The Earl's Son; TWO HEARTS UNITED.

CHAPTER XII.

Burchett's warning rang in his ears. Notwithstanding his almost fierce repudiation of the suggestion that he was unduly interested in Miss Veronica, he had an uneasy sense that Burchett was right. He tried to laugh at the idea, but the laugh was a failure, and so he fell to self-scorn and inwardly called himself a fool.

"Yes, that is what I am," he mused, bitterly. "The worst kind of fool and idiot. What have I got to do with the great lady of the Court? Been kind to me. Of course! Why not? She'd be kind to a dog, if she was in the mood. And she was in the mood to be kind to-day, as it was her whim to be cold and insolent yesterday—as it will be to-morrow. Perhaps she was feeling a little grateful because she was in pain and I'd come up at the right moment to help her. How gentle she was when she told me that she had been poor, how soft her voice grew! One would never believe it could be so soft! And her face was quite altered, with all the pride gone out of it and her eyes like—like—what are the lines?—like violets washed in dew."

He stopped short and drew his hand across his brow with a gesture that was very nearly one of dismay. "There I am again, notwithstanding Burchett's warning, thinking of her, picturing her! It seems as if I could not get her out of my mind! The whole place seems full of her—!" He glanced round him confusedly; then he frowned and swore under his breath. "Why shouldn't I think of her! Thought is free. The lowest of men can think if he likes. And what harm can it do her if I consider her to be the loveliest, the sweetest—Oh, great Heaven, what is the matter with me? Is there something in the air of this place that robs a fellow of his strength and grit? If so, the sooner I clear out the better. 'Will you move your chair so that I can see you, please?' How sweetly she said that: not proudly, as if she were addressing a servant, but an equal—!" He swore again and reddened with shame for his weakness. "There I am again! Oh, I'll have to go, that's evident!"

He laughed with self-contempt and walked on still more quickly, trying to concentrate his attention on his work.

He had nearly traversed the wood when the dogs which, unnoticed by him, had been running hither and thither and whimpering, set up a

TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Their Health—Their own Statements Follow.

Halliburton, P. E. I.:—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars.

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. It may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. GEO. COLLICUTT, Halliburton, Lot 7, P. E. I.

Read What This Woman Says:
New Moorefield, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in thanking you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had bearing down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not get upon my feet long enough to give my name. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up these bearing down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since I commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me. You can use this letter."—Mrs. CAROL MOORE, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.

"I Sleep Soundly, Feel Like New."

ALL WHO LACK VIGOR, THOSE WHO ARE DISPIRITED AND WORN OUT, SHOULD READ THIS CAREFULLY.

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Right Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition for work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

sharp yap of warning and dashed in front of him; and he saw a man running smartly for the fence which divided the wood from the road.

Ralph set off after him, calling to him to stop; but the man gained the fence and half leapt, half tumbled, over it as Ralph, clearing the rails almost at the same moment, seized him by the collar. The man struggled, but Ralph's grip was like that of a vice, and after a moment he stood still, swearing under his breath.

Ralph dragged him from under the shadow of the trees and saw that it was the man with the bandaged hand. "What are you doing here?" he asked, rather glad to find someone he could be angry with besides himself. "Do you know that you are trespassing?"

"Am I?" replied the man, with covert insolence. "No, now! I thought as this was the high road, mister!"

"You were in the woods a moment ago when I called to you," said Ralph, sternly.

"Was I? I think you're mistook," said the man, with a laugh. "The light ain't very good and I think it kipld of deceived you. Don't you shake me, mister!"—Ralph had given him a shake—"and 'ave the goodness to take your 'and off me; you're spoiling my collar. D'e 'ear? Let me go, or I'll have the law of you! This is the king's 'ighway, and nobody hasn't the right to interfere with a man when he's done no 'arm on it. Leggo!"

Ralph forced him up against a tree and, holding him, eyed him keenly.

"I believe you were poaching," he said, sternly.

"The man grinned. "Oh, you do, do you! Then you're wrong— Take your hand out o' my collar; I'm 'alf choked. Poachin'! Where's my gun? I ain't so much as a stick!"

"But you may have a snare," said Ralph; "and I'm going to search you."

The man laughed defiantly.

"Now, don't you be so uppish, young man," he said, with a mixture of defiance and cajollery. "I suppose a man can take a walk in your blasted woods without being mauled by every whipper-snapper—"

"Turn out your pockets," said Ralph, who had grown cooler by this time. "If you refuse, I'll keep you here until the policeman comes along—"

"It's about his time—and give you in charge as a suspicious character."

The man's evil face was twisted into a leer that was intended to be ingratiating.

"Look 'ere, Mr. Ralph Farrington," he said, persuasively, "don't you make yourself unpleasant to me; don't you, now. I ask you to treat me like a friend, for I've a kind o' friendly feelin' to you. Yes, I have!" as Ralph expressed his sense of the value of the assertion by a little shake. "I'd do you a good turn, if it came my way; and who knows as it won't? Who knows, I say—"

"Turn them out!" said Ralph, grimly. "I'm one of the keepers, as you know—"

"You're an insolent and overbearing dog of a puppy!" snarled the man. "There, then!"

He turned out his trouser and coat pockets, muttering to himself and glaring at Ralph. There was some money and odd things—a big knife amongst them—but no snare. Ralph's eyes went to the man's breast pocket, and he pointed to it.

