QUALITY

in the flour means quality in the bread and the pastry you bake. Without quality behind your efforts, no knowledge or skill can bring good results. Better be without the skill than without the quality.

"BEAVER" FLOUR

is the highest development of blended wheats, embracing the rich health-giving properties of Manitoba Spring wheat and the carbohydrates of Ontario Fall wheat, which make delicate, white, light bread and pastry.

Remember, it is for bread and pastry, both. With BEAVER FLOUR in the house, you only need one kind to attain the best results in every form of baking.

BEAVER FLOUR means economy as well as efficiency. Ask your grocer for it to-day.

CHAPTER XXVII.
PUT TO THE TEST.

"He will be poor," she murmured, and a rich Oh, no, no, no that!

"Yes, yes," he said, nothing. "Have I not broken down the barrier? You love him, Lillian—you will not say 'no'?" he pleaded, anxiously.

With a long breath she drew back from him, and given it to me! she breathed.

He nodded with a smile.

"Yes, but you can give it back to him, my darling. You will do so." She looked up with a fixed gaze.

"Would it make you happy?" she asked.

"Happier than words can say," he answered. "It is the dearest wish of my life."

"Then—then," she said, slowly, with a strange look, "I—I will do it." Too moved for words he drew her to him.

"Thank Heaven!" he murmured, brokenly. "Ah, if you knew how happy you have made me! It was the one thing wanting! Could I die and leave my child without a protector, leave her to buffet the world and all its pitfalls alone? No, no! Now I am content; with Harold by your side, you are safe in heaven, safe!"

"Safe!" she murmured, with a sudden start. "Yes—I shall be safe!"

He smoothed her hair caressingly.

"Yes, I can cross the river now, darling, feeling that some atonement has been made. Lillian, I have never spoken of your mother— With a start she shrank from him, but he held her in his arms, and drew her closer to him. "It is too late now! I did her a great wrong, Lillian—no wife was more foully misjudged by her husband, but—but—I can make some atonement to her child. I have only one wish left, my darling, and that is to be spared to see you Harold's wife, and the future Lady Woodleigh. Call him, Lillian. Let me see you join hands, and feel that my hope will be fulfilled. Go, dear, he is waiting."

She rose, and, with slow, faltering steps, opened the door.

Harold was in the hall and came toward her. Sir Talbot rose, and, steadying himself by the table, pointed to her. "Take her, Harold; she is yours," he said, and sank into his chair again.

Harold turned to Lillian; with lowered eyes she held out her hand; Harold took it and pressed it to his lips; then suddenly she drew it from him and threw herself on her knees beside Sir Talbot with a cry of alarm.

The old man's head had fallen backward, and his eyes were closed. He had fainted.

Harold sprang forward to the bell, and Sir Talbot's man entered. With a comprehensive glance he took in the situation in a moment.

"Send for a doctor at once," said Harold, but the man hesitated.

"I don't think it's much, sir," he said, with a grave concern. "Sir Talbot has been taken like this off and on for the last ten years. He's seen the doctor, sir, and he can't do anything. There's a medicine here, sir, and he went to a small cabinet, which I always give him. Let me come, sir, and he forced some dark fluid between the thin, white lips.

"For more than ten years," said Harold, agitatedly. "Why have you not told me?"

"I dared not, sir," said the man, respectfully. "Sir Talbot's orders were too strict. He never liked any fuss, as he called it, and was adverse to anyone knowing of these attacks. He will be all right directly, sir, it's his heart. He's coming too now. If you will pardon me, I think you'd better leave him to me, sir; Sir Talbot don't like anyone to see him like this."

Harold rose, troubled and sorrowful, but Lillian still clung to the old man's arm.

Slowly he opened his eyes, looked down at Lillian with an ineffable tenderness, and then, as the valet came forward, waved him languidly aside.

"No, Parker," he said, "my daughter and Mr. Harold will help me. We have—kept our secret a long while, but it is out now."

Harold and Lillian raised him between them, and with an arm on each he went slowly along the corridor to his room. At the door he turned and laid his hands on their heads.

"God bless you, my children," he murmured, and passed in.

Harold put out his hand to Lillian, but with a strange look she sank down on the mat and leaned her head against the door.

"No, no," she said, brokenly. "Leave me here."

Harold stooped and raised her in his arms.

"Come, my darling," he said, "you cannot stay here."

"Yes, it is my place! I am his daughter!" His daughter.

He hesitated a moment, but it would never do to leave her here.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
SKELETON KEYS.

"I won't hear of it! It would make me thoroughly unhappy."

It was Sir Talbot who spoke; he was sitting up in a chair in his room, Harold on one side and Lillian on the other, both trying to persuade him to postpone the excursion to the Giant's Breastplate.

Excepting that he was rather paler than usual, Sir Talbot seemed none the worse for his illness of the preceding night, and all Harold could say could not shake him from his resolve that the picnic should take place.

"I am quite well, as well as I have been for years. I am accustomed to these fits, and—and, in a word, I cannot think of spoiling your enjoyment."

"Let me stay," murmured Lillian, bending over him.

He looked up at her and drew her arm round his neck.

"On no account, my darling!" he said. "Why, if you remained behind, where would the picnic be? Think of Harold, my dear," he added, fondling her hair; "you'd spoil his pleasure. Besides, you are looking pale this morning; I frightened you last night. Go, my darling, and enjoy yourself, and come back with the color on your pretty cheeks, and the light in your eyes which I love to see. The sight of you will do me more good than all the medicine in the world. There! take her away Harold!" he said, and gave her a playful push with his weak hands; and they went, but reluctantly.

Preparations for the start were already being made; Sir Talbot's attack had been kept secret from the guests, and they were merely told that he did not feel well enough to accompany them, but hoped to be able to meet them all at dinner.

It was a large party, and still further additions were to be made to it on the road.

Beside the large open landau, there was a phaeton and a wagonette; the provisions or "the grub" as a facetious guest, Lord Rayburn, called it, was to follow in Harold's dogcart. They were to pick up Laura Warner at the Priory and call for Gerald at the Grange. The duke and duchess had been asked but they had declined, the duchess urging as an excuse that they didn't want any old women, and the duke frankly declaring that meals in the open air always gave him the gout. But Gerald was looking forward to the outing with all the ardor of a schoolboy.

The start occupied some time; at the last moment they were waiting for Lillian, who had gone to Sir Talbot's room to say good-by.

She came down the hall presently, looking a perfect picture in her pretty morning dress of soft silk, all to match, from her embroidered shoes to the hat and sunshade.

Not a man there but that looked at her covetingly.

In some mysterious way, Harold's good fortune had leaked out—his manner to her at breakfast had probably done it—and he had received more than one whispered congratulation.

"You are a lucky dog," said Lord Rayburn, with something like a groan. "If I had only been in time to play Romeo that night, I might have cut you out—who knows? Just my confounded luck!"

Harold had saved a place beside him in the mail phaeton and stood at the bottom of the steps, waiting for her. The landau, containing Lady Myrtle, a countess, and some men, had gone on; and the bays in the phaeton were so getting to follow that Harold had almost to lift her in his arms to get her into the seat.

It was a lovely morning—one of those autumn mornings which we get in England sometimes, to make up, possibly, for the short and too often disappointing summer.

The Evening Chit-Chat
 By RUTH CAMERON

MY DOCTOR'S younger daughter—she says in our town—married beneath her. "Such a blow to her mother's pride," they add, how could Jane have done it?"

