The Imprisoned Heiress

The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER XXVI

The heiress and bride, the lovely Lady Almee, looked more like a saint than ever in her trailing bridal robes of white, with her veil floating like a cloud around her, and with a crown of orange blossoms resting upon her bronze waves of hair, and it was with all his heart and soul that Lord Ashcroft vowed to "worship" her till death did them part.

Among those who accompanied the bride to the altar was the widowed countess, whose somber attire was a little relieved by white, and who looked upon the scene with unfeigned joy and thanksgiving.

Her soul was more at peace now than it had been for years.

Her daughter stood beside her, her handsome face marred by its expression of envy and discontent, and her manner still as imperious as in the days when she was falsely known as the heiress.

After the marriage Lord Ashcroft took his young bride to his ancestral home, and it was in the chapel where his family had worshiped for generations that soon after the Lady Lorean Ashcroft became the happy wife of Captain Challoner, who had been presented with an excellent governmental office, which was little more than a sinecure.

Lady Egremont and Alexina retired, with Toplit, to a pleasant home presented to them by Almee, and there the countess spends her days in penitence, sharpened by the unfilial and unloving conduct of her daughter.

Gosman Kepp was of course released on the day of the earl's death, and soon after Jessy became his bride. Lord Ashcroft bestowed a neat dowry upon Jessy as a recompense to Kepp for his sufferings, and, years later, when Donald Kay died, Gosman Kepp was promoted head-forester, to the great joy and pride of his parents.

The haunted rooms of Egremont were no longer closed. The windows were unboarded, and the suite became a favorite one with Lady Ashcroft during her long annual visits to Egremont with her now famous husband and lovely children. The nurse who cared for her in her own infancy, the foster-sister of her mother, became the delighted attendant of the little heirs and heiresses of Ashcroft and Egremont, and all others, who had been in any way connected with Lionel or Almee were remembered with bountiful generosity.

The years have touched but lightly the sunny brow and bronze hair of Almee, and her sweet, tranquil eyes are unclouded, and the holy expression still glorifies her face, which is the sweetest in all the world to her adoring husband. He has changed somewhat, grown portly and dignified, as becomes the most famous leader of a certain party in politics; but he loves his pleasant home beyond all worldly fame, and his happiest hours are those spent with his wife and children, wandering through the forest or floating over the waters of Egremont.

[THE END.]

The Heir to Beecham Park

CHAPTER II.

Lady Coningham's face flushed slightly.

"I will make it all right," she replied, though with a little constraint. "Fortunately, Morris is a favorite with him. But now I must go; it is very late, and I have a long ride. Lest we should not meet again before you start, Mrs. Graham, let me say now how pleased I am to have made your acquaintance, though the introduction has been a sad one. I will let you know early in the morning, Dr. Scott, if I have succeeded; and may I ask you to send the child over?"

The doctor bowed, and opened the door.

"I will come down and assist you mount. Your groom is with you, I trust?"

"Oh, yes!" Lady Coningham smiled another farewell to Mrs. Graham, and was passing out, when a thought struck her. "Suppose," she said hurriedly, "suppose I cannot do this, what will become of the child?"

"She must go to the workhouse," replied Dr. Scott, gloomily; "my hands are too full already, as your ladyship knows, and there is no other alternative."

Lady Coningham could not repress a shudder.

Was so ill couldn't even sweep the floor.

N... nks to Carnol, she can work sixteen hours a day without fatigue.

He... story—"When a young... was knocked down by a horse and trap in London, England. I was kicked in my side and head. In later years I always had a cramped feeling in my left side if I sat too long. Five days out of seven I was never well. I underwent an operation and my doctor told me that my bottom rib was growing up over the other and caused my back to be one mass of inflammation and lumbago. He also said that my kidneys were affected. Even sweeping gave me pain. My operation took place in Brazil, South America. After my operation I had a nervous breakdown with insomnia. One time I didn't sleep for three months day or night. My doctor advised me to go home to England for a change. I stayed in England only a short time, but couldn't sleep. I then came to Canada. I have been here two and a half years and have been laid up now and again. I have also been a great sufferer from ulcers in the mouth due to stomach and my food has given me trouble. One night my husband brought home a bottle of Carnol and I still take it. I can honestly say now that the ulcers are gone. Your great tonic Carnol has been my salvation, for I can now work with anyone. I cook and care for fourteen, nine men, four children and myself, so that's a good proof that I am feeling all. All my friends are telling me that I am looking well. I can work from five o'clock in the morning till nine and ten at night. My friends here in Timmins say, "Don't you find it very hard work?" I say, "Oh, no, I take my Carnol and that helps me." I find the days all too short, I wake up in the morning fresh and sleep as sound as a bell. It would take too much of your time to tell you how I have suffered. It was nothing for me to be taken like one dying, from my tongue to my feet. I could just feel my heart beating. My husband or anyone near me had to rub me until I could feel life return to my side. This seems to have completely left me. I am thankful to think I have come to Canada to find so valuable a tonic as Carnol."—Mrs. J. Drew, P.O. Box 304, Timmins, Ont. 7-24

"That must never be," she said decidedly. "I must arrange with Morris. Many thanks. Good-bye!"

Mrs. Graham rose early the next morning. Her sleep had been troubled and restless; but the child had never moved, and still slept on placidly as she dressed herself quietly. Dr. Scott was announced about half past eight, and his face showed that he had gained no further information.

"The post office can give me no clue," he said. "They recollect the woman 'M.', and describe her accurately; but she received no letters save three addressed to her initial; consequently we are just where we were. Lady Coningham has sent her groom to say that Mrs. Morris will receive the child, so when she is dressed I had better take her over there myself."

Mrs. Graham assented with a sigh, and then rang for the maid to assist her in preparing Margery for the journey. The little one was very good; she submitted to her bath in brightness, and only now and then would turn her head to look for her mother. Already she seemed to know Mrs. Graham, and raised her lips many times to be kissed, her childish affection sending a pang of pain through the woman's heart. At last all was ready; the little gray coat well brushed and repaired, was donned, a silk handkerchief tied over the red gold curls, and the beloved parrot clutched in a tight embrace. Mrs. Graham knelt for one brief moment by the small form, and a silent prayer went up to Heaven for mercy and protection; then she led the child to the doctor.

"I will write from Edinburgh," she said hurriedly; "perhaps, after all, I shall be able to manage something in the future; and here—handing two sovereigns to the doctor—"is my small share toward present expenses. When will the inquest be?"

"To-day," replied Dr. Scott, picking Margery up in his arms.

"And she will be buried where?" again asked Mrs. Graham quickly.

"It must be a pauper's funeral," he answered, sadly; any other would cost too much.