"Turn that out," he said. "If there is nothing there—"

The man's hand flew to the pocket as if involuntarily, and Ralph, jumping to the conclusion that he had bowled him out, tore open the coat and pulled out an old pocket book much bulged by its contents. There was nothing else.

The man uttered a snarl—the snarl of a dog from which a tasty bone has been snatched—and with an awful oath flung out his hands.

"You thief!" he cried, hoarsely. "You thief! Gimme back my property!"

In his fury he shook himself free from Ralph's grasp and flung himself upon him, snarling and swearing savagely. Ralph grappled with him—it was difficult to avoid handling the man roughly—and flung him to the ground.

"Get up," he said, sternly. "Get up and go; but remember the warning I gave you. If I find you on the Court grounds again I'll give you in charge for trespassing or poaching. There's your pocket book."

The man snatched at it and returned it to its place. His face was livid with fury and he shook his fist in Ralph's face.

"You—you—hound! You'll find that this is the worst night's work you've ever done! You've turned your best frined agen you! You've—yah! I'll be even with you if it costs me a fortune," he snarled, tugging at his neck, which still felt the pressure of Ralph's hand.

"Be off!" said Ralph. "Be off, and thank your stars that you've got clear. And remember what I say—"

"Yes! And you remember what I say!" retorted the man, furiously; "for as sure as my name's Jim Oatway, I'll make you repent this night's work."

With another snarl and a muttered imprecation, the man slunk off, and Ralph, after watching him for a moment, vaulted the fence and tramped homewards.

"That's done me good," he said, cheerfully. "I wanted a row with someone and Mr. James Oatway was kind enough to oblige. I wonder what he has in that pocket book?"

If he could have known.

CHAPTER XIII.

As Veronica lay on a couch by the open window of the small drawing room the fourth day after her accident, the earl came in with a telegram in his hand.

"How are you getting on, Veronica?" he asked, leaning on his stick with both hands and looking down at her.

She laughed a trifle impatiently. "Doctor Thorne persists in saying that I am 'getting on' very well indeed, and is quite heart broken when I venture to disagree with him," she said. "I do trust I shall never sprain my ankle again! It would have been almost more satisfactory if I'd broken my leg—there would have been some excuse for lying like a log from day to day."

The earl smiled with a kind of cynical sympathy.

"You have your books—"

"Yes, I know!" she responded, resentfully, eyeing the latest from Maudie's, where it lay on the floor as it had fallen from her hand. "But I don't seem able to read. And most of the books are so stupid!"

"As how?" he asked, regarding the lovely and rather flushed face as if he were studying it.

The flush deepened and she laughed again, and this time more impatiently.

"Oh, I don't know! They all are about one subject—love! It is love, love, and nothing but love! As if it were not only the most important thing in one's life, but as if everything else didn't matter in the least."

"Perhaps it is; perhaps they don't," he said, almost to himself.

She looked at him with faint surprise.

"I should scarcely have thought that you would have agreed with them," she remarked. "In this book I have been reading a girl makes the most tremendous sacrifices, sinks her rank, leaves her place in society, in the world; in fact, gives up everything for the man she loves."

"And finds that she has bartered the substance for the shadow, given gold for copper, sacrificed herself in vain!" he said.

"Oh, dear, no!" she retorted. "This is one of the 'marry-and-live-happy ever afterwards' novels. That is what makes me so impatient with it. It is so improbable."

"Yes, improbable enough," he said; "because the contract is never an equal one. It is always a case of being loved and loving, and the one who loves is the one who makes the sacrifice—of course. And the time comes when either he or she makes the lamentable discovery that they have sacrificed themselves in vain; that the thing wasn't worth the pence they paid for it. I take it that your heroine—it is always the heroine, by the way, who yields everything—makes what is called an unequal match?"

Veronica nodded and pushed the hair from her forehead.

"Ah!" he said, with his cold smile. "That is always a mistake; and I believe it is generally discovered before the honey-moon is over. And then it is bad for both of them, for the one who stoops from his or her high place, and the one stooped to. Marriages are made in heaven, they say, but—I have long had my doubts."

"Is that telegram for me?" asked Veronica, as if the subject had ceased to interest her.

"No; it is from Talbot. He appears to have suddenly discovered a novel desire for our society. He has succeeded in 'pairing' in the House, and is coming down for a few days."

"I will give the necessary orders," said Veronica, reaching for the bell.

"Don't trouble; I have done so," he said. "I am glad Talbot is coming—I am always glad, of course—he will be company for you. I am afraid these last few days have been dull ones."

"Oh, no, not at all, Lord Lynbrough," she responded, but she checked a sigh; for indeed she had found them dull. The restraint would have been bad enough, but she had not only been chained to the couch or to the bath chair, but had been chained so to speak, to her own thoughts. No book or music could stifle them or dispel them; and much to her annoyance and humiliation they had centred on one subject—Ralph Farrington. And now this book—she glanced at it reproachfully—harped upon the theme of a girl's love for her inferior, and the sacrifice she had made for that love. It had ended, as Veronica had complained, happily enough, but she knew that the conclusion was false, and that in real life the heroine, and the man also, would have been extremely wretched.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hanson Fuesler

The Sign of the Spavined Pig

There was a boarding house next door to Marian's rooming house where she finally resolved to purchase a meal ticket, thinking it would prove more economical in the long run than restaurants.

