As a race Lyncburg had a short but brillant career. He made his debut as a two year old on the Buckeye Course, Cincinnati, in October 1866, and was placed third to Hamburg and Maggie B. B. in a two year old sweepstakes run in 1:15, beating Annette, Enquirer, Lyttleton and Flash of Lightning, and soon after beat Annette, Lyttleton and two others, one mile, in 1:48 1/2. At Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 8, he was beaten by Hamburg, over a slow track, in the Bradley Stakes, one mile, in 1:51. At the same meeting he ran third to Enquirer and Hamburg in the George Elliot Sequel Stakes, one mile, in 1:48, in a field of five. Over the Woodlawn Course he beat Maggie B. B., Lyttleton, Kingfisher and Enquirer, slow track, 3/4 mile, in 1:38
At the Nashville Fall meeting he ran second to Maggie B. B. in the Young America Stake, one mile, in 1:45, Hamburg third, Enquirer and six others not placed. As a three-year-old at Saratoga, in a mile and a half dash, he beat Ecliptic, Chillicothe and three others, and in the Continental Hotel Stakes at Long Branch, mile heats, he won the first heat in 1:47, beating Enquirer, Maggie B. B., Susan Ann, &c.; but in the second heat injured his shoulder and was drawn. He never recovered from this injury and was retired from the turf, and thus cut off, in the beginning of a successful racing career, from taking rank with the best horses on the American turf.

As a stallion, Lyncburg has not, so far, proved a great success; but this, in a great measure, may be attributed to the fact that he never had the opportunity of serving first class mares.
The most successful of his got is the filly May flower, foaled in 1874, out of a mare by Congaroo, who as a two year old won a half-mile dash at Washington, D. C., with 97 lbs up, in 51 1/2 seconds and a mile dash at Camden, S. C., over a heavy track, in 1:50 1/2. Some of his young stock, however, are very promising.

ACCIDENT IN A SHOW RING.

The Hamilton Spectator has the following account of an accident which happened last week at the Central Fair during the contest of the best lady rider.—The great event to which all had been looking forward during the afternoon was the lady horseback riding, and after some little delay two competitors came forward—Miss Wooley, of Gianford, and Miss M. Van Wagner, of Stoney Creek. Each lady was well mounted and attended by a gallant squire, but there was some disappointment expressed at their being only two contestants. As matters turned out, however, there was excitement enough to satisfy the strongest craving. There was some yeast to be seen in all directions around the grounds, sample packages having been freely distributed during the day. This yeast is claimed to be the yeast par excellence, but may fairly be assumed that it never before occasioned such a fermentation as it did on this occasion. While Miss Wooley and her escort were galloping at a pretty fast rate round the north side of the ring some person threw a package of yeast which struck the latter's horse, the purpose, secure the dilemma in which the judges find themselves, and in most cases some kind of compromise is patched up that is not satisfactory to the judges themselves, nor to anyone else except the fortunate individual whom the lightning struck.

But, with whatever degree of indignation, may protest against this worse than fool-practice, into which so many societies have fallen, the practice exists, and we must consider the best way to meet it when it does occur. When the judges enter a ring of this description, the first point for them to decide is, which family there represented the highest average price in the market. After all, the only true test of the value of a horse is the number of dollars he will fetch in his owners pocket. After determining this question, it then follows to ascertain whether this family or breed is truly represented in the ring, and, if so, whether the representatives are closely allied to this family, whether they are mere remote offshoots. If they are well in the blood of the chosen family, and are fair average representatives of it in form, style, action, etc., the choice is narrowed to the best of the representatives of the family. The class is purely a breeding class, and the questions of blood and family are of the very highest importance. In making upon the value of the family, what may be, we may be allowed here to suggest to the gentlemen who are assigned to this difficult and thankless task of acting as judges, that the show-ring is the very parasite of bogus pedigrees. Unless a pedigree is recorded, it should be received with great reservation. We know very well that many people, from some kind of sentimental idea, take as the standard of his value. We have heard a great deal of talk against what have been called "fancy horses," and in favor of what have been called "farmers' horses," but really our views have always been so matter-of-fact, that, as an agriculturist, we have preferred the breed of domestic animals, or the variety of the pumpkin, that would bring the highest price. We have heard cattle-men inveigh against fancy-priced horses, as not being the kind that farmers should raise, and every same men were largely in Short-horns, that they would and could sell high for the thousands. For our life we never could see why it was right for one farmer to sell a calf and sell it for a thousand dollars, and wrong for his neighbor to breed a hand sell it for the same price. The calf was strong in the fashionable strains, and when he comes into the show-ring, his pedigree is the leading element in the decision. Nobody complains of this, for it is right; and it is right of the colt.

There is one other point to which we will draw the attention of the judges in the show-ring. There is altogether too much tendency to what may be called "problematical" judgment. What we mean by "problematical" judgment will be best illustrated by an accident. Somebody bred a little bit of a light leggy Arabian, weighing, perhaps, ten hundred and fifty or eight hundred pounds, on a great Percheron mare. The dam, when following the dam was much like a stallion, and they were shown at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, as a great discovery in horse-breeding. The astonishing part of that transaction is in the fact that the judges, instead of awarding a premium to the breeder of the hybrid as the greatest of his generation, demonstrated that they were themselves even greater ones by specially commending the cross as an important discovery. The judges appear to have been so ignorant as not to know that the examination of breeding a very small horse on a very large mare had already been tried more than fifty thousand times. Again, they appear to have been so ignorant as to know that, if this colt should be kept as a stallion, his progeny would be about equally divided, half Percherons of a ton weight, and the his head and called for an axe, when he split the log, and found the three balls in one mass, all having passed through the same round aperture directly in the centre of the card.

The Captain was also a very excellent marksman, with a bird gun, and although he was seen to make numerous shots, no one ever remembered to have known him to miss his bird.

