  We are spending over five hundred dollars this summer in advertising in the Old Country the farms in Ontario which have been placed in our hands for sale. Mr. Tennent, the President of the Exchange, is over there at present establishing agencies and appointing agents in different parts of the country for the purpose of inducing the better class of intending emigrants to come to Ontario to buy farm lands. Already we have inquiries from people in England, and also from AUSTRALIA in reference to the farms in Ontario which we have on hand for sale. We expect at least 50 to 100 farmers with capital for investment will come to Ontario this summer and fall to buy farms. Those wishing to place their farms on our list should communicate at once with us or with some of our local agents as to terms. etc. JAMES BURROWS,

DIGGING IN FARE BOXES!

Toronto Street Car Conductors On Trial.

Detectives Describe How They Dissovered the Crooked Work.

Toronto, June 14.-There was great interest manifested at the police court crowded when the case against the street car conductors charged with robbing the company's fare boxes came up. The first of the seventeen prisoners called was H. W. Rummans, who, when arrested by Detective Davis, threw away a "digger," one of the little instruments used to extract tickets and coin from the box, which was found by Davis, who stopped the car and took his prisoner him while he searched for it. Detective Davis gave his testimony in a few words, telling about the raid on the cars on the night of June 5, and the arrest of the prisoner on his car near Church and Front streets. He described the finding of the "digger," and said that the prisoner, when it was discovered, said: "For God's sake don't say anything about this." When searched, the prisoner had in his inside pocket 43 detached tickets. No two of the tickets were found to be numbered consecutively, which was conclusive evidence that Rummans did not get the tickets from the company. The condition of the fare box was next taken up, and evidence presented to show that the "digger" would make such scrapes on the teeth of the box as were found.

The chief witness for the crown is John B. Caulfield, a Pinkerton detective, who took the stand after Davis, and told about the discovery of the conspiracy among the men. He has been working on the road since March. He met Rummans in April, and on May 6 Rummans, in his presence, used his "digger" on his fare box and abstracted some tickets from

True religion is independent of any purely intellectual theory of the universe, and is founded on facts proven true by the universal experience of mankind. This statement is easily il-histrated by childhood. The little one does not understand its mother, has no comprehension whatever of a mother's love or of the significance of a mother's discipline. If the baby were gifted with speech and could describe its relations to that mother it would make as many misstatements as we do in describing our relations to God. The mother's providence is wholly misunderstood; even her watchful care looks like interference with the child's rights, and the child might say, as Calvin did of the Almighty, that "of her own good the "horn of Ripon." pleasure" she pets at one moment and punishes at another. #### A Significant Move.

The economic revolution in Great Britain fifty years ago received its main impulse from Manchester, as the center of the cotton industry. Another movement, which may have far-reaching results, was set on foot in that city this week, when the cotton manufacturers of Lancashire formed an association with the object of extending the cultivation of cotton in British colonies and protectorates. The statement is made that Lancashire does not relish being dependent upon the United States for its supply.

It was the cotton manufacturers Cobden at the head, who were the leaders in the free trade movement. Their great argument half a century ago was to this effect: "Great Britain will always be dependent on other countries for her food and raw material, and therefore she must be a manufacturing nation if she is to retain her material greatness. A duty on raw material is a direct burden on industry, and a duty on food increases the cost of living. These fetters should be removed so as to make Great Britain the workshop of the world, able to pay other countries for her food and supplies by sending them British manufactures." This theory had a special application to the cotton industry, as nearly every ounce of raw cotton at that time had to be imported from the United States to supply the cotton manufactures of Great Britain, which led the world. During the American civil war this dependence was pitifully illustrated, as, the supply from the Southern States being cut off, the British cotton industry came to a standstill and thousands of operatives were reduced to misery. The hope of the Manchester school that a free exchange of services would be established between Great Britain and foreign countries, the latter taking British manufactures in payment for raw material, has been to a great extent disappointed. Great Britain still buys its raw material, duty free, from the United sented by a minority candidate. States, but the latter seeks to shut ut, by a high tariff. British manufactures which constitute the natural payment for American supplies.

There is one theory of the free traders, however, which has been verified, and of which the latest move of the Lancashire cotton interests gives proof, namely, that commerce is an exchange of goods for goods, not of goods for cash, that it moves along the line of least resistance, and that a nation cannot forever sell if it does not buy. The United States, as a result of this Lancashire project, may discover the truth of this in the near future. The British textile manufacturers are tired of buying from a nation which prefers to buy nothing in return. It is well known that the cotton production of Egypt is rapidly growing. Great Britain is taking an increasing proportion of the Egyptian product, and if the Lancashire manufacturers turn their attention to that field for their supplies, the Southern States will find in Egypt a

It's Uncle Sam's Move.

A resolution in favor of closer trade relations with Canada was defeated recently in the Lower House of the Massachusetts Legislature. The Herald says this is pered with by election officials. Four a ridiculous instance of false pleading, as the Anglo-American commission has adjourned never to reconvene. Hitherto such propositions as have material-1zed into definite official action have come from the Canadian Government. and some time ago Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the official statement that, as all the initiative on these lines had been the work of Canada, and as no forward progress has been made, he did not propose to again make the first step in this direction. Commenting on this statement, the Herald says: "This was nothing more than was to be expected. We cannot continue to shut the door of friendly negotiation in the face of people of our own blood without in time provoking from them action of retaliation similar to that we should resort to if our national wishes were somewhat con-temptuously considered by foreigners. the only man really worthy of the col-It takes two to make a trade as well

Canada's Great Record.

The Canadian trade returns continue to reflect the prosperity of the country, and the marvelous commercial activity. The exports and imports for the eleven months of the present fiscal year show an increase of $35,000,000 over the corresponding period last year. The aggregate to date is $366,-942,595, so that if the rate of increase is maintained during the present month Canada's foreign trade will reach the magnificent total of $400,000,-000 for the year. The growth of Canadian commerce since 1896 has been unparalleled, and there is no other country that can show an increase proportionately as great. The figures are al-

mos	t beyond belief:
1896		$239,025,360
1897		257,168,862
1898		304,475,736
1899		321,661,213
1900		381,517,236
1901		386,903,157
1902	(estimated)	400,000,000

There is every assurance that this expansion has only begun. The influx into the Northwest means an immense increase of production even during the present summer, and the volume of exports from the west alone will continually grow.

Improving the Streets.

In Winnipeg they have park commissioners who attend to the cutting of the grass on the boulevards. London's streets are very attractive at the present time and the trees beautiful, but it cannot be said the grass is kept in order on all the boulevards, some of the schools being among the worst sinners in that respect. A great deal can yet be done to improve London in the matter of parks and play grounds, and Winnipeg, much younger than London, can teach us. They are securing small parks at different points in the city, and wisely so, as Winnipeg is destined to be one of the great cities of the world.

Both these suggestions from Winnipeg might be taken up in London with much advantage. There are several good available points in London for parks and playgrounds, and they should be secured without delay Something has already been accomplished, but not sufficient.

It was announced here yesterday that 864 more Transvaal Boers surrendered. This brings the total of surrenders for all the colonies up to about 14,000.

Only two newspapers in South Africa oppose the suspension of the Cape constitution. HAVE FAITH IN THE BRITISH.

Mr. Schalkburgher, lately acting president of the Transvaal Republic been making a visit to the burgher camps in Natal, and concluded his tour at Pinetown Thursday. He was there presented by the burghers with an address expressing their confidence in the Boer leaders, admitting that some of their compeers had not done their duty. and trusting that right and justice would be done them by their conquer-ors. Amid the cheers of his fellowcountrymen, Mr. Schalkburgher left for Pretoria, where he will assist in the resettlement of the country.

Pretoria, June 14.-A heavy snowstorm fell at Middelburg, Cape for the first time in sixteen years. Trains were blocked and telegraph wires were down.

Eleven trainmen were killed and 637 Strike of Toronto Street Railway Men Impending.

> Company Refuses to Recognize the Union-Both Sides of Case.

> stated by the railway company, was sent yesterday by Mr. Keating, the general manager of the street railway company, to Mr. James Barber, secretary of the Toronto Railway Employes' Union, stating practically what is contained in the statement of Mr. Mackenzie, and pointing out that the company is a non-union company, and will ot deal with the union as a union.

This letter of Mr. Keating's brings matters to a crisis. It is a positive refusal to recognize the union, and the men now have no alternative but either to withdraw their demand for recognition or go out on strike.

The street railway company officials say that approximately they have 950 employes, and they express confidence that a large number of these men will remain loyal to the company. Last year when an increase of wages was desired some light on the matter. At any rate a committee from the union waited Mr. McKay has a majority independ- upon the company, and were told to go back, call a mass meeting, and come again, as the accredited representatives of the employes. The committee did so, and were treated as employes, and the result of the conference was a new wage scale. The company say that the position they take now is exactly the same as the position they assumed last year.

MEN'S SIDE OF THE CASE. Mr. Daniel Dilworth, chairman of the executive board of the Amalgamated Union, in an interview last evening, answered Mr. Mackenzie's statement (published in another column). Mr. Dilworth said:

"The company state that they are to meet a body of the men. The committee that have asked for a conference are men elected by over 900 men in the organization, and if the company are willing to meet a comthe men merely could be discussed at there was to be repeated.

put me in the position of coming down here to order a strike. I wish to state most emphatically that this is not the case. If that were so, there would have been a strike tomorrow, for the men had called a meeting for tonight, and they certainly favored going out at once. I talked with the men, however, and pleaded with them to call the meeting off to see if we could not Toronto, June 14 .- A letter, it was arrange in some way or other for a conference with the company." "Did you ask yourself for an appointment with the street railway management?" "No, I have not so far. I had intended to, but thought it better at the present time to have the company dea with the men locally. I want the pub lic to understand that I am doing all can to avert a strike, and if it comes to a strike, it will not be my doing." "What is the procedure if a strike should be called?" asked the reporter. "The matter is entirely in the hands of the men themselves." answered Mr. Dilworth. "They will have to call a meeting, and the proposition to strike carried by a two-thirds majority before a strike can be ordered. That majority agreeing, then I will be asked to indorse the strike, and once indorsed the international body will stand be hind the men and afford them financial support. Upon no occasion has the international body ordered a strike through its own officers." ARBITRATION PROPOSED. The men say that they are willing to submit their case to arbitration, and suggest the appointment by the company and employes each of an arbitrater, these two to appoint a third, the arbitrators to discuss all matters in dispute. This offer will probably be made to the company. Curiously enough, it is the strawberries known as Royal Sovereign which have suffered most in the Vale of Evesham from the bleak of May

The International Monthly for June contains several articles of unusual interest, which deserve to be widely read. Among the number is an essay entitled "Latin Europe and American Imperialism," by Professor Sighele. The essayist contrasts the Latin with what might be termed Teutonic imperialism. The former represents the militant idea with its grand but at the same time cruel elements, while the latter is impersonated in the successful trader. The best troops of modern imperialism are those that have gained the greatest victories, do not consist of armed men, but of artisans, agriculturists, manufacturers and engineers; its weapons of war do not carry sterility and death, but serve to perfect and to increase agriculture and industry, and are called railways, roads, electric plows. # SOCIAL POSITION

Makes no Difference. Women are All Alike. No Matter What Their Station in Life May Be. All Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If she is one of the favored daughters of wealth, - if she belongs on to the realm of the "well-to-do," — or — if she belongs to the unmbered thousands who must work in order to live — the story is just the same; all suffer from about the same cause, and in this suffering "peculiar to women," all reach the same level, and all are of the same family. When a woman is nervous and irritable, head and back ache, feels tired all the time, loses sleep and appetite, has pains in groins, bearing down sensation, whites and irregularities, she is not "worn out," but

Such symptoms tell her that a wemb trouble is imminent, and she cannot act too promptly if she values her future comfort and happiness. The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove, beyond a question, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble at once by removing the cause and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells Mrs. Scott How to be Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: - I have been for some years a great sufferer and thought I would write and explain my case to you as you had helped so many others. Menstruation is irregular and very painful. I have suffered with painful periods for ten years but the pains grow worse as I grow older. "I suffer most with my back, lower part of abdomen and left side. I have been flowing all the month and a part of August, not constantly, but will stop for two or three days and then begin again.

The doctor says I have misplacement of the womb. I have bearing down pains when passing urine, and my abdomen is very badly swollen and sore. Please advise me at your earliest convenience." — Mrs. A. V. Scott, 21 Page St., Tingston, Pa. (Sept. 30, 1900.)

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — When I wrote to you asking advice no one could describe my suffering. The doctors said I could not be relieved unless I had an operation performed, but thanks to you and your medicine I got along without having the dreaded operation. I have taken ten bottles of your medicine and am once more well and happy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a fine medicine and a God-send to suffering women. I trust my letter may be the means of bringing many of my suffering sisters to accept your kind aid." — Mrs. A. V. Scorr, 21 Page St., Kingston, Pa. (Jan. 30, 1961.)

Remember Mrs. Pinkham's advice is free, and all sick women are foolish if they do not ask for it. No other person has such vast experience, and has helped so many women.

REWARD. -- We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, 2000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special parmission.

THE INTEREST OF HOME MISSIONS

A Secretary and Missionary Superintendent

TO BE SENT TO NORTHWEST!

Discussion on Colleges-Other Business Transacted at Session of the General Assembly.

Toronto, June 14.-The Presbyterian General Assembly yesterday discussed many things pertaining to the needs of the church in the mission fields at home and abroad, and received a numwest were again brought to the attention of the meeting, while the evennumber in attendance about 600 ministers and laymen.

DECREASE IN CANDIDATES FOR

MINISTRY. In the report of the Presbyterian College. Halifax, presented by Rev. Dr. year. Gordon, it was stated that the debt against the fund a year ago, of $1,448, has been paid. The receipts of the year were $13,200 as against $10,950 for the preceding year. The income from investments amounted to $8,946, as against $6,913 for the previous year. The expenditure was $11.876. Prof. Scrimger reported for the Presbyterian College at Montreal. The receipts were $15,715, and the expenditure $85 less than this amount. A bequest of $10,000 had been received for the scholarship endowment fund, in addition to $1,400 for the endowment of a memorial scholarship. To the ordinary endowment fund was added $35,157, of which $30,000 came from the century fund and $5,000 from Mrs. John Redpath, of Montreal. Rev. W. T. Herridge reported verbally on behalf of Morin College,

Prof. Scrimger, in commenting upon the reports, drew attention to the crease in numbers of candidates for the ministry. He urged ministers to look into their congregations for suitable candidates for the ministry. Rev. Dr. Black, of Montreal, wanted to know why there was a falling off in the candidates for the ministry. The present, he said, was a deplorable state of affairs. The church was face to face with a crisis, said Rev. Dr. McMullen, of Woodstock. The church, he declared, was winking at the teachings of the colleges. Principal Mac-Vicar did not believe there was much scepticism among young men. What the church required was renewed spiritual life. G. M. Macdonell, K.C., presented the report of Queen's University, which made a touching reference to the death of the late Principal Grant. The number of students registered last season was 820, 497 in arts, 187 in medicine, 105 in practical science and 31 in theology. Mention was made in the report to the proposed severance of connection between the general assembly and the university. The expenditure was $57,422, the deficiency being $8,256. In moving the adoption of the report, President Forest of the Halifax University claimed that the college work in Canada had just begun. He said there would be found plenty of candidates for the ministry, if ministers would cease being pessimistic and go to the congregations and ask for men. Principal Caven paid a fitting and eloquent eulogy to the memory of Principal Grant. COLLEGES BECOMING MACHINES Rev. Dr. Milligan was glad that Queen's University had a theological branch. A theological college was the crown of every university. Dr. Milligan declared that universities were becoming machines. He felt sorry for some of the brethren, whom he compared to those people who lived in the days of Galileo. "They went to bed in the enemy."

the sublime belief that the earth stood still, and when Galileo tried to show them otherwise they gagged him." The word of God, he said, should be taken in the spirit, not the letter.

