CATCHING AND KILLING THE UNLICENSED CANINES.

THE WAY IT IS DONE.

The following extract which was handed to us by a friend, ought to be well studied by our police force who boast of doing so well in the dog destroying-business the past season.

"Well, not exactly on the war path, but after dogs that are not licensed. The people were making such an outcry about the nuisance the dogs are becoming that we had to put the catchers out. We will only keep them out for a few days, because this is not the proper season of the year."

So said Commissioner Coatsworth to a Globe reporter on Friday last in response to the observation—"I hear you are on the war-path again amongst the dogs?" As the result of a conversation with the Commissioner, and of investigation made afterwards, the following facts were gleaned with reference to enforcing the dog by-law.

The law under which the dogs are caught is the amendment to by-law No. 446. The by-law gave the police power to poison any dog they saw that did not have the corporation medal on its neck. This law was found to work badly.

Valuable dogs would oftentimes be killed, when, had the case been investigated, their lives would have been spared. Gentlemen whose dogs were killed thus became enraged. In many cases they had paid the license, but the dog had perhaps lost the medal. Suits frequently followed, and after the city had been several times maled attention was directed to the by-law. Two years ago last June the by-law was amended. The amendment authorized the city Commissioner to catch all dogs found running upon the streets without the medal, or tag, as it is often called. This new idea was borrowed from a similar plan successfully adopted in various places throughout the United States. Immediately after the passage of the amendment the work was begun.

The ominous-looking black van, with its attendants, have long been familiar objects on our streets. This vehicle is an iron box about four feet long, three wide, and three high. The sides have numerous holes punctured in them for purposes of light and air. A hole at the top admits the dogs when caught, and through a door at the rear they leave at the pound. Two to three men accompany the van. They are provided with poles about eight feet long, attached to the end of which are nets. With these fish-net looking articles the dogs are captured. Oftentimes the men chase a dog through lanes, across streets, and out of yards, into barns and sheds, and sometimes into a house, the poor brute making the most desperate efforts to escape as if aware of the fate that awaits it if captured. Once caught, the dogs are tumbled into the van. They are then taken to.

The dog pound, situated in the western portion of the city, near the asylum. This pound consists of two comfortable roomy pens, the floors of which are strewn with plenty of straw. The dogs on one day's catch are put into one pen, the other being reserved for those taken the second day. The object in thus keeping them separate is apparent. The law provides that the dogs shall be kept twenty-four hours, so as to afford the owners an opportunity to redeem them, and twenty-four hours for sale. During their confinement they are fed and watered, and those remaining at the end of the forty-eight hour are destroyed. They are taken out and put into a long oblong tight box, much resembling the body of a cart. On the day the Globe reporter was present twenty-one dogs of various sizes were put in. The cover was shut down, and the asphyxiating process commenced.

Beginning of the end, an ordinary tin-smith's stove was attached to a pipe three inches in diameter to the box, and the charcoal lighted. Nothing was heard from the imprisoned dogs for ten minutes. Then they commenced making a peculiar noise resembling a howl. The noise only lasted a few minutes. The whining or howling did not give one the idea that the dogs were suffering much pain, and this idea is confirmed by medical men, who state that death caused by the fumes of charcoal is the most painless possible. In seventeen minutes not a sound was heard. Then the cover was removed. The dogs were pronounced dead, and the men proceeded to bury them.

The class of animals caught are, as a rule, of the worst kind. Not more than ten per cent. are what might be called good dogs, and these are the ones generally redeemed. The majority are discased, wretched, starved brutes, whose erally redeemed. The majority are diseased, wretched, starved brutes, whose death is a riddance. Occasionally valuable dogs are caught. In the first campaign two setters valued at $300 found themselves in the pound. They were of course redeemed. The dog-catchers often keep good dogs longer than the prescribed time in the hope that the owners will turn up. Contrary to the general idea, the dogs are not subjected to much cruelty. In fact, the only cruelty—if cruelty it can be called—is the chasing of the animals and the tumbling of them into the van, often one on top of the other, and where the smaller dogs are at the mercy of the larger ones. The men are careful now they handle the "pets." Experience has taught them that even the poorest mongrel, if hurt, will make an effort to bite its captors. No carefully are they handled that the men are seldom bitten. This fact would seem strange when it is considered the number that are caught. The first forty-eight hours in the present campaign fifty-three were secured. Only five were redeemed, the others were put to death. The Commissioner's men work at a great disadvantage, so strong is public sentiment against the carrying out of the law. The instant the van makes its appearance shouts may be heard on all sides, "Oh, 'Oh, the dog van!" "Run quick and catch the dog." The children in the vicinity, encouraged and often times assisted by older people, will hoot and jeer the men, throw all kinds of missiles at them, and generally do their best to drive them away. Every obstacle is put in the way of the men catching a dog, and a chased dog is often aided as much as possible to make its escape. To such an extent is public prejudice carried, that the catchers never think of attempting to secure more than one dog in the same vicinity, but as soon as they do get one, drive hurriedly away to "fresh fields and pastures new," only returning to the old hunting grounds at long intervals. The Commissioner says that he is repeatedly besieged by women and children, boys and girls, especially from among the poorer classes, begging for the release of a captive pet. Many amusing stories does he tell of the devices resorted to get the dog out of a pound without paying the fee. He said that one day two boys about the ages of twelve and fifteen approached him, apparently in the greatest grief. They begged piteously for the release of a miserable poodle, captured the day before. They were without the necessary two dollars, but craved for mercy in the particular case. So urgent was the appeal that the Commissioner was about to yield, when the oldest boy said that he would not care if it was not for the love his mother bore the dog.

