Coughs, Colds, Croup.
Allen's Lung Balsam was introduced to the public after its merits for the positive cure of such disease had been fully tested. It excites expectoration and causes the Lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; changes the secretions and purifies the blood; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect that it is warranted to break up the most distressing cough in a few hours' time, if not of too long standing. It contains no opium in any form and is warranted to be perfectly harmless to the most delicate child. There is no real necessity for so many deaths by consumption when Allen's Lung Balsam will prevent it if only taken in time. For Consumption, and all diseases that lead to it, such as Coughs, neglected Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all diseases of the Lungs, ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM is the Great Modern Remedy. For Croup and Whooping Cough it is almost a specific. It is an old standard remedy, and sold universally at 25 cents and $1.00 per bottle. The 25-cent bottles are put out to answer the constant call for a Good and Low-Priced COUGH CURE. If you have not tried the Balsam, call for a 25-cent bottle to test it.

RESTORATIONS IN ITALY.

The Mania for Clearing Out Old Parts of Famous Towns—Fierce Opposition.

The preservation of the antique character of the Italian cities seems to be of so much less importance to their inhabitants than to outsiders that it is highly probable that, if the municipalities only were to be consulted, the limits of renovation would be the ability to raise money. The power exercised by the archæological authorities is applied with as much energy as discretion, and it is quite sufficient for the ministry to be informed by any responsible person that a monument is threatened to have an inspector of antiquities sent to examine the case and stop any injury to it. In this way the scouring of the sculpture on the Duomo of Florence was stopped on the warning of The Cornhill Magazine, to the intense indignation of the bourgeois, who hoped to see the whole exterior of the church as bright as a bride cake. I was able in this way to stop the destruction of the quadrivium of Giovanni Pisano at Rieti, which was in the way of widening a street, and to stop the renovation of the pulpit of Donatello at Prato, which was already in the hands of the scraper.

The large cities have been for the last few years in a fever of sventramento, opening up—and certainly in some cases it is not only justifiable, but demanded by the most imperious sanitary considerations. In Naples, for instance, it can hardly be carried too far, as in the architecture of that city there is almost nothing worth preserving; but the fever has spread to Venice and Florence, where immense injury might be caused by the operations of a modern engineer.

The plans in Venice include a broad street from the railway station to the Piazza S. Marco, and the demolition of all the picturesque Riva from the Riva del Schiavoni to the public gardens, and the construction of fine modern buildings along the whole line. The latter part of the project brought the whole body of artists, Italian and foreign, up in protest, and, as without its artistic attractions Venice would be in a more miserable state than it is now, the clamor raised in behalf of this remnant of the old Venice which furnishes half the pictures painted there, stopped the measure in the council after it had gone through the giunta, or grand committee; but the other, for the wide street, passed without serious opposition.

It will be a satisfaction to us to know that the government refuses its consent to this invasion on the unique character of the city. Venice needs no sventramento, but it would be the better for a little cleaning in some of its historical precincts, such as the court of the house of Marco Polo, and the covered way that gives access to it from the canal, which is generally in a pestilential state. But any demolition, except for instability, would be sacrilege.

As to Florence, one is apprehensive of the effects of any touch on its time honored walls. But neither sea air nor sea tide does for it what it does for Venice, and the tendency to typhoid, which has caused trouble to its sanitary authorities and loss to its finances, demands the adoption of measures to prevent it.

What has been decided is to demolish the entire block between the Via di Porta Rossa on the south and the Via dei Cerretani on the north, the Via dei Calzaioli on the east, and the Piazza degli Strozzi on the west; to enlarge the Piazza dei Mercato Vecchio to double its present extent, reaching as far as the southern limit of the Piazza S. Andrea; then running wide streets from the Via dei Speziali to the Via dei Strozzi, Via dei Or S. Michele to Vicolo dei Strozzi, Via della Nave to the Via dei Corsi; and from the Volta dei Pecori to the Via Tornabuoni, through the Via Tentina, and across these others from the Piazza S. Maria Maggiore to the Torre de Foresi, Via dei Naccioli to the Via dei Pellicceria, and from the palace of the Arcivescovate to the Mercato Nuovo. But the houses on the Via Calzaioli and all the historic houses will remain undisturbed and all the old houses on the Via dei Porta Rossa. These will all be disengaged from the more modern incrustation in which most are hidden.

The Loggia of Vasari in the Mercato Vecchio has been taken down and will be reconstructed in the vicinity of the new fish market. The risanimento of the "center" of Florence can raise no reasonable alarm in the mind of any lover of the city, though the work of reconstruction must be carried out with great judgment to avoid the disfigurement of it. The sanitary advantages leave no room for discussion. At the same time nothing really worth preserving, historically or architecturally, will be disturbed, but will, on the contrary, be better seen by being isolated more.—London Times.

A DECADE OF HAMLET.

Famous Actors Who Impersonated Shakespeare's Masterpiece Within Ten Years.

Playgoers in New York between the years 1810 and 1821 were blessed, as playgoers have never been blessed before, in being able to enjoy and to compare the performances of three of the greatest actors it has ever been the lot of any single pair of eyes to see or of any single pair of ears to hear, to wit: Cooke, Kean and Booth. George Frederick Cooke arrived in America in 1810, and remained here until his death in 1812. Setting at defiance all of the laws of nature, society and art, he was in nothing more remarkable than in the fact that in the whole history of the drama in this country he is the only really great tragedian, old or young, who never attempted to play Hamlet here. His diary records his failure in the part in London years before; and Leigh Hunt, who praises him highly in other lines, says that he could willingly spare the recollection of his Hamlet, and that "the most accomplished character on the stage he converted into an unpolished, obstinate, sarcastic madman."

Edmund Kean first played Hamlet in New York in the month of December, 1820, Junius Brutus Booth in the October of the following year. Concerning these men and their rivalry volumes have been written; each had his enthusiastic admirers, and the Hamlet of each has become a matter of history. That Kean believed in his own Hamlet in his younger days there can be no question now, and he gave to it the closest study until the widow of Garrick induced him to alter his reading of the "closet scene," and to adopt the manner of her husband, an innovation which left him ever after dissatisfied with himself in that part of the tragedy.

Hazlitt considered Kean's kissing of Ophelia's hand, in the famous scene between them in Act III, "the finest commentary that was ever made on Shakespeare. The manner in which Mr. Kean acted in the scene of the play before the king and queen," he added, "was the most daring of any, and the force and animation which he gave it cannot be too highly applauded. Its extreme boldness bordered on the verge of all we hate," and the effect it produced was a test of the extraordinary powers of this extraordinary actor."

The younger Booth, writing of the elder Kean, comes to the defense of his father's foe in the following noble and well chosen words: "The fact that Kean disliked to act Hamlet, and failed to satisfy his critics in that character, is no proof that his personation was false. If it was consistent with his conception, and that conception was intelligible, as it must have been, it was true. What right have I, whose temperament and mode of thinking are dissimilar to yours, to denounce your exposition of such a puzzle as Hamlet? He is the epitome of mankind, not an individual, a sort of magic mirror in which all men and all women see the reflex of themselves, and therefore has his story always been, is still, and will ever be the most popular of stage tragedies."

That Edwin Booth should not have written concerning the Hamlet of his father in the same charming vein is greatly to be regretted. There are men still living who recollect the elder Booth in the part—he played it for the last time in New York in 1843—and to these it is one of the most delightful of memories. Thomas R. Gould, writing in 1868, sums up as follows his own ideas of the Hamlet of this great man: "The total impression left by his impersonation at the time of its occurrence, and which still abides, was that of a spiritual melancholy, at once acute and profound. This quality colored his tenderest feeling and his airiest fancy. You felt its presence even when he was off the stage."

This famous decade of the New York stage saw other great actors and other great Hamlets, some of whom, in point of time, preceded Kean and Booth. Joseph George Holman played Hamlet at the Park theatre in September, 1812, James William Wallack, on the same stage, in September, 1818 Robert Campbell Maywood in 1815, John Jay Adams in 1822, William Augustus Conway in 1824, Thomas Hamblin in 1825, and last, but not least, William Charles Macready in October, 1826.

Of the Hamlet of John R. Duff there is, strange to say, no record in New York, although he played here occasionally between the years 1814 and 1827. He was very popular in Boston and Philadelphia, and a writer in The Boston Centinel in the autumn of 1810 does "not hesitate to say that in some of the scenes [of 'Hamlet'], and those of no ordinary grade of difficulty, he has never been excelled on the Boston boards." His wife is still considered by certain old playgoers to have been the best Ophelia ever seen in the United States, and no account of the tragedy in this country can be complete without mention of her name. As Ophelia, in New York and elsewhere, she supported the elder Booth, the elder Kean, the elder Conway, Cooper, Payne, Wallack and other stars, and Booth wrote to George Holland in 1836 that he considered her "the greatest actress in the world."—Laurence Hutton in Harper's Magazine.

Happy Though Afflicted.

I admire a one legged man who is cheerful; a fellow with one arm who is always cracking jokes does more good than a whole battalion of whole people who generally growl at everything. I never believe that those people who are always complaining ever suffer. There is something about genuine misfortune that dries up the tongue and makes people very quiet about themselves. One of the liveliest and wittiest men I ever knew was a fellow who had only one arm. Every minute of his life was a joy to him, and you would as soon have thought of offering sympathy to a boy at play as to him. Yet I dare say he had just as much other trouble as any two armed man has. — San Francisco Chronicle.

A Very Artful Dog.

"Speaking of dogs," said a gentleman from Avondale, discussing some of the recent dog stories told by the delegate, "there is a little fox terrier owned by one of my acquaintances. His mistress thought so much of him that when he was a pup she used to bathe him every day. First she would bathe the baby, then the dog would be given his douse in the water. But she never used the castile soap, which was reserved exclusively for the baby, on the dog. He, poor animal, had to be content with ivory soap. This discrimination evidently annoyed the terrier. The other day his mistress saw him go up stairs a little before the hour for the bath.

"She followed on tip-toe to see what he was doing. She saw him go to the bath room, pick up the cake of ivory in his mouth and drop it out of the window. His mistress just previous to the bath, secured the soap and put it in her pocket. When the dog's turn in the tub came he deliberately picked up the castile soap, and wagged his tail joyously as he put it in his mistress' hand. Then she produced the ivory soap. You should have seen the poor dog. He was utterly woebegone and crestfallen. Never saw a dog look so cheap in my life."—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

PECULIARITIES OF PAINTERS.

Anecdotes of Men Who Became Famous by the Brush.

Turner, the great landscape painter, was as fond of money as he was of art, and did not hesitate to resort to a mean act to obtain it. Among other instances of extortion might be mentioned the one he practiced upon Lord de Tabley, the English nobleman, who was an amateur painter of more than ordinary ability. On one occasion he invited a large company to dinner, Turner being among the number. The host exhibited a landscape on canvass, not yet completed, and invited friendly criticism upon it. Not a few of those present volunteered remarks, but Turner took a brush and made a few slight changes, with scarcely any comment. A few days afterward the nobleman, much to his surprise, received a bill for a large sum from Turner for "Instruction in Painting." He was indignant, but preferred to submit to the extortion rather than offend the artist, and sent his check for the amount of the bill.

