Sir John Macdonald said, I rise with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure to second this resolution. Like the Premier, like the people of Canada, and like the members of this House, I feel the greatest regret at the approaching departure of the illustrious representative of our Sovereign in this country, and I rise with pleasure to express in my humble way my great appreciation of his great qualities as the representative of our Sovereign, who during six years has fitly and fully represented the dignity, the usefulness, and the power of the Crown in this Dominion. (Cheers.) It is especially important in the northern portion of this continent, where public institutions should prevail, that monarchy should show its beneficent side; and if ever monarchy were rendered pleasant, if ever the principles of monarchy were vindicated, if ever the usefulness of monarchical principles were fully vindicated, they were vindicated in the manner in which the representative of monarchy in the Dominion has performed his duties during the last six years. (Cheers.) And so it is with mingled feelings of regret that both sides of this House, both the great parties into which the country is divided, unite—as I know they will cordially, sincerely, and from the bottom of their hearts unite—in this tribute of respect and affection towards Earl Dufferin. (Loud cheers.) As the Prime Minister has truly said, the address would be imperfect if it did not contain our sentiments towards His Excellency's illustrious consort. (Cheers). In a country like this, in all countries governed by monarchical institutions, the consort of the Sovereign or the consort of the representative of the Sovereign always holds and must be held to assume a political character, and the illustrious consort of Lord Dufferin, as the hon. the Prime Minister truly said, has fitly and well seconded the efforts of the Governor-General to maintain the dignity and the honour and the popularity of the position he holds. (Loud cheers.) As this address says truly, every one knows that wherever he goes, in whatever position he is placed, he will always kindly remember Canada. He knows quite well with what feelings of affection the people of Canada regard him, and he would be less than man, or rather more than man, if he did not return that feeling, and we know that he will do it. (Cheers.) If God spares Lord Dufferin in health and strength, he has a great future before him, and we know and feel we will have in the great sphere of usefulness open to him when he leaves this country after such a successful reign—for reign I may fairly call it—a powerful advocate, a warm advocate, a sincere advocate of the best interests of the Dominion. (Cheers.) These sentiments I believe must and do impress themselves upon the heart and reason of every man who hears me, and I have the greatest pleasure in seconding the resolution of the hon. the Prime Minister. (Loud cheers.)

Hon. Mr. Laurier, in French, said he rose with much pleasure to support the motion. Nowhere, he was sure, would its sentiments be re-echoed with more sincerity or a warmer appreciation of the merits of its distinguished object than in the Province of Quebec, of which he was a humble representative. The kindly disposition of His Excellency, his admirable qualities as a public man, his studious desire to soften the asperities of public life in Canada, and above all the respect and affection he had shown for all the institutions of Quebec on account of its inhabitants, had endeared him to them all without distinction of party or creed. (Cheers.) He had shown more sympathy with its people than Governors of the same French race. The same good qualities had been displayed by him—happily in more tranquil times—as Lord Elgin had manifested at a troubled period of Canadian history. (Hear, hear.) The people of Lower Canada would, like all their fellow-countrymen, deeply regret His Excellency's departure, and never cease to follow him with the kindliest wishes for future happiness and suitable opportunities of well-doing. Lady Dufferin always enjoyed the respect and affection of the people, and would always retain a place in their hearts. (Cheers.)

Hon. Mr. Langevin followed in French in a felicitous strain, doing ample justice to Lord Dufferin's merits and corroborating the remarks of the preceding speaker with regard to the place he holds in the estimation of the people of Quebec and the other Provinces. He too regretted his Lordship's departure, and with his fellow countrymen joined in wishing him a happy future. (Cheers.)

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie then moved the appointment of a Select Committee composed of Hon. Mr. Blake, Sir John Macdonald, Hon. Messrs. Holton, Laflamme, Tupper, A. J. Smith, Langevin, Masson, and Mackenzie, to prepare an address in accordance with said resolution, and to report the same to the House forthwith. Carried.

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie next presented a form of address which was read a first and second time and, on the Premier's motion, ordered to be sent to the Senate with a request that it be assented to.

Sir John A. Macdonald then moved, in amendment to the order to go into Supply, his resolution condemning the action of the Lieutenant Governor of Quebec in dismissing his advisers. He urged that the complaint he had to make was of the nature of a grievance, and therefore a fitting amendment to the proposal to vote supplies.

A long debate followed, and at a late hour it was adjourned.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph,

Acknowledge with feelings of pride the great courtesy extended to them by the ladies of Town and County on the OPENING of their MILLINERY SHOW ROOMS YESTERDAY. The immense concourse of ladies that thronged our establishment yesterday exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and the tone of admiration exhibited by the excellent taste of Town and Country ladies in praise of the exquisite taste displayed by the lady milliner artists of Paris, France, which we had on exhibition, is most flattering to our taste in bringing such excellent goods to Guelph.

We beg to say to the ladies of Guelph and its surroundings, that we have engaged this season as lady artist in millinery, Miss Smith, whose artistic skill in the profession is unsurpassed in any of the cities in the Dominion, and whose obliging manner wins for her the confidence and esteem of ladies of the highest rank and taste.

We confidently solicit the patronage of all who are in quest of the leading styles in millinery, which will be placed at exceedingly cheap prices this season in particular.

Ladies' Costumes and Silk Jackets

in large variety, and originality of Trimming, are now on exhibition at our establishment, and only require to be seen in order to command the highest praise mr27dw2m GEORGE BALKWILL, Gordon-St., Guelph.

Harold the Outlaw,

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

"Well, that will be mended soon," was he reply. "Joe expects Ranald this afternoon with a trunkful of things for you and the child—only you'll have to make them up yourself. Can you sew?"

"I have been in the habit of making my dress."

"That's fortunate. It will save you from learning, and the clothes-making will give you something to do."

"But what are we to do in the meantime?" said Lizzie. "Go to bed, I suppose."

"There's nothing for it but to put the child to bed, for nothing is to be had here that will fit him. For you I can manage; so if you'll go up and strip I'll hand you in some things immediately."

"Do not trouble yourself," returned Lizzie, hastily; "I can go to bed too until my clothes are dry."

"Humph! I see what makes you hesitate. You think my fat-made clothes will turn your dainty little figure into a fright. I said that it—Oh, don't look distressed, I know I'm big and coarse compared with you, and you may well shrink from putting your pretty body within my gown and peticoats. But don't scorn my offer till you see what I can produce, Mayhap I can find something not so far from your style after all. Run up and throw off your dripping things, or you'll catch cold and want nursing. The child is shivering already."

This last observation was sufficient to set Lizzie up to their bed-room in great haste, where, in a few minutes, Alfred was snugly esconced among dry blankets. When she had divested herself of her own saturated garments she would willingly have placed herself beside him, but was fearful of giving offence to Mother Barnacle by so doing. The latter had pretty truely defined Lizzie's feeling. She had aversion to array herself in the huge, coarse-made clothes of the old woman, and would much rather have spent the time of drying in bed.

The conversation in the kitchen showed her that it would be impolite to adopt this coarse. She resolved, therefore, to make a virtue of necessity, stifle her repugnance, and don the articles with which she was to be supplied.

By the time she was ready Mother Barnacle's step was heard on the stair, and presently she entered carrying an armful of clothes.

"There, these will make you all right," she said, laying them down and walking off without further parley.

Lizzie turned towards the heap rather ruefully, but greatly to her suprise they did not turn out to be the huge, old-fashioned things she expected. They were all spotlessly clean, of fine quality, modern size. She examined them one by one in much amazement. They were not just in the newest fashion, but neat and ladylike. Certainly they had never been made for the portly person of Mother Barnacle.

As it was vain to conjecture whose they might be, Lizzie wisely refrained from doing so; but once more the recollection of the face at the window returned to her, and a strong association grew in her mind between the one and the other.

"Shall I ever fathom the mystery?" she mentally asked, as she dressed herself in the clothes which seemed nearly as natural to her as her own. "Yet why should I conjure up anything strange or mysterious at all? It is the result, I suppose, of my own disconsolate position."

Whereupon "her own disconsolate position" once more occupied poor Lizzie's active thoughts, and the strange circumstance of the clothes was forgotten.

Alfred lay in a sweet tranquil sleep. The afternoon was exceedingly mild and calm after the rain, and Lizzie sat at the open window, breathing the fresh and balmy air, her head bent in pensive thought, her eye wandering in dreamy abstraction over the loch and the distant landscape.

Suddenly through the silence there came the shrill sound of a wistle from the opposite shore, which at once roused Lizzie's interest. She knew what it meant. It was a signal to Joe to come over in the boat, for it was just such a whistle as Coulson had sounded on the evening of their arrival. She ran her eyes along the edge of the loch till it rested on a dark object stationed at a spot which she recognised as the rude jetty where she had embarked with Joe. Straining her eyes with eager intensity, the object resolved itself into a horse, with a man standing by its side. The horse was yoked into a small vehicle of some kind, but beyond this Lizzie's power of vision could not go. As she sat gazing at the motionless object, another whistle, loud, shrill, and much nearer at hand, broke the stillness,

"That's Joe sending back the signal," murmured Lizzie. "I shall soon see him crossing in the boat."

Accordingly in a few minutes she descried the boat shoot out from the cliffs underneath the Castle—its oars plied by the strong arms of the hunchback, the repulsiveness of whose misshapen body was somewhat lessened by distance, though no modifying medium could give it the semblance of a well-made man. It had more the aspect of a large animal crouched in the boat, and making successive attempts to spring.

The steady, vigorous oar-strokes now caused the boat and its occupant to grow small in the dirtance, but Lizzie sat watching till it reached the shore, when she saw a number of packages lifted from the cart and placed on board. A short conference then took place between the dwarf and the stranger, after which the latter mounted his equipage and drove away, while the boat again set out with its prow towards the island.

Here a chill breath of wind from the loch caused Lizzie to shiver and close the window. She felt that in the eagerness of watching she had sat too long, and was glad to take a seat close to the fire, which she made up with logs till a genial warmth and a cheerful blaze made the old fashioned room pleasant.

After an interval of more than an hour, and when it was quite dark, Lizzie heard somewhat of a commotion below, then the slow tramp of heavy feet on the stair, preceding the appearance of Joe and Mother Barnacle bearing a large box.

"Here's something to please you and keep you amused," said Joe, his hideous countenance wearing an expression between a grin and a sneer.

"! What can either please or amuse me in my present situation?" answered Lizzie.

"That which pleases and amuses a woman at any time—dress," was the cynical answer. "You'll find lots of pretty things here, I daresay. Won't she, Mother Barnacle?"

"Well, the box is heavy enough at any-rate. Open it, Joe, and we'll see what's in it."

Joe opened the box, and, before Mother Barnacle had time to prevent him, emptied its contents in a heap on the floor.

"Drat the man! They ain't beets to be tumbled out like that," she irritably remonstrated.

"And they ain't eggs to break," growled Joe, as he shouldered the empty box and shuffled from the room.

Down on her knees went Mother Barnacle, and proceeded to examine the heap with great interest, uttering many a husky word of admiration as she took up parcel after parcel. There were several dresses ready-made, and cloth from which others could be prepared, besides bundles of flannel, linen, and cotton for under-clothing, stockings, and shoes, shawls and cloaks—everything, in short, requisite for a woman's wardrobe.

Lizzie sat by the fire viewing Mother Barnacle's operations with listless indifference.

SPRING ARRIVALS.

JUST RECEIVED A LARGE AND NEW STOCK OF

Clothing for Men and Boy's Wear.

We have been very careful this season in getting our clothing well made and fashionably cut, and owing to the great depression in the clothing trade throughout Canada and the United States we have been able to get goods at our own prices. We are in a better position this season to offer to the public clothing cheaper than ever, as our stock is larger and well bought. We will guarantee a purchased in clothing.

Saving of 15 to 20 per cent on every Dollar

Hat Department.

Our Hat Department is well stocked with all the leading London and New York styles.

Furnishing Department.

New Neck Ties, Scarfs, Bows, Silk Squares, Handkerchiefs, Gloves, white and colored Shirt and everything else belonging to a first-class furnishing stock 25 per cent cheaper than elsewhere.

Our Stock is the Largest, Cheapest and the most Stylish in Guelph.

CALL AND SEE.

Whiting's Bankrupt Stock.

In addition to our new goods we are running off Whiting's stock, of Windsor, which we bought at 50 cents on the dollar, and are selling at a small advance. This stock consists mostly of clothing, being fresh goods. No moth-eaten stuff as is usually bought with bankrupt stocks. Call and procure some of the bargains.

Licenses in West Wellington.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of West Wellington, Messrs. Meiklejohn, O'Callaghan and Sturtridge, at the Royal hotel, Harriston, Mr. E. J. O'Callaghan was appointed chairman and Mr. G. Moore Secretary. After consideration the Commissioners granted the following hotel and shop licenses for the year 1878:—

ARTHUR TOWNSHIP.—Hotels—Patrick O'Donnell, Theodore Zess, John Bradley.

ARTHUR VILLAGE.—Hotels—John Paisley, James Broderick, Thos. I. Lake, Peter Cosgrove. Refused—Burton & Kelly, Matthew Carroll. Laid over—Mrs. McPherson. Shops—James Kellhar, Joshua Caswell. Refused—F. Drake.

CLIFFORD.—Hotels—John Harris, Samuel Rowe, John Feathers. Shops—Francis Carroll, Mrs. Ann Atkinson.

DRAYTON.—Hotels—John Sanderson, William Shaw, Martin Fox. Refused—Henry Francis, Markie & Shaw.

HARRISTON.—Hotels—A. G. Markle, John Collison, George Chambers, Donald McDonald. Shops—Edward Preston, A. Campbell.

MINTO.—Hotels—J. Dolmage. Refused—J. F. Weilland.

PEEL.—Hotels—Henry Sneider, Henry. Zilleux, James Northgrove, Robert Ramsey, M. T. Griffin, Robert Owens.

MOUNT FOREST.—Hotels—Isaac Coyne, Wm. Roberts, Wm. Evans, Daniel, Cummings, James Ellis. Refused—M. McMahon, Wm. Hewitt. Shops—Allan McEachern, Margaret McLaren, E. Sherwood, George Colclough. Refused—J. M. Crawford.

MARYBOROUGH—Hotels—G. S. Willson, Thos. Rolls, Frank Dyce, Michael McGuire, James Terriff, J. Knettles, J. H. Willson.

PALMERSTON.—Hotels—John Watt, R. Johnson, R. & C. Milne, Davidson & Irvine, Ed. Donnally. Refused—Willie Leopard. Shops—J. D. Caswell.

FURIOUS DRIVING.—Fred. Brady was charged with furious driving on Waterloo Avenue, on Tuesday last, and paid $1 and costs. The horse, it appears, is one of those thorough-bred racers, and Fred. was making the best time he could out of it. Owners of fast horses should go into a more secluded neighborhood when they want to test the speed of their stock.

SCENE AT LORD LEITRIM'S FUNERAL.—At Lord Leitrim's funeral in Dublin yesterday the mob threatened to capture the hearse, declaring their intention to drag out the corpse. They cursed the deceased as an old ruffian and heretic. They also climbed the churchyard wall, hustled the mourners, and yelled and hissed during the service. Several mourners were roughly handled while endeavoring to make their way into the churchyard. All of them had to pass out by an unfrequented way in the rear of the church. Fifty constables were present, but were wholly insufficient to cope with the mob, many of whom were drunk.

£1,000 RECOVERED FROM A LADY FOR BREACH OF PROMISE.—An action for breach of promise of marriage, brought by an English schoolmaster named Heap against a lady named Marris, was tried lately. Miss Marris, who was the daughter of a solicitor, residing at Caistor, Lincolnshire, had, in 1872, at the age of forty years, entered into a written agreement to marry Mr. Heap, a master in the local grammar school. She agreed, in case of failure to fulfil her promise, to pay him one-fourth of the property she might inherit from her parents; and also a yearly sum of money, beginning at £20, and doubling each year from January 1, 1875, until she should become his wife. Miss Marris, having failed to keep her promise, and still refusing to fulfil her undertaking, the present action was instituted. Certain points in the construction of the agreement were objected to on behalf of the defendant, but eventually she agreed to pay £1,000 rather than allow the letters she had written to be brought before the public. Judgment was, therefore, given for the plaintiff.

ENORMOUS.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT.—The following account of a very sad accident is taken from a Monmouth, Illinois, paper, at which place the accident occurred. The lamented subject of the accident was a daughter-in-law of Mr. Wm. Roadhouse, an old and very much respected resident of the township of Erin, and who, with his family, will have the sincere sympathy of all those who become acquainted with this melancholy bereavement. On the 24th of March Mrs. Kate Roadhouse, wife of Levi Roadhouse, one of the Weir plow shop foremen, having been down town on some errands, was returning to her residence south of the C. B. & Q. R. R., and as she attempted to pass over the crossing of the railroad on East street, was suddenly knocked down and run over by the cars, and before help could reach her life was extinct. The wheels of one car passed over the body of the unfortunate woman, and she lodged under the first wheel of the second car, which had to be pried up before the body could be extricated. Mr. Chas. Hoy being the nearest person to the scene, and hearing her cries, made every exertion to reach her but all in vain. The fatal wheels had done their work before help arrived. The coroner's jury in the verdict brought in censured the railway company for carelessness. At the the time of the accident the father of the deceased was on his way to Monmouth to visit his daughter. The shock to him was great on learning of the terrible occurrence.

The Acton Free Press states that J. McGuire of that place has cleared out, leaving a number of sorrowing creditors.

A RARE CHANCE

To obtain a First Class Farm.

THERE WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC auction, unless previously disposed of by private contract, at the Market House, Guelph

On Saturday, 20th day of April, 1878

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the Harbottle Farm, being all that valuable freehold farm, consisting of lot No. 9, in the 6th concession, west of the Grand River, in the Township of Pilkington, containing 118½ acres, more or less. There are about 108 acres cleared and well fenced, and the remainining 10 acres are well timbered. The soil is about half clay loam, and the rest is somewhat lighter, but excellent, all in good cultivation. About 20 acres have been ploughed last fall. The orchard consists of about 3 acres of fruit trees. There are erected on the lot a good stone house 22 x 28, one story and a-half high; a good barn, driving house, and other outhouses. The farm is watered by a well on the premises, and a spring, and is situated about 5 miles from Elora, 18 miles from Guelph, and is readily accessible by good roads. It is conveniently situated as regards schools and churches. This presents a rare opportunity of obtaining an excellent farm in one of the best farming neighbourhoods in the County of Wellington. Possession will be given at once on completion of sale. Title good.

There will also be sold at same time and place all the right, title and interest of the vendor, 25 acres near above mentioned lot, being the north-east half of the north east-half of lot No. 3, in the 5th concession of Pilkington, about half of which is covered with good cedar for rails; the other half is timbered with elm and hemlock—very fine building timber. Title good, and possession at once. For terms of sale, and other particulars, apply to

SATURDAY EVN'G, APRIL 13, 1878.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

Russia Negotiating Directly with Britain and Austria.

RUSSIA WILLING TO COMPROMISE.

More Favourable Aspect of Affairs.

April 12.

A Herald's St. Petersburg special reports that Russia has entered into direct communication with the English and Austrian Governments to obtain a common basis of agreement. The assent of the German and Austrian Cabinets has been obtained to the main points of Gortschakoff's reply. It has been established between the three Governments that the way shall be made easy for the English Cabinet, so tha it may feel justified in accepting a Congress and receding gradually from the more extreme demands.

The tone of the comments on the political crisis is much more hopeful from all directions than it was yesterday. The whole basis for this change seems to be a conviction that Russia is preparing to accept Germany's help to get out of the present deadlock by such concessions as will secure the meeting of a Congress.

The Journal de St. Petersburg says:—The real desire of Russia to bring about a peaceful solution meets with universal recognition. The British Government must now abandon its purely negative attitude, either by inviting the Powers to assemble for common negotiations, or by proposing solutions to substitute for the treaty. Should the Powers find a compromise necessary, Russia would willingly participate in the discussion, and modify the treaty. Such solution should not, however, nullify the results gained by Russian blood, but take into account her sacrifices.

A Pera correspondent sends several sensational reports thus:—That the Russians have been discovered making roads in the direction of Buyukdere; that they have concentrated a large force of all arms in the adjacent villages; and have summoned the Turks to evacuate Shumla and Varna immediately.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Porte has issued a circular to its representatives abroad. It recognizes the Treaty of San Stefano as the result of reverses sustained by Turkey in the late war, and expresses a determination to carry out loyally the terms of the treaty, but declares the Porte would nevertheless regard as opportune any modifications which might be made by the benevolent intervention of the Powers and the moderation of Russia. The circular concludes by stating that whatever may be the issue of the present negotiations the Porte pledges itself to carry out the projected reforms.

All Quiet About the Eastern Question.

LONDON, April 13.

Everything is very quiet. Absolutely nothing new from the East. Indications are peaceful and favourable to a solution of the trouble. The war preparations in both Russia and England have been greatly diminished the last few days.

The Murder of the Earl of Leitrim.

Five more arrests have been made in connection with the assassination of the Earl of Leitrim.

In the House of Commons on Friday Frank O'Donnell, member for Dungarvon and Vice-President of the Home Rule Confederation of Great Britain, moved that the Government's action with regard to the murder of Lord Leitrim was unconstitutional, and proceeded to make an attack on Lord Leitrim's private character. A motion to exclude strangers was carried. Mr. Gladstone; who voted in the minority, was loudly hooted by the Conservatives, and there was a scene of great excitement. O'Donnell's motion was ultimately negatived.

In the House of Lords Lord Cairns promised returns of agrarian crimes in Ireland. He denied that undetected and unpunished crime was increasing except in Galway and parts of Mayo and Roscommon. The Government, narrowly watching the state of affairs, were convinced it was their duty to protect life, and they would apply for further powers when it is thought necessary. In consequence of this answer a motion of Lord Oranmore and Browne that the Government should ask for further powers was withdrawn.

GUELPH RIFLES.—There is no doubt but what the volunteers of Guelph will occupy a still higher position in the ranks of Canada than they do at the present time. It is true that to accomplish this they will not have to excell the attainments of outsiders, but merely to increase their own efficiency. Beside the jaunty uniforms of the Battery the Rifles have, in a measure, been overlooked by many young men of Guelph, but this is only a temporary matter, and the latter are now in the ascendancy. The new uniforms and arms will shortly arrive, and this fact will make the company more popular. Lieut. Speirs, in command, is very popular among the men and there is no doubt but what, under his care, the company will flourish as it has never done before. There are vacancies for a few recruits, and all young men who desire to enroll themselves should report themselves at the drill shed on Monday evening. Read an advertisement in another column.

THROWING STONES.—The dangerous practice of throwing stones, which so many boys indulge in, resulted in a young man named Davidson, of Carlisle village, being knocked insensible the other day from a blow which he received under one of his eyes, and which cut quite a gash in his face. The stone which struck him was thrown in sport from an adjoining field by some boys who were having some "fun" amongst themselves.

Local News.

GENERAL HOSPITAL.—During the ensuing week Rev. T. Brock and Dr. Brock will be on hospital duty.

MR. A. O. BUCHAM continues his spring opening this evening by an illumination by gas. Inspection invited.

IT is the intention of the Holman English Opera Company to visit Guelph about the 26th inst.

CATTLE AT LARGE.—Complaints are being made almost daily in relation to cattle running at large in town. The authorities should see that the law is carried out.

CONCERT.—Mr. and Mrs. Davenport Kerrison will give a literary and musical entertainment in the town hall on Wednesday evening, 30th inst.

EARLY ASPARAGUS.—Mr. A. A. Baker yesterday pulled a bunch of asparagus in his garden. During all the years he has lived in Guelph this is the earliest asparagus he ever pulled.

APPLICATIONS are now being received for tavern and shop licenses for Guelph for the year commencing 1st of May. Very little change is anticipated. The licensing however rests with the Commissioners.

SOME five hundred Ontario emigrants for Manitoba will leave Paris on Monday next. The Great Western will furnish first-class cars without change through to Fisher's Landing.

THE notorious printer tramp, Johnston, well-known in Guelph, who was blown to pieces on a steamboat, crushed to death in a church panic, burnt alive in a hotel, choked to death with a piece of charity meat, besides being horribly mangled on a railway track, has again turned up at Hamilton, full of spirits, and ready for another catastrophe to occur to him.

DEATH OF HON. JOHN YOUNG.—This gentleman died in Montreal on Friday evening after a short illness. He was at one time a prominent member of Parliament and a leading public man. He was the Canadian Commissioner to the Australian Exhibition, and at the time of his death was chairman of the Montreal Harbor Board.

THE Elora Express has the following:—It is rumored that the 30th Wellington Battalion will be the first placed on the list for active service. Orders have been issued to officers commanding companies to recruit immediately to the full strength and fill up with none but first-class men. The few vacancies in the Elora company will be filled up at once.

LACROSSE.—There was a meeting of the executive committee of the lacrosse club held on Friday evening. It was decided that morning practice commence on Wednesday next in the Agricultural Park at half-past five o'clock. The regular practice mornings thereafter will be on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. There is every prospect of the club distinguishing themselves during the ensuing season.

MR. FRANCIS LAW had the corner stone of his residence in course of erection near the Grand Trunk station laid by the partner of his joys and sorrows. The workmen engaged on the building employed by Mr. William Slater adjourned to the City Hotel after the stone had been laid, and the future happiness and prosperity of Mrs. and Mrs. Law were pledged by the company.

THE open meeting of the Young Men's Association in connection with St. Andrew's Church, held on Friday evening, was fairly attended by visitors. There was a debate on the question whether or not the microscope or telescope had proved the greater servant to mankind. Messrs. Johnston and New took the microscope side of the question, and Messrs. Fyfe and McLean opposed them. Decision was given in favor of the microscope. Readings, recitations, singing and social converse followed until closing time had arrived.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.—As the spring season has now opened, transactions in real estate are taking place, and as they may prove of interest to our readers, we note the following:—Messrs. Higinbotham & McLagan have purchased from Mr. W. J. Cooke lot 44, 2nd con., Proton, for $600; from Thomas Wardrope, the north half of lot 31, 12th con., Luther, for $800; from William Forster, lot 38, 1st con., Proton, for $750. Those are all improved lands, 100 acres each lot. They also purchased from Joseph Tait, the easterly three-quarters of lot 26, 9th con., Luther, 150 acres, for $3,000; and the north half of lot 31, 11th con., Luther, from G. A. Galbraith, 100 acres, for $2,000. These are improved lots, each having large clearances and buildings. The same firm have sold lot 12, 4th con., Proton, partly improved, for $1,600, to James W. Ireland, of Proton; also, lot 38, 1st con., Proton, to William Howlett, Pilkington, for $1,025. Mr. McLagan has sold 42 feet frontage on Yorkshire Road on lot 16, to William McBride, for $200. Mr. J. T. Brill has purchased from Mr. Geo. Balkwill, the property known as "Hall's Corners," West Market Square, for $2,800. Mr. Brill will build a fine block thereon shortly.

On Friday ten brewers were refunded $300 each, being the fines imposed on them in 1876 and 1877 by the Ontario Government.

SOME chairmen of public meetings have strange ideas of what is right and proper on the part of the audience. At the meeting at Downey's school house on Friday evening and Saturday morning the chairman put the motion, one in the audience signified his dissent by crying "Lost,"—only giving a nay vote, and the chairman at once lost his temper and accused the second party referred to of offering a personal insult to him in the position he occupied. The opinion of the chairman in question is so absurd that it would not be sensible to make comment.

ESCAPE.—One Lillie Connor, a young woman of unenviable reputation, was some time ago admitted to the General Hospital for treatment. She was progressing favourably towards recovery, and doubtless thinking a fine opportunity presented itself of replenishing her wardrope, she resolved to leave the institution, which had so kindly cared for her, in a surreptitious manner. A few evenings ago she got possession of two skirts belonging to Miss Law, the Matron, and an ulster belonging to one of the inmates of the Institution, and then by means of sheets tied together, made her escape by way of the window in her room. This must have been between ten and eleven o'clock, as she was missed shortly after the latter hour. Nothing since has been heard of her, although the police authorities were almost at once informed of what had happened. It is supposed that she has found refuge in some of a certain class of houses on Yorkshire street, or the Edinburgh Road. The thief is a woman of slight build, short in stature, with sandy hair, while her face bears the marks of disease. The hospital authorities would not have cared much if she had left the institution, but they rightly objected to her confiscating any of the property of the attendants or inmates.

SOCIAL AND PRESELTATION.—On Friday evening a large number of the members of Dublin street Methodist church assembled in the lecture room, when a pleasant social time was spent. The ladies provided coffee and a large supply of choice dainties, and after these had been partaken of, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, who are about leaving Guelph for Oswego, were requested to step to the front. The Rev. Mr. Brock, the pastor, then made a few remarks on the occasion that had called the friends together, expressing regret that they were to lose the services of one of their most active and valued official members, and also the services of his wife, who had always taken a prominent part in every good work in connection with the church. Mr. J. H. Osborn then read an address conveying to Mr. Bishop the highest esteem in which he was held, expressing regret that his connection with the church here was now about to terminate, and trusting that although they might not meet each other again on earth, they might share each other's society in that land where separations are unknown. At the conclusion of the reading of the address, Mrs. Gilbert Maddock presented Mr. Bishop with a Bible and a volume entitled "A Casket of Gems," and Mrs. Bishop also a Bible and a book of poems—all handsomely bound. Mr. Bishop made a brief and feeling reply, thanking the friends for the kindness he and his wife had received at their hands. After singing a couple of verses of "Shall we gather at the river" and prayer by Mr. Brock the meeting closed.

Congregational Church.

A Very Pleasing Entertainment.

The tea-social given at this church last evening by Mrs. Goldie and Mrs. Boult was fully equal to the best expectations of its promoters. From half-past six, the hour fixed for beginning to serve tea, the friends gathered together, and from about seven till nine the tables, which were supplied in the well-known tasteful and liberal manner of these two friends, were graced with succeeding relays of appreciative guests. We were pleased to notice how freely all moved about, each one vieing with his neighbor to entertain the strangers and fraternize with his friends. A thorough good social time was enjoyed. At nine o'clock the pastor, the Rev. W. Manchee, called the meeting to order, and announced, in turn, the following programme:—

Double Quartette—"Welcome Spring."—The choir.
Reading—"Mrs. Brown at a Military Review."—Mr. Robt. Mitchell.
Quartette—"When the Mists are cleared away."—Misses Rudd and Bailey, Messrs. Crowe and Crosby.
Piano Duet—The Misses Cossitt.
Solo—"Far Away."—Miss Oldham.
Instrumental Selection—Piano and Violins.—Mrs. Crowe and Harris Bros.
Dialogue—"The Hard Scrabble Meeting."—By ten of the young people.
Instrumental Selection—"Agnes Sorel Quadrille."—Mrs. Crowe and Harris Bros.
Solo—"The Brook."—Miss Oldham.
Quartette—"As Pants the Hart."—Mrs. Hodgskin, Mrs. Lyon, Messrs. Crowe and Cooke.
Solo—"One Sweetly Solemn Thought."—Mr. Crowe.

It is quite needless to say that in such hands the literary and musical part of the social went off well, and very highly gratified the audience, who manifested their satisfaction by repeated expressions of applause. The piano duet by the Misses Cossitt was very finely rendered, and their manipulations was, as usual, almost faultless. The singing was excellent throughout, and especially so in Miss Oldham's "Far Away," and in the quartette "As Pants the Hart." Judging from the many remarks the "Hardscrabble Meeting" dialogue was greatly enjoyed. And deservedly so, for the parts were all well rendered from the chairman down. Composed, free, and distinct in utterance, they all acquitted themselves finely. It is not often so many carry through harmoniously so intricate a piece. Altogether the social was very successful, and merited the attendance of the large number who were present, and we have no doubt the friends who got it up felt amply repaid for their painstaking care in its preparation. The pastor closed the proceedings with prayer about 11:30 o'clock.

Farmers in all sections of the country agree in declaring that the wheat fields, which are more than usually numerous this season, never were known to present a finer appearance. The killed out spots are few and far between, and wheat looks healthy and vigorous.

FREDERICK GREEN, 164 West Twenty-third Street, New York.

The Right Rev. George Augustus Selwyn, Bishop of Lichfield, died on Friday in his seventieth year. He is best known in connection with his missionary journeys among the Islands of the South Pacific during his tenure of the Bishopric of New Zealand, to which he was appointed in 1841, and from which he was translated in 1867 to Lichfield. It may be remembered that Dr. Selwyn visited Canada in the fall of 1874.

An old grey-haired sinner asked to be taken in for the night at the residence of Mr. Guest, in Ancaster, the other evening, and after asking a blessing at the table where he was sumptuously fed and saying prayers in his room before retiring, he got up early in the morning and made off with a pair of pants which did not belong to him. He was arrested, and has been sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment in the Central Prison.

A Young Girl of Fifteen Shot by a School Teacher---Caused Supposed to be Jealousy.

Campbellford, April 12. — A serious shooting affray took place at Meyersburg yesterday. A school teacher named John Shannon, who has had charge of the village school since the 1st of January, came to Campbellford on Wednesday and purchased a revolver, as he said, for the purpose of shooting squirrels, but it appears his intention at the time was to shoot a young girl, one of his pupils, named Bertha Wynn, daughter of Mr. Wm. Wynn. Shannon about noon yesterday entered Wynn's residence and asked for the girl and on being told she was upstairs, deliberately went up and fired two shots, one bullet entering the cheek and the other in the breast. The girl is in a very critical state, but hopes are entertained that she will recover. The balls are not yet extracted. Shannon is about forty years of age and it is thought that he has a wife living. He gave as his reason for shooting the girl that he was in love with her, but as he could not marry her, he intended to shoot her and then kill himself. He was arrested and committed to Cobourg jail.

ANOTHER OPENING.—The firm of Messrs. Jones & Guthrie is noted for the particularly tasty manner in which all the goods in stock are displayed. It requires something of an artist to dress a window or arrange goods in a store correctly and in a manner which is most attractive to the customer. Judging from the display made by the above firm there must be an artist or a gentleman of very excellent taste somewhere around the establishment. The opening day had been duly advertised, and the number of callers and customers this morning was something remarkable notwithstanding the very raw wind which prevails and militates against spring dry goods and milinery. The public is cordially invited to attend the illumination this evening, when an excellent opportunity will be afforded to view the beautiful goods "under the gaslight."

There has been lately a new railway train put on from New York to the west, which is the fastest train, we believe, that leaves that city. It starts from New York at 6 p. m., and reaches Buffalo at 9 a. m. The connecting train reaches Suspension Bridge at 10.10 a. m., and Hamilton at 11.25 a.m.

"National Policy."

Meeting at Downey's School House.

A meeting called for the purpose of forming a branch of the Industrial League on Friday evening at Downey's school house, Puslinch, was not very largely attended—forty-eight all told including over a dozen boys. Among the number were Messrs. Jas. Massie, M. P. P., Wm. Bell, A. Riddell, Wm. Wilkie, John Higham, Wm. Bathgate, Alex. Loghrin, and A. W. Wright of Toronto.

On motion of Mr. Martin Spruhan, seconded by Mr. Patrick McGarr, Mr. Jas. Anderson was appointed chairman.

The chairman stated that the meeting was called at the request of certain parties who had wished to be informed on questions relating to the fiscal policy of the country, and for the purpose of forming an association for the promotion of a national policy.

The names attached to the paper calling the meeting were: Jas. Anderson, Wm. Kirkland, Wm. Smith, Chas. Smith, John Smith, James Crane, M. P. Doyle, James Lynch, Jas. D. Porter, Michael Lynch, Wm. Rame, Eugene Rame, John Sherritt, and Joseph Dooley.

Peter Anderson was appointed Secretary of the meeting.

Mr. Alex. Loghrin was first called upon. He referred to the greatness of the question which he was called upon to speak about. He stated that those who chose to take upon themselves a stand on the question, as was done in Eramosa lately, were termed and considered by their opponents nothing less than fools, or perhaps worse, Tories. He considered in a great country like Canada there should be no two opinions in regard to the question of a national policy. Such a policy was one that would put Canadian farmers on the same equality as American farmers—that is, have the same right to sell their produce and make as great a profit as was done on the other side of the lines. He referred to what he held was the unparalleled prosperity of the United States both as regards the manufacturing and agricultural interests. He held that farmers were suffering directly and indirectly by the present revenue policy—they neither had the benefit of the American markets nor their own. He said those who pay the duty, were those who had to pay for access to any foreign market where grain is sold. He claimed that on the large quantities of certain produce brought into the market the Americans had not to pay one cent of duty, while, if Canadians wished to sell to the Americans a very high duty was charged. The present fiscal policy of the Government was such as to drive laborers out of the country, and thereby lessening the demands of our own market. The speaker remarked, as proof of the advantages of a protective policy to a country, that in proportion to the number in business the United States had during the past two years only one failure to two in Canada.

Mr. Wilkie held that he was taken at a great disadvantage, as by the lucid manner in which the previous speaker had dealt with the question, there was little or nothing for him to say. The speaker referred to the stand he had taken five years ago on the question of protection. His views then and now were identical. He considered that the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie had given the country to understand that the tariff would be raised for the benefit of the manufacturers, and in proof of which he instanced a speech delivered by the present Premier in Hamilton. The speaker held that the Government had not proven true to their promises, and for that reason were unworthy of support.

Mr. Glennie—The tariff was raised from 15 to 17½ per cent.

Mr. Wilkie held that little benefit was conferred, inasmuch as a duty was imposed upon raw material at the same time, when before it could be brought into the country free. The speaker concluded his remarks by advocating a protective tariff for the agricultural interests.

Mr. William Bathgate referred to the American tariff as being hostile to Canadian farmers. A duty of five cents on wheat would prevent nearly all American grain coming into the country, and therefore benefit the farmers. Free traders state that the wheat market is controlled by the old country market. This was only true to a certain extent, simply because any miller can telegraph to Chicago and buy at a certain price any amount to be delivered in two or three months. Well, when a farmer brings his grain to the miller, that person, with the amount he has purchased in prospect at a certain price, will offer perhaps five cents less than the figure paid. Thus it will be seen our produce is controlled by the States, and milling is more of an illegitimate or speculative business than it should be. The speaker referred to the wants of the Lower Provinces. They required a duty on coal, and it was strange that if fifty cents per ton would benefit the owners of coal mines and enable them to be run at full time, and thus employ a much larger number of men, such a duty was not placed thereon. Redpath's sugar refining business, of Montreal, was dealt with by the speaker, as had been done by him on several previous occasions. Lengthy extracts were read from old country papers on the free trade question, which he held went to prove that free trade was injurious to a country, and even was detrimental to England.

The chairman remarked that there had been three very able speakers favorable to a national policy, and if there was any person present who would like to speak against the formation of a National League they would be allowed to speak.

Mr. Massie was called upon. He remarked that he was present to listen to explanations, but he had as yet failed to hear the object of the League about to be formed.

Mr. Wilkie stated that the constitution of the National League had been read at the opening of the meeting.

Mr. Massie explained that he was unfortunately absent at the opening of the meeting.

Mr. Glennie—It is the constitution drawn up by some manufacturers in Hamilton.

Mr. A. W. Wright was called upon. He stated that inasmuch as those opposed to the scheme advocated by him was not replied to after three speakers had explained their views, he considered the matter was not now open for remarks from opponents. The speaker then dealt with the question of free trade and protection in much the same manner as he had done at the Eramosa meeting. He held that England had been less prosperous under free trade than when protected. It had ruined England so far as could be seen from the fact that under protection that country had £70,000,000 sterling in its favor under protection, and £74,000,000 against it under free trade. In dealing with the question of protecting wheat and flour as was embodied in a resolution brought forward in the House by Mr. Brown, he referred as mere clap trap. The question as then brought forward would be detrimental to the interests of the Maritime Provinces and even Quebec, and the intelligent of those Provinces rejected the motion as such, and it was lost by a very large majority. The importation and manufacture of shoddy goods—the cause and effect, the sugar question, the great resources of Canada, its intelligent population, the speaker's loyalty to Canada, etc., all went to make up a speech which was listened to with interest for over one hour.

Mr. Jas. Massie was again called upon. He referred to the manner in which the present National Policy League was trying to exert an influence in favor of the Tory element. He dealt with a number of remarks made by the previous speaker and claimed that that gentleman had tried to insinuate that this new party, so-called, was to be the saviour of the country—that the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie and Sir John A. Macdonald had been doing little or nothing but what was detrimental to its interests. This was a serious charge, and when such a statement was made he certainly must have had an idea that the people of Puslinch were not a reading class, and did not know anything about the past history of the country. The sugar question was dealt with, and the statement that the sugar brought into this country at the present time was nothing but rubbish was stated to be incorrect, as the speaker purchased what was the finest sugar in the world from New York refiners, since Redpath's refinery had been closed in Montreal, because the Government would not allow them protection to charge what they liked for sugar. Since Redpath's refinery had been closed eighteen such establishments in the States had been closed, and that too with the high protection afforded them. The barley question was dealt with, and it was shown that the average price of barley was greater at the present time than under reciprocity. The peculiar kind of ruination which England was at present undergoing, was referred to, and the increase of her trade and exports were shown. The advocates of the national fiscal policy never took farmers into their confidence in laying down their scheme, but now try to get that portion of the community to assist them into power, so that they may arrange everything to their own liking. Mr. Bathgate took occasion to refer to millers doing an illegitimate kind of business. Well, no person would accuse Mr. Jas. Goldie of doing that kind of business. His character had been too long established as a gentleman of a high sense of honor and sterling integrity. To prove to farmers who were getting rich the speaker stated that the profits on sewing machines, organs, etc., were enormous, as proven by evidence given before a committee of the House. One witness had said that the first class machines sold for $15 cost the manufacturers not quite $9. Well, if that was not profit enough, he would like to know what Mr. Wilkie would desire. It was the farmers and others who paid manufacturers such enormous profits. He held this to be a fact, and the records of the House would prove it. Mr. Bell, through his enterprise and public spirit, had built up a business from a very small beginning to what his establishment amounts to now. This, too, was done under a fifteen per cent tariff, which has since been increased to seventeen and a half. These were the men who claimed to be starving, and want to further accumulate at the expense of the country.

Mr. Bell made some explanations, during which he claimed that his own grievance was the imposition of a duty of 17½ per cent on raw material.

Mr. Wilkie wanted to know on what evidence Mr. Massie based his assertion regarding sewing machines.

Mr. Massie held that he stated facts, not mere assertions. Every word he had uttered could be proven.

Mr. Wilkie denied the statement as being correct, and that there was nothing in the blue books to substantiate such assertions as made by Mr. Massie. Ten per cent would cover his profits on the manufacture of machines, exclusive of interest on money invested. He would allow his books to be examined to prove the truth of the statement.

Mr. Wright again made some lengthened remarks.

Mr. M. P. Doyle stated that he was very sorry to bring forward the following resolution as he had given his vote to place Mr. Mackenzie in the position he occupied at present:

Moved by Mr. M. P. Doyle, seconded by John Grant, that this meeting regret that the Dominion Government has chosen to declare its intention to adhere to its present suicidal policy and its irability to introduce legislation to remove or alleviate the present distress under which the country is suffering. Carried.

Moved by Mr. P. McGarr, seconded by Mr. Wm. Smith, that this meeting will not support any Government that will not revise the tariff with the object of promoting and fostering the various interests of the several Provinces in the Dominion. Carried.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the chairman and the meeting broke up at a quarter past one o'clock on Saturday morning.

Daily Mercury.

SATURDAY EVENG, APRIL 13, 1878

It is generally believed that the Hansard will be discontinued, as the reports are giving satisfaction to neither party.

They are not worth "the burned end of a rye straw" is what most of the farmers think of Sir John's ideas in favour of protecting their interests.

For six months ending June 30, 1877, it cost $54,619.77 to run the Kingston Penitentiary. The yearly salaries amount to $39,64[illegible].

The North Perth Reformers have nominated Mr. James Fisher their candidate for the Commons, and Mr. Hay, M.P.P., of Listowel, for the Local House. Both are good men.

The latest nominations of any political significance comprise Mr. J. W. Sifton who intends to oppose Dr. Shultz in Lisgar, Manitoba; and Mr. C. W. Bunting, who has been nominated in the Conservative interest for Welland.

Mr. Scott's spirited determination to allow no hostile amendment to the Temperance Act was rewarded on Thursday by the Senate restoring the clause excised the previous day by a majority of one vote. The section in question was the one which abolished the right of appeal by certiorari in cases where the original hearing had been before a professional judge.

The Toronto Mail reminds the Whitby Gazete that a blast furnace for the manufacture of ore from the Snowdon iron mines cannot be expected in that town until the present Government is turned out. Perhaps the Mail will rise and explain in what manner Sir John's proposed tax on coal will cheapen the cost of smelting the ore from the Snowdon mines?

Who would be benefitted by a high tariff is a question of some importance just now? Let us see:—In 1871, the industrial classes numbered 213,000, of whom no less than 190,000 were butchers, bakers, blacksmiths, and like trades, who don't want the tariff adjusted, leaving only 23,000 for whom it is proposed to tax 4,000,000, persons. If we take out the stove makers, cotton spinners, &c., who by their own statements are doing well enough, there wouldn't be a corporal s guard left to be protected.

It is now quite evident that Quebec, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island will vote solid against any measure to tax wheat and flour, because we cannot even pretend to give them compensation. Perhaps one or two in Nova Scotia might be inclined to consent to a tax on flour as equivalent to a duty on coal, but we have no equivalent to offer to the other Provinces. It used to be a commonly accepted belief in Ontario that it was only the Maritime Provinces which were opposed to the imposition of a duty on flour, but from the vote on Mr. Brown's motion on Monday night it has been settled beyond a doubt that Quebec is as unanimous as any of her sister Provinces east of her. It is the almost universal impression in Ottawa that not a single member from Quebec dare show himself for re-election who will vote for a duty on wheat and flour.

The Montreal Spectator makes the following graceful allusion to the Governor General and the Countess of Dufferin:—"The Earl is not only a politician of the first-class, a brilliant speaker and a wise Governor; he is a representative of the true Englishman, easy, frank and generous, a very Peer of the realm. He has identified himself with Canada and all that is Canadian; and the motion made in the House that a request be sent for his re-appointment, found a warm support in all hearts, from Sarnia to Gaspe. His wife is worthy of the place she holds as representative of the Queen, Mother of us all, Victoria. Wherever the pair may go, they will be loved, but none will love them better than the people of Canada. When we say them 'farewell' we shall say it sadly."

The Embargo taken off Canadian Cattle.

The Globe's London correspondent cables the following on Friday:—"I am informed from a safe source that the British Government have agreed to relax the clause of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon's Cattle Disease Bill, which requires Canadian cattle to be slaughtered at the port of entry. Cattle from the Dominion of Canada will be admitted to England on the same conditions as Irish beasts will. This satisfactory result has been brought about by the prompt and effective action of the Canadian Government."

We are extremely glad, that through the efforts and representations of the Dominion Government, the House of Lords has been induced to make the exception above referred to in favor of Canadian cattle. Much influence and pressure were brought to bear on the Duke of Richmond and his brother Peers to leave the Bill as originally framed, with the restriction extending to Canada, which it was supposed would help the old country farmers, as it would exclude foreign cattle from the English market, and thereby lessen competition, and keep up the prices of English cattle. If the measure as now amended is passed, Canada will have an immense advantage over the States, and the Dominion will reap a corresponding advantage. It is not likely that the Bill will be altered in any material respect in the House of Commons, and we may therefore consider our interests safe.

We would like to know what the "National Policy" men will now say, who, within the past week have been industriously circulating the slander that the Canadian Government were doing their best to ruin our cattle trade with England, and throw it into the hands of the Yankees.

Enormous.—No other word can describe the quantity of new importations of dry goods, delivered at the Lion yesterday and to-day. Passers by would imagine themselves at one of the largest wholesale houses of the country. Load after load was delivered until the sidewalk was crowded with goods. Messrs. Williamson & Co. have faith in being able to do a large spring trade. They say only give the goods cheap enough and there is no trouble in disposing of them. No better rule can be adopted to build up and sustain a big business.

McBean & Co. for bird cages and blind fixtures. McBean & Co. for door mats and scrapers. Better variety stock and prices than elsewhere, at McBean & Co's. McBean & Co. for cornices and stair rods. McBean & Co. for all spring necessaries in the hardware line. d3.

Bond & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Ottawa, April 12.

Dr. McInnes, the member-elect for New Westminister, was introduced.

Mr. Langevin resumed the debate on the Quebec crisis. He charged Mr. Laurier with repudiating the traditional principles of the Liberal party, and sought to establish a contrast between the French Liberals of Canada and the Liberals of England. He charged Reformers with deserting their principles, and then applied himself to combating the argument of the Premier that the Dominion Parliament should not interefere in the premises.

Mr. Jette followed. He delivered an elaborate argument in defence of Lieutenant.-Governor Letellier, reading copious extracts from the authorities bearing on his view of the matter.

Mr. Devlin said as a matter of fact the House was trying an appeal from the late Ministers of Quebec. He entered into an eloquent defence of Mr. Letellier, and denounced the readiness with which Toryism is ever ready to assail the Crown when its own selfish interests are to be served. He drew a vivid picture of the dangers into which the DeBoucherville Government had plunged the Province, and ridiculed the Conservative pretensions of anxiety for the Constitution, while really only bent on electioneering advantages. He closed a most able speech amid general applause.

Mr. Lathamme opposed the motion and defended the French Liberals from the aspersions cast upon them by some of the Conservative speakers.

Mr. Tennyson's New Poem.

The new number of The Nineteenth Century opens with a poem from the pen of Mr. Tennyson, entitled, "The Revenge: a Ballad of the Fleet." Mr Tennyson's poem begins:

At Florence, in the Azores, Sir Richard Grenville lay,
And a pinnace, like a flutter'd bird, came flying from far away:
Spanish ships of war at sea! we have sighted fifty-three!"
Then swore Lord Thomas Howard; "Fore God I am no coward,
But I cannot meet them here, for my ships are out of gear,
And the half my men are sick. I must fly, but follow quick.
We are six ships of the line; can we fight with fifty-three?"
Then spake Sir Richard Grenville: "I know you are no coward;
You fly them for a moment to fight with them again.
But I've ninety men and more that are lying sick ashore,
I should count myself the coward if I left them, my Lord Howard,
To these Inquisition dogs and the devildoms of Spain."

Lord Howard passes away, and Sir Richard Grenville is left with his own ship, containing ninety-six men and one hundred seamen fit to work the ship and to fight. They encounter the Spanish fleet, one to fifty-three.

And the sun went down, and the stars came out far over the summer sea,
But never a moment ceased the fight of the one and the fifty-three.
Ship after ship, the whole night long, their high-built galleons came;
Ship after ship, the whole night long, with her battle-thunder and flame;
Ship after ship, the whole night long drew back with her dead and her shame.
For some were sunk and many were shatter'd and so could fight no more—
God of battles, was ever a battle like this in the world before?
For he said: "Fight on! fight on!"
Though his vessel was all but a wreck;
And it chanced that, when half of the summer night was gone,
With a grisly wound to be dress'd he had left the deck,
But a bullet struck him that was dressing it suddenly dead,
And himself he was wounded in the side and the head.
And he said: "Fight on! fight on!"
And the night went down, and the sun smiled out far over the summer sea,
And the Spanish fleet with broken sides, lay round us all in a ring;
But they dared not touch us again, for they fear'd that we still could sing,
So they watch'd what the end would be.

The end was not doubtful, and Sir Richard Grenville had his way of encountering it.

"Sink me the ship, Master Gunner—sink her, and split her in twain!
Fall into the hands of God, not into the hands of Spain!"

But the crew were of less heroic mood, for "the lion there lay dying, and they yielded to the foe."

And the stately Spanish men to their flagship bore him then,
Where they laid him by the mast, old Sir Richard caught at last,
And they praised him to his face, with their courtly foreign grace;
But he rose upon their decks, and he cried:
"I have fought for Queen and Faith like a valiant man and true;
I have only done my duty as a man is bound to do;
With a joyful spirit I, Sir Richard Grenville, die!"
And he fell upon their deck, and he died.
And they stared at the dead that had been so valiant and true,
And had holden the power and glory of Spain so cheap
That he dared her with one little ship and his English few;
Was he devil or man? He was devil for aught they knew,
But they sank his body with honour down into the deep.
And they manned the "Revenge" with a swarthier alien crew,
And away she sail'd with her loss and long'd for her own;
When a wind from the lands they had ruin'd awoke from sleep,
And the water began to heave and the weather to moan.
And or ever the evening ended a great gale blew,
And a wave like the wave that is raised by an earthquake grew,
Till it smote on their hulls, and their sails, and their masts and their flags,
And the whole sea plunged and fell on the shot-shattered navy of Spain
And the little "Revenge" herself went down by island crags
To be lost evermore in the main.

Harold the Outlaw,

The Ganger of Skene.

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE BITTERNESS OF DESOLATION.

"Why, ain't you curious to see all these fine things?" cried the latter.

"Why should I?"

"Because they have come for you, and may be a sure sign to you that you are not to be ill-treated."

"I see in them only a sign that my imprisonment is to be enduring," returned Lizzie, with a sob.

"Of course it is; I told you you are to stay here always. But there might have been cruelty as well as imprisonment."

"My imprisonment is cruelty," was the girl's bitter rejoinder, "and they and you are mistaken if it is thought I am to feel grateful for a box of clothes. Nothing—nothing on earth can make up to me for the fearful wrong which has been done me."

"Oh, the sore is raw, but it will skin in time. There, you can sort your clothes yourself, and put them in that there concern. You'll find drawers enough in it."

It was to the huge inlaid cabinet she pointed as she spoke, and stamped away quickly from the room.

"I said the sore would skin in time," she muttered, as she groped her way down the stair. "But I don't know as it will. They don't settle down contented in any hurry. There's that other one—her sore has had more two years to skin, and it's as raw as ever. To be sure, it was worse for her than it is for this new comer—a deal worse. I sometimes think it has a kind of turned her brain. Joe says, too, that the melancholy fits come on her at the height of the moon, or when it's new. It's new moon now, and that's why she's been missing for a day or two. Lor,' if there isn't Joe raging for his supper. Coming my handsome buck; patience, my model of symmetry, and you'll have your stomach filled in a twinkling."

When left alone Lizzie did as she had been directed. She lifted her clothes, and placed them in the drawers of the old, worm-eaten cabinet. Her mind was but little interested in the operation, but her attention was fixed in some degree when she noticed that one of the dresses was of the same pattern and material as that which had been supplied to her that afternoon. It was also made in the same style and trimmed and flounced in like manner. The circumstance was curious, but as it was not to be accounted for by any information which Lizzie possessed, she forbore meditating upon it.

Day succeeded day in dull monotonous succession, and as Lizzie wandered about the little island the shadow of isolation deepened rather than diminished on her spirit. For a time she clung to the hope that Harold would discover where they had taken her and effect her deliverance. But as day after day passed and brought no one to the shore of the loch she was forced to come to the conclusion that the search which no doubt had been instituted for her had resulted in utter failure. She had been spirited away entirely out of their ken. No one had witnessed her capture, no one had seen her on the road, and the two days' travelling had placed such a distance between Glenroy and the place of her confinement that, as she reflected on the whole matter, there seemed no likelihood that Harold should ever come to know of her whereabouts. Distracted as she knew he would be by her loss, he would yet be powerless to search her out, and there she would stay for life, month after month, year after year, till her span of existence was run.

Sitting on a jutting rock or in a recess of some bushy slope, these thoughts would overwhelm her, and in tears and sobs she would throw herself on the grass and utter moaning lamentations, mingled with the oft-recurring cry "Oh, my Harold, my Harold, shall I ever see thee again?"

The one element of comfort in her cup of sorrow was the presence and the prattle of her child. The little fellow was as patient and good natured as ever. Many children in like circumstances would have been peevish and fretful, but Alfred had scarcely cried from the first evening of their arrival. He could now even bear the sight of Joe without screaming, though the latter, when they happened to come in contact, would maliciously increase his frightful aspect by grins and contortions for the purpose of putting the boy in a state of terror; but, being naturally of a bold, fearless disposition, familiarity with the appearance of the hunchback gave Alfred confidence, and, instead of crying at his approach, he would smile and laugh as readily to him as to the others. Who can resist the innocent laugh of childhood? Who so sour and morose, so warped in nature, so passionate, and malevolent, as to remain wholly uninfluenced by the pure, guileless happiness of infancy? Joe scowled for a time, but he gave in at length, and not only ceased to torment the boy but absolutely seemed to feel a little pleasure in beholding his artless, innocent ways. To the cankered soul of the misshapen old man it was like obtaining a glimpse of Paradise to behold the beauty and purity of such an attractive child.

Yes, the presence of little Alfred was a mitigation of her sorrow. He occupied her attention and filled up hours which would otherwise have been weary and lonesome. He was an object ever present for the outflow of her strong mother's love, and the manifestation of his artless, winning ways beguiled her of her wretchedness. Yet at times he was also to her the source of double sorrow. He, even more than herself, was the object of the fear and hate of Gilmour Logan, for he stood between him and the place and title he had usurped. From infancy he was to be the victim of foul and ruthless wrong. What a future was before him on that secluded island. Through the passing years what would he grow into? She shuddered as she thought of it, and snatching him to her bosom in a transport of agony, wet his silken hair with salt, salt tears.

'Twas thus she lay and thought and wept one bright afternoon, about a week after her arrival on the island. She was seated in a green hollow between two braes, made yellow with cowslips and primroses. Behind was a clump of trees; in front, and at no great distance, the edge of the loch, across whose placid surface she had been gazing to the summits of the far-off mountains.

Suddenly she remembered that it was the Sabbath—that day of holy rest for all the land—the day when human souls find themselves, through worship, nearer to God, and holding closer communion with Him. The Sabbath had always been Lizzie's delight. To her it had the sweetest associations. The sound of the church bell, as from the humble spire it floated from glen to strath, from dell to valley, never failed to thrill her heart with joy or to raise her thoughts to pure and holy regions. The Sabbath had ever been to her the pledge of Divine favour—the assurance of Divine love. It seemed very different to-day as she sat in that lonely place far from sound of tolling bell, and voice of psalms in the house of prayer. She bitterly thought that the God of the Sabbath had forgotten and forsaken her, else why had He suffered her to be treated thus?

"Oh, God," moaned poor Lizzie, in her agony; "of all Thy creatures I am the most desolate and afflicted."

"The most desolate and afflicted." It was a rash thought, a hasty conclusion, pardonable in the depth of her distress, but not true, as she had reason to know ere long. Its utterance was followed by a fresh burst of sobbing, which by-and-by subsided into a quiet, motionless stillness, in the midst of which—she knew not how—there came into her mind the words of one of the most soothing, consoling, faith-enkindling of all the Psalms—the hundred and twenty-first—and she repeated them, not aloud, yet distinctly and consecutively, in the depths of her consciousness:—

"I to the hills will lift mine eyes,
From whence doth come mine aid.
My safety cometh from the Lord,
Who heaven and earth hath made.
They foot He'll not let slide, nor will
He slumber that thee keeps.
Behold, He that keeps Israel,
He slumbers not, nor sleeps.

"The Lord thee keeps, the Lord thy shade
On thy right hand doth stay:
The moon by night thee shall not smite.
Nor yet the sun by day.
The Lord shall keep thy soul; he shall Preserve thee from all ill.
Henceforth thy going out and in God keep forever will."

"Oh, if that is true—if that is true," she murmured, half in doubt, half in hope, as, in literal accordance with the opening line of the psalm, she lifted her swimming eyes to the opposite mountains in expectation of coming aid. Their far-off peaks showed clearly against the azure sky, but no vision of help could she there behold, and a cloud of despondency was again settling in her breast when a strain of sweet and mournful music came to her ear from no great distance.

She listened in astonished rapture. Her very pulse seemed to stop with the intensity of listening. In its clearness, purity, and surpassing sweetness the music seemed to be celestial—the singing of an angel; but no angel from the courts of bliss could pour forth a strain so mournful and sad. It was plaintive and pathetic beyond description; a tone of deepest grief ran through the air; every note was like a wail of sorrow.

The singer was a woman; it was a woman's voice which filled the solitude with that matchless melody. But who could she be? The only woman on the island so far as Lizzie knew, was Mother Barnacle; but that music could never come from her husky throat. The performer, though invisible, was very near, apparently not farther away than the other side of the little green knoll; and so distinct was the sound that Lizzie tried to catch the words. In vain. The words were neither familiar nor intelligible to the listener. They belonged to some foreign tongue, and by their liquid softness and wonderful expression she judged the language to be Italian.

Lizzie sat entranced, her soul thrilled to its centre—her whole being under a resistless spell, till the strain ended—not abruptly, but with a lingering cadence that died away so gradually that silence seemed but its natural consummation.

In a few moments it was followed by music of a different kind—a wild, passionate outburst, a strain of feeling and emotion, representing various fierce moods of intensest character—uppermost among which was violent, vehement denunciation. The words were still those of a foreign tongue; but the language of passion is never misunderstood, and the tempest of music conveyed to Lizzie's mind a terrible story of wrong and suffering. It rose and increased to a terrible climax, in which madness seemed imminent; but at this fearful point the music broke away into emotion, ending in grief and anguish, so woefully pathetic that Lizzie's heart melted with pity, and her tears flowed with a fulness not to be restrained.

Again there was silence, and after it had lasted so long as to show that the music was not to be resumed, Lizzie rose, full of wonder and curiosity, and ascended the knoll, to see if she could descry the singer of the extraordinary strains.

On the crest of the eminence she abruptly halted, for her eyes suddenly fell on a woman's figure, seated at its base, in an attitude of hopeless misery—a slender woman, with her head bent on her knees, and supported by white delicate hands, whose firmness of formation showed her to be a lady. She was young, too, so far as Lizzie could judge of her age by her figure imperfectly seen in that bent position. The dress which enveloped her was the same as Lizzie had worn for a few hours on the day of the rain.

Amazement rooted her to the spot, and for many moments Lizzie stood on the top of the little height gazing down upon the prostrate form—beholding the grief with which it was overwhelmed, and unable either to advance or withdraw unseen.

Delicacy of feeling would probably have prompted her to take the latter course, but this was rendered impossible by Alfred uttering an exclamation of joy at sight of a cluster of bright primroses, which he had noticed.

At the sound the lady instantly started and raised her head towards them, revealing that face of singular beauty and grief which Lizzie had seen for a moment at the upper window.

On beholding Lizzie and the child the woman sprang to her feet, dashed the hair from her brow, gazed for a moment in breathless uncertainty, then with a wild shriek of joy she bounded towards them, exclaiming,

"My child, my child! you have at last brought back my child! Give her to me—give me my darling babe that has been kept from me so long."

Lizzie recoiled in great alarm and terror. She would have run away, but ere she could turn to do so, the woman's outstretched hands were clasped around Alfred, and the boy nearly dragged from her arms.

A loud scream broke from poor Lizzie's lips.

"For mercy's sake, do not take my child," she cried.

"She's mine, she's mine," exclaimed the woman, with frantic energy.

"No, no. You are mistaken. This is my child—my son!"

"Woman, it is false. They took her away shortly after she was born. I am her mother. Give her back to me. For the love of heaven, give her back to me—my darling Clara, that I have wanted so long."

"Oh, lady, you are mistaken. This is my boy, his name is Alfred."

"A boy," she cried, turning a quick searching gaze on the child's face. She turned deadly pale.

"Oh, God," she gasped. "This is a boy, and my babe was a girl."

"The reaction of feeling was overwhelming. Her trembling hands relaxed their hold, her eyes closed, and with a low moan she sank upon the ground in a death-like swoon.

ELEPHANT STORE.

SPRING ARRIVALS.

JUST RECEIVED A LARGE AND NEW STOCK OF

Clothing for Men and Boy's Wear.

We have been very careful this season in getting our clothing well made and fashionably cut, and owing to the great depression in the clothing trade throughout Canada and the United States we have been able to get goods at our own prices. We are in a better position this season to offer to the public clothing cheaper than ever, as our stock is larger and well bought. We will guarantee a purchased in clothing.

Saving of 15 to 20 per cent on every Dollar

Hat Department.

Our Hat Department is well stocked with all the leading London and New York styles.

Furnishing Department.

New Neck Ties, Scarfs, Bows, Silk Squares, Handkerchiefs, Gloves, white and colored Shir and everything else belonging to a first-class furnishing stock 25 per cent cheaper than elsewhere.

Our Stock is the Largest, Cheapest and the most Stylish in Guelph.

CALL AND SEE.

Whiting's Bankrupt Stock.

In addition to our new goods we are running off Whiting's stock, of Windsor, which we bought 50 cents on the dollar, and are selling at a small advance. This stock consists mostly of clothing, being fresh goods. No moth-eaten stuff as is usually bought with bankrupt stocks. Call and procure some of the bargains.

THAT WONDERFUL MAN.

CARD.

JOHN HOGG & SON,

Upper Wyndham Street, Guelph

Acknowledge with feelings of pride the great courtesy extended to them by the ladies of Town and County on the OPENING of their MILLINERY SHOW ROOMS YESTERDAY. The immense concourse of ladies that thronged our establishment yesterday exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and the tone of admiration exhibited by the excellent taste of Town and Country ladies in praise of the exquisite taste displayed by the lady milliner artists of Paris, France, which we had on exhibition, is most flattering to our taste in bringing such excellent goods to Guelph.

We beg to say to the ladies of Guelph and its surroundings, that we have engaged this season as lady artist in millinery, Miss Smith, whose artistic skill in the profession is unsurpassed in any of the cities in the Dominion, and whose obliging manner wins for her the confidence and esteem of ladies of the highest rank and taste.

We confidently solicit the patronage of all who are in quest of the leading styles in millinery, which will be placed at exceedingly cheap prices this season in particular.

Ladies' Costumes and Silk Jackets

in large variety, and originality of Trimming, are now on exhibition at our establishment, and only require to be seen in order to command the highest praise

A RARE CHANCE

To obtain a First Class Farm.

THERE WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC auction, unless previously disposed of by private contract, at the Market House, Guelph,

On Saturday, 20th day of April, 1878

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the Harbottle Farm, being all that valuable freehold farm, consisting of lot No. 9, in the 6th concession, west of the Grand River, in the Township of Pilkington, containing 118¼ acres, more or less. There are about 108 acres cleared and well fenced, and the remainining 10 acres are well timbered. The soil is about half clay loam, and the rest is somewhat lighter, but excellent, all in good cultivation. About 20 acres have been ploughed last fall. The orchard consists of about 4 acres of fruit trees. There are erected on the lot a good stone house 22 x 28, one story and a-half high; a good barn, driving house, and other outhouses. The farm is watered by a well on the premises, and a spring, and is situated about 5 miles from Elora, 18 miles from Guelph, and is readily accessible by good roads. It is conveniently situated as regards schools and churches. This presents a rare opportunity of obtaining an excellent farm in one of the best farming neighbourhoods in the County of Wellington. Possession will be given at once on completion of sale. Title good.

There will also be sold at same time and place all the right, title and interest of the vendor, 25 acres near above mentioned lot, being the north-east half of the north east-half of lot No. 3, in the 5th concession of Pilkington, about half of which is covered with good cedar for rails; the other half is timbered with elm and hemlock—very fine building timber. AUSTRIA AND RUSSIA PEACEABLE

THE RETROCESSION OF BESSARABIA

Bitter Feeling Between Russia and Roumania.

THE DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENCE

VIENNA, April 15.

A despatch says Russia has favorably replied to the demands of Austria.

A Bucharest despatch says:—Bitter feeling exists between Russia and Roumania regarding the retrocession of Bessarabia, and is intensifying. The negotiations of the proposed Congress among the Powers still continue.

The Turks persist in their refusal to allow the embarkations of Russians at Buynkdere.

LONDON, April 15.

A Constantinople despatch says:—Russia is diplomatically bringing great pressure upon Turkey. The Porte promised to evacuate Shumla and Varna, in Bulgaria, and has refused to grant permission to Austria to occupy Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Russia's attempt to make separate arrangements with European Powers is stated to have failed.

UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

Oxford Again the Winner.

In the presence of an immense mass of people the thirty-fifth Inter-University boat race was rowed on Saturday morning over the usual course on the Thames from Putney to Mortlake. The weather was perhaps the finest during which any of these races has been rowed. Last year's dead heat, and the fact that Oxford was only one race ahead, led to increased interest (if an increase be possible) being taken in this year's contest, and the fact that Saturday's race was rowed at the more reasonable hour of eleven as compared with half-past eight last year may also help to explain the more crowded appearance of the banks, and the greater number of boats and barges on the river when contrasted with the attendance in 1877. Cambridge won the toss, and paddled over to the Middlesex station amid the loud cheers of their supporters. At 10:16 the umpire gave the signal, and the start was expected. For the first quarter of a mile Cambridge led by a quarter of a boat's length, rowing forty-two strokes per minute to Oxford's fifty strokes. After this point the race was simply no race at all, but merely a procession. At the Creek, Oxford led half a boat's length, increasing her lead with the greatest ease. The race was won by six or eight lengths, and even that great distance could have been increased indefinitely if there had been any occasion for Oxford to exert itself. The time of the Oxford boat was 22 minutes 15 seconds. Cambridge passed the winning post in 22 minutes 50 seconds.

MURDER IN WINNIPEG.—A murder was committed at Winnipeg on Friday night. Daniel Bell, a waiter on the steamer Manitoba, being shot in the street by George Gibbon. The cause was a quarrel in a house of ill-fame. Gibbon was formerly convicted of rape at Thunder Bay, and, sentenced to fourteen years, and liberated at the expiration of two years' imprisonment. The police are scouring the country in search of him. There is no certainty as to which direction the murderer has taken. The evidence at the coroner's inquest, which adjourned till Monday, brings the crime home to Gibbons, who was recently employed as a whiskey detective by Mr. Whitehead, on contract 15 C. P. R., where he was previously engaged in the illicit liquor traffic.

The printing press was certainly a very great invention. But what is it, after all, in comparison with the daily inventions of newspaper correspondents? Let Faust and Guttenberg hide their diminished heads before the superior genius of Reuter, and the irrepressible "Bohemian."

The good effects of the Canadian display at Sidney, Australia, last year, are every day becoming more apparent in the increase of trade that is springing up with the Antipodes. Last week eleven packages of buggies were shipped from Galt to Melborne, a similar consignment was recently made from Goderich, and by a recent return brought down at Ottawa we notice that while the total exports to Australia for the year ending June 30, 1877, were $41,865, the exports for the succeeding six months, were $41,511.

EXHIBITION MAP.—The large map of the Dominion prepared for the Paris Exhibition is on view in Ottawa. The map is 15 by 30 feet, coloured, and showing the geographical and topographical features of the country with the greatest accuracy and distinctness. It is a work of Art that will do credit to Canada, while conveying a good impression of its extent and character.

☞ John Anderson, Registrar for North Wellington, recently traded a rough farm of 200 acres, for a farm belonging to Mr. Robert McGregor, being a corner lot situated about four miles from Arthur, on the Centre Road, at what is known as the Devil's Elbow. This lot contains 150 acres, and Mr. Anderson gave 200 acres and $2,400 in money for it.

Local News.

TOWN COUNCIL meets this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

THIS is the last week in Lent.

PROPERTY offered for sale on Saturday was withdrawn. Not so easy to sell lots as it used to be.

Pipes, tobaccos and cigars can be procured in great variety at the Dominion Telegraph store on the Market Square.

FRESH to brisk northerly to easterly winds and cloudy weather, with rain, are the probabilities received to-day by Dominion Telegraph.

A CONCERT will be given in Elora on the 23rd for the benefit of Mr. Morgan, at which Mr. H. K. Maitland, of Guelph, will assist.

REV. MR. MITCHELL, of the Central Presbyterian Church, Toronto, preached two powerful and eloquent sermons, in Chalmers' Church yesterday.

CHECKER CLUB meeting at the American Hotel this evening. All checker players in Guelph are invited, as arrangements are to be made for playing a match with the county of Halton.

TICKETS for Manitoba have been reduced by the Great Western Railway. They can now be bought at F. Gauhan's office for $20. On Thursday and Friday next the Great Western will issue Easter excursion tickets all along the line at one and a half fare for the double journey. Tickets will hold good till Monday evening.

DROWNED.—A telegram received from Fergus this (Monday) morning states that about half-past twelve o'clock, at noon, a daughter of Thos. Richardson, sr., of West Garafraxa, was found floating in the Grand River, near Moffatt's planing mill. No particulars as to how she got in the river. An inquest will be held.

MR. WM. MCLAREN, formerly carrying on a boot and shoe store in Guelph, has with the firm with which he is connected in Montreal, just completed a new boot and shoe factory on Victoria Square, five stories in height, with an imposing front of solid cut stone and iron, having a depth of about 125 x 40 feet, the sides being substantially built of brick. Some 300 hands are kept constantly employed.

We direct the special attention of our readers to the new and interesting announcements made by J. D. Williamson & Co., in our advertising columns to-day. "The Lion" is so well and widely known for cheap goods of every variety—that it is a "household word" in this part of Ontario—and its enterprising proprietors seem this year to be eclipsing all former efforts. They certainly hold out great inducements.

BAD AIR.—It is a great wonder that the Police Magistrate, Clerk and all parties who are obliged to visit the Police Court daily are not stricken down with some fever. The air in the court room is surcharged with pestilential oders, notwithstanding the windows are kept partially open. Something should be done to afford a better ventilation. The Police Committee would be doing a good act to look into the matter.

ANNIVERSARY.—This evening the anniversary entertainment in connection with the Dublin street Methodist Sabbath School will be held in the church. The children have been in active preparation for the event for some time and there is little doubt but what they all will acquit themselves in an admirable manner. The programme will be found in the advertising columns. Tickets fifteen cents. Entertainment to commence at half-past seven o'clock.

CRUELTY.—A subscriber writes to the MERCURY giving particulars of the cruelty practised by a young man having a good deal of the brute in his composition, by shamefully ill-using a span of horses he was driving in the vicinity of the Grand Trunk passenger station. The wagon to which they were attached was heavily laden, and the wheels sinking deep into a mud hole, the horses could not get the wagon out. And this was the only reason why the poor animals had to be abused. It is a great pity that an example is not made of some unfeeling parties who have no regard for the life of dumb animals.

THE anniversary services in connection with the Dublin street Methodist Church were conducted Sunday morning and evening, by Rev. Manly Benson, of Stratford. The church was crowded in the evening, and there was a good congregation in the morning. The children belonging to the infant classes occupied raised seats over the pulpit platform, and the other classes were seated in the galleries with the various teachers at their head. They assisted the choir in singing hymns suitable to the occasion. The sermons were particularly interesting, and dealt largely with Sabbath School work.

The display of millinery and dress goods in the stores on Upper Wyndham street, by gas light, on Saturday evening, was witnessed by nearly all the ladies in town. Palaces of fashions, every one of them, are the only words that will convey to the mind the gay and tasty decorations.

THE lot on Yorkshire street, noticed in Saturday's issue as having been purchased by "William McBride for $200," should have read James McBride for $275.

FATAL ACCIDENT NEAR PRESTON.—On Sunday, whilst Mr. and Mrs. David Gingerich, an aged and respectable couple, who have resided near the village of Preston for many years, were returning from the funeral of Mr. Amos Clemens, their horse became fractious and ran away. The old gentleman was precipitated from the vehicle, and was severely injured, three of his ribs being broken. But the old lady, who, it is supposed, jumped from the conveyance, at first was seen by parties to rise and walk a few steps, and then immediately fell, and died in a few minutes. There were no external injuries of any consequence found on the body, and the doctor supposes that the excitement and concussion caused by the fall, occasioned an eruption of the heart, causing instantaneous death.

The Puslinch Meeting.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

DEAR SIR,—In looking over your issue of Saturday last I saw an article commenting on the actions of the chairman of the meeting at Downey's school house. Now, as the undersigned was chairman of that meeting, and the gentleman who I consider interrupted me in the discharge of my duty, no less a personage than James Massie, Esq., M. P. P., I will briefly state the plain facts of the case and let the public judge for themselves. In putting one of the motions at the close of the meeting I was repeatedly interrupted by Mr. Massie calling out in a loud tone of voice lost, lost. On remonstrating with him he replied it was parliamentary practice and still continuing to do so. I certainly told him what I thought of it. Now, sir, never having been inside the walls of the Parliamentary buildings but once in my life, I am not versed in Parliamentary etiquette, but I have attended public meetings often enough to know when a person conducts himself in a gentlemanly manner. However, if I have erred, through ignorance I now tender the offended gentleman a humble and public apology.

I have not the least doubt Mr. Massie felt mortified after coming so far and delivering such a splendid address, to find that he had not made a single convert to his views, as the two gentlemen who voted with him against the motion came there prepared to do so, and to find the thirty who voted for the motion—"not including the dozen boys"—had been and still were life long Reformers. I will assuredly endeavor the next time I have the honor to preside at a public meeting, and my friend Mr. Massie present, to give that gentleman sufficient time to let his Parliamentary gas escape before I attempt to put any motion to the meeting.

By inserting this in to-day's issue you will much oblige. Yours most truly,

JAMES ANDERSON.

Intemperance and Life Insurance.

The mortuary tables of an old and extensive insurance company afford a valuable index to the ills which affect humanity, and to the often unsuspected causes of death. The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, finds that its statistics point unmistakably to an alarming and increasing mortality from the use of intoxicating drinks. It is stated as a fact, to which the Mutual Life cannot be blind, that "large numbers of deaths occur every year among those it has insured, which are the direct results of intemperance; that still larger numbers of deaths attributed to accidents, fever, pneumonia, liver complaints, and disorders of the brain, stomach, and kidneys, are the sequence of intemperate habits." In the report for 1877 of the Sun Mutual Life Company of Montreal, we find this testimony:—"Another crying evil against which the voice of life insurance should be raised is intemperance. The mortality experience of all companies alike shows conclusively that very many of the early deaths have been accelerated, if not actually produced by alcohol." Another company's experience in Canada is, that strong drink is one of the greatest foes that insurance companies have to fight. These are serious indictments against the immoderate use of strong drink. And medical evidence is strong in the same direction. The difficulty is to get men to realize that the prevailing habits to-day, of treating, daily or nightly dram-drinking, morning cocktails and evening nightcaps, are not only silly, and wasteful, but undermine the mental and physical health. Recent researches of eminent chemists and medical men show that the rapid pace of modern commercial and social life is inducing members to resort to stimulants to "tone them up" or narcotics to "quiet their nerves," and the result of the use of these stimulants or anodynes is sometimes fatal, often harmful, and always dangerous.—Monetary Times.

The Famine in China—Children Boiled and Eaten as Food.

The North China Herald contains the following from its correspondent at Peking, dated Jan. 11:—

The famine is the great question of the day here. On all hands we hear of the most distressing condition of the people of Shansi, Shensi, North Honan, and South Chihli. A memorial of the Governor of Shansi, in the Gazette a few days ago, portrays the picture in most harrowing lines. It is calculated that in that Province alone 1,000 are dying daily; that it embraces five or six millions of people, probably seven-tenths of the entire population and heiens of Shansi. In the four Provinces the number must amount to nine or ten millions—five times the number threatened with famine in India, the crisis of which is now passed. The greatest distress is in the south of the Province. He informs us that news of the most appalling description reaches him; the dead lying on the roadside, supplying food for the hungry dogs and magpies, and children being boiled and eaten. The distress in Chihli is nearly as bad in some places, and is more easy of access. We hear that several of the missionaries at Pekin and Tientsin are prepared to go forth to the work of relief. It is estimated there are 50,000 refugees in Tientsin. The weather is intensely cold, the minimum at night failing as low as 3 deg. above zero, and during the day to 21 deg. Many must die from cold, accelerated by insufficiency of food, and many from diseases following in the wake of famine.

A letter from the Rev. Timothy Richard, of the Baptist Missionary Society, appears in the Celestial Empire of the 31st of January, stating that in the Province of Shangi the distress is so terrible that children were, at the time he wrote, being boiled and eaten. He himself saw men carrying little girls of eight or nine years old in baskets for sale. He met a Chinaman, staying at the same inn with himself, who had bought two sisters and a brother, ranging from nine to eleven years, for nine hundred cash (three shillings) and another girl of eighteen for eight hundred cash (two shillings and eightpence). He saw also poor people dying and dead by the roadside; in some cases the corpses were being devoured by the dogs. Strenuous efforts were being made in Shanghai to raise money for the relief of the sufferers when the mail left. Some contributions have since been sent from England and America.

Religious Services at Funerals.

At their meeting in Stratford last week the Synod of Hamilton and London had under consideration the law now in force in this Province, forbidding all persons, be they ministers or not, to perform any religious service over a dead body, unless they have received a certificate that the death has been registered, or else make a return, within a given time, of the same to the registrar of the division in which the death took place. The matter came up on the report of a committee appointed to consider what action should be taken for the repeal of this obnoxious provision. In that report the Committee gives the clauses of the Act making this demand upon ministers, and then goes on to state:

Whereas from the above it is apparent that if any minister, elder, or private member of the Church read the Scripture or offer prayer at the funeral or burial of any dead body without first having ascertained that the death has been duly registered, or thereafter making returns for registration, he becomes an offender against the law, and liable to civil prosecutions and to civil penalties; and whereas the right of reading the Scripture and offering prayer at any time and in any circumstances is a right which belongs to every Christian and ought not to be interfered with, limited or restricted by any civil enactment.

Whereas also such such services as are observed by this Church, in connection with funerals, are purely devotional exercises, therefore Resolved: 1. That this Synod respectfully but firmly represent to the Government of Ontario their great dissatisfaction with the clauses of the Act, above specified, and request that the Act be amended by the removal of the provisions which are regarded by this Synod as infringing upon the unquestioned right of Christian men.

2. That a deputation, consisting of the Rev. R. Hamilton, Dr. Cochrane, Rev. John Laing, and J. Charlton, M. P. P., be appointed to wait on the Honourable the Premier of the Ontario Government, and lay this matter before him in personal conference.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the other Synods of this Church and to the General Assembly, asking their co-operation in seeking the end contemplated by this Synod.

From the above it will be seen that the likelihood is that the Presbyterian Church in Canada will move for the repeal of the obnoxious clauses.

Catholic Meeting in Arthur.

The following letter is taken from the Irish Canadian:—

ARTHUR, April 5, 1878.

To the Editor of the Irish Canadian:

DEAR SIR.—A large and influential meeting of the Catholics of Arthur and vicinity was held here on Wednesday evening last, 3rd instant, for the purpose of forming a union of Catholics of both political parties, with a view to secure Catholic representation in either the Dominion or Local Legislatures, or both. Dr. J. A. Devlin was moved to the chair, and delivered an eloquent opening address, declaring his intention to go heart and hand in the movement, and to throw aside the political coat that he had worn for the past nineteen years. He saw a strong and vigorous element in the Catholic body of West Wellington; and all that was wanted was unanimity and fraternal feeling to obtain the object desired. We should no longer content ourselves to be mere "voting machines," but assert our just claims for representation in the Legislatures of the country. For his own part he wanted nothing from the people of Wellington. Should he ever seek political honours he would return to his first love, South Oxford. We had in our body here talent inferior to none in the country; and we had no need to go abroad to find men to represent us.

The meeting was also addressed by Mr. Michael C. O'Donnell and Mr. Quinlivan, of Arthur Township; Mr. M. Byrne, of Peel; Mr. White, of Luther; Mr. E. J. O'Callaghan, Mr. M. Halley, Mr. McGill and Mr. Broderick, of Arthur Village. A resolution was then passed appointing a committee of representative men from the various townships in the riding to draft resolutions and make arrangements for a general meeting of the body at an early day.

The gael is aroused. His dormant energies are awaking to action, and by the shades of O'Connell, we'll emulate

CLARE.

A novel use of the telegraph has lately been adopted by the Norwegian Government. As is well known, the herring fishery forms one of the most important sources of income for the country, the captures being made as the great shals come from the depth of the sea to deposit their spawn in the Norwegian fiords. It frequently happens that the object of their visit is accomplished and they return to the ocean before news of their arrival reaches the fishers on distant parts of the coast. This difficulty is now obviated by the construction of a telegraphic line 200 kilometres in length, composed chiefly of submarine cables, by means of which the fishers along the whole coast are enabled to gather at once on the approach of a shoal to any particular fiord. The abundant captures in this way show the investment in telegraphic wire to have been a most profitable speculation.

The railroads are now at peace, and the hotels have had their "war." The result of this recent cutting of first-class hotel rates New York leaves the Grand Central in the lead, with rates one and two dollars per day lower than the rest. eod

A SORE LEG OF TEN YEARS cured after all remedies had failed. My right leg from the knee to the ankle was like a piece of raw beef. The itching and burning indescrable. I spent a fortune on it, visited doctor after doctor, no benefit; it seemed to grow worse; a thin transparent yellow fluid kept oozing from it. DR. GILES applied his LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA with a feather, the itching and burning disappeared immediately, and in three days the redness and soreness had gone, and the leg was well.

An affray has occurred at St. Petersburg between the police and a crowd of students, on the occasion of the acquittal of the woman charged with attempting to murder the Chief of the city police. During the affray one student was shot, or, as the official account of the affray puts it, committed suicide.

DARING BURGLARY.

Patrick Mellon's House Entered and $310 Taken.

On Saturday night between eleven and twelve o'clock the house of Patrick Mellon was entered by some young men, his sister Ann Mellon half-smothered, and a trunk containing $310 taken away. Mr. Mellon lives on the town line between Guelph and Eramosa, about four miles east of the town, and on the night in question there was quite a gang of young roughs in the neighborhood, most of them from Guelph.

The story, as told by Miss Ann Melon is that she was in bed upstairs; her brother, the only other inmate of the house, is something of a cripple, and slept down stairs. About midnight she was awakened by some parties raising the window of her room from the top of the verandah, and three young men stepping inside her room. She immediately jumped up, but was seized by the throat, thrown on the bed and half smothered with some of the bedclothes. Before this was done, however, she saw that there were three parties who had entered through the window. While one held her down and prevented her screaming, a small trunk, such as is used for packing boots and shoes, and containing $310, was drawn from underneath the bed and thrown out of the window. After sufficient time had elapsed to carry the trunk off a short distance, the party who was holding her let go and immediately jumped through the window and cleared off. She screamed for help as soon as she recovered from the effects of half strangulation, and the brother, who had heard the noise below while the trunk was being taken out, managed by this time to reach his sister's bedroom, by dint of great exertion in climbing the stairs.

On Sunday evening Miss Mellon came to town and informed Chief Constable Kelly. The Chief consulted with Mr. Peterson, County Crown Attorney, about the matter, and finally High Constable Armstrong and Constable Lynch were seen, and they left to make arrests of parties suspected by Miss Mellon. She gives her reason for suspecting a young man named Duggan from the fact that he saw the sum of money taken paid her by James Leghrin, and also from thinking that she recognized him as one of the three who were in her bedroom.

The constables safely caged Chas. Duggan, Edward Duggan, Thos. Brown and Joseph Jennings without any trouble. Jas. Kennedy was not very willing to leave the top of a shed he got on from his bedroom window after knowing that the police were after him, until he was frightened down by a revolver being fired into the air. James Rae, known as "Buck," was captured by one of the policemen this morning.

There is little probability of all being mixed up in the affair, but those who are not are paying dearly for keeping company with evil associates.

The outrage is certainly a very daring one and should the guilty ones be found out those who committed such a deed merit severest punishment.

There seems to be little doubt from what can be learned that not more than three of the six parties arrested, and perhaps only two, can be criminated. One of the prisoners became confidential this morning. In fact he knew where the trunk was. With his assistance a couple of constables, despatched by Chief Constable Kelly, found it some distance down the railway track. The trunk had been broken open by the bottom being kicked in, and some clothing was left inside, the youthful burglars only taking stock in bankable funds, and a watch. The trunk is now in possession of the police. If what has been learned by a reporter is true, there is every probability of a party who is in every respect one of the most abandoned characters in town getting his deserts for a long course of rowdyism and crime.

A portion of the money has since been recovered by the Chief Constable.

The authorities are deserving of commendation for the quick and systematic manner in which the case has been worked up.

Peace is reported as entirely restored both in San Domingo and Hayti.

MONDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 15, 1878

The Bear Garden in Ottawa.

Friday night and Saturday morning witnessed a scene rarely enacted in the House of Commons. On the Friday afternoon the debate on the late action of the Lieut.-Governor of Quebec came up, and was continued by several members till an early hour in the morning, when an adjournment was moved. This was resisted, and the obstructives at once began their tactics. Mr. Macdougall (Three Rivers) spoke first against time, Mr. Plumb supplying him with books and newspapers for reference. Mr. Cimon followed, chiefly reading from books, and then Mr. Methot and Mr. Domville. For some hours the House was the scene of the wildest confusion and uproar. This continued for several hours, when the majority of the Opposition were pretty well worn out, and were glad to get a little air, rest and refreshment. Thus the battle continued till Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Haggart took the floor, and setting every rule of debate at defiance in order to carry out his part of the programme, the spirit of the afflicted majority rose again, and the scenes of the past night were at intervals repeated. Lady Dufferin came down to witness the unusual spectacle, and remained some time in the House. There were several musical performances and other equally praiseworthy efforts for Her Excellency's benefit, and on her departure all the Ministerial members rose to sing "God Save the Queen." The Opposition joined in the chorus, the spectators in the gallery felt like doing the same, and even the Speaker rose to the dignity of occasion, and stood up with the crowd. After Mr. Haggart, Mr. Pope and Mr. Bowell followed, Sir John was at last glad to call a truce with his opponents, and bargained with Mr. Mackenzie that the House should adjourn till Monday, a vote to be taken that evening without further debate. By this arrangement the Opposition gain all they would have obtained by holding on till midnight, and the majority, save Monday from being sacrificed to a fruitless discussion.

Such tactics on the part of the Opposition are despicable in the extreme. It exhibits in the strongest light the ruffianly element it contains, and that it will keep up protracted and useless meetings for no other purpose than to annoy and harrass the Government. But in this Quebec case, as in all others, it will find that a great mistake has been made, and that the Government, strong in the integrity of its purpose, and honest in the discharge of its duty, will not be deterred from following out that duty in spite of all opposition.

FROM the returns lately made as to the composition of the members of Parliament in the House of Commons, we find that the class having the largest representation in the Legislature is that of the lawyers, who muster 15 in the Senate and 49 in the House of Commons. The manufacturers and merchants are represented by 24 and 49 respectively. The doctors number four in the Senate and fifteen in the Lower House; notaries, 3 and 4; editors, 5 and 10; agriculturalists, 2 and 8; millers, none in the Senate, 9 in the Commons; miscellaneous, 11 and 36; undefined, 14 and 28.

IT would be well for the farmers of Ontario to remember that a motion to lay an impost duty on wheat and flour, voted down by the House of Commons at Ottawa by a majority of 143 against 28; and subsequently a motion to put a customs duty of 17½ per cent on corn, oats, barley, peas and rye, was rejected by a vote of 104 against 54.

THE tragic end of W. H. Tweed is after all invested with some streaks of repentance. In his last hours he tried to say:—"I have been forbearing with those who did not deserve it. I forgive all those who have ever done wrong to me, and I want all those who have ever been harmed by me to forgive me."

The "National Policy" in the Lower Provinces.

The St. John Telegraph gives voice to the distrust created in the Maritime Provinces by the Tory "National Policy," particularly that part of it which proposes to make bread dearer in all the Lower Provinces by a duty on flour. The Telegraph says:—

"The National Policy men are beginning to show their hands in a way that will surprise and alarm their allies in the Maritime Provinces. On Tuesday, when Mr. Cartwright was moving the House of Commons into Committee of Supply, Mr. Brown, the member for West Hasting, moved an amendment to the effect that it was desirable that Canadian farmers should be protected by the imposition of a duty on flour and wheat. Our Ottawa despatch which mentions Mr. Brown's resolution calls him 'a Reformer,' but this is an error, for Mr. Brown distinctly avows himself a Conservative, although he has frequently voted with the present Dominion Government. It is, however, as a Conservative, and in the interests of that party that he brings forward the present proposal to place a duty on flour and wheat, for the imposition of such a duty is essentially a portion of the Conservative programme and is in the National Policy advocated by Sir John A. Macdonald and Dr. Tupper.

Our contemporary proceeds to propound the following query:—

"We ask the people of the Maritime Provinces how they like this first instalment of Conservative national policy; how it meets their views as a measure likely to promote the trade of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and to make the lot of the poor man more endurable? In whatever way the proposal to place a duty on flour is viewed it is bad."

The conclusion of the Telegraph's article will show how popular the "National Policy" of bad faith and dear flour is likely to be down by the sea. Says the St. John Telegraph:

"Of course Mr. Brown's amendment has not the remotest chance of being carried, but it has been made at an opportune time, for it shows what the policy of the Conservative party is to be. It is a fair warning of what we may expect if that party with its National Policy gets into power, and the people of the Maritime Provinces are much duller than we take them to be if we do not accept this warning and govern themselves accordingly."

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

THE SKY BRIGHTNING.

PREPARATIONS FOR WAR CEASING.

Trouble Among the Principalities.

April 14.

There is less excitement at Portsmouth dockyards this week. Work is fast assuming its ordinary routine character. Very little remains to be done in the way of warlike preparations. Workmen recently began to get ready for sea the flotilla of iron gun boats built for service in the Baltic during the last Russian war, but orders were subsequently received to discontinue this work.

A London despatch says:—Everything is very quiet. There is absolutely nothing new from the East, and there are indications of a peaceful solution of the trouble. War preparations both in Russia and England have greatly diminished within the last few days.

The situation at Constantinople is still regarded as dangerous to peace, notwithstanding the protestations of the Porte there are intrigues among the Pashas. The discretion of the Russian commander and of Mr. Layard is doubted.

A Constantinople telegram says:—The Porte has been removing valuables, arms, and munitions hence to Scutari, and considering the transfer of the Government to Scutari to avoid being forced into an alliance by one of the belligerents occupying Constantinople in the event of war. The Turkish commanders have been ordered to resist any attempt to occupy Constantinople. Achmet Pasha has been appointed commander of the fleet in the place of Hobart Pasha, who will take a furlough.

A Vienna correspondent says:—The work on the Turkish defences has again been stopped in consequence of a Russian remonstrance.

A Belgrade special says Russia is endeavoring to gain a Servian alliance in the event of fresh war. The Prince favors an alliance; the Cabinet oppose it. War preparations continue, and a Ministerial crisis is probable.

A Vienna despatch says:—A Russian courier has arrived, bringing an autograph letter from the Czar to the Emperor Francis Joseph. The relations between the two Courts have assumed a more conciliatory tendency.

The Agence Russe says:—The statement that German's efforts at mediation have been well received in London has produced a favorable impression in St. Petersburg, where the desire for an understanding is real.

A Bucharest special says:—The Roumanian Government, after having repeatedly and vainly asked Russia to explain the daily influx of troops who take possession of public buildings and private dwellings and treat Roumania as an enemy's country, has decided to protest to the great Powers.

The Paris Exhibition.

The Paris correspondent of the N.Y. Tribune, writing on the 26th March says:—Five weeks from to-morrow the World's Fair of 1878 will be formally opened on the Champ de Mars. A visit to the grounds to-day would convince almost any stranger that it will be impossible to have everything in proper order at that time. Nothing is as yet completed. Many departments are very backward, and those which require most work are more tardy than those requiring the least. The Machinery Department is singularly behindhand, while the Library and Printing Department is in a condition rendering it impossible that it shall be finished on the appointed day. The exhibits of foreign nations are in much better shape than those of the French themselves. Switzerland, who intends to surpass all other nations in her display of watches, could be ready in one day's notice. Japan, whose wares have crowded the shops of Paris in the past year, as they have those of New York, arrived early with a large cargo, and is far advanced in her arrangements. Canada has sent a great quantity of articles, peculiar to her soil and manners of life, and is already attracting considerable attention from the French. A few cargoes are expected soon to arrive from the United States, and others, it is reported, are on the way; but the space allotted to that country appears tenantless and forsaken. Holland has made rapid progress, and Norway and Sweden, so prompt at Philadelphia, have been among the first to make their appearance here. China is astonishing and amusing everybody, not only by her industry, which is extraordinary even among the industrious French, but by her workmen and their ways. Twenty-six native artisans have ben directing a crowd of workmen, and are allowed practically their own way in fitting out their divisions in whatever fantastic and quaint manner they desire. Russia and Turkey have, as yet, done little, being more occupied in the arts of war than those of peace.