"Where is your mother?" enquired the Commissioner.
"She is dead," replied the boy.

It is announced that Morton, Rose & Co., the "Society Generally" of Paris and the Bank of Montreal will jointly launch the Canada Pacific Railway, enterprise. The probable amount of the issue of Canada Pacific Railway bonds will be £10,000,000.

CEREMONIES AT THE ROYAL BABTISM.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—A Madrid correspondent telegraphs as follows:—At one o'clock yesterday afternoon there took place at the Chapel of the palace the baptism of the infant, the heiress to the throne, as she is styled. The galleries of the palace leading from the apartment of the Princess to the chapel which halberdiers in full gala costume, and a splendid carpet was laid down along the entire length. All the persons invited, including the diplomatic corps, ministers, civil, military authorities and the grandees with their ladies, had taken their seats, and the chapel presented a brilliant aspect with its variety of uniforms and elegant toilet. In the gallery at the bottom of the chapel were the King, the Archduchess Isabella, the Infanta Isabella, Le Pazand, Ipazad and Eulalia, and their households.

The guns of the artillery fired a salute as the procession started for the chapel by the galleries of the Palace. First went the Lord in Waiting, then the chamberlain and the Grandees in double file, all the grand Court costumes of the last century, with gold-braid, and lace adorned coats, knee breeches and silk stockings. In the midst of the macabre and heralds there walked seven noblemen, bearing the insignia of baptism, namely, the saltcellar, a taper, a knapkin, a short mantle, and a cake made of almonds, and the Duchess of Medinaceli Las Torres, bearing a white satin cushion; were a beautiful white satin robe, the gift of Queen Isabella, and the Papal Nuncio. At the Alter stood many priests choristers, the and the Patriarch of the Indies, with other prelates, who immediately began the service with all the pomp and splendour of the Church of Rome. In the act of baptism, Queen Isabella held the infant over an ancient font expressively brought from the Convent of St. Dominica, and in which the saint had been baptized in the Middle Ages. After the ceremony, the infant was taken back to her apartments in the same State. Other festivities will take place, in October, when Queen Christina is church in the Atacha Cathedral.

THE TICHBORNE CASE AGAIN.

The Tichborne case is by no means a dead issue, though the prime movers in it are either under-going punishment, or have suffered punishment, as the case may be, for their complicity in the alleged swindle. Dr. Keneally is dead, the claimant is still in durance vile, and the holders of the famous bonds which promised so much in exchange for so little, have ceased to regard their securities as being worth more than the paper on which they are written. That there are some people in the world, however, who believe that it is the real Sir Roger Tichborne who is at present languishing in jail, there can be little doubt. Even Jean Lule, the sailor, who spent six years and eight months in Millbank prison for his efforts to reinstate the presumably "rightful heir" to his possessions, his implicit trust in the burly prisoner's word that he is all he pretends to be. Jean Lule, it will be remembered, gave important testimony during the long trial. He it was who swore that Roger Tichborne had been picked up with certain men of the Be la's crew, by the Osprey, on which latter vessel Lule declared he had been steward. On the 18th of August last the ex-steward and convict was liberated from prison, and the next day he wrote a letter to Mr. E. Kennedy. He says:

"My statement on oath respecting the bark Osprey, in which I was a steward at the time the Bella men were picked up, is true to the very letter, and I am able to prove it by facts if I am provided a little time. You will understand that it is against my every interest to uphold and maintain the case of Sir Roger Tichborne, whose friends are total strangers to me, and not even my own countrymen. I am now going into my 6th year of age, and your own common sense and that of others would be right in calling me a fool were I to maintain a false cause; but my own consciousness supports me in my misfortune and also my true belief. I wish to reassert that my evidence as to the rescue on board the Osprey was correct. The Osprey in December 1853, was bound from New York to Melbourne, and in April, 1854, picked up a boat in which there were six men and amongst these was the claimant, who went by name of Roger, and also landed at Melbourne. It has been supposed that some of the agents for the prosecution in the Tichborne case had previous knowledge of me, and asked me to give false evidence, but this is not true. I fully believe that some of the crew of the Bella and Osprey, some eight teen in number, are still in existence. I hear that Captain Bennett, the captain of the Osprey, was shot in 1869. I believe that the logbook of the Osprey is in existence, and I shall, as soon as I can, leave this Christian country; but not before you and all Sir Roger's friends are in possession of such material evidence as will put all your enemies to flight."