"Can we not get up a subscription? The railway company should give something. It seems so dreadful that she should be buried in a pauper's grave, with no stone above her."

"I will do my best to prevent it," Dr. Scott said, kindly. "Your suggestion about the railway is good, and I will communicate with the directors to-day. Whatever happens in the future, you, madame, have acted nobly, and this child owes you a debt of gratitude."

"Ah, I wish I could keep her with me always!" Mrs. Graham responded, kissing the little cheek once more. "I must say good-bye now. I will write to you in a day or two. Will you let me know if any news reaches you, and where you bury the poor mother?"

"I will," answered the doctor; then he turned away and carried the child, still happy and unconscious of her terrible loss, down the stairs, to his trap, and, taking the reins, he drove rapidly through the town to the village of Hurstley.

CHAPTER III.

"Stuart, where are you going?" The question was put in a cold, sharp voice, and came from a lady sitting at her writing-desk in a spacious window-recess overlooking extensive grounds. She was a handsome man, with rather massive features and a profusion of dark-brown hair artistically arranged. Her eyes, of a light green-gray shade, were fixed at this moment on a young man standing in an easy, graceful attitude outside the French window.

"Going, mother?" he responded. "Nowhere in particular. Do you want me?"

Mrs. Croble examined her firm white hands for one brief second. "Have you forgotten what to-day is?" she asked, quietly.

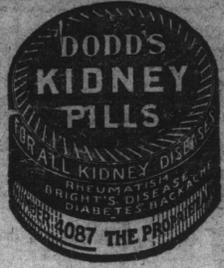

The young man pondered, puckered his handsome brows, and pretended to be lost in doubt.

"I really forget," he answered, after a while, looking up with a mischievous twinkle in his brown eyes. "Thursday, I believe; but you have your almanac close to your hand, mother."

DECOYS.

"Mother, oh mother," the young duck said.

"They are feeding there in that wild rice bed!"

"Child," said the mother, "fly straight ahead!"

"Look," said the ducklings, "they swim around. See how they sport on that feeding ground!"

"Wait," said the mother, "I hear no sound."

"See, their dress is like yours and mine."

"Child, you are hungry, and rice is fine. But fly and wait for a safer sign!"

"Mother, I'm going to my brothers there. Down to feed where there's rice to spare!"

"Child," cried the mother, "beware! beware!"

"Strange," thought the duckling, "where rice is sweet. These brothers and sisters of mine won't eat! And what is that tied so fast to their feet?"

Then a shot rang out, and the wings so fleet.

Were all in vain against man's deceit. And a young bird fell where the rice was sweet.

Mother bird, mother bird, high in air. Youth is impatient of wisdom's care. It will rush for the rice as you cry "beware!"

SEQUEL TO ALLEGED THEFT FROM SOMERSET HOUSE.

Their handling of a difficult case earned for a number of Scotland Yard detectives the warm praise of Mr. Graham Campbell, the Bow-street magistrate—Victor Worth, 27, of Montague-road, Richmond, a clerk employed at the Bank of England, and Stanley Graham, 45, commission agent, of Pagoda-avenue, Richmond, were charged with being concerned together in stealing and receiving £850 in Treasury notes from the Accountant-General's office, Somerset House.—It was alleged that on Nov. 22, while on sick leave from the bank, Worth went to Somerset House wearing a wig, a false moustache, and tinted glasses. Upon representing that he had been sent by the Bank of England, he was handed ten boxes containing £2,124 in Treasury notes, and disappeared with £850 worth. Most of the notes were alleged to have been traced to the possession of Graham, with whom Worth was stated to have had betting transactions.—The magistrate intimated his intention of committing defendants for trial—Worth for stealing the notes and Graham for receiving part of them, knowing them to have been stolen. The case, however, was formally adjourned in order that it should stand over until the January Sessions at the Old Bailey.

—Mr. Baker, prosecuting, expressed the appreciation of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue at the action of the police in this matter.—Inspector Groves, Det.-sergeant Bennett, and Detectives Burt and Rundle.—The magistrate remarked that he entirely agreed. The case—a difficult and complicated one—had been investigated with great thoroughness and care.—

100 Per Cent. Strike in Sydney Forbidden by U. M. W. A.

Work in Sydney Mines to Continue Pending Agreement—Majority in Favor of Church Union is 6404—Harry Furniss Noted Cartoonist is Dead.

GENEROUS BUT IMPROBABLE.
PARIS, Jan. 15. The British Cabinet proposes only a demand from the Allies an amount which Great Britain's payments to the United States for her debts exceed the amount she receives from Germany.

WORK WILL CONTINUE.
SYDNEY, Jan. 15. Although the present wage controversy between Besco and the U. M. W. employees at midnight, all the corporation's mines in Cape Breton will operate as usual under present rates to-morrow; it being mutually agreed that work will continue at the present rates pending the reaching of a decision.

100 PER CENT. STRIKE FORBIDDEN.
GLACE BAY, Jan. 15. Telegraphic instructions from President Lewis of the U. M. W. A., positively forbids the miners of District 26 embarking upon a 100 per cent strike it is learned here. The orders of the International chief have been passed along to the locals in consequence of proposals made in certain quarters that in event of a rupture, engineers, firemen and pumpmen be withdrawn and the mines left to drown. President Lewis forbids such action on the pain of loss of international support in further proceedings.

Gigantic Film at the Nickel Monday
"REVELATION" HALLED AS TRULY BIG FILM.
Hailed as the finest story of the year, Metro's special production of "Revelation," by Mabel Wagnalls, will come to the Nickel Theatre on Monday. This picture, which tells the story of a girl model of the Paris Montmartre who found her soul when posing as the Madonna of an old legend, is said to be the greatest directorial achievement of George D. Baker, who has had such successes to his credit as "Slave of Desire," "Toys of Fate" (with Nazimova) and many others.

BANK SETTLEMENT FOR NOVEMBER.
OTTAWA, Jan. 15. The bank settlement for November shows a marked decrease in both assets and liabilities of the Canadian banks at the close of that month. Compared with October a drop of approximately sixty millions in total assets and fifty millions in total liabilities is shown. Savings deposits held by the banks increased by over forty millions during the month, but current loans held in Canada fell off.

A THREAT FROM CANADA.
LONDON, Jan. 15. The Canadian Government threatens to withdraw altogether from the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley this year if the proposed ban of the Society of Motor Manufacturers on the exhibition of Canadian made cars is permitted by the Exhibition authorities.

