This detail of the reception had been admirably planned. It was arranged that the children of all the public and separate schools, the model and normal schools, and the collegiate institute, together with the teaching staffs, should assemble in one body at the Full well we know the story; collegiate institute grounds, corner of Dufferin avenue and Waterloo streets. THE MILITARY SIDE. The military side of the reception in London was not striking because practically the whole of the two infantry regiments and the cavalry regiment was required to properly police the streets along the line of the procession. most serviceable-looking business-like regiment was the 27th St. Clair Borderers. The 27th is one of the oldest regiments in Western Ontario and at the same time one of the most efficient. At present it is under the command of one of the ablest militia officers in Canada, Lieut.-Col. Charles S. Ellis, of Sarnia. The 27th is distinguished by the yellow puttees worn about the lower limbs. The street intersections along the line of Saturday's procession were guarded by the men of this regiment, and their SPLENDID PHYSIQUE AND SOL

DIERLY BEARING caused much comment. After the royal train had departed, the 27th reformed and, headed by its band, marched down Richmond to the Grand Trunk depot, where it entrained on its special for Sarnia. The men looked tired and travel-stained, but were none the less happy over their outing. The 26th Middlesex Light Infantry arrived loaded down, figuratively speaking, with the laurels won by them at Toronto. The Indian companies of the regiment received particular applause at the great review in the Queen City, and in London it fell to its lot to supply the guard of honor for the royal party. One hun-dred men were required, and in making the selection, the commanding of-ficer, Col. McEwen, unhesitatingly chose the first three companies of the regiment, composed entirely of Indians. When his royal highness alighted from the train his eye fell upon the guard, and instantly his face lighted up with a smile of pleasure. Before he proceeded to his carriage, he inspected the guard, a VERY UNUSUAL MARK OF FAVOR. The balance of the regiment was employed in keeping the station clear. As regiment marched through the streets to the depot prior to the arrival of the royal train, it received frequent applause. The 1st Hussars made a brave showing, and performed the difficult duties of escort with the skill of old, seasoned cavalry.

Upon the 7th Regiment, officers and men alike, too much praise cannot be bestowed. At the Toronto review the gallant 7th divided honors with the smart regiments of the Queen City. Lieut -- Col. Smith and the other officers were complimented on all sides for the splendid showing made by the corps. The 7th may now claim the distinction of being the only militia regiment in Canada whose were presented by royalty. After the ceremony at Victoria Park, the regiment, headed by its excellent band,

Berlin, Oct. 12.—Most of the newspapers have referred feelingly to Mr. Kruger's birthday. MINTO AND LAURIER

Nothing Known in Ottawa of the London Chronicle's Report-The Story Denied.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.-Nothing is known in Ottawa of the London Chronicle's report crediting Lord Minto with the intention of resigning on account of friction with the Canadian ministry. Inquiries in official circles this morning led to a denial of the story. Even if Lord Minto were resigning office it is not likely that Baron de Blaquiere would, as suggested, be appointed to succeed him.

THE PORTE PLOTTING. Le Français (Paris) publishes a dispatch from Susa, Tunis, announcing that a Turkish officer was arrested recontly there on a charge of swindling, and an investigation disclosed the fact that he had received instructions from the Ottoman minister of war to organize a rising of the Arabs in South Algeria in the event of a rupture of diplomatic relations between France and Turkey, resulting in a declaration of war. It was conclusively proved that his presence there was due to these instructions. According to the same advices, the incriminated officer is only of several who were instructed with the same mission.

On the same day, in a public durbar, his brothers and sisters, the army and the people, accepted Habib Ullah as the new ameer, and promised allegiance to him. The dispatch from Habib Ullah adds that he intends to walk in the footsteps of his father, and hopes that the friendship of the two governments may grow even stronger. Similar hopes have been expressed toward Russia, for the policy of the late ameer was to keep both powers out of Afghanistan. This suited England, and the only danger now is that a dispute about the accession to the throne may lead to civil strife, which would force England and Russia to take sides. Mr. Maxwell, who was first interviewed, has crowded a great deal of acviewed, has crowded a great deal of activity into the last few years. For example, he accompanied Lord Kitchener in his Soudanese campaign, was present at the battle of Omdurman, and participated in the march to Khartoum, for which he possesses the khedive's medal and clasp. Immediately after the close of the war he undertook a horseback ride through the deserts east of the River Jordan, subsequently meeting the Emperor of Germany and accompanying him on his historic tour through Palestine and on his historic tour through Palestine and

You don't want rhapsodies about mountains, of course not; but to me Canada is always a land of romance, and this visit has made me live over again many a strange fancy. We have seen Quebec, a queen among cities, sanctified by the blood and fancy. the traditions of the two great races in whose hands are the destinies of this great and beautiful land. Montreal we have seen, throbbing with new and vigorhave seen, thropping with new and vigorous life, and Ottawa, who has made herself a worthy capital. We have looked upon the prairies, with their bursting granaries, until the eye sought relief in the mocking fugitive horizon in the clouds by day and the stars by night. Then the Rockies—I have seen and climbed mountains in many lands. But the charm of tains in many lands. But the charm of the Rockies is a thing apart; it is the charm of contrast and color, of foaming torrents and deep, woody ravines, over whose rugged chaos the dark pine casts darker shadows. One could never weary of their infinite variety. They are a joy and an inspiration that will live in the and an inspiration that will live in the memory of the youngest among us. And now we are to see Toronto, your own beautiful city. With the resources of Canada we have, of course, been more or less familiar. But only a journey such as we have taken, so pleasantly and even luxuriously, can give any real impression of their variety and extent. As we traveled farther and farther into this country of surprises I have felt how little the people at home understand the infinite potentialities of this land, how erroneous are their opinions of its climate. Talk of 'Our Lady of the Snows' —why, we have had Italian skies and the cool breath of the mountains. I wish some of our Specials. A fine list of money savers for Tuesday. Coming from the new Commonwealth of Australia, just entered on that unity which has been yours for nearly half a century; coming from South Africa, where we see two races in the fusing pot of war, I have naturally been struck by the harmony of the two races in Canada. As we have seen in this journey across the continent, Canada is not one, but several countries, separated by immense distances, by race, religion, and even by language. Yet you are held firmly together by the bond of federation, by community of interest, and, I hope and believe, by affection for the land that gave birth to your fathers, and by loyalty to that great empire in which your libertes, your individuality and your independence will ever be secure. In Australia we have a homogeneous people. In South Africa we have two peoples, originally sprung from a kindred stock. Surely we should not despair of ultimate harmony there, when we see two widely differentiated races uniting to build up great commonwealths in Canada. Now I have preached my little sermon. MR. DOUGLAS STOREY.