Protogenes, the Greek painter, was an impatient man. In painting a picture of a tired, panting dog, he met with satisfactory success, except that he failed in every attempt to imitate the foam that should have been seen on the dog's mouth. He was so much provoked over it that he seized the sponge with which he cleansed his brushes and threw it against the picture, with the intention of spoiling it. It happened to strike on the dog's mouth, and produced, to the astonishment and delight of the painter, the very effect he had labored so persistently to imitate.

The subjoined anecdote of Bouton, the French artist, illustrates how absorbed he was when he worked, as well as the good nature of King Louis Philippe. Bouton was busy one day when a man entered unannounced and stood behind him. He had his mouth full of paint brushes, did not glance up, but mumbled: "Look about if you like; don't mind me." The visitor did so, and then came back to his original position. Bouton felt annoyed, but repressed his impatience. "Well, how is everybody at home?" he asked. "Oh, nicely, thank you," was the reply. "The children are well, I suppose?" "Oh, perfectly." The visitor then began to criticise the picture; and when, after a half hour's conversation, the artist turned around, he beheld the King of France. Bouton blushed and stammered: "Sire, you are artist king enough to know that I would have lost my tint had I stopped to display the atelier to your majesty." "Yes," replied the king, "I like your reception of me so well that I mean to have that picture."

Paul Veronese, like many other painters, was given to eccentric moods and odd habits. On one occasion he accepted the hospitality of a family at their beautiful country villa. He assumed great liberties during his visit, claiming absolute possession of his room, allowing not even a servant to enter. He would not suffer a maid to make his bed, and the sweepings of his room were left every morning outside the door for her to remove. He slipped away without bidding the family good-by. On entering the room, the servant found the sheets of the bed missing, and at once reported that the painter must have stolen them. After careful search a roll was found in a corner, which proved to be a magnificent picture of "Alexander in the tent of Darius." It was painted on the missing sheets of the bed, and the artist had chosen this curious way of recompensing his hosts for their generous hospitality.

When Meissonier built his house at Poissy, a suburb of Paris, he had it torn down eight or ten times because, when completed, some detail displeased him. He built another house at Les Jardies, but forgot to put in it a staircase. He took the mistake good naturedly, and placed a ladder against the outside wall. His house at Poissy was adorned with fountains, conservatories, upholstery, statues, but not a picture by the artist hung on its walls. A lady observing this want said to him: "I see beautiful things, M. Meissonier—beautiful gardens, beautiful rooms, books, rich hangings, etc., but I see none of your own pictures." "Ah, madame," answered he, "they are too dear to allow me to keep them."—Epoch.

A Motion to "Squash."

Col. M——, commonwealth's attorney for ——county, had unbounded influence over the presiding justice of the county court under the old system. B——, a young lawyer, had been detained to defend a prisoner, and discovering what he conceived to be a fatal defect in the indictment, submitted a motion to squash. He was proceeding to sustain his point as best he could when the presiding justice, a fat old fellow, settled himself in his chair and fell asleep. The argument proceeded, and at its close "the squire" roused up, and rubbing his eyes, said, "Squash 'er."

Col. M—— was on his feet in a moment, and inquired, with much asperity:

"Do I understand this court as sustaining the motion to quash my indictment."

"Oh! No, kurnil," said the squire. "I squashes the motion to squash."—Harper's Magazine.

Well Governed.

The Chinese have a political saying which is worthy the reading even of American statesmen. It is as follows:

When is the empire well governed, and affairs go as they should go? When swords are rusty and spades are bright; when prisons are empty and grain bins filled; when the law courts are lonely, and o'ergrown with grass; when doctors walk and bakers ride. It is then things go as they ought and the state is well ruled.—Youth's Companion.

Not Infallible.

Mrs. Phondwyfe—Husband, dear, the doctor insists that if you let your beard grow you will live longer.

Mr. P.—I doubt it. At least that plan has never prolonged the life of the oyster.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Good Things Out of Place.

When you read of the marvelous feats and wonderful tricks which the magicians of the day, the Hellers and Blitzes and McAllisters, play on astonished people in the banks, on the railway trains and in the market places just for fun, don't you often wonder why they don't sometimes perform some of their good tricks on the stage, when you have paid a dollar to see them? It seems to be just as it is in everything else, singing, orating, play acting and all—the best part of the best work is done by the reporter and his easy riding fancy.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

Falling from a Height.

In reference to an annotation in The Lancet upon this subject, a medical man, formerly a sailor, states that in youth he fell from the topgallant yard of a vessel, a distance of at least 120 feet. Sensation was entirely lost during his transit through the air. It returned slightly on striking the water, sufficiently to enable the lad to strike out (being a good swimmer) and seize a life buoy. The writer thinks death would have been painless had he fallen on some hard substance, but the assertion that persons die in the act of falling is, he thinks, evidently wrong.—Medical Record.

THE WREN'S NEST.

I took the wren's nest—
Heaven forgive me!
Its merry architects so small
Had scarcely finished their wee hall
That, empty still, and neat and fair,
Hung idly in the summer air.
The mossy walls, the dainty door,
Where Love should enter and explore,
And Love sit carolling outside,
And Love within chirp multiplied,
I took the wren's nest—
Heaven forgive me!

How many hours of happy pains,
Through early frosts and April rains;
How many songs at eve and morn,
O'er springing grass and greening corn;
What labors hard through sun and shade
Before the pretty house was made!
One little minute, only one,
And she'll fly back and find it—gone!
I took the wren's nest—
Bird forgive me!

Thou and thy mate, sans let, sans fear,
Ye have before you all the year,
And every wood holds nooks for you
In which to sing and build and woo.
One piteous cry of birdish pain,
And ye'll begin your life again,
Forgetting quite the lost, lost home
In many a busy home to come.
But I? Your wee house keep I must
Until it crumbles into dust.
I took the wren's nest—
God forgive me!
—New Orleans Picayune.

Always Ready to Fish.

"I like West Virginia," said a gentleman recently. "Its physical features remind me of New England, and its vegetation is about the same, save the mountain land and rhododendron. Up around Aurora you see rough bearded men loping by on stout horses, looking for the world like some of Jeb Stuart's cavalry on a forage. In the valleys are the best farms, and they generally belong to the Amish, a strange, quiet sect of Dutch, who wear clothes fastened with hooks and eyes, entirely destitute of buttons. They are all thrifty and well to do, close at a bargain, but scrupulously honest. The records of the Lutheran church at Aurora were kept in German until within a generation. That church was established over 150 years ago. The people there about dig their coal from the hillsides, and it is cheaper to dig it than to cut wood from their own forests.

"Not one in the section I have traveled through is wealthy or has much money, yet no one suffers want. No one is ever so busy that he can't stop work and go a-fishing. The storekeeper of a little village on the Potomac used to close his place in the afternoon to go with me and fish for bass. They are all great hands to have agencies for the sale of various articles. I met several natives driving around the country, ostensibly selling fertilizers, but none that I asked was ever able to name a single customer. One old chap had a little cobbler's shop. He was a notary public and justice of the peace, was postmaster, sold shoes, ran an express business and had a dozen agencies for agricultural implements, organs, pianos, carriages and wagons, patent medicines and the inevitable fertilizer. The man who wouldn't do business with him didn't have much business."—Washington Post.

The Automatic Photographer.

The latest development of automatic machines will take the form of a self acting photographic apparatus. The ingenious contrivance, which will be offered to the public some time in December, is the invention of a Spanish genius. In outward appearance the machine is very similar to the innumerable engines for luring the humble penny from a curious public that may be seen at any London terminus. The mechanism is simple. The person to be operated upon stands on an iron plate, and duly puts his penny in the slot.

This brings into play the machinery; the cap is removed from the lens, at which the "subject" is expected to look steadily during the few seconds of exposure. Then, by a remarkably rapid process, lasting from two and a half to three minutes, the photograph is developed and ejected from the machine. The photograph is not, of course, on sensitized paper (which would require at least twenty-four hours for its development), but it is developed on a metal plate—some preparation of tinfoil probably—and is really an improved form of daguerreotype. The proprietors of the patent evidently think that "there is money in it," as they have given an order for 2,000 machines to a well known firm in West Bromwich.—St. James' Gazette.

Royal Lepers.

There is, I think, no doubt that Henry IV of England and Robert Bruce were lepers. About Henry III I am not so sure. But I have tried to discover any authority for what I am quite sure I read some years ago—but where I cannot remember—that Adelicia of Louvaine, second wife of Henry I, became a leper, and that was the real reason why, when a happy wife and mother, she left her second husband, William de Albini, to whom she was tenderly attached, and entered a convent. Miss Strickland makes no mention of it, and considers her conduct quite unaccountable.—Notes and Queries.

He Took No Chances.

"Here, sonny, hold my horse," said a gentleman to a gamin, as he alighted from a carriage the other day.

"Has he had his oats ter day, sir?" asked the boy, as he hesitated.

"Had his oats! What has that to do with it?" inquired the gentleman in surprise.

"Well, yer see, sir, de las' time I hung outo a hoss he eat de straw hat off me head, and I only got a nickel and a licking when I got home. Put up a quarter and I'll take de risk."

The boy got the quarter.—Boston Herald.

Explained.

"I see the French people call a chestnut a 'rossignol,'" said Squibsby, the funny man. "I don't see the connection, really, because a rossignol is a nightingale."

"Oh, well," replied Mrs. Squibsby, "maybe they've all heard a nightingale before."—Harper's Bazar.

A Peculiar Predicament.

Said a man to his bosom friend, who was about to get married: "I suppose I ought to wish you both much happiness; but, as I don't know the bride, I cannot congratulate you. On the other hand, as I know you only too well, I cannot congratulate the bride."—El Peru Illustrado.

More Than Its Share of Tails.

Henry Smith, of Brood Center, Conn., was in the highway on his way to his day's work in the fields, when he suddenly beheld in the road what seemed to him a curious circus. A black snake, a six footer, was curled on the ground, but instead of having a head, as the serpents Mr. Smith had been familiar with all had, this snake seemed to begin and end in tails. Eager to know the mystery of his queer construction, if possible, Smith picked up a stone and hurled it at the strange reptile. He didn't hit him, but the mystery came apart in the middle. The big black fellow had swallowed about half of another one that was nearly as large and of the same species, but instantly he disgorged him when the stone struck the ground. Both snakes were lively and slipped into the roadside wall before the man could find another missile.—Chicago Mail.

A Curious Life History.

There is a hard sandstone in Provence, interspersed with friable strata, in which burrowing insects construct their chambers. A kind of bee, the anthophorus, makes nests there and fills them with honey, on which it leaves its egg to float; then, finally, plasters up its chamber. Instead of anthophores, entirely different insects come out from these nests—sitaris, belonging to a group very remote from the bees. Let us see how they manage to substitute themselves for the legitimate proprietor of the nest.