One evening the dinner was particularly bad, from feeble consommé to café noir. Most of the boarders preferred to take their coffee "noir" in preference to relieving its sabbie hue with the bluish pallor of the cream which accompanied it.

Old Stokes was the place's agent provocateur of good cheer. He was fifty-odd and lived in a cubby hole in Marian's rooming house. Time and fortune had handled him roughly, but had not humiliated him.

Marian returned hungry to her room after her unsavory dinner. Soon there was a knock at her door and Stokes came poking in.

"Say, what did you think of it?" he asked, wagging his head toward the dining-room.

"Wasn't it awful?" smiled Marian, as her caller paused near the door. "And I was ravenous to-night. Still am," he answered.

"Why not? Get on your things and I'll be back for you in a minute."

Marian put on her coat, her best hat, and a dash of rouge powder. A splash of perfume served to rebuke the memory of attar of cabbage. She heard the returning footsteps of Stokes and met him in the hallway.

"See, you look nice," he said appreciatively. "We're off for Bohemia. Great little old place we're going to." "The Sign of the Spavined Pig" is not listed in newspaper columns headed "Where to Eat."

Most Terrible of Mexican Prisons.

As one approaches Vera Cruz, Mexico's white port among the palm trees, one is greeted not by a statue of Liberty, but by a couple of small islands: the Isla de Sacrificios, where the Mexican authorities for years have let the antiquary roam and excavate among the relics of a grisly past.

had died thereof. The cell, of course, would not be disinfected, and the new-comer would go one of the ways of Don Porfirio's critics.

Bohemia was preferable to her dreary room at the boarding house.

"Corned beef and cabbage?" snorted the gay old boy of the boarding house as he began attacking his plate of spaghetti a moment later.

"Amid cries of 'deah boy,' 'garson,' 'tra-la-la' and the like, Bohemia chattered on, and Marian Winthrop, glancing about her at her unworldly surroundings, felt no regrets that she had impulsively accepted the invitation of her all but unknown escort.

fashion to say that he was, even according to Mexican requirements, a little harsh.

Many of the prisoners in San Juan de Ulua had done nothing worse than murder, so that they were not put into the cells described. They used to spend their time in working at the fortress (which has now been rendered impotent by the Americans), and they would carve into delightful ornaments such things as blackened coconuts or peach seeds, that the visitors would buy from them for several shillings.

Denominational Education.

The Diocesan Synod yesterday again affirmed its adherence to the principle of denominational education on motion of the Rev. H. J. Read. Mr. Read moved "that this Synod affirms its adherence to the principle of denominational education for the public elementary schools of Newfoundland, and deprecates any attempt to alter the present modus vivendi in regard to the same; and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Government."

The resolution was carried without division and by a practically unanimous vote. From our connection with educational affairs in Newfoundland for over twenty years, we have found that the denominational system works well as a whole, and in our opinion it would be a pity to disturb it. There are however departments where inadequate provision is made under the system.

The most obvious is the inadequacy of the provision made for the professional training of teachers as separate from their general education. We do not advocate the compulsory pooling of grants for this purpose by the Legislature, but we would like to see provision made for a union of such parts of the Pupil Teachers' grants as might be deemed necessary for professional training on a purely voluntary basis, letting each denomination determine for itself where it would unite for this purpose or not, and leaving the general education matters of residence and general control of teachers in training to their own denominations.

Nurses' Association Annual Meeting.

The first annual meeting of the Newfoundland Nurses' Association was held at the General Hospital on Saturday last. Miss Southcott presiding. The report of the executive showed an increase in membership. Arrangements for affiliation with the Canada Nurses' Association are now being finalized and the application will be considered at the annual meeting which takes place in Halifax shortly. Affiliation with the Canadian Nurses will make our nurses members of the International Council of Nurses. The election of the executive for the ensuing year resulted in the reinstatement of the following: President, Miss Southcott; Vice-Pres., Miss Howden; Executive Committee: Misses E. March, Redmond, Cullen and Tuck.

St. Bon's Sports.

The annual Sports of the St. Bonaventure's College, which will mark the closing of the term for the mid-summer holidays, will be held this afternoon on the College grounds, weather permitting.

The usual sporting attractions have been arranged, and in addition many novel features in athletics will be introduced, so that intending patrons will be assured of a pleasant afternoon. The St. Bon's Ladies' Association will serve afternoon teas and refreshments during the afternoon and the C.C.C. band will be in attendance. At the present writing the weather looks none too favorable, but should it clear by noon the grass will be sufficiently dry by 2.30 p.m. to proceed with the popular event, which we have no doubt will be largely attended.

Football Fives.

Under most unfavourable weather conditions the preliminary football fives in connection with St. Bon's Sports were run off yesterday evening on the college campus.

The B. I. S. defeated the Felidians by four goals to nil and the game between St. Bon's and the Stars resulted in victory for the former by 2 goals and 2 corners to 1 goal.

The remainder of the series will be played at the College sports this afternoon.

Drowning Accident.

Recent advices from Brigus to the Deputy Minister of Customs, reports that a man named Robert Hatcher, of Grand Bank, was drowned from the schr. Linda Pardo, Capt. Fred Pardo, while on the way from North Sydney to Brigus, with a cargo of coal. The unfortunate man was 32 years old and was married. The accident occurred during a heavy sea, the man being washed from the jibboom.

SAVED FROM DROWNING.