Although Captain Scott possessed his firmness of nerve and accuracy of sight up to the day of his death, yet his qualities as a hunter were seriously impaired by age.

While in his prime, we remember reading and seeing the account (also the engraving) in the American Turf Register of his killing successfully with a pistol, while on the gallop on horseback, on either side of him two running deer.

Capt. Scott was at one time stationed at Prairie du Chien, and in possession of a wonderfully sagacious dog—a cross between the setter and pointer. This animal performed some astonishing feats. "The Captain would, for example, while sitting in his quarters at the fort, with the dog at his feet, say to him: 'Mark, I want you to go over to the island and ascertain if there is any woodcocks there, and come back and tell me.'" The dog would instantly go to the river, swim to the island, and, after hunting it over, return, and, if he had found birds, run up to his master, then to the gun, wag his tail and make other demonstrations of joy, which made it perfectly apparent that he had been successful. Scott would then tell the dog to get the canoe in readiness, and, strange as it may appear, he would take the cushion in his mouth, carry it to the river-bank where the canoe was moored, place it upon the seat, return for the paddle, carry that to the canoe, then go back to Scott, and look up into his face with an expression which indicated that all was ready.

All those who are not familiar with the history of Captain Scott—so astonishing, and almost alone for the accuracy of his shots with rifle, shot-gun and pistol—may have sought some desire to know what became of him. We will add for their information, that he was killed while gallantly leading forward his command in that most sanguinary battle of the Mexican war, "Molino del Rey."

Although, like most of us, he had his faults, yet, upon the whole Captain Martin Scott was a pleasant companion, an honorable man, a kind brother, and gallant soldier.

HOW THE GAME OF CRICKET RUNS IN FAMILIES.

There was a queer cricket match at Horsham the other day—the local eleven, quite a strong one, against eleven Lucases, all connected by family ties. This is, however, by no means the first instance recorded of a family team being put into the field. In 1845 a Mr. Pagden with his four sons and six nephews won a match at Brighton, and a year later there were eleven brothers Colman in one team. Gloucestershire recently had an eleven—father and sons, if the World is not at fault—of players very appropriately named brotherhood; two of these gentlemen played in the Montreal Club nine years ago. An eleven of Lytteltons has also been placed in the field, headed by the late Baron. Though America could not perhaps turn out such a team, cricketing runs here in families. Philadelphia could now make up a most powerful eleven of Newhalls and Hargreaves, just as she ran to Ticknors many years ago when the "Dragon-Slayers" were young; the Wright family would form a good nucleus, for an eleven of Wrights, and the Montreal Club used not long ago to have five Smiths on its rolls, all cricketers of quality.—N. Y. World.

At a funeral a mourner with a passion for games of chance finds himself in the carriage with the heart-broken parents of the corpse. The procession moves at a snail's pace, and there is evidently a long hour's ride before the cemetery is reached. The mourner stands it as long as he can, then placing his hand in his pocket, rattles a few coins significantly, and turning to the sorrow-stricken father, whispers: "This is slow isn't it? I will flip you just once for a fiver."

run I could not think of losing him, so I turned and dashed after him at a rattling pace. Sliding alongside, this time a shot fired low behind the shoulder brought my fierce friend to bay. Proudly he turned toward me, rage in his eye, but with a bearing at once calm and stately. He pawed the ground, and blew with short angry snorts the long grass till it swayed to and fro. Moving thus slowly toward me he seemed the very personification of brute strength and angry pride. But his last moment had come. I recall vividly all the wild accessories of the scene—the great silent waste, the noble beast, death-stricken but defiant; but no language can picture the coloring of sky and plain, no sound could echo back the music of the breeze, sighing mournfully through the long grasses; no pencil paint the east ablaze with gold and green, and the thousand glories of the prairie sunrise. All this lasted only a moment; for the giant bull, still advancing slowly toward his puny enemy, with low-bent head and angry snorts, sank quietly to the plain and stretched his limbs in death. I am not more sentimental than ordinary men, and have done a fair share of killing, but I should like to be able to call that grim old bull back to life. Never since that fair morning have I taken the life of one of his kind.

CURVE PITCHING—IS IT POSSIBLE?

One of the best known base-ball men in America, excepting Harry Wright, and a resident of Cincinnati, declares that no pitcher ever curved a ball in its delivery, and, moreover, declares it an impossibility to do so. He says he will deposit one thousand dollars in bank to cover a bet which any gentleman wishes to make with him to that amount on the above proposition. To test the matter he will have three sticks driven, fifteen feet apart in a straight line, and he will wager as above that no pitcher can deliver the ball so that it will pass on one side of the second, and on the same side of the third as the first. He declares that what is called the pitcher's curve is merely a straight delivery caused by the position of the pitcher and manner in which he holds his arm. Without the resistance of a substance which touches only one part of the ball, this gentleman says, the laws of philosophy teach him that a curve cannot be produced, and, as the pressure of the air is equal on every part of the ball's surface, the theory of the curve is impossible.

The Boston Advertiser says that Professor Swift, of Rochester, declares that curve pitching is a mathematical impossibility. A writer in the Scientific American joins hands with the Rochester Professor, and has prepared an elaborate article, with calculations to prove his position. An expert visited Rochester, and, in the presence of the learned gentleman, caused a common regulation ball to curve seven feet eight inches in a distance of 127 feet. There is no questioning the fact that it is done.

CORMORANTS OF THE CIRCUS.

It is sometimes said that cheek is all that is necessary to take a man through the world. And it is a good deal so. Yesterday, at the circus ground, a smooth rascal stood up in his buggy, and soon had a crowd around him, attracted by his profuseness in giving away money. His mode of doing business was thus: He would fold up a five dollar bill and offer it to any one for four dollars. The four dollars he would give for three, the three for two, the two for one, and so on down until he had disposed of the whole five dollars. He would then offer four dollars in money and a watch for five dollars, the bargain, mind you, being a good one for whoever would take it. In fact he made such tempting offers that several five dollar bills from different men would pour in on him at once. He took all that came in his way, and so excited did all become over the one entitled by priority to get the bargain that the man with the V's in his possession picked up his reins and drove off with the money, not being able to tell who the bills belonged to, saying that anybody could approach him and say he had given him a five dollar bill, and how was he to tell whether he did or not? Of course, how could he, innocent man. Fools and their money are easily parted. People who expect to get more than they pay for will in the end be cheated.—Etiquette, N. Y. Paper.