Mr. Douglas Storey, though quite a young man, has traveled extensively. He was for three years editor of the Standard and Digger News, Johannesburg, three years of the stormiest political times that the Transvaal has seen. He was at length put across the border for wounding Boer susceptibilities in his paper. After eighteen months at home he returned to South Africa for the purpose of accompanying the Boer forces in the interest of the London Daily Mail. Few publicists know South Africa better than Mr. Storey. His present headquarters are New York. Talking with Mr. Storey, he said, in substance: "One should, indeed, confess himself a dull observer, did not the atmosphere of an unfamiliar country impress itself upon him in the course of a journey of five thousand miles. In Canada, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific coast, we have breathed the air of a free country, a country that has within it all the elements of an empire, all the essentials of a nation. Since the landing of H. R. H. the Duke of Cornwall, Canada has proclaimed her loyalty enthusiastically, whole-heartedly. But what has impressed me most in her welcome has been its manly self-respect. Nowhere has the enthusiasm of her reception degenerated into subserviency. She remembered she is a colony, not a 2-pendency, a country peopled with men of a like intelligence to the men of the mother country, governed by men of an equal education, a similar knowledge of affairs. In this lies the strength of Canada, the greatness of the British Empire. There are colonies that clutch fearfully to the Union Jack, that tremble if they find themselves for a moment loosened by the exigencies of their own development from its familiar support. Of such is not the wide of a such as the such find themselves for a moment loosened by the exigencies of their own development from its familiar support. Of such is not the pride of a mother of nations. Her children must be strong as herself, robust as are Australia and Canada. True loy-alty to the colony embraces true devotion to the crown, and everywhere throughout the Dominion I have found 'Canadian' synonymous with 'Briton,' inspired by the same instincts of personal honor and of national sentiment. This is the most notable when one recalls the strange panorama of development presented to us from Cape Breton to Vancouver Island. from Cape Breton to Vancouver Island.

The reception at Quebec impressed upon all of us the genesis of Canada, the courtly gentlemen of old France, the addresses in French, the prevalence of priestly garments. Ottawa showed us the attainment of the Dominion, the stately Parliament House, the broad, well-ordered streets, the noble buildings, the statesmen merits of various Canadian problems.

Frofiting by this hint, your correspondent thought that it would not be uninteresting to obtain from these gentlemen some brief expressions of what impression their western trip had made upon them.

MR. WILLIAM MAXWELL.

Mr. Maxwell, who was first interviewed has crowded a great deal of actions of the property of the work of the possibilities of Canada with its wheat sheaves, its fairyland development, its wealth and its progress. Calgary has demonstrated the recommendation of a vast confederation of colonies. Questioned to colonies, Ques its wealth and its progress. Calgary has demonstrated the raw material, the white man and the red, the rough foundations of an empire. To one who has seen many lands, Canada in its homelikeness, its magnificence of physical beauty and its capacity for development appeals the most. or 1900.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.-The department of agriculture announces that the three most important estimates of the world's wheat crop of 1891 of the preceding years. The estimate follows: Hungarian ministry of agriculture, 2,761,330,000 bushels, 60 rounds; Beerbohm's corn list of London, 2,711,-600,000 bushels of 60 pounds; and Bulletin des Halles of Paris, 2,790,310,000 Winchester bushels. Our department withholds its opinion as to the de-gree in which the world's crop has been approximated in any of these estimates until a considerably larger number of official returns is available. The official Hungarian estimate says the crop exceeds last year's by 209,-881,000 boshels of 60 pounds, or by 21,-430,000 Winchester bushels. According to Beerbohm, the excess over last year's crop is 200,200,000 bushels of 60 pounds, and according to the Bulletin les Halles the excess is 113,777,000 Winchester bushels. The principal inrease is credited to the United States, Canada and India, though various other countries are considered with larger crops than they had in 1900.

GEEETED BY A GREAT CROWD

The Royal Party at the Falls of Niagara.

Duke and Duchess of Cornwall Meet a Warm Welcome—The Stop at Ingersoll.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Oct. 13 .- Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York arrived at Niagara-on-the-Lake at about 6 o'clock this evening over the Michigan Central road. The royal party were greeted by an immense crowd of people, who cheered lustily. The train conveying his Excellency the Governor-General and Lady Minto arrived at 2 p.m. and they were met on the platform by the mayor and council. They were then driven to the Queen's Royal Hotel. On arrival of the train with the royal party his excellency met them and introduced the mayor, then the members of the council, then the local clergy.

The party were then driven to the hotel where everything was in readiness for their reception. They were taken on a trip to the falls by trolley, passing right under Brock's monument. They returned by the same route, arriving shortly after 6 o'clock, the streets being crowded with people, anxious to get one more sight of the future king and queen. Very many from a distance, as well as the members of Old St. Mark's Church, supposing the royal party would attend divine service, were sadly dis-appointed when they found other arrangements had been made, and that the duke and duchess could not be present. The evening was quietly spent, and our royal visitors are expected to take their departure tomorrow morn-

I believe that the Canadians are the finest race of people on the earth, and I believe that they could be the most temperate people if the treating habit was abolished. Commander Scheepers, whose cap-made up largely of Cape rebels. If Scheeper, like Lotter, is condemned to death, another terrible example will be made of treason, and Botha and the other Boer generals will be forced to MISMANAGED EVERYTHING nnected with the war. Current radlism is content to leave the minisrs to clean up the mess they have le, and shirks the responsibility of iducting the war and settling or untling everything in South Africa. Meanwhile the ministers, relieved destructive criticism by the position side, are not deeply conned with the querulous faultding of their own party press, and e carrying their burdens with eckness. Some of them, like Lord disbury and Mr. Brodrick, affect an of jocular optimism. Others, like Michael Hicks-Beach, take refuge political fatalism, but most of nem are incolent and helpless. The country looks on with increasing discontent and impatience, and no longer eks to forecast the end of the war, been fatal to military caand ministerial reputations GEN. BULLER'S COURSE.

The ministers seem to consider themselves soldiers of fortune, who are doing the best they can and must be chivalrously treated. A fellow-feeling ay have made them wondrous kind dealing with Gen. Buller, who also says that he did the best he could in South Africa, but had rank bad luck. After letting him down easy when Lord Roberts was sent out to upercede him, they ovelooked his dispatch to Gen. White, advising the surrender of Ladysmith, and singled him out for the command of the first corps of the reorganized army. press criticism was fierce, but Alderot could have snapped its fingers at it if Gen. Buller had not "spatchcocked" himself into after-luncheon ratory. The country now demands deliverance from talking generals who have not learned the saving grace silence. The best defense which the military journals make of his amazing indiscretion is that he had been shot at more than any one general, and was finally roused to speak in his own defense. As for his dispatch to en. White, they praise it half-heartedly as a chivalrous intimation that he was prepared to accept the responsibility for the surrender of 12,000 Brit-ish soldiers. They neglect to explain why Gen. Buller was not better informed respecting the garrison's resources for endurance, and why he was willing to abandon the relief of Ladysmith after a single badly-planned battle.

READY TO HAVE OTHERS DO HIS WORK.

Gen. Buller, in truth, was too ready to allow others to do his work, and then draw a blank check himself for responsibility for all consequences. Gen. Clery planned the battle of Colenso. Gen. Warren was in charge of Spion Kop and Gen. White was em-powered to surrender Ladysmith, and the commander-in-chief was magnanimously prepared to shoulder the en-tire responsibility. Chivalry like this might be magnificent for the mess oom, bet it was not war. The Aldershot gang was on trial two years ago and failed. The reorganized army ought not to be remanded to the control of generals whose incompetence been demonstrated, especially when trained veterans in the field are aghting most gallantly, as has been shown by the defeats of Gen. Botha and Commandant Delarey, and doing the work, surely, if slowly, as is proved today by the capture of Scheepers, one of the most resourceful and desperate Boer commanders. LOOKING TO THE KING. Genuine army reformers are now ooking for the direct intervention of the King in the displacement of Gen. Buller. It would be a popular act, and would be a fresh proof that monarchy has resources for saving the situation when ministers are sluggish and indifferent to public opinion. King only needs to take notice of the fact that Gen. Buller considers a campaign dispatch carried in his own pocket private property, and charges that a magazine editor is wrongfully in possession of another important military dispatch. An official inquiry would seem almost indispensable when public documents are raked about and loosely referred to in post-prandial oratory. The King's chief military adviser is the Duke of Connaught, who is believed to share the old Duke of Cambridge's opinion of Gen. Buller. That sturdy martinet, who was once Gen. Buller's warmest admirer is now his sternest and most intolerant critic. governor of Tilbury, and commanderdent upon social support, and for this reason Vanity Fair is intensely interested in the fate of General Buller aftime rewarded. We had no alternative the least. Our justification is, perhaps, somewhat sentimental. But no army can be run without a certain amount of sentiment."

