The Soudan war correspondents returned to London yesterday. They speak indignantly of the cavalier treatment they have been subjected to by Sir Henry Kitchener. They say they were kept in the dark as to everything that was going on, and their messages were mutilated by the cen-

GEN. KITCHENER'S NARROW ES-CAPE.

It leaked out this week that Gen. Kitchener had a narrow escape from death through treachery during the battle of Omdurman. He was riding with his staff in front of a Soudanese battalion, which was advancing, when at least a dozen bullets whizzed past his head. Gen. Kitchener galloped away as fast as he could, and word the battalion. There is no doubt the perpetrators were some of the recently enlisted dervishes.

MAN MANGLED

Fell From a Freight at the Wortly Road Bridge.

His Left Arm and Leg Cut Off-The Right Arm Broken and the Fingers Smashed.

"For God's sake, kill me!" was the pitiful cry that attracted the attention of Watchman Ryan immediately after the west-bound freight, No. 99, had passed over the Wortley road bridge at 6:10 a.m. today.

Edward Hughes, a lad 17 years of age, from all that can be learned, had boarded the freight en route to his home in Burtt, Mich., a small town about thirteen miles from Saginaw. When just east of the Wortley road the young fellow fell off the bumpers, and dropped beneath the moving train.

The man's cries and groans brought Bridge Watchman Ryan to his assistance, and the latter says it was a horrible sight that presented itself. Hughes lay alongside the track with his left arm severed near the shoulder, his right arm broken and the fingers smashed, while his left leg was almost cut in two about four inches below the There was blood on everything around.

A crowd soon gathered, and a boy was dispatched for Dr. Piper, while a telephone message was sent for the am-bulance, which arrived about it is an hour later. Hughes' condition was heartrending. He repeatedly begged to be killed and have his misery ended. He was removed to the general hospiwhere he received every attention. but he is not expected to recover. "THE MOTH AND THE FLAME," Local theatergoers are doubtless anticipating the engagement of the Kelcey-Shannon Company at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night, Sept. 29, with more than ordinary interest The presentation of a new play, the work of one of the most brilliant American dramatists, by a company of popular players, are very good reasons for this expectant interest. The play was received in other cities with such strong evidence of approval by the public and press, and the Kelcey-Shannon Company, headed by Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, are so pleasantly known here, that there seems to be every reason to anticipate as favorable a verdict as they have obtained else-where. Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon have been so long associated with genteel comedy and plays distinctive for their dignity and refinement, that they almost stand by themselves among reigning stars in this respect. An added element of interest of their appearance in Mr. Fitch's new play, "The Moth and the Flame," is that they will both be seen in characters decidedly different from any they have ever played here, and whose impersonations were highly lauded in other cities in which they have played. They have surrounded themselves with an exceedingly capable company of actors, whose finely balanced work has been favorably compared with that of the very best permanent stock companies. Mr. Fitch's new play has been declared in many quarters as the most distinctive American drama of modern society life that has yet been written. Recalling the splendid impression which his other plays have made in this city, the presentation of his latest play will be awaited with an unusual degree of consideration and interest. "The Moth and the Flame" deals with society life in New York city, among the very fashionable people who are usually denominated the "smart set" of the "400." The main theme is said to be strongly dramatic, happily relieved by comedy interest of decided originality. The contrast of incident and character is most marked. There are strong intense moments in the play, while the dialogue in the lighter scenes has all the airy brilliancy and spontaneity of humor in which Mr. Fitch has shown himself to be such a thorough master. The first act of the play takes place at the town house of the Molton's, where a masquerade party is in progress, at which all the guests appear in fancy children's costume. Marion Molton, a young woman of rather serious frame of mind, yet who is fond of gaiety, falls in love with Edward Fletcher, who is young, handsome and rich, but whose past career is black with a number of disreputable love affairs. Marion is warned, but the more her friends accuse Fletcher the more she loves him. It becomes known during the festivities that her father has misused funds entrusted to him. Overwhelmed by the threatened disgrace on the morrow he retires to his own chamber and kills himself, but it does not become generally known to the guests. Fletcher comes to the relief of the family secretly with money. He leads an irreproachable life during the following year, and shortly afterwards leads Marion to the altar. The wedding, which takes place in the chapel of a fashionable New York church, is interrupted by a young woman who accuses Fletcher of wronging her in the past. The ceremony breaks up in The rest of the story is confusion. very cleverly managed, the author having dexterously veiled the denouement and so manages to hold the attention of the audience until the final curtain. Fitch's treatment of the play is said to be exceedingly unique as well as original. REAL WIDOW BROWN CC. On Tuesday, matinee and night, "The Real Widow Brown" Company will open at the Grand. The comedy is rplete with fun, fast and furious, and is greeted with bursts of applause and merriment everywhere. The mistakes of the young man who is doing his best to personate the real charming widow are most ludicrous. He is assisted by two jolly fellows and a couple of bright, pretty girls. is full of complicated situations, the unraveling of which causes unbounded merriment. The company is under the management of Mr. A. Q. Scammon, who has many other successful comedies on the road, including "The American Girl," "The Burglar," and American Girl," "The Burglar," and "Side-Tracked." He has given special attention to the selection of artists for this company, which includes many well-known favorites. The costumes are new and handsome.

AILSA CRAIG'S FAIR

The Attendance Spoiled by Two Days Rain-Large Number of Entries.

The miserable weather of Friday was responsible for the small attendance of visitors at the Northern Fair in Allsa Craig, but it did not to any great extent interfere with the number of entries, which were about equal to last year's, when fair-day was a beautiful one and the attendance big. Those who did brave the elements saw a good class of exhibits, but missed the speeding events, which had to be called off on account of the track being a puddle of mud, though the racing men were willing to take the money if it were hung up by the directors. The entire absence of fakirs made things less lively than in former years, when the grounds were usually crowded with them. One lonely sweat-board was in operation, opposite the Munroe House, the owner of which was "cleaned out" by three natives, who rung in a "pho-

An East Oxford Butter Maker Secures a Verdict of $1 Damages.

Woodstock, Sept. 24.-W. B. Cockburn, of Woodstock, sued John Borland, of East Oxford, for $2,000 damages for slander. The jury awarded him one dollar when they returned their verdict. Cockburn, who is a buttermaker, had been negotiating with the object of taking charge of the Diamond cheese factory near Vandecar and turning it into a creamery as a more profitable business. The directors and shareholders of the factory met on Feb. 21 last and discussed Mr. Cockburn's propositions. The defendant, Borland, was asked to speak, and he advised against Cockburn coming into the concern at all, alleging that the creamery man had already "failed five times successfully." The directors decided against accepting Cockburn's offer. Thus the plaintiff claims he was materially damaged by the defendant's

A MOTORMAN'S ESCAPE

How Benjamin Bacon Escaped From a Terrible Position.

Toronto, Sept. 19.-Mr. Benjamin Bacon, motorman No. 150, in the employ of the Toronto Street Railway Company, tells the following story of his escape from a situation in which death menaced him daily. "I have for a year past been a great sufferer from severe pains in my back. My doctor told me I had the first stages of Bright's Disease. He could not help me, nor did the many advertised medieines do me any good. At length, I gave Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial. The result is that today I am a new man, sound and well and strong in every respect.

FRENCH RIGHTS IN THE SOUDAN. Paris, Sept. 24.-The Figaro publishes a long article by Prince Henry of Orleans on the subject of the rights of France in the Nile Valley, which, he says, are antagonistic to England. Undoubted French rights, he declares, were obtained through the abandonment of the Soudan by Egypt, and England's engagement with Egypt does not extend to the reoccupation of the Soudan. French rights on the Nile are further secured by the treaty of Ber-lin, and by the Hinterland theory. Moreover, he says, French rights were obtained by the sufferings of French officers and men and by great expenditure of money.

Berlin, Sept. 24 .- The Cologne Gazette publishes an article commenting upon a letter addressed by Vice-Admiral Canevaro, formerly commanding the Italian warships in Cretan waters, to all of the powers, in which he is un derstood to recommend the re-estabdishment of the European concert in Crete. "All of the powers," the Gazette says, "would gladly put an end to the Cretan disturbances, and all of the powers are of one accord that the rights of the Mohammedans should be respected equally with those of the Christians. Europe, consequently, would have to decide to subdue the Christian insurgents by force of arms. As certain powers are not disposed to take that measure, there is no valid reason why Germany and Austria should again at low themselves to be drawn into the indulge in Speeches and a Concert on Board the Campania En Routs to England-An Era of Good Feeling.

London, Sept. 24.-There was a concert on Thursday on board the Campania, which conveyed the peace commissioners to England, in aid of the seamen's charities. U. S. Senator Frye presided. After eloquently appealing for subscriptions, he referred to the that that three hundred years ago, Spain, at the cost of a hundred millions, and with a great armada, set out to possess England, but, he added, England, through her sailors, won a victory which gave her prestige for all time. The senator then adverted to the brilliant victory of Commodore Dewey at Manila. During the course of his remarks on this subject, Senator Frye for American sailors had gone all over the world, and has lifted the name of the United States higher than ever be-

He began by saying the United States and the mother country had squabbled in the past, but they were family quarrels only, which it well behooved all others to let alone. He added, impressively, that by divine dispensation the last three months had brought about a better feeling between Great Britain and the United States than ever before. "And why not?" asked the senator, who continued. "We speak the same tongue, we think much the same, and we read the same books. The meaning of this is that 125,000,000 of people speaking the English tongue and standing together in thought and purpose will do more for peace than any war ever waged."

Judge Day was then induced to speak, and with dignity in word and manner, he referred to the fact that while British citizenship has been a ready passport everywhere, American citizenship now none the less furnishes a passport everywhere equal to any warrant of manhood. The speaker added that he could not talk of the mission, but he hoped all would be gratified to welcome the committee on its return on the consummation of a peace honorable to the United States and alike just to the other interested

BRANTFORD WANTS BASEBALL The Brantford Expositor says: Why not have a city team here next year? St. Thomas and Chatham can support a professional nine, why not Brantford? The Telephone City has much larger population than either Chatham or the Calamity City, and there is not the slightest reason why this city cannot be represented by a nine that would advertise Brantford throughout the country, and at the same time furnish amusement for the baseball loving public of the city that will patronize clean, high-class ball. There is money in it for a live manager.

Cincinnati has dropped out of sight in the league race. Minneapolis closed the Western League season $4,000 to the bad. Catcher Brady, of New York, had the index finger of his right hand broken by a foul tip. Indianapolis claims to have cleared $3,000 this year, and the talk of sending the city into the National League is again being revived. The number of paid admissions to Kansas City for the last series with Indianapolis footed up 22,219. A conservative estimate places Jimmy Mannings winnings this year at $20,000. Both Baltimore and Boston are lucky in this stage of the fight in not having a man on their regular teams out of condition. Both teams, however, are well supplied with good substitutes and the disabling of one or two men would probably make but, little difference in the result. George Black, ex-manager of the Chathams, is in the city today. He garnisheed the moneys of the Chatham Baseball Club in the hands of St. Thomas, and supposed the case came up today. The hearing, however, was fixed for Oct. 5.—St. Thomas Journal.

My Dear Doctor—I am glad to be able to say that the young man Mr. W., whom you treated with the Dyke Cure for Intemperance, seems entirely cured of his craving for drink. He tells me himself that all desire has been absolutely taken away. It is refreshing to notice the improvement in his personal appearance. His eyes are bright and clear, and altogether today he presents a striking contrast to his appearance three months ago. Inasmuch as almost two months have passed since he finished taking his treatment. I have every hope that his cure will prove to be permanent.

The Shortis Scandal and the Latest Attempt of Sir C. H. Tupper to Shift the Blame From the Proper Shoulders.

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper has written an article for the Canadian Magazine for September, in which he attacks the Governor-General, in respect to the case of Shortis, who, our readers will remember, was guilty of murder at Valleyfield, Que., under circumstances which, if he is to be regarded as a sane man, were of a most shocking character, and for which not a shadow of provocation had been

The article of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper does not convey a correct statement of the facts. It is true that the Governor-General was without the advice of his Ministers, and that being so-action being required on the part of the crown-it was open to the Governor-General to act on his own judgment, and so he was informed by the Colonial Secretary. But for the ministers of the crown not to agree upon the advice to be given to his excellency, as a Government, was in itself a most unconstitutional proceeding. The crown is always entitled to the advice of responsible ministers, who ought to speak with one voice. Mr. Gladstone has pointed out that it would be utterly at variance with the English parliamentary system if the sovereign were present and learned of the differences that may exist between ministers during deliberation-that it is advice that is to be given to the crown, and so ministers must speak with one voice, and when an individual is convicted of murder, whether the law is to be allowed to take its course, or whether the punishment to be awarded is to be modified, by the exercise of the prerogative of mercy, is for the ministers to decide, and it is a part of their constitutional duty to advise the crown upon the subject.

We understand that in the Shortis case the ministers were not agreed, and instead of reporting to his excellency whether the law ought to take its course, or that the sentence should be commuted, the Prime Minister reported only the hopeless divisions that existed among his colleagues. Indeed, all that Sir C. H. Tupper has written only goes to show a failure of duty upon the part of himself and his colleagues. There ought to have been an agreement. There ought to have been advice tendered, and if there was no nent, and no advice tendered, is it not as plain as noonday that the ministers failed in their duty? Practically what they did was to advise his excellency to exercise his own judgment in the case. Practically, they said to his excellency: "Some of us favor the execution of Shortis; some of us are opposed to the execution of that criminal; and if the crown is to exercise the prerogative of mercy, it must do so upon the unaided judgment of her Majesty's representative."

Under the English constitutional system, the crown discharges the judicial side of its functions through the judicial tribunals; but the judicial tribunals do not execute the law; that belongs to the administrative side of the Government; and as the sovereign is required in every capital case to "administer justice tempered with mercy," there is no capital case in which this provision of the coronation oath can be omitted. Up to the point of pronouncing sentence upon the convicted person, the proceeding is a judicial proceeding. Once the sentence is pronounced then the executive government acts, and the constitutional advisers of the sovereign have in their keeping the prerogative of mercy, which is always invoked in every capital case, and in the exercise of this prerogative the ministers must assume the responsibility of advising whether the law is to be executed, as the sentence was pronounced, or whether it is to be modified by those merciful considerations which may be properly invoked owing to surrounding circumstances; but the attribute of mercy passes in review every capital case judgment which the court pronounces.

We say, therefore, that in the Shortis case there was a failure of duty upon the part of the Administration. There was nothing over-ruled. There was an author-1ty vested in the crown, which called for a review of the case under the prerogative of mercy. This influence always arises between the judgment and the execution. When it arose in the Shortis case, the ministers failed to advise, for it is not fitting, under our system of criminal jurisprudence, that the law should take its course without the assent of the crown. This assent Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper and his colleagues did not give, neither were they, on account of their divisions, prepared to aid the crown in the exercise of one of its prerogatives which must pass under its observation every capital case.

