POETRY.

Lend a Hand.

Lend a hand to an erring brother,
Stand not aloof and harshly blame,
Priding yourself with many another
That you are free from his sin and — shame —
Go not away to your silent chamber,
And make long prayers for a friend
gone wrong,
Deeds will avail more than all your praying
Of tongue-made prayers, he they ever so long.

Love and gentleness form the lever
By which the fallen one is raised,
Rebukes and scorn will answer never,
Nor studied lectures paraphrased:
A few low words in kindness spoken,
A civil nod and a kindly smile
Have far more weight in humanity's balance.

Than ever a massive golden pile,
Then lend a hand to your erring brother,
Whether of high or low degree,
For God ordained that to each other Men as brothers should live and be;
There is too much caste in this brief
earth-bondage,
Too much of Dives and Lazarus played —
Too few smiles and words of kindness,
And oft too many long prayers made.
— Edwin B. Love.

SELECT STORY.

A Life for a Love.

BY L. T. MEADE.

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

"I want you to love him, Gerry; I want you to feel for him a little bit, as I do, as if he were the first of men, you understand. Don't you think you could try? I wish you would."

"You see I have my own father, darling."

"Oh yes, but really now—the rector is a nice old man, but Gerry, if you were to speak from your inmost heart, without any prejudice, you know; if you could detach from your mind the fact that you are the son of the rector, you would not compare them, Gerry, you could not."

"As you say, Valentine, I could not. They stand on different pedestals. Now let us change the subject. So you are the happy possessor of a thousand a year."

"We both possess that income, Gerry. Is not it sweet of father—he felt for me at once. He said he was proud of me, that I was going to make a capital wife—he said you were a lucky fellow, Gerry."

"Yes, darling, so I am, so I am."

"Then he spoke of a thousand a year to begin with. He mentioned a lot more, but he said a thousand was an income on which I might begin to learn to save. And he gave me a cheque for the first quarter to-night. He said we had better open a banking account. As soon as we get in, I'm going to give you the cheque, I'm afraid to keep it. Father said we might open a separate account in his bank."

"My father has always banked at the Westminster," said Gerry. "It would suit me best to take the money there."

They had reached the house by this time. Gerry opened the door with a latch-key, and the two went into the pretty, cosy drawing-room. Valentine threw off her white fur wrap, and sank down into an easy-chair. Her dinner dress was white, and made in a very simple girlish fashion—her hair, which was always short and curled in little rings about her head and face, added to the extreme youth of her appearance. She raised her eyes to her husband, who stood by the mantel-piece. The expression she wore was that of a happy, excited, half-spoiled child, a creature who had been somebody's darling from her birth. This was the predominating expression of her face, and yet—and yet—Gerry seemed to read something more in the gaze of the sweet eyes-to-night; a question was half coming into them, the dawn of a possible awakening might even be discerned in them.

"My darling," he said, suddenly coming up to her, putting his arm about her, and kissing her with passion, "I love you better than my life—better—better than my hope of heaven. Can you love me a little, Valentine—just a little?"

"I do love you, Gerry." But she spoke quietly, and without any answering fire.

His arms dropped, the enthusiasm went out of his face; he went back again to his old position with his back to the fire.

"What kind of a girl is Esther Helps, Gerald?"

"A beautiful girl."

"As beautiful as I am?"

"In her way quite as beautiful."

"Why do you say 'in her way'? Beauty must always be beauty."

"It has degrees, Esther Helps is not a lady."

Valentine was silent for half a minute. "I should like to know her," she said then. "I wonder how much she cares for old Helps."

"Look here, Valentine, Esther Helps is not the least like you. I don't know that she has any romantic attachments for that old man. She is a very ordinary girl—a most commonplace person with just a beautiful face."

"How queerly you speak, Gerald. As if it were something strange for an only daughter to be attached to her father."

"The amount of attachment you feel, darling, is uncommon."

"Is it? Well, I have got a very uncommon father."

"My dear Valentine, God knows you have."

Gerald sank down into a chair by the fire. He turned his face, dreary, white and worn, to the blaze. Valentine detected no hidden sarcasm in his tones. After a time she took the cheque out of her purse and handed it to him.