IN TOO MUCH OF A HURRY. The same official said: "As for the public dissatisfaction with our progress in South Africa, I fear that Lord Robin South Africa, I fear that Lord Rob-erts and other optimistic prophets are unintentionally more to blame than anyone else. No one got up and said the Burmah war was over, or that it would be over in a foolishly short space of time. It lasted nearly four years, and the British public took it as a matter of course. The South African war has probably got another two years to run, developing, like the Burmah affair, into a subaltern's cam-paign. Continuel local disturbances are being put down by the small garrisons. To supervise such work, we know of no one better than Lord Kitchener. His chief difficulty, which seems to have missed the attention of seems to have missed the critics, is that having non-com-botant natives populating the war batant natives populating area, he is prohibited from destroying supplies to any degree of military thoroughness. If we could concentrate or deport the natives. I think an effective devastation would quickly end the campaign."

TAMMANY HALL

The Political Organization and the Original Society Are Two Concerns.

Legally, Tammany Hall is known as the Democratic-Republican organization of the county of New York. Tammany Hall is only its nickname, bestowed because, since its foundation, it has met in the halls owned by the Columbian or Tammany Society. This society, over 100 years old, is a social and patriotic organization, from which the political organization was an offshoot. There are many men on the rolls of the Tammany Society who do not belong to Tammany Hall, and vice versa. Since time out of mind, however, the political organization has controlled the organization of the patriotic society.

The political Tammany Hall has on its rolls over 90,000 members. It is governed by what is known as the Democratic-Republican general committee of the county of New York. This general committee is made up of 2.871 members. Each assembly district is entitled to one member of this committee for every 25 Democratic votes cast at the preceding gubernatorial election. It is to choose these members, among other things, that the primaries are held.

When the Democrats who are entitled to vote at the primaries present themselves they find prepared a regular ticket on which appear the names of the proposed general committee members. This list has been prepared rilla of exceptional daring, and has in each assembly district, nominally by the nominating committee, but in reality these lists are carefully prepared by the leaders themselves. If there is no opposition the primary election is purely perfunctory. Everything goes through in a cut-and-died fashion. But any Democrat who chooses can go into the primaries with an independent ticket, and if he can drum up the necessary strength he can have delegates of his own choosing elected.—Saturday Evening Post.

ROYAL OAK SOLVED

Alleged Letter From Lizzie Jeffreys-Father Believed She Was Dead-The Woman Found.

Royal Oak, Oct. 13 .- The Royal Oak murder mystery is as much a mystery today as a week ago, when the body of the victim was first discovered. The authorities are still using every effort to discover the whereabouts of Lizzie Jeffreys, the missing Canadian girl, but have so far met with no success.

Late developments, however, cast great doubt, on the probability that the body found on Sunday is that of the Jeffreys girl.

A Lizzie Jeffreys worked this summer as a domestic in the home of Mrs. Horace Gray, who, with her two daughters, live on the Canadian shore of Green Isle, half a mile from the Michigan Central depot.

The Gray family had become much attached to the girl in the period that she had worked for them. That evening they drove her in the carriage over to the Trenton crossing on the west side of Groose Isie, to take the electric car to Detroit. The weather turned cold during the drive and Mrs. Gray insisted that the girl wear a shawl, which she had borrowed when leaving the house. Mrs. Gray also gave to her a stamped envelope (addressed to Mrs. Gray), so that if she wanted to return to her situation at any time she could inclose her letter this envelope.

ENVELOPE CAME BACK. Three days ago Mrs. Gray received letter from someone who said that he was a brother of Lizzie Jeffreys, that his sister was ill at the time of the writing, but that as soon as she was well enough she would write herself with the hope of returning to her original situation.

On Wednesday night Mrs. Gray received another letter. This letter, however, was inclosed in the same envelope that Mrs. Gray had given the girl when she left the island. In the letter the writer, supposedly Lizzie Jeffreys, said that she was still in Detroit and that her address was "general delivery." She said that she emembered that she had borrowed a shawl from Mrs. Gray, that she still had it in her possession and intended to return it, if they would permit her to return to her place with them, as she much desired to do.

Mrs. Gray has no means of identifying the handwriting in the letter but suspicion was at once aroused upon receipt of the letter, supposed to be from the brother.

WATCHING THE POSTOFFICE. Mrs. Gray communicated these facts to Sheriff Brewster, of Oakland county and today the sheriff, together with John H. Jeffreys, brother of the girl, and George Payne, her brother-in-law, both from Appin, Ont., are watching at the postoffice for anyone who may call for a letter for Miss Jeffreys. ys are satisfied that the excuse Lizzie gave for leaving their employ was a fictitious one. They telephoned the mother in Canada, only to learn that Lizzie had not been there at all.
When the girl left Grosse Isle sh had $50, which she placed in her stocking. She told Ada Hart, housemaid at the Grays, that she might sometimes be found at 542 Woodward ave-ward and the girl has not yet been SEEN AT MERCY HOSPITAL.

It is stated at Mercy Hospital. River and Twenty-fourth streets, that a woman who looked very much like the printed picture came there about the last of July or the first of August, and asked to be cared for.

She wore a sailor hat, a faded shirt waist, and had red hands, and the general appearance of a working girl. Her face was of oval type, her hair auburn, and her features rather coarse. Her age was guessed at 38. She said she had come from a little place near Detroit, but that she was originally from Canada, as was also the man who was responsible for her

She claimed she had no money, and was, therefore, referred to a charitable institution. So far it has been impossible to locate her in any of

One thing of importance, and which may develop into a clue has been learned at Pontiac, and that is that within a quarter of a mile of the place where the body was found a man lived from early last spring until a short time ago, when he was arrested, brought here, and convicted of some misdemeanor. He was sentenced to five years at Jackson. Officers do no divulge this man's name. He was employed cutting timber in the woods In that trying march where the body was found. It was to Paardeberg, where also learned that on or about the time of Lizzie Jeffrey's disappearance an unknown woman was seen to go into the woods where this man was at work. She was not seen again, and the timber cutter explained that she came there to look at some timber land. Royal Oak people discredit the story, and now figure that the timber cutter could at least give some explanation regarding the murdered wo-man. He formerly resided at Pontiac where he held a position which he lost for stealing. He lived with a woman whom he said was his wife. The woman disappeared, and Pontiac people never again heard of or from her. The same man served a six years' sentence for horse stealing, and officers nov believe that he may be implicated in crimes of a more serious nature.

alive. She and her week-old child will be able in a few days to leave the private hospital where she was found this morning. It was she who wrote the letter, and she had the matron of the private hospital post it for her. terested of all the interested ones who read the newspaper reports setting forth why the murdered girl at Royal Oak must be Lizzie Jeffreys.

