But Still London Has Doubts About the Safety of the Legationers.

London, Saturday, July 21, 4 a.m.— The Conger despatch fails to carry conviction to either the British press or public. Its genuineness is not disputed, for, as is pointed out here, the Chinese must possess quite a sheaf of such messages, which the ministers fruitlessly endeavored to get transmitted, from which they could easily select a non-committal despatch to serve the required purpose. slight ray of hope is admitted in the fact that both Mr. and Mrs. Conger are known to have been on very friendly terms with the Empress Dowager, but the universal opinion here is that, if the despatch is genuine, the date is falsified. The Spectaior says:-"It matters little whether the Empress Dowager or Prince Tuan is the reigning monarch. Both are devoted to the extirpation of foreigners, and not one of the viceroys will dare oppose the anti-foreign policy. The plot has covered the whole Empire. Men who have dared to order, a Russian city, upon Russian ground, to be stormed will dare anything. Within a month the viceroys of the coast towns will have thrown off the mask, and the only safe place for Europeans will be on shipboard. Europeans will be on shipboard. Europe has a terrrible task, in which hurry is out of place. Who would have dreamed six months ago that for 10,000 regulars to take Tien Tsin would be a difficult and glorious

New York, July 21. — Charlotte L. Jones has obtained an order from Justice McAdam, of the Supreme Court, to serve a summons by publication on Henry B. Garreett in an action to annul her marriage to him, on the ground that he had fraudulently concealed that he was guilty of criminal conduct. They were married on October 7, 1895, in Jersey City, where she says his family lives. Previous to the marriage Garrett had been her attorney, and practised law in this city. She declares that her brother and father ascertained on November 5, 1896, that Garrett had been tampering with her brother's bank-book. Garrett, she says, fled at the time. She avers that she thereafter found in his effects a pardon from the Governor of New Jersey for some crime he had committed since he fled. She says he has been sentenced to a three-year term for forgery in the Province of Ontario, Canada, and was released with the usual commutation in July, 1899. Garrett was the adopted son of David Garrett, a wealthy Jersey City plasterer. Cape Town, July 21. — The Cape Colony parliament opened yesterday with an impressive scene. The speech of Sir Alfred Milner, governor of the colony, prophesied an early close of the war, and subsequently a united and prosperous South Africa. Sir Alfred Milner, referring to the noble manner in which all the self governing colonies had responded to Great Britain's call for aid, said indications were not wanting that the Great Britain's can lot dications were not wanting that the end of the war was approaching. Those concerned in the rebellion would have to answer for their misconduct. Parliament would be asked to approve a bill providing for a special court, with special powers to try hundreds who have already been put in jail, and others who appeared to have taken a leading part in the re-bellion. A commission would be cre-ated to deal with the rank and file of the rebels, with the power of sentencing for a period of five years and to disfranchisement and deprivation of other civil rights. Sir Alfred Milner added that he trusted the deliberations of the residence would be a significant to the residence of the resid tions of the parliament would be characterized by wisdom and moderation, so that when the troubles should be

THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

The Postmaster-General's Conciliation Act provides for the establishment of a Department of Labor with a view to the dissemination of accurate statistical and other information relating to the conditions of labor. The department is to collect, digest and publish, in suitable form, statistical and other information relating to such conditions. It will also institute and conduct inquiries into important, industrial questions upon which adequate information may not at present be available. It will also issue , at least once every month, a publication to be known as the Labor Gazette, which shall contain information re garding conditions of the labor market and kindred subjects. There is nothing very novel in these provisions. There are in England and the United States, under the same or different names, state agencies of similar kind for the same purposes. The objects aimed at are highly useful and their influence will be far-reaching. The collection and collation, in a concise form, of facts and figures relating to the industrial life of the people, and the dissemination of these at home and abroad, will provide a basis for the formation of sound opinions in regard to Canada as a field of labor and a labor market. The new department will not, it seems, as in some countries, be a separate department of government, or involve a new ministerial portfolio. It will be attached to some existing department whose head shall be charged with its administration. Its mouthpiece will be the Gazette which, following the lines of the British Labor Gazette, will register facts and not enunciate opinions. The Gazette is intended to furnish the material upon which readers may form opinions for themselves. The conducting of inquiries in to industrial questions of one kind or another will, it is expected, aid the carrying out of the Conciliation clauses of the act, and, in the collection of evidence, will either superseda or supplement, to a large extent, the more expensive processes by commission. An annual review of the labor and industrial conditions of the Dominion, similar to the reports of the departments of agriculture and trade and commerce will also form part of the work of this new department. Canada has been behind other countries in most of the things aimed at by this measure, and the fact that its passage met with no exposition in parliament, shows that there is a general desire to give the experiment a fair trial.

The success of the new undertaking

the Labor Gazette. The material furnished for that periodical will have to be carefully analyzed and digested, and presented with judicial fairness. In the absence of any expressions of opinion editorially, there seems to be no reason why this should not be done. W. L. Mackenzie King, B. A., LL. B., is the gentleman who has been selected as editor-in-chief and manager of the publication. Although a young man, Mr. King, according to all accounts, is especially qualified for the position. He is a well-trained political economist, who has distinguished himself by his scholarship and attainments in in the universities of Canada and the United States, and who has been close student, theoretically, of social and industrial problems, at home and abroad. He has had journalistic experience also on the principal Toronto and Montreal journals, and, on some of the economic journals of the United States, in the discussion of questions affecting the working classes. His reports to the government on the sweating and other evils, in public contracts, are said to have supplied the data upon which the government based its policy in the awarding of contracts, and the payment of wages, for government work. Mr. King is spoken of as a warm friend of the toilers of both sexes, who has used his abilities, as opportunity offered, to help to better their condition. He has no politics in the party sense, but regards the "game" from a broad economic standpoint, and will be acceptable to all parties. He is a son of John King, Q. C., and a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie, the tribune of the people in the stormy times of '37. If there is annything in heredity he ought to have an honest mind and will of his own, a shining virtue in one who has to discharge responsible public duties.

TO FATHOM AERIAL MYSTERIES.

Inspired by the success of von Zur lippen's flying machine, the Rev. J. R. Bacon, an insatiable English aeronautical experimentalist, proposes to make new tests during the coming sum mer. It was he who watched for an expected shower of aeronoids in a balloon with such serious results, who witnessed the recent eclipse in the same manner, and who permitted himself to be marooned on the tiny island occupied by Maplin light like Robinprovisions, and sound-catching instruments with which he studied problems hours in the whispering galleries of St. Paul's Cathedral, and has soared in a balloon thousands of feet over the city loaded with speaking trumpets and queer-shaped ear instruments to test the acoustic properties of masses of cloud.

He now proposes to determine the possibility of conveying messages to solated places like Pekin, Mafeking, and Ladysmith by ingenious methods, First, he will send up pilot balloons, and, having ascertained the drift of air currents, he will telegraph the villages and towns over which he will later pass in his passenger balloon, asking them to listen for his cannonade, fired from below the car, and, upon hearing it, to fetch telegraph operators familiar with the Morse ode to watch for the messages he will transmit from above.