Notwithstanding the oppression of the Irish landlords by their tenants not one of them has up to this died of hunger. The Pope has appropriated $5,000 for a complete and splendid edition of the works of St. Thomas Aquinas, his favorite philosopher. The American wheat crop this year is 50,000,000 bushels more than that of last year. France has 6,691,000 electors; Germany, 8,523,000; England, 2,719,000. Out of every hundred inhabitants France has 26.3 electors, Germany 20, and England 5.11.

MURDER OF LORD MOUNTMORRIS.

New York, Sept. 27. A Dublin despatch gives the following particulars of the assassination of Lord Mountmorris. He was murdered on Saturday night at Rushen, within one mile of Clonbar, County Galway. The scene was a neck of land between Lough Mask and Lough Corrib. He was seen to leave town about eight o'clock. A half an hour afterwards his horse and carriage arrived home without him. Search was made and he was found lying on the side road in a pool of blood, lifeless. The police was at once sent for and the body conveyed to Ebar Hall, the family seat. Lord Mountmore received one bullet in the head, penetrating the skull, three in the neck, and two in the body, any one sufficient to cause death. He was little known except in his own neighborhood, and throughout Mayo and Galway he had small estates, which he farmed to some extent. He had fifteen tenants, with whom he had most unhappy relations. Quite recently he obtained ejection decrees against two of them. As a magistrate he was unpopular, and at a meeting of Justices which he had been attending, a resolution was passed calling upon the Government to adopt coercive measures.

London, Sept. 27. At a large meeting on Sunday, near the spot where Lord Mountmore was murdered, the speakers disclaimed any connection of the Land League with the murderers.

ENGLISH BEFAULTER ARRESTED.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13. Joseph Tapson, formerly secretary of the Metropolitan Railway Company's Provident Savings Bank, of London, was arrested in this city, last night, by two English detectives. Tapson is charged with having tampered with the depositors' books, appropriating to his own use £10,000, in the space of five years. His defalcation being discovered he fled to this country, on the 10th of May, last. A warrant for his arrest was issued and placed in the hands of Inspector Littlechild, a Scotland Yard detective, and Chief Inspector Goshen, of the Metropolitan Railway Company's police, who were at a loss for some time to discover any trace of the fugitive, excepting that America had been his objective point. A close surveillance was kept upon his wife, however, and it was finally discovered that she was about to depart from Liverpool for the United States on board the steamship British Crown, bound for Philadelphia. The officers preceded the steamer, anticipating that she would join her husband on arriving there. The Chief of police, given, was notified and a sharp lookout was kept for Mrs. Tapson and the Philadelphia officers succeeded in finding that she had taken up her quarters in the suburbs of the city. Lieutenant Daymon and Sergeant Wolf watched the house for days and were at last rewarded by seeing a man answering the description of Tapson enter on Saturday. He was at once arrested. For a time he stoutly denied his identity, saying his name was Harrison, but when confronted with Inspector Goshen, who knew him, he admitted that he was Joseph Tapson. There will be a hearing before United States Commissioner Gibbons to-morrow, and he will be turned over to the British forces immediately after the necessary extradition papers have been made out, and taken to London to stand trial.

A PRINTER'S DREAM.

A printer sat in his office chair; his boots were patched and his coat thread bare, while his face looked weary and worn with care. While dully thinking of business debt, old Morpheus slowly round him crept, and before he knew it he soundly slept; and, sleeping, he dreamed that he was dead, from trouble and toil his spirit had fled, and that not even a cow bell tolled for the peaceful rest of his cowhide soul. As he wandered among the shreds of the smoke and scorch in lower Ilspes, he shortly observed an iron door that creakingly swung on hinges ajar, but the entrance was closed by a red hot bar, and Satan himself stood peeping out and watching for travellers thereabout, and thus to the passing printer spoke, and with growling voice he woke: "Come in, my dear, it shall cost you nothing, and never fear; this is to place where I cook the ones who never pay their subscription sums, for though in life they may escape, they will find when dead it is too late; I will show the place where I melt them thin, with red hot chains and scraps of tin, and also where I comb their heads with broken glass and melted lead, and if of refreshments they only think, there's the boiling water for them to drink; there's the red-hot grindstone to grind down his nose, and red-hot rings to wear on his toes, and if they mention they don't like fire,

I sew up their mouths with a red-hot wire; and then, dear Sir, you should see them squirm while I roll them over and cook to a turn." With these last words the printer awoke, and thought it all a practical joke; but still at times so real did it seem that he cannot believe it was all a dream; and often he thinks with chuckle and grin of the fate of those who saxe their tin and never pay the printer.

