Pedestrians who have started to cross a street at a reasonable distance from an approaching motor car have the right to do so at the pace of an ordinary walk, and the motorist has no right to compel pedestrians to rush or run for safety by the insolent blowing of the horn. Slacken speed when approaching pedestrians, blow the horn if thought necessary to warn them, but permit them to cross the street in safety at a reasonable pace. Remember there are old people, invalids and children.

The Great War Veterans of Ontario at their convention in Windsor last week showed great good sense by overwhelmingly deciding to keep their association out of politics. They were no less level-headed in refusing to demand from the Federal Government a cash grant of $2,000 for each demobilized veteran, which would increase the debt of the country nearly a billion dollars and add to the burden of every man, woman and child in Canada. The Ontario Veterans also displayed their grasp of what constitutes good citizenship by showing hostility toward the Bolshevists who are endeavoring to overturn the established order of things throughout the Dominion. Having risked their lives for democracy, they have no thought of assisting to plunge the country into anarchy.

It has come to the point where a body has to earn twice as much as he needs in order to get half enough to live on.

HOME BANK MANAGER DEAD

Mr. Mackenzie of Melbourne Passes Away at His Home in Scotland

Melbourne, May 28.—The people of Melbourne and vicinity were greatly shocked to hear of the death in Edinburgh of H. D. A. Mackenzie, for many years the popular and efficient manager of the Home Bank here. For some time previous to his departure from here he had not been feeling up to his usual standard of health, but it was thought by his many friends that a rest and a visit to his old home in Edinburgh would restore him to his usual health again.

Mr. Mackenzie was a thorough Scotchman of the old stock. He was born in the Western Highlands of Scotland in November, 1869, but shortly afterward the family moved to Burnt Island, Fife, near Edinburgh, where his two brothers and two sisters still reside. Early in life Mr. Mackenzie entered the banking business in Scotland, and after receiving a thorough training there, came to Canada and joined the service of the Home Bank in November, 1906, as ledger-keeper at the Church street branch, Toronto.

In July, 1909, he was appointed manager of the branch at Melbourne, discharging the duties of that position with credit both to himself and to the bank, winning the esteem and respect of all who knew him.

In his business life he was most untiring in his efforts to advance the interests of the bank that employed him. Even in the face of failing health his indomitable determination to push ahead was shown in his planning for and opening a branch of the bank at Walkers. To the public life of the village he was ever a constant and valuable contributor. Especially was this seen in the acquiring of the Melbourne park and recreation grounds and in the formation of the agricultural society. He always took a keen interest in the work of this body, and was most untiring in his efforts to promote its welfare. In fact, to him probably more than to any other is due the excellent reputation which the Melbourne fair enjoys at the present time of being one of the most up-to-date of the county fairs.

Mr. Mackenzie was also prominent in the work of the Oddfellows of Melbourne. Some time ago he held the office of Noble Grand, and at the time of his departure was treasurer of the lodge here. During the past year he was also chairman of the board of managers of the Presbyterian church here. For some years Mr. Mackenzie had planned to revisit his native land but was prevented by the war, but on his termination he was granted on March 17th three months' leave of absence with full pay, the bank very generously stipulating that if that was not sufficient he was to take six months. But it was of no avail. Mr. Mackenzie reached Edinburgh, Scotland, on April 20th, and on April 27th passed peacefully and quietly away to the Great Beyond.

WHITTINGTON-WINSHIP

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. R. J. Murphy at the rectory, Wardsville, on May 21st, when Susan Winship, eldest daughter of James Winship, was united in marriage to James Whittington of Newbury. The bride was given away by her father and attended by Cora Underhill of Bothwell, Fred. Underhill being best man. The bride was prettily gowned in white silk, with hat of white georgette crepe. After the ceremony the young couple left by motor for Thamesville, where a wedding supper was served at the home of Thos. Winslow, leaving shortly after amid showers of confetti and good wishes for Detroit.

RETURNED HERO HONORED

An event of interest took place on Monday evening when about a hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of James Winship to spend a social evening with Lance-Corporal Hurdle, youngest son of Edgar Hurdle, who recently returned from overseas. The evening was spent in games and dancing. Shortly before lunch, Lance-Corporal Hurdle was called forward and presented with an appropriate address and gift of money. Mrs. James Whittington read the address and Mrs. D. Logan made the presentation. Lance-Corp. Hurdle spent his early life in Moss township and seven years ago went to Enn. Early in 1915 he enlisted with a Port Arthur battalion and spent over three years in France, being fortunate in coming back without a scratch.

THE WESTERN FAIR

London's popular Exhibition, the Western Fair, will be held this year from September 4th to 13th. Prize lists, entry forms, hangers and other advertising matter will soon be ready to mail.

Although the wet weather of last year was the cause of great loss and disappointment the management is not at all discouraged, but is making active preparations for the largest and best exhibition ever held in London. The prize list, which is a very liberal one, has been adjusted by the committees in charge of the different departments, and will be found of great interest to intending exhibitors. A copy of this, with entry form required, will be mailed to any address on application to the secretary, A. M. Hunt, General Offices Dominion Savings Building, London, Ontario.

METHODIST DISTRICT MEETING

The annual meeting of the Ridge-town District was held on Monday and Tuesday in the Methodist church here.

Rev. Mr. McAllister of Ridgetown was in the chair.

A good deal of general business was transacted. A large increase in missionary funds and in ministerial support was reported. The district secretary for Sunday schools, Rev. R. Fullerton, reported a large increase in Sunday school attendance and contributions. Rev. W. L. Hiles was appointed to the stationing committee.

Resolutions were passed asking the Dominion Government to make permanent the present prohibition law, discouraging the practice of Sunday fund-raising where such can be avoided; asking for the prohibition of race track gambling; and to Rev. J. A. Ayer, chief license inspector, congratulating him on the result of the recent Government investigation regarding his department.

The next annual meeting will be held in the new church in Highgate.

A DASTARDLY DEED

Saturday night last after the electric light bulbs had ceased to glow and before the church bells had yanked the weary Christian from his drowsy couch, some bold, bad man, armed with sharp and muffled handsaw and with cold-blooded murder in his heart, made a wanton attack on the tieposts that for years have ornamented the main street of Glencoe.

And the tieposts are now a thing of the past, having disappeared as if by magic. Where they have gone to or who made away with them even Olga fails to tell.

Some years ago the council ordered the tieposts to be removed from Main street, and convenient hitching places were provided on some of the side streets. This, however, was considered a drastic action, and eventually many of the business men prevailed upon a newly-elected council to allow them to restore the tieposts, provided they were constructed with uniformity and with some show of the artistic. Nicely turned posts were made, fitted with cast iron hoods representing a horse's head. These were set up and painted a popular shade, but still they were looked upon as more or less of an evil and a menace to public health, if not quite beneath the dignity of a village that in other respects gave it, self city airs.

Perhaps, now that the auto has practically superseded the horse, and flying machines are of the near future, the tieposts can just as well be dispensed with. What is mostly worthy of the town fathers as well as the business men is the fact that the posts had an intrinsic value, the heads alone having cost in pre-war days two dollars and a half apiece. And to think they have been stolen—thirteen in all!

CAPTURED A BEAVER

Samuel Leech of Moss captured a beaver in a ditch on his farm, lot 26 first concession, on Sunday. The animal is supposed to have escaped from Springbank Park at London and made its way down the Thames, and up a creek to the ditch. It is many years since beavers were known to inhabit the streams in Western Ontario, and the one now in captivity is quite a curiosity to the countryside, as many as three hundred people having come in one day to see it.

MCCOLL-JOHNSON

The marriage was solemnized on Wednesday, May 21st, at the residence of the bride's father, William Johnson, Appin, of Samuel T. McColl and Miss Mary Adah Johnson, Rev. H. D. McCulloch officiating. Owing to a recent bereavement only immediate relatives of the bride and groom were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. McColl left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip to London and other points east, and on their return will reside at Appin.

EXCAVATIONS IN HOLY LAND

The end of the war gives a new beginning to the science of archaeology. Because of an ancient Mohammedan edict against disturbing the dead, excavations in the Holy Land were constantly hampered by interference from the Turkish Government. But now that the Turk has been driven from Palestine forever, scholars are already excavating where ancient wonders have lain buried under the dust and ruin of 3,000 years.

