Law Case at Acton.

The following case was tried before Judge Miller at Acton on the 16th:—Duncan McIntyre vs. James Ryder. The defendant is a carriage maker at Acton and plaintiff a farmer in Erin. Some time in the summer of 1876 the plaintiff employed defendant to change a single buggy into a double one, and on examination the defendant recommended that four new wheels would be necessary as the arms on the axletrees were two small and required to be enlarged beyond the capacity of the old wheels. In making the proposed changes the plaintiff agreed to pay $57, which was secured in the meantime by note. The buggy was changed, and a short time after plaintiff took it home, one of the front wheels flew off, the nut and boxen remaining on the end of the axletree. It was then discovered that the arms of the hind axletree were considerably larger than those in front, while the holes in the wheels were all of the same size. For the plaintiff it was contended that the work was unskilfully performed, and consequently the defendant became liable for the damages claimed. The defendant endeavoured to prove that the reason the front arms were smaller than the hind ones was be cause the timber in the front axletree was smaller than the hind one and would not admit of a larger arm. But when it was found that the holes in the wheels were the same notwithstanding the difference in the size of the arms, the judge concluded that the plaintiff established his case and gave a verdict for $6. Mr. J. P. MacMillan, of Guelph, for plaintiff.

PROHIBITION.—At a meeting held in the old Town Hall last evening, for the purpose of forming a Branch of the Wellington Prohibitory League, the following gentlemen were elected officers of Branch No. 1, for the Town of Guelph:—President, Richard Ainley; Vice President, Sampson Head; Secretary, Edward H. Hall; Treasurer, Robert Millar. Executive Committee—Messrs. W. W. Bilton, D. Munro, G. Patterson, H. H. Maddock, J. Archeart. Meeting adjourned until Thursday evening next, to be then held in Dunkin Committee rooms, over Bank of Commerce.

RUNAWAY.—This forenoon, immediately after the funeral of the late Mrs. James Anderson had passed the Phœnix Mills on the Waterloo Road, a team that was at the mill door got frightened, and started off, running along the road in the same direction as the funeral cortege. When about half way up in the procession the team struck into the road and came in contact with a buggy in which was Mr. William Sallows and Mr. Geo. Daniels. The team also came in contact with the buggy of Mr. Johnston, of the Farm, but beyond the loss of a wheel no other damage was done to his vehicle. In the concussion the wheel of Mr. Sallows' buggy was taken off, and Mr. Sallows was thrown out and hurt about the head. The runaway horses after this continued in their mad career until they came near the Pound Creek, when the waggon struck against one of the shade trees and was detached. The horses continued in their course until they came near to Merlihan's hotel, where they were stopped. Mr. Sallows was taken home in another buggy, and was followed by Dr. Herod, who was attending the funeral, and who found that he had received some injuries about the head but not of a serious character. He has received several scalp wounds, and some of the tendons of one of his arms at the elbow have been lacerated. Fortunately no other interruption took place to the funeral, but at one time it looked as though the occurrence might be of a very serious character.

CORRECTION.—Having found that some persons have concluded that WILSON'S WILD CHERRY contains opium (as most medicines prepared for the purpose do) the proprietors take this opportunity of stating that the Wild Cherry contains no trace of this or any other narcotic, and may be given to an infant with the same safety and benefit as to an adult. The tonic effects of the Wild Cherry show themselves in an increased appetite and recuperated strength, and to those whose systems have been reduced by chronic diseases of the Lungs or Bronchial Tubes it is especially recommended. THE BULL'S HEAD, New York, is the great depot of exchange, barter and sale of horses; at it are located all the prominent horse-dealers, and every man in want of a horse, be it either a trotter, stately carriage horse, or for a junk-dealer's wagon, is certain of finding what he wants, either in quality or price. All are accommodated.

Every day car loads of horses are brought to it; in their transportation they are frequently bruised and maimed. The dealers find nothing so quick, speedy and sure as GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA. You will, if a listner, hear the following: "Hello, Dan, what ails that horse?" "Kicked on the right front knee—swelled as large as a big turnip. Rub it with GILES LINIMENT; that never disappoints; be all well to-morrow." And so it goes; every one who uses it once will never be without it.

The members of Beaver Lodge, I. O. G.T. were favored at their meeting on last Monday evening by a fraternal visit from about fifty of the members of Victoria Lodge of Rockwood, and also a number from Arkell and Farmers' Home Lodges.

Bro. Dew, W. C. T., of Victoria Lodge, was invited to preside. The regular routine of business including an initiation was quickly disposed of, after which a short intermission was given to allow the mutual exchange of congratulations and welcoming the visitors. After resuming business one of the most pleasant features of the evening was the presentation by a few of the members of an address accompanied by a beautiful Japanese cabinet, to Sister Fanny Penfold, who has been connected with Beaver Lodge almost since it was first instituted, and who has filled the office of Treasurer for several terms with great acceptance to the Lodge. The following is a copy of the address:

To Sister Fanny Penfold.

DEAR SISTER,—We take great pleasure in presenting you this Japanese Cabinet, as a small token of our high appreciation of your valuable services as Treasurer of Beaver Lodge, and your noble example of punctuality of attendance at all our regular meetings. May this year be one of happiness and prosperity to you, and may you long be spared to help us with your untiring energy and zeal in our good cause of temperance.

Signed J. W. ALLAN, W. C. T.

Guelph, January 21 st, 1878.

Those present were then called upon for short speeches, songs, recitations, &c., and a most enjoyable evening was spent, every one seeming in the best of humour with themselves, and all around them. After a couple of hours spent in social enjoyment, an adjournment took place, after which the sisters of Beaver Lodge provided something substantial in the shape of hot coffee and an abundance of good things to satisfy the inner man, and prepare their visitors the better to stand the journey home.

The meeting of Monday evening will long be remembered by those present as one of the most pleasant and profitable that has ever taken place in Beaver Lodge, and no doubt, should we be favored with good sleighing, more of such meetings will be held before the winter has passed away.

Beaver Lodge is still flourishing, numbering 125 members and receiving new members at every meeting, and among this number are many earnest workers in the temperance cause, who are not easily discouraged by either opposition or defeat.

This was not the first visit of the kind that the Lodge received, but we trust that it will be the last one. Fire on Macdonnell Street.

Mr. Robert Parker's Carriage Works Destroyed.

LOSS, $3,500; INSURANCE, $1,600.

This (Wednesday) morning, at quarter-past three o'clock, a fire was noticed by James Kelly, night operator at the Grand Trunk station and switchman Groves, in the carriage works of Mr. Robert Parker, on Macdonnell street. The cry of fire was at once raised, and while one of the above parties ran to give the alarm to the Fire Brigade, the other roused the inmates of the City Hotel and other inmates near the fire.

The wind was blowing fiercely in a northeasterly direction, and light snow which had fallen during the night was drifting about in a half-blinding manner. The atmosphere was bitterly cold, being several degrees below zero.

The alarm by some means or other was delayed being given, and this together with the horses acting in a rather obstreperous mood, delayed the steamer some fifteen minutes.

In the meantime a number of people had been aroused and hurried to the carriage works to get out material. In the front part of the building was situated the blacksmith shop. Mr. Hooper burst open the front doors, when it was observed that the fire was burning through the floor in the wood shop at the back. The fire was near the stove, in the centre of the shop, and it struck those who were there that fire had been communicated from the stove. Mr. Caleb Chase was early on the ground, and knowing the shops very well, he proceeded to the side entrance, and broke into the paint shop, which was immediately under the wood shop. Mr. Chase's impression is that the fire commenced at the paint shop stove and burned through the ceiling. This is somewhat borne out by the fact that at that time several unfinished vehicles were burning, and nothing had dropped through from the floor above. Considering the very few people that were roused by the alarm bell, a large amount of stuff was taken out of the shops. Every person worked hard, even material was taken out after the shops were filled with smoke to such an alarming extent that it was dangerous to enter.

The steamer during this time, owing to the great delay had been pretty freely anathematized by various parties. About four o'clock, three quarters of an hour after the cry of fire was first made, the steamer commenced throwing water but so feeble was the stream that water congealed in the hose. There were only twenty pounds of steam on at the time, which did not prove sufficient. At this time there appeared to be great danger to the Royal buildings as cinders were blowing wildly about, and the roof of the hotel was flecked with burning coals. Fortunately the roof did not become ignited. The steamer had only been playing a short time when it ceased, and it was found that the coal had given out. Another delay was caused to procure fresh coal, and when the steamer was again in running order, the hose was nearly filled with ice, and only a very small stream could be forced through. This, however, kept the flames somewhat under control, and confined to one building.

On account of the strong wind, the alarm was not heard any distance from the Town Hall buildings. Neither Chief Engineer Armstrong nor Assistant Chief Adam Robertson heard the alarm, but in their absence Mr. Chase directed the firemen to great advantage. The Chiefs were afterwards sent for.

The firemen worked hard and no doubt did as well as possible under the great disadvantages, but it is simply terrible to speculate on what might have been the result had the fire communicated to either the Royal Hotel, or Mr. J. B. Armstrong's block, contiguous to the building burned, as they would have been at the mercy of the flames, and the fire department would have been powerless with the hose frozen up. The fact that the shingles on the building were laid in mortar did much to prevent the fire spreading to the adjoining buildings.

Mr. Chase, member of the Fire and Water Committee, suggests that to obviate any such mishap as happened this morning, by running out of coal, that near each of the engine platforms at the river, and somewhere adjacent to the several water tanks, coal boxes be fixed with a lock, so that there would always be sufficient in case of fire. Some such plan should be adopted.

The steamer was taken back to the engine house about six o'clock, after all danger had passed. The hose had to be disconnected and the lengths full of ice shovelled and carried piece by piece to the engine house. In order that the hose might thaw out quickly, Mr. Chase very properly ordered extra stoves to be put up, so as to have them thawed out quickly, in order that they would be ready if another fire should break out.

Mr. Parker's loss on stock and tools will be fully $2,000, which is insured for $1,000 in the Wellington Mutual. Mr. Jas. Armstrong, of Stratford, owner of the building, was insured in the same Company for $800. His loss is about $1,500. Messrs. D. Delong and George Sallows lose $100 worth of tools each.

Mr. Parker will again start in business as promptly as possible.

We must not forget to mention that Mr. J. B. Armstrong and Mr. John Fielding worked hard and with good effect in keeping down the fire.

THE STRATFORD "BEACON."—We welcome the Beacon of last week in its enlarged form. It comes to hand now as a ten column paper, and in size, make up, and general appearance ranks as one of our best exchanges, and upholds the high character it has for years maintained as one of the best and most influential local papers in Ontario. In its enlarged form it is able to give its patrons a great deal more reading matter, which is admirably arranged and carefully edited. Its articles are timely, vigorous and liberal in spirit, and its local news is comprehensive, well arranged and carefully prepared. In every way we look at it the Beacon is a model newspaper, and in this new departure we wish it even more prosperity in the future than it has received in the past.

Puslinch Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

The annual meeting of the Puslinch Mutual Fire Insurance Company was held at the Town Hall, Aberfoyle, on Saturday, 19th inst. Mr. Duncan McFarlane, President, in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Directors, in presenting their annual report, begleave to state that the Company has met with the heaviest loss it has sustained since its formation in 1859, being that of Mr. Peter Stewart's barn and contents having been destroyed by fire on the night of the 22nd April, 1877, said loss amounting to $666 66 on barn and sheep house and $1,326.50 on ordinary contents. After strict enquiry into all the affairs it was found that the Company was liable for $666 66 on the buildings and $1,310 00 on contents, amounting in all to $1,976.66. The Directors having met found it necessary to levy an assessment of 30 per cent on the dollar on all the premium notes in the hands of the Company. The assessment having been levied it was responded to in a praiseworthy manner, considering the pressure for money during the year. The Directors have much pleasure in stating that the affairs of the Company are still in a good healthy condition. There were nine new members added to the Company during 1877 and sixty-six policies issued, while the property insured and premium notes on hand is steadily on the increase, there having been but two members left during the year. With the report is presented the financial statement of 1877.

Moved by Duncan Gilchrist, seconded by Hugh Reid, that the annual report accompanying the Auditor's report be adopted.—Carried.

The election of Directors was then proceeded with by ballot, which resulted in the election of the following gentlemen:—Duncan McFarlane, Malcolm McNaughton, Thomas Carter, John Clark, jr., James H. Glennie, John Thompson, (Brock road) and James Anderson.

Moved by James Scott, seconded by Thomas Carter, that Wm. Kerr and Allan McIntyre be appointed Auditors.—Carried.

Moved by Hugh Reid, seconded by Donald McKercher, that the Secretary be allowed $25 for extra services and also the President $5 for his time and expense in securing the conviction of Patrick McGinnis.—Carried.

At a subsequent meeting of Directors Duncan McFarlane, Esq., was re-elected President and Hugh Cockburn Secretary-Treasurer.

A CURIOUS CASE.—A curious case of the finder of lost property, whose owner is unknown, is reported from Rhode Island. The plaintiff bought an old safe and offered to sell it to defendant. The defendant could not buy it, but agreed to take it and sell it if he could, using it himself in the meantime. While it was thus in his possession, he found a roll of bank bills inside the lining. No one knew to whom they belonged. The defendant therefore concluded to keep them. The plaintiff, upon learning of the discovery of the money, demanded the return of the safe just as it was when delivered. The defendant returned it, but without the bank bills; whereupon the plaintiff sued for their value as money found. The Supreme Court held that the finder was intitled to retain the property as against the party who put the safe in his hands for sale; and the authorities generally maintain the right of the finder, in this class of cases, as against all persons except the real owner.

The War News.

Jan. 22.

A Vienna despatch says Russia has taken the fate of Roumania Servia, and Montenegro in her own hands, and none of them will be represented in the negotiations with Turkey.

A Constantinople despatch says:—A report is current this evening that a two months' armistice has been concluded, but no official confirmation has been received. The rumor that the Russians are nearing Gallipoli is not confirmed. The defence of the line of Bulair, across the neck of the Gallipoli peninsula, has been entrusted to Suleiman Pasha. Menthorpe Bey is charged with the transport of Suleiman's army thither.

A Berlin correspondent says:—According to the latest rumours, the Turkish peace delegates, it is expected, will refer the less acceptable points of the Russian conditions to Constantinople. In this case the Russians will advance. Austria seems to be confidentially informed of the Russian determination to advance in the direction of Constantinople if their terms of peace are not immediately accepted. Austria has waived her objections to a Russian occupation of Constantinople. Should the Russian intention be carried out it is supposed the Russian peace negotiators will subsequently demand the conversion of Constantinople into a sort of neutral commonwealth.

A Pera correspondent is informed that the peace delegates are instructed to make peace on any terms so as to stop the Russian advance.

A Vienna correspondent telegraphs that advises from Constantinople show that a general panic prevails there, and that the excitement is hourly increasing. It was believed that the guaranteeing Powers would send ships to protect their subjects. The new instructions to the peace delegates of which Izzed Pasha was the bearer were sent more on account of the panic than for any other cause. The new instructions, as well as conferring far fuller Powers, insist above all upon the delegates doing everything possible to stop the Russian advance.

General Strukoff reports from the town of Mustafa Pasha, twenty miles north-west of Adrianople, on the 19th inst., that a panic prevailed at Adrianople. The Turkish Government and garrison have withdrawn, after exploding the powder magazines and ammunition deposits. Fire and civil disturbances had broken out, and the representatives of five different localities had come to Mustafa Pasha to entreat Strukoff to hasten to Adrianople and restore order. This despatch shows that the Russians were not pressing forward as rapidly as the Turkish accounts represent.

A Russian official despatch from Kezanlik Jan. 19, says Gourko fought Suleiman Pasha from the 15th to the 18th inst. The Turks were finally driven into the Rhodope Mountains, with a loss of 4,000 killed, 3,000 prisoners, and 49 guns.

A Constantinople despatch says the whole district of Burgas has been devastated by the Bashi-Bazouks and Circassians, who slaughtered the inhabitants and burned the villages.

The London Post announces prominently that a telegram received yesterday from an authentic source confirms the report that Suleiman Pasha arrived at Dramar with the great bulk of his army. He telegraphed to Constantinople for a number of transports to be sent to Kavala Bay.

A Paris correspondent says an official announcement has been published in Constantinople, stating that if the negotiations fail everything is prepared for a defence to the last extremity, and advises the inhabitants to be calm.

A Russian official despatch from Tiflis says Gen. Komaroff's detachment from Ardanusch stormed Artvin on the 18th, and that the Turks lot heavily and the Russians slightly.

The Arthur Enterprise complains about the want of weighing accommodation.

HORRIBLE CRIMES.—Information has been received at Peterboro', from the township of Anstruther, about seven miles from Apsley, on the Welington road, that on the night of the 7th inst., three men named Thomas McEveley, William Hubbs and Patrick Murphy, from one of Gilmour & Co.'s shanties in the neighborhood, entered the dwelling of a Mrs. Jones, her husband being away in one of the shanties at the time, and committed a brutal assault on both her and her daughter, about fourteen years of age. McEveley has been committed to Peterboro' gaol to await his trial, but Hubbs and Murphy are still at large. Hubbs is from the township of Seymour, and Murphy from Trenton; after the outrage had become known, there were fears that McEveley, who had been arrested, might suffer lynch law from the people. He however, escaped, and was committed by Messrs. Colborne and Anderson.

THE CREDIT SYSTEM.—The Merchants' Association again met at New Hamburgh on Tuesday, when representatives from Wellesley, Tavistock, Plattsville, New Dundee, Baden, and New Hamburg were present. Twenty-eight merchants have already joined the Association, and have agreed to adopt the six months' credit system in preference to the year's credit as heretofore, accounts to be rendered on the 1st of January and 1st of July each year; the rate of interest on overdue accounts to be not less than eight per cent. Fixed prices for produce were also agreed upon until further notice.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provide our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage wich may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. I recommend it with the greatest confidence to those subject to coughs and pulmonary complaints."

Notice to the Public.

We have for a long time been firmly impressed with the conviction that the long credit system is injurious to business and unjust to creditors, and we have come to the determination to put a stop to it. Our experience is that the practice of extending accounts over a year is a great mistake, is unfair to the creditor and burdensome to the debtor. Were settlements made, say four times a year, instead of once, the amounts would be light, and payments would be comparatively easy, whereas, when accounts run for a year the amounts accumulate, and in many cases it is no easy matter to settle a bill.

We have, therefore, come to resolution to, in future, make out and collect our accounts for advertising and job work quarterly, and we hereby give notice that this rule will, in all cases, be strictly enforced. We believe that its adoption will be of equal benefit to our patrons as to us, and we shall, in no case, make an exception.

We are now sending out our accounts for the past year, and we must insist on the immediate settlement of them in all cases, otherwise we will have to take the usual but unpleasant steps to enforce payment.

The Evening Mercury

WEDNESDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 23, 1878

DIGBY is an old Conservative County, and elected a Conservative in 1867 by 295 majority, and again in 1872 without a contest. This, to a certain extent, accounts for the defeat of Mr. Vail.

THE nomination of Hon. A. Jones and M. H. Richey, took place at Halifax on Tuesday. There was no public meeting, but the excitement runs high, and both parties are working hard.

AN absurd rumour was placed in circulation the other morning to the effect that Hon. Mr. Laflamme had resigned the portfolio. The rumour is entirely destitute of foundation. A similar foundationless report bas been telegraphed from Ottawa in respect to Mr. Blake.

THE Montreal Herald, speaking of the defeat of Mr. Vail, does not offer much consolation to the Opposition. It says: "It will be only natural for the Opposition to extract as much comfort as possible from Mr. Vail's reverses, but it should at least remember, in the midst of its gratulation, that though the Government has lost a Minister of Militia, it has not been obliged to look for a constituency in which to replace him either in Manitoba or British Columbia.

THE Manitoba Legislature have passed the Government resolutions declaring that it is expedient to create a fund exclusively for educational purposes, by a general tax of five cents per acre on land owned by non-residents or corporations with their head offices in the Province, whether such land is improved or not; also three cents per acre on all land owned by residents or corporations with their head office in the Province.

THE French Government officials and members of the Paris Chamber of Commerce, have extended a cordial welcome to Capt. Purday, the commander of the steamer Newfield, which took out the Canadian articles for the Paris Exhibition.

THE N. Y. Tribune remarks:—"On Saturday gold sold at 101½. It is plain that, but for one obstacle, the premium would have nearly or quite vanished. Enemies of the public credit at Washington cause the premium on gold, just as enemies of the Union caused it nearly sixteen years ago. The gold value of $100 in greenbacks on Saturday was $98.50, and it has not been as high before since the 26th of April, 1862, when the Legal-tender Act was barely two months old, and the amount issued was $150,000,000, and the Union army was still parading in front of Washington and digging before Norfolk. Not until thirteen years after the close of the war do we find gold returning to the same point."

THE Lindsay Post strongly commends our notice about the quarterly settlement of accounts, and we are glad to notice from its announcement that several of the leading business men in that town have come to an agreement to enforce shorter credits and to have a prompt settlement of accounts. If similar steps were taken in other towns, it would be the better for all parties concerned, and we trust the movement begun so auspiciously will extend to every town and village in the Province.

The stables of Wm. Walker, corner of Park and Merrick streets, Hamilton, were burned on Tu sday.

On Monday night a barn belonging to Mr. Samuel Savage, 12th concession of Sullivan, was totally destroyed by fire. Loss about $800; insured for $250.

It is rumoured that one or two of the oil refineries in London East will remove to Petrolia, in consequence of the opening of the new railway between Petrolia and Oil City on Thursday.

Pettit's Eye-Salve.

AN INFALLIBLE REMEDY FOR ALL DISEASES OF THE EYE (ACUTE OR CHRONIC), GRANULATION OF THE LIDS, ULCERATION OF THE LACHRYMAL GLANDS, FILM, AND WEAKNESS OF THE VISION FROM ANY CAUSE.

THE AMERICAN EYE SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflammation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also, for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effectual remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, avoiding the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of caustic minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. IT IS USED SUCCESSFULLY FOR PILES. Its soothing effect is immediate, and a permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "DR. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE SALVE", while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Puslinch Council.

Pursuant to statutory appointment the Council elect for the municipality of Puslinch met in the Council Room, Aberfoyle, Monday, January 21st, at 11 o'clock, a.m. The members were all present, and having made and subscribed the declaration of independence of qualification and of office, took their seats in the following order, Mr. William Leslie, Reeve; Mr. William Nicoll, Deputy-Reeve; Messrs. John Iles, Duncan McFarlane, and Martin Sprutan, Councillors.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and sustained.

On motion of Mr. Nicoll, seconded by Mr. McFarlane, Mr. Thomas Ellis was appointed auditor by the Council. The Reeve nominated and appointed Mr. Peter Grant for auditor.

The trustees of School Section No. 9 applied for an order for $2.10, school taxes levied against lot 26, rear of the 6th concession, a now resident lot, which was granted.

Mr. Mahon presented a petition from the directors of the Towship Agricultural Society, setting forth that from circumstances over which the petitioners had no control, a considerable deficit occurred in the funds of the Society. That notwithstanding all the efforts put forth they were not able fully to overcome said deficit, and praying the Council to make a grant of $25 to liquidate said deficit. The prayer of the petition was granted.

Mr. Thomas Ingram, bailiff, appeared before the Council, and stated that he was employed without a warrant to convey a dangerous lunatic from the municipality to the Guelph gaol, and claiming a fee of $2 for his trouble and expenses. The Council ordered the amount to be paid.

The following accounts were presented and ordered to be paid, namely, Rowsell & Hutchison, Toronto, for stationary, $10 80; Municipal election expenses, $3; James McLean, Clerk, express charges, 70c.; Samuel Falconbridge, postage and stationary, $12.99; Messrs. Guthrie, Watt & Cutten, for advice, $10; and the sum of $3 to Jeremiah Collins for cedar posts planted on either side of the Pond road, between lots 15 and 16, in the third concession. Applications will be received until the next meeting of the Council from parties eligible to fill the office of Assessor, one for the east side and one for the west side of the Brock road.

The Council adjourned to meet again on Monday, February 4th, at 10 o'clock, a.m.

JAMES McLEAN, Clerk.

Harriston Correspondence.

A meeting of the curlers was held at the Collison House on Tuesday of last week, for the purpose of amalgamating the junior and senior clubs. The arrangement of amalgamation having been agreed on, the following officers were duly elected for the ensuing year:—John Prain, Reeve of Minto, President; Eliot Fulton, Vice-President; E. H. Dewar, Secretary; Geo. Moore, Treasurer; James Moore, Chaplain.

A very large quantity of farm produce was disposed of on the Harriston market last week. The absence of sleighing this week will likely cause a falling off.

Benjamin Gray, one of the pioneers of this place, is about to remove to Ingersoll, where he purposes going into the baking business.

The oratorio of the beautiful Queen Esther, under the leadership of Professor Osborne, will be given in the Town Hall, Harriston, on Monday and Tuesday, January 28th and 29th, by a class of sixty performers dressed in appropriate costumes. The entertainment promises to be a most magnificent affair.

The main event of this week is the Caledonia ball, which will take place in the Town Hall on Friday evening of this week.

Oh! for good sleighing, is the wish of all.

The Minto Council met in the Township Hall on Monday for the first time this year. After having taken the oath of office, they re-appointed the following: Richard Bride, Collector for the western division; John Henry, for the eastern division. Ebenezer Atchison was reappointed Assessor. A. C. R. Saunders was retained as Clerk and Treasurer. All at the same salaries as heretofore.

Minto Lodge No. 98, I.O.O.F. have purchased the property on Elora street known as the Bentley Block, and the room in which meetings are now held. Also a building lot on Queen st., in connection with the same property.

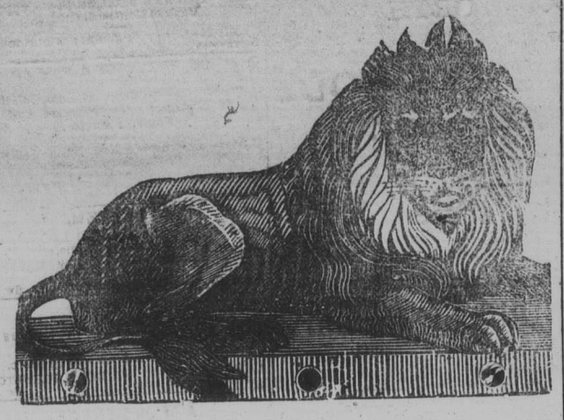
A number of lovers of mirth paid this Village a visit on Thursday evening of last week for the purpose of having a dance. They put up at the Collison House, where they were very hospitably entertained. Good music was in attendance, and the visitors, with a number of friends, enjoyed themselves in a rational way for a few hours, when all separated in good humor and good order.

James Brown, of this place, has sold his farm, consisting of about 80 acres in the corporation of Harriston, for the sum of $9,000, being an advance of $4,000 in two years. J. F. Wilson, of the firm of Wilson & Stewart, is the purchaser.

Eramosa Township Council Meeting.

CENTRE INN, 21st January, 1878.

The Council elect met here this day at 11 o'clock a.m. pursuant to the Statute. The Clerk read a statement of the result of the late municipal election from which it appeared that John Rea, had been duly elected Reeve George Duffield Deputy Reeve and Thos. Waters, Henry Horton, Jun., and John Mutrie, Municipal Councillors by a majority of the votes, and these gentlemen being present made and subscribed the usual declarations of qualification and office and took their seats as the Council for 1878.



A By-law was introduced and passed after the usual number of readings appointing John Black as Assessor for the south division; William Rea, for the north division; Hugh Black, Collector; John Duffield and Joseph Wood (Lot 28, Con. 3) Auditors

One dollar each of dog tax was ordered to be refunded to Ralph Richardson, James Argo; Frederick Cook; and Thomas Weatherstone, their dogs having been destroyed or disappeared soon after the Assessor was round last spring. The following accounts were ordered to be paid, viz: J. H. Hacking for printing, $8.80; Innes & Davidson for printing; $38 96; T. J. Day, municipal blanks and stationery, $7.45.

$32 were ordered to be paid to the Clerk, with which he was to pay the Deputy Returning Officers and for Polling booths connected with the late Municipal Election. The Auditors were instructed to meet at the Treasurer's office on the 1st February to audit his accounts, and the collector was instructed to make his return to the treasurer on or before that same day.

On motion the Council adjourned to meet again at the Centre Inn on Monday, the 11th day of February next.

J. A. DAVIDSON, Township Clerk.

One of the men then put his arm up the spout to find out the cause, when he felt Randle's boot. Poole on "Anglo-Israel," in the Bridge-St. Church, was one of the richest, raciest and most instructive ever delivered to a Belleville audience. The Evening Mercury

THURSDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 24, 1878.

Marriage of the King of Spain.

MADRID, Jan. 23.—The marriage of King Alfonso took place to-day in the Atocha Cathedral with great splendour. Among those present were Queen Christina and King Francisco, the King's grandmother and father, special ambassadors from France, Austria, Russia, England, the Apostolic Delegate, the Count and Countess of Paris, Senators and Deputies, and other dignitaries. The Pope, who is the King's godfather, sent by the Apostolic Delegate a wedding ring blessed by His Holiness, and a rose of diamonds for the Queen. The Duke de Montpensier gives his daughter twenty-five million francs, in addition to a great quantity of diamonds and a wonderfully rich trousseau. Alfonso gives the Queen several suits, jewels and his portrait set in brilliants. Great preparations have been made for the wedding festivities. They are to last five days. There will also be a six weeks' season of the Italian Opera. The Queen also received from her sister, the Countess of Paris, a magnificent set of jewels.

The wedding ceremony occupied nearly two hours. Crowds thronged the streets, and enthusiastically cheered the King and the Princess. Thousands of strangers are here.

The entire city is splendidly illuminated to-night. Among the decorations is an immense triumphal arch in crystal, emblazoned with the arms of the King and Queen, all illuminated with gas jets. There was a magnificent display of fireworks during the evening, and the streets were thronged with gaily dressed crowds.

The War News.

January 23.

The Paris Journal des Debats learns that Russia has informed the Powers that she does not aim at signing a treaty of peace at Constantinople, as she recognizes the difficulties which might arise from such a course, but she continues the advance of the army with the object of exercising pressure upon the Porte. As soon as the preliminaries of peace are accepted an armistice will be concluded and the preliminaries communicated to the Powers.

A St. Petersburgh correspondent telegraphs:—There is much excitement here, and but little hope of the success of the negotiations is entertained. It is already rumoured that they had been broken off. Many desire an armistice for the present, and that peace should be dictated in Constantinople. The threatening language of a section of the English press causes much irritation. People say, "We do not wish war with England, but if it is forced upon us, it will be immensely popular." Much depends upon the attitude of Austria, regarding which there are many contradictory rumors.

Sir Stafford Northcote was to-day waited upon by a private deputation of Conservatives, and during the conversation which followed regarding the Eastern Question the Chancellor informed the deputation, which consisted of members of Parliament, that the Government intended to protect Constantinople and Gallipoli, and unless things changed the Government might ask a money vote on Thursday.

In the House of Commons yesterday, the Under-Secretary for the Foreign Department said the Foreign Office has received no authentic information that a strong Russian force was marching on Gallipoli; but had received reports concerning the truth of which it had no means of judging, that Russian troops were advancing in that direction. The reports were undoubtedly forwarded by the British Ambassador at Constantinople as current rumors.

Despatches from St. Petersburg speak of irritation there at the English attitude, and quote the utterances of the semi-official press, that if the present negotiations fail it will be in consequence of England's refusal to recognize a peace concluded without the participation of Europe.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—The latest advices from London and Vienna are of a rather satisfactory character, and the relations between Russia and England are now on a better footing.

A Rome correspondent announces that the Italian squadron has been ordered to proceed to the Levant.

A Vienna special asserts that Russia has invited Austria to take immediate possession of Bosnia and Herzegovina, but Count Andrassy hesitates. He acknowledged that the Russian conditions sufficiently respect Austria's interests, but he has discovered among them what he fears will be a casus belli for England. He has opened negotiations with a view of modifying the Russian demands.

Reports of a Russian advance beyond Adrianople are beginning to attract attention; but the wild statements from Constantinople no not command much credit. It is thought that at most only a few Russian cavalry can have been seen in the direction of Gallipoli.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—The Grand Duke Nicholas telegraphs that he intends to leave Kezanlik on the 24th and hopes to arrive at Adrianople on the 27th.

A Constantinople despatch says that the Russians have arrived at Kezashn, and are expected to reach the neighborhood of Gallipoli on Saturday.

ONE WHO WANTED RELIEF.—Mr. Biscoe, late chairman of the Relief Committee, had a call from a Mrs. Ferguson, of Mount Forest, a few days ago. She stated that she wanted relief. A stove she would like to have, but if no stove could be furnished her at the expense of the town, she would be satisfied with first-class groceries. Mr. Biscoe wanted to know why she did not remain in Mount Forest and receive assistance from that municipality where she was known. She replied that she was peculiarly situated. Her husband was being cared for by the county. "In fact he had been charged with stripping clothes lines, was brought to Guelph, tried before Judge Macdonald, and His Honor having doubts as to his guilt, remanded him for four months to the Central Prison."

VISIT TO THE GENERAL HOSPITAL.—Acting on the invitation extended to the County County by the directors of the Guelph General Hospital, that corporation repaired in a body to the institution this (Thursday) afternoon, and made a thorough inspection of the buildings, under the guidance of the resident medical student, Mr. Egleston, and the directors. Nearly all expressed themselves highly pleased with the appearance of everything in detail, and those of the Council who did not know much about the working of the insitution before, were satisfied that if there was everything in the county deserving of their most generous support it was the Guelph Hospital. Besides members of the Council present the were Messrs. W. H. Mills, J. P. MacMillan, John Harris, Edward O'Connor, Thos. A. Heffernan and others. Before the company separated Mr. Geo. Elliott, on behalf of the directors made a short and earnest appeal to the liberality of the County Council to aid in extricating the board out of its present financial difficulties and enable the institution to carry out that great and noble work which it is intended to accomplish, not only for the town, but quite as much for the entire county.

Missionary Meeting.

There was a very interesting missionary meeting held in St. George's Church last evening. Prayers were read by the Rev. Mr. Caswell, of Fergus, after which Canon Dixon spoke of the objects of the meeting, and gave an account of a civilized settlement of Indians he had visited, and another in the Bishop's diocese where they were all Pagans, comparing the two. Mr. Caswell followed, speaking of the importance of mission work, and the duties of the laity in sustaining them. The Bishop of Algoma was then introduced, and gave a most interesting account of his remote diocese, and the Church work going on both among the poor settlers, and the scattered tribes of Indians. He gave an account of the great work that was being carried on by the Rev. Mr. Wilson, an English clergyman of means and a high position in England, who had devoted himself to the work of training the Indians, taking them when they were quite young. He has now fifty-six young Indians under his charge, who have made great progress in learning trades and receiving the elements of a good education. The Rev. Mr. Pigott, of Morrisfield, gave an account of mission work in the United States. Several missionary hyms were sung by the choir. There was a tolerably good attendance considering the severe weather, and the offertory appeared to be a good one.

St. George's Church Missionary Meeting.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—I had the pleasure of attending, last night, the missionary meeting in St. George's Church, when the attendance was small, considering the announcement that the Bishop of Algoma and other rev. gentlemen would address the audience.

The Rev. Bishop, after a very detailed and somewhat inaudible address regarding the extent and character of the sphere of his missionary work, was followed by the Rev. Mr. Pigott, who, judging by his frequent laudation of the labors and energy of the Episcopal Church of the United States, is recently from that land. During his address, which was characterized by considerable energy, but in tone and manner ill adapted to the edifice, among other things he made the following statement:—That while the Protestant Episcopal Church had increased 25 per cent., (no specified time given, that I heard), the Methodist Episcopal Church decreased 2½ per cent., the Baptist 2 per cent., and one or two other denominations still more.

Upon going home I turned up the printed statistics as given in the Methodist Almanac for 1878, published by Nelson & Philips, N.Y., regarding the status of the Methodist body, I find the following figures:—Total increase of lay members Nov. 1, 1877, 21,775; increase in ten years, 527,206. This does not look much like a decrease of 2½ per cent.

The figures for 1877 are exclusive of the returns for several of the southern States, which had not been received.

ONE PRESENT.

Guelph, Jan. 24, 1878.

The Estimates of 1878.

The Estimates for 1878, for the Province of Ontario have been submitted to the House. They are as follows:—

Services.	For Current Expenditure	On Capital Account.
Civil Government	$ 158,897
Legislation	131,350
Administration of Justice	294,960
Education	544,715
Public Institutions, Maintenance	507,296
Immigration	37,500
Agriculture, Arts, Literrary, and Scientific Institutions	103,450
Hospitals and Charities	66,638
Miscellaneous Expenditure	55,447
Public Buildings—
(1) Repairs	9,700
(2) Capital Account ..		$308,986
Public Works—
(1) Repairs	3,700
(2) Capital Account ..		24,300
Colonization Roads ...		85,700
Charges on Crown Lands	89,000
Unforseen and unprovided	50,000
Total	$2,052,653	$418,986
Total of Current and Capital Expenditure		$2,471,639
Refund Account		70,713
Grand Total		$2,542,352

The net increase in current expenditure is $4,077. In the expenditure on capital account there is this year a decrease of $24,940. The total amount of the estimated expenditure for 1877 was $2,616,046 89; the total amount for 1878, as shown above, is $2,542,353 94. The amount voted for refunds in 1877 was $104,319 27, which with a vote of $19,223 87 to complete the services of 1875 made a total of $123,543.14. The amount of the estimate for refunds in 1878 is only $70,713.76, a decrease for this year of $52,829 38. The great increase in the maintenance of public institutions is caused chiefly by the proposal to establish an industrial department in connection with the Central Prison at a cost of $36,875. The reduction in the estimate for immigration is due partly to the fact that there are no arrears to be provided for as in 1877, and partly to the vote asked for the reduction of passage money to selected immigrants being cut down from $10,000 to $6,000.

The Austrian Ministry have resigned, but it is probable that a compromise will be effected.

Sitting Bull is said to be moving south, and an attack upon Forts Keogh and Peck is anticipated.

CORRECTION.—Having found that some persons have concluded that WILSON'S WILD CHERRY contains opium (as most medicines prepared for the purpose do) the proprietors take this opportunity of stating that the Wild Cherry contains no trace of this or any other narcotic, and may be given to an infant with the same safety and benefit as to an adult. The tonic effects of the Wild Cherry show themselves in an increased appetite and recuperated strength, and to those whose systems have been reduced by chronic diseases of the Lungs or Bronchial Tubes it is especially recommended. St. Joseph's Hospital.

Opening and Consecration by His Lordship Bishop Crinnon.

On Wednesday afternoon almost the entire County Council, Mayor Howard and several members of the Town Council, besides ladies and invited guests, were present at the formal opening of the new wing of St. Joseph's Hospital and consecration of the same by His Lordship Bishop Crinnon, of Hamilton. Previous to the arrival of the Bishop, the strangers present, under guidance, were conducted over the entire building, and on every hand remarks were made about the extreme cleanliness of each ward, and the comfort of the surroundings. In several instances beds were occupied by old people, evidently well up in the eighties or nineties, who had the best of care and attention from the ladies of the institution, and were only waiting to pass peacefully away. The atmosphere in every ward was of a healthy temperature, and while there was sufficient warmth, the ventilation was thorough. The building is heated with hot air, from a furnace, built under the direction of Rev. Father Dumortier. The furnace consists of a large cylinder of wrought iron surmounted by an upright cylinder, or drum, into which all the smoke passes, and in which the heat is so intense that nearly the entire decomposition of the smoke takes place, and by this the heat reaches a greater intensity.

Shortly after two o'clock, His Lordship, the Bishop arrived, accompanied by Revs. Fathers Feck, Hamel, and DuMortier, who were received by the Mother of the institution. Service was afterwards held in the chapel of the building, which is a large room appropriately fitted up with altar and all necessary articles of furniture for a chapel. It is large enough to quite comfortably seat fifty persons.

The chapel, as well as the adjacent hall and corridors, were quite filled with ladies and gentlemen, when His Lordship made a brief address, which constituted the formal opening of the institution. After referring to the great and noble work accomplished by all such charities, he forcibly showed how its sustentation should appeal to the sympathies of all. He called their attention to the fact that there were parties who, at one time, had good homes, but afterwards lost their all, and were forsaken by their friends. Would any person be cruel enough to allow those to suffer and die by the wayside, or would it not be better to act the part of the good Smaritan, and bring them to such an institution as they had here, where they would be cared for, and their deep wounds of want and affliction be healed up. There were others who never had any comfort, but on the other hand their existence had been a continual struggle from hand to mouth. Disease eventually overtakes such. They have no person to care for them and no money to procure attention. Those are the ones that are cared for and attended, and a great and glorious work is done for them. Our Divine Master has said that whatever measure you give unto others, the same will be measured out to you. His Lordship then went on to show how in this world each one was dependent in certain degrees upon the other, and no one knew what nursery they might fall into if it were not for their friends. In conclusion the speaker stated that it should be clearly understood that the institution was open to all. No matter what the nationality or creed—and therefore should receive a liberal support from all. They should always remember that he that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord. If they did what was right God would bless them. His Lordship then called on the Rev. Father Hamel to say a few words.

The Rev. Father proceeded to pay a very high compliment to the liberality of the citizens of Guelph and neighborhood in contributing to all good works. He was proud that such was the case. It was pleasing to him to know that the Hospital of St. Joseph had done a little towards relieving the distressed—cheerfully and continually. In connection with the institution there were a number of good ladies who were willing to devote their lives to the relief of the distressed. The Hospital had been instituted shortly after the Loretto Convent. At that time sixty young girls were asked for to devote their lives to God and care for the sick and distressed. He was happy to state that number had been supplied in this good town, and at the present time the Convent was filled and their places had been supplied. There was in his opinion something extremely beautiful to see young ladies in the heyday of life, renouncing, as it were, parents, friends and all that it is so natural for young people to enjoy, for the sake of devoting their lives to God, and care and work for the poor. The reception that the Sisters received when seeking after contributions spoke largely for the liberality of the good people of this neighborhood. He was glad to be able to bear testimony on this point. The poor and distressed could be relieved at for less expense in an institution of this kind than could be done by any individual singly. The ladies receive for pay only what is required for their living. They do not attend a patient as a stranger, but as a dear sister or a kind mother. The appeal of the distressed is one that is always answered by them. The speaker thought all citizens should take an interest in the institution and be proud of it. No person would be excluded, as long as there was room. During the twenty years of its existence the sisters had never at any time tendered advice to bias the mind of an afflicted one. It was with them to relieve the afflictions of the body. It was a remarkable fact that among the number that had died since the Hospital had been instituted not one had ever complained. In concluding the speaker stated that knowing the great liberality of those before him, he felt sure they could rely on them for their support.

His Lordship, accompanied by the Revs. Fathers Hamel, Fleck, and Dumortier, then proceeded throughout the new portion of the building and consecrated each of the rooms.

Members of the Council, a number of ladies, and others, were afterwards presented to the Bishop. Miss Quinlan afterwards sang Millard's "Ave Maria," "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Dublin Bay," and several other beautiful airs with brillant effect, and the Bishop paid her a well-merited compliment.

Among other prominent gentlemen present at the ceremonious, besides the Councils, were D. Guthrie, M.P., Col. Higinbotham, M.P., Messrs. E. Newton, Dr. Brock, Dr. Harkin, and others.

The House of Providence, a stone building adjacent to the Hospital, was also inspected by many of the visitors, and everything was found clean and comfortable, and the inmates tolerably happy.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TORONTO, Jan. 23.

Among the bills introduced was one by Mr. McGowan, to incorporate the Arthur Junction Railway Company, and one to incorporate the town of Harriston.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Mr. Tooley moved for "a return of all students attending the Agricultural College from the commencement of the institution to the present time. Such return to give the names of the students in full, together with the residence of their parents or guardians, and their profession, trade or occupation; also to show the present place of residence and occupation of all such students as shall have left the College; also the length of time each student has remained in the institution." He did not wish to be understood as attacking the management of the institution; but many people throughout the country were of opinion that it was not carrying out the objects for which it had been established. He believed that if a vote of the electors were taken, a majority of them would declare in favor of abolishing the institution. The object of his motion was to ascertain if a majority of the students who attended the College were devoting themselves to agricultural pursuits or not; for the opinion prevailed that that many of them did not afterwards follow farming. He had been surprised on his visit to the institution last winter, in company with other members, to notice that the stock was not at all of the kind that should be expected on what was termed a Model Farm. He found also that the amount realized from the sale of surplus stock had come far short of what had been expected, though a large amount of money had been expended in its purchase. Judging from the questions which were given to the students, there was a great necessity for teaching of a more practical kind than that which was now in vogue in the College. He found one question to be "Give the zoological classification of the sloth, whale, bear, ox, rat, baboon," and a number of other animals, winding up with "man"; and he was surprised to see that "man" was the last on the list. (Laughter.) He contended that the object of the institution was to give practical training to farmers' sons in the improved methods of agriculture. He trusted when the return was brought down it would show a state of affairs that would be satisfactory to the country. If it showed that the institution was fulfilling its original object, he was quite sure that the country would not grudge the expense of its establishment and maintenance; but if the farm was not managed in the interests of the agricultural community, general dissatisfaction would be the result.

Mr. Wood said that judging by the remarks made by the hon. gentleman he expected that the return would show that the Model Farm was not fulfilling its object, but he could assure him that when the return was brought down he would find that a very large proportion of those who had been students in the institution were following agricultural pursuits. (Hear, hear.) So far from the College being unpopular in the country, he was sure that it never stood so high in the popular estimation as to-day. (Hear, hear.) They had had a wing added to it, by which additional accommodation to the extent of 45 pupils had been afforded; so that while they had only some 40 pupils last year, it was now occupied to its greatest capacity. It was now patronized by farmers' sons from every section of the country. With regard to the sale of stock, the hon. gentleman knew that the expectations of stock breeders throughout the entire Province had not been realized last year by from 25 to 30 per cent. at least. As to the quality of the stock, he regretted that the hon. gentleman who was a representative of the yeomanry of the country, should have found it necessary at this late day to find fault with the stock of the farm. When hon. members paid a visit to the Farm last winter—though no special preparations had been made for their visit—they came back and had not a word to say in the way of complaint. (Hear, hear.) The opinion not only of leading Canadian stock-raisers, but of prominent breeders from the other side of the line, had been highly in favor of the stock kept on the farm. He would gladly enter upon a further discussion of the whole subject, but for the fact that the Report of the College for the year 1877 would be down in a few days, when hon. gentleman would be in possession of all the facts regarding the institution. There was no objection to the return.

Mr. Tooley said that he had no intention of attacking the management of the institution; but there was a feeling that it was not fulfilling its original object.

Mr. Creighton said he was pleased to hear that the majority of those now attending the college were farmers' sons, as that had not been the case in the past. The improvement he attributed largely to the efforts of Opposition members in bringing the matter to the attention of the Government and of the country.

Mr. Mowat said the hon. gentleman was mistaken in assuming originality in regard to his resolution last session to have townships nominate students for the College. That was part of the scheme reported by the Commission appointed before the institution commenced, which laid down plans for the purpose of regulating the proceedings of the College, and the Government had approved of the idea.

Mr. Lauder was sorry to see that the hon. Treasurer proposed to increase the expenditure in connection with the institution during the coming year. He contended that the Agricultural College had not been and never would be a success, unless there was a radical change in the way it was managed. He would like to hear why the Government had dropped the bonuses to students.

Mr. Wood said he did not propose at this time to discuss this question at length. The discussion of the Estimates was rather premature at this time; but he might state for the information of hon. gentlemen opposite, that the increase in expenditure had been very small compared with the increase in the number of pupils. On turning to "salaries and expenses," it would be found that they were very small. The principal had heretofore undertaken his own duties and those of bursar. Those combined duties had occupied that official sixteen hours a day and he found himself unable to continue them any longer, owing to his health giving way. Under the circumstances the Government deemed it necessary, as a matter of fair play towards the principal, to have some one else to perform the duties of bursar. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the matter of bonuses, he might remark that if in the past students were thereby induced to enter the College, and the Government were not able to fill the institution without bonuses, their discontinuance was not only creditable but a step in the direction of economy. (Cheers.)

Mr. Barr hoped that efforts would be made to obtain the statistics which proved of so much value in connection with the college.

Mr. Macdougall (Simcoe) thought this was a good opportunity for considering the progress made by the Agricultural College. Whatever difficulties occurred in the early stages of the institution, he still held to the opinion that it was undesirable to give up until they had a better opportunity of judging from actual experiments what the result would be. He trusted when the hon. gentleman brought down his statement the House would be in a position to consider whether it was expedient to continue an experiment upon the large scale to which this was growing. For himself, he had not been able to see why the farmers and tax-payers at large should be called upon to bear a large expenditure in order to give a superior education to a few farmers' sons picked up from here and there in the Province. It was absurd to suppose that any large number of the sons of agriculturists could avail themselves of the advantages of this school, and, therefore, unless those who were educated there signally distinguished themselves as pioneers in the art and science of agriculture, he believed that the hon. gentleman would find that public opinion would not sustain the House in granting $20,000 annually to maintain an institution of this kind at one point of the Province. He was glad to hear that a larger number of farmers' sons were entering as pupils, and that a large proportion took up the business of agriculture after leaving the College; but he thought the hon. Attorney-General was too prompt in repudiating the suggestion made by his hon. friend (Mr. Creighton) that any benefit could be derived from suggestions made by the Opposition side of the House. The Government of course were responsible for the expenture of public money, and were entitled to credit for any good measure placed on the statute book; at the same time, as a member of the Opposition, he claimed credit for any suggestions made and resolutions proposed by them in the course of discussions in the House. (Opposition cheers.)

Mr. Ferris said that if the House had followed the advice of the members of the Opposition, there would not be one student belonging to the farming community in that institution.

Mr. Ferris said that if that were the case the farmers of the country had not followed the advice of hon. gentlemen of the Opposition who had pronounced the college a failure, and had attempted to turn the whole affair into ridicule, instead of meeting it by fair argument. Before many years, he ventured to say, this institution would be the most popular in the Province.—(Hear, hear.) It was destined to produce the richest results to the community for which it was intended. It was a long time since the hon. member for South Simcoe (Mr. Macdougall) left the farm—and he was never a very good farmer (hear hear, and laughter)—and he (Mr. Ferris) believed that the hon. gentleman did not find even writing for the benefit of the farming community much of a success. He (Mr. Ferris) had taken some pains to enquire into the working of the farm, and he found it to be eminently satisfactory. It was supplied with that kind of stock which was the most beneficial for its purpose—that which was used on ordinary farms. He thought it would be a good idea for the Minister to give instructions that circulars should be sent to agricultural societies offering to supply farmers with such stock as the farm produced and which was for disposal. In that way, and others, the institution could be made of immense advantage to farmers. He thought it was not due to the farming interests of the country that it should be called an experiment, for he believed the intention was that it should be a permanent institution of the country.

Mr. Fraser supposed almost every gentleman in the House would admit that, at the present stage of the session, the discussion of this matter was rather premature, the detailed report of last year's operations not being yet before the House. The principal interest in the discussion was due to the fact that there was not much else to discuss. That, however, was certainly no excuse for hon. gentlemen of the Opposition in making assertions that were not borne out by the facts, and it was still less excuse for them in attempting to set aside the fruits of their own past actions. There was, perhaps, no objection to the remark of the hon. member for South Simcoe (Mr. Macdougall) that the College was an experiment. But the hon. gentleman had gone further, and condemned the Government for not accepting some suggestions made by members of the Opposition. In condemning the majority of the members of the House for voting down the motions made last session with reference to the Agricultural College, the hon. gentleman, from his own parliamentary experience, should have known that he wished to draw an inference which he should not draw. The sole object of those resolutions was to embarass the Government, and they were therefore of necessity voted down (hear, hear), whereas the hon. member for South Simcoe wished the House and the country to infer that some innocent motions were voted down purely on their merits. The farmers of this country had very little to thank the members of the Opposition for in this matter. (Hear, hear). From the time the present Government took charge of this institution, they had nothing from hon. gentlemen opposite but their indifference or opposition. Last season they were prepared to say that the institution was a failure, and that the Government should not attempt to extend its operations. Now, however, the hon. member for South Simcoe, wishing to curry favor with the farming community, took a slightly different ground. The speaker then read a motion proposed by a member of the Opposition at the last session to reduce the appropriation for the Agricultural College from $25,000 to $10,000, and remarked that had that motion been carried the accommodation of the institution would have been so limited that it would have become a failure of necessity. That was exactly what the Opposition wished. They desired that the field of the College should be so narrowed that the efforts of the Government to make it a success would be destroyed. That being the inevitable tendency of the motion, it was properly voted down. He read other motions put forward by the Opposition showing that they were framed with the evident purpose of having them voted, and of afterwards using them as a handle against the Government. With regard to the students, it was not so much matter that they should be sons of farmers or merchants, as that their intention should be to follow the business of farming. The Opposition were entitled to no credit in this matter beyond that of borrowing the suggestions of the Commission. They wanted the field of selection limited, so that County Councils should each nominate a student, while the Government extended the limit by allowing Township Councils to propose students.

Mr. Meredith—When did that Commission report?

Mr. Fraser was not sure when, but it was long before the last session of the House, and he thought before the present Parliament. He went on to point out that if the views of the hon. gentleman opposite had been carried out, the accommodation of the college would not now be sufficient for the demands made upon it. The Government and its supporters had been the generous friends of the farming community in this country. (hear, hear, and laughter from the Opposition.) The hon. gentlemen opposite had voted to cut off the the expenditure for this institution.

Mr. Meredith—to limit it to $10,000.

Concluded to-morrow.

Notice to the Public.

We have for a long time been firmly impressed with the conviction that the long credit system is injurious to business and unjust to creditors, and we have come to the determination to put a stop to it. Our experience is that the practice of extending accounts over a year is a great mistake, is unfair to the creditor and burdensome to the debtor. Were settlements made, say four times a year, instead of once, the amounts would be light, and payments would be comparatively easy, whereas, when accounts run for a year the amounts accumulate, and in many cases it is no easy matter to settle a bill.

We have, therefore, come to resolution to, in future, make out and collect our accounts for advertising and job work quarterly, and we hereby give notice that this rule will, in all cases, be strictly enforced. We believe that its adoption will be of equal benefit to our patrons as to us, and we shall, in no case, make an exception.

We are now sending out our accounts for the past year, and we must insist on the immediate settlement of them in all cases, otherwise we will have to take the usual but unpleasant steps to enforce payment.

"Daddy," said Harold, going forward and patting the mendicant kindly on the shoulder, "I am sorry that you have received this undeserved treatment. Had I been told that suspicion were harboured against you I would instantly declared them to be false, for as soon would I doubt the stability of the 'Grampians' as believe that you had acted the part of a spy."

"Thank ye, Maister Harold," returned Daddy, much gratified by this generous expression of confidence. "I am gled tae think a'body hisna lost their guid opinio o' me, especially you, sir, especially you It wad hae glen a sair stoune had I kenned you thought sae ill o' me as oor friends here, when they brought me sic a lang journey amang the hills."

"It was a grievous mistake, Daddy; but hope you will forgive them."

"Me forgie! Lord, sir, I'll baith forget and forgie, as is Christian like. Indeed, for the maitter o' that, we hae made it up a'ready, an' there's nae sae muckle harm dune after a'. My auld banes are a wee sair, but they'll get ower it or lang, and I'll hae tee get a pair o' new leggin's, but, as ye may understand, their cost isna deadly. A cannie hunch o' oat strae, wi' nae thristles, will rig me oot in that particular, sae we'll say nae mair about it, sir, if ye please; and blythe am I tae see ye oot o' the hands o' the Philistines."

"But how got he into their hands," cried Black Dick, with an angry growl. "You cannot deny that you can tell us that."

"It wasna wi' my wull, I assure you, for guidness' kens I did my best tae prevent it, and wae was I whan I fund I couldna manage it."

"I am sure you were, Daddy," said Harold, "and I have learned what strenuous exertions you made to give us warning on the Hill of Fare. But I am also told that you refused to name the sender of the letter to any one but me. I have no doubt you have a good reason for that, though it beats me to understand what it is."

"Ye'll understand it, sir, when I gae the name."

"Indeed—then please give it."

"Wad we no better be oor lane's first," suggested Daddy.

"No," was Harold's prompt rejoinder. "This is a matter which concerns us all—every one here equally with myself."

"Ye are wrang, sir—ye are far wraag, sir; but just as ye like. Weel, the man that asked me tae tak' the letter to the gauger at the Loch o' Skene, was——"

"Maister Gilmour Logan."

For some moments a profound silence followed the utterance of the name, so dumfoundered was every one who heard it.

"My brother," ejaculated Harold, in unfeigned astonisbment.

"Even sae."

"Whew, whew!" came from Black Dick, in a long whistle, followed by the works—"Well, that's a stunner, and no mistake."

"A stunner, indeed!" added Harold. "I never dreamt that Gilmour or any one at Mount Cairn suspected anything."

"Maister Gilmour was the only ane that suspected it, sir, but he has kenned it for lang, and has been watchin' for an opportunity for trappin' ye."

"The detestable, malicious scoundrel," cried Harold, his eyes flashing in the torchlight. "He has taken this means of gratifying his hatred."

"Hatred, sir! It's muckle waur than hatred, as ye'll understand when ye ken a'. The conversation atween him and the gauger let me up tae the hale black business, for black it is as the deevil himsel' could mak' it. The short and the lang o't is, Maister Harold, that yer precious half-brither has been plotting' hoo tae get the title and estate."

A shout of rage burst from Harold's lips as this blinding revelation flashed upon him.

"I see it all, I see it all!" he exclaimed, as he dashed his open palm across his brow. "And the plot has succeeded. He has used Gillespie as his tool, circumstances have played into his hands. Ha, stay. I said Gillespie was his tool. Was he not more than that? Tell me, Daddy, is he not in the conspiracy?"

"Ye are richt, sir."

"I know it—this explains all that has appeared to me inscrutable. Dick, we understand now the meaning of Gillespie's conduct."

"Yes, I see it well enough," answered the individual addressed, "but there's one thing I don't see, and that is how your brother obtained his information about the convoy."

"Ha, that indeed," cried Harold, with sudden energy. "Can you enlighten us on that important point, Daddy?"

"'Deed can I, but sae laithe am I tae turn informer even on a traitor, that I wad rather no mention the name."

"For shame, Dick," said Harold, turning indignantly upon him. "I honour Daddy for his scruples, whinning though you call them. Nor have we any right to demand from him the information we wish, but, seeing it is of such vital importance to us, I would request Daddy as a friend to give it."

"I wad rather, sir, that ye guessed it. Can ye no think o' ane that wad dee muckle tae ser' Maister Gilmour—and hurt you—think, sir—think, and save me tae speakin' the name?"

Harold remained for some moments silent and abstracted; then his face lighted up with sudden intelligence.

"By heaven, 'tis Dougal McCallum," he exclaimed.

"That's the man, sir," said Daddy, with an air of relief.

"Dougal McCallum!" shouted more than one voice in a tone of awful passion, which breathed the deadliest vengeance. He was known to the m a'l, and, though not a sworn member of the gang, he had engaged in smuggling transactions along with some of them, and had wrought himself into their confidence for the vile purpose which had now been revealed. That hour a most fearful doom was pronounced upon him.

The smuggler's' law of self protection was rough and stringent. Treachery on the part of a confidant was a crime never to be pardoned, and not to go unpunished when an opportunity for punishment was obtained. Dougal's treachery had been of the heinous character. Its consequences had been direful, and the penalty would be commensurate therewith.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provide our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. On motion of Mr Hunter, seconded by Mr John McDonald, the County Roads Committee was instructed to report upon the propriety of assuming that portion of road connecting Douglas and East Luther gravel road—about four and a-half miles.

On motion of Mr. Landerkin, seconded by Mr. George Macdonald, the County Roads Committee was instructed to take into consideration the advisability of assuming, as a County road, and gravelling that portion of the townline between Peel and Maryboro from the Elora and Sangeen road to the 10th concession of Peel and Maryboro—two and five-eighth miles.

A communication from the Luther Council as to the best route to be taken in the proposed connecting link between the East Luther gravel road and the Douglas road, was presented.

On motion of Mr. Swan, seconded by Mr. Godfrey, the County Road Committee was instructed to take into consideration the advisability of assuming as a County road, the road leading from Salem to the 6th concession of Pilkington, called the Elmira Road—two and a half miles.

Moved by Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Chase, that the County Roads' Committee take into consideration the advisability of assuming as a county road the Eramosa road from the boundary line of Guelph to the river Speed at the iron bridge, and report at this session. Carried.

On motion of Dr. Maudsley, seconded by Mr. Long, the County Roads Committee was requested to report on the advisability of assuming and gravelling that portion of the centre side-road of Maryboro, between the 6th and 11th concessions of the said township—three and a half miles.

The Warden presented and read a petition from L. A. Noecker and other ratepayers of Peel, and Maryboro, asking the Council to assume, grade and gravel that portion of the townline between Peel and Maryboro, lying south of the Elora and Sangeen road, to the 10th concessions of said Townships.

The Warden presented a petition from Peel Council, asking the County to assume two miles of a continuation of the Glenallan road, already gravelled by the ratepayers of Peel, and praying the Council to assume, grade and gravel the following portions of certain roads:—Six miles on the centre side road; three north and three south of the Goldstone station; two miles on the Burroway line, south of Arthur village; four miles on the townline between Peel and Nichol and Pilkington—two miles north and two south of Alma; and the road between Drayton and Bosworth.

Referred to County Roads Committee.

Hespeler Correspondence.

The anniversary services and soiree, held under the auspices of the Methodist Church here on the 20th and 21st insts., were a complete success.—The services on Sabbath morning and evening were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Smith, Methodist minister of Galt, who on each occasion preached a most interesting and effective sermon. At 2.30 p. m., services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Haigh, Presbyterian minister of this village, who treated the congregation to a most eloquent and telling discourse. At the soiree on Monday evening notwithstanding the absence of sleighing there was a large concourse of people. After all had partaken of a most sumptuous tea (prepared by the good ladies of the place) in the basement, they adjourned to the upper apartment of the church, Mr. James Young, M. P. of Galt, was called to the chair which he filled with that alacrity of spirit and ability which characterizes him on such occasions. The audience was addressed by the Rev. Messrs. Stewart and McAllister, ministers of the Methodist church here, and by Rev. Mr Smith of Galt, both of whom delivered pithy and instructive addresses. Mr. Young acted in a double capacity, delivering an excellent speech as well as having filled the chair.

But perhaps as pleasing a portion of the entertainment as any, was the excellent music afforded by the Hespeler choir. At the conclusion of the proceedings it was ascertained that the sum of $85 had been realized to be appropriated to defraying the expenses incurred by improvements, sheds, &c., on the church property during the past season. In conclusion, we are happy to be able to state that our church here is prospering and that throughout the church matters are working harmoniously under the guidance of its esteemed superintendent, Rev. Mr. McAllister. As a large surplus of provisions remained after the soiree, the intention is to hold a social in the basement on the evening of Thursday the 24th inst.

Rev. Wm. Stephenson.

An Unsuccessful Attempt to Ruin His Character.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A few days since reference was made in these columns to the fact that the Rev. Wm. Stephenson, the pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, of Detroit, had been requested by some of the officers of that Church to resign, and the rev. gentleman complied with the request, the resignation to take place on the 15th of May prox. There the matter rested until last Sunday evening, when at the close of his sermon Mr. Stephenson informed the church and congregation that he had a personal explanation to make. He had found himself so often referred to of late in connection with rumors about his alleged use of stimulants that he felt some direct reply a necessity. He then gave a succinct history of his pastoral labors, which began in Yarmouth, England, when he was seventeen years of age. He came to America in 1854, and preached two years in London, Ont. Thence he went to Hamilton, where he remained two years. His next station was Kingston, three years; then Woodstock, two years; Simcoe, two years; Toronto, five years; Ottawa three years, and back to Hamilton three years. He had withdrawn from the Methodist Church because his mind was drawn irresistably to accept the confession of faith and polity of the Presbyterian Church, and he was dismissed with the endorsement: "Character blameless. Resignation received with great regret. John A. Williams, President of the Conference." He arrived in Detroit at midnight of October 14, 1876, and preached on the 15th his first sermon there. Having been taken with a severe chill on that Sunday his hostess gave him a glass of hot ale, into which he had put a quantity of essence of ginger, but that was the only time such a circumstance ever occurred in the city of Detroit. He came hither pledged to temperance, and he challenged any man, woman or child to say that he had ever infracted that pledge in the least. A trustee in the church had said that he (Mr. Stevenson) had purchased of a certain grocer a pint of whiskey a day, but as he had never touched or tasted that stuff he would like to know where that grocer lived. Moreover, he had never taken in his lips a grain of opium or morphine. He grieved to be obliged to thus humble himself, but he was proud of his ability to make those statements truthfully. Much more to the same effect was said, all of which created a profound sensation though no demonstration was made. Then the more prominent members of the congregation, who believed in the innocence of their esteemed pastor, called a meeting of the church and congregation on Monday evening to consider Mr. Stevenson's request than they unite with him in an application to the Presbytery to dissolve his pastoral relations. Rev. Geo. D. Baker, of the First Presbyterian Church, acted as Moderator. Mr. Stephenson then read the request for his resignation and his reply to it, adding that it had been prepared under peculiarly secluded circumstances. Alexander Lambie moved that the church and congregation unite with Mr. Stephenson in his application to his Presbytery for a dissolution of the pastoral relation. Dr. Barclay offered a substitute that the church and congregation request Mr. Stephenson to withdraw his letter of resignation. In support of the substitute, Dr. Barclay proceeded to express his opinion of those who circulated the rumours concerning Mr. Stephenson's alleged habits, when he was interrupted by hisses and exclamations. The Moderator called him to order and forbade the introduction of any matter not a part of the record. A voice—"Mr. Moderator, more than two-thirds of this congregation never knew why the Session asked our pastor to resign. We were never called on for our advice, and I would like to know by what authority they did that?" The Moderator reminded the meeting that the Church Session were the lawfully constituted authority. They may have made a blunder. If they did, it was in the power of the present meeting to correct it. Considerable discussion and some confusion concerning the method of voting followed. It was at length decided to take a ballot, and in order to simplify the matter, Dr. Barclay withdrew his substitute. The Moderator explained that the vote would be on Mr. Lambie's motion. If the meeting wished to return Mr. Stephenson as pastor the vote would be no. If they were willing to ask the Presbytery to dissolve the relation the vote would be yes. Ballots were accordingly prepared, and at the end of half an hour the Moderator announced the result as follows:—

No 190

The announcement was received with long continued applause. Mr. Stephenson feelingly thanked the congregation for such a magnificent declaration of confidence.

Authorized Capital—$5,000,000.

THE Company's special system of Loans affords to borrowers, and especially to Farmers, the following most important advantages:—

1. The borrower is NOT OBLIGED to repay any part of the principal until the whole term of the Mortgage has run.
2. He has the RIGHT (after the first year) to repay at any time, the whole or any part of the Loan, without prior notice to the Company.
3. No extra charge, bonus or otherwise, is exacted on such repayment.
4. He is requested when making application for the Loan, to state the day on which he wishes interest to be made payable. He thus can stipulate for a date, say after harvest, or at such time as is likely to be most convenient for him.
5. Interest can be made payable once a year—not in advance.
6. On repayment of any part of the principal, interest on such amount immediately ceases.

The London Herald says:—"The lecture was one of the most instructive and interesting that has been delivered in the city for many a day." A Belleville paper says:—"The lecture by the Rev. W. H. Poole on "Anglo-Israel," in the Bridge-St. Church, was one of the richest, raciest and most instructive ever delivered to a Belleville audience. Turkey Accepts the Russian Conditions.

Peace Virtually Concluded.

The Russian Conditions not yet Made Known.

LONDON Jan. 25.—The Liberals are preparing to oppose the Government proposals for supplementary, naval and military credits.

LONDON Jan. 25.—A despatch from Constantinople says the Turkish Government has ordered to sign the preliminary peace conditions which are formulated on the case of the independence of Servia, the cession to Montenegro of Antivori, Niesics, Spus and a portion of Lake Scutari and Bulgarian autonomy. According to the conference the programme is the opening of the straits of Dardanelles to Russian ships of war, and the occupation of Batoum, Kars and Erzeroum, by Russia until a war indemnity of twenty million pounds sterling is paid.

A part of the Russian forces will embark temporarily for Constantinople, where the treaty of peace is to be signed, to satisfy Russia's honor.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 25.—The Porte having yesterday accepted the Russian conditions, peace may be regarded as virtually concluded. The Russian conditions are not yet officially made known.

DR. MCLELLAN lectures in the Town Hall this evening. Subject—"The Elements of Canada's Greatness."

MR. M. ANDERSON, Reeve of Fergus, has been suffering considerably during the present session of Council with neuralgia.

MR. JOHN INGLIS has been appointed High School Trustee for Guelph, by the County Council. Messrs. E. Newton and W. S. G. Knowles have been appointed County auditors.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES, received by Dominion Telegraph, are:—Fresh to brisk winds; fair to cloudy weather, with area of light rain or snow; stationary or falling temperature.

THE ROYAL STAR DRAMATIC COMPANY.—Mr Robinson, agent of the above Company, is in town, and has made arrangements for four nights of the above well known Company to appear in Guelph. The pieces selected are announced in our advertising columns, and the chief characters will be taken by Miss Miles, who is a great favourite in Guelph. She will be supported by Mr. Spackman and the other members of the Company, who are already well-known to the public of this town. The plays selected for the four nights are "Under the Gaslight," "Guy Mannering," "The Stranger," and "Green Bushes." We will have more to say about these plays in another issue.

THE ACTON RENEWSHIP.—The Acton Free Press says:—Since the late municipal election, affairs have taken rather a curious turn. Mr. Storey, who was elected by a majority of four, has disclaimed the election on account, as he says, of the bitterness of party feeling which prevailed on the subject of his election, and he felt it his duty to sever his connection therewith, as any efforts of his to promote the welfare of the village would prove futile, in consequence of the opposition by which the position was surrounded. Provided a candidate disclaims an election, it is customary for the candidate having the next highest number of votes to take the seat, if he has no objection to do so. Dr. McGarvin, of course, had the next highest number of votes and he accepted the seat.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of the association for the first division of Wellington and town of Guelph, was commenced in the Central School building this (Friday) morning, at ten o'clock. There were about one hundred present. Mr. Wm. Tyler, President, occupied the chair, and he read a paper on "Entrance Examinations to the High Schools." Dr. McLellan introduced a paper on "How to teach reading." In the afternoon Mr. Boyle, of Elora, dealt with "Educational horses," and Prof. Young, on "Psychology and education," followed by a general discussion. This evening Dr. McLellan will lecture in the town hall, and the chair will be occupied by Prof. Young. Admission free.

G. C. I. AND D. S.—Last evening a well attended meeting of the Guelph Catholic Literary and Debating Society was held in their rooms, in the school buildings. Mr. J. C. Coffee, chairman of the Executive Committee, presented a report, recommending the formation of a glee club in connection with the Society, and the production of another drama by the members immediately after the Lenton season. Then followed a debate on the question, "Who was the greater benefactor to his country, O'Connell or Grattan," Mr. McElderry upholding the merits of the former in a brilliant speech, while Mr. J. L. Murphy, in the absence of the appointed debater, argued strongly in favor of the latter. It was decided in favor of the former. Hereafter the meetings of the Society will be held in the academy room instead of the school room.

BURN'S ANNIVERSARY.—The programme for the entertainment this evening, in honor of Burns' Anniversary, under the auspices of the Caledonian Society, promises to be of special interest. Mr. Maitland has the concert in charge, and has arranged a splendid programme, in which, besides himself, Mr. Wilson, the Scottish vocalist, Mr. H. Walker, Mr. Fyfe, and other gentlemen will appear. Miss Cowan and Miss Hogg, from Galt, will sing, and there are other lady amateurs from Guelph, who have kindly offered to assist. Miss Andrews, who accompanies Mr. Wilson, gives her services on the piano, and will play some Scottish airs. We can assure our readers that the social will be an excellent one, and that the programme will be worthy the occasion.

THE AGRICULTURAL INSURANCE COMPANY.—A meeting of the shareholders of the Agricultural Insurance Co. was held in Montreal on Tuesday. Mr. Goff, the late Manager, sent a letter stating that he had only on Monday night received knowledge of the contents of the report to be submitted by Mr. P. S. Ross, Trustee, and declaring he would proceed for libel, should such a report be made public. Members of the press were accordingly only admitted upon promising not to publish the report. It was a most exhaustive one, and accused Mr. Goff of gross irregularities, and with misappropriating the funds of the Company. From the balance sheet of the accounts of the Company, it appears that the receipts for the past year were $102,003.30, and the expenditures $150,027.85, showing an excess of expenditure of $48,024.55. The profit and loss accounts show a net deficiency in books of the company of $65,106.21, but a supplementary estimate by the auditor makes the real deficiency to be no less than $265,529 13. This, of course, includes the liability for capital. The report holds Mr. Goff liable to the company for $200,000. Messrs. Ross & Fish were instructed, in the capacity of trustees, to wind up the business.

Rev. Bro. Arnold, director of the Christian Brothers of Toronto, has been removed to the directorate of St. Anne's, Montreal. For ten years Brother Arnold has been in charge of Lasalle Institute here.

Wellington County Council.

January Session.

THURSDAY, Jan. 24.

Council resumed at ten o'clock. Members all present.

Mr. Elliott, on behalf of the Directors of the Guelph General Hospital, invited the Council to visit the Hospital this afternoon.

Invitation accepted, for half-past one o'clock, on motion of Mr. Gillespie, seconded by Mr. Mair.

Moved by Mr. Budd, seconded by Mr. McKim, that the names of Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Harcourt be added to the Industrial Farm Committee.

The Warden ruled the motion out of order, as the By-law only allowed five members to constitute the Committee.

Some discussion ensued as to the salary received by the Committee for their services.

The Peel members stated that there was a strong feeling in regard to alleged extravagance in connection with the institution. They, however, could not state that such had been the case.

Messrs. Mair and Roberts expressed their willingness to allow others to take their places on the Committee. In regard to paying for the services of the Committee they did not think the County had reached that pass that members of the Council would be obliged to pay money out of their own pockets.

INDUSTRIAL FARM.

Mr. Mair presented a communication from Drs. Orton and Griffith; containing report of cases under treatment in the House of Refuge. Nearly all the cases were of long standing previous to admission, and a few of them were sent by the General Hospital, Guelph, as not amenable to treatment. Two deaths occurred from pneumonia. The patients in both cases were aged and infirm. Several minor sanitary improvements were recommended. The use of butter was recommended.

The communication was referred.

The Warden read a petition from Messrs. John Montgomery, Geo. Robinson, and Andrew Hughson, trustees of school section 16, East Garafraxa, praying the Council to revoke a certain By-law regarding said section and section 6, passed by the Council of East Garafraxa.

Mr. W. H. Hunter moved, seconded by Mr. Hamilton, that the petition from the late trustees of section 16, East Garafraxa, be laid on the table.

Mr. Hunter explained that there was no such section as 16 in East Garafraxa, and the petitioners had signed themselves as trustees when they, in reality, were not such.

The motion was carried.

ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL.

Mr. Sweetnam presented a petition from Sister Francis Joseph, Mother St. Joseph's Hospital, which expressed grateful thanks for past favors, and setting forth that a new wing had been erected during the past year, at a cost of $5,268, which will add accommodation enough for requirements for many years. Besides, $2,600 borrowed on mortgage, a report appended showed an indebtedness of $994.24 for the past year. The hope was expressed that the extra accommodation would be the means of increasing the revenue from the Government and other sources, and by that means be able in a few years to liquidate the comparatively heavy debt. The Council was asked to be as generous as it possibly could.

Referred to Finance Committee.

Mr. Landerkin presented a petition from the Drayton Council, asking the County to assume, grade and gravel a portion of the townline between Peel and Maryboro, from Bosworth to the 10th concession of said townships.

Thomas Graham and other ratepayers of Luther petitioned the Council to assume the whole boundary line between Arthur and Luther.

Referred.

Moved by Mr. Prain, seconded by Mr. Robinson, that the County Roads Committee be requested to take into consideration the advisability of assuming and gravelling 8th and 9th concessions in Minto from Harriston to the boundary line of Howick—five miles. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Leslie, seconded by Mr. Nicoll, that the County Roads Committee be instructed to consider and report upon the advisability of assuming and gravelling the line of road along the 3rd concession of Puslinch from Aberfoyle to the townline of Waterloo, near Hespeler. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Sweetnam, seconded by Mr. Daffield, the line of road leading from Rockwood to Guelph, and known as the York Road—about seven miles—was dealt with in a like manner.

On motion of Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. John McDonald, that portion of the Fergus and Orangeville road, through West Garafraxa—four miles—was also dealt with.

On motion of Mr. Mair, seconded by Mr. Broadfoot, that portion of road in Nichol between lots 15 and 17, from the Owen Sound road to Salem—two and a half miles, was also dealt with.

On motion of Mr. Darby, seconded by Mr. Sleeman, the road in Guelph Township known as the Waterloo road, from the Guelph boundary to the Town line between Guelph Township and Waterloo—about four miles—was also dealt with.

On motion of Mr. Duffield, seconded by Mr. Budd, the townline between Eramosa and Erin, commencing at the Eramosa and Erin gravel road, and to terminate at the Douglas gravel road—eleven miles—was also dealt with.

On motion of Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Broadfoot, Mr. Roberts was allowed $15 for services as director of the Credit Valley Railway.

Moved by Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Mitchell, that the petition of the Guelph Board of Education, presented at the June and December sessions, and laid over for consideration to this session, be reported upon by the Education Committee at this session. Carried.

TREASURER'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Wm. Reynolds, Treasurer, had presented his statement, which stated that he had received $170,466 03, and expended $167,940 44, leaving a balance of $2,527.59. The fiscal year terminating at the June session, this balance is simply temporary, to be succeeded by a deficit. The deficiency will be solely caused by the expenditure on the House of Refuge. During the past year he had expended and charged to capital account in this matter $21,415.46; and to maintenance account, $500. For these expenditures he received $12,000. There will also be the cost of maintenance from the 1st inst. to June next, unprovided for, say at a low estimate, $2,000. This will make $11,915 excess of expenditure over the $12,000. The assessment of $14,848 54 to cover Credit Valley Railway debentures and interest maturing in 1877, leaves a surplus in his hands of $5,550.90. This will more than cover the interest payable on the 30th June next by $1,988 90, thereby saving to the group $150 per annum. Keeping this surplus intact there will be no occasion for borrowing in June. He recommended that no interest be charged by the County for future advances to the group, and that no interest be allowed on the surplus. The debenture debt is now reduced to $118,900. On the 1st instant the debenture debt stood at $115,700, and from this will have to be reduced $15,200 provided for in June, 1877. A statement of the various expenditures from the 1st of June to date was submitted. Attention of the Council was directed to the fact that the Statute rendered it obligatory on the county to pay to each High School an amount equal to that received by the Government. For the last half of 1876 and first half of 1877 the Legislative appropriations amounted to $2,594. This will necessitate an expenditure of $594 in excess of the June appropriation. A detailed statement of the county rate was annexed. The Treasurer expressed satisfaction in reporting that the ordinary expenditure will be confined within the revenues.

Moved by Mr. Budd, seconded by Mr. McKim, that leave be granted to introduce a by-law to amend clause five of by-law 263.

The clause related to the number of members comprising the Industrial Farm Committee.

Council adjourned till three o'clock before a vote was taken.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Council resumed at three o'clock. The Warden in the chair.

Mr. Budd withdrew his motion relating to By-law 263.

Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr. Roberts, that leave be given to introduce a By-law to appoint a trustee for each of the High School divisions in the County, and that it be read a first and second time.—Carried.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole on the By-law with Mr. Darby in the chair.

Guelph High School—Mr. John Inglis.
Elora—Mr. Chas. Clarke.
Fergus—Mr. Jas. Muir.
Orangeville—Joseph Carbet, M. D.
Mount Forest—Mr. John McFayden.
The Council resumed.

A communication was received from D. and C. Yeomans, calling the Council's attention to the arbitration case between themselves and the County, and asking for a prompt settlement. Referred to the Boundary Line Bridge Committee.

Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr. Clark, that leave be given to introduce a By-law to repeal By-laws Nos. 183 and 252 of this corporation insofar as the same relates to the appointment of persons to act as Public School Inspectors and a Board of Examiners for public school teachers, and that it be read a first and second time.

It was read accordingly.

FRIDAY, Jan. 25th.

