position, 2506-07
- Relationship to redesign of overall social programs, government policy, 2420
- Violence against women, importance of literacy, government position, 1186
- Human rights
 - Arms trading with transgressor nations, government policy, 1376
 - Arrest of activist in China, government position, 1983, (r) 2155
 - Campaign promise of annual reports, government position, 2506
 - Commitment to intervention with transgressor countries, government position, 1684, (r) 2113
 - Compensation to Canadians for past injustices, 1167, (r) 1342
 - Conflicting statements by Foreign Affairs Minister, request for clarification, 1681-82
 - Discussions with Turkey on sale of aircraft, government position, 1376-77
 - Establishment of Canadian Race Relations Foundation, government position, 1804, (r) 2080
 - Establishment of Senate committee on affirmative action, request for response to statement, 2208
 - Further incarceration of Chinese dissident, government position, 2491, 2504-06
 - Hiring by Canadian International Development Agency of former Guatemalan General as consultant, government position, 1634, (r) 1685
 - Imposition of embargoes and sanctions against transgressor countries, government policy, 2366
 - Indonesia, upcoming visit by Prime Minister, discussions of abuses in East Timor, government position, 2506
 - Manufacture and use of land mines, government policy, 2319
 - Nigeria
 - Execution of Ogoni activists, possible restoration of democracy, government position, 2318-19
 - Possibility of imposing embargoes on transgressor countries, government position, 1682, (r) 2113
 - Promised amendments to act, government position, 1804
 - Ratification of Human Rights Convention of Organization of American States, government position, 2069-70
 - Delayed answer, 2091, (r) 2155
 - Relationship to aid and trade, government policy, 1716-17, (r) 2114
 - Relationship to trade, request for debate, 1693
 - Reports on record of various countries compiled by Foreign Affairs Department, government policy, 1377, (r) 1805
 - Request for answer, 1717
 - Request for debate on human rights and trade, government position, 914
 - Sale of arms to Thailand, government position, 1087, (r) 1190
 - Three Gorges Dam Project
 - Displacement of Chinese citizens, government position, 913-14, (r), 1088-89
 - Financial assistance, government position, 914
 - Vigilance towards situations developing in other countries, government position, 2505-06
 - Visit of federal commissioner to China, remarks reported in media, government position, 2490
- Immigration
 - Appointment of impartial members to Immigration and Refugee Board, government position, 951-52
 - Capping of family reunification quotas, government position, 952
 - Deportation of member of alleged terrorist organization, declaration of Federal Court of Canada, 2250-51
 - Immigration and Refugee Board
 - Qualifications of new executive director, government position, 1359, (r) 1551

Questions (oral)—Cont'dImmigration—Cont'd

Review of policy and appointment process, government position, 1097-98

Reduction in numbers of immigrants, government position, 951

Reduction of business class component, government position, 46, 114-15

Income Tax Act, Federal Court of Appeal, decision to strike down child support provisions, government position, 453

Indian affairs

Cigarette smuggling on native reserves, 47

Clean-up of Canadian National train wreck debris on Birdtail Sioux Reserve, government position, 1452-53, (r) 1684

Contraband alcohol on reserves, 96-97

Legal action against Canadian National Railway, government position, 1453, (r) 1684

Status of negotiations on Oka, role of chief federal negotiator, 512-13

Industry, science and technology research, cuts to budget, timing for release of study, government policy, 2350-51, (r) 2609

Infrastructure program

Cutback in government spending, effect on employment, government position, 356-57, (r) 850

Effect on construction industry, government position, 2234

Financing for Kanata Palladium, government position, 335

Financing of professional sports infrastructure, government position, 335, (r) 849

Formula resolved among levels of government, 399

Government spending, effect on employment, renovations to athletic facilities in Edmonton and Calgary, 359, (r) 850

Source of funds for job creation, government position, 400-01

Intergovernmental affairs

Consultations with provinces on matters concerning fiscal transfers, 1598-99

Possibility of agreement on professional development, 985

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, policy on administration of inter-parliamentary activities, equality between Houses of Parliament, 1134-36

International relations, human rights, government policy, 606, (r) 834

International trade

Agreement on participation of provinces, government position, 1574

Dispute with European Union on newsprint, government position, 1776, (r) 2076

Pearson Airport Agreements

Meeting of minister with British counterpart, request for particulars, 1586, (r) 1779

Meeting of minister with British counterpart at G-7 summit in Halifax, government position, 1762

Relations with European Union, impact on local industries, government position, 1600, (r) 2071-72

Reprieve from planned embargo on Canadian furs, possibility of banning leg-hold traps, government position, 2365

Sale in Russia of United States pharmaceuticals, Canadian representations, government position, 216-17

Status and acceptance of NAFTA, government position, 110-11

Justice

Appointment of sister of Minister of Transport to Court of Queen's Bench of New Brunswick, government position, 1301

Authority for statement on political non-involvement in police investigations, government position, 2465-66

Criminal Code, proposed revisions to accommodate cultural differences, 914-15

Firearms legislation, efficacy of research of Minister, government position, 2272

Firearms registration bill, availability of copies to senators, government position, 1215

Gun control legislation

Questions (oral)—Cont'dJustice—Cont'd

Avowal by the provinces not to finance registration, government position, 1662, (r) 1988

Comments of Prime Minister on provincial responsibility, request for clarification, 1662-63, (r) 1989-90

Consultation with provinces prior to introduction of legislation, government position, 1662, (r) 1988-89

Financial self-sufficiency of registration program, government position, 1662, (r) 1989

Impact of gun control legislation on rural society, government position, 1358-59

Minister's view of efficacy of jailing non-violent young offenders, application of same principle to transgressors against firearms legislation, government position, 2271-72

Parole supervision of high risk offenders, government position, 985, (r) 1188-89

Political non-involvement in police investigations, statement of minister to media, government position, 2465

Re-establishment of Law Reform Commission, legislative agenda, 2507-08

Sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada

Alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government

Approach to Swiss government for information, authority for procedure followed, government position, 2487-88

Approval for letter to Swiss authorities, government position, 2247-48

Departmental letter to Swiss authorities

Minister's involvement, 2348-49

Source of leak to media, 2318

Equality of citizens before the law, request for confirmation, 2250

Knowledge of government ministers, request for particulars, 2466

Knowledge of Minister, government position, 2267-67

Libel action by former Prime Minister, source of funding for government counsel, 2466

Motivation for RCMP investigation, government position, 2248-49

Motivation of minister in instituting inquiries, 2489

Numbers of RCMP investigations publicized, request for particulars, 2250, (r) 2420-21

RCMP investigative procedures, request for particulars, 2249-50

Rank of RCMP officers engaged in investigation, 2349-50, (r) 2558

Request for apology to Government of Switzerland, 2266

Request for tabling of letter to Swiss authorities, 2250

Request for answer, 2317-18

Stage of treaty with Switzerland at time of request, government position, 2488-89, (r) 2610

Legal and Constitutional Affairs, schedule of work of the committee, position of chairman, 2364-65

Literacy

Authenticity of kits released, government position, 1891-92

Future measures to be instituted, government position, 2439-40

Making Scenes Between the Lines pamphlet, targeted adult market, government position, 1894-95

OECD international survey, link between adult literacy and employment, government position, 2438

OECD international survey, possibility of federal-provincial conference, government position, 2443

Request for kits for senators, 1895

Visibility of literacy secretariat, government position, 2439

Manitoba, federal environmental assessment of forestry projects, government position, 2405

Metropolitan Toronto

National Forum on Health, lack of representation of region, government position, 903

Proposals for Social Reform, lack of representation on working group, government position, 902-03, (r) 1228-29

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Ministry, lack of focus of Cabinet ministers, 666
- National defence
 - Canadian Airborne Regiment
 - Inquiry into conduct, possibility of reinstatement, 1253-54
 - Reasons for disbandment, 1356-57, (r) 1986-87
 - Closure of Le Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean, government position, 951
 - Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, 513-14, 602-03, 620-21, (r) 668, 669, 670-71
 - Related expenditures, request for information, 630
 - Request for answers, 629-30, 666
 - Request for information, 603
 - Compensation for cancelled EH-101 contracts
 - Government position, 1503, (r) 1554-55
 - Request for particulars, qu, 1713, (r) 2074
 - Consequences of cuts to transfer payments to provinces, government position, 1254-55
 - Disbandment of Canadian Airborne Regiment, difference of opinion between Minister and Chief of Defence Staff, government position, 2068
 - Disciplinary practices in Canadian Armed Forces, government position, 1185-86, (r) 1473
 - Disposition of Royal Military College at St-Jean, government position, 503-04, (r) 671-71
 - Effects of closure of St-Jean Military College, 136, (r) 308
 - Future of peacekeeping forces in former Yugoslavia, government position, 1586-87
 - Initiative of NATO concerning peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation by Canadian Armed Forces, government position, 1741
 - Inquiry into activities of Canadian Airborne Regiment, government position, 1185, 1357, (r) 1987
 - Length of tours of peacekeeping forces, request for information, 1375, (r) 1552
 - Maritime and aerial surveillance and control, enhancement of Arctic capabilities, government policy, 2366
 - Peacekeeping costs charged to departmental budget, government position, 1213, (r) 1342-43
 - Peacekeeping in Bosnia
 - Ability of troops to withdraw from Visoko if recalled, government position, 1839, 1840-41
 - Participation in UN rapid deployment force, government position, 1761
 - Possibility of increasing size of force, government position, 1742, (r) 2155
 - Request for parliamentary debate on increase in size of force, government position, 1743-44, (r) 2091-92
 - Status of Canadians held hostage, possible discussion of set-up of UN force at G-7 summit, government position, 1778-79
 - Status of troops detained in Visoko, government position, 1838-39
 - Peacekeeping in former Yugoslavia, withdrawal of troops, government policy, 1708
 - Peacekeeping operations in former Yugoslavia, demise of Canadian Airborne Regiment, 1374
 - Possibility of purchase of nuclear-powered vessels, government position, 1341
 - Proportion of non-military items in departmental budget, government position, 995, (r) 1240
 - Request for answer, 1213
 - Proposed cut-backs to defence expenditures, government position, 114
 - Purchase of Upholder Class submarines, cost to government, 1340, (r) 1551
 - Reduction of Canadian forces capability, government position, 359-60, (r) 435-36
 - Restructuring of Canadian Armed Forces reserve
 - Government response, 1519
 - Request for answer, 1502

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- National defence—Cont'd
 - Request for terms of reference of commission, 1374
 - Royal Military College at St-Jean, decrease in recruitment, government position, 1357-58
 - St-Jean Military College, effects of proposed closure on maritime students, 216, (r) 309
 - Search and Rescue Helicopter Replacement Program
 - Nature of reduction in capability, request for particulars, 2231-32
 - Proportion of Canadian content in contract bids, request for particulars, 2232, (r) 2558
 - Rationale for choice, 2231
 - Request for tabling of statement of requirements and report on search and rescue capability requirements, 2363-64
 - Statement of requirements, request for answer, 2463, (r) 2559
 - Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets
 - Government position, qu, 1098, (r) 1191
 - Training of First Mechanical Brigade for NATO exercises, government position, 1741-42
 - See also* Defence
- National election
 - Red Book commitment to appoint ethics commissioner, government position, 283
- National finance
 - Amount of deficit, government position, 302-03, 323-24
 - Amount of deficit for 1993-94, government position, 552
 - Bank of Canada
 - Pay increases to officials, 1984
 - Salary increases for officials, government position, 1959-60
 - Bank of Canada rate, effect on interest rates, 252, (r) 423-24
 - Control of debt and deficit, government position, 1925
 - Cutbacks in transfer payments to western provinces, government position, 401
 - Debt and deficit management, evaluation of International Monetary Fund, government position, 2464-65
 - Deficit reduction plan, government position, 514-15, 551-52
 - Downgrading of government's credit rating, government position, 239, (r) 324-25
 - Goods and Services Tax
 - Status of intergovernmental negotiations, government position, 2402
 - Timing of resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, 2402
 - Undertaking of Prime Minister on deadline on replacement, government position, 2403
 - Increase in bank rate
 - Deficit reduction plan, request for fiscal update, 689-91
 - Government position, 630, 666-67, 691-92
 - Interest rate, government policy, 310
 - International Monetary Fund, objectives and methods of deficit reduction, government position, 2443
 - Job creation, government policy, 1925-26, (r) 2050
 - Meeting of federal and provincial ministers, discussion of possible national debt management plan, government position, 2463-64
 - Old age security, undertaking of Prime Minister during referendum, government position, 2403
 - Reduction in deficit announced by minister, ramifications for transfer payments to provinces, government position, 2440-41
 - Reduction in post-secondary education financing, 667, (r) 851
 - Report of Auditor General, long-term management of debt and deficit, government position, 2265
 - Report of Auditor General on national debt, government position, 2111
 - The deficit, budgetary and political risks, effect on foreign investment, government position, 322-23
- National Forum on Health
 - Confusion and delay within government, 515-16, (r) 850-51
 - Request for information, 848

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- National Forum on Health—Cont'd
 - Request for particulars on expenses, budgets and contracts, 1453, (r) 1553-54
- National Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, nonrepresentation of New Brunswick, 605
 - Request for answer, 671
- National security
 - Proposal to strike special committee
 - Clarification of government position, 881-82
 - Government position, 875-87, 903-04, (r) 1042
 - Request for answer, 1132-33
- National unity
 - Constitutional amendments, request for tabling of documents prepared by New Brunswick officials, 2442
 - Indian Affairs, document on post-referendum policy purportedly prepared by official, government position, 2382
 - Presence of aboriginal peoples at Quebec Round, government position, 2382-83
 - Quebec referendum, possible reduction in elderly benefits, government position, 2232
 - Quebec situation following referendum, government policy, 2167
- Natural resources, new federal-provincial silviculture agreement, government position, 1802-03, (r) 2078
- New Brunswick
 - Share of patronage appointments, government position, 357
- North American Free Trade Agreement
 - Extension of agreement to include Chile, government position, 1708-09, (r) 2114
 - Inclusion of Chile, influence on existing agreement, government position, 1705-06, (r) 2114
- North Atlantic Treaty Organization, respect of human rights as condition of continuing membership, government position, 1692-93, (r) 1992
- Nova Scotia
 - Effect of budget on Cornwallis Peacekeeping Training Centre, government position, 133-34
 - Industrial marine products, relocation of plant from North Sydney to Amherst, possible delays in implementation of decision, government position, 2349
 - Necessity of peacekeeping training, government position, 113
 - Proposed peacekeeping training centre, government position, 620, (r) 986
 - Status of peacekeeping training centre at CFB Cornwallis, government position, 112-13
- Official languages
 - Access of francophones to Internet network, 1651-52
 - Report of commissioner
 - Quality of debate, government position, 334-35
 - Recommendation to discontinue bilingual bonus, government position, 304-05
- Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, appointment of Donald Johnston as Secretary-General, length of term, government position, 996, (r) 1089
- Parks Canada
 - User fees, government position, 875, 934, (r) 974-75, (r) 1168-69
- Parliament
 - Program of legislation, government policy, 282-83
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee, request for particulars of expenditures on consultants, 2504
- Post-secondary education
 - Canada Scholarships Program, effect of cuts, possibility of replacement, government position, 1341, (r) 1588
 - Canada Student Loans Program, impact on federal funding, government position, 605, (r) 835
 - Effect of cuts to social transfer payments on university enrolment, 1683, (r) 1990-91
 - Effects of withdrawal of federal funding, government position, 333
 - Financing arrangements for student loans, government policy, 333, (r) 424

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Post-secondary education—Cont'd
 - Growth in revenue from EPF transfers tax points, possibility of transfer to institutions, 934-35, (r) 1377-78
 - Increases in university tuition fees in Newfoundland, government position, 1532, (r) 1589
 - Reinstatement or replacement of Canada Scholarships Fund, government position, 1683-84
- Precincts of Parliament
 - Authority to initiate project, 1132
 - Cancellation of East Block Tunnel project, request for information, 1549, (r) 1694
 - Central heating problems, request for remedy, 1168, (r) 1305
 - Condition of carpet in Senate Chamber, 1728-29
 - Consultation with Senate before undertaking further work, government position, 1167
 - Locking of East Block doors, government position, 1616
 - Proposed renovations, government position, 452-53, (r) 974
 - Proposed renovations to East and Centre Blocks, government position, 306-08, (r) 974
 - Request for definition, 1168, (r) 1304-05
 - Role of Speaker as chairmen of Internal Economy Committees of both Houses, 1168
 - Tunnel between East Block and Centre Block
 - Appropriateness of expenditure, government position, 1131
 - Request for information, 1166-67, (r) 1535
- Prince Edward Island
 - Fixed link, change in design of bridge, environmental assessment review process, government position, 185-86
- Public Works
 - Cancellation of building contract in Dorval, Quebec, substitution of rental agreement, request for particulars, 1586, (r) 1717-18
 - Cancellation of projects within parliamentary precincts, government position, 1215-16, (r) 1536
 - Consultation with Internal Economy Committee on cancellation of project, 1215, (r) 1536
 - Decision of Minister to build new federal building in Sault Ste. Marie, request for details of contract, 1186-87, (r) 1535-36
 - Details of costs involved in cancellation of project, 1215, (r) 1536
 - Diversion of funds from designated Nova Scotia Highway Project, abuse of privilege by minister, government position, 1709
 - Harbourfront, Toronto, closing due to funding cuts, government position, 1533-34
 - Reconstruction of East Block Tunnel, status of project, 1215, (r) 1536
 - Renovation of East Block, Senate input, government position, 187, (r) 972-74
 - Renovation of windows at Lester B. Pearson Building, cancellation of contract, government position, 1532, (r) 1694
- Quebec
 - Distinct society motion, legal opinion sought on interpretation of wording, government position, 2491
 - Distinct society resolution, comments by the chair of the Standing Committee on Canadian Heritage, government position, 2539-40
 - Impending election and referendum, action for national unity, government position, 111
 - Prime Minister's proposals, means of gaining necessary consent of provinces, government position, 2363
- Regional development
 - Application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, 1183, (r) 1377
- Revenue
 - Capital gains election, dissemination of information to public, request for studies on effectiveness of measure, 1237
 - Income tax, capital gains election, effect on seniors, 1237, (r) 1474-75

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Revenue Canada
 - Amount of export tax paid by tobacco manufacturers, net losses to federal treasury, government position, 1058, (r) 1190
 - Changes to excise tax on tobacco products, inequality of treatment of provinces, government position, 995-96, (r) 1169-70
- Rules of the Senate
 - Infringement of Rule 26, 188
- Saskatchewan, appointment of Lieutenant-Governor, nature of appointment, government position, 321-22
- Science, research and development, tax credits for research and development, 994, (r) 1169
- Senate
 - Absence of government leader, 1615
 - Absence of government leader from chamber, 2557
 - Amendments to Bill C-22, refusal by Minister to appear before Senate Committee, 1299-300
 - Distribution of Debates and Minutes to Members of the House of Commons, 550-51
 - House of Commons, changes to method of reporting committee proceedings, availability to senators of computer link, government position, 1651
 - Pearson International Airport, possibility of judicial inquiry, government position, 1300-31
 - Prince Edward Island, appointment of new senator, government position, 1453
 - Proposal for debate on foreign affairs and national defence, request for commitment, 552-53
 - Public statements by Minister of Transport regarding motives of certain senators, qu, 1283-84, 1285, 1286
 - Position of Leader of the Government, qu, 1298-99
 - Remarks by Minister of Transport, request for clarification, 873-74
 - Status of Senator Kinsella, 2091
 - Value of independent senators, government position, 2092
- Social affairs
 - Amount of funding available for child care strategy, government position, 1375-76, (r) 1553
 - Implementation of national child care strategy, government position, 1375, (r) 1552-53
 - Reform of child support systems, government position, 1357, (r) 1551-52
- Solicitor General
 - Efficacy of security arrangements at residence of Prime Minister
 - Government position, 2200
 - Request for results of investigation, 2270-71
 - Review of security arrangements at official residences, publication of results, government position, 2200
 - RCMP marketing contract with Disney Corporation, request for particulars, 1958-59, (r) 2082-83
- South Africa
 - Free and democratic elections, monitoring by Canadian delegation, 399-400
- Status of Women, request for breakdown of program spending for current and next fiscal years, 1376, (r) 1503
- Tourism
 - Effect of budget cuts, government position, 284-85
- Training Initiatives Program, amount of funds available from Human Resources Development, government position, 1633, (r) 1695
- Transport
 - Abandonment of holdings on Partridge Island, New Brunswick, government position, 1534, (r) 1617
 - Abolition of Atlantic Region Freight Assistance, possibility of notice to stakeholders, 1212, (r) 1473-74
 - Application of International Civil Aviation Organization Standards at smaller airports, government position, 1520, (r) 1685
 - Atlantic Region Freight Assistance Program, request for impact analysis, government position, 1057