The very pavement on which Moses stood when he begged the Pharaoh of the oppression to let the children of Israel depart from bondage; the very throne before which Aaron "cast down his rod" and it became a serpent; the actual room which formed the background for events in the chapters of Exodus—these have been brought to light by recent exploration in Egypt.

Investigation of Samaria is already being arranged for, and excavations are to start almost at once above the temple. Possibly also there will be no Jewish objection to excavating the vaults and passages under Solomon's temple, where the Ark of the Covenant is said to have been hidden.

You can't begin too early now to clean up, paint up, and buck up and help to make Glencoe just what you think it ought to be. There's a lot to be done around your place, and nobody knows better than yourself just how to do it.

The war must be over. An alienation suit in New York shows that the girls have resumed falling in love with matinee idols.—Detroit Free Press.

A VICTIM OF THE THAMES

Jesse Nevils Drowns in Sight of Wife While Rafting Logs

On Tuesday afternoon Jesse Nevils, a well-known farmer residing north of Appin in Ekfrid township lost his life in the River Thames in Moss.

Mr. Nevils had been engaged for some time with other men in getting timber out of the Dykes farm in Aldborough for a Thamesville firm. Since spring opened the method was taken of rafting the timber down the river to Thamesville. On Tuesday a raft had about been completed and Mr. Nevils and another man were in a small boat putting the finishing touches upon it. Suddenly the boat in some unaccountable manner upset, throwing both men into the water, which at this point is quite deep and running swiftly. Nevils disappeared almost immediately beneath the water, while his companion managed to keep to the surface and recovering himself made a desperate attempt to rescue Nevils, who rose once or twice. He managed to grasp the drowning man but was unable to retain his hold, and in another moment Nevils was swept away.

A sad feature of the accident was that Mrs. Nevils was on the river bank watching the rafting operations and saw her husband drown. The victim of the accident was a son of William Nevils and was about 35 years of age. He leaves his wife but no family.

The body of Mr. Nevils had not been recovered at time of writing on Wednesday.

DEATH OF EVAN CORNEILLE

A message was received at Melbourne last week stating that Evan Corneille, youngest son of the late "Squire" J. M. Corneille, passed away at his home in Vancouver. It is understood that the effects of the flu. He leaves a young widow and four children, a mother, sister and two brothers, J. B. of Melbourne and C. G. of the West. Evan was well-known in Glencoe and vicinity, the family having resided here for some years before moving to Melbourne.

BASEBALL SEASON OPENED

At West Lorne celebration of Victoria Day on Monday, the opening game in the Ekfrid and Middlesex ball league was played in the forenoon between Glencoe and Appin, the former winning by a score of 5 to 1.

Glencoe lineup: Davenport 2b, Coats, Dobie 1b, Hamilton 3b, Babcock, McLaughlin rf, Luckham cf, Aldred lf, Hicks p.

Appin lineup—A. D. McIntyre 2b, A. McMaster ss, A. Patterson 1b, A. Fletcher 3b, E. McIntyre cf, W. McAllister lf, McIntyre p. McK. McAllister, Campbell, Appin, Parrott, Glencoe.

In the afternoon a game was begun between West Lorne and Dutton, which was unfinished. In the eighth inning a dispute arose which threatened to bring on a free fight. Play after that was out of the question. Neither side scored up to the eighth innings.

A game of ball will be played at Appin on Wednesday afternoon, June 4, at 4 o'clock between Dutton and Appin.

CANADA REMAINS DRY

Dominion prohibition is assured for another year at least. The Dominion Government's bill confirming the country-wide temperance measure enacted by order-in-council early last year was approved at Ottawa last week, not a member of the House opposing the principle of the bill. The attitude of an overwhelming majority of the legislators was that the policy which proved so effective as a war measure is just as necessary in the trying period of reconstruction and readjustment.

DARING BRITISH AVIATORS, HAWKER AND GRIEVE, RESCUED IN MID-OCEAN

Forced to Alight in Atlantic Because of Machine Trouble. They Were Picked Up by Danish Steamer "Mary"—Admiralty Sent Destroyer to Convey Them to Scotland.

London, May 25.—Missing for six days, and virtually given up for lost, Harry G. Hawker and his navigator, Lieut.-Commander Mackenzie Grieve, the British aviators, who essayed a flight across the Atlantic Ocean without protection against disaster save what their own skill afforded, are safe tonight aboard a British warship off the Orkneys.

Some 1,500 miles out from Newfoundland, and 800 from the Irish coast, on Monday, May 19, the lone aviators, making the best of an engine which was failing to function properly, were forced to alight on the water. The little Danish steamer Mary, bound from New Orleans and Norfolk for Arrhuus, Denmark, picked the wayfarers up and continued on her northward voyage.

Lacking a wireless outfit, the Captain of the steamer was obliged to withhold the good tidings of the rescue until he was opposite the Butt of Lewis, where the information was signalled by means of flags that Hawker and Grieve were aboard his ship.

Immediately word was flashed to the British Admiralty, which sent out destroyers to overtake the Danish vessel and obtain absolute confirmation. This was done, and one of the destroyers took the aviators off and later transferred them to the flagship Revenge.

From this safe haven Hawker sent a message to-night that his machine had stopped owing to the blocking of the water circulation system.

When the airplane sped away from her starting point Pilot Hawker let loose his wheels and under-gearing, thereby lightening the weight of the machine by a considerable amount, but making a possible landing on the soil of Ireland a more hazardous venture. This, however, probably proved of much advantage when it became necessary to alight on the surface of the water. The airplane remained afloat without difficulty during the hour and a half it took the Danish steamer to come up and effect a rescue.

All Britain is stirred by the news of the safety of these two stout-hearted aviators.

The one person in England who had always held hope was Mrs. Hawker. She always maintained that Providence would protect her man, and, though she received condolences from all classes of people, including the King, she said to-day that she had never ceased to believe that some time and in some way her husband would come back.

The Daily Mail has awarded a consolation prize of $25,000 for Harry G. Hawker and Lieut.-Commander Mackenzie Grieve to divide between them.

In a community like ours, all are neighbors and friends, working together. Our interests are common. We are all in BUSINESS together. OUR business is home-town development. Unlike the overpopulated city, our community has a soul. We temper with our community-SOUL whenever we buy home interests. Not Government's Function

To Advise Brave Englishmen

A despatch from London says:—In the Commons the Government was asked if it was considering the limiting of further attempts to fly the Atlantic, in view of the desperately hazardous conditions. Major-General Seely, Under-Secretary of State for Air, stated that the matter had been given the most careful thought by the Government, who considered that it was not right and was not its function to say to our countrymen that they should not undertake this daring flight and the risks.

It is hoped to produce a million pounds of fish meal annually from fish waste and offal at a plant that is to be established at Tiverton, Nova Scotia. Most of the product will probably be marketed in the Maritime Provinces.

TURKEY TO BE DISMEMBERED

Allies Who Are Unsatisfied With Other Arrangements Each to Have Slice.

A despatch from Paris says:—What ever doubt existed as to the disposition of the once mighty empire, Turkey, was dissipated on Wednesday afternoon when the conclusion was finally reached to begin a dismemberment process of distributing choice bits among the allies who have been disaffected by their treatment on other subjects. Turkey is to be a sort of universal sop.

Britain's insistence that Constantinople shall remain Islamic is likely to result in her receiving a mandate possibly in conjunction with France and Italy, supervised by a League of Nations commission. Another of the latest suggestions concerning Constantinople is that it should be constituted an independent state with a residence for the Sultan, who would retain his spiritual and temporal power. British apprehension as to the effect on Mussulman subjects if the Sultan were to be expelled from Europe explains the revision of plans to that end.

CLYDE SHIPBUILDERS TO EMIGRATE TO AMERICA

A despatch from London says:—A despatch to the Times from Glasgow says that the shipping companies of the Clyde are deluged with enquiries indicating that there will be a great exodus of emigrants from Scotland to North America immediately when transportation facilities are available.

Sikhs and Hindus Eager To Aid in Defeating Afghans

A despatch from London says:—The Viceroy of India announces that the Council of the Regency of Bahawalpur has placed the Imperial service troops and the whole of its resources at the disposal of the Government, in view of the Afghan war. At a representative gathering of Moslem Sikhs and Hindus at Lahore, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab received from all communities convincing assurances of support of the Government in the present crisis.

AUSTRIA'S ARMY REDUCED TO 15,000

All Warships Being Surrendered Together With All War Supplies.