How beneath her?—you may wonder. Because he can't support her? Because he is of an objectionable family? Because he is a man without intelligence or intellectuality?

Not any of these things. He makes a good salary for a man of his age, and will undoubtedly make much more as time goes on. His family is of sturdy American stock, and he has as fine and clear an intelligence as is often my pleasure to hold converse with.

How beneath her, then?

Why, he works with all his hands. He is a chauffeur.

He knows every cog and wheel and nut of his machine as a lover of horses knows a horse's points. He can take his car to pieces and put it together again. I went out with him in the slums of a very crowded city once, where the children were almost as thick as cobblestones, and I could think of no other word by which to call the skill with which he guided that machine but genius.

The doctor's eldest daughter made a much better match—so they say. She married another doctor. He has not much practice, and I don't think he ever will have, because he simply hasn't the ability. He was pushed and tutored through college. I would not have him take care of my sick cat. I can't talk with him a half hour without being desperately bored. His intelligence and his information on

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would be of little use. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired, and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in erecting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after Eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

THE SLEUTH-HOUNDS OF SCOTLAND YARD.

A Mysterious Council of Seven. In the great, rather grim, red brick building which, like a medieval fortress, dominates the Thames within a stone's throw of the Houses of Parliament, there is a large barely-furnished room which holds more secrets than any others in London, with the possible exception of the room of Cabinet mysteries. It is the nerve centre of our great and complex detective system, which controls the currents radiating all the world over for the discovery of crime; and it is in this secret chamber that the mysterious Council of Seven hold their meetings to unravel the tangled skeins of tragedy.

If walls could speak, the walls of this room could unfold stories of romance, tragedy and mystery such as would drive the writers of fiction to despair; for there is no form of crime which has not been dissected and laid bare there in all its complex and naked hideousness. But walls are dumb; and so are the members of this secret Council, who recognize that silence is one of their most powerful weapons.

Unknown Outside. This Council has not long been in existence; in fact, it is practically unknown to the outside world. It is only a short time since it occurred to the authorities of New Scotland Yard that, in place of usual conferences between detectives engaged in the solution of some probable crime, it would be well to appoint a body of their cleverest detectives—men of acute and astute brains, with long experience of crime and criminals—to combine their efforts in solving the principal mysteries; and, as might be expected, the plan has worked admirably.

The greatest care has naturally been taken in choosing men for this responsible work. It was important that the Council should, as far as possible, cover the whole range of crime. The detective who has specialized in murder or burglary may know little of, say, coiners and beggling-letter impostors; and thus the leading expert in each of the principal branches of crime was chosen—men who know practically all that is to be known about their own branch and its professors, and whose names even are a terror to evil-doers the whole world over.

How It Works. But let us see how this Council works. Suppose that a mysterious murder has taken place in London. Within a few minutes after it has been reported to the nearest police station the detective-inspector and his assistants are on the spot making investigations. Meanwhile the news has been flashed to New Scotland Yard; and almost before the local men have well commenced their inquiries a member of the Council—the man whose special province it is—appears on the scene and takes charge of the operations.

If the problem is a fairly simple one, as it often is, and the murderer is speedily run to earth, the services of the Council are naturally not required. But if there is no sufficient clue to the assassin, or he has made his escape good, the Council is at once summoned and takes the case in hand.

All the available evidence is placed before it, and thoroughly sifted. deductions are made, a plan of campaign is drawn up, and the whole of the complicated and far-reaching machinery of Scotland Yard is set to work under the collective guidance of the cleverest detective brains in England. How energetically and thoroughly the Council does its work has been shown in the recent Crippen case, in which a closely-meshed net was in a few days thrown round the world for the capture of the criminal.

Head of the Council. And who are the members of the secret Council? Naturally, they vary from time to time, due to retirements and other causes, but the principal members have so far remained the same. The head of the Council is, by virtue of his office, Sir Melville Macnaghten, Chief of our Criminal Investigation Department—a man who probably knows more about crime than any other in the United Kingdom.

Few men look less like a catcher of criminals than Sir Melville, who suggests rather a prosperous and genial stockbroker than a Sherlock Holmes; but all the same, he is an expert in crime to the tips of his fingers. Apart from his long experience of crime and its professors, he is a born detective, if ever there was one. So intuitively clever is he that it is said he can tell, after a few minutes' conversation with a criminal, of what particular branch he is a specialist, and his resource and tenacity are just as wonderful as his instinct for discovering clues.

Known All Over the World. After Sir Melville, who controls the Council, its Principal member is Superintendent Frost, whose fame and prowess as a detective are world-wide. As a sleuth-hound of justice he has won laurels in every part of the world—from North America to Australia, and from California to Spain. There is scarcely a criminal in Europe who does not know of and dread him.

He has nerves of steel and muscles of iron. So ignorant of fear is he that he thinks as much of breaking a sixpence or bending a poker round his neck as of tackling a gang of desperadoes single-handed. He has risked his life a hundred times, and has always come out unscathed. A typical sample of his daring—one of scores—was when a few years ago he boarded an American cattle boat at Queenstown to arrest a murderer of enormous strength and ferocity.

Life and Death Struggle. At sight of Frost the murderer whipped out a formidable knife and sprang at him. Then ensued one of the most terrific life and death struggles ever seen. The detective seized the murderer in his powerful arms, and, writhing, struggling, swaying the two men fought frantically up, and down the deck. Again and again the assassin tried to bury his knife in Frost, who finally succeeded in throwing him and pinning him to the deck, disarmed and bound him. Frost's clothes were slashed to ribbons, but he was scarcely even scratched!

Another valuable member of the Council, entitled, perhaps, to rank next to this terror to criminals, who, by the way, is one of the most amiable and genial of men, with a ready smile and laughing blue eyes, is Chief Inspector Dew, who has figured so prominently in the Crippen case. Chief Inspector Dew is an importation from Bow Street, where he made a very wide and useful acquaintance with criminals. A slight, quiet man rather suggesting a keen solicitor, the Chief Inspector is a terror to evil-doers. No man is keener in scent than he, or better able to run a criminal quickly to earth. He probably knows more about London's crime and criminals than any other detective, and is specially the enemy whom house-breakers most dread.

Other Members. Among other recent and present members of the Council is Chief Inspector Dew—tall, debonair, gentlemanly, and a past-master of disguise—who has made a special study of the sharpers of all kinds of Europe and America; and who, in a variety of characters, ranging from a milkman to a Piccadilly lounge, has made many notable captures of criminals.

Others are Chief Inspector Collins, an expert in the lower walks of crime, to whom the slums of London are an open book; Chief Inspector Kane, quiet-mannered, but "sharp as a needle" and as tenacious as a bulldog—when once his "teeth are in" he never lets go; and Chief Inspector Scott, a man of rare organizing talent and the widest knowledge of crime, who is noted for carrying out successfully any task he undertakes.

—TIT-BITS.

SHANNAHAN UP TO MRS. TUCKERS.

OUTHARBOR VISITORS.

The gathering at Tucker's last night was an interesting one, and I was much surprised when I entered the abode. Mrs. Tucker's brother-in-law had arrived from Harbor Grace, also his eldest daughter, Hannah, and both were getting their board free at Tucker's expense. After chatting awhile Hannah and her esteemed daughter left for the Nickel, and myself and Tucker lit our pipes and breathed two sighs of relief.

