The Great English Remedy is especially recommended as an unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhea, Impotency, and all diseases that follow as a consequence of Self Abuse, as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to INSANITY OR CONSUMPTION and a PREMATURE GRAVE, all of which, as a rule, are first caused by deviating from the path of nature, and over indulgence.

The Specific Medicine is the result of a life study and many years of experience in treating those special diseases. Pamphlet free by mail.

The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or six Packages for $5, or will be sent by mail on receipt of the money by addressing DR. WM. GRAY & CO., Windsor, Ont.

Harold the Outlaw

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

"No. I am certain every one of them is true as steel. But there is a spy and traitor much nearer you than me."

"Near me," echoed Mr. Adamson, regarding Harold with a look of great astonishment.

"One," continued Harold, "to whose treachery I am indebted for this terrible evilr."

"Good gracious, what do you mean. Whom do you point at?"

"Have you not wondered how Gilmour discovered the secret of my marriage, the existence of my boy, and the place where they were living?"

"I have wondered at that a thousand times, but cannot imagine the source of his information."

"Then I can tell you; it is your own clerk."

"My clerk! Tom Ironby! Oh, you must be mistaken."

"I am not mistaken. He has been a spy on you all along, in the interests of Gilmour and her ladyship. He is in their pay; they smuggled him into your service for no other purpose."

"Bless my soul! How have you learned that?"

"You remember the night of our secret conference at your office—the creaking noise in the closet. If you had not persisted in saying that it was only a mouse, I would have had it forced open and found an eaves-dropper."

"In the closet, eh. Tom in the closet? That is impossible. Tom was not within doors. I let him out myself, and then fastened the street door when he went gone."

"But he left a confederate behind him in the person of Gillespie's clerk, Edward Skeat. They were both together in the office when you went unexpectedly in that night, and, not wishing that you should know he was there, Skeat was hid away in the closet. There he heard all our conversation."

"Mercy on me!" ejaculated Adamson, thunderstruck by this revelation.

"It was most unfortunate—most deplorable," went on Harold; "but this is how my secret became known to those who should have been the last in the world to know it. Your clerk and Skeat agreed to carry the important information to my brother and sell it to him at a high price. Of course he was only too ready to negotiate with them."

"I—I am stunned—stupified by what you tell me," cried the lawyer. "Ironby a spy of Gilmour's! in league with Skeat and Gillespie!"

"Not with Gillespie, only with Skeat. Gillespie knew nothing whatever of this last plot."

"But how—how have you learned all this news?" asked Mr. Adamson, utterly bewildered.

"That is easily explained. The moment Daddy Duff came to me with the intelligence that Lizzie and the child were missing I concluded that the gauger was the instrument employed by Gilmour to abduct them, and started at once for Skene to demand from him where he had taken them. I reached the house last night. I confronted him in his own room, and found him to be in utter ignorance on the subject. At first I disbelieved his assertion, and manifested no little violence, for rage and grief had maddened me. But Skeat, who was in the next room and overheard the altercation, came in and confessed all that he knew, being incited to do so by the selfishness of Gilmour, who, having obtained his object, refused to give Skeat the reward he had promised for the information. This had so enraged Skeat that out of revenge, I suppose, he made a clean breast of it to me. It was then I saw that in this case I had suspected Gillespie unjustly; and do you know, the ganger is not such such a bad fellow as we supposed. His remorse on account of the other matter is of the most poignant description—so great and genuine that he wrote off a full confession of the whole plot, which he and Skeat signed and handed to me."

"Excellent—most excellent," exclaimed the lawyer, rubbing his hands in ecstasy. "I'll wager Gilmour has broken faith Gillespie too."

"He has, and that may have helped to inspire Gillespie with the desire to make atonement. But his regret and repentance are genuine, or he would never have made a written confession that was to bring ruin on himself simply to be revenged on his faithless associate."

"Never mind what induced him," said the excited and elated lawyer. You have got his confession, and it arms us with the most incontestible proof. Give me the precious document. It is too valuable to be in a place less safe than my private drawer."

"The paper no longer exists," answered Harold. I destroyed it."

"You what!" cried Mr Adamson, aghast. "Destroyed it—destroyed such a priceless paper! Where you mad?"

"I allowed it to be written, signed, and handed over to me as a test of their sincerity, but I had no intention of using it. The feeling of honour which I formerly told you of is as strong as ever. A little while ago when entirely ignorant of Lizzie's fate I felt desperate enough to use any weapon at command, but now my former resolution returns with double force."

"Was ever man so blind, so infatuated," groaned the lawyer, his elation giving way to angry chagrin. "I never in all my life knew anything so suicidal. It's madness, utter unmitigated madness; and all for a ferocious ruffian for whom hanging is too good."

"We shall never come to an agreement of opinion on the point," remarked Harold.

"No, I should say not, but I know that nine hundred and ninty-nine men out of a thousand would agree with me about it. Oh, it's enough to drive me frantic."

"Well, but consider," reasoned Harold; "Suppose I had kept the paper, we could not use it now, since any act of mine either to prove my innocence or assert the claim of my child would injure Lizzie. Now, by burning the document I have made Gillespie and Skeat our allies; they are now, I fairly believe, devoted to my service, and the gauger has engaged to do his utmost to find the place of my wife's captivity."

"He has?"

REMARKABLE CURE of an inflamed tear duct or passage to the eye, without an operation.—Mrs. Gibson, who has a large and extensive confectionary and candy store at No. 25 East 42nd Street, near the Grand Central Depot, was about to have a silver tube inserted in the tear passage of her left eye. The enlargement and inflammation was very great. Before submitting to the operation, tried DR. GILES' LINIMENT, rubbed it carefully over the inflamed duct. The inflammation disappeared, the passage became clear, and was, through its power, able to do without a surgical operation. Also took the Liniment internally, a teaspoonful three times a day, in a wine glass of water.

Dominion Parliament.

OTTAWA March 1.

Hon Mr. Mackenzie laid on the table a copy of all papers and correspondence in connection with the amnesty granted to W. B. O'Donoghue.

Hon. Mr. Laflamme introdnced a Bill respecting the Receiver-General and Attorney-General of Canada. He stated that the object of the Bill was to abolish the Receiver-General's office, and transfer it to the Finance Department, and to create the office of Attorney General, with the Minister of Justice over the law department.

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie introduced a Bill to amend the Canadian Pacific Railway Act of 1874. The object of the Bill, he explained, was to empower the Government to lease the Pembina branch, or to make running arrangements so as to connect the traffic roads joining it to the south. The Bill gave the Government the same power as was provided for the Georgian Bay branch in the Act as it was passed. Any lease to be made would of course be subject, according to the law as it stands over, to be submitted to Parliament and approved. It was an open question yet with the Government in what shape this road might be best worked.

The House went into Committee on several bills.

Mr. Plumb asked whether an order in Council had been recently made allowing the Canada Vine-Growers' Association to manufacture eighty thousand gallons, or any greater or less quantity, of wine or product of the grape free of excise duty, and, if so, when was the order made, for what quantity, and under what conditions.

Hon. Mr. Laurier—An Order in Council was passed on the 22nd of February last, simply confirming a previous Order in Council passed in the month of May, 1874, whereby the Vine Growers' Association have been allowed to manufacture free of duty 80,000 gallons of spirits within a period of five years, to be computed from the fall of 1873, and ending next fall, providing they should manufacture three gallons of wine to each gallon of spirits.

Mr. Buaster moved that the Government insert a clause in each and every contract let for the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway that no man wearing his hair longer than five and one-half inches shall be deemed eligible for employment in said work, etc, etc.

After some bantering remarks from Mr. Mackenzie and Dr. Tupper the motion was lost on a division.

After a short speech from Mr. Thomson, of Welland, on the benefits of agricultural banks, the House adjourned.

Ottawa, March 19.

Mr. Mills presented a return of moneys paid in on railway reservations in Manitoba.

Mr. Cartwright introduced a Bill for the better auditing of the Public Accounts.

Mr. Mackenzie introduced a Bill to amend the Public Works Act by providing for the employment of short-hand writers in cases before the Dominion arbitrators.

Mr. Laflamme moved the second reading of the Bill further securing the independence of Parliament. He explained at length the alterations proposed to the existing law.

After objections to the Bill by Messrs. Masson and Bowell, Mr. Laurier rallied the Opposition members upon their newly-found anxiety that the right of choice by the people should not be interfered with, and contended that the line should be drawn as in the Bill when the choice of the people trenched upon the right of Parliament to protect its independence. Sir John Macdonald also objected to several clauses of the Bill, as tending to limit still further the already small supply of competent men eligible for election to Parliament. He instanced the cases of persons employed by the Provincial Governments and those on the superannuation list, arguing that in neither of these cases was there any real dependence on the Crown to render them ineligible for seats in the House. He concluded by declaring that the Opposition side of the House would lend their efforts to make the measure perfect and workable, and one that would redound to the credit of Parliament and the country.

After further discussion the Bill was read a second time.

Mr. Huntington moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Post-office Act of 1875. He explained that its object was to enable the Postmaster-General to take steps to prevent the Post-office being used by lottery companies to defraud the public, and to fix the rate at which United States mails should be carried over the Canadian railways.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

Oppositionto the Whole Treaty being Submitted to Congress.

LONDON, March 21.

A despatch from Vienna says all Powers except France oppose the demand for the submission of the whole treaty to Congress.

The British Fleet Passes the Straits Under Protest.

LONDON, March 21.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote stated that there were now thirteen vessels of the British fleet near Constantinople. The ironclads passed through the Straits under protest from the Turkish Government, but the English Government saw no reason against keeping the ships in the present position.

CHRISTADELPHIAN.

To the Editor of the Mercury:

SIR,—I have just glanced at Christadelphian's letter. It is the old style of reply, when an opponent has nothing to say he generally uses such expressions as these: "astonished," "venom," "ebulition." Rather tall words to be sure. The letter aught to have been to some purport, for if I am correctly informed, it took three of the most brilliant luminaries of the Guelph Christadelphian constitution to put it together. I really think the writers do not know the meaning of the word "annihilation," as used by theologians. They understand making out policies better than theological subjects. These deluded men are to be pitied.

It, indeed, would be a waste of time for me to reply in future to such individuals. They had better stay at Jericho a little longer until their beards grow.

H. HARRIS.

Guelph, March 21, 1878.

LOTTERY SWINDLES.—The Postmaster-General has introduded a measure into the Dominion Parliament, to give him power to deal with the lottery nuisance. The country has for years been flooded with swindling circulars of gift enterprises, etc., and it is high time that the heavy hand of the law should be placed on the scoundrels.

CAPT. CLEGHORN claims to have a fowl which can lay claim to peculiarity in build. When standing its back, instead of being in a horizontal position, is perfectly perpendicular, and with its head and neck still towering up without a crook or curve in it.

BELFORD'S MONTHLY.—The March number is well filled with highly interesting matter. The following is the table of contents:—Glimpses of Constantinople,—illustrated, Shakespeare's Henry VI., How Ham was Cured, Death of Tecumseh, Disraeli's Novels, My Daughter's Admirers, The Spectre Guide of Mount Vesuvius, When I Grow Old, Locke's Influence on Civilization, Roxy—illustrated, The Elements and Growth of Talent, Current Literature, Musical. The magazine can be secured at all the bookstores.

SALE OF A MILL.—The Glenmorris mill property has been sold by Mr. Harvey for $8,000, to the Messrs. Cherry Brothers of Guelph.

Don't fail to attend Chalmers' Church Association entertainment this evening. d1

To an already well established reputation, are constantly added the warmest praises of travellers who have enjoyed the hospitalities of the Grand Central Hotel, New York. cod

Wire goods—what are they? Just call and see them at Thorp & Son's. Hanging baskets, cruet stands, knife baskets, table mats, teapot stands, and everything that can be possibly manufactured out of white wire. Bird cages and birds. Thorp & Son, 99, upper Wyndham st.

Lamps and lamp goods will for two weeks be rushed off regardless of price at Bond & Co's. Their stock is large, and they are determined to considerably reduce it before stock taking.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

Remember the entertainment in Chalmers' Church this evening. Excellent programme. d1

Local News.

REFORM CONVENTION for the selection of candidates in the Reform interest for the Centre Riding, will meet at Fergus to-day.

No less than five entertainments or gatherings this evening. What great sin has Guelph committed, that citizens should be so treated?

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mr. John Wilkinson, of lot 19, 2nd con., Puslinch, died on Tuesday morning last, after a short illness of three days. He was buried on Wednesday.

A CHANGE.—On Tuesday the Dalby House, Elora, had a change of proprietors. Francis Vickers retired from the hotel business and Francis Dalby, a former occupant of the same house, resumed possession. Mr. Vickers will continue in the livery business.

POPULAR SERIES.—Mr. John Anderson is bound to supply the reading public with cheap literature. The latest out is a twenty cent edition, which contains "An Idle Excursion, by Mark Twain, "Why Wife and I Quarrelled," "Farm Ballads," and "Farm Legends," by Will Carlton, all contained in one edition.

THE Tecumseh Base Ball Club, of London, is advertising for a change catcher who is capable of filling other positions. This is brought about in consequence of the punishment of Quinton, one of their players, by being sent to gaol for three months.

LARRY TRACEY, the party who it is alleged robbed Mr. Moran, of Puslinch, of $315 a few days ago, was recently seen in Toronto. Mr. Moran repaired to that city to see if any trace could be found of him. After employing the services of a detective, it was learned that Larry had departed for Buffalo.

KING DODDS is a well paid lecturer. Last evening he was presented in Toronto with a purse of nearly $1,200 by his admirers. He purposes travelling through the different States having a prohibitory liquor law, for facts in connection with the movement. If there is any liquor to be found in those States, Dodd's will smell it out.

CHANGE OF NAME—The feeling among the temperance people in Toronto, in relation to Mr. Rine, is very well illustrated by the following resolutions passed on Wednesday, by the Yorkville Rine Club:—That our Club shall hereafter be known as the Yorkville Christian Temperance Society. That the badge to be worn by the members shall be a red ribbon, with the initials Y. C. T. S. That pledge cards to correspond with this change shall be provided and used.

THIS EVENING.—Rev. W. H. Poole, on "Anglo Israel," Dublin street Methodist Church.—Chalmers' Church Association musical and literary entertainment in the basement of the Church.—The oratorio of Daniel, or the captivity of Babylon, in St. Andrew's church by chorus of fifty voices.—Tea social and concert in the Primitive Methodist Church.—Special meeting of St. George's Society to consider the best way of celebrating the day.

PROPERTY SOLD.—W. S. G. Knowles & Sons sold the following property yesterday, belonging the insolvent estate of David Allan:—Part of lot 3, concession 2, division C, township of Guelph, containing about seventy acres, to William Farr for $800. Part of lot 1, known as the "Bridget Farm," containing twenty acres, to Walter Laing for $1,110. Fifty acres in the rear thereof to F. J. Chadwick for $1,360. One hundred and ten acres of "Rocks" property and one town lot are yet for sale.

BEARS.—This morning a couple of itinerant showmen in charge of two bears gave an exhibition on the streets. Considerable interest was manifested in their antics, but strange to say as soon the collection was about to be taken up a general stampede ensued. A handsome young man named John Robson Cameron, was hugged by one of the bears and then thrown violently to the ground. He regained his feet in a moment and at once started on a run for Quebec street east. It is said the animal believed in the Darwinian theory and and in consequence looked upon Mr. Cameron as the best selection the crowd afforded.

ILLICIT STILLS.—Mr. Inspector Romain, of Guelph, accompanied by Officers Patton and Jones, proceeded to the tin and hardware shop of T. G. Watson, River street, Paris, and, upon a careful survey of the premises, Officer Jones discovered hid, under some bagging in a cellar, a newly made tin still, with copper bottom, calculated, as to capacity, to produce three barrels of spirits per week. The still was made, as Mr. W. stated, for a stranger who was to have called for it on Friday night. It was seized. On the farm of Robert Murray, East Zorra, a search was made and in a barn an old-fashioned still and worm, not in working order, was found. Mechanics should beware how they engage in the manufacture of stills without giving the Inland Revenue Office notice, and everyone who has any still or part of a still in their possession, whether in working order or not, render themselves liable to a very heavy fine and imprisonment, by keeping the same without notifying the proper authorities.

A PROSPECTUS has been issued for the Saskatchewan Herald, a paper to be published at Battleford, Manitoba, about the first of July next. P. G. Laurie & Co., are the publishers. A considerable amount of enterprise will be displayed in the publication.

Rev. Mr. Harris' Letters.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—There is little or no improvement of manners in the second letter, and in veracity none whatever; it has, however, one redeeming feature, in the endeavor—feeble and illogical, it is true—to meet a main proposition advanced by Mr. Sintzenich, viz., that man by creation or nature is not immortal. When Mr. Harris asserts that Mr. S. "stated that Plato did not believe in the immortality of the soul," it is highly suggestive of wilfulness or defective hearing, and certainly reveals great ignorance, for Mr. H. has evinced more zeal in the cause of error than wisdom in rushing so rudely and rashly to assail what he evidently does not understand. Christadelphians constantly affirm that immortalsoulism is of Pagan origin, and utterly foreign to the word of God; and in support thereof I refer Mr. H., to the "Twelve Lectures on the Teaching of the Bible in Relation to the Faiths of Christendom"—lecture 4, page 76, entitled "Immortality conditional gift, to be bestowed at the Resurrection," wherein Mr. Roberts says that Plato "may be said to be the father of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul." Also to "A Declaration of the first principles of the oracles of the Deity," page 32, prop. 25; likewise to the "Bible Vindicated," under Modern Theology," page 50; or "Dogmas of the Ancient Greeks and Romans."

Although Mr. H., takes pains to inform us that the doctrine was taught by the philosophic sages of the heathen world unassisted by the light of revelation, which I readily grant, it is not a fact that they were unanimous and undivided on the subject. But what is most surprising about the matter is that Mr. H., should cite as witnesses these same "philosophic sages of the heathen world, unassisted by the light of revelation," for it is on the very ground just named that we utterly repudiate them and their crazy and carnal speculations. But not so with Mr. H.; with him they seem as trusty counsellors and companions, ready to help him where the Apostles and prophets will not, and he appears to be better versed in what they taught than that which is inculcated by the "Spirit of Truth," which, says the Scripture, "the world cannot receive."

I would like much were space not limited to quote at length the utterances of some of the more honest and discerning of the orthodox writers on this question which would be found to be wholly condemnatory of the false positions held by Mr. Harris. Such men for instance as Dr. Eadie, Revs. Mintern, Wollnston, Henn, and others.

It is to be deplored that one has but to tell Mr. H. the truth on these matters to become his enemy; indeed, it would almost appear as if he and others were determined to rivet faster the fetters of error and delusion on their hearers upon these topics. Certain it is that none can understand the scope of salvation and the redemption which is in Christ, until divested and exorcised of of the delusion and vain conceit of natural immortality. Mr. H. says "you have not to listen to Mr. S. but a few moments to find out he has no debating powers." I remind Mr. H. he did not come to debate but to lecture, nevertheless I think it very probable that if Mr. H. is willing to throw overboard his unenlightened heathen friends, and argue from the Bible alone the question of the immortality of the soul in a spirit of courtesy, which certainly has not been the spirit of his communications to you, that arrangements could be made.

In conclusion I will say that what Mr. H. calls "the great hopes of man's instinctive nature," i.e. the hope or desire for immortality, (which, by the way, is fatal to Mr. H's. belief that man is already immortal) are not, thank God, thro' Jesus Christ; to be "dashed to the ground," for Christ "hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, II Timothy 1, 10, and those that "seek for glory, and honor, and immortality" by a "patient continuance in well-doing" shall verily attain, with an incorruptable inheritance in God's kingdom, when Christ appears.

Yours truly,
A CHRISTADELPHIAN.

WEATHER PROBS.—The weather probabilities are fresh to south-westerly to north-easterly winds, and fair to cloudy weather, with areas of snow and rain.

THE Dominion Telegraph purpose opening a branch office in Guelph, in the store of Mr. F. J. Drew, on Wyndham street Guelph will then have two offices.

MR. WM. SMITH, late pitcher of the Maple Leaf Base Ball Club, it is said has made an engagement as pitcher with the Stars, of Syracuse. He is a very efficient base ball player.

AN ASSEMBLY, under the auspices of a number of the members of the lodges of I. O. O. F., was held in the Caledonian rooms last evening. There was a large attendance and a very enjoyable time.

WHEN a farmer in Eramosa asked Mr. A. W. Wright, at the meeting on Tuesday evening, a question regarding the so-called national policy—properly termed Sir John A. Macdonald's scheming for power—he advised him to attend some school and learn "manners." Magnificent argument that, besides a brilliant display of wit. The answer would not have been given so insolently, however, had not the farmer been a supporter of the Mackenzie Government, as well as being a farmer.

PROTECTION discussion on the Market Square this morning between a prominent farmer of Paisley Block and a Guelph manufacturer. Verdict of the assembled crowd was that the farmer, an advocate of a revenue tariff, knew more about the question and what effect a prohibitory tariff would have on the agricultural interests than the manufacturer. The more the question is discussed the less likelihood is there that farmers will be taken in by those who wish Sir John A. Macdonald back to power.

Rine's Apology.

A Criminating Letter from Defendant.

Subjoined is the letter of apology and contrition received by Mr. Hurst, of Stratford, from D. I. K. Rine, for Mr. Gibling, father of the young girl that it is alleged was indecently assaulted. It certainly puts a black phase on the case against the temperance advocate:

MITCHELL, March 16, 1878.

Mr. J. C. Hurst, for Wm. Gibling.

I desire to say that your daughter misapprehended any action or word of mine as intended to injure her feelings or insult her in any indecent manner. I did not intend to, and am exceedingly sorry she so thought. I hope you will say to her that I most humbly apologise to her, as well as to you, her father, for what she says I did, and I think when you consider that there was nothing immoral or criminal you cannot appear against me and cause so much trouble for an injudicious or imprudent act without crime or the intention of crime to it. I have been very free and social everywhere I have gone, and this I am sure will be a good lesson to me in the future. I do not desire that it should come to more publicity than it has, and I hope you do not, and that you will accept the apology I make and the explanation, which leaves your daughter without any discredit to her name. I furthermore believe that Mr. Hurst acted as a true friend and protector to your child, and did under the circumstances precisely what I would have done under similar circumstances, and he is to be commended for the way in which he has acted, and I now apologise to him, and hope he will look over the injudiciousness of what has happened, and be to me what he has been, a true friend. I acknowledge to you that I was very imprudent, but as I did not intend to commit a sin, I hope you will accept this my humble apology, and let the matter stop where it is, and by your daughter not appearing the case will be dismissed, and I can go on in my work and be more careful in time to come.

Yours in sorrow,
D. I. K. RINE.

That Obstreperous Cow.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—The animal referred to in last night's MERCURY, and which came to such an untimely end upon the public street, appears to have caued those in charge much difficulty in driving her to the slaughter house, or wherever it was intended to take her. That the poor brute became unmanageable and furious is not at all surprising, subjected as it was to such a course of wanton cruelty by the two lads in charge; one with a rope tightened round its under jaw, pulling and jerking with all all his might, the other with a heavy cudgel, pounding its head and body in general. Its bleeding mouth, distended nostrils and glaring eyes indicated somewhat of its having suffered two or three hours previous to being killed. Without doubt had the animal been driven loose it would now have been a source of profit instead of loss to the owner. Such instances of unnecessary torture inflicted upon dumb animals declare the need of a branch of the Society for prevention of cruelty to animals in our midst.

HUMANITY.

Guelph, March 21, 1878.

BETWEEN eleven and twelve o'clock on Monday night Constable Everett, of Lucan, while entering his residence, opposite Stanley's mill, was fired at by some unknown person from behind the corner of a woodpile some fifty feet distant. The charge of buckshot, ten in number, hit the door about three inches from Mr. Everett's breast, eight of which became embedded in the door, and the other two went through the thick lumber into the hall way.

A special to the Winnipeg Free Press says:—Battleford is greatly excited over a report brought in from Red Deer River by the Mounted Police to the effect that Sitting Bull had formed a confederation of Sioux and Blackfeet, and had made overtures to the Crees, and when the leaves come there was to be a great gathering of Indians at the confluence of Red Deer and Bow Rivers, when Sitting Bull proposed to raid the settlements. This information was obtained from a friendly Cree, who overheard the Council which had been called to consider Sitting Bull's proposition. Navigation is open at Parry Sound.

Infractions of License Law.

Inspector Macdonald on the War Path.

Inspector, John Macdonald laid information before Messrs. George Barron and Samuel Auger, J.P's., against the following persons for infractions of the License Law: Thomas Hughes and Thomas Corbett, licensed tavern keepers, Fergus, for unlawfully allowing liquor to be drunk or consumed on their premises, on Sunday the 10th inst., and on Friday 15th inst. Both parties appeared before the above magistrates and plead guilty to the charges made, when each were fined $20 and costs.

On the same day before the said magistrates, James M. Fraser, licensed shop keeper, Elora, appeared and plead guilty to the charge laid against him, of permitting liquor to be consumed on his premises, on Tuesday the 5th inst., contrary to law. Fined $20 and costs.

On Saturday the 15th inst., at the Town Hall, Elora, James Heffernan, of Cumnock, appeared by proxy before Messrs. G. Barron and S. Auger, J. P's., to answer a charge laid against him for selling liquor without license on Monday, the 18th February. This case was called for Saturday, 2nd inst., but owing to the witnesses, Angus McPherson and James Lynch, two young lands, not appearing in answer to the summonses served on them, the case was adjourned to Saturday, the 9th inst. For the same cause it was again adjourned to the 15th, and in the meantime, at the request of the Inspector, warrants for the arrest of the witnesses were issued and placed in the hands of a Constable on Saturday last, they both appeared in Court. The result was that defendant was convicted, and fined $25 and $8,75 costs.

This makes the fifth conviction against the defendant, James Heffernan, since the 10th day of December, 1877, making a total of $120 in fines, and about $28 for costs of Court.

Harriston Correspondence

Harriston has had, in about four weeks, no less than two genuine fires, and two almost successful attempts. The last was on Wednesday night, about ten o'clock. After the fire alarm, many people were soon in search of the flames, which had not become visible, as they were confined to the inside of an old building on Arthur street, adjoining what is known as Kent's Block. The fire engine was promptly on time, but fortunately its services were not required. From the appearance of the late fires there is no doubt but they were the deliberate work of some person not actuated by any good impulse. There are a number of reasons given for it. Perhaps the most probable is to create an excitement and get people out of their houses so as to take advantage of their absence to plunder. This belief is strengthened from the fact that a number of cases of petty thieving and one successful burglary have taken place lately.

The Council has offered a reward of $50 to any person giving such information as will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person found guilty of incendiarism.

Alex. Meiklejohn retires from the firm of Alex. Meiklejohn & Co., on the 1st of April. The business will then be carried on by his late partner, Alex. Michie and John Hall, of Paris. In the meantime they offer goods at first cost. Though Mr. Meiklejohn retires from the dry goods and grocery business, he will still continue in the hardware business, to which he will be in a position to devote greater attention than heretofore.

A grand game of curling came off on the rink on Saturday last, with the following score:—Messrs. Markle, Montgomery, Fulton, Clegg—skip, 33. Messrs. Lee, Millar, Livingston, Lavin—skip, 10.

A. G. Markle, the enterprising landlord of the Royal Hotel, ever bound to keep pace with the times, has decided on making large additions and improvements in his hotel, so as to be in a position to meet the requirements of his large and increasing business. He also purposes moving his stables back of Arthur street, and substituting it with a brick block. A very commendable enterprise on the part of Mr. Markle.

The Flute Band concert in the Town Hall on Thursday evening was very meagrely attended, but the performance, for the first entertainment, was very good. Mr. Larimer, of Stratford, gave a recitation, which was particularly good; Mr. Kelly's comicalities created considerable mirth; Mrs. Morgan acquitted herself well as a vocalist; Mr. O'Mara gave two good readings. It may be termed a success in every sense except financially.

It is understood the following diets of worship have been arranged for the dedication of Knox Church on Sabbath, 31st March:—The Rev. Dr. Robb, of Toronto, will preach at 11 a.m., and 7 p.m., and the Rev. Geo. McLellan, the former pastor, but now of Centre Bruce and Underwood, at 2:30 p.m. The Rev. Mr. McLellan will preach in Gaelic at 11 a.m., in the basement.

Messrs. Mitchell & Teeple, of the Champion Agricultural Works, are preparing for a good season's business. Their implements are becoming popular.

The ex-monk Widdows paid a visit to this place a while ago, but the citizens having shown their good sense of unappreciation of him, his stay was of short duration.

The dispute between the local print and myself having been so much discussed, further reference to it seems almost unnecessary. His failure to force a retraction from me, notwithstanding repeated efforts, together with stating emphatically in two issues that I was an employed detective, and retracting the same in his third issue, is sufficient to spoil the force of anything else he can say. As regards his veracity compared with that of the MERCURY, the public have far more faith in that of the latter, and in that of your humble correspondent. He is welcome, to all the consolation he can extract from the committee he refers to, and his reference to it only snows the weakness of his case. But if he finds any comfort in it, let him have it, for it would be a pity to snatch this last bit of comfort from his lips.

Mr. James Dickson, probably the oldest man in Ontario, died at Palmerston on Saturday last, having lived 112 years, 2 months, and 3 days. Deceased was born in Ireland in 1776. In the latter part of last century he was seized by a press gang in Dublin, and taken to a ship belonging to the British navy. Shortly after this he was in the squadron which, under Nelson, so crippled the French fleet, and it is believed that he served on the flagship on which the great commander lost his life. He had sailed the greater part of his life, and had visited every quarter of the globe. He came to this country about thirty years ago. Till within a comparatively short time the old gentleman had possession of both his mental and physical powers. He was the father of 11 sons and 3 daughters, eight of his children being born at four births. One of his daughters who died some years ago, also had twins four times. Mr. Dickson was both a Freemason and Orangeman, but had not been to any lodge for many years. Longevity seems to run in the Dickson family. The deceased's brother died at the age of 106 years, and his father at the age of 119 years. As Mr. Dickson was born in the 6th year of the reign of George III., he had lived in the reigns of four English monarchs. His children have often heard their father tell that his great-grandfather had seen Henry the Eighth.

The marriage of the Earl of Roseberry to Miss Hannah de Rothschild, only daughter of Baron Meyer de Rotschild, was celebrated on Wednesday. They were first married civilly at the registrar's office for Hanover square district. A religious ceremony took place at Christ's Church, Mayfair, in the afternoon.

Mrs. Morrison has declined to let the Grand Opera House to Mr. Rine for a Sunday afternoon meeting.

Daily Mercury.

THURSDAY EVEN'G, MARCH 21, 1878.

The London "Times" on Sir John's National Policy.

The "Globe's" London correspondent cables the following extract from an article in the London "Times" on Sir John Macdonald's so-called "National Policy." It will be seen that the 'Times' hits the nails on the head :—

"In these days when so many are drawn away from the right faith, it is a matter of satisfaction to find that the motion in favour of readjusting the Canadian tariff in a Protectionist sense has been rejected by the Dominion House of Commons. The worst symptom of the movement in Canada in favour of increased protective duties is that Sir John Macdonald has put himself at its head. We do not suppose for a moment that he will give it success, but his couduct is much to be regretted in the interest of a reputation that requires rather careful handling. The career of Sir John Macdonald for many years past is the history of Canada. When in office showed a somewhat distressing carelessness as to the means of retaining power and cynical negligence of the purity of his Administration. There was a chance left open to him of returning to power at a future time, and the temptation seems to have been too strong for him. He seized the opportunity offered by the bad times and commercial depression to raise the cry of a modification of the tariff in the hope of rallying round him all who have protectionist leanings. It is not believed that Sir John Macdonald shares their errors, but that he plays with these allies for the time to get rid of them somehow if he again became a Minister of the Crown.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, March 20.

Mr. Dymond moved the reference of the Moylan printing accounts to the Committee on Public Accounts, entering into a brief discussion of the matter as revealed by the correspondence brought down, and giving his reasons for asking the reference.

Mr. Tupper quite concurred in the opinion that this was a suitable matter for reference to the Committee, but he objected to the strong language the hon. member for North York had used in submitting the motion.

Mr. Dymond stated that he had used no language which the exigencies of the case did not require. The motion was carried.

Mr. Frechette moved for a Committee of the Whole to consider resolutions declaring the expediency of testing the possibility of navigating the St. Lawrence from Quebec to the ocean during the winter season.

Mr. Pope (Queen's) opposed the scheme of winter navigation on the ground of its being impracticable and visionary.

Mr. Davies thought the service of the Northern Light between Prince Edward Island and the mainland had solved the question of the winter navigation of the St. Lawrence. Still he doubted whether such navigation would be of any practicable value.

Mr. Mitchell opposed the scheme, asserting that money spent in its furtherance might as well be thrown into the sea.

Mr. Mackenzie at some length showed the present state of the question, contending that the scheme, though perhaps in a modified form, was within the range of possibility. He stated that, holding that belief, the Government were surveying a portion of the coast of the Lower St. Lawrence with a view to the selection of a suitable harbour.

The House went Committee on the Canada Southern Bill as amended by the Railway Committee.

Mr. Dymond's Bill respecting evidence in assault cases was then brought forward for its third reading. The Bill was read the third time.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The Leading Powers still at Loggerheads.

LONDON, March 20.

A Vienna despatch says:—It is urged in official circles here that England has no ground to make war without first going to the Congress. If she does she will have the disapprobation of Germany and Austria. If England compromises the Congress Andrassy's policy will be thwarted, and the hope of an ultimate Anglo-Austrian understanding must be abandoned. The Berlin Cabinet holds the same view.

It is learned upon excellent authority that within the last few hours the Government has received a hint that Russin will yield on the point now at issue.

A Pera despatch says the British Government telegraphed to General Sir Arnold Kemball to return home immediately. It is reported that England has decided to resist Russian annexation in Asia Minor.

Russia is buying large quantities of saltpeter and torpedoes.

A St. Stefano special reports that the Russians have abandoned the idea of embarking at Buyukdere, because Minister Layard informed the Porte that if the Turks granted them permission to embark there the British fleet would come upon the Bosphorus.

A Vienna despatch states most positively that General Tcherkassky, late provisional Governor of Bulgaria, committed suicide because he had been threatened with removal.

North and South German newspapers express great anxiety about Austria's future.

Advices from Tiflis state that typhus is raging among the Russian troops in Asia.

The semi-official Politische Correspondenz, of Vienna, prints a St. Petersburg letter which declares that England's claim has produced so bad an impression in Russia that the meeting of the Congress is doubtful. Nevertheless, it is believed in Vienna and Berlin that the Congress will meet on April 2nd.

An Athens despatch says:—Hobart Pasha having agreed not to bombard villages on the coast of Thessaly, the insurgent leaders have consented to negotiate with him at Nola to-day, on condition that their official status be recognized. It is reported that Hobart offered the insurgents autonomy.

DR. WM. OSGOOD PAGE, Magnetic Physician, 252½ 6th Avenue, New York, suffered for many years with stiffness and intense pain in his knee, and at times was unable to walk, caused by an injury received on the Hudson River Railway. Tried every remedy that skill or science could devise, without benefit. GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA gave instant relief and effected a complete cure.

The only place you can get them. Eight imported cigars for twenty-five cents at Russell's, corner of Wyndham street and Market Square.

Musical and literary entertainment in Chalmers' Church this evening. dl

MR. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS is satisfied that the only honorable course to pursue in regard to the Fisheries award is to pay it.

IT is reported on good authority that Sir A. T. Galt has informed Mr. Bachand, Attorney-General in the new Quebec Cabinet, that he is not unprepared to visit the Eastern Townships to give his support to Mr. Joly in the approaching Provincial elections.

IT is understood that Orton will not move his agricultural amendment resolution if Bechard's motion in favor of a duty on coarse grains is gone on with, as the Opposition have decided to vote solid in favor of it.

THE London Times, speaking of the Fisheries award, says:—"We hope and believe that Blaine will not be able to get the Congress of his countrymen to support him in a refusal to pay the award, and to stamp the American policy with the double discredit of meanness and trickiness."

THOSE who are inclined to chuckle over Mr. Rine's unpardonable conduct in Stratford, should not forget that the temperance cause is not responsible for it, nor should they seek to condemn that cause on account of the wrong doing of one of its advocates. Mr. Rine and others may fall, but that should not affect a cause which has nothing to do with the misdeeds of its advocates.

THE Herald thinks the country is aroused by the Eramosa meeting. It is no doubt a tremendous rousing in the opinion of the Tory organ, but we cannot see where the excitement is, unless on the part of Messrs. Lukes, Bathgate and Wright, who can get up an excitement at any time among themselves, when they are trying to get Sir John back into power.

THE Herald said the meeting at the Centre Inn numbered 300. By actual count those present numbered 115. So there was a considerable margin for the Herald to go and come on.

LUKES insulted the farmers of Eramosa the other night at the Centre Inn, when he said that "where there is a preponderance of farmers in a community, low wages and great ignorance prevail." How do the intelligent farmers of Eramosa like this? We could get scores of them in the township who are far better informed than this itinerant political protectionist, who was specially s[illegible] Tow[illegible]

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. Harold the Outlaw

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XXVII.

WALTER ADAMSON RECEIVES AN UNEXPECTED MORNING VISITOR—THE MYSTERIOU LEEER AND ITS CONTENTS—PLANS LAID.

"Yes, he seemed grateful beyond measure for my forbearance, and promised this most earnestly."

"Come—that's something—more than I would have expected," said the lawyer, his excitement subsiding a little.

"The truth is," added the other, "the gauger is a good fellow at bottom. He was pressed by circumstances to do what he afterwards bitterly regretted."

"Humph! One would think you would be the very last to see his virtues; but your good nature, Harold, is a mass of generosity gone to seed. If Providence allows you to suffer for it in the long run ——"

"Well?"

"Why, then, Providence is not so just nor so beneficent as I have hitherto believed, that's all. Dear me, how my head whirls. Such sensational business is serious at any time, but before breakfast it is positively dangerous. So we'll adjourn to the next room, where Maggie must have the coffee, hot rolls, and Finnans ready by this time, and while we satisfy our physical frames, I shall reflect on the extraordinary affair in its various aspects."

"Ay, do," said Harold, eagerly. "I am ready to do aught which does not compromise my honor or incur danger to Lizzie and the boy. And in truth, though anxiety prevent me feeling hunger, I do feel faint from want of food. I have ate nothing since yesterday at noon, and have not been in bed for two nights."

"Dreadful," pitiable, ejaculated Adamson, holding up both his hands. "For God's sake, come now and eat a hearty breakfast, or you will break down utterly. Now remember to sustain the character of your dress before Maggie. She is quite trustworthy, as I have said, but it is needless burdening the young lassie with unnecessary secrets. Now, put on your spectacles.

Harold did as he was told, and accompanied his host to the breakfast room with all the gravity which became a reverend clergyman. As the lawyer had anticipated, Maggie had the morning meal prepared, the fragrant aroma of the steaming coffee meeting them as they entered the apartment. In the centre of the well-filled table stood a bright pewter dish-cover, which the lawyer removed with a snuff of pleasurable anticipation, and there lay a pile of savoury Aberdeen haddocks, most tempting to behold.

Without more ado they seated themselves, and the meal was eaten in almost perfect silence, Mr. Adamson's legal mind being absorbed in meditating ou the state of the case and its various bearings. The one thing to set about was the discovery and rescue of Lizzie and the boy. Till this was effected nothing whatever could be done.

"If this bit of paper could speak and tell us where it came from," he said, in reference to the letter. "Aye," he added, "or how it found its way into my letter-box."

"I have no doubt your clerk could tell you that," said Harold.

"Ha! you are right," exclaimed the lawyer with sudden animation. "And here may be something to work on. Care must be taken not to let Tom suspect that we have discovered him to be a spy of Gilmour's, and we can put erroneous information in his way. I will in turn become a spy on him, and who knows but I may obtain a clue to what we seek. A capital idea. I could kick the rascal out of the office, and hope to have that pleasure some time. But for the present I must dissemble with him. Do you on your part return to the mountains and set your emissaries to work. Are you sure you have men you can trust?"

"I mean," answered Harold, "to take counsel of Daddy Duff. No one knows the country better."

"The very thing," exclaimed Mr. Adamson, "Daddy is the man to assist you as no other can, and I am sure no one will be more willing. He's a gem of the first water, is old Daddy."

Much more consultation followed, but the above embodies the practical resolutions come to. Having arranged how the next letter from Lizzie should be transmitted to Harold, and how each should keep the other informed of aught that might transpire, the youth took his departure, not without much anxiety on Mr. Adamson's part, who trembled lest Harold should be recognized on the street and arrested.

But no such misadventure occurred. His disguise was complete, and no one who saw him stalking along dreamed that they beheld the outlawed son of the late Sir Philip Logan.

Having gained the outskirts, he walked on into the country till he reached the dwelling place of a most faithful friend, where, in the early morning, he had left his horse.

The latter, better rested and refreshed than its rider, bore him away westward at a quick pace, and by the afternoon he was once more within the friendly shelter of the hills.

"A Drowning Man Will Catch a Straw."

If he catch it, it will do him no good. Thousands of people, who having neglected colds and coughs until they have become dangerous, will rush to almost every nostrum for relief. This is why so many experiments are tried by the sufferers. Go to your druggist, buy a bottle of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and use it with confidence. It will benefit at once and ultimately cure. It is no straw, it is a cable well tried; hold on to it and be saved.

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

The Little Saskatchewan.

John McTavish, of section 5, in township 18 west, on the Little Saskatchewan River, exhibited a magnificent sample of Fife wheat, the product of a first plowing. The grain was bright, large and plump, and turns out sixty-six pounds to the bushel. The yield was thirty-six bushels to the acre. Mr. McTavish reports that over a hundred first-class settlers have located during the past season in his and the neighboring townships, besides scattering settlers north to the slopes of the Riding Mountain and west to near Fort Ellice. The country, as far as he has explored, over 100 miles along the base of the Riding Mountain, is very rich and attractive for settlement, having an abundance of wood and spring water, supplying a soil of surpassing richness and fertility.

A saw and grist mill is now in process of erection for William Cameron, Principal of the City School, at the junction of the Little Saskatchewan, within the Rolling River, which will be a great boon to the settler, and enable them to cut off the shipment of flour to the west from the eastern settlements. The settlers complain of the Land Office being so far to the east of the land available for settlement, and claim if there is a necessity for one at the Portage, there is still greater need for one at, or near Mill City, on the river. The railroad question is one which also is an absorbing topic to them, and they expect some decided action from Winnipeg if the Dominion Government fail to do them justice. Their present expectation is, that if the southern route is not chosen, a bonus will be granted to a local line through the arable land.

Mr. McTavish's wheat, we understand, has been sent to the Surveyor-General at Ottawa for exhibition purposes along with some other fine samples.—Extract from the Manitoba Free Press. wtf.

Railway Accidents.

In moving for a return of railway accidents, &c., last week, in the House, Mr. Fleming, of North Brant, said it was desirable that fuller information should be furnished, relating to the circumstances connected with railway accidents, than had hitherto been given to the public. The Railway Act of 1868 provided that a true and particular return should be made to the Railway Committee of the Privy Council semi-annually, by the railway companies of the Dominion, of the accidents and casualties that might have occurred on their respective roads. All the information, however, that was made public was the simple statement that so many were killed and so many were injured, and they were not even certain that the numbers given were the actual number of casualties that had occurred. In the Report for the year ending 30th June, 1875, it was stated:

"That the following companies have kept no record of the accidents that have occurred:—Canada Southern and Toronto Grey and Bruce. Several others make no returns but do not state the reason."

The Report of the year ending 30th June, 1876, did not say whether returns had been received from all the companies or not, but gave the following as the number of killed and injured for the year:—

	Killed.	Injured.	Total.
Passengers	5	9	14.
Employees	48	238	286.
Other persons	56	57	113.
Total	109	204	413.

Taking for granted that that the statement was correct, the large number of accidents to railway employees demanded attention. There were, according to the last census, 2,739 railway servants in the Dominion. Supposing the number should now be increased to 3,000, there would be one person killed to every 62 employed, and one injured to every 12 engaged in the service. The question naturally suggests itself: Why was it that so many men were struck down every year while engaged in an essentially peaceful occupation? It might be of interest to notice, in contrast with those returns, the comparatively small number of casualties which occurred in Great Britain to men engaged in the same kind of service. In the report of the Railway Commissioners presented to the House of Lords in 1874, it appeared that there were 274,535 engaged in railway service. Casualities amongst them were 788 killed and 2,815 injured, being one killed to every 350 employed, and one injured to every 100 employed. In Canada, therefore, in proportion to the men engaged, there were six killed to one in the United Kingdom, and eight injured to one in the latter country. It might be said that those accidents happened to railway servants through their own carelessness. If this were true, then Canada had a less efficient staff of hands then Great Britain. He did not think that was the case, but that investigation would go to show that other causes were at work. In England where the subject had received a good deal of attention, it had been found that a number of accidents occurred through the excessive hours of labor which some of the employed were called upon to perform. Others occurred through the non-enforcement of rules by railway companies, while quite a number were attributable to the want of safety appliances. Railway corporations were very slow to introduce anything of that kind. They were not responsible for the lives of their employees. It cost nothing to kill a man, but it would cost something to make use of a mechanical contrivance that might save his life. Whatever might be the cause, the result was disastrous to the families of the sufferers, and through them to the public; for it oft-times happened that, when a railway employee lost his life, his family became a charge on their friends or on the public. He supposed he had stated sufficient facts to justify him in submitting the motion to the House.

Mr. Mackenzie said the Government would be prepared to furnish the return as full as possible, by making a special communication to the railway companies.

A CONTRACTOR DECAMPS.—A great commotion has been created among the unfortunate laborers on No. 9 section of the Lachine Canal, near Montreal, by the announcement that John Phelan, contractor for that section, had absconded to the United States, victimizing a number of merchants and others in that city, and leaving about 250 workingmen six weeks in arrears for wages. Phelan drew $12,000 from the Government, being the amount due him on the contract, and afterwards drew up a supplementary estimate for $5,000 more, which he alleged was required to pay his men.

A FALSE RUMOUR.

TO THE LADIES OF GUELPH.

A report having got circulated to the effect that we were going to discontinue our Millinery Department, we take this opportunity of contradicting said rumour, and stating that we have engaged our staff of Milliners for the season, and intend to carry on this branch of our business on a more extensive scale than formerly.

In a few days we will have received our Stock, and will give due notice of our opening day.

Ladies should call and see our new spring goods.

CLOTHING,

Now Going on at the Elephant.

Having just completed opening out the stock of W. H. E. Whitny, of Windsor, which has just been purchased at a great sacrifice, will certainly cause a speedy clearance.

This stock consists mostly of goods bought last fall, therefore, being free of all moth-eaten rubbish that is so often bought with bankrupt stocks.

Those in want of clothing will find this a capital oppportunity of buying goods at prices that will meet depressed times.

No reasonably offer will be refused, as the stock must be run off. A call is requested.

NEW
THE LION

AHEAD AS USUAL

We beg to announce that our New Importations have commenced to arrive from the Old Country, and very soon we shall be able to show a large and complete assortment of cheap New Goods for the Spring.

We have already opened out a magnificent display of so famous both for quality of cloth and beauty of pattern. These are well worth seeing.

Also, we call special attention to a large and beautiful assortment of just in from the Nottingham Factories. Prices from $1.50 to $20 per pair.

COTTONS. COTTONS

MARK THE FOLLOWING:

Last Wednesday the largest auction sale of Cotton Goods ever known in Canada was held at the Canadr Cotton Mills, Cornwall. With our usual desire to supply our customers with the cheapest possible goods, we attended the sale and succeeded in securing a large number of bales of the best brands at figures which will enable us to sell these goods at less than any other store in Guelph. PAID FOR THEM. We purchased at the same time a big lot of

FAR BELOW MILL PRICES

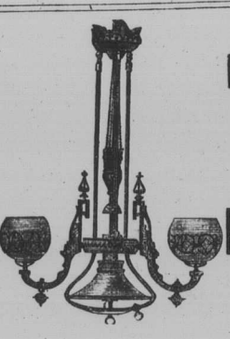
EQUALLY CHEAP.



Spring seems to have set in, but the Lion is always ready, and our customers will find our stock of Brand New Goods, the largest, choicest, and cheapest in Guelph.

Daily Mercury.

SATURDAY EVEN'G, MARCH 23, 1878.

THE MERCU RY

WE expected to have been able to present to our readers, on the first of January last, the MERCURY in a new dress, but in consequence of delays in filling our order at the type foundry, we were unable to accomplish our desire. To-day, however, we have pleasure in informing our friends that we have been enabled to complete our plans, and to lay before them the MERCURY entirely printed from new type, from the foundry of Messrs. Blake, Stephenson & Co., and furnished through the Toronto agents, Messrs. Gwatkin & Son. We leave the paper to speak for itself, being well satisfied that in all respects it will in appearance and make up compare favorably with any daily published in the Dominion.

WE are not in the habit of blowing our own trumpet, but prefer to leave our work and enterprise, as represented in the columns of the paper, to the discrimination and judgment of the public. That is the only true test of the popularity of any paper, and by it we have always been willing to abide. But it is pardonable on an occasion like this to say that never in the previous history of the MERCURY did it occupy such a favorable or commanding position. Its circulation to-day is five to one compared with any other paper in the County. Outside of Wellington, in the Counties of Bruce, Grey, Huron, Waterloo and Wentworth, its circulation almost equals some of the most popular papers published in these Counties, and during the past winter, not only in this, but in the surrounding Counties, its circulation has steadily increased. It circulates in every section of North Western Ontario, and is a welcome weekly visitor in thousands of families from Lake Nippissing to Lake Ontario; from Toronto to Lake Huron.

All this was not been done without hard work and much outlay. And it is only by hard work and continued outlay that our paper can be maintained in its high position. These we are determined, ungrudgingly, to give—as we have done in the past—well knowing that the public will appreciate and fairly remunerate us for our ceaseless toil, for our constant anxiety, for our watchful care over every interest that affects the public weal, and for our desire and efforts to advance the physical, commercial, intellectual and moral status of our people. Viewed in this light a properly conducted paper is the most powerful agent at work in the social system, and our constant solicitude is that the MERCURY will be an agent only for good. This has been our object in the past, and it will be our object in the time to come.

In making this new departure, therefore, we wish to thank our many thousands of friends for their support in the past, and to assure them we shall do our utmost to retain and deserve it in the future. All the talent that we can command, and all the outlay that we deem necessary, shall be employed in keeping up the MERCURY to the high status it has attained.

In other respects the MERCURY office is the largest and best equipped west of Toronto. Our presses are the latest that could be obtained; our type is nearly all new, and of the choicest styles; our resources are by far the largest, and our means the best, for turning out work, in the district. Our principle is honest and fair dealing; and our motto, always to perform what is promised, and when promised. In adhering to this we have managed to get along in the past, and we feel sure that in sticking to it, we will not lose any patrons in the future.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Local News.

KNOX CHURCH.—Rev. Mr. Burson, of St. Catharines, will preach to-morrow, morning and evening, in this church.

MR. HASKELL, the temperance advocate who labored here with so much success last summer, assisted at a meeting in Dundas a few days ago.

MR. JOHN ANDERSON has sent us the Family Herald for March. This old and excellent periodical keeps up its high character. Copies at Anderson's.

"WIDE AWAKE," for April, a magazine specially adapted for young children, has been received from the publishers, D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. It can be ordered through the bookstores.

IF one of your children is suffering from a contagious disease of any kind, you are criminal if you permit your other children to go out to play with their little fellows or send them to school.

THE SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL.—Mr. Galbraith, the agent for this popular and ably conducted journal, will be in town on Monday and Tuesday, and will devote these two days to increasing its circulation. We wish him success.

BRASS BANDS.—In Woodstock, at the last meeting of the Town Council a grant of $300 was voted to the amateur band of the town. If the Guelph band had received one-third such encouragement, it would not have disbanded.

BANKRUPT SALE OF BOOTS AND SHOES.—We direct attention to the sale of boots and shoes belonging to the Brown estate. Mr. Thos. Mitchell has bought the stock, and will sell off the old stock at cost, in the old stand. See adv't.

THE Pennsylvania Legislature has a bill before it at the present time to abolish the custom of treating. It provides that it shall be a penal offence for one man to ask another to take a drink of intoxicating liquor. Such a measure might have a very happy effect on many in this section.

MR. R. Mathison has been presented with a silver tea service by the officers and attendants in connection with the Insane Asylum, London, on the eve of his departure to Toronto, where he is to act as Bursar for the Central Prison.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.—We direct attention to the advertisement announcing the commencement of the summer session, when there will be accommodation for about twenty pupils. The Institution is now in splendid working order, and to young men who wish to get a thorough knowledge of farming no better opportunity offers. Applications should at once be sent to the President, Mr. Johnston.

ESCAPED.—Peter Farrell, an old vagrant, well-known in Guelph, who has been in the County Poor House during the past three months, left the institution on Saturday last, in spite of the keeper, and made off with himself. He said he did not believe in working for nothing, and now that the summer was at hand and navigation open he would paddle his own canoe. He was afterwards brought back by a constable.

LIKE MASTER, LIKE MAN.—Rine's private secretary, who made himself very busy in Stratford, after the arrest of his principal, in trying to compromise matters with Miss Gibling and her father, is evidently a "high-toned" young man. The Beacon says:—In conversation with leading gentlemen connected with the temperance movement he confessed, with the most unblushing effrontery and coolness, that previous to his joining Rine he had been keeping a disreputable house in Pittsburg, that he and Rine had been in the habit of taking liberties with girls, &c., &c. Such things were not thought anything of in Pittsburg, indeed a man might go a great deal further than Rine did in Stratford, and get off with a couple of weeks in jail. All of which is decidedly rough on Pittsburg, but is worth chronicling as showing what manner of men these are that have been humbugging the Canadian public for a year or more.

ORATORIO OF DANIEL.—This Oratorio was repeated in St. Andrew's Church on Friday night to a larger audience than was present on the preceding evening. This Oratorio, though lacking the diversatility of vocalization and grandeur of our great Oratorios by the first composers, is artistic in in its arrangement, and pleasing in its effects. Somewhat of a sameness runs through the choruses, and even the solos are not without that fault. But on the whole it is a pleasing Oratorio, well suited for amateur choirs, and it was very well rendered last night. The piece went quite smoothly, the different parts were well taken, and the choruses were remarkably well sung. The different parts were well balanced, and in the more robust, as well as the more subdued chorus the singing was excellent, and the time without a fault. We need not particularize as we did yesterday, but would say that the singing of Miss Oldham, Mr. Cook, Mr. Higham, and Mr. Humphries deserves all credit, and the more subordinate parts were, considering all the circumstances, very well done. The accompaniments by Miss Stevenson on the organ, Mr. Philp on the violin, and Mr. Dyson on the cornet were first-class. Special credit is due to Mr. Parker, the conductor, who must have labored hard to bring his choir to the state of efficiency manifested, and who is to be congratulated on his success in the production of this Oratorio. Rev. Mr. Smith explained the incidents in the Oratorio, and at the close, on motion of Mr. Chas. Davidson, seconded by Rev. Mr. Waadrope, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Parker and the choir.

WEATHER indications for to-day, fresh to brisk south-westerly to north-easterly winds, and fair weather.

D. I. K. RINE, the temperance advocate, has decided to retire from public speaking until after his trial.

GENERAL HOSPITAL.—During the ensuing week Rev. Canon Dixon and Dr. Brock will be on duty at the Hospital.

MAKE believe I'm Dreaming, is the latest five cent music production. At Anderson's bookstore.

GRIP is a capital number this week. The cartoon, showing the Conservative reaction is very good. Copies at Anderson's.

MR ROBT. STEWART, has sold his entire horse "Messenger Exhibition" for $175 to a party who purposes taking the animal to Halifax.

A COMMUNICATION has been received from "Observer," dealing with the Canada Temperance Act of 1878, which has been unavoidably crowded out to-day.

LECTURE.—The Rev. T. W. Handford, of Toronto, has been engaged to give his celebrated lecture on "Cromwell" in Knox Church, Guelph, on Thursday, 11th April next. This lecture is spoken of as being one of the best ever delivered in Canada. Keep it in view.

BUTTER FACTORY.—It is learned that Messrs. Gales, Woodcock & Co., the former gentleman from this neighborhood, have decided to erect a butter factory at New Dundee. The price paid for milk will be eight cents per gallon, they to haul it themselves. The factory will go into operation about the 15th of April.

REV. DR. KILROY, one of the most eloquent divines of the Catholic Church in Canada, has consented to lecture in the Catholic Church at high mass and vespers to-morrow. The music, under the direction of the Rev. Father Fleck, S. J., will be something unusual for Guelph. The Rev. gentleman himself will preside at the organ on both occasions. The collections taken up will be in aid of the St. Vincent de Paul Society. Strangers will be provided with seats by a committee appointed for that purpose. d1.

THE SATURDAY MARKET.—There was considerable business done on the market this morning in small produce. Very little grain was offered for sale. The families of farmers were in town in full force, evidently with the intention of buying spring goods, and merchants were kept busily engaged in displaying goods and effecting sales. The roads in the country are now dry, and wheeling is excellent, and business men now anticipate a good trade.

GRAND CONCERT.—The Norfolk and Dublin street Methodist Churches will give a grand concert in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, the 4th of April. They have secured the following well-known and favorite artists for the occasion:—Mrs. Caldwell, of Hamilton; Mrs. Secord, of Berlin; Mr. Tom Hurst, vocalist and flutist, of Toronto, and Mr. H. Clark, bass vocalist, of Hamilton. The choirs of the churches will unite in rendering several choruses. Mr. Lawrence and his string band will also assist in selections and accompaniments.

A GUELPH WEATHER PROGNOSTICATOR LOOKS INTO FUTURITY.—A gentleman residing in town who states that he has not failed in his weather predictions for the last eighteen years, intends trying to successfully compete with Vennor, who has been so far astray during the past season. He writes as follows regarding the changes that will take place in the weather during the next three months:—"It is, in my opinion, a very difficult spring to deal with, owing to the present unsettled state of the weather. Throughout the ensuing three months, from appearances, the weather will be favorable for farming purposes. We will probably have very few thunderstorms during this period, and those that we will have I locate in the beginning of June. In the fore part of the spring we will have light rains from the west or south. We are likely to have light flurries of snow from the north in the latter part of March and the former part of April. The fore part of June is likely to be the wettest portion of the three months. I am inclined to think that the prevailing winds will be from the west and south. In concluding I would say that it is a good sign to see the change in the position of the wind, which has generally been about south-east for the last six months."

CATTLE FOR LIVERPOOL.—Many admirers of fat cattle paid a visit to the fair grounds this (Saturday) morning to view the fifty-one magnificent animals belonging to Messrs. James Porter and John Hawes, which are to be shipped to England. The collection was certainly a good one, and every one was in that prime condition that pleases the eye of a butcher. The animals were afterwards driven to the Grand Trunk freight station, where they will be shipped direct to Portland. The animals average in weight 1,500 lbs. per head. The greater part of them were fed in the vicinity of Guelph and those were purchased from the following parties:—Five extra fine animals from John Kirby, two from John & Jas. Cleghorn, two from A. McIntosh, two from C. Stefflor, four from Henry Larter, one from Thos. Card, one from Geo. Davis, five from W. F. McWilliams, four from F. McQuillan, four from J. Shortreed, four from Solomon Dawson, three from G. D. Porter, three from Mrs. Taylor, two oxen from J. Hanlon, and nine head from the neighborhood of Fergus. The animals will be shipped from Portland on the 30th inst. by the Dominion Line. Messrs. McQuillan, Goodfellow and Watt will ship seventy-five head of cattle on Wednesday next by way of Boston.

MISS JULIA ROWSWELL.

No Tidings of the Missing One.

Up to Saturday noon no tidings has reached the friends of the young lady who so mysteriously disappeared from the residence of Mr. A. H. Goodeve, early on Friday morning.

The sluice-gates were raised at Allan's dam on Friday afternoon, and four or five feet of water was run off for the purpose of seeing if she could have committed suicide at that point. No trace of her was found. In the evening word was brought into town that a young woman answering the description published in Friday's MERCURY, was seen in the morning in the vicinity of of Rockwood. Rev. Mr. Manchee at once drove down to that neighborhood, and instituted diligent enquiries, but it was learned that a mistake must have been made.

The young lady's brother arrived in Guelph in the evening, from Allan Park, and, as would naturally be supposed, was in almost a distracted state of mind over the disappearance of his sister. He caused circulars to be printed, thanking the friends who had been in search of Miss Rowswell, and stating that the river would be dragged on Saturday morning. He also requested parties to search their premises to see if she might be hiding anywhere about them.

Scores of people have been searching the swamps and woods in the outskirts of the town, and parties have again driven over roads leading into town to make enquiries. The river has also been dragged, but all without success.

On Friday morning Policeman Turner closely scanned the premises around Mr. Goodeve's house, and was able to trace the rubber marks of the girl from the house through the garden into Mrs. Harris' premises, and from thence down the railway track to the opening in the fence at the north-east abutment of the iron railway bridge.

Many of the young girl's friends are still sanguine in the belief that she has started back for her old home near Durham. If such is the case, strange it is that no tidings of her can be gleaned. The wires have been brought into requisition to all neighboring offices, but no answer has yet been received.

Dr. Herod has expressed his belief that the young lady in her delicate state of health would be unable to walk more than two or three miles. Such being the case, it is surpassing strange that she has not been seen by some person, if she is still living.

The search is still being continued, and citizens are requested to join in the search to-morrow (Sunday).

The Missing Young Lady.

The brother of Miss Rowswell kindly asks the people of Guelph and surrounding country to continue to use every effort towards finding his sister, and in their walks to-morrow to have that object in view. He begs to thank them for the efforts they have made so far, and hopes that by continued exertions they will succeed in their search.

THE GREAT WESTERN Railway Company will issue tickets on Wednesday for Toronto, good to return on Saturday, for $2. Several important trade sales will be held during those days.

HORSES KILLED.—On Thursday evening the late passenger train on the Wellington, Grey & Bruce Railway ran into a team of horses, north of Palmerston, that the driver thought could make as good time as a railway team. He attempted to cross in front of the approaching train, but the horses were struck by the locomotive and killed. The driver escaped unhurt, although the wagon was badly wrecked.

CHILD LOST.—A little son of Mr. John Bunyan strayed away from its home on Macdonnell street this morning, and caused much anxiety to its parents, who had messengers around town in search of of him. He was found about noon at Mr. Schofield's, near the Great Western station.

SERIOUS ACCIENT.—During the past few days the front wall of the Worswick Engine Company's Works, lately destroyed by fire, appeared to be unsafe, as several large cracks were in it, and it was considerably out of plumb. This fact, however, did not prevent little urchins playing around the building, although some of them had been warned to keep away. About two o'clock this (Saturday) afternoon, while a boiler maker named Wm. Maddock and George Garlick, a lad about ten or twelve years of age, a son of W. Garlick, were going through the opening in the wall where the main entrance was, for the purpose of procuring some bolts that were inside, the wall fell, throwing both down. Maddock was severely cut about the side of the head; and the young lad Garlick was thrown down falling forward, a beam falling over him with one end resting on the door sill, saved his life as it prevented the heavy stone falling on him. Maddock was able to get up himself. When Garlick was got out from the ruins he was insensible. He was carried home and Dr. Macdonald having arrived it was learned that the lad's arm was severely fractured, his body injured and his head cut. The wall fell across the large iron lathe, which was inside, breaking it in three places. Loss on the lathe about $500.

SUICIDE OF A MINISTER.—On Friday night, Rev. John Marples, formerly a Presbyterian Minister in Muskoka, latterly a believer in spiritualism, residing in Toronto, died under circumstances which appear to leave but little doubt but that his death was due to arsenic. It is stated that he took the arsenic about 5 p.m., and some time afterwards Drs. McConnell and Smith were called in, and tried by stomach pumps to remove the poison, but without effect.

THE KEITH ABDUCTION CASE.—The man Goodwin, who was arrested on a charge of being concerned in the abduction of the Keith children, at Newcastle, has been committed for trial at the Cobourg Assizes, which open next Tuesday.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 13.—Gen. Todleben is dangerously ill and fears for his life are entertained.

LONDON, March 23.—No information has been received by the Russian embassay in regard to the reported demand by Russia for the withdrawal of the British fleet from the sea of Marmora.

Fire in Teeswater.

TEESWATER, March 23.

A fire broke out this morning between three and four o'clock in a building owned by Murdock Mackenzie, and occupied by John Ballagh as a bakery and grocery store. The building and a store and dwelling adjoining, owned by Wm. Falconer, and occupied by D. P. Campbell as a confectionery and fruit store were totally consumed. Ballagh and Campbell lost a portion of their goods and furniture. The Teeswater planing mills and the dwelling of W. R. Thompson was on fire a number of times, but by the exertions of the villagers with pails, &c., was saved. The larger part of the machinery in the mill, also the stock of Thos. Shannon, who occupied the upper flat of the mill as a furniture factory, was removed with considerable damage to both. A number of others also suffered loss by throwing their effects into the street.

Loss about two thousand five hundred dollars.

Prohibitory Liquor League.

The New Temperance Act Discussed.

A meeting was held in the old town hall on Friday evening, called by the Wellington Branch of the Ontario Prohibitory League, for the purpose of hearing the new Temperance Act discussed by Rev. Messrs. Gale and Dewart, of Toronto. The latter gentleman was unavoidably absent. The hall was comfortably filled.

On motion, Mr. Robert Mitchell was elected to the chair. Rev. Mr. Brock offered up prayer.

The Chairman referred to the action expected to be taken by the meeting. It was for the purpose of passing such resolutions in reference to certain portions of the new Liquor Bill, as would strengthen the hands of the Government in regard to the same. He then introduced the Rev. Mr. Gales, Secretary of the Dominion Prohibitory Alliance.

Mr. Gales explained that he was present for the purpose of speaking upon temperance legislation—a question surrounded by many difficulties, and at the same time requiring our careful consideration. The practical question that presents itself before us is whether the Bill now before Parliament will accomplish the practical results desired. He was not before the audience as a temperance lecturer, but to speak in regard to the Canadian temperance reformation as far as it affects the measure under consideration. Attention was directed to facts that have come before the knowledge of the public during the past four years. In 1873 the temperance people resolved to make the question a national question. He spoke of petitions being presented to both Houses of Parliament, and the action the Committees of the Houses took in regard to the same. In their reports some of the best reasons that could be advanced for a prohibitory law were contained. In 1874 Parliament was again petitioned, but more largely than before, and it was resolved to get information from Maine and other prohibitory States in regard to the working of such a law. The following year the Commissioners presented their report, and from the report it was learned that a prohibitory law could be carried out with advantage to the country when properly enforced. The large convention held in Montreal afterwards, and the answer the Premier gave the delegation that waited upon him, was referred to. He considered that when the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie asked why the Dunkin Act was not tried, if the temperance people were honest in their request for a prohibitory law, there was good reason for the advocacy of the Bill in the same zealous manner as had been since that time. The question now is, in 1878, will we, the temperance people clamor for direct prohibition, ar will we endeavor to secure such a measure as will to the greatest extent go towards accomplishing such a result. He looked upon last year as an extraordinary one in temperance reformation. More drunkards had been reclaimed, and more men identified themselves with the movement by signing the pledge than in any other year in the history. The temperance people however felt that they were laboring under a cloud, when the House of Commons by resolution concluded to take no action in framing an improved temperance Act, until the question of jurisdiction was settled. Reference was made to the Government informing the Dominion Alliance at its meeting in Ottawa in February that a Permissive Bill would be introduced into Parliament. The Alliance discussed the question in presence of members of the Government, and they then held, and the speaker stated that he always would hold, that the ballot was wanted. Our opponents state that we are afraid of the ballot. This is not so as temperance men want a true expression of public opinion on the subject, and if by the ballot it could be better obtained, voting in that manner was what he wanted. The Bill introduced by the Hon. Mr. Scott was then referred to and various clauses were read and critized. He thought provision should be made to prevent druggists selling liquor for any purpose orther than for medicinal or sacramental purposes. This should be done in favor of the licensed liquor vendor. In the Act there was not a five gallon clause, but there was what was much like a ten gallon clause. This was in allowing brewers and distillers who manufacture liquor in counties where the law is in force to sell liquor in ten gallon quantities when he has reason to believe the liquor will be carried out of the county. He would like this amended as it was very loose. The Act did not allow the Bill to take the place of the Dunkin Act where it had been carried. He thought the Act should supplant the Dunkin Act in such cases. He favored the clause compelling twenty-five per cent of all the electors to petition for the submission of the Bill, before a corporation was compelled to submit it. He considered, however, that as the names had to be attested as qualified voters before the Governor-in-Council, great care therefore would have to be observed in getting duly qualified signatures. It was provided by one of the clauses that the Act could be submitted in cities and counties. The speaker would like the Government to define the word county in order that litigation might be avoided in future. He however was pleased that such a Bill had been submitted. He was pleased with it notwithstanding there were some objectionable points. The speaker concluded his remarks by a strong appeal for supporters to the prohibitory movement.

The speaker was applauded frequently throughout the delivery of his address.

Moved by the Rev. Thomas Brock, seconded by Mr. Joseph Ryan, that this meeting expresses pleasure that the Government has introduced a Permissive Prohibitory Bill, and earnestly hopes that such measure will, in all its provisions, be carefully considered and so amended as to accomplish its intended object.

The mover and seconder spoke to the resolution briefly.

Mr. Wilkie objected to the resolution. He thought that the Bill, as it is now, was altogether too cumbersome, and that amendments were asked for from the Government on a Bill that perhaps could not afterwards be carried out.

The resolution was then put and carried.

Moved by Rev. J. A. Durkee, seconded by Mr. Wm. Wilkie, that in the opinion of this meeting the Dominion Alliance should immediately urge upon the Government the importance of amending the Bill now before Parliament.

1st. Define the meaning of the term county in section 4.

2nd. Provide an easier method of bringing the Act before the electors than is defined in section 7.

3rd. Limit the number of persons to be licensed to sell for legitimate purposes.

4th. To expunge section 45, sub-section 5, permitting merchants and traders to sell ten gallons.

5. To provide that the new Act shall be substituted for the Dunkin Act where the latter is in force.

Mr. B. Fairley thought it would be well to have some amendment in the Bill, in order that it might be made more clear who the proper parties are who are to enforce the law.

It was thought advisable to add a clause to the resolution to provide more fully for the enforcement of the Act.

Rev. Mr. Durkee objected to having the clause added, as he was not prepared to move for any hasty recommendation, which he had not fully considered. He thought the law could be very easily worked as prosecutions could be proceeded with the same as in civil cases.

The motion was then put and carried with the sixth clause struck out.

It was then moved by Mr. B. Fairley, seconded by Mr. John Higham, that the Bill be amended also, by the insertion of explicit directions for the enforcement of the Act. Carried.

Vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Gales and the meeting broke up.

Daily Mercury.

The "Herald" and Mr. Robinson.

We refrained from noticing the scurrilous article in the Herald of Wednesday on Mr. John Robinson, the Reform nominee for the Centre Riding, until Mr. Robinson would make his own explanation, which he did in the course of his speech at the Convention on Thursday, and which we give to-day. It is a most effective and crushing reply to the slanders of the Tory sheet. Speaking of this shameful attack on an innocent man, the Fergus News-Record, published in the place where Mr. Robinson resides, thus speaks in vindication of Mr. Robinson's high character:—"The Guelph Herald of last evening makes one of the most ruffianly and unjustifiable attacks upon Mr. John Robinson, of Fergus, and his brothers that ever disgraced the columns of a Canadian journal. People may differ with Mr. Robinson upon political questions; but all who know him will agree that he is a man of the highest honour and most unimpeachable integrity. It is consequently not in the power of the Herald dirt-thrower to injure Mr. Robinson's character. But surely it must be a frantic state of terror that prompts such a base attack, not only upon a gentleman living in private life, but, the more effectually to damage him, and his family connections as well."

THE Paris Star has gone into Opposition. No great loss.

THE Lincoln Reform delegates on Thursday unanimously nominated Capt. Norris as the party candidate for that constituency at the general election.

THE Galt Reporter asks whether it is possible to put life into the Credit Valley Railway enterprise? Ask George Laidlaw.

THE London Times thinks Sir John's reputation requires careful handling. So does the people of Canada. If it is handled much more it will fall to pieces.

MR. DYMOND'S motion to refer the Moylan accounts to the Public Accounts Committee, passed without creating any great excitement. It is expected Mr. Dymond will summon witnesses for a meeting of the Committee, to be held next week, when the accounts will be investigated.

THE article on Sir John Macdonald republished from the London Times has created quite a sensation in Parliamentary circles in Ottawa. Coming from a source removed altogether from the political struggles of the Dominion, it has a very decided effect on current opinion at the Capital.

BEFORE the Public Accounts Committee, the other day, the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie stated that the Government could sell one-half of the lots he had purchased on the Kaministiquia Harbor for three times the amount they had paid for them—and yet this is held up as another of the Government's little jobs for the special benefit of one of their friends.

WE are glad to observe that the Premier stated his willingness to withdraw the clause in the new Stamp Act, making it compulsory to use stamped paper for notes of $100 and upwards. Manufacturers throughout the country will learn of this change with satisfaction.

IT is said that the Government is likely to meet the views of the deputation from Toronto and elsewhere with reference to the Temperance Bill, by modifying the sixth clause. The deputation asked that the number of petitioners should be increased by one-half; the modification will be likely to make it one-third. It is doubtful that the Government will give way to the only other requested change—that the Dunkin Act, where now in force, should be repealed. It is understood that otherwise the Bill is not objected to.

REFERRING to the London Times article on Sir John Macdonald and Protection, and to the reference in it about his character requiring careful handling, the Hamilton Times says:—"If the Chieftian ever sings the old song 'Do they ever think of me at home?' he will now know that they do think of him there, though the thoughts are not very flattering to him. By the way, the annual list of Imperial Privy Councillors is issued for 1877-78. It says that Privy Councillors are entitled to be called 'Right Honorable.' Sir John's name is not in the list, yet he dubs himself, and his friends dub him, 'Right Honorable.' Is the man made up altogether of false pretences?"

A Free Press special from Battleford confirms the previous report of an Indian combination.

The Conservative Embroglio in North Wellington.

What has come over the Tories of North Wellington, that they could not remain satisfied with Mr. Drew, who, last year, was duly nominated as their standard bearer for that Riding? The heretofore happy family seems to be all at sixes and sevens. Mr. Drew stole a march on Mr. Chadwick, and Mr. Gordon, determined that Mr. Drew should take back water, comes to the front, and demands another Convention. Mr. Drew's little game is exposed, and he is told in the plainest terms possible that he cannot manipulate the North Riding without the consent and aid of Mr. Gordon and his friends, and so the old war horse has to submit to the bit and the bridle, drop his previous nomination, and consent to have a new Convention, which will take into consideration the claims of Messrs. Chadwick and Gordon along with his own. All this is, no doubt, very humiliating to Mr. Drew, but he is in a very tight place at present, and must conform to circumstances. He agrees to a Convention to be held on the 3rd of April, at which the different municipalities will be represented by two delegates from each, and the whole farce of a fresh nomination will be gone over again. Well, we pit Chadwick against Drew, and if Jacobs don't come in and spoil the fun, we will take odds on the candidate from Guelph. It is a family quarrel, and our only complaint is that the Conservatives interested did not wash their dirty linen without letting the public know of it.

Centre Riding Reform Convention.

Mr. Robinson's Speech.

Mr. Robinson on coming forward was received with loud and continued applause. He said he was glad to see such a large meeting of representative Reformers, assembled from all parts of the Riding. He appeared before them under circumstances somewhat embarrasing, being but a young man, comparatively speaking, and having but little personal experience in matters immediately connected with a political campaign. He felt obliged to Mr. Clarke for his kindly remarks concerning himself personally, and for his expressions of confidence both socially and politically. He was also grateful for his proffered assistance during the campaign, and as he was thoroughly posted on the political questions connected with both Houses, he would be an effective help as evidenced in his address here to-day. It would not be necessary for him to return the compliment, even in the unlikely event of opposition being offered to him, for nothing of any account is charged against the Ontario Ministry by the Opposition. They are most fortunate in the administration of the Government of the Province, a circumstance favorable to him, as the Ministerial candidate. It is different with candidates for the House of Commons, for a man's name has only to be mentioned in this connection to make him a target for villification and abuse of the most unscrupulous and unprincipled description on the part of the Opposition press. As a proof of this he would refer to an editorial in Wednesday evening's Guelph Herald, a copy of which he held in his hand, and which he would make reference to or read all through as the meeting desired. (Shouts of read, read.) Mr. Robinson then read the article, after which he proceeded to deal with the different charges or insinuations. He said he had lived in the County twenty four years, and would venture to say, without appearing egotistic, that where he was best known it was beyond the power of the Herald to convince either Reformers or Conservatives that he would be guilty of knowingly stating what was false. (Applause.) As far as the Herald's insinuations related to himself personally he would take no notice of them, feeling convinced that what is untrue is without power to injure. But as the Governments of the Dominion and Province are implicated he felt it his duty to offer an explanation, when the meeting would easily see the manner in which charges are trumped up against the Governments, a matter of legitimate business being taken hold of, and all that is necessary to constitute a scandal added. The Herald's first charge relates to a contract that a younger brother in Manitoba entered into for the delivery of 165,000 railway ties at 45c each. In reference to this matter he said that neither he nor any other member of the family knew that William had ever tendered for those ties until they read in the newspapers that he had been awarded the contract. He did not believe that the Government knew yet that there is any relationship whatever between him and the party who received the contract. He knew nothing about the transaction, was never consulted in reference to it, and had no personal interest of any kind whatsoever, direct or indirect, in it. This shows the foundation upon which opposition charges are based. (Loud applause.) The Herald's next insinuation is that another brother and himself got an undue advantage in connection with the Ontario subsidy to the branches of the T. G. & B. R. R. from Orangeville to Owen Sound, in the County of Grey, and from Mount Forest to Teeswater, in Wellington and Bruce. In regard to this matter he would say that as the meeting was aware the Ontario Legislature granted certain aid to different railways, said aid being payable by Orders in Council only when the roads were equipped and running. Respecting these branches of the T. G. & B., the Company having got into deep water during their construction, and being unable to pay the original contractors, they stopped work, and for a time it appeared likely that the municipalities that had granted large bonuses were going to be left without the road. Strenuous efforts were then made, and every possible pressure brought to bear, by friends and opponents, to induce the Government to advance the subsidy, so as to enable the Company to complete the lines and keep their agreements with the municipalities interested. But all to no purpose, the Government being firm in their determination to act only in accordance with Orders in Council, issued under statutes in that behalf. While as an individual, indirectly interested he felt very much the result, he could not help but admire the firm stand taken by the Government in refusing to deviate, in any degree, from the conditions upon which these subsidies were to be paid. The difficulty was got over by the T. G. & B. Company assigning to them their right to the Orders in Council, in consideration of which they completed the work. But the Government subsidy was not paid over until after the road was running and passengers and freight had been carried over it for more than two months. This is a plain statement of the case as it transpired, and the Herald's embellishments never had any existence but are malicious slanders concocted to serve a political purpose. (Cheers.) These accusations or insinuations may be taken as a fair sample of the nature of the charges for the concoction of which the Opposition have become notorious. Referring to the position that he occupied before the Convention he deemed it just to himself and the meeting to say that neither by act nor word had he sought to secure the nomination that had been unanimously tendered to him, and on that account he esteemed it all the more. He cordially accepted the nomination, and in doing so was conscious of the responsibilities and duties that it would involve, which duties he would endeavor to discharge to the best of his ability. But if he had duties to perform, so also have they as his friends, and if all make a united effort he believed victory would be achieved. (Loud applause.)

Interesting Information on the Cattle Trade.

Mr. Thomas Cramp, of the firm of Torrance & Co., was examined before the Immigration Committee at Ottawa with regard to the exportation of horses, cattle and meat to England. He said the only way in which he was connected with the business was as partner in the firm of Torrance & Co., agents for steamship lines, by which cattle and meat were carried. The business had increased considerably. Last year the number carried by this line were 3,518 oxen, 8,273 sheep and 1,233 swine, of which about 75 per cent. of the oxen were Canadian and all the sheep and swine. His company carried meat by refrigeratory process. A steamer could always be fitted up in twenty-four hours, but his company principally sent live stock. He was under the impression that animals were carried to England safer and with more comfort by the St. Lawrence steamers than the New York lines. Sufficient food was shipped to feed the animals on the voyage, for which no freight was charged, care being now taken that none should be taken across in such quantities that it might not be sold on the other side. The largest number of live stock carried by any one steamer of his line was 15 horses, 337 oxen, 114 sheep and 20 swine. He considered the Duke of Richmond's bill, compelling the slaughter of cattle at the port of arrival, as amounting to a prohibition of cattle exportation from Canada. His company and others had been agitating in Liverpool against the bill, and they hoped to succeed. It was evidently intended to be for the benefit of farmers in England. The horses carried by this Company were of a superior class, the average price they fetched in England being £50 sterling, and he had been informed by an officer who has charge of horsing the artillery that he had no doubt whatever but that a large proportion of the Canadian horses would be fit for artillery service. In case of the passage of the Duke of Richmond's bill, the dead-meat trade might be carried on successfully, but it would never be so prosperous as the live stock trade, as the latter was so much the more beneficial to other trades, as, for instance, bringing more shipping to our ports with their corresponding advantages. With regard to the trade in poultry he considered it of importance. He had not done much in it, but he had heard that large quantities of game, turkeys, fowls, geese and even eggs had been shipped by the refrigerating process, and he might add that every day improvements were being made in that process. It was customary to insure the animals against loss at a low rate. Taking them all around he would not be afraid to insure cattle at ½ per cent. The cost of the refrigerating process was about 10s. per ton. He did not know how the value of Canadian cattle compared with English animals in England, but he had been informed that they made as good beef as any in England. He impressed on the committee the necessity of urging on the Government to use all their influence, and to put forth every effort to oppose the measure in the House of Lords, the passage of which he looked on as a national calamity.

The report that there was much dissatisfaction amongst the natives of India has received a startling verification in the passage of a bill by the Council of the Governor-General recently for the prompt suppression of all seditious writings, exhortations and intimidations amongst the ignorant classes. One of the chief causes of dissatisfaction, it is presumed, is the attitude England has taken in the Eastern Question, thus allowing the followers of Mahomet to be conquered without raising a finger in their behalf. Compared with this the fatherly care taken by the Government of the starving millions will be considered as nothing, for the gratitude of the multitude is of very short duration; and it is possible that the famine itself has been laid at the door of the British rule. There is one bright side to the matter, however, which is that in case of England being drawn into the Eastern war the dissatisfied classes may furnish troops for the conflict.

A new Post Office will shortly be established at Thompson's Corners, in Beverly.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

FOR OUR STOCK we know of no Liniment that equals GILES' LIQUID OF AMMONIA. It is what horsemen have long wanted. Something reliable. It never disappoints. Sore throat and lameness particularly.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF LIZZIE AND HER CHILD EXPLAINED.

As he spoke he loosed his horse from the stake, and while this was being done Lizzie sprang forward to where the other man sat in the saddle with the little Alfred in his grasp. She clutched his leg, she clung, she pulled, imploring him, by every adjuration, to restore her child, who was putting forth all his little energy to get to her.

"She had just petter make up her mind to gang awa' peaceably wi' us—'deed wad she," said the man, in a very strong Highland accent, as he sat like a rock against her efforts, and kept the boy beyond her reach.

"Why should I go with you?" cried Lizzie. "Why take me away from this quiet glen? What harm have I done that you should do me this wrong?"

"You ask no questions," said the other ruffian, "but mount on this horse beside me."

"No, no," shrieked the helpless girl. "Spare us; for the love of heaven, let us alone."

For answer he made a signal to his companion, who adroitly shook off the clinging girl, and galloped away with the child. A cry of frantic dispair burst from poor Lizzie's lips, and she tried to follow in vain pursuit, when the man by her side held her with resistless strength, and then said, in tones more stern than he had yet employed—

"If you wish to see your child again, mount; refuse, and you have seen the last of him."

This threat was enough.

"Oh, I'll go, I'll go," she answered. "I'll be quiet and obedient, but do not part me from my boy."

"Ah, now you are becoming sensible. Keep in that mind, do as you say, and you'll be well used. Quick, if you would have me overtake him."

Unresisting she allowed him to lift her from the ground and place her in the fore part of the saddle. He instantly vaulted up behind her, passed his arm round her waist, seized the rein with the other hand, and put his spurs into the animal's side.

Heedless of the double burden, the horse no sooner felt the sharp prick than he bounded forward in the wake of his companion, who was already far into the distance.

In a state of indescribable agony, yet also bewildered and half stupified by the rapid motion, Lizzie sat gazing with wild intensity at the foremost horse, on which it seemed as if her darling was being borne away from her for ever. She strained her eyes to catch sight of him, and her ears to hear his terrified cries. Distance and the interposition of the bulky form of his captor prevented her from doing either; but her excited imagination conjured up a vision of both. She thought she saw the boy struggling and holding his arms towards her—thought she heard his terrified cries for her to come to him—and in the intensity of her anguish implored the man whose power she was, to increase their horses speed.

"Faster, faster!" she panted. "We shall never overtake them!"

"Don't alarm yourself about that," replied the deep voice in her ear. "He does not mean to run away from us. Just keep quiet and you will have the boy beside you by-and-bye. See we are nearing them."

This was not an erroneous assertion, for Lizzie herself became conscious that the distance between the two horses was lessening, and it gradually decreased till she could see little Alfred safely perched in front of the Highlander, and by no means in such a state of affright as her imagination had pictured. His captor, from interested motives, no doubt, had exerted himself to allay the child's fears, and pointed out to him that his mother was getting a ride too. So soon as the little fellow became assured of this, and received the promise that "ma" would be beside him soon, he gave himself up to the pleasure of the ride. It was ever so much better than the one he had just had on "pa's" horse. The latter had walked, and that very slowly; but here he was galloping at full speed, and with a motion so smooth, over the thick turf. He looked back to his mother, laughing and clapping his little hand with much glee. Then ere long he grew a little drowsy, and fell sound asleep within the arms that encircled him.

By this time Lizzie and her captor were but a very few yards behind, and as the anxious mother uttered a piercing cry of alarm on seeing Alfred become still and motionless, the Highlander hastened to remove her fears by shouting back the assurance—

"It's sleepin'."

"You hear that ma'am, the child sleeps," said the deep voice in her ear.

"Where, oh, where are you taking us to, and for what purpose?" asked the anxious mother, turning her eyes wildly towards him.

"Well, you shall know that in good time. Just rest contented for the present with knowing that no injury will be done to you or the boy.

"No injury," she replied. "Is it a terrible injury to be carried away thus from home home and friends. Oh, if you are a man, if you have a wife and child, take pity on me and release us. I no not ask you to take us back, only let us go, and I'll return on foot."

"It's no use talking of that, no use in the world, for that is the very thing I can't grant, was the soul-chilling answer. "You may easily imagine that we have not taken all this great trouble for nothing. I may as well tell you that we are acting not for ourselves but by the instruction of others."

"Of others!" repeated Lizzie, turning her blue and troubled eyes upon him with astonishment. "What others? Alas, how have I incurred the resentment of any one that such terrible evil should be inflicted on me."

"Well, ma'am, you know people may do this sort of thing from another feeling than resentment, and I dare say you'll understand the cause of the business ere long. Oblige me by saying no more about it now, for we have a stiff ride before reaching the first halting place."

"Oh, will nothing move you to pity me: will nothing tempt you to release us?" pleaded heart-broken Lizzie, with direst earnestness.

"No—nothing."

"Not even money? My husband will give you whatever sum of money you may ask."

"Not of any use, ma'am—no use talking. Thousands wouldn't bribe me to let you go."

"Then heaven help me," moaned Lizzie, with a look of despair, as with a sinking soul she resigned herself to a fate which seemed as inevitable as it was unknown. Convinced now that it was useless to plead with her captor for deliverance, she sank into silence and physical apathy—her mind, however, remaining active and trying to understand the meaning and object of her singular abduction.

THE EASTERN QUERTION.

FRESH TROUBLES COMING UP.

Russia Beginning to Threaten.

Talk of a Secret Treaty.

March 22.

A St. Petersburg special says:—Rumors are in circulation that Russia has demanded that the Russia fleet quit the Sea of Marmora immediately. The correspondent believes that these reports, although exaggerated, are not entirely unfounded, and that Russia is making, or about to make, representations with regard to the British fleet. Minister Layard's opposition to the embarkation of the Russian troops at Buyukdere has caused great irritation.

In connection with the foregoing intelligence it should be stated that rumors were circulating in the lobbies of Parliament last night that the tone of English official circles is decidely warlike.

The North German Gazette says:—It is evident that Russia regards war with England as inevitable, and knows she was never better able to wage it than now.

A Paris telegram says the questions which France demanded should be excluded from the Congress were those touching the Holy Places, as introducing needless complications; touching Syria, because Syria might have been offered to her as compensation for an English occupation of Egypt, and because she considers the two-fold question of Syria and Egypt might impair the good understanding with England. A great change has occurred in the last few days in the opinion about England's policy. Le Journal des Debats and La Republique Francaise commend England's attitude. This feeling is shared with few exceptions by the men and the journals of all parties.

A Rome correspondent says:—It is understood that the foreign policy of the new Government will be that of strict neutrality on the Eastern Question.

The Agence Russe says England has not yet replied with regard to the Congress. She still insists upon her demand that all the conditions of peace be submitted, notwithstanding that the text of the treaty has been communicated to the Cabinets, and Russia has agreed to the complete freedom of discussion at the Congress. The chances of the Congress meeting have diminished.

A Belgrade special reports that all Austrians in Servia liable to military service has been ordered to return home.

A Vienna telegram states that Roumania has refused to receive its independence at the hands of Russia, or permit the passage of Russian troops through her territory during the occupation of Bulgaria.

A Paris correspondent hears that Russia forced Turkey to acquiese in a secret agreement, according to which Russia would assist Turkey against Greece, an English combination, or against an entry of the British fleet into the Bosphorus or Dardaneiles; largely diminish the indemnity, and guarantee the integrity of the remaining Turkish territory, receiving in return a directing voice over the revenues of the Porte.

"A Drowning Man Will Catch a Straw."

If he catch it, it will do him no good. Thousands of people, who having neglected colds and coughs until they have become dangerous, will rush to almost every nostrum for relief. This is why so many experiments are tried by the sufferers. Go to your druggist, buy a bottle of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and use it with confidence. It will benefit at once and ultimately cure. It is no straw, it is a cable well tried; hold on to it and be saved.

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

MONDAY EVEN'G, MARCH 25, 1878.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

Little Hope of a Congress.

SITUATION VERY SERIOUS.

LONDON, March 25.

From all advices received here it is believed, in Government circles, notwithstanding the efforts of Germany to bring about an understanding between the Powers, there is little hopes of Congress assembling.

England will probably decline to negotiate further. The situation is regarded serious.

British Training Ship Capsized.

Nearly Four Hundred Lives Lost.

LONDON, March 24.—The Admiral commanding at Portsmouth telegraphs that the Eurydice capsized off Dunnose Head, on the south coast of the Isle of Wight, at half-past four o'clock this afternoon, in a sudden squall. One boy and a seaman were saved. Other advices indicate that between 300 and 400 lives were lost. The Admiral, on receiving news of the disaster, immediately despatched a steamer to the scene of the wreck.