Paris, May 24.—It was announced to-night that the treaty to be presented to Austria would be considered at a plenary session next Tuesday and would be laid before the Austrian delegation probably on Wednesday. The Council of Four to-day considered the military terms as framed by Marshal Foch, Commander-in-Chief of the allied armies; General Diaz, supreme commander of the Italian army, and other military leaders. Austria's formidable army of upward of a million men, which was second only to that of Germany, is reduced by the treaty to 15,000 men; virtually all military supplies would be surrendered or destroyed and further military production abolished.

The naval terms are similarly sweeping, all warships being surrendered and Austria's position as a naval power terminated.

Empire Day and Queen Victoria Centenary Celebrated in London

London, May 26.—The principal ceremony in connection with the observance of Empire Day, which was also the centenary of Queen Victoria's birth, was the memorial service held in Westminster Abbey for the officers and men of the overseas naval and military forces who fell in the war and of thanksgiving for its victorious conclusion.

His Majesty, in the uniform of a field marshal; Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught and other royalists were in the crowded congregation, which also included the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Secretary for War, Admiral Weymans, General Birdwood, Currie, Byng, and other distinguished naval and military officers; Premier Massey of New Zealand and Sir George Perley, High Commissioner for Canada, and other overseas representatives.

TROUBLE BREWING IN AFGHANISTAN

Holy War Being Preached and Natives Are Arming Against British.

London, May 25.—Serious events are brewing on the frontier of Afghanistan, Reuter learns. The Afghans have concentrated forces including many well-armed and well-equipped regulars against the British Expeditionary Force. Attempts of emissaries of the Emirs to induce the frontier tribes to participate in the operations against the British are meeting with only moderate success in the operations which are about to commence.

The British representative in Kandahar, who has reached Quetta, states that a holy war is being vigorously preached, and everybody in Kandahar is buying arms.

DECREASE OF $29,241,460 IN TOTAL APRIL TRADE

A despatch from Ottawa says:—Trade figures for the first month of the new fiscal year show a decrease of $29,241,460 in the total of Canadian trade as compared with April, 1918. The total for last month was $121,527,952, as compared with $150,772,355 in April, 1918. The decrease was chiefly in the total value of merchandise imported, which declined $24,368,720, as compared with last year's figures for April. The total value of imports was as follows: April, 1919, $54,255,219; April, 1918, $78,623,939. A decline of $6,672,493 in the total value of domestic merchandise exported is shown by the figures. In April, 1918, the total value of domestic merchandise exported was $71,161,652, while last month it was $84,489,159.

Body of Captain Fryatt To Be Brought to England

London, May 26.—The body of Capt. Charles Fryatt, the British merchant officer, executed by the Germans in 1916, will be brought home to England and given a burial similar to that of Miss Edith Cavell. Announcement on this effect was made in the House of Commons to-day by Andrew Bonar Law, Government spokesman.

GERMANY WILLING TO SIGN TREATY

Opposition Dying Down—Government Has Called Off Propaganda.

Berlin, May 26.—First impressions after the publication of the peace terms that Germany would sign before the last hour were confirmed by the latest developments. The nationwide storm of protest has died down, except in the East, and the Government has called off the violent protest propaganda which proved too much even for the German peace delegation.

Only the Nationalistic press continues to root enthusiastically in favor of rejecting the proposed treaty or anything resembling it, and it continues to harp on the argument of President Wilson's fourteen points.

It really seems as if a radical change of head and heart had come over the Government. The Erbsenr faction, which is in favor of signing after the exhaustion of all chance to obtain concessions by negotiation, appears to be top dog in the Government. Chancellor Scheidemann is apparently looking for ways and means to sign and save his face, despite his declarations that the treaty is "unacceptable." In political circles the belief has gained currency that some concessions, chiefly of an economic and financial nature, will be granted by the Allies, sufficient to enable the Government to go before the people with a show of success at Versailles, which in turn would enable it to sign gracefully and stay in office.

LENINE REQUESTS AN ARMISTICE

Bolshevism on Wane—Admiral Kolchak's Government Recognized by Peace Conference.

London, May 26.—News of Bolshevik defeats and of a desperate situation confronting the Bolshevik authorities in Russia is reported by the Copenhagen correspondent of the Daily Telegraph. He says Peterhoff, on the south coast of the Gulf of Finland, only twenty-one kilometers from Petrograd, had been captured by the Estonian northern army, acting in conjunction with the British fleet, and it is announced that Lenin had sent to Admiral Kolchak a request for an armistice, with the view of opening peace negotiations.

Many known Bolsheviks are said to be arranging their affairs as best they can and fleeing to the south, and the masses of the people feel themselves deserted when danger is accumulating as never before. It is almost impossible to leave Petrograd. Passengers stand on the platform waiting for trains while the agents plunder their luggage with the cynical remark: "Wherever you are going you can dispense with this."

Paris, May 26.—The Council of Four of the Peace Conference has the anti-Bolshevik Government of Admiral Kolchak and General Denikin, according to Reuter's Agency here.

FORESTS AND RECONSTRUCTION

CANADA NEEDS LARGE EXPORT TRADE TO BALANCE IMPORTS.

Australia Sets An Example in the Matter of Forest Conservation—Enormous Possibilities.

Statesmen and business men have repeatedly emphasized the part that the further development of our natural resources must play in reconstruction after the war. Any such programme must take full account of the forests. Such increased development will assist materially in providing against unemployment, through the building up of new forest industries, in addition to the 5,000 wood-using industries already in existence. It will be a large factor in stabilizing economic conditions generally.

A large export trade is particularly essential to Canada; to redress the unfavourable trade balance, especially with the United States. In this direction, our forests hold a position of peculiar strategic importance, both actual and potential. In British Columbia, for example, it has been shown that the annual lumber cut can be increased five-fold, under good management, without impairing the forest capital stock. This means an enormous export trade to still the shortage of shipping is still the greatest obstacle.

The present and potential value of Canada's export lumber trade is indicated by the order recently placed by Great Britain for lumber from Canada, aggregating around $50,000,000 in value. In the east, the value of our pulpwood forests is indicated by the fact that the value of the exports of pulp and paper now total around $60,000,000 annually. One-fourth of the newspaper used in the United States comes from Canada, and fifteen per cent of the pulp wood consumed in that country is the product of Canadian forests.

Our forests have a wealth-producing capacity, the possibilities of which, from a long-time standpoint, have as yet been realized only in small part. To transmute these possibilities into permanent actualities requires, however, the general acceptance, by the people in general and by Governments in particular, of the fundamental principle that the forest is a crop, rather than a mine, and that cutting operations on non-agricultural lands must be conducted always with a view to the perpetuation of the forest as such.

The practice of silviculture is still in its veriest infancy in Canada, as it is over most of North America. There is still far too strong a tendency toward the practice of forestry anywhere except in the woods. At the same time, it must always be realized that forestry is essentially a business proposition, and that business considerations place definite limitations upon what is feasible to do in the direction of intensive methods.

On the other hand, the great lands of Canada are predominantly Crown lands and are therefore, for the most part, the property of the people of the country. It follows that the public interest, from a long-time viewpoint, should govern in determining the conditions under which exploitation takes place. With the present increased stumpage values, many things in the direction of better management are now becoming economically feasible which would have been out of the question in years past.

Canada may well profit from the example set by the states of Australia, in connection with forest conservation. The states of Victoria and West Australia, in particular, have recently enacted forest legislation so progressive in character that our situation in Canada seems backward by contrast. This legislation sets a new pace, particularly as to land classification, forest reservation, control of cutting operations, reforestation, and amount of money to be spent on the protection and development of state forests generally.

REPORT OF CANADIAN TRADE COMMISSION

Market reports which will serve to guide Canadian exporters and farmers show that livestock in Great Britain is in keen demand. The Board of Agriculture's weekly returns for the middle of April show that prices for nearly all meat animals are maintained, especially for store cattle, though qualities vary considerably. From several market centres the reports were that the supply was not up to the standard, and that sheep showed no improvement, as many lots were marketed in unripe condition owing to wet weather and the shortage of artificial feeds. The same shortage marked the reports on hogs, of which all classes were selling well. At Shrewsbury some Angus cross bullocks made up to eighty-eight shillings ($21.12) per cwt. live weight, while at Birmingham the live weight price for hogs ranged about twenty-one shillings per score ($3.52 per stone of 14 lbs.). Prices everywhere showed an upward tendency. The same shortage was reported in provisions, especially butter and cheese.

Freight service by airplane between Folkestone, England, and Ghent, Belgium, is planned, with its eventual extension to Antwerp and Brussels.