Here Principal Caven objected, and said that the speaker was out of God.

said that the speaker was out of order. Dr. Milligan did not intend to be suppressed. He continued for some time along the same lines, and was repeatedly applauded. A resolution was passed setting forth the excellent qualities of the late Principal Grant, and highly commend-

MEN WANTED FOR THE WEST. At the afternoon session the first business was the consideration of the appointment of a general secretary of home missions and two missionary superintendents, one for the Synod of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, and one for the Synod of British Columbia, as recommended by the home missions committee of the western section. Dr. Warden, convener of the committee, declared that the assembly would make a fatal mistake in the interests of Presbyterianism and the Word of God, if the recommendations were not carried out.

Dr. Warden moved that the recommendations be adopted; and that a large committee be appointed to nominate three ministers for the positions and report at an early session In seconding the motion John Charlton, M. P., throught that the great west could hold 50,000,000 inhabitants. To keep the country for the - church. Presbyterians must put forth great efforts, or "else it will slip from their hands."

Dr. Warden's motion was unanimously carried.

INSURANCE. Sir Thomas Taylor presented a report from the committee on the protection of church property. The in-surance policies on the various churches and manses were reported to be in a satisfactory condition, but a number of presbyteries had not reported. As far as could be given, 409 churches were insured and 52 were without protection. A resolution was passed requesting presbyteries to send in full reports for presentation to the next assembly.

A pleasing feature of the session was the reception tendered to representatives of the Anglican Synod and the Toronto Methodist Conference, who brought with them the greetings of their respective bodies.

SABBATH SCHOOL LITERATURE. Dr. Warden presented an encouraging report from the committee on Sabbath school publications. The cash received during the year amounted to $31,183 33, and the cash expended was $29,119 48. A balance to the credit of the committee of $8,573 94 remained on April 30, 1902. On May 1, there was an increase in assets over liabilities of $12,036 11, being $1,813 53 more than the previous year. The committee decided to issue a paper for senior pupils in January, 1903. Rev. J. M. Duncan, B.D., of Woodville, was appointed associate editor. The report called attention to the necessity providing suitable religious papers for French Protestant children, as recommended by the board of French evangelization. The report was adopted. RECEIPTS FOR MISSIONS. The receipts for foreign missions in the eastern section during the year were $38,761 97. Of this sum, $2,688 71 came from the legacy fund. The debt is now $4,543. The total receips for the western section were $121,692 44. of which $48,286 97 was contributed by congregations, Sabbath schools and young people's societies. The contributions for 1901 were $7,000 less than the previous year, which the committee deeply regretted.

REWARD OF $3,000.

Ore., June 14.-Governor Greer and Superintendent Lee, of the penitentiary, last night offered a reward of $3,000 for the capture and return, dead or alive, of Tracey and Merrill, the escaped convicts. This is Merrill, the escaped convicts. This is double the amount offered heretofore. Tracey and Merrill, who have been hunted for five days by 200 armed men, have eluded their pursuers, and it is now believed they crossed the Willamette River about twenty-five miles south of here. The militia companies have been called home, and the sheriff's posse gave up the chase last night.

EX-ALD. WILKEY FAVORS RECTORY STREET LINE

Should Not Be Abandoned-Electrical Competition a Necessity.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: I have noticed with much interest the letters and comments in the local papers respecting two matters that are now before the city council, the question of street railway extension and the supply of electrical energy in this city. I was glad to observe what Mr. Bennet and others said respecting the proposed abandonment of the Rectory street line. I agree with them that this would be an unwise move. It should not be forgotten that its removal will affect many residents in the northern part of the city. With the growing importance of the southern part of the city as a manufacturing district, the benefit of the Rectory street cross-town line will increase, as it will be necessary to the men who work there and live in the northern portion of the city, the growing residential section. This and other considerations make the proposed move unadvisable. It is not necessary to say more re specting the supply of cheap electric power than has already been said. At a time when every other municipality in the country is seeking cheaper power for its factories, it is unquestionably very bad policy for the city council to restrict in any way any compe-tition that would assist the manufacturers of London

LOCAL LIVERYMEN HAVE A GRIEVANCE

Revision.

Many prominent liverymen of the city met in Cullis' hall last evening and discussed matters affecting their interests. The question of hack tariff was brought up, but no definite action was taken. The liverymen consider that they have a grievance against the city by reason of the bylaw which compels them to accept 25 cents cab fare for carrying a passenger, in some instances, several miles. Heating System.

The finance committee of the Public Library Board met last night and opened tenders for the installment of a steam heating system in the library. It was found that the tenders were all too high for the amount of funds at the disposal of the committee. As the committee do not wish to ask the city council for more funds for the purpose, it was decided to file the tenders for reference, although it was considered by the committee that the substitution of the steam system for hot air is a necessity for the library. It was decided to call for tenders for the heating of the new addition, the system to be a continuation of the steam with the hot air system now in use. Tenders for the supplying of tables and stands for the new reading room will also be called for. The members present were Chairman George C. Gunn, Messrs. Labelle, Judd and Hazard, and City Engineer Graydon.

Dr. Gaul's cantata, "Una," was presented to a large audience in the Brant Avenue Methodist Church, at Brantford, Thursday evening, the choir of 50 voices being assisted by Alice Calder Stock, of London, and other wellknown vocalists. Describing the pre-sentation, the Brantford Expositor

"Considerable interest was aroused in the appearance of Mrs. Stock, of Detroit, and great things were expected of her. It is safe to say that Mrs. Stock fulfilled the highest expectations. She possesses a soprano voice of wide range and excellent quality and sustained her high notes with the same ease and fullness of tone as in the lower. Mrs. Stock was heard to best advantage in the song, "O Love Will Love," which was a perfect gem. She carried the part of "Una" throughout very satisfactorily. Before the opening of the cantata Mrs. Stock sang three numbers, "Spring Song,"
"Under the Rose" and "O Dry Those

Judge Elliott's Finding in West Nissouri Case.

Wm. Bent, of West Nissouri, was clearing house for the week ending tried by Judge Edward Elliott this morning on the charge of assault, laid against him by a neighbor, William Brock. After hearing the evidence, Judge Elliott acquitted Bent on the ground that Brock was the aggressor in the quarrel between them, and that Bent acted only in self-defense. Brock, who is much the larger of the two men, received injuries in the fight that confined him to his bed for several weeks. gate amount, nearly with Hamilton and St. John, showing that London has Mr. J. CITY'S RAPID PROGRESS PLEASES OLD LONDONER

They Think Cab Tariff Bylaw Needs Mr. W. J. Christie, of Winnipeg, Revisits His Native Town.

> Mr. W. J. Christie, of Christie & Huebach, Winnipeg, is on a visit to his native city. Mr. Christie finds London steadily improving in cleanliness and beauty, and he was pleased to notice, too, that it has a brightened business appearance. Some of the best buildings in London have been erected since his last visit, notably, the Masonic Temple, Victoria Hospital, the Normal School, Opera House, wholesale warerooms on the corner of Clarence and York street, large additions to Perrin's and McCormick's, and a large number of residences. Mr. Christie was pleased with London's steady progress.

Very Many Thefts Of Library Books.

The system of permitting book borrowers to roam through a public library and choose their own books, as is customery in scores of American libraries, has resulted in the theft of more than a thousand volumes in the free library of Bishopsgate, London, in the last seven years and the directors have decided to abandon it. The decision has stirred up the Londoners interested in libraries and there has arisen a warm discussion on the subject of free acess to books.

The librarians who believe in free access say that that system teaches the reader to treat the books as if they were his own, and to become acquainted with a great many works, the titles of which in a catalogue would not allure him to inspect them. They also say that the breakdown of the system must have been due to poor management in the Bishopsgate library. The librarian there retorts that the worthy objects of the originators of the system are defeated by the inherent wickedness of a section of the library-using public, and that not the poorer section either. The books stolen, he says, have been mainly works of fiction, and have not been taken for the money they would bring, but surreptitiously to be read at home. Many of them have been returned anonymously through the mail or hidden away in parts of the library where

THE TURF.

THE SUBURBAN HANDICAP. New York, June 14.-Twelve horses are entered to start in the Suburban-today. They embrace the pick of the great handicap horses of the east. though those that have figured as phenomenal racers have all been eliminated. Blue Girl will not start, and Water Color was declared out several days since. This leaves an even field of size sufficient to give every starter a chance for the glory of a great turf victory and the $3,000 prize which falls to the winner. Doubtless few among the real number of enthusiasts who read of the performances of our trotters and pacers appreciate the important position occupied by the shoer. We are more or less pedigree experts and close students of the standard works on the trotter, his breeding, his training and his after career, yet few have ever delved in the tarrier's field.

Old-time horseshoers carried a great

Old-time horseshoers carried a great leather pouch and made change from leather pouch and made change from its depths; they had a slate for carry-ing the charged accounts and as a rule looked so dirty and grimy that we wondered however they washed for meals. Probably Henry Wads-worth Longfellow's "Village Smithy," will never be forgotten by the boy whose reader contained it as a favorite piece to "declaim" at the monthly session given over to that much-dreaded

Today we have a new race. Every-thing about the shop is different. The old bellows no longer occupy half the available room, but improved ones with wheels that stir up the fires, aided by an automatic "blower" and very compact as well as portable, are at hand. There are little scales on the bench to weigh to a nicety all shoes. The horse's toes are rendered at exactly such an angle by means of an in-strument placed under his foot. The anvil is smaller and all hammers and instruments used are lighter and more attractive. A platform exactly "level" is at hand, the horses are stationed hereon and a draft made of each foot. Less of hot iron or steel application and the shoe is thoroughly fitted to the foot cold or barely warm, and not as of old, the foot fitted to the shoe all

A few ounces give a trotter more stride and more action, or on the other hand may take away an overplus of stride and lessen his action so as to improve his speed. Some years ago trotters were long heel shoes behind. It was more to catch the backstrap of the toe boots than aught else, yet, once in vogue, every trotting-bred animal wore them. Long toes forward were the hobby of some trainers, yet when Directum came with his short toes all around the observing trainer abandoned the projecting front toe with a rush and today one rarely sees much "foot" under a fast one.

To a nicety can a horse be "gaited" at the instance of the shoer and thus it is leading stables have their own shoers at salaries as high as $2,500 accompanying them around the circuit working under tents.

A Wheaton, Ill., man made a set of shoes for Star Pointer that improved his speed from 2:02½ to 1:59½, and was engaged to travel with the great horse, giving up his shop and patronage, so it must have been profitable While at his best no one ever shod the champion but this one man. He found that Star Pointer's sole was so thin and acute that a pad was necessary for him to stand on while either forward foot was suspended. To shoe a great horse like Cresceus, The Abbot, Star Pointer, etc., several hours are required usually, and the trainer scarcely takes his eyes off either horse, shoe or shoer. It means much with engagements dependent on keeping a horse at his highest speed and free from lameness.

The veteran breeder, C. J. Hamlin, shod Fantasy, the champion 3-yearold filly, with compressed paper fibre front shoes one season, and she trotted in 2:06 or 2:061/2 with them. Mr. Hamlin thought they would be as durable and far lighter than steel shoes. Just why they were not a complete success the writer does not understand. Never since have the Village Farm stars been shod that way, at all events. A Providence genius fashioned an break concussion. It never got yond his own stable. When the "pneumatic age" reached the trotting turf we had a pneumatic shoe on the market, popularly supposed to relieve the concussion, buoy up a horse's action and do a lot toward accomplishing the mile in two minutes. Today we do not see them. Pneumatic knee boots are, however, in use and keep a horse

THE OAR.

AN OARSMAN AT 78. "No wonder Ed Ten Eyck is the champion oarsman of the world," said an amateur hill climber back from a trip to the Dunderberg Mountain. The Ten Eyeks have been rowing for four generations anyway, back to more than 100 years ago and probably longer, and there are three generations at the oars now, including the grandfather, the most remarkable man, of them all. He is 78 years old and rows every day.
"We went up to Peekshill expecting to find a conventional double-ender steam ferryboat to take us across the Hudson to the Dunkerberg, but after wain hunt for a slip, ferryhouse and ticket chopper we asked a native what to do about it. He said that Uncle Jim Ten Eyek would row us across.

look very rugged. That's one of the cases in which you can't go by looks.
"The old gentleman led the way across the pier to his boat, which was longer and narrower than the Whitehall boats used by the watermen at the Battery and all hands got aboard. The river at that point is a mile and a half wide. "The fool of the party offered to do the rowing. He admitted afterward that he thought Uncle Jim was so old that it would take him too long to get across. Uncle Jim, who has been the ferryman there for more than 50 years and has seen a good many such idiots in his day, grinned and let our amateur take the oars.

"The boat was heavy and the wind and tide were both strong upstream. The amateur pegged away without making much progress till he got hot and red. Then he asked how far it

'Good mile and a half,' said the old gentleman, still whittling on

Forty-second street leaves Peekskill at 11 o'clock at night.' "It was then 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The man who thought he could row changed seats with the veteran and we went across the river as if there had been a propeller astern and an electric dynamo to work it. "But the fool wasn't satisfied. He asked the ferryman if he had ever heard of the oarsmen of the same name who had won the Diamond 'Some,' said the old man. 'He's my grandson. I gave him some of his first lessons when he was a baby, on this

'All the Ten Eycks row. My father was the ferryman right here 100 years ago. I've done the same work for the last 50 years. "'Then there's my son who is training the crew at the naval academy and his son, who is the champion.

Back in the 40s my twin brother Isaac and myself were the crack oarsmen of the country. Isaac is dead now. "'Our biggest race in the 40s was off Newburgh, best two out of three heats, four miles to a heat. Isaac and I were in one boat and Isaac Seaman and Abraham Post, from Jersey City, were aginst us. Our boat was the Krolish and weighed 150 pounds. They rowed in the Hookem-squeezem that weighed 90 pounds. That was about 60 years ago. Lots of folks came up from New York and Jersey City to see the race, and all the butchers from Washington market were there betting 100 to 20 against Isaac and me. "'But I guess some of 'em walked home, for we won the first two heats as easy as rolling off a log. We did it by about three boat lengths and could have done better than that, but as I've always said to my son and grandson, what's the use of wasting

'Then I can remember another big race that I was in with Isaac down in Newark Bay about 50 or 55 years ago. There was quite a piece in the old New York Sun about it. I haven't got the piece with me, but I guess I can say it over to you.'

"Then Capt. Jim stopped rowing and repeated the account of that race of half a century ago which he had committed to memory.
"He wound up by telling us that he was 78 and would row against any man of his age on the river."—New York Sun.

GONE FIVE YEARS

It is hard to make people understand that coffee really will do business for 3 o'clock, Knox Church, Winnipeg, was them if they stick to it long enough. It is almost a certainty that some little symptom of disease, stomach trouble, or kidney or heart trouble, caused by coffee drinking will ultimately develop into some fixed organic disease unless the cause of the disturbance is removed. An illustration may not be amiss. A lady in Kearney, Neb., says, "I used coffee a great many years. Gradually my health broke down. I had dyspepsia and was extremely nervous. I passed many sleepless nights, but, like many others, did not know what was the cause of my invalidism.

Finally the trouble centered into in the region of the heart, causing Soo a few days ago, and had a conacute pain in the stomach and a spasmodic action of the heart. A surgical operation was deemed necessary, but after all the preparations were made a good, old, honest doctor suggested that I take treatment a little onger and leave off coffee and take Postum and some Grape-Nuts Break-

In five months my supposed tumor had disappeared, my headaches were gone and digestion wholly restored. My heart only gave me trouble a few times. That was five years ago. I have been a steady user of Postum ever since chinery were placed at the factory and am a new creature today. Am ready for unloading. FOWLER VS. GARVEY. Judge Chisholm heard the case of Fowler vs. Garvey at Berlin on Wednesday. This was an interpleader issue to decide the question of ownership of certain goods seized by the sheriff in Galt, under an execution issued by John Garvey, London, against Margaret J. Fowler, who kept a grocery store in Galt. The plaintiff in the case was Miss E. C. Fowler, who based her claim upon the goods under a chattel mortgage given by her sister, the execution debtor, to secure certain moneys lent by her. The defendant claimed that the chattel mortgage was void against his execution, on the ground that the execution debtor was insolvent, and that the mortgage was an unjust preference and contrary to statute. Inquest on Walter Campbell's Death Continued.