These are to be sent by means of a nuge black collapsing drum, which will so operate at this distance-seven miles-that dots and dashes will be made by its expansion and contraction, and he believes operators can read them easily even further.

Throughout the voyage and at all eights slowly descending objects are to be dropped labelled with directions to finders. If these directions are observed and the finders subsequently ommunicate with Mr. Bicon, he hopes to do much toward tracing the main drifts of the upper air currents. Mr. Bacon is to be accompanied in the expedition by a distinguished na-

That there exists an obscure sect called the Canadian Independence League is a fact known to few but the handful of earnest souls who compose

The goods had to be imported, because there was no one in Canada who would manufacure them. Unfortunately for the struggling league, the buttons never reached their destination, the collector of customs at Montreal having intercepted and confiscated them. The Government seizes buttons conveying separatist sentiments; yet it permits Tarte, Bourassa and Monet to talk. This is straining the gnat and swallowing the camel.

THE REIGN OF LAW.

A tale of the Kentucky Hemp Fields To the Northerner-the Canadian 'hemp" has meant little, nothing better perhaps than a suggestion of coarse snails, or rude sacking With the Kentuckian it s different. Memories sweet and bitter verpower him at the sound of the word :heep, that tall, waving weed which an ancestor had looked out upon with lordly pride of ownership, or bent his back in the

AS TO FEMININE CLOTHING

Sloan's Advice on How to Run the Universa.

MR. EDITOR:-If I were boss: -There would be some radical changes in feminine clothing.

If women folk insisted on wearing skirts, they would have to wear skirts of a different sort, some kind that would be firmly attached to their shirt waists or todices.

There was a woman's convention the other day and for eight blessed hours every woman that got up to speak first reached around to make sure that the upper and the lower parts of her gown

I was at a commencement recently, and it was the same thing threr. Every sweet girl graduate that got up to read her essay had to fus a little with her gown before she made her bow to the audience.

Think of the muscular energy women folks waste in the course of a year, to say nothing of the nervous worry. It is no wonder that there are more women than men in the insane asylums. Then, too, look at the exhaustion that must come from the proposition of holding up skirts.

Watch a youngs'er of six go across Though her skirts are a the street. foot and a half from the ground, she will grab them in one hand, as she has seen her mother and her sisters do. She keeps on doing it every day of ber life from that on. As she gets older her skirts get heavier, and when she gets to wearing trains the task gets more arduous.

Think of the energy that is wasted by not having skirts cut four inches If I were boss Dame Fashion would have to invent a new garb for women cr go out of business. There is no reason why women should not be just as sensibly and as comfortably dressed as men. Any style, however simple, will become popular if persisted in. Women themselves would welcome any change in their garb that made life easier for them, if they would only admit it.

And if I were boss they would have to admit it. SOLOMON SLOAN.

HER BITTER PAST.

Policeman Stoddard Sues His Wife for a Divorce Because

But She Says He Knew all About it When He Woord Her at the Central Station.

Detroit News.

Lieut. Albert M. Stoddard, of the police force, was complainant in one of the most remarkable divorce suits that ever came up in the circuit court yesterday, before Judge Rohnhert. He claims that his wife had never been lawfully married to him, having had a husband living at the time she married him. For this reason Judge Rohnert was asked to declare the marriage null and void. But when her story was told the judge did not grant Stod-dard's request, but instead, ordered that he pay his wife money enough to make her defense! Stoddard has been married four times.

Stoddard alleges that a year after he married Frances Poppin he discovered that she bad a husband living, by name William E. McPherson. In support of this strange statement, all he could produce was the marriage li-cense of McPherson and Frances Pop-pin, and a birth certificate of their Harry F. Chipman started in to Harry F. Chipman started in to cross-examine Stoddard and drew from him that he was getting $1,100 per year, that one of his sons was paying $4 per week and the other $3,50 per week for board, and that at the time week for board, and that at the time he married Frances Poppin she was matron at the Woodbridge street sta-tion, receiving $50 per month. At first he said he did not get her pay, but afterwards he made her pay the gro-cery bills. He admitted that he con-tinued to live with her after he had discovered that she had a husband discovered that she had a husband living, but said he had ignored her. He said that he gave her a strip of eight-for-a-quarter tickets in the last year, a parasol, a dollar and a pairs of shoes. Afterwards, he said that one of his sons graye her $3.50 per that one of his sons gave her $3.50 per week, but she had to pay the gasoline and milk bill out of that. The milk bill, he claimed, only amounted to $1.50 per month, although there were eight in the family. She claims that the in the family. She claims that the $3.50 had to be spent on the family.

MRS. STODDARD'S STORY. MRS. STODDARD'S STORT.

Mrs. Stoddard, who is a comely woman, was called to the stand and told a story that visibly affected everyone in the court room.

"I was young," she began in a frank way, "only 16, and did not know the world. I was brought up and educated by my samt on Washington avenue. ed by my aunt on Washington avenue. I met McPherson. He promised to marry me, but afterwards would not To deceive my aunt, he got a marriage license. But afterwards my aunt would not let me stay in the house.

McPherson told me to go my way and he would go his."

She almost broke down when she told that after her child was born Mc Pherson left her. Then she got a posi-tion as matron, met Stoddard, and told her story to him. He married her. "He called my innocent little boy bad names that, oh, your honor, I do not want to repeat," she sobbed. "He so ignored me that he would walk over me in the house if I did not get out of day was a sandwich .that a neighbor gave me. I have been starved by him and his children. I needed underclothes, and he brought me a lot of cotton to made them with, but I did not know how to do so." Stoddard acknowledged that he made his wife eat in the dining room, while he and his children ate in the kitchen, and that he bought her the cotton for underclothes. He naintained, however, that there was always plenty left for her to eat. 'Your honor," said the poor woman heart-rending voice, "it was a a wful marriage."

McPherson

The claims that McPherson

The met him; parried at the time she met him; that he afterwards obtained a divorce and he afterwards obtained a divorce and married again. McPherson will be produced in court Saturday morning. Mrs. Stoddard in a letter to the lieu-tenant spoke regretfully of the fact that he had struck her twice and had used such terrible language to her that she could never forget it.

"I think, said Attorney Chipman, that I will show up the condition of affairs on Twenty-third street.' Mrs. Stoddard claims that the neighbors have helped to feed her and given her car fare and other little neces-

MARKET QUOTATIONS.

The Telegraph Companies Intend t Cut Them off After July 31.

Chicago, July 21.-Both the Postal and Western Union Telegraph Companies have decided to abandon their Board of Trade quotations after July 31. The decision to abolish the service is the result of failure to arrive at an agreement with the board of directors regarding the terms which the telegraph companies considered unjust, and as to the restrictions the unjust, and as to the restrictions the Board of Trade desired the telegraph companies to exercise in their service of the quotations outside of Chicago, in spite of sundry decisions of the courts. The telegraph companies say the quotation service is the life of the Board of Trade, and predict much trouble if it is discontinued. ture American Brides.