DR. GRENFELL IN EGYPT.
Word received in Montreal from Dr. Wilfred Grenfell stated he was then in Egypt and expected to spend Xmas in Palestine. The International Grenfell Association insisted upon Dr. Grenfell's taking a prolonged holiday, owing to ill health. Dr. Grenfell sent greetings to all interested in Labrador work.

CHURCH UNION FIGURES.
TORONTO, Jan. 15. From reports received by the Church Union Bureau of Information up to noon to-day, 676 Presbyterian congregations have decided to enter the United Church of Canada, while 155 have opposed the merger. A summary by provinces follows:—British Columbia, for 24, against 3; Alberta, for 40, against 6; Saskatchewan, for 286, against 10; Ontario, for 229, against 111; Quebec for 43, against 10; Nova Scotia for 51, against 12; Prince Edward Island for 12, against 3; totals, for 676, against 155.

GIRL OF 16 SHOTS HER MOTHER.
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15. Dorothy Ellington, aged 16, arrested here to-day after her mother had been found shot to death, told the police she did the shooting because her mother had ordered her to stay in at nights and forbade her keeping an appointment Tuesday night.

A SUMMARY OF THE BALLOTS.
TORONTO, Jan. 15. A summary of the ballots cast in Canada on the Church Union question to date is as follows:—Total ballots cast, 80,304; for union, 43,354; against union, 36,950; majority for union, 6,404. In addition 401 congregations have entered union without voting.

HARRY FURNISS IS DEAD.
LONDON, Jan. 15. Harry Furniss, Caricature Artist, Author and Lecturer, well known for his connection with Punch, and for his work in American Magazines and his lecture tours in North America, died here to-day, aged 71.

BELIEVES NUTTING WILL TURN UP.
MONTREAL, Jan. 15. H. E. Greening, of Hamilton, Ont., President of the Touring Club of America, said today he believed there had been too much premature mourning over William W. Nutting, of New York and his companions, who set out last summer from Norway to follow the trail of the Vikings to America one thousand years ago. He said their craft, The Leif Erickson, was made in the home of stanch boat building, and that it would withstand any seas it might encounter on the voyage. He believes there is good grounds for hope that the Leif Erickson and her crew will turn up safely.

Secret of Happiness
The greatest menace on earth to happiness is the ill health with which so many women are afflicted. This young woman is subject to pain and irregularities, the mother to the tortures of displacements with consequent pains, aches and nervousness. —the middle aged woman to the uncomfortable conditions caused by this critical age. The one remedy to control these conditions and restore the system to a normal healthy condition is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for fifty years has been restoring sick and ailing women to health and happiness.

Personal

We were glad to see P. F. Halley, buyer for Halley & Co., of St. John's, who arrived in Boston last week on business for his firm. Mr. Halley reports conditions in Newfoundland improving and looks forward with confidence to a successful business year all over the Island. He left for New York on Sunday.

Another visitor was Michael Connors of the West End, St. John's, who has been in Boston for the past two years. Mr. Connors is at present employed with the Whiting and Adams Branch Co.

We were pleased to receive a communication from J. Harold Way, an old Bonavista boy, who is "winning his spurs" in his adopted country, Mr. Way, who is a graduate of law of McGill University, is now in Vermont, and this year received the appointment of Principal of the High School and Town Superintendent of Education in West Charleston.

Mr. Way's many friends, in Newfoundland and elsewhere will be glad to learn of his success, and the "Weekly" trusts that his recent appointment is but the stepping-stone to further advancement.

Mr. Geo. R. White, formerly of Trinity, and for many years conductor on the cross-country train in Nfld., was a welcome visitor at our office. Mr. White has been in the U.S.A. for eighteen years, and for the past fifteen years has been connected with the Machine Composition Co. of Boston.

Miss Gladys Roberts, daughter of J. H. and Mrs. Roberts of St. John's, is visiting her cousin, Geo. F. Taylor, Chelsea, Miss Roberts is a graduate nurse of Long Is. College Hospital, New York, and at present holds a responsible position with that institution.

We were glad to welcome at our office as visitors, Mrs. Henrietta Tapp, formerly of St. John's, and now of Boston; Mrs. H. H. Parsons and her daughter, of Haverhill, former Harbor Graduates; Geo. F. C. Taylor, the recently elected alderman of Chelsea; Robert Swain, of Calvert, Perryland District, who has been in Boston for the past 18 months engaged with many other Newfoundlanders fishing out of East Boston; Rev. Dr. John Squires, and son, Rev. Dr. Charles Squires, of Wellesley and Lynn, respectively, and well known Newfoundlanders; John S. Johnston, whose father ran the old tannery near Ronnie's Bridge; Mrs. Edward Hynes, of Cambridge, accompanied by her daughter; and many others who drop in at intervals to find out the news from the old home land.

More Delay in Excavations at King Tut's Tomb
Cairo, Jan. 6.—Negotiations for further excavations of King Tutankhamen's Tomb are once more at a deadlock, because Howard Carter now claims half the contents of the tomb for the estate of the late Earl of Carnarvon who financed his explorations. The executors of the estate abandoned this claim last year and the Egyptian government now refuses to consider it from Carter. If he persists the government expects to take the matter to the courts, where it anticipates no difficulty in winning. When asked if work would be resumed in the near future, Carter said: "I am afraid the near future is rather far distant."

St. Bon's Boys at the Casino

Last night a full house had gathered at the Casino when the curtain rose on "The Double Triumph" presented by the students of St. Bonaventure's College. The highest expectations were realized in the manner in which the youthful performers conceived and portrayed the various phases of the story of General Placidus and his contemporaries. One was almost irresistibly taken back to the first years of the second century so vivid was the setting in scenery and costume. With watchful attention the audience followed the actors, all of whom won unstinted praise and applause, so that there was not a single lull during the eight scenes. The tableau with which the play concluded was so well executed that it was most impressive. In four Christian Martyrs were burned at the stake, the fire being such a good representation of the reality that one would easily have believed it real. When the "flames" were in full control and the plight of the martyrs most desperate, a large and brilliant cross was made to appear over the burning figures. Above it was a illuminated crown which imparted to all the feeling that "the darkest hour is the hour before dawn." The effect was most telling and was a fitting climax to a grand performance. During the intervals there were songs, violin selections, recitations and dances, as well as a high-class rendition of music by the Mount Caval Band. Each of these items proved most acceptable as was seen from the insistent demands for "encores." That the College boys, one and all, acquitted themselves admirably goes without saying, yet it would not be unfair to single out for a special word of praise F. W. Donnelly, who as the leading character, Placidus, gave an exhibition that one would expect only from an actor of long experience. The part of his faithful friend, Rufus, was cleverly filled by J. Dawson, while J. V. Kelly, as Stella, won the admiration of all for his realistic interpretation of his part as wife of Placidus. L. Hynes in the role of Trajan made a decided hit, as also did G. Higgins as Pope Felix. The sword fight, was a thrilling spectacle to which the fall of J. Lee, the defeated combatant, added a superb climax. Others such as Little Toddie Meaney, F. Wood, G. Lannon, A. Jackman, J. Bradshaw, A. Dunne, H. Kelly, J. Mahar, etc., etc., deserve great praise and in fact there was not one in the very large cast about whom the same could not be said. In no small measure was the success of the entertainment due to the assistance of Mr. J. Phelan, whose skill as a violinist gave an added charm to many of the scenes; to Misses Murphy and Berrigan, who helped with the costumes; to Captain O'Grady, Mr. McCaffrey and Mr. White whose untiring efforts at "make up" work gave the necessary finishing touches to what nature had left undone. Finally to the management, Messrs. Holmes and McCoan, a mode of praise is due for the courteous and efficient assistance which was such a large contribution to the successful staging of "The Double Triumph."