Employes and a Passenger Give Their Evidence.

The coroner's inquest on the death of Walter Campbell, killed on May 24 by falling under a Springbank car, was resumed for a couple of hours last night, Coroner McLaren presiding. The evidence of three witnesses was taken and the inquest was then adjourned for a week. The first witness called was Conducweek's entertainment at the Springbank | tor Charles Martin, who was in charge of the motor car at the time of the ac-cident. His first intimation that anything was wrong was a scream from young Campbell. The witness did not interpret the "stop" sign at Dundas and Talbot streets to mean that the car should come to a full stop. The motorman merely slowed up so as to have the car under complete control. On the occasion of the accident, witness did not signal the motorman to go ahead, as the latter started to increase his speed without a signal. The witness did not think this an infraction of the rules, as the car had not stopped. Supt. John Break was the next witness. It was, he said, his duty to enforce the carrying out of the company's rules. The employes were to carry out the rules to "the best of their judgment." If the car stops the conductor must give the motorman two rings to go ahead, but not otherwise, The last witness called was Miss Lillian Berry, who was a passenger on the trailer at the time of the accident. She saw the boy getting on the rear step of the motor. He took hold of the rod with both hands, and got one foot on the step for a few seconds, then seemed to lose his balance and fall. The car was going unusually fast. The inquest was adjourned to meet

Pleasant Affair at Dundas Center Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Hewlett Receive Dolightful Evidence of Popularity.

Mr. W. H. Hewlett, the popular organist of the Dundas Center Methodist Church, who is about to become organist of the Centenary Methodist Church, at Hamilton, was pleasantly surprised last night by the members of the choir. In the midst of the regular practice of the choir, Rev. C. T. Scott entered the church, and requested Mr. Hewlett to go to the vestry. This was the signal for the choir, who immediately adjourned to one of the parors of the church, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Af-ter a few moments Mr. Hewlett was ushered in, and presented with a gold fountain pen, and two beautiful tra-veling rugs, for himself and Mrs. Hew-The pen was inscribed with the words: "Presented to Mr. W. H. Hew-lett by the choir of Dundas Center Church, June 13, 1902." The presenta-tion was made by Miss Eva N. Rob-lyn, and the following address was read by Mr. Kirk:

Mr. W. H. Hewlett, Organist and Choirmaster, Dundas Center Methodist Church: Dear Sir,-It is with sincere regret that the members of the choir feel called upon to wish you and Mrs. Hewlett farewell. Our regular practices have been ex-ceedingly beneficial from an educa-tional point of view, and we have profited in no scant measure thereby. That our church services may long feel the influence of your masterly training of the choir is the desire of each individual member.

On behalf of the choir of Dundas Center Methodist Church: W. H. Skin-In reply Mr. Hewlett made a few very complimentary remarks to all present, saying also that he had had two surprises during the evening. One was the very large attendanc at the practice, and the other the amptiness of the church when he went back after Mr. Scott had sent him out. He also expressed the hope that the choir would rally round the new choirmaster, and give him the same support they had given him. The remainder of the evening was spent in a social way, with refresh-ments and songs. At the close Mr. Scott suggested the singing of "God Save the King." which was sung with enthusiasm, followed by "For He's Jolly Good Fellow."

THE DEMON, DYSPEPSIA.—In olden times it was a popular belief that demons moved invisibly through the ambient air, seeking to enter into men and trouble them. At the present time the demon dyspepsia is at large in the same way, seeking habitation in those who by careless or unwise living invite him. And once he enters a man it is difficult to dislodge him. He that finds himself so possessed should know that a valiant friend to do battle for him with the unseen foe is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are ever ready for the trial.

Thomas Gorman, a rancher on Broken Back Creek, Wyoming, was killed by his younger brother, James Gorman. # STRIKES BENEFIT THE OPERATORS

Raise in Wages.

MEN ARE GIVEN 10 PER CENT SLUMP IN PRICES OF SEATS

While the Barons Soak the Con- some Peers Will Be Absent for sumer to the Extent of 31 Per Cent.

New York, June 13.-The Journal says: Records and figures, taken from official reports, show that previous increases in wages to the coal miners have been far more profitable to the operators than to the workmen; that a strike is in reality a source of great profit to the owners of mines, though the coal-consuming public suffers and pays the cost.

It has been found that the clauses in the federal laws, notably the interstate commerce act, give authority and point the way by which the president can intervene to settle the strike. A Pennsylvania statute has been unearthed also which provides a method of compulsory arbitration. Labor Commissioner Carroll D. Wright is fully informed on both these laws. A special from Wilkesbarre, Pa., to the Journal says: After the late strike the miners received an aggregate increase in wages of about $4,000,000, while the operators received profits in excess of what they would otherwise have received amounting to more than $10,000,000.

Afforded an excellent excuse by the strike of 1900 the operators raised their prices 50 cents a ton. In 1901 they mined 10,000,000 tons more than during the previous year, or an increase in tonnage of 171/2 per cent. The increase in profits amounted to 31 per cent.

This clearly demonstrates that while the operators have complained bitterly of the hardships they have endured through labor agitations in this region they really benefit to an extent never anticipated by them. The strike not only cost them nothing, but really resulted in an increased profit of $6,-000.000.

The 10 per cent increase grudgingly given to the men as the result of the last strike has been paid back to the operators by the coal-consuming publice a thousandfold.

The Journal prints an interview with Carroll D. Wright, who is quoted as "I could get $50,000 or any amount I might ask in Wall street for the information I have gathered. Everything I have learned first goes to the presi-

WOULD LIMIT SIZE

Coal Is Boosted Beyond the Members of Parliament Want | Ville, Earl and Countess Grey;

Pecuniary Reasons-Watson's Coronation Ode is Out.

London, sune 13 .- In the House of Commons Mr. W. R. Cremer, member of parliament for the Haggerstone division of Shoreditch, sought the help of the Right Hon. Akers Douglas, first commissioner of works, with a view of procuring a limitation in the size of hats to be worn by women occupying stands in Old and New Palace yards on the occasion of the passing of the coronation proces-

The stands in question, which are adjacent to the parliament buildings, are allotted to the use of members of parliament and their friends, and Mr. Cremer's plea was that legislators should have an uninterrupted view of the display. He expressed the hope that ladies' millinery would be subjected to rational conditions, and made small enough to allow others than the wearers to see what

Mr. Akers Douglas replied that he was unable to prescribe any such conditions as were desired by Mr. Cremer.

SMALL DEMAND FOR SEATS. Coronation Day is now only a fortnight away and the vast stands, with scores of tiers of seats, are nearly completed. Lofty red poles, crowned with artificial floral designs, are rising along the entire routs of both the public authorities are nonplussed by the absence of a market for the People who were asking five guineas a week ago for seats are now offering good positions for two guineas, and there are few buyers even at the reduced rate. Even the seats in the first row of many of the stands have not yet been disposed of.

It is understood that the King has intimated that he will be gravely displeased if the route of the procession on Coronation Day is lined by rows of empty seats, and speculators and builders will practically be compelled, if their seats are not sold at big prices, to let them go on Coronation Day at a few shillings apiece.

The reason for the public backwardness seems to be partly the memory of the ease with which the crowd in the streets saw the Diamond Jubilee procession in 1897 without any particular crush, and also the persistence of miserable weather. The temperature for several days has been under degrees and frequent rains have fallen. The Daily Mail estimates that only one seat in thirty has been taken for Coronation Day in the public stands.

The King's displeasure is said to be particularly aimed at a number of lords who refuse to take the trouble of attending the coronation. Truth mentions a very large number of peers who have intimated to the earl marshal that they will not be present for the reason that they are not prepared meet the manifold expenses involved. Therefore there will be much space in the transepts of Westminster Abbey set apart for peers and peeresses that will not be occupied by them personally, that their eldest sons and eldest daughters, if unmarried, will be included in the congregation.

Omaha, Neb., June 14.-Frederick Renard, of Oakland, Neb., although 84 girl of his choice is aged about 22 years, Nellie Craig, the bell of the town. Renard's estate is valued at $200,000. The family of the aged suitor sees ulterior motives in Miss Craig's readiness to wed, and they are making every effort to check the affair before she gets a hand in the old man's strong box. To do this application was made in Knox county for the appointment of a guardian for him, but the process requires fifteen days' notice, and the old man, learning of this, started for the license bureau. His relatives beat him to the court house and got out papers enjoining the clerk from issuing the license until after the matter of guardianship had been settled. Since then the old man and the younger Renards have been racing about the country, the one seeking a license and, the others beating him to the possible, than that which marked the court houses and procuring injunction papers. So far eight injunctions have been issued against the aged suitor.

After 27 years, Mrs. Greeley Harbaugh was reunited to a son, given away at his birth by heartless relatives and for whom she has sought ever since. During most of this time the boy has been residing in this vicinity, and has even passed his mother on the street without knowing

In Fort Wayne, Ind., when she was 14 years of age, Mrs. Harbaugh's mo-ther died. The father married again soon, and the stepmother was not kind to the little ones left by the first wife. The 14-year-old girl went to the home of a wealthy woman named Tilbury to work. A brother given away at that time, whose age then was 6 months, has never been seen or heard of since.

A SECRET MARRIAGE.

The Tillburys were wealthy. Mrs.
Tillbury was a widow and an aristocrat. She had a son who fell in love with the comely lass who worked for them and the pair were secretly married. One day the mother became aware that her son was wedded to her servant and a stormy scene ensued. The girl, then but 16 years of age, was driven from the place and the marriage was annulled by the boy's mother, as both were under age

GAVE THE BABE AWAY. The boy, true to his mother's wishes, abandoned the woman he had wooed and the homeless girl was again adrift. She went to the home of poor but kind friends and there her child, a son, was born. Her father, learning of her sad plight, sent for her and she went to the home from which she had been driven, where she lay ill for a long time. Her father was at that time living in Whitehouse, O., and the stepmother, believing that the baby would be a burden on her, as the mother seemed about to die, took it to Toledo, where she arranged for its adoption by a man named Jenkins, living in Wood county. The affair was completed and the lad but a few weeks old was given to Jenkins, the peculiar conditions being that no one should ever know its real name, his

The heart-broken mother made several trips to Toledo with the vain hope that she would find some trace of the boy, but all her efforts availed nothing. As years passed she began to believe that he was dead. She married again and lived happily with her family here. The boy, when he became 10 years of age, in some way became aware that he was not the child of the people with whom he lived and began a search for his mo-

As he grew older he acquired a fair education and at length returned to his first home, near where he taught school. He now is superintendent of the schools at Sugar Ridge, a thriving village near here. He still sought for his mother, and, learning that she at one time resided at Whitehouse, O., wrote to the postmaster there, who looked the matter up for him, with the result that a few days ago he be-came positive that his mother lived He at once came to see her, and after producing letters and things, notable among which was a picture which went with him when he was a babe, proved to Mrs. Harbaugh that he was her long lost son.

Moritz Killed by a Coney Island Fire and Panic in a Big Phila-Aerial Toboggan

Just as the Dream of His Life Was | Some Jumped From Windows, Others About to be Realized.

New York, June 14.-Herman O. Moritz, a Brooklyn inventor, 62 years by a device on the invention of which he had spent more than a quarter of a century and all his savings.

Mortiz's invention was an aerial toboggan slide. Permission had just been granted to operate it. The first car was empty and went without any trouble. Other cars with persons in the Rosenblatt factory were forced them were sent over. The device to jump from the windows Helf seemed to be working to perfection, and as the various cars, one after the other, went down the steep slide and came up with a round turn, Moritz stood looking on, his face beaming with pleasure. He fairly shouted for joy. The dream of the last 26 years of his life was realized.

Inspector Rittenhouse and Chas. Otis, a friend of the inventor, rode in the last car to be tested. Moritz stood at the foot of the incline. The car had nearly reached the top, a distance of about 70 feet. There was a cracking sound, a shout and Rittenhouse and Otis shot backward. Their car had failed to hold the steel dog until the top of the incline had been reached. It came down with great velocity straight for the place where Moritz stood, struck him in the back, knocking him through a wire netting and out into the Bowery walk. He died two hours later. Rittenhouse and Otis were thrown from their seats, but were un-

Why is it that in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand, the boy who is educated solely by his mother becomes a triumphant and successful man in after-life?

Perhaps the opposite influence of either sex is beneficial to the other; perhaps the girl derives vigorous thought, expanded views, habits of reflection, nay more, charity and forbearance, from her male associates, as the boy is indebted to his mother's tuition and his mother's companionship for the gentleness and purity of heart which combine so well with a manly and generous nature, for the refinement and delicacy of feeling which so adorn true courage; above all, for that exalted standard of womankind which shall prove his surest safeguard from shame and defeat in the coming battle; a shield impervious so long as it is bright, but that when once soiled slides and crumbles from his grasp, leaving him in the press of angry weapons a naked and defenseless man.

We have all heard of the little boy who sturdily upheld, in deflance of the poet, that "his mamma was the noblest

We have all heard of the little boy who sturdily upheld, in defiance of the poet, that "his mamma was the noblest work of God." I think the truest and holiest homage that can be offered to a fellow-creature is that which such a child tenders unconsciously to his mother. She is to him the one bright, beautiful being upon earth. His young eyes open wide with childish wonder at the magnificence of her apparel, the mingled grace and majesty of her bearing; he feels so proud to belong to her, and at the same time so conscious of his right to a place by her side, a seat on her knee. When others caress him he smiles pleasantly enough for a time, but soon wearies, and hurries off to be at play again; but when she lays her quiet hand upon his brow, the boy forgets hoop and marbles, the new knife and the promised pony, to nestle by her side, and look up in her face, and sit levently down.

hoop and marbles, the new knife and the promised pony, to nestle by her side, and look up in her face, and sit lovingly down at the feet of his own mamma.

Ail that he knows of good he learns from her. She teaches him to love and pray. She teaches him to hope and to believe. If ever he gets to the end of the narrow way, where the little wicket stands, and hears the bolts drawn back, and sees the golden light from the happy land shining through, whom shall he thank and bless on earth, but her who first taught him the password and gave him the key? Perhaps she will also be the first to bid him welcome on the other side.

Gilbert Orme was without this un-peakable blessing. Everything else that he world deems advantageous was lavthe world deems advantageous was lavished on him in profusion. Health, vigor, childish spirits, a fine place, and a long minority, but no mother—at least, not in the sense in which I understand the word. Gilbert was an only child, but in good truth he was far from being spoiled, as people consider only children usually destined to be. From boyhood his was a nature on which harshness of ill-usage made but slight impression, a spirit that could only have been broken through its affections, and these, even when I was reading Homer with him at through its affections, and these, even when I was reading Homer with him at eighteen, had been called but little into play. Lady Olivia never seemed to care for her child. Not a laborer about West Acres but took more pride in the bright-haired, handsome boy than did his own reserved and haughty mother. When I first knew her she was not yet a widow, but I could never see that the event which soon after deprived her of her husband made the slightest difference in her manners or softened her character one jot.