Two noted Turks—and both of them devout Mohammedans—have taken Christian brides. One bride was an American widow who went with her father, American Vice Consul Tewey, to Constantinople; the other is a German dentist, who went to the same city to practice on Turkish teeth. Both women, of course, became Mohammedans when they married, as it meant too much to the men to leave the country, and dans when they married, as it meant too much to the men to leave the country, and they could not retain their positions there with Christians for wives.

But the men made some concessions, also. One of them settled $25,000 upon his bride as a guarantee against future fickleness; and the other made a solemn vow, before

God and man, that he would never take an additional wife—which is quite a vow for a Turkish gentleman to make. The story of these two remarkable weddings is thus told by a Constantinople correspondent:

"The only daughter of a prominent American (the American Vice Consul here), a pleasing young widow, fell violently in love with a gallant and rich young Egyptian Bey. The betrothal took place and an elegant trousseau was ordered at one of the finest houses in Pera—a matter in which the finest houses in Pera—a matter in which the young Bey took the liveliest interest.

but the father was firm.

"The young couple, however, took the law into their own hands and eloped. Mr. Tewey forthwith went to the palace and had a petition drawn up demanding of the Sultan his rightful justification. The answer of His Majesty was most gracious. An irade was given that the bride was to go home immediately and be reconciled to her parents. The Bey was to marry her at once, and, on penalty of losing his lucrative post, settled the desired sum on his bride.

"All commands were executed within a few days from the irade, and the wedding few days from the irade, and the wedding took place at the bride's house. The cere-mony was strictly Turkish, and the bride looked pretty in her magnificent white silk dress, of which the veil had been sent specially by an Egyptian Princess. The newly married couple spent their honey-moon in Athens, and soon the former bright American will be presented to the well known character in Turkish and Euro pean society, and, it is said, much feared by the Sultan, owing to his royal Kurdish

"I was taken with severe headache," writes Thomas A. Swarts, Box 102, Sub-Station C. Columbus, Ohio, then cramps in the stomach, and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble, and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. I just gave money to the doctors whenever I thought they would do me any good, but the more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of chair, and I got so thin I had given up to die, thinking that I could not be cured. Then I saw one of my neighbor boys and he said. "Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself." The first bottle helped me so I thought I would get another, and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (x) pounds. Speaking of the Toronto bowling tourna-nent the Toronto Star says :- Chatham was lucky in winning their first game by de fault, but they are keen bowlers and deserve all they got; in fact, many wished they would win the trophy, as it encourages outside clubs to enter the competition annually if some one of them should secure the principal prize. This is the second year in three that Chatham has been the runner-up.

That drawn, squinting expression seen on the faces of many older people seen on the faces of many older people, is often erroneously attributed to age, or "a life of care" or "raising a large family." Such alleged reasons may occasionally be valid ones, but the fact still remains that these unnatural facial conditions are often due to defective eyes and the need of right reasons to remove myschlar and nerlective eyes and the need of right glasses to remove muscular and ner-vous strain. Save your nervous en-ergy. Let good glasses do the work now imposed on over-taxed muscular and nerve force. Glasses to fit any eye. E. J. MacIntyre, leading optician, opposite Grand Opera House.

To The Planet,—The management of the L. E. & D. R. This morning, for in-stance, we were held half an hour in the yard while some shunting was be-ing done. Surely the passengers could have been landed first and this shunt-ing done afterwards. Business men want to get to work as close to nine o'clock as possible: ten is altogether o'clock as possible; ten is altogether too late. As for the Blenheim delay every day, it appears strange that two trains, one having only nine or ten miles to run from Ridgetown, and the other only seven miles from the Eau, cannot connect any closer than 15 or 20 minutes. Interesting Letter from Barrister Charles Macdonald.

Took Him Three Weeks to get There-Curious Facts About the U.ty of Gold.

W. R. Peck, proprietor of the Rankin House, has received the following letter from Barrister Charles Macdonald who left Chatham recently to take a court position at Dawson City:

Court House, Dawson Y. T., July 2nd, 1900

Dear friend,-I have now been here or more than three weeks, and am taking advantage of the holiday to drop you a line. It took me about three weeks to get in after leaving fo-ronto. The actual travelling time was ronto. The actual travelling time was not more than 14 or 15 days, but we were delayed on account of low water between here and White Horse. The trip is by rail to Vancouver or Scattle thence to Skagway by steamboat, a four or five days ride, from Skagway to Bennett, B. C., 40 miles, on the White Pass & Yukon R. R. For this 40 miles you pay $10. From Bennett 40 miles you pay $10. From Bennett to Cariboo Crossing you again take a steamer, and up to this summer it was steamer from Bennett all, the way, but now at Cariboo Crossing you again take the railway to White Horse, at 25c. per mile. From White Horse to Dawson the steamers ply, There are least fifteen steamboats plying a esent between these last name points and it is said that it will be impossible for them to move all the reight that is lying at White Horse.

I MET CAPT. McLEAN, Wallaceburg, at Bennett. He came here on Friday night on the El Dorado of the Peterson Line, of which boat he is master. I think he has a good job. He asked about you and I gave him all the news I could. The boats coming in here are flat bottomed stern-wheelers, drawing from 18 inches to five feet, according to the load. Up to two weeks or ten days ago, at some of two weeks or ten days ago, at some of the bars they could only get about 24 inches, and as a consequence many of them were held up. They vary in length, these boats. Many of them are about 175 feet long. Navigation about here is difficult and dangerous, as the streams are rapid and rocky. he boats running down from here to t. Prices are and wilt be high. The first cost of an article has little to do with its price It is the cost of bringing it in that price It is the cost of bringing it in that tells. It costs as much to bring in a pound of hay as a pound of tea. Hay at present is worth 20e per pound or $400 per ton; oats, cheap at 10c to 12c per pound, as a consequence hay is fed light and plently of oats; beef, fresh, is $1 to $1.25 per lb; outs; beet, fresh, is $1 to $1.25 per 10; mutton and fresh pork the same; bacon and ham 75c per 1b; fresh fish 75c to $1 per 1b, and sait 50c to 75c; eggs cheap at $1 per doz, likely a dollar a piece in winter; potatoes 5 to 8 lbs. for a dollar; onions 50c portatoes 5 to 8 10s. for a dollar; onions 50c per lb.; apples 25c to 50c each. Just now oranges and lemons are cheap, oranges $1.50 to $5 per dox, lemons $1 50 per dox. Cow's milk $4 per gal, canned stuff 50c per can; butter 90c to $1 per lb., but it is gift edge, and so on, but no one minds these things as wages, etc., are in accordance. Laborers get from $6 to $10 per day and in the mines alway $1 per hour. You cannot get a meal anywhere for less than a dollar and such a dinner as you set up at the Kankin House cost from $3 to $5. Laundry is a trifle: white shirts 75c, can 20c, collars 20c, soft shirts 50c, night shirt 50c sox 20, handerchiefs 10c or 81 per doz. At all the best hotels and saloons drinks are 50c and where they sell whiskey and beer for 25c they always charge 50c for mixed drinks. Elected to Parliament of Wight. Capt. John Seeley, of the Imperial Yeomanry, owes the seat in the British parliament he will occupy at the next session wholly to his wife, who during his action in South Africa, has conducted his campaign with brilliancy and success. It is not at all unusual for English women to help their husbands in a political canvass, but never before has a woman alone and unaided taken the stump and conducted such a skilful and vigorous campaign as Mrs. Seeley did in the hotly fought contest in the Isle of Capt: Seeley is the son of a wealthy colliery owner and a brother of the member from Lincoln. When he was obliged to go to the front with the Hampshire troop of the Yeomanry, of which he is captain, it seemed as though he must give up all hope of go-ing to parliament. But Mrs. Seeley ing to parliament. But Mrs. Seeley was determined that he should secure the seat and set about an energetic canvass in his belief. Time and again, when she spoke from the same platform as her opponent, Mr. Baring, it was evident that her pretty face, soft voice and pleasant smile had counted more than his soundest arguments and most elo-quent periods. The voters were sway-ed by her fascination, and when she asked the mothers about their babies in that indescribable manner which shows kindness without a touch of condescension she secured a powerful