BRINGING UP FATHER

SYRIA, TURKEY'S GREEN SPOT.

Land of Patriarchs and Prophets Will be a Mandatory.

Syria is one of the small nations whose disposition is a Peace Conference problem. This region, extending from the Taurus mountains to Egypt, and from the desert to the Great Sea, is the land of the patriarchs and prophets and apostles—"the Holy Land." Its population numbers about three and a half millions, of Semitic origin, speaking the Arabic language, and yet with so many races intermingled through the centuries of the various conquests and occupations that the people cannot claim any line race as their own.

Greek, Roman and European crusader have all blended with the ancient Semitic stock to produce the Syrians of to-day, whom Lord Cromer, in his memoirs, termed "the cream of the East."

In Syria was the one green spot of Turkey—the Lebanon mountains. In ancient times the mountains were everywhere covered with forests. The cedars of Lebanon not only furnished timber for the building of Solomon's temple in Jerusalem, but the kings of Egypt annually floated large rafts of logs from the Syrian coast to supply the demands of the cities of the Nile. This constant demand from foreign lands, together with the lack of any system of reforestation, has practically denuded the mountains of the whole land.

Once more to cover the mountains and hills with pine and cedar and oak would be a simple task if carried on systematically. The chief enemy to-day of reforestation by nature is the herd of goats, which every spring roam over the whole country and devour every green thing. The little seedling trees suffer especially.

In 1906, because of massacres, the European powers insisted that these mountains be made autonomous. And following that date this little district became a living demonstration of what good government will produce and of what the people of the land are capable of becoming.

The steep mountain sides were terraced to a height of 4000 feet and planted to olives, figs and vines. Taxes were low, safety to persons and property secured, good roads built and kept in repair. The people constructed more comfortable homes and sent their sons to schools and colleges.

The story of the achievements of the Lebanon during the six years of autonomy would be a thrilling narrative in itself.

PRACTICAL ARITHMETIC.

One Parent Set Up a "Store" to Teach His Heir Figuring.

We heard recently of a boy ten years old who was very backward in arithmetic and got poor marks at school. His father finally decided to help him by his own experience.

He started him in business by keeping a grocery store in the attic of their home. The boy does all his own buying, selects his goods and keeps a stock on hand. The mother buys her supplies from him at the regular price and he keeps the profit for his own spending money.

The father insists that he keep his own ledger and keep it accurately and the business will be stopped.

The boy enjoys the idea of the store and his own responsibility, so has eagerly learned from his father the way to buy and sell, make change, figure profits and keep simple accounts. The result is shown by his interest in arithmetic at school and by much higher marks. He has greatly improved in the school work, besides getting valuable training for business.

Reforestation Essential.

It is sometimes argued that we do not need to concern ourselves about the forests of the future, because the forests we now have will last us for 50 or 100 years, or even longer, that it is futile to worry about the matter, so long as we have wood. Of course, it is possible to estimate the length of time our present supply of timber will hold out, assuming certain fixed domestic and foreign demands (demands, incidentally, which are by no means fixed). This question has to do with bearing on the problem of keeping forest lands productive. Let us suppose, for example, that under certain estimated demands our present forests will last us for a hundred years. That is no reason at all why we should allow our cut-over lands to become wastes or near-wastes. In the first place it takes a hundred years, let us say, for a seedling to grow into a respectable tree, fit for the saw. The trees we are now cutting are on the average much older. The time to start our new forests, therefore, is now—not a hundred years from now—for otherwise we should have a long period during which we should be without adequate supplies of timber. In the second place, those who argue that no present action is necessary overlook one of the most vital facts in the whole forest problem, namely, that the destruction of forests in any one locality, district, or region has a distinctly adverse influence on the prosperity of the country as a whole. The forest problem is essentially a local problem.

TREASURE-LAND OF THE ARCTIC

SPITZBERGEN IS AN EL DORADO OF GREAT PROMISE

For the Prospector Who Does Not Fear Cold and Hardships the Rewards Are Certain.

There are few places left in the world which treasure-seekers have not explored, and it stands to reason that those few must be difficult to reach. Otherwise, we should have reached them long ago, and should have started draining them of their rich stores.

Do not imagine then, that Spitzbergen, which is known to possess the richest mineral deposits of any land in the world, is waiting serenely for anyone who cares to buy a spade and book a ticket!

Spitzbergen presents as many difficulties as were ever presented by El Dorado or Klondike, or any other of the world's get-rich-quick spots. Ice-bound during the greater part of the year, and always unmistakably cold, it is only accessible during the summer, when the ice melts and allows boats to enter its bays.

Spitzbergen has been selected by the British Northern Exploration Company as the starting point of its aerial North Pole expedition, so it is very much in the public eye from many points of view. It lies some 400 miles from the most northerly point of Norway, some 1,200 miles from the north of Great Britain, and some 600 miles from the North Pole. Its entire area is about the size of Ireland.

Several European powers have their eye upon Spitzbergen, and there is little doubt that one of these days big efforts will be made to lift its treasures. At present claims have been staked out by Swedish, Norwegian and British companies.

Before the war a twenty-square-mile area was granted to Germany, but this has now been recaptured by the British interests, and the Arctic Coal Company's properties at Advent Bay have been taken over by Norwegian interests. This coal company was an American firm, with headquarters in Boston. It is not at all improbable that the whole archipelago will be annexed by Great Britain before long.

No Man's Land.

The history of Spitzbergen from the explorers' point of view can be told in a few words:

Dutch ships first reached there in 1596, and, although possession was taken in the name of Holland, no attempt was made to make use of the discovery. The English flag was hoisted in 1614, and in 1619 a conference in London effected a compromise between the English and Dutch claims to the new land, the Dutch restricting themselves to the north-west corner and the north coast, and the English keeping to the other west coast bays. The destruction of the whaling industry caused both the Dutch and the English to abandon Spitzbergen some years afterward.

Russian trappers were the next to visit the archipelago. Although they frequented it from 1750 to 1850, there was no move on the part of the Russian Government towards annexation.

The hunting interests soon died down, as the fishing interest had, and it was not until about thirty years ago that attention was called to the mineral wealth of Spitzbergen. That opened a new era.

It was the archipelago's coal deposits that first attracted attention. Wonderfully beautiful marbles were then located, and iron ores in great quantity, and of a high grade, were found. Industrial activity of course raised at once the question of the ownership of the land.

For two centuries claims to ownership had lain dormant, but the fact was that the only country which for a long series of years had consistently claimed and actually occupied any considerable part of the country was Great Britain.

The north-west corner belonged unquestionably to the Dutch. At present, however, no Dutch interests are engaged in the development of the land.

A Little Colony.

The most up to date developments thus far are the Swedish coal mines at Braganza Bay on the west coast. The camp is a well built, and well furnished one, and there are a number of women and children among the inhabitants. Live stock is raised, and no trouble is had with the keeping of sheep, pigs, and cattle, save in the winter, when they have to be stabled carefully.

Spitzbergen used to be abandoned in the winter except for an occasional fisherman or trapper who had the misfortune to become marooned there, but to-day the winter population of the archipelago is about 1,800.

Although coal is the only mineral developed up to now, there are what seem to be inexhaustible deposits of high grade iron ore, equal, if not superior, to the rich deposits of Arctic Sweden. Other known minerals include copper pyrites, asbestos, molybdenite, graphite, lead, silver and gold.

There are no fewer than forty varieties of marble, many of which are of extreme beauty and capable of attaining a high polish. At Horn Sound there are guano deposits extending five miles inland.

Fourteen of the eighteen coal fields which geologists have discovered in Spitzbergen are on the territory occupied by the British. The outcrops in various localities are visible for many miles, and so far only the shore frontages have been prospected.

The coal is mostly semi-bituminous, and rich in volatiles, but there is also anthracite coal, yielding a high percentage of carbon and very little ash. Many Norwegian shipmasters say that Spitzbergen coal gives them a knot more per hour than Welsh coal. The whole of the archipelago's rich iron ore deposits are under British control. In the neighborhood of Rechercher Bay, in West Spitzbergen, there are millions of tons of very rich ore, lying in a mountainous formation about 2,000 feet high and several miles in length. It is doubtful whether these deposits can be paralleled in the world.

A Mountain of Iron.

The iron mountain, which can be recognized a long way off by the oxidation of its surface, is close to the shore, in a sheltered bay, with deep water for loading. An aerial ropeway for loading should make it possible to load 2,400 tons a day.

