ADMIT THEY BEFRAUDED THE CUSTOMS

Weighers at New York Implicate Importers—Manifests Changed—Two Millions a Year Divided is Estimated

New York, Oct. 23—New York importers were implicated in alleged customs frauds against the United States government to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars when witnesses in the Musica case testified that government weighers made a practice of underweighing and collecting from the consignee half of the customs money thus saved.

The main evidence brought against the Musica firm, charged with fraudulent entries of cheese, showed that in one shipment alone the cheese that had been consigned there from Naples had been altered in transit nearly 9,000 pounds.

Manifests Ordered Changed John T. Maxwell, an entry clerk of Henderson Brothers, agents of the Anchor Line, also testified that Antonio Muscato asked him to change the manifest of a consignment of cheese on the Algeria, while still at sea, from the name of the Montreal, Maxwell declared that he had declined, but had referred the case to Mr. Coverley, the resident director of the line, who ordered him to change the manifest.

Maxwell also testified on cross-examination that occasionally Musica & Son, a New York importer of Italian produce, had been investigated by the government, whereupon Charles E. Rushmore and L. L. Dalziel, attorneys for the defendants, have drawn from the government's witnesses names of other employes and details of the system which the defense claims show plainly to be a scheme of coercion exercised by custom house employes in collecting tribute from importers for false weights and a friendly reception of importers.

With witnesses Breen's and Beve's statements of accepting regularly as much as $74 on one illegal entry of imports, it is conservatively estimated that as much as $2,000,000 a year has been split up among these dishonest government employes as bribe money from merchants for "entering" imports illegally.

TO CUT LICENSES DOWN A THIRD

Brockville Will Charge Higher Fee to Make Up the Deficit

Brockville, Ont., Oct. 23—License reduction will be the paramount question at the next municipal election in Brockville. The town council has acceded to the wish of the Minister of Agriculture, supported by a largely signed petition, to submit a by-law to the ratepayers, providing for the abolition of three hotel licenses, making six instead of nine.

If the by-law is carried the town stands to lose $850 in fees, and to meet this deficiency it is proposed to impose a higher license on the remaining six, to sufficient to make up that amount. The matter rests in the hands of a committee to report at the next meeting. It is more than likely that reduction and higher license will be embodied in one by-law.

MOTOR TOURING IN EUROPE EXPENSIVE

Herbert A. Hoover and Wife Home After 18 Months—Some Experiences

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 23—Herbert A. Hoover has just returned to Spokane after an 18,000-mile tour through the United States and Europe, which he and his wife accomplished in eighteen months, with a 30-horse power, four-cylinder car. They had numerous exciting experiences while abroad, and were snow-bound for eight days in the Alps, where they were all but plunged over a precipice of 1,000 feet by a heavy car bearing down upon them while turning a curve.

After completing 10,000 miles in the United States, starting in southern California on the Mexican border and touching British Columbia territory, they sailed from New York on the ill-fated steamship Republic and were exposed to the elements on deck and open boats for twenty-four hours before being taken ashore. Mrs. Hoover sustained a nervous shock and contracted a cold from which she has not yet recovered.

"Europe is a veritable paradise for reckless drivers and the so-called 'torrids,'" Mr. Hoover said in speaking of his trip abroad. "The roads are unusually good and such a thing as a speed limit is not known; and, as a result, there are frequent head-on collisions, which often end fatally, in addition to destroying hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property annually. From four to five collisions a week on the road between Nice and Monte Carlo is not out of the ordinary."

Another thing is the system of graft by the drivers, from which there is no escape. Besides paying his mechanic $150 a month for the touring, he is expected to give twenty-five per cent. commission on all purchases. A hired car costs from $1,200 to $1,500 a month in addition to the foregoing, and with the chauffeur's personal expenses this runs the bill up to $2,000 a month.

LIMBERGER AS A CANCER CURE

Denver Chemist's Investigations Following Death of His Mother

Denver, Colo., Oct. 23—Limberger cheese as the principal ingredient of a cancer cure is the announcement of Philip Schuch, Jr., a local chemist.

Following the death of his mother, eleven years ago, from cancer, Schuch began an investigation of the cause and spread of cancer, during which he asserts that he discovered that the basic germs of cancer are similar to those of leprosy and consumption. He spent several months in the leper colony of Venezuela, studying the disease.