"Here, Gerry, you will put this into your bank to-morrow, won't you? We will open an account in our joint names, won't we? And then we can calculate how much we are to spend weekly and monthly. Oh, won't it be interesting and exciting. So much for my clothes, so much for yours, so much for servants, so much for food—we need a great deal of money, don't we? So much for pleasures—I want to go to the theatre at least twice a week—oh, we can manage it all and have something to spare. And no debts, remember, Gerry—ready money will be our system. We'll go in omnibuses, too, to save cabs—I shall love to feel that I am doing for a penny what might cost a shilling. Gerald darling, do you know that just in one way you have vexed my father a little?"

"Vexed him—how, Valentine?"

"He says it is very wrong of you to croak, and have gloomy prognostications. You know you said it was not worth while for me to learn to house-keep. Just as if you were going to die, or I were going to die. Father was quite vexed when I told him. Now you look vexed, Gerry. Really between such a husband and such a father, a poor girl may sometimes feel puzzled. Well, have you nothing to say?"

"I'm afraid I have nothing to say, Valentine."

"Then you won't croak any more."

"Not for you—I have never croaked for you."

"Nor for yourself."

"I cannot promise. Sometimes fits of depression come over me. There, good-night, sweet. Go to bed. I am not asleep. I shall read for a time. Your future is all right, Valentine."

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I don't like it," said Lillias.

She was sitting in the sunny front parlor, the room which was known as the children's room at the rectory. An open letter lay on her dark winter dress; her sunny hair was piled up high on her shapely head, and her eyes, wistful and questioning, were raised to Marjory's bristler, brighter face, with a world of trouble in them.

"The snow lay thick outside, covering the flower beds and the grassy lawn, and laying in piles against the low rectory windows. Marjory was standing by a piled up fire, one of those perfect fires composed of great knobs of sparkling coal and well dried logs of wood. She, too, had on a dark dress, but it was nearly covered by a large blacked apron with a bib. Her sleeves were protected by cuffs of the same. On her hands she wore chamois leather gloves with the tips off. She looked all bright and active, and sparkling, and round her on the table and on the floor lay piles and boxes of unbleached calico. And those are for my pretty orphans—our pretty orphans, Lillias darling, twenty-four in the West

MILLINERY! $12,000.00 MILLINERY!

On Wednesday last we extended a cordial invitation to you all to visit our first grand display of Spring Millinery and we thank you heartily for the liberal way you responded, our show rooms being thronged all day. We promised you great attractions in Millinery creations and from the many compliments bestowed upon us from one and all, we concluded our labors were far from being in vain and that our display was never surpassed in this city.

We value your compliments most highly and that our display was never surpassed in this city. We must adhere to the old quotation "Eternal Vigilance is the price of liberty"—and though the past few days would lead us to believe that we are nearing the goal of fame, in Millinery, yet we shall not be content to rest upon our oars, but shall be found always in the lead as to Millinery and Millinery Novelties.

Refuge, twenty-four in the West; the Easterns are apparelled in red, the Westerns in blue. Now, Mr Carr, I'll put it to you as our spiritual pastor, is it right for Lillias to sit and croak instead of helping me with all this prodigious work?"

"But croaking for nothing is not Miss Lillias' way," said Carr, favoring her with a quick glance, a little anxious, a little surprised.

Lillias sprang up with almost a look of vexation. Valentine's letter fell unheeded on the floor.

"You are too bad, Maggie," she said, with almost a forced laugh. "I suppose there are few people in this troublesome world who are not now and then attacked with a fit of the blues. But here goes. I'll shake them off. I'll help you all I can."

"You must help too," said Marjory in a gay voice, turning to Carr. "Please take off your great coat—put it anywhere. Now then, are your hands strong? are your arms steady? You have got to hold this bale of red merino while Lily cuts dress lengths from it. Don't forget, Lil, nine lengths of three-and-a-half yards each, nine lengths of four yards each, and six lengths of five yards each. Oh, thank you, Mr Carr, that will be a great assistance."

Carr was a very energetic, wide-awake, useful man. He could put his hands to anything. No work, provided it was useful, was derogatory in his eyes—he was always cheerful, always bright and obliging. Even Gerald Wyndham could scarcely have made a mere popular curate at Jewsbury-on-the-Wold than did this young man.

"If anything could provoke me about him, it is that he is too sunny," Marjory said one day to her sister.