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper says: "Indeed, the case of Shortis shows bow much we remain yet in a state of tutelage in certain phases of nationality and self-government. The Governor-General in that case, under the laws of Canada, had no duty cast upon him to interfere with the due course of law. He was not advised by ministers responsible to a Canadian Parliament to interfere; but, forsooth, the judgment of a Canadian court was up- well. They tell us that under reciproset by the 'ipse dixit' of a colonial minister who thought the Governor-General might act on his own motion."

In this statement, the ex-Minister of Justice caricatures the facts. There is a duty cast upon the crown which the crown is called on to discharge on the advice of the ministers, and when the occasion arose which called for heard nothing but discordant notes.

Plebiscite Discussions.

The plebiscite now in progress is being conducted in soberer fashion than any similar campaign of which the people of Canada have memory. There has been more argument, and less vituperation, than in any previous contest. And there has been no denial anywhere as to the evils of intemperance. There are, of course, extremists on both sides; but the mass of the people are considering the question as a whole. There are those who say the question of the best method of diminishing the evils of the liquor traffic is purely one-sided, and that only one side of the matter should be presented. For example, there are those who virtually assert that Principal Grant should be summarily put down, and not allowed to put forth his opinions either on public platform or in newspaper column. But these are the people by whom the best of causes has been more than once retarded. Depend upon it, in a free country, free discussion cannot be put down. Nor is it desirable that it should. If prohibation there is to be, the only desirable way in which it can come is after the freest and fullest discussion, whether that discussion be on public platforms or in letters to the press. It is better to have the clash of opinions, and arguments, and resolves, before putting any unusual law into force than after.

declaimed against newspapers of Canada for inserting letters on each side of the controversy, even going so far as to charge that those who gave opportunity for such communications, pro and con, must be receiving money. Probably there are newspapers which receive money for the insertion of letters on this side or that. That is doubtless true of some publications; but we believe that as to the great mass of publications throughout Canada, the statement is just that sort of irresponsible slander the recoil of which would injure the best cause in the world. The Advertiser's position for 35 years on questions of moral reform needs no vindication. Nor is it necessary for The Advertiser to say that its course in admitting letters on both sides of the important question of the best method of limiting the evils of intemperance—for we presume no believes they can be extirpated entirely-has not brought into its coffers a solitary five-cent piece, directly or indirectly, from either side. It is therefore perhaps in as good a position as any journal to give its opinion that, while the assertion, or insinuation, to which allusion has been made, may be true as to some publications, it is not true as applied to the great majority of the newspapers of Canada.

We observe that a speaker recently

Perhaps the most striking biography since Boswell's "Life of Johnson" is Dr. Moritz Busch's memoir of Bismarck, which has just been published. unity of expression, his excellency It has created a sensation in literary and political circles. Dr. Busch, who enjoyed 25 years of official and private intercourse with the great Chancellor, has adopted the Boswellian method. The result is a literal portrait, in which the weakness and strength of Bismarck's character are alike revealed. The biographer's warm, living contact with his subject is manifest in every page. His memoirs are not mere reminiscences; they are records made on the spot, while fresh in the mind. They are full of vivid particularization. They not only throw light on the inmost recesses of Bismarck's personality, but into the guarded secrets of European politics. This unique work is in two volumes, with portraits. The Montreal Herald points out that during August last Canada's purchases of cotton piece goods, linens, woolens, and carpets showed marked increases -£38.186 in all, compared with August, 1897. Our importations of worsteds fell off £13,791. The London Economist is impressed by the healthy tone of Canadian business, and is yet uncertain whether the explanation of our increased purchases of British goods is to be chiefly sought in the preferential tariff or in the better times here. In the past eight months we have largely increased our sales in Great Britain of butter, eggs and bacon. The bacon trade shows a remarkable expansion. Last month our exports in this line were £144,909, as compared with £56,-265, in August, 1897. The Canadian product is rapidly overtaking the Danish in the British market.

They are in the same plight as many thousands of others who answered the call to arms in the first flush of patriotic enthusiasm, and who, now that the war is over, naturally wish to escape the hardship and enforced idleness of camp lile, and to return to their homes and occupations. They did not dream that they would be detained after the conflict, or there would have been less alacrity to enlist. The United States needs a larger force than the regular army to garrison Cuba. The ease with which the English have met and handled the Indian problem in Canada-a problem quite as hard as that which we have had to encounter-with only a handful armed men, against our thousands of troops, and with hardly an Indian uprising, as against scores of bloody episodes which have marked and marred the settlement of our western country, is an example of the success of Great Britain's present system of treating inferior races. Doubtless, in time, hard necessity would drive us, as it drove the English, to the adoption of proper methods, because we have now precisely the faults which the English had before they realized the need of a change in system.

RICHARD WAGNER AS HE WAS. The widow of Richard Wagner some time ago authorized her husband's lifelong friend, Houston Stewart Chamberlain, to write, with her assistance, a Pennsylvania regiment of volunteers two articles on "The Personal Side of Richard Wagner." Mr. Chamberlain undertook the work, and The Ladies' Home Journal secured the material. The articles are singularly valuable in that they give a complete picture of the man in his home and daily lite, and contain much new matter, while many of the illustrations and portraits have never been printed.

> EVOLUTION OF HIGH WAGES. Appletons' Popular Science Monthly for October will contain an article by Edward Atkinson, entitled "The Evolution of High Wages From Low Cost of Labor." He points out that in every branch of industry there has been a progressive advance in the rate of wages, and that this advance has been accompanied by, and is in fact a consequence of, a general decline in the prices of nearly all products. The October number of this great scientific magazine will be quite up to the standard.

OCTOBER LADIES' HOME JOUR-

For the first time, in print, Gen. A. W. Greeley tells, in the October Ladies' Home Journal, the fearful experiences of himself and his ice-imprisoned band of explorers as they faced death for 264 sunless days at the north pole. Man after man dropped dead at the side of this commander, and the rest simply waited for their turn. It is a wonderful story. Bright in contrast is The Ancedotal Side of Mark Twain, in the same magazine, in which the humorist's closest friends tell twenty funny new stories of him. These are only samples of a host of good things in the October number.

A TIMELY PUBLICATION The September Atlantic is an especially "timely" number, both in the selection and the treatment of its topics. The war situation is thoroughly discussed. Elisee Reclus, the famous geographer, deals with the pending di-vision of China. There is a strong and brilliant sketch of the life and political record of Bismarck by Wm. Roscoe Taylor; while the recent death of the famous romantic painter Burne-Jones is appropriately treated by Wm. Sharp. Especially fresh and fascinating are the tender and delightful family letters of Carlyle, and the unique autobiography in which Prince Kropotkin begins the narration of his strange, almost incredible career as a nobleman anarchist. These are only some of the good features.

HARPER'S BIG FOUR. The special features of the October number of Harper's Magazine are "The Santiago Campaign," by Casper Whitney; "On the Roof of the World, Notes On My Journey Through Asia, by Sven Hedin; "Our Navy In Asiatic Waters," by Wm. Elliot Griffis; and 'Our Future Policy," by Hon. J. G. Carlisle. There are further installments of "Social Life in the British Army"; and "An Angel in a Web," by Julian Ralph; Mr. Smalley concludes his interesting paper on "Mr. Glad-stone," and "The Span o' Life," a story by Wm. McLennan and J. N. McIlwraith is begun. The number contains also several short stories, poems, and the Drawer.

The Amateur Sport Department in Harper's Weekly will be resumed before the end of the year, probably on the return of Mr. Casper Whitney from the Hawaiian Islands, where he has gone on a mission for the Weekly. In the meantime special articles on timely sports will be contributed by well-known writers.

Another story of timely interest, the scene being laid in Cuba, is called "The Dynamite Pack-Train." It tells of the courage of a young insurgent officer who had command of a mule-train that was attacked by a Spanish column. Other short stories of the October number are "Runner-Up, '98," by F. H. Spearman, a golf story; "A Very Little Fellow," by Capt. C. D. Rhodes, U.S.A., is an incident of life at an army post in the West; and "Jack Forsyth's Brave Feat," by A. J. ## BUSINESS BOOMING THE WATERLOO

Inspiring Reports of the State of Trade in Canada.

Activity in Dairy Products-Grain Movement Good-The Situation Across the Border.

New York, Sept. 24.-Bradstreet's Review says: Business is active in the Dominion of Canada, and prospects continue very favorable. Toronto reports fall trade expanding, low fares having helped the larger cities at the expense of smaller ones. Wheat deliveries small, and the wheat crop in Manitoba 40,000,000-double last year's yield. Farmers are storing grain in railway elevators, and some speculation is expected to arise therefrom. At Montreal business is active, but prices still rule rather low. The cheese trade is reported booming, and collections are satisfactory. Rather better advices as to distributive trade come from the maritime provinces, while from British Columbia business is reported good and collections satisfactory.

Dun & Co. says: The general tenor of reports from Canadian provinces is more favorable this week, especially as to the movement of the new crops. At Halifax trade is getting along fairly well, with prospects regarded as encouraging for the fall, yet collections are somewhat slow. Trade at Quebec continues good, with more orders than a year ago, and collections are up to expectations, with probability of improvement as the season advances. The city trade has been stimulated by local events, which have attracted a number of buyers. At Montreal a gratifying improvement is seen in val-ues of cheese and butter, with a more active market, and cooler weather brings increased business in drygoods and kindred lines, so that general trade and collections are healthy. Money is firm, without immediate prospect of advance. Toronto reports wholesale trade very good, with groceries, hardware and leather active Wholesale and retail trade at Winnipeg continues active, and deliveries are as yet light, but conditions remain fair. Activity is reported at Hamilton in all lines, with collections good. Wholesale trade continues fairly satisfactory at Victoria, with collections about average, and prospects for an improvement are favorable. The jobbing trade in the Kootenay district is fairly active, though orders at Vancouver from other districts are not as plentiful. Local trade continues steady, and in drygoods, clothing and boots and shoes increases.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review: New York, Sept.23.—This country is not drawing on Europe as largely to pay for breadstuffs as it did a year ago, and yet wheat exports for the week, flour included, have been 3,963,804 bushels from Atlantic ports, against 1,894,897 bushels last year, making for three weeks 10,-203,941 bushels from both coasts, flour included, against 13,569,129 last year. Prices have risen sharply about 4c for the week, and the exports of corn, though not as large as last year, have been heavy in comparison with any other year. The price slightly advanced. The reports from different cities disclose a wonderful activity at the chief centers of western trade. Even in eastern markets it is commonly said that no larger trade has ever been known, unless in 1892, but the western cities are running things much after their own taste this year, having greater advantages than ever before in heavy bank balances. The iron and steel trade expands with a rapidity which throws into the shade all expectations.

The textile industries are not sharing the general improvement to a full extent, in part because the heavy decline in cotton, with large stocks of goods accumulating, and in part because the are at present disposed to pay.

Failures for the week have been 173 in the United States, against 209 last year, and 16 in Canada, against 20 last Favorable trade developments man-Mest themselves chiefly along the lines previously noted. The importance of a large export demand to the country's domestic interests is illustrated by the improved tone and prices of wheat and flour this week, growing out of the better foreign buying induced by less favorable Russian crop reports, smaller shipments from that country, and apparently continued careful selling by American producers. From the west and northwest advices continue largely in the former cheerful Conservative management earlier in the year has resulted in fairly good conditions in California, where crops were less favorable than further north, and failures are down to a minimum. At the east the least favorable reports continue to come from the textile industrials. Wool is quiet and manufacturers are not encouraged to buy heavily in the face of the very moderate trade in wool goods. Canadian buying of Australian wool at Boston is noted. Cotton goods are in better distribution, but prices betray the unsettling influences of low prices for the raw material, and print cloths are slightly weaker. THE WIDOWS TO DIVIDE.

Toronto, Sept. 24.-An arrangement has been executed between the two women who both believed themselves the widow of the late Benjamin Plowman, of Weston, and are both claimants on the Sons of England endow ment fund for $1,000 insurance which he carried. Under the arrangement the woman who was apparently first married to Plowman receives the money on condition of paying from $200 to $300 to the second Mrs. Plowman, that being equal to the amount which is estimated would be paid out in expenses.

ELECTION CASE

In Which Water Did Not Figure Much.

Some Drinks Cost $5 Bach-$2 for a Vote-Two Charges of Bribery Proved-Judgment on the Treating Charge Reserved.

Berlin, Sept. 24.-The North Waterloo election protest was rushed through in a few hours. According to Mr. Justice Rose's announcement from bench, he and Mr. Justice MacMahon hold that two charges of bribery have been clearly proved. Judgment is reserved on the treating charges. If judgment on the treating questions is against the respondent, no further argument will be necessary.

The following testimony was taken in addition to that already published. Treasurer Wm. Roos swore that he was the treasurer of the Conservative Association for North Waterloo at the time of the election. An order for $2 had been presented to him by Wesseler. He could not find that order now. John R. Eden had got a check made out in favor of W. Wessler or bearer. The check was produced by Mr. Roos. It had not been indorsed by anybody.

"What are those letters under your name?" asked Mr. Johnston. "They mean treasurer of the Conservative Association. Mr. Roos said Dr. Lackner had given him a check for $250. The witness had given Mr. Scully, the president of the association, a complete statement of the disposition of the party's funds. There were checks for every cent that had been paid. The reason that Wessler got the $2 was that Eden asked for it. He certainly thought the election had something to do with the making of the check.

PAYMENT OF FIVE DOLLARS. Charge No. 15 was next taken up. Michael Schell, a farmer on the Waterloo road, said that he had a claim against Mr. Scully and Dr. Roberts for driving a team in 1896. Mr. Scneil had seen Dr. Roberts at New Germany shortly after the election of March 1. The doctor then paid him $5 for having driven a team for Mr. Jos-eph Seagram, M.P., on June 23, 1896. He had never asked for the money. He had announced late in February that he would not go out and vote. Soon atterwards he got his $5 from Dr. Roberts. The doctor had made no objection paying him the $5. Mr. Schell said to Mr. Aylesworth that he had no idea of voting either before or after getting the $5. Both he and his father had decided that they would not vote at all. If they had voted, they would probably have voted for Dr. Lackner. It was now nearly ' o'clock Before adjourning Mr. Justice Rose stated that his colleague and himself nad decided that the Wessler and Scnell charges had been proved. MR. SEAGRAM'S LIBERALITY. Charge No. 15 was next considered. It stated that Mr. J. E. Seagram, M.P., had paid $5 apiece for two treats, and had refused change. Edward Peten swore that he had been at a meeting in Spahr's hotel at Linwood, on Feb. 24. Mr. Seagram had been in the bar at Spahr's hotel with about 30 other men. Afterwards Mr. Seagram had treated in Friedman's hotel, buying drinks for everybody. Mr. Friedman but he did not notice the denomination.