Schuch's cure consists of a thorough cleansing of the affected parts with liquid of quinine and fresh sweet milk in equal parts and then the application of points of iodized fresh limburger cheese, moistened with glycerine.

Although no tests of this has been made, Schuch says that theoretically the formula should cure mild cases of leprosy.

His judicial attitude is assailed by Hector J. St. John, a well known lawyer, who gained prominence as the attorney of the late John McKinnon.

BELIEVE ANARCHIST MEANT MURDER

Noted One Arrested on His Way to Meeting Place of Czar and Emmanuel

Rome, Oct. 23—It is reported that Carlo Modena, the young Spaniard who was arrested near Spezia on Sunday while on his way to Raconchi, where King Victor Emmanuel and the Czar are to meet, has been recognized as an anarchist who recently arrived from the United States for the purpose of making an attempt on the life of either the Czar or the King. The man, who was well dressed and had a number of medals on his chest, had a revolver in his hand when arrested.

The messenger prints a remarkable natural son of a deceased European monarch. Up to a short time ago he was in receipt of an annual allowance of $6,000. Large Attendance—The Opening Addresses—The Fredericton Wharves

Fredericton, Oct. 22—What gives promise of being the most successful convention ever held by the Maritime Young Men's Christian Association opened in St. Paul's church this evening. Despite the inclement weather there was a large attendance and the proceedings were followed with much interest.

The speaker claimed that the Y. M. C. A. was rendering good service by giving young men larger ideas of their own province. He dwelt upon the importance of politics of the country and he felt it was their duty to endeavor as far as possible to offset the evil influence of the grafters, who frequently dominate party conventions.

MRS. PANKHURST, IN BOSTON, OPENS HER CAMPAIGN

Boston, Oct. 22—The methods which inspired the militant suffragettes in their efforts to obtain "votes for women" in England were laid before Boston sympathizers by Mrs. Emmeline Gould Pankhurst in her opening American campaign speech at Tremont Temple tonight.

She pleaded the cause of women from both the standpoint of a wife and mother and with energetic arguments claimed that woman suffrage was based upon the "bill of rights" and that women as well as men always had the right of petition.

YOUNG FOLKS CORNER

Little Doctor Phil

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR. Say, mamma, it just makes me sick to see the poor stray cats about the streets...

"How's that, mamma?" asked Phil. "I don't see where I come in for anything except for a feeling of contentment after being of assistance to the hapless creatures of the streets that are at the mercy of cold, starvation and wicked boys."

"Well, I'll explain my meaning after a while," said Mrs. Downs. "But now we must do some planning. Let me see, where could we make a suitable hospital for our cats, anyway?"

"You've no use for the old stable," said Phil, "since we sold the horse and carriage in order to get an auto. Papa said the other day that he meant to sell the stable for whatever he could get for it, as he didn't want it taking up the room on the grounds. But while we are waiting for the sale to take place, they might use the stable for our cat hospital."

"A capital idea," said Mrs. Downs. "And if we find good use for it, papa will allow us to keep it, I am sure."

Then a trip was made to the stable, and the building was gone over carefully. "You see, the place is roomy enough to accommodate a large number of cats, and we'll have our man John divide both the first floor and the loft by wire partitions. We shall have to keep the cats apart for a few days—those that show a disposition to fight. After they are well acquainted, they will live together on friendly terms."

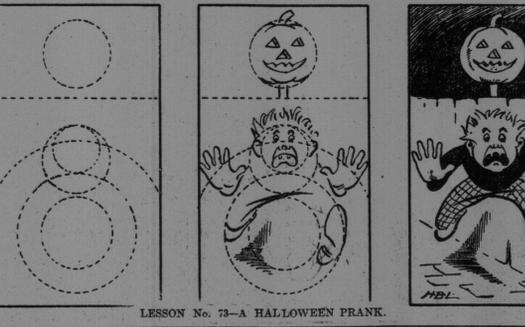

"And while John is fixing the partitions I'll be bringing in the stray cats," said Phil. "I'll make a trip about the streets every evening after school and pick up a cat and carry it home in a basket. After the place is full, we'll do it."

Mrs. Downs smiled. "Wait till we have the place full," she said. "We'll find a solution to the problem of overcrowding our hospital."