"That's a smart looking girl, Tucker," said I. "How long are they going to stay?" Tucker looked at me with a double row of wrinkles in his forehead, shook his head and said: "Look here, Tim, don't you ever get married to an outport girl, for if you do, you don't know where 'twill end."

"How is that," said I. "Tucker, why 'tis my firm belief outharbor women make the best wives?"

"Oh, yes," said he, "that's all right as far as it goes, but there's another side to the story. Did you see these two who just went out, well they happen to be related to the missus, and everytime they come over here, which is about once every month, they put up here. There is nothing so tormenting as to have outsiders hanging around your home."

"But where is the missus to-night?" asked I. "I didn't see her around."

"Oh no, she's gone to do some little business for that young woman you saw here; she does all the shopping for Hannah."

"That's very convenient for Hannah," said I.

"Very indeed," said Tucker, as he gave the old cat a lash that nearly ended her days.

"Well," said I, "it's just like this, I were in your place I'd tell those people I didn't want their company. It would be more honest, than to be grumbling in their absence."

"You'd do a lot in your mind," said he, "when you get married, old boy, you'll find out that you haven't all the say, there are others to be reckoned with."

"Do any more of the family ever come to spend a few days with you," asked I, hardly able to keep from laughing.

"Do any of them come, is that what you say? Are there any of them that don't come?" said he, "ask me that and you'll be handling the mark. Why now the sealing voyage is coming round, every one of them that is able to ask for a berth will be over. Oh I can see a grand, a glorious time it sight for me when the sealing time comes round."

"But don't you or the missus ever go over to return their visits and stay a time with them," I enquired as I tried to look sympathetic.

"Yes, oh, yes, we went over, oh, yes, we were over there before, or in the words of the old song, we were there last summer and we'll go there no more."

"How is that," said I, "were you not treated well?"

"Yes, too well, that is if you call lugging berries on your back three miles, and picking berries till your back was nearly cracked off. Well, oh, yes, we were treated well. You know that is the pastime over there, berry-picking. That's the rest you get when you go over to spend a nice quiet time on the Labrador. You wouldn't work half as hard and you wouldn't be under compulsion to any one, only Dr. Greenfall."

"How long will your company stay?" said I.

"Well, it all depends, when Hannah's da comes over, he generally got a big lot to do, first and foremost, he will have to go down to see the editor of the Royal Gazette, about not getting the papers regularly; that will take about two days. Then he will have to interview the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Mr. Piccott, about something for some one else, and that will occupy about four days; then he will call down to see the man he deals with, and the man who slept with him in the same bunk in the "Proteus," in 1878, he'll take a long time to find him for I think he down in Mount Carmel, but anyhow it will help to prolong his stay, and it don't matter very much whether he finds him or not. By that time the House of Assembly will be open and if the session is anyway hot and heavy, Heaven only knows how long he will stay."

"You're to be pitied, Tucker," said I, "but you will have your reward in the next world; charity, you know, Tucker, brings its own reward."

"What are you saying?" said Tucker, "charity keeping that fellow, why he's got a hundred pounds in the Bank." Charity, how are you? I wish you a good time of it. Anyway, Shannahan, you have learnt a lesson to-night, look before you leap, see that there are no big frills on the family before you throw in your lot, or you'll be like me, calling the roll to see are they all aboard when they come over looking for berths in the spring of the year."

Just then Mrs. Tucker arrived. She was all frustrated and seemed to be working overtime.

"Good night, mam," said I, "you're looking the worse of the wear; what are you up to, forming a suffragate party or a dandelion expedition?"

"Well, Tim, I'm hard at it, since four o'clock this blessed evening. You know "Hen" is over here and he brought us over some barrels of caplin, a few quintals of fish, some tweed to make Tucker a new Sunday suit, a hat for me and a barrel of berries, and I had an awful time trying to get a horse. You can only get one horse now-a-days to haul a load like that, and that's Steve Williams."

"I should think so," said I, "why that's a load for the Great Eastern."

I called Tucker a side, when his wife went out, and I said to him, "Prepare a large room for that man."

"Why," said he, as he looked at me in despair.

"Why," said I, "can't you see the point, he's going to stay over here for always, he's going to end his days with you, no man would bring you all that auctioneer's stock that didn't intend to remain with you."

"Do you think so, Tim," said he, "say you don't believe it; pray to-night that he and his daughter will change their minds, do your best, Tim, for the sake of old times?"

"Look here, Tucker, there's an old saying, an 'old dog for a hard road,' now I want you to take a whinkle from me. When they come home to-night ask them to join you in prayers. Start the praying at ten sharp, walk on it for all you are worth. Pray as you never prayed before. Keep it up till say twenty minutes to one. I'll be over in the morning to hear the result."

"Well," said he, "Tim, I expect you'll find me a corpse."

I went over in the morning, Tucker had a smile on him a yard long.

"It worked splendidly," said he, "out of sight. I kept it up till 17 minutes to one, it was hard work, but the result was just as I expected, for they left 'Han' and 'Hannah'—both of them left by the morning train. I was up to see them off and I gave 'Hen' a pipe, a ten-center, so he wouldn't forget his pleasant time. Hannah wept, but they always do after soaking you for a week's board."

Revival of Cricket.

We congratulate Mr. Myler and those associated with him on their effort to revive cricket among us, and we hope that success will attend their efforts. The chief difficulties they will have to face will be suitable grounds for practice and matches. A desideratum in both cases is handiness to town, especially for practice, and without constant practice skill in handling the willow can neither be acquired nor retained when acquired. Another difficulty is the maintenance of a level pitch. This may be a large extent be met by the use of a cocoa-nut matting.

None of these difficulties is insurmountable, and with will and determination they may be overcome and an old-time and a distinctly English game may be revived and kept going. In speaking of the revival of cricket, it should be remembered that the game has not wholly died out, but

WILL REVIVE CRICKET.

An Enthusiastic Meeting at Bowings' Office.

In the offices of Messrs. Bowings Bros., last night a number of prominent and enthusiastic cricketers met to devise ways and means for the revival of the noble game of cricket in our midst. All present were grateful to see such interest taken in the movement, and after last night's convention it is safe to say that next season will see the game played as of yore and witness as much interest in it on the part of the public as was evinced some ten or twelve years ago, when exciting matches were played on the grounds at Pleasantville between such representative teams as the Shamrocks, Terra Nova's and Avallons.

There were present last night: Messrs. J. S. Munn, R. E. Job, R. F. Goodridge, A. Donnelly, F. Donnelly, P. J. Myler, C. Ellis, J. P. Blackwood, P. Berrigan, P. Wallace, J. Foley, H. V. Simms, J. Savage, J. CroTTY and members of the Press.

Mr. John S. Munn was moved to the chair on motion of Mr. P. J. Myler, to whose efforts and zeal in the cause the movement may be in a great measure ascribed. Mr. Chas. Ellis, another ardent wielder of the willow, was appointed Secretary. Mr. Myler then thanked all for their presence, and informed the meeting that he had interviewed His Excellency the Governor, His Grace Archbishop Howley, His Lordship Bishop Jones, His Honor Mayor Ellis, the Editors of the daily papers, the Commanding Officers of the City Brigades, the Principals of the Colleges and Schools, the Football League, the Presidents of the various Clubs and prominent people generally, all of whom promised their earnest support and hearty co-operation in the revival of the game amongst the young men and youths of St. John's. With the co-operation of these classes Mr. Myler believed that the object all had at heart would be attained and that speedily.