Mrs. Seeley took the wind out of Mr. Biring's sails by doing a very clever and womanly thing right at the close of the campaign. She wrote a letter to the voters which she had lithographed and circulated. A more touching and at the same time a simpler letter was never issued in a political contest. After asking the electors to vote for her husband, Mrs. Seeley said: his friends and neighbors as member from the Isle of Wight, and you will realize how anxious I am for his suc-These words proved irresisti ble. Capt. Seeley more than doubled the majority of the successful candidate in the last election. Of course to few cavaliers say it was Mafeking that few cavaliers say it was Marking that carried the day for Capt. Seeley, but everybody knows that it was the cap-tain's pretty wife and her letter. Mrs. Seeley is a niece of the Earl of Erne. Her father is Col. Henry George Lewis Chrichton, brigadier of the Portsmouth volunteer brigade. She is in her thirtieth year and her husband recently completed his thirty-second year. They were married in 1895 and have three beautiful children.

A LETTER FROM CORP. BURRELL Fred. Faubert has received another letter from Corporal Burrell, of the first Canadian contingent, dated at Norval's Pont, June 18. In it Corp. Burrell says that he has received no letters from Canada for some time, because the real has all been sent to the letters from Canada for some time, be-cause the mail has all been sent to the front. He has heard nothing of his regiment since he was wounded near Kroonstadt. | Speaking of this fight, Burrell says: At Kroonstadt they (the Boers) blew up a railroad bridge and wrecked a train with a few Brit-ish softers; They shot and killed every one who was on the train, enevery one who was on the train, en-gineers and all. I claim that is where Lord Roberts is making a mistake in giving Boers who have laid down their giving Boers who have laid down their arms passes to return home. They are the ones who are doing all the damage. Now they have again mobilized and are wrecking trains and blowing up bridges. They should be taken prisoners and kept until the war is over, because a Boer cannot be trusted the length of his nose. I hope you got the Orange Free State flag I sent you. The Free State is now called the Orange River Colony. Please write Orange River Colony, Please write soon, God Save the Queen. Yours

A BOTHWELL SHOOTING.

Eighteen year old Lad Puts a Builet Through His Neck.

Bothwell, July 21.—Fred. Poynter, the 18-year-old son of the proprietor of the Poynter House, this town, lies at his home in a precarious condition, with a bullet wound through his neck. Just how the shooting oc-curred is difficult to say though the theory advanced is that this is another "didn't know it was loaded" case. The revolver was discharged while in the victim's hands. The weapon from which the bullet was fired, is of the cheap variety, and was left at the hotel last week by some Results of promotion examination in en o'clock Thursday young Poynter went to his bedroom, and shortly af-terwards the household were startled by the loud report of a pistol and the piercing cries of the victim. His father was the first to arrive on' the ther was the first to arrive on the scene, and to his horror he found his only son lying on the floor with blood ozing from a hole in his neck, under the chin, where the bullet entered, and also at a point of exit at the back of the head. The bullet went dangerously near the jugular vein, and may prove fatal. The doctors, however, think he will recover. It is said young Poynter had been reproved by his father for staying out late, and went to China. London, July 21. — In the house of commons yesterday, Mr. A. J. Balfour, the first lord of the treasury, said it was impossible in the present state of the law to prohibit exportation of arms to China, but as the matter was extremely pressing a bill would be in-troduced to give the government the necessary power. Such a bill was sub-sequently introduced in the house of Lords by Earl Halsbury, Lord High Chancellor. The bill prohibits the ex-portation of arms or ammunition to Ohina under severe peralties.

JAPANESE DO NOT SWEAR.

Many good things can be said of apan and the Japanese; but nothing reflects more credit upon the people than the fact that profanity is a vice entirely unknown among them. In mawer ito an inquiry on this subject the Ram's Horn gives this interesting information: "Yery high and competent authority asserts that there is in the Japanese language no word that is equivalent to an eath. Not only is there no native word in which profanity may take refuge, but there is no imported word. During the last ten years, foreigners have added thousands of new words to the language; but not one profane word has been incorporated. In this respect Japan is believed to stand alone among the nations. Many good things can be said of

LOVE'S TRIUMPH.

A STORY OF LOVE AND WAR.

BY MARY J. HOLMES, Author of "Lena Rivers," "Edna Browning,"

"Tempest and Sunshine," Etc., Etc.

The light was behind her, and Will, aw her distinctly, as he went up the avenue, and he stopped a moment to look at her. She was very pale, and uch thinner than when he saw her ast, but never, even on her bridal day, and she seemed so beautiful to him as then, when leaning from her window and apparently listening for something. It was the sound of his footsteps as he came up the walk which had atracted her attention, and when it censed so suddenly as he stopped under the trees, she felt a momentary pang of fear for burglars had been very common in the town that summer. Possi; ly this was one of the robbers, and se was thinking of alarming the house, when the figure emerged from inder the shadow of the trees, and me directly up beneath the window, which made Rose's blood curdle in her veins, called softly: Had the dead come back to life? Was that her husband's voice and that his step in the lower hall? Rose had supposed the front door bolted. She had not heard it open, and now, when the steps sounded upon the stairs, her heart gave one throb of fear, as all the old superstitions stories of New England lore rushed to her mind. Perhaps on this anniversary of his death he had come back to see her. And perhaps-Rose did not finish the sentence, for the opening of her own door disclosed the wasted figure of a man wearing the army blue, his face very pale, but light ed up with perfect joy as he stretched his arms toward the shrinking woman by the window, and said: "Come to me, darling; I am no ghost." Then she went to him, but uttered no sound. Her heart was too full for that, and seemed bursting from her throat as she laid her head upon the besom of her husband, and felt his arms around her waist and neck. Her stillness frightened him, it was so unlike her, and, lifting her from the floor, he took her in his lap, and said to "Speak to me, Rose. Let me hear your voice once more. You thought I was dead, and you've been so sorry." "Yes; killed at Gettysburg," came gaspingly at last; and then a storm of ears and kisses fell upon Will's face, and Rose's arms were thrown about his neck, as she tried to tell him how great was her joy to have him back again "I have been so lonely," she said, "for everybody is gone. Jimmie and Annie, and poor Tom, too, is a prisoner at last, so mother and I are all alone,