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Transport—Cont'd
 - Request for answer, 1167
 - Automated navigational and weather systems, request for documentation, government position, 1165, (r) 2070-71
 - Automated Weather Observation Systems, Report of Senate Committee, request for response from minister, 2233-34
 - Condition of St. Lawrence Seaway, government policy, 97, (r) 166
 - Destaffing of lightstations in British Columbia
 - Environmental impact assessment, government position, 1040, (r) 1189
 - Request for judicial inquiry, government position, 1133-34, (r) 1191
 - Existence of any impediment to redevelopment of Pearson Airport, government position, 1303
 - Failure of minister to properly brief Prime Minister on reports respecting Pearson Airport Agreements, government position, 1488
- Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program
 - Canada-Nova Scotia Agreement, diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, government position, 1650, (r) 2046
 - Discussions between ministers on diversion of funds from Nova Scotia Highway Project, request for particulars, 1660, (r) 2046
 - Diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, possible interpretation by Auditor General of Canada, government position, 1650
 - Fulfilment of Red Book promises, government position, 1661-62
 - Introduction of toll booths on Trans-Canada Highway, 1661, (r) 2046
- Nova Scotia
 - Diversion of funds from designated project
 - Alternate methods of funding, government position, 1680, (r) 2047
 - Knowledge of transaction by Prime Minister, government position, 1679-80, (r) 2047
 - Diversion of funds to projects not covered by agreements, government position, 1680-81, (r) 2047
 - Freezing of funds to await outcome of inquiry of Auditor General, government position, 1708, (r) 2048
 - Request for answers, 1926
 - Restoration of funding to designated project
 - Request for answer, 1961
 - Request for update, 1690-91, 1926, (r) 1991-92, (r) 1993
 - Return of funds to designated project, government position, 1650-51
 - Return of funds to designated highway project, government position, 1662, (r) 1988
 - Policy on diversion of funds to undesignated projects, request for particulars, 1682-83, (r) 1990
 - Propriety of intervention by Minister of Public Works, government position, qu, 1660-61
 - Report of Auditor General on diversion of funds
 - Government position, 2266
 - Pertinent documents tabled, 2559
 - Request for tabling of pertinent documents, 2266
- Importance of passage of Bill C-22 to development of Pearson International Airport, government position, 1285
- Institution of public inquiry, government position, 1472
- Merger of Canadian Coast Guard with Department of Fisheries and Oceans, government position, 2112, (r) 2252
- Necessary repairs to Pearson International Airport, government position, 187-88, (r) 287
- Nova Scotia, funds for Wentworth Valley Highway Project, government position, 1548-49, (r) 1709-10
- Pearson Airport Agreements
 - Authorship of departmental report, request for clarification, 1469-70, (r) 1534
 - Definition of legislative solution, government position, 1471
 - Discrepancies in Nixon Report, government position, 1520

Questions (oral)—Cont'dPearson Airport Agreements—Cont'd

- Discussion held by members of Liberal election campaign committee, government position, 1491
- Evidence of Mr. Matthews before Senate committee, government position, 2100
- Extent of knowledge of Mr. Nixon at time of review, government position, 1488
- Function of Prime Minister at meeting with Matthews Group, 1530
- Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, request for clarification, 1472
- Instructions to Mr. Nixon on his mandate to review, government position, 1470, (r) 1537
- Legislative solution, request for particulars, 1489
- Legislative solution to dispute, government position, 1587-88
- Meeting of Prime Minister with Matthews Group, request for details, 1519
- Personal knowledge of Leader of Government on policy proposal, 1490-91
- Possible revision of report of Robert Nixon, government position, 1502
- Public inquiry, government position, 1530
- Redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, request for information, 1471, (r) 1537
- Refusal of minister to appear before Senate committee, government position, 1519
- Request for appearance of minister before Senate committee, 1521
- Request for copies of all material or information on which Mr. Nixon based his report, 1492
- Request for copy of stamped receipt notation on Mr. Nixon's report, 1502
- Request for judicial inquiry, government position, 1489
- Request for public inquiry, government position, 901-02
- Request for tabling of lawyers' time dockets relating to meeting with Matthews Group, 1501-02
- Transport Canada study, request for particulars, 1491, (r) 1538
- Verbal statements of Minister of Transport, request for written confirmation, 1470-71, (r) 1534-35
- Pearson International Airport
 - Cancellation of lease agreement, 1040-41, (r) 1169
 - Cancellation of leases preventing redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, 1490, (r) 1535
 - Comments of minister on delay in renovations on Terminals 1 and 2, government position, 1585-86
 - Delay in redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, 1301-02
 - Government position, 1451-52, (r) 1536-37
 - Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, 1057-58, (r) 1136
 - Request for answer, 1111
 - Importance of passage of Bill C-22 on development, knowledge of Robert Nixon, government position, 1451
 - Influence of government actions on attracting future business, 1451, (r) 1536
 - Motion to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, request for government response, 1529-30
 - Nominees to Canadian Airport Authority, government position, 912-13, (r) 1011-12
 - See appendix, p. 1023
 - Possible negotiation of lease, government position, 985-86, (r) 1012
 - Remaining impediments to redevelopment, 1132
 - Request for answers, 1531
 - Request for particulars on revenue from subleases, 1490
 - Transfer of administration to local airport authority, nature of legal impediment, 1500-51
- Pearson International Airport redevelopment, alleged involvement of Prime Minister, 1450-51
 - Request for further answer, 1165-66

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Pensions of Route Canada employees, delay in resolution of dispute, status of negotiations
 - Government position, 1727-28
 - Government response, 2090-91
- Privatization of Canadian National, reopening of negotiations with Canadian Pacific, government position, 1255, (r) 1344
- Proposed sale of Halifax shipyards, government position, 114, (r) 221
- Proposed study of Atlantic Canada freight rates, government position, 553-54, (r) 834
- Question of privilege, 1492
- Radio Canada International, invitation to Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Trade to respond to Senate committee report, 1227
- Railways work stoppage
 - Longer term arrangements for dispute settlements, government position, 1374
 - Status of negotiations at Canadian Pacific Rail and VIA Rail, 1359-60
- Relationship of Canadian Airport Authority to development of Pearson International Airport, 913
- Reliability of Labrador helicopters on search and rescue missions, government position, 604, (r) 836
- Removal of emergency response capability from smaller airports
 - Difference in standards of safety, government position, 1531-32
 - Government position, 1520, (r) 1685
- Repairs to Ports of Halifax and Saint John, government position, 97
- Search and rescue helicopter replacement program
 - Purchase of units without tender, government position, 2400, (r) 2558
 - Status of EH-101 contract
 - Government position, 2320, (r) 2609
 - Nature of milestone payments, 2349, (r) 2609
 - Suitability and safety of replacement units, government position, 2401, (r) 2558
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets
 - Effect of replacements on viability of Canadian Forces Base Shearwater, performance standards for replacements, 1340, (r) 2071
 - Status of EH-101 contract, government position, 2118
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet
 - Documents tabled, 603-04
 - Government position, 422, (r) 556, 453-54, (r) 585-86, 604, (r) 836
 - Request for answer, 882
- Strengthening national highway standards for truck safety, government position, 1520-21, (r) 1745
- Timing of vote on motion to strike Special Committee, request for response, 1530-31
- Trans-Canada Highway
 - Federal-provincial agreements currently in force, request for particulars, 1680, (r) 1990
 - Proposed toll booths in Nova Scotia, government position, 1839, 1993
 - Underutilized infrastructure at Canadian ports, need for proposed new berthage and cargo sheds in Minister's riding, 1472, (r) 1554
- Transport and Communications
 - Directions to Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission on direct-to-home satellite distribution, comments of Minister of Canadian Heritage, government position, 1692
 - Marine safety, study on mandate and staffing of lightstations, question for chairman, 954-55
- Treasury Board, possible amendments to Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, government position, 1041

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- United Nations
 - Human rights in China, defeat of resolution, request for copy of text, 2211
 - Nuclear non-proliferation treaty, vote on reaffirmation, government position, 1599, (r) 1636-37
 - Peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation in rapid reaction force, government position, 1802
 - Possible changes to application of veto, government policy, 1802, (r) 2049
 - Resolution to halt nuclear testing
 - Government objection to wording in text, request for particulars, 2234
 - Request for copy of offending text, 2209
 - Withdrawal of co-sponsorship, government position, 2208-09
- Veterans affairs
 - Aboriginal veterans, request for action on report of Standing Senate Committee, government position, 1728
 - Veterans Independence Program, qualification of veterans, 222
- Veterans Appeal Board, Order in Council appointment, government position, 554
- Western Economic Diversification Canada, report of Auditor General, mandate of agency, government policy, 2268-69
- Western grain transportation, Crow Rate, direct payment to farmers, government position, 935, (r) 1188
- Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, 1762-63
- Youth
 - Employment and training, student summer employment program, 355, (r) 504-05
 - Employment programs, government position, 504, (r) 765
 - Funding of training initiatives, government position, 356
 - Katimavik, reestablishment of program, 357-58

Questions on Order Paper, answers tabled

- Agriculture Canada, federal expenditures on research, 1192
- Agriculture Food Canada, 2083
- Appointees to Immigration and Refugee Board, 1305
- Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, report of Professor Savoie, 852
- Canada Assistance Plan and established programs financing, levels of entitlement and further details, 1843
- Canada-Newfoundland Cooperation Agreement for Forestry Development, 188
- Canada 125, breakdown of distribution of medals, 852
- Canada Pension Commission, exceptional incapacity allowance, 202
- Canada Post Corporation, 2177
- Canada Post Corporation, review by Price Waterhouse of contracts in Sydney, Nova Scotia, request for particulars, 2493
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
 - Annual report 1993/94, production costs, 1070
 - National Film Board, Telefilm Canada, commissioning of production of war films, 1191
- Canadian forces reserves, unemployment insurance amendments, 360
- Canadian heritage, responsibilities in relation to Canadian veterans and war memorials, 1206
- Canadian Race Relations Foundation, particulars on establishment, 1695
- Citizenship and Immigration Canada, 2083
- Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, protection and management of straddling stocks, 852
- Composition of Advisory Board of Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 852
- Composition of National Defence Minister's Advisory Group on Defence Infrastructure, 1555
- Contamination of National Parks and Historic Sites, 188
- Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, 1601
- Employment, 2385
- Estimates, 1994-95, reduction in services to veterans, 517

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Ethics Counsellor, details of terms of reference, 852
- Facilities at Banff National Park, 1555
- Facilities at Prince Albert National Park, 1555
- Facilities for employees at Jasper National Park, 1555
- Facing the Challenge of Change: A Study of the Atlantic Economy, details of costs and authors of study, 1206
- Fisheries, species and configuration of fish exported to Japan, 1206
- Fisheries and oceans, 1993 Canadian fish exports, 239
- Government funding of Canadian Jewish Congress Archives, 1475
- Health Canada, savings in 1995 Budget Plan, 1710
- Human Resources Development
 - Details of budgetary savings under 1995 budgetary plan, 1637
 - Inclusion of regional representation on Advisory Group on Working Time and Distribution of Work, 402
- Human rights, termination of discussions with multicultural organizations on redress for past injustices, 1695
- Indian Affairs and Northern Development, savings in 1995 budget plan, 1652
- Industry Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, 1637
- Industry, Trade and Commerce, Hibernia drilling modules, 310
- Korean and Second World War, information from Soviet Archives on disposition of armed forces personnel missing in action, 996
- Marine Atlantic, M.V. Bluenose ferry service, 2083
- Merchant navy veterans
 - Canadian volunteer service medal, 202
 - Status of benefit claims, 505
- Ministry of Canadian Heritage, funding levels for national sports organization, 1170
- National Community Tree Foundation Program, 336
- National Crime Prevention Council, details of operation and composition, 1229
- National Defence
 - Annual maintenance costs for Sea King helicopter fleet, 1112
 - Consultative Committee on Social Change, 138
 - Costs of cancelling helicopter program, 852
 - Details concerning status of airbus, 1637
 - Membership of Honours Policy Committee, 1652
 - Present structure and facilities of Canadian Forces training system, 852
 - Testing of LSVW vehicles, 852
- National Film Board, audit of president's expenses, 1229
- Newfoundland
 - Canadian Forces Reserves, 310
 - Effects of federal infrastructure program, 239
- 1995 Budget Plan
 - Particulars on savings for Fisheries and Oceans, 1695
 - Particulars on savings respecting Department of Canadian Heritage, 1695
- Office of Prime Minister, status of car transportation, 310
- Order-in-Council appointments to government boards and tribunals, 852
- Order of Canada, status of Advisory Council, 310
- Parks Canada
 - Location and composition of meetings, 1191
 - Meetings held by officials in Wolfville and Digby, Nova Scotia, 1652
- Prince Edward Island
 - Transfer of Northumberland Strait Bridge office to Charlottetown, 851-52
 - Upgrading of Charlottetown Harbour facilities, 852
- Request for answers, 1601
- Revenue Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, 1601
- Scotia Synfuels Project, grandfathering of investment tax credit, 996

Questions (oral)—Cont'd

- Second World War, information from Soviet archives on Canadian armed forces personnel missing in action at Torgau, 1112
- Solicitor General, cumulative total of firearms recovered by RCMP, 1206
- Solicitor General of Canada, 2083
- Superintendent of Bankruptcy, responsibilities regarding NSC Diesel Power Inc., 1601
- The Budget Plan, program funding, 1170
- The Valour and the Horror, amount and terms of loans to producers, 1206
- Transport, Strategic Highway Improvement Program, application of tolls on Canadian highways, 1695
- Transport Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, 1601
- Unveiling of Canadian War Memorial at Green Park, London, England, guest list, 1070
- Use of Government aircraft, 2177
- Veterans affairs
 - Breakdown of pensionable disabilities, 852
 - Dental care for veterans, 310
 - Entitlement under War Veterans Allowance, 852
 - Disability pension applications to Canadian Pension Commission, 852
 - Financial support to veterans associations, 852
 - Particulars of Canadian Forces personnel deployed in South East Asia, 852
 - Particulars of staffing, 852
 - Recipients of disability pensions, 852
 - Recommendations to Task Force on Program Review, 765
 - Responsibility for administering the Pension Act, 852
 - Shaughnessy Hospital, British Columbia, 310
 - Status of Canada training regulations, 852
 - Status of pertinent legislation, 517
 - War medals and awards, 310
- Veterans Affairs Canada
 - Breakdown of deployment of staff, 239
 - Vacancies in Corner Brook District Office, 203
- Veterans Independence Program
 - Eligibility of veterans residing abroad, 1206
 - Qualification of veterans, 202
- Veterans Land Administration, status of activities under Veterans Lands Act, 852
- Veterans' pensions and entitlements, 672
- World War II, European theatre of operations, list of prisoners of war returned or repatriated to Canada, 1229

Rabin, the late Yitzhak

- Tributes to former Prime Minister of Israel, 2194-99

Railway Safety amendment bill C-21. 1r, 421; 2r, 438-39, 457; ref to Committee of the Whole, 457; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Earl A. Hastings in the Chair, 475-76; rep without amdt, 476; 3r, 476; r.a., chap. 15, 1994, 478

- Barriers to access, 457
- Enforcement, 438
- Fencing, 438
- Native people, 438, 457
- Penalty, 438
- Prospectors, 438, 457
- Rights-of-way, 457
- Safety, 438
- Trespassing, 438, 457

Speakers: Senators

- Bonnell, M. Lorne, 438-39
- Johnson, Janis, 457

Railway strike

- See Transport, measure to terminate

Railways bill S-1 (pro forma). 1r, 5Reform Party, bid to become Official Opposition in House of Commons, st, 2315-16Regional development

- Application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, qu, 1183, (r) 1377

Relationship between Parliament and the Courts, inquiry, 985, 1065-69

- Appointment of judges, 1066
- Attendance of members, 1068
- Control over internal processes, 1067, 1068
- Coordinate constitutional institutions, 1067
- Hansard, 1067, 1068
- Judicial independence, 1066, 1067
- Parliamentary privilege, 1067

Speaker: Senator

- Cools, Anne C., 1065-69

Remembrance Day, st, 896, 909, 2227-28Revenue

- Capital gains election, dissemination of information to public, request for studies on effectiveness of measure, qu, 1237
- Income tax, capital gains election, effect on seniors, qu, 1237, (r) 1474-75

Revenue Canada

- Amount of export tax paid by tobacco manufacturers, net losses to federal treasury, government position, qu, 1058, (r) 1190
- Changes to excise tax on tobacco products, inequality of treatment of provinces, government position, qu, 995-96, (r) 1169-70
- Details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1601

Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, response of government to report of Special Joint Committee, inquiry, 1211, 1258-61, 1464-66

- Arts and culture, 1260
- Children's issues, 1464-66
- Human rights, 1260
- International Assistance Envelope, 1260

Speakers: Senators

- Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1464
- Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1258-61
- Kinsella, Noël A., 1260, 1261
- Pearson, Landon, 1464-66

Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee

- Authority to extend date of presentation of final report, 871, 887
- Government response to recommendations of committee tabled, 1179

Message from Commons, 214

Motion to appoint, 215, 252-56, 268-72

Speakers: Senators

- Fairbairn, Joyce, 253-56
- Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 269
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 255
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 268-72
- Marshall, Jack, 255
- Molgat, Gildas L., 215, 252-53, 255
- Stewart, John B., 255

- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee—Cont'd
- Motion to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee Report, 1211, 1233-34, 1244-45; m in amdt, 1245-47; Speaker's ruling, 1312-13; m in amdt, 1313-14; adopted, 1314; m, as amended, adopted, 1314
- Speakers: Senators
 Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1246, 1247
 Di Nino, Consiglio, 1245-46, 1247
 Doyle, Richard J., 1246
 Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1313
 Hastings, Earl A., 1245
 Lynch-Staunton, John, 1244-45, 1247
 MacEachen, Allan J., 1233-34, 1245, 1246, 1247, 1314
 Stewart, John B., 1246, 1247, 1314
- Report tabled, 916, 944-47
 Bipolar world order, 945
 International security, 946
 Sustainable development, 945
 Trade interests, 945
- Speaker: Senator
 MacEachen, Allan J., 944-47
- Ruling by Speaker of House of Commons, point of order, 1014-18; Speaker's ruling, 1192-94
- Riel, Hon. Maurice
 Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, tributes on occasion of resignation, 742
 Camus, Albert, accepted pronunciation of family name, st, 651, 652-53, 853-55
 Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 417-18
- Ritchie, Rob P., President and Chief Executive Officer, CP
 Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1416-17, 1418, 1419-20, 1421
- Ritchie, the late Charles Stewart Almon, tributes, 1725, 1738-39
- Rivest, Hon. Jean-Claude
 Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 139-42, 143
 Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1765-67
 Canadian federalism, 1766, 1767
 Health care services, 1766
 Quebec, 1767
 Business of the Senate, on presentation of petitions, 689
 Canadian Heritage, government documents published unilingually, infraction of policy on official languages, government position, qu, 1892-93
 Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 416
 Constitution, government efforts to keep Quebec within Confederation, qu, 113
 Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2565-67
 Controlled Drugs and Substances bill C-7, 2218-19
 Chemical compounds, 2218
 Police infiltration, 2218
 Volunteer drug prevention and drug victim support organizations, 2218, 2219
 Federal-provincial relations, effect of federal policy on pharmaceutical industry in Quebec, qu, 398
 Human resources development, professional training, domain of provinces, government position, qu, 45, 46, (r) 220
 Intergovernmental affairs, consultations with provinces on matters concerning fiscal transfers, qu, 1598-99
 Jalbert, the late René, tributes, 2554
 Justice, gun control legislation, avowal by the provinces not to finance registration, government position, qu, 1662, (r) 1988
- Rivest, Hon. Jean-Claude
 National defence
 Closure of Le Collège Militaire Royal de St-Jean, government position, qu, 951
 Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, qu, 513, 621, (r) 668, 670-71
 Related expenditures, request for information, qu, 630
 Request for information, qu, 603
- National unity
 Aftermath of Quebec referendum, necessity of reviewing Pepin-Robarts report, st, 2228
 Quebec referendum, relevance of CBC programming for francophones outside Quebec, st, 2435
 Quebec situation following referendum, government policy, qu, 2167
- Official Languages, Standing Joint Committee
 Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 354
 Authority to meet during sittings and adjournments of the Senate, 421
 Quebec, distinct society motion, legal opinion sought on interpretation of wording, government position, qu, 2491
 West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1327
 Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, st, 1613, qu, 1762-63
- Rizzuto, Hon. Pietro
 Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 417
- Roberge, Hon. Fernand
 Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, tributes on occasion of resignation, 740
 Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 537-40
 Atlantic Canada, 538
 Debt, 539
 Helicopters, 539
 Military bases, 539
 National debt management program, 539
 Small business, 538
 Tax increase, 538
 Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1362-64
 Deficit, 1362, 1363
 Infrastructure program, 1363
 GST, 1363
 Transfers to provinces, 1363
 Unemployment, 1363
 Employment, fluctuations in job creation statistics, situation in Quebec, government position, qu, 2401, 2402
- Federal-Provincial relations
 Agreement on internal trade, nature and timeliness of amendments to bill, government position, qu, 2210
 Effect of enforcement provisions of agreement on internal trade implementation bill on interprovincial trade, government position, qu, 1715, (r) 1992-93
 Jalbert, the late René, tributes, 2554
 Prud'homme, Hon. Marcel, felicitations on the occasion of his thirtieth anniversary in Parliament, st, 91
 Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, st, 1613
- Robertson, Hon. Brenda M.
 Agriculture, potato blight in New Brunswick, compensation for damages sustained by growers, government position, qu, 1213, (r) 1303-04
 Agriculture and Forestry Committee report
 4th, Interim, Future of agriculture in Canada, 1146
 Atlantic Canada freight rate subsidy, 1146
 Subsidies, 1146
 Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency
 Atlantic Canada regional venture capital fund, equity financing needs of small business, government position, qu, 1110
 Substitution of loans for subsidies, application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, qu, 1110, (r) 1191

Robertson, Hon. Brenda M.—Cont'd

- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 371-73
 - Atlantic Canada, 371, 372, 373
 - Atlantic Canada Opportunity Agency, 372
 - Defence bases, closure, 371
 - Unemployment, 371
 - Unemployment insurance, 372
- Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1809, 1810
- Canada Assistance Plan
 - Removal of programs from block funding to provinces, government position, qu, 1805
- Canada Student Financial Assistance bill C-28, 712
 - Implementation date, 712
- Canada-United States relations, proposed imposition of U.S. border-crossing tax, government position, qu, 1183
- CN Commercialization bill C-89, 1930-31
 - Atlantic Canada, 1930-31
- Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, tributes on retirement, 415-16
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994, constituencies, provinces, and municipalities, process of consultation, government position, qu, 358
- Fisheries
 - Aid for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, request for statistics, qu, 1716
 - Collapse of Atlantic fishery, longer-term provision for laid-off workers under the Atlantic Groundfish Strategy, government position, qu, 1715-16, (r) 1928-29
 - Support for vessels during moratorium, qu, 334, (r), 424
- Fisheries and oceans
 - Establishment of Industry Renewal Boards, government position on buy-back of quotas and licences, qu, 305-06, (r) 424
- Gun control legislation, presentation of petitions, 2090, 2247
- Health, HIV infection in women, reported increase in rate, application of discretionary portion of departmental budget, government position, qu, 1213, (r) 1343-44
- Human Resources Development
 - Proposed source of funding for creation of child care spaces, government position, qu, 2119
 - Unemployment insurance reform, relationship to redesign of overall social programs, government policy, qu, 2420
- Natural resources, new federal-provincial silviculture agreement, government position, qu, 1802, (r) 2078
- Ontario Court General Division, m to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, 1199, point of order, 1626-27
- Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders Committee
 - Authority to act jointly with House of Commons Procedure and House Affairs Committee on examination of operation of joint committees, adopted, 1678
 - Point of order, 1779-81, 1782
 - Authority to study and report upon decision of the House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, 1723
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 202
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, recommending deletion of Rule 26 from Rules of the Senate, 932, adopted, 1010
 - 3rd, amending Rule 17(1), recall of Senate, 1615, adopted, 1540
 - 4th, printing separate Order Paper, changing title of Minutes to Journals, amending Rules 29(2), (5), 86(4), 105(5) and 128, printing new Rules of the Senate and requesting Library of Parliament to prepare new index to Rules, 1957, adopted, 2095
- Regional development, application of similar rules in all provinces, government position, qu, 1183, (r) 1377

Robertson, Hon. Brenda M.—Cont'd

- Selection Committee report
 - 5th, membership of Special Joint Committee on a Code of Conduct, 1997
- Solicitor General, RCMP marketing contract with Disney Corporation, request for particulars, qu, 1959
- Transport
 - Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, consultations in British Columbia, inquiry, 1156
 - Atlantic Region Freight Assistance Program, request for impact analysis, government position, qu, 1057
 - Request for answer, qu, 1167

Robichaud, P.C., Hon. Louis-J.