FIGHTING FOR THE PRIZE.
The announcement that a yacht race would take place attracted a large crowd of Jersey City and Newark boatmen on October 3rd to Murphy's boathouse on the shore at the foot of Communipaw avenue, Jersey City. There were four classes with seven entries each, and the course was from off Murphy's boathouse, passing between Ellis and Belloc's Islands to Robbin's Reef and return, the course to be sailed over twice. The boats started between two and three o'clock and the finish was at half past five. The Addie Taylor won in the first class, her corrected time being 2h. 1m. 17. In the second class the Kate Joram won as the winner, her time being 2m. 50m. 30s. In the third class the Alice won in 3h. 9. 7s. The boats of the fourth class did not turn, two of them upsetting and the others going home. On the return of the boats of the third class to the boathouse it was discovered that the judges had not kept any time, and a scene of the greatest disorder and rowdiness ensued. Everyone claimed that his boat won the race, and the judges, who had retired to a corner of the room to make up a time sheet were pelted with beer glasses and bottles. The prizes were a gold watch for the first class and a silver water pitcher for each of the others. "Top" Gilligan, of Jersey City, one of the crew of the Addie Taylor grabbed the gold watch, and claimed that the Taylor had won it. John Mojan, well known in pugilistic circles as Steve Taylor, picked up one of the water pitchers and claimed that the Taylor won that also. Some one fired another of the pitchers and struck him on the head, and when one of the crew of the Alice attempted to carry off another of the pitchers a rough named Traphagen knocked him down and bit a piece out of his cheek. As the darkness came on the fighting grew more fierce, and the judges, to save their lives, fled from the place. The boathouse was held by the roughs, who continued the fight until a cry of "Police!" was raised and they jumped into their boats and put off.

ELECTRIC DRIVING.

An invention has been designed in France to supersede the ordinary mode of driving horses, and to substitute for it "driving by electricity." It is proposed that under the coachman's seat shall be placed an electro-magnet, from which one wire shall be carried along one of the reins to the horse's bit, and another to the crupper, so that the whole length of the animal's spine shall form part of an electric circuit. A sudden shock, which it will be in the power of the driver to administer at discretion, will, it is said, bring the obstreperous runaway to a stop, and will arrest the backsliding vagaries of the most inveterate jibber. A series of small shocks will, on the other hand, stimulate the veriest "screw" to marvels of pace and style. Both results seem probable enough. Pegasus himself would hardly have made much headway with a strong magnetic battery playing along his spinal cord, and even "screws" may be tortured into temporary displays of frantic energy.

A PIG WITH A HUMAN HEAD.—Dyersburg, Tenn., is excited over the birth of a pig with a human head. The pig was born on the 27th ult. It has a perfect human face and head, the rest of its formation being that of any other pig. It has red hair on its head; its teeth, mouth and eyes are strangely human; while one ear is that of a hog, the other is that of a little child. This new and strange production is the wonder of the neighborhood. Dr. Duffie, the druggist at Friendship, has preserved it in alcohol and hundreds are flocking to see it daily. In Memphis we have scores of human beings who are pig-headed, and resemble pigs no little in manner and disposition.

while abundantly able to meet all obligations, seized upon the opportunity to avoid payment of their honest debts. Losses, shrinkage and poverty were pleaded in order to effect a compromise of so much on the dollar. To which we beg to add, the way to make the times easier is for every man to strain a little, if necessary, in order to meet his just obligations. An earnest desire to pay in one quarter will beget confidence in another quarter. Debts of all kinds should be canceled as speedily as possible; and printing bills should not be overlooked. It is incomprehensible to us why some people should try at a new-paper dunn as lightly as they do. A well-conducted journal collects the news at great outlay. It sends a representative to report a meeting, for instance, it has to pay in cash his rail and fare, his hotel bill, his bill for telegraphing, and his incidental expenses. The white paper on which the report is printed, the wages of the compositors and pressmen, and all other bills have to be paid weekly. The outlay is cash, and yet some men, who take advantage of the advertising columns of the newspaper, labor under the curious impression that it can always wait for a settlement. Possibly this is thoughtlessness on their part. Instead of putting aside the printer's bill for payment after all other obligations have been met, it should be the first to receive attention. The newspaper needs opinion, and without its support a great many enterprises would prove disastrous. We are not speaking for ourselves alone. Our remarks are applicable to the patrons of nearly all the journals in the land.—Turf, Field and Farm.

CHARLESTON'S NOVEL STAG HUNT.