The Eurydice was a training ship for ordinary seamen, under command of Capt. Marcus Hare. She was sixth rate, 921 tons burden, and carried four guns.

A survivor of the Eurydice disaster gives the number on board as over 300. Five were picked up by a passing steamer after being in the water an hour, but all have died except two. It is not probable that any others were saved, as a strong ebb tide was running. The Eurydice was under full sail when she was overtaken by a snow-storm accompanied by heavy squalls. The sun shone again brilliantly shortly afterwards, but nothing was then visible except a few boxes floating down the Channel. The survivors say they saw the ship suck down many as she sank.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The Crisis Still Impending.

NOTHING DEFINITE ABOUT THE CONGRESS.

Rumoured Russ-Turkish Alliance

March 24.

It is reported that orders for new torpedo boats have been distributed among various shipbuilders by the British Government and that the Russians are having a hundred torpedo boats built after the English pattern, but not in England.

The Government has purchased from Sir William Armstrong, four one hundred ton guns, and are negotiating for a number of smaller weapons. Large contracts for gun carriages, transport wagons, packsaddles, and army stores have been made.

The landing of a force on the Asia side of the sea of Marmora has unquestionably been considered by the Government. Railway material to be laid on a parallel line with the Bosphorous has been purchased.

The Agence Russe says the statement that Russia requested England to withdraw her fleet from the sea of Marmora is premature.

A St. Petersburg correspondent learns from a good source that no formal representation will probably be made for the present about the presence of the British fleet in the Sea of Marmora, but the Russian troops will not embark now, as was intended. Influential and moderate politicians remark that the fear of England's policy will force Russia to occupy Constantinople and drive the Sultan from Europe. The correspondent adds:—The hope of peace is in the speedy assembling of the Congress. That hope, however, throughout Russia is fast fading. The bellicose excitement is intense, even in St. Petersburg.

The St. Petersburg Golos declares that the treaty of peace falls short of the aspirations of the Russian people.

A Constantinople despatch says:—Count Zichy, Austrian Ambassador has postponed his intended departure on furlough, because of the critical state of affairs. The Czar has not absolutely declined to grant the concessions asked for by Raouf Pasha, but has made an assent dependent upon a condition which is believed to be a Russo-Turkish alliance. It is asserted that Raouf and Osmar Pasha favor such alliance.

An attempt was made the other evening to burglarize the house of Mr. Doyle, on Elizabeth street. The front door of the house was forced open. The noise alarmed the members of the house, and on Mr. Doyle getting up the marauder decamped.

Boxd & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

After all that has been said about "sweeping reductions," the Grand Central is the only first-class hotel in New York that has made a "sweeping reduction." It offers first-class accommodation for $2.50 and $3.00 per day. cod

THE Southern Railway Bill passed on Friday night. A clause has been inserted in it binding the Company to retain the chief offices in St. Thomas, and it is likely the subordinate offices will also be kept there.

ON Friday afternoon the Premier received through the mails an annoymous note in which he was informed that he had only "two days more to live," and that he was to be shot. Mr. Mackenize paid no attention to it, but the letter has been handed to the detectives.

THE Quebec Legislature has been dissolved. The nominations take place on the 24th of April, and the House meets on June 1st.

THE SKATING RINK.—The ice on the rink is now in first class condition for skating and curling. The last match for the Rink Medal is being played this afternoon.

MR. J. P. MACMILLAN has opened a law office in Arthur village, and will visit there on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

CRICKET.—Owing to the fact that the English gentlemen will visit this country in the month of August, cricket will doubtless be played more generaliy this year than usual.

LITERARY ENTERTAINMENT.—The Young People's Aid Society of the Norfolk street Methodist Church will give an entertainment in the church on Thursday evening, 28th inst.

CREDIT VALLEY RAILWAY.—We learn that the President of this road, Mr. Geo. Laidlaw, who is now in England, has succeeded in his negotiations for the purchase of the iron for the whole line.

THE woman termed a Nassagaweya beggar, and who was lately negotiating for a farm in that township, offering to pay $2,000 in cash, has not been in such poor circumstances as to force her to solicit charity for six or seven years. She has been peddling wares through Nassagaweya and adjacent townships and had saved some money, her children provided for themselves and also assisted her. It is said that the same woman had a legacy left her. Therefore, it is not at all strange that she should want to buy a farm and be able to pay for it too.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—The public will D. V. have an opportunity on Friday evening next, the 29th inst., of listening to a popular lecture to be delivered by the Rev. Geo. Milligan, B. A., who has deservedly acquired an enviable reputation as a lecturer both in the United States and Canada. The subject of the lecture, which is to be given here by special request, is "What the sunbeams say." For this opportunity of hearing an intellectual treat, The public are indebted to the Young Men's Association of St. Andrew's Church. The lecture will be delivered in the School room adjoining the Church. Tickets of admission may be had from members of the Association.

WELLINGTON FIELD BATTERY.—In the Militia General Orders in the Gazette of to day it is stated that the officers retiring are permitted to wear the uniform of the corps to which they were attached. Permission is granted to enroll a Half-Battery of Field Artillery at Guelph, to be attached to the Wellington Field Battery for instruction purposes. It is proposed to have the Half-Battery made up entirely of students attending the Ontario School of Agriculture. Major Macdonald has been anxious to increase the strength of the Battery and it has been through his exertions and those of others interested that the Militia Department have made the concession in regard to increasing the strength of the Battery.

ASSAULTING RORY MCCREA.—On Saturday John Thring, John Fox, John Clayton and Ed. Allen were charged at the Police Court with assaulting Rory McCrea, at Marden, on the 5th of January last. It will by remembered that the assault on McCrea resulted in his stabbing a young man named William R. Paterson, who endeavoured to befriend him, and for which he is now undergoing a sentence of four months in gaol. The action was brought against the above four young men by the wife of McCrea. Mr. H. W. Peterson was counsel for the prosecution and Mr. Robert Oliver appeared for the defence. Several witnesses were examined as well as Rory McCrea. The case against John Fox was dismissed at the request of Mr. Peterson. In regard to the other three defendants Mr. Peterson held that there was positive evidence against Clayton, the aggressor as it were, and that Thring and Allen were aiders and abettors. The Magistrate convicted Clayton and fined him $10 and $9.45 costs or one month in gaol. The other two were dismissed, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff.

The Lost not yet Found.

The uncertainty which hangs over the fate of this young lady still continues, and this too notwithstanding the persevering exertions of her friends. Rumors concerning any event that has transpired usually comes to the friends with almost sickening frequency, inasmuch as the heart is for a while buoyed up only to be sunk deeper into grief or despondency.

It is now the fourth day since Miss Rowswell disappeared and yet no reliable trace has been discovered. At one time some person has seen a young lady to the north of Guelph, a party leaves in that direction to make a search, when word is brought that several miles east of the town such a person has been seen, then south, and then west. All expeditions so far have proved fruitless. On Saturday afternoon, towards evening, word was brought to town by a farmer that a young lady answering in every particular to the description given was seen near a swamp at Eden Mills. A party was organized and started off in the rain with lanterns, and that neighborhood was searched. It is true tracks of small rubbers were found and traced into the swamp but nothing further was learned. A part of the squad returned and the balance remained in Eden Mills all night. On Sunday morning parties in that neighborhood, to the number of about one hundred and twenty-five, traversed every portion of the swamps and woods but without success.

Sunday evening word was brought to town that Miss Rowswell had been seen in the vicinity of Hespeler. A party proceeded thither, and after waking up farmers in the neighborhood and making enquiries, it was learned that the young lady referred to was not the one missing.

The same feeling of intense anxiety in regard to the affair still exists. The brother of the young lady has sent to Toronto for a couple of blood-hounds, and it is hoped that if those animals are secured they will be able to follow the trail if once they find it.

In several of the churches, on Sunday, a description of the missing one was read out and the congregations were requested by the ministers to keep a look-out, and, if they deemed necessary, to search their premises. This referred particularly to farmers and others from the country.

While some hold that the body of Miss Rowswell is more likely to be found in the river than any place else, others appear to think that she has wandered off, and has either perished in some out-of-the-way place, or has found refuge among some people who have, as yet, not learned the circumstances of the case.

The latter is extremely improbable.

In another column appears a card of thanks from the brother of Miss Rowswell. He also requests the public to continue in the endeavor to find his sister. The request, no doubt, will be complied with.

PROPERTY CHANGED HANDS.—Mr. John Broatch, of the Township of Elma, has bought a fifty-acre farm on the first concession, Grey, from Peter Scott, for $1,600.—Mr. George Mayberry purchased from C. Schmidt, 1st con., Elma, a sixty-seven acre lot for $1,500, and the south half of lot 66 for $1,800.

LISTOWEL LIBERALS.—A Young Men' Liberal Club has been organized. The following officers have been elected: John Riggs, President; Joseph Congdon, 1st Vice-President; W. J. Hay, 2nd Vice-President; C. Hacking, Corresponding Secretary; A. F. Climie, Financial Secretary; J. W. Devlin, Treasurer.

A NON-SECTARIAN MINISTER.—At a meeting of citizens in Detroit on Wednesday evening, a Finance Committee was elected, Young Men's Hall was leased for every Sunday until the 1st of May, and the services of Rev. Wm. Stephenson, late of the Central Presbyterian Church, were secured for the purpose of giving non-sectarian religious meetings on the morning and evening of the day specified, at the above-named place. The Free Press says that the gentlemen who have this matter in hand are of all religious denominations, and of various nationalities. They have already guaranteed the entire expense of the meetings, and have consulted with Mr. Stephenson in regard to the matter, and as to the necessity of presenting religious matters in such a way as to attract the masses.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled,—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

St. Bartholomew's.

Lecture by Rev. Dr. Kilroy, of Stratford.

On Sunday the morning and evening services, conducted in St. Bartholomew's Church, were largely attended. The above eminent divine preached in the morning, and delivered a lecture under the auspices of the St. Vincent de Paul Society in the evening.

After vespers Rev. Dr. Kilroy, who is a very pleasing and interesting speaker, addressed the congregation on the history of the Roman Catholic Church. He stated that among the many rich and rare manuscripts contained in the British Museum, two of them were specially interesting to any Canadian who might visit London. They were placed there in 1826. One was a small piece of parchment containing an address issued by a few Roman Catholic Bishops in Ireland and England, in which was a statement of the belief or doctrines of the Church. The other was a parchment containing an address signed by ten Peers of the realm and nine Baronets, asking that the people of England, wherever the British flag waved, should accept the doctrines as laid down, instead of that announced by ex-monks, ex-nuns, or drunken or apostate Catholic priests. The persecutions of the Catholic Church were next referred to, and graphically pourtrayed. In 1694 it was a felony in England to print any Catholic work, even if it should be in reply to attacks made on the Church. It was through this that history teems with misrepresentations of the Church. It was therefore not surprising to find that people, well educated in other respects, were totally ignorant of the faith. Many wonder why intelligent Catholics can believe in the doctrines of Romanism. They appear to think that the forms and observances of the Church was a strange religion, and fit only for the ignorant. In answer to those be it known that the Church at the present time was stronger, more united, and experienced a greater power in the world than ever before. The Roman Catholic Church had been persecuted as our Lord and his Apostles had been, and the persecutions of christians would still continue. Reference was made to the early fall of Rome into the hands of barbarians, the almost total extinguishment of the torch of genius, and the partial inundation of the Church, and afterwards the rising of the Church triumphantly under the guide of Leo. It was during this time that inspiration was given to the painters and sculptors, whose names would be handed down to all posterity. Abuses eventually crept into the Church, and the so-called reformation by Luther took place. For forty years from the time of Luther's separation many countries in Europe left the old faith and Romanism was at a low ebb. It was during this so-called reformation that the rabble soldiery deposed Pope Clement, declared Luther Pope over all the world, the palaces in Rome were sacked and the booty removed to St. Peter's, and there it was where all kinds of abominations were carried out, and the virtue of Roman matrons and maidens were trafficked in as mere merchandise. Fifty years after the death of Luther the Roman Church occupied a greater positiod than it had ever done before. Different orders sprang up with the sole object of teaching the nations of the world, and the Jesuits scattered over Asia, Africa and America, years and years before there was colonization by the Europeans. Reference was made to the work of infidels in France, when it was determined to blot out the whole of Christianity in that fair country; the impious worship of a young woman in Rotterdam, and then the complete overthrow of those infidels commenced in 1804, at the crowning of Napoleon by Pius VII. The persecutions in England were also spoken of, the speaker holding that, strange as it might appear, the very means taken to eradicate the Church from the country had the effect of more firmly establishing it. The power of the Church was instanced from the fact that converts had been made of such men as Wilberforce, Newman, Ripon, Manning, Bute, and others. The speaker stated the object of the lecture was to induce both Catholic and Protestant to study the history of the Church and be correctly informed thereon. He held that notwithstanding the teachings or action of a Voltaire, a Napoleon, a Bismarck, or a Czar, the Church was the true Church, God had made it perfect, and it could not but remain so.

At the conclusion of the lecture a liberal collection was taken up, which will be applied to the poor fund of the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

High mass was afterwards celebrated by Rev. Father Hamel.

NORTH PERTH REFORM ASSOCIATION.—A large preliminary meeting of the Reformers of North Perth was held in Stratford on Saturday to reorganize the Riding Reform Association, and make preparations for the coming election. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. W. Scott, Mayor of Listowel, and Mr. Wm. Gordon, of Stratford, was appointed Secretary. The Central Association was reorganized with the following officers:—John Idington, Q. C., Stratford, President; John Crerar, Corresponding Secretary; R. H. Myers, Recording Secretary; Thos. Tobin, Treasurer. Branch Associations have already been formed in a majority of the municipalities, and steps were taken by the meeting to organize at once in those municipalities where they have none formed. It was resolved to hold a general convention for the nomination of candidates for both Houses at Stratford on Friday, the 12th of April, the delegates to be chosen at local meetings in the meantime. The North Perth Reformers are more united and confident of victory in the coming contest than ever before.

The Board of Examiners and the County Council.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—In consequence of an impression, reflective upon the character of the Board of Examiners for the County of Wellington, which has gone forth to the public, arising chiefly out of the action of the County Council relative to the bill of charges presented to the County Treasurer by the said Board at the close of its sitting in August last, the undersigned, members of the said Board, feel called upon in self defence, to avail themselves of the only means now at their disposal of putting themselves right with the public, and they have reason to hope, also with members of the County Council, who may not be fully cognizant of all the circumstances from which such expenditure has arisen.

More especially does the Board feel the necessity of this course at the present juncture, when in view of the possible action of the County Council at its approaching June session, this impression with all its concomitant circumstances, purposely colored and exaggerated, is being assiduously used to damage the reputation and prospects of every member of the Board who may stand in any way opposed to the designs of those so using it. The members of the Board, therefore, respectfully ask the careful and candid attention of your numerous readers to the subjoined tabulated statement of the whole expenditure of the Board since its formation in 1871, exhibiting as it does the total expenditure and rate per candidate of each successive examination for the past seven years. This evidently affords the only just criterion of the fairness or unfairness of the charges of any one examination as compared with any other. The total expenditure, as will be seen below, consists of allowance to members and incidental expenses. The last expenses include the following items, viz., advertising and printing, hire of team to remove tables and tressels from the Agricultural Grounds to the Drill Shed and back, rent for chairs and benches, and when the examinations were held in December, fuel and light, and occasionally room rent:

	No. of Candidates.	Daily allowance to members.	Incidental Expenses.	Total Expenses.	Rate per candidate on total amount
Year 1871	156	$2	$293.74	$693.74	$2.87
Year 1872	183	4	260.38	874.48	4.78
Year 1873	184	4	240.93	950.23	5.16
Year 1874	125	4	131.45	610.95	4.88
Year 1875	189	4	187.84	866.84	4.59
Year 1876	210	4	188.30	950.50	4.52
Year 1877	233	4	218.36	1,019.16	4.37

The inaidental expenses for the past year were largely increased from causes over which the Board had no control.

First—Advertising was exactly doubled in consequence of the Education Department twice countermanding the dates named for the County examinations, so that the Board after issuing advertisements for the examination in the various County papers was forced to change and extend them several weeks longer than would otherwise have been necessary.

Second—An item of expenditure was transferred from September, 1876, to this year's account. This arose from a circular issued by the Minister of Education calling upon County Boards to renew certificates to such candidates as had failed at the previous July examinations, if such candidates held legal certificates up to the time of said examination. On this ground, therefore, by the application of a number of candidates for a renewal of their certificates the Board had, after the regular examination for the year was over, to reconsider the case of some twelve candidates, when a long day was spent in examining their testimonials and the record of their previous work retained in the Secretary's books, and ten additional certificates were granted, valid for one year. The expenditure connected with this work though belonging to 1876, was transferred, as already stated, to the account for 1877, as the regular account for the year was closed in the previous August.

Third.—The County Inspectors, right or wrong, have regarded themselves as possessed of sufficient discretionary power to summon the Board when any change or amendment of the School Law has been passing through the Provincial Legislature. Twice during the past seven years the Board has held a meeting on this account, more especially as the Minister of Education has frequently expressed a desire for the opinions of Teachers' Associations and County Boards, on leading educational questions. For this cause therefore, the Board met in March 1877, to consider the various sections of the Bill then before the Legislature, and a resume of its views was presented by Mr. Massie M.P.P., to the Minister of Education, who attached no small importance to the document. Many of the changes recommended therein are now embodied in the school law. To one of these especially the Board would now call attention, viz: that which refers to school accommodation. Up to 1877, by the provisions of the Act of 1871, it was obligatory on Boards of School Trustees, to provide school accommodation for every pupil of school age in the section. This in rural districts became a very oppressive measure, when it was found that not more than two-thirds of the actual school population were at any one time in attendance. This Board recommended the change which has since been adopted, viz: that accommodation for two-thirds of the school population is sufficient to meet the requirements of rural sections. This amendment alone, will probably save the county of Wellington, within the next ten years, from $15,000 to $20,000. In reference to this change in the School Law the Board desires to say that, while it does not take to itself the sole credit of this or any other improvement in the school law, yet it believes the weight of its opinion, added to that of others, served in a great measure to bring it about.

The Board would now ask the attention of your readers to the causes which led to the furnishing of desks and seating of the large hall in the Guelph Central School building, for examination purposes. Ever since the first meeting of the Examiners in 1871, they have felt the unsatisfactory character of the accommodations and arrangements provided for the examination of candidates, arising principally out of the defective nature of the desks and manner of seating. Many of your readers are probably aware, that up to the last examination, nothing better than the long tables which at each successive examination had to be removed from the Agricultural grounds, to and from the drill shed, could be furnished in the way of desks, while long benches supplemented by such chairs as could be hired from the various temperance and other societies about town, were made, often with great difficulty to supply the seating required. This, besides the unsatisfactory character of the accommodation thus furnished became an exceedingly troublesome and expensive method of meeting the educational requirements of the county. But besides, the Board itself was fast losing its standing in consequence, as it was believed that the method of seating candidates afforded great facilities for prompting and copying, and so strong and prevalent did this impression become, that Inspectors in adjoining counties frequently refused to endorse certificates granted by this Board. It was, therefore, felt that so soon as a hall could be obtained wherein the county property would be in safe keeping, an effort ought to be made to secure such accommodations as obtained in neighboring counties. Accordingly, when it was learned in March, 1877, that the Guelph Board of Education, was willing to place permanently for examination purposes, at the disposal of the County, the large hall over the Central School, it was judged prudent to move in the matter of providing desks for the use of candidates, particularly as it was believed, (though without any official warrant) that chairs would be furnished by the Guelph Board. A meeting was accordingly called to consider the matter, and a committee of two members appointed to wait upon the Warden, who advised the committee that the desks should be procured "as the County was obliged to furnish whatever was necessary in connection with examinations, but was therefore sure the County Council would sanction the action of the Board." This and the fact that the Warden selected the kind of desks to be procured from the two estimates before the Board left the procuring of the desks a settled question. Shortly after the arrangement with regard to the desks had been completed it became known that the Guelph Board was not likely to furnish the chairs for the hall, as there was no special necessity for so doing, for some time at least. The Board, therefore, not wishing to procure chairs on its own responsibility instructed the former committee to wait again upon the Warden with a view to securing the necessary seats for the July examination. This became more imperative as the desks had already been ordered, and, for reasons above stated, the Board did not wish to return to the old method. The committee was instructed by the Warden to have if possible an official meeting with the Guelph Board and press upon it the matter of furnishing the chairs, as the Guelph schools should have the use of both chairs and desks at any time when required. This led to a third meeting of the committee (this time with the Guelph Board) which as will be seen by the following minute of its proceedings led to a fourth.

"The Special Committee appointed to confer with representatives from the Board of Examiners anent the use, and on what terms, of the large room in the Central School Building for the examination of teachers reported, recommending that the use of the room, and space in one of the side rooms to store away the desks, be granted, on condition that the Board of Examiners provide the necessary chairs and desks, and that the Board of Education have the use of the same when required for their purposes in the hall, and on no other.

"The Report of the Committee was on motion duly made and seconded, received and adopted."

Altogether therefore there were two meetings of the full Board, and four meetings of committee in connection with the furnishing of desks and chairs. The two Board meetings and three committee meetings were charged to the County. Under the old system the two meetings of the Board were usually required from the difficulty of making the necessary arrangements with regard to seating, tables &c. The additional expense therefore to the County would only be three committee meetings, while in future the whole trouble and expense of the former condition of things will be avoided, amounting at least to $50, at each examination, which is certainly a fair percentage on three Committee meetings. But apart from all this, even when all these additional items of expenditure are taken into account, viz: the item from 1876, extra expense for advertising, that in connection with chairs and desks, and the expense of a single member of the Board, who was instructed to select and purchase the chairs in Berlin, as it was ascertained that the most satisfactory arrangements could be made with the manufacturers there, all of which are included in the year's account for 1877. Yet the rate per candidate is lower than at any other examination since 1871, when the allowance per day to members was only $2.

It may be, and probably has been, objected that as the papers of second-class candidates were this year examined in Toronto, the work of examination by the Board ought to have been completed in a shorter time than formerly. To this the Board have simply to answer, that by an arrangement of the Education Department, whereby the examination of candidates was extended over two weeks instead of one, as heretofore, as much time was lost as would have completed the examination of second-class papers. This is especially true when it is remembered that a large number of those who sat for second-class certificates, by permission from the Minister of Education, sat again for third, leaving their work, as a matter of course, to be examined by the this Board. The arrangement whereby the sitting of candidates was extended over two weeks, hindered the examination of papers from being commenced till the tenth day, whereas, on all former occasions, this work was begun on the fourth, and sometimes even on the first day on which candidates sat. But still stronger does the case of the Board appear, when it is known that this year not less than nine reams of foolscap were written by candidates, when not more than seven were used on any former occasion. An objection has also been made to extra time charged by the Board. In reference to this the Board wishes to say that ever since 1874, when annual instead of semi-annual examinations were introduced, it has been found necessary, on account of the great increase of candidates, to do a certain amount of night work, in order to make returns within the time specified by the Department. This is a common and even necessary practice with all Boards having the work of a large number of candidates to examine. But if any proof were needed of the honesty with which extra time has been employed, as well as charged, it will be found in the figures of the foregoing table, from which it appears that, though extra time has been charged for the last four years, the ratio of expense per candidate has not increased, but rather diminished. The Board, therefore, wishes to say in this connection, that so long as between six and seven hours are regarded as a day on all kinds of Educational work, it sees no valid objection, if twelve hours be regarded as two days' work, whether they be extended over twenty four or forty-eight hours.

In view therefore of the whole case, the Board has only to state further, that looking back over the labours of 1877, it does not see where a single meeting,either of the full Board or its Committee in connection with the matter of seating, could be avoided. The only meeting that need not have taken place was that over the School Bill. In reference to this, however, the Board has strong grounds to believe that both the educational and financial interests of the county will be largely benefitted by the course taken. In any case, however, the Board has merely to say that if there is anything wrong in the account of 1877, the wrong has prevailed from the very first sitting in 1871, and applies equally to former members of the Board. The injustice of the course taken, especially by the agents of one of these members, now understood to be a candidate for an Inspectorship in the county, is strongly felt by the Board, particularsly, since during his term of office, extra time became necessary and was introduced, and by whom its advantages were, without scruple, enjoyed; if, indeed, there is any advantage in being paid for labour done out of the regular hours in which work is usually performed.

It may not be out of place to observe here that so far as educational purposes are concerned, the county consists of two Inspectorates and but one Board, and as regards the actual work, is equal on an average to more than two of the counties in the Province.

In conclusion, the Board having failed to obtain a hearing before the County Council, would now leave its case to the public, to whose arbitration it has been forced thus to appeal, fully confident that in the end a just award will be given.

Signed, A. Dingwall Fordyce, Chairman, James Kilgour, P. S. J., Robert Forrance, Secretary, Donald McCaig, Examiner, Alexander Petrie, do.

MONDAY EVEN'G, MARCH 25, 1878

The Board of Examiners.

We publish to-day a long letter from the Board of Examiners, in which they defend the charges made in their bill of last year, about which so much was said at the meeting of the County Council in December last. We must say, on a careful perusal of this letter, that the Board has made out a good case, and shown that in proportion to the numbers who went up for examination last July the cost to the County was less than it has been in any year since 1871, when the members of the Board were then paid only $2 per day. They also make up quite a bill of expenses outside the regular work of conducting the examinations—work which we do not well see could be dispensed with, as it was in the interests of education and of those in this county who came up for their examination last year, or who may in future have to come before the examiners.

In view of the statement now submitted, we think the County Council acted rather rashly in condemning the Board without a knowledge of all the facts as now furnished, but we have no doubt that their sense of justice and fair play will lead them, in consequence of the explanations now given, to revise their judgment. There may be some items in the Board's accounts which ought not to have been there. At the same time this would hardly excuse the sweeping censure indulged in, and by judicious action we have no doubt that in future a proper understanding can be come to which will prevent any collision or ill feeling in future.

The Montreal True Witness says:—If there are Irishmen in Canada who have any sympathy with O'Donovan Rossa's skirmishing idea, then let them and them alone be responsible for their actions. If there are any we believe they must be very few. For our own part, we think the less we are visited by extremists such as O'Donovan Rossa the better for us all. They are not necessary for our welfare. We can get on much better without them than with them. They do far more harm than good. At the same time, if there are Societies who choose to bring them on, no one can deny their right to do so, but to them alone will belong the responsibility.

In regard to the Duke of Richmond's Cattle Diseases Bill now before the British Parliament, the Minister of Agriculture stated in the Senate on Friday that the Government had done everything in their power to get the Bill changed to allow the importation of live cattle from Canada. As the provisions of the Bill as it now stands would amount almost to the prohibition of importation of Canadian cattle into England, the Government telegraphed to the Colonial Office to try and secure an exemption of Canadian cattle from the operation of the Bill in the absence of cattle disease in Canada. On the 15th of this month a telegram was received from the Colonial Office that the Canadian objections to the Bill had been urged in Committee, and they would no doubt be favorably considered.

Speaking of the way Sir John handled the public funds, an Ottawa correspondent says: "If everything could be proved that should be proved it is possible it would be found to be a fact that during the elections in Toronto in 1872 Sir John telegraphed to Ottawa for a sum of money to be advanced out of the Contingency Department; that he got it and that all the evidence of the transaction was destroyed.

Mr. Brown's speech in the Senate, in reply to Mr. Macpherson's attack on the finances, is said to be the best delivered in that place for a long time, and reminded his hearers of some of Mr. Brown's vigorous speeches of old time.

The National Policy Ignored.

In the debate on the resolution of the Government to abolish the excise duty on malt imported into Canada, the Opposition clearly showed their boasted National Policy meant nothing or anything, just as one liked to take it. The motion was made at the instance of brewers and others interested, who gave as their reason for the abolition of the duty on malt coming into Canada, that it was no source of revenue, inasmuch as no American malt was exported to Canada. It was also shown that the imposition of the small duty on American malt, for purely departmental purposes, was made the ground of complaint by American brewers, and taking advantage of this they appealed to their Government to increase the duty on Canadian malt imported to the States. The Dominion Government in obedience to the unanimous wish of the brewers and malsters of Canada, brought up a resolution to do away with the duty, and yet Sir John and his followers opposed the motion on the ground that it was an adoption of their views on protection and laid down in Sir John's many-sided tariff policy. When it was pointed out that the maltsters feared that the retention of the duty would be construed by the Americans as a hostile and retaliatory Act, and would result in the imposition of a prohibitory duty against malt going into the United States, showing conclusively how detrimental to Canadian interests the adoption of a retaliatory tariff would be, the laugh was turned so strongly against the Opposition that Sir John himself, with all his skill at evasion, was unable to get out of the dilemma. He could not get over the fact that the effect of putting on a duty had exactly the reverse effect to that which had been predicted by the Opposition leader and his friends, and so the much vaunted reciprocal policy was thrown to the winds. Sir John and his friends declare they are delighted to find the maltsters are going to be protected. But they have omitted to declare that there must be no duty on barley, and of course none on other products that they have been all the while declaring must be protected by reciprocal duties. And when directly challenged to say whether a reciprocal tariff meant putting on duties or taking them off, he declined to answer and shirked the point presented to him. It is quite clear, therefore, that the great "national policy," as represented by a retaliatory tariff, a reciprocal tariff, and all other fine clap-trap phrases of the late pic-nics, has collapsed.

It is now regarded as certain that Parliament will prorogued by Easter at the latest.

The Canada Temperance Act, 1878.

(BY OBSERVER.)

To the Editor of the Mercury.

Sir,—With your permission I propose to call attention to the Temperance Measure now before the Dominion Parliament. I purpose to notice some of the merits and also some of the demerits of the Bill as it now stands, and to offer some remarks on the discussions upon it in the Senate and the Commons as they proceed. I hope thus to awaken public interest in this burning question, and to cause that expression of public opinion which will make itself felt while the Act is before Parliament. It is of the utmost importance that the Government should know what kind of legislation the people want, and that the people also should understand the nature of the measure which the Government proposes to pass.

The temperance men of Canada have certainly won a great victory in getting the Dominion Government to deal with this question, and to introduce an Act relating thereto. At last it is admitted that the temperance question is a great one, and that it has a moral and economic importance that warrants serious consideration and careful legislation on the part of our supreme legislative body. Further, the introduction of a restrictive measure like that before us is an admission by our highest national authority that an unrestricted liquor traffic is a national evil. Further, the safeguards against bribery, intimidation, and undue influence, with which the new measure guards its submittal to the people, amount to a virtual declaration that passion and interest have failed to exercised undue power, and that the heart and brain of the country shall henceforth, as far as possible, have full sway. Further, the clauses of the Act, which authorize the seizure and destruction of liquors, shows that the Government assume that their destruction is in itself warrantable, a position which it takes with regard to no other property not in itself harmful or worthless. Such admissions and assumptions as these are indications of the vantage ground temperance principles have won.

But I turn to consider particularly the merits of the proposed measure. The first of these in order are the general provisions made in the 5th to the 93rd sections of the Act, for bringing it into force. These provide, first that the Act shall be submitted to vote only upon petition of twenty-five per cent of the bona fide voters of the county or city wherein it is proposed that it shall pass, the signatures of these voters to be only attested as genuine. This provision of the Act will commend itself at once to all, as it prevents hasty, unwise, expensive and injurious action in this respect. Second, that only electors qualified to vote for members of the Dominion Parliament shall be entitled to vote for or against the Act. This provision also, will win commendation, as it places the control of this measure in the hands of those who decide the vital and highest interest of the country. The measure is given thereby the dignity of a national question. Third, That the general machinery of the law shall correspond to that of the Dominion election law; the voting is to be by ballot, is to occupy but one day, and is guarded by wise precautions and heavy penalties from all undue influences of intimidation and corruption. The clauses that provide for the secrecy of the vote, for the preservation of the peace, for prevention of bribery in any, even in the most indirect, form, are especially clear and exhaustive. Fourth, That the counting of votes before any Judge of the Superior or County Courts shall be entered upon and conducted in a manner that gives a reasonable guarantee against fraud and undue delays.

Section 94 of the Act provides first that after the Act is one passed or rejected it shall not be repealed or re-submitted for three years, except on petition signed by one half of the electors; and second, that it cannot be repealed or re-submitted after the expiry of the three years, except on petition of one-fourth of the electors. Both of these provisions, as they ensure the public against pernicious agitation, are wise and wholesome.

Sections 95 to 107 contain the real measure and claim particular attention. Section 95, sub-section 1, provides that in places where the Act is adopted, liquors shall not be sold except for medicinal, or sacramental purposes, or use in the arts, and subsection 2 applies the Act to steamboats and other vessels. Section 95, subsection 3, provides, that druggists, and such other persons as may be especially licensed thereto, may sell in quantities not less that one pint for medical, medicinal and sacramental purposes on certificates signed respectively by a medical man, two Justices of the peace, or by a clergyman. Here a decided objection may be made. It seems to say the least unnecessary that persons besides druggists should be licensed to sell for these purposes. Enough is sufficient; too many appointed will give rise to abuses.

But sub-section 4 and 5 of section 95 are the most objectionable, and, if passed in their present form, will nearly destroy the force of the act as a prohibitory measure. Section 4 enacts that any brewer or distiller may sell in quantities not less than ten gallons to druggists or others licensed under section 3, or to those whom he has good reason to believe will carry it beyond the limits of the town or county where the Act is in force. Surely it is not too much to ask that the distiller or brewer be required to become responsible for the carrying of the liquors beyond the limits and that the Act be not rendered nugatory by this loose provision. Sub-section 5 transcends 4 in its unwise and injurious character. Here the whole anti-prohibitory, anti-restrictive party may drive through with perfect ease. This section provides that any merchant or trader may expose and keep liquors for sale under the same restrictions as those already mentioned in the case of distillers and brewers. This is restrictive legislation with a vengeance! Present liquor dealers can here exclaim, our traffic is to be destroyed by placing it in the hands of everybody, and temperance advocates, who contended with the five gallon clause of the of Act 1864, may well object to the ten gallon clause of the present measure.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

HE DISAPPEARANCE OF LIZZIE AND HER CHILD EXPLAINED.

Who could have employed these men to carry her off, whither were they conveying her, and for what purpose? These were the three questions she tried to answer, but tried in vain. Who could have any purpose to serve by the outrage—no one, so far as her racked brain could conjecture. So obscurely had she lived in the glen that her very existence could be known to very few, and these few were her sworn friends. Kenneth Fraser and Daddy Duff were the only two persons who knew of their marriage. The faithfulness of the former she could not for a moment doubt, and from what she had seen of the old mendicant he also seemed incorruptible. She knew that Harold placed implicit confidence in him, and her own instincts refused to entertain the belief that he was deceived. The whole affair seemed a dark and impenetrable mystery. One thing only was real and certain, she and Alfred were in the hands of two strange men, and were being rapidly conveyed by them into the deep solitudes of the mountains. Already they were far from Glenroy and its familiar objects. The hills she knew so well were lost to view, and other hills on which her eye had never rested were being quickly passed, for the horses were still kept going at great speed, and the region they were traversing was one of uninhabited loneliness. Often she turned her troubled eyes from side to side in search of human dwellings, or in the hope of seeing some one to whom she could appeal for succour, but for miles and miles the mountain solitude was unbroken, and the scene grew wilder and wilder as they advanced.

The rapid journey was kept up till the declining sun gave token that the afternoon was advanced, and as his broad crest crept slowly down upon the summit of the loftier hills, they entered on steeper paths, where the pace had to be greatly slackened, and in turn modified to a walking motion, as they had to pick their way among boulders and falling rocks.

Here the slowness of their movement was favourable to reflection, and Lizzie again tried to fathom the object of her capture by studying the outward appearance of the two men, whoes character might thereby be manifested.

The one beside whom she sat was the younger of the two, and though he had a hard, firm countenance, it was neither ill-favoured nor ferocious in aspect. In age he seemed to be under fifty, his frame not large, but strong and active. From his style of dress and language, Lizzie judged his station in life not to be of the basest; his manner, though blunt and decided, was not rude; and the treatment she had as yet received from was as respectful as was compatable with the violent seizure to which she had been subjected.

His companion in the strange enterprise was several years older, and evidently a man of inferior station, though not of a very hardened or unkind nature, as was shown by the careful way in which he held the sleeping child, and the pains he had previously taken to quiet Alfred's fears and amuse him. His dress was coarser than that of the other, though of the same tartan, with the check and pattern, of which Lizzie was unacquainted. These were not similar to anything worn in Aberdeenshire district, and this was the only portion of the north with which she was familiar—she having been reared in the south, and brought from thence not many years before. This was an unfortunate circumstance in the present emergency, for had she been a thorough-bred daughter of the mountains she would have known by their dress the clan to which they belonged, and thereby guessed to what part of the country she was being taken. She had no help, however, from this source, nor did the idea she was able to form from the appearance of her two captors serve to throw any light on their object or purpose. So with a sigh she again ceased her fruitless conjectures, hoping that ere long something would occur to allay her anxiety, or at least yield her a little information. The impulse of her agitated heart prompted her to obtain this latter by earnest questions; but she had been told already very decidedly that none of her questions would be answered at present. There was therefore nothing for it but to wait with such patience as her anxiety could command for enlightenment.

The two horses being now close together, Lizzie expected the men would hold some conversation, and she was eagerly on the alert to listen, in the hope that something might be gathered from their words. But not a syllable did they exchange. Her presence evidently put them under restraint; meaning looks occasionally passed between them; and more than once Lizzie thought she perceived a secret signal, implying she knew not what. The sun had sank out of sight, and the evening shadows drew rapidly in upon them. They were now far, very far, from Glenroy, as the poor girl remembered with a heavy heart, and any faint hope of rescue had died away in her bosom. The gathering gloom of approaching night increased her sense of desolation and danger and the feeling of despair which possessed her. She was very wearied, and exhausted by the long journey, and though greatly agitated to experience the sensation of hunger and the want of food since the morning, was now making her so faint and giddy.

Little Alfred still slept—the strong air of the mountains and the rocking motion of the horse, no doubt, tending to produce the deep protracted slumber. As the chill breath of evening began to meet them in the pass, Lizzie observed, not without satisfaction, that the Highlander enveloped the still form in the ends of his plaid—a proceeding which did not evince any cruel intention as the final issue of their abduction.

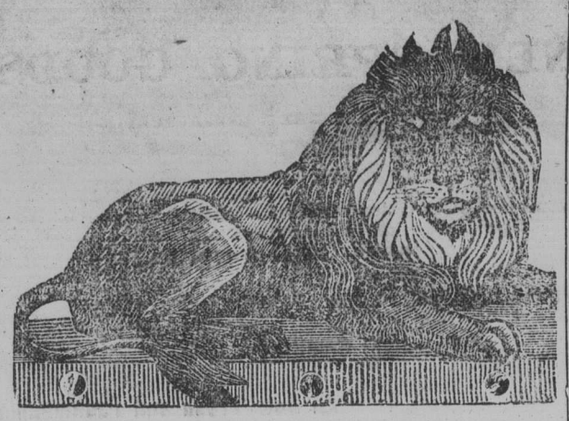
The action had been noticed by his companion, for immediately the deep voice sounded in her ears as he asked—

"Do you feel cold, ma'am?"

"Not much so in body, but cold and chill at heart," she answered, with a weary sigh.

"Oh, tired enough, I daresay; not accustomed to ride so far, or fast, or so long. But cheer up, ma'am. We are very near a place where we shall stay for the night, and where food and rest will be supplied you. What distance do you think it is, Ranald?"

"She's no just fery sure, but maybe no apune half a short mile," was the answer of the other, whose name was thus made known to the prisoner.



"You hear that, ma'am. In about a quarter of an hour the day's journey will be over."

The information which the speaker evidently thought must be welcome was received by Lizzie with listless indifference. What to her was a few hours' food and rest when these were to be followed by the resumption of her enforced journey and her removal further into the mountains beyond the reach and knowledge of Harold and her uncle. She only emitted another weary, hopeless sigh, and turned her troubled eyes on the now weird gloomy scene which now surrounded them.

They were ascending a deep gorge, the precipitous sides of which frowned heavily on either hand. On the crest some tall leafless bushes could be seen swaying weirdly in the moaning night-wind, while in front, and at a considerable elevation, an opening like a cleft in the hill, appeared against the clear sky, in whose fading blue shone the only solitary object of comfort in the form of a large beaming star, on which Lizzie's eye rested with pitiful yearning.

The toilsome ascent was very slowly accomplished; but at length the summit of the gorge was reached, and they emerged on an almost level plateau, enclosed on all sides by hills.

They had scarcely entered on this open space when a loud barking was heard, and a shepherd's dog came bounding towards them with demonstrations of furious hostility. These, however, were at once changed into gestures of glad recognition when Ronald addressed some words to it Gœlic, and forthwith the animal leaped boisterously up and gave such a tug at Ranald's plaid as awoke Alfred from his long sleep. He began to cry, as most children do in such circumstances, and the plaintive wail instantly roused his mother's solicitude.

"My darling, my pet! mamma is here. Oh, give him to me!" she very pleadingly cried, bending forward with outstreached arms.

"Fery weel, she'll just do that," returned Ranald, reining his horse nearer, and passing the child to the loving arms held forth so eagerly.

The little fellow, whose crying was at once stilled, was pressed closely to his mother's bosom, and his rosy warm face covered with vehement kisses.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, Mach 22.

On motion of Mr. Cartwright, the House resolved to go into Committee on Tuesday to consider a resolution for the appointment of an officer to be called the Auditor-General of Canada.

Mr. Laurier moved the House into Committee on the resolution to repeal the duty on malt, explaining that the importation of foreign malt was purely nominal, and that those engaged in the malting trade in this country had petitioned for its removal as an impediment to their trade.

Mr. Masson accused the Government of inconsistency, inasmuch as, having increased the duty last year, they now proposed to remove it.

Mr. Cartwright showed that the duty had not been imposed with a view to the collection of revenue, but simply for the convenience of the excise, and remarked that the maltsters of the country had urged its removal on the ground that American malsters were using it as a lever to increase the duty on Canadian malt. Mr. Mitchell opposed the resolution as one which was not in the public interest.

Mr. Holton pointed out that the proposal was eminently in the interest of the barley-growers and malsters, and was rendered necessary by a disposition across the lines to impose additional duties on the importation of Canadian malt.

Dr. Tupper contended that this measure was eminently protective, and added strength to his theory that industries might be protected by lowering as well as raising the duties. Dr. Tupper said that the Government had discovered they could protect our industries in some cases by lowering the duty. He went on to declare that the removal of the duty was a step in the direction of protection, and that it showed that notwithstanding the statements of the Ministry our legislation here did affect the arrangement of the tariff at Washington.

Mr. Young in an able speech showed that so wonderful was the so-called policy of the Opposition arranged that whether the duty was increased or the reverse to their minds the result bore the label of protection. He showed that the action of the American brewers in this case was a fair example of what might be expected by a general retaliatory policy.

Mr. Dymond rallied the Opposition members upon their conversion to the views so long advocated on his side, and went on to show by individual instances the effect of a recriminatory tariff in shutting us out of a market for our agricultural products.

Sir. John Macdonald contended that the present tariff was inartistic and unscientific, and stated that the policy of the Opposition was to re-arrange the tariff so that the volume of taxation would not be increased.

Mr. Higginbotham, in reply to the hon. member for South Ontario, quoted some figures to show that there had been exports of malt to the United States since 1871, and that last year they had been larger than ever before. He had never seen so much fear exhibited by the Opposition before as they had shown to-day—(hear, hear,)—and he was glad the country had now an opportunity of seeing what the "national policy" was, when the Opposition were compelled to admit its utter failure. (Cheers.)

Mr. Mackenzie, in a brief but vigorous speech, pointed out that Canada was neither a free trade nor a protection country. Personally he was a free trader, but he was convinced that the circumstances of the country were such that it was impossible to give practical effect to free trade doctrines. The Administration had on all occasions sought to promote the best interests of the Dominion, and they had adopted a revenue tariff which afforded a large measure of protection to every one engaged in manufacturing pursuits. He showed that there was neither consistency nor uniformity in the views of hon. gentlemen opposite, who chopped and changed according to the movements of the political weather cock.

After some further discussion the House went into Committee on the resolution.

"A Drowning Man Will Catch a Straw."

If he catch it, it will do him no good. Thousands of people, who having neglected colds and coughs until they have become dangerous, will rush to almost every nostrum for relief. Tl is is why so many experiments are tried by the sufferers. Go to your druggist, buy a bottle of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and use it with confidence. It will benefit at once and ultimately cure. It is no straw, it is a cable well tried; hold on to it and be saved.

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE, for March (LEONARD SCOTT PUBLISHING CO., 41 Barclay-st, New York), which has just reached us, opens with the ninth part of "Mine is Thine," in which we are treated to a very amusing account of a deer drive. The second paper is a historical and practical description of the Canadian fisheries, explaining the object and action of the Halifax Commission. Under the heading "Few Books," we find notices of the biographies of Lessing and Charles Bianconi; of two novels; and of a work called "North Italian Folks." The "Influence of Women" forms the text for the paper on "French Home Life." "Their action can be as tender, as moderating, as that of any woman on earth; but it can also assume, with amazing ease, all the forms of incitation and arousing." "Only Jean" is a quiet Scotch story. Then there is a long retrospective paper on the Storm in the East, and a shorter one on the relative positions of England and Russia. The periodicals printed by the above Company are as follows:—The London Quarterly, Edinburgh, Westminster, and British Quarterly Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine. Price $4 a year for any one, or only $15 for all, and the postage is prepaid by the publishers.

THE attention of assessors is called to the fact that under the law, as amended, farmers' sons must be placed upon the rolls, (according to the provisions of the Farmers' Sons Act) without any request being made by the young men. Assessors are liable to prosecution who neglect to comply with the Act in this particular, and should avoid suits by entering the names in every instance in which the property is of sufficient value.

BASE BALL.—Hamiltonians are moving in the matter of procuring a team to represent the "ambitious city" on the diamond field this season. A correspondent writes to suggest that the best thing to be done would be to get three professional players—a first-class pitcher and catcher, and a baseman capable of playing any position in the diamond. There is good local material that can fill the other positions. Nine brothers by the name of Madden, of Marlboro', Mass., have formed themselves into a base ball nine, and propose starting on a professional tour about the middle of April. Their names are John, James, Thomas, Joseph, Frank, Bernard, William, Patrick and Andy.

ANIMAL SYMPATHY.—One of those balmy spring-like days last week a mother came down town with her year old infant to do her shopping. After making several purchases, and going over nearly half the town with her perambulator, the warm fresh air had such an effect on the little one that and he leaned over the strap of the carriage head downwards, and was, in a few moments, a sound slumberer. The mother was in a boot and shoe store at the time, on the road home, having left her carriage at the door, when a strange dog came and pushed his nose under the little one's face and licked the child awake, for passers-by did not seem to take any notice of the uncomfortable position of the infant. The whole affair took place in a few moments, and amongst others was noticed by the pedestrian who sent in this item.

"Fainter each moment grew his refrain,

SKATING.—Judging from the mildness of the weather for some time past, it was not thought likely that there would be any more skating this season. The frost of Sunday and Monday has, however, made fair ice on the rink, and a large number of persons took the opportunity afforded last evening of enjoying one more night before the final breaking-up. There were certain fare spots that caused some lofty tumbling among many skaters. A couple of young fellows thought they would enliven matters by tripping others up with a rope. This was soon stopped, however, and they were forced to leave the rink.

CURLIANA.

Mr. A. Congalton Wins the Rink Medal for 1878.

The rightful person to hold the Guelph rink medal during the present year has been decided, and the game played yesterday was what decided it. There had been doubts in the minds of some whether or not the weather could turn kind enough—or cold enough—to allow the concluding game to be played between the rinks of Messrs. A. Congalton and Thos. McCrae. The frost of Sunday settled the question, and the rinks were got together on Monday afternoon.

The ice was in fair condition and the playing at times was remarkably good. Of course more interest centred in this game than in the others played, it being the last of the series, and in consequence a number of spectators were present. Congalton's rink lead from the first, and at the conclusion of the game the score stood in his favor just three to one. The score is subjoined:—

John Oliver	Wm. Roper
Wm. Bruce	Thos. McCrae—skip
A. Robertson, jr.	G. H. McIntyre
A. Congalton—skip	14. John Spalding — 8

The rink medal is competed for by ten rinks formed at the opening of the season. One rink plays against another until there are five who have won games. These in turn play off in the same manner until the winner of the medal is decided. A score of the games with the order in which they were played, and the skips is appended:—

Alex. Bruce defeated Thos. Dobbie by 20 to 18.

Alex. Congalton defeated C. Davidson by 24 to 13.

Thos. McCrae defeated A. Robertson, jr., by 20 to 13.

Robt. Mitchell defeated J. T. Nichols by 15 to 9.

Jas. Epslie defeated John Mackenzie by 17 to 16.

This concluded the first series of games, and the winners then played in the following order:—

Alex. Bruce defeated Robt. Mitchell by 23 to 12.

Alex. Congalton defeated James Emslie by 21 to 20.

Thos. McCrae defeated Alex. Bruce by 17 to 8.

Alex. Congalton defeated Thos. McCrae by 21 to 8.

G. C. L. & D. S. meet to-morrow evening.

THROUGH TICKETS can be procured at F. Gauhan's office—agency of the Great Western Railway Company—for Winnipeg for $22.90.

ABOUT twenty-five will start from this neighborhood, on Tuesday next, for Manitoba. Messrs. John Hewer, Geo. Balkwill, A. Prest, Jas. Patton, E. Winstanley, Wm. Johnston, S. Saunders, and several others from Guelph, will form a part of the number.

ALLEGED TREASON.—Yesterday a young man named William Ingram, a shoemaker by trade, and lately arrived from Bowmanville, was arrested on a charge of using obscene and blasphemous language in referring to the Queen and the Prince of Wales. The language which, it is alleged, he made use of was most vile. The whole affair transpired in the workshop of Mr. Noble's shoe store. Constable McCann informed Chief Kelly of the circumstances, and he was then instructed to make the arrest. Ingram was found near the Great Western station. When he was being brought to town he had a tussle with the constable, but a baton reminder made him quite willing to walk to the police station. He appeared before the Police Magistrate this (Tuesday) afternoon. The prisoner expressed sorrow for what he had said, and the Magistrate dismissed the case inasmuch as the expression had not been made publicly but in a private shop.

THE MISSING YOUNG LADY, Miss Julia Rowsell, has not yet been found. Rumors are still cropping up, several times a day, that she has been seen this place and that place, but on investigation, nothing in regard to her is found. It was with considerable pleasure many learned that she was taken in a hotel, about half-way between here and Rockwood, and cared for, and that the people of the hotel was waiting for her friends to take her away. This was told by several as a positive fact. Some of those in search at once drove down to the place indicated, but it was only to meet with another disappointment. The young lady's brother could not obtain bloodhounds in Toronto for the purpose of seeing if they could successfully follow the trail, and it is said that Collingwood is the only place where those animals can be procured. Mr. Rowsell has not decided to send for them. It is questionable if they would be of any use if they were procured at this late date. Search is being made in the races at Allan's dam and along the river towards the Eramosa branch. The belief is now becoming pretty general that she cannot be alive, and if she were so long a time since her disappearance would not have elapsed without finding some trace of her. The search is still being prosecuted by townspeople, as well as by farmers within a few miles of town, who have heard of the disappearance of the young lady. $25 reward is offered for her recovery.

Board of Education.

Estimates for 1878—Drill Instruction.

A meeting was held on Monday evening. Present—Judge Macdonald in the chair, Messrs. McKenzie, Bell, Robertson, Leonard, Knowles, Newton, Murton, Innes.

An account was presented from Mrs. Soden, for use of cabs on the 23rd of April—Guelph's jubilee—amounting to $3. Referred to Finance Committee.

From R. Oliver, for Wm. Graham, in reference to an account for damages in the matter of Cambridge street. Referred to Building Committee.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Newton, chairman, reported on the estimates for the year which showed that $11,563 would be required for the Public Schools for 1878. and $2,152.58 for the High School.

An account of $3.36 was presented from C. Shewan for carpenter work done, and ordered to be paid.

SITES AND BUILDINGS COMMITTEE

Mr. Murton, chairman reported as follows:

Having made some alterations in the former plans for the East Ward School, called for tenders for the same, and recommend the Board to accept the following: A. Ledgerwood, mason work, $643; Mahoney & Sheppard, carpenter work, $698; W. Sunley, tinsmithing $98; Humphries & Reynolds, painting and glazing $55; W. Day, plastering, $110.75. Total, $1,604.75.

It was recommended that J. Hall, architect be engaged to superintend the erection for two and a half per cent on the cost.

It was also recommended that W. Day's tender for plastering room in Central School at a cost of $47.30; and the strapping and putting on wainscot at a cost of about $31, be accepted.

On motion of Mr. Murton seconded by Mr. Leonard the report was adopted.

SCHOOL MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE.

Mr. Peterson, chairman, reported as follows:—

The committee submit that they have considered the report of the Inspector made at a recent meeting of the Board as to the crowded state of the schools, and the absolute necessity of having additional teachers, and are of opinion that it is indispensably necessary to have this condition of things remedied. They accordingly recommend that a male teacher at a salary of $450 per annum be engaged, and a female teacher at a salary of $290 per annum; and that the Secretary advertise for applications to be sent in on or before 8th April.—male teacher to have a second class certificate.

On motion of Mr. Wilkie, seconded by Mr. Leonard, the report was adopted.

On motion the Board went into Committee of the Whole on the estimates for 1878, Mr. Newton in the chair.

On motion the High School estimates were adopted.

Mr. Innes desired to have one item changed in the Public School estimates. A report just presented recommended the appointment of an extra male and a female teacher, and it virtually became a race between the action of the Board and the increase of pupils. The fact that the Inspector's duties had been largely increased was almost entirely overlooked. The salary paid was not in anymeans commensuate with the work performed, and he would be prepared to move that the estimates be amended by increasing the salary of the Inspector.

Mr. Bell and others expressed themselves favorable to such a resolution.

It was then moved by Judge Macdonald seconded by Mr. Innes, that the Secretary and Inspector's salary be increased $200. This would make it $500 per annum.

The motion was carried unanimously.

The report, as amended, was adopted in Committee, and on the Board resuming, it was finally adopted.

SCHOOL DRILL.

Major Macdonald was heard in regard to proposed drill for school children, and for forming a Drill Association for High and Public School pupils.

He reported having visited the schools so as to intelligibly speak on the matter. He did not consider it expedient to drill children for more than half or three-quarters of an hour at any one time. A class might be drilled every day for such a time. The estimated number of pupils that would be capable of drilling would be about one hundred and seventh. Those might be divided into three classes, and they could be drilled on alternate days. This would require a drill instructor being present every day. The speaker held that the Government took cognizance of any such Drill Association, and provided arms and accoutrements for any such Association for pupils over twelve years of age. It was also provided that $50 per annum might be given for the support of such an institution. He thought a regular instructor could be obtained for about $100. It was mentioned that there was a likelihood of the Battery, of which the speaker was commander, to have the Battery increased one-half. In that case he would have an instructor from the Royal Artillery, who would be a very efficient person. That person could be employed in instructing the school pupils to great advantage to them.

Mr. Innes thought the School Management Committee should be instructed to keep themselves in communication with Major Macdonald in the matter and have so arranged as to be properly dealt with.

Mr. Wilkie considered it much better to discuss the matter at once, in order that any questions that might be asked could be answered by Major Macdonald, and then the School Management Committee be instructed to deal definitely in the matter.

Moved by Mr. Innes, seconded by Mr. Bell, that the School Management Committee be instructed to keep the matter of the Drill Association for the pupils in the Public and High Schools, under their consideration, and that they put themselves in communication with Major Macdonald, with a view of having the same carried into effect as soon as practicable. Carried.

Mr. Murton brought up the question of charging fees for pupils attending the High School. He thought that Guelph should charge fees for pupils not residents of the county.

Mr. Leonard gave notice that he would at next meeting bring forward a motion to take into consideration the charging of fees for pupils attending the High School.

The Board then adjourned.

Loss of the "Eurydice."

The supposed capsizing of the British naval training ship Eurydice, off the Isle of Wight, was due to the suddenness with which the squall overtook the ship, and the fact that its entire force fell on the full spread of her canvass. As the Eurydice was close in shore a dangerous gust would give probably no warning. The disposition of her guns, stores, or other dead weight, may have given leverage to the force of the wind. The Eurydice had been on a practice cruise to the West Indies, whence she had been for some days expected at Portsmouth. She had a smart crew of from two to over three hundred. Only five persons, including Lieut. Tabor, were rescused, after they had been an hour in the water. Three of these are dead.

Later intelligence states that it is now believed that the Eurydice had about 320 officers and seamen, of which 270 were young men in training, besides about 20 officers and men taken on board at Bermuda as invalids. The vessel lies with her masts visible. It is stated that there is no doubt the Eurydice was carrying too much sail. It is feared that, with the men embarked at Bermuda, and probably from Admiral Keyes' squadron, the Eurydice had nearly 400 men on board.

THE SIOUX SENSATION.—Major Walsh of the North-west Mounted Police was in Ottawa on Monday. He says he does not credit any of the rumours relative to the alleged warlike intentions of Sitting Bull and the tribes said to have joined him. Major Walsh has perfect faith that Sitting Bull will adhere to the pacific promises he has made. He further says that Sitting Bull is a man of his word, and when that chief had given his pledge that he would remain peaceable, he would believe him perhaps a little more readily than he would credit the statements of many white men. Major Walsh will return to his post in May next.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF LAMENESS of twenty-five years' standing.—The second Vice-President of the Excelsior Savings' Bank, Twenty-third Street and Sixth Ave., Booth's Theatre, E. P. Lawrence, was lame for twenty-five years. Contraction of the muscles of the left leg—had no faith at first in the Liniment—was induced to try it from his knowledge of Dr. Giles, who is a scientific and able chemist, and has never yet made a poor article. Seeing its good effects on others—tried it, and to Mr. L's surprise and satisfaction, the stiffness left the cords of the leg, and it became as elastic as the other.

THE PEMBINA BRANCH.—The St. Paul Pioneer Press, commenting editorially upon Hon. Mr. Mackenzie's reply to Mr. Shultz's question, now admits that perhaps a lease of the Pembina Branch line has not actually been signed, but asserts that the parties who are committed to the construction of the American and Manitoba sections of a continuous line of railway have not done so without agreeing beforehand on the terms on which the owners of sixth-sevenths of a continuous line shall run their cars over the other seventh.

MOUNT FOREST.—The Methodist Episcopal tea meeting lately held realized $55. ——Rev. S. Cunningham, pastor of the Baptist Church has been presented with a friendly address and a well filled purse, by adherents of his Church in North Arthur. ——The cattle fair held in this place on Wednesday last was quite successful. A good many cattle were on the ground, with a liberal attendence of buyers and a large representation of the general public. Fat cattle brought from $3 to $3.50 per cwt.

A DREAM AND ITS FULFILMENT.—The family of McConnell, of St. Thomas, have suffered in a heartrending manner during the last fortnight. Jesse McConnell, a brakesman, was killed ten days ago at Harwich, by falling between the cars, and was brought home terribly mangled. The mother took it to heart, and it was feared would lose her reason. After partially recovering, she dreamed she saw two coffins, in which were her two sons, and fearing for the safety of the other, also a brakesman, she telegraphed to him, asking if he was all right, and wishing him home. He replied that he was all right, and would be home in the morning, and intended to quit railroading. On his return trip he was crushed to death while coupling cars at Brigden. The two daughters are almost helpless, and it is not expected the mother will recover her reason.

SAUGEEN PRESBYTERY.—The Presbytery of Saugeen met at Durham last week. The case of John Martin, sr., and his delivering the patent of Knox Church property in Mount Forest to the Presbytery. A motion was made to the effect that the Presbytery order Mr. Martin to place said patent in the hands of the Clerk, to be kept by him, subject to the order of the Presbytery., said patent not to be delivered to any person until after three months' notice to all parties concerned. An amendment was moved that the case of Mr. Martin having been carefully considered, in which he declines to deliver up the deed of Knox Church to Presbytery, or to the Trustees of said church, the Presbytery seeing that the case is one purely of civil rights, with which the Presbytery is not competent to deal, as being beyond its province, take no further steps in the matter. On a vote being taken ten declared themselves for the motion and eleven for the amendment. By a vote of the same kind the amendment was put as a motion and carried, eleven to ten. Rev. Mr. MacMillan, Mount Forest, then, in his own name and in the name of those who might join him, protested and appealed to the Synod of Toronto and Kingston at its next meeting, asked for extracts of the minutes, and promised to give in his reasons of protest and appeal within ten days after receiving the extract minute of Presbytery. Considerable other business was transacted before the session was concluded.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Critical Condition of Affairs

Anti-Russian Feeling at Vienna.

Meeting of Congress Doubtful.

March 25th.

A Vienna correspondent telegraphs that the controversy between England and Russia is approaching that dangerous stage where the point of honor more and more engages attention.

The North German Gazette says:—Considering to-day's news the meeting of the Congress at an early date can scarcely be expected. A war between Russia and England, however, need not yet be regarded as a necessary consequence of England's attitude. The Russian army remains at present near Constantinople, and its conduct will be regulated by that of the British fleet.

The Agence Russe says:—Russia having communicated the entire preliminaries to the Powers, having declared that no secret treaty exists, and having recognized in each member of the Congress a full right of discussion, proposing, and determining, the London Cabinet's conduct in insisting on imposing its formula upon Russia can only be regarded as bad chicane, revealing an offensive intention.

In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote announced that Russia communicated to England the terms of the treaty of peace. Maps of the district affected are being prepared. He refused to answer any more questions on the subject, as in the communications between Russia and England matters of great importance are not yet closed.

A Vienna correspondent says:—Russia's final answer to England is delayed pending efforts Russia is making, with approval of Germany, to wean Austria from her last idea of an English alliance. The Montags Review declares that if England does not attend the Congress the three Empires must come to an understanding on Russia's demands. If England then considers it necessary to secure her interests in the Mediterranean, she will discover that the freedom of the seas is, as Bismarck recently declared, essentially a German interest. The correspondent has reason to assert that the foregoing expresses the views of Bismarck.

A St. Petersburg special states that Ignatieff has gone to Vienna because of the anxiety felt about the attitude of Austria.

A Berlin correspondent says:—If the Congress does not meet Germany will revert to her former position of a friendly looker-on without positively approving of Russia's doings.

The Russian organ at Brussels says:—There is but little probability that the Congress will meet. It is in consequence of England's views more to the advantage of Europe that it should not. The duty of Europe is to settle the crisis without England.

The Paris Temps says:—It is probable, if England refuses to take part in the Congress, that France and Italy will refuse.

A Pera special says:—M. Layard, British Ambassador at Constantinople, is the head of the party who would rather see England go to war with Russia on any grounds, however trivial, than not at all. The present philo-English attitude of the Porte is due to the intimate friendship between Mr. Layard and Vefyk Pasha and the latter's temporary influence over the Sultan. But the Sultan is a man of capricious and arbitrary temper and of inferior capacity and resolution. A Court or Cabinet intrigue might destroy Vefyk Pasha's ascendency and change the whole Turkish policy.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Sultan on Sunday summoned Osman Pasha, and in presence of the Ministers expressed the warmest admiration and gratitude for his heroic defence of Plevna. Osman's public entrance into Constantinople is arranged for to-day, after which he will review the troops at the War Ministry.

Correspondents at Vienna agree that the full text of the Treaty of San Stefano has renewed a strong anti-Russian feeling there. The correspondents say the common opinion is that the real meaning of the treaty is not Russian preponderance, but Russian rule in European Turkey. It is just because such an alteration as would remove this feature would entirely destroy the Treaty that less confidence is felt in the efficacy of the Congress. While Count Andrassy will demand a revision of the entire Treaty, he will decline to do so in combination with England, because their interests are not identical.

A Belgrade despatch says:—The publication of the terms of peace has caused universal dissatisfaction in Servia. The army will occupy all the positions it conquered from Turkey, and hold them until the Congress decides as to the justice of Servia's claims. The Grand Duke Nicholas made a pressing demand on Servia to re-mobilise her reserves and concentrate them on the northern frontier, but Servia has not complied.

A Berlin special says:—The Princes Battenberg have authorized the statement that neither of them was ever a candidate for the throne of Bulgaria.

A Belgrade correspondent confirms the report that a Cabinet Council has resolved to re-occupy all the territory conquered from the Turks in Old Servia. Recruiting is going on throughout the country.

FERGUS.—The St. Patrick's Society gave an annual dinner at Hugh's Dominion Hotel, on the evening of the 18th, and was one of the most successful affairs that has ever taken place in that village.—Midnight ruffianism appears to be very common in Fergus. The Record office and other places of business have been damaged more or less on several occasions, and respectable people would like to know how long such must be put up with.—$61 was realized by the late social given in behalf of the Melville Church Sabbath School. At subsequent gatherings held on the two following evenings, $23 were taken in. The average attendance at the school last year was 136. The missionary collections amounted to $103, and there were paid out of the Mission fund during the year for the support of a pupil at Point au Tremble, $40, in aid of sufferers by St. John's fire, $25, and to the Provincial S.S. Association $75.

The volunteer officers of Manitoba are about to send a petition to the Minister of Militia, representing the hopelessness of expecting aid from the municipalities in so young a Province, and specifying the requirements, in the way of drill-sheds, targets, etc., for the maintenance of the efficiency of the force in the Province.

Daily Mercury.

TUESDAY EVEN'G, MARCH 26, 1878

The Present Op position

When our politicial opponents in the House of Commons found themselves in the early part of the present session without even the ghost of a policy, they at once descended to the petty intrigues and disreputable personalities which always distinguish a body of men without principle. From the loud vaporings and egotistical blusterings of the Chieftain and his "stretching" cosdjutor, Dr. Tupper, we were led to believe that something serious would come out of all their smoke. Not only Reformers but also Conservatives throughout the country waited with palpitating hearts for the expected onslaught and consequent destruction of the clan Mackenzie by the champion boasters of the great Tory party. Alas! our friends were doomed to disappointment. A little fault finding, a considerable carping, and an unlimited amount of dirty personal slander formed the platform of the "Loyal" Opposition, and defeat after defeat staring them in the face, they did the wisest thing that could be done under the unfortunate circumstances, and simply succumbed! The veracity of our Tory confreres has been sorely tried of late, and peg after peg has been swept away until they have nothing on which to hang their hopes save imaginary enthusiastic Conservative meetings with a little Protection thrown in. We sincerely pity those of the fourth estate who find such difficulty in matching the glorious promises of last summer's tournament with the disastrous and unhappy facts of the present session, and trust that the future may have more consolation for them than they have experienced in the past.

In looking back on the work of the session so far, we are struck with the absence of anything like a fixed policy or purpose in our opponents. The usual amount of acrimony and abuse took place on the Address. In order to have several serious charges investigated, Parliamentary Committees were kindly suggested, but on second consideration our Tory friends thought a change of front just at that time the most desirable of all things, and changed accordingly. No Committees for them, mere whitewashing machines, &c., forgetful apparently, that some of the darkest deeds of their own party were unearthed by the so-called partisan Committees. We should not overlook the Speakership question, which was almost the first piece on the programme. In this matter, in order to gratify a little personal spleen of the great McKenzie Bowell against Mr. Anglin, the Chieftain threw a direct insult in the face of every Roman Catholic in the Dominion. Then we come to the Minister of Militia and his libellers. A charge of treason was trumped up against him and paraded throughout the Tory press as another evidence of the class with whom the Premier is associated. Well, this was promply met by Mr. Jones himself on the floor of the House, and his enemies completely routed and put to shame. Nothing was wrong, there was really no treason, and the whole affair turned out to be a little scare-crow got up by the leaders to divert the attention of their followers from the barren field of Tory policy. Then we had the great McPherson swearing a feud against the clan Mackenzie, owing to a heinous crime committed by Mr. Cartwright against our fellow countrymen. Asssisted by Sir John and "four-and-twenty pipers," they all adjourned to supper, resolved "to extirpate the vipers," and assert the loyalty of all true Scotchmen, in spite of protection to "border cattle" or "predatory instincts." To put the climax on the work of the Tory leaders, a buncombe motion was, sometime ago, moved by Sir John, which meant anything or nothing, so far as Protection and Free Trade are concerned. "National policy," "readjustment of the tariff" and a few other sugar-coated pills were plentifully scattered throughout the resolution, in order that the dyspeptic follower and bilious straddle-the-fence might be caught. Not a word about what was really needed or what these gentlemen wished to propose, nothing was allowed to assume a definite form, but with that low cunning and desperate greed of power which seem to be implanted in the Chieftains' breast, he threw out the bait in the most tempting manner, knowing full well that both he and the resolution, so far as Protection is concerned, are whitewash to their eyes. We need not ask what the Tories think of the motion of Mr. Lourier the other day, abolishing the duty on malt, for the wounds are too fresh to require probing to make them sensitive.

We can only say in conclusion, that the policy of the Opposition has been entirely devoid of anything like principle and has been sadly wanting in any suggestions that might tend to alleviate some of the present commercial distress. The few instances we have given above are a fair sample of the Tory policy in the House, and throughout the whole session, the Opposition leaders have forgotten their high duty as heads of a party, and have sunk in the mire of self aggrandizement and personal abuse, the interests, the welfare, and the progress, commercial and political, of the country which they are bound at all times and under all circumstances to uphold and advance.

THE TEMPERCE BILL.—Four thousand extra copies of the Temperance Bill have been printed for private circulation. Those who wish them have only to write to their representatives in the Commons in order to get them:

GREAT FIRE AT PHILADELPHIA.—On Monday a fire broke out 9:30 p.m., on the third floor of the paint and drug warehouse of Wampole & Co., Fourth street, above Arch. There was a strong wind blowing and the fire spread rapidly in all directions, soon becoming one of the most disastrous which ever visited the city. The flames spread rapidly and all the structures from 122 to 132 were partly or entirely destroyed. Loss about a million dollars.

The Canada Temperance Act, 1878.

PAPER II. (BY OBSERVER.)

To the Editor of the Mercury.

The temperance men of Canada have strong reasons to object to Section 95, Subsections 4 and 5 of the proposed measure, for these virtually destroy the force of the Act and make null its object. They allow unrestricted wholesale traffic throughout the Dominion with the inevitable result of universal retail and consumption. It may be said here that the Act is not prohibitive but restrictive, and if the manufacture and importation of liquors is still allowed, their wholesale distribution must also be permitted. Yes, where their consumption is permitted, and there only. If the measure under consideration means anything, it means that the majority of the electors of any city or county may deliberately and carefully say through the ballot box that no liquors shall be distributed therein except for certain purposes, and that their will so expressed shall be law. It means no consumption in that city or county as far as law can prevent that consumption. Why, then, should any brewer or distiller, or dealer within or without the limits of the section, in which the Act is once passed, be allowed to sell liquors therein, except in the limited quantities needed for medicinal and mechanical purposes. This provision is plainly contrary to the spirit of the Act. It may be said that the clauses of the measure under discussion which permit sales in quantities of over ten gallons, by brewers, distillers, merchants and traders contain distinct provisos that the liquors so distributed shall only be used legitimately. Temperance men know too well what use may be made of such clauses both in public discussion and the pratical operation of the measure. Besides, it appears entirely unnecessary to allow unrestricted wholesale traffic that a few druggist and others may be supplied with the small quantities needed in medicine and in the arts. If the clauses stand as they are, there is danger of unlimited abuses, and every avowed temperance county or city, even if freed itself, would become the broad channel through which liquors would flow wholesale into communities in which the law is not adopted. It seems clear therefore that the Dominion Alliance, under the auspices of which the measure is being put through Parliament, should see to it that no brewer or distiller, either within or without the district in which the law is in force, should be allowed to sell to any one therein except the druggist or agent authorized to retail for legitimate purposes, and further, that no merchant or trader, within or without the district, should be allowed to sell any quantity whatever therein.

Section 97 of the Act provides that prosecutions for penalties may be brought by and in the name of the Collector of Inland Revenue of the district, or by and in the name of any other person. If it really be that any person interested in the enforcement of the law has authority under the Act to prosecute as in civil cases, the provision may be regarded as a wholesome one. For though some might say, "what is everybody's business is nobody's business," still it must be admitted that if the Act is to be enforced, this must be done by the organized efforts of temperance men, and the measure that leaves them free to select prosecutors, and sustains them, is best. In nota few cases has it been found that a regular Government prosecutor has lacked the spirit and vim to enforce the law in the face of dangers to person and property. It is then better that friends of temperance should appoint, shield, and back their prosecutors, and if they will not do this, they do not deserve a law.

But section 98, which provides that the Collector of Inland Revenue shall not prosecute unless he has reasonable grounds of success, and the silence of the measure as to the disposal of the penalties under this part of the Act leave one in doubt as to whether any person may enter a suit, even in his own name, except in deference to the judgment of the Collector of Inland Revenue; and also as to whether the penalty is recoverable as a debt or not. In both of these particulars the Act should speak more definitely. It is eminently observable, that those interested should know clearly how the penalties are to be enforced and applied.

But one other objection to the Act, one already noticed in a resolution passed at a recent public meeting, will be considered in this communication. The 3rd section enacts that where the Temperance Act of 1864 is not now in force it shall not be submitted, and that where it is now in operation it shall be continued until repealed under its own provisions. This provision of the proposed measure places a double burden on the communities where the old Act is now being worked—first the labor of repealing the old measure, and second, the passing of the new. Would it not be better to make it permissable to substitute the one Act for the other by a direct vote, or to insert a provision whereby the Act of '78 shall take the place of that of '64 immediately on its passage, in all places where the latter is now in force. If it be objected that this latter course would be unjust to the Anti-restrictive party, it may be replied that it is reasonable to suppose that where the Act of '64 has already been carried the Act of '78 would do the same. And if the parties concerned were inclined to test the issue they could do so follow by way of repeal according to the law of '78.

THE rumor is current that Thomas White, the rejected of many constituencies, will offer himself as the Conservative candidate in Missisquoi at the approaching election for the Commons, though there are a number of local aspirants. It is also said that he is at present engaged in canvassing for the Dobuchenville candidates in the Eastern Townships. Mr. Burnham has been nominated by the Conservatives of East Peterboro' as their candidate for the Commons. Mr. Lewis Wallbridge and Mr. William Macdougall having declined to run against Mr. Cartwright for Lennox, the name of Mr. Morris, ex-Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, has been mentioned as a possible Conservative candidate. It seems that the nomination of Mr. Macdougall was made at the instance, if not the dictation, of the U. E. Club. G. W. Ross, M. P., has announced his intention of becoming a candidate for re-election in this riding.

EASTER is generally looked upon as the probable limit of the session of the present Parliament.

The Arthur cattle fair for March was well attended. The Enterprise states that the prices ranged from $2.50 to $3 per cwt., and milch cows from $20 to $28.

George Buntle, of Rochester, N. Y., last week bought a car load of horses in Brussels, paying from $70 to $140 for each animal.

The ironworkers in the north of England have rejected the compromise jointly urged by their own delegates and the masters.

THE Ottawa correspondent of the Hamilton Times explains the sudden conversion of the Paris Star from a staunch supporter of the Mackenzie Government to an ardent admirer and follower of Sir John Macdonald. The proprietor of that journal demanded a Customs Collectorship. He did not get it, and now he swears that Mr. Mackenzie is ruining the country, and that Sir John is the only man living who can pilot the Canadian Ship of State to a safe harbor—which, being interpreted, means that it is only Sir John on whom he can depend to pilot him into a Customs Collectorship. As the live organ of the Liberal party in Paris is the Transcript, the Star can carry its twinkle to the Conservative ranks without hurting any one but its new allies.

DR. WM. GRAY'S SPECIFIC MEDICINE

After Taking

Before Taking

The Great English Remedy is especially recommended as an unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhœa, Impotency and all diseases that follow as a consequence of Self-Abuse, as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to INSANITY OR CONSUMPTION and a PREMATURE GRAVE, all of which, as a rule, are first caused by deviating from the path of nature, and over indulgence.

The Specific Medicine is the result of a life study and many years of experience in treating those special diseases. Pamphlet free by mail.

The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or Six Packages for $5, or will be sent by mail on receipt of the money by addressing DR. WM. GRAY & CO., Windsor Ont.

THE UNDERSIGNED RECEIVED a Silver Medal at the Centennial Exhibition, this being the HIGHEST AWARD to Canadian Organs. Other medals for organs merely bronze. None of our organs had over four sets of reeds. Several other Canadian makers had instruments with from seven to twelve sets. The bronze medal organ had twelve sets.

At the Western Fair for 1876, our London agent exhibited only his ordinary stock, and our Five Stop Organ took First Prize over all competitors.

A five years' guarantee accompanies each organ. This from a well established firm likely to continue in business is worth considerable. For Price List, address

The Grandest Biblical Engraving of the Age.

BEAUTIFUL PREMIUM PICTURES

To every Subscriber of this Paper.

Consisting of the only two pictures ever produced by Mezzorgraph, a new and beautiful art. The Mezzorgraph Art brings out the most grandly-beautiful productions that have ever been known in picture history.

CROWN OF ROSES

A gem of loveliness and beauty, representing Christ, who has just descended upon a cloud, in the act of placing upon the head of a beautiful female a "CROWN OF ROSES," fresh from high Heaven's immaculate bowers, yet scented with Heaven's pearly dews. Descending in the distance, is a beautiful female, bearing flowers to the crowned one.

CROSS OF ROSES

Companion picture to Crown of Roses.

Represents a lovely female bemoaning her pathway in life, and after putting by Cross after Cross, finally discovering one entwined with roses. Being about to embrace this emblem of temptation, she discovers that the roses are interwoven with thorns. She drops it in despair, and cries: "My Cross I can not bear." Suddenly a form appears, bearing the plain cross of true faith, exclaiming: "I AM THE WAY." The somber garb of the female is beautifully contrasted with the light robe and graceful drapery of JESUS, advancing in his mild majesty, while the dark foreground is artistically relieved by the rays of HOPE and FAITH, as reflected from the presence of the DIVINE MEDIATOR. It is sublime in conception, grand in execution.

At no time have such beautiful gems of art been offered to the subscribers of this paper, and it is the last opportunity that will be given to secure these most valuable

PREMIUM PICTURES.

By a special arrangement, we are enabled to offer on the following most liberal terms either or both of the above, and so far the only Mezzorgraphs ever made. They are beautiful beyond description, and contain a lesson and appeal to every heart.

You will please cut out the following order, and mail it to the Queen City Mezzorgraph Co., 155 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and you will receive by return mail the grandest pictures ever offered to the public.

SUBSCRIBER'S ORDER.

On receipt of this Order, with fifty cents to pay for postage, rolling, tubing, and packing, we will mail to the sender one copy of this beautiful Mezzorgraph, 24x30, entitled

CROWN OF ROSES.

Send for the picture at once, giving your name in full, P. O. address, county, and state. Address all orders to the Queen City Mezzorgraph Co., 155 W. 4th st., Cincinnati, O.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

"A Drowning Man Will Catch a Straw."

If he catch it, it will do him no good. Thousands of people, who having neglected colds and coughs until they have become dangerous, will rush to almost every nostrum for relief. This is why so many experiments are tried by the sufferers. Go to your druggist, buy a bottle of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and use it with confidence. It will benefit at once and ultimately cure. It is no straw, it is a cable well tried; hold on to it and be saved.

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

What The Czar Considers an Insult.

Congress Scheme Failed.

BUCHAREST, March 27.—At a secret meeting of the Roumanian Chambers yesterday, Count Glokor reported that the Emperor of Russia considered opposition to retrocession of Bessarabia as a personal insult. The announcement caused great sensation, and the sitting was adjourned.

LONDON, March 27.—It is authoritatively stated that the European Congress scheme absolutely failed, and that there is not the faintest possibility of any meeting being held.

EXCITEMENT IN LONDON.

LONDON, March 27.—Considerable excitement over threatening state of the Eastern question, has extended to the Stock Exchange, where a feverish feeling characterized transactions. Consols declined to 95 3-16.

The Eramosa Meeting.

To the Editor of the Mercury:

SIR,—In your editorial on the "National Policy" Association of Eramosa, you have made one or two mis-statesments which I wish to draw your attention to.

First, you say "not a single elector of the township felt interested enough in the subject to address the meeting," but in your own report of the meeting you give some of the remarks made by Mr. Tovell; also say that I addressed the meeting when moving the resolution regarding the action of the Government. Therefore this statement is not correct.

Next you say, after referring in a derogatory manner to Mr. Lukes and Mr. Wright, "these unquiet spirits who want to get Sir John Macdonald back into power thought it would be a good opportunity to do a little stroke of business for him under the guise of a National Policy, so they drummed up this meeting in Eramosa." Now, sir, there is not one word of truth in this. The meeting was got up and called by farmers, who feel that the Government is not doing justice to their interests and the interests of the country, and Mr. Lukes and Mr. Wright were invited by these farmers to address them on the subject, and neither of these gentlemen had any hand in getting these farmers to call that meeting.

The MERCURY should be careful in traducing gentlemen like Mr. Lukes and Mr. Wright.

Farmers of Eramosa do not require the uninvited services of people from Erin to dictate to and instruct them as to how they should conduct their meetings; they are quite capable of doing this without outside interference, and when a man of Mr. Alloy's position so demeans himself as to assume the character of a rough in order to interrupt the business of a meeting where he had no right to interfere, it clearly shows that he, and those that pursuaded him to come, must have been afraid of the arguments of the National Policy party—afraid of the farmers of Eramosa putting the interests of the country before the interests of any political party.

Yours, &c.,
ALEX. LOGHRIN.
Eramosa, March, 26, 1878.

THE SQUIRES' HOMICIDE.—At the London Assizes on Tuesday, this case was taken up, John Munn being arraigned for the killing of Samuel Squires, in London township, on the 2nd inst. The simple facts are that Munn was giving up the business of tavern-keeper in the country and removing into town. Squires owed him a liquor bill of $1.50, and on this day Munn determined to collect his money, as he might not see Squires again for a long time. He met Squires in Bernard's tavern, and asked for the money. Squires made no reply, whereupon Munn attacked him ferociously, knocking him down and kicking him in the face, neck, and body. Throughout all Squires, who is a harmless man, never spoke or offered any resistance. When Munn stopped kicking him he was found lying dead. The trial has lasted all day. At night a verdict of manslaughter was returned, and the prisoner was sentenced to ten years imprisonment.

NOTICE.—The choirs of the Nortolk and Dublin street Churches will meet at the residence of Mr. Philp this Wednesday, evening, at 8 o'clock for practice.

CRICKET.—The annual meeting of the Guelph Cricket Club will be held at the Royal Hotel, on Friday evening, 29th inst., at eight o'clock sharp. T. Y. GREET, Secretary. d2

Local News.

RELIANCE LODGE, I. O. O. F., purposes paying a fraternal visit to Progress Lodge on Thursday evening, April 4th.

A ROLL OF LEATHER dropped, the other day, from the Erin stage, between that place and Guelph.

MR. JOHN ROCHE has rented the store lately occupied by Messrs. Macdonald & Shillington.

HAMILTON is to have a Son's of England Benevolent Society, named "The Britannia." A lodge of the same order is about being established in Guelph.

MR. JOHN ANDERSON has sent us the latest issue of Irving's series of five cent music, containing the song of "The Regular Army O!"

WM. STEWART has something decidedly new in umbrellas, and those in need of such an article should examine his stock. They might be termed "detached" institutions.

A CABLE DESPATCH received from Mr. J. W. Lyon, intimates that he and his party have arrived safely at Sydney, Australia. The voyage from San Francisco was in every respect a pleasant one.

ACCIDENT.—A little daughter of George Patterson, of Puslinch, was investigating a turnip cutter the other day, and she, by some inadvertance, lost the index finger of her right hand.

WEATHER PROBS.—Falling barometer, cloudy weather, with rain or snow, followed to-morrow by rising barometer, brisk northerly to north-westerly winds, and falling temperature, are the weather probabilities.

E. KING Dodds purposes lecturing in Guelph at the beginning of next week, taking for his subject, "True Temperance." His ideas of temperance are somewhat different from those who wish to restrict the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

CHOICE POTATOES.—In a short time the potatoes will begin to sprout, and the potatoe bugs will begin to crawl. Let them crawl—but only once—then apply just one dose of potatoe bug poison. To be got only in its purity from Thorp & Son, hardware and house furnishing, 99 Upper Wyndham street.

LICENSE INSPECTORSHIP.—Mr. A. E. Goodfellow, Inspector for South Wellington, has obtained leave of absence for three months from the Government, for the purpase of visiting Europe. The duties of the office will during that time be performed by Mr. John Mackenzie.

A TABLEAUX VIVANTS entertainment will be given in the Town Hall, on Easter Monday, the proceeds to be applied to the General Hospital funds. The music which will be given in connection with the tableaux is to be of a first-class order. A liberal patronage will be bestowed on the entertainment.

TO SPORTSMEN.—A sportsman who knows, says the fact is becoming well-established in the mind of every true sportsman that shooting ducks in the spring must be stopped if good shooting in the fall is to be secured. There are very few ducks which are fit for food in the spring, and thousands of broods are lost by the general slaughter.

BASE BALL.—It is not improbable that Mr. Holdsworth will be the change catcher and tenth man of the Tecumsehs this season. He was centre-fielder of the Hartfords last year, and stands high in the record. He will take the place of the player who is unable to visit London for a couple of months yet.

DASTARDLY.—Recently some parties, who apparently appear to be ignorant of the law, have torn down a large number of posters about town. There is a heavy penalty for such acts, and there is a probability that some of these days the guilty parties will be detected, and the law will be carried out.

A MISHAP.—Just as the forms of the DAILY MERCURY were about ready for the press on Tuesday, the third page was pied—which to use a phrase not technical, means knocked to smithereens—and a delay of about an hour was caused in making up a page of standing advertisements. A number of adds. that should have appeared in the edition of yesterday were therefore unavoidably left out.

STOCK FOR KENTUCKY.—Dr. L. E. Brown, of Eminence, Kentucky, on Tuesday of this week, shipped from Guelph two Cotswold sheep from the flock of John Snell's Sons, Edmonton, and one Berkshire sow; from Mr. Johnston, of Greenwood, a pair of Cotswolds; and from Mr. F. W. Stone a pair of Yorkshire pigs and one Berkshire sow.

CURLING.—The annual game between Messrs. Wm. Mitchell and George Murton, for the oysters, was played on Tuesday. The President and his rink succeeded in badly defeating the Secretary's. Score follows:—

Wm. Mitchell,	Geo. Murton,
W. H. Mills,	D. Stirton,
A. Robertson, jr.,	Alex. Bruce,
A. Congalton, skip, 20.	T. Dobbie, skip, 9.

LITERARY ENTERTAINMENT.—A most interesting literary entertainment will be given by the Young People's Aid Society of the Norfolk street Methodist Church tomorrow evening (Thursday) in the lecture room of the Church. The following ladies and gentlemen will take part in the programme: Miss E. Keables, Miss J. Greey, Miss. M. Husband, Miss Jennie Smith, the Misses Stevenson, Messrs. Harris Bros., and Cooke. Admission ten cents. d1

CANADIAN EXHIBITS AT PARIS.—The correspondent of the Boston Journal says:—"Most of the Canadian contributions have arrived, and some of them are already in place. The exhibit will be very similar to that shown by the Dominion at the fair of 1876. There will be some improvements in the Agricultural Department; the display of native woods will be rather finer; and there are, I believe, more exhibitors than at Philadelphia. The Canadians are displeased because they did not succeed in obtaining more space, and have urged the English Commission to make an effort in their behalf. Canada is ambitious of obtaining first honors here, and in some classes of exhibits her rewards will certainly be substantial."

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, March 26.

A message from His Excellency was presented transmitting correspondence and other documents in reference to the recent Ministerial changes in the Province of Quebec. After a brief discussion it was agreed that the return should be printed along with the memorial previously presented.

Mr. Laurier's resolution declaring it expedient to repeal the import duty on malt was then adopted without discussion, and a Bill founded upon it read the first time.

The House proceeded to consider in Committee the Bill to establish township municipalities in the district of Keewatin, which was discussed until six o'clock.

A short discussion ensued on a complaint made by Mr. Tupper, and supported by other Opposition members, that the return in reference to the recent Ministerial changes in Quebec had been obtained from the leader of the Opposition by a Minister, with a view of giving it to the Ministerial press to the exclusion of Opposition newspapers. The discussion showed that the Minister had obtained the return in the ordinary course, and apart altogether from its subsequent use by the press.

Mr. Mills' Bill respecting conflicting claims to lands of occupants in Manitoba passed its second reading.

WATERLOO was defeated at foot ball by Berlin, on Saturday last, by a score of 2 to 1.

THE number of school teachers required for Public Schools for 1878 is put down at twenty-four, and the teachers' salaries will amount to $7,708.

MANITOBA.—Parties intending to emigrate to Manitoba on the 10th of April with R. W. Prittie must be at the following stations of the Great Western Railway to meet the special train from Toronto. This train will leave Toronto at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 10th; Hamilton at 11 o'clock; Harrisburg 11:30; Woodstock 12:30; London 2; Komoka 3; Glencoe 4. Through tickets must be purchased on train. Parties coming off connecting lines will meet at the above points. Full information can be procured from all Great Western agents after April 1st. d1w1.

MISS ROWSWELL—STILL AN UNCERTAINTY.—Up to the time of writing nothing definite has been learned in regard to the whereabouts of this unfortunate young lady. Rumours are still as rife as ever. This morning a young man named Chas. Vinesse arrived in town from Fergus, and he stated that a young lady was seen in the neighborhood of that village, answering to the description of the missing person at the house of E. B. Tebens. She arrived at that gentleman's house on Tuesday evening and asked to remain all night. This request was granted and the person was informed that she would have to go to the Poor House in the morning. She replied that she was from the County of Grey and wanted to reach her friends there. Vinesse thinks the description published in regard to Miss Rowswell answers to that of the young lady in question. Messrs. T. Galer and W. H. Marcon have left for Fergus to make enquiries. A rumor was current in town that the mother of Mr. Geo. Lees had heard something in regard to a young lady enquiring the way to Durham answering to the description of Miss Rowswell. Enquiries at the residence of Mr. Lees this morning show that his mother has never been in this country and the whole thing must be a hoax. A telegram has been received from Fergus which states the person referred to by Vinesse was not Miss Rowswell.

On Wednesday last Mr. John Borer, of West Flamboro, had a narrow escape from a terrible death. He was trying to hoist the gate at his mill pond when he accidentally fell into the water. He was forced through the gate which he had partly opened and carried into the open water which was swollen into the dimensions of a torrent, just above the falls, when fortunately he was rescued by two gentlemen in time to save him from being hurled over the rocky precipice. Mr. Borer had his shoulder dislocated and was considerably bruised.

MOOREFIELD MILLS.—A mass meeting of about seventy sympathisers with Mr. John Brodie in the loss of his magnificent flouring mill in Moorefield, was held on Monday afternoon. The Reeve said the idea was to erect a mill of the capacity of 150 barrels per day with two runs of stone for oatmeal and split peas. He praised Mr. Brodie very highly, and said there was no buyer in that neighborhood who had treated farmers better than he did. Mr. Brodie said it was a sad affair to the ratepayers as well as himself. He would rebuild the mill if they would help him. The mill had cost $22,400 and he could have built a mill according to the by-law for $6,500. Rev. W. J. Pigott spoke of the loss Moorefield would sustain provided the mill was not rebuilt. He said that Moorefield had been benefited to the extent of $6,010. Mr. Brodie had paid since August, 1875, the sum of $350,000 to farmers. Several other speakers followed. The money is to be subscribed on condition that Mr. J. Brodie takes out a policy in some responsible insurance company equal to the amount subscribed.