- Business of the Senate, 479
- Fournier, the late Hon. Edgar, tributes, 447-48
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 965
- Leblanc, the late Hon. Fernand E., tributes, 2553
- Quebec nationalism, inherent contradictions, inquiry, 612
- Sylvain, Hon. John, tributes on resignation from Senate, 2552

Robillard, Hon. Lucienne, Minister of Labour

- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1435, 1436, 1437-38, 1439, 1440, 1441-42, 1443, 1444
- West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1325, 1326, 1327, 1328, 1329, 1330, 1331, 1332, 1333

Rompkey, P.C., Hon. William H. (introduced in the Senate Oct. 3/95), 2058-60

- Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association
 - North Atlantic Assembly
 - Report of Canadian Delegation tabled, 2166
 - Report of Canadian Delegation to annual session tabled, 2264
 - Report of annual committee meeting in North America, tabled, 2068
 - Status of Women, anniversary of Privy Council decision, congratulations to winners of 1995 Persons Awards, st, 2117

Rossiter, Hon. Eileen

- Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties bill C-61, 2213-14
 - Appeals, 2213
 - Enforcement of penalties, 2213
- Canadian Dairy Commission amendment bill C-86, 1883
 - Levy system, 1883
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 461
 - Fisheries surveillance, 461
 - Helicopters, 461
 - Penalties, 461
 - 200-mile zone, 461
- Department of Agriculture amendment bill C-49, 905-06
 - Agri-food packaging and labelling, 905
 - Annual report, 906
 - Change in name, 905
 - Clarification of mandate, 905
 - Experimental farm stations, 905
 - New responsibilities, 905
- Fisheries
 - Atlantic Groundfish Program, change in benefits, government position, qu, 304, (r) 435
- Fisheries Committee
 - Authority to examine annual report of Department of Fisheries and Oceans, 379, adopted, 411
 - Authority to extend date for final report, 1679, adopted, 1701-02

Rossiter, Hon. Eileen—Cont'd
Fisheries Committee—Cont'd

Reports

- 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 109
- 2nd, annual report of Department of Fisheries and Oceans on the Atlantic groundfish fishery, tabled, 2415, adopted, 2632

Roux, Hon. Jean-Louis (introduced in the Senate Oct.4/94), 838

- Budget 1995, cuts to Canada Council and other arts organizations, st. 1280
- Canada Council, consultations on the future, inquiry, 1165, 1195-98, 1233
 - Arts and culture, 1195, 1196
 - Budget of Canada Council, 1198
 - Canada Council, 1196, 1197
 - Culture, 1196
 - Deficit, 1197
 - Private sector, 1197
 - Response to question, 1204
 - Self censorship, 1233
 - Spending cuts, 1198
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 1116-18
 - Cooperation, 1117
 - Cultural policy, 1117
 - Defence conversion, 1118
 - Military weapons, 1118
 - National Defence White Paper, 1118
 - Non-governmental organizations, 1117
 - Training, 1116
 - Voluntary community service, 1116
 - Weapons acquisition, 1117
- Felicitations on receiving honorary degree, st. 1674
- Firearms bill C-68, 1904-07, 1908, 1910
 - Domestic violence, 1906
 - Registration, 1906
 - Rights of aboriginal peoples, 1907, 1910
 - Subsistence hunters, 1907
- Gerussi, the late Bruno, tributes, 2397
- Gun control legislation
 - Presentation of petitions, 2133, 2177
- Hébert, Hon. Jacques, congratulations on award of Lewis Perinbam Prize, st. 1888
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amends, 2279-80
 - Aboriginal peoples, 2279
 - Registration, 2280
- Nigeria, execution of Ken Saro-Wiwa and nine other Ogoni activists, st. 2313
- Rabin, the late Yitzhak, tribute to former Prime Minister of Israel, 2198-99

Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick George, tributes, 683-85

- Royal Assent, 76, 298, 478, 664, 772-73, 837, 989, 1178-79, 1334, 1446, 1498, 1793-94, 1919, 2056-57, 2240, 2410-11, 2546-47, 2638
 - Cory, Hon. Peter deC., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 478, 664, 837, 2056-57, 2240
 - Gonthier, Hon. Charles, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 989, 1919
 - Hnatyshyn, Rt. Hon. Ramon John, His Excellency the Governor General of Canada, 1178
 - Lamer, Rt. Hon. Antonio, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, 1446, 2638
 - L'Heureux-Dubé, Hon. Claire, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 772-73

Royal Assent—Cont'd

- Major, Hon. John, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 76, 2410-11, 2546-47
- McLachlin, Hon. Beverley, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 298, 1334, 1498
- Sopinka, Hon. John, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 1793-94

Royal Canadian Mint amendment bill C-82, 1r, 1890; 2r, 1917-19, 1932-34; ref to com, 1934; rep without amdt, 1978; 3r, on div. 1993-95; r.a., chap. 26, 1995, 2056

- "Doubloon", 1917
- Expenses for businesses, 1918
- Savings, 1917
- Vending industry, 1918

Speakers: Senators

- Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1918
- Bryden, John G., 1918
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 1918, 1919, 1993
- Kenny, Colin, 1917-18
- Murray, Lowell, 1934
- Prud'homme, Marcel, 1918, 1919, 1932-34, 1993-95

Royal Canadian Mounted Police

- Centennial of association with the Yukon, st. 2242-43

Royal Military College

- See Budget
- National Defence

Rules of the Senate

- Infringement of Rule 26, qu, 188

Sahtu Dene and Métis Land Claim Settlement bill C-16, 1r, 649; 2r, 676; ref to com, 676; rep without amdt, 743; 3r, 743; r.a., chap. 27, 1994, 773

- Boards to regulate land and water use, 676
- Entrenchment in Constitution, 676
- Environmental Impact Review Board, 676
- Hunting and fishing rights, 676
- Ownership of land, 676
- Resource royalties, 676
- Surface Rights Board, 676

Speakers: Senators

- Adams, Willie, 676
- Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 676

St. Germain, Hon. Gerry

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 120-23
- Agriculture, grain handling capacity of Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert, inquiry, 411
- British Columbia, proposals on national unity issues, unfair treatment of province, st. 2396

Budget

- Action against high interest rates, government position, qu, 1086
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, justification of funding, government position, qu, 163
- Reaction of International Monetary Fund to government's proposal to reduce deficit, government response, qu, 953-54
- Review of goal for deficit reduction, government position, qu, 1085-86
- Canadian War Museum, termination of employment of veterans, st. 2554-55
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 463, 464, 465
- Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, 2579-80, 2581, 2617
- Criminal Code, bill to amend sentencing provisions, presentation of petition, 1958

St. Germain, Hon. Gerry—Cont'd

- Crow's Nest Pass, elimination of crow rate, government policy, qu. 622
- Defence
 - Protection of Arctic sovereignty, government position, qu. 1634
 - Reasons for acquisition of Upholder Class Submarines, government position, qu. 1633-34, (r) 2367
- Economy
 - Effect of taxation on standard of living, st. 109
 - Failure of infrastructure program to create jobs, government position, qu. 1714
 - Possibility of accelerated deficit reduction, government position, qu. 1226
 - Target for reduction of deficit, government position, qu. 1224-25
 - Unacceptable level of unemployment, government position, qu. 1713-14
- Electoral Boundaries Commission, suspension of operation under proposed legislation
 - Government position, qu. 251
 - Proposed use of closure, government position, qu. 283, 284
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, suspension of operation of act.
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, point of order, 1899
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994, British Columbia, concerns of constituents, st. 394
- Firearms bill C-68, 1823-24, 1907, 1909
 - Aboriginal peoples, 1823, 1907
 - New Zealand, 1823
- Firearms bill, presentation of petition, 1958
- Forestry, Clayoquot Sound
 - Grant by CIDA to protest group, qu. 873, (r) 987
 - Grant by CIDA to protest group against logging, qu. 882
 - Government position, request for answer, qu. 935
- Gun control legislation, presentation of petitions, 2100, 2153, 2317
- International trade, relations with European Union, impact on local industries, government position, qu. 1600, (r) 2071-72
- Justice
 - Authority for statement on political non-involvement in police investigations, government position, qu. 2466
 - Gun control legislation, comments of Prime Minister on provincial responsibility, request for clarification, qu. 1662, (r) 1989-90
 - Impact of gun control legislation on rural society, government position, qu. 1358-59
 - Political non-involvement in police investigations, statement of minister to media, st. 2461
 - Sale of Airbus Aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government
 - Knowledge of Minister, government position, qu. 2267
 - Motivation for RCMP investigation, government position, qu. 2248, 2249
 - Motivation of minister in instituting inquiries, qu. 2489
- Lawson, Hon. Edward M., twenty-fifth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2097
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 968-69
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee reports
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 497
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 807, 808, 812, 813, 814-15
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2256, 2262, 2283, 2287, 2300-01, 2309-12
 - Aboriginal peoples, 2256, 2262
 - Long guns, 2283
- Marine Transportation Security bill C-38, 921-23
 - Cruise vessels, 922
 - Foreign ships, 922
 - International Marine Organization, 922
 - Law of the Sea, 922

St. Germain, Hon. Gerry—Cont'd

- Marine Transportation Security bill C-38, 921-23
 - NAFTA, 922
 - Piracy and fraud, 922, 923
 - Ship identification number scheme, 922
 - Terrorism, 921-22
- Molgat, Hon. Gildas L., twentieth anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 2097
- National defence
 - Canadian Airborne Regiment, inquiry into conduct, possibility of reinstatement, qu. 1253-54
 - Disbandment of Canadian Airborne Regiment, difference of opinion between Minister and Chief of Defence Staff, government position, qu. 2068-69
 - Government treatment of military, st. 1248-49
 - Peacekeeping in Bosnia, ability of troops to withdraw from Visoko if recalled, government position, qu. 1840, 1841
- National finance
 - Bank of Canada, salary increases for officials, government position, qu. 1960
 - Control of debt and deficit, government position, qu. 1925
 - Cutbacks in transfer payments to western provinces, government position, qu. 401
 - Debt and deficit management, evaluation of International Monetary Fund, government position, qu. 2464
 - Deficit reduction plan, government position, qu. 514, 515, 551
 - Downgrading of government's credit rating, government position, qu. 239, (r) 324-25
 - Increase in bank rate, deficit reduction plan, request for fiscal update, qu. 689-90, 691
 - Job creation, government policy, qu. 1925, (r) 2050
 - Meeting of federal and provincial ministers, discussion of possible national debt management plan, government position, qu. 2463-64
- National Unity, result of Quebec Referendum, st. 2148
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee on, st. 2098-99
- Senate
 - Pearson International Airport, possibility of judicial inquiry, government position, qu. 1300
- Transport
 - Pearson Airport Agreements
 - Evidence of Mr. Matthews before Senate committee, government position, qu. 2100
 - Function of Prime Minister at meeting with Matthews Group, qu. 1530
 - Public inquiry, government position, qu. 1530
 - Request for appearance of minister before Senate committee, qu. 1521
 - Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet, government position, qu. 453-54, (r) 585-86, 604, (r) 836
 - Wenman, the late Robert Lloyd, tribute, 1795
 - Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, st. 1612
 - World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1073-74
- St-Jean-Baptiste Day
 - Felicitations to French Canadians, st. 742
 - Good wishes to French Canadians, 1916-17
- St-Jean Military College
 - See Budget
 - National Defence
- Saint John, New Brunswick
 - Bilingual nature of work force, st. 653-54
- St. Patrick's Day, felicitations, 222

Saskatchewan

- Appointment of Lieutenant-Governor, nature of appointment, government position, qu, 321-22
- Congratulations to Liberal Party on becoming official opposition, st, 1889

Schizophrenia, st, 1544-45Schneerson, the late Rabbi Menachem Mendel, tribute, 626Science, research and development, tax credits for research and development, qu, 994, (r) 1169Scotia Synfuels Project, grandfathering of investment tax credit, tabled, 996Scrutiny of Regulations, Standing Joint Committee

- Authority to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 202; m withdrawn, 317
- Membership, message from Commons, 48-49
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, 214, adopted, 243
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Illegal dispensations, tabled, 1038, 1148-50
 - Government response, 1149
 - Rules of joint committee, 1149, 1150
 - Speakers: Senators
 - Lewis, P. Derek, 1149, 1150
 - Lynch-Staunton, John, 1149-50
 - 3rd, Disallowance, tabled, 1631-32, 1695-96
 - Speaker: Senator
 - Lewis, P. Derek, 1695-96
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Senate membership
 - See Journals of the Senate

Second World War, information from Soviet archives on Canadian armed forces personnel missing in action at Torgau, tabled, 1112Second World War, participation of Canadian troops in Italian campaign, inquiry, 550, 782-83, 877

- Speaker: Senator
 - Corbin, Eymard G., 550

Secord, Tim, Legislative Director, United Transportation Union

- Transport, measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1406-09, 1410, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1414, 1415, 1416

Security and Intelligence, possibility of establishing Senate committee, inquiry, 1085, 1194-95, 1221, 1508-10, 1561-62

- Bristow affair, 1194
- Canadian Security Intelligence Service, 1508, 1509, 1562
- Communications Security Establishment, 1562
- Confidence, 1194
- Credibility, 1194
- External review mechanism, 1194
- Mandate, 1194, 1195
- Monitoring, 1194
- Parliamentary monitoring, 1194
- Restructuring of committees, 1194
- Right-wing terrorism, 1562

Security and Intelligence

- Security Intelligence Review Committee, 1194, 1195

Speakers: Senators

- Corbin, Eymard G., 1508-10
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 1195
- Kelly, William M., 1085, 1194-95, 1561-62

Selection Committee

- Appointment, 6; 15-16; m in amdt, adopted, 16-18; m, as amended, adopted, 18
- Authority to extend deadline for selection of members of Special Committee on Pearson Airport Agreements, 1632
- Reports
 - 1st, Speaker pro tem, 22
 - 2nd, membership of committees, 22-25
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 3rd, membership of Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, adopted, 103
 - 4th, membership of Pearson Airport Agreements Special Committee, adopted, 1676
 - 5th, membership of Code of Conduct Special Joint Committee, 1981-82, adopted, 1996-97

Senate

- Absence of Government Leader, 527, 934, 1615
- Amendments to Bill C-22, refusal by Minister to appear before Senate Committee, qu, 1299-300
- Annual Report
 - See Clerk of the Senate
- Bolduc, Maurice, felicitations on election as President of l'Association professionnelle des sténographes officiels du Québec, st, 1583
- Civic contributions of members past and present, st, 2130-31
- Condition of chamber, felicitations to staff, 7
- Criticism by members of the media, st, 2433-34
 - Correction, 2443-44
- Distribution of Debates and Minutes to Members of the House of Commons, qu, 550-51
- Editorial in Ottawa Citizen, st, 1795
- Expression of thanks, st, 626
- Felicitations to Mr. Charles Robert on his appointment as Reading Clerk, 2096
- House of Commons, changes to method of reporting committee proceedings, availability to senators of computer link, government position, qu, 1651
- Lauriault, Mr. Douglas, resignation as page, best wishes, 837
- On the nature of debate, st, 784
- Pearson International Airport, possibility of judicial inquiry, government position, qu, 1300-01
- Prince Edward Island, appointment of new senator, government position, qu, 1453
- Proposal for debate on foreign affairs and national defence, request for commitment, qu, 552-53
- Public statements by Minister of Transport regarding motives of certain senators, qu, 1283-84, 1285, 1286
 - Position of Leader of the Government, qu, 1298-99
- Public statements by Minister of Transport regarding motives of certain senators, st, 1280-81
- Recognition of the role of women during Royal Assent, 299
- Remarks by Minister of Transport, st, 855
 - Request for clarification, qu, 873-74
- Return to chamber of Deputy Leader of the Government, st, 742-43
- Role of the opposition, st, 598
- Statements of press concerning certain senators, st, 235
- Time limits for interventions under the rules, st, 1886-87
- Tribute to departing page, st, 392
- Tributes to pages and to staff, 2044-45
- Value of independent senators, government position, qu, 2092
- Wilson, Mr. Duane, page, on the occasion of his resignation, best wishes for future, st, 1527-28

Senate, absence of approval for various projects, inquiry, 994, 1051-53, 1127, 1350

Abbott Commission, 1051
East Block renovation, 1051, 1053
Powers of Internal Economy Committee, 1053
Senate's right to be informed, 1052
"The Long-Term Construction Project", 1051

Speakers: Senators

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1350
Di Nino, Consiglio, 1052, 1053
Doyle, Richard J., 1051-52, 1053
Murray, Lowell, 1053
Stewart, John B., 1053

Senate, impact of decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, inquiry, 1526, 1592-95, 1644-47, 1656

Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, 1593, 1644, 1645
Committees as part of parliamentary system, 1645, 1646, 1647
Constitution, 1592, 1645, 1646
Cost-sharing, 1592, 1593
Duplication of services, 1594
Committee clerks, 1595
Purchasing, 1595
Security, 1595
Transportation, 1595
Interpretation, 1593, 1594, 1646
Language rights, 1644
Official Languages Act, 1593, 1644, 1645, 1646
Participation in joint committees, 1645
Savings, 1593
Supreme Court of Canada, 1644, 1645
Translation, 1593, 1646

Speakers: Senators

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 1644-45, 1646, 1647
Corbin, Eymard G., 1594, 1595, 1645
Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1526, 1592-94, 1595, 1646-47
Stewart, John B., 1645

Senate fund for Gatineau fire victims, st, 1528

Senator, deceased

Desmarais, Hon. Jean Noël (July 26/95), 2060-63

Senators, new

Anderson, Hon. Doris M. (Oct. 3/95), 2058-60
Bacon, Hon. Lise (Oct. 4/94), 838
Bryden, Hon. John G. (Nov. 29/94), 991-92
Carstairs, Hon. Sharon (Oct. 4/94), 838
Gauthier, Hon. Jean-Robert (Nov. 29/94), 991-92
Hervieux-Payette, Hon. Céline (Mar. 28/95), 1447-48
Losier-Cool, Hon. Rose-Marie (Mar. 28/95), 1447-48
Maheu, Hon. Shirley (Feb. 1/96), 2550-51
Milne, Hon. Lorna (Oct. 3/95), 2058-60
Pearson, Hon. Landon (Oct. 25/94), 869-70
Poulin, Hon. Marie-P. (Oct. 3/95), 2058-60
Rompkey, Hon. William H. (Oct. 3/95), 2058-60
Roux, Hon. Jean-Louis (Oct. 4/94), 838

Senators, resignations

Beaulieu, Hon. Mario (June 22/94)
Everett, Hon. Douglas (Jan. 20/94)
Frith, Hon. Royce (Aug. 30/94)
LeBlanc, Hon. Roméo A. (Nov. 22/94)
Sylvain, Hon. John (Jan. 31/96)