Some Charleston South Carolina sportsmen recently conceived the idea of getting up a stag hunt on the Washington race course, near that city. The project was received with enthusiasm by sportsmen throughout the county, and the affair as described in the Charleston News and Courier was certainly a brilliant affair. Choice dogs from choice packs were selected and entered for the sport, and excitement ran high as the day drew near for the test. Planters left their crops and came from fifty miles around in buggies, on horseback, muleback, and, in fact, as best they could. Sportsmen came up in style, looking wise and exchanging dog talk as they grouped around the dogs and passed upon their ancestry, their bottom, their speed, etc. The chase was to begin at 4 p. m., and by 3 o'clock the ground was thronged with horses and vehicles of every description. A grand pack of thirty-two dogs was entered, elaborate rules drawn up, judges and umpire selected, the stag was turned loose, and the four regular whippers-in rode out into the track and sounded the signal horns. The dogs grew wild at the welcome sound, and the crowd fairly boiled over with excitement, and began climbing over each other in their wild effort to get a good place. For fully twenty minutes dogs and riders scoured the course without jumping the game, and the crowd waited impatiently, looking on at nothing. After a great many false alarms, the musical baying of pack and the excited riding of the riders proclaimed the fact the trail was growing warm and that the fun was not far off, when, to the dismay of all, it was discovered that the deer could not be persuaded to look upon the dogs with other than friendly eyes—in other words, he wouldn't run at all. When first jumped he ran about twenty steps, and was then pulled down by Mr. Dubbley's dog Ball. The dog being whipped off the noble stag ran a few feet and tried to climb a fence. Finding that required too much exertion, he laid over on his back after the style of a naughty poodle and held up its legs supplicatingly. Every persuasion imaginable was used, but the stag wouldn't run, and was finally unceremoniously dragged back to his cage by the legs by two men. This operation furnished the greater part of the crowd with their first sight of the deer, and then the animal was engaged they crowded round and feasted their eyes upon him, as if they were looking at an anthropophagus.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person or persons who takes a paper regularly from a Post Office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The Courts have decided, that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

A CUCKOO ARRANGEMENT.

It can not have escaped the attention of the readers of our Canadian racing summaries that there is a great deal of inconsistency in the conduct of some of our Associations. While they will hang up prizes to be competed for by the different classes of trotting horses, they make no endeavors to class the horses themselves for the benefit of other associations and horsemen. This is clearly established by the intimation contained in the suggestive attachment to the record of the race "no time." If they will act fraudulently, and knowingly suppress the true record, why should they accept the time which more straightforward associations have recorded against horses which have trotted over their tracks. If they would be consistent, when they do not give time they should not attach a time test to their contest. They should seek some other means of classification. As now conducted it savors very strongly of the instinct of the cuckoo in dealing with the hedge-sparrow. The benefits are all on one side and the loss on the other. In common honesty our turf contests should all be controlled by the same standard, and when one horse suffers under a disability in one place, another should not escape the penalty under similar circumstances at another. Uniformity should be the rule, and the practice proper training. Ross, especially, felt the need of active work, being some pounds beyond the desired weight. Hanlan appears to be in better fix, and should the race depend upon the physical condition of the men, the friends of the Toronto youth think they have the best of it. In what little boating exercise they have been able to take, their styles have been carefully criticised, Hanlan's being looked upon the more favorably, although Ross powerful stroke has made him many friends, but it is thought his action is not so perfect as his competitor's.

As many seem to think that Hanlan will have the best of the water if it should prove to be a little lumpy to-morrow, it might be as well to state that the articles of agreement call for perfectly smooth water, and the only chance of bad water is what might be after the race was started. In the event of the water not being good between the hours of 2 and 5 p. m., the referee is empowered to postpone from day to day between the same hours, until the course is suitable. This may cause a postponement, but present appearances indicate the breaking up of the storm, and a cessation of hostilities in the elements.

An important point will be the naming of the referee, who will have to be agreed upon before 10 o'clock, to-morrow (Saturday) morning. As there are plenty of competent men in Toronto, it is altogether likely a city man will be nominated. His duties do not promise to be very critical, excepting possibly at the finish, as the men are to start from boats anchored fifty yards apart, and each one will have to turn his own buoy, which likewise will be the same distance from each other. This condition reduces the chances of fouling by either of the principals to a minimum and relieves the referee from what might be a disagreeable duty. It will be noticed there is another wise provision in the articles, by which in case of outside interference that would affect the result of the race the referee may order the men to row over the next day under the original conditions. This will prevent the partisans of either who might be actuated by undue zeal on behalf of their man from placing the least obstacle in the way of the rowers. When this condition is thoroughly understood it should prove of great assistance in keeping the course clear, and giving the contestants an uninterrupted channel. The well-known fair play accorded to everything in the way of legitimate sport in Toronto, is almost a guarantee that our citizens will take a pride in preventing anything like the semblance of interruption to either man in this great contest.

Up to the time of our going to press it was not determined in what boats the men would row. It is said that Ross favors his wooden boat in preference to the paper one; and should Hanlan entertain a similar idea the New Brunswicker would have about seven pounds advantage in the weight of the boat, while if both should elect to use their paper boats, they would then, on this point, be on perfectly even footing. Ross expects to step into his boat weighing about 178 lbs., which will be three pounds heavier than when he met Plaisted; while Hanlan will not lack the beam at more than 153 lbs.

Considerable dissatisfaction is felt at the estimation. In Montreal on Tuesday night the Blue Nose representative had the call at 100 to 80, and considerable business is said to have been done on this basis. From the American cities we learn that Ross was the favorite in both Boston and New York.

Just now everything promises that this great event will be brought to a satisfactory conclusion. Both the principals and their friends are confident of the result, and all that is required is pleasant weather and smooth water.

CENTENNIAL AWARD.

On Tuesday last, Mr. Ed. Hanlan received from the Philadelphia Commissioners his Certificate of Award and a Bronze Medal, for being the winner of the single scull professional tourney in that city, Sept., 1876. The time given on the certificate in 21:09, half a second faster than that stated in the Clipper Almanac; but the distance, three miles, is entirely absent, probably an oversight of the Commissioners. The certificate is handsomely engraved, and no doubt will be treasured by Mr. Hanlan as an interesting memento of the happiest moment of his life. By some his reception of these testimonials at this particular time will be looked upon as a favorable omen of his success in his present match.

Sporting Gossip.

Mr. Geo. Lees, of Guelph, purchased on Friday of last week, from Dr. Brown, of Eminence, Ky., the chestnut stallion Star Denmark, Jr. He is said to be one of the finest saddle horses in America. He will be shipped to England shortly.

Piedmont, who acquired a 4-year-old record of 2:30, is said to be out of all condition, and can not trot a bit. He has been sent to Peter McIntire, who brought out Voltaire, for training.