"But why should we call it a hospital, mamma?" asked Phil. "Why don't we call it an asylum for homeless cats?"

"Well, most of the cats you will bring here will be in need of hospital attention. They will be starved, some of them ill from hurts and cold and none in a perfectly healthy condition."

LESSON No. 73—A HALLOWEEN PRANK.

not only do something for the homeless cats, but for Phil as well. "Oh, yes, I remember your saying that, Doctor Phil, but I've been so busy that I had not thought of it again."

"Well, let me read what I have here," said Mrs. Downs. And she read from a bit of paper: "Large assortment of fine cats for sale. Purchasers must give good homes to cats. Will not sell to those having small children. Apply at office of Doctor Phil, 10 Mulberry street."

Phil sat up in bed and looked questioningly at his mother. "Are we to sell out the hospital, mamma?" he asked, disappointed in his voice. "No, dearie, only a few of the finest and healthiest cats to make room for other unfortunates. We'll sell off a certain percent of the number each month, thus finding good homes for good cats and providing for those in distress. And, you see, what money comes from the sale of our cats shall go into the good little doctor's hands."

Mrs. Downs was smiling as she said this. And Phil smiled, too; not because of the promise of money, but because the plan was such a good, sensible one. He had been bothered a good bit in his mind lately on account of the hospital being so crowded, and he had not thought of a way to provide for the new needy ones that he saw every little while, though he had pretty well cleaned the streets of stray cats. "Well, my nurse is splendid when it comes to knowing just what to do in all cases," declared Phil. "I couldn't run my hospital without her. We'll sell the cats as fast as they become fine and strong. And just think of it, mamma, people buying poor old stray alley cats for pets! That shows you what feeling and good, warm beds will do for even paupers."

"The whole animal kingdom is the same—all God's creatures," said Mrs. Downs. "And the whole man kingdom is the same, too, my child. It is environment, comfort, education, love, good teaching, that makes one man appear to be superior to his fellows. And could our little Doctor Phil do for the humanity in distress just what he is doing for the stray cats—ah, what a mercy it would be!"

"Maybe I shall some day," declared little Doctor Phil. "I couldn't run my hospital without her. We'll sell the cats as fast as they become fine and strong. And just think of it, mamma, people buying poor old stray alley cats for pets! That shows you what feeling and good, warm beds will do for even paupers."

HALLOWEEN

When Hallowe'en at last does come, The boys, and the girls, too, Go shyly looking round to find What mischief they may do.

Gates are marked, barn doors are found In village and in town; And little mischief-makers plan To turn things upside-down.

Tick-tacks mysteriously appear On maiden ladies' doors; The cook, who they had taken into their confidence. They also dived from under the bed a big tin pan, a bundle of straw...

Just as Lilly was about to scream, and Tommy to lend his voice to hers, the tall, dark form of a man appeared just behind the children, and he turned as fast as lightning to see who he was. "That's grandpa!" And grandpa saw the children cowering there, just as they cowered when he had been in the kitchen. "What's the matter?" he asked, coming to Tommy and Lilly. "A shame that I didn't go right to bed instead of going out to remove the new gate from the hinges, so that the little Hallowe'en mischief-makers cannot get hold of it. I hid it in the kitchen. But while taking care of the gate I spoiled my little tads' first Hallowe'en frolic. But never mind, we'll just stay in hiding till papa and mamma return; then we'll play the jokes on them. You shan't be entirely disappointed, my dears." And grandpa entered into the Hallowe'en spirit with the youngsters, and together they played some funny pranks on papa and mamma an hour later.

Dr. Germantown—During the next decade we may expect a most wonderful decrease in mortality. Mr. Graves (the undertaker)—Pessimist! Why is it easy to break into an old man's garden?

THEY PILED THEM ALL AGAINST THE DOOR.

TOMMY AND LILLY CELEBRATE HALLOWE'EN

BY HELENA DAVIS. Tommy and Lilly were sister and brother. They were little, tots of seven and nine years of age, and both enjoyed games and sports, just as any little folks do.

On the morning of Hallowe'en Tommy called Lilly into the back hall, and she came to see what he had done. "You would fancy from the way his eyes shone that he had some mischief in mind. And after he had whispered a few minutes to Lilly her eyes began to dance as nerrily as his own, so that she was sure that he had some mischief in mind."