Star of the Sea Association of Holyrood

HOLD ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Star of the Sea Association took place in their hall at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 15th. A large gathering of members was present to hear the reports of the past year's proceedings and to elect their officers for the coming year. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The roll of members was called and the Secretary and Treasurer's reports were read to the meeting, discussed and accepted. The Secretary's report showed a large increase in membership during the year, the total being a record one, and the Treasurer's report showed the greatest accumulation of cash reserves in the history of the Association.

Grateful thanks were tendered to manager Hannon and his capable troupe of young ladies and gentlemen who gave so unsparringly of their time, talents and efforts to produce successfully the St. Patrick's night play and to help out the Association in the good work it is doing. The packed houses attracted by this troupe and the handsome proceeds of their entertainments show how generously the public appreciate their efforts to augment the funds of the Association, and to place on a higher scale the social amusements of the community.

Mr. R. Dwyer, the Secretary, having resigned his position of School Teacher at the end of the school year, after forty years of service, was duly recognized and honoured by his pupils. The Association took occasion to recognize the lengthy service of their old Secretary, and voted to present him with an address and a suitable gift to mark their appreciation of his valuable services to the Association since its foundation.

Some familiar faces present at the last annual meeting were missing from this. Their seats were vacant, and three worthy brother members, Laurence Barron, Michael O'Rourke, and Matthew J. Dwyer, had laid down the burden of life; some prematurely, others although advanced old age. Notes of sympathy and Death Benefits have been sent to the proper relatives of the deceased brothers.

The officers having resigned their seats, J. A. Hannon, was appointed Chairman to conduct the election of new officers, with Messrs. J. J. Maloney and J. J. Carroll as check clerks and Felix Byrne and Wick Byrne (Jr.) tellers. Mr. Hannon was repeatedly pressed to place himself in nomination for President for the third term, but he declined to undertake the responsibilities of President the coming year, owing to the pressure of other work. An unanimous call was made for the veteran W. P. Walsh, who enters on his fourth term as President. Chairman Hannon declared the result of the election as follows:

President—W. P. Walsh, elected.

Vice-President—M. C. Dunphy, re-elected.

1st Asst. V.P.—J. J. Maloney, re-elected.

2nd Asst. V.P.—J. J. Crawley, elected.

Treasurer—J. J. Carroll, re-elected.

Asst. Treasurer—Daniel Walsh, elected.

Secretary—R. Dwyer, J.P., re-elected.

Grand Marshal—Patrick Walsh (Sr.) re-elected.

Deputy G.M.—Wm. Byrne (Sr.), re-elected.

Custodian—Wm. Byrne (Jr.) re-elected.

Amusement Committee—F. Byrne, Walter Maloney, John Hickey, Herbert Fenney, William Byrne, Edward Joy and Theophilus Lacour.

The new officers were installed immediately, each suitably thanking the meeting for his election, and promising to do his part to make 1925 even a more prosperous year than that

SMILES THAT DON'T MAKE MEN HAPPY.

A great deal has been said in poetry and song about the beauty and desirability of the smile.

"A smile is the color that love wears, and cheerfulness and joy, it is the light in the window of the face," says Henry Ward Beecher.

But while there are smiles that make men happy, there are also smiles that make one more exasperated than any other expression of the face.

It is thinking especially of that little smile of superiority which is almost more exasperating than anything one can say or do.

She Keeps Her Temper BUT— I know a woman who prides herself on the fact that she keeps her temper and doesn't fly off the handle and say anything when she is annoyed.

But besides enraging him it did something else that wouldn't have pleased her so much. It made her learned," she says, "to keep still and let him talk. I just keep my lips closed. I should be ashamed to have as little self-control as he has. I won't say a thing to him and he will say the most outrageous things. I don't see how he can."

I had the misfortune to be present once when an acrimonious discussion was going on between these two. I found that she told the truth about herself. She held her tongue and kept her lips closed. But she didn't tell the whole truth. On those closed lips there sat the most superior and smug little smile. Its sarcasm was more cutting than anything she could have said. Its superiority was more maddening than any taunt.

Makes People Want To Throw Things— It was the kind of smile that makes outraged mates want to throw things.

Which, though she would never have admitted it, was probably just the result she subconsciously wanted to accomplish.

But besides enraging him it did something else that wouldn't have pleased her so much. It made her ordinarily charming face very unlovely. Even I, who sympathized with her to a certain extent, could hardly help seeing that.

"A disagreeable smile," says an old philosopher, "distorts the lines of beauty and is more repulsive than a frown."

Look In The Glass.

Beware that kind of a smile. Maybe you don't know when you have it on. But if you find yourself feeling very superior and sarcastic, just go look in the glass and see if that superiority and sarcasm has seeped through onto your face. I don't believe you will like the result if it has.

Shell Fuse Royalties

Krupps' Remarkable Claim — Aftermath of War-Time Munitions Demand.