Mr. Myler then moved, and Mr. R. B. Job seconded that "An Association be formed, called 'The St. John's Cricket Association,' for the purpose of encouraging and 'fostering the game of cricket, with 'an open membership.'"

His Excellency the Governor, His Grace Archbishop Howley and His Lordship Bishop Jones were chosen as patrons of the Association.

The Premier, Sir E. P. Morris, Mayor or Ellis and the Commanders of the City Brigades were appointed Honorary Members, and the following were appointed as a Committee to make all necessary arrangements for the revival of the game:—T. C. Fitzherbert, P. B. Job, Hon. John Harvey, P. J. Berrigan, E. H. Davey, John Donnelly, R. F. Goodridge, P. Wallace, J. P. Blackwood, F. Donnelly, Dr. H. Rendell, C. W. Ryan, P. J. Myler and H. V. Simms.

There was considerable discussion as to the selection of proper grounds for matches.

A report was made that the Football League had given permission to the Association to play on St. George's Field, and to remove the grand stand so that the arena would be enlarged and greater scope given for "boundaries." Just then the meeting was informed that the League was not endowed with authority to grant such concessions, and that the Association would do well to receive such from the St. George's Joint Stock Co., the owners of the field.

Then the question of purchasing a property for the playing of matches was raised, and Mr. H. V. Simms expressed the opinion that the Parade Ground would be a fine site for the purpose, and that the Association purchase it. Mr. R. B. Job advised caution and did not wish that they be precipitated in incurring any heavy financial obligation at present, though he concurred with Mr. Simms in the idea of the Association acquiring a ground of its own. Mr. J. B. Blackwood suggested the bottom of Bannerman Park, and Mr. R. B. Job supported this, and he stated that in other countries matches were often played in public parks, though sometimes there was dissatisfaction as people trespass on the crease. Mr. P. Berrigan supported Mr. Simms' idea, and thought that it would be possible to devise a scheme whereby the cricketers could procure a ground of their own.

Mr. Job proposed, and Mr. Simms seconded the motion that a sub-committee be appointed to make the best possible arrangement for the acquiring of either St. George's Field or the Parade Ground for matches. The following sub-committee was then appointed in this connection:—Messrs. R. B. Job, E. H. Davey, J. P. Blackwood, P. J. Berrigan, P. Wallace, P. J. Myler, H. V. Simms, Chairman Munn and Secretary Ellis.

Sub-committees were then appointed to interview the Municipal Council and St. George's Joint Stock Co.

Crippen and LeNeve Charged With Murder.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Aug. 29.

Both H. H. Crippen, the American doctor, and Clara Ethel LeNeve were accused of the murder of Belle Elmore, the former's wife, in the formal charge read to them in the Bow Street Police Court to-day. Miss LeNeve was also charged with harboring and maintaining Crippen after the crime and while knowing that he committed it. During the proceedings Inspector Dew, who brought the prisoners back from Canada, introduced evidence to show that Crippen contemplated suicide while at sea, following his flight from this country. Crippen was quoted as declaring his companion knew nothing of the trouble in which he was involved, and Miss LeNeve was said to have protested her innocence. There was special interest in the character of the formal charge as the warrant for the arrest of the fugitives had merely laid at their door responsibility for the death of an unknown woman. The fact that both were accused of the murder of Belle Elmore, wife of the doctor, leads to the supposition that the mutilated body has been identified to the satisfaction of the authorities.

SPANDUA, Aug. 29.

The death of a woman and the illness of her husband and of a male attendant at the hospital of suspected cholera cases have caused the health administration of Prussia to take the most exhaustive precautions against a spread of the infection. Although the disease has not been established as cholera, all of the hospital attendants where the women died have been placed in quarantine, as have fifteen families in the tenement building where the family lived. A power factory, where the husband worked, has been disinfected and his fellow workmen placed under observation. A strong police line thrown about the neighborhood prevents an entrance to the tenement.

MOTHERS' "NOTIONS"

Good for Young People to Follow.

"My little grandson often comes up to show me how large the muscles of his arms are.

"He was a delicate child, but has developed into a strong, healthy boy and Postum has been the principal factor.

"I was induced to give him the Postum because of my own experience with it.

"I am sixty years old, and have been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for many years. Have tried all sorts of medicines and had treatment from many physicians, but no permanent relief came. I believe nervous dyspepsia suffer more than other sick people, as they are affected mentally as well as physically.

"I used to read the Postum advertisements in our paper. At first I was very nice indeed, and about bedtime I said to the members of the family that I believed I felt better. One of them laughed and said, 'That's another of mother's notions,' but the notion has not left me yet.

"I continued to improve right along after leaving off coffee and taking Postum, and now after three years' use I feel so well that I am almost young again. I know Postum was the cause of the change in my health and I cannot say too much in its favor. I wish I could persuade all nervous people to use it."

Cape Harrison Fishery

Mr. Moses Drover yesterday had a letter from the skipper of his schooner Toledo D. fishing at Cape Harrison. He says that there were then prospects of a fair voyage and that the night before they were all night splitting in the stage and had 100 gals. landed. The captain says that at least he will make a paying voyage of it. This is a far more cheering report than that last week from that section.

Expelled From Train.

By last evening's train coming to St. John's, Conductor Kelley in coming down Kean's Valley found a chap belonging to the South Shore on board, who he knew was trying to evade him, and when he asked him for his fare was met with the retort that the passenger had only 40 cents. Had he acted in a manly way the conductor would have given him the balance to pay his way to the city, but as he tried to do the trammelen he (the conductor) ejected him at Mount Pearl, and he had to walk to the city.

Became Dangerously Ill

While working at fish in the hold of the schr. Mildred Belle at Harvey & Co's. premises this forenoon, an old man named John Spencer, of Mullock Street, became suddenly and dangerously ill. He lost consciousness and it was feared for a while that he would die. Mr. Jeremiah Savage procured brandy which when administered revived him a little. He would not have a doctor when one was suggested and was later driven home in a cab where a medical man attended him.

Auto Accident.

Yesterday afternoon as Mr. Hugh Baird's auto was speeding in Topsail Road an accident occurred to it which came with in an ace of killing the chauffeur, a man named Ledrew, and Mr. Baird's son, Jack. The latter was driving, and as the machine sped in the road at a good clip it struck an object and turned turtle, then going over on its side into the drain. It covered both the occupants but the superstructure kept it from falling on and killing them. Jack Baird was badly cut about the head and the blood flowed in streams from the wounds received. The chauffeur was pinned under the machine, but though he was so badly cut Jack managed to extricate him, when the chauffeur whose leg was cut and bruised accompanied the other down to Funn's and the phone was utilized to call up his father for assistance. A cab was sent in and both were brought to town. Jack was taken to a doctor who put several stitches in the wounds in his head, while Ledrew was also attended to. The motor was badly smashed, and was later brought to the city for repairs.

Portia's Fishery News.

Capt. Fitzpatrick's report as to the fishery west is, that beginning at Bonne Bay 14 schooners belonging to that place had arrived from the Straits fishery, and the best fished of the fleet has 200 qts. while the generality of the craft are reported clean and do not certainly average 50 qts. The lobster fishery is all over and the catch is all being shipped away, mostly to St. John's. There is a good deal of fish at Rose Blanche and the fishermen are doing well, but bait is very scarce. Three Gloucester bankers were there when the Portia was coming down, waiting for bait. They were the Romance, Mabel B. Hynes and Smuggler, and they had done well with the fish. There were also three bankers at Burgeo waiting for squid. On that coast from Cape Ray down the fishermen are getting more fish than they usually secure at this season of the year. At Lamaline and St. Lawrence they are doing nothing. About St. Mary's Bay and at Cape St. Mary's, Cape Race and Cape Pine it is fair, but almost a blank along the South Shore.