The Acme Blind Roller at McBean & Co.'s, is the long-looked-for—perfect and elegant. d6

On the 28th of Feb'y. Messrs. T. Harris, License Inspector for South Grey, and Robert Crozier were charged with forcibly entering the house of Mr. Wm. Barton and assaulting his wife. The case was dismissed, and Mr. Barton had to pay costs, or, in default thereof, to be imprisoned twenty days in jail. On Monday last Mrs. Mary Barton was charged by License Inspector Harris with perjury. The defendant was committed for trial. A similar complaint was enquired into by William Barton, husband of the former defendant, against Constable Crozier. The result was an acquittal.

Robt. H. Morrison, the Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows of Michigan, has been accused of taking his departure with the funds of that organization to the amount of $7,000. He has made a statement to the effect that he is the victim of a conspiracy on the part of several officers of the Grand Lodge; that he is not a defaulter; that he has vouchers for every dollar paid him; that Grand Lodge officers forged his name to important papers; that very little money was ever paid to him by the Grand Secretary, and that he will make things hot for that officer.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Trouble Still Impending.

LITTLE HOPE OF A CONGRESS.

TURKEY AND RUSSIA NEGOTIATING.

March 26.

A London despatch says:—The final answer from St. Petersburg to England's question, whether the entire treaty will be submitted to Congress, is anxiously awaited.

The Times expresses the opinion that—"The more prudent Russian statesmen, even the Czar himself, ought to be ready to smooth the way for the assemblage of the Congress. The predominating opinion at the capitals of the great Powers seems to be that Russia will refuse and that this will render the situation very critical in consequence of the presence of the British fleet in the Sea of Marmora, and the position of the Russians about Constantinople, that if no unforseen accident or complication arises from these circumstances war may be avoided, and after a period of suspense a fresh proposal for a Conference or Congress may be brought forward under different forms with a hope of success."

The Standard says:—"The Government storehouses are so crowded with warlike stores, in consequence of rapid deliveries under recent contracts, that it is necessary to engage storage in warehouses."

The Post says:—Another vain attempt has been made to induce Russia to acknowledge some responsibility towards Europe. Her reply is invariably the same, viz., "You have full liberty of appreciation and action." The Post says:—Should the Congress fail some means may yet be sought for establishing a real or pretended agreement. It is not probable it will be found, and unless Russia yields the storm which is brewing will break out.

A Berlin correspondent states that an apparently inspired article in the Berlin Post justifies England's demand, and declares Russia should be wise enough to be moderate.

A St. Petersburg special says:—Those having the direction of affairs here appear to have very little hope of a solution of the present deadlock. Although the holding of the Congress without England would have the advantage of isolating her and consolidating the Triple Alliance, it is regarded as more probable that the Congress will not meet at all. The whole question seems to be sinking from the sphere of reason to that of passion. The Journal de St. Petersburg declares that Russia will not endure a position obliging her to maintain her armaments indefinitely. The Berlin Post remarks that the collapse of the Congress would enforce such an attitude on both Russia and England.

The position of Austria is a source of much anxious curiosity. The semi-official organs have declared the treaty utterly unacceptable, but the fact is equally certain that Austria does not support England's demand concerning the form of its submission to the Congress.

A Vienna correspondent says flatly that a reconstruction of the triple alliance is preparing for the purpose of opposing the British policy. Austria's objections are to the whole treaty, so that Russia's concession could hardly go far enough to satisfy her.

A Vienna correspondent of the Times says:—The differences between England and Russia are those of form rather than principle, and ought not to prevent the meeting of the Congress. The British Ambassador here had a long interview with Andrassy on Sunday by appointment. There is no doubt that Russia is making a strong effort to avert the possibility of an Anglo-Austrian alliance before giving England a final answer.

A Vienna despatch says:—Ignatieff's mission is to complete negotiations for a scheme of parallel annexation, which has already found favor at headquarters here. Austria demands Bosnia, Herzegovina, Northern Albania, and a portion of Macedonia, including Salonica. Russia objects to the annexation of a portion of Macedonia, but this difficulty is by no means insurmountable. Russia, by the advice of Germany, is conciliating Austria and disregarding England. It is believed that Russia is preparing for war with England. Two hundred thousand men of the Russian Landwehr were called out on Monday.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Grand Duke Nicholas, accompanied by twelve Russian generals proceeded to-day in the Imperial yacht Livedia to the Dolmabaghtche Palace, where he was received by the Sultan, surrounded by his Ministers and Osman Pasha and other generals. The Grand Duke conversed with the Sultan twenty minutes. He then went to the Beylerbey Palace, where he was visited by the Sultan forty-five minutes later. The Grand Duke and suite next proceeded to the former Russian Embassy, in front of which the Russian eagles were displayed.

A Pera special reports that the Sultan received the Grand Duke with the utmost courtesy and cordiality. Diplomatic relations between Turkey and Russia have been renewed, and General Nelidoff has been appointed Russian Charge d'Affaires at Constantinople.

The Paris Temps believes the Congress has failed in consequence of England's refusal to participate. France stipulated from the outset that she would only take part in the Congress if all the signatory Powers were represented. Le Soir states that the Council of Ministers renewed this resolution.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

After all that has been said about "sweeping reductions," the Grand Central is the only first-class hotel in New York that has made a "sweeping reduction." It offers first-class accommodation for $2.50 and $3.00 per day. eod

HAVE you seen those diagonal suits at $16, worth $20, and those really choice new patterns at $20, worth $28. Made to order in first-class style. They can only be obtained from Wm. Anderson, Central Emporium. d6

HARRISTON.—Robert Kerr, employed at Fulton's mill, on Thursday lost the middle finger of the right hand, by its coming in contact with a circular saw, while in the act of removing saw dust from a spout. ——Burglaries, or attempts at the same, are getting very common in the village. An attempt has been made to fire Kent's block, but was unsuccessful. The Council have offered a reward of $50 for such information as will lead to the conviction of the miscreants.

Flower gardening has commenced in Winnipeg.

The loss by the Philadelphia fire is estimated at $800,000.

The Bill re-establishing capital punishment in Iowa has passed the State Senate and is now law.

The recent cold weather has caused considerable damage to the peach crop in Delaware and Maryland.

On Saturday morning the barns belonging to Mr. W. H. Hunter, Reeve of East Garafraxa, were burned to the ground.

The Cobourg Assizes opened on Tuesday. Among the cases to come up are the Castleton abortion and the Keith abduction.

The coroner's jury on the loss of the the Eurydice find that the disaster was purely the result of accident, no blame attaching to anybody.

Large purchases of horses for cavalry service are, it is said, being made by English Government agents in the Western and South-western States.

The Sarnia by-law granting twenty thousand dollars to the Sarnia, Chatham, and Erie Railway was carried on Tuesday by an overwhelming majority.

Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Inglefield is expected at Halifax in May, to succeed Sir Cooper Key in command of the North American and West Indian station.

Martin Luther's Bible is now in the Brandenburg museum, which paid for it about $450. It was printed in Basle in 1509, and is still in good preservation.

The new Italian Ministry's programme includes the maintenance of neutrality as to Eastern affairs, and the reduction of such taxation as presses most heavily upon the poor.

Mrs. Jarvis, charged with complicity in the alleged hair factory cruelties, cannot be found in London or neighborhood, and it is believed she has absconded, as her husband has done.

Rev. S. Cunningham, pastor of the Baptist Church, Mount Forest, was on Friday evening the 15th inst., presented with a well filled purse accompanied with an address.

At a very edifying entertainment given by St. John's Church, Arthur, on Tuesday evening last, the Rev. Father Walsh, of Owen Sound, delivered an excellent lecture on education.

Robert Bradshaw, Isaiah Weaver, and David Sages were fined, the former $7 and the two latter $5 and costs for disturbing an entertainment held at Ancastar recently. Served them right.

Ten horses belonging to farmers who were removing to Manitoba were burnt in a box car on the Canada Southern Railway at Highgate on Tuesday last. The animals were valued at $1,000.

A cash box, containg one hundred and fifty dollars was stolen from the store of M. & S. B. Morrison, general merchants of Rodney, on Saturday, the 23rd inst., about nine o'clock in the evening.

An English paper says that a game cock was recently sold for $502. The same journal states that over $13,000,000 worth of eggs were imported into England in 1876, and yet the supply was short of the demand.

A man named James Crookshank, of the township of Arran a day or two ago, while helping to build a log stable, was crushed by a falling log and instantly killed. He was a middle aged man, and leaves a wife and family.

The widow of Rev. John Marples, who committed suicide on Friday, is in destitute circumstances, and a subscription has been set on foot for her benefit. She has a family to support and is entirely without means.

While three young men were out shooting near the village of Embro the other day one of them, on being told by a companion that he might fire at him, drew a revolver and fired, the ball entering the loin injured the victim fatally.

The other day while Mr. Wallace Dent and his little daughter were out driving at Trafalgar the horses started off and threw Mr. Dent out of the vehicle. The little girl, who was not thrown out, held the lines bravely until she arrived at home.

Lovers of "good old English beer," who have always fancied that they could trust in the virtue and integrity of that article, will regret to learn that out of 89 samples of beer and materials used in brewing examined last year by the internal revenue authorities, 61 were found adulterated and false.

A telegram from New York states that the United States war sloop which left the city some time ago with goods for the Paris Exhibition, has returned in a leaking condition. This is hardly creditable to the naval authorities of the Great Republic, and it would be safer to have no navy at all than to have the few vessels at present in commission in so unreliable a condition.

As to the best method of advertising, Messrs. Lord & Taylor, the great merchants of New York, give the following testimony: "Of all the methods open to the merchant for advertising his business, an experience for nearly half a century enables us to unhesitatingly declare in favor of the newspaper. It is without exception the most economical, presistent, painstaking, and successful canvasser any business firm can secure for the purpose of bringing their goods to the attention of the consumer."

A domestic servant of Mr. Peter Elson, 2nd con. London township, was blinded for life the other day. She had occasion to use ammonia for some domestic purpose, took down the bottle and finding the cork hard to pull applied her teeth. When the cork came out a quantity of gas followed it which has destroyed her eyesight. Scarcely a family but uses hartshorn as a cleansing agent, and great care should be taken as the ammonia gas which is emitted is extremely dangerous.

THE LIFE ASSURANCE BILL.—Mr. Trow's bill relating to Life Assurance provides that policies shall be non-forfeitable after seven yearly payments. Companies after such number of payments shall not be able to contest them on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentations of age or health. Every company shall pay claims within sixty days after proof of death. If no legal representative of deceased can be found the company shall pay the amount of the policy into the Court of Chancery bearing eight per cent. interest. Claims must be paid notwithstanding suicide, if assigned on premiums paid for seven years. Thirty days grace shall be allowed for payment of any premium after it becomes due. Policies may be revived within a year; companies to have the privilege of cancelling any policy by giving the assured or assignees six months' notice, and paying 80 per cent. of the premiums back in cash.

The Eastern Question.

Our despatches for some days past have been of a very disquieting character, and to-day the war cloud looms heavy and ominous over Europe. By intrigue and chicanery Russia seems to have succeeded in alienating Austria from Britain, and in making terms with the Turkish Government, which is driven to the last extremity, and seems to be willing to ally herself with any Power which will promise her a longer lease of life. The great question between the two chief Powers now seems to be one of detail as regards the subject to be brought before the Congress, as contained in the Treaty, and if a rupture occurs, this divergence of opinion will be taken as the pretext. It seems to us that in all the negotiations heretofore Russia has been playing a fast and loose game, with a clear desire to come out of the recent struggle with advantage, and if possible to work such a change in European diplomacy as would give her a controlling influence over Turkey, and an opportunity to advance her interests in Asia. The traditional policy of Russia is to curb the spread of British power and influence in Asia—especially in Hindostan—and all her onslaughts on the Turks are but a means to this end. She was baulked in her designs when the Crimean war broke out, but though much shattered by that great conflict, she did not lose sight of her purpose, and now, by other means, and by advocating a more hypocritical policy, she seeks to accomplish the same object—to get the passage of the Dardanelles, and the consequent free passage to the Mediterranean.

Britain has a great stake at issue. She seems at present to stand almost alone in the face of Europe, but she does not flinch from the position. Germany is playing a double game, and while ostensibly appearing to advise Russia, so shapes her diplomacy as to lean to the side of the Muscovite autocrat. Austria lingers between two opinions; to-day in sympathy with Britain, the next she is under the thumb of Bismarck. With no mind of her own—or rather with an evident desire to profit by the late war—she sides with the Power that will promise her most.

There is one consolation that amid all this diplomatic manœuvring Britain stands firm and unyielding in her demands, and if need be she will go to war for the maintenance of her rights, and of her controlling power in European affairs. In days gone by she fought nearly the whole of Europe single-handed, and she is able to do it again, and to come out conqueror. We would deplore war as much as any one, but there are times when the honour and integrity of a nation make an appeal to arms necessary. In this present case we think that if Britain is not satisfied in her demands, that she would be justified in taking up arms. The Russians she need not fear, and even though the treacherous Turks side with their supposed new ally, Russia, the combined forces of the two Powers will be no match for the armies of our mother land, which for prowess, pluck, courage and endurance are unmatched by any troops in the world. All the indications are that we shall have war. The proposal for a Conference has fallen to pieces, and we shall now see every nation arming in hot haste. As to Britain's preparedness we are fully satisfied, and Mr. Jennings, late editor of the New York Times, and now correspondent of the N. Y. World, gives assurance that preparations are being made for the worst. He says:—"I am able to tell you, what you will not see in the newspapers, that two corps of 36,000 each are ready to start immediately for the scene of hostilities, wherever that may happen to be. One of these is being held in readiness at a moment's notice. The Government has refrained from launching the expedition in order that no excuse may be given Russia for pretending that war was provoked by England. The preparations in the navy are, of course, even more complete and thorough-going..... The war, if there must be war, will have to be undertaken by England alone. Unless—tremendous possibility!—England should say to France:—"I will give you as much money as you want, and we will fight Russia together. If Germany attacks you while we are at it, we shall get Italy to come in, and, if necessary, fight all Europe."

THE ERAMOSA MEETING.—Mr. Alex. Loghrin sends us a letter about this meeting, which claims a word or two in explanation. He takes advantage of a slight slip of ours in our article last week on the meeting, in which we stated that not a single elector of the Township felt interested enough in the subject to address the meeting. But if he had chosen to notice, he might have seen that in the very next sentence we referred to two speakers in the Riding, which included himself and Mr. Bathgate. We had no intention to ignore Mr. Loghrin, who seems to be very desirous to be known as one of the matters to the policy of the present Government, as those National Policy men choose to represent it. He also takes exception to our remarks on the two Tories whom they specially invited on the occasion to hold forth for John A. Macdonald, protection and the "National Policy." Well, we stand by what we said, and we don't think Mr. Loghrin will be able to contradict what we wrote. It is all very well for Mr. Loghrin to say that the meeting in question was a spontaneous one on the part of the farmers. He may tell that to the marines. We know better. We state, without fear of contradiction, that it was a political move from first to last—that the affair was concocted by a little knot of Tories in Eramosa and Guelph, aided by a red-hot protectionist from Guelph Township, and if Mr. Loghrin has innocently been acting as their tool or dupe that is his business not ours. If those who were so anxious to get up a meeting were desirous of free discussion, why did they not invite some of their friends on the other side, so as to have a full discussion? Oh! no, that was not in the programme. No Reformer was wanted there. Only those who would go for the "National Policy" or in other words work to get Sir John again in power.

THE report now is that the Opposition have decided to drop or modify the proposal for a complete amnesty to O'Donoghue.

AN edition of between 5,000 and 6,000 of the Hansard report of Mr. Charlton's speech on Protection has been ordered by various Reform members of the House.

INFORMATION from Prince Edward Island represents general indignation at Mr. Pope's course on Sir John Macdonald's motion, which is regarded as gross treachery to the interests he was elected to represent, and which would be mortally injured by high protection.

IN the U. S. Senate on Tuesday Mr. Blaine, in moving that the correspondence in reference to the Fisheries Award be referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, said that the Award should be paid for honour's sake. But the period for which it pays ends in five years, and then the U. S privilege must be negotiated afresh. It is their duty to show that the Award has no foundation.

CAPT. MCMASTER has been selected by the Liberals in the Western Division of Toronto as their candidate for the Commons. It is thought Mr. Patrick Hughes will be the Reform candidate for the Eastern Division. In the Centre Mr. John Macdonald will almost certainly have for his opponent, in the Tory interest, Mr. James Beatty, Q.C., who is terribly anxious to represent something or somebody.

SAYS the Kingston Whig:—"How now about the Neebing Hotel slander, which affirmed that the Government had paid a fancy price for the property named to a political friend, when now it transpires that more has lately been offered for one-third of the self-same property than the Government originally paid for the whole? Much store was set by the Tories on this precious bit of party capital. The purchase has been fully justified by the facts which have since transpired, and of which the above is a specimen. The Neebing Hotel slander is completely exploded."

THE advocates of temperance are wisely widening the circle of their influence in seeking to gain to their cause those who are not strictly abstainers. At a late meeting in Ottawa, the following resolution was passed, which we commend to the attention of the temperance people throughout the country: "That this Alliance desires to include in its membership all those who are in favor of lessening and restricting the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and do now resolve that they will earnestly assist in all means by which such result may be attained, such as shortening the hours during which liquor may be sold, doing away with saloon licenses, and promoting and assisting in the starting of coffee-houses and temperance hotels."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF LIZZIE AND THE CHILD EXPLAINED.

The transfer of the child had been effected without a halt having taken place, and scarcely had Lizzie time to draw the folds of her shawl round the glowing frame of her restored treasure fresh from his cosy bed in Ranald's plaid, when they turned the corner of an out-standing rock, and saw a light glowing through the darkness only a few yards away.

It was a flickering light as from a fire, and as it turned out issued from the open door of a low, roughly built hat, raised against the side of the rock. On a nearer approach, two or three other buildings, of even a meaner character and entirely dark stood in the same rocky recess; but Lizzie's attention was taken from those by a human figure in the open threshold, revealed in strong relief by the light within. It was that of a man, of fow statute, squatly built, and half naked. When first seen he was standing gazing silently towards them, but the moment they drew near enough for the light to fall upon them he uttered an exclamation in Gælic, which had the effect of bringing to the door an old woman, bent with years, and clad in quaint ancient style.

The appearance of the travellers had evidently produced a sensation on these two inmates of the hut, for they manifested every sign of astonishment, and spoke several words in a loud tone, the import of which Lizzie did not understand, but to her ears the tones were unmistakably indicative of surprised interrogation.

They were briefly answered in a low voice by Ranald, who was a few paces in advance, and had hastily thrown himself from the horse, as if to give the explanation out of the prisoner's hearing. The precaution was unnecessary, for as he likewise spoke in Gælic Lizzie would not have been any the wise had she caught the sound of his voice more distinctly. Probably, however, the captors were ignorant of this fact, and were correspondingly cautious.

The reply of Ranald, whatever it was, seemed to allay the astonishment of the young man and the old woman, though both continued to look with great curiosity on Lizzie and the child, who were being assisted to dismount. So soon as they reached the ground the companion of Ranald sprang from the saddle, to the obvious relief of the horse, who, freed from his double burden, violently shook himself, till the smoke rose in a cloud from his steaming sides. Both animals were given in charge of the male inmate of the house, and were led away by him to one of the outhouses.

"This way ma'am," said the leader to Lizzie, pointing to the open door of the house, and directing her to enter. They had all to stoop as they passed the low threshold, and once across they were in a very small fire-lighted apartment, whose walls were nearly as rude as the rocks outside, being composed of rows of irregular-shaped stones, and the intricacies filled with turf or clay, but not so closely that the outer air did not find other outlets than the round holes in the roof which served for chimney. A few black beams stretched across overhead, and rafters equally black, and composed of undressed saplings, rose above these, and resting upon them supported the coarse reeds which formed the thatch of the roof, all being blackened by the smoke of generations.

A very few pieces of furniture, of the rudest construction and most primitive fashion, removed the place a degree or two above a shed or byre. Along one side of the fireplace was a wooden settle, and in the further corner a heather couch, with a dingy blanket spread upon it.

All this was dimly visible to Lizzie as she seated herself on the settle, and the picture of discomfort it presented did not help to give assurance to her anxious mind. But her attention was chiefly fixed on the person of the old withered crone, for she was a woman, and if pity or aid was to be held at all it would be from her. Most eagerly, therefore, did Lizzie scan her face, to see if it gave promise of sympathy or tenderness; and the woman gave her full opportunity to do so, for she stood on the other side of the fireplace gazing at her with great and unconcerned interest. Such a woman's face Lizzie had never looked on—so small, so shrunken, so yellow and wrinkled as it was. Its expression, though not positively malignant, was not encouraging. It betrayed no softness, no human feeling. The interest visible in it was that of mere curiosity, and showed no desire to give comfort or show kindness, though the youth and beauty, and grief-stricken aspect of poor Lizzie might well have moved the hardest woman's heart to compassion.

The child, too—the beautiful, handsome little Alfred, with his clustering brown ringlets, his large wondering eyes, his fair and bright features of freshness and purity—was such a vision of innocence as perhaps had never been seen in that smoke-begrimed hut, and might well have drawn forth the softest promptings of a woman's heart; but this old crone of the hut had either outlived all her finer human feelings or she never had possessed such, for she appeared as insensible to them as the blackened rafters above her head. Perhaps the smoke of years which had dried it had dried her nature, too, with all its springs of sympathy and affection.

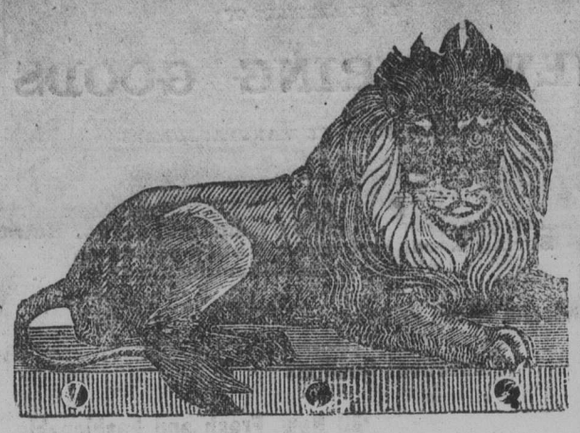
"No help there," moaned Lizzie to herself; yet it was some consolation to know that one of her own sex was near at hand—it made her position less lonely and desperate.

A few words addressed to her in Gælic by the leader caused the old woman to turn away and light a small iron lamp or cruisie, and while she was thus engaged in doing so the man, who had been narrowly watching Lizzie's face, abruptly asked her if she understood Gælic.

"No," replied Lizzie, "I have scarcely ever heard it spoken."

"You do not know a word at all of it, then?"

"Not a word."



He eyed her keenly and searchingly, and being convinced that she spoke the truth, seemed relieved; and he and his companion began freely to converse in the tongue which to their prisoner was unknown. Occasionally the old woman joined in the talk, but her attention was principally occupied in placing on the table—or the rude wooden frame which served as such—a supper of plain but wholesome food in the form of bannocks, oat cakes, cheese and milk. Of these Lizzie was invited to partake of; and despite her strange and alarming situation she managed to do so to an extent which surprised herself.

The child, less able to understand any cause of anxiety or fear, ate ravenously, and when both were satisfied, and Alfred, overcome with sleep, and sank once more into profound slumber, she was told to come with him to the other end of the hut, where on the opposite side of the fireplace and of the rough partition wall was another closed-in apartment, not less comfortless, but more secluded. Here, too, was a couch of heather, which was in form their retiring place for the night, and her captor recommended her to lay down at once, for they must be early astir to resume their journey.

"Now, then," he added, taking a paper from his bosom, "the time has come when answer will be given to the question you have so often asked—'Why you have been brought away from Glenroy'—and the object of those by whose instructions I am acting."

She turned from the couch where she had laid down the sleeping child to rest, and then stood up before him in breathless expectation.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

THE EASTERN QUERTION.

Heavy Fighting in Thessaly.

TURKS BADLY BEATEN.

A Camp of 200,000 Men Being Formed to Operate Against India.

War Excitement Renewed in England.

Germany Favorable.

No Congress.

LONDON, March 28.

An Athens despatch says there has been very heavy fighting in Thessaly. The Turks have met with great reverses.

It is stated that a camp of 200,000 men are forming in Khokand, the destination being to operate against India.

LONDON, March 28.—News from the East received during the past few days has revived the war excitement and the probability of an open rupture between England and Russia.

The Berlin Post is favorably commented upon. It is construed by many that Germany will give at least moral support to England.

The meeting of Congress has failed, owing to Russia's positive refusal to accede to England's demands.

The Reserve Called Out.

Lord Derby Resigned.

Attitude of Austria.

LONDON, March 28.

The Government has issued an order calling out the reserve for immediate active service. In consequence of this action Lord Derby has resigned.

The Daily Telegraph's Vienna despatch says:—A sudden change in the Government attitude is reported. Andrassy has been feigning concurrence with the Court party, and now is preparing, openly to oppose Russia, with the entire Hungarian party at his back.

The Currie Case.

In the Court of Chancery on Wednesday, the Hon. J. G. Currie, of St. Catherines, was struck off the roll of solicitors for dishonest and improper conduct in dealing with a client. The case is an intricate one, but in brief it means that Mr. Currie who was acting for his client, broke faith with him, and in order to keep up the appearance of doing right was guilty of transactions that no lawyer should have indulged in, and which ultimately has proved his ruin.

Manufacturers' Association.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the parent Manufacturers' Association was held in Hamilton on Wednesday, to discuss the feasibility of organizing a Dominion League for the advancement of protective theories generally. After some discussion, a series of resolutions, based upon and similar to those adopted by the delegates at the Toronto meeting of April 14th, 1872, were agreed upon, and the meeting adjourned until 8 p.m.

At the evening meeting there were about thirty present. Mr. Howland, jun., occupied the chair, and Mr. W. H. Frazer acted as secretary. The members of the press were excluded. After stating the object of the meeting, Mr. McKeand and others wished to know what particular productions and manufactures suitable to the country required fostering.

Mr. Howland, Mr. Fraser, and others, explained that the meeting was not called upon at the present stage to enter into particulars on such points, after which exceedingly lucid reply a few further questions were asked and business progressed rapidly. Messrs. D. McInnes, E. Gurney, though absent, James Walker, and Messrs. Tuckett and Mallory, of Hamilton; Mr. Bell, Guelph; Mr. Haggart, Brampton; Mr. Waterman, London; Mr. Cowan, of Oshawa; and Messrs. Staunton and Rogers, of Toronto, were appointed a Provisional Committee to urge the matter in its future stages, and the meeting adjourned.

CHOICE POTATOES.—In a short time the potatoes will begin to sprout, and the potatoe bugs will begin to crawl. Let them crawl—but only once—then apply just one dose of potatoe bug poison. To be got only in its purity from Thorp & Son, hardware and house furnishing, 99 Upper Wyndham street. d

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

Local News.

THE statement that the Rev. Dr. Kilroy proposes to make an extended European tour next summer is not correct.

MR. GEO. GILLESPIE, late of the Maple Leaf Base Ball Club, has left Chicago to reside in British Columbia. He takes a bride along.

IT is not John Mackenzie that will act as License Inspector during the absence of Mr. A. E. Goodfellow in the Old Country, but Alexander Mackenzie.

ROBERT MCADAMS, of the Sarnia Canadian, was in town to-day. He is on a visit to some of his relations living near Harriston, and left for up country this afternoon.

POLICE COURT.—Wm. Lawrence was charged at the Police Court this morning with allowing a cow to run at large. He pleaded guilty, but stated that some person had taken the fence down and allowed the animal to escape. Fined fifty cents.

WHOLESALE men in the eastern part of the Province have been writing to Guelph enquiring what effect the Grangers have have on the business of the town. No visible effect on business here can be noticed as yet from any of the Granges in this section.

THE deep ruts at certain crossings in town are very rough on vehicles. Last evening a hack that was being driven along Glasgow street met with a mishap at a crossing near the residence of Mr. Gowdy. The break-down was not at all pleasant for the occupants of the hack.

FOR ENGLAND.—George Hood leaves today for England, by New York, in charge of cattle purchased in Chicago by Wm. Gordon, and shipped to the English market. He will sail from New York on Saturday. Mr. A. E. Goodfellow leaves today, and will sail by way of Boston.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.—Falling, followed by rising, barometer, brisk northeasterly to northwesterly winds; cloudy weather with rain and snow, followed by clearing and colder weather, are the weather probabilities up to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

THE bachelors' assembly, given in the Caledonian rooms last evening, was well attended—about fifty couples being present. Lawrence's quadrille band furnished the music. It was one of the most agreeable assemblies held during the present season, and the music was better than any of the imported bands.

THE practice for the concert to be given by the Norfolk and Dublin street Methodist churches, on Thursday evening, 4th April, at Mr. Wm. Philp's residence last evening, was well attended by members of the choirs. The choruses will, doubtless, be the best ever given in the town. "Joy, joy, freedom to-day," from the "Gipsey's Warning," will be one of the best.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.—To-morrow being the last Friday in the month, there will be a service in this church at three p.m., when those having children to be baptized are requested to attend. In the evening there will be also a Litany Service at 7.30, when Canon Dixon will continue his series of lectures on the Festival Service. The subject will be, "The history of the two Psalms and their respective teachings. The decay of the corruptive body, compared with the glories and perfections of the incorruptable, both mentally and physically."

"WHAT THE SUNBEAMS SAY."—The Rev. Mr. George M. Milligan, of Old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, will lecture to-morrow evening in St. Andrew's church here, under the auspices of the Young Men's Association. The subject chosen is "What the Sunbeams say," which is said to be one of that distinguished gentleman's most popular lectures. Doubtless a large crowd, desirous of hearing an interesting subject ably handled, will be in attendance. Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock. Tickets may be had at the bookstores for 15c each.

G. C. L. AND D. S.—The regular semi-monthly meeting of this association was held last evening in the Academy hall of St. Ignatius College. Considering the disagreeable state of the weather there was a good attendance of members. After the regular routine of business was disposed of the exercises of the evening were gone through with in the following order:—Mr. E. McEldery gave, as a recitation, a selection from Byron, which was well received. Mr. J. L. Murphy recited Halleck's Marco Bozzaris in capital style, fully sustaining his reputation of being a fair elocutionist. The regular monthly edition of the Literary Review was presented by the editor, Mr. Jas. Wiley. The criticisms were good, and although this number was, comparatively speaking, a small one, it was quite as acceptable as many more pretentious ones that have preceded it. Mr. Jas. Harris was appointed editor for the next number. Some singing by members of the Choral Society brought the exercises to a close. A couple of dramas are in course of preparation, and will be presented shortly after Easter.

AGUE IN THE BREAST.—After the birth of my babe, I suffered severely with ague in my breast. I did everything possible, and tried all remedies suggested by my physician and friends, without benefit. As a last resource tried GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA, which gave me instant relief, and recommended it to all similarly situated.

LILEY FRAZEY, Eastchester,
Westchester Co., N. Y.

NOTHING RELIABLE, so far, has been heard of the fate of Miss Julia Rowswell. Rumours, however, are as rife as ever.

CARRYING A REVOLVER.—Last evening there was considerable excitement in the neighborhood of the Guelph gymnasium. It was all on account of a young man named William Costello, who thought he had a perfect right to threaten Charles Maddock with a revolver, and go to the trouble of cocking the same ready for use while it yet remained in his pocket. Costello refused to pay some money that was justly due to Mr. Maddock, and by giving those present to understand that he could do as he liked he intimated that a revolver was a serviceable article. While he was going through the preliminary arrangements in getting the shooting iron ready for use, he was seized by some parties who were present, dumped on his back and the weapon taken away from him. Policeman Turner was sent for, and it was only on account of the forgiving disposition of Mr. Maddock that prevented his arrest. He was allowed to go, the policeman retaining possession of the revolver, and it is said he left Guelph by an early train this (Thursday) morning. There is a law against the carrying of weapons, and heavy fines are imposed upon those who disregard its provisions. It is therefore a little strange that when the policeman detained the revolver he did not also take charge of the party guilty of the offence.

A CONTEMPTIBLE DODGE.—When the young colored man Vinesse, of Fergus, came to Guelph on Wednesday he heard of the disappearance of Miss Julia Rowswell, and told the story of a young woman arriving in Fergus and wanting assistance. He then stated that she appeared to be some unfortunate who had "loved not wisely but too well." The friends of Miss Rowswell who heard the story knew full well that the young woman in question was not the one they were desirous of finding, and of course paid no further attention to the shady youths' tale. It appears that the longer Vinesse remained in town the more he heard about the young woman. And better than all—in his opinion at all events—he heard there was $25 reward offered for the recovery of Miss Rowswell. On the same poster in which it is intimated that a reward was offered for her recovery was a full description of her appearance and the clothing worn by her. Vinesse evidently thought there was a chance to turn an honest penny, and his story after this was different from the one first told. In consequence of his statements, after reading a description of the girl, Messrs. Galer and Marcon left for Fergus by conveyance to make enquiries. While they were away Vinesse called at Mr. John Anderson's bookstore and intimated to the proprietor that he wanted the $25 reward offered. Mr. Anderson informed him that no doubt the money would be paid if his story turned out to be correct, but until that was determined he would have to wait. Vinesse afterwards called at Mr. Goodeve's residence, having a similar object in view, and then again, at Anderson's bookstore. He failed in his endeavors to raise a certain amount of money he was not entitled to, and eventually left for home at Fergus, where he follows the profession of training trotting horses. Messrs. Galer and Marcon, on visiting Fergus, found out that Vinesse's second story, in regard to the young woman that had been seen in Fergus was incorrect.

THE LONDON CRUELTY.

Hargraves Sentenced to Three Years.

At the London assizes on Wednesday, J. H. Hargraves was arraigned for feloniously doing grievous bodily harm to the girl Annie Sparks, and also for occasioning her grievous bodily harm without intention to injure. By advice of his counsel Hargraves pleaded guilty to the second indictment, whereupon the Crown prosecutor moved the sentence of the Court. The learned judge then sentenced the prisoner to a term of three years' imprisonment in the penitentiary, remarking that had he been tried on the graver charges and been found guilty it would have been his duty to impose a long term of punishment. Had the cruelties to which the prisoner confessed extended a few days only he would have felt inclined to regard the matter as of less consequence, but, inasmuch as they had gone on for months, he felt bound to administer the utmost penalty of the law.

Margaret Donnelly, forewoman of the hair factory, was then arraigned, and similarly pleaded guilty to the charge of misdemeanour, an affidavit being submitted from a physician that imprisonment would prove physically injurious to the prisoner, and on it being urged that she was but a servant in Hargraves' employ, and therefore under his influence, his Lordship took time to consider the sentence he would impose, admitting prisoner to bail meantime in $500 to appear when required.

The prisoner Hargraves is also indicted on two charges of occasioning grievous bodily harm to the boys McGeary. During the proceedings the Court was crowded, as before, with excited citizens anxious to catch a glimpse of Hargraves features, his photographs being in considerable demand, and sold by boys on the streets. Demonstrations similar to those previously described were made by the crowd, but promptly repressed by the Sheriff and his staff.

THE PACIFIC RAILWAY.—The reports of the progress of works of construction on the Canadian Pacific Railway made by contractors, are very satisfactory. The track is laid and the engine running from Winnipeg to Selkirk, a distance of 21¼ miles, and from Selkirk eastward on section 14 of the main line 50 miles. Tenders for track laying, bridging, and ballasting between Winnipeg and Pembina have been before the Department of Public Works since March the first, and the contract will shortly be awarded. This gives 71¼, all told, in working order within the Province of Manitoba at the eastern end of the line. Purcel & Ryan have pushed their work to a very advanced point, and expect to have the road built 113 miles westward from Thunder Bay this fall.

The Acme Blind Roller at McBean & Co.'s, is the long-looked-for—perfect and elegant. d6

That was not a very pretty sight in the Divorce Court the other day, when a lady-plaintiff, seeking for a divorce on account of the infidelity of her lord, conducted her own case, examined witnessed in detail to prove her husband's immoralities, addressed the court on his adulterous enormities, and, to the consternation of the barristers, won the case.

The novel spectacle of selling a negro to the highest bidder was witnessed in the streets of Hickman, Ky., on Saturday last. Mr. James Barkesdale was the auctioneer, and as the negro man stood on the block, and the voice of the auctioneer rose and fell crying the bids, it revived reminiscences of old and by-gone days. The colored people crowded around in anxious expectancy. The negro sold was one John Cooper, who had been previously tried and convicted as a vagrant, and the verdict of the jury was that he should be sold into servitude for six months, as the law provides and directs.

Mr. Campbell, landlord of "The Duke of Wellington," Newcastle-on-tyne, boasts of being the largest subject of Queen Victoria. He was born only in 1856, and measures round the shoulders 96 inches, round the waist 85 inches, and round the calf of the leg 35. He weighs 728 lbs. He was brought up a printer, but compelled from his size to give up the occupation. His appetite is nothing extraordinary, and he is a moderate drinker, but smokes a great deal, to which habit a medical correspondent of the Lancet attributes his having rather irregular action of the heart.

Over in Massachusetts, as we learn from the Springfield Republican, the preachers and temperance people had a lively discussion the other day about the use of wine at the Communion Table. Some maintained that it was simply running into temptation to taste wine on such occasions, and that the original wine at the first table wasn't wine at all, but unfermented grape juice. Others held that it was real wine that was first used, and that a true christian would be protected against injury that might possibly result from tasting it on these occasions. Rev. Mr. Wilson "took no stock in raisin water, syrup and jelly slops at Communion." It is an interesting question, and evidently can be made an exciting one, especially if the ministers get into the discussion, for as a class they are accustomed to speak their minds with tolerable freedom.

The Stewart Hotel for working women, just opened in New York, is a magnificent building, comfortably furnished and devoted to a good purpose. Only women of respectable character will be admitted; and it is said that every precaution will be taken to make the establishment comfortable and pleasant for its guests. But some of its rules are of doubtful wisdom. No cats, dogs, or pet animals will be allowed in the building; nor sewing machines nor extra furniture. But how the place can be anything like a home to a woman when in the absence of masculine company she is not even to be allowed the companionship of some pet of an inferior character; nor the opportunity of home employment; nor the pleasure of extra knick-knacks and fancy articles in her room, is something quite inexplicable. Some fool of a man has evidently been making these rules.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Russia declines to yield to Britain's Demand.

NO CONGRESS TO BE HELD.

The other Powers will not meet without Britain.

March 27.

A despatch from London says the Government has ordered additional horse-boats to be delivered immediately.

The Times says:—To surrender the hope of the Congress is to throw away the only means of submitting the Eastern Question to a quiet consideration.

The utterances from Berlin on the Eastern Question this morning—the semi-official expression since the hitch in the Congress project—are entirely different from the assertions hitherto made. The Berlin Post, which prints nothing political without a purpose, and which is one of Bismarck's organs, says:—

The failure of the Congress would probably result in Russia and England remaining at peace, but arming for war. These prolonged arguments England can infinitely better afford than Russia, as Russia cannot attack England is perfectly in a position to bide her time. The Czar will probably be driven to extend his conquests better to be prepared for a collision when it does occur, but in such a case Austria and Greece would join England to protect their interests. Germany will never fight for Russia or any other foreign interests. Russia, therefore, had better restrain her ambition.

The Manchester Guardian's London correspondent says the situation so far as regards the meeting of the Congress is much improved by the assurances that Lord Derby has received from Count Schouvaloff during the past few hours. There is some fear, however, that smooth words may be intended to quiet England until Ignatieff can negotiate an understanding with Austria.

The New York Herald's St. Petersburg special says the Journal de St. Petersburg, the recognized organ of Prince Gortschakoff, published on Sunday a remarkable resume of the European situation, written entirely by the Chancellor's Secretary. It concludes:—

The moment has arrived when this question should be definitely settled with the concurrence of Continental Europe if it wishes it, without any concurrence, if necessary.

The Berlin Tagblast says:—

Bismarck's latest attempt at mediation between England and Russia has thus far been unsuccessful. His proposal was that Russia should indicate beforehand the points in the treaty which she agrees should be discussed at the Congress. Russia has not yet yielded to this proposal.

The Agence Russe considers the alleged proposal of Bismarck that Russia should indicate beforehand the points of the treaty she was willing should be discussed unlikely to effect a settlement.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—The dead-lock continues. It is stated that Russia is quite ready to make considerable modifications if it can be shown that they are for the general good, and that the Powers will enter the Congress with the desire of arriving at a durable settlement, and not simply to undo what has been done. It is believed, however, that the English Government is animated by a very different spirit.

The Daily Telegraph says:—On Tuesday night Her Majesty's Government received the reply of Prince Gortschakoff. The Cabinet assembled yesterday to consider it. As our Paris correspondent states, the reply is to the effect that Gortschakoff fully understands the wish of England to take up (soulever) the conditions, and the general purport of the provisional treaty, but that from a Russian point of view he must maintain the exercise of a veto upon the discussion of those terms which are considered at St. Petersburg as outside of European jurisdiction and concern. The Telegraph adds:—The natural consequence of Russia's answer is that the Congress will not meet. A Vienna correspondent seems hopeful, and intimates that Austria is endeavoring to arrange a compromise. These sanguine views, however, conflict with the general tenor of the news. This correspondent also declares that Austria has no thought of a Congress without England, nor has any such an idea been suggested elsewhere.

A Paris correspondent says:—A telegram from Bucharest states that the Bessarabian question stands thus:—Russia has agreed it should be brought before the Congress and decided by it, declaring herself ready to keep the Dobrudscha if the Powers pronounce against an exchange.

It is said that the Servian Government having refused to mobilize the army on the northern frontier as a demonstration against Austria without the consent of the Skuptschina, which it was known beforehand would not be given, Russia suggested a suspension of the Constitution. This suggestion has been declined, after nearly causing a Ministerial crisis.

A Bucharest despatch says:—In the Chamber of Deputies the Minister of Foreign Affairs declared that the Treaty of San Stefano was for Roumania null and void.

A Berlin despatch says:—The Powers have declined the suggestion made by Russia that a Congress be held without England. Gortschakoff is endeavoring to bring about a meeting of the three Emperors and three chancellors. Russia is understood to have indicated its willingness to make further concessions to Austria, and some concessions also to Roumania, prompted probably by growing apprehensions of differences with England. Germany has abandoned for the present all idea of issuing invitations for a Congress.

The Times says:—The hope that a Congress will meet has now almost vanished. The disagreement between our Government and that of Russia seems insuperable.

A Paris despatch says the German Government is much disappointed at the failure of the Congress, but thinks negotiations therefore may be successfully renewed.

Vienna advices say to-day's newspapers consider the Congress has failed, and that Austria must now look to the protection of her own interests.

A Vienna despatch says: General Ignatieff was in conference with Count Andrassy this morning, and had an audience with the Emperor in the afternoon. The Political Correspondence says:—

Ignatieff's mission is a proof that the key of the situation, as regards the eventuality of war, is in Vienna, and the Austrian Government must allow England to entertain no doubt that she can not reckon upon Austria.

A Vienna special to Paris reports that Andrassy informed Sir Henry Elliott that Austria would remain neutral in the event of an Anglo-Russian war.

A Constantinople telegram states that Osman Pasha has been appointed Commander-in-Chief.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Grand Duke will probably remain here a week. He dined to-day with the Sultan. The company included several Russian Princes and Generals, and Vefyk, Safvet, Namyk, Raouf, and Osman Pashas. The Sultan is having presents and an Imperial order prepared for the Grand Duke, who will visit him again. A project is being discussed for the erection of a sanitarium for Russian sick on the heights of Buyukdere.

The Vienna Fremdenblatt says Turkey shows no disposition to ask the withdrawal of the British fleet, though Russia has intimated that its presence causes a continuance of the Russian occupation.

The Quebec Government.

The correspondence in reference to the late crisis in Quebec has been laid before the Dominion Parliament. From this correspondence we have no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that the Lieut Governor had always acted with the kindest sentiments and with loyal assistance to Mr. DeBoucherville and his colleagues during their tenure of office. Everything that could have caused conflict between himself and the Cabinet had always been overcome by the good will he had shown in overlooking their irregularities. But these irregularities became too frequent and too glaring, and it was then that the Lieutenant Governor felt it to be his duty to interfere, and in the interests of constitutional Government and the welfare of the people, to curb the power and influence of those rings which seemed to have obtained complete control of the business in the Province, and of the people's representatives who sought to keep themselves in power.

From the history of the whole case now presented to the public, it is clear that the late Government of Mr. De Boucherville was endeavoring by extra subsidies to keep up its strength, in the hope that on account of railway and other influences they would be able to swamp the other side. But this exposure was too much for them, and after the forced acknowledgement of the defeat, the Lieutenant [Governor complains that Mr. DeBoucherville as a rule took his advice and generally approved of it, but he almost always acted as if he had never received it. Notwithstanding, so far from availing himself of his authority to embarrass his acts in any way, he (the Lieutenant-Governor) always showed to him the greatest indulgence, and tried to get along amicably with him as long as he possibly could. His Honour clearly showed that in two notable instances, viz., the appointment of a day of Thanksgiving and the summoning of the Legislature, DeBoucherville issued the proclamation and attached the Lieutenant-Governor's signature to them without consulting the Lieut.-Governor or giving him any notice of his intention. Lieut.-Governor Letellier very properly resents the efforts of Mr. DeBoucherville to treat him as a mere figure head, and his subsequent action must have convinced the ex-Premier that the Lieut.-Governor is something more than a mere puppet.

Among other clearly unconstitutional acts, the Lieut.-Governor cites the cases already referred to, from which it was clearly shown that Mr. DeBoucherville had not the confidence of the people of the Province. The Lieut.-Governor on two occasions remonstrated with his Premier that millions had been voted on subsidies to several railways. Generally their finances seemed to him in such a state as not to require them to undertake to squander subsidies on these numerous enterprises, especially when their credit was passed to the construction of the Q., O. & O. R. R. The Premier confessed to him very sincerely that these enterprises, having for their object the developement of the Province, were necessitated by political causes; that, moreover, the support of the representatives of the counties which were traversed by these railways would cease to belong to the Government; and that there would be no means of having a majority, and that the members would form rings to control the House. He then told him (DeBoucherville) that it was better to save the Province than save the Government; that if his Administration was not strong enough to resist these influences it would be better for him to make a combination with honest men—well meaning men on both sides of the House—rather than submit to the dictation of these rings and the control of these combinations. The Premier failed to follow this advice, however. He went on as he had been doing, seeking to gain the suppport of the people's representatives at the expense of the credit and good name of the Province; and then the Lieutenant Governor, feeling that if he did not step in and use the power entrusted to him by the constitution, the rights of the people would be sacrificed, and their hard earned money squandered, in order to keep the Government in power.

We think that the Lieutenant-Governor has made out a strong case; that he was quite justified in dealing with the DeBoucherville Government as he did; and that when the elections come off, he and the Joly Government will be largely sustained at the polls, and their actions all through the recent crisis be sustained by the people.

Mr. Samuel Wood, late of New York, has bequeathed about $1,000,000 for the endowment of a College of Music in that city. He was one of four brothers—David, Samuel, Abraham and Epenetus—sons of Mr. Samuel Wood, of Rockaway, L. I., where he was born in 1805. In 1814 the four boys went to New York, where they made a vow to work together and never to marry. The one who died first was to leave his property to the other three, the second to the remaining two, and the third to the remaining one. They kept their bargain faithfully. Epenetus died in 1863, David in 1864 and Abraham in 1868. Samuel, though fond of music, was not an educated musician.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, March 27.

In reply to Mr. Farrow, Mr. Cartwright stated that the amount of 25c Dominion scrip now in circulation was $116,500, that the Government did not intend to call it in, and that those who wished to obtain such currency could do so on applying to the Receiver-General, or any of the Assistant-Receivers-General.

The Finance Minister, in reply to Mr. Desjardins, declared that the Government did not intend this session to amend the Insurance Act so as to permit the amalgamation of fire insurance companies.

The Premier stated, in reply to the leader of the Opposition, that the message from His Excellency brought down included all the correspondence in the possession of the Government with reference to the recent change of Administration in Quebec, with the exception of a brief formal note accompanying the return which was now before the House.

Mr. Domville moved for a return of duties collected by the Customs and Inland Revenue Departments at St. John, N.B., from the 1st July, 1876, to the 1st January, 1877, and from the 1st July, 1877, to the 1st January, 1878.

A few Private Bills were advanced a stage, including two Divorce Bills from the Senate, on which divisions took place.

Mr. Barthe moved the second reading of the Bill to repeal the Insolvency Act, contending that the commercial statistics of the Dominion and other trustworthy information showed that the measure operated in favour of dishonest traders.

Mr. Wood claimed that the recent amendments to the Insolvent Law had not been fairly tested, and that no case had been made out for a change.

Mr. Macdonald (Toronto) spoke in favor of the existing law, which he thought was equitable and beneficial to the trade of the country.

Mr. Young pointed out that the repeal of the Act, by destroying the confidence of the commercial community, would be most disastrous at a period when we were emerging from a commercial depression, however strong the arguments might be in favour of such a step being taken tentatively under other circumstances.

The House divided on the amendment of Mr. Wood, that the Bill be read a second time this day six months, which was carried by—Yeas, 99; nays, 55.

It is now very apparent that a deliberate intention exists on the part of the Opposition to protract the proceedings of Parliament indefinitely.

It is stated that Sir A. T. Galt is ready to visit the Eastern Townships in the interests of the new Local Government, and to express before the people how much he disapproves of the policy pursued by the De Boucherville Government.

A MEETING of the Conservatives of North Waterloo was held at Heidlberg on Wednesday, when Messrs Kranz, of Berlin, and Walters, of Bamberg, were unanimously chosen as the party standard-bearers for the Dominion and Local Houses of Parliament at the ensuing elections.

ARCHBISHOP CONROY, Papal Legate, it is said, has addressed a note to all the Roman Catholic Bishops directing them to instruct their clergy from taking part either actively or passively in the Quebec Provincial elections. They are merely to instruct their flocks in their duty as citizens, but not to advise them to take sides with either party, political parties in Canada being esteemed equal by the Church.

THE Globe's Ottawa correspondent says—"Dr. Landerkin, M. P., has just returned from a brief visit home, and expresses himself as having been highly gratified with the heartiness and unanimity with which the Liberals in that part of the Province are preparing for the coming election. He says that if they continue to march shoulder to shoulder as the are now doing, North and South Grey, North and South Bruce, and all the Wellingtons, will each send a Reformer to the next Parliament."

THE Ottawa Free Press says:—"We see it stated that Mr. Bunster, M.P., intends to take an early opportunity of explaining the circumstances connected with the manipulation of the seat for Vancouver's Island for Sir Francis Hincks, then Finance Minister, who was unable to procure a seat in the Province of Ontario. Mr. Bunster's explanations are quite unnecessary. As he explained on the floor of the British Columbia Legislature, he was induced to withdraw his opposition and allow Sir Francis Hincks to be elected by acclamation, on a pledge being given by Lieut.-Governor Trutch (who in this matter acted as political agent for the Dominion Government), that if Sir Francis were elected, a duty would be put on grain imported into British Columbia. Mr. Bunster fulfilled his part of the contract, but, as he bitterly complained in the Legislature, the Lieut.-Governor conveniently forget his promise as soon as Sir Francis was securely seated."

From the report of the Inspector of Mines in Nova Scotia, it appears that the production of the collieries of that Province for the past year was 757,496 tons. This is a considerable increase over the production of the previous year, but still falls slightly short of that of two years ago. The greater quantity of the product was consumed in Nova Scotia, but 118,000 tons ware shipped to the United States, 104,000 to New Brunswick, 95,000 to the Province of Quebec, and 600 tons to South America. Deposits of anthracite coal have been discovered at Point Lepreaux, in the Province, and though they have not been explored thoroughly, great hopes are entertained that they will prove to be very valuable.

After all that has been said about "sweeping reductions," the Grand Central is the only first-class hotel in New York that has made a "sweeping reduction." It offers first-class accommodation for $2.50 and $3.00 per day. cod

First Grand Exhibition of the Season.

OPENING OF OUR

MILLINERY SHOW ROOM,

On Friday, the 5th April, 1878.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR,

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of general depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,

that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from an admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and rejinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lechevalier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse, the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and rejinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

CHAPTER XXIX.

NIGHT.

"Have you not been able to guess the reason of your seizure, its meaning, or the purpose it is meant to serve?" asked Lizzie's abductor, as he stood before her with the folded paper in his hand.

"No," she answered. "I have tried to do so nearly all the way."

"I know that, and I am surprised the truth did not dawn on you. Well, if, it is a puzzle still, the key to it lies in the fact that you are the wife of Harold Logan. Do you understand it now?"

He waited a moment, expecting that she would catch the truth from the hint he had given, but Lizzie's bewilderment was as great as ever, and she shook her head, looking blankly bewildered.

"What, not yet?" he added, rather impatiently. "Well, you are duller than I thought, and I shall have to be more explicit. Being the wife of Harold Logan, your existence and that of your child is inimical to the interests of Sir Gilmour."

"Oh, heaven," gasped Lizzie, on whom the terrible truth now burst like a thunderbolt, "are we to be murdered?"

"No, nothing so extreme as that is intended. All that is necessary for his interest is your permanent seclusion. If that is strictly effected it is all he desires. If worst comes of it, it will be your own fault, or that of your husband. I have been instructed to let you understand this fully; and if you value your own safety and that of your child, you will do what I am now going to ask you. Take this paper and read it. Its contents will tell you its nature. Here is another sheet of paper, with pen and ink. I will leave you for half-an-hour. At the end of that time I will return, when I hope you will have made a copy of the paper, ready to deliver to me. I would advise you not to refuse; if you do, be sure that extremities will be taken."

He put the paper into her hand, her fingers closed on it mechanically, and he withdrew, closing the rude door in his exit.

Lizzie turned to the light, opened the paper in nervous haste, and read it. As she read her eyes swam, her brain reeled, a darkness fell upon her, which took the paper and all things else from her sight, and, groping for a stool which she had noticed in the corner, she sank down upon it, and struggled to the utmost against the agitation and emotion which had overcome her.

The paper she had read contained the words of the letter which, a few days after, reached Harold—where and how we already know. Her first reading of it had an overwhelming effect. She as yet comprehended it but dimly. The words which went to her heart with a sharp pang of agony, and bereft her of sight, of strength, almost of consciousness, were those which had in them the threat of harm to her child. The author of the letter had executed a stroke of fiendish cunning when he penned those words. Full well he knew that they formed a power sufficient to mould Lizzie to the purpose for which they were written. It was a piece of devilish ingenuity this turning a mother's love into a weapon of advantage in an evil hand, and must have had its origin in a scheming brain. Let us say at once that the concoctor of the letter was Jabez McGarry, and when we have revealed that, we need say nothing more to account for its subtle and resistless import.

When by the exercise of a strong effort of will Lizzie overcame the weakness which had well nigh conquered her and struggled again to her feet—when the mist cleared from her eyes and the power of visioned returned—she held the paper to the light and read it again—this time more slowly and with a determined effort to understand it fully. Its meaning and design came to her clearly enough—also it fully enlightened her as to the object of her abduction. The latter step had been resorted to in order that Gilmour might succeed to the title and estate, and this letter which she was required to write to Harold was intended to prevent him from presenting Alfred's claim to be Sir Philip's heir. It was a letter as much to herself as to Harold. It let her know what fate was in store for the child and herself, and on what that fate depended. If Harold kept silent and inactive they would be well treated, but the moment he took action to declare his marriage and secure the boy's right, the latter would be taken from her. Oh, horror! taken from her, and in all likelihood murdered. In that event she also was to be ill-treated, but of that she took no account. It was the threatened loss of her child and the peril to him which filled her with wild alarm and indescribable terror, for she knew it was no mere threat, meant only to frighten her. They would ruthlessly execute it. The length they had already gone showed her they were prepared to proceed to every extremity necessary to secure their object. Her frantic mother's fears were only too well justified. The plotters had placed their diabolic calculations upon them, and not in vain; for had Gilmour Logan or his subtle adviser, M'Garray, been present to see Lizzie now, they would have chuckled to each other in mutual congratulations on the assured success of their scheme.

With a sharp cry and a wild gesture of shuddering apprehension, Lizzie flew to the couch, and flinging herself by the side of her sleeping boy, threw her arms around him, as if to shield him from danger.

"My precious darling!" she sobbed, "they shall not take you from me. They shall not hurt you. Papa must do nothing, nothing to bring this danger to you—this woe to me."

Much more to the same effect she wailed forth in her wild agony over the unconscious form of the dear object of her solicitude, who in the deep sleep of childhood and innocence knew nothing of the anguish which tore his mother's heart.

Suddenly she sprang again to her feet.

"The letter!" she exclaimed, "I must write the letter. He said he would come back in half-an-hour."

In her agitation she had unwittingly crushed the paper in her hand; now she carefully smoothed it out and read it again preparatory to copying it. To her feverish breast its words were too brief, to meagre, too cold in tone, too feeble in emphasis, too wanting in adjuration, she could not be satisfied with barely copying them, she must add others of imploring import to deter Harold from taking one step.

Thus resolved, she knelt on the floor, and placing the sheet of paper on the wooden seat, with the light close to it. She copied the letter which had been given her to transcribe. Its contents were made known to the reader in a former chapter; but we repeat it here—placing in italics the words which Lizzie added to the original document—

"No harm has come to us. We are safe and well, and have the promise of being kindly treated so long as you do nothing. But I am told that the moment you or any one for you makes a statement or advances a claim my child will be taken from me. For heaven's sake, then, do not provoke them to this. If they were to take him away I would go mad or die. I will gladly suffer anything rather than this. I implore you do nothing either openly or secretly, for they have the means of knowing every movement you may make. They threaten harm to me also; but it is the child alone I care for. Oh, say nothing, do nothing, to make me lose him. I am to be allowed to write you at intervals to convince you we are always safe, and well treated. Do nothing; oh, if you love me, do nothing.

"LIZZIE."

Owing to unavoidable circumstances the dedication of Knox Church has been postponed from the 31st March to the 7th April, when the services will be conducted at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., by Prof. Cavin, of Knox College, Toronto, and not by Rev. Dr. Robb, as announced last week. The Rev. George McLellan, of Underwood, will preach at 2:30 p.m. He will also preach at 10 a.m., in Gelic, in the basement. A tea-meeting will be held on the following evening in the basement, after which an adjournment will be made to the church for the vocal and instrumental music, and addresses by reverend and other gentlemen. A good time is anticipated.

FIRE.—On Monday morning, about nine o'clock, smoke was noticed issuing from the upper part of the building on Elora street, occupied by Mrs. Allan as a fancy store and residence. The alarm was sounded and help was soon on hand, which, fortunately, was able to check the fire before any serious damage was done. The engine was prompt on time, but was not required.

The main topics of discussion are O'Donovan Rossa, fine and the weather. Rine, perhaps, receives as much attention as any of them.

At the annual meeting of the Caledonian Society, held in the council chamber on the 14th inst., the following officers were elected for the current year:—Chief, George Gray; 1st Chieftain, Alex. Proctor; 2nd Chieftain, Walter Moore; 3rd Chieftain, John McKenzie; 4th Chieftain, James Smith; 5th Chieftain, Donald McNevin; Junior Secretary, Walter Davidson; Treasurer, Robt. Blackwood. The Society is in a prosperous condition, and it is anticipated that a grand time will be had at their first annual gathering and games next fall. A code of by-laws were adopted, and arrangements were made for the proper carrying out of the Society.

Two young men named George Bird and William Chamberlain, were arrested on Sabbath morning last, for complicity in the late robbery at the Western Station. Up to the time of writing nothing further has been elicited.

GREAT EARTH WORM.—Fritz Muller, of Stajahy, Southern Brazil, contributes to a German journal an account of a gigantic earthworm said to exist in the highlands of the southern provinces. It is called the "minhocao," and is alleged to be fifty yards long and five yards broad, and to be covered with bones like a coat of armor. Wonderful stories are told about it. In forcing through the earth it uproots huge trees, and forms large trenches which divert the courses of streams and turn the land into a morass. Summing up the accounts given of this creature, the Nature says:—"It would appear conclusive that in the high district where the Uruguay and the Parana have their sources, excavations and long trenches are met with, which are undoubtedly the work of some living animal. Generally, if not always, they appear after continued rainy weather, and seem to start from marshes or river beds to enter them again. The accounts as to the size and appearance of the creature are very uncertain." Muller thinks it would be worth while to make further investigation about the minhocao, and to capture it for a zoological garden. At last the sea-serpent seems to be rivaled by a land animal, and on somewhat similar authority.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28. dxw 9m.

EXORCISTS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Elora yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

Montreal Cattle Market.

MONTREAL, March 25.

About 200 cattle were offered for sale at St. Gabriel market to-day, for which a fair demand existed at previous rates. Sales of good to choice fat steers ranged from 4c. @ 4¼ per lb., live weight; common to fair cattle, 3c. @ 3¾ per lb. Seven car loads of extra choice fat cattle, 100 head, arrived at Point St. Charles this morning on their way to England. These cattle, which are remarkably fine stock, were purchased on the Chicago market by F. R. Lingham, who it is stated, bought them for the British Government. Their average weight is 1,400 lbs. each. Mr. Jos. Bellingers, of Waterloo, received thirty-five cattle, and sold one bull for $38; three cattle at $35 each; three do at $35 each, or at the rate of 3½c per lb. Mr. Wm. Head received one car load of cattle from S. L. Head, of Guelph, and sold one pair of oxen at 4½c per lb live weight, three steers for $150, three do for $150, and one bull for $54. He also sold one car of dressed hogs at $5.75 per 100 lbs. Mr. F. Richings, of New Hamburg, received twenty cattle, which beld at $48 each, with $5 off the lot. The receipts of live stock at Point St. Charles last week were 280 cattle, 3 horses, 342 hogs, and 25 calves.

MARKET REPORTS.

Guelph Markets.

GUELPH, March, 28, 1878.

We are unable to chronicle this week any change in prices of grain and produce in this market, chiefly owing, no doubt, to light receipts caused by changeable weather and bad roads. Buyers and dealers seem careless as to whether deliveries are heavy or light, as all America to-day is anxiously looking forward to the final result of the present European complications, and until such time as something definite is arrived at, either war or peace—hitherto large operators refrain from investing to any extent; consequently no one can now foresee what the future market prices for grain, &c., will be in the present crippled state of finances and business in general. Buyers state that they cannot hold out any great inducements to present occupiers of staple articles in the market line.

There is no change to note in prices more than we here append, but on the whole business all over the country, and in fact the whole world, at present seems at a perfect stand still. The quotations are appended:—

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

England and Russia

War Considered Inevitable.

Russian Army around Constantinople Strengthened.

LONDON, March 29.—Journals generally consider that the retirement of Lord Derby strengthens the Cabinet.

A despatch from Athens reports a terrible Turkish massacre near Velo.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 29.—There is considerable feeling in Russian official circles over the action of the English Cabinet calling out reserves. War is now looked upon as inevitable. The press places responsibility upon England.

LONDON, March 29.—It is reported that the Russian army about Constantinople is being reinforced. There is great excitement in this city and throughout the kingdom generally, over the prospect of war with Russia. The course pursued by the Government has been generally applauded.

Destructive Fire Mount Forest.

(By Telegraph to the MERCURY.)

MOUNT FOREST, March 29.

About two o'clock this morning, a fire broke out in the premises ownes by James Scott, and occupied as a furniture depot by John Knowles. The flames spread rapidly and soon communicated with the building adjoining, owned by Mr. James McMullen and occupied by Mr. John Sheppard as a general store. In the course of an hour both buildings were entirely consumed. A large amount of stock was saved, although considerably damaged. John Sheppard insured for $2,000 in the Mercantile; James McMullen $1,000 in the Royal; John Knowles $400 each, in the Western and Waterloo Mutual.

SPEAKING of the defection of the Paris Star from the Reform ranks, the Dundas Banner says:—"In one sense the Star proprietor is a newspaper man. He is the proprietor of a printing office. But it is well known that he is no writer, and that the editorial management of the paper is entirely entrusted to others. The proprietor is not a politician from principle—never was—and never will be. He prints a paper on purely commercial principles—to make money out of it. But this time we fancy he has overreached himself, as in view of all the facts surrounding his recreancy to the reform party, he can never hope to be respected by either Reformers or Conservatives."

BANKRUPT'S INQUESTS.—The following experience of a writer in the Detroit Post, will strike many of our readers as being curiously familiar. Whoever has attended creditors' meetings in Canada will recognize the proceedings, and will say that—with the exception perhaps of the closing scene after the adjournment—the picture is life-like. But the matter is growing by far too monotonous here to be any longer 'laughed' over. We would that each and every creditor should become an 'old fogy,' rather than one 'who isn't particular.' "One who has been there" says he gets more fun out of a meeting of creditors at a bankrupt's inquest than anything he knows of. You go into the room and find, for the most part, a jolly set of fellows smoking, and some crusty old fogies with their "notions" about honesty and dishonesty. A friend of the commercial corpse is generally chosen chairman, and the motion, like every other at a creditor's meeting is "carried." Then the statement is made. There are $80,000 or $100,000 of liabilities and about half that amount nominally in assets. Thirty cents, payable anywhere along in eighteen months, is offered. An old fogy asks one of the firm what he meant by telling him a month before that he had $50,000 stock, and owed only $30,000. Member of the firm thinks he was misunderstood. Another old fogy asks how their books stood at such a date, and says they weren't balanced, and the reason was because they couldn't make 'em balance, whereat everybody laughs. Then some one who isn't so particular, says talking won't help anything and he can't afford to lose time at this meeting as he has several more to attend that day. He says the firm evidently needed capital, and took the only means they knew of to obtain it. Here there is more laughter. If the creditors would accept these terms it would enable them to keep on, get a bigger store, and buy more goods than ever, and "stick" their creditors even worse next time; so he moves to accept the offer. The motion is "carried," the meeting adjourns, and somebody treats all around, the firm coming in for their share of whatever is handed out by the barkeeper.

ANTIQUE POTTERY FOR DECORATION.—A very choice lot and at very low prices, at Day's Bookstore; also a lot of scraps pictures. Day sells cheap.

Local News.

Annual meeting of the Guelph Cricket Club at the Royal Hotel this evening.

REV. MR. HASKELL, of Guelph tent fame, is now laboring with much success in Lyden.

CLOSING EXERCISES of the winter session of the Ontario School of Agriculture this afternoon, commencing at two o'clock.

THE Grand Trunk Railway Company have issued stringent orders against walking on the track. The turnpike is the safest for every foot passenger.

THERE were about a dozen teams from Puslinch in town to-day drawing plaster, which had been purchased wholesale by the members of the Farmers' Club.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.—The weather probabilities for to-day are, moderate to fresh northerly winds, clear to fair weather and frost at night.

THE authorities should take steps towards removing the earth and stones which have accumulated at the culvert over the stream on Northumberland st.

THE Council of Galt is negotiating for the purchase of the Methodist Church property, to be used as an improvement on the Market Square. $4,000 has been offered.

THE Bible Class in connection with Zion Tabernacle, Hamilton, conducted by Mrs. Keefer, wife of the Rev. Benjamin B. Keefer, late of Guelph, gave a very interesting entertainment a few evenings ago. The Hamilton Philharmonic Society assisted in carrying out the programme.

ASSAULT IN PUSLINCH.—This (Friday) morning John Harris was charged by John Clark with having assaulted him on Sunday last, immediately at the conclusion of the church service. Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, for the defendant; and Mr. J. P. MacMillan, for plaintiff. The Magistrate reserved his decision till Monday.

THE ORATORIO OF DANIEL.—This oratorio having been rendered with great success in St. Andrew's Church last week, Mr. Parker and his choir having been urgently solicited, have consented to render it in the Town Hall on Monday evening next. Every arrangement has been made to ensure success, and we bespeak a interesting entertainment. Doors open at 7:30 p.m., admission 15 cents. Proceeds to go to a very deserving object. 2td.

LARCENY.—On Thursday Nellie Fergusson, seventeen years of age, was arrested by Detective Burrows in Toronto on a charge of stealing a purse and a sum of money, the property of a Mrs. Clarke. It appears that the girl, who is said to come from the neighborhood of Guelph, had been staying with complainant. She left after a day or two, and then the money was missed. The case will be investigated in the Police Court this morning. So says the Globe.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—The promised lecture by the Rev. George M. Milligan, M.A., will be delivered this (Friday) evening, in the school room adjoining the church (Rev. J. C. Smith's). As only a limited number of tickets are to be issued, those intending to be present we would counsel to guard against disappointment. Doors open at 7:30; lecture to commence at eight o'clock precisely. The Young Men's Association, under whose auspices this literary entertainment has been furnished, will meet at half-past seven.

THE literary entertainment given by the Young People's Society of the Norfolk street Methodist Church last evening was a success in every particular. In fact entertaiments given in this connection are always successes and the Society, invariably prepares good programmes. The Harris boys gave two violin and organ ducts, and their playing was very pleasing to the audience; Miss Greey sang a solo in good voice; Misses Keeling and Greey, and Messrs. Hutton and Burr were entertaining in a quartette; Miss E. Keables, Miss Jennie Smith and Miss M. Husband gave very interesting readings; Mr. Cooke sang "My Grandfather's Clock," giving the song excellent expression. Mr. Cooke's fine voice and unaffected style was most refreshing. Rev. Mr. Ryckman, as usual, was happy in his remarks from the chair. The Young People's Society moved a vote of thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who so ably assisted them. Considerable amusement was caused by short speeches by Messrs. W. G. Smith and James Schofield in reference to the vote of thanks.

GUELPH'S BAND.—It is with considerable regret that many have learned that the Guelph Band—familiarly known as Lawrence's—has concluded to disband, and have in consequence, according to the terms on which the instruments were furnished by subscription, handed them over to the trustees, Messrs. J. Crowe, Geo. Sleeman and Wm. Sunley. They are now in the care of Mr. John Crowe, waiting further action in the matter. It is certainly a very strange thing that a town the size of Guelph cannot give support enough to an institution of this kind to induce young men to stick together as a company. The reason given for disbanding is, that the incidental expenses connected with the band were too large to justify the members bearing it single handed. The town has considerable musical talent among the young men; the instruments are ready to be used, and if a band is not soon instituted, it will certainly be very strange indeed. There are so many occasions of a public character that the music of a brass band is required to enliven the proceedings, that it is likely some effort will be made to resuscitate the institution that has of late become defunct.

THE Golden Lion is being shifted today.

HON. S. C. WOOD, Minister of Agriculture, Prof. Croft, Prof. Smith, Prof. Buckland, and Sheriff McKellar arrived in town to-day, and are at the closing examinations of the Ontario School of Agriculture, being held this afternoon.

SUNDAY PARADE.—A monthly church parade has been instituted in connection with the Wellington Field Battery. The force will meet at the gun shed on Sunday morning at ten o'clock and march to St. George's church when Rev. Canon Dixon will preach.

MAPLE LEAFS.—The annual meeting of Maple Leaf base ball club will be held at the Royal Hotel, on Tuesday evening next. Election of officers and other important business will be transacted. As Guelph will have an amateur team only this year, it is anticipated that considerable interest will be centred in the team. All interested in the welfare of the club are asked to to be present on the above evening.

TRUE WORDS.—"Those who are inclined to chuckle over Mr. Rine's unpardonable conduct in Stratford, should not forget that the temperance cause is not responsible for it, nor should they seek to condemn that cause on account of the wrongdoing of one of its advocates. Mr. Rine and others may fall, but that should not affect a cause which has nothing to do with the misdeeds of its advocates."

KNIGHTS OF MALTA.—On Thursday evening at a regular meeting of King David's Encampment, No. 2, Knights of Malta, the following officers were duly elected for the current year:

Sir Knight Commander, Wm. Noble.
Generalissimo, Wm. Arnott.
Captain General, Wm. Stewart.
Chaplain, Joseph Garrard.
Recorder, John B. Parks.
Treasurer, — Colvin.
Registrar, Thos. V. Fulljames.
Senior Warden, Wm. Griffin.
Junior Warden, Adam Weider.
Standard Bearer, Joseph Belfry.
Sword Bearer, Charles Acton Burrows.
1st Guard, Geo. Tansley.
2nd Guard, Sylvanius Robertson.
Warder, Richard Tanner.
Tyler, John Johnston.
Installation on the second Thursday in April.

THE search for Miss Rowswell is still being prosecuted. Her brother left last evening to investigate a rumor circulated that a person answering her description was seen in the vicinity of Galt a few days ago, and that she had proceeded as far as the village of Branchton. The Galt Reporter says that the missing lady was, it is supposed, seen by Mr. Wm. Cowan and some others at his place, three miles below Galt, on Wednesday afternoon. The description given in the Guelph papers corresponds exactly with the appearance of the person seen at Mr. Cowan's. She inquired her way to Branchton, and is now supposed to be in that vicinity. At the time she was there the parties to whom she had spoken were unaware of any person being missing. It is possible she may have gone straight on the road to Glenmorris, as she was last seen on that road, but the impression left with those from whom she inquired the way is that she turned towards Branchton. An investigation has shown that the party was not Miss Rowswell.

ACTON.—P. S. Armstrong and A. Brown purpose shipping milk to Toronto during the summer months.——James McGuire has purchased John Maney's hotel business for $840.——James Ryder is rapidly pushing forward matters so as to resume business in the manufacture of carriages.——Mrs. Edward James lately met with a severe accident. It appears that she went to one of the outside doors of her house and reached for something outside with her left hand having hold of the door frame with her right. A gust of wind caused the door to slam on her hand, taking the first finger of the right hand clean off at the first joint.

A Pera correspondent says: — The change in the Italian Cabinet is not considered favourable* for Turkey. Count Courtiff, recently Italian Minister at Constantinople, and now Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Cabinet, was an ally of Gen. Ignatieff, and is a strong pro-Russian. No doubt is felt that his efforts at Rome will be in the same direction, with the object of lending the support of the country to the Russian policy.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. The dog's name was "Shot."

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

March 28.

A petition was presented in favor of the construction of a branch railway from Sault Ste. Marie to connect with the Pacific Railway.

Mr. McCarthy introduced a Bill to make better provision for the trial of controverted elections of members of the House of Commons, by amending and consolidating the Acts now in force on this subject.

The third reading of the Premier's Bill to amend the Public Works Act, was carried.

The Bill to amend the Act respecting conflicting claims to lands in Manitoba, was read a third time and passed.

Mr. Huntington moved the House into Committee on the Bill to amend the Post-office Act of 1875. In answer to Sir John, the hon. gentleman stated that there was no intention to change or weaken the regulation of the Post-office Department that postmasters shall not open letters, and that the existence of a clause like that proposed would itself have a tendency to prohibit objectionable matter passing through the mails.

The Committee reported the Bill.

Mr. Mills moved the second reading of the Bill to facilitate the colonization of Dominion lands by providing for the incorporation of the railway companies and aiding the construction of railways traversing Dominion lands. In explaining the measure the hon. gentleman showed that there was an intimate connection between the progress of railway construction and colonization and the settlement of a country, and averred that there was every reason to suppose that under the policy to which the Bill would give effect the population of our North-western Territories would increase at the rate of fifty-thousand a year during the next decade.

After on animated debate the Bill was read a second time.

The resolution providing for the separation of the offices of Auditor-General and Deputy Minister of Finance passed through Committee, as did the one to amend the Act respecting deck-loads.

Mr. Laflamme moved the second reading of the Bill respecting the Maritime Court of Ontario.

The Bill respecting the Maritime Court of Ontario was read a third time and passed.

The Currie Case.

The facts in connection with this case which has resulted in Mr. Currie's name being struck off the roll of Solicitors are as follows:—A Mr. J. W. Brown made a mortgage to Mr. Currie in September, 1862, on a certain property. In the November following Mr. Currie assigned this mortgage to a Mr. Junkin without Brown's knowledge. In 1863, Brown agreed to exchange his property for a lot owned by a Mr. Wadsworth. Brown and Wadsworth went to Currie, and the former told him to discharge the mortgage, which he, of course, supposed Currie held, on his lot, and accept instead, a mortgage on the lot he was acquiring in exchange from Wadsworth. Currie, without informing either of them that he had made over the mortgage to Junkin, assented and made out the necessary documents, Brown discharging the first mortgage in full. Brown and Wadsworth trusted Currie implicitely, both saying "they had every confidence in him." Junkin died in 1868. In 1871 Wadsworth died, leaving a widow and two children, and Brown, believing all the while that the first mortgage had been discharged by Currie, paid the second one before it became due, and received a regular discharge from Currie. The assignment from Currie to Junkin contained a covenant by the former for the payment of the mortgage money, and under this Currie continued to pay the interest until October, 1874. He then made default, and Junkin's representatives at once came down upon Mr. Brown, who then for the first time learned of Currie's assignment of the mortgage. But Wadsworth having become the purchaser of the land while an assignment of the mortgage stood registered, his estate was held responsible, and Junkin's representatives entered suit aginst Wadsworth's widow and children, and obtained a decree.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

ENGLAND MAKING READY.

Troop-Ships to be Prepared for Immediate Service.

AUSTRIA WILL OPPOSE RUSSIA.

And is Preparing.

Congress Settled as Hopeless.

March 28.

The London News states that representatives of the Admiralty were in Liverpool yesterday inspecting the steamers of several Atlantic companies, with a view to their employment in transporting troops in case of an emergency. An order has been received at Portsmouth that all troop ships must have their hatchways enlarged to allow horses, ambulance and baggage-waggons being lowered,

In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said:—"Russia's reply was received yesterday. She adheres to her previous declaration, and explains that the point of leaving full liberty of appreciation and action to the Powers leaves every Power at liberty to raise such a question as it thinks fit to discuss, and reserves to Russia the liberty to accept or not such discussion."

It is understood that the Royal Message will not enter into a detailed statement of the causes for calling out the reserve.

The House of Lords was crowded this afternoon, many members of the Lower House being present. Lord Derby entered soon after five o'clock, and took a seat below the gangway instead of on the Treasury Bench. He rose almost immediately and announced his resignation as Secretary of Foreign Affairs, which he said had been accepted by the Queen, and he only continued to hold office until the appointment of his successor. He regretted that under the circumstances it would not be justifiable for him to follow the customary course of explaining in detail the difference which led him to resign. The Cabinet had arrived at certain conclusions of a grave and important character in which he was not able to concur. To prevent needless alarm, he would say that he did not consider those measures necessarily tending to bring about war. He gave the Cabinet credit for sincerely desiring European peace, but he could not regard the measures now resolved upon as prudent in the interests of peace or necessary for the safety of the country. When the concurrence of Parliament was asked for the measure of which he had spoken, he would vindicate his opinions. He would state, however, that he did not dissent from the Cabinet's view of the conditions upon which Europe might go into a Congress. He lamented the obstacles to the meeting of the Congress, but the fault did not rest with the Government of this country.

Earl Beaconsfield said he would willingly refrain from noticing the reasons which had influenced Earl Derby to resign until a period when those reasons might be legitimately considered by the House. So much mischief might occur from unnecessary mystery that it was his duty to say that in consequence of the belief of the Government that a Congress would not be held, and that the hopes of rectifying the disturbed balance of power in the Mediterranean had ceased, it was the duty of the Ministers to consider what steps should be taken to prevent impending mischiefs. They had therefore advised Her Majesty to avail herself of her reserve forces. A message to that effect would be laid before Parliament. He deeply deplored that he would not have the support of Earl Derby, when he submitted to Parliament the measures on which the Cabinet had resolved. He had felt of late that the political ties between Earl Derby and himself must soon terminate, but he had believed it would be in a very different and more natural manner, namely, that Earl Beaconsfield would disappear from the scene while Earl Derby would remain to take a leading part in public affairs. He was sustained at the present moment by confidence that the policy of the Government recommended to Her Majesty would tend to the maintenance of her empire, the freedom of Europe, and the greatness and security of the country. (Cheers.)

The Opposition, in the absence of definate information, abstained from discussion for the present.

A Constantinople despatch says: Osman Pasha lunched with Mr. Layard, British Ambassador, at the Embassy yesterday.

A Rome special says:—It is the common opinion here that the Berlin Conference is hopeless, but England is unlikely to venture on a war with Russia.

A Constantinople special states that it is thought that Safvet Pasha will request England to withdraw her fleet, as Russia and Turkey are now allies.

A Portsmouth special says:—Orders have been received at the dockyard for the immediate preparation of all troop-ships belonging to both the Indian and Imperial Governments except the Simean and Assistance for transportation, in the event of an emergency, of an expeditionary army corps. A rumor to this effect has been some time current, but orders now positive and definite have been issued, with the concurrence of the Controller of the Navy.

The Admirality have purchased the large mail steamer Menotas, building on the Tyne, for a troop-ship.

The Post says it is probable either Lord Lyons or the Marquis of Salisbury will succeed Lord Derby.

A Paris despatch says:—There was a panic on the boulevards to-day, and rentes fell to 107 francs 40 centemes.

A Vienna correspondent gives an account of an interview he had with Ignatieff, who declared that he did not wish to join in war, as it certainly would be without result. He argued that the treaty, carefully guarded English and Austrian interests. He saw no reason why England should not take Mitylene if it choose, but the Dardanelles must remain open. He attributed the difference relative to the Congress to a mere misunderstanding of words.

A Vienna special says it is untrue that Andrassy informed Sir Henry Elliott that Austria would remain neutral in the event of an Anglo-Russian war. Things looked very favourable to Russia at the commencement of the week, but have again resumed an uncertain aspect. Andrassy shows no disposition to yield to the persuasions of Ignatieff. The latter only speaks of explanations, not of concessions, to be made by Russia.

The Times St. Petersburg correspondent says the following is the view held there: The British Cabinet, in demanding a formal assurance from Russia, which no other Powers support, must either aim to inflict formal humiliation on Russia, or to get out of the necessity of attending the Congress. In the former case Russia cannot make any concessions. In the latter, the Congress will not be held, and Russia will endeavor to come to an arrangement with Germany and Austria. Thus England condemns herself to isolation, makes the triple alliance a political necessity, and perhaps renders inevitable that radical solution of the Eastern Question which she wishes to prevent.

A St. Petersburg despatch says an excited party there will oppose any concession to Austria which might impair the treaty of San Stefano, which is considered sufficiently humiliating for Russia.

The Times says:—"Russia had adopted an utterly indefensible attitude, and unless she withdraws, it may be necessary for us to be prepared to fully assert our rights.

A Berlin despatch says: Ignatieff seems authorized to promise as the price of Austrian neutrality the restriction of the Bulgarian and Montenegrin frontier and a railway from Salonica to Austrian territory. If these conditions are accepted Russia is expected to take action in the East.

A Vienna despatch says the impression prevails that negotiations must not be regarded altogether as broken off, since Russia just now lays some stress on showing herself as conciliatory as possible to Austria, and as trying to remove a bad impression produced here by the preliminary treaty. This Government more than any other may be in a position to find a compromise satisfactory to both sides.

A Rustchuk despatch says:—The feeling of dislike between the Russians and Roumanians is increasing daily. The Roumanians have also established duties amounting to 15 per cent. on all provisions brought here from Giurgevo.

A Bucharest despatch says:—Premier Bratiano has started for Vienna to interview Ignatieff and Andrassy. He hopes to avert the retrocession of Bessarabia.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Russians have issued a proclamation inviting the Mussulmans to return to their homes in Bulgaria, and warning Bulgarians to preserve tranquility. Two transports with Russian troops have left for Odessa.

Daily Mercury.

FRIDAY EV'G, MARCH 29, 1878

The Eastern Trouble.

We announced yesterday that Lord Derby had resigned, in consequence of the decision of the Government to call out the reserves. He will be succeeded either by Lord Lyons or the Marquis of Salisbury. Matters to-day look more pacific; Austria is again veering round to the side of Britain, and Germany, which has hitherto been playing a fast and lose game, has in the hour of extremity tacitly admitted that if the worst comes to the worst she will throw in her influence with Britain, and, at least, give her a moral support. In the face of this new phase of affairs, Russia, if she is bound to go to war, will require no small amount of courage, for she will have to fight alone.

The Moylan Case.

We thought that after Mr. Moylan was shelved by being appointed Inspector of Penitentaries, we would hear no more about him, but it seems he has turned up once more in a most unaccountable way. Mr. Dymond some two weeks ago moved for papers connected with the payment of several sums to Mr. Moylan by Sir John Macdonald in 1873, ostensibly for printing done, which, however, never was done, and for which no consideration or value was given. In his evidence Mr. Moylan alleges that moneys amounting in the aggregate to $2,500 were paid to him in consideration of a claim he had for printing and advertising on the old Province of Canada—$2,000 having, as he alleges, accrued in the days of the Cartier Macdonald regime in 1861-2, and $500 some three or four years later. Mr. Moylan represented that his efforts to obtain payment from Mr. Sandfield Macdonald, who came into office in 1862, were frustrated owing to his having refused to support the Government of the day. But Mr. Holton, the Finance Minister of the time, put quite a different interpretation on the rejection of the claim. If, too, Mr. Moylan be correct, it will yet have to be explained how Sir John A. Mrdonald came to pay the money so long afterwards out of Dominion funds, and not as a debt of the old Province, but as an advance—or rather series of advances—for printing work to be done and which never was done. The fact, too, that the money was not entered in the Public Accounts, but keep in suspense in a private memorandum book of Mr. Ross, the Accountant of Contingencies, until the day the Macdonald Government fell in 1873, and then only posted in order to protect himself, is a very unsatisfactory feature of the case.

From the above it will be clearly seen that Mr. Moylan's charge at the best was but a trumped up one. He had for years been doing the dirty work of Sir John Macdonald, and had to be paid somehow. John Sandfield Macdonald was too honest and too independent to pay the amount of a bill for which the country had received no value, and so it lay in abeyance from 1862 to 1872 before any action was taken on it. If Moylan had been anxious to press his claim why did he not do so long before that year? We have not far to go for the reason. He had not a shadow of a claim against the Government. But the Freeman, at that time, was the only Catholic organ in Ontario, and Mr. Moylan, as its conductor, brought a pressure to bear on the Government which they dared not resist, especially as they hoped that his paper would fight their cause, and condone their offences in connection with the Pacific Scandal. This was to be the reward for his services, but the difficulty was how to manage it. Sir John's inventive faculties lighted on that fruitful fund of the Contingencies, and so he gave order after order on this convenient fund, to be repaid by printing which was never done, and which it was never intended should be done. Though the amount is small, the principle involved is a most important one, and the way Sir John used his Contingencies Fund shows that he was as reckless of the public funds as he was of Sir Hugh Allan's money. It was given for a corrupt purpose, with Sir John's full knowledge that he was bribing Moylan to help his cause. Mr. Moylan at the same time knew perfectly well what he was getting the money for, and his persistent demands on the Government was a clear proof that he was blackmailing them. The transaction all round is disgraceful in the highest degree, and cannot on any pretence be defended.

In the Lincoln scrutiny trial on Wednesday, Mr. Justice Patterson decided that Mr. Rykert had a majority of twenty-six.

THE Government Liquor Bill is favorably received in the Senate. The extreme opponents of the Government united in praising the measure as a step in the right direction, and whatever criticism was bestowed upon it was exceedingly moderate in tone. That the Bill is so nearly perfect that no valid objections could be raised against it is a high tribute to the care and diligence with which it has been prepared by Mr. Scott.

CHIEF JUSTICE HARRISON has been commenting on the usefulness of the County Judges' Criminal Court and the great saving it has effected to the country. Under the law, as it is now, accused persons obtain a prompt and economical trial, and the country is saved the expense of putting all the machinery of the larger court into operation. Another means by which the administration of justice is greatly facilitated is by the employment of shorthand writers to take down the evidence. Besides saving time, the practice is the means of greatly lessening the expense.

IT would be well for landlords and tenants to keep in mind the provisions of the Bill passed last session by the Ontario Legislature, respecting landlords and tenants. Heretofore landlords had the power to go in and sell everything; and the tenant lost everything for rent due and payable. Now the tenant must have forty-eight hours' notice of the landlord's intention to sell the goods and chattels for rent; when the tenant can give notice that he will give up possession, and the landlord is then precluded from selling anything that is exempt by law. This provision will be the means of saving to the tenant, indeed to many tenants, a large amount of their household stuff. There will no doubt be "tricky" tenants to bother and cheat their landlords, from time to time, but this bill does not go too far in the way of protection to the tenant class.

MR. JOLY, in his address to the electors of the Province of Quebec, puts the matter of the position of the Province fairly and squarely before the people. He says:—"In proportion as light is thrown upon the causes which actuated the Lieutenant-Governor when he exercised his authority in dismissing Hon. Mr. DeBoucherville from office, all doubt upon the constitutionality of that act is disappearing. We assume all its responsibility. With regard to its results there can be no doubt upon this head. That act has saved the Province of Quebec by stopping it upon the very brink of the precipice towards which it was being dragged by the DeBoucherville Government. The career of the late Government was arrested at the moment when, to postpone the bankruptcy which their extravagance had rendered inevitable, they were resorting to direct taxation without a solitary effort to avoid it by means of a wise economy." He concludes with these words:—"The new Cabinet declare that they will abandon the Bill which has for its object the imposition of new taxes. They propose to meet the obligations of the Province, and to carry out the undertakings to the execution of which the public faith has been pledged, by a system of economy and retrenchment, which will render unnecessary the laying of new burthens upon the people."

Canadian Fish.

The value of fish exported from Canada during the year 1877 was $5,874,360; during the year 1876, $5,501,221, and in 1875, $5,380,527. This shows a fair and steady increase for the past three years. Large quantities were sent to different parts of the world, but the greatest portion goes to the West Indies. To the latter place the exports of fish were $2,757,135; to the United States, $1,225,275; to Great Britain, $972,157; to South America, $338,734; to Italy, $213,580; and to British Guinea, $167,955. To all of these places except the last, the exports for 1877 showed an increase over the previous year. More than half the fish exported was cod, the figures reaching $3,330,000, after which mackerel, lobsters and herring to the amount of about $6,000,000 each. The exportation of mackerel shows a decrease of $86,000. There has also been a decrease in most other descriptions, except cod, which show a gain of $350,000. Salmon was exported to the value of $271,000. Portugal took nothing but dry cod; Sweden, mainly pickled herring; Hayti, British Guinea, and Madera various kinds; and Australia nothing but pickled salmon. Cod, herring, and salmon are sent also to Africa. Of the importations into Canada over 50 per cent. are from this country. The fishing officers employed in the outside service number 601, an increase of 19 over last year, and 3,412 licenses to fish were issued, being nearly three times that of the previous year. At present there are seven public establishments for the artificial propagation of fish in the Dominion, and the total number of eggs hatched during the spring of 1877 was over thirteen and one-half millions. The fisheries of the United States yielded in 1876 a grand total of 1,294,038,000 lbs., valued at $75,278,829. And in these various fisheries, 2,188 vessels, with a tonnage of 80,000 are employed.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

OPENING OF OUR

MILLINERY SHOW ROOM,

On Friday, the 5th April, 1878.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR,

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of general depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,

that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from an admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and refinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lechevalier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse, the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and refinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

Harold the Outlaw,

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

Had she obeyed the impulse of affection she would have begun the letter with "My dearest, dearest Harold," and ended with "Your true, devoted wife;" but she divined, and correctly enough, that she would not be allowed to write anything which would indicate her relation to Harold, and therefore confined herself in these particulars to a faithful and literal transcript of what had been written for her. As regards the words she did add, these would not be objected to, for they gave strength and force to the purpose for which it was sent.