A meeting between Lizzie and her father took place Friday morning. Mr. Jeffreys had come to entertain so strongly the belief that Lizzle was murdered, that the joy of finding her alive completely overshadowed all feeling of regret. He hugged and kissed his daughter and cried like a child. He thanked God that his child was alive, and not a word of reproach from his lips. The local police also satisfied themselves as to the fact that Lizzie Jeffreys is still among the living, and Truant Officer Jordan went to her present residence and had a talk with her. The police regret exceedingly that the ill-directed efforts of the Oakland authorities should have dragged a young girl's misfortune before the public. Miss Jeffreys, after leaving the employment of Mrs. Featherston, went to work as a cook for Mrs. Gray, on Grosse Isle, and remained there till about August 10 or 11. She then left with the avowed intention of going home, but, as a matter of fact, to seek privacy and eventually enter a private hospital. She had every reason in the world to keep away from her friends and relatives. Five days having been lost in chasing a hopeless clew-hopeless, because from the statements of Drs. Johnston and Campbell, Mrs. Featherston and others, it should have become apparent to the authorities that the decayed human form found of Lizzie Jeffreys.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

Difficulties That the Episcopal Church Finds. .

Comments of the London Times-Action of the Convention at San Francisco.

New York, Oct. 14.-A London dispatch to the New York Times quotes the London Times as commenting editorially on the discussion regarding the marriage and divorce question by the convention and divorce question by the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at San Francisco. The London Times says it sympathizes with the bishops in the difficulties which they and the clergy throughout America have to encounter. The condition of the marriage laws is a subject whereon enlightened Americans, however confident of their institutions they may be, speak despondently, though they may justiy retort to criticisms that the marriage laws in England are not above reproach. The most obvious reform the marriage laws in England are not above reproach. The most obvious reform in America, says the London Times, would be to pass a national law on the subject, but, apart from the constitutional impediments in the way of such a step, the condition of public opinion does not encourage such legislation. Twenty-five years hence another Protestant Englanders were above. ant Episcopal convention may be debat-ing the same problem, with no clearer prospect of its solution than exists at

ACTION OF THE CONVENTION. San Francisco, Oct. 14.-The question of marriage and divorce was before both houses of the triennial convention of the Episcopal Church of America on Friday. The bishops adopted a substitute for the proposed canon 37, providing for the discipline of persons marrying again after being divorced.

The principal change made by the sub-

The principal change made by the substitute is the provision that such person may receive the sacrament on the written consent of a bishop.

The house of deputies began the eagerly-awaited debate on section 4 of the proposed canon 36, which virtually prohibits the remarriage in the church of divorced persons. The discussion will be continued today (Monday). The only vote reached during the day was on a proposed modification of Dr. Huntington's amendment providing for determining the cause of divorce in the case of a divorced person applying to be married. This was defeated.

CAPITAL AND LABOR.

An important resolution to be presented to the general convention will be drawn up by the committee on the state of the church, relative to the disagreements between employers and employers. After a brief preamble, stating that it is the divine mission of the church to be a mediator, the resolution continues:

"Resolved, that the house of bishops concurring, that a joint committee of concurring, that a joint committee of both houses, to consist of three bishops, three presbyters and three laymen, be appointed, the bishops in such manner as the house of bishops shall determine. as the house of bishops shall determine, and the other members by the president of their house, as a standing committee on the relations of capital and labor, whose duty it shall be (1) to study carefully the aims and purposes of the labor organizations of our country; (2) in particular to investigate the cause of industrial disturbances as may arise and dustrial disturbances as may arise, and (3) to hold themselves in readiness to act as arbitrators should their services be desired between the men and their em-ployers, with a view to bringing about mutual conciliation and harmony in the spirit of the Prince of Peace. Resolved, that the said commission make report of its proceedings to the general conven-tion. Resolved, that it is desirable that the above-named commission shall be named by appointment every years.'

CARE-LINED FACES

Are not always the sign of mental worry, for many a person goes silently along day in and day out, suffering almost beyond telling from bodily pain, and the only sign that betrays it is the care-lined face. Stomach out of order? Indigestion with its cutting acids making every breath you draw a dagger pain? Dyspepsia gnawing to almost the point of distraction? Can't sleep? Nervous? You needn't suffer—South American Nervine puts "all things torights," chases the seams puts "all things to rights," chases the seams from the brow, and instead of the care lines there'll be the glow of health. First bottle helps; a few bottles cure.

AN EVERYDAY ENGLISHMAN

That's How the Duke Impresses a Toronto Writer.

The Human Side Stands Out Strongly in the Royal Couple-Mr. Beckles Wilson.

Toronto World: The World has seen The house of bishops adopted the report of the conference committee on marginal readings, recommending that all readings in the report of the joint commission from the new English version, the new American version and the marginal readings of the King James version be authorized; also that the commission be permitted to substitute for manner. His head, carriage and general appearance betoken manly vigor, and arrayed, as he was, in his new chancellor's gown, which was black, are doing well and like the country splashed all over with gold, he was an ideal man for the occasion. His face time is up. Wages in all branches of was firm and strong, and in the touch- trade or profession are far better than ing passages in the address, which he read to the duke, there was a sincerity good, and I have no doubt that a large in his voice and in his manner that reached the hearts of everyone.

The duke read his reply to the address of Sir William. It was couched in ordinary English, but the thing that struck one was the plain, everyday way in which he spoke the English tongue. There was no drawling. There was no "don't you know?" about it, but a clear-cut articulation that pleased everybody. He spoke almost as if he had been a Canadian, with one exception, that he had a particular roll- also. ing of his "r's," a habit which is said to be common to the whole of the royal family. The duke is not a man of any striking features until you examine him somewhat closely. ing him sidewise you see how well molded the back part of his head is, and how fine is the texture of his hair. There is nothing striking in his appearance from a full-face view, with the single exception of the largness of the whites of his eyes, which is a characteristic feature of the Brunswicks, and also of his father, the King. The heavy lines under the eyes form the one striking feature of the duke's face. The duke has a fine, tawny beard and mustache, and, if we were asked to say generally what the duke looked like, we would say he was an everyday ordinary Englishman. If one saw him on the street, not knowing who he was, one might take him for a carpenter who had just gone into business for himself, and who had reached the dignity of bossing a couple of apprentices. And when we say this we mean that he has an air, deferential to all those about him that gives this idea. But, as we have said before, the thing duke is the everyday way in which he speaks the Queen's English, or, more Canada, was found to talk so awfully English that you could only follow him have a good word for the old school an effort. The duke has none of tion, the rolling of his "r's," he speaks Interesting Opinions as to Present and Future Conditions in South Africa.

The following letter, from Constable P. C. Ingamells, of the South African Constabulary, has been received by Mr. J. W. Westervelt, of the F. C. B. C., at which institution, as will be seen by the letter, Constable Ingamells was once a punil.