THE CARBONAR HERALD

Honest Labor—our noblest heritage.

CARBOANER, OCT. 7TH.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

Since the establishment of this journal, we have ever devoted our best efforts to the advocacy and promotion of the public interests not alone of this, but of the various outport districts of the colony. From time to time we have pointed out and urged upon the attention of the Executive, the initiation and perfection of what we considered, public improvements of necessity and vital importance to the general interests of those districts. Foremost amongst those improvements we zealously and persistently advocated the establishment of a fire organization in this town, a public boon, which we are happy to say, is at length on the point of successful realization. We are glad to learn that the fire engine has arrived in port and the house for its reception is fast approaching completion, so that in a short time, so far as protection against the ravages of fire is concerned, Carbonar will be in position very nearly as favorable as the sister town of Harbor Grace. For the success which has attended our efforts in this direction, whilst claiming for the Herald its prior share of credit, we are at the same time not unmindful of the enlightened co-operation of the leading citizens of Carbonar, whose endorsement of our views on the subject, tendered in no small degree to ensure the successful accomplishment of the object in view. Whilst congratulating the people of Carbonar upon the attainment of this long needed public improvement, we would again direct their attention to the subject of the public lamps, before referred to in these columns, an improvement second only to that already referred, and which needs only the united and determined action of the public to ensure its ultimate and speedy accomplishment. Having thus far referred to public improvements of immediate necessity in Carbonar, we shall in a future issue, return to the consideration of other points on the same subject in connection with this and various outport districts. In giving expression to our opinions, we shall do so in all candor and sincerity, entirely uninfluenced by any motive other than the promotion of the best interests of the country at large.

The Court of Quarter Sessions met at the Court House on Monday last, at eleven o'clock, as previously announced by the Harbor Grace Standard. In addressing the Grand Jury our esteemed Magistrate remarked that there was no business of a criminal character to be considered and the quarter just passed, was without any complaints of a serious nature having been made at the police office. The only arrests made on the streets were a few bank fishermen who were fined for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. And that the Labrador voyage on the whole will be better than that of the previous year. And from present appearances the prospect of an abundant crop of potatoes both here and on the North Shore seems almost certain, and if expectations in this respect are realized it will prove a great blessing to the poor. He also referred to the arrival on Sunday of the fire engine and the erection of the engine house which is fast approaching completion; and the much needed repairs to the public wharf which will be ready for traffic by the end of the present month.

THE GENTLEMEN THEN RETIRED TO THEIR ROOM, AND IN THE COURSE OF AN HOUR RETURNED WITH THE FOLLOWING PRESENTMENT:

GRAND JURY ROOM, CARBONAR, OCT. 4, 1889.

The Grand Jury beg to represent that the water in the pump opposite Dr. Nelson's is unwholesome and unfit for use, in consequence of a drain constantly running into the well, and would therefore request that the said drain be removed as soon as possible, and thereby remedy the evil complained of.

The Grand Jury are pleased to see the new building—the engine house—so far advanced towards completion, and that the new engine has arrived in port, and suggest that a fire brigade be formed as soon as practicable, and that a public lamp be placed near the engine house.

The Grand Jury would again beg to ask whether or not we are to have the Public Lamps placed on the street in Carbonar as previously requested.

The Grand Jury would also recommend having the police force of the town augmented as soon as possible, especially as our Labrador fleet are arriving daily.

For self and fellow Jurors. JOHN MADDOCK, Foreman.

CONVERSATION OVER HEARD.

To the Editor of the Carbonar Herald. HARBOR GRACE, Oct. 5th.

