EMPLOYEES ARRESTED

The switchman in the tower at Ninth avenue and 53rd street, Cornelius A. Jackson, was first arrested. Then Conductor J. W. Johnson and Guards Timothy Higgins, J. McDevitt, W. J. Berry and B. Clark were taken into custody. At a preliminary hearing this afternoon all the men waived examination.

EVERY AMBULANCE TO THE SCENE

The scenes following the accident were typical of all great catastrophes. Huge crowds were soon on the ground and the first of the hastily summoned police reserves was directed to clearing a way for the effective rescue of the pent up passengers remaining in the undemolished portion of the car. Every ambulance in Manhattan was called and the injured and dead were hurried away as soon as they could be freed from the wreckage or picked up from where they had fallen.

AMBULANCES AND DEAD WAGONS LOADED

Meanwhile ambulances and dead-wagons were going away in a stream freighted with the stricken ones. Some of the men of nearly every store in the neighborhood were stretched single-handed, waiting for their turn with the surgeons. A half dozen of slightly injured victims were walking aimlessly about, their clothing torn and ruined and their faces like dough. He said he didn't want to go to a hospital, but a policeman overruled his objections and hailed a wagon which was just pulling out for Roosevelt Hospital. The man with the great-eyes of scars on his jaw had to sit in the back because there was not room for him inside.

RESCUERS HAD SICKENING TASK

"Firemen, firemen and ambulance men" were the only words that were heard as the rescuers worked. Some of the men who had been in the wreck were being taken to the hospital. The rescuers had a sickening task. They were directed against the wall. For underneath it could be seen arms and legs upon a huge beam of wood which was serving for a lever. They jacked up the iron screws which the wreckers brought, until the muscles of their backs cracked under the strain.

Believing, however, that a contest may be expected soon--a belief without much warrant--the opposition has decided upon a candidate in the person Mr. Wilson. Mr. A. O. Skinner has naturally been spoken of as the probable government candidate in the event of a vacancy being created, and the opposition newspapers have already begun to misrepresent his position.

WANTED--A NEW POLICY Mr. Monk, who may be designated as Mr. Borden's first lieutenant, made a speech at Carrieville on Saturday. He was the guest of honor at a banquet there, and so speaks as a prophet having much honor even in his own district. Mr. Monk is not satisfied with the Conservative party. He demands a new policy, a new platform, a Dominion convention of Conservatives to hit upon a new party slogan.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Sept. 11.—(Special)—Arthur G. Cameron of Montague, on Saturday received the Royal Humane Association medal for conspicuous courage in rescuing Mate Gillis from drowning at Montague (P.E.I.), August, 1903. Gillis, a young lad, fell overboard from the wharf at Montague, hearing the shouts of his companions, ran down and plunged in rescuing him as he was going down for the last time. Cameron is a fine specimen of young physical manhood, standing six feet. He was a student at the Royal Military College last year. A telegram received Saturday evening by Lt. Governor McKinnon announced that the English Drake with the Bedford, Essex and Cumberland had been delayed at Newfoundland, and will not arrive here from Sydney till the 17th, not on the 11th as expected. On Saturday a football match between the Abegweits and the ships was won by the former by a score of 6 to 0. The tennis tournament was the best ever seen in Charlottetown. The Abbies' back line proved impregnable and the forwards were stronger. The Phoenix local cricket team defeated the ships in one innings by 51 to 47. The tennis tournament was won by the same men—103 to 73. The golf tournament was won by the ships by 7 to 1. It is announced that the Grand Central station in 42nd street, New York, will probably be raised to the ground within three months. Reconstruction work which cost a million dollars has been completed in only five years ago.

THE HOLLOW

H. Rider Haggard's Great Romance of the Crusades

Then another leader rose—he was one of the party who desired peace—and pointed out that this was no time to stand on scruples, for the Sultan would not listen to them in their sore plight unless the lady were delivered to him to be judged for her offence. Perhaps, being his own niece, she would in fact suffer no harm at his hands, and whether she went or not, it would be better that she should endure wrong or even death than many.

With such words he over-pressed the most of them, so that in the end they rose and went to the convent of the Holy Cross, where the patriarch demanded admission for them, which, indeed, could not be refused. The stately abbot received them in the refectory, and asked their pleasure.

“Daughter,” said the patriarch, “you have in your keeping a lady named Rosamund D’Arcy, with whom we desire to speak. Where is she?”

“The novice Rosamund,” answered the abbot, “prays by the holy altar in the chapel.”

Now one murmured, “She has taken sanctuary,” but the patriarch said: “Tell us, daughter, does she pray alone?”

“A knight guards her prayers,” was the answer.

“Ah! as I thought he has been before-hand with us. Also, daughter, surely your discipline is somewhat lax if you suffer knights thus to invade your chapel. But lead us thither.”

“The danger of the times and of the lady must answer for it,” the abbot replied boldly as he opened.

Presently they were in the great, dim place, where the lamp burned day and night. There by the altar, built, it was said, upon the spot where the lord stood to receive judgment, they saw a kneeling woman, who, clad in the robe of a novice, grasped the stonework with her hands.

Without the rails, also kneeling, was the knight Wolf, still as a statue upon a sepulchre. Hearing them, he rose, turned him about and drew his great sword.

“Well spoken; it is best,” muttered several. But the abbess answered with a smile, “The old bishop said, his face lighting up, ‘If God calls you, come to God. I will show you the road.’”