Mr. Archie Fisher has blistered Piccolo, and has hopes of having him stand up on his feet all right again. Piccolo was quite a race horse, and if Archie can get him around he will be quite an addition to his stable.

Alice Gray, a well-known western running mare, owned in Athens, Mich., was killed at the State Fair at Jackson, by being run into by a farmer's waggon, the pole of which entered her chest nearly two feet.

Gen. Buford's great 3-year old colt, McWhirter, pulled up lame in a gallop on Thursday of last week. The lameness appears to be below the fetlock joint.

Two race horses were killed by an explosion of a locomotive on the Louisville and Nashville Railway, and at the same time two men were injured.

Mr. Robert Bonner, of the New York Ledger, purchased on Oct. 1, from Messrs. Foster and Simpson, Winchester, Ky., the roan stallion Centennial, 4 years old. Centennial showed a mile heat, at three years old in 2:26½.

A fine young stallion by Winfield Scott, is advertised for sale in to-day's paper.

Prof O. S. Pratt, who for the past few years has been practising his profession of W. Kastner, of Stratford, was driving his imported Grey Eagle down Ontario street in that town, the horse took fright and dashed away, breaking the buggy. Fortunately he was got under control before any further damage was done.

Dominion Boy, the trotting stallion, owned by Mr. Wait, of Merriton, has been lost sight of for some time by our Canadian horsemen. He has been making the season in Michigan, and recently took the first prize at the State Fair at Jackson in that State.

The fastest three heats ever made in a pacing race took place at Cleveland, Ohio, at the late meeting in that city. It was won by Sweetzer in three straight heats—2:16, 2:16, 2:16½.

At the Howden great horse fair, prices ruled very high. Several Canadian horses were there, and Mr. Campbell, of Boston, had twenty splendid Americans, the highest figure obtained for them being £150, and the lowest £50. At Tattersall's on 17th ult., a lot sent from Toronto realized an average of £75.

A match said to be for $500 a side has been arranged for teams owned by a Mr. Higgins, Toronto, and Mr. Jas. O'Neil, Woodstock, to be trotted at Guelph on the 15th inst. So says the Guelph Herald.

Mr. J. H. Marcotte, of St. Therese, Quebec, writes that his horse, Blainville Boy, is six years old, not nine years old, as has been represented.

A forfeit for a match has been deposited by Messrs. Archie Fisher of this city, and Frank Henderson of Bowmanville, to run their respective horses, Kelso and Barber, over Whitby track, two and a half miles, 110 lbs up, for $250. We have not heard when the balance of the money is to be made good.

THE FAILURE AT JEROME PARK.

THE POOL CRUSADE THE CAUSE.

(From the Spirit of the Times.)

The opening day of the fall meeting of the American Jockey Club, at Jerome Park, in a weather point of view, was perfect. In the early morning a thin gauze of clouds obscured the skies, but the sun soon dispersed them, and the afternoon turned out one of those beautiful autumn days that is always exhilarating and cheering. It is summer lingering in the lap of winter, the connecting link between the seasons of extreme temperature.

The evening previous, the starters in the four races on the cards were given to the public, and were known in sporting circles. On the following morning the city dailies announced them, and everywhere the high character of the horses was the general theme of conversation. Four better fields have not appeared upon an American course during the year, and the single fact that in four events there were thirty-five starters, shows that none but the very best sport could have been expected. Under this state of things it was believed that an immense concourse of people would be on these favorite sporting grounds at an early hour. But this was not the case. Going out the Boulevard, by way of McComb's Bridge, and along Jerome Avenue, the increase of vehicles was not perceptible over those passing along this fine drive on any day for two weeks past. By rail there was a small number bound for the park, but there was an or more, in thoroughbred horses in the State, will be forced beyond its limits, and will most probably go into the South and West, or, do worse, go to Europe, that parties owning the property may not be compelled to sustain a total loss of years labor and pains, as well as their entire investments. There were very few persons at the Club-house, or on Club-house Hill, who habit-d on Saturday as a border county Arkansas. The grand stand did not have one-fourth of its usual compliment, and the lawn in front made no better showing. Only a few ladies turned out, and the carriages and vehicles of various sorts were few and far between, and those on the grounds, with marked exceptions, were not by any means of the attractive character that Jerome Park has so long been distinguished for.

We are very sorry that this is not a fair picture. It is only drawn too near the truth. It would be far more pleasant to have reported a different state of things, an immense multitude, grand turnouts, and fierce betting, but it does illustrate truthfully one of the results of the late Albany legislation. Notwithstanding the small attendance, general apathy, and an exceedingly heavy course, the racing was magnificent. Indeed, more than one of the events was brilliant. The two-year old race was, perhaps, as brilliant an effort between youngsters as was ever witnessed, and many experienced turfmen expressed the like opinion. The four fields of horses were well prepared, and ran with more than ordinary courage. The meeting promises to be one of continued brilliancy so far as the racing is concerned.

(From the New York Sportsman.)

* * * Besides all this, the miserable state of the law in regard to betting is very adverse to the race-courses whose managers desire to conform to law and reason upon general principles. It is of no use to say, one of our neighbors does, that those who used to buy pools can do quite as well betting with bookmakers. The answer is that those who used to buy pools do not think so, and the American people do not want to be directed as to how they shall spend their money by a newspaper or a captain of the police. The vicious and tyrannical law passed by the malevolent rogues and sports-fools who mainly composed the Assembly last winter has had just one effect. It has prevented pool-selling on the race-courses, where it ought to be, and concentrated it in private houses over the river where it ought not to be. This is the whole effect. There is just as much pool-selling now as there was before, but none at the races, where the club could regulate it and keep it within proper bounds. It is all done in private rooms and places away from the race-courses, and, as a matter of course, the buyers are not at the races. Now, whatever our neighbors may think, we consider this to be an unmitigated calamity. In every racing point of view it is a great evil. In morals, it is nothing but a mischief, for it is a huge pretense of repression, founded upon the fraud and false pretence of the act itself. A little moderate betting on horse-racing is nothing like as obnoxious to good morals as lying, hypocrisy, and fraudulent pretenses are. That wise, witty, and good clergyman, Sydney Smith, said he had often in his youth parties who practiced fraud, falsehood, tyranny, and extortion without compunction of conscience, but who were shocked at Sabbath-breaking, and stood aghast at the mere mention of pots of beer consumed during morning service betwixt the first and second lessons. These are the sort of people who supported the betting bill at Albany.