Council met at 10 a.m., the Warden in the chair, and all the members present.

After reading minutes, Mr. Joseph A. Carter, P. L. S., Orangeville, wanted to be appointed one of the county land surveyors, and urging reasons for it being done. Referred to County Roads Committee.

The Warden read a communication from the County Clerk of Elgin, asking co-operation in a movement to induce the Legislature to legislate in the matter of appeals against the voters' lists, with the view of making unsuccessful appellants liable for costs, and to bring about a reduction of fees allowed to officers, particularly as regards service of summonses.

Moved by Mr. Darby, seconded by Mr. McDonald, that the Clerk draw out a petition in accordance with the communication, and forward the same to Mr. Massie, M. P. P., for presentation. Carried.

The following accounts were referred to the Educational Committee: Rev. James Middlemiss, $15; A. D. Fordyce, $25.50, expenses connected with Elora and Mount Forest High School examination.

An account of expenditure on Industrial Farm since December, 1876, was laid before the Council by the chairman, Mr. Mair, and on motion it was received and referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication was read from His Honor the County Judge, transmitting a letter from E. E. Horton, asking the position of County Court short hand reporter. Referred to Finance Committee.

Moved by Mr. McMullen, seconded by Mr. Hamilton, that the Education Committee confer with a deputation from the Guelph Board of Education with respect to the establishment of a Model School at Guelph, and to report the result of conference to this Council. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Prain and McMullen, that the Boundary Line Bridge Committee be instructed to inspect bridges built, and to be built on boundary between Wellington and Grey.

After some discussion Mr. Prain altered the motion so as to leave the matter in the hands of a sub-committee of the Boundary Bridge Committee.

Messrs. McDonald and Landerkin moved that Mr. Elliott, Reeve of Guelph, be added to the Finance Committee.

In explanation asked for, Mr. Elliott stated that it would be well for the Reeve of Guelph to occupy the same position as the Reeve did last year. He did not wish to press the matter, but if he could be of any assistance on the Finance he was perfectly willing to act.

Mr. Chase had every confidence in the Finance as it now stood. He did not think that when the standing committees were struck any person was appointed for any other reason but to serve the County to the best of their ability. He considered, in a sense, that one committee was quite as important as another.

The motion was lost.

Moved by Mr. McMullen, seconded by Mr. Broadfoot, that $100 be paid to the Treasurer of Mount Forest, granted at the December session for the model school. Carried.

A communication was received from Bartlett & Co. in reference to iron bridges. Referred.

Council adjourned till three o'clock.

Every lady in town should visit the Fashionable West End to-morrow. Magnificent display of new goods.

THE WAR NEWS.

Critical State of Affairs.

BRITAIN LIKELY TO INTERFERE.

Resignation of Earls Derby and Carnarvon.

TROOPS TO BE LANDED AT GALLIPOLIS.

LONDON, Jan. 24.

If the Russians attempt to go to Gallipoli or Constantinople there is hardly a doubt that the British Ministry will interfere, if supported by a majority of Parliament, and it probably will be.

The Stock Exchange depression continues.

The British Government to-day announced in Parliament that it did not yet know what were the Russian terms of peace.

Sir Stafford Northcote notified the House of Commons to-day that he will on Monday move for the supplementary supplies for naval and military service.

The Marquis of Hartington asked how Sir Stafford would reconcile the inconsistency of this with the promise made the first night of the session not to make any proposal until the conditions of peace were received, and whether he would make any other statement to allay anxiety.

Sir Stafford Northcote reminded the House that he had expected on the first night to have the terms of peace within two days. A week had elapsed, and considerable Russian forces were still advancing, therefore the Government thought they could no longer delay.

In the House of Lords Lord Beaconsfield, in response to the Duke of Argyle, distinctly said that England was not to be dictated to by any other Power. The Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Derby were not present. It was rumoured in the lobby that Earl Carnarvon had resigned, and great excitement prevailed.

The Stock Exchange is agitated by very doubtful rumours of the failure of the peace negotiations, and of orders for moving British troops.

The London Financier says:—Among the various reports tending to depress the Stock Exchange on Thursday the most tangible was that British troops are about to occupy Gallipoli.

The London Advertiser understands that immediately after Sir Stafford Northcote's announcement a meeting of Liberal leaders was held at which the Marquis of Hartington, and Messrs. John Bright, Forster, and Childers were present. The meeting decided that if the vote were not a war vote, but merely one of preparation demanded by the exigencies of the situation, and if it were proposed by the united Cabinet, there should be no opposition. It was pointed out that what was asked for was not an extraordinary vote, but only a supplementary estimate. There could, therefore, be no immediate apprehension of war. The Advertiser believes if any opposition is offered to the vote the Government majority will be largely augmented by the Liberal defections.

A London despatch says:—An informal Cabinet Council was held in the Parliament House to-night. It was asserted by some in the lobby that this was in consequence of the receipt, after Sir Stafford Northcote's statement made in the House of Commons this afternoon of the Russian terms. Various contradictory rumours were circulated in the lobby during the evening. The report of the resignation of Earl of Carnarvon is not confirmed. Nothing positive is known as to the amount of the supplementary supply which the Government will demand, but it is variously estimated at from five to ten million pounds. It is considered still possible that, should the Russian terms prove satisfactory, the vote will not be demanded. Many Liberals express the opinion that the affair is mere brag to force Russia's hand, but they will decide whether to oppose, the vote or not when they hear the reasons the Government gives on Monday.

The Daily News says:—

We are enabled to state that the Earls of Derby and Carnarvon have placed their resignations in the hands of the Prime Minister.

The Daily News says:—

We are informed that in view of the contingency of the receipt of authentic information of a Russian force advancing or having advanced on Gallipolis, instructions have been sent to the Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean fleet, now at Saros, to land in the vicinity of Bulair a force of marines and blue jackets, in order that they may act as defenders ad interim of the lines of Gallipolis, and further to hold in readiness six of his roomiest ships for immediate despatch to Malta to bring up the mass of its garrison.

A Pera despatch says the Russian propositions are more moderate than any anticipations that have been published, and are not such as are likely to arouse the hostility of the English Government. The stipulation that causes the greatest anxiety is said to be a demand for the temporary occupation of Constantinople, but it is hoped that this may be avoided.

Relative to the reported resignations of Derby and Carnarvon, the Telegraph says up to a late hour no confirmation has been received, while the turn of political events renders it less likely that any such changes, if ever contemplated, should now be realized.

A Berlin correspondent says:—The Russians do not seem to object to an English squadron anchoring in the Golden Horn, provided no attempt is made to prevent the army of the Grand Duke Nicholas from occupying a portion of the metropolitan fortifications.

A St. Petersburg despatch says it is rumoured that the negotiations for an armistice have fallen through. There is much excitement in consequence.

A Constantinople despatch says:—It is alleged that Russia; having to choose between conditions of peace clashing with the interests of Austria and conditions clashing with England, has selected the latter alternative. She therefore abandons the idea of demanding political autonomy for Bulgaria, and demands instead the right of passage of the Dardanelles, the cession of a portion of Armenia, and material guarantees for a war indemnity.

The Porte has received the Russian conditions of peace, which are hard. The Porte is now deliberating, but has taken no resolution so far, nor yet informed the foreign ambassador of the conditions. It appears certain that the Porte will accept the conditions, one of which is the payment of a very heavy war indemnity, and the occupation of a portion of Turkish territory as security for payment.

A Pera correspondent says:—It is believed impossible for the Porte to consent to the occupation of Constantinople.

consisting of 2 000 waggons, was captured on the 18th inst. near Hermanli, forty miles west of Adrianople.

Another Kezanlik despatch says:—From details received by the Russian staff Gourko's victory at Philippopolis was more complete than at first announced. Suleiman's Pasha's whole army, 40,000 strong, was engaged and finally split into two parts. The one, commanded by Faud Pasha, fled into the mountains; and the other, by Suleiman Pasha, retreated in the direction of Haskoi, pursued by Skobeleff and Karaeff. The Russians captured 97 guns.

A Vienna correspondent says:—In spite of the negotiations, the preparations for defending the lines of Constantinople are being carried on with great activity. According to trustworthy data, some 60,000 men are available for the purpose.

A Vienna correspondent says the Russian General Strukoff has been ordered to reach the Dardanelles as soon as possible. He had twenty-four guns and a number of torpedoes.

FRIDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 25, 1878

Rumours of War.

From the dispatches we publish today, the reader can glean enough to know that affairs between Britain and Russia are in a most critical state, and that the Empire may be precipitated into war at any moment. In the House of Commons on Thursday night Sir Stafford Northcote announced that he would on Monday ask for a supplementary credit for the army and navy, inasmuch as a week had already elapsed since the Russian terms were expected, and while these had not come to hand the Russians were still advancing upon Gallipolis. It was noticeable that while Earl Beaconsfield made a statement of similar purport in the House of Lords, neither Earl Derby nor Earl Carnarvon was present. From this arose the rumour that these members of the Government had resigned, but up to the present, this information has not been confirmed, and we earnestly hope that the report is not correct. In a crisis like the present the thorough union and accordance of the Government are essential to the successful carrying out of the policy of the Government. As it is, we are glad to find that the Premier has boldly sustained the dignity and position of Britain when he asserted that she would not be dictated to by any other power. This we take it is the key-note to her policy, and we trust that without provoking any quarrel, the Empire will stand by the position she has assumed, and if need be, maintain it to the bitter end.

From the tone of the London press it is evident that the crisis has come. The Times says:—The public will not fail to realize that the moment has come at which they must insist on unmistakeable declarations, and must make their own voice heard with equal distinctness. The critical hour in our relation to the Eastern Question has evidently arrived. The Ministry has not less evidently diverged from the unnamious action which has hitherto commanded the support of the country. We must know where we are, and whither we are going.

THE LATEST.

Our latest news is that Turkey has accepted the terms laid down by Russia as the basis of the armistice. She accepts the conditions of the conqueror. All the details, however, are not yet know, and fresh troubles and complications may yet arise in the settlement of the terms proposed by her.

Ontario Legislature.

The Financial Statement.

TORONTO, Jan. 24.

After routine business, Hon. Mr. Wood, in moving the House into Committee of Supply, made a short and lucid speech, in which he dealt in a masterly manner with the finances of the Province, and made an exhibit which is highly creditable to the Government. He first dealt with the receipts and expenditures for the past year. The receipts for 1877 have been as follows:—Dominion of Canada, on account of subsidy, $1,116,872; on account of the specific grant, $80,000; on account of interest on special funds, $136,696.62; making a total for these sums of $1,333,569.42. The returns of revenue are as follows:—Special funds—Clergy lands, $57,465.57; Common School lands, $62,039.84; Grammar School lands, $8,949.37; Crown lands revenue, $86,750.29; Woods and Forests, $426,566.67; casual fees, &c., $6,951.16; making a total of territorial revenue for 1877 of $628,712.90. The total on public institutions revenue has been $39,875.07. The interest on investments was $183,073.72; education, $57,785.95; licenses, $79,020.96; law stamps, $67,604.49; casual revenue, $29,174.50; Algoma taxes, $1,021.13. Agricultural Farm, Mimico, $1,925.71; drainage debentures, $29,625.69; drainage assessments, $570.88; settlers' homestead fund, $117,16; making a total receipts for the year of $2,452,077.58. On the other hand the disbursements for current expenditure have been $2,017,438.38, and on capital account, $350,877.06—in other words, making a total expenditure of $2,368,315.44, being under the estimates of last session by a sum of $83,762.14 less than the receipts for that year.

The Treasurer after making a full explanation with respect to the finances, went on to state the estimated receipts for the year as follows:—From the Dominion of Canada we expect $1,338,569.42; from the Crown Lands Department, $588,000—that includes the clergy lands, Common School lands, Grammar School lands, and woods and forests; from public institutions we expect $101,000; educational revenue, $57,000; interest on investments, $175,000; casual revenue, $25,000; license fund, $70,000; Algoma taxes, $1,000; law stamps, $68,000; drainage assessment fund $27,000; Agricultural Farm, Mimico, $1,500; sale of Revised Statutes, $4,000; or a total estimated receipts of $2,451,069.42.

After going into full details with regard to the expenditure, the Treasurer closed his speech by saying:—I have to congratulate the House that after having been able to expend the large amount since 1871 of $7,618,394.55 on public buildings, colonization roads, railways, and such institutions—after having expended that large sums on those works, after having provided for all the ordinary requirements of the Government for education, for the increased vote for asylums, for buildings, etc.,—it is a matter for congratulation that we still have on hand a surplus of nearly $5,000,000.

In order to meet all payments, the Government decided to place in the market Dominion of Canada five per cent. debentures to the amount of £149,900, which were quoted, at the latest returns, at 105 to 105¼ As the five months' accrued interest on these debentures would have fallen to the purchasers had they been sold before the interest became due, it was decided, on the advice of Sir John Rose, in whose hands they were placed, to hold them for a time and borrow $149,000 upon them as security. This sum has been borrowed at four per cent., so that the Province is at present paying only four per cent. for this money while it receives 5per cent for the debentures, and five for the unexpended balance of the money deposited in the banks.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TORONTO, Jan. 23.

Mr. Fraser said they wanted, at any rate, to confine the appropriations to so small an amount that it would have been vain for the Government to attempt to carry on the institution. It was unfair to say that it had not been a success so far. Those claiming to be farmers ought to be the last to expect success in an agricultural college within a few years. It was, as had been suggested, a sort of pioneer institution. All that could be hoped was that farmers' sons would come here from various parts of the country, and after receiving a technical and scientific education, exercise an influence throughout the neighborhood where they settled. The success of this institution could not, therefore, be gauged by a short period. We could only hope to see the evidences of its success in the general improvements which would in time be adopted by the farming community throughout the country. In this respect, he thought, we had good grounds for hope. Whether the Government had not gone far enough at present to make a fair experiment might be open to question; but one thing was certain, they had not gone too far. Every dollar hitherto spent had been a necessary expenditure, and what was proposed to be spent during the present year was not unreasonable. (Cheers)

Mr. Boulter thought the College would have been more successful had it been located near Toronto. To the conduct of the late Commissioner of Public Works, who, he alleged, was accustomed to teach the students to play euchre, and to lend them tobacco to smoke, he attributed much of the unsatisfactoriness connected with the institution. The Attorney-General also performed an experiment there which he (Mr. Boulter) thought he would not repeat; he dipped his hand into the Public Treasury and took out $1,500 without even the authority of an order in Council, in order to get rid of a certain professor. He (Mr. Boulter) had thought that a large amount should not be appropriated for this College but if it should be shown that the farmers of the country were receiving benefit from it he should be happy to vote for the money necessary for its support.

Mr. Sexton was always willing to give the members of the Opposition credit for what they did, for they seldom did any good but when they were in opposition. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) He did not, however, see that they deserved any credit for their actions in this matter. Instead of objecting to sons of merchants taking advantage of the College he thought there would be fewer mercantile failures if that class could be induced to turn their attention to agriculture. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Snetsinger regretted to hear the remark made that the Stone Farm at Guelph was in a poor condition, for he had voted in favor of the location of the Agricultural College there, and had he known such to be the case he would have voted differently. (Opposition cheers.) He went on to say that he did not care where the pupils came from so long as they settled in the country. They should, however, be expected to follow agriculture after leaving the College.

The motion was then carried.

We learn from a Washington despatch that the Governor-General, on Thursday, called on the President at the White House, and was very cordially received. Next day the President returned the call at the British Legation, where Lord Dufferin is staying. This is an unusual thing to do, and evinces the most friendly feeling towards Canada.

HON. MR. MOWAT has given notice of Committee on Exemptions, the Committee to consist of Bell, Chisholm, Deacon, Ferris, Hardy, Harkin, Hargraft, Hay, Lauder, MacMahon, Miller, O'Donoghue, Patterson, (Essex), Robinson, Willis, Williams, and Wood.

A CHANGE in the Quebec Cabinet is rumored in the Gazette's Quebec telegram. Mr. Alleyn, it is hinted, may soon become a member of the Cabinet.

Notice to the Public.

We have for a long time been firmly impressed with the conviction that the long credit system is injurious to business and unjust to creditors, and we have come to the determination to put a stop to it. Our experience is that the practice of extending accounts over a year is a great mistake, is unfair to the creditor and burdensome to the debtor. Were settlements made, say four times a year, instead of once, the amounts would be light, and payments would be comparatively easy, whereas, when accounts run for a year the amounts accumulate, and in many cases it is no easy matter to settle a bill.

We have, therefore, come to resolution to, in future, make out and collect our accounts for advertising and job work quarterly, and we hereby give notice that this rule will, in all cases, be strictly enforced. We believe that its adoption will be of equal benefit to our patrons as to us, and we shall, in no case, make an exception.

We are now sending out our accounts for the past year, and we must insist on the immediate settlement of them in all cases, otherwise we will have to take the usual but unpleasant steps to enforce payment.

Captain Crapo and his wife, who went to Europe in the smallest boat that ever crossed the Atlantic, have very sensibly returned in a first-class steamer. His idea, he says, was to beat everything that had been done before in the way of foolhardy nonsense, and he certainly did it.

A tall tramp looked in at a broker's office the other day. His imposing height startled the broker. "Bless me," said he, "my man, how high do you stand in your stocking?" 'Stockings!" was the reply. "I ain't gone none."

HAROLD THE OUTLAW
—OR—
The Gauger of Skene.

Harold Logan was silent, while the others breathed forth loud and bitter threatenings against the traitor. His thoughts did not rest on him at all, but on his instigator—on his base despicable brother Gilmour, and the purpose the latter sought to accomplish.

No resentment is so deep, no rage so deadly as that cherished against a treacherous brother. A deep wrong received at the hands of a stranger may provoke to fierce impulsive retaliation, but from the days of Esau downwards a supplanting brother is an object of terrible rankling wrath to the vision of his machinations. That fiercest and bitterest feeling of anger was now kindled in the bosom of Harold. The wrongs of his childhood and youth had culminated in an act of perfidy, which had shown the ulterior object of Lady Logan's conduct to him. To secure his birthright for Gilmour, had been her aim from the first; and, as cruelty and neglect had failed to remove Harold from their path, this secret system of undermining had been resorted to, and only with too fatal effect, as Harold now bitterly realized. He had room, of course, for self-reproach in the matter, for he might have reflected that in his wild, restless disposition which had led him into smuggling he had given the opportunity which Gilmour had taken advantage of; but men are naturally blind to their faults. Besides, he held the notion then largely prevalent that smuggling, though a legal, was not a moral crime, and he looked on himself as driven to it by the unjust treatment he had received at home.

Daddy Duff watched Harold closely, and with a curiosity rather anxious in its nature, as, silent and apart, he traversed to and fro the passage which connected Black Dick's recess with the main cavern. He occasionally caught a glance of his face as the torch-light fell upon it, and thought he had never looked on one so stern and wrathful.

All at once Harold turned to the corner in which the old man stood, and taking him by the arm drew him forth.

"This place is stifling," he said. "Come outside, and tell me all you know—all you overheard."

"Daddy accompanied him very readily till they had got to the far end of the highroofed chamber, and were about to plunge into a dark aperture which the mendicant judged to be the passage leading to the open air. Here Daddy suddenly paused.

"Wait a wee," he said. "This handkerchief isna on my een."

"A handkerchief on your eyes? What mean you?"

"Tae keep me fra seein' the way oot and in tae this place ye ken."

"Pahaw! have the suspicious fools been blindfolding you. Well, I can trust you, Daddy. So come on."

"Many thanks, sir, for your good opinion; but I wad rather no. The less I ken the less wull I hae to bother me. Sae, if ye please to tak' a hanky and——"

"Nonsence! Give me your hand, and I'll guide you through the path."

"Weel, I'se keep my een steekit," cried Daddy, as with a force not to be resisted. Harold drew him forward. Faithful to his resolution, the mendicant kept his eyes firmly closed, while his companion guided him through the windings of the secret entrance—sometimes crouching, sometimes creeping on his hands and knees, till the fresh mountain air blowing in his face made him aware that they had got into the light of day."

"Where is your hand noo, sir," he cried, as Harold quitted his hold and began to walk away.

"Why, man, we are in the light now. You do not require to be led. Open your eyes and you will see where to go as well as I do."

"Na, na, I winna dee that," returned Daddy, with sturdy resistance. I dinna want tae see the hole for creepin' in at. Sae, if ye dinna lead me tae the knowe, where I was led before, I'll e'en stand here wi' my een as close as wulks."

"Oh, well, I suppose I must humour you," laughed Harold, as he took the old man's arm and conducted him to some distance among the surrounding rocks. When they paused again, Daddy opened his eyes without further scruple, and found that he was on the same grassy eminence where he had been sunning himself during the early part of the day.

They were quite alone in the heart of the mighty solitude, and when Daddy turned his gaze on the tall, strong-limbed youth by his side, the latter was regarding him with a look of troubled, serious gravity.

"Now for the whole of your information, for I know you did not tell all within the cave."

"Ye are richt, sir, I did not. for I thoucht it didna concern the maist feck o' them 'at were listenin'."

"Right; but it concerns me, and it is essential that I should learn every particular."

"Ye sall hae every particular, as far as I can gie it, Maister Harold," answered Daddy, earnestly. "There's nae a man in this warld that I wad dee mair tae sere, for ye hae been aye kind tae me, Maister Harold. I dinna speak o' the shillin's and saxpences ye hae stappit in my hand when we forgaithered, or the meat and drink ye hae been the means o' pitten in my way, for my wants o' that kind are few, and this warld's guids I set little store by. But there's a kindness better and sweeter than whilk I value far mair, and o' whilk I get but scant measure fae maist fouk. A puir wanderin' beggar body like me is looked upo' as ane tae be lauched at and jeered at, and spoken tae as as if he was silly, or doited, and wi'oot the feelin's o' a man in his breist. That's the sort o' treatment I get, even fae them that never fail tae gie me a meal o' meat or a nicht's login's; but you, Maister Harold, hae aye spoken tae me as if I was yer ain equal. Ye hae trustit me whar ithers suspectit me, and, instead o' usin' me like a doug, or turnin' up yer nose at my duds, or treatin' me as if I was something less than a fellow-cratur, ye hae showed me neither pride nor contempt; and if I said naithing by way o' thanks I felt muck'e, and vowed mony a time that if it was ever in my pooer tee dee ye a guid turn ye sud hae the best service I cud render."

"Don't give me more credit than I deserve, Daddy," said Harold. "My chief merit is that I have been able to read your character better than others. I have long known the fine texture and sterling qualities of your nature, your shrewdness, your good sense, your truthfulness, and fidelity. These things weigh a thousand times more with me than fine clothes or superior station, and the man who possesses them receives my respect and esteem. That is the truth of the matter, Daddy. So now we understand each other.

The Irish Canadian has issued blank petitions for signature by the faithful, praying Her Majesty not to allow Lieutenant-Governors to abuse her royal name by giving her consent to Orange charters.

HAIR TONIC.

Puslinch Farmers' Club.

The Annual Gathering a Complete Success.

The Puslinch Farmers' Club since its inauguration has been of a steady growth, and the great impetus received by it through the annual gathering held on Thursday evening, 24th inst., will doubtless be marked. Heretofore it has been usual to have the annual celebration take the shape of a dinner. This, too, was considered all well enough, but then the wives and daughters of farmers could not be expected to take part in a dinner, one of the main features of which is to propose and respond to toasts and honor them in the usual way. It was finally decided to hold a social at which a few short addresses would be delivered after all had enjoyed a good tea. The committee appointed to see after all necessary arrangement succeeded in making it turn out one of the grandest gatherings of the kind ever held in the good township of Puslinch.

The town hall, at Aberfoyle, was fitted up for the occasion, and some time before seven o'clock it was completely filled with old and young—in all about three hundred. The mottoes on the wall attracted considerable attention, and favorable comment. Over the stage, at the extreme end, was the greeting extended by the club: "Puslinch Farmers' Club—Welcome to all." Around the sides could be read "Agriculture, the main stay of the commonwealth," "Peace and plenty," "Agricultural progress is national greatness," "Prince and peasant depend on the farmer," "Agriculture, manufactures and commerce," and "Colonize our wild lands."

Besides nearly all the prominent farmers in the township, a number of gentlemen from other townships and Guelph was present, among whom were Messrs. D. Guthrie, M. P., Jas. Massie, M.P.P., Mayor Geo. Howard, Wm. Johnston, President Ontario School of Agriculture, D. McCaig, Mr. Tolton, President of the Erin Farmers' Club, Henry Dunbar, Vice-President and others.

After an excellent tea had been partaken of by all, the meeting was called to order by Mr. Jas. Glennie, President, who briefly remarked on the great pleasure he felt to find that the efforts of the Club had been so liberally recognized by the people of Puslinch. He took much pleasure in introducing Mr. Tolton, President of a sister Society.

Mr. Tolton paid a high compliment to the people of Puslinch, and the Club of that township in particular. He pointed out the benefits to be derived by farmers meeting together for counsel and advice, and considered that it was only by united action and careful study on their part that they would become fitted for positions of eminence.

Mr. David McFarlane sang with excellent effect "Building Castles in the Air," which created unbounded enthusiasm.

Mr. D. McCaig, of Eramosa, referred to the new feature in the Puslinch Club's annual gatherings. He considered the change was a desirable one. One remark made by the speaker is worthy of more than a passing thought. He considered that the proceeds of the present entertainment could not be put to a better use than for purchasing what would form the nucleus of an excellent library.

Some excellent music was next furnished by Mr. Peter Henderson's quadrille band.

Mr. Geo. Howard, Mayor of Guelph, was next called upon. He said it was with considerable pleasure he congratulated them on the success of their entertainment. Although living for so many years adjacent to the township of Puslinch, he was not acquainted with very many of those before him. The town of Guelph always felt interested in the prosperity of the township, and looked upon it as their right hand in all laudable undertakings. The mottoes which he observed around the hall would constitute an excellent text for a speech. He, however, would leave such to be dealt with by those who followed. In conclusion the speaker complimented the farmers' wives and daughters for the manner in which they had carried out their part of the programme.

"The Farmers' Girls," a glee, was next given by Messrs. D. McFarlane, John Cox, and F. W. Willoughby, and in response to an encore, sang "Buy a Broom."

Mr. Jas. Massie, M.P.P., paid a high compliment to farmers in general, and those connected with the Puslinch Club in particular, for the very liberal and intelligent manner in which they dealt with all questions that came up before them. Judging from the present meeting, there was no class in the community better calculated to enjoy themselves outside of business cares. The speaker touched on the great benefits to be derived by farmers associating together, expressing ideas and giving counsel to one another. As a people those living in Ontario had great reason to feel thankful for the many blessings bestowed upon us. We should loudly rejoice for the great peace and prosperity with which we are blessed. Reference was made incidentally to the fact that the hon. Provincial Treasurer had that day shown in the House, of which he was a member, that the Province had now on hand a surplus of $5,000,000. In concluding the speaker highly complimented the ladies for the active part which they had taken in making the present gathering a successful one.

Mr. Donald McLaren sang "The Green Wood," and in response to a second call gave, very sweetly, "Far Away."

Mr. Wm. Johnston, President of the Ontario School of Agriculture, was next called on. After congratulating the Club on the successful gathering, and complimenting the ladies who so nicely carried out all arrangements in regard to the refreshments, he delivered an able and eloquent address on the duty farmers owed to themselves and country, and the necessity of their being as thoroughly educated for their profession as a lawyer, doctor, or any person desirous of receiving a mercantile training. It was a duty, he held, for farmers to strive by every legitimate means, and devote their entire energies to place farming on a footing such as it really demands, and thereby increase the wealth of the nation. This should even be done at the sacrifice of individual interests. For our agricultural interests to stand still is virtually commercial death. It was forcibly shown how necessary it was not only for farmers to keep pace with the age in which we live, but to get ahead if possible, in the improvements in agriculture. It was forcibly shown how the work of Farmers' Clubs, by the members reading and studying together, could be utilized to the benefit of the profession. The speaker ably showed to what a great degree the prosperity of the country depended on its yeomanry, and how necessary it was for them to hold to their lands rather than embark in commercial enterprises. The French nation was cited as one that swept off an immense war indemnity by the peasant population. The disappearance of the yeomanry from England by the absorption of all small farms by the landed interest was spoken of as a matter of regret, and the evil result which would follow if Canada should be placed in a similar position. The speaker earnestly appealed to the fathers and mothers to disabuse themselves of the idea that some appeared to be possessed of that the most clever son of the family was better fitted for some easier occupation than farming. Keep such on the farm, for the time is surely coming when the highest positions of honor and influence in the country will be filled by those who are now interested in the greatest of all occupations in the country. The speaker wound up his admirable address amid much applause.

Mr. D. Guthrie, M.P., followed with a short and interesting address. Although not a farmer, he was a representative of a farming community. He recounted the pleasures connected with the life of a farmer, among which the present gathering was a fair sample. The great benefits to be derived from farmers' clubs were spoken of. The speaker concluded by paying a compliment to the members of the Puslinch Club, as well as their wives and daughters who had done so much towards making the present social a success.

Mr. Wm. Black made a stump speech and sang a comic ditty.

Mr. Peter Mahon, Secretary of the Club, made a very effective speech, detailing the working of the Club, and how great the benefit was to be received by members consulting together on different subjects appertaining to the farm.

The meeting closed with music by the band, after which the hall was cleared of seats, and about ninety couples entered spiritedly into dancing, which was kept up until morning.

The entertainment committee was constituted as follows: Messrs. Jas. Glennie, Peter Mahon, W. Rae, T. Carter, R. Hammersley, James Eagle, James Scott, A. McIntyre, H. Reid, and others, besides a corps of young ladies who were unremitting in their attention to the wants of those at the tables.

The Presentation to John A. at Galt.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—Having formerly been a resident of Galt for a number of years, and being still interested in the welfare of that good town, I have been greatly amused at the wonderful puffs indulged in by the Tory journals on the strength of the so-called "Workingmen's Presentation," and knowing the great I, of the Herald, would be there, I purchased a copy of that sheet last night to get a full (?) account of the affair. According to the Herald's report, John A. received a wonderful ovation. His progress from Guelph to Galt was like a triumphal march, interpersed with addresses, presentations, etc., which finally wound up by his grand imposing entry into Galt, said grand procession consisting of seven buggies and two carriages, containing twenty-four persons, all told, and even including O. A. B., of the Herald. This is the full strength of the following into Galt, and all the conveyances that could be collected in his pilgrimage from Blair to Preston, then to Galt.

But it is not in regard to the Chieftain I wish to write, but at the absurdity of calling the performance in Galt a Workingman's Demonstration, or even a Presentation. Why, sir, there are not a baker's dozen of genuine workingmen in Galt who would to-morrow honor John A. with their votes if he ran in that constituency, and the Galt Tories know it; and I venture to affirm that the picture presented was not purchased by Workingmen's money at all, but in order to give it a little color they managed to make up five, who for the sake of a little cheap notoriety, signed the address.

Again, any one looking over the list of names of those occupying seats on the platform at the presentation will see how few come under the head of "Workingmen" in the common acceptation of the term. But of course it will now be in order for Tory organs to grind out yards of buncombe about the great "Galt Re-action." Sir John in alluding to the nine hour movement must have been ignorant of the mean and despicable conduct of his chairman of the meeting, and another whose name occurs among those on the platform in that same affair, and if they had not long ago lost all sense of what constitutes true manhood, they must have blushed with shame, if they thought of the manly conduct of dozens of their fellow workmen at that trying time, and contrasted it with their own mean, sneaking conduct. And yet these are two of those who are now held up as representative workingmen. I would like to ask the opinion of some of those who were at one time fellow-workmen and well know the two to whom I refer, and who sooner than compromise their manhood, lost their situations, and suffered exile from Galt, and are now scattered over the country. To these it will cause a sad smile to know that Lawrence Shinner and Alex. Cairns are now representative workingmen in Galt, and were honored with seats on the platform with the "Great Chieftain" for if there is anything that true workingmen despise it is one whom they know to be traitors or sneaks.

But I must close as I have already made this letter longer than I at first intended, but the memories of past times come crowding fast and thick, and I feel I would not be doing my duty if I allowed such men as these to be palmed off as at all representing the "Workingmen of Galt."

Yours respectfully,
A FORMER GALTONIAN.

From a Physician.

Messrs Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Boston:

Gents—You may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP for my wife, who was suffering from general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I have tried the noted physicians in this State, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup; the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work about the house; and I find that I cannot speak too highly in praise of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozen of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit.

Yours very truly,
H. D. BELDEN, M. D.

Baptist Statistic Correction.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

DEAR SIR,—I see by the communication of your correspondent "One present," in your issue of last evening, that a speaker at the recent Missionary meeting in St. George's church represented the Baptist denomination in the United States as having decreased 2 per cent in 25 or some other term of years. The following statistics, compiled from the Baptist Year Books of the U. S. and Canada, will show the true status and rapid growth of the Baptists in both countries. The numbers given are those of actual members of churches:

1866	1,150,000
1876	1,635,939
1877	2,020,000

From this it will be seen that in the third of a century 1833-1866 the denomination nearly trebled its numbers, that in the eight years succeeding 1866-1874 it increased nearly 50 per cent, and that in the last three years, 1874-1877 it increased nearly 25 per cent. There is a wide difference between these figures and a decrease of 2 per cent.

	1858	1878
Ontario and Quebec	10 500	26 762
Maritime Provinces	18 506	36 616

From these figures it will be seen that the increase in Ontario and Quebec the last 20 years has been over 150 per cent, and in the Maritime Provinces nearly 100 per cent in the same period.

I subjoin a handsome tribute from a recent number of the "Christian at Work":

"According to the new statistics of the Baptist Year Book, the Baptist churches have a total membership of over two millions and twenty thousand, including, we persume, those of the British Provinces. This makes the Baptists third on the denominational list, the Methodist and Presbyterian bodies preceding the Baptists in point of numbers. Singularly enough, and yet naturally enough, in this country the Baptist increase has been greatest in Massachusetts and Virginia, where they were in early times most persecuted. "Bigness," says Joseph Cook, "is not greatness; but bigness is opportunity, and opportunity improved is greatness." Judged by that standard, our Baptist friends are, in every sense of the word, a great denomination.

Thanking you for space given,
I am, truly yours,
J. A. DUSKEN.

Burns' Anniversary.

The Caledonian Society celebrated the 119 anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns on Friday evening by a social in their rooms. There was a large attendance, the spacious rooms of the Society being quite filled. Mr. Innes, the Chief, presided, and on the platform with him were the Rev. J. C. Smith, one of the Chaplains of the society, ex-Chief Massie, Chieftains Dobbie, Stewart, and Cowan, Mr. Wm. Mitchell, President of the St. Andrew's Society, etc. After an introductory address by the chairman, the programme, which had been prepared by H.K. Maitland, was gone through, and comprised a number of well selected songs and recitations, all of which were admirably rendered and were well received. Mr. Maitland opened the concert with a most appropriate song: "There was a lad was born in Kyle," which he gave with great power and effect. Miss Hogg, of Galt, followed with the sweet song, "Mary of Argyle," which she sang with great feeling and sweetness. Mr. Wilson, the Scottish vocalist, followed with Burns' farewell to his native land, which he gave with excellent effect, and on an encore sung with spirit "O' a' the airts." Mr. E. F. B. Johnston's reading of "Hallowe'en" was highly appreciated, and the able manner in which it was rendered showed a thorough appreciation of the spirit of this well known poem. Miss Cowan sang with great acceptance "Going home with Willie," and Mr. R. Fyfe closed the first part of the entertainment with "Duncan Gray"—one of Burns' best songs—and which was rendered with a spirit and power which called forth the greatest applause.

Between the parts the Rev. Mr. Smith gave an admirable address on Burns and his works. It was eloquent, sympathetic, and in keeping with the occasion—charitable in its spirit, and yet just in its criticism of Burns' life and works, and it was greatly appreciated by the audience. Miss Andrews, who accompanies Mr. Wilson, was very happy in her instrumental selections from the opera of Montrose, and her other accompaniments were well executed. She was followed by Miss Hogg, who gave with much feeling "Sing to me Robin," which called forth an enthusiastic encore. Mr. Wilson next gave with great tenderness "Flora Macdonald's Lament," and Mr. Fyfe electrified the audience with "Tam O'Shanter," which was given with great dramatic power, and brought down the house. "I'd better bide a wee," by Miss Cowan, was well received, and called forth a hearty encore, which she responded to by giving a humorous piece. She and Miss Hogg made an excellent impression on the audience, and should they come to Guelph again we can assure them of a cordial welcome. Mr. Maitland closed the concert with "A man's a man for a' that," which was rendered with all his old power. It was accorded a vociferous encore, and in response he gave, with splendid effect, "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled." Miss Lizzie Stewart played the accompaniments with excellent taste.

At the close Mr. Massie, seconded by Mr Stirton, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Maitland—who had arranged the programme—and to the ladies and gentlemen who had assisted at the entertainment.

After "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the Queen" had been given the room was cleared and the young folks indulged for some time in a social dance to the inspiring strains of Thompson's Band. The entertainment altogether was a most enjoyable one, and was a fitting tribute to Scotland's greatest poet.

Wellington County Council.

January Session.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Council resumed.

The Warden read an application from John Munroe, of Ottawa, for County School Inspector, Division No. 2. Referred.

A communication was received from the Minister of Education, in regard to travelling expenses of School Inspectors, which stated that the minimum allowance of $5 per school from the county did not legally include travelling expenses. Referred.

Mr. Elliott read a communication from the Guelph Board of Education, asking the County to allow the sale of an acre and a quarter of the east part of the old grammar school grounds, on the Yorkshire Road, and setting forth that in addition to the $8,000 asked for to pay a portion of the expense of erecting a suitable building for the County high school, a large sum will be required—about $9,000 in all—to defray such expense. Referred to Education Committee.

A supplementary statement from the Treasurer was presented, showing that $18,257.91 had been paid as County rates since the 21st inst. Referred to the Finance Committee.

COUNTY PROPERTY.

Mr. Elliott submitted the report of the County Property Committee.

The Committee had examined the plans for extra gaol accommodation, prepared by John Hall, architect, and think them satisfactory. They provide for fourteen additional cells, and the Committee had authorized him to prepare plans and specifications at once, for the proposed building, for submission to the Inspector of Prisons. This will enable the Committee to furnish complete plans &c., at the June session. The Committee recommend that a gate be placed at the end of the lane leading to roadway around the jail wall, and that the account of J. N. Jarrett, for repairs to Arthur Registry office, $12, be paid.

The report was adopted.

BOUNDARY LINE BRIDGES.

Mr. Darby, chairman, reported for the Committee:—

That having considered the communication from D. & C. Yeomans, would recommend, with a view to avoid litigation, that Mr. Yeomans be offered $400 as a compromise of the matter in dispute, on condition that he pay his own costs and sign an agreement releasing the County from all liability of the award. Offer to remain open for one month unless Mr. Yeomans notifies the Solicitors-nor of his non-acceptance.

They recommend that the Warden, Messrs. Darby, Robinson, Prain, and McMullen be a committee to inspect the bridge on the County line between Minto and Normanby, and report at June session.

Messrs. Maudsley and Long moved that the Committee appointed at the December session to inquire into certain matters connected with school section 18 and others in Maryboro be given longer time to report, and that the name of the chairman be substituted for that of Mr. Hart on the Committee. The Committee to report at the June session. Carried.

On motion of Messrs. Anderson and Clarke the by-law for appointing a school trustee for each of the High School divisions was read a third time and passed.

Messrs. Dobbin and Hunter moved that leave be granted to introduce a by-law to reduce, in accordance with section 260 Municipal Act, for the current year, the total amount of assessment under the Credit Valley Railway By-law. The motion was carried, and the By-law was read a first and second time.

Mr. Dobbin stated that the object in asking for the introduction of the By-law was simply that the existing By-law granting aid to the Credit Valley Railway Co. raises from the Municipalities comprising the group, more than was necessary to meet the liabilities of the current year, and they desired to regulate the amount raised according to the sum required.

INDUSTRIAL FARM.

Mr. Mair, chairman, reported for the Committee. That the institution was opened for inmates on the 17th December, and that up to Tuesday last 32 parties had been committed to it—two of whom had died and one left. They asked to be authorized to lay out a garden and fence it, and have a portion of it planted with strawberry plants and fruit trees. Various improvements and maintenance until June they estimated at $2,000, and asked that sum to be placed to their credit.

Report was adopted.

Council adjourned till nine o'clock to-morrow a. m.

WE quite agree with the following from the Galt Reformer: The Listowel hotelkeepers have improved their system of doing business. Instead of looking to the profits of the bar to pay them for little accommodations for which no charge is generally made, they have resolved to charge a small fee for every such service, including watering horses and shed accommodation. The new order of things should be adopted everywhere, as there can be no doubt the old system has much to do with drunkenness prevalent. Many a man would gladly pay for every little service done him at hotels who now feels uncomfortable because he may appear mean in not paying for such accommodation in the only way which the landlord thinks of accepting. The action of the Listowel hotel-keepers is worthy of the consideration of the hotel-keepers of this County.

"Well, may I hope, then, dear, that at some future time I may have the happiness of making you my wife?" "Yes, I hope so, I'm sure," she replied, "for I'm getting tird of suing fellows for breach of promise."

Lecture by Dr. McLellan.

"Elements of Canada's Greatness."

On Friday evening the new hall was nearly filled with a highly respectable audience for the purpose of listening to a lecture on the "Elements of Canada's Greatness," by Dr. McLellan, High School Inspector. Among those present were noticed nearly all the school teachers in town, besides a number from the rural schools who were in town during the day attending the Teachers' Association.

Mr. Wm. Tytler, President of the Association, occupied the chair, and briefly introduced the speaker of the evening.

Dr. McLellan, in his introductory remarks, stated that it was well understood that history informs us that nations, like individuals, have periods of growth, maturity and decay. In regard to Great Britain, Macaulay appeared to have a gloomy future in store, which the historian Allison accepts as inevitable that that country is doomed, but expresses the hope that her fall shall be such as will reflect with glory even in the ruin of such a great nation. The speaker had very little faith in anything of the kind, believing as he did that if the old land were true to her appointed mission, she would increase in wealth, in greatness, and that decay could not be entertained for one moment. The controlling hand of God could be seen through all history, and although nations may rise and fall, humanity still remains. Whatever dark future is in store for the nations he firmly believed there was one destined to endure. Liberty, intelligence and christianity is the watchword of her people and the crown of her glory. If Britain is true to her heaven appointed mission, in sending out to the world that help which is for the healing of the nations, she needs no other bulwarks then that which God has marked out for her. If Canada's sons and daughters are true to their mission she will work out the true instincts of the British race. The speaker while believing that man stood in intimate relations with nature, he abhored that materialism which regarded intelligence as a formula of matter. It was repugnant to the highest and purest instincts of the heart. It was shown by the speaker what climatic influences Canadians were subjected to, and how the whole history of the world had been made brilliant by the deeds of those living in the temperate zone, such as we have here. The hardy men of the north have always won in both the physical and mental race when pitted against those from the enervating climate of the tropics. There was no land in the universe more highly favored than our own, or more surely destined to be the home of a great nation. We had a mighty zone from Prince Edward to Vancouver Island—a belt from ocean to ocean, which in the future will be teeming with countless millions of the flower of older countries. All the territory presents a boundless exuberance of national wealth, both in the products of the mines as well as the fields, and with the possibility of our own manufacturers rivalling the workshops of Britain. The Canadian race was rich in all the qualities which went to make a people great. We have a noble ancestory, indomitable perseverance, great powers of imagination and invention, and an unconquerable love of country, which is a part of that adventurous spirit of the Celtic race, which has made her the mistress of the seas—a position which he hoped and believed she would ever hold. The great question then has arisen: Will the race continue to maintain the qualities of the old race, or will she by some cause of imbecility sink into decay. If degeneracy does take place it will be because of a violation of all physical education. The speaker then went on to show how necessary it was that while the mind was being elevated the body must not be neglected. Intellectual weakness followed physical weakness. Attention was called to the Grecians almost deifying the man in muscular exercises, and the training they underwent to bring the body to a state of perfection; and then the question was asked, if more brilliancy had since been displayed in literary attainments. Neither military nor physical culture should be neglected, for it was by such attainments that Britain was made the great nation it is. It was then shown by the lecturer how that Canada participated in the glory of the British race, the superstruction of which was founded on liberty. The matchless freedom under a constitutional government was referred to. Canada was governed by the decisions of a free people, and if we are wrong we have ourselves to blame. If our executive proves false to the sacred trust reposed in them, or in their position betray the people, no matter what party they may claim to be, it is the duty of the people to hurl them down to oblivion, or have them held up to everlasting infamy. The thorough education of good men and women was also a necessity of national greatness. Popular ignorance was the bulwarks of despotism, just as much as education was impregnable bulwarks of freedom. In concluding, the speaker made a brilliant peroration pointing out the magnificent future in store for Canada. With our love of liberty, a pure religious zeal, our educational institutions, no power can wrest from us the grand destiny in store for us.

The speaker was loudly applauded at different stages throughout his address, which occupied a few minutes over an hour.

Rev. Thomas Wardrope, seconded by Mr. Wm. Johnston, President O. S. A., moved a vote of thanks to Dr. McLellan, paying him a high compliment for his eloquent lecture, as well as a vote of thanks to Prof. Young for the part he had taken during the afternoon at the meeting of the Teachers' Association.

Prof. Young and Dr. McLellan responded, the former making a few remarks in favor of the Model Schools, and urging upon the Town the establishing of such a school at once.

The Excitement About War at an End.

Lord Carnarvon's Resignation—Lord Derby's in Suspense.

LONDON, January 25.

The news in this morning's London papers seems slightly exaggerated, the natural result of the excitement yesterday. It seems certain that Earl Carnarvon and Lord Derby have tendered their resignations. The cause of the resignations was not so much the determination to ask for supplementary supplies as an intention to take steps which will be sure to lead to war. The instructions given to the commander of the British fleet are not that he shall land a force at Bulair, but hold a force in readiness to land on receipt of authentic information of a Russian force advancing on Gallipoli. It is still possible, therefore, that the Russian march may be stayed, and peace preliminaries settled in time to prevent the destruction of the Cabinet. All that is known about the Cabinet dissensions and warlike preparations comes through Liberal newspapers, indicating the intention of dissenting members of the Government to give public opinion an opportunity to make itself heard, and the chances are that a strong anti-war agitation will commence immediately; but the continued Russian advance, and the apparent determination to ignore England, have produced a strong impression here, and good judges believe that the Government would be supported in forcibly preventing the Russian occupation of Constantinople. The Government organs show a disposition to minimize the importance of the action thus far taken. It is reported that the Duke of Cambridge, Field Marshal, Commanding in Chief, who was visiting in the country, was unexpectedly summoned to London by telegraph on Wednesday. If the resignations of Carnarvon and Derby are accepted it will probably lead to explanations in the House of Lords to-night which will make the whole situation clear.

In the House of Lords Earl Carnarvon said that Earl Beaconsfield severely criticized his speech to the deputation of merchants in January; but his grounds for resigning were the despatch of the fleet to the Dardanelles and the decision to ask for a money vote.

Earl Carnarvon in the House of Lords to-day said, although the order to the fleet had been countermanded there has been for some time a wide divergence between himself and the Cabinet. When Lord Carnarvon concluded the Opposition cheered him.

Earl Beaconsfield said one listening to Earl Carnarvon speech would be at a loss to understand why he resigned. Earl Beaconsfield refused to say whether Lord Derby had resigned.

Earl Derby was not present in the Lords to night, but it is said he was in the lobby, and that his resignation is in suspense.

It is stated that the Daily Telegraph's report of the Russian conditions is substantially correct, although the terms are somewhat harsher than those officially communicated. It is believed the Duke of Richmond will replace Earl Carnarvon.

Earl Beaconsfield said the instructions to the fleet to proceed to the Dardanelles and Constantinople were no deviation from the policy of neutrality. The fleet was to protect British interests. The Government, having learned the peace conditions, had ordered the Admiral to remain in Besika Bay.

The Pall Mall Gazette says the alleged terms of peace destroy the Turkish Empire, and reduce the Sultan to a Russian vassal.

The Admiralty has ordered the despatch-vessel Lively and the frigate Newcastle to be prepared for sea immediately. It is stated that the reason for countermanding the order to the fleet was the imminent disruption of the Cabinet.

The latest lobby rumours are pacific. Many Radicals believe the vote of supplementary supplies will not be asked for on Monday. Before the explanations to-night there were rumours of a dissolution of Parliament and a disruption of the Cabinet. A dissolution is now improbable.

The Standard says:—

We understand that the Duke of Buckingham will probably succeed Earl Carnarvon. Lord Derby is still at the Foreign Office, and we shall be slow to believe that he will find it consistent with his duty to abandon the Cabinet at such a moment.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs:—It is generally believed here that the danger of foreign intervention has passed, and that a solution has been found which can be accepted by all the Powers. It is said the Government has given assurance that it has no intention of excluding the neutral Powers from participation in the settlement of questions involving their interests. Last night very tranquilizing despatches regarding the conditions of peace were sent to London.

The Daily News considers it probable that the Government will reconsider its determination to demand a vote for supplementary supplies, and that Lord Derby will thus be enabled to withdraw his resignation.

The Times believes all necessity for a supplementary vote has disappeared, and hopes Sir Stafford Northcote will make such an announcement on Monday.

The Pera correspondent of the Daily Telegraph modifies the previous telegram relative to the conditions of peace in the following particulars:—Kars, Bayazid, and Ardahan are to be held as security for the war indemnity and Batoum to be ceded to Russia; the Great Powers are to arrange in regard to the opening of the Bosphorous and Dardanelles, and submit the arrangement to the Czar. The other points are almost identical with those published by the Daily News. Everything here is now quiet, and the public mind is tranquilized with the belief that peace is at hand.

A Berlin despatch says Russia seems anxious to induce the continental Powers to send their squadrons to Constantinople in the event of the English fleet entering the Sea of Marmora. This joint occupation would be intended to pave the way for a Conference upon the further status of Stamboul.

It is stated that the Lairds, of Birkenhead, received a telegram last night ordering them to prepare their ship-building yard for laying down new gunboats.

The Times says:—The net result of the recent events seems to be that Lord Carnarvon has quitted office. It will probably not be difficult, in view of the peaceful change in the situation, to induce Earl Derby to remain.

The Telegraph's Constantinople despatch says:—The Turkish delegates have been ordered to sign peace preliminaries, and an armistice will probably be concluded to-day.

The peace conditions are stated on excellent authority to include the following:—Servia to be independent without compensation. Montenegro to receive Antivari, Niesics, and Spuz and the portion of territory bordering on Lake Scutari. Russia to hold Batoum, Kars, and Erzroum until a war indemnity of twenty million pounds is paid. The Dardanelles to be opened to Russian men-of-war. Bulgarian autonomy to be connected rather on the principle of the Lebanon than on the plan of the Constantinople Conference, and Turkey to nominate Christian governors for a long term, subject to the ratification of the Powers. Bulgaria is not understood to include Thrace, but only to extend to the line of the Balkans. Part of the Russian army to embark at Constantinople for their return home. And, finally, treaty of peace to be signed at Constantinople by the Grand Duke Nicholas. This arrangement will satisfy Russian military honor without involving the occupation of Constantinople. There is no mention of Roumania in the Daily Telegraph's despatch.

Russia's conditions exceed the Conference programme, and stipulate both for territorial concessions and the payment of an indemnity.

A Constantinople despatch says:—Safvet Pasha informed Mr. Layard that the Porte had made a solemn engagement to keep the conditions secret until the treaty was signed. It had to-day telegraphed to the plenipotentiaries to accept the conditions. It would communicate them to the ambassadors the moment they were signed.

The Daily News publishes the following points in the terms of peace additional to those published by the Daily Telegraph:—Bulgaria to acquire same territory south of the Balkans; Bosnia and Herzegovina to be assured of protection and reforms, and have a Christian government; security to be given for the better government of the other Turkish Provinces; Roumania to be independent; a portion of Bessarabia to be ceded to Russia, and the question of the Dardanelles to be reserved for the consideration of the European Powers.

It is again alleged that the Russians are advancing on Gallipolis.

A Sistova special says:—The immense stores here have hardly been touched, showing that the depots at Biela, Tirnova, Gabrova, and Selvi are not exhausted. Neither the Russian soldiers nor horses have suffered, but the beasts of transport of the contractors in the towns on the Danube died by thousands. There is good crossing on the ice dow.

An Athens special says:—The new Ministry has published a programme stating that they intend to prefer action providing for the defence of the country and protecting Greeks residing in other countries.

THE WAR NEWS.

The Attitude of Germany.

The British Fleet en route to Constantinople—But is Recalled.

(By Special Telegraph to the Mercury.)

VIENNA, Jan. 26,—A despatch says that Germany again informs Russia that she must submit her terms of peace to the consideration of the Great Powers.

LONDON, Jan. 26—A despatch from Constantinople says that in consequence of not receiving countermanding orders in time, the British fleet sailed from Besika Bay, and passed through the Dardanelles. The shore batteries saluted the English flag as the vessels passed on their way to Constantinople. The news of this created a decided sensation in official circles in this city.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A despatch from Constantinople says that the fleet stopped at the mouth of the Dardanelles on account of orders received. It will return to Besika Bay.

The Canadian Meat Trade.

The London Times of the 8th inst. has the following:—"Mr. Dyke, the Canadian Government agent at Liverpool, reports that the exports of live stock from Canadian ports to this country during the year 1877 were as follows: 7,412 cattle (including 65 pedigree shorthorns), 6,825 sheep, 378 pigs, and 298 horses, showing an increase over last year's importations of 4,645 cattle and 4,218 sheep. Large numbers of Canadian cattle, sheep, and especially horses, have been brought via New York, Boston, and other American ports, in consequence of other Canadian lines of steamers being unable to meet the demands of this rapidly growing trade. The Dominion steamer Ontario arrived in the Mersey yesterday, bringing 128 head of Canadian live cattle, 237 hogs, 243 sheep, 35 cases of poultry, 305 barrels of apples, 135 boxes of pears, and a very large cargo of grain and general farm produce." It will be seen that in one year the export of live stock has nearly doubled, affording gratifying evidence of the fact that a new and profitable branch of trade has been opened up, destined to become one of the most important sources of national prosperity. The success so far attending this commercial experiment is largely due to the zeal, energy and good judgment of the indefatigable agent at Liverpool, Mr. Dyke.

CORRECTION.—Having found that some persons have concluded that WILSON'S WILD CHERRY contains opium (as most medicines prepared for the purpose do) the proprietors take this opportunity of stating that the Wild Cherry contains no trace of this or any other narcotic, and may be given to an infant with the same safety and benefit as to an adult. The tonic effects of the Wild Cherry show themselves in an increased appetite and recuperated strength, and to those whose systems have been reduced by chronic diseases of the Lungs or Bronchial Tubes it is especially recommended. Sold by the principal druggists. dw

GOOD FOR GALT.—Mr. Richard McMillan, Galt, carried off one hundred and thirty prizes at the Chicago poultry show, winning the highest prize for the largest and best collection. Mr. McMillan received the $100 prize for best collection. He had 126 birds on exhibition.

License Commissioners for North Wentworth:—Mr. Archibald Ferguson, Beverly; Mr. Anson E. Smith, West Flamboro', and Mr. J. Griffith, East Flamboro'; and that Mr. E. Parker, of Dundas, will be appointed License Inspector.

Notice to the Public.

We have for a long time been firmly impressed with the conviction that the long credit system is injurious to business and unjust to creditors, and we have come to the determination to put a stop to it. Our experience is that the practice of extending accounts over a year is a great mistake, is unfair to the creditor and burdensome to the debtor. Were settlements made, say four times a year, instead of once, the amounts would be light, and payments would be comparatively easy, whereas, when accounts run for a year the amounts accumulate, and in many cases it is no easy matter to settle a bill.

We have, therefore, come to resolution to, in future, make out and collect our accounts for advertising and job work quarterly, and we hereby give notice that this rule will, in all cases, be strictly enforced. We believe that its adoption will be of equal benefit to our patrons as to us, and we shall, in no case, make an exception.

We are now sending out our accounts for the past year, and we must insist on the immediate settlement of them in all cases, otherwise we will have to take the usual but unpleasant steps to enforce payment.

The Evening Mercury

SATURDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 26, 1878

THE Toronto Telegram says:—"The best thing the members of the Opposition can do when they are tempted to make speeches about the Pacific Scandal is to spread their coat-tails and sit down, for it is a subject that does not stand being stirred.

WE are glad to notice that the talented member for the Centre Riding, Mr. Charles Clarke, has been again appointed Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee of the Ontario Legislature. Mr. Clarke, during last session, discharged the duties as chairman of this Committee with the greatest credit, and the fact that he has been re-appointed is good evidence that the members of the Committee have every confidence in his ability and integrity.

SPEAKING of Sir John A.'s numerous presentations, the Hamilton Times says:—"Sir John Macdonald—the great political tramp of the day—made a raid on Waterloo. At Preston the people gave him a suit of clothes made of Canadian tweed, and at Galt an oil painting of himself. The demonstrations prove that Sir John is a great consumer of home manufacture—when he gets them as a gift. As Sir John has now a suit of clothes, a watch and chain, and several walking sticks, and receives two hats a year from Hamilton, we suggest a public subscription to supply him with boots, under-clothing, a pocket-handkerchief and a clean shirt. The 'old man' will then be set up for the season."

THE N. Y. World intimates that the United States Government will probably pay the amount of the award of the Halifax Commissioners without raising any question as to the validity of the award. It says:—"It is probable that the Government will acquiesce in the decision of the Commission which met last fall at Halifax, under the Treaty of Washington, to adjudicate the fishery dispute. It will be remembered that the American Commissioner dissented from the award of $5,500,000 made by Great Britain, and it has been held on one side by some that the Treaty required the Commission to be unanimous to make the award. This, however, is an open question which the Administration will not, it is believed, discuss, but agree to recommend Congress to appropriate the amount arbitrated. When this amount is paid there will be still left several millions of the Geneva award which was paid to the United States by Great Britain."

THE reception accorded to the Captain of the Dominion steamer Newfield, by the French authorities at Rouen and at Havre, has been of the most gratifying of the most gratifying character. Mr. Keefer, the Canadian Commissioner to the Paris Exhibition, writes as follows: "No charge was make for dockage at Havre; permission was given for the transhipment of the cargo and from Rouen to Paris without inspection, and no exception was taken by the Customs to the loading of the barges with our bulky, rather than heavy articles, above the usual level. We have thus reached Paris with the amount of prestige which at the outset of such an enterprise is of more than ordinary value."

WE have to acknowledge the receipt of a pamphlet containing the speeches delivered during the political pic-nics by the leading members of the Government. It has been published under the direction of the Ontario Reform Association. Mr. G. R. Patullo, the able Secretaary of the Association, has carefully edited the speeches, put headings to each subject discussed by the speakers, and has added a carefully prepared index, which will be invaluable for reference. The speeches made at these gatherings by Messrs. Mackenzie, Blake, Cartwright, Huntington, Mills, &c., are given in full, and as they discuss at length the various political questions of the day, this pamphlet will be a most valuable hand book to members of Parliament and others who may be engaged in the forthcoming campaigns. The pamphlet is put down at the low figure of $10 per 100 copies, and any number can be obtained by addressing Mr. Patullo, Secretary of the Reform Association, Toronto.

Galt is to have a new flouring mill. Its dimensions will be 42x90 feet, 6 stories high, and will contain 5 run of stones, besides several sets of rollers. The total cost of buildings and machinery is somewhere near $30,000. Situated close to the mill will be a wheat warehouse with a storage capacity of 50,000 to 60,000 bushels. The Reporter says that Mr. Alex. Hardie, one of the members of the firm, has spent some time in Galt, and has made many friends while here. Mr. Stephen Harris, one of the firm, of Glenmorris, will have the superintendance of the mill.

On Sunday night, the 13th inst., some dogs belonging to the neighborhood of Glenallan, made a raid on the sheep yard of Mr. J. L. Gibson, of that place, and worried thirteen first class Leicesters and Cotswolds, six of which have since died. The loss sustained is about $70.

Burglary—Resignation.

TORONTO Jan. 26.—The clothing store of J. Alison, Yonge street, was burglarized last night and $800 worth of clothes and ready made garments were carried off, including five bales of cloth, a number of overcoats and some dress coats.

Rev. C. R. Matthew has resigned the incumbency of Grace Church, owing to ill health. He intends to spend a few months in the country.

Libel—Pickpockets—Death.

MONTREAL Jan. 26.—Hon. Mr. Chapleau has entered an action for libel against the Herald Publishing Company, for copying the article about the Lareutides Railway from the National. Damages laid at $25,000.

The Employment of Prisoners Outside of Gaol Limits.

The following is the Government Bill to provide for "employing prisoners without the walls of common gaols":—

Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, enacts as follows:

1. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, from time to time, direct or authorize the employment upon any specific work or duty, beyond the limits of any common gaol, of any prisoner who, after a prior sentence of imprisonment for any breach of any law of Canada, or of any Province of Canada, is sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour in such gaol under the authority of statute of Ontario, or for the breach of the by-law of municipal corporation in this Province.

Every such prisoner shall, during such imprisonment, be subject to all the rules, regulations, and discipline of the gaol so far as applicable, and to any regulations made by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council under the first section of the Act of Canada, passed in the fortieth year of Her Majesty reign, chaptered thirty-six, for preventing escapes and preserving discipline.

2. No such prisoner shall be so employed save under the strictest care and supervision of officers appointed to that duty.

4. Every street, highway, or public thoroughfare of any kind along or across which prisoners may pass in going to or returning from their work, and every place where they may be employed under this Act, shall, while so used, be considered as a portion of the goal for the purposes of this Act so far as the legislative authority of this Province extends in this behalf.

Ontario Legislature.

TORONTO, Jan. 25.

Among the petitions presented was one by Mr. Hunter for an Act to incorporate the Wellington and Georgian Bay Railway Company.

Mr. Hardy presented the Report of the Receipts and Expenditure of the Province for the year ending 31st December, 1877.

Mr. Mowat rose to move for a Select Committee on the question of exemption, when Mr. Lauder said he hoped the order would be allowed to stand until the leader of the Opposition was present.

The order was allowed to stand.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provide our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage wich may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. This lecture has been given five times in Toronto, three times in the City of Hamilton, and twice in the City Hall, London. The London Free Press says:—The Hall was filled to repletion. It was one of the most instructive and entertaining lectures ever delivered in the City Hall. The London Herald says:—"The lecture was one of the most instructive and interesting that has been delivered in the city for many a day." A Belleville paper says:—"The lecture by the Rev. W. H. Poole on "Anglo-Israel," in the Bridge-St. Church, was one of the richest, raciest and most instructive ever delivered to a Belleville audience. History, sacred and profane, geography, and the natural westward drift of Empire, were made to illumine each other in a manner truly fascinating.

CHAPTER XVII.

DADDY'S REVELATIONS.

"Just sae, sir. So noo we'll pass frae compliment to practical wark. I needna say, sir, that I hae long seen hoo they used ye at Mount Cairn. I kenned it was a' Madam's doin's, and I had my ain thoughts as tee her object. Aften and aften I hae been wae for ye and wild at Sir Philip's weakness that let my lady row him round her finger as I wud a green thresher. Mr. Gilmour, tee, cam' in for a large share o' my puir opinion. I aye counted him a spoiled, selfish, bad-hearted monkey, and ane that wad wark ye ill if he could; but, for a' that, I couldna hae believed the sowl o'm was sae black as this business has shown. About eicht or ten days syne I was passin' the lodge gate when he cam' oot, and asked me if I was gaun by way o' Skene. I said I wis, and he asked me if I wad tak' a letter tae Maister Gillespie. Of course I had nae reason tae refuse, sae I took the letter, gaed my way, receivin', as a last injunction the order tae be sure to gie the letter intae the gauger's ain hand by the followin' afternoon at latest."

"As I trudged alang I began tae wonder what Maister Gilmour could be writing tae the gauger aboot, and as I had lang kenned that ye were connected wi' the smugglers, the thocht struck me that he ettled ye some ill. The thought grew and grew upo' me, till I langed tae see what was inside the letter. I wad scorn tae look into a letter oot o' idle curiosity, but in this case I thought it only richt tae dee sae. It was only held by a wafer, and by wettin' it the letter was opened like winkin'. Weel, Mr. Harold, I did open and read it. Yes, though I should lose yer guid opinion for ever, I must confess tae the mean action."

"Your suspicion was a sufficient warrant," said Harold. "Pray, go on—what was in the letter?"

"No muckle, though enouch tae increase my doots. Maister Gilmour charged the gauger tae be sure to meet him the nicht follown' at seven o'clock at the auld boat hoose, by the Loch o' Skene. That was a', but it seemed tae mak' the maitter only the mair alarmin'. The hoor and the place o' meetin' pointed tae something very secret. I delivered the letter, but resolved to be at the place, and try tae hear the conversation. Sae sune, therefore, as it was dark I daunered doon tae the Loch, and crap aneath the auld boat that lies there, bottom up, which by guid luck was the very spot whar they met."

"And they came! and you heard what was spoken?" cried Harold, eagerly.

"Every word, and ye may depend on it the importance o't didna aloo me tae forget it."

Hereupon Daddy rehearsed with a minuteness and accuracy which omitted nothing of the whole conversation between Gilmour and Gillespie, to which he had been an unseen listener, and the action he had taken in consequence. He told what efforts he had made to give warning to the convoy, and how these efforts had proved useless, to his great sorrow and disappointment; he told also how deeply concerned he had been on learning the fatal termination of the affair, and that Harold had been carried a prisoner to Aberdeen; how in his anxiety he had trudged to Aberdeen next day, and managed to be present at the examination, when he was horrified beyond description to hear that Gillespie declared that Harold was the slayer of Wallace.

As all this has already been related to the reader we need not repeat Daddy's story more fully. It was now been narrated in ears which listened to every syllable with avidity. Not once did Harold interrupt the speaker, only his flashing eyes, his flushed, and frowning face, his dilating nostrils, and heaving bosom showed the passionate feelings which were kindled in his soul. His broad, muscular frame seemed actually to expand before Daddy's eyes; his very aspect changed as the story proceeded, and when it was ended the alteration was so astounding and complete that the old man could only regard him with silent wonder and fear.

"Mercy me, Maister Harold, that's an awfu' look ye hae puttin' on," he was at length constrained to say. "Preserve us, ye'r nae like the same being."

"And can you wonder at it?" replied Harold. "Have I not had enough to change my nature from the meekness of a lamb to the fierceness of a wild beast? Do not I stand before you the victim of the basest misrepresentation, the foulest injustice, the most diabolical plot ever hatched on this side the gate of hell? My enemies triumph on every hand—they have accomplished my ruin, and left me nothing to live for but vengeance."

"Hoot's, sir, it's nae sae bad at that comes tae."

"It is. My father has renounced me—banished me from his presence for ever. A sentence will be pronounced in a Court of Justice which will make me an outlaw—a proscribed man—deprived of every civil right—liable to be hunted as a felon and dragged to the scaffold—doomed to live as an outcast among the mountain solitude, without a home, a name, or a place among men. Can this be done without rearing my nature as with a branding-iron—driving me into madness, crushing me into despair, or raising such a devil within me as a heavy blow of vengeance can alone lay. Madness I can strive against, despair I shall proudly defy; but I will become a very demon panting for revenge. As for my selfish, traitorous brother, I will yet baffle him, though he counts his object gained; and that perjured catiff, Gillespie, who, for gold, has sacrificed me in my innocence, on him shall the heaviest weight of retribution fall. Ay, those who have wrought this mischief on me shall find the woeful consequences fall on their heads. Wonder not, then, old man, that I am changed, for earth and hell are combined against me, and these are adversaries which no milky humanity can cope with.

A Touching Incident, or Travelling Heavenward.

By the Rev. H. Harris, author of "Pearly Gates," and "Sacred Pictures."

"The terminus is the pearly gates,
Conducting to the golden streets
To bowers of bliss and endless peace."

One evening amid the exciting bustle at one of the American railway stations, a lovely girl about eight years of age, carrying a small bundle under her arm, took her seat in one of the cars. She seemed tired, and making her bundle into a pillow, she lay down to rest. Soon the conductor came along to collect the tickets. When he came up to her she asked him if she might lie there; he told her she might, and then kindly asked her for her ticket. She told him she had none. "Where are you going?" asked the conductor. "I am going to Heaven," she replied. "Who pays your fare?" said he. She looked up into his face with all the innocence of a child and said, "Mister, does this railway lead to Heaven, and does Jesus travel on it?" He answered, "I think not. Why did you think so?" "Why, sir, before my ma died she used to sing to me of a Heavenly Railroad, and you looked so nice, and talked so kind, I thought this was the road. My ma used to sing of Jesus on the Heavenly Railroad, that He paid the fare of everybody, and that the train stopped at every station to take up passengers; but my ma don't sing to me any more. Nobody sings to me now, and I thought I would take the cars and go to ma. Mister, do you sing to your little girl about Heaven? You have a little girl, haven't you?" "No, my little dear, I have no little girl now. I had once, but she died some time ago, and I trust went to Heaven," replied the conductor. "Did she go over this railway, and are you going to see her now?" asked the child. By this time all the passengers in the car were upon their feet, and most of them in tears. Some said "God bless the dear child." Hearing some one whisper that she was an angel, she said, "Oh, yes, my ma used to say that I would be an angel sometime." She then turned to the conductor and said, "Do you love Jesus? If you love Him He will let you ride to Heaven on His railway. I am going there, and I would like you to go with me. I know Jesus will let me in when I get there. Would you not like to see Jesus and your little girl?" These words, uttered with all the tenderness and simplicity of a child, brought tears from eyes that seldom wept, and especially from those of the conductor. She then asked the conductor if she might lie there until she got to heaven, and if he would wake her up when she got there, that she might see her ma, his little girl and Jesus, adding, "for I do want to see them all." "Yes, dear angel, yes; God bless you," replied the conductor. "Amen," sobbed many voices. Looking again into the face of the conductor, she said, what shall I tell your little girl when I see her, shall I say to her that I saw her pa on Jesus' railway? The conductor by this time was completely broken down and kneeling by her side, he wept the reply he could not utter, his mind was too absorbed in the holy memories of the past to speak. The beautiful form of his own dear child, long since dead, passed before his vision, and he seemed to live over again that never to be forgotten moment when she sank into the arms of death. The prattle of his little traveller touched his higher manhood and as soon as he was able to speak he said, "Will you be my little girl?" "I would so like to be," replied the little stradger. So he adopted her and loved her as his own child. In this touching incident we may clearly see the overruling providence of God. He did not forsake this poor child in her orphanhood, but supplied her needs in a very peculiar manner. His ways at times appear indeed mysterious and too intricate for finite wisdom to solve. What we have to do is to trust our gracious Father and leave our deliverance for Him to work out. He will never allow His children to perish for want of aid. He will, if need be, commission the ravens, as of old, to carry food to His suffering and destitute people. He has a thousand ways of working out their deliverances. The swift messengers of heaven and the inexhaustible treasures of the earth are at His command. Then fear not little folk, remember you have a friend in Jesus, who has promised never to leave nor forsake you. May we never forget His friendship, but trust Him to the end.

The Workingmen's Convention at San Francisco has adopted a platform calling for the abolition of Chinese cheap labor, the withdrawal of the pardoning power conferred on the President and State Governors, and its investment in commissions.

From a Physician.

Messrs Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Boston:

Gents—You may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP for my wife, who was suffering from general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I have tried the noted physicians in this State, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup; the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work about the house; and I find that I cannot speak too highly in praise of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozen of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit.

Yours very truly,

THE Company's special system of Loans affords to borrowers, and especially to Farmers, the following most important advantages:—

1. The borrower is NOT OBLIGED to repay any part of the principal until the whole term of the Mortgage has run.

2. He has the RIGHT (after the first year) to repay at any time, the whole or any part of the Loan, without prior notice to the Company.

3. No extra charge, bonus or otherwise exacted on such repayment.

4. He is requested when making application for the Loan, to state the day on which he wishes interest to be made payable. He thus can stipulate for a date, say after harvest, or at such time as is likely to be most convenient for him.

5. Interest can be made payable once a year—not in advance.

The Evening Mercury

MONDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 28, 1878.

THE WAR NEWS.

The Preliminary Articles of Peace Signed.

THE NATURE OF THE CONDITIONS.

Lord Derby to Retain Office.

Jan 27.

The Agence Russe contradicts the rumors hat the Russians are marching on Gallipolis, and that the peace conditions contain special arrangements relative to the Suez Canal.

A Constantinople special says the Porte has received a telegram that the preliminaries of peace have been signed, and that the Turkish delegates and the Grand Duke Nicholas would reach Adrrianople on Saturday.

The Post publishes the following official version of the preliminary conditions of peace:—First, autonomy for Bulgaria, boundaries not defined, under a Government appointed according to the stipulations of the Constantinople Conference. The Turkish military forces to be withdrawn to certain localities determined upon. Second, independence of Roumania, with compensation for territory near the mouths of the Danube, which she will make over to Russia. Third, local autonomy for Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the independence of Servia, with a territorial rectification. This rectification of the Servian frontier may mean the transfer of Little Zwornik to Servia, but in deference to Austria and the other Powers the question is left quite open. Fourth, aggrandisement for Montenegro on the basis of the status quo post bellum, subject to the approval of the Powers. Fifth, the cession of Batoum, and the payment of an indmnity in money, territory, or some equivalent to be determined upon. Finally, the Sultan to undertake to consider how to protect Russia's interests in the passage of the Dardanelles.

The Post says the Marquis of Hartington, Liberal leader in the Commons, will refrain from taking an immediately adverse attitude towards the supplementary vote, as the Government's proposals deserve consideration.

Mr. Gladstone writes relative to the vote: "I have a firm conviction that this most indiscreet proposal will be steadily and powerfully resisted in Parliament. I hope the country will intelligibly express its opinion on the subject."

The Times says the demand was originally announced as a vote of supplementary estimates for the army and navy in the current year, but the official notice of the order of the day shows that it is transformed into a vote of credit beyond the ordinary grants of Parliament.

A Ragusa despatch says the Montenegrins on Saturday captured, after a violent bombardment, three fortified islands in Lake Scutari and were preparing to attack the important fortress of Zabaliac.

The total Russian losses in Europe to Jan 5th were 80,435.

An Athens despatch says:—The news of the conclusion of peace has caused consternation. The Chamber of Deputies suspended its public sitting. Large crowds paraded the streets, making demonstrations in favour of war. The crowd was dispersed by the troops. Several of the police were injured by stones. It is feared that this manifestation will lead to serious disturbances.

LATER.—The demonstration has assumed a grave aspect. A crowd exceeding 10,000 marched to the residences of Ministers Dilegourges, Trisoupis, Seamis, Conmoundouros, and Delyannis, where they broke the windows and committed other excesses. They fired revolvers, and three persons were wounded and one killed. The crowd then proceeded to the palace, where the King harangued them and said circumstances were painful for the nation. Nobody loved the country more than he, but it was indispensable to remain calm. The troops subsequently dispersed the crowd. A renewal of the disorder is expected.

An Athens special to Vienna says:—A secret sitting of the Chamber is being held to day for the purpose of taking important resolutions on the foreign policy. Despite the news of the armistice and renewed agreement between the several great Powers, the Hellenic Government intends, if it can obtain the assent of the Chamber, to actively support the insurrection in Thessaly and Crete.

The Earl of Derby has not been at the Foreign Office for two days.

The Standard says a statement will be issued to-day showing the service to which the £6,000,000 will probably be applicable. Three millions are apportioned to the army, two millions to the navy, and one million to contingencies.

The North German Gazette notes the termination of the English episode of intervention with satisfaction, as affording fresh opportunity of proving the unshakable understandiug between the three Imperial Powers.

The London papers publish the following:—

We are authorized to state that after explanations with his colleagues and the stoppage of the fleet in Besika Bay Lord Derby, who offered his resignation at the same time as Lord Carnarvon, continues in office.

A Vienna despatch says that Germany again informs Russia that she must submit her terms of peace to the consideration of the Great Powers.

Trustworthy advices indicate that Austria has taken steps to obtain at least a formal diplomatic pledge from Russia that the interests of the monarchy shall suffer no detriment. Communications exchanged are said to have shown a more earnest desire than ever on the part of Russia to maintain a good understanding. It is believed the present exchange of views will lead to a satisfactory issue. The reported Russian demand for the retrocession of Bessarabia may have influenced the German action. The uneasiness of the Austrian Government is further increased by complications in her home policy.

The Times says up to this moment a definite and official announcement of the terms of peace is not forthcoming, and Ministers may on this account justify their hesitation in abandoning the proposal for a supplementary vote.

The decision in the Charlevoix election case, now before the Supreme Court, is expected to-day.

VAGRANTS.—Geo. May, Angus Walker and Wm. Hamilton were charged before the Police Magistrate this morning with being vagraunts—i.e., lazy specimens of humanity who have never on any late occassion gone to the ant to consider her ways and be wise. They were all excellent specimens of the tramp genius and appeared rather pleased when they were ordered into winter quarters at the county buildings. They will now be be actively engaged for two months as hewers of wood and drawers of water.

OVER THE HILLS TO THE POOR HOUSE.—This (Monday) morning a decrepid, one eyed female vagrant named Jane Lewis, well-known in Guelph, and who it has been said was one of the Brook's Bush gang, at whose hands, Hogan, of Toronto, lost his life some fourteen years ago, and who it is also alleged placed the stone in the stocking which was used to strike the fatal blow on the Don bridge, was sent this morning to the Poor House at Kinnettles in charge of Constable Colson. Jane Lewis demurred to being sent up, evidently not having a favorable opinion of the institution, but all her entreaties were of no avail, and she had to accompany her custodian.

THE TRIPLETS.—In Saturday's issue of the MERCURY it was inadvertently omitted, among other local news, to state that the County Council made a flying visit the previous evening to the residence of Mr. James Merlihan, on Queen street, for the purpose of interviewing the three beautiful children, with which that household has been blessed. Nearly all the members of the Council were in attendance, and gave manifestations of pleasure in dandling the little cherubs. Mr. and Mrs Merlihan entertained the visitors in a very hospitable manner, and the councillors were made thoroughly at home. Some of the members were heard to speculate on about what the children were worth, and one remarked that if they were his he would not take all of Wyndham street property for them, while another calculated them to be worth at least twenty-five thousand apiece. Of all the visits the Council have made during their different sessions, they consider the one in question the most pleasing.

THE "LATE" ROBERT LUNNIE.—The Detroit Free Press, after publishing an item relating to the rumor which originated in London, Ont., in regard to the death of Robert Lunnie, formerly a dry goods clerk in Messrs. J. D. Williamson & Co.'s store, Guelph, by suicide, in an opera house in New York, says:—"Robert writes from New York and says he is still living on Sixth avenue in that city, and captiously finds fault with the item. He says:—'Being the person in question, I must deny the assertion and brand it as a contemptible hoax,' and goes on to intimate that he has never been in the habit of committing suicide. He further casually hints that if the person who wrote the item will call at his place of residence he will receive striking proof that Mr. Lunnie is in the land of the living. Why, bless you, Robert, we take your word for it. It's all right. Hope the general composition of the item pleased you. We're sorry the main incident was incorrect, but have no hesitation in saying that you are not so Lunnie as you at first appeared to be."

The rev. gentleman's ideas and anecdotes were exceedingly interesting and original.

A CALL.—The Rev. Robert Laidlaw, of the Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church, Detroit, has under advisement a call from St. Paul's (Pres.) church of Hamilton. Salary, $4,000 and a free manse. Rev. J. C Smith, of St. Andrew's Church, Guelph, was formerly pastor of St. Paul's.

ROW ABOUT WIRE SIGNS.—On Saturday, Alex. S. Milne, one interested in the wire sign business in Guelph was arrested at the instigation of Wm. Gurney, another interested party, on a charge of stealing one of those signs. The accused was bailed out by J. Thomas Brown and himself in the sum of $100 each. This morning Milne was brought before the Police Magistrate and no evidence being offered the case was dismissed.

DOMINION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The Directors of this Company have just declared a dividend of three and a half per cent. for the last half year, being at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, or an increase of one per cent. on that previously paid. The increased dividend has been declared only after payment of all charges for interest on the Company's bonds and debentures, and seems to be fully justified by an increased business. The gross earnings for the Company in the year 1877, amounted to $177,044 against $146,555 in 1876; being an increase of $30,489. The working expenses in 1877 amounted to 70½ per cent. of the gross receipts against 73 per cent, in 1876, being a reduction of two and three quarters per cent., a fact which speaks very favorably for the management of the Company. The extension of lines has been carried on actively during the year in Ontario. They have been extended in several quarters, particularly over the line of the Hamilton and Northwestern Railway. Outside this Province they have been extended to all the principal points in New Brunswick, and as in 1876, they intend within a few months to connect the lines in the Maritime Provinces with those in Quebec. The Company will shortly be a Dominion Telegraph Company in reality as well as in title.