Senators, retirements

Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange (May 14/94)
David, Hon. Paul (Dec. 25/94)

Senators, retirements—Cont'd

Lang, Hon. Daniel A. (June 13/94)
Macquarrie, Hon. Heath (Sept. 18/94)
Marshall, Hon. Jack (Nov. 26/94)
Muir, Hon. Robert (Nov. 10/94)
Neiman, Hon. Joan (Sept. 9/95)

Simard, Hon. Jean-Maurice

Atlantic Canada, tourism, source of employment, government policy, 510
Best wishes on recovery, 1283
Budget
Closure of Military College at St-Jean, related additional costs, qu, 623, (r) 670-71
Proposed closure of Royal Military College of St-Jean, qu, 398-99
Cancellation of decision, government position, qu, 305
Question of privilege, 227
Reversal of decision, government position, qu, 218, 219, 237-38
Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 260-61
Atlantic provinces, 260
Business of the Senate, 1963
Adjournment, 249-50
Cabinet, Liberal election promises on reduction in size, government position, qu, 1707
Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, cable service to French-speaking communities, st, 599
Communications, granting of public relations contract for G-7 Summit, request for estimated final cost, qu, 1928, (r) 2081-82
Request for answer, qu, 1959
Constitutional amendments bill C-110, 2542-43
Amending formula, 2542
Francophones of New Brunswick, 2542
Veto, 2543
Court Challenges Program, reinstatement, congratulations to the government, st, 870
Department of National Revenue amendment bill C-2, 384-85
Unionized employees, 384
Finance
Duplication of programs with provinces, government position, qu, 874
Fiscal program update, possibility of tax increases, government position, qu, 874
Goods and Services Tax
Application on reading materials and eye glasses, position of government leader, qu, 856-57
Forecast for elimination or replacement, government position, qu, 2441
Removal of tax on reading materials, government position, qu, 2442
Human Resources Development
Child care, federal offer of funding, comments in media, government position, qu, 2503
Unemployment insurance reform
Correspondence between federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, qu, 2419
Meeting between representatives of federal and New Brunswick governments, request for tabling of documentation, qu, 2403
Program for study of legislation, government position, qu, 2506, 2507
Human resources, review of social programs, qu, 856
Income Tax amendment bill C-70, 1880-81
Debt forgiveness, 1880
Foreclosure, 1880
Income Tax Amendments Revision bill C-15, 382-83
Infrastructure Program
Financing for Kanata Palladium, government position, qu, 335

Simard, Hon. Jean-Maurice—Cont'd

- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - 21st, Re-examination of Senate Estimates 1995-96, 1461-62, 1507
- International Assembly of French-Speaking Parliamentarians, Tenth session of Regional Assembly, tabled, 131
- Justice, Minister's view on efficacy of jailing non-violent young offenders, application of same principle to transgressors against firearms legislation, government position, qu, 2271
- Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances amendment bill C-85, 2013-15
- Ministry, lack of focus of Cabinet ministers, qu, 666
- National defence
 - Closure of Royal Military College at St-Jean, qu, 513-14, 602-03, (r) 669
 - Request for answers, 629-30, 666
 - Disposition of Royal Military College at St-Jean, government position, qu, 503-04, (r) 671-72
 - St-Jean Military College, effects of proposed closure, st, 212-13
- National finance
 - Bank of Canada
 - Pay increases to officials, qu, 1984
 - Salary increases for officials, government position, qu, 1959, 1960
 - Goods and Services Tax
 - Status of intergovernmental negotiations, government position, qu, 2402
 - Timing of resignation of Deputy Prime Minister, qu, 2402
 - Increase in bank rate, government position, qu, 630, 666-67, 691, 692
- National Finance Committee report
 - 6th, Interim, Estimates, 1994-95, 736-38
 - Collège militaire royal at St-Jean, 736-38
- National unity, constitutional amendments, request for tabling of documents prepared by New Brunswick officials, qu, 2442
- New Brunswick
 - Share of patronage appointments, government position, qu, 357
- Official languages, report of Commissioner, recommendation to discontinue bilingual bonus, government position, qu, 304-05
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 679
- Quebec, m to recognize as distinct society, 2535-36
- Youth, Katimavik, reestablishment of program qu, 357, 358

Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99, 1r, 2486; 2r, 2511-13; ref to com, 2513; rep without amdt, 2538; 3r, 2538-39; r.a., chap. 48, 1995, 2547

- Administration fees, 2512, 2513
- Approving loans, 2511
- Claim processing fee, 2513
- Discharge of securities, 2512
- Extent of responsibility, 2512
- Level of guarantees and program fees, 2513
- Loans for capital spending, 2511
- Maximum loan guarantee, 2513
- Minister's discretionary power, 2512
- Rate of coverage, 2511
- Regulations, 2512
- Security and personal guarantees, 2513
- Speakers: Senators
 - Hervieux-Payette, Céline, 2511-12
 - Oliver, Donald H., 2512-13

Social affairs

- Amount of funding available for child care strategy, government position, qu, 1375-76, (r) 1553
- Implementation of national child care strategy, government position, qu, 1375, (r) 1552-53
- Reform of child support system, government position, qu, 1357, (r) 1551-52

Social Affairs, Science and Technology, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority for Subcommittee on Veterans Affairs to meet during sitting of the Senate, 689
- Authority to examine future direction of Department of Veterans Affairs, 110, 176, 195, 350-51, 375
- Authority to examine Veterans Health Care Regulations, 42, withdrawn, 107-08
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 739, 1339, 1957, 2265
- Authority to refer report of the Special Commission on Restructuring of the Reserves, 2246; adopted, 2278
- Membership
 - See Journals of the Senate
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 91
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 2nd, Budget, sub-committee on veterans affairs, 547, adopted, 587
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 3rd, Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, without amdt, 686
 - 4th, Department of Labour amendment bill C-30, without amdt, 757
 - 5th, future development of the Department of Veterans Affairs, tabled, 897-900, 926-28
 - 6th, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-216, without amdt, 1338
 - 7th, Department of Canadian Heritage bill C-53, without amdt but with observation, 1529
 - 8th, Immigration, Citizenship, Customs amendment bill C-44, 1760
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 9th, Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67, without amdt, 1798
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 10th, Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, Children's Special Allowances, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-54, without amdt but with recommendations, 1981
 - 11th, Employment equity bill C-64, with amdts, 2316; ref back to com, 2385-86
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 12th, Employment equity bill C-64, without amdt, 2468-69
 - 13th, National Defence, Special Commission on Restructuring of the Reserves, 2499-500; adopted, 2543
 - See Journals of the Senate

Social Programs in Canada, inquiry, 2416, 2599-605

Speaker: Senator
Thériault, L. Norbert, 2599-605

Solicitor General

- Cumulative total of firearms recovered by RCMP, tabled, 1206
- Efficacy of security arrangements at residence of Prime Minister, st, 2199
 - Government position, qu, 2200
 - Request for results of investigation, qu, 2270-71
- Review of security arrangements at official residences, publication of results, government position, qu, 2200
- RCMP marketing contract with Disney Corporation, request for particulars, qu, 1958-59, (r) 2082-83

Solicitor General of Canada, tabled, 2083Sopinka, Hon. John, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

Royal Assent, 1793-94

South Africa

- Establishment of new parliamentary system, st, 1449
- Free and democratic elections, monitoring by Canadian delegation, qu, 399-400
- Readmittance into Commonwealth, st, 509-10
- See also United Nations

South Africa, first democratic elections, inquiry, 421, 566-70, 640, 793-97

Afrikaners, 795
Apartheid, 566, 568, 569
Bushman, 797
Canada-South Africa relations, 793
Child labour, 567
Future of South Africa, 569
Health system, 567
Illiteracy, 796
Murder rate, 795
Personal violence, 795, 796
Racism, 569
Soviet Union-backed wars, 795
Unemployment, 567
United Nations Observer Mission in South Africa, mandate, 567
Zulu nation, 796, 797

Speakers: Senators

Bosa, Peter, 640
Frith, Royce, 568
Oliver, Donald H., 421

Sparrow, Hon. Herbert O.

Business of the Senate
Adjournment, m stands, 2176
Report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on firearms legislation, votes on amendments, request for advice on procedure, qu, 2269, 2270
Justice, sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government, equality of citizens before the law, request for confirmation, qu, 2250
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdots, 2262, 2290, 2297-99, 2300, 2309
Guns as tools, 2297, 2298
Licensing, 2262
Registration of long-barrel guns, 2297
Suicide, 2300
Violence, 2300

Speaker of the Senate (Hon. Roméo LeBlanc, P.C.—resigned Nov. 22/94)

Business of the Senate, 844
Speaker's ruling, 932
Camus, Albert, accepted pronunciation of family name, 855
Clerk of the Senate
Accounts tabled, 22, 880
Appointment of Gordon Barnhart, Esq. as honorary officer of the Senate, 178
Appointment of Paul C. Bélisle, Esq., 178
Commission appointing Hon. Roméo LeBlanc to office of Speaker of the Senate, 1
See LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo
Library of Parliament, rep of Librarian for 1992-93 tabled, 420
Muir, Sen. Robert, best wishes on recovery, 844
National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee, message from Commons, 149
New senators, 838
Felicitations, 844
Official languages, annual report of commissioner tabled, 301
Point of order
Senators' Statements, 546, 547
Privacy Commissioner, annual report tabled, 845
Question of Privilege, 868, 877; ruling, 919-20
Senate Annual Report for 1992-93 tabled, 22

Speaker of the Senate (Hon. Roméo LeBlanc, P.C.)—Cont'd
Senate

Condition of chamber, felicitations to staff, 7
Tribute to departing page, 392
Spicer, Erik J., Esq., tribute on retirement as Parliamentary Librarian and designation as Parliamentary Librarian Emeritus, 279
Visitors in gallery, 91, 178, 434, 800, 917

Speaker of the Senate (Hon. Gildas L. Molgat)

Business of the Senate, 2065-66, 2483
Point of order, 2371, 2372
Christmas Greetings, 1178, 2549
Commission appointing Hon. Gildas L. Molgat to office of Speaker of the Senate, 948
See Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.
Distinguished visitor, Chief of Staff of Federation Council, Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation, 1222
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m to concur with message from Commons, 1847
Firearms bill, inquiry, 2372, 2373
Information Commissioner, annual rep tabled, 1773
Internal Economy, Budget and Administration Committee report
22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1604, 1605, 1607-08
Library of Parliament, rep of Librarian for 1993-94 tabled, 1689
Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 982
New senators, introduction, 1447, 2550
Official Languages, annual report of commissioner tabled, 1546
Ontario Court General Division, m to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, point of order, 2170, 2171, 2172
Pages Exchange Program with House of Commons, 1703, 2241, 2361, 2395, 2459
Parliamentary assemblies of French-speaking countries, report of conference of Speakers, Paris, France, 2416
Privacy Commissioner, annual report tabled, 2067
Privilege, oral notice, 2204, 2205
Rulings
Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, point of order, 1453-58; ruling, 1475-76
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, point of order, 1896-903; ruling, 1913
First Nations Government bill S-10, 1621-22; ruling, 1669-70
Karla Homolka bill S-11, point of order, 2139-43; ruling, 2367-68
Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2423-28; ruling, 2428-29
Notice of motion to instruct com to table final rep, point of order, 2370, 2376, 2379, 2380, 2381, 2389; ruling, 2390-94
Newspaper article in Edmonton Sun, question of privilege, 2105-07; ruling, 2211-12
Ontario Court General Division, m to strike Special Committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, point of order, 1625-29; ruling, 2003-05
Privileges, Standing Rules and Orders, point of order, 1747, 1781, 1782; ruling, 1843-44
Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee report, 1246, 1247; ruling, 1312-13, 1314
Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, point of order, 1018; ruling, 1192-93
Senators' Statements, 1573
Use of point of order to block debate, question of privilege, 2204, 2205; ruling, 2351-53

Speaker of the Senate (Hon. Gildas L. Molgat)—Cont'd
Senate

- Criticism by members of the media, correction, 2444
- Delay in delivery of official documents, 2433
- Felicitations to Mr. Charles Robert on his appointment as Reading Clerk, 2096
- Report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on firearms legislation, votes on amendments, request for advice on procedure, 2269, 2270
- Speaker's Christmas Party, 2432
- Statement re debatable motion, 1913
- Tributes on appointment as Speaker of the Senate, 948-49
- Visitors in the gallery, 949, 982, 992, 1096, 1204, 1348, 1354, 1500, 1515, 1612, 1618, 1659, 1663, 1800, 2038, 2096, 2108, 2211, 2346, 2361, 2371, 2417

Speaker's Christmas Party, 2432Special Economic Measures (Haiti) Regulations, 1993, report ref to Foreign Affairs Committee, 1598Speech from the Throne at Opening of First Session of Thirty-fifth Parliament,

See Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Spicer, Erik J., Esq.

- Tributes on retirement as Parliamentary Librarian and designation as Parliamentary Librarian Emeritus, 276-79

Spivak, Hon. Mira

- Aboriginal rights, study of low-level military flights over Labrador, denial of opportunity for anthropologist to give full testimony, st, 992-93

Agriculture

- Reduction of grain transportation subsidies, assistance to farmers for increase in rail freight costs, government position, qu, 1238
- Reduction of transportation subsidies, effect on Manitoba economy, qu, 1238
- Threat to sugar industry under new GATT rules, government position, qu, 1110-11, (r) 1240-41

Agriculture and Forestry Committee report

- 4th. Interim, Future of agriculture in Canada, 1147-48
 - Carryover stocks, 1148
 - Environmental impact studies, 1148
 - Farm income protection, 1147, 1148
 - National Farmers' Union, 1148
 - Research and development, 1147
 - Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities, 1148

Agriculture Canada, federal expenditure on research, tabled, 1192

Auditor General amendment bill C-83, 2421-22

- Commissioner of the environment and sustainable development, 2421

Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 589-92

- Acid rain, 590
- Agricultural subsidy reform, 591
- Air pollution, 590
- Conservation Reserve Program in U.S., 592
- Conversion subsidies, 592
- Emission credits, 591
- Energy and air pollution taxes, 590, 591
- Environmental taxes, 589, 590
- Forest die-back, 590
- "Greening" a budget, 589, 592
- Leaded petrol taxation, 590
- Refund system, 591
- Sweden, 589
- Task force, mandate, 589, 592

Spivak, Hon. Mira—Cont'd

Budget Implementation 1995 bill C-76, 1747-50, 1854-55

- Canada Assistance Plan, 1748
- Canada Health and Social Transfer, 1748
- Established Programs Financing, 1748
- Federal transfers to provinces, 1748
- Freshwater research, 1854-55
- Medicare, 1750
- Prairie farm land, 1750
- Transportation costs, 1750

Budget 1995

- Elimination of Crow Rate subsidy
 - Maintenance of grain economy in Manitoba, government position, qu, 1286, (r) 1616
 - Possibility of assistance from Western Economic Diversification, government position, qu, 1286, (r) 1617
- Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1237, 1261, 1307-09
 - Agriculture, 1308
 - Employment, 1308
 - Fairness, 1308
 - Medical services, 1307
 - Transfer payments, 1307
 - Welfare, 1307

Canada Council, Royal Winnipeg Ballet, loss of student grants due to budget cuts, possibility of alternate funding, government position, qu, 1895, (r) 2049-50

Canada Wildlife amendment bill C-24, 704

- Conservation, 704
- Definition of wildlife, 704
- Enforcement, 704
- Penalties, 704
- Protected areas beyond territorial sea, 704

Canadian Environmental Assessment amendment bill C-56, 1139-41

- Authority of new agency, 1141
- Intervenor funding, 1140
- Public participation, 1140
- Use of previous environmental assessment work, 1140

Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93, 2182-83

Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee

- National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 388

Environment

- Cancellation of report on state of environment, possibility of discussion on sustainable development at G-7 summit, government position, qu, 1743, (r) 2201
- Greenhouse gas reduction strategy, failure to reach agreement, government position, qu, 1239, (r) 1304
- International Joint Commission, recommendations on toxicity reduction in Great Lakes
 - Government position, qu, 135, (r) 308
 - Guidelines for detection apparatus, government position, qu, 356, (r) 456
- Low-level military flights over Labrador, impact on human health and wildlife, st, 1572
- Manitoba, oriented strand board plant, possibility of hearing before independent review panel, government position, qu, 1549, (r) 1694
- Oriented Strandboard plant in Saskatchewan, extension of environmental review to cover downstream effects in Manitoba, government position, qu, 1633
- Oriented Strandboard plants, cumulative effect of harvesting on boreal forests, government position, qu, 1633
- Reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, establishment of national standards, government position, qu, 2319
- Sagkeeng First Nation, effect of pulp mill pollution, government position, qu, 218, (r) 454-55
- St. Lawrence Vision 2000, reduction of pollution, government position, qu, 304, (r) 555
- Study of low-level military flights in Labrador, government response to criticism of process, qu, 848, (r) 1205

Spivak, Hon. Mira—Cont'd

Environment—Cont'd

Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11, 672-73, 915-16

Addictive qualities, 672
Cancer deaths, 672
Costs of smoking, 672
"Kiddy packs", 672
Minimum age, 672
Plain packaging, 673
Smoking-related diseases, 672
Women smokers, 672

Firearms bill C-68, 1908-09

Cost, 1908
Registration, 1908, 1909

Foreign policy, human rights in relation to trade, st. 1797-98

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, intellectual property rights and Third World agricultural development, inquiry,
1450, 1513-14

Ethiopia's Seeds of Survival program, 1514

Foreign aid, 1514

Gene banks, 1514

Intellectual property protection, 1514

Mexico, 1514

Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, 1514

Trade, 1514

UN Convention on Biodiversity, 1513

World prices, 1514

Hazardous Products Act, removal of exemption for tobacco, presentation of petitions, 512, 662, 728, 790, 873, 1205

Health

Advertising of tobacco products, measures announced by minister,
st. 2460

Bovine growth hormone

Evaluation of health risk, representations from United States,
government position, qu. 2111-12, (r) 2385

Link between IGF-1 and breast cancer, government position,
qu. 1927, (r) 2081

Classification of tobacco as hazardous product, government
position, qu. 43-44, 45

Closer control on tobacco products, government position,
qu. 1804, (r) 2079-80

Effect of reducing cigarette taxes, reclassification of tobacco as hazardous product, st. 90

Implementation of experts' report on plain packaging of tobacco products, consultations by Minister, government
position, qu. 1715

New legislation to curtail tobacco consumption, government
position, qu. 2233

Tobacco Demand Reduction Strategy, distribution of study on plain packaging, government position, qu. 1521,
(r) 1555

Tobacco Products Control Act, decision of Supreme Court of Canada, st. 2066-67

Use of bovine growth hormone somatotropin, delay in investigation of human health risks, government position, qu. 1840, (r) 2080

Human Resources Development, child care, federal offer of funding, restrictions on categories of providers, government
position, qu. 2504

Indian affairs

Clean-up of Canadian National train wreck debris on Birdtail
Sioux Reserve, government position, qu. 1452-53,
(r) 1684

Legal action against Canadian National Railway, government
position, qu. 1453, (r) 1684

International trade, reprieve from planned embargo on Canadian furs, possibility of banning leg-hold traps, government
position, qu. 2365

Spivak, Hon. Mira—Cont'd

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Ninety-second conference, Copenhagen,
Denmark, inquiry, 925-26

Fourth World Conference on Women, 925

"20/20" formula, 926

Women in political life, 925

World Summit for Social Development, 926

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report

16th. Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amds, 2261, 2262, 2284-87

Aboriginal peoples, 2284, 2287

Decriminalization, 2285, 2286

Museums, 2261, 2262

National unity, 2286

Regional representation, 2286

Registration of handguns, 2284

Senate's role, 2286

Manitoba, federal environmental assessment of forestry projects,
government position, qu. 2405

Migratory Birds Convention, 1994 bill C-23, 701-02

Aboriginal rights, 701, 702

Deforestation, 702

Fines, 701

Urban sprawl, 702

Molgat, Hon. Gildas L., felicitations on appointment as Speaker of
the Senate, 949

National Day of Remembrance

Fifth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st. 1054-55

Sixth anniversary of tragedy at l'École Polytechnique, st. 2413-14

Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 816

Prince Edward Island, fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 204-06

Backup or alternative service, 204

Bridge design, 205

Cost, 204, 205

Environmental evaluation assessment, 205

Ferry service, 205, 205, 206

Ice build-up, 205

Revenue Canada

Amount of export tax paid by tobacco manufacturers, net losses to federal treasury, government position, qu. 1058,
(r) 1190

Changes to excise tax on tobacco products, inequality of treatment of provinces, government position, qu. 995, (r) 1169-70

Status of Women, anniversary of Privy Council decision, congratulations to winners of 1995 Persons Awards,
st. 2116-17

Winnipeg, Manitoba, outstanding community support for the performing arts, st. 2608

World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57,
1071-72

Manitoba Sugar Co., 1072

Sugar industry, 1071

U.S. tariff schedule, 1071, 1072

Split Lake Cree First Nation Flooded Land bill C-36. 1r, 912;
2r, 940-44; ref to com, 944; rep without amdt, 1039;
3r, 1058; r.a., chap. 42, 1994, 1177

Adjudication process, 942

Arbitration, 943, 944

Band-specific agreements, 942

Compensation, 942, 943

Land title, 942

Manitoba Northern Flood Agreement, 942, 943

Moneys administered by band trust funds, 942

Speakers: Senators

Bosa, Peter, 943

Carstairs, Sharon, 940-43, 1058

Jessiman, Duncan J., 943-44

Molgat, Gildas L., 943, 944

Sport

- Memorial Cup champions, congratulations to Kamloops Blazers Hockey Team, st. 481
- Men's World Curling champions, congratulations to Rick Folk's rink, st. 300
- Women's World Curling champions, congratulations to Sandra Peterson's rink, st. 300