Inspiration was pretty well liked by some of the New York sporting papers for the Grand National, but, as will be seen by the report, she failed to get better than third. Tim Ochiltree and Parole leading her under the wire.

The editor looked up from the desk on two men, grim with dirty faces, who had entered the sanctum and stood nervously twitching their ragged caps before him.

"Well, you see, the 'Irish Boys' and the 'Silver Stars' had a game of ball to-day, and we rather thought as we'd like ter have it published."

"Is that really so? I know these two crack teams were going to play, but I thought it was next week. To which club do you belong?"

"We belong to the Silver Stars. I'm catcher and he's short stop. And we waxed them other fellows, didn't we Bill?"

"Well, the Irish Boys they was a braggin they could beat us, and we said we had twenty-five cents which said they couldn't. We played 'em and give 'em six goose eggs."

"Oh, now boys," said "the editor," "don't tell any lies. It is wrong to lie. Where could you get goose eggs this time of the year?"

"The catcher and short stop of the Silver Stars looked at "the editor" in amazement, and then turned to be mentally deciding that he was an infernal idiot.

"We means to say," continued the catcher of the Silver Stars, who was first to recover from the shock to which he had been subjected, "that we white-washed 'em." "Oh, I see," said "the editor" with a sudden burst of intelligence.

"You put whitewash over them until they looked like goose eggs. By jove, that was a good idea." "No," said the catcher of the Silver Stars, with a mischievous grin, "we skunked 'em, you know—skunked 'em." "Skunked 'em—what do you mean by that?"

"Why, we Chicagoed 'em—gin 'em runs." "Oh, now I see," said the editor, almost bursting into a roar of laughter at the look of intense relief which came over the face of the two Silver Stars. "Go right on."

"We got right on ter the balls of the pitcher of the Irish Boys in the first innings, and we pounded the life out of him." "Oh, I see," said the editor, rapidly writing: "The Silver Stars stood on the ball in the first inning and almost killed the pitcher of the Irish Boys when he tried to get it."

"For two whole minutes the Silver Stars regarded each other in speechless astonishment. Then the short stop putingly asked: "Master, did you ever play base ball?"

"Very little," said "the editor," making herculean efforts to keep his face straight, "but I'll scratch this out, if it is not all right." "Course it isn't right. We means to say we hit his balls easy; we knocked 'em hard. I hit him for three bags and made a home run."

"You did," said the editor, dashing off at a tremendous rate on the paper. "The catcher of the Silver Stars hit three bags with the ball and then ran home with them." "This was too much. The two Silver Stars got up and unanimously concluded that they must go."

"What is your hurry?" asked the editor, again smiling at them warmly. "Stay a little while longer. If you can't, come up this afternoon and see all your friends with you—glad to see you any time." "The catcher of the Silver Stars blew his nose, wiped it on the cuff of his coat, and led the way down stairs to the street."

A funeral cortege passed through the gates of our funeral cemetery but what has been seen Gutters in close attendance. Mr. Bell, the Superintendent of the Cemetery, says that Gutters visits him twice every Sunday, morning and evening, and that it is only on Sundays that he deigns to notice him or any of his family, totally ignoring them upon every other day of the week.

When spoken to he does not approach you with a wagging tail, and cheerful countenance, but seems to accept your attentions formally and with a sad air.

Some malicious person has put out one of Gutters eyes, which gives him a sad and melancholy countenance. He seems to visit few places besides the cemetery, but about 7 o'clock every morning he can be seen in front of the late or shop of Mr. Featherston on South Upper street, waiting for his breakfast.

After his morning meal he is not seen again during the day, except there be a funeral, when he is certain to be present, and take his place among the mourners, starting with a vacant and sad look as the coffin is lowered to its last resting place. How he learns when there is to be a funeral, we are unable to state.—Kentucky Live Stock Record.

A CURIOUS LAWSUIT.
Los Angeles has had a novel lawsuit. It came before a justice's court, and was to this effect: A had a sick horse which was in great suffering, and which he thought was sure to die. So he took the horse to B, a lively stable keeper, and said, "I will give you $5 to kill this horse for me." "All right," said B. So A paid the $5, left the horse in charge of B and went away. B could not, however, summon sufficient nerve to kill the poor animal, so, in his turn, B said to C, "if you will kill this horse for me I will give you $5." "All right," said C, and C took the horse away with him. C, however, did not kill the horse, but doctored him and restored him to health. A, much to his surprise, one day saw C driving a fine animal, which A, unmistakably, recognized as his former sick horse. A demanded the horse from C; C refused to give him up, and A brought suit against C to recover possession of the horse. The jury decided that C was entitled to the horse. We understand that the case will be appealed to the county court.

A LADY BEAR HUNTER.
Says the Winnipeg Free Press:—One afternoon in the latter part of last month, the wife of W. G. Livingstone, of the Boyne, noticed four young bears in the wheat field. Mr. Livingstone being absent at the time, she at once proceeded to drive the intruders off, when one took to a tree on the bank of the river, about a hundred yards from the house, and the other three took to their heels, and disappeared so far as this story is concerned. Mrs. Livingstone stationed herself under the tree, and held Bruin captive while her little daughter ran to the house and brought a loaded double-barrelled gun. Both barrels were discharged at the bear, which, while it was seriously wounded, was still able to make attempts to come down the tree. Ammunition having given out, Mrs. Livingstone armed herself with an axe handle, and with that weapon successfully resisted the endeavors of Bruin to escape, whacking the brute on the paws every time he came within reach. The tree was guarded till evening, when Mr. Livingstone returned home with his rifle. Mrs. L. grasped the rifle, fired, and the animal fell dead at her feet. The bear weighed 120 pounds, dressed.