Moved in amendment by Mr. McKittrick, seconded by Mr. Hamilton, that the report of the Finance Committee be not now adopted but be referred back to the Committee with instructions to amend the same by reducing the amount of grant to St. Joseph's Hospital from $500 to $300, and reducing the beds at the disposal of the County from five to three.

After eight years of litigation the right of Christ Church (Chicago) congregation to retain Bishop Cheney as their pastor and to retain the church property for his use, after his secession from the Protestant Episcopal body, has been confirmed by the Illinois Supreme Court. The decision is based on the view that the property belongs solely to the parish; that the congregation may adopt such rules and regulations in regard to it as they deem proper; and that it was not designed to subject it to the supervision or control of any ecclesiastical or other authority so long as its rules and regulations are not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the United States. Consequently it may be inferred that every parish may dispose of its own property, and appoint its ministers, in any way it thinks proper, even while ostensibly occupying a position as a member of a particular denomination.

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.—The London Advertiser says that a woman giving her name as Mrs. Hadley is going about lecturing on "Eternal Punishment." Teachers' Association.

Convention Held in the Central School, Guelph.

On Friday and Saturday, 25th and 26th insts., the teachers of South Wellington and the Town of Guelph held their first regular meeting in the Central School, here. The attendance was large, about one hundred teachers being present, and the meeting was, undoubtedly, a grand success. Besides the local talent, Dr. McLellan, Senior High School Inspector, and Prof. Young, chairman of the Central Committee, were present, and it is to be regretted that space does not permit us to give a verbatim report of the addresses of these gentlemen, and that of the President, as they were all of a very high order indeed.

The meeting opened by the reading of a paper on "The Entrance Examination," by Mr. Tytler, President of the Association. He traced the different methods which had been, from time to time, adopted by the educational arithmetics, to test the acquirements of candidates for entrance to the High Schools, and explained the peculiar advantages of the present system. He next briefly reviewed the various subjects of the curriculum, beginning with Arithmetic. He showed that the fears of those who were apprehensive that Arithmetic was being cultivated at the expense of other subjects, were entirely groundless, the statistics of the last four years showing clearly that those who succeeded in this branch were, as a general rule, equally successful in the others. The speaker alluded to the prevailing want of neatness and system in putting down work, and to the gross absurdity of some of the answers given. English Grammar was then taken up and some of the prevailing characteristics of the answers of candidates discussed. Great improvement was observable in this department, except in correcting errors of syntax. Mr. Tytler then alluded briefly to dictation, explaining a method of getting children who failed signally in spelling to train themselves so as to remedy this defect. Composition was next taken up and a few words of advice given in regard to the teaching of pupils to comprehend thoroughly the meaning of the terms made use by the examiners. He then expressed his regret that English History had been added to the list of subjects, on the ground that the memories of candidates were already sufficiently taxed. He expressed his warm approval of the rudiments of English Literature as contained in the minute study of certain specified lessons in the fourth reader, and gave a few hints as to how these should be taught. In conclusion he expressed a hope that teachers of all the Public Schools would take advantage of this convenient and impartial text, not necessarily as a means of having their pupils enter the High School, but in order to know which of them were really qualified for promotion to higher classes. The paper was very well received by the Association and at its close the President was loudly applauded.

Then Dr. McLellan took up the subject of Reading, and after dwelling at some length upon the importance of this department of school work, proceeded to give some very valuable hints to teachers on the method of presenting the subject not only to advanced but also to junior pupils. He attributed the failure of teachers to make intelligent and intelible readers, to the fact that in the past they had taught more by precept than by example. He read an extract illustrating the ordinary method of reading, and then proceeded to point the defects usually overlooked. He concluded by rendering "The Battle of Waterloo" in a manner that plainly exhibited the elocutionary powers of the speaker. On resuming his seat he was loudly applauded.

This concluded the morning session.

The President resumed the chair at 1:30, and the first paper in the afternoon was read by Mr. Boyle, of Elora. His subject was "Educational Horses" (i. e. hobbies), which, though briefly treated, was handled in a manner which must have been pleasing to all. He spoke of "hobbies and hobbies;" of hobbies which it is desirable teachers should ride out of school, and hobbies which they ought not to ride in school. The speaker explained his meaning to be, that while a teacher should not, in school hours, dwell on some favourite subject to the exclusion of others equally important, yet he might and should in leisure hours, devote particular attention to some branch which may be especially interesting to him, for the knowledge thus acquired will always be found more or less useful in the ordinary duties of the school.

Prof. Young, of Toronto University, followed with a paper on "Some relations between Psychology and Education," which was remarkable not only for its scholarly finish but also for its original and practical character. In so polished and well arranged an address it is almost impossible to epitomize, and at the same time give an adequate idea of its character.

The first point on which he dwelt was that good bodily health is necessary for vigorous activity of the mind. In this connection he mentioned the desirability of having the rooms in which the pupils are to perform their mental exercises well ventilated and in healthy localities; remarking that if here called upon to perform any work in the stifling atmosphere he had sometimes noticed in school rooms, he would feel himself placed at a very great disadvantage. He next pointed out the fact that a person to perform satisfactorily any work must come to it in a fresh and unexhausted state of mind. In his opinion it is a mistake to have long school hours, for in reality the same amount of work can be performed with greater efficiency and in less time, provided the attention of the pupils can be kept concentrated on the subject. In illustration he said that the pedestrian after having walked a certain distance, can by no exertion travel one mile farther; the oarsman after having pulled a certain distance cannot propel his boat an hour longer. In the same way, the mind, after having been exerted for a certain time on any subject, cannot without great detriment to itself be employed to pursue that subject on which its energies have been already exhausted. He next alluded to "concentration" remarking that it is impossible for any one to master thoroughly and retain any subject without concentrating his whole energies upon it. How few of us have the faculty of being able to read a page of an ordinary author, completely comprehending its meaning and feeling that we have made the knowledge our own! With reference to "Pleasure in prospect," he believed that the teachers' smile of approval should be sufficient inducement for the thorough preparation of work; this can be won every day, and by every pupil, while prizes as ordinarily given can be won by only a few, and it soon becomes apparent who is out of the race. In regard to a "lack of regard of emotional excitement," he pointed out that if a teacher can succeed in awakening the wonder of a child he will have no difficulty in gaining his attention, but if the excitement be too violent, nothing can be done until it subsides. And lastly he held that "the subject should be presented directly to the minds of the pupils," hence the importance of extensive school apparatus.

After Prof. Young had resumed his seat, a discussion on the subject of "Object Lessons" took place, after which the meeting adjourned till 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

The chair was taken at 9 o'clock on Saturday, the first hour spent in answering the "Question Drawer," after which Dr. McLellan gave a clear and able address on the "Unitary Method." The meeting then adjourned, to meet again in May at Elora.

Notice to the Public.

We have for a long time been firmly impressed with the conviction that the long credit system is injurious to business and unjust to creditors, and we have come to the determination to put a stop to it. Our experience is that the practice of extending accounts over a year is a great mistake, is unfair to the creditor and burdensome to the debtor. Were settlements made say four times a year, instead of once, the amounts would be light, and payments would be comparatively easy, whereas when accounts run for a year the amounts accumulate, and in many cases it is no easy matter to settle a bill.

We have, therefore, come to resolution to, in future, make out and collect our accounts for advertising and job work quarterly, and we hereby give notice that this rule will, in all cases, be strictly enforced. We believe that its adoption will be of equal benefit to our patrons as to us, and we shall, in no case, make an exception.

We are now sending out our accounts for the past year, and we must insist on the immediate settlement of them in all cases, otherwise we will have to take the usual but unpleasant steps to enforce payment.

The Evening Mercury

MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 28, 1878

THE Ottawa Free Press says the rumor that Mr. Blake has resigned his seat in the Government, is without foundation.

THERE is probably not the slightest foundation for the story now circulating that Mr. Crooks, owing to ill health, has placed his resignation in the Premier's hands, and that Mr. Mowat urges a reconsideration of the matter, and that if Mr. Crooks insists on retiring Mr. Thos. Hodgins will be offered the portfolio of Education.

THE fact that Lord Dufferin visited President Hayes on Wednesday, and that the President returned the visit on the following day, shows the cordial relations that exist between the two countries. The President in returning the visit—a very unusual thing—at once honored Canada and its popular Governor General, by an extension of official courtesy beyond what is exhibited, except on very rare occasions.

THE political campaign in Halifax gets very exciting. Mr. Jones has thrown himself into it with an energy that aroused his friends' enthusiasm. He visited many parts of the county, and in nearly all cases did all the speaking on his own side. Sometimes he addressed two or three meetings on the same day at points far apart. Meanwhile other sections were visited by his friends and meetings held. The Opposition, too, were active. Their candidate, Mr. Richey, was kept in the background, Dr. Tupper and others being left to do the talking. Mr. Richey has made a poor exhibition of ability, and is almost lost sight of in the contest. The difference between the two candidates in this respect is very marked.

In reply to a despatch transmitting to the Colonial Secretary the annual report of the state of the militia of Canada for the past year, which report was sent to the Secretary of State for war, the Minister for that department in his reply, among other things says: "I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of the Earl of Carnarvon, that with regard to the paragraphs at pages 18 and 14 to which attention was drawn, the Secretary of State for War concurs in the opinion of Major General Selby Smyth that it is of the utmost importance that Quebec, which, as Major General Smyth observes, is the key of Canada from the ocean, should have such an armament of modern rifled guns as would forbid the passage of the St. Lawrence to any ship of war that might escape the vigilance of British cruisers in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. As regards the other points alluded to by Major General Smyth, the Secretary of State for War desires me to express the great satisfaction he has experienced from these reports, which give evidence of the efforts made in the Dominion to maintain the military spirit of its inhabitants, and especially at the success which appears to have attended the establishment of the Military College at Kingston, which is the latest addition to the establishment of the Dominion, and gives promise of forming a valuable addition of trained officers for the militia of the country."

MOUNT FOREST.—The late Oddfellows' concert was a very successful affair, the proceeds amounting to about $100.—The following officers have been elected for the Bible Society:—President, T. G. Smith; Vice Presidents, James Watt and Thos. Swan; Secretary, G.R. Gilroy; Treasurer, Lt. H. Yeomans; Depositary, Wm. Glanville.—The receipts during the past year were $93 16, and the expenditure $71 25.—The Methodist Church anniversary services, held on the 20th inst., were of more than usual interest. Sermons were preached by the Rev. Dr. Rice, of Hamilton. On the following evening a tea meeting was held and addresses were delivered by several reverend gentlemen. The proceeds amounted to $90.

West Wellington Agricultural Society.

The annual meeting of the West Wellington Agricultural Society was held at Arthur village on Wednesday, January 16th. The attendance was not so large as on former occasions, no doubt from the fact that the Directors drew up a By-law in June last regulating the annual exhibitions, and which will do away with the annual strife as to which village should have the show. The Secretary read a detailed report of the receipts and expenditure of the Society for the year 1877.

Mr. J. Dynes, one of the Directors, read their report which showed the total amount received from all sources to be $1,496.29. The expenditure was $1,240.40, leaving a balance in the hands of the Treasurer of $255 39.

The report was received and adopted.

The following officers were elected:—President, Robert Scott; Master Vice-President, Jas. Gibson, of Peel; Second Vice-President, John Landerkin, of Drayton. Directors, R. McKim, Peel; John Walker, Marybo rough; John Prain, Minto; Robert Gordon, Arthur township; James Moore, Harriston; Thomas McDowell, Palmerston; B. B. Boyd, Clifford; J. F. Holloway, Arthur village; Thomas Swan, Mount Forest; Joseph Draper, of Arthur, and Dr. Harvey, of Harriston, were appointed auditors. R. B. Gordon was appointed a delegate to attend the Arts and Agricultural Association meeting at Toronto.

The Board of Directors met immediately after the adjournment of the above meeting, when it was moved by Mr. McKim, seconded by Mr. Landerkin, that J. Robinson, Harriston, be appointed Secretary-Treasurer for the current year. The meeting was then adjourned until the call of the President.

Newspaper Perils and Requirements.

The Rev. Dr. Talmage, in his last Friday evening lecture, spoke of the dangers of newspaper enterprises as follows:—The first thing that strikes me in the history of this past week, is the mortality among newspapers. Beginning with the extinction of the Newark Morning Mercury, which breathed its last on Sunday, we have one piece of similar fatality to note every day. Chicago and to one in New York, which decease is expected to-day or to-morrow, and we are hearing of others which are dying. Indeed in the last few weeks, newspaper has died almost everywhere. The disease is epidemic in it, seems destined to have extensive paralytic effect, and reaches in the large cities and the small towns. The most successful way to find rest is to find work. The secret of success in a newspaper is to make it a paper. The world will have to learn that a newspaper is one institution, and that it wants in its brains and almost infinite capital to establish one. If you have agricultural, scientific, or educational, or religious facts to present to the public, you had better charge upon the world through columns already established. It is folly for one who is not successful at anything else to try newspaperdom. To publish a newspaper requires the skill, precision, boldness, vigilance and strategy of a commander in chief; and to edit a newspaper requires that one be a statesman, essayist, geographer, statistician and encyclopedias. To cover and populate newspaper until it shall be a fixed institution and a national fact demands more qualities than any business on earth. The rare combination of such elements made a James Gordon Bennett, a Horace Greeley, a Henry J. Raymond, a William Cullen Bryant, and a Samuel Bowles. What is true of the secular press is true of the religious press. It is very often the case that a minister who can't get anybody to hear him preach will start a religious paper. Being for making an ordinary editorial in a religious newspaper—Cut a dry sermon into ten parts, and add a pint of skim milk and a gallon of water; sweeten with treacle."

Accounts from Jamaica give a gloomy picture of matters in that island. Trade is described as at a stand still, with no hope of revival. The revenue of the last quarter has fallen off, according to the late returns, £100,000, or one fifth of the annual estimated income. The only progress, we are told, is in crime and vagrancy. The negro population, for whom so much has been done, are represented as steadily declining in industry and moral character. It is next to impossible to induce them to work, and coolie importation from Asia is set down as the only remedy.

The Waterloo Telescope advocates receiving all new manufactories employing a certain number of men, from taxation for at least a period of ten years.

A DEPLORABLE ACCIDENT.—The Arthur Enterprise says that on the evening of the 17th Mr. Neil Connell and family, consisting of daughter and two sons, started from their home in Arthur township, taking with them a goods and chattels contained in a waggon. Mr. Connell has not found either his wife or children, but received what was stated. He states that he cannot account for such a calamity, but in any way could not have happened on the main road, which is a public highway, and has been travelled for years, and having already put the matter in the hands of the police, will leave no stone unturned to find out the whereabouts of his wife and children.

A card of invitation and best wishes out, in a casual sort of way, has been issued to the members of the management by the names of several of those most respected in town, to join with their wives and friends in a social dance on the evening of the 31st inst. The committee of management have decided to issue invitations to a limited number of gentlemen only, and the ladies will be requested to bring with them only such friends as they can vouch for as gentlemen. Cards of invitation will be sent out in a few days, and those who do not receive them will please consider that the committee have not been able to procure the names of all the ladies they would like to see present, and that the omission is not intentional.

LECTURE!

On Monday evening, 28th of January, Mr. Poole will deliver his popular Lecture, entitled or "The British Nation the Lost Tribes of Israel."

This lecture has been given five times in Toronto, three times in the City of Hamilton, and twice in the City Hall, London. The London Free Press says:—The Hall was filled to repletion. It was one of the most instructive and entertaining lectures ever delivered in the City Hall. The London Herald says:—"The lecture's scope of the most instructive and interesting that has been delivered in the city for many a day." A Belleville paper says:—"The lecture by the Rev. W. H. Poole on 'Anglo-Israel,' in the Bridge-St. Church, was one of the highest, ablest and most instructive ever delivered to a Belleville audience. History, sacred and profane, geography, and the natural westward drift of Empire, were made to illumine each other in a manner equally entertaining."

Mr. Poole illustrates the lecture by maps and charts.

CHAPTER XVII.

PADDY'S REVELATIONS.

"I dinna wonder at yer anger, Maister Harold," interposed Daddy, "for, guidness knes, ye has muckle cause for it. But stop me tae say that ye has it in yer power, through this calumnie ye mention, and bring well-deserved punishment on yer brother and the same time."

"Escape them!" echoed Harold. "How can I escape them?"

"What for should ye not? Ye are as innocent of the crime ye are accused of. Proclaim your innocence this very day."

"What!" By declaring the guilt of my associate, Black Dick?"

"And what for not? Why should you suffer for the crime of another? If Black Dick means or occurs as he is bloody, he will proclaim the truth himsel', and free ye o' the charge."

"That he will never do."

"Then I wad do it for him."

"Impossible. You do not mean that, Daddy. You cannot in your heart counsel anything so mean and dishonourable. Besides, were I even to act a part so low and mean, it would be of no avail, Gillespie and Skeat would stick to the lie they have told, and I would only bring upon myself the additional obliquy of attempting to save myself by defaming another."

"Na, sir, ye canna expect to hae twa witnesses. Betty Corbit and mysel' will swear that Wanlass tell't baith o' us."

"Ah, Daddy, I know how much you are inclined to believe the tales of tainted witnesses, and the testimony of two Government officers would be believed before yours. No, my friend, there is nothing for it, but to bear the wrong, and I have made up my mind to do so. I am glad to know that you have discovered my innocence, and the time may come—though I do not hope it will—when your evidence will be valuable; for the present it is not available. An outlaw I must live, and much I fear an outlaw I must die. But not unavenged. I am resolved on that. I will be the plague and torment Gillespie's official life. I will carry on a system of smuggling on such a scale as this district has never known, and by such means as shall baffle all his efforts to put it down. I will seek for his ruin, watch for it, scheme for it, and in the end accomplish it. Since they make me an outlaw, I will be an outlaw in the fullest sense of the word."

"Ah, I said not that. Did you not hear me say that I would baffle his schemes likewise."

"But what means hae ye for deein' that? Nane ava sae far as I can see."

"Ay, so far as you can see at present. But I am going to give you a proof of the unbounded confidence I repose in you by entrusting you with a secret."

"I dinna," exclaimed Daddy, in hasty recoil. "I'm for nae mair secrets. They are things I just dinna like ava, and for the last week I hae had sae mony on my mind that I hae kinked aether nicht's rest nor day's ease. Na, na, Maister Harold, nae mair secrets for me."

"Oh, well, if ye decline to receive it I will not force it upon you. Only I must ask to receive your help in me matter. It is a secret, for what to myself, and one in which you can render me the most valuable aid. However, I have no right to give you trouble and annoyance, and I—"

"Say nae mair, sir—say nae mair. I was wrang, Maister Harold. I thought ye meant a smuggling secret. Noo, I maun ha'd, lover, fear o' that at a' hazards, but for personal service to yoursel', I said afore that I'll render it wi a' heart and guid will."

"This is no smuggling secret," returned Harold. "Nor is it one the knowledge of which will bring danger. But it is a matter in which you will be able to render me peculiar help, and you will see in a moment it is something to be carried only to my truest friends."

"Wee, sir, I am very proud tae think that ye coont me ane o' them. But what is it ava, for really ye hae raised my curiosity noo?"

"Ay," responded Daddy, with wondering curiosity.

Gilmour could not restrain a triumphant his wicked schemes, Soha, Corstane, Matthiesse, Dearie, Dodie, Mckinnon Tobie, Mattheesse, Cooking Glasses, and a'

"Nae nae lang as sin' as ye lives."

"Nor as my father endeavours."

"Atweel, noo, what is it means to show your innocence.

"Now it does not depend on that at all, but on something else, which he does not dream of. Daddy, I am married, and have a son."

"Guid, Lord! Maister Harold—married—you married!"

"And have a son! Daddy, who is the heir of Mount Orrie?"

"Weel, if that hasna ta'en by breath awa," ejaculated the mendicant. That's news, indeed, and nae pipers either."

"So, you see, even though I am outlawed, my boy will succeed."

"Eh, but that's dacin Maister Gilmour finely. But whaur's yer wife, and whaur's the laddie?"

"At the other side of the Dee, at the top of a sequestered glen, where she lives with her uncle and aunt, and they and Kenneth Fraser are the only persons who know of our marriage. Now, Daddy, that is the secret?"

"And a very extraordinary one it is," responded Daddy, whose astonishment remained unmitigated.

"Can you guess why I have confided it to you?"

"Ye said ye wanted help frae me in the matter; but, hoo, Maister Harold, what help can I gie ye?"

"I will tell you. If it was important to keep my marriage secret hitherto, it is doubly important now when my brother's machinations are disclosed. My own prospects are destroyed, but I am resolved that the rights of my boy shall be established, and the position in which I am placed renders the task difficult. My own safety requires me to keep among the mountains, where my wife and child cannot be with me. Kenneth also will be with me here, and occasionally I shall venture to visit Inverness to my wife, and receive communications from her. Now, Daddy, you are the very man to do that service. HAROLD THE OUTLAW

DADDY'S REVELATIONS.

"I dinna wonder at yer anger, Maister Harold," interposed Daddy, "for, guidness kens, ye has muckle cause for it. But alee me tae say that ye hae it in yer power to escape the calumnies yo mention, and bring well-deserved punishment on yer brother and the Forger at the same time."

"Escape them!" echoed Harold. "How can I escape them?"

"What for should ye not? Ye are innocent of the crime yer accused of. Proclaim your innocence the day."

"What!" By declaring the guilt of my associate, Black Dick?"

"And what for not? Why should you suffer for the crime o' anither? If Black Dick waena as cooard as he is bluidy, he wad proclaim the truth himsel', and free ye o' the charge."

"That he will never do."

"Then I wad do it for him."

"Impossible. You do not mean that, Daddy. You cannot in your heart counsel anything so mean and dishonourable. Besides, were I mean to act a part so low and mean, it would be of no avail. Gillespie and Skeat would stick to the lie they have told, and I would only bring upon myself the additional obliquy of attempting to save myself by defaming another."

"Na, sir, ye forget that he has twa witnesses. Betty Corbit and mysel', wha will swear tae what Wanlass tell't baith o' us."

"Ah, Daddy, yourself, forced to stand in the dock, as the judges would call you tainted witnesses, and the testimony of two Government officers would be believed before yours. No, my friend, there is nothing for it but to bear the wrong, and I have made up my mind to do so. I am glad to know that you have discovered my innocence, and the time may come—though I do not hope it will—when your evidence will be valuable. For the present it is not available. An outlaw I must live, and much I fear an outlaw I must die. But not unavenged. I am resolved on that. I will make the plague and torment Gillespie's official life. I will carry on a system of smuggling on such a scale as this district has never known, and by such means as shall baffle all his efforts to put it down. I will seek for his ruin, watch for it, scheme for it, and in the end accomplish it. Since they make me an outlaw, I will be an outlaw in the fullest sense of the word."

"And alloo Maister Gilmour tae get the title and estate," remarked Daddy.

"Ah, I said not that. Did you not hear me say that I would baffle his schemes likewise."

"But what means hae ye for deein' that? Nane ava sae far as I can see."

"Ay, so far as you can see at present. But I am going to give you a proof of the unbounded confidence I repose in you by entrusting you with a secret."

"Aweel," exclaimed Daddy, in hasty recoil. "I'm for nae mair secrets. They are things I just dinna like ava, and for the last week I hae had nae mony on my mind that I hae found neither nicht's rest nor day's ease. Na, na, Maister Harold, nae mair secrets for me."

"Oh, well, if ye decline to receive it I will not force it on you. Only I must ask to receive your help in the matter. It is a secret, perhaps, to myself, and one in which, you can render me most valuable aid. However, I have no right to give you trouble and annoyance, so—"

"Say nae mair, sir—say nae mair. I was wrang, Maister Harold—I thought ye meant a smuggling secret. Noo, I maun ha'd mysel' clear o' that at a' hazards, but for a proved service to yoursel', I said afore that I'll render it wi' a heart and guid will."

"This is no smuggling secret," returned Harold. "And yet it may be knowledge of which will bring danger. But it is a matter in which I have the right to render me peculiar help, and you will see in a moment it is something to be cared only to my true friend."

"Wee, sir, I am very proud tae think that ye coont me ane o' them. But what is it ava, for really ye has raised my curiosity noo?"

"Daddy," said Harold, laying his hand on the old man's shoulder, and looking into his shrewd wrinkled face with a peculiar emphasis in it, "Daddy, I am married."

"Ay," responded Daddy, with wondering credulity.

"Married to the daughter of Kenneth Fraser, the smuggler."

"There's nae in the shire that."

"But he has not. The name and station are not his yet."

"Dog sae I understand what ye mean."

"Atweel, no, gin ye hae means to how your innocence."

"Now it is a matter not that at all, but on something else, which no doubt you dream of. Daddy, I am married, and have a son."

"Guid Lord!—Maister Harold—you mercies!—you mercies!"

"And have a son, Daddy, who is the heir of Mount Cairn. I will surrender—"

"Well, if that hasna taen my breath awa," ejaculated the old man at last. "That's news, indeed, and nae pipers either."

"So, you see, even though I am outlawed, my boy will succeed."

"Eh, but that's dark Miss or Gilmour finely. But whaur's yer wife, and whaur's the laddie?"

"At the other side of the Dee, at the top of a sequestered glen, where she lives with her uncle and aunt, and they and Kenneth Fraser are the only persons who know of our marriage. Now, Daddy, that is the secret."

"And a very extraordinary one it is," responded Daddy, whose astonishment remained unmitigated.

"Can you guess why I have confided it to you?"

"Ye said ye wanted help frae me in the matter; but, hush, Maister Harold, what help can I gie ye?"

"I will tell you. If it was important to keep my marriage secret hitherto, it is doubly important now when my brother's machinations are disclosed. My own prospects are destroyed, but I am resolved that the rights of my boy shall be established, and the position in which I am placed renders the task difficult. My own safety requires me to keep among the mountains, where my wife and child cannot be with me. Kenneth also will be with me here, and occasionally I shall contrive to send messages to my wife and receive communications from her. Now, Daddy, you are the very man to do that service. You are continually wandering over the country, and can go hither and thither without being suspected. There is nobody I can trust but you. This is the help you can give me. Will you do it?"

"Wull I no," answered Daddy, not only with prompt alacrity, but with hearty fervour. "I hae often felt, Maister Harold, that I am but o' little use in the warld, and had therefore but ema' richt tae live; for a man that thinks ava canna help jalousin' that we are a' meant tae dee something for corsel's and ilk ither. Under this feelin' I hae sometimes tried tae dee a guid turn here and there, as an excuse, ye ken, for cumberin' the ground. Ye wad wonder what satisfaction it brocht tee me, and at times I hae wished for a better chance o' deein' kindly service. This is the chance for me noo, sir—ye understand?"

"I understand that you are a kind, generous fellow," cried Harold, as he grasped the old man's hand and warmly shook it. "Oh, Daddy, if there were more men like you in the world there would be less wrong-doing and injustice. Ah, here comes Dixon to tell us, I suppose, that it is time for dinner. We shall confer further on this when opportunity suits. You have afforded me immense relief by the promise of help which you have given."

"Dinna mention it, sir; see, he waits tee speak tee ye. And as I like the licht and free air o' heeven better than the darkness and the smell o' the cave, I'll e'en sit here a wee and watch the settin' sun."

And Daddy stretched himself in his favourite attitude upon the grass, and turned his eyes with admiring delight on the golden splendour in the west, where the sun was sinking behind the mountains amid a scene of radient magnificence.

His eyes was riveted on the joyous scene; but he was not giving to it all his thoughts—the largest part of these being claimed by the new subject which had been supplied in his conversation with Harold. He was excited as people never fail to be when some strange and important secret has been confided to them, but his excitement was accompanied by personal sensations of a pleasurable kind. He was flattered by the mark of confidence implied in revealing the secret. It was an act which went at once with gratifying effect to the old man's heart, for it showed him that by Harold Logan he was both understood and appreciated. It had often hurt him to find that he was not generally so. His unseemly garb, his profession as a beggar, his wandering, homeless existence, made him commonly regarded as a sort of rogue and vagabond. He was popular everywhere, but it was of a popularity in which a pretty large element of assumption appeared of a kind not flattering to Daddy's character. He was treated and spoken of even in his own hearing as if his abject poverty must make him not scrupulously honest, and as if there were flaws and weakness in his mental constitution. Daddy noticed this fully but silently; he took it as a matter of course, knowing it would be vain to try to convince people that his conscience was quite as tender and his moral scruples as strong as those of most people, while quietly his private conviction was that his mind instead of being weaker, was more powerful than those of the persons whom he met in his travels. These convictions Daddy had to keep to himself, and pocket many affronts with good humour and often with indifference.

But it was thereby all the more gratifying to find that Harold Logan estimated him more truely and justly—that while others looked upon him in the light we have indicated, Harold recognised his sterling worth, probity, and shrewd countenance. Such a generous perception on Harold's part drew forth Daddy's grateful regards, and he resolved to requite it by rendering with hearty devotion the service which had been asked.

Then beyond this there came into Daddy's bosom the sense of pleasure which flows from the contemplation of good, useful work. Daddy's idle, aimless life had known almost nothing of this, and he was too much a man in capacity and longings not to feel the want. We have just found him confessing as much to Harold, and the new prospect of having some mission of usefulness to fulfil brought him quite a new and happy sensation, giving him a greater and higher interest in life, and making him a nobler being in his own eyes.

When the sun had set, and the shadows of the mountains began to descend into the valley, Harold returned to him and conducted him back to the cave, where an abundant meal and a warm couch brought to a close the experiences of that important day.

From a Physician.

Hyde Park, Vt. Feb. 7, 1876

Messrs Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Boston:

Gents—You may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the Peruvian Syrup for my wife, who was suffering from general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I have tried the noted physicians in this State, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup; the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work about the house; and I find that I cannot speak too highly in praise of the Peruvian Syrup. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozen of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit. Yours very truly,

H. D. Belden, M. D.

1. The borrower is NOT OBLIGED to repay any part of the principal until the whole term of the Mortgage has run.
2. He has the RIGHT (after the first year) to repay at any time, the whole or any part of the Loan, without prior notice to the Company.
3. No extra charge, bonus or otherwise exacted on such repayment.
4. He is requested when making application for the Loan, to state the day on which he wishes interest to be made payable. He thus can stipulate for a date, say after harvest, or at such time as is likely to be most convenient for him.
5. Interest can be made payable once a year—not in advance.
6. On repayment of any part of the principal, interest on such amount immediately ceases.

GRAND SUPPER.—The entertainment in the Norfolk street Methodist Church, Thursday evening next, promises to be one of the best of the season. What with the sumptuous repast provided by the ladies, lively addresses by talented speakers from abroad and at home, the opportunity offered for the cultivation of the social qualities, the attraction of a first-class musical programme, and the small admission fee, the occasion is a rare one. The attendance should be very large.

SOPHIE MILES to-morrow evening. Her support is strong. The Hamilton Spectator in referring to the acting of Miss Miles as Meg Merrilies in Guy Manneri g states that she sustained that character with ability and success. It requires immense physique to represent the weird, passionate and prophetic gipsy woman, but the young tragedienne, in whose hands the part was entrusted, sustained the character admirably to the end.

The Guelph shooters were entertained by the Brampton men to an oyster supper at the Queen's, served in Mr. Deady's best style. A return match will come off in two weeks.

A PROJECTING limb of a poplar tree a little east of the Royal Hotel should be sawn off. It is just about the right height to catch the head of a cabby, mounted on his box. Two or three accidents have already occurred. A few days ago the top of the Hamilton stage was torn by the same branch.

"Pitch in" on the Grand Trunk.

Death on the Rail—A Neglect that Counted.

This (Tuesday) morning about four o'clock an accident occurred on the Grand Trunk at Breslau station, seven miles west of Guelph, which caused an immense loss of property to the railway company, and the loss of a life to a young man—a stranger in this section of the country, who acted as stoker.

From the facts gleaned from various sources it appears that the whole accident was caused by neglect of the night operator at the Berlin station to give orders to a train following another, that the first was to take water at Breslau.

A special freight, with Scanlon as conductor, left Stratford late in the evening. Some time afterwards it was followed by a special under control of Hockday. Both trains were very heavily laden, the latter having no less than twenty-one cars. When Scanlon reached Berlin he was very careful in giving his orders to the night operator that he would take water at Breslau, and therefore it was his duty to inform the freight that followed to that effect. Had this order been followed out the awful catastrophe which happened would not now be a matter of history to record. Hockedy followed Scanlon into Berlin very closely, but did not leave until some time after.

If there is a station, or water tank on the Grand Trunk line dreaded by engine drivers it is at Breslau. This is from the fact that all freights, when heavily laden and not obliged to take water, are compelled to "run it" with full pressure, in order to surmount the very heavy grade east of the station.

Hockedy's driver, named Roberts, thinking that all was clear at Breslau and knowing full well that it would require a powerful spurt to surmount the grade, put on full steam and made a dash through Breslau station. When too late he saw something ahead of him which must have fairly made him feel as though his flesh was creeping off his bones. Right before him on the track was a freight train at the water tank. Half a minute at such a time as this a man lives a life-time. Roberts possessing that devotion to duty which characterizes only a few men, reversed his lever, and whistled down brakes. No use however, as it would be just as easily to stop the sun in its daily course as to have brought that train to a stand still then. In a moment the "pitch in" took place, the faithful driver was shot through the cab window like a stone from a catapault, among the splintering cars and the wrecked engine. Strange to say he escaped almost uninjured. How such was possible it is hard to conjecture. The stoker however met a different fate. He was on the tender at the time and in the general wreck which followed he was bruised into almost an unrecognised mass of flesh, blood and bones.

The concussion was so great that the locomotive was turned completely around, and looks now like so much scrap iron.

At the time the "pitch in" occurred, a brakesman, who had only resumed duty a few days after being injured by a slight fall, was on a car a short distance from the striking locomotive. His nerves overstrung by the previous accident, felt the first jar, and he jumped for safety. Rather a strange place, however, to seek safety. His jump was down an embankment which has a sheer descent of between sixty and seventy feet. How he got safely down that distance and where he first alighted he has not the least recollection. All he remembers is that cars, barrels, bales, and boxes appeared to be engaged in a mad race with him to see which would reach the bottom first. He also remembers that when he did stop, an immense bale of something bounded completely over his head and burst in front of him.

The driver and brakesman certainly had very close calls from this earth. Had the brakesman chosen the other side of the car to jump from he would have alighted on level ground. Fortunately there was no person in the conductor's car on Scanlon's train. If there had been nothing would have saved them. This car and a number of others were run together in just such a way as a telescope might be closed.

In all some eight or ten cars rolled down this immense enbankment, and were smashed to kindling wood. Corn, barley, merchandise of all kinds, and oysters enough to supply the town of Guelph for a month were strewn around in a very promiscuous manner. After the dead fireman had been taken out of the ruins, and the brakesmen and Roberts had been seen to, those who had gathered from the neighborhood assisted in clearing the wreck, and as one who was present at the time remarked, they also assisted in stowing away a number of the oysters.

The engine of Scanlon's train was at once despatched to Guelph for Dr. Herod and he was taken to the scene of the disaster. The fireman of course was beyond aid. Roberts was found to be bruised somewhat, but not serious, and he will be able to resume work again in the course of a week.

An auxiliary train was sent down from Stratford and the wreckers have been busily engaged all morning in clearing the track. The 9.45 train this morning was held at Guelph by the Grand Trunk authorities, doubtless not being desirous that passengers should see how easily the neglect of a single employee of the road might cause a terrible calamity.

The name of the fireman who was killed is Solomon Hodgins, of Stratford. He leaves a wife and two children.

The loss to the railway company is estimated at about $40,000.

AN UPSET.—On Thursday afternoon last a commercial traveller in going down the Brock Road came in contact with another team near the first toll gate from the Dundas bridge, and his conveyance with all its contents was thrown into the ditch. The waggon was turned upside down, and his boxes, cases, &c shared the same fate. The springs of the waggon, whippletrees and traces were broken, and the driver was hurt about the legs but not seriously. Mr. Mooney, of Aberfoyle, who passed shortly after the accident, helped the traveller, and did all he could to get him on the road again.

Lecture by the Rev. W. H. Poole.

"Anglo-Israel; or, the British Nation the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel."

On Monday evening, the Dublin street Methodist Church was well filled with a highly respectable audience, to hear the Rev. W. H. Poole, of Tordto, deliver his celebrated lecture on the above subject. Across the front of the gallery above the pulpit platform were suspended copies of Ptolemy's maps of Ireland, Scotland and Europe, besides a chronological list showing how the name of Isaac could be traced down to that of Saxon, and a chart on which was the Royal Standard and Union Jack. The choir was in attendance, and after singing, Rev. Mr. Ryckman offered up a brief prayer. Rev. Mr. Brock, pastor of the church, then introduced the lecturer.

Rev. Mr. Poole, who is a very fluent speaker, with clear and distinct enunciation then proceeded with his address, which occupied two hours and five minutes, during which time he held the audience's best attention, and was repeatedly greeted with applause throughout its delivery. The reverend gentleman commenced by stating that several theories had been advanced by different parties, and which they tried to prove would identify certain nations with the lost ten tribes of Israel. Wolfe holds that they are now to be found in Persia; Samuels that they are in the regions of the Caspian Sea; Grant that they are to be found in the Nestorians; others that the North American Indians could be identified as such; Sir Wm. Johnston points to the Afghanistans: Dixon to the Mexicans and Peruvians; and others to some other nationality. They, however, must be all incorrect, and that too, simply because they would not harmonize with the Word of God. In support of the theory he would advocate that the British nation was the lost tribes, he had with him such talented men as John Wilson, Wm Carpenter, Hine, Dr. Freeman, and a host of others. The speaker then referred to the revolt of the ten tribes, which took place after the death of Solomon, during the reign of Rehoboam, and the formation of a new kingdom. The history of the nation was then briefly given up to the time of the depopulation of the country and the captivity of God's people by Nebuchadnezzar. While the tribes of Judah and Benjamin were the Jews, the other ten tribes were known as Israelites. The Jews at the present time could be distinguished the world over by the formation of their heads, so much so that a celebrated anatomist had stated that there would be no difficulty in picking out the skull of a Jew from five hundred skulls of Gentiles. God stated that the Jews would be known for all time, that they would be a down trodden race, and that their name would be a by-word and a reproach. Israel was to be unknown in name, but to be a powerful nation; to have a nationality perpetuated; and to be a christian people. The Jews were to remain under the ban of the old law. All these points were substantiated by the speaker in Scriptural quotations. Israel did not return after the Babylonish captivity of seventy years, and the Jews were not allowed to return until after Judah accepts the Messiah. God would then allow them to return to their own land. While punishment was to fall upon the Jews blessings followed the Israelites. Passages were then quoted to show that Israel was to lose her language, such as in Isaiah, "Thou shalt lose thy name." After the end of the Babylonish captivity the Bible clearly shows us that Israel went to the northern part of Asia Minor. At the commencement of the Christian era they left the shores of the Caspian Sea, where they had been residing in the cities of the Medes and Persians and followed to the north west. The speaker drew a line on the map of Europe which showed that the direction would have taken the Israelites to the British Islands. A colony of them had settled in Spain, and Paul proceeded thither on several occasions to preach; and history even went so far as to show that he had been in Britain. On one of his journeys he had been away eight years, no person knew where he was, and who could tell if he had not been on the British Isles. The speaker went on to show that many of the Lord's parables pointed to lost Israel, and instanced the parables of the lost sheep, lost piece of money, and others. In Holy Writ it states that the land of their captivity was to the north and west, and it also states that that they shall be gathered from the north and west. It was then shown after dwelling particularly on the above and deducting the argument from the Bible that God had kept the Holy Land—Palestine, intact for his people during all past ages. The Turks had done their utmost to gain possession, and then the Greeks; the American land jobber tried to gain a foothold, and Great Britain tried to colonize the country; but all were signal failures. No man now owns a foot of that land with a proper title. They are all merely squatters, and not one of them could sell an acre of it. The speaker then very logically followed out his argument and showed how that God had said Israel would be called by a new name, and that they were the children of Isaac. The speaker held that the word Saxon came down from the word Isaac. It was shown by a long list how the word was traced and that Saca Sunnia virtually meant the sons of Isaac, and then wound up with the quotation from Romans which stated that "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." By ancient geography the audience was carried to the countries allotted to Noah and his family after the flood and the peculiarities of the sons described. Tarsish was shown to have meant tin islands where the Phœnicians and merchants of Tyre traded, although there was a Tarsish in Silicia, it was only a three weeks' journey from Tyre, while the Tarsish referred to in this conjunction must have been no less than the far western islands—the voyage there and back occupying no less than three years. The Tyreans fled to Tarsish from Alexander the Great, and it would therefore be simply ridiculous that they would fly no farther than Silicia to escape from such a powerful foe. Pliny speaks of Greece being supplied from the western isles with tin, iron, brass and other metals; and from Homer's Illiad we learn a bright and graphic description of the smelting works of the far off country. Historians tell us of voyages being made to Cornwall 700 years before Christ, and the tribe of Dan did a large trade with Yarish (Ireland) 1295 years before Christ. When the tribe afterwards left for the west to escape quarrelling with a neighboring tribe, all along the line of route were left names which marked their progress such as the Danube, Dnieper, Dniester, Danish Archipelago, and many others. By quotations it was then shown that the throne of David must exist forever and forever, somewhere. So long as the sun and moon exist Israel must be a nation. A guarantee was given Israel that the throne of David would never depart from them. When the tribe of Dan had proceeded west as far as Yarish coast they had with them the coronation stone and the harp of Zion. The harp of Ireland was therefore a literal descendant from the House of David. The word Tara was traced back to the Hebrew, meaning two tables, and the connection shown.

Mr. Wm. Wheatley at this juncture was called on to sing "The Harp that once thro' Tara's Halls."

The reverend lecturer then went on to show by quotations from the Bible that the British nation borne out the prophesies made concerning Israel. She was to be made the mother of many nations, and increase largely in population. Great Britain doubled her population in every fifty-six years, and by some statisticans it is said in forty years. All other countries were far behind, with the Turks standing lowest in the race of increase. Israel was to occupy the ends of the earth, meaning as it did in the scriptures, the sea coast. Such was the case, as all could see by merely going over the continents. Israel was to be pressed for room; and had not Britain. While other countries had sought to acquire population Britain had sent millions of her sons and daughters forth to colonize the world. After dwelling further on the subject, and deducting proofs as he proceeded, the speaker held that the royal arms of Britain were of Divine appointment. Tracing the history of heraldry back, we come to Judah likened as a lion's whelp, and Israel as the strength of the unicorn; and again the remnant of Jacob shall be amongst the young lions as among a flock of sheep. My heritage in speaking of his people shall be as a lion. The Union Jack was merely the union of Jacob. When Scotland, England and Ireland became united, it was simply the union of Jacob. God had promised Abraham that Israel would be the gate-keeper of the seas, and for five hundred years had not England occupied that position. It is also said—"Thou shalt lend unto many nations, but shall not borrow." England has not been borrowing from any nation, and never had to at any time, and she had almost countries without number on her ledgers. In concluding, the speaker referred to the Imperial measures of the present day, and called attention to the remarkable fact, that the old Hebrew measure and those used at the present day, were identical. The Saxons were the only real people who had any true love for the moral law, and the sons of Isaac were the only nation that had a law for the protection of the Sabbath. In all the world, Britain was the only country that was similarly situated. The concluding portion of the address was abounding in eloquence.

After a piece of music by the choir, Dr. McGuire moved, and Mr. Chas. Davidson seconded, a vote of thanks to the reverend gentleman, which was heartily accorded him. Mr. Davidson claimed that he had given the matter much study, and many new points had been brought very clearly to his mind during the evening.

Mr. Poole stated, that if the audience was satisfied, he was gratified, and if they were gratified he was satisfied.

The proceedings closed with the benediction.

The General Hospital.

To the Editor of the Guelph Mercury.

SIR,—I beg the favor of you to allow me through the medium of your valuable paper, to tender my most sincere thanks to the officials of the Guelph General Hospital, both male and female, for their kindness and courtesy to my father during the three weeks he had been confined there, with a most painful disease, and in an especial manner to Mr. Hyde, the steward, whose unremitting attention to him, both day and night, is beyond all praise. In my humble opinion, he is the right man in the right place. The manner in which everything connected with that establishment is conducted, has divested my mind of very erroneous ideas entertained by me of hospitals in general.

Yours truly,

DONALD GILLIS.

THE WAR NEWS.

Nothing more about the Peace Conditions.

THE WAR-LIKE ATTITUDE OF GREECE.

The Servians Defeat the Turks.

THE BRITISH CABINET AND THE WAR.

Lord Carnarvon's Successor.

Jan. 28.

The latest authentic advices from Constantinople do not confirm the statement that the Porte has received a telegram that the preliminaries of peace have been signed. Last night up to nine o'clock the Porte had no advice of the conclusion of an armistice, though orders were telegraphed to the Turkish plenipotentiaries on Friday to accept the preliminaries of peace. The delay causes the apprehension that the armistice may be accompanied by onerous conditions. The Porte is now in the peculiar position of having accepted terms without knowing upon what conditions an armistice will be granted. The armistice, if properly handled, must make the Russians more than ever masters of the situation. Meantime the Russians, Servians, Roumanians, and Montenegrins are pushing military operations with great vigor.

An Erzeroum correspondent writes:—Typhus is raging here, and 250 die daily. There are 10,000 in hospitals.

Suleiman Pasha's army continues to embark. Six Egyptian transports have been ordered to Kalava to assist him.

An Athens despatch of Sunday says:—War like manifestations recommenced here to-day. Crowds were parading the street and shouting outside the residences of the Ministers. A mob of 2,000 from the Piræus were dispersed by the troops after shots had been fired. Three rioters were wounded. The city is now (Sunday night) quiet. The Debats, the organ of Minister Deligorges, publishes an article saying that Greece would incur inevitable ruin by declaring war against Turkey now.

A Belgrade special says:—After four days' battle the Turks have been defeated near Rustcharnik by 40,000 Servians. The hospitals here have been ordered to prepare accommodation for 3,000 wounded.

The Times authoritatively denies that a part of the Russian army will traverse Constantinople and embark at that place for home.

The Telegraph's special says that the Russian demands will encounter serious opposition from England and Austria. The latter is particularly opposed to the retrocession of Bessarabia to Russia, and to any conditions doing more than to cripple Turkey.

The News' leading editorial says the Cabinet Council has determined to persist with the demand for a supplementary vote. The exceptional step of suddenly summoning a Cabinet Council on Sunday is regarded in some quarters as an indication that the political atmosphere is not clearing.

Up to Saturday evening Safvet Pasha, acting Foreign Minister, persisted in his refusal to inform the British ambassador of the terms of peace, showing that the Porte has been pledged to keep them secret, though the St. Petersburg semi-official press declares that the withholding of the terms was a Turkish trick to force England to action. This is improbable, because Russia could always have defeated such a plan by communicating the conditions.

A Pera special says:—The Porte has persisted in the determination not to permit the British fleet to enter the Dardanelles except as the ally of Turkey. England has informed the Porte that the fleet must enter without permission, and the Porte entered a formal protest, which was forwarded to the plenipotentiaries at Russian headquarters, but did not actually oppose the entry. Peace will be signed on Russian territory.

In the House of Commons this afternoon,

Sir Stafford Northcote moved the vote of credit. He said the terms of peace were known unofficially, and declared that the terms were of such a sweeping character as would render necessary a general European Council to consider them. He declared that England would never listen to a separate agreement regarding the opening of the Straits of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus. He said that if Russia attempted a temporary occupation of Constantinople, England would be prepared to take care of her interests. He condemned the tone of the speeches made by the Liberals in Parliament, denied that England was a weak country now, or too weak to make war. He accepted the suggestion of the Marquis of Hartington that after Sir Stafford's statement, when the supplementary vote is moved, the debate should be adjourned until to-morrow. This was because the time of the House to-night is already otherwise appropriated to the orders of the day.

The Marquis of Hartington asked, since a vote of confidence was wanted, that the debate be adjourned to Thursday.

It is understood that the Opposition will arraign the Government's whole Easterm policy. If the Government is defeated Parliament will be immediately dissolved, but the Conservatives are confident of a majority of ever 50.

The Daily News says:—

We understand that the Opposition leaders meet to-day to consider the form in which they will oppose the supplementary vote. There is little doubt that the Marquis of Hartington will move a hostile amendment.

In the House of Lords Lord Derby explained that he had tendered his resignation because the Government decided on a step with which he could not agree, but the Government reconsidering its decision, he withdrew his resignation.

It will nip your disease in the bud, and prevent any possibility of its affecting the lungs. Don't procrastinate.

DOCTOR GILES; YOUR LINIMENT is the best I ever used; it cured my Rheumatism when every other remedy failed. Have only used one bottle. I have spent hundreds of dollars, and one fifty cent bottle of GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA cured me.

Notice to the Public.

We have for a long time been firmly impressed with the conviction that the long credit system is injurious to business and unjust to creditors, and we have come to the determination to put a stop to it. Our experience is that the practice of extending accounts over a year is a great mistake, is unfair to the creditor and burdensome to the debtor. Were settlements made, say four times a year, instead of once, the amounts would be light, and payments would be comparatively easy, whereas, when accounts run for a year the amounts accumulate, and in many cases it is no easy matter to settle a bill.

We have, therefore, come to resolution to, in future, make out and collect our accounts for advertising and job work quarterly, and we hereby give notice that this rule will, in all cases, be strictly enforced. We believe that its adoption will be of equal benefit to our patrons as to us, and we shall, in no case, make an exception.

We are now sending out our accounts for the past year, and we must insist on the immediate settlement of them in all cases, otherwise we will have to take the usual but unpleasant steps to enforce payment.

The Evening Mercury

TUESDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 29, 1878

The Latest Phase of the War.

The latest news with regard to the war in the East is by no means reassuring. The conditions of peace demanded by Russia from Turkey are not yet officially made known, and we are consequently in the dark as to the actual terms proposed, and rather hastily accepted by the latter power. It is stated that the Turkish minister in London has refused to disclose these terms, but the report lacks confirmation, and we cannot see what good reason Turkey could have in withholding the preliminary conditions from a power which has all along been friendly to her, and which at any moment may be embroiled in war on her account.

These conditions have, however, in an un-official way, leaked out, and from present appearances they are not such as will likely be accepted by the powers most interested. From what fell from Sir Stafford Northcote in the House of Commons on Monday night, on moving for a vote of credit, the opinion of the British Government is that the terms asked by Russia are too sweeping. He said that the character of autonomy for Bulgaria was not that agreed upon by the Constantinople Conference. An administrative autonomy was then conceded; now there is provided total separation from Turkey under a Prince. Regarding the tributaries becoming independent he would say nothing, but it must raise difficult questions, since it touches other interests. The indemnity condition is very elastic. How Russia may elect to take the indemnity, and what territory she may ask, are highly important to Europe. European concert is therefore necessary. The understanding regarding the Straits may mean something or nothing, but it is a European, an English interest. In further discussing the subject he referred to the attitude of Austria, which was thoroughly in accord with Britain in her views on the questions now in dispute. From his speech it was evident that the British Government fully understood the gravity of the situation, and the vast importance to the Empire of the questions raised by Russia in her conditions laid before Turkey.

From the above it will be seen that the difficulty is by no means settled, and our great fear is that as far as Britain is intimately concerned, it is only about to begin. It is satisfactory, however, to know that Austria is thoroughly in accord with England, and that Germany has plainly intimated to Russia that the conditions demanded by her must be submitted for approval to the powers interested. Independent of these powers Britain would have maintained her honour and integrity, but with these other Powers she will be sustained in her determination to keep Russia in her place, and prevent her from riding rough-shod over Turkey, and taking possession of portions of her territory, the neutrality of which is of vital importance to the prestige and future of Britain.

We have no faith in Russia's professions. Her sole aim and object is aggrandizement, and unless she are curbed in her ambitious desires she will establish a foot hold on the Mediterranean which will be a constant source of annoyance and dread to Britain.

Check.

"Nothwithstanding the repeated censures that have been passed upon people more remarkable for impudence than wit, there are yet some remaining who pass with the giddy part of mankind for sufficient sharers of the latter, who have nothing but the former qualification to recommend them." So said one of the writers in the Spectator published more than a century and a half ago, and had the author lived until the present day, he would have seen many living examples of the truth of his assertion. Our language has undergone considerable change since the above was written, and what was called impudence in those days, now delights under the less dignified but probably more expressive word,—check. There are so many varieties of this peculiar quality that it is impossible in a short space to enumerate the one-half of them. We hear of the check of the precocious young American; that of the insurance agent has grown proverbial; the travelling bookman possesses this quality in a superabundant degree; and even lawyers, ward politicians and lightning-rod vendors, usually the most modest of men, do not escape the condemnation of those who set themselves against anything like forwardness. Newspaper men are also subjected to all kinds of inconvenience on this score, and their retiring nature is frequently annoyed by insinuations of "brass," "cheek," &c. But the check we desire more particularly to deal with is of a somewhat different nature from those mentioned. It is the pure and unadulterated stuff that knows no bashfulness, and resembles the check of a camel horse.

In illustrating our subject, we will take a familiar example. Let us suppose that a man who has no pretensions to superior merit save in the phantasms of his own imagination, but who, nevertheless, insists on taking a leading or at least a prominent part in public affairs. Such a man soons finds himself placed in that awkward position which must eventually bring about a collapse of his high hopes. He can discover no fertile fields in his brain to draw upon, and, after realising the total emptiness of his pretensions to meritorious distinction above his fellows, he transforms himself into a brazen image, and thereby drowns the sweeter sounds of the purer metal in the loud tooting propensities of his own. Whenever there is anything of moment or some matter of public notoriety, he generally rises to the surface owing to the extreme lightness of his material. He is not afraid of criticism, nor does he feel the shafts of ridicule for he soon mistakes check for talent, and believes himself to be the cleverest of men.

Another peculiar feature in his nature is his officiousness. Check begets officiousness just as surely as the sun begets heat, and we have seen a specimen of this genus homo so entirely lose the little judgment he had, that he has mistaken himself for a great personage, and acted his part with more amusement to the spectators than many a good comedian could possibly have done. When some famous man is on a public pilgrimage, this individual at once attaches himself to the Company, and it is perfectly immaterial to him whether he does so in the capacity of flunkey or groom. To be near the great is sufficient to satisfy his imbecile cravings; and his check so runs away with his discretion that he is unable to discriminate between equality and servility. He becomes just a trifle offensive in public demonstrations, not so much for anything inherent in himself but because his officious nature leads him to interfere with the due exercise of the duties of others. Sometimes he is rudely pushed aside to make way for the pleasures of his friends, but he cannot and will not be kept in his proper place—the background. His reason tells him that he would make a good perspective but his cheek whispers that he would furnish a fine object for the foreground, and consequently the picture is spoiled and becomes a mere daub.

We are ready to admit that when cheek is kept within moderate bounds it is a good thing to carry about, but when it is the only commodity a man possesses, we must confess it becomes a trifle objectionable. By the continual exercise of this quality, a man becomes obnoxious to those around him. His friends feel annoyed, his enemies hoot, and the multitude of small minds laugh and enjoy the joke. But he is far beyond the sense of mortification of spuit, and his check is innocent of a blush. He is apparently unaware that his motives are easily construed, and that his attempts to bring himself into prominence result only in making him notorious. His original feeling of self-possession degenerates into the pertness of a coxcomb, and his forward manner and noisy guffaw remind one of Goldsmith's expression,—"The loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind." It is impossible to discourage or dampen the ardor of pure check. Once it obtains a hold on a man it renders him impervious to the suggestions of his friends and callous to the finer sentiments of a quiet and retiring disposition. While the beholders laugh and jeer, he, unconscious of the exhibition he makes of himself, wonders why he is not more honored and appreciated, and is ready at every favourable opportunity to elevate himself still higher in his own estimation and to lower himself still more in the opinion of others. Some may feel a certain amount of pity for such men, but whatever sympathy we may possess for the frailties of the species, we cannot contemplate the really cheeky individual without regret that a man having the exercise of his reasoning faculties should so far forget his dignity as to degenerate into a tinkling cymbal.

Guelph Board of Education.

Board met Monday evening. Present—Judge Macdonald in the chair, Messrs. Knowles, Newton, Murton, Bell, Leonard, Wilkie, Mackenzie, Peterson, Keating.

Mr. Newton reported for Finance Committee, recommending payment of these accounts:—W. S. G. Knowles, $10 30; Jno. Kay, 75c; Acton Burrows & Co., $16.21; Robert Stewart, $22.23; Geo. Murton, $28.26; Inglis & Hunter, $11.63; G. & A. Hadden, $5.78; G. & A. Bruce, $9; G. D. Pringle, 75c.; Jas. Thorp, 35c. On motion of Messrs. Newton and Murton, the report was adopted.

Mr. Peterson, for special committee on school census, reported they had examined the returns of the enumerators and recommended that the Inspector ascertain as nearly as possible the accuracy of the returns, by examination of the school registers and teachers' reports, both of the public and separate schools of the town, and also as to the present attendance, and that during the past year. On motion of Messrs. Peterson and Knowles, the report was adopted.

Mr. Murton reported verbally, that the special committee of which he was one, had waited on the County Council. The chairman, Judge Macdonald, had been most indefatigable, but the utmost they could induce the County Council to do was to grant $1,000 towards repairing the high school, and also leave to sell a portion of the lot on Yorkshire street, the funds so raised to go towards high school repairs.

Judge Macdonald reported as to the action taken by the County Council with reference to model schools.

The Secretary read applications for appointment to new department, as second-class female teacher, from Isabella Sinclair, Woodstock; K. Meade, Nassagaweya; M. J. Thomson, Newmarket; Catharine Reid, Stratford; Mary Ann Ludlow, Erin; Alice McLaughlin, Mono Mills; Mrs. Catharine Slater, East Nissouri; Emily C. Fair, Brantford; Mrs. Finlay, Danforth; Emeline Clarke, Cobourg; Hettie Siles, Yorkville; Eliza Robertson, Southampton; Mary Ashton Poole, Cornwall; M. H. Stewart, Province Quebec; Eliza Jane Hall, Owen Sound; Jane Bate, Hamilton.

On motion of Mr. Peterson, the names of Misses Thomson, Reid, Bate, and Mrs. Finlay were referred to the School Management Committee to select one from. Board adjourned five minutes; Committee met; and on Board resuming, Mr. Peterson reported in favour of engaging Miss Bate. On motion of Messrs. Peterson and Knowles, the report was adopted.

On motion of Messrs. Newton and Knowles, it was resolved to request the Town Council to instruct their treasurer to honor the orders of this Board to the extent of $8,000, in anticipation of school estimates for current year.

Messrs. Wilkie and Leonard moved that the Building Committee be empowered to get plans prepared for remodelling the old Grammar School and to get estimates of cost; also, to get plans of lots proposed to be sold preparatory to advertising same for sale. On suggestion of Mr. Peterson, this was allowed to stand as notice of motion.

The Secretary presented a voluminous report for 1877, giving the value of school property, statistical reports of attendance and other information.

The Board adjourned at 8:55 p.m.

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER VIII.

"JUSTICE" CONSUMMATES WRONG—THE DEATH OF SIR PHILIP LOGAN.

The news of the escape of Harold from the Tolbooth brought consternation to Gilmour Logan and Malcolm Gillespie. Their guilty minds instantly took alarm, and they began to imagine what evil consequences to themselves might result from this unlooked-for issue to their scheme. When the first minutes of startled dread were over, the gauger expressed a feeling of positive relief, for that most dreadful of all burdens—the weight of innocent blood—was pressing upon him with a most uncomfortable and distracting influence—so greatly, indeed, that he had come to feel that, were Harold executed on the false testimony which he and Skeat had given, he would know no more peace in this world. Under the pangs of the remorse which stung him he had repented in his inmost soul of what he had done, and wished the temptation had not been yielded to. Go where he would, or busy himself as he might in official work, the recollection of what he had done was always present, and ever pressing like a weight upon him. For hours during night it kept him awake, and when he slept it came with even more terrible power in the shape of horrid dreams. He communicated his purturbations to his associate Skeat, who tried to laugh him out of them, for this worthy was more heartlessly constituted than Gillespie, and suffered no such qualms.

"I wish," said the gauger to him one day; "I wish I had the fullest assurance that Logan won't be hung."

"I hope he will be hung," returned Skeat, for then you'll know the thing is done past recall, and you'll soon forget all about it; but if they send him to the hulks you will be continually recollecting that he is there, and this may prey on your mind till who knows what it may tempt you to do. Oh, I hope they'll hang him."

"Oh, Lord, no, Ned!—I cannot bear to think of that!" was Gillespie's shuddering response. "I hope to heaven he'll be only transported."

Of the two we think Skeat's view was philosophically the best. The execution of Harold would have had a very strong effect on the gauger for a time; but he had just that light impulsive nature which does not retain an impression long when the cause is removed; he would soon therefore have ceased to feel the twangs, knowing that all was done past remedy; whereas, had the youth been sentenced to transportation, the recollections of his continual sufferings would permanently retain itself, and work, it might be, to some violent end.

But by the escape which he had effected Harold had settled that he should be neither executed nor banished, and this was getting Gillespie out of the difficulty in a very unexpected manner. So soon as the latter had time to reflect on it he experienced, as we have said, positive relief; but the very circumstance which had rid him of one evil brought another upon him, and one little less disquieting and dangerous. He instinctively felt that in Harold Logan he had a bitter and implicable enemy to cope with—an active, resolute, daring man, who had every motive to seek revenge, who would leave no means untried to bring punishment on the author of his ruin; for such Gillespie knew himself to be. For personal danger the gauger cared little—he could defiantly meet and brave that; but he greatly dreaded discovery, disgrace, and professional ruin, and these Harold had it in his power to bring upon him if he could prove his innocence and the perjury which had been the means of fastening the guilt upon him. It was said that he had fled to the hills. Doubtless he would open communication with Black Dick, and might prevail on the latter to own the murder of Wanlass.

"Much harm that would do," said Skeat, in answer to Gillespie's expression of such a fear. "Suppose Black Dick said so, who would believe him? It would be looked on as a concoction between the two to get Logan out of the scrape, and wouldn't prove a feather's weight against the evidence you and I have given You are quite safe on that head, so don't let any such fear annoy you."

As usual the counsel and opinion of his more hardened and unscrupulous assistant had a hardening effect on Gillespie's nature, and the fears under which he laboured were gradually allayed. Partly to get quit of these and partly to gratify his natural inclinations he grew more gay and reckless in his mode of life, and involved himself further and further in pecuniary difficulties

By the escape of Harold, Gilmour Logan was furious beyond expression, for he knew that his position was not secure so long as Harold live The latter would no doubt be outlawed, and as an outlaw he would forfeit his inheritance. which should then come to himself; but, knowing him to be innocent, he could not divest himself of the fear that circumstances might arise through time to bring his innocence to light, in which case the sentence of outlawry would be reversed, and his birthright restored to him. Though Gilmour had soothed the gauger by representing that interest would be made to prevent Harold from being executed, he had secretly determined that no such exertions would be put forth. Nay, he had resolved to use every means in his power to get the law to remove him for ever from his path Then he could enjoy the title and estate without the possibility of his right being disturbed. This prospect had been interfered with by Harold's deliverance from prison. The circumstance would not indeed prevent Mount Cairn from coming to him at Sir Philip's death, but it would prevent him from feeling perfectly secure in its possession. He hoped, however, that Harold would ere long be retaken, and that the scaffold would come as an effectual barrier between him and danger.

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. The Fisheries Award.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The dissatisfaction felt with the report of the Canadian Fisheries Commission is so great and general here that Congress will not confirm it. Whenever the President resorts it will be attacked in both houses as unjust, unreasonable, and not based on facts, and as a kind of Canadian Yankee trick, submission to which would oblige us to pay a large sum of money, $5,500,000, and get nothing for it. As the whole matter has to be ratified by Congress before the award can become due, it may be taken for settled that the result of the Commission's labors is as good as thrown away. It should be understood that unlike the other commissions established by the Treaty of Washington, the decisions of which were expressly declared final and operative when made, the Fisheries Commission was created simply to ascertain and report whether any, and if so what, amount of damage was due from either Government by the other for concessions agreed upon by the two, independent of this Commission's judgment, and it was understood that if the Commission should declare that the United States ought to pay a sum to Canada, this Report must be considered and ratified by Congress before it could have effect. There is very little probability that the Canadians will ever see $5,500,000 of our money as result of this Commission. They have had several good offers from the United States which they have rejected, and the idea now prevails among Congressmen that this $5,500,000 award is an attempt to play a Yankee trick on the Yankee.

LORD DUFFERIN'S MISSION.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The Sun says Ben. Butler's speech, in Massachusetts last summer, advocating the seizure of the fishery grounds, and indirectly advocating the repudiation of the fishery award, caused an uneasy feeling among Canadians. The British Legation having been advised that Butler contemplated introducing a resolution in the House repudiating the award, Lord Dufferin came on to Washington, and yesterday, together with Minister Thornton, had an interview with the President and Secretary Evarts. Lord Dufferin represented that England being loaded down with the Eastern troubles, was especially anxious to secure friendly assurances from this country of raising no question over reciprocity matters. President Hayes and Secretary Evarts assured Lord Dufferin they would do all in their power to maintain cordial relations.

Ontario Legislature.

TORONTO, Jan. 26.

Mr. Massie presented a petition from the County Council of Wellington, praying for certain amendments to the Voters' Lists Act of 1876.

Among the bills read a first time were the following:

Mr. Massie—Respecting the Galt and Guelph Railway Company.

Mr. Massie—To convert a burial ground in the town of Guelph into a park.

Mr. Clarke (Wellington)—Respecting the Credit Valley Railway Company.

Mr. Lauder moved for a return of receipts and expenditures relating to the endowment funds of the University of Toronto and of Upper Canada College since the date of the last return. In speaking to his motion he pointed out that since Confederation both the income and the expenditure of these institutions had steadily increased, and argued that the control of the funds should now be vested in the representatives of the people.

Mr. Crooks did not object to the general scope of the motion, but suggested some verbal alterations with a view of making the return more complete. He explained the law regulating the management of the endowment funds of Upper Canada College and of the University of Toronto, pointing out that the University Act of 1853 separated the academical management, vesting the former in the Senate of the University and the latter in the Bursar.

Mr. Macdougall repudiated the Act of 1853, and held the expenditure of money on the strength of Orders in Council under it to be unconstitutional.

Mr. Bethune suspected that the real object of the motion, as read in the light of Mr. Macdougall's speech, was the breaking up of the endowments of the institutions named and their distribution amongst the High Schools and denominational institutions of the Province.

After some further discussion, Mr. Mowat explained that the neglect to publish the annual financial reports of the endowment funds began long before Confederation, and defended the Government against the charges of wrong doing brought against them in connection with the additions made to the Upper Canada College buildings.

Mr. Deacon moved to add to the motion an order for the return of the number of students of University College who have graduated in the University of Toronto since Confederation, and of the number of pupils who have during the same period passed through the forms of Upper Canada College.

At the suggestion of Mr. Crooks, the motion was changed so as to show the total number of pupils educated at Upper Canada College and the localities to which they belonged. The motion was then carried.

From a Physician.

Messrs Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Boston:

Gents—You may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP for my wife, who was suffering from general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I have tried the noted physicians in this State, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup; the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work about the house; and I find that I cannot speak too highly in praise of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozen of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit.

LOAN AND AGENCY COMP'Y,

LIMITED.

Authorized Capital—$5,000,000.

THE Company's special system of Loans affords to borrowers, and especially to Farmers, the following most important advantages:—

1. The borrower is NOT OBLIGED to repay any part of the principal until the whole term of the Mortgage has run.

2. He has the RIGHT (after the first year) to repay at any time, the whole or any part of the Loan, without prior notice to the Company.

3. No extra charge, bonus or otherwise exacted on such repayment.

4. He is requested when making application for the Loan, to state the day on which he wishes interest to be made payable. He thus can stipulate for a date, say after harvest, or at such time as is likely to be most convenient for him.

5. Interest can be made payable once a year—not in advance.

6 On repayment of any part of the principal, interest on such amount immediately ceases.

"UNDER THE GASLIGHT."—Sophie Miles this evening in the town hall, when the above play will be presented. Those who want to see a really interesting play put on with considerable dramatic effect should not fail being present. The name of this talented actress should be sufficient to draw a full house.

MR. GEO. ROCHE, of Hamilton, President of the North American St. George's Union, and Mr. J. E. Pell, Secretary of Toronto St. George's Society, will be in Guelph on the 7th February, on business relating to the annual meeting of the Union in Guelph next August. Those parties are expected to be present at the regular monthly meeting of the Guelph Society.

MUSICAL UNION.—A glorious practice was held last evening by the above Society. The following numbers were selected and given with considerable energy and effect: Quartette, "Good Night, Beloved," "Damascus," and "The Glory of the Lord," "The Heavens are Telling," "The Highlands," and "God Save the Queen." It was decided to give an open rehearsal on the evening of the 12th of February, when each member will have the privilege of bringing a friend.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT.—On Tuesday evening Mr. David Wilson, a young man for a few months past a resident of Guelph was on a jamboree on Tuesday evening. After visiting a number of hotels in town he finally brought up at the Queen's. He wanted liquor, which was refused him. He then became unruly and threatened all sorts of dire and improbable matters. Mr. Feek, landlord, anxious to preserve the order of his house sent for a policeman. Mr. Dooley arrived and in attempting to arrest him was resisted by Wilson, and one Marsh Quinton it is alleged assisted to such an extent that he is, now wanted by the police. The policeman however gained his point and Wilson with assistance was dragged over to the cells where he was allowed to rest his weary limbs. He was interviewed by the Police Magistrate this morning and for being drunk and disorderly, charged by Chief Kelly, he was fined $10 and $6 costs. He was also charged with assaulting Policemen Dooley and for that offence was fined $5 and $2.50 costs. Wilson stated to the Magistrate that when arrested he did not know what he was doing; that he must have drunk poisoned whiskey, or something of that sort. He also had a lingering idea that he had been partially stunned by a blow. The prisoner is a respectable looking young man and must have felt his position keenly. No doubt the lesson taught will have a salutary effect.

ST. PATRICK'S SOCIETY.—The members of St. Patrick's Society turned out in strong force at the meeting last evening, there being between forty and fifty present. The President, Mr. J. M. Bond, being unavoidably absent, the chair was taken by the first Vice-President, Dr. Nunan. After the minutes of previous meeting had been confirmed, the following new members were admitted: Jas. Porter, P. Conway, W. H. Brasbie, and M. Quinn. The principal business of the evening was the revising of the constitution and by-laws of the Society, which had not been changed since its formation in 1867. After the Secretary had read the report on the constitution, it was moved that the meeting go into committee of the whole, Mr. J. Watson Hall in the chair. Each clause was then taken up separately, and all blanks filled in, and the meeting again resumed, and the constitution as amended was adopted. The by-laws were similarly dealt with, Mr. S. S. Walsh in the chair. The most important change is that respecting the date of holding the annual meeting, which has been changed from the third Friday in February to the first Tuesday in the same month. The yearly meeting for the election of officers will consequently take place next Tuesday, of which due notice will be given the members. Tickets for the entertainment in the Caledonian Hall, on February 6th, were distributed to the members, the price being fixed at 15 cents each. A good programme is being prepared. Members not already supplied with tickets can get them from the Secretary.

In consequence of the Premier's letter to the Lachine Canal contractors, the bon system has been abolished on two sections, and fortnightly payments adopted; while on a third weekly payments will in future be the rule.

Late and apparently authentic news from Sitting Bull's neighborhood shows that, so far from contemplating a raid on American territory, the Sioux warrior apprehends an American attack, and has appealed to Major Walsh for protection.

The Breslau Disaster.

Coroner's Jury Says No Person to Blame.

Tuesday will be a day long remembered by the inhabitants of Breslau, as an occasion when one of the largest smash-ups that has ever occurred in the western portion of the line of the Grand Trunk took place. The main facts and incidents in regard to the affair have already been detailed in the MERCURY, and are as published yesterday correct.

From the brakesman, A. Tobin, of Toronto, who had such a narrow escape in jumping from the top of a car down the embankment of seventy feet, it is learned that no sooner had he reached the bottom of the slope and with bales of cotton and barrels of meal and flour rolling on every side of him, than he heard the cries of Solomon Hodgins, the fireman, loud and heartrending. Tobin, along with others, was quickly at his side, and as every piece of wreck was lifted off him he begged and prayed of his comrades to be careful, as he was suffering intense agony. He was finally released and was carefully borne to a cottage near by. Roberts, the driver, and mate of Hodgins, although injured about the chest, and had a bruise on the head, assisted all he could, and when the end came, after poor Hodgins had piteously called for his wife and child, as he lay dying in the arms of Tobin, the driver whose perilous position is always closely linked with the fireman, cried like a child. Towards the afternoon of Tuesday Roberts was not feeling so well, and when he was removed to his home in Stratford he had to be carried on board the cars.

A wrecking gang of some fifty men were busily engaged during the entire day clearing away the debris and removing the goods to a place of safety. In the evening a bonfire was built at the bottom of the slope, with pieces of the shattered cars, and work was continued by its light.

An inquest was held on the body of Hodgins by Coroner D. S. Bowlby, of Berlin. The following jurymen were empannelled:—D. McDougall, M. Moyer, H. Whitmer, John G. Stauffer, Geo. F. Shoemaker, Menno Clemens, Aaron Stauffer, Chas. Gerster, Henry Hamell, D. W. Sipes, F. Schaffer, Aaron Clemmer, Henry Koch, M. Durant and John F. McKay.

Mr. D. McDougall was chosen foreman.

The jury met at three o'clock at Gerster's Breslau Hotel, and after viewing the body of Hodgins, which was then lying at the freight house, an adjournment took place for half an hour.

Hodgins was found to be terribly bruised and smashed up. Besides his limbs being broken, his skull was caved in and his face was disfigured. It is strange to think that he had been conscious for even a moment after he was struck.

On the reassembling of the jury, there was present District Superintendent Cooper, of Toronto, and Mr. Rolph, of Blake, Kerr & Boyd's office, on behalf of the Railway Company.

The following evidence was submitted:

E. Hockedy, conductor, sworn—He was conductor of the train that caused the accident about four o'clock this (Tuesday) morning. When his train was about three quarters of a mile from Breslau station, running between eighteen and twenty miles an hour, a train was observed ahead by the brakesman on top of the cars. They put on the brakes and then looked out for themselves. It was thought that the train was standing on the bridge at the time. The train that was run into left Berlin thirty-seven minutes ahead of him. He did not get any orders about the train ahead. The train which was run into left Stratford an hour and twenty-five minutes ahead of his. The rails were frosty, or "greasy," and although the usual speed is fifteen miles per hour, he had increased it to get over the grade.

W. J. Spence, brakesman on Hockedy's train, testified to having seen the tail lamps of the train ahead, and immediately put on the brake of the van. There was no neglect on the part of the train men so far as he knew.

Samuel Abbott, brakesman on Hockedy's train, was examined, and his evidence corroborated that of the former witness.

W. M. Scanlon, conductor of the train that was run into, testified to having informed the operator at Berlin that his train intended taking water at Breslau, and for him to advise the freight following him that such was to be done. The far semaphore was not put up while the train was taking water. It was customary to do so, but by the time one could get off the train to put the semaphore up, the train was ready to start. After the train left the tank it became stuck on the grade, and it had to be backed up to secure a start. Two cars were cut off and shunted to lighten the train, after it was seen that the grade could not be surmounted. His train was started, when the witness heard the train behind, but on account of the slippery rails the motion was very slow. Had the rails not been frosty, the accident would never have happened, as the train would not have stuck on the grade in the first place.

Edward Hance, brakesman on Scanlon's train, corroborated the evidence of the previous witness so far as the "pitch in" was concerned.

A. J. Tobin, brakesman on Scanlon's train, and the party who jumped down the embankment was sworn, but nothing new was elicited.

Jas. Blair, driver of the train run into, stated in his evidence that he believed if the sticking had had not occurred on the grade the accident would never have occurred. Frost was the cause of the stoppage, as he had never stuck on the same grade with a like load before.

W. M. Cuits, fireman, corroborated the evidence of the previous witness.

Jas. Duke, night switchman at Breslau, swore to having raised the yard semaphore before the accident happened, and it was up at the time.

John Strickland, night operator at Berlin was on duty on Tuesday morning, and gave Scanlon orders to cross No. 26 at Mossboro. He did not know that Scanlon was to stop at Breslau. The only order received was one from head office in regard to Mossboro. The witness swore that Scanlon did not give him any order in regard to taking water at Breslau, or he did not remember receiving any such order. There was over half an hour's time between the time Scanlon's and Hockedy's trains left Berlin, which would leave more than ample time to take water, before one train could overtake the other.

This concluded the evidence.

The coroner believed that the state of the rails last evening was the cause of the accident, as was shown by the evidence of the driver of Scanlon's train. The very large amount of time consumed by the stoppage on the grade was the cause of the delay. If that had not happened the accident would never have occurred. It was one of those affairs which could not have been obviated. He considered it an accident over which the employees of the road had no control.

The jury was then locked up, and it was fully an hour and a half before they arrived at a conclusion in regard to the matter.

The verdict found was, that Solomon Hodgins met his death by Hockedy's special train running into the one of which Wm. Scanlon was conductor, on the morning of the 29th inst., at Breslau station. On account of the frosty state of the rails the trains could not be kept under control. The employees of both trains were exonerated from all blame in the matter.

THE BERLIN NIGHT OPERATOR.

A word of explanation is due to Mr. Strickland, night operator at the Berlin station. While conductor Scanlon swears that he told Strickland that he intended taking water at Breslau and to warn the freight following, Mr. Strickland swears that he received no such order. It was shown, however, that whether he had received such an order or not, sufficient time had elapsed—some thirty-five minutes—between the two trains leaving Berlin to allow Scanlon's train to have been between Mossboro and Guelph, under ordinary circumstances, instead of still being at Breslau. The jury evidently were of opinion that Mr Strickland was in nowise to blame for the accident. Had it not been for Scanlon's train sticking on the grade, and the necessity of cutting off two cars and shunting them, and delay thereby occasioned, no accident could possibly have happened.

By the verdict of the jury, Mr. Strickland has been entirely freed from blame, as their verdict was in effect that it was entirely owing to the "greasy" or frosty state of the rails that prevented Scanlon's train surmounting the grade.

It certainly must strike the reader, and more particularly those acquainted with the running of freight trains, that allowance should be made for such a morning as Tuesday last, when the rails were in the condition they were. Had Scanlon's train been composed of eight or ears instead of twenty-one, the grade at Breslau would have been run over, and the loss of a life, and destruction of from $40,000 to $60,000 would never have happened.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The Directors of the Guelph Horticultural Society in presenting their annual report of the proceedings during the past year, would congratulate the members on the continued success of the Society, as is evident from the increased interest manifested by the public.

On the 24th of May the Society held a show for pot plants and bulbous flowers, which turned out most satisfactory, a large number of very fine plants and cut flowers being exhibited, together with some very fine samples of early potatoes from the garden at the Agricultural College, which could hardly have been beaten by any one at that early season of the year.

The regular spring show was held on the 2nd of July, when a very fine display of Horticultural productions was made. In fact, if we may judge from the amount of money awarded for prizes, we must say that it was the best ever held at this season, as more money was paid for prizes than at any previous spring show. The amount paid was $113.75, some $13 in excess of any former year. The entries numbered 400, notwithstanding several sections in the prize list had been struck out.

The Judges, in commenting on the show, make the following remarks:—"We cannot too highly commend the large and fine collection of foliage and green-house plants shown by the gardener at the Agricultural College, although they were not entered for competition. The collection of cut flowers was also very fine, the boquets both for table and hand were good and above the average, and on the whole the Exhibition was most creditable to the horticulturists of Guelph."

The fall show took place on the 6th of September, when an unusually large display was made, there being a good competition for everything for which a prize was offered.

In plants and cut flowers the show was on a par with previous years, although the very dry weather up to the beginning of August, having very much injured them. Taking into consideration the unfavorable season for flowers the show was very good.

The fruit on the whole was superior, although apples were not as well represented as on former occasions, owing, doubtless, to a blight or frost, which caused many orchards to fail altogether. The promise for a good crop at the time the trees were in bloom, was never better, but owing to the cause above mentioned the fruit never set. Then again the moth was very destructive. This pest seems on the increase, and all fruit growers should make vigorous efforts to stay its ravages, or the apple crop will be a thing of the past.