Dear Sir,— On Saturday night, that was the night after your paper arrived here with the article in it headed conversation overheard, which I sent you, I happened to go into the saloon referred to in my letter, and the hostess bid me sit down until she would tell me the talk they had over a drink or two, so I sat down and penned it word for word as she related it, and sent it to you in a revised form, as some of it was too severe on certain parties for the columns of your journal. We will call the hostess Sarah Ann, wife of a dead husband and yet boss of her own house. The conversation was started by Sylvester, who remarked it was well the Herald was successful in enlightening that gentleman from the poles, for if he got returned to the Assembly, and made a few able speeches no matter whether written by his friend or not, as the fact of them being delivered by him would be sufficient, and in a very short time he would be ambitious enough to aspire to some high position, ay! perhaps the Sheriffship and oppose our much deserved and highly respected friend and countryman M. J. O'Mara, Esq., M.H.A., and probably would get it by strength or stratagem; as the prime mover of this once great, but now very unpopular power would use all his influence to get this green importation into a good position, to encourage others of his kind to come to strengthen the apparently very weak lever of the unpopular power. Ay, Mobeile did not err when he said the grand lever was broken, as clearly proved by a very recent occurrence, both in words and actions, and the prime mover is just as silent as Nelson was after the battle on board the Victor, for Nelson was dead, but the prime mover still lives, he is powerless. No more conversations, then days are numbered with the past, it is now solitude and repentance. Yes, solitude instead of vanity and repentance instead of persecution, as persecution it was. This of course was a long speech for Sylvester, and they had another drink which stirred up Mike's nationality and he spoke thus, Yes, Sir, as he sipped the precious beverage, and here's to Newfoundland for Newfoundlanders and if Mr. M. J. O'Mara, do allow any importation of any standing, let it be long or short, to put him out of his lawful right and privilege as a native of the country and a qualified person for the position, he will have himself to blame, Sarah Ann who was waiting to see the shiners come down for drink, remarked, Arah and shure and wasn't there a new purfessor come out to St. John's, and what Government shitawashun have yeas fixed for him. Maurice, who was apparently very indignant at the remarks of Sarah Ann, said? the gentleman to whom you refer I know very little about, and indeed I think it is time you women would keep your tongues still on matters of this kind, and I would ask it as a favor of you to look after your rum tumbler and have your naggin ready to toss when me or another poor unfortunate may feel inclined to leave a penny in your way and I feel sure my friends will agree with me; but perhaps that is asking too much. Well pay me for the drinks and let me go, which they did and proceeded with their conversation without any further female interference. It was an excellent joke, the whole affair, said Mike, it showed us how ignorant people could be misled, for there were many who never seen even the birth place of the Konroys, and got indignant at the joke, I heard a good deal about it and from people too that I did expect better common sense from, but what about my old friend Rochfort have he any chance at all or will any of his old friends stand to him, while stands to the poles. It is almost time that some of his old Government friends, so often heard of, would look out for a suitable position for him, I am sure he is deserving of it as a native of the country, and he is not such a d—m bad fellow after all, only for— I was going to say something which is better not said, and the remainder of the conversation concerning Rochfort, I withhold as it is severer than he really deserves; I am told told he was in a great way about the remarks in my last letter and he was heard to use very severe language towards me. The remainder of the conversation was not very interesting as it was concerning the Herald and the alleged libel. Then Sarah Ann re-entered and announced the arrival of the policemen on the premises to remind them it was ten o'clock. The gentleman rose and with uplifted glasses said "success to E. J. B.—may his Herald never fail."

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,— Your correspondent—styling himself "A Ferryland Voter," and notorious under various aliases in the various papers—is quite unnecessarily exercised about my alleged pretensions to a seat in the assembly. I have no such ambition. Perhaps my disavowal will not silence this many-named scribbler, whose passion for writing, like his passion for drink, is irresistible. Nevertheless, I wish, with your permission, to disclaim, through your widely read columns, any intention of offering myself either for Ferryland District or any other.

Yours, &c., M. H. CARTY.

Local and other Items.

To CORRESPONDENTS.—Hip! Hip! Hurrah!!! Mobile.—Your communication of the 29th ult., duly received, but we must decline publication for the present, at all events; your assertions are rather dynamic, at the same time we cannot reasonably object to many of the points, we, nevertheless, do not see the necessity of adding fuel to fire or of throwing water on a drowned man; the work is done; you have gained your point; the victory is yours, and we have now much pleasure in congratulating you on the object gained. We shall however, reserve your communication for any unforeseen contingency and will, if necessary, make use of it, for like yourself, we do not understand hoodwinking neither do we intend to tolerate it, and we hope to see no more of it. Walls have ears.

Agriculturist.—We are informed by the Hon. John Rorke, that the agricultural Bull is now at large on the hills; this is the only information we can give you on the subject.

School Supporter.—Your remarks are quite out of place and too harsh and we will not at present give your communication a place in the columns of this journal, for three reasons. First—I he learned gentleman to whom you allude, is a particular friend and supporter of ours. Second—Your language is unfit for those columns and the charges made, you cannot maintain. Third—You are neither a subscriber nor supporter, in any way, to this journal, and therefore have no claim whatever on its columns.

"A HARBOR MAIN VOTER."—Your communication received. We think it would not be prudent to publish it just now. Your allusion to "family cliques" and "temperance proclivities" we consider misplaced. By putting your views in a milder form and avoiding all personal allusion to those in authority, you may insure insertion. We have nothing to do with your local road affairs.

It is our painful duty to-day to record the sad tidings which reached here by telegraph on Monday last, from Bonne Bay, of the sudden demise at that place of Henry Taylor, Esq., Sub-Collector of Her Majesty's Customs, in the 59th year of his age. The deceased gentleman was an old and highly respected inhabitant of this town where he spent upwards of 50 years, amongst his many relatives and friends. A few years ago, receiving an appointment to the position above referred, left here taking with him his family; and also, the good wishes of many worthy and esteemed friends. This gentleman was a brother-in-law to our highly respected Magistrate I. L. McNeil Esq., and F. Bomister Esq., We tender to the bereaved friends our heart felt sympathy in this their hour of sorrow.