Obituary.

DEATH OF M'LE. TITIENS.

It is with a feeling of profound regret and respect that we announce the death of Theresa Titens. When in New York, in 1876, M'le Titens began to feel the first pangs of an internal tumor. Dr. Alexander B. Mott, one of our most distinguished medical men, was called to attend her, and discovered the existence of a large tumor, and at once informed her that it could not be removed. It pressed upon the stomach, and all that could be done with it was, as it were, to prop it up and thereby diminish its horrible inconvenience to the great artiste. It was not always painful, and for days and days its existence could have been forgotten by the unfortunate lady. On her return to London, M'le Titens persisted, against Dr. Mott's advice, upon resuming her career. She, moreover, allowed herself to be persuaded that she was suffering from dropsy, and was tapped for the malady. A leading London surgeon, however, only too late, that the celebrated American physician was right, and acknowledged the existence of the tumor. He attempted to cut it out, but as Dr. Mott had warned M'le Titens, it was fibrous, and the operation failed. On Wednesday 8th M'le Titens passed away quietly, at two o'clock in the morning.

M'le Titens was born at Hamburg, of German parentage, and not Hungarian, as is generally recorded. "The name Titens is quite common at Hamburg," she said. When a mere girl, her voice was pronounced wonderful, and she entered the Viennese Conservatory of Music, and under the direction of great teachers of the old Italian method, which has lingered at Vienna, owing to the influence of Porpora, and the Venetian school of singing which flourished there in the last century and which is even now the most admired by the virtuosi of the "Milan of Germany," as Vienna is often called on account of the Italian and art-loving character of its inhabitants.

Titens' debut at Vienna was in Lucretia Borgia, and her first furor as Donna Anna in Don Giovanni. Her career was rapid. When she appeared in London, she was acknowledged the successor of Grisi, who was then about to retire. She was a woman of wonderful powers. Her voice was of superb quality, strong, clear, flexible, and velvety. It was nobly trained, and her method was broad and correct. No one can replace her as Norma, Lucretia, Medea, Leonora, and Samarcande. Her great dramatic instinct, her splendid plastic art, and her sublime declamatory genius, formed, together with her glorious voice, a combination of qualities of unrivalled excellence too fresh in the public mind to need further notice. She was the last great prima donna of the school of Storaee, Pasta, Mahbran, and Grisi, whose worthy successor she was.

Theresa Titens, the woman, was as remarkable as Theresa Titens the lyric queen. Many will be the bitter tears that will fall over her grave. She was so gentle, so lovely, so respectable, so free from petty jealousy, so lavishly generous, and so ostentatiously charitable, that her life will ever be held up as an example to her sisters in the dramatic profession. In all parts of the world her death is spoken with regret. Ireland will mourn her loss as a national calamity for her charity to the people of that music-loving island, was unbounded. England will mourn her as an illustrious daughter, Germany as a national glory. France will mourn her as a singer, and America has paid her a fitting tribute as a singer, and as a woman whose sweet nature made her a personal friend wherever she went. —Sport ing trichinous pork and tapeworm by eating measley pork, and that instances were known of foot and mouth diseases being communicated to people by drinking milk of cows affected by that disease. Most of these communicable diseases were incurable at present, and man is more susceptible to animal diseases than the reverse. Glanders in both the acute and chronic form is fully established to be contagious, but experiments have shown that all animals are not alike susceptible to the action of the virus. Glanders and farcy are the same, only offering different appearances. After an exhaustive description of this dreadful disease and its effect upon the lower animals, the learned lecturer spoke of its effects on man. Hydrophobia, trichina spiralis, variols, etc., were also referred to. The lecturer occupied an hour in delivery and proved highly interesting and instructive.

MONSTER TURTLE.

As Dr. Walton and the Rev. Mr. Hazlerwood were returning to the city from a yachting cruise, they saw an enormous sea turtle swimming near New Point. Three men got a rope attached to the turtle, but instead of being able to pull the animal ashore it could easily pull them to the water, and after making their rope fast to a tree they awaited the going down of the tide, which came high and dry. The doctor made the following measurements. From tip of nose to the tail, 8 ft; between the tips of the flippers, 2 ft; length of shell, 5 ft 7 in; width of shell, 3 ft 6 in; length of flipper, 3 ft 6 in; weight of flipper, 10 lbs; weight of head, 25 lbs. The animal's total weight at 800 pounds.

The facilities offered to students at this institution to obtain a thorough practical knowledge of their profession are well known. There are at present skeletons of many animals, and Dr. McEachran is adding more so as to make his collections complete.

THE HORSE DISEASE.

(From the London Free Press, Oct. 5.)