There was a great display of pears, some forty samples being entered, while plums were better than for many years, both as to quantity and quality. In fact they would be hard to beat anywhere. Some fifty entries were made in this class.

The show of vegetables was splendid, and far exceeded the previous year. The number of entries amounted to nearly 300, and a better collection would be hard to find. This, of course, was owing in a great measure to the bountiful rain we had during and after harvest. Previous to that time the prospect for a crop of vegetables was poor indeed, but from that time the progress was wonderful, and the result was the very large and excellent show of vegetables of all kinds. At this show the entries footed up to about 700.

On October the 26th, the President called a meeting of the Directors to determine as to the best method of meeting our liabilities, as the treasurer had informed him that owing to the balance due from last year, and the large amount of prizes awarded this year, the funds would not meet the demands, consequently there would be a considerable deficiency. The matter was fully discussed at the meeting, and a resolution placed on the minutes to the effect that the treasurer was to pay all premiums awarded at the fall show at a reduction of fifty cents in the dollar. By this means we are happy to say that all liabilities are paid, and that a balance of $26.90 is now in the hands of the treasurer, to the credit of the Society.

The financial statement was also submitted, which showed that the receipts during the year had been $367.64, and the disbursements, $340.74, leaving a balance of $26.90.

Toronto Correspondence.

TORONTO, 29th Jan. 1878.

The one Parliamentary event of importance last week was the Budget speech, if such it can be termed, of Mr. Wood, the new Provincial Treasurer. In every respect it was a marked and pleasing success, although it was little more than a bare statement of figures. Delivered in a pleasant tone and in unambiguous terms, not a word of it was lost upon the hearer, and the attention of the whole House was maintained for about an hour, without that resort to letter writing, on the part of members, which is a broad hint, to any speaker, that he had said enough. Mr. Woods' personal appearance is in his favor, and he impresses his hearers, through his earnestness, with a conviction that he believes successful of any, and the nearest approach to that eloquence which sways assemblies of men and carries measures. His task was a pleasing one. He had to tell a plain story of successful administration, economical government, an overflowing treasury, and an undiminished surplus. He had to show that the fiscal resources of Ontario are far from exhaustion, that direct taxation is yet a thing of the distant future, and that, with careful management, the annual subsidy and income from lands and timber will suffice to meet ordinary expenditure for many years to come. The demands for the erection of public buildings having, in a great measure, ceased, the extraordinary outlay occasioned by their construction will stop, and although the cost of their maintenance has materially increased, there is sufficient margin to permit liberal appropriations for this purpose without trenching upon the funded resources of the Province. When Mr. Wood sat down, his success was marked by unusually warm applause, but the effectiveness of his statement was more evidenced when the leader of the Opposition attempted to reply to it. Mr. M. C. Cameron is a ready debater, and never fails to make a strong possible point, but for once he was at sea, and, although he beat about for arguments, he could not find them. He was compelled to acknowledge the satisfactory exhibit made by the new Treasurer, and could only predict that, some day or other, this pleasant state of things must end, and assert that if our public institutions were a success, the credit of it must be given to the Conservatives who had initiated them. Mr. W. McDougall growled a few sentences of disparagement as unfounded as they were ungracious, and the House went into Committee, after little or any debate, and the first item was passed. During the present week, the supplies will be considered, and although there will be the usual carping at small items, it is not expected that any serious opposition will be offered.

A motion made by Mr. Tooley, the Conservative member of Middlesex, calling for a return giving the present employment, in so far as it can be ascertained, of the students educated at the Agricultural College, elicited a rather warm debate, in which the purchase of stock and the management of the institution were freely criticised. While no strong point was made, it was apparent that an impression of the advantages of this Model Farm is far more firmly fixed in the minds of the members than it was a year ago, and that the institution is rapidly growing in favor. There may be difficulties to surmount, faults to remedy, and some objectionable features to remove, but this is incidental to the establishment of any public experiment, and it would be wonderful indeed if the College escaped it. Upon the whole the Farmers' College is something of which our agriculturists have reason to be proud, and although they may regard its faults with jealous eye, they ought to be, as they will be, the last to unfairly attack it. Mr. Tooley's motion will bring down a return which will be satisfactory, it is safe to predict, to the warmest and most sanguine friends of the institution. It will be laid before the House at an early date, and will show that the Model Farm has done good work for farmers.

The debate of yesterday, upon Mr. Lauder's motion for a return of the receipts and expenditures relating to the endowment fund of the University, and Upper Canada College, was decidedly the best of the session. Mr. Lauder simply moved for the returns and Mr. Crooks, while speaking, added some verbal amendments making them still more complete. Mr. W. McDougall, smarting under a recollection of his blunderings utterances, upon the subject of alterations in the Upper Canada College, made at a Conservative pic nic, denounced the expenditure and contended that it ought to be subject to the control of Parliament. This point was more forcibly put by Mr. Scott, of Peterboro, who asserted that, as the railway fund was made amenable to Parliamentary supervision, so should the University Fund. It was contended by the Ministry that the funds are trust funds, wholly beyond control of Parliament, and set aside many years ago for a specific purpose, while the Railway Aid Fund was voted by Parliament and is intended to assist many different projects, respecting the merits of which various opinions may fairly exist. The remarks of some of the Opposition,—notably Mr. Wm. McDougall—evidently favored a division amongst the denominational colleges, of the College Funds, but there was not a large display of sympathy with this idea, and the leader of the Opposition joined the leader of the Government in denouncing it. The motion was granted, without a dissentient, and the debate resulted favourably to the present management of the trust fund. But there may come a time, when the expediency of submitting the trust to parliamentary control may be more seriously entertained than it at present appears to be, and while Mr. McDougall's scheme of spoliation will be scouted by all friends of superior education his contention, that such a large fund should receive supervision of the representatives of the people, will probably yet be thought more worthy of consideration than it was yesterday.

On dit in the lobbies and smoking-room that, at the close of the present session the Attorney-General is likely to leave the Ontario Cabinet, and accept the position of Minister of Justice in the Dominion Cabinet. You have the rumor for what it is worth, which may not be much, but it is amongst the possibility of times when many changes are taking place, and nothing new surprises. In that case, it is probable that Mr. Crooks would lead the Government here, although he is not so well-fitted for the position as the gentleman who now holds the Attorney-Generalship. The whole story may be a canard, but it finds belief amongst those who profess to know more than their fellows. If it has truth, what will be Ontario's loss will be a great gain to the Dominion.

The various Committee are now actively at work; and private bill business is progressing satisfactory. The Public Accounts Committee has settled down to a thorough investigation of facts and figures, but, as yet, has elicited nothing new.

WEDNESDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 30, 1878

The Halifax Election.

This election took place on Tuesday, when Mr. Jones was returned by a majority of 223, with eight polling places yet to hear from, but when the returns from these are received it is expected they will add to his majority. The victory is one of unusual significance from the fact that the Opposition, led on by Dr. Tupper, used every means in their power to defeat the new Minister of Militia. Driven to the last extreme, the Opposition on Monday published a bogus despatch from Ottawa, stating that there was a row in the Cabinet, that the ultra portion were endeavouring to drive Mr. Scott out and prevent Mr. Anglin's re-election as Speaker, and that the Government would at the next election raise the Protestant cry. This was intended to influence Catholic voters in Halifax, though previous to this Protestant country districts had been canvassed on the ground that Mr. Richey was an Orangeman. Some Catholic supporters of Mr. Jones, incensed by those attempts to raise religious prejudices, printed and circulated a speech made by Mr. Richey many years ago, in which he spoke harshly of the Catholics. The Opposition, finding their efforts to excite the Catholics against the Government likely to prove abortive, went to the opposite extreme, and during the night issued a sheet declaring that Mr. Jones had circulated the Richey speech, and appealed to members of the old Protest Alliance to vote against him on that account.

Mr. Jones has beaten all the opposing forces brought against him, and considering the nature, extent and virulence of the opposition, it is a wonder his majority is so large as it is. Halifax went against him, but this was expected, but Mr. Richey and his friends expected that it would be much larger than it is, and though it is 137 against Mr. Jones, it is much below what was counted on by the Opposition. Halifax is very Conservative, and only in 1874 it gave a majority for Mr. Jones, and this at a time when the opposition to a Reform candidate did not count for anything.

Considering the opposition brought against Mr. Jones, and the agencies at work to secure his defeat, his election is a great triumph for the Government, and he will make a most useful and influential member of it.

By a majority of 43 to 22 the United States Senate has decided that the bonds of the Government are payable in silver. This is equivalent to a declaration that the debtor may change the terms of a contract, and pay the creditor in depreciated coin. If the resolution should be sanctioned by the House and endorsed by the President, it would then have the force of law and become an act of spoliation. Those who have any regard for the national honor hope that even if the House of Representatives passes the bill the President will veto it.

An Act now before the Quebec Legislature proposes to make compulsory the prohibition of the erection of wooden buildings in cities and towns of the Province, under penalty of a hundred dollars, increasing at the rate of not more than ten dollars a day during the continuance of the offence. Wood in the external construction of any public building is strictly prohibited. An Act of the same kind in Ontario is very much required.

An unfavourable change in the Pope's condition is reported.

Earl Beaconsfield is said to have been offered and to have declined the offer of a Garter.

A panic exists in the Lancashire cotton trade, owing to fears of a prolongation of the Eastern war.

Messrs. Parker and Grant, both Liberals, have been returned to the British House of Commons from Perth and Leith respectively.

The Supreme Court on Monday dismissed the appeal in Sanders v Woodworth, another case involving the question of the powers of a Local Legislature.

Cigarette smoking is indulged in by many young women and school girls. The thumbs and forefingers of a class in a young ladies' school in New York were examined the other day, and only two were found to be without tobacco stains.

The N. Y. "World" and some Galt Protectionists.—The New York World runs its lance through the Protectionist visor in very good style. Says our clever contemporary:—"And again we say that they are funny people these protectionists. For instance, at Galt, Ont., last week the Agricultural Society held its annual meeting, and an enthusiastic Conservative smuggled into the report this paragraph, which hints at protection to farmers, the party's war-cry at present:—'Oats are not of first rate quality, and bring a low figure on account of the free importation from the States. This does not materially affect this riding, where oats are not grown as a staple, but is a serious consideration to places where they are grown as a principal crop.' Lo, no sooner was this read than up jumped another Conservative and Protectionist, who happened to be a manufacturer of oatmeal, and opposed the adoption of the report, because the price of oats was regulated by the British market, to which the large supplies of the Canadian crop was exported, and duties on American oats would not add a quarter of a cent to the Canadian prices, while they would close up his mill and injure the carrying trade. Every protectionist favors free trade for what he has to buy and others have to make."

Bruce County Council has voted each member of that body a copy of the revised statutes of Ontario. The Walkerton Telescope calls it a grab game.

A Novel Libel Suit.—A novel action for defamation of character came before the Stratford Police Magistrate the other day. It appears, the Herald of that town says, that the License Commissioners of North Perth had passed a resolution empowering the Inspector to notify hotel keepers not to give liquor to inebriates, and that under this claims that the Inspector, Mr. Climie, forbade the selling of intoxicants to Mr. Samuel Roe, of Milverton, whom he alleged to be an inebriate. Mr. Roe claims that the allegation is false, and the notification a slander, hence the action. The P. M. has reserved judgment, but as the issue is a novel one, it will probably be relegated to a higher court as a test case.

The Pope's unfavorable symptons continue. He is in a very low condition, but it is not believed that there is any present danger.

THE WAR NEWS.

The Russians only Seventy Miles from Constantinople.

NOTHING MORE ABOUT THE ARMISTICE.

Russia Relinquishes the Dardanelles Claim.

BRITAIN AND THE WAR.

The Attitude of Austria.

Jan. 29.

A Vienna correspondent telegraphs:—It is rumoured that no regular armistice will be concluded, but that immediately after the arrival of the Grand Duke Nicholas with the Turkish plenipotentiaries and Gen. Ignatieff in Adrianople, definitive peace negotiations will be entered into on the basis of the preliminaries accepted by the Porte. There is nothing improbable in this. The preliminary questions are so general and elastic that they will only receive their real significance by their definition in the final peace instrument.

A Constantinople special to Vienna says:—The delay in signing the conditions of peace is attributed to the Porte's opposition to the temporary occupation of Constantinople.

A Vienna correspondent telegraphs that the Porte is ready to accept almost anything the Czar may propose to prevent the Russians marching on Constantinople. The population of the capital is in a state of alarm from the rumours, spread in the interests of the Russians, of a project of the Turks to burn the town, blow up the Mosque of St. Sofia, and make a general massacre of the Christians and foreigners before retiring to Asia.

Advices from Constantinople up to last night says there is no news from the Turkish peace plenipotentiaries.

The concentration of Russians at Adrianople continues. Scouts have arrived near Tchorlu, about seventy miles west of Constantinople. Suleiman is at Bulair. Mehemet Ali is at Constantinople, but returns to Chatalja immediately. There are ten British iron-clads in Besika Bay. The Egyptian garrison has evacuated Bazardjik, about twenty-five miles north of Varna, and retreated to the latter place.

The Turkish Government is having difficulty to maintain order in the capital. Among the tens of thousands of refugees from Roumania are many armed Circassians. These have already plundered Tchatal-Busfians, Tchorlu, Rodosto, and other towns, and are now flocking into Constantinople laden with booty. The Government wishes to disarm them, and send them into Asia, but it is doubtful whether they will be able to do so.

Appalling misery prevails from the Bosphorus to the Gulf of Salonica. The whole coast is crowded with terrified Mohammedans seeking transportation across the straits. Hundreds are perishing from cold, hunger, and exhaustion. No succour is possible until the panic and confusion in the capital abate.

A Gallipolis despatch says:—Baker Pasha has arrived here with 5 000 men.

Advices from Athens up to last night say order has been re-established, but the exasperation of the people is increasing. Their disposition is very warlike. Many volunteers are crossing the frontier.

A despatch from Athens, dated the 28th, says:—Horrible threats against the ex-Ministers are heard, and scarcely less violent ones against the King.

An Athens despatch says the Turks attacked the Thessalonian insurgents on Mount Pelion, and were repulsed with a loss of 60. The loss of the insurgents is trifling. An insurrection has begun in the District of Armyros in Thessaly.

The vote of the British supplementary estimates has now become purely a party question, and the Liberals will contest it as such. The Government's position is weakened by taking a vote of confidence on the question of supplies, because many Liberals who might not have been willing to refuse the supplies will not hesitate to oppose the Cabinet on a party question. On the other hand, the Government's Eastern policy will be strengthened by a decided majority to such an extent that fear is expressed that the Cabinet will take a hostile attitude even at the risk of forcing Lord Derby's resignation.

Lord Derby last night, in opposing Lord Stratheden's resolution declaring that opposition to any occupation of Constantinople would not be breach of neutrality, very strongly intimated his personal conviction that a temporary Russian occupation of Constantinople would furnish no ground for British interference.

Sir Stafford Northcote said he had no knowledge of an alliance between Russia, Germany, and Austria, for the partition of Turkey. Regarding one of these Powers he has strong reason to doubt it has entered into any alliance. A few weeks or months will probably prove this.

Mr. Wm. Edward Forster, (Liberal) gave notice of an amendment to the vote of credit on Thursday.

The text of Mr. Foster's amendment is as follows:—

Having been informed in the Queen's Speech that the conditions on which Her Majesty's neutrality is based have not been infringed by either belligerent, and having since received no information sufficient to justify a departure from the policy of neutrality and peace the House sees no reason for adding to the people's burthens by voting an additional supply.

The following relative to the Eastern Question is published:—Lord Derby, telegraphing to Lord Loftus, British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, on January 28th, states that Count Schouvaloff that afternoon communicated a telegram from Prince Gortschakoff authorizing him to affirm categorically that the Russian Government considered the passage of men of war through the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus a European question which they did not intend to settle by themselves.

The Standard officially denies that the Colonial Secretaryship has been offered Lord Sandon.

A Vienna correspondent says he can state positively that Austria does not object to a moderate territorial aggrandisement of Servia and Montenegro.

A Berlin correspondent says:—It is reported that Count Andrassy has already informed Prince Gortschakoff of Austria's objections to the Russian peace conditions, stating at the same time that Austria would never accept an extension of Bulgaria to include Philippopolis or Adrianople.

A St. Petersburg correspondent says:—No doubt there was a misunderstanding between St. Petersburg and Vienna. Austria expected the conditions of peace to be submitted to a European Congress or communicated to the members of the triple alliance. The Russian Ambassador at Vienna gave explanations and assurances, but believed they had not the effect anticipated.

A Vienna despatch says Count Andrassy will sanction no measure calculated to bring about the ruin of the Ottoman Empire.

A Berlin correspondent says:—Excitement and uneasiness is caused here by reports that England has partly succeeded in detaching Austria from the Triple Alliance, and securing her conditional opposition to the Russian peace programme.

The statement of the object of the present visit of His Excellency the Governor-General to Washington, as reported in Monday's press despatches from the New York Sun, is altogether false.

The Gaika rebellion in South Africa is on the increase.

Toronto, Jan. 29.

Hon. Mr. Mowat moved for a special Committee, to consider the subject of municipal taxation. He traced briefly the history of exemptions in Canada and Ontario, and taking up one after another of the principal exemptions under the assessment law, indicated where in his opinion abolition was possible, and where change was expedient. He pointed out that those in rural municipalities who signed the petitions against exemptions could not in many instances have been aware of the effect which would follow the granting of their requests. He dwelt on the difficulties attending the taxation of personal property, and on the efforts made in other countries to overcome them.

Mr. Macdougall said he believed that the object of appointing the Committee asked for was not to collect information on which to base a measure, but to have a report brought in which would furnish the Government with an excuse for declining to deal with the subject. He accused the Government of violating the principle of responsible government by refusing to bring in a measure and turning the matter over to a Committe.

Mr. Scott took up a similar line of criticism, and hinted at differences of opinion on the subject within the Cabinet, quoting a former motion of Mr. Blake's to the effect that every subject ought to contribute to municipal burdens in proportion to his means.

Mr. Miller thought the agitation mainly a Toronto one, and dwelt on the absurdities and anomalies which would arise if Government property everywhere were subjected to municipal taxation. He was personally in favor of a land tax only, if that were practicable, and thought the rights of those who supported no church should be considered.

Mr. Gibson thought the agitation was confined almost entirely to Toronto, and that that city should procure a charter if the general municipal law of the Province did not suit it.

Mr. Robinson stated that the agitation had been going on for years in other cities besides Toronto.

After a brief defence of Toronto and attack on the Government from Mr. Cameron, a rejoinder from Mr. Mowat, and some rambling remarks on opposite sides of the main question from Mr. Bell and Mr. O'Sullivan respectively, the motion was carried.

The rest of the sitting was spent in Committee of Supply, most of the Departmental items being voted, when the House adjourned at ten.

The Supreme Court.

In the Supreme Court on Monday judgments were delivered in several cases. The most important of these are:—

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE CO. VS. WYLD.

This was an appeal from the Court of Chancery, Ontario, with reference to a refusal to pay insurance on a certain property in Hamilton destroyed by fire, on the ground that the goods in the two upper flats (an addition made) were not included in the policy. The respondents, Messrs. Wyld & Darling, it appeared, had effected an insurance on their stock, and had afterwards occupied two flats in an adjoining building connecting the original property therewith. Of this change notice was sent to the appellants. The original policy did not include this property, but the respondents hold that this was the understanding, and asked that the policy should be reformed so as to embody it.

The judges stood three to three, and the judgment of the Lower Courts was therefore sustained.

SEVERN VS. THE QUEEN.

This was an appeal of a brewer against the imposition of a license fee on brewers and distillers by the Local Legislature of Ontario. The contention of the appellants was that the imposition of such tax was not within the powers of Provincial Legislatures, but was vested by the British North America Act in the Federal Parliament. The appeal was sustained, the local Act declared ultra vires, and judgment against the defendants recorded with costs.

It was generally supposed that the doubt as to the respective rights of the Dominion Parliament and of the Local Legislature to deal with the question of prohibition would be resolved by this judgment, and though there appears to have been no express intimation to that effect, the result is evidently to declare by implication that the right to control the liquor traffic resides in the Dominion Parliament. It may be that some more explicit declaration on this point will be made in connection with the cases still involving the question of jurisdiction; if not, some steps may yet have to be taken to obtain a clear and unambiguous opinion as to the power of the Dominion Parliament to pass either a Permissive or a Prohibitory law.

Notice to the Public.

We have for a long time been firmly impressed with the conviction that the long credit system is injurious to business and unjust to creditors, and we have come to the determination to put a stop to it. Our experience is that the practice of extending accounts over a year is a great mistake, is unfair to the creditor and burdensome to the debtor. Were settlements made, say four times a year, instead of once, the amounts would be light, and payments would be comparatively easy, whereas, when accounts run for a year the amounts accumulate, and in many cases it is no easy matter to settle a bill.

We have, therefore, come to resolution to, in future, make out and collect our accounts for advertising and job work quarterly, and we hereby give notice that this rule will, in all cases, be strictly enforced. We believe that its adoption will be of equal benefit to our patrons as to us, and we shall, in no case, make an exception.

We are now sending out our accounts for the past year, and we must insist on the immediate settlement of them in all cases, otherwise we will have to take the usual but unpleasant steps to enforce payment.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER VIII.

"JUSTICE" CONSUMMATES WRONG—THE DEATH OF SIR PHILIP LOGAN.

This hope was fully shared in by Lady Logan, and both of them had now the expectation of speedily reaching the goal for which they had long striven; for the poor, shattered, and enfeebled Sir Philip Logan was now obviously dying. A few days—a week or two at most—the doctor said, would terminate his earthly career. They hoped he would survive till after the meeting of the Circuit Court, for it would simplify the matter of the succession if the sentence of outlawry was pronounced on Harold previous to his father's decease. That done, the Baronet could be conveniently be dispensed with; indeed, in one view of it, it would be a blessing to himself to pass away from this sublunary scene, for this world had become to him a place of pain and hopeless sorrow. He had outlived all life's joys; physical and mental weakness had reduced him to a mere human shadow, and the grave would prove a welcome shelter from all his troubles.

On a certain day early in October the Lords of Justiciary reached Aberdeen, and entered the city with much pomp and ceremony. In their train came advocates, clerks, lawyers, and numerous subordinate officers, and on the following morning the Court was opened with all due solemnity.

A few minor cases were first disposed of—then the trial of Harold Logan for the murder of Wanlass, the excise officer, was formerly inaugurated, though everybody knew that no trial could possibly take place. The law, however, is too grand a system to recognise indisputable facts till they are presented in proper order, and every preliminary was observed just the same as if the individual charged was safe in custody, or ready to appear at the bar when called to present himself at that dread place. All the witnesses had been duly summoned, and were faithfully in attendance—every preparation had been made—for it was not beyond the possibility that the escaped prisoner might return of his own accord to "thole the assize," though, truth to say, nobody expected anything of the kind.

It did not matter. All necessary ceremonies were carefully attended to, and at the proper moment the Clerk called the case of the Lord-Advocate for His Majesty's interest against Harold Logan.

As a matter of course, an Advocate Depute appeared for the Crown, but Harold Logan was not forthcoming, and all the officials had to assume a surprised look when Harold did not respond to his name or come into view. A macer was despatched to the door of the Court to summon him three times with a loud voice. It would have taken a voice much louder, however, to reach the ear of Harold Logan, who was at that moment within the smugglers' cave, far away among the hills, and had not the slightest intention of intruding into the presence of the Lord Justice-Clerk or his august Court.

One there was within the crowded room who bent his ear to listen with attention to the sonorous tones of the macer as he lustily called for the appearance of the accused. This was Kenneth Fraser, who from one of the back benches was keenly watching the proceedings on Harold's behalf, but it is needless to say that he made his observations very unobtrusively, and the head jailor and jail porter—who were seated at the other side—had not the remotest suspicion that there was one so near them who had taken such a leading part in the deliverance of their prisoner.

Harold being summoned at the door with the requisite legal form, the macer returned and reported that he had failed to answer or to show himself. This intimation was received by the Judge with severe and solemn gravity, and he asked the Advocate-Depute for proof that the person in question—Harold Logan, to wit—had been duly and regularly cited to appear at the bar on that day and at that hour.

Whereupon the prosecuter handed in a copy of the indictment, and the officers who had served it on Harold in the Tolbooth went into the witness box and solemnly swore to the fact that duty had been right-discharged. This was sufficient, and Harold Logan was forthwith outlawed.

That is, he was declared to be an infamous person—the law no longer gave him protection; from that moment he lost all his civil rights; his property was confiscated, and any one finding him was duly authorized to seize and incarcerate him.

Kenneth Fraser listened very intently to the terms of the sentence, this being the special object of his presence on the occasion. Harold was in some dubiety as to the precise position of an outlawed person. He knew that it deprived him of birthright and inheritance, but he was not sure how far he was at the mercy of any one who chose to be his foe. He wondered if any one could wound, maim, hurt, or kill him with impunity, and he had given Kenneth special instructions to learn the truth on this important point.

The latter listened in vain, however, for enlightenment from the judge, his Lordship not condescending to explain the full import of the sentence he was pronouncing. Possibly this is one of the laws which every subject of the realm is considered bound to know, and if he hasn't he has the privilege of getting information from a lawyer, by the payment of a fee. Kenneth thought of resorting to this method of obtaining the desired knowledge; but he reflected that if he went specially to a lawyer on the subject, it would argue that he had a particular interest in Harold Logan, and thus attention would be drawn to him which might prove inconvenient if not dangerous.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provide our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage wich may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. LIQUOR CASES.—Three cases of alleged infringement of the liquor law were tried before T. McDowell and W. Thompson, Justices of the Peace, at Palmerston, last week. John Watt, charged with having liquor for sale on his premises, admitted the charge, and was fined the lowest sum allowed by law. Wm. Leopard, charged by Inspector Moore with keeping liquor for sale without a license. Case dismissed. James Perry, charged with selling liquor without duly recording the same, contrary to the Pharmacy Act. Defendant produced three medical certificates, each for a pint of brandy; he also pleaded ignorance of the law. At the request of defendant's solicitor, the further hearing of the case was adjourned till the 28th ult.

TAXES ON EDITORIAL FAITH.—One of the greatest trials of the newspaper profession is that its members are compelled to see more of the sham of the world than any other profession. Through every newspaper office, day after day, go all the weaknesses of the world; all the vanities that want to get puffed; all the revenges that are to be reaped; all the mistakes that want to be corrected; all the dull speakers who want to be thought eloquent; all the meanness that wants to get its wares noticed gratis in the editorial column, in order to save the tax in the advertising columns; all the men who want to be set right who were never right; all the crack-brained philosophers with stories as long as their hair, and as gloomy as their finger nails in mourning because bereft of soap; all the bores who come to stay five minutes, but talk five hours. Through the editorial and reportorial rooms all the follies and shams of the world are seen day after day; and the temptation is to believe in neither God, man, nor woman. It is no surprise to me that in this profession there are some sceptical men; I only wonder that journalists believe anything.—Talmage.

Dom Pedro, while returning to Brazil in the Autumn, wrote on the steamer a letter to an American friend, which letter contained this passage: "In a few days I will see my native land, which God has so wonderfully endowed, and I hope that that which I have learned during my absence for her will enable me to be useful to her. One thing I can truly say is, that I return with earnest longings, and with a passion stronger than ever for progress."

Some idea of the expenditures of a wealthy American family may be derived from statements recently made in court by the executors of the will of the late John W. Chanler. Mr. Chanler's wife, who died about two years ago, transmitted to her children a large property derived from her grandfather, William B. Astor, and Mr. Chanler also left them a considerable amount. There are ten of them altogether, all under age, and authority is asked for expending on their maintenance and education the sum of $50,000 annually. Of this there is said to be required for keeping up the establishment in which the six youngest children are living, $29,000; for the schooling of a seventh, $1,200; for the support of three children at school in England, $10,000; and the remainder for travelling, summer watering place expenses, and the like.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. The great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, Bible House, New York City. sep18 deodwly

From a Physician.

Messrs Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Boston:

Gents—You may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP for my wife, who was suffering from general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I have tried the noted physicians in this State, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup; the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work about the house; and I find that I can not speak too highly in praise of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozen of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit. Yours very truly,

LIMITED.

Authorized Capital—$5,000,000.

THE Company's special system of Loans affords to borrowers, and especially to Farmers, the following most important advantages:—

1. The borrower is NOT OBLIGED to repay any part of the principal until the whole term of the Mortgage has run.

2. He has the RIGHT (after the first year) to repay at any time, the whole or any part of the Loan, without prior notice to the Company.

3. No extra charge, bonus or otherwise exacted on such repayment.

4. He is requested when making application for the Loan, to state the day on which he wishes interest to be made payable. He thus can stipulate for a date, say after harvest, or at such time as is likely to be most convenient for him.

5. Interest can be made payable once a year—not in advance.

6 On repayment of any part of the principal, interest on such amount immediately ceases.

He says: "Our run is 300 miles, from New York to Albany and return. Our card time is about nine hours each way, but we seldom run it short of ten or eleven hours, and often it takes thirteen or fourteen each way. We are allowed no rest at West Albany, but must stand ready to take the next train that comes in from the West. I have often stood, with other, waiting three hours to get a train for New York, and then for another thirteen hours' run to New York; so by the time we arrive we have been on our engines from twenty-four to thirty hours. Can any human being sit over a hot boiler and keep watching for that time and not sleep."

The prisoner was registered at the gaol as a laborer, English, and aged 57 years. He hailed from Kingston, and at one time worked among the lumbermen in the Ottawa valley. Walls was ill when committed to gaol, and was greatly emaciated—a mere nuckle of bones. An inquest will be held.

A NEW IDEA.—An exchange says: It has been suggested that a box should be placed at the passenger stations of the different railways to receive newspapers and books which passengers arriving have finished with, these papers, etc., to be for use in the hospital, the boxes to be labelled, "Newspapers, etc., for the patients of the hospital." It would soon come to be known how much pleasure it would give the sick inmates, passengers by every train would keep the papers and drop them into the box. Good idea.

NORTH WATERLOO REFORM ASSOCIATION.—A mass meeting of the Reformers of North Waterloo was held in that village on Wednesday, 30th January, to consider amendments to the constitution of the Reform Association and for other purposes. Mr. John King, barrister, presided. Several amendments were proposed and adopted, after which the following officers were elected for the present year:—President, Mr. Cyrus Bowers, of Berlin; Sec-Treas, Mr. Fred. Colquhoun, barrister, Waterloo; Vice-Presidents, Wm. Scott, Wellesley; J. S. Bowman, Elmira; Levi Stauffer, Waterloo township; J. B. Hughes, Waterloo; C. Steubing, Berlin. Mr. Pattullo of Toronto, having arrived at this stage, addressed the meeting at some length, after which the members of the Executive Committee were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the Provincial Association on the 5th of February.

WHAT IS IT?—Mr. Louis Zimmer, of this town, has in his possession the skin of a reptile, the correct name of which no person living in these parts appears to know, and which is a great curiosity. The skin came into his possession this way. A friend of his living in the South Ward, knowing his love for the unnatural, informed him that he had a skin of a reptile which was in his opinion simply a monstrosity. Mr. Zimmer did not at first believe the story, but finally overcome by curiosity to know if such was really the case went down with his friend and finally saw that there was no joke in the matter, but that there was a skin of a peculiarly shaped snake. The reptile had been killed by a black and tan dog, and the animal doubtless thinking his mission on earth had been accomplished, shortly afterwards died. The skin is now preserved in spirits. In shape its head is something like that of a snake, but in some points entirely different, and resembling a duck's bill. The skin is certainly like that of a snake, is dark with white streaks on the top and lighter on the belly. A short distance back of the head must have been paws of some kind, as loose skin is hanging on one side, and on the other there is the place which looks as though a paw had been torn out. The most curious part of the whole reptile is what is supposed to be the tail. The body terminates with a paw, with five claws two of which are complete, the other three are partly torn off. The skin has been examined by several gentlemen well up in zoology, and they all pronounce themselves puzzled.

STRANGE VISITOR.—Last week the house of Mr. O'Brien was honored with a call from a stranger, in the shape of a butterfly. This is certainly an odd occurrence for our cold climate at this season of the year.

DUST.—Dust is blowing about as wildly on our streets to-day as is usual in July and August. The roads are, however, in a splendid condition for waggoning.

FINE GRAINING.—We were this morning shown a grained imitation of French walnut which was executed by Mr. M. O'Driscoll, an employee in Wm. Bell & Co's organ factory. The coincidence is complete with that of natural growth, and does great credit to the workman.

REAL ESTATE.—Mr. Richard Clark sold this day to MacMillan & O'Connor for $1,100 lot 16, on Garth st., with new brick house, and has purchased from them for $300 a lot on the corner of Tiffany and Exhibition streets, upon which he will erect immediately a large two storey brick house.

"UNDER THE GAS-LIGHT."—Miss Sophie Miles, supported by a strong company, put the above play on the boards at the Town Hall, last evening, with excellent effect. The scenery and appointments throughout were much better than are usually made use of by travelling companies. The hall was well filled with a highly respectable audience, and all appeared to be perfectly satisfied. Miss Miles is well known in Guelph, and last night, as on all previous occasions, she gave unbounded satisfaction. The character she assumed was that of "Laura Courtland." Mr. R. Forsyth, as "Ray Trafford," a New York swell, was pleasing throughout. Mr. Vernon, as "Byke," the heavy villian of the play, and one whom the law is always reaching for, had an excellent make-up, while his right hand, in the person of "Old Judas," (Mrs. Vernon), looked and acted all she was supposed to be. Mr. Spackman as "Justice Bowling," made a number of laughable hits—all becoming the dignity of the bench. Miss Neville, as "Peach-blossom,"—a girl of a topsy disposition, caused roars of laughter in her character as waiting girl. Mr. Sambrook, as "Bermudas," one of the under-crust of New York society was pleasing, and was encored in his songs. While some of the other characters were well sustained, others did only fairly. One of the scenes in the play when "Snorky," (Mr. Shorey) was tied on the railway track, and he was rescued by Laura Courtland just as an express train passed, was particularly well done, and had a striking appearance of reality about it. This evening "Guy Mannering, with Miss Miles as "Meg Merrilies," will be played. The tale is familiar to almost every person, and the company is sure to render it well. There is little doubt but what the hall will be crowded.

A DISHONEST BUSINESS MAN.—Patrick Kennedy, lately engaged in running a flax-mill at Aboyne, has made a sudden departure from this section. Formerly he had been one of a Company engaged in conducting the mill, but of late had it under his sole control. A meeting of his creditors was held about two weeks ago, when it was discovered that a considerable amount of paper which some might term forged was in circulation for his own benefit. The creditors immediately closed down on him, and he has left the country. Kennedy had also two farms rented—one in Nichol, and the other in Pilkington. The owner of the Pilkington farm, Charles Wilson, then seized on the chattels of the premises rented from him, for rent. The case in regard to the farm property, was brought before His Honor Judge Macdonald, and the Court held that Wilson had no right to seize when the estate was in insolvency, and he was at once ordered to give up possession and pay costs. Mr. John Smith, official assignee, is now in possession of the properties.

STARVATION IN WALES.—The most terrible suffering prevails in the coal and iron districts of South Wales. Of 500 colliers in Manmouth and Glamorgan, only twenty one are working full time. Since 1875 the price of coal has been falling steadily, and the miners have been living in part on their savings. From two pounds to three pounds a month, with three hours' work a day, has been the rate of wages earned, and of this the collier has to pay thirteen shillings for rent, the subscription to the doctor, the candles he uses and the coal he takes home. About six or seven shillings a week is all he can take home to support his family, usually a large one. In hundreds or perhaps thousands of cases the collier goes to work in the morning with no food but a slice of bread and an onion; sometimes the bread is not to be had, and raw cabbage is substituted. And this is when work is to be had. Now that the mines are nearly all closed, the distress of the 30,000 people in the Rhondda valley can be imagined.

From a Physician.

Messrs Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Boston:

Gents—You may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP for my wife, who was suffering from general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I have tried the noted physicians in this State, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup; the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work about the house; and I find that I can not speak too highly in praise of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozen of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit.

Yours very truly,
H. D. BELDEN, M. D.

Supply Vote Likely to Carry.

Mr. Gladstone on Breach of British Neutrality.

Anglo-Austrian Combination—France and Germany Unlikely to Interfere.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Conservatives in the House of Commons are expected to give solid support to the credit vote on Thursday. One or two defections, not more, are probable. The Liberals, on the contrary, are divided. The Home Rulers have not yet determined on their course, but will probably mostly abstain from voting. The majority for the credit is already estimated at over one hundred.

Meetings are being held throughout the country to influence Parliament against the credit, but mostly by Liberal or peace organizations. No non-partisan meeting has yet been attempted. An open air meeting of over 200,000 persons at Sheffield, yesterday, for opposing the Government, was turned into an anti-Russian demonstration. An amendment to the original resolution against the credit was carried by an immense majority, declaring that the cause of peace and the interests of the Empire will be best promoted by supporting the Government's foreign policy. The meeting sang patriotic songs; cheered Lord Beaconfield's name, and greeted Carnarvon's with hisses and cries of "Traitor!" Some of the leading provincial newspapers are taking an anti-Russian tone.

In the House of Commons this afternoon, Mr. Bedford Clapperton Treveleyn Pim, Conservative, gave notice that he would move to-morrow,

That the House, while giving the Government due credit, for maintaining the policy determined upon, after the solemn assurances of the Czar that he desired only immunity for the Christian subjects of the Porte, and aimed at no aggrandizement whatever, is of opinion that these assurances are being deliberately evaded by the proposed terms of peace and the advance of the Russian arms, and believes that the time has come when the immediate action of England is absolutely necessary, and requests forthwith estimates for placing the army and navy on a war footing.

Mr. Gladstone, in accepting an address from the Liberal Association at Oxford today, said he considered the sending of a fleet into the Dardanelles as an act of war and a breach of neutrality. The vote of six millions would be taken by Turkey as an encouragement to prolong the war. He feared the vote would be carried by failure of the Irish members to oppose it, though he hoped for Ireland's honor that those who had themselves been struggling for freedom would respect and sympathize with the freedom of others.

A Woolwich despatch reports that a number of Whitehead torpedoes and apparatus for discharging stationary torpedoes has been shipped for the Mediterranean fleet, and 4,000 barrels of cannon powder have been brought from the reserve magazines at Southampton to the Thames ready for shipment.

The London Central News states that Austria has declined to commit herself to joint action with England unless she is previously assured that the British Ministry is safe against the assaults of the Opposition, which might leave Austria isolated at a later stage, and that the Ministry intend, pending the vote, to furnish the requisite guarantee. If the Ministry obtain a large majority a very important European combination will appear.

Law Students' Society.

On Tuesday evening the Law Students' regular weekly meeting was held.

The following question was argued:—"If A seized in fee of land closely adjoining the land of B., erect a new house on the confines of such land, and B., several years afterwards, dig his land so near to the foundation of A.'s house that it falls into the pit, can A. recover under action for damages against B."

The plaintiff's counsel contended that where a person infringes upon the rights of another, whether actual damage is caused or not, there is a right of action; and that in this case there was actual damage. That where there is a wrong there is a remedy, and that here there had been a wrong, and there had been negligence on the part of the defendant. He cited the case of Nicholls vs. Williams, 10 Ex., 259.

The defendant's counsel contended that had the plaintiff's land been in its natural state, he would have had a right to the lateral support of his neighbor's land, but that here the plaintiff had altered the natural condition of his own land, and had done so at his own risk. That as to the case of Nicholls vs Williamson, cited by the plaintiff it did not apply as in that case there was an agreement by the defendant to pay for the damage, if any occurred, here there was no agreement. He cited the case of Wyatt vs Henderson, 3 B and A 205, where on demurrer to the plaintiff's declaration the part that averred that the defendant had dug to near too the plaintiff's land was held to be bad, as the defendant had a right to go as near plaintiff's land as he liked so long as he did not go off his own land, there being no negligence. That the plaintiff must show negligence on the part of the defendant, and that here there was no negligence, and the plaintiff had no right to lateral support for any structure he might choose to erect on the very edge of his land.

The chairman, after reviewing the arguments, left it to the jury to say whether there was any negligence on the part of the defendant on the claim put in, and and if they found, as a matter of fact, that there was negligence, then, as a matter of law, they should give a verdict for the plaintiff.

The jury found there had been negligence on the part of the defendant, and returned a verdict for the plaintiff.

A SERIOUS AFFRAY.—About a week ago Wesley Thomson was at Schoff's tavern, on the gravel road between Dundalk and Shelburne, when it is reported that he was set upon and beaten by three young men, and afterwards followed and beaten when on his way home, since which time he has been unable to speak, and his condition is critical at the present time.

THE WAR NEWS.

The Armistice Not Yet Signed.

Advance of Russia on Gallipolis.

Jan. 30.

The Central Committee of the Red Crescent Society telegraphs from Constantinople that a number of wounded soldiers are flocking into that city. Nearly 15,000 refugees almost naked complicate the situation, which, considering the limited resources of the Red Crescent Society, might end in disaster. Special correspondents state that small pox and typhus have commenced among the refugees, and efforts are being made to send them to Asia. It is apprehended that the increased population of Constantinople will occasion a scarcity of provisions, unless there is some special effort from without to replenish the stores. Eight thousand refugees arrived on Monday. Many are huddled in open sheds, knee deep in mud and water. The wholesale exodus from Roumelia is unabated.

A Gallipoli correspondent says:—On Wednesday the Russians were at Dediagatch and Feridjice. The telegraph lines are interrupted, and it is reported they are advancing hither.

A Pera correspondent says:—A Council of war was held to day (Wednesday) Hobart Pasha was present. The Council determined to take measures for the defence of the capital.

A Vienna correspondent says an official despatch received in Vienna announces that the Russians have occupied Burgas and Rodosto. He hints there is a secret understanding between Russia and Turkey. There is no confirmation of these movements from any other source.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—The commander of the Russian steamer Constantine reports that he left Sebastopol for a cruise on January the 22nd, and approached Batoum on the 26th, where there were several Turkish vessels. The Constantine sent a whitehead torpedo against the screw steamer on guard outside, and sank her immediately. The crew were drowned.

The Globe alleges on the authority of Russian newspaper's that typhus prevails among the Russian troops in the Caucasus and Armenia to such an extent that it might be called a plague.

The Agence Russe, contradicting the statement mentioned by Sir Stafford Northcote in his last speech, says the question of appointing a foreign Prince to rule Bulgaria is not even mentioned in the peace conditions, which only speak of a Christian Governor.

The Foreign Office publishes a despatch from Minister Layard at Constantinople, dated yesterday, stating that the Grand Vizier distinctly informed him that the Porte telegraphed to the Turkish Plenipotentiaries on January 23rd, ordering them to accept the basis of peace. It has since telegraphed three times, asking them to report the result, but has received no answer, although telegraphic communication with Kezanlik is still open, as proved by the fact that one of the members of the mission telegraphed to his family, and messages from Kezanlik have been received in twelve hours from the time of filing.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphing yesterday says:—I can state positively that the Russian Government up to this afternoon had received no intelligence of the signing of an armistice.

The Vienna Presse says—Servia demands as a condition of peace all Old Servia except that part comprised in Bosnia, one hundred and fifty thousand Turkish pounds war indemnity, and the immediate appointment of a special commission to examine the respective claims of Roumania and Servia to the Pashalik of Widin.

An Athens special says:—The Chamber is holding a secret sitting to decide whether the Government shall accede to the petitions for support and protection received from Thessaly.

A Vienna despatch to Brussels confirms the report that Austria has addressed a Note to Russia resolutely upholding the interests of Austria and Europe. The Note already forms the subject of general diplomatic pow parlers.

A Vienna correspondent states that the Austrian Note, energetically protesting against anything affecting Austrian or European interests being altered without the concurrence of all the signatory Powers, will reach St. Petersburg on Monday night. The correspondent says he has good reason to believe that if the answer does not meet every point clearly and definitely the mobilization of the Austrian army will be forthwith decreed. Germany will not interfere.

THE OTHER POWERS.

The North German Gazette says that there is a scheme under discussion for the Russians to hold Constantinople by land while the European squadrons are stationed before the sea front.

The Paris Gaulois declares it has authentic information from Berlin that the three Emperors' alliance is re-established, Russia, at the request of Germany, having modified the peace conditions obnoxious to Austria.

A Berlin correspondent hears from a trustworthy source that France has confidentially declared she stands on the same side as Germany in regard to the Eastern Question, although resolved to avoid foreign complications.

Edmund Hopkins was acquitted at Auburn of the murder of Phillip Proudfit, which occurred at Stirling Valley last July. Proudfit seduced Hopkins' sister and taunted the latter who struck him with a base ball club on the head. Proudfit died several days after. Half an hour after the acquittal Hopkins married Amy Turner, whom he was to have married in October, and the jury witnessed the ceremony.

The Evening Mercury

THURSDAY EVEN'G, JAN. 31, 1878.

Tories and Workingmen.

Tory demagogues and hungry Tory politicans have for the last few years indulged largely in the cry that their party was the friend of the workingman, and have in consequence made considerable capital out of it. Immediately on the defeat of the Macdonald Administration and the accession of the present Ministry to power, the rank and file of the Tory legion, from the great chieftain down to the most ignorant Conservative, looked about them to find some plank on which they could build their hopes. No doubt the old ship was pretty well battered up and none of her timbers at all seaworthy, and consequently they were obliged to cast their hungry eyes around for something new, and by the way, something clean as well. Protection wasn't a bad sort of boat to ride in, but unfortunately it had been steered very much the same way by Sir John when in power as by Mr. Mackenzie. It was found too, that the pill was rather a difficult one for the farming classes to swallow, and no amount of sugar coating in the shape of "increased prices," "slaughter house," "retaliatory policy," and such other sweet morsels would make it go down more easily than before. The boat was stopped, and a rather clumsily constructed raft, composed of the odds and ends of Mr. Mackenzie's iniquity, was constructed for the conveyance of the good and true. Loaded down to the gunwale by "Steel Rails," "Goderich Harbors," "Gross Extravagance," and "Family Patronage," this mode of conveyance was found to be a little risky and the ship liable to be confiscated for carrying contraband goods. Cast adrift to the mercy of the waves of public opinion, the gallant crew, not over scrupulous as to the question of meum and tuum, boldly seized the beautiful steamer,—The Workingman—and lanched her out with flying colors as if she had been built expressly for them. They have attempted two or three voyages already, but have not succeeded beyond carrying off a few gold-headed canes, some hats, and an odd oil-painting or two, and even these articles do not seem to have come from the most appropriate places. True, the common sailors being principally "greenhorns" in this business, and their officers not much better qualified, it cannot be expected any momentous results will flow from their undertakings. It is so long since they were accustomed to this peculiar branch of business, it is little to be wondered at that they have not succeeded better than they appear to have done.

May, in his Constitutional History of England, tells us that in order to secure proper support, the great Tory party found it necessary in the beginning of this century to divest themselves of the discredited name of Tories. "It was a name of reproach, as it had been 150 years before; and they renounced it. Henceforth they adroitly adopted the title of 'Conservatives.'" And we are safe in saying that they have found even that name to become one of reproach in this country, and have adroitly adopted the name of "Liberal-Conservatives" and the "Workingmen's Party." Such are the exigencies of unscrupulous and poverty-stricken politicians, and, chameleon-like, they will change their principles as readily and as easily as they do their names. It may well be asked what right has this party to look to the workingman for support? Is it because the Tory party in England has ever and anon set its face against those grand principles of Reform which eventually broke the power of a haughty aristocracy, and culminated in the Reform Bill of 1832? Is it because, by the efforts of those who advocated such principles, the great body of unrepresented workingmen and artisans became represented in Parliament, and were allowed the right of the franchise as well as their aristocratic superiors, that the Tories of the present day claim to gather this class into the fold, notwithstanding the strenuous opposition of their party to anything like an advancement of the working classes? Is it because the Tories, both at home and in this country, professed principles antagonistic to self-government and proper representation that they now claim the patronage of the workingmen of Canada? Is it because the so-called champions of liberty had for years deprived the poor man of the privilege of the ballot and left him in many instances, at the mercy of his employers, that they now beseechingly say, "Come over and help us?" Let the workingmen of Canada ponder over these questions, and then let them come to the conclusion, if they can, that there is any bond of sympathy, any tie of affection, or any principle or idea in common between them and the would-be aristocratic, "truly loyal," and pretensious Tory.

The new Tariff Bill before the United States Congress makes slight reductions, averaging about twenty per cent. on the present duties, with the exception of those on wines, brandies, cigars, and similar articles. Compound duties are done away with, and there is no free list, every article that is not dutiable being admitted free without specification or enumeration. The number of articles covered by the present tariff is reduced to about five hundred, and wherever practicable changes have been made from ad valorem to specific duties.

Full returns from Halifax places Mr. Jones' majority at 223. This is only four below his majority in 1867. At the next election in 1872, Jones was beaten by 98. The election of 1874 was not a party one. The vote polled for Richey on Tuesday probably represents the greatest strength the Opposition can exhibit, while it is certain that by attending to some country districts that were neglected the Reformers can do much better. In the city of Halifax Jones made great gains.

Russia Conciliates Austria.

Conference to Assemble Immediately.

GALLIPOLIS SURRENDERED.

War Demonstrations in London

LONDON, Jan. 21.

A despatch from Vienna states that Russia sent a conciliatory answer to Austria, in reply to protest the latter Government against concluding a separate peace on conditions opposed to existing obligations. It is understood that Austria accepts Russia's reply as a guarantee. Austria's interest will not be affected. It is stated that a conference will be immediately assembled.

LONDON, Jan 31.—A despatch from Paris says that it is rumored on the Bourse that Gallipolis has surrendered to the Russians. Demonstrations by war and peace parties were held to day at Cannon-st. Hotel in this city; numerous speeches were made by advocates of both parties. The war party predominated. Placards were displayed by the war party on which was inscribed "Down with the traitor Gladstone." The Turks were loudly cheered.

Ontario Legislature.

TORONTO, Jan. 30.

The Commissioner of Crown Lands introduced a Bill for the preservation of Crown timber from fires. In doing so he explained that the measure provided for the issue of proclamations by the Lieut.-Governor in Council setting apart certain localities as "fire" districts, within which the Act would become operative, that no obstacle would be placed in the way of clearing land, and that no new officials would be employed under it.

Mr. Hodgins moved his resolutions providing for the bringing of all contracts extending over a period of years within the law of Parliament. He traced the origin of resolutions in English Parliamentary history, and disclaimed any idea of imputing to either the present Government or the one that preceded it any instance of violation of the principles which he wished to have formulated as standing orders of the House. What he wanted was to prevent any abuse from arising in connection with contracts.

Mr. Mowat regarded the resolutions as inapplicable to the class of contracts under the control of the Ontario Government, and pointed out that they would, if adopted, interfere with the conduct of public business.

Mr. Macdougall argued that rules and standing orders were worthless as protections against violations of the principles they embodied by Governments with large majorities to support them, and hinted that the Georgian Bay Branch and Steel Rails contracts might have moved Mr. Hodgins to take action in the matter.

After a few remarks from Mr. Hodgins and Mr. Scott, the resolutions were withdrawn.

Mr. Dawson then moved his resolutions in favour of the sub-division of the District of Algoma into three electoral districts, pointing out at some length the reasons for such an arrangement, amongst others the great extent of the territory and the varied interests of its people.

Mr. Mowat opposed a reference of a matter of this kind to the Committee of the House, and declared that a new census would have to be taken and the boundary question settled before such a redistribution of seats could be attempted.

Mr. Millar agreed that the matter was not a proper one to submit to a Committee, but thought Algoma entitled to increased representation, and Muskoka and Parry Sound also. He dwelt upon the great agricultural and other resources of the district, and contended that Ontario could only keep her advanced position by increased representation.

MrCameron thought the motion involved the general question of representation, which should be dealt with only by the Government.

Mr. Clarke (Norfolk) dwelt also on the great resources of the district and its rapidly increasing population, and thought one member was not sufficient to represent such a constituency, however able he might be.

Mr. Creighton was of opinion that Algoma would fare better if the whole question of representation were taken up. In any case affecting her real interest, however, she would have more than one voice to speak for her in Parliament, because every member took a great interest in that constituency.

Mr. Miller was about to move an amendment when Mr. Cameron objected, and Mr. Dawson briefly reviewed the arguments brought up against his measure.

An amendment moved by Mr. Paxton led to some further discussion, in which Messrs. Miller, Hay, Patterson (Essex), Hunter and Lyon took part, and both amendment and original motion were declared lost without a division.

The House then went into Committee of Supply and voted all the appropriations for Legislation, and for the Superior Courts under the head of Administration of Justice. Several of the items gave rise to discussions, not always relevant, but no division occurred.

The Agricultural College.

Referring to the debate in the Legislature the other night on Mr. Tooley's motion for a return of all students attending the Agricultural College, the Toronto correspondent of the St. Thomas Journal says:

Though Mr. Tooley began his speech by stating that he had no intention of attacking the management of the institution, he had not gone very far before he had made a number of various assertions, which, to put the matter mildly, were hard to be reconciled with any other intention than that of creating a feeling of distrust regarding the conduct of the College.

The Opposition have made a similar attack every session since the institution was established at Guelph; but when they had visited the Farm in a body—as they did last year—and after a close personal inspection had not a word to say in censure of its management, it was imagined that we had seen the last of these insidious attempts to injure the Government by making the Agricultural College a failure in their hands. If they made a distinct charge of mismanagement in even the smallest particular, no one would find fault; but their plan has always been to (just as Mr. Tooley did the other day) profess the strongest desire to see the experiment result successfully, and then, like a lot of gossiping beldames "at whose every word a reputation dies," repeat vague rumors, which, going among the farmers, sow the seeds of suspicion and distrust.

Mr. Tooley had "heard" that the teaching at the institution was not practical in its character; he "had been told" that the stock was not of the right kind, and that its sale had not realized expectations; many people were "of opinion" that the majority of the students were not farmers' sons, and did not intend devoting themselves to agriculture—and so on to the end.

Without attempting to follow the course of the debate I would just say that the reply made on behalf of the Government showed that the institution was never more popular among the farmers than at this moment; that it is attended almost exclusively by farmers' sons; that the students, with scarcely an exception, intend following agricultural pursuits; and that in the opinion of some of the best stock-raisers both in Canada and in the United States, the stock is just of the kind needed at such an institution.

One thing is certain, if the Model Farm does prove a success, no thanks to the Opposition, for from first to last, and by every means in their power, they have tried to make it a failure. This session they speak much more mildly in its condemnation than ever before; they seem to fear that notwithstanding their efforts, it is likely to be successful and popular, and already, therefore, they begin to trim their sails for the popular breeze. When the return moved for by Mr. Tooley, as well as the annual report of the farm operations, is brought down the public will see how far the efforts of the Opposition have been successful and to what extent their prognostications that the experiment would prove a failure have been verified.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"JUSTICE" CONSUMMATES WRONG—THE DEATH OF SIR PHILIP LOGAN.

Kenneth, however, had a pretty fair share of Highland cunning and plausibility, and he managed to get into conversation with one of the Clerks of the Court—a tall, thin, pleasant looking man, who readily answered his questions, deeming them to be suggested merely by the natural curiosity of an inquiring mind.

"Wound or kill an outlaw with impunity!" exclaimed the official, with a stare at his questioner. "Certainly not. Wounding and killing are crimes on whomsoever committed, and the law will punish a man for maiming and killing an outlaw, unless in self-defence, just as rigorously as if the subject of the injury was his lordship himself."

"Oh, indeed, returned Kenneth. "Then this man who has been outlawed to-day—this Harvey Logan, or whatever be his name, cannot be shot by anybody who likes"

"Most assuredly not. He can be seized by any one, and handed over to the constable, but that is the extent of it;" and the Clerk of the Court went away highly amused at the idea of a sentence of outlawry giving a general license for human murder.

Kenneth Fraser had obtained all the information he desired to know, and that very night he left the city to join Harold and repeat to him all that had taken place within the Court.

Thus Harold Logan was made an outlaw. The law had stepped in to consummate the wrong and injustice to which his stepmother and her son had for years systematically subjected him. To all outward appearance success had attended their selfish scheme. They had accomplished his social and legal ruin, and confidently considered that the title and estate would come to Gilmour at the demise of Sir Philip—an event which seemed to be near.

The Baron was now reduced to a state of extreme bodily and mental weakness. The shock he had sustained by the discovery of Harold's connection with smuggling, his supposed crime, and flight from prison (coming as it did on an already enfeebled frame) prostrated him utterly. From the day when he attended the judicial examination at Aberdeen he had not been able to go out of doors, and now he was confined to his room, and ere long was unable to rise from bed. For a purpose of her own, Lady Logan treated him with much attention, and had him carefully nursed, and every means taken to arrest the ebbing of the vital life. This went on till Court met and the sentence of outlawry was pronounced, when all was changed, and neglect took the place of former solicitude. The object of that solicitude had been selfish and calculating, as all her ladyship's proceedings were. It was important that the Baronet's death should not take place until the law had formally divested Harold of all his legal rights, so that no question as to the succession should arise. This was the real motive for her ladyships kind attention to her dying husband, and no sooner was it served, by the sentence being pronounced, than the nurse was dismissed, and there was a cessation of the means which had been so assiduously employed to sustain the flickering spark of life. Decency and the fear of public censure forbade that he should be positively ill-used; but there were various quiet ways in which the issue might be hastened, and these her ladyship adopted without a single feeling of compunction.

She had never loved the Barcnet. Though she had used all her arts to captivate him it was ambition, not affection, that prompted her blandishments. From her knowledge of his weak, vacillating character, she saw that, once his wife, she would be able to rule him absolutely and make him obedient to her will in all things. By flattery and guile she got herself installed in the place of the dead Eleanor, and all had turned out as she expected. Her strong will exerted its supremacy over Sir Philip's weak nature, and he submitted helplessly to her in all things.

As the union had not been formed in affection, neither did affection develope itself during the twenty and odd years it had subsisted. There was therefore no feeling of tenderness in Lady Logan's bosom to deter her from gratifying her wish for her husband's speedy death, and when the small fragment of human nature which was in her threatened some faint protest against the cruelty and heartlessness of her conduct, she had no difficulty in silencing it by sophistry.

"Why should I try to keep him lingering in life?" she said to herself "He is now in a state when he can have no pleasure or enjoyment. He suffers only pain and grief, and it will be a great release to him to go. Yes, it would be a positive kindness to prolong his misery."

Thus she stifled and disarmed the mere semblance of effort which her conscience made to sacrifice its office, and poor Sir Philip was left a prey to carelessness and neglect, though these did not kill him off so quickly as her ladyship and her dutiful (?) son desired, for the depth of winter came and the Baronet was still in existence.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Harriston Correspondence.

Because your correspondent in your issue of the 16th instant took on himself to comment on the late municipal election here, to some of the undercurrent influences which were mainly instrumental in the defeat of Mr. Meiklejohn, and made reference to a class of which we unfortunately have here which are ever dangerous to a community, who, in an election contest, are ostensibly the friends of one side while they are really the friends and conjutors of the other. Without making any personal reference to the Reeve elect, save uttering a doubt as to whether he would during his tenure of office succeed in establishing as good a record as his predecessor, the ardour of the oracle has become seriously disturbed, and the vials of his wrath apparently unable to longer hold their serious contents, he in his last issue bestows on me the beautiful appellation of a "sneaking eavesdropper, an employed detective, etc," a vocabulary of Billingsgate slang which is simply a disgrace to journalism, and which no man of average culture would allow to appear in his paper, to say nothing about stooping so low as to pen it himself. No person knows better than the little Judas himself that the accusation is unfounded, and is a wilful and malicious fabrication, emanating only from his own egotistical brain. If I have in my watching the actions of a certain individual, who though wary there was reason to suspect his sincerity, and in so doing found tangible reason—yea reason almost beyond a peradventure—to believe there was an Ethiopian in the wood pile, it happened to be in places pretty public where those discoveries were made. And he will find as much difficulty in making his readers believe that I am biassed by any desire to pry into private family affairs as he will to establish his innocence with regard to a betrayal of confidence recently reposed in him, as during my residence here—which dates further back than his—I have been made the recipient of hospitality by many, and I challenge this Harriston Chesterfield of the press to show where I ever showed any of the traits of the character which he lavishly bestows on me. As he uses the word "employed," he must mean that I was acting for others. In answer to this I would say I never was, nor will be, the pliant tools of others, and any discovery there was made, and which I defy the oracle to show that there was anything dishonorable about it—was entirely unknown to others. Hereafter I will allow anything emanating from the pen of so unworthy an individual to pass over in silence, treat his good opinion with indifference, and his bad one with contempt, as anything he says or writes is neither praise on one side nor a scandal on the other.

N. B.—Were I an employed detective it is not likely those for whom I was acting would allow the supposed Judas to have such a participation in their confidence as was done in this case.

The opening of the new skating rink took place on Thursday evening of last week by a grand carnival. The ice was in splendid condition, and the obliging and painstaking caretaker, P. Lavin, having taken every precaution to have things properly arranged and a good time was spent. Quite a number of comical figures appeared on the ice, who created considerable mirth The band was present under the leadership of John Beard, and enlivened the affair with music. The rink is now open every day so that all who wish can enjoy themselves.

Owing to inefficient advertising, &c., John C. Wilson, the Scottish vocalist, did not hold his concert on Wednesday evening last. His agent, Mr Watson, promises to visit Harriston at some future time, which if he does and gives good notice he may rely on a bumper house.

The first ball and supper under the auspices of the Caledonian Society came off in the town hall on the 25th inst., being the anniversary of Scotland's renowned poet Robert Burns. The hall was very tastefully decorated with bunting, in which the national colors was very artistically arranged. The stage was beautifully draped with the different tartans which gave the hall a fine appearance. The Harriston string band did their part most efficiently, in fact everything was so arranged to meet the comfort and convenience of the guests. Dancing begun about 9 o'clock and was kept up in a lively manner till about 11.30 when an adjournment was made for supper which was served up in the Council Chamber in splendid style by George Chambers, of the Queen's Hotel, after which they again assembled in the hall and resumed the 'tripping of the light fantastic" till the hands on the clock began to indicate the early approach of the coming day, when they concluded by singing in a most enthusiastic manner "Auld Lang Syne," after which they wended their way to their homes. "Happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again." Mr. George Anderson, jr., of Guelph, appeared to splendid advantage at the above ball in his excellent Highland costume.

Owing to unavoidable delay the Oratorio of Queen Esther, under the leadership of Prof. Osborne, has been postponed from the 29th and 29th inst, to 4th and 5th February, when he will be prepared with a class of 60 performers to render the favorite Oratorio.

The Managing Committee of Guthrie Church have finally arranged for a grand opening on Sabbath, the 16th prox., on which day three dedicatory sermons will be preached at 11 a.m., 2.30 p.m. and 7 p.m. A tea meeting will be held on the following Monday in the basement.

The bachelors of the Methodist church purpose holding a necktie social in the town hall on the evening of the 7th prox. Proceeds to be applied to the parsonage furnishing fund.

Star Lodge I. O. G. T. of this place held a social in their hall on the evening of Friday of last week which is reported a success both financially and socially.

James Bacon, of the 8th Con. of Minto buried on Sabbath last two children who died of diptheria. One was a promising boy in his fourteenth year, and the other about two years his junior.

Guelph Markets.

GUELPH, Jan. 31, 1878.

The weather for the past week has been so changeable that sellers of grain and produce from a distance have been, no doubt, to a certain degree, deterred from marketing their stuff, fearing that before their return Mr. Venor and his probabilities might prevent them from reaching home again in the same class of vehicles as they started with. However, had they acted on their own views they might have returned in waggons with perfect safety. Although to-day it tries to show some slight prospects of snow, it is not in sufficient quantities to guarantee sleighing for some days hence at least.

As usual on the market, everything offered is freely and anxiously bought up, and at prices above what our local outside buyers pay in their respective towns, not even excepting cities.

We learn that dressed hogs by the car load can be bought in Toronto at from $4.75 to $4.80 per 100 lbs., when here today we witnessed sales of this article on our own market at $5. Buyers, however, seem careless to pay such figures, and the majority of them opine that they cannot receive back their own money; yet they, in some instances, pay those figures. They personally run the risk, and nowithstanding the fact the result must naturally in such cases, be to the benefit of the farmers, who, on all occasions, take advantage of the same.

Wheat has dropped in price, some 8 to 10 cents per bushel for the past week. The highest prices paid to day for Spring being 98 cents, which proves conclusively that foreign markets have proportionately declined, both for wheat and flour. How long such a state of affairs will continue is a mystery, even to the most experienced operator.

In other grains there is no material change, except in barley, which continues to drag heavily along, and no outside demand for it, so far as we can hear of. Consequently prices are low and dull, at the quotations we hereto append.

Here are the latest prices paid for grain and produce of all kinds up to three o'clock to-day.

LOAN AND AGENCY COMPY, LIMITED.

Authorized Capital—$5,000,000.

THE Company's special system of Loans affords to borrowers, and especially to Farmers, the following most important advantages:—

1. The borrower is NOT OBLIGED to repay any part of the principal until the whole term of the Mortgage has run.

2. He has the RIGHT (after the first year) to repay at any time, the whole or any part of the Loan, without prior notice to the Company.

3. No extra charge, bonus or otherwise exacted on such repayment.

4. He is requested when making application for the Loan, to state the day on which he wishes interest to be made payable. He thus can stipulate for a date, say after harvest, or at such time as is likely to be most convenient for him.

5. Interest can be made payable once a year—not in advance.

The Evening Mercury

FRIDAY EVEN'G, FEB. 1, 1878

Local News Items.

THE Imperial Bank has opened a branch in Fergus with Mr. Patteson as manager.

COOL BURGESS and party intend paying Guelph a visit on Friday, 15th.

BREAD has fallen two cents on the loaf in town. Twelve cents are now asked.

KNOX CHURCH Social this evening. Excellent programme.

MEAT.—Mr. J. C. Walker has opened a meat shop in the premises lately occupied by Mr. Brady, on Perth st.

SIDEWALKS.—Snow shovelling on almost every street all morning. Remember the provisions of the By-law in regard to the same. It is not well for any person to render themselves liable to be fined.

ROBY MCCREA'S trial for stabbing Wm. R. Patterson, on the evening of the 5th ult., has been further enlarged till the 14th of March. Patterson is not yet able to be out, although slowly recovering.

IT is stated that the Company's inquest on the late accident on the Grand Trunk Breslau, will be held to-day, at Toronto. Mr. Spicer, superintendent, thinks that some person has made a serious blunder, and he will have a searching examination made.

SABBATH SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.—The anniversary of Chalmers' Church Sabbath School will be held this evening in the church, when a good time may be expected. Tea served at six o'clock, after which music will be given by the children, under the leadership of Mr. H. K. Maitland. Annual report of the school will be presented. Admission free, but a collection will be taken at the close in aid of the Sabbath School fund.

SNOWFALL.—Judging from appearances this morning, Vernor's predictions for this month are likely to come true. The roads are in good condition for sleighing around town, but are badly drifted in the country, the snow being heaped up in places three and four feet, while other spots are quite bare, but snow is preferable to dust, and it is therefore gladly welcome.

HANDSOME DOOR.—Mr. H. M. Anderson has made noticeable improvements in the front of his hotel on the Market Square. The door and frame are now the handsomest in town. They are let in with figure-stained glass fan and side lights. The upper portion of the door is pannelled with frosted plate glass, nicely figured, and cut letters informing the public that the hostlery is known as "Anderson's Dominion Hotel."

HARES.—A party of sports drove through town this morning with guns and dogs, quite as prominent as themselves, and on the outside of the vehicle hares were hung, evidently with the intention of impressing onlookers with the idea that they had succeeded in securing some game. A sceptical old gentleman was unkind enough to remark that the animals had been purchased at Walker's and Murray's. Whether the allegation be true or not, it might be wrong to state.

CARNIVAL.—Remember the carnival this evening. Seats have been arranged around the rink, the ice is in an excellent condition, and there will, no doubt, be a large number of skaters present. Until nine o'clock, those only who are in costume can skate, but after that time, all those who pay an admission fee of fifteen cents may use the ice. Already some thirty have made arrangements to appear masked and in costume. Mr. Claxton, of Simcoe, is at the Royal Hotel with a large supply of fancy dresses, which can be secured for the evening at reasonable rates.

THIS EVENING.—Entertainments of various kinds are thick enough. Six are the number for this evening. St. Andrew's Young People's Association have a debate. ——Staking carnival on the rink. Fancy dresses, etc.——Sophie Miles company in the town hall will play "The Stranger."——Chalmers' Church Sabbath School anniversary in the basement of the church.—Knox Church, a congregational social. Excellent programme.——Norfolk street Methodist Church, a social in the lecture room.——A meeting of the Dublin street Methodist Church choir will be held this evening.

SUPPER.—One of the finest spreads ever laid out in connection with a church social, could have been seen in the lecture room of the Norfolk street Methodist church, on Thursday evening. The ladies fairly excelled themselves in their efforts. After nearly three hundred had been served with the delicacies at command an adjournment took place upstairs. The esteemed pastor of the church, Rev. E. B. Ryckman, occupied the chair, and after a few happy and well timed remarks short addresses of interest and appropriate to the occasion, were given by Revds. J. V. Smith, of Galt, R. Hobbs, of Acton, and Thos. Wardrope. The choir rendered excellent service at intervals. Several ladies of the church were pleasing in solos and duets. The Misses Stevenson, evidently very popular at all entertainments in connection with the church, were encored. In consequence of the very stormy evening, and knowing full well that many were prevented from attending in consequence thereof, the ladies of the church have decided to again prepare for a social this evening. If those who attend do not thoroughly enjoy themselves it will be their own fault. Admission ten cents; two from the same family, twelve cents.

BUNIONS, CORNS, unsightly bunches on either feet or hands, are removed without pain or discolorization, by GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA; it never fails.

TRAMPS appear to like Guelph very well. Sleeping accommodation is furnished for about half a dozen every night by the town authorities. The cells are used for that purpose. The soup kitchen also receives a liberal share of patronage from this class as well as the resident poor of the town.

WIRE SIGNS.—Those wire signs hung so conspicuously in front of some of the stores on Wyndham street are considered by Chief Kelly a breach of the By-law relating to projections over the street, and he has ordered them to be taken down. Orders have also been given for the removal of the "Golden Lion" and "Wonderful Man." All will have to be removed by the proprietors within ten days, otherwise they will be taken down by the authorities.

PERSONAL.—As will be seen by the local in another column, Mr. R. Ballantyne, who for some years past has been agent for Mr. J. W. Lyon, is one of the party who goes with that gentleman to Australia. Mr. Ballantyne was for some time the general agent of the MERCURY, and during his connection with this office he was our trusted and valued representative. We wish him all success in his new field of labour in Australia.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—This (Friday) morning Coroner Keating held an inquest on the body of John Wall, who was found dead in his cell in gaol on Thursday morning. There were sixteen on the jury, and eight of the number were prisoners in gaol. Mr. Thos. Ellis was chosen foreman. After the evidence submitted, the post mortem showing that the deceased had died from natural causes, and that the left lung had an abscess, the jury found a verdict to the effect that the cause of the deceased's death was from exposure, previous to being incarcerated. It was considered that the gaol officials had done their duty in looking after deceased.

ALLEGED PERJURY.—It will be remembered by the readers of the MERCURY that at the last Assizes held in Guelph, there was a considerable amount of what some term tall swearing in a case in which one McCormack was plaintiff and Bowman defendant. Wm. Nichol, of Arthur, was interested in the suit. A few days ago Nichol caused a warrant to be issued for the arrest of Bowman, who lives in the township of King, on a charge of perjury. Chief Kelly despatched constable Lynch after his man and he was brought to Guelph on Thursday. He was admitted to bail on his own recognizance in the sum of $300.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW.—Our portion of the story to morrow will contain an account of the closing death-scene of Sir Philip Logan, and the sudden appearance at the death-bed of Harold who has almost moved heaven and earth as it were to get there in disguise before the fatal hour, and through which runs a vein of tenderness not usually met with in newspaper tales. The old man, after hearing Harold's account of how he had been used by his plotting step-mother Lady Logan, claims his son's forgiveness for the wrong he had done him while acting under her control, repeatedly blesses him, and then dies peacefully in his arms. Lady Logan and Gilmour are thunderstruck at Harold's sudden appearance and the bed-side scene, and stand and behold it all with speechless terror. Harold, after a few scathing words with these two worthies, rushes out of the room and takes his horse for the mountains. There are several other touching incidents yet to come in connection with our tale which will rivet the attention of the reader until the conclusion. We have now received all the chapters complete.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"JUSTICE" CONSUMMATES WRONG—THE DEATH OF SIR PHILIP LOGAN.

Like many weakly people who have long been ailing, he was tenacious of life. Though the sand-glass was running down very surely, its last grains fell very slowly; and, what was rather remarkable, his mind kept stronger than his body, and he seemed to see and feel truth more clearly than formerly. As he neared the confines of death, he became querulous, dissatisfied, and complaining. His thoughts went back to the better character of his first wife, and the happiness he had enjoyed with her; and being now unable either to control his mind or suppress the feelings that arose in it, his thoughts found constant utterance, much to the annoyance and irritation of her ladyship, who did not like to hear the plain truths which were now being expressed from his lips, and liked still less that any of the servants should hear them. Much against her inclination therefore, but in accordance with the dictates of prudence, she dismissed them from his bedside, and forced herself to remain there many an hour when she would much rather have been somewhere else.

Here she was compelled to listen to much which caused her face to frown with anger and her lips to tighten and become white with passion, till, unable to endure the old man's bitter reminiscences, she would quit the room, locking the door, and leaving the Baronet absolutely unattended for hours.

In these last days and weeks of his life there revived in Sir Philip's bosom an affection for his eldest son, to whom he now thought he had been cruel and unjust. He reproached himself grievously with having allowed his wife to turn his heart against Harold, and induce him to treat the boy with harshness and rigour. He blamed himself and her for the wild recklessness which Harold had developed, and longed, with all a dying man's intensity, to see his first-born once again ere he departed. Daily he importuned Lady Logan and Gilmour to bring Harold to him—a request which it was not possible for them to grant even had they desired to do so, for they knew not where Harold was nor how he was to be communicated with, and they were also aware how dangerous it would be for him to come to Mount Cairn in his outlawed condition—a circumstance which Sir Philip seemed to overlook in his anxiety to see him again.

But even had her ladyship or Gilmour been able to comply with the Baronet's request, it would have been the last thing they would have agreed to, yea would, on the contrary, have taken every precaution to keep Harold from his father's presence. So long as the old man's anger was inflamed against him they took every opportunity to bring Harold to his notice that he might vent his wrath upon him, but now that Sir Philip had softened and relented towards his erring son, they would have taken every precaution to keep them asunder had there been the smallest danger of a meeting. But this was danger which they had not the slightest reason to apprehend, and therefore listened with equanimity to the old man's pleadings to have Harold come to him.

"Here is Gilmour, your dutiful and obedient son," was her ladyship's impatient and half bitter reply to the constantly repeated wish.

"I don't want Gilmour. I want Harold," wailed the old man. "He is Eleanor's child. I love him as I loved her, but you always tried to make me hate him. You know you did, but I don't believe half the things I was told about him, and I want to see him and ask his forgiveness before I die."

"His forgiveness, indeed!" sneered her ladyship. "The forgiveness of a murderer and an outlaw!"

"It must have been an accident—the deed could not be wilful," cried the Baronet, in a tone of despair. "Harold is wild and high-spirited, but, my boy, my Eleanor's child cannot be a murderer."

"Then, why did he take to flight? If he is innocent he would not have made his escape?"

"I cannot tell—I cannot tell! If I had him here I would know. Go and bring him, Gilmour."

"I bring him, father?" replied the dutiful Gilmour. "Where am I to find him? You forget that he is hiding for his life; and if he is taken he will be brought to the scaffold. What disgrace that would be for us!"

"Horrible!" added the mother. "I hope he will go to some foreign land and never be heard of more."

"You always hated him—you always wished him away," moaned Sir Philip. "Had we treated him kindly he would have been different. Oh, I wish I could see him."

This cry for Harold—vain and hopeless as it seemed—was kept up till the last. Repentance and remorse were evidently gnawing at the Baronet's heart. On the nearness of death he saw matters in a truer light, and fathomed the designs of his wife as he had not done till now. But the more just views he had obtained served only to plant his dying pillow with thorns for the evil he had done irredeemably. His neglected, ill-used boy was destroyed for life.

The year ended and another year began. Still the lingering, lagging current of life flowed feebly, and it was not till a cold blustering night in February that Sir Philip breathed his last.

He had been dozing in a silent, half-unconscious state for several days, but in the afternoon he had roused up into greater vigour, and spoke in a clearer, stronger tone than he had done for weeks. Nevertheless, a great change was apparent, and the unmistakable impress of death was visible. It was evident, indeed, that he would not survive through the night, and as he had begun to utter his usual querulous repinings, Lady Logan sent the servants away from the vicinity of the sick chamber, and she and Gilmour remained alone to watch the end—both of them positively relieved to know that it was so near.

It was a dark and stormy night. The wind howled with a dreary, melancholy sound in the chimneys—the rain dashed fiercely against the window panes, and the taper which burned in the room swayed and bent with the passing gusts.

The heavy curtains of the lofty bed were thrown back to give Sir Philip air, as, gasping for breath, he maintained the sore but unequal fight with the last foe. It was surprising to see one so worn and wasted struggling so violently in the last agony. His eyes, enlarged beyond their usual size, rolled restlessly to and fro, great drops of sweat started on his brow, and lay there, for no tender hand offered to wipe them away. His arms lay above the coverlid, which his thin, white fingers clutched convulsively as the spasms came, and the bubbling bells of froth issued from between his ashen lips.

Lady Logan and Gilmour sat by the fire which burned in the wide grate, whispering occasionally in unconcerned tones, and doing nothing to alleviate the pangs of that dread hour, when suffering can be somewhat lightened by loving hands and whispered words of sympathy and affection. No tender hand supported his drooping head, no tearful face hung over his bed with soothing, wistful looks; he was left to fight the hard battle without mortal aid, and endure in solitary isolation the full bitterness of death—a bitterness terrible enough even with all the poor assistance which love can render, but doubly distilled when such is wanting.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TORONTO, Jan. 31.

Mr. Mowat moved the second reading of the bill to provide for the employment outside the gaol walls of prisoners for whom inside employment cannot be provided. He explained, in reply to questions from members, that no new penalty was inflicted by the Bill, its provisions being intended to apply only to persons sentenced to hard labor without reference to this enactment.

The Bill was read a second time.

The House then went into Committee of Supply, and passed the items not already passed under the head of Administration of Justice, and a number of those under the head of Education. In connection with the latter Mr. Crooks entered into some explanations respecting the increase during recent years of the grant to Public and Separate Schools, and the payment of inspectors. He also expressed strongly his desire that county inspectors enforcing the regulations should do so with as much discretion as possible, and announced his intention to frame instructions for their guidance in the discharge of their difficult duties, explaining at the same time that owing to the mode of appointment, these officers were independent of the Government. In reply to several members, he further explained that the Public School programme had been made much more flexible than it used to be before the passage of the Act of 1877, that the inspectors had a great deal of discretion in the matter of enforcing the school regulations, and that it was not absolutely compulsory to engage a second teacher when the number of pupils exceeded fifty without reference to the circumstances of the section.

Mr. Gibson thought the Minister of Education had taken counsel too much from teachers and inspectors, and too little from the County Councils.

Mr. Sinclair pointed out that the people had full control over the inspectors through their reeves, and were themselves to blame if the regulations were enforced with undue severity.

Mr. Preston thought the Inspectors were doing their duty well, and that the standard for teachers was none too high.

Mr. Richardson thought the qualification of third-class teachers was too high.

Mr. Lyon pointed out that a great improvement had taken place since the passage of the Act of 1877.

Mr. McMahon thought it was a good arrangement to have the Department of Education under the control of a responsible Minister, who could learn in his place in the House the feelings of the country with respect to the working of the law.

Mr. Deacon asserted that the law was working well in the rural districts, that the standard of qualification for teachers was none too high, and that it would be a mistake for the Minister of Education to relax to any great extent the pressure of the regulations.

Mr. Code took similar ground, and argued in favor of granting to municipal councils some voice in the erection of new high school buildings, now entirely under the control of boards of Trustees.

Mr. Creighton questioned whether the School Act compelled County Councils to pay the ordinary expenses of public school inspectors.

