CHAPTER XV.

"By Lionel I suppose you mean Lord Ashcroft," said the countess, regarding the young girl keenly. "Did you tell the truth, Aimee, when you said you had not spoken to his lordship?"

"Did I ever tell a falsehood?" asked Aimee, indignantly.

"Never, child, and I am sure you have not now. You could not meet my eyes so fearlessly if you had spoken falsely. You think Lord Ashcroft would protect you?"

"I am sure he would," answered the maiden, with enthusiasm, too innocent to suspect that the question was intended only to probe the hidden emotion of her heart. "He looks so good and so grand that I—"

She stopped in confusion. "I see how it is," said the countess, more to herself than to Aimee. "What fatality! How terribly unfortunate! Oh, child, child! you know not what you have done."

"Why, what have I done?" "Never mind. You cannot know, and I must not tell you. Promise me that you will not stand at the window again, Aimee, with the shutters drawn up, and that you will never venture from these rooms again. If you did but know it, they are a safe shelter for you. There are persons who would gladly see you die, and until you go to a convent you must be kept hidden here. Will you give me the promise I require?"

Aimee shook her head sadly. "My child," cried the countess, "do you not love your mother?"

"I should love you better if you did not keep me confined here. You do not love me as much as you love the Lady Alexina."

"How can you think that?" "You give her freedom and make her happy."

"How could I do otherwise with her, Aimee? She is the owner of Egremont; besides, we have no reason for keeping her concealed. But the earl and I cannot own you."

"Why not? What is the mystery about me?" exclaimed Aimee, her face kindling and her tones full of trepidation. "Is there anything—anything disgraceful?"

"No, child. Yet I cannot tell you the mystery. It is enough to say that if you repeat your excursions outside of your rooms you will bring a horrible fate upon yourself. Remember, I have warned you."

"I will remember," responded the maiden, somewhat coldly. The countess frowned at this reply and an expression of terrible severity gathered in her eyes.

"I suppose," she said, "that you have forgotten the care I have always bestowed upon you, the tenderness I have lavished upon you, the sacrifices I have made for you. I love gaiety and society, yet since your birth I have denied myself all pleasures—all except one; and latterly I have kept Alexina secluded that your existence might remain unsuspected. She little knew why I disliked to fill the house with visitors, or why I refused to take her out. Her youth was the ostensible excuse, but you now know the real and true reason. You are ungrateful and unfilial."

"Perhaps I am," returned Aimee, simply. "You have always been kind to me—very kind and affectionate; but, to tell you the truth, my heart feels cold toward you. The feeling has been growing upon me for some time. I suppose it's because you keep me a prisoner here."

The countess grew very pale, and shaded her face with her hands. "Last night I had a dream," continued Aimee, reflectively, "and it has haunted me all day. I dreamed that a fair and lovely lady came to me, laid her hand upon my head, caressed me, and said to me, 'Demand your freedom.' And I have demanded it of you."

The countess dropped her head lower. "Oh, mamma," said the young girl, with sudden burst of emotion, springing up and kneeling beside her ladyship, "tell me the mystery of my life. If it should prove so terrible, as it seems to you. I could be generous enough to yield myself willingly a life-long prisoner for your sake. Since my life and liberty are sacrificed to it I should surely be made acquainted with it."

"You can never know it, Aimee—never."

"Then I shall give no promise. I shall not willingly bring trouble upon you. I will not run away and leave you to suffer upon my account, but I will not deny myself one joy that I can attain, nor one pleasure that I can grasp."

The countess, white with anger, pushed the kneeling figure of the girl from her, and arose to her feet. "Aimee," she said, "I demand of you the fullest and most unquestioning obedience. If you go against my express commands, your fate be upon your own head."

With this, and without the usual good-night kiss, she turned and quitted the room, and the captive resumed her seat on the fauteuil.

Passing into the drawing-room, the countess closed the door behind her, and addressed herself to the governess.

"Toplift," she began, "you do not know what your carelessness has cost me. I believe that Aimee has fallen in love with Lord Ashcroft, and should he have become interested in her, there will be no end of trouble."

"I know it, my lady," responded the governess. "I thought this morning, when the Lady Aimee looked out at the yacht, that she had taken a great fancy to his lordship. She asked me his name, and after I told her she called him Lionel slyly to herself."

"What irreparable mischief, Toplift! You must make amends for your carelessness. Aimee refused to promise anything, and you must keep a closer watch upon her."

"Yes, my lady, but she steals out when I am asleep. I might drug her."

"You might, but it is better not. The earl will never consent to having her drugged, even if I would. You must not be harsh with her, for she is but a tender, fragile thing. You had better hide your keys where she cannot find them."

"I will do so," said the governess greatly relieved at discovering that her young charge had not betrayed her habit of taking opium. "I will be as gentle with her as you always are, my lady. The Lady Aimee never had any reason to complain of my harshness or inattention."

"She never has complained of you, Toplift. You feel as I do, that we ought to make her life as pleasant as possible, for it is a hard one at best. But we must not be too indulgent, lest she take advantage of our weakness."

"Have you thought what is to be done with her, my lady, when the Lady Alexina is married and Lord Ashcroft becomes master of Egremont?"

"She is then to be sent to a convent. I have just told her so. She does not like the plan, but you must use all your influence toward making her regard it favorably."

"Am I to go with her, my lady?" "No; you will always remain with me, I hope, Toplift. You have been so faithful to my interests that I shall never part with you. But I must return to the earl. See that Aimee retires immediately, and be sure to hide the keys."

The governess promised particular attention to those commands, and Lady Egremont took her departure. Toplift then hastened to her young charge.

"Come, my pet," she said, coaxingly, "it's time for you to be in bed." "I will come pretty soon, Dorcas, but leave me alone now. That's a dear old nurse."

"But my lady won't like it—"

"I shall," interrupted the little lady, decidedly. "Go now. I'll come when I feel sleepy."

The governess hesitated, but a desire to please Aimee, and the remembrance of the attractions of her novel induced her to yield assent, and she went back to the drawing-room.

"I intend to have my own way here" thought Aimee, evidently continuing the musings interrupted by her jailer. "Since mamma will not tell me the secret, I'll try and find it out for myself. I mean to see Lord Ashcroft again, and she blushed prettily.

"Even if he is going to marry Alexina, he may not despise my friendship. I will tell him, at least, that I am not a ghost, although I may have frightened him."

With this charitable intention she decided on waiting until the evening of the next day, rightly foreseeing that Toplift would be unusually vigilant that night.

She then arose, went to her table, and took from its drawer a small miniature of herself painted upon ivory. She had painted it some months before, to beguile the lagging hours, and it had been pronounced by her three friends perfect and true to life.

It looked like a miniature copy of the Lady Jasmine's portrait. There was, perhaps, more strength and sweetness in it, but otherwise it was the same.

From the same drawer Aimee produced a picture of Lady Egremont, set in a frame bordered with seed pearls. To move this frame and put it on her own portrait, was a labor of some minutes, but it was accomplished, and the young girl regarded the change with pleasure.

"He will like that, I am sure," she said, gleefully. "I will give it to him to-morrow evening, and then not see him again. I only want to let him see that I am not a ghost. But how shall I let him know who I am? Ah! I know."

She went to a little writing-desk upon her work-table, and seated herself to the task of inscribing her name under her portrait.

Children's Bogey

By BERNARD RAILTON.

A few days ago I called upon some friends of mine—a young married couple—whom I had not seen for some months. They have a jolly little son about two years old.

This young man and I were great pals once. Every time I went to see him he used to chuckle with glee. But, to my amazement, the moment he set eyes on me this time he burst into tears and kicked and struggled to get away from me.

"What on earth is the matter with the lad?" I asked his mother. "Oh," she replied, "I expect he thinks you are the doctor."

Apparently the child had been ill some little time before and it was necessary for the doctor to examine his throat, which the boy had disliked very much. From that day, whenever he had been naughty, his mother had said, "Now, if you're not a good boy I'll fetch the doctor to you."

Gradually this menace of the doctor had become a positive fear with the child. The very mention of his name terrified him. Any strange man wearing an overcoat who visited the house reminded him of the doctor.

I remember the agonies I suffered as a child from fear. I was always particularly afraid of the dark. A nurse had once told me that if I was not a good boy a black man with a big sack would come and take me away. As I was never allowed to have a light in my bedroom, whenever I woke in the night I was absolutely terrified. Every shadow looked like a man with a big sack on his back. Shaking with terror I used to cover my head with the bed-clothes and pray hard to God not to let the black man get me.

