The Rev. J. E. Warner, Rector, of Middleton, says:

"For more than twenty years I have been afflicted with Chronic Constipation. Have been treated by several physicians here and in the States, and have tried many of the cures advertised through the press without receiving any permanent benefit.

In consequence of the complications arising from this disease I have been obliged to undergo a painful surgical operation, and was compelled last year 40 give up work. About six months ago I consulted Dr. Miller, who gave me a box of his DINNER PILIS, and I can cheerfully testify that their effect in my case has been little less than magical. Since then I have recommended them to some of my friends, who have experienced like good results from their use and returned me their warnest thanks, and I confidently give them a public recommendation, as I The subscriber with Lime and Salt.

Select Ziterature. A Shot for Love. "There, Ella," said Captain Burnham, the ship "Westfield," to his daughter, a beauty of seventeen, as the craft was bowling along past the coast of South America, through the Caribbean Sea, "there is a chance for you to try your skill at archery." As he spoke, the skipper pointed at the beautiful little bird of a green and gold colour, which had perched itself on the end of the foretop-sail yardarm.

"No, para," answered Ella, decidedly: I will not shoot that poor bird." Her dark eyes softened as she watched he tiny creature aloft, pluming its wings,

An hour after the departure of the crew, Barton, the young first mate, went aloft on the foretop gallant yard, to see if he could discover the whereabouts of the light of the lanterns which they had taken with them. Ella was at this time on the quarter-deck, watching the dim figure of her lever aloft. All at once, just as the moon shed a flood of light behind a cloud, she beheld a hideous apparition clamber over the gangway. It was a Carib Indian, who, evidently aware of the absence of the crew, had come to the ship in a canoe to rob the vessel. A horrible-looking creature he was, tall and gaunt, with huge, angular joints, a shock of coarse black hair sticking up all over his head, fierce, round eyes, like those of some wild beast, a wide, distorted mouth,

—The liberal convention which is meeting this week in Ottawa is being watched with interest throughout the dominion no less by conservatives than by liberals. The idea of holding a general convention of the leading men of the party from the various provinces is, doubtless, a good one. A judicious line of action laid down at such a convention, so that there shall be but one watchword throughout the whole line of battle at the next general election, will very materially strengthen the liberal party. Nevertheless, such a course has its drawbacks, as it will strengthen the liberal party. Nevertheless, such a course has its drawbacks, as it will take a great deal of political wisdom to frame an aggressive policy that will not be two eged in its effect. The liberals of Ontario and Manitoba feel pretty strongly on the question of separate schools in the latter province, and the abolition of the French language in the territories; and on that language in the territories; and on that question they have the sympathy of a majority of protestant Canada. In Quebec, however, the feeling is just the opposite, and it is very much more intense. Quebec wants the system of separate schools and the dual language of Manitoba and the dual language of Manitoba and the Questions, it seems to us, that it would North-West perpetuated. On these two questions, it seems to us, that it would require the wisdom of a Solomon to mark out any definite line of action, should they be dealt with at all. It is true that in the House of Commons last winter a resolution was moved which both sections supported; but that was a compromise resolution aimed at the government. At this convention, however, something more than destructive criticism of the government would seem to be necessary. A good many people will expect the convention to construct as well as destroy, to build up as well as pull down; and while criticism of the government is all right in its place, a convention such as this

The World's Fair, now being held at Chicago, is likely to prove a collosal failure financially. The entire cost up to date is something like $33,000,000, and fully one half of this will have to be made up by recipits from various sources. In order to do this, an average of $200,000 per day must be taken. Thus far the average has been only about $25,000, a little over one-tenth the required amount. Newspapers are crying out against the railroad corporations and hotel people who, they claim, are keeping people away from the fair by their exhorbitant rates, but these have produced but little effect as yet.

There is a strong probability, however, that there will be a general cutting of rates before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs before the fair closes, and a good many are doubtless holding back till this occurs befo

It must be a year of caution, however, as the condition of affairs in the United States is not reassuring, and we may be more or less affected by it owing to our commercial relations with that country. It should also be a period of economy, and that applies to governments, cities, and municipalities, as well as the commercial community; for we have been spending too much money; there have been too many subsidies to railways, too many expensive works, and too much good money wasted. Those having charge of the purse strings will do well to draw them tightly during the coming year.

He is very symmetrical and highly finished, with plenty of substance; this, with his very speedy conformation, gives assurance that he will not only be fast, but that he possesses the power of his ancestors to transmit their good qualities to their offspring, as his colts are beginning to prove. It will be observed that he carries the same per cent of the producing blood that produced Nelson as if he were a son of that noted horse. In Ontario mildew is not a formidable enemy, it is easily combatted and rarely is at all injurious.

In fact it may be said that in the southern part of the province the vine is the most certain, and least irregular in returns of all the fruit crops grown. Free from the early September frosts which trouble the Rhine valley; a full month later in the advent of cloudy or rainy fall weather, which often interferes with the maturing and quality of the grape in middle and northern Europe, and without the necessity and expense of irrigation entailed on the grape growers of southern California, southern Ontario has a capability for grape growing that may well challenge the world. It is no wonder, there fore, that wine making has developed within a very few years to a considerable industry; that thousands of acres are now planted in vineyards and many hundreds of thousands of gallons of claret and other wines are an nually manufactured.

FRUIT IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The possibilities of British Columbia in fruit culture are very great. The mild coast climate permits of the civilization of all the fruits of eastern Canada and several others besides. On the Dominion Experimental farm at Agassiz the fig tree, the almond and the pomegranate are grown. In the interior valleys, behind the Coast range, the winter cold puts limitations on the cultivation of some fruits, but the summers are much warmer than on the coast, and the conditions tend to secure a better flavor in the peach, apple and other fruits. At Spence's Bridge in the Thompson valley, which may be taken as a type of considerable stretches of river valleys in the interior, the month of April is as warm as a Toronto May, and July is even warmer than at Pelce in Ontario