Scottish Artists Coming

Mr. Murdoch, especially, is a distinguished painter, and the creations of his brush have earned for him a splendid reputation.

Floral Carpet for Procession

Montreal, Aug. 24.—It will be over a carpet of natural flowers that the Holy Eucharist will be carried through the streets of Montreal at the procession during the Eucharistic Congress. Not a square inch of the pavement will be left bare and tons of flowers will be used for the purpose, being spread on the ground all along the way, being a few yards in advance of the canopy covering the Papal Legate carrying the consecrated elements.

All Canada Contributes.
In anticipation of the event, the Sacred Heart League started a movement in April last for the raising of flowers, and thousands answered to the call from Nova Scotia to the Rockies. Everywhere in North America where there is a Catholic centre a few families have raised flowers for the Eucharistic Congress, the finest of which will be used to decorate the grounds and the balance to carpet the streets.

King George Revives Custom.

Cabinet Minister Will Attend His Majesty Everywhere.

London, Aug. 23.—It is apparent that King George does not intend, as his father did, to dispense with the attendance of a member of the Cabinet when he is away from London.

Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, it is announced, will be at Balmoral for ten days in attendance upon the King, others follow him in rotation, so that His Majesty always will have a Minister at hand during the vacation.

Formerly the Sovereign when away from London, in the country or on the Continent, was always attended by a Minister. The Minister was usually the Secretary of State.

King Edward did not always follow this tradition, and as often as not there was no member of the Cabinet with him when he spent long periods at Hamburg, Marienhead or Biarritz, twice a year.

Montreal, Aug. 26.—Information reached here to-night from St. Martin, Que., that a travelling showman with a bear had been attacked by the animal and killed. The bear was left unharmed. The keeper went to a saloon leaving the bear tied to a tree in the outskirts of the town, and on returning the man lay down to sleep, and the bear tore him practically to pieces.

Gentlemen:

As regarding our experience with your Ruberoid Roofing, beg to advise that about ten years ago we applied your 2-ply on our entire car shops, general stores and round houses, taking in an area of about 200,000 square feet, and since that time this roofing has never been coated with paint or any liquid and has cost us nothing for repairs during this period. We are now anticipating building new car shops, etc., and purpose using your Ruberoid Roofing.

We can heartily recommend same to anyone requiring a first class dependable roofing material.

Yours truly,

NOTE.—The above is an actual photograph of a large Concert Pavilion at Scarborough, North Coast of England, on a rough day at high tide, and goes to show what a severe test that Ruberoid Roofing can be put to. You will notice that the spray actually reaches over the roof, and it's a wonder the whole show is not washed away. It's proof of the wonderful resisting qualities of Ruberoid Roofing to the action of the sea water and high winds.

Dear Sirs:—Our factory was entirely destroyed by fire on September 10th last. The only roof left is one covered with Ruberoid Roofing. Upon examination, the roofing was found to be in fair condition. We are mailing you a photograph of the building.

A competitor who had sold me a "just as good as Ruberoid" roofing on one of my buildings, came to take a picture, thinking that it was his roofing, but learning that the building covered with his roofing was destroyed, could not do so.

We shall certainly cover our new plant with Ruberoid Roofing, which we can purchase from your local agents.

HOW TO ACT IN CASE OF FIRE.

Perhaps no single ejaculation is capable of producing so instantaneous and so widespread an alarm as the cry of "Fire!" Nor is this surprising when we remember that the fire fiend is each year responsible for an almost incalculable loss, both of life and of property.

Yet of all emergencies, none more than an outbreak of fire imperatively demands a preservation of one's power to act with coolness and decision. Often, by prompt and well directed action, the threatened catastrophe may be averted; the loss of property, and what is still more important, the loss of human life, may be avoided.

Fire drill nowadays has its place in the routine of every well-conducted scholastic establishment; nor can it be doubted that the capacity for prompt and intelligent action thus inculcated in the minds of young people of both sexes has, in emergency, proved the means of preventing appalling disaster. But while this capacity for combined action is very desirable, there seems to be a danger of fostering it at the expense of what one may term "fire education." Every child should be taught, by means of precept and experiment, what to do when a fire breaks out in his own house. He should be instructed how to go to work coolly and methodically, either to extinguish the flames, or, if necessary—to escape from the building. Lessons of this kind imparted by practical methods, would become a source of strength in after life, and would go far to check the recurrence of fire outbreaks, with their entailed loss of life and capital.

Take, for example, the case of an overturned oil-lamp. There is a sudden and alarming blaze; but if action is taken at once, the damage may be confined to the carpet, cloth, or whatever upon which the lamp actually lies. To throw water on the conflagration is useless. The burning oil will only be forced over a larger area. The aim should be, to absorb the oil and smother the flame as much as possible, and this may be best done by means of some non-inflammable powder—such as flour, sand, earth from the garden, or anything of the kind.

Another point worth remembering is the use of the soda-water syphon as an extinguisher. Suppose that a lamp or candle has ignited a curtain and that the flame has run up the fabric. A syphon of soda-water squirting over the flames, will work wonders. Not only does the force with which the liquid leaves the tube allow of its being directed well above the operator's head, but the carbonic acid gas with which the water is charged helps to deaden the flames.

Nutritive Hypophosphites

When a person feels "blue"—"all tired out"—"doesn't feel like doing anything"—cannot concentrate his mind on his work—feels weak mentally and physically—doubts his powers—complains of poor appetite and sleeplessness—suffers from headaches—then his nervous system is run-down and demands a good up-building tonic. Nervous exhaustion is a modern disease, caused by too close attention to business, overwork, worry, devotion to trying family cares overstudy, etc.

Nutritive Hypophosphites forms the best nerve and brain food known, and have restored thousands of sufferers to health. Large bottle, $1.00.

How to act for one's safety, or to assist another, in the case of burning clothing cannot be better told than in the words of Prof. John Marshall. He says: "If the dress of a woman catches fire, she should at once lie down on the floor, and should crawl in this position either to a bell-pull or a door, and call for assistance; or she should roll herself in a rug or blanket. In the event of a man rendering help, he should at once lay the patient down, take off his coat and roll her in it, unless he can obtain a blanket or rug, or roll her on the carpet. If a woman renders assistance, she must be careful not to allow her own clothing to touch the victim, but to hold a rug or blanket in front of herself while approaching the flames.

Prompt action without rashness or self-balking hurry, is the keynote of success in fighting the fire fiend. This applies especially to those who wake from sleep to find the house on fire. Not a moment should be lost, but there should be no wild rushing from a window to a door and back again. First an attempt should be made to get down the stairs. To escape through passages filled with suffocating smoke, tie a wet handkerchief over the mouth and nose, then crawl on the hands and knees, for the smoke tends to rise with the hot air, and will be less dense close to the floor.

If the whole of the lower part of the house is burning, and escape by means of the stairs is impossible, preparations must be made for leaving through the window. Tie all the sheets and blankets together by means of 'reef-knots,' which will not slip, no matter how much strain is put upon them. Then drop the bedding or mattress from the window, in order that there may be some kind of break in the event of a possible fall. Finally, make one end of your improvised fire-escape fast to the bedpost, drop the other end from the window, and after making sure that it reaches to, or almost to the ground, go down it boldly hand over hand. It should be added that in the case of inexperienced persons, there is always considerable risk of a dangerous fall resulting from this means of exit; therefore it should be undertaken only when all other means of escape have failed.