No sooner had she done writing than her abductor entered the apartment, and so closely did his coming follow the finishing of her work that it seemed as if he had been watching her through a chink in the partition. Such was indeed the case. The moment he left her he had taken up his station in the other end of the hut, and the instant he saw that the letter was written he appeared in her presence.

"Now, ma'am, is the letter written?" he asked, in quite a civil tone.

"Yes, yes—here it is," she eagerly answered. "But how can it be conveyed at once to Harold—to Mr. Logan, I mean. Shall he get it immediately?"

"Oh, he'll get it ere long, but you need not concern yourself as to how," was the answer, as the man took the two papers, and began to compare them particularly the one with the other.

"Hum—you have added bits," he muttered. "I told you just to copy what was written."

"What I have added is only to urge Harold not to do anything," pleaded Lizzie. "Surely there is no harm in that?"

"Well, no; I think not. As you say, it makes it all the stronger."

The perusal finished, he looked narrowly at every portion of the paper, turned it over and over, and held it between him and the light to make sure that no private mark had been affixed, or anything added which would furnish a clue by which the whereabouts of the writer could be traced. He knew well enough that those into whose hands the letter would first come would submit it to a very minute inspection for the same reason; but he thought it as well to make sure at once, when, in the event of any private mark having been made, the letter could be written anew.

His suspicion was groundless. Lizzie, poor girl, had not once thought of such a deceit. Absorbed by the one great fear of losing her boy, she had no thought of secret stratagem. It would require greater experience of hardship and wrong to elicit any quality of cunning that was in her nature, and cause her to devise means for circumventing her foes. Such thoughts, such efforts might come by-and-by when she had time for reflection; as yet she was a stranger to the ways of guile, and had never need to follow them. They are devised only from two causes, either from an innate tendency of the individual in that tortuous direction, or from the pressure of a hard fate. Lizzie's frank unsuspecting nature had no natural tendency that way; but now that the iron fingers of a cruel necessity are closing upon her, it will not be surprising if a power of cunning is developed within her by the circumstances in which she is forcibly placed, and which may at some future time incite her to plan and plot, to contrive and work for deliverance.

But that time has not come as yet. In the letter she had written, no secret signal lurking, nothing had been done by her to convey private intelligence to Harold, and of this the man was speedily convinced.

He folded the letter, but, without sealing it, placed it again before her, and told her to write on the back—"Mr. Harold Logan."

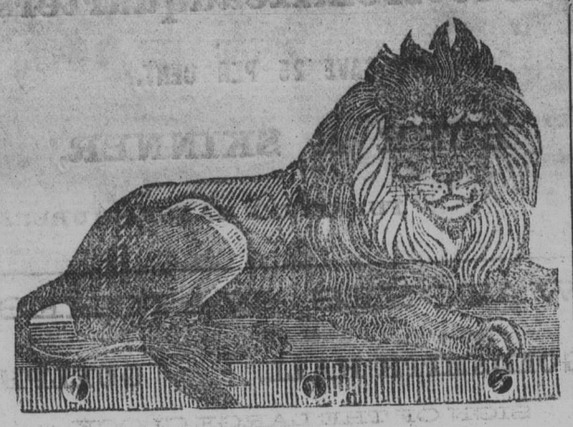
Without speaking a word Lizzie complied, and when she had done her abductor held the paper over the lamp till the ink was dry.

"Now ma'am, I think you had better go to bed," he said. "As I told you already, we have another long journey before us to-morrow, and must be early on the road."

"But the letter!" cried Lizzie. "Oh, do not delay one moment in sending it, for Harold may do something in the meantime."

"Don't distress yourself, ma'am; the letter will be a long way on the road to its destination before sunrise. Take my advice and go to bed and have a good sound sleep. There's just one thing I have to say to you—Don't be foolish enough to try to escape, for you will be very closely watched. If you do, you know what to expect."

He pointed significantly to the sleeping child and vanished. Ah, he had learned the resistless power they had over her through her mother's fear and love, and was not slow to use the terrible weapon against her.



Had fear for her child not been strong enough to deter Lizzie from making an effort to escape there was another reason why she would have been dissuaded from attempting it. Suppose she had been able to make her way unnoticed from the hut, whither could she go? Between her and Glenroy there stretched many weary mountainous miles of a pathless and uninhabited region, through which she could not possibly find her way. To escape from the hut, therefore, was to encounter hunger, fatigue, exhaustion, death—a hopeless prospect, for which even her present untoward position was not to be exchanged.

Left alone for the night, she did her best to make the door secure by placing the stool and other things against it; then, after commending herself and her child—oh, how fervently—to heaven's protection, she laid herself, without undressing, on the heather couch beside her sleeping boy—laid herself down, but not to sleep. Tired and worn out though she was by the day's journey, her mental excitement and terror were stronger than her bodily weariness. Now that she was alone and quiet, her extraordinary situation, and all that it involved of danger and suffering, occupied her racking thoughts. The items of information given by the letter formed the data of her reflections, and these, whether separately or in the aggregate, put a fearful and dismaying prospect before her. First and chiefly, it was intended that she should be permanently separated from Harold—that she and Alfred should henceforth be kept in some unknown place of concealment—among strangers whose business it would be to keep her in seclusion, and prevent the locality of such seclusion from being known to Harold or any of his friends. What a dreary life to look forward to—to see Harold no more, to be deprived of his society, his affection, the solace and support of his manly devotion. All of comfort that was left was the promise given in the letter that she would be allowed to write to Harold occasionally. Ay, to write, but not her own thoughts or feelings—only such letters as were dictated to her—no more and no less. There was no indication that she was to be allowed to receive a letter from him. She would never know, therefore, where or how she was, or how situated — whether safe in hiding among the mountains or cast again into prison, and in danger of his life.

How bitterly she wept in view of this hard, undeserved lot. For hours she literally watered her couch with her tears; and in the pathetic words of the Psalmist, "Her eyes prevented the dawning of the morning." But at length the morning did come, and at the first streak of day penetrated the rude apartment a knocking at the door warned her to be astir. A few minutes hereafter the old hag made her appearance, and beckoned her to come to the other end of the hut. The boy was still asleep, but a soft kiss from his mother's quivering lips awoke him, and he smiled up at her in the rosy freshness of his renewed life. He was a remarkably good-natured child, seldom cried, was hardly ever fretful, his nursing had ever been a matter which gave little trouble, and now, even in circumstances which would have made most children peevish and ill-tempered, he was quiet and docile as usual.

He took a ravenous share of the wholesome breakfast which poor Lizzie had no heart to eat, though it pleased her to see him so ready to devour it. The old woman sat by the side of the peat fire, looking at them but saying nothing, feeling, perhaps, how useless it would be to do so, since the fair-haired stranger did not understand her mountain tongue any more than she did her despised lowland speech. Still there is a language of the heart which can make itself understood in all lands—the language of sympathy, pity, kindness—expressed by look and sigh, but in this also she was dumb. In the old withered frame the fountain of human feeling and human tenderness seemed to have dried up—if it ever flowed there—and left her heart as dry and withered as her wrinkled form.

Who Should Come to Manitoba.

(From the Manitoba Free Press.)

The season's immigration having already commenced to set in, the time seems opportune for giving a few words of advice to the many persons who are doubtless considering whether they shall try to better their prospects by removing to the new fields of labour and enterprise presented so attractively by Manitoba and the North-west Territories.

First of all it is necessary to repeat the caution, which we have given at intervals heretofore, with respect to one particular class, whose experiences in this new country have been generally the reverse of satisfactory. There are no openings whatever here at present for persons desiring employment in genteel occupations. Of clerks, assistants, and salesmen we have enough and to spare. Situations are difficult to obtain, while the exigencies of economy during the long winters frequently oblige employers to diminish the strength of their staff in that season when it is most difficult and unpleasant to find temporary out-door occupation. Persons desiring employment in stores or counting-houses should make sure of situations before they come here; otherwise the chances are they will suffer grievous disappointment.

Even in the case of mechanics we should hesitate to recommend a large accession to the ranks of those already here, who are able to meet the present demands of the public. The conditions are not particularly favorable for stray journeymen finding employment at their craft; but a good workman, with a small capital, would easily find localities to establish himself where his services would be valuable in the young settlements growing up in all parts of the Province.

Manitoba is essentially a farming country, and nowhere in the world does the produce of the soil so readily yield itself to the labor of the agriculturist. Of farmers we cannot have too many; but it should be remembered that, to embark successfully in this, as in any other independent vocation, the possession of a small capital—say at least $1,000—is almost indispensible. It is true that some settlers have managed to get along with less, and yet have thriven; still we should not be warranted in advising any new-comer to venture to plant himself upon the prairie in the forlorn hope of successfully combatting the obstacles that have been overcome by only such persons as are peculiarly fitted by experience and resource to fight this kind of battle.

To the practical farmer with a small capital Manitoba offers unrivalled attractions, for such a man, by the exercise of ordinary thrift and industry, may certainly look forward to an immediate and comfortable living, and to making money at no distant date, when communications with the outer world shall have been secured. In fact, an enterprising, industrious man may fairly hope to attain on a prairie farm in the space of ten years a position that it took his father forty years to reach in the heavily timbered portions of Ontario. It is here, as elsewhere, very advantageous to the new settler to have abundant help in his own family. Among the Mennonites, all work—which is one of the secrets of the immense progress their settlements have made. Farms in Manitoba are easily cultivated by machinery, of which the most suitable kinds are to be obtained at comparatively cheap rates on the spot, several firms who make agricultural implements a specialty having already established well-stocked agencies in the Province. With such aids to labor, a farmer having the help of his growing sons is comparatively independent of the necessity of hiring, and the bulk of the profits consequently accrues to his family.

For the capitalist Manitoba and the Territories furnish unrivalled opportunities. Money is scarce and commands a high rate of interest. Consequently abundant openings for safe investments, at high rates of interest, upon undoubted security are presented. The opportunities for embarking industrial enterprises are very numerous, and the practical business man, with money at command, can hardly fail to find openings that will meet his views.

In conclusion we must not forget to mention one class which can find here a very wide field of employment. The demand for domestic servants is always great, and good girls command excellent wages and comfortable situations. The number of this class is subject to constant reduction as the ranks are depleted by marriage, which is sure to create frequent gaps in a country where there is a disproportion of the sexes, and where one condition is necessary to the success of the young farmer is the possession of a suitable helpmate.

Mr. Thos. Sherin, of San Jose, California, writing to his brother, Mr. Samuel Sherin, of Lakefield, Peterborough county, draws the following very discouraging and gloomy picture of affairs in California: "This is no country for a poor man or any one else. If I were going to advise I would say 'stay away.' Starvation is threatening tens of thousands to day, although it is a lovely country to look at. The hills and valleys are covered with grass or grain about ten inches high, and the gardens are full of flowers. The trees are putting on their green; the almond trees in full bloom; and the oranges are ripe. But notwithstanding all this, it is a miserable country. You never saw so many poor on the road begging for bread to keep them from starving. Provisions are plentiful for cash, although rather high, but there is no work."

After all that has been said about "sweeping reductions," the Grand Central is the only first-class hotel in New York that has made a "sweeping reduction." It offers first-class accommodation for $2.50 and $3.00 per day. cod

KILLED ON THE CANADA SOUTHERN.—On Thursday morning the Canada Southern express, while under full speed at Duart Crossing, ran into a team drawing a waggon containing Edward Warren, formerly of Fingal, and latterly of West Lorne, and Arch. McPhail, of the township of Orford. The former was killed instantly, and the latter so badly injured about the head that his life is despaired of. Warren was a married man, by trade a shoemaker. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his death. McPhail is a single man, who follows farming. The horses, which belonged to McPhail, were both killed instantly.

A CLUE TO A BY-GONE CRIME.—It is reported from St. Alexandre, Canada, that recent developments strongly point to Lapage, hung at Concord for the murder of Josie Langmaid, as the perpetrator of the cold-blooded murder of two women, mother and daughter, at that place ten years ago. The young woman was outraged and mutilated, resembling the Bell and Langmaid murders, to which Lapage confessed.

DRUNK.—Geo. May is not a very good citizen, and he states he was born a bad one, and never expects to be adything else. But he adds as "people cannot most always, generally, sometimes tell," he might turn over a new leaf, and become in every sense respectable as soon as he serves out his present term in gaol. He was liberated from gaol on Wednesday, after serving out a sentence as a vagrant, and on Friday he got drunk. The police arrested him, and this morning he pleaded guilty to the charge and was find $2 and $3.50 costs, or twenty day in gaol. He took the days.

A COLLISION took place on Woolwich street, about eight o'clock last evening, between two vehicles, occupied respectively by Messrs. James Laidlaw and Charles Tolton. The horse driven by the latter was detached in a very lively manner, during the performance of which the whipple tree and shafts were broken, and the animal made off. Tolton and a young man who was with him, were thrown out of the buggy, but were not in any way injured. The horse was recaptured and found to be unhurt. Mr. Laidlaw was more fortunate, as his rig sustained little or no damage.

NEW FIRM.—Messrs. Geo. P. Cormack and Jas. Kelcher have purchased the clothing and furnishing business of Mr. James Cormack, sr., and will continue to carry on merchant tailoring in all its branches at the old stand, No. 1, Wyndham street. Those two young men have considerable business experience, and there is little doubt but what the already large trade built up by Mr. Cormack, sr., will at once be increased. Mr. Geo. Cormack has for years been associated with his father in carrying on his business, and he will therefore know just what is adapted for the trade in this section. From Mr. Kelcher's large country acquaintance, and the value his services were considered while he was a salesman in Guelph, there is good grounds for the firm believing that the trade they will do will be one of more than ordinary proportions. The public should take an early opportunity of reading their advertisement, which will be found elsewhere.

Dr. Tupper is very ill, and is confined to his room, no one being allowed to see him.

"What the Sunbeams Say."

Lecture by Rev. Geo. M. Milligan, M. A.

There is an institution in connection with St. Andrew's Church termed a Young Men's Association, which has for its object the improvement of its members in literary studies. Although only a few months have elapsed since its organization it has already borne fruit that must be highly gratifying to those who have the welfare of St. Andrew's at heart.

The Association was instrumental in procuring the services of Rev. Mr. Milligan, of old St. Andrew's church, Toronto, to deliver his very popular lecture on "What the Sunbeams say," and well pleased and highly edified were those who were fortunate enough to be present on Friday evening to listen to the very able manner in which the subject was handled.

Rev. J. C. Smith, President of the Association, occupied the chair, and after some reference in regard to the work which they had already accomplished, remarked that previous to introducing the lecturer of the evening he would call on Mr. Thompson to give a recitation. That gentleman selected "Jugurtha in Prison; and his rendition of it showed that he was possessed of considerable dramatic power, and had a correct conception of the author's meaning. His delivery would be improved by his making less haste.

Rev. Mr. Milligan was introduced by the chairman. The lecturer at once entered upon the subject in such a manner as to command the attention of the audience. He held that it was the characteristic of a rich mind to be possessed of idiosyncracies. That is that something peculiar to a man's being would imbue all his works. For instance the writings and every sonnet of a Tennyson showed through them the Tennysonian mind. The same applied to other writers, and the same would apply to all great minds. This was not only so with the created mind but also with God the Creator. An inferior mind without an idiosyncracy was a mind without individuality. Wherever one looks God's works are to be seen, and they all bear the impress of his handiwork, and reflect such rays as not only benefit mankind intellectually but also morally. The sunbeams will teach us this. The speaker then dealt very minutely with sunbeams scientifically, holding that chromatic or absorption and radient rays were identical, as the body absorbed the very light when made radient. This law applied to everything, as whatever a man absorbs that will he irradiate—be this either impressions, education or anything else. This could be exemplified by one who reads the Bible. Whatever he believed and absorbed out of the word of God, that would he give out. A person that was utterly without creed was one without a mind. The idea was carried out to a great extent by the speaker and many excellent points were made by fit illustrations. The light which we have in the day time, explained by Tyndall as being nothing but ether tremulous, and darkness as ether at rest was fully gone into, and discussed from a scientific view. The speaker held that instead of scientific thought and research making man irreligious it had the effect of giving to him a greater sense of his own helplessness, and showed how much our bodies were dependent upon that outside of us. The more religion advances the more the world would feel that we are our brother's keeper. This could be realized by the fact that when disgrace fell upon one particular church the humiliation was felt by all the churches alike. The sunbeams also showed us that there was a constant transference as well as transformation of energy. So it was with man, as he could teach others either to become better or worse. Energy and perseverence could never be lost, as our actions could not be neutralized. The lecturer concluded his remarks with an eloquent peroration showing that unconscious influence was the greatest influence we exercised, that perseverence was all that was required and great results would gather.

The lecturer was frequently applauded throughout his address and at its conclusion a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. E. F. B. Johnston and seconded by Mr. James Grant.

Devotional exercises opened and closed the meeting. The attendance was over two hundred.

THE PUSLINCH ASSAULT CASE.—John Clark was charged at the Police Court on Friday with committing an assault on Jno. Harris, on the night of Sunday last, at the Town Hall, Morriston. On that evening religious service was held at the hall by the Plymouth Brethern. Clark attended, and when taking his departure having reached the door at the foot of the stairway he was struck in the face by the fist of some person, whom he could not recognize owing to the darkness of the night. One of the witnesses proved that defendant was seen ascending the stairway after the assault. Another testified that he saw defendant hurrying up the stairway in an excited state, and occasionally looking back as though he expected some person. The strongest evidence against the accused was that of John Perry, who said that on learning that Clark had been abused, and that he (Harris) was the cause of it, took hold of Harris and asked if he was the one that struck Clark, and Harris replied that he did not know. Mr. J. P. MacMillan ably conducted the prosecution and maintained that although there was an absence of direct evidence against the defendant, yet that the circumstantial evidence was sufficient to warant a conviction. The Police Magistrate remarked that it was a most singular case inasmuch as Clark had been struck by some person without the slightest cause or provocation and without any words having been spoken on either side. He added that he would take time to consider his decision and on Monday next would deliver judgment. What makes this case still more singular is the fact His Worship mentioned that he himself had no doubt as to the guilt of the accused, as the latter had been in his (the Magistrate's) room and had confessed that he was the man who struck Clark. As the confession was made in private, His Worship said that he would only decide on the merits of the case from the evidence which had been given in Court.

ONTARIO AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Closing of the Winter Session.

EXHIBITION DAY.

The exercises in connection with the closing of the winter session of the Agricultural College came off on Friday afternoon in the lecture room of the college. There was a large attendance of parties from the town and leading farmers from the surrounding district, all of whom took the liveliest interest in the proceedings. Among the company were Hon. S. C. Wood, Commissioner of Agriculture; Prof. Croft, of Toronto University; Prof. Buckland, Professor of Agriculture Toronto University; Professor Smith, Principal of the Ontario Veterinary College; Sheriff McKellar, Hamilton; Rev. Dr. Barrie, Rev. Messrs. Torrance, Wardrope, Smith, Ryckman, Hamel, Dumortier, W. F. Clarke, Brock, Mr. Otto Klotz, Vice President of the Ontario Mechanics', Institute Association, Messrs. Wm. Whitelaw, L. Parkinson, James Laidlaw, Thomas Laidlaw, M. McPhail, T. Waters, J. Scott, John Hobson, W. Bathgate, John Clark, jr., James Anderson, J. H. Glennie, P. Mahon, D. McCaig, C. Raymond, Geo. Murton, Mayor Howard, R. Melvin, C. Chase, Geo. Elliott, J. Iles, Mr. Boyle, Principal of the Elora common schools, &c., &c.

The Hon. Mr. Wood occupied the chair.

Mr. Johnston, the President, in commencing the proceedings, said that since they last met the Institution had not stood still. Their accommodation had been increased, which was followed by a corresponding increase in the number of students. The increase in the appliances for imparting instruction was not, however, equal to their wants. It was of the first importance that they should have an English master. Two classes of students came to the college—one class mainly from the country, who had no more training than what was obtainable at a common backwoods school; the other class mainly from towns and cities, who were farther advanced. He hoped that before long they would be able to supply the want now so much felt. He referred to the number of farmers' sons who had been taking the winter course and to the great value the instruction would be to them individually, and to the country. The curriculum at present covered a two years course, and it was a question if it should not comprise a third, for at present they were too much crowded in their studies. He then referred to the subjects taught during the first and second year's course. The general result of the examination papers gave over 70 per cent. in the first class; from 50 to 70 per cent in the second class; and from 30 to 50 per cent in the third class.

The second year's class in Practical Agriculture was then called up, and at the request of Mr. Brown, Professor of Agriculture, Prof. Buckland put them through a thorough course of questioning on the subject. The ready and intelligent answers showed that the students had a thorough and extensive knowledge of the subject, and at the close the examiner congratulated them and their teachers on the admirable manner in which they had answered all the questions.

The next class put through was one in Veterinary Pathology. Prof. Smith subjected them to a rigid examination, but they answered as readily and as creditably as the previous class.

Sheriff McKellar, in presenting the prizes in this class, expressed the great pleasure he had in being present. He referred to the early history of the College, and to the troubles that surrounded it, and now when all was past and gone he was much pleased to see before him this fine Hall filled with such a fine lot of intelligent, industrious students. After alluding to the somewhat contemptuous way in which some of the representatives in the Legislature had dealt with the College, he went on to express his pleasure that there were so many young men before him who were about to take to agriculture as a profession. It was a great mistake on the part of many of our young men to leave the farm and take to commercial pursuits. No doubt the lad from the country with his rough and ready clothes was somewhat dazzled with the appearance of the dashing young man about town, who was dressed in immaculate clothes and parted his hair in the middle. But all this was mere surface work, and they should remember that they could engage in no more honorable employment than farming. He again expressed his pleasure in seeing so many students, and at the great interest taken in the Institution, and the evidences they had of their proficiency was alike a credit to their teachers, to themselves, and to the Institution. (Cheers.)

Prof. Croft presented the prizes in Chemistry, and in a jocular way excused himself from asking any questions at the class, as he counted the President and Mr. Bryce, Lecturer on Chemistry, as his children, and that he would likely be rather lenient with the students, whom he might count as his grandchildren.

Mr. D. McCaig, Eramosa, presented the prizes in Mensuration. He said he viewed the present exercises with a great deal of satisfaction. He had taken a deep interest in the Institution from its inception. It was a most important school for farmers' sons, for it greatly widened their range of study, and enabled them to grasp subjects which they would not otherwise become acquainted with. He spoke strongly in favour of instituting an English course, as recommended by President Johnston. This, added to the present curriculum, would ultimately ensure the greater success of the College, which was already doing a good work for the agricultural interests of the Dominion. Farmers' sons had hitherto been too much isolated, and this, to a certain extent, accounted for the fact that their education was not what it ought to be. They have not hitherto enjoyed the advantages that young men intended for the professions enjoyed, and this was to a great extent the reason why the farmers did not occupy the position they should do among men of other callings. He concluded by saying that he was highly pleased at the proficiency of the students, at the success of the course now pursued, and he hoped that that course would be enlarged, and that the College would continue to grow in usefulness.

Mr. D. Boyle, of Elora, in presenting the prizes in Zoology, said he was much pleased with the proceedings, and to find that the students were not altogether confined to instruction on the soil, but that a portion of their time was devoted to the study of natural history.

Mr. Jas. Goldie presented the prizes in Botany.

Rev. Mr. Torrance, Inspector of the Guelph Public Schools, in presenting the prizes in English spoke of the importance of having an English class. He was much pleased with the wide range of subjects embraced in the curriculum,—all of which had a more or less bearing on agriculture. He thought it was a wise move to locate the College near Guelph, and highly complimented the staff of teachers on their efficiency. He hoped the students would make a good use of the knowledge acquired. Our population was rapidly increasing, and it would be necessary to make every acre produce ten times more than it now does.

Mr. Peterson presented the prizes in Mathematics, and said he heartily concurred in the remarks already made with regard to the success of the Institution. As a Canadian he felt a pride in seeing so many young men who intended to turn their attention to farming, and he believed if he had to begin life again that he would take to the avocation they intended to follow. He counselled them not to desert it, but to become lords of the soil.

Mr. Brown, in asking Mr. Wm. Whitelaw to presenting the prizes in Agriculture spoke of the importance of their experiments with cereals, and referred to the remark made by Mr. Goldie last year, that if they could establish the character of even one kind of wheat it would more than meet the entire expense of the Institution. He also referred to the growing importance of the cattle trade, to the great attention devoted to this subject in their studies, which would be of the greatest value to the young men in their practical work.

Rev. Father Hamel presented the prize for the best reader in the Literary Society, awarded by the students themselves, and in doing so spoke of the many things to admire in the exercises of the day, which were calculated to train the mind, and make them not only good farmers but talented readers and speakers.

The Rev. Mr. Wardrope in presenting the prize to the best speaker in the Society, hoped he would devote his life to agriculture, and become not only a good farmer but a useful and influential member of society.

This closed the presentation of prizes, after which Mr. Johnson asked the Hon. Mr. Wood to say a few words. He said that as Commissioner of Agriculture, he took a deep interest in the welfare of the College, and was naturally sincerely anxious for its success, for in Parliament he had to answer all questions with respect to it, and on him rested, to some extent, the credit or discredit attached to it. It was right that everything pertaining to it should be fully discussed in the Legislature. It was a Provincial institution, sustained by the public money, and its management and everything pertaining to it was open to fair criticism. He was indeed much gratified to hear Professor Croft speak so highly of its importance, and also to hear the other gentlemen who had spoken bear such unequivocal testimony on the progress made by the students. They were better judges than he was, and their remarks were not only gratifying to him, but they gave encouragement to the professors and students to persevere in their work. He would honestly confess that when he first became connected with it he felt down hearted, and though he did not admit it publicly, yet his own feeling was that it would not be a success, that it was a mistake, and that ultimately it would have to be abolished. He was much pleased to say that all these fears were now wiped away. (Cheers). He said fearlessly that the question of failure was now out of the question, and could no longer be entertained—that in fact it was a success. (Cheers). He congratulated all present on the fact that there were so many farmers' sons here, and that there were so many who are not farmers' sons, but who intend to follow farming as a profession. Some were of the opinion that the college was intended for farmers' sons only. This is a mistake. They wished to give all young men who intended to follow farming a proper education to fit them for the avocation they had decided to adopt, and to encourage a more scientific and profitable cultivation of the soil. Some grumbled about the institution not paying, but they labored under a great delusion. Why, they never expected it to pay in the sense viewed by some. He never expected to see the time when the farm and college united would pay, because from its very nature and the objects sought to be obtained, it was not reasonable to expect that it should pay. He instanced the case of the Agricultural College in Michigan, which had an endowment of 270,000 acres, an annual income of $17,000, and yet required $13,000 yearly from the State for its maintenance. The experiments that were being conducted here would ultimately be of immense value to the country. Besides, how important it was to have these young men instructed in all the practical work of a farm in addition to the scientific instruction—and not only in that but stock raising, in gardening, and in carpenter work. It is the turning out a class of young men thoroughly qualified as farmers that the college would pay, and the indirect benefit to the farmers and the Province would in time be incalculable. He referred to permission that the Government at Ottawa had given to have 40 of the students enrolled as a division of the Wellington Field Battery. Wellington had good reason to be proud of that battery, and he felt sure that the college division would be a credit to it. (Cheers). He referred to the great importance of stock raising, in connection with the meat trade now established between this country and Britain, and to the value to the students of a thorough knowledge of the whole subject. He was glad to notice that Mr. Brown had paid particular attention to this matter, and he believed it would yet become one of our most important industries. In referring to the agricultural class he thought the Government was wise in spending a portion of the public money for their education, for, as Mr. McKellar said, this not only fitted them for their work but qualified them to take their place in any gathering, or on the floor of parliament. In speaking more immediately of the college he said he was proud to be able to say that all the teachers had faithfully performed their duties. A great responsibility rested on them, and also on the young men, for to the latter was entrusted the character and standing of the college. He spoke of the admirable report of the college for last year, which was the fullest, the clearest and most minute that had ever been presented to the Government, and so highly appreciated was it, that the Government was obliged to order 4,000 copies more to be printed in order to supply the demand.

(Cheers). He was glad to notice that the clergy took such an interest in the institution, as was evidenced by their presence here today. He concluded with the hope that the report of this examination would go out to all parts of the Province, and expressed his utmost confidence in the successful future of the college.

Mr. Wm. Whitelaw in a brief address complimented the Professors on the attainments of the students, and referred to the importance of the experiments in the growth of cereals, the result of which would be of the greatest value to the country.

Professor Smith said that this was the third time he had been present at their examinations, and was glad to notice the large addition to the number of students. The curriculum embraced every important subject, and stock raising was classed among the most important. He spoke of the great value of the horse, cattle and sheep trade of Canada to Britain, and of the great prize ox that had been bred in this county and taken home by Mr. Reeves for exhibition. He was highly pleased with the way in which the questions were answered in his department, which was a credit to the students and to Mr. Grange, their Professor.

Mr. Otto Klotz, said it was the first time he had been present, but he was well pleased with what they had seen and heard.

Mr. James Laidlaw in the course of an excellent speech, referred to the early history of the College and to the battles that had to be fought for it in its dark days. But the clouds had passed away and now there was sunshine. He spoke of the great importance to the country of the College, and of the manifest improvement on the Farm, which was fast becoming a model one. He extended a hearty welcome to the young men who were about to join the ranks of the farmers.

Mr. L. Parkinson referred to the kind of education they received in the old times, and to the value of the instruction given at this Institution. He counselled them not to become the creature of circumstances, but to be the architect of their own fortunes.

Mr. Bathgate related his experience in farming, and pointed out in what way they might become accomplished and influential farmers.

This closed the proceedings, and the company then adjourned to the dining room, where a sumptuous tea had been provided by Miss Dunn, the housekeeper.

After the visitors left the students had their tea, and spent a pleasant evening. Speeches were given by the Professors, teachers and prize takers, and the best of feeling prevailed.

Extensive Fire in Garafraxa.

The Fergus News Record says:—About three o'clock last Saturday morning, the splendid outbuildings connected with Mr. W. H. Hunter's premises in East Garafraxa, were discovered to be on fire, and all the barns and stables were consumed, together with nearly the whole of their contents, two horses only being got out, and one of these was badly burned. The buildings were among the very finest in the county, well arranged throughout, and all nicely painted. The contents comprised 13 horses, old and young; 50 head of cattle, 26 sheep, 10 pigs, 2,000 bushels of grain, of which 1,300 bushels were wheat; and the whole of his implements, harness, &c. The horses were very fine, and we understand that a splendid team which he bought quite recently for $560 was lost. His cattle were among the best in the township, some 13 were thoroughbreds and the remainder all high grades. Mr. Hunter worked 500 acres, and his stock of implements was so extensive and complete that the ruins, after the fire, looked as though a foundry or machine shop had been burned down. It was a sad sight to see the charred remains of the horses and cattle lying in rows where they were confined in their places in the stables. The losses of everything were immense, no less than $170 worth of clover seed having been brought from Toronto only a few days before the fire occurred. The total loss will probably be between $10,000 and $12,000, on which we understand there was only $1,069, or a trifling insurance. The origin of the fire is completely enshrouded in mystery. Mr. Hunter had been in Toronto and got home about 11 o'clock on Friday night, at which time everything appeared to be as usual. About 12 o'clock a man whom he saw in Orangeville, and promised work upon his place, arrived, and all was right then also. About 2 o'clock some members of the household were up attending to a sick child, and still nothing unusual was noticed. But within an hour afterwards the fire broke out with the terrible calamitous results narrated above. Were it not that Mr. Hunter is so universally popular—were it not that he is believed not to have an enemy in the world—one would be inclined to think that the fire was the work of an incendiary. But Mr. Hunter never gave any cause for ill-will, but innumerable causes for gratitude and thankfulness, and hence we incline to the opinion that the conflagration must have been caused by accident—possibly by a spark from the pipe of some tramp who may have entered the building to spend the night. To say that Mr. Hunter has the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community but feebly conveys a correct idea of the state of feeling that exists, as many as two hundred sympathising friends have called upon him in a single day.

CANADIAN METHODIST MAGAZINE FOR APRIL.—Rev. S. Rose, Toronto, publisher. Profusely illustrated. Price $2 a year. Single numbers twenty cents. The article which will attract the greatest attention to this number is that on "The Gates of Quebec and the Dufferin Improvements." It has eleven engravings of the old gates and of the proposed Castle of St. Louis, and the new gates and other improvements suggested by Lord Dufferin. "Over the Alleghanies," is accompanied by several full page and other smaller engravings from the Aldine, the first art journal in America, of their romantic scenery. Lumbering in Canada and Life in a Lumber Shanty are graphically illustrated by both pen and pencil. There is also an interesting illustrated article on the Indian Mission at Fort Simpson, near Alaska, on the Pacific Coast. Wm. Kirby, Esq., author of "The Chien D'Or," contributes a striking poem, "Dead Sea Roses." "Buy-em-of-the-grower," is a story of London life of blended humour and pathos. Rev. James Graham trenchantly reviews Canon Farrar's sermon on Eternal Punishment. Extracts are also given from Prof. Goldwin Smith's "Substitutes for Religion." The editor discusses the Peace of Constantinople and Peace Prospects with the aid of an excellent map of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles and surrounding country. An Easter Anthem with music and several Easter hymns are also given.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Slightly Improved Pacific Feeling.

THE WAR FEELING IN RUSSIA.

Austria Gives No Encouragement to Russia.

March 29.

Sir Stafford Northcote in the House of Commons this afternoon said the distribution of the Congress correspondence was delayed owing to the non-reception of the assent of some of the Powers to its publication. He hoped the Queen's Message regarding the calling out of the reserve would be communicated on Monday and discussed on the Monday following. Since this is the first time this step has been taken it is desirable to ascertain the most correct mode of proceeding.

The Exchange this morning was excited. At certain periods the markets were in a panic. The fall in prices was general, and there has yet been no recovery. The greatest fall is in Russian and Hungarian securities.

At the evening sitting of the House of Commons the Marquis of Hartington pointed out that as on Monday the House was to receive a Royal message, which must indicate that the situation was either one in which war was imminent, or at least the crisis was one of extreme gravity, the Eastern correspondence should contain not only the communications between Russia and England, but communications showing the opinions of the other great Powers.

Sir Stafford Northcote stated that the papers submitted would give full information as to correspondence with all the Powers. He would postpone consideration of the Budget until April the 8th, to enable the House to discuss the Royal message on April the 4th. The Government felt that the time had arrived when they should take a decided step. They also felt in view of recent events, which in a great measure had set aside the force of the treaties under which Turkey had hitherto been governed, it was perfectly right and proper there should be a fresh examination of the question. The Government did not object to the Treaty of San Stefano being taken as a basis for a new arrangement. They had not attempted to stand on any question of form, but only desired a full and fair discussion. They regretted that the efforts to bring it about had not been more satisfactory, but, having resulted as they have, the Government were obliged to consider the position of the country as one of the great Powers having an interest in a European settlement, and obliged also to consider its peculiar interests, and whether it should by means of a Conference or in any other way endeavor to maintain them. He asked to be excused from entering into details as to the course the Government might feel it their duty to adopt.

The Post says:—It is rumored that Mr. Gathorne Hardy, Secretary of State for War, has been raised to the peerage, and succeeds the Marquis of Salisbury as Secretary of State for India. Col. Stanley, now Under-Secretary of War, succeeds Mr. Hardy.

The Post says that Ignatieff will probably visit Berlin, Paris, and Rome, and finally London.

It is announced semi-officially that the Marquis of Salisbury will succeed Lord Derby as Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

A Constantinople special says:—General Nelidoff has addressed a note to the Porte, demanding the dismissal of the British fleet from the neighborhood of Constantinople. Safvet Pasha communicated the note to Minister Layard, who, in accordance with the instructions of the British Government, replied that the fleet would remain until after the departure of the Russians from the environs of Constantinople. The Porte handed the reply to Nelidoff without remark.

The Daily Telegraph announces that the Marquis of Salisbury transacted business in the Foreign Office yesterday.

Earl Derby's resignation has caused no surprise in official circles in St. Petersburg, where it was expected.

A Vienna correspondent of a Paris paper had an interview with Ignatieff, who has not despaired of a meeting of the Congress. The General says, "England, by entering the Sea of Marmora in violation of the treaty of 1856, has placed herself in a difficult position, out of which she was endeavoring to extricate herself in such a manner as would save her amour propre. She consequently puts forward unacceptable demands, but the Russians will stay before Constantinople as long as the British fleet remains in the Sea of Marmora."

The Russian newspapers state that many advantageous offers for letters of marque in case of an Anglo-Russian war have been received from the United States and elsewhere, but none have been accepted so far.

A Vienna despatch says:—It is reported that Ignatieff's first interview with Andrassy has not yielded satisfactory results to Ignatieff, who in a conversation to-day said:—"Andrassy would leave nothing standing of the San Stefano Treaty." It is stated that the attempt has been resumed in Vienna to find a middle course in regard to a Congress, as a compromise between England and Russia.

A Vienna correspondent says:—The views of Austria and Russia are so widely different that the feasibility of an understanding is doubtful. Austria is certainly opposed to any scheme of partition.

A Vienna special says:—The news from England has brought the Ignatieff negotiation to a standstill. Andrassy will at present listen to no proposal, and would certainly, in the event of an Anglo-Russian war insist upon concessions which Russia is now indisposed to make. A Committee of the Austrian general staff has reported that the Treaty of San Stefano would compel Austria to extend her military power over Servia, Montenegro, Bosnia, and Albania.

Belgrade advices state that in consequence of a request from Russian headquarters the Servian Cabinet, after a Council, to-day ordered thirty battalions of Servian troops provisionally to occupy Sophia, the Russian troops there having been ordered to join the army before Constantinople.

A Vienna special says:—It is rumored that Bismarck is making further efforts to assemble a Congress, and has asked England to forward a precise statement of her demands.

A Constantinople despatch says:—On Wednesday the Grand Duke and the Sultan, and Vefyk, and Safvet Pashas had a private conference which lasted three hours.

A Constantinople special announces that the Turks have abandoned Kavak, at the Black Sea entrance of the Bosphorus.

A Pera special states that the visit of the Grand Duke has ended. All the foreign vessels except the English manned their yards as he left in the Imperial yacht on Thursday.

Presentations to Mr. James Paton.

Mr. James Paton, who is one of the party which leaves Guelph for Manitoba on Monday, was very pleasantly surprised on Friday evening. Mr. Paton, we may remark, is a useful and esteemed member of the Guelph Baptist Church. For a number of years he was leader of its choir, and since resigning that position he has rendered most efficient aid in the service of song in the church, both socially and publicly. A number of friends, representing the choir and congregation, met at his residence last evening to give him, on behalf of all, a tangible token of regard. After a time spent in social and religious conversation, an address, expressing a sense of the value of his services, regret at his departure, and hopes for the future prosperity of himself and family, was read by Mr. T. D. Thomas, and a presentation of books made by Miss Wright on behalf of the donors.

Mr. Paton replied in suitable and feeling terms and the gathering, sadly pleasant to all, broke up.

The books presented include a complete sett of "Commentaries on the New Testament" and a number of volumes of "Spurgeon's Sermons." These will form a very pleasing and useful addition to Mr. Paton's library, and will afford the means of whiling profitably away many a lone hour of his pioneer life. Such an expression of fraternal regard speaks well both for Mr. Paton and for the church to which he belongs.

On the occasion of Mr. Paton leaving his employment at the Raymond Sewing Machine Factory several of his fellow-workmen, wishing to testify to him their appreciation of his conduct during the time he has been employed in that factory, presented him on the afternoon of the same day with an address, accompanied by a handsome family Bible and hymn book. The presentation was made by Mr. P. Hunter, on behalf of his fellow-employees. On the fly leaf of each book was written the occasion of its presentation. The address read as follows:—

GUELPH, March 29, 1878.

To Mr. James Paton:

DEAR SIR,—On this the occasion of your leaving our midst to form a new home in a distant part of the country, we cannot let you leave us without showing you some little appreciation of your conduct while working with us. We trust you may be successful in your efforts, and by the Divine aid may attain the prosperity you are striving for. And now, dear Sir, please accept from us, your fellow-workmen, this Holy Bible, also this hymn book, as a small token of our esteem for you; and may the words in them always continue to be your guide while you live, and after death may you realize the blessed promises contained in them. Wishing you and yours farewell and continued good health, is the earnest desire of your fellow-workmen.

The recipient replied in a very happy and feeling speech.

in all its branches. While it is their intention to still retain the prestige of the late firm in turning out superior clothing to any establishment in town, they have also, in consideration of their expenses being wonderfully curtailed, made a MARKED REDUCTION OF PRICES in the various lines, even to such an extent that they feel assured that all their patrons will not only be astonished and satisfied, but constrained to recommend the firm to their friends.

Order Department.

This Department will be under the supervision of a FIRST CLASS CUTTER, the services of whom they have been fortunate enough to secure, and whose reputation is such that it is with the greatest confidence his abilities and skill are submitted to the gentlemen of Guelph and vicinity. All orders will be executed in such a manner as to ensure entire satisfaction to customers. No one will require to don a garment that is not in every respect the very acme of perfection as far as fit and workmanship are concerned. From the fact that a LARGE AND CHOICE STOCK OF CLOTHS will always be kept on hand, there is no fear but that all can be suited in the selection of material.

Gents' Furnishings.

With regard to this department, they are convinced that the time has arrived in the history of all large and well organized establishments which handle men's wearing apparrel, when GENTS' FURNISHINGS, to be attractive, must be constantly replete with staple goods, together with the novelties of the season, and to effect this our purchases shall be frequently and carefully made.

Ready Made Clothing.

Possessing the advantages of being manufacturers as well as retailers of these goods they are enabled to present to the public many lines superior to the general factory made clothing.

CHAPTER XXIX.

NIGHT.

And yet neither of the two men were visible, but when no more breakfast seemed likely to be eaten, the leader entered and desired her to get ready for departure. A refusal or a manifestation of reluctance would have been of no avail; she silently rose, and by this act intimated that she was ready. The man had a faded tartan cloak in his hand which he held towards her.

"You must put on this, ma'am," he quietly said.

"That! oh, no; I would rather not. I do not need it."

"You must."

"Must?"

"Yes, it is necessary,"

"Why necessary?" asked Lizzie, with a wild rush of alarmed suspicion, and holding little Alfred convulsively to her bosom.

"For no reason that need alarm you. Come, ma'am, do not be unreasonable, and don't keep me waiting. Why do you hesitate?"

"Because I fear you mean some evil to me or the child by it. Oh, if you are human—if you are a man, pity my helplessness, and do no further wrong,"

"I pledge you my word that your fear is groundless. I have no sinister purpose in asking you to put on the cloak. Surely you can trust me?"

"Trust you!" she bitterly returned. "How can I trust one who has brought upon me this terrible evil—who is carrying me away into exile, perhaps to death. Since you are capable of doing this, you are capable of deceiving me."

"Bravely said, ma'am, and not without reason," returned the man, reddening a little, and forcing a laugh. Well, the short and long of it is that you must wear this cloak, and I hope you will not compel me to put it on by force."

"Sir, the power is yours, and I yield, since I am unable to do otherwise. But may God forgive you for your very cruel, unmanly conduct to a poor defenceless woman."

"Pshaw, I have no inclination to listen to this. Ill as you may think me, I have not dealt so harshly with you as I might have done. Many a man would have executed his commission more roughly. I have used you as gentle as I could; it will be your own fault if you compel me to take harsher measures."

"No, no," exclaimed Lizzie, subdued in a moment by the threat, to which she attached but one meaning. "I was wrong. I will be patient, obedient. See, I have put on the cloak."

"That's right. Whatever you may think of me I have really the wish to treat you kindly while you are in my charge. Now, are you ready?"

"Yes," responded Lizzie, "I am ready."

"Not quite, ma'am. You've not drawn on the hood of the cloak. I'll take the child till you do so."

"No, no!" responded Lizzie, with a scream of terror. "I can do it with the child in my arms."

The cloak was now put on to the man's satisfaction. Enveloping Lizzie from head to foot, it completely changed her appearance. To outward seeming she was now an old Highland woman, such as might be seen in that district without causing either surprise or remark. And it was doubtless with this object that her abductor required her to wear it, for they had to pass through a glen during the day where the population was not so sparse; and if they should chance to meet or be seen by a shepherd or a cottager, the appearance of Lizzie, wrapped up in a Highland cloak, would neither excite suspicion nor attract notice.

Outside the hut stood Ranald, mounted on one horse, and holding the other by the bridle. Terrified lest he should take the child, as he had done on the preceding day, Lizzie clasped the latter to her bosom with nervous tenacity, and resolved that nothing should part them. Once out of her arms and in Ranald's charge, the latter might gallop off and be no more seen.

"Now, ma'am," said the leader, coming close to where she stood, "you will have to——"

"Stand back," she shrickingly interrupted. "I will not give him up. That man shall not have him."

"I don't mean that he shall. The child is to remain in your own keeping, and the more closely he lies under your cloak I shall be the better pleased. What I was going to say is this, you will have to mount on this cushion behind me, and pass your arms through my belt to steady you. I have left it loose on purpose."

He turned towards the hut and bawled some words in Gaelic, when the old woman came forth with a high stool. Stepping on this, Lizzie was assisted to mount behind the man, who was by this time in the saddle; and being so comfortably seated as circumstances would permit they moved slowly away, with their faces toward the west—towards the clustering mountains, which stood in confused heaps, heights behind heights, peaks behind peaks, away into the distance, till the sky rested on their summits, and clouds and mist rolled slowly between.

It was a dreary, lowering morning, the air was raw and chill, the sky was of a dull, dead, grey color—betoking coming rain. The scene was depressing to the spirits in any circumstances, but doubly so to Lizzie in her present situation. It increased her feeling of desolation, and added to her wretchedness. It seemed visibly to embody the sad fact that love and hope had bid her farewell, that she was passing away for ever into shadow and gloom, to be heard of no more by the friends from whom she had been reft.

She cast a listless look back to the hut where they had passed the night. The old woman stood in the threshold gazing after them—a weird witch-like figure, to Lizzie the very semblance of a sibyl of fate, the leaves of whose book were dark and evil for her. She shuddered at the sight, and was glad when the path wound round the shoulder of a knoll and hid the hag from view.

Ranald rode a little in advance, his only baggage being a quantity of provisions for their use during the day. The horses being fresh stepped out vigorously at a fast walking pace, the road being too uneven for fast riding,

After a considerable interval during which no one spoke, Lizzie suddenly broke the silence by asking her captor if the letter had been sent away.

"Eight hours ago," was the reply, and this was strictly true, for hardly an hour had elapsed after it was written when the young Highlander who resided in the hut with the aged crone was despatched with it, enclosed in another letter. We know to whom it was sent, and where and how it was delivered. It reached the hands of Gilmour Logan at Mount Cairn on his father's burial day; and though the athlete mountaineer lost no time on the journey, which he had to accomplish entirely on foot, his arrival had been anxiously longed for by Gilmour and his cunning counsellor Jabez M'Garry, who were till then ignorant whether the all-important enterprise had failed or succeeded. But the coming of the Highlander and the intelligence he brought changed their restless anxiety into unbounded elation, and enabled them to meet Walter Adamson with unruffled faces when he appeared at the funeral as an uninvited guest.

On went the travellers—on, on, on, amid the winding and turnings of those everlasting hills—sometimes ascending slopes; sometimes going down declivities; at one time threading a dark gorge, at another skirting the brow of a precipice; here traversing a valley; and there following the course of a mountain stream. Only those familiar with the district could keep an intelligent course, and this duty was chiefly entrusted to Randal, who knew the route better than the other. A native of these savage wilds, the confused mass of out-spreading hills was to him like the page of a well-read book. To him every peak and crest had a name—every glen and corry was an open secret. Among the many devious paths which crossed the track, he knew the right one to choose. To Lizzie it was all a bewildering chaos. She only knew that the heights they passed and the new heights they neared increased the now tremendous distance from Glenroy, and silently the tears stole down her cheeks at the thought that mile was being added to mile, lessening and lessening her chance of deliverance.

Sometimes a cottage was to be seen perched on a distant hillside or nestling in a deep hollow, sometimes, too, a shepherd's form was seen far up the slope, but for the most part they by design, no doubt, kept clear of houses and people, and not once did they come into close contact with a human being. Nature herself seemed to lend her aid to their evil deed, for just as they entered a glen where hamlets and separate dwellings abounded a thick mist came down from the mountains and shrouded them from view. The cold, dreary mantle clung to them for three hours, and when it removed itself and a clear atmosphere with a blue sky took its place they had entered a region more sad and solitary than ever, rising and rising by slow but continued ascents till they reached a point of great altitude and looked forth on masses of sharp, splintered rock which vegetation had deserted.

Through this desolate wilderness they rode during the rest of the afternoon, in the course of which the sun, which had been invisible all the day, broke forth with undimmed brightness, as if in mockery, to show the full extent of the bareness around. Such it seemed to Lizzie, as weary now and full of lassitude she turned her aching eyes on the rugged sterility so minutely revealed by the golden light. But a more kindly purpose was revealed ere long, for on topping the crest of a large ridge a western view suddenly opened before them, and a scene of striking beauty presented itself.

The mountains receded to right and left leaving a wide valley between, at the upper end of which flashed and glowed in golden glory the waters of a large loch, with an island in the centre, green and wooded like a colored gem in an emerald setting. Upon the tiny island within a clump of as yet unleaved trees stood a picturesque building, irregular in shape, like an old castle. It was too far off to gather its character—whether it was a mere ruin or still habitable, though most likely the former, seeing that it stood alone in the awful solitude, for solitary the valley was despite its beauty. House or home there was none within the bosom of the encircling mountains, and these rose with great abruptness from the valley, towering in sharp rocky peaks, and casting deep shadows into the valley at their feet, making lonely places where they fell.

But the lesser heights which rose in the valley and spread up to the lower end of the rocks were green with verdure, and in some instances wooded. These the sinking sun shone upon with deep golden radiance, and the contrast presented by their bright hues and the flashing splendor of the sunlit loch made up a picture of exceeding loveliness, confined, condensed, and shut in by the grand old mountains. It seemed altogether a place apart, a sweet isolated spot, sacred to silence and peace, dear to fancy and imagination—such a place as in the days of superstition would be regarded as the home of fairies and kelpies and doubtless many a Highland legend and traditionary tale had its origin amid the still recesses of that singular hollow among the mountains.

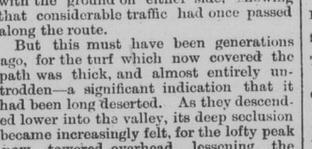
It was into this valley that the travellers descended, by what had once evidently been a hard beaten path, for though grass grown it was well defined, and art, and labor had been bestowed at some places in its construction. In one part, where a ledge of rock jutted out, it had been cut away to make a passage round the brow of the crag; in another a narrow gorge had been filled up and made level with the ground on either side, showing that considerable traffic had once passed along the route.

But this must have been generations ago, for the turf which now covered the path was thick, and almost entirely untrodden—a significant indication that it had been long deserted. As they descended lower into the valley, its deep seclusion became increasingly felt, for the lofty peak now towered overhead, lessening the breadth of sky and confining the vision to narrower limits.

The path kept on in the direction of the lake, but for some time a few intervening heights had hid it from their view. All at once they came in sight of it, lying almost at their feet, and a few hundred yards of the winding road brought them to its eastern shore, where the water rippled in tiny waves on a fine pebbly beach.

As they approached the leader took out a whistle, and placing it to his lips he emitted a shrill startling sound, which raised a thousand echoes, and by them was repeated in many retreating cadences till these died into distance.

He looked across the loch towards the island as if expecting his signal to be noticed there. Presently it was answered by another whistle as shrill and prolonged, and at the end of several minutes a boat was seen putting off from a recess under the pile of building. It had but one occupant—a short, broad shouldered man, who rowed vigorously and soon brought his boat towards the shore at a point where they had stopped, and where a strong, roughly constructed landing place ran a little way into the water. This also seemed to have been little used of late, for the stones down to the very brink were moss-grown.



The two men dismounted, and the leader held out his hand to Lizzie to help her alight also.

"Now, ma'am," he said, "your journey is nearly ended. Yonder building is to be your residence."

"My prison, you mean," said Lizzie, with a shudder, "Here I shall indeed be hidden from all human knowledge—I and my poor, unfriended boy."

He turned from her without a word, and, going down to the water's edge, awaited the coming of the boat.

THAT WONDERFUL MAN.

First Grand Exhibition of the Season.

OPENING OF OUR

MILLINERY SHOW ROOM,

On Friday, the 5th April, 1878.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR.

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of general depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,

that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from an admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and refinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lechevalier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse, the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and refinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

The Acme Blind Roller at McBean & Co.'s, is the long-looked-for—perfect and elegant. d6

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

The Feeling in Favour of Britain.

TURKEY LEANING TOWARDS RUSSIA.

LONDON, April 1.—Despatches from Berlin, Paris, and Vienna state that the popular feeling in these cities, among the masses, favor England against Russia in the present state of affairs.

A Constantinople despatch states that the Russians are fortifying their lines at Tchatdja. General Popoff has arrived at Constantinople.

All advices from the Turkish capital report that the Turks show a leaning towards Russia as against England.

THE QUEEN'S PROCLAMATION.

The Reserves Called Out for Permanent Service.

LONDON, April 1.

The Queen's proclamation was submitted to Parliament to-day. It says that in consequence of the condition of the Eastern affairs and interests of the Empire, in its present great emergency the army and militia reserves are ordered out for permanent service.

Local News.

REMEMBER Oratorio of Daniel in Town Hall to-night. Admission 15c.

MR. A. M. MCKINNON has removed his office to McQuillan's Block, Upper Wyndham street.

PROF. TANNEY of "Esther" notoriety, is now in Lindsay drilling a class for the purpose of putting the above Oratorio on the boards.

BASE BALL.—Mike Dinnen, the second baseman of the Tecumsehs, has been released by the directors, and will play with the Fall Rivers during the coming season.

IN the Puslinch assault case published in Saturday's issue the names of the plaintiff and defendant were transposed in the first sentence. John Clark was plaintiff and John Harris defendant.

THE Woodstock Review claims a circulation of over 4,000 copies, and holds it to be "the largest circulation of any journal in Ontario, outside the principal cities—with the exception of one in Guelph." The MERCURY is referred to. The publisher of the Review claims to know whereof he speaks.

ON Sunday afternoon the funeral of the late John Brandon, who died on the 29th ult., took place from his residence on Arthur street, to the Roman Catholic cemetery. The members of the St. Patrick's Catholic Benevolent Society attended in a body, and wore badges of mourning. The body was taken to St. Bartholomew's Church, where services were conducted; and afterwards to the grave. The funeral cortege was a very large one, there being about sixty vehicles in it.

STRATFORD has a salvage corps established in connection with their fire company, to save goods and protect them in case of fire. For this purpose they have purchased a carriage whereon to carry their apparatus, such as Babcocks, buckets, canvas bags, baskets, escape ladders, ropes, axes, and other necessaries at a fire. Each member is also provided with a protector for the mouth, nose, and eyes, when entering a building where the smoke is very intense. Guelph might with profit follow the example of Stratford.

DISORDERLY.—On Saturday night, about twelve o'clock, a number of young men appeared to the peaceable inhabitants of the West Ward to be on a magnificent "whirl." At all events they marched around several of the streets singing at the top of their voices, "In the sweet by and by." The singing was done nice and huskily, but as the Arapahoe war whoop was given occasionally, it was almost impossible to tell when the singing broke off and where the whoop came in. Two very quiet, respectable and pious young men, residing on Emma street, west of Green, were subjected to a serenade.

THIS EVENING.—Town Council at 7:30. It is expected that some important reports will be dealt with.—Rev. W. S. Griffin, a well-known and popular clergyman, will lecture in the Norfolk street Methodist Church. Subject: "Patriotism, not Partyism;" eight o'clock.—Cantata of Daniel in the Town Hall, under the direction of Mr. W. T. Parker. There will be a chorus of fifty voices.—Mr. Geo. Balkwill will be dined and wined at the Mitchell House. There is to be a presentation.—True Blues' dramatic entertainment in the O. Y. B. lodge room. "Paddy Miles, the Limerick boy," and "Turn Him Out"—popular pieces.—Regular monthly meeting of Guelph Caledonian Society.

LOCH & GALBRAITH have lately been marking down goods to very low figures. Their crockery and glassware is now remarkably cheap and large sales are being made every day. An inspection of goods and prices is asked.

REMEMBER Oratorio of Daniel in Town Hall to-night. Admission 15c.

MODERATE to fresh north-westerly to north-easterly winds; clear to warm weather are the weather probabilities received this morning.

THE UNION CONCERT.—We learn that nearly two hundred reserve seats have already been secured for this concert, which is to come off on Thursday evening.

IN TROUBLE.—Several hack drivers were in trouble at the Police Court this morning. The cause of it all was that they saw fit to trespass upon the Grand Trunk Company's grounds, at the passenger depot, for the purpose of soliciting fares. Wm. Murray, operator, was the prosecutor. Wm. Perry and John Welsh were fined $1 each and $2.25 costs. James Rae got off by pleading ignorance of the law, that he was a new hack driver, and had done the same as he had seen other drivers do when he went on the platform. The case against Samuel Ewing was withdrawn.

THE anniversary services in connection with the Norfolk street Methodist Church were conducted yesterday by Rev. W. S. Griffin, of Hamilton. Both diets of worship were largely attended, and the sermons, both morning and evening, were listened to by large congregations, not only of the Methodist denomination, but from other churches. The discourses were eloquent. The text chosen in the morning was part of the 14th verse of the 6th chapter of Galations: "But God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ;" and in the evening from the 12th chapter I. Corinthians, a part of the 31st verse: "But covet earnestly the best gifts."

CHURCH PARADE.—On Sunday morning the Right Division of the Wellington Field Battery assembled at the Gun Shed for parade at Knox Church. There was a good turn out, and the officers and men presented a strikingly handsome appearance. The former carried their side-arms and the latter wore the busby and cross-belt. The text chosen by Rev. Mr. Ball, who conducted the service, was 1st Chron. 12—32:—"And the children of Issachar, which were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do; the heads of them were two hundred; and all their brethren were at their commandment." The sermon was listened to with great interest throughout, and at times the reverend gentleman addressed himself particularly to the military present. It is the intention of the commanding officer to have monthly church parades.

WIDE TIRES.—The Guelph Council has had at various times the subject of wide tires under consideration, but as yet no By-law has been passed to make it compulsory for parties to use a certain width. It is a self-evident fact, that were the use of wider ties on waggons on which heavy loads are drawn rendered compulsory, a great saving might be effected every year in the amount which it is necessary to expend in keeping the principal streets in repair. A By-law to that effect has been found to operate beneficially in Hamilton. A Belleville paper says that this is a matter that might profitably be considered not only by city councils but by county and township authorities. It is an acknowledged fact that the drawing of heavy loads of lumber on the leading highways does more than anything else to cut up the road beds. If the tires of lumber waggons were of the width that the weight of the load required, the damage to the roads would be reduced to a minimum, and thousands of dollars now expended yearly in filling up ruts would be saved.

KING DODDS.—An advertisement appears in another column intimating that E. King Dodds will lecture in the Town Hall to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, on the subject of "True Temperance." The Barrie Examiner in speaking of the lecture in that town recently, says:—"E. King Dodds, the celebrated champion of the 'other side,' gave a lecture in the Town Hall, on the evening of Monday last, to an audience of nearly 500 persons. The lecturer is, certainly, a very able speaker. He neither 'ranted' nor 'roared,' but handled his subject with consummate ability. He argued that prohibition, in any shape, was more than a fallacy, it was a positively injurious enactment, and corrupted the morals of the people, by training them to evade the law; it also perverted the appetite, by lessening the drinking of light wines and beer, which were comparatively harmless, and 'educated' the appetite for liquor, which was an unmixed evil. The speaker called upon all parties to unite and agitate for a high license for the sale of liquors, and a light one for selling beer, &c. The talented lecturer was frequently applauded during the hour and a half that it took him to deliver his address. We may here add that, in speaking of his opponents, Mr. Dodds, though cutting in his remarks, was neither coarse, vulgar, nor unfair; and, in this respect, many temperance orators will do well to take a leaf out the lecturer's book."

BOOKS.—Several noble-hearted ladies have for some time been making endeavors to procure a library for the Guelph General Hospital whereby patients, that are convalescent, might while away the weary hours they perforce have to spend before receiving their discharge. Sickness, under the best of circumstances, is a terrible affliction on humanity, but it is doubly so when the fever or disease has spent itself and there is nothing for the patient to do but in the day time wish for night, and during the night time wish for day. If books could be furnished them it would do much towards restoring the poor unfortunates to a better state of health. There are very few people in the town of Guelph or county of Wellington who have not, at least, one or two books to spare out of their library or collection, and if those who have would kindly forward them to Mr. E. Newton, Guelph, they would be applied to the purpose for which they were intended. No doubt many will respond to this appeal on behalf of the Guelph General Hospital.

POOR MISS ROWSWELL.

Her Body Found in Two Feet of Water near the Dundas Bridge.

The Features Very Little Changed.

After an excitement of ten days and a half, Miss Julia Rowswell, the young lady who so mysteriously disappeared from the residence of Mr. A. H. Geodeve, on Duke street, has been found. Every conceivable place had been searched,—in the woods, through the swamps and along the margin of the rivers, and even portions of the Speed had been dragged, but all without success. Mr. Rowswell, brother of the young lady, after a continued search of a week, returned to his home in Allan Park, believing that further search was virtually useless.

The matter during the past few days has only been spoken of as very mysterious that no trace could be found, but the subject was revived with startling distinctness about two o'clock to-day (Monday) when it was rumored that her body had been found in the river near the Dundas bridge, a little south of Kaye's boat house.

Three young men named Ed. Schofield, Geo. Atkinson and Herbert Hatch were out shooting and observing some clothing, as though a portion of a dress, floating in the spot indicated, about six yards from the shore they procured a boat and pulled out to the spot. Their fears that it was the body of Miss Rowswell were realized. They left it there and informed Coroner Keating and afterwards Chief Kelly.

The position the body occupied in the water, which was only between two and three feet deep, was nearly altogether on her face, with her head pointing down the stream. It appeared as though she had been in the same place for some time, judging from the sediment that had gathered around her, and from the fact that all the clothing, it was supposed she had on, even to the rubbers, were still on her.

This fact, and also the fact that a Mr. Watson saw a young woman running down Gordon street in the direction of the Dundas bridge about two o'clock on the morning she was missed, naturally leads to the supposition that she must have entered the river near the spot where she was found.

When the body was taken out it was found to be swollen very slightly. Her features were unaltered, with the exception of a slight puffing-up of the nose and lips. Her ears still retained the rings that she was accustomed to wear, and her dress was complete as has already been given in description of her.

The body was wrapped in a blanket and taken to the drill shed, where it is now lying, and where hundreds of people crowded in to view it the few moments the doors were open.

An inquest will be held on the body at half-past seven o'clock this evening.

The young lady's brother has been telegraphed for, and it is likely he will arrive here to-morrow.

RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—At the annual meeting of the Guelph Rifle Association, the reports presented by the Secretary and Treasurer showed that the Society was in an excellent condition. The following officers for 1878 were elected:—W. H. Marcon, President; Geo. Barber, vice-president; John Crowe, Secretary and Treasurer. Messrs. John Ogg, R. W. Stewart, W. J. Watson, T. Mitchell, J. H. Moore, and W. Macdonald were appointed to the Managing Committee. Votes of thanks were tendered the retiring officers: Dr. Macdonald, Presinent; J. Ogg, Vice-President; and W. Macdonald, Secretary.

WOODSTOCK REVIEW.—The last number of this first-class paper announced the retirement of Mr. Gissing, who for about eight years conducted it with signal success, and made it one of the best and most influential Reform journals in the western part of the Province. His partner, Mr. Robert Laidlaw, is now sole proprietor. In his hands we have every expectation that the Review will be kept up to the high standard it has attained, and that his energy and experience will keep it is the forefront among its contemporaries. While regretting Mr. Gissing's severance from our ranks, we hope that he will enjoy his well earned ease, and that his successor will meet with the largest measure of success in conducting the Review.

DESECRATION.—Many are aware that Guelph like other places has lads and young men that are not at all particular as to the manner of observing the sanctity of the Sabbath. Yesterday a party followed the river running parallel with Waterloo Avenue, for some distance for the purpose of keeping a lookout for the body of the missing Julia Rowswell, When near Gow's bush they found a number of young fellows pitching quoits, and by way of diversion to their sport, swearing like troopers in Flanders. A little further on in the vicinity of the red mill a second squad of youths were seen intently engaged in playing cards. Both of the parties by engaging in such sports render themselves amenable to the law, and as a watch is to be kept on the proceedings in the neighborhood referred to in future, more might be heard of the same parties by their enforced interview with the Police Magistrate.

THE Fergus News Record pays Mr. Alex. Dyce, ex-President of the Centre Wellington Reform Association, a well-deserved compliment on his retirement from office. Mr. Dyce held the position for many years, and on all occasions discharged the duties alike with credit to himself and satisfaction to the party. He is one of the sterling pioneers who fought the battles of Reform at a time when it was less popular to do so than it is to-day.

The Great Western Railway Company of Canada has obtained control of the Detroit and Milwaukee line of railway. The total encumberances on the property amounts to $5,810,876.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Matters More Pacific To-day.

Russia Disposed to Yield.

Russia Fails to Bribe Austria.

Turkey Will Not Fight Against Britain.

March 31.

The Pall Mall Gazette last evening said:—"England and Russia are too definitely committed to the positions which they have respectively assumed to allow any withdrawal. The difference is so essentially one of principle that it is impossible for any third Power to suggest an acceptable compromise. An advance of Russian troops to the Bosphorus and on Gallipoli may be immediately expected." The Pall Mall Gazette is the property of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

A Times editorial says:—Neither the objects Russia proclaimed at the outset, nor the events of the war, justified her advance upon Constantinople or her approach to the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles. So long as she remains in that menacing position we shall feel it necessary to retain our ships in the Sea of Marmora, and so long will peace be uncertain.

An impression prevails that the motive for Lord Derby's resignation was more serious than the calling out of the reserves. A belief is current that some step for the safe-guarding of British interests, like the entry of the fleet into the Black Sea, or the occupation of Gallipoli, has been determined upon.

The Paris papers publish a telegram from Athens stating that a rumour is current there that England has asked permission to encamp an expeditionary corps on Greek territory.

The following notice has been prepared for issue to officers of districts throughout the Kingdom:—

Her Majesty having been graciously pleased to direct by proclamation that the first-class of the army reserve force be ordered out for permanent service, all men belonging to said reserve are required to report at headquarters on or before ——, for the purpose of rejoining the army.

A correspondent at Contantinople telegraphing on Sunday says:—I hear on the very best authority that the Sultan told the Grand Duke Nicholas that he would not fight against England. The Russians will occupy Buyukdere on Monday. The English have landed a large quantity of war material on the Island of Tenedos.

A Bucharest correspondent states that English merchant vessels at Galetz have been ordered by their owners to sail immediately, even without cargo.

A correspondent at Berlin says:—In consequence of Austria's refusal to come to an arrangement with Russia, it is believed Prince Gortschakoff has already informed Lord Loftus that Russia is ready to yield to England's demand in regard to the Congress.

A special dated Constantinople, Friday, states that if the English fleet is not withdrawn the Russians will occupy Constantinople with the approval of the Sultan.

The report from Berlin that Russia is ready to yield to England's demands should be received with reserve, as both the Agence Russe and the Journal de St. Petersburg yesterday opposed further concessions on the part of Russia. Moreover the correspondent of the Times at St. Petersburg telegraphs on Sunday as follows:—War is now regarded as almost inevitable. The vague hope that a diplomatic formula might be found for a renewal of the negotiations has been destroyed by Lord Beaconsfield's declaration that the question at issue was not a matter of form, but one of essential reality. The other despatches given above should be received with due caution on account of their sensational character.

A St. Petersburg special says:—Despite the general excitement a few men in high positions advocate a final attempt at conciliation by a simultaneous withdrawal of the British fleet and the Russian army from the neighborhood of Constantinople pending an arbitration by a neutral sovereign.

All Vienna correspondents concur in the statement that Ignatieff's mission has failed.

A Belgrade special says:—It is stated that the immediate remobilization of the whole Servian force has been ordered in consequence of the report made by the Committee of the Austrian General Staff that the Treaty of San Stefano would compel Austria to extend her military power over Servia, Montenegro, Bosnia, and Albania.

A Berlin special states that Russia has informed Austria that she would observe a friendly neutrality if Austria seized the western provinces of Turkey. Austria is not likely to accept the offer.

A Vienna despatch says Count Andrassy is making fresh efforts to bring about a meeting of the Congress, and thinks Russia will eventually yield to England's demand.

A Constantinople telegram says:—The Turks have reoccupied Buyukdere. The evacuation of the Quadrilateral by the Turks has been deferred for the present. The Grand Duke Nicholas to-day presided over a grand military council at San Stefano. He will visit the Sultan again shortly.

A Constantinople correspondent understands that Mr. Layard, in accordance with the instructions of the British Government, has asked the Porte what its attitude will be in the event of an Anglo-Russian war. Safvet Pasha replied he was personally inclined to neutrality, but he would submit the matter to the Council.

Athens advices state that an official telegram from Folo announces fierce fighting at Macrinitza, between insurgents and Turks. Several Turkish ships are bombarding villages on the coast.

An Athens despatch says:—A Turkish force, estimated at 10,000, has stormed the insurgent positions on Mount Pelion and captured Macrinitza.

IT IS not often that any person can be found who is unable to get enough of prison life. There is a man named Alexander Campbell, living in New York, a singular character who tasted the hospitalities of the Tombs six months ago, became so enamored of prison life that he wants to live and die in the Tombs. He on each occasion was committed as a vagrant. The last occasion on which he was up in Court the magistrate knowing that a committal would not be a punishment refused to restrict Campbell's freedom much to that person's grief.

Railway Enterprises.

The people to the north of Guelph are actively bestirring themselves in connection with several railway enterprises in which they are interested. Reference is made to these to-day in another column from an article copied from the Mount Forest Confederate. In the Examiner, published in the same place, we find a lengthy report of a meeting held there about a week ago, in which the possibility of the different schemes were fully discussed. It is clear from the speeches made at that meeting that the Georgian Bay and Wellington is the favorite scheme. This line would start from Palmerston, run to Mount Forest, thence to Durham, and to some point on the Georgian Bay. With such a road the people in Grey, who are now at the mercy of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway, would have access to the leading commercial points south over a road which would fully answer all the requirements of travel and traffic. They would have the advantage of competing rates at some of the leading points, and they would have the option of using either the broad or narrow gauge road as they pleased.

Mr. McMullen, the Reeve of Mount Forest, in the course of his speech stated that the length of the proposed line from Palmerston to Durham was about thirty-two miles. The estimated cost of construction was placed at $14,000, requiring a total of $448,000. To meet this it was fairly expected that municipal aid should be given as follows: Palmerston, $15,000; Minto (sectional) $5,000; Arthur Township (sectional) $10,000; Mount Forest, $15,000; Normanby (sectional) $20,000; Egremont, $60,000; Durham, $25,000; Bentinck, $35,000; Glenlig, $25,000—total $205,000. Added to this $25,000 paid up stock; $30,000 Government aid, and, $192,000 in first perference bonds would provide a grand total of $452,000, leaving a small margin for incidental expenses. It was proposed to construct the line from Palmerston through Mount Forest and Holstein to Durham. He also stated that the Great Western Company had given them an assurance that they would run the road on an advantageous arrangement as soon as built.

The Port Dover and Lake Huron project would be of very little benefit to the people of Grey. It touches no important commercial point, and is in a sense at the mercy of the Grand Trunk and Great Western. On the other hand the Georgian Bay and Wellington line would put them in direct connection with the Great Western, it would become an important feeder to it, and the farmers and merchants would at all times have access to Hamilton, Toronto, and other important markets. The ratepayers of Mount Forest fully appreciate this, and they have shown how desirous they are of securing the road by recommending that the Municipality vote a bonus of $20,000. We have little doubt this will be done, and that the other Municipalities interested will follow its example. The promoters of the project have also held meetings in Palmerston and Holstein, and on the whole it has been very favorably received wherever it has been thoroughly explained.

PETER MITCHELL was remonstrating the other day with Mr. Mackenzie for taking Mondays for a Government day. Mr. Mackenzie, in his compassion, said he would give to-day (all fools day) to other business. That settled Peter.

AND now the Mail says that Sir Francis Hincks took the side of the Lieutenant.-Governor of Quebec because he is a bank President, and is anxious to get the Government deposits. A very far-fetched reason certainly.

THE Tory papers say that the Moylan accounts case, now before the Public Accounts Committee, is a very small affair, and that such petty cases disgust the country. But what about the Neebing Hotel which the organs love to parade. Is there nothing small about it?

SENATOR MACPHERSON'S closing speech in his attack on the Government has disgusted many of his friends. It was harsh, insulting and unfair, especially when he knew that no one could reply to him. His attack on the Minister of Agriculture was specially offensive and uncalled for.

A CONTEMPORARY very properly says that Mr. Currie, whose name was struck off the roll of solicitors the other day, has not been been guilty of anything more improper towards his clients than Sir John Macdonald was guilty of towards the people of Canada when he sold the Pacific Railway charter—the people of Canada being at that time the clients of the Right Hon. gentleman.

THE Act to provide for the better auditing of the Public Accounts specifies among other things that no officer engaged in the collection or management of the Revenue, or in accounting for the same, shall be allowed to receive any fees or emoluments of any kind in addition to his pay except actual and authorized disbursements, shares of seizures, forfeitures and penalties, and that no such officer, receiving a salary of $1,000 or over, shall exercise any other calling, profesion, trade or employment whatever. This will shut off officers like Col. Bernard, who, while Deputy-Minister of Justice, pocketed a fee of $500 for drafting the Northern Railway Bill while Sir John—his brother-in-law—was in power.

What Protection has Wrought in the States.

In an able article on Sir John's protection resolution the Cobourg World aptly brings into prominence the subjoined extract from a recent message of the Governor of New York to the State Legislature:—"Individuals and corporations engaged in the various branches of manufacture, taking advantage of the necessities of the Government, rushed to Congress, and, by every means in their power, procured, each for its own benefit, the levy of what were called protective duties under the false pretence of raising revenue for the Government, but really to compel consumers to pay exorbitant prices for the articles thus protected. Under the wing and stimulus of this so-called protection, new enterprises were undertaken; new and extensive factories built; new and needless railways projected and undertaken; new mines and foundries opened, and armies of laborers allured by high wages to these enterprises from fields of agriculture and other sober and rational employments of life. The few notes of warning raised against the certain consequences of this wild over-action were unheeded. Extravagance of expenditure, the absence of everything like frugality and economy, obtained in all directions. The empty and delusive bubble thus raised could not endure, and although kept afloat by the whole power of the Government so long as it was possible, it met at last the inevitable day of doom. Imaginary fortunes vanished in a moment, ill advised railway schemes, mines, mills and factories were suspended, and tens of thousands of innocent and untortunate laborers were left without employment or the means of subsistence. Instead of the high wages by which they had been enticed from other occupations to these enterprises, they received no wages at all."

THE WHITESIDE WILL CASE.

THE WHITESIDE MURDER REVIVED.

Strange Testimony About the Old Man.

In the Court of Chancery on Tuesday, before Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot, the case of Whitesides vs. Whitesides came up for hearing. The facts in connection with the action are as follows:—On August 21st, 1876, Robert Whiteside, who it is admitted was a miserly old man, was foully murdered in the Township of Esquesing, near Acton, by some person or persons unknown. At the time of his death he was possessed of considerable wealth; and a search in his house resulted in the discovery by his family of a will, executed in the year 1863, leaving the whole of his property to two sons named John and Henry. Robert, an elder son, but never a favorite of his father, together with the other children, determined to dispute the will, and brought an action of ejectment against the two favored brothers. This was more than one pear ago; but before the trial came off an agreement was entered into by all the parties to the action, by which the property was to be divided equally. This agreement was signed by all the parties interested and approved of by the Court of Queen's Bench. A bill was then filed for a petition in the Court of Chancery with Robert and John as plaintiffs against the rest of the family; and a decree by consent was made dividing the property as previously agreed upon among the whole of the children, subject to the widow's dower. The property was sold and the money paid into the Court of Chancery, and then John (seventeen years of age) filed a petition setting forth that he was an infant, and that he had been defrauded of his rights, and claimed said rights under his father's will, arguing that he was not bound by the last agreement. The Court then directed an issue to be tried (which is the present action) as to whether the testator was of testamentary capacity to execute the will when he did so, and whether the agreement was for the benefit of the infant John.

A host of lawyers was engaged on each side, and a number of witnesses were examined. Among others George Campbell, living on lot 30, 8th Con. Esquesing said:—I signed his will as a witness, and it was executed at my mother's house; my brother was also a witness; at that time the testator had a wife and five or six children, and owned 400 acres of land in a block; about seven or eight acres were cleared, and only one acre was fenced in; at that time he complained of a sore throat and that his wife had made a "mush" and put fish hooks into it; my mother examined his throat and told him there was no fish hooks there, and she externally applied goose grease, and he ate some honey; I read the will aloud; he gave the bulk of his property to two children, and $1 apicce to the remainder; at my suggestion (as a joke) he made it $5; I do not believe he was in a fit state that day to understand the will; he was strange in his actions at times.

Henry Cole and his wife, Geo. Miller, Dr. Freeman, Dougall McMillan, Henry Harding, Wm. Allan, Geo. Gibbs, Lawrence Rose, John Higgins, Jas. Simon, Robert Campbell and others were examined, who gave somewhat conflicting testimony in regard to the sanity of Whiteside.

Mrs. Whitesides, relict of the testator, testified:—My husband was in the habit of hoeing his potatoes with chips, and he ground wheat with stones and blew away the chaff with his breath; from 1847 to 1863, when the will was signed, we were fed on very inferior food; I clothed the children by my own labours or by gifts from friends; my husband used to eat grasshoppers, and said they were the locusts mentioned in Scripture; he forced Robert to eat grasshoppers and the children to eat spoiled meat; he took brar and put gooseberries in it and called it a fruit cake fit for Queen Victoria to eat; as a beverage he preferred the water in which potatoes had been boiled to anything else; he very seldom undressed, and slept in his working clothes; at the time he made the will I do not consider his mind was right; the Friday previous he made a "bran mash," which was mixed with milk and froze; the next day he swallowed the pieces of frozen milk and bran; on the Saturday night he took ashes from the fireplace and threw them back over his head and said, "To Hell's black destruction with the vermin of the earth, for I have my share of them;" he also said that I had put fish-hooks in the bran mash, and tried to poison him; he was very jealous minded of me, and did not like Robert; when the soot was disturbed in the chimney he thought men had come down through it; he also put on my night-cap and shirt one night and went outside the house to frighten some men whom he supposed to be there; he also expressed doubt as to the paternity of his children; he was strange on religious questions, and said that God had more respect for him than anybody else, and God had revealed a secret to him which He had never revealed to anybody except John Wilson; he also said that God made it known to him that there was no Sabbath, and that his wisdom was nothing short of Solomon's; he could also drink of the living water at any time, and used to perform the action of invisible drinking; the first house we lived in did not have a window for many years, because men would come in, he said, to see me; when one of his daughters died at Brampton he refused to go to the funeral or even to pay the expenses of burying her.

Copies of wills were put in, in one of which he professed to have cut off, erased, and disinherited a sister who was an abomination to him; a second will commenced with a preamble setting forth that he had been warned by certain visions of his approaching death. He professed to have discovered the secret of perpetual motion and an insight into the Book of Revelation.

My husband said he would not leave Robert anything because he was not his son, and he was a worthless fellow, and only fit to be a hangman; after the murder the will was found when the house was searched, and it was filed at the coroner's inquest; when Robert returned home after being away a number of years, we determined to break the will, and we went to Mr. Laidlaw to get his advice; I knew that Mr. Whitesides was odd before I married him, but I did not think he was so bad as he was; he was a shoemaker in Ireland, but did not work at that trade here; we were both natives of Ireland, but had not met in that country; I cannot remember the time of day he wrote the will; when he ate the lump of ice and bran I expect he scratched his throat; that was the time he said I had put fish hooks in the mash, and tried to poison him; he took foxtail and sorrell seed to the mill to be ground into flour; the third day after his brother died he went out to dig him out of the grave; he came back and said he done so, but did not tell why; he used to keep his money in his pocket, and to count it very often; all the children who were living when the will was made were mentioned in it, but four have been born since.

The case was adjourned.

Henry Hope, of Drayton, is not a very sensible young man. In fact he is worse than being simply foolish, and the way he intimated to the public that such was the case was to leave town, after writing on a piece of paper collar that he intended drowning himself, and throwing the article where it would be found. Hope has since returned from Wallace where he had been visiting.

Controversy among the first-class hotels of New York shows that the service is constantly changing from one first-class hotel to the other, and the bills of fare show the same variety of dishes. The important fact, to travellers, is that the Grand Central offers the same accommodations for one and two dollars per day less than the others. eod

Eastchester, Westchester Co., N. Y.—DR. GILES—DEAR SIR: On going to my stable a few mornings since, I found my horse dead lame on the right fore leg. Could not get him out of the stall. A neighbor recommended your LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA. I applied it, and to my great satisfaction, in one day the lameness entirely disappeared.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

CORMACK & KELEHER

Having purchased the entire stock, fixtures and good-will of the business of Mr. James Cormack, Sr., Merchant Tailor, in Guelph, take this opportunity of informing the public of their intention to carry on in all its branches. While it is their intention to still retain the prestige of the late firm in turning out superior clothing to any establishment in town, they have also, in consideration of their expenses being wonderfully curtailed, made a MARKED REDUCTION OF PRICES in the various lines, even to such an extent that they feel assured that all their patrons will not only be astonished and satisfied, but constrained to recommend the firm to their friends.

Order Department.

This Department will be under the supervision of a FIRST CLASS CUTTER, the services of whom they have been fortunate enough to secure, and whose reputation is such that it is with the greatest confidence his abilities and skill are submitted to the gentlemen of Guelph and vicinity. All orders will be executed in such a manner as to ensure entire satisfaction to customers. No one will require to don a garment that is not in every respect the very acme of perfection as far as fit and workmanship are concerned. From the fact that a LARGE AND CHOICE STOCK OF CLOTHS will always be kept on hand, there is no fear but that all can be suited in the selection of material.

Gents' Furnishings.

With regard to this department, they are convinced that the time has arrived in the history of all large and well organized establishments which handle men's wearing apparrel, when GENTS' FURNISHINGS, to be attractive, must be constantly replete with staple goods, together with the novelties of the season, and to effect this our purchases shall be frequently and carefully made.

Ready Made Clothing.

Possessing the advantages of being manufacturers as well as retailers of these goods they are enabled to present to the public many lines superior to the general factory made clothing.

CHAPTER XXX.

LIZZIE IS DELIVERED INTO THE HANDS OF ANOTHER KEEPER.

While the boat was drawing towards the shore the time was passed in utter silence by those who stood there. The two horses, relieved of their burden, were cropping eagerly at the sweet young grass, Ranald watching them. The leader of the party paced to and fro in the vicinity of the rude landing-place, and Lizzie, with Alfred in her arms, stood gazing with anxious and pensive interest at the loch, the approaching boat, the island opposite, with the building which showed itself upon it, the lofty mountains beyond and the sky above, from which the hues of sunset were beginning to fade.

She was powerfully conscious of the whole scene. It presented itself to her with vivid minuteness, in all its features of form, colour, and quality; its beauty, its grandeur, its lights and shadows seemed to take firm possession of her mind as something with which she was to be closely connected for the time to come, in circumstances she knew not how dreary or dangerous. So completely did her mind receive through her eyes the smaller with the larger features and aspects of the assembled objects without that she noticed the exceeding beauty of the pebbles which strewed the shore of the loch and the extreme clearness of the water—the latter offering almost no obstruction to the eye as it penetrated to the bottom, and saw the rocks and stones which lay embedded in the yellow sand. The whole scene, from the earth below to the sky above, was nature at her freshest and purest—nature unsullied by human touch, her pristine lustre undimmed by man's beauty and peace. And yet, yonder in the centre, there stood, silent and peaceful like all else, a building, which to Lizzie possessed a peculiar, a shuddering fascination, for within its walls she was to be confined, and these barriers to freedom would be supplemented by the little rocky island round them, and the loch whose waters girdled it. What was to be her experience inside that sequestered edifice? How would she be treated there? If kindly, it would still be imprisonment and exile from the dear and the loved; but it might be harshly, cruelly, by those into whose power she was put. There her sufferings might be great, her dangers manifold; life itself might be made a burden by being spent within the dark and shadow of fear.

Nearer and nearer came the boat that was to convey her and Alfred to the island, which, perchance, they would never again quit, for who could tell but it might become their grave as well as their prison. It added an additional pang to her desolation to see the child's delight at sight of the sparkling water and the moving boat. With an unconsciousness of impending evil which was pathetically pitiful, the little fellow was clapping his hands with glee, and showing a manifestation of pleasure which made his mother tenfold more lonely in her sorrow to think how, and soon, his young soul might have its gladness quenched, as it, too, opened to the sorrows and privations of their secluded life.

But presently Lizzie's attention was wholly occupied with gazing at the form and appearance of the man in the boat for he had now come near enough to be distinctly seen, and his aspect was such as might well cause her astonishment and dismay. At first sight he seemed hardly human—more like some hideous creature of the woods than a man. He wore no hat or cap, and the mass of dirty matted hair which covered his head and the greater part of his face gave him the aspect of a wild beast or a savage. He had large squinting eyes, a huge mouth, through the separated lips of which his teeth showed like tusks. His chin stood square under his massive jaws, while his ears were of tremendous size, and standing out nearly at right angles with the sides of his head, gave a wolfish look to a face otherwise exceedingly ferocious.

His person was only too frightfully in keeping with the head thus described. His back was crooked, his neck short and thick, his arms were of enormous length, and strong in proportion, very different from his legs, which were of the shortest, but finished off with a pair of large, splay feet, the heels sticking out some inches behind. Such was the extraordinary and terrifying object which met Lizzie's gaze, and fixed it with a fearful fascination. The man looked the incarnation of all that was brutal and repulsive, cruel, fiendish, malevolent, as if spiteful in disposition because nature had made him an ugly abortion.

"Oh, heaven, what a fearful monster!" ejaculated the horror-stricken girl, shrinking back at his approach, and all the more as his distorted gaze was fixed on her with an expresssion of surprise and curiosity. Seeing her recoil in disgust, he scowled vengefully, like an enraged baboon; then shipped his oars, and as the boat grounded turned inquiringly towards the leader as the latter stepped upon the jetty.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

ELORA.—Mr. Dalby having become landlord of the Dalby House, has disqualified himself as a member of the Council, and has accordingly sent in his resignation.—The Express states that dogs, guns, and boys play an important part in creating an unbearable din every Sabbath day, around the cascade, and along the banks of the river in Pilkington. If parents won't do their duty in this matter, the constable will.—Mrs. Cook has sold her hotel on the Douglas Road for the sum of $1,200.—Mr. T. N. Ritchie, who has carried on the business of baker and confectioner in this village for the past two years, has closed up business and handed his stock over to his creditors. The Express says he has refused to make an assignment, as the estate will pay one hundred cents on the dollar.

BOARD OF EXAMINERS.—The Waterloo Chronicle says that fault seems to have been found with the Wellington Board of Examiners, by the County Council, on account of the size of their bills for contingencies. The Board has pul lished a statement in reply, showing that only necessary expenditure was incurred. If the Board is to blame at all, it appears to us that it deserves censure for not making provision for the proper seating of candidates long before. Inspectors here refuse to recognise certificates from that county, because of the unenviable report it had gained for uncertainty in the matter of examinations, a repute perhaps chiefly attributable to bad arrangements for seating. The expense of proper seats should have been incurred long before, and the Council in objecting to it, have hit upon the worse possible line of attack.

Mr. Todd's pamphlet on the Parliamentary and constitutional points involved in the recent occurrence at Quebec, contains a complete justification of the course pursued by Lieut.-Governor Letellier.

Railway Projects.

The Mount Forest Confederate, in speaking of the various railway schemes now before that section of the country, says:—There are at present four distinct companies seeking the suffrages of the people. First we have the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce agitating the question of widening its gauge. We are very desirous that this much-needed improvement should be successful, but it is entirely out of the question unless the municipalities through which it passes should come to the fore and vote the required aid. Next, we have the Saugeen Valley Railway from here to Walkerton. This Company has succeeded in obtaining a charter. This road has on its very face a paying prospect, if built as contemplated, on the uniform guage, but will very much depend upon the widening of the road we now have. The next project is what may be termed our own line, the Georgian Bay and Wellington Railway. This scheme is one that commends itself to all but those who are opposed to all roads. The Company is composed of men in whom we have confidence; they are those whom we know, men who have successfully managed their own affairs, and, therefore, we can rely upon their carrying on this project to a successful issue. The company is now in working order. The fourth scheme is the Stratford and Lake Huron road. This line is already constructed from Port Dover, on Lake Erie, to the town of Listowel; a few more miles would bring it to Palmerston, the proposed starting point of the Georgian Bay scheme. This, we think, is all the country needs at present. The completion of this road to Palmerston, and the construction of the Georgian, would ultimately connect Lake Huron at Owen Sound with Port Dover on Lake Erie. This, however, does not appear to suit, altogether, the views of the directors, for they are endeavoring to get the people of the western side of Bentinck to vote them a bonus to enable them to extend their line from Listowel, parallel with the Western to Clifford, thence through Hanover to Elmwood. The two roads would be only six miles apart at the latter place. A bonus by-law of $35,000 is now before the electors of Bentinck; the vote to be taken on the fifth day of April next.

At a public meeting held in Mount Forest, it was recommended by resolution that the Council be asked to submit a by-law to grant a bonus of $20,000 to the Georgian Bay and Wellington Railway.

Puslinch Council.

Pursuant to adjournment the Council met in the Council room, Aberfoyle, on Monday, March 25th, at 10 o'clock, a. m. Members all present—the Reeve in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and sustained.

The By-law dividing the highways into statute labor divisions was considered and amended in committee of the whole, and on motion of Mr. Nicoll, seconded by Mr. McFarlane, was read a third time and passed.

On motion the Reeve was ordered to issue his order for payment of the undernoted accounts: John Anderson, Guelph, for blank collector's receipts, $4.36; Marsh & Co., Guelph, for advertising, $10.46; Charles Davidson, Insurance assessment on township hall, $6; John Worthington, repairing roads and plank used in repairs, $5; Allan McIntyre, putting new locks on hall door and cupboards, $1.50.

On motion of Mr. Spruhan, seconded by Mr. Iles, a By-law was introduced to appoint Overseers of Highways, Poundkeepers and Fenceviewers, which was read a first and second time. The blanks in the By-law were filled by inserting the following names for

THE LUMBER TRADE.—The Perth Expositor says:—"We are glad to learn of the rise in lumber, which is equal to something like $4 per thousand feet. In this county alone, the differences will be equal to nearly $100,000 to our lumbermen. There are a great many logs left in the woods which could not be got out for want of snow. The extra price may encourage some extra exertions and expenditure in getting these logs to the mill."

DR. WM. GRAY'S SPECIFIC MEDICINE

The Great English Remedy is especially recommended as an unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhea, Impotency and all diseases that follow as a consequence of Self Abuse, as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to INSANITY OR CONSUMPTION and a PREMATURE GRAVE, all of which, as a rule, are first caused by deviating from the path of nature, and over indulgence.

The Specific Medicine is the result of a life study and many years of experience in treating those special diseases. Pamphlet free by mail.

THAT WONDERFUL MAN.