Mr. Cameron believed that the hands of the Minister of Education should be sustained in enforcing the law and regulations, and that it was undesirable to have petty local grievances ventilated as they had been in the House. These grievances should be carried to the Department, and every member of the House, on both sides, should act with a view to secure the best possible results without reference to mere local feeling.

Mr. Crooks made a brief explanation of the law with respect to religious exercises in Public Schools.

Mr. Ross thought the references to local grievances in the House had not been in vain and that they would be of use to the Minister of Education.

Mr. Gibson made a brief explanation of his previous remarks, reiterating the assertion that the tendency of our school system was to carry young men from the rural districts into the city.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—As the 5:15 p.m., Grand Trunk train going west was on Thursday night running through the cutting at the foot of Bathurst st., Toronto, G. Healey, a young man employed on the road, tried to cross in front of the engine, but was caught by it and thrown on the side of the track. The engine was stopped, the lad picked up, and the train run back to the station, when the lad was put in Mr. Smith's waiting room. Medical attendance was secured, when it was found that the boy's chest was battered, his shoulder smashed, and the skull severely bruised. The lad lingered on for three hours, when he died,

ON the 25th ult. the body of a new-born infant was found in the water closet of of Clark's Hotel, Georgetown. An inquest was held and a verdict to the effect that the child was still born was returned. The mother is a widow whose husband died about three years ago.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provide our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage wich may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. The Pope's health is again improving.

Sarnia and Listowel are to be lighted with gas.

A Madrid despatch denies the rumour that Spain is about to assume the protectorate of San Domingo.

The impression prevails at Washington that the chances of the passage of the Bland Bill over a vote are increasing.

Two thousand Manchester cotton operatives have been locked out for refusing to submit to a twelve per cent reduction of wages.

It is believed that the Ultramontane Cardinals are endeavoring to re-complicate the relations between the Vatican and the Quirinal.

The Pope has ratified the plans for the reconstruction of the Scottish hierarchy, and appointed two archbishops and four suffragan bishops.

The official figures of Mr. Jones' majority in Halifax will be published to-morrow. The local Reform press gives them as 223, as already reported; the Conservative press as 248.

The Quebec railway resolutions were carried in the Legislature on Thursday morning, after an all-night's session, on a vote of 41 to 23.

There is a report that the British Duke of Connaught is to marry the Prussian Princess Louise, an agreeable young lady, seventeen years old, the daughter of Prince Frederick Charles.

Previous to the removal of the Rev. R. Cordner to Mount Forest, the ladies of the Clifford congregation presented him with an address, accompanied by a beautiful buffalo robe and sum of money, amounting in all to the value of $23.

A Canadian missionary is reported to have been attacked by an infuriated mob in Formosa and threatened with death if he remained at his post. He refused to withdraw, however, though the officials declared their inability to protect him. The result of his heroism is not known. This probably refers to Rev. Mr. Mackay.

The advertisements of deaths in Saturday's N. Y. Tribune presented a curious feature. Eight of them coming directly after each other in alphabetical succession gave the ages of the deceased persons, and the years thus given amount to 640, being an average of 80 to each. Two persons had reached the extreme old age of respectively 95 and 92.

The Crown Prince of Germany and his wife have not, considering their station, a very large annual income. It is only about $75,000. They have, however, two residences, rent free, and the right to give a certain number of dinners every year, at the charge of the Emperor. His Majesty is said to have an annual income of about $4,800,000.

The Manitoba Legislature passed the estimates on Wednesday night, a non-confidence motion being defeated by 15 to 5. Yesterday Mr. Lemay introduced a set of resolutions instructing the Senators and members of Parliament from the Province to urge the Dominion Government to wipe out the indebtedness of those who received grain advances. The resolutions were referred to a Special Committee to prepare a petition to the Governor-General, praying that payment be accepted bushel for bushel, at the value of the grain at the time it was advanced.

A tragic illustration of the Shakspearean line "One woe doth tread upon another's heel so fast they follow," comes from West Winstead, Connecticut. The mother of Engineer Hatch, who was killed at the late railroad accident, has had a sorrowful career. Two of her brothers were murdered, a third was drowned, her sister's husband was killed in the war, her own husband fell dead in his chair, and, finally, her only son was a victim of the railroad disaster of last week.

A gentleman took his little boy to a model farm to see the wonders of the place. After they had been there a short time, the little fellow ran crying to his father, being at the same time pursued by a big turkey cock, which was trying to get a piece of bread out of his hand. "What, my boy," said the father, "are you afraid of a turkey? Why, you ate part of one yesterday!" "Yes, papa," responded the little fellow, wiping his eyes, "but this one isn't cooked."

Mr. Beecher says the reporters do not report him correctly; and intimates that most of them have had no theological training to speak of. Mistakes are likely to occur, but is not Mr. Beecher very sweeping in this assertion when it is known that four shorthand reporters sitting in different pews, and who had no communication with each on the matter, had the very same words in the different papers they represented the following morning. It doesn't require a man with "theological training" to discover the whereabouts of the preacher who does not know what he talks about!

Here is a plea for the children at the seat of war south of the Balkans: "Within the poor shelter of fireless chimney corners, thousands of starving trembling children crouch from the snow and the frost, and from those sights and sounds of cruel war, which children's eyes ought never to look upon. In hundreds of the villages the children are without shoes, and numbers of these homeless little ones have scarcely a rag to cover their shivering bodies from the severity of the frost and snow. These little creatures wander barefoot through the snow, their little toes often frostbitten, in search of any refuse wherewith to satisfy their hunger, often disputing with the very dogs for a coveted morsel of bread, or searching for a rag to cover their feet." It is Miss Mabel Wilberforce, of the Geneva Red Cross Association, who sends this appeal to England and America.

A Presbyterian French missionary meeting was held in Montreal on Wednesday evening, at which the progress made by the French Canadian Missions of the Presbyterian Church was well illustrated. Rev. Principal McVicar, in the course of his speech, said there were now forty-one missionaries and colporteurs in the field.

1. The borrower is NOT OBLIGED to repay any part of the principal until the whole term of the Mortgage has run.
2. He has the RIGHT (after the first year) to repay at any time, the whole or any part of the Loan, without prior notice to the Company.
3. No extra charge, bonus or otherwise exacted on such repayment.
4. He is requested when making application for the Loan, to state the day on which he wishes interest to be made payable. He thus can stipulate for a date, say after harvest, or at such time as is likely to be most convenient for him.
5. Interest can be made payable once a year—not in advance.
6. On repayment of any part of the principal, interest on such amount immediately ceases.

Chalmers' Church Sabbath School.

The annual meeting of Chalmers' Church Sabbath School took place on Friday evening. The basement was quite filled with the scholars and their parents and friends, who turned out in strong force to countenance the annual reunion of the young people. The attendance was larger than it has been at any previous meeting. Mr D. Guthrie, Superintendent of the School, presided. The ladies of the congregation provided an excellent tea, which the young folks greatly enjoyed and did full justice to.

After the refreshments had been served, and all had heartily partaken of the same, the Secretary, Mr. G. H. McIntyre, read the annual report, which showed that the School was in a very prosperous condition

The number on the roll at the end of the year was 190, consisting of 100 girls and 90 boys. The staff of teachers has increased, there being now 24. These, with the four officers, make a total of 28, who take part in the work of the School. The expenses during the year have been large in consequence of the purchase of a considerable number of books to the library. The School collections for the year amount to $182.13, an increase over the previous year, which were appointed to the different missionary schemes of the Church. The amount raised the previous year was $169 35, and as will be seen the efforts of the school this year exhibit a large increase.

During the evening excellent and suitable addresses were given by the Superintendent, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Wardrope, and Mr. Massie, Superintendent of St. Andrew's Sabbath School. The children also, under the direction of Mr. Maitland, did much to enhance the evening's proceedings. The class sang with much acceptance, the "Anniversary Hymn," able to Save," and other well known pieces. Miss Brown gave a nice reading—"He had not where to lay His head" and Maggie Macpherson "The Widow of Nain." A dialogue —"The True Life" between Misses Logan and Stewart was well rendered, and several solos, duets and choruses were very nice y sung by Misses Scroggie, Forbes, Little, Lottie Wardrope, Emslie, Smith, Maitland, and others. Mr. Maitland himself gave "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by" with great feeling. The musical part of the entertainment was, as usual, the great feature of the entertainment, and the proceedings altogether were of the most pleasant character.

BARN BURNED.—Between four and five o'clock on Monday afternoon Mr. George Bailey's barn and stables seventh concession, West Garafraxa, caught fire in some unknown manner, and were burned to the ground, together with their contents. Mr. Bailey was up at the town line of Luther getting out timber for an addition to the barn at the time the fire occurred. Mrs. Bailey fed the cattle about half an hour before the fire broke out, and everything was as usual at that time. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The contents consisted of four or five tons of hay, between five and six hundred bushels of grain, eleven head of cattle, one horse, a reaper, sulky horse rake, and other articles. The building was insured for $300 and the contents for $900, which will near about cover the loss.

THE DRAMATIC COMPANY.—The present visit of the Star Dramatic Company has on the whole been a success, and considering all the other attractions they have been greeted with good houses. On Wednesday night they opened with the sensational play of "Under the Gaslight," which pleases the crowd, but the chief character is too paltry for a woman of Miss Miles's ability. On Thursday night she was called on to enact a very different character, appearing for the first time in Guelph as Meg Merrilies in the well-known version of Sir Walter Scott's "Guy Mannering," Miss Miles's conception of the character, if differing somewhat from that drawn in the novel, was in strict consonance with that of Miss Cushman and the other great actresses who have made this character a specialty, and the intensity of passion, the weird look and strange bearing of this singular old gipsy woman were depicted to the life. In some of her more intense moods Miss Miles was particularly successful, and she threw around the character a grandeur which was all the more impressive because it was the interpretation of a passion which was felt to be real. This is the greatest triumph of dramatic art. She was no less successful last night as "Mrs. Haller," in Kotzebue's play of "The Stranger," and perhaps we would be right in saying that this was her greatest triumph. Her feelings of love, remorse, and repentance were pourtrayed with great force, and the after sufferings of a weak woman, who had fallen in a moment of temptation, were such as to claim the pity and admiration of the audience. It was a noble exhibition of genius in the delineation of a very difficult character. She was well supported by the different members of the Company. Mrs. Vernon is always good and always lady like. Mr. Shorey as the Count well sustained his character, as did also Messrs. Forsyth, Vernon, Sambrook and Hendrickson. To-night the ever popular play of "The Green Bushes" will be produced, with Miss Miles as the beautiful Lautress, Miami. It deserves a full house. We understand that owing to the inclement weather the Company, in response to a hearty request, have consented to remain and play on Monday and Tuesday.

SHEEP WORRYING.—Friday afternoon a dog which Mr. W. Bish is keeping for a friend, got into Mr. Evan Macdonald's sheep shed and played havoc generally among the animals. Had Mr. Macdonald not been around the barns at the time, it would be hard to tell what amount of damage might have been done. As it is, the choicest animal of the flock, a Cotswold, valued at $40, was torn so badly that it had to be killed. Other animals were bitten about the head and body, but will recover. It is very unfortunate, indeed, for both parties concerned.

THERE was a good attendance at the social in the Norfolk street Methodist Church last evening. A very pleasant time was spent, the proceedings being enlivened by vocal and instrumental music. The meeting closed at an early hour, all present having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

KNOX CHURCH SOCIAL.—Last evening the first social in this church was quite a success. In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Ball, Mr. J. D. Williamson occupied the chair. A programme which had been arranged was carried out to the satisfaction of all present. The refreshments were served by the young ladies of the congregation in a very pleasing manner. The company dispersed at a seasonable hours, all highly pleased with the evening's entertainment.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.—There are some idle young men in town, who, for want of something better to do, make a practice of tearing boards and pickets off fences in the evening. They are not children, but persons old enough to know better, and if not stopped, a lesson from the law would be a good idea. Woolwich street is the last scene of operations for these scamps.

BESOM AND STANES—On Friday the third game of the series for the rink medal was played between rinks with Messrs. D. McCrae and A. Robertson, jr., as skips. The ice was in excellent condition. The score follows:

Thos. Davies,	Geo Patterson,

D. Kennedy,	G. H. McIntyre,
A. Robertson, jr., sk—13	D. McCrae, sk—20

The Elora club has invited Guelph to visit Elora on Thursday next, with six rinks to play the annual game.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH ASSOCIATION.—On Friday evening a meeting of the above was held. Rev. J. C. Smith, President, occupied the chair. The main feature in the evening's entertainment was a debate on the following: "Resolved, that mankind derives more pleasure in the pursuit of an object, than in the attainment thereof." Mr. James Galbraith lead in the affirmative, and Mr. Wm. Guthrie in the negative. They were ably supported by volunteers. At the conclusion a vote was taken which decided in favor of the negative. Horace Ratteray, of Knox Church, Toronto, was introduced to the association as a visitor.

REFORM MEETING.—At a numerously attended private meeting of Reformers on Friday evening the following officers were elected for the Fergus Reform Association: Mr. John Craig, President, re-elected; Mr. Alex. Forbes, 1st Vice-President, re-elected; Mr. John Robinson, 2nd Vice President; Mr. Alex Taylor, Sec.-Treas. re-elected. Executive Committee.—The President and Vice-Presidents, and Messrs. Adam L. Argo and N. M. Monro. A strong general committee was also appointed. Messrs. John Robinson, James Argo, James Cattanach, N. M. Monro, of Fergus, and Messrs. Alex. Dyce, and Peter Rennie of Garafraxa, and Peter Dow of Nichol, were appointed delegates to the Provincial Reform Association which meets in Toronto on Tuesday next the 5th of February.

SATURDAY'S MARKETS.—The market today was crowded with sleighs containing all sorts of farmers' produce, which found ready buyers at good figures. This can in a great measure be attributed to the sleighing, and which farmers have shown they are not slow to take advantage of. The quotations remain firm, with a tendency to rise slightly in some instances. Merchants have already learned that a light fall of snow—enough to slip along with runners, increases the sales wonderfully. The new market improvements are giving every satisfaction, and those who find it necessary to use the weigh scales now wonder why it was that the same improvements had not been made for the benefit of the market years ago.

DEATH OF DR. MCGREGOR.—It is with extreme regret that we record the death of Dr. McGregor, a gentleman widely known and highly respected in Guelph, which took place on Friday evening. At his death the doctor was in his 39th year of his age. Deceased was considered a very skillful physician, and was one of those frank and genial persons that at once won the confidence of acquaintances. He was born in the Township of Nelson, where his father still resides. After passing an examination in New York, where he studied medicine for some time, he took a course at Victoria College, Cobourg. Guelph was the first and only place he practised in, coming here in 1866. Shortly after the order of Oddfellows was instituted here he became a member, and in a short time was considered one of some prominence. He was also an influential member of the Wellington Encampment. A wife and three young children are left to mourn the loss of a husband and father. The funeral will take place on Tuesday next from his late residence, Woolwich street, and the body will be buried with the honors of the Order.

DOING IT DACENTLY.—Mrs. McCarthy: "Faith an' I don't want the things at all, at all, Biddy O'Brady, though its yoursilf wid your plisint tongue I'd rather have than anyone else to chate me."—B. O'B.: "That's thrue for ye, Mrs. McCarthy, an' sure I don't know anyone else in the wide world I'd be half so plased to chate."

Masquerade.

The Skating Carnival a Great Success.

The promoters of the carnival held on the skating rink last evening could hardly have been sanguine enough to imagine that the affair would turn out such a complete success as it did. The ice was a beautiful sheet, and comparatively hard, although from constant wear by the blades of fully a hundred skaters, late in the evening it was cut up a good deal. There were between fifty and sixty young people of both sexes in costume and masked, and the spectators must have numbered between three and four hundred. Up till nine o'clock none but those in fancy dresses were allowed on the ice to skate; after that hour all were at liberty to put on their irons, if they chose, and quite a number did so.

The scene on the ice was one of great brilliancy, the many gas jets lighting the rink up as clear as noonday. Considerable doubt appeared to exist in the minds of some of the maskers as to who their mates were, and while some would get the cue from the sound of the voice others remained in blissful ignorance as to who their partners were until the time for unmasking took place.

The "paper" girls had dresses very nicely manufactured out of copies of the MERCURY and Globe. In one case it was clearly shown that newspapers could not stand everything, as a tumble on the ice had a damaging effect in the case of one of the ladies. A Spanish Count (Frank Quirk) had a very dashing costume, and from the lad's fair countenance, after unmasking, many thought some little girl had been playing the count. Mr. G. D. Pringle was got up in a courtier's dress, with an Elizabethan ruffle, and from his assumed corpulency, he evidently tried to assume the character of Falstaff in that particular as well as courtier. The young widow—a rather gloomy character to assume—caused much speculation among the visitors, as to who she could be. Few found out before unmasking time. The Indian characters were exceedingly well prepared, but Poor Lo in one case appeared to think that by spasmodically crying "Whoop," that it was just what set him off in that character. There were a few very graceful skaters on the ice, the lady assuming the character of "Little Bo Peep," was the subject of particular admiration as she glided around on the steel blades.

A STRANGE FISH.—About two weeks ago Mrs. Wm. Stroud, 7th concession of Dereham, vomited a live fish over two and one-half inches long. Last August, after taking a drink of water, Mrs. Stroud told her husband that she thought she had swallowed something in the water. Since that time she has been constantly ailing, and her illness terminated in the way above described. The fish lived for twenty-four hours in water, and then Mr. Stroud killed it.

FATHER DRUMGOOLE'S PROTEGES—There is a very worthy Catholic priest in New York, whose heart warmed years ago towards the friendless urchins who circulate the great newspapers of the metropolis. Agents as they are, in their small way, of some of the most prosperous institutions in the country, until Father Drumgoole rose up as their advocate two thirds of the childish host lived as careless as wild beasts. Father Drumgoole established a refuge for them, supplied the lacking care and protection of their parents, saw that they were cleaned and well clothed, and when they came to him cut, wounded and bruised, as such waifs are apt to be, applied GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA to their sores. This is the only surgery that he uses, and his honorable name is one of its strongest endorsements.

Louis Diamond.

A Nice Young Man Levants.

During last summer considerable talk was occasioned round town by the actions of a young Swede named Louis Diamond, alias L. D. Allan, by the very familiar manner in which he took upon himself to address ladies both young and middle aged on the street. It was thought by many that he had a story to let in his head, and therefore pity was bestowed where otherwise it would have been contempt. This state of affairs with Diamond ran along for a time without much notice being taken. He grew persistent in his attentions to young ladies without an escort, and finally was cuffed by a gentleman at the close of one of the temperance tent meetings. This, however, was not warning enough for the fair haired "blade." One Sunday, a short time after he was reminded so forcibly of the necessity of not forcing himself upon the attention of young ladies, he was encountered by an orate youth on Macdonnell street, who asked why he so persistently annoyed two young ladies of his acquaintance. The answer being one more emphatic than theological, caused some very loud words to be spoken on both sides—which considering the sanctity of the day and the public thoroughfare on which the dispute arose would have been better for both parties had an adjournment taken place.

The MERCURY recorded the incident at the time, and advised aggrieved parties, if they were really placed in that position, to seek redress at the Police Court, and it was noticed that Louis Diamond Allan was more circumspect thereafter.

Time passed on, and, as rumor stated he was married, he settled down and attended to his work as a young man occupying such a responsible position as the head of a house should do.

Louis was an ambitious young man. He considered his light was hidden under a bushel so long as he had to work for a salary. He considered he could run an organ factory in all its departments with greater success than such celebrated manufacturers as W. Bell & Co., Geo. Prince, Warren, and others, who have made world-wide reputations. He, therefore, decided to leave the small town of Guelph and seek pastures new.

Louis would leave "honourably," so he stated to his mates in the shop, and would make presents to those he loved the most. If he did not leave honourably he certainly did very quickly, as he is now no more to be seen by those who knew him to their own loss. Monday next was appointed by him to quit Guelph, and invitations, headed by his own crest, were sent round to a few friends asking them to dine with him this (Saturday) evening, as he would leave on Monday following. An unexpected call, made doubtless, out of his inner consciousness, was received and he skipped the town, leaving the Albion Hotel at a loss, bes des a few others.

Reform Meeting at Preston.

PRESTON, Jan. 31.—In response to a call from the Executive Committee of the Reform Association, a large meeting of the Reformers of the South Riding of Waterloo assembled in Turner's Hall, Preston, to-day to revise and adopt a new constitution for the Association, and to elect officers for the present year. The meeting was very large, and admittedly the most influential one ever held in the riding for the purpose of organization. After the adoption of the amended constitution the following officers were elected:—President, John Watson, Ayr; Secretary, J. Gordon Mowat, Galt; Treasurer, Robert Scott, Galt. Vice-Presidents, Fred. Merner, Jacob Becker, New Hamburg; Walter Renwick and Jardine, Hespeler; Ephraim Erb, M. A. Abbey, Preston; Hugh Cant, Dr. Lundy, Galt; Jas. Livingston, H. D. Tye, Wilmot; Wm. Oliver, Theron Buchanan, North Dumfries; J. P. Phin and J. S. Betzner, South Waterloo; Executive Committee—Jas. McFarigan, R. Broomfield, John Cavers, Galt; W. D. Hepburn, C. Ahrens, A. T. Detweiler, Preston; John Shaw, James Baker, Hespeler; Messrs. Woodcock, Broderick, Cole, and Asmus, New Hamburg; Menno Holiman, Jas. Wallace, J. D. Moore, and A. Barrie, North Dumfries; H. McNally, George H. Clemens, Walker Illington, Isaac Clemens, ex-M.P.P., John Woods. —Grob, J. D. Williamson, South Waterloo; C. Zoeger, J. G. Wing, George Risk, Chris. Hostetter, Jno. Hays Wilmot.

After Mr. Patullo (Toronto) had urged the necessity of unusual activity on the part of the Association and its branches during the present year,

Mr. James Young, M. P., was called on and addressed the meeting at length, ably defending the Government of Mr. Mackenzie against the numerous slanderous charges circulated by the Opposition, and contrasting strongly the results of the Reform legislation and administration with that accomplished by the Government of Sir John Macdonald. Mr. Young was frequently and loudly applauded during the delivery of his able address.

Mr. Isaac Master, M.P.P., who was present, also addressed the meeting, expressing the fullest confidence in the integrity and ability of Mr. Mowat's Government.

The officers of the Association were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the Provincial Association in Toronto on Tuesday.

Hon. Mr. Jones has issued a card to his supporters, thanking them for their assistance at the recent election in Halifax County. He says:—"The significance of the verdict which the metropolitan constituency has given on that point cannot be over-estimated in the effect it must have on future elections in the Maritime Provinces. Wherever I have addressed meetings during the campaign I have confined my remarks to legitimate criticism of the acts and policy of my opponents, and the press supporting me adopted, am proud to say, the same course. How different the conduct of our opponents have been, the public who have read their organs, or heard their speeches when there was no one present on our side to answer them, can judge for themselves. I am proud to say that they have received their proper answer." Steps are being taken at Halifax for the formation of a Reform Association, preparatory for organization at the general election.

An Ingenious Farmer.—The Detroit Free Press is responsible for the following tribute to the ingenuity of the Canadian farmer. It serves to show that the class referred to can go at least one better than wooden nutmegs:—"It is always interesting to the agricultural community to know any plan that will raise the price of grain. A Canadian farmer, who lives within twenty miles of Detroit, has hit on an admirable method by which the price of corn has been enhanced much beyond the market price. Being a generous man he will no doubt be pleased to have the valuable information spread abroad, although it must be admitted that the plan was given for publication, not by himself but by a friend who has an earnest desire for the increase of knowledge. The inventive farmer lives near Maidstone Cross, where corn is worth form thirty to forty to forty cents per bushel. The agricultural gentleman has a large quantity of corn and he disposes of the cereal in this wise: He keeps a number of gaunt and hungry hogs which he sells for about $5 per hundred pounds, stipulating that they are to be delivered and weighed at a certain hour next day. He then gives the animals all the corn they can stow away just before the weighing takes place, and consequently he has sold nearly all his corn at $5 per hundred, while his less ingenious neighbors have to take from sixty cents upwards. Thus do the blessings of invention and science ever cast their illuminating rays across the path of the truly good."

Not a Poet.

(Written for the Mercury.)

Not a poet? Judge you wisely?
Speak you truly? Can you scan,
All the varied notes of passion?
All the heights and depths in man?

Not a poet? No,—he sings not;
Are not poets sometimes mute?
Is he greater,—he whose bosom
Feels the thrill, or plays the lute?

Not a poet, he has failings,
You have virtues, not a few;
But his very faults and follies,
Would have made a saint of you.

Does he scrape and scratch and scramble,
Lake you for place, and power, and pelf;
Does, while he condemns the doing,
This is poet, that is self!

But the world has forced it on him,
Much is fighting up the hill,
Often down, and vice the victor,
Yes, but he is fighting still!

And oft when evening shadows gather,
Earth-born dreams he dreams no more;
True, he is not upward singing.
Well,—but if he upward soar.

With you the world is joy and gladness,
He drinks that deepest draught of pain,
That where human foot has trodden,
Never is the same again!

He has stood where you are standing,
Left the goal you touch to-day;
But in passing up and onwards,
Sadly wandering, lost his way!

You remain where others left you
He has on and onward trod;
Till no chart will shew his bearings,
Is he farther, then from God?

Will his doubts and fears condemn him?
Are you sure you know it all?
When the slime where he has travell'd,
You have never touch'd at all!

Right with you is right with others,
Wrong with them, is wrong with you,
As they fix your vice and virtue,
So they fix your false and true!

You begirt with legal shadows,
Cast the stone at folly's door;
He beyond the deed discerning,
Gently whispers, "sin no more!"

Not like yours, his life is double,
Here and there a brighter line,
Breaking through the rents of being,
Part is human, part divine!

If the dark and unknown future,
Leaves a choice we may pursue;
How much higher, nobler, better,
Serve with him, than reign with you.

A Brazen-Faced Hero.

(From the Galt Reformer.)

Sir John Macdonald had so little respect for the honesty and intelligence of his audience the other night as to come out plainly in defence of the Pacific Railway iniquity, and almost to glory with brazen-facedness in the whole transaction. He made a defence—but what a defence it was! Some facts he directly lied about; some he misrepresented, and he remained perfectly silent about others the mere mention of which would be extremely embarrassing upon the occasion. Facts which had to be met in some manner, he tried to make light of; and when more was required he solemnly asked his Maker to bear witness to what hundreds of his hearers knew to be false. This is strong language, but it is the language of truth, and no desire on our part to appear charitable in the eyes of the public will prevent us from calling black black, when the occasion demands it. All the misstatements made by Sir John we have neither time nor space at present to correct, but to some of them we can briefly refer. He had the hardihood to pretend that the $162,500 of Sir Hugh Allan's gold taken by himself and his colleagues was an ordinary election subscription. No one knows better than himself how utterly devoid of truth this pretence is. Sir Hugh, on his own acknowledgement published during the summer of 1873, regarding both political parties with indifference; and like the man of the world that he is, coolly surveyed the political situation, weighed the influence of the man he had to deal with, and laid his plans deliberately, with the intention of securing the control of the great undertaking about to be launched by the Government. Nothing was more clearly proven than that Sir Hugh refused to advance one dollar until the bargain was made that he should control the Pacific Railway charter, handing over to him $30,000,000 and 50,000,000 acres of land. Instead of the money being an election subscription, Sir Hugh had so little confidence in them that he would not accept the word of Sir John and his colleagues, but compelled them to sign a document agreeing to recoup to him the money he had advanced for a corruption fund. Here is the document—one of the proofs of what we say:—

Private and Confidential.

Dear Sir Hugh,—The friends of the Government will expect to be assisted with funds in the pending elections, and any amount which you or your company shall advance for that purpose shall be recouped to you. A memorandum of immediate requirements is below.

Yours very truly,
(Signed), Geo. E. Cartier.

NOW WANTED.

Sir John A Macdonald	$ 37,000
Hon. Mr. Langevin	15,000
Sir Geo. E. Cartier	20,000
Sir J. A. (additional)	10,000
Hon. Mr. Langevin	10,000
Sir G. E. Cartier (additional)	30,000
	$110,000

Hundreds of his hearers could have told Sir John that the sworn evidence before the Royal Commission proved that, in effect, he gave Sir Hugh Allan the charter with one hand and with the other took Sir Hugh Allan's $162,500, and then deliberately went to work to corrupt the constituencies with the money so basely obtained. What is Canada coming to when a leading politician can with brazen face defend so shameless a transaction; to say nothing of his finding hundreds, even thousands of partizans to uphold him? We often point to the United States as affording glaring instances of corruption in high places, yet the Americans quickly punished Oakes Ames, and others engaged in the Pacific Scandal. But Canadian Conservatives are eager to put persons far more guilty than Oakes Ames in places of the highest trust and honour. And yet they are the people who are always talking about placing "Country before Party." That men with any patriotism, any sense of moral rectitude, any capability of discriminating in regard to the relative importance of various public questions, can, under any possible pretexts they offer for their conduct, applaud a man like Sir John A. Macdonald, and seek his restoration to power is astonishing. It is a lamentable fact that such is the case, and the cause is worthy of the study of every patriotic Canadian. It is not due simply to ignorance of the real truth. "None so blind, as those who will not see." Goldwin Smith was probably right when, four years ago, in dealing with this subject and referring to these same people, he penned the following lines which to day are not less to the point than they were then:—"A long period of government by corruption has not failed to produce in the political quarters a criminal population which looks forward to another escape of its favourite hero from 'a tight place,' just as the community of Seven Dials would have looked forward to another escape of Jack Sheppard from the 'Stone Jug.' The language held by these people is the precise counterpart of the language held by the followers of Tweed and Butler in defence of their respective chiefs."

It is stated in the Orange Sentinel that Mr. Gourley, Secretary of the Western Provincial Orange Grand Lodge, makes affidavit that he handed in the notice in ample time to the official Gazette of the intention to introduce the Orange Bills, and that he called three days after and saw the manuscript in the office. It is now charged by members of the Opposition, that some of the printers in the office prevented the notice from appearing, and that proceedings will be taken against them.

A Rome correspondent says:—The verdict in the Antonelli case, expected on Monday, is reported to be unfavorable to his alleged daughter, Countess Lambertini.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW
—OR—
The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"JUSTICE" CONSUMMATES WRONG—THE DEATH OF SIR PHILIP LOGAN.

Suddenly, as a gust of more than usual violence smote the gable, and made the window rattle, and the tapers to cast flickering shadows across the room, the attention of the two watchers was drawn to Sir Philip, who had uttered a strange cry; and, partly raising himself, was gazing with strained and lightened eyes toward the door. With simultaneous swiftness they followed his gaze, and both started to their feet at the same moment, as they beheld a tall, muffled figure standing within the room.

Mingled terror and astonishment transfixed and kept them motionless; but the form advanced to the bed, and the dark cloak dropping to the ground revealed the handsome form and features of Harold Logan.

"My son, my son!" cried the old man in shrill and eager tones, as tremulously he strove to stretch forth his hands.

In a moment Harold was on his knees by the bedside with his father in his arms, his head pillowed on his bosom, and his thin grey locks mingling with the wet tears of his fugitive boy.

"Father," sobbed Harold, in broken tones, "I am grieved to see you thus."

"Oh, my boy, I have asked a thousand times to see you once more before I die; and you have come—thank God, you have come at last, and I am able to speak to you."

"Yes father. I was informed you wished to see me, and when I learned that, no fear of danger could detain me from coming to you."

"Oh, Harold, I did not deserve this. I have used you ill, very ill. I neglected you, I sent you from me, I left you to follow your own bent, when I should have loved and guided you—and now—oh now—you are——"

"Not a murderer, father," added Harold, in a gentle, solemn tone. Believe me, I am guiltless of the crime with which I am charged."

"I knew it. I said so. I told them my brave, generous boy would not shed blood. Forgive me, Harold—forgive me for what I said yon day. Grief and passion made me mad. I was wrong to renounce you. I take back my words. You are my son, my son still—the child of my dear dead wife, whom I shall see this night. Forgive—oh, forgive—your dying father all the wrong he has done you."

"Father," responded Harold, "I forgive you freely, fully. The blame lies with others more than with you. But I in turn crave your forgiveness, for I have been wayward and rebellious. I crave your pardon, your love, your blessing."

"You have them, my boy, bless you—bless you. Now in your arms I can die happy."

He heaved a long, satisfied sigh and became silent through exhaustion. But his filmy eyes still showed the light of consciousness, and he continued to gaze into Harold's face with a look of ineffable affection.

While this touching and solemn scene was transpiring Lady Logan and Gilmour, having overcome the first shock of their amazement, exchanged hasty but significant glances, and Gilmour glided towards the door with a stealthy step—only, however, to find it locked. Harold cast towards him one swift, flashing look, which told him that he read his purpose. It was a look before which his guilty heart quailed, and he shrunk cowering back to his mother's side by the fire, where they stood rigid and half petrified spectators of what was taking place.

The unexpected presence of Harold in their midst, and that one fearful glance which he had cast towards them, so dismayed them that they had no power to move or act. Besides this, Sir Philip was now in the very act of dying, and the final moments of a human being are so awe-inspiring in their nature as to lay a spell of silence on the worst thoughts and feelings of evil natures.

Pillowed on the breast and supported in the strong arms of Harold, the old man's face had undergone a beautiful change. It was now radiant and peaceful, and though his breathing was still laboured, the painful struggle had ceased, and he was passing calmly away.

Those grateful ministrations of love and tenderness which before had been denied him came to him now, for with all the gentleness of a woman Harold wiped the death dew from his clammy brow, moistened his quivering lips with water, and chafed the hands which death had already chilled.

Once or twice the Baronet's lips were seen to move, but he was too weak to utter audible words. His eyes, however, never left Harold's face, and they kept their yearning yet happy expression till the dimness increased, and took all their speculation away. Then came one long shiver containing the last resignation of life, and the soul of Sir Philip Logan passed peacefully into another world.

Though aware that he was gone, Harold held the dead body some moments longer in his arms, then he gently laid the head down upon the pillow, closed reverently the sightless eyes, bent down and impressed a long kiss on the cold unresponsive lips, and with one broken sob, which heaved his manly bosom like a mighty spasm, he turned round and confronted Lady Logan and Gilmour.

What a change came upon his face now. It grew hard as the flinty rock; stern, scornful, withering in its deep intensity of passion.

"So," he said, "you deem your triumph is now complete? You suppose the scheme you have pursued for years is accomplished? True, your vile machinations have taken full effect on me; but I tell you, in this the first moment of your supposed success, you will be baffled yet. The stake for which you have played so foully will elude your grasp at the very moment you think you have firmly clutched it."

"Do you dare to threaten us, Harold?" said Lady Logan, striving to regain her usual courage and hardihood. "Surely you forget the power we have over you at this moment."

"The power to betray me back to prison, you mean?" he slowly returned. "That caitiff would have done this ere now, had I not taken the precaution to lock the door when I entered. But think not that I ventured here to night without taking measures for my safety. I well knew what I had to expect from you, and how eagerly you would send me to the scaffold if the chance was given you. I am no fool, Lady Logan, though you succeeded in making my dear father your miserable dupe."

"This insolence to me, you wretch!" screamed her ladyship, in a transport of rage. "Ring the bell, Gilmour. We shall soon silence his vauntful words."

"Beware," said Harold, in a deep, concentrated tone. "Advance one step to obey that order and no considerations of blood or kindred shall avail to hold my avenging arm. I came not here to right my wrongs or punish the author of my ruin. I came because it was my father's wish to see me ere he died—a wish you would have moved heaven and earth to frustrate. The object of my coming has been accomplished, and I mean to depart as scathless as I came. But if you dare to move hand, foot, or voice to detain me, by the heaven above us, you shall dearly rue it."

With his blazing eye fixed on Gilmour's blanched face and rooting him to the spot with their terrible power, Harold slowly lifted his cloak from the floor and wrapped it around him. Then he turned one farewell gaze towards the still form on the bed, and crossing to the door, unlocked it, and passed swiftly away.

So thoroughly had his words struck terror into their souls that with all the desire to prevent his departure they durst not take one step to hinder it. Nor was it till the closing of a distant door and the galloping horse across the lawn come to their ears that the spell left them.

Then her ladyship sprang to the bell-rope and pulled it with a violence, but the only command she gave to the servant who answered the summons was to send the housekeeper and two other female servants to perform the last sad office for the dead.

THE WAR NEWS.

The Russians Want to enter Constantinople.

TURKS BEGGING THEM TO HALT.

THE WAR DEMONSTRATIONS IN LONDON.

Feb. 1.

The Paris Temps says that the Sultan sent several despatches to the Czar during the past few days, begging him to stop the advance upon Constantinople. The foreign ambassadors have requested the Porte to compel the Circassians to quit Constantinople, and the Porte promised to take measures to secure public safety.

A Vienna despatch says it has already been decided in principle that after the signing of the armistice a Conference shall meet in Vienna. Gortschakoff has given notice of Russia's assent.

A St. Petersburg correspondent thinks the probability of the speedy conclusion of peace is certainly not increasing, as Russia insists on treating directly with the Porte, while England and Austria's reservations in regard to their interests practically amount to intervention. The Journal de St. Petersburg says if Turkey were a civilized power, caring for the interests of all her subjects, the present occupation of her provinces might compel her to make peace, but as the circumstances are otherwise, the conclusion of peace is hardly possible.

The Paris Temps understands that one of the conditions of the armistice is the march of the Russian army through Constantinople.

The North German Gazette says:—Russia apparently no longer attaches importance to Turkey's acceptance of the preliminaries of peace, being intent on compensating any want of political success by a complete military triumph.

Baroness Burdett Coutts has receive a telegram from the relief agent at Gallipoli saying, "I arrived after the march with the army, and will stop here to relieve 7,000 refugees. I have seen vast numbers of refugees all over the country dying from cold and hunger. The refugees arrived perfectly destitute, having generally lost half of each family. It is a nation moving without means of transit, and without homes. Englishmen cannot imagine the suffering and destitution.

An Adrianople telegram says:—General Strukoff has occupied Luleh, Bargas, and Tchorlu. He overtook a convoy of between 10,000 and 15,000 wagons, and 50,000 armed Mussulmen fugitives. The latter were disarmed and escorted to Rodosho, from whence they will be transported to Asia. Demotika and Usunkopri were occupied on the 26th ult.

A Pera correspondent says the apprehensions of rioting by disbanded soldiers are increasing. The Circassians are massacring and pillaging near Constantinople. Many residents desire the arrival of a foreign fleet. Diplomats hesitate to take concerted action for fear of the increasing panic.

A Pera despatch dated Wednesday says the Russians have taken Keshan.

It is rumoured that an insurrection has commenced in Epirus. The insurrection in Macedonia is spreading.

The following official announcement is published:—

The Hellenic Government, moved by the sufferings of the Greek Provinces of Turkey, has given orders for an army of 12,000 men to cross the frontier to morrow morning and occupy Thessaly, Epirus, and Macedonia, to maintain perfect public order and to prevent massacres of Christians.

The Chamber has voted ten million drachmas for war supplies, to be raised by a loan.

A despatch from Athens says the insurgents in Crete have voted in favor of the annexation of that island to Greece. There have been various encounters between the Turks and insurgents.

LONDON, Feb. 1.

The debate upon the Government's motion for a supplementary vote was resumed in the Commons to-day.

Mr. George Otto Trevelyan, Liberal member for Harwich district, strongly supported Mr. Forster's amendment to the Government's motion. The House was not so full as last night.

Sir Robert Peel spoke in reply to Mr. Trevelyan.

Mr. Robert Lowe followed. He denied that the vote was necessary to strengthen the hands of the Government.

Mr. Bourke, Under-Secretary for the Foreign Department, said if he were to speak without reserve he was sure there would not be a single opponent to the vote. Nobody could look at the map of Europe without recognizing that there was much truth in Mr. Layard assertion that the Russian terms amounted to the destruction of Turkey's empire in Europe.

Sir Michael Hicks Beach trusted that the great Liberal party would not be led to paralyze the arm of England at a time when it was more than ever necessary that it should be ready to maintain the honor and interests of England, and the freedom of Europe.

The debate was then adjourned till Monday.

Sir Stafford Northcote stated in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Turkish Ambassador in London had received a telegram from the Porte to the effect that a general basis of armistice and peace was to be signed in Adrianople yesterday. The Chancellor did not know whether they were signed, nor their nature.

Earl Beaconsfield was vociferously cheered this afternoon by a crowd numbering several thousand collected about the approaches to the House of Lords.

The members of the London Stock Exchange yesterday amid groans and yells burned the Times and News and other publications of pro-Russian tendency. The members then signed an address declaring confidence in the Government. There was a similar demonstration at Lloyd's. Several outdoor meetings held in the country yesterday to protest against the supplementary credit, were turned into anti-Russian demonstrations.

Italy is prepared to make an alliance with any Powers to oppose Russian supremacy.

A Vienna correspondent says:—It is asserted in diplomatic circles that Andrassy's Note to Russia passed through the hands of Bismarck and received his approval. Austria has decided to bring forward a resolution to secure the neutrality of the Danube at all hazards.

A Vienna despatch says Austria would only protest against a Russian occupation of Constantinople. The acceptance by Germany and Russia of the idea of a Conference at Vienna is announced as certain.

A French gentleman who had taken lodgings in an English provincial town, after his first dinner walked down to his landlady and said to her, "Ah, madame, I understand now vy you area vidow." Having delivered this withering sarcasm, he retired to his own room, but during the remainder of his brief stay, his thoughts were much with the defunct landlord, and he often exclaimed, "Vat he must have suffered! Vat he must have suffered!"

The Buffalo Board of Trade have adopted a resolution endorsing the petition of the malsters for an amendment to the tariff imposing a specific duty of 35c. per bushel on malt, and it is stated that the Washington House Committee will report such a specific duty, and a similar one of 15c. on barley.

Do It at Once!

If a tithe of the testimonials now on hand of the value of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY should be published, no one would stop to read the bulky volume. Ask any druggist and he will tell you that this BALSAM is a real blessing to all affected with throat or lung diseases. All kindred affections, including Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Croup, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest, and Bleeding of the Lungs, yield to its wonderfull power. We advise any one tired of experimenting with physicians' prescriptions or quack medicines to drop them at once and use the BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. The great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, Bible House, New York City. sep18 deodwly

Another Silver Medal
TO THE BELL ORGAN
At the Centennial.

THE UNDERSIGNED RECEIVED A Silver Medal at the Centennial Exhibition, this being the HIGHEST AWARD to Canadian Organs. Other medals for organs merely bronze. None of our organs had over four sets of reeds. Several other Canadian makers had instruments with from seven to twelve sets. The bronze medal organ had twelve sets.

At the Western Fair for 1876, our London agent exhibited only his ordinary stock and with our Five Stop Organ took First Prize over all competitors.

A five years' guarantee accompanies each organ. This from a well established firm likely to continue in business is worth considerable. For Price List, address

CURLING.—John Young has won the first Caledonia medal at the annual point game played at Elora last week. John Bain took the second medal. In the inter-provincial curling tournament at Pictou, Nova Scotia defeated New Brunswick by three points; St. John defeated Halifax by twenty-three points, and Fredericton beat New Glasgow by nine points. Pictou vanquished St. John.

THE Minister of Education has very properly revoked the certificates of the forty-one candidates who purchased the stolen examination papers, and as most of them confessed the deed they are to be allowed to go for examination after July. But entire disqualification is to follow the repetition or committing of this offence.

MISS MILES' BENEFIT.—Tuesday evening, Miss Miles, the popular tragedienne, will take her benefit. Very many Guelph theatre goers have requested her to play Hamlet on that evening, and it is to be hoped she will consent. Her rendition of the character of the title role of Shakespeare's melancholy creation is superior to anything seen in Guelph, and should be the means of drawing a crowded house.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S.—His Lordship Bishop Jamot preached a very effective sermon yesterday at St. Bartholomew's Church. At the close he made an eloquent appeal to the congregation to aid him in the erection of a new church at Parry Sound. The collection was then taken up by his Lordship, assisted by Judge McCurry and Mr. Harris. About $200 were realized. The proposed new church is to be erected on a beautiful site, overlooking Parry Harbor, donated by Mr. McCurry.

CATTLE KILLED.—On Saturday evening seventeen head of cattle belonging to Mr. J. T. Brill, purchased up the country, escaped from Mr. Sandiland's farm, and got on the track near the Great Western station. A passenger train struck two of the animals, killing one outright and injuring the other so badly that it had to be killed. Mr. Brill has had considerably trouble in finding the animals but has succeeded in securing all of them. The animals were all prime and are to be killed for the old country market.

GREEN BUSHES.—Saturday night is not the night when large audiences can, as a rule, be obtained in the Town Hall, no matter how excellent may be the entertainment to be given, and this the Royal Dramatic Company found to be the fact on Saturday night last. The excellence of the play—Green Bushes—deserved a larger meed of public appreciation, as also did the acting of it by the Company which supports Miss Miles. Ireland and America 100 years ago represents, in the first act, Connor O'Kennedy, Mr. S. Shorey, as landed proprietor, flying from his country. His parting from his wife was a most affecting piece of acting, and was much appreciated. Geraldine, too, Mrs. J. K. Vernon, portrayed the grief supposed to exist at a parting of that sort, in a very realistic manner. Connor's younger brother George, Mr. R. Forsyth, Mr. J. K. Vernon, as Mustogh, were also very well played. Nelly O'Neill, Miss Neville, acted as she always does, with a true appreciation of her role, and was very effective. The song of this act, Cruiskeen Lawn, was most exquisitely rendered, and elicited deserved applause. The second act finds Connor O'Kennedy in the wilds of the valley of the Mississipi, the husband of Miami (Miss Miles), the huntress. The clouds which shadowed Connor's brow when thoughts of other days came forcibly to his mind, raised a suspicion in Miami's breast that he had loved another and was not happy with her. Her pourtrayal of the huntress' passion at the discovery of Geraldine in Connor's arms was magnificent, and the conflicting emotions of love and hate were extremely life-like and natural. The fulfilment of her oath to be revenged on Connor, her attempted self-destruction, was with all the abandon the words, "River, river of my race, receive me!" express. In this act Mr. J. Sambrook, as proprietor of a travelling caravan, was quite a hit, and Mr. C. Dedrickson, as Jack Gong, "I believe you my boy," did infinitely better than he did before. In the third, or restitution act, Miss Miles, as Madam St. Aubert, the Indian huntress, having proved her claim to a large fortune, was most excellently played. Nelly O'Neill's, love for and joy at meeting her mistress, Geraldine, and finding the child Eveleen, was acted by Miss Neville in a manner which left nothing to be desired. The whole play was excellently sustained, and added still another laurel to the crown of success gained by the Company. To-night the troupe will place on the boards "The Orange Girl," a play of infinite merit, and one which has not been produced outside Toronto previous to this date. It is of the emotional order, and represents several sorts of new year's days.

YOUNG LADIES' SCHOOL.—We call attention to the opening of the Misses Philpots' Ladies' School on the 14th inst. The high estimation in which Miss Phillpots is held in Toronto was lately shown by an entertainment held in the Cathedral School House, in compliment to her, on her departure for Guelph, when costly testimonials were presented to her by the Cathedral officials in connection with her services in the Sunday School.

MEDAL OF HONOR.—Major Macdonald, commanding the Wellington Field Battery, has received from Ottawa the Governor-General's bronze medal, awarded the battery for coming out at the head of all competitors at the annual target shooting. The Battery have the satisfaction of knowing that their precision in shooting exceeded all others—even to excelling a battery belonging to the regular service. The medal becomes the property of the artillery-man making the highest score. Capt. McCrae and Wheeler Ogg stood the highest, being tie; the former, however, being a senior member of the force, becomes entitled to it. The medal is about two inches in diameter and about an eighth in thickness. On the obverse are the heads of Earl and Lady Dufferin, side-faced, and the inscription "Earl of Dufferin, K. P., K. C. B., G. C. M. G., Governor-General of Canada; Countess of Dufferin, 1876." The reverse has the armorial bearings of the Earl, surrounded by the inscription "Presented by His Excellency, the Governor-General." Around the edge, which is smooth, is neatly engraved "Capt. David McCrae, Wellington Field Battery, 1877." The medal becomes the property of Capt. McCrae, and he certainly should feel gratified at his success with the 9-pounder.

THE PAPAL ABLEGATE.—A gathering of priests, formerly students at All Hallow's College, Ireland, was held at Brooklyn on January 23, for the purpose of welcoming the Right Rev. Geo. Conroy, Bishop of Ardagh and Clonmacnoise, Ireland, and delegate to the Canadas. The attendance was confined almost entirely to old students of All Hallow's. The only laymen present were General Jno. Newton, ex-Governor Lorne, of Maryland, and Mr. P. V. Hickey. At two o'clock the Bishop and suite arrived at the place of reception, where he was welcomed by his old friends with heartfelt expressions of esteem and affection. At three o'clock he and his escort were invited to the spacious parlors, and there, surrounded by his loving students, an address was read by Rev. Father Hogan, of Newark diocese. The address was accompanied with a beautiful album and a purse containing a substantial testimonial of their esteem for him. The album contained portraits of his former students.

Last week a little girl, daughter of Mr. Geo. Bailey, of Goderich, met with a fatal accident in a very peculiar manner. It seems her mother had placed a kettle of hot water upon the floor by the stove, and the little one (about two years of age), putting her mouth to the spout, inhaled a considerable quantity of the steam. She died three hours thereafter.

Two young men named McLeod and Johnston, were recently tried at Woodstock for criminally assaulting Miss Sarah Jane Hunt. Johnston was let off on swearing that he never saw the young lady on the day in question. Johnston was afterwards called to give evidence in McLeod's case, when he swore that he had committed the assault, and that McLeod had nothing to do with it. He was instantly ordered by the Judge to be committed to stand his trial for perjury, which, if proven, as it no doubt will be, means ten years at least in Kingston penitentiary.

Britain's Resources.

London Correspondence N. Y. Times.

"Her English and Colonial army numbers roughly 140,000 men, trained and efficient soldiers of all arms; she has 134,000 militia, a service which did brilliant work in the Crimea; her yeomanry cavalry number 14,548 well-mounted guards; her rifle and artillery volunteers, the pick of the young men of the English middle classes (the kind of stuff which fought the great battles of Germany), number 174,241; there is an army reserve force of 36,000 besides, including enrolled pensioners. When the Crimean war broke out the volunteer service did not exist. It would be quite a sufficient defence for home service now, leaving at the disposal of the Queen for war beyond the seas an army of no mean pretensions, especially when considered in connection with the following naval figures: The navy estimates for the year ending March, 1878, show a force of 60,000 men, boys, marines, and coast guardsmen, which cost the country, with dock-yards, naval yards, pensions, victuals, clothing, etc., an average of $55,000,000 a year. There are 201 war ships in commission, 45 of which are modern ironclads, and there are a dozen new vessels at various yards in course of construction. Then, to add to the military strength of the nation, there are, as I have said before, 80,000 Indian troops (20,000 English) ready to move at a moment's notice, and 40,000,000 warlike adults to fall back upon if need be in India, who could be bought with British gold. They love fighting for its own sake. Millions of them would be moved to enthusiasm led against the enemies of Mohammed. The population of Great Britain itself is only some three millions less than the United States. The population is crowded in upon itself as it were. Trade is bad. Many thousands of men are out of work. A declaration of war and an extra bounty for recruits would bring to the national standard in a very short time 250,000 men from the mining and manufacturing districts. Don't believe for a moment that there is any want of capacity to go to war. If the Queen wanted them, she could in six months put half a million troops into the field. She lost 100,000 in the Crimea. It is the favorite but mistaken idea of despots that a free Government, relying upon a volunteer army, is necessarily weak from a military point of view. Never was a greater mistake. History is full of examples against such a theory; and should England be forced into the present war, Europe will learn another lesson of her strength."

LIQUOR CASES.—Alex. Rooney, of Garafraxa, and Manasseh Leeson, of Orangeville, were fined in the sum of $20 each and costs, before a bench of Magistrates in Orangeville on Wednesday, for selling liquor without license. They were prosecuted by Mr. Anderson, License Inspector for Dufferin.

INDUCTION AT ORANGEVILLE.—The Presbytery of Toronto met at Orangeville on the 17th January for the induction of the Rev. J. M. McIntyre into the pastoral charge of Zion Presbyterian Church. Rev. A. FIRE AT WINGHAM.—A fire started in Scott's brick block, occupied by Mr. Scott as a private bank, on Friday morning about two o'clock. By the most strenuous efforts of those present the flames were not allowed to spread to the adjoining building. Messrs. Elliott & Talbot lose heavily by the removal of goods. Both parties are fully insured.

LIQUOR CASES.—Wm. R. Chisholm of Erin Village, licensed tavern keeper, was, on Wednesday, the 16th inst., fined $20 and costs, for treating friends after eight o'clock on Saturday evening, the 22nd December. Messrs. W. Tyler and J. W. Burt, were the justices, and Inspector MacDonald the prosecutor. Two other cases, reserved since October last, against John and Andrew Hunter, father and son, for selling liquor without a license, on the Erin show ground, were disposed of by the same bench. Andrew was fined $20, and John's case was dismissed, as the Bench was doubtful whether he had been an occupant of the booth. Jno. Tuckey, of Pilkington, who was convicted of selling without a license in April last, and fined $35 and costs, or thirty days in jail, and who has since been absent from the neighborhood, was last week apprehended in Minto by County Constable Findlay, and conveyed to Guelph jail.

MOUNT FOREST.—Mr. Josiah Hampton has left on a trip to Great Britain. He expects to be gone some two or three months, and during his absence will dispose of a large consignment of butter purchased by the firm of Fleming & Hampton during the past season. The butter consists of some 1,800 packages, or about 100,000 lbs.——The public school trustees have decided on erecting an addition to the Central School building, which will involve an expenditure of between $4,000 and $5,000.

THE CANADIAN METHODIST MAGAZINE.—$2 a year; single numbers, 20 cents. Toronto: S. Rose. The February number exhibits no falling off in interest or in artistic excellence. It contains seventeen engravings—several of them full page. They illustrate Cameron's Journey Across Africa, the Romantic Scenery of Watkins' Glen, and How Bohemian Glass is Made. The serial story of Canadian Life gives a graphic picture of camping adventures on the Ottawa. "The Deacon's Sin," by Mrs. Stowe, grows in interest. The first of a gallery of "Odd Characters," gives an amusing picture of life among the "Gutter Merchants" of London. "The Life of the Prince Consort," by Mr. Gladstone, is a noble tribute to a noble man. "The Romance of Missions" gives a beautiful account from the poet, Alexander Smith, of the conversion of Britain." "Is it Peace or War?" gives the opinion of the leading English statesmen and journals on this important subject. Edward Jenkins, M.P., receives a severe castigation for his caricature of Canadian life in his recent novel. The great improvement in this magazine has met with wide and generous recognition. The publisher announces that its circulation has nearly doubled this year.

The Peel Banner says:—For some years past the assessment of Toronto Township has been done so as to give strength to the Conservative party, and especially has this been the case with the assessing of the west. This is not merely an assertion, for it has so been shown before the Judge, at a cost of a large expenditure of money. But this exposure served little or no purpose, for the corrupt assessing was only repeated. The Council knowing the nature of the work that was done, and feeling that it was becoming a glaring public outrage, changed the assessor last year; but it was from the frying pan into the fire. The roll was no better than it had been, and the Council was not deceived. On Monday last they re-appointed the assessor of last year whose work will without doubt, have to be revised at considerable cost before the Judge.

France and Italy Opposed to Russian Aggrandizement.

FEBRUARY 2.

A Rome special says:—The proposal of an Italian alliance with the Powers opposed to Russian aggrandisement, but at the same time guaranteeing the freedom of Christian nationalities, is most favourably entertained here. The Pope and Cardinal Simeoni, Pontifical Secretary of State, are agreed as to the necessity of encouraging an alliance of Italy with England, France and Austria.

A special from Vienna says:—Austria will not insist on the Conference assembling here. Russia suggests Mannheim, Brussels, or Geneva. There is a very despondent feeling here, as it is evident that Germany is favoring Russia.

The Czar has telegraphed to the Sultan, promising to grant an armistice. Server Pasha, one of the Plenipotentiaries, telegraphed yesterday that the Grand Duke Nicholas was ready to sign the protocol of the peace preliminaries under reserve of ulterior negotiations.

The Grand Vizier of Turkey has telegraphed the Khedive that the protocol of the armistice is ready for signature. The Sultan has telegraphed the Czar, accepting the peace conditions, and asking the Czar to stop the advance of the Russian troops. The Czar replied that he was about to give orders to that effect.

I desire peace as much as you, but it is necessary for me, necessary for us, that it should be a solid and durable peace.

A Constantinople despatch to Paris, dated Friday, says:—"It is expected that the Russian conditions will be communicated to the Turkish Parliament on Saturday. It is said the military delegates have fixed the lines of demarcation, according to which the Russians will provisionally occupy Erzeroum and Silistra. A Bucharest correspondent telegraphs that in consequence of the armistice the garrison at Widin will be ordered from Constantinople to surrender their arms, after which they will be quartered in the neighboring villages.

A Constantinople despatch dated Feb. 2, 10:45 p.m. says:—The Porte has received the following from Server Pasha:—

Adrianople, Jan 31.—The peace preliminaries and armistice were signed to-day. There is great satisfaction here at the settlement of the peace preliminaries. The following are the conditions of the protocol:—

First—The erection of Bulgaria into a principality.

Second—A war indemnity or territory in compensation.

Fourth—Reforms in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Fifth—An ulterior understanding between the Sultan and the Czar regarding the Dardanelles.

Sixth—The evacuation of the Danubian fortresses and Erzeroum.

A Pera correspondent says it is reported that Austria is about to present a Note refusing to sanction any conditions of peace which would imperil the existence of Turkey.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—Russia has accepted Austria's proposal of a conference for the settlement of the European questions. It will probably be held in one of the smaller States. The basis of the Russian peace conditions have been signed.

An Athens despatch of Sunday says:—10,000 Greek regulars, and many thousand volunteers are crossing the frontier from Lamia to-day in three divisions. The commanders have orders not to attack the Turkish troops, the object of entering Turkey being to prevent massacres of Christians consequent on the insurrection.

Hobart Pasha has received orders to hold the fleet in readiness to sail, it is believed, for the Pirœus.

An Athens despatch says:—The Minister of Foreign Affairs yesterday informed the Turkish Minister that Greece had no intention of declaring war against Turkey, but only desired to protect Greek subjects. The Turkish Minister replied that he would refer the foregoing declaration to the Porte. Greece will send a diplomatic Note to the Powers explaining the reasons for her action. Her army is advancing in Thessaly without encountering resistence. The Cabinet are resolved to carry out their programme in spite of the signing of an armistice.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—Official returns show the total Russian loss to January 30 to be 89,304.

Monetary Times:—In reply to our enquiries as to the commodities most likely to be exported successfully from Canada to Australia, Mr. James Brown, of Montreal, writes us as follows: "I am certain trade can be done with Australia in many articles from Canada, and among others I will mention the following, which, I know, have been ordered since my return from New South Wales:—Slates, split peas, oatmeal, fish, herrings, lobsters, salmon, clothes pegs, axe and hammer handles, brooms, cheese, dried apples, carriage and waggon springs, carriage bolts, carriage materials of all sorts, spokes, hubs, rims, shafts, chairs, agricultural implements of all sorts, buggies, waggons, lorries—rather a motley and mixed list of goods to be sure. In addition to above I have shipped organs, stoves and general hardware, pot ash, etc., etc., on previous orders. I have no doubt that in time, a good trade will be done, but we must have patience and not expect too much at once."

Messrs. Alsopp & Sons, the great London brewers, pump 600,000 gallons daily from thirty three-inch wells, and Messrs. Bass & Co. 500,000 gallons from twenty five-tube wells at Burton-on-Trent. Thus two breweries consume enough water to supply a town of 40,000 inhabitants.

The Evening Mercury

MONDAY EVEN'G, FEB. 4. 1878.

Exemptions From Taxation.

We notice that the Exemption Committee, appointed by the Local Legislature, met for the first time on Friday, when they elected Mr. Ferris chairman. The Committee after a long and noisy discussion ruled out any consideration of the first clause of exemptions, viz, Provincial Property, on the ground that the Confederation Act determined that exemption. We are glad that this Committee has been appointed, for we expect that in the course of its enquiries it will sift the matter to the bottom, and bring in such a report as will put the whole question on a proper basis, and indicate to the Government what course it would be right and proper for them to pursue in the matter. In a case like this it is even desirable that the investigations of the Committee should precede legislation in order that the latter may be laid on the surest foundation, and that the legislation on it may be in consonance with the feelings and opinions not only of the representatives of the people, but of the people themselves.

The whole question of exemptions, as presented to us, is one of some difficulty, but this is mainly as to how far these exemptions should be extended. There is no doubt that the movement first originated in Toronto, and that it was fostered there specially for the interests of that city. This was clearly shown the other night in the debate on the subject in the House, and more than one member pointed out that Toronto would benefit to a much greater extent in the exemptions than any other city or town in the Province.

What the people of this Province wants is that the tax exemptions shall equally affect all the municipalities in Ontario, and not such as will make the Province as a whole tributary to one city.

It seems to us that the question of exemptions might easily be simplified by the Committee and the Government, if they would adopt a proper basis. They should leave Toronto altogether out of the question, and put the whole matter on such broad grounds as will be thoroughly understood and appreciated by the people. It is generally conceded that all churches and schools should be exempted, but outside of these any property pertaining to them ought to be liable to taxation. We mean by this all residences of ministers, priests, or pastors, or other property held by churches or schools. Of course, it is a question whether Mechanics' Institutes, Temperance Halls, Y.M.C.A. rooms, Agricultural Halls, &c., should be exempt. They are nearly all unproductive properties, mainly established and maintained by private subscriptions for the good of the whole community. They bring in no profit to individual speculators, but are either an annual bill of expense to their promoters or else the profits derived from them are devoted to the purpose of increasing their usefulness to the general public. As to salaries we see no special reason why they should be exempt. There is no special reason why they should be so, save that these salaries were fixed on the understanding that they were not taxable for municipal purposes. We believe, however, that the Ontario Legislature has nothing to do with this branch of the subject, and that the question of taxing the officers of the Dominion Government must be settled by the Courts. There are other points which are worthy of consideration, such as taxing the salaries of our judges, the Provincial law property, burying grounds, etc. We believe that with the exception of church, school, and some other limited classes of property, all other kinds, and all incomes, should be taxed. In doing so the Government would make no distinction as regards persons or descriptions of property, and all would be put on the same footing, and obliged to contribute their share to the revenues of the country. We shall watch the deliberations of this Committee with interest, and trust that their recommendations will be such as the Government will be able to act on.

NOTWITHSTANDING the amount of speculation that has been indulged in respecting the Speakership of the House of Commons it seems to be pretty generally understood that Hon. Mr. Anglin will be re-elected to fill that office.

LORD DUFFERIN will not be present at the opening of Parliment on the 7th inst. The Commons will be dismissed by the President of the Senate. Next day, after a Speaker has been elected by the Commons, the Governor-General will deliver the Speech from the Throne.

A deputation of brewers has asked the Minister of Inland Revenue to lower the duty on malt, which has increased as much as 100 per cent. last session, and now represents the highest tax on beer that any country levies. He promises to take their complaint into consideration, and to remove certain vexatious regulations connected with the revenue.

THE Dominion Government is said to have taken action against the Bank of Montreal for the recovery of $6,000 of the Secret Service money, paid out after the fall of Sir John Macdonald's Government. Mr. Bethune has the case in hand.

IN the Private Bills Committee on Friday the Bill to charter the proposed Western University passed almost without discussion. Bishop Hellmuth appeared to explain the provisions of the Bill, and it was generally agreed that it should be reported to the House on the understanding that members of the Committee and the Cabinet should have the privilege of voting and speaking as they pleased on the measure.

MR. BETHUNE has introduced his bill to allow eleven jurors to make a verdict in civil cases after one hour out; ten after two hours out, and nine after three hours out—such verdicts to have the same effect as if they were unanimous.

The Agricultural College.

The Report of this Institution for 1877 has been laid before the House. It comprises the report of Mr. Johnston, the President, which deals with the theoretical College instruction, the business department of the Institution, and the boarding house and College buildings; and that of Mr. Brown, Professor of Agriculture, on practical farm instruction, farm management and experiments. As might naturally be expected this year, the three latter departments engage more attention than in any previous year, and occupy a much larger space in the Report; but the whole of it is of interest to the public, and especially to the farming community, as it gives, with singular clearness and method of arrangement a full history of the work done both in the College and on the Farm during the year.

As the entire Report covers over a hundred pages we can give but a bare outline of those parts of it which are of most interest to our readers. To begin with Mr. Johnston's department. The fall term was opened on the 1st of November, with eighty-seven students. Of this number York sent eight; Ontario and Elgin five each; Frontenac, Lanark, and Oxford four each; Grey, Perth, Waterloo, Wellington, and Wentworth, each three; Brant, Carleton, Halton, Hastings, Lincoln, Middlesex, Muskoka, Norfolk, Simcoe, and Victoria, each two; and Algoma, Bruce, Dundas, Glengarry, Huron, Kent, Leeds, and Peel each one; in all seventy-three from Ontario. Of the remaining fourteen, four came from the Province of Quebec, four from Prince Edward Island, one from Nova Scotia, and five from Great Britain. From this it will be seen that the students are pretty well distributed over the Province. The extra accommodation required for such a large increase in the attendance was afforded by the completion of the new wing, to which we have more than once referred. In this connection the President strongly urges on the Government the importance of completing the south-centre wing, so as to connect the main building, with the school, by which forty more students could be accommodated. This could be done at a trifling cost, as there are only two walls to build. If this was done the building would then be large, handsome and compact, and as commodious as any public Institution in the Province.

The curriculum of studies is comprehensive. In the first year the students are put through practical agriculture, veterinary anatomy, English, chemistry, botany, zoology, &c. In the second year, veterinary pathology, book-keeping, levelling and surveying, economic botany, entomology, meteorology, and English literature. Preparatory courses are also conducted for the benefit of backward students, these embracing arithmetic, spelling and reading, grammar, and other elementary subjects. Besides the course of study, there is a course of farm apprenticeship, the students being instructed in the various phases of agriculture. This apprenticeship course embraces four departments, viz:, live stock, the field, horticulture, and mechanical. The first named deals with the management of cattle and sheep; the second with the management of horses, sowing, haying, harvesting, threshing, &c.; the third, digging, ploughing, pruning, grafting, &c., and the fourth with planing, sawing, morticing, fencing, repairing farm implements, &c. The regular course consists of two sessions a year for two years. Examinations are held at the close of each session, and diplomas are awarded.

"Although I may not be a proper person to judge, yet I cannot refrain from expressing my opinion that we have succeeded in making our boarding-house, as far as circumstances would permit, a veritable home for the residents, surrounding them with the necessary restraints, and bringing to bear what influences we could, in order to train them up in manliness and virtue. Religious instruction, in the technical sense of the term, has, of course, outside of our sphere, but all the residents have been constant attendants at the churches of the denominations to which they respectively belong, whilst the clergymen of those denominations are afforded every facility of visiting, becoming acquainted, and spiritually caring for the young men who have placed themselves under their pastoral charge. I conduct a Bible class each Sabbath afternoon, which is open to all the students who desire to attend."

MR. T. A. W. GORDON has expressed his intention of opposing Mr. Geo. Drew for the representation of North Wellington in the House of Commons at the next general election. Mr. Gordon, of course, cannot expect sympathy or support from us in his candidature, but we would greatly prefer him to Mr. Drew, and we heartily endorse the following respecting him from the Fergus News Record, in which place Mr. Gordon resides:—"Mr. Gordon is a gentleman of untiring energy and perseverance, and whatever he undertakes he means to accomplish. He is well known throughout the North Riding, and undoubtedly commands considerable influence in certain sections of it. Were he a Liberal in politics, or even a hopeful Independent, we would have more active sympathy with his candidature than can be honestly protessed under existing circumstances. But even as dyed-in-the-wool Tory, upon personal grounds many will prefer Mr. Gordon to Mr. Drew, who from some cause appears to be anything but personally popular among the Conservative electorate."

War's Alarms.

The clarion sounds! uprouse, awake!
There's tempest in the air,
The muttering clouds already break,
With anger brooding there.
O Britain, dost thou not behold
War's portent in the sky,
Arise, thy place is with the bold,
We'll hold our own or die.

The clarion sounds, and on the heights,
And in the valleys green;
With banners from a hundred fights
A dauntless host is seen.
They gather in the tented field,
And raise their standard high,
A band that knows not when to yield
We must be free or die.

The clarion sounds, again, again!
And hark! the rolling drum,
We'll keep a look out on the main,
And he who dares may come.
We hold the land, our ships the sea,
So let the foe draw nigh,
The Briton's life is liberty
—We must be free or die.

CHAPTER XIX.

Another blustering February night had set in, wilder than the preceding. The wind, fiercer in its strength, was blowing out of the east, and driving before it across the North Sea thick blasts of sleet, which swept with keen severity along the coast, and nowhere with greater vigour than over the city of Aberdeen, smiting and whitening first of all the masts and cordage of the ships in the harbour, than speeding on with shrieking triumph to tumble about among the spires and housetops, and laugh with fiendish glee as it whirled the masses of half-frozen snowflakes along the streets, blinding and well nigh sufficating the few pedestrians who had occasion to be abroad on that inclement night.

The number of these, we may be sure, was small, for who would quit warm, well-lighted rooms to meet the bitterness of such a tempest unless called abroad by urgent business which would brook no delay, or impelled by motives sufficiently strong to overcome the discomfort to be encountered out of doors?

Thus it happened that the streets in the vicinity of the Old Town House was entirely deserted; and the lamps threw their fitful shadows over desolute thoroughfares, when a solitary form came, battling against the wind, along by the most sheltered part of the houses, and turned into Huxter Row.

This was a narrow, quiet street situated at the back of the Old Town Hall. It is demolished now, and forms the site of the New County and Municipal Buildings; but at the date of our story it consisted of a row of snug though unpretending houses, where some of the Advocates of the time had offices—the place being conveniently adjacent to the Law Courts.

About half way along the row was a two-storey house placed a little back from the rest, the line of the street being maintained by a strong iron railing, which enclosed the few yards of intervening space between the pavement and the front door—access to which latter was given by a gate, on which was screwed a brass plate bearing the name of "Walter Adamson, Advocate."

The word advocate does not bear the same meaning in Aberdeen that it does in Edinburgh—those who are entitled to the appellation in the Granite City being quite different from the robed and wigged gentleman, who perambulate the Parliament House, before the Lords Ordinary and the Judges of the Divisions. Northern advocates are not in possession of such high exclusive privileges—they are not even full-fledged Writers to the Signet or Solicitors to the Supreme Courts, but more truly resemble common lawyers in county towns, and practise the same kind of business—writing out deeds of conveyance, wills, &c., acting as agents for clients in civil and criminal cases, as factors on estates, as the legal advisors of landowners, and the like.

Such was the legal status, and such the kind of practice conducted by Walter Adamson, whose name and calling appeared on the brass plate in front of the house in Huxter Row. And here it was that the form of the solitary pedestrian came to a standstill. He was somewhat of an under sized man, but being enveloped in greatcoat and muffler, his age and general appearance could not be determined, as for some moments he stood outside the gate narrowly scanning the dark front of the building, which showed no light, except from a narrow chink between shutters of one of the lower windows.

So soon as the stranger's eye fell on this broken gleam, he cautiously turned the handle of the gate and pushed it slowly open, doing his best to keep it from creaking as he did so. The effect was not quite successful, for when a certain portion of hinge was called in to do its duty it emitted a harsh, disagreeable sound, whereat the granite-looking figure looked hastily along the street both ways and then across to see if anybody's attention had been attracted.

He might have saved himself the trouble. Huxter Row was as solitary at the moment as the great desert of Sahara; and even if it had not, the howl of the wind and the whish of the sleet prevented the creaking of the gate from being audible four yards from the source of the noise. The stranger's nervous survey having been promotive of the assurance that the attention of no human being had been drawn to his presence, he glided within, when the gate closed of itself.

He stept gingerly over the slushy ground, and approaching the window from which the gleam of light came, bent upon the sill, and applied his eye to the chink.

We said he was granite looking. Perhaps the reader fails to understand the point of resemblance? Was it in a certain rugged, massive strength of frame? Not at all; but because his dark dress was plastered thickly over with wet snowflakes, till it showed itself in small black and white patches, not unlike the grain of the hard stone on which his elbows now leant. In fact, as he now stood by the window a passer-by might have easily taken him for a slab of granite set up against it, and had no cause to blush for the mistake.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provide our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage wich may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. WE COMMENCE OUR

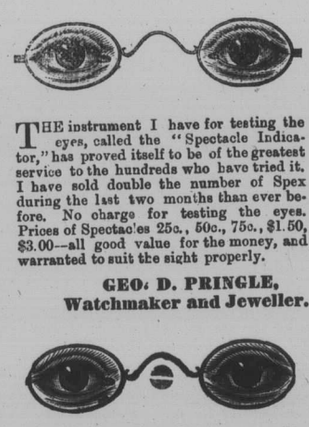
GREAT CLEARING SALE

On Monday, 4th February next,

During that time we will fulfill to a demonstration all that we promise, namely, to sell all and every article we have in stock at the actual cost price of it.



We confidently refer back to our past Clearing Sales, and promise in this sale, as in all former ones, to keep faith with the public. When we advertise a Clearing Sale at cost price, we keep our word, and no matter at what loss or sacrifice it may be to us, we bind ourselves NOT TO DISAPPOINT OR DECEIVE THE PUBLIC, OUR FRIENDS OR CUSTOMERS. We ask, feeling confident of a hearty response, that all intending buyers of Fancy or Staple Doods, will advise themselves of this opportunity of supplying their requirements at a saving of 20 per cent. We ask an inspection of our goods, and the promise we make of actual cost prices; we will agree to pay expenses of a visit to our establishment if all that we here state does not turn out to be sound in every particular, Our Mr. Hogg, senior, leaves in a few days for the British Markets for spring Goods, and a clearance of present stock must be effected. People of the Town of Guelph and County of Wellington you have had a trial of the Wonderful Man for over 25 years. He has worked faithfully for your interests during all that time, and he is doing so to this day. He is strong, healthy and robust now as ever he was, and he is on the war path to exterminate and put to shame dealers in old bankrupt and moth-eaten goods. People of town and country do not be deceived. The test of a man is his past career. You have had every opportunity of knowing and judging of the Wonderful Man. All that he asks is that you consider him entitled to YOUR PATRONAGE AND SUPPORT.

The various debts of the County of Frontenac are to be consolidated, their aggregate amount is something over $260,000. The possibility of free tolls on roads and markets is being discussed by the County Council.

The quantity of grain at Portland for shipment to Europe is steadily increasing. On the 27th ult. there were two ships loading, besides the weekly steamer, and 350 cars in the yard waiting discharge into the elevator. In addition to this there were grain-laden cars at various points westward to Island Pond, awaiting to get yard room at Portland.

A WONDERFUL ESCAPE.—The Burlington (Vermont) Free Press says:—"The man Whimmet, who ran off the precipice, and went down with his team loaded with staves, nearly 200 feet to the ice, just above East Middleborough, a few days ago, is likely to recover. It is almost a miracle that he could have escaped instant death in going down such a place, catching, as he did, from tree to tree, and as often being knocked off by the falling bunches of staves from the load above, where the horses and sleigh were caught in a tree fifteen or twenty feet from the road above. His last fall was about twenty-five feet upon the ice, where he was found and cared for.

Iron is the currency of the iron region of East Tennesse, the metal being worked up into bars, half a dozen of which can easily be carried on the shoulder. When a man wants shoes, clothing, coffee, sugar, or any or all domestic articles, he shoulders the bars of iron which have been given him in exchange for his labor, goes to a merchant and gets them.

E. King Dodds, the illustrious whiskey preacher, gave one of his lectures to an audience of about 3,000 in the Town Hall, Owen Sound, last week, the evening before the Dunkin repeal By-law was taken into the consideration of the County Council. The Dunkin Act was sustained by a vote of 19 to 18 in the Council.

The Goderich Signal tells the following:—The other day a jolly Grit and a shrewd Conservative—a farmer—met in a store, where they fell to discussing the merits of two eminent Canadians whose engravings were there displayed. The Conservative did not know who they were, and knowing this the Grit asked of him, "Mr. S., if you were about lending $1,000, of which of these men would you seonest entrust the money?" The Conservative studied for a few moments, and then frankly said, pointing to one of the pictures: "To this man, for he has an honest face; the other looks like a rogue." Imagine his feelings when informed that the pictures were those of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie and Sir John A. Macdonald. Of course it was Mr. Mackenzie he pointed out as the trustworthy man.

The Prince of Montenegro has accepted the armistice and ordered a cessation of hostilities.

Commotion Among Butchers.

Five Shop-Keepers Charged with Violation of the Market By-Law.

This (Tuesday) morning the Police Court was thronged with a number of shopkeepers doing business in the outskirts of the town, who watched with considerable interest the proceedings in the investigation of charges brought against Joseph F. Smith, Preston street; Geo. Redwin, Suffolk street, A. W. Fielder, Neeve street; Thos. Oldham, Dundas Road; and James Schofield, Paisley street, for selling meat in places which are not exclusively kept as shops for the sale of meats.

Although Chief Constable Kelly was the prosecutor, the Guelph Butchers' Association have the matter in hand, and worked the cases up. The butchers complain, and apparently with just grounds for complaint, that By-law 217 of the Town compels them to rent stalls in the market building, whereas if they had the liberty of opening a shop within what is termed the limits, they consider a much larger business could be done in many places. The limits commence at Fleet street, up Yorkshire to Suffolk, and along that street to Woolwich, along Woolwich to Norwich, and down that street to the bed of the river Speed, and thence along the river to the place of beginning.

Joseph F. Smith and George Redwin pleaded guilty to the charge, at the same time stating that they were not aware they had been breaking the law. Fined $1 each, without costs.

A. W. Fielder pleaded not guilty. Jas. Keough and Jas. Ryan swore to having purchased three pounds of beef from the defendant in his grocery. The defendant swore that he understood that the meat was wanted for beef tea, and he only let witnesses have it to oblige them. He was not in the habit of selling meat. Case dismissed.

Thos. Oldham pleaded not guilty. James Keough swore to the fact of purchasing meat at the defendant's grocery. Defendant admitted selling a small portion of meat which he had purchased for his own use. Fined $1 and costs.

James Schofield pleaded not guilty. Jas. Keough swore to the fact of his purchasing meat at defendant's store. It appears Mr. Schofield has a butcher shop adjoining his store in which he keeps meat. The defendant, however, went into his butcher shop and returned with the meat, and took pay for it over his grocery counter.

In this case judgment was deferred till Saturday.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.—On Monday afternoon Rev. Father Hamel had a very narrow escape from death. He was driving down Woolwich street and had just reached Mr. R. Millar's butcher shop when he was stopped by Mr. John Greene, who engaged in conversation with him. The position of the reverend gentleman's cutter was such that its side faced Woolwich street, leading to Wyndham. While thus standing they did not observe a runaway horse heading directly towards them. In fact they knew little about it until Mr. E. A. A. Grange's stallion "Berlin" reached them at a terrific swing, and jumped over Father Hamel's cutter, between the seat on which he was sitting and his horse. Mr. Grange's horse was without a driver at the time, a young man named Welsh who had been exercising him having been thrown out farther down the street. Mr. Grange's horse, in making the leap, almost cleared the cutter entirely, but the one to which it was attached came with great force against the one in which Father Hamel was seated, wrecking it completely. Both horses broke away from the fragments of cutters, and ran away, leaving Mr. Greene and Father Hamel buried beneath the wreck. Mr. Grange's horse was caught a short distance from the place where the accident happened, and it was found to be only slightly injured. The other horse ran down Norfolk street as far as St. Bartholomew's Rectory. Father Hamel was scratched about the face and stunned for a while, but not in any way seriously hurt. He was able to walk home. Mr. Greene escaped uninjured.