"How shall I tell him," she thought, and her eyes went from his face to the basket and chair where baby's clothes

The little white dress, with its shoulder knot of blue; the flannels and the soft wool socks were all there in plain sight, and Will saw them, too, as his eyes followed Rose's. "Rose tell me, what is that? What does it mean?" he asked, and then, without a word, Rose led him into the djoining room, where in his crib slumbered her beautiful boy,-their beauti ful boy, rather. He was hers alone no orger, for the father was there now, and the happiest moment he had ever known was that when he knelt by his baby's cradle, and felt how much he had for which to thank his Maker. He could not wait till morning before he heard the sound of his first-born's voice. and he took him at once in his arms. every pulse thrilling with pride and exuisite delight, as he felt the soft baby hands in his own, and looked into the beautiful dark eyes which met his so wonderingly, as baby awoke and gazed up into his face. It was not afraid of him, and Rose almost danced with joy as she saw it smile in its father's face, and then turn slyly away.

"It was so terrible till baby came last Christmas," she said, beginning to ex-plain how they believed him dead, and how much she had suffered. "Even baby did not make me as glad as it ought," she continued, "for I could not forget how happy you would have been to come home and find him here, and now you've come. God is very, very good; I love Him now, Will, better, I hope, than I love you, or baby, or any-thing. I've given baby to Him, and given myself, too, but He had to punish me so hard before I would do it." Then together the reunited couple knelt and thanked the Father who had remembered them so mercifully, and asked that henceforth their lives might be dedicated to His service, and all they had be subject to His will. There was no more sleep in the Mather mansion that night, for by the time Mrs. Carleton and the servants had recovreturned soldier how pleasant and beau-tiful his home was looking. The people of Rockland had not in-tended to have much of a celebration on that Fourth of July. The churchyard was too ful! of soldiers' graves, and the war clouds were still too dark over the land, while the battle of the Wilderness, where so many had perish-ed, was too fresh in their minds to admit of much festivity; but when it was known that Will Mather had come home the town was all on fire with excitement. Every bell was rung, and the cannon of Bill Baker memory bellowed forth its welcome, while in the evening impromptu fireworks attested to the people's delight. Then followed many days of delicious quiet, in which Will told his wife and mother the story of his wanderings, but said very little of his life in Salisbury. That was Especially was he grateful to Paul Haverill, whose name became a household word, together with that of Charlie and Maude de Vere. Of her Rose thought so often, wishing she could see her, and resolv-

But everything pertaining to Tom was shrouded in gloom. The last they heard he was in Columbia, while Jimmie still pined in Andersonville, if indeed he had not died amid its horrors. Exchanged prisoners were constantly arriving at Annapolis, where both Mrs. Simms and Annie were, and every letter from the atter was eagerly torn open by Rose, n hopes that it might contain some news of her brothers. But there wa one, and the mourning garments which, with her husband's return were exhanged for lighter, cirier ones, seemed only laid aside for a few weeks until word should come that one or both of her brothers were with the dead whose graves were far away beneath a South-

CHAPTER XXIX.

Of the three captives, Will Mather, Jimmie and Tom, the latter had suffered the least as a prisoner of war. A strong Freemason, he had found friends in Columbia, where chance threw in his way a near relation of his dead wife and a former classmate. Though firmly believing in the Southern cause, Joe Hrskell from the first befriended Captain Carleton, whom he finally helped to escape, giving him money, and, so far as he was able, directions where to go and whom to ask for aid. Tom's imprisonment had been of short duraion, and thus it was, with vigor unnipaired and spirits unbroken, that he found himself free on that very night when Will Mather lay sleeping in the cave among the mountains of Tennessee. But that "Refuge of Safety" was neany, many miles away, and Tom's route to the land of freedom was a longer and far more dangerous one than Will's had been. Still Tom had in his favor health and strength, together with a knack of passing himself off as a Southerner whenever an opportunity was presented, and so for a week or more he proceeded with comparatively little trouble; but at the end of that time dangers and difficulties beset him at every step, while more than once death or recapture stared him in the face, either from the close proximity of his pursuers, or the pertinacity of the blood-hounds which were set upon his track. Escape at times seemed imhe found himself in a negro cabin, and an occupant of a bed whose covering, though impregnated with the peculiar sweetness and cleanliness to the tired and footsore man, who nearly all his possible, and Tom's courage and strength were beginning to give way, when one night toward the last of June, oder of the sable-hued faces around him, seemed the very embodiment of life had slept in the finest linen, with lace or silken hangings about his bed. For linen now there was a ragged quilt, and the bed was festooned with cob-webs, while from the blackened rafters hung bundles of herbs and strings of peppers, alternated here and there grimy articles of clothing which old Hetty had washed that day for her own "boys," and in consequence of the rain had hung in her cabin to dry. Coarse, heavy shirts they were but Tom, as he watched them drying on the pole, fell to coveting the uncouth things, and thought how soft and nice they would feel on his rough flesh Then he thought of home and Rose, and wendered what she would say could she look in upon him in that negro hut, with all those stalwart boys sitting by, while Hetty, their mother, cooked the corn-cake, and fried the slice of bacon for supper. Two sat just where Tom could see them, while the third was near the door, keeping a constant watch on the circuitous path leading from the cabin to a large dwelling on the knoll, —"Marsr's house,"—where to-night a number of young people where assembled in honor of the return of the son and meny battdes, and had a taste of prison life at the North. Though bitterly opposed to the Union ists, Arthur was truthful, almost to a fault, as some of his auditors thought to whom he was recounting the incidents of his prison life. Comfortable beds, decent bread, well-cooked meat, with plenty of pure air and water, he had received from the hands of his enemies; and once, when for a few days he was sick, he had been fed with cast and jelly, and tea quite as good is flicity could make, he said. And this he talked more than one present thought of the Southern prisons, where so many men were dying from starvatien and neglect; and one young girl's eyes flashed angrily, and her nostrils quivered with passion as she burst out. with the exclamation: "That's the story most of our primers tell when the come back to us. Think you a like report will be carried North, if the poor wretches ever live to get there? I think it a shame to allow such suffering in our midst." This speech, which had in it the ring Unionism, did not startle the hear ers as much as might be expected. They were accustomed to Maude de. Vere's tspoken way, and they knew that when she first came among them she was on the Federal side, and had opposed the secession movement with all the force of her girl nature. As yet o harm had been threatened her, for Maude was one to whom all paid de-ference, and her clear arguments touching the right of secession had done auch toward keeping alive a feeling of hymanity for our prisoners in the fami-ly where for months she had been a