Policemen were another bugbear of mine. For years after my childhood, whenever I passed a policeman I trembled. And to this day, if I am in a strange town and wish to know my way I never think of asking a policeman. This is a fear complex which I have never been able to eradicate.

Personally, I think it should be made a criminal offence for grown-up people to frighten young people. Far more harm is done to the mentality of a child in this way than by actual physical punishment.

It looked like a miniature copy of the Lady Jasmine's portrait.

There was, perhaps, more strength and sweetness in it, but otherwise it was the same.

From the same drawer Aimee produced a picture of Lady Egremont, set in a frame bordered with seed pearls.

To move this frame and put it on her own portrait, was a labor of some minutes, but it was accomplished, and the young girl regarded the change with pleasure.

"He will like that, I am sure," she said, gleefully. "I will give it to him to-morrow evening, and then not see him again. I only want to let him see that I am not a ghost. But how shall I let him know who I am? Ah! I know."

Bobbed Hair Not Allowed

GUARDIANS' ORDER TO NURSES.—SHINGLING ALSO FORBIDDEN.

Romford, Essex. Board of Guardians has adopted a report of the Hospital Committee recommending that the nursing staff be instructed that, in future, bobbed or shingled hair will not be allowed and that anyone already bobbed must allow her hair to grow.

Miss Haslam, a guardian, who has bobbed her hair, said she objected to the recommendation. "Think," she said, "of the long hair coming down and tickling a patient."

Mr. J. W. Rigby, chairman of the Hospital Committee, said there had been a discussion on the matter in the nursing papers, and most of the matrons were against bobbed hair.

High Heels and Powder. Mr. E. R. Goodfellow jocularly said that perhaps it was a question of morals, and, if so, the committee ought to go into the matter of whether the nurses should use face powder or wear high-heeled shoes when off duty.

He added that this was an unwarrantable interference with the liberty of the staff. Perhaps when the Hospital Committee built a new nursing home, they would put a statue of Bumble in the entrance-hall. This was a pettingfogging piece of Bumble-don.

The chairman, Mr. E. G. Bratchell, said he did not see why the nurses should not be allowed to do as they liked. Mr. E. Lambert said the only reason given by the chairman of the Hospital Committee was that it was done at the desire of the matron, and he certainly did not think they should curtail the liberty of the nurses.

DECLINING YEARS.

When life's sun sinks in the west, and you're tired in feet and knees, it is good if you can rest, working only when you please, choosing "round" your cosy nest, feeding hens and herding bees. It is good if you can say,

"Youthful years I gave to plant, pruning and threshing hay, wrestling with the fertile soil; and the dimes I put away, put them down in castor oil. Now that I am gone to seed, lame in all my bones and thews, I can loaf and smoke and read, only toiling when I choose; oh, a cheerful life I lead, here I yawn and rest and snooze." And there is no sadder sight than an old man, bent and frail, laboring with all his might for a paltry slice of kale, fearing he may die some night in a poorhouse or a jail. Past my gate the old men go, to their heavy, weary tasks, digging pathways in the snow, heaving coal and lifting casks, while the man who saved his dough on his silken cushions basks. Past my gate I see them wend, and their ancient hinges creak; to their bitter tasks they bend, drawing fifteen bucks a week; and their heartless sighs ascend to the heavens cold and bleak. Oh, my nephews, one and all, put the kopecks down in brass! Save a package, however small; with the wise boys stand in line; when night's shades begin to fall, have a bundle just like mine!

Lost City Quest

EXPLORERS TO TRY TO CAPTURE MONSTER WHALE SHARK.

For his great adventure in British Honduras with Dr. Thomas Gann and Lady Brown, wife of Sir Richmond Brown, Mr. F. A. Mitchell-Hodges recently at Liverpool saw his yacht, Cara, of 20 tons, placed on board the Harrison liner Traveller, 4,000 tons. The three explorers will, as already described in The Daily Mail, further investigate the unknown and deadly region in Central America where last spring they discovered the ruins of the lost city of Lubantun, the seat of the Maya people.

Among the luggage are 3,000 fish hooks, some of them weighing fourteen pounds each, and 92 harpoons, several of which are 4½ feet long. With these it is hoped to capture what Mr. Hodges states is now definitely known to exist, the Rhinodon typicus (or whale shark).

The length of an adult typicus he states is at least 70 feet, and if harpooned it could kill the Cara for three days and two nights.—Daily Mail, Nov. 8.

Mr. Alfred McNeill, Chapel Rock, Alta., writes:

"During the winter of 1920-21, I was greatly distressed with pains in my back and felt tired and depressed most of the time. Particularly during the night I was troubled with frequent urination, some nights having to rise almost every hour. I tried several different treatments without success, until finally I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they relieved my condition before I had finished the first box. I am feeling better this summer than I have for years, and although in my 67th year, can work all day without any undue fatigue."

GERMAN POLITICAL SITUATION OBSCURE.

BERLIN, Dec. 8. The outcome of yesterday's general elections leaves the Parliamentary situation wholly unchanged, as the new party line-up in the Reichstag provides the formation of a three-party coalition composed of Socialists, Clericals and Democrats, in the opinion of political leaders. According to the latest returns these three parties have elected a total of 227 members of the Reichstag, and with this number to depend upon the leaders of this Liberal combination would be unable to command a dependable majority, even if it were given the support of the Bavarian People's Party with its nineteen votes.

SET BACK FOR PROGRESSIVE.

BERLIN, Dec. 8. The net result of Sunday's balloting for the Reichstag and the Prussian Diet is set down by political observers as indicating a distinct setback for progressive policies and parliamentary government, in that it leaves in its wake an inter-party situation which affords no basis for the construction of a Government pledged to a programme of unadulterated liberalism. This condition is amply reflected by editorials appearing today in the Nationalist and Conservative BURGEOISE press, which professes to see in the party line-up brought about by Sunday's national polling the long sought opportunity to eliminate the Socialists and possibly also the Democrats from participation in future governments. No concealment is made in Governmental circles of the fact that the Von Tirpitz-Von Bismark party has not only been returned in its full former strength, but has also enhanced its representation in the Prussian Diet by thirty-four mandates.

Threats are said to have been made to storm the jail to prevent the hangman from entering.

C. P. R. ISSUE OF $30,000,000.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8. Announcement was made to-day by President E. M. Beatty of the Canadian Pacific Railway that an issue of $30,000,000 of that company's 20 year 4 1/2 point secured sinking fund notes certificates has been sold to a Canadian syndicate. This is only the second time during the last ten years that an issue of the company's securities has been offered to the Canadian public.

ANOTHER CATHOLIC DEMONSTRATION.

BREST France, Dec. 9. Many thousands of Catholics of Northern Finisterre, grouped according to localities with mayors and priests at the head, paraded to-day at La Folgoet, under the escort of war veterans, as a demonstration protest against the Government's alleged anti-clericalism. The paraders sang psalms to the accompaniment of several bands. Following the parade the demonstrators listened to addresses by Breton members of parliament, who urged resistance to Freemason persecution. Resolutions were adopted expressing the determination of the Catholics to have religious peace. Maintenance of the Vatican embassy was also demanded, as was the observance of the pledge that Alsace-Lorraine be allowed to continue under the arrangement which provides subsidies for churches and religious teaching in the schools. The speakers declared the Catholics who fought in the late war would not accept class legislation and demanded the abrogation of unjust laws. The Catholics were exhorted to organize in defense of their liberty.

RAJAH WILL TESTIFY.

LONDON, Dec. 8. Rajah Hari Singh, whose victimization to the extent of £150,000 in an alleged blackmailing plot, created an international sensation, has definitely agreed to come to London to testify against William Hobbs, one of the alleged conspirators, if the public prosecutor calls up on him, according to the Daily Mail. Meanwhile the mystery as to the Rajah's whereabouts is fully as great as that which surrounded his identity during the early stages of the case when he was referred to in court as "Mr. A." The newspapers locate him in fresh places almost daily.

NOTED AUTHORESS MOURNED.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8. Endured to millions of readers through her books "Freckles," "The Girl of the Limberlost," and many other dature stories Gene Stratton Porter was mourned throughout the country to-day as she lay dead in her home here, the victim of an accident on Saturday evening in which her motor was struck by a street car and reduced to wreckage. Mrs. Porter died an hour and three-quarters after the collision at 8:40 o'clock.