Of Mr. Orme I knew but little; I had heard of him in former days (for he was heard of him in former days (for he was somewhat after my time) as a gay, dashing young man; on the turf, in society, member for a most corruptible borough in his own county, good-looking, good-humored, not much troubled with brains, with a slight tendency to literature, and a rather stronger turn for love-making. I saw him once or twice at Newmarket, and missed meeting him at a country place or two to which we were both invited for the slaughter of pheasants and other game. It interested me but little, and astonished me not at all to learn that he had married the Lady Olivia, of whose maiden name I will say no more than that it was identical with that of whose maiden name I will say no more than that it was identical with that of Lady Gertrude, whose father, indeed, had been the elder lady's brother. But after his marriage Mr. Orme dropped out of society altogether. People in London do not trouble themselves much about absentees. "Here's Orme accepted the Chiltern Hundreds," said one of his club friends to another, as he yawned over the evening paper; "what the deuce is that for? By-the-way, hasn't something happened to him?"

"Married, poor devil!" was the reply, the speaker himself possessing a charming wife and a numerous family, and very fond of them besides; "but that's no reason he shouldn't come to London. Does anybody know anything about him?"

Does anybody know anything about him?"

"Mad!" observed young Tattleton, sententiously, who preferred hazarding a falsehood to betraying ignorance on any subject whatever, "and shut up down at that place in the country," he added, shaking his head commiseratingly, and pointing with his forefinger to the spot where his own brains ought to have been.

The two friends were quite satisfied with the explanation, and fell to discussion, and the control to th with the explanation, and fell to discussing their last night's dinner, taking no more thought for "poor Orme."

He was not mad, though, nevertheless, only thoroughly and essentially miserable. Lady Olivia might have made an excellent wife to another: probably, like the rest of us, under totally different circumstances, would have been a totally different person. As it was, however, she made a most uncomfortable one for him. He had fallen into a mistake not unusual with one of his temperament—weak, kindly and over-imaginative—and had invested the lady, whom he had met at some half a dozen balls and a breakfast, with all the qualities of his ideal. unusual with one of his temperament—weak, kindly and over-imaginative—and had invested the lady, whom he had met at some half a dozen balls and a breakfast, with all the qualities of his ideal. The argument was not without some show of reason, and he suffered accordingly, without much complaint, and with a strong bridle on a temper naturally keen and self-asserting. A sterner nature would have bent her to his will and altered her character to assimilate it with his own. She would have loved him all the better. A milder would have succumbed and learned, like other slaves, to submit to despotic authority with a good grace. But Orme was as God had made him, and took refuge in a listless, pitiable apathy. He ceased to tear at the chain he had not strength enough to break, the chain that bound him to one with whom he had not a single feeling in common save abherrence of the fetter, and threw his hands up like the drowning man, who has the sense to know that his struggles can but prograph.] In due course I followed the Boer Government, generals and delegates, or whatever they may be called, to Pretoria. Thither they were invited, after they had frequently compared notes at Klerksdorp, and submitted various proposals for ending the war. In the capital they were accommodated in the large handsome garden-embowered villa next Lord Kitchener's official residence, and facing the wellwooded town park. I have already described the appearance of the principal delegates. Means were placed at their disposal to obtain such articles of clothing, toilet and the like as they desired, and care was taken that they should be able to select personally what they wanted. They had drafted several documents, the terms of not a few of which were in decidedly bumptious language. As a matter of fact, from first to last, whilst Schalk Burger, the vice-president, and the rest of the most important action in the lives of most human beings—words that suggest to the least considerate the awful the Transvaal Government, with the of most human beings—words that suggest to the least considerate the awful gravity of the interest at stake. A loving marriage is a good and holy sight in the eyes of men and angels, but that was the refinement of a flend's torture which bound the living, breathing being hard and fast to the senseless corpse.

I have heard his neighbors say that Mr. Orme grew strangely idle and indifferent, and lethargic. He left off field sports altogether, gave away his famous pointers, sold his hunters, doubled his subscription to the hounds, and otherwise conducted himself in an unaccountable manner. Some people thought he had gout in the stomach, others vowed it was water on the brain. His old butler, who wouldn't leave, though Lady Oliviagave him warning once a fortnight, opined it was neither of these, for a certain tall bottle labeled "V. O. P." stood in his master's dressing-room; and that faithful domestic, who, liking brandy less than beer, took very little of it himself, knew that is was never quite empty and never full.

By degrees he chafed less and less under Lady Olivia's provocations, took less and less interest in his boy (he was fond of the urchin but a child's love will exception of Reitz, were in favor peace on any or no terms, and Louis Botha shared their views, Steyn, Dewet and Delarey were for demanding impossible conditions. Of that, however, anon. The first protocol set out: That whereas Great Britain was responsible for the war, etc., and force of arms, on the understanding that their right should be restored to them at the expiration of a fixed period, etc. All that was brushed aside, and the delegates, after a while, with some disputation amongst themselves, settled down to draft less objectionable terms. But Brer Boer is a quaint compound, suspicious, and slow to move in any approved common-sense direction. Like nearly all primitive peoples he has no fear of asking too much, but a constant dread of seeking too little. He goes on the principle that arrangements and concessions are the outcome of entirely low, selfish of the urchin, but a child's love will scarcely stand a man instead of every-thing else), and dozed away more and more in his armchair over the embers of motives on the part of the other side. The delegates evinced little or no outward surprise during their railway journey at the evidences of the resumption of industrial pursuits in all directions, as if there was neither war nor unrest in the country. In conversation they betrayed no special interest upon any topic except in the matter of politics, home and foreign. They were polite enough, but evident- are not yet out of the censor's list, ly silent and distrustful, as Red Indian and as for the claim of our press to chiefs, of whom they put me more than more in his armchair over the embers of his study fire. One spring morning they both went out together, and the tall bottle, too, had ebbed to the last teaspoonful. So there was a fine funeral, and Lady Olivia became a widow, and Gilbert an orphan with a little black frock on his back, and a long minority before him. Nobody semed to care much for poor Orme but the old butler, and he gave up his place immediately and took the public-house in the village.

In most families such an event would have drawn tighter the bonds of affection which should unite mother and son; with in a chat found it dull work and gave which should unite mother and son; with the Ormes, however, it was not so. Lady Olivia, when the customary year of a widow's seclusion had passed by, went into society as before. Perhaps a little into society as before. Perhaps a little more frequently than during the latter months of her husband's life. She was a great stickler for conventional forms, and went to London regularly in the season to keep up her acquaintance, just as she gave large, solemn frigid dinners at West Acres to sustain her influence in the county. She seemed to have no inclination to marry again.

People speculated, indeed, on her intentions as they always will upon matters. they read little, passing the time, for the most part, in smoking, talking to each other, and drinking. Poor Mr. Steyn seemed more down on his luck than any of the others on the way to Pretoria. He was nervous and out of sorts, and as he stepped out of the

Such reports disturbed her ladyship's equanimity but little. Even Diana was talked about with that young rake Endymion, and Lady Olivia carried her indomitable head so high that she could well afford to look down upon the nods and winks and signs of humbler mortals. He would have been a bold man, too, who could have ventured on a tender subject with that severe beauty crushing him to the dust, tured on a tender subject with that severe beauty crushing him to the dust, those grave eyes looking sternly into his own. "Egad, sir," said that mature Lothario, "she is a chiller, a regular black frost; when the wind's in the east I can't go near her without sneezing." And, indeed, veteran as he was, he stood in considerable awe of the icy dame of whom he spoke so disparagingly. I wish for her own sake she could have been kinder to her child. When I first came to live near West Acres he was a bright, handsome boy of some seven or eight summers, the least bit of a scapegrace, and rather too fond of rat-catching, rabbiting and such illiterate amusements, but as the old keeper used to ments: but, as the old keeper used to say, "a little gentleman, every inch of him!" he had all a boy's spirit and a say, "a little gentleman, every inch of him!" he had all a boy's spirit and a boy's pluck, with something feminine in the shyness of his glance and the soft kindliness of his disposition, which en-deared him wondrously to the domestics and workpeople about the place. One of and workpeople about the place. One of the numerous grievances for which he was taken sternly to task by Lady Olivia was his predilection for the society of grooms and coachmen, and his natural preference for the stable to her ladyship's own morning-room, which was in truth a dull place of resort for a child; inasmuch as he was not permitted to romp about and make a noise in those sacred precincts. Also—and of this fault I cannot fairly hold him guiltless—for the reckless manner in which he rode and otherwise maltreated a certain long-suffering pony, called Mouse, of which the entraordinary speed and endurance were daily tested to an unjustifiable extent.

that they fear Lord Milner. The latter arrived at Pretoria en Sunday evening, and took up his abode at the British residency in Sunnyside district. Lord Milner subsequently met the delegates individually and collectively, at Lord Kitchener's and at the residency. Evidently he got on good terms with most of them, and in particular with the chief members of the Transvaal Government. It became hourly more evident that there was a serious division of counsel amonest the Boers as to any further prosecution of the war. The Transvaalers, with but one or two exceptions, were for immediate settlement of hostilities, even to leaving the Free Staters to themselves. In the end, I believe it has come to this-they are to have the dubious honor of being the last to come in, and to give up the further, useless, wanton spilling of human blood. Steyn, who is, I fear, breaking up physically, voted for continuing the struggle, but his influence counts for little beside that of the pugnacious, plump, swart, saturnine Christian Dewet, who is the real burgher-master of the Free State. Delarey's was practically the only bellicose voice raised for war to the bitter end, from the Transvaal. Mr. Reitz, the state secretary, need not be too seriously considered. But let this justice be done Delarey, who deserves the meed of honest men's praise; he said, "If the commandoes or burghers accept the English flag, I will abide by their verdict and come in, for I have done my duty. If not, I will die in the field, fighting for the government and the old flag." At last the voices

To get to the back of any man's they came, and be allowed to rejoin mind is not usually an easy task. It is their respective commandoes. Further almost an impossible one when the stolid, taciturn, self-sufficient Boer is the subject of the operation. I would not be dealing fairly by you and your readers if I did not state that there are thos amongst the Boers now defluence for settlement in the deliberamanding SETTLEMENT AND PEACE who seek to, and would, use these as a means to conspire for the abrogation of all the conditions they are today so anxious to sign. But the sense of fairness, the pride of keeping their plighted word, will, I believe, weigh with the vast majority, and the will be lasting peace, if the terms do not assign away the victor's manifest rights. Better, in mercy's name, to "fight to a finish" than tolerate such a settlement, for bitterness and contention carried into civic life is more deadly to nationhood than war in the field between men. The future danger, if not guarded against, will come from the former evil element in South Africa, intriguing foreigners, who were mostly Hollanders. Brer Boer, left to struggle was an unequal one, and THEY WISHED FOR PEACE. They were able to continue the war for some time, but to stop further effusion of blood they would cease hostilities, provided that within a year civil government was restored to the two states. They stipulated that, pending that and the withdrawal of the troops, they should be represented by an actual majority of at least four out of seven upon any administrative council formed to conduct the government of the country, that their flags should be retained, and at the end of five years the British forces should be entirely withdrawn from the Transvaal and Orange Free States, and these two countries should be recognized as independent republics. During that "purgatory" period there should be no disfranchisement of burghers, and the Boer officials should have a control of the reins of government; and further, they would agree to amend the franchise law, as formerly asked for by England, and would allow British subjects to vote, and also permit the use of the two lan-There was to be a general guages. amnesty for all who had borne arms, including Cape rebels. Colonials have given of their blood and treasure, and are entitled to a say in the settlement," he declared to me. I think one can guess what Mr. Seddon and the New Zealanders will say, as well as the other states and the commonwealth of Australia, and the vigorous-minded Canadians. Anglo-Saxon Federation will be en-dangered if due weight be not given to their views on a question so plainly affecting the whole empire. Two of the concessions are heartly disliked.

The first is that relating to the USE OF THE TWO LANGUAGES, the useless perpetuation of a racial distinction where none really exists. It is not, perhaps, understood in England that the "Taal," which the Boer uses, is not a written language. Dutch therefore, is to be the speech, and that to the great majority is as much an unknown tongue as English. could be no objection to the use of the Taal, in the lesser courts of law, police and magistrates, but in the upper courts there should be but one speech or legislative bodies there need be no more objection to the employment of the Taal than there is in our own parliament to the use of a Latin or foreign quotation. But that granting of million pounds sterling to pay a war debt raised from the burghers, who are themselves responsible for the war and its' wanton prolongation, sticks in most loyal men's gizzards, be they home-born or colonial. Yesterday (Friday) the majority of the delegates intimated their personal readiness to accept the Middleburg terms. And all agreed to submit them to their followers. It was arranged that the Boer delegates should have safe convey back to the places whence they came, and be allowed to rejoin that safe conduct should be given to all the Boer commandants to hold a meeting at Vereeniging on May 15 and thereat formally to determine course to pursue. #### ON THE FARM.

There's many a successful business man who sits in his city office and lets his mind slip back to his boyhood days on the farm. How good it felt to live!
What an appetite he had! How good everything tasted! How sound his sleep was! How eagerly he rose with the sun raced with him through the long day. And now he's a successful man. But he can't sleep. He doesn't enjoy his food. His stomach is weak, his nerves are shaken, and he no more rises with the sun to race eagerly against him. His vitality is low and now and again his heart seems to plunge in his breast as if it would break loose. That's the price he has paid for success.

The mischief of the whole business is that he buys "tablets" of one sort or another to "aid" his digestion, and indulges in bromides and other nerve stimulants, just to hold himself together, and wonders why he seems to be getting

The whole trouble with such a man generally lies in what is called a "weak" stomach. The food he eats does not nourish him because it is only partially digested and assimilated. No man can be stronger than his stomach, because it is in the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition that strength is made from the food which is eaten.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the strength of the body in the only way strength can be restored, by food which is perfectly digested and assimilated, when the diseased stomach (with its allied organs) is cured of disease. It is a blood-making, body-build-ing medicine, inasmuch as blood is made from food and the body is built up by blood. It is not a stienulant, containing neither alcohol or any other narcotic.

I am happy to say I am getting to feetfine. In all I have taken six bottles of the 'Discovery' and four or five vials of the little 'Pellets.' They have done me worlds of good. All my friends say: 'Vanderwater, how well you are looking. What in the world have you been doing?' I tell them I have been doctoring with Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. 'Why,' they say, 'you haven't been there?' No, I say, but I took his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and his little 'Pellets.' These medicines have wrought the great change in me. From a slow mope of a man that could hardly crawl, tired and sick all the time, and could do no work; to a man who can work, sleep, eat, and feel fine, and that tired feeling is all going away. #### HAD GIVEN UP HOPE.

"I will express my thanks to you for the kindly advice you have given me in regard to my case," writes Miss Carrie J. Wharton, of Dunavant, Spottsylvania Co., Virginia. "When I wrote to you last spring I was in a terrible state of health. Had given up all hope of ever being better. I spit up my food all the time and it seemed sour as vinegar. I would have a bad sick headache every other week; in fact, my head never felt clear, and I was perfectly broken down under the strain of losing my food constantly. I had read a great deal in your books of what your medicine had done for others, so I wrote you and got your advice. Bought two bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and the first dose I fook I felt better. When I had finished taking the two bottles the spitting up had entirely stopped and my head

When I had finished taking the two bottles the spitting up had entirely stopped and my head was much better. I believe your medicines are just what you have said of them.

"I carefully read the books you sent me and shall always speak a good word for the 'Golden Medical Discovery' whenever I have a chance.

"You can publish this if you think it worth while. It might induce some one else to try your medicine who was suffering as I did. It was by the testimonials of others that I was induced to try it. I shall always rely upon your advice and feel safe to do as you tell me."

The Romantic History of the Chartered Companies.

Prince Rupert. Patron of Britain's Commerce Beyond the Seas-Cecil Rhodes.