FIVE DOLLARS A DRINK. C. O. Parcels corroborated Petch's evidence. Mr. Friedman, the hotelkeep-er, then entered the box. He swore positively that Mr. Seagram had paid him $5 apiece for two rounds of drinks and had declined to accept any change when it was offered him.

The next charge was No. 6. Jacob

Zinkann, of Berlin, swore that Frank Gardiner, of Berlin, had wanted him to go to Breslau with a team and work in the election. Zinkann refused, saying he wanted $10.

THE DOCTOR'S BILL.

Charge 22 was next called. Louis Steiss, a German, who speaks English poorly, swore that Dr. Lackner was once his physician, and had a bill for $4 against him. The doctor had sent him two lawyer's letters asking a settlement. Just before the election Dr. Lackner went to Heidelberg, where Stelss lives, and talked politics to him. Stelss said that he could not vote for the doctor because he charged too The doctor subsequently told Steiss that he had charged too much, and that Stelss must visit him. That was the end of the matter, as Steles never accepted the invitation.

Mr. Johnston stated that he would rest his case at this juncture. Mr. Aylesworth stated that he desired argument on the two charges es-

Judgment was reserved. Argument will take place at Toronto.

They Mislead and Deceive Inexperienced Women.

Home enemies in the form of package dyes and dyes composed of a large proportion of common soap, and very little coloring matter, are creating great loss and consternation in many homes. These deceptive dyes that only benefit the manufacturer and retailer with fat profits, mislead and deceive inexperienced women. The women who regularly use the Diamond Dyes are never deceived. Diamond Dye users find in the Diamond Dyes all that the manufacturers promise—purity, fast-ness fullness of color and great bril-liancy. #### THE PLEBISCITE

Arguments Both For and Against Prohibition as Presented by Two Responsible Citizens.

AGAINST PROHIBITION.

To the Editor of The Advertisers I would like to say a word or two this prohibition question, and I want to state right here that I am going to vote against prohibition. I am going to vote for my freedom. I was born under the British fiag, the flag of the brave and the free. I want to be free to eat and drink whatever I I would be ashamed to own myself a British subject did I vote for such a tyrannical measure. I would feel myself no better than a Turkish serf or a Russian slave, not able to decide for myself what to eat or drink—slave to be guided by a few faddists of the Rev. Hobbs type, who says it's "better to steal than drink" a glass of alle or cider. When did it become a brime to drink ale, wine, whisky or How is it worse than stealing? If I steal your goods I injure you. I break a sacred and moral law. you. I break a sacred and more do If I take a glass of ale or wine, do I injure you or anyone else? Most certainly not. Then the fact remains that it is none of my business who takes ale, whisky, wine or cider. I do not wish to take anything stronger than water, that is my business. have no right to interfere with what another person shall drink; therefore, I voted for prohibition, I should vote way my neighbor's freedom as well as my own. Not only that, I should deem myself as bad as a midnight robber going secretly and voting away my neighbor's property and goods. Many men talk as if the millions of money invested in the hotels and factories, and the thousands of men employed in them, is all a criminal busiess. I cannot see it in that light. It has always been as legal and right to build a brewery, a cider mill or a wine press as it has to build a church. and it would be just as reasonable to petition the government to pass an act to prohibit the building of churches, the holding of religious services in any church, mission or house oever, under menalty-same as for selling wine. Put the boot on the other foot. I am a temperance mannot the slightest interest in the business: but I could not vote for prohibition without compensation. Do unto others as you would be done by. J. CHAPMAN.

ON PROHIBITION. To the Editor of The Advertiser:

I feel it will not be out of place at this stage to ask the privilege of giving expression to some of my ideas through your paper of one of the most momentous questions that is agitating the people of our country today-prohi-While it has been pretty well threshed out by able lecturers and writers, I feel that I am inadequate to advance anything new on the subject, but I conceive it a great privilege to have the use of your columns to proclaim the rights and wrongs of any evil which exists in our fair Dominion. I will briefly endeavor to answer in a common-sense manner some of the arguments advanced against a prohibitory law by persons. Much to my surprise, one of them is the revenue by direct tax. If the revenue is to be paid by direct tax, I will cheerfully pay $4 per paying ten times the amount indirectannum, and consider it cheaper than ly by the liquor traffic. I illustrate the be able to vote on the 29th: If you point: If a man buys one glass of beer, vote for prohibition you are saycosting 5 cents, per day, it amounts to ing you want the dread evil $18 25 per annum. Instead of the beer, put to death. If you do he pays $4 in direct tax. He has then not vote at all, you are saying, "I do left $14 25 for necessaries for himself not care whether it goes or stays, peo-and family. The merchant who sells ple may drink and be lost for anything will be directly benefited, and every I care!" Ah! Someone cares. man, woman and child indirectly. Financially, we would be the gainers by

Under prohibition it can hardly be estimated the saving to the country in dispensing with many officials who are now employed to bring persons who commit nuisances and commit crime to justice, as the results of the liquor traffic. We need not fear direct taxation. Under prohibition, the exmenses of the country will be lessened in a hundred ways or more. The rewenue will be paid easier than under the liquor traffic, not taking into account the untold misery and pauperism that prohibition would alleviate. An other argument against it is the break ing of law-illicit stills, smuggling and perjury. There is not one of the laws on the statute books but what is broken; and the prohibitory is expected to be broken to a certain extent, as all other laws are. But withal, will not the enactment of a prohibitory law suppress the evil of the liquor traffic, as does by other laws? Certainly, by the same rule. If perjury be an argument, then apply it to the present laws, and do away with all laws, and see what a nice state of affairs our country would be in. Examples have been put forth against such as the Scott Act, and the State of Maine as not producing the prohibitory Neither are criterions. The Scott Act was only local. Liquor was easy to be had by crossing one side of the townto the other, and the State Maine is on a part with our Scott Act. It will make all the difference in the world if prohibition reaches from one and of the Dominion to the other, and law properly enforced, and men placed in position to see that it is enforced; also, the penalty to be severe on the infringement in every case.

Scriptural arguments have been offerd against it. I commend everyone who takes the Scripture as the greatest foundation to build on all rights and wrongs, when not twisted in order to advance selfish interests. It is said God made wine, and intended it for man's use, and that it was used in olden times, and sanctioned by the Saviour. Grant it. He made everything Typographical Union No. 6 of New that is made, and pronounced it good, to be used in a proper manner, and not abused. He said: "Let your moderation be known to men in all things. Be not overcome with evil." The question arises from the abuse of liquor. Is our country not overcome with the evil of it? No sane person will say nay. Then, if such being the case without a doubt, what is to be done? There is only one way which is right-to sweep It from the land-and I venture to state after three years' trial there would not be two out of ten that are now against it, but would hail the prohibitory law with delight. The people of our Do-minion would be more wealthy, more healthy, more happy, better morally, and the money that is wasted find its way into a better channel. I will ask you, Is it likely the State of Maine would have a prohibitory law for forty years, detrimental to the welfare of the country, according to anti-prohibitionists, that would not be repealed before now? The fact of it existing so long proves that the Americans know when they have a good thing, and there is any amount of testimony from Maine to bear it out. The benefits of prohibition are innumerable, as the evils of the liquor traffic are bad. It is for everyone on the 29th to do his duty by casting his vote for prohibition. If you wish prosperity in our Dominion, let every man and woman not think of themselves, because they may take it or leave it alone; but think of the masses that cannot resist the temptation, entailing misery, crime and poverty in the land. Temptat. In will come, but woe unto him from whom they come. Thus saith the Scripture: the tempter is worse than the receiver, and those who do not vote for prohibition are the persons throwing the temptation in the way, to create the evil that is in our midst. I never belonged to a temperance order, but do not indulge in liquor. I always have and will lend my aid to suppress the liquor traffic. Thanking you for space, yours respectfully, C. GREEN,

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

With your permission I would like words to your numerous readers on this question, which the voters of the Dominion are asked to give their advice on a week from today. Not to be wearissome either to yourself or your readers, I would just ask one question. Is the traffic in strong drink an evil or is it not? Well, I apprehend all your readers will admit that it is an evil and a sinful business. Now, for my own part, I think there are some sins committed in our Dominion more wicked and more heinous than that of drunkenness, but I know of none which is so destructive to so many, and that has so many other evils in its train.

Therefore it is an evil, a tremendous evil, an awful evil, an evil that is destroying thousands of bodies and souls every year, and bringing down many broken hearts to the grave all the time. All this we know, and much more, and what then? Well, then, the country is asked to say what will be done with this accursed thing? Will we try and get rid of it, or will we keep it still among us?

Oh, is there a man in all Canada who desires to have it remain with I think even the hotel-keepers would be the first to vote for it to go, as there are none which know the horrible effect of its sting as well as they. Typographical Union No. 6 of New York has "whitewashed" President-elect S. B. Donnelly of the Interna-tional body and his former fellow officers on the charges of illegal use of the funds of the union. Such was the information given to the press, but for correspondence printed by the Typographical Journal, letters to delegates to the coming convention, and charges boldly made by members of "big 6," it is quite evident that the half was never told and the end is not yet. From all these sources it seems that the investigating commit tee found the suspended officers guilty of illegally transferring funds and de frauding the International Typographical Union of much money, supposed to be several thousand dollars. Of course, this money will have to be paid before "big 6's" delegates will be seated at next month's convention at

The International Socialist Congress held in 1896, London, England, re-solved that the next congress should be neld in Germany in 1899. The committee having the arrangements in charge has notified all concerned that they could not get permission to hold the congress under conditions where liberty of debate and the personal security of the delegates against arrest by the government would be assured; hence the congress will not take place in Germany, but is deferred to 1900, and it will he held in Paris, France. Following this announcement comes a report that Emperor William of Germany, at a banquet, touched significantly upon the labor bill to be introduced in the reichstag this winter. The emperor said it would provide for the imprisonment at hard labor of anyone seeking to prevent workmen who are willing to work from pursuing their vocation, and would also provide for the punishment of those who even incited workmen to strike.

Dr. McGlynn delivered an address in Brooklyn on Labor Day. In refer-ring to the holiday, he said that the day should be used to think out problems confronting workmen and their solution. We are told over and over again that labor is being oppressed. Why do not workingmen unite and lift themselves above this oppression? It would not be well if Labor Day were spent merely in recreation. There should be thought, followed by intelligent action. If you workingmen wernot so stupid, not apparently plind to your interests and your powers, the grievances you cite might be easily corrected. Of course you must first clearly unde.stand your own case and then proceed to apply the remedy in your hands. Eight hours a cay, his aer wages, better homes, the happiness which the Declaration of Independ. ence says shall accompany life and liberty, the comforts and luxuries of civilization-your own creations-are yours, if you will but reach out and

VIGOROUS OLD AGE

Mr. Wm. Elliott Tells How to Obtain It.

He Has Been Subject to Fainting Spells and Cramps-Was Gradually Growing Weaker and Weaker.

[From the Echo. Plattsville, Ont.] Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have attained a most enviable reputation in this community. Probably no other medicine has had such a large and increasing sale here. The reason is that this medicine cures. Old and young alike are benefited by its use. Recent printed an account of a remarkable cure of a well-known lady of this place through the agency of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and since publishing that we have heard of another similar case. Mr. Wm. Elliott, a farmer living near Bright, is a well-known figure there. Although an old man he almost daily walks to the village, a distance of nearly a mile, for his mail. Many years ago he came from Scotland to the farm on which he now lives and cleared it of forest. In conversation with him, he related to an Echo reporter the following: "I am 78 years of age and strong and healthy for an old man. Mine has been a vigorous constitution, and up till six years ago I hardly knew what it was to have a day's illness. But then my health began to fail. I became subject to cramps in the stomach. I was treated by doctors, but received no benefit. I gradually grew weaker, and as I was past the three score and ten I thought my time had come. Next I took fainting fits and often I would have to be carried back to the house entirely helpless. The doctors said my trouble was general weakness due to old age and advised me to carry some stimulant with me to use when I felt a faintness coming on, but this I refused to do. I had read in the papers of Dr. Williams Pink Pills and thought they would be specially adapted to my case. I tried one box but they did not seem to help me. In fact I thought I felt worse. I decided to continue them, however, and after taking four boxes there was a marked improvement. My strength returned and I was no longer troubled with fainting spells. In six months time with this treatment I gained fifteen pounds, taking in all eight boxes of the Pills. Today I am a well man and I owe my complete recovery to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These pills cure not by purging the system as do ordinary medicines, but by enriching the blood and strengthening the nerves. They cure rheumatism, sciatica, locomotor ataxia, paralysis. heart troubles, erysipelas and all forms of weakness. Ladies will find them an unrivaled medicine for all ailments peculiar to the sex; restoring health and vigor, and bringing a rosy glow to pale and sallow cheeks. There is no other medicine "just as good." See that the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, is on every package you buy. If your dealer does not have them, they will be sent post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2 50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., or Schenec tady, New York.

Native Fijis Walk Barefooted in a White Hot Furnace.

Weird Performance, Deliberate and Without Deception, That Baffles Comprehension and for Which There Is No Plausible Explanation.

The island of Benga, where the fiery ordeal takes place, was the supposed residence of some of the old gods of Fiji and was therefore considered a sacred land. First of all, it is necessary to explain the native love, or even, in which the masawe reet is baked. This oven is merely a more or less circular hole or hollow dug and prepared in the ground with a diameter of from 18 feet to 24 feet. The even is next filled with rough logs of firewood, piled up nine er ten feet. On the logs are placed a great number of water worn stones, varying in weight from eight pounds or ten pounds to one hundredweight. It may here be explained that the masawe is a Dracana, with fibrous roots as large as a yam, and full of sugar. These roots are baked in the love fer four days. The fire for the ordeal is lighted in the masawe even before daybreak and burns for several hours-that is to say, until all the stones on the top, big and little, have fallen through into the hele and become almost white with heat. Then of course nothing remains but a quantity of charred embers and a few half burned logs. In due time the embers are dragged or fished out by means of vines attached to long sticks, the end of the vine having a running loop, which is placed over the log. The burned logs and embers having been removed, green sticks, 18 or 20 feet long, are then inserted into the oven among the heaps of hot stones, and, using these as levers, the stones are distributed evenly over the surface of the whole floor of the earth even. Sometimes the heat is so terrific that the operators are unable directly to manipulate the lovers themselves, so they are compelled to rest the poles on the sides of the oven, and then pull on them by means of vine ropes. The Fijians who take part in this ceremony make for themselves out of the broad banana leaf a special kind of garment to shelter their bodies from the heat given off by the white het

When the big embers have been re oved, the wood ashes are swept away by means of whisks fastened to the ends of long sticks, and then nothing remains in the oven save the clean layer of gloving stones. These preliminaries occupy about half an hour, and then all is ready for the ceremony itself. At a given signal the performers, barelegged and barefooted, excepting for the anklets of dried fern leaves, crowd into the pit and begin walk ing leisurely about as if on a fashionable

Here is the narrative of a person whe witnessed the ceremony: "Jonathan, a native magistrate, led the way into the pit, closely followed by 14 others. They marched round about the even, moving clowly and leisurely and treading armly on the redhot stones. The spectacle held me spellbound. Every moment I expected my nostrils to be assailed with the smell of burning human flesh, but it was not se, and as I looked in the faces of the men strolling about in the love I could see no emotion whatever depicted, but merely the inscrutable impassivity of feature common to many savage races. Some of the bystanders threw bundles of green leaves and branches into the oven, half hidden in the clouds of steam that arose from the kissing, boiling sap. Handkerchiefs were also thrown in and afforded an unmistakable proof that there was 'no deception.' Before these lace trifles reached the floor of the oven they were alight and almost consumed by the great heat. Presently Jonathan and his followers marched out of the inferno and were promptly examined by the governor's commissioner. Not only was there not the least trace of burning, but even their anklets, which were of dried fern leaves, were not so much as singed.' Jonathan himself was closely cross examined by the government officials present-of whom he stood in great awe-and he declared with perfect candor: "There is no trick. Why should there be? I and my forefathers have done this thing for generations, long before the white man came into the islands. Some of us may not believe the legend of the Fairy Chief Moliwai, but I do believe that it has been giv en to my tribe to pass unharmed at all times through the masawe oven." Another official eyewitness declares "the men had not anointed themselves with any preparation whatsoever." Traders, missionaries and others who have witnessed the ceremony cannot explain it, and some have endeavored to do the thing themselves, with the most horrible and disastrous results.

