

NEW CARPETS. Dever Brothers

Have just opened 16 Bales of New Carpets, comprising some elegant designs

Brussels, Tapestry, All Wools and Unions.

2 CASES
WINDOW POLES,
VERY CHEAP.

DEVER BROTHERS.

Fredericton, March 10th, 1888.

HERRING!

NO 1 LABRADOR

and

EASTERN HERRING,

Just Received in Half Barrels.

A SPLENDID ARTICLE. FOR SALE LOW.

YERXA & YERXA

No. 158 Queen Street, Two Doors Above People's Bank.

Fredericton, Feb. 27th, 1888.

W.R. LOGAN

Queen Street, Fredericton.

Mixed Pickles in half barrels, New Coconuts, Biscuits, Confectionery, Sugars, Molasses and all kinds of Canned Goods, Yorkshire Malt, Worcester Sauce, Fry's and Mott's Chocolate French Mustard, Lamb's Tongues, Lunch Tongues, 25 half choice Congo Tea of extra good Quality, and 50 Caddies Tea, Black Carpet Jam, Red Currant Jam, Strawberry Jam packed by Chapman & Co., England, Sweet Oranges, Choice Dates and Lemons, Labrador Herring, Shad, No. 1 Salt Mackerel and Choice Table Cod-fish. Just received at

W.R. LOGAN'S

Fredericton, March 24th, 1888.

When the Spring Time Comes

GENTLE ANNE

SEND YOUR

YOUNG MAN

To W. E. SEERY'S and have him order a SPRING SUIT and OVERCOAT.

For style and finish my work cannot be surpassed. The Spring and Summer Fashion Plates are in now, so order early before the rush commences. Cutting for Ladies and Gents attended to promptly.

W. E. SEERY,

WILMOT AVE.

Fredericton, Feb. 21st, 1888.

224 QUEEN ST.

We have opened a Special Line of Spring & Summer Underwear, Extra Value, which we will sell from 75 CTS., TO $1.00 PER SUIT.

Dont fall to Give us a call before buying elsewhere.

Also a line of Pants, the best value in the Market.

G. H. THOMAS & CO.

Fredericton, March 11th, 1888.

WE WANT POTATOES.

WE HANDED 50,000 BUSH-ELS POTATOES LAST SPRING.

And send more for our Shippers. Having decided to sell in small lots, those who get orders, please, to send in our more stock. Write us and this

HATHWAY & CO.

General Commission Merchants, 22 CENTRAL WHARF, BOSTON, MASS. Members Chamber of Commerce, Established 1828. Oct 24, 1887

MARGARET.

I cannot leave him! she muttered. Mother of Mercy! I cannot! Write to him! No, no; I should go to him, trust myself at his feet!

She moved onward, slowly to the library. She must write to her brother to come here for his wife.

For some minutes after she had reached the library she sat in a kind of bewilderment; she could not collect her thoughts; and she must write to Langton in no ordinary terms to induce him to cross the threshold of Vincent Dare's house.

But after a time she rallied, and wrote her letter—a letter that Langton Clavering could not fail to obey.

The letter written and despatched, Margaret returned to Agnes, who was pacing restlessly up and down her room. She came up to her sister-in-law at once.

You have written to Langton? she asked, in a hurried, feverish manner.

—Yes, I have just seen him.

—Will he not come here, Margaret? Never mind, he will meet me, and I shall soon persuade him to come into the house. Perhaps he will do so.

—Margaret—Agnes suddenly gripped the hand that had been soothing her—Vincent Dare here!

—Yes; I have just seen him.

—Don't let him come near me! I said the other, fiercely. I feel as if I could kill him!

—He will not come, Agnes; he will never, willingly, think, see you again.

—I could not meet him, could not! Agnes said, dropping into a chair and covering her face.

—Margaret, she said, slowly, you promised to keep Vincent Dare's secret, and you keep it, and for my sake and Langton's you stayed here, where your life must have been a torture, after you knew the truth.

—Margaret moved away a little, turning her face from her sister.

—Agnes clasped her hand to her forehead. Margaret, she cried, did you ever care for this man?

—Did I ever care for him? Margaret said under her breath, for the first time in her life, she felt as if she could laugh. Ask me, rather, if I do care for him, and I will answer you—yes! I love him with all my soul—with all my heart, my mind, and my strength.

—Oh, Heaven! and he—loves you? Yes, Agnes, speak no more of this; the knowledge of his sin could not have been in my heart, though it may separate me from him.

—Agnes took Margaret's hand in hers. My own sister, she whispered, you will be true to me, will you not? You will be true to me, will you not? You will be true to me, will you not?

—Home! She could have no home save Vincent Dare's side.