TROUBLE WITH THE ROLLS.—Possibly the hard times may have had something to do with the reluctance of a number of ratepayers to walk up to the collector's office and settle their tax bills, and the tightness of money matters has led them to scrutinize the rolls more closely than usual. One of the resisters was Mr. W. Russell, brewer, who refused to pay up, and allowed his goods to be levied on. Mr. Russell then attacked the roll, which he complained was illegally made out, and full of inaccuracies. His legal advisers, Messrs. Idington & Mickle, next served a process on the collector to restrain him from selling the goods he had distrained, and the town solicitors, Messrs. Smith, Smith & Patterson, on being consulted, we understand, gave it as their opinion that no taxes could be collected on the roll as it stands. Stratford Beacon.

NASSAGAWEYA TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—The teachers of Nassagaweya held the first regular convention of their Association at Brookeville, on Saturday, 6th inst. As was anticipated, a large number of teachers from Nassagaweya and other places were present; the ratepayers were also well represented in the persons of some of the most respectable, influential, and intelligent people of the township. The Board of Directors presented the programme for the day to the President, and Mr. McPhee was consequently called upon to deliver an address on Book-keeping, which he did, treating his subject in a very scholarly manner. Mr. Black, a practical book-keeper, endorsed and supplemented the remarks of Mr. McPhee, concluding by expressing his approval of the Association and its object. An essay on teaching the Commandments and other religious exercises in school, was read by Miss Bousfield, by special request. The essay was compendious in its arrangement, but very comprehensive in its character, and elicited the well-merited applause of an appreciative audience. The meeting was next addressed by Mr. Cooper on the subject of discipline in school; he held up the ancient pedagogues with a bundle of rules under one arm and a rod of correction under the other, in a very ludicrous aspect. Mr. Cooper introduced a number of ideas on discipline, quite original, which led to a lengthy discussion, in which the majority of those present expressed themselves. Mr. Day, of Eramosa, being present, was requested to address the meeting, which he did in a manner both practical and expressive. He showed the advantages to be derived from teaching the higher branches of literature and mathematics in public schools at an earlier stage than that at which they are generally introduced, clearly defining his theories by practical illustrations. After each address had been given, the subject was considered as properly before the house and open for discussion, and the time taken in discussing and commenting on the various subjects introduced, was found to be profitably expended. The Convention adjourned at 6.30 p.m., after a session interesting and instructive to those who took part in it, and which it is hoped will be productive of subsequent advancement of educational interests in Nassagaweya. A feeling of sympathy seems to have been engendered among the teachers of Nassagaweya by these meetings, which must conduce to their mutual advantage in many respects.

Mr. Brodie, of the Moorefield mills, has been made the recipient of notes and bills to the amount of $6,000 to assist him in rebuilding his mill. His men are now busily ergaged in taking out timber for the structure.

SEIZURE OF TWO ILLICIT STILLS.—Collector Caven and Officer Craig, on Saturday, seized two illicit stills, about five miles apart, in the County of Bruce. They also arrested the owners of the same, one of whom is the notorious smuggler, Angus Smith.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

COMPANIONS IN TRIBULATION—LIZZIE AND THE STRANGER TELL EACH OTHER THEIR STORY.

Believing the woman to be mad, Lizzie's first impulse was to flee from the spot so soon as she saw her fall insensible to the ground. But one glance at her white, sorrowful face as it lay upturned in death-like stillness made her falter in her purpose. Common humanity, womanly compassion made it impossible to leave the helpless being lying there in a swoon which, without restorative aid, might terminate in death. In fact, Lizzie was not sure but she was dead already—so pale was her countenance, so motionless her frame. This thought banished in a moment her personal fear, her maternal alarm; and instead of taking to flight she ran to the edge of the loch, and there plucking off her shoe—the only article she had which would hold water—she filled it and returned at her utmost speed towards the prostrate form. While she was yet at several yards' distance she set Alfred down upon a bank of primroses, where the little fellow set quite contented, while she, proceeding forward, knelt down and sprinkled some of the cool water on the silent face.

For a time no effect was produced. The drops fell with as little result as if spilt on a stone. The features received them with passivity; the ashen lips moved not, neither did the eyelids quiver.

"Oh! she is dead, she is dead!" exclaimed Lizzie, looking wildly round the solitude, whose loneliness was intensified by the motionless form at her side.

With nervous trepidation she laid her hand on the half-bared bosom, and experienced a thrill of excitement on feeling that the heart beat. The pulsation was faint and slow, but regular, proving that there was still life, and therefore possible reanimation.

Under the violent excitement which the discovery produced, Lizzie did what she should have done at first, for nothing but a sudden shock could rouse the senses from a swoon so deep. She dashed the remaining contents of the shoe with force upon the face, which instantly caused the features to give a slight spasmodic jerk and the clutched hands partially to open. These poor cold hands Lizzie took into her own and diligently chafed, gazing the while with breathless eagerness at the face to detect the first signs of returning consciousness.

Amid the traces of grief and suffering so deeply imprinted there, Lizzie perceived the remnants of a singular and surpassing beauty, and that, too, of but recent bloom, for despite the hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, the face was young—ay, nearly as young as her own—and of noble conformation—chaste, delicate, and intellectual. Her hair—once auburn, but now dull in hue—lay streaming in wild profussion over her neck and shoulders, betokening that once in rich luxuriance it had crowned her fair head with glory. Within her half-open bosom was a ribbon, the ends of which were concealed, but it was such a ribbon as a locket is attached to. Its brown and faded colour told of long wear and much handling, and Lizzie instinctively felt that it belonged to some secret heart treasure—consecrated by love and baptised by tears.

Her fear of the stranger had by this time entirely departed, or rather it had merged in pity and compassion. The object lying before her was such a picture of mute, helpless suffering that Lizzie's tender nature was moved at beholding it, and all the more readily that she deemed the lady to be, like herself, a victim of some great wrong.

As she chafed her hands she could perceive the restorative process progressing. She could observe the blood flowing slowly back to the face, tinging the cheeks with a faint colour, and rendering the lips less ghastly—less like the clayey hue of death. The bosom, too, began to heave, and the arms to move uneasily, while a faint moan came from her lips.

At these welcome signs of returning consciousness, Lizzie left off rubbing the hands, and, with infinite gentleness lifted the lady's head, and supported it on her lap, passing her fingers lightly over her brow to shed aside the straggling tresses. That touch so kind and tender seemed to complete the process of revival, for the instant after the lady's eyes opened, and, as Lizzie's face was bent over her, that was the object on which their gaze first rested.

While it rested there it remained in unrealising wonder—the large, dark eyes fixed in silent scrutiny on Lizzie's countenance, which at the moment reflected so fully a woman's finest feelings of anxious solitude.

Evidently the lady had not recovered recollection with consciousness, for the look which she regarded Lizzie was one of questioning astonishment. Then, as if to assist her to an understanding of the truth, she raised her head and gazed around till her eye fell on the child, when remembrance came with a swift rush, and she started to her knees.

Elora Easter Fair.

The Fair held on the 9th inst., was well attended. The Express says there was a fine lot of beef on the ground, and prices ranged from $4 to $6 per hundred pounds. Sales were slower than were expected, and many good cattle were driven home again. The Fergus Easter fair was held on the same day, and instead of all the buyers being at one fair, a portion went to each. In consequence of this the fairs were duller than would otherwise have been the case.

The show of fat cattle at eleven o'clock, was good, and the judges—Messrs. Andrich, Kerr, and Thomson, of this village—proceeded to duty. The following is the prize list:—Best herd—J. & R. McQueen, 1st; James Leslie, 2nd. Fat cow—Geo. Leask, 1st; Samuel Burnett, 2nd. Steer under 4—Samuel Burnett, 1st; J. & R. McQueen, 2nd. Heifer under 4—A Burnett, 1st; J. & W. Watt, 2nd. Best fatted beast on the ground—A. Burnett.

GRAIN.—Best barley—J. Marshall, 1st; A. Burnett, 2nd. Any other kind than red chaff wheat—J. & R. McQueen. Peas—J. & R. McQueen. White oats—James Moir. Judges of grain, Messrs. Horton and Arkle, of Elora.

FERGUS.—James Wilson lately had a cow die, and upon opening its stomach a stick over two feet long and about half an inch in diameter was found therein.—Jas. McQueen is building an extension to his store occupied by J. D. Williamson & Co.—A young man, son of Mr. John Gilmour, the other day sustained very painful injuries from a powder explosion. He had a quantity of powder in a pop bottle, and in the explosion which followed a touch from a match a piece of the bottle entered the young man's eye, inflicting a painful wound. Dr. Griffith has some slight hopes that the sight of the eye may not be lost entirely.—The News Record states that Inspector MacDonald was in Fergus on Monday afternoon of last week and paid back to Messrs. Holland & Co., the $300 charged them as brewers' license in the years 1876 and 1877, the court having decided that brewers do not require to pay any license fee. The interest that accrued upon the money will also be refunded out of the Consolidated Fund of the Province, but in the meantime the principal only had been paid.—The Fergus Bible Society's receipts last year were $225.47.

The Elora National Club in connection with the Conservative Association of Centre Wellington, has selected the following officers: President, John Godfrey; Vice-President, R. Dalby; Secretary, G. Haffner; Treasurer, Thomas Biggar.

THE FERGUS EASTER FAIR on Tuesday scarcely came up to the usual high standard. The Record says a lot of cattle were brought out, and many of them were in excellent condition, but buyers were very few, comparatively speaking. In the early part of the day business had a very dull and flat-like appearance, but as noon approached, more activity prevailed, and we believe a considerable number of sales were effected. The prices paid ranged from four to six cents per pound, live weight, the average being about five cents, or a trifle better. The large proportion of the cattle bought were for export to Europe. At the Fat Cattle Show, prizes were awarded as follows:—Best fatted herd—1st, Peter Rennie; 2nd, James Lindsay; 3rd, Arthur Walker. Best fatted ox or steer, 4 years old and over—1st, Jas. Griffith; 2nd and 3rd, Peter Rennie. Best fatted cow—1st, Thomas Richardson; 2nd, James Lindsay. Best fatted steer under four years old—1st, Peter Rennie; 2nd, Geo. S. Armstrong; 3rd, Arthur Walker. Best fatted heifer under four years old—1st, Geo. S. Armstrong; 2nd, Arthur Walker; 3rd, Jas. Lindsay.

On Friday two men named Charles Fox, foreman cooper, and John McCann laborer, were sent to repair a vat on the Toronto Brewing and Malting Company's premises when the gas tube which they were taking down in the vat to give them light to see to work with exploded, setting fire to the vat. McCann, who was terribly burnt, scrambled up the ladder and jumped off the vat, a distance of thirteen feet, between two cauldrons of boiling water, where he hung till rescued. Fox stopped in the vat and fought the flames with a sack which he had with him, escaping with a few bad burns. McCann is in a horrible state, his body, legs, hands and face being so severely burned that he is not expected to recover. Both men are married and have families.

The salvors of the "Cleopatra" obelisk, about which there has been litigation, have been awarded $10,000 by a British Court of Admiralty.

BEING THE EASTERLY THREE quarters of lot 26, 9th concession, Luther, County of Wellington, 150 acres, 70 of which are in a high state of cultivation, and fenced with cedar. A new frame barn 60 x 40 now being erected. A never failing creek runs through the rear of the lot. It is situated in an excellent neighbourhood, convenient to school, church, post office and gravel road. The soil throughout is excellent, there being no wet or stony land. Heavily timbered with beech, maple and elm.
Also north-half of lot 31, 11th concession, Luther, 100 acres—a superior lot throughout. 30 acres cleared, fenced, and under cultivation. Situated one and a half miles from Colbeck post office, and 2 miles from church and schoolhouse. Excellent roads. A wealthy and well settled locality.
The above lots are unrivalled anywhere as to quality of soil, timber and location. They will be sold at a great bargain. Only a small portion of the purchase money required down; balance to be extended over a term of years.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

Where shall we go for our

SPRING DRY GOODS?

—TO—

THE LION, OF COURSE!

BECAUSE THERE YOU HAVE

The Choicest Goods,

The Largest Assortment,

The Most Fashionable Goods,

And what is all important in such times as the present,

THE CHEAPEST GOODS

that can be bought anywhere.

We have to announce to our numerous friends—wholesale and retail—that

Our Spring Stock is now Complete in every Department

and that by the purchases we have made in the British and American Markets, we shall be able to offer greater inducements in CHEAP GOODS than have ever yet been known.

DRESS GOODS.

In this branch our assortment is unrivalled. No where else will ladies find the same range at anything like the prices. Our new colored Lustres, in the new shades, at 15 cents are extraordinary value, while our 12½ cent line, for spring wear, is the greatest bargain yet shown. Stripe Grey Linens 10 cents, Light Silks very low.

MILLINERY.

This branch merits a whole column to itself. Our Show Room is one blaze of beauty and fashion, and contains the latest Paris and New York Designs for the present season. Ladies who have visited all the different stores, say that the

Display of Millinery at the Lion is not merely unsurpassed, but unequalled

MANTLES.

Ladies, don't fail to inspect our display in this Department. We are showing a beautiful variety from the cheapest to the choicest.

DRESSMAKING.

It will be good news to many to know that we have secured the services of Mrs. Thompson at the head of this Department for another year. Her name is so well and favourably known that nothing further is required to guarantee the choicest designs, combined with perfect workmanship.

We cannot at the space as our disposal refer to the other Departments of our establishment, viz

Tailoring,
ver highest class.

Clothing,
ready-made.

Carpets,

Staple Goods,
for household use, &c., &c.

BUT WE SAY,

Come and see us!

Inspect our Goods!!

Ascertain our Prices!!!

and the question with which we commence will be most satisfactorily answered, thus:

Without fail Buy your Spring Goods at the Lion.

SAUGEEN PRESBYTERY.—This Presbytery held an adjourned meeting in Durham on the 9th and 10th insts. Reasons for the protest and appeal of the Rev. Mr. McMillan and others to the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, against the decision of the Presbytery come to at a recent meeting in the case of Mr. John Martin, Mount Forest, were read; the case being that Mr. Martin, who holds the Patent Deed of Knox Church, Mount Forest, refuses to deliver up the same to the Trustees of said church, and the decision of the Presbytery having been that it was not their duty to interfere in the matter, on the ground that the question involved was one purely of civil right, and therefore beyond their province. There was produced a call very numerously signed from Knox Church congregation, Harriston, to the Rev. John Anderson, Tiverton, in the Presbytery of Bruce, with promise of stipend of $800 and a manse or rented house. The Presbytery sustained the call, and instructed the clerk to forward it to the Presbytery of Bruce.

GALT.—Mr. Findlay was recently thrown out of his buggy and received several severe bruises, and his left arm was broken near the elbow.——Main & Scringer, livery keepers, let a horse and buggy recently to a party who wanted to go to Freeport. A reward of $50, $25 to be paid for the recovery of the horse and buggy, and the whole reward of $ 50 for their recovery and the arrest of the thief is offered.——The April cattle fair was well attended by sellers, and a large quantity of very fair cattle were offered. Prices as between buyers and sellers were widly apart, and it was with great difficulty sales were effected at all.

ARTHUR JUNCTION RAILWAY.—With indefatigable energy the Provisional Directors and members of the Railway Committee there are pushing forward this scheme. A by-law to raise $12,000—the amount ad judged by the Directors to be the share of village—is now advertised.

JUST RECEIVED A LARGE AND NEW STOCK OF

Clothing for Men and Boy's Wear.

We have been very careful this season in getting our clothing well made and fashionably cut, and owing to the great depression in the clothing trade throughout Canada and the United States we have been able to get goods at our own prices. We are in a better position this season to offer to the public clothing cheaper than ever, as our stock is larger and well bought. We will guarantee a purchased in clothing.

Saving of 15 to 20 per cent on every Dollar

Hat Department.

Our Hat Department is well stocked with all the leading London and New York styles.

Furnishing Department.

New Neck Ties, Scarfs, Bows, Silk Squares, Handkerchiefs, Gloves, white and colored Shirts and everything else belonging to a first-class furnishing stock 25 per cent cheaper than elsewhere.

Our Stock is the Largest, Cheapest and the most Stylish in Guelph.

Acknowledge with feelings of pride the great courtesy extended to them by the ladies of Town and County on the OPENING of their MILLINERY SHOW ROOMS YESTERDAY. The immense concourse of ladies that througed our establishment yesterday exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and the tone of admiration exhibited by the excellent taste of Town and Country ladies in praise of the exquisite taste displayed by the lady milliner artists of Paris, France, which we had on exhibition, is most flattering to our taste in bringing such excellent goods to Guelph.

We beg to say to the ladies of Guelph and its surroundings, that we have engaged this season as lady artist in millinery, Miss Smith, whose artistic skill in the profession is unsurpassed in any of the cities in the Dominion, and whose obliging manner wins for her the confidence and esteem of ladies of the highest rank and taste.

We confidently solicit the patronage of all who are in quest of the leading styles in millinery, which will be placed at exceedingly cheap prices this season in particular.

Ladies' Costumes and Silk Jackets

in large variety, and originality of Trimming, are now on exhibition at our establishment, and only require to be seen in order to command the highest praise.

A RARE CHANCE

To obtain a First Class Farm.

THERE WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC auction, unless previously disposed of by private contract, at the Market House, Guelph,

On Saturday, 20th day of April, 1878

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the Harbottle Farm, being all that valuable freehold farm, consisting of lot No. 9, in the 6th concession, west of the Grand River, in the Township of Pilkington, containing 184 acres, more or less. There are about 108 acres cleared and well fenced, and the remainining 10 acres are well timbered. The soil is about half clay loam, and the rest is somewhat lighter, but excellent, all in good cultivation. About 20 acred have been ploughed last fall. The orchard consists of about 4 acres of fruit trees. There are erected on the lot a good stone house 22 x 28, one story and a-half high; a good barn, driving house, and other outhouses. The farm is watered by a well on the premises, and a spring, and is situated about 5 miles from Elora, 18 miles from Guelph, and is readily accessible by good roads. It is conveniently situated as regards schools and churches. This presents a rare opportunity of obtaining an excellent farm in one of the best farming neighbourhoods in the County of Wellington. Possession will be given at once on completion of sale. Title good.

There will also be sold at same time and place all the right, title and interest of the vendor, 25 acres near above mentioned lot, being the north-east half of the north east-half of lot No. 3, in the 5th concession of Pilkington, about half of which is covered with good cedar for rails; the other half is timbered with elm and hemlock—very fine building timber. Title good, and possession at once. For terms of sale, and other particulars, apply to

S. S. Anniversary.

Entertainment in the Dublin St. Methodist Church.

The Dublin St. Church S.S. anniversary, held last evening, was a grand success, the attendance being large. The Rev. Mr. Brock occupied the chair. The programme opened with a chorus, "Onward Christian Soldiers," by the school and prayer by Mr. Brock. The programme as published below was gone through with by the scholars in a manner that was highly creditable to all concerned:—

Opening Address—Master Willie Stoneham.
Solo and Chorus—Children's Te Deum—School.
Dialogue—Bible Class Conversation—12 Scholars.
Recitation—Old Ironsides—Master Edgar Dixon.
Dialogue—Punctuality—3 Girls.
Chorus—Beautiful Mansions—School.
Recitation—Our Minister's Sermon—Master Gladstone McLean.
Dialogue—The Birds—30 Scholars.
Chorus—Ring, Ring the Bells—School.
Dialogue—The Lighthouse—Mr. G. Maddock's Class.
Recitation—Willie and the Apple—Master Clarence Maddock.
Chorus—"Beyond the Smiling"—School.
Recitation—Boy's Rights—Master Edger Dixon.
Parable—The Ten Virgins—10 Scholars.
Closing Address—Miss Emily Penfold.
Chorus—God Bless our School—School.

During the proceedings Mr. Jas. Hough gave a short and appropriate address in which was contained some excellent advice to the children as well as to those of riper years. The following is a synopsis of the annual report which was read by the secretary, Mr. J. Garbutt.

After referring to generalities regarding the good accomplished in the school the following statistics were given:

The number of scholars on the roll at the beginning of the past year was 288; boys, 141; girls, 147; at its close, 370; boys 169, girls, 201; number admitted during the year 82; boys, 28; girls, 54; number left during the year 14; boys, 10; girls, 4; average attendance by the boys, 92; girls, 109; average attendence in Bible class 35. Number of deaths during the year, 2, Arthur Meredith and Emma Hambleton. Number of verses recited during the year, 9,520; boys, 1,735; girls, 6,785. Contributions for the year, $89.85; by the boys, $35.55; girls, $54.30; average per Sunday by the boys, $2.97; by the girls, $4.52. Number of teachers and officers in the school, 35; male teachers, 13; female, 15; officers 7; making a total number belonging to the school of 405.

THE WINNIPEG MURDER.—John Gibbon, who murdered Daniel Bell, of the steamer Manitoba, was captured by a French half-breed on Monday morning in the woods on the east side of Red River, about four miles from St. Boniface. After being once fired at he asked for shelter in the house of a French half-breed on Sunday night, who sent him to a neighbor, and then came to Winnipeg and gave information to the police. The murderer had a revolver in each hand. He was brought to Winnipeg and delivered into the hands of the police two hours later.

AT the meeting of the Musical Union to-night the subject as to the advisability of giving a series of concerts will be considered. It is hoped a full attendance of the members will be present. The Committee will meet at 7:15, p.m. d1

We direct the special attention of our readers to the new and interesting announcements made by J. D. Williamson & Co., in our advertising columns to-day. "The Lion" is so well and widely known for cheap goods of every variety—that it is a "household word" in this part of Ontario—and its enterprising proprietors seem this year to be eclipsing all former efforts. They certainly hold out great inducements.

The railroads are now at peace, and the hotels have had their "war." The result of this recent cutting of first-class hotel rates New York leaves the Grand Central in the lead, with rates one and two dollars per day lower than the rest. eod

McBean & Co. for bird cages and blind fixtures. McBean & Co. for door mats and scrapers. Better variety stock and prices than elsewhere, at McBean & Co's. McBean & Co. for cornices and stair rods. McBean & Co. for all spring necessaries in the hardware line. d3.

See G. W. Hotchkin's springless truss and supporter advertisement in another column of this paper. d13 w2.

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

The funeral of the late Hon. John Young, of Montreal, was one of the largest ever seen in that city.

About two hundred passengers, known as the Patterson's party for Manitoba, left Paris and Woodstock on Monday, for the Prairie Province. They are nearly all from the counties of Brant, Oxford, Waterloo, Wellington and Wentworth, and a better or more respectable class of settlers never left any country. They expect to reach their destination on Saturday.

The purchase of the Methodist Church property for a market square, was submitted on Monday to the freeholders of Galt for ratification, and approved of by a majority of seventy-four. A large vote was polled.

Judge Jarvis, of Cornwall, died very suddenly on Monday.

Mrs. Tilton publishes a letter in the New York papers to-day re-affirming a statement made privately a few weeks ago, of the truth of the charge brought against Beecher. The latter replies maintaining his innocence.

Local News.

MUSICAL UNION meets this evening. The advisibility of giving a series of concerts will be considered.

PATERSON'S GUIDE to the trossachs, lakes, glens, and towns of Central Scotland, for sale at Anderson's bookstore.

TROUT FISHING.—Under an order in Council, now in force, trout fishing begins on the 1st May, and closes on the 15th September.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of John Hogg & Son. The house is old, reliable, and the stock in every department is, in every respect, magnificent.

A NUMBER of recruits were received for the Guelph Rifles last evening at the drill shed. There was a good muster, and spectators interested in the welfare of this first-class Rifle Company were present. There is still a few vacancies for recruits.

THERE is an agitation in military circles in Guelph for the formation of a band in connection with the batteries here. It is proposed to enroll a certain number of men as bandsmen and procure an efficient instructor. Mr. Philp would be just the man for the position.

THE Fire and Water Committee have accomplished a good act by taking such steps as to ensure a thorough organization of a Hook and Ladder Company in connection with the Fire Brigade. The company will consist of ten good men, to whom will be paid a salary of 25 dol. per annum, payable quarterly.

AN advertiser in the MERCURY has a grievance. He wished to engage a hired man, and to secure that end he advertised. Since then men, willing to be engaged, have come from the east, from the west, from the north, and from the south, and still they are coming. The advertisement has now been withdrawn, and the public are requested to take note of the fact. Something might be said of the advantage of advertising in the MERCURY, but comment is unnecessary.

RATEPAYERS should read carefully the special report of the Fire and Water Committee, setting forth certain systems of waterworks for the better protection of the town from fire. The system which has found the most favour with the Committee, on which Messrs. Sleeman and Melvin acted in this particular matter, was the Holly—which the Committee states means an expenditure of some 50,000 dol.

STREET WATERING.—Messrs. Robertson & Cull have been awarded the contract for watering Wyndham street and Market Square for 50 dol per week. The old hydrant system will be used, it being the most popular with the petitioners, or those who have to pay the great bulk of the cost. Some of the Councillors, in discussing the question, spoke of the great wear and tear on the stone road bed this hydrant system caused, and on that based their objections to the hydrants. It has been truthfully remarked that the constant action of even a drop of water will wear the hardest granite. It takes time though.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.—On Monday, 15th inst., at ten a.m., Margaret Richardson, aged 26 years, daughter of Thos. Richardson, sr., of West Garafraxa, came towards Fergus. On attempting to cross a foot bridge, near Gow's saw mill, she fell in, and the current took her over the dam, and drifted towards St. David's street bridge, where she was taken out of the water at twelve o'clock, noon, by Alex. Moffatt, when life was extinct. An inquest is expected to be held Tuesday evening.

FOUND DROWNED AT FERGUS.—About 2:30 on Monday, the body of a daughter of Thomas Richardson, sen., of West Garafraxa, was found floating in the Grand River, near Moffatt's planing mill. She left home the same morning about ten o'clock for Fergus to make some purchases. Half a mile above Fergus a foot bridge crosses the river, and it is supposed that as she was crossing the bridge, the current running swiftly, she became dizzy, fell off, and was carried down the rapids. Coroner Johnson held an inquest, when a verdict was returned in accordance with the above facts.

THE LATE DONALD CORMACK.—Mr. Jas. Cormack, sr., of this town, father of the late D. A. Cormack, whose death was chronicled some time ago as having taken place at San Diego, California, on the 4th inst., has received a paper from that place, which refers to the deceased in such a manner as to satisfy his friends here that the same noble heartedness which characterized his actions while living here, and which made him so popular with his acquaintances, was still a noticeable feature in all his actions while on the Pacific coast. The San Diego Union, in speaking of his demise, says:—"Don. was born at Brooklyn, New York, whence the family moved to Guelph (Ontario) Canada, in 1857. During the winter of 1874-75, he was taken with severe hemorrhages, and in the spring of 1875 came to San Diego for the benefit of his health, and remained until the fall of 1876, when, having apparently fully recovered, he returned to his home in Ontario. But the severe Canadian winter was too much for his delicate lungs, and he suffered renewed attacks of hemorrhage. In the spring of 1877 he came back to San Diego. But it was too late. His devoted mother came to him about two months ago, and smoothed his last days with a mother's affectionate tenderness. All who knew Don Cormack will ever remember him as a bright genial-hearted young man, of noble traits of character. His many friends in San Diego are deeply grieved at his early death."

TEN checker players from Guelph will proceed to Acton on Friday evening, to play an equal number of the best players in the county of Halton. Those from Guelph who will play were chosen at a meeting held last evening.

MODERATE to fresh easterly to westerly winds and fair weather, are the weather probabilities received to-day by Dominion telegraph.

SAFE ARRIVAL.—By Dominion Telegraph it is learned that the steamer Quebec has arrived safely at Liverpool, having on board the stock of Messrs. Porter & Hawes. The vessel was fourteen days in crossing the ocean, and the passage was in every respect a very agreeable one.

THE Guelph Police Magistrate holds that it would even be better for crime to go unpunished than to place a prisoner in the witness box to give evidence against a prisoner who was only equally guilty with himself.

MR. HOTCHKINS, maker of the springless truss and supporter, will be at the Royal hotel to-day and to-morrow. On his first visit to a place, he says, he is treated with caution, but on his subsequent visits he has any number of patients.

STEALING EGGS.—A young lad named Wm. Bittle appears to be given to taking that which doth not belong to him. At all events he had a partiality to certain eggs belonging to Mr. Harrison. For stealing "hen fruit" from that gentleman the lad was committed to gaol by the Police Magistrate, this morning, for one day.

ENTERTAINMENT.—The ladies of the Norfolk street Methodist Church are providing an orange social to take place on Wednesday evening next. New talent will be intermingled with the old familar voices in the choice programme of music and readings to be rendered. Contrary to custom there will be no extra charge for a generous supply of fruit.

MR. GOWDY spoke a few words of wisdom at the Council Board last evening, when he found fault with the way in which the By-law prohibiting cows running at large was carried out. He complained that when the owner of an animal was fined at the Police Court, it was only a paltry fifty cents, just enough to make the owner let his animals out again for cheap pasturage on the roadside. He advocated a heavier fine, four or five dollars and costs. This would stop the nuisance, and a majority of the ratepayers would be glad to hear of the Council so amending the By-law.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

NOTHING DEFINITELY SETTLED YET.

April 15.

The state of affairs with reference to the Eastern question remains substantially unchanged. There is a strong feeling in both England Russia that war is inevitable. At St. Petersburg the belief is stated to prevail that England's willingness to continue negotiations is rather for the purpose of isolating Russia than arriving at an understanding. Some influential persons believe that England will not go to war alone, hence earnest efforts continue to satisfy Austria. Some moderate men in official circles have begun censuring the Russian generals, diplomatists, and newspapers for pushing the Government into a position where the issue between Russian independent action and European control is unavoidable. But the majority of the public continue to declare that the Government has been too conciliatory. The press oppose any concessions.

A Berlin special states that preparations are making in Russia for the organization of a general levy. Passports will only be issued to persons over 46 years of age.

The insurrection in Thessaly is almost overwhelmed by large forces of Turks from Thrace and Bulgaria. In Epirus it completely hangs fire. The Cretans are still able to hold their own, but it is feared Turkish reinforcements will be sent to the island. The Greeks are much discouraged. They believe Russia is intriguing against them.

Dr. Butt's resignation of his seat in Parliament is denied.

The British Columbia Parliament has been dissolved, and new elections ordered.

The judgments against Tweed are said to involve a total of twenty-two million dollars.

The United States Senate on Monday voted by 37 to 6 the Bill to repeal the Bankrupt Law.

Mr. David Glass, of London is lying seriously ill from a cold contracted at the Sandwich Assize Court.

The inhabitants on the shores of the St. Lawrence near Cape Rosier, are reported as being in an almost starving condition.

Twenty-two thousand Utes are to be removed by the United States authorities from Colorado to New Mexico, and resistance is anticipated.

The Mellon Burglary.

"Buck" Rae and James Kennedy Committed for Trial.

The Police Court was crowded this morning by parties wishing to hear the trial of the prisoners, arrested on a charge of committing a burglary at the tavern kept by one Mellon, on the York Road, about four miles from town. The robbery was a most daring one—and had it not happened it would have been difficult to believe that there was in town any young men or lads who could so far have fallen as to have been connected with any such outrage.

James Rae, known among his companions as "Buck," and James Kennedy, were brought before the Police Magistrate for preliminary examination. As it had been whispered abroad that the prisoner Kennedy was prepared to be a witness, and make a clean breast of the whole transaction, it was wondered by some how it was that before pleading to the charge, one who was charged in connection with another for committment of a crime could give evidence in a preliminary examination, or how discrimination could be shown as to which one of the two could be called as a witness. The matter, however, was settled, as can be seen below.

Mr. H. W. Peterson conducted the case on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. A. M. McKinnon defended the prisoner Rae.

Ann Mellon gave her evidence, which amounted in substance to the report of the burglary already published in the MERCURY.

When the prisoner James Kennedy was called up Mr. McKinnon objected to his evidence, from the fact that Kennedy was charged with Rae for the alleged act, and in such a case the Crown had no right to call either of the witnesses to give evidence.

Mr. Peterson held that his action was perfectly regular in and preliminary examination, and stated that there were precedents for such a procedure. He would admit, however, that Kennedy need not give evidence to criminate himself if he refused to do so.

The magistrate held that the Crown could not call the witness, but after some further argument allowed the witness to be sworn to show the Crown that it could not be admitted as evidence.

James Kennedy, one of the prisoners, was sworn—He stated that on Saturday night he met Rae and Jennings on Wyndham street. It had been arranged that witness and Jennings should go out to Mellon's for a game of cards. Rae, Jennings and the witness started for Mellon's about nine o'clock, by way of the railway track. On reaching the tavern they found it closed. Jennings left them, and after waiting for a while to see if he would come back, they left. They afterwards found Jennings in a barn alongside the railway track. They wanted him to go home with them. He refused, stating that he was sick and would sleep there all night. Rae and the witness then left him and proceeded back to the tavern. They rapped at the door but could get no answer, and finally got into the house by the cellar window. They then went through the house upstairs, into a room next to Miss Mellon's room. They got out of the window unto the roof of a shed and went to the window of her room. The witness did not know whether Rae or himself lifted her room window. Rae went in first and witness followed. Miss Mellon did not scream but appeared to cry. Rae held her on the bed and told the witness to throw the trunk out. The big trunk was examined but nothing was found in it. A small trunk was then thrown out by the witness to the roof of the shed and he got out. Rae followed him and threw the trunk to the ground. They both then left carrying the trunk with them. It was taken to a field near the railway track and Rae kicked the bottom with his boot. Rae felt in the trunk and getting something out said, here it is, and put some money in his pocket. They walked along the track towards Guelph as far as Allan's bridge, where they left it. Rae took the money out of his pocket, counted out $40, handed it to the witness and told him that was half the amount secured. They then went home. On Sunday Rae and witness again met, but did not go to the place where the trunk had been left. The witness was arrested on Sunday night by Constable Armstrong. He endeavored to escape by getting out of the window of his bedroom on to the kitchen roof. While there he threw what money he had left on the roof of the house, expecting it to stick there. The money was rolled up in a piece of newspaper. He had only been at Mellon's once before, playing cards on Sunday.

Cross-examined by Mr. McKinnon—He first told Chief Constable Kelly about Rae being with him on the night of the robbery. Mr. Kelly told the witness that the best thing he could do was to own up if he was guilty, as Miss Mellon had recognized him and would swear against him. On the Saturday evening the witness was pretty drunk, and he could not remember whether there were more present than himself, Jennings and Rae. He was sure that Rae had not been left in the barn and Jennings accompanied him. After the witness had got in the tavern he had some wine to drink, which he found in the bar. The witness stated that when he and Rae went into the woman's room it was not for the purpose of getting money. When asked what he went for he hesitated and did not answer.

Joseph Jennings was sworn—He stated that Rae, Kennedy and himself had left town for Mellon's tavern about nine o'clock on Saturday night. He was drunk, and after reaching Mellon's he left Rae and Kennedy and went into a barn to sleep. They afterwards tried to wake him up to go home, but he refused to go as he was sick.

Constable Lynch testified to having found the trunk near Mellon's tavern. It was found after the prisoner Kennedy had told him where it was.

High Constable Armstrong testified to having arrested Kennedy. He arrested Kennedy on the roof of his father's house on Monday morning while he was attempting to escape. The witness afterwards found eight $4 bills rolled up in a piece of paper in the front of the house where Kennedy lives.

In cross-examination it was learned that when Rae was arrested he had only fifty cents in his pockets.

This concluded the evidence.

Mr. McKinnon held that no case had been made out as no evidence to criminate Rae had been submitted, excepting that of Kennedy, to which he had taken exception to earlier in the proceedings. He held that he might have pursued a certain course by calling on Rae to convict Kennedy in the same manner as Kennedy had been called upon by the Crown to convict Rae.

The Magistrate held that that showed the absurdity of the Crown calling upon Kennedy.

Mr. Peterson, for the Crown, held that the examination was simply a preliminary one, and that it was perfectly right and proper to call on one of the two prisoners charged when one voluntarily gives evidence, and cited cases where such evidence had been admissable.

On the usual caution being read over to the prisoners Rae answered "I ain't guilty," and Kennedy remarked "I've nothing to say."

The Magistrate held there was sufficient evidence to commit Rae, independent of that given by the prisoner Kennedy. The won an Mellon had been robbed, and she thought that from Rae's appearance he was the party that had held her down, while another robbed the house. He held that it was certainly very strange that Kennedy had been called to give evidence in the way that had been done. The Crown, however, had cited a case where such evidence was sufficient to commit the party giving it. He therefore would commit both prisoners to stand their trial.

Bail was refused for the prisoner Rae.

The two Duggins, Jennings, and Thos. Brown, arrested on suspicion, were discharged.

Town Council.

Important Fire and Water Committee's Report.

At the meeting on Monday evening there were present His Worship the Mayor in the chair, Messrs. Elliott, Rich. Mitchell, Sleeman, Chase, Bruce, Doran, Gowdy, Melvin, Chubb, Biscoe, Hearn, Robert Mitchell, Roche, Day and Dr. McGuire.

Accounts were presented from Hart & Rawlinson, $3; W. G. Smith & Co., $111-52; Innes & Davidson, $49.20; W. P. Smith, work done in 1877, $36.

The Mayor stated that he had been served with a writ in re damages claimed by Wm. Graham, for damages sustained to his property on Cambridge street.

A petition from business men on Wyndham street and Market Square, asking the Committee to take action in watering said streets.

It was recommended that Robertson & Cull be awarded the contract. $50 per week is the amount to be paid.

From J. E. McElderry, in regard to damages sustained by him to lot on Tiffany street, by the removal of gravel. It was claimed their value was depreciated to the amount of $40.

From Ladies Benevolent Association, asking for $29, to make up balance of expenses incurred in connection with soup kitchen.

From Thomas H. Taylor and eighteen others, for improvements on Suffolk street, between Norfolk and Yorkshire streets. The petition related to defining the westerly limits.

The petitions and accounts were referred.

The question of the writ served in the matter of William Graham's claim was brought up.

Moved by Mr. Biscoe, seconded by Mr. Robt. Mitchell, that the town solicitor be instructed to advise this Council as to their liability in the suit of Graham against the town, and in the meantime to enter an appearance in said suit.

Moved by Mr. Sleeman, seconded by Mr. Elliott, that the petition for street watering be adopted, providing the necessary number of names and amount of assessment be sufficient, and the work be done to the satisfaction of the Road and Bridge Committee.

Moved by Mr. Robt. Mitchell, seconded by Mr. Hearn, that the petition in regard to street watering be referred to the Road and Bridge Committee, and that tenders be advertised for.

The amendment was lost and the motion carried on the following division:—

YEAS.—Messrs. Day, Roche, Richard Mitchell, Chase, Melvin, Hearn, Robert Mitchell.—7.

NAYS.—Messrs. Elliott, Sleeman, Chubb, Doran, Bruce, Gowdy, McGuire, Biscoe—8.

ROAD AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Richard Mitchell, chairman, reported:—

That up to the first of April they have made the following expenditures:—For breaking stones, $117.15; for stone, $116.38; repairs on roads, drains, etc., $147.50; for lumber, $22.41; cedar posts, not yet used, $12.39. Total, $715.83.

Your Committee recommend that they be authorized to lay a new four foot sidewalk on the east side of Dublin street, from Paisley to Oxford streets; and one the same width on the west side of same Dublin street, from Oxford street, to connect with one in front of the Dublin street Methodist Church, at a total cost of about $100.

Your Committee also recommend that they be allowed to proceed with the repairs on Quebec street, West Gordon street, and a portion of Wilson street near the G.T.R., by laying on broken stone gravel on both, as may be thought most suitable.

Your Committee at next Council meeting will present a detailed statement of such improvements on the streets, as they consider necessary, and will endeavor to make the amount as small as possible.

MARKET AND DRILL SHED COMMITTEE.

Mr. Melvin, chairman, reported:—

That having considered the petition of John Tyson and others with reference to prohibiting others than butchers from selling butchers' meat in shops by retail, are of opinion that the object sought for in an amendment to the Market By-law are already fully avowed by sections 16 and 21, and that with regard to the suggestion of said petitioners to appoint a Market Inspector, we would likewise report that the object sought for is already provided for in section 3 of present Market By-Law.

Your Committee would recommend that the By-Law Committee be instructed to bring in a By-law amending the present Market By-law, so that all produce brought to market shall, at the request of either buyer or seller, be weighed on the market scales, and that a certificate of weight from the Market Clerk or Town Weigher, shall be conclusive and binding on either party as regards such weight.

We would recommend that the account of Mr. Osborne for cord wood, amounting to $54.75, be paid, and that the sum of $300 be placed to the credit of your Committee to-night, to meet currrent expenses.

Your Committee would report the following expenditure up to April 1st :—Gas, $238 ; coal, $148.52 ; wood, $25.31 ; attendant on gates, etc., $16.82, amounting in the aggregate to $428.65 ; amount placed to credit of your Committee, $500.

Your Committee beg to submit the following estimate of receipts and expenditures for the current year :—Receipts—Town Hall rent, $1,054 ; drill shed, $37 ; butchers' rents, $874 ; sheds, $395 ; basement, $72 ; market fees and scales, $2,831 ; total, $5,263. Expenditure—Gas, $650 ; coal, $500 ; wood, 200 ; painting, whitewashing, etc., $100 ; attendance on clocks, $40 ; repairs etc., 250 dol.; sundries, 160 ; contingencies, 100 dol. in a total of 2,000 dol.; amount already placed to credit of Committee, 500 dol., leaving the sum of 1,500 dol. to be provided for, which amount we would ask to be placed at the credit of your Committee.

The following is a statement of receipts from town hall, drill shed, butchers' stalls, sheds, etc., for quarter ending March 31st :—From fees and scales, January, 352 dol. 97c.; February, 227 dol. 30c.; March, 217 dol. 02c.; total from fees and scales, 797 dol. 38c. Town hall and drill shed, 271 dol. ; butchers' stalls, 225 dol.; market sheds, 66 dol.; making a revenue from all sources for the quarter amounting to 1,359 dol. 38c. Amount of corresponding quarter last year, 1,395 dol. 68c.

PARK AND EXHIBITION COMMITTEE.

Mr. Sleeman, chairman, reported that having made an examination of grounds, find that the trees have suffered very severely during the past year, about three hundred of them having died. They find the buildings in good repair, excepting the cattle sheds, a small portion of it having been blown down. They also find the caretakers house too small for his accommodation, and would recommend that a kitchen be added to it. Your committee would therefore ask the sum of $400 be placed to their credit for the purpose of paying interest due on purchase of grounds, planting trees, repairing cattle sheds, and other improvements as recommended.

RELIEF COMMITTEE.

Dr. McGuire, chairman, reported :

They recommend payment of the following accounts : S. J. Cherry, flour, $178 ; John Harris, bread, $10 ; A. Armstrong, bread, $9.25 ; G. S. Wilson, groceries, $7.75.

Summary of expenditure for March : Accounts as above, $205 ; wood, $486 ; sundries, $79.27 ; accounts from 1877, $299.60. Total $1,070.17.

Eight cords of wood are on hand. They have under contract, by authority, wood amounting to $201.

They ask for a further appropriation of $1,200.

Their attention has been called to the case of Joseph Allison, who has partially lost his eye sight, and is in danger of being totally blind. He has been sent to the Toronto Eye Infirmary, the cost of which will not exceed $20. He is in indigent circumstances.

PRINTING COMMITTEE

Mr. Doran, chairman, recommended that C. Acton Burrows & Co, be paid $100 on account of printing, the balance of the account to be paid when the committee have been satisfied that the items are correct.

FIRE AND WATER COMMITTEE.

Mr. Gowdy, chairman, presented the following special report :

Your special committee appointed to consider the best means of protection from fire, and your fire and water committee beg leave to report that they have carefully considered the various means and systems of fire protection, and the probable cost of the same, and would submit the following as the result of their enquiries and deliberations, that to purchase a first-class steam fire engine, with the necessary hose, hose reel, six extra double tanks, and necessary engine house, would cost from $13,000 to $14,000, and would require another fire company, and the annual cost connected therewith, and would at the best be only a temporary improvement on the present system. That a modified or temporary system of waterworks located near the Eramosa Bridge, or at Mr. Goldie's mill, with steam pump, and iron pipes, leading down Wyndham and Norfolk streets, and Market Square, can be constructed at the cost of about $12,000 or $14,000, for the purpose of fire protection, and watering streets only, but not capable of being extended beyond the limits mentioned, and could be run at an annual expense of from one thousand to twelve hundred dollars.

As system of water works similar to those in Brantford, at a cost of about thirty-five thousand dollars ; this system is highly spoken off in Brantford, and upon the whole seems to give fair satisfaction. The main pipe is 8 inches, and branch are 6 by 4 inch, covering about three miles of pipe together, and as a small reservoir, and engine about thirty horse power, the annual working expenses being about twelve to fourteen hundred dollars exclusive of repairs from the time the engineer has notice of fire it takes from twelve to fifteen minutes before water can be thrown on the fire, but there can be no doubt that if the steam was kept up and the engine used oftener, that the water could be used in a much shorter time, or if the steam was kept up constantly the water might be used just as soon as notice is given, but this would necessitate a much larger outlay for running expenses. In Brantford they only run from two to three days in the week. Works such as contemplated in the foregoing estimate of costs would, although capable of being utilized to a limited extent for other purposes, be of use mainly for fire protection.

Your Committee have had laid before them by T. W. Cooper, P. L. S., a system of waterworks for protection against fire and supply for domestic purposes as well, to be operated by a steam pump, of the capacity to pump four hundred and fifty thousand gallons in ten hours ; the water to be taken from the lower bay of the Eramosa branch of the Speed to a small filtering bason on the edge of Bridge street immediately above the river ; thence up Crawford street and across the river ; thence up Huskinson street and Wyndham street to Cork street, thence up Cork street to top of Catholic hill to a stand pipe, 80ft high, and capable of containing 31,000 gallons ; thence from junction of Cork and Wyndham streets up Wyndham. The whole to include three miles of piping of 12, 8 and 6 inch, and costing completed about $40,000. This sum could be ultimately extended to cover the whole town by continuing mainpipe up to near the Hospital on the Eramosa hill, and erecting an additional stand pipe. This no doubt would answer for both purposes of protection from fire, and furnish a good supply of pure fresh water for domestic and manufacturing purposes as well. Annual cost of working for present requirements from $1,600 to $1,800.

A system based mainly on the Holly System, with piston pumps, as made by the Holly Company, Lockport, N. Y., for an amount of from $42,000 to $45,000, including 4 miles of piping, with 12 inch main and 8 and 6 inch branch pipes. This scheme would answer for fire protection and domestic purposes as well, and would with the addition of a stand pipe and small reservoir, at an additional cost of say $5,000, or a total of about $50,000, give ample for fire and domestic purposes for an almost indefinite time, so far as our growth in population is concerned, and could be run at an annual cost of from $1,800 to $2,000 for fire and for domestic purposes, from two to three days in the week.

Your Committee have thus laid before you the various schemes that suggest themselves for the purpose of fire protection, combined with a supply for domestic purposes, and the probable cost of erecting and running the same, and although your Committee do not mean to say that in the estimates of costs of construction the amount given are correct tenders, still we believe that for all practical purposes they are as near as necessary for present requirements. We believe the sum indicated for the different systems would fully suffice for their construction. Of course it will be understood that the estimates for working expenses is nearly an appropriation to what we believe would be the cost running for fire purposes except in the case of the second scheme suggested which includes running six days in a week during summer for watering streets, and two days in a week in winter for other purposes.

We are of opinion that a system which would include a standpipe and if possible a reservoir as well, would be preferable, and would recommend such in preference to a system of direct pumping, as likely to give the greatest satisfaction as well as being the most economical as regards working expenses, besides in case of accident to machinery a present supply for fire purposes would always be on hand, and are further of opinion that a moderate revenue could be obtained from the railways and private individuals which would in some degree tend to lessen the annual cost of running to the town. Upon the whole your committee are of opinion that if the financial position of the town would warrant it (a question upon which the ratepayers themselves must decide) a system which would combine protection from fire and at the same time provide a suitable supply of good pure water such as can be got from the Eramosa branch of the river Speed, or what would be better still if the quantity is sufficient from the springs on Water street between Maple street and Mr. Wells's back gate, would in the end be best for the interests of the town. As there seems to be great doubt in the minds of our Solicitors whether the powers contained in the municipal act granting to municipalities the power to construct water works are as comprehensive as desirable or confers powers which it might be advisable to have, we recommend that in due time notice be given and such a special act of Parliament obtained as will confer all necessary rights to enable the municipality to carry out a complete system of water works, such as would most conduce to the benefit of the town, and with such powers of extension as would enable the municipality to meet the growing requirements of the town as might arise.

FOURTH REPORT.

Your Committee consider on account of the limited means as present under their control to extinguish fires would recommend that a Hook and Ladder Company be formed at once composed of ten good men to receive $25 each per annum paid quarterly, we believe that a Hook and Ladder Company often does as much to control a fire as the engine.

Your Committee beg to report that they have made an estimate of the expenditure required for the year 1878 as follows :—

By paid sundries account for 1877	$ 236 49
Gas account and repairs	1,250 00
Salaries steam Fire Engine Co	1,750 00
Hook and Ladder Company and sundries	300 00
Horse feed and teamster wages	780 00
Cleaning hose	50 00
Coal oil, lamps, &c	350 00
Wood and coal	150 00
Contingencies	370 00
Total	$4,236 49
Deduct and paid for 1877	236 49
Leaving balance required for 1878	$4,000 00

Your Committee would also report that they have already expended as follows :—

By sundries account paid for 1877	$ 236 49
1 quarter gas account	246 82
Timothy Sheady, for cleaning hose	7 00
Hay and oats for horses	49 93
Quarter salary for nine engineers	112 50
" " Treasurer	100 00
" " Chief Engineer	50 00
Expenses to Lockport and Brantford	15 55
Total amount paid	$ 858 29

ACCOUNTS TO PAY.

Gas account to April 1st	$ 276 78
Smith & Co., coal oil and lamps account	111 52
Total	$ 388 30
Total expenditure	$1,246 59
Deduct amount paid for 1877	236 49
Balance for 1878	$1010 10
To amount of appropriations	1300 00
To credit of your Committee for current expenses	289 90

The Road and Bridge report was adopted on motion of Messrs. Richard Mitchell and Day.

On motion of Messrs. Melvin and Bruce the third clause of the Market and Drill Shed report was adopted.

On motion of Messrs. Gowdy and Day the first clause of the fourth report of the Fire and Water Committee was adopted.

Moved by Dr. McGuire, seconded by Mr. Roche, that the Relief report be adopted.

The resolution was changed by striking out the appropriation of $1,200, and substituting $300 to meet current expenses.

This was done after Mr. Robt. Mitchell had found fault with the report as it stood.

Dr. McGuire made a motion that $5 be given Mr. Robt. Mitchell for finding fault with everything that was brought up.

The printing report was adopted on motion of Messrs. Doran and Mitchell.

Moved by Messrs. Doran and Day that the second clause of the first report of the Relief Committee be amended by striking out a certain portion of it, which recommended that a Mr. Butler, now at St. Joseph's Hospital, be transferred to the County Poor House.

Mr. Doran stated that in making the motion he had done so after getting the opinion of Dr. Herod, who states that Mr. Butler was suffering from a spinal disease and that if he were removed it would be very dangerous. He considered that it would be a very dangerous proceeding to remove him.

Mr. Day stated that in seconding the motion he did it because he was given to understand that the removal would cost the man his life.

Dr. McGuire remarked that it would be a strange thing if Dr. Herod would be willing to grant a certificate stating that it would be dangerous to have Butler removed. It was only a simple case of paralysis, and the speaker was aware that Dr. Herod was not so very careful of a patient that would be more likely to experience serious results than a paralytic patient. But on that occasion it was to have the patient to vote. It is said that the doctor afterwards took the patient to his home and gave him a horn which warmed him up all right. The speaker had asked Butler if he could dress himself, and he answered yes. He could not see any reason why the town should pay for the support of Butler, when he could be kept for nothing.

Mr. Sleeman considered that the Poor House at the present time was being too much used as a hospital, and if he was not mistaken it had been said that some patients that were there now would have to be removed to some hospital. He would support the motion.

Mr. Robt. Mitchell wanted to know why Butler could not be removed to the General Hospital.

The Mayor remarked that no incurable patient could be received at that institution.

Mr. Melvin supported the report of the Relief Committee, inasmuch as it recommended that the patient Butler should be removed from an institution, which received so much for taking care of him, to one that was free. If such was not the case he would support the motion.

Mr. Biscoe opposed the motion, and stated that, if the season had not been so far advanced when the Poor House opened last year, he would have brought in such a report as the present Committee had.

The motion was lost on the following division :—

Yeas—Messrs. Day, Doran, Sleeman—3.

Nays—Messrs. Roche, Gowdy, Hearn, Bruce, Rich. Mitchell. Elliott, Melvin, Chubb, Biscoe, Robt. Mitchell, Dr. McGuire—11.

The Mayor called the attention of the Council to the necessity of having the By-laws of the corporation consolidated.

Mr. Gowdy called the attention of the Council to the necessity of altering the By-law prohibiting cattle running at large. A great deal of property was destroyed by animals on the streets. Occasionally some person was fined a paltry fifty cents for allowing animals to run at large. He was in favor of making the amount much larger.

Moved by Mr. Robt. Mitchell, seconded Mr. Biscoe, that the By-law Committee be requested to take steps for consolidating the general By-laws of the town as soon as possible. Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

Daily Mercury.

TUESDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 16, 1878

Another Bugaboo Disposed of.

One of the amusing fictions of the Protectionists is the statement that the Dominion, and especially Ontario, suffers from the free importation of United States products, and there is an expression of holy horror in the countenance of the fond fiscal enthusiast—who tells you that, in 1877, we bought from the Yankees nearly twenty-eight millions worth of articles upon which we foolishly neglected to tax ourselves. The millions roll off roundly from his tongue, and to the unthinking, appears a very formidable affair. A little quiet examination of the items making up this large sum will satisfy the most timerous, we think that, Sir John A., who instituted, and Mr. A. Mackenzie who retained this free list, knew what they were about, and that it would be sheer folly to attempt its curtailment. We may premise that, while we have such a large free list, we derive much of our revenue from our imports, and that although, from all countries we admit thirty-five millions of free goods, we exact duties to the amount of about twelve and a half millions of dollars from about sixty-one millions of other importations, and that we cannot be regarded as rocking with the free trade nations of the earth. Nor is it likely that, with our present and prospective liabilities, we can dispense with a revenue tariff for a long time to come. In spite of any theories of any statesman, we are necessarily compelled to afford what is known as incidental protection, and the exigencies of the public service have forced Mr. Mackenzie to go further in this direction than his predecessor had the moral courage to proceed. Sir John in office and Mr. Mackenzie out of it, were agreed upon the advisability of admitting raw materials free of duty, as an encouragement, if you will, to our infant manufactures. But Sir John, in opposition, barks back, while Mr. Mackenzie, at the head of a Government, maintains his consistency. Hence the existing free list.

Now, what are these free goods ? We have drugs and dye stuffs, important raw materials amounting to $320,792. Then come manufactured and partly manufactured articles, to a further amount of $814.942, amongst which are bolting cloth and burstones for our millers, cotton hose to the amount of over half a million for our factories, duck for belting and hose, nets and seines for our fisheries ; veneering for our cabinet-ware ; rags for our paper mills ; junk and oakum for our shipbuilders ; straw plait, fire brick, bookbinders tools, and various other articles of similar character essential to the industrial progress of the country, and which are either unproducible here, or required in such small quantities that it would not pay us to enter upon the manufacture of them. What sane mam, unless a politician out of office, would propose to tax them ? Anatomical preparations, paintings, specimens of botany, and other matters relating to arts and science are admitted duty free to the amount of $31,000. Even Dr. Orton wouldn't put a duty on them. Ship materials are imported from the United States duty, free to the extent of $17,273, as are metals to the figure of $713,017. What sort of fishing would it be which would hamper their use by the imposition of "protective" duties ? Of natural products, placed on the free list, are many used in manufacturing operations, amongst which are bristles, earths, Mexican fibre, raw furs, ivory, nuts, moss for upholstering, gums, curled hair, manilla, and sea grass, and numerous others representing a respectable sum in the aggregate. Broom corn is so imported to the value of $88,795, India rubber and gutta percha to $210,559, raw furs to $94,261, and hair to $21,252. To tax these articles would be to unwisely check important industries. Of hides, horns and pelts we import to the extent of nearly a million and a quarter of dollars, duty free, from the United States alone. What tanner in the possession of his senses, would advocate the imposition of duties upon them ? We import grease and grease scraps worth $144,399. To tax these would "protect" nobody. Rosin, tar, and pitch we bring in to the value of $105,122. A tax upon these would be a profitless impost upon our marine as inadvisable as it would be manifestly absurd. Undressed flax, hemp and tow are brought in to the amount of $376,011,—principally for use in the maritime Provinces,—and the same remark applies to them. Of stone and marble unwrought, we purchase from the United States not less than $134,749 worth. A tax upon either of them would be useless and indefensible, and really a tax upon improvements. Under Sir John A.'s famous Treaty, fish come in free, and we import this article, in one shape or other to the tune of $713,687. We could not tax it now if we would, and would not if we could. Coal is free, and no common-sense Ontario man desires to see such an important agent in industrial pursuits subject to duty. Of anthracite we use to the extent of $1,777,639 ; of bituminous $1,304,510 ; and of other and coke $94,005, or a total of $3,176,154 in addition to our large importations from Great Britain. Tobacco leaf is brought in, duty free, to the value of $866,888, being subject, of course, to excise duties when manufactured. Wool, of a quality inferior to that raised in Canada, but nevertheless necessary to the manufactures of our country, is entered at the sum of $692,811. Unmanufactured goods, too, are imported worth $663,354. Many other natural products employed in manufactures might be enumerated, but although they swell the aggregate they do not amount to such large sums individually.

We have already shown how more than ten millions of the free goods from the United States are made up, and not one article mentioned, we venture to assert, would be willingly taxed by a friend to manufacturing progress. Settlers' effects, from the United States, are free goods, and were brought into Canada in 1877 to the estimated value of $718,165, and of these $492,099 came to Ontario, despite the cry of depression so industriously raised in this portion of the Dominion. Coin and bullion are entered on the free list, and amounted, in 1877, to $1,933,471, of this sum not less that $1,898,404 coming to Ontario. Animals, for the improvement of stock, are admitted free, and came in to the extent of $117,933. But the space at our disposal compells us to defer our completion of the list. We have accounted for more than thirteen millions of the free imports from the United States during last year, and think that our readers will agree with us that not a single item has been mentioned which need alarm the most nervous Yankeephobist, or call for the special intervention of the most rabid protectionist. A further examination of the free imports will be quite as satisfactory in its results.

In the Supreme Court on Monday, judgment was given in the Jacques Cartier and Charlevoix election cases. In the former the entire Court was unanimous for dismissal of the petition upon sixteen of the seventeen points offered by the petitioners, and upon the seventeenth a majority took the same view. Mr. Laflamme's election is, therefore, triumphantly sustained. In the Charlevoix case the decision—merely affecting the right of appeal—went in favour of the respondent, Mr. Langevin.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

COMPANIONS IN TRIBULATION—LIZZIE AND THE STRANGER TELL EACH OTHER THEIR STORY.

"Who are you—what do you here?" she quickly asked. "Have you come to mock me by presenting a hope which was to be destroyed as soon as excited? Is your nature so cruel and wicked as to allow you to do so? Well, woman, you have had your triumph. Go and rejoice over it, and tell to those that sent you how successful their fiendish trick has been; tell them how I was deceived into the belief that you had brought me back my child; tell them how, when the joy was changed to the agony of disappointment, I was overwhelmed and smitten to the ground. Go—go—and regale their greedy ears with a description of it all."

"Lady—dear lady! I know not what you mean," returned Lizzie. "I am not here by my own consent; I was by violence carried away from my home and brought to this island, where I am kept a prisoner."

"What! a prisoner! You, too, a prisoner here? Another victim to his cruel pride. How comes that? Is there still an older brother? and has he, too, married beneath him in the eyes of the Laird of Benachray? It surely cannot be, for never did I hear Conrad speak of any brother but one. Yet, if not for this, why have they sent you hither? Speak, you know who I am, and what right I have to know."

"Lady, I am utterly ignorant of what your words import," answered Lizzie, her bewildered looks amply attesting the truth of her words. "I am the wife of Harold Logan, the wronged and persecuted. This is my boy, the heir to Mount Cairn; but Gilmour has usurped the inheritance, and has had us abducted to secure his false position."

"Harold Logan!—Mount Cairn!" repeated the lady. "These are names I never heard before. But doubtless the Colonel and this Gilmour of whom you speak count kin—all are of kin in this Highland region; and family pride is the Molech to whom human hearts must be sacrificed. Let me see. Now that I look at you attentively, I perceive you are kind and good; but you are not high-born—you were not your husband's social equal when he married you. Say—am I not right?"

"You are. I have been for many years an orphan. I resided with my uncle, a shepherd in Glenroy. 'Twas there Harold and I first saw each other, and learned to love. Oh, I should have discouraged his intentions, I should have resisted his solicitations when he asked me to be his wife, for this has brought much evil upon him."

"But you loved each other fondly—truly, I suppose?"

"Loved? Oh, yes. And we would have been happy—very happy in our obscurity, if we had been allowed to remain in it."

"Ah!—a private marriage, and kept secret to evade the consequence of family displeasure. Was your husband the son of a gentleman?"

"He was the son of a baronet," answered Lizzie, proudly.

"A baronet! and his eldest son?"

"Yes——"

"And you the inmate of a shepherd's cottage! My poor girl this was certain to bring you sorrow and suffering. You should have resisted the growth of affection, both in your heart and his, for it was sure to breed misery one day or other. Yet why should I speak thus? God knows I fell as deeply into the sweet yet dangerous snare of love as any one, and my punishment has been great—oh, greater than I have been able to bear. You have been treated with less cruelty, for at least they have left you your child."

"Yes," faltered Lizzie," but they threaten to take it from me if Harold should seek to establish his claim. Oh, I shall go mad or die if I am deprived of my child."

"Ay, death or madness, the only alternatives for such wringing of a mother's heart. Yet I have not died though I fear my reason is touched at times. Do you know I often wonder why it has not fled altogether. For more than two years I have been shut up here with no one to speak to but that hideous monster of a hunchback and the heartless wretch of a woman who calls him husband, the infamous tools of the Lord of Benachray. You may well suppose that I could find no companionship in them. My lot has therefore been one of solitary imprisonment, yet reason has refused to leave me altogether. Why they have not murdered me I cannot think, for my existence is known to none but themselves, and the crime could be perpetrated with safety. You shudder to hear me speak so calmly on such a matter. Oh, had you been here as long as I with nothing to commune with but your own thoughts, you would be familiar with the darkest contemplations. But come, you shall tell me your story and I shall tell you mine, for I do not yet understand why your enemies should have brought you here. As we are sisters in suffering, and are like to be companions in exile, it is meet we should know the history of each other's wrongs. What you have already told me makes me wonder much. You say you are the wife of Harold Logan; and is he still alive?"

"Yes, madam, thank God, my dear husband lives," said Lizzie, with glistening eyes.

"Forgive me, my dear, if I do not see you have great cause to thank God for that. A husband alive, and yet you subjected to such treatment! Why does he not protect you? why does he not save his wife from such a fate? Oh, if my Conrad had lived, his family never would have had power to harm me."

"Alas, lady, you will not feel surprise when you know all," said Lizzie, quick to clear Harold from the reproach implied by the other's words. "A nobler, braver man than Harold does not live, but he has been made the helpless victim of as foul a conspiracy as ever was hatched by evil man. His own life is in danger; he is in hiding among the mountains, and where he taken he would be sent to the scaffold."

"A criminal!" cried the stranger, with a look of recoil.

"No lady, no. Harold is as innocent of the crime laid to his charge as yonder child. But he cannot show it. They have woven meshes round him from which he cannot escape. Oh, Harold is everything is good and kind and honourable.

"Forgive me, dear. I should not have spoken as I did while in ignorance of the facts. It is so new to me to hold conversation with another. My tongue is not under due control. I will make amends by not speaking another word on the subject till your story is told out. But not here, for see, the sun has dipped behind that crest, and this hollow now lies in the shadow. Let us go close to the loch where is one of my favourite seats—a sheltered mossy bank open to the west, on which the sun will shine for at least two hours. Oh, every nook and hollow of the island is familiar to me as my childhood's home. I know every rock and knoll, every tree and bush; I have certain places which I visit in turn, and certain songs for each, which I sing no other where."

She rose and flung back her long hair till it fell in graceful negligence on her shoulders. Being now on her feet, Lizzie saw what a tall, commanding figure she had, and how full of elegance were her movements. There was power and expression in every gesture; but the impression of unutterable grief and suffering was visible through it all.

Lizzie lifted Alfred, who tired of his sport with the flowers, had fallen half asleep, and accompanied the stranger to the side of the water, along the shore of which she guided her with unhesitating steps. As they walked on side by side, Lizzie expressed her wonder at the fact that, though she had been a week on the island, they had not met or seen each other during that time.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

Where shall we go for our

SPRING DRY GOODS?

—TO—

THE LION, OF COURSE!

BECAUSE THERE YOU HAVE

The Choicest Goods,

The Largest Assortment,

The Most Fashionable Goods,

And what is all important in such times as the present,

THE CHEAPEST GOODS

that can be bought anywhere.

We have to announce to our numerous friends—wholesale and retail—that

Our Spring Stock is now Complete in every Department

and that by the purchases we have made in the British and American Markets, we shall be able to offer greater inducements in CHEAP GOODS than have ever yet been known.

DRESS GOODS.

In this branch our assortment is unrivalled. No where else will ladies find the same range at anything like the prices. Our new colored Lustres, in the new shades, at 15 cents are extraordinary value, while our 12½ cent line, for spring wear, is the greatest bargain yet shown. Stripe Grey Linens 10 cents, Light Silks very low.

MILLINERY.

This branch merits a whole column to itself. Our Show Room is one blaze of beauty and fashion, and contains the latest Paris and New York Designs for the present season. Ladies who have visited all the different stores, say that the

Display of Millinery at the Lion is not merely unsurpassed, but unequalled

MANTLES.

Ladies, don't fail to inspect our display in this Department. We are showing a beautiful variety from the cheapest to the choicest.

DRESSMAKING.

It will be good news to many to know that we have secured the services of Mrs. Thompson at the head of this Department for another year. Her name is so well and favourably known that nothing further is required to guarantee the choicest designs, combined with perfect workmanship.

We cannot at the space as our disposal refer to the other Departments of our establishment, viz

Tailoring,
ver highest class.

Clothing,
ready made.

Carpets,

Staple Goods,
for household use, &c., &c.

BUT WE SAY,

Come and see us!

Inspect our Goods!!

Ascertain our Prices!!!

and the question with which we commence will be most satisfactorily answered, thus:

Without fail Buy your Spring Goods at the Lion.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 15.

Mr. Mackenzie moved for authority to enter upon negotiations to obtain control of the River du Loup Branch of the Grand Trunk Railway by lease or otherwise. He thought it undesirable to make any remarks on the subject at present.

Sir John thought the resolution should originate in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Mackenzie said he was following a precedent of the late Government and and another of the present in the matter.

The Premier having again pointed out the inconvenience of explanations at this time, and remarked that gentlemen opposite seemed adverse to the arrangement, withdrew the motion.

The Bill for the creation and registration of Homestead Exemption Estates in the Territories of Canada and the Bill for the Better Auditing of the Public Accounts were reported from the Committee and read a third time.

The Malt Duty Repeal Bill was read a second time and reported.

Mr. Mackenzie moved the first reading of the Bill from the Senate respecting the traffic in intoxicating liquors. Carried.

Mr. Laflamme moved the recommittal of the Independence of Parliament Bill, with the object of a couple of amendments, one limiting the clause respecting officials of the Local Legislatures to such as had to do with the election law, and exempting parties receiving an allowance for military service. Carried.

Mr. Mitchell, after stating that he was absent when the arrangement regarding the debate upon the constitutional question in Quebec was come to, and that he did not hold himself bound by it, went on to speak for over an hour in support of Sir John Macdonald's amendment.

The House then divided on the amendment, which was lost—Yeas, 70; Nays, 112; majority, 42.

The House then went into Committee of Supply.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. A RARE CHANCE

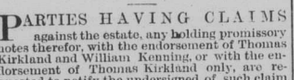
To obtain a First Class Farm.

THERE WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC auction, unless previously disposed of by private contract, at the Market House, Guelph,



On Saturday, 20th day of April, 1878

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the Harbottle Farm, being all that valuable freehold farm, consisting of lot No. 9, in the 6th concession, west of the Grand River, in the Township of Pilkington, containing 118½ acres, more or less. There are about 108 acres cleared and well fenced, and the remainining 10 acres are well timbered. The soil is about half clay loam, and the rest is somewhat lighter, but excellent, all in good cultivation. About 20 acres have been ploughed last fall. The orchard consists of about 4 acres of fruit trees. There are erected on the lot a good stone house 22 x 28, one story and a-half high; a good barn, driving house, and other outhouses. The farm is watered by a well on the premises, and a spring, and is situated about 5 miles from Elora, 18 miles from Guelph, and is readily accessible by good roads. It is conveniently situated as regards schools and churches. This presents a rare opportunity of obtaining an excellent farm in one of the best farming neighbourhoods in the County of Wellington. Possession will be given at once on completion of sale. Title good.

There will also be sold at same time and place all the right, title and interest of the vendor, 25 acres near above mentioned lot, being the north-east half of the north east-half of lot No. 3, in the 5th concession of Pilkington, about half of which is covered with good cedar for rails; the other half is timbered with elm and hemlock;—very fine building timber. Title good, and possession at once. For terms of sale, and other particulars, apply to

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

LONDON, April 17.

A despatch from Bombay states that two field artillery batteries, being a division of the native infantry, with field artillery, are under orders for the Mediterranean.

A Pera despatch says that the Russians have not advanced towards Constantinople, but in consequence of the prevailing typhus fever the troops have re-distributed within an assigned limit. The Turks threaten to oppose any advance.

Local News.

The Board then adjourned to meet at Fergus on Friday, the 26th inst.

THE Guelph Masonic Hall Company meets this evening.

DIVORCE.—The Bill granting a divorce to Mr. Hugh Hunter, of Egremont, from his wife, Catherine McPhee, has been passed in the House of Commons.

THE new Post Office will not be occupied until about the first of May. Mr. Scott, Government architect, is expected to visit Guelph in the course of a week or two to make a final inspection before taking it off the hands of the contractors.

A MEETING of checker players will be held at Mr. D. Naismith's this evening to make all necessary arrangements for going to Acton on Friday next, to play the County of Halton. The Guelph players will leave on that day by the 11 o'clock train on the Grand Trunk.

APPOINTMENT.—Through the recommendation of Mr. D. Guthrie, M. P., Mr. John Kirkland, well known in Guelph, now residing in New Westminister, B.C., has been appointed by the Government a Customs' officer at Victoria, Vancouver Island.

ST. GEORGE.—The tickets for St. George's Society dinner to be held on the 23rd—anniversary of England's patron saint—are already being disposed of quite rapidly. There is every prospect of the gathering being a grand affair. Tickets can be procured from the Secretary, Mr. Alfred Burrows, or from members of the Executive Committee.

RIELE PRACTICE.—The members of the Guelph Rifle Association will have a preliminary practice at the range on Friday next, commencing at 9 a.m. The report of the annual meeting, published a few weeks ago, showed the Association to be in a good condtion, and there is no doubt but that it will continue to prosper. It is somewhat a matter of regret that a few of the older members, who were instrumental in starting the Association, have dropped out. We have no doubt, however, that the military spirit which prevails amongst the young men of the town will give it new life and vigor.

ACCIDENT IN PUSLINCH.—On Saturday last, a young boy, son of David Vivian, was run over by a land roller at Aberfoyle, and sustained severe injuries. The accident happened by the lad jumping on the frame of a roller that a son of Thomas Ingram was taking home from the blacksmith shop. The little fellow tumbled off the frame; and before the horses could be stopped he was run over. It is though this head must have rested on a stone, as when picked up a wound extended from the crown of his head to his nose, and around to the right ear. Dr. Orton dressed the wound, and although the child lost a great deal of blood no serious results are anticipated.

CHURCH OPENING.—Knox Church, Harriston, was formally opened for divine worship on Sunday, 6th inst., a very large number being present at the several services. Rev. Principal Caven, of Toronto, preached morning and evening, and Rev. Geo. McLennan in the afternoon. At the evening service there was an immense gathering, hundreds being unable to obtain entrance. The collections on Sunday amounted to $303. A very successful tea meeting was held in the church on Monday which was also largely attended. Rev. Donald Fraser, of St. Andrew's Church, Mount Forest, occupied the chair. Speeches were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Stewart, of Arthur; Cameron, of Palmerston; Gundy and Baikie of Harriston and McLennan, of Underwood. A union choir gave excellent music during the evening. The proceeds of the soirce were $217—making a total from the opening exercises of $520.

THE CANADIAN PRIZE OX.—The London Standard, of the 20th March, has the following:—"Yesterday the Canadian prize ox, which was by special command exhibited on the 6th of August last, at Marlborough House, before the Prince and Princess of Wales, was slaughtered at the abattoir of Mr. Northcote, King's Cross Road, London. The animal, which was bred by Mr. Alfred Reeves, of Toronto, Canada, after winning 40 prizes in the Dominion, was consigned to Mr. John Reeves (brother of the breeder), of the Westminster Aquarium. The carcase, without the head, weighed nearly one ton and a quarter, or 450 stone of 8 lb. The Prince of Wales has consented to accept a sirloin of the beast, which Mr. Reeves will have the honor of presenting to His Royal Highness." In explanation we would say that Mr. Reeves did not bred the ox. He was bred by Mr. J. S. Armstrong, Eramosa, was bought and fed by Mr. John West, and was by him sold to Mr. Reeves, who took him to England.

RESURRECTED.—During the late Dunkin campaign in this county the "poet" Gay wrote a whole ten cent copy book full of poetry on the Dunkin Act, each line extending across two pages. It mysteriously disappeared during the days of voting on the Act, and did not turn up till yesterday, when it was found among some old papers in the Committee rooms. Each page is titled, the first bears the words "On the Dunkin Act," the succeeding pages "The Dunkin Act continued," and the last page "The Dunkin book closed." It is needless to remark on the beauty of the lines written by Gay.

A TRAIN of eight cars passed through Guelph at 8:45 this (Wednesday) morning from the east of Toronto for Manitoba.

ORANGE SOCIAL in the basement of the Norfolk street Methodist church this evening. Excellent programme.

MODERATE north-westerly to south-easterly winds and clear to fair warm weather are the probabilities received for to-day.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH congregation meet to-morrow evening in the school room to take into consideration the advisability of enlarging the church.

A FIGHT on St. George's Square at noon to-day caused considerable excitement. The combatants were both willing to cry quits. No policemen happened to be around at the time.

THE Conservatives, at a meeting held last evening, decided to open a reading room for the benefit of the members of the party, in Chadwick's block, Market Square.

OBIT.—An old patient in St. Joseph's Hospital, and one who has lived in Guelph for many years, named Miss Murphy, died at the hospital this (Wednesday) morning. Aged ninety years.

THE Musical Union held a practice last evening, which was largely attended. Every gathering proves exceedingly interesting to the members. In the absence of Mr. Philp, conductor, Mr. Hugh Walker, Vice-President, conducted the practice of several pieces.

POLICE COURT.—This morning Wm. Mays and William Keys were charged before the Police Magistrate with vagrancy. Mays was fined $5 and $2 costs, or twenty days in gaol, and Keys was fined $2 and $2 costs, or ten days in gaol.

THE noted horse, Duke of Argyle, owned by Mr. John Duff, of Everton, has not been sold, as is currently reported, but will travel the same route as last year—through Eramosa, Ennotville, Fergus, Elora, Pilkington, Rockwood, and Acton.

THE first practice game of lacrosse this season took place in the Park this morning. There were a number of new players present. The next practice morning is Friday, and parties not having tickets can procure them from Wm. Cartlew, Secretary, or H. McIntosh, assistant secretary.

HOLY WEEK.—The following is the list of service to be held this week at St. Bartholomew's Church. On Holy Thursday, at 8:30 a.m. Rev. Father Hamel, S.J., will celebrate High Mass. On Good Friday the Mass of the Presanctified will take place at 8:30 a.m. On Holy Saturday the Office will commence at 8 a.m. The church bell will not be rung from Mass time on Thursday until the singing of the Gloria at Mass on Holy Saturday.

THE EMIGRANTS.—Albert J. Wallace, from the neighborhood of Elora, who left with a party recently from Guelph for the Prairie Province has written to Mr. F. Gauhan, Great Western Railway agent, from Fisher's Landing. He reports a rapid and excellent trip from Guelph in first-class cars, and that the railroad and customs authorities were courteous and everything that could be desired.

G. W. R.—Mr. F. Gauhan, down town agent of the Great Western Railway Company, intimates through the advertising columns that he is willing to give every information to intending emigrants to Manitoba, respecting the best and cheapest routes to the North-west Provinces. He has managed the transport of several companies this season, and has had every reason to believe that those travelling over the Great Western have been, in every particular satisfied. Tickets supplied right through to Winnipeg at the lowest rates.

PARK AND EXHIBITION.—In the Council report published on Tuesday the MERCURY gave by mistake a report of the Committee for 1877 instead of the first report for 1878. The following is a correct copy of the report, presented by Mr. Sleeman, chairman of the Committee: They have visited the grounds and find a number of trees require replacing, which have died during the season. They also find that the horse ring and outside track require grading. They ask for $600 to be placed to their credit, $297 of the sum to be applied for the payment of interest on purchase of grounds, the balance to be expended as recommended.

DEPARTURE OF INTENDING SETTLERS FOR MANITOBA.—Toronto, 10th April, 1878.—There was unusual excitement this morning at the Yonge street station of the Great Western Railway, occasioned through the departure for Manitoba of a special train of first-class cars carrying about 280 emigrants who propose settling in the Prairie Province. Long before nine o'clock, the hour of departure, the Great Western platform was crowded with persons, most of them going off, but numbers there simply for the purpose of saying "good bye" to friends and relatives. A glance at the throng showed clearly that the intending settlers were nearly all of them either farmers or farm laborers. Many of the emigrants are taking stock chiefly horses along with them, two car loads of which left this city. More stock will be taken on along the route. At Oakville a freight car will be added to the train, and at Harrisburg two coaches and and one freight car will be attached. The train will then consist of seven coaches and four freight cars. Each through ticket carries 200 lbs. of freight in addition to its owner and a half ticket carries half that quantity. The balance of freight is paid in a lump sum at such a moderate rate as will make the charge light. The fare for the whole journey to Winnipeg is $23. Messrs. Archibald Young and R. W. Prittie, free grant agents for Manitoba and the North-west, were the organizers of the above party and Mr. Prittie accompanies them to Winnipeg to superintend all arrangements and to save the settlers any trouble. A party under their management will start each month during the rest of the season.

COMPLIMENTARY SOCIAL.—The social to be given to Mr. H. K. Maitland in Chalmers' Church, on Friday evening next, promises to be in every way successful. Those who neglect attending will miss a treat. Besides a number of Mr. Maitland's friends in town having promised to assist in the programme, several from a distance will also be present. Remember the date—Good Friday evening.

MESSRS. D. MCCRAE & CO., of Guelph, are to furnish the suits for the Hamilton lacrosse club.

The Government Building

A NOBLE PILE OE MASONRY.

The Post Office About Completed.

Situated on St. George's Square, with facings on Wyndham and Douglas streets as well as the Square, is the first Government building erected in the town of Guelph. It is in every respect a building of which the town has reason to feel a certain amount of pride, notwithstanding the sneers of those who believe no good work can be done excepting it should be suggested and carried out by themselves or their political friends. It was not, however, the building that was distasteful in the eyes of those carpers, but the present Administration which made the grant and carried out the work to completion. Anything for fault finding, on such occasions, appears to be the principle acted upon, even though it necessitated variance with the truth.

It is now nearly three years since the Government made a grant of $25,000 for the erection of public buildings in Guelph. Mr. D. Stirton represented South Wellington in the House of Commons, and it was largely through his exertions that the town of Guelph was placed in its proper position before the Administration, and when the facts of the case were so clearly laid before them the grant referred to above was made.

Two years ago this fall the tenders were let for the building to be erected on the site on which it now stands, and which is by long odds the most desirable situation in the town. Messrs. Dobbie & Grierson were the contractors, and the manner in which the work has been done by them, as well as the sub-contractors, is such as reflects the highest credit on the mechanical genius of Guelph.

The building is now about finished and by the first of May will be taken off the hands of the contractors and be ready for occupation. At the time of writing there is little indeed to make the building complete in all particulars. A reporter has made a thorough inspection of the work, and a few casual remarks on its general appearance will, doubtless, be of interest to the reader and will enable those who will have business at the Post Office after it is opened, to have an idea beforehand of the accommodation they may expect to find, combined with the beauty of surroundings after the building has been formally opened.

Commencing then at its outside appearance: From a Lower Wyndham street view, the building is in every respect prepossessing. It looks as substantial as the everlasting hills, and although not quite so handsome as it would have been with an additional story, nevertheless the manner in which the side wall of the Federal Bank has been finished, gives the look of a terrace of Mansards. Coupled with this is a tower in the centre of the building, surmounted by a flag staff which tapers towards the sky to the height of forty feet over all. The top of the latter is decorated with a gold plated weather-vane.

The building itself is of irregular shape, and covers some 2,800 square feet of ground. It is two stories in height, with a Mansard attic, and a basement underneath the ceiling which rises some two feet from the sidewalk. The Wyndham street frontage is some 38 feet, St. George's Square, or main front, 60 feet, Douglas street some 40 feet, and the rear is some 73 feet. The entire height, from pavement to plate of the Mansard, is 43 feet. The material used in the walls is hammer-dressed rubble, which is in every respect neat, and just what might be desired in such a building. The arched top of the openings on the first floor, the sunken ornaments, splayed joints, trimmed and faced quoins all go toward making up what is in every respect a perfect piece of workmanship. A minute description of the architecture of the building has already been published in the MERCURY, and it is therefore unnecessary for the writer at this late date to rehearse what has already been given.

There are two public openings to the Post Office. The main entrance is from St. George's Square through double doors swung on Smith's patent springs. All the entrances to the building are on the same principal, and open either way. There is also one entrance from Wyndham street—at the south-west corner. Going into the Post Office from the Square, a porch is entered, handsomely built of clear maple with black walnut facings and plate-glass panels. As soon as the public lobby is reached the beauty of the finish of the box-screen is at once observed. The general delivery and stamp wicket stands out prominently in semi-circular form about the centre. As with this particular portion so with the entire screen, which separates the lobby from the Postmaster's private office, and that portion of the building which is allotted to the interior work of the office. The main delivery and the stamp-office is fitted up elegantly and is resplendent in a beautiful varnish finish, with a ground-work of maple and black walnut facings. This portion is set-off with five columns, surmounted with carved capitals. Above those are sunken traceries, and surmounting this is a pediment with a crown in the centre, supported by carved brackets of a very handsome design. This particular portion is worthy of admiration. It is here that Messrs. Geo. & A. Bruce, who had the contract for the carpenter work, displayed their skill. The curved lines which are everywhere observed are so perfect and withal so graceful, that in it depends much of the beauty which can be traced throughout. The screen is surmounted with a heavy and finely finished moulding of maple and walnut. On each side of the general delivery are thirteen rows of drawers; the bottom three are large, and will be in demand by parties or firms constantly receiving large quantities of matter through the mails. Those drawers have maple fronts relieved by walnut ornaments. The remaining drawers have brass fronts, which give a very pleasing appearance to the whole. The bottom portion of the brass drawers have a glass panel which enables a party who rents one drawer to observe without unlocking it whether or not there is any mail matter therein. Each drawer is provided with three keys, and although there are 700 drawers—300 brass and 50 wooden on each side of the general delivery—no two locks can be opened by the same key. There is therefore no fear of any party accidentally opening the wrong drawer. Bulk heads which extend along the St. George's Square side of the lobby will be found very useful to the public as a counter on which writing might be done. There are two drop boxes entering the screen for letters and paper, and there is also a drop box in the private door of the Wyndham street entrance, next the Federal Bank building. The latter is for the convenience of the public after the office is closed.

From the public lobby, which although somewhat cramped in appearance, will no doubt afford ample room for the public, a door leads to the Money Order and Savings Bank office, which faces Wyndham street. This room is relieved with a light panelled wooden screen, the upper portion of which has panels of enamelled glass. A black walnut counter is provided on which all business will be transacted.

The Postmaster's private office is to the right of the main entrance, and is a cosy little parlor about 9 by 11 feet. It is neatly furnished with such articles of furniture as are necessary, and is carpeted. The room is closed in to the ceiling, and the upper part is in keeping with that portion of the work which extends only to the same height as the box screen. From this room entrance can be had to that portion of the office wherein all the work is done by the officials and clerks. The entrance proper, however, is from Wyndham street. This room is fitted up as all first class offices should be. There are sorting tables, post office distribution boxes, tables for letters, with the stamping pads, receptacles for newspapers, wrought iron mail bag rack, and in fact everything that is required, and all is placed in such positions as to be in every way convenient and to aid in the systematic working of the institution. The general delivery boxes are arranged in a circular form, so that one attendant accustomed to the boxes can wait on the public in a very rapid manner.

When it has been said that the vault in connection with the Post Office is provided with one of Taylor's celebrated iron doors, there is little danger of any person having fears that any registered mail matter will be unsafe in charge of any of Her Majesty's officials. The size of the vault is 5 by 4 feet, and in height about 10 feet.

The ceilings are 14 feet in height, and on this job Mr. Wm. Day has, in a marked degree, shown what very fine work in plastering he is is capable of doing. There are three large panels in the ceiling, having heavy cornices, and each panel has three very handsome flower ornaments. Nothing could be more elegant than the manner in which the whole work has been accomplished.

The office will be brilliantly illuminated with gas, and for this purpose the five handsome gas pendants and five brackets will be more than ample.

There is no doubt but what many will be very agreeably surprised at the appearance of the inside of the building when it will be formally taken off the hands of the contractors by the Government.

It will be opened as the post office about the first of May.

On the same floor, with an opening from Douglas street is the office for the Inspector of Weights and Measures, and it will furnish sufficient room for the work pertaining to that office. There is also a vault in connection with the room, the same size as the one connected with the post office.

The second floor is reached by a handsome winding staircase. This flat is devoted to the exclusive use of the Inland Revenue and Customs. The rooms are finished in a very handsome manner, but at the same time not extravagantly. The Inland Revenue offices have the choicest rooms. The office proper extends along the whole of the Wyndham street side of the building, and the private office which will be occupied by Mr. Collector McLean, is in the Centre of the building, facing St. George's Square. The Customs offices have back views—looking out on Douglas street and the alley at the back of the building. Mr. Carthew's private office will face Douglas street. The private offices are carpeted.

The Mansard story is being fitted up for a care-taker's rooms, and are in every way comfortable.

The basement contains a gas Inspector's office, an examining warehouse, furnace room, coal vault, &c. There is a rear entrance to the basement by way of Douglas street.

The whole building will be lighted with gas. Provision has been made for a furnace room, but in the meantime coal stoves will be used throughout the building.

From basement to attic there is very little that could be improved upon. True, it is possible the plans might, with more money to be spent in connection therewith, but the work could not be.

Although Dobbie & Grierson were contractors for the whole work, Inglis & Hunter were sub-contractors for iron-work; G. & A. Bruce, wood work; Geo. Smith, tinsmith; W. H. Jackson, painter; George Feek, gas-fitting; Geo. Howard, stoves.

The Government Inspector of the building during its erection was Mr. Andrew Dalgliesh, and a very efficient officer he has proven to be. No better appointment could have been made.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The Position of Britain Unchanged.

No Change in the Aspect of Affairs.

April 16.

In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote moved the adjournment of the two Houses until the sixth of May.

In the course of the debate Sir Stafford Northcote reiterated the statement that the policy of the Government regarding the Eastern question is unchanged. The Government, he said, is anxious for a peaceful settlement on such basis as would give security for a lasting peace. There is no ground to despair, and Parliament could safely adjourn.

In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Stafford Northcote, replying to a question by Hon. W. E. Foster, Liberal, said: Nothing whatever has occured to give occasion for increased anxiety regarding affairs in the East, nor in any way diminished the hopes entertained of satisfactory arrangements being agreed upon. The situation of affairs at Constantinople does not cause the Government any anxiety, and the opinion expressed in some quarters that England is isolated regarding the Eastern question, is not justified by facts. A circular is expected from Turkey to the Powers, and there are good prospects of an arrangement in Thessaly and Epirus through the good offices of England.

The Vienna Political Correspondence say:—It is rumored that England is negotiating with Sweden for a naval station on the Island of Faroe, in the Baltic Sea.

The remark of Lord Derby which chiefly gave umbrage in Vienna was that in consequence of the number of Slavs in the Austrian army it could not be trusted to fight against the Russians.

News from St. Petersburg is not calculated to increase confidence. The fact that the Cabinets at London and St. Petersburg are reported to be in semi-official intercourse seems to indicate that official expressions would have intensified the differences. The result of an interchange of views is not hopeful, Russia substantially repeating her former answer, and England reaffirming the principle originally laid down.

Pro-Russian advices from Constantinople state that the situation is strained to the utmost. The Grand Duke Nicholas is much depressed, and an impression prevails that affairs are surely drifting to war.

The Journal de St. Petersburg states that negotiations with England and Austria are progressing.

In default of authentic news it was rumoured yesterday that the Russians had made all preparations to occupy Constantinople and the Bosphorus on the first signal of hostilities.

An Item of Interest to the Musical World.

To the Editor of the Guelph Mercury.

SIR,—The musical public which have long known and appreciated the energetic and enterprising spirit of Messrs. Wm. Bell & Co., of Guelph, by which they have placed themselves completely at the head of the cabinet organ manufactuaing interest of the Dominion, to say nothing of other countries, will be delighted, as I was, to know that they have taken, to use a homely expression, "the start" of every rival, by taking up in advance of all others, the new and vast improvements in reed instruments effected by the lately completed invention of a gentleman who has spent years in the careful study of the "Cabinet Organ" with a view to the remedy of its felt defects (in expression.) Mr. Bell is evidently determined to spare no expense that he may merit the confidence which the public have long placed in him, by furnishing the very best instrument that can possibly be produced. The new organ, for so it may be called, can be used exactly as an ordinary one, if the operator does not wish, or has not the soul to give expression to his music, but the instrument is so arranged that, at the will of the operator, the most perfect expression can be given; while the leading part may be clear and firm, the accompaniment may be played as soft as "echoes from fairy land," or with "the thunders of Niagara" itself. The whole keyboard is, through the foot and knee, perfectly under the control of the operator, so that any note may be made to swell out the grandest tones of "triumph," or the fiercest of "defiance," while any other, at the same time, may be whispering "love's secrets," or wailing out the tenderest and most plaintive fancies or feelings of which the soul of the musician is capable. The instrument is thus put far in advance of the piano as a means of expressing the soul of the artist. It has been hinted in musical circles that the day of the cabinet organ is passed, and that advancing taste renders it likely to be superseded by the piano; but, Mr. Bell's new organ will completely dispel any such fear, and place the organ really far in advance of that instrument by its superior expressional power.

The musical public may well wait in interested expectancy for the appearance of the new instrument, and all lovers of the sublime art will wish Mr. Bell every success in his new enterprise.

Yours truly,
A PROFESSIONAL.

WEDNESDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 17, 1878

The Scenes in the House on Saturday.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Hamilton Times says that the Mail's description of the row in the House on Saturday, is unfair and perfectly false, which is no matter of wonder. It is not true that any of the Ministers took any part in the affair. They laughed at times at the excesses to which the members carried their interruptions, but that was all. There was not one Ministerialist the worse for liquor, a fact that cannot be stated by some half-dozen of the Tories.

As an evidence of the peculiar position in which some of the Opposition members were in, we have only to quote the correspondence of the London Advertiser, which says:—"McDougall (Three Rivers) again in his half-drunken condition took the floor and rambled away till it was half-past six. By this time the House exhibited a scene never paralleled in Canada. Frequent visits to the saloon had their effect upon the Opposition side. Domville turned up at six a.m., after having slept off a strong potation, and took his seat beside Plumb, who had also slept a great part of the night in his place, and looked as if he likewise had been afflicted with the prevalent complaint."

During the night Campbell, of Guisboro, better known as "Tupper's goose," staggered across the floor of the House in an almost helpless state of intoxication. Balancing himself in front of the Premier's desk and between it and the Speaker's chair, he commenced to shout and gesticulate like a madman. For a moment all other noises ceased and nothing but the drunken shouts of the old inebriate could be heard. Flourishing his hat over his head with one hand and stamping his feet in drunken fury on the floor, he was heard declaring his utter independence of Governments and Speakers and Parliaments, and every other power or person. Before he was taken in charge by the Sergeant-at-Arms, he was led off by his friends.

As to the condition of the leader of the Opposition on that night the Globe thus speaks:—"To say that Sir John A. Macdonald was on Friday night somewhat under the influence of liquor would be a grossly inadequate representation of the fact. He was simply drunk in the plain ordinary sense of that word. As the night wore on he became still more so, and from six to eight on Saturday morning he was, to quote the conventional language usually employed on such occasions, 'thoroughly laid out,' and had to be hid away by his friends, if not in shame at least in pity, and as an absolutely prudeutial proceeding."

Another incident will serve to show how utterly demoralised were the members of the Opposition. Mr. Methot gave way to Domville at 8 a.m., who stood up with his garments in such a disordered condition that he was met by cries of "Button your pants," "Shame," etc Having buttoned up, Mr. Domville commenced to read from books, and in a serio-comic way to discuss the constitutional question.

Such are some of the scenes and incidents in connection with this disgraceful affair, for which the Opposition are wholly responsible. Their conduct throughout is a blot on the history of our country, and is calculated to call up a blush of shame on the face of every Canadian, who cares for the honour and credit of his country.

What a Retaliatory Policy Would Do.

The New York Herald lately quoted Sir John Macdonald's Protection resolution, and alluding to his contention that by means of a reciprocity of tariffs, reciprocity of trade is to be secured, says:

"It will be observed that Sir John Macdonald is compelled, even in this retaliatory resolution, to do homage to the principal of reciprocity, so vital to Canadian interests; but instead of being a means of reaching reciprocity, as he pretends, it would be a fatal obstruction. If the new elections bring him into power, and his policy succeeds, the capital invested in Canadian manufactures will build up a powerful interest in opposition to reciprocity. The men who will have invested their money in new enterprises by the encouragement and invitation of the Government—who will have erected buildings, set up costly machinery, purchased raw materials and employed hands on the faith of protective legislation—will justly claim that the Government has no right to sacrifice their property by a sudden change of policy. If Sir John Macdonald and his supporters intend this retaliatory policy merely as a threat for extorting conditions in a reciprocity treaty they ought to have learned by this time that the Government of the United States is not very tractable to menace and ill-usage. Nothing has been such a bar to a new reciprocity treaty as this kind of tactics on the part of the Canadians.

The London correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune says:—"The British army wants war. Like all armies in a non-military nation—for England is a war-like, but not a military nation—it wants to justify its existence. At the Horse Guards, the military headquarters of Great Britain, war has for weeks been looked upon as a certainty. You have only to talk with a staff-officer to see what feeling reigns there. Indeed, you have only to listen to the Duke of Cambridge in public; for commander-in-chief as he is, and cousin to the Queen's, and peer of the realm, he makes no secret of his Turkish sympathies and hatred of Russia. If you meet a colonel in a drawing-room he is sure to be twisting mustaches and ravening for Russian blood. He commonly contrives to intimate to you that until he can get a chance at the Russians he would readily slake his thirst on any of their friends. No doubt the traditions and memories of the Crimean War go for much with these warriors. In their own phrase, they would like another go at the Tartar. Military opinion on a political probability is not worth much, but the sincerity of the staff is beyond question. I hear of officers declining valuable Indian appointments in expectation of better work nearer home. The War Office, also, is in high glee, both over what it expects and what it has got, and the Admiralty not less so.

HOT X BUNS.—Parties wishing to be supplied with Hot X Buns on Friday morning will please leave their orders at W. J. Littel's, Upper Wyndham street, as early as possible. 2td

THE election news from Quebec is very cheering, and Mr. Joly and his friends are very hopeful.

THE British Columbia Parliament has been dissolved, and a new election ordered.

MR. F. M. CARPENTER, of Saltfleet, has accepted the nomination of the Conservatives of South Wentworth for the House of Commons.

THE Premier has gone west to attend the trial arising out of a libel affecting his personal integrity in the Sarnia Canadian, for which he took proceedings by means of a criminal information some time since.

HEREAFTER the House will sit on Saturday. The Opposition seem now to desire to get on with the business, there is some hope of prorogation on or about the first of May.