"THE ORANGE GIRL."—The attendance at the Town Hall last evening was not by any means large, this was doubtless due in a great measure to the fact that many were waiting until this evening in order that they might pay a tribute to Miss Miles when she takes her benefit. "The Orange Girl" is a very interesting play made up of many scenes in which it requires first class acting to bring the points out in all their beauty. Miss Sophie Miles as "Jane Grierson, the Orange Girl," could not have had a better conception of the character she delineated. In this character as in all others she never fails to attract. Miss Neville has become a great favourite in characters she has assumed since the Royal Dramatic Company first visited Guelph. As "Ellie" sister to the "Orange Girl" she clearly demonstrated her versatility in a marked degree. Mrs. J. K. Vernon, as "Mrs. Dingle," and Mr. Sambrook as "Gregory Dingle" kept the audience in roars of laughter. Mr. S. Shorey, as "John Fryer," who afterwards married the "Orange Girl," was a very prominent character in the play, and ably sustained it throughout. The others in nearly all cases did full justice to their characters. To night Miss Miles will receive a benefit. "Hamlet" will be placed on the boards, with Miss Miles in the character of the melancholy Dane. She has already appeared before a Guelph audience as "Hamlet," and her acting was so greatly admired that the company have been requested to again put the same play on the boards. Those who wish to see the legitimate drama played in a manner seldom presented to a Guelph audience, should not fail to attend. Reserved seat tickets, without extra charge, can be procured at Pringle's. This will be the last appearance of the Company here for some time.

REMEMBER "Hamlet" is to be played at the Town Hall this evening. There should be a bumper house.

The other petitions were referred.

On motion of Mr. Hearn, seconded by Mr. Chubb, Mrs. Ferguson was allowed $2 per week for keeping the "Corporation Child," until further orders.

FINANCE REPORT.

Mr. Elliott presented the following report of the Finance Committee:

That F. J. Chapman be paid $31; that the Board of Education be credited with $3,000 in advance of the estimates; that $525 be paid in full to Guthrie, Watt & Cutten's account to the end of 1877; that $2,000 be appropriated to paying the accounts of the Market Committee of 1877, and $9,000 for a similiar purpose, to pay road accounts of 1877, passed by Council, the payments to be made by Mayor's order, and from moneys borrowed from the bank in advance of assessment.

Mr. Elliott also presented a report recommending that the town be divided into six wards, to be named St. Patrick's, St. George's, St. John's, St. James, St. Andrew's, and St. David's. The various wards to include the positions of the town within the following boundaries:

Should the foregoing recommendations be adopted by the Council, the committee will be prepared to divide the wards into polling sub-divisions.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Elliott, chairman, presented the following report:—

They have carefully considered the recommendations and suggestions contained therein, and report their views thereon, for the approval of the Council.

1. That to accomplish the suggestion respecting the collection of the taxes in two or more instalments, the only mode that your Committee can recommend as practicable, is to collect the amount required for school purposes as soon as the collector's roll can be made, and the general assessment at the usual time.

2. Your Committee are of opinion that to keep faith with the ratepayers who passed a By-law to expend the proceeds of $30,000 debentures upon the public streets, that the proceeds of the $10,000 debentures yet to be issued should be applied as far as practicable for the improvements of those streets named on the schedule, which have not had their share according to the schedule, if the financial position of the town will permit.

3. They recommend that a Special Committee be appointed to obtain information and report, and the advantages and disadvantages likely to accrue by the incorporation of the town into a city.

4. They recommend that a Special Committee be appointed to revise the rules of Council and rules for the guidance of Standing Committees.

5. They regard the suggestion of the Mayor, respecting the insecurity of the town in case of fire, as a matter of greatest importance, and one that demands the urgent and early consideration of the Council. They do not deem it proper to make a recommendation on the subject, as to the best mode of dealing with the question, but recommend that the Fire and Water Committee, or if they would suggest it, a Special Committee to consider the most advisable plan for procuring a supply of water for the means of extinguishing fire.

6. They have no doubt but the Railway and Market Committees will give every attention to all matters connected with their departments to promote the interests of the town.

FIRE AND WATER.

Mr. Gowdy, chairman, presented a report as follows:

They asked that $300 be placed to meet current expenses.

RELIEF COMMITTEE.

Dr. McGuire, chairman, presented the following report:—

1. They recommend $60 to be paid to the Sisters of St. Joseph's Hospital for six months' maintenance of Chas. Butler, and also that Butler be removed to the County Poor House.

2. S. J. Cherry's account of $68.75, for flour and oatmeal, was recommended to be paid.

3. They asked for authority to purchase a certain amount of wood.

4. An appropriation of $800 was asked for.

PRINTING COMMITTEE.

Mr. Doran, chairman, presented the following report:

They recommend that the job printing for the current year be awarded to J. H. Hacking, he guaranteeing to do the work in a satisfactory manner and at reasonable rates, and that the necessary advertising be divided as equally as possible between the Herald and MERCURY offices.

$200 was asked to be placed to the credit of the committee.

RAILWAY COMMITTEE.

Mr. Chase, chairman, presented the following report:

They have been furnished by Mr. James Massie, M. P. P., with a copy of a bill now before the Legislature for the settlement of claims of the stock holders of the Galt and Guelph Railway by the directors of the Great Western.

The bill was attached to the report.

Having heard the opinion of the Town Solicitor on the matter they would recommend that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to sign an agreement of consent to the passage of said bill similar to what has been executed by other interested municipalities.

The Bill showed that the sum to be paid by the Great Western Company was $12,000—$4,000 to be paid to E. E. Anderson and Alex. McDonnell, and $8,000 to the Hon. Isaac Buchanan, Chas. Davidson and Donald Guthrie, according to the resolution passed by the directors of the Galt and Guelph Railway Company.

ROAD AND BRIDGE.

Mr. Rich. Mitchell, chairman, presented the following report:—

1. That the By-law Committee be requested to introduce a By-law for regulating the width of tires on the waggons of common carriers, and for imposing a license on said carriers.

2. They asked to be authorised to advertise for a supply of lumber for the current year.

3. The Committee asked to be allowed to procure about 100 cords of stone, and get them broken, for the purpose of providing material to be used hereafter, and in order to furnish employment to many who, at the present time, much need it.

5. $500 was asked for, to be placed to the credit of the Committee.

On motion of Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Sleeman, the first report of the Finance Committee was adopted.

The second report, on motion of Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Robert Mitchell, was adopted.

Mr. Elliott entered into explanations in regard to the division of the Wards, and showing a map with lines marked, showing divisions.

On motion of Mr. Rich. Mitchell, seconded by Mr. Day, the Road and Bridge report was adopted.

The Fire and Water Committee's report, on motion of Mr. Gowdy, seconded by Mr. Day, was adopted.

The Relief Committee's report, on motion of Mr. Roche, seconded by Mr. Hearn, was adopted.

The Railway Committee's report, on motion of Mr. Chase, seconded by Mr. Sleeman, was adopted.

Moved by Mr. Doran, seconded by Dr. McGuire, that the report of the Printing Committee be adopted.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Biscoe, seconded by Mr. Robert Mitchell, that the clause referring to awarding the job printing to Mr. Hacking be struck out, and that the printing be divided between the daily newspapers as heretofore.

Mr. Biscoe objected to Mr. Hacking getting the contract for the job printing inasmuch as he had been creditably informed that that gentleman could not do the work with his present facilities. He would have to get some of the work done outside of his own establishment.

Mr. Doran had been told by Mr. Hacking that he could do the work in a satisfactory manner, and he at the present time was having a new and improved press put in his establishment.

Dr. McGuire did not consider that the town was run by laws like those of the Medes and Persians which could not be altered. Mr. Hacking should have a chance to get work from the town quite as well as the daily newspapers. He was satisfied if the work was given him it would be done satisfactorily.

Mr. Roche stated that as a member of the Printing Committee he had moved a resolution that Mr. Hacking have the work, simply because he was under the impression that it was that gentleman's turn. He would not have done so had he then known that Mr. Hacking had not the facilities for doing the work.

Mr. Gowdy was of opinion that the daily papers of the town that sent reporters to every Council meeting to report its proceedings, besides doing much gratuitously for the benefit of the town in many ways should have what patronage there was to bestow. If the work was given to Mr. Hacking, and he could not do it, the other offices could charge very high prices for what the town was obliged to get from them.

Mr. Biscoe asked the Clerk if Mr. Hacking was a ratepayer in Guelph.

The Clerk stated that he believed he was not.

Mr. Doran stated that Mr. Hacking had the printing three years ago, the MERCURY and Herald had it since, and now that gentleman considered that the Council should give him an opportunity to have it again.

Moved by Mr. Hearn, seconded by Mr. Chubb, in amendment, that job printing be let by tender, the lowest tender to be awarded the contract.

Mr. Robert Mitchell was in favor of Mr. Hacking getting a fair share of work. He had been informed however that he could not turn all the work of the town out with his present facilities. If Mr. Hacking was not a ratepayer and the other offices contributed a very large amount of taxes to the funds of the town it was nothing but fair that they should continue to receive what little work the town had to give.

Mr. Hearn in moving amendment stated that all would have an opportunity of tendering and the town would have the benefit if any was to be derived.

Mr. Chubb thought the printing should be got as cheap as possible and to tender was the right way. He would like to see all have a fair show.

Mr. Bruce thought that neither Mr. Chubb nor Mr. Hearn would understand a printer's tender if he saw one. He considered it well to have the work done as heretofore. No complaints had ever been made about the prices, and he believed the newspapers acted honestly and fairly in all their dealings.

Mr. Chase considered it almost an impossibility to ask for tenders. It had been done once before, and when the publishers were asked for tenders, they asked what was required to be tendered for. An answer could not be given on account of so many extra jobs—some of which might be required at a few hours' notice.

Mr. Elliott stated that he believed it was a well known fact that certain work required by the town had to be got out within a given date according to law. This was the case with the voters' lists, and he thought the town could not run the risk of being disfranchised by giving the work to an office that had not the facilities for doing it. He had been informed that Mr. Hacking could not possibly do all the work connected with the town, and therefore could not support the report presented. It was unfortunate that the committee had not sought more information on the subject before reporting.

The amendment to Mr. Hearn's amendment received three votes.

Mr. Robert Mitchell's amendment was carried, ten voting for it.

The report as amended was then adopted.

The report of Special Committee on Mayor's Address was adopted.

Moved by Mr. Melvin, seconded by Mr. Chubb, that Messrs. Richard Mitchell, Elliott, Sleeman, Gowdy, and the mover be appointed a Special Committee to revise and suggest amendments to By-law No. 241, relating to proceedings in Council, defining Committees and their powers, and regulating the payment of moneys.

Moved by Mr. Gowdy, seconded by Mr. Day, that Messrs. Melvin and Sleeman be a Special Committee to act with the Fire and Water Committee, in suggesting to the Council some plan for the further protection of the town from fire, and that the Committee have power to visit various places to obtain information. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Richard Mitchell, seconded by Mr. Bruce, that Messrs. Elliott, Melvin, Robert Mitchell, Sleeman, and Biscoe be a Committee to report on the advisability of making application to the Legislature to incorporate Guelph as a city.

Leave was granted to introduce a By-law to regulate tavern and shop licenses, on motion of Messrs. Bruce and Chubb.

Mr. Chase stated that he believed the Bill giving the town permission to make a public park of the old burial ground, was to come before the Local House on Tuesday. Guelph township had some kind of claim, and he understood the Reeve of that township had already proceeded to Toronto to prevent, if possible, the passage of the Bill. It was very necessary that the town should send some person to Toronto at once, to have our interests looked after.

The Mayor stated that Mr. Chase had stated the matter correctly. The ground of objection is that the burial ground was given to the town and township of Guelph, and that if it was to be converted to the use of a public park, they held it should be sold, and the money realized to be devoted to the benefit of the new cemetery.

Mr. Melvin considered it very necessary that the town should be represented before the Committee of the House, as well as the township. He could see no reason why the township could not lay claim to an interest in the land.

Mr. Robert Mitchell thought the Mayor should proceed to Toronto by the midnight train. It would be well if the solicitor were present also.

Moved by Mr. Chase, seconded by Mr. Sleeman, that His Worship the Mayor be instructed to proceed to Toronto to look after the interests of the town in reference to the passing of an Act in reference to converting the old burying ground into a public park. Carried.

Council adjourned at 9:25.

TUESDAY EVEN'G, FEB. 5, 1878,

The Agricultural College.

(CONCLUDED.)

The President has hitherto been discharging the duties of Bursar, but as these have so largely increased the Government have now appointed Mr. Featherstonehaugh, late of Penetanguishene, to that position. To give an idea of the work in this department, besides keeping the accounts and books, some 1,637 letters were sent out during the year besides about 10,000 circulars and reports to County and Township Councils, Agricultural Societies, &c. The effort to establish a Statistical Bureau has succeeded beyond expectation. The object is to collect over the whole Province everything of value relating to Agriculture. A list of over 4,000 correspondents has been secured, and it is hoped that during the year something will be done in the way of publishing reports.

The amount granted for maintenance was $17,360, and the expenditure has been kept within this amount. The additional cost for the largely increased number of students is comparatively small. The income of the farm from all sources was $5,217, and the expenditure $4,714. In addition to the balance over which is in the shape of notes payable in April, about $400 worth of stock has been added to the herds and flocks.

Reference has already been made to Mr. Johnston's recommendation to have the remaining wing of the building finished. He also recommends an addition at the rear for servants' apartments, &c., which are much needed. He refers to his recommendation made in last year's Report for a land endowment for the benefit of the Institution, and for its affiliation with the University of Toronto.

Mr. Johnston closes his admirable report with the following summary of work done, with the claims the Institution have on the sympathy and support of the people, with the satisfactory progress that has been made, and the prospect of extended usefulness which is now beyond a doubt:—

Taking then a retrospective view of the year's operations, we may conclude on the Emersonian theory of progress, that we have advanced, that revolving in our smaller circle for the last two years, we have now broken the circumference and emerged into a still larger and wider, whose area is greater and whose circumference extends farther than ever before. We have during the past year become better known throughout the country, and I hope better appreciated. In the College proper we have increased our accommodation, doubled the number of our students, and yet have to shut the doors to half as many more who cannot get in. We have taught to those students, and taught thoroughly, the subjects laid down in the curriculum,—Agriculture and the elements of the allied sciences of chemistry, botany, zoology, entomology, geology, and meteorology. We have instructed them likewise in veterinary anatomy, physiology, and pathology, English and mathematics. Turning to the farm, we have taught them the various operations of husbandry, and that not by theory but by downright, hard, practical, every-day work. We have conducted thereon a whole series of experiments, and are now ready, by fields prepared for the purpose, to quadruple the number of them. We have tried 94 varieties of fall wheat, and 139 of spring; 13 of barley, and 48 of oats; 19 of peas, and 42 of corn; 15 of grasses, and 7 of clovers; 10 of potatoes, and 8 of carrots; 13 of mangolds and 22 of turnips. There have been tested seven different modes of cultivation, and fifteen kinds of manure, and we have tried the effects of many different kinds of food in fattening the various classes of animals. The account of the success of each of those experiments will be found in the preceding pages. And we have gone on at the same time with the improvements necessary to bring the farm into the shape of a model farm. There have been built 710 rods of fencing, and 730 rods of drains have been laid. Twenty-seven acres of wild natural pasture land have been brought under the plough, and sixty-five acres, foul with weeds, have been thoroughly cleaned. A greenhouse has been erected, a garden put into regular rotation, roads and walks graded and gravelled, shrubberies and hedges planted; and all this has been carried on and completed, besides performing the regular work of the farm. In whatever direction therefore it is considered, in teaching, in experimenting, or in improving, I repeat that, taking a retrospective view of the year's operations, progress—indisputable progress—has been made.

But it may be asked, is the "Farm" ever going to pay? As a farm, I answer unhesitatingly it ever will, just the same as any other farm well managed will pay. But if by the question is meant the College as well as the Farm, I simply answer by asking what college ever did pay except in the education of its pupils? Do our public schools, our high schools, our collegiate institutes, Upper Canada College, any of our colleges or universities pay in the technical sense of that word? The expences of the staff and their buildings are always a charge upon revenue, and it will ever be the same here. And again it may be asked, what success has attended the Institution, and what greater success may be expected from it? The answer to this question must entirely depend on the standard of success formed in the mind of the questioner. The objects aimed at by the Institution, are to "train young men in the theory and practice of husbandry," and to "conduct experiments tending to the solution of questions of material interest to the agriculturists of the Province." The instrument at hand was a farm of 550 acres. Out of that was to be made a model farm, an experimental farm, and a college, in which the teaching was to be co-existent and co-temporaneous with both of the former. At the end of three years, for it is nearly that since we really began, where do we stand? In the first place—midway in the work of making a model farm. One hundred and twenty-six acres of natural pasture land have been brought under the plough, and forty-seven still remain to be broken up. Half the farm has been underdrained, and the half of the remainder requires it. A little over nine hundred rods of fencing have been built, and seven hundred more are needed. Fields have been laid out, others straitened, many levelled and cleaned, whilst roads to them all have been made or improved. Thirty acres in front have been placed in shape, as the horticultural section of the farm, with garden lawn, trees, shrubberies, flower beds and borders, forcing houses, green houses—in a word, all the usual divisions in that department. In the second place, other forty acres have been laid off as the experimental section of the farm, and a glance at my statements in the last paragraph, and at the report of the Professor of Agriculture for this year and last, will show what has been done towards furthering this important object of our establishment. In the third and last place, about half the buildings belonging to a regular college have been erected, a staff of teachers appointed, a curriculum of study laid down, and for the last three years that course has been faithfully carried out. Since the opening of the Institution one hundred and eighty-eight students have enrolled their names as pupils, and have remained with us for a shorter or longer period of time—a few for the regular two years, but the great majority for an average of twelve months. Of the number mentioned, eighty-seven names are now on our roll; and of the remaining one hundred and one who have left our halls, seventy-one are known to be following agriculture or horticulture as an occupation, four are completing their course in veterinary colleges, eighteen are known to be following either occupation, and of the remaining eight we have no trace. Sixty four of the present eighty-seven are from the farm or garden directly, and all, the remaining twenty-three as well, have signified their intention of making either agriculture or horticulture their life-work. Such are some of the data whereby present success or failure may be judged, and we leave them in the hands of any impartial and honest critic, knowing full well the character of the decision that will be rendered. And I see no reason why the future should not be more successful than the present. Should the same measure of support at present granted by the representatives of the people be continued, in other two years, the Farm will be a model farm, a system of experiments, popular, practical, and scientific, will be established, our College building, solid, massive, and imposing, will be finished; the College course will be as thoroughly systematised in its practical training as it is at present in its theoretical class-work; and we will be doing what no other educational institution in the Province can attempt—sending eighty per cent of our graduates back with a fair amount of higher education to be classed amongst the most intelligent producers from the soil. And should the suggestions I have had the honour to make be carried out with the payments by the students and from a revenue fund a large portion of the objectionable part of our expenses will be abolished, and we will take rank no longer as a "public institution" in the same category as hospitals and asylums, but will have attained the position of one of the most prominent of our Provincial educational institutions, coming after, if not before, our normal schools, and looked upon with pride as one of the most promising of all the technical colleges affiliated to our Provincial University. Such can be our near future, the horizon that bounds the view. What may be beyond I know not, nor do I care to know, for I am certain that when it is reached a wider area stretches far in the distance. But of one thing I am sure, that if during the last two decades of this century the inhabitants of this Province with an impoverished soil under the full operation of the law of diminishing return, with the want of accumulated individual capital, and under a system of peasant proprietorship, are going to place our agricultural exports, on which at present the national wealth depends, on the world's market, in competition with those of other countries, whose capital is abundant and whose labour supply is never limited and always cheap, then such competion can only be rendered successful by the increase throughout the great body of producers of the general intelligence and the special agricultural knowledge and skill which is at present possessed only by those who form the van-guard of the farming community of the Province. Within that educational sphere, in the not distant future, lies the work of this Institution, and within that sphere I am confident of its success.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TORONTO, Feb. 5.

After routine Mr. Mowat, in reply to Mr. Rose, stated that no measure providing for a more efficient and less expensive mode of selecting jurors could be introduced just now, as it was doubtful whether the jurisdiction in the matter lay with the Dominion Parliament or the Local Legislature. He also stated that a test case would soon be submitted, with the consent of the Dominion Government, to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Clarke (Norfolk) moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Pharmacy Act of 1871, and after some discussion the motion was carried and the Bill referred to a Special Committee.

Mr. Robinson's Bill to amend the Mechanics' Liens Act and a Bill by Mr. O'Donoghue with a similar title were each read a second time and both referred to one Special Committee.

A number of the clauses of Mr. Mowat's Bill regulating the winding up of joint stock companies were passed in Committee, and one or two less important Government measures were read a second time.

A DESPATCH from Quebec states that General Seymour has published a letter in which he avers, that when the North Shore Railway contractor is settled with by the Government, it will be found that the cost will exceed a million dollars over and above the contract price.

APPLICATION by the defendant for a new trial in the case of The Queen vs. Wilkinson, was refused in the Court of Queen's Bench on Monday.

MR. JAMES METCALFE, of Yorkville, the present representative of East York in the Commons, was chosen a candidate for the next election at a large meeting of Reformers, held on Monday.

MONTREAL Witness: The spirit of Reform has been shown by the Dominion Government in reference to the office of Commissioner of Ordinance and Admiralty lands. Colonel Coffin, the holder of that position having died, the office is to be abolished, and the business conducted by the Dominion Lands Department, under Surveyor-General Dennis. The growth of the country and some statutory enactments in regard to the Civil Service will result in the steady increase of its cost, in some branches at least, for many years to come. It is the more necessary, therefore, that the Government should discover and abolish as opportunity occurs, all sinecures, and only retain officers who are really needed.

The Quebec City Treasurer's deficit is placed at $148,000.

MR. LAFONTAINE, member of the Quebec Legislature, has given notice that he will move for the abolition of the Legislative Council.

COL. HOME DRUMMOND MORAY, JR. (Conservative) has been returned to the Imperial House of Commons for Perthshire, in the place of the late Sir Wm. Stirling-Maxwell.

I.O.G.T.—On Monday evening the following officers were duly installed for the current quarter by Temple Deputy B. Fairley:—

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. CHAPTER XIX.

The application of his eye to a point in the shutter opposite the chink enabled him to obtain a peep of the interior of the room, and to behold its only occupant, a young, sandy-haired man, seated at a long table, plying the pen with diligence.

"All right, it's Ironby; but is he alone, I wonder?" muttered the unseen watcher, who was taking this vulgar way of gratifying his curiosity.

He endeavoured to answer his own question by twisting his head from side to side till his eye and the chink were related by every angle of vision. This gave him a view piece by piece of about three-fourths of the room, and so far as he thus made out no one was in it but the sandy-haired youth writing at the table.

This being satisfactory so far as it went, he lifted his finger and gave a low, peculiar tap upon the glass. The writer paused in his work and looked dubiously up. Evidently he was not sure that he had heard anything more than the rattle of the hail against the sash, and after waiting for a moment or two, was about to resume his work when another tap of the same peculiar kinds, but more distinctly delivered, made a look of intelligence come upon his face, and hastily rising he approached the window.

"Anybody there?" he asked in a suspicious whisper.

"Yes," was the other's answer, with his mouth so close to the window that his hot breath dimmed the glass, and if the glass had been possessed of an olfactory nerve it would have realised the smell of raw whiskey.

"Who?—Ned?" asked the youth, quickly and eagerly.

"Ay; let me in, man; I have business with you."

The youth left the room with hasty step, and his visitor at the same time moved towards the door, where he began to knock the blocks of snow from his boots and the half-melted flakes from his garments—a process which was not completed when the door was opened, and without an instant's delay he passed into the dark lobby.

"A devil of a night, Ironby," said the visitor, as he finished the process of shaking his clothes.

"I suppose so," replied the other, closing the door, and so excluding the cold wind and the whirling snow. "I haven't been out to know, but I heard the sleet on the window, and you are the last man I would have thought of seeing."

"I hope you are alone. Adamson isn't in the office, is he?"

"No; he went home between three and four, and no fear of him showing his face to-night again. I have a long deed to copy, or I should have been at Dicey's by this time."

"I am glad I have found you here though. We shall be quieter than at Dicey's, and our talk to night needs privacy. Have you heard the news?"

"News of what?"

"Ah, I thought you hadn't—Sir Philip is dead."

"You don't say so," said the youth, stopping short as he was conducting the visitor to the lighted room, and catching excitedly at his arm.

"Fact."

"Died at last?"

"Yes, at last; he has been in no hurry to go."

"When was it?"

"Last night. I wonder Adamson has not received intimation."

"Why should he? Ten years, you know, since he lost the factorship. The news would be sent to M'Garry, though. Ay, well, Gilmour's trump-card makes its winning now. What says the gauger?,,

This last question was put as they entered the room where Ironby had been writing when the tap came to the window, and as the stranger began at the same moment to divest himself of muffler and greatcoat, the light revealed him to be Edward Skeat, the assistant and coadjutor of Malcolm Gillespie.

"Why, the gauger dosen't know yet—he's from home," answered Skeat, as he hung his greatcoat behind the shutter so as to intercept the light through the chink.

"He'll be in high feather though, seeing the time has come when he can put the screw on Logan, and make him fork out."

"Not in such high feather as I could wish," rejoined Skeat. "The fact is, Gillespie doesn't cut up well at all since the Wanlass business. He is ten times softer than I thought him."

"Is that on account of the false deposition?" asked Ironby.

"That, and the consequence it brought Harold. You have no idea what hard work it took from me to bring him up to the scratch. He threatened a hundred times to back out of it, and even at the last moment it seemed to me a toss up whether he would say Harold Logan or Black Dick when asked who had shot Wanlass. My notion is if Gilmour hadn't been in the room he would have thrown up the sponge."

"And lost the game for himself, you, and all of us. Why, what ailed him?"

"He is troubled with that confounded inconvenience called conscience. He hasn't pluck enough for our purpose."

"Nonsense, Ned. Gillespie is as brave as a lion."

"Ay, in facing personal danger there is none more courageous. But he has too much heart about him to carry with ease the memory of Harold's fate. His fits of remorse come daily."

"By jove, but that's alarming," said Ironby, with a face of grave concern. Suppose he breaks down and makes confession? What a devil of a smash up that would make"

"Oh, I don't fear that. The fish is hooked fast enough. I will have some difficulty in playing him to bank, but he'll not break away. Bless you, he knows he would be ruined for life if the truth came out, and squeamish though he is he'll not risk that."

"I should hope not. If he did what would you do with Kate? Why, you'd lose her."

"Lose her! Curse it, Ironby, don't suggest that possibility. I wouldn't lose Kate for any consideration. She's devilish extravagant to be sure, and costs me more money than I can often come by, but what of that—she's a rare one and worth it all. Lose her—no! and to prevent it I must ride Gillespie with whip and spurs. Fortunately I know how to guide him. I know his weakness, and will work on it. As it is he trusts me out-and-out, and feels already that he cannot do without me. I mean to make him feel that more and more, and in time I don't doubt he'll learn to go fast enough without my urging."

"How do you propose to manage it?" asked Ironby, with a curious look at his visitor.

"By getting him more involved in financial embarrassments—by making him more enamoured of luxury and extravagance. His tastes lie that way at any rate, and my necessities require them to be cultivated, for egad, it's the only way my difficulties can be met."

"Well, your first work will be to get him to ply the screw hard enough on Gilmour, for I am much mistaken if that gentleman means to be as good as his promise."

"What mean you;" asked Skeat, with a startled look.

"I have been studying Gilmour Logan a bit, and can see he is little better than a miser. His promise to Gillespie before the trapping of Harold were large and fair, but now that the service is rendered I am pretty certain he'll refuse to bleed, for he

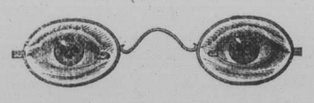
WE COMMENCE OUR

GREAT CLEARING SALE

On Monday, 4th February next,

During that time we will fulfill to a demonstration all that we promise, namely, to sell all and every article we have in stock at the actual cost price of it.



We confidently refer back to our past Clearing Sales, and promise in this sale, as in all former ones, to keep faith with the public. When we advertise a Clearing Sale at cost price, we keep our word, and no matter at what loss or sacrifice it may be to us, we bind ourselves NOT TO DISAPPOINT OR DECEIVE THE PUBLIC, OUR FRIENDS OR CUSTOMERS. We ask, feeling confident of a hearty response, that all intending buyers of Fancy or Staple Doods, will advise themselves of this opportunity of supplying their requirements at a saving of 20 per cent. We ask an inspection of our goods, and the promise we make of actual cost prices; we will agree to pay expenses of a visit to our establishment if all that we here state does not turn out to be sound in every particular. Our Mr. Hogg, senior, leaves in a few days for the British Markets for spring Goods, and a clearance of present stock must be effected. People of the Town of Guelph and County of Wellington you have had a trial of the Wonderful Man for over 25 years. He has worked faithfully for your interests during all that time, and he is doing so to this day. He is strong, healthy and robust now as ever he was, and he is on the war path to exterminate and put to shame dealers in old bankrupt and moth-eaten goods. People of town and country do not be deceived. The test of a man is his past career. You have had every opportunity of knowing and judging of the Wonderful Man. All that he asks is that you consider him entitled to YOUR PATRONAGE AND SUPPORT.

PUBLIC OPINION IN RUSSIA.

Russian Troops in Roumania.

Erzeroum Surrendered.

GREEK SUCCESSES.

The Debate in the British Parliament.

GLADSTONE AVD HARDY.

LONDON, Feb. 4th.

An Odessa correspondent says:—Much relief is felt at the probability of an armistice. The people are naturally anxious to dispose of the grain accumulated here, about a million quarters. Nearly a million and a half more are stored at the railroad stations.

The Vienna Political Correspondence states that after the signing of the peace preliminaries steps were immediately taken at Adrianople to commence the negotiations for a definite treaty of peace. Gen. Ignatieff and Safvet Pasha will be entrusted with these negotiations.

A Belgrade correspondent says:—It is reported that the armistice is for an indefinite time until the conclusion of peace.

A Vienna despatch says:—Even in their immature form the Russian conditions seem to contain much that can scarcely be brought into harmony with the interests of Austria; being rather calculated to sow the seeds of fresh troubles than to promote real peace. They destroy the Ottoman power in Europe without substituting anything possessing the guarantees of stability. The smaller States would receive just enough to make them wish for more, while Bulgaria, the largest one, would become little more than a Russian dependency. The restoration to the Czar of Bessarabia without a due equivalent to Roumania would make Russia mistress of the mouths of the Danube. Thus in the preliminaries there is much that must lead to discussion between Austria and Russia, and the same must be the case, though, perhaps, to a lesser degree, with the other Powers. Meantime Roumania has already announced her claim to take part as belligerent in the conclusion of peace. The Servians are greatly disappointed with the frontier rectification allowed them, and proclaim that they will not stop operations until they have possession of old Servia down to the River Lom.

A Vienna correspondent telegraphs:—The situation is still regarded here as serious. It has transpired that Russia is concentrating troops in the interior of Roumania, and 120,000 men will be massed towards the west and north, evidently for defence against Austria.

A Berlin correspondent says:—The situation is still considered critical. The Czar's address to the troops on Sunday afternoon at St. Petersburg and the calling out of forty new battalions have further checked public confidence in the early establishment of peace.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—It has been assumed until lately that England would interpose the principal obstacles to a satisfactory arrangement, but it is now believed that Austria will offer the most serious opposition. Russia is inclined to be conciliatory relative to the question of the Straits, which principally affects England, but with regard to the Slavonic tribes it is declared that she must consider her own honor and arms as well as the supposed interest of Austria. The popular faith in the Triple Alliance is much shaken. It is believed that Austria has completely changed her attitude, and serious doubts are entertained, even concerning Germany.

I congratulate you upon the armistice, the satisfactory conditions of which are due to our brave troops, who proved that for them nothing is impossible. We are still, however, far from the end, and must continue to hold ourselves prepared until we obtain a desirable peace worthy of Russia.

An Athens despatch says:—The Greek troops who entered Thessaly yesterday under Gen. Soutzo encountered no resistance from the Turks, who withdrew to Domoco. The Greeks advance to-day on Domoco, the garrison of which numbers 2,000.

A later despatch says the Greeks captured Domoco at the point of the bayonet. One hundred and fifty Greeks were killed. Five Turkish men-of-war passed the Dardanelles on Sunday on their way to the Greek coast. There are only 500 troops in Athens and a small English gunboat at the Piræus. Hundreds of volunteers are leaving daily for the frontier. On receipt of the news of the signing of the Turco-Russian armistice an extra sitting of the Chamber was held. The Ministry and the House agreed to continue their present policy. Gen. Sapountzaky, with 7,000 troops, was ordered to enter Epirus on Sunday morning.

A Kars special says: The surrender of Erzeroum is officially announced. The Russians enter to morrow. The Turkish garrison and the poorer Mohammedans who wish to go will retire to Turkish territory. This surrender is probably in fulfilment of one of the conditions of the armistice.

LONDON, Feb. 4.

In the House of Commons, this afternoon, Mr. Gladstone suggested an address to the Crown from both Houses, assuring the Queen of support in the Conference instead of the vote of credit. He said the armistice removed all apprehension of England being encouraged by the hope of English aid. It also removed the reason for persevering in the vote. Now that there was no apprehension of Russian occupation of Constantinople, the Government, by the menacing attitude they proposed to assume, were taken a step in the direction of barbarism and violence. Perseverance with the vote could only demonstrate that the nation was divided. While urging that the vote of credit be withdrawn in favor of the Address to the Crown, which he proposed, he conceded the necessity of supporting the Government by some declaration before they entered the Conference. He would support the Government in using their influence to induce Russia to relinquish her claim for the retrocession of Bessarabia; also in everything relating to the free navigation of the Danube, and in obtaining liberal terms for Turkey as far as consistent with the interests of Turkey's subjects.

Mr. Cathorne Hardy, Secretary of War, pointed out that the Government were ignorant of the conditions of the armistice, and that the Russian armies had reached a point which, if the negotiations failed, might be dangerous to Europe. It was important to be prepared, because wars of late were sudden and unforeseen. The Russian basis of peace were exceedingly vague, and although the Government had been told the conditions relative to the Straits was withdrawn, it still remained. The Government's object was to secure a permanent and solid peace. Grudging £6,000,000 now might involve a future expenditure of £600,000,000. The Government had been misrepresented throughout the country and were not now going to accept an empty vote of confidence. If the vote of credit should be denied it was time for them to resign. They did not desire to lead a crippled existence. The Powers were armed to the teeth, and a single spark might light a fire threatening the best interests of the country. They asked the House to give them a vote that they might perform their part in the European concert for the benefit of the subject races and mankind.

After further discussion the debate was adjourned.

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—"The document signed at Adrianople tends to increase public distrust, and if Russia were not pledged to refer certain conditions to a Conference, public sentiment would take a more decided shape than distrust. If the terms of the protocol are deemed unsatisfactory, the Government will not hesitate to say so. The feeling to night is far from hopeful."

The New York Herald's London despatch reports the startling rumour that the invasion of Turkey by the Greeks will afford a pretext for the despatch of the English fleet to the Mediterranean, and that as soon as the Turkish fleet emerges from the Dardanelles it will be seized by the British ironclads, and be conveyed to Malta. All of England's efforts are to be primarily directed to preventing the Turkish fleet from falling into the hands of Russia as part of the war indemnity.

Colquhoun; Vice-President for Berlin, J. Stuebing; for Waterloo, J. B. Hughes; for Waterloo township, Levi Stauffer; for Woolwich, J. S. Bowman; for Wellesley, Wm. Scott. Mr. Pattullo afterwards addressed the meeting.

A FORTUNATE ESCAPE—The Buffalo Express, of yesterday, published the following paragraph under the above heading: "A few days since a young woman residing in Toronto saw an advertisement in a newspaper of that city, purporting to be from a lady in Buffalo, who wanted a young lady companion. The girl answered the advertisement and was requested to come to this city and call at a certain house on Beak st. She came here, and while inquiring her way accidentally attracted the attention of the gentleman, who advised her to go first to the Christian Home for women, corner of Eagle and Elliott streets, until she could ascertain more fully the nature of the promised situation. She did so, and has found abundant cause for thankfulness, on learning that the advertisement was part of a scheme for entrapping runaway girls into a life of infamy.

LOYAL ORANGE ASSOCIATION.—At the annual meeting of the County Lodge (South Wellington) held on Tuesday at the Orange Hall, Rockwood, the following officers were elected:—

An effort is to be made to induce the Grand Lodge to hold the annual session of 1879 at Guelph.

THE MECHANICS' LIEN ACT.—A bill, introduced by Mr. Robinson, is now before the Ontario Legislature to amend the Mechanics' Lien Act. It provides as follows: "All payments, up to ninety per centum of the price to be paid for the work, machinery or materials, as defined by section three of this Act, made in good faith by the owner to the contractor, or by the contractor to the sub-contractor, or by one sub-contractor to another sub contractor, before notice in writing by the person claiming the lien has been given to such owner, contractor or sub-contractor (as the case may be), of the claim of such person, shall operate as a discharge pro tanto of the lien created by this Act, but this section shall not apply to any payment made for the purpose of defeating or impairing a claim to a lien existing or arising under this Act." The said lien shall operate as a charge to the extent of ten per centum of the price to be paid as aforesaid by such owner, up to ten days after the completion of the work or of the delivery of the materials, and no longer, unless notice in writing be given as hereinbefore provided.

CHALMERS' CHURCH SOCIAL.—The annual business meeting of Chalmers' Church congregation was held on Tuesday afternoon, when the Session, Treasurer's and Sabbath School Reports were read, which showed the affairs of the congregation were in a very satisfactory position, and that substantial progress was made during the past year in all departments of the church's work. The same evening the annual social, given by the Elders and Managers came off, and was largely attended. After an excellent tea had been discussed, Mr. D. Guthrie, M. P., chairman of the Board of Managers, who presided, made a suitable speech, congratulating the congregation on its prosperity and on the cheering prospect before them. Speeches of a similar nature were made during the evening by the Pastor, Rev. Mr. Wardrope, Mr. Wm. Johnston, Mr. D. McIntosh and Mr. J. Innes. The choir as usual did good service during the evening, and Mr. Maitland, the efficient leader, delighted the company with some beautiful solos. Misses McIntosh and Wardrope also gave a duet, and Miss Smith a solo very nicely, and Miss Cossitt who along with Miss Stewart and Miss McIntosh, played the accompaniments, gave some instrumental solos in her usual able manner. The customary votes of thanks brought this very pleasant gathering to a close.

SOPHIE MILE'S COMPANY played "Hamlet" in the Town Hall last evening. The attendance was very good, and perfect satisfaction was manifested by the audience in the frequency of applause. Miss Miles filled the character of the Prince of Denmark with great ability. The support was very good indeed. The Company expects to play in London this evening.

THE Mechanics' Assembly will be held in the Town Hall this evening. Vale's quadrille band in attendance.

CURLING.—At a game of curling at Fergus on Tuesday, the curlers of that village beat Lucknow by eleven shots.

IMMENSE crowd of farmers and others doing business in town to-day. Certain streets in the neighborhood of hotels have been jammed with vehicles. Merchants busy and happy.

THE question of passing a Bill in the Local Legislature, granting permission to the Town of Guelph to convert the old burying ground into a public park, will come for consideration in Committee on Thursday, when both the Town and Township of Guelph, interested municipalities, will be represented.

CUSTOMS DUTIES.—The following is a statement of the amount of customs duties collected at this port during the month of January 1878, contrasted with the corresponding month of the previous year:—January, 1878, $5,788.63; January, 1877, $4,290.83. Increase, $1,497 80.

ST PATRICK'S SOCIETY ENTERTAINMENT.—This entertainment, to be held in the Caledonian Hall this evening promises to be a grand success. All arrangements are completed, and an enjoyable time may be expected. Among those who will take part are the following: Miss Jones, Mrs. Dr. Harkin, Miss Geddes, Mr. Kennedy, of Brantford, Mr. Waddell, and Mr. Hyde. Go early if you wish to secure a good seat.

THE GALT PRESENTATION.—Mr. A. H. Blackeby, secretary of the Committee of the Sir John Macdonald presentation in Galt, sends us a letter in which he says:—"From enquiries which I have recently made I have recently made I have reason to believe that the report which is now going the rounds of a part of the Ministerial press, to the effect that the oil painting recently presented to Lady Macdonald was not purchased by the working men of Galt, originated in your columns, I therefore request that you will publish the subjoined list of names for the purpose of allowing the public to judge for themselves who were the real purchasers of the painting in question." Then follows a list of 112 names, with the subscription attached to each, in sums ranging from $1 to 25 cents. We do not see that it is necessary to cumber our columns with these names and subscriptions, as we suppose the public will believe Mr. Blackeby when he states there were that number of workingmen on the subscription list.

WORSWICK ENGINE CO.—The annual meeting was held in the Company's offices on Tuesday evening. A large number of shareholders were present. The Directors in presenting their first annual report had pleasure in informing the shareholders that the amount of business done during the past year had been satisfactory, and recommended that a dividend at the rate of eight per cent. per annum be paid upon the paid up capital of the Company. A financial statement was submitted which was in every way satisfactory, a large reserve being carried forward after paying this dividend. Election of officers resulted in John M. Bond, A. B. Petrie, Thos. Worswick, Wm. Bell, and Geo. Hadden being elected. A vote of thanks was passed to the officers for past service.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY.—The usual monthly meeting of the members of this Society will be held in their rooms, Bank of Commerce Block, to-morrow (Thursday) evening, at seven o'clock. All members should be on hand, as business of importance regarding the welfare of the Society will be transacted. Mr. J. E. Peli, Secretary of the Toronto Society, and Mr. Roach, President of Hamilton Society, will be in attendance for the object of making arrangements to be carried out at the next British North American Convention, which will be held in Guelph. At eight o'clock a musical and literary entertainment will be given in the rooms. Among others who will take part are Miss Geddes, the Misses Stevenson, Miss Grey, Miss Masters, Mr. Philp, Harris Brothers, W. Wheatly, sr., W. Newby, A. Schofield, F. Howard, Alfred Burrows, B. Stockwell, J. W. Colson, and H. W. Galbraith. The public in general is cordially invited to be present. Considering the small charge for admission, and the array of talent, there is every reason to believe there will be a large gathering.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. PATRICK'S SOCIETY.—The twelfth annual meeting of the Guelph St. Patrick's Benevolent Society was held at the Albion Hotel, on Tuesday evening. The attendance was large, and the interest manifested by all indicated that the Society had some very zealous members. The President, Mr. J. M. Bond, occupied the chair. On account of the absence from town of Mr. W. S. Hefferman, Secretary, the annual report was not presented. It will be read at the next meeting of the Society. The Treasurer, Mr. James Hazelton, reported that during the past year excellent work had been done by the Society in relieving the poor, and at the present time there was a balance to their credit. The election of officers was next proceeded with. The following is the result: President, Dr. Nunan; first Vice-President, Mr. J. C. Chadwick; second Vice-President, Mr. W. S. Hefferman; Treasurer, Mr. James Hazelton; Secretary, Mr. Jas. Wiley; Collector, Mr. E. Grange. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the retiring President. Messrs. T. Purcell, — Thompson, and Henry Grinlinton were admitted as members. It was resolved to hold the annual celebration on Monday, 4th of March, and the following members, with the officers of the Society, were appointed to make arrangements for holding a grand ball and supper on that date: Col. Higinbotham, M.P., Messrs. J. W. Hall, J. M. Bond, F. J. Chadwick, F. Gauhan, John L. Murphy, Frank Sweetnam, Wm. Standish, Geo. Grange, John Rice, M. J. Doran, John Hyde. The meeting afterwards adjourned.

Mr. Guthrie, M.P., at Killean.

An Enthusiastic Meeting of Electors.

A large and influential meeting of the electors of the South Riding of Wellington, took place at Killean school house on the evening of the 30th inst., for the purpose of hearing Mr. D. Guthrie, the member representing the Riding in the House of Commons, who, as had been previously announced, was to address them on the political questions of the day.

Mr. Angus McKellar being unanimously elected to preside, stated that the presence of so many on the occasion, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, and the bad state of the roads, was an evidence that they were alive to the interests involved in the political questions which agitate the public mind at the present time, and that he was glad to see their member, Mr. Guthrie, present for the purpose of addressing them.

He then called upon Mr. Guthrie, who was cheered as he ascended the platform.

When silence was restored,

Mr. Guthrie observed that he was present on this occasion in fulfilment of a promise made to his friends some time ago, in answer to a numerously signed requisition from the electors of that part of the Riding, desiring him to address them. After referring in complimentary terms to their late member, Mr. Stirton, and the difficulty of filling the place of successor to a gentleman of his great Parliamentary experience, Mr. Guthrie proceeded to discuss many of the important questions which had come before Parliament during the past session. A supreme one was confidence or non-confidence in the Administration; and he remarked that close observation of the gentlemen comprising the Government had confirmed his previous good opinion of them, and satisfied him that in point of personal character, administrative and legislative ability and debating power, they compared favorably with, nay, were superior to, the Conservative leader and his followers. It was true, attempts, not disinterested, had been made by their opponents to lead the people to believe that Mr. Mackenzie and his colleagues were as corrupt as Sir John had been proved to be, and were not nearly so fit to act the part of Statesmen, but despite these attempts, it would be found by every one disposed to judge fairly, that their administration of affairs had been honest, able, and patriotic. He then took up the questions of the budget, showing how the deficit had probably arisen. It was doubtless largely owing to the fact that the people were not able, during the hard times, to purchase dutiable goods to the same extent as formerly; perhaps also it was because in some articles the present tariff was so high as to be almost prohibitory. If importations were checked, the revenue from customs must suffer. The duties from customs had in a short period fallen about two millions of dollars—from something over fifteen millions to a little over thirteen millions. Sir John Macdonald, taking advantage of the natural despondency of men when trade is dull, had been endeavoring to persuade them that he would bring in a high protective tariff if he was in power, and that everybody would become rich by raising their taxes. He had taken good care, however, and so had the Conservative Convention in Toronto the other day, not to commit themselves to an increase of duties. He and his Convention conveniently left themselves a loop-hole—they advocated "an adjustment," which may mean a lowering as much as a raising of the tariff. Not only was Sir John not a protectionist in theory, but he had never been one in practice. He knew well, although he pretended differently, that were he to return to power to-morrow, he could make no material change in the tariff, unless demanded by necessities of the revenue. Mr. Guthrie then pointed out some of the dangers of a high protective tariff—showed by the example of the United States, so often held up for our admiration by our opponents, that trade was quite as much depressed there as in Canada—indeed more so,—that the exports to all countries of manufactured goods from the United States in 1860, under a revenue tariff like ours now, were much greater in proportion to their population than their exports in 1876 under a high tariff, and that their farmers got better returns for their produce in the years when the tariff was low than when it was high. He advocated caution in considering the question of a retaliating policy against the Americans, now mildly termed by the Conservatives by the taking name of a reciprocity tariff, pointing out that Sir John and his friends first took up this cry, professedly as the best means of bringing the Yankees to their senses in the matter of reciprocity, but now the Mail does not want reciprocity in trade at all, but reciprocity in tariff, or non-intercourse. Mr. Guthrie then referred to several of the principal Acts passed last session, and explained at length the result of the Secret Service and Northern Railway investigations. He pointed out in regard to the latter, that it resulted in a practical public benefit, in getting back for the country $37,000 in cash, wrongfully expended in elections, testimonial to Sir John, &c. He also showed the nature of the charges against Speaker Anglin and others said to have broken the Independence of Parliament Act, and explained the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the Speaker's case. After alluding to the unfair tactics which had been pursued by the Opposition, whose desire was by all and every means to weaken the confidence of the people in Mr. Mackenzie's Government, solely in order that Sir John and his friends might regain power, he asked those present not to be led away by specious cries and plausible phrases, but to believe, as the fact undeniably was, that the men at the head of our Government were honestly desirous of serving their country well, and of administering its affairs in the best interests of the whole people.

Mr. Guthrie spoke for over an hour and a half and concluded amid storms of applause which lasted for some time, when the following resolution was put and carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. Donald Ferguson, seconded by Mr. John Scott, that this meeting desires to express their continued confidence in Mr. D. Guthrie, as our representative in Parliament, and fully endorse his conduct in the consistant and hearty support given by him to the Government of the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie.

Mr. J. P. MacMillan was then called upon to address the meeting. On rising he congratulated the previous speaker upon the very able and instructive address which he had just delivered, remarking that he had made himself thoroughly master of the political questions about which there is so much agitation. He believed that so long as Mr. Mackenzie and his colleages continued to perform their duties as they were doing, there was little danger of Sir John being again restored to power, and he questioned after the scandal which had been proven against these gentlemen in relation to the Pacific Railway Charter, and other matters, if the day would come that the people of Canada would repose confidence in him again.

Mr. Howard, Mayor of Guelph, being then called, remarked that after the very able and exhaustive address of their representative, Mr. Guthrie, there was much left for him to say on the occasion. He had entire confidence in the Mackenzie Government, and would continue to have so long as they were honestly administering the affairs of the country. He believed every member of the Government to be actuated by a proper spirit; that collectively and individually they aimed at justice and truth, and in the hands of such men the honor and integrity of the Dominion were perfectly safe.

Mr. R. Melvin having being called, remarked that he did not come prepared to make a speech, that he merely came to accompany their representative, Mr. Guthrie, that he fully endorsed all the gentleman had said respecting the policy of the Government on the tariff and other questions. He said the Opposition were endeavoring to make it appear that the cause of the prevailing stagnation in trade was due to the policy of the Mackenzie Government. For his own part he had been considering for some time past what was the real cause of the hard times, and came at last to the conclusion that it arose from a premative growth of many of our towns and villages. In comparing their dimensions now with what they were fifteen or twenty years ago, it would be found they, in many cases, increased double while the country did not progress in a similar proportion. He argued that to maintain a healthy state of business into towns and villages, it would be necessary that the country surrounding would keep pace in both wealth and improvement, which was not the case. Most all our enterprises, in a great measure, depended upon the success of those engaged in agricultural pursuits, and when anything arose that was calculated to retard that interest the effect was seriously felt by all others. He was glad to see so many of the electors present, and he had doubt, from what they had learned from Mr. Guthrie, their member, on the occasion, they would be all satisfied, notwithstanding the bad state of the roads and the distance many of them had to travel, that they had attended the meeting.

After tendering thanks to Mr. McKellar for the able and impartial manner in which he had discharged his duties as chairman, and giving three cheers for the Queen, a most friendly and interesting meeting of the electors came to a close.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TORONTO, Feb. 5.

Hon. Mr. Crooks, in moving the item for Departmental examinations, explained to the House his reasons for recommending the appointment of a commissioner to investigate the charges against the Central Committee. In so doing he stated his entire concurrence in the finding of Mr. Justice Patterson, and paid a high tribute to the efficiency of Dr. McLellan and Mr. Kirkland, the persons charged with collusion. He called attention to the fact that the "ring" charge was withdrawn as unproved, and stated that his efforts had been directed to removing any cause that might tend to develope a feeling of jealousy between the High and Normal Schools.

Mr. Cameron maintained that the evidence adduced did prove collusion, and that Dr. McLellan should be removed from his present position.

The remaining education items were then passed amidst a running fire of questions from members and explanations from the Minister of Education, after which the House adjourned.

February Cattle Fair.

The Fair held to-day (Wednesday) was a very large one, several hundred head of cattle were on the grounds. Buyers were numerous enough, but were not anxious to purchase unless extra bargains could be obtained. In fact the cattle market at the present time is in a very flattened condition, and it is unsafe to risk more than $3 or $3 50 per cwt. for prime cattle. Only in a few instances was $4 paid. Milch cows were not in very active demand, and ranged in price from $20 to $35. In several instances, when farmers could not get the price they thought they should receive, they drove their animals home again rather than sell. While many were magnificent specimens of fat cattle, fit for the show yard, others were the veriest scrubs. The present fair is quite equal to the usual February Fairs, in so far as the number of animals is concerned. A few of the sales made are as follows, which gives a good idea to the reader as to how prices ruled:—George Simpson, 2 head at $3.65; Robert Jestin, 13 head, 1 at $3.50 and 12 at $3, and $1 a head extra; Wm. Sunter, 4 head at $3; S. & A. Tolton, heifer at $3.50; W Swanston, 4 head for $180; Wm. Taylor, 2 heifers for $54; Thomas Broadfoot, 2 heifers for $50; W. Patton, steer at $3.50; W. Mackings, steer for $36; Wm. Sloan, 2 cows, $30 and $35; Wm. Roberts, yoke of oxen at $3; R. W. Morton, 3 head for $137 50; Henry Tovel, bull for $31; S. Tovel, heifer at $4; J Royce, 5 head for $175; D. Stewart, 2 steers for $62; J. McFarlane, steer for $25; Wm. Whitelaw, 2 cows for $76; Jas. Heffernan, cow for $20; Wm. Murray, cow for $40; John Currie, bull for $60; A. Wilson, bull for $34; Hector Parker, 2 steers at $3; Geo. Torrance, 3 head for $85; R. Root, 3 steers at $3; W. Renwick, 3 head for $105; John Porter, bull for $25; James Taylor, milch cow for $45; Alex. Carroll, 2 head for $55; Wm. Thompson, cow for $45; Wm McKay, 2 steers for $71; Parson & Harvey, yoke of oxen and 2 cows for $220; D. Munro, steer for $25; W. Patterson, 2 cows for $70; John Hales, 2 heifers for $65; G. Moore, 2 head at $3 37½, John Crocker, 2 steers for $70; Alex. Rae, 5 head for $163; John Allan, 3 head for $78; Jas. Taylor, heifer for $27; Robert Macklin, 4 head for $110; Stephen Lauher, 5 head for $146; Wm. Haines, yoke of oxen at $3.75; W. Powers, bull for $43; John Hill, 2 head for $86; A. Watson 3 head for $127; J. Jessop, 3 head for $124; Chas. McMillan, cow for $29; Isaac Rice, 5 head for $175; Geo. Amos, cow for $38; Walter West purchased 31 head, averaging $34 per head.

OBSEQUIES OF THE LATE DR. MCGREGOR.—On Tuesday afternoon the mortal remains of the late Dr. McGregor were buried in the Union Cemetery. The deceased had been a very prominent member of the Independent Order of Oddfellows in this town, and also of the Wellington Encampment, and his burial was conducted with the honors of the Order. Members of Reliance and Progress Lodges and the Camp met at their rooms at two o'clock, and after donning their regalia, and crape and evergreen, proceeded in a body to the late residence of the deceased on Woolwich street, marshalled by Bro. H. H. Maddock, P. G., and headed by Lawrence's cornet band. Services were conducted at the house by Revs. Messrs. Ryckman and Brock. Afterwards the procession was again formed. The cortege was a very large and most imposing one, and indicated in silent language the very high esteem in which the deceased was held. There were over two hundred Oddfellows in attendance, and they followed the hearse, and mourners in inverted order. There was also a long line of friends and acquaintances of deceased in vehicles. The march to the grave was made to the solemn strains of the band playing the "Dead March in Saul." The pall-bearers—all members of the Camp, were Messrs. Wm. Sunley, J. B. Clyne, W. Parker, J. H. Leadley, E. Bardwell, and Chas. Cottis. Arriving at the grave service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Ryckman, and the very impressive burial service of the Order by Bro. John Dietz, Chaplain of Reliance Lodge, and the brethren each cast a sprig of evergreen in the grave as a token that deceased's memory would ever be green in their hearts. The last sad rites over, the brethren marched back, the band playing as they passed the late residence of the deceased "We shall meet on the beautiful shore."

A Telegraph's Paris special says there is some confirmation of the rumor that Russia is negotiating for the surrender of the whole Turkish fleet.

A Vienna correspondent telegraphs:—No attempt is made in St. Petersburg to remove the suspicion that the Russian Commander in Roumelia deliberately procrastinated the negotiations in order to take the greatest possible advantage of the military situation.

A Paris correspondent hears from three reliable quarters that one of the terms of the definitive peace is the cession of a naval station in the Sea of Marmora to Russia.

Italy and France have accepted Austria's invitation to a Conference.

The Turkish Minister has designated the action of the Greek Government as a declaration of war. He telegraphed to Constantinople for men of war to convey him hence, in consequence of which the Turkish fleet under Hobart Pasha has arrived. The Greek Government is in consternation, and intends appealing to the intervention of the guaranteeing Powers. A great panic prevails.

An Athens correspondent reports that Turkish ironclads and transports have been ordered to convey from 8,000 to 10,000 troops to the Gulf of Volo to oppose the Thessalonian insurrection and endeavor to cut off the retreat of the Greek army. The insurrection, however, is gaining ground, and the Greeks are advancing. The Greek Government has resolved not to stop the progress of the troops, unless the Great Powers promise to maintain order in the Hellenic Provinces, and secure the rights of the Provinces at the Conference.

LONDON, Feb. 5.

In the House of Commons to-night the debate on the supplementary vote was continued.

Sir Charles Dilke, Radical, declared that the strongest objection to the vote was that it would be misrepresented abroad.

Sir Hardinge Gifford, Solicitor General, said he was astonished at the moderation of the Opposition after their violent agitation in the country. He protested against being driven to accept Russia's pretentions that she was the only Power which would act on behalf of the oppressed nationalities, and enfranchise other States while maintaining despotism at home.

The debate was adjourned till Thursday.

In the House of Lords to-night Lord Derby stated that he had tolerable confidence that England would not find herself in an isolated position at the Conference. He also said the transfer of Crete to Greece would be invalid unless sanctioned by the Powers. Great excitement existed in Crete but so far there had been no violence.

The Reform Convention.

We give in another column a condensed report of the proceedings of the Reform Convention, which met at Toronto on Tuesday. It was the largest and most enthusiastic Reform gathering ever held in this Province, and its work cannot but have a wide spread effect in favor of Reform principles in this Province.

Centre Wellington.

The Mail and the Guelph Herald are indulging in mutual congratulations over the nomination of Dr. Orton as the Tory candidate for the Centre Riding, at the meeting held in Fergus on Saturday last. We don't see what necessity there is for all this jubilation, for everybody understood months ago that Dr. Orton was in the field, and had they been so inclined, all the Tory organizations in Centre Wellington would have been powerless to prevent the irrepressible Doctor from running again. In fact he is a good deal like George A. Drew in North Wellington. He runs the Tory machine to suit himself, and the faithful have to fall into line at his bidding, and make what nominations he chooses. Dr. Orton, of course, like the coy maiden, accepted the nomination with simulated reluctance, though he had made his mind up months ago to run whether the Tories were pleased or not, but then he considers it is always best to appear to follow while he actually leads. With that native modesty with which he if so largely endowed he disclaimed any right to the position, would have preferred to see some one else selected, and in putting aside his own wishes and interests wanted the people to believe that he was sacrificing his own interests for the benefit of his own party. There is no doubt that Dr. Orton is a great patriot—on the surface—but when we probe these matters to the bottom we find that he is the anxious seeker for office, and that he was bound to run again whether the Tories in the Riding were pleased or not.

He has thus tied them to his chariot wheels, and they have made a virtue of necessity in accepting him as their candidate. In due time he will find an opponent, who will knock his protection theories on the head, and who will teach him that, though he has been persistently canvassing the Riding for the past four years, he is not the idol of the people that he believes himself to be.

HON. PETER MITCHELL was on Tuesday returned by acclamation for Northumberland County, New Brunswick.

THE latest mare's nest discovered by the Opposition is that Hon. Mr. Anglin is not eligible for election as Speaker, on the ground that by English practice it is necessary that every new member must be introduced to the Speaker, and that there being no Speaker it will be necessary to appoint some one to that office before Mr. Anglin can be introduced. This is found to be entirely contrary to Canadian practice, as members are not sworn in by the Speaker but by the Clerk of the House, and that therefore Mr. Anglin's resignation does not affect the case. In the second session of the present Parliament a resolution of the House established the precedent that a member having been unseated and reelected did not require to undergo the formality of being presented to the Speaker to take his seat in the House, and some forty members have now taken their seats.

A FLAT contradiction has been given to the report that Mr. Burpee has resigned his seat in the Government.

Puslinch Council.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment, on Monday, February 4th, at ten o'clock a.m. The members were all present, the Reeve in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and sustained.

On motion of Mr. Nicoll, seconded by Mr. McFarlane, a By-law was introduced and read a first and second time, to divide the municipal roads into statute labor divisions, consecutively numbered and defined, that in due course an overseer may be appointed for each division to superintend and apply the statute labor as directed by law. The Council ordered the clerk to procure a copy of the By-law for publication and distribution among overseers before the next regular meeting of the Council, at which meeting the By-law will be read a third time and passed.

Mr. Peter Gilchrist applied to the Council for the remission of one dollar, dog tax, erroneously assessed against him. His request was granted.

On motion of Mr. Iles, seconded by Mr. Sorahan, a By-law for the appointment of certain township officers was introduced and read a first time, and on motion for second reading the Council went into committee of the whole, Mr. Nicoll in the chair. The blanks in the By-law were filled in as follows:—For Township Treasurer, Samuel Falconbridge, salary $80; Township Clerk, James McLean, salary $125; Township Assessor, James Scott, salary $105; Township Collector, John Smith, salary $70; Township hall keeper, Malcolm McBean, salary $12. The committee rose and reported and the By-law was read a third time and passed.

The Reeve read a communication from Messrs. Acton Burrows & Co., proprietors of Guelph Herald, stating that they would esteem it a favor to bring the question of municipal printing for 1878 before the Council, as here tofore they had not received any of the township work; and expressing a hope that in the future they might receive a fair share of it, which they would be happy to execute at reasonable rates, and in a manner, which could not fail to give satisfaction. No action taken.

The auditors presented their report, which was read, and on motion of Mr. McFarlane, seconded by Mr. Nicoll, adopted, and ordered to be engrossed and published.

The Council then adjourned to meet again on Monday, March 25th, at ten o'clock, a.m.

Great Reform Convention in Toronto.

The largest Reform Convention ever held in Ontario assembled on Tuesday at Shaftesbury Hall, in Toronto, at 2 p.m. The attendance was over 600, and included a large number of members of the Dominion Parliament and Ontario Legislature, together with delegates from the various local Reform Associations throughout the Province. The evening session of the Convention was still more numerously attended; there were between 800 and 900 members present by actual enumeration, the admission being by ticket. Mr. James Young, M.P., for South Waterloo, presided, and opened the proceedings with an appropriate speech. Committees were formed on resolutions, etc.

The evening meeting was devoted principally to the adoption of resolutions, and listening to addresses from a number of the prominent members of the party. The first resolution, which was moved by T. Oliver, M.P., and seconded by W. Patterson, M.P., was as follows :

"That at this, the first general gathering of the Reformers of Ontario since Confederation, we would heartily congratulate the country that the Union of the Provinces, for which the Reform Party so long contended, has been crowned with such signal success. And that after ten years experience of this Union we are, if possible, more strongly convinced than ever that our Constitution, which draws the line between local and federal jurisdiction, is well calculated to preserve intact Provincial rights, and at the same time to confer upon our Dominion that national importance and dignity to which it is entitled by its great resources and material prosperity."

Col. Walker, of London, then read the report of the Committee on Organization and Statistics, which was received and held over for consideration till this morning. The second resolution, which was moved by David Glass, Q. C., of London, and seconded by Mr. Harty, Kingston, was as follows :

"That this meeting records its sense of the admirable manner in which the high duties imposed upon them have been discharged by the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie and his colleagues in the Dominion Government; of the prudence combined with boldness and vigor with which they have sought to advance the material interests of the Dominion; of the economy and care that have marked their management of the finance of the country; of the justice and liberality which have characterized their administration in relation to all sections of the community; of the wise and practical legislation that has been effected under their auspices; of the high honor and integrity that have distinguished their conduct; and of their successful and complete vindication of their actions and policy in face of a bitter and unscrupulous Opposition. And this meeting, while congratulating them on their past record, pledges the earnest and continued support of the Reform party of Ontario to those of whom it has so good reason to be proud as leaders."

G. W. Ross, M. P., moved, and W. Lount, ex-M. P. P., of Barrie, seconded, the third resolution, on which the chairman made a few remarks respecting the expenditure of 1876-77, before putting it to the meeting. The following is the resolution :—

"That this meeting, in congratulating their leaders on the success achieved, is the more impressed with the results of their efforts from the contrast they present to the condition of affairs on their assumption of office—to an ever growing expenditure; to obligations contracted with a reckless disregard for the resources of the country; to the subordination of the public interest to personal and party purposes, culminating in an act of flagrant and shameless corruption, calculated by its effects to disgrace and humiliate Canada in the eyes of the world, and generally to impair the national credit."

The fourth resolution was moved by H. M. Deroche, M. P. P., seconded by Dr. Sweetland, of Ottawa, and supported by G. Clatworthy and Ald. Hughes, of Toronto; it is as follows :—

"That we hereby express our high appreciation of the legislative, financial, and administrative record of the Reform Governments of Ontario for the past six years.

"That we have seen in this period Parliamentary authority over the public expenditure re-established and vindicated; the liberties of the subject broadened by the extension of the franchise; a more direct control given to the people through their responsible representatives over educational affairs, important judicial and legal reforms, social legislation of a most useful and beneficent nature, the readjustment of municipal indebtedness on a just and liberal basis, encouragement of public enterprises, the settlements of large tracts of territory by an industrious population, and an administration of affairs both firm and vigorous tending to advance in every respect the peace and contentment of the people. That to the Hon. Oliver Mowat and his colleagues we extend the fullest assurance of our confidence and regard, and the expression of our determination that nothing on our own part shall be wanting to encourage and sustain them in the discharge of their high and important duties."

The following is the fifth and last resolution, which was moved by D. D. Hay, M. P. P., and seconded by Dr. Widdifield, M. P. P. :—

"That the thanks of this meeting are due and are hereby tendered to the Reform press, not only of Ontario but the other Provinces of the Dominion, for its manly and vigorous advocacy of the principles of the great Liberal party, and for the very decided manner in which it has repudiated as a stain upon our national honor, every act by which the tone of political morality could be lowered, or the free institutions of the country endangered or impaired; and we desire to express our cordial sympathy with all workers in the Liberal cause throughout the Dominion.

An interesting letter was read from the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie, which we cannot find room for, but to which we will refer again.

The meeting at a late hour adjourned till this morning.

All these resolutions were carried unanimously and enthusiastically, after which addresses were delivered by the Hon. Oliver Mowat, the Hon. George Brown, and Joseph Rymal, M.P.

Harriston Correspondence.

The cattle fair on Friday last was a great improvement on the preceding ones for sometime. There was a large number of cattle brought for which there was a very fair demand which may in a measure be accounted for by their being in better condition. In consequence of this there was many sales. As is always the case a number of cattle were driven home unsold, the prices not fulfilling the anticipation of their owners. The following are as many of the sales as your correspondent could gather, which only represents a few of the sales made :—John Johnston, 3 bes t, $76; Jas. Johnson, 2 head, $34; Ezra Dowling, 2 head, $55.50; Hector McLean, 3 best, $160; Angus McEachren, 1 steer, $23; R. Lepington, 1 steer, $30; Samuel Pike, 1 cow, $26; James Brown, 1 cow, $26; James Lang, 1 year old bull, $25; James Scott, 1 cow, $20

The dedication of Guthrie Church is on Sabbath, 10th inst. The diets of worship arranged are as follows : Rev. Professor McLaren of Knox College, Toronto, will preach at 11 a. m., and 7 p.m.; Rev. Mr Ratkie, there, esteemed pastor of the church, will preach at 3 o'clock p.m. Tea will be served in the basement from 5.30 to 8 p.m., on Monday, the 11th inst., after which an adjournment will be made to the church for the intellectual part. The pastor and people have been very zealous in their endeavors to make it a success, and have secured talent both for speaking and singing. The Yule family, who distinguished themselves so brilliantly as vocalists at the social a few weeks ago, will again be present on this occasions and as their assistance has ever been an acquisition to those gatherings it cannot have other than a very desirable effect.

The skating rink has been well patronized this week, and some fine skating has been done. A number had to try their plentiful hands at it, and in so doing have in many cases been brought rather suddenly in contact with the crystallized substance. It does not seem apparent that owing to the short distance they had to fall that it would injure them but judging from the manner in which they took it the sudden stoppage must have had a very undesirable effect.

The annual curling match for the medal took place on the rink on Saturday last, for which there was about eighteen competitors. After a well contested match it was won by Walter Moore, by a score of nine John Frain was the next highest, scoring eight.

The Harriston Browns base ball club will hold their first meeting of the season at the Royal Hotel, on Thursday evening the 14th inst., for the election of officers and transaction of other business preparatory to the coming season.

A number of visitors from Minto, Clifford, and Harriston assembled at the residence of Robert and William Scott on the 12th Con., on the evening of the 31st ult. After the usual interchange of jokes which gives a geniality to such gatherings, tripping the light fantastic was begun and kept up in a lively manner away into the wee sma' hours when a separation was made for home.

The annual meeting of the Harriston Branch Bible Society was held in the basement of Guthrie church on Wednesday evening of last week. Unfortunately, as is generally the case, the attendance was not commensurate with the importance of the meeting. The chair was occupied by the Rev. John Bilkie, pastor of the church. The Rev. Mr. Short, agent for the Society, gave quite a lengthy address pointing out the object of the Society, what they were doing, and in a lucid manner stated the assistance they yet required to send the Gospel to those places where it was unknown. Rev. Mr. Gundey then followed with a short address in which he pointed out the importance of the Society, after which the meeting was closed by singing and pronouncing the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Gundey.

Harriston—Messrs. Campbell, Thompson, Millar, Lavin, and Frain, skip.

Palmerston—McDowell, McLan, Montgomery, Colton, and Moore skip on the other.

The return match will be played at Harriston on Tuesday next. The Palmerston men acted in such a manner that won the respect of their Harriston friends. After the match was over they entertained the Harriston men to an oyster supper at the Johnston House which was served up in good style and heartily relished by the boys.

Furious Driving.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—The present spell of sleighing—welcome and beneficial as it is—does not appear to be an unmixed good, at least, in town. Among other results it has a wonderful tendency to develope among horsedealers and others keeping fast horses a disposition for furious and unlawful driving. No doubt their main object is to exhibit themselves and their fine steeds, rather than endanger the lives or even or even interfere with the pleasure of pedestrians, but their devotion to this particular pastime does occasionally interfere very materially with the safety of others who may not possess a fast horse or any horse at all.

An instance of this kind occurred this afternoon whereby a person crossing the street came near being knocked down by one of these Jehu's, a gentleman occupying a seat at the new Council Board. It would be well that the By-law bearing upon this matter be rigidly enforced upon Councillors and commoners alike, without fear or favor.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XII.

EVENING VISITORS TO THE OFFICE OF WALTER ADAMSON, ADVOCATE, HUNTER ROW.

"And, by heaven, he must fork out to Gillespie, too," said Skeat, fiercely. "We have all staked too much to lose that game, and now that Sir Philip's death brings him into the estate, which but for us he would never have had, I'll urge Gillespie to suck him at once. The Baronet hasn't slipped off a moment too soon for the gauger, or myself either for that part of it. We both need money cruelly, especially Gillespie, who spends more than ever. His spies are worse than leeches, and for all he pays them smuggling is on the increase. We manage to make small seizures occasionally, but several large convoys have escaped us of late, and the intelligence has set the gauger nearly frantic. Do you know he suspects, and so do I, that Harold Logan is the master spirit in these daring enterprises."

"Shouldn't wonder a bit," responded Ironby. "It's well known he is hiding among the hills, and he'll take to smuggling both for profit and as a way of revenging himself on Gillespie for the false declaration."

"I hope it is as we suspect," observed Skeat, "for nothing will rouse Gillespie's spirit so much as to find that Harold is circumventing him. Nothing will serve so much to lessen his remorse and enrage him into activity."

"Hush! Good heaven's what's that?" whispered Ironby, growing suddenly pale as a creaking sound without came to their ears.

"So it is. Who on earth can be coming here at this time of night?"

A light noise at the front door caused the young man to bound to his feet in dismay.

"By all the fiends, it is Adamson himself!" he whispered.

"He must not see me," said Skeat, drawing on his cap, and snatching his coat from its place on the shutter.

"You haven't time for that," he gasped. "You'll only meet him in the lobby. There—he is there now."

The opening of the front door and the stamping of feet in the passage proclaimed the truth of Ironby's statement—should Skeat emerge from the room it would simply be to confront the lawyer.

"What's to be done?" he whispered, with a hurried look around the room. "Can't I hide somewhere?"

"That closet," said Ironby. "In you go. Quick! quick!"

Skeat sprang into the closet, and the clerk had but time to turn the key and seat himself at the table with the aspect of one diligently at work when the door of the room opened and an elderly man appeared panting and blowing.

"Bless me, what a night," he said. "I declare that wind has quite taken the breath out of me. And for the sleet, it has gane doon my neck, filled my ears, and ditted up my een. Hilloa, Tom, what's the matter? Yer as white as the wall, and look as scared as if auld clootie had presented himsel' before ye."

"I—I am amazed, sir, to see you out in such a night!" stammered Ironby, "Surely something very urgent has brought you!"

"Ye may safely infer that, Tom. I'm ower cautious a man to exchange slippers for boots and my coosy chair by the fire, not to speak o' the hot pint at my elbow, for the pitiless pelting of such a tempest, without good and sufficient reason! Ye ken me weel enough, Tom, to make affidavit to that effect."

"Nothing wrong, sir, I hope?" faltered Ironby, whose utmost efforts were barely sufficient to master his agitation.

"Ay, wrong, and past mending, I fear. I have just been advised by this evening's post of the death of Sir Philip Logan, and it behooves me not to loose any time in looking over the copies of certain papers, which I was sae prudent to take at the time when I handed the factorship over to McGarray."

"Ah, indeed, sir. Is poor Sir Philip dead?" remarked Ironby, in a hypocritical tone of ignorance.

"So it seems. His demise took place at a late hour last night; and from what I know and have heard, it will be a blessed release for HIM, as weel as a magnificent wind-fa' to her scheming Leddyship, who will now have all the day her own—thanks to the ill daein's o' that headstrong and misguided laddie, Harold."

Mr. Adamson pronounced the last words in a tone of considerable irritation, at the same time giving a vicious shake to the greatcoat of which he had just disencumbered himself, as if he had it in his heart to treat similarly the delinquent youth whose name he had uttered. To be sure, the garment had still a quantity of snowflakes adhering to it, and required a shake; but between his manner of doing it and the tone in which the lawyer had spoken there was a very apparent connection, and those who knew Walter Adamson would not have failed to understand it so.

He was at that time one of the best known and most highly respected advocates in Aberdeen. Strangers at first meeting him were repelled by his rugged, seamed face and gruff manner, but a very short acquaintance proved to them that he was anything but a harsh or forbidding man. Once let them hear his pleasant, musical laugh, and have a little experience of his warm, sympathetic heart, and they came to appreciate him truly and highly, and to trust him with implicit confidence. He was a shrewd, sharp sighted man, and so remarkable for honour and integrity that no one in search of legal aid who had not a straightforward case to prosecute or defend ever thought of going to him for advice.

For many years he was the law agent of Sir Philip Logan and factor for Mount Cairn, and the Baronet, knowing his worth, treated him as a friend rather than an employer. Nor was this a matter of regret to Sir Philip or any one else, for the influence he exercised over the vacillating Baronet was wholly good. He united with the first Lady Logan to supplement the weak will of Sir Philip by wise, judicious counsel, which the latter never failed to heed.

But when her second Ladyship came into power the relation between Sir Philip and Mr Adamson quickly began to change.

The designing woman soon saw that, so long as this upright, incorruptible factor remained in his place, her plans could not be prosecuted. She therefore set to work to effect his dismissal, and though it took her a considerable time to succeed, her ascendancy over her husband finally grew strong enough to accomplish it, and Sir Philip, though not without tears, parted with his staunch agent, the factorship being given to an advocate of a very different stamp—Jabez M'Garray, a cunning and unscrupulous man, who would do just as her Ladyship wished, and who was shrewed enough to see that his interest lay in seconding all her plans.

At times he was inclined to cherish this indignation against Sir Philip for manifesting such a weak, yielding nature, but knowing that it was really a constitutional defect, he reflected that the Baronet was more an object of pity than of anger.

He was henceforth a stranger at Mount Cairn, and seldom saw Sir Philip, but he managed to keep himself pretty well informed of what went forward there. He knew the kind of discipline to which Harold was being subjected, also that the wild adventurous nature of the boy was not crushed under it, but was, on the contrary, more vigorously developed. He would have done him service if he could,

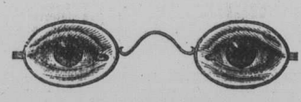
During that time we will fulfill to a demonstration all that we promise, namely, to sell all and every article we have in stock at the actual cost price of it.



We confidently refer back to our past Clearing Sales, and promise in this sale, as in all former ones, to keep faith with the public. When we advertise a Clearing Sale at cost price, we keep our word, and no matter at what loss or sacrifice it may be to us, we bind ourselves NOT TO DISAPPOINT OR DECEIVE THE PUBLIC, OUR FRIENDS OR CUSTOMERS. We ask, feeling confident of a hearty response, that all intending buyers of Fancy or Staple Doods, will advise themselves of this opportunity of supplying their requirements at a saving of 20 per cent. We ask an inspection of our goods, and the promise we make of actual cost prices; we will agree to pay expenses of a visit to our establishment if all that we here state does not turn out to be sound in every particular, Our Mr. Hogg, senior, leaves in a few days for the British Markets for spring Goods, and a clearance of present stock must be effected. People of the Town of Guelph and County of Wellington you have had a trial of the Wonderful Man for over 25 years. He has worked faithfully for your interests during all that time, and he is doing so to this day. He is strong, healthy and robust now as ever he was, and he is on the war path to exterminate and put to shame dealers in old bankrupt and moth-eaten goods. People of town and country do not be deceived. The test of a man is his past career. You have had every opportunity of knowing and judging of the Wonderful Man. All that he asks is that you consider him entitled to YOUR PATRONAGE AND SUPPORT.

John Hogg & Son only keep in stock the best class of Fancy and Staple Dry Goods, Millinery, Jackets, Ready Made Clothing, &c., and at the great reduction these goods will be offered at during the Clearing Sale will induce thousands to flock to our establishment.

for he liked the youth, but lacked the means to save him from his stepmother's machinations. Still, he looked forward to the time when Harold would come into his inheritance, and when, perchance, his own connection with the property would be renewed—a hope, however, which was cruelly destroyed by the tragic catastrophe on the Hill of Fare, and the subsequent events which had made Harold an outlaw, and played into her Ladyship's hands in a way of which he had never dreamed.

TORONTO, 4th Feb., 1877.

TWO GOOD DEBATES.

The House of Assembly entered thoroughly into consideration of the estimates last week, and two or three interesting discussions sprang up, which were above the average talk engaged in by this much-ever-talking body. The vote taken of the Administration of Justice tempted Mr. W. McDougall to attack the Court of Chancery once more, and it was found that he had many sympathizers, who could speak from experience of its rather costly working. Mr. Mowat, in defence of the institution, denied the charges brought against it, and contended—successfully in the estimation of many, that the member for South Simcoe was making much ado about nothing. The impression is evidently growing that the end of our law reforms has not yet been reached, and that the Attorney General, without a prolonged search, could find many abuses upon which he might profitably try that pruning knife which he knows so well how to use. But a better debate than that, conducted principally by the lawyers, on Wednesday, was that of Thursday, when the vote for Education was considered, and the laymen of the House gave their opinions of the operations of the School Law. From the beginning to the end of the discussion it was made abundantly evident that the County Inspectors have, in many instances, been too liberal in their interpretation of the regulations, and frequently inflicted injustice in the guise of enforcement of an inelastic law. While all admitted that new school houses and extra teachers were sometimes more reluctantly consented to than the interests of our rising population justified, and that good had arisen from the determination of Inspectors to effect a needed change, it was held that too often these officials had insisted upon expenditures which might have been avoided and tended to bring a salutary provision into disrepute. Mr. Crooks said that the regulations were being revised and amended as rapidly as their impractibility or liability to abuse became apparent, and that instructions had been issued to liberally and not literally enforce them. This statement gave satisfaction to members upon both sides, and although Mr. M. Cameron put on a little of the indignant, and tried to belittle the action of Mr. Crooks, the Minister of Education felt that he had the support and sympathy of the great bulk of Conservatives and Reformers alike. The debate was not without result, and there is little doubt that Inspectors will not venture in future to override their authority.

A LITTLE INCIDENT.