Yesterday and today have an odd crick of merging in the London mists; and in certain moods and to certain minds, the imperious event of the moment is no more real and near than the shadow cast across two centuries -or ten, it may be, writes a correspondent of the New York Post. So I found it when I sat above the choir trigued, both under England's cross stalls in St. Paul's, and looked down and France's lilies. on the ranked faces in the nave, a its old traditions, and the courteous wall of men, forming a significant secretary who made me welcome was transitory monument to the memory ready to talk of our governors-James of Ceeil Rhodes. The stately memorial service must have spoken in different voices to those who witnessed it. Some possibly were able to feel its full religious import and not troubled by any sense of an ironic prick in the solemn | itical, adventurous, commercial, if one thanksgiving to God "that it had pleased thee to deliver thy servant Cecil John Rhodes out of the miseries of this talking now and wondering at the sinful world"-Rhodes, who was so fain of this sinful world and his work in it! Many, doubtless, felt that the cere-monial, which, for all its ecclesiastical forms, had a splendidly secular air, was a fitting civic commemoration of the empire-builder. A lover of the human interest in the great drama would have watched for Chamberlain's eyeglass, and felt a stir of satisfaction at the sight of Lord Roberts, alert and vital even in repose, and Mr. Balfour, sidewise in his stall, as if in delightful imitation of his own delightfu! caricatures. Finally, an artist would have gloried in the cross lights and receding of England's conquest, and her sovevistas of shadow; the electric brilliance making a dazzle of the white robes in the choir, flashing out the scarlet pomp of mayor and sheriffs against a backof dark woodwork; the coid outer daylight on the nuddled laces to the nave, and, high above all, the with the harsh facts of life. The winds the nave, and, high above all, the with the harsh facts of life. The winds per laces of the Hudson's Bay think, all the conflicting moods were merged, while the band crashed out Rupert's portrait while London mutter-"Dead March;" a tramp as of all England's armies across the veldt, a desolation as of all her slain. FANCIES CALLED UP BY THE CHARTERED COMPANIES. And all the while, one spectator of the impressive pageant (who had gained a place as a journalist, and, therefore, presumably interested in the doings of today) was wandering far paths enough in fancy. In these troubled days the name of the "Chartered Company" sets the thoughts of most people towards African troubles. Rhodesian gold mines, and the fatal raid of Dr. Jim. A few historically-minded students might turn instead to a survey of England's great companies since day when Elizabeth granted her charter to that one which was to make her successor Empress of India. Out of the complication of modern interests and old-world memories, I followed a thread of my own. It led me away from the gold-workings of Rhodesia where ancient, unnamed peoples sought the treasures which latter-day prospectors seek, away from the mystic ruins, temples of forgotten worship thick grown with fig and vine and baobab tree, which stood already when Solomon's ships voyaged for the gold of Ophir. My imagination did not turn that way, as it should in all reason have done, nor linger on the Royal African Company of the days of Charles II., nor take hold of the tense strife of peasant Africa.

WHERE THE COMPANIES ARE

QUARTERED TODAY. Not so far from St. Paul's gather the offices of many companies, much as they did when Charles Lamb wrote, and furnished much in the fashion South Sea House. "The oaken wainscott hung with pictures of deceased governors and sub-governors; huge charts, which subsequent discoveries have antiquated; dusty maps, dim as dreams." One of these offices I visited not long since, and though the building new, found there, mysteriously enough, the unchanged atmosphere. The original abode of the company was "Excise Office" in Broad street. which later was the very South Sea House, of which Elia tells and which perished by fire. In the present Hudson Bay House in Lime street, painted moose and Indian looked down from the walls as I climbed the stair, and when I entered the dim, quiet boardroom, it seemed as though I had broken on a shadowy meeting of the first council of "The Honorable Company of Merchants Adventurers Trading in to Hudson's Bay." The name spells romance, blending in strange, incongruous harmony thoughts of the snows and forests where floated the gallant red flag of the "H. B. C." and of that England of the restoration which sent it forth. Standing before the beautiful melancholy portrait of the first governor, I looked back to the picturesque beginnings of the great company; the meetings of the French pioneers, Radisson and Groseilliers, with their patron, Prince Rupert, in those rooms in the great Keep of Windsor, where the soldier-prince dwelt, secluded among his inventions and his memories; setting forth of the first the Nonsuch, from the Thames, where the King's pleasure barges were moored, towards unknown currents and drifting ice. Radisson, that unscrupulous adventurer, servant of King Louis and King Charles, made a strange figure in the palace and History enough, polhad time to trace it.

I found myself thinking of the Chartered Company, of which all men are space crossed by a walk from St. Paul's to Lime street-the distance between the African veldt, trodden by the urgent strife and need of today, and the trails across Canadian snows, trodden and effaced two centuries ago. Cecil Rhodes-England is full of the large rumor of his name, yet I thought of it only in passing as I loked up at the Lines of comparison and contrast link together, fantastically, those so alien characters and destinies. The man who looks down, in a weary and tolerant disdain, from the canvas where an unknown master hand has set him, had his wide-reaching dreams reign's rule. He, too, knew the far places of the world, trod African soil, won the natives and braved the Dutch. And he, in the brief intervals of action, turned for rest to invention and art: Company, and to stand before Prince ed of the death of Cecil Rhodes.

TRADITIONS OF THE HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY.

And yet, though the connecting threads be of fancy's own slightness, it links what history binds. For England's empire has from the beginning gone in stanch fellowship with England's commerce; her "venturers" in the grand old Elizabethan sense have often been "adventurers" in the meaning which the Hudson's Bay Company Bank 'Oliday! I'd forgot!" gives to the word. And so Prince Ru-pert, the futile ardors of his cavalry charges being spent and his naval battles drawing to their close, gave his name and patronage to more than one company which was to fling the English flag to the winds of the worldto England.

His highness lives in the traditions of the Hudson's Bay Company as an about the Heath through the afterindifferent man of business, curiously vague as to the all-important point of his own profits. But he won the charter from his cousin, Charles II.-we may see the parchment today, with its crabbed letters and leaden seal and a portrait of his most sacred majesty smiling sardonically atop. And though he left some practical details to his incongruous colleagues, Lord Ashley-Earl of Shaftesbury to be-Rupert gave himself eagerly enough to the great scheme, was closeted with the French pioneers, went to drink good fortune to the first outbound ship, and studied with curious care the lists of Indian tribes with which the company was to form alliance. Rupert had ideas as to fair dealing with the natives, as he proved more than once in his ewn voyaging. To the soldier and ventur-er, the check to King Louis' ambi-tion, the sailing of the far seas, and which he depicts in his account of the the tracking of far plains meant more, we may surmise, than the beaver skins sold at Garroway's. That shore at which, for all his wanderings, he never touched, bears his name deeply stamped in Rupert's River and Rupert's Land; and the proud records of the "Great Company" hand down his memory. It is less often recalled that the prince was interested in African enterprises. In his voyages-those heroic, piratical voyages-he touched at the African shore. Later, in the Restoration days of mocking peace and ironic fulfillment, he belonged to the Royal African Company, and in 1664 there was a plan that he should command a fleet to the Guinea coast, there to protect English interests and stop Dutch encroachments; the combination sounds as modern as the posters which today placard English advances and Dutch reverses. Concerning this scheme, Pepys wrote waspishly: "I doubt few will be pleased with his going, he being accounted an unhappy (unlucky)

man." PRINCE RUPERT'S SHORT-LIVED

GLORY. Unhappy: the word accents the difference in the two lives; the contrast between the man who wrested success from the world and the wilderness, and the man whose dreaming and daring were alike sealed with the Stuart fate of failure. Save for a link with the prosperous Company of Merchant Adventurers, and for the victorious issue of some of his sea-fights with the Dutch. Rupert's endeavors and achievement passed with the dust of his charges, with the cleavage of his keel. All passed with him-and into futility-except the valor which made his brief triumphs, the unquestioning loyalty which, perhaps, made his long defeat. A different life story, indeed from that which has so lately ended with the cry of "so much to do," Another type of man from the one who sleeps among his solitudes near Buluwayo of the silver shield. And yet England needs her knights errant obeying the stir and sting of unconquerable dreams, men not born to possession or to the unbounded triumphs of accomplishment: impracticable spirits, who, walking straight through the complications of life, walk straight to unsuccess. A few of us, even in these imperial days, give our "vivats to those who have failed," since they, too, have handed down their heritage in the trumpet note of a name, in the standard not stooped to any wind of fate. But far apart rest these founders of England's great companies, so far that only a dreamer's whim and the chance hour could link them.

He stopped outside a booth where six half-dressed, ferociouslooking men invited amateurs to box with them. The leading boxer, who was one eye short, begged him to come in and make mincemeat of the whole lot, but the boy shook his head and went on.

What a fine crowded busy laughing, noisy place it was, to be sure! The sixpence had to go far, else he would certainly have dared to see the fattest lady ever known; he envied the sportsmen who were taking shots with accurate rifles at Dewet; he found himself irresistibly compelled to spend one penny on a gay phonograph stand and join the group with bent shoulders to listen to "I Don't Know Why I Love

You. But I Do." "How dare you 'ave cokernut?" he said to a smaller boy. "You've pinched that, you know." "What if I 'ave?" argued the smaller boy, hugging the pieces to his chest. "Must I call a copper?" he asked in a pained way. The cocoanut was very good; filling, too; it arrested the hunger that was beginning to annoy. He went over to a crowd on the grass that surrounded young couples dancing to a muted piano organ, and he asked one pinafored lady in a feathered hat if she would honor him with her hand; the lady, in reply, threatened to push his face in for him, which answer the boy took to be a polite negative. It occurred to him that he would never be able to play the character of a rollicking blade until he had decorated his bowler hat with a circle of olored paper, and, indeed, when he had done this, girls ran from him with cries a simulated fear. One of these he caught. "Say, now," requested a tweed-patterned lady with a hand camera, would you mind if I kodaked your terned

"What's the charge?" he asked, apprehensively. "I will pay whatever is usual in this country.

"Six do.." said the boy promptly. He watched the skipping after this, and called out "Pepper!" at unexpected moments, so that the men made the rope go furiously, to the great distress of those taking physical exercise. He went up towards Jack Straw's Castle, and ordered off some boys who were throwing stones into the pond, threatening, unless they consented to cut off home directly that minute to tell their parents.

Two short girls in musl'a said to each other in audible tones that they were simply dying for an ice, and be ing new something of a millionaire he lifted his hat and begged permission to offer this refreshment. He was tired when he reached home, and as he knelt down after supper by the chair in his bedroom he nearly dozed on the cane seat. Pulling himself together, he decided to omit the usual details. "Bless everybody," he said in a gruff undertone, "and make me bet-these dainty variations, which display Birds Are Wonderfully Quick Judges of Intentions.

> Treaties With Man on the Basis of Reciprocal Good intentions-Striking Examples of the Rule.

The class of animal benefactors, protected and encouraged for their usefulness, and often really liked for their personal qualities, offers the most interesting and satisfactory example of the mutual good relations which may exist. The list is not a long one, but the creatures included in it have often indispensable, but of course not to be the creatures included in it have often offered with berries eaten from the re-established completely the lost constem. In other cases it is a matter of fidence between man and beast. The secretary bird probably stands at the head of the list. It is now protected and a privileged character over nearthe whole area in which the South African war has been carried on. It is wild bird, though the young are often brought up at farmhouses, and is found northwards as far as Khartum and Abyssinia. Its boldness and familiar ways are the subject of stories too familiar to need quoting. though whether newly-swallowed kittens have really been heard mewing inside its stomach may be doubted. The heavy and rapid blows delivered by its feet at any animal it wishes to eat usually stun it at once. The mongoose, the adjutana and the white stork have all made a treaty sugar, should lie for an hour or two with man on the basis of reciprocal to soften before the cake is made. They then return some thousand or more with man, often in or around crowded towns. The old saying that there was "no peace south of the line" finds its converse. With the storks it is always the Mediterranpeace north of There is also a small plofound on the campa of ver Argentina which has become Yet during the past few years, since the Middlesex County Council and private owners have protected them, a footpath or railway, and during the mischievous birds are wild and wary enough to preserve parks and on estates where they are shot. In Ox-ford an old resident in Holywell street used to provide breakfast for the jackdaws regularly, cutting up a trencher of slices of bread into cubes and throwing it out on to the grass below the window. The jackdaws came to be fed as regularly as ducks, though they were by no means on these terms with

The goldthe great lake sanctuary of Holkham, were thousands of fowl, which, when they disappear later, are as wild as the wildest, sit on the lake or its banks as tamely as ducks in a farmvard and the stable pond at Monymusk, where the wild ducks used to come regularly at twilight to be fed. These creatures belong to the new era of what Mrs. Brightwen has aptly called 'wild nature won by kindness," or by absence of unkindness. It offers a peculiarly pleasing prospect for our future town life and urban or half urban parks, and may be absolutely counted upon if the creatures are not shot or molested. Some correspondents of the Spectator have pointed this out recently as happening in the case of the Phoenix Park in Dublin, where the deer feed undisturbed between lines of soldiers firing blank-cartridges and the crowd gazing at them, and can hardly be driven off by the mounted men sent to make them "meve on." It is noticed that this tameness actually increases as the number of persons frequenting a park increases-always providing that cover and food, both of which are scanty in the central London parks, but which abound at Richmond, are left to them. The wood-pigeons in Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens are far tamer than those at Richmond, where they do not habitually live in a crowd. In the same way, the Richmond deer are not so tame as those of Bushey or of small parks like that of Magdalen College. There is not the slightest reason to fear that the admission of volunteers to maneuver in Richmond Park would scare away the wild creatures. The sight of still more people who do not hurt them seems only to tend to increase their confidence. Hence we have happily not to make any disagreeable choice between training our volunteers and destroying the wild life as mild and sure.

PEERAGES ARE COSTLY LUXURIES

Various Robes of Rank Cost Their Owners a Pretty Penny.

William Fitt once recommended to George III. that any man with an income of $100,000 a year should be made peer if he so desired It would be possible, according to an English paper, to support a peerage on an income much less than that. Indeed, many a peer of recent creation, as well as of ancient date, is able to maintain his dignity with great success on $50,000 a year or even less. But the unavoidable initial expenses which a peer is called upon to defray total up at the very least close on

First of all, there are big fees to be paid. There are five grades of nobility—baron, viscount, earl, marquis and duke. The fee of a baron is $750, of a viscount $1,000, of an earl $1,250, of a marquis $1,500 and of a duke—the highest rank in the peerage—$1,750. Part of these fees goes to the national exchequer and part to support the College of Arms in Queen Victoria street, by which all questions of arms and heraldry are decided. It is a singular fact that when Wellington took his seat in the House of Lords for the first time, on June 28, 1814, he was a baron, a viscount, an earl, a marquis and a duke all rolled into one. These dignities had been conferred upon him from time to time in their order by distinct grants for his services during the long war with France, and it was only when, on the overthrow of Napoleon, the last and highest patent of nobility was bestowed that he was able to take his seat in the House of Lords. The combined fees which Wellington had to pay for the five patents of nobility amounted to $6,250.

ROBES OF RANK.

A peer must wear the robes of his rank in the peerage on his introducrobes are made of scarlet cloth slashed with ermine, the wearer's rank in the peerage being denoted by the number of bars of white fur which traverse the animal benefactors live with man robe back and front. A duke displays have never induced others to presume four bars of ermine, a marquis three and a half, an earl three, a viscount two, and a baron one. Each robe costs between $200 and $250.

Then there is the coronet. The occasions are rare upon which peers are called upon to wear their crowns. They will, however, be displayed by the nobles assembled at the coronation of the King in Westminster Abbey. The presents have become so tame on some of the market gardens at Chiswick that they will feed within 30 yards of turned up with ermine and surmounted by a golden tassel. It is in the design frost in February they come to be fed of the coronet's outer circle of gold by the river bank, within ten yards and silver that the various orders of of the high road. Jackdaws, being nobility are distinguished. A baron's coronet has a plain circle of gold surmounted by six silver balls. The circle of gold in a viscount's coronet is jeweled, and there are twelve silver balls. From the jeweled circle of gold in an earl's coronet rise eight points, also of gold, upon each of which there is a silver ball, and between each point, close to the circle, is a gold strawberry leaf. The coronet of a marquis has a row of silver balls, placed not on points but on the circle of gold, and between each is a gold strawberry leaf; and a duke's coronet has a wreath of gold strawberry leaves over smith's charge for making a coronet ranges from 450 guineas.