"Yes, we'll put a tick-tack on his door and pile up lots of traps against it, so when he opens the door to see if a ghost is there making the noise all the stuff will tumble into his room. Won't he wonder, though? And Tommy laughed and said that grandpa couldn't hear."

That evening at the supper table Tommy and Lilly cast significant glances at each other across the table. They had been planning all that afternoon for the evening. And at last it had arrived. They were so impatient for bedtime to come that they had no appetite for supper.

"Tommy and Lilly, your mamma and I are going to attend a lecture this evening," said papa. "I hope you'll have pleasant dreams." Then she and Tommy snickered as grandpa said: "Yes, I'll be in bed and asleep before a lamp can drag his tail ten times. So, goodnight, little dears."

Then the children heard grandpa shut his door upstairs, and knew that he would soon be in bed. After 10 minutes had passed (the time seemed like 10 hours to the impatient children) Tommy and Lilly stole softly upstairs. They tiptoed past grandpa's door, fearing to rouse him should they make any noise. On to Tommy's room they went, and there they hid a large tick-tack that they had made that afternoon with the help of some please phone to the police to come and chase them away. Last year they did a lot of damage about the barn."

"Oh, young fellows will be young fellows," smiled grandpa. "We mustn't forget our own boyhood. Sam, of course, I don't propose to allow the mischief-makers to tear the house down over our heads; but as to carrying off the gate—or the wash-house or the laundry-pump; those things are of no consequence, you know." And the jolly old man laughed.

A few minutes before 8 o'clock Lilly's and Tommy's parents left the house, going to attend the lecture. Grandpa went up stairs to his room, saying goodnight to the little ones, who were putting away their toys, which they had made believe to play with for an hour after supper. "Good night, grandpa," called out Tommy. "Hope you sleep well."

"Yes, good night, grandpa," said Lilly. "I hope you'll have pleasant dreams." Then she and Tommy snickered as grandpa said: "Yes, I'll be in bed and asleep before a lamp can drag his tail ten times. So, goodnight, little dears."

How Leon and Bert Spent a Tragic Hallowe'en

A Story of the Grand Canon, by William Wallace, Jr.

Say, Bert, what shall we do on Hallowe'en? The question was asked by Leon Thompson of his cousin, Bert James. The two were standing in the yard of a summer hotel that was situated on a mountain slope not far from the Grand Canon in Arizona. The boys had spent the entire summer there with their grandfather, who was the manager of the hotel. And even after the autumn had set in they begged their parents to allow them to stay on. They promised to attend the little village school, and to be able to continue in the classes in the city school on their return home after the real winter had settled down and driven them to their own home in a Southern city.

"Well, it's so quiet in this place," observed Bert, "that we'll probably have nothing to do but study. We'll wish we could transport ourselves to our own bustling city for tomorrow night." And he smiled in remembrance of the merry times he had enjoyed in his own home place. Ah, there the boys made the night merry with their gayety and innocent pranks!

"Well, you know I am not given to original ideas very often," went on Leon. "But this afternoon a real scheme developed in my noggin. Now, since I have got as far as the tourists and Big Spring Curve and the camp, I shall continue. My plan is this: Let's go down to Big Spring Curve tomorrow morning. You know there is no school tomorrow, thanks to its being Saturday. We'll not show our selves at the camp, for although the tourists might all be gone on an exploring expedition, the servant in charge of the tent would spy us and report when his superior officers returned. We'll locate the camp and then keep our distance till night. Then—hurray for some old Hallowe'en pranks at the expense of those tourists. There is one man among them who was doing a lot of big talking about his bravery. Well, he's the one we'll frighten out of a week's growth. His appetite will go, not to return for some days. We'll make queer noises, hide certain camp equipments, toss pebbles against the tents and howl like Comanche Indians. Gee! I can see that brave man getting behind a boulder for protection from the canon witches and Indians."

"Well, we might get some fun out of your scheme—if it goes through all right," agreed Bert. "But as for frightening those people, well, I think that is only a childish dream. But we might make them sit up and wonder where the strange sound came from and what sort of wild beasts were making them. I believe all the persons of the party are Englishmen, aren't they?"

advancing and the sun soon dropping from their view, for they were many thousands of feet below the level of the ground, and the day was hours shorter in the canon than at the village. At 5 o'clock it was quite dark, and Leon and Bert were still searching for the Spring Curve.