In conclusion, a few words may be added respecting the treatment of burns and scalds prior to the arrival of a doctor. The main point to bear in mind is that the affected part as quickly as possible. This may be done by dredging the part thickly with flour—if the skin is not broken—and not disturbing it for some time.

Any vegetable oil—such as salad, sweet, or linseed—may be used with advantage, a rag being soaked with it and used to cover the wound. A very good application is made by mixing equal parts of linseed oil and lime water, forming 'carron oil.'

Finally, it cannot be too strongly impressed that all clothing covering a burn must be removed with the utmost care. Never try to withdraw the injured limb, but cut the clothing away—in small pieces, if necessary—so that the injured surface may not be more damaged. Never hold a burn in front of the fire, according to the popular practice; this only increases the injury. Have your oil or other application ready for immediate use as soon as the clothing has been removed.—(Percy Collins, in the 'Scientific American'.)

A Weird Incident.

New York, Aug. 23.—A sleepy old doorman which had drawn a west side undertaker's wagon for years in its most approved funeral pace imagined a vain thing to-day and ran away, causing a weird accident.

After a wild flight of several blocks the horse and wagon plunged into the Hudson River. The doors of the waggone flew open and a casket containing a body floated down stream. The driver managed to save himself. The night watchman of a pier swam out in the tide and towed the casket ashore. The horse and wagon were finally lifted to a dock by a derrick.

New York, N.Y., Aug. 24.—Because her husband talked too much, as she put it, Mrs. Martin Coon sliced off his right ear to-day with a razor. "Yes, I cut off his ear, and I'm glad of it," said the woman when arrested. "He talked too much and that annoyed me." Coon, who is a marine engineer, was rushed to hospital, weak from loss of blood. His wife was held in $4,500 bail. She is 50 years old.

Wonderful cure brought about by DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD. It is only by watching the symptoms of nervous exhaustion and applying restorative treatment that you can ever hope to ward off locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

Mrs. E. J. Vanderburgh, of Eastern Welland Ave., St. Catharines, Ont., states:—"For twenty-one years I was badly afflicted with heart trouble, nervousness and cramps in the limbs, also twitching of the nerves and nervous headaches. I became weak, debilitated and emaciated. My condition was distressing and I was made worse through worry and loss of sleep.

"I tried a hundred remedies in vain. After having used half a dozen boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my old troubles had entirely vanished, and I was enjoying better health than I had since girlhood."

Such cases as this prove the wonderful efficiency of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. It cures in Nature's way by enriching the blood and for this reason enriching the blood and its benefits are lasting. 50 cts. a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Tourist Traffic.

Dear Sir,—What we are losing by the neglectful way things are managed in and around our city is probably beyond ascertaining, but we can at least see where we are losing something in a way that in other countries is counted a valuable asset and means of income, viz., tourist traffic. To begin with, our climate is temperate, cool and refreshing. That of the neighbouring continent, in summer, is hot, enervating and oppressive. But is that hot and oppressive climate dwell people whose wealth allows them to leave at will for lands beyond the sea, where they can recuperate and enjoy cool, fresh and invigorating air. What do they generally do? They plan a sea voyage, to land at some port or ports, there to stretch their limbs after the ship voyage and see points of interest ashore. Now these people have money to spend on this vacation or voyage of recuperation, and they want to spend it on their pleasures and comforts on this trip on pleasure bent. They will, moreover, if the place or places they visit give the attraction and the end desired stay awhile if there is fitting accommodation for them, and if they can find some one to guide and inform them where to go, and what to see. Otherwise they return with but a poor opinion of that place as their wants demand. Here, in and around St. John's is an ideal place for those people to come for these purposes as there is to be found in this fair world, in climate and scenery we cannot be surpassed, combining the opportunities of city life, viz., the Postal and Telegraph facilities, with a nearby intercourse with rural life. With one exception, a vital exception, the lack of hotel accommodation, and to these people the modern hotel is a vital necessity, and failing to find it all else is secondary. They come on the Red Cross boats, we call them "round trippers," but how do we know but many of them would prolong their stay if hotel and other accommodation and conveniences were to hand, instead of having them pack back on the same steamer after a stay of 2 1/2 days or so. Let us suppose that on landing here and seeing a bit of our attractions that parties would decide to remain even over for one trip, what to do to drive only for the sake of their money are killing "the goose that lays the golden egg." They do not by any means do what is the proper thing by these tourists, and this matter should be regulated. Messrs. Harvey & Co. and the Reid Nfld. Co. should look into this, and appoint some one to look out for this palpable and almost sure source of summer income. Look at the passenger list of the Borna and many more, to come if possible. Ah! fellow citizens, I'm afraid our infancy is still with us. I was looking this morning at a pamphlet of Norumbega Park, a suburban resort outside of Boston, I myself, have seen it, and I can say there are places here that could be made more delightful than Norumbega Park to attract visitors and always a delight to our local residents. To show the beauties of the Waterford Valley, the views from Middle Cove, Torbay, Point St. Lewis, and out to the great Atlantic would best all the Adirondack white mountains that are, and other spots would lick the Thousand Islands, Niagara Falls (except for volume of water) over and over again. We can if we go the right way to work have a tourist traffic equal to any, and if those who are interested would only go into consideration on this it would bear fruit a hundred fold.

vim and energy, and looking for something to see and somebody to show them where to go and see the local points of interest here and around St. John's. They want some person or persons to take them in hand and in an intelligent manner show and explain to them what they want to know, to send or bring them to those beautiful health-giving spots here, and to make their stay so pleasant with them. I myself, have experience as a driver of these tourists, and flatter myself that the questions asked by them on various local topics, places, etc. were answered in such a manner and intelligently as to add to their knowledge of our local history and ways and means of existence. This is another point in this matter. I'm afraid that many who rush to get them to drive only for the sake of their money are killing "the goose that lays the golden egg." They do not by any means do what is the proper thing by these tourists, and this matter should be regulated. Messrs. Harvey & Co. and the Reid Nfld. Co. should look into this, and appoint some one to look out for this palpable and almost sure source of summer income. Look at the passenger list of the Borna and many more, to come if possible. Notes From Harbor Grace.

Rev. Mr. Tombs, who has been supplying at St. Andrew's Church here for the past three Sabbaths, leaves this morning for St. John's en route to his home in Canada. Mr. Tombs' preaching was much appreciated by the congregation. At last night's service, in thanking the people for their kindness to him during his short stay, he expressed himself well pleased with our pretty little town.

Mr. Isaac Benson was taken suddenly ill yesterday and the services of Dr. Parsons and Dr. Strapp had to be quickly secured. Internal inflammation is, we hear, the cause of the trouble, and the case is a very serious one. It was thought an operation would be necessary, and that at St. John's, but at the time of writing the patient is too weak to undergo such a journey. This is the third case of a similar nature coming under the doctor's notice here lately. Another proof of the need of a hospital in this town, which we are now, thanks to the untiring efforts of the ladies, likely soon to see an accomplished fact.

Rev. Mr. Coffin, pastor of St. Andrew's, who has been resting at his home, Charlottetown, for several months, is expected back this week, as also Miss Wallace, teacher of Victoria Street school, from her vacation at Nova Scotia.