Royalties on millions of shell fuses limited, during the first three years manufactured by Messrs. Vickers, of the war are being claimed by Krupps, the great German armament firm. This remarkable suit will be heard by the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal. The claim is based on an agreement between creditor and debtor firms dated Oct. 1, 1902, which was to remain in force until Sept. 30th, 1917. Obligations incurred by Vickers, Limited, up to August 4th, 1914, under this agreement have, it is understood, been met, and the accounts and payments now demanded and concerned with fuses made between the outbreak of war and the date when the agreement would, under normal conditions, have expired. Krupps ask for the delivery of accounts up to Sept. 30, 1917, of all sorts of time fuses and combined time and percussion fuses of any description whatsoever manufactured by Vickers, Limited, and by other persons, firms, or corporations authorized or instructed by debtor firm. They further ask for an order that an amount of 14d. for each fuse up to a specified size and of 18d. for each fuse above that size contained in these accounts, together with interest at 5 per cent, shall be treated as a debt from debtor to creditor, and dealt with under the provisions of Article 296 of the Treaty of Versailles. Messrs. Vickers, in their response to the claim contend that there is no debt due, and that Krupps are not entitled to any of the accounts claimed. They assert that the agreement of Oct. 1, 1902, was dissolved on August 4th, 1914, by the outbreak of war, or was dissolved as from August 4th, 1914, by Article 239a of the Treaty of Versailles. They further rely upon Article 296 of the Treaty, by reason whereof they assert that creditors' claim is barred. It is submitted that the time fuses and combined time and percussion fuses authorized by the agreement to be made by Vickers, Limited, were made for the use of His Majesty's Government or an Allied or Associated Power, or by persons acting on behalf or with the assent of the British Government only as from August 4th, 1914. By order dated July 12, 1915, Vickers, Limited, was declared to be a "controlled" establishment from that date. It is also stated that by Order dated Sept. 15th, 1916, the agreement was absolutely determined by Order of the Board of Trade, made by virtue of the powers conferred upon them by the Trading with the Enemy Act, 1916. Finally, it is contended that the terms of the agreement were not carried out by Krupps after August 4th, 1914, inasmuch as after that date creditor firm did not communicate to Vickers any improvements effected in their designs or processes of manufacture of the fuses. It is understood that if Krupps were to succeed in their claim the greater part of the money would have to be found by the British Government, as Vickers, Limited, have been indemnified by the Ministry of Munitions and the Admiralty against any such claim by the German firm as that which is now before the Tribunal.

The Right to Kill

LORD HEWART ON MAN'S DEFENCE OF HOME.

In quashing a sentence of twelve months' hard labour on Israel Hussey, a coloured man, for unlawful wounding, the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Hewart, said at the Court of Criminal Appeal recently:—

The law is that in defence of his house the owner or his family may kill a trespasser who would forcibly dispossess him, in the same manner he might, by law, kill in self-defence a man who attacks him personally; with this distinction, however, that in defending his house he need not retreat as in other cases of self-defence, for that would be giving up his house to his adversary.

In this case that important distinction was not brought to the jury's attention, so that there may have been a miscarriage of justice.

Hussey was released and expressed his pleasure by praying Heaven "to bless your lordships."

In his review of the case, Lord Hewart said it appeared that Hussey had been ordered to vacate his room, but he refused to go without proper notice. Two people attempted to turn him out, taking as methods of persuasion a hammer, a spanner, a poker, and a chisel, and Hussey fired a revolver through a hole in the door, injuring his assailants.

His case was that he had to protect his wife and family, and he produced to the police a seven-chambered revolver, while in his pocket was a pamphlet entitled "The New Rent Act Explained."

Mosul, a City of Romance

(By A TRAVELLER.)

Mosul, to which the League of Nations is sending a Commission, is really a city of romance.

Fifty years ago it was a tangled confusion of medieval clumps of buildings redeemed only by the iridescent colour of the East. Its palms were etched against the glorious blue of its sky. The golden domes and minarets of its mosques rose above the squalid mass of masonry. Oriental towns seem to us in decay from their birth, but Mosul was in real decay ever since the construction of the Suez Canal put an end to the East and West stream of trade across Mesopotamia.

The use which modern science found for the oil which oozes up all over the region made Mosul once more a prize worth fighting for. But this is not the real romance of Mosul.

A ragged boatbridge leads from it to the opposite bank of the broad green Tigris, and on the plain at the other side are a few mounds which represent all that is left of what was once the proudest city of the world—ancient Nineveh.

Until the last century no one in Mosul—or anywhere else for the matter of that—knew what treasure was hidden in those mounds. The very name of Nineveh had perished in the region. If any European ventured that way natives would be sure that he had come to see the marvel of the minaret of one of their mosques.

The minaret is like the famous church-steeple at Chesterfield. It leans to one side in what seems a dangerous fashion; to the Mohammedans it was a standing miracle.

"PIOUS" TOWER.

Ages ago, they said, Mohammed had come to Mosul, and the tower of the mosque had humbly bent to do him reverence, and the Prophet left it leaning as a monument of piety.

The European traveller generally knew that Mohammed had never been in Mosul, and that in any case this minaret was not built until six centuries after his time. The real wonder lay in the despoiled mounds beyond the river, and it was a great Englishman, Layard, who unearthed it.

As usual, we found that the Greeks, who had told us all about Nineveh, were far astray. It was not a hundred miles square, but ten miles. A mighty city, none the less, for three thousand years ago, and it must have been most impressive.

Its "Kingsway," as the main street was called, was sixty yards wide. And the Kings were so jealous to keep it stately that we have a "building regulation" of the time ordering that any citizen who builds a house which encroaches on the thoroughfare shall be hanged from a pole on his new house.

The great mound which covered the pitiful ruins of the Royal palace has been fairly well explored, and the British Museum is rich in its strange treasures. But the other large mound, which probably covers the site of the great temple, has escaped the sacrilegious excavator in a singular way.

A small village straggles over it, and in the centre is a famous mosque. It is the mosque of St. Jonah, and it contains not only the alleged body of the prophet, but one of the most wonderful relics of the world.

The visitor is shown—and one does not need to be a zoologist to smile—a tooth of the whale that swallowed Jonah!

Times Handles Admiral Bacon Without Gloves

SEVERE CASTIGATION FOR SAIL
Severe Castigation for Sailor-Writer, Who Attacked Admiral Beatty.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Commenting on Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon's attack on Admiral Beatty The Times today says:

"The Jutland scandal," the book in which Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon is said to 'ridicule' the reputation of Admiral Beatty as a tactician and a sea-fighter, is his second publication since the war. In the preface to 'The Dover Patrol,' he exclaimed: 'Was there ever a greater absurdity than the kind of criticism which was indulged in after the Battle of Jutland?' Characterizing Jellicoe's evolutions as 'naval manoeuvres of a kind which would have been arranged by a healthy plumber with an elastic conscience. One thing I particularly recall about the luncheon was that, in an unguarded moment, we had a generous helping of old-fashioned fruit pudding—perhaps you know the kind I mean—compounded of nuts and fruit, candied peel, eggs, wine, etc. etc. hidden with artful cunning under a coating of rich gooey sauce. The fact that I am constantly reminded by an increasing equator to shun certain favorite dishes was for the moment forgotten and I could no more resist the temptation of that pudding than a small boy could of 'hooking' a feed of early harvest apples when the farmer is out of sight. Well, during the rest of that day and night, I was constantly reminded of the uncertainty of life, and that this type of gastronomic construction was never intended as a steady diet for a stout person of advancing years—with a large family—and very little insurance. The risk was too great. Since then I have revised my interpretation of the old adage, 'The proof of the pudding is in the eating.' The way I think it should read is 'The proof of the pudding is the way one feels after eating.'—Exchange.