Lillias was silent. It occurred to her, only she was not sure, that in those dark, quick, keen eyes there could come something which might sustain and strengthen on a day of clouds as well as sunshine.

It came now, when Marjory suddenly left the room, and Carr abruptly let the great bale of merino drop at his feet.

"Are you worried about anything?" he asked, in that direct fashion of his which made people trust him very quickly.

Lillias colored all over her face.

"Yes," said Marjory, "these blues of yours are for my shivering widows, goods are for my shivering widows, and she pointed to the red flannel and unbleached calico. "And those are for my pretty orphans—our pretty orphans, Lillias darling, twenty-four in the West

"You are not jealous?" he said.

"I don't know—we used to be great chums. I think if I were sure he was happy I should not be jealous."

Carr walked to the fireplace.

"It would not be folly if you were," he said. "All sisters must face the fact of their brothers taking to themselves wives, and, of course, loving the wives best. It is the rule of nature, and it would be foolish of you to fret against the inevitable."

He spoke abruptly, and with a certain coldness, which might have offended some girls. Lillias' slow earnest answer startled him.

"I don't fret against the inevitable," she said. "But I do fret against the intangible. There is a mystery about Gerry which I can't attempt to fathom. I know it is there, but I can't grapple with it in any direction."

"You must have some thought about it, though, or it would not have entered into your head."

"I have many thoughts but no clue. Oh, it would take me a long, long time to tell you what I fear, to bring my shadowy dread into life and being. I have just had a letter from Valentine, a sweet nice letter, and yet it seems to me full of mystery, although I am sure she does not know it herself. Yes, it is all intangible—it is kind of you to listen to me. Marjory would say I was talking folly."

"You are talking as if your nerves were a little out of sorts. Could you not have a change? Even granted that there is trouble, and I don't suppose for an instant that anything of the kind is in store for your brother, it is a great waste of life to meet it half way."

Lillias smiled faintly.

"I am silly," she said. And just then Marjory came into the room, followed by Augustus, and the cutting out proceeded briskly.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., APRIL 12, 1895.

Fruit Growers' Exhibition. Almost at the organization of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association it was considered in the interests of the fruit grower to hold annual exhibitions of the products of the orchards of the Province. These exhibitions were deemed of so much importance as to warrant the erection of a suitable building for the purpose, which was located in this town. For a number of years these exhibitions were regularly held, and their benefit to the orchardists of our Province is difficult to estimate. Horticulturists were thus interested in their work and stimulated to greater effort. But since the Association has grown to be of much greater importance and usefulness than formerly, this feature has been abolished. The building was allowed to go to ruin and finally passed out of existence. True the Association does attempt to show in a measure at the provincial exhibitions what the horticulturist is doing in the direction of improving old varieties of fruits and introducing new ones; but these exhibits, good as many of them have been, are quite insufficient to represent what is rapidly becoming one of the greatest industries of our Province. Taking the last exhibition at Halifax as an example we can scarcely claim such exhibits at all satisfactory. Since the Association has attained to the distinction it now occupies among fruit growers it would not be wise to revive the old custom of holding annual exhibitions, wholly devoted to the interest of the fruit grower, or nearly so? The proper place for such an institution appears to be in Wolfville. This town is the headquarters of the Association, the Horticultural School is located here, and the town is in the centre of the richest fruit growing district in Nova Scotia. In every direction we are surrounded by orchards, and by reference to the price lists of county and provincial exhibitions it will be seen that the greater number of the prizes are secured by growers within a short radius of Wolfville. We throw out these suggestions hoping that the members of the Association may consider them, and as an outcome an exhibition may be held next autumn. The new skating rink would make a most suitable building, being well arranged, and very conveniently situated; and we presume could be had for the purpose. We hope that some of our readers interested in fruit growing may take the matter up, and we gladly offer our columns for an expression of their views on the subject.