PRINCE ELIMINATED.

LONDON, Dec. 8. The Prince of Wales, who was among the 55 entrants for the Squash Racquet Amateur Championships begun at the Bath Club this morning, was eliminated in the first round by T. Bevan, a well known guardsman tennis player by a score of 15 to 7, 12 to 15, 15 to 8.

MAY BE VICTIMS.

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Dec. 9. Sixteen enlisted men are missing from the dreadnaught Tennessee and New Mexico to-night. It was officially announced on board the U.S.S. ARCTIC'S JOURNEYS OVER.

QUEBEC, Dec. 9. The Canadian Government steamer Arctic, famous for feats in penetrating the frozen icefields of the Arctic Circle for many years under the command of the intrepid explorer Captain J. E. Bernier, has made her last trip and will in all probability be turned over to the Department of Marine and Fisheries for utilization as a lightship on the St. Lawrence River, according to reliable information. The next trip will be undertaken by the C. G. S. Franklin which Captain Bernier recently brought over from England for the Canadian Government.

STORMY ON LAKE SUPERIOR.

FORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 9. Navigation was at a standstill on Upper Lake Superior to-day and all down bound vessels were lying at anchor between Thunder Cape and White Fish Point. A heavy northeast gale with driving snowstorm made navigation difficult even in the harbor here. Reports from vessels lying off the passage, Rock of Ages, Slate Rock, and in the lee of Isle Royal, reported the storm one of the worst of the season. The weather, however, was comparatively mild but a dip in the temperature was predicted with the lifting of the snowstorm. Anxiety is felt lest the grain fleet will not arrive here in time to clear before expiry of the insurance period.

Sailing Without Sails

Kiel, November.—A new wonder—a ship driven by the wind, without sails, moving over the waters of Kiel Bay under the perfect control of one man.

The sight called up a vision of a future when the traffic of the sea may be revolutionized by the Rotor Ship, as the new vessel is called, just as traffic on land has been revolutionized by the motor-car.

The Rotor Ship has been fitted up at the Krupp Germania Works here. She is a vessel of 650 tons and has previously been driven by oil motors. Forward rises a round metal tower, 50 feet high and 10 feet in diameter, like a funnel with an inverted saucer on the top. Aft there is a second tower of the same dimensions.

Revolving Towers.

These towers are hollow cylinders, extending to the bottom of the ship and revolving on pivots. Each contains a small motor of 9-horse power, by means of which the tower is run up to a maximum speed of 120 revolutions in a minute. As I drew up to the mystery ship in a motor boat I could see the towers revolving.

The puzzle is how these towers, by revolving quickly, make a ship go forward with the wind, or go back against it. Herr Anton Flettner, the inventor of the Rotor Ship, has put to practical use a discovery made by the German Professor Magnus in 1853. This is that the propelling power of wind driven against rapidly revolving cylinders is much greater than when it acts on a stationary surface, such as a sail.

I watched the Rotor Ship sailing with the wind and tide behind her, and going back against the wind when the tide turned. I saw her turn completely round, and afterwards it was explained to me that this was effected by stopping the rotation of one of the towers.

Control by a Handle.

The whole process is governed by a man who controls the speed of the towers from the bridge, where a dial indicates the rate at which they are turning. By the movement of a handle he can accelerate, or slow, or stop the rotation.

The ship left the Germania works under motor power because there was too little wind. When she was once in the open sea the motors were stopped and the ship continued on her course driven by the rotors. Her best record, so far, is 8 knots with a 4 to 5 mile wind. The wind was only blowing 3 miles an hour, and her progress was slower. She gets her speed with the wind at an angle of 35 degrees to her course.

Coming to England.

Herr Flettner is a man in the early forties and looks what he is—a naval officer. He told me that he intended to bring his Rotor Ship to England. The development of the invention is in the hands of the Hansatische Motor Schiffahrt Company (of which he is chairman), with headquarters at Hamburg.

The ship has not yet been tested in stormy weather, and all concerned with her are looking forward to the excitement of sailing in her under a stiff breeze.

It is claimed that she will revolutionize navigation. One man does the work of the considerable crew that is required in a sailing ship of ordinary type, so that there is a marked difference in the reduction of cost of working and charges for freight. The inventor holds that his system in its present state can be used to supplement other forms of motive power, but that some time must pass before we can talk of rotoring as we do of motoring.

Wembley, 1925

GOVERNMENT MAY GUARANTEE £1,000,000.

The necessity of arriving at an immediate decision regarding the reopening of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley next year has made this one of the first matters for the attention of the Government.

Mr. Baldwin stated at the Lord Mayor's Banquet at the Guildhall recently that the Government would be willing to ask Parliament to provide a fresh and sufficient guarantee if the Dominions and industry were prepared to play their part.

The Guarantee.

The Prime Minister was in consultation with Mr. Winston Churchill, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on this subject, and it is understood that the amount of the Government's guarantee now contemplated is £1,000,000, or £400,000 more than the present guarantee.

Private interests will be required to guarantee the balance of approximately £1,000,000.

In official circles, it is believed, that the prospects of a second year's life for the exhibition are extremely hopeful.

It is the intention of the Department of Overseas Trade, if the exhibition is reopened, to ensure that next time it shall be of a completely all-British complexion, which was not the case this year. Hundreds of letters were received by that department complaining that many of the articles which were on sale and given away as prizes at the exhibition were manufactured in foreign countries.

Have A Heart

Yesterday we had occasion to visit the General Post Office, and glancing through the lattice work, were amazed to see a savage looking official busily engaged tearing open parcels. There was no mistaking the nature of those parcels; they were Christmas gifts. Loving hands had tied the coloured ribbons, and no one but a chubby fingered youngster could ever have been responsible for the disarray of the gaudy labels plastered on several of the coverings. Intact, they bore the message of Christmas; torn and desecrated and marked with a price, they were robbed of the sentiment which they were intended to convey.

Not all these parcels indicated that the contents were costly. Some of them indeed looked as though the sender could ill afford the purchase made, and they could never have thought that in sending the gift they might be inflicting a hardship on the recipient.

Enquiring the need for this strange behaviour, we quickly were made to understand that the official was not acting in this heartless manner because he lacked feeling; on the contrary, it was because he was very human and hated spoiling those appealing and very personal touches. He was simply doing his duty in ridding Christmas presents apart, in order to swell the revenue of His Majesty's Government.

For some years, we were informed, it has been the rule to tax these gifts. To the man whose mind suggested this soulless plan we will content ourselves with prescribing a course of study: not a long or even a difficult course, but simply one little book entitled "A Christmas Carol." A character in it called Scrooge was specially intended for him.

It may be said that any other method is unbusinesslike, uneconomical, and conducive to smuggling, and that sentiment must not be allowed to interfere with system. While we admit the force of the latter objection generally, we should hate to think that we were slaves to a system, and that regulations could not be made to conform to what is undoubtedly popular viewpoint. In advocating a measure of relief from taxes on Christmas gifts, we firmly believe that the Minister of Finance and Customs, if it is within his power to grant it, would be doing the public a great favour. Even if the duties were remitted on parcels valued at, say five dollars, it would meet the case, as there is little hardship inflicted on the recipients of expensive gifts. Our plea is on behalf of the children, whose pure delight at receiving a parcel should not be spoiled for them, or made the cause of annoyance to the parent. We have in mind also the humble recipient of a practically valueless article from a relative abroad, whose one intention is to bring into a lonely home a little ray of comfort and something of the spirit of Christmas.

NOTICE.—Rev. Dr. Kitchin begs to inform the members of his Parish and the Public generally, that there will be NO raffle in aid of St. Patrick's Parish this Christmas.—dec9,24

Methodist Ministers

STRONGLY RESENT ADVOCATE'S UNWARRANTED TACTICS.
 The following articles appear in the December issue of the Methodist Greeting:—
THE ADVOCATE AND THE GREETING.

This is the first opportunity we have had to comment on the way the policy of the Greeting has been used by the Fishermen's Advocate in the interests of the Opposition candidates in the recent bye-election, and especially to attack some of our Methodist ministers. We assert for our brethren their complete personal liberty to take whatever line they thought best in support of the policy of the Methodist Church. The Greeting's opposition to the Liquor Bill has been used by the Advocate as though it implied definite support of the Opposition candidates. We would have been glad to give direct support to any candidate whose record on Prohibition was such as to command our confidence. At the time of writing we hoped such a candidate would appear. Throughout we have endeavoured as a Methodist organ, to maintain unwavering loyalty to our Church's policy of Prohibition.