One official theory, given by Lord Stanmore's aid-de-camp, is contained in the following: "I venture to think that the ordinary mortal who visits tropical climes has no idea of the amount of heat the natives can bear on the soles of their feet. Let any one put his hand upon a rock or object on which the tropical sun has been playing for hours, and the result will be that he will find himself extremely anxious to withdraw it as speedily as possible. The native, however, can go all day on the rocks and not feel the heat." Lord Stanmore himself, however, in a letter to the writer, directly contradicts the inference here conveyed. "If we accept this theory," he says in effect, "the thing excites no wonder. It is not, however, the case that the natives' feet are so insensible. I have often seen the hardiest of natives crossing a short extent of the shingly bed of a river in the hot sunshine, compelled to run off and cool their feet in the stream, being utterly unable to bear the heat of the sun warmed stones." And Lord Stanmore's testimony is conclusive. In his opinion the thing is simply inexplicable, and a better theory will have to be found than the callousness of the performers' feet .- Maurice Delcasse in World-Wide Magazine.

They are really a connecting link between the sharks and rays, partaking largely of the characteristics of the latter. How a Paymaster In Our Navy Took

Fall Out of the Bank of England. The late Paymaster Clark of the United States navy, of Delaware, was attached to one of the ships on the European station during the period of the civil war. It may have been the Kearsarge, but it is not important. She was an armed vessel and had been long at sea and came in for coal, provisions and to give the men a liberty day on shore. To meet these and other expenses it was necessary to have some £8,-000 (men are paid in the currency of the country they may be in when on foreign stations) and Paymaster Clark drew sight drafts on the subtreasury of New York through the government agents, J. S. Morgan & Co., bankers, in old Broad street, London. Accompanied by the vice consul, he went to the Plymouth branch of the Bank of England, and, presenting his drafts, asked to have them changed for notes and gold. The bank manager, not content with exercising proper commercial scrutiny, was very nasty and finally

"Well, I do not know the subtreasury. I do not know the paper nor you, and I have never had business with the gentleman who is United States vice consul here, se I won't eash your drafts. You say J. S. Morgan will inderse them. You had better go up to London and let him cash them. Mr. Clark went out to the telegraph office, put himself in communication with Mr. Morgan, and Mr. Morgan went to the Bank of England in London, the manager sent word to the Plymouth branch manager and that gentleman came personally to the Royal hotel and with his hat in hand begged to be of service to Paymaster Clark in any way that gentleman would suggest. The apparently placated paymaster, accompanied by his clerk, accompanied the bank officer to the bank. The drafts were duly passed over and a large bundle of Bank of England notes placed before the paymaster. "What are these?" said Clark.

"Those are Bank of England notes." "Yes, I see they are notes signed by Frederick May that the bank will pay bearer, etc. Well, I do not know Mr. May, and of course I do not know you. This paper may be goed, but I have no assurance of that. I'll trouble you for the

The humiliated bank manager had to hunt it up, and Paymaster Clark carried it down to the beat in triumph. "I would have preferred part of the money in notes," he said, "but I couldn't refuse the chance of getting even."-Philadelphia

A SHREWD LITTLE GIRL

She Prompted the Question Which Saved an Old Woman's Life.

Elizabeth Janfield, afterward Lady Falkland, was called an "odd child." times her father, who was a judge, took her with him to court. On one of these occasions a woman was brought before him on a charge of witchcraft. It was said that she had bewitched two or three persons to death. The frightened creature. when asked if this were se fell on her knees, and, weeping, confessed that the accusations against her were true.

"Did you bewitch -- to death?" asked the judge. "Yes," was her reply.

"Did you come in the form of a black cat and breathe on him so that he languished away?" "I did." And then the grave judge heard a whisper at his ear, and his little daughter-she was only 10 years old-begged him to ask the woman if she had bewitched John Symondes to death. The question was put and immediately answered in the affirmative. How had she done it? Then she told one of her former stories, at which all the company laughed. The reason of the merriment was that John Symondes was the judge's brother-in-law and at that moment was standing near him in court. The judge then asked why she had made such a statement.

"Alas, sir, I knew him not," replied the woman. "I said so because you asked

"Are you no witch?" "No; God knows I'm not."

"Nor did you ever see the devil?" "No, never in all my life."

On further examination she said she had been told that if she did not confess she would be tertured until she did, but that if she admitted all the accusations mercy would be shown her. She was thereupon acquitted, and she owed her release and obably her life to the shrewdness of a little girl. - Youth's Companion.

Reasons Which Impelled Britain to Invest the Soudan.

A Brief Sketch of the Man Who Headed the Triumphant Invasion of & Stronghold of the Dark Continent-Inner Life of the Mahdi and Khaiifa -The Route Followed.

The man at the head of the victorious allied British and Egyptian forces is Sir Horatio Herbert Kitchener, aide de camp to the Queen and Sirdar of the Egyptian army. The General got a commission in the army in 1871, when he was 20 years old. He is yet a young man for the important position he is filling. In 1874 he went out to the holy land on an expedition of survey under Major Conder. In 1877 he surveyed the whose of Galiles. He surveyed the Island of Cyprus and in the Nile expedition of 1884 he was deputy assistant adjutant and quartermastergeneral. He fought at Suakim in 1888 and at Toski in 1889, and was rapidly promoted.

CONDITIONS IN THE SOUDAN.

Tacts Impelling the Sending of Britain's Victorious Expedition.

The present situation in the Soudan is the outgrowth of the fall of Khartoum and the death of Gordon and the massacre of Hicks' army. The Soudan, formerly belonging to Egypt, was taken by the Mahdi, and General Gordon, the Governor, was put to death. That was in 1885, and not a moment since then has the British public or the British Government rested satisfied with the Soudan in the hands of the Mahdists. The Mah'li was a religious fanatic, whose followers are no less fanatic and their fighting qualities are perhaps the best described by Kipling's poem to "Fuzzy Wuzzy." When the Mahdi died Abdullah Bin Sayd Mohammed, one of the Mahdi's Khalifas, proclaimed himself successor, and he had made a cunning and cruel ruler. Omdurman, his capital city opposite ruined Khartoum, on the Nile, was built by the Mahdi's followers after the fall of the older city.

Some idea of the inner life of the Mahdi and the Khalifa is found in the remarkable experience of an Austrian officer named Slatin who, while acting as governor of a province in the Seudan under Gordon, was captured by the Mahdi and held a prisoner many years. The following facts are taken from Slatin's book, "Fire and Sword in Soudan:"

One March merning in 1895 the mess of the Egyptian and English officers in the service of the Khedive at Assuan, the last outpost of civilization against the Mahdists, was just beginning to bestir itself, when there arose a hubbub cutside, and breathless runners from the desert clamored that a white man, who had escaped from the power of Khalifa, was coming. The officers scarcely could drep their coffee cups when there staggered into the mess a gaunt and haggard man, clad in a torn and dirty jibba, or Mahdist coat, whose skin was so bronzed by exposure to the sun that the Egyptians who gathered about were not more swarthy. In the full glare of the morning sun, rising through the ever cloudless sky over the yellow wastes, through which ran the green ribbon watered by the Nile, he stood, and the officers helped the bundle of bones and rags to a chair.

The return of "The Man Who Was" in Kipling's story was no more dramatic than this actual return to the land of white men of Rudolph Slatin, or Slatin Pasha, as he is known. Sixteen years before the young and dashing Austrian officer had gone out into the wilds of Africa as governor of the great province of Darfur. For twelve years he had been a slave in the hands of the Mahdists. suffering every indignity that the ingenuby of the Mahdi and his successor, the Khalifa, could invent. The officers gave food to him and dressed him once more as a white man. They rewarded those who had guided him to Assuan, and the mess rejoiced over him as one back from the dead.

MAP SHOWING ROUTE TAKEN BY THE SIRDAR.

It was the information brought by Slatin of the Rhalifa and his followers that made the British resolve to send out the present expedition for the reconquest of Khartoum and the equatorial provinces, and for avenging the death of Gor-don. Slatin was loaded with tavors by the Khedive and went along with the expedition, attached to the intelligence department, to meet once more the barbaric tyrant whose slave he had been. Slatin was a young lieutenant in a crack Austrian regiment when he went to meet Gordon at Khartoum and was sent to rule over Darfur. He was twentyawe years old, full of fire and ambition with what seemed a brilliant future be-fore him. When the Mahdist uprising occurred Slatin tried his best to held his province of Darfur, and fought many battles to keep it for the Khedive, but finally, with the annihilation of the army of General Hicks Pasha in November, 1683, he was left isolated without hope of succor, while between him and Egypt tossed the great black sea that had arisen with its thundering waves to wipe ent the civilization which had been planted in the upper Nile.

In December, 1883, he surrendered and was thenceforth the slave of the Mahdist ruler. Now and again he would be treated with favor, and then again be leaded with chains and made to live as meanly as possible. The Khalifa used to like to have him wait outside his door in the morning until he came out to go to the mosque, and then to have Slatin fol-lew along in his train.

After the death of the Mahdi one of the Khalifa's amusements was to make Slatin walk behind his horse as the barbaric potentate rode through the streets of Omdurman, and as he passed along through the multitude he would cry out to them to look upon the Christian who once ruled over Darfur and was now de livered into his hands. The Khalifa enjoyed this little diversion the more as he and his tribe were from the province over which Slatin had been governor. When Khartoum was taken Slatin was living in a hut at Omdurman, heavily chained and exposed daily to the insults of the mob. After the taking of the city some Dervishes came to him with something rolled in a cloth, and, commanding him to stand forth, they unrolled sudden ly their bundle and showed him the gory head of Gordon. Afterward he learned how Gordon had died. When Kharteum fell and the Mahdists were swarming through the city Gordon came down the stairway of his house and demanded the leader of the invaders. He was speared to death where he stood, and his head cut off to show to the Mahdi.

Slatin's escape from captivity is like a story of the "Arabian Nights." One day a man, disguised as an Alab trader, passed him in the street and whispered to him that he had been sent by Major Wingate, director of military intelligence, Egyptian army, and Baron Heidler, Austrian ambassador in Cairo, to help him to escape. They managed to have several interviews, and finally one zight, after the Khalifa had gone to bed and the city was asleep, Slatin mounted a donkey and rode to where the faithful Arab, Hussein, had camels in waiting. Then a long and hazardous flight began, which, after much suffering and many perils, ended in the officers' mess at Assuan.

Next to the fall of Khartcum and the murder of General Gordon, the one occurrence in all the long and bloody history of the Soudan that makes Englishmen feel like taking vengeance is the massacre of the army of Hicks Pasha and the killing of that able commander himself. He met his death on Nov. 2, 1883, and the British have never forgotten the debt they owe to the followers of the Mahdi for that affair.

William Hicks entered the Bombay army as an ensign in 1849, and served in Bengal during the campaign of 1857 to 1859. He was a member of the First Beloech battalion and staff officer to the Punjab movable column. He went through the Abyssinian campaign as a brigade majer, and was gazetted lieuten ant-colonel in 1875 and honorary colonel in 1880. When in 1883 Baker Pasha was requested to secure the services of retired officers for the expedition which was being prepared to march against the Mahdi he appointed Colonel Hicks to the post of chief of staff. On Sept. 9 of that year Hicks Pasha, with more than 10,000 men, began his march up the Nile from Omdurman, keeping close to the western side of the White Nile. The General decided to strike scross the desert to El Obeid, trusting to the surface pools for water. For several weeks all Great Britain was eager for news of the army under the Pasha, but none came. When at last word reached Khartoum, it was learned that through the treachery of a guide Hicks Pasha and all of his men had been trapped, surrounded and destroyed, without a man left to tell the tale.

Map of Kitchener's Route. The map above shows that part of the Soudan in which General Kitchener and his treops are operating. The history of the expedition begins in March, 1896, when the British Government decided it would be wise to make a demonstration with military force from the frontier at Wady Halfa into the Soudan. Wady Halfa is 600 miles from the City of Caire. The Khedive took great interest in the expedition and rendered all the assistance be could to General Kitchener, who was made Sirdar, or general, of the Egyptian army. These British forces, supplemented by some thousands of troops from the native army in India, in all about 25,-000 men, have marched up the Nile for two years and have fought several battles with the Mahdists. The advance was made through the cities shown on the map strung along the Nile. At Ferkeh the Dervishes received a severe defeat from the Egyptian army. The British catpured Suarda and passed on to Absarat, but its progress was delayed by storms, which destroyed the newly laid railroad. Dongola was occupied on Sapt. 22, 1896, and the British loss was little. General Kitchener, with his men, is now at Khartoum. The army has pushed to that point along the green borders of the Nile or over the desert routes indicated by the black lines. From Cairo to Omdurman, which is built on the banks of the Nile opposite the ruins of Khartoum, the distance is about 1,000 miles. so it will be seen that General Kitchener has not precisely an easy time of it. The country all about, except the green border of the river, is desert, and the world held sway, but in a land where it is almost a disgrace to be a woman, where wemankind are despised, downtredden, ignorant and helpless. This makes the contrast sharper; the thing more marvelous stupefying in its magnitude. The most powerful woman in the world is neither young nor beautiful, nor good. She is no traveler, and she has never gone to college. She is old and ugly, wrinkled and ill-tempered, but she controls millions of people with an iron hand; she dictates the policy of a nation and makes or mars destinies. She is tue Dowager Empress of China.