"We may have passed the place," said Leon, getting a bit anxious. He had heard of people getting lost in the Grand Canon and perishing before succor reached them. But he had felt so sure of the way on entering the canon, and no thought of getting lost had entered his head.

"Bert voiced Leon's apprehension. 'I fear we've lost the trail,' Leon," he said. "It's very strange that we could wander about here for five hours without finding our destination if we were on the right road. We've got into one of those side canons, which lead away from the main one, as sure as we're alive."

"I'm afraid you're right," admitted Leon. "Gee, it's not a cheerful outlook, is it?"

Both boys tried to keep "a stiff up per lip" as the old saying goes, and set down to rest and partake of their cold food. But their appetites were not keen. They drank sparingly from a bottle of water they carried. After their refreshment they held a consultation as to their next movements. And it was agreed that they should return to the hotel as fast as they could go. Bert had a watch and could keep tab on the time. "If we walk briskly, we can reach home by 2 o'clock in the morning," he said.

They turned resolutely homeward and walked briskly, their plan for Hallowe'en being dimming with every step. Just as they were climbing over some boulders Bert slipped and fell, crying out sharply. Leon stooped over him, but could not see his friend's face. "Are you hurt?" he asked sympathetically.

Bert tried to stand, but found he could not hold his weight on the injured ankle, which hung limp, and which was paining him terribly. "I do believe I have broken it," he gasped.

You may imagine the feelings of those boys at the moment. There, in that great canon at night, one of them suddenly made helpless. Leon felt sick with fear. Bert was sick with pain. What should they do? Leon tried bandaging Bert's swelling ankle, using his kerchief and necktie, but he bungled the job and Bert found no relief. He groaned in his agony.

Presently several dark forms appeared round some boulders, and the boys beheld a party of men. They came on toward the spot where the boys were sitting. When they came within a few paces, Leon spoke to them. They said something in reply, but it was a strange tongue they spoke. Then, on closer approach, the boys beheld some Indians. But they were friendly Indians, and some of them understanding a little English, was made to realize the boys' dilemma. Soon the big Indian had Bert's ankle better bandaged, and declared it was just a very bad sprain, but not broken. Then, telling one of his companions about the boys being lost, sent him back to the hotel with them. And then he told Leon that they had lost the main trail and were many miles away from Big Spring Curve. And when the boys reached the hotel, Bert being carried on the back of their Indian guide, they both solemnly declared they'd never again venture into a canyon, even for a Hallowe'en lark. And they never did.

HALLEY'S COMET

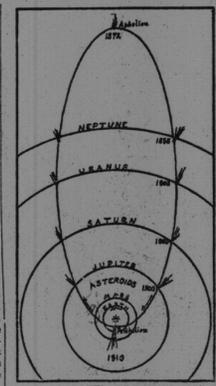

By Frederic Campbell, Sc. D. President of the Department of Astronomy, Brooklyn Institute.

This series of six illustrated articles on Halley's Comet will be notable as chronicling the arrival in this hemisphere (on September 11th last) of that monster, which in 1456 drove all Europe into a frenzy of fear...

(Copyright, 1909 by Frederic Campbell.) In the little village of Marthon, N. Y., lives a retired astronomer, Dr. Lewis Swift. Before he had reached his twenty-sixth birthday he had the distinction of being the director of two astronomical observatories...

where it was predicted that it would be found at this time, and it is now rushing toward earth and sun with ever-increasing speed, so that in the month of December, and for months thereafter every eye will see its gleaming sword held aloft over the earth...

The heads of comets differ much in brightness and in actual size. That of the great comet of 1811 measured 1,200,000 miles in diameter. Holmes' comet in 1892 displayed a diameter of 700,000 miles. It will aid to the comprehension of such figures to recall that the diameter of the earth is only 8,000 miles...