An amusing scene occurred here on Thursday night last, Mr. Robinson, of Kingston, bet an oyster supper with Mr. Tooley, of Middlesex, upon the result of the Halifax election, and lost, as he deserved to do for having lacked faith in the strength of Reform principles in Nova Scotia. A large party gathered around a well spread table, and enjoyed the good things set before them. The etceteras came in when the edibles were removed, and the festive crowd grew jubilant. Tongues were loosed, and one after another rose up to talk and gush. Amongst these was he who gazed upon the Promised Land some years ago, and then wandered back to Ontario to write a pamphlet. He tried a little compliment upon the gentleman who sat opposite to him. It was cheered. Then came another and another, and as he waxed more eloquent, and the cheers encouraged him, he launched into as warm a tribute of approval as he ever bestowed upon Sir John. The gentleman opposite came next, and with that eloquence which has so often thundered from behind Mr. Crooks on the Ministerial benches, eulogized his newly found friend, described him in terms which set everybody wondering, and ended by grasping the hand of his old opponent with a warmth and enthusiasm which would have "fetched down" the gods at the Grand. And now there will be no more jangling and wrangling in the Assembly, for William the Dauntless, and Christopher, the Avenger, have sheathed swords, embraced, forgotten and forgiven.

A SENSIBLE PROPOSITION.

During the discussion of the Administration of Justice, Mr. Meredith, alluding to the creation of a sixth Minister, and the fact that, in violation of what had been known as Reform principles, he was a fifth lawyer in a Cabinet of six members, suggested that some one of the five legal gentlemen could earn his salary by conducting the Crown prosecutions at Assizes. Mr. Mowat said that the suggestion was one which had already presented itself to him, and that the Cabinet had considered the advisability of employing one of their number in discharging the duties of Solicitor General, when time and opportunity offered.

A KNOTTY QUESTION.

An item in the Public Accounts for 1875 possesses local interest for Wellington readers. It states that $17 was paid to Mr. Sweetnam, Post Office Inspector, for decoy bills used in the detection of a post office robbery. Enquiry elicited the fact that Mr. Sweetnam had placed $17 in a decoy letter, which was stolen by McLean, mail clerk on the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway. The letter, with its contents, fell into the hands of the County Attorney, and it was deemed advisable to retain this proof of the robbery until McLean, obliging, returns and takes his trial. Meanwhile Mr. Sweetnam wanted his $17, and it was paid by the Ontario Treasurer. In these days of discussion of Provincial and Dominion rights, it would be well to determine whether Ontario ought to find money for decoy letters "set up" by Dominion officers.

WELL DONE, ELORA.

The annual report, showing the standing of Mechanics' Institutes has been issued, and from this it appears that the people of Elora still retain their former position as possessors of the third in size and importance of libraries in connection with these societies. Toronto is first with 8,766 vols., Hamilton follows with 5,881 vols., and then comes Elora with 3,445 vols.; Dundas is upon its heels with 2,810 vols.; Woodstock with 2,739 vols.; Brantford with 2,658; Galt with 2,306, and Guelph with 2,289; Fergus has 1,535 vols., and heads London, which boasts only of 1,355 vols.

AN EXPIRING OFFICE.

The report of the Commissioner of Crown Lands proves that the agencies are rapidly falling off in receipts, and that the position of C. L. agent is no longer the desirable position which it was a few years ago. Mr. A. J. Cadenhead, agent for Wellington, drew only $44.71, with $5.30 of postage, a total of only fifty dollars, as his commission for 1877. When Mr. James Ross resigned the office, for the purpose of contesting Centre Wellington, the position was worth more than $1,200 per annum. Now the business is done at Toronto, and many in Wellington have paid in full for their lands.

The Fleet Ordered to Constantinople.

LONDON, Feb. 7, 11:30 a.m.

It is rumoured that the British fleet has been ordered to move to Constantinople from Besika Bay.

London in a Blaze of Excitement.

BRITISH FLEET ORDERED TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

Amendment to Credit Motion to be Withdrawn.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The reported occupation of Constantinople created a panic in the Stock Exchange, which has since subsided.

LATER.—Layard telegraphs to Derby that the Russians are about entering the city, and also that they are taking position near Gallipoli. This movement will give them command of the Straits of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles. There is intense excitement in London; almost a panic.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The English Government are without official information of the actual entry of the Russians into Constantinople, but believe the Russians still continue to advance, notwithstanding the armistice being signed. A Cabinet Council has been hastily summoned early to-day.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Layard's telegram was two days en route, which tends to confirm the actual occupation of Constantinople by the Russians. It is believed that in consequence of the gravity of the situation the Opposition will consent to withdraw the Credit Amendment, and Parliament to night will pass the vote for the supplementary war credit unanimously.

Capt. Howgate is agitating a new plan for reaching the North Pole, and he will probably have a chance of putting it to a practical test. Congress has favorably considered a grant of $50,000 for Capt. Howgate's expedition.

At the annual meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce on Monday the President stated that over-production, foreign competition, and legislation limiting the hours of labor were the principal causes of the business depression. As to foreign competition he said, "America has also gained yearly upon us, her exports of cotton goods to this country having increased from 15,880 pounds in 1870 to 451,876 pounds in 1876." The English production of nine and a half hours had to compete with a day's work of eleven or twelve hours abroad with lower wages. He could see little hope of revival.

Steps are being taken to prevent the wholesale timber-stripping in the Manitoba half-breed reserves.

A number of petitions against the proposed tariff changes have been presented in the United States Senate.

SIX rinks of the Guelph club have gone to Elora to-day to play the annual game with the caliants there. Messrs. A. Congalton, A. Robertson, jr., R. Mitchell, Jas. Emslie, David McCrae, and Thos. Dobbie. The sun is out a little too strong for the ice to remain in a keen condition.

WIFE BEATING.—This morning Pantaleon Neubauer was charged by his wife Elizabeth Neubauer with assault. From the evidence it was learned that Neubauer had been in the habit of ill-using his wife to "bring her under his rule." His latest exploit was to threaten to dash her brains out with a smoothing iron. It was no new thing for the wife to be threatened. The Magistrate considered the husband too inhuman to be forgiven, and so imposed a fine of $1 and $2.75 costs. He was also bound over to keep the peace, himself in $100 and two sureties of $50 each.

ST. PATRICK'S SOCIAL.—This society gave an entertainment of a very pleasing character in the Caledonian rooms on Wednesday evening last. The hall was comfortably filled with an audience who seemed to appreciate the lengthy programme, which was made up of a very interesting variety of music and recitations. Mr. John M. Bond, President of the Society, occupied the chair, and after he had made a few brief remarks Miss Geddes was called upon to give some selections on the piano, which she did in excellent style. Mr. Kennedy, of Brantford, followed, and by request sang "Whoa Emma," which created much merriment, and in response to an encore he sang "The little log cabin on the hill." Mr. Hyde was next called upon, and recited "Horatius," by Macaulay, with good effect. "Kathleen Mavourneen" was next rendered feelingly by Miss Jones, who was loudly encored. "Under the daisies," by Miss Hazelton, was duly appreciated. Mr. Kennedy followed, in character, with "Macnamara," and in reply to encores sang "The Irish christening," and "The candidate for alderman," which caused much laughter. The second part of the programme commenced with a violin solo by Mr. Jas. T. Mitchell, which contained a very natural imitation of a cuckoo's cry, after which "Beautiful moonlight," a duet, was charmingly given by Misses Jones and Geddes. Mr. Waddel was next called on, and recited "Prince Charles Edward at Versailles on the anniversary of Culloden," by Ayton, in a manner every way worthy of such a difficult piece. He was loudly encored, and in reply gave "The charge of the light brigade," in a style which was also greatly admired. Miss Mollie Heffernan sang "My bud in Heaven" very well, and was duly appreciated. She was followed by Mr. Kennedy, who sang "Walking for cakes," amid roars of laughter. Miss Jones followed with "You will soon forget Kathleen," a song which brought forth deserved applause. Mr. Kennedy followed with "Gwine back to Dixie," which was well rendered. All his songs but the first were sung in character. The President, Mr. Bond, then called upon Mr. Innes, who in behalf of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Societies, thanked the St. Patrick's Society for their kind invitation, and made a few well-timed remarks, after which the audience joined in singing "God save the Queen," thus closing the first of, it is to be hoped, a successful series of enjoyable social gatherings.

The Reform Convention.

The Globe says:—The last session of the Reform Association, which took place on Wednesday morning, was characterized with as much harmony, unanimity, and enthusiasm as either of the preceding sessions. The attendance was again very large, and all present took a deep interest in the proceedings. The business before the meeting was the consideration of the report of the Committee on Organization and Statistics, which had been read the evening before and was adopted unanimously. A number of short speeches were made by delegates from different parts of the country, all dwelling on the necessity of organization and the best means of securing it. The earnestness of the speakers, and the profusion and felicity of the illustrations drawn from their own practical experience, met with a cordial response from the large audience, while the cheering reports and sanguine anticipations which found voice from all parts of the Province tended to swell the tide of enthusiasm. The Association passed a cordial vote of thanks to the railway companies for their liberality in the reduction of fares, after which, with John White, Ex-M. P. for Halton, in the chair, a most cordial vote of thanks was tendered to Jas. Young, M. P., who had presided over the sessions of the Association with the utmost credit to himself. Mr. Young replied in a brief but spirit-stirring speech, and the meeting broke up with cheers for the Queen, for the Premiers of the Dominion and Ontario Governments and their colleagues in both Administrations.

THE sale of horses yesterday, among which were to be included "Abdallah Chief" and other noted animals, was not by any means successful. On account of the tameness in bidding, the best animals were not put up. Two horses were sold, which realized fair prices.

ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday afternoon Mr. James Nunan, an old man of seventy years, residing on Ontario street, father of Dr. Nunan, made a mis-step and fell, jarring himself considerably. Although serious results were at first apprehended, the old gentleman is now recovering.

TEA MEETING.—On Tuesday evening, Feb. 19th, a tea meeting will be held in the Barrie Church, Eramosa. After tea addresses will be delivered by several reverend gentleman. Tea at six o'clock.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday, while Mr. David Hume, of lot 11, con. 10, Puslinch, was chopping in the bush, the axe glanced off the log he was chopping, and cut an ugly gash along the upper part of his foot which will confine him to the house for some three or four weeks at least. Mr. A. Laing dressed the wound.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.—The anniversary service of the Rockwood Methodist Church Sabbath School, will take place as follows:—On Sabbath evening, Feb. 10th, a sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. J. A. Lever, and on Wednesday evening, 13th inst., a tea meeting will be held in the Town Hall, at which there will be recitations, dialogues, singing by the children, and addresses by several reverend gentlemen.

PROPOSED PRESENTATION AT GALT.—The Reformer says that one of the first effects which the distortions and plausible misrepresentations in which Sir John Macdonald indulged on the occasion of his recent visit, in the hope of pulling the wool over the eyes of his followers, was that the conviction has been strengthened, that the worst had not been told them regarding the chieftains dark doings, and the Reform workingmen have been roused to give a marked expression of their confidence in the leaders of the Reform party, and dispel any illusion which might possibly be created by the few Tory workingmen who styled themselves "the workingmen of Galt." Sir John had not been out of the town twenty-four hours when a number of our mechanics and other workingmen met and uninfluenced by any politician) decided to make a presentation to Messrs. Mackenzie and Blake of the fine portraits of these gentlemen painted by Mr. Adam Kay. The result of the canvass, a very limited one, was that in a couple of hours and with small subscriptions more than necessary amount of money was raised. Had it been considered necessary, ten times as much could have been obtained, for some of the largest shops containing scores of Reform mechanics were unvisited. This action of the workingmen and their friends is highly commendable, and will prove to the country that the great majority of the mechanics of Galt are staunchly Reform, and are not to be deceived by a party which has recently professed itself friendly to the workingmen simply for the purpose of reaching the treasury benches at the coming general elections. In answer to word sent to Ottawa Messrs. Mackenzie and Blake have stated that if possible they would visit Galt at the close of the session.

The investigation of the Moncton murder has been completed, and the prisoners committed for trial. New proof against the accused is said to have been discovered.

Board of Education.

The first meeting of the Board for 1878 was held on Wednesday evening. Present—Judge Macdonald, Messrs. Leonard, Robertson, Inglis, Murton, Newton, Wilkie, Harvey, Knowles, Peterson, Innes, and Dr. Keating.

The Secretary, Rev. R. Torrance, announced that Judge Macdonald had been re-appointed High School Trustee by the Town of Guelph, and Mr. John Inglis by the County of Wellington.

On motion of Mr. Peterson, seconded by Dr. Keating, Judge Macdonald was unanimously chosen chairman for the ensuing year.

The newly-elected chairman briefly thanked the Board for the renewed expression of confidence.

On motion of Mr. Newton, seconded by Mr. Murton, Mr. R. Torrance was re-appointed Secretary.

On motion of Mr. Robertson, seconded by Mr. Leonard, Mr. T. Y. Greet was appointed High School Treasurer.

Messrs. Leonard, Inglis, Newton, Knowles, Harvey, and Murton, were appointed a Special Committee to strike Standing Committees for the year.

Board adjourned for ten minutes.

On the Board resuming, Mr. Murton, Chairman of Committee, reported that the following be the Standing Committees:—

Finance—Messrs. Newton, Knowles, Harvey, Inglis, and McKenzie.

Printing—Messrs. McKenzie, Wilkie, and Innes.

Visiting.—South Ward—Messrs. Knowles, Peterson, Dr. Keating. West Ward—Messrs. Leonard, Murton and Wilkie. North Ward—Messrs. Inglis, Innes, and Robertson. East Ward—Messrs. Bell, McKenzie, and Harvey.

Mr. Innes objected to acting on the Printing Committee, and moved that Mr. Leonard's name be substituted.

The alteration was agreed to, and the report was then adopted.

On motion of Mr. Innes, seconded by Mr. Leonard, the Chairman, Secretary, Messrs. Wilkie, Peterson, and Dr. Keating were appointed associate examiners.

A communication was read from C. J. Soule asking to be allowed to prepare plans, etc., for the remodelling of the High School on Paisley street, in case the Board decided to carry ont proposed improvements. Referred.

Notice was given by Mr. Peterson that he would bring forward a motion at next meeting defining the duties of the committee on school sites and buildings; that the committee shall have especial regard to the care, maintenance and repair of the different school buildings, the grounds, and sites connected therewith, and the efficient ventilation and heating of the Central and High Schools.

Mr. Newton, chairman of Finance Committee, reported that tenders had been received for printing 500 copies of the Inspector's report: MERCURY office, $20; Herald, $22.50.

On motion the contract for printing reports was awarded the MERCURY office.

On motion of Mr. Innes, Judge Macdonald left the chair, and Mr. Harvey took the same.

It was then moved by Mr. Innes, seconded by Mr. Newton, and carried unanimously, that the thanks of the Board are due to the chairman of the Board for the close attention he has given to the business pertaining to it during the past year, and for the ability and courtesy he has manifested in all its deliberations.

Judge Macdonald replied, and on his resuming the chair a vote of thanks was unanimously tendered to Mr. Torrance, Secretary, for the excellent manner in which the business of the Board had been transacted by him during the year.

The Board then adjourned.

At a meeting of the committees held immediately afterwards, the following chairmen of committees were appointed. Finance—Mr. Newton; School Management—Mr. Peterson; School Property—Mr. Knowles; Sites and Buildings—Mr. Murton; Printing—Mr. Wilkie. South Ward visiting—Mr. Knowles; West, Mr. Leonard; North, Mr. Inglis; East, Mr. Bell.

Miss Hanlon, a sister of the Canadian oarsman, offers to row any woman in the United States or Canada for a purse of $500 over a three mile course. It is said that she can defeat her brother in a mile race.

W. G. Hay has disposed of the Dobson farm of fifty acres, in Elma, to Mr. A. A. Allison, of the same township, for $1,600.

A Methodist Bishop in Texas enjoined young clergymen against marrying too young, and in the course of his remarks made the following observations:—"Young preachers with clean shirt fronts and finger nails are above par, but should remain single until they have finished their studies. If a young minister marries a beautiful young lady, he must love her, and, loving her, he must talk to her, and, talking to her, he must spend time he ought to give to his studies."

Eighty-three murderers were hung during the past year in the United States. Sixteen of these were executed in Pensylvania and twelve in South Carolina, the remainder being distributed among twenty-three States. With the exception of Edwin W. Major in New Hampshire, New England had no hangings.

FIRE AT LISTOWEL.—About half-past four on Wednesday morning a fire broke out in a frame building in the rear of Tatham & Co's hardware store, owned by John Osborn, and occupied by W. C. Kidd as a livery stable. The building was entirely consumed, but the contents, consisting of horses, harness, &c., were al saved. The Royal Hotel stable, owned by Geo. Zilliax, was slightly damaged, but by the efficient work of the fire company the flames were prevented from spreading further. Osborne's loss on the building is estimated at about $500, Kidd's loss by damage about $200, and Zilliax's about $50. Cause of the fire unknown.

The extensive woollen mills in Norval, owned by Mr. R. Noble, and occupied by Mr. Samuel Beaumont, were on Wednesday entirely consumed by fire, supposed to have originated from the stovepipe. Owing to the inflammable nature of the material the flames spread with such rapidity that nothing was saved.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TORONTO, Feb. 6.

HON. MR. MOWAT, in answer to Mr. Scott, announced that provision would be made by the Government for refunding the brewers' licenses now declared by the Supreme Court to have been illegally collected.

Mr. Kean obtained an order of the House for a return of the timber licenses sold during 1877; Mr. Wills for a return of railway accidents in Ontario; and Mr. Bell for a return of persons appointed to positions in the public service by the present Government.

Mr. Creighton moved for copies of correspondence between the Government and Messrs. Hunter, Rose & Co., relative to the rate at which the public printing should be paid for, and of the instructions to the Queen's printer in connection therewith. He gave an account of the controversies which had occurred over the claim of the contractors for an increase in the price paid to them for work, and condemned the payment of extra amounts to them during the years 1873 and 1874.

Mr. Fraser explained at some length the reasons which induced the House to assent in 1873 to a temporary advance in price to the contractors, and held that the Government were quite justified, on the evidence submitted to them, in acting as they had done.

Mr. Clarke (Wellington) explained very fully the circumstances under which the advance was made with the consent of the House, in 1873, and showed from the sessional papers that the items for printing had passed the Public Accounts Committee in the regular way.

After some further discussion Mr. Creighton went over again the ground covered by his previous attack, and questioned the truth of the statement made from the Treasury benches, that no payment for advances on contract prices had been made in 1875.

Mr. Hardy proved from the documents relating to the dispute between the Government and contractors that Mr. Creighton was making statements without having any foundation for them, and repeated the assertion that no payments of the kind spoken of had been made in 1875.

After a few remarks from Mr. Broder the order for the production of the correspondence in question was made by the House.

The Chinese now hold the whole of Kashgar and are reported to be committing horrible atrocities. The Russian frontier is crowded with fugitives, and the dethroned Emir has arrived at Tashkend and admits his inability to oppose the invaders.

The Union stone cutters on the Welland Canal have been endeavoring, with a certain amount of success, to prevent the newly arrived non Union men from Buffalo from going to work. There was some flourishing of revolvers, for which the delinquents were promptly punished, and the military were called out, but no further trouble occurred.

At a meeting of the congregation of St. Matthew's church, Halifax, it was unanimously decided to invite Rev. Mr. Laing, of Montreal, to become pastor of that church, in room of Principal Grant, now of Queen's College, Kingston.

MARRIAGE LICENSE FORGERY.—J. E. Knight, of Tamworth, has been charged before Justices James and Caton, with forging the issuer's name to a marriage license. The accused had been in the employ of Mr. Jas. Aylesworth for five years, and bore an unblemished character. During the early part of last year he won the affections of a young lady, and in order to carry out a proposal of marriage, the the young man took a blank license from Mr. Aylesworth's desk, deposited $2 in the desk as payment, filled the blanks in the proper manner, and forged Mr. Aylesworth's name on it, and in that license the couple were married at Selby in the presence of witnesses, by the Rev. D. F. Bogert, on the 26th of July last. Up to a few days ago the affair remained secret, but some whisperings resulted in a confession a few days ago, and the subsequent proceedings. He was committed for trial, but bail was accepted, himself in $1,000 and two sureties $500 each.

REV. MR. STEPHENSON'S CASE.—A meeting of the Trustees of the Central Presbyterian Church, Detroit, was lately held to take action in the matter of severing the pastoral relations between the Rev. Wm. Stephenson and the congregation. Resolutions were passed which referred to a serious difference of opinion between pastor and parishoners, and that the whole matter of the propriety of the Rev. William Stephenson longer remaining pastor, was referred to the Presbytery of Detroit, for their investigation and decision, promising to acquiesce cordially in their action. A Mr. Baker referred to the fact that their pastor was in very ill health, and he was afraid the time would soon come when he would be unable to perform a pastor's duties for any congregation. The resolution was adopted.

The second day's voting on the repeal of the Dunkin Act in Lennox and Addington resulted in a majority of 764 in favor of repeal, virtually settling the question, as only two small polling places will be open today.

It is now stated that Mr. James Lowther will not be Chief Secretary for Ireland.

The Evening Mercury

THURSDAY EVEN'G, FEB. 7. 1878.

The Opening of Dominion Parliament.

The Dominion Parliament opens to-day at three o'clock. The Governor General will not be present at the opening, having issued his Commission to Sir W. B. Richards to act in his stead. At three o'clock the Commons will be summoned to the Senate Chamber when the Clerk of the Senate, having read the Commission of His Excellency to the Chief Justice, will direct them that it is His Excellency's pleasure that they retire for the purpose of electing a Speaker. The Governor General will proceed in State to the Senate Chamber on Friday afternoon, when the formal opening by the Speech from the Throne will take place.

The War News.

The war news to-day is of the most disturbing character. Following on the report that the Conference had been accepted, comes the word that Russia has advanced her troops to Constantinople, and that in consequence Britain had ordered her fleet to proceed to the capital of Turkey. These reports may be premature, for according to our latest despatches the occupation of Constantinople is not known by the Turkish or Russian Ministers in London We are inclined, however, to believe that there is something in them, and our despatch this morning from London, giving the rumour that the British fleet had been ordered to proceed to Constantinople, seems to confirm our suspicions. It is pretty evident that Russia has been playing a double game, and the sooner she is checkmated by Britain so soon shall we see through our present difficulties. The news of the action of the Powers will now be looked for hourly with the greatest impatience. We cannot resist the belief that we are on the eve of a great war.

MR. ANGLIN'S re-election to the Speakership of the Commons is a foregone conclusion.

AT a meeting of the Reformers of East York on Tuesday Mr. James Metcalfe was unanimously chosen as the party candidate at the general election.

THE spirit of reform has been shown by the Dominion Government in reference to the office of Commissioner of Ordnance and Admiralty lands. Colonel Coffin, the holder of that position, having died, the office is to be abolished and the business conducted by the Dominion Lands Department under Surveyor-General Dennis.

MR. HUNTER, M.P.P. for South Grey, is a strong advocate of temperance, but he frankly admits that the Dunkin Act is a failure. He says that although the Ontario liquor law has been effective in diminishing the use of intoxicating liquor, he believes the attempts made under the Dunkin Act have been entirely abortive; in the County of Grey, he had no hesitation in saying, there was almost free trade in liquor.

Is is understood that as the Committee on Privileges and Elections, after a lengthy discussion and investigation last session, established a precedent in regard to precisely what constitutes a violation of the Independence of Parliament Act, their work this year will be very simple, and the several cases to be brought before them will be disposed of with an expedition which may not prove entirely satisfactory to those who faced the issue of last year.

THE Maritime Ministerial papers regret very much Mr. Blake's retirement. The Halifax Chronicle says;—Though he retires from the Cabinet his influence remains, and on every question of importance his views must have great weight with the Government. The St. John Telegraph says:—"Mr. Blake is perhaps the greatest orator, though not perhaps the best debater, in the House of Commons."

HERE is a reminiscence:—In 1854, Mr. Gladstone, then a member of the Government which declared war against Russia, was, with his colleagues, accused of intriguing and abetting the Czar in his designs upon Turkey. In 1878 twenty-four years later, when Mr. Gladstone admits the folly of the Crimean war, he is denounced as a traitor for endeavoring to restrain his countrymen from a recurrence of that terrible blunder. On February 27th, 1854, Lord Clarendon's message to the CzarNicholas demanding that the Russian forces be withdrawn across the Pruth on pain of a declaration of war was forwarded. The Czar declined to reply to such a communication, and war was the result. On the 28th January, 1878, a credit was asked by Sir Stafford Northcote, to provide means for enforcing England's demand for the continued neutrality of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, and to prevent Russian occupation of Constantinople. A more peacefully disposed Czar allows a Conference to be called to settle this question.

RAILWAY EXTENSION IN NORTH WATERLOO.—A large and enthusiastic meeting was held in Elmira on Wednesday to facilitate railway matters for the northern part of the County of Waterloo. The project discussed by a deputation from Wellesley was for the building of a line from Salem through to Stratford, and by a deputation of Drayton, advancing a line from Waterloo to Drayton via Elmira to Mount Forest, and to strike at some point on the Georgian Bay. There being nothing definite to lay before the meeting a committee was appointed from Wellesley to correspond with the President of the Credit Valley Railway Company for the extension of that line. A committee was also appointed from Drayton to correspond with the Grand Trunk Railway Company to see whether they would extend the line from Waterloo northward.

Mr. Thomas Doherty, of Watford, while sinking a well for his foundry, struck what appeared to be a vein of copper, and while drilling at a depth of 115 feet, large quantities were found, which was thoroughly tested to-day, and proved to be copper of the purest yield.

THE WAR NEWS.

Russia said to have Occupied Constantinople.

THE RUSSIANS STEALING A MARCH.

AFFAIRS IN GREECE.

February 6.

A Bucharest despatch says:—The Roumanians did not stop hostilities around Rustchuk and Widin until Monday afternoon. They vigorously bombarded Widin on Sunday and Monday, and the condition of the garrison was considered desparate.

A correspondent at the headquarters of the Czarewitch telegraphs:—Three hours before the arrival of the news of the armistice Russian officers with a flag of truce had started for Rustchuk to demand its surrender, and if refused to notify the consuls and other foreigners to leave within 24 hours, when the place would be stormed. The conditions of the armistice, as far as they affect this part of Bulgaria are, that the Turks give up Rustchuk and Silistria, withdrawing the garrisons to Shumla and Varna. Seven days to be allowed for the retirement of the garrison, and on the eighth we shall march into Rustchuk. The news of peace is hailed with great delight by officers and men.

The Russian occupation of Rustchuk and Silistria was not before understood to be part of the conditions, and will be unwelcome news at Vienna according to a correspondent there.

A St. Petersburg despatch says: Russia rejects the proposal to hold a Conference in Vienna, or any other great capital. It considers the tranquility of a small town in one of the minor States, and the authority that would be given to the deliberations by the presence of the Foreign Ministers of the Powers, necessary for insuring a good and practical result. Moreover, Russia believes this would facilitate the labors of the Conference.

The Standard's Paris special says:—It is reported that the Russians already hold a port on the Dardanelles.

The London Advertiser says:—

We have reason to believe that the Government has received information of the entry of the Russian army into Constantinople. At any rate, if the Government is not in possession of this news, the Russian Embassy is.

The Post says:—

The Russians are in Constantinople. This was the news last night current here, and we incline to think it based upon official and authentic intelligence. The message has come viâ Alexandria. We do not know at this moment what the precise nature of the occupation is. According to some diplomats, the Russians have possessed themselves of two forts in the Boyonk and Chekmedje lines. According to others they have gained still greater advantages. Details are of small moment practically. All are agreed that the capital of Turkey and the key of the East is in the hands of the Czar. Indignation will be of little avail. I will be alleged that no deception has been practiced, and we shall discover that this was one of the terms of the armistice which was never communicated to us. Yesterday a British naval and military force could at any moment occupy Constantinople, while an Austrian army could cut Russian communications. To-day the situation is entirely altered. The British fleet can no longer advance to Constantinople, and may find itself even barred out at the Dardanelles. The Czar can now afford to laugh at Austrian menaces since his communications are open from Constantinople to Odessa or Sebastopol. Our pottering over a trumpery six millions will probably cost us ten times that sum, but whatever the cost it is still to be hoped that the country will see its honor vindicated. This direct attack upon our honor will raise a feeling of resentment not to be appeased until we shall have taught our foe we have the will and power to punish chicanery and maintain the Empire which he is seeking to undermine.

The Daily Telegraph says:—

According to the latest information from Constantinople the Russian forces, despite the completion of the preliminaries of peace, are hastily pushing on to Gallipoli and Constantinople. Circumstances serious and menacing in the extreme will have to be considered by the Ministers in the Cabinet Council to-day, and the issue of their deliberations will in all probability be this (Thursday) evening communicated to Parliament.

The Telegraph's Paris midnight special says:—The Russian forces are constantly advancing on Gallipoli and Constantinople.

A Pesth special announces that the Turkish men-of-war on the Danube have surrendered to Russia.

An Athens correspondent says in consequence of the representations of the Powers Greece seems disposed to stop the further advance of her troops, referring the question of their withdrawal to the decision of the Conference.

DEMONSTRATION IN QUEBEC.—A demonstration, in which some six thousand people took part, was held at Quebec on Wednesday to manifest the public disapproval of the Local Government's railway policy. An immense procession was formed, and with torches and transparencies paraded the city, and halted before the Parliament Buildings, where the processionists burnt the Attorney-General in effigy. The proceedings caused a slight scare inside the buildings, and the Government police were stationed at the doors to prevent the ingress of intruders. One or two windows were broken, and the crowd then resumed their parade. A hundred men of "B" Battery and some mounted hussars were called out to preserve order, but their services were not required.

MISSIONARY ATTACKED.—In all likelihood the Canadian missionary spoken of in the telegram from San Francisco lately is the Rev. C. L. Mackay, who has been for some years stationed in Formosa as missionary from the Canadian Presbyterian Church. Mr. Mackay was the first missionary sent from Canada to that island, and has labored with the greatest assiduity and success. It would be unwarrantable to conclude, as the telegram in question seemed to intimate, that Mr. Mackay had either been deprived of life or is likely to be. We hope it will be found when full particulars come to have been merely a passing commotion, and that Mr. Mackay has come out quite safe. At the same time it is but right to mention that Mr. Mackay is just the man, from temperament and strong conviction, to refuse to withdrew from his position, if by so doing he might appear either lacking in courage or devotion. Mr. Mackay is a native of Zorra, in the County of Oxford, where his relatives reside.

Senator Shaw died at Smith's Falls on Wednesday.

The rumour that Osman Pasha will be courtmarshalled for ordering the execution of Russian prisoners has been revived.

The largest gathering that ever took place in Port Elgin assembled in the town hall, on Wednesday, to listen to Mrs. Kent Mason. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, and over 200 signed the pledge. There is great excitement and all the boys are wearing the blue ribbon.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW
—OR—
The Gauger of Skene.

Many a groan of disappointment had the honest bosom of Walter Adamson emitted at the thought of the deplorable issue, and the frustration of his cherished hope. He had visited Harold in prison to consult him about his defence, which the lawyer undertook to conduct, but to his sorrow the youth firmly, though gratefully, declined his offer, and two days after, he learned that he had broken from confinement and fled. He deemed now that all was lost; still, when the news reached him that Sir Philip was dead, strange and important matters connected with the succession pressed on his mind, and though it was a stormy night he had come to the office to peruse certain papers—or rather copies of papers—which he had retained in his possession, as well as to read some authorities on the law of fugitation, that he might see if there was not some way of keeping the succession open.

If he had his suspicions of Lady Logan she had an equal distrust in him, and had his clerk, Tom Ironby, bribed to keep a close watch on his master, and convey secretly, to her any information he might obtain, so that if Adamson contemplated mischief she would be prepared, and take means to thwart him. Ironby was more in the secret of the conspiracy against Harold than she or Gilmour was aware of. He had certain secret relations with Edward Skeat, and was engaged along with him and others in modes of fast living, which were gradually but surely involving some persons besides themselves in terrible consequences. One of those persons we need hardly say was Malcolm Gillespie, and from the conversation which took place between Ironby and Skeat the reader could not fail to draw the inference that the gauger had been a very unwilling victim of Skeat's subtle temptation when he consented to bear false witness against Harold Logan. This was indeed the fact. Gillespie, if left to himself, had too generous a nature to conceive or carry out such a treacherous plot, but, lured on by Skeat, who knew of his embarrassments—embarrassments which he (Skeat) had no small share in creating—he had been induced, as we have seen, to fasten the crime of murder on Harold, and had ever since been a prey to remorse. Thus, blameworthy though Gillespie had been in the matter, he was far less guilty than those who were making use of him for their own immoral ends.

This is a phase of our story, however, which will come into prominence by-and-by. We must now confine our attention to the critical situation which had come about in Adamson's office in Huxter Row—Skeat secreted in the closet. Tom Ironby, nearly beside himself with alarm, and the lawyer, all unconscious of his clerk's perturbation, proceeded to take down from their shelves one or two ponderous law-books that he might carefully study certain portions of them.

"When you finish the copying of that deed, Tom, you need not wait; I'll shut up the office myself," said Mr. Adamson, as he seated himself into his stuffed chair and adjusted his spectacles.

In point of fact, Tom was at the very last page of the deed, and could have finished it off in five minutes, but it did not suit him to say so. Go away. Leave the office with Ned shut up in that closet? Suppose his master wanted something out of the closet and came on Ned. Oh, horrible. No, though he should have to sit till midnight, Tom Ironby was resolved not to quit the room. He, therefore, hastened to say that he was not near done, and pretended to write away with undisturbed diligence.

But, as may easily be supposed, he wrote little and thought anxiously, casting every moment furtive glances at his master, who sat opposite, and at the closet door, which was only two yards from the back of Mr. Adamson's chair.

The silence grew frightful, intense, being broken only by the rush of the sleet against the window, an occasional howl of the wind in the chimney, the rustling of the leaves as the lawyer read at his book, the scratching of Ironby's inkless pen on a piece of waste paper, and last, and worst of all, the loud thumping of his heart against his ribs, was fearfully audible to himself at least, and seemed violent enough to draw his master's attention.

Now and then, too, there was a creaking in the closet, which sent an additional pang of terror through Tom's bosom. Ned was no doubt doing his best to remain perfectly still, but no one, let him try ever so can long maintain a perfect motionless position, and as there happened to be a loose board in the floor of the closet the slightest notion of Ned's legs or body caused it to emit a dangerous sound.

Things had continued in this state for nearly half an hour, when a sound from a different direction caught Ironby's ear, and sent him speculating in a hope of coming release.

It was the creak of the gate outside. Some one was opening it. Heaven grant it was a summons from the house—a message to the lawyer to hasten home.

He waited breathlessly for a knock to come to the front door, no kneck came. Indeed he heard a stealthy foot on the gravel at the window. Some person was listening there. Nay, though Tom Ironby could not see it, he was conscious that a human eye was peering at them through the chink between the shutters scrutinising them.

"Who could it possibly be? Perhaps one of his gambling associates come to see why he was not at Dicey's. Was ever lawyers clerk so critically situated. He should, at all events, let the watcher outside know that his master was in the room, so as to prevent him from tapping."

"Do you find the authorities favourable, sir?" he suddenly asked raising his voice to a very distinct tone as he put the question.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT.—On the 4th inst. a boy about eight years of age, son of Mr. H. Cloutbier, fell into a vat of boiling liquor in Collins' tannery, and before he could be pulled out by a workman the flesh on his bones was par-boiled. He died about an hour thereafter.

ELOPEMENT.—Galt Reformer:—On Sunday evening, the 27th ult., William Dutcher, of Burford township, a young man, eighteen or nineteen years of age, left his home, taking all his clothes with him. The same evening a Miss Hawk, of Harley, and her sister, were also missing, and as he was on pretty intimate terms with this girl, who is about twenty-nine or thirty years old, it is supposed they have taken different routes to evade pursuit, and have also sadded across the line. She has a brother-in-law in Texas, who, it is rumored, offered to take up land for them.

HOW TO KILL THE HESSIAN FLY.—A practical farmer writes that, being much afflicted by the Hessian fly in New York State years ago, he "sowed one barrel of salt per acre, immediately after sowing the seed. That made it come in ear all of five or six days earlier and that saved it from the midge. In 1853, when all crops around me, far and near, were almost ruined, mine gave twenty-nine bushels per acre; salt saved it. I never sowed less than one barrel per acre." He has never been bothered with the midge since. He says salt prevents rust.

Preparations are being made on an extensive scale. Already about 400 tickets have been sold in Boston alone, while Montreal society will be represented by the elite of the city. It will be held in the new Windsor hotel.

An Evasive Despatch from Russia.

LONDON, Feb. 8.

A Cabinet meeting suddenly assembled this afternoon.

It is reported that the Government has received an unsatisfactory and evasive despatch from Russia.

DEATH OF POPE PIUS.

Particulars About His Death.

The Italian Government and the Conclave

ROME, Feb. 7.

The Pope's legs were so much better yesterday that he was able to walk a few steps. It is believed that this exertion was fatal. A change for the worse occurred at four o'clock in the morning, when the death agony commenced. The Cardinals were assembled in council in the next room, but all together, with the dignitaries of the Papal court, were at his bedside at the moment of death, which occurred at 4:57 p.m. Cardinal Panebianco administered the last sacrament. All the ambassadors accredited to the Vatican called to make inquiries during the morning. King Humbert also constantly sent for information. No one is now admitted to the Vatican except the Pontifical Chamberlains, who are charged with the office of guarding the corpse. Monsignore Simeoni, the Cardinal Secretary of State, has ordered the Osservatore Romano, the daily organ of the Vatican, to suspend publication until to-morrow. The city is perfectly tranquil. The authorities have taken all the measures they deem necessary, and police and municipal guards prevent approach to the Vatican.

The Advertiser's special states that the news of the Pope's death has already been officially announced, and gives the following particulars:—The Pope at eight o'clock on Wednesday night felt a sudden suffocation. He rallied several times, but said to his physicians, "Death wins this time." He was alternately lucid and wandering. His last moments were lucid. He said, "Guard the Church I loved so well and sacredly." The immediate cause of death was the closing of the wound in the leg, which made the humours mount into the lungs and brain. Cardinals Manning and Howard and many others were present at the death.

The Conclave has commenced. Cardinal Simeoni has demanded troops, and the Government has acceded to his request. The ambassadors accredited to the Vatican have gone in a body to view the corpse.

The Italian Government ensures the independence of the Conclave, and offers any services Cardinal Simeoni may demand.

The Standard's Rome telegram says the aspect of the city is quiet to indifference, strangely constrasting with its appearance on the death of Victor Emmanuel a month ago.

A Berlin despatch says:—It is safe to say that Germany's policy towards the Conclave will be one of absolute non-interference, if not of indifference.

A Rome correspondent says:—A report is in circulation that Cardinal di Pietro has been elected Pope by acclamation, but it is not believed. The Cardinal is young and highly thought of, liberal and conciliatory, but unlikely to have many votes.

THE benedicts in connection with the Caledonian Society superintended a social assembly in the Society's rooms on Thursday evening. Music was furnished by Lawrence's quadrille band. A thoroughly pleasant time was spent for several hours.

No person could for a moment suppose that when a musician has mislaid his overcoat, containing music, that he wishes to shirk his part of the programme. Mr. Burrows lost track of his coat at St. George's Society Social last evening. It was afterwards found, and Messrs. Burrows and Stockwell delighted the audience.

ACCIDENT.—Wm. Snowdon, living on Water street, met with a singular accident on Sunday last. It appears that a pair of scissors had been fastened to one of the rungs of the back of a chair and Mr. Snowden sat down on them, the sharp points penetrating his back. He afterwards got cold in the wound, which has become so serious that he is confined to bed.

A TUMBLE.—On Thursday evening as a youthful rider was trying to display his horsemanship to the passengers on board the stage coming from Hamilton, his horse grew tired of its rider, and as the quickest way of relief precipitated him to the ground, and then by way of revenge fell on top of him. There was no damage done except to a suit of clothes which were soiled by the mud.

BADLY LACERATED.—Mr. Woodyatt, while working a machine in the Guelph Carriage Works, on Thursday, had his hand badly lacerated by being caught in a gearing. Had it not been that the shaft of the machine broke at the time, something more serious would have occurred. As it is the palm of the hand was torn frightfully, which will probably lay him up for months. Dr. Herod sewed up the wound.

BOWLING ALLEYS.—Mr. W. Cook purposes presenting a petition, numerously signed, to the Council at its next meeting, asking for a license to keep a bowling alley on Cork st. He states that it will not be in any way connected with the hotel of Mr. David Cook. The Council of 1877 had been simillarly petitioned, but it was agreed to leave the matter over to see if any contra petition would be presented by parties living in the neighborhood who might be disturbed by any noise made in rolling balls. Mr. Cook thinks he has waited a reasonable time for any such action and again will bring the matter up.

ALLEGED PERJURY.—Wm. Nicholl, of Arthur Township charged Jas. Bowman, of the Township, of King, at the Police Court on Thursday, with having perjured himself at a late Court held in Guelph before His Honor Judge Macdonald, by swearing that he had not received $40 from Nicholl which had been paid to him to redeem a village lot sold for taxes. Wm. Nicholl and his wife both swore that the money had been paid. Mr. Drew, Q.C., was counsel for Nicholl, and Mr. Watt for Bowman. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate committed Bowman to stand his trial at the next Court of competent jurisdiction. He was admitted to bail on his own recognizance in the sum of $500.

INSURANCE LAW.—The case of Vose et al v. Connecticut Life Insurance Company, at present before the American courts, possesses a new feature of great importance to insurance companies and to the general public. The plaintiff's father held a policy in the above-named company, but becoming insane two years before his death, two premiums were not paid. Deceased's children have sued the company for the amount of the policy, and the question now to be determined is, can a man who has become insane—and who is considered dead in the eye of the law—be regarded as capable of making default in the payment of an insurance premium? One court has decided in favor of plaintiffs but the defendants have appealed. The question is one that should be definitely settled by legislation. There never was a time in the history of the world when the predisposing causes of insanity were so wide-spread as at present.

Besom and Stanes.

Guelph Defeats Elora by a Score of 58 to 41.

On Thursday morning six rinks of the Guelph Curling Club, on invitation, proceed to Elora by teams to play an equal number of knights of the besom on the Grand river. The sun came out very strong in the morning, and before a start was made from Guelph many of the players expressed an opinion that the playing could not be anything extra, from the fact that the ice would "drug." The continued brilliancy of Old Sol, brought about the result contemplated. The Guelph men were met by the Elora players, and the party at once proceeded to the river and commenced the game, and continued for three hours and a half. At noon there was an intermission for lunch, and the hard work occasioned by the softness of ice had whetted the appetites of all to such a degree that they enjoyed lunch on the ice very much. The score indicates that Guelph defeated their opponents by 17—standing 58 to 41. Each rink from Guelph scored higher than their rivals. Play had to be called after being engaged for three hours and a half. A thoroughly agreeable time was spent by all. The score is subjoined:

St. George.

Guelph Society Gives an Excellent Entertainment.

On Thursday evening the St. George's Society's hall was crowded with ladies and gentlemen, and great interest was manifested in the entertainment given. It has been clearly demonstrated during late years, in this town, that for a society or association to keep on the high road to prosperity, something more than dry business meetings must be held. The officers of St. George, believing such to be a truism have avoided "easy-goativeness," and the Society is now in as prosperous condition as the most enthusiastic Englishman could desire.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Geo. Murton, President, and on the platform beside him were the presiding officers of the St. Patrick's, St. Andrew's and Caledonian Societies, and Mr. Roach, of Hamilton, President of the North American St. George's Union, and Mr. J. E. Pell, Toronto, Secretary of the Union.

After a few congratulatory remarks by the chairman, the first piece on the programme was called for from Mr. Philp and the Harris boys, on the violin and piano. Their high reputation was ably sustained, and in complimenting the lads for their proficiency a double compliment is paid to Mr. Philp, their instructor. They pleased the audience thrice during the evening. Mr. Newby sang with easy effort and in good voice "Though far upon the sea." He was followed by Mr. Paton in reciting the selection "Hands all round," who displayed a very correct conception of what was required at his hands. Miss Greey was encored after singing "Tapping at the garden gate," and responded with "Tyrol's lovely dell." This young lady has long been considered a very sweet singer. Miss Masters sang in a pleasing and unaffected style, which was decidedly refreshing, "Over there." Guelph audiences would like to hear her again. Mr. W. F. Howard sang "Beloved Star," with marked correctness. While Messrs. Burrows and Stockwell were singing a duet, "God bless the dear ones at home," the poor acoustic properties of the hall were particularly noticeable. The duet was pleasing nevertheless. Mr. J. W. Colson sang "The cork leg" in a manner which created prolonged applause, and an encore. He responded. It is said that Mr. Colson was a very good singer some years ago. The Misses Stevenson, very popular young vocalists in town, were very entertaining in the trio, "Hail, smiling morn," and were encored.

Short addresses next followed.

Mr. J. E. Pell was introduced to the audience. He referred to his early residence in Guelph—some forty-five years ago, and that inasmuch as all his family were born here, he considered it a sort of a second birth place. The excellent work done by St. George's Societies throughout the country was touched on, and the interest he himself had always manifested. Many English emigrants that had years ago been assisted in Montreal were now occupying honored and comfortable positions in the country. He urged upon all to assist their fellow countrymen when they come out here to find a new home.

Mr. Roach stated that the primary object of his meeting with them was to talk over the arrangements necessary to be made in connection with the coming convention of the North American St. George's Union, to be held in Guelph next August. He bespoke for the Union a hearty and hospitable reception. In concluding, the speaker referred in eulogistic terms to Mr. Caleb Chase, as it was through the exertions of that gentleman that Guelph secured the honor of being the town selected for the meeting for 1878.

Dr. Nunan made a few congratulatory remarks as President of St. Patrick's Society, and Mr. Innes, chief of the Caledonian Society, briefly addressed the meeting on behalf of the Caledonian and St. Andrew's Societies, Mr. Wm. Mitchell being President of the latter.

A vote of thanks, on motion of Messrs. Chase and Elliott, was tendered to those who assisted in the entertainment, and also to Messrs. Roach and Pell.

"God save the Queen" was sung, and the gathering dispersed.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TORONTO, Feb. 7.

The Bill providing for the employment of prisoners outside of gaol walls and the Maritime Courts Bill were considered in Committee but not passed.

The Civil Service resolutions, authorizing such money payments are contemplated in the Civil Service Bill, were discussed until a late hour at night. The discussion was nominally on a few resolutions, but in reality it covered the whole scope of the Bill. Mr. Hardy, who has charge of the measure, entered at some length into explanations of the scheme, the principal features of which have already been published in our columns. After some general criticisms on various provisions of the Bill by members on both sides of the House, special exception was taken to the resolution authorizing the appointment of private secretaries to heads of Departments, and Mr. Cameron moved the striking out of the clause.

Mr. Hardy repeated some of the objections which had been urged against the Bill in general and the obnoxious resolution in particular.

After an explanation from Mr. Mowat to the effect that the amount of work done in his department had increased in a greater ratio than the expenditure, a vote was taken on the resolution, which was sustained by a majority of 43 to 23. The Committee then rose and the House adjourned.

Chalmers' Church Association.

Principal Johnston's Address on Self-Culture.

Chalmers' Church Association has been resuscitated, and Thursday evening Mr. Wm. Johnston, Principal of the Model Farm, delivered his inaugural address as President.

After devotional exercises, and the routine business in order,

Mr. Johnston defined the relation of the Association to the Church, and the duty of the members of it individually. After a few other preliminary remarks he announced his subject—"Reading." Every one had, or should have, leisure hours, and the question was how should these be used? In self-culture. After describing true education and the various motives to study, said the only one which ought to obtain in self-culture was a pure love of knowledge. He described, with beautiful illustrations, how we were developed by contact with the world and with nature. But the greatest instrument of self-culture was undoubtedly—books. He alluded to the pleasure of an acquaintance with literature, especially in old age. It was of the utmost importance that they should cultivate a taste for reading. Of the substance of reading, he referred to the pleasure and benefit of a good library. Although very many books were now issued, very few really good books were published. He advised them to begin their study of books with those of their own day and age. He classified the different subjects for reading, as follows:—1. Philosophy and Theology; 2. History and Biography; 3. Science; 4. Essays and Lectures; 5. Poetry, Fiction, etc. On each of these subjects he elucidated at considerable length, and mentioned several books on each subject which should be read. Regarding the manner of reading, he said it should not be desultory. He had known great readers to be great fools. He did not advocate a too strict system in the matter of reading, but some should be followed. He advised them to have a living interest in what they read, and be honest in thought. Their judgment also should be kept clear. No one man could master all the subjects, and it would be better to take one up and become thoroughly master of it. This would form a centre ground which would radiate all other knowledge which they would find time to acquire. He closed an excellent address by advising them to be careful in choosing that reading which would develope them into better men and women.

Miss Sarah Cossitt sang a song, Miss A. McNaughton gave a reading, and Annie Macpherson gave a song, and after the usual closing exercises the meeting adjourned.

The farm of Mr. James Bell, of Esquesing, has been sold to Mr. Patrick Lamb, for $2,615.

OBIT.—The wife of one of the oldest men in this county died last week. Mr. Dickson, of Palmerston, is now in his 113th year and his partner at the time of her departure was 87 years old.

SUICIDE.—Alexander Wishart, an old resident of West Flamboro, committed suicide by hanging himself on Monday last. He was a bachelor, followed farming and lived on the 3rd con. About eleven o'clock he went out to water the cattle and not returning to dinner search was made for him when he was found hanging from a rafter in the barn, by Mr. Isaac Morden and the housekeeper, quite dead. For some two years the deceased has been in a depressed state of mind caused by ill-health. An inquest was held on Wednesday before Coroner Walker when the jury returned a verdict that "The deceased hanged himself while under the influence of depressed spirits." His age was sixty years.

Dominion Parliament.

Speech from the Throne.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.

At Three o'clock to-day His Excellency the Governor-General proceeded in state to the Senate, and after the Commons had been summoned to attend, he delivered the following Speech:—

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate; Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In again summoning you for the despatch of business, I am glad to be able to say that nothing beyond ordinary business of the country requires your attendance.

It afforded me great pleasure to have an opportunity before my departure from Canada of visiting the Province of Manitoba and a portion of the outside territories, which visit I accomplished during last autumn.

I have now had the advantage of visiting every province in the Dominion during the term of my government of Canada.

I am happy to be able to say that the arbitration on the Fishery Claims, under the terms of the Washington Treaty has been concluded.

An award has been made by the Commission of $5,500,000, as compensation to Canada and Newfoundland, for the use of their fisheries during the term of the present treaty. This amount is much less than that claimed by my Government, but having assented to the creation of the tribunal for the determination of their value, we are bound loyally to assent to the decision given.

The exhibition of Canadian manufactures and products at Sydney, New South Wales, was successfully carried out. I trust that the result will be the opening up of a new market for Canadian goods, even in so remote a region as the Australian Colonies. Shipments of Canadian productions have already been made. The expenditure will slightly exceed the estimate, but I doubt not the cost to Canada will be amply repaid by the extension of her trade.

Preparations have been uninterruptedly carried on during the last six months for securing an ample but select exhibition of Canada's products and manufactures at the Great Exhibition to be held at Paris during the current year. A further estimate will be required to meet the expenditure. His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, as chairman of the British Commissioners, has assigned a most prominent place to Canada in one of the towers where a Canadian trophy is now being erected.

A very disastrous fire occurred in June last in the city of St. John, which caused the destruction of a large portion of the city, including all the public buildings owned by the Dominion Government. My Government deemed it necessary to contribute $20,000 to assist in relieving the immediate wants of the people, who were rendered destitute by so appalling a calamity. I also sanctioned the appropriation of some public money with which to commence the erection of new buildings for the public business, which acts you will be asked to confirm in the usual way.

During last summer my Commissioners made another treaty with the Blackfeet and Piegan Indians, by which the Indian title is extinguished over a territory of 51,000 square miles west of Treaty No. 4, and south of Treaty No. 6. The treaty has been made on terms nearly the same as those under treaty No. 6, though somewhat less onerous. The entire territory west of Lake Superior to the Rocky Mountains, and from the boundary nearly to the 55th degree of north latitude embracing about 450,000 square miles has now been acquired by peaceful negotiation with the native tribes, who place implicit faith in the honor and justice of the British Crown.

Early in the past summer a large body of Indians, under Sitting Bull, from the United States, crossed into British territory to escape from the United States troops, and have since remained on the Canadian side. The United States Government made a friendly but unsuccessful attempt to induce these Indians to return to their reservations. It is to be hoped that such arrangements may yet be made as may lead to their return and peaceful settlement, and thus relieve Canada of a source of uneasiness and a heavy expenditure.

The surveys of the Pacific Railway have been pressed to completion during the past season. A complete instrumental survey of the route by the valleys of the North Thompson and Lower Fraser Rivers has been made, with a view to ascertain definitely whether that route presents more favorable features than the routes already surveyed to Dean Inlet and Bute Inlet respectively. It is believed that the additional information now obtained will enable my Government to determine which route is the most advantageous from Tete Jaune Cache to the sea. Full information will be laid before you at an early day of the season's work in this and other directions.

I am happy to be able to congraulate you on the abundant harvest reaped in all quarters of the Dominion, and I rejoice that under this and other influences there has been some improvement in the revenue returns, thus indicating, I trust, that the commercial depression that has so long afflicted Canada, in common with other countries, is passing away.

My attention has been called to some imperfections in the existing system of auditing the Public Accounts, and a measure providing for a more thorough and effective supervision will be submitted for your consideration.

The prospect of obtaining, at an early day, greater facilities for reaching the North-western Territories and the Province of Manitoba is sure to attract a larger number of settlers every year, and as much of the prosperity of the Dominion depends on the rapid settlement of the fertile lands in those territories, it is desirable and necessary to facilitate such settlement as much as possible. In order to effect this, measures will be submitted for your consideration concerning the registration of titles; the enactment of a homestead law, and the promotion of railway enterprise in districts not touched by the Canada Pacific Railway.

Your attention will be called to a measure for better securing the independence of Parliament.

Experience has shown that certain changes may advantageously be made in the departmental arrangements existing at present. A Bill will be submitted to you for accomplishing this purpose without increasing the expenditure or the number of departments.

It is very desirable that there should be uniform legislation in all the Provinces respecting the traffic in spiritous liquors. Hitherto that trade has been regulated by provincial laws, or laws existing before the Confederation of the Provinces, although there has been lately a conflict of authority as to the jurisdiction of the local authorities. A Bill making the necessary provision will be submitted for your consideration.

Various measures found necessary for the amendment of existing laws will also be submitted for your approval.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,—

The estimates for the ensuing year will be laid before you at an early day. They have been prepared with an anxious desire to provide for all the branches of the public service, and the execution of pressing public works, within the limits of the expected revenue, without increasing the burden of taxation.

I have directed that the public accounts of the past financial year shall be laid before you.

The Evening Mercury

FRIDAY EVEN'G, FEB. 8 1878.

Parliamentary.

The Opposition made a poor show at the opening of the House on Thursday, Sir John Macdonald opposed the re-election of Mr. Anglin as Speaker on a mere technicality which was utterly demolished by Mr. Mackenzie when he got up to reply. The consequence was that Mr. Anglin was elected by the large majority of 64, not a few of the members of the Opposition voting with the Government. The Opposition have made a bad beginning, and it is felt on all hands that a great mistake was made in opposing Mr. Anglin's re-election as Speaker.

The Death of the Pope

It cannot be said that the death of the Pope was unexpected, for it has been anticipated for some weeks past. He had reached a great age, having seen his eighty-fifth year, and the thirty-first of his pontificate. He entered on his pontificate under the brightest auspices, and for a time made Italy and the world believe that he was strongly embued with Liberal principles. But the Revolution of 1848 came, which tried men's souls, and following it was the reaction in which the Pope sympathized. From his hiding place in Gaeta where he fled in his terror, he was sent back to Rome under guard of French bayonets, which took possession of the city after a heroic struggle with native troops under Garibaldi, and which held it for nearly sixteen years. From this time the temporal sovereignty was virtually at an end, and as the result of the famous Convention of September, 1864, between France and Italy the Pope was left with a shadow of authority over the city and vicinity for six years longer. When the Franco-Prussian war broke out in 1870 the French Emperor was compelled to withdraw his troops from Rome, which was quietly taken possession of by Victor Emmanuel, who restored it to its ancient position as the capital of Italy. The territorial sovereignty of the Prope was this nominally as well as really terminated, the only spot left under his control being the palace of the Vatican. Here he continued to reside, and here he breathed his last after a long and eventful life.

Apart from his political or purely polemical work, the deceased Pope was genial, kindly, and affectionate. His genial disposition, affability and tact enabled him to win a large measure of popularity with the general public, while he unquestionably stood high in the affections of all who belonged to the Church of which he was the head. His ecclesiastical policy has for many years been ultramontane, but probably not more so than that of any other occupant of the throne would have been under the same circumstances.

His death will have no visible effect on European politics. In temporal matters he long ago ceased to have any influence or power in shaping the destinies of the nations, and perhaps to-day the Roman pontiff has less influence than he ever had. The death of the Pope is, therefore, a matter purely of ecclesiastial significance, and whoever may be named as his successor will not be able to exercise any more power over the destines of Europe than the late Pope was able to do during the past sixteen or seventeen years of his life. We think the Roman See has been wisely deprived of the temporal power, and as the Italian Government seems inclined to grant the same favors to her under the new regime as she enjoyed in the olden time, we think she would be unwise if she did not accept the situation, and quietly and thankfully remain under the protectorate of a power whose sympathies are thoroughly liberal, and yet to a certain extent in consonance with the sentiments of the Roman Catholic Church.

It is probable that a Committee of the House of Commons will be asked to investigate a colorable transaction in which Dr. Tupper was complicated, as a member of the late Government. It seems that the Doctor owned a house in Hollis street, Halifax, which he desired to lease to the Government. To get over an evident difficulty, he "transferred" the property to his son, when the building was immediately leased to the Government at a large rental, and the form of observing the Parliamentary proprieties ingeniously complied with.

Messrs. Malouin and Haddow respectively voted for Quebec Centre and Restigouche with the majority on the election of Speaker, and Mr. DeCosmos, of British Columbia, and Mr. Pope, of Prince Edward Island, followed their example.

The Address in reply to the Speech will not be moved till Monday. Messrs. De St. Georges and Charlton will be the mover and seconder. Hon. Mr. Thibaudeau will move the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne in the Senate.

ENGLAND ACCEPTS THE CONFERENCE.

London, Feb. 7.

Consols drooped this morning in consequence of a rumour that the British fleet was ordered to Constantinople. Consols are recovering rapidly, and now Russian bonds are 2 per cent. lower than at the close of the market yesterday. Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, does not believe the rumoured occupation of Constantinople.

It is reported that a telegram from Mr. Layard expresses the gravest uneasiness at his isolation by cutting off all telegraph wires, and by information reaching him that by agreement with the Porte, the Russians are close to the city and are about to enter it, and also take up a position near Gallipoli. Layard's communication reached the Government by way of Alexandria.

Layard's telegram says the Russians have taken possession of a fort in the line of fortifications between Buyuk Chekmejeh and Chataldja, and another detachment has occupied the points of the Boulair lines.

A London despatch says:—Parliament has voted the war credit asked for. The Liberals withdrew all opposition.

The English Government are without official information of the actual entry of the Russians into Constantinople, but believe the Russians still continue to advance, notwithstanding the armistice being signed. A Cabinet Council has been hastily summoned early to-day.

In the House of Lords to day Lord Derby said he received yesterday a telegram from Mr. Layard, dated Feb. 5. At that time the Russians were pushing towards Constantinople, the Turkish troops had been compelled to evacuate a port on the Sea of Marmora. The Russian General had declared that according to his orders it was necessary he should occupy Tchataldja that day. The Porte is greatly alarmed, and cannot understand the Russian proceedings. It is also stated that the Servians destroyed a place called Vraja, and are advancing on the railway towards Salonica. Five days have elapsed since the signature of the armistice, and the preliminaries of peace, and the protocol have not yet reached the Porte, which is ignorant of some of the terms. Another telegram dated yesterday and received last night, states that the Russian Government requested that the Chekmadje line be abandoned, which will leave Constantinople undefended. The Russians occupied in considerable force Tchataloja, which is part of the Turkish lines of defence, extending across the peninsula, and less than thirty miles from Constantinople. By telegram to-day we asked Russia to give us some explanation, and we have called its attention to the declaration by the Emperor in July last that he would occupy Constantinople only if it were necessary. It does not appear to Her Majesty's Government that there can be any necessity for an advance by the Russians. Lord Derby added that it was possible that the various steps taking place were not in contravention of the provisions of the armistice.

In the House of Lords Earl Derby corroborated the statement made in the House of Commons, but added that Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, had telegraphed to St. Petersburg as to the truth of the Russians advancing on Constantinople and occupying a portion of the defences, and had received a reply from Prince Gortschakoff that the Russian commander had been ordered to cease hostilities, and that the rumours which had reached him (Schouvaloff) were untrue.

In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote confirmed the report of the advance of the Russians towards Constantinople. The advance he said may be in accordance with the terms of the armistice, but the Turks affect surprise.

In the House of Commons Sir Stafford Northcote said England assents to Austria's proposal for a Conference.

Previous to the withdrawal of Mr. Forster's amendment a heated debate took place, some Conservatives wishing to have the amendment voted on and formally negatived.

John Bright thought if Turkey had decided to exchange an English for a Russian alliance and friendship, that would not justify England in assuming a warlike attitude.

After Mr. Forster's amendment was withdrawn, further debate occurred upon the question whether "the speaker do now leave the chair." The Radicals took advantage of this formal motion, which must be passed before the House can go into Committee, to attack the Government's policy, particularly concerning Earl Beaconsfield. Mr. Mills and other Conservatives retaliated, and accused the Radicals of lack of patriotism.

The Speaker was ultimately voted out of the chair by 205 to 96. The minority consisted of Radicals and some Liberals.

In the House to night,

Sir Stafford Northcote read a letter from Lord Beaconsfield referring to the statement in the Adrianople despatch of the Daily News that Server Pasha had declared that Turkey had been encouraged to fight by a promise of English support, and that Earl Beaconsfield and Mr. Layard were responsible for her persistence in the war. Lord Baconsfield declared:—"I have only to say that the statement in an infamous fabrication."

There was tremendous excitement this evening outside Parliament. Crowds thronged the streets, singing "God save the Queen," and making demonstrations in favor of the Government.

A despatch dated London, midnight, says:—The popular feeling is intensely hostile to Russia. The windows of Mr. Gladstone's town house and of the Daily News office were broken to-night by excited crowds.

It is rumored in the lobby of the House of Commons that a later telegram has been received from Mr. Layard, confirming the report that the Russians have occupied Chataldja, and are advancing on Chekmejeh.

The Post says, relative to the Russian advance on Constantinople:—We may rely upon it that the Government are now aware that British interests have been directly attacked, and they will adopt measures for their defence.

A Vienna correspondent says: On Thursday a private telegram arrived here which states that the British fleet is again leaving for the Dardanelles.

The following additional points of the Armistice Conditions are asserted in specials:—That the railway between Adrinople and Constantinople be repaired and operated; also, the telegraph line between Adrianople and Odessa, by way of Constantinople; the raising of the blockade of the Black Sea and the Danube for everything except ammunition; the Russians to occupy the Black Sea coasts from the Russian frontier to Baltichik, and from Missioui to Derkioj, on the Sea of Marmora; the Russians to occupy Baljuk, Theakmaje, and Tscharkioj, and on the Ægean Sea from Enos to Mekri. These are the additions to the points held by the Russians at signature of the Armistice.

An Adrianople correspondent says:—The delay in signing the armistice was caused by the refusal of Server and Namyk Pashas to accept the condition creating the Principality of Bulgaria, which they declared would be the destruction of the Turkish Empire in Europe.

A despatch from the Grand Duke Nicholas received at St. Petersburg announces that in accordance with the understanding between the Russian and Turkish plenipotentiaries, free commercial intercourse by land and sea is to be immediately re-established between Turkey and Russia.

The Globe this afternoon says:—

We understand that although the announcement that the Russians entered Constantinople is, up to the latest advices, untrue, the Russian columns are actually advancing rapidly upon the Turkish capital and Gallipoli. It has been known in diplomatic circles some days that the Russians are still advancing, but it is regarded as almost impossible they can yet be in possession of Constantinople. We are enabled to state that no official information of the report has yet reached the Foreign Office.

A despatch from Constantinople, dated Feb. 7, 3 p.m., via El Arish, says:—"In accordance with the conditions of the armistice, the Turkish force has evacuated the line of fortifications of Constantinople. The Russian troops are now in the lines.

A Berlin despatch says:—Russia's motive in delaying the acceptance of Austria's invitation to the Conference is now explained. Russia makes a distinction between the basis for preliminaries of peace and the preliminaries themselves.

A Vienna correspondent says difficulty is expected to arise concerning the desire of Russia to exclude Turkey from the Conference.

A Vienna correspondent says:—Russia will not object to Turkey's being represented at the Conference, but it is stated that she will not accept the Treaty of Paris as the basis of the negotiation.

The Post says a telegram has been received announcing the cessation of hostilities in the Greek provinces of Turkey by the signing of an armistice upon the understanding that all causes of dissension shall be referred to the Conference, the Greek army meanwhile remaining in Thessaly and Epirus, and Turkey undertaking not to attack the insurgents in Crete. It is also stated that the Turkish fleet has been ordered not to proceed to the Piræus, but to remain in readiness outside of the Dardanelles.

A Pera special, dated Wednesday, says: The Russian Generals have arrived to fix the terms of the armistice. The lines of Tchekmedge have been evacuated by the Turks.

A Constantinople special reports that the lines of defence of Constantinople have been dismantled and the guns brought into the city. Several Russians have arrived there to assist in the settlement of the boundaries.

A Tirnova telegram states that the Russians are receiving large reinforcements. The Russian troops in Roumelia have been ordered to hold themselves ready to march at a moment's notice.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW
—OR—
The Gauger of Skene.

"Hum! No, Tom, no—and not more favorable than I myself supposed," replied the lawyer. "Hume is very explicit, and his exposition is dead against the plea I had thought of."

The language of the reply, as well as its tone, betokened the seriousness of the lawyer's mind, for though he in general spoke with a large mixture of Doric, he never did so when he had any subject under deep consideration.

Ironby fervently hoped that the person at the window would hear Adamson's voice and depart; and a thrill of relief shot through him as his strained ear heard the stealthy footsteps retreat from the window.

But what was his horror when, an instant after, a low but distinct tap came to the front door.

"Bless me!" exclaimed the lawyer, "fa can that be at this hour of the evening, and on sic a night too?"

"I—I'll see, sir," cried Tom, starting up. "It must be some one come to the wrong door."

"Faith, that can scarcely be, gin they are not blind fu' or not able to read the name upo' the brassplate. But gang and see who it is and fat they want."

Away sped Tom, though not without casting a fearful glance at the closet and feeling terrified least Adamson should enter it before he returned. But suddenly he reflected that this was impossible, as it was locked and he had the key safe in his own pocket. So with such consolation as this recollection imparted, he passed into the lobby and then opened the front door.

"Ye—yes," answered Tom Ironby, in the extremity of astonishment; but you cannot see him to night; it is long past business hours. You will have to call to-morrow."

"I maun see him, returned the old man. "My business is important, and canna wait, as ye may ken when an auld man like me is here on sic a rough nicht. Just tell him I want him."

"What name shall I say?" inquired Tom, cursing the arrival of this new addition to his perplexity.

"Never mind my name. I'll tell him that when I see him," replied the old man with sturdy bluntness.

"It's, me Maister Adamson. I want tae see ye, sir," answered the stranger himself, as he stepped over the threshold and came into view.

He seemed to be a person of at least sixty years of age, and had the look of a countryman of plain and homely exterior. He had long grey hair, and a long beard, almost white. On his head he wore a broad blue bonnet; a checked, cotton napkin was tied roughly round his neck; a shepherd's plaid was thrown across his shoulders; his nether limbs were encased in a pair of dark corduroy knee breeches, with broad ribbed grey stockings beneath; and a pair of old hob-nailed shoes on his feet.

"Eh, fa are you, my man, fa are you, and fat's yer business wi' me at this late hour?" asked Adamson, just a little gruffly, for the man's appearance suggested business of a very trivial kind—very likely a petty quarrel about the trespass of sheep, the running of a march fence, or some other equally trifling matter. But as he was an old man and had evidently come far on a stormy night, he asked him to come into the inner room and state his business there.

"Thank ye, sir, I'll dae that," replied the stranger, going stamping ben in his heavy shoes, followed by Ironby, who thought that for such an old man he was extremely broad-shouldered and massively built.

Arrived in the lighted room, the lawyer sat down in his chair, and motioned to his uncouth visitor to take another opposite, which the latter did very readily.

"Oh, you needn't mind Tom. He's my clerk.

"No, sir. I'll wait in the other room," replied Tom harriedly, and made his exit ere his master had time to say another word.

The eye of the old man followed his retreating form, and after he had vanished, listened to his step till it crossed the lobby and was lost in the opposite chamber. Then he slowly turned, and bending forward till his face was close to Adamson's, he whispered earnestly and with a tone and accent very different from his former broad Doric—

"Don't let him wait—send him away."

"My guid gracious!" gasped the lawyer, springing to his feet in the utmost consternation.

And little wonder that he did so, for under the grey wig and the white beard he had recognised the features of Harold Logan.

INCREASED RAILWAY FACILITIES.—A large and enthusiastic meeting was held at Elmira on Wednesday, to facilitate the railway matters for the Northern part of the County of Waterloo. The project discussed by a deputation from Wellesley was for the building of a line from Salem through to Stratford, and by a deputation of Drayton advancing a line from Waterloo to Drayton via Elmira to Mount Forest and to strike at some point on Georgian Bay. There being nothing definite to lay before the meeting, a committee was appointed from Wellington to correspond with the President of the Credit Valley Railway Company for the extension of that line; also a committee was appointed from Drayton to correspond with the Grand Trunk Railway Company to see whether they would extend the line from Waterloo northward.

What a High Protective Tariff Has Done For Woollen Manufactures.

The following from the Boston Post is worthy the attention of those who may be inclined to support the John A. Macdonald policy of a tariff for Canada similar to that of the United States:—

"The manufacturing and commercial interests which were represented before the Ways and Means Committee by well-known gentlemen of this city, were made to favor a general reduction of the present tariff, or, at any rate, its decided simplification. It is only a repetition, in a larger form, of the unanimous demands of the wool manufacturers at their recent Convention in this city. This compound absurdity of the tariff is now pretty well understood. There never was such a hodge-podge of taxation imposed on a people as the present tariff inflicts on the tax payers of this country.

"The wool manufacturers, looking back over the history of the past ten years, say with one voice that they have had enough protection, and in fact too much of it. The 'infant' has grown weaker instead of stronger. The manufacture of wool has failed to be built up by it. Enterprise has been arbitrarily restrained, trade has been contracted and natural advantages have been cut off. That is the plain fact as it is to-day stated by the manufacturers themselves. Is such a result to be called protection or spoliation? Everybody knows that we had the greatest prosperity the country ever saw when the duties were lowest, which was from 1857 to 1860. By this time, if ever, after the people have been taxed so enormously in order to keep out foreign productions and establish our own manufactures, it ought to be fairly ascertained whether they cannot successfully compete with foreign productions without any further tax. The testimony of the wool manufacturers must be accepted as final on the subject. They are experts, who know more about the matter than others. If they are the ones to sound the knell of protection, it is full time to prepare for the funeral."

The "Herald's" Abuse.

(From the Galt Reformer.)

The Guelph Herald was never remarkable at any time for good taste or a sense of the proprieties of journalism. Latterly it has been notorious for the absence of these desirable traits; the scurrility of its attacks on other newspapers and on public men having given it an unenviable reputation wherever it is known. No Tory journal has been more busy than it in slandering its political opponents in the vain hope of making them appear blacker than the chiefs to whom he has sold conscience and virtue and common sense. This being the case we are not at all surprised that the article which appeared in its columns a few days ago, and which is headed "The Galt Slanderer," a title which the highly cultured editor of the Herald should know is a misnomer, as the allegations which he styles "slanders," every well informed Canadian knows, and Sir John himself has acknowledged, to be substantially correct. The violation of the impersonality of journalism committed in ascribing the authorship of our articles, exposing Sir John's lame excuse, to Mr. James Young, is not at all surprising in such a journal as the Herald. As to the articles in question, we have this to say, that had Mr. Young written them no journal with any just claim to respectability would have the slightest justification or excuse for ascribing them to him, as the editor of any paper is responsible for the articles which appear in its columns. But Mr. Young did not write them, and the pretence that he did was made by the Herald because it could find no other possible pretext for pouring out its venom upon him. It would be superfluous to say one word in defence of Mr. Young against the insinuations and silly attacks of the Herald: the censure of that journal is more to be coveted than its praise. In regard to the allegations we have made in the articles on Sir John and his visit, we have this to say, that we challenge our cotem. to dispute any one of them. The only one of our statements to which it specially takes exception is that there were only eight or nine hundred persons present at Sir John's meeting. This estimate is not in the least below the truth, and if the Herald thinks differently let it, by all means, inform the people of Galt how many hundreds their town hall will hold when crowded, to say nothing of how many it did hold when there was room left for at least two hundred. But we warn that journal to be very careful in its estimate, or it may only bring ridicule on itself.

The Newfoundland Legislature opened on Thursday. An increase of $12,000 is reported in the revenue of the colony this year as compared with last.

The final majority in favour of the repeal of the Dunkin Act in Lennox and Addington is 802. The Dunkinites will take immediate steps to test the legality of the vote in the courts.

Leading Republicans state their belief that President Hayes will veto the Bland Silver Bill, and that the attempt to pass it over the veto will fail, whereupon a new Silver Bill will be brought in for a large and immediate issue of silver dollars of greater weight that 412½ grains.

Colonel Lyttleton, Military Secretary, and Capt. Hamilton, A.D.C. to the Governor-General, have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to join their corps. It is understood that all officers of the regular army have received the same intimation.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Hon. Mr. Anglin Elected Speaker.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.

The House of Commons met at three o'clock. Almost every member was in his place, and there was an immense throng in the galleries.

Directly after the assembling of the members the Gentlemen Usher of the Black Rod rapped at the door of the Chamber and was admitted by the Sergeant-at-Arms. He advanced to within a few feet of the Clerk's table and said:—

"Gentlemen—Sir William Buell Richards, Deputy Governor-General, desires the immediate attendance of your honourable House in the Chamber of the Honourable the Senate."

The members then repaired to the Senate Chamber.

The Deputy Governor General was seated on the Throne. As soon as the Commoners entered the Chamber the President of the Senate, Mr. Christie, said:—

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate and Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

Sir William Buell Richards, Deputy Governor-General, does not see fit to declare the cause for calling this Parliament of the Dominion of Canada until a Speaker of the House of Commons shall be chosen according to law, but to-morrow at three o'clock the cause for calling this Parliament will be declared.

The members then returned to the Commons Chamber.

After calling the House to order the Clerk, Mr. Patrick, proceeded to read the list of members elected to represent the various constituencies whose representation had become vacant since the last meeting of Parliament.

While the returns were being read,

Sir John Macdonald rose and said—Mr. Patrick, I conceive that you cannot as Clerk of the House perform the duties of Speaker in making these announcements to the House, and I object to your doing so. Your only duty is, if any member speaks, to point to him and mention on his name.

The returns having been read,

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie said—Mr. Patrick, I beg to move, seconded by Hon. A. J. Smith, that the Hon. Timothy Warren Anglin do take the chair as Speaker of this House. In doing so I need only say that I know I am expressing the opinion of the entire House when I say that that hon. gentleman gave the greatest possible satisfaction during the time he occupied the chair of this House. I think I am consulting the general interests, in making the motion which I now place in your hands. (Hear, hear; cheers and cries of "Carried.")

Sir John Macdonald said he regretted that hon. gentleman opposite had made this motion. He regretted it on public grounds. He regretted that under the circumstances with which all the old members of the House, at least, were familiar such a motion should have been made by the head of the Government. The Speaker of the House was chosen to act judicially between parties, to free himself from all political connection, and therefore the rule in England—and a very wise rule and very wise practice it was, although unfortunately they had not introduced it into this country, and thus saw now more than ever the disadvantage of not following these precedents. He went on to say that as no rule with regard to the introduction of members in Canada the English rule must apply, which rule or practice, dating back to an order of the House of Commons as old as 1688, or, as, with a profound knowledge of history, he declared to be, during Cromwell's Protectorate, provided that new members should be introduced to the Speaker in order to secure that they should be the better known to the House. The House, he held, was not constituted; it was only an assembly of persons elected, and Mr. Anglin could not take his seat until a Speaker was elected to whom he could be formally introduced. He admitted that in Dr. Kenealy's case the rule had been waived on the motion of the Premier, but that, he said, was under the pressure of the necessity, which did not exist in the present case. Some other points he raised, but the gist of his case was that the House could not possibly break through the law of Parliament thus established.

Mr. Mackenzie, on rising to reply was greeted with loud cheers. He held that if Sir John Macdonald's argument were good for anything he certainly had no right to be in his place, still less to move resolutions or give a vote. For it so happened that in 1875 Sir John being one of some thirty members unseated on petition and re-elected, had actually proposed to Mr. Anglin that they should all take their seats without any introduction at all. This Mr. Anglin had consented to, and it was not until in the session of 1876, when Dr. Orton had inadvertently taken his seat without subscribing the rolls, that the Speaker had suggested as a matter of convenience, not of rule or necessity, the ceremony of introduction should be revived in all cases. But his argument founded on British practice was quite as easily disposed of. There the members are sworn in before the Speaker in person. Here the Clerk is by statute empowered to discharge the duty of administering the oath and seeing the names recorded, so that even if the advertisement of the return in the Gazette were not sufficient, the identification by an officer of the House was complete, and identification is all the House requires. It was of course perfectly absurd to suppose that a dozen or more gentleman duly elected should be disposed of their rights to join in the election of Speaker after complying with all the provisions of the law, merely because the ceremony of formal introduction was not complied with.

Mr. Masson, after the member had been called in, raised the point of order that unless there were a second nomination no votes could be recorded.

Mr. Mitchell wanted to know if he could vote, and as he got no answer, made rapidly for the door. The division showed: For the motion 116, and against it 52, a majority of 64 for the Government on what was intended to be a grand assault on the Ministerial position. The announcement of the numbers was loudly cheered, and the cheering was renewed when the Speaker elect was conducted by his mover and seconder to the chair.

The Speaker—I thank the House most sincerely for the very high honor done me in electing me to the responsible and dignified position of Speaker of this honorable body. I can only assure hon. members that while I continue to hold the chair I shall endeavor, as I believe and trust I have endeavored in the past, to discharge the duties of the position impartially and fairly, and in such a way as to satisfy every fair-minded and honorable man, and to add, if possible, to the dignity and respect due to this honorable body. (Cheers.)

The House then adjourned.

CABBIES.—It is right and proper that the By-law regulating cab drivers should be strictly enforced. Some hack-drivers are very importunate in soliciting fares on the railway platform, notwithstanding they all know it is perfectly illegal to do so. This morning Wm. Murray, day operator at the G. T. R. station, charged Joseph Emery and James Mulligan with the above offence. Both pleaded guilty. Emery was fined $1 and $2 25 costs, and Mulligan $2 and $2.25 costs.

GUELPH BURYING GROUND.—We understand that the Private Bills' Committee of the Local Legislature on Thursday decided to introduce the bill in the House for making the old burying ground in Guelph a public park or place of resort for the people of the Town and Township. This burying ground has now lain for nearly thirty years unused, and as it lies in the very heart of the Town, it is conveniently and pleasantly situated for the purpose. We feel satisfied that the Council will make it in every respect a most desirable place of public resort, and that in no way will the feelings of any one be outraged in levelling and beautifying this old burying ground, and making it a place of pleasant resort for those in the town and country who still want, in a sense, to keep up the sacred character of the place.

Whenever an animal strays into your premises, it is your duty to advertise such stray animal at once so that the owner can know of its whereabouts and secure his property. MILD WINTERS.—It is a remarkable coincidence that the decades of 1798, 1808, 1818, 1828, 1838, 1848, 1858, 1868 and 1878 should be productive of mild winters, which fact renders it possible that some system exists which astronomers have not studied up.

SOCIAL.—The social in the basement of the Primitive Methodist Church last evening was very well attended, the basement of the church being completely crowded. The Rev. Mr. Harris occupied the chair, and several of the congregation contributed to the programme. The receipts at the door were much above the ordinary, and will very materially help the debt on the church.

SOUP KITCHEN.—Many generous persons in Guelph and vicinity have been displaying their kindness of heart by furnishing supplies to the Guelph Soup Kitchen. Millers have bestowed flour; bakers, bread; butchers, meat; and farmers peas and vegetables in a manner which calls forth from many a destitute family here a heartfelt "God bless them." No person that has not taken the trouble to drop in and interview the Matron, Mrs. Edwards, about meal times, can have any idea of the number of half famished people that is to be met at the Soup Kitchen. Many tramps are also supplied, some big burly men, who should feel their position keenly, but apparently do not, while others are cadaverous featured, knock-kneed, and apparently suffering from general debility. The average quantity of soup doled out per diem is about 120 gallons. Those who are able to contribute to this worthy institution should do so, as it requires a large supply to keep the boilers constantly filled with soup.