Brandvaller Drift, Modder River,

Mr. J. W. Westervelt, London, Ont.: Dear Sir,-You may perhaps remember me as one of your pupils in the old institution on Richmond street, but having so many individuals under your charge it is not to be expected that you could recollect all, especially those who are as far away as myself. But nevertheless we appreciate the training received at the hands of you and your staff just as much here, if not more so, than anywhere else. In fact, as time flies past, and our capabilities are continually being put to the test, no matter what part in life we may be taking, yet we appreciate your efforts more today than ever before, and con-sider ourselves fortunate in having been privileged to take our course in the F. C. B. C. When taking my course some ten years ago, I little expected to be where I am today—sitting in a Boer farm house, situated on the south bank of the Modder River, 30 miles from Kimberley, 75 from Bloemfontein, but only five from the famous old field of Boardshorg, or as any of those who Paardeberg, or as any of those who have been there would say, we are between Nowhere and Nowhereelse. However, with all its disadvantages, it is by no means an undesirable place to live, for as necessity required, we have adapted ourselves to this mode of living and are quite contented. We moved the family out, much against their will and sent them to join their neighbors in the refugee camp of Kimberley, it being the policy of the government to clear everything and everyone from the two former republics. This work in the southwestern portion of the Or-Sir William Meredith under many ange River Colony has, I know, been thoroughly completed, and there isn't enough of anything left to tempt the Boers back again. The corps we belong to, the South African Constabulary, is about the best-paid service of the kind in existence, the lowest pay being 5s, about $1 20, per day, with a good increase for rank. CAUSED BY GALE.

Vessels Driven Ashore by Satur-

Schooner Sunk Off Bar Point-Vessel Ashore at Cecil Bay—Barge Foundered in Thunder Bay.

Detroit, Oct. 14.—Saturday night's gale was a terrific blow on land, but on the lakes it raged furiously. Large vessels were sunk or driven ashore and scores of others remained in shel ter to save themselves from the tem pest. The full effect of the storm was not known until yesterday morning, when the work of rescuing the imperil-ed sailors was taken up with the utmost vigor. In Detroit the wind blev 56 miles an hour. The sailors' battle with the waves was at great odds. The schooner Mont Blanc, coal lad-en, sprung a leak on Lake Erie on Saturday night's gale, and went down about two miles from Bar Point. The water is not deep where she sank, and the crew saved themselves by climbing the rigging and were able to keep out of the water. After clinging to the rigging all night they were rescued by the tug Cheboygan Sunday morning, and taken to Amherstburg for care. They were nearly worn out with exposure, and Mrs. Littleton, who was cook of the vessel, is seriously ill. She lies in the cabin of the Cheboygan and has not been moved on account of her condition. It is thought that had she not been rescued Sunday morning that she would have perished from ex-posure. The Mont Blanc loaded her coal cargo at Toledo and was bound for Port Huron in tow of the tug Gladiator. In the same tow were the schooners Mineral State, John Kilderhouse and Roberts. The gale struck the vessels in the middle of Lake Erie, and the heavy seas proved too much for the Mont Blanc She sprang a leak, and the crew worked hard at the pumps, but to no account. She sank to the bottom. Had it not been for the shallow water it is believed the crew would have been drowned. They were able to save nothing but the clothing that they wore, and were barely able to scramble into the rigging before she went to the bottom.

In the same gale which sank the Mont Blanc, Mineral State lost both fore and main masts. The Kilderhouse and Roberts also lost considerable can-vas and all three are anchored off Bar

GLADSTONE LEAKING BADLY. Buffalo, Oct. 13 .- The steamer Gladstone arrived from Gladstone today leaking badly. No vessels, except the line boats, reported today. There was a heavy sea on Lake Erie and the ships generally remained in port.

WILLIAM STONE ASHORE. Mackinaw City, Mich., Oct. 13.-The northern gale, which came up suddenlast night, caught the schooner William Stone in a bad place at the dock at Cecil Bay and drove the vessel ashore. Just before the schooner's lines parted, three piles of lumber, estimated to contain 125,000 feet, were blown onto the vessel, smashing the cabin and part of the deck. The sailors were on deck at the time trying to save their ship and it cannot be explained how they managed to escape death. None was hurt, however. The schooner now lies on the beach.

BARGE ALVINA WENT ASHORE. Alpena, Mich., Oct. 13.-The barge Alvina, coal-laden, in tow of steamer Weston, went ashore in Thunder Bay last night. She lies on rocks, and is in a bad place. The Weston narrowly escaped striking in the same

M. Glorieux, of Roubaix, Tries to Eclipse de la Vaulx-The Mediterranean Bothers the Count.

Paris, Oct. 13.-A sexagenarian aeronaut, M. Glorieux, of Roubaix, deternined to eclipse the Comte de la Vaulx's balloon trip to Russia, sailed from Roubaix to the Russian frontier in one night. He announces he and continue the voyage, Meanwhile the Comte de la Vaulx is encountering further obstacles to his crossing the Mediterranean.

His balloon shed at Toulon was destroyed in Sunday's cyclone, and the aerostat was badly damaged. The prevailing interest in aeronautics has led the Aero Club to institute an annual championship for kite flying on Nov. 13. The present re-cord is 4,500 meters. The club hopes for a novel competition to stimulate inventors of airships.

SIGNALED THE BALLOON. The semaphore at Bec d'Aigle has signaled that Count de la Vaulx's baloon, in which he is trying to cross the Mediterranean, disappeared from sight at 11:30 Saturday night. The cruiser Du Chayla was following the course of the balloon to the southward. Count de la Vaulx is traveling slow-

NIAGARA RAPIDS Went Safely Through, Though Badly

Shaken Up. Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 12 .- A very

arge crowd witnessed Peter Nissen's through the daring pool Rapids this afternoon. He made the trip in the Fool Killer, the smallest full-decked whaleback steamer in the world, passing under the bridges at 3:40 o'clock. The first wave knocked off his smokestack and sent it to the bottom. Though it was heavily weighted the boat rolled frightfully n the waves, and Nissen was well shaken up.

It took just three minutes to go through the breakers to the whirlpool and when his boat was in quet water Nissen raised the hatch and waved to the people, returning back inside. two minutes he was out on deck, riding this way quite a distance about the At 4:05 o'clock men on the Canadian side secured hold of the boat as it swept close in shore, and at 4:08 o'clock Nissen leaped to the rocks. Nissen tried to take soundings in the rapids, but the force of the water broke his cable. Tomorrow he will get up steam and take a ride about the whirlpool. The boat in which Nissen made the trip is 21 feet long. In height it is

THE BOSTONIANS.

The beauty of Adele Rafter, the young contralto of The Bostonians, has been largely commented upon, and her successful debut last season with this organization established her at once as one of the most talented figures in the lyric field. Miss Rafter's musical education was completed under Seriglia in Paris. After a short concert tour Miss Rafter entered the ranks of Augustin Daly's company, and was later secured by The Bostonians. Miss Rafter possesses a voice of unusual sweetness and clarity, combined with histronic ability which makes her equally popular with the feminine as well as the male con tingent. She is a decided brunette. with large, soulful eyes, expressive features and winsome personality. She will appear in "The Serenade" at the new Grand next Wednesday. "THE SPAN OF LIFE."

"The Span of Life" will be the attraction at the new Grand next Thursday, matinee and night. The play is well known to theater-goers seeing it or by reputation, and the incidents of the human bridge and lighthouse scenes are well remember-The latter is one of the most realistic scenes ever presented in this city. It shows the lighthouse with the angry sea dashing all around and enveloped in a heavy mist. The fog horn of a steamer can be heard in the distance, gradually getting louder and louder. The hero, who has been wounded by the villain, recovers sufficiently to realize the impending danger of the slowly approaching vessel. The oil for the lamps has given out, not a drop being in the place; but a boat from the shore is expected with help, and through the darkness the headlights of an enormous steamer are seen approaching. There is nothing to be done but ring the fog bell. hero, with one arm useless, climbs up the outside of the lighthouse, reaches the beam and rings the bell just as the small boat from the shore arrives, bringing help. In "The American Girl," which is to be produced at the London Opera House, Dundas street, Saturday, matinee and night, Oct. 19, H. Grattan Donnelly has taken a big step forward in the direction of good, legitimate play-writing. "The American Girl' has a deep story and is of absorbing interest. It is true to nature, the dialogue is terse, the situations startling and effective, and there are constant surprises. Mr. Donnelly's name is an assurance of good comedy. The leading comedy characters are in the good keeping of Mr. George F. Hall and Miss Frankie St. John. Mr. Hall is a comedian of the higher school, and has a role that just fits him. Two diminutive, but very important members of the company, are Gracie Russell and Daisy Stampe, each a consummate little actress and sweet song-They have interesting parts in the play, and the way in which they

Reservoir at East Liverpool, O., Gave Way-Loss $150,000.