The foreman of the Grand Jury John Maddock Esq., and his fellow Jurors will accept our thanks for their unanimous and unsought suggestion "that all printing in connection with the Court House should be done by us." This shows that the leading people of this town are at last becoming alive to the utility and sense of a news paper, and this is just the way to show it "in actions, not in words." We earnestly hope, our friend Mr. Maddock will long enjoy life and happiness to see the Herald flourish and conquer its many enemies who are day by day decreasing, and do honor to the town in which it is published as well as the country in general. We notice a lot of bales and boxes out side the doors of many of our business houses, we hope they will act accordingly. Come on gentlemen, don't fail this time, it is never too late to do good. We would call the attention of the police to the following rumour which was told by a man from Flat Rocks, North Shore, yesterday:—"A man and his son left Carbonar sometime since in a boat for some part of the North Shore, said to be about Broad Cove; when passing Flat Rocks the man was seen beating the boy, and the boy was heard to say 'father don't murder me,' when the father arrived enquires whereabouts of his son, but the only account he could give was that he rolled him up in a sail and put him under the cuddy, and he must of got over unknown to him."

To ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—All women having nothing to do but talk about the Herald, its prospects and Mr. Rochford and the Conroy affair, are hereby requested to devote their attention to preparing something for the coming Christmas Tree.

The Barqt. Bend 'Or, Captain Gorley, arrived Sunday last, in 22 days from Bristol with a general cargo to Hon'ble John Rorke.

A few weeks ago a report was current here that the "Molly Porter," (U.S. Banker) which sailed hence about the 10th September, for Nova Scotia, had been run into and sunk a few days after leaving port. We are now happy to be able to contradict the report. Messrs. Duff & Balmer having been advised of the safe arrival of the "Molly Porter."

The Rev. M. Hauley, C.C., North Bay, after spending a few days in town left for home this morning.

The English schooner Belle, Captain Lister, while going up the Straits of Belle Isle, ran into an ice berg in dense fog and became a total wreck. The Belle was owned by Captain Mos and chartered by John Munn & Co to load fish at Labrador for market. The crew were rescued and landed at Dead Island, all well. We understand she was insured in the Dartmouth Club, England.

About 6 p.m. 2nd inst., the usually quiet little village of Carbonar was thrown into a state of nervous excitement occasioned by loud and distressing cries from about the locality of the western fire brake prompted by police station house, like all British subjects the little fellow showed great aversion to loss of liberty. However the law was not to be defied; the man of the helmet had a duty to carry out, which must be accomplished even at the risk of his life. Juveniles beware! consider the fate of this unhappy boy, cease to throw rocks and to call names, and may this first incarceration which ever took place for a like offence be a warning to you all—remem or poor Sam.—Com.

We are informed by a friend that the steamer Plover after waiting three or four days for the Hercules at Tit Cove proceeded down the shore in search of her and found that she had left Domino, where she was detained four days and proceeded down the shore; the mail is expected to arrive in Tit Cove to-day and may not be expected here until Monday.

LATEST NEWS FROM LABRADOR COAST.—The steamer Tiger arrived from the Straits of Belle Isle at 5 o'clock last evening. Capt. Joy informs us that at present boats are getting from two to three quanta from Red Bay to Forteau. He has also gives the following estimates of the voyage in the Straits of Belle Isle; Salmon River 200 qts. per boat; seines 500 to 700 qts; Blanc Sabon, 150 qts. per boat of two men; Lancesau-Loupe, 150 to 200 qts. per boat, seines 500 to 700; Red Bay 150 qts. per boat, seines 500 to 700; Forteau 600 to 800 for seines. Before leaving the Straits Capt. Joy was in communication with Capt. O'Dell who had come up from Cape Muford. He reports that the fish was very scarce down the shore, and the little caught was poor and thin with a very slender yield of oil. Herring are somewhat plenty in the Straits but so small that no one thought it worth while to save the n. Capt. Penny of Conceptudn Bay made five or six hauls at Red Bay, but they were so very inferior to the ordinary size that he threw them away as worthless. The same state of things prevailed further North.

The Tiger left Red Bay on Friday. A tremendous sea was heavy right home to the land. When passing Cape Quirpon the steamer several times almost rolled over. Capt. Joy is of opinion that there must have been a terrific storm on the Atlantic, as the gale that did as much damage at Bonavista was not felt at all on the Labrador coast. The only indication of it there was the heavy ground swell heaving towards the land.

We also learn by the Tiger that there are two large sailing vessels and one steamer ashore at Anticoste. Capt. Joy has not learded their names. The stean-er, is probable the same as the one recently reported, as stranded, by telegram from Quebec.—Register.