In the autumn the impregnated female of the sitaris deposits her eggs in front of the sealed galleries of the anthophorus. The young are hatched from these eggs, and lie in front of the closed doors, and thus remain in a mass, mingled with the dust and rubbage of the place, through the winter. In the spring, such of the bees as have reached their term come out from their prison. These earliest insects are all males; but, though precocious in being hatched, they are still tender to the changes of the weather, and remain half frozen and torpid in the dust along with the young of the sitaris.

The time has come for the last to begin to act. They have been called triongulins by Leon Dufour, from the claws with which they are armed, and by which they attach themselves to the bodies of the anthophores waiting for the next stage in the conditions that favor their development. With fine weather the female anthophores come out and carry on their work of burrowing and storing up honey till the time of fecundation arrives. Then the triongulin changes its quarters from the body of the male to that of the female, where it remains on the watch for the laying of the egg, when it transfers itself to that, and with it enters the honey chamber. With it it is shut up when the anthophores closes the door of the chamber for another season.

The triongulin will not eat the honey, for it is sure death to it by drowning if it touches it. It floats on the egg and feeds upon it; when it has used up its ration, it changes its shape, as well as its habits and taste. It is an eager now for the honey as it was to keep away from it, and grows upon it till it goes through another change and becomes the sitaris, which we observe coming out from the chambers of the anthophorus. Three years of assiduous studies and investigation were required to obtain this curious life history.—H. de L. Duthiers in Popular Science Monthly.

A Photographic Romance.

A highly romantic incident occurred a few days ago at Huber's, the well known Vienna photographer. An elderly gentleman, apparently a foreigner, went to have his portrait taken, but, as he had to wait a few minutes for the usual preparations, an album of specimen photographs was handed to him. All at once the employes in the next room heard a shriek, and, hurrying to the saloon where the stranger was waiting, they found him lying senseless on the floor. When he came to himself he explained that the album at which he had been looking contained a photograph which he was convinced was that of his daughter, whom he had not seen for twenty-one years. The features were so like those of his wife that he could not be mistaken. He said that unfortunate circumstances had compelled him to leave her twenty-one years ago, at a time when his daughter was only 3 years of age.

His made every effort to find the whereabouts of his family a few years later, but had not been able to discover any trace of them. He had long since acquired the conviction that they were both dead. The photographer told him that the portrait in question was that of a teacher of the pianoforte residing in Vienna, giving her name and address. It was arranged that the stranger, Mr. M—— of New York, should call on her the next day, and in the meantime she should be warned of his intended visit. The lady turned out to be his daughter and left Vienna with her father for the United States. He is a wealthy speculator, and the poor music mistress has suddenly found herself heiress to a fortune of several millions of dollars. Mr. M——, prior to his departure, presented Herr Huber with a splendid diamond breastpin.—Cor. London Telegraph.

The Hunters' Joke.

Two local sportsmen put up a good job on a companion. When the three went gunning the two took along an old stuffed owl, keeping it hidden under the wagon seat, and during the afternoon they managed to get separated from their victim. They wired the owl securely to the limb of a tree, then regained their companion, and all three started homeward. Near the edge of the woods, close by the bogus owl, the two discharged their guns at pretended game, so as not to be expected to fire at the owl. They remarked that they wouldn't load again, they were so near out. The innocent gunner espied the owl the moment they arrived in the vicinity, and began blazing away at once at a hundred yards' distance.

After the fourth shot, fired in feverish haste, he called to the others to fire also. "Don't you see the blamed buzzard's asleep, and he won't wake till he's hit in a vital spot? He might get away while I was loading! An owl as big as that is worth a dozen partridges!" But the friends assured him of their confidence that he would bring him down at last, that it was his bird, and they would get no glory in simply assisting at the death. This seemed to inspire him with new energy, and the shots increased in frequency, and a terrible bombardment was carried on against the body of that owl. Finally the bird staggered a moment and then dropped over, but still clung to the limb with his feet and hung head down.

"He's got the toughest hold on life of any bird I ever shot!" puffed the almost exhausted hunter. "I'll soon put him out of his misery," and advancing to within fifty or sixty feet of the owl he fired the final shot, which had the effect to blow the stuffed creature's head off and to scatter several quarts of sawdust in all directions. It was then that there flashed upon the senses of the deluded gunner that a cruel hoax had been played upon him. And this feeling was confirmed when he saw his two companions rolling in the grass and screaming and yelling with laughter.—Springfield Homestead.

Ambiguous Advertisers.

A certain advertiser wanted "a young man to take care of horses of a Christian disposition;" a shop in a London street exhibited a card warning everybody against unscrupulous persons "who infringe our title to deceive the public;" on the door of an eating house in London may be read the following announcement: "Sailors' victuals cooked here;" a boarding house keeper announced that he had a "cottage containing eight rooms and an acre of land;" a dealer in cheap shoes was equally ambiguous when he counseled "Ladies wishing these cheap shoes will do well to call soon, as they will not last long;" still another advertisement announces: "This hotel will be kept open by the widow of the former proprietor who died last summer on a new and improved plan," and a manufacturing firm woker invites the public to come and see his invisible fences.—Printers' Ink.

FREDERICTON TO THE FRONT.

Those who remember Fredericton as it was a quarter of a century ago can derive some comfort from the contrast presented between its condition then and its condition to day. Fredericton at that time, although the capital of the province and nominally a city, was without many of those institutions which make cities desirable to live in. It had no railway connections and the prospects of ever obtaining any were by no means bright. From the middle of November until the middle of April communication with St. John was maintained by means of stages or sleighs, and travelling was difficult, slow, and expensive. Our merchants were handicapped in their business by having to keep six months stock of goods on hand; our manufacturing industries were few and unimportant, and the future of this city was by no means bright. This discouraging and unprogressive period has now passed away and Fredericton has emerged from its chrysalis state and become a beautiful and attractive city. The new buildings which adorn it and the greater facilities for lives of ease and comfort which its inhabitants enjoy, have made it worthy of its high position as the capital of the Province. We have already dealt with the advantages of Fredericton as a railway centre, and the opportunities which its position gives it for the carrying on of an extensive business, so that we need not enlarge further on these themes. It only remains for our people to display a reasonable amount of enterprise and intelligence to place Fredericton far in advance of any town in New Brunswick with the exception of St. John. Rapidly as Fredericton has advanced in the past it will advance still more rapidly in the future as a commercial and manufacturing centre. Faith in the future of Fredericton ought to be the first article in the political creed of every Fredericton man.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT RAILWAY.

The agitation, which is now being carried on in the province of Quebec, for the construction of a line of railway from Quebec to Montreal along the South shore of the St. Lawrence, is of interest to the people of Fredericton because it seems to be a part of the movement for a short line through Canadian territory from Montreal to Halifax. The present line from Quebec to Montreal is fully twenty miles longer than a direct line along the south shore of the St. Lawrence would be, and therefore the advantage in distance would be very considerable. It is understood that the Grand Trunk Company would be willing to undertake the construction of this railway for a reasonable subsidy and, if their plans in regard to a line from Edmundston to Moncton are carried out they will have the shortest possible line through Canadian territory to the latter point. Fredericton is now distant from Montreal about 460 miles by the Short Line through Maine. The distance from Fredericton to Montreal by the line we have indicated, following the Northern & Western to the crossing of the Moncton and Edmundston line, would probably not exceed 520 miles, every mile of which would be in Canadian territory. Should the time ever come when, owing to the withdrawal of the bonding privileges, the Short Line through Maine would be unavailable for the carriage of our goods, the line through Canadian territory would take the whole trade, and so far as Fredericton is concerned, our position as an importing or exporting point, would be but little impaired. In this view of the case the importance of the proposed railway will be readily recognized. Nor should it be forgotten that in any case an alternative line, whose competition with the Canadian Pacific will keep down freights, is almost a necessity, considering the tendency of all railways to impose excessive rates when they have no rivalry.

THE NEWFOUNDLAND ELECTIONS.

The result of the elections in Newfoundland is the greatest political surprise of the day. The people of Canada have to rely for their Newfoundland news on two or three correspondents at St. John's who seem to have been very ill informed in regard to the state of public opinion in that colony. These writers ridiculed without stint the attempt which was being made by Sir William Whiteway to overthrow the government, and declared that Sir Robert Thorburn's administration was certain to be sustained by a large majority. Their predictions, however, have been utterly falsified; the defeat of the government is perfectly startling in its completeness; to say that they have beaten horse, foot, and artillery, only expresses in a feeble fashion what has occurred. Not a single member of the government has been elected for any constituency on the island, a result almost unprecedented in the history of colonial government. The defeat of the government is attributed to two causes, the unpopularity of the bait act which prevented the islanders from selling bait to French fishermen, and the revolt of the masses against the classes who formed the mercantile ring. In this election for the first time the sufferage was extended so as to include almost every man on the island, and the voting was by ballot. The working men of Newfoundland took the opportunity of teaching a wholesome lesson to their masters and oppressors. [illegible]en in modern times have suffered more from the tyranny of capitalists than the fishermen of Newfoundland. They toiled and endured hardships and dangers in order that the capitalists who supplied them might accumulate large fortunes, which were transferred to England by those who made them as soon as they were ample enough to support an establishment on the other side of the Atlantic. Much of the poverty of Newfoundland must be attributed to this system of accumulating fortunes there which were spent abroad. It is gratifying to know that the masses have risen in their might against those who are responsible for the existence of such a system.

That the world moves is daily attested in many ways. The Victoria bridge, which was built by the Grand Trunk over the St. Lawrence at Montreal, took several years to construct it, and was regarded as such a wonder that the Prince of Wales was brought over from England to open it. Since then the art of bridge building has so advanced that in the course of a few months the Canadian Pacific Company was able to build a bridge over the St. Lawrence at Canguawaga. And now we learn that on December 1st a third bridge across the St. Lawrence will be ready for traffic. It belongs to the Canada Atlantic Company and is a mile and three quarters in length. Yet it has only taken a short time to construct, and many of our readers will no doubt hear of it now for the first time.

"A member of Parliament," who telegraphs English political news to the New York Herald, and who is a rabid tory, intimates that there is soon likely to be a break up between the tories and their liberal unionist allies. The sole point of agreement between them is opposition to Irish Home Rule, but on all other subjects their views are widely apart. The quarrel which has broken out at Birmingham is only an example of what soon may be expected to occur in many quarters.

The Cronin murder case which is being tried in Chicago is becoming intensely interesting. The authorities seem to have got hold of a very complete chain of evidence tending to incriminate the parties on trial. Probably no murder case that ever was tried in America has attracted more attention and pretty full reports of it are daily cabled to the English papers.

THE CATHOLIC CONGRESS.