Patriotism. Patriotism is love for country. Webster defines it as "the noblest passion that animates a man in the character of a citizen." To the patriot his native land is the dearest spot on earth. He grew out of its soil, he breathed its air, he drank from its streams. Its hills and valleys, its lakes and rivers lent their influence to the moulding of his character, and what he owes to the land of his birth, he strives to repay in grateful loving services. He rises above the sphere of selfishness, who seeks his country's good. His spirit is reflected in the words of Count Cavour when he exclaimed, "Perish my name, perish my fame, let Italy live!"—or in the conduct of Laocaius with his brave Spartans at Thermopylae, defending their beloved Greece from the invading hosts of Persia, — or in the burning eloquence of Demosthenes, pleading "not for father, or mother, but for dear native land." We need not, however, go to the past, nor beyond our own Canada for examples of the patriotic sentiment. The names of Johnston and Howe still linger in our memories. We may not accept their political views, but we must honor their spirit, as each in his own way sought the welfare of the people. Those who have no love for Sir Charles Tupper may nevertheless admire the conduct of the man who would give free schools to his country, even when he foresaw that the measure would make his enemies, and that his political opponents would not be slow to avail themselves of the popular sentiment to the advantage of their party. We might, in this connection, refer to the late Sir John McDonald, who gave his life to the work of making these Canadian Provinces a greater Britain, than Britain herself, to become and with the development of her own resources, to become a mass of strength to the empire; or to Edward Blake who would surrender his place of influence with his party, rather than have his country in a position of dependence upon a foreign power. No nation can prosper without the national spirit, which is patriotism joined to loyalty. Where this is lacking there can be no coherency of its parts. Section is arrayed against section. Each state or province has its own petty interests to subserve, regardless of the interests of the whole. Men are narrow in their sympathies, looking to their own advantage, and demanding for such legislation as shall serve their own selfish ends. China gives us an illustration of a nation thus disunited, and weak, when otherwise she would be able to repel the invader and vindicate her honor. Germany, on the other hand, shows the value of patriotism in the hearts of the people. Eighty years, in the days of the first Napoleon, who sought their subjugation, they said, "We will put into the home, and the schools, and the minds of Germans a common sentiment and purpose that shall result in national unity." The result was seen in the war with France under the last Napoleon when they dictated terms of peace within the capital of the French Empire.

The Younger Canadian Poets.

But we must leave our interesting lady minstrel and hasten to present to you Mr. Archibald Lampman. There are certain kinds of minds which love deeply, tenderly and are very sensitive to beauty; but they love to dream and ponder upon and contemplate it, rather than to go into ecstasies over it. They see beauty in all, even the most common things; but their souls seldom thrill at the touch of the Sublime. Their poetical style is smooth, delicate, subdued and musical, sometimes, perhaps, monotonous; and their harp rarely smote by the swift hand of Pegasus. Such do we find to be the case with the artist and poet of ARCHIBALD LAMPMAN, a native of Merseville, Ontario, where he was born about thirty-three years ago. His only published volume, entitled, "Among the Millet" was published in the year, 1888. LAMPMAN'S poetry is often devoid of purely human interest and is occupied chiefly with Nature, and Nature especially in her Canadian aspects. How well does he picture the Winter Scene!

I look far out upon the snow-bound waste,
The lifting hills and intersecting forests,
The scarce marked courses of the hurried stream;
And as I looked lost memory of the Tandized with wonder, overborne with Joy,
I saw them in their silence and their beauty,
Swept by the sunset's rapid hand of fire,
Sudden, mysterious, every moment deepening
To some new majesty of rose or flame.
The whole broad West was like a molten sea
Of crimson. In the North, the light-headed hills
Were veiled far off as with a mist of rose Wondrous and soft. Along the darkening
East
The gold of all the forests slowly changed
To purple.

Again in his "Ballad of Summer's Sleep," the slumberous music of his verse and his close observation and love of Nature is well illustrated.

BALLAD OF SUMMER'S SLEEP.
Sweet Summer is gone; they have laid
away—
The leaf and hours that were touched
with her grace—
In the hush where ghosts of the dead
flowers play
The sleep that is sweet of her slumbering space
Let not a sign nor a sound escape
Of the West that has fallen on all the lands;
Gather ye dreams, to her sunny face,
Shadow her head with your golden
hands,
Like a girl's strange mirth ere the quick death day
The beautiful life that has had its chance,
Darker and darker the shadows pace
Out of the North to the southern sands,
Ushers bearing the Winter's mace;
Keep them away with your wovon
hairs,
The yellow light lies on the wide wastes
gray,
More bitter and cold than the winds
that race,
From the skirts of the Autumn, tearing
away
This way and that way the woodland lace,
In Autumn's cheek is a hectic trace;
Behind her the ghost of the Winter
stands;
Sweet Summer will mean in her soft
gray place:
Mantle her head with your golden
hands,
Till the slayer be slain and the Spring
displace
The might of his arms with her rose-crowned hands,
Let her heart not gather a dream that is less Shadow her hand with your golden
hands.