East Liverpool, Ohio, Oct. 13.-A large reservoir containing ten million gallons of water burst today, and caused great damage. No lives were lost, but a score of people had narrow escapes. The money loss will probably reach $150,000. The reservoir, which is owned by the city and which was only completed a few days ago, was filled this morning for the first time. It was taxed to its utmost capacity when the break occurred. A gang of laborers were laying pipes in a ditch near the wall which gave way, and miraculously death. WELL-KNOWN YOUNG WOMAN'S DEATH Particulars of the Death of Mr. James

Miss Edith L. M. Pepe Passes Away Very Unexpectedly,

Death this morning unexpectedly removed an estimable young lady in the person of Miss Edith L. M. Pope, third daughter of City Treasurer John Pope. Miss Pope was taken to the hospital last week for an operation, which was performed in a seemingly successful manner, and hopes were en tertained for her ultimate recovery until a few hours before her death. Miss Pope was a kindergarten teacher at Victoria school, London South, and was a favorite with her pupils, her fellow-teachers and her acquaintances generally. The funeral takes place on Wednesday afternoon to Woodland Cemetery.

WANTED TO SMOKE

Peeress Lighted a Cigarette in a London Hotel and Had to Leave,

London, Oct. 14.-The same London hotel which recently had a dispute with some American residents on the question of receiving negro guests who were here for the Methodist Ecumenical Conference, has shown less tolerance to an English woman than to the negro delegates. This woman, who belongs to the peerage, entered the lounging room of the hotel on Sunday afternoon and proceeded to smoke a cigarette.

A deputation of the guests immediately went to the manager and made a protest. The manager diplomatically approached the fair smoker and explained to her that smoking by ladies in the lounging-room had aroused serious objection. Within half an hour the woman left, and declared that she would never darken the doors again.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Attorney-General Knox had a long conference with Presi-dent Roosevelt on Saturday in regard to the application of the Pacific Comto the application of the Pacific Commercial Cable Company to lay a cable from the United States to the Philippines by way of Hawaii and Guam. Mr. Knox advised the president to take no action at present, but to await further information as to the purpose of the company after its cable was completed to the Philippines. It is deemed desirable to know whether it would extend its own line to China or would make some arrangement with the English company that already has a cable from Hong Kong to Manila.

The matter of the Spanish concessions granted in 1898 to the English company, giving it an exclusive franchise for cable connections in the Philippines, was carefully considered. Attorney-General Knox advised the president that this exclusive fully considered. Attorney-General Knox advised the president that this exclusive franchise would not hold. He cited the recent action of the Transvaal commission, which held that the concessions granted by the Boer Government in the Transvaal would not be recognized as valid by the British Government.

The probability is that no definite action will be taken by the president in relation to the company's proposition until the company shall have made clear its intention regarding the cable line between the Philippines and China.

Before Starting the Furnace

People who live in furnace-heated houses may have noticed the prevalence of supposed colds, coughs and Commandant Scheepers was taken to throat ailments immediately after the furnace has been started in the fall. As a matter of fact experts declare that these epidemics are largely causerating in Cape Colony for several ed by the dust and germs which gather in the registers and hot air pipes during the summer and are blown out inte the air of the house when the furnace is started. Moral Clocks.

Many people have lately amused themselves by dipping into the future and depicting all the luxuries of life that science is going to bring within reach of the emptiest purse; but how far these more ingenious inventions will increase the happiness of the world is another question. A truly appalling prospect for the future is opened by the latest Austrian discovery. It consists of a clock to keep in order those of system is of the simplest. A phon graph is substituted instead of the more normal striking arrangements, and the Austrian inventor sentence inculcating a special duty should be spoken into the phonograph. One has heard of people who affix in their bedrooms little moral reminders, such as "Breakfast's at eight, or you'll be late, and very wrong," great many steps worse to have a clock charged at all times of the day with moral exhortations. In the hands of a faddist this clock might be induced to preach the evils of intemperance while the wine was circulating at dinner. Its sense of duty would be absolutely unfailing, and according to the "Humanitarian" it may always be trusted to remember its message and to say the right thing at the right time-"if it is wound up." Indeed, the only hope for the future is that men will continue, as before, to forget that winding process.

ELSIE.

Since then report had said that Elsie's father was quite well; that he had sent for his daughter in order to marry her to a rich political agitator, and that Elsie was ready for the sacrifice. Owen had heard that Miss Bracegirdle knew all about it. He wanted to ask her if it were true. Elsie Carew had stolen his heart; his love for her was one of those strong, absorbing passions which are sometimes the evil, but, rightly guided, may prove the blessing of a human life. He would have told Rosa Stanly at once that he had been mean and false in offering to become her husband, he would have let her father take a horsewhip and lay it about his shoulders if that would lay it about his shoulders if that would have given her any satisfaction. He would have undergone and humiliation it would have undergone and numination in by means of it he might have hoped to win Elsie, or even Elsie's love, while he might have to wait long years for Elsie herself. But he had never had much hope, and now he heard that Elsie would never come back to England until she was the wife of Mr. Augustus Londonferry, the politician, a man old enough to be her father, but clever and very

Owen's great melancholy eyes haunted Pauline; she felt convinced that he was falling fast in love with her. The idea was delightful; it was a sop to her hungry was delightful; it was a sop to her hungry vanity.

What an awfully long time those other Charteris guests seemed to be in arriving. When would blue-eyed Arthur come? She had promised him four dances; while they danced they could make love. Paul Lafonte must dance with other ladies some part of the evening. Gentlemen were scarce that night, and young lady wallflowers were hummerous. He must do his duty. Then, when he was out of the his duty. Then, when he was out of the way, then Pauline could flatter and fas-cinate Lord Arthur—could dazzle him with her love-glances and murmur soft mur-her love-glances and murmur soft murmurs into his ear.

At last the band struck up the valse for which Pauline was engaged to Lord Hammond, and he had not arrived! She had gone through a set of lancers and quadrilles with that eager and ardent Paul Lafonte. To her those dances had been duli and dreary, except that the dark, watchful eyes of young Owen Hammond fascinated her and flattered her vanity as they followed her through the mazes of the figures. her vanity as they tonowed her through the mazes of the figures.

Not the belle? Oh, but most decidedly Pauline was the belle! All these fair, blushing maidens, daughters of county families, were countrified as the sweet dog-roses in the hedgerows, and she was like a rare exotic—a blassom from a like a rare exotic—a blossom from a richer summer clime. All the men looked at her. Not many of them had the right to ask her to dance, because she had only been introduced to one or two.