Premier Mercier's Address—The Platform Adopted—What Catholics Advocate.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 12. The concluding sessions of the congress of Catholic laymen was held to-day. Hon. Honore Mercier, prime minister of Quebec, made an address. He said he regarded the special invitation extended to him to speak an honor to himself and to the neighboring country from which he came. His reference to "the recently repaired despoilment of the Jesuits by the same George the Third who had despoiled the American revolutionary fathers of their liberties and rights," was cheered again and again. The restitution act by the Quebec government, he said, will long stand an honorable act before mankind. As to the statutes of Catholics whether in Canada or the United States, the world should know that loyalty to God means loyalty to the state. (Cheers.) A resolution was adopted tendering on behalf of the congress most cordial greetings to the people of Canada, and acknowledging their warm sentiments of regard as expressed by Premier Mercier.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 12. In the Catholic congress Edmund L. Dunne, Florida, treated extemporaneously of The Right of the State in Education. His humorous digressions so caught the delegates that his time was extended over and over, by general consent. Recent events in Boston were particularly a target for his sarcasm. The committee on a platform, to-night, presented a document to the assembly which was adopted unanimously as the platform. It declared that the church must continue to support its own schools and multiply them; denounces Mormonism and intemperance; condemns Nihilism, Socialism, Communism; the heartless greed of capital; favors the amelioration and promotion of the physical and moral culture of the negro; the christian teaching of Indians by the government; advocates alliances with non-Catholics for promoting the proper observance of Sunday; favors the enactment of laws rigidly closing saloons on Sundays and forbidding the sale of liquors to minors and intoxicated persons; demands the absolute freedom of the Holy See, and that it be respected by all secular governments.

Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, closed the congress.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

How Constables Make it Impossible to Obtain a Glass of Lager in Lewiston.

LEWISTON, Me., Nov. 14. This is the first day in the history of Lewiston that it has been impossible to obtain lager beer or ale. Not a glassful is obtainable, and the newly appointed constables are doing very effective work. This casts a bad reflection on the administration of their two associates, Stubbs and Prentiss, whose duty it was to seize liquor before lax enforcement of the law was called to the attention of Gov. Burleigh, and it now looks as though the charges of bribery had foundation in fact. The result of the vigilance of the new constables proves that there has been great laxity heretofore in this direction, and the public are watching anxiously to see if this vigilance will continue. The fact that the constables obtain a commission on all liquor seized makes the matter interesting. If they persist in their present course about 300 dealers will soon be driven from the business, and this is what previous "spotters" did not do. If a chosen few are permitted to make money, or if a revival of the traffic occurs, the people will then know what is going on. The new men have demonstrated one thing, at least, that so far as Lewiston is concerned, the prohibition law, properly enforced, is not a failure at present, but a practical success.

A TERRIBLE CALAMITY.

The Village of Alton, Ont. Flooded By a Dam-Break—Two Lives Lost and a Great Amount of Property Destroyed.

ALTON, Ont., Nov. 13.—A terrible calamity occurred here this morning about 3.30 By the breaking of a mill dam at McLellan's flouring mill, a mile west of the village, two lives were lost, six mill dams and four bridges carried away, houses wrecked, and thousands of dollars worth of property destroyed. An old couple named Harris were carried away and their house swept down by the torrent. Many others narrowly escaped with their lives, being roused out of their sleep by the water rushing through their houses. At daylight the village presented a terrible appearance, streets washed into holes, sidewalks torn up, and logs and rubbish piled in the street.

Alton is a post village in Cardwell county on the River Credit, 44½ miles from Toronto, and has a population of 500 or 600. It has several saw, flour and grist mills and factories.

FROM THE COUNTRY.

News from the Districts About Us

As Reported by Our Active Correspondents.

Accidents, Personal Intelligence, and Things in General.

LOWER CANTERBURY.

Frolic — Royal Templars — Lumbering — Building—Personal—Got the Post Office Again—Observing Halloween.

LOWER CANTERBURY, Nov. 4. Our farmers have finished gathering in their crops and are laying down the sod for the next years crop.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Patterson, of Temple, had a ploughing, stone picking, and sewing frolic on Thursday of last week, in which all the ladies and gentlemen for miles around took a hand with the exception of the Shogomoc boys. who got the go by some way or another. The result of the day's work was a good lot done by both ladies and gentlemen and a social time generally.

Granite Council, R. T. of T. is steadily increasing. Their debates and general entertainment for the good of the order are very interesting.

Mr. George Kitchen of Fredericton, has a large crew of men and teams in the woods on Shogomoc waters in the vicinity of Allendale Settlement, building camps and getting ready generally for a large lumber cut of both hemlock and spruce the coming winter.

Mr. James Ritchie has about completed a fine horse stable, which will be when finished, second to none in the place.

We are pleased to welcome Mr. A. D. Gunter and wife back to Shogomoc after an absence of several months, during which time Mr. G. has been engaged as travelling salesman by Messrs. Johnston & Co.

After a long time, with a good lot of labor, we have succeeded in getting our post office back again under the name of Shogomoc, W. R. Ingraham, postmaster. Our former office, called Lower Canterbury, was withdrawn some two years since for reasons unknown to all, with the exception of the former postmaster, who was supposed to have had a hand in the business, and who moved away a few months before it was withdrawn.

Some of the people in the vicinity of Pokiok seem to have got the idea into their heads that the snow is going to be very deep this winter or something, for, in driving through that place, a couple of days since, your writer noticed a number of their gates hung up in the tops of as many maple trees as were standing near, probably, so they would not get drifted under this winter.

HARVEY STATION.

Accident—Bitten by a Dog—Improvements—Building—The Wollen Mills etc.

HARVEY STATION, Nov. 11. The weather has been very fine and the farmers have made the most of it. A very large area of land has been plough ed.

Mr. Alex. Burrell met with quite a heavy loss last week. His bay mare died. She was working on the thresher.

A little boy, son of Mr. Geo. Brown of York Mills was severely bitten by a dog a short time since. The wound was dressed by Dr. Keith who had to put in several stitches.

The N. B. R. Company have had a force of men digging a drain through the yard here. It was needed very badly. Several others are to be made. Our Board of Health officer is attending to the matter. We can boast of one of the cleanest and tidest villages in the Dominion, and, with these improvements, it will be hard to surpass Harvey Station as a health resort.

Mr. D. Holland has opened up the store in his new building.

The York Wollen Mills are turning out a great variety of homespuns, flannel all wool and union blankets, yarn and various other articles.

Mr. William Hatch of Prince William, has a large store in course of erection. It is thirty feet by sixty and will have a large hall upstairs.

The market for potatoes is very quiet, no shipments and no traders.

Parties are warned not to trespass on the land granted for school purposes in the parish of Manner Sutton." The land thus granted is occupied by the Acton school and consists of forty acres, more or less. As it contains quite a quantity of wood it is a source of temptation. Keep off.

Thanksgiving was very quiet. Everything went on as usual. No one seemed to be thankful, or at least did not show it. There was no church service.

NASHWAAK.

A Sewing Circle Organized—Taken Suddenly Ill—To Occupy His New Property.

NASHWAAK, Nov. 12. The ladies of this place have lately started a sewing circle with a large and respectable membership, the proceeds to be used in repairing the Methodist manse at Nashwaak Village.

Mrs Bell, wife of Mr. Jas. Bell of this place, was taken suddenly ill on Thursday evening last. Dr. Moore, of Stanley, was called and by the doctor's skilful treatment she is out of danger and recovering as fast as could be expected.

Mr. John A Young was taken very ill last week, which was the result of a severe cold. He is coming around again all right.

Mr. Richard Evans, of Zionville, who purchased a farm at Millville a short time ago, started with his family on Friday last to occupy his new home at that place.

UPPER HAYNESVILLE.

Injured in the Woods—Lumber Notes—Sabbath School Concert—The New Meeting House—Personal—Buying Cattle.

HAYNESVILLE, Nov. 11. Weather pleasant.

Frederick B. Morgan of this place, who has been in the woods for Hallett & Dunn, returned home a few days ago with a badly cut foot. He is progressing fovorably and expects to return in a week or two.

Nason & Sloat left with 30 men to operate for Hallett & Dunn, on last Tuesday.

The children of the Free Christian Baptist Sabbath School of this place gave their annual concert a few evenings ago. It was largely attended. It consisted of singing and recitations. The different parts were well sustained by the children. Rev. Gideon Swim, the pastor of the church for the ensuing year, delivered an address, encouraging the children in their studies, also giving advice to the Sabbath School teachers.

The building committee of the proposed new church in Central Haynesville are meeting with grand success. They have signers to the amount of $200, and have as yet called on only a few of the residents of the place.

Mr. L Inch and Mr. Wm. Wallice of Jerusalem Queen's Co., have been on an extended visit to this place. Mr. Wallice has a brother and daughter resident here. Mr. Inch, it is said was looking around for a good farm to purchase.

Mr. Cameron, of the firm of Cameron & McCarty of Fredericton, paid this section of country a visit last week. His object was to buy fat cattle. He purchased about a dozen.

SOUTHAMPTON.

An Estimable Christian Lady Goes to Her Rest.

SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 11. The death of Mrs. Ada A. Wright, wife of Mr. Arlington Wright, of this place, occurred on the 6th inst. Deceased was in the 28th year of her age. She leaves, besides her sorrowing husband, one child, and a large circle of relative friends to mourn their loss. Mrs. Wright was a worthy christian lady. The funeral was very largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. J. W. S. Young.

NORTH LAKE.

Their Fall Work Done—The New School House—In the Lumber Woods.

FOSTERVILLE, Nov. 11. Autumn weather and muddy roads.

Farmers have their fall work nearly all done and some have gone to the lumber-woods for the winter.

The new school house is nearly finished, and we are sorry to learn that the trustees purpose leaving it till spring to complete it. It is much needed and should be finished at once.

Mr. David Cropley is preparing for a large operation in the lumber woods this winter.

THE CONCEITED SINGER.

How His Pride Was Dealt with by the Cardinals at Roma.

The singer Caffarelli was perhaps the founder of the modern style of Italian song. He enchanted all who heard him, and was so overwhelmed, not only with applause, but with gold, too, that he might have purchased a duchy. In diamonds and precious stones alone he possessed over two millions. But, with his wealth, his pride, vanity and whimsical temper so increased that they bordered on insanity.

During the reign of Louis XIV Caffarelli came to Paris and sang before the king and his household. The king sent him a costly golden snuff box.

"What!" said the singer to the bearer of it, "does the king send me such a box as this? Keep it yourself; for look, I have thirty such here, all of which are worth more than that one. It is not even adorned with the king's likeness!"

"Sir," was the reply, "the king of France only sends his portrait to ambassadors."

"Ambassadors, indeed! Let him send, then, for the ambassadors to sing to him!"

The king was informed of these words. He laughed and told the story to the dauphiness, who was a devoted lover of music. She sent for the singer, did not make any allusion to his rude remark, and gave him a beautiful diamond, at the same time handing him a passport.

"It is signed by the king himself, which is a great honor for you," she said; "but you must make use of it at once, as it is only available for ten days."

Thus exiled from France, Caffarelli went to Roma. Cardinal Albani invited him to his house, and asked the noblest and most illustrious ladies and gentlemen of the city to meet him. Caffarelli promised to come, and sent the music for some of his favorite airs, which he proposed singing before them.

The evening and the hour of the concert arrive. Caffarelli does not appear. The cardinal asks for him; they find the singer in slippers and dressing gown.