THE best joke of the season is that Dr. Orton on Friday night made a speech on constitutional principles. Shade of John Stuart Mills, what have we come to!

THE honor of Knighthood has been offered Hon. A. J. Smith, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, as some recognition of his services with regard to the Halifax Fishery Commission. It is understood he has accepted the honor the Queen desires to do him.

THE Montreal Star hits the nail on head when it says that the many failures in Canada is not for want of protection, but because of "reckless extravagance, incompetency, underselling, and the fact that too many were in business."

THE Herald has been making a great ado about Mr. Massie's action at the Puslinch meeting on Friday night last. We have only to point to Mr Anderson's letter on Monday and to Mr. Glennie's of Tuesday, to convince us that he adhered strictly to the rules regulating public meetings.

THE vote on the Quebec resolution was a purely party one, and showed that the Government had a majority of 42:—70 voting for Sir John's motion and 112 against it. In the vote there were Ministerialists unpaired, 9; Opposition, 4; Independents, 2; four pairs, 8; making, with the Speaker, 206. The Quebec vote on the division stood as follows:—For the resolution, 29; against it, 28; absent, 8. Of the absentees three usually vote with the five against the Government.

DR. TUPPER studiously kept away from the House during the debate on the Quebec case, and in order to the better to avoid becoming mixed in it, he went out of the city. The reason for this is that during his career in Nova Scotia as Premier, he advised Lord Musgrove to adopt a policy far exceeding that of Letellier's, as a high-handed exercise of the prerogative. His letters on the subject are on record and form highly interesting reading, though Tupper might not relish their reproduction.

The Board of Examiners and the County Council.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—Our respected Warden at the close of a long letter to you the other day, touching the difficulty that exists between the Board of Examiners and the County Council, extends an invitation to teachers "to discuss the question of examinations." In accordance with this invitation, I purpose putting in a word, and shall take French leave to consider "the situation" generally.

So far from being one of those who can see nothing amiss in the bill of charges concerning which the present discussion has arisen, I have all along maintained that there was a screw loose somewhere, and since reading Mr. Rea's rejoinder to the Board's explanation, I have come to the conclusion that there have been two screws loose.

Let us examine the Warden's points seriatim.

After informing us as to how he became surprised at the bill, he gravely informs us that although he has been in the Council for many years, he "never saw one of these bills before!" It is quite useless for Mr. Rea to attempt whitewashing either himself or the Treasurer over the head of the Board, by telling us what the latter gentleman says he was "led to believe" by anybody. In matters connected with the expenditure of public moneys, it is surely the duty of the Warden to see that "all things are done decently and in order," i.e., legally; and yet he says that during the many years he has been in Council, he was totally ignorant regarding this not inconsiderable annual item.

With reference to the third paragraph, concerning seats and desks, Mr. Rea insinuates, or rather boldly states, that "had they (the Board) let the Council know what they needed, it would have been furnished without any cost to the county." I would ask whether he was not fully cognizant of all that was going on—of the steps taken by the Board, as well as of the steps they proposed taking, and did he not tacitly acquiesce in what took place, by not only meeting with the Board, but by advising its sub-committee to confer with the Guelph trustees? I have no doubt that in so doing, Mr. Rea anticipated some arrangement being made with the town people which would materially lessen the cost to the county, and if such be the case, it is not quite fair to turn upon the Board, as he has done, placing himself, however, between the horns of the dilemma—right then, and wrong now, or vice versa.

Mr. Rea speaks of two meetings with two members of the Board, not occupying more than forty minutes, and for which, of course, a charge of two days' pay was made. Referring to the document issued in explanation of charges, I find that Mr. McCaig was one of this deputation from the examiners. Does the Warden wish your readers to believe that Mr. McCaig travelled from Everton to Guelph, had a few words with him, and returned in the short space of twenty minutes, and that this was done twice? This is hardly putting things in a fair light. Do county councillors claim their pay according to the forty minute principle?

The question is asked by the Warden why the Board did not include in their first bill the second one, amounting to $168. I, in my simplicity, would suppose the reason to be just this, that the second account had no connection with the first, being wholly new business affecting Model Schools and second-class examinations.

Since reading the explanation of the Board, signed by Mr. Kilgour, I must acknowledge to having had much of the ugliness connected with the "Bill" considerably removed, and now that I have seen the Warden's letter, it would appear to me that the "Use and Wont" of several years, in a great measure, account for the figures as they stand.

As the municipal head of the County, Mr. Rea is entitled to great credit for doing what he did in the way of demanding an explanation, even after the lapse of so "many years," but he certainly appears to step a little aside in denouncing so harshly a system which has grown up under his very nose.

I have no hesitation in fully concurring with him as to the impolicy of the Board charging for extra meetings, and I cannot but regard as "small" the employment of two sons of members (Messrs. Kilgour and Torrance) to perform a biennial task at $1 each per day. Still, from a personal and intimate knowledge, for "many years," of both Messrs. A. D. Fordyce and D. McCaig, I refuse to believe that these gentlemen would, either individually or collusively, act in a dishonorable way.

With the Warden, I am sure we all express our regret that there should be any cause for difference between the Board and the Council, and let us trust that at the June meeting such a selection of gentlemen for inspectorships may be made as will reflect credit upon both Council and County. Yours, &c., SPHINX.

The Address to the Governor-General.

At two o'clock on Tuesday the Governor-General came down to the Senate chamber to receive the address voted by Parliament. The floor of the chamber was occupied by ladies, Judges of the Supreme Court, and members of both Houses. Lady Defferin, Lady Helen Blackwood, Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. Anglin had seats near the Throne. Punctually at two o'clock Lord Dufferin entered the Chamber, preceded by his Aides-de-camp in uniform, and followed by General Selby Smythe and other officers, wearing their decorations. The Privy Councillors present were—Hons. Mackenzie, Blake, Cartwright, Tupper, Gibbs, Langevin, Jones, Sir John A. Macdonald, Messrs. Mills, Laurier, Robitaille, Scott, Pelletier, Campbell, Geoffrion, Smith, Aikins, Chapais, Laflamme, Coffin, Burpee, and Huntington. Among the company of spectators who filled the Chamber were the Speakers of both Houses, the Judges of the Supreme Court, a crowd of Senators and members of the House of Commons, and a number of ladies, the wives of Ministers and others.

Mr. Mackenzie, who had Sir John Macdonald on his left and Senator Campbell on [illegible] the address, speaking in a [illegible] voice. Lord Dufferin having received it, handed it to his aide, and then taking his reply from Col. Lytellton in a voice occasionally trembling from emotion read it very slowly and measuredly. While he was reading it Lady Dufferin was so much affected that she shed tears.

The text of the address as adopted by Parliament has already appeared in the MERCURY.

His Excellency then delivered the following reply:—

Honorable Gentlemen:

It is difficult for me to find befitting words in which to thank you for the signal and unprecedented honor which has been conferred upon me by this joint address from your two Houses. Regarding as I do the utterances of Parliament as the most august and authoritative expression of the popular sentiment, it affords me unmeasured satisfaction to be thus assured of the confidence and esteem of the inhabitants of the Dominion. To win the good-will of a nation is the greatest achievement open to human ambition, and to learn from you that I hold a place in the affections of the people of Canada is alike the highest triumph and the greatest pleasure I am ever likely to enjoy. It would not become me to enquire how far this result is to be attributed rather to your own generosity than to any exertions on my part. It is a happy principle rooted in the nature of all Englishmen to content themselves with the simpte discharge of those duties which lie to their hand without considering too curiously to what degree their conduct may influence the personal estimation in which they are held by others, and their reward, when it arrives, is often as great a surprise as it is a satisfaction. All that I can say is that from the moment I came amongst you I have had but one thought—the desire to render faithful service to our Queen, to the empire, and to Canada. If there are no positive advantages to which I can point as having resulted from my administration, there is one boast I can fairly make. No act or word of mine has had a tendency to damp your personal devotion to the Crown, to discourage your attachment to the Empire, or to discredit the system of constitutional government under which you live. I found you a loyal people, and I leave you the truest-hearted subjects in Her Majesty's dominions. I found you proud of your descent, and anxious to maintain your connection with the Mother Country. I leave you more convinced than ever of the solicitude of Great Britain to reciprocate your affection, of her dependence on your fidelity in every emergency. I found you men of various nationalities, of English, French, Irish, Scotch, and German descent, working out the problems of constitutional government with admirable success. I leave you with even a deeper conviction in your minds that the due application of the principles of parliamentary government is capable of resolving every political difficulty, and of controlling the gravest Ministerial crisis to the satisfaction of the people at large and of their leaders and representatives of every shade of opinion. When I resign the temporary viceroyalty with which I have been invested into the hands of my sovereign I shall be able to assure her that not a leaf has fallen from her maple chaplet—that the lustre of no jewel in her transatlantic diadem has been dimmed. Thanks to the opportunities afforded me by the liberality of Parliament, I have been enabled to traverse the fertile regions of your North-west, to appreciate your inexhaustible resources, and to scan the vast expanse of your territories from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The speeches to which you refer in such flattering terms have been but the natural, the irresistible exclamations evoked by the sights I have beheld. Closely associated with me in the discharge of all my duties has been the lady to whom your address refers in so kind a manner. Moving amid a society where the proverbial gallantry of Frenchmen combines with English and Celtic chivalry to create in every Canadian home an atmosphere of purity and refinement, she naturally regards the six years she has passed amongst you as one of the happiest periods of her life, and I am commissioned to convey to you her warmest thanks for the good wishes you have expressed in her regard. In conclusion allow me to assure you I shall esteem it one of the greatest privileges of my life to watch the progressive development of your prosperity, to advocate your interests in the British Parliament, and to confirm our fellowcountrymen at home in their conviction of the high degree to which Canada is destined to contribute to the welfare, the strength, and the renown of the British Empire.

The tone and manner of His Excellency's delivery showed in how warm and kindly a spirit he reciprocated the sentiments expressed in the address. When he had finished reading he handed his reply to Mr. Mackenzie and took his hat and cane and left the Chamber, followed by the Countess as speedily as possible. Everybody seemed to feel the spell of sorrow that the leading personages on this occasion clearly manifested, and to grieve at the approaching departure of their Excellencies.

Mr. Forbes, the Canadian artist, has been requested by Lord Dufferin to paint his portrait, life-size, for presentation to the Parliament of Canada. The picture is well advanced and will be a very valuable work of art. Mr. Forbes is also painting a portrait of Mr. Anglin for the common picture gallery.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

COMPANIONS IN TRIBULATION—LIZZIE AND THE STRANGER TELL EACH OTHER THEIR STORY.

"I did fancy," she went on, "that I saw a face for a moment at an upper window; but the glimpse was so brief that I concluded I must have been mistaken. Yet why should we not have met till now, though every day I have roamed about?"

"These have been my dark days," replied the lady, with peculiar sadness, "and I never stir abroad when the cloud is heavy on my spirit; I seldom even rise from bed at that time. This is why we did not meet till now. Perhaps your society may prevent the dark shadow from falling so deeply. Oh, I feel it so strange, so strange, to be speaking to a companion! Is it real, or is it but one of my many imaginations? They come to me in troops, and I believe them to be realities, till they suddenly vanish and leave me desolate. Should this prove like the rest I shall know then that I am going hopelessly mad."

"This is no imagination, dear lady."

"No, I think not, for I could not conjure up the vision of you and the child. I could not imagine the sound of your voice and the words you utter. I never swooned before at my imaginations, yet I swooned to-day. See, here is the seat I spoke of; is it not an inviting one. That height shelters from the east and north; the loch with the western hills are in view; and yonder is the tower of our prison rising above the cliffs."

The spot was indeed attractive and had hitherto escaped Lizzie's observation. It could be approached only by walking for a short distance on the shingle quite close to the edge of the water, along which several rugged rocks rose and almost barred the way. Beyond these, and under a lofty crag, was a little plateau of mossy verdure—smooth as a table and soft as velvet. It was at a considerable elevation, and was gained by mounting a rough ascent where rude steps had been artificially cut in the rock. Doubtless it had been a favourite resort for the inhabitants of the Castle in former days, who, recognising its romantic situation, had formed this access to it. Here in complete and snug retirement, where all was retired enough, the stranger and Lizzie sat them down, the former laying herself out at full length, with her head resting on her arm in a listening attitude, and Lizzie placing herself close to the shelving rock with the now sleeping Alfred resting on her knee.

Thus arranged—the stranger's dark eyes fixed in breathless attention on the speaker's lips—Lizzie told the tale of her personal history, and the events of the last few months which concerned Harold and herself. Her listener did not once interrupt her, but the changing expression of her face showed the deep interest with which she followed every word, and the varying emotions which influenced her at the recital. The narrator ended her tale by depicting her seizure in Glenroy and the circumstances attending her arrival at the island. When she described the two men who abducted her the stranger's eyes suddenly flashed with intelligence as if she had reached to the understanding of something which puzzled her.

"Now, tell me," she eagerly exclaimed, "tell me in what way Gilmour Logan is connected with Colonel M'Pherson?"

"With Colonel M'Pherson?" echoed Lizzie.

"Ay; he whom I have spoken to you of as the Lord of Benachray—the proud, stern, cruel father of my dead Conrad, the owner of this island, of yonder Castle, of many of the hills which rise on yonder side of the loch, and of the mansion standing in the valley a few miles to the west, but which cannot be seen from here."

"I am not aware that Gilmour Logan has any connection with this person," replied Lizzie.

"He has—he must. How else could he have employed Colston to carry you off?—how else had you brought hither to the island of Colonel M'Pherson, the prison-house of Benachray? Colston is one of the Colonel's most trusted henchmen—or rather that of his second and, alas! now only son Roderick, and their unprincipled lawyer, M'Garray."

"M'Garray—M'Garray!" repeated Lizzie. "That is the name of the factor at Mount Cairn."

"Ha! is it so? Then is the thing explained," cried the lady, in fierce excitement. "M'Garray is also factor for Colonel M. Pherson. Your abduction is due to his cunning, scheming brain."

"You know him, then?" said Lizzie, more and more astonished.

"Ay," was the bitter reply, "I have too much reason to know him. He it was who counselled my imprisonment on this island. He too, I doubt not, advised the taking away of my child. Oh, he is a wily, cold-blooded, rocky-hearted scoundrel! Lizzie, my poor girl, we are both his victims, as you will understand when I tell you my story. There is still time for this," she added, casting a glance towards the western sky. "The sun will not set for an hour, and I will make it brief."

She raised herself to a sitting posture, and, drawing herself close to Lizzie, thus began—

"My name is Myra Bentley. I was early left an orphan; but kind friends reared and educated me till I was able to earn my own livelihood. Having naturally a good voice, and being passionately fond of music, I had myself taught by a master, and at the age of eighteen made my debut as a public singer. My first appearance was a success, almost a triumph. I was considered pretty: nay, that is too feeble a word to express the feelings of admiration which my face and figure created, and without vanity I think may assume that there was some ground for them in the bloom of my complexion and the regularity of my features."

"Oh, you must have been beautiful," cried Lizzie, with impulsive warmth. "Nay, you are beautiful still, despite the sadness of your countenance and the impress of grief so deeply settled there."

Myra slowly shook her head. "Ay, she observed, "I am but the shadow of my former self. My form is wasted, my complexion faded, lines are on my brow, and furrows on my cheek. My auburn hair has lost its brilliance, my motion its elasticity. Misery and wretchedness have changed me utterly. My appearance then was very different, and if I did not know it it was not because the praises of my beauty were extravagantly sounded in my ears a thousand times a day. My position was highly dangerous. The adultation I received might have intoxicated—might have ruined me; fortunately I was comparatively indifferent to it, my chief anxiety being to advance in my profession. Without reaching to any very great eminence as an an operatic singer, I was able to take leading parts and acquit myself creditably. I loved my work too devotedly to pay much attention to the soft speeches and gallent attentions of the many men who professed to admire me. Not one of them was able to touch my heart, or raise one flattering emotion there. I laughed at them all, and gaily turned aside any serious approach. But my fate approached me at last in the person of Captain M'Pherson, whose appearance had a strong effect on me from the first moment I beheld him. We became acquainted. Our acquaintance ripened into friendship, then into love. I need not describe the process to you, my dear, for you know it by experience. What Harold Logan is to you, Conrad M'Pherson was to me—handsome, brave, noble, generous—my very ideal of manhood. So far as Conrad himself was concerned I had no reason to repent my choice. His affection for me was deep, true, and honourable: but I should have resisted his proposal for a private marriage. His solicitations, however, and the promptings of my own heart prevailed. He procured a special license, and we were duly married in one of the London churches—not one of his friends, not one of mine, being present, at the ceremony."

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. DR. WM. GRAY'S SPECIFIC MEDICINE

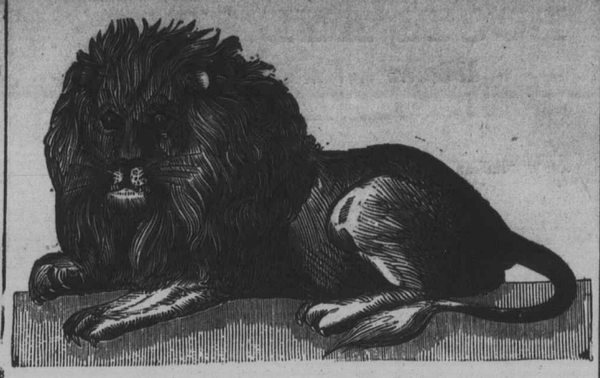
After Taking

Before Taking



The Great English Remedy is especially recommended as an unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhea, Impotency and all diseases that follow as a consequence of Self-Abus as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to INSANITY OR CONSUMPTION and a PREMATURE GRAVE, all of which, as a rule, are first caused by deviating from the path of nature, and over indulgence.
The Specific Medicine is the result of a life study and many years of experience in treating those special diseases. Pamphlet free by mail.
The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or Six Packages for $5, or will be sent by mail on receipt of the money by addressing DR. WM. GRAY & CO., Windsor Ont.
SOLD IN GUELPH BY
A. B. Petrie, W. G. Smith & Co., Herod & Co., G H. McIntyre, and by all druggists everywhere.

QUESTION OF THE DAY.

Where shall we go for our

SPRING DRY GOODS?

—TO—

THE LION, OF COURSE!

BECAUSE THERE YOU HAVE

The Choicest Goods,

The Largest Assortment,

The Most Fashionable Goods,

And what is all important in such times as the present,

THE CHEAPEST GOODS

that can be bought anywhere.

We have to announce to our numerous friends—wholesale and retail—that

Our Spring Stock is now Complete in every Department

and that by the purchases we have made in the British and American Markets, we shall be able to offer greater inducements in CHEAP GOODS than have ever yet been known.

DRESS GOODS.

In this branch our assortment is unrivalled. No where else will ladies find the same range at anything like the prices. Our new colored Lustres, in the new shades, at 15 cents are extraordinary value, while our 12½ cent line, for spring wear, is the greatest bargain yet shown. Stripe Grey Linens 10 cents, Light Silks very low.

MILLINERY.

This branch merits a whole column to itself. Our Show Room is one blaze of beauty and fashion, and contains the latest Paris and New York Designs for the present season. Ladies who have visited all the different stores, say that the

Display of Millinery at the Lion is not merely unsurpassed, but unequalled

MANTLES.

Ladies, don't fail to inspect our display in this Department. We are showing a beautiful variety from the cheapest to the choicest.

DRESSMAKING.

It will be good news to many to know that we have secured the services of Mrs. Thompson at the head of this Department for another year. Her name is so well and favourably known that nothing further is required to guarantee the choicest designs, combined with perfect workmanship.

We cannot at the space at our disposal refer to the other Departments of our establishment, viz

Tailoring,
ver highest class.

Clothing,
ready made.

Carpets,

Staple Goods,
for household use, &c &c.

BUT WE SAY,

Come and see us!

Inspect our Goods!!

Ascertain our Prices!!!

[and the question with which we commence will be most satisfactorily answered, thus:

Without fail Buy your Spring Goods at the Lion.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 16.

Mr. Archibald introduced a Bill to amend the Adulteration of Food, Drinks and Drugs Act so as to prevent the sale of articles which are not what they are represented to be.

The Bill respecting the duty on malt was, after a brief debate, read a third time and passed.

The House went into Committee on the Bill for the winding up of insolvent fire or marine insurance companies. Mr. Cartwright submitted an amendment providing for the recovery of a proportionate part of premiums on policies in cases where parties re-insure after the issue of the writ of attachment or the making of the assignment, which was adopted.

Mr. Laflamme moved the third reading of the Bill to further secure the independence of Parliament. Carried.

A discussion arose as to the Easter adjournment, when it was agreed to adjourn from Thursday to Saturday and to sit on Easter Monday.

We direct the special attention of our readers to the new and interesting announcements made by J. D. Williamson & Co., in our advertising columns to-day. "The Lion" is so well and widely known for cheap goods of every variety—that it is a "household word" in this part of Ontario—and its enterprising proprietors seem this year to be eclipsing all former efforts. They certainly hold out great inducements.

The railroads are now at peace, and the hotels have had their "war." The result of this recent cutting of first-class hotel rates New York leaves the Grand Central in the lead, with rates one and two dollars per day lower than the rest. eod

BOND & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

Says the Hamilton Spectator:—A gentleman just returned from Buffalo says that there are two companies of rifles in that city who are not connected with the other military organization. They are named the Irish Rifles, uniformed in green, and seemed to be prepared for any emergency in point of arms, accoutrements, &c. Similar companies, it is said, have been established in Rochester, Cleveland, and in fact, all the border cities, and it is presumed that they have Fenian proclivities.

SUBSTANTIAL SYMPATHY.—A correspondent states that the friends and well-wishers of Mr. W. H. Hunter, Reeve of East Garafraxa, very kindly gathered on Saturday, 15th inst., and plowed, sowed and harrowed in seventy acres. This is, no doubt, very encouraging to Mr. Hunter after the loss of all his teams and implements by fire, a few weeks since. His friends have certainly taken a very proper and substantial way of expressing their sympathy.

PUSLINCH FARMERS' CLUB.—The regular monthly meeting of this Club was held in the Town Hall, Aberfoyle, on Friday, 12th April, Mr. Wm. Rae, President, in the chair. The subject for discussion was "Agriculture as a Profession." The debate was opened by Mr. Mabon reading an essay on the subject, and he was followed by Mr. Wm. Johnston, President of the Agricultural College, who delivered, as he always does, a very able, instructive and succient address. Other gentlemen took part in the debate. The subject chosen for next meeting is "The advisability of establishing an Ontario Farmers' Convention." Mr. McLarren was appointed to write an essay on the subject. On motion, the Secretary was instructed to make arrangements to ship land plaster to Hespeler, for the use of the Club. Members desiring to be supplied in this way will notify the secretary at once. The next meeting will take place on Friday, the 10th of May. The Club have under consideration the establishment of a semi-annual seed fair, for the sale and exchange of seeds.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. The great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D. Bible House, New York City. Sept. 18, deodwly

A RARE CHANCE

To obtain a First Class Farm.

THERE WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC auction, unless previously disposed of by private contract, at the Market House, Guelph,

On Saturday, 20th day of April, 1878

at two o'clock in the afternoon, the Harbottle Farm, being all that valuable freehold farm, consisting of lot No. 9, in the 6th concession, west of the Grand River, in the Township of Pilkington, containing 118½ acres, more or less. There are about 108 acres cleared and well fenced, and the remainining 10 acres are well timbered. The soil is about half clay loam, and the rest is somewhat lighter, but excellent, all in good cultivation. About 20 acres have been ploughed last fall. The orchard consists of about 4 acres of fruit trees. There are erected on the lot a good stone house 22 x 28, one story and a-half high; a good barn, driving house, and other outhouses. The farm is watered by a well on the premises, and a spring, and is situated about 5 miles from Elora, 18 miles from Guelph, and is readily accessible by good roads. It is conveniently situated as regards schools and churches. This presents a rare opportunity of obtaining an excellent farm in one of the best farming neighbourhoods in the County of Wellington. Possession will be given at once on completion of sale. Title good.

There will also be sold at same time and place all the right, title and interest of the vendor, 25 acres near above mentioned lot, being the north-east half of the north east-half of lot No. 3, in the 5th concession of Pilkington, about half of which is covered with good cedar for rails; the other half is timbered with elm and hemlock—very fine building timber. Title good, and possession at once. For terms of sale, and other particulars, apply to

THURSDAY EVN'G, APRIL 18, 1878.

Local News.

HOT CROSS BUNS will be in active demand to-morrow (Good-Friday) morning.

THE thorough-bred horse St. Joe is not to be sold as currently reported.

SPRING ONION is the latest fashionable perfume for the breath.

THE Galt Reformer has opened a branch office in Ayr for job work.

MR. R. CRAWFORD, of the Goldsmith Hall, left this morning for Glasgow by way of Portland.

DONT forget the complimentary social to Mr. Maitland to-morrow night in Chalmers' Church.

SPRING has come and tramps have disappeared. Only one tramp provided with lodgings in the cells last night.

THE Guelph Post Office will be open to-morrow only between half-past ten and half-past eleven o'clock in the morning.

MR. AFFLECK, well-known in this section, has been presented with a gold watch by a temperance society in New York.

WM. ANGELL, formerly an employee in Tanner's baking establishment will leave shortly for a trip to England, by the Allen line of steamers.

CATTLE FOR ENGLAND.—Messrs. Watt, Goodfellow, and McQuillan are about making another shipment of five car-loads of cattle to the old country markets.

THE Christian Guardian records the death of the Rev. Peter Ker, at Drummondville, on the 8th inst., in the 68th year of his age.

THE contractor for the tinsmithing of the Government building on St. George's Square was George Bruce, jr., and for the painting W. H. Jacomb.

THE Masonic Hall Company's annual meeting will take place on Wednesday next, 24th inst. The MERCURY was a week too soon in the announcement made in the local colums last evening.

A YOUNG MAN walked down Wyndham street yesterday afternoon with a placard pinned to his back on which was written words unfit for ears polite. Some people have a strange idea of what constitutes a joke.

SALE OF VALUABLE PROPERTY.— We direct attention to Rev. W. F. Clarke's advertisement of sale of that valuable property known as "Penhurst," fronting on Glasgow street. This is without doubt the most desirable property in the market.

BASE BALL.—The first international game of the season was played at Hornellsville, N.Y., on Tuesday. Hornells defeated the Binghampton Crickets by a score of 8 to 6.—The Shamrock and Grand River Clubs of Galt have amalgamated.

THERE was anxiety among a family living on Green street, this morning. A little child of Mr. Jas. Hewer, jr., just able to toddle about, got outside the gate and wandered down Woolwich street, nearly as far as Wyndham street. When found, the child was happy in the employment of making sand pies.

MASONIC FUNERAL.—The remains of the late Wm. Colter, who died on Wednesday night, after a lengthened period of suffering with consumption, will be interred to-morrow (Friday) afternoon with Masonic honors. He was a member of Speed Lodge, A. F. and A. M. Members of that Lodge will attend the funeral in a body.

IT has generally been supposed that Guelph is without a band. Parties on Wyndham street this morning between 7 and 8 o'clock thought differently. A band, the only instrument a tin drum, paraded the streets at that hour. The parties had evidently been occupants of a cemetery all night, or spirits would not have been so strongly apparent. The parties have at least acquired notoriety if nothing else.

STREET WATERING.—Mr. Thos. Gowdy has called the attention of the MERCURY to a statement made in a communication to yesterday's Herald that he moved the resolution in the matter of Robertson & Cull's offer for watering Wyndham street and the Market Square. This is incorrect, and while admitting being in favor of such a resolution, from the fact that those who have to pay by far the largest share of the burden in having the street watered, requested that such should be done. Mr. Gowdy would advise parties who particularly wish to find fault with the council, to subscribe for a town paper, read it carefully, and when rushing into print, be sure and interpret correctly what they read.

HOT X BUNS.—Parties wishing to be supplied with Hot X Buns on Friday morning will please leave their orders at W. J. Littell's, Upper Wyndham street, as early as possible. 2td

DROP in at the baths on Woolwich street to-night or to-morrow morning and take a refreshing dip. The baths will remain open until twelve o'clock to-night, and from four o'clock in the morning. d1

Peter Todd is making arrangements for the establishment of a butter factory in Walkerton. Eight cents per gallon of ten pounds will be paid for milk.

GOOD FRIDAY.

To-morrow being Good Friday, no paper will be issued from this office.

THE Post Office will be moved to the new building to-morrow, and parties will please call for their keys between 6 and 7 p.m.

IT is with extreme sorrow we learn that Mr. James Webster, who has been ill for some time, is now rapidly sinking, and there is no hope of his recovery.

AN old lady who had heard a great deal about the new Post Office, found out where it was situated this afternoon, and then carefully dropped the first mail matter in the letter box through the opening in the door.

MOULDERS' STRIKE.—Owing to the employment of a non-union moulder, in Oshawa, the union men in the stove foundry have struck work. Guelph, Buffalo, and other places have since supplied men, but the "scabs"—so-called—have been induced to quit work. Several from Guelph will leave for Oshawa this afternoon.

FRUIT SOCIAL.—On Wednesday evening a fruit social under the auspices of the Ladies' Association of the Norfolk street Methodist Church was given in the basement of the church, and was one of the most successful ever given by the Association. Rev. E. B. Ryckman occupied the chair. The Misses Stevenson, Miss Oldham, Mrs. Lyons, Mrs. Hodgskin, Messrs. Crowe and Cooke, were all pleasing in singing; Mr. Schofield gave a flute solo; Misses Goodfellow and Howie and Mr. Smith, readings; and Misses Keeling and Stevenson played the accompaniments to the singing. During an intermission cakes and oranges were freely distributed among the audience.

OLD MAPLE LEAF PLAYERS.—The Boston Herald gives a report of a game of base ball between the Live Oaks of Lynn, and the Chelseas. Gillespie, Lapham, and Spence played in the former team, and Walsh in the latter—all formerly members of the Maple Leaf nine. In the 5th innings Lapham hit a high fly over the right field fence, bringing two men home, and getting on the third base himself. Walsh, of the Chelseas, hit the ball over the left field fence in the 4th innings, reaching third base. The Live Oaks scored 16, and the Chelseas only 1, which was made by a wild throw of Gillespie's on second to Spence on third base.

GOOD FRIDAY is a day observed all over the Christian world as a holiday. In St. George's Church divine worship will be held in the morning at 11 a.m., and in the evening at 7. A lecture on the "Recognition of Future State," will be given in the evening.——The mass of the prosanctified will be celebrated at St. Bartholomew's Church at 8.30 a.m.——In the evening, in Chalmer's Church, a complimentary social is to be given to Mr. H. K. Maitland, when a programme, which has been prepared with unusual care, will be gone through with. Besides local talent, a number of Mr. Maitland's friends from a distance will assist. There is little doubt but what the social will be one of the most enjoyable yet held in connection with this or any other church in town. All are cordially invited.——In the morning a lacrosse match will be played in the Agricultural Park, commencing at nine o'clock. Considerable interest will be attached to the game.——A game of checkers will be played at Acton, between ten Guelph players and an equal number of the best players in Halton County. The parties from here who will take part in the match, will leave by the eleven o'clock train on the Grand Trunk.——Excursion tickets good till Monday 22nd, will be issued on the Great Western Railway.——Members of the Guelph Rifle Association will proceed to the butts in the morning at nine o'clock for target practice.

DEATH OF A MASON.—A despatch from Muskegon, Michigan, on Wednesday last says:—The body of Geo. M. Allan, master mason of Dominion Lodge, A.F.A.M., of Canada, was found washed ashore near Biedler's dock yesterday morning. It had evidently been in the water all winter." From New Hamburg a despatch on the same day says:—"It is supposed from papers found on the body, that the George Allan mentioned in to-day's paper from Muskegon, Mich., was formerly resident of this place, and son of Malcolm Allan, a farmer living in Wilmot, three miles from here. The deceased was also a member of New Dominion Lodge, No. 205, A.F. & A.M., here. His friends have gone to Muskegon to claim the body."

A CURE.—Every little while we read of some one who has stuck a rusty nail in his foot or other part of his person, and lockjaw has resulted therefrom. All such woun is can be healed without any fatal results following them. The remedy is simple: it is only to smoke such wound or any wound that is inflamed with burning wood or woollen cloth. Twenty minutes in the smoke will take the pain out of the worst case of inflammation arising from any wound.

The Orangemen of Montreal have decided by an overwhelming majority, at a meeting held on Tuesday night, to have a procession on the 12th of July, with flags and banners. The petition from the clergy was respectfully heard, but not entertained.

A POSITIVE FACT.—Did you ever think how an advertisement travels and works for you while you are asleep and awake, while your business place is closed and open; and how it does not command a big salary and confine itself to specified hours per day?

I WAS IN A DREADFUL CONDITION. Joints swollen, pain intense. Injections of morphine into my veins failed to relieve. GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA took away the deposits from my joints. I want every one who suffers to know what will cure them.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

EVERYTHING IN STATU QUO.

April 17.

Sir Stafford Northcote's statement in the Commons is regarded as a hopeful indication, because it gives assurance that nothing has hitherto occurred to render peace impossible. Parliament separates under the conviction that the emergency is not greater than a week ago.

A despatch from Calcutta says the Indian Government has received orders to send troops to Malta. Seven regiments are designated to leave for that place, including two of the Bombay native infantry, also two field batteries, and four companies of sappers and miners.

The Times says the leading Tyne shipping firms whose boats are now waiting for cargoes in Indian ports were yesterday invited to make tenders for the immediate conveyance of troops to the Mediterranean.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs the situation is unaltered. The conciliatory action of Germany continues, but so far is without result. I am assured on good authority Russia would consent to some new departures, such as taking the treaties of 1856 and 1817 as the basis of discussion. The organ of the Minister of Foreign Affairs says:—"We care little about the way of getting into Congress provided the door is large enough to admit all, without anyone having to stop.

A St. Petersburg special says there is a vague feeling of uneasiness among well-informed people, but no reason can be discovered therefore, except the prolonged suspense.

The Russian Consul-General denies that Russian privateers were to be fitted out in the United States.

The Vienna New Free Press learns from Berlin that Russia may ostensibly agree to England's demand to submit the entire treaty to a Congress. If this course is adopted it would show that Russia had agreed with other Continental Powers, and England will be isolated in her objections to the treaty.

A Vienna correspondent says the prevailing idea is that Russia seems to favour a renewal of efforts for an understanding with Austria. Austria, however, steadfastly adheres to a solution by a Congress.

A Berlin correspondent learns on most trustworthy authority that Bismarck offered his good offices with a view to bringing about an understanding between England, Austria, and Russia.

A Vienna correspondent says:—According to a well founded report, Bismark is endeavoring to obtain the simultaneous withdrawal of the British fleet from the Sea of Marmora, and of the Russians from the neighborhood of Constantinople.

Two Dead Men.

(From the New-York Tribune.)

Tweed's death last week preached a sermon which every fool or child could understand. Not the less forcible, either, because everybody showed the natural kindly impulse to cover the sins of the dead, to put him and his life and its moral decently and quickly out of sight. A few weeks ago a man died in Philadelphia as prominent as Tweed, the meaning of whose life was as broad and pithy, but it was one which everybody was eager to hold up and make much of. For it is a curious fact that even vicious and weak men are proud of another man's life which they believe to be thoroughly pure and genuine, and feel themselves and the world the better for it. If old Plutarch were alive, he would have held the two men up for comparison until we could see the lines of their characters in shrewd and terrible contrast. There were certain circumstances in common in the lives of William Welsh and William Tweed which would have justified such a comparison. Both were men of great original force; both followed the path they had marked out for themselves uninfluenced by others; both were born in the atmosphere of commerce and began a business life in early boyhood with very scanty education; both amassed great wealth and made their way to a leadership in the affairs of their native cities. But there the likeness ceases. What Tweed was we all know—honest and industrious probably in his youth, until the greed for show, for money, seized him; then a thief, the boldest, most gigantic and successful in his swindling operations that the country has ever known. Eight years ago his prosperity and wealth seemed invincible; diamonds literally glittered upon the shoes of his children, and many of the proudest and most honorable citizens of New-York paid homage to him. Last Friday the white-haired old man lay dead in a prison-cell, and of all his followers there was none so poor to do him reverence.

William Welsh had neither genius nor scholarship to give him eminence; he was simply a Christian. The force he brought to bear upon the world was that of brotherly love and stern integrity. He never held an office to which a salary was attached. Yet he rescued the vast financial interests confided to the City of Philadelphia in trust, which had else become the prey of Rings as unscrupulous as Tweed's and controlled their management for years on principles of strict economy and honor. He was known as the friend of the Indian in every tribe. He gave a powerful helping hand to every enterprise which would strengthen or elevate the criminal, the poor or the wretched. For thirty years, while carrying on one of the largest and most complicated trades in the country, this man never neglected to go once a week to the orphans of Girard College, to talk to them of God and life and heaven as a loving father would to his boys. He died a week or two ago without a moment's warning, in a hospital surrounded by the poor and blind, to each one of whom he had been a friend. The whole city stood his mourner. From the Indian tribes, from the distant countries, came lamentations from countless human beings whom he had befriended and helped.

Both of these men had great wealth, but, lying dead to-day, neither has taken a dollar with him. In the words of Mr. Welsh, "nothing lasts in this world but character." In the world beyond, to which they have gone——But there our curious eyes have no right to follow them. We want to call the attention of young men to these two lives, and to their curious illustration of certain old truths of the Bible which do not often find their way into the daily journals. Put them out of sight as we will, their awful justice is no less alive and omnipotent. Reward or retribution does not wait for another life. They come here and now. They are at work to-day in our lives as certain and inexorable as in those two dead men.

News Items.

Tweed's funeral took place on Wednesday.

Mr. Marvin Knowlton is lying dangerously ill at Ottawa.

A party of thirty-four, from Galt and vicinity left last week for Manitoba.

More damage by the ice is reported along the St. John River. Fredericton is threatened with a flood.

There is much distress in the western portion of the Schuylkill mining region, owing to scarcity of work.

The Union moulders at the Oshawa stove foundry have struck, owing to the employment of a non-union hand in the establishment.

The statement that England is negotiating with Sweden for the purchase of a naval station on the Baltic has received an authoritive contradiction from Stockholm.

Hon. Adam Crooks, Minister of Education for Ontario, visited the educational institutions of Ottawa on Wednesday, and was presented with a congratulatory address.

It is said that on Tuesday night in the Senate Chamber Senator Carroll, who was in a passion, tried to cross the floor and twist Senator Brown's nose. Senator Campbell is given the credit of having promptly interfered and prevented so reprehensible a scene.

Berlin is to have a new mill. The town council at its last session resolved to buy a two-acre lot on the farm of Mr. S. B. Snider, and present it to Mr. Lorenz Doering, provided the latter will erect thereon a steam flour mill 38 feet by 48, and 3½ stories high.

Mr. Osborne, who is now on trial for embezzlement from the Dominion Type Founding Company, has given up the plant of his printing office to the Company. About half the matter for the coming number of the Montreal Spectator was in type, and it was also taken with the rest.

New York artists are discouraged. There was a time when they could pour molasses and Venetian red over the canvas and sell it to the West for a landscape, but the West has learned how to do it, and makes her own paintings now.—Detroit Free Press.

A man who lost his good character some time ago was severely hauled over by some of his former friends. "I know it, boys, I know my character's gone, lost entirely. And," he added rather pointedly, "it's too confounded bad, for it was the only one in the place worth saving."

At the Hamilton Police Court on Wednesday James Franks and his wife were jointly charged with having wilfully poisoned thirteen Spanish and other fowls, the property of Orlanda Edgecombe. From the evidence it appears Mrs. Franks deliberately, and in a most dastardly manner, poisoned the chickens for going into her garden.

At a recent meeting a contralto orator named Mrs. Clark explained how it was. "I knew," said she, "when I was sanctified, by this: I made my own dresses, and when they didn't use to fit I got in a rage and scolded and stormed. Now that ugly feeling is all taken away, and I could try on my dresses ten times over to make them fit, and never got out of patience. My brethren, that's the test."

So it seems Mr. James Beatty, Q.C., is not to get the Tory nomination for Centre Toronto after all, but it is to be thrown over for Mr. Robert Hay, of R. Hay & Co. The poor old Leader is terribly indignant at this slight to the relative of its proprietor. It also goes in a mild sort of way for Mr. Cameron whose name has also been mentioned as nominated in connection with the constituency in question.

"Edward," said a mother to her son, a boy of eight, who was trundling a hoop in front yard. "Edward, you musn't go out of that gate into the street." "No, ma, I won't," was the reply. A few minutes afterward his mother saw him in the street manufacturing dirt pies. "Didn't I tell you," she said, angrily, "not to go through the gate? "Well, I didn't mother," was the reply, "I climbed over the fence."

Our United States despatches inform us that 500 French Canadians, collected from various manufacturing towns in New England, left New Hampshire on Monday for Manitoba, This, we suppose, is another proof of the prosperity workingmen enjoy under the Yankee tariff. They are so prosperous that they take the earliest opportunity of deserting the States and returning to Canada.

The shipment of Canadian cattle to England has commenced for the season, and will be carried on on a much larger scale than heretofore. Already the Dominion Company's steamers are engaged ahead up to August next for all the room they can spare; likewise Thompson, Murray, & Company's line of steamers up to July next, and the new Donaldson line of steamers up to July next.

The Lancashire cotton operatives' strike threatens to be the most gigantic movement of the kind ever witnessed in that county, no less than 130,000 hands being affected thereby. Final endeavors are being made to effect a compromise, and it is believed that should these fail the strikers will not be able to hold out for any length of time, owing to the limited amount of funds at their disposal. In Blackburn alone 15,000 operatives are out, and it is believed that within a day or two fully nine-tenths of the hands will be idle.

They were courting under difficulties. It was in a room through which the members of the family were continually passing to and fro. UNSEEMLY REJOICING. — The Guelph Herald rejoices with unseemly glee over the absconding of Mr. J. D. Mackenzie, late of this town. People here, of both political parties, who know anything about the circumstances, character, and mental condition of poor Mr. Mackenzie, will see no occasion whatever in his absconding for referring in a jubilant manner to his leaving nor for the following—the second on the same subject—from the Guelph Herald:—"Since it was mentioned in the Herald, a few days ago, that J. D. Mackenzie, of Galt, had absconded with $35 of the money which had been placed in his hands as treasurer of the fund for the purchase of presentation portraits for the other Mackenzie and Mr. Blake, by the "workingmen' of Galt, it has been discovered that the statement was erroneous. He did not run away with $35 of the money; he ran away with between $55 and $60 of the money. There were several collectors for the fund, and they all handed in their ducats to Mackenzie, who paid the owner of the pictures $25 on account. The total amount, between $80 and $85, was subscribed, to a large extent, by the farmers of Dumfries, and now the collectors are held responsible for the amount of the collections. These farmers want 'protection' in this instance. The pictures must be paid for, as they were delivered some time ago. The price of the two pictures is $60. And thus it is: Bogus 'workmen,' bogus presentation, and a bogus treasurer. Truly the ways of the Grits are hard." The informant of the Herald, for we hope, the editor did not concoct the above, ought to be ashamed of himself. The facts are that Mr. Mackenzie did not run away with between $55 and $60, nor with $35, nor even with a single dollar. He paid the price of the $60 long ago, and did not carry away a single cent of the money belonging to the presentation fund. His son holds a receipt from the late Mr. Kay the painter of the portraits. The fact is that Mr. Mackenzie is a more honorable man than the leader whom the Herald supports.—Galt Reformer.

APPLETONS' JOURNAL for May has several papers of special interest. The first is an elaborately-illustrated article on "Rapid Transit in New York," which gives views of the elevated roads now nearing completion, describes and illustrates the method of constructing the Gilbert road, and includes engravings of the various plans for transit that have been proposed, thus affording a complete pictorial history of the subject. The second article of special interest is a collection of hitherto unpublished correspondence by Edgar A. Poe, gathered from original sources by J. H. Ingram, the English biographer of the poet. Julian Hawthorne has the first part of a striking novelette, entitled "Mrs. Gainsborough's Diamonds;" Dr. Guernsey gives a graphic description of the African king, Mtesa whom Stanley affirms he converted to Christianity; Lucy Hooper writes from Paris a description of some of the more important French pictures designed for the Paris Exposition; Nora Perry has a short story, "For Love of Her; there is a paper on "Real and Ideal Houses," in which the bric-a-brac mania is well hit; and the editorial and book departments are not less interesting than usual.

The Scenes in the House on Friday and Saturday.

It was natural to suppose that no small amount of feeling would be manifested by the Opposition in regard to the strictures of the Globe and other papers supporting the Government, on the conduct of certain of its members on a that memorable sitting which extended from Friday afternoon to a late hour on Saturday morning. The matter was brought under the attention of the House on Wednesday by Mr. Gibbs, of South Ontario, who commented on the articles which appeared in the Globe, the London Advertiser, the Hamilton Times, and other papers. Mr. Gibbs characterized the statement made in the Globe, reflecting on Sir John Macdonald, as an unfounded slander. Mr. Kirkpatrick in a short speech, said Sir John was perfectly sober. Mr. Macdougall, of Three Rivers, denied that he was drunk, and said that it was only his Scotch blood which got up to the boiling point. Mr. Domville denied the statement in the Advertiser about his pants being in disorder. Mr. Campbell, "Tupper's goose," had nothing to say for himself, and it seems that no one had the hardihood to come to his defence, and say that he was not drunk. In fact nothing could be said in his favour, for Mr. Mills stated that Mr. Campbell came to that side of the House on Friday night, and used profane language to the First Minister, and conducted himself generally in such a manner that it was suggested that the Sergeant - at - Arms should interfere. When Mr. Campbell was being taken out of the House the hon. member for Kingston looked up, and he (Mr. Mills) then said, "Look at the condition of the leader of the Opposition." He did not say the hon. member for Kingston was drunk, and he would not say anything more on this occasion, notwithstanding the fact that if he chose he could speak from personal knowledge.

In confirmation of the Globe's editorial, and of the strictures of other Reform papers, we give the following from the reliable Ottawa correspondent of the Hamilton Times:—

The pointed editorial attack of the Globe of Tuesday on the drunken habits of certain members of the Opposition created a good deal of sensation here in the evening. A friend showed the article to Sir John, who seemed to be a good deal troubled about it. He had already felt the cuts given him by other leading members of the Liberal press, but the undisguised article of the Globe he evidently had not anticipated. It is understood that that journal was driven into writing the article by the demands made by the Ministerialists that it should no longer like an ostrich plunge its editorial head into the sand and refuse to see what everybody else saw and was scandalized at. It was only the other night that a Minister, in his annoyance at the unceasing and utterly unreasonable and factious obstructionism of the Tories, declared that the Liberal journals were lacking in their duty in not showing the country what the Government had to bear from a virtually drunken Opposition. The fact is the whole subject is one to which the electors cannot any longer close their eyes. It may seem monstrous that respectable journals make the dreadful and damaging charges that they do, but they are more than borne out by facts. If the people do not believe it, let them come to Ottawa and see for themselves. The Opposition have vastly lost caste with the temperance element, and any opposition they may offer the new Liquor Bill will not fail of being remembered against them. The censure the Globe visited upon Ministeralists, with reference to last Saturday's disorderly proceedings is wholly unwarranted. No Opposition speaker, who confined himself to the question before the chair, was interrupted at all. Messrs. Ouimet, Pope, of Compton, and others will admit this. The only disturbance that took place was when Mr. Macdougall, of Three Rivers, Mr. Plumb, Mr. Haggart, and one or two others, were speaking against time and reading books or talking the veriest trash. Even Mr. Domville, Mr. Orton, and others, who sinned against the rules of the House, were not interrupted. It is, therefore, unfair to censure the Ministerialists. The Tory journals will meet all the statements about their friends being drunk, etc., with unblushing denials, but when they do they simply lie.

During the discussion on the drunken scenes witnessed in the House on Friday night, it leaked out that Sir John A. Macdonald was really the guiding spirit on that day of obstruction. It was not all Plumb and Haggart, all that crowd of irresponsibles, but the Chieftains himself, who directed the factious obstruction to the public business.

The New York Herald publishes the statement that Lord Dufferin's Military Secretary has written to an enquiring young lawyer in Chester, Penn., as follows:—I beg to inform you that it is not probable that the Home Government would accept the services of citizens of a neutral country in the event of war; but if such a course was adopted I am afraid you would find great difficulty in obtaining the commission of ensign or lieutenant, as those ranks would be immediately filled up in the Canadian militia by the inhabitants of the Dominion."

A deputation consisting of Messrs. Archibald, M. P., Guthrie, M. P., and Higinbotham, M. P., recently waited upon the Minister of the Interior to secure he reservation of a township in the north West Territories for settlement by sixty families from the counties of Wellington and Bruce who are now at Winnipeg or en route therefor. The Minister has granted the request. We feel sure that these families will feel thankful to those gentlemen for their efforts in their behalf.

Mr. Plumb, the interminable talker is going to be opposed in Niagara. Another Conservative gentleman, Mr. J. T. Kerby, has taken the field as an independent Conservative candidate. We cannot say that we are sorry.

The Stratford Herald truly says:—"If that row in the House of Commons the other night had occurred in a barroom the landlord would probably lose his license." Yes, and we may add that there would have been some cases in the Police Court next morning.

Dr. McInnes on Tuesday voted for the first time and with the Government amid Ministerial cheers. The Opposition are intriguing to convert him, but they have a poor prospect. He will doubtless retain his independent position.

The Puslinch Meeting.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

Sir,—In looking over the Herald of Saturday, I see some of the most scandalous falsehoods and exaggerations in regard to the so-called farmers' meeting in Downey's school house, Puslinch, on Friday evening last, which I cannot allow to go uncontradicted.

Amongst other things Mr. James Massie is branded as guilty of the height of impudence in presuming to attend the meeting as a speaker, when called on, and as having supplied the rowdyism for the meeting. To the first charge I beg to say, in the name of the electors of Puslinch, that we do not intend to consult the Herald as to whether we shall or shall not invite our representatives to attend our meetings, so he may set his mind at rest on that point for the future.

As to Mr. Massie's conduct at that meeting, I am confident—and I am sure every sensible man will agree with me—that he said or did no more than he had a perfect right to do at the meeting. When the chairman read over the motion Mr. Massie said lost only once, when the chairman, without any provocation at all, made a violent attack on him, and brought in matters which had nothing to do with the meeting, or the question under discussion. Mr. Massie very mildly attempted to reply to this unprovoked attack of the chairman, for which we see he is now sorry for, as is evidenced by his letter in the Mercury of yesterday, in which he makes a most humble apology for his rash, uncalled for and unguarded words.

As to the charge of cowardice preferred against him in declining to speak when first called on, Mr. Massie simply stated that he had not heard what the National Policy was, and he wished to hear it explained before speaking; and as he would not, of course, be allowed to speak but once, he had a right to hear Mr. Wright, the paid organizer of the League before doing so.

To say that Mr. Massie acted the part of a rowdy is a barefaced falsehood. He did not speak a word nor offer the slightest interruption during the speeches that preceded his own. But when he took the floor he was repeatedly interrupted by Messrs. Wright, Bell and Wilkie. After he resumed his seat Mr. Wright again took the floor, and for another hour poured forth a torrent of abusive, personal rubbish for which he is famed; and if Mr. Massie did attempt to set him right in some of his outrageous statements, he did no more than was done by his opponents when he had the floor.

Thanking you for your kindness.

I am, yours truly,
Jas. H. Glennie.

Puslinch, April 16, 1878.

Mr. Glennie and Mr. Bathgate.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

Sir,—At the meeting at Downey's school house on Friday night last, Mr. Bathgate challenged me to a discussion on Protection through the columns of the Mercury. I did not accept the challenge, as is reported in the Herald, but I offered to meet him on the platform within any reasonable distance of Guelph. If he do not accept this challenge it is open to any of the other gentlemen who attended the meeting at the school house on that evening, and if they don't accept this challenge, the only inference the public can form is that they consider their cause indefensible.

Yours truly,
Jas. H. Glennie.

Puslinch, April 16, 1878.

Mr. Bathgate and "Clodhopper."

To the Editor of the Mercury.

Sir,—In the Mercury of the 4th inst., I notice a letter signed by "An Old Clodhopper," where, in speaking of the shipping of cattle to Britain, he says, "supposing that our proposed national policy is in full blast, and a duty of 20 per cent. on American cattle, would Goodfellow have been able, or would he have been justified in giving anything more for the cattle he purchased from the Wellington farmers? This is what I want to get at, some practical evidence from the business we are every day transacting to prove that this proposed change will benefit us struggling farmers." And he further says you may procure the assistance of either Whitelaw or Bathgate. Well, sir, "Clodhopper" will always find me ready for such conundrums. But in the first place I would ask him, does the present duty of 10 per cent. on all animals imported from the States (except for breeding), enable any drover to give more for cattle to ship to Britain, or does it do any good to farmers? If not, why does the government keep the 10 per cent. duty on? The Hon. Alexander Mackenzie said in his speech at Aylmer "We now obtain a gross revenue of nearly $300,000 from our canals, but if we impose a duty on grain we stop all that traffic." The question now arises, does this 10 per cent. duty on cattle stop the American cattle from being shipped through Canada to Britain. If so, why does the government not take it off and place cattle in the same position as wheat? But I find on page 519, blue book for 1877, that there was shipped to Britain 1,471 cattle, value $139,770, not the produce of Canada. Now when we ship American cattle (on which there is a duty of ten per cent.) through to Britain in bond, what is to stop us shipping American grain to Britain in bond? Conundrum for Clodhopper:—Did the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie tell the truth when he made the above statement at Aylmer?" But to show what benefit is derived from the duty, we must take our importations of American cattle, and I find in blue book for last year, page 34, that we imported into Ontario 427 cattle, value $16,805, duty paid, $1,680; and on page 97 will be found that we imported into Quebec 1,582 head of cattle, value $65,542, duty paid $6,554. Now if the duty had been 20 per cent. the Government would have collected $8,234 more on those cattle, and the Americans would have had to pay that much more of our share of taxation. Another point in the cattle trade is that there will be fed a certain amount of cattle which will not pay to ship to Britain, such as cows, etc. And although a twenty per cent duty will not affect the price of our best cattle bought for shipment, yet by shutting out American cattle from our market, it would raise the price of our commoner stock or what is consumed at home. At present American cattle shipped through Canada for Great Britain, can be entered and duty paid wherever they find a suitable market and prices that will have a profit. This has been done in both Toronto and Montreal, and when our cattle went forward, these markets were filled with American cattle to the loss of the drovers, who have to buy the cheaper of the farmers the next time, consequently if our markets show any sign of rise or get rather bare of stock, they are apt to be glutted at any moment by the United States. Mr. McShane, a large dealer in Montreal, stated that he could telegraph to Chicago at any time and get a better and fuller supply of beef than he could in Canada, and if the present duty of 10 per cent was taken off our market would be constantly glutted with American common cattle in the same manner as it is with American oats.

Another item in connection with this, is our importation of swine, of which we received from the States last year, and entered for home consumption 13,756 hogs, value $179,032, duty paid $17,903 on which, if there had been a duty of 20 instead of 10 per cent. Every pound of pork that our farmers sold would have been, at the least, worth half a cent more, and the Government would have collected double the duty.

I think if Clodhopper is as open to conviction as he seems to be, that he will see that 20 per cent. on all animals coming from the United States would be quite an advantage to the Canadian farmer. I notice that he does not like figures. He perhaps thinks as I have heard some free traders say, "That anything can be proven by figures," but I would state that the figures are not mine, they are the figures of the Government. Surely Clodhopper cannot go back on statistics given by them. I am not given to make assertions without proof, like the Globe and other free traders, therefore I back my arguments up by figures, that no opponent can dispute. Thanking you for your valuable space,

I am etc.,
Wm. Bathgate.

Guelph Township, April 8th, 1878.

We direct the special attention of our readers to the new and interesting announcements made by J. D. Williamson & Co., in our advertising columns to-day. "The Lion" is so well and widely known for cheap goods of every variety—that it is a "household word" in this part of Ontario—and its enterprising proprietors seem this year to be eclipsing all former efforts. They certainly hold out great inducements.

Bond & Co to-day advertise spring hardward. Their stock is large and unusually well assorted in gardening, house-furnishing and building hardware, while in ready mixed paints, oils and colors they defy competition. Prices are much reduced and will be found lower than elsewhere.

The railroads are now at peace, and the hotels have had their "war." The result of this recent cutting of first-class hotel rates New York leaves the Grand Central in the lead, with rates one and two dollars per day lower than the rest. eod of the above Company, for Guelph and district.

(Signed) WM. ROBERTSON, Manager for Canada.

THE LONDON AND LANCASHIRE Life Assurance Company having Canadianized its business, now offers all the advantages of a home institution, with the security of a British office. The increase in new Canadian business during the year 1877, being over 100 per cent over that of 1876, is ample evidence of the favour with which this arrangement has been received by the public. Government Deposit $100,000, for the exclusive benefit of Canadian policy holders, in addition to which the whole of the earnings of the branch are invested in this country.

Harold the Outlaw,

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

"To prevent the fact from being even suspected I continued to practice my profession as an operatic singer, but removed to a quiet little house in a retired street, and Conrad spent as much of his time with me as his duties would permit. For seven months we enjoyed the most perfect happiness; then came sorrow and desolation. A whole week passed during which he had not been to visit me, and as he had never been absent for so long a period, I was much alarmed. No shadow of doubt crossed my mind as to Conrad's fidelity. I knew him to be all that was good and constant, but the unwonted absence filled me with perplexity and anxiety. On the evening of the eighth day a cab drew up at the gate, and a soldier appeared, bringing woeful tidings. Conrad had caught a malignant fever, and was lying at the officers' quarters. He had kept the truth from me as long as he could, for he knew that nothing would prevent me from coming to see him, and he feared that I might catch the infection. But he had become so ill that his life was despaired of, and he had sent for me to come to him.

"The intelligence threw me into distraction. I went at once, hardly waiting to dress, so great was my anxiety, so excessive my grief. Oh, Lizzie, I cannot dwell on the dreadful time that followed. It was brief, only three days. Yes, in three short days from that evening, my beloved Conrad died in my arms. You can imagine my grief, my despair, the light of my life gone out, the joy of my heart quenched. I told Conrad that I wished to die with him, but he charged me to live and take care of myself for the sake of our unborn child, who, he reminded me, would be the heir of Benachray. Farther, he charged me to go at once to Scotland to his father, declare myself to be Conrad's wife—his widow, rather—and claim that protection and those rights which my position warranted. He showed me how to procure such proofs as were necessary in addition to the marriage certificate which I had already in my position; and armed with these, he said my position could not be disputed. He tried to write a letter to his father, containing a statement of the truth, but was too weak to accomplish this. Indeed, he lived only a few hours longer; and when the attendants came into the room in the dark, they found me lying in a swoon on his dead boby.

"When I returned to consciousness I was back in my little home—to be gladdened with the joy of love no more. Some days had elapsed, my husband was buried—shut out from my sight for ever. I could not have the poor yet coveted consolation of imprinting on his cold lips a farewell kiss or of following him to the grave. I could only visit that grave and weep and mourn there. Oh, Lizzie, you have your trials, but they are not equal to mine. You have not been called on to sit alone within the shadow of death."

"Bitter as was then my cup of sorrow it was not yet full. I could not for some time tear myself away from the vicinity of the churchyard where my lost darling had been laid; but mindful of Conrad's dying injunction I at length summoned sufficient resolution to obey it. I obtained such proofs of our marriage as he had indicated, and putting these and the certificates into one packet I deposited them carefully in my bosom, and prepared to leave London. My last hour there was spent by Conrad's grave. I sobbed and wept till I thought my heart would break, then with a long passionate embrace of the senseless turf above his bosom I left the place of tombs, and that night began my journey to Scotland.

"It was a weary, painful journey; but at length it terminated, and at dusk on the eighth day I reached the mansion of Benachray. I was alone, and had travelled the last few miles on foot, and when I knocked for admission at the great door I must have appeared a poor, miserable object to the servant who opened it. That servant was one of whom you know something—it was Colston.

"When I asked for an interview with his master the man looked at me with undisguised curiosity, and hesitated to admit me; but something in my air and manner produced an impression on him, and he showed me into a small ante-room, where, with a beating heart, I waited till Colonel McPherson came, which he did in a few minutes. When he entered my heart beat faster still, for his cold, proud, haughty aspect was anything but encouraging for the task I had to perform. Nevertheless, I managed—in words abrupt, but intelligible enough—to announce myself as the wife of his eldest son, who had just died in London.

"He received the intimation with amazement and incredulity; but I put the packet of papers in his hand, and as he examined them he grew pale with rage, and I could also see with dismay. He walked about the room for some time in a state of excitement and agitation, which he found it impossible to hide; then with an intimation that he would presently return he left me.

"It was a considerable time ere he came back, and when he did he was accompanied by a younger gentleman, who, with frowning brow, bent scowling looks on me. This was Roderick, the younger and now only surviving son, and it required little power of penetration to see with what hatred he regarded me. The two together questioned me with irritating minuteness as to my birth, parentage, and social station—my connection with Conrad, how it began, how it was continued—all the particulars of the marriage, and what had taken place since. I told all, I hid nothing; I even repeated Conrad's last charge to me to take care of myself for the sake of my unborn child.

"At the mention of this Roderick's brow darkened more fearfully, his eyes flashed, his teeth were clenched; he looked as if he could have slain me.

"When they had elicited all the information I had to give they gazed at each other for a few moments in silence. Then the Colonel said in a tone of perplexity and dismay,

"'What's to be done?'

"'Send Dixon for McGarray,' was the ready reply, in a very hoarse and husky tone.

"'Ha! yes; he'll advise us.'

"Meanwhile," added Roderick, "she must be kept in a room, retired—perfectly retired.

"I thought he said this with peculiar significance, but I was now so weary and worn out with the long journey, and with the examination I had undergone, to pay much attention. I only longed for repose, and was thankful when they told me to follow them, and I would be taken to a bedroom.

"It did not escape me, however that they seemed to take particular pains to keep me from being seen by any of the servants. I was conducted by the Colonel himself, by narrow passages and private stairs, to a chamber in a remote part of the mansion. Here I was left alone, but as the Colonel left me he intimated that supper would be sent me.

"I was glad of this, for, despite the grief and suffering I had endured, I was excessively hungry. I had another life to sustain besides my own, and that unconscious vitality was vigorous in its demands.

"It was with a sense of heavy disappointment that I tried to reflect on the scene through which I had just passed. It was obvious enough that I had met with a reception not only unwelcome, but hostile, and I saw that I was not likely ever to be affectionately regarded either by the Colonel or his son. But, great heaven, I never dreamed that I was to become the victim of such horrible cruelty as I have since experienced.

The Tilton-Beecher Scandal Again.

From the New York Tribune.

On Saturday last, Mrs. Tilton signed the following statement, which was addressed to her relative and confidential adviser, Ira B. Wheeler, a lawyer of No. 293 Broadway, but resident in New Jersey:—

MR. IRA B. WHEELER.

MY DEAR SIR,—A few weeks since, after long months of mental anguish, I told, as you know, a few friends, whom I had bitterly deceived, that the charge brought by my husband, of adultery between myself and the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, was true, and that the lie I had lived so well the last four years had become intolerable to me.

That statement I now solemnly affirm, and leave the truth with God, to whom also I commit myself, my children and all who must suffer.

I know full well the explanations that will be sought by many for this acknowledgment: a desire to return to my husband, insanity, malice—everything save the true and only one—my quickened conscience, and the sense of what is due to the cause of truth and justice. During all the complications of these years you have been my confidential friend, and therefore I address this letter to you, authorizing and requesting you to secure its publication.

ELIZABETH R. TILTON.

Brooklyn, April 13, 1878.

Mr. Wheeler called at the Tribune office on Monday afternoon, with the original of the above document, and submitted it for publication. There was no question of the genuine character of the document, no matter under what circumstances it had been obtained and promulgated, and at Mr. Wheeler's suggestion and wish it was put in type and copies were furnished for the other morning papers.

MR. BEECHER'S EMPHATIC DENIAL.

Henry Ward Beecher left his home yesterday morning on a lecturing tour, and by a singular circumstance failed to inform his sons, who live in the house with him, where he was going. Mrs. Beecher is in Florida, and no communication could be had with her. Colonel Henry Beecher was found at his office at Montague and Court streets, and was greatly annoyed at being unabled to recall where his father had gone for the night. He sent a messenger to his wife, but she returned answer that she did not know, nor did Mr. Halliday, of whom she made inquiry. Colonel Beecher, however, telegraphed to Hathaway & Pond, of Boston, who are Mr. Beecher's agents, and from them it was learned, at a late hour, that Mr. Beecher was to lecture at Waverly, N. Y. A dispatch was sent at once to Mr. Beecher, from the Editor of the Tribune, including the confession of Mrs. Tilton in full, as it appears above, and a request that he answer by telegraph if he cared to make any statement for the public. About midnight the following emphatic denial of Mrs. Tilton's statement was received:—

To the Editor of the Tribune.

SIR,—I confront Mrs. Tilton's confession with explicit and absolute denial.

The testimony to her own innocence and to mine which, for four years she has made to hundreds, in private and public, before the Court, in writing and orally, I declare to be true.

And the allegations now made in contradiction of her uniform, solemn, and unvarying statements hitherto made I utterly deny.

I declare her to be innocent of the great transgression.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Waverly, N.Y., Monday evening, April 15.

THE DUNKIN ACT IN GREY.—In consequence of a circumstance which came out in evidence in the trial of a case of perjury at the Assize Court in Grey. Mr. Justice Burton said, with reference to certain proceedings of the local Anti-Dunkin Association, that the state of affairs which the evidence disclosed was most disgraceful, and that he could not conceal the disgust he felt at learning—for the first time that such a thing had ever come to his notice in a Court of Justice—that any body of men should associate themselves together for the purpose of defeating the operation of the law of the land, and of persecuting persons whom the Government has sent here for the purpose of detecting violations of the law. The case which gave rise to these remarks was the trial of a person employed as a liquor detective on a charge of perjury. In this instance he was acquitted, but in another trial on a similar charge the jury, at a late hour on Saturday, caused general surprise by coming into Court with a verdict of "Guilty" against him, although his Lordship had delivered a charge which, in consequence of the more than suspicious character of the evidence against the defendant, and although the learned judge admitted the occupation of the accused was far from being an honourable one, was strongly in the latter's favour. In Court to-day his Lordship took occasion to say, while acknowledging the delicacy he felt in doing so, that when he heard that verdict he was not only surprised at, but shocked by it, and that such a finding was calculated to bring the jury system into disrepute. A motion to reverse the verdict will be made in term. So strong is the antagonism of sentiment between the supporters of the Dunkin Act and its opponents in that county, that no less than five or six charges of perjury arising out of it have been tried during the Assize just closed.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Presentations in Hamilton.

The following account of presentations made by the St. John's Presbyterian Church are copied from the Times by request:—

Mr. Chas. G. Cockburn, flour and feed merchant, of Hamilton, formerly of Puslinch, was requested by a committee of the members of St. John's Presbyterian Church to be present at the residence of Mr. Geo. Holden, Victoria avenue, where, to his (Mr. Cockburn's) surprise, several of the members had congregated for the purpose of making him a present. Mr. Cockburn has for nearly two years been an active and zealous member of the above Church, and having recently intimated his intention of leaving the city, the members took advantage of the opportunity thus afforded them, and as a slight token of the esteem in which he is held, made him the recipient of a fine gold watch chain.

In addition to, and in connection with, the above, the members also presented Miss Reynolds, a young lady who for sometime has acted as organist in the church (and who recently tendered her resignation) with o gold chain and locket.

Among other prominent members of the congregation present, we noticed A. I. Mackenzie, W. Roland, R. Hall, J. Boyd and Jas. Elliott.

Rev. Mr. Goldsmith, pastor of the church, who acted as chairman, made the presentation on behalf of the members, and in a neat address tendered his most sincere thanks to Mr. Cockburn and Miss Reynolds for the valuable assistance which they rendered the church—Mr. Cockburn as a precenter and Miss Reynolds as organist. The pastor also expressed a wish that Mr. Cockburn when away from the church, would not fail to remember it and those who constituted its congregation.

In reply to the address, Mr. Cockburn returned his sincere thanks to the members for the valuable present, and said he should never fail to remember, though far away, St. John's Presbyterian Church of Hamilton, and the many happy hours he had spent with its members, and he hoped the Church would continue to progress in the future as it had in the past.

Miss Reynolds, in a graceful manner, expressed her heartfelt thanks for the very kind consideration the members had shown her, and wished the Church and its members every prosperity in the future.

Mr. A. I. Mackenzie paid a deserved compliment to Mr. Cockburn by way of an address after the presentation had been made, in which he spoke very highly of him as to his vocal abilities.

Mr. J. Johnston, music teacher of the public schools of the city was present, and during the evening sang several pieces in his usual good style. Altogether, a delightful evening was spent.

We wish Mr. Cockburn every success in his new home, which, we understand, will be in the Algoma district, lumbering limits.

Licenses in Centre Wellington.

The Commissioners for Centre Wellington met at the City Hotel, Guelph, on Tuesday to decide on the question of issuing licenses in the Riding for the coming year from May 1st. There were present:—Jas. Cattanach, chairman, Chas. Allan and Chas. McMillan, and John Macdonald, Inspector. After mature consideration the following tavern and shop licences were granted:—

ELORA.—Thos. Biggar, Francis Dalby, Jas. Burns, Mrs. Hannah Wiper, Andrew Krausman. Refused Eph. Land. Shop Licences.—Alex. Waddell, J. M. Fraser.

FERGUS.—Jas. C. Morrow, Wm. Spiers, Peter Conse, Thos. Hughes, Thos. Corbett, P. Grieve. Refused—E. B. Teevin, Ed. Gartley. Shop Licenses.—Jas. Argo, Henry Michie, Thomson Sherwood, Hugh Mitchell.

LUTHER.—Jas. Foster, Samuel Stuckey, Geo. Galbraith. Refused—D. D. Cheeseburgh.

NICHOL.—Pat Heffernan, John Muir, Anthony Griffin, Martin Stribe, John W. Keil, John Wood. Refused—Geo. Fladd.

PILKINGTON.—Jas. Johnston, Ignatz S. Lehman.

WEST GARAFRAXA.—Thos. Garvin, Wm. E. Leybourne, Adam Halliday, Peter Fitzpatrick. Refused—H. B. Fleming.

ERIN TOWNSHIP.—John Clarke, Jas. Crozier, Wm. R. Chisholm, John Kirk, Geo. Gibbs, W. J. Dwier, Mrs. M. Fielding, Chas. Anderson Wm. Willis. Refused—Patrick Mellon.

The Board then adjourned to meet at Fergus on Friday, the 26th inst.

Hespeler Items.

FOR THE NORTH WEST.—Mr. James H. Ellis, son of Mr. Thomas Ellis, Puslinch; Mr. John Shaw, son of Mr. Joseph Shaw, Waterloo Township; Mr John Martin, formerly of Hespeler, but recently of Holyoke, Mass., and a number of others from the same place, left Hespeler this morning to join Mr. Patterson's party at Paris, Ont., their destination being the Saskatchewan. We wish them much success, and trust that ere long their enterprise will be rewarded in the possession of comfortable, and happy homes in the far west.

HESPELER WAGGON FOR THE NORTH WEST.—Mr. James Martin & Co., of Holyoke, purchased of Mr. James Anderson, carriage and waggon maker of this village, a waggon to take to the Saskatchewan. It was built by Mr. Anderson and his workman, Mr. W. Parks, and is in every respect a first-class article, fitted up with an emigrant top making it a commodious vehicle in travelling across the prairie. The purchasers take out a span of horses and expect to use the waggon as a conveyance from Winnipeg to their destination. In speaking of it we have pleasure in stating that Mr. A. keeps a first-class workman on hand, and always turns out a No. 1 article in that line, and parties wanting a good waggon for any purpose can get a good bargain at his establishment.

PERSONAL.—Owing to the high estimation in which Mr James H. Ellis was held by his numerous friends in this vicinity, much regret is felt at his departure for the North West. We, however, prophesy for him a successful future, for although a very young man, he is a scholar, a mechanic, or a laborer, able and willing to act in either capacity in short, a capital stamp of a pioneer.

THE SCHOOL.—At the recent uniform County Examination, which for some years has been customary in this county, (and should be in all counties) and is held with a view to promote systematically the pupils into the higher classes, five of the Hespeler pupils applied for promotion into the sixth, or highest Division, and all succeeded. Eleven applied for promotion to 5th class, and six succeeded.

Names of 6th class pupils, James McAlister, John D. Conway, William Phin, Joseph Shupe, Annie Lang.

Names of 5th class pupils who succeeded were James Hogarth, Madie Harris, John Jardin, Edward Rife, Arnold Panabaker, Ephraim Panabaker.

James McAlister, James Hogarth, and Madie Harris passed with honors in their respective classes.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE JAMES WEBSTER.—On Saturday afterdoon the funeral of the above deceased gentleman took place from his late residence to the cemetery. The cortege was exceedingly large, nearly all the public officials and business men of Guelph being in attendance. Many personal friends of the deceased from a distance were also present to pay their respects to the body of him whom once they esteemed. The pall bearers were: Major Draper and Mr. Henry O'Brien, of Toronto; Mr. Richard Brough, of London; Mr. F. J. Chadwick, A. Lemon, E. Morris, John Sandiland, and A. H. Macdonald, of Guelph. Rev. Canon Dixon conducted the very impressive services of the Episcopal Church at the grave.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE for April (Republished by the Leonard Scott Publishing Co., 41 Barclay street, New York) contains an unusual amount of light reading. The serial "Mine is Thine" is continued, and another, called "John Caldigate," is commenced, and there is, besides, a short story or sketch, showing how a turn of the wheel of fashion revives an old style and makes it new again. Several pages are devoted to Martin's Translations from Heine, and there is also a little poem by Austin Dobson, "To Ethel who wishes she had lived 'In teacup-times of hood and whoop, or while the patch was worn.'" There is a long and interesting review, with numerous quotations, of "The Moor and the Loch," by John Colquhoun, which describes salmon fishing, and the shooting of all sorts of game, even seals and eagles. Part XI. of "The Storm in the East" is a discussion of the events of the war, which were recapitulated last month. The closing article discusses the probability of the meeting of the Congress. The periodicals reprinted by the Leonard Scott Publishing Co., (41 Barclay street, N. Y.) are as follows:—The London Quarterly, Edinburgh, Westminster, and British Quarterly Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine. Price $4 a year for any one, or only $15 for all, and the postage is prepaid by the Publishers.

THE new rooms of the Mechanics' Institute are not yet in first-class order. They are however in excellent disorder. It will be a few days yet before the rooms can be regularly opened.

THE watering of the streets has been settled for to-day. But the sprinkling has been so universal and heavy round town that even now the merchants have no great reason to be satisfied. Customers are kept at home and cellars in a few cases have been deluged.

SEPARATION.—The Orangeville Sun is again advocating the advisability of taking a popular vote in the municipalities constituting the provisional county of Dufferin, with the view of having it established into a separate county. Our contemporary is of the opinion that the time for action in this direction has fully arrived.

MILLINERY AND MANTLES.—Mrs. Geo. Jeffrey has opened a millinery and mantle establishment on Upper Wyndham street in Hazelton's block. All orders entrusted to her will be filled with promptness and with that good taste which those who have inspected the millinery in the store know full well can be executed. Children's clothing on hand. The ladies of Guelph should call and make an inspection of the goods now in stock.

ABOUT SEWING MACHINES.—Mr. Archd. Riddell sends us a communication about a conversation that he and Mr. Massie had at Hillsburg on Friday, in which the latter said that 7,000 sewing machines had been imported into the Dominion during the past year. Mr. Riddell corrected him, and said that only 5,000 machines, in round numbers, had been imported. Mr. R. on his return looked up the Trade and Navigation Returns for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, where he finds, during that time, sewing machines and parts thereof had been imported from Britain to the number of 764, and from the United States 4,455, making a total of 5,219.

BASE BALL.—On Friday a match was played at Harriston between the Browns and a picked nine—the latter captained by A. Campbell, President of the Browns. Score: Browns, 35; Campbell's picked nine, 6. The Browns will take the field on the 1st of May,—by that time they will be fully organized. The best game so far this season, was that played at Lynn, Mass., on Wednesday, between the International New Bedford and Live Oak Clubs. The New Bedford Club won after a well played game by a score of 1 to 0. At Springfield, Mass., the other day, the first game for the International championship between the Rochester and Springfield Clubs, was won by the former club by a score of 7 to 0. In a game at Binghamton, N. Y., recently, the Hornellsville Club defeated the Cricket Club of that place by a score of 5 to 1.

GRAND ENCAMPMENT STATISTICS.—Mr. M. D. Dawson, of London, the Grand Scribe of the Grand Encampment of I.O.O.F., of Ontario, has compiled his yearly report of the Supreme Encampment of the U.S., from which the following statistics in regard to Ontario are gleaned:—Number of Encampments at end of year, 39; members per last report, 1,794; initiated during the year, 219; admitted by card, 58; reinstated, 10. Total gain, 287. Number withdrawn by card, 62; suspended, 158; expelled, 2; died, 14. Total loss, 236. Net gain, 51. Total membership December 31st, 1877. Number of Patriarchs relieved, 110; widowed families relieved, 5; weeks' sickness for which benefits were paid, 569. Amount paid for relief of Patriarchs, $698; widowed families, $45; burying the dead, $140; special relief, $5. Total relief, $888. Amount of annual receipts, $7,620.68.

BARDS AND POETS.—Guelph will have an opportunity of hearing an entertainment on Wednesday evening next, of a character and kind rarely offered them. Mr. and Mrs. Davenport Kerrison, of New York City, bring with them favorable notices from the press of New York, Louisville, Raleigh, and other cities in the United States, and the programme which they carry out is most charmingly varied from first to last, alternating as it does, the humorous with the sentimental. Mr. Kerrison's ability as a pianist is fully established, he holding, until lately, the position of Professor and Lecturer at the Grand Conservatory of Music, New York, and also made a successful tour of the Western and Southern States, and was one of the solo pianists at the Centennial Exhibition Concerts, Philadelphia. Mrs. Kerrison is a vocalist and reader of pronounced talent, as also a pianist of no mean abilty. It will be an entertainment which of necessity can be presented here but rarely. Tickets, 25c and 40c each. See programmes.

A SMALL FLOOD.—Rain began falling about nine o'clock this (Monday) morning, and continued descending till nearly two o'clock. Between twelve and one the rain fell in perfect torrents, and in a few minutes the drains were filled to overflowing. When the sewer on Wyndham street overflows, it is synonmous to deluged cellars, and of course this proved to be the case to-day. On lower Wyndham street the stores of Herod & Co., Geo. S. Powell, F. A. Drew and Cormack & Kelcher and the Bank of Commerce, all got a little of the rain, varying from two feet to six inches. Little or no damage was done in any of those cellars, as since the last flood, about a year ago, business men at exposed points on Wyndham street have been careful not to place goods nearer than two or three feet from the cellar floor. In Hallett & Co's cellar, underneath their seed establishment, water ran in at a very lively rate, but disappeared through an opening to an old drain in its centre, about as fast as it entered. Mrs. Soden's hotel cellar proved a first-class opening for water running down Macdonnell street west. When water is rushing down the Wyndham street drain it is impossible for the water from Macdonnell street to enter the drain, and in consequence it is backed up, forming a perfect pond of water. The Soden hotel being built very low, the water runs over the sidewalk and into the cellar. A reporter visited the hotel about two o'clock and found the water came up to the bar-room floor—making about seven feet of water. Some loss will be occasioned here. The Quebec street drain proved sufficient to carry of the water, and for once in many years an incipient flood did not fill all the cellars on the south side of this street.

GREAT FIRE.—The enormous oatmeal mills of A. Forrest & Co., in Oregon, Illinois, were on Wednesday morning of last week destroyed by fire. The mills were the finest in the west, being worth about $40,000, with a stock of about $25,-000 worth on hand. There is an insurance of $33,000. John Forrest, of Woodstock, and his brother, formerly of Oxford county, were the owners of the mills. This is the third or fourth time that these gentlemen have been great losers by fire.

FIRE IN BLYTH.—The most extensive fire which has ever occurred in Blyth took place on Saturday night, resulting in the complete destruction of Mr. P. Kelly's saw, shingle, and lath mill, and Alexander McCreight's house, which was also owned by Mr. Kelly. Upwards of 100,000 feet of lumber was burned. Mr. Kelly's loss will be about $7,000. This is the second mill which he has had destroyed by fire within two months, and the third that has been burned on the same spot. The mill was insured in the Gore Mutual and Waterloo Mutual for $2,500, half in each.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.

An Address to Guelph St. George's Society.

On Sunday evening a large number of the members of St. George's Society paraded to the Episcopal Church to listen to a sermon having application to England and her interests on the occasion of the approaching anniversary of the patron saint of that country. The members of the Society occupied the centre seats in the church to the front. The other portion of the building was completely filled. Besides music appropriate to Easter Sunday, there was also music furnished by the choir and by Miss Geddes on the organ in keeping with the nature of the discourse. "Home, Sweet Home," with variations, on the organ, and the "Halleujah Chorus," were particularly effective.

The discourse given by Rev. Canon Dixon was unusually interesting, and was listened to with profound attention throughout. The text chosen, as the basis of his remarks, was the 5th and 6th verses of the 137th Psalm: "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth." In the introductory portion of the discourse the Rev. Canon compared the love of the children of Israel of Jerusalem with that love which filled the heart of every son of Britain to the mother land. In beautiful word painting the subject was enlarged upon, and after showing what noble deeds Englishmen could look back upon as having been accomplished by their forefathers, the rise and fall of nations was touched upon, and what appeared to be the guiding finger of the Almighty in all their destinies was regulated by Divine wisdom. After referring to the early settlement and growth of England, the Canon continued:—A few years since I met at a great sea side resort, on the Atlantic coast, a man of extraordinary ability and foresight, and who took no small part in the political as well as controversial struggles of the day. A few months prior to his death I renewed the acquaintance in Canada, and had conversations with him of great interest while nominally engaged with him in a fishing party. I allude to a former Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York,—Archbishop Hughes. His views on the aspects of the times were broad and statesmanlike, and altogether free from a narrow sectarianism. Of France he spoke almost prophetically, as well as despairingly, anticipating the sentiment and almost the words of M. Paradol, that neither religion, nor the sense of duty, nor the obligations of honor, the three great bulwarks of a nation, had any permanent hold on the mass of the French people. This was prior to the fall of the Empire, and the correctness of his estimate has been singularly manifested in the terrible collapse of that unfortunate nation in the German war, and the frightful scenes enacted in Paris. He also took a very gloomy view of the future of his own adopted country, the United States, where he believed the increasing wealth of the rich and the increasing poverty of the poor would, in time, develope a rampant communism—which would declare war against the very framework and foundations of society—against the rights of property and the distinctions of wealth. The cost of emancipating labor from the fetters of capital, meant a conspiracy against society, the confiscation of private property, the gathering together of which is the motive power of industry, and progressive civilization. These doctrines in theory were harmless, but in great convulsions, the theorists and philanthropists were swept away like chaff before the men of action. The founders of the American Constitution did not forsee this dangerous class, and it is weak and powerless in its safeguards; and efforts to limit the franchise would precipitate the impending struggle. But my object in bringing forward this matter is to show you what this deep thinker said about England. The Government of England he declared was the most stable Government in the world. Society seemed to him bound and interlaced together by bands of steel—that there were not the wide impassible gulfs in social life that existed in other countries,—but that Queen and Lords, and Commons were so interwoven together—hereditary legislators and elected representatives of the people so harmoniously blended, that they presented a marvellous barrier against the levelling agrarianism of the day; and he also felt bound in truth to assert that the English Church was a powerful element in establishing the permanency of English society. Speaking of Canada, he said that it would be the height of mad folly to sever the ties that connect it with England, and that if we did so we should soon find our latter state infinitely worse than our first. These are remarkable sayings, the thoughts of one devoid of love for or sympathy with England, but whose wisdom and foresight bore testimony to the grandeur and power of our beloved country. And though there are many of our enemies to whom the wish is the father of the thought, who assert that England is falling from her high sphere; that her powers are crippled; that she has no longer the prestige and influence of the days of old, if we take up a map of the world and carefully examine it, we cannot fail to see that England never was so great, never was so powerful, never had such controlling sway over the distinies of the whole world, as she has to-day. And what is it that gives her that tremendous power? It is her colonies and her coal that render her supreme above all the nations of the earth. Take up, as I said, a map of the world, there is not a bay, or a strait, or an island, or a promontory, comanding the traffic of the great seas of the world, where England has not a fortification and a coal depot. At the entrance of the Mediterranean, she has Gibraltar, the strongest and best armed point in the world. In the centre she holds an island nearly as strong—Malta. From this island she controlls the Suez Canal; while, on the Red Sea side, she has Aden and Perim—the keys of that great highway of commerce, and a right of occupation of Sacotia and Kouri. Going down the African coast she has Sierra Leone, Ascension, St. Helena, the Cape of Good Hope—all within easy run. Then turning northwards, we have the Mauritius; still further Ceylon; thence a short run to Calcutta, to Bombay, to Madras. Then to the east, we have Singapore; and a little further Hong Kong, and Labuan with its immense coal beds—holding together the keys of China. Then south again, there is the huge island continent of Australia; 600 miles further on, New Zealand. Then south of Australia, Norfolk Island, the Auckland group, and lately the Fejee Islands, commanding the Southern Pacific. Cape Horn is an important point, but it is uninhabitable; but England holds the Falkland Islands. Coming north again, she holds the strongest points in the West Indian group—from Trinidad—overlooking the Amazon—to Jamaica, Barbadoes, Guiana—on the continent,—Balize. Bermudas—with the greatest floating dock in the world and impregnable fortifications,—and thence to Halifax. Thus there is not a sea or gulf of any value in the traffic of the world of which England does not hold the keys with an iron grasp of tenacity. We have often heard of late of letters of marque and of privateers to be let loose upon English commerce. But where would they get their coal if shut out from English ports. Mere sailing ships could not do much harm: the great fleets of any power opposed to England could do British commerce but little injury, as they could not leave their own shores save for a very brief time—some three or four days—without the risk of becoming helpless from want of coal. And thus is the grand saying of the greatest of American orators literally true. Of England he says:—"A Power which Rome, in the height of her glory, is not to be compared. A Power which has dotted over the surface of the whole globe with her possessions and military posts, whose morning drum beat, following the sun and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England." Thus we see that England, our beloved fatherland, stands the highest among the nations—that she is still "the mistress and sovereign of the seas,"—that she now stands as she has stood for centuries—pre-eminent, and without a rival. Thus has God blessed the labours of the great builders of the fame and glory of England.

In concluding the Canon referred to the threatening cloud in the East at the present time, and of the part England will take, if the worst comes to the worst—that of protecting the weaker States against the semi-barbarians of the North, and preventing countries that Russia does not hold being turned into vantage ground against the interests of Britain. As the Jew of old said when faint-hearted cowards sought to induce him to desert his post, even so would every true son of St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick exclaim, as they had done in the language of the text.

Hillsburg Horse Show.

The second annual spring show of stallions was held in Kirk's field, in the village of Hillsburg on Friday last. Notwithstanding the rain which fell heavily in the first part of the morning and the gloomy appearance of the sky, there was a large turn out. It was considered the largest attendance of people at a horse show for some years. The entries of horses were not so large as was anticipated. The superior quality of the animals exhibited would be no discredit to any horse show of a larger magnitude. Each animal entered for competition was minutely inspected and comments on their good and bad points were freely indulged in by the spectators. In the different classes of horses there were twelve entries, and taking them as a whole, they were of a superior quality. In the entries of the road and carriage horses, the Howe's horse, of the "Royal George" breed, the property of Mr. George Hill, of Ballinafad, was particularly admired. It took second prize in the class entered. The competition was very close between "Willie Wonder" and "Howe's horse," so much so that the judges were rather doubtful at first, but finally waived their decision in favor of the former. The horse shown by Mr. Willis is a very fine specimen of his class. The following is the prize list:—

Heavy draught stallions.—Two entries—1st "British Ensign," Wm. Patterson, Marsville; 2nd "Duke of Edinburgh," Ransom Adams, Acton.

General purposes.—Three entries—1st "Old Sir Tatan," W. Willis, Brisbane; 2nd "Young Hard Fortune Messenger," Mr. Martin, Chingacousay.

Road and carriage.—Seven entries—1st "Willie Wonder," Wm. Patterson, Marsville; 2nd "The Howe's Horse," of Royal George breed. D. Hill, Ballanafad.

Special prize.—"Young Boston," D. Hyman, Shelburne.

The Judges were Messrs. Jonathan Stokes, Eramosa; M. Barnes, Erin; W. McEnery, Esquesing, and John Standish, veterinary surgeon, Georgetown.

The decision of the Judges gave general satisfaction to all parties who entered horses for competition.

The New York Herald, on the authority of a Paris correspondent, publishes a sensational report of an impending secession in England from the Church of England to the Church of Rome. The number of persons implicated in the movement is given by the Herald as three millions, and it is further stated that certain concessions, similar to those made to some of the Eastern Churches, will be granted to the proselytes.

A ghastly auction sale took place at Ashtabula this week. The relics of the terrible railroad accident were sold to the highest bidder. A list of relics were made out by the coroner at the first of this month and the value of each article set down, the total amounting to $63. The sale brought $42. Only one article was recognized. A young lady identified a watch and chain as belonging to her father, A. H. Stockwell, of Ashtabula, who has been missing since the disaster. One apartment had 800 pieces of clothing stored away in it. This hideous pile was sold in a lump to a paper mill, and perhaps these relics will yet meet the eye in the form of a newspaper.

Many Scotchmen will be grieved to hear of the death of John Gordon, of Cluny. He was one of the largest and best landlords in Scotland, holding in all 107,533 acres of land, and his tenants in Aberdeen, Banff, Nairn, Midlothian, and Inverness have lost a true friend, for he was always ready to help their interests in property as well as his own. At the time of his death "Cluny" was spending between £50,000 to £60,000 on the construction of a harbor for the fishermen of Banffshire. He was twice married (his widow was a Miss Pringle), but leaves no children.

The contract for the extension of the Canada Central Railway from Pembroke to the Southern end of Lake Nipissing has been signed by Messrs. Worthington & Co., of Montreal.

The Presbyterian congregation of Ballinafad have been successful in obtaining the services of Mr. Wm. McKay as pastor for the summer months.

MONDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 22, 1878

An Ex-Minister Accused of Corruption and Extortion.

Mr. E. H. Goff, late president of the Montreal, Portland and Boston Railway has, through the Montreal Herald, brought some serious charges against Mr. Baker, Solicitor General under the late Government in Quebec, and he intends to bring the matter before the Courts for the recovery of the money and property said to have been extorted from him by false representations:

Briefly stated the charge is that in order to secure the repayment of a heavy loan he made to the above Railway, he pressed on the then Government the necessity of giving to it an enhanced subsidy of $4,000 per mile. A promise was made to that effect, and he in company with a Mr. Angus bought the iron, becoming responsible to the Bank of Montreal for the money to pay for the same, offering as security the letter of the Government promising to pay the subsidy. Baker demanded $10,000 by way of percentage for getting the affair carried through, besides some other perquisites. Of this some $2,000 was paid down, and subsequently he demanded the balance, as he had to divide it with other members of the Government. As Goff could not raise the money Baker said he would take personal property, sleigh, robes, harness, a diamond ring and a mortgage for some $800, all of which was handed over to the corrupt minister. Still no order was given for the payment of the subsidy. Things grew desperate. Angus was forced into insolvency, and Goff's character was blackened in every way by Baker, and he was cruelly persecuted in the hope that any damaging statements he might make against Baker would not be believed. Under the circumstances Goff determined to expose the extortion and bring the whole nefarious transaction under the eye of the law.

If these allegations can be sustained Baker's character will be irretrievably ruined, and that of some other members of the defunct De Boucherville Government may also be seriously affected. Mr. Baker through the Montreal Gazette denies the truth of the charge brought against him, and the whole case will now have to be cleared up in a court of law.

ADDITIONAL LICENSES.—At a meeting of the Board of License Commissioners for West Wellington held at Arthur village on Monday last, additional licenses were granted to applicants from Mount Forest as follows:—James Hayes, tavern, and J. M. Crawford, shop. In the case of Mrs. McPherson, an applicant for a tavern license in Arthur village, the final decision was left over until a new census be taken in that municipality.

THE INDIANS.—A letter from Fort Ellis says Capt. Williams, of the Seventh Infantry, New York, has returned from watching the movements of hostile Indians and reports that Nex Perce, Sioux, Crows, and others in Canada, avowed, at a recent food council, that if the buffalo fail them they will cross the line into the United States territory, as they prefer dying while fighting soldiers, to death by starvation. Indian runners have been sent to the Saskatchewan, and if they report buffalo there the hostiles will go there; if not they will doubtless come in a body to the United States, and an Indian war will follow.

MOUNT FOREST.—Summer races on Monday, 1st July.——The last cattle fair was well attended. The average prices paid were as follows: oxen, per yoke, $80 to $110; cows, $25 to $35; heifers, $18 to $25. Fat cattle ranged from $3.25 to $3.75 per cwt, some fine specimens being on the ground.——A By-law has been passed by the Council to provide the four thousand dollars demanded by the Board of Public School Trustees to enable them to make their proposed addition to the Central School.——A committee has been appointed to take steps for the organization of a much needed hook and ladder company, and a communication relating to the importance of paying immediate attention to the sanitary condition of the town has been referred to the Health Committee.

LISTOWEL.—The draught players of the town met at their new club room, and organized, with the following officers:—George Adam, President; Thos. Waddell, Vice-President; Duncan McFarlane, Secretary-Treasurer.—The Young Men's Conservative Association have elected the following officers:—Honorary President, D. D. Campbell, Esq.; President, John Livingstone, jr.; Vice-President, F. W. Gearing; Sec.-Treas., S. McClung, jr.—Messrs. Thos. Page, James Walker and son, D. Porteous, and James Hay, son of D. D. Hay, M. P., have left for Oregon.

Dufferin Licenses.

The License Commissioners of Dufferin met on the 16th inst., and granted licenses to the following parties:—

AMARANTH.—John Morrison, John Longhead, James Bryan, Robert Bowsfield, Robert Hicks, F. A. Campbell, shop.

EAST GARAFRAXA.—John Forgraves, D. Hall, Alex. Burnet.

MONO.—Hugh Currie, James M. Smith, Robert Perfect, Thos. Henderson.

MULMUR. — Richard Cherry, W. H. Beatty, Samuel Wilcox, Wm. Cotton, Jno. Wilson.

ORANGEVILLE.—J. & H. Crozier, W. J. Middleton, Mrs. Elgie, John Witter, Jas. Duffy, Thomas Wilson, A. & R. Hagar.

It is perhaps, not generally known that work on the tunnel under the British Channel is quietly progressing. The experimental shaft at Sandgatte is already 330 feet below water mark, a pair of pumps throwing out water, which works in plentifully; while in the chalk bed under the channel a trial gallery has been opened perpendicular to the shaft. If no serious obstacles are encountered in this gallery up to a distance of 8,281 feet, the grand tunnel will be begun.

THE Conservatives have taken heart of grace now that Sir John will run again for Kingston.

THE House of Commons sat on Saturday, and was mainly engaged in discussing items in Committee of Supply.

MR. ROBT. SMITH, M. P., on Saturday again received the Reform nomination for the House of Commons from the County of Peel.

THE Spring Assizes for the County of Victoria opened at Lindsay on Tuesday, before Mr. Chief Justice Harrison. Mr. J. P. MacMillan of Guelph, acted as Crown Prosecutor.

IT is rumored that Hon. P. C. Hill, Provincial Secretary, will shortly be appointed Lieut.-Governor of Nova Scotia on the expiration of Lieut.-Governor Archibald's term.

MR. LAFLAMME'S Act for amending the Dominion Election Law provoked a long discussion in Committee on Friday. The main object of the measure is to abolish the ballot envelope system, which in the past has been seriously abused.

THE Grand Trunk report is published. The result of the half year's operations shows a net revenue of £256,000, against £177,000 for corresponding half of last year, with extra charges for repairs and renewals of the road and rolling stock of £66,000.

MR. T. M. DALY has tendered his resignation as the Conservative candidate for North Perth, and now that the irrepressible Thomas is out of the way, the Mitchell Advocate says either Mr. S. Hesson or Mr. R. Smith, whoever they are, will succeed him.

WE understand that Mr. Archibald Forbes, the famous war correspondent of the London Daily News, whose journalistic feats have several times been alluded to in the MERCURY, is about to visit Canada, and deliver a series of lectures in the principal towns and cities.