"In the epilogue to this book Admiral Bacon reviewed the British qualities that had worsened the Germans at sea and held them in their ports in this style:

"'L'audace, toujours l'audace,' the instinct of 'going for an enemy when ever seen; the resolve never to brook an insult at sea; the conviction that a glorious example is worth the loss of a ship; that it is 'dogged that does it'; that our countrymen have always been top-dog at sea and intend to remain so; that constant though should be to facilitate action, not to avoid it."

"These trappings of rhetoric seemed to fit David Beatty better than any other naval officer who came out of the war with prestige, but Sir Reginald Bacon in 'The Jutland Scandal' tears them from him as though he had been barely masquerading. Beatty committed tactical blunders at Jutland. He smashed at the enemy and upon losing two ships beat a retreat without determining the enemy's position for the information of Admiral Jellicoe. It was the latter on his own initiative who manoeuvred the British fleet between the enemy and his harbor—Beatty had nothing to do with it. So that Beatty's glory in the action is a mere fungus that falls to pieces at a touch.

"The heinous charge of allowing blameless colleagues to be censured without saying the word that would clear them is fastened upon the man who succeeded Jellicoe in command of the Grand Fleet. All this would be pointed out if true. Until the full text of 'The Jutland Scandal' is available for analysis and for comparison with other accounts of the battle, one can only wonder how, if Admiral Bacon is right, Beatty could have been imposed upon his countrymen as another Nelson. Winston Churchill's comment upon this sensational book is: 'Sir Reginald seems very angry with Beatty, doesn't he? I presume he is angry with me also, as I appointed Beatty. I am very proud of it.'"

"In 'The World Crisis,' Winston Churchill tells how Admiral Pakenham caught him by the sleeve when he was visiting the Lion after the Dogger Bank sea fight, and 'with restrained passion in his voice,' said of Beatty: 'Nelson has come again!' Churchill, in appointing Beatty to the command of the battle cruisers, had 'jumped' him over many officers. Jellicoe will probably come to the defence of his brilliant lieutenant, for in his report on Jutland he said: 'Sir David Beatty once again showed his fine qualities of gallant leadership, firm determination and correct strategic insight . . . the services rendered by him, not only on this but on two previous occasions, have been of the very greatest value.' The spectacle of the commander of the Dover patrol trying to pull down the fighting admiral who upheld the traditions of the British navy may prove to be the real scandal of Jutland.'—Montreal Daily Star.

The Proof of the Pudding

One afternoon not long ago, I had luncheon with an 'out-of-town' customer at one of those bedizened hostellers where you must buy your tea back from the gentlemanly burglar at the door, and where prices seem to have been arranged by a healthy plumber with an elastic conscience. One thing I particularly recall about the luncheon was that, in an unguarded moment, we had a generous helping of old-fashioned fruit pudding—perhaps you know the kind I mean—compounded of nuts and fruit, candied peel, eggs, wine, etc. etc. hidden with artful cunning under a coating of rich gooey sauce. Sergeant Murphy on Winston Churchill

In the English Review A. P. Gardiner's "Sergeant Murphy" holds forth as follows to his friend Heddle on the appointment of Winston Churchill to Chancellor of the Exchequer:

"You see, Heddle, Winston's too big a man to be ignored, he friend or foe. He's the Wan-Man-Band of politics. There's scarcely an instrument he hasn't played from Colonies to Air, and from Home Office to Munitions, and he knows them all backwards. Be the Holy! It wouldn't surprise me if he ended up as Archbishop of Canterbury. He'd be just as much at home in that job as he would be as walking delegate to the Hatters' Union. And jobs like President of the Royal College of Surgeons or ballet-master at Drury Lane he'd take in his stride. He bars no stake and no system. He's equal to anybody and superior to most at everything, from clipping a polo pony to makin' war. He's a great fellow, Heddle—and, thank Heavens he knows it."

"All blooming fine," remarked Heddle grudgingly, "but I don't see why Mr. Baldwin made him Chancellor of the Exchequer."

"You don't!" said the Sergeant. "Well, listen to me. Mr. Baldwin knew what he was about. Do you think he'd run the risk of puttin' Winston anywhere else? Wherever Winston is that's the big job. And you wouldn't have enough tranquility to cover a sixpence if you put him in charge of the Navy or the Air Force, or any other place where there's money to be spent.

"But the Chancellor's job is to see that the other Ministers don't exceed their housekeeping allowance, and I don't envy the fellow that comes along to Winston to ask for another million."

"One paper, I see, calls him the stormy petrel of politics," remarked Heddle.

"Petrol is right," replied the Sergeant. "A threemillion dollar petrel. He'd be his own stuff if it weren't for the fact that he's a good fellow."

Airship Drawn by Eagles

DESIGNS OF EARLY AERIAL PIONEERS.

The fascinating story of the birth progress of flying in this country at last found an adequate historical basis.

His new volume, "The History of Aerostatics in Great Britain," published by the Oxford University Press, J. E. Hodgson has brought together a mass of material of the greatest interest.

Hodgson is not only a student of the famous authorities and writers who have written, since the days of Roger Bacon, on the subject of flight, but he is also a collector of early colour-prints and engravings going to early balloons and the strange contrivances that have been dreamed of by would-be pioneers.

Not the least interesting feature of the volume, indeed, is provided by the 150 illustrations from contemporary sources.

Birds for Engines.

These days of rigid airships, carrying thousands of miles, are coming to look, for instance at aerial ships. Designed in 1835, it is intended that this curious contrivance should be drawn by teams of eagles on each side!

The birds were to be controlled and by one of the men seated in a gondola below the hull, while another was to work a fan-shaped rudder to the aid of cords.

Sketch and strange designs played a part in the history of aerial experiments down to the latter half of the last century, where Mr. . . . closes his history.

As emerging here and there, even in the early stages, one finds useful ideas that were later to prove the basis for fruitful experiment.

The story of flying in this country, of course, really opens with the 18th century chemist. The researches of Cavendish into the qualities of hydrogen prompted Dr. Joseph Black to suggest that bladders filled with hydrogen would ascend. And from followed the experiments of the golders.

It is flying had its legendary history before that. That was the apocryphal story of Bladud, the mythical tenth King of Britain, whose attempt at flight was said to have resulted in his death in 852 B.C.