"Their eminences and the first families of Roma are waiting for you," said the messenger.

"What a misfortune!" replied the singer. "I had forgotten all about it. Tell his eminence he must excuse me. I will come another time. I am not dressed, and by the time I have made my toilet the evening will be over. He must excuse me; another time!"

This answer filled their eminences with great wrath. Albani took his measures at once. The steward of his household got into a coach, and was followed by four stout horse soldiers.

"Sir," said the former to Caffarelli, when they reached his lodging, "you are to follow me to the cardinal as you are."

Caffarelli refused; the four soldiers made a movement toward him, and the steward coolly and firmly repeated his orders.

Caffarelli, quite confounded, got into the coach. On arrival, in dressing gown and slippers, he entered the brilliant salon, his companions all the time at his side; he tried by gestures, and with broken and disjointed sentences, to excuse himself. No one answered him a syllable or made the slightest movement. His stern companions turned away to the left. Caffarelli had to go also, and reached the orchestra. Here, too, was a deathlike silence. He found only his desk with the music of his airs open before him; there was not even the chair in which he was always accustomed on these occasions to throw himself back with calm conceit. When he reached the desk the orchestra struck up, and, to his horror, the accompaniment of one of his airs. He must sing, and in his anger and disgust he sang really very well.

He was loudly applauded. "Bravo, Caffarelli!" was heard on all sides.

Now there was a silence. The five fearful faces stood there again and compelled him to go into the ante room. Here the steward handed him a splendid snuff box full of gold coins, and said:

"Accept this reward of your talents from his eminence."

And now is added this quartet:

"Accept from his eminence this reward for your bad manners." And then each gave him a few heavy strokes of his whip.

As soon as the company in the salon heard the singer howling and screaming, they repeated their applause, with the cry:

"Bravo, Caffarelli! Bravo, Caffarelli!"

Next morning it was said in the city that the Cardinals were better able to make themselves respected than the king of France.—Translated from the German for The New York Mail and Express.

"Cane Mought Have Been Corn."

A traveler crossing Kansas saw for the first time a great field of sugar cane, but mistook it for Indian corn, which it somewhat resembles. Intending to be affable he said to an old farmer sitting near him in the car:

"That's a fine field of corn, sir."

"Call it corn up your way, do you?" was the response.

"Why, isn't it?"

"Well, it mought be corn, mebbe," said the farmer, with a slow smile. "It mought be corn just as our cat mought have been a rabbit the time he got shot fur one."

"How's that?"

"Well, old Tom was licking his way through the woods back of our house one day as fast as he could go, and my son Jake was out with his gun and shot him down for a rabbit. When we come to jibe Jake about it he says, says he, 'Well, I 'low he mought have showed more ears.'"

The traveler laughed heartily as he glanced again from the car window at the slender, earless stalks of sugar cane, and he laughed again as the farmer concluded:

"An' jest in the same way, stranger, that thar cane mought have been corn if it had contrived to show more ears."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Railway Bridge Assessment--Temperance Matters.

Mail Contract Awarded.

Mr. M. Ryan has been awarded the contract for carrying the mail from Fredericton to St. Marys. He is required to make twelve trips a week.

Printing the Accounts.

On account of the failure, Mr. H. A. Cropley was unable to complete in his office the printing of the city accounts for which he had the contract. His son Robin is now engaged at the job in the Reporter Office. The council last night decided to have 500 copies struck off.

To Join 'A' Company.

Lieut. Carpenter of Hamilton, Ont., is on his way to Fredericton, to join "A" Company School of Infantry. He will remain at his post until March, when he goes to Kingston to take a course at the Royal Military college with a view to applying for a commission in the Imperial Army.

Married in Winnipeg.

At Winnipeg on the 31st ult, Miss Emily F. Sayre, sister of Mrs. Pentreath, was quietly married in Christ Church to Mr. Joseph Carman, wholesale produce and commission merchant of Winnipeg. Mr. Carman was formerly of Halifax, and is a brother of Mr. Charles H. Carman of that city, and nephew of the late Wm. Carman, Esq., of this city.

Their Accounts Paid.

The contractors for the repairs on Government Lane, Messrs. Carten, Currie and Taylor, were voted the full amounts of their respective accounts at the council meeting last night. Mr. Hurley, the other contractor, was paid the amount of his account immediately upon the completion of his job; but the council was undecided, because of the unsatisfactory state of the road, as to whether the accounts of Messrs. Carten, Currie and Taylor should be paid in full.

St. John River Valley Railway.

At the organization meeting of the St. John River Railway Company, the following were elected directors: — Thos. P. Taylor, Sheffield; Hugh McLean, Salmon River; R. B. Humphrey, St. John; Wesley Vanwart, Fredericton, and J. Wesley Hoyt, Blissville. A committee was named to draft bye-laws; some business in reference to stock was transacted; and Tuesday, 18th instant, set down as the day of the next meeting in this city.

The Railway Bridge Assessment.

The railway bridge assessment was one of the matters before last night's meeting of the city council. Mayor Allen stated that he understood from the solicitor of the company that they intended to resist payment of the assessment, and advised that the council make a special case of it for the decision of the court. A resolution, authorizing the committee, appointed in the matter at the last meeting, to do this, was passed without division.

Personal.

Messrs I. U. and T. C. Miller, of Millerton are guests at the Barker House.

Conductor Risteen is back from New Brunswick, where he has been visiting his relatives. He looks well, and reports having had a good time. Fredericton and St. John, he says, look prosperous, and the province seems to be full of enterprise and progressiveness. George's host of friends and admirers are glad to see him back again.—Vancouver World.

Death of Hon. A. A. Davidson.

A telegram to Dr. McLaren, from Newcastle last evening announced the death of Hon. Allen A. Davidson, who was stricken with paralysis some days ago. Mr. Davidson was called to the bar of New Brunswick in 1840 and was appointed a Queen's counsel forty years later. He was an unsuccessful candidate for Northumberland at the general election of 1870, but represented that county in the assembly from the general election of 1874 until appointed to the legislative council in May, 1882.

He Does Fine Work.

Mr. R. Blackmer, the newly established watch maker and jeweller, has worked up quite an extensive custom in town and country. He is a skilful workman, and all orders are executed in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Blackmer has a new engraving machine, by which all kinds of lettering is done to perfection. It is the only machine of the kind in the city, and enables him to give much lower prices than people have been in the habit of paying for similar work. Mr. Blackmer's stand is on Queen Street, opposite Randolph's block.

Special Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the city council was held last evening to consider and take action on the railway bridge assessment matter; to receive and order the publication of the treasurer's annual accounts and the annual reports of the water committee; to consider the claim of the contractors for the recent repairs on Government Lane and take action thereon; to receive the report of the contingent committee and take action thereon. This last matter was deferred until next meeting. The proceedings in the others are reported under different heads. Mayor Allen presided at the meeting. Ald. Parker, McPherson, McCready, Gilman, Estey, Farrell, Richey and McKay were present.

Temperance Meetings Below Town.

The temperance party are leaving no stone unturned in their efforts to secure a majority for the Scott Act on the 28th inst. In addition to the public meetings held in the city, meetings are also being held at Morrison's Mills and Doak Settlement, by which it is hoped to influence some of the voters in those parts. The Crusaders, Messrs. Hall and Nason, conducted a meeting in the Morrison Mill school house Tuesday evening, and another one last evening. At last evening's meeting they were assisted by temperance workers from the city. To-night the Crusaders will hold a meeting at Doak Settlement.

Rev. Mr. Hinson, of Moncton, will address the mass meeting in the city hall Sunday evening.

Three Months for a Clothes Line Thief.

Yesterday morning, Mrs. Chapman, wife of Private Morris Chapman, of the Infantry School Corps, who lives on George Street, reported to Sergt. Vandine the larceny of some clothes from her clothes line. A colored man, George Hudlin had been sawing wood in the yard, and she had reason to suspect him. The officer afterwards found Hudlin at Jack Hoyt's house. He denied any knowledge of the missing property. A visit, however, to Mrs. O'Rhea's house, where Hudlin, was lodging, fixed the guilt upon him, Mrs. O'Rhea, when asked by the officer if her lodger had any clothes about, pointing him to a bundle in which the missing articles, marked with Chapman's initials, were found. Hudlin's arrest followed, and this morning, he was tried before Police Magistrate Marsh, adjudged guilty, and sentenced to three months' jail.

PROHIBITION DECLARED.

To Be a Supreme Necessity By the Moncton Convention.

The Maritime Province Prohibition Convention opened at Moncton yesterday afternoon. There are upwards of 167 delegates in attendance—104 from New Brunswick, 53 from Nova Scotia, and 10 from P. E. Island. Dr. C. A. Black of Amherst was appointed chairman and Mr. Fowler of P. E. Island secretary. After devotional exercises and remarks by the chairman there were loud calls for J. T. Bulmer, the former of the prohibition party in Nova Scotia. Mr. Bulmer spoke for half an hour with great effect. He declared that what was wanted was a reconstruction of parties in this country with the saloons on one side and the churches and temperance societies on the other.

All the afternoon was occupied in short speeches by Rev. H. S. Hartley, B. A., and Andre Cushing of St. John, J. F. Todd, of Fredericton, C. E. Knapp of Dorchester, C. R. Casey, prohibitionist candidate for Amherst, and others taking part.

At the evening session Mr. Bulmer, from the committe on prohibition, reported the following:

Whereas, There is a steady growing conviction in the minds of all right-thinking persons that the prohibition of the liquor traffic is the supreme necessity of the hour, and should be made the great aim in politics; and,

Whereas, The liquor traffic is thoroughly organized, and by reason of the revenue it gives the government and the vote and subscriptions it gives the politicians has become a vast machine in the hands of unscrupulous men for bribing, deceiving and confusing public opinion, and its prohibition is impossible without counter organization; and,

Whereas, notwithstanding the overwhelming public opinion in favor of prohibition, we will never be able to obtain it so long as separated into clubs, divisions, etc., all working to the same end but without concerted political action which, when obtained, will enable us to sweep the legalized liquor traffic out of Canada in a single campaign, and

Whereas no existing party has declared for prohibition,

Therefore Resolved, that this convention do now organize itself into a Maritime Province Prohibition Party, and take all necessary steps to complete its organization.

The resolutions were debated an hour or more, and finally passed intact. Some favored uniting with the Ontario third party, but the majority favored a party with a single plank, and that prohibition.

The convention is continuing its session to-day.

THE BALANCE SHEET

Showing How the Several Civic Departments Stand for Year 1888-89.

City Treasurer Moore's annual accounts were submitted at last night's meeting of the city council, and, on motion, were received and referred to the printing committee to be published by their direction in the annual accounts.

The balance sheet published below shows how each of the departments stands. In the first column are stated the amounts paid out for the respective departments; in the second the amounts collected on the assessments. The third column shews the indebtedness and the fourth the credit.

AN INHUMAN ACT.

How a Horse Thief in Madawaska Tried to Cover up His Tracks.