Last night as two electricians of Reid Mtd. Company, who had been working on the s.s. He was, however, promptly rescued by the men in the ship's boat and was soon afterwards in a deep slumber, none the worse for his immersion in the waters of the harbor.

London, June 16th, 1914.
Questions are being asked about the Court mourning for the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Queen's only first cousin. Court mourning would, of course, spell disaster to Ascot (English society's smartest racing function which runs for a week from day to day) and the West End milliners. I learn that the course to be followed is the same as that in the case of Princess Marie of Hanover eight or nine years ago, which occurred about the Ascot time. Strong representations were then made to King Edward, with the result that mourning was not worn. The Queen will probably wear a slight half-mourning but there will be no other sign, and the people in the enclosure will, of course, not be affected.

SOCIETY GETS THE GARDEN HABIT.

It certainly appears that gardens and dancing, with some flying at Hendon or Brooklands, continue to be the passions of the fashionable rich, and many people dance during the week in London and garden at the week-ends in the country. The latest development in rich folk's gardening is the children's gardens and the most expensive landscape gardeners are sent for to design and lay out a garden for Miss Molly or little Lord John, for gardening is now the craze also among children of the great houses. I believe that a girl's garden has just been laid out at Windsor for Princess Mary. As well-known English countess left the other day for the Continent to lay out the Italian and other gardens of a French millionaire—for a very substantial fee. Lady Wolseley's training college for lady gardeners is now producing many girls who are doing excellent work throughout the country. Even in London people are beginning to cultivate their gardens, and are discovering that flowers will grow now since the abatement of the smoke nuisance. The renewed passion for gardens, I am told, is actually shortening the London season, and it seems as if before long it will be Ascot rather than the Goodwood racing week that will mark the season's end.

THE TRIPLE ENTENTE.

It is pointed out by experts here that Mr. King's question in the House of Commons on June 11 regarding naval agreement with Russia was unskillfully phrased. The rumours began during the Royal visit to Paris. It is true that the Russian Government at that time did make an attempt to consolidate the Triple Entente into something like a new Triple Alliance, but the attempt failed. The talk—at all events in the French and Russian press—then turned upon the question of correlating the armed forces of the entente Powers—not, however, by way of formal agreements, which would have amounted to a transformation of the Entente into alliances. Instead, it was suggested that the General Staffs of the three countries, and, of course, the Admiralties, should be brought into much closer touch with one another than they have hitherto been, and that, in view of the bearing of military and naval preparedness upon diplomacy, the three Governments should be fully informed of what each was doing and proposing to do in naval and military matters. The building of a new Black Sea Fleet may therefore be regarded as having a distinct relation to our own policy in the Mediterranean—and the visit of Admiral Ruzhicki, the chief of the Russian Naval Staff, to France last week as indicating that the French naval abandonment of the North Sea and concentration in the Mediterranean carry a Russian as well as a British corollary. It is entirely a question of naval and military dispositions made by the three Powers in concert, and supplementary to the entente, not in the least of formal and binding agreements of an aggressive or defensive character.

THE VAINGLORIOUSNESS OF COMPOSERS.

During the next ten days the three most remarkable musical works of recent times will be produced in London. Last night we had Rimsky Korsakov's "Le Coq d'Or"; on Thursday, June 18, we shall have Stravinsky's "Rossignol," and on the following Tuesday Richard Strauss's "Le genre de Joseph," which, according to the authors is an entirely new departure in the art of music. Rimsky Korsakov and Stravinsky do not make a similar declaration of value in regard to their own compositions, but in point of fact both would have better justification for making it than Strauss and his associates. Last night, for the first time, we had a double cast, all the important characters of the story being represented by a singer and a dancer. This is surely a new departure, though unintended for in the preface to "Le Coq d'Or," Rimsky Korsakov directs his singers to dance in such a way as not to impair their breathing by violent motion. As for the "Rossignol," two singers have to take their place not on the stage but in the orchestra. Moreover, we have Stravinsky's own assurance that, as regards the art of composition, only one man has mastered its secret—Wagner or Beethoven, but Stravinsky himself. Although one may deplore this general spirit of bragadoocio, it must not be forgotten that nearly all the great composers of the past have been extremely narrow in their sympathies. Stravinsky, after all, has discovered something entirely new which can be said to belong to him exclusively, and his boast is less objectionable than that of another composer, who admitted only Beethoven to his own rank.

SOME MILITARY FAMILY.

Keen satisfaction has been created in military circles by the Marquis of Tullibardine's spirited vindication of the discipline of the army. The Service is naturally pleased when the cudgels are taken up on its behalf by one of themselves with both an excellent personal war record and numerous important military connections. The Marquis, it will be remembered, served from subaltern to major in the "Blues" and won the D.S.O. as a staff officer of Egyptian Cavalry in the Khartoum Expedition in 1898. But he is of course chiefly remembered in the Army in connection with the two regiments of Scottish Horse which he raised and commanded during the South African War. Of one of these his brother, Lord George Stewart-Murray, now junior major of the Black Watch, was adjutant. Another younger brother, Lord James Thomas Stewart-Murray, who also served in South Africa, is now captain in the 1st Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, at Edinburgh. One of the Marquis's sisters again, Lady Dorothea, married Colonel Harold Ruggles-Brise, formerly of the Grenadier Guards and now Commandant of the Hythe School of Musketry. The present Duke of Atholl himself has been for the last 11 years honorary colonel of the 3rd Black Watch, and was previously in the Scots Guards. If we go back to earlier days it would be difficult to find any record of noble families more closely interwoven with military connections and achievements than are those grouped under the names of Atholl, Tullibardine, and Stewart-Murray.