A PROTEST.

We wish to register our protest against the use of our names by the Fishermen's Advocate in connection with its campaign of persecution of Revs. C. R. Blount and S. J. Hillier. Our opposition to the Monroe Liquor Bill must not be taken as any indication of approval of the opposition candidates in the recent election. Only strong Prohibition candidates with a clear record could possibly have had our support.

In the letter and sermon published over our respective names we definitely laid the responsibility for the destruction of Prohibition upon the Administration of which Sir W. F. Coaker was a member.

We observe with great regret the spirit of this attack, being convinced that it cannot do other than recall to the injury of those responsible for it.

T. B. DARBY,
 R. E. FAIRBAIRN.

With the Radio

S.S. "LEVIATHAN" PICKED UP CROSSING ATLANTIC.

Whilst Ed. Power of 96 Duckworth Street, was listening in on his Model C. tuner, one valve set, last night, he picked up S.S. Leviathan in mid-Atlantic, bound to Southampton. Word was sent out that the ship was making 24 7-10 knots, and expected to reach her destination on Friday. The thermometer registered 27 above at the time; Barometer 30.16. It was also announced that those who sent in a report of the ship's broadcasting were to be forwarded a photo and a letter of thanks from the company. The Leviathan is due to arrive in New York on December 20th. Other stations picked up last night were as follows:—K.F.K.X. Hastings, Neb.; W.O.R. Jefferson City, Mo.; W.D.A.R. Philadelphia, Pa.; W.B.Z. Springfield, Mass.; W.H.A.Z. Troy, N.Y.; W.J.Z. New York, N.Y.; W.O.R. Newark, N.J.; W.T.A.M. Cleveland, Ohio; W.S.A. I. Cincinnati, Ohio; W.S.M. S.S. Leviathan at Sea. The results obtained by Mr. Power's one valve set can be considered very creditable indeed.

New Post Filled by War Vet

Ex-Sergt. T. Morrissey of Ours has been appointed special police officer at the General Post Office a position made necessary by the large quantity of valuables always contained in the building. Sergt. Morrissey was among the first to enlist in the Regiment and after losing the sight of an eye while fighting in France, served for a considerable time as provost-sergeant at Ayr. His many friends will be pleased to hear of his appointment.

Supreme Court

KING VS. JAMES WHITEFOORD McNEILLY.

Argument on the verdict brought in by the jury in the above matter which began yesterday morning, concluded at the afternoon session, when Mr. Justice Kent ordered that the verdict be entered as guilty. The motions made by Mr. Dunfield for the defence were:

- (1) That the verdict be entered not guilty.
 - (2) That judgment be respited and a certificate granted that the case is a proper one of fixed law and fact for the Criminal Law of appeal.
 - (3) That bail be renewed.
- Mr. Emerson for the Crown said that the Crown had no objection to the appeal, especially as the Crown itself was the party complaining, and had no objection to bail pending the appeal. He contended, however, that the defence had not shown a single direct precedent for the entering up by the trial judge of a verdict such as this, which he contended was a general verdict of guilty. He argued that despite of judgment was unusual and the ordinary course would be for the accused to be sentenced and then file his appeal in the ordinary way, especially as the sentence itself might be one of the grounds of appeal. If the verdict was to be set aside that would be done by the Appeal Court.

Mr. Justice Kent ordered the verdict to be entered as guilty; he postponed judgment pending appeal, and granted bail until December 18th. He would not grant a certificate himself that the case was a fit one for appeal, but would leave the accused to apply to the Criminal Court of Appeal Court itself, for leave to appeal, which should be done as promptly as possible.

The Court then rose.

(Before Full Bench)

King vs. Jas. Whiteford McNeilly. Mr. Dunfield for the prisoner moves for a day for leave to appeal and asks for Tuesday, Dec. 16th, 1924 at 11 a.m. Mr. L. E. Emerson and Mr. H. A. Winter assents.

It is ordered accordingly.
Sir John C. Frosbie, Minister of Finance and Customs, Plaintiff, and Sir Edgar Bowring, Defendant.
 Mr. H. A. Winter for defendant, Mr. R. Cramm for plaintiff.
 The above matter—a claim for payment of tax on income derived from England and Nfld. sources came before court on Saturday. The defendant admits liability for tax on income from Newfoundland sources. Argument is based on the interpretation of the words in the Income Tax Act "resident or ordinary resident." The defence claims that Sir Edgar was a resident of England during the period for which claim is made as he was at that period High Commissioner at London.
 Mr. Winter contended his argument at to-day's sitting held that the Crown was trying to bring about a strained interpretation of the Act and it would be "like getting money from home" and extremely lucky for the Crown were it to succeed in getting money from his client under the condition that he had to pay again in England on the same income.
 Mr. Cramme was heard in reply. C.A.V.

Obituary

MR. EDWARD MURPHY.

On yesterday the Angel of Death visited the home of Mr. Edward Murphy, of William Street, calling him to the eternal reward of a most exemplary life. Mr. Murphy was a native of Hr. Grace where his people commanded the respect of their fellow citizens. Fifty years ago he came to St. John's to take charge, as business manager of T. & B. Mitchell Co., which post he admirably filled during most of the half century. The deceased was one of Nature's gentlemen, kind, thoughtful, intelligent and one whose word was his bond. He was an ideal father whose home was a seminary of virtue. His peaceful, happy death, soothed by the consolation of holy religion, was but an echo of a life spent as a faithful servant of God and of one who helped his fellow-men. He leaves to mourn their very great loss his good wife, three daughters, Lizzie, Annie and Mrs. Smythe; three sons, Michael of McMurdo's, Frank and Brother Murphy, of St. Bonaventure's. To them goes out the sympathy of the thousands who hold them in the highest esteem.

The following ladies will supply you with all kinds of dainty things suitable for Xmas, and delicious goodies for Xmas Parties, at the Child Welfare Sale on Thursday in the Presbyterian Hall: Mrs. Outerbridge, Miss Parker, Miss Furlong, Fancy Tables; Mrs. H. Mitchell, Plain Work; Mrs. M. S. Sullivan, Samplers and Toys; Mrs. McKeen, Pantry Table; Miss Duley, Candy.—dec9,24

T. A. LADIES' SALE.—A Sale of work and Christmas tree will be opened this afternoon in the T. A. Armoury by the ladies of the T. A. & B. Society. For some weeks past the ladies have been making preparations for this event and now have ready a choice collection of articles suitable for the Christmas season. During the afternoon the ladies will serve teas.

Magistrates Court

A drunk and disorderly was fined $2.00.

A labourer convicted of the larceny of two bottles Whiskey from the cargo of S.S. Digby was fined $8.00, the price of the stimulant, and to prevent a recurrence of the trouble in future he was ordered to sign a personal bond of $100.

A 19 year old girl who had been taken in hand by a number of ladies who were running Jensen Camp to try and reform her, was sent to jail today to serve a term of three months for being a loose and disorderly person. The girl has just been released after serving a six months' sentence. When asked what she had to say for herself, she replied to the Judge that she would go and live at the New Drop Inn. Judge Morris said that it was no fit place for her, and thought she would be safest in the Penitentiary. After a while of the trouble the girl caused a scene in the court room, and resisted the police as she was being removed down the narrow staircase to the jail below.

Two members of the crew of the S. S. Rosalind and a citizen were up before court this morning at the instance of the Minister of Finance and Customs, charged with a breach of Section 203 Customs Act, that is smuggling cigarettes into the city. Two of the offenders were convicted and fined $50.00 or in default 30 days imprisonment, while the Bosun of the ship was discharged. The latter testified that the only cigarettes he had were for his own use.

Feld College Entertainment

Last night's entertainment in Spencer College Hall would have gladdened the heart of a theatrical manager casting about for new stars. His only difficulty would have been to limit his selection. It was a variety concert, and the large audience which filled the hall to capacity had no reason to complain that it did not answer to the title.