As Taylor put it in his "Memorial of English Monarchs" (1622):—
"Bladud was by Bladud to perfection brought.
By Necromanticke Arts to flye he sought;
As from a Towre he thought to scale the sky.
He brake his necke, because he soard too high.
From which, no doubt, the seventeenth-century reader was intended to deduce useful moral lessons concerning "ambition that o'erleaps itself."

Elmer, or Oliver of Malmesbury, is reputed to have attempted a flight with wings about 1620; and that other learned Monk Roger Bacon, 200 years later, still thought that man might "beate the ayre after the manner of a flying bird."

Then there was John Damian, who is said to have attempted a flight from the top of Stirling Castle in the autumn of 1607.

He jocularly ascribed his fall to the fact that the hen's feathers of which his wings were partly made showed a natural affinity to return to the farmyard instead of maintaining flight in the air.

Later chapters tell in great detail and much humor the development of the balloon and the parachute, with an account of the evolution of mechanical flight.

Some of the proposed machines of the first half of last century were, indeed, fearfully and wonderfully conceived. But none, perhaps, was stranger than the "aerial steam carriage" of 1842, which was intended to convey passengers, troops, and Government despatches to China and India in a few days.

Inventors in those days, apparently, did not shrink from flying for big game.

Warned in Time

In a certain suburb there is a cottage the door of which must be raised a little to be opened, and for this purpose a hatchet is generally used. One night a knock came at the door and a youngster was sent to see who was there.

"Who is it?" inquired the boy.
"It's me," said the voice outside.
The youngster, recognizing the voice, shouted back: "It's Mrs. Murphy; get the hatchet."
Mrs. Murphy didn't wait.—Pittsburgh Courier.

HIRED GIRLS.

Matilda Jane was good as wheat, she flew around on nimble feet, and kept the cottage clean and neat, and dished up pleasing grub; and when we looked on her with pride, and said we'd never let her slide, she jumped her job to be the bride of J. Augustus Dubb. Lucretia lacked the smallest trace of household knowledge, and her face would stop an eight-day clock; for weeks we labored to impart such lessons as would make her smart; then she upset the apple cart by wedding Mr. Mock. The widowed Bridget got the job; she told us with a heartick sob that she was weary of the mob, of jazz and garish things; she only asked a place to stay till she was bent and old and gray, and then she flew the coop one day and married James J. Jings. And so they come and disappear; where are the maids of yesterday? They're baking bliss and brewing beer to please their wiser halves; and we who have the coin to hire as many girls as we desire, must groan and labor and perspire until we sprain our calves. The servant problem never shrinks; it never will while there are ginks to lure the girls with drugstore drinks and drives in silver cars; it never will while there are swains to guide the girls through quiet lanes and talk of love and golden chains beneath the smirking stars.

Dying Birds Leave Gem-Heaps

Little heaps of semi-precious stones scattered over the plains and hills of New Zealand, mark the last resting places of the moas, gigantic ostrich-like birds, only recently extinct. The moa, which was the largest bird that ever existed, carried pebbles in its gizzard, just as ordinary chickens do, to grind up its food, says Science Service (Washington). Since it lived largely on tough twigs of bushes, it needed especially hard stones. Where it lay down to die at last, the pebbles endured after even its bones had disappeared. Hence the little heaps of rounded chalcodony, quartz, chert, jasper, and quartzite, ranging in size from 2 1/2 inches in length and 2 ounces in weight downward. Prof. W. T. Lee, of the U. S. Geological Survey, who calls attention to this phenomenon, comments on the good judgment of these extinct birds in choosing jewel stones for use in their lapidary mills. "By judicious selection of material, these first families among diamond-cutters handed down lasting memorials to admiring posterity," is the way he puts it.

Women in Queer Trades in Britain

Interesting Statistics on How People Earn Their Living—382 Street Artists—Girl Glaziers and Slate Masons Among Many Occupations.

In all England and Wales there were in 1921 only 982 street artists, of whom 105 were women.

This is but one of the many curious facts to be gathered from a study of the "Census of Occupations," which has become available to the inquisitive at the price of 24s.

Of the male population of 13,901,108, only 1,788,330 were unoccupied or retired. Out of the total of 15,699,805 women and girls under the same classification, no fewer than 10,634,473 were registered as unoccupied.

By far the most populous occupation is that of personal service—including institutions, clubs, hotels, and so forth—which employed 1,676,425 women and 339,944 men, but of

Ask Grandma—She knows.

Experiments have been tried with a group of men and women students from the George Washington University, a group from the Howard University, and a number of taxi-drivers. In the group from the George Washington University there was very little difference in the reaction of the men and the women, each showing an average of about one-half of a second. In the case of Negro students of the Howard University, the tests proved that there is no difference in the races so far as this reaction is concerned.

The reaction of the taxi-drivers was more prompt, indicating either that drivers can be trained to respond more quickly or that those with a quick reaction seek and are selected for such positions as taxi-drivers. One of the men, who had been driving for fifteen years without an accident, showed a reaction of one-third of a second.

Add a little prepared mustard to the white sauce in which cauliflower is served.

Canned fruit juices should be saved and used in fruit cocktails or gelatin desserts.

Novel Time Tests

When it comes to stopping a motor-car quickly, race, sex, colour, and education do not count. But scientific tests show that experience and natural quickness affect the amount of time required for a driver to get his feet into action upon the brakes.

WARHATS IN FLIGHT.
LONDON, Jan. 16.
The British army has dealt a severe blow to the Wahabi forces of Ibn Saud, according to a despatch to the Arab press from Jerusalem. Quoting the Arab press it was stated that a band of Wahabis was defeated and that the Wahabis were driven into the woods.

REMAINS OF AEROPLANE FIGHT FOUND.
AMIENS, Jan. 16.
The remains of a German airplane and the skeleton of its pilot have been found in the forest of St. Pierre, Vaaz, a French battle plane which was shot down by a squad of artillery in a month. The French army says the debris of which there were two skeletons has been identified as belonging to the 10th squadron. Two German planes on Sept. 19, 1918, and fell into the woods.

ITALY CONSIDERS HIS POSITION IMPREGNABLE.
LONDON, Jan. 16.
Interviewed in Rome by a correspondent of the Daily Express, Premier Mussolini gave him the impression that he regards his position as impregnable and that anyway that power would never be wrested from the Italian Government in Italy without a struggle. The Premier said Mussolini seemed surprised that the Italian situation was considered serious. "Italy is not disturbed as having said," he said, "I am not disturbed by any other group. We have conflicts between political groups but that is not a national life."