A few nights ago the barn of a man named King, of St. Leonards, Madawaska county, was entered and a valuable horse stolen. When Mr. King went to his barn the following morning he found the carcass of a horse minus the hide, feet and tail, leaving the impression that some person had entered the barn and killed the animal. The tail was found just in front of Mr. King's residence. About midnight of the night this brutal act was committed, a gentleman saw a man leading an old horse in the direction of Mr. King's residence, and the general supposition is that the man stole the valuable horse and killed the horse he had with him, and left it in the condition described. The object of the man in doing this was to take the valuable horse across the line into Maine and sell it, and to avoid being pursued, leave the impression on Mr. King that some person had entered his barn and killed the horse. The man who was seen leading the old horse through the street has been missing for some days, and as soon as he can be found he will be arrested. Mr. King was at first of the opinion that his horse had been butchered in the manner described, but now he and the great majority of the people of St. Leonard's are of the opinion that it was nothing more than a most inhuman way of attempting to cover up robbery.

Legal Assemblage at Fredericton Junction Monday.

At the Circuit Court for Sunbury Co., held on the 29th, the two civil cases entered for trial, Margaret Eliza Kelly vs. David Brown, and Margaret Eliza Kelly vs. Alfred Tracy, were on application of the defendants in both cases, postponed until the third day of December next, on account of Mr. Jas. A. VanWart, counsel for defendants, being unable through illness, to be present. Thomas Nason, Senior, a witness subpœned to give evidence at the said trials, was in attendance on the 29th ult., and on account of his advanced age, eighty-seven years, the Chief Justice ordered that his evidence be taken in the meantime. Monday the eleventh inst. was the day appointed by him for taking Nason's evidence at Fredericton Junction and accordingly the Chief Justice and the legal fraternity entrusted on the different sides went to the Junction by the noon train to take the evidence. The examination was at once begun at the American House upon the arrival of the train at the Junction and the old gentleman was subjected to a lengthy examination and cross examination by the opposing counsel which was not finished until seven o'clock in the evening, just in time to allow the Chief Justice and legal attendants to return to the city by the late train. These actions are brought for the purpose of determining the titles to certain lands at the Junction, which the plaintiff purchased and occupied for a number of years and in which she has been disturbed by the New Brunswick Railway Co. The trespasses, committed by both defendant's were, it is understood, committed by them as the servants of the New Brunswick Railway Co., who claim a superior title to the plaintiff's.

Mr. Nason's examination was chiefly bearing on the possession of the original grantors of the property now in dispute. C. E. Duffy as attorney and Geo. F. Gregory, as counsel, were in attendance on behalf of the plaintiff, and Wesley VanWart attorney and Mr. A. G. Blair counsel were representing the defendant's case.

THE CITY WATER WORKS.

Seventh Annual Report of the Water Department.

Cost of Maintenance, and Expenditure for the Year.

Some Interesting Figures--Coal Consumed and Water Pumped.

At last night's special meeting of the city council the water committee submitted the seventh annual report of the department together with the report of the superintendent, Mr. Alex. Burchill, and his statistics, etc.; also the annual report of the engineers, Messrs. Taylor and Ross. On motion the reports were received and referred to the printing committee, to be published in the annual accounts.

The Committee's Report.

The water committee's report read as follows:—

In revising the proceedings of the year the committee believe that the citizens are to be congratulated on the general satisfactory state of the department. It is true, that in the commencement of the year the idea of the committee of 1888, that the principal of compelling large consumers to pay for water actually and by measuring the same by meters, be adopted in this city, was voted down by the city council, whether wisely or not is not a question to be now discussed by your committee; but so soon as that question was settled, your committee, as bound by below proceded to fix the scale of these large consumers as near as could be ascertained according to the schedule rate established by the council. These rates have after some trouble been adjusted, and all rates up to present time settled.

In ordering the annual assessment in March last year the committee required an assessment as estimated by them of $6,000 to carry on the business of their department for the year, but the council saw fit to request that this be reduced by $720 by striking out $220 estimated as required to lay main to connect water circuit through Needham street between Regent and York streets, which work was therefore not attended to; and also the sum of $500 which was estimated as required to pay for water metres, which amount was assessed for metres in 1888 but devoted to another service of the department, and therefore was again asked for. The failure to procure this amount to meet their actual increased indebtedness, together with the fact that the amount received from taxes this year is less pro rata than any year heretofore, and that a large amount of main laying has been done in Needham street, not estimated for, has prevented the balance overdue being reduced, and the balance against the department has in fact been increased by a little over $100. It will therefore be apparent to the council that this balance must eventually be assessed, in order to meet the liabilities of the department.

Your committee however, as before stated, feel pleased in view of the above circumstances that the balance against their department has not been more largely increased. The expenses of their department for ordinary purposes have now become so clearly defined, that no effort can reduce them beyond the estimated amounts, and still maintain the service in that high state of efficiency that the public at large require.

Another matter will shortly require the consideration of your honorable board. It will be seen from the report of the engineers that certain repairs and improvements will shortly be required at the works, repairs to make good the damages caused by the natural wear and friction of the engines, and improvements, which the experience of the last few years has suggested as being required in the interest of and to protect the works. Your committee will before the ordering of the next assessment and before the meeting of the legislature have to obtain the wishes of the board, as to whether these repairs and improvements shall be attended to and, if so, whether the means for so doing shall be assessed with the annual assessment or be provided by the issue and sale of additional debentures.

In conclusion, your committee are pleased to report that there are no large outstanding bills due by their department and that all water rates due to the end of the year have been paid up.

The Superintendent's Report.

The Superintendent's report showed the total amount of the mains laid to date to be nine miles, and 4 901 ft. Two hundred and forty-one feet of four inch cast iron pipe were laid on Needham Street during the summer and 618 feet of six inch pipe on Waterloo Row between Shore and Lansdowne streets. A number of the mains frozen in the winter of 1887—88, were relaid last fall. There were only two cases where the mains were known to have been frozen last winter. A hydrant had been set this year on the corner of Waterloo Row and Lansdowne streets, and another is to be set half way between Shore and Lansdowne. A number of hydrants were lengthened to correspond with the increased depth of the mains. Five additional gates were set. Thirty-five services were laid during the year, making the total now laid 692. Of these 25 were shut off, leaving 657 in use. Attention was directed to the necessity of the city providing small hydrants for the use of the street department for street watering purposes, so as to preserve the five hydrants for the purposes for which they were intended, and to relieve the prompting machinery from the shock of suddenly opening and closing the hydrants.

The Statistics.

The statistics showed that 652,175 pounds of coal were consumed during the year. The total pumpage for the year was 166,932,207 gallons. The number of gallons pumped to one pound of coal was 256. The average daily consumption was 457 348 gallons. Average per day to each inhabitant was 65 33 gallons; to each consumer 149 gallons, and to each tap 6 5 68 gallons.

The Accounts.

The receipts from taps for the year were $6,652 87. Including water supplied for miscellaneous purposes the total receipts of the department amounted to $6,114.33. The total expenditure, as will be seen in the treasurer's balance sheet published elsewhere, was $12,954 86, but of this $5,000 were for interest on debentures and $442.48 for over-expenditure of last year, leaving $7,512.38 for the maintenance of the department for the year—$1,398.05 in excess of the revenue.

The Engineer's Report.

The engineers, Messrs. Taylor and Ross, in their report, expressed the opinion that the small boiler at the works was not of sufficient capacity for the work which might be required of it, and recommended that it be taken out and sold and a larger one purchased and placed in its position in its stead. They also recommended the purchase of an auxiliary pump to put up pressure in the mains, while the large engines and pumps are being packed or repaired.

Why They Get Sick.

The Telegraph publishes the following communication, from a Christian Scientist: Christian Scientists do not claim that they have no sickness to meet, but their claim is there is no more need of sickness than of sin; and if one is overtaken by either, it comes from a lack of understanding of the truth which our Master taught, which frees us from all error.

THE TURF.

The Wonderful Three-Year-Old Sunol Purchased by Robert Bonner.

Mr. Robert Bonner has purchased Gov. Stanford's filly Sunol, which trotted a mile at San Francisco on Saturday in 2.10½, thus displacing Axtell as the greatest three-year-old trotter in the world. Mr. Bonner already owns the Queen of the Turf, Maud S., for whom he paid the late William H Vanderbuilt the sum of $40,000, and he says that he paid more for Sunol than he ever paid for any horse. It is believed that the price is in the vicinity of $50,000. Mr. Bonner made his offer some time before Sunol made her marvelous record, and received a letter from Gov. Stanford, dated Saturday week, accepting it.

Sunol was bred and reared at Gov. Stanford's famous Palo Alto Stables. She is a dark bay filly, beautifully formed, and was foaled in 1886. She is by Electioneer, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and sire of Manzanita, 2.16; Anteo 2.16; Adair 2.17¼ Antevolo 2.17, and twenty-four others that have trotted in 2 30 or better. Her dam is Waxana by General Benton, second dam Waxy by Lexington.

In the Polo Alto's Stable's catalogue for last year is the following sentence: "Sunol will be the sensation of 1888." The prediction was verified. As a two-year-old, at her fourth appearance, Sunol trotted a mile in 2.18, and made the two-year-old record. In a race of four heats on Aug. 29 of the present year, against Lilian Wilkes, Sunol won the first in 2.21¼, but was beaten in the next three. A little later she defeated Lilian Wilkes in 2.21. 2.24½ and 2.20. On Sept. 12 she did a mile in 2.16½ and on Oct. 4 a mile in 2 13¾. Then on Oct. 11, Axtell, the great stallion, trotted a mile in 2.12 and won the three-year-old record. Gov. Stanford's ambition did not rest. On Saturday he sent Sunol for the record again. The Despatch published Tuesday, told how grandly Sunol triumphed.

Orrin Hilkok drove a running horse beside the filly. Sunol got the word at the first attempt and left the wire behind in beautiful style. Her speed from the very start was fast, but it was only by looking at the runner that one was able to notice how fast the filly was really travelling. When Marvin, who held the rains, nodded to the starter, the running mate was nearly a furlong behind. The quarter post was reached in 32 seconds, and without a noticeable decrease in speed the journey up the back stretch was begun. When the half-mile station was reached the timers' watches showed the distance to have been made in 1.05 and then it became a certainty that, barring a break, the Eastern colt's record would be badly broken. The filly, never faltering, and going true as the wind, made the turn, and started for the six-furlong mark, which was reached, as the watches showed in 1 37½. Then pandemonium broke loose as the gallant young trotter dashed down the straight. Marvin felt that he was about to drive under the string a world beater, but fearing that his charge might let down at the last moment looked around and nodded to Hikok to bring up the runner. At this the crowd yelled all the more and went fairly wild in their demonstrations to help the filly keep her courage up to the highest point. The trotter dashed on and soon dispelled all doubts as to her gameness. She came like a hurricane — so fast indeed that the thorough-bred runner could not hold the pace. At the fifteenth pole Marvin reached for his whip, poised it in the air over the head of the filly, when, with an extra burst of speed, she flashed past the judges, winner against time in 2 10½, transferring the crown of three-year-old supremacy from King Axwell to her own queenly head.

