A Visit To Montenegro.

It was on a fine spring day I sailed up the Dalmation coast from Corfu, Ionian Isles, where I was fortunate in getting used Ionian covers, on the steamer of the Autreicilue Lloyd and arrived May 5 at the Austian Port of Cataro, which is near the boundary of Montenegro and a chief commercial place for them to dispose of their sheep skins, the chief product of their exportation.

Cataro is a fortified town and has an enthusiastic stamp collector in the person of one of the military men in command, the bay lying in a peculiar fjord, and unlike those of New Foundland, running inland 15 miles from the shore, is a beautiful place indeed and the carriage drive from there to the capital of this little country—Cetinje, is one of the finest from scenic point and interesting in odd association as any I've had in Europe—rising gradually thro an oak wooded mountainous land past the border guard house of Tanevdo, here 3000 feet above the sea, to the little town of Njegus, the ancestral home of the reigning family and contains the country residence of the Prince. Although it's as large a place as is the capital having a total of twelve hundred souls each.

Arriving at Cetinje after a few hours drive swining up to a small red building of most original architecture bearing the name of "Grand Hotel" in French and "Vjeko Violetie" in the native (sort of Servian-Slavish tongue), where it transpired, only one guest chamber was to be had and as our coach party consisted of six: a Jewish Banker, of Vienna, his wife, niece and governess, myself and my interpreter, we looked for other rooms after having a meal, which like those in Mexico, contained so much red pepper as to make it desirable to speedily finish same having an audience in the floor door and windows of male, female and non-descript natives, dogs, goats and other domestic animals, who were glad to partake of the plates we had half eaten.

Mr. Otto Biekel a stamp man who had lived some time in Montenegro after his visit to San Marino, had left some little idea of stamp values in the minds of those officials who were in the Porte, and I was shown a variety of the stamps in stock and prices for all sorts of quantity. If a large enough order were given they would be supplied under the nominal price, carefully post marked, full o. g.

Very odd in appearance are the natives; men wearing a considerable arsenal of weapons in their girdle, usually of the style in vogue a hundred years ago, and my improved Colts revolver was the object of envy by many a fiercely whiskered mountaineer—a guard of half a dozen soldiers accompany travelers in journeys as the people are not yet quite over their old ideas of brigandage, and are fond of playing athletic games, interspersed with feudal raids, over the border in consequence of considerable sheep stealing, carried on by both the Albanians and the natives, the Montenegrin idea being that the proper way to stop such practice is to shoot the offenders, and the dead Albanian, brothers and cousins then feel obliged to pop over one or two Montenegrins to even up the size of the cemeteries.

The men are dressed much as the modern Greeks, the women wear short jackets and bloomer pants, "ala Turk," the women work very hard, performing every menial task. the houses of the people with few exceptions, are poor beyond comparison of anything in America and they are a poor people. No wonder the income from postage stamps is very welcome and is very large in their eyes.

In Cetinje are several small modern buildings which are really good, the school, the Palace of the Prince, and one for the Crown Prince, a Hospital, Church of St. Peter, (Greek faith), the Cartridge Works, Theatre (built by an American named Slade) and a Monastery. Near the Palace is a huge elm under which the Prince occasionally sits and ministers justice after his own notion.

Montenegro has managed to maintain independence for some 700 years and is so situated as to be nearly inaccessible, having one seaport, Antivere, which is not much used.

Austrian money is current, they having none and Austrian and Russian influence seem to predominate. A new industry is getting profitable and really assumes considerable proportions is the cultivation of certain wild flowers from the seed of which insect powder is made.

Some of the stamps of Montenegro are no longer to be had at the Post and are really scarce, though none are catalogued at high prices.

Embossed envelopes are not popular with the people.

The Postal Cards of Hawaii.

The attractive and interesting series of cards issued by the Sandwich Islands or Hawaii, having now to come to an end by the absorption of the postal service into that of the United States, we give a list of the varieties, all of which are easily obtainable for a few coppers each. The first issue was made in 1882, and consisted of three cards, 1c., 2c., and 3c., and two reply cards, 1 x 1c. and 2 x 2c. The American Bank Note Co. were instructed with the work and the result was therefore satisfactory from every point of view.