Mr. Lampman's verse is more musical and more even but less forcible than Prof. Roberts. He writes in many metres and has a mastery over them all. In that most difficult and artificial of verse forms, the sonnet, he stands in the opinion of many critics, the foremost artist in Canada. One of his sonnets possesses a solemn grandeur and beauty that would do credit to the genius of Wordsworth in its loftiest moods.

A PRAYER TO MOTHER EARTH.
O Earth, O Davy Mother I breathe on us
Something of all thy beauty and thy might,
Us that are part of Day but most of Sight,
Not strong like thee but ever burdened thus
With glooms and cares, things pale and delicious,
Wise gladdest moments are not wholly bright,
O Earth, O Mighty Mother, breathe on
us.

O Mother who wast long before our day,
And after us full many an age shall be,
Careworn and blind we wander from
our way,
Born of thy strength but weak and halt
are we;
Grant us O Mother, therefore, thus who pray,
Some little of thy light and majesty.
Lampman has imagination, also, and a subtle, strong imagination with here and there a weirdness that resembles W. W. Campbell and Edgar Allan Poe. This quality is strongly shown in his poem called

Chocolate Creams 10c lb. at Evangeline
Kandy Kitchen, next to Book Store.

A bad wash-out on the road near Hantsport has interfered considerably with the running of trains on the D. A. railway during the past few days.

We are informed that our young townsman, Mr. W. V. Jones, son of Dr.
Jones, who graduated recently from the Montreal Veterinary College, intends beginning a practice in Wolfville.

Owing to the scarcity of crude, and the consequent increase in cost of refined oil, prices have advanced during the last few days to the extent of one cent per gallon retail. This advance pertains to Canadian, as well as American.

The management of the D. A. railway has just issued a very pretty little
"guide," containing a complete calendar, good illustrations of the "Land of Evangelina"—and information relating to it.
It is the nearest thing of the kind it has been our good fortune to receive.

If you have any pictures to be framed bring them along now to the Wolfville Book Store.

A telegram was received in Wolfville
on Tuesday announcing the death of Mrs.
W. W. Hays, of Woodstock, N. B., a sister of Mr. R. E. Harris and Mrs. Burpee Witter, of this town. The deceased was a devoted Christian lady, and was highly esteemed wherever known. Her death will be heard of with sincere regret by a host of friends. The ACADIAN joins in sympathy for the bereaved family and friends. Mr. Harris and Mrs. Witter left on Wednesday morning to attend the funeral.

We have a bottle of any kind of Fruit Syrup at the Evangeline Kandy Kitchen.

We understand that a number of our enterprising citizens are making arrangements for the construction of a "gasoline launch," which is to be used for a pleasure boat on the basin. The craft will be twenty-seven feet in length, and capable of accommodating a company of twenty-five. She will be fitted with all the modern improvements, and will steam from eight to ten knots. The company is composed of the following gentlemen: Messrs D. R. and G. W.
Moore, A. J. Woodman, O. D. Harris,
and T. L. Harvey. Work will be begun at once, and the "launch" is expected to be ready for business early in May. Such a craft will be a great convenience and accommodation to tourists and our people generally, and should prove a good investment for the promoters of the scheme, who have our best wishes for success.

Gymnasium Exhibition.

Notwithstanding the rain and bad walking of Monday evening about two hundred persons gathered in the Gymnasium Building to witness the exhibition given by the students of the college and academy. Seats placed around the inside of the building in what is used for a running track were sufficient for all and gave a good view to every spectator.

At eight o'clock the first drill was called on and for two and a quarter hours the audience was entertained by a good exhibition of gymnastics consisting of drills with Indian clubs, wands, dumb-bells and poles, free work on trick parallel bars, horizontal bars, rings and mats, tumbling and building of pyramids.

The most amusing number was the "Lazy club" which was greeted with hearty laughter and great applause. The work on the horizontal bar was very clever and in this department special mention
should be made of Mr H. A. Fordy.