The Empress Dowager of China was in no wise born to greatness; neither was it thrust upon her. She achieved it in the face of what would seem utterly insurmountable difficulties. She was not of the court circle; there was no one to introduce her to the eligibles of the time, so that it was unreasonable to expect her to wed a man of rank. She was never a debutante, nor a girl graduate; she was merely an ignorant little slave, with a good deal of what goes for beauty in China, and an intellect sharpened by adversity. Her parents were obscure, her life hard.

The story of Tuen Tson Hsi reads like a romance, and an impossible one at that. In China it is believed that only undergoing punishment are bern into the bodies of women. If a man lives evily and dies in his sin, he is born again as a woman. But if he undergoes sufficient expiation of his wickedness he is suffered to be a man the next time he travels back to earth. With a belief like this as a basic principle, it is easy to see why girl babies are not welcome, and are often drowned at birth, like so many helpless kittens. That anything so mean and despicable as a woman should by any chance get to the heaven of their gods few sood Chinamen believe. So when little Tuen Tson Hsi was born it was hardly surprising that her disappointed father thought it might be just as well to drown the mite there and then, especially as he was poor, and it is a waste of good food to feed girls. But the mother pleaded, and being a good sort of fellow, in spite of his poverty, the father relented, and her pretty name, meaning "good luck," was given to her instead of a costly layette or a christening mug. Names are cheap, and in this case the title was prophetic, though for her first childhood there seemed nothing but drudgery and hard living for the little Tuen, except that she grew pretty.

Not pretty according to western ideas pernaps, but round and piquant, with bright, sharp eyes, set in slantwise, and a firm little red mouth. Tuen was of a practical turn of mind, and when a rebel uprising burned the father's hut and ravaged his plot of land, it was she who solved the problem of how to live. She suggested that her father sell her.

Horrifying though it sounds, there was oriental good souse in the proposition. She was young, she was capable. When fairly well fed she was certainly good looking. This was the first instance of her ability to lead. Her father acted upon the idea, and he made a good bargain, as she advised. He sold her to ne less a personage than the Viceroy of Lu Chang. The deal showed him to be possessed of good business ability, and this quality had the daughter inherited in good measure. Probably when he sold her he realized a little of this, and felt that girls were not to be so utterly despised after all.

Tuen Tson Hsi, the little "Good Luck," went into the viceroy's kitchen as a sorub girl and general maid-of-all-wo.k, but at last she had plenty to eat, which, combined with an excellent conscience, or no conscience at all, which some people say is still better, she grew plump and pretty again, and you may be sure her alers mind did not fail in its activity. She was not called Tuen Tson Hsi for nothing, and her first move was to win the favor of the vicercy's wife and to be promoted from the kitchen to the embroidery frame. Now had her chance come. It fell to her task to embroider a robe for the viceroy, and so well did she do it that her master deigned first to be pleased with the work and then with the worker, and it began to be shown that even a servant girl could do much to disrupt a household, provided she was young and pretty and clever enough. It was that way in scriptural times, and the custom has not died out yet, even in more civilized countries than China. Having ebtained some favors, Tuen began to ask more. But it was not jewels or rich dresses or leisure which she implored at the end of the viceroy's scepter. It was a stranger favor still, and one which thrilled him with apprehension, for she begged him to be allowed to learn to read. For a servant girl and slave to want to read was a little short of preposterous; it was as though a cook had suddenly requested singing lessons from Mme. Marchesi. Still, absurd as the request was, the infatuated vicercy granted it, and pretty Tuen Tson Hsi drank deep of the literature China provides for its high-caste women, which chiefly consists of exhortations to discharge all their duties as daughters, wives; mothers, sta ters, and especially as daughters in-law.

so Tuen progressed, and as she got prettier and smarter so she made trouble in the vicercy's calm household, and the wise man, proceeding on the principle of "anything for a quiet life," one day dressed his young favorite very hand-somely in imperial yellow silk, and sent her off in state a present to the Emperor, a sort of graceful acknowledgement of a recent decoration of peacock's feathers, which meant that the Emperor had moved the vicercy one notch higher in the social

It was a great trip for young Tuen, this one forty-four years ago, when with a beating of tom-toms and a good deal of other unnecessary fuss she was escorted to the three-walled city of Poking, where, in the heart of the town, are set the Emperor's palaces. But it was a trip for which no return ticket is ever issued. She knew that, once well inside the third wall, she would never issue forth again, nor ever beheld more father or mother or friends of the viceray's family.

From the royal narem, "the palace of earth's repose" as it is called in flowery language, no woman ever departs alive once she has entered, and the Emperor himself rarely leaves the splendid isola-tion of his palace and gardens. Not that the prospect daunted Tuen. In the golden cage she saw another opportunity, for she felt that it was not her fate to "blush unseen." and her purpose never once faltered. Once a secret is spoken it ceases to be a secret-it is in the air, and the beauty and wisdom of Tuen Tson Hsi was soon discussed in the harem, so by and by the 'son of Huren' himself, the Emperor, began to hear of it, and naturally to be eurious. He saw that she was levely, with a soft, clive complexion, and lips as red as the cherry blossom, which orientals love. As for form, she carried herself like a queen-poor slave girl that she was -perhaps it was all an itle boast of her father's that the blood of Tartars flowed in his veins, and the Tartars are the real aristocrats of China. Having won the Emperor by her beauty, Tuen proceeded to hold him by the force of her mentality. The Empress obligingly died, and after the term of courtesy mourning was over the marriage of the Emperor with Tuen Tson Hsi! Here was a thunderbolt. The old Empress had been of the good Chinese type, worshipful, and of affairs of state all unknowing. She had left a son and Tuen was different. The Emperor was just old enough to be completely swayed by his brilliant wife, clear headed and practical as she was. Virtually she became the ruler of the immense Empire, and when an indignant statesman ventured to eppose her decrees, as eccasion-ally one of them would be brave enough to do, Tuen promptly ordered the offender's head cut off, not figuratively, but lite ally, with a "short, sharp chop," and this drastic measure soon squelched any active desire to criticize her policy or her methods-it wasn't safe. Bitter, indeed, was it to the average Chinaman to feel that the real power behind the ruler's throne was one of the despised sex. Yet was Tuen magnetic withal, and won people by her force and charm, even when they had rather not. She was always tactful, dearly as she loved power, and ministers of state grew to respect her ability even when they disliked the woman. Then the old Empero died in the fullness of years, and Tuen became Dowager Empress, with a weak boy for ostensibly reigning monarch.

Now did Tuen Tson Hsl get her real innings. Already she had achieved power through the Emperor, and now it was hers in very truth, for what could a child king be but the most transparent of figureheads? Neither did the shrewd woman exert herself to prepare the young the greatest-numerically speaking-nation in the world! She did not beat or abuse him; she worked a more subtile injury, and one for which there could be no swift uprising against her. He was a weak boy, and she simply let him have his ewn. She surrounded him with luxury, with beauties of the harem, with idleness and dissipation. After twenty-six years of this enervating life her stepson is the merest of spiritless puppets in her capable hands. He has never ruled, though he has had the name of ruler, and now the news comes that the powerful old lady has done what no one ever dreamed even she would dare to do-she has openly relieved the Emperer of all power, and all ministers are compelled to take their instructions directly from her. Li Hung Chang for a time practically superseding the Tsung Li Yaen. This is what the humble slave girl has risen to by means of her beauty, cleverness and diplomacy, to be absolute ruler ever 600,000,000 of subjects, and to have it said of her that she is the Bismarck of China; that in statecraft there is not her equal in any court in Europe!

People used to wonder why canning old Li Hung Chang struck his colors so close to the Emperor's dowager, instead of to the Emperor; now the world nows. Li Hung Chang as chancellor as the only person outside the enunchs and ladies. in-waiting who is frequently permitted to behold her sacred presence, and she lives in strict seclusion in that palace and palace gardens which she entered forty-four years ago. She is new a shriveled, bad-tempered eld woman ef 64, but the few ambassadors who are admitted to her presence are obliged to prostrate themselves to her royal feet in an attitifde of adoration and to do the kotoro, which is to knock the forehead nine times upon the ground in token of abase. ment and subjection. She rules her subjects with an iron hand; she it is who must be obeyed. It is a wonderful history, and one naturally thinks back the term of 64 years and wonders what difference it would have made to the world's history if one more little Chinese baby had been drowned because it "was only a girl."

OUR SHORT STORY

"The Soldier Who Would Not Fight."

******************

Those were happy days when Gaspard Mendon was a fisherman! From the peaceful village of Bizon the fishing fleet sailed, to return loaded with the spoil of the sea which the good look has provided for man.

They were a brave and generous race, the dishers of Bizon, and courage was born in every babe of them; though cenerations they had battled with the sea growing braver and hardthem, and so the government prised them, and always some of the Bizon men were away in the warships And then a day came when Gaspard had to leave home and kindred to join the

The Senegal column, to which the marines were attached—and among them Caspard Mendon—set out for Gaudiole on January 2, whence it pro-seeded to Benon-M'bro on the 6th.

From the marshes and from the lakes rose pestilent fever-laden mists, striking down many a brave fellow into his grave; at night the raw fogs chilled to the marrow, while in the daytime the blazing sun fired the air so that every breath of it seemed void of benefit, and every hour was difficult to live through. As the column advanced the Damel Macodon retreated, and on January ary 12 the French decided to march on Mekhey, where was the king's palace. The Damel sent messengers asking for pardon, and offering terms, but they were all sent back to him unanswered. But Commandant Saprade was not satisfied with the bloodless march upon Mekhey, and so, on February 5, he left Goree with a small flotilla of four dispatch ships, a cutter, and other small vessels, and the marines, commanded by Lieutenant Vallon, of the Dial-math, disembarked on the 10th oppos-tte Sedhion and marched immediately on Sardinieri.

The village was strongly held by the natives; every mud hut was pierced for the guns, and as the column advanced a heavy fire was poured upon it. From every hut came flashes of light and puffs of smoke, which hardly floated away, but hung about on the still air, and presently concealed the village. Half of the marines were led back to the rear, just in time to see issuing from the huts the desperate natives, who fired upon their foes and then turned and fled.

The French officers, by dint of driving back their allies with threats and blows, even shooting a few of them, managed to save the lives of a small remnant of the gallant foe. Gaspard was sick at heart as he marched past those groaning or silent bodies; his comrades cheered and laughed, but it had come home to him with appalling directness that he was a murderer.

That day the victors rested in the captured village, and toward sight the women came from the country outside and tried to carry off their dead, wailing out their death-chants with an awful, piteous monotony that depressed the most exuberant of the marines Fascinated, yet horrified, Gaspard watched their lithe forms as they tore their hair and flung their arms above their heads in gestures of wild grief, and wept over their dead. One of the women, who was crouched beside the body of a fine young warrior, turned upon Gaspard as he passed and spat

Gaspard looked at the womant he met the full gaze of her eyes of hatred, of savage agony and savage love, and be flung down his rifle with a clatter 'Mendon, what means this?" shout-

Gaspard strode on and never answered, and so the sergeant picked up the rifle himself, and reported Private Mendon to the Liutenant Vallon, who was a kindly man, although a severe disciplinarian.

Gaspard was silent. "Death is the punishment," hazard-ed the lieutenant. Gaspard was unmoved. It was evident that this man was no coward, and so he tried to rea-

"What?" The officer was angry at the man's obstinacy now. "Here, sergeant, put this imbecile under arrest! We haven't any cells, but make him feel what a fool he is."

The sergeant grinned intelligently and marched the prisoner off to a hut and placed a guard at the door. The hut was filthy, and the air foul, but there Caspard had to remain, thirsty and restless and silent, until the guard was relieved, and then he asked for water.

"Sergeant's orders are that you are to have none until you recover your senses.

"I am a man!" Gaspard said proudly, and he wasted without com-plaint until morning, when the sergeant fetched him and marched him to the lieutenant

"Well, prisoner, are you going to do your duty?" asked the officer.
"I cannot kill," was the hoarse reply, and the swollen tongue and the cracked purple lips told his agony of thirst.

"Very well," said the lieutenant, "de with him as you like, sergeant."
"Prisoner! Right about face! March!" cried the sergeant, and, joined by the guard at the door, they marched to a stake that had been set up in the village street, and Gaspard was bound

There, in the burning rays of the sun, half-crazed with the heat, and the longing for water, Gaspard remained until late in the afternoon. Then the sergeant approached him, bearing in hand a flask of water and a cup, into which he poured some of the cool li-quid, raising the flask high, so that the water fell into the cup with the sound that there was no forgetting. daspard's eyes glared at it wolfishly, but his lips and tongue were so swollen that he could not utter a sound. 'Private Mendon, will you obey or-ders?" asked the sergeant. The poor scorched head nodded assent, and the mouth moved feebly; the sergeant poured a little of the water between Gaspard's lips, and he tried his best to

So, having surrendered, he was cast loose and carried to a hut, where he lay for a week between life and death; and when three weeks had passed he came again upon parade, a hollow-cheeked, sunken-eyed wretch, hardly

Only that morning Gaspard had taken his place with the garrison of the fort, and he, with the others, had sal-lied out to beat back the enemy; but although like the rest, he placed himself between his defenseless comrades and their foes; he made no attempt to fire his rifle, merely threatening with it, and falling back step by step. By the time they reached their mud fort they were almost surrounded by a ferocious horde, mad with the lust for blood, and only one person at a time could pass in through the small door of the fort in safety.

Gaspard never looked at the door, but faced the foe with a calm and resolute courage that moved the sergeant, who was near him, to admira-tion, so that he cried out words of encouragement to him. Every time the foe made a rush he pointed his riffe, and they fell back before the determined-looking soldier, and fired at him instead. They were bad enough shots, those dark-skinned warriors, and yet Gaspard was bleeding from half a dozen wounds when the sergeant shout-sergeant seeing how determined he was, made a rush and got through the door in safety.

Then Gaspard turned his head toward the door, but in that moment the enemy rushed in upon him with yells of triumph, and he was lost to sight; only a struggling mass of black warriors was to be seen, hacking and hewing at something in their midst.

Just an hour later reinforcements came from the village, and the Mandingoes were driven away with heavy lose; and then they found what was once Gaspard.

The sergeant took up his rifle from the clenched hand of a dead native; he knew it had belonged to Gaspard, and he looked into the barrel. It was bright, and had not been fired. The sergeant mused for a moment.

"Ah! the poor Gaspard Mendon!" he hought. "He was an imbecile, look thought. you, but he was also a man!"-Temple

AMERICANS DEGENERATING

A Writer Who Thinks They Use the Street Car and Bicycle Too Much.