THE STRAW HAT AND CLUB TIES.

There seems to be a decided revival in the fashion of wearing club colors on straw hats, by smart Londoners. Perhaps it is only our way of getting a little brightness into things in protest against the lack of sunshine this year. But we certainly seem to be merging from the practice of the last few years—that the only ribbon for a straw hat in London should be a black one. One saw, of course, occasional Oxford blues wearing the distinctive speckled straw and the dark blue ribbon, and the red, yellow, and black ribbon of I Zingari has always been correct, doubtless because it means merit. On the other hand, a Cambridge or a Leander ribbon has not been seen in London for years, except in transit on the first days of July. To-day there seemed to be plenty of all sorts. Club ties, especially the colors of Old Boy associations, also seem to be coming back into favor. To-day I saw in Bond Street a man whose dress is always considered as free from extravagance as his political reputation. He was wearing with a morning coat an Old Etonian tie—a single narrow light blue line running through the middle of a black band. There are correct ties that are decidedly louder, but one wonders whether it is an example that his young men admirers will copy? If so, we may expect an outcrop of more apparent colors under similar circumstances. Shall we see young men at Ascot wearing Leander corse, or the dark blue, red and pink of the Old Cartusians, or the flaming red and yellow of the M.C.C.? One shudders at the thought; but why not?

CURIOSITIES OF FOREIGN TRADE.

Particulars reach me of some operations on the part of foreign manufacturers doing business in this country which are quite without genuine interest. It was observed by the revenue officials that the goods in question were being invoiced to the English branches at prices obviously in excess of their actual cost, and the suspicion was that this course was adopted in order to avoid the incidence of income tax upon the profits made by their sale in this country. The parties, accordingly, were notified that in future the cost of importation would be assessed by the department on the basis of the factory cost plus transport charges. The immediate effect was to cause the formation of private limited liability companies here, and as the cost charged to these quasi-independent concerns by the foreign factories thus passed beyond the purview of the Treasury, and the trading accounts of the companies show a paper loss on their English transactions, the payment of income tax is avoided altogether.

Love and Lovers.

Aphorisms for Those About to Marry.
It is dangerously easy to put together cynical aphorisms on love and marriage; but these by Mr. Orme Balfour in "Love and Lovers" (Werner Laurie, 3s. 6d., London), are worth quoting:
"No man ever marries without his friends asking each other what in the world he could have seen in her."
"In woman's love there occurs very frequently a strain of cruelty and hatred."
"All men want to be in love always, or, at any rate, to have someone in love with them."
"I must confess to my shame that, being hungry one sleepless night, I devoured the long-treasured fragment of a lost love's wedding-cake."
"I would counsel married men to see as little as possible of their wives before lunch. The morning belongs to the butcher and grocer."
"There are few men or women of 35 who can meet those they loved at 20 without wondering what they saw in them."
"It is as well for men that women are generally content to criticize their clothes. But my friend T. was no sooner engaged than his betrothed began to suggest improvements in his anatomy. Two or three teeth which she considered unsightly had to be extracted, a mole removed by chemical process, the prominence of his ears corrected by a strap worn at night. His refusal to submit his nose to surgical treatment brought about a rupture of the engagement."

THE HOLLOWAY STUDIO, LIMITED,

Corner Bates' Hill and Henry Street, St. John's, Nfld

The Daily Ghit-Chat.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Have you heard "you" meaning especially housewives this time — of the new science of motion study?

This science is a study of the motions made by the ordinary workman and an endeavor to systematize and reduce these to the fewest, most efficient and least fatiguing motions possible, and to teach the workman to do his work in this way.

Frank B. Gilbreth, who is one of the pioneers in this movement, has applied the new science to bricklaying. Now bricklaying is an industry as old as Moses, and one would think its methods would be close to perfection.

And yet it is possible for a bricklayer to do his work in one-third the time it used to take him, if he will use the methods and motions prescribed by Mr. Gilbreth after years of study.

An editor who had heard of Mr. Gilbreth's method, resolved to apply some of the principles in his office. A study was made of the way in which the many thousands of letters which were often sent out in a circulation campaign were handled by the girls who folded and sealed them. The result of the study was a rearrangement of the materials and the sequence of motions so that each girl was actually able to accomplish four times as much as before.

People in many vocations are becoming tremendously interested in this new study and applying it to their own special bit of the world's work.

Now, why not you—"you" still meaning especially housewives who do their own housework?

If this method can do so much for systematized trades like bricklayers, what might it not do for a haphazard trade like housework?

It can enable an office worker to do four times as much work in the same time, why can't it help you to do your work in one-half the time—to be conservative—that you require now?

Not only does motion study seek to reduce the time required by tasks, but also the fatigue the task causes. It attempts to eliminate unnecessary reaching and stooping, and to determine what are the most efficient and helpful tools and surroundings.

It seems to me that there is no field in which the science of motion study could accomplish more than in housework.

I have often heard it said that housework is hard on the woman of brains, because it does not give her enough to occupy her mind.

Now here is that woman's chance.

Let her get from the public library some of the literature on motion study and apply its principles to her work and she will surely find therein an opportunity to put brains as well as brawn into her tasks.

Ruth Cameron

Fads and Fashions.