In a former issue we anticipated that the heavy gale of north wind that visited our coast on the 25th and 26th ult., would be followed by tales of disaster. By the arrival of the steamer Cabot this morning from the Northward, we learn that at Bonavista the gale was terrific, beyond any former experience. Nearly all the stages round the harbor have been blown down. Several small boats were driven ashore, but the fish on board in most cases has been saved. Three large boats were thrown high and dry from the beach. One belonging to Wm. Tempelton was severely damaged, and although her fish cargo was almost entirely saved, it is feared that its value have been considerably diminished. At Bonavista they hold the same opinion as was expressed a few days since in the Register, namely, that we have had only the skirts of the storm here, and that its violence further north must have been disastrous. We have to acknowledge the courtesy of Walter Baine Grievie, Esq., for the above particulars.—Register.

Brazil has agreed to a subsidy for a line of steamships between Montreal and Halifax and her own Empire. The Halifax people have already discovered the value of the Brazil trade, and have shipped some cargoes of fish there at a profit. What will be the value of the Brazil markets for Newfoundland fish five years hence? And who now are those who are east pushing this country into the Dominion.—Chronicle.

"Ice cargos from Norway arriving recently in New York." Well done, Norway! Don't fear ice competition from Newfoundland, for a while.—Ibid.

AUTUMN RAIN.

Dear to me the constant p'ashing
Of the rain-drops falling fast,
And the dripping leafless branches
Waving in the autumn blast,
When the wither'd summer flowers,
Dead and cold are strown around,
When the autumn leaves are lying
Black and wet upon the ground—
Then I wander through the forest,
Then I haunt each dark retreat,
But the leafy carpet never Starts an echo from my feet.

I have listened to the murmur
Of the quiet autumn rain,
As it fell with ceaseless patter
On the tinkling window pane
I have stood to hear the music
Of the quiet autumn rain.
As upon the spectral darkness
Floated by the sweet refrain—
And I love the gentle whisper
Of the p'ator on the pane,
For I feel the spirits near me,
Whed I tear the autumn.

Pride and Jealousey,
Or a Wronged Husband.

Continued.

Clemency Mabrook was the only child of an early widowed mother. Reared in adversity, her childhood's days had been dimmed by the shadow of genteel poverty, which had served to chasten the natural brightness of her temper. The drudgery of her home life had been relieved and softened by a loving mother's influence, and under her sweet censorship her mind had been cultured to abide with patience and self-reliance the decrees of Providence. Death came across her quiet life to make her an orphan, and then followed the change that took her from her humble home to the abode of luxury and splendour, where her gentle nature shed the shame soft radiance round her, making her presence like a shining light.

John Rudderforth was the managing clerk in the large banking establishment of Mr. Samuel Babington, and had filled that office with strict integrity for many years. Not only was he trusted by his master with unreserved confidence, but he was also a frequent sharer in his hospitality. A strong attachment had grown up between him and Clemency Maybrook, and though he was a dozen years her senior, still his truthful, manly face, his plain and homely ways, the story of his career, unfavourable by any accidental advantages of birth or wealth, the sole support from boyhood of a widowed mother, all combined to throw a charm around him of inexpressible tenderness. They loved each other—he with all the ardour of his simple nature; and she with the like pure passion of womanly devotion.

Huge Sherwood, the cousin of Grace Babington, was undeserving the almost scoffing lightness that Grace ever affected to feel towards him. The son of a merchant, who though hard toil had amassed a splendid fortune, it was scarcely surprising that the youth had studied to learn the true value of ambitious, yet not indifferent to the independence that the right use of riches procures. His purse was always open, and his hand liberal to struggling merit or impoverished genius. With him the line between moderation and avarice was distinctly drawn.

The banker was one of those men on whom the sun of prosperity had shone to steadily and long, that he had at length become an infidel to the belief that it was ever doomed to set. He was formerly the grave plodding man of business, guiding with his own strong steady hand the helm of his affairs. His punctuality had passed into a proverb with those who knew him. The bank flourished, and he grew rapidly rich. Civic honours were showered upon him, and he became ambitious for higher distinctions. He was proud of his wealth, prouder still of his beautiful daughter. A desire for ostentation overcame his mercantile spirit and wrought a manifest change in his early thrifty habits. He became luxurious, prodigal in his expenditure, and lavish in his hospitality. His sole pride, heart, and being, seemed centred in Grace, and as she reached womanhood the dazzling circle of pleasure was unceasingly traversed. His quiet villa residence was exchanged for Belgrave House, with a retinue of servants and splendid equipages. All seemed to flow smoothly as a river beneath the sunlight. Suddenly, and in quick succession, several unforeseen failures gave very rude shocks to the strong commercial citadel. Still, public confidence in the bank remained unshaken. The good name and religious faith so honestly preserved in the past inspired confidence in the future; but, alas! the stately vessel was gliding over sunken rocks to overwhelming quicksands. Mr. Babington smiled, gazed upwards and trusted that some breeze of fortune would lift the leaky ship across the bar. In vain did John Rudderforth warn him of his danger; he plunged more madly into pleasure, and denounced his faithful servant as an evil prophet and a screech owl of ill omen.