Stanbury, Hon. Richard J.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 78-81
- Adjournment, 619, 728, 790, 836
- Agriculture and Forestry Committee
 - Authority to permit coverage of proceedings by electronic media, 739
- Aird, Q.C., the late John Black, tributes, 1597
- Answers to Order Paper Questions tabled, 517, 765
- Appropriation No. 2, 1994-95 bill C-39, 633, 699, 739
- Budget, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 589, 607
- Business of the Senate, 510, 541, 556, 651, 652, 739, 800, 836, 837
 - Adjournment, 511, 584, 585, 679-80, 681, 687, 763, 764
- Canada Business Corporations amendment bill C-12, 728
- Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 583
- Canada Student Finance Assistance bill C-28, 743
- Canada's Defence Policy, authority to change date of presentation of final report, 728
- Canadian Film Development Corporation amendment bill C-31, 662
- Code of Conduct, Special Joint Committee, m to appoint, 1883-84
- Conflict of Interests, report of Special Joint Committee presented, 41
- Delayed Answers to Oral Questions, 554, 585, 655, 765, 833
- Department of Labour amendment bill C-30, 757
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1849-51; point of order, 1901
- Estimates, 1994-95
 - Supplementary Estimates (A), tabled, 510, ref to com, 511
- Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 842
- Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-27, 655
- Lang, Hon. Daniel A., tributes on retirement, 616
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-22, 2429-32
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2427, 2428
- Reports
 - 8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 813, 814
 - 14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m and message from Commons, m in amdt, 2027-29
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2308-09
- Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendments, ref to com, 510
- National Finance Committee report
 - 6th, Main Estimates 1994-95, 657, 738
- Neiman, Hon. Joan, tribute on retirement, 2041-42
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 816, 817-19, 823, 827
 - Compensation, 817
- Quebec, m for recognition as distinct society, 2476-77
- Senate, absence of Government Leader, 527
- Social Affairs, Science and Technology Committee
 - Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 739
- Transport, search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet, documents tabled, 604
- Veterans affairs, m to urge government to provide site for Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, 520, 521
- Walker, P.C., the late Hon. David James, tribute, 2064

Stanbury, Hon. Richard J.—Cont'd

- Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, 1289-91, 1859
 - Adult court, 1290
 - Community-based sentences, 1290
 - Imprisonment, 1290
 - Information, shared and private, 1291
 - Maximum penalties, 1290
 - Older and younger young offenders, 1290
 - Open or secure custody, 1290
 - Parole, 1290
 - Protection of public, 1289, 1290
 - Protection of young people's rights, 1289
 - Rehabilitation, 1290
 - Retention of records, 1291
 - Victim impact statements, 1290-91
 - Violent and nonviolent crime, 1290

Stanley Cup

- Best wishes to Vancouver Canucks in National Hockey League championship, st. 482
- Participation of New Jersey Devils in the play-offs, st. 481

State of culture in Canada, inquiry, 1500Status of Women

- Anniversary of Privy Council decision, congratulations to winners of 1995 Persons Awards, st. 2115-17
- Request for breakdown of program spending for current and next fiscal years, qu. 1376, (r) 1503
- Twenty-fifth anniversary of tabling of report of Royal Commission, st. 2090

Stewart, Hon. John B.

- Agriculture and Forestry Committee
 - Authority to examine the future of agriculture in Canada, 596
 - Mexico, 596
 - Shared expenses with Commons committee, 596
- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1455, 1456, 1457-58
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee reports
 - 13th, study of state of Canadian financial system, 1048, 1049
 - Superintendent of Financial Institutions, 1048
 - 27th, Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99, without amdt, 2538
- Budget 1995, Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1269
- Business of the Senate, 207, 1081
 - Adjournment, 1775-76
- Canada's Foreign Policy, Special Joint Committee
 - Motion to appoint, 255
- Certified General Accountants' Association bill S-8, 1r, 1210
- Certified General Accountants' Association of Canada, presentation of petition, 1204
- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 459; considered in Committee of the Whole, 471, 472, 473
 - Fishing zone 3N, 459
- Criminal Code amendment (dangerous intoxication) bill S-6, 988
- Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93, 2183
 - Appeal percentage, 2183
 - Average annual dollar value of gifts, 2183
 - Criteria for evaluation, 2183
- Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47, 1379-80
 - Spending estimates, 1379, 1380
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, vote deferred on m to adjourn debate, 1846-47; point of order, 1898, 1899
- Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources Committee
 - National Protected Areas Strategy, authority to conduct study, 387
- Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2510

Stewart, Hon. John B.—Cont'd

- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1619, 1622
 - Royal Recommendation, 1622
- Foreign affairs, request for newly appointed Ambassador to Israel and Cyprus to appear before committee, 1983, 1984
- Foreign Affairs Committee
 - Authority to examine various consequences of European Union, adopted, 1678
 - Authority to extend date for final report, 1356, 1632
 - Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 912, 972, 988, 989, 1084, 1085, 1854, 1925, 2230, 2416, 2487
 - Authority to monitor and report upon the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement, 354, 390
- Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and North American Free Trade Agreement, authority to table final report, 1924
- Reports
 - 1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 77
 - 2nd, Crown Liability and Proceedings amendment bill C-4, without amdt, 450
 - 3rd, Budget, Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement, 549, 589
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 4th, World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 1163
 - 5th, Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade bill C-47, without amdt, 1355-56
 - 6th, Budget, study re European Union, 1798, adopted, 1885
 - See Journals of the Senate
 - 7th, Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation bill C-87, 1923
 - 8th, Free Trade in the Americas, confirmation of tabling of report, 2067
- Forum for Young Canadians, appointment of Mark Audcent as chair of the board, st. 870
- Income Tax amendment bill C-9, 327-28
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1607
- Karla Homolka bill S-11, 2142-43
 - Retroactive law, 2143
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2424-25
 - Notice of motion instructing com to table final rep re C-69, point of order, 2377, 2378
- Report
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 497
- Maintenance of Railway Operations, 1995 bill C-77, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1439, 1440, 1443, 1444
- National Defence Policy, proposed Special Joint Committee Appointment, 152
- National Library amendment bill C-26, 530
- Official languages, access to francophones to Internet network, qu, 1651-52
- Ontario Court General Division, m to strike special committee to examine and report upon the conduct and behaviour of certain officers and justices, point of order, 1628
- Pearson Airport Agreements Special Committee report
 - 2nd, Address to His Excellency the Governor General requesting documents, 2143, 2192, 2193
- Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, 821, 827-30
 - Royal Recommendation, 827, 828, 829, 830
- Point of order, rules which apply to joint committees, 1017

Stewart, Hon. John B.—Cont'd

- Prince Edward Island, fixed link, m to amend Constitution of Canada, 171-72, 229, 242-43
 - Constitutional obligation, 242
 - Continuous communication, 171, 172
 - Design changes, 171, 172, 229
 - Wood Islands-Caribou ferry
- Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy
 - Motion to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee report, 1246, 1247, 1314
 - Ruling by Speaker of the House of Commons, point of order, 1017
- Senate
 - Absence of approval for various projects, inquiry, 1053
 - Powers of Internal Economy Committee, 1053
 - Impact of decision of House of Commons to cease publication of committee proceedings, inquiry, 1645
 - Participation in joint committees, 1645
 - Small Business Loans amendment bill C-99, 2539
- Transport
 - Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1388, 1389, 1396, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1415, 1419, 1420, 1425, 1426, 1427
 - Pearson International Airport, m to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1568-69, 1579, 1580
 - Repairs to Ports of Halifax and Saint John, government position, qu, 97
 - Veterans affairs, m to urge government to provide site for Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, 520

Stollery, Hon. Peter A.

- Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, 2214-16, 2218
 - Advertising revenues, 2214, 2215
 - Anti-avoidance, 2216
 - Canadian magazine industry, 2214, 2215
 - Circulation revenues, 2215
 - Split runs, 2214, 2215
 - Sports Illustrated*, 2214, 2215
- Frith, Hon. Royce, tributes on resignation from the Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 842
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1604
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 968
- Leblanc, the late Hon. Fernand E., tributes, 2553
- Mexico, present state of affairs, inquiry, 1339
 - NAFTA, 1510, 1511, 1513
 - Politics, 1511, 1512
- Pearson Airport Agreements, Special Senate Committee report
 - 1st, Budget
 - Point of order, 1771, 1772
- Precincts of Parliament, locking of East Block doors, government position, qu, 1616

Stratton, Hon. Terry

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
 - Authority to extend date of presentation of final report, 1022
- Budget
 - Changes to rules governing RRSP contributions, position of government, qu, 96
 - Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 427-28
 - Deficit, 427
 - Democracy, role and future, 427
 - Individualism, 427
 - Inflation rate, 427
 - Interest rates, 428
 - Regionalism, 427

Stratton, Hon. Terry—Cont'd

- Budget 1995, statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1608-11
- Debt and deficit reduction, 1608, 1609
- Defence, 1611
- Fairness, 1608, 1610
- Health care system, 1608, 1610
- Transfer payments, 1608, 1610
- City of Winnipeg, tribute to Susan Thompson on re-election as Mayor, st. 2165
- Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5, 226
 - General Preferential Tariff, 226
- Defence, safety of Sea King helicopters, government position, qu, 2069
- Excise Tax amendment bill C-13, 367-68
 - Businesses, 368
 - Charities, 368
 - Financial institutions, 368
 - Goods and Services Tax, 367
 - Rabbits, 368
- Finance, taxation of registered retirement savings plans, st. 918, 930
- Firearms legislation, st. 2263
- Johnson, the late Dr. George, tribute, 1976
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amtds, 2260, 2287, 2301-03
 - Confiscation without compensation, 2260
 - Governor in Council, 2302
 - Native people, 2287
 - Registration, 2301
 - Violence, 2302
- Manitoba Act, one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of legislation, st. 1630
- Revenue
 - Capital gains election, dissemination of information to public, request for studies on effectiveness of measure, qu, 1237
 - Income tax, capital gains election, effect on seniors, qu, 1237, (r) 1474
- Transport
 - Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet, government position, qu, 422, (r) 556
- Winnipeg, congratulations on efforts to retain Jets Hockey Team, st. 1649

Superintendent of Bankruptcy, responsibilities regarding NSC Diesel Power Inc., tabled, 1601

Supreme Court of Canada, decision on privileges of the court, inquiry, 2176, 2356-60

Solicitor-client privilege, 2356, 2357

Speaker: Senator

Cools, Anne C., 2176, 2356-58, 2359-60

Sylvain, Hon. John (resigned Jan. 31/96)

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
 - Authority to meet during sitting of the Senate, 688, 790
 - Authority to study state of Canadian financial system, 132, 177
 - Authority to table interim report on state of financial system in Canada, 1890, adopted, 1975
- Export Development Act regulations
 - Authority to extend date of presentation of final report of committee, 132, 176-77
- Reports
 - 11th, Canada Business Corporations amendment bill C-12, without amdt, 686
 - 12th, Excise, Customs, Tobacco Sales to Young Persons amendment bill C-11, without amdt, 897
 - 13th, study of state of Canadian financial system, 1007-08
 - Co-insurance, 1007
 - Collecting premiums, 1008
 - Deposit insurance, 1008

Sylvain, Hon. John—Cont'd

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee—Cont'd
 - Government support, 1008
 - Life and Health Insurance Policyholder Protection Fund, 1007, 1008
 - Rehabilitation, 1008
 - 14th, Department of Industry bill C-46, without amdt, 1181
 - 17th, Canada-United States Tax Convention Act, 1984 bill S-9, without amdt, 1547
 - 18th, study of state of Canadian financial system, adopted, 1973
 - 19th, Income Tax amendment bill C-70, without amdt, 1889
 - 20th, Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91, without amdt, 1980
 - 21st, Excise Tax, Excise amendment bill C-90, without amdt, 2207
 - 22nd, Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995 bill C-105, without amdt, 2207
 - 24th, Cultural Property Export and Import, Income Tax, Tax Court of Canada amendment bill C-93, without amdt, 2246
- Business Development Bank of Canada bill C-91, 1995-96
- Canada Remembers, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 582
- Canada's Defence Policy, Special Joint Committee report, 1099-1102
 - Aerospace industry, 1101
 - Defence budget, 1101
 - Defence exports, 1101
 - National Defence White Paper, 1099, 1101, 1102
 - NATO, 1100
- Gun control legislation, presentation of petitions, 2208
- Halifax MKVII bomber, recovery and renovation of aircraft sunk in Lake Mjosa, Norway, during World War II, st. 1581-82, 2130
- Income Tax Conventions Implementation, 1995 bill C-105, 2179
 - Route for bills of this nature, 2179
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 980
- National defence
 - Disciplinary practices in Canadian Armed Forces, government position, qu, 1184-86, (r) 1473
 - Inquiry into activities of Canadian Airborne Regiment, government position, qu, 1185
 - Length of tours of peacekeeping forces, request for information, qu, 1375, (r) 1552
 - Peacekeeping costs charged to departmental budget, government position, qu, 1213, (r) 1342-43
 - Peacekeeping in former Yugoslavia, withdrawal of troops, government policy, qu, 1708
 - Peacekeeping operations in former Yugoslavia, demise of Canadian Airborne Regiment, qu, 1374
 - Proportion of non-military items in departmental budget, government position, qu, 995, (r) 1240
 - Request for answer, 1213
 - National Unity, result of Quebec Referendum, st. 2149
 - Tributes on resignation from Senate, 2551-52, 2606, 2608

Telefilm Canada, cuts in funding of Abitibi-Témiscamingue International Film Festival, st. 1659

Tellier, Paul, President and CEO, Canadian National

Transport, measure to terminal railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1382-84, 1385-86, 1387, 1388, 1389-90, 1391

Thériault, Hon. L. Norbert

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 141, 142

Budget Implementation, 1995 bill C-76, 1810, 1811

Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, 460-61; considered in Committee of the Whole, 473

- Overfishing, 460
- Quotas, 461

Thériault, Hon. L. Norbert—Cont'd

- Customs Tariff amendment bill C-5, 225-26
 - General Preferential Tariff, 225
 - Imports, 225
- David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1161-62
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension bill, 1994, British Columbia, concerns of constituents, 394
- Euthanasia and Assisted Suicide Special Committee report
 - 2nd, Power to hold occasional meetings in camera, adopted, 745
- Excise Tax amendment bill C-13, 366-67, 368, 369
 - Agricultural sector, 366, 367
 - Businesses, seasonal and part-time, 366
 - Charities, 366, 367
 - Goods and Services Tax, 366
 - Homemaker services, 366
 - Input tax credits, 367
 - Rabbits, 366, 367
 - Sales tax reform, 366
- Firearms legislation, remarks made by Hon. Allan Rock, 1572, 1573
- First Nations Government bill S-10, 1619
- Human Resources Development, child care, federal offer of funding, fiscal inequality among provinces, qu, 2502
- Income Tax, Income Tax Application Rules, Canada Pension Plan, Canada Business Corporations, Excise Tax, Unemployment Insurance amendment bill C-27, 558-59
 - Automobile operating cost benefits, 558
 - "Cross-border purchase butterfly", 559
 - Depreciable property, 559
 - Life insurance companies, 559
 - Loss of source of income, 559
 - Mining, 559
 - Residence rule, 559
 - Retirement income plans, 558
 - Scientific research and experimental development, 558, 559
 - Securities, 559
 - Tax system, 558
 - Technical amendments, 558
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee report
 - 22nd, respecting m to print Volume I of Special Joint Committee on Reviewing Canada's Foreign Policy, 1604, 1607
- LeBlanc, P.C., Hon. Roméo, tributes on appointment as Governor General of Canada, 971
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - Notice of motion to instruct com to table final report re bill C-69, point of order, Speaker's ruling, 2393
- Report
 - 2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 493, 497
- Marshall, Hon. Jack, tributes on retirement, 979-80
- National Finance Committee report
 - 4th, Supplementary Estimates (A), 1994-95, adopted, 625
- National unity
 - Quebec referendum, coverage of events by CBC French network, st, 2414-15
 - Result of Quebec referendum, st, 2164-65
- Social programs in Canada, inquiry, 2416, 2599-605
- Veterans affairs, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, inquiry, 409
- Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67, 1668-69

Tkachuk, Hon. David

- Aboriginal peoples, co-management agreements in Saskatchewan, request for particulars, qu, 1706-07
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 117-20
- Agriculture Food Canada, tabled, 2083
- Appropriation No. 4, 1994-95 bill C-79, 1453-55, 1456, 1458
- Budget
 - Definition of tax loophole, qu, 1237
 - Tax increases for wealthy Canadians, government position, qu, 1223-24

Tkachuk, Hon. David—Cont'd

- Budget 1995
 - Elimination of Crow Rate subsidy
 - Effect on grain shipping ports, government position, qu, 1284, (r) 1360-61
 - End of grain marketing monopoly of Canadian Wheat Board, government position, qu, 1285
 - Ratio of spending cuts to tax increases, government position, qu, 1251
 - Statement of Minister of Finance, inquiry, 1267, 1268, 1311-12
 - Seven-to-one ratio, 1267, 1312
 - Status of RRSP as tax loophole, government position, qu, 1237, 1238, (r) 1549-50
 - Budget Plan, program funding, tabled, 1170
 - Budgetary savings for regional development agencies, tabled, 2092
 - Canada Assistance Plan and established programs financing, levels of entitlement and further details, tabled, 1843
 - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, annual report 1993/94, production costs, tabled, 1070
 - Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, issuance of specialty licences, st, 665
 - Citizenship and Immigration Canada, tabled, 2083
 - Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1601
 - Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, tribute, 2061
 - Diefenbaker, the late Rt. Hon. John George, st, 2087-88
 - Facilities at Banff National Park, tabled, 1555
 - Facilities at Prince Albert National Park, tabled, 1555
 - Facilities for employees at Jasper National Park, tabled, 1555
 - Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions amendment bill C-3, 223-25
 - Equalization program, 223, 224, 225
 - Federal-provincial relations, administration of infrastructure program, government policy, qu, 95, (r) 138
 - Firearms legislation, statement attributed to Prime Minister in caucus on voting of dissenting members, government position qu, 1777
 - First Nations Government bill S-10, 1487, 1602, 1618, 1620-21
 - Royal Recommendation, 1620, 1621
 - Government Organization (federal agencies) bill C-65, 1948
 - Hall, the late Hon. Mr. Justice Emmett M., tributes, 2263
 - Health Canada, savings in 1995 Budget Plan, qu, 1710
 - Human Resources Development
 - British Columbia, imposition of waiting period for payments under Canada Assistance Plan, suspension of transfer payments, government position, qu, 2417-18, (r) 2609-10
 - Details of budgetary savings under 1995 budgetary plan, tabled, 1637
 - Indian Affairs and Northern Development, savings in 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1652
 - Industry Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1637
 - Infrastructure program
 - Cutback in government spending, effect on employment, government position, qu, 356, 357, (r) 850
 - Saskatchewan Rural Roads Project, announcement by Deputy Premier, st, 393
 - Source of funds for job creation, government position, qu, 400-01
 - Justice
 - Authority for statement on political non-involvement in police investigations, government position, 2466
 - Political non-involvement in police investigations, statement of minister to media, government position, qu, 2465
 - Sale of Airbus aircraft to Air Canada, alleged conspiracy to defraud federal government, approach to Swiss government for information, authority for procedure followed, government position, qu, 2487-88
 - Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report
 - 16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amtds, 2305-08

Tkachuk, Hon. David—Cont'd

National finance

- Amount of deficit for 1993-94, government position, qu, 552
- Necessity to re-examine system for approving Estimates, st, 1486-87
- Reduction in deficit announced by minister, ramifications for transfer payments to provinces, government position, qu, 2440, 2441

1995 Budget Plan

- Particulars on savings for Fisheries and Oceans, tabled, 1695
- Particulars on savings respecting Department of Canadian Heritage, tabled, 1695

Parks Canada

- Location and composition of meetings, tabled, 1191
- Meetings held by officials in Wolfville and Digby, Nova Scotia, tabled, 1652
- User fees, government position, qu, 875, 934, (r) 974-75, (r) 1168-69

Revenue Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1601

Saskatchewan, appointment of Lieutenant-Governor, nature of appointment, government position, qu, 321, 322

Senate

- Amendments to Bill C-22, refusal by Minister to appear before Senate Committee, qu, 1299
- Tribute to departing page, 393

Solicitor General, RCMP marketing contract with Disney Corporation, request for particulars, qu, 1958-59, (r) 2082-83

Solicitor General of Canada, tabled, 2083

Sport

- Men's World Curling Champions, congratulations to Rick Folk's rink, st, 300
- Women's World Curling Champions, congratulations to Sandra Peterson's rink, st, 300

Transport

- Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program, policy on diversion of funds to undesignated projects, request for particulars, qu, 1682, 1683, (r) 1990
- Measure to terminate railway strike, considered in Committee of the Whole, 1386, 1387
- Pearson Airport Agreements
 - Discussion held by members of Liberal election campaign committee, government position, qu, 1491
 - Personal knowledge of Leader of Government on policy proposal, qu, 1490-91
- Transport Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1601
- Western Economic Diversification Canada, report of Auditor General, mandate of agency, government policy, qu, 2268

Tobacco Products Restrictions bill S-14. 1r, 2437; 2r, 2536-37, 2582-84; ref to com, 2584