The wonderful character of the mountain may be judged by the following comparison. While the average iron content of British ores is 35 per cent., of Spanish a little over 50, and of the famous Gellivare iron mountain of Arctic Sweden 63 per cent., the Spitzbergen ore of this British iron mountain contains 64.44 per cent.

Petroleum, bitumen, and gypsum deposits have also been located in this rich new land. On the western coast huge deposits of phosphorite have been found, eminently suitable for conversion into fertilizers. Claims for digging, gold-bearing quartz, samples of which have been declared by the Bank of England assayers to be the best they have seen for a long time, have been staked out.

In the main the land consists of wide, boggy valleys, undulating hills, and flat ground near the shores. The low ground is richly carpeted with low-growing plants and mosses, but for a brief season it bursts into a glory of blossoms, when some 120 varieties of flowering plants cover the valleys with color.

INTIMATE NATURAL HISTORY.

Incident in the Journey of An Explorer in Abyssinia.

That the adoption of European dress among the native Africans causes discomfort and physical harm is the belief of Maj. C. H. Stigand. In To Abyssinia Through an Unknown Land, the explorer, who was studying the language of the natives, says he had arrived at one of the Abyssinian outposts, and had stopped to rest his men and animals when this instructive incident occurred:

"The people were under a shum, or civil chief, and I lost no time in paying him a call. The shum himself could not write, and he went through the vocabularies I had made out on my journey and suggested new words for me to write down. Several of the natives sat close against me in a most friendly way and said: 'Has he such and such a word? Write it down for him.' One of them said, 'Has he got kuncha down?'"

"I replied, 'No! What is kuncha?'" "Oh, write it down for him; he ought to have kuncha. Show him what kuncha is."

My instructor forthwith opened a fold of his shamma, and out hopped about twenty fleas. He casually remarked, "These are kuncha. I will write it down for you."

At that I said I was afraid I must be going; to which they replied: "You have not got kimal yet. Let me write that for you. Show him a kimal."

All those present began hunting in their clothes, and a very brief search sufficed to produce a few brace of kimal—an insect to which I trust my reader has not yet been introduced. I bade them a hurried farewell and departed. Subsequent examinations of my clothes afforded me further opportunities to study the natural history of the kuncha and the kimal.

MAKE THE HOME SAFE.

Defective Appliances in Houses Cause Many Serious Accidents.

A home should be a safety centre—a sanctuary for every member of the family that occupies it. Dangerous conditions, such as defective electric or gas fittings, insanitary plumbing, unprotected stairways, or stairways without railings and which invite accidents, are lamentably common in our houses. In a survey of nearly 30,000 accidents in the city of Chicago covering a period of eleven years, it was found that over 51 per cent. were household accidents. These caused the death, or permanently crippled, thousands of persons, and yet the citizens of the United States claim to be a "home-loving people." A similar analysis of Canadian statistics would probably prove that Canada was no more successful in converting houses into homes. Faulty building construction, defective wiring and plumbing are faultily common and, in too many instances, are winked at by so-called building inspectors. Household appliances themselves use rocking-chairs for step-ladders, place kettles of boiling water so that small children can tumble into them, have unfastened rugs on highly polished slippery floors, or fasten windows down to conserve heat at the expense of ventilation. These and similar practices cause the death, or result in crippling hundreds of Canadians every year. If houses and other dwellings were transformed into proper homes, these losses, which are truly national as well as individual, would be reduced to a minimum. But that little word "if" marks a gulf that it may require generations to bridge.

The speaker of the British House of Commons is obliged by custom to give seven official dinners each season to the members of Parliament.—the monkey tribes. At present the disease is reported to be rapidly wiping out the baboon population of South Africa.

To Consider Infant Welfare.

A National Conference on Infant Welfare will be held in London, England, on July 1st, 2nd and 3rd, 1919. Problems related to the medical, social, racial and industrial aspects of infant and child welfare will be discussed. The Conference is being called by the National League for Health, Maternity and Child Welfare, the officials of which urge that similar conferences be organized in other countries during the present year. Then in 1920, an International Congress is planned to bring together the results and findings for further detailed discussion. It is hoped in this way to carry out the plans of the League, which, but for the war, would have convened an International Congress in September, 1915.

"When they had a nasty job they wanted you to do they always dignified it by calling it a 'detail.'"

Mixed Metaphors.

A political speaker, warning the public against the imposition of heavier tariffs on imports, said: "If you don't stop shearing the wool off the sheep that lays the golden egg, you'll pump it dry."

"Flu" Fantasy.

Fretful Flora found "flu" fiercely fatiguing. "Fudge!" flitted fumed Flora. "Flu feels far from funny."

Febrile Flora felt feeble. Flora, fidgety, feeling fancy flitting, fretted. "Father, fetch flowers for Flora; feverfew festooned fends flu."

Faithful father, feeling Flora flitful, feigningly feigned festivity. Forgetting former feting fancy, Flora feverishly found fault. "Panciful, fantastic farce," fervently fretted Flora, forbidding further flury, flouting father for flaccid folly.

Fatuous father, feeling flustered, forbore further floral foistings. Feeling father felt foolish, Flora faltered. "Frankly, father, faulty food furnishes fuel for flu—fever fends. Feed fricassee fowl, find fever fading."

"Fickle female!" fumed father. "Frankish filly, fricassee fowl fatal; furnishing fasts forestall flu."

"Fudge!" frowned Flora. "Father's formula foolish. Furious flummage future formula. Former factotum fuddled, fabled flithily. Fire-frowzy flun-Fanny February first."

"Far-fetched flib!" flared Fanny. "Flora frequently finds fault."

Father flit forlornly frowning Fanny, fearing future frenzy from Flora.

Fatigued Flora felt fever flaring fiercely; fever fended fiery. Fanny felt future funeral favorable. Father's frantic felicitations failed.

Frankish fever fluctuated; finally fell, flush, faded. "Farewell, flu," feebly faltered Flora—feeling fine.

Free from fear of future funeral, father forgave Flora's freakish faults.—Fins.

Conservation for Consideration.

It is a fact admitted by thinking farmers that through negligence or misplaced frugality in not providing covering for implements of agriculture, when not in use, they get about half the years of service from them they should. The loss from exposure is greater than the deterioration that follows through legitimate use.

We will assume that the necessary equipment required to work a farm costs $1,000 and that with care the equipment may be used for ten years. Without care these implements would be scrapped in five years. The deduction to be made from these figures is that an implement shed built and in use in five years is equal to $500. It does not cost half that sum to build a good implement shed, but how many farmers, otherwise up to date and progressive, fail to provide proper care for the tools with which they work?

Ask for Minard's and take no other.

It is not the men who are doing the talking who are solving our problems, but the men who are at work. When they talk, they know what it is about.

LEMONS MAKE SKIN WHITE, SOFT, CLEAR

Make this beauty lotion for a few cents and see for yourself.

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to whiten the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way: Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white for very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely make the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freezone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

Barn and Silo Roofed with Brantford Asphalt Roofing.

Resists Fire, Sheds Water, Wears Long

Flying sparks and embers from a burning building often cause roofs near by to catch fire, especially in a dry, hot season. Under such conditions, roofs covered with are in no danger from flying embers, because any that fall on Brantford Asphalt Roofing die out harmlessly. Build a bonfire on a roof of Brantford Asphalt Roofing and the fire will not spread and the boards underneath the roofing will be protected in a surprising manner.

If a fire starts in the interior of a building Brantford Asphalt Roofing acts as a retardant and keeps the fire from spreading. Fire chiefs and insurance companies endorse its use in the most congested cities.

Brantford Asphalt Roofing does not absorb water, but sheds the heaviest rain with ease. Acid proof and alkali proof. Reliable, durable, economical. Three weights—50 lb., 70 lb., 80 lb. per square.

Brantford Rubber Roofing

is the same quality as Brantford Asphalt, but has a smooth, rubbery surface instead of the sand. It is particularly suitable for verandah decks and floor coverings. Three weights—40 lb., 50 lb., and 60 lb. per square.

Leatheroid Roofing

Slightly lower quality than Brantford Rubber Roofing. Used for same purposes. Has a leathery surface. Exceptionally good roofing at a low price. 35 lb., 45 lb., and 55 lb. weights.

Standard Mohawk Roofing

is made of the same materials as Brantford Asphalt Roofing, but is lighter in weight. A thoroughly reliable roofing at a low price. Tested for years and has given entire satisfaction. Sanded on one side. One weight—40 lbs. per square.