First Grand Exhibition of the Season.

OPENING OF OUR

MILLINERY SHOW ROOM,

On Friday, the 5th April, 1878.

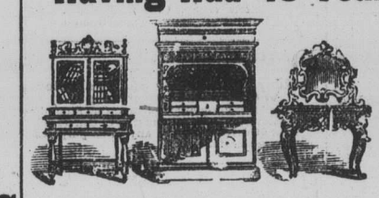
JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR,

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of general depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,



that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from an admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and refinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lechevalier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse, the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and refinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

Parliamentary Portraits.

Photographed from the Gallery by Our Artist.

From the St. John, N. B., Torch.

One of the most decidedly original characters in the House is farmer Farrow, member for North Huron. He is an agriculturist, he says, born in the turnip drill, swaddled by cabbage leaves, and suckled by the best butter-making cow on the farm. Farmer Farrow has a reddish brown beard, something like buckwheat straw when the grain is ripe, and has a fashion of reaping it with his sickle-shaped palm. When addressing the House, in condemnation of anything, his arms are swung over his head as though he were wielding a flail, this action being varied by sudden and violent thrusts with his fingers into the air, as though he were using a brad on a lazy ox that was making its mate haul all the load. The man in front keeps a steady watch, ready to dodge at any moment. When the ponderous fists, after being swung around the head several times, descend upon the desk with a crash that causes the responsive air to vibrate to the keystone of the loftiest arch of the gothic interior, members in the vicinity hold up blue books as shields against splinters. His rhetoric is redolent of the farm, the garden and the stable. "Mr. Speaker," he said on one occasion, "the honorable gentleman opposite is small potatoes and few in a hill." (Cheers.) His bill, like that of the old gander who rules the roost in my barnyard (laughter), looks harmless enough at first sight, but contains something of the serpent within. (Cheers, and cries of what is it?) The gander's bill contains a hisser, and this bill contains a stinger. (Great laughter.) Honorable gentlemen may laugh, Mr. Speaker, but I know what I am talking about. I have ploughed and harrowed the subject, as it were, hoed it, weeded out the sophistry that hid the core of the apple (laughter and hear, hear), threshed the grain and winnered it out, and the evil is there, like thistle and pusley roots in a garden patch or grass field. (Great laughter and applause.) Plant in the Statoot book and it will spread itself out and spring up on the other side of the hedge, like a bamergilerd tree in a garden. (Applause.) It smells to heaven, Mr. Speaker, like a fat porker on a hot day. (Cheers and laughter.) The elements which it yokes together will no more pull in harness than father's thoroughbred mare and Bill Akerley's Tennessee mule (laughter)—the mule that nearly cost him his liberty, when he was skedaddling to this country, because he was too lazy to carry Bill and too contrary to let Bill carry him. (Roars of laughter.) Honorable gentlemen may laugh, but it was no laughing matter to Bill. (Hear, hear.) Yes, he is here, but he wouldn't have been if he hadn't hitched that mule to the hind end of the railroad train. (Laughter.) Let every man set in his own cabbage yard, in under his own apple tree, as the Psalmist says (Oh, oh), and feed his roots raw or biled, whole or hashed, and plow deep or shallow and sell his hay or feed it on the farm, and don't try to regulate their business by Act of Parliament. (Hear, hear.) The honorable the Finance Minister tells you that nations are not to be made happy and prosperous by Act of Parliament, and, Mr. Speaker, though in matters of figgers he stumbles like Bro. Jake's blind ox (laughter), and keeps his foot down in a mud puddle as obstinately as Akerley's mule (renewed laughter), who lifts his hoof only when somebody gets within reach of his heels (laughter and applause), yet I believe he's right in this, and no more can Acts of Parliament keep the Colorado bug from potatoes, the murrain from the cattle, the grubs from the cowcumbers, or the small farmer, who has no fear of his wife's broomstick, from the corner groggery in planting time. (Great applause and laughter.) The attempt will prove as idle as Vennor's scheme for regulating the weather by an almanac. (Hear, hear.) Old Boreas is mightier than Old Probabilities, Mr. Speaker, and mounts, when he will, the dread steeds stabled in the icy caves of the Rockies, and rides over plain and hill and valley, making cellars freeze and cattle seek shelter, and human beings hurry half dressed from bedroom to kitchen in the morning. (Cheers and laughter.) Nature must have her way, whether natural or human—(laughter)—and you might as well try to dam Niagarer with cobble stones as stop the course of trade with such Bills as this. If you lessen the channel, Mr. Speaker, you will overflow the banks, like liquor running out of a man's mouth when the bottle cork gets in his throat. (Shouts of laughter).

BOOTS & SHOES

"Come here, sir," said a stern parent to his youngest hopeful. "What is this complaint the shoolmaster has made against you?" Much injured youth—"It's just nothing at all. You see, Jimmy Hughes bent a pin, and I only left it on the teacher's chair for him to look at, and he came in without his specks and sat down on the pin. That's all. And now he wants to blame me for it."

OF

Now Going on at the Elephant.

Having just completed opening out the stock of W. H. E. Whitny, of Windsor, which has just been purchased at a great sacrifice, will certainly cause a speedy clearance.

This stock consists mostly of goods bought last fall, therefore, being free of all moth-eaten rubbish that is so often bought with bankrupt stocks.

Those in want of clothing will find this a capital oppportunity of buying goods at prices that will meet depressed times.

No reasonably offer will be refused, as the stock must be run off. A call is requested.

In the matter of GEORGE A. DANIELS, an Insolvent.

Sale of Real and Personal Estate.

There will be sold by Auction, at Guelph, on Friday, the 5th day of April next, the following properties belonging to the insolvent estate of G. A. Daniels:—

1. The interest of the insolvent and of myself as Assignee thereof, in the South-east half of Lot No. 3, on MacCartney's Survey, and fronting on Woolwich street, in the Town of Guelph, on which is situated a neat two story frame house, containing eight rooms, together with stable, carriage house, well, etc., etc. The property is encumbered with a mortgage of $1,000, at 8 per cent. interest, and has about three years to run.

2. A large quantity of builders' hardware, nails, tools, flooring, plank, boards, clear stuff, mouldings, &c.

3. Summer-house, horse-power, saw table, saws, mortising machines, block and tackle, &c., store front, counter, gates, doors, blinds, laths, &c.

4. Handsome horse, new buggy, waggon, bobsleigh, two sets harness, straw cutter, and stable furniture.

The real estate will be offered at the Market House, precisely at one, p.m., on the day named; and the remaining property at the workshop on Wellington street, immediately after the sale of the house.

TERMS—Cash for all purchases up to $20; and one month's credit for all larger amounts, on approved endorsed notes.

The Russians have offered great concessions to the Sultan for a Turkish Alliance.

Local News.

KING DODDS in the town hall this evening.

HARRY SPENCE, at one time of the Maple Leafs, leaves to-day for Lynn, Mass. He plays third base there this year.

THE fraternal visit of Reliance Lodge, I. O. O. F., to Progress Lodge has been postponed from the 4th inst., to Thursday week.

ACCIDENT.—Robert Ingram, son of Thomas Ingram, of Puslinch, while engaged in coupling cars recently on the New York Central Railway, was squeezed between the dead-woods. He is now at home. The injuries although severe will not affect Mr. Ingram permanently.

AMPUTATED.—Dr. Keating amputated a finger for John McCann of Pilkington, this (Tuesday) morning. It had become so contracted towards the palm of his hand by a felon that he could not work while it occupied such a position. Hence the necessity of having it amputated.

THE presentation of the Governor-General's medal to Captain McCrae, of the Wellington Field Battery, will be made in the drill shed on Wednesday evening, at eight o'clock. Lieut.-Colonel Taylor will represent His Excellency, and will make the presentation.

THE ORATORIO OF DANIEL.—The attendance at this entertainment last evening was pretty good, the hall being about half full. The choir under the leadership of Mr. W. T. Parker performed their parts very well, and seemed to meet general approval from the audience.

WHO were the fools? might be asked in regard to the action some parties took when they sent a note to a fellow workman yesterday morning making a business appointment for him at eleven o'clock. This of course necessitated his quitting work and losing his time, and waiting at the appointed place fully an hour before he was aware that a contemptible trick had been played upon him.

ENTERTAINMENT.—The True Blues gave an entertainment in the Orange Young Briton's hall on Monday evening, which was largely attended. "Paddy Miles," and "Turn him out," two popular farces, were put on the boards in a very creditable manner. The fife and drum band furnished music at intervals. Those who sustained their parts the best were John Drayton, as a comedian, Geo. Leader as a vocalist, and Harry Hough as a clog dancer.

PRESENTATION.—The Guelph Fire Brigade lose a very efficient member by the departure of Mr. John Hewer to Manitoba. The members of the Fire Brigade determined to indicate to him the esteem in which he was held by them in a tangible manner before his departure, and with this in view, at a meeting held on Monday evening, Chief Engineer Armstrong, on behalf of the members presented him with a very handsome Smith & Wesson's revolver and in a neat speech bore testimony to Mr. Hewer's good qualities generally.

GUELPH DEBENTURES.—The debentures of the town of Guelph, amounting to $10,000 being the balance of the $30,000 raised by By-law, have been sold by the Council of 1878 to excellent advantage. Four tenders were received for the whole amount, and the figures range from 91½ to $1. The Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Company bid the lowest, 91½c; Campbell & Cassells, and W. A. Mittleberger, 94c; and Walter Sorby at par. The tender of the latter was accepted. The debentures do not mature till December, 1896, bear interest at six per cent., payable half yearly. Debentures amounting to $20,000, sold by last year's Council, only realised 95c, and were purchased by Campbell & Cassells.

MODERATE winds and clear to fair warm weather are the probabilities for to-day.

THIS EVENING.—Base ball meeting at the Royal Hotel.—King Dodds in the town hall.

A YOUNG WOMAN of Police Court fame was suddenly spilled out of a buggy at Howard's corner last evening. The mud was soft and no bones were broken.

THE watchmakers of Guelph held a meeting last evening at Anderson's Hotel for the purpose of discussing matters in connection with the trade.

THREATENING.—Thos. Strodder had to find securities for keeping the peace, by order of the Police Magistrate, on account of threatening language used towards Eli Buckner. Plaintiff and defendant are colored, and live on Essex street.

CHECKERS.—It is expected that a match will come off shortly between Mr. M. Mackenzie and Mr. Robert Ferguson, of Listowell, in Guelph, the club here having invited Mr. Ferguson to come down and have a match with our champion. A meeting of the officers of the club will be held to-night at half-past seven o'clock.

QUICK TRAVEL.—Mr. A. Frew, stationmaster at the Great Western Railway station, took particular pains to have the stock, &c., belonging to the parties who left here this (Tuesday) afternoon for Manitoba shipped through to Detroit with despatch. He has received word that the train which left here at 5:15 on Monday afternoon with the stock on board, arrived in Detroit at eight o'clock this Tuesday morning. This speaks a great deal for the Company and should be made a note of by parties who purpose emigrating to Manitoba.

ANOTHER PRESENTATION.—This kind of affair appears to be in order. Mr. W. A. Prest, who leaves to-day for Manitoba, was waited upon at the residence of Mr. F. Woolhouse on Monday evening by the teachers and officers of the Dublin street Methodist Sabbath School, and Rev. Mr. Brock, on their behalf, presented him with a silver headed walking cane, bearing a suitable inscription. The reverend gentleman made a very happy speech in connection therewith, and Mr. Prest replied feelingly. Some time was spent in social enjoyment before the good-byes were exchanged. Mr. Prest has always been held in high esteem by his friends and particularly so by his fellow-workers in the Sabbath school. The cane is a valuable one, and was purchased at Mr. B. Savage's jewellery store.

CHIEF KELLY wishes the MERCURY to contradict a portion of what appeared in the Herald last evening in reference to what was done by himself and the boys Schofield, Hatch and Atkinson, after the finding of the body of Miss Rowswell. He states that although the boys acted promptly in giving information about having found the body, that they did not have it conveyed to the drill shed "in order that Kelly might not have any claim to the credit or the reward." The body was both taken out of the water and conveyed to the drill shed by the proper parties—the police authorities. Chief Kelly states that when Coroner Keating left the drill shed he gave orders to have the door locked. The parties who are entitled to the reward offered by Mr. Rowswell are the boys who discovered the body in the water.

Several car-loads, of from eighteen to twenty each, are being taken over the Grand Trunk Railway daily, destined for Europe.

Patriotism, not Partyism.

Lecture by the Rev. W. S. Griffin.

The Norfolk street Methodist Church was tolerably well filled with an appreciative audience to hear the Rev. W. S. Griffin's lecture on the above subject. The chair was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Ryckman, who called upon the Rev. Mr. Duff, of Eramosa, to open the meeting with prayer, after which the lecturer was introduced by the chairman in a few appropriate remarks.

The speaker compared a nation to a family on a large scale, and as there are all kinds of families, so there are all kinds of nations. As every family has its own particular ties which bind it sacredly together, so every nation has its distinct national ties and interests, which should unite all its subjects in a common brotherhood and common destiny. In early times there was a necessity for national organization, and no doubt had its conception in household government. The family had its chief head, so likewise all governments, and as every man is under obligations to his own family, so every subject owes sacred duties to his own country. A man who takes a deeper interest in another family than he does in his own renders himself odious in the highest degree. He admired the great law of universal brotherhood; it was ennobling and honorable; but where this love did not manifest itself for the family or his country it was not likely to extend to a common brotherhood. The patriot feels interested in the material prosperity of his own country; the development of its mineral, agricultural, and commercial resources, and whatever contributions he can make to this end are cheerfully given. Narrow feelings of selfishness, by which so many are governed, can never aid in raising a nation to greatness. The members of every household should be taught in all the obligations of government—human and divine—so as to carry the same principles in every lane of after life. National morals are dependent upon national education; as knowledge increases crime decreases. The duties of the husband to defend his family in times of danger was clearly defined by the speaker. It was not a sentiment, but an instinct of his being, to throw himself into the breach in the hour of danger. National defence was the outgrowth of the same element of our nature. It was contended by some that those elements of power embodied in a living Christianity would drive backs all its foes as the Philistines were driven back from the land of Israel—without powder or ball; while others contended that such a theory is the offspring of a wild imagination: and that there must be soldier to meet soldier, blow for blow and blood for blood. A man who will defend his fireside will defend his country. Let his country be invaded and how soon his patriotism kindles and he throws himself upon its altar ready to do or die in its defence. Such a man is a true patriot. There were some men who would as soon fight against as for their country. Such men were handled by the speaker in no very complimentary manner. A sailor who was returning home on board his vessel was chaffed by those on board about his returning to such a forlorn country, when he replied that if he had been born upon the most barren rock in the ocean it would be dear to him. This sentiment was true patriotism. True national greatness can never be reached by party spirit. The people of any country who are governed by sordid and selfish aims are low-hearted and base-hearted. If a people wish to take an honorable place among the nations of the earth they must be public-spirited—not party-spirited. Nations have a character to create and maintain as well as individuals. The land swarms with seekers of place and hunters of office, and those who come to the surface have but one solitary spirit of ambition—to retain office so long as it is for their advantage. If they project successful measures of improvement or announce a liberal line of policy, it is only that they may retain office, not for any true spirit of patriotism. The speaker went on to state that intellectual and material growth should be governed by Christian sentiment, and held up the Elizabethian age as one which was actuated by such ambition. Then it was that her immortal bards struck the lyre and wrote songs suited to an angel's harp; then it was that many of her gifted sons arose and transfixed the gaze of mankind with the unrivalled creations of their genius; then it was that her philosophers appeared whose names are pillars of strength in every land, and whose systems of philosophy are the text books of study in every school; then it was that multitudes of her merchant princes laid the foundation of their wealth; and at the same time some of the greatest divines appeared, who defended revelation and proclaimed salvation with unprecedented power. The speaker went on, touching on many interesting and important points, and concluded by stating that the stability of a nation depended not so much on its commerce, for where is Tyre, whose merchants were princes and whose vessels whitened the sea; not on its learning, for where is Greece—the home of Socrates the philosopher, and Homer, the poet, and Soon, the statesman, and Demosthenes the orator; not on its armies, for where is Rome, whose soldiers run the world. These great powers are gone. We should have inscribed on every banner, and citadel, and senate house, "The nation that will not serve God shall perish."

The lecture occupied nearly an hour-and-a-half in its delivery, and was listened to with much attention, the speaker, at times, being highly applauded. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Griffin, and the meeting closed with the benediction.

Presentation and Dinner to Mr. Balkwill.

Mr. Geo. Balkwill has been a resident of Guelph some nineteen years and during that time he has built up for himself a character for straight forwardness and integrity, and from his general urbane demeanor made a host of friends. He however has energy enough to believe that he can do better by emigrating to the Province of Manitoba and do pioneer work, than by remaining in Guelph.

His friends were sorry in a sense of such a step being taken by him, but pleased that he had the courage to again face the hardships of a sparsely settled country with excellent prospects of worldly prosperity. As an expression of good will they determined to entertain him at dinner and present him and Mrs. Balkwill with silver cups on the eve of his departure. With this object in view a large company of influential business men in town met at the Mitchell House on Monday evening. The chair was occupied by Mr. James Goldie, and he was supported on either side by Mr. Balkwill the guest of the evening and and Mr. F. Gauhan. Mr. Geo. Murton occupied the Vice-chair. Among others present were Major Howard, Messrs. George Lees, Arthur Davies, Louis Zimmer, James Merlihan, William Carter, Wm. A. Wilson, J. T. Brill, Sam. Cherry, James Penelton, Ed. Winstanley, Robert Balkwill, John Risk, John Hewer, Joseph Heffernan, George Robins, George Anderson, James Innes, John Allan, John Mackenzie, Thos. Galer, A. H. Kennedy, John Cherry, Jas. Hewer, J. H. Jennings, A. Frew, George Tolton.

The silver cups are very elegant and chaste pieces of workmanship, one of them bearing the inscription neatly engraved: "Presented to Mr. George Balkwill, by his numerous kind friends in Guelph, 1st April, 1878;" and the other "Mrs. George Balkwill." They were purchased from Mr. R. Crawford, at the Goldsmith Hall.

After the dinner—and a better spread has never been laid in Guelph—served in excellent style for which the Mitchell House is famed, had been heartily partaken of, the cloth was removed.

The toasts of "The Queen," "Governor-General," etc., were duly honored.

The chairman next proposed "Our guest, Mr. George Balkwill," which was drunk amid enthusiasm.

The following address and reply were then read:

ADDRESS.

To George Balkwill, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—It is with sincere regret that we have recently learned of your firm determination to leave this town, where you have been a resident for a period extending over nineteen years, and seek a home in the far West.

And although we sincerely regret your departure from amongst us we are pleased to know that your intention is to settle in another Province of our beloved Dominion, which, no doubt, will ultimately prove to your interest and prosperity: a wish sincerely entertained by each and every one of those you leave behind; as wherever your future lot may be cast, our most sanguine desires are that you may be deemed in every way worthy of the same esteem and respect as your friends in Guelph always held for you. In this case we have no fears of your prospects and happiness; as, during your sojourn here we feel confident that no man pursuing your avocation, if indeed any other, has more endeared himself to people of all classes, creeds and nationalities, than you have; as, on all occasions, whenever any bitterness of feeling existed on our market between parties, you were always found, by your affable manner and jocular remarks, trying to present what very frequently might have led to litigation in courts of law.

Knowing this, then, your friends and co-market buyers of Guelph cannot allow you to take your departure without evincing to you in some degree a slight token of our high esteem while in our midst, and sincere regret at your leaving. The change, however, we trust will be for your benefit, both spiritually and financially, and should you return at any time, as we hope you soon will, we hope that you will be enabled to give us such glowing accounts of your new home that your most sanguine expectations will be more than realized in every particular.

May we hope, then, such will be the case, and that you, Mrs. Balkwill and family may live long and happy in your newly adopted home. And now please accept for yourself and Mrs. Balkwill those slight tokens of remembrance from your former market associates and Guelph friends, with the fervent hope, whenever your eyes fall on them, you will bear in mind the many days you spent with them here, and the very many incidents, happy as they invariably were, when the familiar cognomen of "Little George" so frequently resounded on the Market Square, and was responded to by you with such happiness and natural good humor.

In conclusion, dear friend, we are now reluctantly compelled to bid you a parting farewell, and may your future be happy, contented and prosperous, is the very earnest wish of your associate market buyers and friends of Guelph.

Signed by Jas. Goldie and all the grain and produce dealers on the market. 29tf

REPLY.

To James Goldie, Esq., and friends of Guelph here assembled,—

I beg to thank you most sincerely for the very flattering address just read, and most particularly for the valuable gifts which you have so very kindly and thoughtfully seen fit to present Mrs. Balkwill and myself with on the eve of my departure from Guelph.

It is almost unnecessary for me—even if I were more capable—to reply at length to your very elaborate address. Suffice to say that wherever we go, both presentation and address will be always preserved and cherished by us as the undeserved yet spontaneous souvenirs of our Guelph friends.

My departure from amongst you has, up to the present, caused me no small amount of reflection and sadness, which cannot be wondered at when I say the happiest, if not the best and palmiest days of my life have been spent among you, consequently it is only natural that I should keenly feel my position here to-night. But wherever I go the name of Guelph and its warm-hearted inhabitants will on all occasions find a large room in my heart and thoughts.

Although, as you are aware, my intended home is in the Far West, still, should business improve here, I shall be happy to return and live the balance of my life with you.

You very happily refer to the many pleasing incidents which occurred during my time on this market, and in referring to them you bring my mind back to several of them which, as you say, were indeed happy.

In closing my associations with the Guelph market buyers and yourself, allow me again to thank you for Mrs. Balkwill and myself from the very innermost parts of our hearts, and in the fervent hope that Guelph will in the future, as in the past, keep the lead in commercial matters, whether as a Town or City.

Believe me to remain,
Yours most affectionately,
GEO. BALKWILL.

"The Mayor and Corporation of Guelph," was toasted and a happy speech was elicited from Mayor Howard. "The millers, grain and produce dealers of Guelph," were responded to by Messrs. Jas. Goldie, Geo. Murton, J. T. Brill, and Geo. Anderson. "The Railway Interests," brought Messrs. Frew, Gauhan and Jennings to their feet. Mr. John Risk responded to "The commercial interests," "The Ladies," brought out two champions in the person of Messrs. John Mackenzie and Wm. Carter. "The Press" and other volunteer toasts followed and were responded to.

Among the most pleasing features in the evening's enjoyment were songs by Messrs. Geo. Lees, J. Cherry, A. Frew, George Robins, S. Cherry, and Louis Zimmer.

The party broke up about one o'clock after much handshaking with Mr. Balkwill and wishes expressed for his future prosperity.

Mr. Balkwill's destination is on the Little Saskatchewan, where he will erect a grist mill.

The Late Julia Rowswell.

The Coroner's Inquest.

Last Monday evening, Dr. Keating, coroner, held an inquest in the Police Court on the body of the late Julia Rowswell.

The following are the names of the jurors:

Wm. Allan, Wm. Burgess, Thos. R. Galer, Andrew Findlay, Chas. Knowles, Robt. Feek, John Lambert, Fred. Knowles, Daniel Jackson, Geo. S. Powell, Wm. Russell, Robt. Shain, Geo. Bruce, jr.

Mr. Wm. Allan was chosen foreman.

The jurors were then sworn in, after which they retired to the drill shed to examine the body of the deceased. On returning the evidence of witnesses were heard.

Dr. Herod, medical practitioner in attendance on the deceased, sworn, said:—Had seen the body of deceased young woman in the drill shed, and recognized it as that of Julia Rowswell. Had seen her professionally several times. Her brother had desired him to attend to her. Saw her professionally the day before she was missing—that was on Thursday, 21st March, and she disappeared on Friday morning. Found her in a low, melancholy condition, weak bodily and mentally, and evidently very much affected. Considered her to be in a condition to commit suicide if she had an opportunity, and gave Mrs. Goodeve orders that she ought not to be left five minutes alone, and that someone should sleep with her or be near her. Mrs. Goodeve told him that her brother was expected in a few days and he (Dr. Herod) had made up his mind to tell him that his sister was not fit to be at large, and that it would be necessary to put her to an asylum or get some one to be constantly with her. Considered her likely to commit suicide. Deceased was at Mrs. Goodeve's for the purpose of receiving treatment. Had seen the body, and it was his opinion that she came to her death by drowning. She might have been in the water from the time of her disappearance until now.

Arthur H. Goodeve sworn—Had seen the body and recognized it as that of Julia Rowswell. She came to our house in September last, and had been with us up till the time of her disappearing. Had never seen her before her coming in September. Had taken her at the request of her brother, whom he had known for a long time. She was in delicate health when she came. The first symptoms of anything more than usual was manifested two days before Dr. Herod was called in. Dr. Herod had not been to the house to see her previously as far as he recollected, but thought that Mrs. Goodeve had taken her to Dr. Herod's office previously. He did not understand Dr. Herod to have said that deceased was in any immediate danger, only that her mind was affected. On the doctor's second visit they were anxious to find out how the case stood. The doctor told them that it was a case of insanity, that they had better notify her brother, as she would have to be put to an asylum or get some one to attend her. He nor his household did not understand from Dr. Herod that there was any immediate danger, or that she should not be left five minutes alone. If such orders had been given it would have been attended to. She was quiet and docile all the day previous to the morning of her leaving, but did not like to have intercourse with any one except Mrs. Goodeve. She made the remark that day "O, would it not be nice for you (Mrs. Goodeve) and I to be alone." She went to her that evening about eight o'clock, seeming all right. The stair door was left open after her retiring, so that we might hear if she wanted anything, or anything transpire. We went to bed about eleven o'clock, and before retiring Mrs. Goodeve went in to see her, and found her awake. Mrs. Goodeve told her to go to sleep, when she requested the door to be shut, which Mrs. Goodeve complied with, thinking that if the door was shut she might go to sleep more readily. We heard no more of her till next morning, when the room was entered and found to be empty. She had passed from her bed room into an adjoining room, taking a chair with her, to allow her to get up to the window, which she had opened and stepped out on to the roof of a building attached, by which she reached the ground. This was discovered by footprints which could be traced on the roof till they reached the ground. The roof of the building descended to the ground by reason of the hill sloping down at the back. She had left the house with the clothing in which she was found. A general search was made for her, everybody seeming anxious to render what assistance they could. My first move was to go to the Western Station thinking that she would make for her old home. From the time of her disappearing had heard no tidings of her till this afternoon, when it was rumored that she was found in the river. He had learned since her disappearance, from a sister, that she had been out of her mind some three years before for about three months. She was then strictly watched, and no opportunity given of doing herself an injury.

To the jurors—Dr. Herod did not give strict orders that she should not be left alone, or else it certainly would have been done. She had never expressed herself as having a desire to commit suicide. She was quiet and gentle. She had no lamp with her in the room on retiring. Mrs. Goodeve looked around the room carefully and searched her clothes to see if she could find anything wherewith she could do herself an injury. He believed she had shown a disposition to injure herself when she was in the same condition formerly. He had learned this from her sister lately. Did not understand Dr. Herod to say that she was in any present danger, but that she would become one of those settled cases who would require constant watching. The room next to the one she occupied was empty. It is used as a store room. The window opens on hinges, and is fastened with a button. She had to get on a chair to reach the window. Did not hear any noise through the night.

Geo. Atkinson was next called, and testified to having been near the boat-houses shooting in company with Herbert Hatch, and Ed. Schofield, when they discovered something in the water which turned out to be the body of the deceased young woman. This was near one of the boat-houses. Hatch went after a boat, and he remained, Schofield in the meantime coming up. They then rowed out to the spot. When they discovered the body, it was arranged that he should stay, while the others went in search of some of the authorities. On the arrival of the authorities the body was taken out of the water and conveyed in a light wagon to the drill shed.

To a juror—The body was lying on its face with the feet up the stream, about fifteen feet out, in about three feet of water. The place was about one hundred yards from where Presants' race comes out and joins the river.

Ed. Schofield corroborated the evidence of the former witness.

Chief Kelly testified to having been informed of the discovery of the body about half-past two in the afternoon, and to having made arrangements for the carrying of the body to town.

The Coronor then addressed the jurors. From the Doctor's evidence and from the corroborating evidence of Mr. Goodeve, it was evident that the young lady was out of her mind, and consequently not responsible for her actions. It was one of those cases that the desire for self-destruction is so great that it is impossible to prevent it, unless, as Dr. Herod remarked, there was some one constantly in attendance, or the patient confined in an asylum. The deceased being in this frame of mind, it was quite probable that she had thrown herself into the river.

After a brief consultation the jury gave a verdict that the deceased had come to her death by drowning, and by her own act, while in an unsound state of mind, and that no blame was to be attached to any party having her in charge.

The body of Miss Rowswell was taken charge of by her friends after it had been viewed by the jurymen, and conveyed to the residence of Mr. Goodeve.

At noon to-day, (Tuesday), the body was conveyed to the Great Western station, and from thence by rail to Walkerton, and by conveyance to Durham, where the body will be interred.

A Question of Interest to Farmers.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—I happened to be in Guelph a few days ago, when I saw one of the most interesting sights an old farmer can look at, and that was a drove of splendid cattle. But the thought of this direct trade with Britain (with the assistance of something else perhaps) set my old noddle a wool gathering, and I kept thinking and rethinking the subject over until I got home. But I should tell you before I go any farther that I was told that Sandy Goodfellow was going home to England with the cattle, and that Geordie Hood was taking a similar lot of Yankee cattle, bought in the Chicago market.

Now I am not going to say that Geordie did wrong in touching the unclean thing, he being a strong National Policy man, for he has a perfect right to make an honest penny even among those abominable Yankees who put such high duties on our stuff. But the question is, which of these droves of cattle will sell best, suppose them of equal value. Will John Bull show any favor to Sandy's drove because they are distant relatives of the English cattle? But, Mr. Editor, this is what I am arriving at, and I know you will think I am long coming to it. Supposing that our proposed National Policy is in full blast, and a duty of say 20 per cent. on American cattle, would Goodfellow have been able, or would he have been justified in giving anything more for the cattle he purchased from the Wellington farmers? This is what I want to get at—some practical evidence, some practical illustration from the business we are every day transacting, to prove that this proposed change will benefit us struggling farmers.

Now, Sir, as I am one of those who has heard heard sides of the question, and am anxious to get more light, (I am not one to jump at conclusions just because Aleck Mackenzie or John A. says so) I hope that you—who is supposed to know everything—will answer my question—or it may be you could procure the assistance of the champions Whitelaw and Bathgate, but don't confuse our noddles with a screed of figures. What I want is a plain answer to a plain question.

Yours truly,
AN OLD CLODHOPPER.

Eramosa, March 30th, 1878.

We have not far to go for an answer to the query of our correspondent. The imposition of a duty of 20 per cent. on American cattle coming into Canada would not to the extent of a single cent affect the price of Canadian cattle in England. We don't need American cattle; we have a surplus of our own, for which we are finding a market in England, and, therefore, the imposition of a duty on American cattle coming into Canada would not have the slightest effect on the prices paid for ours. Where the benefit of a retaliatory policy would be in this case we cannot see, nor can any advocate of the much vaunted, but unmeaning National Policy tell us. The American tariff in no sense affects us, because we are sending our surplus stock to a market where there is no discrimination, and where we have to compete on equal terms with the American stock men. Our correspondent makes out a good case in showing up the unsound arguments of the retaliatory tariff advocates, for though we put on a duty tomorrow of a 100 per cent on American cattle, it would not alter by one cent the price of Canadian cattle in the English market.

SAYS the Hamilton Times:—The proposed new States tariff retains a duty of from 35 to 50 per cent. on manufactured articles. The Mail, referring to this, suggests that free trade has evidently not made much headway in the States yet. We do not know what our contemporary can make out of the matter, except this, that after some fifteen years of an excessively high protective tariff, the States manufacturers are as much afraid of the competition of foreign manufactures as ever. They have acquired so little real strength by their long nursing that they still demand the bandages, props and spoon food of infancy. That is nothing to boast of, and the Mail is mistaken if it imagines the prospect to be one that Canadians will look forward to as desirable for Canada.

SINCE the Joly Government came into power it has arranged to borrow a million dollars from the Bank of Montreal at six per cent, for which the old Government was to pay seven per cent.

A faction hostile to the Pope is said to exist in the College of Cardinals.

THE Herald is greatly exercised about the Reform candidate for the Ontario Legislature for South Wellington at the next election, and is specially concerned about the editor of the MERCURY in that connection, who seems to be a sort of political ogre to the bumptious editor of that sensational sheet. If the editor of the Herald troubled himself as little about the matter as it does the editor of the MERCURY, it would tend greatly to preserve his serenity of temper, and save sensible people the ridicule and laughter they indulge in over his senseless and stupid personalities. If the editor of the MERCURY were to descend so low as to answer the Herald's article, then he would put himself on a level with the writer of it. But he prefers to pursue the honest, independent and straightforward course he has hitherto endeavored to do, and can afford to brush aside such gadflies, who seek, but in vain, to annoy him with their contemptible surmises, endoes, and falsehoods. Let the Her mind its own business; the editor of the MERCURY will attend to his.

Town Council.

Guelph Debentures Sold at Par.

A regular meeting was held on Monday evening. Present—His Worship Mayor Howard in the chair, Messrs. Elliott, Richard Mitchell, Sleeman, Chase, Doran, Melvin, Hearn, Robert Mitchell, Bruce, Gowdy, Day, Roche, MacMillan, and Dr. McGuire,

The Clerk announced that Mr. J. P. MacMillan had subscribed to the declaration of office.

Major Macdonald invited the Council to attend the presentation of the Governor-General's medal to Captain McCrae on Wednesday evening next by Colonel Taylor.

An account of $32 was submitted from the trustees of the Guelph Curling Rink Company for use of building as a polling booth for 1876-'77-'78.

W. F. Boomer asked for a sidewalk and a ditch on Paisley street. If materials were supplied by the corporation the petitioner promised to lay the sidewalk.

John Barrett and thirteen others asked for grading and sidewalk on Manitoba and Wood streets.

Thomas McCrae and one hundred and twelve others asked for repairs on the Edinburgh Road.

An account of $116.99 was presented from the Herald office.

An account of $4.50 was presented from Nathan Tovell for two coffins ordered by the Relief Committee.

An affidavit in re Hugh Kelly's claim for damages to horse was presented.

An account of $10 was presented from John Harris against the Relief Committee.

An account of $178 from S. J. Cherry, for flour ordered by the same Committee.

An account of $7.75 from G. L. Wilson, ordered by the same Committee.

An account of $15.26 from John Horsman, ordered by the Road and Bridge Committee.

Estimates of the High and Public School Boards were presented from Mr. Torrance, Secretary. The amount required for the High School was $2,152.58, and for the Public School $12,513.

Robt. Monoghan and thirty others asked for a crossing on Durham street.

John Horsman and one hundred and nine others, asked for the construction of the Heffernan street bridge as was provided for by an appropriation of $2,300 in the schedule which was printed in connection with the $30,000 By-law.

The petitions and accounts were referred to the proper Committees.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Elliott, chairman, reported that the Committee had received various tenders for the purchase of debentures, to be issued under authority of By-law 292, and have sold the whole $10,000 to be issued at par.

ROAD AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE.

Richard Mitchell, chairman, presented the following report:—

That the petition of Samuel Hodgskin, for permission to enclose with post and bar, a portion of the westerly side of Woolwich street, in front of his property, and lying between Charles and Edwin streets, for the purpose of planting and ornamenting the same, be granted. A like priviledge to be granted to any person for the same purpose, providing that work is always done subject to the approval of the Committee.

Mr. J. C. McLagan's petition was recommended to be granted, provided the same be done at his own expense, subject to the approval of the Committee. The matter referred to improvements in front of his property on Paisley street.

Denis Bunyan's account of $350 was ordered to be paid.

It was recommended that the Clerk be instructed to notify the present owners of the property in reference to the encroachment on the street leading from Allan's bridge to the Grand Trunk station.

MARKET COMMITTEE.

Mr. Melvin, chairman, reported, recommending that the roof of the Town Hall be repaired, and that the seats in the hall be numbered for concert purposes. It was recommended that George Murton be paid $148.52 for coal, and Francis Marriott be paid $16.82 for money paid for attending gates and two cords of cedar posts.

POLICE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Day, for the Committee, reported, recommending that the police be furnished with new uniforms, and that tenders be asked for the same.

PRINTING COMMITTEE.

Mr. Doran, for the Committee, reported, recommending the payment of these accounts:—Joseph H. Hacking, printing, $10.50; T. J. Day, stationery, $7.75.

The Finance report was adopted on motion of Messrs. Elliott and Sleeman.

The Road and Bridge report was adopted, on motion of Messrs. Mitchell and Day.

Moved by Mr. Melvin, seconded by Mr. Bruce, that the Market report be adopted.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Robert Mitchell, seconded by Mr. Roche, that the report of the Market Committee be not adopted, but be referred back to the Committee to be reported upon when a chairman shall have been properly appointed for said Committee.

Some discussion took place on the amendment, the mover of the amendment evidently being bound to oust the newly-appointed chairman of the Market Committee if possible.

The amendment was lost, five only voting for it, and the report was adopted.

Mr. Doran gave notice of motion that he would move at next meeting to have the words "be paid" in clause one of the Relief Committee rescinded.

The matter is in reference to the cripple Butler, now at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mr. J. P. MacMillan tendered his resignation as member of the Market Committee.

Messrs. Day and Gowdy moved that the resignation be not accepted. Carried.

The Council adjourned at 8:45.

A TELEGRAM from Fredericton gives the intelligence that a serious charge of malversation of office has been preferred against two members of the Local Government, which is now the subject of investigation by a Committee of the House. The charge is that of selling a public contract to contractors in consideration of their political support. The accused Ministers deny the charge in toto.

The representative of the new owners of the St. Paul and Pacific Railway have returned from the East, and report that the transfer of bondholding interest from the Dutch holders to Canada and Minnesota parties has been completed. Cars will be running from St. Paul to Winnipeg in November.

Canaries just arrived at Marcon's Seed Store. Splendid singers. d2

CORMACK & KELEHER

Having purchased the entire stock, fixtures and good-will of the business of Mr. James Cormack, Sr., Merchant Tailor, in Guelph, take this opportunity of informing the public of their intention to carry on in all its branches. While it is their intention to still retain the prestige of the late firm in turning out superior clothing to any establishment in town, they have also, in consideration of their expenses being wonderfully curtailed, made a MARKED REDUCTION OF PRICES in the various lines, even to such an extent that they feel assured that all their patrons will not only be astonished and satisfied, but constrained to recommend the firm to their friends.

Order Department.

This Department will be under the supervision of a FIRST CLASS CUTTER, the services of whom they have been fortunate enough to secure, and whose reputation is such that it is with the greatest confidence his abilities and skill are submitted to the gentlemen of Guelph and vicinity. All orders will be executed in such a manner as to ensure entire satisfaction to customers. No one will require to don a garment that is not in every respect the very acme of perfection as far as fit and workmanship are concerned. From the fact that a LARGE AND CHOICE STOCK OF CLOTHS will always be kept on hand, there is no fear but that all can be suited in the selection of material.

Gents' Furnishings.

With regard to this department, they are convinced that the time has arrived in the history of all large and well organized establishments which handle men's wearing apparel, when GENTS' FURNISHINGS, to be attractive, must be constantly replete with staple goods, together with the novelties of the season, and to effect this our purchases shall be frequently and carefully made.

Ready Made Clothing.

Possessing the advantages of being manufacturers as well as retailers of these goods they are enabled to present to the public many lines superior to the general factory made clothing.

CHAPTER XXX.

LIZZIE IS DELIVERED INTO THE HANDS OF ANOTHER KEEPER.

"Come ashore, Joe, I want a word with you," was the greeting he received.

"Well, can't you say it here," growled the hunchback, crossly.

"No, I must speak with you in private. Come, be quick; it is past sunset, and you know how far we have yet to ride."

"Ride away, then; I didn't ask you to stop."

"No, but I have business with you—directions to give. Do you see the lady?"

"What's to hinder me from seeing her? Do you think I'm blind?"

"My directions regard her, She goes with you to the island."

"Oh, ho! that's the way the wind sits, does it? She seems pleased with her destination, doesn't she?—the very picture of delight, I should say. Ha, Ha! the pretty lady is happy to go off in the boat with old Joe; quite admires my handsome figure, no doubt. Only she hasn t seen it to the best advantage yet, so I'll e'en come ashore for her delectation."

He rose from his seat, put his short legs over the side, and stood on the jetty in all his hideous deformity.

Alfred had not got a sight of him till now, but the moment he saw him his blue eyes dilated with terror, then with a wild shriek he clasped his mother's neck convulsively, and hid his face in her bosom, whence other stifled shrieks came in quick succession.

"My darling—my darling—he—he won't hurt you,' faltered Lizzie, in a low soothing tone, as nervously she tried to quiet him.

"There's another one overjoyed to see me," grinned the dwarf, repeating his mocking laugh. "How complimentary, to be sure—how proud I should feel. Oh, yes, I'm highly pleased to be the object of such unfeigned admiration."

"Bah, don't give further vent to your sarcastic humour," said the leader impatiently. "Come hither, man, and hear what I have got to say to you."

"I needn't go far to hear, for I'm not deaf any more than blind. But here's with you, Master Coulson, for I daresay you haven't brought me across the loch for nothing."

Colson—at length we have got this man's name—turned short around, and walked off along the shore, followed by the dwarf, but not before he had bestowed a horrible leer on Lizzie, which made her flesh creep. Pressing to her bosom her now quiet but close-clinging child, she gazed after him in a state of dread fascination, for never had she beheld a being so disgusting and unhuman, and the knowledge that she was to accompany him alone across the lock made her tremble and shudder.

"Wull she be feared for auld Joe?" asked Ranald, coming to her side.

"Yes, I am afraid—I am terrified," gasped Lizzie.

"Whist; she had better no hear her say that. Auld Joe will maybe no be so pad as she looks if she's no crossed, and that she manna pe at nae rate, for the deevil himsel' isna waur when angry."

"And am I to be put into his hands?" asked Lizzie, with a despairing look.

"Ay, she's just that," was the dry response.

"Do you not go with us to the island?"

"Shurely no. But she'll be better no tae ask her ony mair questions; just dae everything in her poo'r tae pleasure auld Joe, for it wadna be canny tae cross him."

With this well-intended but rather superfluous hint, Ranald turned away to look after the horses, and resolutely avoided Lizzie's farther questioning.

For fully a quarter of an hour Colson and the hunchback stood talking together by the edge of the loch—the low tones of their voices being heard in the deep stillness, but not the words they uttered. Colson had the largest share of the talk. He seemed to be giving Joe directions, to which the latter listened with great attention, nodding his unshapely head now and then in token of understanding and approval. At last the conference broke up, and they returned together to the landing place.

"Now you understand everything?" Lizzie heard Colson say.

"Oh, it's all plain enough, and I take it in hand," answered Joe.

"Very well. Keep to the instructions, and Ranald will bring cloths and provisions the day after to-morrow. Now, get afloat, and we shall ride on our way."

"Hadn't you better put the girl in first," said Joe, as he caught up the chain of the boat and pulled the skiff close to the landing place,

"No. She will sit in the stern."

"Mayhap she'll steer," observed Joe, with a cynical laugh, as he drew his misshapen body into the boat.

"Well, you can hardly expect that; but I should think you will be able to keep the course without steering."

"I should think so too—leastway, I've done it before many a time. There you are; now, then, all ready."

"Now, ma'am, you'll have to step into the boat," said Colson to Lizzie, who stood pale and silent a few yards off.

Mindful of Ranald's hint not to cross the dwarf, she came forward without hesitation and with as little manifestation of repugnance as possible, and was helped in. She tried to keep Alfred within the folds of the cloak, so that he might not see the hideous face of the dwarf, but in getting over the side she stumbled forward, the cloak flew open, and the boy was landed almost in Joe's arms.

Another wild scream of terror was the consequence, at which the hunchback grinned malignantly, as if with the intention of adding to the child's fright. But Lizzie took care that the latter should not see this further cause of fear, for she quickly drew his head within the shelter of the old cloak, snd whispered soothing words of comfort in his ear.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

The Castleton Tragedy.

Trial of Welton at Cobourg.

Marvin Welton was placed on his trial at the Cobourg Assizes on Monday, before Chief Justice Harrison, on a charge of being particeps criminis in procuring an abortion which culminated in the death of Victoria Alberta Wade, a school teacher. The facts are these:—On the 25th of May, 1877, Miss Victoria Alberta Wade, a school teacher in the township of Cramohe, disappeared from her residence, and a few days afterwards her body was found concealed in a wood near the residence of one David Smith, at Castleton. A post mortem examination revealed that her death had been caused by an attempt to procure an abortion by the use of instruments. Instruments similar to those supposed to have been used were found under the threshold of Smith's hut; articles of clothing said to have belonged to the deceased were found in his possession; and as a consequence he was arrested, found guilty, and is now undergoing a sentence of imprisonment for life. During the course of the trial at the Assizes in Cobourg, the confession of Smith proved that Marvin Welton and J. Cope Mallory, his nephew and the seducer of the girl, were parties to the crime. Although Marvin Welton was then in custody it was not thought advisable to place him in the dock with Smith; and similarly at the present time, although Mallory is in custody, and charged with the same crime as Welton and Smith, he has not been placed in the dock with the former, but his trial will take place at some future time.

Hon. M. C. Cameron, Q.C., instructed by W. Kerr, Q.C., Cobourg, appeared for the prisoner Marvin Welton, and Mr. D. M. Britton, of Kingston, conducted on behalf of the Crown. The prisoner is a finely built man of somewhat commanding appearance, with prominent profile, and clean shaved face, excepting a moustache. He appeared to be very little moved by his unfortunate position, although he manifested a keen interest in the proceedings, and frequently instructed his counsel. During the recess his wife and children (a boy and girl) spoke to him, and he was observed to kiss both children.

Among other witnesses the convict Smith was examined. He was at first unwilling to be sworn but after some talk with the Judge gave the following evidence:—

I lived in Castleton and was acquainted with Cope Mallory and Marvin Welton; the prisoner is Marvin Welton; I do not remember at what time Welton came to my house, but it was before I was arrested; there was a female with Welton when he came to my house; he wanted me to perform an abortion, which I undertook to do; (he gave details in all their atrocity of of the committal of the crime); Welton was present when the operation was performed, and the girl's head was across his arms; while the act was being performed the girl fainted away; Welton took her out to the door to try to rouse her; he brought her in again and laid her on the bed; he told me to hold on a few minutes, as the girl had not recovered from her faint; she died before the prisoner left; I told him, "I believe in my soul she is dead;" he said he was going away for a short time and would return; I do not remember the precise words he used; but I think he said he would be back in twenty-five or thirty minutes; during all that time the prisoner and myself were the only persons present; J. Cope Mallory came in after the prisoner went out; the prisoner followed a short time after; they took the body away by carrying it; I cannot tell how far they carried it; there is no road within a quarter of a mile from my house; I saw no horse that evening; I did not bring the girl there, so I thought I had no business to take her away; I only used the instruments once; (several instruments produced); these were the instruments I think, but these did not belong to me (throwing several wires on the floor as if indignant); the prisoner shook the girl and asked her what was the matter, and he requested me to give him a glass of water which he threw in her face; I believe the girl was dead when she was taken away; I did not see any shawl, or other loose article of clothing, but the next morning Mr. Gaffield picked up a veil and a bow; he said, "You had a girl here last night," which I denied; I did not know the girl; she was veiled, and it was dark; I saw her once before under similar circumstances in the woods; I examined her, and told her I could not help her; Mr. Welton asked me to go and see her on the first occasion.

Bunster on his Muscle.

The Ottawa correspondent of the London Advertiser gives the following amusing account of the set-to between Bunster and Cheval on Friday night:—

A most extraordinary scene occurred in the lobby of the House of Commons on Friday night which fairly may be said to have brought the humors of the session to a head. Mr. Bunster made a speech in the House after recess, during the delivery of which he was interrupted by someone on the back Ministerial benches imitating the sound of a horn. This made the famous member for Vancouver very irate, and he asked the hon. gentleman who had thus insulted him to send him his card and he would be glad to receive him outside. After he sat down he received a blank card and was led to believe that Mr. Cheval was the offender, and therefore he sent that gentleman the following note:—

OTTAWA, May 28, 1878.

CHEVAL,—Sir you having sent me a blank and I think lackguard balackguard card I would like you to meet me in room 13 Immediately and explain your meaning why you did not sign your name to it and the insult you meant while I was speaking, awaiting your answer, I am Sir,

A. BUNSTER.

The above note, beside the bad spelling, had not a single punctuation point in it, which speaks volumes for "B. A. of Trin. Coll. Dub." as he claims to be.

Mr. Cheval at once repaired to room 13 where the following conversation took place:

Bunster—What do you mean by sending me a blank card?

Cheval—I did not send you any such thing.

Bunster (excited)—You played the bugle while I was speaking.

Cheval—I did not.

Bunster—Your a——liar and I'll knock ——out of you.

Cheval thereupon made a dive into Bunster's flowing beard with the left, taking him on the side of the head with the right. At the same time Bunster fetched the Frenchman a sockdolager on the left cheek which sent him flying across the room, but such was the force of the blow that while it relieved him of the grip of his opponent it left in that person's hand a magnificent chin scalp of curled hair about five and a half inches long and weighing something less than a pound or two. At this moment in rushed the Sergeant-at-Arms with his sword and a posse of members,' lobbyists, etc. The combatants were separated and Bunster retired to his den in No. 13, while Cheval, wildly waving his hirsute trophy above his head, gave the foregoing account of the affair to a highly appreciative and deeply interested audience.

Controversy among the first-class hotels of New York shows that the service is constantly changing from one first-class hotel to the other, and the bills of fare show the same variety of dishes. The important fact, to travellers, is that the Grand Central offers the same accommodations for one and two dollars per day less than the others. eod

THAT WONDERFUL MAN.

First Grand Exhibition of the Season.

OPENING OF OUR

MILLINERY SHOW ROOM,

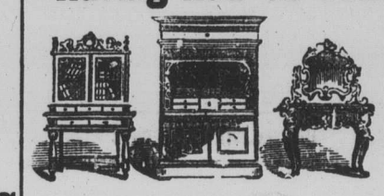
On Friday, the 5th April, 1878.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,
SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR.

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of genera depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,



that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from an admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and refinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lechevalier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse, the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and refinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

The Times says the Admiralty have made an urgent requisition on contrators who are manufacturing a large numner of picks and shovels, and demanded to know when they will be ready. Recruiting officers are experiencing an increase of business, and the men coming in of a superior class.

Sir Stafford Northcote announced in the House of Commons that the Marquis of Salisbury had been appointed Foreign Secretary.

The Circular which Sir Stafford Northcote stated had been sent to the Powers bears date of to-day, and is signed by the Marquis of Salisbury. It summarizes all the recent correspondence, and after giving Russia's refusal to consent to England's demand relative to placing the treaty as a whole before the Congress, continues as follows :—

Her Majesty's Government deeply regret Russia's decision. Even if a considerable portion of the stipulations of the treaty were likely to be approved Russia's reservation relative to their discussion would, nevertheless, be open to most serious objections. Every material stipulation of the treaty involves a departure from the treaty of 1856, and by the declaration signed in London in 1871 it is impossible for Her Majesty's Government to acquiesce in the withdrawal from the cognizance of the Powers of the articles which are modifications of of existing treaties. The combined efforts of the stipulations upon the interests of the Powers also furnishes a conclusive reason against the separate discussion of any portion of them.

The report is confirmed that Mr. Gathorne Hardy will take the Indian Office and the title of Lord Staplehurst, and that Mr. F. A. Stanley will take the Secretaryship of War.

A Herald's St. Petersburg special says: Should all hope of a general understanding be given up Russia will put an end to the suspense, and face the issue directly. England will be summoned to withdraw her fleet immediately from the Sea of Marmora. In case of refusal, which is certain, the Russians will occupy in the course of a few hours Constantinople and the whole shore of the Bosphorus; and thus England and Russia will be face to face. Everything here looks like war.

A St. Petersburg correspondent reports a slightly better feeling there. He says it is quite possible another attempt will be made to come to terms with England, if Austria's demands are as exorbitant as reported.

A Vienna despatch says, in consequence of Lord Derby's resignation and the calling out of the reserves, Austria has ceased her efforts to effect a compromise about the Congress, feeling sure that Russia will not yield to England's demand now, when doing so would seem somewhat like submitting before a threat. But what may not be possible now may become so later. The peace at any price tendency is still very strong in Vienna.

A Pera despatch, dated March 29, says: Although the Turkish policy may, a short time ago, have been pro-English, just now it is philo-Russian. The Russians have acquired over the Sultan and his advisers what in Turkey is the strongest kind of influence, direct personal influence. Some military men as high in rank as Osman and Raouf Pashas have become more Russian than English. Turkish and Russian soldiers fraternize, the latter going about Constantinople in uniform freely without evoking any animosity. If war comes, England must contemplate the possibility of having to fight Turkey and Russia. At best she would get from Turkey a one-sided neutrality of little or no substantial use.

A Constantinople despatch says: in the event of war it is expected the Porte will remain passive, and endeavor to make its territory respected, failing which the Porte will simply protest to the Powers.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. The great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the Rev. Joseph T. Inman, Station D. Bible House, New York City. Sept. 18, deodwly

Littell's Living Age.—The numbers of Littell's Living Age for the weeks ending March 23rd and 30th, respectively, have the following valuable contents: Precious Stones; The Telephone; How the Turks rule Armenia, by Dr. Humphrey Sandwith, of Kars; Within the Precincts, by Mrs. Oliphant, from advance sheets; Quevedo; Benedict de Spinoza; A Ring of Worlds; Erica, translated from the German of Frau von Ingersleben; Lay Figures; Macleod of Dare, by William Black, from advance sheets; The Mobility of Asiatics, with choice poetry, &c. A new volume begins with the first number of April. For fifty-two numbers, of sixty-four large pages (or more than 3,000 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; or for $10.50 any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies is sent with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston, are the publishers.

Choice Potatoes.—In a short time the potatoes will begin to sprout, and the potatoe bugs will begin to crawl. Let them crawl—but only once—then apply just one dose of potatoe bug poison. To be got only in its purity from Thorp & Son, hardware and house furnishing, 99 Upper Wyndham street. d

See Dr. G. W. Hotchkin's springless truss and supporter advertisement in another column of this paper. d13 w2.

Fire in Lucknow.—About two o'clock on Friday morning last the blacksmith shop occupied by Messrs. Mordaunt & Campbell, and owned by Mr. Wm. McDonald, was destroyed by fire. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. There had been no fire in the building after six o'clock, and the only fire at that hour was in the forges. Mr. McDonald's loss is about $500; Campbell & Mordaunt's about $400.

Hotel for Women.—The costly edifice erected by the late Alexander T. Stewart, of New York, for the accommodation of women who support themselves by their daily labor, turns out to be much less a charitable enterprise than has been supposed, seeing that the price to be charged for board and lodging has been fixed at six dollars per week, or seven dollars for every one who occupies a single room alone. Working women must be well paid in New York if they can afford to board at such hotels.

Speed of Steamships.—Since 1849 the fast steamships of the Atlantic trade have increased their speed from 8.3 knots per hour to 15.6 knots, and the consumation of fuel per 100 indicated horse power has been reduced from 4.7 cwt. to 1.9 cwt. In 1877 there were 182 steamships of 556,750 tons in the service, of which 125 of 477,905 tons were English. The statement of rapid passages since the year named shows a gradual reduction from 14 days to 7½. During the same time 56 steamers have been lost with 3,430 lives.

In the matter of GEORGE A. DANIELS, an Insolvent.

Sale of Real and Personal Estate.

There will be sold by Auction, at Guelph, on Friday, the 5th day of April next, the following properties belonging to the insolvent estate of G. A. Daniels:—

1. The interest of the insolvent and of myself as Assignee thereof, in the South-east half of Lot No. 3, on MacCartney's Survey, and fronting on Woolwich street, in the Town of Guelph, on which is situated a neat two story frame house, containing eight rooms, together with stable, carriage house, well, etc., etc. The property is encumbered with a mortgage of $1,000, at 8 per cent. interest, and has about three years to run.

2. A large quantity of builders' hardware, nails, tools, flooring, plank, boards, clear stuff, mouldings, &c.

3. Summer-house, horse-power, saw table, saws, morticing machines, block and tackle, &c., store front, counter, gates, doors, blinds, laths, &c.

4. Handsome horse, new buggy, waggon, bobsleigh, two sets harness, straw cutter, and stable furniture.

The real estate will be offered at the Market House, precisely at one, p.m., on the day named; and the remaining property at the workshop on Wellington street, immediately after the sale of the house.

TERMS—Cash for all purchases up to $20; and one month's credit for all larger amounts, on approved endorsed notes.

Dr. Hotchkin's treatment is practical, rational and economical. Its object is immediate relief and eventual cure. It is based upon scientific principles and easily demonstrated to the comprehension of every intelligent person, that a truss without steel springs or hard substance, having healed Inguinal and Umbellical as well as Varicosele, at the advanced ages respectively from 65 to 92 years must and will stand the test against all Spring Trusses. Treats children as well as adults. Dr. H.'s post office address is Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y. ad13w2

Russians Still Nearing Constantinople.

A Panic in St. Petersburg.

RUSSIANS ADVANCING ON GALLIPOLI.

The Fleet to Enter the Bosphorus.

LONDON, April 3.—A rumour from Constantinople states that the surrender of Turkish prisoners, held by the Russians, is indefinitely postponed.

LONDON, April 3.—A Constantinople despatch says the Russians are occupying the Heights of Bugukded.

Mr. Layard, the British Minister at Constantinople, it is stated is negotiating with the Porte on an Anglo-Turkish alliance.

A St. Petersburg despatch says a financial panic exists in that city.

VIENNA, April 3.—A despatch from St. Petersburg reports great excitement over the news of a probable alliance between England and Turkey. Everything assumed a warlike aspect. It is reported the Russians are rapidly advancing on Gallipoli. This movement is for the purpose of placing the army in a position to seize, if necessary, the most strategical points in the vicinity of the Turkish capital.

LONDON, April 3.—It is again reported that the English fleet is about to enter the Bosphorus, to counteract any design of the Russians towards the occupation of the Turkish strongholds.

THE crowds of country people in town, to-day for the transaction of business is very large.

WISHES A SUBSTITUTE.—Hargraves, in answer to a question from a gentleman who visited the jail in London, says it's very hard he should be there for training up a girl rightly. He says the Government should let him have a substitute, if he chose to pay for one. A neighboring prisoner said he would "go down" for the three years if Hargraves gave him $250. The latter was overjoyed, and said he would willingly give $400 down, if he could get out of it. But he cannot. It is said that Hargraves got $2,000 as a legacy from England a short time since, and that he has made a good deal since he came here. The hair factory is now being carried on by Miss Donnelly.

THE CASTLETON TRAGEDY.—The jury failed to agree in this case, after being locked up five hours. The Judge informed them that only a verdict of guilty or not guilty as to the charge of murder could be brought in. On that point they stood seven for acquittal and five against. All, however, were favourable to a verdict of manslaughter, which would have been brought in had not the Judge impressed on the jury that such a verdict would not be legal. Marvin Welton was released on the following bail:—Four thousand dollars personal security, and two sureties of two thousand dollars each; to appear at the next Assizes. Cope Mallory was released to appear when called on. Bail:—Three thousand dollars personal security, and three sureties of one thousand dollars each.

APRIL CATTLE FAIR.—In consideration of the fact that the Easter Fat Cattle Fair will be held in Guelph on the 10th inst., it could not be expected that the April Fair would amount to much. It is true that they were a large number of cattle on the grounds, consisting of milch cows and light beef cattle, but the almost entire absence of cattle rightly denominated prime, did not make the same keen competition between buyers that is wont to exist at what are considered good fairs. The prices for beef cattle ranged from $3.25 to $4.50—the latter figure was, however, only paid in one instance that came under the observation of the reporter. A few sheep and young pigs were disposed of. Although a number of horses were offered for sale the demand was almost nil. The animals offered for sale could not be considered first-class either. The sales appended will give our readers a very good idea of the prevailing prices:—Robt. Croft, milch cow, for $45; Robert Wharton, two heifers at $4; Henry Isles, yoke oxen at $3.75, two cows for $74; John Hales, cow for $43; Thos. Ravelle an ox at $3.25; John Leachman, bull for $32; William Kirkland, heifer for $33; John McKerlie, two head at $4.50; Robert Amos, heifer for $30; John Blakely, two cows for $70; George Dickieson cow for $35; William Green, cow for $30; Wm. Mason, three head at $3.75; M. McCarthy, two head at $3.12½; Robert Johnston, five steers at $3.75; Joseph Jackson, cow for $32; George Neustead, two steers at $3.50, and cow for $50; James Cleghorn, two head at $4; S. Barber, two cows for $33 each; Nicholas Cober, four head for $122; Henry Williams, three head at $3.50; Henry Rheinhart, three head for $85; James Dowrie, two head for $65.50; Hugh McKnight, two sheep at $5.50 each; John Johnston, four sheep at $7; Alex. Campbell, ram for $10.25.

MUSICAL UNION.—There was a large attendance of members at the practice of the above society last evening.

Business meeting of the Guelph Christian Temperance Club this (Wednesday) evening.

THE public is invited to attend the presentation of the Governor-General's medal in the drill shed this evening.

POLICE COURT.—Helen McLaughlin, a vagrant, was brought up this morning and sentenced to three months, or clear out. She cleared out.

CROWN COUNSEL.—We are pleased to learn that Mr. J. P. McMillan has been appointed Crown Counsel for the Assizes for the Counties of Peel and Victoria, the courts being held in Brampton and Lindsay.

BUSINESS CHANGES.—Mr. David Scroggie, for several years with Mr. Hugh Walker, has bought out Mr. Murray's lower store, next the Montreal Telegraph Office, and will carry on a general grocery and fruit business. We wish him success.

ST. GEORGE SOCIETY will hold a regular meeting on Thursday evening. Matters pertaining to the celebration of the day, the International Convention, &c., will be brought up for discussion. All members are urged to put in an appearance.

BASE BALL.—At a meeting of the members of the Maple Leaf Club held on Tuesday evening, Mr. George Sleeman was appointed delegate to attend the Convention of the Canadian Association, to be held in Toronto on Thursday next. The meeting then adjourned till the 9th.

THE GUELPH CHECKER CLUB has stirred up parties who had almost forgotten to play, so long had it been since they sat before a board for a game. The Tuesday evening meetings are always well attended. On the 9th a match will be played between chosen sides, captained by Messrs. McKenzie and Naismith.

A MEETING of the Protestant ministers of Guelph was held on Monday, when a resolution was adopted almost unanimously, that a certificate of the registry of a death should be received from the friends of the deceased prior to the interment services.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—Last Saturday, while the sawing machine was at work at Mr. George Atkinson's farm, Guelph Tp., Mr. Alexander Miller had a narrow escape. He was taking away the blocks from the saw, and in doing so came in contact with it, his cheek being badly cut. The wound is not a serious one, and it is hoped that he will soon be all right.

Mr. S. MYERS, manufacturer of the celebrated "M. P. C." and other first-class brands of cigars, returned from New York on Tuesday evening, after purchasing extensively of several samples of the finest quality of Havana tobaccos. He reports that considerable excitement exists in that city over the complicated state of affairs in Europe, but that a strong pro-English feeling is everywhere prominent.

EGGS are plentiful just now. This fact, however, does not excuse rowdies making too free in their use, by painting doors and walls of residences, by throwing them against the same. On Tuesday evening, a house on Cambridge street was saluted with a volley of eggs, all of which were not of a savoury character. The parties living in the house have an idea who the parties are. If they can secure sufficient grounds to prosecute they will certainly do so.

SERVICE OF SONG IN ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.—It is learned that Mrs. Winstanley, of Toronto (late Mrs. Dr. Howitt), an old Guelph favorite, will favor the audience with two solos next Monday evening. Mr. Vale will perform a trumpet solo in the Coronation March, and Miss Geddes will repeat (by particular request) her original arrangement "Nearer to Thee." Prof. Philp will also play one or two duets with Miss Geddes on the organ. The members of several other choirs have kindly lent their services in the choruses.

SMASHED.—This (Wednesday) morning as Mr. Walter Scott, of Eramosa, was coming into town, the front axle of his buggy broke when he had reached the vicinity of the iron bridge. This caused the horse he was driving to kick in a very lively although uninteresting manner. Mr. Scott was thrown out of the buggy and a few moments afterwards the horse had detached itself from the vehicle, by way of rendering it a complete wreck. Mr. Scott was not much injured by the mishap, beyond sustaining a severe shock to his system.

STOCK SALES.—Messrs. J. & R. Hunter, of Sunnyside Farm, Pilkington, have recently made sale of the following thoroughbreds:—To Robert Holloway, Monmouth, Illinois, Lord Aberdeen [3481], got by the imported bull Knight of Warlaby [2904]; dam Lady Fanny by Rob Roy [2274]. Mr. Holloway has in Lord Aberdeen not only a first-class show bull but a very superior stock bull. To Alexander Wood, St. Marys, yearling bull by Mantilini Booth bull, Baron Booth of Killerby [4271]. To Samuel Johnston, Howick, bull calf, by Baron Booth of Killerby. To J. & R. Slimmon, Peel, bull calf by Baron Booth of Killerby. To Wm. Jackson, Minto, bull calf, by Lord Aberdeen. To Messrs. Wood, Stratford, cow, Queen of May, 2nd, by Clifton Duke 2nd [133].

RUNAWAY.—Last evening Messrs. C. Kloepfer and J. S. Wilson had an interesting time with a horse that was afraid of music furnished by a fife and drum band. Mr. Kloepfer was driving, and when the animal exhibited signs of fear he was kept well in check at first, but afterwards bolted into the ditch on Norfolk street, and threw both parties out. The animal then started off on a lone race down towards Wyndham street, across the track to Huskisson steeet, and from thence in a roundabout way to the livery stable of Mr. G. D. Patterson, where it entered little the worse of its mad race. A cushion dropped out of the vehicle, and was afterwards recovered. The parties in the buggy have reason to be thankful for their escape from injury in being pitched out, and also well pleased that the buggy was not wrecked while the horse was lively exercise without a guiding hand having hold of the reins.

KING DODDS.

"True Temperance," as Reviewed By Him.

On Tuesday evening Mr. E. King Dodds lectured in the Town Hall on the above subject. It was expected that his reputation as a lecturer of great ability would draw a very large crowd. This, however, did not prove the case, as many imagined that the lecture to be delivered would be very little more than a rehash of his campaign speeches against the working of the Dunkin Act. The crowd present did not number over two hundred, many of whom, however, were ladies.

Mayor Howard was in the chair, and he in a few words, called on the lecturer of the evening.

Mr. Dodds, on rising, was received with loud applause. In first dealing with the subject of his lecture, he referred to the laws laid down in olden time, and particularly to the Blue Laws of Connecticut, and asked how it would be to have such a prohibitory law as then enacted with the expectation of having it observed by the people of Canada at the present time. He would ask who or what portion of the inhabitants of the Province of Ontario would at the present time abide by or submit to such arbitrary measures. He then likened a prohibitory liquor measure which did not appeal to the moral sense of the community to the same Blue Laws. He referred to the working of the Dunkin Act in the various municipalities where it had been tried, and drew inferences and made statements to show that it had been a failure. As with the Dunkin Act, so with the new Temperance Bill, or any prohibitory Bill that had for its object the making of sober men by Act of Parliament, as they had in every case been proven untenable or unworkable. The working of a prohibitory liquor law in the States, as reported on by a Commission appointed by the Government of the country was next referred to. Particular stress was laid on the manner in which the law was worked in Michigan where the prohibitory law was on the Statute books, but withal considered a dead letter. He held that in Detroit, a city in that State, the liquor dealers of which were amenable to the prohibitory law, had more saloons to the square acre than any other city in the Union. The Temperance Bill of 1878 was dealt with. The ten gallon measure was condemned in the most emphatic terms. He considered it no object gained by the temperance party by allowing brewers and distillers to sell liquor to be sold to those whom they have reason to believe would remove it out of the county where the law was in force, and sell it there. He thought when the liquor seller was committing a crime, a little of those who freely bestow it on the former should be tendered to the latter. He urged a cheap license for native wines and beer, and a heavy license on alcoholic beverages. France and Germany was instanced where such was observed and the scarcity of drunkenness in those places were referred to. Severe punishment was advocated for those who broke the law in such cases. He claimed that the tastes of the community could be educated, as it were, to certain liquors. Where the Dunkin Act was in force how was it the bartenders explain the matter? Why easily enough. Beer had to be kept in bottles; barrels were too bulky and were easily noticed by officers of the law. Instend therefore of the bar-tender having perforce to visit the cellar for a bottle of beer the customer will say "I'll take whiskey," and so it was that beer was left to one side, and whiskey reigned in its place. An appeal was made, burning with eloquence, to those who had votes, who had influence, to exert their influence against chimerical legislation, against those who would have a law that would bear lightly on the rich man and heavily on the poor man. He referred to his intended trip through eleven prohibitory States, where he would learn from official sources, and through such means, how such a law would operate. He hoped on his return he would be quite enough acquainted with the working of the law to be able to place in such a manner before the people of this country information as would enable them to frame a law that would bear more equally on all classes, and be such as was acquired and would work for the best interests of the country. In concluding, the speaker urged upon the citizens of the country to have less confidence in foreign adventurers as temperance advocates, who had been deified and then fallen, and rely more upon honest and true men amongst themselves, who had not merely the object of having themselves deified, but were willing to work for the salvation of the country. The lecturer was loudly applauded at intervals throughout his address.

THE KEITH ABDUCTION CASE.—Rev. Mr. Goodwin, a Roman Catholic priest, was tried at the Cobourg Assizes on Tuesday, for aiding in the abduction of two children belonging to Mr. D. Keith, of Toronto. They were by his consent under the care and tutelage of the Rev. Mr. Drummond, of Newcastle. One of the conditions by which Mrs. Keith received her present allowance was, that the children should be placed under the care of Rev. Mr. Drummond. She was not prevented from seeing the children, but was not to have them. On the 12th of March the children did not return from school, and a subsequent search after tea discovered that they had been abducted. Two buggies were hired at Whitby by the prisoner; and he drove the buggies to Bowmanville. He also went to Newcastle, where he was accompanied by a woman whom he called sister. These buggies were afterwards seen near the residence of Mr. Drummond, and that, together with other circumstaaces, would in evidence be brought against the prisoner. The children had undoubtedly been spirited out of the country. The father was a Protestant, and desired to have the children brought up in that faith; and the mother was a Roman Catholic, and naturally wished to have the children brought up in her faith. Mrs. Keith in her evidence admitted that Goodwin aided in abducting the children, on her instructions, that they are in a Catholic institution in the United States, but she refused to say which one, or where it is. The jury after three hours' deliberations, failed to agree. They were discharged, and the prisoner released on the following bail:—Personal security $2,000, and one security of $2,000.

Agrarian Murder in Ireland.

The Earl of Leitrim Shot Dead.

DUBLIN, April 2.—The Earl of Leitrim, his clerk and driver, were all shot dead this morning while driving near his Lordship's lodge at Manor Vaughan, county of Derry. No details.

The Earl of Leitrim was shot opposite a cottage from which he had recently evicted a widow. Eighty-nine of his tenants are under notice to quit.

The Earl of Leitrim's body was found in a ditch. The left side of his head is battered in. It is thought he was also shot in the head, but the fatal shot was the heart. His left arm is broken, and his right completely shattered. The driver and clerk were shot in the head. The ground where the murder was committed shows traces of a hard struggle. A fowling piece and part of another gun were found near the spot. Three or four men were seen loitering in the neighborhood before occurrence of the murder.

A SHAMEFUL CASE.—At the Whitby Assizes, Wm. Bell, township of Pickering, brought an action against George Percy for the seduction of his daughter Maggie, 22 years of age. The girl swore that defendant was not only the father of her child, but that he first tried to get her to destroy her offspring, and afterwards wished her to come to the hospital here, under an assumed name. Failing this, he attempted to get her to lay the paternity to an innocent man. A verdict of $200 was given.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

PEACE MORE PROBABLE.

Austria doing her best for Peace.

Differences Between Russia and Turkey.

April 2.

The following is one of the sentences in Lord Salisbury's circular to the Powers verbatim, in which he objects to the treaty of San Stefano as a whole:—

The combined effect of the treaty in addition to its results upon the Greek population, and upon the balance of maritime power, which has already been pointed out, is to depress almost to the point of entire subjection the political independence of the Government of Constantinople. The formal jurisdiction of that Government extends over geographical positions which must, under all circumstances be of the deepest interest to Great Britain. It is in the power of the Ottoman Government to close or to open the straits which form the natural highway of the nations between the Ægean Sea and the Euxine. Its dominion is recognized at the head of the Persian Gulf on the shores of the Levant, and in the immediate neighborhood of the Suez Canal. It cannot be otherwise than a matter of extreme solicitude to this country that the Government to which this jurisdiction belongs should be so closely pressed by the political outposts of a greatly superior Power that its independent action, and even existence, is almost impossible. These results are not so much from the language of any single article in the treaty as from the operation of the instrument as a whole. Discussion limited to articles selected by one Power in the Congress would be an illusory remedy for the dangers to English interests, and to the permanent peace of Europe, which would result from the state of things which the treaty proposes to establish.

The foregoing seems to show the utter impossibility of a compromise between England and Russia, on the basis of the San Stefano Treaty.

It is announced officially thatit has been decided to immediately recall the Duke of Edinburgh from the Mediterranean. It is probable four ships of the Channel squadron will go to the Piræus.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has ordered special prayers in consequence of the public anxiety.

The London Gazette publishes a proclamation ordering the reserves to assemble on or before April the 19th.

A London despatch says:—Austrian views, which could hardly be more antagonistic to the whole Treaty, are said by the Times' St. Petersburg correspondent to be regarded there as so exorbitant that the Russian Chancellory, to prevent an offensive alliance between Austria and England, is about to make another attenpt to come to terms with England. At Vienna hopes are still entertained that the Congress may meet.

It is stated from Vienna and St. Petersburg, on usually good authority, that Russia is irritated by the rebuff from France. The latter being approached for a separate recognition of the Treaty replied that she would not participate in a combination against England.

Advices from Constantinople last evening say a strong conviction prevails at the Russian headquarters that an Anglo-Russian war is inevitable. It is reported that Russia has offered to cancel the money indemnity and increase the Turkish powers over new Bulgaria as a reward for an alliance, but without result.

A St. Petersburg despatch and advices from Berlin and Vienna mention some indications that Russia might desire to renew negotiations for the Congress, taking the Treaty of Paris as the basis of discussion.

A Constantinople special says:—The Russians fearing the Turks will endeavor to maintain neutrality, M. Onou, first dragoman of the Russian Embassy, has made the following demands, which may be regarded as an ultimatum:—The abandonment to the Russians of the fortifications on both sides of the Upper Bosphorus, and Gallipoli and Boulait on the Dardanelles. The Turks are also to evacuate Makrikeni and Maslak, and to place some barracks and hospitals at the disposal of the Russians. The Grand Duke last night urged these demands upon Raouf Pasha, and they will be submitted to the Council. It is said the Sultan and Vefyk Pasha oppose them.

A Constantinople special to Vienna reports that the Russians have commenced fresh movement towards Gallipoli. The Russian troops north of the Balkans are being moved nearer the Danube. The Russians are everywhere erecting fortifications.

Vienna advices represent that Austrian objections are not less fatal to the existence of the treaty than England's.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs:—It is admitted that Austria is not at all disposed to state clearly the price of her neutrality, recognizing the fact that war between Russia and England would enable her to dictate to her own terms.

A Vienna correspondent says:—A despatch from Count Von Beust, Austrian Ambassador in London, states that Earl Beaconsfield and the Marquis of Salisbury earnestly desire the maintenance of peace, but if Russia's attitude should render war a necessity it will be carried on until resistance is crushed. News from St. Petersburg as to the result of Ignatieff's mission here, which will to a great extent settle the question of peace or war, is hourly expected. Lord Salisbury's circular has increased the friendly disposition here towards England. Germany is doing everything possible to revive the Congress scheme.

A Belgrade special says:—It is reported that the Servians, by command of Russia, will shortly occupy Widin and Adakalch. Austria is likely to protest against the occupation of the latter place. The feeling in Servian Government circles inclines to Austria rather than Russia, and willingness is even expressed to make a military convention with the former.

PROLAPAUS UTERI (FALLING OF THE WOMB), A WONDERFUL CURE.—Nine years my wife suffered with this terrible complaint. She was attended by doctor after doctor, went to the different hospitals where females are treated: tried them all—wore bandages and pessaries with only temporary relief. Her life was miserable. WEDNESDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 3, 1878

THE vexed question of the right of municipalities to tax the incomes of officials of the Dominion Government was settled by the Court of Appeal on Saturday—the decision being that they are not legally liable to such taxation. To which we have to say, the more's the pity.

JUST let's see who would be benefitted by a high tariff, which according to the Tory programme is going to regenerate the country. In 1871, the industrial classes numbered 213,000, of whom no less than 190,000, were butchers, bakers, blacksmiths, and like trades, who don't want the tariff adjusted, leaving only 23,000 for whom it is proposed to tax over 4,000,000 persons. If we take out the stove makers, cotton spinners, &c., &c., who by their own statements are doing well enough, there wouldn't be a corporal's guard left to be protected.

AT Newmarket on Saturday a knot of North Tories passed a resolution censuring the Toronto Leader for inserting communications from Conservatives in the Riding protesting against a person of Mr. Boultbee's character and reputation being their candidate. All honor to the old Leader. The knot of North York Tories do not seem to be aware that their resolution was a condemnation of themselves and a compliment to the newspaper attacked. Any constituency that accepts Mr. Boultbee is not hard to please.

QUITE a number of people in Ottawa are anxious to move from that place to Muskoka, and have sought the assistance of the Dominion Government, which has decided that it cannot help people moving from one Province to another of the Dominion. In their straits they have asked the Ontario Government to help them. They ask, besides free passes, $50 for each family to carry it along till a crop is gathered in. Mr. Mowat has the matter under consideration, and we hope that his Government will see their way clear to granting aid to these applicants.

When the Restrictive Liquor Bill was before the Senate on Tuesday, the Hon. Mr. Vidal moved the following amendments i—First, to give the Local Legislature of any Province the Power to adopt the law for the whole Province: second, to compel persons arrested for drunkenness to, state where they obtained liquor; and third, to provide that a re-vote on the measure should not be taken before the expiration of three years after the previous vote. The two first amendments were opposed, and the third will most likely be accepted by Hon. Mr. Scott.

Visit of Bishop O'Brien to Arthur.

From a Correspondent.)

On Wednesday the 27th ult., there was quite a stir in the Village of Arthur on the occasion of the unexpected visit of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, of Kingston, to that place to see his niece, Mrs. Richard Murphy. News of his arrival soon being bruited about, and his Catholic friends determined to do him honor and render his visit as agreeable as possible. A committee was at once formed to make preliminary arrangements. A deputation, consisting of Dr. Devlin, Messrs. MacMillen, E. J. O'Callaghan, M. Halley, J. P., D. McIntosh, John Murphy, Mount Tara, James Keleher, T. Fogarty, T. Raddican, P. Drake, Jas. Madden, George Hazelton, (Guelph,) John McCarthey, and others, attended at the residence of Mrs. Murphy, and being introduced to his Lordship, Mr. E. O'Callaghan read the following address:—

ARTHUR, March 27th, 1878.

To His Lordship the Right Rev. John O'Brien, D.D., Bishop of Kingston:

YOUR LORDSHIP,—On this your Lordship's first visit to the village of Arthur, we avail ourselves of the opportunity of extending to you a most hearty welcome. We hope that the fatigue attending your journey may not prove in the slightest degree detrimental to your Lordship's health. In looking round our village, which is seated in a comparatively remote part of the country, we feel that you will be pleased in witnessing the efforts which have been made towards promoting our holy religion.

By the indomitable exertion of our zealous pastor, the Rev. Father Laussie, to whom too much credit cannot be given, we are blessed with a new church sufficiently commodious to contain with comfort all the Catholics of this extensive parish, when summoned by the musical peal of the bell, to assemble for the purpose of joining in divine service. It is also our good fortune to have a school established in our village, where, under the tuition of the good Sisters of St. Joseph, an education is imparted to our children which is calculated to qualify them for every honorable occupation in life, and also where the innocent mind is trained to a thorough knowledge of the teachings and blessings of the true Church.

In conclusion, we beg to intimate to your Lordship that the gratification afforded by your presence will be enhanced, in no small degree, by prolonging your stay amongst us, and should your other engagements permit your doing so, you may rest assured that it would afford much pleasure to our good Father Laussie and Doherty, and to their entire flock to make your visit as agreeable as possible.

Signed on behalf of the deputation,

E. J. O'CALLAGHAN,
J. P. MACMILLAN,
D. MCINTOSH.

His Lordship replied in a very pleasing and appropriate manner, remarking that it gave him much pleasure to witness the enterprise of the village, and to view the magnificent agricultural country, through which he had passed from Fergus. He was delighted to see so many prosperous Catholics located in this section, and he was more than pleased to meet them for the first time and their deservedly esteemed pastors. With respect to the kind request in the address concerning the prolongation of his stay. His Lordship stated that he found himself in such comfortable quarters that he determined to remain a few days longer.

After some further time had been passed in agreeable conversation and discussing various good things in the way of edibles and drinkables, provided by the hospitable Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, the deputation took their leave well satisfied with the treatment they had received.

It is perhaps needless to add that during the remainder of his stay in Arthur the generous hearted people of that thriving place amply fulfilled what they had promised in their address, viz., to render the visit of the Bishop as enjoyable as possible.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 1.

Mr. Blake introduced a measure to provide for the Winding-up of Insolvent Fire and Marine Insurance Companies.

After recess, the Minister of Public Works, in answer to Mr. Robillard, said the Government did not propose to proceed with the St. Lawrence Canal this year.

In reply to Mr. Mitchell, who put the question in the absence of Mr. McCarthy, the Minister of Justice said it was the intention of the Government during the present session to introduce a Bill to amend "The Supreme and Exchequer Court Act," by requiring that there should be four terms or sittings instead of two each year.

In answer to Mr. Landerkin, who put the question in the absence of Mr. Young, the Premier said no reply had been received in response to the Address to Her Majesty, passed by the House in 1875, praying for the recognition of naturalized German and other Canadian subjects by the British Crown, except the dispatch of Lord Carnarvon which was published in the sessional papers of 1876. It was probable that the attention of the Home Government would be again called to the subject.

OTTAWA, April 2.

Mr. Lorn McDougall introuced a Bill to compel the attendance of the electors at the polls.

Mr. Laflamme moved the second reading of the Bill abolishing the office of Receiver-General, and providing for the appointment of an Attorney-General of Canada.

Sir John A. Macdonald opposed that portion of the Bill which related to the appointment of an Attorney-General, which he regarded as a step in the wrong direction.

Mr. Mackenzie reminded Sir John A. Macdonald that in the old Government of Canada there were often four legal officers in the Cabinet, and no one heard of any difficulty in those days. The Premier went on to show that the increase of the work in the Department of Justice made the proposed change absolutely necessary, and referred to the action of the Australasian Legislature in support of the proposed arrangement. The change would greatly assist the Parliamentary business of the Government, as well as facilitate the work of the Administration generally.

Dr. Tupper argued that the object of having legal talent in the House was to secure men able with equal success to defend one day what they had attacked on another. He attacked Mr. Blake for his Teeswater criticisms, and declared they were unfair and beneath the dignity of the position held by a Minister of the Crown. He insinuated that the object of the Bill was to enable the Minister of Justice to practice in the Courts in his own interest—a practice he denounced as most objectionable.

Mr. Blake replied to the member for Cumberland, showing that the change proposed did not increase expense, but, as only one deputy would be employed, rather economised expenditure. In the interest of legislation the additional legal strength, he urged, was absolutely necessary. No increase of lawyers in the Cabinet was involved in the change. He rebuked the offensive allusion of Dr. Tupper to his having for a short time been compelled, owing to his duty to existing clients, to appear in the courts, and exposed the absurdity of supposing that in the legal profession any sort of inequality was created by the position any member of the Bar held, in the way of office or otherwise towards his brother lawyers. The Doctor's remarks were repudiated as an insult to the Bench and Bar. He concluded by a vigorous defence of his speech in Teeswater and the retention of the full number of Cabinet Ministers, quoting from the speech put into the Governor-General's mouth by Sir John A. Macdonald in 1873, in which an increase of the present strength of the Cabinet was declared to be needful.

After some further debate the Bill was passed without amendment.

The second reading of the Act to provide for the better auditing of public accounts was then moved by Mr. Cartwright.

On the order being read to go into Committee of Supply, Mr. Brown (West Hastings) rose, and after a short speech, made his motion in favor of agricultural protection. Mr. Ross (East Durham) seconded the motion in a brief speech. Dr. Forbes opposed the motion in the interests of the people of Nova Scotia. He declared no Government could receive the support of the people of the Maritime Provinces that put a duty on flour.

Mr. White (East Hastings) wanted protection all round rather than in regard to certain articles only, but would vote for the motion as an instalment of justice.

Controversy among the first-class hotels of New York shows that the service is constantly changing from one first-class hotel to the other, and the bills of fare show the same variety of dishes. The important fact, to travellers, is that the Grand Central offers the same accommodations for one and two dollars per day less than the others. ced

HARRISTON.—The Tribune says that Geo. Bird and William Chamberlain have been arrested upon suspicion of being the parties who committed the burglary at the Western station a few weeks ago. Jas. Smith's boot and shoe store had a close call from destruction by fire on Monday of last week. The flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

FIRE NEAR HESPELER.—The barn and contents of Mr. Buchholz, resident of Pinebush, so called, about a mile and a half from Hespeler, was destroyed by fire last Wednesday night. The barn contained hay, straw, one sleigh, agricultural implements, and from eight to ten bushels of peas, besides seven pigs, one cow, two sheep and a number of chickens. Loss between $400 and $500, insured in the Waterloo Mutual Company, for $250.

THAT particular portion of the Market Square assigned to auctioneers, pedlars, &c., answers the purpose very well. The position is between the vegetable market and the railway track and over water tanks for the supply of the fire engine. Had a fire started in the neighborhood of the Square this morning much valuable time would have been lost in removing second-hand stores, tables, agricultural implements, buggies, and a thousand and one traps there scattered about, before the tanks could be reached. The Chief of the Brigade thinks there is just cause for complaint in these premises, and hopes the authorities would look into the matter for the purpose of having it remedied.

THE rear portion of the Golden Lion block, part of which fell last fall, is now being put in shape for rebuilding. The remaining portion of the Macdonnell street wall will be first torn down to the foundation.

See Dr. G. W. Hotchkin's springless truss and supporter advertisement in another column of this paper. d13 w2.

in all its branches. While it is their intention to still retain the prestige of the late firm in turning out superior clothing to any establishment in town, they have also, in consideration of their expenses being wonderfully curtailed, made a MARKED REDUCTION OF PRICES in the various lines, even to such an extent that they feel assured that all their patrons will not only be astonished and satisfied, but constrained to recommend the firm to their friends.

Order Department.

This Department will be under the supervision of a FIRST CLASS CUTTER, the services of whom they have been fortunate enough to secure, and whose reputation is such that it is with the greatest confidence his abilities and skill are submitted to the gentlemen of Guelph and vicinity. All orders will be executed in such a manner as to ensure entire satisfaction to customers. No one will require to don a garment that is not in every respect the very acme of perfection as far as fit and workmanship are concerned. From the fact that a LARGE AND CHOICE STOCK OF CLOTHS will always be kept on hand, there is no fear but that all can be suited in the selection of material.

Gents' Furnishings.

With regard to this department, they are convinced that the time has arrived in the history of all large and well organized establishments which handle men's wearing apparrel, when GENTS' FURNISHINGS, to be attractive, must be constantly replete with staple goods, together with the novelties of the season, and to effect this our purchases shall be frequently and carefully made.

Ready Made Clothing.

Possessing the advantages of being manufacturers as well as retailers of these goods they are enabled to present to the public many lines superior to the general factory made clothing.

CHAPTER XXX.

LIZZIE IS DELIVERED INTO THE HANDS OF ANOTHER KEEPER.

Ere they were free of the landing-place, Ranald and Colson had mounted their horses and ridden away. Lizzie gazed after their retreating forms with a heavy sinking of heart, for, though showing her no great kindness, they had at least treated her civilly, and she had come to believe herself safe in their company. Now they were gone, and she was put into the hands of one who had the power and seemed to have the disposition to be harsh and cruel. To see the two horsemen depart, therefore, was like beholding the loss of all show of protection; and now more than ever she realised the bitterness of her misfortune, the helplessness of her condition, the perils she might be about to encounter.

As they were mutually receding from each other the two horsemen soon grew indistinct in the distance; and in the deepening shades of twilight, which were now falling with all gentleness, like a curtain slowly dropped upon the silent hills and the peaceful valley. At length she observed them quit the shore of the loch, and move away to the right, towards the steep slopes at the base of the mountains. They entered a piece of darkness, which was no doubt the beginning of a mountain pass, and were finally lost to view. To the agitated soul of poor Lizzie the solitude had mightily increased when they were out of sight, and a long, heavy sigh, which was but a half-suppressed groan, escaped from her bosom.

She had felt a terrible loneliness in the gathering gloom of the previous evening, but that was nothing to this. She felt now as if the light was passing away from her altogether, and that she would never know hope or safety more.

In this deep despondency her thoughts reverted with a double pang to Harold. She wondered if he would yet know of her disappearance, but was almost certain that he would not, for her uncle had no means of communicating with him. Perhaps the letter she had been compelled to write would be the first intimation he would have of the terrible calamity. She guessed the grief and despair into which it would plunge him, but she hoped—oh! so fervently—that he would listen to her imploring words and do nothing, for in this alone lay Alfred's safety and her own.

Absorbed in these sad thoughts, with her eyes fixed on the far-off peaks which showed against the clear western sky, she was paying no heed to the misshapen being who was plying the oars, when a harsh, discordant laugh burst forth on the stillness—eliciting instantly a startled cry from her and a terrified shriek from the child, who had nearly dropped to sleep.

She hushed the cries of the boy and cast a furtive look towards the hunchback, who sat grinning with a fiendish glee over the terror he had caused, and who in the semi-darkness looked more frightfully hideous than ever. His squinting eyes gleamed like balls of fire; his gorilla features had on them an expression of concentrated impish malignity, at once loathsome and alarming.

"Ha, ha!" he exclaimed, in the same harsh, discordant voice. "I thought that would bring you to. What's the brat squalling for? I should like to wring its neck."

"Oh, pray, don't be angry," pleaded Lizzie, with heart freezing with terror. "He is not used to—to—"

"To the sight of such an ugly monster as I am, you would say. Upon my word, girl, but you are complimentary."

"I—I did not mean that," faltered Lizzie, with nervous haste.

"Yes, you did. Don't tell a lie. Oh, I know well enough what he's screaming at. He's frightened at sight of me; and so are you, only you are more careful not to show it; but you can't deceive me. Didn't I see how you shrank back in disgust when I landed from the boat, as if I had been a toad or a serpent, as if I can help my shape, as if I'm to blame for not being so well formed or so good-looking as other men. Do you think girl, that I had any choice in the matter?"

"Indeed, indeed, I did not mean to displease you," protested Lizzie.