AND so the Conservatives of South Waterloo have, after all, brought out Mr. Merner, of New Hamburg, as their standard bearer, and at the meeting in Preston on the 18th, he accepted the nomination. What will Mr. Wm. Robinson, of Galt, say to this? He is one disappointed man at anyrate.

THE present Minister of Militia shows such an acquaintance with the affairs of his Department that even some of the Opposition are praising him. When the items for this Department were under discussion the other night, his ready answers to all questions, and his thorough knowledge of every detail was remarked by every one in the House.

RECIPROCATING the considerate attitude toward Canadian interests assumed by the Committee of the English House of Commons in charge of the Duke of Richmond's Cattle Diseases Bill a bill has been introduced in the Senate to provide for a thorough inspection of all cattle exported from Canada to England.

IT is stated that an arrangement with the St. Paul and Pacific Railway Company is now virtually made with the object of utilizing the Pembina Branch Railway, which was discussed lately in the House of Commons. This Company will push on the completion of the road over the present gap, and it is expected that by the 1st of November, or perhaps earlier, there will be all rail communication with Winnipeg from the head of Lake Superior.

THE dominant majority in the Senate seem determined to obstruct legislation, and thwart the doings of the people's representatives in the House of Commons It has for the past few weeks been dabbling in and discussing financial questions, with which it has nothing to do. It eliminated every valuable clause in Mr. Mills' north-west bill. Its last act has been to throw out the Ministerial bill abolishing the office of Receiver General, which was sanctioned by both parties in the House of Commons. The partizan spirit of the majority has been more apparent than ever this session, and the sooner some fresh Liberal blood is infused into it, or it is abolished altogether, so much the better for the country.

RAILWAY MATTERS.—The Arthur Enterprise says:—It is said that the people interested in the construction of the proposed Wellington and Georgian Bay Railway have become quite disheartened with the gloomy aspect of their affairs present at the present time. A continuation of the Arthur Junction Railway would be equally advantageous to the whole district likely to be benefitted—in the event of its completion—by the W. and G. B.—except Palmerston, which town would, of course, have to content itself with the railway facilities it now possesses, which are in no wise inferior to those enjoyed by any town north or west of Guelph. We have no doubt but the people of the municipalities lying between Mount Forest and the Georgian Bay would as soon have a branch tapping the Wellington, Grey and Bruce at Goldstone as at Palmerston. The Durham Chronicle, referring to the recent vote on the bonus by-law in behalf of the Stratford and Huron Railway in Bentinck, says: Although the result is regarded at present as the reverse to the Georgian Bay and Wellington Company there is a probability of it proving the very opposite. The Great Western Railway Company is not indifferent to the situation. For the purpose of giving the scheme practical shape by-laws will be submitted shortly in Durham, Glenelg, Egremont, Mount Forest, Palmerston, to be followed by sectional ones in Normanby, Bentinck, and one or two other townships.

A painful accident happened to a little son of Mr. John Newman's, of the 3rd concession, Garafraxa, recently. The little fellow and his father were standing by a seeder; the boy put his arm between the spokes of the wheel and into a lever, While in this position the machine was slightly moved, bringing the lever down upon his fingers. The first two fingers of the right hand were severed between the first and second joints, and the top was taken of the third finger.

The population of Manitoba is increasing at the rate of one thousand per week.

Paisley wants a High School, and public meetings have been held advocating the scheme.

CONCLUSION OF MYRA'S STORY—THE TWO PRISONERS COMFORT EACH OTHER.

"Where are you taking me?" I asked, as soon as I could command breath enough to speak.

"To a place where you will be well enough cared for," answered the man by my side, and the voice I recognized as that of McGarray.

"You mean me harm," I returned, "or you would not have brought me out of the house at such an hour and in this manner."

"We mean you no harm—none whatever," rejoined the lawyer. "So let that content you, and ask no more questions."

"Oh, it is cruel!" I exclaimed, "cowardly and cruel for a number of men to take such advantage of a poor, weak, defenceless girl, who has lost her protector. Had Conrad been alive you would not have dared to use me thus."

This cutting taunt elicited no response, and I sank into silence—a prey to apprehensions all the more terrible that I knew not what I had to fear. Soon by the jolting of the carriage and the loud rattling of its wheels I knew that we had left the park for hard and rough road. The rude shaking contined with more or less violence for nearly an hour, as well as I could guess, then all at once the carriage stopped, on which the man who sat opposite opened the window and putting out his head asked in a tone no way suppressed,

"Are we at the leading-place, Nip?"

"Yes," was the answer sent back from the driver's seat.

"Has Joe come?"

"No: but I see his boat approaching. He'll be here in less than two minutes."

I bent my ears intently to hear every word that was spoken, as any one in my situation would not fail to do. The voices of the last speakers were strange to me; I had not heard them before. It was not, therefore, Colonel M'Pherson or his son. I concluded it was the cousin named Allan and the man who in my hearing had been called Dixon, though why one of them had named the other Nip I could not understand. Afterwards I learned that I was wrong so far. It was indeed Dixon who was in the carriage, but the person driving was not Allan McPherson. These two monsters, Dixon and Nip, I had reason ere long to know better, and madly abhor.

[Had Harold been in the habit of speaking to Lizzie of his smuggling associates, the names of Dixon and Nip would have been familiar to her, and she would at this point have been able to give the stranger such information as to her would have been wildly exciting. But Harold had always carefully refrained from making his doings at the cave the subject of conversation at the cottage in Glenroy, hence the two names had for Lizzie no recognition, and the stranger's story proceeded without interruption.]

Knowing how useless it was to ask questions, I determined to keep silent, but to be ever watchful. For a few minutes we sat in the carriage, and in the stillness I heard the rippling of water and the measured stroke of oars, the latter growing each moment more distinct. By these things, and by the peculiar freshness and coldness of the atmosphere, I knew that we were very near the side of a large sheet of water.

"Here he is," called out Nip, after a short interval.

"Better get out then," said M'Garray, whereupon Dixon opened the door and leaped to the ground. I saw his tall, active figure now, and recognised it.

M'Garray lifted me from the seat, and Dixon received me in his arms. Looking up I saw Nip helping Mother Barnacle to alight from the box-seat. I started when I saw her, for I devined that wherever I was being taken she was still to be my attendant, and I had come most cordially to dislike her.

After my long confinement the freshness of the pure mountain air was very reviving, and I inhaled it with conscious gratification. I now looked around to see in what sort of a place we were. I need not describe the spot, for you know the landing-slip at the opposite side of the loch. To me it was strange then; so was the loch, with which I have had since full time to become familiar.

The expected boat came to the shore at the moment, and what was my disgust to see in its occupant the hideous form of the hunchback. I could observe him in the darkness favouring me with one of his most diabolical grins, and could not repress a shudder.

"Don't be afraid of Joe," said Dixon, whose hand being on my arm felt the tremor which shook me, and guessed the cause. "Don't be afraid of Joe," he repeated. "He looks worse than he is. Don't cross him and you'll be all right."

"The same advice which was given to me," interrupted Lizzie.

Ay; and I daresay it has not been lost upon either of us, though the time came when in my grief and madness I cared not how I taunted and reviled him. There was no fear in my nature then. Oh, God, my blood grows cold as I draw near that heart-touching portion of my story. I need not describe the voyage in the boat to the island; you experienced that, too. I was handed over to the charge of Joe and Mother Barnacle, the carriage with M'Garray, Dixon, and Nip returning back by the way we had come.

Once the boat was fairly out into the loch, Mother Barnacle's conduct towards me wholly changed. Instead of being taciturn and uncommunicative, she became frank and free in her communications; told me where I was being taken, and for what purpose. The marriage of Conrad M'Pherson to an actress was, it seems, so galling to the Highland pride of the Lord of Benachray and his family that they resolved to have the fact concealed from mortal knowledge. They did not doubt the truth of my statement. The proofs I had brought convinced them that I was really and truly Conrad's wife. Had it been safe to dispute it they would have done so and turned me out of doors as an impostor. But M'Garray told them my claim, if openly made could not be resisted, and it was at his suggestion that this other course was taken. I was to be kept in the old Castle of Benachray, which being an island in the loch, could be approached by no one, and Joe and Mother Barnacle had undertaken to be my keepers. My child when born was not be recognised as the heir, but a boy of Roderick's, a child upwards of a year old. Every care had been taken to keep my arrival at the mansion a profound secret from the servants, and with the exception of those I have mentioned, and who could be implicitly trusted, not a human being knew that ever I had been there.

Mother Barnacle added that she told me all these things now because I was safely and securely disposed of, and it could do no harm to give me the information. "It's a proof to you," she brutally added, "that you are imprisoned here beyond the chance of ever being heard of," and her hunchback of a husband chuckled fiendishly as she said it. My heart turned cold with despair, but I disdained to utter a moan or complaint.

Let me pass over the first weeks of my isolation here. At the end of a month my child was born. I had no assistance but that of Mother Barnacle; but to do her justice, I needed no other. If she wants tenderness, if she is void of sympathy, she is at least capable of doing thoroughly the work of a nurse, and she performed the task in my instance with a readiness which left me without complaint.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Affairs all Unsettled Again.

THE NEW TURKISH MINISTRY FAVOURS RUSSIA.

Germany's Friendly Mediation Suspected.

LONDON, April 20.

A Times' Vienna correspondent considers the change of Ministry in Turkey a new element of danger, as Vefyk's presence in the Cabinet was a guarantee that nothing would be attempted against England. His sudden removal looks as though the Russians had endeavored to steal a march on England while negotiations for a settlement were pending.

The London Economist says:—This week closes with the prospects of the Eastern difficulty no brighter.

The Central News says the Indian Government has chartered five steamers for the conveyance of troops from India.

The United Service Gazette to-day says there will be a strong combined Channel and Baltic fleet formed during the next two months.

The Herald's London special says the nomination of Sadyk Pasha as Grand Vizier has caused the utmost consternation in the British Foreign Office. He, like Osman and Raouf Pashas, favors a Russo-Turkish Alliance. This surprise convinces Downing-street, however, that Andrassy, under pressure exercised by Bismarck, has finally accepted Ignatieff's propositions, and now probably feels annoyed at England's imperious rejection of his pet free-zone scheme. Stated briefly, the changes in the situation may be summed up in these words:—A new lease of life for the Alliance of the three Emperors and definitive isolation of England.

A Bombay despatch says:—The first brigade will embark for Malta on the 29th inst.

The Standard states that the reason Admiral Hornby's fleet was recently ordered to resume sending out guard boats was that it was feared two Russian torpedo boats were lurking in the Sea of Marmora.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs:—The principle of the simultaneous withdrawal of the Russians and English from the immediate neighborhood of Constantinople was accepted in London and St. Petersburg, but as soon as its application came to be discussed, serious difficulties arose. Each party was afraid of losing by the transaction. The Russians think that if the British fleet retires to Besika Bay, they ought to withdraw only a day's march. The English maintain that they ought to withdraw to Adrianople, which is 24 hours' railway journey from Constantinople. Another disturbing element is a fear that the Porte may take advantage in the absence of foreign forces to increase the land fortifications or close the Dardanelles, according as British or Russian influence is predominant.

A Calcutta despatch says: All the energies of the Government are concentrated on the war preparations. Native regiments have been ordered to recruit to the full war strength immediately. Factories for the manufacture of arms are working day and night. The Sepoys responded cheerfully to the summons for foreign service, and a number of regiments spontaneously volunteered. In Great Britain the men belonging to the army reserves joined their colors in a very satisfactory manner. The number of absentees averages less than five per cent.

A Vienna despatch says: The Ministerial crisis is viewed with misgivings, as capable of introducing a disturbing element into the negotiations. Whatever may be the course of the crisis, and whatever may have been so suddenly determined, its final issue, the removal of Ahmed Vefyk Effendi, is sufficient to indicate the character of the change. It would nevertheless perhaps be premature to say that Russian influence has now become paramount in the Cabinet.

A Brindisi despatch says: Baker Pasha has started for Constantinople.

The Paris Journal des Debats believes that the proposal for a simultaneous withdrawal of the Russian and English from the neighborhood of Constantinople is merely a Russian attempt to isolate England, who will probably reject the proposal.

A Herald's correspondent at St. Petersburg telegraphs that notwithstanding discouraging reports the situation is really improving, and the chances of a peaceful solution are growing decidedly stronger.

A Berlin special says it is believed there that Russia will yield on the question of withdrawing her troops to Adrianople, if the British fleet retires to Besika Bay.

THE LISTOWEL STATION GROUND.—The arbitration difficulty between the Stratford & Lake Huron Railway and Messrs. J. & J. Livingstone, about ground on which the station buildings stand, has been settled, the arbitrators, Messrs. D. Cleland, D. T. Bailey and Judge Lizars having come to a decision on Wednesday. The Messrs. Livingstone receive $795 for the ground, 2¼ acres, just what the Railway Company offered in the first instance. As they have to pay heavy costs, the arbitration has been a losing speculation for Messrs. Livingstone.

At the Toronto Public School Board a discussion took place on the desirability of establishing an Industrial School in that city, and a motion to that effect was carried. The object is to take children from the streets, and train them to habits of usefulness.

Wreck of the "Sphinx"—Loss of 500 Lives.

Lloyd's agent at Larnica, Cyprus, in a letter dated March 19, furnishes full particulars of the burning of the Australian Lloyd's steamer Sphinx, near Cape Elia in the early part of last month, by which 500 Circassian refugees lost their lives. It appears that the Sphinx was on her way from Tattachia from Cavalia with about 3,000 Circassians on board. On the 5th of March, at 7:10 a.m., the Sphinx was doubling the Klito Rock, of Cape St. Andrea, with a strong wind from the south-east, with the intention of going to Famagosta to wait for better weather and take in provisions for the emigrants. At 4 p.m. there was a strong gale from the north-east, which shifted to the west, then to the north, returning at last to the south-east. At that time the ship would no longer obey the rudder, and a heavy sea striking the vessel washed forty-six refugees from the forecastle; she could not put back to Alexandretta, as the hatches were open and there was fears lest the sea would fill the hold, which the Circassians would not allow to be closed for fear of being suffocated. Towards sunset, she made out Cape Gregs, and was about six miles from the south of Famagosta. At 6:45 smoke was seen coming out of the fore hatch, and the vessel was shipping heavy seas. A little later she grounded on a sand bank; one heavy sea drove her on the coast, and she sprang aleak. Meanwhile the fire increased, and the confusion and cries of the Circassians are said to have been fearful. Seeing that the fire could not be put down, the hatches were closed, with the consent of the Circassians, and upwards of 300 lives were sacrificed to save the rest. During the night attempts were made to extinguish the fire, but without success. On the 6th the surviving emigrants were landed. The captain and crew fled from the wreck, as the Circassians threatened to murder them.

A VOICE OF WARNING.—An old friend of the Stratford Beacon, writing from Kansas, sends the following warning to Canadians who may be disposed to seek homes in the southwest:—"I have been two years in the State, and have seen the most of it, and my advice to young men is to stay in Canada, if they know what is good for them. We have more hands here than there is work for, times are dull, money is scarce, and as for society—well, the less said about that the better. It is no doubt a great attraction to Canadians who have had to clear their farms to be offered prairie lands with nothing to do but plant crops, but by the time they have bought lumber for out-buildings, and suffered the numerous inconveniences of the country—including violent fever and ague, which is as common as colds—they will wish themselves back in Canada again."

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. The great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D. Bible House, New York City. Sept. 18, deodwly

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 22.

The House went into Supply, taking up first the item of $52,500 for salaries and disbursements of fishery overseers and wardens, which elicited a lengthy and general discussion on the subject of the fisheries, fish-breeding, and so forth.

On the item of $10,000 for inspection of insurance companies, Mr. Cartwright, in reply to Dr. Tupper, said the question of Governmental life assurance had received much consideration, but legislation thereon was not deemed expedient this session, partly owing to the depressed state of business.

In reply to Dr. Tupper, who asked for an account of the exploratory work, Mr. Mills said among other things that 18,000 square miles in British Columbia had been explored and about 700 of the eastern coast of Hudson's Bay, while a good deal of information about our mines also was furnished.

Those under the head of Indians were then considered, a short debate taking place with regard to the Oka Indian difficulty.

"Well, I swan, Billy," said an old farmer to an undersized nephew, who was visiting him, "when you take off that 'ere plug hat and spit two or three times there aint much left of you, is th' ?"

A very little boy had one day done wrong, and he was sent, after paternal correction, to ask in secret the forgiveness of his Heavenly Father. His offence was passion. Anxious to hear what he would say, his mother followed to the door of his room. In lisping accents she heard him ask to be made better, and then, with childlike simplicity, he added; "Lord, make ma's temper better too."

PERMANENT SHOW.—The Galt Reporter says that the towns of Berlin and Waterloo are agitating the making of the annual Exhibition of the North Riding Show a permanent thing in one place, and for that purpose it is said to be likely that a lot will be secured at Greenbush, about half way between the two towns.

Mr. Robert Oliver, of West Garafraxa, has just received word from his attorney that three fortunes have been left him in Ireland.

ELORA.—The following have been appointed officers of the Elora Lacrosse Club:—President, W. R. Mundell; Sec'y-Treasurer, Duncan Kay. Committee—Messrs. Lamb, Hamilton, Turner, Clode; Captain, E. C. Perry.——John Bain has been elected Councillor in place of F. Dalby, who had resigned.——James Cattanach was severely injured the other day by being struck with a stone that was cast from the scaffolding around Donald Black's house, in course of erection.

Mr. James Forsyth's barn and contents, near Petherton in Arthur, were burned recently. Loss $800.

A correspondent at Maganetawan (Muskoka) writes to the Free Grant Gazette:—"Real estate is looking up in this village. About a month ago a lot was bought for $50; it has been subdivided and one half since sold for $200."

Lingham & Son, cattle dealers, Belleville, have received an order by cable on Monday from a British army contractor for 1,500 cattle and a large quantity of sheep.

DR. GILES: Since the introduction of your LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA to the public, being one of the earliest to take hold, I have been amazed with the success that has attended it. All the other remedies of similar nature the sale seemed to have dropped, and your Iodide has taken their place. It is unquestionably the remedy of the day. People speak so highly of it, and to my astonishment the quart bottles sell so rapidly. Families buy them, and all the horsemen in this section are enthusiastic in its favor.

By the exercise of the most judicious management, the Grand Central Hotel, New York, has very cleverly turned the tide of trade in its direction, not less by the sweeping reduction of its rates than through its excellent management. eod

STILL THEY COME.—We notice the railway companies delivering large quantities of new goods at the Lion this morning. These we are told are some of the bargains secured by Mr. Williamson at the trade sales in Montreal a few days ago—when goods were said to have been sold lower than ever. Special attractions in dress goods.

THE Guelph St. George's Society dine in a body at the City Hotel this evening. There is likely to be a large turn out, and there is no doubt about every person in attendance thoroughly enjoying themselves among ye sons of merrie England.

GUELPH has completed its fifty-first year to-day. A year ago a grand jubilee was in progress in town, and many old settlers were together making merry over what happened in the long ago. Several of them since that time have been gathered to their fathers.

OLD PAPERS.—Mr. Wm. Horning has handed us a couple of old Guelph papers of the years 1846 and 1851, one the Guelph and Galt Advertiser, and the other the Guelph Herald. In the advertising columns may be seen many of the names of the old business men of Guelph, a number of whom have since gone to their long home.

GAME AND FISH LAW.—Mr. R. Oliver, Solicitor for the Wellington Game and Fish Protection Association prosecuted at the Police Court to-day (Tuesday) James Pearson, of Puslinch, for catching speckled trout out of season. Result, a contribution to town funds of $8.20. This Association intend to vigorously enforce the Game and Fish Laws.—So take notice.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—A barn, owned by Daniel Cummins, and leased by Gordon Brothers, on lot 2, 10th concession, Puslinch, was struck by lightning on Monday and burned to the ground. Nothing was saved as the barn contained considerable straw and was all in a blaze in a moment. Loss about $300; no insurance.

THE Musical Union purpose giving a promenade concert in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, 14th May. The stage will be arranged at the side of the new hall, in order that both halls can be brought into use. The programme will embrace a varied class of music. At the meeting this evening the members of the Union are requested to bring all their music with them.

FARNHAM CHURCH.—The Easter Vestry meeting at Farnham Church, Puslinch, took place on the 23rd inst., at 11 a.m., Canon Dixon in the chair. From the accounts submitted it appeared that the income amounted to $176.39, while the expenditure was $150.42. Canon Dixon appointed Mr. Wm. Herbert as churchwarden, and on motion of Mr. John Ibs, seconded by Mr. Herbert, Mr. William T. Hawes was appointed as the other warden.

LIGHTNING.—The flashes of electricity playing around town during the storm on Monday were quite too near to be altogether pleasant. A young man in the vicinity of the quarries on the Waterloo Avenue, claims to have been benumbed, and remained so for a short time. A house occupied by Wm. Keys, on Suffolk street, it is said, received a small charge electric, but was not materially damaged. A portion of the fence which surrounded the building was shattered. In the vicinity of the Grand Trunk freight station the lightning was alarmingly near. A fence was struck in the vicinity, but no further damage was done.

FIRE AT HARRISTON.—A fire broke out in the cabinet factory of Silas Welte, about twelve o'clock, on the night of the 19th inst. The fire alarm was at once sounded, and in less than fifteen minutes the fire engine was on the ground, together with a large number of citizens. The building being of wood the flames had spread with such rapidity as to place it beyond redemption. The residence of I. B. Taylor, next the factory, was soon enveloped in flames, and Mr. Welte's furniture store and the Odd Fellow's block stood in imminent danger. Through the strenuous efforts of the fire company they were saved. Mr. Taylor had no insurance, and Mr. Welte only $1,400, which makes his loss heavy. This is the first real practical test of the fire engine, and its success surpassed the most sanguine anticipations.

A HOOK and Ladder Company in connection with the Fire Brigade was formed last evening.

G. C. L. & D. S. meets to-morrow evening.

AT the School Board last evening, Mr. Principal Tytler reported that he was unable to observe a resolution passed at a former meeting, regulating the time allowed for recess. For the children to leave their class-rooms orderly for the school grounds, remain outside about five minutes, and to return again some twenty-five minutes of time is occupied.

TEA-MEETING THIS EVENING.—A tea-meeting will be held in the Primitive Methodist Church this evening, at which a good programme has been provided, and for which a large number of tickets have been disposed of. Tea will be served from seven to eight, after which the company will adjourn to the church for the musical part of the entertainment. The Harris boys, and others, will assist.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—The Board met on Monday evening. Present — Judge Macdonald in the chair; Messrs. Wilkie, Bell, Robertson, Murton, Inglis, Newton, Mackenzie and Dr. Keating. Mr. Newton, chairman, reported, recommending the payment of the following accounts:—Mail, $2; MERCURY, $51.90: Herald, $16.90; J. Anderson, $8.80; Geo. Murton, $24.10; T. W. Cooper, $6.25. Adopted on motion of Messrs. Murton and Mackenzie. Mr. Murton, chairman of Sites and Buildings Committee, reported that satisfactory progress was being made with the new East Ward school. Dr. Keating gave notice that at next meeting of the Board, he would move to take into consideration the question of charging fees for pupils attending the High School. Mr. Murton gave notice that he would at next meeting move to have the resolution regarding recess, passed at a previous meeting rescinded.

FOUND BY THE WAY SIDE.—At an early hour on Tuesday morning of last week as a farmer was proceeding across the gore between the townline of Nassagaweya and Puslinch he was somewhat startled at seeing a span of horses attached to a waggon standing among some pine stumps on the side of the road, but on coming still closer he perceived a peaceful sleeper (whose name we will not mention, as very little disturbs his feelings on such occasions) quietly taking the comforts of a sleep, having evidently rested the most part of the night. The good Samaritan, thinking that he needed something better than a featherless nest to repose upon, immediately awoke him, and, on enquiring what was the matter, was informed that he was waiting for some one. It is needless to say that this person not making his appearance, he got up and departed for home.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH VESTRY.—The annual meeting of the vestry on Monday was well attended, among those present being Rev. Canon Dixon, chairman, George Elliott, F. Biscoe, F. J. Chadwick, J. M. Bond, George Murton, sen., John A. Wood, G. T. Marsh, J. A. Baker, T. Sayers, J. Davie, T. A. Keating, E. Harland, J. W. Hall, John Horsman, A. Lemon, S. S. Walsh, E. Morris, and C. Acton Burrows. Mr. Elliott read the church wardens' report, which was referred to the auditors. Mr. George Murton, sen., reported as Secretary-Treasurer of the cemetery. The report drew attention to carriages not being allowed to enter the grounds and recommended that a committee be appointed to meet the Union Cemetery Committee, with a view to arrange so that the hearse and the carriages containing the immediate mourners may be driven to the grave. The report was referred to the auditors. On motion of F. J. Chadwick and A. Lemon, John A. Wood and James Davie were appointed auditors. Rev. Canon Dixon nominated George Elliott as his warden. Mr. Elliott declined, owing to the length of time he had served, but promised to assist his successor in every way possible. The Canon subsequently nominated E. Morris. On motion of John A. Wood and A. Lemon, George Murton, sen., was elected people's warden and was afterwards re-appointed Sec.-Treas. of the cemetery. A. Baker, J. A. Wood, H. Murton, C. F. Leonard, F. Evatt, J. M. Bond, S. S. Walsh, J. Davie, E. Harrison, John Horsman, F. Biscoe and C. Acton Burrows were elected sidesmen. C. Acton Burrows was appointed vestry clerk on motion of John A. Wood and A. A. Baker. The meeting then adjourned until May 6, at 3 o'clock, p.m. At a subsequent meeting of the duly qualified electors, E. Morris in the chair, on motion of George Elliott and J. C. Chadwick, F. Biscoe was re-appointed one of the delegates to the Synod, and after a vote of thanks to the delegates for their services, the meeting adjourned.

BOY BURGLARS.—Two lads, named W. Fletcher and Geo. Morley, on Friday night attempted to rob the house of Thos. Whalen, four miles east of Chatham, near the G.W.R. track. One had a shot gun and the other a revolver, with which they threatened to shoot Whalen if he did not walk out of the house. Whalen snatched the shot gun from one of them, and broke it over his head. A fight ensued. Whalen was assisted by the neighbors, and the burglars ran off. Whalen rode into town and informed the police, who arrested the robbers on their arrival in town. Fletcher was sentenced to twenty months in the Central Prison.

The Prize List Committee of the Western Fair Association have received from Mr. Lionel E. Shipley a gold medal as a prize for the best fat cow at the next fair, and also a gold medal from Messrs. Joseph Johnston and H. Anderson, conjointly, for the best two-year-old Durham bull.

Mr. Baker, Solicitor-General of Quebec under the DeBoucherville regime, positively denies the correctness of the statements made by Mr. Goff in the letter published in the Montreal Gazette, and has taken criminal proceedings against both Mr. Goff and the Managing Director of the Montreal Herald for having made the letter public. Mr. Goff will reply to Mr. Baker's denial, when he promises some startling documentary evidence.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Affairs Still Unchanged.

Preparations for War Still Going on.

APRIL 22.

The prevailing feeling in the English press is one of great uneasiness. All the Berlin specials to the English papers are couched in a very despondent tone.

English papers abound in significant items concerning preparations. Thus it is understood five batteries of Royal Artillery at Woolwich have been selected to proceed to Malta. A gunboat flotilla is to be prepared immediately for the defence of the British coast. Officers of pension districts are ordered on Saturday to transmit to the Admiralty forthwith the addresses of all retired naval officers and stokers, presumably in view of a possible call for volunteers. All men belonging to the first army corps undergoing punishment for disciplinary offences have been sent to their regiments.

The Agence Russe confirms the report that the proposition for the simultaneous withdrawal of the British fleet and Russian forces from the vicinity of Constantinople has been accepted in principle, and adds:—Negotiations continue relative to the withdrawal, and to a preliminary Conference to settle the programme of the Congress.

A Rustchuk correspondent telegraphs that the Grand Duke Nicholas has summoned the Turks to evacuate Shumla within eight days.

A Berlin correspondent says no importance is attached there to the present negotiations as long as England and Russia continue warlike preparations.

The Board of Examiners and the County Council.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—Having perused the defence by the Board of Examiners for this County, which appeared in the weekly issues of the Guelph papers of the 5th inst., and also the reply thereto by Mr. Rea, the Warden, together with the detailed statement of the Board, published by him in your issues of the 10th and 11th instants, I beg to be allowed to point out a few things in the Warden's letter, which, in my opinion, are inconsistent, and do not do the Board that justice, which, towards the conclusion of his letter, he vouches will be dealt out to them.

In the first paragraph of the Warden's reply, he says he was surprised to find that though the days included between the 4th of July and the 2nd of August were only 25, yet 42 days were charged by some members. The impression, which is here sought to be made, is that the remaining 17 days were made up wholly by extra time. This is surely unfair, as the Warden well knew that part, at least, of this time was put in before the 9th of July, some of it even in the previous year of 1876, whilst a portion of the remainder he not only sanctioned but advised, as shown by the defence and the detailed statement made by the Board. It is well known that Boards throughout the country are in the habit of charging extra time when forced to extend the ordinary educational hours, in order to complete the work to be done within the required time. The question, therefore, which ought here to be settled, is whether the County Council expected the Board to work ten or twelve hours, when the daily allowance was increased. If so the Board ought to have been informed, as to the views of the Council with regard to the matter. And then it may be asked, what does an increase of wages mean, if the hours of labor have to be increased in the same ratio. It is evident that the objection with regard to extra time is not a sound one, as it cannot matter in the least when time is put in, if only the full time is faithfully devoted to the service of the County.

In the Warden's censuring the Board for the custom of presenting their annual bill to the Treasurer instead of to the Council, it is difficult to see whether he is assailing the Board's shortcomings or confessing his own. He says he has been in the Council for many years, but never saw one of those bills before. Why did he not? Is the Warden not ashamed to acknowledge so much? Is it possible that so much of the people's money has been paid out year after year without the people's servants, especially this one, the Warden, knowing all about it? It is too bad that a custom sanctioned so long, and from the existence of which nothing materially to the discredit of the Board has resulted, should at last be made, by those who sanctioned it, the plea for the dismissal of its members from office.

The Warden says that the Board exceeded the powers conferred upon them by statute, when they undertook to purchase the chairs, desks, &c., this being a privilege belonging only to the Council. Surely the Warden does not expect to be able to hold up this little irregularity to the public gaze without sharing somewhat in the responsibilities of the whole transaction. Mr. Rea should have given the hint to his accomplices, and the probability is that all this would have been avoided.

The Warden, I think, very unfairly asks the Board why, when they struck the rate per candidate for 1877, they did not include the second bill of $108? The reason and the justice of not including it must be quite patent to all persons knowing anything of how examinations have been conducted. What created the second liability was the examination of candidates who attended the Model School, one set of whom were examined in September, and the other, together with that of second-class candidates in December, which was so much extra work over other years. Any person looking at the dates of the two bills would, at once, concede the propriety of the action of the Board.

What does the Warden mean by inviting the teachers to discuss the question of examinations? Does he by this invite them to discuss the question at issue between the County Council and the Board, and also all the other questions growing out of that one? If the former only, I cannot see what light teachers can possibly put upon the subject to enable the Council to give a more righteous verdict in the matter than they otherwise would. But, if the invitation embraces taking part in the discussion of questions growing out of the main one, such as the appointment of Inspectors in the event of the present ones resigning or being dismissed, a question receiving already considerable attention from some teachers in the County, I would most emphatically condemn the invitation as unwise for the following reasons:—1st. Because it is impossible that the teachers could have opportunities to enable them to judge as to who is best qualified for the position of Inspector. I venture to say that it will be impossible to get a considerable number of teachers sufficiently acquainted with any one person eligible to the position of Inspector to advise the Council by petition or otherwise in the matter. Should a petition, largely signed by the teachers, be sent in praying the Council to appoint any particular man to the position, as much as 80 per cent. of them at least must follow the dictum of somebody else instead of that of an enlightened independent conscience. 2nd. Because it must, in no small degree, diminish the independence of an Inspector in the performance of his duties, when he knows that he owes the position to the teachers over whose schools he is placed in charge.

Looking at the Warden's position throughout, apart from what appears to me to be the unfairness of his reply, he has evidently wholly mistaken his true connection with the matter, that connection being, to a large extent, judicial, he has most certainly fallen into the error of prejudging the case, which he is likely yet to have something to do in deciding, thus sinking the judicial function in the animus of the partizan.

Yours, &c.,
TEACHER.

PLUMB has decided to bring an action against the London Advertiser and the Halifax Chronicle for stating in their Ottawa despatches that he was drunk on the memorable Friday night and Saturday morning.

SAYS the Ottawa correspondent of the Hamilton Times:—"It is exceedingly amusing to read in the various Tory dailies the apologies for the behavior of the Opposition during the famous scenes of a week ago this morning. The fact is that during that entire livelong night after eleven o'clock, not one of the editorial correspondents of the Gazette, Mail, Leader, or Citizen were present. Consequently they personally know nothing of that which they so solemnly write about in their 'white-washing' articles."

TUESDAY EVEN G, APRIL 23, 1878

The "Herald" and the Robinson Contract for Ties.

On the 20th of last month the Guelph Herald indulged in some of its characteristically mean insinuations respecting Mr. Thos. Robinson, the present Reform nominee for the Centre Riding, and a supposed connection that he had with his brother, Mr. W. Robinson, now in Manitoba, who some days before that date had been awarded a contract for supplying 165,000 ties, at 45 cents each, on the Pacific Railway. In commenting on this simple business transaction the Herald sought, in the following stupid way, to connect it with Mr. Robinson's candidature in the Centre Riding:—"This is a brother of the budding Grit politician of Centre Wellington. Has this nice contract on the Pembina branch, from the Government, anything to do with Grit principles being so dear and near to the gentleman? That his dear and near brother is likely to make money out of a Government contract surely would not be the reason why his great love for the Government has so increased since 1876. Or was it the same Messrs. Robinson who so often in public stated that they had always been good Reformers, but if the Government did not treat them better than they had in reference to the contract in section 15, they would never give another Grit vote? But are not the loaves and fishes the principles which are ever nearest and dearest to all true Grits, and why should not Mr. Robinson, or his brother, taste the sweet result of an adherence to those liberal principles?"

In his speech at Fergus, accepting the nomination, Mr. Robinson satisfactorily replied to this foul insinuation, and informed the meeting that he knew nothing about the contract till after it was awarded. But we are now furnished with a full history of the whole transaction, for Mr. Nixon, before the Public Accounts Committee on Thursday last, was examined with reference to this contract, and his evidence shows in the clearest light that Mr. Robinson obtained the contract in the most honest, straightforward manner, because it was given in according to tender, was on the whole the lowest, the other tendering below him having refused to accept. Here is the evidence:—

The witness was examined by Hon. Mr. Langevin at some length regarding the tenders received for ties. He advertised in accordance with a telegram received, the advertisement appearing in the Winnipeg Free Press, Standard, and Metis; twenty-eight tenders were received; the tenders from the lowest were in the following order:—A. F. Martin, for the whole at 25c.; C. Nolin, for 10,000 at 25c.; A. Nolin, for 10,000 at Rat River at 25c.; T. N. Quigley, for the whole at 27c.; W. C. Lewis, for 60,000 at 30c.; A. Bissonnette, for 60,000 at 33c.; McKinnon & McDiarmid, for 75,000 at 35c.; A. McNab, for 60,000 at Rat River and 30,000 at Rousseau River at 35c.; J. Nesbit, for 10,000 at Rat River at 39c.; J. Pilon & Co., for 5,000 at Rat River at 40c.; the next, that of W. Robinson, for the whole at 44c., was accepted; the contract was awarded to A. F. Martin, but as he had received an appointment from the Department of the Interior he declined; the contract was next awarded to the Nolins for 10,000 each if they could give security, and the balance to Quigley; if the Nolins could not give security the whole contract was to be given to Quigley, who gave security; the Nolins failed to give security; Quigley refused to accept except on the basis of monthly payments for ties delivered on the banks of the river; Quigley was informed that this could not be done, and declined to accept the contract; W. C. Lewis, Bissonnette & Co., McKinnon & McDiarmid, and A. McNab were offered the contract, all of whom refused; no other was made to Nesbit or J. Pilon & Co., who tendered for 15,000, as Robinson refused to accept if any portion were given in this way; I offered it to Robinson, less the 15,000, but he declined to accept; the party receiving the contract was to make a deposit of five per cent., and to give two solvent securities; the whole amount of Robinson's contract was $72,600, on which he made a deposit of five per cent.; the difference between the lowest tender and that accepted was a little over $31,000; the contract is being executed at present; this is the first contract for ties from my office; there have been ties there before; Mr. Whitehead, the contractor, has procured ties, and there is a tender from him at 60 cents.

To Mr. Macdougall (Elgin)—I gave the contract to the lowest person tendering who was willing to accept; the others refused.

To Mr. Norris—The highest tender was 75c.; the tender of Mr. Whitehead, who ought to have had the most judgment, was 60c.

To Mr. Wood—If Mr. Robinson had refused I would have had to give the contract to the next highest.

To Mr. Macdougall—No member of the Government interfered with me in any way in making these contracts.

To Mr. Archibald—The acceptance of the next tender above that of Robinson would have involved four cents more; it is my invariable practice to accept the lowest tender if the quality of goods suit.

Cost of Protection.

The following is an extract from a petition lately presented to Congress by a number of leading merchants, manufacturers, and capitalists, of New York. The concluding part of the petition says:—

"We ask you to remember that the mere Custom's duties are only a portion of what the American consumer must pay for the privilege of Protection. The cost of all home productions is increased, and with the average of duties at 40 per cent., it is moderate reckoning to calculate that the American people have had to pay during the last twelve years, 20 per cent. per annum more for the domestic goods they have consumed than they would have had to pay under the tariff of 1857.

"Putting the annual value of the home manufacturers at no more than 600 million dollars—the tax for Protection over 1857, and apart from the Custom's duties must be set down at no less than 120 million dollars a year—that is to say, the American people in the last twelve years have paid the enormous sum of 1,440 million dollars to foster industries which are now in a more distressed condition than ever. Not one penny of this has passed into the United States Treasury."

After reading the above we think that any one who favors protection to native industries will pause, and seriously reflect on the results of protection as portrayed in the above extract by men who are thoroughly acquainted with its workings, and who are therefore able to speak with authority.

It is rumoured that the Opposition have resolved to keep Parliament sitting until the Quebec elections are over. If Mr. Letellier is sustained at the polls, then the matter will be dropped; if he, or rather his Ministers, be beaten, then steps will be taken to impeach him and censure the Government here.

Messrs. Nixon and Scott left on Saturday night for Winnipeg. Their travelling expenses, board bills, and cost of reporting their evidence and other expenses, will let the country in for about $1,000, and yet Mr. Plumb has nothing to show for it when he reports to the House.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

CONCLUSION OF MYRA'S STORY—THE TWO PRISONERS COMFORT EACH OTHER.

My child was a girl. Oh, heaven, give me patience, give me strength, to tell the rest.

"Alas, lady, I guess it," said Lizzie, in a tone which faltered with sympathy "From what you have already said I understand your child was——"

Hush! I will make my nerves stiff as steel, and tell you. I will not, dare not speak of the mother's happiness I enjoyed in the possession of my precious darling, my wee blooming rose-bud. It was a happiness which seemed to take away all hardship from my imprisonment. I felt then as if I could bear any wrongs with indifference. Now the black hour of horror and agony approaches. One morning when my child was two months old I was lying sound asleep, but was awaked by feeling the infant taken stealthily from my arm. I opened my eyes in time to see Dixon vanish from the room carrying it with him. I uttered a piercing shriek, sprang to my feet, and, with nothing but my night-dress, flew after him.

He tried to close and lock the door, but I was too quick for that. He therefore ran off at great speed, and I followed with bare feet, shrieking till the passages rang with my cries. Though he put forth a man's swiftness and strength, I, winged by a mother's love and agony, kept close on his track. With a frantic energy, of the force of which I was not conscious, I flew on in pursuit of the robber, calling upon him to give me back my child. He heeded not my wild passionate entreaty, but rushed on—down stairs and along passages—till he gained the open air, I still close behind him, though too far off to grasp him, as I panted to do. Once outside he was able to increase his speed, and he made direct for the loch to a shelving beach, where I could see a boat in waiting with Joe and another man beside him.

Though incited by the strongest feelings that can animate a human being, my strength began to fail and my efforts to flag. With a beating heart I saw the distance between us increase. Still I kept on—shrieking and imploring more wildly than before—on, on, heedless of the sharp stones that were lacerating my feet. In vain, alas! in vain were all my efforts, all my prayers. He gained the beech and sprang into the boat, while I was yet fifty yards behind. The moment he was seated in the stern he waved his hand vehemently to Joe to push off. This was done, and my agonised eyes beheld the boat recede from the land.

Mad now, I was rushing on with the intention of plundging into the water, and would certainly have done so had not my foot struck upon a stone. I fell to the ground, and ere I could rise I was caught in the strong arms of Mother Barnacle. Powerful as she is it took her utmost strength to hold me. Keeping my streaming eyes fixed on the departing boat, and loch, I writhed and struggled to be free. In my frenzy I tore her hair, I dug my nails into her cheeks. I would have strangled her in my fury, but in a moment a mist came over my eyes, then blindness, then conscious forsook me, and I knew no more till I woke up in bed, after a period of utter oblivion.

At first sight I thought I had had a frightful hideous dream, and spasmodically sought to clasp my child to my bosom. No child was there. I knew then it was no dream, but a dreaded reality, and my frantic shrieks again rang through the air. My woe, my agony I cannot describe, enough to say that I never saw my child again. For a time I know I was insane, and God help me, I think it is fits of partial insanity that come upon me still when I have the dark days I told you of. Is it any wonder? Is it not the wonder rather that any reason has been left me?"

"And did you never, never know what became of the child?" gasped Lizzie, pale as death, and trembling with something more than compassion for Myra—with terror and apprehension lest her child too, should be taken away.

"No never," moaned the worse than bereft mother. "Joe and Mother Barnacle assured me that no harm was to befall her; but how can I believe them? Where my darling is now, or whether she is dead or alive, I know not; I know not, and, much I fear, I shall never know."

"They will do the same with mine," wailed Lizzie, with vehemence. "They have threatened it more than once. Oh, God!" she added, clasping her hands and looking up with an agony of supplication, "protect my boy!"

"God," cried Myra, with a fierce emphasis and flashing eyes. "There is no God, or if there is, He is in league with cruelty and wickedness. Priests and ministers tell us He is Almighty and full of goodness. False, false; if it were so, would He have allowed you and I to become the victims of such fiends? If He were so, with one stroke of His resistless arm He would smite them to the dust, restore us to freedom, and give me back my child. The Being they represent Him to be would never have permitted such atrocities—never—never."

"Hush, lady—oh, hush. cried the horrified Lizzie. "If we lose our faith in God we lose all. I was tempted to do so this very day, not one hour before I met you, but the words of one of the psalms came into my mind and gave me comfort. Shall I repeat them to you?"

"To what end?" exclaimed Myra, with a gesture of furious defiance. "Did he who wrote it suffer such evils as I have suffered?"

"Yes," returned Lizzie. "David, the King of Israel, endured more at the hands of wicked men than we have done. Yet he celebrated the mercy and faithfulness of God in songs of praise. Oh, be persuaded to resist the temptation with which the devil is assailing you, and do not abandon your faith."

"Faith!" echoed Myra, with a very shriek of passionate scorn. "What cause have I to cherish faith, when Heaven has stood by and seen my foulest wrongs without an act of hindrance. All that seems fitting for me now is unbelief and death."

"No, no," said Lizzie, with a shudder.

"Let me counsel you to patience, and your wrongs may yet find redress."

For answer, Myra sprang to her feet, and, with a look and attitude of tragic wildness thus burst forth—

"No; I defy all counsell, all redress,
But that which ends all counsel, true redress.
Death, Death—oh! amiable, lovely death.
Thou odoriferous stench! sound rottenness!
Arise forth from the couch of lasting night.
Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
And I will kiss thy detestable bones,
And put my eyeballs in the vaulty brows,
And ring these fingers with the household worn,
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a carrion monster like thyself.
Come, grin on me, and I will think thou smil'st,
And bless thee as thy wife! Misery's love,
Oh! come to me."

It was her professional acquaintance with the stage which supplied her with these words, but in her mouth at that time they were no ranted quotation. They formed the true expression of her enraged soul—she felt and meant every syllable of them.

Their power and the terrible realistic utterance of the words appalled Lizzie for a moment, but only for a moment; their next influence was counteractive, and such as to raise her to yet nobler earnestness, in the fulness and grandeur of which she again pleaded to be allowed to repeat the psalm.

Myra sat down and laid her head upon her knees.

THE CHEAPEST GOODS

that can be bought anywhere.

We have to announce to our numerous friends—wholesale and retail—that

Our Spring Stock is now Complete in every Department

and that by the purchases we have made in the British and American Markets, we shall be able to offer greater inducements in CHEAP GOODS than have ever yet been known.

DRESS GOODS.

In this branch our assortment is unrivalled. No where else will ladies find the same range at anything like the prices. Our new colored Lustres, in the new shades, at 15 cents are extraordinary value, while our 12½ cent line, for spring wear, is the greatest bargain yet shown. Stripe Grey Linens 10 cents, Light Silks very low.

MILLINERY.

This branch merits a whole column to itself. Our Show Room is one blaze of beauty and fashion, and contains the latest Paris and New York Designs for the present season. Ladies who have visited all the different stores, say that the

Display of Millinery at the Lion is not merely unsurpassed, but unequalled

MANTLES.

Ladies, don't fail to inspect our display in this Department. We are showing a beautiful variety from the cheapest to the choicest.

DRESSMAKING.

It will be good news to many to know that we have secured the services of Mrs. Thompson at the head of this Department for another year. Her name is so well and favourably known that nothing further is required to guarantee the choicest designs, combined with perfect workmanship.

We cannot at the space as our disposal refer to the other Departments of our establishment, viz

Protection to Manufacturers.

To the Editor of the Guelph Mercury.

DEAR SIR,—I will now, with your permission, endeavor to fulfil the promise made at the conclusion of my communication of last week, that is, give the manufacturing side of the National Policy question, from a farmer's point of view.

First of all, let me state what I believe to be the necessary elements or conditions to secure the undoubted success of manufacturing in any country, irrespective of tariffs or special legislation of any kind: Raw material, such as iron, coal, &c., cheap and plenty; human food cheap and plenty; light taxation; plenty of cheap capital; and last, but not least, an unlimited home market. Now, let any one look over this list and honestly say whether we have those necessary requirements in Canada. The first we have very partially; the second and third we have at present; but, should our new policy be carried out, we will have no more. But the last and paramount condition we do not have, and cannot for many years expect to have. Now as we are constantly drawing comparisons, and aping at an attempt to imitate our neighbors across the lines in regard to trade matters, let us look for a moment at their position. They have the raw material of all description, from the cotton and sugar-cane in the south, to the iron and coal in the north. They have capital in abundance—the accumulations of over a century of thrift and economy; and to crown all, they have over forty millions of customers which are closed out from the rest of the world, and living in almost endless variety of climate and soil. Such is a fair and honest picture of the two positions, and I would ask any sensible, unbiased mind whether there is any comparison, and whether there is any justification for this continual carping about the Yankees doing so-and-so, and why cannot we do it. The conditions are not at all similar, and it is utter madness to think that you can work out similar results when the circumstances and conditions of the two countries are so different.

So much for general principles. Now we will take a glance at the subject below the surface, or rather take an inside look at manufacturing as generally carried on in Canada. The first idea which strikes the observant outsider is the large number of men who rush into this branch of business, without any previous training whatever. In other branches we see men serve a long apprenticeship before they will attempt to manage or assume the responsibilities of a large outlay of capital in any enterprise connected with their particular trade or avocation; but no such feeling seems to blunt the ardor of a large portion of the gentlemen who attempt to run our "struggling industries." A printer or ticket agent to-day, a sewing machine manufacturer to-morrow; a clumsy wielder of the jack-plane to-day, a musical instrument manufacturer to-morrow, and so on. Now, do not for a moment think that I blame those gentlemen, or wish to insinuate anything to their prejudice for their versatility in choosing professions. Quite the reverse. They deserve all praise for their pluck and enterprise; but what I do say is this: is it any wonder that we hear of numerous instances of failures in business, when such a large portion of those engaged rush into the enterprise without any previous training—without a sufficient amount of capital to properly carry on the business, and not infrequently an utter want of judgment or caution to properly manage any branch of business. And yet the usual reason assigned for such mishaps is the jug-handle policy of the Grit Government, and all the other string of silly nonsense which usually accompany the writings of our national policy advocates.

But to further illustrate the idea that much of the difficulties which surround our manufacturing interest are brought about by what I would call the unsound principles on which the business is generally conducted. I will give the following illustrations, and will suppose a case:—Two young men of equal ability—mentally, physically, and financially—start in life, one as a farmer, the other as a manufacturer. They can commence with say $10,000 each. One buys a two hundred acre farm, and stocks it; the other starts a manufactory of some particular article—it matters not for my argument what the article may be. The farmer goes on carefully plodding his way; it is true he lives comfortably, and with a greater degree of independence than most business men enjoy, but in nine cases out of ten he does not make money anything like as rapid as business men do, but he occupies a safer position, simply because he carries on his business on sound legitimate principles. Now take the other case:—$10,000 is a small capital to start a manufactory on, but hundreds of our most successful tradesmen have started on less. But what is the usual course followed? It is not what the man can command of his own. It is what can he get. What can he borrow. That is the idea; for nearly all our manufacturing is run on borrowed capital. Well, we will suppose our young friend has spend his $10,000 judiciously on building and plant; then he goes to work and borrows four times (not an uncommon thing at all) as much as he is worth to run his business with. He makes a start. The retail price he asks for his articles is about double the cost of production, and could he find sufficient sale at that rate his fortune would be made in a short time. But he cannot find a ready sale, and he will not reduce his price, for that would be against the rules of trade, and would bring down the wrath of the fraternity on his devoted head. Well, what does he do? Why, he follows the example of his confreres. He hires peddlers and pays them an exorbitant commission. He sells on credit to every Tom, Dick, and Harry that comes along, and tells a plausible story. He scatters his goods all over the country, and every little village or hamlet has its so-called agency. What is the result? A desperate struggle; large sums for bank discount; bad debts; bursts of indignation at the Yankees for slaughtering their goods, and at a Grit Government for allowing them do so; joins the Manufacturers' League; turns politician; attends gatherings of farmers to try and draw the wool over their eyes; gives vent to his own grievances; and what might naturally be expected from such a course—a short paragraph in the Gazette ends the chapter. But let us reverse the picture: The manufacturer starts his business on a smaller scale. He offers his goods at a less profit to cash customers, if he sells for credit at all. He selects his customers and charges a reasonable interest for the risk he runs; he in short keeps his business well in hand, and works it up gradually, until he is fairly established; keeps aloof from Manufacturers' Leagues and rings of all kinds; such men, for instance, as Watson, of Ayr, and Noxon, of Ingersoll; totally opposed to all restrictions on trade, and ready and willing to meet the Yankees on their own ground, and bid them defiance as far as the slaughter market is concerned. But look at the other side of a farmers' case, for it has another side. He buys a farm, say two hundred acres, pays a fifth down, and promises heavy interest for the balance. He is no common man in his estimation; he must teach his neighbors something. Fancy stock, with little to give them; experiments with new variety of seeds, fond of dabbling in discussions on National Policy, &c. A few years does the business. Then he is ready for a change of Government to see if something won't turn up; or what is much better, go to Manitoba.

Now, those are true pictures of every day life that we see passing around us and "hard times," "depression in trade," and "struggling industries" can in most cases be traced to the worse than bungling conduct of the individuals themselves.

Take a hurried glance at the professed grievances of the manufacturers, and the remedies they propose to heal their difficulties. First of all, they want to prohibit the Americans from selling their goods in Canada, giving as a reason that the American goods are sold far below their value. Is this true, and if so, how does it come that the Americans can afford to sacrifice their property in this way? I will endeavor to answer these queries. There is some truth in the statement that American goods come into Canada, but to nothing like the extent which they formerly did, and they are rapidly becoming less every year. In fact several of our industries have the whole trade now to themselves, and in a very short time, what with the increase of duty and the resumption of specie payments, the grievance, if grievance it was, will be a thing of the past. But how does it happen that the Americans can afford to slaughter their goods in this manner? Simply because they have complete control of their own market thereby, and compel their own people to pay whatever they like to impose, and thus make up the loss they sustain in getting rid of their surplus among their neighbors. But, is all the slaughtering done by the Yankees? Not a bit of it. We have slaughterers among ourselves. How is it that you can buy Guelph manufactures in Great Britain and other countries at a cheaper rate than you can buy them where they are made? Simply for the same reason I have given in the American case. The maker of a sewing machine selling at home for double the cost of construction can well afford to sell the same description of article elsewhere at a reduction of 25 or 30 per cent, and then do very well. This is no hearsay or imaginary statement. I can find half a dozen of trustworthy people in this county who have seen with their own eyes, Guelph sewing machines sold at a figure in Britain which would justify them in buying them, and bringing them back, paying freight and 17½ per cent duty, and then be able to sell them at a lower figure than the retail price of the factory. There must have been some slaughtering before a state of things like this could exist; and brother farmers let me inform you, as I do in all earnestness and honesty, that just so soon as you assist—as some of you propose doing—to increase the duty on the manufactured articles coming into Canada just so soon do you increase the price of every machine or article which you may have to buy. Just give these wily manufacturers power to monopolize the trade of our country and get the complete control, as their brothers in trade across the lines, then you will see them take advantage of their position and compel you to pay just what they like to charge for any manufactured article you may require.

But those smooth, oily-tongued gentlemen will tell you that an increase of duty does not entail or imply an increase of price. Wholesome competition, &c, will keep that all right. Now this is all very fine, but what is our experience? A few years ago a duty—a prohibitory duty in fact—was placed on coal oil. The coal oil business was young and struggling, and we were told that competition would keep the price all right, if we would only exclude the Americans. This was done and what followed? Why, human like, the oil men used the power when they got it. They formed combinations, they enlisted and wished all the refiners in the country, small outside refineries like yours in Guelph were rented, or bought off to stand idle; the owners were bound not to manufacture, and they would get a handsome commission to be agents. And what then? Nothing but a complete monopoly. Up went the price of oil, and the public had to pay the piper with a vengeance. Now when the duty is taken off—thanks to the present Government—oil can be got at a reasonable rate, and one of the greatest blessings—cheap light—enjoyed by everyone. Here is a fair case, which everyone can understand, of the working of a prohibitory duty, and what guarantee have we, pray, that the Goldie's, Willie's and Bell's will not do the same thing if they had the power. Do you, or any sensible man, believe that they have no selfish object in view, working night and day, as they are doing, for this national policy? Would they leave their comfortable, quiet homes night after night, and wrangle and squabble with their fellow creatures, merely for the benefit of you, my brother farmers? Not a bit of it. They have their own axe to grind, and if they can only get you to turn the stone so as to make the tool sufficiently sharp, they will turn about and give you a taste of its edge and leave you a helpless cripple, completely at their mercy, and I for one will say "Served you right."

Although story telling is hardly in order, in a communication of this kind, I cannot resist the temptation in telling a very short one which I heard our late member tell many years ago. It is so appropriate to the case of these would-be friends of the farmers, who with their whining, hypocritical cant, endeavor to work the unsuspecting farmer into a snare for their own destruction. The story is this: Some fifty years ago there was a resident hangman in the good old town of Aberdeen, whose name was Johnnie Mill. Johnnie had great suavity of manner. In fact he could not open his mouth without the bland insinuating smile of the designing knave. But Johnnie's profession required nerve and decision and he had these qualities. But even the last sad duties of fixing the rope round the poor culprit's neck could not be done without bringing out his peculiarities. He would stroke his hand down the poor wretches shoulders, with the usual "Be canny, be canny man; I am nae gaen to hurt ye, ye ken." I leave my brother farmers to make the application. There can be no difficulty in finding Johnnie's successor or prototype at our first national gathering.

I have already trespassed far too much on your valuable space, and I have not yet touched on some of the most valuable points of this absurd doctrine; but I have said sufficient to satisfy the unbiassed minds of my brother farmers that they at least will be no gainers by an increase of duties—but the opposite, and should they be so blind to their own interests as to assist the manufacturers in weaving this protection net, they themselves will be the victims.

With thanks for the manly course you have pursued, Mr. Editor, in regard to the real interests of the farmer, and also for your kindness in allowing my very plain effusions to see the light.

I remain yours truly,
AN OLD FARMER.

WEDNESDAY EVN'G, APRIL 24, 1878.

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

The Revolutionary Movement in Russia Increasing.

LATEST FROM TURKEY.

London, April 24. — A St. Petersburg despatch says: The revolutionary movement throughout Russia is increasing, and it is probable that the Government will proclaim a state of siege.

The Bulgarian Parliament will meet on the 1st of May.

Constantinople, April 24. — The Grand Duke Nicholas has informed the Porte that Russian officers and soldiers desire to attend religious services in Constantinople on Sunday, and requests that Greek churches be kept open.

The Mussulman insurrection in Roumelia is chiefly in the Rhodope mountains.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

NO CHANGE IN THE POSITION OF AFFAIRS.

Britain Stands Firm in Her Demands.

BISMARCK STILL TRYING TO MEDIATE.

London, April 22.

The Daily News, referring to the present military preparations, says:—They may be mere precautions, but there is not one of them which does not mark our progress to a state of war. It is exceedingly doubtful whether the full import of some of these so-called precautions is yet realized. The most important of all, the despatch of native troops to India, has been passed over with very little remark, although the measure marks a revolution in our Indian military policy. Native troops are preparing to come, but where they will be landed is a Ministerial secret. It is quite as likely that these troops will be landed at some Turkish port as they will go to Malta. The practical lesson of the last few weeks is, that in these matters a resolute hand is guiding a mystified people to an appointed end.

The Journal de St. Petersbury publishes an article in which, while expressing a belief that the Congress will soon assemble, it says this alone will not constitute a guarantee of peace. The Journal considers it necessary that frank and exhaustive views between the Cabinets should precede a Congress. It concludes as follows:—"If the British Cabinet really desires peace, and at the same time expects greater advantages for England by intimidating Russia, it is a dangerous game, which will lead not to peace, but to war,"

Russian attempts to raise volunteers in Adrianople meet with little success in consequence of lack of money. The Russians are making requisitions for houses in Adrianople for hospitals.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that the report that Bismarck intends to abandon all further attempts at conciliation is not believed in well informed circles. But little consequence is placed in the ultimate success of the negotiations.

A Berlin despatch says:—The North German Gazette and National Gazttee are despondent in tone over the prospects of Bismarck's mediation.

A Vienna correspondent says:—Italy, at the request of Germany, is assisting in the efforts at mediation.

Paris journals state that invitations to a congress to examine the changes necessary in existing treaties have been semi-officially communicated to several of the Powers. All except England declared their readiness to accept the invitation unreservedly. England still insists that all the great changes in the East, such as those proposed by the Treaty of San Stefano, shall be treated as European questions.

A Pera correspondent shows that the Mussulman insurrection is exceedingly formidable. It engages 3,000 Russian troops, and extends over an area of 10,000 square miles from between Tartar Bazardjik and Philippopolis to Gumulschina and Tchermen. The insurrection was caused by the intollerable oppression of the Russio-Bulgarian regime, and was brought to a head by the abduction of Turkish women by Bulgarians, Cannon and musketry firing is heard daily near Tchermes. A sanguinary and indecisive engagement was fought near Demotica on the 18th inst., in which the Russians lost 600 men, including eight officers killed. The commander of Demotica asked for reinforcements, and 2,000 infantry and two sotnias of Cossacks have been sent from Adrianople. The demand for reinforcements gaeatly reduces the garrison at Adrianople and at Philippopolis.

Another insurrection of Mussimans has broken out in Macedonia. The commandant at Monastir has sent for troops, and the Russians have also despatched forces to the scene.

Bond & Co. tell us that they have just received a large lot of the celebrated rubber paint ready mixed, all colors, instruction books given free of charge to any one requiring them.

By the exercise of the most judicious management, the Grand Central Hotel, New York, has very cleverly turned the tide of trade in its direction, not less by the sweeping reduction of its rates than through its excellent management. cod

STILL THEY COME.—We notice the railway companies delivering large quantities of new goods at the Lion this morning. These we are told are some of the bargains secured by Mr. Williamson at the trade sales in Montreal a few days ago—when goods were said to have been sold lower than ever. Special attractions in dress goods.

The revolutionary excitement throughout Russia continues unabated, and there has been serious rioting in most of the large towns. Disturbances are also threatened at various centres of education. The Telegraph has advices from Cracow that the Russian railroads are encumbered by the transport of troops to the north to check threatened disturbances in various centres of education. The garrisons of Moscow and Kieff have been reinforced.

Local News.

MR. CHAS. DAVIDSON has sold a lot on Queen street for $750.

Fresh brisk winds and rain are the weather probs. received to-day.

SOME plastering in a new house in the East Ward was done on Sunday morning last.

Revs. Thos. Wardrope and J. C. Smith have left for Queen's College, Kingston. The former gentleman is to be honored with the degree of D. D.

MR. P. SPRAGGE, of the West End Livery, has purchased from Mr. J. D. Williamson the span of grey horses which he sometime ago had sold to that gentleman. They are good roadsters.

POLICE CLOTHING. — The uniforms for the Guelph policemen are to be made by Messrs. Guy & Husband, merchant tailors, they having been awarded the contract. The clothing consists of two summer serge coats, two tunics, and two pairs of pants of blue doeskin. The amount of the contract is $79.

INSOLVENCY.—A meeting of the creditors of Mr. James Watt, of Fergus, took place yesterday (Tuesday), at the office of the official assignee, when the insolvent made an offer equal to 35c. on his liabilities, at 3, 6, 9, and 12 months secured. Mr. John Smith was appointed assignee and Mr. Adam Brown, of Hamilton, inspector.

THE following compose the new Hook and Ladder Company recently formed in Guelph:—Robert Roper, Arch. Gillies, Robert Emery, John Swindlehurst, Chas. Wm. Craig, John Fenwick, Wm. J. Armstrong, Jas. Simpson and Geo. W. Lamond. The following officers have been elected: Foreman, Wm. J. Armstrong; Assistant-Foreman, John Swindlehurst; Secretary, Geo. W. Lamond. The members are to receive a salary of $25 per annum.

STOLEN HORSE RECOVERED.—On Saturday the 6th inst., a respectable looking party hired a horse and buggy from Main & Scrimger of Galt, to go to Freeport. Since that time up to a couple of days ago nothing was heard of the animal, when word was received that it was in Port Hope, and had been since the evening of the 8th. The horse was therefore driven one hundred and thirty miles in two days. Mr. Main proceeded to that town and identified his property. It is said that the horse thief's name is Sullivan, and he succeeded in selling the horse to one party, the buggy to another and the robe and whip to a third.

MILITARY MATTERS.—Sub-section 1 of No. 1 General Orders 12, 16th May, 1871, is hereby cancelled, and the following substituted therefore, viz:—No officer will be promoted to the rank of captain of a field battery of artillery unless he has obtained a first-class certificate in a School of Gunnery, or unless he passes a satisfactory examination and obtains a first-class certificate from an Inspector of Artillery, which certificate shall be registered at headquarters. Officers or others holding second-class gunnery certificates may be promoted or appointed captains of batteries of Garrison Artillery. Unless holding certificates of qualification, all first appointments of officers in artillery corps will be provisional. An Inspector of Artillery may grant either first or second-class certificates to those artillery officers who pass a satisfactory examination before him.

TEA-MEETING.—A very enjoyable tea-meeting and concert was held in the Primitive Methodist Church last evening, to which a large number of persons, old and young, attended. A bountiful supply of good things was provided to furnish the tea tables, and after all who wished had partaken, and there were many, there was still abundance left. Mr. Wilkins, of Galt, was voted to the chair in the absence of Mr. Coatsworth, of Toronto. A lengthy programme was provided, consisting of instrumental pieces by Prof. Philp and the Harris boys, on the violin and piano; readings by Misses Keables and Maddock, and a recitation by Miss Graham. A duet by Rev. Mr. Harris and Mrs. Pearce, and a song by Mr. Cooke, were given. The choir also sang a couple of anthems. At a little before eleven the Rev. Mr. Harris thanked the many friends present for their attendance and assistance, and announced that a ten cent tea social would be held this evening in the church and basement, at which there would be abundance for all, and at which time the balance of the programme would be gone through with. The low admission fee and an interesting programme will, no doubt, draw a large assembly this evening.

A REMARKBLE SIMPLE REMEDY FOR DIPHTHERIA.—An exchange publishes the following which gives a remarkable simple but effective remedy for diphtheria. A few years ago when diphtheria was raging in England a gentleman accompanied the celebrated Dr. Field in his rounds to witness the so-called wonderful cures which he performed while the patients of others were drooping on all sides. The remedy to be so rapid must be simple. All he took with him was powder of sulphur and a quill, and with these he cured every patient without exception. He put a teaspoonful of flour of brimstone in a wineglass of water and stirred it with the finger instead of a spoon, as the sulphur does not readily amalgamate with water. When the sulphur was well mixed he gave it as a gargle and in ten minutes the patient was out of danger. Brimstone kills every species of fungus in man or beast and plant in a few minutes. Instead of spitting out the gargle he recommended swallowing it. In extreme cases when the fungus was too nearly closing to allow of gargling he blew the sulphur through a quill into the throat, and after the fungus had shrunk to allow of it then the gargling. He never lost a patient from diphtheria. If a patient cannot gargle take a live coal, put it on a shovel and sprinkle a spoonful or two of flour of brimstone at a time upon it. Let the sufferer inhale it, holding the head over it, and the fungus will die. If plentifully used the whole room may be filled almost to suffication; the patient can walk about in it inhaling the fumes with doors and windows shut. The mode of fumigating the room with sulphur has often cured most attacks of cold in the head, chest, &c., at any time, and is recommended in cases of consumption and asthma.

Great damage has been done by recent heavy rains and high winds in Tennessee and Iowa. In the latter State the loss of life has been considerable.

St. George's Society

The Annual Gathering, and an "Old-Time" Dinner.

The Guelph St. George's Society celebrated the anniversary of their patron saint by a dinner at the City Hotel, on Tuesday evening. The 23rd of April rarely passes over the head of an Englishman, without some observance of the day. While his thoughts revert back to the dear home of his youth—the impregnable sea-girt Britain, a feeling of pride takes possession of himself—and it is well that it is so—from the fact that he can claim to be a son of the most powerful nation of the earth, on whose dominions the sun never sets. All these feelings, coupled with the love that a dutiful son has towards a mother, makes an Englishman on each recurring anniversary of the patron saint of his country one of the happiest mortals in creation.

The dinner at the City Hotel on Tuesday evening was largely attended. The extensive dining hall was completely filled, and still there were thirty unprovided with seats at the table. The sample room was then for the nonce turned into a second dining hall for for the accommodation of the sons of St. George and their friends. After sirloin upon sirloin of the choicest beef, besides fowl, ham, and all the etcetras that go to make up a first-class dinner had been served in a really excellent style by Mr. Haugh, and had received storage room, the tables were cleared and the whole company assembled in the large dining-room, and toasts, song, and sentiment reigned supreme until three o'clock this (Wednesday) morning.

The room was very tastefully decorated with flags, evergreens, flowers and plants. At the head of the table the banner of the Society presented a very striking appearance, and enhanced the effect of the whole.

Mr. George Murton, President, occupied the head of the table. He was supported by Dr. Nunan, President of St. Patrick's Society and Rev. Canon Dixon, Chaplain of St. George's. The vice-chairs were occupied by Mayor Howard, first Vice-President, and Mr. Geo. Elliott, second Vice. The gentlemen were supported by Messrs. D. Stirton, of St. Andrew's Society, and E. O'Connor of St. Patrick's Society, and Caleb Chase. The sister societies were well represented.

The following telegrams and letter were read by the chairman:—

TORONTO, April 22nd, 1878.

To the President of St. George's Society, Guelph.

DEAR SIR.—I am asked by the President of our Society, Mr. B. Matton, to acknowledge the receipt of your kind invitation to your dinner to-morrow evening, but as we also have a dinner it will be impossible for him to accept the same. We shall feel most happy to exchange greetings on the occasion.

I am, yours very truly,
E. PELL, Secretary.

HAMILTON, April 23, 1878.

To St. George's Society, Greeting—

Many good digestion await on appetite, and health on both.—God save the Queen.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY, Hamilton.

TORONTO, April 23, 1878.

To the President of St. George's Society—

The St. George's Society of Toronto, celebrate the day, sends greetings to the brethren

J. E. PELL.

KINGSTON, April 23rd, 1878.

To President St. George's Society.

Just beginning a right royal spread for St. George. We send a host of fraternal greetings. May Old England never look for loyal sons.

E. J. B. PENDE, President.
A. LE RICHEAUX, Secretary.

BRANTFORD, April 23rd, 1878.

To the President of St. George's Society.

Greetings received with thanks, one hundred and fifty jolly Englishmen doing justice to roast beef and plum pudding. Accept our greetings.

W. J. IMLACH, Pres.
THOS. ELLIOTT, Secy.

LONDON, April 23rd, 1878.

To the President of St. George's Society.

One hundred and forty jolly Englishmen send fraternal greetings to all.

J. W. COSE, Secy.
T. HEAMEN, Pres.

The Chairman proposed the toast of "The Queen," which was honored amid great enthusiasm, the company afterwards singing "The National Anthem."

"The Prince and Princess of Wales and the Royal Family," and "The Governor-General and Lieut.-Governor," were next in order, toasted and honored.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers" were toasted, and "The Red, White and Blue" sung with great fervor, by Mr. Alf. Burrows.

Capt. H. H. Swinford briefly replied.

"The Day we celebrate" was proposed by the chairman, and in conjunction therewith making the following address:—

MR. VICE-CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN.—In rising to propose the toast of the day we celebrate, I do so with much pleasure, seeing so many of the Sons of St. George, and members of our sister societies present to participate in doing honor to our Patron Saint. We all know such gatherings tend to keep alive that brotherly feeling that Englishmen should have towards each other. All are aware that St. George's Society, like St. Andrew's and St. Patrick's, was established for the benefit of our poorer brethren, to assist them by timely aid and advice, whenever they needed it; and we are fully assured that many of our fellow-countrymen could testify to the fact that they have been benefitted by such assistance from these societies. Then again they are instrumental in keeping alive that national feeling which all lovers of their country like to perpetuate. No matter where our lot is cast, be it in Asia, Africa, or America, we all look to our native land with feelings of love and veneration. At the present time, when our dear native land is on the eve of what seems almost inevitable a great European war, every heart must warm towards the land whose flag has braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze, and breathe forth the prayer that our gracious Queen may conquer her enemies, and that the old flag may still float over an invincible army and navy; and when we remember Alma, Inkerman, Balaklava, and Sebastopol, we may with pardonable confidence trust England's honor in the hands of our countrymen. Since our last annual meeting several things of deep interest to the future welfare of the Society have transpired. Most prominent was the meeting of the North American Union Society, held in Philadelphia last autumn. Your Society appointed Mr. Caleb Chase to represent it at that meeting. The North American Union has for its object the uniting of all St. George's Societies on the continent in one bond of brotherly fraternity, and is to be held alternately in the United States and Canada. Owing in a great measure to the exertions of your delegate, the next annual gathering will be held in Guelph, when we shall have the pleasure of meeting delegates from the different St. George's Societies in Canada, and also many of our American friends, who so nobly entertained the delegates last year in Philadelphia, to whom we will give a hearty welcome, and endeavor to return them the same hospitality—although not on so magnificent a scale, yet with the same sincere feeling of friendship as was tendered to the representatives from Canada. This is now the first anniversary since our grand jubilee to commemorate the advent of Guelph, and we may turn to the business of the Society during the past year with a feeling of hope for the future. In past years members of St. George's Society were in the habit of meeting once perhaps previous to the anniversary to make arrangements for celebrating the day, and after that was accomplished, and the dinner over, no more was thought about it till the next came round. I am happy to say that that state of lukewarmness has passed away and a better feeling has arisen in its place. This has chiefly been brought about by having monthly meetings and now and then musical entertainments for which the Society owe a debt of thanks to the Committee who were instrumental in getting them up. By these means a friendly intercourse has been kept up, which will tend much to unite the members together. A short time before Christmas some members suggested the idea of distributing provisions to the poor and needy among our fellow-countrymen, to enable them at least for the day to enjoy a good dinner, and for that purpose subscriptions were solicited, and I am happy to say with marked success, every one having given what they could afford. By this means we were enabled to relieve some fifty families, and provide them with the means of having the traditional English dinner of roast beef and plum pudding. This was a source of gratification not only to the recipients but also to the donors.

The question has been entertained during the past year of securing rooms of our own. This, of course, would be most desirable, and should be accomplished as soon as possible, but I would not advise the Society to enter into it before they can see their way clear. As to the funds requisite for carrying the scheme into practice, many members who like myself are anxious to have our own lodge room, if I may so term it, yet fear to embark in the undertaking at present, seeing that there has been a considerable drag on the members for funds during the past two years, and also remembering that a still further call will have to be made on them to meet the expense of entertaining the large gathering we may expect to the meeting of the North American Union in August. But at no distant day I hope to see St. George's Society established in rooms of their own, with a library attached for the benefit of our sons, who by that means might be kept from the debasing influence of the bar room and stable.

England's Merchant Shipping.

If there is one element of which England is justly proud, and which more than any other contributes to her wealth and strength, it is her merchant shipping. The following figures from an article in the Fortnightly Review, by T. H. Farrar, represent the tonnage of her merchant navy in successive decades :—

1820	2,648,000
1840	3,311,000
1860	5,710,000
1870	7,149,000
1876	7,964,000

The tonage of the United Kingdom alone is almost, if not quite, as large as that of all the merchant navies of Europe put together. The growth of our steam tonage, the most useful and valuable form of shipping, is still more striking.

1840	95,000
1860	500,000
1870	1,202,000
1876	2,150,000

Our steam navy is now twice as large as all the other ocean going steam merchant navies of the world.

Tramps in the United States.

The following statement from the Chicago Age shows the very serious difficulty which has arisen in the United States from the absence of employment :—

"This floating population of roughs and paupers is now occasioning much disquietude throughout the northern half of the Union; and the question at present most urgently discussed is, 'What are we to do with the tramps?' Pauperism, in fact, has organized itself in migratory and predatory bands, sometimes 200 and 300 strong, ready to beg, thieve or violently rob, according as one or other of these operations can be most safely indulged in. These bands are the off-scouring of the large cities, and great manufacturing centres, like New York, Pittsburg, and Chicago, and, following the lines of railway, they go roving over the quieter parts of the country, settling in the outskirts of towns and villages, committing outrages, and levying black-mail wherever they go."

The Hon. Mr. Blain, formerly a member of President Lincoln's Cabinet, when presiding over the Maryland Convenvention, upon this tramp question, said that, "It is a lamentable fact, that one million two hundred thousand able-bodied men, are to-day out of employment, numbers of whom are roaming about the country, a nuisance and a terror to the resident population." Such an estimate of the population actually out of employment appears almost incredible, but the state of matters must be sufficiently disastrous when such a computation can be made by so able and experienced a politician.

THE adoption of the Moylan report by the Public Accounts Committee on Tuesday terminates the enquiry long pending before the Committee into the irregular and improper payment of $2,500 to Mr. Moylan by Sir John A. Macdonald under false and colorable excuses. It is a significant fact that out of some twenty-nine members, all warm supporters of Sir John Macdonald, whose names are to be found on the list of the Public Accounts Committee, only nine could be mustered after several days' notice that the report was to be taken into consideration on that day to protest by their votes against the condemnation involved in the findings of the Committee.

SINCE Sir Francis Hincks came out in favor of the present Quebec Government, the Tory papers want us to believe that he is in his second childhood, though before they held him up as a great authority on constitutional practice. The condition of things is that Sir Francis upholds Lieut.-Governor Letellier's action and the Supreme Court did not unseat Mr. Laflamme.

REGRETS are generally expressed that Mr. Walter Ross, who has for fifteen years worthily represented Prince Edward county in the House of Commons, will not offer himself for re-election. Mr. Ross has been a most faithful and efficient member, and has earned the respect and esteem of his constituents. We are glad to learn that the gentleman nominated in his place—Dr. Platt—will make a worthy member.

A TRANSGRESSING METHODIST MINISTER.—The following from Hamilton will be read with extreme regret :—"The entire moral sentiment of this city has been recently shocked by the defection of one of our hitherto most highly esteemed clergymen, the Rev. R. Bell, pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist Mission Church, Simcoe street. The facts are as follows:—Mr. Bell, who is a young unmarried man, came into his present charge about two years ago, and has been boarding for the last eighteen months at 69½ John street north. A few months after his reception as a boarder at the house mentioned, the family engaged, as a servant, a young girl of about sixteen, and it now turns out that there has been criminal connection between Mr. Bell and this girl, resulting in the moral ruin of both. Mr. Bell, on being charged with the offense, frankly admitted his guilt. The unfortunate girl returned some time ago to the home of her parents, and the disgraced man has left the city for parts unknown."

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, APRIL 23.

The House went into Committee on the Bill to amend the Election Act, which took up some time.

On Mr. Cartwright's motion to go into Supply, Mr. Bolduc moved in amendment that, whereas $1,000,000 worth of tobacco was imported every year, while the plant might be cultivated in Canada to advantage, the House considered it should be encouraged by the abolition of all duties on home-grown tobacco.

Hon. Mr. Mills opposed the amendment, contending that it was unnecessary and inexpedient, and stating that the climate of Lower Canada was unfavorable to the growth of tobacco.

Mr. Langevin denied this assertion, and advocated the motion on various grounds, the protective included.

Mr. Laflamme replied very neatly that the member for Charlevoix was one of an Administration who, in 1868, had imposed a tax on tobacco in spite of the objections thereto. The Minister of Justice illustrated the inconsistency of that hon. gentleman's present course, replying to the remarks in favor of the amendment. The removal of the duty would entail a loss to the revenue of $1,600,000, which would have to be made up by duties on the necessaries of life. The tobacco tax was not collected in a way to injure the farmer or grower.

Mr. Cartwright pointed out that tobacco contributed largely to the revenue—from $500,000 to $800,000 per annum.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Tupper, Patterson, and others till about eleven, when a division was taken and the amendment lost by 53 to 90.

TORNADO IN THE STATES.—The reports of the tornado on Monday state it was very severe in Northwestern Iowa. At Pomeroy nine houses were demolished, two persons killed, and twenty wounded. At Rippey, on the Fort Dodge and Des Moines Road, a man, woman and child were killed, and almost every house in the town damaged. The town of Glidden, on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, suffered severely. In Crawford county five persons were killed. At Lac City hail fell as large as oranges. The damage at Storm Lake is said to be $25,000. A man named Breech, and a lady aged 92 were killed and 30 wounded. Hogs were carried half a mile and fowls stripped of their feathers. The general width of the tornado was about 300 yards.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. CHAPTER XXXIV.

CONCLUSION OF MYRA'S STORY—THE TWO PRISONERS COMFORT EACH OTHER.

"Say on, I will listen," she said, in a calmer, though still a moody tone.

Thus permitted, Lizzie with a simple earnestness repeated the psalm which had soothed her own soul so greatly. Under the influence of the strong feelings which possessed her, she recited it with singular effect, and this, along with its inherent strength-giving power, produced a marked influence on her listener.

Myra sat with her face buried in her knees, silent and motionless, giving no outward sign of being subdued, except what might be gathered from the stillness of her attitude. Taking this as a favourable omen, Lizzie, after she had repeated the psalm, followed it up with the beautiful faith-inspired hymn which has for its first line, "God moves in a mysterious way," which she went over from beginning to end, but laying special emphasis on the last verse, being peculiarly applicable to the state of mind Myra had exhibited:—

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan his work in vain;
God is His own interpreter,
And He will make it plain."

While uttering the words Lizzie was eagerly, wistfully watching the bent form, which had been so hard and still when she began, but which she now saw shaking with emotion which could not be suppressed, though Myra's passionate nature was evidently struggling against it. The bitter feeling engendered by suffering and wrong was not to be subdued without strong resistance. It was so hard to retain faith in the face of what seemed utter Divine desertion. Could God be so great and so loving as the Bible declared and yet allow such injustice to be committed and endured? Was this in accordance with the attributes ascribed Him? Myra's stricken heart rebelled stoutly against the possibility, but her woman's nature, so full of trusting instincts, rose up to corroborate the truth of the words uttered, and in a storm of tears. With a sudden sobbing outburst she flung her arms round Lizzie's neck.

"Oh, Lizzie, you are good—good. I wish I was like you," she exclaimed. "I think God must be kind after all, and that He has sent you here to cheer and comfort me. I will try not to be so bad again; I will try to believe in Him and trust Him as I was taught to in childhood, if you will only love me and help me to be patient."

"Yes, dear lady, we shall love each other, for we are both sufferers."

"Ay, but you bear your wrongs so much more meekly than I do."

"No, no," returned Lizzie, earnestly. "You would not say so if you knew how sad and desponding I have been. I too was tempted, in the bitterness of despair, to say that no sorrow was like unto my sorrow. But God has reproved and rebuked me, by showing me how much less my trials are than yours. My husband lives, while yours is dead; my child is with me still, while yours has been taken from you. Oh, I do not wonder that your faith failed. Had I endured the same, I would have died or gone mad."

"Then you forgive me for my shocking blasphemy," moaned Myra, as she passed her face closely against Lizzie's cheek.

The latter answered with a tender kiss.

"And God has forgiven me too," added Myra, "for he has sent the dark cloud away. I feel better at this moment than I have done since—since that dreadful morning when they took my child, and something tells me that this is an earnest of deliverance for us both."

"Heaven grant it," said Lizzie, fervently; "but, alas! I do not see whence deliverance is to come. No one knows we are here but those who have sent us into exile."

"But your husband will make search for you. He is sure to do so. No threat of any kind will, I am certain, prevent him. He will, I doubt not, after getting your letter, refrain from taking any steps to obtain the child's rights, but only until he recovers you both; and, rest assured, he will not cease, night or day, to find you, then, your hour of deliverance will be mine also, though, alas! liberty for me has but half its sweetness, since I have not my child. Still freedom will give the power of vengeance."

Here a look from Lizzie arrested and chased back the fierce light which was returning into Myra's eyes.

"Ah, I am becoming naughty again," she observed, as she suddenly checked herself. "'I am forgetting who says, 'Vengeance is mine, I will repay.' And, in truth, that repayment seems in part to have been made, for Mother Barnacle, who does not scruple to tell me what transpires at Benachray, has informed me that my enemies there have not prospered too well in their iniquity. Roderick is dead, and his boy is a weak, sickly thing, who may never grow up to enjoy the inheritance which should have been my child's. Dixon has left Benachray, having had a deadly quarrel with Allan M'Pherson. Dixon, it seems, loved a girl, whom Allan managed to beguile and ruin. She died of grief, and Dixon in his rage challenged Allan to mortal combat. The libertine refused, and Dixon, after horsewhipping him, departed no one knows where. These are the news which from time to time have reached me through Mother Barnacle, the old woman thinking no doubt that I would rejoice to hear them. Ah, while we have been sitting here so long the sun has nearly sat, and our jailors will wonder at our long absence, though I dare say Joe has had his eye on us from yonder tower. Come let us return together."

They rose and quitted the recess by the side of the loch where their long and deeply interesting conference had taken place, and where had commenced between them a friendship which was likely to be close and lasting.

Myra was correct in her surmise that Joe had been keeping his eye on them from the tower. He knew that until that day his two prisoners were unaware of each others presence, and he was curious to see what would transpire at their meeting. He and Mother Barnacle had agreed with each other that it was impossible to keep them separate, and that it did not matter much though they came together, and told each other their story, since their mutual knowledge could do no harm, as neither of them could possibly make their escape. So, on that Sabbath forenoon, when Myra emerged from the seclusion she had maintained for the previous week, and went forth to ramble on the island, the hunchback said to his ponderous companion—

"There she goes. The other one is out too, so they'll meet at last."

"Well, let them meet," returned Mother Barnacle, and in a tone of perfect indifference.

"They'll be sure to blab everything to one another."

"Let them blab. It will do them good, and do no harm to any one at Benachray or Mount Cairn."

"That's true enough," remarked Joe, "I would like to see how they take to each other."

And away he hobbled to the top of the tower—rather a perilous journey for his deformed limbs to make, for the stair had crumbled in various places, presenting ugly gaps such as an active man would have some difficulty in getting over. All the greater, therefore, was their danger to a man of Joe's size and make. But by care and effort he climbed to the top, whence from narrow loop-holes he commanded a view of the whole island, and as he had a telescope with him every object thereon, however distent, was brought distinctly under his eye.

dw WM. STEWART & Co.

He had to wait a considerable time ere he saw the meeting take place between Lizzie and Myra, but at length he was gratified by beholding it, and, with his glass at his eye, was a chuckling witness of its strongly dramatic character. Except that he could hear nothing of what was spoken, he might have been present on the scene, so distinctly where their faces and actions revealed to him. He saw Myra rush wildly forward at sight of the child, saw the struggle between her and Lizzie, and knew what it meant. He also beheld the issue when Myra discovered that it was not her child as she had hoped, saw her fall to the ground in a swoon. Then he followed them with his glass when they moved to the side of the loch and seated themselves together in the rocky recess. He knew that now they were rehearsing to each other the history of their wrongs. Finally he saw them fall into each others's arms in a loving embrace, and grinned malevolently at sight of their cemented friendships.

All this he reported with grim facetiousness to Mother Barnacle, who gave it as her opinion that the acquaintance thus begun would have a good effect on both of them, especially on Myra, whose fits of lunacy had given her no small trouble and annoyance.

"Take my word for it Joe, she'll have no more of what she calls the dark days, and that's something to be thankful for. I never knew but she might do herself a mischief when she shut herself up for days together, and did nothing but lie in sulky silence in the bed."

"No great matter if she had," responded Joe, with brutal indifference. Neither the Colonel nor Mr. Allan would go into fits at news of her death."

"Perhaps not, but I'd rather she'd not do it for all that. Her ghost might go about and frighten us."

"Bah," said the hunchback, and adding nothing further to this augurous expression of incredulity, he shambled off to give the pigs their supper.

NATIONAL POLICY.

Meeting at the Junction Hotel.

On Tuesday evening a meeting called by Protectionists was held at the Junction Hotel, Elora Road. The meeting was a small one, and several were present from the town, including Messrs. Bell, Wilkie, Goldie, Maddock, Higham, Melvin and McLagan.

Mr. John Bolton was elected chairman, and Mr. A. Gilchrist Secretary.

Mr. Fraser, of Toronto, opened the meeting by reading the constitution of the League and going over the old ground of complaint from a Protectionist point of view.

Mr. Loghrin followed in the same strain, urging all present to unite in one grand body to form this League, which was calculated to bring about a state of affairs in Canada as would make this country the Garden of Eden of the known world. He failed however in showing how this could be done. Politics had ruined the country already, and neither Alex. Mackenzie nor John A. Macdonald would have a voice in framing such a tariff. This would all be done by the representatives elected by the League.

Mr. Jas. Ladlaw was the next to address the meeting. He said the title of League was a misnomer, for on no ground could their policy be called a National one. In fact it was the reverse. He was known to them all as a farmer, and therefore any statements he made should be accepted. He had imported American corn because he had made money out of it in feeding. Thus many others had done and with profitable results. He wanted no protection, as protection would be of no benefit to him or the farmers of Canada. The principal products of the soil were regulated entirely by Liverpool and other foreign markets. He had studied the question thoroughly and had come to the conclusion that the present tariff was all that the country required, and in the course of a few months we would find the depression which had prevailed all over the world at an end. Every thing the farmer consumed—if protection were granted—would be increased in price, while no corresponding increase would be given him for his products. The value of land was increasing everywhere and so long as this was the case farmers were perfectly satisfied.

Mr. Bathgate began by quoting from blue books and other documents to show how the trade of the country was dwindling away, but had not proceeded very far before he became quite confused, and failed entirely to carry that conviction that he had fondly hoped for.

Mr. Melvin replied very effectively to the arguments of the previous speakers on the protection side, showing the absurdities of their arguments and the hollowness of their cries. As a manufacturer he was quite conversant with the coal question, and showed Mr. Bathgate's remarks to be veriest nonsense imaginable. He made a very exhaustive speech, entering fully into the question in a logical and practical way that failed to draw a reply from the protectionists, or as he aptly termed them "Exclusionists."

Mr. W. H. Fraser again took the floor, reiterating and repeating the oft-told tale which he now repeats in a school boy fashion very well. Failing entirely, however, to suggest a remedy, or even hint at what he would do.

Mr. J. C. McLagan was called upon, and said he was gratified at the orderly way in which the discussion so far had been conducted. He was as much interested in the prosperity of Canada, as a farmer and a manufacturer, as most of those present, and felt that if a protective policy were inaugurated, as suggested by the League, it would operate materially against the best interests of our country as a whole. Other interests than those of Ontario had to be considered by the Government, who ruled a country extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the interests of each province being different to that of the other. Mr. Bathgate had failed entirely in his statistics, and he would now give those present facts from the blue books In barley we had exported 5,976,896 bushels more than we imported, leaving a balance in our favor of $1,379,807; oats we had exported in excess of imports, 1,272,316 bushels, giving us a cash balance of $636,478. Wheat, we had imported in excess of exports, 2,195,896 bushels, leaving a balance against us of $2,104,441. Peas and beans we had exported over imports to the extent of 1,857,348 bushels, a cash balance in our favor of $1,598,981. Indian corn imported in excess of exports about 400,000 bushels, leaving a balance against us of $2,238,638. Oatmeal exported over imports 20,705 bbls., and a cash balance in our favor of $124,049. Flour—excess of imports over exports 280,458 bbls., a balance against us of $1,478,835. Potatoes exported over imports 3,086,770 bushels, and $1,381,630 in cash. Butter exports in excess of imports 13,670,818 lbs., cash value, $2,871,828. Eggs exports in excess of imports 4,998,352 dozen, netting us in cash $528,455. Cheese we exported to the extent of 34,078,960 lbs., leaving with our farmers a balance of $3,585,355. Poultry—no imports—exports, $48,303; horned cattle, exports in excess of imports 14,600, a balance in our favor in cash of $491,413; horses we had exported more than imported by 6,830, valued at $702,256; swine we had imported in excess of exports to the extent of 11,548 head, valued at $169,286; sheep we had exported in excess of imports by 198,282 head, giving us a balance of $561,203. Malt—exported 262,358 bushels in excess of imports, giving us $271,458. Mowing, reaping and threshing machines we had imported 603, valued at $38,355; exported none. Musical instruments — excess of imports over exports $14,477. Sewing machines exported in excess of imports 21,467—a cash balance of $122,367. These were the figures from the Trade and Navigation Returns up to 30th June, 1877. From that period to 1st January, 1878, result was still more favorable. There were barley exported in excess of imports to the extent of 713,857 bushels, in cash $2,311,980. Oats we had imported in excess of exports 591,764 bushels, a balance against us of $930,008. Peas—none imported, exported to the value of $1,211,157. Beans imported to the value of $35,010; rye $114,145, both in excess of imports. Indian corn to the extent of $273,969 against us. Wheat exported over imports for six months to the extent of $2,730,771. Flour in excess of imports by $648,768. Oatmeal to the extent of $243,175 of exports over imports. A balance in our favor for these six months of $6,026,067. The correctness of these figures he defied Mr. Bathgate to question. Mr. Fraser's remarks as to manufacturing industries languishing was incorrect, for pointing to our town, what was the state there. True, in Hamilton, there was a few sewing machines factories idle. Why was this? Was it not a fact that had many of these built a good machine like Mr. Raymond and Mr. Wilkie, of Guelph, they would still be running. That there had been an over production in this class no one dare deny. In organs a similar state of affairs existed. Mr. Bell and other Guelph manufactrers had aimed at building a good machine, preferring that to making money fast and losing their reputation, which scores that had started from 1869 to 1873 had done. No legislation could or would prevent such a state of affairs.

Mr. A. W. Wright, of Toronto, closed the debate. He failed to grapple with the question, and in answering arguments advanced by the revenue-tariff policy side dwelt at considerable length in telling anecdotes and reading extracts from the speeches of free and other traders, and a letter of William Lyon Mackenzie, written in 1832.

The usual resolution was moved by Mr. Gilchrist, seconded and carried accordingly, regretting that the Government did not increase the tariff.

Another one was carried to form a branch of the League.

The meeting closed about one a.m. It was of course one sided, as the section is known to be one of the hot beds of the Opposition. The meeting was orderly, and the discussion carried on in a gentlemanly spirit.

GERMAN MEDIATION

Gortschakoff's Condition.

AGITATION IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

LONDON, April 25.—A despatch from Bucharest says the Czar has sent his ultimatum to Roumania. The reported failure of German mediation is unconfirmed. The Mussulman revolt in Bulgaria is rapidly spreading.

A St. Petersburg despatch says Gortschakoff's condition is considered critical. He is suffering from gout, and apprehensions are felt that it will attack his stomach. Doctors are in constant attendance.

Constantinople city is greatly agitated. Insurrection in sympathy with Mussulman outbreak in Roumelia apprehended.

Thos. Scott Elliott's Planing Factory Destroyed.

About a quarter past nine o'clock on Wednesday evening the planing and wood work factory situated on Yorkshire street, near the London Road, and belonging to Mr. Thos. Scott Elliott was observed to be on fire by Mr. Mahoney, who lives in the vicinity. The alarm was quickly raised, but it was fully a quarter of an hour before anything of a crowd assembled. A few who were early on the spot did not adopt a first-class mode to save anything. They took a board and battered in a window, thus giving an excellent draft for the largely increasing flames. Very little stuff was saved out of the building.

After the alarm was given at the fire hall, the Brigade were prompt in their actions and were soon speeding on their way to the fire, the horses on the gallop. It was nearly ten o'clock before water was thrown on the flames and of course by that time the building was completely enveloped. Good work however was done in saving a portion of two car loads of excellent walnut lumber piled in the back part of the shops.

The fire was first seen in the vicinity of the boiler, near its side. Before the factory was closed a few minutes past six o'clock, John Robinson, fireman, sprinkled water about the boiler and thoroughly saturated the front of the furnace. Whether or not the fire originated from the furnace it can never be definitely settled.

The building was a commodious two-story frame, and the work done was the manufacture of sewing machine cabinets, and tops, the celebrated patented washing machine, etc. Lumber planing was also carried on to a considerable extent. Besides a shaper, planing and sawing machines, there was 100 new sewing machine tops, seventy-five half cases, a number of packing cases, and two car-loads of walnut lumber. Five workmen were employed, and they all lost their tools. The engine and boiler are not much injured.

Many who attended the fire had a very good idea how deep the mud was in the swampy ground around the factory, as some parties could be seen floundering around in the drains which they had inadvertently dropped into.

The hook and ladder company—which by the way is an old institution rejuvenated—was early on the spot, but their services were not required.

The entire loss will foot up to nearly $5,000, including building, machinery and stock. The building was uninsured, but on the contents there was an insurance of $2,000 in the Manufacturers and Mechanics' Company of Hamilton.

The community seem very sorry that such a good citizen as Mr. Elliott has met with such a great loss.

TRIAL POSTPONED. — On Wednesday "Buck" Rae was brought out for trial, having previously been elected to be tried without a jury. After the hearing of several witnesses who gave evidence substantially the same as that given at the preliminary examination, the trial was postponed until the 1st of May in order to secure a material witness who evidently had been keeping out of the way.

A CASE has been heard before Listowel magistrates, that would be well for every person to note. One neighbor laid information against another for allowing hens to trespass on his property. The owner of the hens was fined with costs of court. This ought to serve as a warning to those who keep hens within the corporation, and not allow them to give annoyance to as well as destroy the property of their neighbors.

G. C. L. & D. S.—The regular meeting of this society was held last evening, in the Academy Hall of St. Ignatius College. The attendance was very large, owing no doubt, to the good programme promised for this meeting. Mr. Jas. Mays, jr. 1st Vice-President, occupied the chair, and conducted the business part of the proceedings. At the commencement of the exercises Mr. J. J. Hazelton was moved into the chair. An interesting debate followed on the question, "Resolved—that it would be unwise in the interests of the public to abolish capital punishment." Mr. John Gough led in the affirmative. His argument was evidently the result of a careful study and complete knowledge of the subject he had in hand, and being a fluent speaker, his speech was listened to with marked attention. Mr. S. Heffernan argued in opposition to Mr. Gough, and sustained his case to the satisfaction of a majority of those present, the vote being in his favor. Mr. Green extemporized on poets and poetry, and caused much mirth by some jocular allusions to a couple of the gentlemen present. After some duet and solo singing, the meeting closed in time to afford the members an opportunity of attending the fire.