—She let Agnes kiss her, and kissed her in return; but her heart still said I cannot leave him! I cannot leave him!

CHAPTER XLV. "AN HOUR, AND THAT WAS ALL!"

Three times did Langton Clavering read his sister's letter. What did it mean?—why was she at Estover's?—why was he to go to her?—what was it all about?—he heard! At the mere idea, his cheek flushed and his heart throbbled. Was it a falsehood that Dare had told him—that Agnes was dead? Had Margaret discovered something about her?

What you have to learn, Margaret wrote, is more than life and death to you. If you never grant another prayer of mine while we both live, grant this. Go to Estover's—to his house! I will, if it must be, but he would go as it was, and he would go—and at once.

Margaret had not offered to send any carriage or to meet her brother at the station; she knew that he would expect nothing that must come from Vincent Dare's hands. So he walked from the station, through the park—a long walk; but his veins were fevered, his heart on fire; the exercise was some relief to him; he walked fast, and covered the ground quickly.

With what irrepressible bitterness, with what passion of hatred, he looked up at the gray towers of Estover as he approached it, to wonder what he would find there! He had almost turned back even then, but he conquered the impulse, and went up to the door.

—The servant who answered his summons. Miss Lorraine, sir? What name shall I give you? Never mind the name. She will know you when you see her; say a gentleman has asked for her.

—The servant had evidently had instructions, for he immediately ushered Clavering into the library, where he would certainly not have been admitted, otherwise Langton would have been there.

—Liar and betrayer! Dare repeated, though the words hurled at him cut him like a knife. Yes, for the sake of revenge I was both; and that revenge has been on my own head. It has cost me all that life holds for me. It has cost me the woman I worship!

—What! exclaimed Clavering, involuntarily. Margaret—

—Margaret will never be my wife, said Dare, quietly. She always told me it could never be; but I hoped against hope, not dreaming of the barrier between us; now that I know it, I have resigned all claim to her.

—Thank Heaven! said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—It is on her own head, said Vincent Dare, not even outwardly wincing under the lash, that you are here to-day. I can come to make at least some restitution for the wrong I did you.

—Do you mock me? What restitution can you make? Can you restore the dead? There was no dishonor! I hold it as Clavering started back, with a passionate exclamation on his lips, for your own sake, you must hear me. You called me a liar, and I have lied to you; but it is Heaven's own truth that I tell you now.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

—I have not lied to you, said Clavering, with a kind of stern joy, that she is saved from the shame, the misery, of becoming your wife. In this at least your crime has been forgiven you.

A MAGNIFICENT CHECK.

A Salesman Who Exerted His Cheek-Proprietors.

A little elderly man with a timid air, and whose form was covered with a long white beard, stood in the doorway of a well-known clothing store on Broadway yesterday afternoon, gazing at a pair of gray whiskers that he had just received.

—I have just received a pair of gray whiskers, said the man, in a low, gentle voice, as if he stood in great awe of the salesman, who had to show some $100 overcoat. The salesman, in that condescending manner peculiar to handsome men, got some out, and continued getting some out and in getting some more until he had tried on the little man a sample of all the $100 overcoats in the place.

The customer's eye seemed to glow with the salesman's rage. He asked for each successive coat with an "if you please," uttered in a more conciliatory tone each time. When the salesman, in a loud, dignified voice, finally informed him that he had looked at the entire stock of $100 overcoats, the little man calmly intimated he would take the first one that had been shown to him, and the salesman looked stern and demanded to know whether he would have the new or the old one wrapped up.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

—I will take the new one, said the little man, in a whispering tone, in a low voice, and he had purchased the suit for $10 in that same store, and as it had cost so much he thought it reliable, and like that should allow a liberal discount on the overcoat. The salesman was not satisfied. He had never heard of such a thing. He called for the manager, and that individual, after a moment's reflection, knew he demanded for the coat. The manager objected on the ground that the suit had been in stock for nearly three years. Then the little man calmly intimated that he had worn the suit on Sundays for one year, and he had been in the store for six months, and he had thought the price on the suit had been a good one, and he had offered the manager a $10 discount, and the manager had refused to do so.

GRAND CLEARANCE SALE,

YORK STREET, FREDERICTON.

ARTHUR LIMERICK desires to thank his friends and the public generally, for the very liberal patronage extended to him during the last 12 years, and to announce that he has decided to close his present business on the 1st of April, 1888.

He will sell the whole of his present stock, consisting of all kinds of goods, at a great reduction. He will sell the whole of his present stock, consisting of all kinds of goods, at a great reduction. He will sell the whole of his present stock, consisting of all kinds of goods, at a great reduction.