“Yes, I will come,” Godwin answered quietly. “I will come, and unless the Cross should once more call me to follow it in war, I will strive to spend the time that is left to me in His service and that of my father. But, perchance, to this end I am born.”

Three days later Godwin was ordained a priest, there in the camp of Saladin, by the hands of the bishop Egbert, who, around his tent the servants of Mahomet, triumphant at the approaching downfall of the cross, shouted that God is great and Mahomet was his only prophet.

Saladin lifted his head and looked at him. “Tell me,” he said, “what of the princess of Baalbec, whom you know as the lady Rosamund D’Arcy? I told you that I would speak no more with you of the safety of Jerusalem until she was delivered to me for the judgment of the Holy Cross, wearing the robe of a novice of that order. She had taken the sanctuary of the convent. She is there, is she not?”

“The danger of the times and of the lady must answer for it,” the abbot replied boldly as he opened.

“No, no; no; no,” said Saladin, “it shall not be. One life is asked—not two.”

“Yes, lady, both shall be given that the measure of atonement may run over, and Saladin moved to mercy. Nay, for he did not, I have lived for you, and for you I die. Yes, if they hold me by force, still I die, if need be, on my own sword. When I counselled you just now, I counselled myself also. Surely you never dreamed that I would suffer you to go alone, when by sharing it I could make your doom easier.”

“Oh, Wulf,” she cried. “You will but make it harder.”

Surely you never dreamed that I would suffer you to go alone, when by sharing it I could make your doom easier.”

“Oh, Wulf,” she cried. “You will but make it harder.”

RELIGION AND TOBACCO CONSOLE EDWARD COLE, THE HILLSBORO MAN TO BE TRIED FOR MURDER THIS WEEK IN PORTLAND--WHAT HIS CHANCES ARE

Portland, Me., Sept. 10--Edward F. Cole, the Hillsboro man who is in jail here, awaiting trial on the charge of murdering his townsman, John F. Steeves, at Falmouth, near Portland, on or about April 12 last, will know his fate in a few days. Committed by Judge Hill for trial in May, the grand jury of the Superior Court has had his case under consideration during the past week and will probably report on Tuesday, at the latest. There is little doubt of its verdict, and the probability is strong that Cole will face a traverse jury on the charge against him.

THINK FINANCIAL TROUBLES LED TO GOLDING'S SUICIDE

Former South African Soldier Found Shot in Railway Car NUMBER OF BILLS FOUND IN POCKET He Left a Peculiar Note in Room of His Boarding House--Mother Learns Awful News Through Talk of Men in Street Car.

The body of Manfred Golding, a street railway motorman, was found doubled up on the blood covered floor of a closet in an I. C. R. car near the round house about 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

A 45 calibre revolver lay beside him, and the bullet that had ploughed through his brain was on the floor after striking the wall.

That he deliberately took his life there is also reason for doubting. There are days he had been contemplating suicide. A note found in his room and certain remarks to one whom he cherished, lend support to such a supposition.

He was the son of Gilbert N. Golding, of Wickham, Queens county, and was in his twenty-eighth year. He served in South Africa with one of the late contingents, and before entering the employ of the street railway was connected with the American express company.

For the past two weeks he boarded with Mrs. Ann Killam, 24 Wellington Row, Tuesday morning last his mother arrived here from her home in Wickham en route to Hampton. The same day Mr. Golding secured leave of absence and in the evening went to Hampton, spending the following day and Thursday with his mother there.

Friday morning both boarded the Sussex express on their return to the city and between 9.30 and 10 o'clock the mother arrived at Mrs. Killam's house. But the son did not come.

MEN IN TOWN FROM FAR NORTH

Two of Peary's Number on the Eric En Route to Washington LEFT EXPLORER ON COAST OF GREENLAND Say the Roosevelt Behaved Excellently in the Ice--Eskimos Eager to Join the Commodore--Ship Now Likely Fast in Ice Until February.

The latest news concerning Commander Robert Peary and his polar expedition was brought to the city Sunday, when a couple of browned and seasoned looking men registered at the Grand Union Hotel. They were on their way to Washington to submit a report in connection with the progress the explorer had made when they saw him last at Cape Sabine, Greenland.

Pending this duty they do not desire that their names be given publicly, but they were by no means averse to narrating many facts of timely interest with respect to the Roosevelt and those on board. They were the bearers of the telegram that the commander gave the world a few days ago, saying that all was well.

"We were on board the supply ship Eric," said one, "and parted from the commander at an Esquimaux settlement near Cape Sabine called Etia. The date was August 16 and by this time the Roosevelt must be frozen in and those on board are settling down to live through the long night that will last until February. In that month the daylight will reappear and it will be then that the dash for the pole will be made."

The Telegraph's informant said Commander Peary while at Etia was somewhat concerned because of the fact that an iceberg about twenty miles in extent stretched from the settlement to Cape Sabine. He gave us his telegram just before going into that gorge on his way north, and of course we were all keenly interested in watching how the Roosevelt would behave, for it was the first ice of any consequence that had been encountered since leaving St. John's. We kept her in view, and she went through the field excellently.

The Eric preceded the Roosevelt on the late reaches of the voyage north. The former vessel went to North Star Bay, and after a brief stop continued on to Etia, with the Roosevelt a few days sail behind.

Seven marriages were solemnized in the city last week. During the same period 26 children were born here. The C. P. R. has put up signs in the Fairville yard warning people against trespassing.