NAVY REVENUE EXCEEDS EXPENDITURE.
PARIS, Jan. 16.
The Navy's Revenue for 1925 will exceed its expenditure by $4,000,000 ($1,815,000), according to a report of the Chamber Budget Committee Just

FRESH FISH PLAN SUGGESTED TO HALIFAX BOARD OF TRADE.

HALIFAX, Jan. 16.
Major Hugh Green, representing the fishing industry of Great Britain, arrived here yesterday, went before the Fisheries Committee of the Board of Trade to-day, where he was introduced by Hon. E. H. Arnold, Premier of Nova Scotia, and the gathering that of those whom he represented were ready to spend three hundred dollars in the development of the fishing industry of the British Commonwealth Government of Canada and provide shipping facilities and enable ocean freight rates on the Atlantic coast. Major Green said the English fishermen had had a slump during the past three years due to a change in the Gulf of St. Lawrence fishing grounds. He said he had been in Halifax for some time before the local authorities he was simply to acquaint them with what was proposed before going to Ottawa where he had an appointment with the Federal Government. He left for Ottawa this afternoon accompanied by General Garnet Green, who, while in Halifax, said he was on private business. The scheme as outlined by Major Green was to establish a fishing fleet in Halifax with three or four hundred vessels fishing out of port and a steamer sailing every two weeks to England with three thousand of fresh fish.

AMALGAM FOR FISHERIES DEVELOPMENT IN N.S.

HALIFAX, Jan. 16.
Approximately $2,000,000 of English money will be invested in the development of the fishing industry in Nova Scotia, if the Federal Government will turn some of the Merchant Navy boats over to the proposed fishing fleet, and with facilities for carrying fish, meat, and fruit and transport goods at reasonable rates. This was a statement made by Major Hugh A. Green of London yesterday. Major Green is on his way to Ottawa.

RESOLUTION OF GERMAN POLITICAL CRISIS.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.
Hon. Luther, former Lord of the Empire, and recent Minister of Finance, in Mars Strassmann Cabinet, is the new German Chancellor. He received his appointment this afternoon from President Ebert, after he assured the President that he would involve a workable solution from the German cabinet crisis. In the afternoon the Government, the first Conservative-Bourgeois government since the Republic was formed, will officially appear before the Reichstag to-morrow afternoon.

FRANCE DEBT ARRANGEMENT.

PARIS, Jan. 16.
The simultaneous publication of the correspondence between Winston Churchill, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, and M. Clementel, the French Finance Minister, on the subject of inter-allied debts is regarded as marking the resumption of negotiations with the object of solving this vexed problem. It is reported by Lord Curzon, then the Foreign Secretary, that the American debt at 14,200,000,000 francs, if, as it is calculated, held under the Dawes plan will amount to 22,000,000,000 francs. A part of this will amount to 10,000,000,000 francs, and France will have to pay the balance. It is stated that the balance may be paid, according to the method proposed for the final settlement.

Successful Card Party and Dance

A most successful card tournament and dance was held in St. Andrew's Club Rooms last night. The hall was filled to capacity and the music supplied for the dances by the 8-piece St. Andrew's Orchestra was the best yet. The prize winners in the card tournament were Mr. Geo. Cross and Mrs. Chas. Peet, Mr. A. Cahill and Miss McFarlane. The dance concluded in the wee sma' hours of the morning and everybody went home feeling happy though tired.
The committee for the Burns Night Celebration report heavy applications for tickets and this event promises to be the biggest success yet. The celebration takes place in the Galety Hall on the night of the holiday and the committee has been enlarged to ensure its patrons an enthusiastic time. It is expected that His Excellency and Lady Allardyce will attend.

London's Debt to a Miser

HOW A GREAT HOSPITAL WAS FOUNDED.
In a few days' time there is to be celebrated in London the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of Guy's Hospital, as well as that of the death of the man whose generosity, linked though it was with questionable business methods, conferred a lasting boon on suffering humanity.
The famous hospital that bears the name of Thomas Guy is known all over the world, not only for the healing work it does, but for the fact that many of the most eminent doctors of the past two centuries "walked" it in their student days.

Penury Amidst Plenty.
The life story of Thomas Guy is an interesting study in human nature. The son of a poor Bermondsey coal merchant and lighterman, he was apprenticed at an early age to a bookseller, and in time went into business on his own account, one of the least creditable transactions consisting of buying a large consignment of Bibles printed in Holland, and selling them illicitly in this country, in competition with the King's Printers. With the money thus made he set up as a stockbroker.
Soon he was known in the City as a man of considerable wealth. He became a member of Parliament and a governor of St. Thomas's Hospital, which then occupied a site close to what is now London Bridge Station. Guy added to his fortune by acquiring for cash, at half their proper value, the pay tickets issued to sailors, while the financial operations that led to the bursting of the South Sea Bubble also helped to increase his fortune. As a comparatively young man, Guy was reputed to be worth more than half a million pounds.

Saving The Candle.
He was of a penurious disposition, however, and as a bookseller he always had his meals in the shop, for fear of missing a possible customer; while he would not have the luxury of linen on his table, but ate off a newspaper.
It is recorded that he fell in love with his maid, whom he would have married but for the fact that she involved him in an expenditure of a few shillings more than he had bargained for in connection to some repairs to his shop front. Another example of his parsimony was afforded by his conduct when a friend called to ask his advice on a certain domestic matter.
"If that is all you have called about," said Guy, "we can discuss it just as well in the dark," and he blew out the farthing dip he had lighted in receiving his visitor.

Half A Million Patents A Year.
It is the paradox of his life that while he was miserly in every way so far as domestic affairs were concerned, he was extraordinarily open-handed in his capacity of Governor of St. Thomas's. He gave many thousands of pounds towards the maintenance of the hospital, and when its work outgrew it he bought a piece of land on the opposite side of the street and endowed an entirely new hospital, the Guy's of to-day.
It was opened for the first time on January 6th, 1725, only ten days after the death of its founder, who is buried under the roof which he just lived to see completed.
Not the least astonishing fact about the hospital is that, from the time of its founding right up to only forty years ago, no appeal for public support ever became necessary. This was due to the careful administration of the money left by Guy, and to a later legacy of £150,000 left by a Fife-shire resident. The work of the hospital has been carried on unceasingly ever since the day its doors first opened, and now it boasts a record of 10,000 in-patients and over half a million out-patients a year.

WHEN TIME STANDS STILL.
"I hear you gave a party last night, old chap. What was it to celebrate?"
"It was for my wife. It was the tenth anniversary of her thirtieth birthday."
—THE BITE.
PARTLY RIGHT.
"So Mrs. Blank has got a divorce. What was the trouble, incompatibility?"
"No, merely the first two syllables."
—Boston Transcript.