SOCIAL GATHERING AND SURPRISE PARTY.—On the evening of the 20th instant a few friends assembled at the house of Mr. Peter Rae, Esquesing, and spent with him a few hours of social chat before his departure for Manitoba. The time was profitably spent in singing, recitations, &c. Loaded baskets of provisions were then distributed, to which each party done ample justice. After supper, Miss Jennie McGregor, on behalf of the friends and neighbors read an address, and Miss Lizzie McGregor presented Mr. Rae with a handsome Bible and purse, as a token of respect and best wishes for him in his future home. The address is as follows:—"We, the undersigned friends of Peter Rae in prospect of his leaving to seek his fortune in a new country and under new circumstances, take this opportunity of expressing our good wishes towards him, and our hope for his future success, and our desire is, that upon looking upon our small tribute presented, tender memories may be raised in his heart for the home of his youth, and that it may help to cheer him in many a lonely hour. Although we regret the parting we trust to meet again where parting is no more, in a country where all is happiness and contentment. Signed by Miss Lizzie McGregor and Miss Jennie McGregor." Mr. Rae being taken by surprise was unable to say much, only to tender his humble thanks for the kindness shown him, and expressed his own feelings as well as of those present, in singing "The Parting Hour." All then joined in a circle with crossed hands and heartily sang "Auld Lang Syne," and "Sankey's Farewell," after which all retired sorry to part with such a joyful friend and kind neighbour.

Probable Appointment.

Says the Ottawa correspondent of the Stratford Beacon:—"There is no doubt that quite a number of the Deputy heads of Departments, who have become too old for useful service, will be superannuated after the close of the session. The names of several well-known gentlemen are mentioned in connection with the vacancies which will thus be created. I hear a great many express the hope that Mr. Wm. Buckingham, so well known in Stratford and the west, for all the qualities which fit a man for such a position, will be selected to fill the Deputy Minister of Finance. The Prime Minister would undoubtedly be very unwilling to part with him, for to replace him in his present position would be difficult, if not absolutely impossible. But the ability, prudence, and sound judgment which have served Mr. Buckingham so well as the friend and counsellor of the Premier, would be invaluable in the permanent head of an important branch of the public service like the Department of Finance, and Mr. Mackenzie ought not to think twice about sacrificing his own interest to compass so important an end. The selection of Mr. Buckingham for one or other of the vacancies which are about to occur, would give the most unqualified satisfaction to the friends of the Government, and at the same time promote the efficiency of the public service."

We cordially endorse every word in the above with respect to the great efficiency of Mr. Buckingham, and the valuable services he has rendered the Premier and the Liberal Party, and we hope that the Government will make the appointment referred to, for they could not get a better man.

THE TRIAL OF RINE.—The Grand Jury yesterday returned a true bill for indecent assault upon Eliza Gibling against D. I. K. Rine. The trial is fixed for to-day. The prisoner is defended by Hon. M. C. Cameron and by C. S. Jones, of St. Mary's.

CYCLONE IN GEORGIA.—A cyclone 300 yards wide passed four miles from Rome, Georgia, on Wednesday, cleaning everything. Eight persons were injured, and several horses and mules were killed. Trees three feet in diameter were twisted off and swept away, and nine dwellings were blown down.

STRANGE DISCOVERY OF A COAL VEIN.—A Bismarck special to St. Paul on Wednesday reports three shocks of earthquake at Glendove, on the Yellowstone, on the 15th, at intervals of half an hour. The ground opened for 500 yards, with a stifling smell of sulphur, and the crevice revealed a coal vein of three feet.

THE MINDEN POST-OFFICE ROBBERY.—The Minden post-office robbery case came off at Lindsay on Wednesday before Judge Dean. The amount stolen was $490. Ollard, the prisoner, being an attorney, defended himself. He was to-day sentenced to three years' hard labour in the penitentiary.

The Detroit Free Press says that Mrs. Tilton's self-accusations of adultery are based upon purely imaginary actions, and are simply a phase of mental hallucination seems to be gaing ground. Dr. W. A. Hammond, an eminent physician of New York, and a well-known writer on the subject of nervous derangement, cites numerous cases where persons have confessed, circumstantially and persistently, to the commission of crimes of which they could not possibly have been guilty, and he thinks Mrs. Tilton belongs to this class.

The London News says that ladies made their appearance in the cricket field so long ago as 1797, when eleven married women of Bury defeated eleven unmarried women, by eighty runs. A match took place in 1821 between two female elevens of Surrey and Hampshire for 500 guineas. The performers were of all ages and sizes, from 14 to 60. The young wore shawls; the old long cloaks. There is said to be a girls' school in Somersetshire now, where a special dress is worn for the purpose of cricket-playing, and it is added that the best cricketers make the best scholars.

The N. Y. Tribune puts Mrs. Tilton's position in its true light when it says:—"If the public hesitates to accept the word of Mrs. Tilton, even when she figures of her own accord as her own accuser, she has only herself to pity, or to thank, we hardly know which." She confessed long ago; she retracted the confession; she withdrew the retraction; she retracted the withdrawal of the retraction of the confession (this time under oath); and now she has gone back to the beginning of the series, and confessed again, with all the solemnity of a card in the newspapers. There are many allowances to be made for a woman in her unfortunate situation, but she seems to be putting the charity of the public to a severe test."

It is stated that two of Miss Rye's English waifs, named Samuel and John Gill, imported in 1876, and for some time residents of the Boys' Home, have lately fallen heirs to a legacy of $125,000 each, left them by a deceased uncle.

THE UNKNOWN DEAD.

Inquest on the Body of the Man Killed on the G. W. R.

Coroner Herod held an inquest on the body of the man killed on the Great Western track on Tuesday evening, at Reynold's Hotel.

Although several parties who had viewed the body in the morning recognized the deceased as Robert Fisk, of Elora, and on these assertions the MERCURY stated that such was the case, at the inquest John Fisk testified that such was not the case. Nothing was brought out in the evidence pointing out who the deceased really was and the body was therefore unidentified and unknown so far.

The following jury was empannelled:

James Schofield, R. McCrea, C. Adsett, C. W. Reynolds, R. J. Maddock, Wm. Field, Wm. Humphries, J. Roberts, Isaiah Mead, J. H. Osborn, S. Barber, N. Tovell, John Sutton, John Hood.

James Schofield was chosen foreman. After viewing the body, the following evidence was submitted:—

John McKinnon, switch foreman, testified to having been walking on the track ahead of the engine on the Tuesday evening when he saw the deceased on his hands and knees in the cattle guard. The party called on him to stop the engine as his foot was fast. The witness signalled the driver, and although the engine was immediately reverted it was not stopped until the pilot had caught the man and dragged him some distance. The engine was proceeding very slowly, but as the night was dark and foggy the deceased could not be seen until quite close to him. He heard the deceased say after he was struck, "I am killed."

Alex. Hobson, driver of engine 232, gave evidence, but nothing new was elicited.

William Richard Fisk, of Waterloo Township, testified to having an uncle named Robert Fisk, who formerly was in the 100th Regiment. He could not swear that the deceased was not Robert Fisk, but would not swear that it was.

Thos. Flaherty saw the deceased before he went on the track and stated that he staggered as he walked.

Alex. Golban, a brakesman, gave evidence, but nothing new was elicited.

John Fisk, of Paisley Block, stated that he did not recognize the deceased. He saw his brother Robert in the afternoon of Wednesday, at Elora, and he was then in good health. The deceased slightly resembled his brother, but was not short.

THE VERDICT.

That the unknown man, the deceased, now lying in the freight shed, was caught within the the slats of the cattle-guard, and not being able to extricate himself, was struck by engine 232 and killed. The jury consider the employees of the train did all they could to prevent the accident. They further declare as their opinion that the use of slats are of a most dangerous character, as a stranger in the town on a dark, foggy night, very easily got fastened by the same. A hole would be much less dangerous. They are of opinion that had there been a lamp at the proper entrance the accident, in all probability, would never have happened.

The Strike in Lancashire.

LONDON, April 24.—Twenty thousand cotton operatives at Blackburn to-day resolved that the operatives should accept four days per week and a ten per cent. reduction, five days and a five per cent. reduction, and full wages on resuming full time.

The employers in Nelson and Barringford districts, near Burnley, decided on Tuesday to post notices of a ten per cent. reduction. This will affect 20,000 persons. On the other hand, in Burnley, four of the weaving masters have arranged with their operatives to run four days per week at 6½ per cent. reduction.

The Cotton Masters Association has issued a circular appealing to the employers whose hands are working at a reduction to close entirely if the strike continues. At Burnley the notices at twenty more mills, employing from 2,000 to 3,000 hands, expired last night. Twenty-five only of 110 mills are now running, and 10,000 operatives are idle. Both sides are unyielding. The meeting of the Nelson employers is postponed for a week.

At Blackburn a compromise has been effected at five mills, containing 2,000 looms. These start to-morrow. At Accrington and Church the bulk of the operatives are willing to accept a compromise, but two mills refused the masters' offers of a compromise on questions of detail.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 24.

In the House of Commons on Wednesday Mr. Young presented the report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Moylan accounts.

In reply to Mr. McCallum, Mr. Mackenzie stated that the Government had no intention of extending the Pacific Railway from the end of the survey at Fort William towards the mouth of the Kaministiqua River.

Dr. Tupper moved for the report of the exploration made on the proposed route of the Canada Pacific Railway from Nepigon to the junction with the Thunder Bay branch of the road. Carried.

A debate arose on the motion of Mr. Rochester for papers in relation to an alleged infraction of the law by La Banque Nationale by engaging in the lumber trade. It was stated in the course of the discussion that the case was now pending in the Court of Chancery. The Finance Minister promised to make enquiry into the matter, and the motion was carried.

The remaining time up to six o'clock was devoted to motions for unimportant returns, correspondence, &c.

After recess, Mr. Irving's Bill to amend the law relating to stamps on promissory notes and bills of exchange was read the third time and passed after a long and tedious discussion as to whether it fel within the category of those which should originate in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Kirkpatrick's Bill to amend the law of evidence in certain cases of misdemeanor also passed its third reading.

The debate on Mr. McCarthy's motion for a statement respecting the loan of 1876 was resumed by Mr. Plumb. The motion amended in accordance with the suggestions of the Finance Minister, was passed.

The Premier laid on the table a new Order in Council with reference to subsidizing the Canada Central Railway from Pembroke to the south-east of Lake Nipissing, approval of which will be asked on Monday or Tuesday.

THURSDAY EVEN'G, APRIL 25, 1878

The Prospect.

We have not, for a long time, heard the slightest whisper of the great Reactionary movement which was supposed by many of our Conservative friends to be making such marked progress some little while ago. Nearly a year has elapsed since the last expiring sigh of that cry weighed heavily on the hearts of the true and faithful, and with that sigh departed the forlorn hope of the great Chieftain. We might well inquire, why such has been the case, and why the result is so totally different to that which the Tory press and followers had fondly hoped would prove a reality. The people of Canada were treated, daily and weekly, to the most damaging reports of the misconduct of the present Administration and of the enormity of the sins and iniquities of the Premier and several of his colleagues. No evil spirit could possibly have possessed worse qualities than Mr. Mackenzie, and libel after libel was heaped on his already over-burdened shoulders throughout the long series of the picnic spreads. But, when everything was ready for action and the Tory rank and file fully prepared for the attack, on the assembling of Parliament not one word was said, the boasts of the Opposition leaders fell flat, and the stock of abuse found vent in another direction. Committees were offered to the chieftain and his friends, in order that a full investigation might be made, but they would have none of them. Matters came up in the House and sometimes a little capital was attempted to be made out of the alleged frailties of the Reform party, but in every case the attack was promptly and successfully met. Reaction becomes a thing of the past, and before the end of this Session which was to have seen the rapid downfall of the present Ministry, we find the Tory party completely broken, disorganized and defeated on every question advanced by them. The conduct and policy of our administration have been endorsed by the almost unanimous voice of the Dominion, and we believe, from the result of the divisions which have lately taken place, as well as the disreputable course pursued throughout by the Tory tacticians, that the Mackenzie Government stands to-day, stronger and having a deeper hold on the confidence of the people, than in 1874.

It is really amusing to watch the turns and twists of the Opposition. Ever anxious to forget and have forgiven the corrupt and black years of the decline of Sir John's Government which culminated in the historic yet shameful Pacific Scandal, the Opposition leaders have done everything that could be done to divert the attention of the public mind from their misdeeds. The Artful Dodger could not have been more ingenious in his efforts than Sir John. Protection to the farmers, to the manufacturer, to the merchant, to the producer, and to the consumer, all alike, and all to be made rich, has been offered as a remedy for every evil the country is heir to. Now, we do not for a moment suppose that able men like some of the Tory leaders, believe one-tenth of the nonsense talked. Why then is the matter brought up? Simply and plainly in order that something may be done to divert public attention from the past record of the Conservative party, and take public discussion from the real points in issue between the two political parties in Canada. Under the thin veil of Protection, we can easily see the cloven footatwork. The only result which can come from supporting such a cry is the return of Sir John and his party to power. Reformers see this more plainly every day, and as a consequence, that cry is losing ground wherever it is fully discussed. We fully believe, that as the matter is subjected to the thoughtful examination of the people of Canada, the more decidedly and emphatically will they throw aside mere party dodges such as this, and give their support and confidence to a legitimate Government founded on legitimate principles.

DR. MCKINNON, late of Charleston, has removed to Guelph. Office and residence 150 Norfolk street, Guelph, formerly occupied by Dr. Macdonald.

Dotheboys Hall with all its horrors stands revealed in an English law court. A young lady, who had been engaged as a teacher in a boarding-school in North Devon, found that besides twenty girls, there were thirty boys in the school. All the boys slept in one room, the capacity of which was not enough for five. The young ladys had to make the beds in the boys' dormitory, which was the only place they had for washing; and, as there were only four basins, half of them often went down dirty. The sheets were only changed twice in one-half year, and when measles and other illness occurred, no doctor was called in. The young teacher had to sleep in the same bed with four others, and when an infectious disease broke out they all caught it. Several pupils carried the infection to their homes. Although the household consisted of seventy persons, only one female servant was kept, and sometimes there was no servant at all.

Lawrence Doering, a gentleman who is well and very favourably known throughout Waterloo county, has completed arrangements for the erection in Berlin of an extensive flouring mill, and it is expected that the work will be finished and the mill in operation by the 1st of October.

CAPT. NORRIS has accepted the nomination for the Commons for Lincoln.

THERE appears to be some prospects of an early prorogation of the House. A sanguine estimate is that it will take place about the first of May.

THE nominations for the Quebec Legislative Assembly took place yesterday. Satisfactory intelligence from the various constituencies was received by Liberal members of the Dominion House last night.

No intimation whatever has yet been received at Ottawa as to who will be Lord Dufferin's successor. It will be months yet before the name of the next Governor-General will be communicated to the Canadian Government.

COL. SKINNER has received the Reform nomination for South Oxford. Hon. Adam Crooks was unanimously nominated for the Local Legislature. A resolution expressing confidence in the present Government was enthusiastically carried.

THE Mackenzie Government deals out its patronage to newspapers apparently without any regard to party politics—in fact the Tory papers seem to come in for greater favors than those who support the Government, as shown by a return recently brought down, which indicates that the Tory papers in Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto received one-third more than the Reform papers in those cities in 1874 75 76. Reform papers don't live by pap alone, as was the case with some Conservative papers under the rule of Sir John.

The circular of the mercantile agency of R. G. Dun & Co., showing the failures in the United States for the first quarter 1878, has just been issued. It does not look very bright. The number of failures was 3,355 and liabilities $82,078,826, against 2,859 failures and $54,538,070 liabilities for the corresponding quarter of 1877, and against 2,806 failures with $64,644,156 of liabilities for the corresponding quarter of 1876. And all this, be it remembered, in a country which has all the advantages of protective duties and a "national policy."

MR. MACKENZIE has presented the new order in Council providing for the subsidizing of the Canada Central Railway's connection with the Georgian Bay Branch Railway. The new Order provides for a line of railway from Pembroke to South Bay, calculating the distance at 120 miles, or the same as former line of road. The distance is, however, about 130 miles, so that for the original sum of $1,440,000 the Government will secure an additional ten miles of railway. South Bay reaches about twenty miles west of the old proposed terminus and within 53 miles of the proposed terminus of the Georgian Bay Branch on French River at Cantens. The House will be asked to approve the Order early next week.

SAYS the Halifax Chronicle, Mr. Jos. Rymal, member of South Wentworth, is not only the humorist of the House of Commons, but a man of much ability and influence. In this section of the Dominion the humorous side of his character has been most frequently exhibited by the press. If there were nothing better to recommend him this would entitle Mr. Rymal to consideration, for his humor is admirable and never fails to secure him an attentive hearing. But the fact ought to be known that Mr. Rymal is one of the most influential men in the Dominion Parliament. He is a sturdy farmer, thoroughly independent, seeking no office, strong in his constituency, and a man whose opinions carry a weight and does not attach to the utterances of many of those who take a much more prominent part in the debates.—Halifax Chronicle.

OFFICIAL correspondence published in the form of a return proves conclusively that the Government had taken steps to place the late W. B. O'Donoghue on the same footing as Riel and Lepine, months before the elections in Drummond and Arthabaska or Quebec East was thought of. This course was recommended to the Privy Council by the the Minister of Justice on the 20th of September, was concurred in and recommended for the approval of His Excellency on the same day, and no doubt, after consultation with the Home authorities, was approved of by the Governor-General on the 22nd of November, about which time the announcements were made public in Quebec East during the election of Mr. Laurier and published in the Canada Gazette. This relieves the Ministry from the charge levied against them by the Tory press.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.—The latest news says that little progress has been made with the negotiations respecting the withdrawal of the Russians and English from the vicinity of Constantinople, although a solution is still by no means close at hand. There is some talk of the Russians beginning to withdraw their troops from the Turkish capital after the grand review on Monday, but this is evidently premature, as a disagreement exists relative to the time to be allowed the Russians to return to their old positions in the event of an outbreak of war—the Grand Duke demanding six days, and England being only willing to allow three. Germany has furthermore refused to accede to the Russia's request to guarantee the lines of demarcation in the event of a withdrawal. Italy has announced her intention of supporting England's demand for the submission of the treaty to a Congress, provided that England states her views with regard to the system to be introduced in Bulgaria, are endeavoring to induce her to make such a statement. The Mussulman insurrection in Roumelia is spreading. This movement has had the effect of awakening Austria to the necessity of taking precautionary measures, and an occupation of Bosnia is again spoken of at Vienna, though it is by no means probable.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"HEAVEN HELPS THOSE WHO HELP THEMSELVES."

Mother Barnacle was right. Myra had no more "dark days"—those days of indoor seclusion when her sorrowful soul suffered the gloom of eclipse—which used to come upon her at almost regular intervals. The society of Lizzie wrought this beneficial change upon her. The companionship of a sweet, patient, religious soul, cheered, calmed, and strengthened her. Left no longer to her thoughts, to brood constantly and solitarily on her wrongs and her grief—these did not master her as before, or exercise that potent sway which threatened to produce permanent madness. When she felt the shadow approaching she had but to go to Lizzie's room, and draw her into cheerful converse, or induce her to accompany her forth for a ramble amid the brightness of the now expanding summer, where her words of faith and hope would banish the gathering cloud from Myra's mind and prevent it settling. Warded off thus for a few times, its approaches became less marked and more rare, till it ceased to return at all. Thus was she brought from the verge of insanity, into which, but for this human companionship, she would inevitably have plunged, and her otherwise passionate nature was by the same means softened and subdued.

The best token of this happy change was afforded by the affection which she came to cherish for little Alfred. At first she had a strong disinclination to notice or speak to the child, her bereaved feelings seeming to be rendered bitter at sight of him. In a few weeks, however, she was never better pleased than when she had the little fellow in her arms, playing with and fondling him, a state of matters which evidently afforded the lively boy great satisfaction.

Lizzie, too, was wonderfully benefitted by the society of Myra. It had brought forth a strength in her nature which would not otherwise have manifested itself. The necessity which rose before her to infuse faith and hope into Myra's fierce despondency caused her to grasp the very truths which she herself needed to cherish. In short, the two helpless imprisoned girls became greatly helpful to each other, and, by their loving intercourse, the days and weeks of their exile were made more bearable.

Yes, more bearable, but not endured with perfect resignation or without a lingering desire for deliverance. Neither of them could make up their mind to consider their imprisonment perpetual. Though weeks passed into months, with no result but evidently to make their captivity more helpless and settled, they ceased not to cherish the expectation that one day Harold would come and set them free. Harold was the hope, not of Lizzie only, but of Myra also. Other hope, indeed, the latter had not, for she had no friend of her own from whom to look for help, and until Lizzie's arrival had no prospect but the dark and dreary one of spending the rest of her days in solitude—or something little better—on that lonely island. But the coming of Lizzie infused new sparks into the dead embers of her hope—bright and lively sparks, almost bursting into flame, for she never doubted but Harold Logan would sooner or later discover the prison house to which his loved young wife and child had been conveyed. Having discovered that, he would speedily find means to rescue her, and Myra confidently counted on participating in her friend's deliverance.

Lizzie spoke with less confidence of Harold's advent. She did not doubt that he was doing his utmost to find her; but she magnified the difficulties in his way into impossibilities, and as time passed without bringing him, her hope, which had always been largely mingled with fear, became forlorn. The lengthening out of the period showed that he had obtained no trace of her, and lessened the likelihood of his being able to do so. Many a hour of sad heartache did this impression give her. But for the companship of Myra and the prattle of her boy she would have sunk into despair.

Once a month Colston came to the island with a short letter, ready written, to Harold, and waited till Lizzie copied it, when he at once left, taking her copy with him. On these occasions he left his horse fastened to a stake near the landing-place, and so soon Joe had ferried him back he mounted and went away eastward. With keen, wistful eyes Lizzie and Myra would stand on some elevation and watch his movements till he had passed out of sight. They knew he was on his way to Aberdeen, and that in a day or two Harold would receive the commuication which assured him that Lizzie and the child were well, were being kindly treated, and would be, so long as he made no claim on the child's behalf. This was the substance of each letter given her to copy; the words might vary, but the meaning was ever the same. And beyond this the communication did not extend. Myra tried—oh! so earnestly—to devise some method by which an addition could be made to the dictated sentences, the insertion of a word or two which might convey to Harold a hint of Lizzie's whereabouts. But this was found to be utterly impossible. Every attempt was baffled by Colston's imperative instructions to allow not a word to be written by Lizzie beyond what was set down for her. And he was ordered to scan with great care the letter when he received it from her hand, to see that no private mark had been made on it, which instrusion Colston obeyed with such faithful minuteness that it was hopeless to try to elude his scrutiny. Not only did he bring the written words to be copied, but also the sheet of paper on which the copy was to be made; and Myra, whose observation nothing escaped, did not fail to notice that this sheet of paper was on no two occasions alike. There was always a marked difference in size, texture and color. At one time it would be thick, at another thin—one time white, another time blue, or green, or yellow, and so forth. Neither of the prisoners could understand what this variation was meant to serve, but they could not doubt that it had a secret import, and was done for a purpose.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Another Stumbling Block.

RUSSIA MAKES A DEMAND.

The Mussulman Revolt Spreading.

The Russian Occupation Roumania Feared.

LONDON, APRIL 24.

Though the principle of the withdrawal of the Russian and English from the vicinity of Constantinople has been accepted, the knotty point as to the distance to which the forces shall retire continues to be discussed. Some English journals characterize the proposal as a Bismarckian job. The Times believes that, the principle being accepted, an adjustment of details ought not to be impossible. The Times is informed that Bismarck is still making efforts, independently of those relating to the retirement of troops, to find a basis for the meeting of a Congress.

A Herald's London special says that sixty-five officers and masters of the Russian navy have sailed for the United States and in the event of war will take command of vessels purchased, and crews recruited from the United States.

A Moscow despatch says:—A public meeting was held here to-day for the purpose of collecting a subscription for the cruiser "flotilla." It was resolved that the Government of each Province should fit out one cruiser.

Telegrams from Constantinople says typhus is increasing among the Russians at Adrianople and Rodosto. A review of 60,000 Russian troops will be afterwards encamped between San Stefano and Kavak.

The St. Petersburg Golos, commenting upon the proposal for the withdrawal of the British fleet and Russian troops, says:—We cannot see any indications of an understanding. The negotiations only enable England actively to continue her preparations for war. It is desirable therefore that means be speedily found in Berlin to compel England to make her real intentions known, as the present uncertainty weighs heavily upon Europe and Russia.

The Agence Russe says:—If the disposition everywhere is as conciliatory as here, there is reason to hope for satisfactory results. Gortschakoff is quite ill and very feverish.

A St. Petersburg special announces that Gen. Todleben arrived at San Stefano on Tuesday.

Despite sensational announcements, advices from all authentic sources merely show that the negotiations continue. A correspondent at St. Petersburg says:—The proposal to withdraw the troops from Constantinople seems to find more favor in military than in political circles. Gortschakoff has been confined to bed since Monday, and serious apprehensions are felt. His fever increases, and his physicians fear it is typhus.

A Pera despatch says:—It is stated that the Russians will commence the withdrawal after the grand review on Monday.

A Vienna special says:—Russia stipulates that if war is declared after her troops are withdrawn to Adrianople they shall have six days for their return. England is only disposed to grant three.

The fresh outbreak of hostilities in Roumelia has at last decided Austria to consider means of defence. The occupation of Bosnia is deemed advisable on military grounds, although the adoption of the measure is by no means certain.

The Times hopes the present condition of Bulgaria will make Russia more ready to leave to Europe the task, the difficulty of which seems so far only to have been enhanced by the overthrow of the Turkish power.

The Times says:—While Europe is negotiating about securing the blessings of peace and freedom in Eastern lands, Christians and Mussulmans in Bulgaria are flying at each other's throats. The whole country south of the Balkans, notwithstanding the presence of the Russian army, is in a condition which shocked Europe and England two years ago. Russia for the moment seems as powerless as Turkey was, and it is time Eprope should again attempt to do collectively what no single power can do alone.

A Bucharest special says:—The fears of a Russian occupation are increasing. It is rumoured that the Russians are endeavoring to induce Prince Charles to change his Cabinet in order to obtain the conclusion of a military convention permitting the passage of the Russians. It is asserted that a Russian ultimatum to this effect has been received.

A Vienna correspondent telegraphs that the Porte in the event of the withdrawal of the Russians and English will not bind itself not to impede their return. This last stumbling block to a military compromise between England and Russia is deemed difficult to overcome or avoid.

A Belgrade despatch says:—The Turkish, Russian, and Bulgarian Commissioners began to define the Servian frontier and already decided to allot Vranja and Tru to Servia.

The Rome Fanfulla states that Italy has notified England of her disposition to support the latter's demand concerning the laying of the Treaty before a Congress, provided that England states her view with regard to the system to be introduced in Bulgaria. Germany and Italy have both taken steps to induce England to make such a statement.

A Constantinople despatch says:—20,000 irregulars in the district of Batoum refuse to lay down their arms.

A Vienna correspondent states that Germany has refused to guarantee the line of demarcation in the event of the English and Russians withdrawing from before Constantinople.

A San Stefano correspondent represents that the reports of the Mussulman rebellion are merely due to acts of scattered bands of marauders.

A Vienna despatch says the revolt is spreading all along the eastern valleys of the River Arda and its tributaries.

The Trial of D. I. K. Rine in Stratford.

(By telegraph to the MERCURY.)

STRATFORD, April 26.—The Court room was densely crowded to-day to listen to the trial of the temperance lecturer, D. I. K. Rine, for indecently assaulting a young girl named Eliza Gibling. Mr. Hardy, Q.C., appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. C. S. Jones and Mr. Mossop for the defence.

Mr. J. C. Hurst was the first witness called, said—He had been a dry goods merchant in the town; Rine came to his house on the 13th or 14th of March last; offered to take him to the house; remained over night with witness; left him in bed in the morning, and witness went to look after his business; returned to the house at 11 o'clock; Rine, King, and the Secretary stayed to dinner; the girl told witness of what had occurred between Rine and herself; Rine had gone away to Mitchell; witness wrote to him; he was arrested and brought back; he came to witness' house and offered to make an apology; he said he had been guilty of an offence, but that no sin had been committed; Mr. Flagg who accompanied him told prisoner not to say anything to commit himself; witness felt indignant that prisoner had been guilty of such a gross breach of hospitality; prisoner's letter of apology was then read.

After the reading of the letter of apology, which we have already published, Mr. Hurst's examination was continued, after which the girl Gibling was examined. The evidence of both was substantially the same as we have already published.

Fox and the Quakers.

The Rev. T. W. Handford, of Toronto, lectured to a very large audience in Knox Church on Thursday night, on "George Fox and the Quakers." The lecture was given under the auspicies of the Ladies Christian Temperance Club. The Rev. J. C. Smith, in the absence of the Rev. Mr. Ball, occupied the chair, and after singing and prayer by the Rev. Dr. Wardrope, he introduced the lecturer, who held the audience spell bound for about two hours. In his introduction he sketched the times in which George Fox was born—the peculiar position he occupied—and the influence he and his followers exerted on the religious thought of the day. Reference was made to Fox's parentage, to his position, to his earnest yearnings for the truth, and to the stand he took when his settled convictions had crystalized themselves into shape. The results of his agitation both in England and America were faithfully pourtrayed, and the ultimate and far-reaching results of his work were elegantly described. All sorts of charges were brought against him. He was said to be insane. He was imprisoned because of his peculiar views. He suffered for religion. He was ridiculed on account of the peculiar fashions of the Quakers, and in connection with this matter the lecturer indulged in some very satirical remarks on the silly and senseless fashions of the day, which elicited great applause. He concluded with a most eloquent defence of the Quakers. He showed that in every great work for the amelioration of mankind they occupied the foremost place in the struggle. In the great work of the emancipation of the negroes, such men as Clarkson, Wilberforce, Buxton and others took a prominent part. In prison reform John Howard and Elizabeth Fry set the example to the world. In the great agitation for the repeal of the corn laws, for removing the tax on the bread of the people, and taking the sting out of protection. Mr. John Bright and his Quaker colleagues occupied the foremost position. In morals, in manners, in purity of life, the Quakers stood pre-eminent, and their influence and example had been far-reaching and of vital importance.

The lecture was listened to throughout with the deepest attention, and the applause was frequent and cordial. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was moved to Mr. Handford by Rev. Dr. Davidson, seconded by Rev. Mr. Howie, and carried unanimously.

Captain Burton has returned from his expedition of exploration in the land of Midian, bringing with him twenty-five tons of specimen ores—gold, silver, copper, tin, and lead. He also found three sulphur centres, three turquoise mines, and extensive deposits of gypsum, saltpetre, and rock-salt. He now goes to England to arrange for the working of the mines for the Khedive.

MASONIC HALL COMPANY.—At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the above Company the report of the directors was adopted, which showed the finances to be in a very healthy and prosperous state. The following directors were then elected:—Messrs. A. B. Petrie, John Inglis, T. Y. Greet, D. Kennedy, H. Walker, S. R. Moffatt, and Chas. Pettiford. The auditors appointed were Messrs. Wm. Tytler and Jas. S. Speirs. The officers will be elected at a meeting of the directors to be held this evening.

SURVEY IN MUSKOKA.—We are glad to learn that Mr. J. K. McLean, of Mount Forest, son of Mr. McLean, Collector of Inland Revenue, Guelph, has been instructed by the Ontario Government to survey Baxter Township, in Muskoka, lying between the Severn River and the Georgian Bay. Mr. McLean has already surveyed one township in Muskoka, and the fact that the Government has entrusted him with the survey of another one shows that they have the utmost confidence in his ability.

THE UNKNOWN DEAD.—Nothing so far has transpired which would lead to the identity of the man killed on the Great Western track on Tuesday evening. The following are the particulars in regard to his appearance:—The deceased was about sixty years of age, his hair quite grey; he had a carpet bag in which which were a guernsey jacket, some socks and a complete apparatus for shaving. A handkerchief which was found in his pocket bore the name "Walls" without any initials. There was also some $3 or $4 in silver in one of his pockets. His dress was that of a hard working farmer or laborer.

Town By-laws

MR. EDITOR,—Surely the Council should pursue some uniform course in reference to its own By-laws, either by enforcing them uniformly or repealing them altogether. That a fine of fifty cents on each cow running at large is only occasionally enforced, and even when it is, has so little effect that some people in town daily turn out their cows on the streets, or drive them to the outskirts for grazing on the road sides, the trees, or their neighbor's land. I was glad to see you so frequently urge the proper enforcement of the By-law and increase of fine, but all efforts either by way of advice or complaint, seems to have little effect.

But, what shall I say in reference to signs and verandahs obstructing on streets? Last year they were all ordered to be taken down, and the more conscientious obeyed the order, whilst many of those who defied the orders and the law are yet enjoying any benefits that may arrive therefrom; and if it be wrong to continue up siga-board and other projections, how much more so to erect them, as was done last fall by some of those who then occupied seats at the Council Board!

Through you, I would ask the Council to rescind or enforce their By-laws, without fear, favor or affection, and they will secure the respect of the law-abiding.

AN ON-LOOKER.

NORTH HURON REFORM CONVENTION.—The Reform Convention of the North Riding of Huron was held at Wingham on Thursday. Every municipality was well represented, some 200 delegates being present. Messrs. Leckie, of Brussels, A. M. Ross, M.P.P., M. C. Cameron, Q.C., of Goderich, and Dr. Sloan, of Blyth, were nominated. The first three named gentlemen retired in favour of Dr. Sloan, who was unanimously elected standard-bearer. There is every reason to believe that the Doctor will redeem the riding at the next election. The following were elected office-bears for the ensuing year:—Peter Fisher, President; A. L. Gibson, First Vice-President; Wm. Mallough, Second Vice President; J. A. Morton, Secretary; Robert Currrie, Treasurer,

Convocation of Queen's University.

Honorary Degree Conferred on a Guelph Minister.

The closing exercises in connection with Queen's University, Kingston, took place on Tuesday and Wednesday, and were of a very interesting character. On Wednesday the annual Convocation was held, Principal Grant presiding, when the prizes and certificates of merit were distributed, and the scholarships awarded to the successful competitors.

The honorary degree of D. D. was then conferred on the following gentlemen:—Rev. James C. Baxter, Montreal; Rev. Wm. Fraser, Bondhead; Rev. Robt. Sedgewick, Musquodoboit, N. B.; Rev. Thomas Wardrope, Guelph.

When the honorary degrees had been conferred, Principal Grant expressed the hope that, following the example of Dr. Caven in previous and similar occasions, Dr. Wardrope would address a few words to Convocation.

In reply, Dr. Wardrope said:—Principal Grant, Professors and Members of the Senate, I thank you for the honor which you have conferred upon me. While you are good enough to place it on other grounds, I regard it as a kindly recognition of my early relations to the College and the Preparatory School, as student in the one and teacher in the other. I prize it especially in consideration of the source whence it comes. And it shall be my aim to show myself not unworthy of the confidence which you have reposed in me, and of the place which you have generously assigned me among the graduates of the University. I feel as if I had, in a sense, a right to be here. I do not mean a right to the degree which I have received, but I mean that I ought to feel at home among the graduates and students of the University, inasmuch as I, like them, claim "Queen's" as my Alma Mater. It will not be thought a strange thing if I, as one of the earliest students of the University, enrolled on its opening day, should embrace this opportunity of expressing my thankfulness in view of the work which it has accomplished, and my warm anticipation of a still wider and grander career of usefulness for it in days to come.

Were it not for the fear of being wearisome to you, I could tell you something about the opening of the College, and something also about the anxieties and difficulties of the students before they could reach the College in those early days. In 1841, with a few other young men, I was looking forward to the work of the ministry. I was wondering how my College curriculum, begun in Edinburgh, but interrupted by the emigration of my parents to Canada, was ever to be completed. A return to Scotland for such a purpose, or even a sojourn in Princeton or some other American college was in those days almost too formidable a thing to be undertaken. Just then Dr. Bayne, the eminent and honored minister of Galt, came to preach in the log church in which I was wont to worship. It was on a week day; and the special object of the sermon was to excite an interest in a Presbyterian College about to be established in Kingston. It was a sermon of power. The text was "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." Not only the truths which he enforced, but some of his own words and sentences, I remember now. I listened with intense interest, and resolved that, should the college ever be organized, I should be there, God helping me, on the very day of its opening.

The College was organised, measures were adopted for the opening of the classes, and intending students and others interested were duly notified. But navigation was not open, there were no railroads then, and like some others who would have gladly been in Kingston, I was 230 miles distanct from it. But when there is a will it has often been said there is a way, and so we found it to be. Three of us, in preference to taking any stage, engaged a friend to drive us down in his waggon, our trunks forming the seats. In five days and a half, averaging over forty miles a day with the same team, we reached Kingston. But arriving we knew not whither to turn or to whom to apply. There were in those days no Dr. Reids or Mr. Croils, cyclopedias of ecclesiastical intelligence, although there were men, all honor to their memories, ready to speed and to be spent for the church which they so greatly loved. Walking along the street, we saw a sign "Donald Christie." Now said I to my friends, if there is a Presbyterian College here, we cannot fail to get information about it from a man with a name like that. To him we applied, and he said "I could tell you something about it, but I will send you at once to a man who can tell you everything about it that you need to know. Go to Alexander Pringle, at the Court House, and he will tell you what you ought to do. Him we found conversant with the whole matter, and willing to help us to the utmost of his power.

The first day was the Sabbath, and we attended public worship in St. Andrew's Church, where, for the first time, we saw and heard Dr. Machar whose name will ever be revered by the students of his day, a man who never ceased to be loved and esteemed by those who left the Established Church in 1844 as well as by those who remained.

I could tell you something about the opening of the college in the beginning of the week, in the little white frame house on Grave st., (now Colborne st.,) about the matriculation examinations, about the formation of the classes, about the class rooms as large, or as small, as ordinary bed rooms.

I could tell you how, at the opening, there was only one who, from his knowledge of Hebrew and Exegetics, could be placed in "Senior Theology." That was Geo. Bell, now Dr. Bell, whose high attainments are so well known to many of the students here. I could tell you about him alone forming the whole Senior Theological Class of that session, and about Principal Liddell, lecturing to him alone, diminishing neither the number nor the length of the lectures on account of his being the sole hearer.

I could tell you how, at a subsequent time, I delivered a Latin sermon, preceded too by a Latin prayer, (part of college work), from the old high pulpit of St. Andrew's church, with Principal Liddell and four or five students for an audience.

And I could tell you of many other such things. You will not infer that to us, in those days, there was any incongruity apparent in them. We were in earnest about our work, and our teachers. Principal Liddell and Professor Campbell (afterwards Principal Campbell of Aberdeen) were men who, by their ability commanded our respect and by their excellent qualities of head and heart, secured and retained our esteem and affection. It will be well for all the students if they give—and I hope they do—to their Professors now, the respect and love that we accorded to our Professors then.

To the graduating class I take the liberty of endorsing what has been so well said by the Principal. Quit yourselves like men; be loyal and true, true to yourselves, true to your University, above all true to your Lord and King. Be faithful unto death, so that by His grace you may receive a crown of life.

President Grant then closed the proceedings with an address, in which he referred to the wants of the College, and to the cheering prospect before them. Before the audience was dismissed it was announced that next year six gold medals, one for each department, would be offered, instead of three, as at present.

A Needed Reform.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

DEAR SIR,—Our vegetable market—I mean that "beautiful" shed provided by the authorities for the accommodation of outside butchers, fish dealers, market gardeners, &c.,—has lately been almost deserted, and the "scrimage" which used to take place there every Saturday morning is a thing of the past. The people that did business there in days of yore have moved over to the front of the butter and egg cellar, and line the way into our Town Hall. Even the Palace of Justice is not exempted. Imagine a candidate for $5 and costs, or ten days in jail, being led through a via dolorosa lined with patent medicine vendors and baskets of spinach, beets, parsnips and spring onions.

Now, Mr. Editor, I am of opinion that some improvement ought to be made, not only in the shed accommodation, but that the Town Hall should be left accessible to the public. Let the City Fathers see to it.

Yours, &c.,
RATEPAYER.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Erin Considers it a Delusion and a Snare

On Thursday evening a meeting of the electors of Erin was held in Clark's hall, Erin Village, called by those desirous of establishing a branch of the National League. The hall was well filled with those desirous of hearing both sides of the question.

Much speaking was indulged in and the meeting did not break up until nearly one o'clock in the morning.

The meeting opened by the appointment of Mr. Duncan MacMillan chairman.

Mr. W. H. Fraser, Secretary of the League for the Dominion, was first introduced, After reading the declaration of the League instituted on the 27th of March in Hamilton, the speaker went on to state that politicians for the past twenty-five years had only one idea—to retain power, and had shown altogether little or no patriotism. The League established in Hamilton condemned the policy of the present Government as they believed it detrimental to the interests of the country. He held that while the trade of Canada had of late years been decreasing with England, with the United States it had been increasing. Dealing with the manufacturing interests of Canada, he stated that the United States was now exporting largely into Canada articles that were on the free list. Americans could dispose of their surplus stock here much under their usual prices. This had the effect of closing our workshops and depriving artizans of employment. As a home market was the most profitable it necessarily followed that when artizans left the country it lessened the home demand and the agricultural products instead of being consumed had to be exported. Reference was made to the furniture trade. Not long ago an American firm sold $12,000 worth of furniture, the manufacturer losing thereon $1,000. Some say "We have the bargains." But those who say this forget that the money is taken out of the country instead of being kept here, if the goods had been manufactured by Canadians. He claimed that the present tariff had closed the Burlington glass works at Hamilton on account of the Americans slaughtering their goods. In speaking of smelting works the speaker stated that the only furnace in operation was at Londonderry, N. S., but there was no doubt that within a short time it would be closed, as the Americans brought their iron into the country without paying duty and were underselling Canadian iron at every point. The sugar trade was dealt with in the old style. He held that every manufactory should be fostered, and those who do not say so are partizans, although they must, in the bottom of their heart believe in protection. The speaker spoke highly of the general policy of the Local Government. He held that it was nonsense to say that the Tories originated the National Policy question, as it was no one else than the great Wm. Lyon McKenzie, and he read a letter supposed to be written by him at one time to Lord Goderich in support of the assertion.

Mr. E. F. B. Johnston was next called on. He referred to the glamour that appeared to be thrown around this so-called National Policy. The previous speaker had not informed any person present what the proposed policy was, and they evidently did not intend any one to understand it other than that it was to assist them to get into power. The speaker held that he was in favor of a national policy—in fact every person was. He held that the basis of the movement at present being agitated was contained in an amendment moved by Sir John Macdonald. What the speaker believed to be a true national policy was to so frame a tariff as not to benefit one part of the country to the detriment of another, but to prove beneficial to all portions of it. It was for all who study their own interests to buy in the cheapest market and sell in the dearest. To benefit one particular class by a protective tariff would be to tax all other. If twenty-five per cent. is put on sewing machines or organs, and prices are enhanced thereby, there is nothing surer than that the consumer must pay the extra charge. In referring to the trade of England the speaker showed by figures that the wealth of that country had largely increased under free trade. Taking the aggregate, England had under Free Trade increased from 1860 to 1875 as to imports £163,408,000, and as to exports £75,037,000 while in protected America during the same period, commerce and trade were almost at a stand still, the increase being only £32,930,881. According to the National Policy advocates, England is fast becoming bankrupt. This does not agree with the fact there is more money in England than they need, and the Bank of England about a year ago refused to allow interests on deposits, money being so plentiful. The speaker also showed the great increase in English shipping. As to how farmers were affected under the present tariff it was shown that the wheat imported into this country during the past two years was bought at the average price of $1.03, while that sold realized $1.13 per bushel. This looked very much like a good bargain. The imports and exports of other cereals and stock were given, and it was clearly shown, amidst applause, that the Canadian farmers were the ones that were benefited. He held it an established principle that where the exports exceeded the imports, a duty on goods coming into the country was no benefit to the people at large. In sewing machines he quoted from the returns ending 1st February, 1878, that we exported 26,686, and imported only 5,281. Horses for the same period imported, 1,043, exported 8,678. Horned cattle—imports, 11,440, including those slaughtered in bond; exported 27,375. So far as sheep are concerned, we had the extraordinary spectacle of exporting 235,011 from this country, and importing only 54 to Quebec, and one to Ontario! In reference to the barley and corn question, the speaker clearly showed that for barley we received on an average, for five years past, 91 cents per bushel; for oats, 43 cents per bushel; and for peas, 86 cents per bushel. Now, we imported an equal substitute in corn, for which we paid only 55 cents per bushel. Does this look like an injury to farmers? Taking the total, one year with another, we found the result to be in every instance in favour of our own country. It was not for any person to take a single instance in the trade in agricultural products but the whole should be aggregated. In dealing with the manufacturing interests, the speaker held that it was strange —very strange indeed—that Canadian manufacturers should be able to compete in the markets of the world with the Americans, and successfully too, and not hold their own in Canada, when Americans had to pay 17½ per cent. duty, freight, insurance, &c., in order to be able to sell here. Agricultural implement manufacturers did not ask for protection, but were satisfied with the present tariff, and could defy the Americans to compete with them too. Why cannot our sewing machine and organ manufacturers do the same thing? To show what a revulsion of feeling had taken place in the House on agricultural protection, the speaker gave the vote on several motions brought up in the House on this question, and the figures on the various votes were given. Dr. Orton's resolution of last year came within 39 votes of carrying—74 voting for and 113 against. Mr. Brown, of West Hastings, moved for an imposition of a duty on wheat and flour coming into Canada, and it was voted down by 148 to 28. In referring to the equality which should exist between the different Provinces and in order that the constitutional basis of Confederation should not be disturbed, it was neither just, nor fair, nor politic to tax the Nova Scotians for the benefit of Ontario, nor sacrifice the interests of British Columbia for those of Quebec. Other points were taken up by the speaker and explained in a clear straightforward manner, which went clearly to show how hollow the so-called National Policy was..

Mr. Wm. Bathgate held that there could be no doubt but what there was a serious depression in the commercial affairs of the country. He took issue with those who stated that protection would not benefit the farmers. When millers could not sell their flour in the maritime markets, owing to a glut in New York, and consequent reduction in price of flour, a miller was obliged to hold his flour over until such a time as the demand warranted, and the consequence was that that individual would not pay as much to the farmer as he otherwise would, had he not to enter into unfair competition with New York. The cereal question was dealt with, the speaker holding that a certain duty put on grain would increase the price of grain just that much. If a duty of ten cents per bushel had been on oats, during the past season the farmers in this neighborhood would have been paid ten cents per bushel more than they received. Free traders stated that "National Policy" was a cry got up by manufacturers for the purpose of robbing the farmers. This was not so. In 1877 as large a number as 5,000 members of Granges petitioned the Government for protection, to ensure the home market for home producers. This did not look much like a manufacturer's dodge. There is no encouragement for any person to start manufactories at the present time, when the Americans have half our market. Free traders state that manufacturers have made money. Well, if a few have, it is a very small amount on the original investment, and if any of them wanted to sell, where could they find a purchaser. In referring again to the wheat market, he held that Mr. Goldie was his authority that if the Liverpool market was to rule our grain trade, the price of wheat would be lower than it is now. The question was dealt with very exhaustively by the speaker.

Mr. Chas. Clarke, M.P.P., on assuming the floor, explained that while he was pleased to meet many of his old friends on such an occasion, he was sorry that this great League of manufacturers had not sent some person as a representative to explain to the electors what was really proposed to be done. Mr. Fraser had claimed antiquity for the scheme, and went as far back as William Lyon McKenzie for evidence. It was quite true that about 1871 a national policy was discussed in the House, and it was urged that the manufacturer and farmer needed protection. The policy then was to prevent the introduction of flour, wheat, and other grains. Sir Francis Hincks was then Finance Minister in Sir John Macdonald's Government. Mr. Hincks, however, was a free trader, and is now. Because of having an opinion of his own at the present time, the Conservative newspapers try to make out that the old gentleman is in his dotage. At the time mentioned a duty of 25 cents a barrel was put on flour, four cents a bushel on wheat, and 3 cents on other grains, and 50 cents a ton on coal. The result of this was not to keep out American grain, but quite as much was brought into this country as before, but instead of a duty being paid, it was brought in in bond, and after being ground was shipped back again, and the revenue so derived was very small — some $26,000 on seven millions of bushels brought in. The fifty cents a ton on coal, although enhancing the value to that amount, did not benefit the Nova Scotians any, as the coal from that Province was soft and of an inferior quality to that used here. This tariff was tried for one year, when Mr. Hincks saw that it was positively injurious instead of a benefit, and he abandoned the scheme. The division in the House was 110 to 43 for the repeal of the duties. This showed how the farmers had found protection in 1871, and they might rely on it that if a duty was again put on, it would have to be repealed at an early date. Is was not a good policy, nor was it wise. It was therefore to the interests of the farmer to have nothing to do with causing such a duty to be imposed, as those in favor of the National League would have them believe. This League was not by any manner of means a band of patriots. They were composed of a class, however, who just wanted back to power those who had been so signally defeated at the last general elections. Although there was a great depression in trade it would not benefit affairs any by discarding the present Government and reinstating what had been. Mr. Fraser stated that for twenty-five years there had been too much politics in the country and too little patriotism. This was true; but who was in power during the time that such was the case. Was it not the same man that the National League now wanted back to power? Was it not the same party who had landed this country into scandals and disgraces, almost unparalleled in the history of any country? When Mr. Fraser stated that there had been too little patriotism from his own political friends, who were now the Opposition, he spoke words of truth. The Protectionists state almost on every opportunity that the great bulk of agricultural produce was admitted free. They would be correct if they would say one half. In answer to Mr. Fraser's remarks about the Burlington Glass Works the speaker stated that they had been closed, but were not now, and the probability was they would not have been if the parties who had gone into the business had known anything about it. Men have to pay for experience, and if their purse is not long enough to hold out they cannot blame any person for their failing. While the advocates of the National League talk incessantly about manufacturers failing in business, they forget to say anything about those who are prospering. Why not talk of Mr. McCrae's woolen factory in Guelph? That is a success. It could hardly be otherwise with a practical shrewd man at the head of the business. If Mr. McCrae did not understand his business it would not be strange if he did not succeed. Why are not Gurney, of Hamilton, Watson, of Ayr, Noxon, of Ingersoll, Bell, Raymond and others spoken of. It is strange indeed that those men are not held up as examples of what the manufacturers are coming to. Large companies, with officers drawing salaries, and great waste going on all the time, cannot very well stand, and when they fail the cry is that they have not enough protection. The speaker took up the imports and exports of grain and showed clearly and forcibly that the present tariff was in every way adapted to the best interests of the farmer. In concluding a warning was given to the farmers not to be hoodwinked by a League of manufacturers as they were only required to be used, not to be benefited. In answer to Mr. Bathgate's oft-told tale that the Chicago market ruled the price of grain, the speaker quoted from a speech made a couple of years ago by Mr. Lyman, a prominent manufacturer. He said, "They should let the Government know just exactly what they wanted, and not to be beating about the bushes." He thought they should ask the Government to put the same duty on American goods which the American Government put on ours. The latter might retaliate by imposing a little higher duty on our grain, but that would not matter much, as it was the English market which ruled the prices of grain throughout the world." This was correct, as it was the Liverpool market alone that fixed the price of grain in Canada as well as elsewhere.

Mr. A. W. Wright followed. He stated that free traders were now beginning to just find out that a depression really existed. Some time ago they were not quite so willing to state that such was the case, but the returns for failures show that the amount of insolvent liabilities during the past six months had largely increased. In answer to a question put, the speaker stated that the Americans were resolved to sink any amount of money in order to crush out the Canadian manufacturers so as to secure the market for themselves. A manufacturer was insane to keep running his shops unless he had some hopes of protection from the Government. In referring to agricultural implements the speaker stated that the reason the Americans did not send implements in here was because they were not allowed to after having sold the patents to Canadian manufacturers. The speaker dwelt largely upon the theme of protection as he has done before and which has already been published. He made some very laughable hits at Mr. Clarke and Mr. Johnston. In referring to the trade of Great Britain the speaker stated that the balance of trade in 1845 amounted to £70,000,000, this was up to the time of free trade and while the industries of the country were protected, and now there was the large sum of about £74,500,000 of a deficiency. This looked like prosperity under free trade, did it not? It was just the reverse.

A voice, ironically—Poor old Britain, she must be bankrupt.

Mr. Wright continued, and held that in a very few years neither Canada nor the United States could count upon England as a market for wheat, inasmuch as the cheap labor in India and Egypt would allow that cereal to be sold at such a very low price. The only way to face it is to build up manufactories and a home market. In concluding the speaker stated that there might be various kind of traitors in a country, but the worst and most contemptible were those who were not in favor of protection. In urging upon those present to join the League about to be started he stated that they would have only a fee of twenty-five cents to pay, and would be supplied with pamphlets on the question.

A voice—Will you send us Charlton's speech?

Mr. Wright—Well, we will not send pamphlets around South Wellington at the expense of the country the same as its member has done.

Mr. Clarke—I received a pamphlet from Dr. Orton, and it was franked. There is nothing wrong in that.

Mr. Wright—I want to see that paper to be satisfied that you got one.

Mr. Clarke stated that he was not in the habit of having his veracity questioned in such a manner. He would, however, show the pamphlet, as he happened to have it with him. After securing the document from his papers he remarked that he did not care about allowing his property to be placed in the hands of one who had referred to him so unfairly.

The chairman then received the pamphlet and read the title page. It was a copy of Mr. Colby's speech, and was endorsed with "Dr. Orton's compliments."

Mr. Wright made some explanations about receiving the same pamphlet, but stated that it had a one cent stamp on it, and intimated that perhaps Mr. Clarke's had been so stamped too. He then, evidently in a passion, threw the document at Mr. Clarke's head.

After Mr. Wright had concluded speaking, he was charged with the assault, but he denied having done so.

The meeting broke up with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

The Oustic Meeting.

On Thursday evening a meeting of electors called by the National League, was held in the Temperance Hall, Oustic. The room was filled. Mr. John McKerlie was appointed chairman, and addresses were delivered by Mr. T. Carter and Alex. Loghrin on behalf of the Manufacturers' League, and by Messrs. A. Dunbar and John Rea, Warden of the County, in opposition. Thos. Carter expressed himself as opposed to allowing manufacturers a higher protection than they had at the present time—17½ per cent., but wanted agricultural products accorded protection. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Loghrin appealed to all farmers who wished to see the country prosper, to remain and join the League. The farmers, however, evidently knowing as much about the question as the exhorter, could not be hoodwinked, as only about six remained, and half of those had previously become identified with the League.

Fire in Cobourg.

Three Firemen Killed and one Fatally Injured.

A fire broke out in Cobourg on Thursday morning about 2 o'clock, in the new brick building known as the Windsor Hotel, on Division street. The fire had got such headway before it was discovered that it was found impossible to save the building. The firemen worked away until five o'clock, and one engine had gone home; but the steam fire-engine was still working, when the front wall fell outwards, and buried five or six firemen in the ruins. Three of them were killed instantly, and one is now lying at the point of death. The names of those killed are:—Charles Patterson, James Forrest, and George Stevenson. The latter leaves a wife and two children. Several other firemen were injured more or less severely.

The lamentable death of the firemen has cast a gloom over the town, and when the bodies were rescued out of the ruins strong men wept in sympathy with the bereaved families.

The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, the hotel having been unoccupied for several days. The Mayor has made a requisition for an inquest. The injured man Grieves is still alive, but very low.

The Town Council, at a special meeting Thursday afternoon, passed a resolution authorizing the offer of a reward of $500 for such information as will lead to the conviction of the incendiary.

Harold the Outlaw,

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

The relations between the prisoners and their two jailors, Joe and mother Barnacle, were of a somewhat passive character. They held little intercourse with them, treated them with cold, civil indifference, gave them little trouble in the way of attendance, and kept themselves out of their way as much as possible—an attitude which the dwarf and his large-limbed wife accepted without resentment. Their moral perception was not so obtuse as to make them blind to the fact that the two girls of whose cruel imprisonment they were the agents, had no cause to show them goodwill. They therefore did not expect any cordial feeling to subsist between them.

At the end of three months an addition was made to the inhabitants of the island by the arrival of a man who was to take up his abode there. He came with Colston, when the latter made one of his periodical visits. The meaning or object of this man's presence was not clear. There was no function for him to discharge, Joe and Mother Barnacle being quite able to perform all necessary work. He did, indeed, assist Joe in the garden, and took part in what other work was being performed, except going upon the loch with the boat. Lizzie and Myra noticed that he never accompanied Joe when the latter had occasion to cross to the main land, and that at all times he seemed to wish to keep himself secluded from observation. Neither his looks nor his behavior were prepossessing. He had a skulking, hand-dog aspect, and seemed to live under some fearful apprehension. This was particularly noticeable on his first arrival, but in a week or two he gained more assurance, and was like a man relieved by a feeling of safety.

Lizzie was intensely interested in this man on his first appearance. She experienced a thrill of hope, for she supposed he might be a secret agent sent by Harold to effect her rescue. She therefore eagerly sought to give him a private interview, and contrived to throw herself in his way when he was by himself. But he showed no sign of a desire to speak to her, and this raised hope gradually died away in her bosom.

Ere long it was succeeded by a very different feeling. One day as she was sauntering by the wayside of the garden wall she heard Joe call out within—

"Here, Dougal—Dougal M'Callum, I say—come and give me a lift with this barrow."

The name struck terror to her heart. She had heard it frequently from the lips of Harold as the name of Gilmour Logan's most devoted agent and tool. He must have come there as an additional guard upon her. From that moment she spurned him as her deadly foe, and hastened, pale and trembling, to acquaint Myra with the discovery she had made.

"Oh, he has been sent to take away my child!" she cried in wild distraction, and for several days could not be prevailed on to quit her room or let Alfred out of her sight.

Myra could not readily allay the tumult of fear which had thus been produced. Her own bitter experience gave too great colour to the supposition to allow her easily to set it aside, and the two girls watched every movement of Dougal with consuming anxiety.

Nothing occurred to justify their fear. Dougal took no special notice of either of them. His sleeping-place was in the lower part of the building, and he never sought to ascend to the higher region where their rooms were situated. Moreover he had not the appearance of one who had come on such treacherous business, and Joe did not treat him with too much consideration, but addressed him in his harshest manner, as if his presence was disagreeable and unwelcome. So in time Lizzie's fearful apprehension was lessened, and she and Myra resumed their accustomed walks over the island, Alfred of course being with them whenever they stirred abroad.

It was now the height of summer, and the magnificence of the year lay in glorious beauty upon the Highland landscape. The heather on the higher slopes of the hills had changed its russet hue of early spring to a tender green, which had deepened and darkened, and would soon burst forth in August's purple glory. The white patches of snow had dwindled away in the deep clefts and sunless gorges. The whins and broom had spread a mantle of golden effulgence on the uplands; the trees had clad themselves in voluptuous foliage; the gloomy clouds had rolled away to their northern home of perpetual storms, and in their stead soft curtains of fleecy whitness wreathed the mountains' brows, till the scars thereon were veiled in beauty, or majestically shrouded in the mists which rose up, like Nature's incense, to the mighty heaven. These magical changes from rugged sternness to gentle loveliness, were all reflected in the placid lake, made deeply blue by the cerulean sky, or mildly rippled by the summer winds, which kissed it into smiles.

The little island, too, had its full share of the wonderous and benificent change. Waves of balmy air floated too and fro full of the hum of happy insect life; larks soared and sung in the sunny lift; wild flowers bloomed profusely on every brae; and all the bushes were o'erspread with clustering blossoms of white and red, till the fragrant, joyous atmosphere seemed to sigh with the fulness of delight.

The two prisoners, as they wandered day by day amid this outpoured wealth from summer's bounteous hand, were not insensible to the charms which surrounded them. The pleasant outward influences stole in upon the sadness of their lot, and sometimes for an entire day they would remain at some favorite spot till beguiled into happiness and contentment which made them for the time almost forget their untoward condition.

To little Alfred the pleasure and gladness were without alloy. In the guileless innocence of infancy he knew nothing of the sorrow which shadowed the hearts of his mother and her friend, and his shouts of glee, as he rolled among the grass and plucked the bright gowans which garnished the ground, went far to chase that shadow away. The little fellow's rosy face, ever wearing a smile, and often dimpled with joyous laughter, was a sight not to be resisted, and Lizzie and Myra would snatch him by turns, and kiss his ruby lips till the rapture of love merged in a shower of tears at the recollection of all the wrong which he unconsciously sustained, and at thoughts of the cruelty which might yet be inflicted on him. But what knew he of all this that it should dim the beauty of his sun-browned face, or lessen the brightness of his sparkling eyes? No care, no fear had he, and away he rolled among the flowers in an ecstasy of childish glee.

One day towards the end of July he came on a rich treat in the form of a cluster of small green berries, which grew on a low bush near where they were seated, and forthwith he set himself to pick them with great assiduity. He essayed to eat one or two, but fortunately their excessive sourness prevented that perhaps dangerous experiment from being practised to any great extent. The pretty shape and bright green colour of the berries were, however, sufficient to fascinate him, and he picked them off one by one till he had quite a heap laid on his little lap.

For a time his doings were unnoticed by his mother and Myra, who chanced to be conversing on the theme which never failed to absorb them—the hopeless character of their imprisonment. Soon, however, the child's unwonted silence drew Lizzie's attention, and no sooner did she perceive what he was doing than she started up and ran to him in great affright.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Little Hope of the Preservation of Peace.

THE MUSSULMAN INSURRECTION.

LONDON, April 25.

The growing belief in the failure of mediation in the Eastern troubles continue to depress the stock markets. There has been a general fall in prices. Russian securities are down one per cent.

A letter in the Vienna Politische Correspondenz from Tchataldj, thirty miles northwest of Constantinople, says two thousand Russian sappers and eight thousand infantry are there, turning and completing the lines thrown up by the Turks.

The Russians have established a telegraph line between San Stefano and St. George, which is a few miles north, and are now constructing roads.

A Bucharest special says:—A circular from the Minister of the Interior informs the Prefects that every facility for transport and lodging must be granted to the Russians, but only during their march to their halting places. The circular enjoins on the Prefects to preserve tranquility.

The Mussulman revolt in Bulgaria is rapidly spreading.

The Turkish Seraskierate has received information that the insurrection in Roumelia is spreading. There has been another engagement, in which thirty officers, presumably Russians, have been placed hors de combat.

A later St. Petersburg despatch says:—Gortschakoff is much better. The fever has disappeared, and he is now only suffering from weakness.

An Athens despatch says:—The British consuls are still unsuccessful in their negotiations for an armistice between the Turks and insurgents of Armyro. The Turks have been defeated by the insurgents near Karditza.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that a new formula has been invented, which, it is thought, will be more acceptable, namely, that the Powers meet to consider the Treaties of 1856 and 1871 in relation to the Treaty of San Stefano. It is said that Bismarck is annoyed by this quibbling.

A Pera correspondent says:—The principal difficulty with regard to the withdrawal from Constantinople is that England is disinclined to relinquish command of the Dardanelles because Russia wishes the lines of Tchataldja to remain a neutral zone.

Three thousand prisoners of war from Bucharest landed at Constantinople on Wednesday. The return of prisoners from Russia has been postponed until their maintenance is paid for.

A Constantinople special announces that in consequence of the pressure of the Russians the Porte has peremptorily ordered the evacuation of Batoum. It is stated that the peasantry near Batoum and Trebizond are arming against the Russians.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 25.

The Bill respecting the election of members of Parliament was read a third time and passed.

On the motion to go into Committee of Supply, Mr. Mackay (Cape Breton) moved an amendment in favor of a duty of 75c. a ton on coal. He contended that such a duty would develop the coal interests of Nova Scotia and foster interprovincial trade.

Mr. Mitchell opposed the amendment, averring that it was not an honest one.

Mr. Flynn supported the amendment, contending that the coal interest had been treated unfairly in comparison with the agricultural and manufacturing interest.

Mr. McDonald (Cape Breton) spoke in favor of the "national policy" of the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Young pointed out the dangerous character of the motion, inasmuch as it proposed to tax the raw material of many important manufactures.

Dr. Orton supported the motion as a step in the right direction.

Mr. Wood protested in the interests of the manufactures against a proposal to tax bituminous coal.

The debate was continued until 12.40, when a division took place with the following result:—Yeas, 27; Nays, 135; majority 108.

The House went into Committee of Supply, and passed the Mounted Police item.

Story of Dr. Tupper's Goose.

They tell a good story at Ottawa of C. J. Campbell, M. P. for Victoria, vulgarly known as "Dr. Tupper's goose." Mr. Campbell is a perfect curiosity in his way, with broad Highland accent, deaf as a post, but shrewd, like most of his countrymen, and well educated. He talks in a very high key, and when he does talk his gesticulations and his tone are inexpressibly comical. He was in one of the refreshment rooms of the House the other day along with a fellow member—a brother Conservative, who tells the story in an inimitable way—and the conversation turned on the "Cartwright-Phairson" feud. "They tell me, Mr. S.," Mr. Campbell began, "this mon Cartwright has been sayin' some awfu' hard things aboot us Hielanders; he's been teilin' the people that we're a set o' thieves and robbers, that we used to come down on the Southern folk an' steal their black cattle. I tell you it's enough to make a Hielandman's blood boil." And then leaning over to Mr. S. till his lips touched the latter's ear, he added with a voice like the bellow of a bull—"BUT, Mr. S., IT'S TRUE!" We wonder what the "Phairson" will say of this tribute to his "pedantory instincts" by a brother Scot.

The Dublin Nation says of the murdered Earl of Leitrim:—"A portly volume would not contain the record which might be written of the oppressions and cruelties perpetrated by this murdered Earl upon his unfortunate tenantry. He was a scourge to them. He blighted their lives, poisoned their happiness, destroyed their peace, filled their homes with fear and sorrow, broke their hearts with the weight of despair, and roused in some a burning feeling of resentment and desire for vengeance.

A Beautiful Horse.

There is nothing that can contribute so much to render the horse beautiful and elegant, to improve his condition and make him all that is desirable, as "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it has been used by many persons who own valuable carriage and other horses with decided success, and so well pleased are they with it that they always keep it on hand in cases of emergency; it may be given at all times with perfect safety. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

The first approaches of consumption are so insidious that thousands remain unconscious of its presence until it has brought them to the verge of the grave. The immediate use of "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers" upon the first appearance of the cough, pain or soreness of the throat or chest, would generally preclude a fatal result; therefore when you take a cold, use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers," and thus prevent the necessity for taking them in more dangerous complaints. To be obtained of all druggists and county dealers at 25 cents a box.

Baron Lionel de Rothschild turns out to have been the mysterious gentleman who called on the Marquess of Conyngham a year ago, paid $100,000 for his magnificent Sevres china cabinet, and took it away without giving a hint as to his identity or the destination of his purchase.

DR. WM. GRAY'S SPECIFIC MEDICINE

After Taking

Before Taking

The Great English Remedy is especially recommended as an unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhea, Impotency and all diseases that follow as a consequence of Self Abuse as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to INSANITY OR CONSUMPTION and a PREMATURE GRAVE, all of which, as a rule, are first caused by deviating from the path of nature, and over indulgence.

The Specific Medicine is the result of a life study and many years of experience in treating those special diseases. Pamphlet free by mail.

THE MUSSULMAN INSURRECTION.

Russia Prohibits the Shipment of Grain.

Britain Forming a Second Army Corps.

LONDON, April 27.—A Constantinople despatch states that the Mussulman insurgents are approaching Phillipopolis, driving the Bulgarians before them. Adrianople is greatly agitated over outrages committed by insurgents. A number of soldiers have been assassinated in the streets. The public buildings have been carefully guarded. The garrison is preparing to march against the insurgents.

A St. Petersburg despatch says the Russians have prohibited the exportation of cereals and provisions from Bourgas, on the Black Sea, and have levied eight per cent. import duty on same.

LONDON, April 27.—The English Government are arranging the formation of a second army corps, and for raising the corps to full war strength.

An Athens despatch reports the insurrection in Thessaly nearly crushed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 27.—Foreign Ambassadors here have proposed to the Turkish Government the imposition of an increased import duty of 20 per cent., to be levied for the purpose of assisting thousands of refugees now here to return to their homes.

Court of Chancery.

Before His Lordship Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot.

FRIDAY, April 26.

Barker vs. Leeson.—This was a suit brought by the heirs of the late Mrs. Deans, to redeem a lot in Luther, part of which has been surveyed into village lots and is now in the village of Little Toronto. The bill was dismissed against the defendant McDougall, without costs, and a decree was made against the defendant Leeson, allowing the land to be redeemed on payment of the claims against them. G. A. Drew, Q.C., Mr. Roaf and Mr. Kingston, for plaintiff, and those in the same interest with her; Mr. Moss and Mr. Watt for defendants.

Livingston vs. McDonough.—This was a suit brought to set aside a deed of a saw mill property, near Mount Forest, made by James McDonough to Pierce Blenner Hassett, on the ground that it was fraudlent as against the plaintiff and the creditors of McDonough. The defendant's counsel consented to an order being made that the plaintiff's claim, less any set-off there might be, should be paid by the defendants within one month, and in default, the deed should be declared fraudulent. Mr. Cassell and Mr. Watt for plaintiff; Mr. Drew, Q.C., and Mr. Kingston for defendant.

Airth v. Hastings.—The parties to the suit live in Waterloo. Decree granted by consent. Some $1,600 was the amount obtained by the plaintiff.

The cases of Thurman vs. Stanley and Gilmour vs. McLellan, were transferred to Stratford.

McInnes vs. Hood.—This was a suit brought by McInnes, of Hamilton, to set aside a deed made by the defendant Hood, of Listowel, to his wife. As the defendant has gone into insolvency, the case was abated.

Royce vs. Green.—A decree was granted by consent.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIPHTERIA.—Three of my children had Diptheria in its worst form. Skin dry, lips parched, could not swallow. With a feather I applied GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA to the tonsils, rubbed over their throats and chests. Great chunks of stuff came from the throats, the skin became moist, fever left them, and under the Almighty care I attribute their cure to Dr. Giles' Liniment.

EDUCATIONAL SERMONS. — Rev. James Graham, chairman of the London district, will preach in the Dublin street Methodist church, to-morrow morning, from the text "Truth manifested in the light of Revelation." Rev. W. Tindall, of Walkerton, will occupy the pulpit, in the same church the evening service, and preach on the subject of "Christian progression."

VESTRY MEETINGS.—At the meeting in St. James Church, Fergus, Rev. R. C. Carswell, incumbent, Mr. J. G. Armytage and Major Thomas Bate were appointed Churchwardens. The Garafraxa Church, Rev. G. H. Hooper, incumbent, Messrs. John Gowland and David McGowan were appointed Churchwardens.

G.W.R. SWITCH.—For the past day or two there have been a few gentlemen of the G.W.R. in town prospecting for the extension of this long talked of switch into town, and now it depends on the parties owning property along the proposed route to say whether such will become an accomplished fact or not, as in case they are exorbitant in their demands, the probability is the scheme will be abandoned. The switch, which will be a spur from the Great Western, will, if built, leave the track at Suffolk street, cross a corner of the Agricultural Park, and thence around to Goldie's Mills, and down as far as the Eramosa Bridge, where there will be a station. The grade all the way is aremarkable easy one to make.

NATIONAL LEAGUE. — The meeting at Hillsburg, called for the establishment of a branch of the League, was largely attended. Mr. Fraser, the Secretary of the League, who it is said is interested in the agricultural affairs of the country to the extent of $100 per month paid by manufacturers, gave a short address, the main features of which were published in Friday's MERCURY. Mr. A. W. Wright, editor of a small weekly paper in Toronto, also addressed the meeting in favor of establishing a branch of the League—which by the way only costs the members twenty-five cents each. Mr. Hugh Milloy, of Erin, opposed them. When it is said that no resolution was put to the meeting by the League advocates, and no attempt was made to establish a branch, it is unnecessary to state that those itinerant Leaguemen met a reception that was more cooling than refreshing.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.—From a correspondent it is learned that Dr. McKinnon, who is now living in Guelph, was on Friday evening, 19th instant, visited by a number of lady friends, at his old home in Charleston, and made the recipient of a very handsome present, as a token of their esteem for him personally and high appreciation of his valuable services and skill. The doctor was much taken by surprise, and in thanking the friends made a few very appropriate and feeling remarks. His many friends whom he is leaving behind in Charleston feel deeply the loss they have sustained by his departure, and all join heartily in wishing him success and prosperity, and hope that he and Mrs. McKinnon may long live to enjoy the blessings of health.

SHADE TREES.—The Collingwood Enterprise of last week heads an item "Planting Day," and says:—"At the meeting of the Town Council on Tuesday evening last, it was resolved to set apart the first of May in each year as a public holiday, to be called 'planting day,' when every citizen is expected to plant one or more trees on the public street." The idea is a good one. Collingwood has set the example which Guelph and other towns might worthily follow. Everybody knows how much the streets of a town or a city can be beautified by shade trees.

VEGETABLES, of the early variety, are again finding their way back to the outside market. Farmers are busily engaged seeding, which accounts for the small number that were in town to-day.

THE Acton Lodge of Oddfellows gave a concert on Friday evening out of honor to the anniversary of the establishment of Oddfellowship on this continent. Several of the Guelph brethren put in an appearance.

FUNERAL SERMON.—The Rev. Mr. Howie, pastor of Zion Chapel, will preach a special sermon, improving the death of the late Wm. Coulter, on Sunday evening, at half-past six o'clock. All are invited.

ENTERTAINMENT.—The closing meeting of the Young Men's Association of St. Andrew's Church was held in the school room of the church on Friday evening. The chair was taken by the President, J. C. Smith. A very interesting programme was then gone through with. Mr. R. Fyfe was the singer of the evening—his singing of "Jeannie's Bawbee" leaving no improvement to be desired. Mr. E. F. B. Johnston read by request an admirable essay on "The National Poets;" Mr. Thompson recited "Bernardo and Alphonso;" Miss Gordon and the Misses Stephenson and Mr. Wm. Guthrie sang several selections; and Messrs. New and J. Grant gave readings. A debate between Masters Richard Fyfe, jr., and Chase on one side, and Masters Findlay and Robinson on the other, was very interesting, and the subject "Whether Genius or Industry" is the most beneficial to a young man," was decided to be a little better handled by Masters and Higinbotham on the side of Industry. Rev. Dr. Wardrope made a few remarks.

I. O. O. F.—The Oddfellows of Canada and the United States on Friday, celebrated the fifty-ninth anniversary of the establishment of their Order in America. The first subordinate branch of this institution was opened in Baltimore, Maryland, by five English emigrants, on the 26th of April, 1819. It has now about 7,000 lodges, located chiefly in Canada and the States, but also in Peru, Chili, Sandwich Islands, Australia, Germany, Holland, Switzerland and England. The membership of the Order is near half a million. The annual revenue of the various lodges amounts to $4,500,000, while the expenditure for the relief of distressed members was $1,700,000 last year. The history of this Society has been one of continued progress; and its present flourishing condition must be highly gratifying to all who are interested in its operations.

THERE are forty-two inmates at present comfortably clothed, fed and taken care of at the Poor House, from the infant to those who have lived over the alloted span.

HARRISTON.—A. G. Markle, in a few hours raised $200 for Mr. Taylor, who lost so heavily at the late fire.——Belts, helmets, &c., are to be procured by the Council for the fire company.——The amount of money received and paid out by the Village Treasurer, for all purposes, was $15,888.11, being $1,660.87 more than the Township of Minto collected during the same time.——A. Meiklejohn donated a ten dollar bill to the fire company on Thursday night, for their prompt turn-out at the fire. At a meeting of the company subsequently held, a vote of thanks was tendered to that gentleman. A motion was also carried, that the members of the Company deeply sympathize with Mr. Welte in his great loss, and wish to tender to him their sincere thanks for the liberal donation made to them on the morning of the fire; but owing to the very heavy loss sustained by him, beg to decline the acceptance of it.——The Tribune says that Mr. Taylor has already cleared away the ruins of his old building, and is now preparing to build a brick block, which will present a much more pleasing appearance than the old one. Mr. Welte has purchased from Mr. Moore, three-quarters of an acre of land, lying on the river bank, between Lambert & Strong and the Guelph Barrel factory, upon which he will at once proceed with the erection of a new brick factory.——The Sabbath School anniversary in connection with the Methodist Church, held on Friday evening last, turned out a complete success. The programme in every respect was highly interesting.

D. I. K. RINE NOT GUILTY.—Mr. D. I. K. Rine's trial on charges of indecent assault and common assault took place at Stratford on Friday. After the Crown had dropped the first count, and judge charged that they were not there to try the propriety of Mr. Rine's conduct in the house of his host, but to investigate an alleged violation of the law of the land. He deemed Mr. Hurst's conduct toward Mr. Rine inexplicable in the light of his subsequent zeal, and said that the case seemed to have been prompted not by the girl but by others. The girl had not seemed to take the matter very seriously, and what might be thought of Mr. Rine's conduct the assault did not seem to bear a serious aspect. He instructed the jury to give the accused the benefit of any reasonble doubt, and to be satisfied that the girl was positively a dissenting party in the transaction before convicting on the count of common assault. The jury returned a verdict of "Not guilty."

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING. — The Tribune says that on Friday night of last week, during one of the most terrific thunderstorms for many years, a stable owned by Wm. Page, 11th con. Minto, was struck by lightning, and in a moment the whole structure was in flames. There was in the stable at the time one yoke oxen, three calves, and about thirty fowls, besides a large quantity of hay. So rapid was the destruction that, although Mr. Page saw the fire as soon as it was struck, he only succeeded in saving one ox and one calf, the rest perishing in the flames. Mr. John Davidson, next neighbor, also saw the fire and hurried to the place with all speed, but could do nothing toward saving the stable, but, by their united exertions a large straw stack that occupied the space between the stable and granary was kept from igniting, although the wind kept piling the burning embers from the stable upon the stack. The heavy rain that fell rendered invaluable assistance in keeping down the fire, and had it not been for this fortunate circumstance, Mr. Page would have lost every building upon the farm. Mr. Page had no insurance upon the property destroyed.

The Strike in Lancashire.

LONDON, April 26.- The breach between the cotton masters and the operatives at Blackburn is widening. The county police were to-day called to Great Harwood to protect a manufacturer confined to his house by the immense crowd.

A numerously attended meeting of private cotton spinners and directors of spinning companies at Oldham yesterday resolved to reduce the wages of the spinners five per cent.

At Blackburn 5,000 looms are working out of 52,000. Pauperism is becoming manifest among the poorer operatives.

The firms represented at the spinners' meeting at Oldham yesterday run four million spindles. The meeting decided that each employer must follow his own course with regard to reduction of time.

ACTON.—Messrs. George Smith, Adam Winlow, John Keith, Wm. McDonald, Robt. Waldie and Joseph Brown, who were about to leave for Manitoba, and also Mr. John Winlow, who was leaving for Orillia, were given a complimentary supper at Campbell's Hotel on the 22nd inst.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN ORANGEVILLE.—A farmer named Joshua Wilcox, who lived inside the corporation, was killed to-day by a large stone rolling on him. Mr. Wilcox was engaged undermining the stone, for the purpose of burying it, and the stone rolled on him while down in the hole. He only lived two hours. He leaves a wife and family.

ELORA. — The complimentary concert given to Mr. Morgan last week was well attended, and the receipts amounted to some $37.——A son of Thos. Pritchard, about ten years of age, had a narrow escape from drowning recently. He was bold enough to shove out in the river on a raft. After losing the pole which he was using to propel the craft he jumped off to swim to shore. This he was unable to do and he was only saved by a companion on shore rendering him aid with a long pole.

GALT.—The following officers of the Cricket Club have been elected:—Patron, Walter Dickson; President, Lieut.-Col. Peck; Vice-Presidents, J. G. Dykes and R. S. Strong; Secretary and Treasurer, J. Wells; Committee of Management, J. Fitzsimmons, J. S. Meredith, A. G. Elmslie, H. J. Jaffray, T. G. Blain and G. T. Simpson.——Galt and Paris played chess last week and each won five games.——Robert Gilholm's house was struck by lightning last week and the chimney destroyed. The electric fluid found an escape through the floor of the house.

SENT TO THE PENITENTIARY FOR LIFE.—At the Peterboro Assizes held on the 26th, the men Wm. Hubbs, as principal, and Patrick Murphy and James McElvela were found guilty of committing a rape under the most aggravating circumstances on Mrs. Margaret Jones and her daughter Louisa, aged fourteen, in the township of Chandos, on the night of the 7th of January. The jury brought in a verdict of "Guilty," with a recommendation to mercy. Chief Justice Harrison then delivered a very impressive charge to the prisoners, and sentenced them to the Penitentiary at Kingston for the remainder of their natural lives. His Lordship said that had it not been for the recommendation to mercy it would have been his duty, in the interest of society, to have sentenced the prisoners to be hanged.

ARTHUR.—T. Comport, druggist, has removed to Woodstock.——A serious accident befel Patrick Drake, of Arthur, last week. Mr. Drake was on his way home from Guelph with a load of seeders, and when driving around a corner in Fergus, the front wheels of his waggon suddenly struck a log which is used as a crossway. The suddenness of the jerk caused Mr. Drake to fall over the front of the waggon, and down before the front wheel. The wheel, it appears, went against his body with pressure sufficient to fracture several ribs, and otherwise injure him internally; but a man got hold of the horses just in time to prevent the wheel going right over him, which would have been almost assuredly instantaneous death. He is now recovering.

THE VARDON CASE AGAIN.—The Waterloo Chronicle says that another phase of the now celebrated Vardon case has unexpectedly turned up. By means of a decoy telegram, the Doctor, who had recovered the child by legal process, was induced to bring her to Norwich, where Mrs. Vardon resides. The telegram, we are informed, stated that Mrs. V. was very ill, and wished to see her daughter. The interview took place, and the child herself slipped out for a moment at the back door, but not returning promptly, the Doctor searched for her, but she was nowhere to be found. Of course, under the decision of Judge Hagarty, he has the legal right to the custody of the girl, and may be expected to enforce it by every means in his power.

A HORRIBLE WRETCH'S MERITED FATE.—Last winter while Mrs. Chas. Maul, of Richmond, Ind., was confined, her husband seduced her sister and two servant girls who were attending her. When Mrs. Maul learned this so greatly did it affect her that she became a raving maniac, and she is now confined in the insane asylum at Indianapolis. To avoid her father's vengence, Maul fled, and was unheard of until a day or two ago, when he returned and resumed work at his trade. When Maul's brothers-in-law, the Stevenson boys heard of his return, in pursuance to an oath made by them last winter, they met him on a bridge at the edge of Richmond, and shot at him seven times. Three balls entered his body, producing wounds from the effect of which his death is hourly expected. The Stevensons have given notice that they will be on hand whenever the courts want them. No arrests have been made. Public sentiment strongly favors the boys.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION.—The attention of all who contemplate visiting the Exposition to be opened in Paris about the middle of May, is requested to the facilities offered by the Anchor Line of Steamships, sailing direct to London or Glasgow, making close connection with all routes for the continent. The ships are new, of the most improved model, and contain all the latest devices for the safety and comfort of passengers, and are officered by the most skillful and experienced navigators. The Passenger accommodations are unsurpassed, being first-class in every particular, and the cuisine is conducted on the most scientific and liberal scale. An advertisement in another column gives particulars as to rates of passage, &c.

Four masked men recently entered the house of a man named Campbell, who lives about four miles south of Rodney, and stole about $500, chiefly in gold.

Intelligence has reached Toronto that Her Majesty's Government had, on the 28th ult., secured horses enough.

He died in three hours afterward.

In the case of the Queen vs. Scott in the Supreme Court on Friday, Mr. Justice Ritchie delivered the the judgment of the Court reversing the judgment of the Court below, holding that the respondent was not guilty of a felony, as he was only indicted for stealing a note which was of no value at law and equity, and there being no indictment as to the stealing of the paper, the conviction was wrong. The Chief Justice said the other cases would be disposed of on the first day of the June session.

For the benefit of the wiseacres who would prescribe protection as a panacea for hard times, and the only means of making work for the unemployed, a contemporary quotes an old story, told of a conversation between a Scotch fisherman and his daughter, which nicely illustrates the effect protection would have, if carried to its ultimate result: "Eh! father," said the daughter, "I wish a' the folk in the warld were dead, and then we would get a' the fish!" "Aye! aye! lassie," said the father, "but wha would buy them?"

The South African diamond fields continue as productive as ever, and several old claims have, within the past few months, changed hands at high prices, while new diggings are from time to time discovered. Some large stones have been found weighing fifty carats; others weighing 145½ carats, thirty-two carats, and twenty-three carats, the last being a perfect water. In Poor Man's Gully, again a stone weighing fifty-three carats has been found. Machinery is being adopted in in many of the fields, thus reducing the labor, and increasing the speed at which the ground can be worked.

A bonus of £10,000 has been offered by the Government of South Australia for the discovery of a coal field within the limits of the province, the reward to be payable to the discoverer in sums of £1,000 on each 1,000 tons of marketable coals raised at the pit's mouth.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The Situation About the Same.

NEGOTIATIONS PENDING.

April 27.

The Journal de St. Petersburg says:—

We hope the intelligence published by some London newspapers respecting the state of the negotiations relates to a phase now past. At present it is the matter of phraseology. If a reconciliation is sincerely desired let the Cabinets aim at what if calculated to draw them close together, not bring forward irritating propositions. There is now no doubt that Russia accepts the broadest possible basis for the programme of a Congress. That she does not dream of declining any kind of discussion is proved by Gortschakoff's circular. Should a Congress meet, it will be able to deal with all the questions created by the events in the East. It now appears that Lord Salisbury recognizes the opportuneness of an exchange of views previous to the meeting of a Congress regarding the possibility of an understanding being reached, and the St. Petersburg Cabinet assures that opinion.

The Agence Russe confirms the report that England and Russia have agreed that a direct exchange of views should precede a Congress. Austria, Germany, and Italy also favor this course, and have invited England to state her views.

A St. Petersburg correspondent says:—It is not yet known whether the British Government will accept the new formula, viz., that a Congress shall consider the Treaties of 1856 and 1871 in relation to the Treaty of San Stefano. The British Cabinet does not insist on any particular form of words, but merely demands that Russia should in some way formally recognize the supremacy of Europe relative to the Eastern Question. The truth is the discussions about the formula cover more important matters. One issue out of the present complications consists in undoing much of Russia's work, and giving the rest a European instead of a specifically Russian character. Another consists in the principle of equivalents or compensations to the Powers for Russia's acquisitions. The latter solution is the one Russia desires. Great Britain seems resolved to insist upon the former.

A Bombay despatch says:—Troops are arriving daily for embarkation. The first detatchment leaves for Malta on April the 28th, and the second on May the 1st. Fifteen ships and twelve steamers have been engaged for the conveyance of the expedition, which will be convoyed by a man-of-war. Great enthusiasm is manifested throughout India, and native troops are volunteering.

A Berlin despatch says:—The proposed German form of invitation to the Congress, the British Government say, expresses an assumption that the Treaties of 1856 and 1871, are already modified by the war. England insists that the necessity of superceding or amending these treaties is not to be assumed in abvance.

It is reported from Chatham that a powerful ironclad squadron will be immediately prepared to be in readiness for operations in the Baltic.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The Russian authorities have decided to abandon the intention of sending a number of officers and men to attend worship in the Greek Churches here on Sunday.

A St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs:—It is evident that the present unsatisfactory state of things between Russia and England is due more to distrust and jealousy than to any other cause. Unfortunately the negotiations do not advance as quickly as the armaments.

The London Daily News says:—It is time to give up all illusion respecting Austria's effective interference. Her Government has long ago made military preparations on the borders of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in anticipation of war, and will watch its development and get what it can, and congratulate itself on having done so without fighting.

A Constantinople despatch says:—The extreme Mussulman party has asked the Shereef of Mecca and the Muftis of Tunis and Morocco whether Turkey should join England in the event of an Anglo-Russian war. The Muftis replied in the affirmative, and the Shereef promised to submit the question to a Council in the event of an outbreak of hostilities.

The Mussulman insurgents are approaching Philippoplis and driving the Bulgarians before them. The spread of the insurrection causes much disquiet even in Adrianople. Some soldiers have been assassinated there.

A Constantinople despatch says:—Vassa and Tefik Pashas leave to-morrow for the scene of the insurrection in the Rhodope Mountains. The insurgents are well officered and provided with abundance of ammunition. They occupy impregnable positions. A deputation of Mussulman inhabitants of Roumelia waited upon Mr. Layard and begged him to telegraph his Government to urge European intervention to end the atrocities by the Bulgarians.

A Belgrade despatch says:—The Servian authorities have been ordered to prevent the Russians from recruiting in the recently annexed territory.

The Orange-Catholic Alliance.

The Orange-Catholic Alliance, of which the Irish Canadian has been the persistent, though far from consistent advocate for some time, is flauntingly spurned by the Sentinel of this city, which is the recognized organ of the Orange party. It says:—"From our standpoint, and we believe we speak the sentiments of the Orange institution, we spurn the proposition and repudiate any lot or part in so corrupt a bargain. * * * No Protestant, no Orangeman, should join in such an unholy alliance with Rome. If Irish Catholics want a representation on national and religious grounds, let them get it if they can. No Protestant should help them. The most transparent piece of hypocrisy is the Irish Canadian's appeal on national grounds." We have put the last few sentences in italics in order to emphasize the summing up of the deliberate judgment of the Sentinel, which is merely elaborated or defended in the other portions of the article quoted from. It shows plainly how the Orange sentiment regards the proposed alliance, and with what contempt the Orangemen spurn the proffered support of the Irish Canadian.—Toronto Tribune.

ADDITIONAL LICENSES.—At a meeting of the License Commissioners for West Wellington held at Arthur village on Monday of last week, additional licenses were granted Messrs. Jas. Hayes and J. M. Crawford, of Mt. Forest, the former for tavern and the latter for shop. An application from Mrs. McPherson for a tavern license for Arthur was left over until a new census was taken in that village.

SATURDAY EVN'G, APRIL 27, 1878.

The Erin Meeting.

As our readers will have seen by the report of the proceedings in yesterday's paper, the so-called "National Policy" advocates, alias Protectionists, alias Tories, extended their operations on Thursday night to the Township of Erin. Judging from the report of the meeting, we are inclined to sympathize with our opponents on their want of success. They called the people together to explain to them the evils of the present tariff and the remedies proposed. but while they were heavy in their denunciations of the Mackenzie Government, and loud in their lamentations over the depression of the trade of the country, they said not a word as to the cure, nor was the whole talent they could bring to bear on the matter able to suggest one single remedy. We can assure the would-be leaders of the "National Policy" movement that the staunch and sterling Reformers of the loyal Township of Erin are neither to be hoodwinked by clap-trap nor deceived by sophistry and buncombe. We are amused to see that the opinion of William Lyon Mackenzie was quoted in support of Protection. We would like very much to know what the old-tried Reformers thought when, knowing as they do the stirring events of 1837, they heard eulogiums passed by Conservative editors and Tory supporters on one who has been the most slandered and best abused man by the Tories of Canada. The arguments advanced by the supporters of the Government are unanswerable, and we believe that the time is very far distant when the policy based on these arguments will prove other than for the best good of our Dominion. The feeling of the meeting was largely, if not exclusively, in favor of the existing tariff, and although there is a depression all over the world at present, the people of Erin have too much good sense to believe that the support or advocacy of an undefined and vague policy will benefit Canada. Not a resolution was moved, nor did Fraser, et al, accomplish one iota in favor of the establishment of a League.

We cannot allow this subject to drop without reference to the conduct of one of the speakers. We refer to an exeditor of our town contemporary. Not only did he insinuate that Col. Clarke was lying, but in the face of that latter gentleman's repeated assertion that what he (Col. Clarke) said about Dr. Orton's franking Parliamentary speeches and pamphlets as well as the Reform members was true, this man Wright still told Col. Clarke that he didn't believe him. The pamphlet was produced and Col. Clarke was borne out in what he had said. This did not satisfy the extremely gentlemanly individual with whom he was dealing, and that same gentlemanly person, or in plain words, the man, Wright, had the good taste to work himself into a passion, and vented his spleen by throwing the pamphlet at Col. Clarke's head. If this is the way in which these men intend carrying on the campaign, if these are the weapons they are going to use, and if these are the men who are employed to use them; if a representative of the people in the discharge of his duties is to be publicly insulted by irascible advocates of the "National Policy," then we say the sooner the country knows it the better. Col. Clarke has endeared himself to the people not only by his genial and courteous manners, by his ability as a representative of the people, but also by his loyalty and attention to the military interests of the country, and we hardly think that either his good name or his reputation for veracity is likely to be injured by the personal attacks or assaults of any political hack or needy Protectionist.

Dr. Orton in His Old Colours.

We have all along held to the belief that Dr. Orton is a political humbug as regards the stand he has taken on protection. No better proof of this could be found than the statement he made during the debate on Mr. Mackay's motion in favor of imposing a duty on coal. The doctor in the innocence of his heart said he believed Mr. Mackay was not sincere, and he made the ingenuous confession that he voted for the coal tax because he was sure it would not carry; if he thought there was any chance of it being carried, he said he would vote against it. Comment on such extraordinary conduct is needless. Dr. Orton is an arrant political hypocrite and humbug.

"Mr. Archibald Gilchrist, who more than any other man helped to secure Mr. Guthrie's election in Wellington two years ago, proposed a resolution the other night condemning the Government's trade policy." So says the Mail. We have always understood that Mr. Archibald Gilchrist did nothing to secure Mr. Guthrie's election—in fact that he voted against him because a couple of dozen rose trees were imported into Guelph from the States one year, Mr. Gilchrist being in the belief that Providence ordained that he should furnish such roses and not the Yankees. It is the old story, protect home industries, and keep out all foreign competition.

The South Oxford Reform Convention met the other day and nominated Col. Skinner as candidate for the Commons and the Hon. Mr. Crooks for the Local Legislature.

The United States Centennial Commission, in order to mark their high appreciation of the services of the Canadian Commissioners—the Hon. Mr. Penny, the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and Mr. D. McDougall, of Berlin—have forwarded to each of these gentlemen a beautifully executed bronze medal, with a letter, in which the assistance rendered by them in connection with the Centennial Exhibition, is acknowledged in complimentary terms.

The St. John Freeman publishes Hon. George Brown's scathing exposure of Senator Macpherson's audacious charges against the Government as printed in his pamphlet, and in his comments on the speech the editor—Mr. Speaker Anglin, presumably—says, "intelligent people will generally regard Hon. Mr. Brown's reply as absolutely crushing."

Sir John calculated that the Government would only have seventeen of a majority on the coal question. He said they only had thirty-seven on the "National Policy" division and as ten of their supporters had stated they would vote for McKay's amendment, they would nearly be beaten. When the division was over Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Blake poked a good deal of fun at him, and Mr. Mills cried out that the vote was one of want of confidence in the Opposition.

Dinner and Presentation at Aberfoyle.

On Friday evening a number of the residents in and about Aberfoyle, Puslinch Township, met to testify their respect and esteem for Mr. Wm. Macdonald, who for some years past has worked the Puslinch Mills, of which he is the proprietor, and who by his honest and straightforward dealing has earned the respect of the people of Puslinch, and who is going to the Lake Superior region to engage in the lumbering business.

The company met at Mrs. Money's Hotel, where everything was in first-class order, and where one of the best suppers we ever saw prepared was laid out for the party, which was about fifty in number, and comprised besides the friends from Guelph, many of Mr. Macdonald's friends in Puslinch.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Wm. Leslie, Reeve of the Township. The vice chair was occupied by Mr. P. Mahon. Secretary of the Puslinch Farmers Club. Mr. James McLean acted as Secretary.

After full justice had been done to the splendid repast provided by Mrs. Mooney, the chairman called on Mr. James McLean to read the address to Mr. Macdonald, as follows:—

William McDonald, Esq., miller, Aberfoyle.

Dear Sir,—A number of your fellow-townsmen hearing that you have rented your property, the Puslinch Mills, to Messrs. William and Archibald Houson for a term of years, and that you are preparing to remove to the remote District of Algoma to engage in your former avocation, lumbering, regrets that, for a season, we have to bid you adieu.