Squire Tunbridge-or Judge, as he was frequently called—was her near relative, and as his only daughter had ed only two years before, and he was lonely in his great house, he had vited Maude to visit him, and insistupon her staying as long as possible. first he had laughed at her Yankee eferences, but when the deaths at alisbury and Andersonville increased o fast, he shook his head sadly and rofested against the cruelty and noget of the Government. "He did no pelieve in killing men by inches," he aid; "better shoot them at once." And till he would not willingly have harored a runaway on his premises, for fear of the odium which would attach o him if the fact were known.

And so, when late that night, when Tom lay sleeping in Hetty's cabin, and lietty, up at the big house, was waitng upon the guests and making secret signs to Maude de Vere, there came a band of men into the yard in pursuit of an escaped Yankee, the Squire rose at once, saying that no one could possibly be hidden on his plantation unless the blacks had secreted him. The ne gro houses were close by, they could look for themselves. He had supposed his servants leval, but there was no telling in these perilous times; and the old man's face flushed as his Southern blood fired his zeal for the Southern

In her evening dress of white, with r bends of glossy black hair bound like a coronet around her regal brow, Maude de Vere stood leaning upon the piano, her eyes shining like burning oals, and her lips slightly parted as she listened to the conversation, and then darted an anxious glance toward the spot where Hetty had been standing a moment before. But Hetty had disappeared, and under cover of the dark-ness was running and rolling and slipging down the steep wet path, which ed to her cabin door.

Arrived there, she seized the sleeping Tom by the arm, and exclaimed: "Wake up, mars'r, for de dear Lord's sake! De Seshioners is come, and will be here in a minute! I'm mighty 'fraid even Miss Maude can't save you!" Tom was awake in a moment and fully alive to the danger of his condition. From the house on the knoll, he could hear the excited voices of his pursuers, and the sound made every pulse throb with fear. "Tell me what to do," he said, and

"Kin you bar smotherin' for a spell? If you kin, got under de of straw tick, and lie right still and flat, and you, Hal, buckle into mars'r's place, as if 'twas you who've been lyin' here all de

Tom did not hesitate a moment, and had just straightened himself under the straw bed, and drawn a long breath as he felt Harry's body settling down above him, when steps were heard coming down the path, and a young man's voice asked of Hetty if she had any strangers there-"any Yankees, you know; because if you have-" the young nan paused a moment and peered out into the night to make sure that no one was listening, then, in a whisper, he added. "Keep them safe, and remember, Fleetfoot knows all the passes of the mountains between here and Tennes-

A suppressed "Thank God!" might almost have been heard beneath the straw bed, while old Hetty exclaimed: "The Lord bless Mars'r Arthur and Miss Maude, too. I know it is her

And Hetty was right, for Tom Carleton owed his escape from that great peril to Maude de Vere rather than to Lieut, Arthur. When the order was given to search the negro quarters, Arthur had seen that in Maude's face which constrained him to follow her when she beckoned to him to come out upon the piazza,

"Arthur," she said, putting her lim to his ear, "remember the kind treat ment you received from your enemies, and be merciful. Don't let them find him, for there is a Yankee soldier down in Hetty's cabin. She told me to-night. Search her house yourself. Throw them off the track. Anything to mislead them. Be merciful. Do it, Arthur, for my sake." Always beautiful, Maude de Vere was dazzling so now, as she stood before the young officer pleading for Tom Carleton, and Arthur Tunbridge was more irfluenced by her beauty than by any party feelings. Assuming a fierce, determined manner, he went back to the rsuers and said:

"It's perfectly preposterous that one of those Unionists should come here for protection, when it is well known what we are. Still it may be. There's no piece of effrontery they are not capable of. I know them well, just as I know every nook and corner of the negro cabins. Stay here, gentlemen, and take some refreshment while I search the quarters myself."

Arthur Tunbridge wore a lieutenant's uniform. He had been in the army from the very first; he had fought in the lieutenant's had been a prisoner for the lieutenant's had been a prisoner for the lieutenant bettle had been a prisoner for the lieutenant lieut nuny a battle; had been a prisoner for four months, while his father was known to be a staunch Sece was ready to sacrifice all he had for the so just and righteous. There could b no cheating in such a family as this; and so, while Mande de Vere wore her most winning smile, and with her own hands served cake and coffee to the soldiers, Lieut. Arthur went on his tour of investigation, and brought back word that no trace of a runaway had he found, notwithstanding that every cabin on the premises had been visited. A savage oath was the answer to this report, but something in Maude's eyes kept the soldiers in check and made them tolerably civil, as they mounted their horses, and, with a respectful good night, rode off in an opposite direction

With a feeling of security after hearing from Hetty of Maude de Vere. Ton came out from his hiding-place and ventured to the open door of the cabin where he stood looking at the "big house" on the hill, from which the guests were just departing. He could hear their voices as they said good night, and fancied he could detect the clear, well-bred tones of Maude de Vere, in whom he began to feel so deeply interested. He could see the flutter of her white dress as she stood against a pillar of the piazza, with Arthur at her side, but her back was toward him, and he could only see her well-shaped head, which sat so erect and proudly upon her shoulders. She was very tall, Tom thought, comparing her with Mary Annie and petite Rose, as she walked across the piazza with Arthur, who, from comparison, seemed the shorter of the two. Profoundly grateful to her as his probable deliverer, Tom went back the cabin and began to question Hetty with negard to the young lady. Who was she, and where did she live, and how came she so strong a Union-

"She's Miss Maude de Vere, bred and orn in the old North State, somewhars near Tar Run," Aunt Hetty said. Her father was killed at first Bull Run, and then her mother died, and she went to live with her uncle off toward Tennessee in de hills. She's got an awful sight of money, and heaps of niggers,-lazy, no 'count critters,-who jest do nothin' from morn till night. She and Miss Nettie, Mars'r Tunbridge's gal, was great friends at school, and Miss Maude was here when she died, and has been here by spells ever since. Young mars'r think she mighty nice, but dis chile don't 'zactly know what Miss Maude do think of him. Reckon he's to) short or too secessionary to suit

This was Hetty's account of the young lady, who at that very moment was listening with a defiant look upon her face to Arthur Tunbridge's remonstrances against what he termed her trensonable principles.
"They will get you into trouble yet.

The war is not over, as some would have you think. The North is greatly divided. Be warned of me, Maude, and do not run such risks as you do by openly avowing your Union sentiments. Think what it would be to me if harm should befall you, Maude."