Wide-brimmed hats make a softening shade for faces which have lost their first freshness.

Navy blue charmeuse capes lined with white are among the best from the fashion standpoint.

The tete-de-negre shade of brown is seen in veillings to be worn with black or brown hats.

On the fashionable black velvet hats stilettes are used to give the necessary note of airiness.

A few women are wearing the tight-fitting tunic of silk with jeweled ornaments closely sewn to it.

The Watteau cloak is distinctly an eighteenth century revival, even to the ribbons crossed on the chest.

Cross-pointed and basque corsets suggest that we may return to the tight-fitting bodice before long.

Braids will probably have a great vogue in the fall; they seem so inevitably associated with bicentennials.

Flowers and berries of silver gauze and tissue make the most charming of trimmings for hats.

The hair-ribbon checked silks are all very cool and airy looking, and will stand being made up in tailored styles.

Long, clinging draped robes and bounced skirts, and extremely full double tunics, are worn by slender women.

Heavy cotton crepes imported from Japan are always used to a certain extent for kimonos and house dresses.

Strapless Hale or cotton vests are a great resource to women who dislike having the straps show beneath thin blouses.

A charming sleeve is simply a square of tulle fastened into the armhole and falling, like a wing, as far as the belt.

For garden-parties the toilettes are most ethereal, being often made of India muslins, finely embroidered with gold threads.

Shoes become more fanciful even for ordinary day wear. Certainly, the part they play in the perfect toilette is very important.

Puffed apron tunics of silk over pleated skirts of tulle and lace looped up with roses are a charming style for young girls' dancing frocks.

Some of the prettiest taffetas are of the Watteau types, in which old rose, dull red, sapphire, old blue and green are introduced all at once.

Some of the fashionable shoes have patent leather vamps with black silk vesting tops, while calfskin shoes have black cravenette cloth tops.

Duels.

By GEORGE FITCH. Author of "At Good Old Slivash."

A duel is a gentlemen's agreement by which one gentleman proves that he is an honest, upright and desirable citizen by killing the other gentleman.

Common people cannot fight duels because if a common citizen with no manners kills another man it is a murder. But if a perfect gentleman who takes a cold bath every morning and never wears the same necktie twice, slaps another equally perfect gent. on the cheek and afterwards runs an expensive sword through his liver, thus rendering him entirely useless as a citizen, the aforesaid perfect gentleman of the first part is greatly admired in some quarters.

Duelling was once very popular in the United States and hardly any political candidate would undertake to refute the statements of his opponent because it was so much easier to shoot the misinformation out of him with a pistol. However, after Aaron Burr practiced on a mark and then killed Alexander Hamilton for opposing him when he tried to sneak the presidency away from Jefferson, duelling languished in this country and to-day it has gone entirely out of style. In France and Germany, as well as in some other European countries, however, the duel is still very popular. The German students carve themselves up with swords instead of kicking each other to pieces on the football field, and the German army officers kill each other off with considerable fluency and with the blessing of the war department.

France is the real home of the duel. However, the French duel has been denatured and is now safer than the French cigar. Hundreds of duels are fought each year in France, but if the duellists wear warm underclothing and do not catch cold in the neck while fighting, they rarely suffer injury. If a colored politician from St. Louis should attempt to fight a duel with a safety razor in Paris, he would be arrested for using a deadly weapon. French statesmen sometimes fight scores of duels in their stormy careers and yet enjoy perfect health. Still, if a French duellist should lose his temper and hit his antagonist with his fist, grave consequences would probably ensue and the board of health would have to abolish the practice.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? Silence is Golden.

The delightful little story is being told of a certain well known regiment of the line, at present stationed abroad.

It concerns an officer who is something more than merely disliked by the men, on account of his strictness in little matters that the Tommies think immaterial.

One evening, after a card party, which was prolonged into the small hours, this officer was returning to his quarters, and, in passing a deep pond, stumbled and fell into it. Not being able to swim, he would most certainly have been drowned had it not been for a private of his regiment, who, happening to pass at the moment, succeeded in pulling him out, not much the worse for his dip.

The officer was very profuse in his thanks, and asked his rescuer in what way he could repay him.

"Well, sir," said the soldier, "the best way you could repay me would be to say nothing about it."

"How's that?" asked the other.

"Well, sir," was the reply, "if the other fellows knew I'd pulled you out, they'd chuck me in!"

Hear, Hear!

Lord Mersey, who has been appointed to inquire into the Empress of Ireland disaster, was better known, perhaps, as Mr. Justice Bingham.

He has a great store of legal anecdotes, some of which are very amusing. One of his stories is about a very courtly and dignified judge who on one occasion overheard another judge abusing a barrister who was especially disliked by them both. The language of the abusing judge was very fluent and florid, but his more dignified colleague waited with a gratified smile until he had finished.

"I am not," he observed blandly, "in the habit of using such expressions myself, but would you mind saying it all over again?"

NEWS BY CABLE.

Special to Evening Telegram.

QUEBEC, June 30. The Duke of Connaught has authorized a denial of the report that he will succeed Lord Aberdeen as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

WASHINGTON, June 30. Private despatches received here to-day from unofficial sources in Mexico City, stated that President Huerta had sent his son and daughter towards New Mexico, and that he was making preparations for his own departure at short notice. The information was conveyed to the State Department.