We embrace this opportunity to express our approval of the kind and generous disposition you manifest to all in your business relations: your enterprise and energy in improving and enlarging the capacity of your mill, thus extending business facilities to a steadily increasing business circle, as well as providing a ready market for the staple products of the farm. You have also taken a lively interest in all municipal, social and public matters, and given your generous support to every scheme calculated to enhance the public good. The absence of your affable countenance and genial fellowship from our society and social gatherings will create a void not readily supplied by any other. Notwithstanding your temporary absence, we rejoice to know that you have cast your anchor among us, that Mrs. McDonald and your family will reside here, and where a man's treasure is, there will his heart be also.

We hereby appoint the Chairman and Secretary of our meeting to execute this address and to present it and the accompanying to you, as a small memento of our friendship and esteem. Expressing the hope that you may be spared in health of mind and body to wear it, and in due season return to resume your wonted place and occupation among us.

Aberfoyle, April 26th, 1878.

Mr. Macdonald made the following reply:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—

It is difficult for me to find proper words in which to thank you for your kind expression of friendship and esteem. I will always think with pleasure of the happy times that I spent among you, and regret that, for a short time, I have to leave Puslinch and a business undertaking on which I entered with hope, and which I expected to be able to control without leaving the township. But circumstances having changed, I am required to leave the township for a time—but only for a time, for my lot is cast among you, and I will embrace every opportunity of re-visiting my home and old friends.

I thank you for the kind expression of your friendship and esteem, and for this handsome and valuable gift which you have bestowed on me, and I will retain it all my days as a token of your good will, and will afterwards hand it down as a legacy to my family.

The chairman then proposed "The Queen," "The Governor General and Lieut. Governors," after which he gave "The Guest of the Evening," Mr. Macdonald, and in feeling and appropriate terms referred to the time that Mr. Macdonald came to the Township, to the straight forward and honest manner in which he had discharged his duties, to the happy relations that existed between him and the farmers, and to the respect and esteem entertained for him by all classes of the community. In presenting him with the gold chain he expressed the hope that he would live long to wear it.

The chain is a very handsome one of the Albert pattern, and was purchased from Mr. G. D. Pringle, of this town. On the locket was engraved the following:—"Presented to Wm. Macdonald by his friends, April 26th 1878."

The toasts that followed were "The Agricultural Interests"—responded to in an able speech by Mr. P. Mahon, Secretary of the Puslinch Farmers' Club. Mr. Mr. Stirton next proposed the Municipality of Puslinch—which was responded to in appropriate speeches by Messrs. Leslie, Reeve, and Mr. Jas. McLean, Clerk. Mr. Innes next gave "The Monetary Institutions," which called forth an excellent speech from Mr. T. Y. Greet, Manager of the Federal Bank. Mr. Mahon next gave the Manufacturing and Commercial Interests, which called forth able responses from Messrs. Inglis and Mackenzie. All the speakers took occasion to refer to Mr. Macdonald's temporary absence from Aberfoyle, and while they wished him every prosperity in his new field of labor, they expressed the hope that he would before long be back in Puslinch again, managing his old business.

The toast of "The Press" followed, responded to by Mr. Innes. The health of Mrs. Macdonald and family was next proposed, and heartily drunk. Mr. Macdonald replying. Mr. Hugh Reid gave as the last toast, the host and hostess, which was duly acknowledged by Mr. Mahon on behalf of Mr. Mooney.

During the evening some excellent songs were given by Messrs. Maitland, Cockburn, Beard and Kennedy, and a most pleasant, social evening was spent by all present.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

April 26th.

Mr. Young presented the report of the Public Accounts Committee in regard to the refusal of Mr. Peter Sutherland, of Winnipeg, to appear before the Committee to give evidence in reference to the Nixon accounts.

Mr. Mackenzie moved for the purpose of having a sitting of Parliament to-morrow. He proposed to amend the motion by providing for forenoon sittings of the House for the remainder of the session. A short discussion took place, in which the feeling of several hon. members was expressed in favor of the House meeting at two o'clock rather than of having double sittings. The motion was amended in this sense and passed.

On the motion to go into Committee of Supply Mr. McDonald (Cape Breton) moved a long amendment setting forth that the Government had acted improperly in regard to the Ingonish Harbour contract. A short debate ensued, in which the Opposition reiterated their previously made charges on the subject. The Premier made an effective reply, in the course of which he presented the facts of the case, and, replying to the statement that there were no certificates of the engineers for certain payments on the contract, laid on the table the certificates for every payment made. A vote having been taken the amendment was lost—Nays, 98; Yeas, 49. Majority 49.

Book Notices.

Littell's Living Age.—The numbers of Littell's Living Age for the weeks ending April 20th and 27th, contain Mr. Froude's "Life and Times of Thomas Becket," by Edward A. Freeman; England as a Military Power in 1854 and in 1878, by Sir Garnet Wolseley; Modern Japan; French Home Life—the Influence of Women; The Loss of the "Eurydice;" A Broad Church Bishop; Macleod of Dare, by William Black, from advance sheets; Erica, translated for The Living Age, from the German of Frau von Ingersleben; Story of George Cruikshank, The Analogies of Plant and Animal Life, Our Irresponsible Ambassadors, Change-Ringing, The Legitimate Sphere of Agnosticism, The Domestic Sphinx, etc., etc. A new volume began with the first number of April. For fifty-two numbers, of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,000 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; or for $10.50 any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies is sent with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston, are the publishers.

Brown's Phonographic Monthly.—A late number of this excellent phonographic monthly has been received from the publisher, and, as usual, is replete with phonographic intelligence and matters pertaining to the art. This is an excellent shorthand magazine and deserves every support. D. L. Scott Browne, 737 Broadway, New York, is the conductor and publisher. Price 20 cents a number, or $2 a year.

The Papal Encyclical.

The passage in the Pope's Encyclical regarding the civil power of the Church is as follows:—

The hopes of Italy and of the world rest on the beneficent influence of the Holy See, and on the intimate union of all the faithful with the Roman Pontiff. It therefore stands to reason that we should with all diligence do all in our power to preserve intact the dignity of the Roman Cathedra, in order before all things to guard the rights and liberty of the Holy See. We shall never cease to insist that our authority be respected, that our ministry and our power be left fully free and independent, and that the position be restored to us in which Divine wisdom long ago placed us. It is no vain desire of dominion which moves us to demand the re-establishment of our civil power. We demand it because our duties and our solemn oaths exact it, and because it is not only necessary to conserve fully the liberty of spiritual power, but also because it is evident that when it is a question of the temporal dominion of the Apostolic See it involves the well-being and safety of the whole human family.

The Pope distinctly endorses the policy and acts of his predecessor, condemns civil marriages, and deplores the rejection of the authority of the Church, proclaiming that to be the cause of all existing evils, but in language of calmness and dignity, devoid throughout of any tone of offence or violence.

The Encyclical contains no attack whatever upon the civil government of Italy nor any mention, direct or indirect, of the House of Savoy.

A 25,000 Miles Walk.—On the first day of May James Duff Henderson, an amateur pedestrian of more than local reputation, will begin at the Roller Skating Rink the stupendous walk of 25,000 miles, or the circumference of the earth. He undertakes the walk in two years, walking each day, except Sunday, forty miles. The walk will be extended through the United States, Britain, and France, finishing on 1st May, 1880, in Toronto.

A Terrible Leap.—An unknown man came across the lower Suspension Bridge, Clifton, from the American side about seven o'clock on Friday morning, and enquired of Mr. Murray, gatekeeper on this side, where he could get a boy to guide him to the Falls. On his procuring one they started out together, and upon arriving at the new bridge on their return he paid the boy fifty cents, telling him he intended crossing, and instructed him to await his return. When about midway over he took off his hat and coat, and jumped into the river. Mr. Murray describes him as about sixty-five years of age, five feeet nine or ten inches high, grey hair, grey side whiskers. He spoke with an American accent, and looked like a farmer. On a coat which he left in the lower bridge office was found an envelope addressed, "Edward M. Groat, Waterford, Racine Co., Wisconsin." He had also mailed a letter to the same address before making the fatal leap.

MARRIAGES.

Handbidge—Thatcher—On the 24th April, at the parsonage, by the Rev. A. L. Thurston, Mr. James Handbidge, to Miss Sophia Thatcher, both of Eramosa.

McConnell—Hill—At Detroit, on the 25th April, Mr. G. A. McConnell, of the Birmingham Post, Michigan, to Miss Jeanette Hill, of Detroit.

DEATHS.

McElroy—In Guelph, on the 26th April, Luella Esther, eldest daughter of Mr. W. J. McElroy, Kirkland street, aged 11 years and 10 months.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon, at two o'clock. Friends and acquaintances will please accept this intimation.

Tannock—On the 5th April, at Catrine, Ayrshire, Scotland, Margaret Ferguson Tannock, mother of Mrs. Adam Weir, Puslinch, aged 93 years.

Deceased was a very remarkable woman, active and energetic, and possessed a wonderful retentive memory, even when her other faculties began to fail. Her own family numbered eighteen, twelve of whom are still alive, and her descendants to the fourth generation—she being a great grandmother at the time of her decease—numbered nearly two hundred. Her last illness though painful and protracted, was born with Christian patience and resignation. Her end was peace.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"HEAVEN HELPS THOSE WHO HELP THEMSELVES."

"Oh, he is eating these berries, and they may poison him," she cried in a panic of apprehension, catching him up and proceeding to eject anything from his mouth which might be there.

"Don't be alarmed, dear; these berries are not poisonous," said Myra. I ate a quantity of them last year when they were ripe, and found them very nice indeed."

"But they are green now," persisted Lizzie, "and green berries are very unwholesome. Darling, have you eaten many of them?"

"No, I am sure he hasn't," exclaimed Myra, making a very wry face, and spitting out one she had tasted. "It has quite set my teeth on edge. Alfred has been attracted by their pretty colour, and they are pretty—so clear, so transparent. See the juice I squeeze out is perfectly colourless, yet when ripe it is a very dark purple, almost black."

Here Alfred, who was generally as good-natured a child as could be found, made a violent outcry at being interrupted in his pastime, and struggled with great determination to resume it. 'We note this circumstance, apparently so trivial, because it was destined to lead to very important consequences. It is long since the fact was forced on the human mind that great results often spring from very small and, to outward seeing, insignificant causes—indeed, causes so trifling that they could only be traced as such after the occurrence of the extraordinary effects to which they gave rise. But the beautiful doctrine of an all-working Providence covers a universal sphere of operation, embracing things small as well as things large—and leading up to grand results from the tiniest and most unexpected acts. Little did Lizzie or Myra dream that the persistence of Alfred to be allowed to pluck more of these berries was inwoven with the very texture of their fate, and destined to produce a mighty influence upon it. Yet so it was, and blessed a thing it is that the operations of Providence are not to stayed by the unconscious opposition even of those whose wellbeing they are meant to promote. Lizzie very resolutely strove to prevent Alfred from plucking more berries, and very much astonished was she as well as distressed to find that he would not be pacified. It was so unlike the boy to manifest such self-will, he having ever been remarkable for docility. This was the first struggle he had made for the mastery, and, with Myra's help, he prevailed.

"Let the dear little fellow have his wish," pleaded the latter. "I shall see that he does not put any in his mouth, though indeed if he did no harm would come of it. Come, my pretty Alf, you and I shall pluck berries together, and we shall take them home in my handkerchief."

The child understood what she said, and held out his arms towards her, so she sat down with him by the side of one of the bushes, on whose branches berries were thickly clustered, and he was pleased immediately.

Myra spread her handkerchief in her lap, and soon they had quite a heap of the shining berries lying upon it, then it was folded up like a bag, and the boy, as proud as a prince, held it in hand all the way to the Castle.

Arrived there it was found that the berries had been turned into a pretty mess. Alfred, in his eagerness to hold them safe, had pressed them firmly between his hands, till they were squeezed to something like a jelly, and the juice had thoroughly saturated the handkerchief, not marking it in any way, for the fluid was colorless as water, not rendering it quite wet.

Of course the berries were now useless even as playthings, and had to be thrown away.

"There," said Lizzie, rather triumphantly, "that comes of yielding to his naughty wilfulness. You have got your white handkerchief spoiled."

"Nonsense," returned Myra, as she threw the berries under the grate; "the handkerchief is merely wet. I will dry it in a few minutes."

They were in the kitchen, having turned in thither before ascending the stair. The kitchen was empty at the time; the two men being at work in the garden, and Mother Barnacle engaged somewhere else. A large fire burned in the dog-ribbed grate, and in front of this fire Myra sat to dry her handkerchief at the grate.

Alfred was in humour again, and sat on the floor playing with a few wild flowers, which his mother had gathered on the way. She and Myra were both watching his artless gambols, when Lizzie, chancing to look up, suddenly exclaimed—

"Oh, Myra, your handkerchief is burning."

Myra instinctively started back with the handkerchief in her hand, and her first glance at it confirmed to her mind Lizzie's exclamation, for a large portion of the centre had become nearly black, as if singed by being held too near the fire. But a closer examination showed her that this could not be the case. She had not been exposing it to any excessive heat, and the colour to which it had changed was not a burned brown hue, but a very dark purple. The texture of the cloth was also unimpaired.

"How very singular," she cried. "It's not burnt at all, Lizzie. The heat has caused the juice of the berries to assume the colour it was when they are ripe—that deep rich colour which I told you of. Very extraordinary, is it not? It had no colour at all when squeezed out."

"What a beautiful dye it makes," observed Lizzie, as she gazed at the brilliant hue of the spots, which now disfigured the white cambric. "Why, Myra, this is quite a discovery to make, and so accidental too. But I have heard that many famous discoveries have been quite a matter of chance. In this case though," she added in a saddened tone, "the discovery is of no use, since we are not in a position either to benefit by it ourselves or make it beneficial to others. The only result is that your handkerchief is spoiled.

At this moment a heavy foot was heard approaching along the passage.

"Here comes Mother Barnacle," added Lizzie. "We shall give her the benefit of the discovery."

"Hush—silence say not a word about it," whispered Myra, as she hastily thrust the handkerchief out of sight.

Lizzie was stricken dumb by the act so nervously accomplished—by the words and the intensely earnest tone in which they were spoken—but most of all by the deep hectic spot which leapt into Myra's cheek and the strange light which shone in her eyes. She gazed at her with an aspect of astonishment such as Mother Barnacle could not have failed to notice had not Myra by a quick waving gesture showed her the propriety of concealing her state of mental surprise. When the latter entered the kitchen the two girls appeared to be engaged in the sole occupation of watching the child playing with the wild flowers. Shortly after they left the kitchen and went up to their own chamber. Once safely ensconced there Lizzie eagerly asked her companion the cause of her excitement.

"Never mind now, dear," was the hurried answer; "a thought has occurred to me. I will tell you by-and-by. But, by all you value most, breathe not a word to Mother Barnacle about the dyed handkerchief."

Saying which, Myra, with impetuous quickness, pressed her burning lips on Lizzie's cheeks, and rushed away up to her own room alone, where Lizzie heard her shut the door and secure it with some fastening—an act which Lizzie had never known her to do since their acquaintance began, though she understood it had been her practice to shut herself up thus when under the influence of her dark days.

LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY

LONDON, ENGLAND.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA—42 St. John Street, Montreal.

The Directors beg to announce that they have appointed

MR. GEO. RENNIE, General Agent

of the above Company, for Guelph and district.

(Signed) WM. ROBERTSON,
Manager for Canada.

THE LONDON AND LANCASHIRE Life Assurance Company having Canadianized its business, now offers all the advantages of a home institution, with the security of a British office. The increase in new Canadian business during the year 1877, being over 100 per cent over that of 1876, is ample evidence of the favour with which this arrangement has been received by the public. Government Deposit $100,000, for the exclusive benefit of Canadian policy holders, in addition to which the whole of the earnings of the branch are invested in this country.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

Where shall we go for our

SPRING DRY GOODS?

—TO—

THE LION, OF COURSE!

BECAUSE THERE YOU HAVE

The Choicest Goods,

The Largest Assortment,

The Most Fashionable Goods,

And what is all important in such times as the present,

THE CHEAPEST GOODS

that can be bought anywhere.

We have to announce to our numerous friends—wholesale and retail—that

Our Spring Stock is now Complete in every Department

and that by the purchases we have made in the British and American Markets, we shall be able to offer greater inducements in CHEAP GOODS than have ever yet been known.

DRESS GOODS.

In this branch our assortment is unrivalled. No where else will ladies find the same range at anything like the prices. Our new colored Lustres, in the new shades, at 15 cents are a extraordinary value, while our 12½ cent line, for spring wear, is the greatest bargain yet shown. Stripe Grey Linens 10 cents, Light Silks very low.

MILLINERY.

This branch merits a whole column to itself. Our Show Room is one blaze of beauty and fashion, and contains the latest Paris and New York Designs for the present season. Ladies who have visited all the different stores, say that the

Display of Millinery at the Lion is not merely unsurpassed, but unequalled

MANTLES.

Ladies, don't fail to inspect our display in this Department. We are showing a beautiful variety from the cheapest to the choicest.

DRESSMAKING.

It will be good news to many to know that we have secured the services of Mrs. Thompson at the head of this Department for another year. Her name is so well and favourably known that nothing further is required to guarantee the choicest designs, combined with perfect workmanship.

We cannot at the space as our disposal refer to the other Departments of our establishment, viz

Arkansas not a Good Place to go to.

Canadians who may have thought of going to Arkansas, attracted by the flaming advertisements that have appeared in a great many papers, had better think twice. The following extract from a letter from Mr. Allan McLean, of Colorado, to the Seaforth Expositor, will give an idea of what kind of country it is:—

One of my neighbors, a sharp, intelligent fellow, has just returned from Arkansas. He spent most of the winter travelling through that State, for the most part on horseback. Yesterday he paid us a visit at our cabin, and gave us an account of his observations and experiences.

"It's a good place to go to," he said," "if you want to die. It takes two men there to make a shadow. People have chills half the year, then when winter comes they have pneumonia, and that finishes them. They're taking quinine and calomel, and the blue mass pills all the time, and it's hard to find a man who hasn't been 'salivated.'"

"But in the western part it's healthy, isn't it?"

"Yes, up among the hills they have good health. When they see a man looking kind of rugged, they say, 'Ye're from the hills, bain't ye?' But up there they have to sharpen the sheep's noses to bite between the rocks."

"What kind of a country for stock and farming?"

"Too wet for sheep. Cattle do first rate, and hogs splendid—live on mast—but both their cattle and hogs are poor bred. Splendid rich soil, will raise anything, but poor farming and poor farmers—all in poor health. They live on corn bread and bacon, had nothing else to eat all the time I was there. The lowest-down people I ever saw. The niggers are twice as well off as the white folks."

"What do they raise?"

"Oh, they raise cotton. It's worth 7 or 8 cents a pound, and takes 10 to make it. They raise a little corn, too, and a few vegetables, which they eat in summer, but save none for winter. They don't make any hay or save any fodder, for that time of the year they're all down with the chills and can't work."

"What kind of houses have they?"

"Log houses—most of them one room—whole family sleep together. Fire places—no stoves. Lots of timber but no barns, no stables. When a man has a double log house with a verandah, he thinks he's some. Worse roads I ever saw—covered with water—and the mud, oh, the mud is fearful."

"Little Rock is a fine city, is it not?"

"Yes, Little Rock has two good buildings, the post office and the penitentiary, both built by the U. S. Government. Otherwise all Little Rock is a great land agency. The whole population lives by beating the emigrants coming in. Great emigration there just now. Thousands from Ohio and Indiana, and all the old States. Guess some of them will be sick enough of Rackensack before a year. But land is cheap. A man can get farms at his own price. Railroad land is the dearest in the State."

While my neighbor was describing Arkansas, I thought of a certain advertisement I had seen lately in several of the Canadian papers I receive, it is headed, "Ho! for Arkansas," and is ornamented with a cut of an Indian riding a grasshopper pursuing a pilgrim who calls out, "I'm bound for Arkansas! There are no Indians, nor clinch bugs, nor g'hoppers there." For my part I would as soon have Indians for neighbors as chills and pneumonia for permanent guests, and the clinch bug and grass-hoppers are only occasional in their visit, and partial in their depredations, but the corn-cracker and the nigger are on hand the year round. I should be sorry to think that among the number of victims of the Little Rock land sharks, there should be some Canadians, but doubtless there are. Roped in, too, in the first place by this precious advertisement.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. BOOTS & SHOES

"Come here, sir," said a stern parent to his youngest hopeful. "What is this complaint the schoolmaster has made against you?" Much injured youth—"It's just nothing at all. You see, Jimmy Hughes bent a pin, and I only left it on the teacher's chair for him to look at, and he came in without his specks and sat down on the pin. That's all. And now he wants to blame me for it."

ARM BROKEN.—While a young lad named Christopher Shaw was engaged in playing base ball at the Separate School, this (Tuesday) morning, by his coming in collision with some other lads while running swiftly, he received a severe fracture of an arm, a little above the wrist. Dr, Harkin reduced the fracture.

AN old man named McNeil, died recently in the Ottawa district after having confessed to the murder of three persons.

Business prospects at St. John's, N.F., are very unsatisfactory, and the depression is increased by the failure of the seal fishery.

There is no prospect of a settlement of the strike in the Lancashire cotton mills unless arbitration, as proposed by the operatives, is accepted by the masters.

Twenty thousand children and three hundred teachers will to-morrow be locked out of the schools in the District of Columbia owing to the refusal of the Washington House of Representatives to make an appropriation for the expenses of the Public Schools of the District.

Great damage has been caused in Massachussetts by floods in the valleys of the Nashua and Merrimack Rivers. At Nashua the mills have been compelled to shut down owing to the height of the water, and five hundred feet of the bank wall of the Nashua and Lowell Railway has been washed away.

Bond & Co. tell us that they have just received a large lot of the celebrated rubber paint ready mixed, all colors, instruction books given free of charge to any one requiring them.

STILL THEY COME.—We notice the railway companies delivering large quantities of new goods at the Lion this morning. These we are told are some of the bargains secured by Mr. Williamson at the trade sales in Montreal a few days ago —when goods were said to have been sold lower than ever. Special attractions in dress goods.

CHURCH ENLARGEMENT.—The Building Committee and Managers of St. Andrew's Church have decided to at once proceed with the enlargement of their church building. St. Andrew's congregation is growing very rapidly.

EDUCATIONAL MEETING IN THE DUBLIN STREET CHURCH.—At the meeting in the above church this evening the full choir will be present and discourse several choice anthems. The meeting is to be addressed by the Revs. Messrs. Graham, of Walkerton, and Ryckman, of Guelph. The meeting commences at eight o'clock.

THE "Penhurst" property was not sold on Monday. The highest bid for the whole being $5,800. The reserve bid on it being $6,000, it was withdrawn. Two years ago $7,000 were offered, and refused for it. The two story brick house, corner of Garibi and Kirkland streets, was sold yesterday to Alex. Congalton, for $1,410.

OWNERS of orchards should carefully examine their apple trees and pull off and burn all the small worm rings that may have formed on the branches. If these precautions are neglected thousands of caterpillars will soon emerge from each of these rings. A little labor in this direction now will very probably save the loss of a crop of fruit.

DRILL INSTRUCTOR.—The officers of the Wellington Field Battery have procured the services of Sergt. Andrew Rae, late of the Royal Horse Artillery, who will take charge in a week or two as drill instructor for the Battery here. He will also act as instuctor at the School as soon as it has been definitely decided that a Drill Association will be formed in connection therewith.

ONE of our worthy Councillors thinks he is deserving of at least some thanks for his action in regard to street watering. He obstructed the letting of the contract two weeks ago, and it has been raining at short intervals ever since. One of his brother Councillors moved a certain sum of money to the same party as a recognition of his services in another direction a few weeks ago. Everything he does is therefore not unappreciated.

DEATH OF AN OLD SETTLER.—We record in our obituary to-day the death of Mrs. Stannard, who departed at a ripe old age on Monday. Mrs. Stannard came to Guelph in 1834—when the Town was a mere hamlet—and she continued to reside in it till the day of her death. She was one of the oldest Methodists in Guelph, and during her whole life was an attached member of that connection. She was held in great respect by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance.

CLOSING EXERCISES.—The closing exercises in connection with the Mechanics' Institute Commercial Classes, took place in the Institute rooms on Monday evening. Besides others present were Messrs. G. B. Fraser, President of the Institute, Wm. Stewart, James Philp and — Hamilton, who, after examining the students' work, expressed themselves in a manner complimentary to the diligence of the students and efficiency of the teacher, Mr. G. A. Somerville. All the work of the students had been carried out with marked neatness. At the conclusion of the examination the following prizes were distributed among the most successful students:—P. McNaughton, $2.50; James Thain, D. Stewart and W. Maddock, each $2; R. B. Mimmack, $1.50; Wm. Clark, W. Scott, W. Saunders and Guy Winstanley, each $1; F. Croft, and John Spalding, 50 cents each.

Town Council.

Street Watering—Tenders Wanted.

A special meeting to take into consideration the watering of certain streets in town was held on Monday evening. Present—His Worship Mayor Howard in the chair; Messrs. Elliott, Richard Mitchell, Sleeman, Chase, Doran, Melvin, Robert Mitchell, Bruce, Gowdy, Day, MacMillan, Hearn, Roche.

The Mayor explained that the previous petition presented did not bear the sufficient number of names to make it legal for the Council to take action, it was therefore necessary that a new petition or petitions should be presented.

PETITIONS PRESENTED.

By Mr. Robt. Mitchell, from Wm. Russell and thirty-eight other ratepayers, on Carden street and Market Square asking to have that street and Square watered during the summer months, the town to pay such proportion as it has been customary.

By Mr. Richard Mitchell, from Jones & Guthrie and some one hundred other firms on Wyndham street and St. George's Square, asking to have the street and Square watered, to advertise for tenders, and to award the contract to the party whose tender will be the most acceptable. The hydrant system was recommended as being the only system that has given universal satisfaction. For twenty-four weeks commencing May 1st was the length of time recommended to have the watering done.

Mr. Gowdy thought it was strange that as the petition presented at a previous meeting by himself, contained some one hundred and forty names, and that number was not found sufficient, that petitions bearing less names should be found operative.

The Mayor explained that the previous petition bore enough names for Wyndham street, but as it had reference to some three or four other streets, and not enough of names of ratepayers of those streets on the petition, the whole had to fall to the ground.

It was moved by Messrs. Robt. Mitchell and Hearn, that the petition having reference to the Market Square and Carden-st. be referred to the Road and Bridge Committee, to ascertain if the same has enough of signatures, and if so to advertise for tenders and report at next meeting of Council.

After some discussion the motion was carried.

A similar resolution moved by the same parties, with reference to the Wyndham street, was carried.

The Council on motion adjourned.

Court of Chancery.

Before His Lordship Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot.

MONDAY, APRIL 29.

Boulding vs. Macdonald.—This was an action brought by Geo. T. Boulding, of Guelph, against Owen Macdonald and others, to enforce the specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a lot in the Macdonald survey, to the defendant Archibald Macdonald by Owen Macdonald. The plaintiff is the assignee of Archibald Macdonald, but since the agreement for sale the land had greatly increased in value and had been sub-divided into smaller lots and a portion of the original lot has now been converted into a highway. Decree declaring that plaintiff is entitled to specific performance of the agreement as to so much of the original lot and for compensation for the portion sold with costs. Mr. Moss and Mr. Watt for plaintiff; Mr. Cassells and Mr. Macdonald for defendant Owen Macdonald.

VANCE vs. HENDERSON.—Plaintiff, Archibald Vance, of Waterloo township, files his bill against Elizabeth Henderson, widow of Archibald Henderson, deceased, and Mrs. Trotter and Annabella Henderson, the daughters and heiress-at-law of Archibald Henderson and James Gardner, to recover amount due to him on a mortgage made in 1866 to Vance, by James Gardner, on fifty acres in the township of Walsingham, County of Simcoe. The mortgage property was sold by G. Gardner to Archibald Henderson in 1869, and Henderson assumed the plaintiff's mortgage and agreed to pay it off, and made payments on it in his lifetime. Henderson's estate is being administered in the Court of Chancery. Henderson removed a quantity of pine timber from the fifty acres, thereby depreciating it in value. The decree was made, ordering payment to the plaintiff of the full amount claimed and costs; land to be sold, and, if any deficiency, to be paid by the Henderson estate. Messrs. Lemon, Peterson & Maclean, and Cassels for plaintiff; Mr. Allenby, of Galt, T. Ferguson, Q. C., and Guthrie, Watt & Catten for defendants.

MORNINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.—The rain which commenced about the middle of last week has fallen almost continually up to the present time, converting the roads and fields into disconnected gutters. The seeding which was rapidly advancing, many farmers being full half through, is stopped for the present, and cannot be resumed until the dry weather returns.—During the storm of Monday last the house of Mr. Samuel Strachan was struck by lightning. Mr. and Mrs. Strachan and a brother of the former were slightly stunned. They immediately recovered, and as the lightning entered through the chimney the house was in no ways injured.

DETROIT "FREE PRESS" BURNED.—A gas main leading into the Free Press building exploded on Monday morning, injuring two pressmen slightly. The building was thoroughly gutted by fire. Twelve presses were damaged and $40,000 worth of job material burned, The composing-room and editorial-rooms were burned, and material of the former fell through. Total loss $50,000. The paper will be issued tomorrow as usual.

PARTY FIGHT IN MONTREAL.—About 300 Catholic Union men congregated at the Wellington Bridge, Point St. Charles, on Tuesday morning to assail the Orange Young Britons and their friends on their way home from the concert. During the melee a Mrs. Mechan received four bullet wounds in the leg, which Dr. Barnes succeeded in extracting. Corporal Lang, of the Prince of Wales, also received a bullet wound. Two union men are reported shot, one dangerously wounded in the head. It is impossible to get any reliable information at this late hour.

ASSESSMENT OF 1878.

TOTAL ASSESSMENT, $2,896,390.

Population, 9,918—an Increase of 241

The work of Messrs. Jas. Armstrong and J. H. Hutton, Assessors for 1878, has been completed, and the Assessment Rolls are now ready for presentation to the Council. The law requires that the Rolls should be made up by the first day of May, and the Guelph Assessors, with their usual promptness, are a few days ahead of time. As a matter of course much of the work to be performed has been outside the office, but after that had been accomplished a great deal of careful handling of figures is required before the work can be looked upon as complete. The office of Assessor is by no means an easy position to hold, and the work is not only very laborious, but such as requires much practical knowledge of the value of property, and a cute observation of improvements accomplished.

Guelph has undoubtedly advanced steadily forward, and this, too, in the face of assertions made and repeated, in effect that the country generally, and the town in particular, were going to the dogs. It is gratifying to all, however, that the fears of those who would have it so, if for no other purpose than to have their predictions correct, have been groundless, and notwithstanding the fact that a worldwide monetary depression still exists, Guelph is going ahead, and is bound to continue to do so. From the returns published below for the present year, as well as for the four preceding years, something of a comparison can be made in the totals. As the town is now divided into six Wards instead of four, as it formerly was, it will be almost impossible to tell very closely which portion of the town has made the most rapid strides in improvement. The totals, however, can be placed side by side, and comparisons made generally.

From the figures presented it will be seen that the population during the past year has increased from 9,677 to 9,918—altogether 241. While those are the assessors figures, it is almost certain that there are a number not counted in, in many cases having to rely in this respect for information from some who are not particular about giving it. The following figures will show the steady increase during the past five years. In 1874 there was a population of 7,998; in 1875, 8,578; in 1876, 9,017; in 1877, 9,677; and 1878, 9,918. A total increase of 1,920. There is an increase of $53,050 in the value of real estate, as in 1877 it was $2,526,890 compared with $2,579,940 in 1878. This is very gratifying to note. Equally so is the decrease in non-resident lands. In this class of assessment the figures in 1877 were $60,380 and in 1878 $46,200—a decrease of $14,180. In personal property and taxable income a decrease is noticeable as compared with the returns of the previous year, the former being $270,250, and the latter $326,550—a decrease of $56,300. There is a decrease of $17,430 in the total amount of the assessment. In connection with this it might be remarked that in 1877 the assessment was raised some $400,000. The "curs" numbered 496 in 1877, and this year shows an increase of 12. It would be quite as pleasing to many citizens to hear of a decrease, as a number of the dogs here as well as other places are a nuisance and nothing more. In horses, cattle and swine there is an increase, while sheep have fallen off fully two-thirds. For other information, which will be of interest to all municipal statisticians, it may be gathered from the tabular statements appended:—

Victoria College.

The meeting held in the Norfolk street Methodist Church last night in behalf of Victoria College, Cobourg, for the education of young men of the Methodist persuasion for the ministry, was not so large attended as might have been expected from the worthy and interesting object of the meeting.

Rev. Mr. Ryckman occupied the chair. After the meeting was opened with devotional exercises, the chairman read a few extracts from the report of the last annual conference on education, showing the work that had been done by this institution, and the sum required for its thorough and efficient working. The sum set down as required for the present year was $15,000 to $16,000. The sum collected last year was $8,353.56, $208.05 of which was contributed by the Guelph congregations. The chairman said it was desirable for the well-being of their Church that they should have an educated ministry, and by contributing freely to this work they would be able to give their young men a high theological training.

Rev. Mr. Tyndall, Walkerton, was then called on. The rev. gentleman reviewed the educational working of the church from the time of John Wesley down to the present day, showing that Methodism from its birth had been upheld, and carried on by men of sound judgment and profound culture. He then referred to the early days of the church in Canada. About 49 years ago, when the membership was only 12,000, with 50 preachers receiving the small salaries of from $70 to $100 each, a weekly newspaper was projected, and these ministers, notwithstanding the small salary they received, were the first men to come to the front, giving $20 and $40 each towards the enterprise. The paper was a success, and to-day it found its way into many a family of the denomination, fresh and vigorous, and was a great power in the work of the Church. The same year the Upper Canada Academy was established at Cobourg. There was no cities in Canada then, and a good part of it was little better than a wilderness. The speaker then went on to describe the difficulties under which such a work was pursued, yet nevertheless it was a grand success. The first year of the establishment of the Academy, there were 120 males and females in attendance. The chief support of this institute was a Government grant of $17,000. A serious obstacle to the work in those days was that they had not the power to grant degrees. This however was conferred to them by a Royal Charter, when the institution changed its name to the University of Victoria College. At the present time they have five colleges to compete with, and found that they had been able to keep their ground, having one-fifth of the attendance of the whole. Besides this institution they had others of a similar character throughout the Dominion. He appealed for Victoria College so far as the young and rising ministry were concerned, for they were all aware of the importance of having a highly educated ministry. Young men of genius as well as talent are sent there, and they came back cultured and educated, fit to fill any situation in life with honor.

Rev. Mr. Graham, of London, was next called on. He said that he had very little to say on the subject, as it had been thoroughly and well ventilated by the previous speaker. The speaker took up and dealt with the question of a National College, which in the present state of affairs was not the best thing to be desired, as the whole affair would be governed by politicians, who would put in men to suit their own taste and party. The speaker considered it to be a duty devolving on them as a church to support this institution, and supply a college course for such young men as were not able to pay for it. If the young man be able to pay for his own course he will do it, to the last cent before he asks aid. They were also bound in honor and conscience to do all for them that they could and it was their duty to see to it.

A collection was then taken up, and subscriptions received in aid of the College, when the doxology was sung and the benediction pronounced.

Before the close of the meeting, Rev. Mr. Brock gave notice that there would be a meeting of a similar character in his church, Dublin street, to-night, when they would hear more on the subject. The Rev. Messrs. Graham and Ryckman will address the meeting on that occasion.

20,000 MEN DRILLING NIGHTLY IN CHICAGO.—A reporter of the New York Sunday Mercury interviewed on Saturday a Communist agent who came from Chicago to purchase arms. The agent said instead of 5,000 Communists being drilled in Chicago nightly, there were over 20,000. In San Francisco, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Indianapolis, and Philadelphia their organizations were complete. Their strength was hourly increasing, and their rolls contained members of almost every creed and nationality. It was their intention to district this city as San Francisco and Chicago are, into drilling halls or armories. Their arming was purely for defensive purposes and it was intended to place New York upon a war footing. Reconciliation has been arrived at with a number of trades unions and societies in the State. The agent said they had nothing to do with the Paris Commune, except in sympathy with many of its views—redistribution of property and readjustment of labor rates and the like appear dimly in the distance, yet there is no knowing what time may bring about. San Francisco is the headquarters, but the agent refused to name the leaders.

A Chinaman's application for naturalization has been refused by a San Francisco judge, on the ground that a Chinaman is not a white made in the sense of the term as used in the naturalization laws.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Britain Still Preparing for War.

CANADIAN LOYALTY RECOGNISED.

LONDON, April 29.

Gen. Sir Alfred Hastings Horsford has been selected as commander of the Second Army Corps. A considerable proportion of the First Army Corps will be despatched to Malta in a week, including a portion of the Guards. Many thousand stands of Martini-Henry rifles are being removed from the Tower of London for the equipment of the reserves. Great activity prevails at Portsmouth in preparing fittings for the conversion of merchant ships into armed cruisers.

A manufacturing firm has received from the Admiralty an order for more than a hundred wire torpedo nets, for the protection of ships from the attacks of Fish torpedoes, to be delivered during May. Immense quantities of shot and shell are being issued from Woolwich Arsenal in all directions. The first Indian expeditionary force embarks from Bombay. Two divisions leave to-day, consisting of two batteries of Royal Artillery, 13th and 31st Regiments, second Goorkhas, and two companies of sappers of miners. The second will embark as soon after as possible. The native soldiers in the East Indies are volunteering by regiments for service in the English army against the Russians in Europe. Work at Bombay dockyard in fitting vessels to carry troops is going on night and day.

Mr. Gathorne Hardy, Secretary for India, presiding at a banquet in Bradford to-night, said the Government took its stand upon public faith and honesty, and upon the declaration of 1871 that one party to an engagement could not withdraw from it without the consent of the rest. He maintained that the Treaty of San Stefano in its present shape did not contain a single element of permanent peace. The interest of the Greek and Mussulman populations must be protected as well as those of the Slaves. The measures of the British Government were not warlike, but precautionary. A war party or a war Ministry was an impossibility in England. If the people went to war it must not be for the sake of victories, but only for great principles. The Government were determined to maintain the principles by which their conduct on the Eastern Question had hitherto been actuated.

A Vienna despatch says:—A letter from London states that the British Government still considers it possible that Russia may appreciate to the full England's earnestness. In the contrary case England will take into her own hands and at her own risk the rectification of Russia's work in the Balkans, in the Peninsula, and on the Asiatic cost of the Black Sea. Possibly before embarking upon this course England will summon a Conference in London.

At a meeting to-night of the Committee to promote the organization of an active service volunteer army, two generals, five colonels, and many members of Parliament joined the Committee. Thirty officers and 300 men yesterday signified their willingness to join the force, and many were enrolled to-day. The total of volunteers so far is 80,000.

Mr. Gathorne Hardy spoke at Bradford in a very determined tone. He said he believed England could send 70,000 abroad at this moment. England is no longer a small island, but a vast Empire, having a right to draw trustworthy defenders from all parts of the Empire. He knew nothing which gratified him so much as when lately he received offers from Canada to raise regiments, and he believed the same heart was beating in all colonies as at home.

A Woolwich despatch says two batteries of artillery there are under orders to be ready to proceed to Malta.

A Bombay despatch says:—The first detachment of troops sailed, and a number of fresh regiments are waiting. The expedition takes stores for fives months.

The Standard says:—It is understood at Aldershot that the Queen has expressed the intention of naming an early day to review the First Army Corps in its now complete state.

A Berlin despatch says:—The negotiations relative to the withdrawal from Constantinople are proceeding favourably. The Russians have agreed to withdraw to a line from Adrianople to Dediagatch.

A despatch to the Times from St. Petersburg declares that Bismarck has ceased mediating, while despatches from Berlin and Vienna state the exact opposite very positively.

The Vienna newspapers report that the entry of Austrian troops into Bosnia and the Herzegovina is imminent. The announcement, however, is believed to be founded on conjecture.

It is rumoured from Vienna that Von Moltke, the well-known German strategist, now visiting Copenhagen, is commissioned to negotiate a league between Denmark, Russia, and Germany for closing the Baltic.

A Berlin letter (semi-official) says:—It could hardly be expected that a foreign fleet would appear in the Baltic against the wish of Germany.

A St. Petersburg despatch says:—Bulletins announce that Gortschakoff is better although weakness still renders him incapable of transacting business.

A sensational correspondent asserts that the Russians are again demanding the forts on the Bosphorus and approaching near Constantinople.

A St. Petersburg correspondent says:—There has been no perceptible progress in the negotiations during the last twenty-four hours. Direct pourparlers between England and Russia have hardly begun. Russia still wishes to ascertain England's views in general terms. It is not yet known whether Lord Salisbury will relax his present strictly negative attitude.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 29.

Mr. Langevin referred to certain statements made by the Premier regarding the contract systems of the late and present Government respectively, and claimed superiority for the old system. He also referred to and criticised lengthily the contracts in the North-West.

Mr. Mackenzie related the circumstances connected with the contracts in the North-West. He showed that his (Mr. Mackenzie's) comparison of the contract system of the two Governments had been provoked by the unfair attacks of the leader of the Opposition, and went on to show the fairness, economy, and efficiency which characterized the present system. A lengthy discussion then ensued regarding the Nixon investigation, Messrs. Dymond, Macdougall (Elgin,) Young, and others, showing from the evidence the unfair nature of the attacks made on Mr. Nixon by several Opposition speakers. The matter then dropped.

Dr. Tupper stated that he had given notice of a motion on the question of the sugar duties in anticipation of the effect which he had expected Fernando Wood's tariff legislation would have on Canadian industries. The subsequent action of Congress, however, induced him to leave his amendment in abeyance.

The House went into Committee of Supply at six o'clock.

Glass, the Molson's Bank embezzler, has been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

Political Cries.

Our Tory friends are as remarkable for their readiness in adopting election cries as they are distinguished for the total absence of anything like a fixed principle. We must give them credit for their intimate knowledge of the weakness of human nature—a knowledge acquired probably from innate experience,—however much we may condemn them in respect of either their conduct or professions. Knowing full well that there is a very considerable class of the people of Canada with no fixed political principles, or easily induced by selfish motives to turn renegade, and feeling that this class can be reached more easily by an incidental dodge than by anything like a course of political logic, they at once adopt that course of making converts. Illustrative of the truth of what we say, we have only to call attention to a few salient points of the conduct of the Conservative party for the past ten or twelve years. In doing so, we have no desire to introduce a general political discussion of the merits and acts of the two great parties in Canada, but will content ourselves with showing the object of our opponents in raising the cries they have done.

Our readers cannot fail to recollect the position of affairs at Confederation. Through the persistent efforts of the Reform party, Confederation became a historic fact, and the different Provinces were in 1867, placed on a solid and constitutional basis. The Tories, alarmed at the strength and influence of the Reform element in the celebrated Coalition Ministry of that day, and anxious to have the opportunity of commencing their career on a clean sheet, raised the "No-Party" cry. This had its effect. Many of our friends were led at that time to believe in a chimerical piece of non-partyism, and accorded to the existing Governments a certain amount of support. The fallacy soon made itself apparent, and Toryism, pure and simple, again became rampant. No partyism had served its purpose and was cast away. Later on we find the Opposition in the Local Government exerting every nerve and straining to the utmost to defeat Mr. Mowat's Ministry. "Speak now," "Riel," and "Orange Rights," became the pass-words as occasions offered, and at the risk of setting one class against another, and arraying creed against creed, the present Loyal Opposition venture all,—reputation, character, and even country for the sake of office. Their defeat at the next election, however, seems inevitable, for notwithstanding the unscrupulous efforts of the Tories, the Mowat Administration is perfectly safe. Another example of the truth of what we have said, as well as of the paucity of Tory principles, is the present political cry of "Protection." Desirous of keeping the Pacific Scandal in the back ground, and of throwing a cloak over the hundred and one iniquities of their past record, the Chieftain and his followers have deluged the country with Protective ideas, and, to use their own pet phrase, have turned it into a very "slaughter house" of politics. No policy, no principles, no reforms are brought forward; nothing but a mere cry. Such is the dish our opponents wish to set before the people, and such the lever by which they tell us they want to govern the country. Everything that belongs to the late Government must be kept hidden. The very plaintiveness and sorrow which tinge the cry with sadness and humility, should convince us that the reckless and rollicking Tory has not changed his coat without a purpose. Love of office is not to be lost sight of even if the Opposition adopt as their motto—"Let the dead past bury its dead," nor will the leopard change his spots, because necessity compels him in the meantime to hide them with paint.

We are indeed surprised that any Reformer can so far forget either his principles or his judgment, as to be led away by any such schemes. We thought that the past history of the Tories and their present conduct would have been sufficient to have satisfied the most wavering adherent of the Reform party, that the whole thing is a dodge in order to get Sir John back to power. And we can only say that any man who deserts his life-long principles for the mere shadow of a promise, and seeks by his act to turn an honest, economical and upright Administration out of office to give place to demagogues and hungry politicians, is lacking in the true elements of manhood.

SPEAKING of the Globe's charges about members being the worse of liquor on the memorable night of the long session, the Seaforth Expositor says:—"While we do not express an opinion as to the truth or falsity of the Globe's charge, because we have no personal knowledge of the facts, we do say most distinctly and unhesitatingly that if the Globe's statementis true, it was not only justified in making the statement, but it was its duty to do so, and consequently deserves all praise for its boldness in making it; but, on the other hand, if the facts do not justify the accusation, no condemnation can be too severe for a journal that would make such accusations without knowing them to be true. But, whether true or false, the Globe's charges have the merit of being boldly and plainly stated. In this respect, the conduct of that journal is in marked contrast with the mean, sneaking, insinuating course pursued by the Mail. The article, which appeared in that journal in reply to the one referred to in the Globe, was of such a character that we are sure the Conservatives themselves must have been ashamed of it. We notice it stated in some of the Opposition papers that Sir John has instituted a criminal action for libel against the Hon. George Brown. If this be true, the public will anxiously await the evidence at the trial."

SPEAKING of libel suits, we have a lively recollection of one instituted by the Hon. George Brown against the Guelph Herald, for libellous statements made about him some years ago. The Herald, on that occasion, made a most abject apology and thus saved itself from a criminal prosecution. This is how the Herald gets out of its libel suits.

Dr. Orton Following the Herald's Lead.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Globe says:—"One of the meanest, and at the same time most absurd, allegations that political or personal antipathy could suggest was made by Dr. Orton in the course of the discussion to-day. The Doctor has had a very serious scare from the appearance in the field as the Reform candidate for Centre Wellington of Mr. John Robinson, a substantial miller, and a man universally respected in the county. When Mr. Guthrie had for his opponent in the South Riding Mr. Goldie, who came out on protectionist principles, Dr. Orton stumped the country on Mr. Goldie's behalf, and declared everybody should vote for a miller. But now he has to "hedge," and has much trouble to know how to do it. Meantime, if he cannot strike he will try to sting, and so gives currency in Parliament to a foolish insinuation that the contract for railway ties at Winnipeg was given to Mr. Wm. Robinson, brother of the candidate, in order to induce the latter to take the field against the great champion of agricultural protection. Mr. John Robinson was very likely disinclined to meet as a competitor for Parliamentary honors a person who can descend to practices so unworthy, but he happens to be one of those men who can very well afford to rub shoulders with Dr. Orton without any loss to his own reputation."

HAMILTON Times:—Mr. W. H. Frazer "Nationally moved" in Erin last week. He did not venture to take a vote on the "policy" but doubtless after the meeting was over he moved energetically for a section—of the twenty thousand dollars.

WE are creditably informed that the removal of Randall, Farr & Co. from Hespeler was arranged and agreed upon while Sir John Macdonald was in power, and that neither Mackenzie nor his policy had anything to do with it.

IT is asserted on authority that Tuesday or Wednesday of next week have been fixed for prorogation, but this will depend on the factious Opposition.

AFTER his disappointment over the vote on the coal duty, Sir John vented his anger on the Speaker, and took his revenge in that fashion.

MR O FLYNN, who opposed Mr. Bowell in the last contest, has been again nominated as the Reform candidate in the next election.

The Gauger of Slane.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

THE FRUITLESS SEARCH.

Several months had elapsed since the abduction of Lizzie and the child, and all Harold's efforts to find or even trace them had failed. These efforts had been manifold and incessant. Daddy Duff had traversed the country far beyond his usual bounds, and, while apparently bent on no object but the pursuit of his profession as a mendicant, he had made secret, unsuspected inquiries everywhere, but to no purpose. Harold and Kenneth Fraser, in various disguises and different characters, had been almost night and day engaged in the same pursuit, animated, we may be sure, by the strongest motives which prompt to human endeavour, in which all feeling of personal trouble was lost. The gauger, also, true to his promise, had put in operation all the means at his command, and, with an earnestness and perseverance which attested the sincerity of his avowal to serve the man he had so deeply injured, had made every effort within the large district which, as an Excise official, he had in charge. But all was in vain. These united exertions wholly failed to lead to any clue.

Harold was in despair. Torn by grief, anxiety, and suspense, he had begun to contemplate the adoption of some desperate measure, from which Mr. Adamson found it difficult to dissuade him. The lawyer was as disappointed and chagrined as any one. He had not been idle any more than the rest. He had tried in every way to trace the avenue by which Lizzie's letters reached him at regular interyals. He was convinced that his clerk, Tom Ironby, was the medium of their passage to his door letter-box, and set himself to watch Tom in every possible way. Knowing now that Tom was a secret spy in the interests of Gilmour Logan and his mother, it was as much as the worthy lawyer could do to treat his clerk with the same urbanity as formerly; but, knowing how all-important it was to conceal his feelings, he dissembled them in the meantime, in the expectation that the time would come when he would have the exquisite pleasure of kicking him out of the office. He could not afford to do that yet, and constrained himself to be bland and agreeable as formerly, and succeeded so well in this that Tom never dreamed his perfidy was known to his employer.

Despite all his arts and artifices to discover how the letters came duly to their destination he remained as much in the dark as ever. In Tom's movements he could detect nothing, yet with monthly regularity the packet came, and he despatched it to the cave among the mountains by the way which Harold had appointed for that purpose.

Of course Walter Adamson knew well enough that Lizzie's letters passed through McGarray's hands—nay, that every one of them was copied by her from another of his dictation. Ere long the thought struck him that they might not have been written by Lizzie at the date they bore. Perhaps they (her captors) had forced her to write a number at once, putting dates at them to suit their purpose. If this were so the letters were no proof that Lizzie was still alive, safe, and well-treated, as the letters invariably asserted. Both she and the child might be dead, or in a very different situation from what was indicated, and this truth could be kept from them till the stock of letters which had been prepared was exhausted.

Mr. Adamson knew that it would be both cruel and dangerous to impart this idea to Harold. It would have filled the youth with additional anguish, and probably have incited him to some rash act. The lawyer, therefore, refrained from mentioning it, but he resolved nevertheless to take a step which would satisfy his feelings to do what he contemplated, but he stifled his mortification and sought an interview with McGarray.

That worthy he found in the private room of his office; and, a consummate deceiver though McGarray was, he could not restrain a start and a quick, anxious look when he recognised his visitor. But he recovered himself in a moment, and received Mr. Adamson with a politeness that seemed quite unconscious of any reason why they should dislike or distrust each other.

"Ah, good day, Mr. Adamson," he smilingly exclaimed. "Glad to see you, sir. We don't see much of each other I think; both busy, I suppose, with our own different affairs. Very hot to-day, but splendid summer weather isn't it? Take a seat, pray. What news in town to-day?"

"No, Mr. McGarray," responded the other, "I won't take a seat, and I haven't called to discuss the news of the day; I have come to say a word or two about that desperate game you and Gilmour Logan are playing."

"Game—game—what game?" inquired McGarray, quite innocently, but with a twinkle in his small, evil eye, which indicated triumph and satisfaction.

"Explanation is superfluous, sir. You understand me well enough, and as we are alone here I don't object to admit that you are playing it with singular skill. You have over-reached me, I won't deny it; neither will I deny that the means you have taken to tie up Harold Logan are ingenious and successful. Their moral character I shall not now characterise, but you need not doubt that I have my own opinion on that point."

An aggravating smile and another triumphant twinkle of the eye was all the response made by McGarray.

"My purpose in calling on you," went on Mr Adamson, "is not to remonstrate or expostulate, for that, I well know, would be a vain thing; but I have come to intimate that the power you have over Harold Logan will serve no longer to keep him silent and inactive, unless his wife's monthly letter is written on a sheet of paper which I shall furnish regularly. For aught we know, her letters may not be written on the dates they bear. It is quite possible that at the time you had her abducted, you compelled her to write a great number from copies which you furnished—possibly you have the stock lying in your drawer at this moment and from that stock you have one conveyed into my letter-box each month, that Harold may believe it has just been written by his wife, while all the time she may be dead or in some evil case. For the future, nothing will satisfy Harold but this—that the letters are written on paper furnished by me. If this is refused, then nothing—I tell you, McGarray, nothing—shall restrain him from taking that action which your admirable cunning has hitherto prevented. Now, do you agree to this?"

"He, he, he," laughed McGarray. "I have listened to your long speech quite silently as you have observed. Though it gives me abundant opportunity to speak I choose to be silent. I am too much of a lawyer, Adamson, to admit or deny anything. All I have to say is if you think proper to send a sheet of paper here occasionally no one shall hinder you from doing so. Writing paper is not so very dear, still I am a careful, thrifty man and never throw anything away. I shall find a use for it, you may depend."

"Find the use for it which I have indicated, sir, or a claim to the succession on behalf of Harold Logan's son shall immediately lodged," was Mr. Adamson's stern reply, as with an angry, withering, contemptuous look he turned on his heel and went his way.

This visit to McGarray had the desired result. From that time Lizzie's letter was written on paper furnished by Mr. Adamson, and as each sheet was marked by him so that he should know it was it and none other, he knew in this way that Lizzie had written the letter only a day or two before, and thus was satisfied that she was at least alive and well enough to wield a pen.

May-Day in Ireland and Scotland.

(Ogive: The Celtic S. Nicolas.)

In Dublin the youths decorated a bush four or five feet high, with candles, which they lighted and danced around till burnt out. They then lighted a huge bonfire, threw the bush on it, and continued their dance around that. In other parts of Ireland the boys had a mischievous habit of running through the streets with bundles of nettles, with which they struck the face and hands of every one they met. The sting of the nettle, perhaps you know, is a very uncomfortable pain. The same people are very superstitious, and they believed that the power of the Evil Eye was greater on the first of May than at any other time, and they insured a good supply of milk for the year by putting a green bough against the house, which is certainly an easy way. In all times the Druids drove all the cattle through the fire to keep them from diseases, and this custom still survives in parts of Ireland, where many a peasant who owns a cow and a bit of straw, is careful to do the same.

In the Scotch Highlands, in the eighteenth century, the boys had a curious custom. They would go to the moors outside of the town and make a round table in the sod by cutting a trench around it deep enough for them to sit down to their grassy table. On this table they would kindle a fire and cook a custard of eggs and milk and knead a cake of oatmeal, which was toasted by the fire. After eating the custard the cake was cut into as many parts as there were boys; one piece was made black with coal, and then all put into a cap. Each boy was in turn blindfolded and made to take a piece, and the one who selected the black one was to be sacrifice to Baal, whose favor they wished to ask for their harvest. The victim in that day had only to leap through the fire; but there is little doubt that the whole thing was a survival from the days when human beings were really sacrificed.

In the island of Lewis, in the west of Scotland, there prevails a custom of sending a man very early on May-day to cross a certain river, believing that if a woman cross it first the salmon would not come into the stream for a year.

CANADIANS who are not satisfied with their own country, and who have a hankering for farms in the Western States would do well to ponder over the reports of the great storm in Iowa. These storms are by no means uncommon, and the story of destruction which has swept over that State is not an exceptional one. In some places the inhabitants have had to dig holes in the ground and roof them over, for nothing in the shape of a house or barn or fence could stand the violence of the wind. In other places forests have been swept down like grain before the reaper, and houses have been blown from their foundations and carried hundreds of yards. Many Canadians, well-to-do farmers, have gone through a bitter experience in those western countries, and the statements they make about the violence of the wind and the freaks it plays with man, beasts and property, are almost beyond credibility. But when so many witnesses speak to the same point we are bound to believe that these Western phenoma realities and marvels of the forces of nature. So says an exchange.

THE International Review for May-June has been received from the publishers, Messrs. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York. The high character of this periodical is fully sustained, as might be premised by the following table of contents:—Science and Theology, ancient and modern, by James Anthony Froude; The New King of Italy, and The New Pope, by Prof. Angelo De Gubernatis, of Italy; Warthrie Sonnets, by Ray Palmer; United States Provisional Court of Louisiana, by Judge Chas. A. Peabody; Reason and Sentiment, by Henry C. Pedder; The Bible—Egyptology and The Bible, by Philip Schaff, and the Gospel according to John, by Lyman Abbott; Learned Women of Bologna, by Madam Villari; The Moral Problem, by Mark Hopkins, of William's College; The Future of the Erie Canal, by John B. Jarvis, C.E.; Elements of National Wealth, by David A. Wells; Contemporary Literature—dealing with a variety of works. The price of the Review is $5 per annum.

The imports of the Dominion, exclusive of British Columbia, during the month of March amounted to $6,203,201. Of this $1,137,911 ranked as free goods. The duty collected was $998,165.96. The value of exports from the Dominion, exclusive of British Columbia, during the month of March amounted in the aggregate to $1,-972,301.

Victor Emmanuel, King of England.

It is a curious fact, and one that is not generally known, that King Victor Emmanuel was by the strict law of succession, the rightful King of England. He was descended in a direct line from Charles I. The youngest daughter of that unhappy monarch, the Princess Henrietta Maria, married Gaston d'Orleans, the brother of Louis XIV. She died, leaving two daughters. The eldest became Queen of Spain, and died childless. The younger married the heir to the House of Savoy, and was the ancestress of the late King of Italy. After the revolution of 1868, when the right to succession to the British throne was settled by act of Parliament, the House of Savoy was excluded on account of the Catholic religion professed by its members. The House of Hanover, of which Queen Victoria is the representative, was several removes farther from the direct succession, deriving, as it did, its claims from James I., through Queen Elizabeth, of Bohemia, and her daughter, the Electress Sophia. A striking comment on the consequences of human actions is afforded by this story of a royal inheritance. When Charles I. espoused a Catholic princess he could scarcely have imagined that by this act he was excluding his direct descendants from the throne of their fathers; and still less could his Queen have foreseen that any descendant of her favorite child, so carefully raised by her in the tenets of her own religion, should ever overthrow the temporal power of the Pope, and be himself installed upon the throne.

The Georgian Bay Branch Railway.

Mr. Mackenzie has laid on the table a recent Order-in-Council passed with regard to the Georgian Bay Branch Railway. Having recited the previous history of the project it proceeds to recommend as follows :—

"That the proposition of the Canada Central Railway Company, to extend the line to such a point as may be selected by the Government as the terminus of the Canada Pacific Railway, at, or near the crossing of the Nipissing Road, at the southeast corner of Lake Nipissing, for the sum of one million and four hundred and forty thousand dollars, should be accepted upon the condition as to the grades recommended by the chief engineer; that the total payment to be made shall not, under any circumstances, exceed the sum of twelve thousand dollars per mile, and that the line shall be completed within three years; also that the Company shall enter into an agreement to grant running power, on terms to be approved by the Governor-in-Council to the Montreal, Ottawa & Western Railway, now in process of construction from Montreal, on the northern side of the Ottawa River, or any railway in extension thereof from any point of intersection west of the Town of Renfrew, that may be approved of by the Governor-in-Council, and also to the Kingston & Pembroke Railway Company from the intersection of their line; provided such point of intersection is at or west of Renfrew and to such other companies as may have the termini of their systems on or towards Lake Huron, and which may be designated by the Governor-in-Council as entitled to such running powers, provided that the terms of such running powers to any of the said companies or roads may be mutually agreed upon by the Canada Central Railway Company and the Quebec Government and the other companies named, and in the event of disagreement the conditions to be settled by arbitration—one arbitrator to be selected by each party and one by the Governor-in-Council. The Government of Canada and the lessess or future owners of the Government road westward of the western terminus of the subsidized line shall possess running powers in the said railway on similar terms to the companies designated.

DRAYTON HORSE SHOW.—The second annual show of horses, under the auspices of the Drayton Entire Horse Association, was held on Friday, 19th April, on the fair ground. The show suffered through lack of heavy draught horses, there being no entries in that class. The first prize in the General Purpose class was taken by Young French Lion, owned by Archie Brander: the second by Young Netherby, owned by Thomas Ostrander. In the road and carriage class the first prize was awarded to Dr. Butler, owned by William Jackson; the second to Canada Southern, owned by Wm. Shaw, of Drayton; and the third to Young Harper, owned by Mr. E. Lowes, of Peel. Meteor, owned by Wm. Shaw, Drayton, was given the first prize for best thoroughbred. The first prize was $15 and diploma; second prize, $5; and the third, $2.

Fifteen thousand people attended a Roman Catholic church at Milford, Mass., recently, attracted by the expectation that Father Cuddehy would allude to a controversy between himself and the society of Hibernians. He denounced the order in most severe terms, declared the pews in the church, held by them, vacant, and warned Americans against the order, as Mollie Maguire disturbances in Pennsylvania might be repeated in New England. The members of the order declare their intention to adhere, regardless of the action of the church.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. May Cattle Fair.

A Large Number of Cattle Offered, but few Sales.

The May cattle fair followed so closely after the Easter Show, and this month being a very busy one on the farm, buyers evidently had concluded that there would be very few cattle offered, and consequently many familar face from Toronto and elsewhere where not present to deal with those who had cattle for sale.

Notwithstanding this particular season being a very busy one there were in the neighborhood of eight hundred cattle on the grounds. Prices, however, were low, and only averaged about $3.50 per cwt. As high as $5 were paid, but in such cases the animals had been previously purchased for May fair delivery. There were quite a number of animals in prime condition and not a few of them heavy enough for the foreign market. The latter class were bid on, while the smaller were not in such a great demand. A number of farmers, disgusted at prices offered, drove their animals home again, resolving to keep them until higher figures could be quoted. The sales appended will enable the reader to form a very correct idea of the prices paid :—

Geo. Darby, two heifers for $60.
Wm. Bathgate, bull at $37½.
B. Metcalf, steer at $4.
James Hume, two year old steer for $30.
J. J. Fox, steer for $35.

F. Dedles, 3 head for $100.
John Stewart, 3 head for $75.
John Kerby, 5 head for $48 each.
Henry Hawes, 3 head at $3.37½.
Wm. Flewelling, 3 steers at $5, weighing about 1,100 lbs. each.
W. Ross, 2 head at $4.37½.
John Dickie, steer for $49.
Arch. Ferguson, yoke of oxen for $110.
Smith Evans, milch cow for $34.
Jas. Evans, cow for $30.
H. Morrow, 2 heifers for $80.
Samuel Eustace, milch cow for $28.
A. Snider, 6 head for $191.
John Brown, 2 head for $95.
Robert Barber, 3 head at $4.

John Anderson, cow for $35.
A. Anstee, 2 head at $3.50.
S. Dawson, 3 steers for $105.
John Hawes, 2 steers for $75.
Thos. Dunbar, 2 steers for $88.
M. Duggan, 3 steers for $117.
Mr. Murphy, cow for $28.
Thos. Carter, cow for $35.
John Hales, cow for $48.
John Phin, 6 head at $4.75.

FOR LAKE SUPERIOR.—Mr. Wm. Macdonald, of Aberfoyle, and party to the number of twelve, left to-day by the Great Western Railway for Southampton, where they take the steamer for the north shore of Lake Superior where they will engage in the lumber business. Several of Mr. Macdonald's Puslinch friends went out to the station to bid the party good-bye. Mr. F. Gauhan sold the tickets for the entire party.

GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA cures Neuralgia, Face Ache, Rhematism, Gout, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Erysipelas, Bruises and Wounds of every nature in man or animal. The remarkable cures this remedy has effected classes it as one of the most important and valuable remedies ever discovered for the cure and relief of pain.

In July last I fell and hurt my back; tried every thing without relief until I used GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA, which cured me.

STILL THEY COME.—We notice the railway companies delivering large quantities of new goods at the Lion this morning. These we are told are some of the bargains secured by Mr. Williamson at the trade sales in Montreal a few days ago—when goods were said to have been sold lower than ever. Local News.

THIS is May-day. Glorious weather.

KERRISON this evening in the town hall. Read card in another column.

LICENSES for the ensuing year for hotels and shops were issued yesterday.

THE Guelph Sunday rioters will be interviewed at the Police Court to-morrow.

HIS LORDSHOP BISHOP FULLER passed through town to-day on his way to Palmerston.

BASE BALL.—On Monday the Rochesters defeated the New Bedfords by a score of 2 to 1.

MODERATE winds, mostly between south and west, fair weather are the weather probs.

THE stables and driving shed in connection with D. McLaren's hotel, at Tiverton, were destroyed by fire on Tuesday evening.

CHECKERS.—The players from the County of Halton will be in Guelph on the 9th inst., to play the return match with the Guelph men at the American Hotel.

FRESH ARRIVALS.—Messrs. Williamson & Co., have new announcements to-day of special bargains in new goods just in. They offer new inducements every day.

THE uniforms for the Guelph Rifle Company have arrived and will be distributed to the men at the drill shed on Thursday evening. A full muster for drill is ordered Friday evening.

THE Musical Union had an excellent practice last evening. There was a large attendance of members. Mr. Rogers acted as conductor in the absence of Mr. W. Philp.

The Elora May cattle fair was largely attended, and a large number of cattle was sold. The ruling figure was about $3.50 per cwt. For very heavy animals $4.75 was paid.

The Grand Jury at the Lambton Assizes recommended as a means to abate the tramp nuisance the recent Act of the Legislature enabling prisoners in county gaols to be employed outside the walls thereof, would act as a detriment to crime, should be acted upon.

CHERRY BROS. will take possession of the fine flouring mills at Glenmorris about the first of June. Tolton & Fox have purchased the lease and business of the Phœnix mill and feed store of Cherry Bros. in Guelph.

A HORSE and buggy was stolen from P. Bricker's livery stable, at New Hamburg, on Monday last, by a young lad about seventeen years of age, who had been loafing round the village for several days. The thief and the stolen articles were captured on Tuesday at Preston.

STRANGE FREAK.—We are informed by Mr. Joseph Pritez, of Waterloo Townsnip, that some weeks ago one of his ewes had a lamb, and that in a week after she had two more. In the latter birth one of the lambs was very small, and died soon after birth. The other is strong and vigorous, as the one lambed the week previous. The mother takes kindly to both.

THE question is asked "What system of street watering will be secured?" The merchants on Wyndham street, who pay the bulk of the cost, talk as though nothing but the hydrant system would answer. They should know, as both the cart and hydrant systems have been tried, and the former has been pronounced a failure.

EDUCATIONAL MEETING LAST EVENING.—There was a fair attendance last evening at the Dublin street Methodist Church. The Rev. Mr. Brock occupied the chair, and after reading a portion of the annual report, similar to that given on the evening previous in the Norfolk street Methodist Church, the Rev. Mr. Ryckman and the Rev. Mr. Graham gave excellent addresses in advocacy of the claims of the Society on the liberality of the church. The choir gave a number of anthems in fine style, and the proceedings throughout were of a most interesting character.

BATTERY DRILL LAST EVENING.—There was a full muster of men and considerable interest was manifested by the young artillerymen. Some of the striplings state that they had no idea when they joined that there was work connected with drill, and would now almost forego the pleasure of wearing the handsome uniform just to take it easy. The new drill instructor assumed his position last evening. He is thoroughly efficient.

KERRISON.—The literary and musical entertainment for last evening in the Town Hall did not come off. Mr. Davenport Kerrison was refused admission until the price of the hall was paid for. The caretaker had received his orders and he could not be persuaded to act contrary to them. The result was that the three or four waiting outside to secure tickets were obliged to forego the anticipated pleasure. A reporter was informed by Mr. F. Kerrison that he purposed instituting an action against the Town, as he was told when renting the hall that there was no necessity for paying the hall rent in advance.

CHALMERS' CHURCH.—At an adjourned meeting of the elders and managers of the above church on Tuesday evening, it was arranged that an after-tea social would be held in the church to-morrow evening, complimentary to the Rev. Dr. Wardrope, on receiving his degree of D.D. from Queen's University, Kingston. The entertainment will consist of addresses, music, &c. No charge will be made. All connected with the congregation, and the friends from other denominations are cordially invited to be present.

IT is said that when a lawyer wears a gown all tattered and torn it is done for effect, indicates many years of active work in the service of clients, and is analogous to the old veteran taking a pride in the bullet riddled flag that he has fought under. Perhaps so, but then how is it that a comparatively young lawyer can wear a gown worn or torn into shreds?

A grand Mardi Gras carnival will be held in Toronto on Dominion Day, when a grand procession will take place, an immense number of people appearing in costume.

A HENIOUS OFFENCE.

Isaac Wallace Arrested on a Serious Charge.

There were living in Guelph a short time ago, in the neighborhood of Essex street—the common appellation of which bears a very sulphurous suggestion—a woman named McKay, and her daughter, about nine years old. Leaving Guelph, they went to Stratford, where they have been ever since.

A few days ago Chief Constable Williams, of Stratford, was informed by Mrs. McKay that her daughter had stated to her that a son of Mrs. Buckner, named Isaac Wallace, had some time previously entered the house they were living in, during her mother's absence, and holding a handkerchief over her head, he abused her in a horrible manner. After accomplishing his purpose, he warned her that if she ever mentioned what had transpired, he would kill her as soon as he heard of it.

On account of the terrible condition of the child—having contracted a disease—a doctor was consulted, and the above charge was made.

Chief Constable Kelly was communicated with, and he promptly caused the arrest of Wallace. The prisoner stoutly denies the charge.

He was brought before the Magistrate this (Wednesday) morning, and remanded until Friday, in order to secure the girl McKay and her mother, as witnesses.

SINCLAIR vs. MCDOUGALL. — Partition suit. This case, after having lasted nearly two days, resulted this morning in a decree being made in favour of the plaintiffs for partition and sale reference to Master at Guelph. Costs of suit, so far as increased by Alice Johnston, to be paid by her out of her share. Mr. Drew, Q.C., for plaintiffs, Mr. Moss with him; Mr. Watt for adult, and Mr. Biscoe for infant defendants.

The case of Morrow vs. Turner is now in progress. Ferguson, Q. C., with Mr. Vincent for plaintiff; Drew, Q.C., and Watt for defendants.

CARLYLE ON THE LORD'S PRAYER.—Thomas Carlyle, though an iconolast, is as reverent a man as lives. In a letter written in 1869 to the late Mr. Erskine he says:—"I was agreeably surprised by the sight of your handwriting again, so kind, so welcome! The letters are as firm and honestly distinct as ever—the mind, too, in spite of its frail environments, as clear, plumb-up, calmly expectant as in the best days; right so; so be it with us all till we quit this dim sojourn, now grown so lonely to us, and our change come. 'Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name, Thy will be done;' what else can we say? The other night, in my sleepless tossings about, which were growing more and more miserable, these words, that brief and grand prayer, came strangely into my mind, with an altogether new emphasis; as if written and shining for me in mild, pure splendor on the black bosom of night there; when I, as it were, read them word by word—with a sudden check to my imperfect wanderings, with a sudden softness of composure which was much unexpected. Not for thirty or forty years had I once formally repeated that prayer; nay, I never felt before how intensely the voice of man's soul it is; the inmost aspiration of all that is high and pious in poor human nature; right worthy to be recommended with an 'After this manner pray ye.'"

Jack Tibbits, a brakesman on the G. T. Railway, was killed at one o'clock on Monday morning by being knocked between the cars and run over as the train was passing under a bridge near Brantford. Deceased was a young man and a resident of Brantford.

Rev. Father Vary, a Catholic missionary, well-known throughout the Northwest, and for the past four years pastor of the Catholic Church at Prince Arthur's Landing, was found dead in his room a few days since, having died during the night, it is supposed, of heart disease, to which he was subject. Deceased was a man of about three score years, and had spent a life of toil and self-sacrifice in these Northwestern wilds, endeavoring to advance the cause of Christianity.

The following sensible regulation was recently adopted by the Winnipeg Protestant Board:—"That teachers be instructed to permit no interruptions by parents or others with complaints during school hours, but that any such complaints shall be made to the teacher interested either before or after school hours." There are 298 names enrolled in the Winnipeg Protestant Public School. The average attendance is 232.

The New York Tribune says the House of Representatives has refused to make the appropriation for the expenses of the Public Schools of the district of Columbia, and 20,000 children and 3,000 teachers will find the schools closed against them on Wednesday.

An Astonishing Fact.

A large proportion of the American people are to-day dying from the effects of dyspepsia or disordered liver. The result of these diseases upon the masses of intelligent and valuable people is most alarming, making life actually a burden instead of a pleasant existence of enjoyment and usefulness as it ought to be. There is no good reason for this if you will only throw aside prejudice and skepticism, take the advice of druggists and your friends, and try one bottle of Green's August Flower. Your speedy relief is certain. Millions of bottles of this medicine have been given away to try its virtues, with satisfactory results in every case. You can buy a sample bottle for ten cents to try. Three doses will relieve the worst case. Positively sold by all druggists on the Western Continent.

On Thursday morning an accident occurred in Hamilton which has since proved fatal to a young man named Chas. Beaver. Beaver and a friend named Wakeham had been out on the bay duck shooting, and in endeavoring to spring ashore Beaver's foot caught in the trigger of the gun, which was heavily loaded with powder and duck shot, the whole charge entering his head above the left eye. He died in three hours afterward.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Britain and Russia Negotiating.

PROSPECTS OF PEACE MORE HOPEFUL.

London, April 20.

It is stated in official circles in London that the relations between England and Russia are momentarily improving. There is increased confidence in a peaceful solution of the questions at issue.

A Bombay despatch announces that the first detachment of the native expeditionary force sailed to-day for the Mediterranean. The enthusiasm is intense. The Begun of Bhopal, in Hindostan, has volunteered all her native troops for foreign service.

The Liverpool Customs authorities are understood to have been instructed to exercise especial vigilance in the examination of export cargoes, to prevent contraband of war leaving.

A London correspondent says:—The first contingent to be despatched from this country to Malta will number 5,000 men, with two batteries of artillery, all of which are under orders for embarkation.

The Manchester Guardian's Vienna correspondent telegraphs from Hamburg that the American Packet Co.'s steamship Cimbria has been chartered by the Russian Government, and has taken 40 officers and 500 seamen, and started to cruise on the Chinese and Japanese coasts.

A special from Constantinople states that the grand review at San Stefano was countermanded in consequence of the necessity of despatching large bodies of troops against the Mussulman insurgents.

A Vienna correspondent draws attention to the awkward position of the Russians. They are confronted at Constantinople by an army superior to anything the Turks ever concentrated at one point throughout the war, numbering 70,000.

A correspondent at San Stefano says:—I am told that Todleben and Imeretinsky both think war inevitable. The men are beginning to talk more of war. The appearance of the troops and horses when the Grand Duke took his farewell on Saturday was very satisfactory.

A Vienna despatch says Gortschakoff's health is worse again. He is very weak and sleepless, but has no fever.

Considerable excitement seems to have been produced at Berlin by the announcement that the English fleet is being fitted out for eventual operations in the Baltic.

A Belgrade despatch says:—It appears that friendship between Russia and Servia is completely restored.

The Mussulman insurrection appears to be growing serious. It involves not only the whole of the northern half of the Rhodope Range, but, according to an account, is spreading to the Balkans. The insurgents are endeavoring to gain strategic points in a way that shows the existence of a directing head.

THE GRAND TRUNK TO DRAYTON.—A large and influential meeting of people from the surrounding townships interested in the extension of the Grand Trunk Railway northwards was held in the village of Drayton on the 19th inst. A committee was appointed to divide the townships of Maryborough, Peel, and Woolwich, and get the feeling of the townships. The New Era says:—It has never been our privilege to attend a public meeting where in so many interests were concerned that the auditory were so unanimous. Not one word being said in opposition to the scheme, and if the bonus campaign is conducted in the same amicable manner we doubt not that respectable bonuses will be voted in each of the municipalities represented." In reply to questions, the chairman stated that the scheme, as proposed, was to run from Waterloo through St. Jacobs, Elmira, as near Glenallan as engineering difficultics would permit, and by Drayton northward to some point on the lake. The following resolution was then adopted:—Moved by Messrs. Emes and Echlin, that this meeting, composed as it is of freeholders of the townships of Maryboro' and Peel and the village of Drayton, heartily endorse the railway policy as set forth by the various speakers, viz., the extension of the Grand Trunk; and do therefore recommend the said municipalities to grant bonuses in aid of said Grand Trunk extension; and pledge themselves to give it their hearty and entire support.

RIFLE BALLS SEEN IN THEIR FLIGHT.—The Rochester Democrat says:—The fact that human eyes, with the aid of a field-glass, have seen rifle bullets, during their flight from the muzzle of the rifle to the point at which they were aimed, has been published, we believe several times; but we have never seen, to our knowledge, an announcement that they could be seen with the naked eye. Yet it is a well-attested fact that rifle balls were seen in their flight by several gentlemen, without the aid of a glass or anything, at the rifle range north of this city, one day last week. A high wind was blowing and showers were frequent—in fact, it rained almost constantly. When the spectators stood at one side of the shooter they could only follow the ball to the highest point of the arc which it described, and when they stood immediately behind the shooter (he lying down and they standing up) they could follow the bullet from a point about ten feet from the muzzle, all the way to the target, or whatever object it struck. One gentleman told the shooter, immediately after he fired, that he had shot too much to the right, and the signal of the marker a minute or two afterwards confirmed exactly what he had said. The balls were seen while the shooters were firing at five hundred yards distance. The rifles were of the heavy military kind, which carries a large bullet. Those who saw the bullets in their flight say that the arc described by them is immense at that distance, and that they also appear to curve to the right as well as up and down.

Canadian Trade and Industries.

The Expositor says: Mr. Wm. Buck, Brantford, finds it necessary to enlarge his already extensive workshops in order to meet the increasing demands for his goods. This of course arises from depression of trade and the fatal policy of the Government in not granting further protection to our suffering manufactories.

The Martin Mills, of Mount Forest, are in receipt of 20,000 bushels of first-class oats from Chicago, having found it difficult to get enough in Canada of the quality required to produce their I. X. L. oatmeal. The mill has an order for their oatmeal from Rochester. When Dr. Orton gets his tax on oats he will put a stop to this sort of business.

Manitoba is exporting large quantities of wheat this spring. Some of the steamers have carried as much as one hundred tons at a trip. Most of it is consigned to Europe, and is shipped by way of New York.

A considerable amount of ice has been taken to American ports this spring by Canadian lake vessels, and the question is exercising the Customs authorities whether it is subject to duty. The Yankees want to put a duty on it so as to encourage the weather in the States to turn out more home made ice than it does.

The success of the Valleyfield bleached cotton, as articles of staple demand, is now well assured. The thoroughness and care with which arrangements for this deserving Canadian enterprise have been progressing for two years past, are justified in the result, for the goods are sold to the wholesale trade as fast as they can be turned out. There are some 300 hands employed at the mill, and the capacity of its present machinery is about 2,500 pieces per week. But a Hamilton cotton manufacturer declares the tariff not high enough and asserts cotton manufacturing to be an industry that needs protection.

The Shooting Case in Montreal.

Hackett No Surrender Lodge of Orange Young Britons gave a benefit concert in Mechanics' Hall, on Monday evening, for the defrayal of expenses in connection with the arrest of brethren in the late party disturbances. The hall was filled to overflowing.

During the entire evening some thirty policemen patrolled St. James' street, in the vicinity of the Hall, and a squad was stationed at the hall door. They were successful in preventing crowds from collecting and standing around, although large numbers of men of suspicious appearance constantly lurked in the locality. About half-past ten numerous crowds of men thronged Craig street, apparently coming from the east end.

After the meeting had dispersed the majority of the Young Britons went home singly but owing to the information which had been brought to the hall previous to dispersing those obliged to cross Wellington Bridge, to the number of thirty or forty, banded themselves together for self-protection. They arrived at the bridge without molestation, but their opponents lay in ambuscade on the other side, and as the Britons emerged from it they were attacked. The Britons faced their assailants and returned the fire, and it is supposed that the firing lasted seven minutes in all. After it was over it was found that one of the attacking party named James Colligan, son of a widow residing at 127 Murray street, had been killed. The body was taken from the track, where he fell, and removed to the Irish Catholic Union Lodge, Colborne-street, of which the deceased was a member. The bullet had entered the head near the eye, passed through the brain, and had come out behind the ear. There were also several bruises on his face.

No doubt others in either party were wounded. It is stated that three of the Britons received bullet wounds.

Mrs. Johannah Meehan received a shot in the foot during some row prior to the Britons reaching the bridge.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, April 30.

The House went into Committee of Supply, and the time was taken up to recess with the discussion of items connected with the Department of Inland Revenue, and especially for culling timber and the inspection of weights and measures and gas.

After recess a discussion sprang up most unexpectedly on the working of the Intercolonial, Dr. Tupper provoking by his ill-considered vindication of the old regime a most crushing rejoinder from the Minister of Public Works, who proved conclusively that the working expenses of the road had been materially diminished in proportion to its length since the present Government came into power.

CATTLE POISONING.—Sunday Mr. J. H. Wilson, veterinary surgeon, was requested by Mr. Duncan Anderson, London township, to attend to several head of cattle that had taken seriously ill, one of the number being dead. They were all affected in like manner—eyes blanched, the body and limbs partially paralyzed, frothing at the mouth, the faces dark color, with violent diarrhœa. The Veterinary Surgeon at once suspected poison and proceeded to make a post mortem of the dead carcase. On examination of the stomach and viscera it was quite evident that death was caused by having taken a large quantity of Paris green. Search was then made by the crowd through the field where the cattle had been grazing, and Paris green was found mixed with common salt in a number of places. Some evil disposed person no doubt placed it there for the purpose of doing Mr. Anderson harm.

THE CANADIAN METHODIST MAGAZINE for May. Rev. S. Rose, Toronto, Publisher. $2 a years, single numbers 20 cents. The Illustrated Articles in this Number are, "Over the Alleghanies;" "The Au Sable Cnasm," and "Spring," a poem. The Au Sable Chasm is an extraordinary freak of nature, near the Eastern Townships' border line, little known in Canada, but worth, says Madame Pfeiffer, "a journey across the Atlantic to see." "Dead Sea Roses" is a stirring poem of the War of 1812, by W. Kirby, author of the "Chien d'Or." The Canadian Story, describing life in a lumber camp on the Ottawa, grows in interest. Among the other articles are, Romance of Missions; Gideon Ouseley; Odd Characters, a London Sketch; and Mission Work in British Columbia. Dr. Whedon, the veteran commentator, and Dr. Pope, President of the English Wesleyan Conference, discuss the important topics of Future Punishment and the Materialistic Skepticism of the day. The Editor reviews the War Policy of Great Britain, Temperance Legislation, etc. The Book Notices are full and varied.

Daily Mercury.

WEDNESDAY EVN'G, MAY 1, 1878.

The "Herald" and the Erin Meeting.

It must indeed be very amusing to our old Reform friends, whose memory of 1837 is yet fresh and green, to hear the young Conservative of to-day quote William Lyon Mackenzie as an authority on any question. But it must seem doubly amusing, and at the same time thoroughly ridiculous, to the old Tory war-horses, to hear the lineal descendants of the blue-blooded politicians of ye olden time, lauding to the skies, such a vile and traitorous old rebel as William Lyon was always alleged by his opponents to have been. What could have produced such a revolution of sentiment is more than we can divine. Is it because the fledgling Tory finds so little in either the principles of his present party or the records of its past to support or conscientiously advocate? or is it that your impetuous and ambitious Canada First Conservative, is so sincerely ashamed and afraid of the leaders of his party,—past and present,—that he can depend only on the authority of a Grit and one whom he used to delight in calling traitor? Truly we may well exclaim, How the mighty are fallen!

Even our contemporary, we observe, is not above quoting Mackenzie's words as established and unimpeachable evidence in support of something, though we can not well learn what that something is. However, with that as a pretext, and in the course of many rambling remarks, that journal takes up the defence of the peculiar conduct of its late ex-editor. No doubt there is a certain amount of sympathy and congenialty existing between the present editor of the Herald, and the man who could without provocation, save that he was caught in the act of telling a falsehood, throw a Parliamentary Report at the head of a gentleman respected by all who know him. The fact is not as the Herald puts it, that Mr. Wright was handed a pamphlet by Col. Clarke, but, on the contrary, Col. Clarke refused to trust a man like Wright to deal with the question fairly, and handed the pamphlet to the chairman, from whom Wright got it. We can assure our contemporary that all the gloss it is able to put on the impudent and coarse act of its protege will not hide the ugly fact, that Wright on being compelled to admit he was not telling the truth, worked himself into a passion, and threw the pamphlet directly at Col. Clarke's head. Col. Clarke, contrary to the insinuation attempted to be cast upon his courage, did resent promptly and in the most gentlemanly manner the low insult that had been offered to him. We suppose, however, that because he did not choose to dirty his character or reputation by adopting the well-known weapons of his opponents, the Herald evidently thinks he did not resent the insult according to its code of honor. We would advise Mr. Wright not to include Erin in his next route, or if he does, to learn in the meantime the mode of conducting himself, if not gentlemanly at least decently.

THE elections in Quebec are going on on to-day. There is intense exitement all over the Province.

THE Paris Exposition opens to-day.

MR. JOHN MACDONALD, of Toronto, has accepted the nomination of the Reformers for the Centre Division of that city. A better nomination could not be made.

THE only members of Parliament who are now in the House, and who were representatives in 1858, are Sir John Macdonald, and Messrs. Bourassa, Pope, of Compton, Rymal, and Langevin.

MR. SANDFORD FLEMING sent his report to the Premier respecting the much debated question of the western terminus of the Canada Pacific Railway. He pronounces in favor of Burrard Inlet, on account of the distance saved, and for other good reasons.

THE Senate has, by a majority of 39 to 20, affirmed the amendment to the Canadian Pacific Railway Bill made in Committee of the Whole, providing that the contract with the lessees of the Pembina Branch must be laid before the Upper House.

How the Conservatives are preparing for the elections may be judged from the fact that, in Toronto, on Monday, the Court of Revision had to strike off the list sixty-two Conservative voters whose names had been improperly put on. Fourteen Reformers were placed on, making a total difference on an electoral count of seventy-six votes. The list of three other wards remain to be investigated.

SIR JOHN having had the bottom knocked out of "National Policy," has taken to architectural criticism. The other night when speaking of the new tower of the Parliament buildings, he said it interfered "with the pyramidal idea of the ensemble of the buildings, and destroyed the soul of the architect, to use an architect's phrase." That would do for John Ruskin.

W. G. Hay has purchased the lot known as Davidson's Farm, Listowel, containing ninety acres, for the sum of $15,000 cash, which he proposes to lay out in town lots.

Agricultural Protection in Parliament.

(From the Monetary Times.)

The recent motions in favor of imposing import duties on grain and flour, arose apparently out of the notion of giving "protection all round." But whatever the motive, the enormous majorities by which both motions were rejected would seem to put agricultural protection out of the question at present. The farmers have not asked for protection, though some of the grangers have recently been looking in that direction. Farming is not a new industry struggling for existence, to which some degree of protection might reasonably be given in its infancy; it is profitable, and is one of the chief sources of the country's wealth. The advocates of protection for the farmer are divisible into two classes: one of which argues that duties on grains and flour would benefit the farmer, the other that till we close the door against the free admission of American produce, the United States will have no motive to enter into any arrangement for the reciprocal exchange of produce on equal terms.

There is a certain amount of agricultural produce every year shipped from each country into the other. This arises from local circumstances, and has been called a trade of convenience. It may well happen that on the long line of frontier which separates Canada from the States, it may be convenient to import American flour for consumption, at one point, and that shipments the other way may, for the same reason, take place at other points. Any thing which restricts this trade of convenience would be a mutual disadvantage; implying the necessity of reciprocally obtaining supplies, from inconvenient distances and at a needless cost for carriage. Both Canada and the United States ordinarily produce wheat, for example, in excess of their own wants; and both look to Europe for a market for their surplus. In that common market, they must, at last, stand on common ground. But there may be reasons why Canada should consume American wheat, and why the United States should use Canadian. As a matter of fact, we believe, a good deal of American wheat is used in our lumbering districts; and it is used there because it is of a relatively low quality and price. One of the reasons why American wheat goes into consumption in the Maritime Provinces in that a cheap quality is in demand there. A duty which should compel the substitution of Canadian for American wheat in the lumbering districts and the Maritime Provinces would compel both these classes of consumers to use a dearer quality of grain than they desire to purchase. In New York, and other large cities, the superior quality of our wheat may well cause it to be in demand for consumption. By this exchange, both classes of purchasers get what they want, and no one is the worse for it. In what way is the farmer injured by this exchange? In both cases he gets the best customers, because these customers get what they want.

If the Maritime Provinces had something forced on them which they did not want, they would justly complain, and as customers of the farmer, their purchasing power would be crippled to the extent of the injury they suffered in being obliged to buy a dearer article than they require. With the farmer, it would be a question where to sell. The surplus wheat of the country would, in any case, have to go to England. But, it is argued, that if you keep out American wheat, the Canadian farmer will get a better price for what he has to sell. If this be true,—and it could only be true of what he sells in Canada—if the price could beartificially raised to the fishermen of Nova Scotia, for the benefit of the farmers of Ontario, it would be both unjust and impolitic to do it; unjust, because the farmer is so much richer than the fisherman; impolitic, because such an interference with the natural laws of trade would create a great deal of dissatisfaction. And what would this boasted benefit to the farmer amount to? At present, it seems, 120,000 brls. of American flour are annually consumed in Nova Scotia, a quantity which bears a very small proportion to the whole production of Canadian wheat.

If manufactures are to be fostered, one of their first wants is raw material, including the food on which the operatives live. If the production of iron is to become one of the future industries of Canada, it is reasonable to suppose that the seat of that industry will be where the iron and the coal are found side by side, as in Nova Scotia. These elements necessarily enter into this industry: capital, labour, raw material. We have not the superabundant capital, which is found in England, and the consequence is that the manufacturer in Nova Scotia, or in any other part of Canada, must use a dearer capital than his English rival. This is one disadvantage he has to contend with. He must train the labour, which in England is found in that perfection which a long period of time can give. This is the second disadvantage. Why add a third, in the shape of taxed bread? The English artisan, it must not be forgotten, eats untaxed bread. To tax raw materials would be a left-handed way of fostering domestic manufactures; and it is evident that this indiscriminating kind of protection is self-destructive.

The Nova Scotia members were told that, if they voted for a duty on wheat and flour, they might get, as a compensation, a duty on coal. But here, again, another blow would be directed against manufacturers, which depend largely on steam power. The protection of an industry that needs no protection is the destruction of industries that do, in their infancy require some nursing. The Nova Scotians are not willing that the bread of their miners and fishermen should be taxed; but they would rejoice to see a tax on coal, in their own interest. There can be no reason why Nova Scotia should not supply Ontario with coal, but that arising out of a distance of transport. The coal miners of Pennsylvania are nearer to the consumer in Ontario, and it is a great advantage to get cheap coal, in a climate like ours. The reasons for using American coal will increase with the lessening of our forest supplies of fuel. For the rest, we do not see why Nova Scotia cannot mine coal as cheaply as Pennsylvania; and that Province and New Brunswick ought to be able to supply Quebec, when English coal, no longer coming as ballast, is not sold at a very low rate.

Indian corn is largely used in the manufacture of whiskey; it does not grow to advantage in Canada, except perhaps in the county of Essex, where a greater variety of crops can be grown than in any other part of the country. Corn is therefore imported from the States. The fact that it is used in preference to any other grain, for this purpose, may be taken as proof that it is the cheapest or in some way the best suited for distillation. If our distillers had to use some other grain, they would have to use a dearer raw material; the price of the product would necessarily be higher, and the chance of exporting it at a profit would be lessened. Indian corn is also fed to cattle, in Canada, to some extent; and the farmers who use it, are interested in getting it cheap. In return, we send barley, a much dearer crop, to the States. The Americans tax our barley, it is true; but is that a reason why we should tax their corn, when we want it for distillation and to feed to cattle.

To levy duties for political reasons—as a means of forcing the Americans into reciprocity—is another matter. The use of such a weapon is allowable, if there be a probability that its use will be successful, but in no other case. Such a policy, unless it accomplished its object, would be injurious to this country, by putting a needless restriction upon foreign commerce.

To tax raw materials, is to pursue a policy subversive of the manufacturing interest; and when it is attempted to be done, in the name, and as if for the benefit of that interest, there is an attempt, unconscious though it may be, to practice a delusion, from which no good could come.

THE Ottawa correspondent of the London Advertiser thus refers to Dr. Orton's insinuations about the Pembina Branch Railway tie contract and Mr. John Robinson:—"The worse exhibition of ignorance remained to be made by Dr. Orton, who gave in his own person a beautiful example of a member of Parliament who knew nothing of the proceedings of Parliament by reading an old newspaper opinion of transactions that had been before the public committee for weeks, he showed how blissfully ignorant he was of the ordinary details of House business, by confessing that he did not know what had transpired in the most important committee. Mr. Young rubbed it into him in good style, and Orton subsided, as was natural under the circumstances, feeling, no doubt—if he has any feeling—that he had made a fool of himself.

Harold the Outlaw.

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

This satisfaction was valuable so far as it went; but; oh! it went but a very small way to circumvent the plot which had been so successfully hatched. As weeks grew into months without leading to a discovery of where Lizzie and the child were confined, the hope of finding them grew fainter, and though the exertions of those engaged in the quest were not slackened in the least degree, and never would be, it seemed as if these were to be permanently foiled.

The letters, so mysteriously conveyed, served to keep Harold from utter desperation and despair. Each as it came was opened by him with trembling avidity, read and kissed a thousand times, then put carefully away into an iron box which he kept in that particular recess of the cave which he specially occupied.

Harold was still the leader of the smugglers, and their mode of operation was for the most part chalked out by him; but his absences were long and frequent. Indeed, he now spent little time at the cave, being incessantly engaged, as we have described, in the search for his wife and child. In these times of absence the leadership should have been in the hands of Black Dick, but Dick was no longer capable of occupying this post. He had given himself up to intemperance, and for days together lay drunk in his den. At other times he was moody and solitary or else under fits of passion and rage, under which his rough companions soon rebelled. The truth was, the murder of Wanlass weighed heavy on Dick's mind. He was haunted if not with remorse, at least by terror. He lived in constant dread of the hangman, and feared that some time or other Harold would break his compact and denounce him as the criminal for whose guilt he had been unjustly outlawed and made to suffer so much misery and wrong. It was to drown this feeling of dread and apprehension that Dick drank largely of the spirit which they manufactured. Under its influence his brutal, ferocious nature was made worse, and by-and-by he was deposed from command altogether, his place being given to Dixon, who in the absence of Harold conducted operations with activity and skill. The illicit undertakings of the gang prospered without a check, though it well known to all that Malcolm Gillespie, the gauger of Skene, was making every effort to seize their convoys and discover their head-quarters. This knowledge gave them no great concern. The mountain cave was so remote and inaccessible that it was next to impossible the gauger and his men could find it by searching. As regarded the convoys, the measures they took were very sure, and always successful. Never once were they intercepted or even alarmed, but got the stuff to its destination in safety. The only thing they had to fear was treachery, and the only person they had to suspect of that was Dougal McCallum. He had betrayed them once, and might do it again. So they turned their attention to Dougal in a manner which that individual found very unpleasant. They had never been able to catch him to inflict a heavy punishment for his former deed, but at length they came to know where he was to be found, and were about to have him seized, when Harold peremptorily forbade them doing so, but ordered them instead to watch him closely and report to him all his movements. Harold fully believed that Dougal had a share in Lizzie's abduction, and he hoped by this close espionage to obtain the clue he so ardently sought. Dougal, as we know, was entirely innocent and ignorant of this affair, but when he found himself so closely watched by the smugglers, his guilty conscience took the alarm, and he applied to Gilmour Logan for protection, adding that if he was taken by Black Dick's gang he would, to save his life, tell all he knew. This alarmed Gilmour in turn, and he took counsel with McGarray as to what should be done to put Dougal in a place of safety. The latter at once suggested the island on the loch where the prisoners were confined, and thither Dougal was conveyed, disappearing as mysteriously as Lizzie had done, and leaving no trace of the direction in which he had gone.

Thus the time passed on—spring merged into summer, and summer was about to give place to autumn—but still the distracted youth could obtain no tidings of the lost ones. He was all the time an almost constant wanderer; his disguises being nearly as numerous as the roads he traversed. Rendered wild and haggard by the fierce consuming grief of which he was the prey, he travelled from place to place, returning to the cave only to see if another letter had come, or if his friends there had been more successful in the search than himself.