The mat work and tumbling showed practice and nimbleness, from the simple roll of the whole class to the acrobatic of Mr. H. Rabbit. The pyramids came last and were fitting endings for the entertainment, for here both muscle and dexterity were displayed. Seven young ladies participated in four of the drills and did their parts well. Music accompanied the marching and some of the exercises. The whole programme reflected great credit on Mr S. R. McCurdy the instructor who has had charge of the gymnasium for the past three years.

The students have been asked to repeat it but will probably give another exhibition of more advanced work in June.

The Easter Youth's Companion.

The Youth's Companion, always good, has a way of outdoing itself! The Easter Double Number just received is an issue of rare excellence. Its handsome and appropriate cover is a fitting introduction to its contents.

"Dorothy's Easter," and "A Corner in Eggs," in this number, are two Easter stories charmingly told, stories to be read and enjoyed by every member of the family. "The Story of a Statesman," by the Marquis of Lorne, prepared for The Companion in collaboration with the Princess Louise, is an article of unusual interest. "The Romance of a Shoal," an adventure story by W. Clark Russell, is one of the best from the pen of this noted writer.

The reader will find in this Easter
Number of The Companion a rich treat of the very best stories, poetry, practical information, and miscellany for which The Companion has become famous the world over, and this number alone is well worth the cost of the paper for an entire year.

School Board Meeting.

There was a meeting of the School Board on Tuesday last. Present, J. W.
Caldwell, Geo. W. Borden, F. J. Foster
and J. B. Davison. The chairman being absent, J. B. Davison was called to the chair. To meet the requirements of an increased attendance it was found to be necessary to purchase four more desks and seats at a cost of $12.50. An application from Principal Godfrey asking for five modulators, a "Standard Dictionary" and a cheap set of physical apparatus for the school was taken up and after considerable discussion, and explanation from Principal Godfrey, who was present, in reference to the necessity of having the above named requisites if the school was to maintain a first class standing, it was resolved that they be purchased provided that they would not cost over fifty dollars.

A bill from J. W. Caldwell for three cords of wood amounting to $9.50 was ordered to be paid.

Janitor Toys reported that the fire pots in the furnace were burned out and would have to be replaced by new ones during the vacation. No action taken on this matter.

Important to Wolfville Singers.

A most excellent opportunity to learn vocal music will be afforded the people of Wolfville and its vicinity.

Herbert Karl Doring, (a brother of Herr Doring, the celebrated cellist), who arrived in Halifax in November 1893, to teach vocal music in the Doring-Bauer Conservatory of Music, has intimated his willingness to teach a limited number of private pupils in Wolfville. Herr Karl Doring is best qualified to teach vocal music. He has studied for several years under Prof. Hofmann of Berlin, Prof.
Hermann of Bavaria, and Prof. Galliera of Milan, (Italy), who are among the most celebrated and successful masters in Europe. Herr Doring possesses a voice almost wonderful in richness and compass. He has sung in grand opera in Munich and other continental cities. He is a patient and persevering teacher who has the happy faculty of inspiring his pupils with much of his own enthusiasm for his art. Herr Doring speaks English fluently. He has many friends in Halifax and Windsor, where he is known to be a gentleman worthy of respect and confidence.

We understand his terms will be moderate; and we feel sure that many persons will take advantage of the exceptional opportunity to receive instruction in vocal music which will soon be afforded them.

Persons wishing to take lessons may obtain full information as to terms, etc., at Mr. Rand's drug store, where a list will be opened for those desirous of taking lessons.

Law Lectures for Women. This is the suggestive title of a little pamphlet recently received, and a perusal of its pages has suggested the thought that a brief review for the readers of this column might be found interesting.

Some years since a few earnest women "awakened" to the density of ignorance of their sex in legal matters, formed themselves into the Woman's Legal Education Society.

The first lecturer before the new Society, which was now under the fostering care and protection of the University, was Dr Emily Kempin of Zurich University.

The question of the advisability of the admission of the feminine element to these lectures at all, as they are directed entirely to the enlightenment of such women, in just the place and station which she now occupies, not to the hope of revolutionizing the entire sex into nineteenth century Perit's, as some seem to imagine.