Among other expenses of a peer are a fee of $50 to the College of Arms for a grant of arms, a tax of two guineas a year for displaying these armorial bearings on his carriage, and a further tax of about $5 a year for engraving them on his private note

SOUTH AFRICA'S BRIGHT FUTURE

The Great Country Is One of Vast Resources.

Many Millions of People Will Some Bay Live There in Comfort and Opulence.

Some writer has spoken recently of South Africa as a great thirst land, largely diminished in value by the prevailing dryness. This statement is mainly true but it needs qualification or an erroneous impression of the country is conveyed.

More than half of South Africa is deficient in rainfall including the entire western half of it; but a large part of this region, which is not adapted for farming except where irrigation is possible, is covered with nutritious grasses that are particularly relished by sheep; so that, before the war, 13,000,000 sheep were grazing on the Great Karroo and other dry plains of Cape Colony, and 4,000,000 were herding on the dry, cool plain of the little Orange Free State.

Thus the dry region of South Africa slightingly referred to by the writer just mentioned, as yet supply the largest riches of the country excepting the gold and diamond fields. The foreign sales of wool are more than double those of any other commodities with the exception mention-

The dry regions are always destined to be one of South Africa's largest sources of wealth; for wool growing on them may be vastly increased, although South Africa, in time of peace, is already one of the great wool-producing countries. No one knows what mineral riches they may yet develop, but we do know that most of the diamond fields thus far discovered are on the dry plains, and that the Germans are developing gold mining in their part of the western desert. In some of the valleys, also, there is every prospect that considerable agriculture will be developed with the aid of irrican never be the home of a dense population; but, nevertheless, with its great grazing, and considerable mining resources, the dry area will con-tribute very largely to the aggregate wealth of the country.

What is the reason that the western part of South Africa is semi-arid? It is because the prevailing winds are from the east. Most of the region south of the Zambesi depends for rain upon winds from the Indian Ocean. The eastern coast lands and highlands receive the larger part of this pre-cipitation, as the winds move west-The winds are wrung by the time they reach the heart of the country. They pass out over the Atlantic as the southeast trades, and the coun-

Africa is a strip of where all the crops of the temperate regions are raised. Some of the best wheat in the world is grown as far inland as the southern border of the Orange River Colony. The supply of home breadstuffs may be largely increased; but South Africa now has to import much wheat and flour; and as population grows it is likely that there will continue to be a home market for all the cereals.

If, however, the country is ever able to export maize and other cereals, one fact to the benefit of South Africa should be remembered. Here cereals are harvested and marketed in the winter and spring of the north temperate zone when prices are likely to be largest. The grape crop of Cape Colony has benefited largely by this fact. The region east and northeast of Cape Town has scarcely been thought of as a great region of vineyards. The fact is, however, that millions of gallons of wine are made there every year, though the quality of much of it will be much improved when more intelligent methods of manufacture are employed. In February and March last the grapes reached their highest perfection and enormous quantities of clusters were, as usual, carefully packed, placed in cool rooms on the teamers and sent to the London market, together with peaches, nectarines and plums, the delicious fresh fruits being placed on British dining-tables almost before the English fruit trees were out of blossom. Australian cereals and fruits also share this advantage of being able to supply British markets at a time of year when other sources are failing; but Australia and New Zealand are thousands of miles further away than Cape Colony from the markets of the mother country; so Colony grapes, for example, beat Australia as in fruits in the race to the consumers.

Now that peace has been restored, the Witwatersrand will soon present one of the busiest scenes in the world. All this year the residents of Johannesburg have been flocking back to Johannesburg and new-comers have been arriving constantly. The prospects two months ago were that if peace were soon restored, at least 6,-000 stamps would be dropping in the region around Johannesburg by the end of this year. If this is done the pro-bability is that by the end of 1902 the Witwatersrand will be producing again the precious metal at the rate of $8 .-000,000 a year, as in 1898, just before No one has any doubt that South Africa will again forge to the front as the greatest of gold producers, and she may head the procession for years to come.

Ninety-eight per cent of all the diamonds of commerce come from the Kimberley mines; they have so overshadowed the other diamond fields of South Africa that we never hear of them, though in the western part of the Orange River Colony there are two centers of production that have been proved to be rich in gems; and the diamonds found along parts of the Limpopo and Vaal Rivers show their wide distribution in South Africa and assure a long and great future to this Industry.

It is not so very long since all the coal used in South Africa, or kept there to sell to steamers, was brought from Europe and was held necessarat a high figure. Coa! is now known to exist in vast quantities along southern mountains and on the middle Zambesi, though as yet it has been worked, to an important extent only in Natal. The fact that large beds of iron ore are found near the Natal coal is favorable for the future development of manufactures. What is the reason that manufacturing industries can as yet scarcely be said to exist in South Africa except in relation to the products of the vineyards, farms and pastures?

The reason is because the white lation of the country is still too small to do much more than reap the natural products; they must leave to others the task of improving these products by the processes of manufacture. It should be remembered that the entire development of South Africa in all the larger enterprises has been the work of the past 30 years. The great and full development, including not only the production of commodities, but also the enhancement of the value of many of them by manufacturing processes is to come in the future. There is no doubt that a new era is about to open for South Africa; that good government, schools and liberal and helpful laws will bring in the im-migration that is so much needed. The prospects are bright that South Africa fitted by climate and abundant resources to become the home of many millions of people, will become the most prosperous part of Africa and will some day compare favorably with many older countries as a flourishing and inviting part of the world.—New York Post.

OLD CONTROVERSY AS TO LONDON'S BEAUTY

Dr. Samuel Johnton, Sir Walter Besant and J. M. Whistler Admired It.

[Montreal Witness.]

It is an old controversy whether London is beautiful or not. Dr. Samuel Johnson and Sir Walter Besant were among the many who thought it so, and Whistler's nocturnes of yellow fog and silver mist, adding to the mysteries of dark bridges and rushing waters and the high tide of life in crooked streets, proves that he is enrolled among the city's admirers. Beauty depends, of course, altogether on the point of view, as we see among certain savages who distort one especial feature for the admiration of their kind. There can certainly be no doubt that London is picturesque. Her climate insures that. Its grime and its slime see to it that nothing shall look new-that everything shall have the quaintness of time upon it. There is the grotesque to be found in Lon-don, and downright squalid ugliness too in places, but there are fine "bits" to be seen in old buildings, bridges, churches, parks, gardens, and all the kaleidoscopic color and movement of the streets. There are, indeed, some of the finest "effects" of light and at-On the whole, it may be said that of the finest "effects" of light and at-the entire western part of South Africa mosphere and genre to be seen and no man who knows and loves his London will acknowledge that she is not beautiful. Beautiful or ugly, however, no one ever denies that London is interesting, and those millions who visit it during the King's coronation ceremonies will find it more than usually so. The crowds will be larger and gayer and more diverse than ever, and a London crowd is worth seeing. Already we are reading descriptions of Indian and other foreign princes with Oriental costumes in the royal carriages as a daily sight, and such cen-ters as the Strand must now be teeming with all sorts of nationalities. Still there will be places where quietness can be obtained, old churches in the try scarcely ever gets a drop of rain heart of the city where few ever go, from the Atlantic; thus the eastern and squares and gardens hidden away half of South Africa is wet and the from the surging tide of life. But while we are reading about the way Stretching across the south end of in which London is filling up, and wishing perchance that we were there it would seem that the peeresses were having trouble with their headgear and are wondering how in the world they are going to keep their coronets en. So that crowns make the head uneasy today, even as they did when Shakespeare was a Londoner, and wrote of crowns and coronets and great

BEAUTIFUL AND TREACHEROUS

Fascinating Natural Qualities of Isle of Dominica.

Its Wonderful Boiling Lake Existed for 400 Years. But Was Discovered Only 20 Years Ago.

There is little doubt that the tragedy at the famous, but seldom visited Boiling Lake of Dominica last December was the first serious manifestation of the awakening volcenic fires.

From that point of view the first victim of the eruption was Wilfred M. Clive, a descendant of the Clive who laid the foundation of England's Indian empire. He met his death while wild terror. exploring in an idle moment the strange, wild, Caribbean Island of Dominica.

A fascinating, beautiful, treacherous island is this same Dominica. The molten lava sea, that underlies the island seethes beneath so thin a covering that, warmed by its fires a vegetation has sprung up with an incomparable luxuriance that makes it the most wonderful in the world. So thin indeed is the covering that everywhere streams of boiling sulphurous water break through, milky white, poisoning the orchid-scented air with deadly vapors, while high up on the mountain lies the Boiling Lake, one of na-

Generally the lake was covered over with clouds of steam-its temperature was over 120 degrees, but on this December morning, says the one survivor of the little expedition, the air was clear, although the bubbling of its surface, if anything, was more violent than usual.

Wylie, who was an old, experienced guide, was so alarmed at this that he begged Mr. Clive not to go down to the water, but Clive, not to be detained by any fancied danger, had already started. At first all went well, though the atmosphere was almost unbearable.

However, a small fee is annually collected from each 'phone owner to maintain the switchboards. This plan is popular, since each section controls its own "affairs." If one local company desires to make improvements or changes, they consult among themselves only, and are not compelled to get permission from other sections, or from executive officers living probably at a distance, which would be the case if the whole system was controlled by one general company. However, it has been found necessary, after several local companies are organized, to form a general organization, to meet annually, or oftener, with power to adopt such rules and regulations as they may deem expedient for the good of the service as a whole Rockingham county, Va., has the

PAINE'S OELERY COMPOUND

Bestows That Health and Vigor That Makes Living a Pleasure.

If you are sick and out of sorts in June, it is in your power to make yourself healthy, strong and happy. There is not the slightest reason why you should go through the hot summer weather feeling sickly, miserable, languid and melancholic. To be well and strong, means happiness and true joy, and this is the season when you should be bright, hearty and glad-some. If you are sleepless, rheumatic, neuralgic, dyspeptic, or have the shadows of disease hovering over you; if you are not as bright, energetic and strong as you were some weeks ago, the use of Paine's Celery Compound will tone up and fortify your whole system, cleanse the blood, correct digestion, sharpen the appetite, and conduce to restful sleep. Thousands once in a half-dead condition owe their present good health to the use of Paine's Celery Compaund. Mrs. E. Rankin, of Courtright, Ont., says: With great pleasure I beg to inform you of the good I have received from the use of Paine's Celery Compound. For a number of years I have been years has almost disappeared. I am

The scale of the approaching battle was amply realized by the leaders on both sides, writes Mr. Fitchett. ing mass, an undulating sea of crested helmets, gleaming spear-points and sword-blades, tossing heads of horses, with red, expanded nostrils, and flowing mane. That huge mass of men and horses, glittering with steel and gay with color, undulating with each mult and clang of its approach, formed a moving target upon which the British guns played with deadly effect. But, with a front of from four to eight squadrons, the mass came steadily on. Macready, who served in the 30th, gives a vivid description of the French cavalry as they came near. 'As soon as they quickened their trot into a gallop," he says, "the cuirassiers bent their heads so that the peaks of their helmets looked like vizors, and they seemed cased in armor from the head to the saddle."

The gallant French horsemen thus rode with bent heads and swords pointed forward, the officers on their flanks. They mounted the crest; the British gunners, firing their last charge pointblank into the mass when at a few yards distant, abandoned their guns, and ran to fling themselves for shelter beneath the bayonets of the nearest squares. Then the French cavalry saw spread before them the barrier in their path-nine steadfast squares, five in the first line, four in the second, covering the intervals. These red oblongs, steel-edged and steadfast, were suddenly edged with smoke and flamethe darting, pointed flame of musketry volleys-as the galloping French came near. The flame ran round three faces of each square as the charging squadrons broke in two, and swept past their flanks upon the second line. Here a zigzag of fire ran round the faces of a new line of squares, and through the lanes between the squares, scourging thus with deadly musketry fire, the French cavalry broke, to be instantly charged by the British horsemen in the open ground beyond, and driven back through the tangle of squares again, smitten with incessant volleys, till they eddied backward in disorder over

On that mass of moving and glitterthe smoke could be seen helmets falling, riders falling prone." Some of the leading files tried to back their horses on the bayonet points. But these gallant horsemen were quickly shot down. When at last the disordered mass had disappeared over the crest, then the British gunners ran out, and poured on the recoiling squadrons a tempest of grape-shot. Down in the valley the officers, with uplifted swords and shrill outcries, rallied their broken squadrons, dressed their lines again, and led them once more to the charge. Twelve times over that wild scene was repeated, and with each charge new masses #### of cavalry joined in the fight. The Stubborn Squares.

When that first long wave of battle, amongst the French became so recrested with steel and moving in thunder, burst upon the ridge, who can doubt but that amongst Wellington's by our side with such coolness, and raw militia lads, at least, a strange thrill of startled feeling ran? Here was such a cavalry attack being out the exhortation to the men-havlaunched upon them as perhaps no earthly battlefield had ever yet beheld! But the stubborn English kept their dogged lines, and poured their musketry fire with unfaltering diligence into that great wave of rushing horsemen. Presently, indeed, the English squares began to realize their power. They met each new storm of cavalry attack with a coolness not unflavored with contempt. The difficulty of the officers, in some cases, at least, was to keep the impatient ranks steady, so as to allow the French squadrons to come near enough before they fired.

On the French side Thiers shows other.' clearly the process by which, without orders, or even against orders, one body of French cavalry after another never before seen; when, was drawn into the madness and rapture of the ride on the English center. Napoleon, he says, gave Ney Milaud's cuirassiers for the purpose of piercing the shaken British line above La Haye Sainte. The advance of that mass of glittering horsemen fixed the attention of the whole French army. At it passed before the light cavalry of the Guard, drawn up in squadrons, Milhaud himself grasped the hand of Lefebvre-Desnouttes, and cried "I am going to charge; support me." Lefebvre-Desnouttes caught fire, or perhaps took Milhaud's words as an order, and at once put his squadrons in movement in support of Milhaud. When the first and second charges had been repulsed, and cuirassiers and lancers in broken order were recoiling down the slope of the British ridge, Ney, his coat and hat torn by balls, and wild with the excitement of the charge, looked round and saw on the French ridge yet another body of cuirassiers, and 2,000 mounted grenadiers of the Guard, watching the flight with breathless excitement. Almost with a gesture Ney drew them into combat, and led them in a mad ride through the chequer of the English squares. Kellerman was next sent into the fray, according to one account, by Napoleon's direct orders, and this time

seventy squadrons, in one furious

charge, were launched on the torment-yond riding to and fro amongst the

THE LAUNDRESS' LAMENT.

Bless my heart! Why was I ever born? Toiling and moiling from morning till night, and never a rest! If man was made to mourn, what was a laundress made forcertainly not to sing. My hands are nearly charred off working in filthy suds, washing other people's clothes, and other people's floors. No wonder soapmakers give prizes with their soaps. Those who use some of the soaps deserve prizes. I would rather do without the prizes and have a whole skin. And as to the mistress' part of the bargain—imagine rubbing ten dollars' worth into the value of five dollars, and then getting a fifty-cent prize for doing it? It makes one laugh—that is, if you haven't to pay for it. But I cannot laugh at my sore hands. Well, well, I suppose what cannot be cured must be endured.

"Hello, Mary! what's the matter, you seem out of sorts?" "Out of sorts, Margaret, I should think I Life is a burden.

He was President of the Royal College of Surgeons, and has a whole string of letters at the end of his name. Well, I read a simple statement he made one day, and it cured me of sore hands, hard knuckles, aching back, softened the flannels, and prevented the clothes going so soon to tatters.

"What a funny doctor, and what was it you read?" "He said there was something he used himself, and he recommended it to women when washing clothes; and I said to myself, I will try that. I found out that Queen Victoria herself used the same in her castles in England, and that further convinced me. You know, Mary, these people have a means of knowing things that we poor people take years to find out."