WASHINGTON, June 30. President Wilson told a deputation of more than 500 suffragists at the White House, to-day, that woman suffrage was a State issue, and not a National one. For that reason he would not use his influence for the passage of a constitutional amendment to confer the franchise on women.

LONDON, June 30. After a brief lull, the activities of the female "furies" again roused London to-day. A series of mysterious fires in South London, which did damage, estimated at $100,000, is attributed to the arson squad. Several business houses were burned, two tenement houses, and fifteen families are made homeless. According to Scotland Yard, unmistakable evidence of incendiarism was found. While the flames were burning their way through South London, two women gained entrance to the Prime Minister's official residence in Downing St. through a ruse. Pretending that they had an appointment with the Premier, they were admitted by a servant. No sooner were they inside than they demanded an immediate interview, to "secure justice for women." When it was learned that they were suffragettes, the servants tried to eject them. A violent scene ensued, during which one woman pulled a lock and chain from her dress and attempted to lock herself to the door, but she failed to do so. The police were summoned and the women were hurried away to jail, screaming.

When Regiments Resigned.

The cavalry crisis at the Curragh recalls how, in 1783, the old 77th Regiment, commanded by Colonel Gordon, refused en bloc to go to India, and voiced their reasons in a barrack-room song:—

If it were to fight with France or Spain With pleasure we would cross the Main But for likebullocks to be slain Our Highland blood abhors it.

The question of this wholesale resignation came before Parliament, and the regiment was ordered to be disbanded forthwith at Perth. Another Scotch regiment the Black Watch, being brought to London from Scotland in 1743, on the pretext that George II., never having seen a Highland regiment before, wished to inspect them, turned about and marched home when they found His Majesty not in London to meet them. He had left the previous night for Hanover. They accordingly believed themselves the victims of a trick to reduce the number of Stuart supporters in Scotland. They were overtaken by a superior force in the Midlands and forced to capitulate. The regiment as a whole was then banished to Flanders; 200 of the men all of good family—were sent into exile and many were court-martialed, whilst three ring-leaders were shot on Tower Hill.

Another instance of a regiment's desire to be quit of service occurred in 1807, when 800 men chiefly Irishmen, of the 28th Foot, stationed at Malton, Essex, feigned madness in order to escape being sent abroad. They bluffed the doctors for a time by applying an irritating ointment to their eyes, declaring they had caught the disease from afflicted soldiers just home from Egypt. But the ruse was discovered and the ring-leaders were tried under the Mutiny Act.

King Breaks Precedent.

For First Time England's Royal Pair Recognizes Archbishop's Wife.

When the King and Queen recently dined at Lambeth Place with the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Randall Davidson, his wife, they defied a precedent in the Church of England which could almost be compared to Henry the Eighth's famous defiance of the dictates of Rome.

For never before has an English sovereign acknowledged, by the acceptance of hospitality at the hands of the wife of the Archbishop of Canterbury, that this venerable dignitary possessed a wife. In the eyes of royalty he has hitherto been officially a bachelor.

It started way back in the days of Queen Elizabeth, who became furious that her Archbishop of Canterbury took unto himself a wife without her consent. He announced it to her personally and upon his bended knees, but she pretended not to know what he was talking about and ever afterwards kept up this farce of treating him as a bachelor.

From that day to this the British sovereigns have declined to know officially in the etiquette of the court that the Archbishop of Canterbury was married. It was too ludicrous to be anything but an antiquated curiosity in custom, but it has caused heartache to many pious and estimable ladies throughout the centuries.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is the most important personage in the kingdom after the sovereign and he sits at the top of the dinner table even at the royal dinner parties at Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace.

But the tradition of "Good Queen Bess" have been faithfully observed by placing the Archbishop's wife at the very bottom of the table, indignant but quite helpless as a person utterly devoid of any rank whatever, and doing in the nobodies at the very tail of the line.

Mrs. Randall Davidson, the wife of the Archbishop of Canterbury, is of distinguished family, the daughter of Archbishop Benson.

His Better Sell.

To-day's Feature at the Crescent.

The holiday bill at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day is a very attractive one. His Better Sell is a frontier drama with stirring situations. "The Boots Dream Girl," a Rex special with Marguerita Fisher and Bob Leonard, two well known characters. "Plain Jane" is another one of the famous I. M. P. laugh producers featuring Jane Gail. A Jokers Comedy is our old favourite Mike and Jack and the exploits in Mexico. Miss Arkandy is singing the ballad: "Hearts and Flowers." On Friday and Saturday the feature is a two reel Indian drama: "Love of Men" and next week "Robinson Crusoe," in three reels. The Crescent is always cool, clean and comfortable.

Bulls and Blunders

Like the Irishman who said that his rope had only one end because the other had been cut away, Mr. John Burns, when he spoke recently of "throwing out a lifeline" in Parliament, provided a very amusing illustration of the art of making a statement which contradicts itself. Alluding to one of the Labor members during the course of a debate, the President of the Board of Trade said, "I should like to throw the honorable member a lifeline, so that I might pluck him as a brand from the burning."

It recalls the famous "bull" made by Sir William Hart-Dyke, the Unionist ex-Minister, who caused uproarious laughter in the House of Commons one day by remarking, "The right honorable gentleman has caught his fish in his time. He has gone to the top of the tree to find them." Alluding to an item of £2,000,000 in the Army Estimates one year, a certain member described it as "a fleabite in the ocean," while another, advocating an increase in the European troops employed in India, remarked, "You may depend upon it, sir, the pale face of the British soldier is the back-bone of the Indian Army."