Neither need there arise in many minds, as George William Curtis so aptly put it, in his address on universal suffrage, "a dreadful vision of a mighty exodus of the whole female world in bloomer and spectacles, from the nursery and the kitchen, to the pews in the case of the courts, or of homes left a howling wilderness of cradles, and a chaos of undressed stockings and buttonless shirts."

It simply means that an opportunity is at last open to intelligent women, who have no time to spend on long tiresome years of legal study, to obtain a general, accurate and livable knowledge of the history of our Nation, State, politics, laws and rights, at the outlay of a few dollars, and three hours of time per week.

The first course as now presented begins with the general history of the origin and evolution of law, public and private, in war and peace; studies on our Constitution, its development and what it means to each of us and an enlightenment on many of the vexed questions of our judicial system.

It gives an intelligent groundwork upon which to build the superstructure of the following courses, which treat of law as more directly applied to the individual, to us and our interests. The legal relation between husband and wife, parent and child, master and servant; wills and succession, and a multitude of subjects which at best are very hazy and vague, in the mind of even the most enlightened woman of the day, who have had no opportunity to study the matter.

In the third course the questions of contracts, both of marriage and of the more material business world, are carefully studied; of agents, partners, copyrights, patents, etc., etc., all presented, not in a dry formal manner, but imbued with a lively interest which cannot fail to entertain as well as instruct.

Investments, real estate, leases, mortgages, damages and torts, and even pleading and evidence, form the subject-matter of the last course. Each of the lectures is prefaced by a "quiz" in which those who desire may partake, and at the close of the year there is an examination held under the patronage of the University, for those who have taken the entire course, and who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity for review.

In the words of Judge Noah Davis, who recently addressed the Alumnae of the Woman's Law Class, "The women of New York, in organizing this first woman's law class in America, have taken an initial step in the advancement of the higher education and enlightenment of their sex, and as its power for good becomes known, similar societies will spring up throughout the whole United States, spreading in benefit and influence, like the public tree, which grows broader and broader, until it spreads from shore to shore."

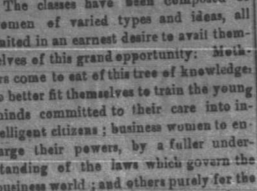

Combination of Troubles which made life miserable. Mr Eli Joyce, relates his Experience With These Troubles—Could Not Retain Food and Thought to be Beyond Hope of Cure—But Relief Came and He is Now a Well Man.

The readers of the Observer have become familiar with the remarkable cures effected by the use of Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People through their recital in these columns, as taken from other reputable newspapers. It is now our purpose to tell them of a cure, hardly short of miraculous, which was effected on a person with whom many of our readers are acquainted.

Mr Eli Joyce, formerly of Dixville, but now living at Averil, Vt. A few days ago we saw Mr Joyce and asked him about his recovery. He stated that for four or five years he had been afflicted with rheumatism and dyspepsia. He was laid up and unable to do anything on an average four months in a year and was constantly growing worse, although treated by good physicians and trying numerous remedies recommended.

A year ago last August he was taken seriously ill while at his sister's, Mrs Dolloff of Dixville. He could not retain anything on his stomach and the physicians who attended him were powerless in improving his condition. One of them stated that he had cancer of the stomach and could not live long. It was while in this precarious condition that he determined to try Dr Williams' Pink Pills, and before long was able to retain food on his stomach. His pain gradually became less and in six weeks time he was back to his home in Averil, feeling that he had obtained a new lease of life. He continued taking the Pink Pills for some time longer and gained so much in health and strength that he is now able to do the hardest kind of day's work, and he frankly gives Dr Williams' Pink Pills all the credit for his rejuvenated condition, and says he believes their timely use saved his life. The Observer has verified his story through several of his neighbors, who say that it was thought that he was at the point of death when he began the use of Pink Pills; in fact when we mentioned his case to one of the doctors who had attended him he said he supposed he was dead long ago. When such strong tributes as these can be led to the wonderful merit of Pink Pills it is little wonder that their sales reach such enormous proportions, and that they are the favorite remedy with all classes. Dr Williams' Pink Pills contain the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of influenza, all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for febrile peculiarities to families, such as suppression, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all troubles arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of any nature. Dr Williams' Pink Pills are manufactured by Dr Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., and Schenectady, N. Y., sold in boxes (never in loose form) by the dozen or hundred and the public are cautioned against numerous cheap imitations sold in this shape at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr Williams' Medicine Company, at either address.