Arthur spoke very gently now, while a deep flush mounted to his beardless cheek, but met with no reflection from Maude de Vere's face. Only her eyes kindled and grew blacker, if possible, as she listened to him, first with scorn, when he spoke of treason, and then with pity when he spoke of himself, and the pain it would cause him if harm should come to her.

Maude knew very well the nature of the feelings with which her kinsman, young Arthur Tunbridge, regarded her, At first she had been disposed to laugh at him, and his preference for an Amaon, as she styled herself; but Artuhr had proved by actual measurement that in point of height he excelled her by half an inch, while the register showed that in point of age he had the advantage of her by more than four years, though Maude seemed the older of the

"Don't be foolish, Arthur, nor enter tain fears for me," she said. "I am not afraid of General Lee's entire army, nor Grant's either, for that matter, My home at Uncle Paul's has been beset alternately by either party, and I have held a loaded pistol at the heads of both Federal and Confederate, when one was for leading away Charlie's faverite horse, and the other for coaxing off old Lois to cook the company's rations. No, I am not afraid, and, if ne dewn in Hetty's cabin safely to Tennes-

Arthur's face grew dark at once, and he said, half angrily:

"Maude, let that man alone; let them Il alone, It is not womanly for you evince so much interest in such people. For your sake, I'll help this get away, but that must be the lust; nd remember, 't is done for your sake, with the expectation of rewerd. Do you

ALLEVIATING HUMAN DISTRESS

Helpful Words For Those Engaged Works of Benevolence-A Rich Reward Assured For Them at the Last When the Victory Is Won

Washington, July 15 .- Dr. Talmage, who is still traveling in northern Europe, has forwarded the following report of a sermon in which he utters helpful words to all who are engaged in alleviating human distresses and shows how such work will be crowned at the last; text, ix, 39, "And all the widows stood by him weeping and showing him the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with

The sick look up gratefully into her face as she outs her hand on the burning brow, and the lost and the abandoned start up with hope as they hear her gentle voice, as though an angel had addressed them, and as she goes out he lane eyes half put out with sin think they see a halo of light about her brow and a trail of glory in her pathway. That night a half-paid shipwright climbs the hill and reach es home and sees his little boy well clad and says, "Where did these clothes come from?" And they tell him, "Dorcas has been here." In another place a woman is trimming a Dorcas bought the oil. In another place a family that had not een at table for many weeks gathered how, for Dorcas has

No bulletin flashing from the palace gate telling the stages of a king's lisease is more anxiously waited for than the news from this benefactress.

Alas, for Joppa there is wailing, wailing! That voice which has utso many cheerful words is hushed; that hand which has made so many garments for the poor is cold and still; the star which had poured light into the midnight wretchedness is dimmed by the blind ing nists that go up from the river of death. In every forsaken place in that town, wherever there is a sick child and no balm, wherever there hunger and no bread, wherever there is guilt and no commisseration, wherever there is a broken heart and comfort, there are despairing looks and streaming eyes and frantic gesticulations as they cry, "Dorcas

Peter urges his way through the crowd around, the door and stands in the presence of the dead. What demonstration of grief all + about him! Further, we see Dorcas the benefactress. History has told the story of the crown; epic poet has sung of the sword; the pastoral poet, with his verses full of the redolence of clover tops and a rustle with a silk of the corn, has sung the praises of the plow. I tell you the praises of the needle. From the fig leaf re; prepared in the garden of Eden last stitch taken on the gare, for the poor the needle has wrong wonders of kindness, generosity an enefaction. What a contrast between the practical benevolence of this woman and a great deal of the charity of this day! This woman did not spead ner time idly planning how the poo of the city of Joppa was to be eved; she took her needle and releved them. She was not like those ersons who sympathize with imagin ry sorrows, and go out in the street nd laugh at the boy who has upset is basket of cold victuals, or like hat charity which makes a rousing speech on the benevolent platforn and goes out to kick the teggar from the step, crying, "Hush your miser-able howling!" I will put one earnest hristian man, bard working, against ve thousand mere theorists on the ubject of charity. There are a great pany who have fine ideas about hurch architecture who never in their life helped to build a church. There are men who can give you the his tory of Buddhism and Mohammedan ism who never sent a farthing for evangelization. There are women who talk beautifully about the suffering of the world, who never had the courage, like Dorcas, to take the

Mrs. Retson at Matagorda, appeared on the bat tlefield while the missiles of death were flying around and cared for the wounded. Is there a man or woman who has ever heard of the civil war in America who has not heard of the omen of the sanitary and Christian commissions or the fact that before the smoke had gone up from Gettys-burg and South Mountain the women of the north met the women of the south on the battlefield, forgetting all their animosities while they bound up the wounded and closed the eyes of the slain? Dorcas, the benefactress. I come now to speak of Dorcas, the lamented. When death struck down that good woman, oh, how much sorrow there was in the town of Joppa! I suppose there were women there with larger fortunes, women, haps, with handsomer faces, but there was no grief at their departure like this at the death of Dorcas. There was not more turmoil and upturning in the Mediterranean sea, dashing against the wharfs at that seaport dashing than there were surgings to and fro of grief because Dorcas was dead. There are a great many who go out of life and are unmissed. There may be a very large funeral, there may be pe a very large luneral, there hay be a great many carriages and a plum-ed hearse, there may be high sound-ing eulogiums, the bell may toll at the cemetery gate, there may be a very fine marble shaft reared over the resting place, but the whole thing may be a falsehood and a sham. The of God has lost nothing, the world has lost nothing. It is only a nuisance abated. It is only a grum-bler ceasing to find fault. It is only an idler stopped yawning. It is only dissipated fashionable parted from the wine cellar, while on the other hand no useful Christian leaves this world without being missed.

The church of God cries out like the prophet. "Howl, fir tree, for the cedar has fellen!" Widowhood comes and shows the carments which the departed had made. Orphans of the sleeping benefactress. Reclaimcomes and kisses cold brow of her who charmed it away from fin, and all through the streets of Joppa there is mourning mourning because Dorcas is dead. When Josephine of France was carried out to her grave, there were a great many men and women of pomp and pride and position that went out after her, but I am most affected the story of history that on that day there were ten thousand of the poor of France who weeping and wailing until the air rang again, because when they lost

Josephine they lost their last earthly friend. Oh, who would not rather Oh, who would have such obsequies than all the tears that were ever poured in the lachry ancient cities? There may be - no costly sarcophagus; there may be no elaborate mausoleum, but damp cellars of the city and through the lonely huts of the mountain gles there will be mourning, mourni mourning, because Dorcas is dead 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

I speak to you of Dorcas the resur-rected. The apostle came to when The apostle came to she was and said, "Arise, and she sat In what a short compass the great writer put that "She sat up!" What a time there must have been around that town when the apostle brought her out among her old friends! How the tears of joy must have started! What a clapping of hands there must have been! singing! What laughter! Sound it all through that lane!