Owen Hammond was one of these favored few. The young man had been watching his opportunity; he was not pert or ing his opportunity; he was not pert or forward; but he had a fair amount of self-assertion; and when Rosa Stanly was led off to waitz with a very closelywith devoted atte Owen hastened up to Pauline, bowed, and with heightened color glowing on his "nice dark face," as she called it, asked her to joint the waltz. Pauline enjoyed that dance immensely; the music was delightful, and Owen was even a better waltzer than Lord Ham-mond. Pauline herself was simply superb in the waltz. The pair seemed to float with the melody.

"If I did not love his cousin I should love this handsome, dark boy," said Pauline to herself. "What sympathetic Pauline to herself. "What sympathetic chord should attract us towards each other, because he is engaged to an ugly girl whom he must hate, and I am linked apparently to yonder penniless Paul with his long nose and his fierce eyes and his stupid ways. I hate Frenchmen!"
When the dance was over Pauline complained of the closeness of the ball-room. She had heard that a covered way led across the hotel gardens to a wooden building filled with plants and shrubs, warmed with hot water pipes, and lighted by gas. This was intended as a sort of lounge and retiring room. It was a pecu-liar fashion for a winter-hall, but the har fashion for a winter-hall, but the night was wonderfully fine. Delicate people, or young ladies whose mothers were fearful of their chests and throats, kept away from this winter garden; but Pauline had no mother to trouble her with precautions or woolen comforters. She had a large shawl of pale blue ice-wool, and she asked Owen to wrant to were her and she asked Owen to wrap it over her "Let us to the winter garden, as they ill it," she said, laughing. "I have a call it," she said, laughing. "I have a curiosity to see what a country hotel-keeper's ideas of a winter garden are."

Owen was enchanted, and he put a velvet cap on his handsome head; and when he had wrapped Pauline In her "cloud." he had wrapped Pauline in her "cloud," he offered her his arm and the two went along under the covered way towards the winter garden. They met no-body—people were afraid of taking cold. Pauline fancied she was taking captive the heart of this good-looking young off-shoot of a noble family. This pleased shoot of a noble family. This pleased her vanity, and though she did not want to make Paul Lafonte jealous, because he was fearfully dangerous, she did want to make Lord Hammond jealous.

"If I can only manage that the thing is done," she said to herself.

So she chattered gally to the young man, of Paris, of Monte Carlo, where such huge fortunes were won and lost; of French theaters and French actresses and actors; of pictures and painters and and actors; of pictures and painters and French art. And then Owen struck in with his question, which he had been slily preparing all this time: "That young lady, your friend, Miss arew, has she really gone to live in Yes-why?" asked Miss Bracegirdle, sharply.

"Because it seems a pity, if it's true that she is to be married to that Augusti Londonderry—a man old enough to be her father, and a political adventurer. It can't be with her own consent, I should

"Dear me, monsieur," said Pauline, rais-Dear me, monsieur," said Pauline, raising her eyebrows, "you seem to take a deep interest in that young lady."

Owen was young enough and in earnest enough to flush crimson; he felt the hot blood tingling in his cheeks, and he turn-ed away from Pauline's scrutiny and ied to laugh.
"It would be no use for me to take an

"It would be no use for me to take an interest in a young lady who is engaged to be married."
"Especially as you yourself are engaged." said Pauline, laughing. "Fle, Mr. Hammond! I am afraid that you are not quite so good and innocent as you look; but Elsie Carew is to be married to Augustus Londonderry at once and indeed. gustus Londonderry at once—and indeed I should not be surprised to find that the marriage has already taken place. mate with Carews, father and daughter.

Owen sighed involuntarily, and Pauline laughed a silvery laugh.

"How exoessively funny," she said, "to hear you sigh like that when you are engaged yourself. Suppose poor Elsie had happened to care for you—what a misfortune it would have been for her, engaged as you are to Miss Stanly,"

"My engagement to Rosa Stanly," said Owen, bitterly, "seems to make me the butt of society. Every man, woman and child make a jest of it."

"Mr. Hammond," said Pauline, laying her exquisitely-gieved hand on the young man's coat sleeve, "don't run away with the idea that I make game of that unhappy engagement. Oh, I pity you! I have heard the story, and I pity you. You are like the jeune homme pauvre in Octave Fouillet's beautiful story. Don't you read French? Ah, what you lose!

Your English writers have no true deli-cacy of sentiment, neither have they the grace of style. Well, what was I saying? You remind me of that young hero of romance—an old name, meager acres, pride in an ancestral home, and then an heires—ma foil—an heiress rich as a iress—ma foi!—an heiress rich as a incess, who throws herself at your ad. What can you do Indeed I think ou are wise to make such a marriage, you are wise to make such a marriage, if the heart goes hungaring for awhile after prettier faces. Well, that need not be always; for my part I am bound to marry where I do not love—a young man whom I thought I loved; but I find my mistake. I—"

She paused, because there was a stir behind a row of shrubs planted in great pots, which formed a hedge close to where these young people sat on a chintz-covered couch.

Now all that was over for ever.

"You confounded sneak!" said Arthur, Lord Hammond, looking at his cousin with blue, blazing eyes.

He was not really and truly in love with Pauline; she had not been so near to the consummation of her wishes as she had flattered herself that she was, but, all the same, Lord Hammond had believed that this woman was devoted to him heart and soul; and when he saw her fiftring with his detested cousin, all his nature rose in arms, his varity was wounded; he felt that Pauline had made a fool of him, and yet, strange to any, his wrath was not against her but against Owen.

"You confounded sneak!" he repeated; "if you were worth kicking I'd kick you!" His voice shook with rage.

Owen started to his feet; he was deadly white, and his eyes flashed.

"Lay one finger on me," he said, "and I will knock you down! I wish," he added, giving way to the violent anger that possessed him like a demon for the time—"I wish I could knock you down so that you would never get up again!"

"Certainly!" retorted Arthur. "I know

Pauline held the half-willing arm of Owen by the coat-sleeve; his face was flushed, and his eyes were shining with lights that were kindled by his baffled love for Elsie, his indignation at the world's sneers, and his gratitude to this beautiful woman for her sympathy, Another moment and Lord Hammond had turned the corner by the hedge of shrubs; and there he stood facing the two, his eyes blazing with wrath.

Now, for the last two or three weeks these cousins had been civil to each other their old feud seemed healed. Owen had Fortunately the parents' attention was drawn to the accident by the child's cries, only, however, after a considerable quantity of blood had been lost. Dr. Stutt was called and dressed the injured member.

CREDIT TO THE CITY.

The Toronto Mail and Empire thus comments on the appearance of the Seventh Regiment at the royal review in that city on Friday last: "The old tattered colors of the Seventh Fusiliers, of London, Lieut.-Col. A. M. Smith commanding, roused the enthusiasm of the crowd to the highest pitch, so that they were greeted with cheer after cheer. The companies of his regiment were well filled, and the solid, steady ranks of well-groomed men were a credit to the Forest City, and showed how thorough has been the recent organization of the corps. It is no small credit to the fusiliers that they made a good showing in comparison with the regiments imme-Grenadiers, under Lieut.-Col. Bruce."

THE VISITING JOURNALISTS

The Trip of the Pressmen With the Royal Train-Something Like Another "Ride to Kiva."