Master Ron Kent, son of Sergt. Jas. Kent of Placentia, who was on a holiday here to his aunt, Mrs. Scanlon, left for home on Monday morning last.

Misses Lizzie and Katie Anderson, of Montreal, who had been spending a time here, the guests of Mrs. Pickering, left for home by Thursday's express. The Misses Anderson are natives of this town, and their former friends were delighted to have them back, even for a short time.

Mr. G. Parsons, of St. John's, arrived in town on Saturday night in his motor car. He took a run down the Shore yesterday and left on the return trip last evening.

We thank Mr. R. T. Parsons, photographer, for a package of souvenir postal cards containing views of the Guy Celebration in the different stages, viz., Sham Battle, Landing of His Excellency the Governor, the Garden Party, the Regatta, Races at Bratol's Hope and several others. The packet contains seven views, put up in Mr. Parsons' well known style, and enclosed in a nicely printed and thoughtfully arranged envelope. This reminder of the Celebration will be valued by all who are fortunate enough to secure it.

Miss Winnie and Mrs. Hutchings, who were visiting their relatives, Mrs. Holt and the Misses Allan, at Greyhurst, left by Thursday's express for their home in Montreal.

The genial Secretary of the Guy Ter-Centenary Celebration lately received a letter from His Excellency the Governor expressing much gratification at the recent celebration and the whole-hearted and broad-minded way in which it was carried out. His Excellency's presence and influence helped in no small way to make this affair what it was, for which the citizens generally are grateful.

We regret to hear of the death at Sydney on Sunday, 21st inst., of Mr. William Smith (blacksmith), formerly of this town, and well known by many people both here and in St. John's. Mr. Smith had been in poor health for a couple of years, the trouble being Bright's disease. He leaves several sons and daughters to mourn their loss. He was 64 years of age.

We are looking forward to the Shamrock excursion on Wednesday next, as we know that a very pleasant time is in store for both citizens and visitors. Several races will be held on the harbor, and football, cricket and other sports at Shannon Park. We trust the weather may be favorable on the occasion.

Botwood Notes.

The s.s. Pythia is now loading at the A. N. D. Co. pier with pulp and paper. She will take about four thousand tons.
A man by the name of John Burt had his foot broken by a bundle of pulpwood falling on it. He was attended by Dr. Ames and was sent home by Capt. Storm.
There are seven electricians down from Grand Falls fitting the A. N. D. Co. staff house with electric lights. The plant also will be lit up with electricity, and probably the whole little town.
The A. N. D. Co. is starting to build for Mr. Harkley, the head book-keeper, a new dwelling house, which will be in addition to the eight which are just finished for the employees.

Belvidere Collection.

The annual collection for the Belvidere orphans will take place next Sunday. Rt. Rev. Mgr. Roche announced the fact at Prayers last Sunday evening. It is not necessary to make any lengthened appeal in reference to this collection. The mere announcement should be sufficient. The cause of the orphans is the cause of God, and the "Charity of Christ presseth us." The good Sisters of Belvidere are doing a noble and self-sacrificing work in caring for the temporal and spiritual needs of the helpless children committed to their care. The Catholic people in the city have always in the past most generously responded to calls on behalf of the orphans, and no doubt this occasion will show a like result. The collection will be taken at all the Masses on Sunday next at the Cathedral, St. Patrick's, Kilbride, Loky Bay, Mount Cashel and Littlefalds.

Good "Spurt" of Fish.

People from Placentia who arrived by last night's train say that the people of the Cape Shore have done very well with the fish this season. At Branch and neighbourhood for the past two weeks the fish struck off and little or nothing was done, but a couple of days ago big schools of cod again struck the shore, and the boats have been taking from 10 to 14 qts daily and all are thus assured of a good voyage. Up to the time the fish left the shore the average per boat was 100 qts.

Mr. D. Clatney, Sacristan of the R. C. Cathedral, who with his daughter made the round trip in the Portia arrived this morning, having enjoyed the vacation thoroughly.

Fads and Fashions.

Small buttons are now in favor.

Bead embroideries are highly fashionable.

Fringe is in great favor for dress trimming.

Practically everything is frilled in neckwear.

The bag of black patent leather is again seen.

Black satins are in highest favor for tailor-mades.

Long coats and coats of chiffon continue in favor.

Beige and brown are coming to the fore as colors.

The Persian parasol is the summer's bright, particular fad.

Feather trimmings are the chief characteristic of new fall hats.

New silk poplins promise to be among the favorites of fashion.

Dinner gowns of brown mousseline de soie or tulle are fashionable.

What they are losing in width new hats make up in additional height.

There is a generally revived fondness for all sorts of old-time ruffles.

Patent or enamel leather is the pet material for blots this summer.

Eyelet embroidery plays a large part in ornamentation of fashionable gowns.

End season summer hats are adorned with prodigious roses in great profusion.

Dotted or figured fabrics veiled with chiffon are much worn by older women.

There are some uncertain predictions that the short waistline will come in again.

Turbans are rising in height and also showing the narrow effect at the crown apex.

Many three-quarter sleeves, built entirely of puffs, are seen in out-of-door gowns.

Fine cloths in dull blue and rose tints are in demand for dressy afternoon frocks.

Narrow ostrich bands edge many of the new wraps and add an extremely smart touch.

Beaver is to have a great season in millinery, if early importations count for anything.

The correct and suitable shoe for a black satin tailor-made is the black suede or undressed kid.

Variations of the Dutch collar will probably remain fashionable as long as the warm weather lasts.

Beautiful coats are being made of cretonne, and this fabric may be said to have at last "arrived."

There is a noticeable tendency to get away from the kimono sleeve and to substitute puffed sleeves.

Among the cool fabrics for old ladies are fine black and soberly-tinted lawns, tussors and crepons.

For shirtwaists, special sets of cuff links and studs of coral, silver pearl or other stones are now worn.

White buckskin canvas pumps, with sizable self-coloured buckles figure among the smart summer footwear.

Shoulder straps of soft satin, chiffon and net are legion and there is no question as to their increasing vogue.

The Chanteclair craze tremendously increased the amount of bird trimming in millinery and it has by no means subsided.

Scotch plaid effects are exceedingly handsome in new silk blouses. These are especially effective for girls going to college.

A newcomer among gloves is an elbow-length glove of silk which has a band of openwork about the wrist in bracelet effect.

Girl Reported Missing.

The police were apprised to-day that a girl named Lucy Snelgrove was missing from her residence on Notre Dame Street, since Friday last. The girl boarded with Mrs. Pitcher, and on that day left to go to a picnic in the country since which time she has not put in an appearance at the house where her clothing and belongings are. It is not known where she went. When the matter was reported to-day Sgt. Savage was sent to investigate and if possible to try and locate the girl.

Slander by Phonograph

Arad, Hungary, August 22.—A novelty in phonograph litigation has arisen here.

M. Schwartz, a dealer in phonographs, was sued for slander uttered by one of the instruments. The trail of the slander suit disclosed amusing circumstances.

M. Schwartz has been disturbed at night by the singing of girls employed in addressmaker's shop across the street. He protested in vain. One noon when the girls were at their lunch they were shocked by a torrent of swearing from the "funnel" of a phonograph in the window of Mr. Schwartz's shop. The girls sued M. Schwartz for slander.

M. Schwartz testified that he did not know that the girls could hear the instruments and that he had not been testing some records he had bought.