No fact has been developed by the war which has surprised people so much, or which begins to possess so great and disturbing an importance, as this failure of large percentages of the militiamen to meet the physical tests prescribed by the federal military service. The Medical Record of New York barely refers to the subject in last week's issue. It notes the fact that the enlisting bureau at that point had to examine 17,000 applicants to obtain 12,000 men fit for field duty; and it accepts the result as a probably fair representation of the physical state of the average metropolitan, whose city life has subjected him to enervating influences which narrow the chest, weaken the knees and impair the eyesight. "It is quite eviconcludes the Record, rather abrubtly, "that the city man is losing his physical grip."

This may be so, but important data are missing. It was reported at the time that the percentage of rejections in some of the agricultural districtsin the Dakotas, for example-was very large. This might be so, and yet prove nothing in favor of the city: since the militia in the Dakotas and similar states may be, and probably is, made up largely of young men from the villages and cities employed in stores, factories and offices, where metropolitan conditions of life prevail to a modified extent. If this be so then modern concentration in popula- toes. tion begins to present no less a prob-lem than the degeneration of the race. Wholly apart from the cigarette, whose pernicious influence is thought to be traceable in the large percentage or rejections among militia volunteers are other possible generative influences to be considered, more directly connected with municipal central-What, for example, is the physical effect of the street railway and the bicycle? Opening the House,

In cleaning the house closed during the summer, care should be taken to wipe off, into cloths, the dust from floors and ledges, and to use to carpet sweeper to remove the worst of the dust. This is to prevent the circulation in the air of the accumulated and germ-laden dust of a long-darkened house. Probably at no time is the unsanitary feather duster more unsanitary than when flirted by an ignorant servant in a newly-opened house.

Study of Manners.

A course of study which was recently introduced in a woman's college should have an excellent effect. It is that of a systematic study of manners. A council of etiquette is formed, to which mooted questions are submitted, the council not pronouncing judgment until authorities have been consulted and every effort made to secure a wise decision. Papers on relevant topics are prepared and discussed, an effort being made to remove the study from the consideration of minor arbitrary points of etiquette to the broader range of gentle breeding.

A Letter Case.

This little article is both useful and ornamental on my lady's desk, and can be decorated either by painting or needlework. Obtain a carboard box whose lid shuts over it completely like a case, extending to the bottom, and large enough to contain two packages of envelopes of ordinary size. Fit a piece of cardboard inside to divide the space, then cover the lid of the box with linen, painting or embroidering in outline-stitch on one side of the top "Letters Answered," on the other side "Letters Unanswered." Between the spaces occupied by the lettering any appropriate device may be painted; or if the decoration is done with the needle, tiny flowers can be scattered over the top among the letters, or the words placed in a slanting direction in the lower right-hand corner and upper left-hand corner of the box cover, with the initials of the future owner—if it is to be a gift-also worked across between them. If intended to be sold in fairs or exchanges-unless orders are taken-the initials, of course, must be omitted. Yet it might do to put one as a sample in an exchange, with the ed to him, "You've done your share, mon brave. Run in!"

Cream Rice Pudding.

A delicious and simple dessert, seasonable at the moment, is cream rice pudding with peaches. Cook in a double boiler two tablespoonfuls of rice with a pint of milk in which is dropped a small piece of stick cinnamon. Add an extra cupful of milk as the rice becomes dry, and when cooked tender add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a tablespoonful of gelatine that has been dissolved in a little cold water. Remove the cinnamon and pour the rice into a ring-mold, after beating in a cupful of whipped cream. When cold turn out and fill the center with sliced peaches served with plain or whipped cream.

Queen Taitou.

When Queen Taitou, the wife of the Negus Menelek, conqueror of the Italian troops in Abyssinia, arrives with escort in Paris, even the gay Parisians will marvel. Queen Taitou is no less interesting than her husband. When she appears in public she is accompanied by many women, mounted on richly caparisoned mules, with runners, umbrella bearers and other attendants. Taitou's umbrella is a bright red. She is very stout, but withal her presence is dignified. She is remarkably well informed on current topics, and is a conversationalist. Her letters are well written, and have a bright, natural style. She does not dress any more richly than her ladies-in-waiting, but she is the very essence of cleanliness. The empress believes thoroughly in court etiquette, and no one may gaze on her unless he has been formally presented to her.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Mrs. Rorer's formula for stuffed tomatoes includes almonds. For a filling for eight tomatoes a dozen almonds, peeled, blanched, and chopped fine, are added to the half-pint of minced mutton or chicken, tablespoonful chopped parsley, and one onion chopped fine, that form the forcemeat. The tomatoes have a slice removed from the stem end and the seeds scooped out, before they are filled with the mixture. Stand them in baking pans, using as basting sauce one-half cup of water and a tablespoonful of butter. Cook thirty min-utes with frequent basting, take from the pan and to the sauce add a teaspoonful of flour moistened in water, and sufficient water to make a halfpint; stir constantly until boiling; add the juice of a lemon, season with salt and pepper, and pour over the toma-

Others use In some respects waists of this sort the bicycle where they would other- are an absolute necessity to women wise walk, and the swift bicycle not of this class, and their name is legion.

No doubt the very smartest, most re-cherche tailor-made and other ele-gantly finished "dress" gowns have waists matching the skirts, and these will continue the costumes par excellence for two seasons to come; but there will, let all women be assured. be no wholly complete feminine outfit prepared by any noted dressmaker in this country, or sent out from any celebrated importing house, which does not include among its elegancies, waists for both day and evening wear which do not match any one skirt, but which can be worn with many.

Street Sweepers.

It is urged in behalf of the continued untidy fashion of the street-sweeping skirt, that the new lengthened jackets and coats are responsible for it. A very much elongated out-of-door coat would certainly look odd above a short, all-round walking skirt. One fashion gives rise to others, hence the general lengthening of skirts; but it would be far better to shorten the street wrap or jacket than to add inchest to the street skirt.

How to Lacquer Brass.

"If your brass bedstead tarnishes," said a dealer in beds and bedding, "you can send it to a repair shop and have it neatly laquered for anywhere from $2 50 to $5. It will look a well as new and last as long. He said it in all gravity, but there was a sort of expression in his eye which suggested a hidden meaning, and roused curiosity.

"How do they do it?"
"Why should I tell you a trade secret?" he replied. "But, after all, this is hardly a trade secret; it is common to many trades; all those which use brass fittings, in fact. The gasfitter and the picture frame maker, as well as the furniture man, the dealer in grates, the candlestick maker as well all make use of it. Nearly all brass work, except that on shipboard, is lacquered to prevent corrosion and avoid the labor of frequent polishing. The lacquer is simply gum shellac dis-solved in alcohol. This makes a thin varnish, which is applied with a small paint boush. Ten cents' worth of materials, will lacquer your brass bedstead, and an ordinary workman will do the job inside of an hour, at a total cost of from 35 to 60 cents."-Chicago Times-Herald.

THE NEW VICEROY

Mr. Curzon's Position Better Than a Throne.

The Charms of India-Its Immense In tellectual Advantages.

[London Daily Telegraph.]

If, as we anticipate, Lord Salisbury, before leaving England for the Continent, should have recommended to the Queen the appointment of Mr. George Curzon, under secretary of state for foreign affairs, as viceroy of India, the nation at large, India and Mr. Curzon himself, might be simultaneously congratulated upon a welljudged nomination. The British public would see in it the selection of a strong and competent official, chosen obviously as one especially well informed upon the great problems developing in the east, and proved to possess the ability and resolution necessary to confront them. India, so far as that vast peninsula, which is in itself a continent, can be capable of estimating and critising historical events, would know that the government of the queen-empress deliberate ly gives her of its best, and permits no considerations of personal interest or political convenience to interfere with the duty of following that prin-

As for the able and masterful young minister who would thus at a step pass to an administrative eminence which might satisfy the highest ambitions he also might reasonably be felicitated upon the season when, and the circumstances under which, he would enter upon the burdensome but splendid duties of his great office. To prophesy any lasting tranquility in that vast sphere of human affairsdiplomatic, international, political, social, civil and military—which we call "India" would be as rash as to predict unbroken calm upon an ocean. The control of a seventh part of mankind involves innumerable chances and changes, and in the east, particularly at the present time, none can tell what may arrive during the next five years. But the omens are good that Lord Elgin will hand over his magnificent charge to a well-trusted successor under conditions which, taken altogether, may be styled both excellent and fortunate.

Let us not, however, convey to Mr Curzon's mind or any other, the idea that the Indian viceroyalty is a post of nothing but hard work and golden troubles. On the contrary, no offic has nobler leisure, more easy glory of pleasant state, more delightful surroundings, more agreeable opportunities while the good times last, which are rather the rule than the exception. Those who have been privileged to see and to share the daily existence of a viceroy in government house or at Barrackpore, or upon the brilliant uplands of Simla, are well aware that it is far more desirable to hold such an appointment than to sit on any throne in Europe or Asia. It is royalty with-

delightful change from the wintry fog of London, and the troubles of question-time in Parliament. If he has less to learn than some among his illustrious predecessors in this high office. he would probably know better how to enjoy the immense intellectual and philosophical advantages offered to a receptive and reflective mind by India. Alike for lessons of theology, metaphysics, natural science, ethnology, languages, literature and the arts of government, that wonderful and varied country is the chief and best-equipped school. Only the sciolist can ever pretend to know all that India holds to teach him; and only the shallowminded could be insensible to the mystic charm and marvel of the land, or ungrateful for the smallest knowledge of her. As viceroy, Mr. Curzon would, before all things, be a sympathetic ruler of the vast dependency, and with deep sincerity Englishmen of all sections and parties would wish him a tenure of his dignified office agreeable and satisfactory to himself, and beneficial and prosperous and peaceful to the countless millions of our fellowsubjects committed to his authority.

A Nervous Toronto Woman Walked the Floor During the Night for Hours at a Time-She Makes a Statement.

TORONTO, ONT .- "I was troubled with nervousness. It was impossible for me to keep still and if the spells came over me during the night I had to get up and walk the floor for hours at a time. My blood was very poor and I was subject to bilious attacks. My feet would swell and I was not able to do my own housework. I treated with two of the best physicians here but only received relief for a time. I became discouraged. One day a friend called and advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I laughed at the advice but I was prevailed upon and procured one bottle. Before I used it all I began to feel better. I took several bottles and also several boxes of Hood's Pills. Now I can eat and drink heartily and sleep soundly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has entirely cured me and also strengthened me so that I now do all my own work. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilia to all sufferers from nervousness, weakness or general debility." Mrs. H. F. PARM, Degrassi Street.

A Sick Stomach Cannot Do Its Work Properly-Dyspepsia Results Unless You Use Dodd's Dys. pepsia Tablets.

There's a time for work, and a time for sleep.

This rule applies to man and beast. It was made by the All-Wise Creator who knows what is best for us. When we are sleeping, our organs should be resting. If they do not get proper rest, they become "played out," just as we do ourselves. Thousands—yes hundreds of thou-sands of persons refuse their stomachs the privilege they grant to their horses and dogs-rest. They keep late hours, attend late dinners, etc., and force the stomach to do ten times the work it is able to do. The consequence is that the stomach breaks down. It can't digest the food. The supply of rich blood is decreased. The nerves, muscles and bones are etarved. And yet people wonder why they have Dyspepsia or Indigestion!

It is useless to ask people to give up late hours, late dinners, their clubs and other Dyspepsia-breeding pleasures. But they can enjoy these so-called pleasures, and yet escape their penal-How? By using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tabletsone or two after each meal.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets tone, strengthen and invigorate the stomach, and enable it to digest the food properly. They themselves digest the food until the stomach can do so. Thus they keep the body in uniform, robust health. Try them and prove to your own satisfaction that this is so.

SEA POWER RULES.

The peace establishments of the French, German and Russian armies are at least 1,850,000 men, and, perhaps, may be two millions, all highly organized. Their possible war establishments might amount to totals from six to eight millions of men. On the other hand, the peace establishment of the British Empire amounts to one million of men—a part of which is equally well, and another part not equally well, organized with the European armies. The possible war establishments of the empire has never been seriously estimated. The peace establishment of the United States is under 30,000,000 men, Coubtless well organized. Like the British peo-ple, the Americans have never reckoned their possible war establishment, but evidently they could, if so minded, raise it to a mighty strength. But neither British nor American leaders will, under the existing circumstances, consider land force as a dominant factor in any world-wide problem. Their thoughts will mainly be turned to sea force. They will anxiously inquire whether the sea force of the Anglo-American combination would or would not compare favorably with that of an European combination. It were needless to stop and show that all the European land forces would be of no avail against an Anglo-American com-bination, if that combination really possessed the mastery of the sea.—Sir Richard Temple in North American Review for September.

French Cabinet Again Delays Decision in the Dreyfus Case.

Fate of Lucheni, the Assassin-Death of a Popular Hymn Writer-American Peace Commissioners Land at Liverpool.

NEWS FROM FASHODA.

London, Sept. 24 .- The British Government has received the first news from Gen. Sir Herbert Kitchener since he started from Khartoum for Fash-oda, but only the fact that he has captured some small boats has been allowed to leak out. DECISION DELAYED.

Paris, Sept. 24.—The cabinet met to-day and decided to postpone its deci-gion in the question of the proposed revision of the Dreyfus case until Monday next owing to the absence from the meeting of the minister of finance, M. Peytral, and the minister of agriculture, M. Viger.

DEATH OF A HYMN-WRITER. London, Sept. 24.-Mr. W. Chatterton Dix, who died on Friday at Cheddar, Somerset, in his 62nd year, was a strong Churchman and a frequent contributor to church magazines and periodicals. He was best known, however, as the author of several favorite hymns, such as the Epiphany hymn, "As with gladness men of old," "Come unto Me, ye weary," and "To Thee, O Lord, our hearts we raise."

TO BE BURIED IN ST. PAUL'S. London, Sept. 24.-In response to appeals to her Majesty, the Queen has granted permission for the burial of the body of Sir George Gray, formerly governor of New Zealand, and also governor and commander-in-chief of the Cape of Good Hope, in St. Paul's Cathedral, and he will receive a pub-lic funeral. The obsequies will take place on Monday.

LANDED AT LIVERPOOL. Liverpool, Sept. 24.-The United States peace commissioners here early this morning from the Cunard Line steamer Campania, which reached her landing stage before daylight. They are all in good health and refreshed by the voyage for the work in store for them. The mayor of Liverpool extended to the commissioners an invitation to attend a function to be held this evening in honor of the British warships here. The invitation, however, was declined, the commissioners deeming it unwise to accept it.

LUCHENI'S FATE

Will Be Imprisoned for Life and Speak Only to His Guard.

Geneva, Sept. 24.—The Genevese people are up in arms against the heroizing or pampering of Lucheni, the assassin of the Empress of Austria, and the officials have already refused to permit visitors to see him. Lucheni is kept in solitary confinement, and is permitted to see nobody.