"Oh, no, of course not. You think I have no right to have feelings. People may sneer at me, despise me, loath me, and I'm to be pleased at it all. The only use I'm for is to give sport to those whom nature has been kinder to—be their butt, their laughing stock, or their scorn, and take it all as meek as a lamb. 'Tain't likely, though, that I will. I take my revenge when I can get it, I can frighten people, that's something, I am strong, too, for as misshapen as I am, and can crush to a jelly the dainty limbs of nature's darlings. Ha, ha! how I like to see their terror and hear them howl in my gripe. It's music to me—the best of music. If they skoff at at one time, they fear me at another, and that makes things right. You fear me now, girl, You are trembling; I can see that, though it's getting dark. Speak—is it not so?"

"Really," faltered Lizzie, "I—I——"

"Don't tell a lie; I hate to hear a lie. Say at once that you are afraid of me—say it, or I'll not pull another stroke."

He stopped his oars, laid his hands on his diminutive knees, protruded his massive jaws, and showed his tusks to a fearful extent, as he waited for her answer.

"Oh, if I only knew to humour him!" was Lizzie's quaking thought.

"You won't speak, won't you?" growled Joe, with a ferociously threatening aspect. "Speak, or I'll toss that squalling brat into the loch!"

"Mercy, mercy!" cried Lizzie, sinking on her knees before him. For the love of God, do not harm us! Pity—oh pity me, for I am helpless!"

"Why, you haven't said you are afraid yet."

"I am—oh, you see I am! But you will not hurt those who never injured you?"

For some moments he sat absolutely gloating over agony; then he said—

"Get up. You've said you are afraid, and that's all I want. That's the music I like best to hear! it's my revenge—my revenge for all I have to bear. Stop the brass pipe of that screeming elf, and get up."

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

Every little while we read of someone who has stuck a rusty nail in his foot or some other part of his person, and lockjaw has resulted therefrom. All such wounds can be healed without any fatal results following them. The remedy is simple:—It is only to smoke such wound or any wound that is inflamed with burning wool or woolen cloth. Twenty minutes in the smoke will take the pain out of the worst case of inflammation arising from any wound.

MOUNT FOREST.—The fifty-ninth anniversary of Oddfellowship will be celebrated on the 26th inst. by an entertainment in Garnet Lodge room.—$26 were realized at the M.E. Church social held on the 27th ult. The presence of the cornet band was a pleasing feature.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.—The Globe speaking of this Institution says:—"The Ontario School of Agriculture has gallantly fought its way through a long term of undeserved unpopularity, and has at length succeeded in conquering prejudice and malice. A long period of usefulness is now before it, we trust. Students at the School have an opportunity of acquiring a deeper insight into the principles that underlie agriculture than can be obtained elsewhere in the Dominion—a point the value of which is beginning to be properly appreciated. Those who wish to avail themselves of the privileges offered to them by the School will need to be prompt in sending in their names to the Principal, as the next term commences on the 16th April."

Dr. Kirkpatrick, son of Dr. Kirkpatrick, sr., of Goderich, along with two other physicians who belonged to the National Aid Society in Turkey, have been subject to shameful treatment at the hands of the Russians. Subsequent to one of the engagements in which Gen. Gourko was victorious over the Turks in the neighborhood of Strigli, these gentlemen were forced to pass through the Russian lines. On being taken to General Gourko, he at once told them they were free. But the subordinate officer at Strigli detained them close prisoners, and they were marched on foot with the other prisoners, notwithstanding that they had horses, and were subjected to every kind of exposure and privation, insulted and robbed by the men, and endured twenty-four days of toilsome and painful marching. By the exertions of the English Consul they were ultimately released.

The Joseph Hall Manufacturing Company, Oshawa, have paid the last instalment of its indebtedness, which reached the very large sum of $170,000 two years ago. In addition to this, the secured claims have been reduced by over $50,000. The Company has bought all its stock for cash, and paid the workmen in full every week.

THAT WONDERFUL MAN.

First Grand Exhibition of the Season.

OPENING OF OUR

MILLINERY SHOW ROOM,

On Friday, the 5th April, 1878.

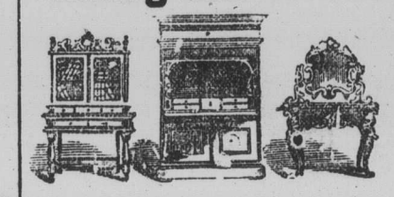
JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR,

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of genera depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,



that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from a admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and refinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lechevalier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse, the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and refinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

THE WOLF AT THE DOOR.

(Will S. Hays in Louisville Courier-Journal.)

"Hark! how the merciless cold winds blow,
Mamma, come look at the beautiful snow.
See how the streets are all mantled in white,
I'm looking for papa—he'll come home to-night.
O! Why are you looking so lonely and sad?
I know papa drinks, but can't I make you glad?
Come kiss me mamma, and don't weep any more."
"Hush! Come to my arms, there's a wolf at the door."

"Mamma, don't cry, let me kneel at your feet,
We are hungry and cold, and we've nothing to eat.
Look up, and be cheerful, in God put your trust,
If papa's a drunkard, God will not blame us.
Why do you tremble so? wipe off that tear,
The fire is out, but we've nothing to fear.
Let's lie down together and sleep on the floor"—
"No! no! there's no sleep while the wolf's at the door."

"Oh! Mamma, God bless you! cheer up all you can,
Some day I may be a good son and a man,
To bring to your sorrowful heart hope and joy,
If papa's a drunkard, just think, I'm your boy.
Though he may desert us, there's One left us still,
Who'll never forsake us—no! God never will."
"Hush! child, there's your father; don't say a word more.
Great God! Can't he see there's a wolf at the door."

Aye! staggering drunk at that hour so late,
The father stood reeling in snow at the gate.
His barefooted boy, dressed so poorly and thin,
Went out in the snow, and he led "papa" in.
But, just as he entered, he fell to the floor,
And there went forth a howl from the wolf at the door.
The emblem of death to the door knob was tied,
A husband—a father—A DRUNKARD had died.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

Russia Defiant and Warlike.

England Equiping Private Steamers to be used as Cruisers.

LONDON, April 5.—A St. Petersburg despatch says that the Journal de St. Petersburg, official organ of the Government, adopts a defiant and warlike tone in an article to-day.

Officials of the English Admiralty have gone to Belfast to superintend the equipment of numerous private steamers to be used as cruisers in case of war.

Local News.

A young man burst a soft felt hat last evening, while attempting to put it properly on his head.

PRENTICE BOYS.—Bros. Harry Pearson and W. C. Dollery, of Walsh Lodge, Guelph, have received a dispensation from W. P. Madden, G. M., of Napanee, to organize and institute a lodge of Prentice Boys in Stratford.

SALE OF PROPERTY.—W. S. G. Knowles & Sons sold this afternoon, at the Market House, the house belonging to the insolvent estate of George A. Daniels, situated on McCartney's survey and fronting Woolwich street, to Mr. Roberts, butcher, for the sum of $1,600.

AN entertainment is to be given in connection with Chalmers' Church Sabbath School this evening in the basement of the church, which will be, in every sense, a very pleasing one. The programme will consist of musical selections and a series of stereoptican illustrations of the geological ages. To commence at 7:30.

GOLD DUST STOCK.—J. W. Hornsby & Bro., of Eminence, Henry Co., Kentucky, arrived in Guelph to-day (Friday) with eight fine Gold-Dust colts. The animals are all very tired and will not be on exhibition until they have a few days' rest. They all have fashionable pedigrees.

G. C. T. C.—At the semi-annual meeting of the Guelph Christian Temperance Club held on Thursday evening, the following officers were elected:—Chas. Raymond, President; Robert Mitchell, 1st Vice; Thomas W. Cooper, 2nd Vice; Robt. Thompson, 3rd Vice; J. T Mitchell, Secretary; J. Patterson, Treasurer; Rev. Jas. Howie, Chaplain; Joseph Ryan, Assistant Chaplain. All re-elected with the exception of Mr. Thompson, who takes the office held by Mr. Balkwill.

RESERVED SEATS—The plan of the town hall for reserved seats could not have been placed in better hands than those of Mr. G. D. Pringle, who has had its management for some time past. It was the subject of remark last evening that out of the three hundred sittings registered by him for the concert, the arrangements were so complete and such care had been exercised that no trouble was experienced in the audience getting their proper places. It was Mr. Pringle who called the attention of the Council to the desirability of having the seats properly numbered for concert purposes. A painter will at once be employed for that purpose.

OBITUARY.—Word was received on Thursday afternoon by Mr. James Cormack, sr., that his son Donald, a promising young man of some twenty-three years of age, had died that morning in San Diego, California. Donald Cormack was well known in Guelph, and was a favorite with all his acquaintances. That dire disease, consumpton, which yearly gathers such a fearful toll from Canadian families had seized hold of his system. He left for Lower California, where he remained nearly two years. After that time had elapsed, thinking that he had recovered in the salubrious climate of that state, he returned home over a year ago. The succeeding winter brought him ill health, and he again left for the Pacific coast. Three months ago word came back that he was dying. His mother immediately undertook the long journey, and remained beside him until death intervened. He will be buried at San Diego.

WATERLOO now boasts of a lacrosse team. Guelph is likely to have a first-class team this season.

THERE are now only fourteen prisoners in the gaol at Guelph, and all are serving out sentences.

BERLIN citizens are now happy. They have a Council that could have discounted Guelph in the palmiest days of 1877.

MR. FRANK COFFEE, who leaves for Australia to-morrow, has a guarantee of a salory of $2,000, and his passage will be paid out there.

THE London Herald says that a Guelph gentleman is purchasing about 3,000,000 feet of timber in Essex county for a railway contract in Buffalo.

WOULD there be any significance in the song "Trust him not," when sung by a young lady after being requested by a gentleman to again favor an audience?

FRESH north-westerly to south-westerly winds, clear to fair weather, possibly light local rains at night are the probabilities received this morning.

MESSRS. GALBRAITH & MOORE, of the Acton Free Press, have dissolved partnership, the latter gentleman purchasing the whole business. Mr. Galbraith will still remain on the staff.

ALLEN, the alleged horse thief from Orangeville, has been tried before His Honor Judge Macdonald and the case was dismissed. Particulars of the case have already been published.

J. D. WILLIAMSON returned this afternoon from the great sale of R. Dunn & Co., Montreal, and having purchased largely, goods will be offered at the Lion, for the next month at less than wholesale prices.

READ D. Scroggie's advertisement, to be found in another column. His goods are fresh and of superior quality, and will be sold at low figures. Remember the stand, next W. G. Smith's drug store.

A WALKING and living directing post was seen perambulating the streets to-day with the words Hamilton and Galt painted in red in a conspicuous part of his pants. The affair seemed to attract much attention and amusement to pedestrians.

RED HOT.—A young man named Blackaby, employed at Mr. Levi Cossitt's Agricultural Works, had a drop of molten iron from a ladle slide inside of his boot and before he could get it off he was severely burned. He was taken home in a carriage. It will be a week or two before he will be able to resume work.

TASTES differ, and none more so than as to some particular class of music. One of Mr. Hurst's character songs at the concert last evening had for a chorus "When Johnnie comes marching home again," and immediately at its conclusion a lady was heard to remark "That's something like; I do love those old sweet songs, even if they are difficult to sing."

HYMENIAL.—The marriage ceremony between Mr. E. H. Arms, of Guelph, and Miss Augusta Cameron, daughter of Mr. James Cameron, of Acton, was performed in the Congregational Church, Acton, on Wednesday evening, by the Rev. Mr. Davis. The Free Press says the church was crowded to excess by an admiring audience Miss Jeannie Cameron acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Thos. Christie as groomsman.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY.—The regular meeting of the members of this Society was held in their rooms on Thursday evening, and considering the attractions in town, there was a pretty good attendance. Owing to a special meeting being held a few weeks previous, there was not a great deal of business done. Rev. Canon Dixon has kindly consented to preach a special sermon to the members of the Society, in St. George's Church, on the evening of Sunday, the 21st of April. All members are requested to meet at their rooms on the occasion mentioned, at 6.30 p.m., and march in procession to the church, where seats will be reserved for them. The tickets for the dinner may be obtained of the Executive Committee, and it is expected that every member of St. George will support the commemoration of their patron saint by purchasing a ticket. The affair augers well that everything will be carried out to the satisfaction of all who deem it a pleasure in attending. A communication was read from Mr. Wm. Hamilton, of Toronto, who desired to bring a party of singers and give a concert in Guelph on the evening of St. George's Day, under the auspices of the Society, but owing to arrangements previously made, the Secretary was instructed to reply to the communication.

Union Concert.

A Brilliant Assemblage in the Town Hall.

It is a trite saying that in union there is strength. This truism was never better illustrated than on Thursday evening when the Norfolk and Dublin street Methodist churches united in giving a concert in the town hall. The hall was comfortably filled by an audience made up of all denominations in town, and from the opening of the concert till its close every person was pleased—and not only pleased but satisfied. This could hardly be otherwise when the entire management was in such able hands as that of Mr. Philp.

The stage was tastefully draped with Union Jacks and bunting, and altogether presented a charming appearance. The effect was greatly enhanced by the choirs of the churches, which sang the choruses, being seated on the stage.

One word of commendation in regard to the programme itself might be in place here. The original arrangement was all that could be desired, but unfortunately Mrs. Jenny Secord, of Berlin, was unable to put in an appearance owing to serious illness. As it was, the arrangement was superior to nine-tenths of concert programmes, and, better than all, quality was not sacrificed to quantity in having it enlarged to a ridiculous length.

The concert opened with the "Grand March of the Foresters," with Miss Cossitt at the piano and the orchestra. This piece of music is one of rare sweetness and was a happy selection for an opening. Very little fault could be found even by a connoisseur, and if at all it would be with the cornet. There was too much of it. "Delta Kappa," another march, farther down on the programme, was a brilliant effort, and it was by far the better rendered of the two. Mr. F. Hurst, of Toronto, who has already appeared before a Guelph audience, added new lustre to his popularity by his playing on the flute. A solo, accompanied by Mr. Philp on the piano was decidedly pleasing. In this there was a harshness in portions of Mr. Hurst's playing but scarcely perceptible. His effort in playing an obligato to Mrs. Caldwell's singing was much appreciated by the audience. The comic songs rendered by him were mirth-provoking in the extreme, and Mr. Hurst is to be congratulated in keeping clear of a fault too often acquired by comic vocalists in sacrificing good taste for effect. He was encored in everything he sang, and notwithstanding the fact that the words of a song are thought as much of by some as the singing, Mr. Hurst deserved the applause he received. The choirs rendered two choruses with considerable effect and in such a manner as were highly pleasing. The instrumental music in connection therewith was remarkably good. Miss Goodfellow played the piano accompaniments. In the grand chorus from "The Gypsey's Warning" there was not that harmony of voice and the same grand effect attained as in the chorus "March of the men of Harlech." The choirs have certainly made their mark—a decidedly creditable one too—on this occasion. Mrs. Caldwell, of Hamilton, is truly a queen of song, and the many admirers of her pure soprano voice were not disappointed in her efforts on this occasion. Bishop's "Lo! hear the gentle Lark," with flute obligato and piano accompaninent was just what was expected—correct and pleasing to enchantment of the audience. Her voice is of remarkable purity, great compass, and considerable power. Mrs. Caldwell's name on a programme would always prove highly beneficial to a concert given in Guelph. She was encored in her efforts and was honored with a handsome bouquet being thrown to her on the stage by an admirer of her singing. To make up for the absence of Mrs. Secord, Mrs. Caldwell gave an extra song, playing her own accompaniment. The duet "Excelsior," by Mrs. Caldwell and Mr. H. Clark, of Hamilton, was given in a very effective manner, and if applause means anything a high compliment was paid them by the audience. Mr. Clark sang a bass solo "The Shipwreck," in good voice; but the effect of his singing was lost in his poor articulation. His voice, however, is of medium power and considerable volume. He was particularly good in some of the low notes. A duet on the piano and violin by Miss Cossitt and Mr. Philp, was not down on the programme, but was none the less pleasing for that. In reference to any of Mr. Philp's musical performances it is needless for a reporter to inform the public that his manipulation of the bow or keys was correct, as he has never yet played before a Guelph audience without still farther advancing himself in their estimation, and being made the subject of congratulation that the town has such an accomplished musician. On this occasion, as on many others, Miss Cossitt added much to the general excellence of the programme by her playing on the piano. "God Save the Queen," sung in grand style, closed what was one of the most pleasing concerts that has been given in Guelph for a long time.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF ERYSIPELAS IN THE FACE. Lady unable to go without a veil for ten years.—MRS. Reed, residing at 453 6th Avenue, New York, a prominent spiritual medium, suffered with erysipelas on her face. The redness and swelling at times was intense and painful; it covered her nose and both cheeks, its appearance was disagreeable, and she had worn a veil continuously for ten years. She applied GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA, night and morning with a camel's hair brush, and in one week from commencing the application the redness had completely disappeared. It is now one year, and she has continued all right.

New light seems to have broken in on the New York Herald anent the Halifax fishery award. This is what it now says: "After the recent developments we presume there will be no further question as to paying the award. It would have been a great deal better to have resolved to pay it at once from a high sense of national good faith and have abstained from unseemly and dishonoring cavils."

The closing exercises of the Montreal Presbyterian College for this season were held last evening in Erskine Church. Rev. Principal McVicar presided, and stated that the examinations were highly successful, all the students having acquitted themselves most creditably. In October 29 students took up their residence in the College, and 24 found lodgings in the city, making in all 63.

For Australia.

Supper and Presentation to Mr. Frank Coffee.

On Thursday evening Mr. Frank Coffee was entertained at a complimentary supper at the Albion Hotel, and presented with a gold headed cane. This was done on the eve of his departure for Australia, where he has been guaranteed a good business position by Mr. J. W. Lyon, book publisher.

There were present besides others, Mayor Howard in chair, Dr. Nunan in the vice-chair, Messrs. J. P. MacMillan, F. Gauhan, M. Sweetnam, S. Heffernan, Jno. J. Hazelton, F. Swectnam, John Hyde, J. L. Murphy, W. S. Heffernan, James Mays, jr., A. D. Gerrie, M. J. Doran, J. Rice, J. Wiley, J. C. Coffee, Hugh MacMillan, E. O'Connor, J. Keleher, John Kennedy, C. Kloepfer, J. Dooley, James Hazelton, Geo. Bruce, jr., J. Haggart, Brampton; J. M. Scully, Berlin; Geo. Murphy, Galt.

After the supper, which was got up in excellent taste, had been partaken of, the cloth was removed. Mr. J. P. MacMillan after briefly addressing the guest of the evening, read the following address, and he was presented with the cane by the chairman:—

To Frank Coffee, Esq:

DEAR SIR,—Having heard of your intended departure for Australia we wish to offer you some assurance of the sincerity of our friendship for you. With this object in view we have invited you to honor us with you presence this evening, in order that we may have the opportunity ere you leave Guelph to prove to you that such friendship does not exist in sentiment merely.

We have watched your career for the past few years, and it is a pleasure to us, as it must be gratifying to yourself, to be in a position to state to you to-night, that your course has merited the unqualified approval of your friends in Guelph. By your industry, integrity and perseverence you have been eventuaiy successful in your line of business, and at the same time have won the respect and friendship of those with whom you have had business or social intercourse.

We desire to recognize your merit as a business man, and your worth as an upright, honorable gentleman by some token more substantial than mere words. We therefore beg that you will accept from us this cane as a parting memento of our esteem, and in bearing it with you to the far off shores of Australia be assured that it will be accompanied with our warmest wishes for your future success and happiness.

Signed by Geo. Howard, James Hazelton, Wm. S. Heffernan, Denis Nunan, M.D., J. M. Hyde, M. Sweetnam, J. P. MacMillan, and E. O'Connor, on behalf of your many friends.

Mr. Coffee made the following reply:—

Mr. Chairman, Vice Chairman and Gentlemen,—

The object of your meeting to-night has, indeed taken me by surprise, and I am at a loss to command words to convey my feelings of gratitude for the flattering address with which you have presented me. The greater number of you are aware that eloquence is not a gift that has been bestowed upon me, and I crave your indulgence for any perceivable deficiency on that score. The beautiful present, of which I am the honored recipient, will always be highly prized by me, and rest assured that I shall cling fondly to it as a memento of the undeserredly high opinion formed of me by Guelph friends. In looking around this board at the faces of the gentlemen here present, and to know that they have assembled for the purpose of paying me this very gratifying mark of respect, is to me a source of pride and pleasure. The fact of your having thus honored me upon this occasion will prove incentive to me to do all in my power to merit your esteem when I am in a foreign land, and with the assistance of a kind Providence I hope you will never have cause to regret the confidence you have reposed in me. As the hour approaches when I am about to bid you farewell I begin to realize the pain of parting with so many kind friends, and it is only the hope of meeting you soon again, which prevents me from yielding to the feeling of sorrow, which I, at this moment, experience. In conclusion, allow me to thank you from my heart for the beautiful testimonial, which you have given me of your undeserved friendship and esteem.

The cane is an ebony one, very finely furnished, with an elegantly chased gold head. The head bears the following inscription:—"Presented to F. Coffee, by Guelph friends, 1878." It was purchased at the jewellery establishment of Messrs. J. Kennedy & Co., Upper Wyndham street.

The pleasing portion of the business of the evening being over, the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given, drunk and responded to. "The guest of the evening" was enthusiastically received, and Mr. Coffee made a feeling reply. Very many around the board remarked in happy terms on the esteem in which the guest was held by his acquaintances.

Toast, song and sentiment followed each other in rapid succession until an early hour in the morning, when the proceedings were closed by all singing "God Save the Queen."

Mr. Coffee at one time worked in the MERCURY office and was always faithful and attentive to his duties. We wish him bon voyage.

The planing mills and lumber yard of J. Christopher & Bro., Ingersoll, were totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday. A small dwelling house adjoining the lumber yard was also consumed. Loss about $15,000, partially covered by insurance.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

MATTERS UNCHANGED.

The Views of Germany.

APRIL 4.

Despite the speeches of Lords Granville and Hartington to the deputation of the National Liberal Federation yesterday, it is not believed the Opposition will take any strong line against the Government's policy. A movement has already received the adhesion of sixty or seventy Liberals to prevent the party from trammeling the Government's policy. The Times strongly condemns the objects of the deputation, and sharply criticises the speeches of Lords Granville and Hartington. The Manchester Guardian (Liberal) also strongly condemns the sort of pressure this deputation intended to put on the Liberal leaders, as well as their assumption that the Government's policy is warlike.

In the House of Commons, to-day, Mr. Gladstone asked, firstly, if it was the intention of the Government in the recent communication regarding the Congress to reserve the liberty to withdraw from the Congress upon a proposal to discuss any matter the discussion of which it did not think admissible; and, secondly, why England refused the preliminary Congress.

Sir Stafford Northcote replied that all England wanted at the Congress was the discussion of every article of the Treaty, and that Lord Derby's despatch gave reason for declining a preliminary Conference.

London advices state that at St. Petersburg Lord Salisbury's circular is regarded as a proof that the Congress could not have succeeded if it had met in the spirit of this circular.

The Journal de St. Petersburg says:—Lord Salisbury's circular shows an absence of conciliatory views by gratuitously attributing ambitious motives to the Russian proposals. The Landwehr has not been called out.

A Berlin special reports that mobilization has been ordered in the four remaining Russian military districts.

A Portsmouth telegram says:—The troopships Crocodile and Euphrates were yesterday ordered to be made ready for sea in forty-eight hours.

From Berlin there are two voices. The Russian party reiterate that the possibility of a bargain between Russia and Austria is still open, and that Ignatieff is not dissatisfied with the result of his mission, though this satisfaction is not shared by his colleagues. On the other hand, the Berlin Post's sharp Anti-Russian article yesterday cannot have been published without Bismarck's consent, and is regarded as another evidence of the latters desire either to humiliate or embroil Russia. The News correspondent at Berlin, however, expresses the opinion that the Post's article is only a rebuke of Russia for the indifference and neglect lately shown the German Chancellor. A similar reminder, says the correspondent, produced a reparation just before Bismarck's speech in Parliament.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 4.

Mr. Mackenzie moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Canada Pacific Railway Act of 1874, and explained that it was intended by it to give the same powers respecting leasing and working the Pembina Branch as were taken under the fiftieth section of that Act with regard to the Georgian Bay Branch. The lease would have to be approved by Parliament, and security should be taken for a system of rates similar to those prevailing in Minnesota generally. The Government, though for some time in communication with an American company on the subject of a lease, had as yet concluded no bargain. He hoped before the prorogation to submit for the approval of Parliament a satisfactory arrangement.

In Committee Sir John said that without grave reasons the Government should not propose to lock-up the line between Pembina and Winnipeg for ten years.

Mr. Mackenzie replied that it was a choice between a ten years' lease and no railway communication through Minnesoto. The American company would not make an arrangement for a shorter term. In reply to some observations by Dr. Tupper, he repeated, that any arrangement which it was proposed to make would be submitted for the approval of Parliament. He stated, further, that the Government had delayed proceeding with the 180 miles required to connect the two portions of the line in this section in the hope of being enabled to embrace it in one general contract to be laid before the House next session. He pointed out the sooner an arrangement like the one proposed was consummated the sooner a large population would be thrown into the country, and the sooner were we likely to have the main line completed from end to end. After further discussion, the Committee rose and reported, and the House concurred in the amendment.

The House went into Committee on the Bill further to amend the Act respecting stamps on notes and bills of exchange. The Minister of Inland Revenue introduced an amendment making the use of stamped paper optional. Several other amendments were made, and the Committee rose and reported progress.

INCENDIARY FIRE IN CALEDON.—On the morning of the 1st inst., between twelve and one o'clock, the barn, stable, and sheds of Alexander Cranston, of Caledon East, were destroyed by fire with all their contents, consisting of four horses, nineteen sheep, and a large quantity of grain and farm implements. The fire was the work of an incendiary, as a mare, belonging to Mr. Hutchinson which was stolen the same night was been ascertained to be one of the animals burned, and one of Mr. Cranston's taken instead thereof, as Mr. Cranston's horse has since been found. The person supposed to have committed the deed is about 30 years of age, about five feet ten inches in height, fair complexion, and no whiskers. He had on black pants and coat, and a good felt hat, and was rather a respectable looking man. The authorities are requested to be on the look out for such a person, as if he be taken on suspicion several parties can identify him.

An extraordinary attempt at robbery at Mr. Nixon's office at Winnipeg is reported, the object having apparently been to deprive him of certain papers required by him to refute the charges brought against him.

Four more arrests have been made in connection with the murder of the Earl of Leitrim. The man McTaggart, arrested on Wednesday, has been released for want of evidence.

FRIDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 5, 1878

The True Test of our Circulation.

We are informed that the amount of postage paid by the newspapers published in this County for the nine months, from the first of January, 1877, to the 30th September, was in the aggregate $413.38. Of this amount the MERCURY paid in that time for postage $194.41, being WITHIN $24.56 OF THE HALF OF THE ENTIRE POSTAGE PAID BY THE WHOLE OF THE NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY. These papers are :—One in Guelph, one in Elora, one in Fergus, one in Drayton, one in Palmerston, one in Harriston, two in Mount Forest, two in Orangeville; ten in all. As compared with all these ten papers, the MERCURY pays within $24.56, half the postage collected from the whole number put together. The postage is fixed by the weight of the papers taken to the Post Office, so that there can be no chance at deception.

It is, therefore, established by figures that cannot lie, that the circulation of the MERCURY is within a fraction equal to half of the aggregate circulation of all the other ten papers published in the Town and County. The public, of course, will form their own conclusions, and if they have any doubts about the matter we can show them documentary evidence for our statements.

A Chapter from History.

In a recent number of the London Free Press we are gravely informed that in the past the Reform party "lashed heaven and earth into a state of commotion about a box of mucilage," and that the Tory Government of those days "with the most frugal and economic man at the head of it," was denounced with rancor and bitterness because Mr. Foote had charged a few cents too much upon a penknife. All of which leads one to believe that the Free Press, while it can discover unheard-of atrocity in the purchase of the Neebing Hotel, for the public benefit, by a Reform Government in 1877, is ready to rush into the breach in defence of the gross irregularities which disgraced departmental management, at heavy public loss, under a Conservative administration in 1862. Our contemporary deserves thanks, however, for the revival of popular recollection of the little incident, and the story of the Foote jobs, although an old one, will probably serve, in view of the recent Moylan disclosures, to illustrate the likeness of Conservative doings to-day with those of nearly twenty years ago.

When John Sandfield Macdonald came into power as the head of a Reform Government, in 1862, after nearly ten years of Tory regime, under Cartier, John A. Macdonald, et al, he found it necessary, in obedience to public opinion, to advice His Excellency, Lord Monck, to issue a commission, under the great seal, to Messrs. T. S. Brown, W. Bristow, and George Sheppard, with instructions to enquire into the system under which the financial affairs of the Province had been conducted, as serious charges of malversation in the Public Departments, and of misappropriation of public moneys, without the sanction of law, had been preferred and repeated in and out of Parliament. The Commission went earnestly to work, heard numerous witnesses, accumulated a large mass of evidence, and made two reports—the first in May, 1863, and the second in February, 1864. It was in the latter that what were known as the Foote jobs received special attention. The enquiry resulted in the conviction that there had been looseness of most reprehensible character in the conduct of departmental business, and that the leakages resulting from this state of things were of serious extent. So miserably had financial matters been mismanaged by the Conservative Government that the Commissioners were forced to declare that "the violation by heads of departments of the checks provided by themselves, as a ministry, has rendered the auditing functions of the Accountant of Contingencies of no value whatever." And they added that "the gross abuse to which the present system of contingencies is liable, can have no more remarkable illustration than those connected with the supply of printing and stationery to certain of the Departments by Mr. S. B. Foote," who, it may be remarked in passing, was proprietor of the Quebec Morning Chronicle, the organ of the Conservative Cabinet. This gentleman appears to have had the run of the premises, and, armed with the orders of Mr. Vankoughnet, the Conservative Commissioner of Crown Lands, and Mr. Sydney Smith, the Conservative Postmaster-General, flooded the office with printing and stationery, at his own figure, regardless of the protests of the clerks, who declared both work and articles unnecessary in quantity and outrageous in price. Stationery, for instance, was furnished to the Bureau of Agriculture, to the amount of $9,304 without a requisition, and this sum was paid without scrutinizing the price, and without the ordinary certificate of the Department. Mr. Foote supplied stationery to the Crown Lands Department, in similar fashion, in 1861 and 1862, to the amount of $22,989, and the Commissioners reported that this could have been furnished by Mr. Sinclair, a Quebec bookseller, for $9,451, while Mr. Hartney, clerk in the Stationery Department of the Legislative Assembly, said that the contract prices would not have exceeded $7,305. For articles for which Mr. Foote received $14,851 Mr. Sinclair would have charged $6,105, and Mr. Hartney valued them at $4,704. And these payments, the Commissioners declared, were made with the full knowledge of at least two Ministers that they were excessive. As a proof of Foote's overcharges, the Commissioners state that he had been paid $1,250 for 1,250 copies of the "Report of the Supervision of Cullers on the Lumber Trade,"—a pamphlet of 46 pages with paper cover—which Mr. Rose, of Hunter, Rose & Co., swore the fair trade price to be $171 per 1,000 copies. In other words, in a single item of $1,000, Mr. Foote was paid upwards of $820 in excess of regular business prices! Mr. Foote supplied the Post Office Department with stationery, and the Commissioners found that for articles for which Mr. Foote was paid $8,938, the Degislative Assembly would have paid, at their contract rates, $2,796. Printing was done by this gentleman for the Post Office Department. One account, ranging from January to June, 1861, was charged $5,590, the actual value, judged by departmenta work, being $2,203. Another account extending from June to September, was charged $4,270; the actual value of all but two items being $1,464. A third printing account, amounting to $1,803, was paid in the same year, the usual rates of the department being $601. Payment of these accounts was refused by the clerks, but the simple initials of the Postmaster-General, Sydney Smith, like the signature of Sir John in the Moylan affair, made them all right and secured the money. Thus, on four accounts, paid by the Post Office Department in 1861, Mr. Foote received $21,021 for articles and work, the aggregate actual value of which did not exceed $7,822, and so quietly pocketed an overcharge, on a single department, amounting to $13,199! In October of the same year, Mr. Foote did a similar business with the Census Department, both in stationery and printing, receiving extravagant prices and supplying articles not really required.

For a sample of figures paid to Mr. Foote, who charged, according to the Free Press, "but a few cents too much upon a penknife," and had caused the Reform party to "lash heaven and earth into a state of commotion about a box of mucilage," let us glance at the evidence placed before the Commissioners. From it we find that foolscap paper, worth $2.50 per ream, was charged at $12; that notepaper, for which Mr. Hartney paid $2, was put down at $5; that letter paper, worth $3, was modestly entered at $8: that buff envelopes, worth $3.88 was charged at $12; that large envelopes, worth $6.38, were charged at $28; that sealing wax, worth 80 cents per lb., was entered at $4, and that pink blotting paper, ordinarily supplied at $4, was sold by Mr. Foote to the Government at $12. Inkstands, by the dozen, cost $5 each. Ink was sold at $1 per bottle, and the penknives, "a few cents too much," were sent to the Departments, dozen after dozen, at the low rate of 50 dollars per dozen! And so we could continue to the end of the very long chapter. We have quoted liberally enough, however, to satisfy our readers, and to convince them, we think, that the Free Press deserves our gratitude for having dragged Mr. Foote once more to the front to serve as a beacon to electors in the coming elections. The days of $5 penknives and more costly mucilage are happily over now, but, judging from the Moylan affair, the Secret Service exposures, the Northern Railway investigation, and the Pacific Scandal, it would not take long to revive them with the return of Sir John A. to power.

THE Government of Victoria are in trouble in consequence of an adverse vote on one item in the estimates. The Premier stated on Tuesday that he would ask an adjournment till Wednesday, by which time the Government would consider what course it would pursue. A dissolution is considered inevitable.

THE Toronto Telegram truthfully remarks:—"If it were not for the question of a readjustment of the tariff, the Opposition would be compelled to go to the country at the next election on the cry of the Neebing hotel purchase and the Goderich harbor contract. If these two planks were knocked out of their platform, they would find themselves floating about without any well defined policy, for, of course, a re-adjustment of the tariff is a question upon which many Reformers take issue with their party. No fair-minded person can be persuaded to believe that there was anything of a corrupt nature in the awarding of the Goderich harbor contract."

Controversy among the first-class hotels of New York shows that the service is constantly changing from one first-class hotel to the other, and the bills of fare show the same variety of dishes. The important fact, to travellers, is that the Grand Central offers the same accommodations for one and two dollars per day less than the others. cod

AN EXPLANATION.

In reply to numerous enquiries from our lady friends, regarding our Millinery Show Rooms for the season, I would say that we shall

Open on Thursday or Friday next.

Definite announcement on Tuesday.

It is well known that in the very early part of the season, a great variety of English, French and American styles, find their way into the Canadian Markets In fact I may say that a great many of these styles are thrust into this market for the purpose of being disposed of, and it is only after the New York season has fairly commenced that approved and really popular styles which command the trade here make their appearance. It is also well understood that when the season has fairly opened, that two or three styles or shapes at the utmost only become popular. Those decided shapes are just now being introduced into the New York market, and a full presen on of which we shall have forward in time for our opening day.

We may just say that we purpose making this one of the grandest opening occasions ever held in the Town of Guelph, and we can do it.

First Grand Exhibition of the Season.

OPENING OF OUR

MILLINERY SHOW ROOM,

On Friday, the 5th April, 1878.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR,

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of genera depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,

that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from an admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and refinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lechevalier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse, the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and refinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

BEING THE EASTERLY THREE quarters of lot 26, 9th concession, Luther, County of Wellington, 150 acres, 70 of which are in a high state of cultivation, and fenced with cedar. A new frame barn 60 x 40 now being erected. A never failing creek runs through the rear of the lot. It is situated in an excellent neighbourhood, convenient to school, church, post office and gravel road. The soil throughout is excellent, there being no wet or stony land. Heavily timbered with beech, maple and elm.

Also north-half of lot 31, 11th concession, Luther, 100 acres—a superior lot throughout. 30 acres cleared, fenced, and under cultivation. Situated one and a half miles from Colbeck post office, and 2 miles from church and schoolhouse. Excellent roads. A wealthy and well settled locality.

The above lots are unrivalled anywhere as to quality of soil, timber and location. They will be sold at a great bargain. Only a small portion of the purchase money required down; balance to be extended over a term of years.

PROTON, COUNTY OF GREY.

Also lot 12, 4th concession, Proton, 100 acres; 30 cleared and under cultivation. Ordinary buildings and fences. Conveniently situated as to roads and market, being only 2½ miles from the Village of Cedarville. A desirable location. Price low and terms liberal.

Harold the Outlaw,

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

A few moments more of such horrible experience would have caused Lizzie to swoon away, but fortunately for her the diabolical humour passed from him without farther molestation, and he stumbled away into the passage, beckoning her to follow.

She tottered in after him, fighting with her whole soul against the swimming of her brain caused by physical exhaustion and the horrors which surrounded her. That black, close-smelling underground passage which they were traversing, the fiend-like aspect of the dwarf as he passed on before, carrying the blazing torch, the lurid light and murky shadows which the flaring of torch created, combined to form a scene the sufficient to appal any woman, and more so one in poor Lizzie's forlorn and desperate situation. It was such a culmination of the terror and misery of the last two days that her overstrained nerves threatened to give away, and the fear assailed her that she would go mad or become insensible. In these trying moments the anchor of her reason was the child sleeping in her arms. Should she become insane or unconscious, what would become of him? They might take him away—they might destroy him. Oh, the agony of a fear like this! It brought her supernatural strength to resist the influences before which she was yielding. For her boy's sake she must preserve her senses. The protection she was able to afford him might, she shuddered to think, be feeble at the best, but she must not weaken it by becoming incapable of thought and action. The fear of such a possibility fortified her resolution, and with reviving power she followed the footsteps of her ill-conditioned conductor.

The passage was long, and for a time steep and straight—passing to a high elevation through the interior of the cliff. At length it became level, and various other passages branched from it on either hand so thickly that no stranger could have found his way in the labyrinth. To Joe, however, the place seemed as familiar as a village street. He did not require to hesitate a moment at any turning. Another thing which at this point attracted Lizzie's notice was the fact that the walls around them were no longer the living rock, but solid masonry, built with human hands, and according to a plan. These, she thought, must form the lowest foundations of the building which stood on the island. Then she concluded that the passage by which they had come was a secret way of access to the building from the loch. If the suppositions were correct, the end of their journey must be at hand.

And so it proved, for just as Lizzie's weary, trembling limbs were refusing to support her a moment longer, they came to a closed iron gate, with a flight of stairs beyond, down which a current of cold, fresh air blew with steady force. So massive was the door, and so rusty were its hinges and fastenings, that it took all Joe's strength to open it. Once fairly on the swing it went back by its own weight, and struck against the pillar which supported it with a clashing noise, which once again roused Alfred from his slumber, and this time so effectually that all his mother's efforts could not soothe him back to rest. He also struggled against her endeavour to keep him under the folds of the cloak so that he might not see the hunchback and scream as before. Being a determined little fellow, he would not be shrouded in darkness, but forced up his head and gazed about him.

Lizzie expected a shriek to follow, but it did not. Wonder and astonishment kept him silent as he gazed at the strange objects which met his view.

She had to wait at the foot of the stair till Joe closed and secured the gate, and was ready to lead the way up. While this was being accomplished, a light appeared above, and Lizzie raising her eyes to whence it came, saw an old woman with a lamp in her hand, gazing down upon them from the top of the stair.

"Is that you, Mother Barnacle?" called out Joe over his shoulder, for he was still busy with the gate.

"Yes, my beauty," was resounded from above, in a voice as unmusical as the dwarf's own.

"Ha! and curious, I'll warrant, to know my freight. Isn't it so, old Mother Barnacle?"

"Why, aye, my sweet tulip; I'm still a woman, though getting to be an old one therefore am gifted with a woman's failing, more by token that I think it is a woman thou hast brought, and an old one, too, if I am to judge by the cloak."

"Pray thee, yellow face, when did old women learn to bear children?" laughed Joe, facetiously.

"An old woman can carry a babe without being its mother," was the reply, "But, in good sooth, Joe, this is never the child of——"

"No, you rattle-tongue," shouted the hunchback, in time to stop the rest of the sentence. "Don't let your fool's brain run off at the gallop in that way. The brat is a boy, and she that carries him is his mother."

"She! why, who's the fool now!—the grandmother you mean!"

"Bah! an old cloak dosen't make an old woman. Haven't you lived long enough to know that? Come, girl, mount the stair, and let Mother Barnacle see her mistake.

Thus directed, Lizzie summoned her remaining strength for this last effort, and toiled up the steep steps, her progress being curiously watched by the woman at the top whom Joe addressed as Mother Barnacle.

The hunchback followed behind, and the top being gained, another short passage brought the group into a large kitchen, where a huge wood fire burned brightly.

Lizzie just managed to totter forward to the nearest seat, and, sinking into it, with a low plaintive moan, passed into a state of semi-unconsciousness.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

The "National Policy" Meeting in Eramosa.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

DEAR SIR,—I observe that you are taken somewhat severely to task by Mr. Loghrin, of this Township, for your very fair and pertinent remarks on the so-called "National Policy" meeting. Your account of the meeting and conclusions arrived at, regarding its object, were too true to be palitable, and hence the ill-natured snapping of Mr. L. The whole movement was a deep laid scheme of the retired tobacconist and a few of the leading Tories of the Township, to entrap some half-dozen men who have previously acted with the Reform party. These men know perfectly well that a requisition signed by such men as John McKerlie, David Day, and men of that stripe would have failed of its object and been seen through at once. But a new dodge was taken. Mr. Swanston was asked to head the requisition, Mr. Duffield to be placed in the chair, and Mr. Tovell to move aresolution, &c., &c. Thus the pill was to be smoothed and glided over, and ultimately gulped down before the cloven foot presented itself. Why sir, I happened to be in Guelph a couple of days after when Bathgate could be seen, hobnobbing and chuckling with the leading spirits of the faithful and openly boasted how adroitly the whole thing had been done.

But, sir, you are told by Mr. Loghrin that you should be careful about traducing such men as Mr. Lukes and Mr. Wright. Dear me, what paragons of perfection are those two gentlemen, that one must touch our beavers as we pass. Certainly they are no strangers in this part of Canada, and when gentlemen come before an audience and advocate certain doctrines and principles of policy, their conduct is open to the criticism of the press, and you did not exceed this in the very moderate allusions you made to them. But, sir, I will lay myself open to Mr. L's strictures, and go a little farther than you did. I take the broad ground that when a man assumes the position of public orator and adviser, the public have a perfect right to carefully examine and enquire into the antecedents and character of the instructor, and after carfully considering their past history, decide whether they were worthy of credence or not. But let us suppose a case. A person calls on Mr. L. and offers his services for some position of trust; would he take it for granted that the person was trustworthy without making an inquiry into the past history of the individual. Not a bit of it. Suppose that on inquiry he learns that the person had been in business and had turned out a complete failure—too lazy to attend to his duties—too fond of chattering politics, &c., and in the end loss to his partners (for he had nothing to lose himself), and ultimately a wandering Bohemian. No Sir, Mr. L. is too sensible a man to engage such a character. But he wishes his brother farmers to listen and swallow a lot of fallacies from the same characterless wanderer, and when you or a humble individual like myself calls the attention of the public to the utter worthlessness of the men and also of the cause they advocate, we are taken to task for it.

But with your permission, I will now say a word or two about the cause—that is Protection, or the so-called "National Policy,"—and in doing so I shall endeavour to state the case as clearly and fairly before my brother farmers as I possibly can, and leave them to draw their own conclusions. I will begin with the article of barley. A very large portion of the barley crop of Ontario is exported to the United States, and it is there met with a very high duty. Now I shall not argue who pays this duty, because it is not necessary for my argument. We sell the barley to the Americans because it is our best market, but it is proposed by the Protectionists to better our position by imposingan equal duty on American barley. Now, the fact is, we don't import their barley to any extent, consequently the imposition of a duty on what we don't import would not injure the Americans, and certainly it could not by any mode of reasoning benefit us. But, say the National Policy party we should show our British pluck by a system of retaliation. How childish to talk in this way. Why, as far as this particular article is concerned, we have no power to retaliate; the whole case is in the hands of our opponents, and they can well afford to laugh at our puny threats under such circumstances.

We have quite recently been favoured with a practical lesson on this retaliation question. Last session a heavy duty was imposed on American malt. Now, it is well-known that malt, like barley, is not imported, but for Excise purposes this duty was imposed. What was the result? Why, the American maltsters, under the pretext of their interests being affected applied to the Washington Government to double the duty on Canadian malt, which, if done, would have excluded our malt from their country altogether. Now, what did our Protectionists do when they saw the result of this little trial of their pet system? Did they show their British pluck and fight it out? Not a bit of it. They went down to Ottawa in a body, and begged of Mr. Cartwright to repeal the Act of last session, and it was done accordingly. Such is the first fruits of retaliation, and so will it be if tried on a larger scale.

I will now take the article of wheat, and I may here state that the Protectionists are divided amongst themselves as to the propriety of taxing wheat. They all know, and some of them admit, that the price of wheat is regulated by the British market. The Lower Canadian Protectionists are decidedly opposed to the imposition of a duty, and our millers are mostly of the same opinion. But in this connection I may as well allude to the article of flour. Of course the whole object of the interest taken by millers on this question is to have a duty on American flour, so that they may control and monopolize the Maritime Provinces' markets. A very large portion of the flour used in the Maritime Provinces is imported from the United States. This arises from the trade relations of the two countries, the fish and lumber of these Provinces find a market in the U.S., and the vessels engaged in carrying these articles bring return cargoes of flour and other food for the fishermen. Now, what Messrs. Lukes, Goldie, and Co. want is to impose a sufficient tax on American flour as to completely exclude it from those Provinces, and enable them to monopolize the trade as far as those Provinces are concerned. Of course they don't propose to buy the poor fishermens' fish; they will let the Yankees do that, but they are determined that the trade shall be all one sided—fish for Jonathan, but the flour shall come from Ontario. This very modest proposition has another side to it. The Eramosa farmer comes on to the Guelph market with a load of wheat. Mr. Goldie's lawyer takes his perch on the wagon. How much so and so, meaning the price? But remonstrates the farmer, you gave more than that yesterday. Ah! says the buyer, that is so, but wheat has fallen a shilling in Liverpool since yesterday, and you know that our prices are regulated by that market. But say my neighbour, the price of flour is not altered in Nova Scotia where your flour is sold. Oh! replies the man of samples, that has nothing to do with it, the Yankees can't go in there now you know—Canada for Canadians you know is our motto. Such sir, is a specimen of how this beautiful system would work. The manufacture invariably comes in for the long end of the string, and the poor farmer after pulling the chesnuts out of the fire gets leave to suck his thumbs as his only reward.

But I will now come to what is called by our Nationals the great standing grievance of the agricultural interests—that is allowing American corn to come in to Canada duty free, and thereby take the place of what is called our coarse grains. Now you—a greenhorn, pardon the expression—will very naturally inquire why is this done? Why is so much corn of foreign growth brought into this country? The answer is short and to the point, it is because it pays—a very expressive word. It can be proved to a demonstration by hundreds of farmers that it pays to sell coarse grains at the American market price, and purchase Indian corn with the proceeds, this has been proved to my own knowledge time and again. (To be continued.)

THE PACIFIC RAILWAY.—Mr. Whitehead, of the firm of Whitehead & Co., contractors for the Manitoba section of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is now in Ottawa, states that over seventy-five miles of the track has been laid north and east from Winnipeg and that the work is progressing favorably, the track been graded towards Rat Portage. On their sections they have had employed some 1,200 men at $2 per day, and employment could be given to 2,000 more. Board is $4 and $4.50 per week. A large number of the men in the employ of his firm have left just now to take up land, fearing that the rest of it will be taken up by immigrants coming in, but these return immediately after locating. About fifteen or twenty miles from Winnipeg, on the line of the railway, the wooded section of the country is struck, and this extends right through eastward to Thunder Bay. The timber is good, especially east of Rainy Lake. The soil of the wooded section in North Manitoba is equally rich to that of any other portion. Mr. Whitehead considers it the finest country that the sun shines on.

How can the Spaniards Take Gibraltar?

There is only one hindrance to the undertaking Gibraltar, and that is, that it is impregnable. Three of its sides are so steep and precipitous as to be quite inaccessible, and the fourth side, facing Spain, is protected by [illegible] pieces of artillery. The Moors were finally expelled from the fortress by the Spaniards, 1462, and the latter then greatly strengthened it and supposed they had made it impregnable, but it was captured by a few British sailors under Sir George Rook in 1704, and the most desperate and most persevering efforts have been unavailing to retake it. In 1713 it was ceded to Great Britain by the treaty of Utrecht. The Spaniards attacked it [illegible] before, in 1727, and in 1779 the place was [illegible] by a combined French and Spanish fleet. This latter siege lasted [illegible] three years. Since all communication by land and mainland was effectually cut off, the following month the [illegible] was completely blockaded. The [illegible] soon put to bear all the [illegible] batteries, bombs and [illegible] and their operations were directed by the ablest French and Spanish engineers; a powerful fleet of [illegible] ships of the line, and three [illegible] bombardment it was kept up [illegible] 170 mortars and 200 pieces of battering cannon. The garrison made a sortie on November 27th, 1781, and destroyed the enemy's works, but the allies soon constructed them and more than 1,000 pieces of artillery to play against the fortress, a fleet of 40,000 men the impregnable lodgment [illegible] Lord, while forty sail of the line and a great number of smaller vessels [illegible] Admiral Rodney having succeeded in throwing relief into the [illegible] the French fleet, the gallant [illegible] were nearly all [illegible] by discharging red-hot shot, silenced the enemy's enormous floating batteries and burned many of their ships. Nine of the batteries were set on fire. About 400 of the crews were saved by the British, but the rest all perished [illegible] explosions or drowning. Both [illegible] the besieged were honored, but they lost only sixteen men throughout the attack. These little excerpts are not very encouraging to Spain in her aspirations for the recovery of Gibraltar. If she really means to take the Rock she will have her hands full.

HASTENING HOME.—Life bears us on like the stream of a mighty river. Our boat at first goes down the tiny channel, through the playful murmuring of the little brook, and the willows upon its grassy borders. The trees shed their eternal blossoms over our young heads; the flowers of the brink seem to offer themselves to our young hands; we are happy in hope, and grasp eagerly at the beauties that surround us; the stream hurries us on and still our hands are empty. Our course is youth and manhood is along a wider and deeper flood, and amid objects more striking and magnificent. We are animated by the moving pictures of enjoyment and industry passing us; we are excited by our short-lived enjoyments. Time bears us on and joys and griefs are left behind us. We may be shipwrecked, but we cannot be delayed; for, rough or smooth, the river hastens towards its home, till the roar of ocean is in our ears and the waves beneath our feet, and the floods are lifted up around us, and we take our leave of earth and its inhabitants until of our future voyage there is no witness save the Infinite and the Eternal. Then why cause pain or misery to a mortal, when here wrongs can be made right, when life has but one path, and one Judge at last.

On Saturday last a daughter of Mr. Wm. Cole of Garafraxa was kicked by a horse over the right temple. The scalp was torn through for more than three inches, and skull itself fractured to the extent of fully two inches. She is recovering.

See Dr. G. W. Hotchkin's springless truss and supporter advertisement in another column of this paper. d13 w2.

Local News.

It is thought that Messrs. Haskell and Hood will again visit Guelph shortly.

THE wire sign fiend, lately doing business in Guelph, is now in Listowel pushing his avocation.

NEW J. P's.—Messrs. Thos. W. Stephenson and Joseph W. Shaw, of Orangeville, have been sworn in as magistrates.

MODERATE to fresh northwesterly winds, fair weather with light local rains in the eastern portion.

A SERMON to young men will be preached by Rev. J. C. Smith in St. Andrew's Church to-morrow evening.

THE Orange True Blues, of Guelph, gave a very interesting entertainment at Rockwood on Friday evening.

THE piano used at the union concert on Thursday evening was one of the celebrated Knabe's and was from the warehouse of Messrs. W. Bell & Co.

GENERAL HOSPITAL.—During the ensuing week the Rev. Mr. Harris and Dr. Cowan will be on Hospital duty during the ensuing week.

THE Caledonians of Listowel purpose giving a concert on the 24th of May. Professor Maitland, of Guelph, has been communicated with and has consented to take part in the entertainment.

FOR AUSTRALIA.—Mr. Frank Coffee was accompanied to the Great Western station by a number of his friends, to-day at noon when he took his departure for Australia by way of San Francisco. He is accompanied by Mr. John Robertson, of Trenton.

"MANITOWABA."—Hon. Mr. Norquay, who is in Ottawa, from Manitoba, and who speaks the Cree language, says the proper pronunciation of the name of that Province, is "Manitowaba." That is another syllable, "wa," is added.

CHICKEN STEALERS.—These pests of society have again been visiting some of the coops in the West Ward, and some valuable fowls taken. We just give a word of caution to the thieves, to let other people's fowls alone, or they may, before they are prepared, find themselves wearing striped suits and spending months of their time in a Government institution.

CATTLE SHIPMENTS.—There has been considerable excitement among cattle dealers in Guelph, Toronto and other parts of the Province in regard to the shipment of cattle to England, owing to the cable state that the cargoes arrived safely, not a single animal having been lost on the voyage and good paying prices were invariably realized. As soon as navigation opens, it is the intention to make three shipments per week from Toronto, and Ontario exporters believe that before long the trade will have so increased that a daily shipment will be required to keep the English army and navy supplied with good Canadian beef and mutton.

BASE BALL.—The annual meeting of the Canadian Base Ball Association took place in Toronto on Thursday. The clubs represented were the Atlantics and Mutuals, London; Maple Leafs, Guelph; Clippers, Toronto; St. Lawrance, Kingston, and the Orangeville Club. The reports of the Judiciary Committee, declaring the Atlantics champions for 1877, and therefore allowing them to fly the pennant this year, was confirmed. The International League rules for 1878 were adopted with some slight modifications, and the 15th of May was fixed as the time for receiving entries. The number of games the clubs entering will have to play with each other was reduced to two, it having been found almost impracticable last year to get through with a greater number. The Atlantics, Maple Leafs, St. Lawrence, Orangeville, Clippers, and Mutuals are among those clubs likely to contest the championship. The officers of the Association were elected as follows: President, H. C. Symth, Atlantics; Vice-President, R. J. Eilbeck, St. Lawrence; Secretary-Treasurer, W. F. Mountain, Toronto; Judiciary Committee, W. W. Jeffers, Clippers; C. J. Moorehead, London; J. T. Nicholls, Guelph; J. Elmslie, Orangeville; W. Campbell, Hamilton.

CONSERVATISM.—The mass meeting of the Conservatives of Guelph advertised for Friday evening, drew together about a hundred of the faithful in the old town hall. Some thought it would be well to adjourn the meeting till a future time in order to secure a larger attendance, but it finally was decided to proceed to business. Mr. Horsman was in the chair and he explained that the mass meeting was called for the purpose of organizing a Guelph Conservative Association and for the establishment of a reading room in connection therewith. On motion of Messrs. Knowles and Goodeve it was carried that it was desirable to have a reading room for the use of the members of the Association. The following officers were then elected:—President, John Horsman; First Vice, A. H. Goodeve; Second Vice, F. Biscoe; Secretary, C. A. Burrows; Treasurer, Thomas Hefferman. A committee was appointed to carry out the wish of the meeting in regard to securing a room. On motion of Messrs. Knowles and Peter Kerr the following resolution was carried: "That Conservatives of Guelph, in mass meeting assembled, desire to place on record their appreciation of the services rendered to the party, and through the party to the country, by the Right Honorable Sir John A. Macdonald, and to declare the unswerving allegiance to the principle of which he is the exponent." The meeting afterwards adjourned.

Quarterly Accounts.

We would remind our readers that our accounts for the quarter have been sent out, and that we expect prompt payment of the same. Our patrons know that we have adopted the system of the quarterly payment of accounts, and we expect that they will promptly and cheerfully conform to our rule.

BUSINESS MEN on Wyndham street, and in fact the public generally, would be happier if there was less dust blowing about.

MR. WM. BISHOP, for many years employed as one of the foremen in Raymond's Sewing Machine Works, purposes leaving Guelph shortly for Oswego.

FRED. EVANS has a pure bred game hen that has made a reputation for presenting its owner with large eggs. A three and a half ounce is among its latest achievements.

"GRIP."—Mr. John Anderson has Grip for this week, which contains a good caricature on the Geneva award, and the usual amount of choice reading. Copies at Anderson's.

THE magnificent show rooms at the Britannia were opened for the season today, and were crowded by ladies, who appeared perfectly delighted with the gorgeous display of millinery and fancy goods. Seldom has an opening in Guelph drawn such a crowd of visitors, all of whom were unanimous in pronouncing the Britannia House among the leading temples of fashion. A large number of sales were made, and, no doubt, for some time to come the rush will be as great as it was to-day.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A despatch from Drumbo, on the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway, states that a sad and fatal accident occurred there on Friday morning, by which a brakesman named Philip Brodie met his death. On a special freight train going east, deceased was on top of the cars, and was struck by one of the overhead bridges near there. He fell between the cars and was horribly mangled. Deceased was the son of Mr. P. B. Brodie, formerly agent at the Great Western station, Guelph, and now of Amherstburg. The body will be brought to Guelph and the funeral will take place from the residence of Dr. McGuire, Yarmouth street, on Sunday at two o'clock.

DRUNK.—Wm. Downing became paralyzed with liquor on Friday evening, and thought the entrance to the staircase of Higinbotham's block, on Macdonnell street, would be a magnificent spot to while away a few hours' in unconscious blissfulness. A policeman who had an eye for the safety of the property of the public considered one of the cells a better sleeping apartment for such ilk. He at once gathered William in, and for the offence the Magistrate handed him over to the cares of the officials of the county gaol for ten days.

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT.—On Friday evening an entertainment in connection with Chalmers' Church Sabbath School was held in the basement of the church. The attendance was fair. The programme consisted of musical selections, interspersed with stereoptican illustrations of the geological ages, showing the vegetable and animal life of the different periods. Interesting explanations were made by Prof. P. H. Bryce, B. A. Besides the views given, Miss Cossitt did excellent service at the organ; Miss Inglis and Miss Smith each sang a solo; Miss Inglis and Prof. Maitland a duet, "What are the wild waves saying;" and Mr. Maitland with capital effect sang "My Grandfather's clock." The benediction pronounced by Rev. Thos. Wardrope concluded the entertainment.

IMPORTANT COURT CASE.—Rennie vs. Brill. This was a case tried at the Division Court here on Friday, before His Honor Judge Chadwick. The action was brought by James Rennie, a farmer living in Maryborough, against James T. Brill, of Guelph, to recover damages for refusing to accept a quantity of pork, which plaintiff alleged that defendant's agent, Thos. Miller, purchased from him in the market, on the 28th February last. The defendant contended that he had discharged Miller before he purchased these hogs, and that he had no authority to purchase them for him. The Judge, however, held that Miller was the agent of the defendant, and that he purchased the plaintiff's hogs for the defendant, that the plaintiff tendered them to him, and that he refused to accept them. His Honor gave the plaintiff a verdict for $5.42 and costs.

OPENING DAY AT "THE WONDERFUL MAN'S."—The opening of the millinery show rooms at the store of John Hogg & Son, Upper Wyndham street, on Friday, was the subject of much talk among many ladies in town and country. The goods are all of rich and rare designs and are in every way calculated to please those who wish or have any desire to buy. During the entire day there was a constant throng of customers and no doubt the same will be kept up for some time to come. An inspection is asked, and for that alone it is well worth a visit. Special attention is called to the advertisement of the firm in another column.

OXFORD ASSIZES.—At the Assizes held in Woodstock this week, Huntley and McGinnis, charged with manslaughter, the result of a drunken brawl in Ingersoll, were acquitted, Freeman was charged with the murder of Thomas Joiner, of Brownsville. Joiner, who it appears was of a quarrelsome nature, got into a drunken row, and Freeman struck him with a whiffle-tree, instantly killing him. The deceased and prisoner had been on good terms previously. A verdict of manslaughter was returned.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Slight Hopes of Peace Being Preserved.

Posible Dissolution of the British Parliament.

APRIL 5.

The Pall Mall Gazette stated yesterday if the Opposition endeavored to hinder the Government's measures Parliament will be dissolved, insuring in the present state of public feeling an overwhelming Conservative majority.

A Calcutta despatch says:—In consequence of the European political crisis the Indian Government is considering certain precautionary measures.

The Post says:—To-day the prospect is more peaceful, but the Government should guard against surprise at Constantinople, and Mr. Layard ought to be empowered to assure the Porte of England's support against any sudden advance of the Russians.

The Standard semi-officially states:—We understand that the present intention is to keep the Channel squadron near Malta, available for the transport of troops therefrom. Every arrangement has been made so that three or four thousand troops could be embarked in a few hours.

A Vienna special says:—England has informed Russia that she intended to occupy certain strategical points unless Russia immediately proposes a frank modification of the Treaty.

The military situation is beginning to attract attention. A Servian occupation of Bulgaria as far as Plevna is believed to be intended, to cover the Russian line of communication, and relieve the Russian troops, which will be concentrated south of the Balkans. At the same time there are indications that the Russians latel at Sofia and north of Adrianople are moving towards the south-east, perhaps because it is considered advisable to strengthen the army of the Grand Duke Nicholas, or it may be the intention to abandon the lines of land communication and rely almost exclusively for the conveyance of reserves and supplies on marine transports over the Black Sea, in consequence of the attitude of the Roumanians.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—Lord Salisbury's circular was communicated to Gortschakoff to-day. It is said in official circles that many British objections might have been removed in the Congress, but now the door is closed against concessions. It is difficult, therefore, to imagine a pacific solution. The majority of the official world, and of the public, regard war as inevitable.

The London Times' St. Petersburg despatch says an inspired article in the Journal de St. Petersburg says:—"The conviction that England's demands are incompatible with the interests of Russia and Europe will find firm support in the public opinion of this Empire." Notwithstanding this decided language, all hope of a peaceful solution is not yet abandoned.

A Berlin despatch says:—Germany is again busily meditating between Austria and Russia.

The Turks attempted to dislodge the Cretans from their positions near Chidona and after four days' fighting the insurgents were victorious.

A Volo special says:—The mutilated body of Mr. Ogle, the Times correspondent, whose assassination was before reported, has been found near Potaria. Ten thousand Turkish troops are near Volo.

An Athens despatch says:—The British consul at Larissa has arrived at Volo and demanded the delivery of the murderers of Ogle to justice.

FIRE ON TORONTO STREET.—This (Saturday) morning, about half-past one o'clock, a fire was noticed in the East Ward by some parties who had returned from an entertainment at Rockwood. Strange to say no alarm was given for nearly half-an-hour afterwards. Word was brought down to the fire hall by the night switchman at the Grand Trunk station, but at that time the people of the town might as well have been left in their comfortable beds to enjoy their well-earned repose, as there was no danger of a general conflagration, and by the time the engine got in position the building in which the fire originated was destroyed. The house was a story and a half frame dwelling, owned by Moses Osborn, a colored charcoal-burner, and he and his family had left home for the neighborhood of Hespeler early in the afternoon of Friday. This fact would lead to the supposition that the firing of the building was the work of an incendiary. The fire brigade had the steamer under way promptly, and by the time it reached the Neeve street bridge enough steam was up to commence playing. It was found that the 1,160 feet of hose only came within 300 or 400 feet of the burning ruins, and it was therefore useless to attempt to throw water on them. The engine was worked for a short time, just to satisfy the chief engineer that everything about it was all right. The staunch little steamer was found to be in perfect trim, and the firemen were not displeased that they had not a night of it before them. Nothing was saved out of the building. The loss will amount to about $300. The owner of the building will be considerably surprised this afternoon when he returns and finds that his house has been burned out in his absence.

Busted in Business.

The other evening a very polite darkey made his bow to one of the desk editorial, with his hat in hand, and the propitiatory remark: "I know it's kind o' cheeky to ask it of a stranger, but de fact am I'se busted in business; had to sign over, sah, can't pay two cents on the dollar."

"Is that so? I'm sorry to hear it. Hope your creditors are satisfied?

"To be shuh! Dev's all right. It's me dat's a satisfied. I mus' go fru de bankruptcy court. De fack is, I want you to advance me the capital to set up again in business."

"What is your business?

"I'se a jobber and whitewasher, sah. I'se been doin' a smashin' business."

"Well, how much capital will it require to set you up in business again?"

The Stratford Beacon the other day heard of a wealthy farmer in the vicinity of Stratford, who following the example of another wealthy farmar of Fullarton, returned from a visit to the old country, on an emigrant ticket, getting the benefit of the Government assisted passage, and free provisions from the seaboard to his destination. This "honest yeoman" evidently wasn't ashamed of his beggarly conduct, but being a good Tory, rather gloried in taking a rise out of the "Grit Government.

Sharp competition is the order of the day, among the first-class hotels in New York. With one or two exceptions, they are trying to keep their old trade while adhering to their previous high rates. Writing gives facility to expression, induces observation, familiarizes us with facts and principles, and gives mankind the best there is to offer. SATURDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 6, 1878

Mr. Moylan's Little Bills.

The enquiry in connection with the payment of these bills has now been concluded before the Committee on Public Accounts, and the report has been laid over for consideration until Saturday. Mr. William Macdougall was examined on Tuesday, and as a member of the late John Sandfield Macdonald's Government he stated that it was not an element in that Administration to purchase the support of newspapers in any way, not to mention the plan of passing bogus accounts for that purpose. This statement was received with Ministerial applause.

Mr. Dymond after the last evidence was given, moved the adoption of the report, which is in brief :—

1st. That the sum of $1,200 was advanced in an irregular and improper manner by Sir John Macdonald to Mr. Moylan. 2nd. That the terms of the advance of $1,200 were not and have not been complied with, and that the account was improperly closed by charging it to printing under the head of Contingencies. 3rd. That the sum of $3 0 was advanced for other purposes than those designated in the order given by Sir John Macdonald, who admits the tenor of the order was contrary to its intentions, and that the amount was improperly of charged to printing 4th. That the sum $1,000 advanced ostensibly for printing on the authority of Sir John, was alleged by him to have been paid on account of the alleged claim of Mr. Moylan on the old Province of Canada ; that the object of this advance was incorrectly described by Sir John in the order for payment given by him, and improperly charged to printing. 5th. That for the advances of $1,200 and $1,000 the Dominion of Canada has received no value or consideration whatever. 6th. That the alleged claim of Mr. Moylan upon the old Province of Canada being in dispute, and not proven, offered no lien or security for the repayment of the sum of $2,200 by Mr. Moylan to the Dominion of Canada, not that he never took any steps subsequent to the advance of these moneys to obtain proof of the alleged validity of the alleged claim upon the old Province of Canada, or to repay such sum advanced. 7th. That Sir John Macdonald, when called upon by the Government of Canada to explain the circumstances under which these payments to Mr. Moylan were made, promised, in a letter to the Secretary of State, to look into his papers and communicate the result of his enquiries, but that, although again invited by a letter from the Secretary of State to give the required explanations, he did not then, or subsquently, offer any information on the subject. 8th. That Mr. Moylan, in reply to applications from the Minister of Finance and Minister of Justice, stated, in accordance with his evidence given before the Committee, that the payments above mentioned were made in discharge of his alleged claim on the old Province of Canada.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the British House of Commons, on Thursday made his annual financial statement, which showed a deficit of £1,560,000, to meet which the Government propose to issue Treasury notes and to increase the income tax, the tobacco tax, and the dog tax.

Sir John said on Tuesday in the House that it was possible he would never either be in office or in Parliament.

The Ottawa correspondent of the London Advertiser, writing on Thursday, says :—It is always painful to have to allude to a personal failing in a man who should certainly respect public opinion and his own person when seeking to secure again the confidence of the people. But silence after the exhibition Sir John Macdonald made of himself last night in the House of Commons would positively be unjust to the people. He was simply drunk, and acted as he always does when in that condition. He appears to have grown perfectly reckless, defying every principle of ordinary good behavior." His conduct had the effect of bringing Dr. Tupper back to his seat, for on Wednesday the Opposition was practically without a leader, except so far as Mr. Plumb was concerned, and it suffered accordingly.

The other day a number of the workingmen of Ottawa had an interview with Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Mowat with regard to free transportation to Government lands. Mr. Mackenzie, speaking of Manitoba, said that only agricultural laborers and farmers had been encouraged to go there the last two years. They would have a better chance in Muskoka than in Manitoba, for in the latter country they would require oxen and implements at the start, and then not have the advantage of free firewood, There was very little work to be had in Manitoba except on the railway. Mr. Mowat for the Ontario Government said there was no money which could be touched for such a purpose at present. There was plenty of land in Muskoka which would be given to settlers. The cost of transport from here would be about $12, but in addition to that some $50 per head would be required in order to supply their temporary wants. The difficulty was just where the Government could stop were such a scheme adopted.

The Stratford Beacon, in noticing our remarks in reply to the query of the Eramosa "Clodhopper" on the absurd talk about protection to agriculturist, says :—"There is another way in which the 'national policy' would not only do no good, but would work a positive injury to the live stock trade. Cattle intended for the English market or the shambles are fed principally on coarse grains, and the best stock-raisers not only utilize all the oats and peas they can grow, but purchase every year large quantities of Western corn. Put a duty on American corn and the cost of this raw material is increased by so much to the Canadian farmer, thus adding to the expense of preparing every animal for market. That is a queer sort of 'protection' which instead of protecting would deprive Canadian farmers of a large share of their legitimate profits.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Ottawa, April 5.

Dr. Orton resumed the debate on Mr. Brown's amendment to the motion to go into Committee of Supply. He expressed his well-worn views in regard to the protection of our agricultural interests.

Mr. Smith (Peel) followed, and, in the course of an exceedingly well considered and practical speech, quoted statistics of our trade with the United States in farm products, showing that our importation of these goods from that country was so small that an increase of duty could not possibly affect the prices.

Mr. Davies followed, and discussed the question from a Prince Edward Island point of view, averring that protection was a word that met with no favor in that part of the Dominion.

Mr. Burpee (Sunbury), in a brief but conclusive speech, pointed the fallacy on which the resolution was based.

Mr. Greenway in a few forcible words pointed out that the only effect of protection was to increase the cost of the necessaries of life to the poor man without affording him any corresponding advantages.

Mr. Oliver showed that England's tariff in her most protective days was lower than Canada's present tariff. The motion was only the thin edge of the protection wedge, and if adopted would deprive Canadian millers of the opportunity of grinding American wheat which passed through Canada for England. The farmers of Ontario, he was satisfied, saw through the fallacy of protecting them, and he had specific proofs that many Conservative farmers were going to vote for the Government at the general election because of the action of their leaders on this question.

Mr. Little supported the amendment, contending that it was a concession made by the Government to the wisdom of the Opposition policy.

Mr. Gibbs (North Ontario) declared that he would not support any Government, Grit or Tory, that would not put a duty on wheat and flour.

Mr. Palmer opposed the motion on the ground that it was an injustice to the people of the Maritime Provinces.

Mr. Fleming reviewed the whole question on the ground that it was a step in the direction of obtaining justice in our trade relations with the other countries.

Mr. Bain argued on the basis of figures to show that as our exportation of grain was much greater than our importation, no advantage could be gained by the imposition of a protective duty upon it, while the effect of such a policy would be to deprive Canadian shippers of a source of profit in carrying American grain through the country.

Mr. Rymal moved the adjournment of the debate, which was carried.

AN EXPLANATION.

In reply to numerous enquiries from our lady friends, regarding our Millinery Show Rooms for the season, I would say that we shall

Open on Thursday or Friday next.

Definite announcement on Tuesday.

It is well known that in the very early part of the season, a great variety of English, French and American styles, find their way into the Canadian Market. In fact I may say that a great many of these styles are thrust into this market for the purpose of being disposed of, and it is only after the New York season has fairly commenced that approved and really popular styles which command the trade here make their appearance. It is also well understood that when the season has fairly opened, that two or three styles or shapes at the utmost only become popular. Those decided shapes are just now being introduced into the New York market, and a full presen on of which we shall have forward in time for our opening day.

We may just say that we purpose making this one of the grandest opening occasions ever held in the Town of Guelph, and we can do it.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

Acknowledge with feelings of pride the great courtesy extended to them by the ladies of Town and County on the OPENING of their MILLINERY SHOW ROOMS YESTERDAY. The immense concourse of ladies that thronged our establishment yesterday exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and the tone of admiration exhibited by the excellent taste of Town and Country ladies in praise of the exquisite taste displayed by the lady milliner artists of Paris, France, which we had on exhibition, is most flattering to our taste in bringing such excellent goods to Guelph.

We beg to say to the ladies of Guelph and its surroundings, that we have engaged this season as lady artist in millinery, Miss Smith, whose artistic skill in the profession is unsurpassed in any of the cities in the Dominion, and whose obliging manner wins for her the confidence and esteem of ladies of the highest rank and taste.

We confidently solicit the patronage of all who are in quest of the leading styles in millinery, which will be placed at exceedingly cheap prices this season in particular.

CHAPTER XXXI.

LIZZIE'S IMPRISONMENT IS BEGUN.

Faint, dizzy, powerless, and not fully conscious though Lizzie was, there was one idea she held with unabated mental and physical tenacity—the safety of her child. Nothing short of death itself could impair her watchful readiness for Alfred's protection. Accordingly, when the woman whom she heard addressed by the hunchback as Mother Barnacle put forth her hands to take the boy from the poor worn-out girl, Lizzie uttered a sharp, vehement scream, clutched Alfred to her bosom with an energy which seemed invincible and exclaimed,

"Don't touch him—he is mine, and you shall not take him from me."

"Bless my heart," ejaculated the woman, with a startled jerk backwards, "I thought as how you was going off in a dead faint, and was going to catch the child before it fell. But don't be afraid—I shan't touch it; not I. Children ain't much to my mind. Are they, my beauty?"

This question, as may be conjectured, was addressed to Joe, who was chuckling and rubbing his hands gleefully over the start which Mother Barnacle had got.

"I should say not, my blooming rosebud," was the hunchback's cheerful and gallant response. "Only," he added, "there's no hurry for enlightening her. She'll find that out in time, as well as your other good qualities. There's something that is in a hurry though, and that is supper, and after that bed, for they are hungry and tired with two days' riding among the hills; so stir about, my full-blown flower, and get their bellies filled. While they are eating you and I will go into the window-seat and I'll gratify your curiosity, which I see is at bursting point."

"Supper and bed?" repeated the woman. "Humph, the first is easily come by, but the second is a more difficult matter."

"What, aren't there beds enough in the castle?"

"Oh, yes, a dozen for that matter. with the sheets and blankets falling to pieces with mould and dust. But none fit for present use, unless you want to give them rheumatism, or a fever, or something."

"And that's what I don't want at all," returned Joe. "Neither you nor I, my heatherbell have much liking for nursing sick people, and a doctor dosn't live next door, or the next to that; so I'd advise you to find a dry crib for them to-night, and to-morrow you can put a room to rights for their after use."

"They are to stay then?" said the woman, with a quick inquiring look.

The hunckback made no answer in words, but he emitted a significant gesture, and signed to her to give the travellers food, and then retire with him to the deep window recess, round which ran a wooden seat, and where they could converse unheard.

By a journey or two made to an ancient oaken press which filled up the greater part of one end of the kitchen, Mother Barnacle set forth a substantial supper, with abundance of rich sweet milk, which latter instantly claimed Alfred's attention, and he cried lustily to be served with it.

This partially roused Lizzie from the stupor of weakness into which she had fallen. She held the dish to the boy's lips; he drank greedily, and thereafter, with a child's unconsciousness of anxiety, made a vigorous attack on a huge slice of bread and butter, which he gnawed and devoured with great content.

The sight of the boy partaking of the food with such eager relish suggested to Lizzie the necessity that she should do the same, for her weariness was much due to hunger as fatigue, though her prostration was so great that she scarcely felt equal to the task of mastication. A deep draught of the cool rich milk revived her a little, and, once she had fairly begun to eat, the sense of hunger came strong upon her, and, despite the strangeness and uncertainty of her situation, she ate with a keenness and relish almost equal to that of the child—so despotically does a healthy appetite rule over feelings of mental disquietude, however strong.

But even while she ate, the process was, to a great extent, mechanical. Her mind was in a dull haze; its power of action, even of feeling, was for the present gone. The conversation which had taken place between the man and woman on their arrival, though carried on in her presence and in unsuppressed tones, bore to her ear no sense or meaning. Their discordant voices sounded jarringly on her nerves; but she had no power to grasp or understand the words they uttered. With that one fierce, passionate defence of her boy when she thought the woman was taking him from her, the last remnant of her energy had departed, and she half sat, half lay on the seat, like one helpless in a dream—the reality of life gone from her.

One thing brought a little rest to the frightful fear which had possessed her on the passage across the loch. She had found that she was not to be alone with that repulsive, misshapen, and malevolent dwarf. Oh, the unimagined horror with which this fear had filled her. It threatened to paralyse the springs of her being. Most welcome, therefore, was the sight of one of her own sex. To be sure, the woman was not a favorable specimen of that sex. Still she was a woman, and there was some comfort in the knowledge of her presence. She was a shield, however rough and coarse, between her and the horrible society of the being whose repulsive appearance and ferocious disposition had inspired her with such dread.

Both of them having eaten till they were satisfied, sank into a state of utter quiescence. Alfred dropped off to sleep with a piece of bread firmly grasped in his chubby hand; and though Lizzie did not actually give way to slumber, her faculties and senses passed under the spell of a dreamy, semi-conscious inaction, which rendered her but partially cognisant of and wholly uninfluenced by the circumstances which surrounded her. She heard the hushed whispering tones of Joe and Mother Barnacle as they conversed together in the embrasure of the window, but felt not the slightest desire to hear their words. Though aware that her destiny was the subject of their talk, she had not sufficient power to feel interested. Body and mind were alike wearied beyond the capacity of further endurance, and craved only for rest. There is a point beyond which the human soul becomes incapable of cheering either hope or fear, and beyond that point poor Lizzie had reached.

The mother instinct alone was awake and active still, and it prompted her to tighten her hold of the sleeping child. When their whispered conference ended, Joe and Mother Barnacle issued from the recess, and began to move about the apartment. They went too and fro, out and in, but their movements excited no curiosity in her mind.

How long this state of things lasted she had no knowledge. Probably nature did assert its power, and send her to sleep, for it was with a start back to consciousness that she felt somebody's hand laid on her shoulder, and heard Mother Barnacle ask her if she did not wish to go to bed.

"Yes, oh, yes," she murmured. "I am very, very tired."

"Then come this way; the bed is ready for you."

It was by a great effort that Lizzie rose from her seat, and got her stiff, aching limbs in motion—that she staggered out of the kitchen—along a passage, up a narrow, turnpike stair, and other passages, in the woman's wake, guided, in her passively obedient motion, by the light moving as before.

At last she was ushered into a moderate-sized, quaintly-furnished bedroom, the furniture of which was different from anything that Lizzie had ever seen—so ancient and so faded. The floor was not carpeted; the walls were dingy; and the two long, deep-set windows had no blinds. But a cheerful fire burned in the grate, and the four-posted, heavily-curtained bed was prepared for occupation.

"There," said her florid-faced conductor. "You'll maybe find it cold a bit for the first night, and I'd advise you not to take of all your clothes or the child's either. To-morrow's airing will take off the damp and make it all right. Is there anything else you want before I go?"

"No; nothing," answered Lizzie, in the last stage of drowsiness, and longing to be at rest.

"Very well. You'll have your own time for rising. I needn't leave the lamp; you can see to undress by the light of the fire."

Saying which she marched away, taking the light with her, and closing the door of the chamber as she made her exit.

In less than five minutes after she was gone Lizzie was in bed and sound asleep, with her child nestling closely in her bosom.

Oh, sleep!—blessed, merciful, beneficent sleep! How angelic thou are in thy mission of tenderness and love! Thou foldest thy silent wings over the weary frame, the aching heart, the grief-burdened spirit; and lo! the pain and misery are lost in oblivion. There is no suffering so great that thou canst not assuage, no sorrow so heavy that thou canst not soothe with the balm of forgetfulness. Thy empire truly is peace; refreshment and strength are the gifts thou bestowest on the weary and heavy laden; and when for a time thou dost relinquish thy sway, thou returnest the soul to consciousness with the sense of renewed life—weariness and languor are gone, fresh force has passed into the springs of existence, and a new power is felt to cope with danger and bear the weight of trial.

Death of Col. Daly.

(From the Stratford Beacon.)

In the fullness of years—having attained a span beyond the length of that which is accorded to modern humanity—John Corry Wilson Daly has left the scene of his earthly labors. His death occurred on Monday evening at the age of 82 years. He, a first pioneer, had survived the ordinary vicissitudes of a pioneer life in the bush, with its many troubles. He came to Stratford when it was a forest, and nameless, and he has left it a town of nearly 9,000 inhabitants. His first residence was where Wilson's hotel now stands, and attached to it was a long string of log shanties extending to the banks of the river. A dense forest composed the surroundings. His life embraces what there is of the uneventful history of the old Huron tract. In 1827 the Canada Company acquired a vast tract of land extending from Wilmot to Lake Huron, for 2s. 10½d. per acre. These same lands cannot now be purchased for $40 per acre. In 1838 the district of Huron was formed, with Goderich for its metropolis. Previous to that time London was the centre of the Huron district as well as of the local surroundings. In 1847 Mr. Daly prompted Mr. Linton to make a move to have the present county of Perth separated from the rest of the Huron district, and to be formed into a separate county. The population of the whole county at that time was scarcely 10,000, but Mr. Linton succeeded in his mission, and instead of calling the county Monaghan as Mr. Daly desired, he called it after the name of his own native county, Perth. Two years after Mr. Daly's arrival in Stratford—in 1829—there was not half a dozen houses in the whole Huron tract. Roads there were none, save devious tracks through the bush, and the few settlers had to carry their wheat on their backs to the Doon mills to be ground into flour. Col. Daly's ancestors were natives of county Monaghan, Ireland, he was born in Liverpool, on March 24, 1796. After serving as surgeon's assistant on board of one of His Majesty's ships, he emigrated to America and was first a denizen of the town that derived its name from the great American novelist, Cooper. Neither the place nor the people suited his thorough British feeling, and in 1826 he came to the then small village of Hamilton. In the following year the Canada Company acquired their vast domain, and Mr. Daly was recommended to the commissioners as a man likely to be extremely useful in a new settlement, not only on account of his excellent business habits but also for his knowledge of medicine. For many years he was better known by the title of "Doctor" Daly than any other. And he deserved it, for when the "ship fever" broke out among a lot of immigrants, he had huts built for them on the banks of the river and ministered to their wants with his own hands, no one else caring to run the risk of contagion.

Mr. Daly arrived here in 1828 after a tedious journey through a trackless forest from Guelph. After making arrangements for the settlement of the district he was called back to Guelph in 1861 to take the place of Mr. John Galt, as agent of the company. In 1832 he superintended the construction of the company's mills here, and in the next year he made Stratford his permanent abode. He was the first postmaster, the first coroner, the first J.P., and the first militia officer in this part of the country. He was also chairman of the District Court and performed the marriage ceremony of Mr. Peter Kastner and Dr. Flynn. He was not unmindful of the social and industrial needs of the community. Having obtained a grant from the company of a site for a school house, (now the Central School) he proceeded to organize an Agricultural Society and a Mechanics' Institute, both of which societies owe their existence to his thoughtfulness and provision. He was also the first Mayor of Stratford.

Mr. Daly was an excellent business man, extremely exact, careful and methodical. These qualities secured for him the post of agent of the first bank agency ever established in Stratford, that of the bank of Upper Canada, a position which he held for many years. He was an exceedingly exact man, he detested loose dealings. On one occasion an honest German returned to his bank and said in an apologetic tone, "Mishter Taly sie haben ein mistake gemacht." Mr. Daly said, "What do you mean?" The German replied, "You have given me five dollars too much." "Then keep the money," said Mr. Daly, "you have earned it for your honesty and taught me to be more careful in future."

The last change in Mr. Daly's short sickness of less than a week came on Monday last, terminating at 9.30 in the evening, in death. His death bed was surrounded by his son, Mayor Daly and other sorrowing members of the family. He took a philosophic view of death and some years ago made preparations for himself and his family by building a vault in Avondale cemetery. He was thrice married, and had but two children, by his first wife—Mrs. A. B. Orr, now at Cooper's Falls, N. Y., and Thos. Mayne Daly (now Mayor of Stratford), born in Hamilton. His third wife survives him.

While Mr. Daly was of a somewhat choleric temperament he had a warm and generous heart and many a poor person in this section has reason to acknowledge his generosity. He is the last link that was left connecting us with the days of John Galt, Thomas Mercer Jones and the other old pioneers of the Huron tract. A good and honest citizen has passed away from our midst and he has gone to enjoy the reward of a truly good and virtuous life. The funeral took place yesterday (Thursday) afternoon. An immense crowd from both town and country followed the melancholy cortege to Avondale cemetery, where the remains were deposited in the family vault.

TRIED FOR THE CRIME OF ABORTION.—At Belleville on the 4th Dr. Thomas E. Allen was placed on trial to-day, charged with having at the township of Sidney, on the 31st January last, by the administration of some deadly drug, or by the use of some instrument with the intent to procure an abortion, feloniously killed a female child, of which one Amarilla Ketcheson was the mother. The evidence taken proved that Miss Ketcheson gave birth to an illegitimate child on the day in question, she being about seven and a half months advanced in pregnancy at the time. She had been prescribed for by Dr. Allen, who had succeeded in attendance upon her Dr. Stephenson, of Frankford, who had stated her condition to her mother, and said that medical aid was of no further use. Allen was then called, and gave her medicine. On the 30th of January Miss Ketcheson was taken very ill, and on the following evening she was delivered of a child, which was wrapped by Miss Ketcheson's mother in a piece of cotton, and given to the doctor, who took it away with him. On February 11th the body of a female child was found in the ice on the river, near Dr. Allen's stable, wrapped in cotton. The medical evidence was to the effect that this child had breathed, and that it had probably died from fracture of the parietal bones. The jury on last report had not returned a verdict.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

INSTITUTION OF THE ORDER OF ST. PATRICK.—Ninety-five years ago George III. signed at St. James' the statutes constituting the Order of St. Patrick. The appearance of a national Irish spirit which would no longer sit patiently under neglect prompted the creation of this Order of Knighthood, and was conferred upon the principal peers of Ireland as a means of conciliating them. The Order was modelled on that of the Order of the Garter, and was made up of the "Sovereign" and fifteen Companions—since extended to twenty-two—besides a Chancellor, a Registrar and other officers. Among the first companions elected were the Duke of Leinster and thirteen Earls of Ireland, including the Marquis of Wellesley and other noble gentlemen. It was designed as a concession to the national feelings that Order was named St. Patrick, and that the cross of St. Patrick, (a red solitaire) and a golden harp, the national badge and the shamrock were made its symbols.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." Sept. 23, dawly.

The Dundas Banner says:—It is rumoured that Thos. Robertson, Esq., Q. C., will be one of the Conservative Candidates at the next Commons election in Hamilton.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

HOPES OF A CONGRESS YET.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 8.—General Skobeloff was entertained at a grand banquet last night by the English and American residents in this city.

LONDON, April 8.—A Berlin despatch says it is stated that the Czar will ask the Emperor of Germany to mediate, and offers to submit the entire Treaty of San Stefano to the Congress, and also to the making of preliminary concessions.

PARIS, April 8.—A despatch says France is making extensive naval preparations.

All furloughs in the British India army has been stopped. A large force of native cavalry will probably join the English army in case war is declared with Russia.

A St. Petersburg despatch says the prospects of negotiating a Russian loan is very unfavorable.

A despatch says the Agence Russe is encouraged to believe that there still is a possibility of a renewal of the Congress negotiating.

Sir Stafford Northcote on the Situation.

LONDON, April 8.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote in moving the address of the Queen, calling out the reserves, said the action of the Government in the present emergency was not that war was intended, but was taken simply as a precautionary measure. As the Treaty of Paris has been set aside and the Treaty of San Stefano substituted, it was therefore necessary that a power interested in preserving European peace should ask the nature of the San Stefano Treaty.

LACROSSE CLUB meets at Ward's Hotel to-morrow evening. Important business.

ADJOURNED MEETING of the Maple Leaf Base Ball Club to-morrow evening at the Royal Hotel.

WHEN Guelph has the second Field Battery organized, and one or two additional rifle companies enrolled—as is spoken of, there will be something of a military stir here when annual drill takes place.

BUILDING operations are in progress in every quarter of the town. No person need be out of work with excavation and other work incident to building going on.

"DAMPEN Wyndham street," is the cry among business men during the past few days. A petition in regard to the sprinkling of that street and the Market Square is now in circulation, and the Council will be asked to take immediate action at the next meeting of that body.

BASE BALL.—Canadian clubs belonging to the Association have decided to use the Mahn ball, No. 3, only. It has a double cover and is the best made.—The Tecumsehs have nominated the following gentlemen as official umpires for London :—Messrs. Thomas Gillean, E. M. Moore, T. H. Brunton, C. W. Andrus, and James Jury.

THE soup kitchen has now been closed for some time. It has done much good in alleviating suffering during the winter, and those who have helped to support the institution have done a noble work. Mrs. Edwards, the matron, has on all occasions proved herself worthy the trust reposed in her by the ladies who had the kitchen under their management.

SACRELIGIOUS.—There are a number of young men and boys in Guelph who can not by any manner of means be accused of properly observing the Sabbath. Yesterday a game of base ball was in progress in Balkwill's meadow, near the Silver Creek Brewery. Mr. Sleeman rightly objects to this sort of thing being done in front of his residence and other residents on the Waterloo Avenue; considers it within the province of the police to stop such sacrilegious work. The names of several of the parties are known, and if the play is persisted in they will be prosecuted. Fishing and pitching quoits are also largely indulged in on Sundays, along the banks of the river.

SUICIDE.—A man named Archibald McPhail, from Culross, who was confined in the Walkerton gaol, on a charge of dangerous lunacy, committed suicide last week, by hanging himself to the bars of his cell door.

SCHOOL BOARD meets this evening in the Council Chamber.

AT John Anderson's bookstore can be found a very large quantity of very cheap reading.

LISTOWEL brass band has received a grant of $100 from the Council Board. The Guelph band was never treated to such surprises.

REV. MR. WILLIAMS, of Berlin, occupied the pulpits in the Dublin and Norfolk Methodist Churches yesterday. Rev. E.B.Ryckpreached educational sermons in London.

THE International Railway and Steam Navigation Guide, published by C.R. Chisholm & Bros., and corrected from official time tables, has been received for April.

A DISSOLUTION of partnership had taken place in the medical firm of Keating & Macdonald. The former will continue the practice of his profession in Guelph; and the latter is now practising in Toronto.

SUNDAY FIGHTING.—A row occurred yesterday on the corner of Berlin and Yorkshire streets, in which a man by the name of Sweeney got considerably bruised. The police might investigate.

The Acton Lodge of Oddfellows purpose celebrating the anniversary of the Order in America by a concert, on the 26th inst. Guelph Lodges have not yet made a move in the matter of celebration.

SERMON TO YOUNG MEN.—On Sunday evening St. Andrew's Church was crowded to excess. Rev. J. C. Smith, pastor, delivered a powerful and effective sermon to young men, which was listened to with great interest throughout.