An Irish member, speaking of suicide, said, "The only way to stop it is to make it a capital offence, punishable with death." It was the same member who assured the House that "As long as Ireland was silent under her wrongs, England was deaf to her cries," while it was during a debate on the scandal of packed juries during the Irish troubles that a member in support of the Government exclaimed, "By trial by jury have I lived, and, by the blessing of God, with trial by jury I will die."

There was a wild howl of delight, too, when some proxy member was careless enough to remark, "The time has come and is rapidly arriving," which is equal to the cry of the member who wished a motion was "at the bottom of the bottomless pit."

When it was stated on a money grant that it was unjust to saddle posterity with a debt incurred to benefit the present, one member asked, "Why should we beggar ourselves to better posterity? What has posterity done for us?" The laugh following rather surprised him, as he was unconscious of his blunder, and he promptly made matters worse by saying, "Sir, by posterity I do not mean our ancestors, but those who come immediately after them."

Wasted Wit.

Miss Madge Lessing, who is now appearing in The Blue Mouse at the Criterion, has been playing in Berlin for some time.

She was telling us the other day that soon after she went to Germany she was interviewed by the representative of a Berlin newspaper.

The interviewer complimented her on being able to speak her lines in the place without a trace of a foreign accent.

"Oh, replied Miss Lessing frivolously, "I play in five languages—German, French, American, English, and Irish."

Poor Miss Lessing expected at least a smile at her little joke, but the interviewer wrote it down quite seriously, and in due course the statement appeared in print.

Almost immediately another newspaper chided her, solemnly informing her that American, English and Irish were practically one and the same language. "Miss Lessing," it pointed out, "should know better than make a mistake like this!"

The wise woman wears gloves while she turns the wringer and saves her hands.

Conference Notes.

At a recent meeting of the newly elected Board of Governors of the Methodist College, the following Executive Committee was elected: Hon. R. K. Bishop (Chairman); Rev. H. P. Cowperthwaite, M.A., D.D., Rev. C. A. Whitmarsh, M.A., B.D., Rev. N. M. Guy, M.A., Hon. H. J. B. Woods, Hon. J. B. Ayre, C. P. Ayre, Esq., A. Mews, Esq., John Leamon, Esq., C. H. Hutchings, K.C., Joseph Peters, Esq.

Reference was made to the loss which Methodism has sustained in the death of the late Hon. J. S. Pitts in the following paragraph: "The event which touches us most heavily is the death of the late Hon. J. S. Pitts, Chairman of the Board for 24 years. The Methodism of the Island has been called to mourn the loss of a staunch supporter to whom an appeal for help was never made in vain. We miss him in our Councils, but the good that he has done will live after him, and the provision he has made for the welfare of the College in the future will perpetuate his memory as its greatest benefactor."

During the morning session, the conference took an opportunity to place on record its high appreciation of the valuable services rendered by Rev. J. W. Bartlett, who is about to become Pastor of the Jubilee Church, Sydney, Nova Scotia Conference. "Whereas, Bro. John W. Bartlett has been transferred from this Conference to Jubilee Church, Sydney, in the Nova Scotia Conference, we cannot let him depart without assuring him of our sincere regret at the severance of our conference relationship. He will still hold a place in our thought and affection, and our prayers will ascend for him and his family, that Divine guidance and blessing may be vouchsafed there also, that success may attend his future ministry and be the means of bringing to multitudes the year of Jubilee, and when his heart turns towards us again and he desires to come home, a right royal welcome will be given."

Bro. Bartlett, in reply, thanked the conference for its appreciation, and assured us that new scenes and new relationships could never obliterate the sacred memories associated with his work in his native land.

The House resumed at 7.30, 51 clergy and 46 lay members being in attendance. Canon Colley presented the report of the select committee appointed to consider the continuance of the S. P. K. Depot. The Report was received. The adjourned debate in connection with the H. and F. M. Fund was continued. This debate had been taken up during four sessions of the House and had been debated with keen interest, thus testifying to the position of importance the subject of missionary work has occupied in the Synod.

Mr. J. W. Withers moved for the adoption of the Report of the select committee appointed to consider clerical stipends and the Diocesan Mission Fund.

At 9 o'clock a deputation from the Lord's Day Alliance consisting of the Rev. J. S. Sutherland, M.A., and the Rev. C. Abner Whitmarsh, M.A., B.D., was received by the Synod standing. Mr. Sutherland was spokesman of the deputation and in an eloquent, concise and well delivered speech laid before the Synod the aim and object of the Lord's Day Alliance. The Right Rev. President replying on behalf of the Synod thanked the deputation for their visit and for the expression of their views with which the Synod had been so kindly favoured. The deputation then withdrew.

The debate on the Report before the House was resumed, and the Report adopted. The following Executive Committee were elected: Revs. Canon White, Canon Colley, G. H. Field, G. R. Godden, T. G. Netten, J. Brinton, Sir W. H. Horwood, Sir Joseph Outerbridge, Hon. Geo. Knowling, Hon. Dr. Skelton, Hon. R. Watson, J. A. Clift, Esq., and J. W. Withers, Esq. The Lord Bishop, the Episcopal Commissioner, and the Secretary-Treasurer being members ex-officio.

The House rose at 10 o'clock, the Bishop pronouncing the Benediction.