- Addictive substance, 2537
- Anti-tobacco advertising, 2583
- Cost to Canadian economy, 2537
- Lung cancer, 2537
- Nicotine, 2537
- Second-hand smoke, 2584
- Smuggling, 2583
- Tobacco taxes, 2583
- Ultralight cigarettes, 2583
- Speakers: Senators
 - Haidasz, Stanley, 2536-37, 2584
 - Kelly, William M., 2582-84

Tobin, P.C., M.P., Hon. Brian, Minister of Fisheries and Oceans

- Coastal Fisheries Protection amendment bill C-29, considered in Committee of the Whole, 463-64, 465-66, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474-75

Tourism, effect of budget cuts, government position, qu, 284-85Training Initiatives Program, amount of funds available from Human Resources Development, government position, qu, 1633, (r) 1695Transport

- Abandonment of holdings on Partridge Island, New Brunswick, government position, qu, 1534, (r) 1617
- Abolition of Atlantic Region Freight Assistance, possibility of notice to stakeholders, qu, 1212, (r) 1473-74
- Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations
 - Consultations in British Columbia, st, 1037
 - Final report tabled, 1837
- Application of International Civil Aviation Organization Standards at smaller airports, government position, qu, 1520, (r) 1685
- Atlantic Region Freight Assistance Program, request for impact analysis, government position, qu, 1057
 - Request for answer, 1167
- Automated navigational and weather systems, request for documentation, government position, qu, 1165, (r) 2070-71
- Automated Weather Observation Systems, report of Senate Committee, request for response from ministers, qu, 2233-34
- Cancellation of winter ferry service between Yarmouth, Nova Scotia and Bar Harbour, Maine, st, 2173-74
- Condition of St. Lawrence Seaway, government policy, qu, 97, (r) 166
- Destaffing of lightstations in British Columbia
 - Environmental impact assessment, government position, qu, 1040, (r) 1189
 - Request for judicial inquiry, government position, qu, 1133-34, (r) 1191
- Existence of any impediment to redevelopment of Pearson Airport, government position, qu, 1303, (r) 1361-62
- Failure of minister to properly brief Prime Minister on reports respecting Pearson Airport Agreements, government position, qu, 1488
- Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program
 - Canada-Nova Scotia Agreement, diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, government position, qu, 1650, (r) 2046
 - Discussions between ministers on diversion of funds from Nova Scotia Highway Project, request for particulars, qu, 1660, (r) 2046
 - Diversion of funds to Cape Breton Project, possible interpretation by Auditor General of Canada, government position, qu, 1650
 - Fulfilment of Red Book promises, government position, qu, 1661-62
 - Introduction of toll booths on Trans-Canada Highway, qu, 1661, (r) 2046
- Nova Scotia
 - Diversion of funds, request for examination by Auditor General of Canada, motion, 1678, 1696-1701; withdrawn, 1736
 - Fleur-de-lis Trail, 1696, 1697, 1697, 1700, 1701
 - Highway 104, 1697, 1698, 1699, 1700
 - Tolls, 1698, 1699
 - Speakers: Senators
 - Buchanan, John, 1700-01
 - Comeau, Gerald J., 1698-1700
 - Forrestall, J. Michael, 1696-98
 - Diversion of funds from designated project
 - Alternate methods of funding, government position, qu, 1680, (r) 2047
 - Knowledge of transaction by Prime Minister, government position, qu, 1679-80, (r) 2047
 - Diversion of funds to projects not covered by agreements, government position, qu, 1680-81, (r) 2047

Transport—Cont'd

- Federal-Provincial Strategic Highway Improvement Program
 - Freezing of funds to await outcome of inquiry of Auditor General, government position, qu, 1708, (r) 2048
 - Request for answers, qu, 1926
 - Restoration of funding to designated project
 - Request for answer, qu, 1961
 - Request for update, qu, 1690-91, 1926, (r) 1991-92, 1993
 - Return of funds to designated project, government position, qu, 1650-51, (r) 1988
 - Return of funds to designated highway project, government position, qu, 1662
- Policy on diversion of funds to undesignated projects, request for particulars, qu, 1682-83, (r) 1990
- Propriety of intervention by Minister of Public Works, government position, qu, 1660-61
- Report of Auditor General on diversion of funds
 - Government position, qu, 2266
 - Pertinent documents tabled, 2559
 - Request for tabling of pertinent documents, qu, 2266
- Strategic Highway Improvement Program, application of tolls on Canadian highways, tabled, 1695
- Importance of passage of Bill C-22 to development of Pearson International Airport, government position, qu, 1285
- Institution of public inquiry, government position, qu, 1472
- Measure to terminate railway strike, m to debate ref to Committee of the Whole, 1373, 1382; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Mr. Paul Tellier, Mr. Terry Leneker, Mr. Gary Fane, Mr. Terry W. Ivany, Mr. Tim Secord, Mr. George Hucker, Mr. Rob P. Ritchie, Mr. David Flicker taking part in the debate, 1382-1421; rep, 1421; m to debate ref to Committee of the Whole, 1422; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Mr. Don J. Bujold, Ms Maureen Prebinski taking part in the debate, 1422-28; rep, 1428;

Speakers: Senators

- Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1388, 1390, 1405, 1406, 1420, 1421
- Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 1426
- Bryden, John G., 1389, 1399, 1400, 1403, 1404, 1413, 1414, 1415-16
- Comeau, Gerald J., 1390, 1391, 1398, 1404, 1405, 1416
- Corbin, Eymard G., 1421, 1428
- De Bané, Pierre, 1395
- Doyle, Richard J., 1427
- Fairbairn, Joyce, 1382
- Graham, B. Alasdair, 1373, 1382, 1401
- Haidasz, Stanley, 1390
- Jessiman, Duncan J., 1385, 1386
- Keon, Wilbert J., 1411
- Kinsella, Noël A., 1384, 1394-95, 1403, 1410, 1411, 1420, 1426-27
- Lucier, Paul, 1393, 1394
- Lynch-Staunton, John, 1382, 1383, 1384, 1392, 1393, 1397, 1398, 1399, 1402, 1403, 1409, 1410, 1417, 1418, 1421, 1424, 1425
- Murray, Lowell, 1387, 1396-97, 1398
- Oliver, Donald H., 1388, 1393, 1404
- Olson, H.A., 1385, 1418, 1419
- Prud'homme, Marcel, 1400-01, 1406
- Stewart, John B., 1388, 1389, 1396, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1415, 1419, 1420, 1425, 1426, 1427
- Tkachuk, David, 1386, 1387
- and witnesses in Committee of the Whole
 - Bujold, Don J., National Secretary-Treasurer, Transportation communications Union, 1422-24, 1425-26, 1427
 - Fane, Gary, Director, Canadian Autoworkers Union, 1391-93, 1394, 1395-96, 1397-99, 1400, 1401
 - Flicker, David, Vice-President of Government Affairs, CP, 1419

Transport—Cont'd

- Measure to terminate railway strike—Cont'd
 - Hucker, George, V.P. National Legislative Representative, International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, 1409, 1410, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1414, 1415, 1416
 - Ivany, Terry W., President and CEO, VIA Rail, 1401-02, 1403-05, 1406
 - Leneker, Terry, Chief Executive Officer, Canadian National, 1385, 1386, 1388, 1389, 1390
 - Ritchie, Rob P., President and Chief Executive Officer, CP, 1416-17, 1418, 1419-20, 1421
 - Secord, Tim, Legislative Director, United Transportation Union, 1406-09, 1410, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1414, 1415, 1416
 - Tellier, Paul, President and CEO, Canadian National, 1382-84, 1385-86, 1387, 1388, 1389-90, 1391
- Merger of Canadian Coast Guard with Department of Fisheries and Oceans, government position, qu, 2112, (r) 2252
- Necessary repairs to Pearson International Airport, government position, 187-88, (r) 287
- Nova Scotia, funds for Wentworth Valley Highway Project, government position, qu, 1548-49, (r) 1709-10
- Pearson Airport Agreements
 - Authorship of departmental report, request for clarification, qu, 1469-70, (r) 1534
 - Definition of legislative solution, government position, qu, 1471
 - Discrepancies in Nixon Report, government position, 1520
 - Discussion held by members of Liberal election campaign committee, government position, qu, 1491
 - Evidence of Mr. Matthews before Senate committee, government position, qu, 2100
 - Extent of knowledge of Mr. Nixon at time of review, government position, qu, 1488
 - Function of Prime Minister at meeting with Matthews Group, qu, 1530
 - Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, request for clarification, qu, 1472
 - Instructions to Mr. Nixon on his mandate to review, government position, qu, 1470, (r) 1537
 - Legislative solution, request for particulars, qu, 1489
 - Legislative solution to dispute, government position, qu, 1587-88
 - Meeting of Prime Minister with Matthews Group, request for details, qu, 1519
 - Personal knowledge of Leader of Government on policy proposal, qu, 1490-91
 - Possible government inquiry, st, 880
 - Possible revision of report of Robert Nixon, government position, qu, 1502
 - Public inquiry, government position, qu, 1530
 - Redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, request for information, qu, 1471, (r) 1537-38
 - Refusal of minister to appear before Senate committee, government position, qu, 1519
 - Request for appearance of minister before Senate committee, 1521
 - Request for copies of all material or information on which Mr. Nixon based his report, qu, 1492
 - Request for copy of stamped receipt notation on Mr. Nixon's report, qu, 1502
 - Request for judicial inquiry, government position, qu, 1489-90
 - Request for public inquiry, government position, qu, 901-02
 - Request for tabling of lawyer's time dockets relating to meeting with Matthews Group, qu, 1501-02
 - Transport Canada study, request for particulars, qu, 1491-92, (r) 1538
 - Verbal statements of Minister of Transport, request for written confirmation, qu, 1470-71, (r) 1534-35

Transport—Cont'd

- Pearson International Airport
 - Cancellation of lease agreement, qu. 1040-41, (r) 1169
 - Cancellation of leases preventing redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, government position, qu. 1490, (r) 1535
 - Comments of minister on delay in renovations on Terminals 1 and 2, government position, qu. 1585-86
 - Delay in redevelopment of Terminals 1 and 2, qu. 1301-02, (r) 1361-62
 - Government position, qu. 1451-52, (r) 1536-37
 - Implications of alleged involvement of Prime Minister, qu. 1057-58, (r) 1136
 - Request for answer, 1111
 - Importance of passage of Bill C-22 on development, knowledge of Robert Nixon, government position, qu. 1451
 - Importance of passage of Bill C-22 to development, statement by Leader of the Government, st. 1295
 - Influence of government actions on attracting future business, qu. 1451, (r) 1536
 - Motion to strike Special Committee to inquire into privatization contracts, 1282, 1350-53, 1563-69, 1575-80, adopted, as amended, 1590-92
 - Request for government response, qu. 1529-30
 - Nominees to Canadian Transport Authority, government position, qu. 912-13, (r) 1011-12
 - See appendix, p. 1023
 - Possible negotiation of lease, government position, qu. 985-86, (r) 1012
 - Remaining impediments to redevelopment, qu. 1132
 - Request for answers, qu. 1531
 - Request for particulars on revenue from subleases, qu. 1490
 - Transfer of administration to local airport authority, nature of legal impediment, qu. 1550-01
- Pearson International Airport redevelopment, alleged involvement of Prime Minister, 1450-51
 - Request for further answer, 1165-66
- Pensions of Route Canada employees, delay in resolution of dispute, status of negotiations
 - Government position, qu. 1727-28
 - Government response, qu. 2090-91
- Port of Saint John, importance of rail infrastructure, st. 870
- Privatization of Canadian National, reopening of negotiations with Canadian Pacific, government position, qu. 1255, (r) 1344
- Proposed sale of Halifax shipyards, government position, qu. 114, (r) 221
- Proposed study of Atlantic Canada freight rates, government position, qu. 553-54, (r) 834
- Public statements by Minister of Transport regarding motives of certain senators, qu. 1285-86
 - Position of Leader of the Government, qu. 1298-99, (r) 1361-62
- Question of privilege, 1492
- Radio Canada International, invitation to Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Trade to respond to Senate committee report, qu. 1227
- Railways work stoppage
 - Longer term arrangements for dispute settlements, government position, qu. 1374
 - Status of negotiations at Canadian Pacific Rail and VIA Rail, qu. 1359-60
- Relationship of Canadian Airport Authority to development of Pearson International Airport, qu. 913
- Reliability of Labrador helicopters on search and rescue missions, government position, qu. 604, (r) 836
- Removal of emergency response capability from smaller airports
 - Difference in standards of safety, government position, qu. 1531-32
 - Government position, qu. 1520, (r) 1685
- Repairs to Ports of Halifax and Saint John, government position, 97
- Replacement of search and rescue helicopter at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, st. 2008

Transport—Cont'd

- Search and rescue helicopter replacement program
 - Purchase of units without tender, government position, qu. 2400, (r) 2558
 - Status of EH-101 contract
 - Government position, qu. 2320, (r) 2609
 - Nature of milestone payments, qu. 2349, (r) 2609
 - Suitability and safety of replacement units, government position, qu. 2401, (r) 2558
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King and Labrador helicopter fleets
 - Effect of replacements on viability of Canadian Forces Base Shearwater, performance standards for replacements, qu. 1340, (r) 2071
 - Status of EH-101 contract, government position, qu. 2118
- Search and rescue, replacement of Sea King helicopter fleet, st. 449
 - Documents tabled, qu. 603-04
 - Government position, qu. 422, (r) 556, 453-54, (r) 585-86, 604, (r) 836
 - Request for answer, qu. 882
- Strengthening highway standards for truck safety, government position, qu. 1520-21, (r) 1745
- Timing of vote on motion to strike Special Committee, request for response, qu. 1530-31
- Trans-Canada Highway
 - Federal-provincial agreements currently in force, request for particulars, qu. 1680, (r) 1990
 - Proposed toll booths in Nova Scotia, government position, qu. 1839, (r) 1993
- Underutilized infrastructure at Canadian ports, need for proposed new berthage and cargo sheds in Minister's riding, qu. 1472, (r) 1554

Transport, Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, consultations in British Columbia, inquiry, 1039, 1153-56

Cost of keeping lighthouse family, 1156

Speakers: Senators

- Carney, Pat, 1153-55, 1156
- Forrestall, J. Michael, 1155-56
- Robertson, Brenda M., 1156

Transport and communications

- Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, proposed orders on directions on direct-to-home satellite distribution and on pay-per-view television programming, deposited with Clerk of the Senate, 1546
- Directions to Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission on direct-to-home satellite distribution, comments of Minister of Canadian Heritage, government position, qu. 1692
- Marine safety, Ad Hoc Parliamentary Committee on Lightstations, st. 929, 932

Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee

- Authority to continue special study on report of National Transportation Act Review Commission, 211, 234, 872, 887
- Authority to engage services, 250, 274
- Authority to extend date for final report, 1689, adopted, 1710
- Authority to meet during sittings of the Senate, 527, 570, 1204, 1702, 2230, 2437, 2462
- Authority to permit electronic coverage of meeting, adopted, 1057, 1204
- Authority to study telecommunications, 1488, 1515-17, adopted, 1525-26
- Cultural sovereignty, 1517
- Industry convergence, 1515
- Information highway, 1515

Transport and Communications—Cont'd

Canada's international competitive position in telecommunications, m to authorize committee to extend date for final report on special study, 2110, adopted, 2129

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, proposed orders on directives on Direct-to-Home Satellite Distribution Undertakings, authority for electronic coverage of committee proceedings, 1615, adopted, 1647-48

Marine safety

Authority to examine role of lightstations, 211, 232-34, 246

Mandate, 233

Staffing, 233

Speakers: Senators

Carney, Pat, 232, 233, 234

Frith, Royce, 233, 234

Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 234, 246

Molgat, Gildas L., 233

Study on mandate and staffing of lightstations, question for chairman, 954-55

Membership

See Journals of the Senate

Radio Canada International, authority to study implications of reduction in funding, 78, 198-200

Cuts to language services, 198, 199

Satellite technology, 199

Shortwave service, 199

Reports

1st, expenses incurred during 3rd Session, 34th Parliament, tabled, 91

See Journals of the Senate

2nd, Competition in Transportation, Policy and Legislation in Review, 583, adopted, 607

See Journals of the Senate

3rd, Radio Canada International, 583, adopted, 607

See Journals of the Senate

4th, Marine safety, 583-84, adopted, 607

See Journals of the Senate

5th, Radio Canada International, study of mandate and funding, 686, adopted, 779-82

Funding cutbacks, 780

History, 780

International broadcasting, 781

Mandate, 780

Purposes, 780

6th, Marine safety, study on mandate and staffing of lightstations, tabled, 951

7th, Marine Transportation Security bill C-38 without amdt, 984

8th, Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company amendment bill C-81, without amdt, 1774

9th, Budget, examination on Canada's international competitive position in telecommunications, 1837, adopted, 2000

See Journals of the Senate

10th, Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, proposed orders on directions on direct-to-home satellite distribution and on pay-per-view television programming, 1837, adopted, 2001-02

11th, CN Commercialization bill C-89 without amdt, 1922

Telecommunications, authority to permit electronic coverage of proceedings, adopted, 1740

Transport Canada, details of budgetary savings under 1995 budget plan, tabled, 1601

Transport, New Brunswick rail service, inquiry, 933, 961-62

Cuts to VIA Rail, 961

Dayliner from Saint John to Moncton, 962

Discount on adult fares, 961

Transport, New Brunswick rail service—Cont'd

Speaker: Senator

DeWare, Mabel M., 933, 961-62

Treasury Board, possible amendments to Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, government position, qu, 1041

Tributes

Adams, Hon. Willie, on 18th anniversary of appointment to the Senate, 1522

Barnhart, Esq., Gordon, on appointment as honorary officer of Senate, 178-81

Beaulieu, Hon. Mario, on occasion of resignation, 740-42

Bélisle, Esq., Paul C., on appointment as Clerk of Senate, 178-81

Carter, the late Hon. Chesley William, 77, 91

Chaput-Rolland, Hon. Solange, on retirement from Senate, 412-20

David, Hon. Paul, tributes on retirement from the Senate, 1158-62

Desmarais, the late Hon. Jean Noël, 2060-63

Everett, Hon. Douglas D., on resignation from Senate, 19

Fournier, the late Hon. Edgar, 447-48, 449

Frith, Hon. Royce, on resignation from Senate and appointment as High Commissioner for Canada to the United Kingdom, 839-42, 844

Hall, the late Hon. Mr. Justice Emmett M., 2263

Jalbert, the late René, 2553-54

Lang, Hon. Daniel A., on retirement from Senate, 613-17

Leblanc, the late Hon. Fernand E., 2553

Macquarrie, Hon. Health, on retirement from Senate, 718-26

Marshall, Hon. Jack

On papal citation of special recognition, 845

On retirement from Senate, 977-82

Muir, Hon. Robert, on retirement from Senate, 889-96

Neiman, Hon. Joan, on retirement from Senate, 2038-44

Pepin, P.C., the late Hon. Jean-Luc, 2064-65

Rabin, the late Yitzhak, former Prime Minister of Israel, 2194-99

Richie, the late Charles Stewart Almon, 1725, 1738-39

Rowe, the late Hon. Frederick George, 683-85

Spicer, Esq., Erik J., on retirement as Parliamentary Librarian and designation as Parliamentary Librarian Emeritus, 276-79

Sylvain, Hon. John, on resignation from Senate, 2551-52

Walker, P.C., the late Hon. David James, 2063-64

Trudeau and Our Times

Misleading information in Globe and Mail book review, st, 1157

Trudeau, Right Honourable Pierre Elliott

Congratulations on the occasion of his 75th birthday, st, 871

Tenth anniversary of resignation, st, 784

Turcotte, His Eminence Jean-Claude, tributes on nomination as cardinal, st, 910

Tweed and District Historical Society, st, 2499

Twinn, Hon. Walter P.