Great as was John's mental anguish at those unjust remarks, still he never swerved in his endeavours to tear the veil from the banker's darkened vision. He stood bravely to a post which other men would probably have abandoned; but as it was full of danger, his simple faith cherished the belief that it was likewise full of honour.

At length the oft-predicted crisis became imminent. One of the most important firms in Manchester suspended payment, and Mr. Babington, who was their principal correspondent, was included in a personal claim; he had drawn bills of exchange at short sight which it was now imperative to meet. The instant John Rudderforth heard of the disaster, he looked himself in the countinghouse, and examined all the books and letters of correspondence. After three days and nights of incessant toil he wended his way to the banker's splendid mansion, and entered like a black cloud across the sunlight of that bright May day.

The shadow deepened on Mr. Babington's face when he entered the library, and saw at a glance the expression of despair so forcibly depicted in his honest friend's countenance. He threw himself into a chair, and his eye travelled anxiously from John's quivering features to a ponderous mass of papers on the table. At length he nervously enquired, 'What is all this?'

'Those papers,' said the clerk with firmness, 'demand your instant perusal.'

'No, John, no, was the petulant reply; 'not now, another time. I am unequal to such a task.'

'They have cost me, sir, three consecutive days and nights of searching labor,' said the clerk, still mildly, firmly. 'I have stripped the tree of all its fruit, both green, and ripe, and rotten, and there it is.'

'You have made a summary, John?'

'True, sir,' replied the clerk; 'but that is the lost paper I would have you examine.'—'Give it to me,' said the banker.

The clerk handed his master the particular document, and as his eye glanced over the figures, a marked transition from passive heedlessness to alarm and terror was visibly perceptible. The hue of ruddy health suddenly faded from his cheek, and a beaded Maisturo stood upon his knitted brow.

'What is this?' he exclaimed in a hoarse whisper; 'my assets six thousand pounds short of my liabilities? it cannot be.'

'It is true,' said the clerk; and I have included in those assets some doubtful debts.'

'But here I perceive, said the banker, catching, as he thought, at a gleam of hope, 'that you have valued the Ashdale estate of two thousand pounds less than it cost me.'

'In making a forced and hasty disposal of it for ready cash, no other result can be calculated upon,' replied the clerk.

'But might I do mortgage it for a sufficient sum to meet my payments until the end of the month?' urged the banker despondingly.

'You would but augment the evil, and favor a few creditors at the expense of too many,' replied the clerk.

'True, true,' said the banker with moaning anguish. 'I have gambled with the future too long, to long.' He drew the paper from him and covered his face with hands that trembled, at length he asked in a tone of hopeless agony. 'What is to be done?'

'Sign this paper,' replied the clerk, presenting another document to him.

The banker took the proffered paper and ran his eyes over its contents, then turning with indignant fierceness to his clerk, exclaimed, 'What is it you propose?—a failure, ruin!'

'Better, far better than what you propose,' replied the clerk. 'By making this assignment, every creditor shall receive 18 shillings in the pound; but your expedient would only lead to a fraudulent bankruptcy. Think of your good name, think of disgrace and dishonour!'

BEWARE OF AMERICAN COUNTERFEITS

I most respectfully take leave to call the attention of the Public generally to the fact, that certain Houses in New York are sending to many parts of the globe SPURIOUS IMITATIONS of my Pills and Ointment. These frauds bears on their labels some address in New York.

I do not allow my medicines to be sold in any part of the United States, I have no Agents there. My Medicines are only made by me, at 533 Oxford Street London.

In the books of directions affixed to the spurious make is a caution, warning the Public against being deceived by counterfeiters. Do not be misled by this audacious trick, as they are the counterfeiters they pretend to denounce.

These counterfeiters are purchased by unprincipled Vendors at one half the price of my Pills and Ointment, and are sold to you as my genuine medicines.

I most earnestly appeal to that sense of justice, which I feel sure I may venture upon asking from all honorable persons, to assist me, and the Public, as far as may lie in their power, in denouncing this shameful fraud.

Each Pot and Box of the Genuine Medicines, bears the British Government Stamp, with the words "HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, LONDON" engraved thereon. On the label is the address, 533, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, where alone they are manufactured. Holloway's Pills and Ointment bearing any other address are counterfeiters.

The Trade Marks of these Medicines are registered in Ottawa. Hence, any one throughout the British Possessions, who may keep the American Counterfeits for sale, will be prosecuted.