Slips for Odd Moments.

Unsatistactory young man—Sir, I love your daughter. Father—So do I. You were embarrassed when you proposed to me, George, were you not? Yes, I loved over $20,000.

Everything is quiet again in New Orleans. A few negroes are killed occasionally, but no lawlessness is reported.

Er Spasmodic Coughs—MINARD'S HONEY BALSAM. Hoax—I'm going to take earnest lessons from Prof. Blower.

Jeaz—Going to take him for your toister, eh? I sometimes feel as if I would like to be a real bad man, really said the small gentleman, but I fear I am not a good enough man to back it up.

If you do not know how good a remedy Garfield Tea really is for constipation and sick headache, send a postal card to D. L. Demore & Co., 271 Queen Street.

I'd rather have a nutmeg than fame, said the idiot. Why I said the wise man. Because, said the idiot, fame is for the great, but the nutmeg is for the grater.

Jeweller—These paste diamonds look just as beautiful as the real ones, but they only last a short time. Young Man—Well, this engagement is only going to last a short time.

"What do you think of this portrait of me, my dear?" asked Withersip. "It is very smiling and pleasant," said Mrs Withersip. Then she added wistfully, "I wish you would look like it once in a while, John."

Not that Kind. Scott's Emulsion does not debilitate the stomach as other cough medicines do; but on the contrary, it improves digestion and strengthens the stomach. Its effects are immediate and pronounced.

Friend—How are you doing now? Scribbler—First rate. The Rev. Mr. Sainly and I have gone into partnership. Making money hand over fist. Eh? How do you manage? I write books and he denounces them.

What a man is going to do now that you have assumed to large a fortune? B—I shall retire from business, and let everybody what a burden wealth is, and how happy I was when I possessed nothing.

Wary Walker—Say mister, gimme a dime. Dignified Wayfarer—Gimme your dime! I think you are more in need of manners than money.

Wary Walker—Well, I struck yer fer what I ought ye had most my. Lawyer—What's that book you are reading? Law student—A, it's a work on common law.

Lawyer—Yes, yer, and am day with such book as that would ruin your mind for legal work forever. Rev. Thomas Canning, Trusts, N. S. "It is only justice to say that your K. D. C. has been several times used by members of my family, and always with good results."

Johnnie—I say, teacher, I know now why you didn't want me to rob bird's nests last Spring. Teacher—Why was it, Johnnie? Johnnie—Cause you wanted the birds to grow big enough to wear 'em.

Clara—Was your fair a success? Dora—Yes, indeed. The minister will have cause to be grateful. How much was made? Nothing. The receipts were less than the expenses, but sixteen years ago I got engaged, and the minister let us perform the ceremonies.

No, said the "emancipated" young woman, Harold and I will not marry. The minister is in a rotten snuff. What was the trouble? He does not agree with me in politics, and I am compelled to believe that his ideas about housekeeping are hypothesis, crime and chaos.

I BELIEVE MINARD'S LINIMENT will cure every case of Diphtheria. Reverend. Mrs REUBEN BAKER. I BELIEVE MINARD'S LINIMENT will promote a growth of hair. Stanley, P. E. L. Mrs C. ANDERSON. I BELIEVE MINARD'S LINIMENT is the best household remedy on earth. On City, Ont. MATTHIAS POLEY.

Stimpson—You say you are not in love with any one else, but you are in love with an ideal. Perhaps I can in time approach that ideal. Miss Beanti regretfully—I'm afraid not. He is a character in the "Arabian Nights." Everything he touched turned to gold.

On a Virginia farm two small colored boys who were hired to weed onions, were started at opposite ends of a row, and told to weed toward each other. "It's done me 'n what you den," said Dan, presently. "No, you ain't, neither," asserted Sam. "Yes, I is, den," glancing down the row. "It's lots nearer to 'ye den 'ye is to me."

An old man went into a life insurance office and asked to be insured. The company asked his age. He replied, "I'm ninety-four." "Why, my good man, we cannot insure you, say the company. Why not? he demanded. "Why you are ninety-four years old. What of that? the old man cried. Look at statistics and they will tell you that fewer men die at ninety-four than at any other age."