Aboriginal peoples, native self-government, inquiry, 689

Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, 761

Unemployment Insurance amendment (jury service) bill C-216, 1r, 1236; 2r, 1257, 1293; ref to com, 1293; rep without amdt, 1338; 3r, 1362; r.a., chap. 7, 1995, 1446

Jury duty, 1257

Speakers: Senators

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1293

Bryden, John G., 1257

Unemployment Insurance, changes to legislation respecting jury service, st, 1248

United Nations

- Fiftieth anniversary of founding, st. 1920-22, 1956-57, 2147-48
- Human rights in China, defeat of resolution, request for copy of text, qu, 2211
- International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, st. 235, 1338
- International Day of the Family, st. 448-49
- International Human Rights Day, st. 2434-35
- Nuclear non-proliferation treaty, vote on reaffirmation, government position, qu, 1599, (r) 1636-37
- Peacekeeping in Bosnia, participation in rapid reaction force, government position, qu, 1802
- Permanent Secretariat on Biological Diversity to be located in Montreal, st. 2361-62
- Possible changes to application of veto, government policy, qu, 1802, (r) 2049
- Resolution to halt nuclear testing
 - Government objection to wording in text, request for particulars, qu, 2234
 - Request for copy of offending text, qu, 2209
 - Withdrawal of co-sponsorship, government position, qu, 2208-09
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights, st. 2435-36

United Nations, Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, China, inquiry, 2110, 2236-39, 2386-89

- Canadian delegation, 2238, 2239
- Child marriage, 2237
- Children's rights, 2238
- Chinese women, 2387
- Education programs, 2237
- Female genital mutilation, 2237
- Girl child, 2237, 2238
- Inheritance, 2237
- Micro-banks, 2388
- Micro-credit programs, 2388
- Parental responsibilities, 2237
- "Parliamentary observers", 2238
- Rape in armed conflict, 2388
- Refugees based on gender-related persecution, 2388
- Sustainable economic development, 2388
- Vatican delegation, role of, 2239
- Violence against women, 2388
- Speakers: Senators
 - Cohen, Erminie J., 2386-89
 - Kinsella, Noël A., 2238
 - MacEachen, Allan J., 2239
 - Pearson, Landon, 2236-38, 2239

United Nations, International Conference on Population and Development, inquiry, 933, 1105-07, 1125-27, 1150-52

- Abortion, 1126, 1152
- Beijing Women's Conference, 1150
- Canadian Safe Motherhood Project, 1125
- "DALY Index", 1152
- Desertification, 1106
- Equity of sexes, 1106
- Family, 1106
- Family planning, 1126
- Female circumcision, 1106, 1125

Fertility awareness, 1151

- Fertility regulation, 1126
- Freedom of religion, 1125
- Over-urbanization, 1106
- Programme of Action, 1105, 1106, 1125, 1126
- "Vaccine against pregnancy", 1152
- Speaker: Senator
 - Haidasz, Stanley, 933, 1105-07, 1150-52

Unveiling of Canadian War Memorial at Green Park, London, England, guest list, tabled, 1070Use of government aircraft, tabled, 2177*Valour and the Horror, amount and terms of loans to producers, tabled, 1206*Veterans affairs

- Aboriginal veterans, request for action on report of Standing Senate Committee, government position, qu, 1728
- Benny Farm housing project, approval of CMHC proposal, st. 181-82
- Breakdown of pensionable disabilities, tabled, 852
- Canada's role in World War II, st. 481-82, 509
- Canadian veterans of Korean War, m to examine inconsistencies in recognition of service, 184
- Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, 300
 - Motion to provide site for memorial, 176, 428-31, 505-06, m in amdt, 506-07, 517-21, neg on div, 521, m adopted on div, 523
 - National Capital Commission mandate, 506, 518, 519
 - Peacekeeping, 505, 518
 - Peace Parks, 506, 519
 - Point of order, 431-33, 436-37
 - United States Embassy in Ottawa, 506, 519
 - Vietnam War, Canada's role, 505, 518
- Presentation of petitions, 250, 267, 282, 302, 354, 501, 880
- Dental care for veterans, tabled, 310
- Dieppe Raid, m to honour veterans by creating commemorative decoration, 302; m in amdt, 376-77; m in amdt adopted and motion, as amended, adopted, 377
- Disability pension applications to Canadian Pension Commission, tabled, 852
- Entitlement under War Veterans Allowance, tabled, 852
- Establishment of Memorial Gardens in Caen, France, st. 213
- Fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, st. 626
- Fiftieth anniversary of World War II battles, st. 40-41
- Financial support to veterans associations, tabled, 852
- Jewish war veterans of Calgary, unveiling of commemorative plaque, 300
- Merchant Navy Veteran and Civilian War-related Benefits Act, effect on parallel legislation, st. 248
- Particulars of Canadian Forces personnel deployed in South East Asia, tabled, 852
- Particulars of staffing, tabled, 852
- Proposed site of Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, st. 213
- Recipients of disability pensions, tabled, 852
- Recommendations to Task Force on Program Review, tabled, 765
- Responsibility for administering the Pension Act, tabled, 852
- Role of commanders and politicians, st. 509
- Shaughnessy Hospital, British Columbia, tabled, 310
- Stalag Luft III, fiftieth anniversary of "The Great Escape", st. 279-80
- Status of Canada training regulations, tabled, 852
- Veterans Independence Program, qualification of veterans, qu, 222
- Veterans' pensions and entitlements, tabled, 672
- War medals and awards, tabled, 310

Veterans Affairs Canada

- Breakdown of deployment of staff, tabled, 239
- Vacancies in Corner Brook District Office, tabled, 203

Veterans affairs, Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, inquiry, 109-10, 173-75, 193-95

- International peace parks, 194
- U.S. veterans' benefits to Canadian veterans, 194

Veterans affairs, Canadian Vietnam Veterans' Memorial—Cont'dSpeakers: Senators

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 195
Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 175, 193-94, 195
Marshall, Jack, 109, 173-75, 194, 195
Perrault, Raymond J., 194
Phillips, Orville H., 175

Veterans affairs, fiftieth anniversary of D-Day, inquiry, 354, 407-09, 507-08

Abbaye D'Ardennes, 508
Battle of Normandy Foundation, 508
Caen Memorial, 508
Canada Remembers Program, 407, 507

Speakers: Senators

Marshall, Jack, 407-09
Molgat, Gildas L., 507-08
Thériault, L. Norbert, 409

Veterans affairs, Royal Canadian Legion, inquiry, 856, 877-79, 1050

Head-dress policy, 878-79

Speaker: Senator

Macdonald, John M., 856, 877-79

Veterans affairs, status of merchant navy veterans, inquiry, 320, withdrawn, 682Speaker: Senator

Marshall, Jack, 682

Veterans Appeal Board, Order in Council appointment, government position, qu, 554Veterans Independence Program

Eligibility of veterans residing abroad, tabled, 1206
Qualification of veterans, tabled, 202

Veterans Land Administration, status of activities under Veterans Land Act, tabled, 852Veterans Review and Appeal Board bill C-67. 1r, 1649; 2r, 1663-69; ref to com, 1669; rep without amdt, 1798; 3r, 1856-59; r.a., chap. 18, 1995, 1919

Appeal process, 1664

Bureau of Pensions Advocates, 1665

Disability pension, 1663, 1664, 1857

Human cost of bill, 1665

Merging Canadian Pension Commission and Veterans Appeal Board, 1665

Minister's power, 1665, 1667

Pension advocate, 1667, 1668, 1859

Processing time, 1857, 1858

Veterans residing in England, 1669

Veterans Review and Appeal Board, 1664

Speakers: Senators

Cools, Anne C., 1663-65

Gigantès, Philippe Deane, 1669

MacDonald, Finlay, 1665-66

Phillips, Orville H., 1666-68

Thériault, L. Norbert, 1668-69

Victory in Europe

Fiftieth anniversary celebration ceremonies

Alleged remarks of Prime Minister, st, 1614

Presence of Prime Minister, st, 1630

Fiftieth anniversary celebration ceremonies in Netherlands, attendance by veterans, st, 1887-88

Fiftieth anniversary commemorating the cessation of hostilities, st, 1581

Homage to resistance movements, st, 1614

Vietnam Veterans' National Memorial, Canadian
See Veterans affairsViolence against women, st, 1335-36, 2264*Violence in society, inquiry, 1356, 1466-68, 1495-98

Child abuse, 1467, 1495-97

Crime, 1467

Delinquency, 1468

Mothers, role of, 1495-97

Speaker: Senator

Cools, Anne C., 1356, 1466-68, 1495-97, 1498

Visit of United States President to Ottawa, st, 1248Visitors

Arab Canadian Women's Association of Canada, 2371

Arafat, Dr. Fathi, Chairman of Palestine Red Cross, 932

African National Congress of South Africa, members of the, 178

Australian House of Assembly delegation, 1500

Barootes, Hon. Efstathios, 91, 434

Canadian and Manitoba Beet Growers Association, 1348

Council for Yukon Indians delegation, 1096

Czech Republic, delegation of citizens, 992

Dacquay, Louise M., Speaker of Legislative Assembly of Manitoba, 2346

de Guzman, Col. Antonio, Sergeant-at-Arms, Philippines Senate, 1659

Eloyan, Mrs. Noushing, Montreal city councillor, 917

Friuli Golden Age Group, 627

4-H citizenship seminar, 1515

Gonzalez, Mr. Roberto Robaina, Minister of Foreign Affairs, Republic of Cuba, 1354

Hungary, delegation of parliamentarians, 949

Husseini, His Excellency Faisal Abdel Qader Al, Head of Orient House and Head of the Steering Committee of the Palestine Delegation to the Middle East Peace Negotiations, 2096

Kakfwi, Hon. Stephen, NWT Minister of Justice, 1800

Maganga, Senator, First Secretary of the Senate of Congo, 2038

Matheson, John and Edith, 1204

McElman, Hon. Charles, 320, 2417

Negrin, His Excellency Bienvenido Garcia, Ambassador of Republic of Cuba to Canada, 1354

Neiman, Hon. Joan, former senator, 2211

Nikitov, Mr. Vladimir, Chief of Staff of Federation Council, Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation, 1222

Paquet, René, Chairman of Quebec 2002, 1612

Patterson, Dennis, member of NWT Legislative Assembly, 1800

Phillips, Hon. Doug, Minister of Justice, Yukon Territory, 1663

Poitras, the Hon. Jean-Marie, 434

Pullen, Mr. Barry, Parliament of Victoria, Australia, 800

Remnant, Mr. Binks, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly of Manitoba, 2346

Romania, parliamentary delegation, 2361

Russia, officials of Federation Council in State Duma, 2417

Sant, Dr. Alfred, Leader of Opposition in Parliament of Malta, 1618

Skolc, His Excellency Jozef, President of the National Assembly of the Republic of Slovenia, 2108

Slovenia, His Excellency the Ambassador to Canada, 2108

Speaker Roett of Barbados, 982

Stanley, George and Ruth, 1204

Sziengue, Mr., Executive Secretary of the Speaker, Senate of Congo, 2038

Votes

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee report

26th, Excise Tax, Income Tax amendment bill C-103, on m to adopt rep, neg on div, 2497-98

Constitutional Amendments bill C-110, Special Senate Committee report, neg on div, 2633-34

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, 3r, on div, 500

Votes

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, on m to adjourn debate, 1914; on m instructing com to table final report, on div, 2290-91

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, on m instructing com to table final rep no later than December 13, 1995, on div, 2483-84

Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, on m instructing com to table final rep no later than December 13, 1995, on div, 2484-85

Reports

2nd, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension, 1994 bill C-18, m in amdt, on div, 499, adoption of rep, on div, 499-500

8th, Pearson International Airport Agreements bill C-22, adoption of rep, on div, 816

14th, Electoral Boundaries Readjustment, 1995 bill C-69, m in amdt, on div, 2030-31; m in amdt, on div, 2035-36

16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, m in amdt, on div, 2343-44; adoption of report, on div, 2344; 3r, on div, 2345

Walker, Mr. David, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance

Borrowing Authority, 1994-95 bill C-14, considered in Committee of the Whole, 293-94, 295, 296-97

Excise Tax amendment bill C-32, considered in Committee of the Whole, 749-50, 751

Walker, P.C., the late Hon. David James, tributes, 2063-65Wars and remembrances, fiftieth anniversary of the victory in Europe, st, 1582-83*Watt, Hon. Charlie

Canadian National Exhibition, Lliquisivut, Inuit Spirit of the Arctic Pavilion, st, 1773

Firearms bill C-68, 1820-23, 1909-10

Aboriginal and treaty rights, 1820, 1821

Aboriginal hunters, 1821

Aboriginal languages speakers, 1822

Long firearms, 1821

Outfitting and tourism, 1822

Self-government, 1821

Suicide, 1910

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee report

16th, Firearms bill C-68, with 14 amdts, 2336-37

Aboriginal peoples, 2336, 2337

National unity

Indian affairs, document on post-referendum policy purportedly prepared by official, government position, qu, 2382

Presence of aboriginal peoples at Quebec Round, government position, qu, 2382, 2383

Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34, 757-58, 788

Financial transfer agreement, 758

Transfer of administration of programs, 759

Weber-Malakhov arctic expedition, tributes, st, 2009, 2013Wenman, the late Robert Lloyd, tributes, 1795-96

West Coast Ports Operations, 1994 bill C-10. 1r, 64; 2r, 64-67; ref to Committee of the Whole, 67; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Eymard G. Corbin in the Chair, Hon. Lloyd Axworthy, Mr. Michael McDermott and Mr. Robert Cooke taking part in the debate, 67-75; rep without amdt, 75; 3r, 75; r.a., chap. 1, 1994, 76

Arbitration, 65

Collective bargaining, 65, 66, 67

Costs of dispute, 65

Final offer selection, 65, 67

Layoffs, 65

Penalties for non-compliance, 65

Price of wheat, 66

Wages, 65

Speakers: Senators

Bosa, Peter, 73

Carney, Pat, 69

Corbin, Eymard G., 75

Fairbairn, Joyce, 64-66, 67, 68

Forrestall, J. Michael, 73

Gustafson, Leonard J., 66, 72

Jessiman, Duncan J., 70-71

Kinsella, Noël A., 71, 72

Lawson, Edward M., 66-67, 70

Lynch-Staunton, John, 69, 73, 74

Molgat, Gildas L., 70, 75

Olson, H.A., 72

and witnesses in Committee of the Whole

Axworthy, Hon. Lloyd, Minister of Human Resources Development and Minister of Western Diversification, 67, 68-70, 71, 72, 73, 74

Cooke, Robert, 67

McDermott, Michael, 67

West Coast Ports Operations, 1995 bill C-74. 1r, 1315; 2r, 1316-24; ref to Committee of the Whole, 1324; considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. P. Derek Lewis in the Chair, Hon. Lucienne Robillard, Mr. Pierre Hamell and Mr. James Lahey taking part in the debate, 1324-33; rep without amdt, 1333; 3r, 1333; r.a., chap. 2, 1995, 1334

Collective bargaining, 1316, 1317, 1318, 1322

Conciliation officer, 1317

Fine, 1321, 1322

Foremen, 1320, 1321

Grain, 1317

Industrial inquiry commission, 1318

International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, 1316

Mediator-arbitrator, 1318

Retiring allowances, 1317

"Side documents", 1317

Trade, 1318, 1319

Waterfront Foremen's Employers' Association, 1316

Speakers: Senators

Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1328-29

Beaudoin, Gérald-A., 1332

Berntson, Eric Arthur, 1318-19

Bryden, John G., 1322-23

Fairbairn, Joyce, 1316-18, 1324, 1333

Forrestall, J. Michael, 1321-22, 1329-30

Gauthier, Jean-Robert, 1329

Lynch-Staunton, John, 1316, 1325-26, 1327, 1330, 1331, 1332, 1333

Murray, Lowell, 1331

Olson, H.A., 1319, 1320-21, 1327-28

Prud'homme, Marcel, 1323-24, 1333

Rivest, Jean-Claude, 1327

and witness in Committee of the Whole

Robillard, Hon. Lucienne, Minister of Labour, 1325, 1326, 1327, 1328, 1329, 1330, 1331, 1332, 1333

Western Economic Diversification Canada, report of Auditor General, mandate of agency, government policy, qu, 2268-69

Western grain transportation, Crow Rate, direct payment to farmers, government position, qu, 935, (r) 1188

Winnipeg, congratulations on efforts to retain Jets Hockey Team, st, 1649
See also City of Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Manitoba, outstanding community support for the performing arts, st, 2608

Winter Olympics 2002, candidacy of Quebec City, st, 1612-14, qu, 1762-63

Women and literacy, st, 2108-09

World AIDS Day, effect on pandemic on youth, st, 2397-98

World Teachers' Day, st, 2097-98

World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation bill C-57, 1r, 1038; 2r, 1058-63, 1070-75; ref to com, 1075; rep without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 1163-64; 3r, 1164, 1170-74; r.a., chap. 47, 1994, 1177

Agriculture, 1059, 1072, 1073, 1074
Agricultural tariffs, 1060
Anti-dumping, 1060
Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC), 1062, 1063
Asia-Pacific trade, 1062
Chemicals, 1061
Communications and electronic equipment industries, 1061
Countervailing, 1061
Cultural industries, 1063
Dairy industry, 1072
Eggs, 1072
European Union and Japanese implementation bills, 1061
Financial and telecommunications services, 1061
Free trade, 1061, 1074
GATT, 1058, 1059, 1060, 1062
Global tariffs, 1058, 1060
Government procurement, 1061
Import quotas, 1059
Intellectual property, 1059, 1060, 1061
International environmental standards, 1063
International grain market, 1073
International rule-making, 1059
International trade relations, 1059
Manitoba Sugar Co., 1072
Multilateralism, 1061
NAFTA, 1062
Pharmaceuticals, 1061
Ratification and implementation, 1061
Skim milk powder, 1073
Subsidies, 1059, 1061, 1171
Sugar industry, 1071, 1072
Tariff cuts, 1171
Trade disputes, 1060
Trade in services, 1060
Trade policy issues, 1061
Trade policy review mechanism (TPRM), 1059
Trade remedy rules, 1060
Uruguay Round, 1058, 1059, 1061, 1062, 1171
U.S. tariff schedule, 1071, 1072

World Trade Organization Agreement Implementation—Cont'd

World Trade Organization, 1059

Speakers: Senators

Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1172
Austin, Jack, 1058-63, 1074-75, 1170, 1175
Bolduc, Roch, 1170-71
Fairbairn, Joyce, 1074
Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 1171-72
Gustafson, Leonard J., 1074
Lynch-Staunton, John, 1070-71, 1073
MacEachen, Allan J., 1173-74
Murray, Lowell, 1063, 1073
Olson, H.A., 1072-73, 1074
St. Germain, Gerry, 1073-74
Spivak, Mira, 1071-72

World War II

European theatre of operations, list of prisoners of war returned or repatriated to Canada, tabled, 1229
See also Second World War

Young Men's Christian Association, one hundred and fiftieth anniversary, st, 598-99

Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37, 1r, 1281; 2r, 1289-91, 1344-47; ref to com, 1348; rep without amdt but with one observations, 1798-800; 3r, 1859-70; r.a., chap. 19, 1995, 1919

Aboriginal youth, 1346
Accountability, 1862
Adult court, 1290, 1345, 1864
Age of reason, 1344, 1345
Child poverty, 1345
Community-based sentences, 1290
Community policing, 18869
Custodial sentences, 1346
Custody, 1868
Disclosure of information, 1345, 1347
Ethnic gangs, 1346
"Facts" about crime, 1862-63
Imprisonment, 1290
Information, shared and private, 1291, 1347
Jasmin report, 1860, 1862, 1863, 1864
Maximum penalties, 1290
Murder, 1346
Non-custodial sentences, 1345
Older and younger young offenders, 1290
Open or secure custody, 1290
Operation Springboard, 1866, 1868
Parole, 1290
Prevention of criminal behaviour, 1860
Primary prevention, 1860
Protection of public, 1289, 1290
Protection of young people's rights, 1289
Rehabilitation, 1290, 1344, 1345, 1346, 1859
Retention of records, 1291
Secondary prevention, 1860, 1861
Tertiary prevention, 1860, 1861
Victim impact statements, 1290-91
Violent and nonviolent crime, 1290, 1345
Violent crime, 1866, 1867
Youth courts, 1345
Youth crime crisis, 1347, 1862
Youth gangs, 1867
Youth justice system, role, 1863
Youth unemployment, 1345

Young Offenders, Criminal Code amendment bill C-37—Cont'dSpeakers: Senators

Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1344-47, 1861-66
 Di Nino, Consiglio, 1866-70
 Grafstein, Jerahmiel S., 1869
 Pearson, Landon, 1859-61
 Stanbury, Richard J., 1289-91, 1859

Youth

Employment and training, student summer employment program, qu, 355, (r) 504-05
 Employment programs, government position, qu, 504, (r) 765
 Funding of training initiatives, government position, qu, 356
 Katimavik, reestablishment of program, qu, 357-58

Youth, education and employment, st, 1711-12

Yukon First Nations Land Claims Agreement bill C-33. 1r, 751; 2r, 751-56; ref to com, 757; rep without amdt, 784; 3r, 784-87; r.a., chap. 34, 1994, 837

B.C. Treaty Commission, 756
 Champagne and Aishihik First Nations, 754
 Employment, 751
 Fish and wildlife harvesting rights, 751, 754
 Fishing branch ecological reserve, 754
 Gwitch'in Comprehensive Land Claim Agreement, 756
 Heritage protection, 754
 Hunting and fishing rights, 754
 Indian Act, amendments, 756
 Land and financial compensation, 751
 McArthur Wildlife Sanctuary, 754
 Nacho Nyak Dun First Nation, 754
 Native Agenda, 756
 Nisutlin River Delta National Wildlife Area, 755
 Old Crow Flats Special Management Area, 754
 Outfitting concession, 754, 755
 Right to buy interest, 751
 Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples, 756
 Saskatchewan Indian Nations, 756
 Teslin Tlingit Council Agreement, 755
 Vuntut Gwitchin First Nation, 753, 754
 Vuntut National Park, 754

Yukon First Nations Land Claims Agreement bill—Cont'dSpeakers: Senators

Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 785, 786-87
 Cohen, Erminie J., 756
 Di Nino, Consiglio, 786
 Frith, Royce, 756, 784-85, 786
 Lucier, Paul, 751-56, 787

Yukon First Nations Self-government bill C-34. 1r, 757; 2r, 757-61; ref to com, 761; rep without amdt, 788; 3r, 788; r.a., chap. 35, 1994, 837

B.C. land settlements, 760
 B.C. Treaty Commission, 759
 Citizenship, 759, 785, 786, 788
 Financial transfer agreement, 758
 Gwitch'in Comprehensive Land Claim Agreement, 759
 Indian Act amended, 759
 Instrumentality of political power, 760
 Kaska Nation, 787
 Law-making powers, 759
 Native Agenda, 759
 Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples, 759
 Saskatchewan Indian Nations, 759
 Subsequent claims, 759
 Supreme chief, 760
 Transfer of administration of programs, 758
 Voting rights, 760
 Yukon Surface Rights bill, 787