Alas! it was the same; always the same. No news—no news. Sometimes it was Kenneth, sometimes Daddy Duff, who met him with the mournful intimation of non-success. Hope deferred, it is said, maketh the heart sick. Poor Harold's heart was sick and sore beyond all telling. Broken in spirit, anguished in soul, yet ever swelling in wrath against the authors of his suffering, he was often verging towards the boiling point—that is, he was frequently on the eve of proceeding to Mount Cairn and praying Gilmour to restore his wife and child or bear the weight of his heavy retribution. But the arrival of one of Lizzie's periodical letters never failed to cause him to abandon this wrathful design. Oh, how eagerly his eyes devoured the lines her dear hand had traced, how the sight of the paper on which the lines were written excited his yearning to know whence it came. Only a few days before, it had been in that prison of hers, which his utmost efforts had failed to discover. Oh, if some spirit of light and intelligence would but inspire the dumb paper to tell where the prison was! His yearning, penetrating gaze seemed powerful enough to drag the mystery from the silent, inanimate object; but Nature's laws of life and power are not to be persuaded out of their course by human agony, however keen, and no ray of supernatural illumination shone from the paper in response to his pleading look.

Yet, oh yet, the letter which came to him on a certain golden day in summer's prime did contain the secret, and he knew not how to make it reveal it. Had he but held the paper to the fire which burned within the cave that vital kgowledge which he sought would have risen to his view. Could not some gentle ministering spirit have taken pity on the sufferer's wretchedness, and suggested to such a course? Alas, such a suggestion never come into his mind, and that precious letter was locked up in the iron box beside the rest, the revelation it contained not being brought to light.

Reply to "Old Farmer."

To the Editor of the MERCURY.

SIR,—In your issue of the 11th inst., I notice a letter signed by an "Old Farmer," in which he says that I along with a few leading Tories in the township got up the Eramosa National Policy meeting, and entrapped some half dozen men who had acted with the Reform party formerly. You also in reply to Mr. Loghrin's letter in which he stated how the meeting was called, say "tell that to the marines," thereby insinuating that he was not telling the truth. Now, sir, I say that Mr. L. was telling the truth. And that "Old Farmer" makes a gross misstatement when he says that the Tories had any hand in it. The facts of the case are these: That knowing that many of the farmers of Eramosa were in favor of such a policy, on the March fair day, I spoke to Messrs. Swanston, Short, Loghrin, Henry Carter, and one or two more about calling a meeting and forming an organization. I mentioned the matter to these gentlemen, being intimately acquainted with them, and Mr. Henry Carter volunteered to get the names of several other parties who were in favor of a National Policy. Mr. Carter did so, and to him more than to any other person belongs the credit of getting up the Eramosa meeting. If Mr. Carter is a Tory then the Tories had the getting up of the meeting. But Mr. Carter claims to be a Reformer, and is known as such in Eramosa. The gentlemen who called the meeting can all testify to the truth of this statement. And we intend to stick to the truth and show the electors of South Wellington how an election can be won by fair, square honest work without any false clap trap statements. We leave that for our opponents. "Old Farmer" says "Mr. Swanston was asked to head the requisition, Mr. Duffield to be placed in the chair, and Mr. Tovell to move resolutions, &c. &c." In contradiction, I say that Mr. Swanston was not asked to head the requisition, the names were put down as they were taken, and Mr. Swanston happened to be first. Messrs. Tovell, Duffield, and many others there, I met for the first time that night. And the arrangements for chairman, &c., were all in the hands of the gentlemen who called the meeting. And as for my hobnobbing and chuckling with the faithful, I may say that politics make no difference with me among friends or acquaintances, I can take a joke or give one, unless they make it a personal matter, and I may have chaffed "Old Farmer" himself on the maladroit attempt to hinder the business of the meeting. But who are the faithful. Does "Old Farmer" mean Reformers, Conservatives, or National Policy men? He should be more explicit.

Old Farmer goes on to say: "But, sir, you are told by Mr. Loghrin that you should be careful about traducing such men as Mr. Lukes and Mr. Wright. But, sir, I will lay myself open to Mr. L.'s strictures, and go a little farther than you did. I take the broad ground that when a man assumes the position of public orator and advisor, the public has a perfect right to carefully examine and enquire into the antecedents and character of the instructor, and after carefully considering their past history, decide whether they are worthy of credence or not. I deny the ground that he takes when he says the public have a right to enquire and examine the character of any one addressing them. I maintain that they have nothing to do with the man, only with the subject and the principles that may be advocated. If "Old Farmer's" principle is correct, then every editorial, and every letter published in the papers ought to have the signature of the writer. Of Messrs. Lukes and Wright's business career I know nothing, neither do I care, that is none of my business; but if they were running for any public office, then their reputation becomes public property, as only then do they offer their services for a position of trust.

"Old Farmer" next goes for demolishing National Policy, and begins with barley: "A large portion of the barley crop of Ontario is exported to the States, and is there met with a high duty, Now I shall not argue who pays the duty, because it is not necessary to my argument." So "Old Farmer" gives up the point that the Americans pay the duty; no doubt he would have held it if he could. Mr. Massie told the Puslinch farmers last Friday night that the Americans did pay the duty. "Old Farmer" has got a step ahead of him.

But he goes on to say: "We sell our barley to the Americans because it is our best market. Now, the fact is we don't import their barley to any extent, consequently, the imposition of a duty on what we don't import would not injure the Americans, and certainly it could not by any mode of reasoning benefit us." I agree with him that a duty on what we don't import does not amount to much, but a duty on what we did import, 368,426 bushels of barley from the States last year, (see page 402 blue book) at 15 cents duty, amounts to $55,264. Surely this is an item worth the looking after by a finance minister, when he has a large deficit.

But "Old Farmer" says: "As far as this particular article is concerned we have no power to retaliate, the whole case is in the hands of our opponents." Here we see the old gentleman is not posted, and that it would pay us well to retaliate. He waxeth great on retaliation, but seems to have forgot that when we went to negotiate the Reciprocity Treaty in 1854, we had a duty of 20 per cent. on all agricultural products; and, in regard to the malt question, he says:—"What did our Protectionists do when they saw the effect of this little trial of their pet system. They went down to Ottawa in a body and begged of Mr. Cartwright to repeal the act of last session, and it was done accordingly." Well, now, I thought it was the maltsters that went down to Ottawa, and I am sure everybody else thought so; but "Old Farmer" says it was the Protectionists, so it must have been them, and they went down in a body. What a crowd there must have been in Ottawa then.

"Old Farmer" next takes the article of wheat, saying, "They all know, and most of them admit, that the price of wheat is regulated by the British market. But in this connection I may as well allude to the article of flour. Of course the whole object of the interest taken by millers in this question is to have a duty on American flour, so that they may control and monopolize the Maritime Provinces' markets." He has hit the nail on the head at last. Our millers do want the control and monopoly of the flour trade of the Dominion. And why ought they not to have it? The Americans take care to give their millers a monopoly of their trade, and they take a share of ours now into the bargain. The Lower Provinces imported from the States last year about 197,000 barrels of flour. Allowing the population of the Maritime Provinces to be about 1,250,000, they would use, on an average, the products of five bushels of wheat each, or say one barrel of flour. This gives the total consumption 1,250,000 barrels, of which the States furnished about one-fifth and Ontario four-fifths; therefore, our Canadian millers do furnish them flour as cheaply as they can get it from the States, and would supply the whole of it, except for the occasional gluts of flour in New York. If European markets get dull or droop in price and exporters stop buying, a glut sets in, and the flour must be disposed of to meet drafts made against it by Western millers, off it goes to the Maritime Provinces, and our millers find their regular market closed against them until this American flour is worked off, meantime the New York market recovers again. But our millers have to store their flour, get advances from the banks, pay interest, insurance, and storage; but, the farmers are bringing in their wheat, and millers must buy for less than they would have done if they had not those charges to pay, and the risk of a falling market to meet. Such a glut happened about two months ago, when a barrel of flour could not be sold at any reasonable deduction at all. Consequently the farmers are losers, and the millers run the risk of losing three or four months' profits in a few days, and the consumer, with a family of five, using five barrels of flour in a year, may buy one barrel 25c cheaper. Hence we see the loss to the farmer and miller far outweighs any small saving made out of a glut of American flour. But some may think that the price would be advanced by the millers combining together; if any person will only consider the number of mills scattered all over the country, competing against each other, it may be readily seen that such a thing is an impossibility.

"Old Farmer," says that the British market rules the price of our wheat. I maintain that our market is ruled by the Chicago market, and that is governed by speculators who base their calculations on probabilities of the British market months ahead, and discount every rise and fall often before it takes place in Europe. If wheat falls a shilling a quarter—or three cts. a bushel, they will drive it down ten cents a bus. in anticipation of a further fall. That Britain did not rule the market last year was evident, for when wheat was so high it could almost be imported here from there. The markets in Chicago are ruled by corners and speculation, and our millers can at any moment telegraph and buy all the wheat they may want, and deliverable any time they may want, by putting up a margin; and millers are constantly quoting what they can buy wheat for in Chicago; that is what governs them, and if a miller has bought a lot of American wheat, he is then independent of the Canadian farmer, and need only buy at prices that will make a larger profit than the American wheat would. Thus many a farmer does not get what his wheat is intrinsically worth. But a duty would effectually stop all this, and if the millers imported American wheat they could grind it in bond and ship to Britain; but our own wheat would be all that would be consumed in Canada. This duty on wheat would not advance it beyond the range of British prices; it would make Britain rule our market instead of Chicago, and make the millers depend on our wheat for our own consumption. Because although we imported largely over our exportations last year, yet the opening up of Manitoba will give us so much wheat that there is no likelihood that we will ever do so again; therefore a duty on wheat and flour would be a benefit to the farmer and miller, without being an injury to the consumer; and the "Old Farmer's" coufab with Mr. Goldie's buyer is so much bosh worked out of his own head, without any foundation in fact. I think, sir, that I have got this letter long enough, and if you will have the kindness to spare me some space another time, I will promise to tear some more of "Old Farmer's" free trade arguments to tatters. With many thanks,

I am, &c.,

The School Board and the County Council.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR,—In compliance with the Warden's invitation to teachers to discuss the question of examinations, "Sphinx" treats the public to two articles, in which he takes "French leave to deal with the subject generally," and though I differ from him in some minor points, I cannot see in his presentation of the case any apparent design to mislead the public, but in the article signed by "Teacher," it is obvious to every candid observer, that his object in asking the question, "What does the Warden mean by inviting the teachers to discuss the question of examinations?" is simply to afford himself an opportunity to misconstrue the Warden's meaning, and to express some views of his own, which he evidently considers above par, but which I am afraid he will not be able to impose upon the public at a discount.

By referring to the Warden's letter, it will be seen that he is replying to the letter of defence published by the Board, and after remarking on the several points brought forward by the Board in that article, he at length arrives at the pleas put forward by them—that although they did not examine the second class papers, (and although there were no papers on Education and School Law for the third class candidates) yet, the arrangements made by the Education Department, so hampered their action, that a loss of time was incurred that would balance the extra work of other years, therefore, the Board considered themselves justified, when making out their tabulated statement, in giving themselves credit for having examined the papers of second class candidates, and therefore included them in their divisor when striking the average cost of each candidate. These questions regarding the blame attached by the Board to the Education Department, together with the balancing of work not done by them with time lost, as well as others in the same connection, are the questions which I understand the Warden to invite the teachers to discuss. But "Teacher" laying claim to a considerable amount of obtuseness, draws largely on his own imagination, and embarks in a discourse about Inspectors, which is evidently to him an interesting topic.

He then goes on to show that eighty per cent. of the teachers are incapable of independent action, and insinuates that they are of such a sycophantic disposition, as to be easily converted into willing tools of designing aspirants for office. This, I consider is a pretty tough question in per cent., and capable of various solutions. I suppose "Teacher" adopts the method of elimination, for he surely does not include himself among the eighty per cent. of imbeciles he refers to so contemptuously. I sincerely hope he is one of the remarkable twenty per cent. of independent thinkers, which he concedes may exist in the profession, though independent thought is not so much to be coveted, when the conclusions arrived at thereby are not in accordance with common sense.

In order to find out the extent of his information regarding the subject to which the Warden calls the attention of teachers, I will propose a question for his consideration, which, though it does not involve the principles of per cent., may afford him a pleasant exercise in the simple rules, viz., Upon what principles do the members of the Board charge $4 (four dollars) each for Sundays?

"Teacher" thinks it is very unfair of the Warden to ask why the Board did not include their second bill of $168 when giving the total expenses of last year in their tabulated statement; touching this, I will remark that if the members of the Board are so fond of fair play, why did they not eliminate all the expenses incurred in presiding over the second class candidates while writing their papers, and use the balance as their dividend and the number of candidates whose papers they examined as their divisor, when striking their average per candidate for the year 1877. But as they added the number of second class candidates to their divisor it seems quite reasonable of the Warden to enquire why they did not use the total expense as their dividend.

I leave the public to judge whether the statement of "Teacher" regarding the inability of teachers to judge of the qualifications of an aspirant to the position of Inspector, is as sensible as it is emphatic, especially, when it is known that two, at least, of these aspirants have been associated with the teachers of the county for years, and if they have gained any professional distinction, surely the teachers ought to be aware of the fact, unless we asume that "Teacher's" insinuations regarding their lack of information and independence are correct; but I have too high an opinion of the intelligence of the teaching faculty of Wellington to think their information is so limited, or that their independence of thought or action may be so easily affected as "Teacher" represents.

If I were to mete out to "Teacher" the judgment he dispenses to his fellow laborers, I would question strongly the independence and disinterestedness of his motives in repeating again much of what "Sphinx" said the previous week, and I am inclined to decide that as an improved edition of "Sphinx," he is a failure.

Wellington, April 30th, 1878.

Douglas Correspondence.

A literary, musical and debating class, in connection with the Congregational Church, Douglas, was opened in that village on Thursday last. Through the exertions of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Griffith, and a committee of members of the church, the villagers are greatly indebted for the treat afforded them on this evening, when the class opened its series of entertainments by a spelling bee. The various words put to the spellers were very simple, but, in some cases, they were baffled by the pronunciation, and caused some little amusement amongst the audience, of which there was a large and respectable gathering. A second entertainment was given on Friday in the same place, and consisted of recitations, dialogues, vocal and instrumental music, and each of the entertainers performed their parts to perfection and gave general satisfaction.

The farmers of Garafraxa and Luther are taking advantage of the fine weather while it lasts in cultivating the soil for seeding purposes. The rain on Friday night delayed their progress in seeding, and most of the farmers say if they had one week's fine weather they would be successful in getting in their seed.

The late rains have made the roads around the western section of Garafraxa almost impassable. The mud being nearly six inches in depth makes travelling for pedestrians rather wearisome, together with the delay that arises through crossing over broken down bridges, swamps, and walking on poles, which twist in all directions as one proceeds along the journey.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. LATEST FROM THE EAST.

The Porte Refuses to Evacuate the Batoum Fortress.

Russia Levying American Cruisers to Prey on English Commerce.

LONDON, May 2.—A Berlin despatch says the Russians are negotiating for the use of Prussian railways in case England should blockade the Baltic.

A Constantinople despatch says there is great excitement among the people of Batoum, Shumla, Varna, and Scutari, it being reported that the Porte refuses to evacuate the fortresses at these places. The feeling of the Turks is for resisting the Russian demand for evacuation.

The report current here obtains credence that Russia expects to obtain three fast cruisers from the United States, shortly, intended in case of war to prey upon English commerce.

Negotiations between England and Russia for the withdrawal of their respective forces from the vicinity of Constantinople are still in progress.

A collision occurred between Turkish and Russian soldiers at Boulair.

In the Stock market prices have fallen away under the influence of Continental Bourses and discouraging political news. Among the foreign securities Russians have suffered most.

Morrow vs. Turner—The plaintiff in this suit lives in Fergus, and the defendant in Arthur. Suit was brought to give priority to a mortgage over one that had been subsequently made and registered. Decree was granted to plaintiff with costs. T. Ferguson, Q. C., and Harry Vincent for plaintiff; G. A. Drew, Q. C., for defendant.

Robinson vs. Bank of Commerce—Two witnesses were heard in this case when the court adjourned, the Vice-Chancellor wishing to open the Court in Owen Sound on Friday.

Four cases had therefore to be left over until next sitting of the Court.

THE KERRISON ENTERTAINMENT.—It must have been very discouraging to Mr. and Mrs. Davenport Kerrison hall last evening when an audience of thirteen assembled to hear them in their musical selections and readings. They were brave enough, however, to go through with the programme as published from the opening overture to "God Save the Queen," and considerable applause was bestowed upon some of their efforts. Mr. Kerrison is an accomplished pianist and at times displayed brilliancy of execution. The echoes in the empty hall were painfully distinct. He attempted to read "Brick Fanshaw's Funeral," by Mark Twain. Before commencing he remarked to the audience that reading was not his forte. It certainly is not. Mrs. Kerrison is both a pleasing vocalist and an intelligent reader, possessing considerable dramatic power. Her voice in singing is clear and powerful. The striking affectation in articulation however militated against her. The "Nightingale Trill" was her best effort. The manner in which "Curfew must not ring to-night" was read was both very pleasing and correct.

ORANGEMEN ORGANIZING.—It is learned from various quarters in Western Ontario that resolutions are being unanimously adopted by the Orange lodges, pledging the brethren to celebrate the next 12th of July by joining the procession of the Montreal brethren, should they be so requested by the proper authorities of the Orange Institution. It is expected that the parade will be large and influential, a large number of Ontario lodges having signified their intention of being present on the occasion.

Bond & Co. tell us that they have just received a large lot of the celebrated rubber paint ready mixed, all colors, instruction books given free of charge to any one requiring them.

STILL THEY COME.—We notice the railway companies delivering large quantities of new goods at the Lion this morning. These we are told are some of the bargains secured by Mr. Williamson at the trade sales in Montreal a few days ago —when goods were said to have been sold lower than ever. Special attractions in dress goods.

FRUIT SOCIAL.—The Ladies' Association of the Dublin street Methodist church will hold a fruit social in the lecture room this evening. A good programme has been prepared and a pleasant time may be expected. All are cordially invited.

DISTRICT MEETING.—The annual meeting of the Methodist Church of the Guelph District will be held at Preston, commencing on Tuesday, the 21st May, the Rev. E. B. Ryckman, M.A., presiding.

LAWYERS do not consider it just the correct thing to adjourn the Chancery Sittings at Guelph, with four cases unheard, for sake of the Vice-Chancellor opening the Court on a certain date at Owen Sound. Why could not Owen Sound wait as well as Guelph is the question asked? The conundrum is not easy to answer.

MR. G. F. FRANKLAND on Wednesday left with a cargo of cattle (via Boston) for the British markets, where he intends to remain during the summer months to receive and dispose of Canadian cattle to the extent of 4,000 or 5,000 head. Mr. Frankland has always been an extensive purchaser at Guelph fairs.

"BUCK" RAE was brought out for trial, on remand, Wednesday morning, before His Honor Judge Macdonald. The witness Jennings has kept out of the way since the preliminary examination at the Police Court. It is thought he has left for the other side of the lines. In order to secure his presence the case was further remanded until Saturday, 11th May.

THE name of the girl alleged to be so fearfully abused by Isaac Wallace is not McKay, but Carey. Mrs. Carey, the mother, and her two children, arrived in Guelph on Wednesday evening from Stratford, and being without money they were accommodated with lodging at the gaol until Friday, when the preliminary examination will be held before the Police Magistrate.

MR. J. F. KELLER, of Montreal, formerly of Guelph, was counsel for the defendant in an important case, in which one Scott was charged with stealing a valuable security. The case had been taken to the Supreme Court, which secured the reversion of the decison of the lower courts. Mr. Keller has thus succeeded in the face of two judgments against him in getting the final one from the court of last resort in his favor.

FIGHTING.—John McHardy and David Graham were charged at the Police Court this morning with disorderly conduct on Sunday evening, near the Gordon street railway crossing. Witnesses were called, who showed that the defendants were the aggressors in the disturbances, and that McCardy et al had been merely defending themselves against an assault. The defendants made a statement putting the matter directly opposite. The Magistrate reserved his decision till to-morrow. A similar charge is laid against McCardy, which will be heard at the same time.

BUSINESS REMOVAL.—Although a rumor was current in town a few weeks ago that Messrs. McIntosh, Hill, & Innes were about removing their wholesale grocery business to Toronto, it was decidedly premature, as not until a day or two ago the firm had fully made up their minds to remove, which will take place in the course of a month. It is with regret that many will hear of this step being taken, as during the time the members of the firm have resided in town they have secured for themselves a host of friends, who will wish nothing worse for them than a very prosperous career in the metropolis of the Province. The regret is not altogether on personal grounds either, but also on account of the town losing such a large business as has been carried on here for a number of years. The place of business in Toronto will be at 25 Front street, east.

OPPOSITE the Bank of Montreal at Mr. Horsman's new store, hardware is selling at prices which command a large business. All his old friends are calling and many new ones

HUGH WALKER has just received about one hundred cases of oranges.

THE Arthur by-law, granting $12,000 to the Arthur Junction Railway, was carried on Wednesday.

MR. REID, formerly captain of the Atlantic base ball club, London, has removed to Guelph. It is likely he will play with the Leafs this season.

SOME TROUT FISHING.—On Wednesday Messrs. Mitchell Todd, G. Cull, Tindal Holliday and John Duffield, were fishing trout in Nassagaweya, and were very successful in hooking the speckled beauties, they having caught no less than 550 of them. Rare sport it must have been.

BASE BALL.—The following United States games were played on Wednesday: At Providence, Bostons 1, Providence 0; at Lowell, Crickets 7, Lowells 4; at Springfield, Rochesters 3, Springfields 1; at Syracuse, international championship, Stars 3, Uticas 0; at Indianopolis, Chicagos 5, Indianopolics 4; at Buffalo, international championship, Tecumsehs 5, Buffalos 2; at Lynn, Hornells 3, Live Oaks 1; at Cincinnati, Milwaukees 4, Cincinnatis 6.

"IT'S LOIKELY."—This morning James Chamberlain, an old man who wore a fashionably cut velveteen coat was charged before the Police Magistrate with having been found drunk on Wyndham street by Policeman Turner. In reply to "You are charged with being being drunk," the defendant remarked "Och, it's loikely." Policeman Turner remarked that while Chamberlain was drunk he fell through the window of Powell's boot and shoe store. Fined $1 and costs, and a week allowed to pay it in. The defendant remarked that it might be two weeks before he could pay. The Magistrate observed—"One week is the time."

SIR RANDAL ROBERTS who gave a dramatic entertainment in Guelph some time ago, has been getting into trouble. An American exchange says of him:—"Sir Randal Roberts is in a broil in Boston. He exhibited a painting entitled 'The Oyster Girl,' representing that it was original with himself; but the purchaser soon discovered that it was a copy of a French picture, and returned it to the art store where he had bought it. Roberts gave another picture in its stead, but the matter is being discussed by him and the purchaser in the newspapers, the latter threatening to place 'The Oyster Girl' and a photograph of the French original on exhibition side by side."

POST OFFICE INSPECTION.—On Monday, Mr. J. Dewey, Chief Inspector of the Post Office Department, and Mr. Thos. Scott, Government architect, were in Guelph to make the final inspection of the Government building. Every thing was found satisfactory, and the officials expressed their pleasure at finding all the work connected with the building so complete in every particular. It is highly creditable to the contractor, Mr. Thomas Dobbie, and the sub-contractors, that the architect should pronounce the work among the very best jobs that has at any time been performed for the Government. It is also a credit to Guelph that only the skilled artisans of the town were employed on the work, and that they merit such a high enconiuum.

THIS EVENING.—Very interesting social gathering in Chalmers' Church. A complimentary address is to be presented to Rev. Dr. Wardrope, in honor of his acquiring the degree of D.D., from Queen's University.——Fruit social in the Dublin street Methodist Church. Excellent programme. ——Refuge Lodge I. O. G. T., gives a social in the lodge room, over Mr. Little's store, Upper Wyndham street.——St. George's Society annual meeting in the rooms over the Bank of Commerce.——Muster of the Guelph Rifles in the Drill Shed. Distribution of new uniforms. —— Catholic Choral Society meeting this evening. Tenor at eight o'clock, bass at nine.—— Annual meeing of the Y. M. C. A. at 7.30 Election of officers. —— Right Division Field Battery muster at the Gun Shed.

THE WHIPPING POST.—Geo. Baker received his second dose of the cat-o'-nine-tails on Wednesday in London. This time a new operator was chosen, a person who proved to be an acquaintance of the prisoner. Before commencing he cordially shook hands with Baker, and promised to do well for him. He delivered the twenty stripes all on one place—the left shoulder —drawing the blood profusely towards the last. Baker said not a word during the whole time, but his body quivered and shuddered under the blows. As the last stroke descended he begged to be released, and was taken back to his cell very much subdued and altered from the air he displayed on the first occasion, three weeks ago. As soon as he recovers sufficiently Baker will be taken to the Central Prison for twenty months. A. M. Becker, of St. Williams, found guilty at the last Assizes of committing an indecent assault upon a little girl, suffered the penalty of his crime in the court-yard adjoining the Simcoe county gaol, by receiving twelve lashes.

G. W. R.—At the half yearly meeting of the Great Western Railway in London on Wednesday, Sir Hugh Childers, chairman, said the passenger traffic had decreased forty-five per cent in volume, but the rates were twenty-five per cent. better, the best result for years past. He referred in detail to the position of the Company's leased lines, and stated that the condition of affairs in the States and Canada was much altered since the last half-year, showing an improvement in business generally. The line is in a satisfactory condition to take advantage of any improvement as soon as it occurs. A unanimous vote carrying the report was passed.

A colored man, named Anderson, has been arrested in London, charged with poisoning the cattle of Mr. Duncan Anderson, of Paris, as related in the MERCURY a couple of days ago.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

No Change in the Position of Affairs.

New Rumors About a Dissolution of the British Parliament.

LONDON, May 1.

The British fleet, which left Ismid for tactical exercise and artillery practice in the Sea of Marmora, will return in two days.

Yesterday meetings were held at Manchester, at which John Bright spoke, and at Brierly Hall, in opposition. To-morrow another demonstration hostile to the Government will be held at Birmingham. The whole energy of the opponents of the Government in the north and centre of England will thus be heard in combined protest against the policy of the Government. At the Manchester meeting 1,500 delegates from Liverpool and organizations in the north of England were present. Jos. Chamberlain, Radical member of Parliament for Birmingham, spoke at Brierly Hall. Bright and Chamberlain ask the country to act on the principle that we have no eastern interests worth the cost of a war, and to pronounce the existing treaties an utter mistake.

Rumors of a dissolution of Parliament are again rife. It is stated as the result of private enquiries by the Government at various ports, as to what steamers are available for cruisers or for transportation, that about seventy first-class steamers have been selected, and will be commissioned when required.

Mr. Assheton Cross, Home Secretary, made a long address at the opening of a Conservative Club in Preston. The speech by its whole tenor showed that the Government adheres to its demand for laying the entire treaty before a Congress. Mr. Cross said the Government, in a Congress, would convince the world, and probably even Russia, that the Treaty ought to be modified. England, he said, would treat it fairly, and admit the changes that had arisen, but she had a right to discuss them. He denied that the Government encouraged Turkey, or was actuated by a warlike spirit. The Government, he said, sought to bring about an accord of the Powers, but what good would there be in Powers meeting in a Congress if the Treaty they signed could be torn up at any moment by one of the signatories.

A Bombay despatch says:—The second detachment of troops sailed yesterday amid great enthusiasm.

A telegram from St. Petersburg announces that an Imperial ukase has just been issued ordering the formation of 48 fresh battalions in addition to the 48 called out a fortnight ago. Three new artillery brigades with 144 guns are also forming.

Gen. Todleben has not succeeded in his efforts to arrange a simultaneous withdrawal of the Russian troops and the British fleet. The Russians are stated to regard war as inevitable. At the Porte also hopes of a pacific arrangement become weaker.

More Rioting in Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 1.

Last night three carters were standing at St. Anne's Market, waiting for hire, when they were accosted by a rough named Patrick Lacy, who drew a revolver and threatened to shoot if they did not "clear." They ran across the street, pursued by the intruder, who was captured by a constable and lodged in the Central Station. A revolver, with four chambers loaded, was found on his person. Lacy was this morning fined $50, or in default of payment thirty days' imprisonment.

This morning a man named Wm. Graham was heard to say that if he should meet the policeman who arrested him a few nights previous he would blow his brains out. He was arrested and a loaded revolver was found on his person when he was searched at the station. The Recorder fined him $10 or two months for loitering and one month's imprisonment for carrying firearms.

Yesterday evening five men on Nazareth street under the influence of liquor attacked Robert Lang, brother of the young man shot in the carriage on Monday night. They drove him into a doorway where he was theatened by one who had a revolver in his hand and another who wielded a knife. After a while Lang found refuge in a fruit store.

REV. W. J. HUNTER.—The Chicago Sunday Times, in speaking of this reverend gentleman severing his connection with a pastorate in that city, says: The Rev. W. J. Hunter, D.D., closes his rectorship of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal Church today. His relations with his charge in this city have been uniformly pleasant, and he leaves to the regret of all his parishioners, but the calls, personal and official, that have come to him from Canada have been too strong to be resisted. Dr. Hunter came here from Ottawa, Can., where he had been pastor of a Methodist church, eleven months ago. The first call that was addressed to him by St. Paul's Church he declined because of the opposition made by family and church friends to his removal. The call was renewed and finally accepted, but ever since he came here Dr. Hunter's family and ministerial friends have been urging him to return. His attachment to the Methodist Church of Canada, in which he had been a minister for twenty-one years, was not without its influence. He has grown used to a free service, and he found the use of a lithurgy somewhat irksome. Added to all this came an official invitation to become pastor of the Yorkville Methodist Church, in Toronto, and in the aggregate the Canadian influence prevailed.

Mme. Rachel, of enamelling fame, whose impositions upon the rich and aristocratic members of her own sex some years ago in London formed the fashionable sensations of the time, has just been sentenced to penal servitude in England. The numerous exposures of the worthlessness and the dangerous character of her nostrums did not prevent her from finding dupes who believed in her representations that she possessed an effective remedy against the ravages of time. This is probably the last appearance of this notorious woman.

It is understood that the proposed visit of the English cricketing team to Canada this year has been abandoned in consequence of Mr. C. J. Ottaway's death. The Toronto Lacrosse Club have not altogether relinquished their idea of a European trip. Several favorable letters, urging the trip have been received from England lately.

The Wye has been admitted into the Sea of Marmora with a supply of stores, rifles, ammunition and torpedoes, sufficient to make up the full complement for placing each of the four British men-of-war within the Dardanelles on a combatant footing. The Wye is permitted the entree of the Straits by the Turkish authorities, because she is, technically speaking, merely a store-ship.

The cramming system in public schools has been illustrated with all its evils in the Jersey City high school. Four young ladies desired to fit themselves for teachers. They were put through "a course of sprouts," and the following is the maximum of results:—one died within a few months of graduation, one is an inmate of the insane asylum at Morristown, Mass., one, Miss Mary Moody, of school number 11, Bergen, was buried last week, and one now lies dangerously ill. Perhaps the warning will be heeded. Perhaps.

Rev. J. Ferguson, of the Presbyterian Church, Brussels, has recently been the subject of gossiping rumors, which charged him with improper relations with a lady in the township of Grey. A few Sundays ago, he took the bull by the horns, and said from his pulpit, "If any of you have any doubts as to the truthfulness of the rumor, the best, easiest and cheapest way to get at the case, is to take me before the Presbytery, and then I will vindicate myself. At present all I can do is to give it my most emphatic denial." The scandalmongers will probably now have nothing more to say.

GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA cures Neuralgia, Face Ache, Rheumatism, Gout, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Erysipelas, Bruises and Wounds of every nature in man or animal. The remarkable cures this remedy has effected classes it as one of the most important and valuable remedies ever discovered for the cure and relief of pain.

An Astonishing Fact.

A large proportion of the American people are to-day dying from the effects of dyspepsia or disordered liver. The result of these diseases upon the masses of intelligent and valuable people is most alarming, making life actually a burden instead of a pleasant existence of enjoyment and usefulness as it ought to be. There is no good reason for this if you will only throw aside prejudice and skepticism, take the advice of druggists and your friends, and try one bottle of Green's August Flower. Your speedy relief is certain. Millions of bottles of this medicine have been given away to try its virtues, with satisfactory results in every case. You can buy a sample bottle for ten cents to try. Three doses will relieve the worst case. Positively sold by all druggists on the Western Continent.

SCARCE a Tory could be found on the reet to-day. The Quebec elections ere too much for them, and when ey were forced to go out they ulked about in back lanes and side reets, and seemed to be ashamed e daylight. The elections in that rovince seemed to them to be a forecast their fate all over the Dominion.

SAYS the Stratford Herald:—"Without violating the impersonality of jour-alism, we may explain the statements ade in other journals to the effect that r. Fahey, of our staff, occupied second ace in the North Wellington Conser-tive Convention, by stating that Mr. s. first intimation of his candidature ached him through the press, after the onvention had been held. This word explanation seems due to both r. Fahey and the political friends who untéered him their unsolicited suf-ages at the Convention."

THAT the Socialists of Chicago are ming and drilling, one of their lead-s, A. R. Parsons, frankly admits. He forms a reporter of the Tribune that at they intend to try the merit of the nstitutional provision of the United ates which guarantees to every citi-n the right to keep and bear arms. At our mass-meetings this summer," says," we shall carry our arms with , and if the armed assassins and paid urderers employed by the capitalistic ass undertake to disperse and break our meetings, as they did in such an trageous manner last summer, they ill meet foes worthy of their steel."

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, May 1.

Hon. Mr. Blake moved the first reading a bill for the better prevention of crimes violence in certain parts of Canada. he provisions of the bill have special ference to the present and threatened ts in Montreal, arising out of faction hts. Speaking of these fights Mr. ake said:—He was not called on at this e and under those circumstances—haps he would not be called upon any time or under any circumstances—weigh the merits of the contending ties. All the disorder, all the violence l use of firearms were not to be attri-ed to those classes, since it was obvious re existed a degree of lawless use of fire-ns in that city entirely irrespective of circumstances to which he had al-ed. It was natural to expect that that less habit would spread, and that the gher and more lawless and criminal ulation would very readily avail them-es of a practice which the more re-table, orderly, and law-abiding classes not scrupled in some instances to re-sort to. As a Canadian of Irish descent it gave him an additional pang of humilia-tion that his own fellow-countrymen of both creeds should be prominently con-cerned in those troubles. He would only say that if his feeble voice could reach be-yond the limits of this hall and he could hope that it would have any weight, he would ask them to remember that, al-though belonging to different forms of Chris-tianity, the cardinal principle of that religion is love and charity, forbearance and self-sacrifice. That yielding to one another is the signal mark of our creed, whether Ca-tholics or Protestants, and that we daily asked to be forgiven our trespasses as we forgive those which others did to us. (Hear, hear.) There was but little charity in that religion if they could look calmly on the events which were transpiring in Montreal without horror and without a de-sire to use every means in their power to prevent their recurrence and reiteration. He would appeal to those two parties of his fellow-countrymen, if his voice could be heard. He would appeal to one side to be regardful of the rights under the law of the other side, to be regardful of the pre-judices and feelings and temperament of the side which objected to some of their proceedings. It appeared to him that both sides were terribly to blame unless there could be some restoration of the good feel-ing which formerly existed, unless some understanding was arrived at by which they could preserve their reputation. But so it was that a reign of terror might be said to prevail at this moment in Montreal owing to the mode in which those fights were organized, owing to the mode in which those weapons were secured. It was not only those who hazarded their lives in those encounters which were ex-posed to danger. The peaceful citizen was exposed to almost equal risk if he was in the vicinity of those encounters to that which beset the actual combatants, and they found that those who had no concern whatever in the riots had been in some cases the actual sufferers, and in other cases had accidentally escaped with their lives.

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie entirely concurred in the bill introduced by Mr. Blake, and said:—No one could help sympathizing with the eloquent introductory remarks of the hon. gentleman when he referred to the duty of Christian teachers and Christian professors, and no one could help ad-mitting the truth of the remarks he made respecting the duties devolving upon Pro-testants and Catholics alike when times of trouble like these seem imminent in Montreal. (Hear, hear.) The Govern-ment have had extreme anxiety in regard to matters in Montreal for many months past, and I feared that when an occasion of public excitement arose during the last season that it would have resulted even more disastrously than it did. On that occasion the Government went as far as it was possible to do under the existing laws which govern alike the people and the Government, by tendering to the Chief Magistrate of the city the troops which the Dominion maintain, and placing them at his command free of all charge except that which was unavoidable under the operation of the law. In other words, they were sent to the city for the purpose of maintaining order, but the authorities did not see fit to accept the proposition. It is now tolerably evident that a state of feeling, a state of exasperation existing on both sides—the one apparently smarting under sense of injury for something that is past, the other anticipating some injury to come. And it is tolerably clear from the spirit that is manifested on both sides by those who seem somewhat careless of the consequence, that very great danger exists that the public peace will be broken and many lives endangered unless some-thing is done.

The bill was read a first time, and will be read a second time to-day.

of those specially charged with the sup-pression of crime and disorder. Any violation of the terms of the proclama-tion will be a criminal act and punish-able with a severe term of imprisonment. Persons unlawfully carrying arms may be arrested and the arms seized. Per-sons suspected of having arms in their possession may be searched by a peace officer. Another provision is that power shall be given to the Governor in Council to appoint commissioners who might grant licenses to such per-sons as they thought proper to carry arms, specifying the description of weapons, these licenses being revocable at will. He also proposed that any per-son carrying any weapon in contraven-tion of the statute should be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to a term of imprisonment not exceeding twelve months, and that it should be lawful for any person to seize and apprehend any one carrying weapons after the Act went into force, and to deliver the offender over to an officer of the peace with a view to his being brought before the proper judicial functionary to be dealt with according to law. He also pro-posed that it should be lawful for a con-stable or officer of the peace to search any person suspected of carrying weapons, which, if found upon him, should be retained and handed over to the magistrates.

It seems to us that the bill is a most timely one, and that the circumstances in Montreal call for such a measure. It is quite clear that the local authorities are not equal to the crisis. The Mon-treal Witness, referring to the late riots, says:—"The conduct of the police is open to grave criticism. They must have known of the danger, as it was suf-ficiently evident to be announced at the meeting, but not the slightest action seems to have been taken in the direc-tion of dispersing the assailants. Even when informed of the ambush they would not move until word of the firing came. It would appear as though, if the interests of the city at this seri-ous juncture are to be left to civic police under our present authorities, that the commercial ruin of the city is the only thing to be looked for. What is wanted is a Dominion constabulary which will act with vigor in the enforcement of the laws against idling with weapons. If the city authorities really wanted to face the matter they would arrest every idler, and have the utmost penalty of the law enforced against any found with concealed weapons. Until this is done we can expect nothing but the repitition, night after night, of murderous riots and the rapid depopulation of the city by the removal of those who do not wish to live with their families in the midst of feud and danger."

We are glad to learn that the House, on both sides, has expressed its approval of the bill, and that it is sure to pass.

MR. F. W. GLEN, of the Joseph Hall Manufacturing Company, is the probable candidate for South Ontario, in the Commons, as against Hon. T. N. Gibbs. Mr. Glen is a manufacturer who believes that 17½ per cent. affords him sufficient protection.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

"WE THREE—WELL MET."

Jacob McGarray sat in the long room called the library at Mount Cairn, with one or two business books and a mass of papers before him. He had got through the work which had been occupying him for the last hour or two, and his sharp face wore a very animated look, for the result of his labor had been even more satisfactory than he anticipated. With a contented smile, he rubbed his hands together and lay back in his chair to enjoy the pleasant prospect which his labor had opened up.

He had not long been engaged in this agreeable occupation when the door opened and Gilmour Logan entered with slow step and clouded brow.

"Ha, Sir Gilmour!" cried McGarray, in a brisk tone, "I was right—quite right. The rent-roll will stand revision. The latest leases, of course, we cannot touch, though they are absurdly low. I told Sir Philip that when they were renewed, and her ladyship backed me up; but for all that your father was obstinate, and would not yield. Had they fallen out this year instead of last, they would have been fixed at a very different figure. But that cannot be helped. Fortunately, the most valuable of the farms are running out now, and we shall have their full value—an additional three hundred at least, perhaps more, if we throw them into the market. That's the advantage of having a sharp factor, Sir Gilmour. The soft-headed fool Adamson wouldn't have added such a sum to the rent-roll. What say you, hey?"

"Oh, it all very well if my position were secure," responded Gilmour moodily.

"And isn't it secure?"

"No; I don't feel it so."

"I don't see why you shouldn't. It was no doubt ticklish at the time of your father's death; but by luck and skill we played the cards well, and won the game."

"Won it for the time only," returned Gilmour. "Fate or accident may lose it for me at any day."

"Oh, nonsense, nonsense. You have been nearly six months in possession and they have not stirred hand or foot against you. The worst is over; every day has made your position surer. Now you may count it as firmly established."

"No, McGarray; I tell you I don't feel that it is."

"Who's to assail it? Not Harold certainly. There you need not have the slightest fear. He cannot possibly have the sentence of outlawry reversed, and that bars him for ever."

"But the boy?"

"The boy!" echoed McGarray. "Haven't we both the boy and his mother safely stowed away?"

"Not beyond the possibility of discovery."

"What! Haven't the past six months convinced you that of the danger of their discovery there is absolutely none?"

"Do you believe Harold is not making efforts to find them?"

"I believe he is—at least I have no doubt he has been making such efforts. But seeing he has so completely failed he'll give it up. And if he hasn't been able to find them in the six months that are past, there is no likelihood of his doing so at any future time."

"That is very bad logic, Mr. McGarray. I cannot subscribe to it. I want absolute safety, and there is but one way to gain it."

"The safety is as good as absolute now," answered the lawyer. "That the island on the loch is a place of perfect seclusion is proved by the fact that we have kept Conrad McPherson's wife there for years without her existence being suspected. And that isn't wonderful, for the island is not and cannot be visited by any stranger. There is but one boat, and that is always in the safe keeping of Joe Nickelby. Joe will take precious good care that no person gets, access to the island. Really, Sir Gilmour, you are frightening yourself without a shadow, and a very faint shadow too."

"Grant it; a shadow of danger is not to be overlooked. In a word, Mr. McGarray, I am resolved to make the matter sure."

"How?"

"Need I say how? Are you so dull in apprehension as not to understand there is only one way of doing it?"

"By murdering them," returned Mr. McGarray, with perfect composure. "Well, to tell the truth, Sir Gilmour, that idea is not quite new to me. I admit—if not the danger, yet the innocence—the great inconvenience of the thing as it stands. I do not see the practicability of continuing present arrangements indefinitely. The girl and the child are young and healthy, they may live for fifty years to come, and it is out of the question to suppose that we can keep them imprisoned there all that time. Joe and his wife are both old, and cannot discharge their present duty more than a year or two. How are we to get their places filled? Dougal M'Callum could not be depended on for such a post."

"No, I should think not," said Gilmour, with scornful emphasis. "Then you agree with me, he eagerly exclaimed—"you agree with me in thinking they must be effectually got rid of."

"I quite agree with you in thinking this to be desirable, and, in time necessary. But I am a cautious man, Sir Gilmour, and make my own safety my chief care. The question is, would it be safe to take this step yet. I don't think so. When Harold no longer received letters from his wife, he would judge that she had come to harm."

"Let him judge so. What then?" said Gilmour, with brutal indifference.

"He will no longer be kept in check," suggested M'Garray. "I have reason to know that Adamson has always been wanting to fight us in the Court, and what has kept Harold from consenting to it is the fact that we hold his wife and child as hostages for his good behavior. Let him suppose they have been injured, and he will hold Adamson back no longer."

"Well, suppose Adamson did his worst, what would it amount to?" rejoined Gilmour. "With the child and its mother out of the way, and disposed of as we shall dispose of them, do you think Adamson can make any good any point against us?"

"Candidly, Sir Gilmour, I do not. He might prove the marriage, but, as he can't produce the boy or show that we have removed him, he will gain nothing against us."

"I thought so," cried Gilmour, triumphantly. "Then you see my plan is the only safe one. So long as they live there is a possibility of discovery—their death makes us secure, and, by heaven, I'll have it so. I'll endure this uneasiness no longer. The feeling of insecurity poisons all my peace. I can't enjoy the estate for the lurking thought that I may be cut out of it. Having gained so much it would be folly to stick at what completes our purpose. So, McGarray, we shall set about this without more ado."

"Not without more consideration, though," remarked the other. "There is a barrier which——Hush, some one is coming."

Voices were heard in the passage—a circumstance which threw them into consternation, for the plotting of murder is ever promotive of terror. Fearing they knew not what they stood palid with dismay, their eyes turned to the door, which was presently opened by a footman looking somewhat flustered and out of countenance.

"Who is it, Walter? asked his master, in nervous haste.

"A gentleman, sir, who wishes to see Mr. McGarray."

"What gentleman—who is he—what does he want?" sharply demanded the lawyer, delivering the questions with the rapidity of platoon firing.

"Don't know, sir. He declined to give his name, said you knew him very well, and—and—he comes"——

Here a look directed behind him in an alarmed manner gave them to understand that the unnamed visitor was close at Walter's heels, and ere the latter had time to say a word more, a stout, dark-featured man, dressed in Highland costume, put the perturbed Walter aside, and stepped into the room.

Gilmour Logan eyed the unknown intruder in angry amazement not unmixed with apprehension, for he intuitively set him down as an envoy from Harold. Jacob McGarray also stood for a moment in anxious doubt, but his wonder instantly gave way to a look of astonished recognition, as he mechanically ejaculated—

"Bless my soul—Allan McPherson."

"How d'ye do, McGarray?" said the dark-faced stranger thus named. "Your servant, Sir Gilmour; we don't need an introduction I think."

A gleam of intelligence broke through the angry expression on Gilmour's face. The visitor was right. His name being pronounced, no further introduction was necessary, for though the two men had not met before they were thoroughly well known to each other through McGarray. Gilmour smiled, and greeted the Highlander with marked cordility.

Opening of the Paris Exhibition.

PARIS, May 1.—The International Exhibition opened to-day, with great eclat. The programme was strictly carried out. President MacMahon reached the Exhibition in a state carriage, and escorted by the military household. He was welcomed by the Minister of Commerce, and declared the exhibition opened amid salvos of artillery and music. The Marshal at the head of a brilliant procession, including the Prince of Wales, ex-King Amadeus, and the Crown Prince of Denmark and of the Netherlands, proceeded through the Exhibition buildings. The scene was picturesque and imposing. State bodies in grand uniform, councillors and magistrates in robes, and different bodies of the Institute and the Legion of Honor stood in strong contrast with senators, deputies, clergy, and miner officials in civil costumes.

The Exhibition buildings were decorated with the flags of all nations, and an immense crowd was in the vicinity.

Early in the evening the avenues and boulevards were crowded with vehicles and foot passengers. The latter streets were impassable in many places, in consequence of the immense crowds assembled to witness the illuminations. Many buildings in every quarter of the city were decorated with the flags of all nations. The Boulevard des Italiens and des Capuchines were brilliantly illuminated with gas jets, transparencies, and Chinese lanterns. Except on the boulevards, the display was spaspodic ar d occasional.

The pressure of people and carriages on boulevards mentioned was indescribable. For three hours every inch of space in the main thoroughfare and every side of the the street was occupied by surging masses shouting and singing. The demonstrations frequently became semi-riotous. The crowd was occasionally enlivened by a rush of half-intoxicated youths and workingmen bearing Chinese lanterns and singing the "Marseillaise." Towards midnight many lights were extinguished, and the crowds began to disperse.

No accident was reported, although it is estimated that 500,000 persons visited the Champ de Mars and Trocadero. It is computed that three hundred thousand foreigners are now in Paris.

The Paris correspondent of the N.Y. Tribune, writing on the 17th ult. of the Exhibition says:—It is established on the same ground as that of 1867; the world-famous Champ de Mars, scene of that Fete of Federation which was thought to have brought the French Revolution to a glorious end in 1790, with King, Legislature, Army, and the Nation all swearing allegiance to their new Constitution; scene of many solemnities since, familiar to the general reader; discoverable in any cyclopædia by him who has not read, but may now feel inclined to begin. Let us pass from all that. Here on this field—fifteen minutes in a cab from the Place de l'Opera—stands the main buildings of the Exposition of 1878; two vast parallelograms of glass and iron, like magnified cattle sheds, or the barns which adorns some of the wharves of New York devoted to passengers and freight. An effort has been made to give them some architectural significance by domes and transepts—if I may use the term—but the success of this attempt is not great. Two transepts or transversal galleries, equi-distant from the ends, divide the interior; two others inclose and unite the ends of the main buildings and of the space between them, which is itself covered over, two longitudinal and many cross avenues excepted, with buildings devoted, in great part, to the Fine Arts; a huge pretentious Pavilion de la Ville de Paris, rearing its awkward bulk in the centre. All these transepts are of greater height than the main parallelograms. Outside of all this, and filling what room was left all round the inside of the outer inclosure of the Champ de Mars, are extra galleries for machinery, and all sorts of separate annexes. Altogether, it is a gridiron without the handle. I have misled for the moment the official figures, but I cannot be far wrong in putting each of the two main parallelograms at about 2,080 by 500 feet.

Book Notices.

In the New Dominion Monthly for May we see an exceedingly interesting "Sketch from Canadian History," which gives a very full account of the war of 1812, especially of the actions of General Brock therein. "Two Scottish Heroes," is an account of the lives of Andrew and James Melville, who lived in Reformation times. G. H. F. contributes an article on the late George Cruikshank—whose portrait appears in the frontispiece,—in which are cuts of several of his humorous drawings. "The Wolf of Badenoch," is a criticism by a backwoods farmer of a recent Canadian work. A subject of rare interest to ethnologists is to be found in a paper commenced in this number. It is entitled "Monograph of the Deue-Dindjie Indians." We may say that Father Petitot hints at a "lost ten tribe" origin for these Indians. The manner of hunting racoons is well described in "Coon Hunting," by Mack. In "Our Affectionate Townsman" we find a description of the villany of a "resurrectionist." For the young folks there is a selected paper, with illustrations, which tells about the School for Deaf-mutes in Boston, and the way in which the children are taught to speak. In the Home Department is begun an interesting story entitled "Lotty Farwell's Duty." Under Literary Notices is an extract from "Maclood of Dare," Mr. Black's last novel.

A new Sunday School singing book, "Joy Bells," by W. A. Ogden, is the latest contribution of sacred music for the Sunday School. We understand that since the publication of Mr. Ogden's "Crown of Life," three years ago, which proved so popular, that this favorite author has been dilligently at work preparing "Joy Bells." Upon reviewing this new collection, we find it full of new and appropriate hymns set to sparkling and pleasing melodies, by a variety of both popular and favorite authors, which cannot fail to delight the great army of Sunday School children. Mr. Ogden seems to be possessed with a true genius for this special work, and we are of the opinion that this book will be an immense success. It contains 160 pages usual style, and sells at the popular price of $3.60 per doz., and 35c a single copy, board covers. Address W. W. Whitney, publisher, Toledo, Ohio.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. The great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D. Bible House, New York City. Sept. 18, deodwly

In the neighborhood of London rye stalks have attained a height of three feet and have headed out in a number of cases.

It is understood that a reconstruction of the New Brunswick Cabinet has been decided upon, Attorney-General King, who is about to retire from local politics, being succeeded by Mr. Fraser, Provincial Secretary, who will be replaced by Mr. Wedderburn, Speaker of the last House. The Provincial general elections will take place shortly.

Hayes' friends declare their willingness to have the whole electoral question tried before a committee of fair men from both Houses of Congress. It is said that a resolution respecting the President's title will come up in the House of Representatives early next week.

Montreal Cattle Market.

MONTREAL, April 29.

A very dull and inactive market was experienced to-day. The supply was far in excess of the demand, and prices ranged from 4½c. to 5c. for good fat cattle and from 3½c. to 4c. per lb. live weight, for fair qualities. One car of cattle from A. White, of Guelph, sold at 4c. to 4½c., and one car load from Mr. John Elliott, of Kingston, at 4½c. per lb., live weight. Mr. Head made several sales of hogs at from $4.30 to $4.60 per 100 lbs. Mr. R. J. Hopper received one load of cattle from Mr. Thomas Hopper, besides other purchases. He sold 11 cattle for $540, or 4½ to 4¾c. per lb.; 10 do. for $625, or 4½c. per lb.; 3 do. for $160, or 4½ per lb.; 15 do. ranging from $37.50 to $45 per head, or at 3½c. to 4½ per lb. Mr. William Jack, of Lindsay, had one car load of cattle for sale, of which 10 sold at 4¼c. per lb. Mr. T. G. Conn, of Stratford, sold 10 at 4¼c. per lb., with $4 off on the lot. They weighed about 1,200 each. Mr. J. Elliott, of Kingston, sold one car of cattle at 4¼c. per lb., two bulls for $160, and one ox for $70, or 4¼c. per lb. Mr. A. Knox, of Whitby, sold one bull for $29, and 9 cattle at from 4¼c. to 5c.

The Free Church Synod of Aberdeen has, by very narrow majorities, declared all the charges against Professor Smith irrelevant, and the case now goes to the Assembly by the appeal of Principal Brown and others. The amount of sympathy and support given to Mr. Smith, especially by the younger members of the Synod, has been very remarkable.

Doctors of Divinity.

The Presbyterian of this week, in commenting on the honors recently conferred at Queen's University, thus speaks of the respected pastor of Chalmers' Church:—"The Rev. Thomas Wardrope, pastor of Chalmers' Church, Guelph, is the third of the gentlemen named. In Ottawa he fulfilled a lengthy and fruitful ministry, where he was much beloved and highly esteemed. For a number of years he has been gatering around him in Guelph a large and influential congregation. His winning manner and silvery eloquence have given him a conspicuous place amongst preachers, while at the present moment his standing in Church Courts is seen from the fact of his being Moderator of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston. The degree in the case of Dr. Wardrope is all the more valuable, that he was one of the earliest and most distinguished of Queen's students. The address which he gave in response to the honor conferred upon him was very happy, as he could speak of Queen's University and her history from experience.

The following officers were elected for the next six months:—

President, E. W. McGuire, M. D.
Vice-President, Theron Gibson
Secretary, Wm. Ryan
Assistant Secretary, G. L. Wilson
Treasurer, Wm. Anderson
Librarian, Alex. Cowan.

THE LATE DONALD CORMACK.—We have to thank Mrs. Jas. Cormack for copies of the San Diego Union forwarded to us from San Francisco, containing the obituary notice of the late Donald A. Cormack, and a full report of the funeral sermon commemorative of the deceased, preached by Rev. O. W. Gates, on the 7th of April. The text chosen by the rev. gentleman as the subject of his remarks was from John 14-19—"Because I live, ye shall live also." The address was a very able one. In referring particularly to the deceased, after sketching his career, which up to the time that the insidious disease which eventually caused his death, had been one of much brightness and promise, he spoke of the spiritual confusion and uncertainty that at first surrounded his mind—but this was only for a short time, as the glorious knowledge of life as found in Christ, afterwards became his portion. The speaker said that this revelation broke upon the death-gloom of his soul with the charm of a new discovery, and the inspiration of a sweet experience. After experiencing this feeling Donald remarked to his mother, who had unwearyingly waited by his bedside, and did all that could be done to alleviate the pain of her beloved son:—"I see it so clearly now. I am safe, it is all right; if I die to-night, I shall go to heaven; it is all in the blood; I have only to be quiet behind it, and take God at His word." His departure was that of one who is believed in the glorious hope of a blissful immortality.

FRUIT SOCIAL.—Thursday evening a social entertainment of a very pleasing character was given in the Dublin-street Methodist Church, which was only fairly attended. The threatening weather will account for this, however. The programme had been arranged with much care, and it was carried out pretty much the same as was advertised in yesterday's MERCURY. The playing of Mr. Philp and the Harris boys on the violin and piano, was a decided attraction. A superfluous remark, by-the-way, as they always prove an attraction. Mrs. Philp and Miss Oldham sang a couple of duets in a manner which was appreciated by the audience. Both voices are good. The former young lady sang a solo "Under the Snow," very sweetly. Miss Goodfellow and Mr. Philp gave a piano duet. The former displays brilliancy of execution. Miss Minnie Husband read a very laughable tale about the trials of a boarding school miss undertaking housekeeeing. Her enunciation is both clear and pleasing, but with little dramatic effect. Mr. F. Cooke gave a song near the conclusion of the entertainment, which without a doubt was a pleasing feature. During the evening fruit was served to those present, and considerable time was spent in social converse. The benediction closed what was in every retpect a fine entertainment.

JOHN ANDERSON has now on hand a large stock of fishing goods, rods and fly hooks in endless variety.

TABLEAUX VIVANTS.—On Monday evening, 6th May, tableaux vivants and concert will be given in the Town Hall, for the benefit of the Guelph General Hospital. See advertisement.

MILITARY.—New uniforms were distributed to the Guelph Rifles last evening. There was a full muster. The Company was never in a more efficient state than at the present time. Drill and inspection at the drill shed this evening. The Battery paraded at the gun shed. Considerable interest is manifested by all the men in the drill.

THE holy habit and veil has been conferred by Archbishop Lynch, Toronto, at the noviciate of the Sisters of Loretto, on Miss Annie Keough—in religion Sister Mary Clare—and Miss Downey. The former is a daughter of Mr. Jas. Keough, sen., of Gourock, and the latter is a daughter of Mr. M. Downey, of Puslinch.

VAMOOSED.—The firm of W. B. Halstead & Co. have left town for some place where creditors are not clamorous for their rights. They were tobacconists on Wyndham st., next door to G. D. Pringle's jewellery store. Mr. Halstead left town for Toronto a couple of weeks ago, and never returned. Mr. Wainwright, evidently the Company of the firm, has also left. The liabilities of the firm do not amount to much.

I. O. G. T. ENTERTAINMENT.—The first entertainment given by Refuge Lodge, No. 173, I. O. G. T., in their hall over Mr. Little's store, on Thursday evening, was a decided success. The hall was well filled with a very appreciative audience. The Rev. Mr. Harris occupied the chair, and during the evening sang a couple of sacred songs, which were well received. The Harris Bros. rendered several pieces on the piano and violin. "Jake, The Apple-man," was a comic song, given by Edward Wicks, which was so well received that he was encored. He then sang "The County-man." "People will talk," was a recitation given by Miss Ettie Chipchase. "When the swallows homeward fly," was sung by Mr. Newby with good effect. He afterwards sang "The village blacksmith." "Slain by drink," a recitation given by W. T. C., Mr. Beirnes was well received. "Whisper softly, mother's dying," was sung with feeling by Miss Shaw. "Refinement"—an acting charade—by Misses Noble and Campbell, and Messrs. Beirnes and Smith, was well done. "Dreaming of home and mother" and "Please give me a penny," were nicely sung by Mrs. Beirnes. "Goody Grime verses Lapstone," a comic reading by C. Maddock, caused much amusement. "The newsboy," by Master Willie Wicks, was the most interesting recitation of the evening. "The school girl of the period" was recited by Miss Flanigan. "The creeds of the bells" was very nicely rendered by Miss Noble. The W. C. T. made a few remarks at the conclusion, inviting all to join the Lodge. Refuge Lodge was organized on the 12th of March last, with twenty-one charter-members, and since that time has doubled its membership. A vote of thanks was tendered the chairman and those who took part in the entertainment. The meeting closed by all joining in singing the National Anthem.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY.—The second annual meeting of the Guelph St. George's Society was held on Thursday evening. The President, Mr. Geo. Murton, occupied the chair. The Secretary, Mr. Alf. Burrows read the annual report. It stated that the total membership for the year was seventy-five. The proceeds realized from the pic-nic last July, the charity concert in December and the entertainment and collection from St. George's church, along with a few donations from members of the society has added considerably to the funds. The several donations received from members for the Christmas dinner to the poor English people of the town was a very pleasing feature, and was warmly accepted by those who were deserving. The receipts for membership fees were $75 and the disbursements for the year $186.51, leaving a balance on hand of $207.08. Treasurer W. Sunley reported the financial statement in detail. The balance on hand at the commencement of the year was $158.55 and the receipts had been $235.04, a total of $393.59. The expenditure was $186.51, leaving a balance to the society's credit of $207.08. Mr. T. Ede, for the executive committee, reported that the dinner held April 23 had been self-sustaining. The three reports were received and adopted. The date of the annual meeting was changed from the first Thursday in May to the first in March. The following officers were elected unanimously:—President, Mayor Howard; 1st Vice-President, Geo. Elliott; 2nd Vice-President, A. H. Goodeve; Treasurer, W. Sunley; Secretary, Alfred Burrows; Chaplains, Revs. Canon Dixon, W. Manchee and H. Harris; Surgeon, Dr. Herod. The executive committee was elected as follows:—G. Tolton, W. T. Vale, T. Ede, C. Pettiford, W. Reid, Stockwell, W. Newport, C. New, H. Barry, and C. Acton Burrows. Votes of thanks were passed to the retiring officers and to Rev. Canon Dixon for special sermon on the 23rd of April. A meeting of the officers and executive committee will be held in the rooms on Thursday next at 2 p.m., to meet Mr. Pell, of Toronto, and others in reference to the convention of St. George's Union here in August. The officers and executive committee will also meet at W. T. Vale & Co's. office, 7 p. m. Wednesday.

Presentation to Rev. Thomas Wardrope, D. D.

As soon as it was known that Queen's University had conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity on the Rev. Mr. Wardrope, the Elders and Managers of Chalmers' Church held a meeting, and made arrangements for holding a social, at which the members of the congregation, and the friends belonging to other congregations in town, would have an opportunity of congratulating Dr. Wardrope on the high honor conferred on him by the Senate of the University of which he was one of the first students. Accordingly arrangements were made for the social which was held on Thursday night in the church, the basement of which was filled by a large company, which comprised representatives from every denomination in town.

Mr. David Stirton, postmaster, occupied the chair, and the Rev. Mr. Torrance opened the proceedings with devotional exercises. Thereafter Mr. Melvin, Secretary-Treasurer of Chalmers' Church, read the following address, and Mr. D. McIntosh, Clerk of the Session, presented Dr. Wardrope with $100 in gold, and a handsome silver inkstand and gold pen:—

To the Reverend Thomas Wardrope, D. D.:—

DEAR SIR,—We, the Elders and Managers in the name and on behalf of the congregation of Chalmers' Church, Guelph, of which, for the last eight years, you have faithfully discharged the onerous duties of pastor to the great spiritual advantage of the congregation, and to the glory of the Redeemer's Kingdom, desire to convey to you the heartfelt congratulations of the members and adherents on the occasion of your receiving the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Queen's University, Kingston.

Whilst we know that the honor was entirely unsolicited and unsought for by you, but was the free, spontaneous offering of the Senate of Queen's University, as an acknowledgment of your great and many valuable services to the Church, and of your attainments as scholar, yet we cannot allow the opportunity to pass without bearing our testimony to the fact that the honor is well deserved, and one that will be appreciated not only in our own but in the sister churches as a fitting and well-earned recognition of your scholastic and theological attainments, and of your faithful services in the church of which you have for so many years been an earnest and devoted minister.

And we would express our greater satisfaction at the fact that by the authorities of your long established and highly respected Alma Mater, situated as it is in the district which, for a quarter of a century, was the scene of your ministerial and missionary labors, in the Province, which, for forty years, has been your home, where your abilities can be best known and your worth most fully appreciated, and by the only degree-conferring body of our church, therein your name should be enrolled amongst those of the select few who have been deemed worthy of such a mark of honor and confidence since the auspicious union of the various Presbyterian churches of the Dominion into the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

We desire further to express, as a congregation, our very great pleasure at the distinguished honor conferred upon us by this generous recognition of pastor's claims to distinction, and we hope and trust that you may be long spared to wear the laurel and grace the title, and that your intercourse with us may be as pleasant and beneficial in the future as it has been in the past, and blessed abundantly in the Lord. Asking you to convey to your estimable wife and family our best wishes and congratulations, and praying that you may be long spared together and supplied with all temporal blessings and spiritual grace, we would sign ourselves in the name and on the behalf of the congregation of Chalmers' Church, Guelph, this 2nd day of May, 1878.

Here follow the names of the Elders and Managers of the church.

Dr. Wardrope made the following reply:—

To the Elders and Managers of Chalmers Church.

MY DEAR FRIENDS,—I cannot say that I have been altogether taken by surprise, as I was aware that your thoughtful kindness had prompted some such movement as that which has been brought to completion to-night. But the movement had been inaugurated, and, by the characters of those committed to it, its success had been secured, before I had dreamed of any such thing. There had been no conference with me, there was no opportunity for any, and none was required.

I should not like to be chargeable with the affectation of making light of the honour which has been conferred upon me, and of which you have made such graceful mention in your address. To do so would, in my case, be affectation as well as folly. My experience of academical life in boyhood and youth never produced in me that which familiarity is popularly supposed to "breed." I never lost my reverence for my teachers, even when I was most disposed to consider their "rule severe." As a natural consequence, I have a warm sympathy with those who occupy the position of professors and teachers, and a high appreciation of the work in which they are engaged. And as may be inferred from what I have said, I place a high estimate on the honours bestowed, from time to time, by college and university authorities on those who go forth from their halls.

I can, however, say without affectation, that I know many who are better entitled than I am to the honour which it has pleased my Alma Mater to bestow on me. I owe it, in a great measure, to the too favourable verdict passed by many friends on my attainments and my services. I regard it, and I shall wear it, as a kindly recognition, by the Principal and Senate of "Queen's," of my early relations to the University as student in its classes, and as teacher in its preparatory school. In this point of view, I prize it as I could prize no such honour from any other source.

But you have endorsed the action of the Senate. That, to me, is no empty form. I attach to it an importance greater, perhaps, than you yourselves suppose. This, at any rate, you will readily understand; that, whatever honor may be implied in the "degree," the gratification of receiving it is doubled by this expression of your congratulations and good wishes. You could not have said anything kinder than this, that, in honoring me, the Senate of the University honored you. You have thus identified me with yourselves. In the confidence of those among whom he labors, a minister's joy and strength, in the human aspect of the relation, must ever lie. To be accorded by the respected Senate of a University the degree of Doctor of Divinity is to me no matter of indifference; but to be regarded by the congregation which you represent as a "Doctor" to them, a teacher, a helper in the truth, must ever be, next to the approbation of our gracious Lord, my purest satisfaction.

In your expressions of kindness, you have connected with myself my wife and children. For this you have my heartiest thanks, and theirs. Your generous words are accompanied by corresponding gifts—gifts, valuable in themselves, but valued by me most of all, on account of the givers. Every incident in the history of a minister and his congregation which appropriately brings out, in fuller relief, the mutual love and confidence which already exist, and are day by day exerting their genial influence, must be of interest to him and to them. As such, I am thankful for the occasion of our present meeting; and it is my heart's desire and prayer that, when all the meetings and partings of time shall have come to an end, it may, through the rich grace of our Redeemer be ours to meet one with another and with Him in another and better world where parting shall be unknown! And so shall we ever be with the Lord.

On the inkstand is the following inscription:—

"Presented to Rev. Thomas Wardrope, D.D., by the congregation of Chalmers' Church, Guelph, congratulatory on his having received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, May 2nd, 1878." The inkstand was purchased from Mr. D. Savage. The address was signed by the Elders and Managers of the Church in behalf of the congregation.

Immediately after the presentation short and appropriate addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Torrance, Rev. Canon Dixon, Rev. Mr. Ball, Rev. Dr. Davidson, Rev. Messrs. Smith, Brock, Howie, Manchee, Durkee, and Rev. Dr. Barrie. These brother ministers of Dr. Wardrope tendered their warm congratulations on the honor conferred on him—an honor which also reflected on the congregation over which he was pastor—and expressed the hope that he would be long spared to his flock, and that the happy relations that existed between them would contine to the end.

We may state that the Rev. Mr. Harris would have had great pleasure in being present, but was obliged to attend another meeting. A letter was received from Rev. E. B. Ryckman, M. A., stating that he could not possibly attend. At intervals between the speeches the choir of the church, under Mr. Maitland, gave some favorite anthems, and Miss Simpson sang a solo with much taste and feeling.

After singing of the doxology, Dr. Davidson pronounced the benediction, which brought the proceedings to a close.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

Isaac Wallace Committed on a Charge of Rape.

This (Friday) morning the preliminary examination of the case in which Isaac Wallace, a youth of about nineteen years, is charged with raping one Josephine Elizabeth Carey, a girl between nine and ten years, took place before Police Magistrate Saunders.

The mother of the little girl, with an infant in her arms, was present in the Police Court. She looked to be one bowed down with grief and appeared to be in very destitute circumstances. Her daughter, the alleged victim of the prisoner, is a bright, intelligent girl, appearing much older than her years.

The prisoner, Isaac Wallace, was brought out of the cells and placed in the dock. He is a stripling about nineteen years, and bears a chronic grin that suggest to the mind that of a hardened wretch, or one not over weighted with brains. As he entered the dock he gave several expressive winks at his old companions outside the railing.

The Police Court was crowded with boys in their teens, young men, and men who had lived out the allotted span. A murmur of disappointment pervaded the assemblage when Mr. H. W. Peterson, County Crown Attorney, requested the Court to be cleared, and the Police Magistrate gave the order to a Policeman to that effect. Strange it is that so many take delight in listening to a narrative that is by no means fit to be repeated or published.

Mr. W. H. Peterson prosecuted on behalf of the Crown.

After some questioning it was found that the girl Carey, alleged to having been abused, understood the nature of an oath, and it was accordingly administered. She deposed that on the 3rd of April she was living with her mother on Essex street. On that day her mother was out and the witness was looking after her baby sister. She knew the prisoner Wallace very well. He came in the house on that afternoon and sat down and talked for about ten or fifteen minutes. He then canght hold of her and put her on the bed, after tieing her hands with a piece of string and binding a handkerchief around her head so that she could not speak. An account of the accomplishment of the crime was here detailed. Before the witnesses' hands were tied she told prisoner that she would tell her mother. After the deed had been done the prisoner took the handkerchief off her mouth, and said if she told her mother he would kill her. The string was not taken off her hands until her mother came in. The witness and her mother left about an hour afterwards on the train for Stratford. She was very sore, but did not say anything to her mother until the Sunday after, on returning home from Sunday School. The next morning her mother took her to Dr. Shafer, Stratford, and he made an examination.

The prisoner was asked if he had any questions to ask the witness.

The prisoner in addressing the witness tried to argue that he had not tied her hands, and did not place a handkerchief over her face.

She replied: "You did so, Isaac."

The prisoner remarked that he had lots of good witnesses to prove that he had not done anything of the kind, and would bring them forward at the proper time.

Sarah Carey, the mother of the girl, was sworn. She stated that on the 3rd of April she had been out to see Dr. McGuire to get a pass to Stratford. On returning home she found her little girl's hands tied, but she thought that some of her playmates had done it. Elizabeth appeared very much frightened, but she thought it was only for fear of getting a whipping for having her hands tied and not minding the baby. She did not ask her anything about how her hands were tied. They left for Stratford shortly afterwards. Elizabeth complained of pain on the cars, but witness thought it was caused by the motion of the cars. On Sunday afternoon, after Elizabeth had come over from Sunday school, she complained of great pain. On Monday the witness examined her daughter, and found her to be in a terrible state. The witness asked how she was abused—when she said, "If you will not beat me, I'll tell you all about it." She then told the particulars of the rape. On being asked why she had not told of it before, Elizabeth said that she was afraid Isaac Wallace would kill her if she told. Communication was afterwards made with the authorities of Stratford and Guelph.

In being cross-examined by the prisoner the witness said that she had not asked him to lend her ten cents, neither had she asked him to mind the children while she was away. The prisoner was not in the house when she left.

Dr. Herod was sworn.—He said he had, by request of Crown Attorney Peterson, made an examination of the prisoner on Thursday, and the girl Elizabeth Carey to-day. He found that the prisoner had been diseased, and he acknowledged that he had been in that condition for a couple of months. The witness found the girl to have a disease which had been communicated to her.

This concluded the evidence.

It might here be remarked that when evidence was given that would make the blood run cold at the depravity of human nature, instead of being anxious or looking depressed, the prisoner did little but assume a grin, like what a hyena might give. At all events, he did not realize the terrible situation in which he was placed.

The prisoner was cautioned, and on being asked if he had anything to say, said: "I cannot say nothing, because it ain't true. Dr. Herod is the only one that told the truth."

Prisoner then asked—"Mr. Saunders, can I have bail?"

Police Magistrate—"No."

The prisoner was then committed for trial, and Mrs. Carey was provided for by the authorities.

The Quebec Elections.

The latest returns give us thirty-two returned as Ministerialists, twenty-eight as Opposition, three as Independents, and two not known. It will thus be seen that parties are pretty evenly divided, but it is hoped that Mr. Joly will have a small majority. The Globe's Quebec special says:—There is no doubt now of M. Chauveau's election by a majority of fourteen. The entire Joly-Bachand Government is thus returned, and three ex-Ministers defeated—Messrs Angers, Baker, and Garneau. Returns from every constituency in the Province except Chicoutimi, where the election occurs on Monday, give the Government a majority of ten, including three Independents — Turcotte, Robertson, and Caron. The rejoicing among the Quebec Liberals, who carried every constituency in their district, is immense. Since Monday Mr. Angers had spent nearly $15,00 in Montmorenci, and felt perfectly satisfied of election.

The Mail's Montreal correspondent, in referring to the election says:—"The defeat of Mr. Baker by 16, Mr. Augers by 13, and Mr. Garneau by 200, has given great surprise to their friends. There is no doubt that money was freely used by the Liberals, but apart from that the elections must undoubtedly be considered as showing the unpopularity of the DeBoucherville Administration. It had managed to make itself obnoxious in the cities by the Railway and Stamp Tax Bills, and these questions, with the promised economy of the Joly Government, were far more important factors in influencing the voting than the constitutional question."

MR. A. GUNN has been nominated by the Reformers to oppose Sir John A. Macdonald at the Dominion election. He has accepted the nomination.

THE Toronto Reform Club on Thursday night sent a congratulatory message to Hon. Mr. Joly, on the splendid victory he had achieved on behalf of good government.

West Garafraxa Council.

The Council of this Township met on call of the Reeve, at the "Sheaf of Wheat" Hotel, on Saturday, April 27th. Members all present.

The Auditors' Report for 1877 was received, read, and adopted.

On motion, $85.67 was received from J. L. Smith, in full, of his taxes for 1877; $55 was ordered to be paid to Peter Gaven for repairing a bridge on 1st Concession, at Lot 16; and $2 to Wm. Howitt for repairing 5th line, at Lot 25; and $1.80 to the Nichol Insurance Company, being the amount of assessment on the drill shed in Dotglas.

On motion a by-law was introduced and passed, detaching the N. E. half of lots 31, 32, 33, and 34, in the 2nd Concession, and the S. W. halves of Lots 31, 32, 33, and 34, in the 3rd Concession, from Union School Section No. 1, Arthur Village and Garafraxa, with the view to form a union with a portion of the Township of Luther. Also a By-law detaching the S. W. half of Lot No. 1, in the 1st Concession, from Union School Section No. 3, Nichol.

James Porter and David Martin were appointed road overseers in their respective divisions. On motion the Reeve, Deputy Reeve, and Councillors were authorized to expend $60 each on the roads in their divisions, which divisions are to remain the same as last year.

Councillor Kennedy was directed to repair a bad portion of the side road between Lots 5 and 6, on the 6th Concession.

The Clerk was directed to suggest to the Local Superintendent and the Commissioners appointed to form a new Union School Section, with a portion of the Township of Luther, the advisability of adding the N. E. halves of Lots 33 to 34, in the 2nd Concession of said union.

W. CAMPBELL, Township Clerk.

THE ERIE CANAL.—This canal is 360 miles in length, and the tolls collected upon it for 1861 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, bruises, rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster. Sold by all medicine dealers at 25 cents per bottle.

The League in Eramosa.

A meeting, called in the interests of t National Protective Policy party, was held last night at Ussherwood's, Eramosa. Nearly one hundred of the ratepayers and residents of the township were present, and appeared to take more than ordinary interest in the proceedings.

Mr. Jonathan Tovell was appointed chairman, and the meeting was then addressed by Mr. A. Riddell, of Guelph, who was followed by Mr. John Rae, the Warden, in a practical speech in favour of the existing state of affairs.

Mr. Mitchell, an Eramosa farmer, made some good points against the National Policy—so-called.

Mr. T. Goldie, from Guelph, spoke plaintively and beseechingly on behalf of the millers.

Mr. E. F. B. Johnston was then called upon, who dealt at considerable length with the whole question, and thoroughly exposed the Protection fallacies.

Mr. Loghrin attempted a rambling reply, and, after speaking about twenty minutes, suddenly collapsed on the plea that the meeting was interrupting him.

There was no interruption, as the meeting was of the most orderly character. The chairman in the most arbitrary and unjustifiable manner then rose to his feet and declared the meeting closed, and that they would have no more speaking. In the course of his harangue he told the people of Eramosa that they didn't know how to behave themselves, and that bad manners characterized them.

An appeal was made by some of those present to give Mr. Massie an opportunity of speaking, but this the chairman absolutely refused. The meeting then broke up, a request having been first made to those present in favor of the Tory schemes to remain. Five out of the hundred who were present remained, who, with the Guelphite friends, proceeded to business. At least such was their intention.

This is the most disastrous meeting the National League has yet held. Even in this place, their stronghold, they were unable to get more than five to remain with them.

The Goorkas.

England's Native Indian Allies.

Of the quality of this swarthy contingent of the British Mediterranean forces the Echo remarks that from all accounts they are fair types of those warriors with whom the great Empire of Hindostan abounds, and that as the recruiting area is practically boundless, there would be no difficulty, save a pecuniary one, in raising the force to a million. Indeed, there are in India whole nations of soldiers who look upon war as their trade and to whom the regular pay of the Feringhee is an irresistible attraction. So that, although 250 rupees (125) must be deposited as surety for their horse and accoutrements, the number of candidates anxious to enter the Bengal cavalry is far in advance of the number of vacancies. "But in all this," continues the Echo, "there is a danger. We must remember that the mutiny of 1857 was not a rebellion of the people but of the native army. Let once the fierce soldiery of India learn that they are indispensable to the defence of the Empire and they will gain exaggerated ideas of their own importance, and probably be again tempted to try their strength with those whose enemies they were called on to fight. At all events we have commenced an experiment which must be viewed, apart from its bearing on the present crisis, with great gravity. This is the first time Indian troops have been called to Europe, and in a few weeks we shall be better able to report how far this new department in the history of Anglo-Indian Empire is likely to effect England and India.

Speaking of the Goorka troops reminds me of an anecdote concerning these fierce little warriors told me by an officer of the Indian army who saw much hard service in his day against the Sikhs in the Indian campaigns some thirty years ago. The Goorkas were there fighting with the English against the Sikhs, and rendered valuable service. Their favorite weapon is a sharp, curved knife, which they use with terrific effect. In one of the most sanguinary battles of the war the Goorkas lost one of their best loved officers; one of them marked down the man who had killed the officer, killed him in turn, and then ripped him up with a turn of the terrible knife, tore out his heart and rubbed the bleeding trophy all over his own face. The Turkish Nizams and Redifs will find fitting allies in these enterprising warriors from the Himalays.

Harold the Outlaw.

—OR—

The Gauger of Skene.

"Of course, you wonder to see me here, McGarray," said the new comer, addressing the lawyer.

"I certainly do, Mr. Allan. You are about the last man I would have thought of as my unannounced visitor."

"Nevertheless, you are welcome," interposed Gilmour. "Certain private affairs which we have in common make it extremely desirable that we should be personally acquainted."

"That is exactly what I thought," returned McPherson; "and that is why I resolved to come to Mount Cairn when I learned at Aberdeen that McGarray was here. Indeed, had I found McGarray at home we should in all probability have come together, for my business requires that we three have a conference. McGarray, I bring news from Benachray—important news!"

"Good God!—nothing has gone wrong at the island, I hope!" said the lawyer, with a start, Gilmour's heart leaping to his mouth at the same time.

"No!—nothing wrong there, or indeed anywhere; but something highly important has taken place at the mansion. The boy is dead!"

"Ha!—is it so. Whew!—that is important, indeed, Mr. Allan—emphatically important to you!"

"The boy dead!" cried, almost shrieked, Gilmour, who in his agitation deemed that they spoke of Harold's child.

"Not your brother's boy, Sir Gilmour. said Allan, with the complacent smile of one whom fortune had favoured. "Not your brother's boy, but the child of my cousin, whose death makes me the next heir to Benachray. Fact is, we have been expecting that event to happen. Haven't we McGarray?"

"Hum—well, Mr. Allan, I must say the contingency has been imminent to my mind for some time; but, then, the Colonel took such care of the boy, and kept so near him that I fancied his weakness might have been overcome."

"Ay, my uncle did his best to keep my turn from coming, but all his coddling couldn't prevent my luck. So Benachray is mine when the old man goes to the family vault, and that I take it will be soon, for the boy's death has cut him up badly. Why don't you congratulate me, McGarray?"

"Because I was thinking of something which you seem to have overlooked," returned the lawyer. "Have you forgot the existence of that other child?"

"You mean the girl?"

"Girl though it be, she is heir before you. Benachray, you know, is not entailed, nor settled on heirs male."

"I know that, confound it! But, you know, Conrad's child was effectually disposed by Dixon."

McGarray smiled dubiously.

"Disposed of," he remarked. "Yes; but whether effectually or not remains to be seen. Dixon never told us what he did with the child. Suppose that, instead of destroying it, he has it nursing somewhere, and means to produce it as a revenge for the wrong you did him?"

"Bah! that bugbear doesn't frighten me," said Allan, though in a tone of ill-assumed confidence. "Dixon has not been seen or heard of since the day we fought together. It was reported he had gone to America."

"That report might be false. We can hardly trust to it. It's a thousand pities, Mr. Allan, that you gave Dixon such a cause to be your enemy."

"Curse it, man, that cannot be helped now," roared the other, angrily. "If the wench hadn't preferred me to him she wouldn't have come into my arms so easily. But suppose he is keeping this card to play against me, it won't turn up in trump. He has no means of proving that the brat he will produce is the lawful child of Conrad McPherson."

"He has the means through its mother," said McGarray, in a quiet but emphatic tone.

"Ay, there you spot my weak point—the mother—the wife of Conrad," hissed Allan, with concentrated vehemence. "That is where my danger lies, and to make all secure there, is the business which has brought me east."

McGarray looked at him for a moment or two, then at Gilmour with a meaning smile, but said nothing. Allan waited for him to speak, but the lawyer kept a determined silence.

"Well?" said Allan, impatiently, at the end of a minute or so.

"Well?" repeated McGarray, with provoking stolidity.

"What the devil, man," burst out McPherson. "Dont look at me in that way, but speak—speak, can't you?"

"What would you have me say?"

"Speak your thought—my thought. Don't pretend you have not caught it. Did you not also catch my meaning, Sir Gilmour. It ought to jump quick into your mind, for your interests lie in the same line? Neither you nor I are safe so long as the prisoners on the island are alive."

"Ha! the very subject of our conference when you arrived," exclaimed Gilmour. "I was showing McGarray the necessity of getting rid of Harold's wife and child."

"You don't say so?" cried Allan, with eager delight. I was sure you would see the thing in this light. Give me your hand, Sir Gilmour. Our interests are one, our road is the same. Let us unite together to effect our purpose."

"With all my heart," returned Gilmour, and the two men clasped hands with the most intense cordiality.

"Now to settle our proceedings in detail," said McPherson, with an air of unbounded satisfaction. "There must be no delay. Neither of us can afford it, for something may turn up at any moment to mar our fortunes. We must form our plans this very night, and go straight to work in carrying them out."

"Stay, gentlemen," exclaimed McGarray, rising from his seat. "I can be no party to this. What is done must be done out of my knowledge."

"What! won't you help us?" cried both in a breath.

"I will neither help nor hinder," returned the wily lawyer. "The work is too dangerous for me to meddle with. You two who are to profit by it must bear the risk. Besides, you don't need any help, and my rule always is to run no risk unnecessary. Good-night, gentlemen. When we meet in the morning don't acquaint me with the result of your deliberations."

Saying which he quickly and unceremoniously quitted the room, his exit being followed by the mocking laugh of Allan and Gilmour.

For once we shall follow the example of this cunning legal functionary, and leave the two plotters to their unsavoury but congenial work. The peaceful summer gloaming had stolen gently over the landscape, and the white stars shone faintly in the warm night sky ere their secret conference was broken up. When they parted for the night they had planned the perpetration of a deed of hellish cruelty at which Nature might well have stood aghast, and broken her dumb silence in an outburst of loud denunciation. But Nature has witnessed the planning and the execution of so many dark deads and ruthless atrocities since the world began without preventing or bringing them to light in the common way which human feeling would suggest, that we need not be surprised if on this occasion, she kept her usual imperturbable silence. Nature has her own quiet, but inevitable ways of working, and sooner or later right every wrong, adjusts every disturbed equipoise, and avenges every outrage against her physical or moral laws. Still the wicked are often allowed to triumph for a time, and it may be that this fresh plot, devised against the innocent and helpless prisoners on the island, shall be permitted to work out its fearful issue.

Most certainly the long twilight conference between Gilmour Logan and Allan McPherson, at which the cunning lawyer declined to assist but which he would be careful not to hinder, was pregnant with danger to Lizzie, to her child, and to Myra, and nowhere is there yet visible a hand which can be stretched out to save them.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Prospects of Peace Growing Brighter.

Britain and Russia in Direct Negotiation.

LONDON, May 2.

A memorial to the Queen is being extensively signed in Sheffield expressing confidence in her Ministers, and a willingness to make every necessary sacrifice for the conduct of a war.

Mr. Cross, Home Secretary, speaking again at Preston, repeatedly and energetically repudiated the idea that the Government were bent on war, but said they were determined to be prepared for all possible circumstances.

A Valetta, Malta, despatch says:—Brigadier-General Keys and Quarter-Master General Adams have arrived to arrange for the reception of Sepoys from India. The ironclads Minataur and Resistance have sailed, it is supposed, for Port Said.

An Alexandria special says:—Altogether about thirty transports with Indian troops are expected at Suez on May, the 17th.

The Paris Patrie, a sensational journal, says:—It is rumoured persistently in Constantinople that the Khedive has concluded an offensive alliance with England.

Another St. Petersburg, correspondent says:—Important decisions which caused this favourable change in Russia's attitude were arrived at in a great Council presided over by the Czar on April 28th.

It appears the German navy is assembling at Wilhelmshaven to avoid being shut up in the event of England blockading the Sound.

The Vienna Tagblatt says:—In consequence of the concentration of Russian troops near the Transylvanian frontier it becomes necessary for Austria to take precautions. According to reliable information, the question of concentrating an Austrian army in Transylvania is being seriously considered.

The Vienna Political Correspondence states that the revival of negotiations between Russia and England relative to a Congress is due to the initiative of the former. The negotiations are based upon larger concession than hitherto acceded to by Russia.

They understand how to deal with tramps in the village of Williamstown, Massachussetts. The village is naturally a handsome one, and the inhabitants are resolved to do all that art, as operated by tramps, can do to beautify the place. When the tramps have been provided with lodging and breakfast at the lock-up, they are set to work raking off the lawns, and contributing in various ways to the work of beautifying the village. In this way the peripatetic gentry are entertained at small expense to the town, and in turn are given an opportunity to cultivate æsthetic tastes.

TRIAL FOR MURDER.—Thomas Burk and John Macpherson were placed on their trial at Whitby on Thursday, on the charge of entering the dwelling of Ellen Bennett, a married woman residing near Brougham, on the 26th of July last, violating her person, and thereby causing her death. The trial is not yet concluded.

GALT.—Mrs. Hall, relict of the late Thos. Hall, of Galt, was recently killed by being thrown out of a buggy. She was in the 81st year of her age.—At the annual vestry meeting of Trinity church J. G. Dykes and R. B. Dixon were elected church wardens. The financial statement for the year showed that the total receipts were $3,120.40, and their disbursements were $3,042.84, leaving a balance to their successors of $77.56.

During the heavy thunderstorm on the 1st a school house in Pickering township was struck by lightning. The event happened during school hours but none of the children were injured. The pupils made their exit by the windows being unable to reach the doors for falling bricks and a portion of the roof.

The Clifford cattle fair held last week was a very successful one. A large number of well-fatted animals were brought out, and a fair price realized in almost every instance. Beef cattle ranged from 3½c to 4½c per lb., according to quality. Milch cows ranged at from $20 to $40 each, and a good number were disposed of. A few yoke of oxen were sold at from $75 to $90.

The museum building, contents and property at Niagara Falls, were bought from Col. Barnett and taken possession of the other day, by Saul Davis, for $48,000.

There is some difficulty in the County of York about the Dunkin Act, which by-lay should have come into force March 1st. Licenses having been given until May 1st, the temperance people decided to let the liquor dealers have the benefit of two months without enforcing the Act. Now proceedings have been commenced against the Justices of the Peace for not enforcing the Act on the day it became law, namely, March 1st.

A suit was settled in Toronto, on Wednesday, in which the Grand Secretary of the Knights of Pythias sued Dr. George Wright for his initiation fee of $10, which he, the Grand Secretary, had paid for defendant. A verdict was given for the defendant on the ground that no specific contract existed between the plaintiff and defendant to pay the money, it having been understood that at the time the latter entered the lodge he could pay when he liked. The debt had been due for four or five years.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around as ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Sept. 28, d&w 9m.

As a little daughter, of widow Gray was passing the farm of Daniel Detwiller, 6th concession, Wallace, she was attacked by a vicious dog belonging to that gentleman, thrown down and torn in a shocking manner. She was severely bitten on the side, arms and legs, and had not a Mr. Snider, who was passing at the time, came to her help she would in probability have been killed. Her wounds were immediately dressed, but she lies at Mr. Detwiller's in a very critical condition.

The late war is estimated in England to have cost Russia $500,000,000. The Augsburg Algemeine Zeitung calculates that in the event of war with Russia the Russian Finance Department would have to get together 750,000,000 roubles to cover the deficit of the next nine months. Loans are impossible, and the Russian Government could obtain its supplies only by forced loans through the unlimited issue of irredeemable paper. The Algemeine Zeitung prophesies Government bankruptcy and the impoverishment of the people as the ultimate result, and significantly refers to the fact that twenty years of peace have not enabled the Russian Government to extinguish the paper-money debt of the Crimean War.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, May 2.

Mr. McCarthy resumed his speech on his motion for an order of the House for a return of the original papers made and signed by the deputy-heads of the different Public Departments purporting to be made in obedience to the order of the House of the 5th of March, 1877, for the names of persons appointed to office between the 1st of January and the 7th of November, 1873.

Mr. Kirkpatrick moved in amendment, that such return be referred to a Special Committee of seven members to report on the same, with power to send for persons, papers, and records.

Sir John Macdonald submitted the following amendment to the amendment:—

That all after the word "that" in the amendment be struck out, and following substituted:—"Inasmuch as it is alleged by the hon. member for Cardwell (Mr. McCarthy) that the return submitted to the different Departments to be answered is different from the return asked for by the House; and inasmuch as it is further alleged by the hon. member for Cardwell that such return as made omits matters asked for by the House, and contains matters not asked for by the House; and inasmuch as it is alleged that such omissions and additions are calculated to mislead this House and are therefore a contempt of this House, be it Resolved, That the said return be referred to a special comittee of seven members to enquire into the said allegations, with power to report and send for persons, papers, and records. Lost. Yeas, 47; nays, 81.

The amendment was also lost on the same division.

Concurrence was then taken in all resolutions reported from the Committee of Supply, several unimportant divisions being taken on amendments.

Mr. Mackenzie moved the second reading of the Bill for the better Prevention of Crimes of Violence in certain parts of Canada until the end of the next session of Parliament. The motion was carried and the Bill referred to a Select Committee.

Mr. Mackenzie moved the second reading of the Bill respecting the traffic in intoxicating liquors. Carried.

Mr. Laflamme moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Supreme Court Act. Carried.

Terrific Explosion at Minneapolis.

Seventeen Lives Lost.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 2.—At seven this evening the city was shaken as by an earthquake by a terrific explosion, which was promptly traced to the groups of great flouring mills in what is known as the Platform, just about St Anthony's Falls, where the entire flouring district of the city is concentrated. The explosion came from the great Washburn mill, from which a column of flame was seen to shoot up several hundred feet, followed by a crash which crushed the immense structure like an egg shell. Secondary explosions instantly destroyed the Thompson & Hoyt and Humboldt Mills, and flames immediately burst out communicating to the Galaxy Mills, those of Pettit, Robinson & Co., Cahill, Ankeny & Co., L. Day & Sons, Day Rollis, Buell, Newton & Co., Gorton, Hayward & Co., Washburn, A. & B. Mills, and lesser structures down the bank of the river nearly to the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway shops. The destruction from the shock of the explosion extended much further, glass being wrecked for several squares, and buildings shaken throughout the city. At 8:30 the fire was raging within these limits, and the firemen working to subdue the flames. The immediate theory of the explosion is that it took place in gas generated in the patent middlings purifier process. The loss of life is undoubtedly great, but full details are lacking. In the confusion that surrounds the scene the first rumor made the dead seventy to eighty, but this is not borne out by enquiry. The explosion took place at the hour of changing the day for night hands, and many of both were undoubtedly in the building.

The number of dead is placed at seventeen. There were many trifling accidents and narrow escapes. The loss to property is estimated at $1,500,000. One million falls upon the milling interest. The loss throughout the city by broken glass, &c., is $10,000. Five mills and a planing mill are destroyed, besides adjoining property.

THE TROUBLES IN MONTREAL.—Mayor Beaudry has requested the City Clerk to call a special meeting of the Council to consider what steps should be taken for preservation of the peace and good order of society, in view of the recent disturbances and loss of life in that city. The city papers state that Mr. Blake's new Bill for the better prevention of crime will be gladly received in Montreal, its need being at the present time very greatly felt. Several small party rows are reported to have taken place again on Wednesday night.

It is understood that a reconstruction of the New Brunswick Cabinet has been decided upon, Attorney-General King, who is about to retire from local politics, being succeeded by Mr. Fraser, Provincial Secretary, who will be replaced by Mr. Wedderburn, Speaker of the last House. The Provincial general elections will take place shortly.

Hayes' friends declare their willingness to have the whole electoral question tried before a committee of fair men from both Houses of Congress. It is said that a resolution respecting the President's title will come up in the House of Representatives early next week.

Montreal Cattle Market.

MONTREAL, April 29.

A very dull and inactive market was experienced to-day. The supply was far in excess of the demand, and prices ranged from 4½c. to 5c. for good fat cattle and from 3½c. to 4c. per lb. live weight, for fair qualities. One car of cattle from A. White, of Guelph, sold at 4c. to 4½c., and one car load from Mr. John Elliott, of Kingston, at 4¾c. per lb., live weight. Mr. Head made several sales of hogs at from $4.30 to $4.60 per 100 lbs. Mr. R. J. Hopper received one load of cattle from Mr. Thomas Hopper, besides other purchases. He sold 11 cattle for $540, or 4½ to 4¾c. per lb.; 10 do. for $625, or 4¾c. per lb.; 3 do. for $160, or 4½ per lb.; 15 do. ranging from $37.50 to $45 per head, or at 3¾c. to 4½ per lb. Mr. William Jack, of Lindsay, had one car load of cattle for sale, of which 10 sold at 4¾c. per lb. Mr. T. G. Conn, of Stratford, sold 10 at 4¾c. per lb., with $4 off on the lot. They weighed about 1,200 each. Mr. J. Elliott, of Kingston, sold one car of cattle at 4¾c. per lb., two bulls for $150, and one ox for $70, or 4¾c. per lb. Mr. A. Knox, of Whitby, sold one bull for $29, and 9 cattle at from 4¾c. to 5c.

The Free Church Synod of Aberdeen has, by very narrow majorities, declared all the charges against Professor Smith irrelevant, and the case now goes to the Assembly by the appeal of Principal Brown and others. The amount of sympathy and support given to Mr. Smith, especially by the younger members of the Synod, has been very remarkable.

AN impression is industriously circulated through the country by Protectionists, that the present hard times press with special severity upon manufacturers, and the great volume of bankruptcy that is reported, is relied on as corroborative evidence of that position. Taking up one of the daily papers of Tuesday we noted the list of insolvents there reported, and found it as follows:—Nine merchants, one tailor, one druggist, one hotel keeper, but not one manufacturer. That does not look like ruin overtaking the latter.