VAGRANTS.—This (Saturday) morning Samuel Soden and Henry Soden, two strong, abled bodied young men, were charged by Mrs. Mary Soden, their mother, with being "vagrants, loose, idle, and disorderly persons, within the meaning of the statute." Mrs. Soden's evidence went to show that the defendants would not work, and had not done so for some time. Convicted and sentenced to four months at hard labor in the County gaol.

BUTCHERS vs. GROCERS.—This (Saturday) morning the Police Magistrate gave decision in the case of Mr. James Schofield, charged with a breach of the Market By-law, regulating butchers' shops in Guelph. The case was dismissed without costs, the Magistrate holding that the defendant observed the spirit of the law in having a shop adjoining his grocery in which he keeps his meat for sale, and that the shop has a separate entrance from the street for the use of the public. Wendal Sauer, Cork street, was charged by Chief Kelly with an infraction of the Market By-law in selling fresh butchers' meat in less quantities than by the quarter. Pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs. The Butchers' Association will appeal against the decision of the magistrate in Schofield's case, and also in A. W. Fielder's.

Social and Presentation.

On Friday evening some forty or fifty members of the Dublin Street Methodist Church assembled at the residence of Mr. M. A. Keables, where several hours were spent in a very pleasant manner. The occasion was in honor of Mr. Henry Kirkland, who, with his family, is about leaving Guelph to take up his residence near St. Thomas, in the county of Elgin. Mr. Kirkland has, for many years been a leading, useful, and much respected member of the Methodist Church in Guelph, and his many friends could not let him depart without expressing in some way their regard for him. Shortly after the party had assembled, Mr. John H. Osborn, on behalf of the Official Board, read the following address, and Mrs. R. S. King presented a very handsome silver cake basket, on which was inscribed—"Presented to Mr. and Mrs. Kirkland by their friends of the Dublin Street Methodist Church, Guelph, February 1878."

ADDRESS.

Dear Brother,

We have learned with regret that you are soon to remove from our midst to another section of the country, and we feel that we cannot allow you to depart without giving some expression of our esteem for you as a man and our admiration for your character as a christian.

Your uniform kindness and consistency as a member of the Church, in all the offices you have been called to fill, will be long and gratefully remembered by us.

We have admired your modest and unobtrusive piety, and will greatly miss you in the councils and work of the Church.

Your labors in the official positions assigned you, both as leader and local preacher, have been highly appreciated by the people, and owned by the Master in the good of the cause.

We all wish we had it in our power to retain your services in the Church here, with which you have been so long and honorably connected. But as this cannot be, we pray that the Lord may keep you and your partner and the other members of your family in that integrity of character which will make you useful wherever the providence of God may place you.

Our prayers for the future prosperity of yourself and family will follow you, and in the great Gathering Day, we trust we may all meet again in our "Father's House on High." As a small token of esteem for you and your family, please accept the accompanying piece of silver.

(Signed.) ALFRED SMITH,
Recording Steward Dublin-st. Circuit

Guelph, Feb. 8th 1878.

Mr. Kirkland replied in a very feeling manner to the address. He said both the address and gift were wholly unexpected and undeserved by him. Whenever he should look upon the gift his heart would go up to God that he would bless the people of Guelph.

That beautiful and touching song, "Shall we gather at the river," was then sung, after which prayer was offered up by the Rev. Mr. Brock.

The ladies had prepared coffee, and an abundance of good things which were passed around, and a most pleasant time was spent in social conversation up to the hour of separation, when the company broke up. Many regrets were expressed at the removal of Mr. Kirkland and family, but they go bearing with them the well wishes of many friends in Guelph.

The Rev. Solomon Peter Hale's Ideas of Hell.

The Rev. Solomon Peter Hale, pastor of the colored congregation in Ingersoll lately delivered a discourse in the Music Hall on "Future Punishment," to over 200 people. Bro. Hale will be remembered as having been at one time stationed in Guelph, where he was highly esteemed by his own congregation and looked upon by them as the most erudite personage in this section of the country. The reverend gentleman's powers of eloquence shone with particular brilliancy on one occasion when the members of the colored church gave a social in the drill shed here. Those who heard his address on that occasion will give him credit for being able to deliver a startling discourse on any hot subject. A few extracts of his late discourse are gleaned from the Ingeroll Chronicle:

After a few introductory remarks Bro. Hale went on to say that the great problematical question which hyperbolically agitated the minds of his great intellectual audience proved the depth of the convex actuation of the powerful theme for which he was present to touch upon. (Applause.) It was a theme staggering to a greater intellectuality than he possessed. He did not come before an audience as a practical theologian! No! Not a bit of it! He came in the character of a Christian! He desired to press upon the minds of his great audience the operation of two great objects—objects that greatly concerned the audience and himself. The subject of his address has been ringing up and down Ingersoll for several months past. Is there no hell? No future punishment? He was not gifted with the power of a literaturical genius, but was a Bible reader. Peradventure he had no difficulty in proving that there was a hell or a place of endless duration. He was going to rehearse a few thoughts, at the same time he promised not to get obstreperous or flustrated, but to keep very calm! He was not going to trouble them with Greek or Latin, as it was equinoctically manifest to all that Greek and Latin would not convert the soul of a man, nor never would! (Applause.) Saul of Tartarus told the Greeks there was a hell and they believed him. He need not illustrate old sin's qualifications. The same adversary, sin's is the same to-day as in the days of old. We find old Satan stalking here and in the British empire, where the roaring lion shakes his mane! and the fluttering eagle soars away frightened at its own echoes! (Great applause) God made Adam a helpmate, and using a kind of a certain optical concentrated nervous solutive power put him to sleep, and drew from him a beautiful, lovely, handsome, sweet, angelic woman! (Applause) Oh, lovely feminine! God did not draw Eve out of Adam's foot! The speaker guessed not! Nor did he draw sweet Eve out of Adam's head! Not a bit of it; this helpmate—that beautiful lady—was like a beautiful fruit tree. If you want some of the choicest fruit you must get it from the top of the tree. Alas! here comes mother Eve with a gigantic resolution, exclaiming "There is no hell!" This was a monthly occasion cry of some philosophers. What a mistaken idea! Mother Eve said to Adam "that forbidden tree looks beautiful," and Satan says "there was no harm in partaking thereof." This affected the genuine curiosity of the first lady. Her idea of curiosity was overbalanced. She was particularly deceived on this point. My friends, you just take Satan's word about hell and you will soon find out what side you are on! Put the optic nerve of your eye to such a picture and you will be hypothetically surprised. The reverend gentleman continued his discourse for nearly an hour, towards the conclusion of which he defined hell as a consolidated concentrated mass of sulphurious combustible brimstone, and can you theologians deny it? The subject was so deep that he felt reanimated!

Presentations.

Chief Armstrong and Assistant Chief Robertson, G. F. B., the Recipients.

It is a well known fact in town that the most perfect unanimity has always existed between the officers of the Guelph Fire Brigade, and members thereof; and while the men are always ready and willing to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent the destruction of property by fire, they have never on any occasion been pressed to do heedless work by their officers. So long as the Brigade retains the harmony that is now to be found in its ranks, its efficiency will never become impaired.

On Friday evening the members of the Brigade met at the Mitchell House, and on invitation Major Armstrong, Chief, and Adam Robertson, jr., Assistant Chief, were present. Oysters were served up in a manner for which Mrs. Mitchell has a reputation, and after a social time had been spent around the festive board, the company adjourned to the parlor of the hotel.

The gathering was brought to order by Mr. Thos. Griffin being appointed chairman, and he at once called on Mr. Chas. Spalding and Chief Armstrong to step forward. Mr. Spalding, with a few introductory remarks, read the following address:—

Mr. James Armstrong, Chief Engineer, Guelph Fire Brigade:

SIR,—We have been associated together in the Guelph Fire Brigade for two years and a half, during which time we have ever found in you a friend rather than a superior officer—one ever watching to alleviate the inconvenience to which we, as firemen in the discharge of our duty, are often subject. Our associations have ever been marked by the most hearty friendship and sympathy, unmarred by a single exhibition of ill-feeling.

We therefore, desiring to show our appreciation of one in whom the elements of a friend and an officer are so happily connected, beg you to accept this walking stick—not for any monetary value that may attach to it, but as a tribute of sincere friendship and regard.

Signed:—John Spalding, John Hewer, Thos. Griffin, John Ray, Theo. D. Fenwick, John W. Burgess, Thos. Hewer, Chas. Spalding, Jas. Robinson, Geo. Barber, Geo. Armstrong, Thos Gemmell.

It is not often that the getting up of presentations are conducted with positive secrecy. The intended recipient generally gets an inkling of what is about to transpire before the presentation takes place. This occasion was certainly an exception. Chief Armstrong looked surprised, and in fact he was surprised, and agreeably, too. He briefly thanked the Brigade for their kind expression of esteem. He knew the men were efficient, and he took great pleasure in publicly stating it. It was his hope, and he had do doubt the wish of all present, that the exceedingly harmonious relations would continue to exist in the Brigade. He again thanked them and took his seat amidst applause.

Mr. Jas. Robinson and Assistant Chief Robertson were next requested to step forward by the chairman, and the former gentleman read the following address:—

Mr. Adam Robertson, jr., Assistant Chief, Guelph Fire Brigade:

SIR,—Will you accept this pipe as a token of regard from the members of the Guelph Fire Brigade. During the time that you have been connected with the Brigade you have endeared yourself to us by many acts of kindness, while your genial and pleasant bearing have made you a welcome friend. By this act we aim to show to you that your deportment towards us, both as a company, and as personal friends, is fully appreciated.

Signed:—John Spalding, John Hewer, Thos. Griffin, John Ray, Theo. D. Fenwick, John W. Burgess, Thos. Hewer, Chas. Spalding, Jas. Robinson, Geo. Barber, Geo. Armstrong, Thos Gemmell.

Mr. Robertson was also surprised. After kindly thanking the Brigade for the expression of confidence, he referred to the apparatus at present at the disposal of Brigade as being inefficient for the proper protection of the town. He was of opinion, however, that the present Council would grapple with the question in a proper manner, and it would not be long before all the apparatus that was really required would be provided. The speaker was cheered as he took his seat.

A couple of hours were afterwards spent in a jovial manner, in social talk, mixed up with songs, &c.

Chief Armstrong's cane is of ebony, with an ivory handle and gold band. A suitable inscription is nicely engraved on the band. Assistant Chief Robertson's pipe is a valuable meerschaum, with gold band bearing the letters "A. R." engraved thereon.

Both articles were purchased at Mr. B. Savage's jewellery establishment.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S DRAWING-ROOM.—The Senate Chamber on Friday night presented a most brilliant spectacle, on the occasion of the drawing-room held by Lord and Lady Dufferin. The galleries were completely filled, a great many being unable to find room. Shortly before the arrival of the Vice-Regal party Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Selby-Smyth, with a brilliant staff of officers in full uniform, took their places in the centre of Chamber. At twenty minutes past nine o'clock the Governor-General and Lady Dufferin took their places on the dais before the throne. Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie were first presented, the other members of the Cabinet following, with the ladies of their families. Then came the Senators with their ladies; then the members of the House of Commons, and the general public. The reception lasted two hours, and there must have been not less than five hundred presentations. Lady Dufferin looked remarkably well, and went through the fatiguing ceremony with her usual grace and dignity. She was dressed in pale blue silk, white lace trimming, coronet and diamond ornaments. The ceremony concluded with the presentation of the officers, and the assembly gradually dispersed.

ELORA.—The February fair was well attended. Cattle brought from $3 to $3.15 per cwt. and sheep held at $5 and $6, did not fetch $4.—A span or working horses in fair condition were recently sold for $11, and a set of double harness for $4 75.—Mr. D. Ritchie has won the Clarke curling medal.—Messrs George Barron and John Godfrey lately imposed a fine of $20, and $4.95 costs, upon Thomas Heffernan, of Dunnock, for contravention of license Act.

The Evening Mercury

SATURDAY EVEN'G, FEB. 9, 1878.

The Speech from the Throne.

The Speech from the Throne, delivered at the opening of the Dominion Parliament, is of more than ordinary interest. His Excellency very appropriately refers in it to his visit to Manitoba, thus closing his round of visits to all the Provinces in the Dominion. No other Governor has manifested the same interest in Canada, and in his desire to see every portion of it he has shown an anxious desire to become acquainted with all our outlying Provinces, and by his intercourse with the people, to cultivate a friendship which will tend to strengthen our connection with the mother land, and also greatly raise in our estimation Her Majesty's representative in Canada.

Although the amount awarded in our Fisheries claim is much less than that asked for by Canada, yet our Government accepts the award made in that spirit of loyalty which proclaims its adherence to the decision of the Commission. Our creditable exhibit of Canadian manufactures in New South Wales is referred to, as is also our preparations for making a similar exhibit at the forthcoming Exhibition in Paris. Not only directly but indirectly these Exhibitions are of the greatest benefit to Canada, as they tend to bring under the notice of the world our manufactures and our resources. In this way the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia last year was of immense advantage to us. In a lesser degree the same may be said of the Australian Exhibition, and we have no doubt that the forthcoming Exposition in Paris will help to raise Canada in the estimation of the world.

Reference is made to the treaties with the Indians, lately so satisfactorily concluded; also to the prosecution of the surveys of the Pacific Railway in British Columbia, by which it is expected that a definite route for this great highway has been decided on.

In the way of legislation we are promised some measures of importance. We are to have an improved mode of auditing the Public Accounts. We are promised much needed and valuable legislation in connection with the opening up and settlement of the North-West. These measures will take the shape of registration of titles, the enactment of a homstead law, and the promotion of railway enterprises in parts of the territory not touched by the Pacific Railway. We hail these promises as evidences of the anxiety felt by the Government to help on the great work of colonizing these remote districts of the Dominion. We only want in these districts an influx of sturdy and enterprising settlers, and in opening up the territory by railway and other means of communication, the Government is taking the surest and quickest mode of settling those vast plains, which, ere many years, are destined to supply food for millions of people in Europe, besides satisfying all the wants of the population within their own borders. When we begin to think of these illimitable plains the imagination loses control of itself, but it does not go beyond the mark when it predicts that ere many years it will be the garden of America, and the granary of the world.

Several other important measures are promised. Take it all in all the Speech is an admirable one. It deals in a true spirit with the past and the present, and as regards the future it promises even more than we had reason to expect.

FERGUS.—The match between the Lucknow and Fergus Curling Clubs for the Royal Caledonian Curling Club Medal was played here on Wilson's mill dam on Tuesday, and resulted in favor of Fergus by a majority of 11 shots, the score being: Fergus 82, Lucknow 71.——Mr. Mennie has been appointed assessor, and Mr. Geo. W. Thorp collector for the current year.

On the morning of the 5th instant the barn and stables on Mr. Alex. White's farm in West Garafraxa were discovered to be on fire. The barn was a frame 35x22. Both were entirely consumed, together with the contents of the barn. The cattle and horses were got out of the stables. The loss is estimated at $1,200. The barn was insured in the Nichol Mutual for $250, and the contents for $550. The insurance on buildings does not amount to one half of the loss, but the contents are pretty well covered.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provide our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage wich may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. BLACK QUARTER.—The Glencoe local print says that since its last notice of what is commonly known as the "black leg" disease in cattle, a number of calves and young cattle have died in that vicinity. With regard to it, Youatt, a good authority, in his book on diseases of cattle, says that the "black quarter" is not a disease in itself, but the effect produced by inflammatory fever. As the fever is seldom noticed until it has progressed to the last fatal stage, the appearance of which has furnished the popular name, he recommends preventative measures as the most effectual—such as bleeding, physic, and less stimulating food, particularly for young cattle that are thriving rapidly, as they are the most likely to be attacked.

ST. DAVID'S STREET BRIDGE.—This bridge has caused considerable trouble to the village of Fergus, already that corporation has lost a suit in the courts brought against the County of Wellington, in which it was tried to force the bridge on the county. The village Solicitor has now advised the Council that a somewhat similar bridge suit had been brought against the County of Haldimand by the village of York, in which judgment was entered against the County, but the case had been appealed, and he would not advise any proceedings against the County of Wellington until the Haldimand appeal is decided.

HON. MR. BLAKE has taken the seat lately occupied by Mr. Huntington in the second row immediately behind Mr. Mackenzie. The late President of the Council was in the House for some time on Friday conversing with many of his friends.

WE have the authority of the Globe's Ottawa correspondent for saying that the Government are sueing the Bank of Montreal for the $6,6000 improperly withdrawn from their custody by Sir. John A. Macdonald.

THE Northern Pacific Railway, which caused the collapse of Jay Cooke & Co., and gave the initial downward movement to financial affairs in the United States, still retains some vitality. A bill that has just been reported in Congress, and which is likely to be adopted, allows ten more years during which to finish the line.

THE Exemptions Committee of the Local Legislature are actively at work. On Thursday they decided to make further enquiry as to exemption of church and school property, but that no change should be made in the law so far as it relates to county property. They have also selected a number of sections from the Assessment Act for consideration and enquiry.

A Montreal despatch says "it has just leaked out that Sir John, convinced that it must at the next general election be impossible to carry any constituency on the vague cry of additional protection, has issued instructions to his lieutenants to drop the subject. Mr. Tom White, therefore, like others, has been made to swallow the revenue tariff which was acknowledged by the vote of the Dominion Board of Trade the other day. It must be very trying to the faithful."

A TELEGRAM to the Tory press states that writs are ready to be served upon several Reform members, to recover penalties on account of alleged violation of the Independence of Parliament Act, The telegrapher omitted to state that writs are also ready to be served upon Sir John Macdonald, Mr. Mackenzie Bowell, Mr. Rufus Stephenson, Mr. Domville, Dr. Tupper, and such other Tory members of the House as have been guilty of infraction of the same law, as intrepreted by the Committee on Privileges and Election last year.

SAYS the Stratford Beacon:—"It is difficult to account for persistent malignity displayed by some Tory journals in their reference to Hon. Mr. Blake. To generous natures the hon. gentleman's precarious health would be sufficient to secure him an immunity from mere personal attacks. Not so with the groundlings. They cannot rise superior to their cowardly instincts, and they yelp like street curs after the heels of the man that disdains to kick them. Indeed, the groundlings would like to be kicked, for the sake of the notoriety which even such a contact with a gentleman might obtain for them."

REFERRING to the request made by Dr. Orton at the late Tory Convention in Fergus that before he accepted the nomination he wished to have a private conference with a committee of delegates, the News Record says:—"It is correctly reported in usually well informed circles that the Dr.'s object in asking for this private interview was to get an opportunity of telling representative members of the Convention in confidence that he would only accept of the nomination upon condition that the party furnished whatever funds might be necessary to carry through the contest." Is the doughty doctor getting alarmed already.

Modified Low-Necked Dresses.

THE New York Post says:—We have to chronicle a very marked return to the regular old-fashioned low neck which bids fair to hold its place after giving way so long to high necks or square necks for dress occasions. They may be modified by fichus of tulle when too trying, but a few words said by a clever French woman may help to solve the doubt often felt by a woman as to whether she shall follow the dictates of fashion or choose for herself what is most becoming and desirable. This French woman has much to say about the clinging style of dress now worn, and the advantage of every one's following the same strict fashion. She would have every woman study her own style, and then follow out some particular idea which shall always have in view her own advantages or disadvantages, so as to show them off or hide them, as the case may be; and she adds that the art of wearing a low-neck dress is understood by very few women, as tact alone will set a woman right in that respect, irrespective of her dressmaker, the fashion, and her own innermost wishes. She gives one or two hints to be kept in sight by those who have no rules set down. High shoulders, she says, and a slightly rounding back together with a flat chest, exact a waist cut lower in the front than in the back, while this rule may be reversed a little for an opposite build. Thin and high shoulders should never be seen otherwise than covered by a square neck; while well rounded shoulders are never so beautifully framed as in the oval of a low-neck waist. In wearing ornaments around the throat, the full and well-shaped throat is best left entirely uncovered, while a thin neck will require rows of pearls or stones in settings, or a pendant necklace; and a long slender throat is much enhanced by a velvet, or a ribbon with a single clasp, or a jewel in front. In the matter of sleeves, also, if the arm is short and fat, the sleeve should be replaced by a slight frill of lace; if it is long and thin a short, full sleeve, made like a puff, or a long sleeve is best; but if the arm is well proportioned it needs no adornment and it is best uncovered, as nothing is more rare, and when found more beautiful than a perfectly rounded arm.

SEIZURE OF AN ILLICIT STILL.—Alex. Caven, of Goderich, collector of Inland revenue, accompanied by excise officer Craig, of Walkerton, acting upon information received, on Thursday night visited Mr. George Campbell's hotel, known as the White Horse, in the township of Bentinck, county of Grey, and about four miles west of Durham, where they found a worm of a still concealed that had evidently lately been used. Campbell was arrested, brought before H. P. Adams and A. Z Gotwalls, J.P.'s, and found guilty of a misdemeanour, and sent to Owen Sound to await trial at the next Assizes.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XX.

THE LAWYER AND HAROLD HOLDS A LONG AND IMPORTANT CONFERENCE, WHICH IS LISTENED TO BY EDWARD SKEAT.

In the excess of his amazement the lawyer pronounced the name of his visitor in a tone dangerously loud.

"Hush," whispered Harold with impressive significance, pointing in the direction in which Tom Ironby had gone. "Say not a word yet. Just send your clerk away."

"Tom," he cried, with a voice as steady and a tone as indifferent as he could master.

"You had better go home for the night. I shall not want you, and——"

"Oh, no, sir. Not at all," replied the other, with nervous haste. "That deed is not yet finished. It is not quite finished. I can easily wait here till the old man is gone."

"Ah, true; I forgot. Well, take it with you and finish it in your lodgings. I'll hand in the keys as I pass. You see, this person's business will probably take some time to settle."

"It doesn't matter, sir," persisted Tom, who had his own reasons for not wishing to quit the office," I can remain for any length of time."

"Well, but you see the fact is—the—the old man is evidently eccentric, and won't open his business unless he knows that you are gone, so we had best humour him a little. It very absurd, of course, but you know very well it is always my habit to give in to the whims of clients when I can."

Thus repulsed, Ironby could make no further objection, though it was with quaking heart that he put on his hat and great-coat. Ere he had got himself fairly encased in these his master returned from the inner room with the document which was in process of being copied, and for the first time Tom noticed how flushed he was. But he had not a moment for further observation, for Adamson opened the street door with his own hand and held it till the other should pass out. The instant Tom did so he found it closed behind him, and to his further astonishment he heard the door bolted inside.

He stood there on the doorstep unable to move for several moments, his mind in a whirl, his heart palpitating with apprehension. There was an evident mystery about the old man and his visit at that hour, and Ironby's apprehensions were excited least it referred to the visit of Skeat to himself. Perhaps Ned had been watched, perhaps it was known he was still in the office, and should he be discovered in the closet the result would be appalling.

Quick as lightning his mind flew from thought to thought—his master's uneasiness, as evidenced by his manner and the dropping of the Doric, which he always did when anything serious turned up—the peculiar appearance of the old man, his strong build, his breadth of shoulders, the fullness and strength of his voice, and as all these things rushed through his mind he grew more alarmed and expectant of evil.

Heedless of the sleety blast which pelted on him, Ironby crept forward to the window to peep through the chink into the lawyers room, but to the further increase of his own guilty fears, the chink was now covered, and no ray of light shone through.

Listening intently he heard voices in earnest conversation, but could not catch a word that was spoken. One thing he was sure of, the old man's tones were now much deeper, and he no longer spoke in the broad dialect of the north. Tom would have given much to make out the subject of their talk—that, however, was hopeless, and after standing till he was almost drenched through, he very reluctantly left the window, and went along the street towards his lodgings—a prey one may well suppose to unmitigated society, which would not abate till his master handed in the key of the office as he had promised to do.

To that office we must return and note what is there going forward.

So soon as Mr. Adamson had got his clerk outside and the door fastened against all intruders, he hurried back to the inner room, where he found Harold hanging his plaid on the nob inside of the window shutter.

"There's a chink here," he said, "and I have no wish that a prying eye should be upon us."

"Rash, mad boy! Why—why did you venture here?"

"What! In this disguise?"

"In any disguise. Think of the frightful risk you run. If you are discovered you will be seized, and every precaution will be taken to prevent your escape a second time."

"I know all that, hence the disguise I have adopted. But the risk is not so very great. No reward, so far as I am aware, has been offered for my apprehension; no one has therefore any inducement to betray even if they recognized me."

"But have you got no enemies whose interests would be served, if you are again taken?"

"Yes; but they are not likely to have any knowledge of my presence here; and you may be very sure I have not ventured within the shadow of Aberdeen Tolbooth without taking measures to secure my retreat. But let the risk be what it may, it is so important for me to see you at this juncture that I did not hesitate to run it. Of course, you have already heard of Sir Philip's death, which took place last night?"

"The intelligence reached me but a few hours since; but how have you possibly learned it so soon?"

"Because I was present when the event took place. He died in my arms."

"What?" cried Adamson, ; in great astonishment; you were at Mount Cairn—you saw Sir Philip?"

THE WAR NEWS.

More About the Armistice.

RUMORED TURKO-RUSSIAN ALLIANCE.

The Feeling of Distrust in Britain.

Feb. 8.

The Globe says Osman Pasha will be court-martialled this or next month on a charge of burying Russian prisoners alive. The Russians are so exasperated that he rarely leaves his lodgings.

A Constantinople despatch says:—In accordance with the armistice the Russians will occupy Widin, Rustchuk, Silistria, Belgradjik, and Erzeroum. The Ambassadors of the Powers are still ignorant of the conditions of peace.

The correctness of the armistice conditions has been officially confirmed. The only additional condition is the evacuation of the fortress at Sulina.

Official information from St. Petersburg gives the detailed peace basis, in substance identical with those already telegraphed, but according to this information there are only five conditions, the evacuation of the fortresses being part of the armistice, not of the conditions of peace. The fifth condition also provides for the negotiation of a final treaty at either Odessa or Sebastopol.

A St. Petersburg special states that an offensive and defensive alliance between Russia and Turkey is to be included in the definitive treaty of peace.

An Athens despatch says:—The Provisional Government of Thessaly proclaim Thessaly annexed to Greece, and entreat protection.

A Cabinet crisis has arisen in consequence of Parliamentary criticisms of the Government's abolition of the Grand Vizierate without consulting Parliament, and of the contemplated policy of Ahmed Vefyk Effendi, the new President of the Council of Ministers.

A Berlin despatch says:—It is concluded from the Speech from the Throne yesterday that Germany has not engaged to support Russia's new demands.

The Agence Russe contradicts the reports that the Servians have refused the armistice, and that Austria has opposed the occupation of the Danubian fortresses.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The British Government has received the armistice terms. The Turks have agreed to dismantle the forts protecting Constantinople. A portion of the British fleet has been ordered to Constantinople to protect Englishmen, and foreign Governments are invited by England to send a fleet. The English Government does not consider the despatch of the fleet a breach of neutrality toward Russia.

In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote said the summary of the terms of the armistice discloses such a state of affairs that the Government, in view of a disturbance in Constantinople, has ordered a portion of the fleet thither, not as a departure from neutrality, but as a protection to life and property. The Government has notified the other Powers, asking whether they will join in the movement, and has also notified Russia.

The announcement was received with deafening cheers.

Sir Stafford Northcote stated that the Turkish Ambassador at London had positively contradicted the report that Lord Beaconsfield and Mr. Layard had encouraged Turkey to fight.

The Marquis of Hartington spoke favorably of the despatch of the fleet to Constantinople, and said he did not feel it his duty longer to oppose the vote of credit.

Sir Stafford Northcote expressed satisfaction at Lord Hartington's speech. He explained the Government's policy was to have the navigation of the Straits regulated to insure access to the Black Sea and perfect freedom of commerce.

Mr. Gladstone approved the declaration of policy, but considered it indefinite, and showing no necessity for a vote.

Mr. Forster protested against the vote, but declared he had withdrawn his amendment so as not to inflame the excitement of the country.

After the debate in Committee the vote of £6,000,000 sterling passed by 328 to 124, amid enthusiastic cheers from the Conservatives. The prominent Liberals and leaders of the Opposition, including Lord Hartington and Mr. Forster, abstained. Mr. Gladstone voted with the minority. The Opposition hissed Lord Hartington as he left the House.

In the House of Lords to-night.

Lord Derby announced that one foreign Power had already applied to the Porte for a firman to permit its fleet to enter Turkish waters.

The Times does not share in the excitement and alarm yesterday's news created, but thinks that the whole responsibility of action should be thrown on the Government, and generous support be accorded it.

A summary of the terms of the armistice communicated by Sir Stafford Northcote to the Commons is given in a despatch from Mr. Layard. According to this the line of demarcation fixed by the armistice places in Russian hands almost all of Bulgaria and Roumelia up to the lines of Constantinople and Gallipoli. Three days' notice is to be given before the resumption of hostilities. The Turks are to remove arms, etc., on evacuating places within the neutral zone, which will divide the two armies. The despatch states that the Turks have commenced the withdrawal of guns from the Constantinople lines.

From experiments now being made it is evidents that "the coming man" will not be obliged to go to the kitchen at an early hour of the morning and, with the thermometer at zero, perform the disagreeable job of starting the breakfast fire. We are going to have are houses heated with steam from a boiler situated in some remote locality near the river front. The first company which has undertaken to perform this welcome duty, is situated at Lockport, N.Y., generally known as the Holly Waterworks Co. It now has about three miles of steam pipe underground, extending through portions of fifteen streets, and supplied with ste m from a boiler 16 feet long and 5 feet in diameter. With a presure of thirty pounds to the square inch the company is now warming, at an average temperature of 75 degrees, a large school building, containing 105,000 cubic feet of space, the largest hall in the city, containing 150,000 cubic feet, 40 large dwellings, and running two small steam engines, one of which is fully half a mile from the boiler. The company lays the mains, and furnishes heaters and radiators at $6 each. In the dwellings the service pipe is so arranged as to deliver at will, either pure dry steam for heating purposes, or hot water from condensed steam, for laundry purposes. A pipe three-fourths of an inch inside diameter, connecting with the main pipe, will heat a large sized building.

LISTOWEL.—The February cattle fair was poorly attended by buyers, and few cattle were on the ground. $2 50 to $3 per cwt. were the prices paid.——Tramps are introduced to a stone pile previous to the corporation affording them any relief.——Incendiarism appears to be in the ascendancy. The latest work of the fire bug was in applying the torch to the public school buildings. The fire was discovered and extinguished before it had gained headway.

Barry Sullivan, who a short time since was playing Oothello, met with a reply as unanswerable as it was unexpected. His frequent allusions to the handkerchief?" suggested to one of the Hiberian "gods" to answer, "Never moind yer handkerchief, sor, blow your nose anyhow, and get on with the play."

Who Will be the Pope's Successor?

Four Candidates in the Field.

The Remains of the Late Pope to Lie in State.

ROME, Feb. 8.—The Conclave will assemble immediately at the Vatican. The Pope left instructions which will be unsealed to-day and read by the Chamberlain to all the Cardinals now here. Prince Chigi, Marshal of the Conclave, has assumed his functions, and given orders for the customary walling up of the doors of communication, and the removal of persons now living on the same floor on which the Conclave assembles. The Cardinals are already informed of the meeting of the Conclave. The French Cardinals are expected to-morrow, and the Austrian and Spanish Cardinals on Sunday or Monday.

The congregation of Cardinals to day heard the Pope's last wishes relative to his funeral. Cardinals Bilio, Pecci, and Di Pietro will govern the Church pending the election of a Pontiff. All the church bells in Rome are tolling.

Funeral services will be held in all the churches; but that at St. Peter's is expected to be very imposing. The remains will be temporarily deposited in the choir chapel of St. Peter's and finally buried in the crypt. The Conclave will decide whether the funeral shall be public or private.

The Pope's last act was to provide for the continuance of his servants' salaries, and the pensions of their widows.

Forty-three Cardinals are here, and ten are coming. A public lying-in-State of the Pope's remains is anticipated. The Ultramontane candidates are Luigi Bilio, and Antonio Panebianco; the Liberal candidates, Innocente Ferrieri and Camilla di' Pietro.

When the Pope died the Ambassadors to the Vatican asked the Camerlengo to follow the ancient usage regarding the funeral and election of a successor. Cardinal Pecci replied that such was the intention of the majority of the Sacred College.

The official declaration of the physicians who attended the Pope during his last illness is published. It states that the immediate cause of death was paralysis of the lungs.

The Italian prefects and military authorities have been ordered to pay the late Pope sovereign honours, but to await an ecclesiastical invitation before attending the funeral.

All the Cardinals are in Rome except Mgr. Amat and Panebianco, who are unwell, attended the preliminary Congregation in the hall of the Consistory to-day. They decided that the Pope should lie in state three days in the Sixtine Chapel, and three days in the Basilica of St. Peter. The ceremonies will last altogether nine days, after which the Conclave meets.

LISBON, Feb. 8.—Portugal, which enjoys the right to veto, is endeavouring, with the other Catholic Powers, to obtain the election of a Pope who will end the conflict between Church and State.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Cardinal McCloskey sails to-morrow for Rome to take part in the Pope's election.

TORONTO, Feb. 8.

The House ordered, on the motion of Mr. Willis, a return of the contracts for work done in connection with the Belleville Asylum, the Commissioner of Public Works giving the information that in every case the lowest tender had been accepted when there was reason to believe that the tenderer was prepared to carry out his contract.

On motion of Mr. Sinclair, an address was passed for the production of the report of the Commissioner appointed to enquire into the theft of ballot papers and other documents from the Lincoln Election Court.

Mr. Scott moved a resolution declaring it expedient to provide that the bonds or other securities of railway companies shall have no effect on personal property acquired after their issue, other than rolling stock and equipments.

Mr. Mowat concurred in the opinion that in all future railway legislation the principle of the resolution might be embodied, but deprecated anything like ex post facto legislation as it would have a disastrous effect on public credit.

Mr. Macdougall did not regard the resolution as being ex post facto in character, and Mr. Miller took the same view, while after some remarks in favor of the resolution from Mr. Wilson and Mr. Paxton, and arguments against it in its then form by Mr. Pardee, an amendment was moved by Mr. Meredith with a view to remove its ex post facto character. Other amendments having been offered by Mr. Currie and Mr. Macdougall, the further consideration of the subject was deferred without any vote upon it.

Mr. Mostyn's Game Amendment Bill was then taken up, some provisions of which were vigorously opposed, in the interests of western sportsmen, by Mr. Clark (Norfolk) and the Provisional Secretary.

THE MANITOULIN MURDER.—Judgment has been given in the Court of Queen's Bench on the case in which a verdict of guilty was brought in against a father and son named Armor, charged with murdering two neighbors, the parties living at the time on Manitoulin Island. The Armors were tried at Sault St. Marie. No provision having as yet been made for the holding of Courts of Assize and Oyer and Terminer by the Superior Court judges in the District, a commission was issued under the seal of the Lieutenant-Governor authorizing Mr. McCrae, Judge of the District of Algoma, to hold a court and dispose of the case. The prisoners were found guilty of murder, and Hon. M. C. Cameron, who conducted the defence, objected to sentence being passed upon them on the ground that a district judge was not competent to deal with the offences, with which it was the Province of of Superior Court Judges to deal. The Bench held that Judge McCrae having been authorized by the Lieutenant-Governor to try the case, was legally competent to do so, and the conviction under him must be sustained.

English tourist (in Edinburgh): "Can you direct me to the Royal Institution?" Native (vacant stare): "What eat?" Tourist (giving a clue); "Pictures, you know—statutes—and—" Native (after much thought); "Oh!—ei's the stooky feegare ye mean!"—(pointing)—"Yon's it!"

As illustrating the foibles of the "shoddyites," a New York paper says:—"A elegantly dressed lady got into a Madison avenue car the other day, and although the weather was cool, she could not wear her gloves on account of her many diamond rings. A balky horse having twice stopped the car, the lady went to the door, and, looking at the team for a few moments, remarked to the driver, "that ere off hoss ain't used to be druv on that ere side."

DUNDAS ASSAULT CASE.—Mr. Somerville, of the Dundas Banner, charged Mr. Magill of the Standard with assault, before the Mayor of Dundas. A number of witnesses were examined and all agreed that the assault was a most cowardly one. Magill was fined $15 and costs.

The motion for the abolition of the Quebec Legislative Council, though lost by 37 to 22, portends ultimate success.

Dominion Parliament.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.

The Speaker took the chair at three o'clock.

Hon. Peter Mitchell was introduced by Mr. Kirkpatrick and Mr. Wright.

Mr. Kirkpatrick saymg—Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Peter Mitchell has been elected to represent the electoral district of Northumberland in this House, and having taken the oaths he now craves leave to take his seat.

Mr. Speaker said—I conceive that, the hon. member having taken his seat yesterday, it is unnecessary that he should be introduced to-day.

Sir John Macdonald—Mr. Speaker, as you are only the mouth-piece of the House, you can only speak by instruction of this House, and I don't think you had any right to make the remark you have just made.

Mr. Holton—I will only say in response to the observations of the right hon. member that I had risen myself for the purpose of objecting to this matter, because I have in my hands a minute of the proceedings of yesterday, which sets forth the unmistakable fact that the hon. member for Northumberland was in his seat yesterday, therefore there could be by no possibility any occasion for his introduction to the House to-day, he having subscribed to the oath and having taken his seat yesterday. (Cheers.)

After some remarks from Mr. Mitchell the Commons were summoned to attend in the Senate to hear the Speech from the Throne, which will be found in another column.

On their return

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie moved that the Speech be taken into consideration on Monday next. Carried.

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie said that on Monday next he would propose the appointment of a committee regarding the supervision of the reporting of the debates. In the meantime it might perhaps be well for hon. gentlemen to consider whether it was desirable that the precise system adopted last session should be continued. The volume which contained the debates of last session was extremely voluminous and inconvenient, and it might be well to decide whether the debates should be curtailed so that they might be compressed into one volume, or whether to extend them indefinitely according to their character and extent. He simply called attention to the matter in order that when the Committee was asked for, the House might come to some definite understanding.

Sir John Macdonald quite agreed that last year's volume was bulky and inconvenient. He would be very sorry to see the debates curtailed. To be valuable the reports should be as full as possible. If not a literal copy of what hon. members said, the whole substance of hon. gentlemen's speeches should be given. If necessary the Hansard might be published in two volumes. (Hear, hear).

The evidence went to show that the child was born alive, and a verdict of "wilful murder" against the mother, a young unmarried woman named Annie Smith, was returned by the jury.

Legal proceedings have been taken against Messrs. Hugo Kranz and D. M. Shoemaker as Mayor and Reeve of Berlin, respectively, to unseat them. The grounds of objection taken against the Mayor's election are that at the time of his election he had a contract or contracts with the Corporation for sundries supplied at his store; that he was at the same time licensed to sell spirituous liquors by retail; that he hired vehicles to convey voters to the polls; and that he was guilty of other corrupt practices under the Municipal Act, such as supplying refreshments, &c., to the voters. The objections against the lezality of the Reeve's election are, with the exception of that relating to the liquor license, almost precisely the same.

GRANGERS' DEFICIT.—The Mitchell Advocate says that the Grangers in that neighborhood, whose storehouse is in Mitchell, are rather dissatisfied with the result of last year's business. It is said that there is a deficit of $200 on the balance sheet, and the great trouble is no one appears to know where the money has gone to.

ELOPEMENT.—A young man about seventeen years of age, named Wm. Butcher, son of E. Butcher, of Barford, on Sunday evening, 27th ult., drove his father and mother to church, hurried home and packed his "traps," and cleared out before church was out. Miss Hawks, a lady twelve years his senior left at the same time.

ANGLO-ISRAEL.—Rev. W. H. Poole, who made such a favorable impression on a Guelph audience recently as lecturer, will lecture in the Dublin street church this evening, on the "Great Pyramid of Egypt." This is said to be the best of the course. Admission fifteen cents.

"OUR INHERITANCE OF THE GREAT PYRAMID" is the title of a work published by Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., F.R.A.S., Astronomer Royal for Scotland, containing valuable information, with illustrations, in relation to the great pyramid. The work contains 700 pages, is strongly bound, and for sale at Anderson's.

THIEVING.—The latest dodge perpetrated by parties who do not think it beneath them to steal, is to sneak around driving sheds in church yards, during service on Sabbath evenings, and take away part of the harness. Last evening Messrs. O. Clark and John McConnell were surprised and very much annoyed to find on going out for their horses left tied in the sheds in connection with the Dublin street Methodist Church, that the martingales and bells had been taken away.

REQUIEM.—St. Bartholomew's Church was draped in mourning yesterday in memory of the late beloved head of the Church, Pius IX. High mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Hamel, S.J., and the sermon was preached by Rev. Father Fleck, S.J. Father Fleck, on ascending the altar, said that it was his painful duty today to announce the sad news of the death of their much beloved chief pastor, Pope Pius the ninth. As the requiem services would take place later in the week he would merely ask the congregation to unite their prayers with those of the whole Catholic world for the repose of the soul of one who had labored so faithfully in the vineyard of the Lord. He said that on Wednesday next the funeral services would be held in the church at 10 o'clock a.m., when a solemn high mass of requiem will be sung and a sermon delivered on the life and labors of the good Pius IX. A grand Gregorian mass will be chanted by a full choir, assisted by members of the Catholic Choral Society. The bell will toll at intervals during the day.

LITERARY ENTERTAINMENT IN THE WEST END.—An interesting entertainment was given in the schoolhouse of Section No. 4, Guelph Township, on Friday evening last, under the auspices of the Debating and Literary Society of that section. Notwithstanding the bad state of the roads, and the inclemency of the weather, there was a pretty full house, upwards of one hundr being present. A very exhaustive and select programme was prepared by the Committee, consisting of music, vocal and instrumental, readings, recitations, dialogues, &c. The performance was begun by the playing of several pieces of instrumental music, by the West End string band, under the able leadership of Mr. Wm. McCrae. Then followed the rest of the programme in well regulated order, the several pieces being rendered in a highly appreciative manner. A novel and perhaps the most interesting part of the entertainment was the reading of a manuscript newspaper, entitled the Gem, edited by the Teacher, Mr. Wm. R. Cook and Miss Knight. The articles consisted of local news, notices, puns, chronicles, wants, &c. The meeting was concluded by the singing "Auld Lang Syne," when all retired feeling highly pleased with the night's diversion. The chair was occupied by Mr. A. Gilchrist, the duties of which were discharged by him in an affable and efficient style. The next entertainment will be given in three weeks.

SUDDEN DEATH.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. Joseph Kirby, which occurred on the farm of Mr. F. W. Stone, on the Brock Road, on Sunday forenoon. Mr. Kirby had been complaining of rheumatism for a day or two previous to his death, which he thought was brought on by cold. The trouble, however, which affected him in the back, was entirely of a muscular character, and had no relation to the cause of his death. On Saturday night he was seized with paralysis, and though Drs. Keating & Macdonald did all they could for the sufferer, he never rallied, and died on Sunday forenoon shortly after ten o'clock. It is an extraordinary coincidence that some years ago his brother, who was with Mr. Jas. Goldie, died on the same day of the month, of the same complaint. The deceased was a well-known, active and intelligent agriculturist and stockman. A good few years ago he managed the farm that Mr. F. W. Stone then worked, which was afterwards purchased by the Government and attached to the Agricultural College. When he left Mr. Stone he went to Halton, and in company with Mr. John White, worked a farm there for some three or four years. When he left Halton he re-engaged with Mr. Stone to manage the farm he had purchased on the Brock Road, adjoining the Agricultural College, and his skill, energy, and experience in the management of this farm and of the stock was observed in a marked degree in the improvements he effected. He was one of our most energetic and enterprising farmers and stockmen in the district, and Mr. Stone will find it hard to fill his place with one of equal push and experience. The deceased was well known and highly respected by all the breeders and farmers in this and surrounding districts, and his death will leave a blank in their ranks which it will be hard to fill. He leaves a widow and six children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and loving father. As will be seen by the obituary notice, the funeral takes place to-morrow, at two o'clock, p.m.

Thursday next, 14th, will be St. Valentine's Day.

STOCK SALE.—Mr. Wm. Donaldson, of East Zorra, has just purchased from Mr. F. W. Stone, of Guelph, a magnificent yearling bull, "5th Seraph," bred from celebrated imported stock.

WIRE SIGNS.—These unsightly obstructions which have appeared on Wyndham street, during the past two weeks contrary to By-law have been removed by order of the Chief of Police. The removal was done by the party who had the contract for putting them up. Merchants who went to the expense of having those signs erected claim that they have not violated the law any more than those who have signs of any description projecting over the street. They want the Chief to serve all alike. There is no doubt but what such shall be done.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—Judge Elliott, of London, on Saturday gave decision in an important case of appeal. One Cole was convicted on complaint of the License Inspector of allowing gambling in his tavern, the gambling consisting of playing dominoes for the drinks. His Honor said:—"It cannot be denied that the game of dominoes, even when when played for drinking alone, has a pernicious result. I do not mean to say that upon all occasions the game is to be censured, but I do say if it is to be allowed in taverns from morning till night, as it was in this case, upon the grounds that only drinks and not money were played for, the mischief which the statute was designed to remedy will be very faintly reached. Taking this view of the case, I think the conviction should be sustained, if the evidence was sufficient to establish the fact that the appellant sanctioned or allowed the gambling for money." The conviction was therefore confirmed, and the appeal dismissed with costs.

A CAUCUS of the supporters of the Government was held on Saturday at Ottawa, in accordance with the usual custom at the opening of the session. The proceedings, of course, were private, but it is understood that they related exclusively to matters of a party nature, and not to questions of Ministerial policy. The fact is that there are just now no issues on which any substantial difference of opinion among Reformers is likely to prevail. No sectional difficulties or grievances are troubling the Cabinet or their followers, the most hearty good feeling prevails among the latter, and between them and their chief. Those present assert that at no time has there been greater evidence of cordiality, or more sanguine anticipations as to the future. In all parts the friends of the Government are reported to be up and doing, preparing for the not very distant contest. The late Convention at Toronto has had an excellent effect beyond the limite of Ontario.

THE DEAD PONTIFF.

Preparations for the Election of a New Pope.

THE CARDINALS SQUABBLING.

ROME, Feb. 9.—The body of the Pope is arrayed in Pontifical robes, lies on a crimson bed, at each corner of which stands a member of the Noble Guard with a drawn sword. The bed is surrounded by twelve large candelabra, and is so placed that the feet of deceased are outside the altar rails, in order that the faithful may kiss them. The face is calm and unchanged. The public were admitted to St. Peter's to view the remains of the Pope this morning. The crowd was tremendous. Many women fainted from the pressure. A company of soldiers had to enter the church to regulate the passage of the crowd. The body will lie in state during Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

To-morrow, on the arrival of the foreign Cardinals, the Sacred College will permanently constitute itself in congregation. A Bull left by Pius IX. authorizes the Cardinals to deviate from the established procedure, but does not prescribe any special new rules.

ROME, Feb. 10.—The newspaper narrate circumstantially a stormy and acrimonious scene at Friday's Congregation of Cardinals, Cardinal Manning, at the head of the Extremists, wishing the Conclave to meet at Malta. Even words of schism were uttered. Later accounts concur that the minority against holding the Conclave at Rome is insignificant. The Reforma says the Roman and German Cardinals wish to elect a Pope of advanced age, but Italian, and not intimately connected with the events of the late reign.

MINK.—This little animal which was once so dear to the ladies, is almost a drug in the market this winter.

CALL.—Mr. Laing, theological student from Woodstock, has accepted a call from the Fullerton Baptist Church.

CATTLE DISEASE.—The rapidly fatal disease commonly known as the "black quarter," is prevalent in the County of Middlesex. Calves are the principal stock attacked with the disease, yet we hear of a number of yearlings lost by it.

ORANGEVILLE.—Some of the Councillors think that there is no necessity for a fire brigade, that enough men assemble at any fire to do all the work necessary. Innocent Councillors.——A much stronger lacrosse team than last year will play during the ensing season. It has been decided to join the Dominion Association.

NEW CHURCH IN BEVERLY.—On Thursday a new Methodist Church (Salem) was dedicated to divine worship in the township of Beverly, near Mr. George Patterson's. At a tea-meeting in the evening nearly $900 was realized by subscriptions, &c. The Rev. Mr. McDonagh preached on the occasion.

NASSAGAWEYA.—The teachers of Nassagaweya purpose holding an Educational Convention in the town hall Brookville, on Saturday the 23rd inst., for the purpose of organizing a society for mental improvement. Mr. Little, the County Inspector, the Township Reeve, and other gentlemen from a distance are expected to be present to address the meeting on educational subjects. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of education to be present and take part in the proceedings.

REFORM IN EAST LUTHER.—At the annual meeting of the East Luther Reform Association in Stuckey's hotel on the 2nd inst., the following officers were elected:—Mr. Hugh McDougall, President; Mr. John Hay, sr., Vice President; Mr. Robert Dickson, Sec.-Treas. Messrs. John Park, Hugh McDougall, J. Philip, Thos. Wardrope, R. Dickson, W. W. Thompson, and D. Blair were appointed a Committee for the 5th Division; and Messrs. Ed. Cull, E. Colbeck, D. Beal, Chas. Wood, and W. McKinlay a Committee for the 4th Division.

DEATH FROM A BRAWL.—On the 6th inst., a washerwoman, living in Lindsay, named Mrs. Connell, accused a Mrs. Burke with annoying her by rapping at the door of her house. A denial was given, and a row ensued, Mrs. Burke finally kicking Mrs. Connell three or four times. The latter immediately expired. An inquest was held, and the post mortem examination showed that the deceased woman had been suffering from weakness of the heart, and the kicks she had received were not sufficient to have caused her death. Eight jurymen were in favor of bringing in a verdict of manslaughter, and eight were for acquittal. Mrs. Burke was not committed, but was afterwards arrested and addmitted to bail.

DARING ROBBERY.—A distressing case of highway robbery took place on Saturday morning at St. Catharines, on the arrival of the train from the west. There being no busses to meet the train, a man named O. N. Fish started to walk to the city, and when near the bridge over the Pelham road, close to the Great Western Railway station, he was seized from behind, garrotted, thrown into the mud, and robbed of a purse containing $6.75 in cash and a promissory note for $65, besides a satchel containing changes of underclothing, etc. The robbers also took the boots of his feet and held a knife to his throat, threatening to murder him if he made any outcry. The unfortunate victim of this outrage had just risen from a sick bed, and was obliged to walk in his stockings to the station, where he gave the alarm.

HALTON REFORM ASSOCIATION.—At the annual meeting held in Milton the Treasurer's report showed a balance on hand. The following officers were elected: President, Dr. Robertson, re-elected; Sec-Treas., E. Dixon, re-elected; Vice-Presidents, Trafalgar, Dr. Buck; Esquesing, Wm. Moore; Nelson, Col. Campbell; Nassagaweya, Peter McLeran; Milton, Jos. Brothers; Oakville, W. H. Young; Burlington, Thaddeus Ghent; Acton, D. D. Christie; Georgetown, F. THE WAR NEWS.

Feeling in St Petersburg over Britain's Action.

The Russians not yet in Constantinople.

THE FEELING IN GREECE.

February 9.

The London Times approves of the Government's action in sending a portion of the fleet to Constantinople. It says:—"All danger of a renewal of the war between Turkey and Russia is now over. The Russians are practically masters of Constantinople. Nothing remains for us to be concerned about but the due settlement of the terms of peace and the protection of our immediate interests. Russia is under an honorable pledge not to advance further. Should she do so she would arouse suspicion and excitement in this country. If she will loyally restrain her forces, there is no reason why conditions of permanent peace should not be deliberately determined at a Congress."

It is stated that the Russians captured 120,000 men, including twenty Pashas, and 1,000 cannon, during the war.

The latest official intelligence from Adrianople shows a complete understanding between Russian headquarters and the Turkish delegates.

A Vienna despatch says:—A further reply from Russia to the Austrian invitation to the Conference has been received. It shows the intention of Russia not to permit the discussion of certain points in the preliminary conditions. In spite of these reservations, it is considered certain in Austrian official circles that the Conference will meet, although the same confidence does not exist as to its satisfactory result.

Mr. Layard has no news of the British fleet. It has not yet passed the Dardanelles.

The Post positively denies that the Marquis of Hartington has resigned the Liberal leadership.

A Vienna special states that three Austrian men-of-war have been ordered to the Bosphorus. Italian vessels are also going there. A number of Russian sailors have gone overland to the Sea of Marmora to man certain Turkish men-of-war about to be surrendered.

A Pera special says:—In the event of a rupture of the armistice the Turks could not re-occupy the Constantinople lines, as the neutral zone would remain neutral until the end of three days' notice of the resumption of hostilities. Preparations are making to defend the interior lines.

The Russian Agence of St. Petersburg states that the despatch of the British fleet to the Bosphorus restores to Russia liberty of action. If the object is to cooperate in the maintenance of order and the attainment of a durable and equitable solution of the Eastern Question, the fleet will be welcomed as an auxiliary. At any rate, Russia will regulate her attitude by that of England.

A Vienna correspondent confirms the report that the British action has produced a serious impression in both Berlin and St. Petersburg. It is questioned whether the Porte, by admitting foreign men-of-war, does not give Russia the right to march on Constantinople. All may depend on which Power can telegraph the soonest to the seat of war. If the Russians can, they may bring influence to bear on the Porte to refuse passage to the British fleet. Despatches from Constantinople received on Saturday night deny that the Porte granted permission, which looks as though England had applied for a fresh firman.

A special from Berlin says:—Prince Gortschakoff has notified the Powers that since the English Cabinet has resolved to send a fleet to Constantinople, ostensibly to protect the Christians, Russia also contemplated occupying Constantinople from the land, with the same object.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that notwithstanding Lord Derby's explanations the sending of the fleet to Constantinople, and the parliamentary vote of credit has produced a profound impression here.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Turkish forces yesterday evacuated Widin, Rustchuk, Silistria, Belgradjik, and Erzeroum, and have withdrawn from the Bojuk-Chekmejeh lines to a line from Kujuk-Chekmejeh to Akbunar. The neutral zone is twelve miles broad.

An Athens depatch says:—The recall of the troops from Thessaly and Epirus has caused much public indignation. The Government considers the situation still critical, and has ordered arms and ammunition sufficient for 500,000. The Mobile Guard is to be raised to 140,000.

Protection for Wheat.

The attempt of the Conservative press to convince the farmers that they should have protection for their wheat, has so far proved a failure. The Lindsay Post in a few pointed remarks exposes the fallacy of the cry that farmers and the country would be benefitted by the imposition of a duty of twenty per cent on imported grain. We grow, says the Post, on the whole more grain than we consume, and from this it follows (1) that we must dispose of the surplus abroad, and (2) that we do not import grain from the United States for consumption here. We import it but simply with a view to re-exportation, and while it is in this country a considerable proportion of it is ground into flour, giving employment to both capital and labor. The resolution requires that we should put a duty of not less than 20 per cent. on imported grain. Now what would be the consequence of such a step? It would not add a cent to the price obtained by Ontario farmers for their wheat because the Province grows far more than enough to satisfy the home demand, but it would greatly increase the price of flour to the people of the Maritime Provinces who have to import the most of what they use. If it did increase the price of wheat here at all it could only do so at the expense of those who have to buy their flour or bread in cities or towns, or of our fellow-citizens in Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

ERAMOSA CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting of the above Association at Rockwood, on the 7th, the following officers were elected:—President, David Day; Vice-President, Jas. Knowles; Treasurer, Jas. McQueen; Secretary, Geo. J. Haigh.

The Evening Mercury

MONDAY EVEN'G, FEB. 11, 1878.

The Treaty of Paris.

Since the recent negotiations for the proposed Conference on the Eastern Question has engaged so much public attention, the Treaty of Paris has often been referred to, and often spoken of as the basis for future agreement between the great Powers. It is of interest to know what that Treaty really was. It was ratified shortly after the Crimean War, and its conditions in the main are as follows:—First, that the status quo should be maintained in Asia, and that Russia should give back Kars; second, Russia should restore that portion of Bessarabia, which borders the mouth of the Danube, to Moldavia; third, the exclusive Protectorate over the Principalities should be taken away from the Czar, and be exercissd only by Europe; fourth, the Black Sea should be neutralised and Russia and Turkey should be bound not to build or keep any maritime establishments there. The right is reserved only for Turkey and Russia to have a number of men-of-war there, viz: six of 800 tons each and four of 200 tons each; and fifth, the independence and integrity of the Porte are secured by the six signatory powers, viz.: England, France, Sardinia, (now Italy) Austria, Prussia, Russia. It is also agreed that all disputes arising between these Powers and the Porte should be submitted to the co-signators. England and Austria are particularly bound by a separate treaty to support the clauses of the Paris Treaty.

The altered position of the Powers will, no doubt, have some effect in changing the grounds on which they will meet each other, and judging from present appearances it is hardly likely that the forthcoming negotiations will be based on the conditions laid down in that Treaty. When it is found convenient to break through treaties the chief actors don't seem to have any scruple about it, and in this case they are just as likely to insist on modifications as though no previous Treaty existed. It is useless to lay down a rule for guidance in this respect. The old adage that might is right still prevails, and this principle will govern the action of the Conference about to assemble. If Turkey makes an alliance with Russia in her extremity, then it will be the duty of the Western Powers to watch and distrust such a combination. It bodes no good to Britain, for it will prove that the Sultan in his last extremity has forsaken his old allies, and has sought to make an alliance with his traditional enemy, in the hope that he would secure better terms than any other power would be willing to guarantee him.

On a thoughtful survey of the whole situation, we have come to the conclusion that affairs in the East are in as critical a position as they were before the proposal for an armistice, yet we do not suppose for a moment that Russia, with all her present advantages, will provoke a quarrel with Britain or any other of her allies. She has suffered severely in the recent war, and in her shattered condition she cannot afford to enter on another contest with any other power. Her efforts for her own aggrandizement will now be of a diplomatic character, and should her alliance with Turkey be a fact, she may obtain more than she bargained for at the outset of the war.

The Voters' Lists.

The Assessors have now entered upon, or will soon commence, their duties, and much future trouble may be avoided if they will take the pains to see that every bona fide elector is put on the roll. At the same time the duty of the elector is not to trust to the Assessor, but to see for himself that his name is properly entered on the roll. Scarcely on election takes place without a noisy contention being caused by the Assessor omitting or mis-spelling the names of voters. As the lists of voters are made up from the assessment rolls, it becomes a matter of the first importance to see that there is no mistake at the start. We recapitulate some of the provisions of the law as it now stands:—

Where there is more than one owner, occupant, or tenant united in the occupancy of one piece of property—as in the case of partners in a firm, or farmers' sons residing on their parents' farm—each individual should see that his name is entered on the rolls if the assessed value of the property is sufficient to entitle each to a vote. The amount necessary to qualify is: In cities $400; towns, $300; incorporated villages and townships, $200. In the case of farmers' sons, if there is not sufficient to give all a vote, the right of assessment belongs, first to the father and next to the sons in the order of their seniority. Non-resident owners of unoccupied property should send notice in writing to the Clerk before the 30th January in each year, that he owns the land, describing the same, and requesting that his name be added to the roll. Incomes of $400 and under are, by law, exempt from taxation. Consequently the possessor of an income of $400 would not appear upon the assessment roll unless he specially requests the Assessor to place him there. All who wish to secure votes by virtue of an income of $400 or over, should therefore be careful to see that the Assessor places their names upon the roll.

Very great importance will be attached to the Voters' Lists for this year, and we therefore call the attention of our friends to the importance of having them correctly made out, and of every name being entered that is entitled to a vote. We believe that the real platform of the Tory party—as the Hamilton Times says—"is to manipulate the assessment rolls in Sir John's interest. Reformers cannot recognize this fact too fully, nor prepare too soon for the coming struggle. The numerical superiority of the members of the Liberal party is undoubted; all that remains to be done is to see to it that our numbers are not lessened on the Voters' Lists and those of the Conservatives increased by fraudulent means. All we need to do is to prevent assessment frauds, but that will require the display of persistent energy if we are to successfully defeat a body so cunning, so unscrupulous, and so well organized as the Tory delegates whom Sir John has spent a couple of days in drilling."

The assessment rolls will be made out by the end of April, and up to that time any Reformer entitled to a vote may have his name entered without any difficulty. After that time the entering of names requires more or less trouble before the Court of Revision or the County Judge. Our friends should therefore attend to having every Reform elector duly enrolled before the first of May (the Tories will look after their own legal voters and others, too), and leave the proceedings before the Court of Revision and the Judge to be taken up with having names struck off which should not be on the lists.

Report of the Agricultural College.

In continuing our abstract of the Report of this Institution, we come to that portion of it comprising the report of Mr. Brown, Professor of Agriculture and Farm Superintendent. This occupies a large space, is clear, comprehensive and wonderfully exact in all the details, and is admirably arranged, so that all the farm operations are given under the different departments—and in all these we find gratifying and substantial progress.

After an appropriate introduction in which Mr. Brown goes on to divide his work under the different heads as follows:—The Field, the Live Stock, the Garden, the Mechanical department, roots and cereals, experiments, and outside instruction. There is also a chapter on the Centennial seeds, and another on recommendations. Last year 848 acres were under cultivation, and we have a very full account of every point in the treatment, progress and result of the cropping of each field. We have only room to notice one or two points with regard to the roots. Mr. Brown says:—"In potato cultivation we had three plans on trial: 1st, Drilling and placing the sets below the farm-yard dung; 2nd. Drilling and placing sets above manure; 3rd. Broadcasting manure, ploughing under, and planting sets in the common plough furrow—every third one. Drills thirty inches apart, sets twelve inches. Manure, fifteen waggon loads per acre, each load weighing on an average 3,000 lbs, of mixed horse and cattle manure,—not enough rotted however. The first plan was 60 per cent. ahead of the second and equal to the third; the second had many blanks, and much irregularity in plant-coming. In arid climates it is obvious that a tuber set upon farm-yard manure, lying in a body between drills of earth, and to be afterwards covered by said earth has much less chance of success than planting immediately upon the bottom of the drill below the manure, or by the third method referred to. The causes are plain enough:—1st. Want of moisture in immediate contact below. 2nd. Having to search for rootage. 3rd. Irregularity in depth. The produce of the potatoes was 150 bushels an acre.

The culture of the turnip ground is next explained. Thirty-five acres of these were grown, and the average yield was 766 bushels per acre. Mangolds produced 777 bushels per acre. In closing his review of the field culture, Mr. Brown sums up as follows: "Having thus exhausted our detail management of field cropping, the question naturally arising at this stage is,—What is the cost of production? Herein lies, I need hardly say, much of the marrow of all rural economy, and unless we can show reliable and financially satisfactory figures in every case, subject, of course, to unforeseen circumstances, our lessons will be of no use to the public, as well as dangerous to students, and without credit to ourselves. All this, be it remembered, has no direct bearing upon the other question,—Is, or can, an Experimental Farm be made self-sustaining? There should, in the future, be no difficulty in separating two such distinct problems as education and ordinary farm work even in our own samples, but at present there are difficulties, and until they are removed it is unfair to expect any solution Need I point that our fields are yet insufficiently drained, are not all under a regular course of cropping, have broken, uncultivated spots, and are still much over-run by weeds? No doubt I could even now make you a column or two of figures that, so far as figures go, would show conclusively our farm to be a profitable investment. There are few things so simple to construct as balance sheets, and as few things so deceiving—not always by reason of purpose unrealness, as by looking through an enthusiasm that enlarges and misplaces. For the next three years, then, I am of opinion that any figures of cost will be unnecessary.

Mr. Brown next deals at considerable length with the Live Stock, going over each herd of the thorough-breds minutely. These with the sheep and pigs—in all the breeds—have on the whole done well. As regards the collie dogs over the importation of which Mr. Macdougall tried to make so much fun in the House of Assembly, Mr. Brown says: "I am aware that the purchase and importation of Scotch collie dogs for this farm has been looked upon as something outside its action, something not needed by the country, and therefore a misapplication of funds. I gave, as shown in last year's report, $81 for two dogs, and one bitch then a pup. Two litters a year is common with dogs, but restricting to one, as in our case, what is the position? The sale of a litter of seven shows $67 as the public opinion on the subject; need I add more?"

In the management of live stock, they keep seven objects in view:—1. A vigorous growth of young animals without forcing. 2. A full condition of all breeding animals, male and female, without over feeding. 3. Change of food according to age, state of breeding, and season of the year. 4. Quantity, according to age, size, and object of individual animal. 5. Economy of food, as regulated by markets. 6. Confining food as much as possible to what is produced on the farm. 7. Regularity. Last winter they steamed the cattle food, and Mr. Brown referring to this says:—"All animals soon become fond of steamed food, the material being sweetened and made easier of mastication; but whether as healthy for all purposes in animal life, it is yet our province to determine. Meantime we can assert that what is usually called rubbish—chaff, rotted roots, unsound straw and hay, can be safely used when steamed. More details, with cost and results, in next annual."

He follows with a strong remonstrance against high or over-feeding of animals set aside for breeding purposes, and calls the attention of Agricultural Societies to adopt some rule for the guidance of judges at exhibitions in judging this class of animals.

THE changes in the Cabinet since last session were as follows:—Mr. Cauchon resigned and became Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba; Mr. Blake was transferred from the office of Minister of Justice to that of President of the Council; Mr. Laflamme was transferred from the Department of Inland Revenue in order to take Mr. Blake's place as Minister of Justice; Mr. Laurier was appointed Minister of Inland Revenue; Mr. Vail resigned after his defeat at Digby, and Mr. Jones was chosen Minister of Militia in his stead; Mr. Blake withdrew from the Cabinet leaving the position of President of the Council vacant.

THE votes of Messrs. Blake and Huntington on the Speakership dispose of the report spread by Opposition journals that they differed with the Government on that point. Mr. Blake's physical weakness when he walks is painfully apparent, though when sitting he looks well enough.

MR. PETER MITCHELL got well laughed at for the ridiculous figure he cut on Thursday and Friday. He took his seat in the House on Thursday—without being introduced—but finding that he might get into trouble on his vote on the Speakership, he took advantage of Sir John's remarks, thought he had no business in the House, and so shirked the vote. On Friday he wanted to be introduced, but the Speaker very properly snubbed him by saying that he introduced himself the day previous. Peter is a very erratic statesman.

IT is no wonder the Opposition are chagrined at Sir John's blunder in opposing Mr. Anglin as Speaker. In the first place he based his arguments on British practice, and his precedent went as far back as the days of Cromwell's Protectorate. But this practice is different to the law governing the House of Commons in the Dominion, and so his argument was not relevant. He also left himself open to attack, which Mr. Mackenzie was not slow to profit by. Then another mistake he made was in forcing a division, which showed the weakness of his side at the very opening of the session. Dr. Tupper is said to have quietly enjoyed Sir John's discomfiture, as it caused a revival among the Opposition of the feeling that Sir John is losing that astuteness and vim necessary for the leadership of the party.

HAROLD THE OUTLAW

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XX.

THE LAWYER AND HAROLD HOLD A LONG AND IMPORTANT CONFERENCE, WHICH IS LISTENED TO BY EDWARD SKEAT.

"And received his blessing and forgiveness," said Harold, with emotion.

"Heaven be praised for that!" cried the lawyer, with a burst of fervor. "Then he sent for you?"

"No; though he world have done so if he could and had he been allowed; but her ladyship and Gilmour took precious good care that he should not see me, though he besought them continually to bring me. I was, however, informed of his desire, for there are those at Mount Cairn who are secretly at my service; and hearing of his wish I resolved that nothing should hinder me from seeing him. I rode there after nightfall, and was just in time to be present at the end. No sooner had I closed his eyes than I at once departed, though not before giving my two foes a little of my mind."

"Did they not seek to detain you?"

"They would had they dared—ay, eagerly would they have brought the constables upon me; but my measures were too securely taken for that, and ere they had time or courage to act I was miles away. To day I have spent most of the time in planning this visit to you."

"Alas! Harold," returned the lawyer, sadly, "this visit to me is a useless one. I can do nothing to serve you—absolutely nothing. Your position is deplorable, desperate, irremediable. Why did you reject my service when I saw you in the Tolbooth? Why did you shut the door against all efforts in your behalf by taking to flight? It was a fatal step. I could have done something for you had you waited and stood your trial; now you are outlawed, and all is lost."

"I fled to avoid a fate which I could not avert," answered Harold. "Had I been guilty I would not have sought to escape my doom; but being innocent, I seized the chance to save myself."

"What do I hear!" exclaimed the lawyer, sudden joy sparkling in his eyes. "Innocent? Oh, I understand. It was an accident. You did not intend to kill Wanlass? My dear boy, I never doubted that. Though wild, adventurous, and misguided in your course, I knew you to be generous, unselfish, and incapable of taking a man's life intentionally. This is why I felt I could have done something for you, though at the same time I am bound to tell you the law would not have accepted the plea of innocence on the ground of unintention."

"When I say I am innocent I mean not only in intention, but in fact," returned Harold, quietly. "It was not I who shot Wanlass."

"Not you? Good gracious, was it not you that fired the postol?"

"No."

"Who—who was it?"

"That is a question you must not ask me, for my tongue is tied? Enough that you hear me say that I did not fire the pistoll and you know me too well to doubt my word."

"Bless my soul! you are innocent, and yet you broke out of prison and made yourself an outlaw."

"What hope had I of acquittal. I had no evidence of my innocence, and Gillespie and Skeat solemnly declared that they saw me do the deed.

"So they did," said the lawyer, with a stare of wonder. "How came that? They must certainly have believed it to be you."

"Eh, what?"

"They knew perfectly well I was guiltless of the crime. Listen, and you shall have the history of the foul conspiracy that has been carried out against me at the instigation of that infamous woman, Lady Logan, my stepmother, and her caitiff son, Gilmour."

The worthy lawyer lay back in his chair utterly agast—horror and indignation being vividly expressed in his face while Harold related all those particulars with which the reader is acquainted. At times an ejaculation involuntarily escaped him, but he found words inadequately to give audible shape to his shocked feelings. But one idea was uppermost in his mind throughout, and after he had obtained partial relief by several unlawyer-like ejaculations he recurred to it.

"This makes your flight more to be deplored than ever," he exclaimed. "Why, oh, Mr. Harold, why did you not tell me this before?"

"Because I knew it was useless to try to struggle out of the meshes which were so cunningly and cruelly wound round me. I had no evidence, and did not suppose it possible to obtain it. Had I known then what I have learned since I believe I would have abode the trial."

"And what have you learned since," asked Adamson, with eager avidity.

"I have learned that Wanlass was not dead when he was left in the cottage of Widow Corbet. He recovered consciousness for an hour, and disclosed to the woman and to Daddy Duff, who was present, the name of the man who had shot him."

"Ha!" cried the lawyer, with bursting excitement, "there's a providence for you. Two witnesses, mark you that. Not one, but, two, as required by law. My dear boy, no time is to be lost. You must have yourself reponed. Give yourself up to the authorities. The case will be brought up at the Spring Circuit. We shall arrest the order of succession, pending the issue of the trial; and, egad, we'll defeat the machinations of her ladyship and turn her and her cub of a son out of the family nest they think they have as good as possession of. I declare, Harold this has put a new life in me. I'm anither man a'thegither. Lord, what a dash we'll cut afore the Lords. I'll get Duncan M'Neill for your counsel, and he'll soon cast daylicht through the dark business. Will it not be glorious?"

And in the excess of his gratification the lawyer rubbed his hands with intense glee, an action which, taken along with the fact that he had returned to the Doric, showed that the revelation made by Harold had raised his spirits to a high pitch. But presently he was to be dragged down from his perch of exultation and brought heavily to the ground.

"Stop, stop! you are going to fast," cried Harold. "I have no intention of returning to prison and standing a trial."

"Eh! no intention. What no intention of freeing yourself from the false charge, and getting rid of the outlawry? You—why, you must be dreaming."

"I think it is you who are dreaming, Mr. Adamson. Your kind feelings towards me are dimming your legal perception. My chance of acquittal is too small to induce me to relinquish my freedom——"

"Too small!" interrupted the other. "Why, you have full legal proof of your innocence. You have the evidence of the murdered man, so to speak. Nothing can stand against that."

"But the evidence is not direct," reminded Harold. "It comes through a secondary channel, and one which a sharp-headed prosecutor would regard as suspicious. My two witnesses, though as honest and trust worthy people as ever breathed, might easily be discredited in Court. One of them is in the eye of the law a rogue and a vagabond. The whole thing would be looked on as a daring attempt on my part to get my own neck out of the halter by putting another into my place. And that is my chief objection to the course you indicate—chief and insurmountable."

"Put another into your place!" echoed Mr. Adamson. "You would only put the real criminal there."

"But that is what I have steadily refused to do from the first."

"Why, who is the actual culprit? You

THAT WONDERFUL MAN

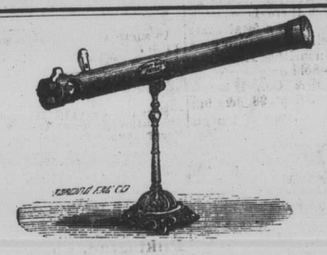
OFF AGAIN TO THE BRITISH MARKETS FOR SPRING GOODS.

WE COMMENCE OUR

GREAT CLEARING SALE

On Monday, 4th February next,

During that time we will fulfill to a demonstration all that we promise, namely, to sell all and every article we have in stock at the actual cost price of it.



We confidently refer back to our past Clearing Sales, and promise in this sale, as in all former ones, to keep faith with the public. When we advertise a Clearing Sale at cost price, we keep our word, and no matter at what loss or sacrifice it may be to us, we bind ourselves NOT TO DISAPPOINT OR DECEIVE THE PUBLIC, OUR FRIENDS OR CUSTOMERS. We ask, feeling confident of a hearty response, that all intending buyers of Fancy or Staple Doods, will advise themselves of this opportunity of supplying their requirements at a saving of 20 per cent. We ask an inspection of our goods, and the promise we make of actual cost prices; we will agree to pay expenses of a visit to our establishment if all that we here state does not turn out to be sound in every particular, Our Mr. Hogg, senior, leaves in a few days for the British Markets for spring Goods, and a clearance of present stock must be effected. People of the Town of Guelph and County of Wellington you have had a trial of the Wonderful Man for over 25 years. He has worked faithfully for your interests during all that time, and he is doing so to this day. He is strong, healthy and robust now as ever he was, and he is on the war path to exterminate and put to shame dealers in old bankrupt and moth-eaten goods. People of town and country do not be deceived. The test of a man is his past career. You have had every opportunity of knowing and judging of the Wonderful Man. All that he asks is that you consider him entitled to YOUR PATRONAGE AND SUPPORT.

need not scruple to tell me. But I can guess. He is one of your smuggling companions. Am I right?"

"Let us assume that you are," returned Harold. "You see the position in which it places me. Every consideration of honour prohibits me from denouncing an associate."

"But what kind of an associate is he who would wait till you denounced him. If he had a spark of valour he would not have allowed you to lie one hour under the charge of a crime which he had committed."

"That is a matter which we need not discuss," returned Harold. "If he is wanting in courage and generosity, that does not absolve me from maintaining my own honour. No, Mr. Adamson. Do not let us pursue the subject further in this direction, for I shall never seek to establish my innocence by disclosing the guilt of another."

"But—good God, Mr. Harold—think of the consequences—think of the position in which you are now placed by that sentence of outlawry. Are you to be deprived of your inheritance—your legal rights, your social status for such a sentimental idea?"

"I have thought of everything—weighed everything—settled my course," answered the youth, in a tone of such firm determination that the advocate sank back in his seat, with a groan of despair.

"Then why have you come to see me?" he asked. "If you are determined to do nothing to clear yourself of the false charge, I am powerless to aid you, and you have run this risk to no purpose."

"There you are wrong sir. I have a purpose in this visit, and a most important one. I have a secret to reveal which may change the whole aspect of the case."

A man named McGuire, alias McCarty, was captured at Thorold on Friday by Detective Oswald on the strength of a warrant issued in Pittsburg. The prisoner is wanted for the crime of murder, he having been connected with a gang of the Molly Maguires. A reward of five thousand dollars was offered for his arrest.

A Dunkin demonstration took place at Napanee on Friday. A deputation was appointed to go to Ottawa to urge the necessity for amendments to the Dunkin Act. The dissatisfaction in regard to the wholesale license is given as to the cause of the repeal. The number voting for the by-law was larger than when it was carried in 1876.

A warrant has been issued for his arrest, but the constable returned from Goff's country residence without having been able to serve it. Mr. P. S. The Royal Geographical Society entertained Stanley on Friday evening. A large assemblage of prominent men were present. The toast to Stanley was drank standing amidst the wildest cheers. Stanley's speech was devoted to a passionate and fervid defence of his conduct toward the Bumbiroh natives, and was interrupted by frequent applause. Lord Houghton and Maj. Grant, the great African traveller, both spoke in vindication of Stanley.

Mrs. Smith, wife of Mr. James Smith, of Port Whitby, was suffocated in the cellar of her house on Friday evening. She was in attendance upon a sick girl, and went to the cellar about half-past eight o'clock to get some article. Afterwards her husband was aroused by the smell of smoke, and found flames issuing from the cellar. Rushing through the smoke and flames, he dragged out the lifeless body of his wife. It is supposed the unfortunate woman lit a match on entering the cellar, and threw it away among some marsh hay, which ignited at once, and in her endeavors to extinguish it she was overcome by the smoke and became senseless.

The Montreal Witness says:—The Toronto and Ottawa Railway Promoters have been trying to infuse new life into the enterprise. Disappointed in the vote on the bonus by-law in Toronto they have formed a new scheme, dropping the Toronto end of the road for the present, and proposing to build it from Ottawa to Peterboro. By this plan, they hope to reach Peterboro, and so stir up Toronto by the sight of the trade of the region tapped going to Ottawa and Montreal, that the bonus for the completion of the road to Toronto will be forthcoming. They have already met with a check in carrying out this scheme, however. The bonuses from the town and county of Peterboro are very necessary to it. The town has not yet taken action, but at a public meeting such favor was shown to the new plan, as to leave no reasonable doubt of its being approved and the bonus granted. In the County Council the scheme was favorably reported on by a Committee, and a bonus-by-law recommended for adoption, but the Council decided not to consider the by-law until the June session, thus laying it over for six months.

A MELANCHOLY TRAGEDY.—The people of Shequoindah and adjoining vicinity were pained and astonished to learn that Mr. Wm. Loveless, a respected and well to do farmer of Shegurandah, had committed suicide, while in a mental state of derangement. The deceased had been residing for the past month with Donald Smith, con. 5, at which place was held a series of prayer meetings in which the deceased took an active part. It appears that the deceased rose very early on the morning of the 13th inst., and going out for a few minutes he came in saying there was something among the hens, and seizing the rifle which at that time was loaded he went out in pursuit of the beast. The barn being only a short distance from the house, almost instantly the report was heard. Mr. Smith's family was in bed at the time. The two boys got up expecting to see what the deceased had shot, but to their horror they saw the body of deceased lying dead on the ground having only his pants, shirt and one slipper on and one off. From this and the condition in which he was lying it is supposed he pulled the trigger with his toes holding the rifle with his left hand so close to the end of the muzzle as the powder of the gun to blacken his hand. The ball penetrated the brain about middle of the forehead. Mr. Loveless was a widower, about eighty-five years of age, and leaves two children to mourn over the loss. No cause can be assigned more than the time he was acting under a mental aberration and religious despondency.

A valuable team of horses were lost on Monday, the 13th inst. As Mr. Robert Laybourne, farmer, of Assiginac, was driving over the ice across Lake Manitou, he came upon bad ice, which instantly broke and let the horses in. He nearly lost his own life in trying to save them.

ASSIGINAC ELECTION.—For Reeve, Thos. Gorley, 88; A. McCoy. Councillors—R. McDonald, 58; A. Hughson, 58; Alex Balletyne, 7; A. Adams, 47; Jas. Shields, 27; L. Monkhouse, 34; Samuel Norton, 17; Jno. McArthur, 27.

THE WEATHER.—It has been very mild all winter until to-day, which is stormy and severe, but the snow fell to the depth of about six inches, which will make trade very brisk. As there has been no sleighing up to date this winter, trade has been very dull.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. MANHOOD: HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

The celebrated author in this admirable Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured, without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