down that dark alley! Let all Jon pa hear it! Dorcas is resurrected! You and I have seen the same thing many a time; not a dead body resuscitated, but the deceased coming up again after death in the good accomplished. If a man labors up to 50 years of age, serving God, and then dies we are apt to think his earthly work is done. No. influence on earth will continue the world ceases. Service rendered for Christ never stops. A Christian woman toils for the upbuilding of a church through many anxieties, through many self-denials with prayers and tears, and then she dies. is 15 years since she went away. Now the spirit of God descends upon that church, hundreds of souls stand up and confess the faith of Christ. Has that Christian woman, who went away 15 years ago, nothing to do with these things? In 1855, when some of the soldiers came back from the Crimean war to London, the Queen of England tributed among them beautiful medals called Crimean medals. Galleries were erected for the two houses of Parlia-ment and the royal family to sit in. There was a great audience to witness the distribution of the medals. colonel who had lost both feet in the battle of Inkermann was pulled in on a wheel chair; others came in limping on their crutches. Then the Queen of England arose before them in the name of her government and uttered words of commendation to the officers and men and distributed those medals, inscribed with the four great battlefields—Alma, Balaklava, Inkermann and Sebastopol. As the Queen gave these to the wounded men and the wounded officers the bands of music struck up the nation al air, and the people, with streaming eyes, joined in the song:

God save our gracious Queen! Long live our noble Queen!

God save the Queen! And then they shouted, "Huzza, huz-za!" Oh, it was a proud day for those returned warriors! But a brighter, better and gladder day will come when Christ shall gather those who have toiled in his service, good soldiers of Jesus Christ. He shall rise before them, and in the presence of all the glorified of heaven he will say, "Well cone, good and faithful servant," and then he will distribute the medals of eternal victory/not inscribed with works of righteousnes which we have done, but with those four greaf battlefields dear to earth and dear to heaven-Bethlehem, Na zareth, Gethsemane, Calvary!

Cures Weak Men Free

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, variousele, shrunken or-igans, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the dif-ficulty, never fails to restore the or-gans to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this won-derful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L. W. Knapp. M. D., 1710, Hull Bidg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

SOMETHING NEW IN COMEDY. "Has your new comedy any nove features?"

"Yes; it's a funny comedy." The English "Society for the Pre-vention of Consumption," presided over by the Prince of Wales, was recently addressed by Sir William Broad bent, who stated that it was definitely known that every case of consump tion began with a germ communicated from some other case. There is no such thing as inherited consumption. There may be local weakness which tends to consumption, but the germ has absolutely to be planted in that weak spot before consumption can en-sue. This ought to confort thousands of people who have "weak chests" or "weak lungs." They are not foreor-dained victims of this dread disease. All that is needed to bid absolute defiance to this deadly scourge, is to be able to strengthen the weak lungs, and build up a strong body. The answer to this need is found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It so purifies the blood and increases the od supply, that disease is thrown off, and the weak organs are nourished into perfect health, which defies germs of every kind. People, given up by doctors, emaciated, bleeding at the lungs, with obstinate, lingering coughs, are being cured every day by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." It is a strictly temperance medicine containing no alcohol, whisky or other

TWENTY LIVES LOST. Tacoma, Washington, July 21.—News of upward of twenty deaths lately near the deltas of the mouth of the Yukon river were brought down by the steamer Sequola and the transport Antenian. Among those who are known to have perished during the fierce gales which have swept the mouth of the river recently are a party of four Boston men, whose names are recorded at the Russian mission as Mike O'Brien, M. It is generally the woman whose hus band is making but a slender salary—and who has a houseful of daughters to marry off—who strains her purse to its utmost capacity to entertain lavishly, though she realizes by doing so she will experience the utmost difficulty in making both ends meet. The husband despairingly tries to remonstrate with her in a mild way.

"A party one week, a sociable the next, a euchre the following and a theatre party the next—what man in my position could stand it?" he groans. But his wife is inexorable.

"Do you want your houseful of daughters old maids on your hands—like the family across the way?" she asks, grimly, knowing that one remark will settle the business, if anything can.
"I ask, isn't it your duty to marry your daughters off suitably?" she goes on energetically. "And in order to do this young men must be brought around. Where they pass a delightful evening they will be sure to call again." "But the fellows often meet other wire here at my expense, and so and "But the fellows often meet other girls here, at my expense, and go and marry them," he argues, warming up to his theme.

"Of course one must stand that chance," she responds, adding grimly, "but we are too careful to let that happen, if ingenuity can prevent it. By that I mean we are careful never to invite girls here who will outshine daughters; there's a great deal

I get the cheapest servant I can find, and pay her scarcely living wages. I don't buy the choice things in the market. If I did, we could not make out at all. I watch the advertisements of sales for bargains, and buy almost everything at less than cost, as they phrase it. I walk up and down town to save paying five cents car fare each way. The girls and I have so many acquaintances, we which is now the assurance auxiliary of every Grand Lodge in Canada, took place yesterday. Dr. Fowler, the president, oc-cupied the chair. That is an immense item in saving the expenditure of money for the noonday luncheon, for the girls cannot curtail their appetites, as I can I tell you there is no end in the way a woman has to pinch and save to give a few entertainments during the winter, when she has marriageable daughters."

That generally settles the matter. He cannot see that any of the girls has caught a beau from this useless extravagance. It is stated on pretty good authority that Hon. J. C. Patterson, Lieut. overnor of Manitoba, whose term expires at the end of September, has urchased the fine property known as Rosebank, at Gordon, near Amherst-burg, for many years the residence of J. H. Morgan. If the report be correct it looks as if Mr. Patterson intended once more taking up his residence in Essex.—Comber Herald.

A ROUGH BLOW. The steamer Imperial was compel ed to leave the West Dock, Pelee Is and, at about 1,30 Tuesday afternoon A fierce storm came up and Capta McCormick, decided to cut loose and get away without passengers and freight. The wind was such that he could not make the north dock, so he headed for Put-in-Bay. The wind dashed the water into sheets 20 feet high. Capt. McCormick says it wa the most sudden and fiercest wind storm he ever sit on Lake Erie. From the time he left the Island until they reached Bar Point the decks of the Imperial were constantly hed. There was little rain. The mail from Pelee (West) was brought Amherstburg Echo.

Have you Catarrh Taint ?-Here' strong evidence of the quickness and sureness of that wonderful remedy, Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder: "For ers was a victim of chronic tarrh—tried many remedies, but no cure was effected until I procured and used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. life and that of your fami y depends upon their reliability and quality. You can't tell very much about the quality of a vehicle by simply looking at it. The paint and varnish effectually hides the quality of material. Vehicles must be bought largely on faith-faith in the honesty of the manufacturer. We have been selling them for about fifty years and are now among the largest manefacturers, These facts speak volumes for the quality of our goods. You take no chances.