Speaking of the performance Mr. Bonner said "This makes Sunol the third fastest horse in the world, Maud S. having trotted in 2.08¾ and Jay-Eye-See in 2 10. But think of it! Maud S. made her record when she was 11 years old and Jay-Eye-See when he was 6 years old. This baby of 3 years old makes the great record of 2.10½. It is a wonderful performance. No horse has trotted as fast as this in five years. No horse ever trotted as fast as this in California before. I believe Sunol can lower Maud S.' record—as I believe Maud S. herself to be capable of beating it. I believe in thoroughbreds. This great triumph of Sunol is very significant. See how the three great horses, Maud S; Jay-Eye-See, and Sunol, are bred and related to each other. Jay-Eye-See's grand-dam is by Lexington, and Maud S's grand-dam is by Boston, the sire of Lexington. Then all three horses, too, are by the sons of Hambletonian. Harold, the sire of Maud S., is a son of Hambletonian; Dictator, the sire of Jay-Eye-See, is a son of Hambletonian, and Electioneer, the sire of Sunol, is a son of Hambletonian. I tell you, our thoroughbreds are coming to the front."

To Continue the Colt Stakes.

The Fredericton Park association has decided to continue the colt stakes inaugurated last year. The stakes will be open to colts, either trotters or pacers, that have been bred in this province, Nova Scotia or Prince Edward Island. The foals of 1888 race, mile heats, two in three in harness, is to be trotted at the fall meeting in 1890; entrance $15, $5 to be paid with the nomination on or before January 1st; $50 will be added to the entrance money and $25 additional given if the winner beats 2 54, the present track record for two year olds. The foals of 1889 race to be trotted at the fall meeting in 1891, is under the same conditions as the other.

Facts About the Moonstone.

"The word 'precious' cannot be applied to moonstones," said a well known dealer in jewelry, "because their marketable value is relatively small at all times, and is still further influenced by the decrees of fashion. For some years past we have had but few calls for moonstones, but about twelve months ago they were restored to popular favor, and will probably continue to be much used for some time to come. The stones come from India, are easily procured, and there is but little waste in cutting. They are almost invariably of a bluish white tint, the rays of the most perfect stones much resembling moonlight (hence the name), those of a less clear or yellowish hue being of but little value. When carved, the clear transparency of the stone is of course marred, but many of them are so embellished, the man in the moon being a favorite device, and a baby's face surrounded with a cap of pearls or diamonds another."

The moonstone is seldom worn alone by fashionable people, having usually an accompanying setting of diamonds or other precious stones. In response to a question the dealer added: "The largest moonstone I have ever seen was one of oblong shape about 1¼ inches in length and ¾ of an inch in width. This was set to represent a butterfly with partially closed wings of brilliantly colored stones, and was intended to be worn as a pendant. These stones are not valued by weight as others are, but simply by appearance and size, a perfectly round stone being more desirable than a flatter one and more rare.

As the moonstone is traditionally lucky, it is most suitable for souvenirs, parting and anniversary gifts, and from present indications will be much used for favors and wedding presents during the coming gay season.—New York Sun.

There's Money In It.

"How can I turn an income of $3,000 into $12,000 a year?" suddenly asked a thoughtful looking man.

"Let me see," replied an Atlanta man; "what are you doing now?"

"Nothing."

"What do you want to do?"

"Nothing—I simply want to enjoy life on my income."

"Well, I'll tell you how to practically turn your $3,000 into $12,000. Go and live in a small town thirty or forty miles from Atlanta—a town with a few rich men in it. You will find that your expenditure of $3,000 a year there will make you a nabob and your wife will be regarded as the Lady Bountiful of the place. You will be a bigger man there, and have more fun than you could on $12,000 a year in the city. Of course, you would not be confined to the country. You could make an occasional raid into the city and have a good time."

"Good idea," remarked one.

"There's money in it," said a feeble looking clerk.—Atlanta Constitution.

IMPORTANT TO MOTHERS.

HOW MANY AT THIS SEASON OF THE year feel unequal to the extra strain upon their nervous system so peculiar to spring time in addition to the worry and care of their regular family duties. After the long dull months of winter, all need some invigorating medicines, especially the delicate mother or the pale, languid, nervous daughter, whose cheek has lost its usual healthy color, and the former bright eye its lustre, and to whom life appears a burden. There is no medicine before the public to-day that has met with such success in the strengthening and building up of the delicate nervous constitution as HAWKER'S NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC.

TESTIMONIALS IN BRIEF.

A clergyman in Prince Edward Island writes "Please send me 1 dozen of your N. & S. Tonic. I find it the very best medicine I can use when my nervous system gives way."

A lady in this Province writes us: "Please send me half-dozen of N. & S. Tonic. I took two to three bottles two years ago and I found it done me more good than anything I had ever used."

A gentleman writes us: "I heartily recommend your N. & S. Tonic. My wife's health broke down last spring during house cleaning, etc., and I feel satisfied that the timely use of two or three bottle of your N. & S. Tonic saved her from a long illness." Price 50 cents per bottle.

WHY HE WEPT.

The Sad Tale of a Sympathetic Stranger and a Chronic Mourner.

He was lachrymose and callow, also young. He sat in a Grand street ferryboat and cried. The tears were not outward expressions of repentance, because he had been drinking too freely, but a sort of wet joy, such as affords some women delight at a funeral. His sobs attracted the attention of a venerable benevolent party on the opposite side of the boat. Drawn by the welling evidences of apparent grief, the benevolent party crossed over to the young man and placed a comforting hand on his shoulder, saying in a soothing tone:

"My son, unburden your heart to me. Speaking may relieve you. Have you lost a friend?"

"Y-y-yezzir."

"Perhaps it was your sister. I lost a sister when I was about your age, eh?"

"No, sir; 'tain't m' sister. She's alive. Boo, hoo!"

"It may be your father. I know what it is to lose a father's care. Tell me, my son, was it your father?"

"Yezzir, m' father's dead!"

"How unfortunate! But cheer up, my son. The darkest cloud has a silver lining. May I ask when your father died?"

Here the young man's grief became uncontrollable. The tears rained down his cheeks and excited the deepest solicitude on the part of the comforter. When the young man had pulled himself together a bit he replied:

"He died se-six years ago, sir!"

The effect was electrical. The comforter arose and looked down severely upon the weeping youth. As he moved away from the unregenerate youth with a reproving gesture he exclaimed:

"Well, it takes you a long time to get over your grief!"—New York Sun.

Blighted.

Mr. Littlejohn—Will you dawnce Miss Hesper—You'll excuse me.

Mr. Littlejohn—P'romenade Miss Hesper—Hardly. I'm so unused to carrying little ones I'm afraid I might let you drop.—Judge.

A Sad Accident.

Judge—You are charged, sir, with being the leader of a party which hunted down and lynched a horse thief. The days have gone by when citizens of this great commonwealth can thus take the law into their own hands, hence your arrest. What have you to say?

Prominent Citizen—I ain't guilty, jedge. I'll tell you how it was. We caught the feller and tied his hands and feet. Nothin' wrong about that, was there, jedge?

"No; that was no doubt necessary."

"Wall, jedge, there was a storm comin' up and we couldn't spare him an umbrella very well, so we stood him under a tree. That was all right, wasn't it?"

"Certainly."

"Wall, the clouds kept gatherin' an' the wind was purty high, and we didn't want him blown away, so we tied a rope around his neck and fastened the other end to the limb above—not tight, jedge, jest so as to hold him—and we left him standin' solid on his feet. Nothin' wrong about that, was there?"

"Nothing at all."

"Then I kin be exoused, can't I?"

"But the man was found suspended from that tree and stone dead the next morning."

"None of us had anything to do with that, jedge. You see, we left him standin' there in good health and spirits, fer we give him all he could drink when we said 'good-by;' but, you see, during the night the rain came up an' I 'spose the rope got purty wet and shrunk a couple o' feet. That's how the sad accident happened, jedge."—New York Weekly.

Beware of This!

"Laura," said the young lady's mother, not unkindly, "it seems to me that you had the gas turned rather low last evening."

"It was solely for economy, mamma," answered the maiden.

"There is no use trying to beat the gas company, my daughter. I have noticed that the shutting off the gas is always followed by a corresponding increase of pressure."

"Well, that lessens the waist, doesn't it, mamma, dear?" replied the artless girl.

And her fond parent could find no more to say.—Exchange.

Prisoner—Yes, sir; I love nature in all her radiant beauty—

Magistrate (hastily)—Never mind that now. How much money have you about you?

Skeezicks—Because it is such crewel work.—Lawrence American.

Anonymous.

Teacher—Anonymous means without a name; write a sentence showing you understand how to use the word.

Small Girl (writes)—Our new baby is anonymous.—Life.

Children's Literature.

There is a great deal of talk about the advantages that children have nowadays in regard to literature over the days of their grandparents. I am just Philistine enough to think that all the advantage is not on the side of the present generation. There is, to be sure, a great deal more attention given to juvenile books today—I should say entirely too much. I think the boys and girls who had their "Mother Goose," their "Arabian Nights," old fairy tales, Hans Andersen, old English ballads, "Robinson Crusoe," "Swiss Family Robinson," "Gulliver," Charles and Mary Lamb, and Sanford and Merton, not to mention Shakespeare, Walter Scott and Cooper, were just as well provided for as they are in these days of quantity as against quality.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

She Was Competent.

Managing Editor (to applicant)—Are you aware, madam, that the position of editress implies all manner of hard work? Are you qualified by experience?

Applicant—I am. I have been a minister's wife for ten years.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

The Editorial Burdens Which a Genius of the Press Has to Bear Gracefully.

We extract the following items from the last issue of The Arizona Kicker:

THEY WILL KNOW MORE.—A combination, calling itself the Acme Opera company of Chicago, gave a show of some sort at Reynold's hall last Friday night. No free tickets were sent to this office, and when we sent our half breed roller boy over to the manager with a note asking him why in Texas he had neglected such an important duty, he returned word that The Kicker could kick and be hanged to it. We therefore kicked. We hired Cooper's hall for the same night, gave a free dance, and the Acme Opera company opened to an audience composed of the landlord's cross eyed boy and two old half breeds who thought somebody was going to be scalped.

There's nothing mean about us. We simply want what is due to the profession, and what has been granted it from time immemorial. When an amusement combination sets out to ignore us and make us sing small, somebody will certainly hear something drop before getting to the top of the hill.

NOT SAYING A WORD.—Many of our subscribers are asking why The Kicker has nothing to say in favor of either of the local tickets now in the field. There are two reasons. First, because we were not nominated on either ticket; and, secondly, because a bigger gang of rascals were never up for office. We wanted to run for mayor. It is no use being over modest about such things. We are better fitted for the position than any other man in town. The office should have been glad to seek us. It didn't do so, and so we sought it. We should have filled the position with credit to all, but the gangs wanted a tool, and so they nominated Doc Burrows and Hank Jones to head the two tickets. Neither of these men will ever serve. Within one month we will have both of them back at Joliet to serve out their unexpired sentences.