Among the famous feats in personal ournalistic history was that made some years ago by the dashing English correspondent, soldier and author, Captain F. Burnaby, whose rapid and exciting experiences are summed up in the book, "A Ride to Khiva." On a mild scale, the experiences of the party of English and other journalists who came in the press car Atlantic with the royal train on Saturday, had a little touch of the determined onset of "A Ride to Khiva." A telegram had been sent forward from the special sub-committee on press reception, stating that badges and carriages would be ready for the visiting journalists on arrival. The problem was this: It was necessary, and a part of protective arrangements, that Dominion Chief of Police Sherwood and his associates, and Chief Williams and his special assistants, should see the royal party safely started on the procession, and then to proceed themselves as rapidly as possibly in carriages, so as to arrive at Victoria Park, where the main proceedings were to take place, in advance of the royal party. It was obviously impossible that the same route could be adopted, as that taken by the royal party, it not being in accordance with royal etiquette that those not con-nected with the royal party should be in the royal procession. Accordingly, arrangements had been made in advance to have the necessary carriages in waiting at the York street side of the station. The visiting press representatives, on alighting from the royal train, were specially met by Messrs. M. G. Bremner and John Cameron, who speedily provided the visitors with press badges, and conducted them without delay to the carriages provided.Mr. Thomas Coffey, of the special press committee, was unable to be present, having consented to take Mr. Minhinnick's place at the park in presenting the civic address. The press commitdiately surrounding them, for, follow-ing, came the soild, well-lined ranks the following members of the general of Toronto's ever-popular Tenth Royal reception committee (who were present at the station to see that nothing went wrong with the general arrangements) for their assistance in receiving and accommodating the press representatives namely, Messrs. C. B. Hunt, J. B. Mc Killop, Adam Beck, Thomas Gillean and Philip Pocock. The following is the list of fournalists on the royal train, the principal of whom were in London on Saturday: D. A. McLaugh-

Charlesworth, Toronto Mail and Empire; John A. Ewan, Toronto Globe; C. W. Jeffreys, Toronto Globe artist W. Jeffreys, Toronto Globe artist; Douglas Storey, London Daily Telegraph and New York Herald; E. F. Knight, London Morning Post; Joseph Watson, Reuter's News Agency, London; W. Maxwell, London Standard; J. E. Vincent, London Times; Martin J. Egan, Associated Press; James Harper, Montreal Witness; F. Yorston, Montreal Star; Marc Sauvalle, Montreal La Press; Hector Garneau, Montreal La Patrie; W. F. Kerr, Manitoba Free Press; Lucian Pacaud, Quebec La Sol-eil; Mr. Pearse, London (England) Sphere; L. Haddon Taylor, Montreal Herald; Mr. Notman, photographer, Montreal; W. J. Topley, photographer, Ottawa, and J. F. Richardson, C. P. R. Telegraph, Montreal.

And now began the wild ride to get into the park ahead of the royal procession, which had already started at a good trot. Off went the carriages at a rattling pace. It was necessary sible; to break through the military cordon and the crowd on Dundas street and also on Queen's and Dufferin avenues, in order to alight in the park on the side to the westward of the special stand, where the proceedings were to take place. Here a dense mass of people were encountered, but the authorities managed to make a temporary lane through which the visiting press men and the members of the reception committee above mentioned were enabled to make their way on to the platform, just in the nick of time to be a few minutes ahead of the arrival of the royal party.

As the proceedings began to terminate, it was necessary to make the same vigorous fight against time and obstacles in reaching the station, so as not to be too late.

The visiting press representatives, who could not have reached Victoria Park at all through the crowds but for the advance arrangements that had been made, very much enjoyed the rapid and exhilarating experience; and were cordial in expressing thanks to the special press sub-committee as a whole, for the thoughtfulness which had made provision for them. They were very appreciative, too, of the copies of "Illustrated London." which had been placed on the press car Atlantic, to enable them to form a more complete and leisurely conception of this new London, the capital of Western Ontario. At the steps of the press car, before resuming its east-ward journey, Mr. McKnight, of the on Wednesday evening next, and will London, England, Post, moved, sec-exemplify the initiatory and first and onded by Mr. Melton Prior, the famous artist of The Illustrated London News, an informal vote of thanks to the reception committee in general and to the press sub-committee in particular, for the appreciated attentions that had been paid, and they expressed their regret that a longer time had not been at their disposal to go over and about so pleasant a city and section of country. Mr. Cameron, as convener of the press committee, in reply, on behalf of Mr. Bremner, Mr. Coffey, the press of the city generally, and the whole reception committee, assured the journalistic party that their visit had been all too short and that it would have delighted the mayor and corporation to have ex-tended to them those courtesies and visit to render possible.

the impression made upon the visiting journalists, by even a flying visit to this city, and through a portion of Western Ontario, has been extremely pleasant and favorable. As one of the most distinguished of the party said in conversation, they had seen so much of valuable but uncultivated and undeveloped territory, between North Bay and the Pacific Ocean, that it was of advantage to them, in forming, a right general conception, to have seen the smiling, fertile, cultivated farm lands of Western Ontario, dotted at short distances with thriving towns and cities.

Canada as a whole has made a tremendous impression on the visiting English and other press representa-tives, and they state that an equal impression has been made on the minds of the future King and Queen of the British Empire. The visiting press men believe that Canada will be known in Great Britain, because of this royal tour, as it was never known before; and it is no slight thing to have had so favorable an impression lodged in the minds of those who, through the columns of the press, have the opportunity of speaking to the millions of the mother land. The great natural resources, the extraordinary natural beautles, the wonderful railway facilities, and the great future before the Dominion, will from time to time be laid before the world. It is pleasant to know that, by a lit-tle forethought, our London of the new world has contributed to the agreeable and satisfactory impression that has been made on the able men whose influential vocation it is to observe and to record.

PREACHED AT BOTH SUNDAY SERVICES

Anniversary Sermons by President of Conference at Wellington Street Church.

The anniversary services of the Sunday school of Wellington Street Methodist Church were held yesterday, and were attended by large congregations at all three services. Morning and evening services were conducted by Rev. James Livingstone, pastor of the Windsor Avenue Methodist Church, Windsor, and president of the London Conference. At the morning service Mr. Livingstone preached to the child-ren on the word "Friend," and based his remarks on the 24th verse of the 18th chapter of Proverbs. In the even-ing Mr. Livingstone spoke to the congregation which completely filled the edifice. "Pouring our life into the lives of others," taken from the 19th and 20th verses of First Kings, formed the subject of his sermon. At the service in the afternoon the scholars were addressed by Rev. Mr. Birks, of the Colborne Street Methodist Church and Mr. Fred W. Matthews. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms and flowers. Special music was rendered by the choir and the Sunday school scholars.

THE MANCHESTER WAS WRECKED!

Fate of the Missing Vessel Positively Learned-She Had a Crew of Twenty-Five Persons.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 14.-The steamship Glenroy brings news from Hong Kong that wreckage has been found on Eikar Island, a small uninhabited island of the Marshall group, which proves that the English ship Manchester came to grief there.

The Manchester, Capt. F. Clemens, left New York with kerosene, shipped by the Standard Oil Company just one year ago. Her destination was Yokohama, and shipping men have agreed long since that she must have been lost in a typhoon. Footprints and marks of two boats' keels on the sand, together with other signs make it certain that Capt. Clemens, his wife, two children and crew have been on the island and, unable to find water pushed off again. Plain ly marked in the sand were footprints of a woman and children.

The body of one sailor was found in scruby growth of trees near shore There were also found bodies of birds which had been sucked for their blood As no sign has since been found of Captain Clemens, his family and crew, it is supposed that they died of thirst before they reached inhabited islands. The Manchester carried a crew twenty-five men, most of them British sailors. The value of ship and cargo was nearly $500,000