Climax Sheathing Paper

A tough kraft paper coated with high-grade asphalt. For making buildings damp-proof and wind-proof. Also for roofing temporary bank houses, lumber camps, etc.

Samples of any of these roofings and prices will be furnished on request.

STARTLING EVIDENCE IN THE TEMPLETON CASE

PROOF SUBMITTED BY RETURNED SOLDIERS DISFELS PUBLIC SKEPTICISM

Public interest in the Templeton case has been accentuated by a volume of further evidence which has been submitted to prove that Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules do remedy Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout, Lumbago and many of their kindred diseases.

Canadian soldiers from the front claim that these capsules were of the utmost benefit in relieving them of acute pains and preventing the development of rheumatic troubles. One well known Canadian General was a constant user of T.R.C.'s and his persistent demand for them is proof that they gave him the relief he sought.

Men such as our Canadian soldiers are not prepared to make false statements. T.R.C.'s fixed them up and they are glad to say so in order that others may benefit by their experience. There is no denying the fact that T.R.C.'s do all we claim they will. Convince yourself. Try them. Sole Agent for Glencoe, H. I. Johnston, Phm. B. OUR DUTY TO OUR TOWN

There are several ways by which the progress and prosperity and welfare of Glencoe, as a business town and as a home town, can be very much advanced by her own citizens. One of the most effective ways is to cultivate the spirit of spending our money with our own merchants, instead of sending it to other places. Every dollar spent at home adds to the progress and prosperity of our business places, enhances the value of every piece of property owned in town, whether it be business or residence property, while every dollar sent out of town depreciates the value of both. Every business man, every property owner and every householder is directly and vitally affected by the volume of business done in the town, and every citizen can do his and her share in the good work of improving the business and home conditions of our town. Every citizen owes it to himself and his family, as well as to the community at large, to do his share in making these conditions as good as possible.

Even so simple a matter as the temperature of the sleeping room had its difficulties. Burke liked air. He wanted the windows wide open. Helen, trained to think night air was damp and dangerous, wanted them shut. And when two people are sleepy, cross, and tired, it is appalling what a range of woe can lie in the mere opening and shutting of a window.

Burke was surprised, annoyed, and dismayed. Being unaccustomed to disappointments, he did not know how to take them gracefully. This being married was not proving to be at all the sort of thing he had pictured to himself. He had supposed that life, married life, was to be a new wonder every day; an increasing delight every hour. It was neither. Living now was a matter of never-ending adjustment, self-sacrifice, and economy. And he hated them all. In spite of himself he was getting into debt, and he hated debt. It made a fellow feel cheap and mean.

Even Helen was not what he had thought she was. He was ashamed to own it, even to himself, but there was a good deal about Helen that he did not like. She was not careful about her appearance. She was actually almost untidy at times. He hated those loose, sloppy things she sometimes wore, and he abominated those curl-papers that she stuck in her hair. She was willful and fretful, and she certainly did not know how to give a fellow a decent meal or a comfortable place to stay. For his part, he did not think a girl had any right to marry until she knew something about running a simple home.

Then there was her constant chatter. Was she not ever going to talk about something but the silly little everyday happenings of her work? A fellow wanted to hear something, when he came home tired at night, besides complaints that the range didn't work, or that the grocer forgot his order, or that the money was out.

Why, Helen used to be good company, cheerful, often witty. Where were her old-time sparkle and radiance? Her talk now was as meaningless chatter of trivial things, or an irritating, trailing complaint of everything under the sun, chiefly revolving around the point of "how different everything was" from what she expected. Great Scott! As if he had not found some things different! That evidently was what marriage was—different. But talking about it all the time did not help any.

Couldn't she read? But, then, if she did read, it was only the newspaper account of the latest murder; and then she would want to talk about that. She never read anything worth while.

And it was for this, this being married to Helen, that he had given up so much; dad, his home, everything. She didn't appreciate it—Helen didn't. She did not rightly estimate what he was being made to suffer.

That there was any special meaning in all this that he himself should take to heart, that there was any course open to him but righteous discontent and rebellion—never occurred to Burke. His training of frosted cakes and toy shotguns had taught him nothing of the traditional "two bears," "bear" and "forebear." The marriage ceremony had not meant to him "to be patient, tender and sympathetic." It had meant the "I will" of self-assertion, not the "I will" of self-discipline. That Helen ought to change many of her traits and habits he was convinced. That there might be some in himself that needed changing, or that the mere fact of his having married Helen might have entailed upon himself certain obligations as to making the best of what he had deliberately chosen, did not once occur to him.

As for Helen—Helen was facing her own disillusion. She was not trying now to be the daintily groomed wife welcoming her husband to a well-kept home. She had long since decided that that was impossible—on sixty dollars a month. She was tired of being a martyr wife. Even the laurel wreath of praise had lost its allurements; she would not get it, probably, even if she earned it; and, anyway, she would be dead from trying to get it. And for her part she would rather have some fun while she was living.

fussy, too! She could get along with cold things; but he wanted hot ones, and lots of them. And he always wanted finger bowls and lots of spoons, and everything fixed just so on the table, too. He said it wasn't that he wanted things decent. As if she hadn't had things decent herself—and without all that fuss and clutter!

After dinner he never wanted to talk now, or to go to work. He just wanted to read or study. He said he was studying something about his work. As if once he would have cared more for any old work than for her! And she was so lonely! There was nobody now for her to be with. Mrs. Jones had moved away, and there were never any callers now. She had returned every one of the calls she had had from Burke's fine friends. She had put on her new red dress and her best hat with the pink roses; and she had tried to be just as bright and entertaining as she knew how to be. But they never came again, so, of course, she could not go to see them. She had gone, once or twice. But Burke said she must not do that. It was not proper to return your own calls. If they wanted to see her they would come themselves. But they never came. Probably, anyhow, they did not want to see her; and that was the trouble. Not that she cared! They were a "stuck-up" lot, anyway; and she was just as good as they were. She had told one woman so, once—the woman that carried her eyeglasses on the end of a little stick and stared. That woman always had made her mad. So it was just as well, perhaps, that they did not come any more, after all. Burke was ashamed of her, anyhow, when they did come. She knew that. He did not like anything she did nowadays. He was always telling her he did wish she would stop saying "you was," or holding her fork like that, or making so much noise eating soup, and a dozen other things. As if nobody in the house had a right to do anything but his way!

It had been so different at home! There everything she did was just right. And she was never lonely. There were the parities and the frolics and the sleigh-rides, and the girls running in all the time, and the boys every evening on the porch, or in the parlor, or taking her buggy-riding. Nothing there was ever complete without her. While here—Well, who supposed being married meant working like a slave all day, and being cooped up all the evening with a man whose nose was buried in a book, and who scarcely spoke to you?

And there was the money. Burke acted, for all the world, as if he thought she ate money, and ate it whether she was hungry or not, just to spite him. As if she didn't squeeze every penny till it fairly shrieked, now; and as if anybody could make two dollars a week go further than she did. To be sure, at first she had been silly and extravagant, running up bills and borrowing of Mrs. Jones, as she did. And of course she was a little unreasonable and childish about keeping that account book. But that was ignorant and inexperienced. It was very different now. She kept a cash account, and most of the time it came right. How she wished she had an allowance, though! But Burke utterly refused to give her that. Said she'd be extravagant and spend it all the first day. As if she had not learned better than that by bitter experience! And as if anything could be worse than the way they were trying to get along now, with her teasing for money all the time, and him insisting on seeing the bills, and then asking how they could manage to eat so many eggs, and saying he should think she used butter to oil the floors with. He didn't see how it could go so fast he had deliberately chosen, did not once occur to him.

As for Helen—Helen was facing her own disillusion. She was not trying now to be the daintily groomed wife welcoming her husband to a well-kept home. She had long since decided that that was impossible—on sixty dollars a month. She was tired of being a martyr wife. Even the laurel wreath of praise had lost its allurements; she would not get it, probably, even if she earned it; and, anyway, she would be dead from trying to get it. And for her part she would rather have some fun while she was living.

But she wasn't having any fun. Things were so different. Everything was different. She had not supposed being married was like this: one long grind of housework from morning till night, and for a man who did not care—now. Once, the first thing he wanted when he came into the house was a kiss and a word from her. Now he wanted his dinner. And he was so

Guarding the Rain Water.