There was great indignation expressed when a local journal published the fact that Lucheni had been allowed to smoke. So bitter, indeed, was the feeling that the judge of the criminal court was forced yesterday to issue a formal declaration, in which he leclaration, in which he stated that the privilege of smoking had only been accorded Lucheni on one occasion, and that he had smoked but one cigar. The judge pledges his official honor that this shall not occur again.

Lucheni's fate is sure. He will be confined for life at St. Antoine prison in Geneva. He will have to work at shoemaking every day of his life except Sundays. He will never be permitted to speak a word to anybody except to his prison guard. It is a miserable existence, and the only other life prisoner in Geneva prisons, a parricide, is said to be rapidly giving way under the terrible strain. It will way under the terrible strain. It will be particularly hard upon Lucheni, who loves above all things to talk.

DOUBTLESS DEAD

Arctic Explorer's Undertaking Regarded as Ill-Advised.

Berlin, Sept. 24.-Admiralty Councilor Koldewey, one of the best-informed men in German on all matters touching arctic exploration, granted on interview regarding the probable whereabouts of Andree and the possibility of his returning from his attempt to reach the pole. Koldewey says that Andree's undertaking was thoroughly ill-advised. The explorer's calculation that his belleon would float 30 days. that his balloon would float 30 days, with a daily loss of 51 cubic meters of gas, was purely theoretical, he declares. Practically it has been demonstrated time and again that a balloon of similar dimensions to that of Andree's can with difficuty be floated for 24 hours in the face of strong head winds. Koldewey says that the chances are, taking into consideration the meterological conditions that obtained at the time of Andree's departure, that his balloon cannot have made more than 300 to 500 miles without losing its buoyancy. After that he believes it must have sunk upon the big polar desert in pack ice, where the explorers probably found it quite impossible to maintain themselves, and where com-munication with others was quite out of the question. He thinks it altogether likely that Andree and his party have perished long ago.

The Knox boys have finished their baseball season, and under the management of Mr. Harry Givens, have attained a position in the baseball among them being St. Peter's Catherealm that few other teams have acdral, the Jesuit Church, St. George's realm that few other teams have accomplished. Although only averaging Church and St. James' Methodist about 20 years of age, these boys have not only played with men, but have succeeded in defeating them time and time again, and no club can say that this team has refused to give them a game, except when circumstances would not permit. In winning 21 out of 22 games the club has certainly gained a reputation that it is hard to surpass. The team consists (with but one exception) of London South boys, and has played against teams in every part of the city and out of it. Such teams as the Pastimes, Rockets, Glencoes, Strathroy, and almost a score of others were defeated by them in the season ended Sept. 5.

Summers, the captain of last year's

Gibson caught beautiful ball, and was "Silver's" star backstop, playing in almost every game of the season. The following is the list of players: Gibson, catcher; Summers, pitcher; Woods, first base; Turner, second base; C. McLaren, shortstop; P. #### A SAD TALE

Deplorable Condition of a Young Mother - Babe-Case for the Charity Organization.

Inspector Sanders, of the Children's Aid Society, had a sad case of suffering brought before his notice last night. A young mother, said to have come to London from Simcoe about a month ago, called on him, carrying an emaciated babe a few weeks old. She said that at Simcoe, when the child was born, she was living alone. Instead of being helped by the neighbors, all the windows in her little house were broken. To flee from persecution emaciated babe a few weeks old. She she left the town and came to London, where some kindhearted people are taking care of her. The inspector learned from the poor woman's benefactors that a few days ago, after the baby had been crying for several hours, they found that a pin intended to fasten a part of the child's clothing, was in-serted through the flesh. A badly-festered sore resulted and the child will probably die.

A MARVEL IN MUSIC TEACHING

It Has Created the Greatest Sensation of Any Modern Method.

It is called the "Fletcher Kinder-garten System." How many of us who have children to educate will be delighted when we know that a system of teaching beginners' music, by which all the drudgery, trials and discouragements peculiar to the study of that language will be no longer a thing to be lamented, but will prove just the reverse, a positive pleasure, a great saving of nerves, time and money. How many will lament that such an opportunity was not to be had in their day. If it had been, many who are not now able to delight their homes and friends would be not only able to enjoy the pleasures of this divine gift, but would be able to give pleasure to others.

Now is the opportunity to save great worry to yourselves and children by having them taught by kindergarten methods. They will become so interested in the lessons that they will be sorry when they are over. This system that is to be taught in this city is taught in the large conservatories of Boston, New York, etc. Read what the papers say:

Boston Sunday Herald: It is utterly impossible to give any really adequate idea of the system and its working. The work is entirely successful, and must be seen to be appreciated. It means an entire revolution in the teaching of piano music to children.

Boston Journal: This system prepares children for the regular teacher and in no way conflicts with his work, but on the contrary aids it. The system is natented all over the world even in Japan and Australia.

Mr. Caven Barron, principal of the Conservatory of Music, ever ready to adopt progressive educational methods, has adopted this new system. It is to be taught at the Conservatory and at private homes, where a number of students can be had to form a class. Miss Annie Proudfoot (daughter of Prof. Proudfoot, of Knox College, Toronto), who is so well and favorably known as an exceptional teacher of music, will have entire charge of the classes. Miss Proudfoot is gifted by nature with the intelligence, kindly temperament, patience and knowledge of human nature that goes to make the successful pedagogue.

Welland, Ont., Sept. 24.-Yesterday afternoon the fire alarm was sounded for a fire in Mr. Alex. Griffiths' residence, but it was subdued without fire apparatus, a quantity of clothing, etc., being burned. The fire was caused by a natural gas explosion, the cause being a defective pipe. Mr. Griffiths, who entered the room with a light, was blown some distance, his whiskers burned off, and his head and hands badly burned. Harry Griffiths, who was assisting, was also burned, but not so seriously.

"As they perish," he murmured, "so dies my love; for to love now would be a sm. Oh, Lucille, Lucille!" As the name burst from his trembling lips, his own seemed whispered in his ear, like in an angel voice. Night deepened, and he, too, slept, becoming even as Lady Westbrook and his cousin, the "Man of Dreams, so arbitrary of sway." Thus, the mind, no longer under self-control, Gerard's store back to Lucille, Lucille's to while Esmer's dwelt on the countess' diadem, and the precedence it would give her when it graced her

Bright was the morning which heralded Esmer's wedding day. The can-ary in the sitting-room carolled as if its little throat would burst with ex-uberant song of gratitude for the sun-shine; while the white Maltese spaniel -Gerard's gift-went through a whole set of geometrical problems, in order to catch his own silky tail, being, probably, seized with a fit of canine domestic economy to make both ends

The household of the Davenants was up betimes; and the household, even down to the little scullery-maid, who was to catch a beatific view of the bride and her attendant bridesmaids from the area steps-was in a perfect fitter of excitement.

ne bride's trousseau was now represented by large portmanteaus, ready lavelled "Paris via Dover." The large dining-room had been surrendered to Messrs. Carter and Routs, active young men, who knew-none better-how to provide the most recherche of recherche wedding breakfasts; and, in the Dayenant household, the most critical national question must have given place that day to the god Hymen.
Of all, Esmer, the most interested, was the most spiritless; indeed, she was out of humor. The moment of her ambition had arrived, and, as so frequently is the case, the very anxiety, suspense, and longing deadened the pleasure. She was petulant to her maid—irritable even with Mademoiselle Stephine. The canary made her head ache; so the small songster had to be covered up from the bright sunshine. Floss annoyed her by his snapping and merriment; consequently had to be banished-at which he was by no means sorry, taking refuge

"There's no pleasing her ladyship to-day," grumbled the lady's maid to Mademoiselle Stephine. "I never did! And her wedding day, too!"

"C'est egal, Janet," responded made-moiselle, soothingly. "It is nervous excitement. C'est tout; she is uneasy as to her appearance. Wait until she is dressed, ma fille, and her veil That will please her. Never was une demoiselle more vain."

"Never was there a maddermozell more ill-tempered!" muttered Janet. "Thank goodness I'm not going to travel with her. A pretty life she'll lead the earl! I know her!"

But today the lady's maid did not know her. Had she, she would have recognized some excuse for this pe-

Nevertheless, Mademoiselle Stephine was right. When Esmer, fully attired, with veil, wreath and bouquet, saw herself in the glass, the smile came back to her lips, the sparkle to her eyes, with a bright glow was on her olive cheeks, as she descended to the drawing-room, where her brides-maids, and Lord Vavasour, who was to give her away, were waiting.

Even at such a moment a jealous pang smote her as she beheld Lady Westbrook. How lovely she looked—the chief, indeed, of the bridesmaids. As Esmer recollected her own small figure, and its deformity, and how Lucille's splendor cast her into the shade, bride as she was, she repented having asked her. Was there to be no happiness in this young life? but her own mind must render

Was it this which took the light from the eyes, the color from her cheeks, and made her feel as if a cloud, dark and chilled, shadowed the orightness of this day, that put the climax to her hopes. She began to feel almost weary of it. Lord Vavasour, noticing this languor, rallied her; bringing the color back by the time they reached the church

The edifice was crowded, and eager, admiring eyes followed the bride as, leaning on the arm, of the tall, hand-some bridegroom, she advanced to the altar, where a bishop and two clergymen were to unite them.

A brief space; then, as the organ pealed forth its jubilant "Wedding March," Esmer and Gerara rose up man and wife. The latter's ambition was achieved; she was Countess of Lethrington.

Dead Sea fruit-Dead Sea fruit, aften

It seemed to Esmer a whirl, a dim unreality, this ceremony—the signing her name, the congratulations—a gream from which she must awaken. She began to wish it was all over, and she could get a little rest for breathing and reflection.

But there was the breakfast to go through yet, with the speeches and good wishes. The champagne, however, revived her; it brought the warm blood back to her cheeks. The breakpast was pleasanter than she thought. Finally, Lord Vavasour, rising, proposed the health of the Earl and Countess of Lethrington. As the name fell on Esmer's ear she broke into a hysterical laugh, attracting every eye to her, covering her with confusion. The laugh was unbecoming in a bride; it was foolish, but it had been out of her power to prevent it. She lowered her head, and bit her lip at the idea that Lucille had heard her. The slight silence which ensued was broken by Lord Vavasour continuing his speech. Then came the request that Lady Westbrook would cut the

In a quarter of an hour the physician reappeared, and beckoned the earl from the breakfast table. "My lord," he said, "I fear I must be the bearer of unpleasant news. Her ladyship's illness is of no ordinary character; the countess appears to be laboring under great cerebral excitement, while she also seems, from what I can ascertain, to be suffering from a severe feverish cold, such as might be occasioned by a sudden chill, or checked perspiration. Lady Davenant, how-ever, deems this impossible, for even at the ball she was warmly clad."

"Gerard," exclaimed Lord Vavasour, who had followed his godson, "I see it all. Do you remember when we found Lady Esmer standing at the door of the conservatory? She said she had found the rooms warm?"

"I do, it must be that, or -"It was that, my lord," said Lady Davenant, joining them. "Sir Mordant is right. I have been questioning Lady Lethrington's maid. She says that on her ladyship's return from the ball her satin slippers were soiled, and quite wet, as if she had been walking on dewy grass or wet ground. Silly, silly, thoughtless child, she must have gone into the grounds."
"My lord," exclaimed Sir Mordant.

"I fear you will have to defer your departure for the continent. Her lady-ship must not be moved yet."

"Is there danger?" asked Gerard with real concern. "Danger! Oh, no, no! Before night Esmer was delirious, the victim of her own jealousy.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Despite Esmer's constitution, the physician, on his visit the next morning in company with the local doctor, who had watched the case through the night, looked exceedingly grave. The violent chill, and the excitement she had evidently been laboring under, had produced brain fever in a form occasioned the medical men considerable uneasiness. Since the first attack she had fallen into a brief stupor, which had given place to such violent delirium as to alarm her nurses. Lucille desired much to institute herself as one of these. She had been eight stories the skeleton iron frame deeply touched by the sad event; the work is a necessity. There is room for

The idea that Esmer might die made her shiver, as if she had been to blame. Under the shock she did not only feel she must not, but that she did not, love Gerard. She found, too; and, compassinating Esmer, earnestly besought to be one of her nurses. But the earl, hearing of his wife's delirium and Lady Westbrook's pres-ence in her chamber, had grown terribly nervous that the latter's delicate ensibility might be shocked by some of Esmer's sentences uttered unconsciously in her raving, and had entreated Lady Davenant to persuade Lucille to leave.

Thus the elder lady, on receiving the younger's request, had rejoined:

"Dear Lady Westbrook, I am sure no one will appreciate such generous sympathy as our poor dear Esmer herself when she is aware of it; but, even were there need, I could not permit you to turn nurse. Need, however, does not exist. I have already sent for an efficient person recommended by Dr. Cullam, and from myself and daughter her ladyship shall have every care."
"I do not doubt that for an instant," answered Lucille, with so winning a glance that it quite charmed the elder

Then, feeling it would be ostentatious to press her services further, she descended to the dining-room, where the Marquis of Santyre was waiting with the earl.

"Well, my love, how is her ladyship now?" inquired the former, as both arose upon her entrance. "Since Dr. Cullam's report, my lord, the time has been too brief for change." replied Lucille. "The counchange," replied Lucille. "The countess seems very ill. I wished to aid in nursing her, but Lady Davenant thinks my services unnecessary."

A Great Improvement in Style Noticeable.

The Tendency to Combine Beauty and Utility-Some Notable Types.

The character and condition of people may be pretty clearly read in their architecture. London considered architecturally is, therefore, an interesting study and may be profitable. All localities have their limitations of climate and of building material. In the latter respect London is one of the least fortunate, her home product being confined almost exclusively to white brick. Building clay, red and pressed brick, and building stone must all be brought from a distance.

But with the growth of wealth and spread of culture among the citizens there is evidence everywhere in the dwellings, the commercial and the puolic buildings of the city, of a desire for beauty, as well as convenience. It is pleasant to learn from the architects, however, that convenience, substantial construction, modern heating and ventilating arrangements, good plumbing and sanitary conditions are always made paramount to all other considerations. The comparatively even distribution of wealth has resulted in uniformly comfortable dwellings. If the palatial mansion of the plutocrat is practically unknown here, so are the teeming, festering tenements, and wretched hovels of the poor. London is above all a city of homes.

The shabby, comfortless apartment house is absent. Pretty, home-like comfortable cottages are to be seen everywhere. But there are now build-ing and within the last five years have been built a very large number of really beautiful residences. mere piles of brick and stone, vulgarly proclaiming that the owner had so much money to spend on a place to live in, but home-like dwellings, chaste, beautiful and consistent in design. Nearly all the best styles of architecture are represented, and there is evident, too, an agreeable tendency to individualize buildings. The exteriors are no longer loaded up with woodwork in the execrable taste once prev-The beautifully severe Doric alent. column for verandahs and porches has supplanted the spindles and gewgaws of a few years ago.