The following is the programme which speaks for itself as it baffles description beyond the remark that it was excellently rendered:
 Opening Chorus—The Party.
 Tavern Song—"Butterfly"—S. S. Horsley.
 Recitation—"Edinburgh after Flood"—L. L. Colley.
 Jazz Band Selections—Milley and Rennie.
 Duologue—"The Colonel comes out of his shell"—Rowe and Tucker.
 Musical Sketch—"The Cook and the Bobbies."
 Recitation—"The Yarn of the Nancy Belle"—Watson.
 Piccolo Solo—"Old English Air"—Wood.
 Song—"I love you!"—Fitzgerald.
 Musical Sketch—"On board the S. S. Alchem."
 Monologue—"The Difference"—S. S. Horsley.
 Jazz Band Selections—Milley and Rennie.
 Duologue—"How not to Sing"—Fitzgerald and Rendell.
 Musical Sketch—"The Four Italianos"
 Planologue—"A Music Hall Performance"—Miss D. White, S. S. Horsley.
 Jazz Band Selections—Milley and Rennie.
 Closing Chorus—The Party.
 Mr. S. S. Horsley, who was responsible for the entertainment, and whose own contributions of songs and monologues were so thoroughly enjoyed is to be congratulated upon discovering so much new talent and upon the success of the performances. We understand that the proceeds which were so grand gratifying will be added to the Peildian Grounds Fund.

Sleigh Capsizes

OCCUPANTS HAD NARROW ESCAPE
 Shortly after 6 o'clock last evening, as J. J. Collins of the Marconi Company was driving home in his horse and sleigh along Duckworth Street in company with W. A. Brown, his horse took fright near Dr. Roberts' surgery, and becoming unmanageable it made a sudden turn round to go west, with the result that it overturned the sleigh throwing both occupants to the sidewalk. Mr. Brown landed on his feet and escaped unharmed, but Mr. Collins was less fortunate, and his head came in contact with a concrete step, and received a deep cut over his forehead. He was picked up in a half dazed condition, and taken to the surgery of Dr. T. M. Mitchell, where he was soon revived and had his wounds dressed. Mr. Collins later proceeded to his home unassisted, but he will not be well enough to get down to his office for a few days. The horse continued its dash east along Duckworth St. as far as the Crosbie Hotel where it was captured. The animal was uninjured, but the sleigh, which was a new one, was badly damaged.

Personal

We regret to learn that Mr. Geo. Turner, Deputy Minister of Agriculture and Mines is at present confined to his home through illness and trust that his recovery will be speedy.

Mrs. Tasker Cook and her assistants will give you delicious Afternoon Teas at the Child Welfare Sale on Thursday in the Presbyterian Hall.—dec9,24

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Dec. 8th.—Up very betimes, the earliest indeed, I have been up these three months past. Anon abroad and am kept shivering by the cold which chills me nigh to the very marrow. But Lord what a condition of the pavements do I find on Water Street, being so soon after the snow which with ice and the most dangerous things to walk on. Indeed, this is a matter for the Council, if they do wish to save the limbs of citizens from injury.

Anon comes my wife to the office and would have me come with her to choose some Xmas gifts for our wealthy relatives, which I do take to be money thrown away, seeing how it is indeed little that we ever receive from them. But why the wretch would have me with her, save to make a show of me, I do not know, since every suggestion that I made she laughs to scorn nor has my opinion of such things as she herself chooses. Indeed, she did make me so mad that I did at last leave her to herself, nor will I ever see her with the wretch again.

This night the shops on Water St. are open for the Xmas trade and pretty indeed to see the handsome display that are made in the windows.

Duped by the Reds

ENGLISH FLAX BUYERS PLIGHT.
 RIGA, a number of English flax buyers at present in Riga are regretting the fact that their firms trusted the Bolsheviks.

Several representatives of large English firms are attempting to obtain a refund of advance payments their firms made to the Bolshevik Government representatives last spring. Others are demanding that the Government deliver the purchases contracted for at the same period, when Bolshevik hawkers peddled the greatly over-estimated Russian flax crop, English and Irish firms obtaining 35 and 25 per cent. advance payments.

According to investigations by a number of flax buyers in Riga the Bolshevik Government sold the flax, which remained in the hands of the peasants, with the advance payments obtained in England, the Bolshevik Government flax monopoly attempted to purchase the peasants' holdings at low prices, but the peasants refused to sell, hiding the crop.

The investigations also reveal that the Russian peasants have the flax and the Government have the money. The English firms have nothing.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

WHEN UNCLE SAM TELLS ALL HE KNOWS.

The howl that went up all over the United States when the law making public the income tax returns went into effect was a mighty one. It seems as if even a stone deaf person or a United States Congressman might have heard it.

Of the making of many laws there is no end, and as most of them affect only some small class directly and touch the people at large only indirectly, it is not often that the general public gets such a vivid object lesson in the results of law making.

Whether the income tax law will stand or not is a political question, therefore, one into which I am cordially invited not to mix. But I think I shall be allowed to say that, despite that howl from many of the people affected, I do think the law has its advantages.

Less Worry About the Other Fellow. Chief among them is this. I think it will help to do away with a lot of discontent.

I believe it was an old Greek philosopher who said that one of the greatest causes of unhappiness was thinking that other people were happier than we. Perhaps there were people who put up a "front" about their incomes in his days, too.

I think the income tax publicity will do away with a lot of discontent that comes from thinking that people in various lines of life get the huge incomes their publicity agents (or themselves in that capacity) credit them with.

Actresses, for instance. An actress who is supposed to be very successful and whose income you would think was at least $50,000 files a tax indicating an income of perhaps $12,000.

Divide By Ten.

A top liner whose publicity agent has told us how she spends her income of half a million files a report indicating something under $50,000.

And then there are Wall Street operators. One never thinks of the big ones as making less than $100,000 a year. What is one's surprise when the published returns show some of them up with an income that barely gets into the five figure class. Of course in this case there is the possibility of business losses in this particular year, but if next year's income still remains small, and Uncle Sam still goes around the neighborhood telling everything he knows about them, they will have to do some pretty tall explaining of one or two things. Either they will have to explain to the world what they meant by that "big front" or they will have to explain to Uncle Sam what they meant by that small income tax return.

Funny, Isn't It!

There is a great deal of big talk about big money, everywhere. And the queer thing is that the man who is himself blinding doesn't seem to realize that the other fellow is probably bluffing too.

He accepts his statements at face value and feels disappointed with his own lot. America is a rich country but it couldn't possibly produce half the money that everyone thinks every one else is getting.

And if everyone can be made to realize this fact, everyone is going to be a lot more contented; and if everyone else can be made to realize it, nobody will try to put up that big "front" that won't fool anyone any longer.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

THE STUBBORN LITTLE COMEDIENNE.

Wish that I could tell to you All the clever things she'll do. Wish I could repeat to-day All the funny things she'll say. And I wish that you could see Her perform for Bud and me. But you'll never see her show, And her art you'll never know, For when people come to call Janet won't show off at all.

She'll turn somersaults and race Madly up and down the place. Day by day she'll tell us how Grandma's kitty says "meow!" What a dog says, and the things Santa Claus at Christmas brings. She will sing a little song, Dance for us the whole day long. But when strangers are around Janet will not make a sound.

Vain it is for us to say All she does from day to day. None save us will ever know Why we rave about her so. For when others come she stands Dumbly looking at her hands. Hangs her head or runs away And won't have a word to say. Stubborn? Yes, for one so small. Janet won't show off at all!

Wedding Bells

ANGEL—DUNFIELD.

A quiet wedding took place at St. Thomas's Church on Saturday, December 6th, when Heber, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Angel, was married to Miss Joyce I. R., youngest daughter of the late Canon and Mrs. Dunfield, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Canon Bolt, assisted by Rev. H. L. Pike. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Brian Dunfield, wore a travelling dress of brown cloth with touches of gold embroidery, and a hat to match, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. She was attended by her sister, Miss Alice Dunfield, who wore brown velvet, with a bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums. Mr. Hector Ross supported the groom. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for Holyrood, where they will spend a short honeymoon before proceeding to their future home at Corner Brook.

Radiology

By DR. HAM.

Your headphones are delicate and should be handled with care. It is impossible to repair headphones in which a wire has been broken.

A dead battery connected in series with others, will shorten the life of good batteries. Take it out of circuit immediately.

A one wire aerial is as good as a dozen.

If you use a regenerative set think of your neighbours, and don't howl and squeal.

A metal socket is a small condenser and should be avoided.

New valves are made with an ebonite base.

Don't use a loop on your Neutrodyne or Regenerative set. It won't work. Try one on your Reflex or Superhet. A loop will collect about fifty per cent. less energy than an outside aerial, but it will cut down atmospheric too.

The number of tubes used determines the cost of upkeep. Like cylinders in a car, four is standard.