There is perhaps no greater blessing known to households than having good water. There are various methods of water supply, but one of the most common and convenient ways is to have it in a cistern. As a reservoir the cistern is subject to contamination in several ways, and in ways that are often overlooked by the owner.

We take it that all cisterns have their supply of water regulated by a cut-off in the spout above the curb, which is in turn operated by the owner. The roofs of houses gather more filth than we realize. Some of this filth may be classified as bird droppings, insects, either dead or alive, molding leaves, dust, etc. Once in a while you will find a mouse going its way into the cistern.

It would be a good thing for all inlet spouts to pass their waters through a filter before entering. A filter could easily be constructed, and would call for a chamber either of galvanized material or proofed wood filled with sand and charcoal arranged in alternate layers, with strainers to assist or to hold the ingredients from running away with the water. In conjunction with the filter a careful and reasonable use of the cut-off should keep the water free of anything coming from the roof or the eaves.

Some other conditions that assist in making a cistern secure against contamination are proper ventilation of the water reservoir and protection against the entrance of anything like dirt, insects, or small animals, such as mice or rats. There should be a strong screen between the platform and the curb to allow air to pass, as well as screen-protected tubes on opposite sides of the curb high enough to keep the water from flowing out but allowing air to come through. This should supply plenty of ventilation. Moreover, the walls and bottom of the cistern should all be well plastered, and be investigated whenever the cistern is drained for cleaning. A small amount of slaked lime can be dropped in at times to disinfect the water. The lime may cause the water to be rather "hard" for a few days, but this condition soon passes.

Locations so often regulate the construction of platforms that it is particular material for their construction, but for an all-purpose platform we believe there is nothing that can beat concrete. A concrete platform, unlike wood, will not allow dirt to drop into the cistern. The opening at the top should be large enough to admit an ordinary-sized man when the cistern is to be cleaned.

The edge of the opening should be provided with a sort of shelf over which the upper curb may sit to prevent the flowing of any surface water into the cistern from the platform. All these things can be regulated if the owner is serious enough to look into the matter and really wants to keep his cistern water at its best.

Contributed Recipes.

Carrot Soup—1 pint milk, 1 cup cooked carrot, pressed through colander, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon onion juice, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, celery or celery salt. Heat the milk, combine the other ingredients, add milk and allow the vegetables to become thoroughly blended with the milk. The addition of a small amount of flour will make the soup the consistency of thin cream. Raisin Nut Loaf—½ cup half-dried raisins, ½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts, ¾ cup sugar, 2 eggs, 2 cups milk, 4 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt. Mix together the dry ingredients and sift four times. Add the nuts and raisins, mixing them well with the flour. Beat the eggs, combine with the milk and pour the liquid into the flour mixture. Put in a large, well-oiled bread tin, let stand twenty minutes, then bake fifty minutes in a moderate oven.

Vegetable Chowder—½ pound dried lima beans, 2 cups diced carrots, 1 sliced onion, 2 tablespoons fat, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ cup milk, 1 tablespoon flour. Soak the lima beans overnight, then cook in that water until tender. Melt the fat, brown the onion in this and add it and the carrots to the beans. Cook slowly about half an hour, or until all the vegetables are very tender. Blend the flour with the milk and add ten minutes before the chowder is to be served.

Peanut Butter Pudding—2 cups milk, 4 tablespoons sugar, 3 tablespoons peanut butter, 4 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ teaspoon salt. Scald milk, add sugar, cornstarch, peanut butter and salt mixed together. Stir all until smooth, cover and cook for twenty minutes in a double boiler. Turn into individual molds or cups which have been wet with cold water. When cold turn out and serve with cream or fruit juice.

The tactful woman is she who doesn't know what you want to explain to her. Any man will testify to this. She never "lets on" that she has been to any place or entertainment that you are offering her. Furthermore, she appears to enjoy it immensely and never fails to thank you for it as appreciatively as if it were a very special treat.

If you are serving her refreshments in your own home she never makes the mistake, for instance, of thanking you for cocoa when you are serving chocolate. More likely she asks if you used vanilla to give it such a delicious flavor and listens attentively while you dilate upon your pet company recipe.

She never asks if "you made your dress yourself?" She merely admires its chic and tells you how becoming it is, and then if you confide that she did make it yourself, she admires your cleverness with the needle. She admires your domestic arrangements, such as "your cosy furnishings" and does not expand upon hers unless asked. Indeed, she doesn't dwell conversationally upon any of her newest or most up-to-date possessions for fear of making any one uncomfortable by an obvious contrast.

She never sees what you don't want her to see, and this is what makes her an ever welcome friend at all seasons. Yet her tact is not of that peculiar subtlety that makes every one supremely aware that she is "trying to smooth things over." For all things considered, the tactful woman is your best friend, for she is too tactful to be selfish, gossip, jealous or rude and she is clever enough to be comforting, quiet, jolly or lovable as the occasion requires!

How We Do It.

For the Birthday Cake.—In placing candles on a birthday cake try heating the point of a hatpin very hot and push it into the base of the candle about a half-inch; pull out pin and insert a toothpick. The wax will harden about the toothpick, the other end of which may be inserted into the top of the cake, and the candles will have a secure foundation.—Mrs. R. M. D.

One of the handiest devices for the housewife is a bread or cake cooler. I purchased a piece of fine meshed heavy wire fencing. I turned down about four inches in each end and had the hardware man bind it with tin. This made the side pieces for the cooler to stand on, and when finished it was one of the most inexpensive articles I possessed.—Mrs. M. B. G.

A quick method of separating the whites and yolks of eggs is to take a small funnel and break the egg into it; the white will run through the small end and the yolk remain in the funnel.—Mrs. L. M. T.

To cook onions so that the odor will not be noticeable, place a small dish of vinegar on the stove and let it simmer while the onions are cooking.—Mrs. C. W. D.

When making noodles add a pinch of baking powder and they will be light and digestible.—Mrs. L. L. G.

If you are in a hurry for potatoes to bake, let them stand in boiling water a few minutes before putting them into the oven.—M. F.

For Busy Mothers.—Make your little one's every-day dresses open all the way to the bottom like an apron, and you will find this saves much time when ironing them, and they are much easier to put on.—Mrs. J. J. O'C.

To Start a Fire.—I keep corn cobs soaking in kerosene oil in a covered tin pail; one cob when lighted will kindle a fire quickly and with less danger than if the oil is poured directly on the wood.—Mrs. N. T.

Moth Preventive.—Balls of cotton dipped in oil of cedar and placed in boxes and drawers are a good moth preventive, and unlike the detestable moth balls, the cedar oil imparts a delightfully clean and fresh odor.—M. A. P.

When buying stair carpets it is a good plan to buy an extra yard and fold it under at each end. When taken up to be cleaned it can be put down again so that the wear will come in a different place on the carpet, which will last about twice as long.—E. I. L.

When washing white enameled woodwork or any light painted wood, use half milk and half water, adding to this a teaspoonful of baking soda to one quart of milk and water. It will make the woodwork look like new.—Mrs. J. J. O'C.

An article I find handy in my home is a long broom handle with a strong hook in the end. It saves me from climbing up and down from a chair every time I hang a picture or dust the molding or the picture frames. A stout hook can be purchased at any hardware store for a few cents, and it takes only a moment or two to insert it in the end of an old broom handle.—M. B. G.

When you are cleaning house do not overlook the value of the oil can. Carefully oil all castors on beds, dressers and tables and you will be astonished at the greater ease with which these articles that you have been tugging at will move. A drop of oil in the door hinges or on an old jurate lock will work wonders.—Mrs. J. J. O'C.

FOOD PRODUCTION IN THE ARCTICS

HELPS TO SOLVE SHORTAGE IN MEAT AND WOOL

Stefansson Would Convert Canadian Arctic Region Into Great Food and Mineral Area.

A plan for converting the Arctic and sub-Arctic regions of Canada into a great wool, milk and meat producing area has been presented to the Canadian Parliament by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, explorer of the Canadian Arctic.

Stefansson's project involves introducing large herds of reindeer and domesticating and developing great herds of musk ox. Both animals would furnish milk and meat supplies and the musk ox would afford also a wool supply.

The Canadian north, Mr. Stefansson said, could be utilized to help solve present and future food shortages and development of his project would expedite opening of mineral and other resources of the north. He estimated there were from 1 million to 2 million square miles of land available for grazing in a climate too severe for cattle, but where reindeer and musk ox could exist the year round.