Some Blunders Made by Well-Educated Men.

A Story of Dwight L. Moody and His Early Struggles With His Mative Tongue.

When 19 years old, Dwight L. Moody hider a pew in Plymouth Church, Chicago, and undertook to fill it every Sunday. It is said that he would hail young men on the street corners, visit them at their boarding houses, or even call them out of saloons to share his pew. Either on acount of the novelty of his invitations, or because his remarkable earnestness and cordiality induced them to attend, many did so, and soon he was renting four pews, which he filled every Sunday with his strangely assorted guests.

"Your faith has works enough to keep it alive ten times over," said an old deacon, after he had listened to Moody's first testimony in a Plymouth Church prayer meeting; "but in my opinion you would serve God best, by keeping still!"

"You certainly have zeal enough, and to spare," said another, "but you should realize the limitations of your vocation and not try to speak in public. You make too many mistakes in

He tried with all his might to improve for he felt that his work could not be done too well, and by close study and observation he was at length enabled in a large degree, to combine the grace of good diction with the rugged strength of native eloquence. Although, even in his later years, he would sometimes, in an impassioned plea, use "done" for "did," "come" for "came," "Isrol" for "Israel," etc., his logic was so coherent, his words so simple, well chosen, and predominatingly Anglo-Saxon, and his sentences so short, clear and epigram-matic that neither children nor mature scholars could mistake his meaning or thought of criticising his use of the English language.

Baby's Own Tablets

If your children are subject to colic, indigestion, or any stomach trouble. If they are troubled at any time with constipation, diarrhœa, or any other of the minor ills that afflict little ones, give them Baby's Own Tablets.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH.

This medicine will give relief right away, making sound, refreshing sleep possible. It will put children on the high road to recovery at once. It is doing this to-day for thousands of little ones in all parts of the country.

The Tablets are good for children of all ages and are taken as readily as candy. If crushed to a powder they can be taken with perfect safety and gratifying results to the youngest infant.

A Mother's Praise.

Mrs. James Spencely, Pembroke, Ont., says :- "Any mother with a cross and restless child should get Baby's Own Tablets at once. When my baby was teething he was cross, feverish and so sleepless that I had to be up with him most of the night. The Tablets were recommended to me and after giving them to baby his fever was reduced, he became quiet, got refreshing sleep, and I was able to get sleep myself. I have since given him the Tablets both for constipation and diarrhoea and find them a cure for both these troubles. I do not know what I would do without the Tablets at times and I always keep them in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all druggists, or will be sent post paid at 25 cents a box by addressing

Mr. Robert Meighen Upon the Condition and Prospects of the Northwest,

Strange as it may seem, most of the [From the Montreal Daily Witness.] Lake of the Woods Milling Company, not indifferent to scenic or poetic effects, but it behooves him, chiefly, to have an eye for practical aspects, as head of a great milling corporation whose prosperity is bound up with the material development of the

Mr. Meighen has just returned from a trip to the Northwest and the Pacific coast, with faith stimulated in the future of this great country. saw settlers pouring in from all parts | tralia at the rate I have quoted? of the world; he noted numbers from the other side of the line who had sold their lands, and who had determined to become settlers in the great minion; observed the contented farm-Northwest, which offered such splen- ers at work; noted the man who came did opportunities for acquiring an independence; he saw towns extending and improving; he witnessed the beginning of new settlements which would speedily become towns; and he made the calculation that if the influx of population continued at the ratio which marked it at the present, the Northwest in five years from the present date would be able to supply the British Empire with all the wheat In regard to the influx of American settlers, Mr. Meighen rather thought that in many instances these people were really Canadians who had lived for years in the Western States, and who, finding that they could sell their lands at enhanced rates, had done so, and then bought lands in the North-west equally fertile and at about onethird the price of those in the Western States. Coming back, then, to Canada, and occupying admirable lands, they would, with money in their pockets, from the sale of their former possessions, be in a position to become valuable settlers. The first year they would raise coarse grains, as he had seen, but the second year they would raise wheat, and thus the great wheat belt would go on extending. He was proud to see the steamers at Vancouver which plied between this country and the Orient; proud to see the ships which connected the Dominion with the great island continent of Australia; and it was a consideration which struck him with a sense of satisfaction that this connection with the Orient, this expanding trade Australia had been the thought and the work of the C. Life.

The poet's exclamation: "O Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say tese words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

* Hetty's Tramp.

"I'll run away! This was Hetty Warner's reply to her mother when told that she could no longer keep company with Sam Beecher. Hetty was nineteen and an only child, and the Warners were well-todo farmers living just outside the town of Lincolnville. Sam Beecher was a rather fast young man living in town, and his calls at the farmhouse had not been received with favor by the old folks

"Don't be foolish, Hetty," said her nother. "We don't wan't to see you throw yourself away on a worthless young man.'

"Who says he's worthless?" demanded the daughter, with flashing eyes.
"Why, everybody knows he drinks and wears and gets into scrapes."

"He's simply a young man of spirit, and I admire him for it." 'For the land's sake! Well, it seems that father didn't put his foot down a minute too soon. Now, you'd better finish hemming that tablecloth and wait for a better man to come along." Hetty had no more to say. She felt numiliated and defiant, and she was determined to do something. She wanted to make her mother and father feel bad-worse than she felt herself. There was one thing left-to run away. The more she thought of the plan the better she liked it. She would steal away at night. She would leave behind her letter saying that her heart was broken. She would go far, far away among strangers and probably die within a few weeks and be buried un-der a willow tree. Her father would search in vain and be sorry for his cruelty, and her mother would pine away and become a living skeleton.

Hetty allowed a week to glide past to lull suspicion and to see if Sam Beecher could bid defiance to her father's edict, and then she was ready. Sam did not show up. He was having a lawsuit just then over a horse trade, and he had no time to scheme and

At 10 o'clock one summer's night Hetty stole from the house to return never again. She left a heartbroken letter on the kitchen table, and there were tears in her eyes as she bade the cat and dog and cherry trees and flower beds good-bye. Her plan was to walk through the village and keep on until she had put hundreds of miles between her grieving heart and the dear old home. She had 70 cents in cash and a grim determination to die a martyr to parental injustice.

She got along bravely until she had passed through the village and was half a mile beyond. Then a thunderstorm come up and drove her to seek shelter in a farmer's barn, but before she go under cover she was thoroughly drenched and had torn the skirt of her dress half off in getting over a rail She found a door of the barn open and crept inside with chattering teeth and was wondering if Sam Beecher wouldn't shed tears of grief if he knew her situation, when the odor of tobacco smoke came to her nostrils. Before she could make a move, however, a man with a pipe in his mouth stood between her and the door, and a gruff voice said:

"Well, old dusty, I bids ye come in home. Got any cold vittles with ye? "Who-who is it?" screamed the girl as she started back.

"Thump me if it 'tain't a female!" growled the man. "Who is it yerself" It's-it's me-a girl!""

'And it's me-a tramp. By jingo. but this is a rum go! Did yer father send ye out here to disturb my meditations and turn me out in the midst of a thunderstorm?"

'No. I-I don't belong here. I was going somewhere, and the storm drove me in here. I guess I'll go now.'

"I guess no. Havin' invaded the saprecincts of my domicile, as Shakespeare has it, I want to know the whichness of it. Besides, no lady should travel about at midnight in a thunderstorm without a beau. Are ye a big gal or a little gal? Come, now tell me what's the trouble.

"I want to go!" exclaimed Hetty, who'd have given all the Sam Beechers on earth to be safe at home in her bed dust then.

"But ye can't, ye know," protested the tramp. "It's what the perlice calls a suspicious case, and I've got to inwestigate. Whose gal are ye? Whar do ye live? What are ye doin' out here this time of night? I ain't a bad man, and if ye've got any sorrors pour 'em into my listenin' ears."

Chattering with the cold and trembling with fear, and having only the idea of appealing to the tramp's sympathy, Hetty stated her case. It wasn't much of a case, as she had to admit to herself when she had stated it, and the reply of the man, was prompt and to the point.

"Say, gal," he observed as she finished, "ye are a silly kid. Yer dad and marm was dead right, and ye ought ter be locked up. Whar was ye runnin' away to?"

"I-I don't know." "What was ye gin' to do when ye

"I-I don't know." "Course ye don't. It is jest a gal's whim, and a mighty silly one. Gals has got to be bossed, and ye ought to know it. The old folks has got to keep an eye on 'em till they is married off. A kid of a gal is as apt to marry a rascal as an honest feller, and I don't reckon your beau Sam is anything to brag of. The storm is passin' over, and when it stops rainin' ye are goin' back

"But I can't," sobbed Hetty. "But ye must. Yes, mar'm, I'm goin' right along with ye. Mebbe ye kin get into the house and up to yer room without anybody bein' the wiser. At any rate ye've got to try it." Miss Hetty wept and objected, though all the time hoping the tramp would carry out his programme. When the rain had ceased and the stars shone but again, he said: "Now, gal, we'll jog along. Purty the longer."

Very little was said as they splashed through the mud left by the shower and brushed against the wet weeds of the highway. The tramp smoked and Hetty shivered, and she was ready to sink down from exhaustation and emotion as the pair finally arrived at the farmhouse gate. It was nearly 2 o'clock in the morning, and all within the house was quiet. "Did ye leave the door on the latch kid?" asked the tramp. "Yes."

"Then sneak in and up to yer room, and tomorrow mornin' ye set out to git yer common sense back. Ye'll 'scuse me, won't ye?' "Y-yes."

up this morning.'

"Then here's my paw, and I'll stand here till ye are safe inside. Don't never do it again. Good night." And the only thing said next morning was by the mother, who observed:

EMERALD MINES OF COLOMBIA

Digging Gems in the Far-Away Republic.

Methods Employed in Taking the Precious Stones From the Bepths of the Earth.

A report on the condition and trade of the Republic of Colombia, with the exception of the district of Panama, for the year 1901, just issued by the foreign office, states that the emerald mines of Muzo and Coscuez, the property of the Colombian government, have produced the finest emeralds in the world. They are at present rented to a British company. Up to the year 1875 all the emerald mines in the country were the property of the nation. After that date the government granted the right of exploration and working on private enterprise, reserving only the right to the Muzo and Coscuez mines. Since then several companies have been formed and considerable capital expended, with very poor results.

The most promising of these seem to be the Somondoco mines, worked by a British company. The department of Boyaca, from a mining point of view, is of a totally different geological foris of a totally different geological formation to the other mining departments of the republic, no gold or silver being found, save in the few rivers emptying into the Magdalena. The one great mine of production is that of Muzo, famous since the year 1555 for the production of the finest emeralds of the world, a stone in the rough weighing 2,330 carats having been taken from one of the many veins of this mine. These mines are the property of the Colombian government, which leases them for periods of five years to the highest bidder at public auction, which takes place in the capital of the republic one year previous to the of the republic one year previous to the expiration of the term in force. The value of the production of these mines has always been kept a secret by the

The precious stones are then extracted from the veins, which run in no given direction or angle in this late rock formation. The stones are found chiefly in pockets, but occasionally some are found isolated from the vein, necessitating constant care and vigilance.

The immense amount of debris resulting from the cutting which necessarily falls from the quarry is carried away by means of discharges of water from reservoirs at an elevation above the workings by means of syphons which empty the lock, when full, automatically, great care being taken conveniently to direct this great discharge of water so that no damage may be done to existing produc-

The short term of the lease does not admit of any extensive system being adopted as, for example, in Kimberly, to prevent stealing of the stones, but special care is taken in the selection of the workpeople who in turn, watch most carefully all operations on the banks. The stones, after extraction, are classified into their respective classes, ranging from first to sixth quality, by the superintendent in charge, who forwards them, insured, to Europe. The greater quantity are forwarded to British India to be cut, and afterward the better qualities return to the markets of Europe for sale.

The theory is that the silicate of glucina and alumina ran in the fissures of the veins, and there coeling off, formed the particular hexagonal crystal, and, according to its abundance, produced greater or less quantity, as also the quality, according to the favorable or unfavorable conditions existing. The Coscuez group is said by tradition to be very rich and the quality of the stones said to be of the particular "canutillo" form and of superb quality. Many attempts have been made to find the actual "locus in quo" of the produc-Many attempts have been made to find the actual "locus in quo" of the productive formation, but up to the present without success. I am informed (says Consul Dickson) that an emerald-producing formation of great importance has been discovered by the aid of old Spaish parchments in the Somondoco district, locally known by the name of Chivor, but as yet has not been worked by the discoverers; at present only the old Spanish tunnels and workings indicating that in past centuries great minold Spanish tunnels and workings indicating that in past centuries great mining operations had been carried on there have been overhauled, giving proof of the existence of emeralds of considerable crystallization. It is intended to open up these extensive workings, so long lost to the world since the suspension of the works by order of the King of Spain in the year 1792, owing to the fact that all the emerald properties, Muzo and Coscuez included, produced a loss and not a profit to the kingdom of Spain.

The Spaniards always built their houses with stone foundations. Among these lost towns Muzo may almost be counted. At one time it boasted of seventeen churches and a large population. Today there is one church and only about 300 people. It is interesting to note that, with one or two exceptions only, all the mines of any worth now being worked were known to the Spaniards, and in the majority of cases considerable workings are evident.—London Globe.

BRITISH PRESS PRAISE CANADA

Leading Journals Express Their Opinions.

Agriculture—Credit Due Hon. Mr. Fisher, Prof. Rebertson and Others for Its Progress.

It is as great a help to countries as to individuals to be permitted occasionally to see themselves as others see them. In this respect Canada is not an exception, and our population may profitably spend a few minutes viewing themselves in a British mirror. No one who knows the conservative Morning Post of London, England, will accuse it of undue enthusiasm on any subject, much less of lavishness in dispensing praise; therefore, when Canadians see themselves mirrored to advantage in its columns, they may rest assured the reflection is not far wide of the mark. In the last edition to hand, this is the picture presented:

"Today the splendid results of Canada's commercial enterprise are apparent even to the most casual student of affairs. Her foreign trade increases month by month, and year by year; the population of Nebraska, the Dakotas and other Western States is being drawn up into her Northwest; and almost every day she advances the boundaries of her civilization towards the north. The results are apparent to all; the processes whereby they have been attained are understood by few in this country. That Canada pos-sesses illimitable natural resources, and is both the Scotland and the Normandy of North America, does not explain the amazing rapidity of her development. In the short space of ten years she has grown into a commercial great power. In particular, the growth of her agricultural trade-always a sure foundation for national greatness-is without parallel in the world's industrial history. In 1896 the aggregate value of her exports of foodstuffs was $35,773,133; last year it was $63,098,841. Moreover, the average Canadian's standard of living has been considerably raised in the interval, and since the growth in industrial and mining population has been much greater than in rural districts, the difference between these two sums does not adequately represent the increase in the annual value of her farm products. How has this remarkable advance been brought about? The plain truth is that Canada has always governed by business men, and that every member of the present cabinet (or board of directores for the nation), has the necessary talent and training for supervising the business of his department. No the least able of those able men is the minister of agriculture, who has charge of Canada's agricultural policy-no new thing, though it has been revised and extended of late years. And much of the success of that policy is due to Prof. Robertson, Canada's indefatigable 'agricultural fraveler.'