The 1c. bore a portrait of the Queen Liliuokalani on a shield, surmounted by a crown. In the ornamental frame on the upper side are the words Kalkana, R. 1881 and on the lower side the name of the printers. The name Hawaii across upper centre has a scroll across it bearing the words, "Papa poo Late," signifying that the card was for home or domestic use.

It was printed in vermilion on buff card. The 2c. card has a rather different frame, with the same inscription at upper side, but the American Bank Note Co.'s name, instead of being in lower frame.

The "stamp" is a picture of Diamond Head at Cahu, one of the islands. Across the name Hawaii are the words Universal Postal Union label.

The first issue therefore was:
 1c. vermilion on pale buff.
 1 x 1c. purple on pale buff.
 2c. black on white.
 2 x 2c. deep blue on white.
 3c. green on white.

These lasted without change until 1892, when the 1c. and 1 x 1c. came on a sort of orange-brown card, and the 1 x 2c. was a more paler blue.
 1c. vermilion on orange-brown.

1 x 1c. purple on orange-brown.
2 x 2c. pale blue on white.

In 1893, the monarchy came to an end and on August 28th, the Provincial Government 1893 surcharge was used, in two lines in black on the 1c. value (orange-brown card variety), and in red on the 2c. and 3c. No surcharge was applied to the reply cards. The quantities of 1c. cards surcharged was 28,760, 2c. 10,000, and 3c. 8, 574.

Provincial Government surcharge.

1c. vermilion on orange-brown.

2c. black on white.

3c. green on white.

On the 26th of April, 1894, a new 1c. card was issued, similar in every way to last, except that the stamp is now formed of a chart of the Pacific.

1c. vermilion on orange-brown.

2c. green on white.

That is the end of the making of cards in Hawaii.

In March, 1894, under proper supervision, the American Bank Note Co. destroyed the plates of the first 1c., 2c. and 3c. cards, together with the dies they were from. The plates, by the way, had contained six cards each.

On January 30th, 1901, the United States Government destroyed by fire at Washington 20,000 1c. cards and 34,000 2c., this being, it is said, the total remainder in the post offices at the time they were taken over by the U. S. postal authorities.

The 1 x 1c. differed from the single 1c. card in that it was printed in purple and bore an extra instruction. The card was doubled, imperf., and of course both cards had printed address side outwards.

The 2 x 2c. was printed in deep blue, was imperf., and like the 2c. single in all other respects.

The Origin of the United States Locals.

Before the postal reform of the United States which took place in 1845, the postage of the letters was fixed according to the distance from the spot of their departure. This being sometimes considerable, rendered the charge exorbitant. To give an idea of this charge it will be enough to say that it cost 12½ cents to carry a letter between Boston, New York and Philadelphia. This high rate caused much discontent for a long time after the news of the adoption in England of a uniform payment of one penny for all letters not exceeding half an ounce, from any part of the kingdom to another. This state of affairs induced Messrs. D. O. Blood & Co. of Philadelphia, in 1843, to organize a delivery of letters in their city in conjunction with that of the government. The first postage stamp they issued was a circular inscribed "Phila despatch post" with the word "Paid" in the centre, and was impressed in black and red on blueish paper. This stamp was issued at the end of the year 1841 and may therefore be considered the first American postage stamp, the government not adopting any before July 1st 1847. The success of this private post, induced others to establish similar post offices, and towards the end of 1843, Messrs. Hale & Co., of Boston, sent off messengers every day between New York, Boston and Philadelphia by railway. Two octagonal stamps were used for Boston and New York and a stamp with an eagle and the words "American Mail Co." was used for Philadelphia and New York. Next to appear was the stamp of W. Wyman 8 Court and 3 Wall St., with the representation of a railway engine in the centre. This was issued for Boston and New York letters.

THE CANADIAN PHILATELIC MAGAZINE

About this time Brainer & Co., of 58 Wall St., issued a circular stamp to be used on their letters between New York and Albany.