IT is now said that the steamer Cimbria, the supposed Russian privateer now lying off the Maine coast, was chartered on the 24th of March by the Russian Admirality for a year, to serve exclusively as a transport, for £14,800. The value of the vessel is secured to the owners by Berlin bankers. Her principal work will be to supply provisions and munitions of war to the Russian fleet in the Pacific. Her present destination, after taking aboard war material contracted for in America, is North Japan.

MR. D. YEOMANS, in a letter to the Toronto Tribune respecting the manifesto recently issued by a number of Catholics in North Wellington, says:—"In early days we had some experience in the harmonious efforts put forth by Catholic and Protestant Reformers under the political direction of the Hon R. Baldwin. We afterwards felt deeply the severance of that harmony, and have ever since striven to establish a more liberal feeling among this important branch of the electorate. In 1867 we had the honour of nominating the Hon. M. H. Foley, to represent North Wellington in the Commons, and, later, E. J. O'Callaghan for the Legislature, both of whom did much towards uniting the feelings of Reformers, and both of whom, we are justified in supposing, would have been elected, had it not been for the vote of the Catholic Conservatives. Now, Mr. Editor, what I wish to say is that the Catholic meeting which you report in your last number appears to have been inspired by the same influence that prevented us from electing these men for North Wellington, and that it is very unfair to blame Protestant Reformers for a want of liberality towards our Catholic friends."

MODERATE to fresh southerly to westerly winds and cloudy to fair weather, with rain areas are the weather probabilities received to-day by Dominion Telegraph.

ONE of those fine Gold Dust horses had a severe fall this morning on Upper Wyndham street. By the prompt action of the driver no damage was sustained to the animal.

REV. J. H. JOHNSTON, of Toronto, is expected to occupy the pulpit in the Norfolk street Church to-morrow (Sunday) morning, and in the Dublin street Church in the evening, BASE BALL.—The following games were played on Friday:—At Syracuse, international championship, Stars 1, Buffalos 0; at New York, Brooklyns 1, Resolutes 0; at Auburn, Tecumsehs 2, Auburns 1; at Utica, Rochesters 4, Uticas 3.

MR. ALEX. HUNTER, of Toronto, has been appointed agent for the Canadian and American Express and the Montreal Telegraph Companies in Guelph, vice Mr. Winters removed.

THERE is on exhibiton at Anderson's bookstore a large and peculiar-plumaged wild duck, shot a few weeks ago in the vicinity of the "Rocks" by Ed. Schofield, and since taxidermized by H. Cull.

AN old woman—evidently a tramp—entered a house on Norfolk street yesterday afternoon, and making her way to the larder, helped herself generously to bread and other edibles, and made off before she was detected.

IMPROVEMENT.—Mr. Walter Fairbank has beautified the North End Meat Mart by having a handsome fountain placed in the window, and the effect is still greater enhanced by the judicious placing of flowers and plants.

POLICE COURT.—Thomas Woods was charged at the Police Court this morning with being drunk on Friday evening. He pleaded guilty, and the Magistrate dismissed the case, it being a long time since prisoner had been charged with the same offence.

THE Rifles mustered at the drill shed last evening for inspection and drill. The company presented a very fine appearance with their new clothing. The arms with which they are to be supplied will arrive next week.

DESTRUCTIVE STORM.—On Thursday night the town line of Waterloo was visited by a terrific storm of wind and rain, and considerable damage was done. The stable and workshop of Jacob Pretz were unroofed, and his hardwood bush, comprising about five acres, was nearly destroyed. The wind made sad havoc with the fences in the neighborhood.

STREET WATERING.—A correspondent signing himself "Ratepayer," writes as follows: "The streets are watered enough just now, and the mud on the Market Square is much deeper than on Wyndham street. When dry weather comes the dust will be just as deep as the mud is now. This being the case that portion of the street where the dust is the most thickly spread will require the greatest amount of water. The watering cart has been tried before and proved a failure. If the Council does not look after the interests of the ratepayers in this respect, and make use of the best system, it will be necessary for those who suffer to try hereafter and elect men that will."

ADDITION TO ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—From Mr. C. J. Soule, architect, who has been instructed to prepare the plans for the addition to the above church, it is learned that the transepts, one of which will be built at either side, will afford seating accommodation for an extra two hundred worshippers. In size they will be 19 by 27 feet and the architecture will be in keeping with the rest of the building. The roof will be supported by iron columns and two arches propped from the columns to the side. Provision will be made so that in the future if desirable, galleries could be erected at either side. There will be two extra entrances to the church, one at either side at the back of the transepts, and those will be independent of the present entrances to the school room. When the addition is made to St. Andrew's it will be among the finest church buildings in town, and there is little doubt but what the congregation will continue to so increase that it will be necessary before many years to add the side galleries.

THE Berlin News says:—Mr. L. Breithaupt shipped two hundred sides of leather to Wm. Hepburn & Co., of Preston, on Tuesday. This establishment must be doing a large business in the boot and shoe line, and no doubt is an important industry to the village of Preston.

SPRING HARDWARE.—Since the opening of our new place of business we have done a good trade, and our old friends are beginning to find us out. A full stock of hardware in store.—JOHN HORSMAN.

THE QUEBEC ELECTIONS.

Mr. Chauveau Elected.

QUEBEC, May 4.

The Returning Officer for Rimouski has voted for Mr. Chauveau. Before it was a tie. Thus the whole of the Joly Government have been elected.

GRIP.—Mr. John Anderson has sent us Grip for this week. Its cartoon is Mayday in Quebec, showing the jubiliation of Mr. Joly and his friends over the elections on Wednesday, Governor Letellier furnishes the music. It is one of Grip's best.

SPRING ASSIZES, will open in Guelph on Monday.

The price for Lawn Croquet is 30 per cent. below last year's price at Day's Bookstore. See price list for this season.

THE Galt Reporter says that the produce trade of Galt, in the hands of Mr. Thos. Todd, has certainly assumed very large proportions. In wheat, flour, barley, malt, oatmeal, split peas, pot barley, cheese, butter, and oil-cake, during the present year he has dealt very largely, and we trust, profitably to both his customers and himself. The shipments for the year foot up to over a million dollars. These shipments were, of course, principally on English and Scotch account, and the volume of stuff going to ports there may be judged when we say that the sterling exchange alone, handled by Mr. Todd, exceeded £100,000. The United States and our maritime provinces received the rest.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION in connection with the Dublin street Methodist church held a most successful and pleasant meeting last evening. After the regular routine business had been disposed of the following programme was gone through in a satisfactory manner: Reading by Mr. Newman; duett on piano, by Miss Goodfellow and Mr. Philp; vocal duett by Miss Hunt and Miss Berry; piano solo by Master Willie Bucham; reading by Miss Keables; duet and quartette by Miss Hunt, Miss Berry, Messrs. Rudd and Fessant; reading by Mr. G. Maddock; and a duet piano and violin, by Miss Goodfellow and Mr. Philp. The Society now numbers one hundred and eight members, and the singing class in connection therewith forty. An entertainment will be given very soon, of which due notice will be given.

SALES OF THOROUGHBRED STOCK.—Mr. F. W. Stone, Guelph, has sold to the Hon. J. H. Starin, Fultonville, N.Y., seven head of fashionably bred short-horns—1 bull and 6 heifers—of great individual merit, viz:—

1. 4th Earl of Cambridge—18 months old, red; sired by 8th Airdrie 21883; dam, Cambridge 9th, by the Grand Duke of Moreton 5732, &c.
2. Maude 6th—2 years old, red; sired by Earl of Cambridge 23016; dam, Maud 3rd, by Oxford Duke 18775, &c.
3. Airdrie Spencer—1 year old, red; sired by 8th Airdrie 21883; dam, Anchovy (imported) by Caballer (28114), &c.
4. Belle Flower 2nd—1 year old, red; sired by 3rd Duke of Springwood 16928; dam, Belle Flower, by Duke of Marlboro' 5587, &c.
5. Jessica 2nd—1 year old, red; sired by 3rd Duke of Springwood 16928; dam, Jessica (imported), by 15th Grand Duke (21852), &c.
6. Queen of Weston 6th—1 year old, red; sired by (imported) Baron Berkeley (36158); dam, Queen of Weston 2nd (imported), by Duke of Kent (25979), &c.
7. Laurustina 2nd—1 year old, red; sired by (imported) Baron Berkeley (36158); dam, Consolation (imported), by Earl of Lancaster (21647), &c.

To Mr. H. W. Peterson, Hawskville, Ont., the fine young Short-horn bull 2nd Earl of Shrewsbury—16 months old, red; sired by 8th Airdrie 21883; dam, Lily 2nd (imported), by Lord Warwick (26753), &c. To Messrs. Joseph & Hausers, Little Germany, Ont., one pure-bred Cotswold ram. To Mr. A. Huck, Guelph Township, one Berkshire boar.

WANTON DESTRUCTION.—In Guelph there are roughs who might lay claim to some good parts, and there are some who do nothing but contemptible and shameful deeds, and appear happiest when destroying property belonging to respectable citizens. Some of the latter class must have been out last evening until a late hour seeking what they might destroy. On Quebec street they committed depredations which will cause a loss to Messrs. McQuillan & Hamilton of about $60. Adjoining the marble works of the above firm is a platform built on which to store finished and partly finished work. This (Saturday) morning it was found that sometime during the night four of the headstones had been upset, and one valued at over $60 completely ruined. Attempts had also been made to overturn a very valuable granite column, but in this the depredators were unsuccessful, as it appeared they were only able to shift it slightly on the base upon which it rested. From this place the ruffians proceeded as far as the block in course of erection on Quebec street, and with some hard substance knocked a corner off a portion of a brick pillar in the centre of the building. It will be very unfortunate if the parties who would so wantonly destroy property are not found out and severely punished. It is not so very long ago since some person expectorated tobacco juice over some of Messrs. McQuillan & Hamilton's finished stock, and taking that act in connection with what was done last night would lead one to suppose that the property had been destroyed with malice prepense.

W. G. Hay, has sold his farm, 1½ miles west of Listowel, containing 100 acres, to Samuel Davidson, for the sum of $6,000 cash.

The rate of taxation for the present year in Toronto will be twenty-two mills in the dollar.

The population of the town of Waterloo is 2,015.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

PEACE PROSPECTS STILL IMPROVING.

LONDON, May 3.

There is no abatement of pressure on the British Government works. The activity in every department cannot be expressed in details, being created by general demands for munitions, stores, &c. The Manchester Guardian says:—Of the seven battalions of Guards three are recruited to their full strength, and their baggage and arm chests are packed for instant removal. The ranks of the other four battalions are being filled to a thousand strong.

Mr. Cross, Home Secretary, said at Preston he was certain that if there were an election at the present time the Conservative majority in Parliament would be vastly increased.

The memorial circulated by the Eastern Question Association, regretting the calling out of the reserves and expressing belief that no sufficient obstacle exists to prevent the assembing of a Congress has been signed by 17,000 persons, including the Dukes of Westminister and Bedford, the Marquis of Bath, the Bishops of Exeter and Oxford, several noblemen, Mr. Carlyle, Rev. Mr. Spurgeon, Dr. Newman Hall, Robert Browning, and Sir Charles Reed, and presented to the Queen.

There is a remarkable absence of news respecting the progress of the negotiations between England and Russia, but the latest impressions are more hopeful.

A Vienna correspondent hears that Great Britain has sent a reply to Russia's latest overtures which has produced a good impression at St. Petersburg.

A Paris despatch says:—A telegram from St. Petersburg states that negotiations have been resumed directly between London and St. Petersburg with regard to the withdrawal from Constantinople.

It is thought probable that Volonieff will succeed Gortschakoff should the Chancellors health render his resignation necessary.

A Berlin despatch says the Czar has himself undertaken the conduct of affairs during the illness of Gortschakoff. Hence the more pacific aspect of the situation.

The Paris Exposition.

PARIS, Wednesday, May 1, 1878.

The workmen made extraordinary efforts during the past three days in the preparation of the various sections. The English, American, and Belgian have been especially pushed, and present a creditable appearance. The American, though unfinished, compares favorably with the others. The department of manufactures shows the least progress. The agricultural and alimentary departments in the American section will be better than at any previous foreign exhibition. The machinery department is very rich in labor-saving machinery of a light class, already. Though incomplete, it compares favorably with the English, while occupying only one-sixth the space allotted the British exhibit. The display of machine tools is inferior to the American exhibit at Philadelphia, but superior to any other at this exhibition. The agricultural, sewing, and weighing machines make a fine display. The textiles are not yet arranged, but promise very well. Drugs, chemicals, publishers' exhibits, chromos and cutlery are superior to the competing exhibits in the other sections.

The scene after the official declaration of the opening was imposing in the extreme. From the heights of the Trocadero the thousands of guests assembled could see the crowds on the surrounding streets, the banks of the Seine, and at Passy, both on the right and left. In front lay an immense area crowded with the Exposition buildings, gaily decorated with flags of different nations, the grand cascade and row of villas illustrating the countries participating. Long lines of brilliant equipages filled the road to the Champs Elysees and the Tuileries, interspersed with detachments of the Mounted Guards of Paris, the magnificent escorts of the foreign Princes, and the military household of President MacMahon. The dazzling facade of the Palace on the Champ de Mars was richly ornamented with national emblems, and in every available space the thousands of spectators were held in place by lines of infantry. The military display was less imposing than originally intended. The Minister of Agriculture had decided, on the advice of the engineers, that the recently constructed avenues near the Exposition would suffer by the passage of cavalry and artillery. The Sixth Battalion of Chasseurs did the honor of the Trocadero, saluting each portion of the cortege as it passed.—N.Y. Tribune Correspondence.

Intelligence comes from Keewatin that the Icelandic settlement is now in a most happy and prosperous condition. The winter has been favorable, the fishing is early and productive, the people are in excellent health and spirits, extensive clearings have been made, good houses were built where necessary, and the preparations for putting in crops during the present spring are upon such a scale as the most hopeful friend of the Icelanders could not have looked forward to. The people are thinking seriously of opening up their reserves to a general settlement, so that they may profit by the example of their more advanced fellow-Canadians, and if they carry out this idea, we predict for for them a successful future.

They say that Senator Macpherson, now-a-days, is a sight to look at. A fortnight ago, he got his pay in full for publishing his two pamphlets in which he attempted to enlighten the people on the financial questions of the country. The Hon. George Brown replied to him in full in the Senate, and pulled his arguments into a hundred shreds. And now the Hon. Macpherson looks as if an elephant had sat down on him, and he says that life is a delusion, and that men's loftier emotions are not worth the paper on which they are written.

The poverty of the cotton operatives on strike at Blackburn is attracting great attention. Soup kitchens are being established, many private individuals contributing, but the supply is much too limited. About twenty thousand on strike are non-Unionists, entirely dependent on friends.

The elevation of Mr. Gathorne Hardy to the peerage with the title of Viscount Cranbrook, is gazetted.

A despatch from Washington states that the Consul at Bristol, reports that an order is issued by the Veterinary Department of the Privy Council of Great Britain declaring Bristol a port of landing for live stock from the U.S. and Canada, and destined for the interior of England.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, May 3.

Mr. Mills moved and explained his resolution providing for the definition, through the action of the Imperial Parliament, of the north-easterly, northerly, and north-westerly boundaries of Canada. The resolution proposes that the boundaries should be:—On the east the Atlantic Ocean, which boundary shall extend towards the north by Davis Straits, Baffin's Bay, Smith's Straits, and Kennedy's Channel, including all the islands in and adjacent thereto which belong to Great Britain by right of discovery or otherwise; that on the north the boundary shall be so extended as to include the entire continent to the Arctic Ocean and all the islands in the same to the 141 meridan west of Greenwich; and on the north-west the United States Territory of Alaska.

Mr. Mitchell opposed the motion, as involving needless additional burdens and responsibilities.

Sir John A. Macdonald on the other hand, strongly approved the policy of the Government, and only regretted that the step had not been taken earlier. He believed that it would be wrong not to take the earliest opportunity of extending the jurisdiction of Canada over the whole territories in question. His views of the action of the Government in the whole matter were very favorable.

Mr. Langevin warmly coincided in the views of the previous speaker.

The House having gone into Committee, Mr. Mackenzie expressed the pleasure he felt in hearing the patriotic speech of Sir John A. Macdonald. He referred to the important bearing of the proposal on the question of the fisheries, and to the large deposits of graphite in the northern region.

Mr. D. A. Smith added the expression of his pleasure at the step taken by the Government, and mentioned that no less that $120,000 worth of mica had been carried off by one American speculator.

After some further discussion the resolutions were passed, and an address to the Imperial authorities agreed to.

The House then agreed to go into Committee to-morrow on the question of advancing $10,000 for school purposes in Manitoba.

Mr. Mackenzie then moved the House into the Committee on the Bill respecting the traffic in intoxicating liquors. In the course of a short speech to the motion he pointed out the features of the Dunkin Bill which were considered objectionable, and gave the leading features of the proposed Bill. Mr. Ross (Middlesex), congratulated the House on being in possession of a Bill which was so extensive in its application to the whole Dominion, and embodied the matured views of the temperance men of the country.

Sir John Macdonald suggested that the true remedy for the evil of intemperance was a stringent liquor law. As the vast majority of the House and a strong party in the country were in favour of the measure, he did not feel incline to oppose it.

Mr. Langevin also declared his intention not to oppose the Bill.

Mr. Dymond believed on the whole the measure came fully up to the desires of temperance men, and was moreover, not unjust towards those engaged in the liquor trade.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Forbes, Flesher, Platt, Cameron, Goudge, and Plumb. The motion was carried, and the House went into Committee.

As soon as he left the Speaker's chair, Mr. Anglin entered a solemn protest against legislation of this kind, which he regarded as of the most pernicious, injurious, and tyrannical character that could be conceived. If this Bill passed he predicted that it would lead to scenes of riot, tumult, and confusion, from which both Parliament and the Government of the day would suffer.

Mr. Mackenzie contended that a prohibitory liquor law was justified when a majority of the people considered it necessary for the protection of society. While he was not satisfied that the country generally would approve of a national prohibitory law, there was nothing fairer than to afford the people an opportunity, by means of a Permissive Bill, to manage their own affairs.

Mr. Anglin said that the only ground on which they would be justified in passing a prohibitory law was that the use of the articles prohibited was per se an offence against society or against God.

Mr. Mills argued that at present no one had the right to sell liquor unless he was granted that right by license. Prohibition was therefore the very basis of our license system, and had been conceded by Parliament in the laws regarding the sale of liquor to Indians.

The consideration of the Bill was prolonged until a late hour.

CREDIT VALLEY RAILWAY.—Active operations have already been commenced on the Credit Valley Railway. On Monday Mr. Petheram, resident engineer, Mr. Paterson, assistant engineer, and Mr. Frank Brothers, construction-superintendent, arrived in Woodstock, and are now engaged in taking levels and performing other necessary engineering, prior to laying down the track. The ties, which have all been purchased, are now being delivered, and the rails are expected to arrive daily. The work of track-laying will then be proceeded with at once, and there is every probability that in less than two months the road will be ready for traffic between Woodstock and Ingersoll.—Woodstock Review.

THE PICKERING OUTRAGE.—At the adjourned Assizes held at Whitby on Friday, the prisoners Thos. Burk and John Macpherson were placed on trial for the committal of an outrage on the person of Mrs. Ellen Bennett. Chief Justice Harrison presided. Mr. B. M. Britton, Q.C., and Mr. Farewell appeared for the Crown, and Hon. M. C. Cameron, Q. C., and Mr. G. T. Smith defended the prisoners. After a patient hearing of the case the jury found both men guilty of murder, and they were sentenced to be hanged on the 14th June. Thos. Burk seemed at first little affected by the verdict; but when the solemn sentence of death was pronounced, his eyes betrayed emotion. MacPherson nervously twitched his moustache and leaned against the side of the dock, while the sentence was being passed on his companion; but when his own sentence was passed, he turned deadly pale. The result of the trial has occasioned much surprise in the neighborhood.

It is said that when Mr. Wm. McDougall was allowed to be elected for the ultra Tory constituency of South Simcoe, it was expressly stipulated that he should seek a seat elsewhere in the general elections. The search for a seat seems to be a discouraging one, as the only offer he has had so far, has been the rather unhandsome one from Lennox.

The Secret Correspondence.

A young lady newly married, being obliged to show her husband all the letters she wrote, sent the following to an intimate friend. After reading, turn back and read each alternate line as quoted.

"I cannot be satisfied, my dearest friend,
"blest as I am in the matrimonial state,
"unless I pour into your friendly bosom,
"which has ever been in unison with mine,
"the various sensations which now swell
"with the liveliest emotions of pleasure
"my almost bursting heart. I tell you my dear "husband is the most amiable of men.
"I have now been married seven weeks, and "have never found the least reason to "repent the day that joined us. My husband is "in person and manner far from resembling
"ugly, cross, old, disagreeable and jealous
"monsters, who think by confining to secure
"A wife—it is his maxim to treat as a
"bosom friend, and not as a
"plaything or menial slave. the woman
"of his choice. Neither party
"he says should always obey implicitly
"but each yield to the other by turns.
"An ancient maiden aunt, near seventy,
"a cheerful, venerable and pleasant lady,
"lives in the house with us. She is the delight of both young and old; she is civil to all the neighbours round,
"generous and charitable to all the poor.
"I am sure my husband likes nothing more "than he does me. He flatters me more "than the glass, and his intoxication
"(for so I must call the excess of his love)
"often makes me blush for the unworthiness
"of its object, and wish I was more deserving "of the man whose name I bear. To "say all in one word, and to
"crown the whole, my former lover
"is now my indulgent husband; my fondness
"is returned, and I might have had "a prince without the felicity I find in "him. Adieu. May you be as blest as I am unable to wish that I could be more "happy.

ELORA.—The May cattle fair was largely attended. The Express says that sales were slow on account of low prices, and many were as unwilling to part with stock at quotations that they drove their animals home again.——The following officers of the Athletic base ball club have been elected:—President, Andrew Smart; Vice-President, Duncan Kay; Sec-Treas., W. H. Gordon; Committee of Management, Wm. Hill, C. E. Perry, Edward Leech, and James Foote.——The Queen's birthday will be celebrated by the villagers.——The assessment of the village is $351,460, and the population 1,490.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.—The International Sunday School Convention, held in Atlanta, Georgia, was a most important gathering. There were present over four hundred delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada, and representing all Protestant denominations. The reports showed that in the two countries mentioned there are 87,976 Sabbath schools, 876,104 teachers, 9,763,628 scholars. There had been received from the Sabbath School in the various Churches during the past year 97,146 persons.

FERGUS.—Patrick Drake, of Arthur, who was so seriously injured a short time ago by being thrown out of his waggon in the village has since died.——The literary and debating society is in a flourishing condition. At the last meeting the President, Mr. Geo. A. Reid, was presented with an address and a neat dressing case.——Miss Piper has been presented with a handsome Bible, as a memento of esteem of the officers and teachers of the Methodist Sabbath School.——On the 25th ult., as Mr. Lynes was driving home his waggon struck a stump which the exceeding darkness rendered it impossible to see, and he was thrown out, striking his head against a sharp point of a log. A wound of some seven inches long, laying bare the skull, was the result. He is recovering.——Mr. John Mundell has moved his furniture business from Elora to Fergus.——Mr. John Black has shipped in charge of his brother, Capt. Robt. Black, 180 fat cattle and 240 sheep for Liverpool.——The concert under the auspices of the Fergus Brass Band on Friday evening was well attended. The proceeds amounted to $70.

GALT.—Henderson Dixon has retired from the Commercial Hotel and has gone into the soap and candle business. Wm. Barnhardt will run the hotel.——A. H. Peatman has left the Queen's hotel, and hereafter it will be managed by Charles Lowell.——The following officers of the Albert Rifle Association have been appointed for the ensuing year: President, Lieut.-Col. Peck; Vice-President, Mr. F. G. Allenby; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. J. W. Edmand. Managing Committee, Messrs. J. Benwell, Capt. Sharp and H. J. Jaffray. It was carried that the club should affiliate with both the Dominion and Ontario Associations.——The transfer of the Methodist Church property has now become an accomplished fact. $1,000 is to be paid down, the balance to remain over till 1879.

ATTEMPTED INCENDIARISM.—The Galt Reporter says that on Wednesday of last week, Mr. Andrew Macgregor, living on the townline between North Dumfries and Puslinch, on going to his barn was surprised to find that an attempt had been made to set fire to it, a lot of burnt matches being found underneath a quantity of splintered boards, etc. No clue has been obtained of the perpetrator of the act. Mr. Macgregor offers $20 reward for his conviction.

THE regular Sunday gospel temperance meeting of the G. C. T. C. will be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms every Sunday at four p.m. Short addresses will be delivered, interspersed with good music. All are cordially invited. C. Raymond, President; J. T. Mitchell, Secretary.

One of the results of the work of Moody and Sankey in Liverpool was the establishment of the "British Workman Public House Company, Limited," with the capital of £20,000 in £1 shares. The first shop for the sale of coffee and cocoa was opened in October, 1875, and now there are thirty houses in operation, some of which are large enough to accommodate eight hundred people.

Mr. John Lovel, of Montreal, purposes publishing a work under the title, Administration of Lord Dufferin, now in course of preparation by William Leggo, Barrister, of Ottawa. It will be a full account of the public life in Canada of His Excellency, during the past six years, and will contain in extenso, his great speech. It will be published immediately after His Excellency's departure from Canada, in September next.

The Drayton New Era gives the following fishy story: On the 24th ult., Providence favored Mr. Peter Robb, of the 8th con., Maryborough, with a shower of fish of the speckled trout order. The descent occurred during the storm that passed over this section on that day. In Mr. Robb's absence the hired man thought it a pity that good food should be wasted, so he set to work and cooked thirteen of the fish, and partook of a hearty meal, preserving only the heads for Mr. R.'s inspection.

BERLIN assessment amounts to $705,435, and the population 3,893. The village of Arthur assessment amounts to $256,155, and population 1,198.

NEW lighthouses will be built this summer at Kincardine and Meaford.

Daily Mercury.

SATURDAY EVEN'G, MAY 4, 1878.

The Eramosa Fizzle.

Pursuant to a large poster circulated throughout the Township of Eramosa, a number of the electors met at Ussherwood's Hotel, on Thursday evening, to hear and discuss the "National Policy." The chairman, Mr. J. Tovell, with that zeal which usually characterizes newly-made converts, endeavored not only to carry out the duties of his position, but tried to make League speeches, and to dictate to the meeting in the most arbitrary manner as well. The policy pursued by these gentlemen is telling severely against themselves, and a few more specimens of Thursday night's proceedings, will form the most convincing argument against their protective fallacies. The meeting, we are informed on the best authority, was orderly and attentive, yet the chairman took upon himself the duty of telling the people that he was ashamed of their conduct, and remarked, in an excited manner, that the electors of Eramosa then present did not know how to behave themselves! Afraid to allow Mr. Massie the privilege of exposing the ridiculous theories of the League, and of replying to the misrepresentations of Mr. Loghrin, the chairman abruptly declared the meeting closed, and with the usual liberality of proselytes, shut off all further discussion. We can assure our opponents that the people of this or any other county will not be ready to adopt a policy which its advocates are afraid or ashamed to throw open to fair criticism or allow to be tested by the criterion of public discussion.

[Since the above was written Mr. Riddell has complained to us that in our report of the meeting yesterday Mr. Tovell was treated unfairly. Mr. R. states that at the commencement of the meeting it was arranged that the speaking should be confined to two hours, after which business was to be transacted. That, he states, is the reason why Mr. Tovell would not allow Mr. Massie to speak.]

The Quebec Elections.

Some of the Conservative papers are figuring out that there will be five of a majority against Mr. Joly. The Leader does not think so, and it is candid enough to so express itself. It says:—"Our experience tends to prove that the Independents will go with the Government as a general rule. In such a case Mr. Joly will have a clear majority of at least 5, and in all probability will be able to work with it, as the promises usual on such occasions of giving him a fair trial and not embarrassing him by factious opposition have been given. Being in possession is also a great point in his favour, and will bring over to his side many who are at present only lukewarm adherents of the party they profess to serve. The new Premier has also the added prestige of having wiped out the formidable majority which was against him when he went to the country, and this of itself is no small support to him and his. Undeniably, therefore, he can lay claim to scoring a victory. Its extent we do not quite know, and, therefore, withhold any comments for the present."

This is plain talk, and much more honest than the vapourings of some of the Conservative organs, which work out their majority by claiming all the Independents and one or two constituencies that are accredited having returned Liberals. As an instance of this Mr Bertrand, who has been elected for Rouville, is claimed by the Conservatives, while it is understood by a letter received from him at Ottawa, that he will support the Joly Ministry. The friends of the old government cannot get over the fact that a complete revulsion has taken place in the sister Province, and this is what troubles them. Of the five members in that Government two were in the Legislative Council and five in the Assembly. Of these five three were promptly rejected, viz., Messrs. Angers, Baker, and Garneau, while the other two were re-elected by greatly reduced majorities. Truly the reaction against Tory rule in Quebec is complete and emphatic.

THE Supplementary Estimates were brought down on Friday. They foot up to $848,290.

IT is said that Lieut.-Governor Tilley, whose term of office expires in November next, contemplates resigning in order to run for the Commons, but postponed doing so until after the Quebec elections. Perhaps he will now change his mind.

IT is stated that the Bartlett cotton mills, Massachusetts, suspended half their works this week and discharged 130 hands. In Canada the cotton mills are all busy. The cause of this distressing state of affairs in Canada is that we have not the Yankee tariff.

SAYS the Stratford Beacon:—It is a good thing for Sir John A. Macdonald that he got that suit of clothes in Galt before the House met. Last week he voted that a duty of 75 cents be put upon coal, and in this way showed how much he cared for the welfare of the workingmen and manufacturers. As every one knows, coal is universally used by the manufacturers of Ontario, and a rise of 75 cents per ton would be a serious matter to them at the present time. It would also be a serious matter to laboring men who have enough to do now in providing themselves with fuel. But what cares the "Chieftain?" He wished if possible to catch a few Nova Scotia votes, and the workingmen's interests as well as the manufacturers' interests were pushed into the background. Sir John is as great a humbug as ever sat in a legislative body. The Yankee who invented basswood hams and wooden nutmegs was not a circumstance to him.

Was the Battle of Waterloo Won Before Blucher Came Up?

How often has this question been asked and repeated, and it has been as often answered in the affirmative as negative. To call up some of our own historians to decide this question might not meet with favor in certain quarters, therefore, I propose to give Mr. Headley's sketch of the great battle, a historian who is very hostile in his criticism on Wellington and the British army, and I think you will come to the conclusion, after reading it, that Waterloo was won before the Prussians took any material part in it.

"From eleven in the morning till four in the afternoon the battle had raged, while victory perched on neither standard. The heavy French cavalry had charged the English squares in vain. Jerome Bonaparte had fourteen hundred men around Hougermont. The centre of the English lines had not yielded an inch, yet, exhausted and worn, they stood less firmly in their places. The old guard had remained passive spectators of the scene during the whole day, being reserved for the last moment to complete the victory. At this juncture the head of the Prussian columns appeared on the field. Fifty thousand fresh troops added to the English army would make the odds too great. Instead of retiring till Grouchy could come up and restore the balance, Bonaparte took the rash and desperate resolution of bringing his entire reserve into the field, and with one awful charge, break the British centre, and prevent the threatened junction of the two armies. For this purpose he called up the old guard, and placing himself at their head, marched down the slope, and halting in a hollow, addressed them in his fiery, vehement manner. He told them everything rested on their valor. They answered with the shout "Vive l'Empereur," that was heard all along the British lines. He then placed them under Ney, who ordered the charge. Bonaparte has been blamed for not heading this charge himself, but he knew he could not carry that gaurd so far, nor hold them so long before the artillery as Ney. The moral power Ney carried with him, from the reputation he had gained of being the "bravest of the brave," was worth a whole battalion. Whenever a column saw him at their head they knew that it was to be victory or annihilation. Napoleon watched with intense anxiety the advance of that mighty column, but what pen can describe his feelings when the smoke of battle was lifted over his fugitive army, and the despairing shriek rang out on every side, "La garde recule," "La garde recule." Ney felt the immense responsibility resting upon him. He felt the pressure of an empire upon his brave heart, and resolved not to prove unworthy of the great trust committed to his care. Nothing could be more imposing than the movement of that grand column to the assault. The guard had never yet recoiled before any human foe, and the allied forces beheld with awe its firm and terrible advance to the final charge. For a moment the batteries stopped playing, and the firing ceased along the British lines. Without the beating of a drum or the blast of a bugle, to cheer their steady courage, they moved in dread silence over the plain. The next moment the artillery opened, and the head of that gallant column seemed to sink into the earth. Rank after rank went down, yet they neither stopped nor faltered. Dissolving squadrons and whole columns disappearing one after another in the destructive fire, affected not their steady courage. The column closed up as before, and each treading over his fallen comrade, pressed firmly on. The horse which Ney rode fell under him, and he had scarcely mounted another before it also sank to the earth. Again and again did that unflinching man feel his steed sink down, till five had been shot under him. Then, with his uniform riddled with bullets, and his face singed and blackened with powder, he marched on foot with drawn sword at the head of his column. In vain did the artillery hurl its storm of fire and lead into that living mass. Up to the very muzzles they pressed, and driving the artillerymen from their own pieces, pushing on through British lines. But just as the victory seemed won, a file of soldiers who had lain flat on the ground behind a low ridge of earth, suddenly rose and poured a volley in their very faces. Another and another followed, till one broad sheet of flame rolled on their bosoms and in such a fierce and unexpected blow that they staggered back before it. Before the guard had time to rally again and advance, a heavy column of infantry fell on its left flank in close and deadly volleys, causing it in its unsettled state to swerve to the right. At that instant a whole brigade of cavalry thundered on the right flank, and penetrated where cavalry had never gone before. That intrepid guard could have bourne up against the unexpected fire from soldiers they did not see, and would also have rolled back the infantry that had boldly charged its left flank, but the cavalry finished the disorder into which they had been momentarily thrown and broke the shaken ranks before they had time to reform, and the eagles of that hitherto invincible guard were pushed backward down the slope. Still these veterans refused to fly; rallying from their disorder they formed into two immense squares of eight battalions and turned fiercely on the enemy, and nobly strove to stem the reversed tide of battle. For a long time they stood and let the cannon balls plough through their ranks, disdaining to turn their back to the foe. Michel, at the head of these brave battalions, fought like a lion. To every command of the enemy to surrender he replied, "The Guard dies, it never surrenders," and with his last breath bequeathing this glorious motto to the guard, he fell a witness to its truth. Death traversed those eight battalions with such a rapid footstep that they soon dwindled to two, which turned in hopeless daring on the overwhelming numbers that pressed their retiring footsteps. Last of all but a single battalion, the débris of the column of granite at Marengo was left. Into this Napoleon flung himself. Cambronne, its brave commander, saw with terror the Emperor in its frail keeping. He was not struggling for victory, he was intent only on showing how the guard should die. Approaching the Emperor he cried out, "Retire, do you not see death has no need of you," and closing mournfully yet sternly round their expiring eagles, those brave hearts bade Napoleon an eternal adieu, and flinging themselves on the enemy, were soon piled with the dead at their feet."

The fearful drama closed. The star of Napoleon sank forever. With the remnant of his army he fled to Paris, hotly pursued by the allied armies. It is evident from Mr. Headley's description of the battle that Waterloo was won without any material aid from the Prussians. It was before the Prussians had time to get into position that the Imperial Guard were hurled against the British centre, and it alone resisted the attack and defeated those hitherto invincible heroes of the French army. Then on what authority do men base the opinion that but for the Prussians Wellington would have been defeated. They have no authority whatever for saying so.

When Wellington selected Waterloo as the battle ground for his great fight he knew what he was doing. The position was carefully chosen, and he waited for the onslaught of the French army. But one spirit animated the British commander and his troops on that great day—to conquer or die. As rank after rank of the English army were cut down by the furious attacks of the enemy Wellington had but one command to give to his officers, "Stand firm," and no troops ever responded more bravely to that advice. Some people would have us believe that the British army is less brave to-day than it was in the victorious days of yore. God forbid that its prowess may again be put to test, but if it is it will be seen that there are as brave hearts to-day in the British army as every pulsated on the plains of Waterloo. Give our forces a commander in whom they have confidence and the old flag, which has waved victorious over a hundred battle fields, shall again be seen high above the smoke and storm of battle, pressing onward to victory. If the present difficulty between England and Russia is to be decided by the sword there need be no fear about the final issue. The star of Russia will once more set in darkness, more terrible than that which came down upon her in 1854. The world never saw England so strong as she is to-day. Her battles are our battles, and when the time for action comes our own brave boys will nobly respond to the battle call of the dear old land, and help to win for her fresh laurels.

H. HARRIS.

SAYS the Brockville Recorder:—Mr. W. H. Fraser is flooding the country with appeals to the manufacturers to contribute $20,000 to be used by the National League to forward the interest of Protection. The fact is the money is wanted to assist in electing supporters for Sir John. It remains to be seen whether the manufacturers, who are represented by the Mail to be on the verge of bankruptcy, desire to throw away a cool $20,000 upon Mr. Fraser and other paid agents, including dilapidated organs of the Conservative type.

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

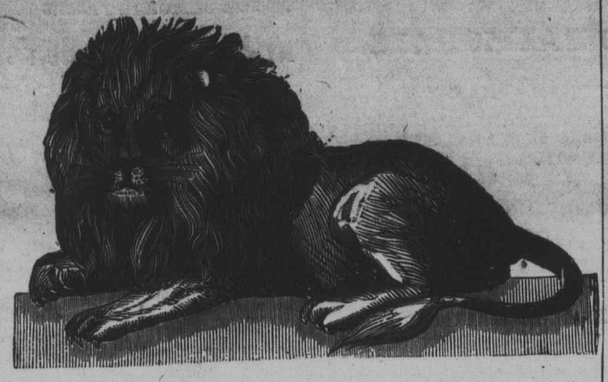
THE GAUGER ON THE SEARCH—HE ENCOUNTERS AN OLD ACQUAINTANCE, AND MAKES AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

On the afternoon of that same bright sultry July day on which Allan McPherson arrived at Mount Cairn, Malcolm Gillespie and several of his men were traversing the almost trackless paths and exploring the dark unsunned recesses of a pine forest situated near the western boundary of the extensive district over which he had official charge. It was a wild, savage, thinly-populated region, not very far from the fastnesses which surround the sources of the Dee; and it was seldom that an excise officer had penetrated so far within the glens and gorges of the almost inaccessible mountains which cluster there in huge frowning masses—where the red deer roamed unmolested, and none but hardy Highland feet pressed the heather or scaled the thunder-riven cliffs.

But Gillespie was sure that among these Highland solitudes many smuggling operations were carried on, and in pursuance of his indomitable resolution to put down and root out the illegal traffic he had organised an expedition with the greater part of his force to make a thorough search for sma' stills, or, better still, try to discover the headquarters of that great organization whoes doings had so galled and mortified him of late, setting at defiance all his efforts to capture their convoys, and transporting such quantities of stuff to the large towns and the coast that reflections had begun to be cast on his activity by his superiors. This last circumstance was what Gillespie could not brook, for his ambition had ever been to distinguish himself beyond all his contemporaries, and secure advancement by his brilliant exploits.

In reality he had accomplished this, for no exciseman in the country had been so energetic, daring, and successful. Scarcely a week elapsed during which he was not able to report an encounter or a seizure, and his name had become a terror over a wide stretch of territory around Skene to what might have been termed the small fry of contrabandists—those who pursued the traffic individually, or in bands of two or three. The operations of such he had spoiled to a great extent, and had inspired fear and bitter hatred in the minds of those whom he had surprised and ruined. Vows of fierce vengeance had been made against him in many quarters, and unquestionably he was exposed to great personal danger, but for this he cared little. A braver exciseman than Malcolm Gillespie never scoured the wilds. He went out always well armed, and no consideration of peril to himself or his men could deter him from making his way into any place where from private information or otherwise, he had a suspicion of smuggling being practised. Through the numerous spies which he kept in his pay he was constantly in the receipt of such intelligence as enabled him to swoop down on many a cottage and pounce on many a secret enclosure, spreading consternation and rage by his presence, for utter ruin generally followed on his visits.

Still, these successes, though many in number, were small in the aggregate when set against the operations which were being successfully conducted on a large scale, and, while they served to sustain Gillespie's reputation, they could not cover his failure to discover and prevent the extensive transactions which from time to time came to the ears of the authorities. The gauger had reason to believe that his non-success in this particular was a bar to his promotion; and, as a more elevated position was every day becoming of more vital importance to him, he became desperately resolved to ferret out and destroy the organisation which had so baffled and eluded him. For this purpose he collected the strongest of his men and came further west than he had done before. It was somewhere among these stern solitudes the headquarters of the gang was to be found, and he feverishly hoped to hunt it out ere he went back to Skene.



Had Gillespie been much given to consult the safety either of himself or his men, he would have kept his force completely together; but as this was to lessen very considerably the chance of success he dispersed his men in different directions, appointing an area of search for each, and ordering a private signal to be sounded when any one needed help, settling also a place of general rendezvous to which all were to repair when their area of search was exhausted.

With his characteristic scorn of danger, the gauger selected the wildest direction for himself, and after despatching his followers on their different routes, he plunged alone into the darkness and gloom of that extensive pine forest, which at the beginning of the chapter we described him as traversing. Furnished with a small stock of provisions, with a pocket compass, a powerful field-glass, and a brace of pistols, he ventured boldly into the unknown depths of the dense wood, and was soon not only out of sight, but far from all his followers, riding where he could, and leading his horse by the bridle when the way was too steep or tangled to allow him to keep the saddle, his keen eye being cast in every direction with such a scrutinising countenance, that nothing of the smallest importance would escape his observation.

It is not quite a year since we first made the acquaintance of Malcolm Gillespie, but what a change had come upon him during that time. It seemed as if ten years had come and left their impress on him, instead of as many months. It may be remembered that our first description of him pictured a strong, straight, finely-knit man with a fresh ruddy face, full, frank, manly bearing, comely features, and a free, quick activity of motion. Now a great alteration has come upon him. He is haggard and anxious looking. Deep lines have traced themselves on his brow; his hair has begun to be tinged with grey; a shadow lies on his once frank and open countenance; the ease and freedom of his hearing has to a great extent departed; and though he looks physically as strong-chested and active-limbed as ever, he wants the natural spring and ardor of that innocent and hopeful heart which he possessed one year ago.

And no wonder; for what a weight of care, of anxiety, of secret bitter thought has come to prey upon him since then! We speak not of the remorse with which, under a strong temptation, he had burdened himself. He had done a great deal to free himself from that; and had this been the only cause he had for mental anxiety his eye would have been lighter and his face a great deal less marked with care.

But within the past three or four months his position had driven him deeper and deeper into difficulty and danger. That first act of forgery, which Skeat had persuaded him to commit, had been followed by others; and the fatal facility with which he was able to execute them, had induced him to go on concocting bill after bill with Skeat's assistance, till he had floated nearly a score of these forged documents. In fact, the course once entered, he was forced to go forward; for as the bills became due, he could meet them only by manufacturing others. This he did, each time with less and less reluctance, though he knew that any one of those acts was a capital offence. What of that? He must go on and go on—his very life required it; for to stop now was to bring his own detection. Thus every new month he lived was weaving the meshes of destruction thicker and thicker around him, and rendering extraction more and more difficult.

The New Export Trade.

(From the Montreal Star.)

We are in receipt of a letter from a correspondent in Manchester, England, in which we are informed that a small consignment of American beef had been received there for sale, and that its condition and quality had given very great satisfaction to those who had bought it for consumption. Our correspondent further says that people on this side of the Atlantic, who are not intimately acquainted with the condition of affairs in England, can hardly form a proper conception of the great demand there would be for beef and mutton there at moderate prices. For several years past, ever since the rinderpest swept through the herds of Great Britain, and struck down thousands of head, the cattle of the country seem to have been peculiarly liable to almost every epidemic disease and constantly subject to the inspection of Government officers. Disease and the wholesale slaughter of beasts to prevent the spread of infections, have of course thinned out the herds very considerably, and robbed the markets of a large portion of its supply of meat. For several years it was impossible to obtain beef in England at a less price than from twenty-five to thirty cents per pound, and the prime cuts of prime beef were sold as high as sixty cents per pound—mutton at the same time being sold at from twenty to twenty-five cents. When the deficiency was first felt there was of course great anxiety felt to make up the loss from other sources. For a time great efforts were made to supply the markets with Australian mutton, put up in tins, like lobsters or salmon, but the people never took kindly to the new article of food. It was supposed that a prejudiced appetite stood in the way, and that necessity might in time educate it so as to reconcile it to the strong flavored mutton of the antipodes. But, although the tinned article could be sold at a much less price than the home-fed article—a consideration, no doubt, for the workingman—and although the people did all they could to like it and acquire a taste for it, the scheme of supplying England with fresh meat from Australia has utterly failed. The continental sources of supply have no doubt had great demands made upon them, but to these even, which are in some respects the most available, they are very serious drawbacks. There are reasons for believing that the continental herds are the hotbeds of various diseases, and that from the importation of cattle from them the rinderpest and other diseases have spread among the herds in England. This has necessitated the establishment of a cattle quarantine, and the inspection of all animals imported into England from continental countries. The arrangements are no doubt calculated to prevent much mischief from the spread of disease, but, notwithstanding all the precautions that are taken, the seeds of infection are carried into the country by the imported stock. These well-known facts show how uncertain, and possibly dangerous to the public health, are the continental supplies; and that the public mind has good reason for grave apprehension. Although American and Canadian producers are remote from the English markets, it would seem as if they were now in a favorable position to command the best market. The cattle on this continent have been remarkably free from epidemic disease, and in that respect the beef which they yield is deserving of more confidence from the consumers in England. The improvement of stock, careful management and good feeding have at last given the stock of this country a good standing, and Canadian fed beef is now worthy a place alongside the best roast beef of "Old England." Magnificent steamers, short sea passages, refrigerating arrangements and other conveniences now make it possible to supply the English market with fresh and sweet meat, fit for the table of the Prince or the humble board of the peasant. Indeed the prospect is that we have here opening to us a trade more valuable even than we have in the various grains. It has frequently been said that the most profitable kind of farming is that which turns everything possible into live stock, and that on the contrary the most extravagant and ruinous kind of farming is that which leads a man to grow grain. If this be so, we can understand how this exportation of cattle and meats to England may lead to a kind of farming which will enrich the soil, increase the substance of the farmer, and so add to the general wealth of the country. Our American neighbors have already gone into the trade with great vigor, and the journals point to the present exports as an augury of a trade that will exceed the general expectations of the country. The race is open to Canadians as well as Americans, and we may hope that the friendly rivalry between the two countries will not leave Canada behind.

Pastor, is it Right?

BY MISS LIBBIE CILLEY.

Can you believe it right to use fermented wine at communion? This is a summary of what a F. Baptist pastor told me a few days ago. He said: "My grandfather was a drunkard, and all his love for drink, his overpowering appetite for rum, I have inherited. I have never indulged it, knowing that my only salvation was total abstinence. Before I was converted I kept away from temptation, never going, when possible to avoid it, where men drank. In the army my warfare was with the appetite, but God kept me. He called me to preach, and for years I have given all my time to His service. And I tell you truly, I have never anywhere been so strongly tempted to drink, and so nearly lost, as in the pulpit, administering the communion. I have poured the wine, strong, sparkling wine, given it to the deacons, and tasted it, when it set my blood on fire and made me nearly insane for more. And after my people had sung a hymn and gone out, I have rushed from the church, not daring to stop lest that maddening thirst would conquer, and I should drain the wine-cups dry. Then would follow hours of agony, then came the victory till the next communion, when the battle must be fought again. I have seen deacons and church members who had been reclaimed from whiskey and converted to temperance when converted to God, I have seen them gradually fall and, God forgive us! I believe the communion wine was the first downward step. God has kept me so far, but I tell you to day, I believe it is wrong to so tempt others, to tempt myself, and in the future, I will not, I can not do it. I must refuse, utterly refuse, to administer fermented wine at communion."

Brother pastor, you may not know the temptations this man has felt. God crowns him hero of many a hard-fought battle. But your church may contain just such men. They may and they may not have given themselves this appetite for strong drink. We read, "for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me," etc. Jesus taught us to pray, "Lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil."

Again, pastors, can you believe it right to use fermented wine at communion?—Morning Star.

STILL THEY COME.—We notice the railway companies delivering large quantities of new goods at the Lion this morning. EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London. NOTICE.

LONDON AND LANCASHIRE

LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY

LONDON, ENGLAND.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA—42 St. John Street, Montreal.

The Directors beg to announce that they have appointed

MR. GEO. RENNIE, General Agent

of the above Company, for Guelph and district.

(Signed) WM. ROBERTSON, Manager for Canada.

THE LONDON AND LANCASHIRE Life Assurance Company having Canadianized its business, now offers all the advantages of a home institution, with the security of a British office. The increase in new Canadian business during the year 1877, being over 100 per cent over that of 1876, is ample evidence of the favour with which this arrangement has been received by the public. Government Deposit $50,000, for the exclusive benefit of Canadian policy holders, in addition to which the whole of the earnings of the branch are invested in this country.

(Signed) GEO. RENNIE, WM. ALLAN General Agent, Guelph. Local Agent. a16d2w eod

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

The New Commander.

Dissatisfaction in the Russian Army.

GORTSCHAKOFF'S CONDITION.

LONDON, May 6.—A San Stefano despatch says the appointment of Todleben to the command of the army in place of the Grand Duke Nicholas, has created considerable dissatisfaction in the army, and among the Russian officers. General Gourko has started for St. Petersburg, disgusted with the appointment. Todleben paid a visit to Buykdere and examined the coast of the Bosphorus.

The latest and only concession made by Russia offers to somewhat modify the original dimensions of Bulgaria if England will specify her objection to the San Stefano treaty.

A Vienna despatch says the Turks are showing extraordinary activity within the lines of European defences.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 6.—Gortschakoff's condition does not improve; both feet are very much swollen. He is sleepless from pain.

Count Schouvaloff, Russian ambassador to London, is expected to arrive here today.

Peace Negoations Going On.

LONDON, May 6.

In the House of Commons this afternoon Lord Northcote announced active negotiations between Russia and England. A peaceful solution of the existing difficulties were progressing, but he stated that at the present time he could not say anything further about them.

He challenged Mr. Bright to repeat the assertion that Parliament had been deceived by the Government.

Special estimates would be submitted for the Indian troops.

Talk of Another Fenian Raid.

NEW YORK, May 5.—The Herald's Buffalo special says:—Military preparations are being made by the Irish Nationalists there for a proposed Fenian raid on Canada in the event of war between England and Russia. An agent from New York has been there and left important secret orders. A prominent Fenian states there are three Irish companies in Buffalo, well equipped. 1,000 western soldiers are notified so that they can reach Buffalo in six hours, and there are 30,000 more in the country who will rendezvous for a raid in three days after orders are issued. Several applications for commands have been made by veteran officers. It is understood several hundred stands of muskets will be shipped from New York to Buffalo in a few days.

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 5.—The Government has received no official information concerning the prospective Fenian invasion of Canada.

The "National Policy" in Waterloo.

WATERLOO, May 4.—A meeting was held in the Berlin Town Hall on Friday evening under the auspices of the Dominion National League. About two hundred persons were present. Mr. C. Snebing, Deputy-Reeve of Berlin, occupied the chair. Messrs. W. H. Frazer, B. Perine, and A. W. Wright pourtrayed the beauties of protection, and explained how everybody is to be enriched by paying more taxes and supporting the Opposition candidates. Messrs. J. S. Bowman, of Elmira, and Thomas Hilliard, editor of the Chronicle, Waterloo, defended the present policy of the Government, and showed up the fallacies of protection, advocated the right of every man to buy and sell the productions of his labour, and exposed the true inwardness of the so-called no-party national policy. Mr. Krantz, the Opposition candidate for North Waterloo, was present during the evening, but declined to advocate his principles till he gets better posted. The exposure of this latest Tory dodge had a good effect on the meeting, and the national policy people did not venture to divide the house.

HANDSOME HARNESS.—Mr. Jas. Ewing has lately purchased at the Woolwich street harness shop of Messrs. Beattie & Dyson, a set of hack harness which is not only neat and well made in every respect, but is just about the nobbiest set in town. The mountings are all heavy nickle plated, and considerable taste has been displayed in their adjustment. The sewing is particularly neat throughout,—the band sewed portion being quite as even as the portions sewed by machine. Mr. Dyson who manages the Woolwich branch of the establishment is to be congratulated on the perfection attained in this work. The harness is worthy of inspection by those who are judges of such work. In connection with this it might be mentioned that Mr. Ewing has lately purchased a new and very elegant barouche.

REGULAR monthly meeting of St. Patrick's Society to-mrrrow evening, at the Albion Hotel.

TOWN COUNCIL meets this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

A FIGHT occurred under the iron railway bridge on Friday night at a late hour. One young man received a severe bruising.

BASE BALL.—The Cincinnati Club will have to take in over $29,000 this year to pay expenses. It is the most expensive Club in the country.

WHENEVER a man uses the personal pronoun "I" too much, it is always safe to discount his stories about fifty per cent. This applies particularly to balcony speeches.

A FEW evenings age there was a row near a brick house of reputation, near the Great Western Railway track. Stones were thrown promiscuously, and one or two shots were fired. It has been rumoured that one young man received a flesh wound from a bullet.

CANON DIXON gave notice yesterday that the Bishop of Niagara would hold an ordination on the 4th Sunday after Easter—19th of May. There is also to be a Sunday School service on the afternoon of same day, when the Bishop is expected to address the children.

THE ladies connected with St. George's Church are to have a bazaar on account of the Rectory, in the first week in June. Great preparations are being made in the manufacture of articles, chiefly of a useful character, as well as ornamental, and it is anticipated that it will be a great success. We hear that curious articles are being sent all the way from Africa, of Moorish work, to be sold at this bazaar.

WIFE BEATING.—Francis Murphy, surveyor, of Mount Forest, is now in goal here. A few days ago, while on a spree, he shamefully abused his wife. He was brought before a magistrate and bound over to keep the peace, himself in the sum of $800 and two sureties of $400. The sureties could not be found and he is to remain in goal until they are secured.

DAILY MAIL BETWEEN GUELPH AND ERIN.—We are glad to learn that in answer to a numerously signed petition, and through the efforts of Mr. Guthrie, the Postmaster-General has agreed to arrange for a daily mail between Guelph and Erin village, serving Eramosa, Everton, Ospringe and Brisbane offices. This daily mail will be a great convenience to the people of Guelph and Erin, and those in the neighborhood of the post offices named.

WE have received late Australian papers from Mr. R. Ballantyne, who left a short time ago with Mr. J. W. Lyon's party of book agents. Considerable enterprise is manifested by the Sydney Herald in publishing a mammoth supplement, in English and French for circulation in Paris. It contains an interesting sketch of the resources of Australia, its climate, and other information which emigrants would seek for.

A WARNING.—At the Police Court this morning four little boys named James and Benjamin Johnston, and Robert and John Butler, were charged by Mr. T. R. Jenning, with loosening the brake of a car, and allowing it to run off the track. The elder of the four—James Johnston was ordered to be imprisoned for two hours, the other children were considered to be too young in years to be punished. They were let off.

TABLEAUX VIVANTS.—The entertainment to be given in the Town Hall this evening in aid of the funds of the General Hospital it is expected will be one of rare excellence. The living pictures to be produced have been prepared very carefully, and those who are to take part will no doubt do themselves infinite credit. The musical portion of the programme will be equally pleasing. It will be quite sufficient merely to mention their names:—Miss Maggie Barr, of Hamilton; the Misses Foster, Mr. Philp and Mr. Maitland. Doors open at 7:30; to commence at 8 o'clock.

FROM MANITOBA.—Mr. John C. Allan has received a letter from his step-son Edward Winstanley, who went to Manitoba with George Balkwill and his party. It is dated Portage La Prairie, April 21st, the party having arrived there the previous evening. Mr. Winstanley states that the roads were then in a frightful condition on account of the frequent heavy rains. The first day after leaving Winnipeg the party only made four miles, and the second day only seven miles. On the way they stopped at a "hotel," where thirty-seven slept in one room. There were six beds in it, the rest having to sleep on the floor. Another night they stopped at the house of a Mr. Speirs, who some years ago practised as a Veterinary Surgeon in Guelph. After they left his place, the waggons got stuck in the mud, so they hitched the two span of horses to one waggon, leaving the other behind with a lot of their things in charge of Adam Watson and Geo. Hume. The party intended going right on to the Saskatchewan, take up their land and then come back for the other waggon. He speaks highly of the country, of its soil, and says they passed some splendid farms. He states that there is a large quantity of wheat stored in Portage La Prairie, which cannot be got out till the roads improve. House rents are from $6 to $18 a month in Winnipeg. People from Canada are pouring into it by the hundred every week.

A Very Serious Accident.

Mr. Alex. Loghrin has his Jaw Bone Completely Shattered.

A very serious accident happened on Saturday afternoon, about five o'clock to Mr. Alex. Loghrin, of Eramosa, whereby he received such injuries about his head, which if they do not prove fatal, will lay him up for a long time.

Mr. Loghrin had been in town during the day, with a team of horses and a lumber waggon, transacting some business. About half-past four o'clock he started for home. In driving down the hill approaching the Eramosa bridge a clevis of one of the whippletrees came off. This let the neck-yoke out of the tongue and it dropping to the ground the animals started off on a run. Mr. Loghrin evidently miscalculated his strength. He thought he could hold the frantic animals in, and in order to do so doubled the reins around his hands. With the tongue sticking in the ground and bounding out again, and the loose whippletree striking the horse's heels, the animals were too much frightened to pay any attention to strong pulling on the lines. When about the centre of the bridge the tongue of the waggon struck into the timbers of the bridge. This threw Mr. Loghrin out on the heels of the horses, and besides the manner in which he had the lines wound round his hands, held him in such a position that the front wheel of the heavy waggon kept grinding against his jaws, smashing the lower portion completely. He was dragged from the bridge as far as Major Armstrong's house, when the lines became disentangled, and the wheels passed over him.

When a number of parties reached him he was one mass of blood about the head and face, and it was thought he was dead.

Messengers were despatched for physicians, and after the arrival of Drs. Herod and Cowan, the injured man was removed to the General Hospital.

Mr. Loghrin was a man well liked by his acquaintances, and this misfortune that has befallen him will be heard by everyone with feelings of deep sorrow.

During Saturday night he became conscious, and on Sunday was somewhat better.

On Sunday, Messrs. Foster and Campbell, dentists, were called upon to drill holes in the fractured bones of the front of the jaw. This they successfully accomplished and joined the portions with wire. Further operations have been made.

Dr. Aikens, of Toronto, has been sent for by Dr. Herod, and on his arrival a consultation will be held.

Shortly before going to press it is learned that little or no change has taken place in Mr Loghrin's condition.

In connection with this a word might be said in regard to the condition of the road near the Eramosa bridge. Although the above accident was not caused by the road being in a bad state, parties living in the vicinity of the bridge are almost always on the look-out for accidents. In front of Mr. Fairbank's meat market is a hole close to the side walk, at which horses are continually shying, and near the bridge are several planks lying loose, which also causes a nervous horse to shy from one side of the road to the other.

Work has already been finished in certain places in town which could very well have waited until bad places are put into repair.

Incendiarism.

Two Attempts at Arson in the East Ward.

This (Monday) morning, about three o'clock, attempts were made by some parties to burn down two dwellings—one a small frame building on Toronto street occupied by the families of James Thompson and Moses Osborn, and the other a building ready for plastering on the outside, on Bridge street, occupied by Garrison B. Stewart. The occupants of both houses are colored people.

Both buildings were fired in the same manner. Coal oil was thrown against them and then ignited. In the house in which Thompson and Osborn were living, there were ten people asleep when the fiends started the blaze. About three o'clock, Osborn, who slept up in the attic heard a crackling noise as though wood was burning. He called out to Thompson, but getting no answer jumped up, aroused the household, and by dint of hard work succeeded in extinguishing the flames. A few of the neighbors heard the alarm given by Osborn and arrived in time to render some assistance.

Had the fire gained any headway before being discovered there is little doubt but that some of those inside the building would have perished in the flames.

Mr. Wm. Bish was at the fire and after he returned home, he noticed, in looking in the direction of Bridge street, another light. On hurrying to the spot he found that the dwelling house occupied by Garrison B. Stewart was on fire. The fire had been started in the same manner as at the other building—coal oil being thrown against the gable end and then ignited. The baths, which had been placed in position some time ago, ready for the plasterers, afforded excellent fuel and the fire had run up to the roof and burned through to the attic. The flames were not altogether extinguished until a hole had been cut in the roof and water poured through.

The building was only saved by the most persistent efforts of the neighbours, who had gathered around the fire.

Mr. Osborn, who was living with the Thompson family, was burned out in the same neighborhood a short time ago by some incendiary, and now another attempt has been made to burn a house in which he has received refuge until he can again start housekeeping. This and the firing of Stewart's place indicates that there are certainly parties in this town who have sunk about as low in crime as it is possible for any human being to sink.

The authorities should make an extra effort to ferret out the guilty parties, and no doubt the punishment would be severe enough to deter others from following in their criminal footsteps.

SPRING ASSIZES.

His Lordship Mr. Justice Patterson, Presiding.

The Wellington Spring Assizes opened at the Court House at three o'clock, in the presence of a large representation of the Bar.

Hon. A. S. Hardy will act as Counsel for the Crown.

The criminal docket only contains one case, that of Queen vs. Wallace. The prisoner is charged with a terrible crime, that of rape on a child under ten years of age. The preliminary examination in the case, as heard at the Police Court, was published a few days ago.

The civil docket is comparatively light, and will be found subjoined.

THE Guelph Rifle Association will commence practice for the season to-morrow Tuesday, at 2:30 p.m.

LACROSSE meeting at Ward's hotel this evening.

AT the entertainment to-night Mrs. Jas. Clark accompanies Mr. Philp in the violin and piano selections.

MR. D. GUTHRIE, M. P., arrived home from Ottawa on Saturday evening, in order to be in attendance at the Spring Assizes which open to-day.

MUSICAL UNION.—The committee and conductors respectfully ask the attendance of all members at the rehearsal to-morrow evening.

DANIEL CONNERR had to answer a charge of disorderly conduct at the Police Court this morning. As it was the first time he had been interviewed by the Magistrate, he was dismissed with a caution.

THE ebony and silver mounted show case in Mr. G. D. Pringle's jewellery store window attracts much attention. It is a very handsome piece of work and is further set off by goods therein being displayed.

GOLDEN WEDDING.—Sunday was the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. James McQuillan, sr., of Guelph, and there was a happy family gathering in honor of the same. They were the first couple married in the old Roman Catholic church in Guelph. Mr. McQuillan's age is 82 years, and his partner's about 73 years. The family circle is almost unbroken, as out of the twelve children born, only one is deceased. Their grandchildren number ten. In commemoration of the event High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Hamel this (Monday) morning. The aged couple still enjoy tolerable good health.

OUR black silks are undoubtedly the cheapest goods ever seen in this town. Every lady should see them.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

The Pacific Railway.

OTTAWA, May 4.

The Premier gave the House a very exhaustive and lucid explanation of the progress of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the policy of the Government with regard to the construction of that great work, especially in respect of the selection of the route through British Columbia and the western terminus of the road. Avoiding as far as possible any reference to the political aspect of the question, he first noticed rapidly the original compact with British Columbia, his own objection to those arrangements, his advocacy on the other hand of the railway as an object in itself desirable, the initial proceedings of the late Government, the failure to commence the work within the time agreed, the impossibility of carrying out the terms of union, the subsequent negotiations with British Columbia, the modified terms, the temporary abandonment of the portion of the railway between Lake Nipissing and Thunder Bay, the efforts of the present Government to devise a practicable scheme, the commencement of the sections which should utilize the existing water communications pending the construction of the whole line from Thunder Bay to the Pacific, the defeat by the Senate of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway project, the steps taken to construct the Georgian Bay branch and to connect with the existing system of railways by subsidizing the Canada Central, and the choice of the Kaministiquia as a terminus. By the end of 1874, he went on to remark, clear proof had been obtained of a favourable route from Thunder Bay to Rat Portage, or Keewatin. The difficulties besetting the undertaking in the Prairie country west of Red River were not great, but the real obstacles began to present themselves when the attempt had to be made to pass the Rocky, the Cariboo, and the cascade ranges of mountains. Some idea of the vastness of the work might be conceived by the enormous labour and cost of the survey, preliminary to any action being taken towards building any portion of the road. In the progress of the surveys no less than forty-seven thousand miles had been traversed by the surveying parties, twelve thousand miles had been actually covered by instrumental survey, or five times the whole length of the line. By the various dangers encountered no less than forty lives had been lost. Some of the operations had been carried on in the midst of winter and under circumstances taxing most severely the zeal and endurance of the officers. The outlay on surveys has been as follows:—1871, $30,148; 1872, $489,428; 1873, $561,813; 1874, $310,224; 1875, $494,529; 1876, $791,121; 1877, $754,624; total, $3,411,887, making the total cost of some $1,300 per mile. Of the total outlay nearly one half had been spent in British Columbia, representing only one-fifth of the entire road. It was not, however, wonderful that this work should have been so protracted when it was recollected that the surveys of the great Indian railway from Bombay to the interior occupied four years in a thickly settled country, while in the case of the Canadian Pacific the country was to a great extent without population, and afforded little produce and next to no supplies. In 1873 Mr. Sandford Fleming had made an estimate of the probable cost of the road as follows:—

Pembina Branch	$1,300,000
Lake Superior to Red River	14,700,000
Red River to Rocky Mountains	20,000,000
Lake Nipissing to Lake Superior Junct	23,000,000
Rocky Mountains to Pacific	35,000,000
Total	$100,000,000

The late Administration had practically settled that the terminus should be at Esquimalt, but that would have entailed the expenditure of a large additional sum. Starting from Thunder Bay, the first objective point was Rat Portage or Keewatin at the crossing of the Lake of the Woods; thence the line ran to Selkirk, on the Red River, 23 miles north of Winnipeg. It then crossed Lake Manitoba and travelled northwest until it reached Northcote, at the northern end of the Duck Mountains. Thence its course was westward to Battleford and Edmonton. A more southerly route from Selkirk had been strongly advocated, but the deviation to avoid the Duck and Riding Mountains and other natural obstacles, the extraordinary width and depth of the valleys of the rivers, and the addition of some twenty or thirty miles to the length of the road, with a corresponding expense had led the Government, supported by the united judgment of Mr. Sandford Fleming and Mr. Marcus Smith, to determine to adhere to the northern line. A more northerly route still had found an advocate in the last-named gentleman. He favored the deviation of the line from Northcote in a northwesterly direction to Lower Slave Lake, and thence by Pine River across to British Columbia. This line, however, had not been surveyed; the information respecting it was of a very superficial character; and it would on Mr. Smith's admission, be fifty-two miles longer than the proposed route, while it was more than probable the large and deep valleys to be crossed would make it nearly 100 miles further. Another fatal objection too was that a new system of surveys would delay the work of construction for at least another two years. So far as the routes selected were concerned, the gradients were very favourable, the heaviest grades on the located portions not exceeding 26.40 to the mile going eastward, or 52.80 going west, the heaviest traffic being of course expected in the former direction. This was the extreme limit of the gradients on the 228 miles of road actually under construction. After discussing the question of gradients and its bearing upon the cost of operating the road, the Premier proceeded to refer to the possible route through British Columbia and their comparative merits. These were, from Yellow Head Pass to Dean Inlet on the Pacific coast of the mainland, and the most northerly of the three, to Waddington Harbour at the head of Bute Inlet, and to Port Moody at Burrard Inlet. The choice lay between the Bute Inlet and Burrard Inlet routes. The advantages in respect of grades are decidedly in favour of the latter. The grades on the latter are usually short and undulating, while on the rival route they are long, and without any rest or level for a considerable distance. The curves were on the aggregate about equal in the two lines. Mr. Marcus Smith had estimated the cost of the respective routes as follows:—Yellow Head Pass to Burrard Inlet at Port Moody, thirty-six and a half millions, or to English Bay, fifteen miles further, $37,100,000; Yellow Head Pass to Bute Inlet, thirty-four millions. Mr. Cambie, who has lately made a final and most careful survey of both routes, is of opinion that the ease with which supplies and material may be got into the Burrard Inlet route will largely reduce the cost. His estimate is, for Bute Inlet, 33 millions; for Burrard Inlet, at Port Moody, 31 millions, or at English Bay 32 millions.

Mr. Mackenzie then discussed at some length the alleged objections to Burrard Inlet on the score of its proximity to the American boundary, and the military reasons which might make it unsafe in case of war. He came to the conclusion that they were not of such a nature as to outweigh the other strong arguments in favor of the Burrard Inlet site. He summed up the various points bearing on the question, and stated that although no decision had formally been arrived at there could be no doubt it would be in favor of Burrard Inlet. The advantages of a Canadian trans-continental line were then shown by comparison between the proposed Canadian Pacific and other routes as follows:—San Francisco to New York—Union Pacific, Michigan Central, and New York Central, 3,363 miles; New Westminister to Montreal, Canadian Pacific and line to Montreal, via Ottawa, 2,730 miles—a difference in favor of the Canadian route of 633 miles. San Francisco to New York, as above, 3,363 miles; New Westminister to Montreal, by Canadian Pacific, St. Lawrence and Ottawa, and New York Central, 3,058 — difference in favor of Canadian route, 305. San Francisco to Montreal—Union Pacific, Michigan Central, Grand Trunk, 3,251; New Westminister to Montreal—Canadian Pacific, Montreal and Ottawa, 2,730—difference in favour of Canadian Pacific, 521. San Francisco to Boston, 3,422; New Westminister to Boston, 3,087—difference in favor of Canadian route, 335. San Francisco to Portland, 3,548; New Westminister to Portland, 3,027—difference in favor of the Canadian route, 521. The hon. gentleman then referred to the construction going on between Thunder Bay and Selkirk. He stated that the cost of the whole extent under contract, 228 miles, would cost some $5,250,000, or $25,000 per mile. The cost of bridging would compare very favorably with the same charge on the Intercolonial line. He paid a very graceful tribute to the services of the engineering staff, and concluded his speech which had been listened to with the deepest attention, by alluding to the influence of this important work upon the development of a national feeling between all sections of the Dominion.

MONDAY EVEN'G, MAY 6, 1878.

The New Issue of American Silver.

Mr. Wm. Weir, of Montreal, who acted as the Government's broker for the absorption of silver some years back, when Sir Francis Hincks effected the removal of the silver nuisance, has written a letter to the Montreal Star on the action of the United States Silver Bill upon the volume of currency in this Dominion. He says it is not necessary to discuss the wisdom of the step taken by our neighbors in returning to the double standard, my object being simply to point out the small probability of American silver coin becoming a nuisance in Canada under the operation of the recent Act remonetizing silver coin in the United States. The new silver dollar will be a legal tender for all debts, public or private vate, including duties on imports, and will, therefore, up to the 1st of January next, be preferable to "greenbacks" or legal tender notes. After that date it will be equal to legal tender notes, and convertible into notes at the option of the holder. For all payments in the United States it will, from the moment it is issued, be equal to gold. Under these circumstances, there can be no possible inducement to bring silver into Canada instead of greenbacks, par ticularly as a much larger discount is generally charged to exchange the silver than the greenback dollar. Indeed, so far from becoming a nuisance in Canada, t will not even become a nuisance in the United States, for no one, except for purposes of hoarding, will withdraw silver coin from the Treasury when the bank and legal tender notes will serve the purpose. The effect of the Silver Bill will not be, as many suppose, to flood the country with silver coin, but to enable the United States Treasury to protect the gold reserve by redeeming in silver. It simply means resumption in silver instead of gold, which will, however, mean the same thing so long as the balance of trade continues in favor of the United States.

The Quebec Legislature has been summoned for the despatch of business on the 4th of June next.

Speculation is still rife as to the time when the general elections will come off. Some say in June, others in November.

In the Supplementary Estimates a vote of $57,000, to cover the expenses of the Halifax Commission, is asked for, and also $12,000 for services rendered by Sir A. T. Galt.

Mr. Mackenzie does not seem to have any fear of the result of the next general elections, for he has renewed the lease of his residence in Ottawa for five years.

Mr. J. J. Macdonald, Government Railway contractor, used all possible influences to defeat Mr. Chauveau, and the priest at Bic stood near the poll and instructed those about to enter to vote against Chauveau. One or two local Government contractors and several of the Quebec Civil Service employees subscribed largely to Mr. Chapleau's fund in the late election.

Mr. W. A. Thompson, on account of ill health, has declined to run again for Welland. The Huron Expositor is well pleased with Dr. Sloan, the Reform nominee for North Huron. It says:—"He is a gentleman who is thoroughly conversant with the politics of the country; he is intelligent and independent and will do his own thinking instead of allowing his political leaders to do it for him." Dr. Sloan will oppose Mr. Farrow. The Orangeville Advertiser characterizes the action of the Conservative Convention of East Grey in dropping the name of Mr. Flesher, the present member, and nominating Dr. Sproule as the candidate as very strange. Poor Flesher, though always faithful to his party, has been thrown overboard.

In the general distribution of medals, if it had been possible for the "International Jury of Award" to have given a medal to the best hotel in Philadelphia, this honor would have been received by the Colonnade, "for all the requisites of a model establishment in every respect."

Pruning at Transplanting.

Upon this subject the Germantown Telegraph correctly says:—"At this planting season it may not be amiss to observe that most trees will be benefited by a little pruning at the time of planting. In saying this we know it is opposed to the teachings and the practice of some excellent fruit-growers who have succeeded very well in transplanting without using a knife on the tree from the first to the last. But an extended observation shows us that in most cases with people this good result would not follow. If roots are always in good condition, or were not allowed to get dry before planting there might be no great benefit in pruning, but it is very rarely the case that this good condition of roots is secured.

"It is sometimes said that the whole mass of wood in the transplanted tree is necessary to furnish the downward sap necessary to form the roots; but those who have carefully watched the operation of root-making have no doubt seen that roots are most rapidly formed while the tree is growing most vigorously, and new leaves and branches are forming. To get a good rapid new growth, therefore, is a means of getting roots, and this rapid growth is encouraged in a strong degree by pruning at transplanting.

"How much should be cut will depend on the amount of roots already existing and the kind of trees to be planted. An apple tree, for instance, seldom requires much, because the roots are naturally fibrous, and in digging up the trees there is always a good proportion of roots to it. The same is true of a dwarf pear, as a general thing; but a standard pear with a few forklike prongs in the place of roots, or an oak with a similar set of hornlike projections in the place of fibrous roots, is always benefited by a considerable quantity of the younger twigs set out."

Destructive Fire in Minto.—On the 30th ult., a fire broke out in the kitchen in rear of Mr. Chas. Smith's store, Lakelet, and had it not been for the fortunate circumstance that Mrs. Smith was awakened by the uneasiness of the baby, the whole family might have perished in the flames. As soon as the fire was discovered, Mr. and Mrs. Smith made their way down stairs; and not a moment too soon, as they were unable to return to save even their clothes, as the wind was blowing a perfect gale at the time. The entire household effects, including clothing, was destroyed; loss about $3,000; insured in the Phœnix for $1,000. The loss will be heavily felt by Mr. Smith, as he is only a new beginner and had most of his worldly effects in the business. The building, which was owned by Mr. John Scott, was valued at $800, and is insured for $400.

The Cimbria.—Minister Thornton had been informed of the Cimbria's departure from Europe, and also of another Russian expedition for the United States from Copenhagen for the purpose of manning Russian cruisers purchased here. The New York Herald's Washington correspondent says the British Legation is fully apprised of the intended despatch of three additional steamships from Revel, Finland, one intended for service in the North Atlantic, which will put in at some northern United States port, while the other two will proceed to Aspinwall. Their men will be sent to San Francisco. Russia is supposed to be making ready to take advantage of the scanty protection of British interests on Canada's shores.

Black Silks.—Every lady in Guelph should make it a point to see the extraordinary sales in black silks we are now offering. A. O. Bucham.

D. I. K. Rine contradicts the story that is going the rounds of the press, to the effect that his private secretary was sent to goal at Cobourg. The person referred to never was in Cobourg.

The Queen's Plate.—The Governor-General has selected London as the place where the Queen's plate will be run for this year.

Our immense stock of handsome black silks are all good wearing makes, and warranted not to cut. No lady should buy until our stock has been examined. A. O. Bucham.

A sensation was caused in St. John, N.B., on Saturday by the horsewhipping of John Bowes by H. H. Bowie. Bowes is one of the publishers of Penny Dip, a weekly sheet, which had an article reflecting on Bowie. The latter, who is a contractor from Montreal, gave Bowes a severe beating.

The Police Committee of Montreal have decided to have four vans made, with powerful reflector lights, manned by thirteen policemen each, to patrol the streets at night.

Hobart Pasha dined with the Queen at Windsor Castle on Saturday.

Preparations are being made for a grand military celebration at Montreal, on the coming 24th of May. Among the regiments from other parts of the country will be the "Queen's Own," from Toronto, the "Governor-General's Guards," from Ottawa, the Cavalry Field Battery, and 8th Battalion from Quebec.

A porpoise was seen in the St. Lawrence opposite the city, on Saturday, being the first noticed near Montreal for twenty-five years.

Still They Come.—We notice the railway companies delivering large quantities of new goods at the Lion this morning. These we are told are some of the bargains secured by Mr. Williamson at the trade sales in Montreal a few days ago—when goods were said to have been sold lower than ever. Special attractions in dress goods.

Balky Horses.—Every balky horse, unless it inherits the disease is a living witness against some owner or driver. The difficulty is not a physical but a moral one, and in most cases is acquired by the animals being overloaded. A horse generally has a pretty definite idea of how much it ought to draw, and if this amount is exceeded, balking is the very natural result. It is far more easy to prevent than to cure the habit of balking when once acquired no harsh treatment will ever break it Firmness and kindness alone will avail anything. Never apply a whip to a horse when it is balking, nor after it starts. Success in training and governing animals lies in one's ability to make them uncomfortable when disobedient and comfortable when they obey. And yet how often do we see foolish drivers, when a horse has staked and refused to start for a while, when it does start make him uncomfortable by putting on the whip while it is doing what they want it to do. It is whipped when it stands and whipped when it goes. This foolish practice has grown from the foolish idea that punishment must be given for what has been done, and the horse has no opportunity to learn that it is better for it to obey than not to obey, consequently it cannot learn to obey.—Buffalo Commercial.

Spring Hardware.—Since the opening of our new place of business we have done a good trade, and our old friends are beginning to find us out. A full stock of hardware in store.—John Horsman.

Our black silks for value, shade and good wear are not equalled in the trade Every lady should see them before buying. A. O. Bucham.

Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia cures Neuralgia, Face Ache, Rheumatism, Gout, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Erysipelas, Bruises and Wounds of every nature in man or animal. The remarkable cures this remedy has effected classes it as one of the most important and valuable remedies ever discovered for the cure and relief of pain.

From over exertion I contracted a pain across my loins. My sufferings were intense. One bottle of Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia cured me.

IMPORTANT QUESTIONS.

Who can sell the cheapest, those who pay thousands of dollars rent, or those who pay no rent? Those who have to support three or four partners and families, or those who have only one family to support? Those who lost thousands of dollars—by dealers in Toronto and other places—or those who did not lose one cent? Those who have had forty years' experience, or those who served no apprenticeship to the business they profess to follow? Please consider these questions before it is too late.

The Gauger of Skene.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

THE GAUGER ON THE SEARCH—HE ENCOUNTERS AN OLD ACQUAINTANCE, AND MAKES AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

What a horrible experience was his. It was like a man who was aware that a mine was beneath his feet, almost certain to be sprung one day, and not knowing but he might find it explode at any moment. Then what were the consequences that would ensue? Social and official ruin; but that was not all. He stood exposed to the severest penalty the law could inflict—the scaffold itself rose before him.

He was not blind to the fearful risk which every day he ran, nor to the fact that time was sweeping him forward to a catastrophe, unless he could find money to to pay off the forged bills as they fell due, without forging others to retire them. And how on earth was such money to be come by? He had long since exhausted his credit. He had kept on the safer path of borrowing until he was refused and repulsed everywhere, and it was impossible to obtain over ten pounds in this way, far less the large sum which was now necessary to free him from the vital danger within which he stood.

He was too magnanimous to reproach Edward Skeat as the real author of his now deplorable situation; yet he bitterly repented having yielded to his advice in regard to the first spurious bill, since the accumulation of the threatened avalanche had grown out of that. Ned had counselled the deed out of a sincere desire to benefit him, as was proved by the fact that he shared the danger with him; and he, as well as Gillespie, was fully alive to the peril which was imminent, and the crises which was certain to come, if no way could be found to avert it.

So far as Gillespie's tortured mind could see there was no way of escape; but a mind so fertile in evil expedients as that of Skeat was not easily baffled, and, with his usual ingenuity, he had hit on a method of extrication. It was a desperate one, no doubt; but then desperate cases require remedies, and the position of the gauger admitted of no common treatment.

Under Skeat's advice, the gauger had effected a heavy insurance on his house at Skene. He had taken a policy out of two offices—one for £530, the other for £500, or a sum of £830 in all. The view with which this was done we need hardly explain. It pointed to the commission of another frightful crime, but one which, if successfully executed, would cover up his forgeries and relieve him from his financial difficulties. This was a temptation which Gillespie in his cruel necessity could not resist, and he was daily bringing himself to the necessary point of firmness. Nay, in the contemplation of what was intended he experienced a feeling of relief, for he thought the new crime was ere long to be accomplished without detection. What more accidental than the outbreak of fire? what more difficult to show after a conflagration—which obliterates its cause—that its origin was wilful? Malcolm Gillespie actually felt a returning buoyancy of spirits in prospect of this deliverance from danger and difficulty; and if he could now only make a grand discovery and a brilliant seizure, his fortunes would once more rise, and he would regain the path of safety and comfort which he so greatly longed to tread.

Ah! he was a man most unenviable—at war with his true self, which was too noble to sink silently into the degradation of the crooked ways into which he had wandered—struggling wildly (but vainly, we fear) to retrace his steps, for the path he was taken to return was itself forbidden. His desires were on the side of truth and right, yet he had gathered an atmosphere of falsehood around him which he was compelled to breathe, or rather to gasp in, while his very efforts to escape were rendering it only the more foul and murky—a striking example and warning to all who are tempted to forsake the highway of honour and integrity. There is a law of gravitation in sin as in all else. The lower a man goes, the worse he is dragged down; the more difficult is it for him to regain the normal heights of his better life.

An enterprise such as that in which he was now engaged afforded immense relief to his harassing thoughts. The excitement attending it, the physical energy and mental activity required to conduct it, brought a welcome change to his mind, and restored him to something like his former character. His eye sparkled with its wonted fire, his cheek flushed with eager expectation, the motion of his limbs were elastic and decided, as when years ago he swept over the wide moorlands above Stonehaven, and had its auburn locks tossed by the winds which came from the North Sea.

The pathless forest through which he was now making his way all alone was a difficult place to explore. His way was often intercepted by fallen trees, which the tempests of former winters had prostrated. Anon he would be confronted by crag, or cliff, or gully, whose difficulties had to be evaded by taking a circuitous route. Here the undewood would become too tangled to force a passage—there the gloom would grow profound as midnight. But on he went with patient persistency; hither and thither, up and down—his eyes darting glances on every side in search of some sign or trace of that which he sought. As often as he descried a bare knoll or treeless eminence he ascended it to obtain what view it commanded; and there, taking out his field-glass, he slowly swept with it every distant bank and brae, in the hope of seeing a faint track of blue, curling smoke, which was the invariable accompaniment of a working "still."

He had conducted his explorations in this fashion for several hours with no prospect of success. He seemed to be the only human being within that mighty solitude, though the silence was often broken by the croak of a raven, the scream of an eagle sailing far up among the blue, the hoarse bark of a mountain fox, or the sharp cry of a goshawk on the wing. Not seldom, also, was both horse and rider startled by the bounding forth of some animal which had been disturbed in its lair, and which scurried past in search of safer shelter. This occurred so often that at length Carlos disdained to be startled any more, and at loud whirr or sudden rustle he almost ceased to cock his ears.

The sun was still a considerable height in the sky, though visibly on the decline, when Gillespie reached the foot of an eminence higher than any he had yet climbed, and as its summit was bare he resolved to ascend and obtain the view it promised to afford. The steepness being too great for the horse to surmount, he fastened the latto a tree and left him to crop the virgin grass in his absense, a duty which Carlos forthwith began to discharge with alacrity.

HARRISTON. — The Tribune says that Joshua Howes, whose saw-mill was burned a couple of weeks since, has already got the timber on the ground for a new one. The mill will be ready in time to cut this season's stock of logs.——The Harriston fire company is well treated by the citizens. Handsome donations are not of rare occurrence.——During a recent thunder storm lightning entered the Dominion Telegraph office, smashed a couple of batteries and set fire to some papers. Mr. Watson was working an instrument at the time, but was not injured.——The May cattle fair was a large one. Something over two hundred head were sold at prices from $3.50 to $5 per cwt.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Negotiations Going on Favourably.

Russia Making Fresh Concessions.

May 5.

A London despatch reports that an order has just been issued by the British Admiralty that the Island of Heligoland be immediately fortified. This is believed to be in consequence of Von Moltke's mission to Copenhagen.

The British Government has ordered a million pounds weight of lint and other appliances for the wounded.

The London Times editorially says: The British Cabinet admits in principle that an interchange of views respecting the substance of the treaty would be desirable in case the difficulties which now obstruct the Congress be removed, but it shows no inclination to waive its preliminary condition. Accordingly it has not yet replied to the annexe to Gortschakoff's circular.

The Agence Russe says:—A much better impression prevails respecting the prospect of the negotiations. It is rumoured that the approaching arrival of Count Schouvaloff is connected with a friendly exchange of views resulting from the pourparlers between London and St. Petersburg.

A Vienna correspondent intimates that England has not abandoned her claim with regard to the submission of the whole treaty, but at most consented to an exchange of ideas concerning merits of the treaty.

A Berlin correspondent states that Russia has sent fresh communications to London and Vienna specifying the concessions she is willing to grant.

A Pera despatch says:—Todleben is takingthe Rodlepek insurrection vigorously in hand. Reports are current respecting the withdrawal of the Russians beyond the neutral zone.

The Times says that the Washington Treaty has placed the United States under special obligations in fulfilling its neutral duties, and is confident that the United States will act honourably, and that the Russians will find it difficult to execute the enterprises thay appear to have planned.

Eighteen lives were lost by the recent explosion at Minneapolis.

The Montreal Orangemen have declared their intention to walk on the 12th of July.

Work has been resumed at several of the Preston cotton mills, the operatives accepting a reduction.

John Curtis while assisting at a barn raising on the farm of James Ival in Minto had a hand badly crushed by an overlay falling on it.

The University of Glasgow has conferred the degree of D.D. on the Rev. George M. Grant, M.A., Principal Queen's University, Kingston.

The Jesuit Curci, who was recently expelled from the Order on account of heterodoxy on the subject of the temporal power, is said to have signed a retraction.

The clock for the lower tower on the Parliament Buildings arrived in Ottawa on Saturday. It is from the establishment of Mr. M. F. Dent, London, England, and is a marvel of workmanship.

The Lucknow hotel keepers closed their hotels on the 1st, and have resolved to give no accommodation to the travelling public. The Dunkin Act is in force in the County.

Colligan, the victim of the recent attack on the Orangemen at Point St. Charles, was buried on Sunday, the funeral being attended by a large number of Catholics. There was no disturbance of any kind.

One day last week while a little three year old daughter of Mr. William Horricks, of Minto, was playing in the barn, she became frightened at some sheep, and in running out of the barn, fell and broke her leg between the knee and ankle.

Rev. R. M. Pope, pastor of the M. E. Church in Listowel was recently presented by the young members of his congregation with a well-filled purse. He is about to remove from Listowel to the neighborhood of Kingston.

Mr. Hadwen, formerly of Lucknow, but who lately settled in Dakotah, was a few days ago shot by a colored man with whom he had a dispute over the digging of a well. Mr. Hadwen was alive when heard from, but was not expected to recover.

The prisoners charged with the murder of the Earl of Leitrim have been remanded in consequence of the discovery of incriminating evidence. The County Inspector of Constabulary says he has information directly connecting the prisoners with the murder.

On Tuesday of last week, a son of Mr. Neil Munn, of Garafraxa, aged seven, was sitting in his father's waggon when the horses took fright and ran away, throwing him out. He sustained very severe concussion of the brain besides other internal injuries. He is recovering.

During three days of last week over two hundred petitions in bankrupcy were filed through the United States, of which the great majority were voluntary. The largest number in any one city was in Chicago. This "rush" was made with the view of obtaining the benefit of the act before its repeal.

The Hamilton License Inspector discourses thus: "While it has been my aim as far as possible to protect those who are licensed by prosecuting illicit dealers, it is to be regretted that the former rendered me little or no assistance. While they are doubtless in possession of facts which would be of great service to me, information is invariably withheld, and I am left to discover as best I can these illicit dealers. If licensed persons would render me such information as they frequently obtain in their daily intercourse with the public, in the direction stated, there would be no necessity for the employment of detectives, unless, perhaps, in a very few exceptional cases."

Read What the People say In Regard to the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills.

LEVI JONES, Markham, says: I had a severe attack of Bronchitis. I was so bad that I could hardly get my breath. I sought for a quick remedy, and seeing the Shoshonees Remedy so highly recommended, I procured a bottle, and am happy to say that, by the time it was taken, I was entirely well and have remained so, although I was much exposed through the winter in travelling.

REV. F. B. STRATTON, Demorestville, writes: I have found your remedies particularly beneficial for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and Bronchical Affections, and would advise all similarly affected to give them a trial.

MRS. A. D. PIERCE, Waverly, N. Y. says: It affords me much pleasure to express my heartfelt gratitude for the benefit I have received from using the Great Shoshonees Remedy. I was sorely afflicted with Dyspepsia and Disease of the Lungs. After having used six bottles, I have become hearty and well. I never knew a medicine to have such wonderful effects. I cannot speak too highly of its merits.

JOHN FINLAYSON, Athol, says: When travelling one of my feet got sore and broke out. I could not cure it and had to return home. It became better, and afterwards much worse, I finally purchased a bottle of the Remedy and a box of Pills, and before they were half gone I commenced to improve, and before they were finished my foot was completely cured. It is now seventeen months since, but have had no further attack. Price of the Remedy in pint bottles, $1; Pills, 25 cents a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Foreign Grain Trade.

The Mark Lane Express of the 30th ult., says the general tenor of the agricultural reports is distinctly satisfactory as regards the wheat and spring corn crops, and it is very seldom that the advices from the rural districts as to weather, work, and crop record so few complaints as at present. Business has been necessarily restricted in Mark Lane, owing to the Easter holidays. Supplies of English wheat have been light, and prices have undergone little or no change, either in London or the Provinces, and a quiet but steady tone prevailed. With political affairs unsettled, holders of foreign wheat have been content to satisfy the retail demand. The export for the past week amounted only to 2,500 quarters, against 9,000 and 15,800 respectively in the two preceding weeks, from which it may be seen that the requirements of the Continent are for the present supplied. This important element of strength being wanting, holders only had the ordinary consumptive wants of the country to fall back upon, which do not appear to be large, although there has been sufficient business to prevent prices receding to any quotable extent. Millers, generally speaking, hold fair stocks. America has furnished the bulk of the imports of wheat into London, which, however, have been quite moderate. With fair arrivals at port of call, the floating cargo trade for wheat ruled firm. Prices advanced fully a shilling, apparently owing to the continued political uneasiness, but business was restricted owing to the holidays. Maze advanced sixpence. Barley steady.

Iron-Clad Fortifications.

It has recently been decided by the German military authorities to provide the new forts at Strasburg, Cologne, Ingolstedt with armored turrets and batteries, similar to those already adopted for the fortifications of Metz and Geestemunde, on the estuary of the Weser. The armor for each turret consists of eight large plates, which are fastened together in a peculiar manner, neither bolts nor rivets being employed. The armor consists of hardened cast iron, and in the land defences the plates protecting the embrasures are 55 centimetres or about 21 inches thick, and in the coast batteries from 60 to 90 centimetres, or about 23 to 34 inches; while the plates forming the roof of the turret are sufficiently thick to resist the shells fired from 28 centimetre howitzers. In each turret provision is made for mounting two pieces of ordnance; the armament consisting of two 26 or 28 centimetre guns in the inland fortifications. The embrasures are made as small as possible, and the turrets are revolved by manual labor working suitable machinery. The cost of each turret in the land fortresses will amount in round numbers, it is estimated, to 200,000 marks, or about $50,000, and in the coast defences, 300,000 marks, or $75,000. Some time ago experiments were made against one of the turrets erected on the range at Tegel, near Berlin, and the results were highly satisfactory, more than 500 projectiles striking the armored tower without doing it any appreciable damage.

A young man in a leather store used to feel very impatient with his employer for keeping him, year after year, for three years, "handling hides." But he saw the use of it years after, when in an establishment of his own he was able to tell by the touch the exact quality of the goods. It was only by those thousands of repetitions that the lesson was learned; and so it is with everything in which we acquire skill. The half-informed, half-skilled in every business out numbers the others dozens to one. Daniel Webster once replied to a young man who asked him if there was any "room in the legal profession," "There is always room at the top." The better you know your business the better your chance to rise. You can gather much information by making a wise use of your eyes and ears, and perhaps be able to surprise your employer in an emergency by stepping into the "next man's" place and discharging his duties satisfactorily, so learn your business.

On account of the wife of President Hayes not allowing wine to be used at State dinners, a temperance society was organized in Washington and called the Mrs. R. B. Hayes Temperance Association. On account of Mrs. Hayes since expressing herself as follows:—"I do not use wine or liquors myself, nor in my family, but I have no thought of shunning those who think and act differently. It is a mistake to think that I should want to be so dictorial. I want people to enjoy themselves in a manner that is most pleasing to them;" and for allowing claret punch at dinner on board an excursion steamer on the Delaware, the temperance association have resolved "That this Society discards the name of Mrs. R. B. Hayes, and pronounces her as complete a 'fraud' as her husband."

Edmond About says:—At the age of twenty-five an American has tried a dozen ways of life, made four fortunes, a bankruptcy, and two campaigns; pleaded a cause, preached a religion, killed six men with a revolver, enfranchised a negress, and conquered an island. An Englishman has passed two examinations, been attached to an embassy, founded a counting-house, converted a Catholic, made the tour of the world, and read the complete works of Sir Walter Scott. A Frenchman has rhymed a tragedy, written in two journals, received three sword wounds, attempted two suicides, troubled the peace of fourteen husbands, and changed his political opinions nineteen times over. A German has scarred the faces of fourteen of his intimate friends, swallowed sixteen tons of beer and the philosophy of Hegel, sung eleven thousand couplets, compromised a maid-servant, smoked a million pipes, and been concerned in two revolutions. A Roman prince has done nothing, learned nothing, seen nothing, loved nothing, suffered nothing. The gate of a cloister is thrown open, a young girl with no more experience than himself is led forth, and these two innocents proceed to kneel before a priest, who licenses them to begin a fresh stock of innocents."

The Montreal journals announce that it has been found impossible by Mr. James Brown, to secure sufficient cargo to load a vessel in the St. Lawrence for Australia direct in June. He therefore makes shipments to Melbourne and Sydney via Boston by American vessels in May, June and July.

Four men entered the residence of John Johnston, Brockville, on Friday, and demanded his money. Johnson refused. They then tied him to the bed and beat him very severely about the face and head; they also flourished a razor about his throat and threatened to kill him if he did not tell where his money was. He still refused. They ransacked the house and found only $1. The men were arrested.

Cardinal Manning seceded from the Protestant faith soon after the death of his wife, who was a Miss Wilberforce. Had he remained where he was, he would now doubtless have been Archbishop of Canterbury, for his promotions as a Church of England parson were in galloping strides. The Cardinal is all skin and grief. His strongest potations are tea and weak claret and water; he now and again indulges in dry toast. He is an eloquent speaker, a strict temperance advocate, and a fascinating talker. His nose is as thin as a paper-knife.

A few drops of hartshorn put into a little water will clean a hair brush better than anything else, and does the brush no harm. If very dirty, rub a little soap on the brush. After cleaning rinse in clear water and hang the brush up by the window to dry. Do not let the bristles rest on any hard substance while wet. It is better to tie a string round the handle and hang up.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.