One stage of pushpull gives about the same volume as one stage of ordinary amplification. The extra valve is for quality not for volume.

Did you ever hear Australia? Neither did I. But go home early some evening and listen in for Madrid. He has been heard right here in St. John's.

Your Radio license will cost you one dollar per year. Get yours from The Postmaster General.

Don't buy a cheap loudspeaker. It is a waste of money. Try putting your earpieces in your mother's cut glass pitcher.

Never invite your friends to "come in and listen to our new Radio on such and such a night." Old man static is often alive and kicking. Every set works well after the visitors have gone.

Would you like some more Radiology? If so listen in on The "Telegram" next.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—For communication by means of Signor Marconi's new "Beam" system with similar stations which are being erected in England by the Marconi Company on behalf of the British Post Office, the first of five 350 foot steel towers which will support the aerial and reflectors of the new Marconi Beam Wireless station at Drummondville, near Montreal, was completed this week. It will be the first station in America to use the Beam system of transmission in commercial telegraphy.

Just Rubs and Inhales Vicks for All Colds

Mr. E. Olford, No. 1 Plymouth Road, E., Obtains Excellent Results by Applying Vicks Vapo-Rub over Throat and Chest

Mr. Olford writes: "I had a very bad cold and had several treatments from a doctor. I used a sample of Vicks Vapo-Rub, according to directions, and found it doing me some good. I secured a large pot from my druggist and in a week I was quite well again. I recommend Vicks to everyone."

For a great many years the medical profession realized the need for a more "direct" way to treat inflammation of the air passages commonly known as "colds." Medicines taken internally have to be first absorbed by the stomach and then pass into the blood.

A Chemist's Discovery.

Finally a chemist in the States found a way to combine Menthol, Camphor, Thyme, Eucalyptus, Juniper Tar, and other time tested remedies in ointment form so that, when rubbed over the throat or chest for sore throat, chest colds, bronchitis, or croup, the ingredients are vaporized by the body heat.

These vapors, passing up by the mouth and nose, are inhaled with each breath directly into the affected air passages, reducing the inflammation and breaking up the congestion. At the same time the ointment is absorbed and stimulates the skin like a liniment.

This discovery was called Vicks Vapo-Rub. In Canada and the States it is so popular that over 17 million jars are used annually in the treatment of all forms of cold troubles.

Vicks is especially fine for children as it is "just rubbed on." There is no dosing.

Let Their Lights Shine

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir.—Of our illustrious dead we ask with Lord Tennyson, "When can their glory fade?" In a very definite sense an answer is supplied by that magnificent monument standing in our city.

The lighting scheme of the monument has been very favourably commented on, and justly so, since it forms a very important part of the structure. I like to regard these twelve brilliant lights as symbolizing the glory with which our valiant men covered themselves.

Some while ago a light on the west side failed and remained in that condition for six weeks to my knowledge. It was subsequently replaced by a dimmer lamp.

Now, another light on the east side is not working and will undoubtedly be replaced, some day, by a reduced one. Other lights have also been reduced in power. Who is responsible for this? Is any person definitely in charge of the monument?

I maintain that the matter should indicate neglect and does not harmonize with the proceedings of July 1st. I perceive danger of this apathy increasing that in course of time the monument will not be illuminated at all!

Is it possible that some of the Colonial memorial? I say, Mr. keep those twelve magnificent burning at full strength and let there be no reduction! Just think of the 20,000 men who were killed in the land's War Memorial and with the illumination thereof fading anyone a right to cause such a thing? "When can their glory fade?"
 Yours,
 PATRICK

In Memoriam

ELLEN MARY GLEASON.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Ellen Mary Gleason, in the 78th year of her age passed quietly to her eternal reward at the residence of her nephew, Mr. Patrick J. Gleason, 53 Freshwater Road, after a lengthy illness borne peacefully and fortified with the rites of Holy Church.

Ellen Mary Gleason was the only surviving daughter of the late James and Mrs. Gleason, Hardware Merchant of this city, and was predeceased by her brother, Mr. John P. Gleason and her sister, Mrs. M. K. Greene, some two years ago. Miss Gleason was a familiar figure in the life of St. John's for many years, until her retirement a few years ago. In her early days she was associated with her father in the business of Gleason's Hardware Company and later with her nephew, Mr. P. J. Gleason, in the wholesale fruit business.

Miss Gleason was one of the old school, how so rapidly dying out, and was a lady of remarkable converse with whom it was a pleasure to converse, as she had travelled widely and had a remarkable grasp on things in general and her opinion on important matters of the day was often solicited. She will be remembered by the older generations who patronized Foran's Rink as the charming, graceful and skilful skater, whose waltzing on the ice still lingers in the memory of those of her age while it was not until her sixtieth year did she retire, and on many occasions surprised the younger element at the Prince's Rink by her graceful skating. She will, however, be best remembered for her charity and charitable nature, as her generosity to the poor and needy, to the homeless and friendless is well known all over the city of St. John's, and in many a home to-night, as this obituary is read, many a fervent Pater Ave will be offered up for the repose of the soul of Ellen Mary Gleason, whose pleasure in life was to help the poor, sick and needy. She is survived by three nephews, Rev. Dr. J. J. Greene, P.P., Willits Bay, Mr. Joseph M. Greene and Mr. P. J. Gleason, 53 Freshwater Road, the funeral will take place at 2.30 to-morrow, Wednesday.—R.I.P. COM.

Cricket

M.C.C. WIN BY NINE WICKETS.
Adelaide, Nov. 12.—The M.C.C. needing 44 runs to win with an innings to play, beat South Australia today by nine wickets.
Sutcliffe was missed in the slips by Pritchard off Wall when he had scored 10, but on the whole both he and Hobbs played confidently, and the score had been carried to 41 before Sutcliffe was stumped.

Hearne followed in and made the winning hit, the runs having been obtained in 40 minutes.

Full House Greeted "If Winter Comes"

LARGE AUDIENCE DELIGHTED WITH EXTRAORDINARY FEATURE.

A thousand or more people were present at the first show at the Majestic Theatre last night, and all were unanimous in proclaiming "If Winter Comes" the greatest picture triumph since "The Birth of a Nation" was exhibited in St. John's. The story of the lovable, whimsical Mark Sabre is known to the hundreds who have read of the tricks society, as represented by his neighbors and his wife, played upon him, and how his simple, humane treatment of his fellows in distress and his caring for Effie and her illegitimate child nearly brought him to insanity and death.

This most difficult role has been entrusted to Percy Marmont and this actor fully realized the importance of his work. He is the living Mark Sabre. He is the true character, the one of which we have read. His characterization was perfect.
Mr. Marmont's Mark Sabre is a tall, loose-jointed man with a smile which tells of the kindest sympathetic heart. As he struggled on to understand what was going on about him he was ever the "puzzle-head," ready to forgive.

Ann Forest played the part of Nona with sincere reserve. Margaret Fielding played the termagant, narrow-minded Mabel satisfactorily. Sydney Herbert was the minister Twynning.

The singing of Emmet O'Mara and Jeanne Palowa was by far the best we have heard from them since their coming to St. John's. Mr. O'Mara sang "Kathleen Mavourneen, Norah McNamara, My Wild Irish Rose," and was forced to respond to an encore and the greeting extended him was merited in every respect. His humorous talks likewise were very timely and much enjoyed. Jeanne Palowa's singing of "The Kerry Dance" was highly praised and favorably commented upon. These artists will be here this last opportunity to see "If Winter Comes" and hear these talented artists.

Fire

See the fire burning brightly. Watch the red flames dancing sprightly. And the embers glowing redly. Forming pictures, fancy bred. Quickly born and quickly sped. In the fire.

Oh the passion of the fire. Burning madly with desire. Hear the pine logs spitting crack. Like some soul upon the rack. Burning all within its track. In the fire.

Warmly glow the dying embers. Comforting our drear December. The contentment and delight. Slippers on, and pipe alight. Reading by the kindly light. Of the fire. NEMO DIXIT.

NOTE.—We must warn the author that in the event of his sentiment arousing the suspicion of the authorities we shall have to furnish them with his name. Had it not been for a reference to his slippers we should have been somewhat apprehensive ourselves.