THE funeral of Mr. P. Brodie, which took place on Sunday afternoon from the residence of Dr. McGuire to the Union Cemetery was very largely attended. Rev. Mr. Ball conducted the services at the grave. Mr. P. H. Brodie, the father of deceased, and other relatives were present.

PARTY TO MANITOBA.—The price of tickets for those going with Mr. Patterson's party to Manitoba has been reduced to $22.15 from Paris to Fort Garry with 200 lbs of baggage allowed free. A very large number from the Counties of Brant, Oxford, Waterloo, Wellington and Wentworth are going.

THE G. C. T. C. held their usual meeting in the Y. M. C. A. rooms yesterday afternoon. The meeting was well attended. In the absence of the Presidents the Secretary took the chair. The Rev.T. Brock, Rev. Mr. Williams, of Berlin, and Bros. Butler and Allan addressed the meeting.

THE Chief of Police thinks that a more stringent By-law than the one at present in force should be enacted for the suppression of houses of questionable reputation. Three or four houses of this kind, and it is alleged they all keep a crock of stimuant, is enough to shock the moral sense of any community.

"THE SERVICE OF SONG" at St. George's Church this evening, promises to be the most interesting and attractive of these beautiful services yet held in Guelph. There is to be a trumpet and other instrumental accompaniments to the organ, in some of the grandest selections that are to be rendered. The collection is to be devoted to the Rectory fund.

THE BOARD OF EXAMINERS.—The Mount Forest Examiner republishes the letter which has already appeared in the MERCURY, from the Board of Examiners for the County. In referring to it editorially, that paper says :—"A full and conclusive reply is supplied to the objections made to their account for expenses at the December session of the County Council. We direct the special attention of all interested to the letter, fully assured that the statement set forth will prove entirely satisfactory to every candid mind. We may say that we have known a majority of the Board for more than half a life-time, and the others by reputation for several years, and can vouch that they are honorable, upright, and painstaking in their public capacity, and most estimable in their private life. We sincerely trust that the misunderstanding which has arisen between the Board and the County Council may be soon amicably arranged, and the happy relations heretofore existing be restored in the educational and general interest."

COMPLIMENTARY.—The elders and managers of Chalmers' Church have decided to give a complimentary social to Mr. H. K. Maitland on the evening of Good Friday, in recognition of his valuable services as leader of psalmody and the interest he has always manifested in connection with socials and other entertainments in connection with the church and Sabbath School. Mr Maitland will have the arranging of the programme for the complimentary social, and when that is said the public will be satisfied it is in good hands. There is every prospect of a large gathering of people on Good Friday evening to show their appreciation of Mr. Maitland, and those present will not by any means be confined to Chalmers' Church congregation.

FOR allowing less than three half pints of liquor to be sold on his premises, Mr. E. O'Donnell was fined $20 and costs by the Police Magistrate this (Monday) morning.

Mr. E. M. Colford, tobacconist, Halifax, has absconded after having "by hook or crook" realized all the money he could cut of his stock and debts. Some Toronto firms have reason to remember this man. Colford failed, in 1873, and many of his transactions in connection with that failure were highly discreditable to him.

Edward Lucas, an employee in the Acton glove works, had a narrow escape from death recently. The Free Press states that he was in the act of handing some matches down from the verandah of Campbell's hotel to some parties on the sidewalk, when he fell head foremost, his head and shoulder striking the ground with great force. He is recovering.

Liverpool has a population of nearly half a million. Last year the magistrates examined 45,000 criminal cases. Of the 27,592 arrests by the police, 12,156 were females, nearly half of whom were under 21 years of age. Of the 12,285 occupants of the immense city prison there have been 739 more women than men. This hideous array of criminals can be directly traced to the 2,000 drinking houses of the city.

Dr. Talmage last Sunday, in laying it down that people ought to sing, said that, in the construction of the human throat, "there are fourteen direct muscles that produce 16,383 sounds, and thirty indirect muscles that produce 173,741,823 sounds and that the human voice can produce 17,592,186,944,415 different sounds." Now we know how it is that Plumb and Mitchell never tire of talking.

At a late hour on Saturday night T. V. Row, alias Roy, the Brahmin priest, who has figured lately in the Police Court in Toronto, Hamilton, and another western town on a charge of larceny, but who was acquitted a few days ago, was brought to Toronto from Cobourg by Detective Sheehan to answer to a charge of bigamy. There are two women in that city claiming to call Roy "husband," and the police hear that a third claimant may be forthcoming.

Commenting on the spectacle presented in the House of Representatives a few days ago by Mr. Douglas, of Virginia, Harper's Weekly says :—"Gentlemen who are 'high,' or 'slewed,' or 'slung,' or 'plainly and uproariously' drunk, are not fit persons to make laws for the United States, and the sober majority of representatives should remember that there is no grosser insult to the country than that a drunken man should be allowed to enter their hall." Whereon the St. Thomas Home Journal says :—"We wonder what the editor of Harper's would say if he casually dropped in at Ottawa some day, or if he saw with his own eyes what many citizens of St. Thomas saw on a certain occasion less than six months ago, when a prominent Canadian politician was seen to chase a bevy of waiting girls down into the hotel kitchen for a farewell kiss. Would he vote to make a legislator or a Prime Minister of such a man?"

The farmers of Lucknow, Ont., have resolved to establish a butter factory, similar to the one in the adjoining village of Teeswater. At a meeting held for this purpose, it was shown that a good factory could be established for about $1,000—that it takes twenty-two pounds of milk to make one pound of butter—that the farmer selling milk at 8c. per gallon receives exactly 18c. per pound for his butter, and is at no trouble or expense in either its manufacture or sale—that he receives cash for the product of his dairy monthly or quarterly. Arrangements are also nearly completed for the establishment of a creamery at St. Jacobs. The milk of four hundred cows is to be guaranteed and the farmers are promised 8c. a gallon for their milk. The product is to be shipped to England, where it is supposed extra high prices will be obtained.

The Shoddy Swindle.

Particulars of the Cloth Pedlar's Tricks

A few days since a young man named George Burns was arrested in London at the instance of Mr. Rayworth, of Napanee, on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences. The Napanee Beaver has this to say regarding the matter :—

"For some time past a party named Burns has been staying at the Campbell House, representing himself as an itinerant cloth merchant. But he has proved to be a swindler of the most arrant description. He has made daily raids into the surrounding country, principally North Fredericksburgh, where he has succeeded in securing several victims. He offered for sale large lots of cloth—tweeds, drapery, etc., representing, in some instances at least, that they were goods saved from the burning of St. John, N. B., and telling the farmers, to whom he offered them for sale, that they could get $100 worth of goods for $45—a long way below Montreal wholesale prices. The goods were not bad to look at, and seemed to be such decided bargains that he succeeded in disposing of several lots. The parties not feeling exactly sure that all was right, decided to get the advice of some honest and experienced dealer, whose judgment they could trust, and Mr. H. R. Spencer was selected by several. Among others, Mr. Thos. Anderson bought a lot at $45, but on examination by Mr. Spencer it proved to be the veriest shoddy, its wholesale worth, placed at the very outside figures being only $9.36. A similar lot, bought at the same price, proved to be worth only $20.79. Having the fullest confidence in Mr. Spencer's honesty and judgment, some of those parties went to Burns and made him take back his trash and disgorge his plunder; rather than face a suit in a court of law for obtaining money and notes by false representation. Finding things becoming too hot for him, Burns levanted, but was arrested in London." The charge was afterwards withdrawn.

NEW ARTILLERY BATTERY.—In consequence of the recommendations of Hon. Mr. Wood and Mr. Guthrie, M.P., the Minister of Militia has authorized the formation of a full field battery of artillery, consisting of seventy-four non-commissioned officers and men, from the students attending the Agricultural College, Guelph. The battery was gazetted on Saturday. There was a strong desire for this organization in the locality, and especially among the students, who will probably become a very efficient corps. In all probability the battery will be called the "Ontario."

A SPECIAL MEETING of the Women's Christian Temperance Club on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock. Business of importance. Full attendance requested. Mrs. A. M. Jackson, secretary. d1.

TERRIBLE COLLISION.—On Friday morning an oil train ran into a freight train on the Lehigh Valley Road, near Slatington, causing the explosion of the engine of the oil train. Several cars of oil were burned, together with the small iron bridge. A short time afterwards an oil tank exploded. Three men were fatally and ten severely burned. The wind carried the flames to the depot and wooden bridge, which were destroyed.

A TRIBUTE TO THE CANADIAN MILITIA.—Sir Garnet Wolseley, the well-known military authority, in his paper on England and the Eastern question, in the Contemporary Review, has this to say of Canada : "The loyal spirit of our Colonies has never been more healthy or sincere than now. I know Canada well, and I am only doing it justice when I say that in the event of war it would furnish us with a contingent of certainly 10,000 men drawn from its militia, who would soon equal our best regiments." Of this there can be no doubt, seeing the majority of the commanding officers have already proffered the services of their respective corps in case of war; the number named by Sir Garnet Wolseley, a military officer assures us, could be doubled.

MOUNT FOREST.—The Board of Public School Trustees contemplate adding steam heating apparatus to the central school, in this place, at a probable cost of about $900.—There is a strong probability that the vacancy created on Main street by the fire of last Friday morning may be filled up during the present season by the erection of two brick buildings. Messrs. McMullen and Scott, the owners of the property, have the matter under consideration.

DUFFERIN COUNTY.—The following resolution was carried at a late session of the Orangeville Town Council :—Moved by Mr. McKitrick, seconded by Mr. Eastman, that it is the intention of the Council to offer some special advantages to the county of Dufferin in the event of separation and organization, and that a special committee be appointed, consisting of the Mayor, Messrs. Green, McKeown, Carbert and Hewitt, to prepare some scheme and submit to the Council.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Fresh Hopes for the Maintenance of Peace.

A Better Feeling Prevailing Between the Powers.

April 6.

A London despatch says :—There seems to be some hope of the renewal of Congress negotiations, unless a collision is precipitated by the necessity of counteracting the military measures which Russia is pushing forward on both sides of the Danube. The position at Constantinople, both military and political, is regarded as so doubtful for England that a very slight modification of the situation might warrant a breach of neutrality. As long as Veyfek Pasha remains Turkish Premier, a Russo-Turkish alliance is believed to be out of the question.

The New York Herald's cable special states that England is hopelessly and steadily drifting into war. The peace feeling grows weaker in all the upper circles of society. The Court circles are undeniably warlike.

The Pall Mall Gazette says :—The movement with the object of preventing the Liberal party from trammelling the Government's foreign policy received the support of 130 Liberal members of Parliament, of whom nearly half were prepared to vote with the Government if the leaders proposed any amendment to the address to the Queen in answer to the proclamation calling out the reserves. About 70 members will probably vote for Sir Wilfrid Lawson's motion declaring the measure unwarranted.

An Athens despatch says :—It is rumored that England will occupy Crete.

It is expected in Berlin that the Czar will solicit the good offices of the Emperor William as mediator between himself and England.

A San Stefano special reports that a Russian cavalry division and a division of Cossacks have begun the homeward march by way of Ibraila. Three regiments of Cossacks, two batteries, and the Eleventh Corps have gone by way of Rustchuk.

It is stated that Russia has officially offered to quit the neighborhood of Constantinople if the British fleet withdraws.

Noticing the declaration that the British Government would back up its circular, but was willing to consider the views of Vienna statesmen, the Journal de St. Petersburg says :—Russia can tranquilly regard the waverings of a nervous policy, while herself maintaining her position unmoved.

Austria proposes the following compromise :—First, Russia to seek territorial compensation in Asia Minor. Second, to divide European Turkey into three parts, each part to be granted autonomy and administrative reforms; the northern section, Bulgaria, north of the Balkans, to be under the patronage of Russia; the western section, Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Albania, under the patronage of Austria; the southern section, including Thessaly, Epirus and Roumelia, under Greek autonomy and under the special patronage of England—all the European Powers to guarantee this autonomy. Third, the status quo ante bellum to be maintained on the question of the Straits and the Danube. It is thought that Lord Salisbury will accept this scheme, with the reservation of a neutral zone between the Russian and English frontiers in Asia under the guarantee of the Powers. Should the scheme meet with England's approval, Andrassy will endeavor to revive the Congress in consideration of unavoidable changes in the treaty concerning the Ottoman Empire. The San Stefano treaty is consequently in the background.

A Constantinople special says :—It is reported from good sources that the Khedive has announced that he will declare his independence should Turkey form an alliance against England.

Private Theatricals at Rideau Hall.

On Friday evening the curtain of the theatre at Rideau Hall rose on the last of those charming performances which have so frequently delighted the society of Ottawa during the residence of their Excellencies the Governor-General and the Countess of Dufferin in Ottawa. At the conclusion of the second piece the curtain fell, and when it rose again, in response to the prolonged applause of the spectators, Her Excellency spoke an epilogue with a power which held the whole audience spell bound. The ease and grace of gesture, and the perfect modulation of Her Excellency's voice, left nothing to be desired to give the greatest effect to the stately and beautiful lines. The following farewell lines, which closed the poem, written by Lord Dufferin, are interesting :—

If words could thank you for your generous aid,
These lips should bankrupt be to see you paid;
And, ah! believe as long as life endures,
The warm affections of my heart are yours.
And now, one last farewell—a few months more,
And we depart your loved Canadian shore;
Never again to hear your plaudits rise,
Nor watch the ready laughter in your eyes
Gleam out responsive to our authy's wit,
However poorly we interpret it;
Nor see with artist pride your tears o'erflow
In homage to our simulated woe.
Yet scenes like these can never wholly fade
Into Oblivion's melancholy shade;
And oft, at home, when Christmas fire-logs burn,
Our prison thoughts instinctively will turn
To this fair city with her crown of towers,
And all the joys of friends that once were ours.
And oft shall yearning fancy fill
This hall with guests, and conjure up at will
Each dear, familiar face, each kindly word
Of praise that e'er our player souls hath stirred,
Till' neath the melting spell of memory
Our love flows back towards you like a sea,
For, know, whatever way our fortunes turn,
Upon the altars of our hearts shall burn
Those votive fires no fuel need renew
Our prayers for blessings on your land and you.

CANADIAN CATTLE IN BRITAIN.—Several Canadian witnesses were examined on Saturday before the Lords Select Committee on the Duke of Richmond's Cattle Disease Bill. Sir John Rose occupied one hour and a quarter in placing before the Committee the Canadian claim for the admission of live cattle to the inland markets. Sir John also answered several questions. In the absence of the Marquis of Ripon, Earl Spencer supported the claims of Canada. Other witnesses examined were, Mr. John Dyke, Dominion Agent in Liverpool, and Mr. Williamson, cattle dealer, Brampton, Ont. The further hearing was adjourned until Tuesday. It is now probable the Government will accede to the demands of the opponents of the measure, and grant the unrestricted admission of Canadian cattle until such occasion arises as proves a disease existing among them, when they will be placed under restrictions equivalent to those enforced as to cattle arriving from continental ports.

Daily Mercury.

MONDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 6, 1878

THE speech of Mr. Bain, member for North Wentworth, on the question of protection to farmers, which he delivered on Friday night, is one of the best on the subject. He began speaking about half past eleven o'clock, and kept his feet until one, never halting for a word or waiting for an expression. Mr. Bain delighted the House with his perfect self command and his language, and the freshness and excellence of his points. He proved to a demonstration that the Tory "National Policy" was a broad farce, and judging by the policies enunciated by them in 1866, 1868 and 1871; that their again appealing to it was an act of hyprocrisy, intended to catch the votes of deceived farmers. His speech was well received.

With respect to the question of the legality of taxing the incomes of the Dominion service, for municipal purposes, the Court in Ontario has decided adversly to the municipality of Ottawa. The Judge before whom the appeal was heard appears to have decided the question on purely technical and constitutional grounds. He laid it down as a settled principle of law that the Provincial Legislatures cannot tax the salaries of Dominion officials, and consequently that they have no power to legislate to enable Municipal Councils to impose such taxes. He says that as public servants they are an essential part of the means and instruments by which the Government of the Dominion is carried on, that the question is not whether they will discharge their duties although burthened with municipal taxes, but whether a Provincial Legislature has power to impose a burthen upon any instruments by which the Dominion Government is carried on. A more extraordinary argument was probably never used by a judge to justify a decision; and it is probable that an appeal will be taken to the Privy Council.

WITH reference to the departure of Lord Dufferin, it may be stated it is well known that before Lord Carnarvon resigned his portfolio as Colonial Minister, he wrote to Lord Dufferin and offered him his choice of all the Governorships in his gift. His Lordship declined the offer, saying that it was his intention to spend some years at home, for the sake of his family. He also expressed his intention to take his seat again in the House of Lords, where he will do yeoman's service for Canada when required. In connection with this it is said he will spend another Canadian summer with us, and will pass a considerable portion of his time in fishing on the Saguenay and its tributaries and the sea side. While thus enjoying himself he will also be paying a compliment to the Province of Quebec, which he is desirous of doing before he leaves, and will reside at its capital.

THE St. Thomas Journal says:—We referred three or four weeks ago to a rumour that the Tories of West Elgin were taking steps to invite Dr. Charles Tupper to contest that constituency at the next general election. The "Great Stretcher" has been communicating with one or two of his friends on the subject, and two weeks ago a requisition was forwarded asking him to stand for the Riding. His reply is still under consideration at U. E. Club. We hope it will be favorable.

AT the Liberal Conservative Association meeting held at St Catharines on the 6th inst., J. C. Rykert was unanimously chosen to contest the county for the Commons. Charlie will make a candidate after Sir John A.'s heart.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Protection to Agriculturists.

OTTAWA, April 5.

The following is a more extended report of the principal speeches delivered on this subject on Friday night:

The adjourned debate on Mr. Brown's amendment to the motion to go into Committee of Supply was resumed.

Dr. Orton said it was his intention to move a more comprehensive motion than the one under consideration, but he gladly welcomed this motion as a step in the right direction. There was, he claimed, an earnest desire on the part of farmers that their interests, which had been so long neglected, should be protected against the unfair competition of the United States. Almost every other class had received encouragement from Parliament, and the farmers were now fairly aroused, and would not rest contented until their interests received proper recognition. He quoted figures to show that the fiscal policy of the Government had resulted in immense losses to the agricultural population, and argued that with an intelligent protective policy not only the farmers but other classes of the community would become prosperous and contented. He pointed out that Canadian exporters of cattle had to go to the Western States for their stock, and that it was necessary, therefore, if we desired to open up a profitable cattle trade with Europe, to take steps for the encouragement of stock-raising. This, he contended, would best be accomplished by giving farmers that protection which they were anxious to obtain, and to which they were justly entitled. Under the present condition of affairs each farmer lost $63 a year owing to the fiscal policy of the Government. There were 500,000 farmers in Canada, and consequently the aggregate annual loss amounted to $30,000,000. (Laughter.) In conclusion, he urged the Government to strike out an independent course, and give the agriculturists the protection they merited as the most important class of the community.

Mr. Smith (Peel) gave the member for Wellington credit for the best intentions, but remarked that it was strange that it was medical men and others who were not engaged in agricultural pursuits who were demanding what no farmer in the House had yet ventured to discuss at length—protection for agricultural products. It was rather remarkable that though there were thirty members in the House who were practical farmers, the member for Wellington, who was a doctor, and the member for West Hastings, (Mr. Brown), who was manufacturer, were those who chose to scuss the question with a view of protecting the farmers. Outside of the House the same thing was true, for they found the Dominion Board of Trade and the Manufacturers' Association, neither of which numbered farmers among their membership, solemnly demanding protection for the farmers and a reciprocity of tariffs. (Hear, hear,) Referring to a resolution moved by the latter body, he said that for the life of him he could not understand how it was that the Americans could come over here, pay an enormous duty, freight and all other expenses upon our wheat, take it to the States, and come back with the flour, as it was stated they did, and undersell our own millers. That was a question which he should like the hon. gentleman to explain. He would give a few statistics with a view of showing what would be the effect of raising the duty on the ordinary production of the farm. Last year there had been imported into Ontario from the United States, 179 horses, while we had exported to them 3,548, or twenty to one. (Hear, hear.) He would like to know to what extent the farmers of Ontario would be benefited by the imposition of a heavy duty on those 179 horses, or how it would have the effect of opening the American markets to us. Last year the people of Ontario had imported from the other side of the line 447 horned cattle, while they had exported to the United States 11,000 head—or in the proportion of twenty-six to one; while of sheep they had imported seven (hear, hear) and exported 159,500—or 2,500 to one. (Hear, hear.) There was another point to which he would refer for a moment. About ten months ago wheat had touched as high a price as $2 a bushel, while at present it was selling as low as $1 per bushel. Was the high price owing to the short crop on the other side of the water, or was the low price caused by the Americans flooding our market? Every one was well aware that the price here was not regulated by the introduction of American wheat, but by the state of the European market. (Hear, hear). The great bulk of our barley went to the United States, and notwithstanding that it was subject to a duty of 15 per cent., the price we received was 20 per cent. higher to-day than when we had reciprocity treaty. How, then, could the American duty have affected our market in the direction in which the hon. gentleman contended it had affected it? If American corn did come in large quantities it was used by our lumbermen, who had suffered as much as any class, and yet were not demanding protection; and if this corn were excluded it would be a serious hardship to those who found it so cheap and so necessary an article of consumption. There were about six and three-quarter millions of bushels of corn imported from the United States into Ontario last year, of which less than one million bushels were used for distilling purposes. Now, 100 pounds of corn could be bought in Ontario for 83 cents, while 100 pounds of oats cost 105 cents, 100 pounds of peas 112 cents, 100 pounds of barley 115 cents, and he would say that if our farmers were using so much corn, how reasonable it was that they should exchange their oats and other coarse grains for this corn when the cost of 100 pounds of the former was over a dollar as against 83 cents for an equal quantity of the latter. (Hear, hear). He referred next to dairy products, remarking with regard to butter that the duty was equal, so that he could as not see what there was to complain of in that respect. He quoted statistics relating to other articles of the farm and dairy, showing that they could not possibly be effected to the advantage of the farmer by an increase of the duty. The fact was that the farmers did not want protection. They were not asking for it, and they saw too clearly what its effect upon themselves would be even to consent to the support of such a policy. (Hear, hear.) Referring to the question of a duty on agricultural implements, he said that last year there had been imported in Ontario 29 reapers and mowers, at a

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

Acknowledge with feelings of pride the great courtesy extended to them by the ladies of Town and County on the OPENING of their MILLINERY SHOW ROOMS YESTERDAY. The immense concourse of ladies that thronged our establishment yesterday exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and the tone of admiration exhibited by the excellent taste of Town and Country ladies in praise of the exquisite taste displayed by the lady milliner artists of Paris, France, which we had on exhibition, is most flattering to our taste in bringing such excellent goods to Guelph.

We beg to say to the ladies of Guelph and its surroundings, that we have engaged this season as lady artist in millinery, Miss Smith, whose artistic skill in the profession is unsurpassed in any of the cities in the Dominion, and whose obliging manner wins for her the confidence and esteem of ladies of the highest rank and taste.

We confidently solicit the patronage of all who are in quest of the leading styles in millinery, which will be placed at exceedingly cheap prices this season in particular.

Ladies' Costumes and Silk Jackets

in large variety, and originality of Trimming, are now on exhibition at our establishment, and only require to be seen in order to command the highest praise

CHAPTER XXXI.

LIZZIE'S IMPRISONMENT IS BEGUN.

To this freshness of energy, this renewed strength, Lizzie awoke in the golden morning light. From the time that her head pressed the pillow till the moment of her awaking her sleep had been deep and dreamless, and at this late hour she was wooed back to consciousness by the prattle of her boy, whose rosy face was the first object her opening eyes beheld, as in gleeful laughter he sat by her side playing with the tassle of the curtain. Her limbs were, no doubt, sore with the two day's ride, but the unbroken slumber of some ten hours' duration had banished the weariness of the previous night and dispersed the mist from her brain, while the bright sunshine streaming in at the uncurtained windows seemed to make her situation less gloomy and desolate than it had appeared in the night darkness.

She lay for some minutes surveying the chamber in which she had passed the night. Its features were sufficiently striking and suggestive of long disuse. The window panes were encrusted with soot and dirt of years, which the stormy blasts of many winters and the showers of rain which through a succession of summers the wind had driven against them. Great old cobwebs as thick as curtains festooned all the corners both of windows and walls; a thick coating of accumulated dirt lay on the floor, on the chairs, on every level and and every sloping surface; the faded curtains of the bed were moth-eaten in a thousand places—everything spoke of a time long past, of a protracted period of non-habitation and neglect. Yet the furniture and appointments, decayed though they were, indicated that once the chamber had been the abode of people of rank and social importance. Their massive style and the materials of which they were composed were ample proof of this. In particular, the fact was proclaimed by a large cabinet of ancient workmanship which occupied one end of the room. Its doors and panels were inlaid with a variety of coloured woods in many curious devices—circles, angles, squares, and curves—evidently the work of foreign hands, patient ingenuity, and tasteful skill.

Some one must have been in the room before Lizzie awoke, for a newly-kindled fire burned in the grate, and fresh logs were piled on the hearth—a circumstance which seemed to intimate that she was not to be very cruelly used. Care had even been taken that the sleeping occupants of the bed should not be disturbed by smoke, for a portion of one of the windows had been opened to cause a current of air, and through this aperature the fresh, delicious mountain atmosphere came sweetly in.

To this window Lizzie was attracted as soon as she rose, that her anxious eyes might see the surroundings of her new habitation. It commanded an extensive view of the loch and the opposite mountain—a fair and attractive prospect for one whose heart was sufficiently undisturbed to appreciate it. But the most beautiful scene has a shadow of gloom over it to the eyes of a prisoner, and it was with a pained and wistful sadness that Lizzie looked across the blue water towards the clustering slopes, clothed in the first verdure of spring, and the distant peaks, on which the white clouds rested. Far away beyond these mountain summits was the home from which she had been torn—the peaceful glen which she had been so happy—her darling, from whom she had been so ruthlessly separated—and all that had made life bright and joyous. Poor Lizzie sighed as she gazed, and as she still gazed on a mist came over her eyes and the tears rose, which dimmed the expansive prospect and caused it to melt away into the darkness.

She wiped the tears away and turned to the examination of nearer objects. The window at which she sat was a considerable height from the ground, and afforded a position for a survey of one side of the island. It was of no great size, and no portion seemed to be under cultivation, except a space close to the building, which appeared to be kept as a garden, and in which even now the hunchback was at work digging with all diligence a piece of ground between two of the walks. This garden, like the chan ber we have described, had once been a place of beauty and kept with care. It had the trace of numerous winding walks, now grass grown, and with their box edgings tall and ragged. Yews once trimmed but now allowed to grow at will, stood darkly up in various places, and the unpruned fruit trees grew in straggling confusion.

Outside the garden there was only native wildness, which had never been subdued. Knolls of heather, furze, and low-growing bushes, mixed with clumps of trees and open spaces of green pasture, constituted the features of the landscape to the edge of the loch, and there the water rippled and sparkled in the sunshine—a thing of eternal beauty and delight.

There was a charm in the wild freshness of the scene which in happier circumstances Lizzie would have fully felt. As it was, she was gazing upon it with interest as a something with which she was destined to become familiar and enduringly acquainted, when suddenly Alfred, who was prattling on her knee, became strangely still, and hid his face in his mother's bosom.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

The steamer Quebec arrived at Goderich on Sunday morning on her first trip this season to Lake Superior. After taking on board a large quantity of freight and about thirty passengers, she left for Kincardine. Most of the passengers are bound for Manitoba.

New Zealand is not to be represented at the Paris Exposition because she cannot afford the outlay. She is preparing to borrow £5,000,000 more. These British colonies in the Pacific have mostly heavy debts, heavy certainly, when it is remembered that there are but 2,500,000 people in all Australasia.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

cost of $3,195, or, in other words, such a trifle as would not be noticed in the great number of those articles required every year. What would be the benefit to the manufacturer or to the farmer of increasing the duty for the sake of 29 of these machines? (Hear, hear.) He concluded by repeating that the farmers did not desire protection, and resumed his seat amid loud cheers.

Mr. Greenway could not see how the farmers of Canada could be benefitted by this amendment. When the question of protection was first introduced in Canada it was the protection of manufactured goods that was clamoured for, but the subject was now extending. If protection increased the prices of agricultural products, were the people of the United States, who had a dear market in which to sell their agricultural products, going to come to Canada, where the prices were low? (Hear, hear.) This matter would not bear a real scrutiny for a moment. He contended that the effect of protection was merely to increase to the farmers of the country the cost of certain goods which they were obliged to buy, and to prevent their buying them in a cheap market. According to the showing of hon. gentlemen themselves who favored this policy, the object was that the poor man's necessaries of life might be increased in price just 25 per cent. (Hear, hear.) And the primary principle of that policy was to make this country a dear one instead of a cheap one to live in. What protection was offered to the poor man? If the resolution meant anything it meant to make the poor man pay a higher price for the necessaries of life without conferring upon him any corresponding advantages. It was a mistaken idea to suppose that the farmers of this country wanted protection. (Hear, hear.) They wanted nothing of the kind, they were asking for nothing of the kind, and he believed one of the greatest mistakes made by any party in this country was made by the party which was now taking up the protection cry. The Government was deserving of the thanks of the farmers of Canada for withstanding the pressure brought upon them to induce them to protect certain articles, and he was satisfied that for doing so they would be sustained by the country by a sweeping majority. (Cheers.)

Mr. Oliver said the import duties imposed in England in 1843 were—on manufactured metals, 15 per cent.; on leather, 15 per cent.; on cotton manufactured goods, 10 per cent.; on woollen goods, 15 per cent.; on linen goods, 15 per cent.; and on earthenware, 10 per cent. These were the protective duties under which it was said that the manufacturers of England were able to compete with the world. (Hear, hear.) And yet hon. gentlemen objected to the duty of 17½ per cent. on the same articles in Canada. He was glad that the House had a motion before it which it could understand, and a motion which he had no doubt would be voted down. As the people of the United States were just about to change their tariff, it would be utter folly for us now to tamper with ours. There was a time when we had full control of the navigation of our rivers and canals, and when a motion of this kind might have done some good, but since it was impossible for us to force the Americans to give us reciprocity it was useless. He opposed this amendment also because it would injure the millers of this country by depriving them of the employment they at present possessed of grinding the American wheat, which passed through Canada to England. No matter how much wheat we imported for re-exportation to England, it would not affect the price of wheat in Canada. This was the first instalment of a general protection measure; it was a deliberate attempt to delude the farmers of this country. (Hear, hear.) The protectionists were endeavoring to induce the farmers to favor their views, because they knew that until they did that it would be impossible to establish a protective system in Canada. He opposed this policy also because it would be a breaking of faith with the Provinces which came into the Union with us, by raising the duties which the people of those Provinces expected to be reduced. He proceeded to deal with the balance of trade argument, pointing to the example of England as a wealthy and prosperous commercial country, which yet had the balance of trade against her to the extent of £100,000,000 sterling. If the theory advanced by honorable gentlemen opposite was correct, the rich and flourishing Australian colonies were bankrupt today for the balance of trade was against them. He quoted statistics showing that the amount of live stock imported into the older Provinces was very small in comparison with that imported into British Columbia and Manitoba, and said that while hon. gentlemen opposite professed to desire the settlement and development of these newer Provinces, yet they wished that the people there should pay 10 per cent. more for their horses and horned cattle than they did now. Surely that would not tend to the prosperity and progress of the newer parts of the Dominion. The effect of imposing a duty, say upon American barley, would simply be that the price of American barley would be reduced, while the price of the Canadian article would not be affected. He knew the feelings of the farmers on this subject, and he knew that they saw through the fallacies of the so-called "national" policy. (Hear, hear.) He knew at least a dozen Conservatives in his own district who had told him and his friends that they would support him in consequence of the policy announced by the Conservative leaders. (Hear, hear.) With regard to protection to manufactures, he contended that any manufacturing establishment which could not live and prosper on the present tariff was one which was not conducted on sound commercial principles and was hardly worth maintaining. At all events he was one who would not consent to protect the manufacturers at the expense of the farmers. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

Mr. Bain said this discussion had been extended more than was justified by the terms of the motion. The question of agricultural protection was no new one. Last session it was the sheet-anchor of the great Conservative party—(hear, hear)—and this debate was a sort of rehash of what took place then. It was hardly fair for hon. gentlemen to consider one year only in their calculations. He proposed to take the last five years, during which we imported from the United States 38,521,000 bushels of wheat, or an annual average of 7,704,000 bushels, and exported 47,430,000 bushels, or an annual average of 9,486,000 bushels, showing an excess of exports over imports of 1,781,713 bushels per annum. Under these circumstances what advantage protection to wheat would be he could not see. He was quite free to admit that in the exceptional year 1876, when in consequence of a bad harvest our imports of wheat exceeded our exports, a protective duty upon that article would have been beneficial to the farmers, but as a representative of a farming constituency he was prepared to oppose any such advantage to them which had to be obtained only at the cost of the other classes in the country. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the question of malt, he showed by quotations of figures that notwithstanding the duty upon that article the consumption of it had annually increased in the country. Our exportation of barley was of much greater importance to us than our importation, they having been for several years past in the ratio of seven to one. Every American consumer not only had to pay the increased duty imposed upon barley imported from Canada, but a correspondingly increased price for every bushel of American barley. The consumer always had to pay the cost of protection. He showed by copious quotations of figures that of corn, oats, peas, and barley were exported during the past five years, over and above what we imported of corn and cornmeal, not less than seven million bushels per annum, paying an average price of 55 cents a bushel for what we imported, and obtaining 65 cents a bushel for what we exported. While, therefore, the imposition of duties on these articles would not benefit the farmer, it would have the effect of depriving our sailors and other carriers of a profitable employment. The only persons who could possibly be benefited by a duty on corn were a few farmers in Western Ontario whose farms were near the American border. He quotted from the speeches of the leaders of the present protection movement, showing that in 1866 they did not regard the protection of agricultural products or of such benefit as they did now. His view, after considering the protective system of the United States, was that the farmers of that country had to pay an unnaturally high price for what they consumed owing to the high tariff on all classes of goods, while the price of what they sold was not affected by local considerations, but depended, as did the prices paid in other countries, upon the European market. He contended that if the reduction of our freights from the west to the east, from Winnipeg to Montreal, was as great within the next five years as it had been for the last few years, the American market would be very little use to us. He concluded by remarking that the intense interest which the Opposition now took in their welfare was too late in the day, when the House remembered that when these hon. gentlemen were in power they took a course entirely opposite to the one they were now pursuing. Their present action was dictated, he was convinced, rather by a desire to protect the Conservative politicians than the Canadian farmers. (Loud cheers.)

The Reserves.

The following explanation gives a clear idea of the English reserves:—At present "short service" consists of six years in the army and six in the reserve for infantry, and eight years in the army and four in the reserve for other branches of the service requiring more technical instruction. On the completion of twelve years' service, good conduct men are allowed to enlist for a further period of of nine years, at the expiration of which they are entitled to a pension on discharge. Those men who are passed into the reserve at the expiration of six or eight years' service are liable to be recalled into the ranks in case of war, and to be called out for eight days' training in every year during the term of twelve years from the date of their enlistment. They otherwise resume their positions as citizens, and are free to follow their callings. The reserves are divided into two classes—the "first-class army reserve," which consists of men who have served for not less than three years with the colours, and who have been passed into the reserve to complete the unexpired portion of their engagement; and the "second class army reserve," consisting of those who have completed the period of their engagement, and who enroll themselves for a further period of five years' service in the reserve. The men of the first-class receive 4d. sterling a day as pay, and an allowance of £1 sterling for necessaries in each year. When recalled into service they are paid in the same manner as the men of the corps to which they are drafted, resuming their position in all respects as soldiers of the regular army. Men of the second class receive no daily pay except when called out for service, and are only liable for duty within the United Kingdom.

Suicides.—A printer named Charlton Lose, twenty-three years of age, swallowed two ounces of laudanum at his boarding-house, Richmond street east, Toronto and died two hours afterwards. He was employed at the Globe office, but had not been working for a week or so, having suffered from an attack of "melancholia," to which he was subject. His parents live in Lindsay.—A young man named Geo. Corry, aged 19, grandson of J. C. Lamb, Esq., ex-Collector of Customs for St. Catherines port, was found on Saturday morning suspended by the neck in one of the outbuildings at Mr. Lamb's residence in that city.

Sharp competition is the order of the day, among the first-class hotels in New York. With one or two exceptions, they are trying to keep their old trade while adhering to their previous high rates. The Grand Central has reaped much benefit from this, by quietly "cutting" the rates from one to two dollars per day. eod

Be Careful.—Credit is not as cheap as it was a year or two ago. The costly experiences which merchants have had of late have taught them greater caution and more prudence in granting credits. This caution and prudence has extended to the retail merchants as well as to the jobbers, and there are more of them to-day selling for cash or on very limited time than we have ever before known. This is right. The times require it. We are not yet out of the woods. We are working that way, but we must, from present appearances, expect to have a moderate business year. Close and economical conduct of business is what is best now. No unnecessary stock should be carried and no bad debts made. In this way we may all work along and help to make better times.—Grocer.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

SITUATION UNCHANGED.

Gortschakoff's Reply Looked For.

STOCK MARKET EASIER.

LONDON, April 4.—Reports of Anglo-Russian compromise are at least premature, and regarded here as without the slightest foundation.

The situation remains unchanged, although public feeling has somewhat settled down, and the excitement is less demonstrative. Preparations for war, however, continue unabated, the Government evincing a disposition to be prepared for emergencies now likely to arise at any moment.

It is stated the reply of Gortschakoff to Salisbury's circular will, undoubtedly, be very decided in tone against submitting to the demands of England. It is not expected before the beginning of next week, and it is looked for with great interest.

LONDON, April 4.—The feeling on the Stock Exchange is better to-day, in consequence consuls advanced from nine and nine-sixteenths to nine and three-sixteenths.

National League.

Branch Association Formed in Guelph.

On Wednesday evening a meeting of ratepayers was held in the ware rooms of Messrs. W. Bell's & Co's organ factory, for the purpose of organizing a Branch Association of the Dominion National League. There were about fifty present.

On motion of Mr. Wm. Bell and Mr. Wilkie, Mr. Chas. Pettiford was appointed chairman. Mr. A. Riddell was appointed secretary.

After some remarks from the chairman, and explanations from Mr. Wilkie, the latter read the resolutions adopted by the National League.

Mr. Wright, by request, addressed the meeting on the benefits and workings of the League, and on the principles of the National Policy.

The following resolutions were carried unanimously:

Moved by Mr. E. H. Maddock, seconded by Mr. Wm. Bell, That the time has come when it is necessary to form a Dominion National League, the object of which shall be to promote by all lawful means the adoption of a National Policy for Canada as respects all her material interests—agricultural, mining, manufacturing, maritime and commercial.

Moved by Mr. A. Riddell, seconded by Mr. J. Higham, That such a League will find ample vindication and reasons for its existence on the ground, not of attack on the interests of any other people, but of defence of our own; in fact, upon the broad ground of self-preservation—the first law of nature.

Moved by Mr. W. Bell, seconded by Mr. J. H. Dietz, that we now form ourselves into a Branch of the National League. Carried.

On motion of Messrs. Wilkie and Leadley, the constitution forwarded by the National League was adopted as the constitution of the Branch League.

On motion of Messrs. Wilkie and J. Higham, Mr. Wm. Bell was appointed permanent treasurer.

On motion of Messrs. Bell and Thomas Goldie, Mr. Archibald Riddell was appointed secretary.

The election of other officers were deferred to a further meeting.

CONCERT THIS EVENING.—There is every prospect that there will be a very large attendance at the concert to be given in the town hall this evening under the auspices of the Norfolk and Dublin street Churches. Many tickets have already been disposed of. Knowing that Mr. Philp has the management and that besides other talented singers Mrs. Caldwell, of Hamilton, will be present, the success of the concert is ensured. Concert to commence at eight o'clock.

KNOX COLLEGE.—The following names appear among those taking scholarships, at the closing exercises of 1877-78 in Knox College:—Second year—systematic theology, Loghrin scholarship, $50, D. M. Beattie, B.A., of Puslinch. Third year—General proficiency, Hamilton Church Scholarship, $60, John Wilkie, M.A., of Guelph; church government, Boyd Scholarship, $40, Alex. Leslie, M.A., of Elora; Prince of Wales's prize, $60, F. R. Beattie, M.A., of Puslinch. Graduating class—F. R. Beattie, J. Wilkie, J. Johnston, (Paisley Block), A. Leslie, D. Ross, (Fergus). Honor list—Systematic theology for second year—D. M. Beattie; third year, F. R. Beattie and J. Wilkie. Bible history, third, A. T. Coulter and J. Wilkie; senior exegetics, A. T. Colter and F. R. Beattie. Church government, third year, A. Leslie.

DRUNK.—A young man who gave his name as James Stephens was charged before the Police Magistrate with being drunk on Thursday night. The youth evidently not wishing to disgrace his relatives or friends by his downfall gave the above name instead of that which was his by inheritance. It is not the desire of the MERCURY to add further humiliation, and therefore for the present the word "Stephens" will answer all purposes. The stripling, however, should take warning. He has already been before the Court twice—once in connection with a case in which some females of reputation played in the role of defendants, and now he appears as a common "drunk." The few words of caution and advice which were addressed to "Stephen" by the Police Magistrate should be heeded by, him and a new leaf turned over ere it is too late.

Local News.

THE hotel keepers will now be very anxious until the licenses are granted.

ADJOURNED MEETING of Christian Temperance Club this evening.

MODERATE to fresh, easterly to northerly winds, clear to fair warm weather, are the weather probabilities received this morning.

A FINE lamb, a little over two months old, has been sold by Walter West to Geo. Puddy, butcher, receiving therefor the high price of $5.

MESSRS. Walter West and Thomas McCardy purchased two car loads of cattle at the Guelph April Fair, and have shipped them to St. Catharines.

THE friends of Mr. Frank Coffee will entertain him at a supper at the Albion Hotel this evening, previous to his departure for Australia. There is to be a presentation.

WRITS for $500 damages have been served upon a number of hotel-keepers in town for allowing a certain party to procure liquor after they had been notified that they should not do so.

THE Guelph Christian Temperance Club did not hold the meeting advertised for last evening, but postponed it until this evening. It will be held in the Dunkin Act Committee rooms, in the Bank of Commerce block.

FOR KINGSTON.—Gunners Bond and Gauhan, of the Wellington Field Battery, purpose taking a course at the Kingston School of Gunnery. The instruction they will receive there will be such as to still further benefit the Battery to which they belong in point of efficiency.

THE highest price paid for cattle on the Guelph market on Wednesday, was by Messrs. O'Keefe & Co., of St. John's, N. B., to Mr. Wm. Farr, of Guelph Township, for a yoke of oxen. $6 per cwt. is the figure. The cattle were fed by Mr. McKinnon, of Erin, and weighed 5,000 lbs.

THE Ontario Gazette of the 30th ult. contains the proclamation dividing the town into six wards: St. Patrick's, St. George's, St. John's, St. James', St. Andrew's, St. David's, and the same will take effect on the 1st of January, 1879. This is the final proceeding in regard to re-dividing the town into Wards.

THE sidewalk on Paisley street hill is fast becoming strewn over with sand and stones, in consequence of school children seeing how near to the fence they can walk without falling down. Every slip of the foot sends a quantity of earth down to the boards, and makes it uncomfortable for pedestrians.

THE Stratford Herald says:—"The Guelph Herald is fretting about Sir A. T. Galt again. Give the old man a rest, boys. If he wants to become a Grit let him. That won't spoil the memory of his illustrious parent, or take the ginger-bread off the rest of the family." Comment on such unkindness must not be thought of.

A TELEGRAM has been received from the Buffalo authorities making enquiries about W. B. Halstead, who was arrested on suspicion in that city on Wednesday for having in his possession a stock of meerschaum pipes and cigar holders. An answer was sent back stating that he was dealing in such articles, and carrying on business in Guelph. This it is thought will set the matter right.

TROUT FISHING.—Every spring it is the custom of certain ausportsmanlike fishermen to visit the trout springs in the neighborhood and clean them out, often doing this before the season legally opens. It would be well for the people generally, and the Fish and Game Society in particular, to look sharp after these pot-fishers. The season for trout fishing does not open till the 1st of May.

A HONOR.—Some time ago the New York Tribune published a set of six mathematical problems, and offered prizes for the best solutions, the competition being confined to those under twenty-five years of age. The list of successful competitors is now before, and we find fourth in that list the name of "F. W. Galbraith, Guelph, Ontario. This speaks highly of the cleverness of Master Galbraith, and reflects credit on the school he is attending.

A TIMELY RESCUE.—Alfred and Emily Mimmack, aged twelve and sixteen years respectively, children of Mr. Joseph Mimmack, had a narrow escape from drowning on Wednesday evening, while boating on Allan's dam. The young lad is quite expert in handling a boat or canoe, and on the evening in question he purposed giving his sister the benefit of a ride in a canoe. After getting in the craft he strapped his feet to the bottom of the canoe and his sister took a position in the opposite end. They had only proceeded a very short distance from the shore when they upset in about five feet of water. The boy succeeded in getting one foot out of the strap, but could not release the other, and on the canoe upsetting, he was held underneath it, while his sister was beyond her depth in the water, and unable to reach the shore. Fortunately Arthur W. Murton observed the accident, and he at once waded into the river and rescued both the children. His elongated limbs proving a decided benefit to him, and particularly to the children, in this case. The young man Murton is certainly deserving of credit in acting promptly in the matter. When rescued the children were little the worse for the mishap.

WELLINGTON FIELD BATTERY.

Presentation of the Governor-General's Medal to Capt. McCrae.

On Wednesday night the Wellington Field Battery were mustered in the Drill Shed to witness the presentation to Capt. David McCrae of the handsome bronze medal given by the Governor-General, and won by him and the other marksmen of the Battery against all competitors in the Dominion. There was a good turn-out of the men, who looked remarkably well in their handsome uniform. There was a large crowd of people, who took quite an interest in the proceedings. The Guelph Rifle Company was present and kept the floor clear for the Battery while going through their drill.

At eight o'clock the Battery were drawn up in line and received Lieut.-Col. Taylor, D. A. G., and Major Gray, of the Toronto Field Battery. They were then put through gun drill by Major Macdonald, Capt. McCrae and Capt. Nicol. The different movements were gone through with a precision and correctness that showed the men were thoroughly up in their drill, and both officers and men deserve the greatest credit for the thorough discipline and training evidenced. The spectators were highly pleased, and manifested the same by hearty applause at the close. After drilling for about an hour, the Battery was drawn up. Col. Taylor then came forward and said he had great pleasure in presenting to Capt. McCrae the medal given by Lord Dufferin, and won by him after a close competition. He congratulated the Battery on their excellent shooting, which from the fact that they had won the medal was the best in the Dominion. He could also say with pride that the Battery is one of the best and most efficient in Canada, as had been stated by the Inspecting Officer of Artillery. (Cheers.) They ought to be proud of this and of their high state of discipline and good behaviour. He referred with pleasure to the proposed organization of a division of the Battery at the Agricultural College. He felt sure the young men there would do credit to the Battery, and that the discipline and drill would be of great benefit to them.

Col. Taylor then presented the medal to Capt. McCrae. It is a very handsome one. On one side are the profiles of Lord and Lady Dufferin, with the words encircling: "Earl of Dufferin, K.P., K.C.B., C.C.M.G., Governor-General of Canada. Countess Dufferin, 1878." On the obverse side are the Dufferin arms, and the words: "Presented by His Excellency the Governor-General." Round the rim are the words: "Capt. David McCrae, Wellington Field Battery, 1877."

Accompanying the medal was the following document:—

"The Secretary to the Governor-General of Canada presents his compliments to Captain David McCrae, and in transmitting to him the accompanying medal, is desired by Lord Dufferin to convey to him an expression of His Excellency's sincere congratulations on the success that has attended his efforts in the recent competition.'

"Government House, Ottawa,
Jan. 29th, 1878."

Col. Taylor also presented the Dominion Artillery Association's silver badge to Capt. McCrae, and badges to Capt. Nicol, Gunner Cameron, Sergt. McNaughton, and Sergt. Murchison. This closed the proceedings, and the Battery were dismissed.

On the invitation of the officers, the marksmen of the Battery and other guests adjourned to Anderson's restaurant, where they partook of an excellent supper. Major Macdonald occupied the chair, and Capt. McCrae the vice-chair. Among the company were Lieut.-Col. Taylor, Major Gray, Major Armstrong, Captains Bruce, Swinford, and Spiers, Lieutenant Crowe of the Rifles, Rev. W. S. Ball, Chaplain 30th Battalion; Judge Chadwick, Mr. Massie, M.P.P.; Mayor Howard, Mr. Johnston, President Agricultural College; Mr. Bryce, Lecturer on Chemistry at same; Mr. Grange, Veterinary Surgeon to the Battery; Messrs. Thomas McCrae, Peterson, Reynolds, Innes, &c.

On the cloth being removed the chairman gave the Queen and the Governor-General, which were duly honored. The Dominion and Local Legislatures came next, and were responded to by Mr. Massie. Major Macdonald, in proposing Capt. McCrae's health, paid him and the marksmen of the Battery a high compliment for their excellent shooting. In the competition last year they made 19 points over all competitors. Capt. McCrae in the course of an excellent speech in reply, thanked the company for the honor done him. Much of the credit for their success was due to Major Macdonald, who was indefatigable in his efforts to perfect them in their drill. He spoke of the duties and responsibilities of volunteers, and referred with pride to the fact that Major Gray was the first to offer his services to raise that one or more batteries in Canada for service in Europe if Britain should go to war. If called on in case of war he was sure Canada would do her duty, and show her willingness to fight for the old mother land against all her foes. Capt. Nicol also briefly responded. Capt. McCrae gave the toast of the County Council and Town Council, and in doing so spoke of the encouragement these bodies had always given the volunteers and their liberality to them.

Mr. Reynolds replied for the former and Mayor Howard for the latter. The chairman next gave Major Gray, who made a suitable response. The 30th Battalion was the next toast which elicited speeches from Major Armstrong, Capts. Swinford and Spiers, and an eloquent reply from Rev. Mr. Ball. The Press followed, Mr. Innes responding. Mr. Ball proposed the health of Col. Taylor, and highly complimented that efficient officer. The Colonel made an appropriate reply. Mr. Peterson gave the Agricultural College, which called forth replies from Messrs. Johnston, Bryce and Grange. In response to the toast of the other guests, Mr. Thos. McCrae and Capt. Bruce replied. The toast of the ladies followed, and the singing of "God Save the Queen" brought the pleasant proceedings to a close. During the evening Capt. Speirs and Lieut. Crowe favoured the company with some excellent songs.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

STILL PREPARING FOR WAR

ROUMANIAN HOSTILITY TO RUSSIA

Austria and England United in their Views.

Anti-War Deputation to Wait on the British Government.

Germany of the Opinion that the Treaty of Paris is the Law of Europe.

Russia and Lord Salisbury's Note

LONDON, April 4.

Vienna papers, commenting on Lord Salisbury's circular, express the conviction that only by the deference of Russia to Lord Salisbury's views can war between England and Russia be avoided.

A Constantinople despatch says the Russians are occupying the heights of Buyukhere.

The Pall Mall Gazette prints a Berlin special saying that the Russian reply to Lord Salisbury's note is being prepared. Gortschakoff is said to be anxious to issue it as soon as possible, to remove any unfavourable impression produced by the English circular. The Russian newspapers complain of the increasing hostilities of the Roumanians. The latter are said to be hindering the passage of Russian provision columns through their territory, and to have threatened to forbid altogether.

The Times says the main fact in the present posture of affairs is that Austria and England are at one in their view of the Treaty of San Stefano. The public opinion of Europe is with them, and if they act together Russia may withdraw from her position, which would then be obviously untenable.

A Salonica despatch says:—The English consul is engaging interpreters knowing the Greek, Turkish, and English languages, at a salary of $150 per month.

A deputation of the National Liberal Federation to protest against the warlike attitude of the Government were met today by Lords Granville and Hartington. The deputation numbered 500. John Bright introduced the deputation. Lord Granville said while he opposed war it would be deceiving themselves and Russia to conclude that the Opposition could prevent the Government from going to war if the Government was bent on a warlike policy. The Marquis of Hartington said the present duty of the Opposition was to interpose by every means in its power obstacles to any rash and ill-considered action of the Government the result of which might be war.

A Rome despatch says:—The Fanfulla believes the English Ambassador is actively urging the Italian Government to assume an attitude favourable to England.

The Standard announces as proof that there if no intention of complying with the reported demand for the withdrawal of the British fleet from the Sea of Marmora, that the ironclad ram Rupert and the ironclad turret ship Devastation have been ordered to join the squadron there to replace the Sultan, which will return to England to refit.

A special to the Vienna Fremdenblatt from Berlin, and a despatch from St. Petersburg to the Times, state there are some grounds for expecting a renewal of the Congress negotiations on the basis of a proposal by Bismarck that the Powers be invited to meet to revise the treaties of 1856 and 1871. Such an overture from Germany would spare Russian susceptibility, and the Congress, instead of examining the successive articles of the Treaty of San Stefano, might take the clauses of the Paris instrument as the starting point of the discussion, and determine how much thereof may have become obsolete by events, and what should be put in its place. No authentic information of such a proposal has yet been made from any side, however, and the Agence Russe yesterday, after stating that Ignatieff's mission has not failed, said Russia cannot do more to facilitate the meeting of a Congress, and her means of persuasion cease at the point where care for her dignity commence. It is improbable Russia will take any step, or come to any decision, until Ignatieff has reported. Stories that the Russians have commenced a fresh movement towards Gallipoli, and of a demand for the abandonment to the Russians of a number of Turkish positions, are highly improbable. There is said to be in Constantinople a regular manufactory of these irritating statements to provoke England and Austria against Russia.

The Berlin Post publishes an article believed to be inspired adopting Lord Salisbury's criticism of the San Stefano Treaty. It says:—England will hardly remain alone in the opinion that the Treaty of Paris, until amended, is the law of Europe. Russia therefore has no choice between war or parting with the Treaty of San Stefano, as she would have to do if she entered the Congress.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Russians have occupied parts of Macedonia included in New Bulgaria. The Russian military authorities and transport officials to-day held a council upon measures for the ultimate evacuation of Turkey.

The Agence Russe says:—If Lord Salisbury's Note is to decline a Congress, its end is attained. But if it is intended to open discussion, a discussion by written communications may last a year, particularly as the Note contains criticisms but no proposals.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs:—As the text of Lord Salisbury's circular is not yet received, Russia has not decided upon her answer, but there is reason to believe that she will not regard the circular as having anything of the nature of an ultimatum, as the British Government confines itself purely to negative criticism. It may possibly be asked to suggest some solution of its own. It is argued that if the British Cabinet really desires to avoid war some pacific solution may still be found. The public regard the circular, however, as no proof that England has decided upon war, while in the official world it is said although the circular is not pleasant reading for those who desire peace, it has the advantage of intelligibility.

A Berlin special says:—We learn from St. Petersburg that the direction of foreign affairs has practically passed into the hands of Ignatieff. Russia continues to purchase large quantities of war material in Germany. Lord Salisbury's Note has put an end to the plan for the revival of the Congress scheme which Russia momentarily considered.

Official returns show last week that the Russians had 53,000 sick in Europe alone.

A Vienna special from Berlin says:—Russia's answer will contest Lord Salisbury's despatch point by point, and declare that the aim of England's policy is plain.

The report that Count von Buest, Austrian Ambassador, had left London for Vienna, is untrue.

A Vienna correspondent hears from an official source that the Premier of the Hungarian Ministry has informed the Emperor and Andrassy that he could not answer for the consequences in Hungary if Austria took a decision hostile to or independent of England.

The Political Correspondence, reviewing Lord Salisbury's circular, considers that in the last resort the attitude of Austria and England will take measures for the protection of her interests, which, however, would be by no means necessary to cause war.

A Vieann correspondent says:—Even the unanimous approval of the Austrian papers of Lord Salisbury's circular is but a faint reflex of its effect on public opinion.

A Vienna correspondent hears that Andrassy, recognising the difficulty of assembling a Congress, is prepared for common action with England. The consequences of Ignatieff's report at St. Petersburg on the result of his mission, however, yet remain to be seen.

An Athens special says:—The circular has aroused enthusiasm there.

A Bucharest special reports that two Russian army corps in Bulgaria have been ordered to return to Roumania and take up positions between Giurgevo and Bucharest. It is feared the Russians will impose a state of siege through Roumania. At a secret sitting of the Chambers MM. Ghika and Sturdz reported the result of their recent missions to London and Vienna respectively. The former said the English Cabinet had encouraged Roumania to hold out in regard to Bessarabia. The latter said Austria laid strets upon the necessity of the Bessarabian question being settled by the decision of Europe.

A Belgrade despatch says:—A portion of the Servian army is advancing from Negotin to garrison Widdin, which the Russians are evacuating. It is stated that the Servians will also occupy Belgradjik, and probably a line from here to Plevina.

A Bucharest special says:—Despite the strong popular feeling against the cession of Bessarabia to Russia many doubt whether the Roumanian Cabinet oppose it.

A Belgrade despatch says:—The Cabinet Council has resolved that Servian troops shall occupy Belgradjik and Bulgaria as far as Plevna, in accordance with Russian commands, but only withdraw after a definitive settlement of the Eastern Question. Prince Milan has declared that Servia would co-operate with Russia until Turkey was completely dismembered, Servia's policy being the formation of a kingdom comprising her present and former territory.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 3.

Mr. Ross introduced a Bill further to amend the general Act respecting railways with the object of providing for connection with main lines of railway and railway elevators and wharves, and the extension of sidings, etc.

Mr. Laflamme introduced a Bill to amend the Supreme Court Act so as to secure four terms in the year, and restrict the right of appeal as regards the Lower Provinces, from which cases involving $5, could be sent to this Court. The lowest amount for them would be $500, the Ontario limit downwards being $200 as at present.

Mr. Bunster moved for an address to Her Majesty, praying the re-appointment of Earl Dufferin as Governor-General for another term. Mr. Mackenzie said he fully appreciated the motives of the mover, but he hoped he would withdraw the motion as he intended next Monday or Tuesday proposing a motion expressive, he thought, of the feelings of the House with reference to His Excellency's approaching departure. The motion was withdrawn.

A discussion took place on a motion of Mr. Jones (Leeds) for a return of all rebate of duties upon goods imported from the United States during the past few years. Several of the Opposition members avered that certain classes of goods were undervalued to such an extent as to amount a very large reduction of the duties. The Finance Minister said he believed that the enormous shrinkage in values which had recently taken place would account for a good deal of the supposed undervaluation. Several members testified to the great improvement which had taken place under the present Ministry in regard to the evil complained of, contending that it was constantly decreasing. The motion was carried.

A discussion took place upon Mr. Trow's Bill to render life assurance policies non-forfeitable; but as it did not meet with much favor, he consented to withdraw the Bill.

WHITEFISH.—At Sandwich during the past season some 46,000,000 whitefish have been hatched out. These are to be distributed at Humber Bay, Toronto, and Burlington Bay, Hamilton. The first instalment of 2,000,000 was put in Burlington Bay last Friday evening. Mr. Kerr, the Fishery Inspector, leaves to-morrow for Toronto to meet Mr. James Nevin, of the breeding establishment Sandwich, when 2,000,000 will be placed in Humber Bay. This stocking of the waters of Lake Ontario will continue in alternate trips till the whole 46,000,000 are disposed of.

Dr. Wild is endeavoring to establish a hereditary relationship between Queen Victoria and King David. It seems that there used to be a lively trade between the people of Dan, who "abode in ships," and the Britons, and that the prophet Jeremiah once visited Britain, having in his charge a princess of the house of David, who married an Irish king. The genealogy of the fruits of this royal alliance is somewhat obscure, as Dr. Wild admits; nevertheless he has an inner consciousness that if the Queen's pedigree could be properly traced, it would connect her with this emigrant princess of old, and through her with King David himself. It is a Wild theory.

Representations have been made to the Sheriff that the prisoner Baker, of London, convicted of an outrage on Miss Penny, and sentenced to forty lashes in two instalments, is unfit to endure the punishment in consequence of lung disease. A large number of applications have been received by the Sheriff from persons willing to do the whipping.

THURSDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 4, 1878

The Eastern Question.

There is very little chance to note in the negotiations between Russia and Britain. It is said that a bitter feeling prevails in St. Petersburg, but there is little evidence of this when we look at the fact that Russia is busy preparing for the worst, and is doing her utmost to wean over Turkey to her side. The Queen's proclamation calling out the reserve for active permanent service has been well received at home, and the Government in their present attitude seem to have the confidence and sympathy of the people. The ultimatum of Britain with respect to the terms on which the proposed Congress should meet has been published, and in it the Secretary for War takes the strong ground that the treaty between Russia and Turkey cannot be carried out, and even if it could, that then Turkey would be entirely subject to Russia. As Lord Salisbury says:—"The combined efforts of the treaty stipulations is to depress all most to the point of entire subjection the political independence of the Porte. It cannot be otherwise than a matter of extreme solicitude to Great Britain that a Government whose formal jurisdiction extends over geographical positions of the deepest interest to her should be so closely pressed by the political outposts of a greatly superior Power that its independent action and even existence is almost impossible. Large changes will doubtless be necessary in hitherto existing treaties. England earnestly desires good government and peace and freedom for the populations to whom those blessings have been strange. She would willingly have entered a Congress in which the stipulations could be examined as a whole, but neither British interests nor the well-being of the Turkish Provinces would be consulted by the assembling of a Congress restricted by Prince Gortschakoff's latest reservations."

The situation to-day is a most serious one. Britain refuses to accept the terms on which Russia offers to negotiate, and the two Powers stand to-day in open menace, which may at any moment be turned into actual war. The calling out of the reserves is, in itself, a grave step, but it has derived more importance from the resignation of Lord Derby than it otherwise deserved. With a strong majority at his back, Lord Beaconsfield can pursue the most dangerous course, without incurring reprehension. Pending the exchange of diplomatic opinions, Britain seems resolved to keep her ironclads in the Sea of Marmora, while Russia is as determined to retain her forces around Constantinople. This deadlock is beset with danger, and is one of the most difficult matters to adjust.

Meantime Austria seems inclined to side with Britain, and Turkey is wavering between two opinions. Russia is doing her utmost to gain her over to her side, but the Porte naturally feels that he would be treated more leniently by Britain than Russia, and leans to the side of the former. Germany seems inclined to throw her influence in favor of Britain, which at the same time has the sympathy of France and Italy

There may be war and there may not. It is hard to tell. For our part we think that Russia will weigh all the circumstances before she enters on a struggle which would terribly cripple her. Britain all through this trouble has assumed a dignified position, and if she is forced into war, she has a good excuse. Her interests in the East are of immense importance, and she is quite justified in curbing the power and arrogance of Russia, which seeks to weaken her hold and influence in Asia.

THE absence of Mr. Dalton McCarthy from the House is noticeable. He seems to have lost hope in making his mark in Parliament.

WORD has come to Ottawa that the Privy Council in England has confirmed the decision of the majority of the arbitrators with regard to the division of the debts and assets of Quebec and Ontario, which justifies the views and action of the Ontario Government. The propositions stand, four-ninths for Quebec and five-ninths for Ontario.

Death of an Old Employee of the Great Western Railway.

To the Editor of the Mercury:

DEAR SIR,—Many readers of your excellent paper will be sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Robert Hanning, so long and favorably known in connection with the Great Western Railway. The sad event took place at his residence in Hamilton on Friday, 22nd of March. He was the oldest employee on the G. W. R., having entered the service on the 10th of January, 1853, continuing in active service until about a year ago, when his health began to fail, his trouble being heart disease, brought on by over exertion of mind and body, whilst performing the arduous duties assigned to him. He was a most efficient and faithful employee, always looking after the interests of the Company. Many things in his praise might be told of him. I will only give one instance of praise-worthy conduct. It was this: In 1873, a propeller was on fire at the G. W. R. wharf. He immediately ordered all on board to come ashore, and got his men to push off the burning boat, and although some one belonging to the boat threatened to shoot him for doing so he nobly did his duty at the peril of his life, and thus saved the premises of the G. W. R. depot in Hamilton from being consumed by fire, as it was, such dry weather, everything was dry as tinder, and would have been only for him inevitably destroyed. Other instances of his faithfulness and manly courage might be given, but let this suffice. He did it all without reward, but he had the satisfaction of having done his duty fearlessly.

He was sixty-five years and three months old when he died. He was married to the youngest sister of Thomas Carlyle, who with four daughters survive him. They have the sympathy of the community in their loss. Mr. Hanning was a strong supporter of the Reform party, and while his health permitted took a deep interest in the Reform cause.

Yours &c.,
AN OLD FRIEND.

April 1, 1878.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

It has been decided that O'Leary, the pedestrian, is entitled to take the champion belt to America, and anyone challenging him must compete in America, unless other arrangements are made.

The North Wellington Reform Convention.

The Conservative Convention of North Wellington met in Arthur on Wednesday, when Mr. Drew received the unanimous nomination for the Commons. We expected as much; Mr. Drew is too old a hand at the business to be shunted off the track by Mr. Gordon or Mr. Chadwick, and so these two aspirants for Parliamentary honours have to give in to the old Tory war horse, and have to suck their thumbs and meekly submit to the will of the Convention. We always thought Jacobs would spoil their little game, and yet we cannot help sympathizing with Mr. Chadwick, who after all his expenditure of time and money has been this unceremoniously thrust aside, by the machinations of Mr. Drew and his lieutenant. Mr. Drew is too much for his rivals, and though he was able to smother disaffection in the Tory camp at the Convention, yet it is not extinguished, and may crop out at any moment. We are told there was great unanimity at the Convention. There might have been outwardly, but the smouldering fires of discontent were only covered over. There is no doubt that Mr. Chadwick has been diddled out of the nomination, and he has a sufficient number of supporters in the North Riding to make it very uncomfortable for Mr. Drew in his attempt to gain the united Conservative support. He has indeed a very hard road to travel even with the aid of all the manipulating powers of Jacobs. We shall have lively times in the North Riding before long.

We are credibly informed that on the first ballot, the vote stood as follows:—Drew, 59; Jas. Fahey, 11; Robt. Gordon, Kenilworth, 5; F. J. Chadwick, 3; T. A. W. Gordon, 1.

On the second ballott all the names were dropped but Drew's and Fahey's, when the vote stood:—Drew, 59; Fahey, 11. Mr. Drew's nomination was then made unanimous.

Murder of the Earl of Letrim.

LONDON, April 3.—The Earl of Leitrim left Milford yesterday morning accompanied by his clerk, and was driving on an outside car to Derry to meet his solicitor. He always carried arms. It is supposed his assassins hid behind a low embankment, and, having first shot the Earl, shot the clerk and driver to remove witnesses. The driver was shot in the mouth and the clerk behind the car, both probably at close quarters. The Earl's valet was a mile behind, and on coming up found the Earl and clerk dead. The driver was still alive. The assassins escaped in a boat across Muleroy Bay. The valet drove back to Milford and alarmed the police, who found the driver alive but unconscious. He died shortly afterwards. There is no doubt the murder was agrarian. The relations between the Earl and his tenants were unfriendly. The Earl was kind and liberal to the poor, but very exacting in his dealings with his tenantry, visiting with unsparing severity the slightest infraction of the rules of the estate. The Riband Society here have a strong hold upon the country, owing largely to his harshness. He had an iron will, and extraordinary courage and perseverance.

The Times says:—It is no exaggeration to say that the news of the murder of the Earl of Leitrim struck this country with as much pain and amazement as an unprovoked declaration of war.

Two men named McTaggert and Friel have been arrested on board the steamer going from Bathmuller to Londonderry on suspicion of complicity in the murder of Lord Leitrim.

AN EXPLANATION.

In reply to numerous enquiries from our lady friends, regarding our Millinery Show Rooms for the season, I would say that we shall

Open on Thursday or Friday next.

Definite announcement on Tuesday.

It is well known that in the very early part of the season, a great variety of English, French and American styles, find their way into the Canadian Markets In fact I may say that a great many of these styles are thrust into this market for the purpose of being disposed of, and it is only after the New York season has fairly commenced that approved and really popular styles which command the trade here make their appearance. It is also well understood that when the season has fairly opened, that two or three styles or shapes at the utmost only become popular. Those decided shapes are just now being introduced into the New York market, and a full presen on of which we shall have forward in time for our opening day.

We may just say that we purpose making this one of the grandest opening occasions ever held in the Town of Guelph, and we can do it.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN MAN OVER THE DOOR,

Beg to thank the inhabitants of Town of Guelph and County for the unprecedented success that has attended their efforts during the past season of genera depression in every branch of business. Our experience for the past 25 years in the business here, gave the senior member of the firm to forsee that nothing but extraordinary good value would be the road to success—value such as no other store in Guelph could approach within 15 per cent. This we have accomplished; and it is the universal verdict of every family in town and county, "If you want good reliable, new, fresh, fashionable goods of any class, at under value, John Hogg & Son's is the place." We ask the especial attention of the ladies of the town of Guelph and county of Wellington to the very new and novel designs in ladies' Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Laces, Ribbons, Ruches, Millinery Trimmings of an immense variety and description. Also to our

New French Pattern Millinery Bonnets,

that will be on exhibition on our opening day, 5th April. The rich excellence of taste displayed in producing such a combination of color and material, all in exquisite harmony with each other, calls forth from an admiring community plaudits which sounds must reverberate back to that magnificent city, the mother of taste and refinement of ideas—Paris. The world wide fame of the lady artists whose original taste and ideas will so shortly be presented to you for your refined approval are: Madame S. Gillot, 5 Boulevard des Capucines; Madame Lecheralier, 9 Boulevard des Italiens; Madame Verot, 12 Rue de la Paix. These lady milliner artists are the leading celebrities of the West End, Regent Street, London, England, whose names only require to be mentioned in order to win admiration.

We cordially invite every lady in the town and county to call, view, and we hope endorse the efforts that we are putting forth to meet in some measure the advanced taste and refinement of the ladies of the Model County of the Dominion, namely, County of Wellington.

CHAPTER XXX.

LIZZIE IS DELIVERED INTO THE HANDS OF ANOTHER KEEPER.

He resumed the oars again, and Lizzie crept back to her seat, making agonizing efforts to quiet the crying of her child. For a time her efforts were vain, and she dreaded lest the screaming should provoke another furious outburst, when perchance he would fulfil his horrible threat. She watched him with a quaking heart, but he rowed on, taking no further notice of the boy, and soon, to her intense thankfulness, Alfred sobbed himself asleep in her bosom.

They were now far out on the loch, and drawing near the island in its centre. Lizzie could see it looming darkly before them, and it appeared to be much larger than she deemed when first she beheld it from the heights above the valley. On its highest point she could descry the irregular outline of the building, and, it too, was large and lofty, but it was now too dark to observe its minuter features. Her first impression had been that the surface of the island was nearly level with the water, but now that she was close upon it, she found its height to be considerable—the shore rising up in steep rocks, with the water washing their base, and seemingly deep even to the edge. Presently they entered withing the shadow cast by these eminences, and finally ran into a creek between two cliffs, where a small stony beach afforded a landing place. Here a pile of stones had been erected similar to that from whence they started, and, like it was green and mossgrown as if from long disuse. Lizzie could see just this much when told to step ashore and wait on the beach till the boat was secured.

She cast her eyes around in search of the path which was to lead them up the slope, but failed to notice even the trace of such. The little strip of beach seemed to be shut in on all sides by rugged and perpendicular rocks, too precipitous to climb, yet presenting no visible means of ascent, and she wondered how they were to proceed. On this point, however, she was speedily enlightened.

Joe, having attached the boat to a strong iron chain fastened to one of the rocks, shouldered the oars, and shuffled past with a gruff command for Lizzie to follow him—an order she unhesitatingly obeyed, though she wondered whither he meant to lead her.

Joe, however, knew his way well enough, and though he made direct for the base of the rock, which rose perpendicularly for at least a hundred feet, he had no intention of climbing it, but passed round the corner of an overlapping portion, which, when Lizzie had gained, lo! the end of passage appeared. It was a natural crevice some four feet in width, and ran up a steep but practicable incline, art having evidently done something, but not much, to construct the path. A little cutting had been made here and there, the roughest place had been chiselled into comparative smoothness, sharp protuberances had been knocked away, gaps and clefts had been filled up to secure a continuance of footing; but beyond these slight, though necessary amendments, the passage was a natural production of nature, and had been formed by some violent eruption in some far past age when nature's forces had been actively at work among the surrounding mountains.

With weary limbs and languid feet Lizzie followed her uncouth guide up this secluded way, barely able—for it was quite dark now—to keep him in sight, but guided by the clattering sound of his splay feet, as he trailed them over the resounding floor. The long, unbroken journey of the day, continued from early morn till now, had utterly exhausted her, and despite her fear and anxiety, she longed for a place where her worn-out frame might find repose. So great was her fatigue that it deadened her feeling of anxiety, and she moved forward with dull, mechanical motion, hardly speculating on the issue.

At the end of a hundred yards or so the passage terminated, the fissure of the rock closed up, and nothing seemed to be in front but a wall of impenetrable adamant. Here again her difficulty was solved by a surprise for Joe, after grouping about a few moments, laid his hand upon a ponderous key, with which he opened a massive door, revealing an aperture of unmitigated blackness.

"Oh, heaven!" thought Lizzie, "are we shut up in a horrible dungeon?"

As this thought struck her she paused, and drew a step in dismay.

"Come on, will you?" called out the dwarf impatiently.

"In—in there?" gasped Lizzie, with a tone of horror.

"Yes; the place is nice enough, ain't it?"

"Oh, for mercy's sake, don't shut us up in that dreadful place?" wailed the desolate girl.

"Who's talking of shutting you up here? It's only another passage we have got to go through; that's all."

"Oh, another passage," returned Lizzie, rather dubiously, yet partially relieved. "It—it looks like a dungeon."

"So does every place in the dark," was the growling response, delivered amid a click, clicking which, being accompanied with sparks, indicated that he was trying to strike a light.

In a little while the tinder ignited, and a flaming torch was lit, which gave Lizzie the assurance that he had spoken the truth, for it had revealed a passage stretching far away into the distance, the side walls of which were wet with water trickling down.

Close within the massive door was a long recess, in which the hunchback deposited the oars. Then the door was closed, and secured by a heavy bolt shot into the solid rock. It went into its place with a loud revibrating sound which had the effect of startling Alfred in his sleep, and went echoing away into the depths of the passage.

To Lizzie's ears it sounded like the knell of doom—the proclamation that she had bid adieu for ever to light and freedom, and entered the precincts of an unlighted prison-house. The flaring light of the torch, while it illuminated in some degree the surrounding darkness, presented also in the person of the hunchback a spectacle which made Lizzie's flesh creep with horror. As he stood before her with the torch in his hand, and its flickering gleam falling on his repulsive figure, it gave him so much the aspect of a fiend in the regions below that the trembling girl with difficulty refrained from screaming outright. He seemed to read her through and divine her feeling, for a ferocious scowl showed itself on his distorted face, and a loud mocking "ha, ha!" come from his grinning lips with a weird, unearthly sound.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. CORMACK & KELEHER

Having purchased the entire stock, fixtures and good-will of the business of Mr. James Cormack, Sr., Merchant Tailor, in Guelph, take this opportunity of informing the public of their intention to carry on in all its branches. While it is their intention to still retain the prestige of the late firm in turning out superior clothing to any establishment in town, they have also, in consideration of their expenses being wonderfully curtailed, made a MARKED REDUCTION OF PRICES in the various lines, even to such an extent that they feel assured that all their patrons will not only be astonished and satisfied, but constrained to recommend the firm to their friends.

Order Department.

This Department will be under the supervision of a FIRST CLASS CUTTER, the services of whom they have been fortunate enough to secure, and whose reputation is such that it is with the greatest confidence his abilities and skill are submitted to the gentlemen of Guelph and vicinity. All orders will be executed in such a manner as to ensure entire satisfaction to customers. No one will require to don a garment that is not in every respect the very acme of perfection as far as fit and workmanship are concerned. From the fact that a LARGE AND CHOICE STOCK OF CLOTHS will always be kept on hand, there is no fear but that all can be suited in the selection of material.

Gents' Furnishings.

With regard to this department, they are convinced that the time has arrived in the history of all large and well organized establishments which handle men's wearing apparrel, when GENTS' FURNISHINGS, to be attractive, must be constantly replete with staple goods, together with the novelties of the season, and to effect this our purchases shall be frequently and carefully made.

Ready Made Clothing.

Possessing the advantages of being manufacturers as well as retailers of these goods they are enabled to present to the public many lines superior to the general factory made clothing.

Hats and Caps of London, New York and Canadian Manufacture of the newest designs.

☞ Special attention is invited to all goods in stock. A call is solicited from all customers of the late firm. New faces are looked for, and the utmost satisfaction guaranteed without any exception.

Protection to Agricultural Interests.

The following excellent article from the Prince Edward Island Patriot puts the matter of protection to farmers in its proper light. The arguments are equally applicable to Ontario as to Prince Edward Island :—

'The fact that the 'Champion Free Trader,' Mr. Pope, has now declared himself in his true colors, and voted in favor of a policy that will give protection to the agricultural interests, brings the question pertinently before the people of Queen's County, and for that matter, of the whole Island. What does Mr. Pope mean by Protection to agricultural interests? How can agricultural interests be protected? And how will protection benefit the farmer? The theory of protection as applied to manufacturers is, though fallacious, plain and sufficiently reasonable to deceive those who do not look deeper than the surface. The argument would run somewhat as follows :—'Canada is a young and rapidly growing country. She cannot produce manufactured articles at as low a price and of as good a quality as there can be imported from England or other countries ; but if a heavy duty were placed on these articles (and the price consequently raised by so much), the Canadian manufacturer would then be enabled to compete with the foreign manufacturer and produce his goods for the same or a less price than such articles could be imported ; and the country at large would thus be benefitted, by the fact that the manufacturer would be able to employ large numbers of men.' This in brief, is the gist of the Protectionist argument. Of course it entirely suppressed the fact that this is simply legislating for the benefit of one class of the community at the expense of the other classes ; that the consumers of manufactured goods would have to pay some 20 or 30 or 50 per cent. more for these articles, and have in return for this additional price only the dubious benefit of being able to reflect that these articles had been made in Canada and not imported from some other country. It did not take the shrewd farmers of the Dominion long to value this benefit at what it is worth, and Protection rapidly fell into disfavor with the agricultural portion of the community. In order to secure the votes and influence of the manufacturer, however, the Macdonald politicians could not lightly forego their Protection theories. The pill must be sugar coated so as to make it acceptable to the farming community ; and this "sugar coating" consisted in proposing "Protection to agricultural interests." Let every body be protected ; everybody would get better prices ; every body would be richer ; every body would be happy ! No more depression! No more hard times ! And all this brought about by mere "re-adjustment" of tariffs.

But let us see how this scheme would suit the farmers of Prince Edward Island. There is no doubt that the immediate effect would be that the farmer would have to pay 20 to 50 per cent. more for all the manufactured articles he uses, for clothing, house furnishings, agricultural implements, iron works, etc. In compensation for this, how is he to get a higher price for his oats and potatoes ? By putting a duty on all the oats and potatoes that come into the Island? Every one knows that the Island does not import oats or potatoes. By putting an export duty on oats and potatoes sent out of the Island? Even Mr. Pope would understand that this would give the farmer a smaller price than before ; for as the price of oats is fixed by the European market, all expenses in transit from the grower in Prince Edward Island to the consumer in Europe must necessarily be a deduction from the farmers price. So long as Prince Edward Island or any other part of Canada produces more farm produce than it is able to consume, so long will it be impossible to increase the price by any scheme of taxation. So long as Canada is an exporter of farm produce and not an importer, so long will the price of farm produce continue independent of any schemes that may emanate from the fertile brains of the "Liberal Conservative" politicians. The price of oats, wheat, &c., on this side of the Atlantic, if fixed by the market rate in Europe, and no scheme of taxation that Mr. Pope is capable of devising will affect that market rate.

There is indeed one scheme by which the rate of farm produce could be forced up, but we do not imagine that even Liberal Conservatives would be so foolish as to propose this. It is, to limit by legislation the production of the farm so that it would be necessary in order to supply the wants of the community, to import from other places. Then, by putting on a heavy duty farmers might be enabled to get higher prices. Of course the evil consequences of such a policy, were it adopted, are apparent to the mind's eye at once, and yet these evils are not more real nor more grave than those that would ensue, were a policy of protection to manufactures to be adopted.

Protection to agricultural interests on this side of the Atlantic is a myth, and it takes but very little thought to be assured of this. Indeed we have only to look to the highly protected States to see how completely Protection has failed to give any improvement in price to farm produce Last fall when oats on Prince Edward Island were selling at 40 cents per bushel ; in New York they were selling only at 11 cents per bushel (greenbacks) equal at that time to about 38 cents of our money. Now, what is implied by this fact ? It is simply this. Under the Protective system of the United States, the farmer who pays 50 per cent more for his manufactured goods than does his brother in Prince Edward Island, actually received less for his farm produce. So much for "protecting agricultural interests." This is the Great National Policy that the Macdonald party would wish to thrust upon the people of the Dominion, and this is the policy that Mr. Pope, in the House, in Ottawa, has recently endorsed by his vote.

NEWSPAPER BUSINESS.—An exchange aptly remarks : We suppose many people think that the newspaper men are persistent duns ; let a farmer place himself in a similar business position and see if he would not do the same. Suppose he raised 1,000 bushels of wheat, and his neighbor should come and buy a bushel, and the price was a small matter of only $2 or less, and says, " I will hand you the amount in a few days." As the farmer does not want to be small about the matter, he says, " all right," and the man leaves with the wheat. Another comes in the same way, until the 1,000 bushels of wheat are trusted out to one thousand different persons, and not one of the purchasers concerns himself about it, for it is a small amount that he owes the farmer, and of course that would not help him any. He does not realize that the farmer has frittered away all his large crop of wheat, and that its value is due in a thousand little driblets, and that he is seriously embarrassed in his business because his debtors treat it as a small matter. But if all would pay him promptly, which they could do as well as not, it would be a very large amount to the farmer, and enable him to carry on his business without difficulty. The above comparision is too true of the difficulties that the newspaper man has to contend with.

A severe hailstorm in North Missisippi is believed to have seriously damaged the corn crop.

DR. WM. GRAY'S SPECIFIC MEDICINE

The Great English Remedy is especially recommended as an unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhœa, Impotency and all diseases that follow as a consequence of Self Abuse, as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to INSANITY OR CONSUMPTION and a PREMATURE GRAVE, all of which, as a rule, are first caused by deviating from the path of nature, and over indulgence.

The Specific Medicine is the result of a life study and many years of experience in treating those special diseases. Pamphlet free by mail.

The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or Six Packages for $5, or will be sent by mail on receipt of the money by addressing DR. WM. GRAY & CO., Windsor Ont.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Russia's Reply to Britain.

A Conciliatory Tone Adopted.

The Debate in the House of Commons.

APRIL 9.

The general effect of the parliamentary debates on the address to the Queen will be reassuring. The most interesting part was Lord Derby's statement. This showed the difference between Lord Derby and his colleagues to be of long standing and affecting the substance of their entire Eastern policy. St. Petersburg telegrams say the feeling gains ground that some formula will be invented, and which will remove the obstacles to the assembling of the Congress, and that Bismarck is evidently interesting himself to this end.

In the House of Commons to-day the debate on the address to the Queen in reply to her recent message was continued. Sir Wilfred Lawson, on behalf of the Radicals, moved an amendment contesting the necessity of calling out the reserves. The amendment was rejected by 319 to 64. The Marquis of Hartington, Mr. Forster, and many other Liberals abstained from voting. Mr. Glandstone and Mr. Bright supported the amendment. The amendment proposed by Sir George Campbell praying Her Majesty to accept the preliminary conference suggested by Germany, and to abstain from isolated action, while declaring England is ready to support the other powers against the spoliation of Roumania, was withdrawn, and the address was agreed to without a division.

A Times' editorial says:—Gortschakoff's reply shows a genuine desire to insure a peaceable solution. A correspondent at Berlin says it appears that Austria and Germany recognize the European character of the Bessarabian question, without, however, taking any direct steps to influence Russian resolves.

The drift of the news from Constantinople is again distinctly pro-English. The position of Vefyk Pasha is said to be strengthened, and new objections have been taken against Russian military movements.

In Vienna it is known that Austria's strong objections to the treaty have given great dissatisfaction, the Russians saying that Austria claims entirely too large concessions.

An Athens despatch says;—Eight thousand Thessalians from the burned villages in Thessaly have taken refuge in Greece utterly destitute.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

Peace Prospects More Favorable.

LONDON, April 10.

Nearly all the papers comment favorably on Gortschakoff's reply to Salisbury's note, and agree that it leaves an opening for the renewal of the Congress project.

The situation is considered more peaceful than at any time since the the San Stefano Treaty was signed. As a consequence the stock market is decidedly firmer with an advancing tendency. European Bourses are firmer to-day.

FROM HARRY HILL, THE CHAMPION WRESTLER, No 26 EAST HOUSTON STREET, NEW YORK.—I know of no remedy that will so quickly remove the discoloration of the skin resulting from injuries, soreness and pains of the joints, muscles and bones, the result of violent and continued exercise, as GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA. I have used it myself and have seen it used by others, and recommend its use to all athletes.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Pricesare much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

Sharp competition is the order of the day, among the first-class hotels in New York. With one or two exceptions, they are trying to keep their old trade while adhering to their previous high rates. The Grand Central has reaped much benefit from this, by quietly "cutting" the rates from one to two dollars per day. eod

Contributions are being taken up in Montreal for the sufferers in China by the famine.

The Tribune reports that a forged confession by Mrs. Tilton implicating Beecher was offered for sale to the newspapers yesterday. It gives statements of Mrs. Tilton's mother denying that Tilton had visited his wife or that there was any expection of a reconciliation.

CORONER APPOINTED. — Dr. Emes, of Drayton, has been gazetted as Associate Coroner for the County of Wellington.

Local News.

A SOAP man came to grief this morning in the fair grounds, by a bullock backing up against his stand and scattering things generally.

MR. JAS. WEBSTER, whose illness was mentioned yesterday, we are pleased to learn, is much better to-day.

FRUIT SOCIAL.—The Ladies Aid Society of the Norfolk street Methodist Church, intend giving a fruit social a week from to-morrow—Thursday, 18th April.

THE Elora and Fergus Easter fat cattle fairs were held on Tuesday. A large number of fine animals were purchased, some of which were for exportation. The prices ranged very much as paid at the Guelph fair.

CHECKERS.—A checker match between chosen sides took place in the rooms of the Guelph Checker Club, at the American Hotel, on Tuesday evening. There was a crowd of spectators present, who manifested considerable interest in the playing. The side captained by Mr. McKenzie defeated their opponents captained by D. Naismith, by a score of 28 to 26. The score follows:

	GAMES.		GAMES.
Murdock McKenzie	4	Daniel Naismith	1
G. Ritchie	4	J. F. Smith	2
W. Walrond	4	Dr. Middleton	2
M. Myers	1	A. Simpson	3
D. McKenzie	6	J. A. McMillan	0
J. Mitchell	2	D. Grain	4
R. Baker	3	R. Johnston	3
J. Daly	3	Wm. Johnston	0
C. Burger	1	S. McLachlin	5
T. Millar	0	T. Lister	6
Total	28		26

There was one draw between McKenzie and Naismith, two draws between Myers and Simpson, and three draws between Daly and Johnston. Meetings hereafter on Monday evenings.

L. O. L.—The South Riding County Orange Lodge met in Guelph on Tuesday. There was a good attendance. Besides other business being transacted, it was decided that the Lodges in South Wellington participate in the celebration at Dundas on the 12th of July.

NANCY DOLAN, a poor half-witted woman, who has spent the greater portion of the last twelve years in the gaol at Guelph, was discharged a few days ago, only to be rearrested as a vagrant. The Police Magistrate committed her to the care of the officials at the County Poor House. She will be well cared for there.

TREAT OF THE SEASON.—The Rev. T. W. Handford—the Gough of Canada—will deliver his very popular lecture on "Oliver Cromwell," in Knox Church, on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. This will indeed be a rare treat to those who attend, and a great loss to those who cannot get there. The admission has been placed at the low figure of fifteen cents. We would advise all our readers to go and hear the lecture.

LACROSSE CLUB.—At the annual meeting of the Guelph Club, held at Ward's Hotel on Tuesday evening its re-organization for the coming season was effected. There was a good attendance. The Secretary's report showed the club to be in a very healthy condition. The following officers for the current year were unanimously elected:—President, Adam Weir, (re-elected); Vice-Presidents, W. H. Brasbie, (re-elected), and William Carthew; Secretary-Treasurer, Hugh F. McIntosh; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, (re-elected); Executive Committee, Wm. Ward, A. H. McIntyre, James McIntosh, Matthew P. Parker, George Thorp. There were twenty new members proposed. At the close a vote of thanks was tendered to the retiring officers, which was duly acknowled. Practice will be commenced at an early date.

'PRENTICE BOYS.—On Tuesday evening Bro. Harry Pearson, W. M. of the lodge in Guelph, and Bros. Dollery, proceeded to Stratford to organize and institute a lodge of the order there. The following officers were elected:

George Donald, Grand Master.
James Burns, Deputy Grand Master.
John Murray, Treasurer.
Wm. Wright, Secretary.
Robert Irwin, Senior Com.
Angus Menish, 2nd Com.
James Holmes, 3rd Com.
James Murray, 4th Com.
Tom Grant, 5th Com.
Robt. Turnbull, M. of C.
Jas. Lamb, I. T.
Geo. Barlow, O. T.
Robert Gibson, Chaplain.
Robert Dow, Assistant Secretary.

After the business of the lodge had been concluded, the Guelph brethren were entertained in a most hospitable manner.

WORSWICK MACHINE COMPANY.—A meeting of the shareholders of this Company was held in the office of Messrs. W. Bell & Co. on Tuesday night to take into consideration the best means that could be adopted for getting the Company into working order. Mr. Wm. Bell acted as chairman, and Mr. Arms as Secretary. After a pretty full discussion in regard to the whole affairs of the Company, it was resolved, on motion of Mr. Watkins, seconded by Dr. Keating, that the shareholders, after having heard a statement of the whole merits of the case, recommend that the Board of Directors be authorized to issue preferential stock to the amount of $12,000, said stock to be guaranteed interest at eight per cent per annum. Considerable discussion took place on the subject, but in the end the resolution as given above was adopted.

Seventy-one convicts were sent to the Kingston penitentiary in the half year ending the 30th June last. Of these 20 were abstainers, 31 temperate, and 20 intemperate. Sixty-two were sent to the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary in the same period, of whom 35 were temperate and 27 intemperate.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 9.

Mr. Laflamme brought in a Bill to relieve from unnecessary incarceration persons held in custody in default of securities to keep the peace.

Sir John A. Macdonald intimated that on Thursday he proposed to move as an amendment to the motion to go into Supply a resolution respecting late events in Buebec.

Mr. Mackenzie suggested that a discussion on a substantive motion, for which the Government would afford every facility, would be the most dignified and convenient course of proceeding, rather than upon a resolution that could not be amended.

Sir John urged that he desired to avoid any amendment, and obtain a vote on his proposition pro or con.

Mr. Holton took the same view as the Premier, and pointed out that a true deliverance of the views of the House could only be obtained when an opportunity for an amendment was afforded. He instanced the celebrated Baldwin resolutions on Responsible Government in 1841 as a precedent to be followed in such cases.