Speakers: Senators

Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 761, 788
 Berntson, Eric Arthur, 758-59
 Frith, Royce, 759-60, 788
 Marchand, Len, 760-61
 Twinn, Walter P., 761
 Watt, Charlie, 757-58, 788

Yukon Surface Rights Board bill C-55. 1r, 994; 2r, 1042-44; ref to com, 1044; rep without amdt but with an observation, 1093; 3r, 1093-96; r.a., chap. 43, 1994, 1177

Disputes, 1042, 1043, 1095
 Kaska nation land claim, 1043, 1044
 Land access, 1042
 Land claims, 1095
 Self-government, 1095
 Surface Rights Board, 1042, 1043
 Nomination of members, 1043, 1095
 Powers, 1095
 Umbrella final agreement, 1042, 1094, 1095

Speakers: Senators

Andreychuk, A. Raynell, 1093-94
 Berntson, Arthur Eric, 1043-44
 Lucier, Paul, 1042-43, 1093, 1094-96

THE SENATE OF CANADA
PROGRESS OF LEGISLATION
(1st Session, 35th Parliament)
Friday, February 2, 1996

GOVERNMENT BILLS
(HOUSE OF COMMONS)

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-2	An Act to amend the Department of National Revenue Act and to amend certain other Acts in consequence thereof	94/04/21	94/04/27	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/05/11	none	94/05/12	94/05/12	13/94
C-3	An Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act	94/03/15	94/03/17	National Finance	94/03/22	none	94/03/23	94/03/24	2/94
C-4	An Act to amend the Crown Liability and Proceedings Act	94/04/26	94/04/28	Foreign Affairs	94/05/12	none	94/05/12	94/05/12	11/94
C-5	An Act to amend the Customs Tariff	94/03/15	94/03/17	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/03/24	none	94/03/24	94/03/24	3/94
C-6	An Act to amend the Canada Oil and Gas Operations Act, the Canada Petroleum Resources Act and the National Energy Board Act and to make consequential amendments to other Acts	94/04/26	94/04/27	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	94/05/10	none	94/05/11	94/05/12	10/94
C-7	An Act respecting the control of certain drugs, their precursors and other substances and to amend certain other Acts and repeal the Narcotic Control Act in consequence thereof	95/10/31	95/11/07	Legal & Constitutional Affairs
C-8	An Act to amend the Criminal Code and the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act (force)	94/04/21	94/04/26	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	94/05/12	none	94/05/12	94/05/12	12/94
C-9	An Act to amend the Income Tax Act	94/04/19	94/04/20	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/04/21	none	94/04/26	94/05/12	8/94
C-10	An Act to provide for the maintenance of west coast ports operations	94/02/08	94/02/08	Whole	94/02/08	none	94/02/08	94/02/08	1/94
C-11	An Act to amend the Excise Act, the Customs Act and the Tobacco Sales to Young Persons Act	94/06/14	94/06/16	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/10/27	none	94/11/15	94/11/24	37/94
C-12	An Act to amend the Canada Business Corporations Act and to make consequential amendments to other Acts	94/06/14	94/06/16	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/06/21	none	94/06/22	94/06/23	24/94
C-13	An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and a related Act	94/04/21	94/04/26	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/04/28	none	94/05/10	94/05/12	13/94
C-14	An Act to provide borrowing authority for the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1994	94/03/24	94/03/24	Whole	94/03/24	none	94/03/24	94/03/24	4/94

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-15	An Act to revise certain income tax law amendments in terms of the revised Income Tax Act and Income Tax Application Rules	94/04/21	94/04/27	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/04/28	none	94/05/10	94/05/12	7/94
C-16	An Act to approve, give effect to and declare valid an agreement between Her Majesty the Queen in right of Canada and the Dene of Colville Lake, Déline, Fort Good Hope and Fort Norman and the Metis of Fort Good Hope, Fort Norman and Norman Wells, as represented by the Sahtu Tribal Council, and to make related amendments to another Act	94/06/14	94/06/16	Aboriginal Peoples	94/06/23	none	94/06/23	94/06/23	27/94
C-17	An Act to amend certain statutes to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on February 22, 1994	94/05/31	94/06/02	National Finance	94/06/09	none	94/06/14	94/06/15	18/94
C-18	An Act to suspend the operation of the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act	94/04/19	94/04/21	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	94/05/10	three	94/05/25	94/06/15	19/94
C-19	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1994	94/03/23	94/03/23	—	—	—	94/03/24	94/03/24	5/94
C-20	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1995	94/03/23	94/03/23	—	—	—	94/03/24	94/03/24	6/94
C-21	An Act to amend the Railway Safety Act	94/05/10	94/05/11	Whole	94/05/12	none	94/05/12	94/05/12	15/94
C-22	An Act respecting certain agreements concerning the redevelopment and operation of Terminals 1 and 2 at Lester B. Pearson International Airport	94/06/16	94/06/23	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	94/07/07	six	94/07/07
C-23	An Act to implement a Convention for the protection of migratory birds in Canada and the United States	94/06/14	94/06/21	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	94/06/22	none	94/06/22	94/06/23	22/94
C-24	An Act to amend the Canada Wildlife Act and to make a consequential amendment to another Act	94/06/14	94/06/21	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	94/06/22	none	94/06/22	94/06/23	23/94
C-25	An Act to amend the Canada Petroleum Resources Act	94/10/04	94/10/04	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	94/10/25	none	94/10/25	94/11/24	36/94
C-26	An Act to amend the National Library Act	94/05/31	94/06/01	National Finance	94/06/15	none	94/06/15	94/06/15	20/94
C-27	An Act to amend the Income Tax Act, the Income Tax Application Rules, the Canada Pension Plan, the Canada Business Corporation Act, the Excise Tax Act, the Unemployment Insurance Act and certain related Acts	94/05/31	94/06/02	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/06/14	none	94/06/15	94/06/15	21/94

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-28	An Act respecting the making of loans and the provision of other forms of financial assistance to students, to amend and provide for the repeal of the Canada Student Loans Act, and to amend one other Act in consequence thereof	94/06/21	94/06/21	National Finance	94/06/22	none	94/06/23	94/06/23	28/94
C-29	An Act to amend the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act	94/05/12	94/05/12	Whole	94/05/12	none	94/05/12	94/05/12	14/94
C-30	An Act to amend the Department of Labour Act	94/06/21	94/06/21	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	94/06/23	none	94/06/23	94/06/23	30/94
C-31	An Act to amend the Canadian Film Development Corporation Act	94/06/14	94/06/15	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	94/06/21	none	94/06/22	94/06/23	25/94
C-32	An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act, the Excise Act and the Income Tax Act	94/06/23	94/06/23	Whole	94/06/23	none	94/06/23	94/06/23	29/94
C-33	An Act to approve, give effect to and declare valid land claims agreements entered into between Her Majesty the Queen in right of Canada, the Government of the Yukon Territory and certain first nations in the Yukon Territory, to provide for approving, giving effect to and declaring valid other land claims agreements entered into after this Act comes into force, and to make consequential amendments to other Acts	94/06/23	94/06/23	Aboriginal Peoples	94/07/06	none	94/07/06	94/07/07	34/94
C-34	An Act respecting self-government for first nations in the Yukon Territory	94/06/23	94/06/23	Aboriginal Peoples	94/07/06	none	94/07/06	94/07/07	35/94
C-35	An Act to establish the Department of Citizenship and Immigration and to make consequential amendments to other Acts	94/06/23	94/06/23	Whole	94/06/23	none	94/06/23	94/06/23	31/94
C-36	An Act respecting the Split Lake Cree First Nation and the settlement of matters arising from an agreement relating to the flooding of land	94/11/15	94/11/17	Aboriginal Peoples	94/12/01	none	94/12/06	94/12/15	42/94
C-37	An Act to amend the Young Offenders Act and the Criminal Code	95/03/01	95/03/21	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/06/20	none	95/06/21	95/06/22	19/95
C-38	An Act to provide for the security of marine transportation	94/11/15	94/11/16	Transport & Communications	94/11/24	none	94/11/29	94/12/15	40/94
C-39	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1995	94/06/09	94/06/22	—	—	—	94/06/22	94/06/23	33/94

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-40	An Act to correct certain anomalies, inconsistencies and errors in the Statutes of Canada, to deal with other matters of a non-controversial and uncomplicated nature in those Statutes and to repeal certain provisions of those Statutes that have expired, lapsed or otherwise ceased to have effect	94/06/21	94/06/21	—	—	—	94/06/22	94/06/23	26/94
C-41	An Act to amend the Criminal Code (sentencing) and other Acts in consequence thereof	95/06/19	95/06/21	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/06/27	none	95/06/27	95/07/13	22/95
C-42	An Act to amend the Criminal Code and other Acts (miscellaneous matters)	94/10/05	94/10/26	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	94/12/12	six	94/12/12	94/12/15	44/94
C-43	An Act to amend the Lobbyists Registration Act and to make related amendments to other Acts	95/05/09	95/05/23	National Finance	95/06/08	none	95/06/13	95/06/15	12/95
C-44	An Act to amend the Immigration Act and the Citizenship Act and to make a consequential amendment to the Customs Act	95/02/14	95/02/22	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	95/06/14	none	95/06/15	95/06/15	15/95
C-45	An Act to amend the Corrections and Conditional Release Act, the Criminal code, the Criminal Records Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and the Transfer of Offenders Act	95/10/03	95/10/18	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/12/07	none	95/12/12	95/12/15	42/95
C-46	An Act to establish the Department of Industry and to amend and repeal certain other Acts	94/12/12	94/12/13	Banking, Trading & Commerce	95/02/14	none	95/02/15	95/03/16	1/95
C-47	An Act to amend the Department of External Affairs Act and to make related amendments to other Acts	95/02/14	95/02/22	Foreign Affairs	95/03/22	none	95/03/23	95/03/26	5/95
C-48	An act to establish the Department of Natural Resources and to amend related Acts	94/11/24	94/11/29	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	94/11/30	none	94/11/30	94/12/15	41/94
C-49	An Act to amend the Department of Agriculture Act and to amend or repeal certain other Acts	94/10/25	94/10/27	Agriculture & Forestry	94/11/17	none	94/11/17	94/11/24	38/94
C-50	An Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act	94/11/15	94/11/17	Agriculture & Forestry	94/11/24	none	94/11/24	94/11/24	39/94
C-51	An Act to amend the Canada Grain Act and respecting certain regulations made pursuant to that Act	94/12/14	94/12/14	Agriculture & Forestry	94/12/15	none	94/12/15	94/12/15	45/94
C-53	An Act to establish the Department of Canadian Heritage and to amend and repeal certain other Acts	95/02/14	95/02/21	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	95/04/06	none	95/04/06	95/06/15	11/95
C-54	An Act to amend the Old Age Security Act, the Canada Pension Plan, the Children's Special Allowances Act and the Unemployment Insurance Act	95/06/22	95/06/27	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	95/07/11	none	95/07/12	95/07/13	33/95

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-55	An Act to establish a board having jurisdiction concerning disputes respecting surface rights in respect of land in the Yukon Territory and to amend other Acts in relation thereto	94/11/29	94/12/01	Aboriginal Peoples	94/12/12	none	94/12/12	94/12/15	43/94
C-56	An Act to amend the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act	94/12/14	94/12/14	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	94/12/15	none	94/12/15	94/12/15	46/94
C-57	An Act to implement the Agreement Establishing the World Trade Organization	94/12/01	94/12/07	Foreign Affairs	94/12/15	none	94/12/15	94/12/15	47/94
C-59	An Act to amend the Income Tax Act and the Income Tax Application Rules	95/02/22	95/03/01	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/03/21	none	95/03/22	95/03/26	3/95
C-60	An Act respecting an agreement between Her Majesty in right of Canada and the Pictou Landing Indian Band	95/02/21	95/02/28	Aboriginal Peoples	95/03/22	none	95/03/23	95/03/26	4/95
C-61	An Act to establish a system of administrative monetary penalties for the enforcement of the Canada Agricultural Products Act, the Feeds Act, the Fertilizers Act, the Health of Animals Act, the Meat Inspection Act, the Pest Control Products Act, the Plant Protection Act and the Seeds Act	95/11/02	95/11/07	Agriculture & Forestry	95/11/28	none	95/11/29	95/12/05	40/95
C-63	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1995	94/12/12	94/12/12	—	—	—	94/12/13	94/12/15	48/94
C-64	An Act respecting employment equity	95/10/18	95/10/31	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	95/11/22	nine	95/12/13	95/12/15	44/95
					95/11/30 sent back
					95/12/12	none
C-65	An Act to reorganize and dissolve certain federal agencies	95/06/27	95/06/27	National Finance	95/07/11	none	95/07/12	95/07/13	29/95
C-67	An Act to establish the Veterans Review and Appeal Board, to amend the Pension Act, to make consequential amendments to other Acts and to repeal the Veterans Appeal Board Act	95/05/23	95/05/24	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	95/06/20	none	95/06/21	95/06/22	18/95
C-68	An Act respecting firearms and other weapons	95/06/14	95/06/22	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/11/20	fourteen	95/11/22	95/12/05	39/95
					95/11/22	defeated
C-69	An Act to provide for the establishment of electoral boundaries commissions and the readjustment of electoral boundaries	95/05/02	95/05/02	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/06/08	seven	95/06/08
C-70	An Act to amend the Income Tax Act, the Income Tax Application Rules and related Acts	95/06/20	95/06/21	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/06/22	none	95/06/22	95/06/22	21/95

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-71	An Act to amend the Explosives Act	95/10/17	95/10/31	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	95/11/02	none	95/11/06	95/11/08	35/95
C-72	An Act to amend the Criminal Code (self-induced intoxication)	95/06/27	95/06/27	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/07/11	none	95/07/12	95/07/13	32/95
C-73	An Act to provide borrowing authority for the fiscal year beginning on April 1, 1995	95/03/29	95/03/29	National Finance	95/03/30	none	95/03/30	95/03/30	8/95
C-74	An Act respecting the supervision of longshoring and related operations at west coast ports	95/03/16	95/03/16	Whole	95/03/16	none	95/03/16	95/03/16	2/95
C-75	An Act to amend the Farm Improvement and Marketing Cooperatives Loans Act	95/06/05	95/06/07	Agriculture & Forestry	95/06/13	none	95/06/14	95/06/15	13/95
C-76	An Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on February 27, 1995	95/06/07	95/06/14	National Finance	95/06/19	none	95/06/21	95/06/22	17/95
C-77	An Act to provide for the maintenance of railway operations and subsidiary services	95/03/26	95/03/26	Whole	95/03/26	none	95/03/26	95/03/26	6/95
C-79	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1995	95/03/26	95/03/29	—	—	—	95/03/30	95/03/30	9/95
C-80	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1996	95/03/26	95/03/29	—	—	—	95/03/30	95/03/30	10/95
C-81	An Act to amend An Act respecting the Buffalo and Fort Erie Public Bridge Company	95/06/05	95/06/07	Transport & Communications	95/06/15	none	95/06/15	95/06/15	14/95
C-82	An Act to amend the Royal Canadian Mint Act	95/06/22	95/06/27	National Finance	95/07/11	none	95/07/11	95/07/13	26/95
C-83	An Act to amend the Auditor General Act	95/11/29	95/12/06	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	95/12/12	none	95/12/13	95/12/15	43/95
C-85	An Act to amend the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act and to provide for the continuation of a certain provision	95/06/22	95/06/27	National Finance	95/07/11	none	95/07/12	95/07/13	30/95
C-86	An Act to amend the Canadian Dairy Commission Act	95/06/20	95/06/21	Agriculture & Forestry	95/06/27	none	95/06/27	95/07/13	23/95
C-87	An Act to implement the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on their Destruction	95/06/20	95/06/21	Foreign Affairs	95/06/27	none	95/06/27	95/07/13	25/95
C-89	An Act to provide for the continuance of the Canadian National Railway Company under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares of the Company to the public	95/06/21	95/06/22	Transport & Communications	95/06/27	none	95/06/27	95/07/13	24/95

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-90	An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act	95/10/18	95/10/19	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/11/07	none	95/11/08	95/11/08	36/95
C-91	An Act to continue the Federal Business Development Bank under the name Business Development Bank of Canada	95/06/22	95/06/27	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/07/11	none	95/07/11	95/07/13	28/95
C-92	An Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act	95/06/27	95/06/27	Agriculture & Forestry	95/07/11	none	95/07/12	95/07/13	31/95
C-93	An Act to amend the Cultural Property Export and Import Act, the Income Tax Act and the Tax Court of Canada Act	95/10/31	95/11/02	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/11/20	none	95/11/21	95/12/05	38/95
C-97	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1996	95/06/08	95/06/13	—	—	—	95/06/14	95/06/15	16/95
C-99	An Act to amend the Small Business Loans Act	95/12/13	95/12/14	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/12/15	none	95/12/15	95/12/15	48/95
C-102	An Act to amend the Customs Act and the Customs Tariff and to make related and consequential amendments to other Acts	95/10/31	95/11/02	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/11/29	none	95/11/30	95/12/05	41/95
C-103	An Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Income Tax Act	95/11/02	95/11/07	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/12/05	one	95/12/14	95/12/15	46/95
C-104	An Act to amend the Criminal Code and the Young Offenders Act (forensic DNA analysis)	95/06/27	95/06/27	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/07/11	none	95/07/11	95/07/13	27/95
C-105	An Act to implement a convention between Canada and the Republic of Latvia, a convention between Canada and the Republic of Estonia, a convention between Canada and the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago and a protocol between Canada and the Republic of Hungary, for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income	95/10/31	95/11/02	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/11/07	none	95/11/08	95/11/08	37/95
C-107	An Act respecting the establishment of the British Columbia Treaty Commission	95/11/29	95/12/06	Aboriginal Peoples	95/12/13	none	95/12/14	95/12/15	45/95
C-108	An Act to amend the National Housing Act	95/12/14	95/12/14	National Finance	95/12/14	none	95/12/14	95/12/15	47/95
C-110	An Act respecting constitutional amendments	95/12/14	95/12/15	Special Committee on C-110	96/02/01	three	96/02/02	96/02/02	1/96
C-116	An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1996	95/12/12	95/12/12	—	—	—	95/12/13	95/12/15	49/95

GOVERNMENT BILLS
(SENATE)

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
S-2	An Act to implement a convention between Canada and the Republic of Hungary, an agreement between Canada and the Federal Republic of Nigeria, an agreement between Canada and the Republic of Zimbabwe, a convention between Canada and the Argentine Republic and a protocol between Canada and the Kingdom of the Netherlands for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to income taxes and to make related amendments to other Acts	94/02/08	94/02/10	Banking, Trade & Commerce	94/03/15	none	94/03/16	94/06/15	17/94
S-9	An Act to amend the Canada-United States Tax Convention Act, 1984	95/03/23	95/03/28	Banking, Trade & Commerce	95/05/02	none	95/05/03	95/11/08	34/95

COMMONS' PUBLIC BILLS

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
C-207	An Act to amend the Auditor General Act (reports)(Sen. Frith)	94/06/14	94/06/15	National Finance	94/06/22	none	94/06/22	94/06/23	32/94
C-212	An Act to recognize hockey and lacrosse as the national sports of Canada (Sen. Moigat)	94/04/28	94/05/11	Whole	94/05/12	none	94/05/12	94/05/12	16/94
C-216	An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act (jury service)(Sen. Gigantès)	95/02/22	95/03/01	Social Affairs, Science & Technology	95/03/21	none	95/03/22	95/03/26	7/95

SENATE PUBLIC BILLS

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
S-4	An Act to amend the Merchant Navy Veteran and Civilian War-related Benefits Act (Sen. Marshall)	94/02/10
S-6	An Act to amend the Criminal Code (dangerous intoxication) (Sen. Gigantès)	94/11/16	94/12/01	Legal & Constitutional Affairs
S-7	Bill S-7, An Act to accelerate the use of alternative fuels for motor vehicles (Sen. Kenny)	94/12/08	94/12/13	Energy, Environment & Natural Resources	95/04/05	six	95/04/06	95/06/22	20/95
S-10	An Act providing for self-government by the first nations of Canada (Sen. Tkachuk)	95/03/30
S-11	An Act concerning one Karla Homolka (Sen. Cools)	95/10/17
S-13	An Act to amend the Criminal code (abuse of process) (Sen. Cools)	95/11/29
S-14	An Act to restrict the manufacture, sale, importation and advertising of tobacco products (Sen. Haidasz, P.C.)	95/12/07	96/02/01	Social Affairs, Science & Technology
S-15	An Act to amend the Criminal Code (plea bargaining) (Sen. Cools)	95/12/13

PRIVATE BILLS

No.	Title	1st	2nd	Committee	Report	Amend.	3rd	R.A.	Chap.
S-3	An Act to authorize General Security Insurance Company of Canada to be continued as a corporation under the laws of the Province of Quebec (Sen. Grimard)	94/02/09	94/02/24	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	94/05/25	none	94/05/31	94/06/23	50/94
S-5	An Act to incorporate the Canadian Association of Lutheran Congregations (Sen. Olson, P.C.)	94/03/23	94/04/28	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	94/06/02	three	94/06/08	94/06/15	49/94
S-8	An Act to amend the Act of incorporation of the Certified General Accountants' Association of Canada (Sen. Kirby)	95/02/16	95/03/01	Banking, Trade & Commerce
S-12	An Act to amalgamate the Alberta corporation known as the Missionary Church with the Canada corporation known as the Evangelical Missionary Church, Canada West District (Sen. Gustafson)	95/11/22	95/11/30	Legal & Constitutional Affairs	95/12/07	one	95/12/07	95/12/15	50/95