The Canadian Gazette, also a Lon-don paper, and which devotes itself to Canadian men and matters, in a leader, states: "The Canadian department agriculture is still giving points to the mother country." Here, for instance, is the St. James' Gazette, taking the last annual report of the minister of agriculture as affording a contrast between the useful activity of the colonial government and the supineness of our own (the British) in these matters." As an excellent example of the way in which the Canadian Government assists the trader, the St. James' Gazette takes a recent article sent out by this department, in reference to Canadian cheese, and how to prepare it for the British markets. The Canadian Gazette adds that "if British agriculture had a few such enlightened officials as Prof. Robertson established at headquarters, with, say, one-tenth of the present department of agriculture vote at their disposal, the British farmer would soon hold up his

The Cork Examiner (Ireland) says: "There are many ways of accounting for the different results attained by the prosperous farmers of the colonies, and the embarrassed, unscientific agriculturists at home. For one thing, there appears to be more thorough cooperation between the farmers and the department of agriculture, the latter being more ready to afford advice and instruction, and the former to avail themselves of such assistance on every occasion. The results should be of some value to our department as well as of interests to all concerned in agricultural pursuits. The annual report of the Hon. Sydney Fisher should indicate to Irish farmers how far ahead of them their colonial rivals are in agricultural instruction and experiment, and how seriously handicapped they must remain until co-operation and instruction have advanced to an equal degree in this country (Ireland)." The Globe (London, England) suggests in its latest editorial the expediency of establishing in South African centers of agricultural instruction "where newcomers may learn the best methods of cultivation and stock-raising as is already done in Canada." It goes on to state, "the annual report of the Canadian minister of agriculture demonstrates the highly satisfactory results of the enterprise. In Canada any farmer who finds himself face to face with some new problem never previously encountered, need only state his predicament to the nearest center of information to have all his difficul-les removed." Referring to our cold storage systems, the Times, the leading daily newspaper in the world, declared in a leader that "capital put into cold storage warehouses will prove a sound remunerative financial investment"; and the Commercial Intelligence, another English publication, has indorsed it. With such points before him, and such pointers ready for him as he may require them, the Canadian agriculturist may do well to dwell a moment upon the superior advantages freely offered for his acceptance; and the least he can do in return for these privileges is to co-operate with the experimental branches of this department in still further improving the farmers' position in this land, and their commercial status throughout the world's markets. The success of this Dominion rests in the farmer's palm. The government is doing its duty by the farmer, and he in turn is in duty bound to reciprocate.

Men of Affairs One may sail the seas and visit every land and everywhere will find, that men of affairs, who are well informed, have neither the time nor the inclination, whether on pleasure bent or business, to use those medicines which cause excessive purgation and then leave the internal organs in a constipated condition. Syrup of Figs is not built on these lines. It acts naturally, acts effectively, cleanses, sweetens and strengthens the internal organs and leaves them in a healthy condition. If in need of a laxative remedy the most excellent is Syrup of Figs, but when anything more than a laxative is required the safe and scientific plan is to consult a competent physician and not to resort to those medicines which claim to cure all manner of diseases. The California Fig Syrup Co. was the first to manufacture a laxative remedy which would give satisfaction to all; a laxative which physicians could sanction and one friend recommend to another; so that today its sales probably exceed all other laxatives combined. In some places considerable quantities of old-time cathartics and modern imitations are still sold, but with the general diffusion of knowledge, as to the best medicinal agents, Syrup of Figs has come into general use with the well-informed, because it is a remedy of known value and ever beneficial action. The quality of Syrup of Figs is due not only to the excellent combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants, known to act most beneficially on the system, with agreeable and refreshing aromatic liquids, but also to the orginal method of manufacture. In order to get the genuine and its beneficial effects one should always note the full name of the Company-California Fig Syrup Co .- printed on the front of every package.

The Air Line to Health.

The modern city is becoming more and more like a wheel-a central hub in which business is done and from which radiate fast trains and trolleys to an outer circumference of green fields and woods, where one may go after a day of playing Mr. Hyde in town to give Dr. Jekyll a chance to regain the upper hand.

Between the spokes live those to whom life without gas, sewers and policemen is not worth the living. But those who can't and those who won't dwell out of town grow fewer every year. For the first, the problem is being solved by increasingly rapid transit-by improvements which will, in a few years, merge the suburbs of

New York into those of Philadelphia. This better service is throwing open the farms for fifty miles around the city to pre-emption by the business man. Even now he may cry By Jove! over a bird at his luncheon in Delmonico's, and exclaim B'gosh! over a real broiler at his dinner in Podunk, twenty

Slips of the Irish Tongue.

A writer in the London Spectator has gathered a number of Hibernianisms, which he set down for the entertainment of appreciative readers: My first story is one of the late Queen, says he. On her return from her last visit to Northern Italy, the Bishop of Winchester and the Dean of Windsor were dining with her, when she remarked to the former: "You remember that before I started for Italy you urged me not to fall to visit the conventual church at Assist. I bore this in mind, and was greatly impressed with all I saw there. I had one droll experience, too. For as I was being conducted through a very chilly carridor by one of the monks, I said to him: "Don't you often feel the draughts very trying, wearing the tonsure as you do?" I received my answer not in Italian, but in these words: 'No, madame; I can't say that I suf-fer in that way at all. As you must be aware, we Irish are rather a hot-headed race."

Another story of Dublin Castle: "Mr. ___, Lord Carlisle's wittlest aide-de-camp, was ill and in bed one day, and seemed to have lost his temper with one of the servants. A meeting in aid of the Sick and Indigent Roomkeepers was going on in a neighboring building, and he presently beard the following dialogue a little way down the passage: "And who were you bringing the brequest to, Bid-

Dr. H—_, who possessed a very pronounced snub nose, used to tell this story against himself: "When I was dispensary doctor down in the country"-he spoke as a Dublin physician in good practice-"I was once mounting my horse when an old beggar woman began pestering me for money. I was in a hurry to be off, and perhaps showed my impatience of her impor-tunity in too marked a manner. She suddenly stopped begging and thus delivered herself, very deliberately, be-fore the group of hotel hangers-on, who were standing to see me off: 'Well, the Lord presarve yer eyesight, for the divil a nose ye have to mount the specs upon." The unexpectedness of the above retort of course constitutes its strength. It was, in fact, a curse in the disguise of a blessing.

CATTLE-DUFFER CLASS IS FAST DWINDLING

In Past Days He Drove His Gay Trade With a Fine Dash and Recklessness.

The cattle duffer belongs to a now fast-dwindling class. Happily so! In bygone days, when settlement was scanty, the country for the most part wild and untenanted, and when big squatters were the only pioneers of the vast interior pastoral regions, he flourished exceedingly, and drove his gay but nefarious trade with a fine dash and recklessness and a con-temptuous disregard of the police. His number was then to be reckoned by the hundred. His methods were as follows: He built himself a hut in the heart of some great forest, situated within a measurable distance of two or more big cattle stations. Near the hut he constructed an enclosure-a paddock surrounded with a dog-leg fence (a dog-leg fence is made by heaping the trunks of sapling trees about forked stakes driven into the ground.) These paddocks always embraced a stream of running water, and were often many acres in extent. Having so provided himself, he descended on horseback at night upon the squatting runs, armed with a stock whip and revolver, and what cattle he could find he drove off to his fastness. When his stolen herd had accumulated to sufficiently brave proportions, assisted by his servants and fellow-rob- taken from a bers, he proceeded to alter their her magazine. brands. Roping and throwing the catthen, after allowing a time for the wounds to heal, his own brand was imprinted on the scar. So treated, the proper owners of the animals could never identify them. The cattle duffer thereupon drove his prey to the near-est market, and sold them at auction, often to the very men whom he had ards are apt to be struck by the fact that there seems to be a good deal of waste of land, and the question he naturally asks is, why don't they plant the trees closer? There has been in recent years a theory advocated that orchard trees should be planted so far apart that the whole ground would not be cast in the shade when the trees reached full maturity, and at the same time he had been warned not to attempt to raise crops between the rows of trees unless he turned them under to enrich the soil. But I think many practical horticulturists are reaching the conclusion that there is too much waste space in an orchard, and that some method can be devised to reclaim this waste.

Close planting naturally frightens many away, and they shake their heads prophetically. Nevertheless there have been some excellent results obtained in close planting which must at least convey some valuable lessons to us. There have been harvested some large crops of apples where the trees were only half the distance apart in the rows which has always been recommended. These rows themselves were the regulation distance away, but between them were raised nursery stock, young trees, vines and plants Where trees partly shade young nursery stock from the hot sun they are less liable to be injured from sunscald. The chief question that concerns grow-ers, experimenting with close planting is that of enriching the soil to that it can nourish the double crops. This is made possible only by adding to the soil all that is taken from it by the trees. Market gardeners find that the more they cultivate their oils the more they will produce. It is equally true of our orchards. If we crowd them more little harm can be done if we put on sufficient crop food. More experiments and tests in close planting are desirable to enlighten us on this point.

MEN WHO LIVE OVER DYNAMITE

Nonchalance of Sailors Employed on Powder Boats.

The Life, Oddly Enough, Presents a Very Fascinating Phase to Those Aboard.

Sleeping, eating, cooking, living day ers may not seem a very attractive mode of life, yet it is enjoyed, apparently, by the crews of the powder boats that are anchored off the Jersey flats, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. Among watermen, in fact, employment on one of the powder boats is regarded as a "soft job." The work is not hard and a man has comparatively easy hours. And as for nerves—well, the powder crews don't have nerves. They are careful. The powder fleet comprise half a dozen boats of various descriptions, an old revenue cutter, a sloop and several barges. Some of the boats are bulit of iron, others of wood, and they were seaworthy vessels once on a time. Now they are anchored in shallow water, and at low tide they rest on the mud. When there, is a heavy sea on the boats roll and pitch somewhat, but the idea that the dynamite may be shaken up does not trouble the crews. The dynamite stored in the powder fleet is simply the reserve for use in this city. Much dynamite is exported from New York, but it is taken directly to the steamships. Only freighters with magazines carry cargoes of dynamite and high explosives. It is forbidden by international law for passenger vessels to carry such cargoes. After a vessel has been loaded at her dock with her non-explosive cargo she is anchored off Gravesend Bay, where her load of dynamite is taken from a tug and stored away in

They never get rattled or frightened, but they are always very careful. I have slept on the boats many times, and never thought anything of it. You get used to handling the stuff, and treat it like any other kind of goods-potatoes or drygoods-only you always remember that it is liable to do considerable action if you aren't careful. #### Sensitiveness and Success.

Many people are kept back, in their efforts to get along in the world, by over-sensitiveness. We know able young men and women who are well educated and well-fitted for their callings, but so extremely sensitive to criticism or suggestion, that they never rise to the places to which their abilities entitle them. Their feelings are constantly being wounded by fancied slights in the office, the shop, the store, the mill, the factory, or wherever else they may happen to be. They carry about with them, most of the time, a sense of injury which not only makes them unhappy, but also to a great extent mars their efficiency.

Over-sensitive people are usually very finely-grained, highly organized, and intelligent, and, if they could overcome this weakness, would become capable, conscientious workers. This failing—for it is a failing, and a very serious one, too—is an exaggerated form of self-consciousness, which, while entirely different from egotism or concett, causes self to loom up in such large proportions on the mental retina as to overshadow everything else. The victim of it feels that, wherever he goes, whatever he does, he is the center of observation, and that all eyes, all thoughts are focused upon

The supersensitiveness, so destructive to happiness and success, and, incidentally, to health—for whatever de-stroys harmony destroys health—be-trays, in a sense, a lack of self-respect of which no man should voluntarily be guilty. To be a complete man, one must be conscious, but not in an ofand night over enough stick dynamite fensive way, of his own worth and dig-to blow a good-sized building to flind- nity. He must feel himself superior to envious criticism or ridicule. When someone told Diogenes that he was de-rided, he replied: "But I am not derided." He counted only those ridiculed who feel the ridicule and are discomposed by it.

The surest way to conquer morbid sensitiveness is to mingle with people as freely as possible, and, while ap-praising your own ability and intelligence, at least as impartially as you would those of a friend or acquaint-ance, to forget yourself. Unless you can become unconscious of self, you will never either appear at your best, or do the best of which you are capable. It requires will power and an unbending determination to conquer this arch enemy to success, but what has been done can be done, and many who were held down by it for years, have, by their own efforts, outgrown it and risen to commanding positions.

EMPEROR'S CARE

What Is Its Fighting Value?" May Well Be Asked

He Inspires the Service and Closely Watches Its Development in Every Department.

The German fleet is the object of the emperor's especial care. "What is its fighting value?" it may well be asked. The morale of officers and men can be understood only if it is remembered that the kaiser is the father of the fleet. All visitors to the ships confirm the statement that William II. is regarded by those who wear his uniform with an almost religious devotion. In this country we refer to the imperial German navy, but the word imperial does not convey the right meaning of the German term Kaiserlich, which is the adjective employed. It is really the navy of the German Emperor. All orders, regulations, and promotions are signed by him. His majesty carefully selects, in particular, all officers for high command, and has introduced a system of retirement under which he obtains officers in the prime of life for the navy. He inspires the service, and olosely watches its development in every department, studies the training of the crews, and in the ships portraits of his majesty are hung and prized. Everything impresses a visitor with the devotion to emperor and country that animates every boy and man, and the care that is taken to foster a national spirit. No one can walk round one of these ships without being struck by the monthly list of national anniversaries hung up where the crew can see it. Much is expected of the men. even to the study of the skeleton model at the vessel to which they are attached, which is most ingeniously constructed in metal, and to a knowledge of the world's men-of-war, gained from diagrams that meet the eye everywhere, depicting the ships of the world's navies. They must be able to recognize craft which are met at sea by the number of their funnels and masts and other details.

MUCH EXPECTED OF MEN. But if much is expected of the men, they enjoy many advantages in return. Their food is excellent in quality, ample in quantity, and admirably varied in character. Every day in each week the diet is changed. The food is well cooked and looks appetizing, and, in short, the men, if anything, appear too sleek and well cared for in contrast to the British bluejacket, whose fare has been compared to that of a certain class of convict-but that is an old story. The dietary in the British fleet is to be improved, but even then bread will not be baked on board ship, as it is in the kaiser's vessels. In other particulars, the German sailors are to be envied. The lower decks are admirably ventilated by mechanical fans, and in winter are kept comfortable by hot pipes that go everywhere. Hand-basins, with water laid on, are numerous, and my impression is that the men are generally comfortable than in the British fleet. Whether they are thereby better fitted for their work it is impossible to saycertainly they do not look it, though they are well-built and intelligent. But there can be no doubt that in the absence of the duty of polishing brasswork, of which there is none, and holystoning wooden, well-caulked decks, as in the British navy, they have more time for other and more essential duties. We have in our ships decks of steel, covered with wood. which requires great labor to keep clean and smooth, and would splinter in action. How do the Germans manage? On the quarterdeck of the kaiser class, where the surface is exposed to the weather, a special pre-paration of cement, with a slightly

a good tread, is silent, and is kept clean easily. In fact, wherever a non-combustible material can be utilized in these new battle-ships, it is emed, and in a day every particle of wood, such as the divisions between cabins,

can be ripped out, and the vessel rendered fit to go into action. Another striking feature of these armor-clads is the reduction of all weights not absolutely essential, and these economies are utilized in many effective ways, as may be understood from the number of guns and quantity of coal carried. Efficiency seems to be the watchword of the fleet—that, and a devotion to the emperor, whose apartments on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. I was shown.

GOOD SHOOTING.

The British admiralty, it is curlous to not, have recently pleaded that evil results would be caused by competition for a cup among the men behind the guns of the fleet. How do the Germans promote good shooting? No paltry money prizes, a few shillings to each man only, are awarded, as with us, but the kaiser gives a cup, which goes every year to the crew making the best record, and the successful gunners are the envy of the fleet as they walk about wearing a distinctive mark. There is, therefore, a conflict between the kaiser, the student of efficiency in war ashore and afloat, and the admiraltry. One or the other is unwise. Certainly the vesels as they lie off the Irish coast, grim and business-like, impress one, and the feeling that the fleet is efficient, besides looking so, is not dispelled by a visit on board. As was said of the British soldiers in Natal, the British bluejackets are splendid. We should go far to find the equal of their officers in courage, resourcefulness and power to command. Our later ships are magnificent. The British navy is not effete but it may be that from the young, virile force, which is largely the creation and is the hourly pride of the German Emperer, there are lessons to be learned .- London Tel-