We have already referred to the outbreak of a mysterious disease amongst horses in this city and neighborhood, which has resulted in the death of several excellent animals. As there seemed to be a tendency to magnify the extent of the ravages of the disease, a Free Press reporter called upon Mr. Tennant (of Rudd & Tennant, veterinary surgeons), who have had the most of the cases under treatment. From the conversation which ensued, it would appear that the disease has not prevailed to any alarming extent in the city, although several choice animals have succumbed to it. Some ten days ago, Messrs. Rudd & Tennant were called to attend the thoroughbred mare Nora B, belonging to Major Peters. After examination it was found that the animal suffered from a mysterious disease, and Mr. Wilson, V.S., was called on to give his opinion and aid. Notwithstanding that everything was done in the power of surgeons, death ensued within twenty-four hours after attack. Since then a disease, having the same symptoms, has carried off two of Messrs. Frank Smith & Co's horses, and a couple belonging to other citizens, and now we hear of the death of Squire Peters' thoroughbred stallion. Out of a total of eight attacked, but two have been saved. The disease is a peculiar one. The first symptoms evinced are a state of drowsiness and great difficulty in swallowing. In a few hours thereafter the animal is not able to swallow at all, whilst at the same time there is a great thirst, as if the victim suffers from typhoid fever. In the course of from four to twelve hours after the attack, the animal is seized with paralysis and great exhaustion, is unable to rise, and finally death ensues in from twenty-four to forty-eight hours. It has not transpired that the disease is an infectious one. The two animals which Squire Peters has lost had been living apart—one being kept in the city and the other at Petersville, so that infection would not have taken place in their case. No definite cause has yet been discovered for the disease; but Mr. Tennant says it may be attributed in great part to atmospheric causes. The description given above would indicate that it is a sort of diphtheria. Last autumn, during the very warm weather, three horses were attacked by a disease precisely similar, and two of them died. Mr. Tennant thinks that now the warm spell is over, no spread of the disease need be anticipated. There has been no fresh outbreak during the past couple of days, and it is to be hoped the epidemic has now run its course. There is no cause for further apprehension; but should the symptoms detailed be observed by any horse owner, it will be to his interest to at once acquaint a veterinary surgeon of its outbreak, as it is believed that two horses were saved last week in consequence of early aid being given them. The malady is not alone prevalent here, as reports come from several other places that a similar disease exists. At Madison, N.J., quite a number of horses have been struck down by the mysterious malady, the majority of them dying within twelve hours after attack.

OTTAWA.

THE HORSE DISEASE.—A case of horse disease having been reported to Dr. Buckland

At three years old he started ten times, won four. At Ascot ran a dead heat for second place for the St. James Palace Stako, one mile, won by Cynricus; Newmarket July meeting ran second in a field of three for sweepstakes, 1 mile, 4 furlongs, 2 yards, won by Qui Vivo; at Goodwood unplaced for Stewards Cup, T. Y. C., won by Maid of Kent; same meeting won a handicap, £50, half mile, beating Queen Charlotte, Spicebox and fourteen others; at Newmarket received forfeit from Mr. Greville's Soothsayer, T. Y. C., £200, half forfeit; also won Duke of Bedford's Luff, Across the Flat, £200; same place ran second to Joskin for Handicap Sweepstakes, Rowley Mile, beating three others; same meeting was beaten by Mouravieff, Dutch mile, £200; same place paid forfeit to Mazzini, A. F., £2,000, half forfeit; same place received 275 from Lord Lincoln's Indifference, T. Y. C., £200, half forfeit.

Antonio, it will be seen, is an own brother Antinous, winner of the Derby in 1854, Anton and Antinous, and he is a very richly bred horse in great winning lines. What he has done in the stud in Canada we are unable to say; but he should have been located in some section where he would have had a chance.

Bay Middleton, his sire, was the best horse of his year, and it is doubtful whether England ever produced one of higher character. Bay Middleton sired the renowned Flying Dutchman, winner of the Derby and St. Leger in 1849.

MONSTER TURTLE.

As Dr. Walton and the Rev. Mr. Hazlerwood were returning to the city from a yachting cruise, they saw an enormous sea turtle swimming near Nagsack Point. Three men got a rope attached to him, but instead of being able to pull the prize ashore it could easily pull them to the water, and after making their rope fast to a tree they awaited the going down of the tide, which left him high and dry. The doctor made the following measurements. From tip of nose to the tail, 8 ft; between the tips of the flippers, 11 ft; length of shell, 5 ft 7 in; width of shell, 4 ft 6 in; length of flipper, 3 ft 6 in; weight of flippers, 40 lbs; weight of head, 25 lbs. The doctor estimates the total weight at 800 pounds. The turtle proved to be blind, his eyes having been put out with charges of buck-shot, which he had received at some time. The fact of his being blind is supposed to be one of the causes of his straying so far from the usual haunts of turtles of his kind. It is evidently the largest turtle ever captured on the coast of Maine.—Bangor Paper.

Veterinary.

MONTREAL VETERINARY COLLEGE.

OPENING LECTURE.
On the afternoon of the 2nd inst. the introductory lecture of the eleventh session of this college was delivered at the Montreal Veterinary College by Principal D. McEachran, F.R.C.V.S. The subject was "Diseases of animals communicative to man considered from a sanitary point of view." The following is only a brief outline of the address: After extending a cordial welcome to the students the speaker said the importance of the subject would impress itself on the mind of everyone; so intimately associated are we with the lower orders of creation, especially with those that supply us with clothing and food, that it is not surprising if we find the diseases of these animals are sometimes communicated to those in the immediate charge of them, or indirectly, by eating the flesh of diseased animals for food. The principal diseases to which he referred as being communicable were glanders and larynx, foot and mouth disease, hydrophobia, variola and vaccina, trachina and various blood poisons. Trichinosis (the disease produced by trichinae), was produced by eat-

... other animals, and now we hear of the death of Squire Peters' thoroughbred stallion. Out of a total of eight attacked, but two have been saved. The disease is a peculiar one. The first symptoms evinced are a state of nervousness and great difficulty in swallowing. In a few hours thereafter the animal is not able to swallow at all, whilst at the same time there is a great thirst, as if the victim suffers from typhoid fever. OTTAWA.

THE HORSE DISEASE.—A case of horse disease having been reported to Dr. Buckland in the vicinity of Carleton Place, Dr. Coleman was instructed, if he considered it advisable, to investigate the matter. After making enquiry the doctor found that the disease did not amount to anything. Diphtheria among horses is prevalent in the west, and the greatest care should be exercised in preventing its spread in this district. Cases should be reported as soon as discovered.—Ottawa Citizen.

IMPORTED ANTONIO.

(Kentucky Live Stock Record.)
Imp. Antonio, bay, foaled in 1856, bred by Mr. W. Etwall, and imported by Geo. W.