"About twenty years ago," Mr. Stefansson continued, "the United States Government introduced 1250 domestic reindeer into Arctic Alaska. From the point of view of the government this was a sort of charity, for the sole aim was to give a possibility of economic independence to the Eskimo. The prevailing opinion was that even this object would not be attained and few of those who expected the enterprise to succeed even dreamed of its present magnitude or the meaning it would have for Alaska today or for the world to-morrow. Under Eskimo care these herds have increased at the rate of doubling in three years. But the few animals that are in the hands of white men are found to double in numbers every two years. The white men look further into the future and therefore butcher only male animals. The Eskimo butchers females each year for reasons of fashion in clothing.

Would Supply 7,000,000 Reindeer.

"It was found necessary to secure Laplanders to instruct the Eskimo in the care of deer, and these Laplanders were by the government allowed to own reindeer herds on the same terms as the natives. These Laplanders have recently sold virtually all their reindeer to a firm of American capitalists, who own at present about 15,000 deer. This company sold about 1500 carcasses of 150 pounds each on the American markets last year at a price ranging from five to fifteen cents a pound in excess of the corresponding cuts of domestic beef."

It due time, Mr. Stefansson said, the Arctic will supply more than 7,000,000 reindeer, producing as much meat yearly as 14,000,000 sheep or seven times the present mutton production of all the settled portion of Canada.

Ballad For Peace Day.

To-day Peace came on radiant feet
And blew her trumpet in the square—
"The War is over"—news is fleet,
And soon through every thoroughfare
Passed Youth and Joy, a radiant pair,
Arms linked and bright heads crowned with bays.

Yet while there's laughter everywhere
Some must go softly all their days.

There are no strangers; kind hearts beat
In unison; the joy they share
Makes all akin, we smile and greet
Like happy neighbors at a Fair.

Flags float above us. Here and there
The church bells chime their solemn praise
There seems no room for grief or care.
Must some go softly all their days?

The young once more may find life sweet,
They need not dread dull-eyed Despair.
With fearless hearts shall lovers meet,
Together climb the rainbow stair
To some dream castle in the air.
The fire of hope may leap and blaze,
But for the sorrows past repair
Some must go softly all their days.

Envoys
O broken hearts who needs must bear
The cost of this new world we raise,
May God console you, is our prayer,
While you go softly all your days.

Not the Right Answer.

The superintendent of schools, while endeavoring to teach a class of boys the composition of sentences, said to them:
"If I ask you 'What have I in my hand?' you must not answer 'chalk,' but compose a sentence, such as, 'You have a piece of chalk in your hand.' Now we will continue."
"What have I on my feet?"
"Boots," was the immediate answer.
"Wrong; you haven't listened to my directions."
"Socks," ventured another heedless one.
"Wrong again; worse than ever," protested the superintendent in exasperation.
"Well," as another pupil raised his hand.
"Please, sir," then he paused. Perhaps he thought his answer might seem funny, but convinced that it was right, he gasped out recklessly, "socks."

It is fine for cleaning cans - says the dairyman
Comfort Lye

A clean floor is needed for shearing, one that may be swept often and kept free from litter. In order to prepare the fleeces for the attraction of the buyer it will be necessary to clean them up, flush side out. This may be accomplished either by the use of wool box, or rolling the fleece upon a clean floor. Never use more twine in a fleece than is necessary. It is usually possible to bind a fleece together by two or three strings each way around the fleece. Never use finer twine to tie up the fleece. The fibres of such twine are a menace to good wool when in the hands of the manufacturers. Paper, or glazed wool twine are most desirable for tying up fleeces and paper wool twine is really more desirable than the glazed twine for it has no fibres that injure wool, and a dollar's worth of the paper twine will tie up about twenty-five to thirty per cent. more wool than a dollar's worth of glazed twine.

The wool should be stored immediately in wool sacks and kept in a clean, dry place. Never pile it in a floor strewn with chaff, straw or litter of any kind. Remove tags of heavy duck lugs from fleeces and separate. Sort burry, dirty, black, matted and soiled fleeces. Keep fleeces of fine wool, medium wool, and coarse wool separate. Fleeces having a staple not longer than two and one-half inches should be kept separate from those having longer staple.

Growing Garden Seeds.

Circular No. 17 of the Dominion Experimental Farms shows that seed of most varieties of vegetables can be grown at home as good or better quality than is the imported seed. To insure having good seed, however, should be produced from the best plants of the crop rather than from those which happen to be left unused. This publication, which is entitled "Every Gardener His Own Seed Producer," is obtainable from the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, and tells how to grow, select, and care for seeds of such garden crops as peas, beans, cucumbers, egg plants, melons, pumpkins, parsley, peppers, radishes, tomatoes, and some other crops.

Every Wage Earner An Investor

Every wage earner can be an investor in gilt-edged securities bearing a high rate of interest without sacrifice or worry.

The plan is so simple and secure that it commends itself to everybody.

All of us spend a portion of our earnings thoughtlessly. It is human nature. Yet most of us would be glad if someone would take the money we fritter away and save it for us, because we find it difficult to save it ourselves.

Make your employer do it by means of War Savings Stamps. Say to him: "I want you to take five per cent. of the money in my pay envelope each week and buy me Thrift Stamps. Then with each $4.00 worth of Thrift Stamps buy me a War Savings Stamp. When you have bought each War Savings Stamp, put it in my envelope. Go on doing that for a year."

That is all. Your mind is free. You will not miss that 75 cents or that dollar which you have hitherto squandered on trifles.

But at the end of the year you will have a little package of War Savings Stamps, each bearing the $5.00 mark, but which have cost you but a few cents over $4.00 each. These Canada will redeem in 1924.

In May
W.S.S.
Cost $4.04
In June
W.S.S.
Cost $4.05

War Savings Stamps can be bought wherever this sign is displayed.

L. on Monday, June 2nd, in the afternoon, directly following the confirmation service to be held in Christ church on the same date. All women and girls welcome at this meeting. A social and pleasant time expected.

By request Mrs. Hammett will review the life of the late Bishop Bompass, "The Apostle of the North," on Sunday evening, June 23rd, at the Unity Bible Class. The service is to be held in Christ church at 8 p. m.

Miss Bertha Miller is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Hammett, after completing her three years' training course at Grace Hospital, Detroit, and having received her diploma and completing her exams.

The Newbury town hall was not only literally packed to the doors on the evening of Friday, May 23rd, but many were unable to gain entrance. The well-advertised play, "Joe, the Wolf, or the Pet of the Camp," to be presented by the dramatic club, was the great attraction. The play was divided into six acts and the rendition was particularly good. Eight characters were necessary for the presentation of the play, each character filling his or her part exceptionally well.

Hugh McNaughton and Miss Mabel Chasely, as Adam and Patsy (two colored servants), delighted the audience with their clever mimicry and sincere attachment to Joe, the Pet of the Camp, so ably portrayed by Miss Carrie Fletcher. The pathos of her lonely position, the innocence and simplicity of her nature, are appreciated to the full by Harry Metcalfe, forman of the camp, who proves himself to be her loyal friend and champion and is later her cherished and accepted lover.

Harry Metcalfe, more used to camps than cities, in a never-to-be-forgotten trip to New York in search of Joe after her departure from the camp, encounters a cop in the person of James Haggitt. The "hands up" are "moved" were so real that Harry moved at his command. Well done, James! Our genial Robert Moore filled his part as Harry Metcalfe to the delight of all. The parts taken by John Brennan, Mrs. Robert Moore and James Brennan, as Emmanuel Roberts, merchant, Stella, his wife, Rudolph Ferguson, son of Mrs. Roberts and stepson of Mr. Roberts, were very difficult parts to portray. Sarcasm, the laying of plans to secure Roberts' wealth, intrigues against Joe, his cleverly these hard parts were taken. The solving by Harry of the parentage and claim of Joe to Mr. Roberts' wealth—Joe, the long-lost heiress, is discerned to be the only child of Mr. Roberts' deceased brother, whose wealth he had held for her—forms a fitting climax to a beautiful story. Frank Ceely of London and Miss Anna Fother of the village furnished music to the delight of all. Proceeds $108, for the benefit of the village library.

No better protection against worms can be got than Miller's Worm Powders. They consume worms and render the stomach and intestines untenable to them. They heal the surfaces that have become inflamed by the attacks of the parasites and serve to restore the strength of the child that has been undermined by the draughts that the worms have made upon it, and their operation is altogether health-giving.