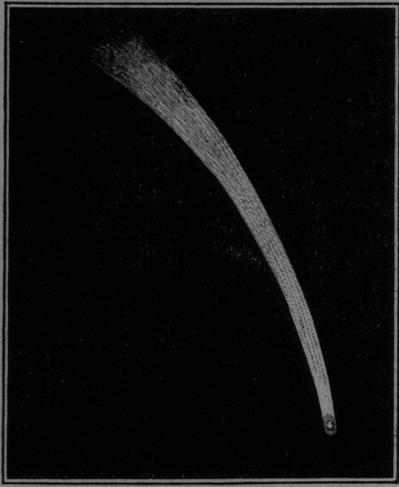

Orbits and directions of Halley's comet and the planets, with the sun at focus of each. Orbits of Venus and Mercury within that of the earth. (Drawn by the author.)

witnesses describe it as having a tail which nightly swept across one-third of the heavens. This would mean a length of 60 degrees, equal to a line of 120 full moons. No wonder if in that ignorant, superstitious and troubled age, the spectacle nearly deprived Europe of its reason...

distant, more than twenty-five times the distance of the moon.

Large comets are as bright as Venus, the brightest star, and their nebulous heads sometimes appear as large as the moon. Their steady approach to the sun, which attracts them within our sky, usually develops a tail, which streams back into space, following the head when approaching the sun, preceding it when retiring.

again about the year 3888. Halley's comet seems a frequent visitor when compared with such long absent members of the solar family. For it must be remembered that all periodical comets, returning at regular intervals, just as they belong to the solar system as Jupiter, Venus, the moon or the earth. For it is the sun's attraction which dominates them all, no matter how far they may wander and how long they may disappear.

AUTHOR'S VIEW ON WAR Maurice Hewlett, the English author, is a warm advocate of peace. He set forth his views in a letter read at the annual meeting of the International Peace Association not long ago. "I am, as you suppose, a peace at any price man," he wrote.

"The use of murder and homicide as a means of deciding international difficulties seems to be inconceivable. I do not, however, believe that we shall make any real advance until war is commonly recognized in the terms we now apply to drunkenness or gluttony as degrading and disgusting."

"For bringing the Lusitania—a ship which cost $7,500,000—from Liverpool to New York, with her 2,000 or 3,000 passengers and crew, valuable cargo and mails, through fog and storm and calm, the captain and his six officers get the minimum sum of $99.42 in wages, which is divided among the seven of them.

"I know more than one captain of a freighter who is paid twice as much for bringing his 3,000 to 5,000-ton craft across the Atlantic as the Cunard line pays to the skipper of the 32,000-ton, $7,500,000 Lusitania for like services.

HIS CONFIDENCE IN The Prudential was shown by his voluntary and unsolicited selection of this company. The following letter from his son and executor, Mr. Robert J. E. D. G. FAIR TO CONCLUDE WITH A GRAND AUCTION

This Afternoon is Children's Time-Big Interest in the Voting Contests.

The Every Day Club fair rooms were last evening again a scene of great interest. The club orchestra played a splendid programme of popular tunes, and Miss Long rendered a vocal solo.

The games and refreshment booths were well patronized, and competition was keen all the evening. The shooting gallery was perhaps the scene of the keenest competition, four possibilities having been made. The bean toss was also a good drawing card last evening, as it has been throughout the week.

The winner of the lucky number in the drawing for the barrel of apples was Harry Scott, 35 Marsh road. The voting contest for most popular physician was again the cause of much interest. The standing last evening was:

SUPERIOR PAINLESS DENTISTRY!

"There is a world wide cry against the dentists that they torture their patients. These are strong phlegmatic and endure the agony. With a second class this is simply impossible, and thousands of teeth are neglected and lost even though the patients may be able to pay for our most skillful services. Then there is a third class who, after months of mental torture in anticipation, finally come into our hands, and, with nerves strung to a painful point, pass through the ordeal, but at what a cost! We do not sufficiently consider the consequences of shock in the dental chair, yet undoubtedly many either for months and even years from injuries to the nervous system received whilst in our hands."

"The greatest duty of our profession today is to discover and adopt a mode of patiently performing our operations."

NOTE.—The above is an abstract from a paper read by an eminent dentist of New York City before a society of dentists in Philadelphia.

The famous Hays Method of Painless Dentistry, for which we are sole agents for Canada, is the best method on earth.

POLICE COURT

The Judge's Warning to Archibald Quinn—Several Cases

In the police court, this morning, Walter Scott, aged thirteen, was charged with stealing lumber from Mr. Hamilton, of Erie street. The boy said that he took only one board for kindling wood for his home. The case was stood over until 5.30 o'clock this afternoon.