The practical Judge had the phonograph record tested in court. Everybody recognized M. Schwartz's voice and he was found guilty and fined.

Venezuela Expels Ex-President Castro

Washington, August 22.—The entire Castro family, apparently, has been ousted from Venezuela. A despatch to the State Department from the legation at Caracas states that forty-six relatives of former President Castro have been expelled from Venezuela and have sailed for Porto Rico.

Late in 1908, President Castro left Venezuela for Europe. When he tried to return he was not allowed to land in Venezuela and has been kept out of that country ever since.

What was the occasion for the latter outbreak against the Castro family was not explained in the brief despatch to the department.

The Fogota sails at 4 p.m. to-day for the North and taking these passengers:—Mr. and Mrs. W. Pike and child, Master John Cornick, Miss Milligan, Messrs. McPherson, Hayward, Thorpe and Sellars, Misses Bartlett (2) and S. K. Bell.

Reported Man Shot.

About 5 p.m. yesterday a deaf mute of the West End, named McAllister, saw the flag at the Club House on the South Side Rifle Range at half-mast, and put out the report that a man had been shot up there. The rumour quickly spread through the West End and soon an anxious crowd of people went across the Long Bridge and up over the hill. The matter was reported to the police, and Inspector Collins with several officers went up to investigate. Needless to say there was no necessity for them to do so, and when they arrived at the range those there were surprised to see them and wondered what occasioned the furor. The trouble was caused by the red danger flag halliards becoming entangled so that the piece of bunting could not be hoisted to the top of the pole and so remained at half-mast.

Sunday night two glass decanters were found on Duckworth Street, at the foot of Prescott Street, and it is believed they were placed there with the intention of having a bike or motor car collide with them and puncture their tires. Dew's Dawdling Cost Some $25,000.

The Great Imitator of S. Holmes has in "Tay Pay," a Watson—Only "Tay Pay" "Watsonizes" Him in a "Different" and Humorous Fashion.

M. A. F. (T. P. O'Connor's) paper, has this to say of Inspector Dew: "With Inspector Dew in his private capacity, the public is not concerned. The information recently given to the world that he is domesticated and musical leaves the world still breathing. But Inspector Dew stands for the Criminal Investigation Department, New Scotland Yard, and their methods; and as such he is an absorbing picture, the more so that he has cost the country almost the price of an Old Master.

"Very briefly to recapitulate the facts of the case, Mrs. Crippen's disappearance on or about January 31st 1910. To her friends, her husband told an unconvincing story of her death in America.

"On June 28th these friends communicated their suspicions to Scotland Yard. Scotland Yard apparently was not much impressed. Anyway, the actual conduct of the case was handed over to Inspector Dew an officer of good record but of no particular distinction.

Dew's "Dazzling" Dawdling.

"Acting with almost dazzling rapidity, Inspector Dew calls on Crippen on July 6th—ten days later.

"To the ordinary man the advantage to be gained by putting Crippen on his guard is not quite plain. A sense of fair play is all very well, but to indicate to a man that he is suspected of murder is perhaps carrying our idea of "giving a man a chance" too far.

"Crippen has a pleasant chat with Dew, tells him another and a more plausible tale to account for Belle Elmore's disappearance, shows him over the house, and even takes him down to the fatal cellar, where the eagle eyes of the steth-hound of the law—do sleuth-hounds have eagle eyes?—detect nothing suspicious.

"Crippen promises not to run away, but, in a very casual manner, breaks his word and bolts next day, accompanied by Miss Le Neve.

"Crippen bolted on July 9th; it was not until July 11th that Inspector Dew, by a brilliant piece of detective work, discovered that the bird had flown.

Week's Weary Wait.

"Apparently the police had a tugging faith in Crippen, and expected him to return.

"Then, nearly a week after Crippen had disappeared, the hue and cry was raised.

"Meanwhile, Dew, the indefatigable, was here, there, and everywhere that the wanted couple were not.

"It does not seem to have occurred to the authorities that Brussels, during Exhibition time, would be a likely hiding-place for a fugitive.

"Crippen played the game. He did everything that untrained intelligence might expect him to do. He went to Brussels.

"It is an axiom in criminology that a hunted man usually makes for the scenes of his childhood.

"Crippen followed the rule, and tried to return to his native America by the way of Canada, and he very nearly succeeded.

"Dew on Duty."

"True, he came on board at Antwerp; but a mere layman may be pardoned for thinking that within two days Scotland Yard might have had every port by which Crippen could join a boat bound for North or South America effectively watched. Then the captain of the Montrose sent a message to the effect that Crippen was on board his ship.

"At last Inspector Dew got going. Apparently acting under instructions, he hurled himself into a train and caught the Laurentic.

"Hundreds of business men do this sort of thing every week; but Scotland Yard detectives are not business men.

"Dew's dash for Liverpool stirred the country.

"The public felt that they were getting their money's worth out of the C. I. D.

"Crippen had hoodwinked Dew; obviously, therefore, Dew was the man to send after him.

"If there be any law in this logic, I can't find it—I am not a detective-inspector.

"Sherlock Holmes could hardly have effected the capture in neater fashion.

"The pilot disguise was worthy of the highest moments of Arsene Lupin; but here, again, the credit of it is due, not to Dew, but to Captain Kendall.

"Crippen has now been caught (thanks mainly to his own stupidity), after an expenditure of some £5,000 of public money, all of which could have been saved if Inspector Dew taken the very ordinary precaution of having Crippen shadowed when he was first suspected.

"Why such precautions were not taken must be explained, or public faith in the capacity of Scotland Yard will be seriously shaken."

"OUTDOOR CANADA'S" NAME Changed to THE ATHLETIC WORLD.

The August number of "The ATHLETIC WORLD," a new name for "OUTDOOR CANADA" Magazine, has just been received at this office. Since this publication was taken over by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., each issue has shown a marked improvement over its predecessor. Its change of policy to that of a national athletic periodical is this month carried out both in name and nature. Besides the change of title the size has been increased and the contents augmented. Judging by the August number, full as it is of good, up-to-date reading pertaining to things athletic, a conspicuous place is assured "THE ATHLETIC WORLD" among the leading Canadian national publications.

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM.

This is a condition of disease to which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a break-down, a softening of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its cause (for they are almost innumerable), its symptoms reach the same: the more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weakness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary duties of life. Now, what alone is absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigor.

VITAL STRENGTH & ENERGY

PUBLIC NOTICE!

The Newfoundland Agricultural Board has ascertained that certain plots of potatoes in the neighbourhood of St. John's are affected by the dreaded "Potato Canker" Disease.

This is the same disease that was first detected at Red Island, in Placentia Bay, about a year ago, and is so fatal in its effects that if not immediately checked the absolute impossibility of growing potatoes in Newfoundland for years to come, is sure to result.

The Agricultural Board therefore requests that all potato growers who may observe indications of disease in their crop will at once notify the Secretary of the Agricultural Board at the office of the Department of Agriculture and Mines.

The Agricultural Board recognizing the incalculable injury that must accrue to the country if this disease be not immediately stamped out earnestly requests all persons to aid the efforts now about to be made to effect this.

In February last the Agricultural Board issued an illustrated pamphlet from a special report by Professor Cussow on this disease. Some thousands of copies were sent to Outport Magistrates and Clergymen, and the Board now requests that potato growers in any affected Districts will procure a copy of this report and be guided by its recommendations.

By order,

FRANK H. SIMMS, Secretary