The Choice of Most Women

Pearline washing Powder is selected by many women who know what a real good washing powder is. Pearline costs only ten cents a package and saves dollars in toll and labor. Years ago Pearline was the favourite—it is still the favourite with all its numerous users. Your grocer knows that Pearline is considered the best of all washing powders and this is why he will recommend it every time you ask his opinion. For cleaning pots, pans, kettles, etc., there is nothing like Pearline. For all washing or scrubbing a little Pearline added to the water makes the work much easier. Every woman should use Pearline. Ask your grocer for Pearline.—oct14,14

Prospero's Damages

Prior to the Prospero's entering the Dry Dock, a diver went down and examined the ship's bottom to ascertain the extent of damages as the result of her going ashore on Green Island. The diver reports that the damage due to the stranding is not very extensive, only a few plates being affected. The Prospero, while in dock will be given a thorough overhauling and several dented plates which could not be attended to when she was on the stocks last time, will now be replaced.

Miss N. Moore, 31 Duckworth St., and Miss J. Power, Long Pond Road, were the lucky winners in Saturday's and Monday's daily sales at Bowring's Dry Goods Store.—dec9,11

Is Your Child

Undernourished?

Your child may not be sick, but unless he is a noisy, rollicking, romping youngster—full of activity, energy and life—he is probably undernourished.

Undernourishment does not mean lack of sufficient food. It means in the food—elements in the food—elements that promote energy and growth.

Brick's Tastless

contain these needed elements in just the right degree and it is rich in vitamins—that mysterious "something" that makes children grow and keeps those of advanced years fit and energetic.

Armistice Day Homage

We publish below a full account taken from the Daily Mail of the Armistice Day celebrations in London and also various news items from the provinces showing how generally the event was observed, and with what great solemnity the programme was carried out. The illustrations in the English papers show Whitehall and the space in front of the Exchange packed with people, standing hat in hand during the two minutes silence, but what is even more significant is the picture of a farmer alone in his field pausing in his work to pay his simple act of homage to the great unseen army of heroes.

AT THE CENOTAPH.

The King's Salute.
At the Cenotaph in Whitehall, where the King stood and raised his field-marshal's cap as the first stroke of Big Ben proclaimed the solemn hour, it seemed as if the silence that ensued, spreading outwards to the remotest lands of the Empire, had covered the world with an infinite mantle of peace.

In the centre, and, as it were, upholding it, stood the Cenotaph, memorial of the glorious dead, to which and to whom all eyes were turned. The autumn sunlight, revealing at that moment its austere white beauty, shone also on the flowers at its base, where the wreaths of Princes and statesmen lay alongside the simple posies of poor widows ever mourning their dead, and on the Union Jacks, emblems of sacrifice and victory that adorn its sides.

Behind the King stood the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and the chiefs of the fighting Services. The Queen stood at a window of the Home Office across the road. The Bishop of London, holding on high the Cross, and flanked by a white-robed choir, was on the left of the King, and on his right were the Cabinet Ministers and representatives of the Dominions.

In Hospital Blue.

Around these central figures the armed forces of the Empire, as splendid as of yore, lined three sides of a wide square. The Guards were there, Horse Artillery, bluejackets, marines, the Royal Air Force, Territorials, the sun glinting on their fixed bayonets as they stood to attention, while on the fourth side, headed by General Sir Ian Hamilton, stood a double rank of men of the British Legion, all in civilian clothes save those few who still wore the hospital blue.

Behind in every direction, packing Whitehall from Trafalgar Square to Parliament Square, stood the people, making their annual pilgrimage to the people's shrine.

Poppies, the emblems of the fields of Flanders, were everywhere—in wreaths and bunches to be placed on the Cenotaph, in buttonholes bought in willing support of Earl Haig's Fund for ex-Service men, or decorating the waiting motor-coaches that bore the blind and the maimed.

The Lord's Prayer.

For two minutes the crowd was motionless, the stillness utter, thrilling, and profound. Then, faintly at first, as the falling of leaves, the roll of drums rumbled out, and on that signal buglers of the Royal Air Force, facing the Cenotaph, sounded the Last Post.

The massed bands and the choir led in the singing of "O God, our help in ages past," and the Bishop of London conducted a short service, the most impressive moment of which was the recitation of the Lord's Prayer by at least one hundred thousand voices. The "Reveille," by buglers of the Royal Marines, and "God Save the King," sung by all present, concluded the official ceremony, after which the King, specially saluting the representatives of the Dominions as he passed, returned to the Home Office.

A WOMAN'S WREATH.

Her Prayer at the Cenotaph Before the Dawn.

A few people, mostly women, began the great pilgrimage at 6 a.m. One, before the dawn, knelt on the steps of the Cenotaph, and prayed for a few moments as she placed a wreath. Workmen, on their way to the day's work, deposited little bunches of flowers.

The square was complete and Whitehall packed by 10.30 a.m. In the crowd women predominated, but only by a small majority. Many still wore widow's weeds, and some brought young children, fatherless, to look at "Daddy's Memorial."

Twenty minutes later the King placed a large wreath of red poppies and white carnations, tied with red, white, and blue ribbons, on the plinth of the Cenotaph, afterwards stepping back and standing for a moment at the salute.

The Prince of Wales placed a wreath of poppies and laurels, and the Duke of York, one of poppies and autumn leaves. Other emblems were laid on behalf of the Queen and other members of the Royal Family. Mr. Baldwin and many Ministers also bore wreaths.

An outburst of cheering was reserved for the passage of "Old Bill," the veteran motor-omnibus which took many of the "Old Contemptibles" to the front in 1914 and afterwards figured in many campaigns till 1918. It came quite early in the procession, bright in red paint, and hung with scarlet poppies bearing on its sides the names of the battles it had seen.

THE FAMILIAR FACE.

Visions at the Unknown Warrior's Grave.

The echo of a big gun struggled for release in the high vaulting of Westminster Abbey. Outside a nation came to a standstill. A slant of sunlight that had danced on the grave of the Unknown Warrior narrowed until it singled out the whiteness of a single bud.

It might have picked out the crimson of the clergy or the choir, the gold of the Cross of Westminster, swaying ever so slightly in an unsteady hand, the uniforms of soldiers, sailors, or airmen, or the bright ribbons of the ex-Service men. But when everything was silent except the heart it remained steadfast on one spot—the grave of just one of the multitude that died, the burial place among Kings of every one of that multitude.

It had blazed on the grave when the choir and clergy had moved to High Altar singing the proud hymn "The Supreme Sacrifice."

Prayers, earnest though almost inaudible, and then the pleafal Contakion of the Faithful Departed sung by this whole multitude which was kneeling and facing the grave from three sides. Just as the Contakion was ending with the words "weeping o'er the grave, we make our song, Hallelujah." Big Ben chimed heavily, dolefully, and the boom of the gun and the whisper of "Hallelujah" came together.

That Single Bud.

At that moment they were all looking at that single illumined bud, and not a single eye saw it. Every eye conjured up instead a secret sight which no other eye in that vast assembly could see or should see. Probably no one could say what it was.

At that moment when the distance of death was dissolved they pictured a figure standing by the grave, stalwart, firm of jaw. He seemed as indefinite in shape as anything seen in a fire's flames. Everyone saw his uniform, but to each eye the colour and decorations were different.

All of them, in their mind's eye, saw his face, and yet all saw different features. I visualised one familiar face, but the woman who sobbed before me and the grey-headed man who kept tightening his eyes, and the R.A.M.C. private who coughed uncomfortably could never have known him.

"Our Work Done."

Again the cannon. A vast congregation rose noiselessly. The singing of the choir came nearer and nearer until it joined in the whole volume of "Abide with me," and then the whole procession reached the graveside. There followed the 10th, and then the wonderful 16th Century Prayer said at the actual burial of the Unknown Warrior, which may be used as long as his memory remains green:

O Lord, support us all the day long of this troublous life, until the shades lengthen and the evening comes, and the busy world is hushed, the fever of life is over, and our work done. . . .

Triumphantly "O God, our help in ages past," rose to the highest mists of the Abbey; the Blessing followed, and a sharp click of heels preluded the National Anthem. Everyone remained at attention.

A rustle somewhere in the church, it might have been anywhere. Reveille. Reveille, more joyously than it ever rang out on a dawn-silvered embattlement or over the fields of Flanders. Reveille, with its message that night has ended and day has come again with golden promise.

THE SILENCE BROKEN.

Gun Falls Where the Maroons Succeeded.

The gun fired in Hyde Park to mark the end of the Silence was not successful in obtaining uniformity of observance as the maroons were in previous years.