We have been warned that we must come out and support one ticket or the other, or go to the wall. Begin your wall business, gentlemen, as soon as you please. When you down us you have got to beat a grand aggregation of newspaper, grocery, feed store, harness shop, butcher shop and knitting factory, all under one roof, presided over by one head, and each doing a fine business.

NOT JUST YET.—The Tom Cat Silver Mining company sent us a certificate of stock of the face value of $500 last week and asked us to editorially mention the fact that the mine would prove one of the greatest bonanzas of the age for investors. We can't conscientiously do it yet. We want to wait awhile and see whether we are to be assessed on the stock or not, and we'd like to hear of some one who has received a dividend. We used to take everything in silver stock that came along, and puff up their old swindles without stint, but we have made a change of base in this respect. We found that a company which would beat the public would also beat us.

THEY TOOK EXCEPTION.—Tall Bill, of the Gem Saloon; Ohio George, of the Arcade Poker Rooms, and Lovely Jim, of the Red Front Sink of Iniquity, took exception to our kindly remark in last week's issue that whisky and poker were trying to run the town, and they laid for us accordingly. On Friday afternoon we were examining the carcass of a big Jackass rabbit killed over in the gulch by Sam Andrews, and on exhibition in front of Davises' butcher shop, when the three worthies above named approached and signified their intention of cooking our goose. We had them covered by our gun in five seconds, and we held them in line with hands up for full five minutes as an exhibition. When they had been disarmed we allowed them to sneak away.

We don't claim to own this town, and we never 'set out to run it, but we propose to talk in plain English on all subjects and guard the public interests to the best of our ability. If the three parties named do not subside at once, we shall encourage a crowd to turn out with a rope some frosty evening and pull their heads chock up against a limb.

HE STILL LIVES.—A Nebraska subscriber writes to inquire if there is any other weekly published in this burg. There is. We have a chattel mortgage on everything but the red headed, cross eyed, lop shouldered coyote who edits it, and can close him up at any minute; but we let him run on in order to keep him off the town. We rather like his audacity as well. He prints 180 copies, none of which can be read on account of the poor press work, and yet he claims the largest circulation in the known world. He knows we own the very chair he sits in, but yet he devotes four columns each week to abusing us personally.

Yes, he still lives, poor old unfortunate. But we are going to give him rope for the winter. If he was bounced out he might have to run for the legislature.—Detroit Free Press.

An Early Riser.

"Pat, you must be an early riser. I always find you at work the first thing in the morning."

"Indade, an' Oi am sor. It's a family thrait, Oi do be thinkin'."

"Then your father is an early riser too, eh?"

"Mo feyther, is it? Faix, an' he roises that early that ef he'd go to bed a little later he'd mate himself gettin' up in the mornin'."—Exchange.

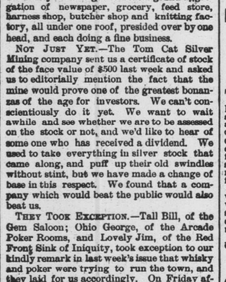
Plenty of Them.

"Who is that man you were talking to, Cumso?"

"I don't know him, Fangle; but he says he belongs to the most numerous branch of the Grant family."

"Then he is an inani-grant."—Yenowine's News.

He Demonstrated It.



"Why, Mr. Brown, what is the matter?" exclaimed a young lady as the gentleman who was calling on her leaped from his chair in intense dismay.

"Nothing; I was simply demonstrating a problem in physics for your little brother."

"A problem in physics?"

"Yes; that the points of support are sufficient to keep a pin properly bent in a given position until disturbed by some outside force superior to that of gravity."—Merchant Traveler.

Took It Literally.

"That old ballad entitled 'Remember You Have Children of Your Own' is not appreciated," said a young married man recently. "It is a pretty good fact for a young father to remember, and he cannot be too careful of his language when his youngsters are within earshot. Now the other day my little girl complained to me when I reached home that one of her young male companions in the neighborhood had called on her during the afternoon and had slyly appropriated her pet rubber ball when he left. I was indignant, and I forgot to be very careful about the language I used. I said to her: 'Don't cry, dear, but when you see him to-morrow you just nail him and ask him why he nipped your ball.' She said she would. The next morning my wife heard an uproar on the sidewalk. Recognizing our daughter's howl she ran to the window to see what was up, and she saw her rushing wildly after the kid who had pinched the ball. In one hand she held a big nail and in the other the family hammer. The boy was pointed toward his home and our girl was after him. It appeared that she had taken me literally at my word and was preparing to 'nail' her young friend before she asked for the return of the ball. No, you can't be too careful of your language before your young offsprings."—Chicago Herald.

It Was Bees' Beeswax.

A good story comes to us from the sunny south. An old darky having accumulated a considerable quantity of beeswax, came into a town to sell it. Approaching a storekeeper, he said to him: "Massa, want to buy some beeswax today?"

"Beeswax, Sambo? Well, I don't know, what sort of beeswax is it?"

With a look of inexpressible disgust, the darky answered, as he turned on his heel: "Why, bees' beeswax, yer blasted fool."—Yenowine's News.

THE various popular plans of the "NORTH AMERICAN," embracing Life, Return Premium, Endowment, Tontine, Semi-Tontine and Commercial Plan, have proved so acceptable to the insuring public, that the Company can to-day present a showing unequalled by any other home Company at the same period of its existence, and its progressive record and sound financial standing, coupled with its prompt and satisfactory settlement of death claims, are the recommendations which this Company offers for public patronage.

The Company's rates are, according to their various plans, so arranged as to suit the convenience of all, as by the commercial plan insurance is given at the actual cost, while by the endowment and tontine the attractive investment feature is combined with insurance.

THE ANTI-SWEAR CUFF BUTTON. (AUTOMATIC.)

We wish to call your attention to our Anti-Swear Cuff Buttons, of which we carry a full assortment in stock of both Gold and Plated. The action of this button is entirely new and different from any other in the market. A few of its advantages are as follows:

FIRST.—It is the only button having a regular shoe which closes itself automatically when inserted in the cuff and opens itself when taken out.

SECOND.—It has short posts so that it will not rattle or shake in the cuff, but holds it firmly.

THIRD.—There are no steel or composition springs to get out of order.

FOURTH.—WE WARRANT EVERY PAIR.

ODDS AND ENDS

"I must be careful and not go too far with Longfellow; it may lead to disaster,' said Carrie, half musing to herself. 'Why so?' said Annie; 'has he proposed?' 'Oh, no; he merely asked me if I thought I could get along with two dresses a year.'

WEALTH CANNOT BUY IT.—Health is not purchasable. The sallow, sour dyspeptic, or the bilious billionaire suffer, despite their wealth. Burdock Blood Bitters is a rational remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, scrofula, debility, etc., and every complaint arising from indigestion or bad blood.

"Well Sarah, what have you been doing to make you look so young?" "Oh nothing I've only been using Hall's Hair Renewer to restore the color of my hair.'

FOUND AT LAST.—For many years I suffered from croup but at last found a remedy for it in Hagyard's Yellow Oil, so that: I am now free from croup entirely, and recommend Yellow Oil to all others who suffer from the same disease.

MAGGIE MCLEOD.
Severn Bridge, Ont

Moore—"Did you save as much money as you thought you would by spending the summer in the country?" Poore (with a hard, bitter laugh)—"Save money! Why, man, my wife has put up sixty jars of preserves!"

IRRITABLE PEOPLE.—People are often irritable by reason of some exasperating skin disease which destroys comfort and good humor. Salt Rheum, nettle rash, erysipelas, pimples, scald head, etc., are of this nature, they arise from bad blood, and can be cured by using Burdock Blood Bitters according to directions.

Lawbreaker—"Sambo, would a ten dollar gold piece stop your mouth?" Sambo—"It might, Boss, but I'se powerful feared it ud leak roun' de sidges—you bettah try a twenty."

HINTS FOR WINTER.—When attacked by a cough or cold, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis, croup or influenza, the successful experience of thousands of families who have used it regularly for all such troubles during many years, suggests the use of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam—the old, reliable household favorite.

Rev. Mr. Primrose—"Those two brothers afford a fine text for a sermon. All their lives they have helped each other along." Geewilkins—"So I should judge. The one is a confectioner and the other a dentist."

A CORRUPT SYSTEM.—Bad blood may corrupt the entire system and cause scrofulous sores, swellings, ulcers, salt rheum, erysipelas, sore eyes and skin diseases, as shingles, tetter, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies the blood and cleanses, tones and strengthens the entire system.

Badger (mad and excited)—"Say, your dog ate up seven of my hens last night. What are you going to do about it?" McGall—"Well, if it don't make the dog sick I won't do anything about it."

THIRTY YEARS AGO.—Over 30 years ago there was placed upon the market a remedy designed to relieve pain and capable of either external or internal use. From the first it has had wonderful success, and hundreds testify that Hagyard's Yellow Oil cures rheumatism, sore throat, sprains, croup, cuts, bruises and all pains and aches.

Tommy—"I knew you was coming, Mr. Bald." Mr. Bald—"How did you know it, Tommy?" Tommy—"Cause Clara always makes her cheeks red when you're coming."

Our Girls as Successful Women.

A wealthy woman recently gave $200,000 to establish a summer resort for poor mothers and their children. Good for her; this is only one instance among thousands where woman has conceived and executed grand ideas. Women are rapidly entering every branch of the useful arts, and aspiring to every money-making employment. "What shall we do with our girls" is no longer a mighty problem for mothers and fathers to solve. Some one has said "It takes a woman to set a hen;" and so it does. The most successful poultry raisers are women. We have in mind a woman who has for years raised finer poultry and got more eggs from her hens at less expense, than her male neighbors,—practical men too. Let your girls engage in the poulty industry as many are doing. Give them a fair share of the profits, and they will soon convince their fathers that girls are mighty handy persons to have about the old home. With the aid now offered any person can make hens lay even in cold weather. Out of the twenty-four gold coin premiums offered last winter for best results, one third were won by the women who use Sheridan's Condition Powder to make hens lay. For example Mrs. Henry Barker, Holliston, Mass., won $10 and got from 18 hens during the three months' trial, 1359 eggs; Mrs. L. J. Wilson, Northboro, Mass., got 3243 eggs from 100 hens; Mrs. Edwin Brown, East Greenwich, R. I., from 35 hens got 2454 eggs; Mrs. E. Bartley, Freeport, Pa., got 2029 eggs from 22 hens; Miss Ada L. Rose of Mt. Sterling, Ill., from 15 hens got 886 eggs; and Miss Maggie Croushorn of Ottobine, Va., got 2000 eggs from 30 hens; each of the last five ladies also won a $5 00 premium from I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass. Every person who sends this firm now $1.20 for a can of Powder, and desires it, can have his name entered as a competitor, if the premiums are again offered. For 50 cts., they will send two 25 cent packs of Powder; for $1.00 five packs postpaid; six cans for $5 00, express paid; a large can of powder, also one year's subscription to Farm-Poultry monthly, both sent post-paid for $1.50. Sample copy of paper 5 cts. Send stamps or cash. Testimonials sent free.