These private firms injured the state post office and forced a lower scale of charges which took place on March 3rd, 1845, when the postage on letters was fixed at 5 cents for any distance under and 10 cents above three miles. This did not prove satisfactory however as the postmen who did not receive any other payment for their services, demanded 2 cents on each letter.

The success of the private post offices so annoyed the authorities that a law of March 3rd 1851 declared the streets of the cities "Post routes" holding for themselves the exclusive right of collecting the district letters and conveying them to the central offices for despatch to their place of destination. The stamps inscribed "Post office despatch," "Government City Despatch," etc. are sufficient proof of this service having been rendered by some of the private firms. At length the law suit instituted by the government against Kochersperger & Co., the successors of D. O. Blood & Co., gave the finishing strokes to all these private post offices. It was officially decided that, in accordance with the law of March 3rd, 1851, the streets of the cities had become "post routes," and that the government had the sole right of letter carrying. Thus by this law all the private post offices except a few who undertook the delivery of parcels, etc. were prohibited from further engaging in the business.

Mounting Indian Relics.

The attractiveness of many collections is impaired by inartistic mounting, or not being mounted at all. Recently the writer arranged a collection in the following manner: First, a whitewood board (any soft wood will do) 16 x 18 inches in size and $\frac{3}{8}$ in thick and planed on both sides was covered on one side with silk velvet slightly padded with cotton wadding. The velvet was tacked on at the sides with small brass-headed tacks.

This made a rich background. The arrow points, etc., were fastened on with fine annealed wire, which was passed through holes made with a small sharp brad-awl. The wires being fastened at the back. An Indian photo was placed in the centre, and tacked at each corner.

Around it were placed a number of arrow points in a circle. At each corner of the board was placed a large specimen, then a small semi-circle of arrow points, pointing towards the corner. Between these semi-circles were arranged the larger specimens; the whole forming a pleasing effect. All the relics were securely wired down so not to be easily moved. There is hardly any limit to the manner in which relics can be arranged so as to show them up to advantage.

Relics mounted in this manner can be framed if desired, and thus be kept in fine condition and be readily examined.

Try this method and you will find that your friends will take more interest in what you have to exhibit in this line

You will take more interest in relic collecting also.

Odds and Ends.

Prof. Adams, of McGill University, Montreal, has demonstrated the manner in which the rocks under the earth's crust are continually changed by the pressure upon them. He subjected columns of marble to the enormous pressure of 18000 pounds to the square inch for periods varying from 17 to 174 days. It was as if a rock had been put into a monster nut-cracker. The solid marble flowed out at the sides like molasses, but most wonderful of all, without losing its cohesion or solidity. The experiment showed that the solid rock beneath the earth's surface are continually flowing in the direction of the least resistance.

Queen Margeritha of Italy has a passion for collecting the old shoes of historical personages. Her Majesty's collection which is already very large, includes boots or shoes worn by Joan of Arc, Mary Queen of Scots, and Marie Antoinette.

Usually a man waits for the return of cold weather before he commences to buy to any great extent, and doubtless there are many hundreds now waiting, but several dozens have already spent from five hundred to one thousand dollars during the last two weeks in June. What they will do in September will doubtless surprise some of our advertisers. One thing is sure and that is they will congratulate themselves on their foresight in getting first. The farmer plants his wheat in the dull winter months and reaps a bountiful harvest in the early summer. The intelligent stamp dealer advertises his house during the hot summer and gets his reward in the early fall.

The "Trust" is the American Collector's Company, which was organized some years ago with a capital stock of $100,000, but which has increased this capitalization to $450,000 in order to take over the business of the Scott Stamp and Coin Company of this city, and the New England Stamp Company of Boston. Henry L. Calman, who conducted the Scott Company, is understood to have received a check for $50,000 on Monday last, and in addition a large block of the stock of the American Collector's Company. A local trust Company financed the operation.

The American Collector's Company bought some time ago a valuable stock of rare stamps which has belonged to R. F. Albrecht, and it bought later a quantity of stamps from William Brown of N.Y. city.