It was heard at the Cenotaph as the third stroke of Big Ben chimed, and it thus broke the Silence. It was also heard at the Royal Exchange, but outside the city and the West End its boom did not penetrate.

Three clocks were chiming eleven at from one to two minute intervals within sound of the Royal Exchange. A congregation in a Cheshire Church taking the time from a public clock in the absence of the official maroon, was singing the National Anthem while the huge crowd outside the Mansion House was standing to attention in hushed reverence.

During the Silence, Underground trains at Acton were running, and in parts of Horney tramway-cars and omnibuses did not halt.

ARMISTICE DAY ITEMS.

Memorial Wreaths Placed In The Sea. Wreaths in memory of sailors and fishermen were placed in the sea at Scarborough, Whitby, and Redcar.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Trenchard, accompanied by several officers, laid a wreath on the R.A.F. Memorial on the Embankment.

By a coincidence the workmen yesterday completed the cutting in two of Lord Beatty's famous flagship the Lion at a shipbreaking yard at Hopburn, Durham.

Business was suspended in the Law Courts, during the Silence, the judges, counsel, and others all standing. A woman in the Divorce Court sobbed hysterically and then fainted. Lady Wilson, whose husband, Field-Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, was murdered by Irish gunmen after unveiling the Great Eastern Railway's Memorial at Liverpool Street Station, placed a wreath on the memorial.

A number of motor coaches with disabled ex-Service men from London hospitals and other institutions were allowed to go to the Cenotaph. One man, whose legs had been shot off, was carried by a friend who knelt as the crippled man laid his wreath. A young man, apparently a foreigner, who refused to stop during the Silence was roughly handled by the crowd in the City of London before he escaped by dashing into a shop and running out through a side door; and a man who walked in the Strand, W.C., with his hat on had to be arrested to protect him from the people. A crowd of about 15,000 at the Brighton memorial kept a silence for eight minutes. The hooter which was to announce the hour officially did not sound and after the people had stood silently for six minutes a gong was used, and the crowd remained motionless for another two minutes. A special service was held for the 600 prisoners at Parkhurst, Isle of Wight. The convicts' choir led the singing of "O God our help in ages past," and convict bugles sounded the "Last Post." A prisoner laid a wreath on the memorial to form mates who fell in the war. At neighboring Campbell prison, a similar service was held, the sang the National Anthem after two minutes Silence. The Imperial War Museum is now housed in buildings adjacent to the Imperial Institute, South Kensington, was opened to the public the first time since its transfer to the Crystal Palace. The salute signalled by the bell of H.M.S. plicable used in successive salutes that name since Trafalgar and the bugle which sounded at the pause was that used by the Gordons at the Battle of Loos.

Moralizing Influence of the New Youth Movement

trial of the two young post-graduate students of the University of Toronto—members of the intelligent that institution—charged with the most heinous crime in police annals, has served to draw public attention on the development of the Youth Movement and the role of radicalism in the colleges and schools of the United States.

The Youth Movement is the outgrowth of the Socialist Society, which in the country about 25 years ago composed of those elements in colleges whose object is to denigrate the Government of the United States and demolish the foundations of civilization. Its purpose is to teach the students, the young people, to teach them a combative attitude and all parental authority, as well as absolute disrespect for laws of all nations.

The fruits of such teachings being harrowed to-day, as evinced by the slaying of the 14 year school boy in Chicago, and other cases of crime, less diabolical in nature but equally depraved, committed by young intellectuals.

The Intercollegiate Socialist Society is gaining real headway about the time of the war. But when the use of Socialism became known through the declared war position of the Socialist party, the organization as beautiful theories was given a new look, and the name was changed to the League for Industrial Democracy.

reach those not to be reached through this League and to bewilder the public. There also were formed the Youth League and the Youth Movement working in connection with the Social Student Forum. Aiding these amicable organizations are found American Civil Liberties Union, Women's International League for Freedom and the National League for the Prevention of War, as well as for propaganda and alleged "peace."

From the very beginning of life, the child must be protected from inhuman, intolerance, warping and all the influences of every description. He must be left to himself, and not subjected to be himself, but to be a child, and reverence, but with a certain amount of experiment, adaptation, must be the spirit of his life. The Chicago youths, now charged with murder, declare they were actuated by a spirit of "adventure" and "experiment."

Commenting, in highest terms of praise, the Youth Movement of Germany, Dr. Holmes, on page 16 of the pamphlet, says: "Our purpose," says the Wandervoog, "is to form our own life in singing and upon our own responsibility. With this idea in mind they refuse to recognize adult leadership or control. They will not have older people among them. In the beginning they went off on their hikes and camped in the woods. Later they refused to accept supervision of the kind. Now they organize always in pairs, a boy to every girl, a girl to every boy, tramp off to their hammock, or rest huts, hold their festive banquets and dances, spend often the night sleeping in the hut or under the trees, and always without adult control."

Boys and Girls Misguided. Little knowing what they actually are doing, thousands of misguided boys and girls are being conducted through the Youth Movement and National Student Forum or some other equally as disloyal organization.

The National Student Forum is to the Socialists and Communists in colleges and universities what the National Council for Prevention of War is to the Pacifists and Internationalists—a clearing house for their organizations.

Earl Haig's Appeal for Remembrance

The following is the letter written by Field Marshal Earl Haig to the Daily Mail on Nov. 11, in which he appealed to the public for funds for the disabled soldiers or their dependants. The Daily Mail's contribution was £5,000.

REMEMBRANCE DAY.

From Earl Haig.
To the Editor of The Daily Mail.
Sir—Of all days in the year, November 11 stands out pre-eminently as the Day of Remembrance: in the official observance of that day the supreme moment is the two minutes' silence, when we commemorate the memory of the million British men and women who gave up their lives in order that Britain, with her ideals and civilization, might maintain her rightful place in the comity of nations.

Throughout the Empire the minds of hundreds of millions surrender themselves in homage to the gallant dead. Is it sufficient, though, for November 11 to be only a Day of Remembrance of the fallen? To-day there are 700,000 ex-Servicemen of all services and of all ranks unemployed and in need of assistance—there are also the widows and the children of those whose memory we honour. Should not that day be equally one of service? To mourn the loss of relatives and friends is a pious and proper duty; but regrets, however sacred, are sterile if they end there; more is needed—it should be the serious effort of each individual to cultivate a habit of mind to combine service with remembrance, service to the comrades and dependants of the fallen.

The appeal fund which was inaugurated in 1921 has, I venture to believe (and I base my belief on the support given to that fund), become the recognized channel for the rendering of that service of which I have written; and I appeal with earnestness and confidence to my fellow-country-

The Dramatic Comet of the Year

"THY NAME IS WOMAN" OPENS AT THE NICKEL.
"Thy Name Is Woman," is the dramatic comet of the year. This new Fred Niblo production for Metro opened last night at the Nickel Theatre and had the audience almost gasping for breath at the fire of its love scenes and the power of its climaxes. The credit of this accomplishment appears to rest surely on the shoulders of Mr. Niblo and his cast of players, the latter including such favorites as Ramon Novarro, Barbara La Marr, William V. Mong, Edith Roberts, Robert Edeson, Wallace MacDonald and Claire MacDowell.

The story, of course, has a lot to do with it. It concerns the eternal conflict of men over a beautiful woman. An old smuggler in the Spanish Pyrenees has a young wife who is sought by several other men. A young soldier is sent from the garrison to make love to her and thus learn enough about the smuggler to effect his capture. The soldier and wife fall in love and the struggle is on. With this as a starting point, the picture works up to great dramatic climaxes, with the final solution coming only after a tragedy.

The unusual chance for rich, warm atmosphere with the background of life in the Pyrenees has been fully taken advantage of by Mr. Niblo. His exterior "shots" are of rare beauty, and the interior sets, especially that of the smuggler's cabin, are vivid and filled with interesting detail. In this he had the help of Victor Milner, the cameraman.

First National Attractions Are The Pictures

That the theatrical going people of the city realize that First National Attractions are pictures worth going to see, was fully evidenced at the popular Star last evening when large audiences witnessed "The Eternal City," a production featuring besides 20,000 others Lionel Barrymore, Bert Lytell and Barbara La Marr. The scenes laid as they are in Rome, are the highest in photography, whilst the acting of Miss La Marr was nothing short of perfection.

For to-morrow is a complete change (it may be here mentioned the Star Movie change three times weekly) the feature picture being "Youthful Cheaters" with Glenn Hunter, and is a "jazz picture for a jazz age."