It would be impossible in the scope of this article to name all the resi-dences in the city which embody the best tendencies in modern architecture. A few examples taken hap-hazard will answer the purpose. Mr. Charles Leonard's residence on Queen's avenue is severe and pretty. Mr. John La-batt's on the same avenue is in pure taste and possesses the quality of homelikeness to a marked degree. Mr. J. H. Ginge's place is remarkable for the purity and severity of its lines. W. J. Reid's new house on Queen's avenue is a splendid example of the mixture of the Greek and colonial styles adapted to the modern idea of convenience without the loss of a single element of beauty. Mr. A. M. Smart's residence on Kent street shows the gamble roof, and is a good speci-men of the mixture of Greek with the picturesque modern American style. The list could be carried to much greater length, but these are sufficient to indicate the trend tecture as shown in the residences of London. The notion that there is anything fine in mere bigness no longer exists. London differs from the average American city in the scarcity of wooden houses here. This is due to the large district covered by the fire limits and the greater sense of security given by brick or stone.

In the commercial buildings the structures are for the most part substantial, though most of the city architects say the law regulating the thickness of walls, etc., under the supervision of the city engineer should be enforced. It is claimed that no attempt has ever been made to enforce it in this city. The high price of structural iron here and the absence of any real necessity for carrying buildings up more than five or stories has made the use of skeleton iron walls, so universal in American cities, quite unknown here. the feelings with which she had refronts on Dundas and Richmond streets. Few of them have any individuality. Little attempt has been made to give character to the store buildings, and as a rule the stories are too low. An exception may be found in D. S. Perrin's remodeled factory, which has a bold, vigorous front. The front of the Canadian cavings & Loan Company's building, on Richmond street, is a most beautiful example of the Romanesque style. stoffice, the customs house, the Bank of Montreal, and the Bank of British North America, though among the older buildings, compose a fine group in the substantial classic style, which has lately come largely into vogue both in Europe and America, as a result of the introduction of terra cotta and pressed brick, which makes it possible to repeat enrichment that was expensive in stone, but can now be modeled in clay and used with the same effect at a mere fraction of the cost.

The Hiscox building is a praiseworthy effort. St. Peter's Cathedral represents a good broad style of Gothic, with cylinder columns. St. Paul's is good pure Gothic. The First Methodist and Dundas Center Methodist churches are splendid examples of the modern style of church architecture, in which room, convenience and acoustics are uppermost, and beauty is incidental.

LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, stating through wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me good.

There's force in the word "new" applied to the Carpets of this store purchased for the present autumn business. To start with, there's no end of variety. Carpets do not comprise a part of this store's stock, but the whole stock, adding to them Curtains and Draperies—a natural adjunct. Shoppers who study these things know that it makes a wide difference to them when this distinction is intelligently and honestly made. What is liked of our stocks is not only their size and assortment, but the fact that they bear throughout evidence of having been bought by those experienced in the making and buying of Carpets.

Results of Experiments in Lancashire, Eng.-New Varieties of Cereals Produced.

An agricultural correspondent writes: It has been left to two young men in Lancashire to grapple successfully with a mighty problem, and, after eighteen years of hard, unremitting, and unremunerative work, to open up a vast field of new discoveries in the cultivation of cereals and grasses which bids fair to revolutionize agriculture. In 1880 John and Robert Garton, the sons of a Lancashire corn merchant, began their experiments in the production of new varieties of cereals by means of cross fertilization, at Newton-le-Willows. Already they have succeded in producing varieties of wheat, the average weight of the grain of which is sixty per cent. heavier than the average weight of grains of wheat in ordinary cultivation. With oats they have been even more successful. I saw a field of black oats growing at Newton which was just ready to be harvested, and the grains were just as much finer than the best Poland white oats as these latter are larger and finer than ordinary Tartarians. Already they have varieties of wheat and oats which promise to yield 30 or 40 per cent more per acre than ordinary varieties, and so increase the national production by the amount. In the ordinary course of things, and in any other country, the labors of men like the Gartons would at once have attracted the notice of the state department of agriculture. The intensely emotional role of Marguerite is one which nearly all the distinguished actresses have essayed. It is one of the severest tests of histrionic ability, and Miss Lorraine Hollis sustained it last night with a finish and power that fully realized the conceptions of her auditors, and stamped her as a superior artist. Her handling of the death scene in particular was original and effective. Her support was thoroughly competent, and the result was a well-rounded production in all respects. The wardrobe effects were very handsome. "Camille" will be on the boards this afternoon and tonight. The caste is: Armand Duval.....Mr. Orme Caldara

THE FRONT

Mr. Goode, Chief of the Associated Press War Staff, Visit. ing Here.

Was in the Thick of the Strife-Writing a History of the War. The football goals at the asylum cricket grounds were being set up yesterday afternoon for today's game. A man was tramping down the earth around one of the posts. Watching the operation critically was a boyish, athletic-looking young fellow, bareheaded and clad in an improvised football costume. There was a steady, drizzling rain-a regular Scotch mistbut the young man didn't seem to notice it. He was too much interested in the erection of the goal posts. The Young man was W. A. M. Goode, New York city editor of the Associated Press, and throughout the Spanish-American war, chief war correspondent of the Associated Press with the Atlantic squadron. From Feb. 22 to Aug. 20 he was at the front. A broad and ever-shifting front it was, too. Key West, Kingston, Cape Haytien, San Juan, Santiago and a dozen other places, were each in turn centers of interest. When the first low mutterings of war were heard, Mr. Goode was sent south to look over the probable arena, and arrange the details of system which should convert the entire Caribbean Sea, the Gulf of Mexico and all their islands into one vast eye and ear and voice. A rather large order for twenty men and four dispatch boats. But they filled it pretty well. The prompt sending of news was as important as the getting of it. Some of the cable dispatches cost from 50 cents to $1 50 a word. The story of the sinking of the Merrimac was sent out by Mr. Goode at a cost of $5,000. Hobson himself dictated the tion of the manner in which the boat was to be sunk, before starting on his daring mission. Throughout the war Mr. Goode was about the flagship New York. September McClure contains a graphic description from his pen of the destruction of Cervera's fleet, as seen from the New York. He is now writing a history of the operations of the North Atlantic squadron in the war. Admiral Sampson will write the introduction. Capt. Chadwick, Capt. Evans and Capt. Todd will contribute to the work. It will contain the official dispatches, and Mr. Goode will tell what he saw and what he was able to learn. with better facilities probably for seeing and learning than anyone else. The book will undoubtedly clear away some deceitful mists which obscure a new light. Mr. Goode is a Canadian. He looks absurdly young for the tasks he has had on his hands. He has lived a good deal. Among other things he served a year and a half in the Fourth United States Cavalry. At present he is holidaying in London as the guest of Dr. A. T. Hobbs. He talked freely enough of his share in the war to an Advertiser reporter. But he turned with just as much zest and interest to a discussion of the approaching football game. Mr. Goode told a story of Capt. Robley D. Evans, of the Iowa, that is almost too good to bury at the end of this article. The stories published about Capt. Evans envelop him in such a perpetual cloud of sulphurous profanity and swashbuckling bluster that it is pleasant to behold him as a man and a gentleman. It was in New York a few days ago, and Capt. Evans and Mr. Goode were driving slowly long the crowded street, on their way to luncheon, when a grimy,

"I'm Capt. Evans," was the quiet reply, with an acceut that showed he didn't relish the "Fighting Bob." "May I shake hands with you, sir?" asked the man. "Certainly, my dear fellow," replied Evans heartily, at the same time extending both hands.

It Prolongs Life. The reputation Abbey's Effervescent Salt has won in England and Europe as a standard preparation, is being repeated here. Physicians everywhere have indorsed it. Here is what J. A. S. Brunelle, M.D., C.M., Montreal, professor of surgery, Laval University Medical Faculty, surgeon to the Hotel Dieu, says. "I have found Abbey's Effervescent Salt particularly beneficial in the treatment of derangements of the liver and of the digestive organs, and consider that the regular use of a preparation of this nature has a decided tendency to prolong life. I am using it in my hospital

HEATING CONTRACT CONFIRMED

Hospital Building Committee Stand by Mr. Chambers.

Architect McBride's Consulting Engineer Finds Fault-Some Changes To Be Made-More About the County.

The Hospital Building Committee changed their plans twice yesterday, and finally met in the evening, as was decided upon early in the day. The cause of the meeting being called off late in the afternoon was a telegram stating that Mr. Gilbert Wilkes, the Detroit engineer, could not attend. Mr. Wilkes has been Architect Mc-Bride's consultant on the heating of the new hospital, and the object of the meeting was to reconsider the specifications by Mr. J. W. Chambers, the successful tenderer for the heating and ventilating plant. In Mr. Wilkes' absence a report from Mr. W. T. Huyette, his representative, was considered. The report was lengthy, and indicated that Mr. Huyette had gone through the specifications very closely. After pointing out what were considered deficiencies, he summed up by saying that Mr. Chambers had cheapened the constitution of the plant, as proposed by him, at the expense of good practice and satisfactory operation, and at direct expense to the pur-chasers; also, that Mr. Chambers had submitted a plan which the committee did not find in a si 3le hospital visited on the recent jaunt, and that he was trying an experiment at the expense of the city which was sure to prove a failure, as it had done in many cases already.

Ald. Hunt wanted the matter laid over until Mr. Wilkes could be pres-Mr. Chambers objected to the delay, and was backed up by Ald. McPhillips.

Enough time had been already lost, said the latter. Architect McBride notified the committee that he did not approve of the Chambers system of heating, and that he would not be held responsible in the event of its becoming a failure. Mr. Chambers agreed to a number of alterations, and on that condition the mayor was authorized to execute the Another step in the negotiations with the county was effected, a motion by Mayor Wilson being brought forward to define clearly the amount the county is to pay for the treatment of patients. The motion passed and will be considered at a special meeting of the city council, to which Warden Elson will be invited. It was voted that the county pay for the treatment of its patients the actual cost per day up to 75 cents (exclusive of the government grant), the city to have the privilege of terminating the agreement on six months' notice in case the government grant is withdrawn at any time

The members present were Ald. Carrothers (chairman), McPhillips, Gerry, Jolly and Hunt, Mayor Wilson, Architect McBride, Secretary Bell and Mr. Chambers, contractor for the heating.

Mr. Daly's Letter Criticised. To the Editor of The Advertiser:

Have noticed in several city papers

a letter from F. W. Daly, criticising the address of Hon. James Howe, of the Nova Scotian Legislature. sir, the very first remark of Mr. F. W. Daly is, to say the least, far from their way to function, when a standy toil-stained mill hand pressed along to the carriage and asked eagerly, pion the cause of the poor drunkard properties and his family." Now, I have permand the speech referred to and sonally read the speech referred to and cannot find any such championship therein; and as for Mr. Howe being out of touch with his age on confederation, that is no argument that he was out of touch on the question of coercion, or prohibition, or class legislation, which are certainly one and the same thing, only under different names. Then Mr. Daly says speech may have sounded rational 50 years ago, but in our day it reads like a chapter from antiquity. Well, in answer to that statement, let me say that it is not as antique, by several years, as a prohibition law which was enforced or forced on the people as long ago as Cromwell's reign. Mr. Daly will have to drop that line of argument. Then when he comes to criticise Mr. Howe's reference women and Scripture he utterly fails to grasp the idea of Hon. Mr. Howe, who, no doubt, was a man of good sense, and would give both these sub-jects their proper place and credit, and he did not intend any slur on either. Neither in his speech, did he throw any slur on either, as Mr. Daly would have us believe. Now, in answer to Mr. Daly on the Scripture part of his discourse; if the making or drinking of wine is such a sin, as sin Mr. Daly would certainly have us believe it was, then, did Christ sin?-for he certainly made wine. Now, we all know that Christ did not sin; therefore to make wine is no sin in the eye of God, even if it is in the eyes of Mr. . 24tf Daly and those connected with him

close of his letter, Mr. Daly says that close of his letter, Mr. Daly says that prohibition does not say what a man shall drink. It says, thou shalt not sell. Well, if the drinking of liquor is not to be stopped, then what is the use of the law? It is the immoderate use of strong drink that becomes the sin, and if the drinking of it is not to be interfered with by this law to be interfered with by this law which we are asked to pass, then, I say again, what is the benefit to be incurred by placing it on the statutes Then, in conclusion, of our country? Then, in conclusion, he says the traffic is a distinctive for the acting upon society; but surely he means the immoderate use of it, and yet almost in the same breath he tells that the drinking of it is not prohibited. Well, he is not consistent in his remarks, or he has been looking up the records of places that have tried this antique law to prohibit, and found that the sale and drinking of strong drink has increased under it, while the sale or drinking of lighter drinks, such as beer, wine, etc., have decreased. Now, fellow-electors, look well into this question before you vote, and if you think it is better for the welfare of the general public to drink beer and light wines in preference to ardent liquors, and also that we have some system of governing the distribution of all kinds of liquors, then vote No. But if you want to have every hole and corner shop on the quiet, with a bottle of rot-gut whisky, selling it to young men under age, and old men, then vote Yes, for that is what is done in places that have prohibition. even the circular entitled, Prohibition in Kansas, which the prohibition party have placed on our streets, admits that the act has simply done away with the open saloon. So much for the moral part of this question. I have refrained from speaking of the financial part. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain yours truly, F. HAZLEGROVE, City.

COLD STORAGE

Tenders Opened for the Big Plant Last Evening.

London to Have the First Cold Storage Plant in Ontario-Of Vast Importance to Farmers.

The promoters of the London Cold Storage Company met last evening at the Tecumseh and opened tenders for the construction of the building and plant. A large number of tenders were received from local contractors and many came from Toronto, Hamilton, Burlington, Detroit and Lansing. The outside tenders were lower by hundreds-and in some cases by thousands -of dollars than those from local parties. The secretary was instructed to notify some of the outside contractors to come to London, and, if certain points can be satisfactorily explained, the work will be proceeded with at once. The proposed cold storage plant will be thoroughly modern in every detail. It will be the only one of its kind in Ontario. It will be of vast importance to London and to the farmers of Western Ontario, as the greatest factor is depeloping an immense European export trade. The business of cold storage by mechanical refrigerators has made vast strides in the past decade. It is now possible by means of refrigerating machines and ammonia condensers to produce and maintain any temperature desired. The London cold storage plant was designed by an architect exerienced in this particular line of work, and the promoters will spare no expense to make it as perfect as possible. The building and plant will cost about $50,000.

It is a purely London enterprise. The promoters are T. H. Smallman. W. J. Reid, John Labatt, M. Masuret, C. B. Hunt, Dr. Niven, A. Cleghorn, I. Waterman and R. W. Puddicombe.