On motion to read the Readjustment of Offices Bill a third time, Mr. Mitchell delivered a long speech in opposition to the measure. He moved an amendment to strike out the clauses relating to the Department of Justice. On a division the amendment was lost—Yeas, 64; nays, 105.

On the order being read to go into Committee of Supply, Mr. Bechard moved his resolution in favor of putting a duty on oats and corn. He supported the motion in a brief speech. Mr. Pope opposed the motion as being of a partial and sectional character, as did Mr. Masson. On a division the motion was lost by yeas, 54; nays, 114.

A QUORUM not being present there was no business done at the meeting of the Guelph Ladies' Christian Temperance Club last evening.

The Presbytery of Guelph.

The Presbytery of Guelph met on the 9th inst., according to adjournment, in Chalmers' Church, Guelph, the Rev. Mr. Bentley, of Union Church, Galt, Moderator. The day of next ordinary meeting, which fell to be held on the second Tuesday of May was changed to the first Tuesday, in consequence of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, which meets in Kingston, being appointed for the same day. Mr. Ball asked to be relieved of his appointment as a Commissioner to the General Assembly. His request was granted, and the Rev. J. K. Smith, of Knox Church, Galt, was chosen in his room. According to a resolution the Presbytery proceeded to consider the petition of parties from St. John's Church, Garafraxa, praying to have supply of preaching granted them. The Clerk reported that he had sent notice of the application to all parties interested, and the replies, as far as received, were read. The Kirk Sessions of Melville Church and St. Andrew's Church, Fergus, offered no objection. The answer from the Kirk Session of Mimosa was to the effect that they desired the continuance of their union with St. John's Church, Garafraxa, and of the pastoral services of Mr. Millican, and thought the prayer of the petition should not, if possible, be granted. The congregation of St. John's Church sent in a paper, containing representations and statements against granting the petition, expressing their confidence in their minister, promising anew to implement all their former engagements to him, and specifying tokens of blessings, which God was pouring out upon them in the midst of the agitation through which they were passing. The petitioners appeared by fourteen commissioners, who had been appointed to represent them, and the congregation of St. John's Church by twelve. Mr. William Rea appearing from Mimosa. Parties on both sides were fully heard, occupying the greatest part of the forenoon and nearly all the afternoon sederunt. After lengthened and careful deliberation the following motion was adopted:—"The Presbytery having read all documents and heard all parties in the case have come to the conclusion that they cannot at present grant the prayer of the petitioners for supply of preaching, and, therefore, allow the petition to lie on the table in the meantime; but are unanimously of opinion that, as there is no prospect of healing the breach at present existing in St. John's Church, Garafraxa, while Mr. Millican continues to occupy his present position, would recommend him to take into his solemn and prayerful consideration the propriety of resigning his charge, and seeking a sphere of usefulness elsewhere." Mr. Millican stated, that so far as he could read the indications of Providence, he felt constrained, by a sense of duty, to remain with his people, who had shown themselves attached to him, but this was not to be regarded as his final decision. At the evening sederunt he added that he was confirmed in this resolution after consulting with the representatives from his congregation. The petitioners acquiesced in the finding of the Presbytery. Extracts were craved by both parties, and the Clerk was authorized to grant the same. It was then agreed that the case be referred simplified to the Synod at their first meeting for advice and judgment. Leave of absence from his charge for three and a half months was granted to Mr. Anderson, of Rothsay and Moorefield, at his own request, in consequence of sickness, and Mr. John Davidson was appointed interim Moderator of Session. Mr. Wardrope renewed his notice of motion given at last meeting. Messrs. Bentley, Torrance, McCrae and Charles Davidson were appointed a committee to arrange certain terms of the deed of the church property purchased by the English and German Presbyterian congregations there. A considerable amount of business had to be delayed till next meeting—on the seventh day of May next—appointed to be held in Chalmers' Church, Guelph, beginning at ten o'clock, forenoon.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT IN GALT.—A most painful accident happened at the glove manufactory of Messrs. W. Young & Co., on Thursday afternoon. A large number of girls are employed at sewing by machine in the establishment, and one of them, a girl named Sarah Anderson, aged 16 or 17, proved the sufferer, through her carelessness. It appears that the machines are all driven by a belt from a shaft running along the floor. One of the machines was being repaired, and the light belt was thrown off, and being only attached to one main shaft, kept going round upon it. Some of the girls playfully attempted to catch hold of the end of the belt as it flopped round each time, but were warned to desist. The girl Anderson, however, succeeded in catching it, and much to her astonishment one of the fingers of her right hand was caught in the loop, and in an instant torn from her body. With the finger the sinews reaching from it to the elbow were drawn out, and the whole mass was found wound round the shaft by Mr. Young. The girl was placed under medical care, and of course suffers most intensely. It is feared that if inflammation sets in she will lose her arm. She was the sole support of an aged mother and several sisters.

About 200 Canadian emigrants from the Ottawa district to Manitoba have purchased tickets since the first of March, and a special train is to leave town to-day or some other day this week with a body of 150 or 200 more. The men are generally able-bodied young men and middle-aged farmers.

Thirteen persons left Montreal on Monday for Manitoba. Their object is to take up land and settle in the Prairie Province. They have all signed a memorandum not to engage in the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquor, and also to use all their moral and political influence to prevent the sale of such in the settlements in which they may reside.

A meeting of clergymen and prominent laymen of the Church of England was held on Tuesday, when a draft of an address to his Lordship the Metropolitan, on the occasion of the resignation of his office was adopted.

EASTER SHOW.

A Grand Exhibition of Fat Cattle.—Some $40,000 changed hands.

The annual Easter Cattle Fair was held to-day (Wednesday), in connection with the Fat Cattle Show, under the auspices of the South Wellington and Guelph Township Agricultural Societies. The Fair was largely attended, both by those who had cattle to dispose of and those who wished to purchase. Altogether there must have been some 1,500 cattle on the fair grounds during the morning. From seven o'clock until noon cattle were being constantly brought in at one gate, and those that were sold were in many cases at once driven to the station to be shipped. Buyers from Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London, St. Thomas and other towns and cities, besides local buyers, were present.

While the great majority of the animals offered were in good condition, they were small in size. This militated against high prices, as it is only in cases where animals will tip the scale at 1,400 or 1,600 lbs. that the highest figures will be paid. Cattle fit for exportation to the old country market will always be in great demand, and breeders should bear this in mind. The average price paid at the fair would be about $4 per cwt., $3.25 were paid in some instances by local buyers, and $6 per cwt. was paid in a few cases. Satchell Bros., of Ottawa, purchased five magnificent animals from the Model Farm, for which he paid $6, the heaviest animal weighing 2,160 lbs., and the five averaged 1,860 lbs. each. Henry Dunbar sold a fine animal at $6 to Walter West.

As is always expected, a number of cattle were driven home again, but in nearly all instances the animals would stand considerable more feeding and the beef would be benefitted thereby. On the present occasion, however, more than the ordinary number of animals remained unsold. Buyers throughout appeared very careful in purchasing, and those who were in charge of cattle voted the Guelph Easter fair a very slow one. It is estimated that some $40,000 changed hands,

The following sales will give the reader a very correct idea of the figures paid:—

S. L. Head purchased the following:—From Arthur Walker, 5 head at $5.50, weighing 7,050 lbs., and 1 at $4.50, weighing 1,290 lbs.; 4 head from Peter Barrett, 5,010 lbs., at $5.37½; 2 head from Robt. Lindsay, 3,310 lbs., at $5.50; 2 head from Mr. Moffatt, 2,390 lbs., at $4.75; 2 head from Mr. Brown, 2,750 lbs., at $5; 6 head from John Brockie, 8,200 lbs., at $5.06; 2 head from John Ewing, 2,194 lbs., at $5.12½; 2 head from George Short, 2,740 lbs., at $4.75; 3 head from Samuel Burnet for $93 each; 2 head from Wm. Hood, 2,370 lbs., at $4.50; 2 heifers from Geo. Quarrie, $138; 4 head from E. Lowrie, for $88 each; 2 head from Geo. Lowrie, for $106; 3 head from Geo. Coghlin, for $196; 2 head from Wm. Armstrong, for $182.

S. L. Head also purchased 41 hogs from John Armstrong, 6,465 lbs., at $4; 4 from Wm. Hortop 1,250 lbs., at $4; 22 from Henry Hortop, 4,670 lbs., at $4; 13 from G. and J. Haigh, 2,575 lbs., at $4; 3 from Jas. Gordon, 890lbs., at $4; 5 from J. McQueen, 1,340lbs., at $4; 13 from S. Cherry, at $4; 7 from Francis Simmons, 1,455 lbs., at $4.

The Fat Cattle Show.

At eleven o'clock the Fat Cattle Show was held, with Messrs. G. F. Frankland of Toronto, Geo. Coghlan, of Eramosa, John Black, of Fergus, and Wm. Hearn, of Guelph acting as judges. Compared with other years there was less competition on the present occasion. Although the entries were few there is no doubt but what the animals shown were as fine specimens of beef as has ever been exhibited. Much interest was manifested by spectators, and the decision of the judges and opinion of those outside the ring in each case harmonized.

It is unfortunate that a greater spirit of emulation does not at the present time exist among farmers in regard to the fattening of cattle. Nearly every fair is alike as far as the number of exhibitors is concerned, as it is not often that more than four or five are found to have entered the lists.

Wellington has so long been noted for the fine cattle fattened within its borders, that animals which would be a nine days' wonder in some parts of the Province do not excite more than ordinary admiration here. This is borne out by buyers who flock from different quarters to make their purchases.

Satchell Bros., of Ottawa, took first and second prizes for fat steers under four years and under three years. The animals were purchased by those gentlemen from the yards of the Ontario School of Agriculture. One of those animals also carried off the diploma. A fat cow shown by Henry Dunbar was a very fine animal and was awarded first in its class. Mr. S. L. Head showed some very fine animals. What has been said of cattle is applicable to sheep. Splendid specimens were shown, but the competition was not as large as it should have been.

Wm. Whitelaw performed the duties of Secretary in a very efficient manner, during the absence of Geo. Murton, who was unable through sickness to be about.

The prize list is, herewith appended:

Best fat steer, under 4 years old, 4 entries, 1st Satchell Bros., $4; 2nd Satchell Bros., $3; 3rd S. L. Head, $2.

Fat steer, under 3 years old, 5 entries, Satchell Bros., $4; 2nd Satchell Bros., $2; 3rd S. L. Head, $1.

Fat cow, over 4 years old, 5 entries, Henry Dunbar, $4; 2nd Satchell Bros., $2; 3rd John Laidlaw, $2.

Fat heifer, under 4 years, 5 entries, F. W. Stone, $4; 2nd Geo. Atkinson, $3; 3rd John Rudd, $2.

Fat beast, in either class, 3 entries, diploma, Satchell Bros.

Pair fat wethers, 2 shears and over, 3 entries, Wm. Whitelaw, $3; 2nd Jas. Wright, $2.

Pair of fat ewes, over 2 shears, 4 entries, John Card, $3; 2nd Wm. Whitelaw, $2.

The Board of Examiners and the

Daily Mercury.

WEDNESDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 10, 1878

It is stated decidedly that Mr. McInnes, the newly elected British Columbia member, will support the Government.

Ontario will benefit to the amount of about two million dollars through the recent decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to the effect that the award made by the arbitrators appointed to adjust the debts due by Upper and Lower Canada at the time of Confederation should hold good. These arbitrators were, for Ontario, Senator Macpherson; and for Quebec, Judge Day, Col. Gray acting as third arbitrator. They met in August, 1869, and after several adjournments the arbitrator for Quebec withdrew. The other arbitrators continued the work, and gave an award by which Quebec was shown to be indebted to Ontario to the extent of a couple of millions of dollars. This is the award which the Privy Council has confirmed.

The St. Catharines Journal (Conservative) deals gently with Mr. J. G. Currie in his downfall. It says:—"While we do not condone his offences or palliate his proceedings, we can at least extend a word of sympathy, and we are satisfied that we declare the sentiments of every political opponent of Mr. Currie when we express the hope that a brighter day will speedily dawn upon him, and that ere long he may find relief from his present financial embarrassments, brought about, as he said in his memorable speech in the City Hall on the 19th Februarp, 1876, not by extravagant personal habits, but by 'trusting false friends from the Atlantic to the Pacific.' He fought bravely against his adversities for years back; but the struggle was fruitless in retrieving his lost financial position, and to-day he stands before the world poorer than when he entered upon his eventful career in our midst some twenty years ago. Truly life is a series of ups and downs, and the man whose hand, a few years ago, touched the uppermost rung, is now in dust, bruised with adversity. Of a verity, the race is not the swift, nor the battle to the strong, but time and chance happeneth to all."

The London correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune gives the following interesting story about Mr. John Bright:—He was asked to dine last week with the Princess Louise, and a small party was made for him, mostly Duchesses, I believe. One of these great ladies presently began, as the fashion now is, to abuse Mr. Gladstone. Mr. Bright, in his grave way, asked this personage: "Madam, have you any children?" She admitted she had. "Then permit me, Madam, to advise you to take them on the first opportunity where they may see Mr. and when they are in his presence, say to them they are standing before one of the greatest Englishmen that ever lived, and who has done to his country perhaps the greatest service it was ever permitted an Englishman to do, by preserving it from a wanton and wicked war." Mr. Bright has done a good many plucky things in his time, and this deserves, all things considered, to be reckoned among them. For it was said not only in a circle of Anglo-Turks, but in the hearing of a hostess who must be presumed to share the violent prejudice of the rest of the royal family against the man whom her guest eulogized so warmly. But Mr. Bright's admiration for Mr. Gladstone and affection for him are of old date.

Mr. Trow was, on Monday, re-nominated by the South Perth Reform Convention the party candidate for the representation of the Riding in the House of Commons. Mr. Ballantyne was re-nominated for the Local Legislature. Both are good, reliable men, and we have no doubt will be re-elected. The following resolution was passed:—"That this Convention, while deploring the commercial depression which this country, in common with the entire commercial world, has suffered during the past few years, and sensible that such depression is due to causes entirely beyond the control of any Government, feels satisfied that the policy and administration of both the Governments of the Dominion and Province of Ontario are on the whole best suited to the circumstances of the country generally, and of this Province in particular. Therefore this Convention takes this opportunity of expressing renewed confidence in the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie and his colleagues of the Dominion Government, and Hon. Mr. Mowat and his colleagues of the Ontario Government, and we hereby pledge ourselves individually and collectively to support them at the next election.

The Board of Examiners and the County Council.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

Dear Sir,—As the Board of Examiners have appealed to the public to judge between them and the County Council, and as I am more to blame than any other member of the Council, I wish the public to judge, after knowing all the facts of the case. It was I that laid their bill of charges and detailed statement before the Council. My reason for so doing was this:—The examination of candidates commenced on the 9th July, and the bill was rendered to the Treasurer on the 2nd of August—in all 25 days—including Sundays. You may imagine my surprise when the bill of charges was handed to me by the Treasurer to find charged two members 42 days at $4 per day, one member 41 days at $4 per day, and so on to the end. I then asked for details, showing how and when the time was put in. The details not being satisfactory to me I thought it my duty to lay both bill and detailed statement before the Council.

I would here state that I have been in the Council for many years, and I never saw one of these bills before. The Board led the Treasurer to believe (so he says) that it was his duty to pay their bills without submitting them to the Council in the usual way. Now, sir, what does the statute say about it. It says the Council shall pay. That I hold means that their bills should be laid before the Council every year before being paid, and had this been done I have no doubt this difficulty between them and the Council would never have been to settle.

In reference to furnishing desks, chairs, &c., which business occupied the Board four days, that is also the work of the Council by statute. Had they let the Council know what they needed it would have been furnished without any cost to the County, and there was ample time, for the Council met in June, and the Board did not meet till July, over one month afterwards. In their letter they refer to meeting the Warden on this business. I met two of the members on March Fair Day, and what did we do? They met me at the American Hotel. We talked over the desk question say ten minutes, and one of them walked with me down to Mr. Stewart's factory, a distance of say fifty yards, and we ordered the desks. Next Fair Day they met me again about chairs. I think the time occupied at both meetings would not exceed 40 minutes, but they charged full days, as shown by details. As shown by their letter they had four meetings on the desk and chair question—two full Board meetings and four meetings of Committee, which was all paid for by the County, while the statute says it is not their work.

In reference to the Board considering the amended School Act, I do not think it was the duty of the Board to spend three days on such work, and charge it to the County, unless the Government asked them to do so, and then they ought to have paid them.

I would ask the members of the Council if when they voted the increase of pay to the Board from $2 to $4 per day, if it ever entered their mind that the Board would double it again, and make it $8 per day. What does the statute say about this? It says, the members of the Board shall be paid the same as County Councillors, and what is their pay, $2 per day and mileage one way for each session. How does the Board charge mileage? One member for mileage charges $10 and so on.

In their letter they refer to a certain party's agents. I would tell the Board that until the Council had taken action in this matter no ratepayers or teacher in this County or out of it ever said one word to me about it. Let me ask the Board when they struck the rate per candidate for 1877, why they did not include the whole amount of their charge? Should they not have included their second bill, amounting to $168 besides the $1,016 previously presented.

I would also inquire where they find six or seven hours to be a day's work. Suppose it is, could they not put a twelve hour and a one hour day together, and make two days instead of three.

They say they failed to get a hearing before the Council. I would ask them whose fault it was? Did they ask for a hearing? I say no. They sent their petition, but they never came near any member of the Council. I know Mr. Anderson, Reeve of Fergus, and Chairman of the Education Committee, would have been glad to have one of them come before the Committee.

Now, the part I have taken in the matter is this, I called for the detailed statement and laid both bill and details before the Council. All the rest is the work of the Council, not mine. Right or wrong I did it in the interests of the ratepayers of the County, having nothing to gain or lose myself but as one of them.

I would respectfully invite the teachers to discuss the question of examinations, as they know more about it than I do. I would also express my regret that there should be any cause for difference between the Board and the Council.

To show the Board that they will get justice, I will ask it as a favor for you to publish this letter and bill with the Board's detailed statement.

Yours, &c.,
John Rea, Warden.

Millinery and Mantle Show Rooms

On Friday next, 12th Instant,

AT 10 A. M.

Rare Treat in Store for the Ladies.

Magnificent Display of New Goods.

A. O. BUCHAM

Intimates to the ladies of the town of Guelph and surrounding country that on Friday next, 12th instant, at 10 a. m., he will open his Millinery and Mantle Show Rooms for the season, with a magnificent and gorgeous display of new and fashionable goods, representing the very latest productions of the English, French, and American markets. We will also make a grand special show of which we know every lady will be delighted to see.

We believe our grand special effort will surpass in chaste and beautiful conception anything ever before attempted in the town of Guelph. These special efforts are the result of a great deal of labour, and while it is done to a certain extent to please the ladies, it is also done for the purpose of showing our ability to cater to their wants. We were never in a better position to make a fine display than we are at present.

Our Stock Throughout is New and Fresh.

We have no old goods to show, and would not show them if we had. We have also reorganized our staff of hands, and we believe we have to-day the best staff of gentlemen and young lady assistants to be found anywhere in the trade. We ask the ladies of Guelph to visit us en masse on Friday next. We shall prepare an exhibition worthy of inspection, and those who remain away will surely be disappointed. We will also take the opportunity of showing on the same day our entire stock of including a special line for Mantles, at $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, and $2, the best value ever seen in town. Also a recent advantageous purchase of over

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

Acknowledge with feelings of pride the great courtesy extended to them by the ladies of Town and County on the OPENING of their MILLINERY SHOW ROOMS YESTERDAY. The immense concourse of ladies that thronged our establishment yesterday exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and the tone of admiration exhibited by the excellent taste of Town and Country ladies in praise of the exquisite taste displayed by the lady milliner artists of Paris, France, which we had on exhibition, is most flattering to our taste in bringing such excellent goods to Guelph.

We beg to say to the ladies of Guelph and its surroundings, that we have engaged this season as lady artist in millinery, Miss Smith, whose artistic skill in the profession is unsurpassed in any of the cities in the Dominion, and whose obliging manner wins for her the confidence and esteem of ladies of the highest rank and taste.

We confidently solicit the patronage of all who are in quest of the leading styles in millinery, which will be placed at exceedingly cheap prices this season in particular.

Ladies' Costumes and Silk Jackets

in large variety, and originality of Trimming, are now on exhibition at our establishment, and only require to be seen in order to command the highest praise

CHAPTER XXXI.

LIZZIE'S IMPRISONMENT IS BEGUN.

Such was Lizzie's introduction to her new life of solitude and isolation—a life that was intended to be permanent and unchangeable. The very freedom to which she was to be left was a significant indication of this. It revealed the perfect security afforded by the island to those who had imprisoned her there. They gave her liberty to wander at will because they knew the encircling waters would prevent her from making her escape, as they would also prevent her from being discovered from the shore. The jailor's office was in her case a very easy one, for nature did all the work of keeping her in custody.

This stern fact Lizzie was made to understand that very day when she wandered forth, with Alfred in her arms, to see the confinement to which she had been brought. She was able to make the circuit of the island within the compass of two hours' slow walking, and found that at all points a wide stretch of water lay between her and the mountain landscape around. The shore of the island was for the most part rocky. Here, and there a shelving slope of greensward went down to the water's edge, but in general high precipitous cliffs constituted themselves the rocky sentinels of the place. Traces of walks were to be found in all directions, though few feet seemed of late years to have trod them, for not only did the grass grow thickly on their surface, but whins and brambles had in some places grown up in their centre. These walks winded along the indentations of the shore, round the knolls, and up the slopes of the heights, where nature in wild uncultivation reigned supreme. Possibly the surface of the ground had not soil enough to be tilled for crops, but no attempt seemed ever to have been made for this object. Clumps of trees in certain situations were the only things which man had planted—all else was the spontaneous growth of nature, and consisted of low bushes which bore wild berries, broom, and bracken. Doubtless in their season a profusion of wild flowers decked the slopes with their marvellous beauty, and filled the silent summer air with fragrance. As yet these lowly children of earth were represented only by a few primroses, whose starry eyes soon caught the child's attention, and, with a child's unconsciousness of case and freedom from anxiety, he found delight in picking them.

Through the whole course of her rambling Lizzie had but to turn her head in the proper direction to behold the building where she had passed the night, and which looked at from without, and in the light of day, she found to be a half-ruined castle, of strong and ancient construction. It stood at the highest point of the island, and, though now dilapitated, had been a place of considerable size—surmounted by a square tower. There was not much trace of ornament observable, but the walls were massive, as could be seen by the deep setting of the small windows. One portion only was roofed and habitable—the larger half being reduced to a ruinous condition, merely a picturesque fragment of the past.

That portion of the building which was in better preservation than the rest was the north wing, which rose to the height of three stories, each having a row of windows, dull and obaque from want of cleaning. The chamber in which Lizzie had slept was the room in the second storey, but as she drew near to the building after her walk she noticed a window higher up, much cleaner and brighter than the rest, and as her eye was fixed on it, while she wondered why it should be so she was startled to see a face appear at one of the panes. At first she thought it must be Mother Barnacle watching her from that elevation, but a second look showed her that it was a younger and finer face, but, oh, how sad and sorrowful. It was seen only for a few moments—then it vanished; but the brief vision filled Lizzie's mind with many wondering conjectures. Ere she had time to settle with herself whether it was really a human face she had seen or only a gleam of sunshine cutting a fantastic shape upon the glass, Mother Barnacle issued forth from a door in the garden wall, and told her that dinner had been ready half-an-hour ago.

So she went inside, but often through the course of the afternoon and evening her thoughts reverted to the face which she had seen, and she resolved to watch that window in the upper storey with all the interest which such a circumstance had engendered.

The Naval Battle of the Future.

(From Blackwood's Magazine.)

The question of how a naval battle would now be fought is often raised, but is exceedingly difficult to answer. One thing is certain—the hostile squadrons will be kept in rapid motion for the purpose of effecting as well as evading an attack by ram, which will be the first object sought after. Thus the distance of the enemy will be varying constantly, and a correct estimation of the range will be almost impossible; therefore the chances of hitting at any particular part will be very small. It will be seen that upon the judgment and nerve of the officer in command will now, more than ever, depend the issue of an engagement. The speed of the ships, the necessity of closely watching every movement of the enemy so as instantly to make the proper counter-move, the absolute need of prompt decision, will prevent a moment for reflection or consultation. The helm and the engines must be under the captain's instant control. He and those by him on deck will alone be able to see the enemy at the frequent times when he is obscured by smoke from the battery below, and to distinguish between friend and foe; and his quick perception will be requisite to determine the proper direction and range for his guns, as well as avoid firing into friends. The extreme importance of the life of the officer in command of a squadron, so long as the battle lasts, must also be apparent. In the old wars, the skill, judgment and determination of our naval commanders were chiefly exhibited by the manner in which they sought out their adversaries and brought them to battle. Hostile fleets were sometimes in sight of each other for days—calms, light winds, or fogs preventing their approach—each commander endeavoring by skillful seamanship to gain the weather-guage. But the action fairly commenced, there was little manœuvring—it was hard fighting; the ships were laid alongside an enemy, and the valor of our sailors settled the matter. If the captain was disabled, the duty of his successor was simple and self-evident; if he were incompetent, his deficiencies could be made up by his principal officers; if he lacked courage, his men supplied the want. Nelson's genius had made all the necessary dispositions for battle both at the Nile and Trafalgar long before the action commenced; the captains had only to steer their ships for their allotted adversary and the rest was done by the crew. Had Nelson been killed by the first shot fired at Trafalgar, the issue of the battle would have been the same. But how different now! From the beginning to the end of an action rapid and constant manœuvring will be required; the ships must be kept firmly in hand and skilfully guided; all the best experience of the Admiral will be in continual request, and should he be killed or disabled at a critical moment, the consequences would probably be most serious. It is not too much to say that the result of a naval engagement in these days will depend entirely upon the skill of the superior officers, in default of which the courage and discipline of the crews will avail little.

DETAILED STATEMENT.

GUELPH, 29th September, 1877.

W. Reynolds, Esquire, County Treasurer,

DEAR SIR,—In reply to your application, sent in the name of the Warden of the County, for a detailed statement of the expenses of the Board of Examiners, I have the honor of submitting the following:—

In consequence of regulations affecting the granting of third-class certificates issued by the Education Department, the Board had to meet on the 14th September, 1876. At this meeting Messrs. Kilgour, Torrance, Fordyce, and McCaig were present.

On the 12th February, 1877, a meeting was held to consider a Bill introduced by Mr. Crooks to the Legislative Assembly, to amend the several Acts respecting the Education Department, Public and High Schools, and University of Toronto. At this meeting the same members were present, with the addition of Mr. Petrie.

Messrs. Kilgour, Torrance, and McCaig were engaged one day on a communication to Mr. Crooks, embodying the views of the Board on said Bill.

Messrs. Kilgour and McCaig, who had been appointed to wait upon the Warden, and look after the procuring of desks for the use of candidates for certificates, spent two days each in that service.

On the 9th of April a meeting of the Board was held to receive the report of Messrs. Kilgour and McCaig, and to consult about the place in which the examination in July should be held, and some other matters. At this meeting Messrs. McCaig, Kilgour, and Torrance were appointed to meet with the Board of Education, Guelph, and ascertain if the large hall in the Central School building could be procured, and, if so, on what terms.

Messrs. Kilgour, McCaig, and Torrance spent a day each in this service—Mr. Torrance not making any charge.

In fulfilment of an appointment made at this meeting, Mr. Torrance went to Berlin to see about the purchase of chairs for the use of candidates undergoing examination.

On the 5th May another meeting was held to receive a report of those appointed to procure a place for holding the examination, and agree upon regulations affecting the granting of third-class certificates. At this meeting Messrs. Kilgour, Torrance, Fordyce, McCaig and Petrie were present.

On the 6th July there was a meeting to examine the applications received from those intending to come forward for examination, occupying, with some other matters which had to be attended to, the entire day. All the members present.

On the 9th July the Board met for the examination of second-class candidates, and continued in session from that date till the 3rd August, making a total number of days 26 to each member, or in all 130 days.

But after the examination of third-class candidates began, which was on the 16th July, Messrs. Torrance, McCaig, Kilgour, and Petrie made double time on nine days, continuing on the answers of candidates from eight o'clock in the morning till ten at night, making 36 days.

In consequence of bodily health and duties to which he had to attend, Mr. Fordyce was able to give only two days of this extra time.

Aggregate number of days, 202; Aggregate number of days charged, 195: showing that the members did not put in their full claim by seven days.

Of the total aggregate

Mr Kilgour made	44 days, charged		42
Mr. Torrance,	42	"	41
Mr. Fordyce	33	"	33
Mr. McCaig	44	"	42
Mr. Petrie	39	"	37
	202		195

The members of the Board charging mileage are Mr. McCaig, living 10 miles from Guelph; Mr Fordyce, 13 miles; and Mr. Petrie, 6 miles. Mr. McCaig had to attend nine meetings of the Board, or in fulfilment of appointments he received previous to the meetings beginning on 9th July, that is, ten meetings; mileage for each, $1—for the whole $10.

Mr. Fordyce attended five meetings before those beginning on 9th July; mileage for each, $1.30—for the whole, $7.80.

Mr. Petrie attended four meetings before the 9th July; mileage for each, 60c.—for the whole $3.

With regard to officers' services—First. There were those of Mr. Edwards, who prepares the room for the Board when they meet in the Committee-room off the Council Chamber, their usual place of meeting, and does any other service they require—in winter lighting fires and such like,—the Board allowed him on this occasion only $5; in justice he was entitled to more.

Secondly. There were those of Samuel Barrett, at the Central School. These consisted in scrubbing out the hall, which was in the state in which it had been left by the painters, and which occupied him and his wife upwards of one day—carrying up and placing the chairs and desks, supplying with water for drinking, and removing the chairs and desks to the anterooms, and packing them away in the same, and cleaning out the hall after the examination was over, $5.

Besides these we had two lads to run messages when stationery or pens were required, to move through among the candidates, supplying them with paper when needed, and to carry water to those asking for it, as candidates are not allowed to leave the room after examination upon a subject has begun, until they have finished their paper. Each of these was engaged during the three days of the third-class examination, when there was such a crowd of candidates, and they were paid $1 per day—$6.

I have delayed so long in supplying the information the Warden requests, because I wished to see the other members of the Board upon the subject.

Trusting the above will prove satisfactory to the Warden,

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Yours truely,
JAMES KILGOUR.

HARRISTON.—Mr. C. Macpherson, principal of the public school, has been presented by a few of his pupils with a photograph of themselves and a complimentary address.——At the sale of thoroughbred stock held by Mr. James Moore, fair prices were realized. Cows ranged from $95 to $115; heifers, from $60 to $90; calves, from $40 to $60.——House accommodation is scarce in the village.——A Teachers' Association has been formed, and all teachers in the neighborhood have been invited to join.——The April fair was largely attended, and prices ranged from $3 to $4.50 per cent.——At the last Clifford cattle fair the beef ranged from 3½ to 4½ cents per pound, live weight. Oxen sold at from $90 to $100 per yoke.——The Moorefield Mills are to be rebuilt. $5,000 for that purpose have already been subscribed.

The German Emperor's letter to the Pope, while extremely courteous in the expression of willingness to entertain friendly relations with the Vatican, gives no indications of a basis for negotiations.

Quarterly Accounts.

We would remind our readers that our accounts for the quarter have been sent out, and that we expect prompt payment of the same. Our patrons know that we have adopted the system of the quarterly payment of accounts, and we expect that they will promptly and cheerfully conform to our rule.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

Revision of the Treaty of San Stefano Proposed.

RUSSIANS IN ROUMANIA.

Explanation Demanded by England.

GORTSCHAKOFF'S CIRCULAR.

LONDON, April 11.—It is stated that England proposes the revision of the Treaty of San Stefano by joint action of the Powers, provided Russia will first admit the authority of Europe to do so.

A Bucharest despatch says Roumania is being gradually occupied by Russians and Anti-Russians. The feeling is very bitter.

Col. Wellesley has gone to St. Petersburg, it is reported, for the purpose of demanding an explanation of the Russian movement of troops in Roumania. He also carries an ultimatum from the English Government to Russia, asking what circumstance may render it necessary for Loftus to submit to the Czar.

The circular of Gortschakoff and the accompanying memorandum is published in to-day's papers. Gortschakoff rejects the stipulations specified by England, as conditions of neutrality now extended to the whole treaty. Russia, he says, cannot submit the treaty of San Stefano, as affecting Russian interests to separate judgment dictated by separate interests. Conference could, however, deal with those interests, which the Powers specified as requiring mutual understanding.

Warlike Preparations Continue at Constantinople.

Gortschakoff Desires to Know England's Wishes.

LONDON, April 11.

The warlike preparations of the Russians and Turks about Constantinople still continue.

A Bucharest journal states that Prince Gortschakoff requested the Government to repress the bitter tone of the Roumanian press regarding Bessarabia and the two years' occupation of Bulgaria.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says Gortschakoff in his circular to the Ambassadors says, if Lord Salisbury will make known the British Government's wishes, the better an understanding of the situation can be reached.

FLOWERS AND PLANTS.—Noah Sunley has established a reputation for cultivating rare and excellent flowering plants, and he announces his determination to supply the public from his stand in the vegetable market shed, with plants at such low prices that all can afford to purchase. Inspection is invited.

MAPLE LEAFS.—The annual meeting of the Amateur Maple Leaf Base Ball Club was held at the Royal Hotel on Tuesday evening. Geo. Bookless, Vice-President, occupied the chair. The Secretary's report, which showed that there was a small deficiency, was adopted. It was resolved to rescind the constitution of last year, and adopt that of 1875, which provides that the club shall be under the management of a board of directors. The following directors were then elected: Geo. Sleeman, Geo. Bookless, Thos. Galer, John Henderson, John Mitchell. At a subsequent meeting the following officers were elected:—President and Manager, Geo. Sleeman; Vice-President, Geo. Bookless; Secretary-Treasurer, Alf. Burrows; Scorer, John Henderson. The club enters upon the season with an energetic, honorable, and painstaking management, and this fact in connection with Guelph having one of the best diamonds in America, will doubtless be the means of securing several of the best teams on the continent to visit here. The Amateur Maple Leafs will doubtless be a popular institution in Guelph during next season, and will be accorded a liberal support.

WHAT is this great treat that I have been reading about lately in the papers? is the all-absorbing question of everybody in town. We give the answer in a few words—It is the celebrated lecture on "Oliver Cromwell," to be delivered in Knox Church, to-night, by the Rev. T. W. Handford—the Gough of Canada. We would advise all our readers to go, and take their friends. The admission has been placed at the low figure of 15 cents, in order that all may take advantage of it. Everybody go. d1

Our display of feathers, which will be a remarkably fine one, will include the new and fashionable "Lady Roseberry," a correct fac simile of that worn by Miss Rothschilds at her recent marriage, and just now introduced into the New York market. A. O. Bucham.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

Sharp competition is the order of the day, among the first-class hotels in New York. With one or two exceptions, they are trying to keep their old trade while adhering to their previous high rates. The Grand Central has reaped much benefit from this, by quietly "cutting" the rates from one to two dollars per day. eod

600 parasols and sunshades, bought cheap, will be placed on sale at our opening to-morrow. Everybody should have one. A. O. Bucham.

PROLIFIC SHEEP.—A correspondent says that within the past fortnight five ewes, the property of George Ellington, lot 17, 11th concession, Erin, dropped fifteen lambs. Only two of the number have since died. More prolific sheep are seldom heard of.

SWALLOWS were seen skimming along Wyndham street this morning for the first time this season. Several persons who know nothing about ornithology, will doubtless now begin to propound the stale old conundrum:—"If one swallow should make a spring, how many would it require to make a fall?"

FOR MANITOBA.—The third company from this county left by the Great Western to-day for the Nor'-West. Among the party were Angus McLellan and Henry Fielding, of Erin; Peter Thompson, Samuel Gass, T. Ironside, Geo. Lawson and family of eight, of Eramosa. The tickets were purchased at F. Gauhan's office.

CASPER TAYLOR evidently did not see any sufficient reason why he could not drive his horse on the Macdonnell st. sidewalk the other day. The Police Magistrate opined that it was a contravention of a certain By-law in such cases made and provided, and imposed a fine of $1 and costs on him at the Police Court this morning.

JONES & GUTHRIE'S opening of millinery, mantles, &c., on Saturday, will be an event on Upper Wyndham street. The display will be rich and in every sense unique. The ladies of the town will certainly remember the opening and visit the house of fashion. A gas illumination in the evening.

A MILLINERY AND MANTLE OPENING will take place at A. O. Bucham's fashionable West End store, Upper Wyndham street, to-morrow at ten o'clock, a.m. The stock by that time will be in magnificent shape, and visitors can have the pleasure of thoroughly inspecting the various goods at the greatest advantage. Mr. Bucham has long been noted for holding a front position in the line of "openings," and this fact will draw a very large crowd to-morrow morning.

CURIOUS.—A friend has shown us the following verbatim et literatim copy of a letter which was found by him the other day:—

"DEAR SON,—I received your kind and welcom letter I am glad to that you are well as this leaves us at present. If you see John A. Macdonald he stole Mik Flaherty's cloths and all the money he had you need not say anything about it when you come. No more," &c.

We wonder if this charge against Sir John will come to light this session.

GUELPH PRESBYTERY.—The following portion of the report of the Presbytery meeting was accidentally left out of yesterday's issue:—Application was made from the congregation at Hawksville for supply of sermon, and a promise was made of $250 per annum towards salary. A communication was read from the congregation at Elmira, stating that in consequence of the death of their pastor, and other circumstances, they had resolved to close the door of their church for the present. Dr. Vardon was heard in support of the application from Hawksville. After deliberation, it was agreed that the clerk endeavor to procure the services of a student to labor at Hawksville and Elmira during the summer months. A committee was appointed to visit Hawksville, Elmira, Glenallan, Hollin, Drayton, Moorefield and Rothsay, and confer with all interested, with a view to secure, if possible, a more advantageous arrangement of the field.

The total increase for six months had been 33, The profit derived from convict labor in the Penitentaries has not been very great. For the year ending 30th June, 1877, $7,696.36 had been spent for raw material, while the receipts were $14,189.60. For the last five years the outlay has been $42,005.47, and the receipts $76,345.76.

The Detroit News has the following:—Wonder if it was some of O'Donovan Rossa's dynamite that killed the Earl of Leitrim? It would not be out of his line to inveigle some of his poor dupes into such a crime, but there is little danger of his own skin in any danger. He is announced to lecture in this city within a few days, and the intelligent and Christian Irishmen of Detroit should take the opportunity of giving him the coldest sort of a cold shoulder, and thus putting themselves on record as disapproving his "skirmishing" project, which, if he means what he professes, is murder, and, if he does not, is a miserable swindle. In either case, the Irishmen of Detroit owe it to themselves as Christians, good citizens, and sane men to give the fellow no countenance.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 10.

Mr. Laflamme introduced a Bill to amend the Elections Act, which he explained. The changes were of minor importance, but nevertheless in the direction of additional security for honest voting.

In reply to Mr. Schultz, Mr. Mills said that 46 of the chiefs and head men of the Blackfeet Indians, under the treaty last season, were presented with Winchester rifles and 400 pounds of ammunition, and that the Government has had communication with the Imperial Government with regard to the acquisition of unceded territory east of Keewatin and north of Ontario and Quebec, but without result so far.

In reply to a motion of Mr. Macdougall, of Renfrew, for Orders in Council fixing the route of the extension of the Canada Central Railway and of the Georgian Bay Branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Mr. Mackenzie said he expected within a few days to lay before the House an Order in Council with reference to the extension of the Canada Central in order to move its approval, when he would state his reasons for a different Order in Council from that which assigned the subsidy to the Canada Central for the extension of the Bonnechere line. For the present it would be inadvisable to discuss the merits of that route as compared with any other. The motion was withdrawn.

Dr. Tupper, in the absence of Mr. McCarthy, moved for a statement with regard to the loan of 1876. He entered upon a criticism of that transaction very similar to his previous efforts on the same subject, and remarked that the Finance Minister should not have taken the unqualified advice of the agents of the Government in England, which former Governments took with reserve.

Mr. Cartwright defended the loan, and expressed surprise that any one who had watched the course of the European money markets during the last eighteen months should find fault with it.

With regard to the insinuation that our agents in London were likely to give interested advice because they had invested in Canadian securities, he stated that the rate of the loan had been fixed before they had been asked to subscribe, and that they had done so only at his instance and desire. He dwelt on the unfavorable circumstances in which the loan was negotiated, and entered into a calculation to show that the loan at a discount was more advantageous than it would have been if at a premium.

A Bill introduced by Mr. Kirkpatrick to make a defendant and the wife or husband of defendant compellable witnesses in certain cases of misdemeanor passed its second reading.

MR. A. O. BUCHAM sent us this morning a handsome photo by Mora the celebrated New Yorkartist of the Modjeska hat' which he says is at present all the rage in that city. It our opinion--and does not a reporter know something about hats? it is a very pretty and stylish looking hat.—We would certainly recommend our lady friends to visit Mr. Bucham's grand opening to-morrow. In fact there is reason why every lady in town should not attend as Mr. Bucham positively announces that all will be cordially welcomed whether they want to buy or not.

G. C. L. AND D. S.—The regular semi-monthly meeting of the above Society held last evening in the Study Hall of St. Ignatius College, was, as usual, well attended. An excellent programme of literary exercises was carried out, among which was an extempore debate in which the following members participated very creditably: Messrs. S. Heffernan, J. J. Hazelton, J. Gough, T. Howard, J. C. Coffee, J. Green, J. L. Murphy, and J. Mays, jr. Mr. Jos. Harris presented the regular monthly edition of "The Literary Review." It was spicy and instructive, and well worthy of the applause the editor received on resuming his seat. Mr. John Hayden acted as chairman of the literary exercises and conducted the proceedings very ably. Arrangements are completed for the production of a drama entitled 'The Hidden Gem,' sometime in May. It is a grand play and we feel certain it will be very successful.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATE.—The regular weekly meeting of the Law Students' Society was held on Tuesday evening. After the ordinary business, the subject for debate was taken up, "Would it be advisable to extend the franchise to women?" Messrs. T. Ede and R. Maclean supported the affirmative, and Messrs. J. W. Binkley and J. A. Mowat the negative. It was contended for the affirmative, that women had, by their daring in the past, proved themselves equal to men in courage; that by their writings, and the encouragement they received from the universities to undertake the higher branches of learning, were equal in intelligence to those on the sterner side of humanity; and that, if the franchise were extended to them, a change would arise in our political discussions; the result of which would be that the coarseness and excitement, which so often mars the present state of affairs, would disappear. The negative contended that the family circle was woman's proper sphere, and there she should cultivate all the refinements, and, becoming acquainted with the topics of the day, use them for the benefit of her family; and care should be taken to keep her clear of all the excitement of political life. That the few women who have become notorious for advocating this proposed reform for their sex, were not generally supported by the rest, and that the franchise was desired by no reasonable woman. The chairman decided in favour of the negative.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

AUSTRIA BACKING UP BRITAIN.

Britain asked to Formulate Her Proposals.

Affairs Still in an Uncertain State.

LONDON, April 10.

The Times says the discussion in Parliament tended to clear the obscurities of a perilous situation and brought the prospect of peace nearer than before. The debate, however, has not the same reassuring effect abroad. The speeches of Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury are thought at Vienna to point to the probability of war, and to hold out small hope of a Congress.

The Times, while doing justice to the spirit by which it presumes Gortschakoff's arguments are directed, maintains that whatever their value a Congress of the Powers alone is competent to determine their validity.

The pacific and argumentative tone of the Russian reply to Lord Salisbury's circular is recognized with satisfaction by the London papers as giving hopes of finding an arrangement by negotiations.

A Berlin despatch says:—In spite of denials, four of the finest steamers of the Hamburg-American packet line have been engaged by the British Government.

A Pera despatch states that 14,000 Russians are sick from San Stefano to Adrianople. Nearly half with typhus.

A Constantinople special states that the Grand Duke continues to demand the forts on the upper Bosphorus.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs:—The horizon is again overcast. The change is attributed to the speeches in the British Parliament, to the consequent alteration in the attitude of the Austrian Cabinet, and the apparent hesitation of Germany to act as a mediator. It is believed in official circles that some of Lord Salisbury's remarks on Monday indicate an intention of of going to war.

The Agence Russe states that a short circular accompanying Gortschakoff's reply invites England to formulate her proposals. A Vienna correspondent remarks:—This seems to point to an intention of trying to come to a separate understanding with England, as was attempted with Austria.

A Constantinople special states that Mr. Layard has succeeded in paralyzing for the present Russia's endeavours to obtain the friendship of the Porte.

It is announced that a review of twenty thousand Turkish troops will be held near Constantinople on Thursday. It is stated that Hobart Pasha has obtained a short leave of absence for the purpose of visiting England.

A Bucharest despatch says:—Russian troops, especially artillery, have arrived at various places on the Roumanian bank of the Danube. They have entered Fratest and command the railway station at Guirgevo. They have also occupied important positions on the Nyashlov River.

The Berlin Post says:—Austrian agents have informed their Government that Russia promised Bosnia to Servia in the event of a renewal of hostilities. This news has produced a bad impression at Vienna.

THE KEITH ABDUCTION CASE.—In reference to this case, it is believed that the children were taken across Lake Ontario in a small boat, landing at Wilson county. At this point the father, who had followed, lost track of them, but he is of opinion that their mother placed them in the college of "Our Lady of Angels," at Suspension Bridge. The father went to the institution and demanded his children, but his request was not granted, and on Monday last application was made by Mr. T. E. Ellsworth, the counsel for Mr. Keith, before Judge Bowen at Lockport, for the custody of his boys. A writ of habeas corpus was issued by the court, requiring the authorities at the Seminary to produce the children alleged to be in their possession. Father Driscol, of the College, has filed a return through Mr. C. E. Davis, denying that he has Mr. Keith's children in charge, or ever had. Mr. Ellsworth has commenced proceedings upon this issue to obtain the children.

FIRE NEAR BRUSSELS.—A destructive fire occurred on the farm of Joseph Coombs, lot 9, 1st con., Grey, on Wednesday morning about four o'clock, resulting in the destruction of his large barns and stables, two span of horses, one yoke of oxen, a new buggy and harness, costing nearly $300, three hundred bushels of wheat, 350 bushels of oats, besides peas, barley, &c., &c., also twenty-two sheep and thirteen lambs. His loss is estimated at over $3,000. The fire was evidentally the work of an incendiary.

BIG MEN.—On fair day, says the New Hamburg Independent, four gentlemen belonging to this town and its vicinity were placed upon the weigh scales, when it was ascertained that their combined weight amounted to 1,142 lbs., or an average of 285½ lbs each. Their names and individual weight is as follows:—John Rau 327 lbs.; John Stauffer, 284; Francis E. Tye, 282, and Mr. Englehart, 249.

THE LEITRIM TRAGEDY.—The Earl of Leitrim, was buried in St. Michael's Church Dublin, on Tuesday. A crowd of about 300 hissed, hooted, and cheered outside the church. The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has proclaimed the district comprising Lord Leitrim's Donegal estates under the Peace Preservation Act.

A SURPRISE.—On Friday evening Mr. Burdette, of Aberfoyle, was surprised to have a visit from a number of his friends from that village and Moffat, both being appointments which that gentleman fills as local preacher in the M. E. churches. The visitors comprised both ladies and gentlemen, and with them they carried baskets of provisions and delicacies. After some time had been spent in social enjoyment the ladies of the party spread the tables, and all partook heartily of a sumptuous repast. Mr. Mason, on behalf of those present, presented Mr. Burdette with a purse containing $17, at the same time expressing to him the high esteem in which he was held by them. The recipient feelingly replied. This is the second token of esteem he has received since he has resided in Aberfoyle. The gathering broke up with singing and prayer after a very social evening had been spent.

On Thursday a detective from Detroit was in Montreal to make a search after a Detroit bank teller, who has absconded with about $10,000. Two gentlemen were arrested, but were soon liberated, as they could not be identified.

Plain Talk on a Threadbare Subject.

The rocket of Protection, fired by the Conservative leaders, in the expectation that it would astonish the natives, and carry the position, has already expended its force, and leaves nothing but its falling stick to tell of its short existence. It reached its height in 1877, made a brief blaze, and is already rapidly fading out. It no longer dazzles the selfish, nor has it charms for other than the most gullible. The working man sees it is but a phantom; the farmer was never attracted by its brilliant nothingness. For a moment it promised to answer the purpose of its promoters, by raising a pyrotechnic display which would temporarily fill the gaze, and divert attention from the Pacific Railway Scandal, the Secret Service absorption, the Northern Railway douceur, and the thousand and one peccadilloes of the Moylan stripe. But the hope was vain. Weak powder was put in to a bad case, and the thing was a fizzle. The vote in the House of Commons on Monday last was the practical end of the affair. When a direct resolution, stripped of vague generalities, was put before the Dominion Parliament, only 28 members were found willing to record their names in favor of what some have termed Agricultural Protection, and of these scarcely any were farmers. On the other hand, 148 voted against this proposition to tax wheat and flour. On Tuesday another motion, seeking to impose a duty on oats and corn was negatived by a vote of 114 to 54. And so will it be with any clearly defined attempt to raise our tariff in favor of any particular class, or to levy duties simply for what is known as protection purposes. The common sense of the people, and of their representatives, is, after all, superior to mere party cries, when a vital principle is at stake, and it requires no prophetic skill to be able to predict that the day will never come when wide-awake Canadians will abandon a safe, and not too burdensome fiscal policy, for the flighty suggestions prompted by the delusive dreams of a worn-out political debauchee.

The more fully the question of Protection is considered, the more plainly are its absurdities revealed, and the more inapplicable to the circumstances of Canada is it found to be. What is Protection? It signifies prevention or restraint of competition, and it is urged that this is necessary to the success of struggling industries, or infant manufactures, and the establishment of a home market for home productions. This we are told is to be brought about by such an enhancement of price as shall ensure to the producer a liberal profit upon his investment of capital. To secure a higher price than ordinarily paid,—and protection means this or is meaningless—such a rate of duty is to be imposed as shall, to a certain extent, if not altogether, prove prohibitory to the introduction of foreign goods. And in the case of protection to manufactures, such a state of things ends in the increased taxation to one, and much the larger portion of the community, for the benefit of the other and necessarily much smaller portion. Were this Protection extended to all ranks and conditions of men, nobody would be protected, and we should end where we began. If by a general system of protection, it became possible to raise the price of everything, there would be no special benefit to anybody, and we should be in the end as in the beginning. The manufacturer would pay more for everything which he used, as would the farmer, the mechanic, the merchant and the professional, and there would be no actual gain to anybody. Peter everywhere would be robbed to pay Paul, and Paul, in turn, would be fleeced to pay Peter. Experience has proved the fallacy of such an idea and never has a tariff been so framed, nor is it possible to so frame a tariff, as to make it practicable, and if practicable, it would not be desirable. For instance, you may temporarily protect the Canadian manufacturer, but you cannot protect the Canadian farmer. By prohibiting the importation of foreign goods, you may, for a short time, increase the cost of home-made goods and so put a profit into the pockets of the makers of them. That does not increase the value of the farmer's products, in the bulk, and a bushel of wheat will not buy so much as before. A few more manufacturers might, or might not, add to the population of the country by the importation of skilled workmen, but the purchasing or consuming power of the artizan class would be but slightly increased. Despite all the consumption proceeding from the most favorable increase of population, the agricultural products of Canada would still furnish a surplus which must find a market in other countries, and the prices there would determine the prices here. For a century that has been the experience of the United States: for a century it will be ours, and no hedging in of our country, with a high tariff upon the agricultural products of other countries, will produce any other result. New lands will be constantly broken up, and the products of the soil will increase more rapidly than the consumer.

It is impossible, then, as we have said, to protect the farmer, and however much we may tinker tariffs with that end in view, our efforts will be useless. In the United States, the agriculturist is "protected" by a tariff of an almost prohibitory character, but high duties have not given him high prices, and our farming friends cannot expect legislation to do for them what it has failed to effect for him. Nor can the manufacturer be continuously protected even by a tariff excluding the goods of other nations. For a short time the imposition of partially or totally prohibitory duties gives him exceptional profits upon his investments, if they have been made with ordinary judgment. But the success of one man stimulates the love of gain in others, and the competition which has been excluded from without comes from within, and there is a new verification of the time-worn adage, that "too many cooks spoil the broth." The United States have afforded numerous illustrations of this certain result, for over-production, closed factories, wasted capital and depreciated stocks on the shelves of merchants, followed by ruin and disaster, have there inevitably succeeded every fresh attempt at protection. With such facts before their eyes, is it any wonder that our legislators have voted down Protectionist motions by such large majorities?

The latest report is that Mr. Thomas White will run for the County of Missisquoi, where he has been living for some time and getting acquainted with the people. The country is thoroughly Tory and regarded as a "safe" constituency.

The trick resorted to to kill off Mr. Highbotham's vote on Mr. Brown's motion for imposing a duty on wheat and flour, is generally condemned. Mr. Caron, one of the Tory whips, without his consent, paired him off with Mr. White, of Hastings.

The Prince Edward Island Patriot says that the Examiner—the Tory organ in that Province—in order to justify Mr. Pope in voting with the Protectionists for a Protectionist resolution, has not scrupled to declare that the Premier is a Protectionist. Possessing no evidence of the truth of this statement the Examiner has been obliged to manufacture the facts with which to prove its assertions." All of which goes to show to what extremities the Opposition will resort to to gain their purpose.

Says the Hamilton Times:—"It is worthy of note that no farmer in the House either spoke or voted for the proposed duty on farm products. Those of them who did speak spoke against it. Their interests were taken charge of by lawyers, doctors and brewers. It is also worthy of note that the leading manufacturers of the country have the least to say on behalf of the 'national policy.' The national policy has, in fact, for its chief advocates and upholders, the professional politicians and wire-pullers of the Tory party, who are using it as a cry with which to cover up the old and bad record of Sir John Macdonald when in power."

In the Public Accounts Committee Mr. Dymond was blamed by the Opposition for bringing in a report on the Moylan case before Mr. Macdougall's evidence was heard. And yet, on Tuesday, they voted for Mr. Plumb's report, whitewashing Moylan and Sir John, when they knew that Mr. F. Macdonald, who is the brother and executor of the late Mr. Sandfield Macdonald, and has his papers, and who wishes to give evidence about an account from Mr. Moylan for $600, recently found among them, together with the letter of certification, written by Sir John Macdonald to Sandfield. The account, it is stated, is for printing quarantine regulations in Moylan's paper in Toronto, though it had no circulation whatever at points where the regulations were to have effect.

A determined effort is being made in the Senate to diminish the powers and stringency of the Liquor Restrictive Bill. In view of the exceptional character of the measure and the powerful and wealthy organization by which all such legislation is strenuously resisted, its advocates have good reason for satisfaction at their success thus far. The Bill proposes to take away the right to remove convictions by writ of certiorari to a superior Court. This, on a motion for concurrence in the report of the Committee of the Whole to day, was struck out by a majority of one. It is quite possible that Mr. Scott may move to rescind it.

Mr. Bechard's motion for a duty on coarse grains was voted down by a majority of over two to one, the vote being 54 for it, and 114 against. No other result was expected. As each item in the so-called "national policy" comes up, the national policy party are shown to be at daggers' points against each other.

Arrangements are being made for publishing a large a edition of Mr. Bain's excellent speech on Agricultural Protection.

Our unique and handsome display of lace goods at our opening to-morrow will undoubtedly be one of the great points of attraction. A. O. Bucham.

GRAND OPENING

—OF OUR—

Millinery and Mantle Show Rooms

On Friday next, 12th Instant,

AT 10 A. M.

Rare Treat in Store for the Ladies.

Magnificent Display of New Goods.

A. O. BUCHAM

Intimates to the ladies of the town of Guelph and surrounding country that on Friday next, 12th instant, at 10 a. m., he will open his Millinery and Mantle Show Rooms for the season, with a magnificent and gorgeous display of new and fashionable goods, representing the very latest productions of the English, French, and American markets. We will also make a grand Special show of which we know every lady will be delighted to see.

We believe our grand special effort will surpass in chaste and beautiful conception anything ever before attempted in the town of Guelph. These special efforts are the result of a great deal of labour, and while it is done to a certain extent to please the ladies, it is also done for the purpose of showing our ability to cater to their wants. We were never in a better position to make a fine display than we are at present.

Our Stock Throughout is New and Fresh.

We have no old goods to show, and would not show them if we had. We have also reorganized our staff of hands, and we believe we have to-day the best staff of gentlemen and young lady assistants to be found anywhere in the trade. We ask the ladies of Guelph to visit us en masse on Friday next. We shall prepare an exhibition worthy of inspection, and those who remain away will surely be dissappointed.

We will also take the opportunity of showing on the same day our entire stock of

including a special line for Mantles, at $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, and $2, the best value ever seen in town. Also a recent advantageous purchase of over which every lady should see.

600 PARASOLS AND SUNSHADES

☞ The whole community is invited to visit our establishment on Friday next.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

Acknowledge with feelings of pride the great courtesy extended to them by the ladies of Town and County on the OPENING of their MILLINERY SHOW ROOMS YESTERDAY. The immense concourse of ladies that thronged our establishment yesterday exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and the tone of admiration exhibited by the excellent taste of Town and Country ladies in praise of the exquisite taste displayed by the lady milliner artists of Paris, France, which we had on exhibition, is most flattering to our taste in bringing such excellent goods to Guelph.

We beg to say to the ladies of Guelph and its surroundings, that we have engaged this season as lady artist in millinery, Miss Smith, whose artistic skill in the profession is unsurpassed in any of the cities in the Dominion, and whose obliging manner wins for her the confidence and esteem of ladies of the highest rank and taste.

We confidently solicit the patronage of all who are in quest of the leading styles in millinery, which will be placed at exceedingly cheap prices this season in particular.

Ladies' Costumes and Silk Jackets

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE BITTERNESS OF DESOLATION.

When Lizzie ascended to her sleeping chamber on the evening of the first day she had spent on the island she found that it had been made much more comfortable than on her first acquaintance with it. It had been thoroughly aired, dusted and swept, the floor had been washed, the cobwebs removed from walls and ceiling, fresh blankets and bedding placed on the couch, and—most acceptable improvement of all—the two windows cleaned inside and out letting the light stream freely in, and giving an unobscured view of the loch and the mountains beyond.

All this work, which had given the apartment a brighter and more cheerful look, had been done by Mother Barnacle a fact which the latter was not slow to proclaim, accompanying the announcement with the intimation, bluntly expressed, that, now it had been made tidy, Lizzie would require to keep it in order for the future.

"And I'm sure you ought to feel comfortable in it," added Mother Barnacle, surveying the chamber with a look of self-satisfaction. "It's dry and it's warm, leastways when the fire burns up, and that's as nice an outlook as any one could desire to have. I'm sure you didn't have such a one where you came from."

"Where I was brought from, you mean?" returned Lizzie with studied emphasis.

"Oh, well, come or brought, it's all the same, ain't it?"

"Indeed, it is not," was the tearful reply. "Had I come here of my own free will, and was my stay voluntary, I could feel delight in the beauty of the place, but no prison, however beautiful, can be other than a place of gloom to a captive."

"Well, I'm sure it ain't much of a prison. Joe and I have been here for more nor two years, and we don't feel it lonely a bit. He has work and amusement enough in the garden, and what with the cow, the fowls, and the pig out of doors, and looking after those inside—I mean making food and such like things—I have enough to do to keep me from wearying."

"Ah, but there's a mighty difference between you and me," answered Lizzie, with a sigh. "You are not kept here by force; you have not been separated from one you love as I have. Oh, to me it is misery—unmitigated misery."

"No, it ain't; it might have been worse. You have the child beside you, and that's more than everyone can say, as you may soon find out."

"What mean you?" cried Lizzie, with sudden terror, and a tight clutching of Alfred to her bosom. "They do not mean—oh, say they do not mean to take my child from me! They promised not to do it, if Harold did nothing. If he is taken from me I shall go mad."

"Bless the girl! Who's talking of taking the child? Nobody is thinking of doing so as far as I know. I only meant to say that every mother isn't so fortunate, as you may find out ere long."

"My child is my only comfort. But for him my heart would break; but for him I would die," wailed Lizzie, still unassured. "Oh, my precious darling, if they take you away they take my life with you."

"Don't talk on in such a way for nothing," said Mother Barnacle, rather impatient of the wild terror she had unintentionally caused. "No one means to separate you and the child, I give you my sacred word for it. There, look yonder; if that mischief of a pig hasn't got among the cabbage beds, drat it."

This sight, which caught the eye from one of the newly cleaned windows caused Mother Barnacle to hurry off with ireful feelings. It was not for some hours that Lizzie was able to stay the terrified beating of her heart, which the most distant allusion to the loss of the infant invariably produced. In this instance, however, the fear which had been raised in her bosom was groundless, since the woman's words had no reference whatever to such an intention. What they did refer to, Lizzie was able to understand later.

Next day she had not forgot the vision of a woman's face at the upper window, and on issuing forth did not fail to cast repeated glances towards the casement where she imagined she had for a brief moment seen it. She sauntered to and fro on a level piece of greensward, whence she had a full view of that side of the Castle. But her watching was in vain, and she gradually came to the conclusion that it must have been fancy. But why, she wondered, could that particular window be so clean and bright as compared with the others. While they were all dull and dirty as hers had been on the previous day, it was clear of all obscurity, and wore an inhabitable aspect. She was pretty sure that neither Mother Barnacle nor Joe would sleep at such an elevation—indeed, she had reason to believe that their bedchamber was in the vicinity of the kitchen. Still, it was possible that upper room might be used by them for some particular purpose—perhaps as a place of outlook.

"Yes, that must be it," said Lizzie to herself, satisfied at last that she had hit on the truth, and, as it was really a feasible solution of the problem, she proceeded on her walk, her thoughts speedily reverting to her own sad situation.

This engaged she wandered on, marking not the shadow of a dim cloud which darkened the air, until rain began to fall heavily. Then awaking to the reality of things she looked about for a place in which to shelter. She was on the most open part of the island, where for a long distance there were only low bushes which could afford her no "beild." She looked this way and that, uncertain which path to take. Meanwhile a heavy drenching shower descended, from which her thin garments gave no protection either to Alfred or herself. With the unselfishness of a mother's love, she covered her child in her dress as far as she was able, and hurried back to the Castle.

When they arrived there both were wet to the skin, and a dilemma at once presented itself: they where absolutely without a change of garments. Mother Barnacle met them in the kitchen, and to her Lizzie communicated this unpleasant fact.

Montreal Cattle Market.

MONTREAL, April 9.

There were over sixty head of milch cows offered at the market to-day, but none of them were of extra quality, and not over half a dozen were even ordinary good cows. A few of the best cows sold at from $35 to $40 each, but the general price was from $25 to $30 each. A very large number, if sold at all to-day, will not bring much over $20 each. Calves were abundant, but chiefly of inferior quality, and were sold at from $1 to $5 each. Spring lambs were in fair supply, and brought from $2 to $4 each. There were a few dry cows offered as beef critters, but they did not seem to be much sought after by butchers.

Harriston Correspondence.

The merchants here have received their spring and summer stock of goods and are prepared for any amount of business. The new firm of Michie & Hall, successors to Alex. Meiklejohn & Co., have made a great display and announce great bargains at the brick block. Mr. Meiklejohn having retired from the general store is now devoting his whole time to the hardware business, which he purposes carrying on in a manner that will successfully cater to the wants of the country.

Considerable improvement is going on in the way of fencing, gardens and fixing gardens, which give the place an improved appearance. [3482

Mr. H. Prittie, of Prittie & Smith, Toronto, was at the Royal Hotel here on Tuesday of last week for the purpose of meeting parties desirous of removing to the North-west and to lay before them the plan of settlement, &c. It is said quite a number availed themselves of the opportunity of conferring with Mr. Prittie.

The exceedingly fine weather of the past few days is said to have a very desirable effect on the fall wheat. The warm sun during the day and the absence of heavy frost at night has prevailed so far. A continuance of which will tend to bring a bountiful harvest.

An error appeared in your last with regard to the doctor who addressed Mr. Maitland; it should have read Dr. Cowan and not Dr. Harvey as stated

The farmers of Minto have been taking advantage of the good weather by getting their ploughing done, it is said to be the earliest spring ploughing on record in Minto.

The trial of the young men Chamberlin and Bird, who were arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in the breaking open of the safe of the Western station, was concluded here on Thursday last before the following Bench of magistrates:—Messrs. Thomas Robinson, Samuel Robertson, John Prain, and Thos McDowell, and resulted in the acquittal of the young men, there being no evidence to show that they were in any way connected with the affair. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Little, the Company's Solicitor, and the defence by Messrs. Hatton and Ettles, of Harriston.

The congregation of Knox Church here have decided to give a call to the Rev. John Anderson, of Tiverton. Mr. Anderson is a gentleman of excellent parts and ability, and will make a desirable pastor.

The boot and shoe store of Wm. Holman was broken into on Saturday night last. It is not definitely known the extent of the robbery, as only two pair of boots are missed though more may have been taken.

Knox Church was duly dedicated on Sabbath the 7th of April. The Rev. Professor Cayen preached at 10.30 a.m. in English immediately after which the Rev. George McLennan preached in Gaelic. The Rev. George McLennan preached in English at 3 p.m. and the Rev. Professor Cayen again at 7 p.m. The church was well filled on each occasion and the sermons were very impressive and appropriate. The evening service especially was largely attended. Guthrie and the W. M. Church dispensed with service and an immense crowd gathered, so much so that notwithstanding the good capacity of the building many were unable to obtain seats. A tea meeting was held in the basement on Monday, which was served in a most excellent style and reflects much credit on the Ladies of the church. The tables were ready at 5 p.m. from which time people began to assemble in large numbers till 7 o'clock, after which an adjournment was made to the church to hear the intellectual part, which was begun by the Rev. Mr. Fraser, of Mount Forest, taking the chair, which position he filled with efficiency. Splendid addresses were delivered by the Revs. Messrs. Stewart, of Arthur; Cameron, of Palmerston; McLennan, of Underwood; Gundy and Baikie, of Harriston. The music furnished by the choirs of the Methodist, Guthrie, and, Knox churches was excellent. The Yule Brothers, who have become welcome visitors to Harriston, as youthful vocalists, were as usually deservedly received with applause. The sum realized by the Sabbath collections, proceeds of tea, etc., amounted to about $500. The affair throughout was a great success, and bids fair for the future of the church. The proceedings were closed about 10:30 p.m., by singing the doxology and pronouncing the benediction.

An attempt was made to break into Eaken Bros', grocery on Sabbath night, but no mischief further than the breaking of a window at the back was noticable.

The saw mill, together with about ten thousand dollars worth of lumber, was totally destroyed by fire on Sunday last. There being no insurance the loss is a very serious one. Up to the time of writing no particulars, as to the cause of the fire, have been elicited.

CLIFFORD.—This place, which has, of late years, remained in a state of comparative retrogression, seems to have wakened from her lethergy and once more donned a spirit of enterprise, which will much improve its appearance and redound, in a great measure to its benefit. Geo. Macdonald, the respected Reeve of Clifford, has just completed the stone work of a new building on the former site of his hotel, which was burnt, on which he purposes erecting a three story brick building, which will have a frontage of one hundred feet on each street. Mr. Donald McEachren, merchant, and John Hilhouse, tinsmith, are also engaged in the erection of a brick building on the premises on which D. Mollison's store formerly stood. It is to be hoped this enterprise on the part of those men will prove a commercial success. John Feather, of the Clifford House, is at present on a trip to England and France. He purposes being home about the 24th of May. D. Mollison, who has, for a number of years, carried on the mercantile business, has removed to Newbridge, to embark in the same business there.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. DR. WM. GRAY'S SPECIFIC MEDICINE

The Great English Remedy is especially recommended as an unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhœa, Impotency and all diseases that follow as a consequence of Self Abus as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to INSANITY OR CONSUMPTION and a PREMATURE GRAVE, all of which, as a rule, are first caused by deviating from the path of nature, and over indulgence.

The Specific Medicine is the result of a life study and many years of experience in treating those special diseases. Pamphlet free by mail.

The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or Six Packages for $5, or will be sent by mail on receipt of the money by addressing DR. WM. GRAY & CO., Windsor Ont.

A RARE CHANCE

To obtain a First Class Farm.

THERE WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC auction, unless previously disposed of by private contract, at the Market House, Guelph,

On Saturday, 20th day of April, 1878

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the Harbottle Farm, being all that valuable freehold farm, consisting of lot No. 9, in the 6th concession, west of the Grand River, in the Township of Pilkington, containing 184½ acres, more or less. There are about 108 acres cleared and well fenced, and the remainming 10 acres are well timbered. The soil is about half clay loam, and the rest is somewhat lighter, but excellent, all in good cultivation. About 20 acres have been ploughed last fall. The orchard consists of about 4 acres of fruit trees. There are erected on the lot a good stone house 22 x 28, one story and a-half high ; a good barn, driving house, and other outhouses. The farm is watered by a well on the premises, and a spring, and is situated about 5 miles from Elora, 18 miles from Guelph, and is readily accessible by good roads. It is conveniently situated as regards schools and churches. This presents a rare opportunity of obtaining an excellent farm in one of the best farming neighbourhoods in the County of Wellington. Possession will be given at once on completion of sale. Title good.

There will also be sold at same time and place all the right, title and interest of the vendor, 25 acres near above mentioned lot, being the north east half of the north east-half of lot No. 3, in the 5th concession of Pilkington, about half of which is covered with good cedar for rails; the other half is timbered with elm and hemlock—very fine building timber. Title good, and possession at once. For terms of sale and other particulars, apply to

FRIDAY EVN'G, APRIL 12, 1878.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

THE POWERS NOT YET AGREED.

STILL HOPE OF A SETTLEMENT.

Possible Preliminary Conference of Ambassadors.

April 11.

For the protection of ships in the Mediterranean from torpedoes, a number of steam launches have been sent to Ismid and other stations. A number of torpedo boats were sent to the Mediterranean yesterday.

In the House of Commons to-day the First Lord of the Admiralty stated that he believed no troops had landed on the island of Tenedos. This disagrees with the report that the Turkish authorities asked the Porte for instructions in view of the disembarkation of British marines.

News from Cettinje says :—The districts in Albania, on the sea coast and the Boyana River, occupied by the Montenegrins have been so ravaged by the war that the inhabitants are starving.

Prince Gortschakoff's circular to the Ambassadors, accompanying his reply to Lord Salisbury's circular, regrets that the latter, besides criticising the treaty, did not say what the British Government desire. He believes if Lord Salisbury will make known their wishes a better understanding of the situation may be reached. As to the Congress, the circular says Russia can only reiterate her declaration that each Power, Russia included, would have full liberty of appreciation and of action.

A Berlin despatch states that there is active competition between Russia and England in chartering steamers at German ports. Two steamers chartered by Russia left Hamburg with sealed orders.

A corrrespondent at St. Petersburg says: —Notwithstanding the gloomy view of the leading Russian newspapers, it is believed in official circles that a Congress will shortly meet. This correspondent adds that he has reason to believe that this conviction has a pretty solid foundation. Germany has not abandoned her intention of using her influence in favor of peace.

A Vienna special says:—The Porte asked Austria what would happen if Russia insisted on enforcing the Treaty of San Stefano. Austria replied that she would not protect European interests single-handed, but would protect her own interests most efficiently.

The defensive works near Constantinople are being carried on with great energy. The Turkish authorities at the Island of Tenedos have requested instructions from the Porte in view of the disembarkation of British marines to guard the depot of war materials.

A San Stefano special says:—The Grand Duke Nicholas and Generals Gourko, Skobelef, Nekopoitchitzky, Shouvaroff, and Levitzky, with a large staff, and escort of fifty cavalry, yesterday visited the principal defensive works lately commenced by the Turks between San Stefano and Constantinople, and then embarked on the Imperial yacht for the city. The erection of these defences caused great indignation, and the Grand Duke obtained an order to stop it.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

Warlike Feeling in Vienna

Russia Unable to Float a Loan

LONDON, April 12.

A Vienna despatch says :—New Free Press declares that Austria cannot accept the Treaty of San Stefano, which, it says, would be equivalent to abdicating Austria's rights. A despatch to St. Petersburg says a warlike feelings still prevails in this city.

A St. Petersburg despatch says that the Journal de St. Petersburg, in a leading article to-day, assumes a less defiant tone. It says that if the great Powers will frame a compromise that can be honorably accepted in Russian interests, Russia will modify the Treaty.

Advices from European capitals state that the efforts of Russia to float a new loan have proved an absolute failure.

Bond & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

Sharp competition is the order of the day, among the first-class hotels in New York. With one or two exceptions, they are trying to keep their old trade while adhering to their previous high rates. The Grand Central has reaped much benefit from this, by quietly "cutting" the rates from one to two dollars per day. eod

THE Fortnightly Review for March, edited by John Morley, has been received. Nothing need be said of the ability which is displayed throughout all the writings in this journal. The contents are : Equality, by Matthew Arnold ; A Plain View of British Interests, by S. Laing, M.P.; Lessing, by Reginald W. WELLINGTON SOLDIERY.—The announcement that the 30th Battalion will at a very early date receive new clothing and arms, will be pleasing alike to the officers of the battalion and the men, who were really in need of the clothing. The articles are now on the road from Ottawa. The new arms are the short Snider rifles and sword bayonets. The old forage cap has been discarded, and Kilmarnock caps will be used instead. This will be a great improvement, as from the shape of the Kilmarnock, shelter can be found for the face in the burning summer sun, while it has a jaunty, soldier-like appearance, which doubtless will be appreciated by our gallant volunteers.

BOARD OF EDUCATION. — An adjourned meeting was held on Thursday evening. Present—Judge Macdonald in the chair, Messrs. Bell, Robertson, Inglis, Murton, McKenzie, Dr. Keating. The Clerk reported that the Management Committee had met at four o'clock in the afternoon, and that they had agreed on the appointment of a male and female teacher. R.C. Dobbin, of Oustic, and Amelia Howell, of Guelph, were recommended by the Inspector and Principal. On motion of Messrs. Murton and Inglis the recommendation was adopted. Mr. Murton asked for the Sites and Building Committee to be authorized to advertise for plans and specifications for the new High School buildings. He did not consider a former resolution gave any such authority. The proper authority was given, and the Board then adjourned.

A PARTY of between two and three hundred arrived in Guelph on Thursday en route to Manitoba. A stoppage of about an hour and a half took place at the Grand Trunk freight stration, and the stock on board the train belonging to the emigrants were fed with produce purchased in Guelph from James Hewer. The parties were all from east of Toronto, many of them being from the neighborhood of Ottawa, Cobourg, and Montreal.

POTATOES have taken a rise to-day, and now sell on the market from 50c. to 60c. per bag.

THE public should not forget that the grand opening at Jones & Guthrie's store, Upper Wyndham street, is to-morrow. Gas illumination in the evening.

BASE BALL.—The Tecumsehs of London have invited the Maple Leafs to play a game in London some time during the present month. In all probability the request will be complied with.

THERE was a meeting of Council of the Guelph Board of Trade on Thursday evening. A resolution was passed instructing Mr. Jas. Goldie, President, to prepare a report embodying a detailed statement of the trade of the town, to be presented at a future meeting.

BUCHAM'S OPENING.—It is true that the spring opening of millinery, mantles, and dry goods at the Fashionable West End to-day was largely attended, and it is also a fact that the display was magnificent in every particular. Mr. Bucham has long been noted for the peculiar tasty manner in which he lays out his goods for the inspection of the public. In the present instance the same great care and study for effect has been experienced. All the ladies of the town are invited to call and view the goods.

FURIOUS DRIVING. — Although a nice thing to sit behind a fast trotting horse, the drivers of such animals should always remember that furious driving is a violation of one of the By-laws of the corporation. Fred. Bradley owns a trotter named "Dolly," and he was driving the animal on the Waterloo avenue last evening at a very unbecoming gait, viewed, as it were through the spectacles of the authorities. For this offence he had to answer at the Police Court this morning. Bradley pleaded that it was impossible to hold the animal in, and therefore had to allow it to go according to its own inclination. This excuse was not considered sufficient, and he was fined $1 and $2.25 costs.

"Oliver Cromwell."

Lecture by the Rev. T. W. Handford, in Knox Church.

The Rev. T. W. Handford, of Toronto, delivered his great lecture on Oliver Cromwell, in Knox Church, on Thursday night, in aid of its Sunday School. The body of the church was well filled with a deeply attentive audience, whose interest never flagged for a moment during the two hours and a half occupied in the delivery of the lecture, which is one of rare eloquence, and was delivered with great power.

The Rev. Mr. Ball presided, and after singing a hymn, and a very appropriate prayer by the Rev. Mr. Manchee, the chairman introduced the lecturer, who in his introduction, referred to the vile biographies of the great Protector—such as Heath's and Noble's,—which were little else that caricatures of the man. It was not till Thomas Carlyle's "Life and Letters of Cromwell" appeared that men began to form some true conception of him, and to understand that he was not only a reputable citizen, but a soldier, a statesman, and a devoted servant of the Church of God. He briefly sketched the stormy times immediately antecedent to the birth of Cromwell, and during his earlier years. He dwelt lovingly on Oliver's early life, spent as it was for the most part, amid the quiet rural scenes in and about St. Ives and Huntingdon. He entered Sussex College, Cambridge, on the 23rd of April, 1616—the very day on which William Shakspeare died. On his father's death, he succeeded to his occupation as a farmer, discharging his duty faithfully to his mother and sister. His residence in London, while studying law afterwards, and his marriage were referred to—then his conversion—then the death of Elizabeth, and the accession to the throne of Charles Stuart. The lecturer paid a fitting tribute to the great character of Elizabeth, who, in spite of all her drawbacks, upheld Protestantism, and established the power and glory of England on sure foundations. The characters of Charles and of his father, James the VI. were then sketched in a graphic manner. His various acts of tyranny were referred to, such as his dismissal of three Parliaments, because they refused to be coerced by him. Then came the eleven years during which there was no Parliament, at the expiry of which time Charles called a fourth Parliament, which also turned out to be intractable. Then followed the rising in Scotland against the enforcement of the Liturgy—begun by Jenny Geddes throwing her stool at the head of the minister in the church at Edinburgh. About the same time John Hampden was tried for refusing to pay the ship money, and succeeding this came the Bill of Remonstrance which Parliament insisted on passing. The subsequent struggle between the king and Parliament was graphically pourtrayed, until the crisis came at last, and the standard of war was raised by the king at Nottingham. The great battle of Marston Moor was eloquently described, in which Cromwell and his Ironsides retrieved the fortunes of the day. Cromwell's subsequent career as a soldier, the part he took in the trial of Charles, the great work he accomplished during the five years of his Protectorate, were done full justice to, and the lecturer closed with an eloquent peroration on that work and the great results that have followed, which not only Britain but the world at large are now enjoying.

At the close a vote of thanks was tendered to the lecturer, and in acknowledging it, he announced that he had been engaged to lecture again in Knox Church, Guelph, on the 25th inst., under the auspices of the Ladies Christian Temperance Club, the subject to be "George Fox and the Quakers." Judging from the eloquent lecture delivered last night, we can assure our readers that there is a rich treat in store for them.

A very fine piece of music was then sung by Mrs. Lyons, Miss Oldham, Messrs. Higham and Cooke, Mrs. Budd presiding at the organ, when the proceedings closed with the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Wardrope.

The possibility of establishing direct communication by steamship between Hudson Bay and Liverpool, as an outlet for the trade of the North-west territories, has been brought personally before the representatives of the people in Ottawa, recently, and may probably lead to an effort being made to demonstrate the feasibility of such an enterprise before another year.

A rumor is current to the effect that a young man by the name of Charles Duff of Ancaster had shot himself, fatally. The unfortunate youth is about nineteen years of age and is a grandson of Mr. John Bamberger. Disappointment in love is assigned as the reason of the rash act. The wound was inflicted with a shot gun, the right arm being blown off. No hopes are entertained of his recovery.

OFF TO EUROPE.—The Rev. J. F. Dickie, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Berlin, started on Tuesday morning for Europe, in company with Mrs. Jacob Beck, of Baden. They will rejoin Mrs. Dickie and spend three months or thereabouts, in the British Islands, France and Switzerland. The congregation held a farewell social on the Monday evening previous.

FIRE IN ALTON.—About one o'clock on Thursday morning Kennedy's woollen factory was totally destroyed by fire. Nothing could be saved. The loss is estimated at $5,000. Insured in the Phœnix Mutual of Toronto, for $1,800, and in the Manufacturers, of Hamilton, for $1,200. The cause of the fire is unknown.

AN HONEST CONFESSION.—The Rev. B. S. Taylor, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Sandlake, New York, instead of preaching a sermon, a few Sundays ago, made this announcement :—"The Board of Trustees have not paid my salary, have taken no notice of my demands, circulated no subscription paper, nor made any other effort to fulfil their obligations to me. I am badly involved in debt, and no not propose preaching for nothing. I therefore declare the pulpit closed until God in his mercy can send you a minister who can live on air and wear buckskin breeches of his own make."

CURING SHEEP-WORRYING DOGS.—Land and Water gives a plan for curing sheep-worrying dogs, which we may think may be more effectual with young dogs than old ones. It says :—"Wrap a narrow strip of sheepskin, that has much wool on it, round the dog's lower jaw, the wool upwards, and fasten it so that he cannot get rid of it. Put this on him for a few times daily, and there is a chance that he will become as thoroughly disgusted as ever you could wish, with every animal of the race whose coat furnishes such odious mouthfuls ; but prevention being better than cure, pay great attention to your dog's morals during the lambing season. Dogs not led away by evil companionship rarely commence their depredations upon sober full-grown sheep. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, they have previously yielded to the great temptation of running down some frisking lamb, whose animated gambols seemed to court pursuit."

MESSRS. GILES & CO.—GENTLEMEN : My wife and myself have been using your "IODIDE OF AMMONIA LINIMENT" for some time, and find it the best article of the kind we have ever tried. As you do not advertise it as efficacious for burns, I though I would advise you of its great value in that direction. A servant in our house burned the back of her hand severely one morning recently and came to my wife saying she could not finish her work she was in such pain. My wife tied a bandage, wet with your Liniment, about the injured hand, which on the first application started the tears to her eyes. She went about her work. An hour or so later she came to our room, minus the bandage, and my wife asked her how her hand was—She had forgotten it was burned. My wife has burned her fingers several times, always applying your Liniment, and never feeling pain or inconvenience from the burn after. In strapping my razor a few mornings since, it slipped and made a deep cut in my left thumb. I immediately applied the Liniment, it, the cut, quickly healed without a particle of soreness. I give you this relation of our experience for the benefit of the public. We shall never be without the "IODIDE OF AMMONIA LINIMENT," so long as it can be purchased. Very truly yours,

W. WALLACE SHAW.

Agricultural Protection.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

The vote on Monday showed very clearly what a thorough humbug the taxation scheme of the ultra-Protectionist is, how little faith the Tories themselves have in their own professions, and how his nominal supporters fall away from Sir John when his policy is brought up in detail for their approval. For a long time the Tory leader, with all his willingness to lend himself to a clap-trap cry, declined to share in the cry for a tax on breadstuffs. But at last, in order to induce the farmers to submit to higher taxation on their sugar, tea, stoves, dry goods, and the various articles they consume, he professed to believe that by taxing breadstuffs in turn, the farmers would get back what they might lose by increased taxation on manufactured goods. Once he took hold of this cry he worked it vigorously, and even Dr. Orton himself did not go so far as Sir John in the demand for a tax on wheat, flour, and farm produce in general.

Hitherto the Tory leader has succeeded in covering up his general scheme for increasing taxation and prohibiting trade in such a misty cloud of words as to make it look rather fascinating to those who did not submit his resolutions to close scrutiny. He did his best, by vagueness and generalizations to induce the belief that that if the farmer could get an extra fifty dollars a year out of the manufacturer, and the manufacturer could get an extra fifty dollars a year out of the farmer, they would each at the end of the year be just fifty dollars richer by the operation. When this operation was described in general terms looked a little tempting to some—so much so that when Sir John put to the House, a month ago, his omnibus resolution for taxing everybody for the benefit of everybody else, he secured a vote of 77 to 114 against it—his minority being 37. But when a motion was brought in by Mr. Brown, of Hastings, to put the question of protection for farmers to a direct test, the professed friends of the Canadian farmer forsook him and fled. Mr. Brown's motion was to the effect that "whereas a large quantity of wheat and flour has been imported into Canada within the last few years, this House is of opinion that the interests of Canadian farmers would be promoted by the imposition of a duty on those articles." This was creating a direct issue, and if the Tory party really believed that the farmer would be benefitted by such duties they should have voted in a body for the resolution. But they did nothing of the sort. The Quebec contingent of the Tory party deserted the farmers en masse ; Nova Scotia only gave them one vote ; Manitoba and British Columbia gave them but one each, and New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island gave them none at all. Dr. Tupper did not dare to face the music at all, and was conveniently absent, hoping, by quiet defection from the ranks of his leader to save himself at the coming election. The motion was defeated by 148 nays to 28 yeas, or just five to one against it. The division by Provinces was as follows. The names in italic are of those who voted for Sir John's omnibus resolution, but refused to vote for agricultural protection pure and simple :—

This is a lamentable exhibit, and ought to open the eyes of the farmers to the trick that it is sought to play them—for the so-called "National Policy" is simply a trick by means of which it is hoped the farmers will be induced to fall into the ranks of those who seek higher taxes and trade prohibition. If the Tories really believe that a duty on breadstuffs will help the agricultural interest in the same way that a duty on manufactured goods helps the industrial interests, they should have voted for this resolution, on the principle that the farmers are equally entitled to the 17½ tariff with the manufacturers. In refusing to grant any tariff duty on farm products unless the farmers are subjected to a still heavier tax on manufactured goods, they have made it evident what their scheme is —one to "rope in" the farmers on false pretences, to help to a general scheme for increased taxation. The vote shows that unless the Tory Protectionists can use the farmer for this purpose, they intend to leave him just where he is. And never before were the farmers under such obligations to the Tory party as they are to it for its refusal yesterday to place tariff restrictions on the trade in farm products.

FRIDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 12, 1878

The Quebec Government.

The debate on the action of the Lieut.-Governor of Quebec, in relation to his late Ministers, came up before the House on Thursday. The ground taken by Sir John Macdonald, in bringing up the matter before the House, was that the power of dismissal was never resorted to in England, and should never be reverted to. He referred to the allegation that the crisis in Quebec was brought on in order to affect the Federal elections, and quoted some newspaper rumours in support of this charge.

Mr. Mackenzie, in his reply, assented to much that Sir John had said, but declined, in view of that gentleman's history, to accept him as a high authority on constitutional Government. He challenged many of Sir John's precedents as not applicable, and while admitting the right of the House to discuss the conduct of a Lieut.-Governor in extreme cases, said this should be used with great delicacy. He pointed out that the resolution declared that the Lieut.-Governor had acted unwisely. But that was a matter of opinion and for the people of Quebec to decide. If the Federal Parliament were to censure the Lieutenant-Governor, what position would it be in if the people of Quebec were to approve the dismissal of the De Boucherville Government by their action at the polls? He read from Sir John's own official papers to show that he had upheld the local authority as against any Federal intervention, and pointed out that he had carefully avoided stating in express terms that the action of the Lieutenant-Governor had been unconstitutional. The resolution was cunningly drawn, and might, like most of Sir John's productions, be read two or three ways. To interfere now would be to subvert the first principles of Responsible Government. He could not censure Lieut.-Governor Letellier without censuring his advisers and thus anticipating the free action of the people. Let the result be what it might, his (the Premier's) determination was, that so far as he was concerned there should be no interference.

After Mr. Laurier, Mr. Masson and Mr. Brooks had spoken, the debate was adjourned.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 11.

Mr. Mackenzie, shortly after the opening of the House, rose to propose an address to His Excellency the Governor General, expressing the feelings of the House toward him on the occasion of his departure from the country. He said I am sure I represent fairly the feelings of every member of this House when I say that, looking at that event now, when in the ordinary course of events it is near at hand, it is one which will be regretted by every resident of Canada, as well as by every member of this House. (Hear, hear.) But I venture to say that amongst all the celebrated men who have held that position on this continent none will be remembered with greater gratitude or kindness than will Lord Dufferin, the present Governor-General of Canada. (Hear, hear, and prolonged cheers.) He has endeavored, since his advent to this country, not merely to discharge his high duties with impartiality, in that manner which becomes the representative of Her Majesty in a constitutionally governed country, but he has endeavoured by every means in his power to make the name of Canada one known all over the world so far as his personal influence and efforts and his political position would enable him to do so. He has exerted himself in a way in which no other Governor-General has done—though, to be sure, Sir, no other Governor had the opportunity, because Canada in its present position, as an aggregation of smaller Provinces, has not been in existence many years. He then referred to Lord Dufferin's visits to the different Provinces, and to the extraordinary influence which some of his speeches have had in the old country, and went on to say:—And I venture to say, Sir, that no agency has been more potent in making Canada known to the world than these utterances of His Excellency when circulated by the press, as they have been very extensively in Europe; and whatever may be His Excellency's future, we can never fail to look upon these speeches of his, and his efforts made otherwise, though of a similar character, than as efforts made for the advancement of Canadian interests, and as efforts which I have no doubt, we have abundant proof, have conduced greatly to that end even at the present time. It is, therefore, with the greatest pleasure, that as a member of the Government, I assume the task of moving an address which will be expressive in some degree of the feeling which this House entertains for His Excellency, of our approval of his course as Governor-General, and of our hearty good wishes for his future. I would, perhaps, but ill fulfil the task, which I feel to be a difficult one at present, were I to omit to say one word regarding our personal relations. It has been my fortune as a member of the Government as a matter of course to have the most intimate relations with his Excellency for a number of years, and I need only say that in that respect—and everyone else who has had any relations of the same character with him, will agree with me—our relations have been of the most gratifying kind, and it is always a matter of gratulation to find that the experiences of our public men with those who are sent from England for a time in the capacity of representative of Her Majesty should be of such a character as to leave no unpleasant feeling behind them. It will be observed that in the address which I intend to move I have made a reference to His Excellency's distinguished consort, and I need only say in regard to that distinguished lady that she has amply and fully seconded His Excellency's efforts in all that could possibly be expected by the most exacting in the position which she has occupied. (Loud and prolonged cheering.) He concluded by moving the following address:—

We, Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Senate and Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, beg leave to approach Your Excellency with the expression of the deep feeling of regret which we experience at Your approaching departure from Canada. We feel it to be a duty to assure your Excellency that the zealous devotion of your great abilities on all occasions to the public interests is held in high appreciation, and that especially the visit to each of the Provinces and Territories of the Dominion by which Your Excellency has familiarized yourself with the character of the people and the resources of the country, and the eloquent speeches in which Your Excellency has enlarged on those topics, have been attended with the most beneficial results in attracting attention to Canada. We are highly sensible of the great degree to which literature and art and the industrial pursuits have received encouragement from Your Excellency's efforts and liberality. We venture to convey the assurance that Your Excellency and your distinguished consort will bear with you on leaving us our warmest wishes for your future welfare and happiness; that we also in the conviction that though Canada may no longer possess the advantage of Your Excellency's experience and knowledge of public affairs in so exclusive a degree as she has enjoyed them in the past, this country will continue to have in Your Excellency a friend and advocate, and that it is our heart-felt wish that for many years the Empire at large may have the benefit of Your Excellency's ripe wisdom, experience, add eminent abilities.