Archibald Quinn, his face badly bruised and his clothes torn and splattered with mud, pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and was remanded. His honor placed his hand over his eyes and closely scrutinized the prisoner. "I can notice you changing each time I see you," said the judge. "You are becoming yellow, unnatural looking—all from rum. I saw a man in the witness-box here a few weeks ago and his finger-tips were becoming decomposed from liquor—he is now in the cemetery. You will be remanded for the present."

Mr. Panchon, an aged Hebrew, was in court this morning, having been reported on a charge of allowing his horse to run at large in Main street yesterday afternoon. It was placed in McCarthy's stable in Simonds street, and he was told to pay for its keep and he would get the animal back.

ROBERT BUSTIN DIES, AGE 78

Well Known Athlete in Former Years—Also an Inventor

Robert Bustin died at an early hour this morning at the age of seventy-eight years. He was one of the best known men in this city. Of a genial disposition, he numbered many friends. Older residents will remember him best as a lover of good clean sports, in which he was a leading figure. A splendid athlete, he was one of the fastest runners in his part of the country back in the fifties and sixties. He was also a speedy skater and was ranked as one of the best in his time. Mr. Bustin was also an admirer of horse flesh and was a trainer and driver of some note. He served his time in the saddle business with Robert Collins, who kept in Charlotte street in the sixties, and later conducted a business of his own. Of late years he devoted his time to the patenting of a number of articles, among the number being a fire escape, a car fender, and speed skates.

For a time he was a conductor on the European & North American railway. He married a daughter of one of the first contractors on the road, Dillon P. Myers. Surviving him are two sons and two daughters. The sons are Robert and Dillon, of Boston, and the daughters, Mrs. Ketcher, of Boston, and Mrs. James Wilson, of 165 St. James street, this city.

STORY WAS FOUNDED ON UNREASONING JEALOUSY

The Times on Thursday gave James Bartley's version of the story of his woe, in which he told of his wife's departure and the alleged cause. Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Bartley both came to this office, and the lady naturally expressed both grief and indignation that her character should have been brought into question, or any doubt cast upon her fidelity to her husband and children. She had returned to the city, and immediately took steps to remove the false impression conveyed by her husband's unwarranted jealousy. As Mrs. Bartley was penitent, and disposed to modify or deny what he had said to the Times reporter, this journal regrets that any credence at all was placed in the story as told by him.

BOYS MUST KEEP FROM CORNER

Six boys, their ages ranging from 12 to 19, were in the court this morning charged with expecting on the sidewalk at Doody's corner, south end. One boy, named McNeil, was wrongly summoned and was exonerated from all blame, as it was shown that he was not on the corner.

The names of those in court this morning are, Michael Daley, Ernest McNeil, Daniel Doyle, Wm. Carter and Harold Doyle.

Daley, the eldest of the quintette, said that he had been at the corner the night they were reported for being there. His honor said that in other cities there were no complaints on charges of expecting on the sidewalks, and there should be none here.

Young Doyle told the judge that he had been standing on the corner for a few minutes while waiting for another lad, as they were going to "take in the nickels." Carter admitted being on the corner, but he also was waiting for a companion.

His honor quoted the law to the young fellows and said it was framed sixty-one years ago when there was no electric lights. He said that it had been reported to him that two initials had been cut on the corner, and that the boys in trouble, even screaming out in the streets, were liable to a similar penalty. "If you five boys promise me that you won't hang around that corner," said his honor, "and will help me to keep it clear of trouble, I will let you go."

Each of the boys promised faithfully to keep away from the corner and all were allowed to go, after being lectured in strong terms by Judge Ritchie.

At this stage, Joseph Rogers appeared, and came in for a reprimand from the judge. His honor said that he understood that this young fellow was the ringleader and the chief source of all complaints which came from Doody's corner.

"Where do you spend your nights?" asked his honor.

"At the nickels, I go almost every night,"

"Well, you spend too much time and money on them, then. If you would take Butler's catechism and study it a few hours, it would be more profitable."

His honor then questioned the boys individually on the commandments, and all showed that they were in need of "plugging" on the subject.

None was allowed to go with the others.
